Centennial-July 4th to be combined

The Scurry County Centennial now has an official sponsoring organization and a celebration date.

The Snyder Chamber of Commerce has accepted the task of planning and presenting the county's 100-year observance.

And chamber officials said Thursday that the current plan is to expand this summer's July 4th celebration to include the Centennial.

By planning a July 4th date, the official 100-year anniversary will be only a few days off of the historical mark. While hunters and stores were in the area as early as the 1870s, the county was officially organized on June 28, 1884.

Chamber Manager Mort Ewing said the close proximity of the historical date and the annual celebration in Snyder made a combination of the two events "a natural."

While no definite plans are now finalized, he said the membership of existing chamber committees would be consulted to begin planning for the event.

The possibility of forming a special Centennial committee is being considered also by chamber officials.

Since July 4th falls on a Wednesday this year, expanding the local observance to include the preceding Monday and Tuesday has been discussed.

In addition, the possibility of a Centennial "project" has been proposed. As Ewing described it, "something permanent" which would remain after the Centennial date is passed.

Ideas for such a project are expected to be a part of the overall planning effort.

The early historical dates for Scurry County begin with Aug. 21, 1876, when the county was created by the state legislature.

This "creation" entailed the drawing of boundary lines to divide portions of West and Northwest Texas into 54 counties.

The Centennial celebration marks the official organization of the county — the time when county officials were first elected.

The City of Snyder was officially incorporated July 2, 1907. Simultaneously, it was named the county seat.

Five year mark...

Food costs said higher

WASHINGTON (AP) — The biggest food price surge in five years pushed consumer prices up 0.6 percent last month, their steepest gain in nine months, the government said today.

Half the gain came from a 1.6 percent jump in food prices, the Labor Department said. Prices rose for virtually all foods, including such staples as meats, eggs, vegetables and fruits.

Today's bad news had been expected by analysts who said last summer's prolonged withering heat and drought, coupled with the severe cold weather earlier this winter, made more expensive food inevitable.

Today's Consumer Price Index recorded the steepest-ever rise in telephone bills, largely the result of the government-ordered breakup of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. Phone bills, the report said, rose an average of 5.2 percent last month.

Heating oil prices climbed 2.6 percent, the largest one-month gain in nearly three years, while gasoline prices, tumbling for the fourth straight month, were off 1.1 percent. Natural gas prices were also down 1.1 percent.

In all, January's increase in the CPI was three times the revised 0.2 percent advance of December and the biggest jump since the 0.7 percent of April.

Despite the fresh price pickup, however, analysts didn't foresee a return anytime soon to the torrid inflation pace of just a few years ago.

Forecaster Donald Ratajczak of Georgia State University predicted that most of the weather-related rapid food price increases would slow during the spring.

Most analysts look for a 5 percent advance for all of this year.

Consumer prices last year rose 3.8 percent, their best showing since 1972.

Prices had risen 3.9 percent in 1982 after shooting up 12.4 percent in 1980 and 8.9 percent in 1981.

Today's report provided these additional details on consumer price activity last month:

—Fresh fruit prices soared 7.8 percent. Vegetable prices jumped 7 percent.

—Egg prices skyrocketed 21.3 percent while poultry prices rose 3.7 percent, both attributed to the avian flu outbreak in the mid-Atlantic states that has devastated chicken flocks.

All the changes are adjusted for normal seasonal variations.

If last month's 0.6 percent increase held steady for 12 straight months, the yearly advance would be 7.8 percent. The annual rate reported by the department is based on a more precise calculation of monthly prices than the figure made public.

Bell ruling nears

AUSTIN (AP) — The dispute over $2.75 that Southwestern Bell wants to immediately add to residential phone bills is now in the hands of the state courts.

The Public Utility Commission ruled Thursday that the phone company can't put a $280 million, temporary rate hike into effect until April 22. The company argued it could start the new rates Thursday.

"Ultimately, this issue is going to be decided by the judiciary," Bell lawyer Jon Dee Lawrence told the commission. "The issue is in the courthouse, where it belongs. Let's get on with it and find out what the answer is."

Bell spokesman Dale Johnson said a state court hearing has been scheduled for 9 a.m. Monday. Johnson said each day without the higher rates costs Bell $700,000.

PUC Chairman Al Erwin agreed that the courts will make the final decision.

"There's no doubt this issue will end up in court," he said, adding that the commission ruling against Bell was proper because it gives the company the burden of proof in court.

At the center of the battle is a pair of state laws — one old, one new — that dictate when a utility company can begin charging refundable rates. The state allows utilities to raise rates while rate cases are pending at the PUC.

Bell has a $1.3 billion case pending at the commission.

The old law said the refundable rates could be charged 125 days after a rate hike is requested. The new law, which went into effect on Sept. 1, stretched the waiting period to 185 days.

Bell filed the rate case last June, when the old law was in effect. But the company's rate filing was not completed until Oct. 19.

Under the new 185-day law, the company has to wait until April 22 to collect bonded rates.

