Funeral For Mrs Morris Whitten Still Pending

As the Success goes to press this (Thursday) morning, funeral services are pending for Mrs. Morris Whitten, 44, victim of an automobile accident late Tuesday in which her husband was injured.

Mrs. Margaret Hill Whitten, 44, was killed instantly about 4:15 p. m., Tuesday when the car she was riding in with her husband collided in a blinding crash with a Cactus Oil Co., truck about 1 1/2 miles south of Goodfellow field on the Christoval road.

E. T. McDaniel of San Angelo was the driver of the Cactus Oil truck, and he escaped uninjured. According to his statement to Deputy Sheriff Homer Goode, a third car, unidentified, apparently triggered the accident.

McDaniel told the deputy that he was traveling north on the highway and that the Whitten car was coming south toward Christoval.

"A car pulled out to pass me and Whitten tried to avoid a head-on collision by heading for the left shoulder of the highway," McDaniel said.

"I hit the brakes but couldn't stop in time," he said. "It seems like he would have tried for the right shoulder but instead he crossed in front of me. I guess he did the best he could."

McDaniel could not identify the other car, Goode said.

Whitten, a well known Eldorado ranchman, was thrown clear of the car following the impact. He was taken to the Clinic hospital in San Angelo and was reported in satisfactory condition yesterday.

Mrs. Whitten, a lifetime resident of Eldorado, was born Dec. 26, 1917. She graduated from Eldorado High School with the class of 1935 of which she was valedictorian.

She attended Westmoreland College in San Antonio for a year and later received her degree from the University of Texas. She taught school in Ozona for several years.

On Sunday, July 8, 1945, she was married to William Morris Whitten shortly after he was discharged from the Army where he served 32 months in the CBI Theater during World War II.

Survivors include her husband; three sons, Steve, Ross and Bob Whitten, all of Eldorado; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Hill of Eldorado; a brother, Jo Ed Hill of Eldorado; a sister, Mrs. W. E. McCravy of Eldorado; her paternal grandfather, J. W. Hill of San Antonio, and her maternal grandmother, Mrs. J. F. Murchison of San Angelo.

Roy Lynn Taylor visited Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kellogg and D. Borah in Crane last week end.

County Voting Strength May Be Close To 1,000

With close of 1962 poll tax sales Wednesday midnight of last week, a total of 755 poll taxes had been sold here in Schleicher county, and 20 exemption certificates were issued to voters becoming 21 this year.

Since county voting strength includes voters 61 years of age and older who are exempt from the poll tax, it is estimated that around a thousand voters are qualified to vote this year.

Sale of 1962 license tags for vehicles is now under way in the sheriff's office.

Gov. Daniel Announces For Fourth Term

PRICE DANIEL

In a move that was somewhat expected Gov. Price Daniel jumped into the gubernatorial race Friday night in a dramatic statewide television appearance.

His bid for an unprecedented fourth term placed him in the position as the man to beat in a Democratic field that will be loudly heard from now until the Democratic Primary on May 5th.

At one point in his announcement speech, the Governor made the following observation regarding a fourth term:

"I have carefully considered the fact that by announcing for reelection I would be asking you to permit me to serve as your Governor for eight years, which is six months longer than any other Governor has served this state. It would be four two-year terms, but actually a total of eight years is no more than the second terms which are now given to county judges and other county and district offices in Texas, because each term is for four years."

Mr. Fowler is survived by his widow, the former Ruby DeLong of Eldorado, who is a teacher in the El Paso schools.

Mr. Fowler was a veteran of World War I.

Post Script

The Governor's Race

With passing of the filing deadline Monday, six Democrats and three Republicans came out for Governor of Texas in their respective primaries, in what looks like the hottest race since 1946.

The six trying for the Democratic nomination include Price Daniel who came out for an unprecedented fourth term.

Daniel is expected to be a formidable candidate in his bid for re-election. He has stated his platform as including revision of the criminal code, a small loan regulation bill, correcting inequities in the new sales tax, and defending efforts to tax the gas pipeline companies.

