If Warrants Dropped...

'Killer Bees' May Return

AUSTIN (AP)—The Killer Bees senators offered to return at 3 p.m. today if Lt. Gob. Bill Hobby would withdraw warrants to arrest them but Hobby refused, an aide to a missing senator said.

Hobby convened a scheduled Senate session today and said he had talked with one of the 12 absent members, who suggested the Senate should recess until 3 p.m.

"I'm sure the absent members will return and we can resume the normal business of the Senate," Hobby told other senators.

By recessing, the search for absent members automatically would have been canceled. However, Hobby told the senators present to "stand at ease" until 3 p.m.

Sally Watkins, an aide to Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, said, "That was our understanding that the first way Hobby stated it to recess was a genuine thing (agreement."

She said she understood the missing senators would not return since the "call on the Senate" was not removed.

Hobby briskly left the chamber after the brief meeting and would not answer questions about the mysterious phone call.

Earlier, Gov. Bill Clements said he is thinking of declaring vacant the 12 Senate seats.

Clements returned to the Capitol after a four-day trip to Connecticut. He was out-of-town when the dozen rebels fled the Senate Friday in protest of a presidential primary measure.

The governor has taken a hands-off attitude on the election proposal.

"We'll explore that possibility today. We're going to look into it and look into what precedents we might have for it," Clements told reporters of calling a special election to replace the absentees.

On Monday, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby conceded the Killer Bees probably have succeeded in blocking a 1980 presidential primary bill they contend was tailor-made for John Connally.

Personal Cars Exempt

AUSTIN (AP)—House-Senate negotiators decided today to exempt all personal cars from property taxes but leave school boards and city councils free to tax them if they can stand the political heat.

The conferees on a bill HB1060 implementing the 1978 Tax Relief Amendment also agreed that it should take effect with tax notices sent out this year.

But they agreed to give school districts an out if they feel they cannot make up new rolls based on new rules for taxing farm and ranch land and giving elderly Texans bigger homestead exemptions.

A school board, after issuing notice and holding a public hearing, could delay the tax reductions until 1980.

Canadians Choosing

TORONTO (AP)-Canadians from Eskimo settlements above the Arctic Circle to the steel and glass canyons of major cities today choose the government that will lead them into the 1980s and through the gravest crisis in the nation's 112-year history.

The choice is between the Liberal administration of Pierre Elliott Trudeau, the flashy, tough-talking French-Canadian who has been prime minister for the past 11 years, and the opposition Progressive Conservatives, led by untested 39-year-old Westerner Joe Clark.

Loyalty Misplaced

WASHINGTON (AP)—Declaring that he acted out of "misplaced loyalty" to his former boss Daniel Minchew says he personally handed over $500 in cash to Sen. Herman E. Talmadge after funneling the campaign contribution through a secret bank account.

Minchew, Talmadge's closest aide from 1971 through 1974, said the transfer was part of an agreed upon scheme to provide cash for Talmadge to meet his personal expenses.

Demonstrators Bitter

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Thousands of angry, bitter demonstrators, many of them homosuxual, rampaged in the streets after a jury ruled it was manslaughter not murder when former Supervisor Dan White shot and killed Mayor Geroge Moscone and gay Supervisor Harvey Milk.

The mob of 5,000 people had expected a murder conviction for the City Hall killings. When the verdict—voluntary manslaughter—came down Monday, they converged on City Hall, smashed its doors with iron bars, set cars afire and rampaged through the streets.

Snyder Area Dampened By Additional Rainfall

While residents to the south and east were confronted with flooding streams, the Snyder area savored good rains and in some cases hoped for more today.

Farm and ranch land benefitted from additional rains Monday following thunderstorms which moved through the area Sunday night.

The biggest rain Monday fell at Hermleigh, where three inches were recorded. For the most part, the Monday rains represented a tapering off.

Snyder added .56 to its official gauge, making a two-day total of 1.54. At Gail, half an inch was reported Monday, for a total of 1.50 over-all.

Borden County rains had put about 2,000 acre feet of new water into Lake J.B. Thomas, the Colorado River Municipal Water District reservoir which supplies Snyder with water. CRMWD officials had hoped for more as heavy clouds covered much of the lake's watershed Monday afternoon, but only light showers developed. However, the catch from Sunday night and Monday rains did give the lake a temporary boost which it badly needed. The Colorado River was still flowing at about three feet deep into the lake this morning, which is not enough to put much water into the lake.

Fluvanna had about three-eighths of an inch more rain Monday, making a two-day total of seven-eighths. Other Monday and two-day totals include half an inch and 2.50 at Ira, .20 and .82 at Colorado City. The total rainfall in and around Roby ranged up to two inches, with some reporting more and some less.

North, Central and South Texas areas reported flooding and lightning damage.

Violent thunderstorms dumped several inches of rain on the Texas Hill Country and Central Texas Monday night and lightning touched off blazes that emptied Austin's firehouses.

More than 4 inches of rain fell in that area as severe thunderstorm, tornado and flash flood warnings were prompted from north of Dallas and Fort Worth to Houston and South Texas. Light rain also fell in the Panhandle and South Plains.

Roads were reported under water at one time in Sherman, north of Dallas, and Breckenridge, west

Dr. James Granberry, speaker at the WTC commencement last week, says there's nothing like a political campaign to teach a person that humor in one area is not necessarily regarded as funny in another. Dr. Granberry learned this in 1974 when he was the Republican nominee for governor. He made a speech at Bryan and the newspaper there promptly endorsed him.

Later in the campaign, however, while speaking at Waco, he put an Aggie joke in his script. The word floated down the Brazos, and in due time, the Bryan paper rescinded its endorsement.

After a dozen or so years of consistent triumphs, we no longer are surprised at the proficiency on stage of Jerry Worsham's Snyder High School drama students. But we were impressed anew by a notation in the program for the performances of Macbeth last week. We had already heard that the critics in Austin had praised the costumes and props used by the Snyder High players. And then we learned via the program that the drama students themselves made the costumes with materials purchased right here in Snyder and at a cost of less than $500.

Carter Urges More Gasoline

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Carter administration, its energy policy under new attack today in Congress, is urging oil refiners to boost their production of gasoline to help ease shortages at service stations.

Refineries have been asked by federal officials to "help ease the immediate shortage by increasing the rate of use of available crude oil and gasoline stocks," says Deputy Energy Secretary John F. O'Leary.

Current oil and gasoline reserves could be tapped by as much as 380,000 barrels a day through the end of August, O'Leary said Tuesday in written testimony for the Senate Energy Committee.

Such a step would permit gasoline supplies to reach about 96 percent or 97 percent of last year's level and "help reduce long lines at gasoline stations," O'Leary said.

The statement appeared to reflect a significant change in administration policy, which previously had stressed the importance of building heating oil stocks for next winter even at the expense of gasoline production.

However, O'Leary said crude oil and gasoline stocks could be drawn down "by a total of about 42 million barrels by the end of the summer without causing serious operational problems."

Meanwhile, House Democrats were meeting today on a proposal to put Democrats on record as opposing the president's decision to lift price controls on domestic crude oil.

Leaders of the move said it was possible that a vote by the Democratic caucus on their resolution might be postponed until Wednesday.

Sen. Donald W. Riegle, D-Mich., chairman of the Senate Banking subcommittee on economic stabilization, criticized the administration today for blaming energy shortages on Congress.

"Wherever one assigns the responsibility for this situation, there is clearly a stark absence of coherent leadership on this issue," Riegle said. His panel opened hearings on how the gasoline shortage is affecting independent oil suppliers and individual service station owners.

Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., organizer of the stop-deconrol campaign, predicted victory for his resolution at the caucus of all 276 House Democrats. But he said today that an expected poor turnout might postpone the vote until Wednesday.