Abused children project meeting planned Sunday

Anyone interested in helping establish a home for abused children in Scurry County is asked to attend a 2 p.m. meeting Sunday.

The project has grown out of a need first identified by members of the Scurry County Task Force, a group organized to combat drug and alcohol abuse among county youth.

Interest in the idea has since increased to include non-members, according to Karan Wilkins, task force member.

The purpose of Sunday's meeting is to discuss progress made toward receive a non-profit corporation status for the proposed home. Reports will be given also regarding visits to similar homes in Texas.

Wilkins said the Department of Human Resources office in Snyder serves nine counties and that no facility for abused children exists in any of those counties.

According to Wilkins, Ernie Armstrong, local attorney, is serving as their legal advisor. She added

Keeping tabs on our neighbors:

Native West Texans on occasions must defend to visitors the changing weather. In West Texas, it can be warm and still one day, followed by snow, or a duster. Dusters seem to draw the most attention.

Walter Buckel, in the Lamesa Press-Reporter, noticed that Midland High hired a new football coach from the Houston area on a day the sand was blowing.

He's Doug McCutcheon, the former Tech running back. Members of the Midland press asked the new coach about the blowing dust. Buckel liked his reply:

"It doesn't bother me. I can live with the dust in West Texas or stay in Houston and rust."

Says Buckel, "If you're going to live in this country, we have to stand up for it." He recounted a similar experience last month in Dallas.

Buckel entered the hotel elevator on the 10th floor. At the 8th floor, a woman who apparently was from the East got on. Looking at Buckel's convention badge, she exclaimed, "You from Lamesa? Good gosh, I used to live in Big Spring and I'm glad it was used to. That dust will kill you."

Buckel rose to the defense: "Lady, we've never lost a person in a dust storm. Never...but you hear of people dying in floods, mud slides, fires, tornadoes, blizzards and cold weather. But we've never lost a person to dust."

George Dolan, in the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, told about an Metroplex resident whose children were watching a review of an upcoming movie.

The announcer wound up her review with something along these lines: "I recommend you go see this move, but watch out for the sex and violence.

The youngster turned to her parents and said, "Tex and Violence? I guess Tex must be the boy and Violence must be the girl."

In Brief

Bombardment to resume

By the Associated Press

Iran and Iraq resumed artillery and missile attacks on each other's cities today, and both sides claimed successes on the battlefront in southern Iraq where Iran has mounted a major offensive.

Long-range Iraqi missiles struck the cities of Khorramabad and Borujerd deep inside Iran early today, killing 59 civilians and wounding 350, according to Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency.

Iran began shelling Basra, Iraq's second largest city, in retaliation for the missile attacks, according to an Iranian military statement reported by IRNA.

Man arrested after standoff

STRATFORD, Texas (AP) — A 32-year-old Cactus man who kept authorities engaged in a 10-hour standoff was taken into custody early today after police stormed into a barn where he had barricaded himself.

Authorities confiscated a 20-gauge shotgun and pistol from the man, who was taken to Sherman County Jail. A warrant had been issued for the man in connection with a probation violation from the 69th state Judicial District in Dumas, officials said.

The standoff began at about 6 p.m. Thursday after the man entered a barn about 10 miles southeast of Stratford on Farm-to-Market Road 2232 and barricaded himself inside, said Department of Public Safety trooper Tom Shelton.

"He said he was not going to give himself up and would kill somebody if they tried to come in after him," Shelton said.

The man fired one shot from inside the barn after a Sherman County sheriff's deputy approached the building, the trooper said.

Nuke plant probe ongoing

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The chairman of a licensing review panel for the Comanche Peak nuclear plant says the board should have heard testimony from a plant official about problems with a study of its quality assurance programs.

Peter Bloch, chairman of an Atomic Safety and Licensing Board panel reviewing the plant's licensing application, said Thursday that he had cut off the testimony of tampering at the nuclear plant near Glen Rose are the subject of an inquiry by the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission, an official said

NRC regional counsel William L. Brown said officials were investigating whether workers improperly altered records after learning that a consultant would check the accuracy of some documents the next day.

The NRC staff, as part of the investigation, agreed to interview the manager of the plant's record-keeping division as early as next Monday and to furnish results to the safety and licensing board, Brown said.

Minority relations criticized

DALLAS (AP) — The only black member of President Reagan's Cabinet says that the administration's relationship with minorities is "not good" and it will need to work hard to overcome its mistakes.

"They do not have good relationships on the whole with the black community," U.S. Housing and Urban Development Secretary Samuel R. Pierce Jr. said of some members of the administration.

Stolen trailer recovered

A routine check by Snyder police Thursday resulted in the recovery of a stolen semi-trailer at a local truck stop.

The trailer had been parked at the Texaco Truck Stop at U.S. Highway 84 and Huffman Ave. for several weeks. After officers checked the trailer's registration and serial numbers, the vehicle was noted as one reported stolen in North Bergan, N.J.

The Freuhauf trailer, which is being held by local authorities until the owner can claim it, is owned by the Freedman Express Company of Wilkes Barre, Penn.