Former Navy Secretary John Connally is already being cited as "the anointed one of Lyndon B. Johnson" in his bid for the governorship.

Last month he stated, "I am more than pleased with the reception of the people to the announcement of my candidacy. I am in this race to win and the increasing evidence of support from all over the state convinces me more than ever that I will be the next governor of Texas." But the LBJ label is apt to prove as much a handicap as a help.

Although the office of Attorney General has been a traditional stepping stone to the Governor's chair in Texas, Will Wilson is not likely to win the Democratic nomination without a long, uphill struggle. He ran a rather poor fourth place in the special U. S. Senate election of last Spring.

The liberal Texas Observer editorialized recently that Wilson is now dead politically, and that everyone knows it except Wilson himself.

Marshall Formby of Plainview has a platform that includes the amending of the merit auto insurance plan, raising the speed limit from 60 to 70 miles an hour, and "simplifying" the new sales tax. Presumably that means extending the tax to "everything" which is not apt to endear him to the voters. In addition Formby—who spoke to an Eldorado Lions club ladies night last Fall—has the handicap of being a sectional candidate. He has business interests in the Panhandle area and will have to campaign actively to become well enough known to voters over the state to get his party's nomination.

Edwin Walker is the general who was relieved of his command in Germany last year in a dispute over indoctrination of his troops. He has been associated with the far-right element in state politics in recent months.

It is rather vague and indefinite at this point where Walker's backing, if any, will come from.

Alone of the 6-man slate of candidates seeking the Democratic nomination for Governor, Don Yarborough has come out for repeal of the general sales tax which was passed last year by the Legislature. He has also come out for improved educational facilities in the state and better old-age pensions.

Don Yarborough had liberal and labor backing in 1960 in his bid for Lieutenant Governor. He took a respectable 43% of the votes against incumbent Ben Ramsey.

It remains to be seen how campaigning goes during the coming three months, and which two men will emerge as high in the Democratic Primary on May 5th. The run-off Primary will follow in June.

Three candidates are now in the race for Republican nomination for Governor, Jack Cox of Breckenridge, who came out for the spot a while back after switching his allegiance from Democratic to Republican, is now opposed by Roy Whittenburg and Harry Diehl. The Republican Primary will also be held on May 5th.

Two real estate deals were reported by Williams Real Estate last week. Mr. and Mrs. Bob Hartley bought a house near the school from Chas. Kellogg. Kellogg has been working here with Halliburton and has been transferred to Crane. Mr. Hartley is employed here with Ohio.

Odell and Carol Green bought the Jack Shugart farm, consisting of 160 acres about 2 miles southwest of Eldorado.

Firemen were called out at noon yesterday to a grass fire behind the Eldon Calk residence in Glendale. The blaze was checked before any serious damage was done.

Drive For Pledges In Screw Worm Program Is Succeeding

Early this week Schleicher county farmers and ranchers had pledged $8,485.00 toward a quota of $15,000.00 in the screwworm eradication program.

Stockmen and sportmen of Texas and the Southwest have been requested by the Southwest Animal Health Research Foundation to "pull all stops" immediately in their drive to control and possibly eliminate the costly screwworm.

Gerald Hartgraves, chairman of the Schleicher county screwworm control program committee said he had been advised by the Foundation's board of trustees that the long-sought goal of a screwworm-free Southwest would be a possibility for 1962 if full advantage is taken of the hard freeze of two weeks ago which dealt the flesh-eating parasite a very crippling blow.

Chairman Hartgraves added that if the $3 million voluntary contribution goal of the drive is reached within the next two to three weeks they could expect estimated savings during the next two years of $200 million from screwworm damage and treatment costs and a reduction of up to 50% in the cost of the eradication program.

These savings alone, he said, make a stepped-up effort most worthwhile, but more important—wouldn't it be a wonderful feeling to know that with the return of warm weather we wouldn't be spending time and money fighting the age-old battle against our most costly stock and wildlife pest. We are so close now to success that any slow down could set us back indefinitely and lose for us the advantage gained from the hard freeze.