Throwing Support To Ted Kennedy

WASHINGTON (AP)-Five Democratic congressmen, prompted by "dissatisfaction" with president Carter, are throwing their support to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy for the 1980 Democratic presidential nomination, a spokesman for one says.

The five—from Minnesota, Rhode Island, Michigan, New York and California—will probably announce their backing Wednesday, an aide to Rep. Richard Nolan of Minnesota said Monday night. Nolan has said he will lead a nationwide effort to draft Kennedy for the nomination.

Kennedy, a Massachusetts Democrat, has said repeatedly he is not a candidate and expects Carter to run and be renominated.

But he has publicly differed with the administration over such issues as national health insurance and energy.

Q—Why doesn't Snyder fix more of its streets better, especially 30th St. from College Ave. to El Paso Ave.?

A—The College Ave. to El Paso Ave. segment of 30th is high on a priority list for a state urban project. City engineer Jim Dower says the main problem on this part of 30th is that the street has been cut in many places for water, sewer and gas lines. Incidentially, more street work has been done this year here than normal, but of course there was more damage than normal during the winter.

Delegation Encouraged On Highway Prospects

Although there is no indication that any immediate action will be taken, a delegation which appeared before the Texas Highway Commission yesterday in Austin came away feeling that a "Port-to-Plains" route through Snyder definitely will get strong consideration if and when funds are available.

Bill Warner, Snyder Chamber of Commerce manager, said the group was assured that additional hearings will be held before a route is designated. The Port-to-Plains projected more than 20 proposed routes when hearings were held some three years ago. Nothing developed then because funds were not available.

Warner said the group in Austin yesterday was especially pleased by the report that Sen. Lloyd Bentsen had advised that the route through Snyder, Abilene, etc., would meet the criteria required by legislaton providing a primary connecting "demonstration" highway. That proposal at one time mentioned U.S. Highway 87, which would take the route west of Snyder and Abilene, but before passage it was changed to provide that the state should determine the route.

Cities and towns from Snyder to Houston were represented at the meeting with the highway commission Monday. During the hearing it was stressed that the route proposed by this delegation would serve far more people than any other that could be proposed.

The Houston delegation reminded that their city accounted for more than half of the entire population growth of the state last year and they are especially interested in the segment which would link Houston with the state capital with an improved thoroughfare.

Also, it was pointed out that one of the purposes of new road proposals was to link cities with military bases, and two cities on the western route which had bases when the Port-to-Plains was first proposed will not have them when the project is actually developed. Webb Air Force Base at Big Spring has already closed, and Goodfellow Air Force Base at San Angelo is scheduled for closing.

diminishing returns

To the environmental activists, pure air is not what it contains but how the ingredients got there. To them if something gets into the atmosphere from some natural source, (ozone, for example) it is not a pollutant. If the same gas or particulate comes from something man is doing, it becomes an immediate dangerous pollutant.

The anti-industrial activists have never given the matter of cost-effectiveness any consideration. So it would be unrealistic to expect that the law of diminishing returns would be given much credence by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). That this agency and its backers have no regard for the costs of their air quality edicts is amply shown in what has taken place in a Colorado steel mill.

A prime example of an industry having to spend more and more to take less and less "pollution" out of the air, is the history of control costs, for the CF&I Steel Co., in Pueblo, Colo. In the 1950s, prior to the advent of EPA, this industry installed a precpitator which eliminated 15,000 tons of particulates annually from the exhaust stacks of its furnaces. This was done at a cost of $333 per ton removed.

In 1978, at the insistence of EPA, the steel company installed a second precipitator which can remove another 250 tons. But this removal raises the removal cost to the enormous amount of $24,000 per ton. This is 72 times as much to get the smaller amount out of the emissions.

Was the EPA satisfied? Hardly, the CF&I, at the insistence of the agency, is adding another $11.3 million worth of control equipment which is expected to remove another 217 tons of particulates at a cost of $52,000 per ton. Again more than double the cost for less result.

This steel company has had a long and envious record for cleaning its stack emissions over the past 75 years. The operation has been constantly upgraded as new and better means of producing steel have been developed.

It did more in the years prior to the formation of the EPA than it ever will be able to do again. There is so little left to clean out of the operation that further results will raise costs clear out of sight.

At the time when this steel company began to clean up its emissions, there were five smelter type operations going full blast in the area of Pueblo. These smelters were processing base and precious metals. The total of emissions was tremendous. We have never heard that the death rate or the general health of that community was greatly impaired.

The smelters have been gone for some time and the steel firm has made great advances in cleaning up emissions with probably 90 percent or more cleaned up before EPA came into being.

If this company did not present a discernible major health hazard a half century ago, while the smelters were operating and most of the emissions were yet to be cleaned up, why does the minute amount remaining present a hazard which is increasingly costly to handle?

Environmental activists, with their authoritarian tool, the EPA, seem determined to keep up the harassment of industry regardless of the cost to the economy and completely beyond the realm of reason. If they disregard the physical law of diminishing returns in their demands, steel firms, smelters, utilities and many other units of our vital industrial complex will be forced to the brink of bankruptcy.

Webster's defines "diminishing returns" as: "A rate of yield that beyond a certain point fails to increase in proportion to additional investment of labor or capital." Good management in the business world has kept that law in mind whenever it was applicable. The EPA and its cohorts refuse to recognize it. There edicts have passed the limiting point many times. They flaunt this law in the face of economic peril.

In the end they, too, will be subjected to the peril of violating this basic natural law.

The living necessities of every American rest on the viability of industrial processes. We simply cannot kill the cow and still have the milk.

a need for troops?

Is this why there is agitation in the Pentagon to start drafting again? Defense Secretary Brown says that it might call for U.S. military force if the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty breaks down.

Brown and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance talk of the "possibility" of American supplies and ships and planes; they do not mention American troops yet.

Meanwhile, however, Brown has gone ahead and ordered $10 billion worth of $10 million dollar tanks, so apparently the Pentagon still intends to fight the next war with the weapons which lost the last two.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Israel's Defense Minister Moshe Dyan have insisted that they neither want nor need U.S. troops. But that prospect is still being used by infantry-oriented American generals as leverage for more foot-soldier mobilization.

Begin told our Congress: "Israel will never ask American boys to fight its wars."

Yet Press Secretary Jody Powell confirms that President Carter on at least one instance has considered stationing American troops on the West Bank.

Now our House Foreign Affairs Committee hears that there is a "memorandum of understanding" between the United States and Israel which promises that in a shootout we will supply weapons and that we will "show" our ships and planes in the area.

Nobody imagines that we could go that far without getting in the way of some bullets.

What troubles pragmatic military strategists is the evidence that we seem to learn nothing from our past wars.

Contrast the tedious one-man-at-a-time invasion of Europe with the way President Truman ended the Pacific war with two big bangs.

And it is inconceivable that we would revert to fighting future wars with bayonets.

Yet in Korea and in Vietnam we did--and we lost.

And here we go again!

Today we have big weapons--loaded for bear--and we can't wait to sign an agreement with the Soviets not to use them!

Little wonder the Soviets celebrate the SALT agreement. If we will agree to fight future wars with manpower, they have more of that than anybody.

In mid-March our secretary of state and our defense secretary were also promising to use U.S. armed forces if necessary to protect the oil fields of Saudi Arabia. Though now they say they are having second thoughts about that.

The footsoldier proponents protest that we must also be able to fight small wars, that we must not be locked into an all-or-nothing-at-all response.

Thus again the old men in Washington prepare to draft young men to fight pulled punches wars for which not one of those old men will ever volunteer.

WASHINGTON (NEA)— As an act of statesmanship, the refusal of Congress to grant President Carter standby gasoline rationing authority ranks about on a par with Nero's famous fiddling routine.