Begin final New Hampshire push

MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — Democratic campaign rivals are beginning their final push for next week's New Hampshire primary after a gentlemanly debate in which the pack left presidential front-runner Walter F. Mondale free to continue a non-stop attack on President Reagan.

"Mr. Reagan, whether its Lebanon or arms control or the budget deficit or whatever, is a president who is not providing ... leadership. I will do so," Mondale declared Thursday night in the 90-minute televised debate.

"I know what I'm doing ... I would know what I'm doing the first day and I would take charge."

It was the final eight-way candidate confrontation before New Hampshire's voters deliver the first primary verdict next Tuesday.

There was plenty of good-natured kidding, and even a self-deprecating remark or two, such as when Sen. John Glenn conceded he was "dull but not boring."

Former South Dakota Sen. George McGovern sparked laughter with his explanation that he would agree to serve as vice president. "I don't have a job now," he said.

"Not only that but my apartment burned down last May. I don't even have a place to live. I need help," he said.

For the most part, there were none of the sharp attacks against Mondale that characterized earlier debates in New Hampshire and Iowa.

That left him free to continue his assault against the president, an approach he has taken since his overwhelming victory in Monday's Iowa caucuses.

"That government is out to lunch and we can't tolerate that," he said after the debate, which was sponsored by the League of Women Voters.

"I promise to defeat Ronald Reagan and provide presidential leadership," Mondale said.

Mondale is favored to win the New Hampshire primary next Tuesday and even one of his rivals, Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina, says a strong victory for the former vice president would all but wrap up the nomination.

But Hollings and six others in the race used their part of the debate to appeal directly to New Hampshire's voters.

"The idea that what was cast in Iowa is irreversible is nonsense," said Glenn, hoping to end a slide that has challenged his claim to be Mondale's principal opponent. Glenn came in fifth in Iowa with less than 4 percent support.

Sen. Alan Cranston of California, his campaign struggling after a weak fourth-place finish in Iowa, tried to win back the nuclear freeze vote that apparently slipped away on Monday.

"If you vote for me, the message will be unmistakably clear ... that the president of the United States do all he can to end the chance of war," he said.

Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado is trying to capitalize on his surprising second-place finish in Iowa. "At the risk of attacking," he said, Mondale should be the candidate if the party wants old ideas.

Hollings is hoping to pick up some of Glenn's support and he claimed the Ohio senator "flunked the course" in Iowa and that he himself can save the party from a nominee who is "overpromising and weak on defense."

AMA expected to seek freeze

CHICAGO (AP) — The American Medical Association's call for doctors to help heal the nation's economy by freezing their fees for a year drew objections from some physicians, but the AMA chairman predicted 85 percent would comply.

Saying doctors have a responsibility to aid in the economic recovery, the AMA's 12-member board of trustees voted unanimously Thursday to mail letters to the nation's 390,000 doctors involved in patient care, urging them to refrain from raising fees for one year.

"Among the major concerns that people have is the cost of medical care," said Dr. Joseph F. Boyle, the AMA's president-elect. "We believe that doctors have the same concerns as their patients and will share in all the sacrifices that are necessary to keep the economy strong."

Doctors will be asked to begin the freeze immediately, said AMA president Dr. Frank J. Jirka Jr. They will also be urged to consider the financial circumstances of their patients — especially the unemployed, the uninsured and those covered by Medicare — and to reduce or waive fees when warranted, he said.

About 20 percent of the nation's $325 billion annual health care bill is made up of doctors' fees, with hospital costs accounting for most of the rest. Two decades ago, the doctors' share was about 27 percent, said Dr. John J. Coury Jr., chairman of the AMA board.

Some initial reactions were positive.

"Something like that would be quite appropriate," said Dr. Charles Hatcher Jr., chief of cardiac surgery at Emory University's clinic in suburban Atlanta. "Certainly, if it would help the economy, it would help us all — a short-term sacrifice for a long-term gain."

However, Dr. George Brumley, interim dean of Emory University Medical School, emphasized that physicians' fees are not the only factors responsible for the spiraling cost of health care.

"I'm sure the physicians would be interested in considering it at the same time that all other health care costs are being considered to carry their share of the responsibility," he said.

"In 1983, for the first time in a period of almost five years, physicians' fees went up faster than the all-items (consumer price) index," said Boyle.

2 councilmen are threatened

WEAUBLEAU, Mo. (AP) — Two city councilmen say they got death threats just a day after the mayor was found killed by a high-powered rifle, and one admitted, "I've got butterflies in my stomach right now."

Curtis Bailey and Henry Jerki said Thursday that they received the telephoned threats Wednesday, a day after Bailey found Mayor Ollie Cooper lying face down in a pool of blood at Cooper's farm.

The mayor's death followed a year of violence and threats against the city council that have left some lawmakers in this small southwest Missouri town frightened and angry.

The caller Wednesday told each of the men, "You're next."

Cooper, Bailey and Jerki were all up for re-election in April. Two other council members were not threatened.