Chairman Hartgraves said the Foundation Trustees are moving forward with their plans to get the male-sterile fly release program under way within the next few days. They have also notified all county chairmen of a statewide kickoff meeting for February 14. The meeting will be held in Austin and representatives from every county will be urged to attend. Details will be announced later but it is hoped the fund drive will be over the top by the date of the meeting.

Reports from 120 counties show that more than one million dollars is now on deposit at banks in these counties. Organizations are now functioning in 220 counties. Too much is at stake, Chairman Hartgraves said, to slow down and he urged a redoubling of efforts by all drive participants.

Heart Fund Drive Is Under Way In District

W. R. (Dick) Bearce is Schleicher County chairman for the Heart Fund drive now being conducted for the San Angelo District Heart Association.

"Our Hearts & Our Economic Welfare" is the title of the following editorial:

"American industry has tackled and licked many tough problems, but the one we have not yet faced up to resolutely is the terrific waste of human talent exacted from us each year by heart diseases." These are the words of Clarence B. Randall, leading business executive. His statement is entirely correct.

We lose more than 69 million man-days of production each year because of the heart and blood vessel diseases. Expressed in dollars, this is more than a billion dollars a year. Equally significant to all of us is this fact: The heart and blood vessel diseases cause 50% of all deaths among Americans 45 to 64, destroying executives and craftsmen at the peak of their skills and in the most productive years of life.

What can be done to reduce these losses? How can we, in Mr. Randall's words, "face up" to this Number One American health problem, the heart diseases? The San Angelo District Heart Association says that the answer is to expand research. More than 1300 medical scientists throughout the country are now seeking vital answers under grants made possible by the Heart Fund. But many other highly qualified research scientists, with projects approved by the American Heart Association's research committee, are being denied support because there are no funds to put them to work.

It is the responsibility of every citizen whose welfare depends upon the economic security of the community to provide these funds. During February, Heart Month we can give to our local Heart Fund drive. How we give is not important. That we give, and give generously, is. For our gifts will provide the research we need to solve the heart problem.

Texas Legislature ended, candidates for state offices quickly grabbed the spotlight.

Most surprising announcement was the filing of former Gen. Edwin A. Walker as a Democratic candidate for governor.

Then came Gov. Price Daniel's statement that he would seek re-election to a fourth term as governor.

Land Commissioner Jerry Sadler predicted that Daniel would run again, and cancelled his tentative plans to seek that post. Instead, he announced for re-election.

Attorney General Will Wilson said failure of the loan shark bill to pass was the determining point in his decision to file as candidate for governor.

John Connally, already actively campaigning for the office of governor, came to Austin to pay his $1,000 filing fee and left immediately on a flying organizational trip to West Texas.

Gubernatorial candidate Marshall Formby opened state headquarters in Austin. He appointed Dr. James B. Ray of Austin, Wendell Gambill, Dr. Joe Webb and Clint Formby to organize his campaign.

Don Yarborough, Houston attorney, paid Austin a visit to announce his candidacy for governor.

So far, the only Republican contender for governor is Jack Cox of Breckenridge.

Agriculture Commissioner John C. White filed for re-election to the post he has held since 1950. White said 1962 should be a turning point in achieving greater self-determination for farmers and ranchmen.

J. Everts Haley of Canyon is the only other announced candidate for commissioner of agriculture.

Other candidates for statewide offices flooded the State Democratic Central Committee headquarters.

Willard G. Street of Littlefield filed for associate justice of the Supreme Court. Others already seeking that office are incumbent Zollie Steakley and James R. Norvell.

County Judge Woodrow W. Bean of El Paso and Warren G. Moore of Tyler filed for Congressman-at-large, post now held by Martin Dies Sr. of Lufkin.

Judge W. T. McDonald of Bryan, Court of Criminal Appeals justice, joined the attorney general race.

Immediately after the House passed the loan bill, Speaker of the House James A. Turman announced for lieutenant governor.