There is, it seems, nothing quite like the energy problem - especially as it affects that great American love object: the automobile - to bring out the worst in the nation's lawmakers.

It's too bad the House members who rejected the president's plan so blithely on a Thursday afternoon promptly fled town for their usual long weekend. Had they stuck around, they might have enjoyed a preview of coming attractions in the long lines of panicky drivers which promptly formed at Washington area gas stations and sucked the pumps dry within 36 hours.

As Carter himself observed following the House vote last week, anyone who wants to see gasoline rationed "has taken leave of their senses." But anyone who thinks rationing is worse than the sort of chaos that hit this area over the weekend and continues unabated in California is even crazier.

Many House members are now trying to blame inept administration lobbying for the demise of the standby rationing plan, charging that Carter's representatives failed to explain it properly, left too many questions unanswered and made too many last-minute changes.

This is one time, however, when such excuses simply won't wash. The rationing plan was on Capitol Hill a full 60 days and was, with the rest of the president's energy package, the subject of extensive hearings.

Only in the last few days before the vote did opposition to the plan surface, and then it was almost entirely parochial in nature. Senators and House members were not attacking the Carter proposal because it was imperfect as a national blueprint, but because of its impact on their own states or districts.

The changes Carter was forced to accept in order to push his plan through the Senate turned out to make it harder to sell in the House. The president was caught in a no-win situation as every individual legislator scrambled to protect his or her own constituents regardless of the effect on the rest of the country.

What is particularly disturbing about the congressional performance is the fact that the entire flap erupted over a purely precautionary move on Carter's part. The president wasn't seeking to institute rationing any time in the immediate future; he was simply seeking authority to act when and if supply shortages become critical. Before he could implement any rationing plan, both houses of Congress would get another crack, and the chance to veto an unacceptable program.

Three successive presidents, two Republicans and one Democrat, have tried throughout this decade to persuade Congress to face up to the implications of an ever-growing energy crisis. All three have been repeatedly rebuffed by lawmakers who refuse to acknowledge that sacrifices are unavoidable and the only question is how to spread them most equitably.

No one can keep the rain from falling merely by refusing to buy an umbrella, and Congress cannot prevent gasoline shortages from developing simply by rejecting the concept of rationing.

If the president is denied authority to ration gasoline once supplies run low, then the oil companies and individual dealers will do it for him and in a far more arbitrary, capricious and expensive fashion than any plan the government might impose.

The lines are starting to form once more at gas stations from coast to coast. When House members have to wait in them like everybody else, perhaps they will reconsider their vote of last week.

slaying the dragon

NEW YORK (AP) Tyler Hicks gets frustrated when people do little to protect themselves against inflation and taxes. He feels they aren't helpless. He refuses to believe obstacles cannot be overcome.

Ty's message isn't just one of hope, it's practical. An esteemed, well-paid professional who holds a demanding executive position, he uses his sparetime to manage private endeavors that bring him a second income.

You've heard of others who do the same, but probably not with the same success as Ty. Year after year his second income is in six figures, for a few hours each evening and on Saturday mornings.

Now 58, Tyler Hicks has made several fortunes. He began early, and of necessity, it was a matter of financial survival. Now the habit is as much a part of him as his big house, his boat and his Caribbean trips.

He has written 45 books, many of them for Parker Publishing Co., a subsidiary of Prentice-Hall, Inc., some to occupy his time on the train trip to work, some because his always active mind demands expression.

Many of them are engineering works, such as a nine-year labor of love, McGraw-Hill's "Standard Handbook of Engineering Calculations," which has sold 100,000 copies at $30 each, and which he is now improving.

More recently his efforts have been personal finance volumes for the ordinary person, such as his current big seller, "How To Make $1 Million in Three Years Starting With No Cash."

Another volume, scheduled for December, will wrap up scores of ideas Ty has devised, discovered or developed over the years. It will be called, "Tyler Hicks' Encyclopedia of Wealth Building Secrets."

Books do not occupy all his time. For 14 years he has published the newsletter, "International Wealth Success," out of Rockville Centre, N.Y. Like his books, it is filled with detail rather than promise.

He offers training kits for home-study in various moneymaking fields, such as real estate and mail order, in which he has long been active. He has a marine products company too; he invented some of its products.

All this is prelude to a simple message Ty delivers to people of ordinary means who say they are helpless against the two-headed dragon of inflation/taxes. Slay it, he says. Consider rental real estate.

As the successful operator of mail order enterprises, Ty has personal experience to document his claim that this type of business also can be profitable. But first, he says, you must have the right product.

And what is a "right" product? "A unique product," Ty replies. "And preferably one you developed yourself." As a boating hobbyist, he patented a navigational device, Pilot Aid, and sells it by mail.

Ty seldom seems rushed by his activities, probably because he enjoys them. He enjoys his salaried position too, he says, because it involves him with fascinating people on the forefront of technology.

THERE GOES THE NEIGHBORHOOD DEPARTMENT: If some of you in the southwest part of town have spied some mysterious activity going on in the neighborhood lately and have checked your calendars and sure enough Halloween is still months away, relax. There is no need to start thumbing through the yellow pages for the local exorcist. Jeff Fleer dropped by the paper with this explanation.

"Residents in the vicinity of Aye. U and 37th St. might have been a bit alarmed recently. Everyone is interested in new neighbors. But when they are seen carrying a coffin into a vacant house and are dressed in flowing black capes, interest may turn to apprehension. But don't worry, it's just a group of high school students from Mrs. Bob Boren's Mass Media class."

The youths, Kelly Givens, Jeff Clements, Doug Webb and Fleer, have been busy the last couple of weeks filming a dracula movie. It is taking place in a house borrowed from Elizabeth Potts Realty. The costumes are from Jerry Worsham's drama department. B.J. Bartels just happened to have a coffin lying around the house he wasn't using and loaned to the kids. See, there is nothing weird in any of that, is there.

A TRUE STORY (or so say some) DEPARTMENT: Here is a little tale passed around from time to time that will give you something to think about when the phone rings on one of these dark and stormy spring nights.

A babysitter had her young wards tucked away for the evening and was watching the late show and doing her homework when she began receiving threatening phone calls. She ignored the first couple but the caller was persistent and sounded more hostile and psychotic with each incident.

Not as easily "shook" as the average sweet young thing, she called the police for instructions.

"Try to keep him talking long enough for the phone company to trace the call," she was told.

"As disgusting as it was, she did as she was advised.

"...and I warned you about hanging up on me little girl and now I'm coming to get you," were the last words the voice said before the line went dead.

But it was long enough for a trace and the police quickly came back with the message.

"Drop the phone and run from the house! He's on the extension."

"That one didn't scare you? Try this one.

"A young couple were "parked" in the cemetery one night when a bulletin on the radio interrupted their smooching.

"A dangerous killer and sex maniac has escaped from the insane asylum and is thought to be in the area. All residents are urged to stay inside with the doors locked until this man is apprehended. He may be recognized by a mangy and generally crazed appearance and a hook replacing an amputated right hand."

Considering their immediate environment they became a bit nervous and decided to go home. It was almost midnight anyway. As they left they thought they heard a man scream but shrugged it off to wind and imagination. It was in the driveway of the girl's home that they discovered the shiny steel hook hanging in the door of the car.

Older Adults Should Perk Up Eating Habits

COLLEGE STATION—Older adults can perk up eating habits, appetite and eating fun with simple changes, says Frances Reasonover, a foods and nutrition specialist.

Miss Reasonover is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Poor nutrition in advancing years involves more than nutrients, but this can change when the problem is clear, the specialist says. In some cases, the problem started long ago. An older adult's nutritional state depends partly on food habits of a lifetime.