Hickory County Sheriff William V. Kennedy said Thursday that he was not treating the threats as serious. "I think they're cranks," he said.

Baptists and Methodists and Presbyterians and Lutherans comprise one-third of our nation's church-going population. But they are shortchanged, they say, when it comes to news coverage.

On prime-time TV, for example, when anything religious is mentioned, their 33 percent gets only 2.3 percent of the coverage.

They object.

They say Roman Catholics and Jews and Episcopalians and Mennonites are getting more than their fair share of TV coverage.

Researchers at the University of North Carolina have been listening for religion-related news on TV with stopwatch in hand.

Because prime-time evening news on the big three networks is watched by 50 million viewers, these programs received the primary scrutiny.

For ten years, each news story was timed and indexed.

Researchers did not categorize as "religious" stories which dealt primarily with politics or the strife between Arabs and Jews in the Mideast.

Of our nation's five mainline religious denominations, Judaism got the most mention for its size. Our nation's Jewish five percent received 16.2 percent of the news coverage.

Mennonites, by far the smallest group in the study, received five times more coverage than their size would justify.

The primary reason Mennonites (or Amish) got so much media attention is related to Supreme Court and other court decisions relating to their controversial doctrines.

Roman Catholics are 44 percent of our nation's church members, received 56.4 percent of network news coverage.

Much of this relates to the death of two Popes and the travels and assassination attempt on the life of the present Pope.

Whatever the explanation or justification, the numbers still tend to indicate a degree of media discrimination against Protestants.

Director of this decade-long research project, James Gordon Stewart Jr., believes this "lopsided" coverage is costing mainline religions in numbers and in resources as viewers tend to gravitate with their attention and their contributions to the more visible denominations and the electronic clergy.

It's interesting, though, that the denomination growing fastest — Adventists — has the lowest public profile.

By Oswald Jacoby and James Jacoby

The late Walter Malowan once said, "I suppose you can't help misbidding your own hands, but try not to misbid mine also."

North's jump to three spades was a distinct misbid of his own hand. Two spades was the correct call, especially since North-South were 30 on score.

The rest of the bidding and play was fast and furious. South jumped to six spades. Everyone passed. West cashed his king and ace of diamonds. Then the furiousness began.

North wanted to know why South had bid like a jackass and not like a bridge player. South wanted to know why North had bid and acted like some unspecified kind of ass.

We give a little blame to South. He could have cue-bid four hearts and, after North had signed off at four spades, continued with a five-club cue-bid. North would have merely bid five spades, and South would have seen the diamond danger and have passed.

Now we will discuss North's three-spade bid. It was a bid typical of those bridge players who try to bid their partner's hands as well as their own. North had absolutely no reason to expect the bidding to die at two spades, and if it did, the chances are that even two spades would have been in jeopardy. After all, South also knew what the score was.

Over two spades South would still make some slam try or tries, but surely would not not get too high.

Vivace Junior Music Club meets

Members and guests of the Vivace Junior Music Club observed the Parade of American Music sponsored by the Texas and National Federated Music Clubs Feb. 18 in the home of Judson Morrison. The wonderful years of the 1940s were brought back by narration and songs which gave the club members an insight into the political and social events of the era.

Ken Gartman gave a piano rendition of "In the Mood," Linda Walker sang "Blues in the Night" and "Mairzy Doats," Sarah Brown, Anne Egelston and Julie Zeck sang "Don't Fence Me In," Sara McDonald, Mindy Robertson and Cindy Wood sang "Jingle Jangle Jingle," Shubnum Ilyas, Carrie Keith, and Alicia Kubena sang "Buttons and Bows," and Lyle Hale, Jody Webb and Morrison sang a different arrangement of "Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy" than the Andrews Sisters recorded.

Music of the swing era continued with recordings of "Opus One" by Tommy Dorsey, "Take the A Train" by Ellington, "Two O'Clock Jump" by Woody Herman, and "Moonlight Serenade" by Glenn Miller.

Narrations were given by Michele Anderson, Cindy Wood, Ginger Smith, Michelle Holmes, Rebecca Vestal, Carrie Keith, Shubnum Ilyas, Judson Morrison, Myste Malone, Jody Webb, Amy Armstrong, Sarah Brown, Lyle Hale, Sara McDonald, Kasi Campbell, Julie Zeck, Mindy Robertson, Alicia Kubena, Anne Egelston, Hayley Vineyard, Linda Walker, Mrs. Bethel, and Amanda Donnelly.

Hosts for the meeting were Phil Hagar, Jody Webb of Colorado City, Lyle Hale of Rotan and Morrison.

Guests were Sandy McDonald, Jane Webb, Kathleen Hale, Mary Keith and Chad Keith.

FEBRUARY HOSTS—Judson Morrison, Phil Hagar, Lyle Hale and Jody Webb (left to right) were hosts at the February meeting of Vivace Junior Music Club recently.

MONTEREY MACARONI

Delicate flavor and interesting texture.