That brought the total of democrats running for the second spot to six: Sen. Preston Smith of Lubbock; Sen. Crawford C. Martin of Hillsboro; Sen. Robert W. Baker of Houston; Sen. Jarrard Secrest of Temple and former representative Gene Smith of Fort Worth, plus Turman.

There was activity on the Republican side, too.

O. W. (Bill) Hayes of Temple and Kellis Dibrell of Seguin both filed as candidates for lieutenant governor. Dibrell practices law in San Antonio. Hayes is vice president of Continental Belton Company in Belton. Both are 43 years old.

Earlier, two other Republicans had filed for the same office—Congressman-at-large. They were Giles E. Miller, Dallas publisher, and Desmond Berry, Houston industrialist.

Eldorado-Divide Soil Conservation District News

District Supervisors in their regular monthly meeting on Friday, Feb. 2, selected the outstanding Conservation farmer or rancher of the district for the Fort Worth Press awards program.

This year's winner was a farmer operating a farm of some 400 acres. Winner to be announced at a later date.

The district also voted to put up some $30 for essays written in conjunction with the Fort Worth Press program. The best three essays in the Eldorado school will divide $15 and the best three in the Christoval school will divide $15.

This year's subject to write about is "Conservation and the Population Explosion."

This is an open contest for any boy or girl. All they have to do is write an essay of 300 words or less on the above mentioned subject.

Many school teachers encourage their students to enter the contest.

This district, along with other districts is becoming more interested in soil, water, and plant conservation research of the High and Rolling Plains, and on the rangelands of the Edwards Plateau. This increased interest began by a resolution which was passed by the Association of Soil Conservation District Supervisors at their recent annual meeting in San Antonio. At this meeting they went on record as realizing that runoff flooding, and water supply are major conservation problems in the Edwards Plateau of Southwest Texas. They want conservation

Austin.—A hectic final night ended the special session of the Texas Legislature. Two major problems—loan regulation and appropriations—were left unfinished.

Senate killed the loan regulatory bill by a two-vote margin, after the House had approved it by 18 votes. It was described by experts as the strongest loan regulatory law in the nation.

Death came to the appropriations bill in the House. It would have provided money to advertise for tourists, repair San Jacinto Monument, repair damages done to state properties by Hurricane Carla and by fires, pay Senate employees, and finance a number of other items.

Gov. Price Daniel called it a very productive session, nevertheless.

He said it had settled two long-standing issues—bank escheat reporting and farm-to-market road policy.

Daniel was disappointed about the failure of the loan legislation, tourist advertising, and San Jacinto Monument repairs. But he said he would not call this Legislature back into session in the foreseeable future.

Lawmakers headed for home to file for re-election and begin their campaigns for the same or other offices.

This session set some sort of a record for fast action on bills to solve local problems. These ranged from closing the season on alligators in Orange county, to a score of bills creating new water districts (to undertake drainage, hurricane protection or water supply projects).

Daniel was pleased at the bill changing the name of the State Board of Water Engineers to the Texas Water Commission, and reworking it into an image of the State Highway Commission. The chief engineer takes over full administrative control, leaving policy matters in the hands of the three-member commission.

Governor Daniel studied a flood of mail, telegrams and phone calls, which he had elicited, and decided that there was a definite public demand for him to try to become Texas' first four-term governor.

Who Should Censor?

Question of school book censorship was buffeted about by 22 witnesses, when the House Textbook Investigating Committee held its fourth weekly public hearing. Some 200 persons attended the hearing.

Frank Wardlaw, director of the University of Texas Press, said, "There are no men wise enough to serve as censors." He stated that he would prefer that his children's textbooks be censored by authoritative professors, rather than by unqualified individuals.

Author J. Frank Dobie said "the more textbooks are censored, the weaker they become."

The opinion that regulation of teaching materials by elected trustees has worked satisfactorily was expressed by former Baylor University trustee Joseph M. Dawson.