Poor food habits sometimes leave scars that cannot be removed, and if people have eaten poorly since childhood, they are inclined to continue that pattern even if there is great need for change, Miss Reasonover explains.

However, that doesn't have to be the case. Many times the needed changes are not drastic. Encouragement and small changes often solve most problems. Perhaps a regular food source of vitamin C is all that's needed or simply adding milk to the diet.

Lack of appetite can greatly influence poor nutrition, too, since it can keep a person from eating adequate meals.

Living and eating alone is often the culprit for lack of appetite, and that leads to introspection and a negative outlook.

To "turn that around," eat some meals in the company of others. This helps everyone enjoy a meal, and it diverts attention from real or imaginary ills. Eating meals in others' company, then, actually can improve the nutritional status of an older adult.

Other problems, may be the difficulties of shopping for one person and cooking in small amounts. One solution is to cook in the larger amounts and freeze some for later.

That will save money and put homemade "convenience" meals into the freezer, where they are ready and waiting for the older adult to just heat and serve.

To Summer Cottagers: How To Repel Boarders

By Abigail Van Buren

1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Now that the summer season will soon be upon us, how about some help for us poor suckers who have summer cottages?

We've had our cottage for eight years, and each summer we grow more popular than the summer before. Friends and relatives come in droves to enjoy themselves in the sun and partake of our food and drink. They stay anywhere from a weekend to a full week. They always come empty-handed, of course.

We have even written notes in advance saying, "We are sorry, but we can't have you this year,"—but they come anyway. Why are some folks so thick? We bought this place to get away from these people.

We don't want to seem cranky, but we'd like to entertain the guests we really WANT, without all these others "surprising" us. We're tired of running a free hotel, and are thinking of selling. Can you help us?

HAD IT IN MINNESOTA

DEAR HAD IT: If you've actually written to say you can't accommodate them, but they come anyway—your only salvation is to develop a thicker hide. Greet the unwelcome ones at the door with, "You may stay for a few hours, but when the sun disappears, please do likewise."

DEAR ABBY: You are so right when you say, "Live your life one day at a time."

After 13 years of a happy marriage, beautiful children, a successful husband (due to my help), a beautiful home and all the trimmings, my husband informs me that he is just not "happy" anymore!

At the same time, my brother's wife has decided the same thing. Strange? Not really. She is divorcing my brother (they also have a lovely home and two beautiful children) so she can marry my husband.

Need I tell you how much hurt and unhappiness these two selfish people have caused everyone involved?

So, here I sit, still in shock, very hurt and bitter, thinking of how wise your philosophy is. "Live your life one day at a time."

That's all any of us really has. Sign me . . .

ALONE WITH TWO CHILDREN TO RAISE

DEAR ALONE: You asked for no advice, but may I give you some? Don't dwell on your bitterness, hurt and resentment. Turn your attention to putting your life together by pursuing new interests. Work on being a positive, attractive, likable person. You still have a lot of living to do. Good luck!

DEAR ABBY: My husband is convinced that shampooing his hair will cause it to fall out.

Arnold is 25 and good-looking, but he's got this thing about losing his hair because his father was bald at 40. He never brushes his hair because if he sees a few hairs in his hairbrush he practically freaks out! And if he wakes up and finds a few hairs on his pillow, it spoils his day.

He's a wonderful guy, but you don't know how hard it is to sleep with a man who has hasn't washed his hair since last July. Help! Maybe he'll believe you. I've given up.

HIS WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Tell Arnold that I said cleanliness and massage promote the growth of human hair. He stands to lose more hair (and friends) if he allows rancid oil to collect on his scalp.

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

The advance analysis of this hand was way off the line with the results we watched. The analysis was that every hand except West held a doubtful opening bid. The principal discussion was about East's miserable 11 high-card point assortment with the analysis that East should and would pass. That was correct. No East did open the bidding where we watched. Some North's did, but at most tables fourth hand opened with one heart and was promptly raised to game.

Every declarer except one managed to bring the game home. It wasn't what we would call inspired or brilliant play. These winning declarers merely played out the ace and king of trumps to drop the queen. Then they lost one trick in each side suit.

A well-deserved bottom score went to the one player who decided to go against the percentage and play for a 3-1 trump break with the queen in the West hand. As he remarked later, "I played brilliantly, but with complete lack of success."

No, we don't. The hand has 12 high-card points, but is conspicuously weak in the major suits and we are more likely to wind up minus than plus if we open.

Burglary Foiled At Streisand's Home

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A sharp-eyed neighbor helped foil a weekend burglary attempt at Barbara Streisand's Bel-Air home, according to police.

Detective Gerald Winkle said Monday that officers recovered $30 from Carol McClure, 42, of Oklahoma City, after arresting her at Ms. Streisand's home Sunday. The officers were summoned by a neighbor who was keeping an eye on the home while the actress-singer was gone.

Ms. McClure was booked for investigation of burglary.

E.E.R.? I never worried about it until I found out what it meant.

When I discovered that an air conditioner with an Energy Efficiency Ratio (E.E.R.) of 10 was twice as efficient as one with a rating of 5, it got my attention. Because with electric power at its present price and likely to go higher in the years ahead, twice as much cooling for my money makes real sense.

So shop for the higher E.E.R. rating when you buy any appliance and compare prices. Just remember that a higher E.E.R. means less electric energy required. And conservation of power is the only sure way to save on your electric bill.

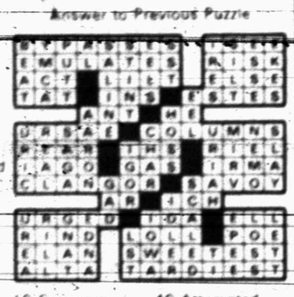
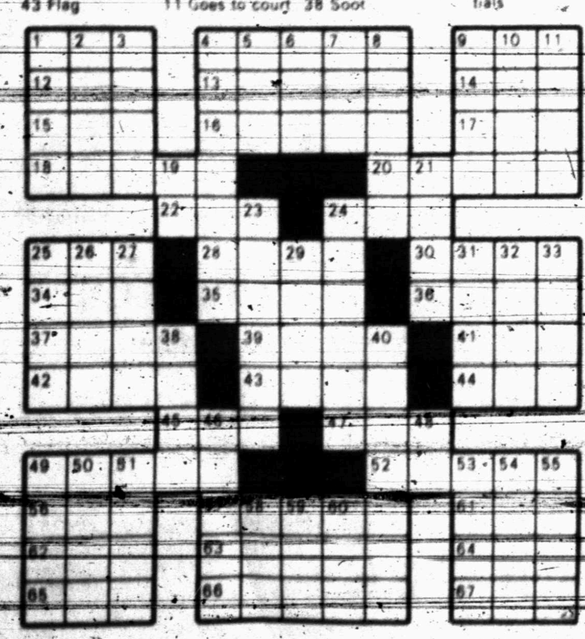
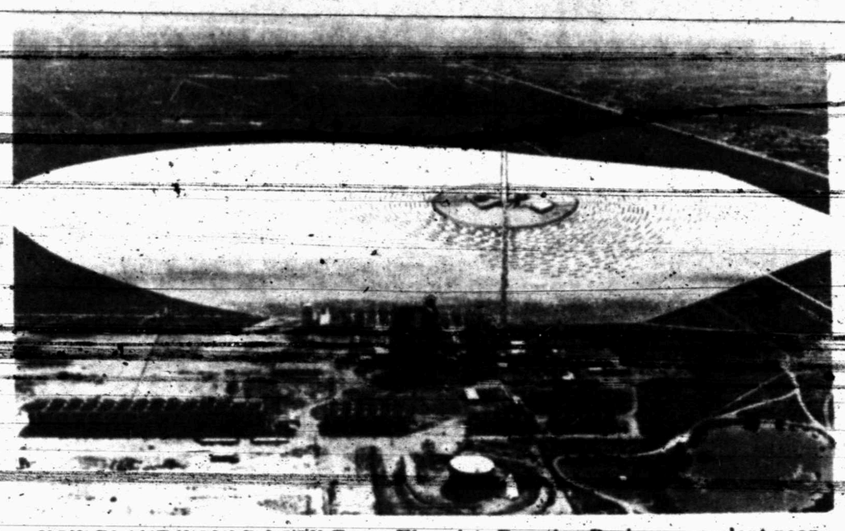
Answer to Previous Puzzle







HOW PLANT WOULD LOOK-Texas Electric's Permian Basin power plant near Monahans in West Texas is shown here with the proposed solar energy system superimposed where it might be located, theoretically. The system would consist of a field of heliostats, or reflective mirrors, situated over a half square-mile area. TESCO, along with Rockwell International, is applying for federal approval to study the concept of converting an existing gas-fired unit at the plant to use the solar energy system to generate electricity. The nine-month feasibility study, if approved by the Department of Energy, would involve no actual construction of the solar facility.