8 ounces elbow macaroni
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
3 cups milk
¾ pound Monterey Jack cheese, grated medium-fine
Paprika

Cook the macaroni according to package directions and drain. Make a white sauce with the butter, flour and milk; keep hot over hot water or very low heat. Spread half the macaroni in a buttered 2-quart baking dish (11¾ by 7½ by 1¾ inches). Sprinkle with half the cheese. Layer with the remaining macaroni. Sprinkle with the remaining cheese. Pour the hot sauce over the entire top. Sprinkle lightly with the paprika. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until bubbling hot — about 20 minutes. Let stand 5 or 10 minutes before serving. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Mr. and Mrs. Burk host Poetry Society

The Scurry County Poetry Society met in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Burk Feb. 20. President Garnet Quiett conducted the business session. Mayzell Fenton gave the invocation.

A preview of programs for the year was presented by Mmes. Burk and Quiett. Poems to be studied at the March meeting are the folk ballad and the literary ballad. Mrs. Burk passed out study guides and a list, elements of poetry, to help members when they present programs.

Mrs. Quiett explained the elements of poetry and read her poem, "A Tree Is Like a Host of Friends." She analyzed the poem naming some of the elements of poetry.

Mmes. Fenton and Quiett sent poems to the Association of American Poets in Honolulu, Hawaii. Mrs. Quiett's poem, "Some Day My Love," was accepted for publication in the "Anthology of American Poetry."

Refreshments were served to six members and a visitor, Jolene Hatfield of Baytown.

Stained glass

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Warm blood of goat, powdered sulphur, and leaves of nightshade plant are among the ingredients found in 15 medieval recipes for making colors for stained glass.

The recipes are contained in an 11th century manuscript owned by Sibley Music Library at the University of Rochester's Eastman School of Music.

Called the "Rochester Codex," the manuscript is more important to the library because it also contains a treatise on "the science of music" which was written by a benedictine monk. The musical examples are written without the musical staff lines or notation system universally used today.

Dear Abby

Old World Parents Won't Like New World Lifestyle

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I've been living in the United States for over three years, having come from a country that is predominantly Roman Catholic. My parents are very religious and go by the book in everything.

This summer my parents are coming here for a two-week visit. They know that I am going with a nice Catholic boy, but they don't know that we are living together.

Abby, I've never lied to my parents in my life. (There have been times when I haven't told them everything, but I've never lied.) If they come and see that we are living together, I am sure they will pressure us to get married, and neither of us is ready for that yet.

What should I do?

NEEDS ADVICE

DEAR NEEDS: Write to your parents and tell them that you and your boyfriend are living together and you hope that they will not pressure you to get married because neither of you is ready for that yet.

It may come as a shock to them, but the shock would be greater were they to come and learn it then. Of course, you could ask your boyfriend to move out while your parents are visiting, but I doubt that you could handle the guilt.

DEAR ABBY: I need your help. I've been married for seven months to a man I love with all my heart. Now the problem: He is a very heavy breather and he whistles through his nose when he sleeps. It is not a snore—it's a whistle that is louder than any snore I've ever heard.

I'm a very light sleeper, and this noise wakes me up many times during the night. I can't continue waking him up to tell him to turn over or put the pillow over his head. I've tried using earplugs (the kind used by people who work around noisy equipment), but they aren't comfortable and they don't stay in my ears.

Please don't tell me I'm lucky to have a husband and be glad I can hear. I am only 22 and I can't go on like this for the rest of my life.

SLEEPLESS NIGHTS

DEAR SLEEPLESS: If your husband has not seen an ear-noise-throat doctor, he should. (A minor surgical procedure might relieve the problem.) If that fails, check your nearest university for its sleep disorder clinic. If you strike out there, see your friendly neighborhood pharmacist for wax earplugs that can be molded to the ear, are more comfortable and stay in.

And if any readers have suggestions—short of "separate bedrooms"—I'll pass them on to you.

DEAR ABBY: This is for the unmarried secretary who thought her married boss got her pregnant. She told him, and he quickly gave her $300 for an abortion, which she never had because it turned out she wasn't pregnant after all. She said she spent the money on clothes, never revealing the truth to her boss.

Too bad! If I were she, I would have made a $300 contribution to the local family planning clinic—in her boss's name!

ANOTHER SECRETARY

Elvis's jet barely fits

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Even with its wings clipped, Elvis Presley's personal jet, the Lisa Marie, barely fit on the four-lane highway named in the late singer's honor.

The Convair 800 was towed Wednesday to a site near Graceland Mansion, Presley's home, where it will be opened to tourists for $3.50 a visit.

"It's beyond description how happy we are," said Graceland manager Jack Soden in keeping with the rest of the day's hurrah.

The 120-foot-long airliner, its wings cut short, was towed from the Memphis airport along a 5-mile, spectator-lined route.

Motion sickness drug

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I hope you can help. My daughter in her 20s always gets carsick and airplanesick. She has missed going on many trips because of this.

The last trip was frightening. She had taken a Dramamine before the trip, but for two hours she kept vomiting and couldn't keep her second Dramamine down.