Other witnesses, such as Mrs. A. A. Forester of Texarkana, Richard L. Harvey of Tyler and M. F. Gabler of Hawkins, criticized the Board of Education's formula for censorship. They said they firmly believe that modern textbooks fail to instill a sense of patriotism and love of country.

Committee will hold another hearing February 9.

Names In The Hat

With the special session of the research intensified.

At the recent conventions a 4-H team from Fort Bend county very ably put on a skit entitled, "How Does Your Soil Rate?" The 15- and 16-year-old girl and boy procured their material from 1360 county soil samples and gave remedies for correcting soil deficiencies.

The economic importance of agriculture in Texas was presented by the state FFA vice president. He gave a good pictorial demonstration.

The nation's people are urged to participate and appreciate the U. S. Agriculture Centennial Year—1962. One hundred years of progress. Food is a bargain.

During a recent inspection tour of part of the Great Plains area, Assistant Secretary Welch was heard to say, "I was greatly impressed by the determination and the vigor which farmers and ranchers in the Great Plains are tackling their difficult land use problems. The progress that is being made in shifting the poorer croplands to grass is especially gratifying. I was pleased to have this opportunity to see the Great Plains conservation program first-hand and to explore with the good people in that region ways in which the Department of Agriculture can be of most effective assistance in carrying out our part of this important job."

The National Grange adopted a resolution reiterating its support of "our programs for preservation of our national land, water, timber and mineral resources to provide for future needs of our rapidly expanding population." Grange advocated a stepped-up program of resources education in the public schools and increased funds for conservation work.

Did you know that Planters National Bank in Rosebud, Texas, has the following imprint on every check: "Cooperate in Soil Conservation—it pays dividends"?

Soil Stewardship Week is to be observed May 27 to June 3. This year's theme is "Water, the Stream of Life."

Conservation is now on the supermarket shelf. National Biscuit Company's new cereal, "American Harvest," features contour strip-cropping scenes on the front and back sides of the container.

Mrs. W. T. Whitten entertained some of her friends with a luncheon last Saturday. Her guests enjoying the luncheon and spending the day were Mrs. V. G. Tisdale, Mrs. Sadie Davidson, Mrs. Lige Chrestman, and Miss Chris Enochs.

Last Year's reenactments of major battles and the re-creation of other activity of 1861 hasn't dampened the ardor of those planning observances during 1962 to mark the 100th anniversary of important Civil War events.

During the first quarter of 1962, zealous enthusiasts are planning to reenact the famous battle of the Monitor and the Merrimack, the battle of Picacho Pass in Arizona, and the Andrews Raid or the Great Locomotive Chase in Georgia. A special week-end of activities in Virginia will call attention to the brilliant Shenandoah Valley Campaign of 1862 which General Stonewall Jackson conducted against superior Union troops.

Later in the year, the Battle of Antietam will be reenacted and the Pea Ridge Battlefield site in Arkansas will be dedicated as a National Park.

The battle between the Monitor and the Merrimack will be restaged by the Naval Amphibious Training Command using electrically controlled models at Little Creek, Virginia on March 8 and 9. The original battle, which took place on March 9, 1862 off Hampton Roads, Virginia, marked the world's first battle between iron-clad ships.

The Battle of Picacho Pass in Arizona will be a major effort of the Arizona Civil War Centennial Commission to call attention to the part played by that state in the War and will mark the centennial of the westernmost engagement between Union and Confederate troops.

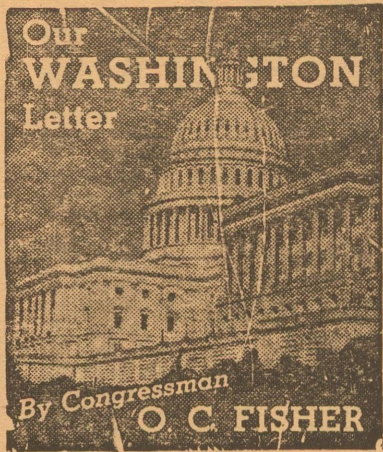

The observance, to be staged on April 14, 15 and 16, will be of interest to Texas Civil War enthusiasts because of the participation of troops raised in the Lone Star State in the campaign which ultimately gave the Confederacy a short-term claim to "the Confederate Territory of Arizona and New Mexico."