TESCO Asking Study On Solar Energy Plant

Texas Electric Service Co., in conjunction with Rockwell International, a major multi-industry company, today filed a proposal with the Department of Energy to study the feasibility of using solar energy to generate electricity in West Texas.

The nine month feasibility study would help determine the economic and technical problems associated with partially converting an existing gas fired generating unit to a solar energy system.

"We don't really know whether it's possible to use solar energy to generate electricity on large scale like this, but a feasibility study could help us answer many of the uncertainties," TESCO President Bill Marquardt said.

The proposal is only one of several that are expected to be filed by utility and industry teams. The DOE is expected to approve several such studies by Oct. 1.

The conversion of a conventional generating unit to solar power is a totally new process so there are many questions about the system and whether it will work," Marquardt said.

"This proposal is just another part of our commitment to exploring all of the available energy technologies to ensure our ability to provide reliable electric service to our customers now and in the future."

If the proposal is approved, TESCO and Rockwell International would analyze the requirements for retrofitting a 115 megawatt generating unit, located at Texas Electric's Permian Basin power plant near Monahans, with a solar system to be designed by Rockwell. Theoretically, electricity could then be generated with solar energy as well as conventional fuels, such as natural gas or oil.

Generally, the solar energy system being considered for study would involve a field of reflective mirrors, called "heliostats," over a half square mile area. The mirrors would concentrate the sun's rays on a large tower in the middle of the field. The concentrated sunlight would be used to make electricity through the plant's conventional system.

"The system, theoretically, would work much like our present method except that instead of only burning natural gas or oil to generate electricity, we would also be using heat from the sun," Marquardt explained.

"Preliminary information indicates that the Permian Basic area in West Texas is particularly suitable for solar energy application because of the high percentage of days (about 275 days out of the year) when sufficient sunlight is available."

The feasibility study would involve no actual construction of the solar facility. After analyzing the results of the approved nine month studies, the DOE will determine which studies, if any, warrant further research and design work.

Electric Firm Here To Change Hands

Plans for opening Snyder Electric Co. on June 1 have been announced by Vernon Rannefeld, owner of Snyder Heating and Air Conditioning Co.

Rannefeld said he is purchasing the assets of Howell Electric from Wilson Howell, and will continue to operate the electrical contracting firm at its same location, 1507 26th St., under the new name.

Negotiations for the change in ownership of the firm have been underway for several days. Rannefeld said that the same personnel will continue operating Snyder Electric Co. when the change of ownership takes place.

Rannefeld also will continue operating Snyder Heating and Air Conditioning.

Rannefeld said he had considered getting into the electrical contracting business for some time and that the opportunity to acquire the assets of a reputable, established firm with competent personnel influenced him to make the move at this time.

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Angry about impotence

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — This is very important to me so I hope you'll answer my question. I'm married and 38 years old. For the last four to five years we haven't had any sexual relations because my husband is impotent. What does this do to me physically and mentally? I'm frustrated and depressed and feel old and angry. I'm mad at him all the time. Is this natural?

DEAR READER — Assuming that your husband is somewhere near your age group, it is certainly not natural for him to be impotent.

I'm sending you The Health Letter number 3-12 on Impotence so you can better understand the many different causes of this problem. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

It's important to realize that impotence is a symptom. It can be caused by many different things.

When you don't have a normal married life, it's much easier to feel that you're not loved. That in itself leads to frustration. There's no real evidence that the absence of sex will cause you physical or medical harm but your reaction to not having sex can. After all, whatever else sex is it's one way of expressing closeness and affection for your mate. By the time older people reach the stage in life that sex is often less important to them, they will have built up a basic, sound, emotional relationship to each other and have a full appreciation of how much they mean to each other with or without sex. It's not the only way of expressing affection.

Your husband should see a physician to gain an understanding as to why he is impotent. Once the cause is understood, then meaningful measures may be taken to do something about it.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a very afraid 14-year-old girl. I am positive I have breast cancer. My chest is so very small and I have big lumps in both of them. They don't hurt very much until now. When I get jabbed or something like that, it hurts. I can't sleep on my stomach either. Please tell me who to turn to. I'm not very close to my parents so I don't really want to tell them. What doctor should I go to? If this goes untreated, how long will it take until I die? Will it be painful? Please help me.

DEAR READER — It's most unlikely that you have cancer. I presume from your letter that you mean you have some lumps in your breast. At this age of your development these are probably related to endocrine changes in your body. You're growing up.

In any case, I know you'll feel a lot better if you do see a doctor since you are concerned about it. If you have a school physician that you're able to see or a school nurse, that would be a good person to see. Or if you have a family doctor, go talk to him or her.

It would really be nice if you'd learn to talk to your mother about such problems. She's been through a lot of things and you might be surprised how smart she is. If you learn to share some of your problems with your mother, maybe the two of you will be a lot closer than you feel that you are right now.

Power Outage Plunges Boston Into Darkness

BOSTON (AP) - Surgeons worked under emergency lighting and nurses carried green glow sticks through shadowy hospital corridors while utility crews worked to restore power that plunged eight hospitals, the Harvard Medical School and 40,000 homes into darkness for five hours.

The outage Monday night caused emergency cases to be diverted to other sections of the city. Elevators stopped between floors, trapping patients and visitors. Life support systems stopped temporarily and fire alarms were useless.

Boston Edison Co., the city's utility, said the blackout was caused by an explosion and fire at an electrical substation. It was the second power failure in the city in as many months.

However, hospitals reported no blackout-related injuries, and police said there were no incidents of looting in the darkened streets.

"I have engineers, nurses, security guards and housekeepers walking the floors and corridors constantly to protect against fire outbreaks," Peter Bent Brigham Hospital Associate Director Henry Beltramini said during the blackout.

Two emergency operations were conducted using emergency electrical generators at the 330-bed institution. Nurses lighted their rounds with glow sticks - plastic tubes filled with a chemical that glows in the dark.

"It's really frightening," said Joanne Gallo, 24, a volunteer at Children's Medical Center, who was with a 13-year-old boy in a body cast when the lights went out at 7:25 p.m.

"Some of these kids are on life support machines. There were people stuck in the elevators. They still were trying to pry the doors open when I left. The kids were excited at first. But order was restored pretty quickly."

Besides the hospitals, Boston Edison said radio station WGBH and homes in the Brighton, Allston, Roxbury and Back Bay sections of the city and parts of neighboring Brookline and Newton were also affected.

Back Bay was without power for three days last month while utility crews struggled to discover the reason behind a series of manhole explosions that damaged power lines.

Monday's blackout started at 7:25 p.m. Power was completely restored to residential customers by 12:15 a.m. today, and hospitals a half hour later, utility spokesman William Conley said.