I was terrified watching her. I put ice on her face and neck, but this didn't help. She was pale and exhausted, and for days her stomach, chest and throat hurt.

She has been to two doctors. All they recommended was to take two Dramamines instead of one, every three hours instead of four. Please give us your opinion.

DEAR READER — Antihistaminics such as Dramamine work well for most mild cases of motion sickness. But for more severe cases, there are other medications.

Many physicians now think scopolamine is the best drug for motion sickness. It has the disadvantage of causing drowsiness, dryness of the mouth and sometimes blurred vision — but that's a lot better than your daughter's experience.

It can be taken orally or by injection for short durations. For longer requirements an adhesive unit that contains scopolamine, called Transderm-Scop, can be placed behind the ear. It will deliver a fairly constant amount of the medicine.

I think you should ask her doctor to give it a try. Of the antihistaminics, promethazine (Phenergan) is probably the most effective in preventing motion sickness, including vomiting.

You'll want to understand the balance system and how it relates to motion sickness, which I've discussed in the Health Letter 9-10, Dizziness and Vertigo. I'm sending it to you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm confused. Many labels contain the words "cholesterol free," yet the ingredients listed include palm oil or coconut oil. I don't understand this false advertising.

DEAR READER — Cholesterol is found only in animal products. Palm and coconut oil don't contain cholesterol; neither does the oil from other vegetable sources. But this doesn't necessarily mean they're good for your health.

Both coconut and palm oil are very high in saturated fat. Saturated fat is not cholesterol, but many authorities believe that saturated fat stimulates your body to produce cholesterol and fatty-cholesterol particles of the size that tend to lodge in arteries, causing heart attacks and strokes.

Most authorities who hold that point of view prefer that the products people use don't include any appreciable amounts of palm oil or coconut oil, but rather vegetable oils made with soybean, corn or safflower.

Don't be misled by the "no cholesterol" label. It's technically correct, but it doesn't mean the oil is good for your arteries, your heart or your brain. It's sort of like many news stories — you have to read beyond the headlines. Read the rest of these ingredients before you make your choice.

Antibody killed David

HOUSTON (AP) — David, who lived virtually his entire life in a series of germ-free bubbles because he had no antibodies to fight disease, died when one type of antibody proliferated and ran amok through his body, doctors say.

Dr. William T. Shearer said at a news conference Thursday that the "totally unexpected" proliferation of the white blood cells was probably caused by an Oct. 21 operation intended to give the 12-year-old the immunity he never had.

But the Roman Catholic priest who pronounced the last sacraments 10 hours before the boy's death at 8 p.m. Wednesday said doctors at Texas Children's Hospital had no choice but to attempt the procedure designed to let David enter the dirty outside world.

"It was the only thing to do," the Rev. Laurence Connelly said of the transplant of specially treated bone marrow into the boy's system. "It was the right thing to do. And the next person will make it. I just thought he would make it.

"I don't think there are any regrets" about the operation, Connelly said. "Science should not regret it, the family should not regret it, the loved ones should never regret what has happened. This was the right and the proper thing to do."

Private Catholic funeral services for David were scheduled for Saturday.

Connelly was one of several visitors at the home of David's family Thursday afternoon.

The boy's family has never allowed hospital officials to release their child's last name. David's privacy was guarded as jealously in death as it had been in life.

Neighbors called in law officers, who set up barricades around the suburban home of David's family to keep back the curious.

David left his bubble at Texas Children's Hospital Feb. 7, but not as doctors had planned at the time of his operation. Shearer said the boy, sick for the first time in his life, had become severely dehydrated by vomiting and diarrhea which had plagued him off and on for weeks.

David deteriorated rapidly over the next 15 days, suffering first from bleeding ulcers and later from fluid accumulations in his heart and lungs, Shearer said. The rampant antibodies, a type of white blood cell called a B-cell, caused ulcerations in the boy's intestines, lungs and spleen, Shearer said.

"He knew his health was failing and told us so" during his last day of life, said Shearer, who paused several times to fight back tears during a news conference. "He said something to the effect that, 'Here we have all these tubes and all these tests and nothing is working and I'm getting tired. Why don't we just pull out all these tubes and let me go home?'"

David was placed on a respirator and sedated about 9 a.m. Wednesday, Shearer said. His heart stopped at 8 p.m., the doctor said.

Insurance law called invalid

AUSTIN (AP) — A portion of Texas' work insurance law, called "a badge of shame" by critics, has been declared unconstitutional by State District Judge Harley Clark.

After 2½ days of testimony and arguments, Clark held Thursday that the workers compensation law which excludes farm and ranch hands from on-the-job injury benefits, discriminates against a definite class of workers, mostly Hispanic.

"I have been deeply touched by evidence in this case, and I do believe that section of the law is unconstitutional," Clark said.

He said his ruling will apply to all farm and ranch workers in the state — of which at least 60 percent are Mexican-American — 10 days after he signs the final order next week.