The Shenandoah Valley Civil War Centennial Committee has selected "Accent Stonewall!" as its theme to call attention to the anniversary of Jackson's campaign of 1862 in that area. An electric map of the campaign, made available through private donations, will be dedicated at Harrisonburg in March and will remain open without charge through the remainder of the Centennial.

In addition, a tour of the high points of the campaign during the week-end of March 24-25 will touch almost every battlefield and shrine in the Shenandoah Valley.

The reenactment of the Battle of Antietam will be combined with the bicentennial commemoration of the founding of Hagerstown, Maryland. Certain phases of the battle will be recreated during an 18-day long commemoration August 31 through September 17. Other activities will include a 31-mile motorized parade, the rededication of battle monuments, dedication of the reconstructed Dunkard Church, and the dedication of a memorial to Clara Barton.

And our reader Malcolm Smith of Dallas, who invited us to attend the dedication ceremonies for the Pea Ridge Battlefield in Arkansas in March, has written to say that the ceremonies have been postponed until May because the weather in March is so unpredictable.

The Bracero program under which Mexican agricultural workers are contracted to work on farms and ranches, in those areas where there is a shortage of domestic workers, seems to be doomed. The present Labor Department, which administers the program, has shown special hostility to this method of obtaining needed farm workers.

In recent weeks I have received scores of letters from constituents who complain that they simply cannot hire a local worker to do ranch or farm work and are unable to obtain Mexican workers due to the Labor Department's policies.

That Department has now decreed that no agricultural worker can be contracted for longer than 180 days out of the year. And Secretary Goldberg has ruled that since no part of ranch work is "seasonal" and since ranch workers require special skills, they do not meet the Department's standards and are ineligible as a general rule.

In a recent letter to me Goldberg suggested that the federal government might open some schools in the southwest to train local unemployed how to do ranch work, and thereby in one fell swoop solve the labor shortages that have plagued the ranchers for years!

In reply I suggested he pick up the telephone and check with the employment offices and the county agents and find out how many unemployed there are in my district who are able and willing to go out and do ranch work.

I told him the schooling idea would be a foolish waste of money, that the only way to learn ranch work is to work on a ranch.

A number of us who represent labor-shortage areas, have conferred with Labor Department officials and have tried to convince them with facts and figures that there is a shortage, that hiring braceros in those shortage areas could not adversely affect domestic workers.

Under federal law no braceros are allowed to be contracted in any county unless the Secretary of Labor certifies that there is a labor shortage in that county.

Probably our mounting troubles stem from the fact that the program is virtually administered by the AFL-CIO, which has always opposed any bracero program. Mr. Jerry Holleman, former president of AFL-CIO in Texas is now assistant Secretary of Labor in charge of the program, and Goldberg until 1961 was General Counsel of AFL-CIO.

Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Clark took his mother, Mrs. J. N. Clark, to her home in Rotan last week. While there they attended to business and Mrs. Clark visited her sister, Mrs. Frank Houghton. Their grandchildren, Regina and Frankie Haines of Sonora visited them over the week end.

Boy Scout Organization Dates Back 52 Years

Fifty-two years ago, one of the great movements in the history of the world—Scouting—was born in America. Since the first Scout did his first good turn, more than 33,000,000 fine citizens have belonged to the Boy Scouts.

For them, and for the nation which they have made stronger, Scouting has been an enriching experience. These fine youngsters have grown to manhood and become better citizens because of the precepts of character, faith and service which they learned in Scouting.

Today, there are more than 3,600,000 boys active in the Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts and Explorers, and almost 1,400,000 adults who give of their time and talent, without compensation, to the great adventure which is Scouting.

These boys learn the fundamentals of good citizenship by learning the Scout Law and the Scout Oath or Promise, and adhering in their daily lives to these great principles of clean living.