Rancher From Mexico Buys Herefords

Ramiro Jiminez, rancher from Acuna, Coahuila, Mexico, was one of the top buyers at the Spring All Female Hereford sale here Monday afternoon.

More than 80 animals went through the auction ring, they were consigned by members of the West Texas Hereford Association, The Howard County Hereford Association, the Sweetwater Area Hereford Association and the Anxiety 4th Hereford Association. The animals sold for a total of $46,400 or some $546 per head.

Jiminez paid $1,225 each for two cows with bull calves at their sides. The cows were consigned by DJ Hereford Ranch at Abilene.

The top volume buyer at the auction was Bob Carr of Austin who bid on 17 head of Herefords.

Here's what fuel means on your electric bill.

The cost to provide your electric service is divided into two parts: base rate and fuel. The base rate covers the cost of bringing electricity to you—things like the miles of lines, substations, power plants and the Texas Electric employees to make it all work are included in the base rate.

But the other part of your bill, fuel, is what some people don't understand. The "fuel" amount on your bill is what we must pay to buy the natural gas, oil or lignite coal that we use to make your electricity.

Without that fuel, all the other things that make up your electric service system would be useless. We must burn fuel to make your electricity. How much we use each month to make your electricity is shown by the fuel amount on your bill.

At Texas Electric, we want you to understand what you're paying for.

Cullen Davis To Marry

FORT WORTH (AP)-Cullen Davis and his longtime girlfriend, Karen Master, will marry this week, after his divorce becomes final, the multimillionaire industrialist says.

He declined to reveal the exact date.

"I don't want to let the cat out of the bag too much. Let me just say it will be this week," Davis said.

A close friend said, however,

"The wedding will probably be Thursday. They want to be married as soon as the divorce is final."

Mrs. Master, who has been married once previously, was a key witness for Davis at two criminal trials when Davis was accused of murdering his 12-year-old stepdaughter during a shooting spree at the Davis mansion in August 1976 and when Davis was accused of putting out a contract on the life of his divorce court judge.

Mrs. Master testified Cullen was in bed with her at the time of the shooting, and Davis was acquitted. Several months ago, she corroborated his story that he was "just playing along" with Charles David McCrory, his former employee-turned-informant, when they discussed various murder plots, and a hung jury resulted.

Priscilla, who was wounded in the 1976 shooting incident, was Davis' second wife. Their marriage was ended last month in a ruling of District Judge Clyde Ashworth. In the divorce decree, the judge awarded the couple's $6 million, 20-room mansion to Davis and gave Priscilla 30 days to get out.

She has to pay him $50,000 a day if she isn't out by Wednesday, which is also the last day she can appeal the divorce decree. Her friends said she plans no appeal.

Davis said his marriage to Mrs. Master will be a quiet affair at a friend's home in Fort Worth, with only a few couples on hand.

"It won't be at Karen's and it won't be at the mansion. We want to keep it very small and very private," Davis said of the wedding.

They plan to move into the mansion as soon as Priscilla moves out, Davis said. He and Karen have been living at her home in Fort Worth since shortly after he and Priscilla separated five years ago.

Electricity and water don't mix, warns Claudia Kerbel, a consumer information specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

NEVER place radio or other electrical appliance near the bathtub or touch it with wet hands while standing in water or on a wet floor, she cautions.

Three Mishaps Reported Here

Three minor traffic accidents were investigated Monday by city police officers.

The first occurred in the 2600 block of Huffman at 8 a.m. and involved an International truck-trailer rig driven by Gerrel Bigham. The rig was in collision with a railroad crossing sign owned by the Santa Fe Railway Co.

The next mishap occurred at Skinny's convenience store on 37th St. There, reports show, a parked 1974 Datsun owned by Kelly Elrod was struck by a vehicle which fled the scene. That accident was reported at 4:06 p.m.

The 1300 block of College Ave. was the site of a minor accident. Reports indicate a road sign owned by the Texas Highway Department was struck by a vehicle which left the scene. It was reported to police at 11:51 p.m.

Sentence Levied In County Court

Winton Eubank Hagins was sentenced Monday in county court on a charge of driving while intoxicated.

He was assessed a $200 fine and a 30-day jail term that was probated six months. He had entered a guilty plea to the offense.

Referendum Bill Badly Wounded

AUSTIN (AP) — The sponsor of a proposal giving Texans a limited right of initiative and referendum says it is badly wounded, if not dead.

Needing 100 votes for approval, the constitutional amendment received an 84-34 tally in the House on Monday — five fewer "aye" votes than when it came up last week.

Rep. Carlisle Smith, D-Grand Prairie, the sponsor said he was not ready to pronounce the measure, HJR3, dead, "but I am saying it is wounded."

Smith said he might ask the House to reconsider Monday's decision "if I think we have the vote to pass it." But time is running short.

The legislative session ends at midnight May 28. Should the House ultimately approve an initiative and referendum proposal, the Senate, paralyzed since last Friday by the absence of the 12 Killer Bee senators, still would have to act.

Gov. Bill Clements has said he would call lawmakers back into special session if they failed to submit initiative and referendum to the voters.

Smith's proposal would let Texans, by petition, put intitiative issues for new laws and referendum measures to repeal unpopular laws on general election ballots. If voters approved the proposals, they would go before the Legislature, which would have to act.

If the Legislature rejected or amended a measure it received by initiative or referendum, the voters again would receive the issue and could pass their origininal proposal over the Legislature's head.

Big Oil Find In Tennessee

WARTBURG, Tenn. (AP) - Drillers looking for natural gas hit a pocket of oil that a drilling company official says may be one of the biggest oil finds in Tennessee.

About 2,310 barrels of crude gushed from the hole into waiting tank cars in the first 24 hours.

Koonsman, Crayton Named Top Athletes As...

Ceremonies Honor Snyder High Sportsmen

Selected as Snyder High School's most athletic male and female at an annual awards ceremony held last night were two seniors who participated in almost every sport available to them.

Each was selected all-district this season in at least one sport, and both were honored for some of those athletic endeavors last night als.

Richard Crayton and Cindy Koonsman - representing five sports which took all-distri ' titles and two others th. did not - were chosen Most Athletic for the 1978-79 school year.

Crayton participated in four sports during the school year, including 3-AAA championship basketball, football, track and baseball teams. The football squad advanced to regionals and the baseball team - having recently won bi-district - enters further play next week.

Miss Koonsman participated on the state championship volleyball team, for which she was named All-State, and the girls basketball and track squads.

In addition to other numerous all-district, all-tournament and all-region awards during the year, the pair received other recognition last evening. Crayton was awarded Best Offensive Back in football and Best Defensive Player in basketball.

Some 28 awards were presented in a near three-hour long ceremony, which recognized all athletes at Snyder High.

The event, held in the school auditorium, was followed by a reception in the student center.

Other football awards saw Baron Land as recipient of the Best Offensive Lineman, Sid Sullenger as Best Defensive Back and Gary Welsh as Best Defensive Lineman. The Tiger Heart Award was presented to Rudy Garza.

The football squad, under head coach Mike Jenkins and assistants Tommy Doyle, Roger Goodwin, Wes Poarch and trainer Rick Howard, posted its first bi-district championship since the 1930's.

Dana Elrod, for two years an all state player, was selected for the only award presented by the volleyball team. Under Coach Joyce Elrod and assistant Lynda Jackson, the volleyball team won a state championship, and its third consecutive 3-3A title.

Four athletes were recognized from boys basketball. These were Crayton, Best Defensive Player; David Jackson, Most Improved; Greg Hinton, captain and Happy Warrior, and Sid Everton, captain.

Under Coach Jack Stephenson and assistant Jim Carson, the team won a district title, compiling a 28-6 record.