In the same action, Clark issued a permanent injunction against the Industrial Accident Board, which administers the workers insurance law, that prohibits it from turning down any injury claim just because it came from a farm or ranch worker. He issued two similar orders in January.

Clark refused to make his order retroactive for workers whose employers did not have some form of work insurance before the Jan. 9 order.

In final arguments Thursday, Austin attorney Jim Harrington, who filed the suit in the name of 10 injured farmworkers, asked Clark "to remove this badge of shame in Texas."

Harrington said the exclusion deprives migrant and seasonal workers of prompt medical attention if injured, deprives them of any rehabilitation and retraining facilities, and keeps them from having a safe workplace.

"This is just one more vestige of the old plantation life that must be removed," he said.

Perot proposes education fine

DALLAS (AP) — A Texas industrialist who heads a state education committee says that parents should be held financially responsible for their childrens' progress in school.

H. Ross Perot, chairman of the governor's Select Committee on Public Education, told members of the Texas Association of Middle Schools on Thursday that the state should establish a program requiring strong parental involvement in their childrens' education.

Perot said, under such a program, parents and students would be required to carry out specific objectives.

He said if those objectives were not met, a fine amounting to the cost of educating a child and, possibly, the loss of the right to attend school could be ordered.

But an Austin-based staff member for one of Perot's subcommittees said disagreement has arisen among committee members on the chairman's position and alternatives are being considered.

None of the proposals under consideration by the subcommittee have been approved, said Sally Haenelt, chief of staff of the legislative action subcommittee for Perot's panel.

The subcommittee was expected to begin voting on its recommendations as early as March 1. The Select Committee was expected to get the proposals by March 5.

Ms. Haenelt said one alternative being considered is a charge, rather than a fine, that would be levied against all parents of school-aged children.

The charges would cover the costs of training workshops the parents would attend to reinforce study skills and inform them of curriculum objectives of the students' teachers, she said.

Perot told the group that he believes an education should not be a right. He said that if parents and students fail to meet their obligations, "that service is terminated."

Papers' mystery lingers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Neither the Justice Department nor congressional investigators can solve the mystery of how President Jimmy Carter's debate briefing papers wound up in Ronald Reagan's campaign in 1980, but the department says no crime was involved in the transfer.

The Justice Department closed its eight-month investigation Thursday, admitting in a three-page report that it was not able to determine who transferred the briefing material and some White House documents to the Reagan camp before the crucial Oct. 28, 1980, Reagan-Carter debate.

The department concluded there was "no credible evidence that the transfer violated any criminal law" and found no evidence of "any plan or conspiracy by Reagan election officials to obtain the Carter briefing materials or any other confidential, internal Carter documents."

All documents gathered by the FBI were turned over to a House subcommittee headed by Rep. Donald J. Albosta, D-Mich., whose panel is writing a report on its own investigation of the episode. All the FBI interview and laboratory reports were also made available to the subcommittee, the department said.

But House sources, who declined to be named, have said the Albosta probe also came up dry in efforts to identify the person or persons who may have been responsible for the transfer.

Asked why the department did not continue until it had found out how the papers were transferred, Justice Department spokesman Tom DeCair replied, "We're not an ethics agency." He said the department's responsibility ended when it determined there was no crime.

The department said that, without evidence of theft, neither federal laws against the theft of government property nor local theft laws had been violated.

Cease-fire is now in force

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A cease-fire mediated by Saudi Arabia took effect on Lebanon's civil war fronts today, shortly after a flurry of battles between rival militias. Two hours later, police and witnesses reported sporadic bursts of rocket-propelled grenades and machine gun fire in Beirut.

Commands of various Shiite Moslem, Druse and Christian militias said their men were ordered to observe the cease-fire. Their statements were issued as police reported the first violation of the cease-fire and said contacts were being established to avert further infractions.

The cease-fire was announced Thursday by Prince Bandar bin Sultan of Saudi Arabia after eight hours of meetings in Damascus, the Syrian capital. He said it does not address the political disputes between President Amin Gemayel and the Syrian-backed insurgents.

The fighting today pitted Shiite Moslem militiamem in the largely Moslem western half of Beirut against Christian irregulars in the eastern part of the capital, police said.

Druse rebels and Christian militiamen of rightist Phalange Party also dueled with artillery and multiple rocket launchers overnight in the Chouf Mountains in the Kharroub region, northeast of Israel's defense line in southern Lebanon, police said.

The prince said the agreement dealt solely with the fighting in Lebanon and did not cover political issues, such as the rebel demands that Gemayel scrap the May 17 Lebanon-Israel accord that called for simultaneous withdrawals of Syrian and Israeli troops.

The U.S. Marines, meanwhile, continued their phased withdrawal to ships offshore, but a spokesman said there would be no decrease in "combat power" at the Beirut airport base until the final pullout.

Gemayel held lengthy discussions Thursday with advisers and right-wing Christian backers at the presidential palace east of Beirut to work out a new proposal for ending the civil war.