Scouting has been the inspiration for countless thousands to lead nobler, cleaner lives of service to themselves, their families, their cities, states and nations.

Two generations of Scouters have contributed character and substance to America and virtually every other country in the Free World. Until the day when human dignity is everywhere esteemed, the Boy Scouts of America will provide the best possible assurance for a better, stronger tomorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Kinser moved to Brawley, Cal., last week and report that they like it fine.

A Bishop Looks At Life

By Everett H. Jones, Bishop of The Episcopal Diocese of West Texas

Depersonalization

Students of modern American life have repeatedly pointed out our growing tendency to treat one another as things rather than as persons. In the midst of our large industrial plants, in the midst of our crowded cities, in the rush and competition of life around us, we don't even see each other, much less do we listen or care or love. No obligation should rest more heavily upon children of God in our generation than the need to reverse this trend, to set an example of thinking of people as God thinks of them.

In a recent study of Church life in the East Harlem section of New York City, called "God's Colony in Man's World," George W. Weber gives a graphic description of the problem which is around all of us in one form or another. He writes: "It is quite possible here to discover a twelve-year-old child for whose life every relationship with the world is one in which he is treated much like an object rather than a human being. His life is denied love from anyone in the family matrix; he finds himself in a junior high school for which he is inadequately prepared and in which he is unable to make any academic progress. He is forced into a gang to find some kind of protection and status; he is given medical care by the utterly impersonal clinic of a vast city hospital. Depersonalization is living in a public housing project in an apartment to which the management has access without your permission any hour of the day or night."

Every area of the country could write its own description of how this trend toward depersonalization expresses itself. There is the increasing use of machines instead of people which we call automation; there is the increasing use of devices from automobiles to washing machines, resulting in what is called push-button living. It is easy to paint a picture of depressing hopelessness.

But the situation is not hopeless because in the midst of all these conditions there are those who by the power of prayer, faith and dedication keep personal. Which side are you on? Do you add to the impersonality of modern life by your actions and attitudes, or do you keep alive a compassionate concern for individuals around you one by one?

Prune Freeze-Damaged Plants, But Not Now

College Station. — If you're like most other Texans, you have some ornamental plants in your yard that were damaged by the recent freezes. The natural inclination is to remove the damaged growth, but Harlan Smith, extension plant pathologist, advises against being too hasty.

If there is any doubt that twigs and branches have been killed it is best to wait a few weeks until such damage can be easily seen, says Smith. At that time prune the plant back to live wood by making the pruning cut several inches below the last sign of dead wood.

To find out how much of a shrub has been killed, use a knife or the thumbnail to scratch into the cambium layer, just beneath the bark, says Smith. Discoloration of this layer is a sign that the plant needs cutting back below such damage. If any bark has been split or cracked, this area should also be cut out. Often the damage is to the outside twigs and branches, and the plant will need only a slight clipping back.

Pruning shears should be dipped in a disinfectant such as 70 percent denatured alcohol between cuts, the specialist advises.

With trees and large shrubs the cut end should be painted with shellac. After the shellac has dried a wound dressing or disinfectant tree paint should be applied to the exposed area. You will get the best results if you inspect the dressed surfaces periodically and recoat them once or twice a year. Before recoating, clean the wound with a stiff wire brush to remove all blisters and loose flakes. Be careful not to cover the new growth with these additional applications of wound dressing.

Smith says one way lessen damage in case of another freeze is to water the plants thoroughly as soon as pipes thaw. This prevents drying, which causes more damage than the cold.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Biggs were in Abilene visiting their sons, Glenn and Truman and their families over the week end. While there they received news of the death of Mrs. Biggs' aunt, Mrs. Mae Carter, who died at Baptist Memorial Hospital Saturday, and they attended her funeral at Eola at 3:00 p.m. Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Schuller of Lufkin are visiting the Marvin McDonald family. Mrs. McDonald is Mr. Schuller's sister and the Schullers formerly here and he was employed by Shell Pipe Line.