Girls basketball gave out three awards, to Brenda Anderson as Most Improved; to Billie Owens, Tiger Sport Award; and to Angie Thane, Best Free Throw Average (68 percent).

The team was coached by Ken Housden and assistant Lynda Jackson.

Also under the direction of Housden, and assisted by Miss Jackson and Mrs. Elrod, was the girls track team. Sarah Fagin was presented with the Track Sport Award.

Snyder girls track sent a number of girls to the regional meet this season, and qualified one for the state meet.

Coach Winfred Shipp presented the boys track awards. Shipp's squad secured the first boys track title in a dozen years, and was aided by Coach Tommy Doyle. Eleven boys advanced to the region meet, and three made it to state.

Ronnie Collins, one of the few graduating seniors from the track team, was named Outstanding Trackman.

In gymnastics, Coach Doug Fitzjarrell handed out four awards. The Most Improved boy and girl were Hunter Crawford and Valeta Wheeler. Most Valuable were Pam Blankenship and Bobby Overhulser.

Fitzjarrell was assisted by Pattie Grimmett.

Coach Albert Lewis' baseball team was the only group to be in competition during the ceremonies. Having tied up a bi-district title, the baseball unit searches for a regional crown next week. Lewis was assisted by Jim Mavroulis.

Scott Crenwelge was presented with baseball's Robert Hobbs Memorial Award. Co-Most Valuable Player awards went to Sid Everton and Mitch Mackey.

Outstanding Player awards went to Donna McGee and Jay Wesson in tennis. Coach Bill Boles, whose tennis team finished second in the district and later qualified five individuals for regionals, presented the awards.

In golf, the Medalist Award was presented by Coach Mackey Greene to Lance McMillan.

Cheerleaders were also introduced and led the audience in the school song at the close of the ceremonies. Cassie Crownover, Sarah Fagin, Shelly Grosshans and Lynn Robinson were introduced as the cheerleaders.

Special awards were presented to Ernest Brandon, a long time school employee and Snyder Tiger supporter; and to Bill McClellan, sports editor of the Snyder Daily News. The awards - school jackets - were presented by Roy Carter, athletic director.

Special music was provided by Lesa Sterling, Darrell Collins and Kathy Watts. Mike Hicks gave the invocation. Jerry Worsham was master of ceremonies.

MVP'S --SHS held its annual all-sports ceremony last night, presenting various awards to students involved in track, basketball, golf, baseball, gymnastics, volleyball, football, tennis and baseball. Chosen as top athletes of the 1978-79 year were Cindy Koonsman and Richard Crayton, above. See related article. (SDN STAFF PHOTO)

Controversy Wrecking World's Richest Race

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—The Indianapolis 500, regarded as the showcase of the U.S. Auto Club's schedule for years, has turned into a nightmare for the organization as controversy overshadows the question of who will win Sunday's $1 million race.

Jerry Karl, one of the drivers bumped from the field filed a protest over the time trials Monday. He said he and others in racing have "become victims of USAC's incompetence in enforcing its rules."

The dinial of seven protests involving decisions made during the time trials was announced Moncay by chief steward Tom Binford following a day of hearings on the protests.

Most of the protests involved efforts by USAC to enforce its regulations re-

The denial of seven prostricting engine power and claims that those regulations were changed in the middle of the time trials which determine the 33-car field.

Binford, referee Art Meyers, USAC technical director Jack Beckley and race registrar Bob Cassaday held a closed-door hearing on the protests. They rejected claims that the regulations were changed since the track opened this month.

Binford said a notice stating competitors could qualify with at least an opening of 1.47 inches in an exhaust piep that helps limit the amount of boost an engine receives was a warning to prevent further attempts to violate the rules and not a new standard.

Canadiens Take Title

MONTREAL (AP)-Jacques Lemaire scored twice, including the second Stanley Cup-winning goal of his career, to lead the Montreal Canadiens to a 4-1 victory over the New York Rangers, their fourth consecutive NHL championship and their 22nd overall.

The Canadiens, who won the cherished silver trophy at their Montreal Forum home for the first time since 1968—their last six Cups were won on the road—also got goals from Rick Chartraw and Bob Gainey.

Braves Slam Past Houston Astros, 7-5

ATLANTA (AP)-Bob Horner, last year's National League Rookie of the Year, is convinced he won't face a sophomore jinx.

"I don't think anything else can go wrong," Horner said Monday night after belting a three-run homer that gave the Atlanta Braves a 7-5 victory over the Houston Astros. "It all happened at once."

Horner was mired in a contract dispute that went to arbitration earlier this month, with the decision still not rendered. He arrived at training camp in the final week, was in the starting lineup on opening night at Houston, but suffered a severely sprained ankle that kept him out of action until last week.

The game itself was a strange one.

Houston took advantage of catcher Dale Murphy's hapless first inning attempts to corral the knuckleballs of veteran Phil Niekro, scoring four runs on three hits, three passed balls, a Murphy throwing error, three stolen bases, a hit batsman and a sacrifice fly.

Powell's Double Does it...

Twins Strongarm Texas

ARLINGTON (AP) Hosken Powell has found a short cut on his long road back.

Powell, who has been with the Minnesota Twins only three days after breaking a bone in his hand during spring training, has collected seven hits in 11 at bats since rejoining the team.

Powell drilled a run-scoring pinch double to cap a three-run outbreak in the ninth inning Monday night to give the Twins a 7-6 come-from-behind victory over the Texas Rangers.

"I broke the hand while batting in spring training," said Powell. "I couldn't believe it. The ball just hit the end of the bat and it broke the bone. I was off a month and I had a lot to make up for."

Powell broke the bone April 2 and came off a disabled list only 15 days ago. He was sent to Toledo in the International League, where he played 11 games.

"I'd say he's done better than pretty good since he has been back," said Twins Manager Gene Mauch.

Powell's game winning hit came off reliever Jim Kern, whose fast ball has been timed at over 100 miles per hour.

"I knew who was out there but I don't know if I hit a fast ball" said Powell. "I guess it was a fast ball."

The Rangers took a 6-4 lead into the ninth inning thanks to home runs by Mike Jorgensen and Pat Putnam.

However, Rangers starter John Matlack ran into trouble. Reliever Sparky Lyle was touched for three singles and then Kern served up the double to Powell. Lyle, now 3-3, took the loss while Mike Marshall earned his 11th save when he bailed out Pete Redfern (2-0) in the bottom of the ninth.

"They (the Rangers) took two games away from us up there in Minnesota" said Mauch. "If you play enough games, it's going to go both ways. They were tough on Marshall up there too with some funny hits off him. But that's all history."

The only dark note for the Twins was that shortstop Smalley's 19-game hitting streak was stopped.

Mauch kiddingly yelled at Smalley, "when are you going to start getting some hits?"

Smalley replied, "when we play again."

In the second game of the series tonight, Steve Comer (3-4) meets unbeaten Jerry Koosman (7-0).

Signs With New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—The New Orleans Saints have signed their No. 1 draft choice, kicker Russell Erxleben of the University of Texas, to a six-year, million-dollar contract.

The contract was signed Monday, but no terms were announced.

Odessa Key At NJCAA Tennis Meet

WACO (AP)-Jim Powell of Cumberland College (Tenn.) went against Jeff Savage of Prince George's Community College today to get the national junior college tennis tournament under way.

Their contest, scheduled for an 8 a.m. start, was in the first flight. The tournament has six flights of singles and three flights of doubles.

The tournament's top seed is Mike Brunnberg from Miami-Dade South, Fla., No. 2 is Karl Richter of Odessa.

Odessa tied for the championship last year with Midland and New Mexico Military Institute.

Players representing 49 schools are in the tournament.

Coaches predict Odessa will repeat as champion, with Miami Dade South or Midland giving the strongest competition.