Mrs. V. G. Tisdale moved into her new home in Sunset Acres last Friday, and Jim Williams moved into the house which she vacated and which he had previously purchased from her.

MARKHAM - McDONALD WEDDING

Gordon McDonald and Mrs. Oma Markham of Keller, Texas, were quietly married at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Montgomery on January 31 by Mr. Jack Montgomery.

The only attendants were Elmer Little of Odessa and Mrs. Markham's daughter, Marie Markham. The couple are making their home in Eldorado.

On The Screen . . . 'Devil At 4 O'Clock' Is On Sunday And Monday

Spencer Tracy, who went thru an earthquake as a priest once before in 1936's "San Francisco," turns his collar backwards again and hangs on for dear life against more tremors in "The Devil at 4 O'Clock," showing Sunday and Monday nights at the Eagle Drive-In Theatre here in Eldorado.

But this time that isn't Clark Gable clutching his shoulder as the buildings come tumbling down. This is 1962, and even if Gable still were here it seems logical that Columbia would have chosen Frank Sinatra as Tracy's partner in peril.

In the Max Catto best-selling novel from which the film was made, a small South Pacific island blows up in a brilliant burst of volcanic fire and lava.

The Catto novel details the last hours of this small mythical island of Talua. Nearly all of the inhabitants had already left the island. Remaining behind were the priest-director of a leper hospital, three criminals and 28 frightened native children at the hospital.

It is the story of the rescue of the children that forms the basis of the novel—landslides, streams of molten lava and raging forest fires. Catto has put it all together with an excitement and suspense and clever writing which has characterized most of his works.

Tracy is the grizzled, white haired priest who is disillusioned after devoting his life to building a leper hospital for children.

Sinatra is the New Jersey convict flown in to the island on a stopover and put to work by Tracy repairing the hospital. When the volcano explodes, Tracy begs to be flown over the mountain and be parachuted down to save the children from the earthquake and boiling lava.

Agreed, says the island governor, if he can get volunteers to go with him. Sinatra has already had an affair with a blind nurse up at the hospital (Barbara Luna), so he volunteers himself and two fellow convicts.

His buddies are Gregoire Aslan, a toothy Frenchman, and Bernard Hamilton, a brilliant young Negro actor.

The characterizations of the priest and three criminals are such that there can be no saving of their lives, though they rescue the children that had been left behind. One dies in a sea of mud, two are trapped when they hold up a bridge to allow the others to pass and the fourth returns to join the doomed pair so that the remaining three are together when the island blows itself out to sea.

It isn't every day that you pack so much star power into two hours of Technicolor footage.

Staging "The Devil at 4 O'Clock" required considerable doing by Columbia Pictures. Volcanoes do not erupt on call and besides they are rather dangerous; so, Columbia created its own volcano.

Catto's Talua was a Tahitian island, but the company found a Hawaiian island, Maui, which appeared more Tahitian than Tahiti. Here, too, was Haleakala Crater, the largest in the world but which fortunately has not belched fire and lava for 300 years.

Art director John Beckman chose the village of Lahaina as the chief location and proceeded to give it the necessary Hollywood treatment. A partable volcano, a man-made earthquake, plastic palm trees, outrigger canoes and 10,000 island-type flowers were taken to Lahaina.

The fury of the erupting volcano was simulated with flame throwing and exploding spark-machines, tons of composition smoke were used and dead lava ash was dropped from airplanes. The flowing lava was a ghastly mess of 7,500 gallons of goeey paste mixed with fluorescent paint and pumped from giant tanks.

For the earthquake a false street was built over the main drag of Lahaina with cables laid underneath. When winches pulled on the cables, the false street split, creating the impression of an earthquake fissure.

The actual destruction of the island was accomplished by destroying a miniature replica, complete with crater, at the studio, for the final scenes.

Catto derived the title of his story from an old Spanish proverb which has a rather apt application to the story itself: "It is hard for a man to be brave when he knows he is going to meet the devil at 4 o'clock."