Among last year's returning players is Jose Riveria of Midland, who won the singles championship in the fourth flight last year but who is playing in the first flight this year as fourth seed. He signed a letter of intent with Texas Tech.

Zahid Maniya of Central Texas College, runnerup to Riveria in the fourth flight last year, also is in the first flight this year.

Report Says NAIA In Financial Trouble

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)-The Kansas City Times quoted unnamed sources within the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics today as saying the 43-year-old organization is in deep financial difficulty.

"Financially, we're as low as we've ever been," one NAIA official said in the copyright story. "When Al Duer (former executive director) left, there was a big reserve, but now there is none, we have nothing to fall back on. And we're in trouble."

Harry Fritz, director of the Kansas City-based NAIA, which serves 515 small-school athletic programs around the country, denied the charges.

"I don't know where you got your information, but there is no crisis problem," Fritz said.

"There is a continual financial problem, but most organizations have concern about meeting expenses. We have to watch our P's and Q's."

The newspaper said sources within the organization who wished to remain anonymous took a different view. They indicated the situation is so severe the NAIA might fold within two years if the fiscal outlook continues to decline.

ASTRO-GRAPH
Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday
May 23, 1979
Several projects that you have been involved in that have not previously paid off will come to fruition this coming year. Don't plow under the seeds which you have sown.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Others are likely to treat you in a more generous fashion than usual today, but be careful not to demand more than you're entitled to. How to get along with other signs is one of the sections you'll enjoy in your new Astro-Graph letter. Mail $1 for each and a self-addressed envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) Do things that you find enjoyable today, but do them as inexpensively as possible. You're a shade too extravagant for your own good.
LEO (July 23-Aug 22) Major achievements are possible today through tenacity and effort. If you look for the lines of least resistance you'll lose your momentum.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Success is likely in your major dealings today as long as you do things in a practical, logical manner. Avoid hunches. They could misfire.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Rather than bank on the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow, take advantage of what you have at hand. The rewards will be worthwhile if you handle things properly.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Personal goals may have to be set aside today to enable you to do things that are for the greatest good of the greatest number.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be alert for career opportunities today, but don't expect a free ride. Developments are promising, but you'll have to work for what you hope to get.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your popularity is at a high point with your peer group today but be wary of one who uses excessive flattery. This person could have ulterior motives.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your mate's judgment in family financial matters today may not be as keen as yours. Do fully discuss any expenditures he or she proposes.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You'll be very industrious and imaginative today, but you could lack the necesary follow-through. Sitting on your ideas won't get the job done.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your material prospects look very encouraging today, provided you don't take foolish risks. Stick to sure things.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Ways will be found today to put your leadership qualities to productive uses. Be careful, however, not to boast of your achievements.

Terry Says He's Now Dr. Bradshaw

PHILIPPI, W.Va. (AP)- Terry Bradshaw says sportswriters won't be able to knock him as a "dumb" quarterback anymore.

Bradshaw, who has led the Pittsburgh Steelers to three National Football League championships in the last five years, received an honorary Doctorate of Laws degree on Sunday from Alderson-Broaddus College here.

"The dumb quarterback image placed on me has gotten stale, especially after winning three Super Bowls. Now, the press can refer to me as Dr. Bradshaw," he said in his aeceptance speech.

RAINS

of Fort Worth.

Flood warnings were issued for the Colorado River from Austin to Bastrop, the Little River in the Cameron area, and the San Gabriel River in the Georgetown area due to the threat of lowland flooding.

The North Texas rains drifted slowly eastward into East Texas after daybreak and much of South Texas still was under a thunderstorm warning at midmorning.

The rain in Southeast Texas moved offshore this morning with a few light to moderate showers reported on the Coastal Plains.

Decreasing cloudiness was expected from the west today. Temperatures were expected to range from the low 90s along the Rio Grande to the 70s and 80s elsewhere.

Austin was one of the cities hardest hit by the nighttime thunderstorms.

Wet streets there may have contributed to the death of an 8-year-old Austin boy Monday. Tony Hernandez died after he was struck by a pickup truck.

Three Austin firemen were injured when lightning struck nearby as they battled a church fire. All were taken to Brackenridge Hospital for observation.

Fire officials blamed lightning for the church fire and minor blazes at seven Austin homes. At one time, all vehicles were away from the city's 23 fire stations, officials said.

Forgery Case Goes To Jury

The guilt or innocence of Arthur Lee Harding, charged with forgery by passing, was being debated this morning by an eight-woman, four-man jury in 132nd District Court.

The trial began Monday morning. The jurors began their guilt or innocence deliberations at 10:15 a.m. today.

Elton John Rocks Russia

LENINGRAD, U.S.S.R. (AP)—British rock star Elton John's first concert in the Soviet Union erupted into a frenzy, with nearly 4,000 Russian fans dancing on their seats or in the aisles.

Uniformed Leningrad police and other Soviet officials were helpless to control the screaming, clapping mobs Monday night.

"I was determined to make it successful," the 32-year-old singer told reporters after the concert. "That's the biggest achievement I've ever received as an artist."

After the 2½-hour performance, which John ended with a spur-of-the-moment of the Beatles hit tune, "Back in the U.S.S.R.," young people at first refused to leave the Oktyabrsky Concert Hall. "El-ton, El-ton," cried the teenagers who surged below the stage.

Outside the hall, at least 2,000 youths spilled over wooden barriers and a human chain of police just to catch one more glimpse of John, who stood in his dressing room window and waved to the crowd.

Speeding Fine Levied By Jury

Jerry Todd Cook of Fort Worth was found guilty by a six-man jury Monday in justice of the peace court on a speeding charge.

Cook was assessed a $25 fine plus court costs. He had been issued the speeding ticket May 13 for allegedly traveling 84 miles an hour in a 55-mile-per-hour zone. The ticket had been issued by troopers of the Department of Public Safety.

Serving on the jury were Jack McGlaun, Bill Aaron, Steve Babcock, Roswell Rigby, Virdie Eades, and Melvin Lee.

Denis Pupin (1647-1714) was a French physicist and Fellow of the Royal Society who invented a steam digester in 1679, the forerunner of the modern pressure cooker.

Now Offers Kitchen, Bathroom Cabinets...

See What's New At Richardson's

Richardson's, located at 1902 37th St. next to Early's Grocery, has added a line of custom kitchen and bathroom cabinets to their merchandise selection. Owner Jerry Richardson says, "We have a cabinet to fit your needs and budget." Currently Richardson's is offering three cabinet lines, beginning with the Harvest House model. This cabinet is constructed of solid alder wood. Next is the Town House model which is an oak cabinet. Finally there is the Charter House model which is a wood cabinet with vinyl covered doors.

Richardson's will install the kitchen in a new house or they can completely remodel your existing kitchen, installing new cabinets and-or counter tops. Major kitchen appliances are available that can be built in at the time your new cabinets are installed.

Also now available at Richardson's is home siding. You may choose from steel, vinyl, aluminum of soffit and fascia.

Richardson's is still the fireplace shop where you may choose from stone, heat circulating, and free standing fireplace models. They also stock a complete line of fireplace tools and accessories. Fireplace glass doors in several styles and price ranges are currently in stock. Jerry also notes that he has a chimney sweep service available.

Singer sewing machines, Kirby, Rainbow Rexair, Hoover, and Singer vacuum cleaners are still very much a part of the scene at Richardson's, and he reminds that he has sewing machine and vacuum cleaner parts, accessories, bags, and service-service-service.

If you haven't been in Richardson's lately you need to drop by and visit with Jerry. He'll not only pass the time of day with you; he'll show you what's new at Richardson's.

The material known as gingham derived its name from a town in Brittany called Guingamp, where the fabric was made.