Lebanese government sources, who spoke on condition they not be named, said the plan would have Gemayel renounce the U.S.-brokered May 17 accord and reconvene a conference in Switzerland to draw up a new system for sharing power among Moslems and Christians in Lebanon.

The current system reserves the presidency and most political power to Maronite Christians, such as Gemayel, rather than the Moslem majority.

The question of Syrian troops occupying eastern and northern Lebanon would be referred to the Arab League, which approved Syria's entry in 1976. Syria has refused to move its troops out until Israel unconditionally removes the soldiers occupying southern Lebanon.

Moslem units of the Lebanese army, which refused to fight during the past three weeks of civil war, began policing west Beirut on Thursday at the request of Druse and Shiite Moslem militiamen who have controlled half the city for 17 days.

A few soldiers carried plastic flowers in their rifle barrels and civilians greeted them with cheers. Some threw rice from balconies.

At the U.S. Marine base, a few men were helicoptered back to 6th Fleet ships Thursday. But Brig. Gen. James Joy said combat strength would be maintained at the base "until we get ready to leave for good." He said he hoped that would be before the end of the month.

More cases should be settled out-of-court

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The chief justice of the Texas Supreme Court says "thousands of cases" could be siphoned off the overflowing court systems if lawyers would learn to settle more disputes outside the courtroom.

Justice Jack Pope called on attorneys to help unclog the overloaded courts.

"What we should be searching for is not a substitute system, but different ways that we can use our skills," Pope said. "Our purpose is to find and fashion and develop some professional skills in addition to our courtroom skills."

Pope addressed an attorneys' conference on negotiation, mediation and arbitration Thursday, sponsored by the law schools at St. Mary's and Texas Tech universities.

Using the three skills could "siphon off thousands of cases that otherwise would find their way into the clogged court system," he said.

Pope pointed to the advent of "neighborhood justice centers," which mediate some disputes, as a way to both lessen the courts' load and involve members of the community.

"The legal profession deals with problem solving, but we've got to realize that there are multitudes of problems that can be resolved that do not have to have total losers and total winners," he said. "And we don't always need to have a judge made the final decision."

Many cases that take up valuable court time easily could be settled elsewhere, he said.

"Almost a million people turned to the courthouses in Texas last year and the year before to settle their disputes," the justice said. "Studies show that about 65 percent of those cases are ordinary people looking for a third party to make a decision so they can get on with their business."

But too often, Pope said, cases languish in legal red tape and the citizens involved don't always fully understand the complicated proceedings.

"We really squeeze some people out of the system and leave them mostly self-help," he said. "I fear that sometimes in our plea bargaining, the victims don't even know the case has been disposed of."

Pope, who started as a state district judge in Corpus Christi, said the state district courts decide 98 percent of the lawsuits filed in the nation, leaving only 2 percent for the federal courts.

"I think we tend to judge the system by the horror cases, the mega-cases, but most are rather small cases," the justice said.

"Take two neighbors and a barking dog. That has no place in the district attorney's office, but that's often the only place they can go," he said. "A case like that shouldn't end up in the district courts."

that in doing research for the proposed home for abused children, they have uncovered data which states that 80 percent of the inmates in prison today were abused children.

Based on information gathered at visits to other homes in Texas, Wilkins said they estimate that it will cost $35 per day to care for each child housed at the facility.

She said they also need volunteers to serve on committees which will help cut administrative costs.

The meeting will be conducted at the local residence of Peggy Kennedy. For more information, persons may contact Kennedy at 573-2973; Wilkins at 573-5928; or Melinda Drum at 573-1439.

Smoke report without fire

Snyder fire officials found only smoke after being called to a house fire around 4:30 p.m. Thursday.

Sue Howell of 2701 Ave. U called firemen to a possible fire in a garage apartment behind her residence. No cause has been determined for the smoke in the apartment.

The Warren Commission issued a report in 1964 that concluded that Lee Harvey Oswald had acted alone in assassinating President John F. Kennedy.

Fathers say they would return to prison again

LOUISVILLE, Neb. (AP) — Six fathers of pupils at the illegal Faith Christian School, free today after 93 days in jail for refusing to answer a judge's questions, said they would go through the ordeal again "for freedom of religion."

Sarpy County District Judge Ronald Reagan ordered the men released Thursday, three months to the day after they were arrested. At the heart of the matter is a refusal by the church school to use state-certified teachers.

The six fathers were released after they promised not to send their children to the school until it complies with state laws. The children have not been attending school, and a lawyer for the six men said they would not attend school in the state.

One of the men, David Carlson, said they had emerged from the Cass County Jail with a "stronger resolution. If you had told us we would be in there for 93 days, we might have wavered. But now, we'd be willing to do it again."

"If we have to go back to jail for freedom of religion, we'll do it again," said Ralph Liles, another of the men held in contempt of court since Nov. 23.

"During this time there have been at least seven major accomplishments from the perspective of Faith Baptist Church," the Rev. Edward Roe, acting pastor at Faith Baptist Church and acting director of the school, said in praising the six men.

Roe said the Nebraska Legislature "is giving serious concern" for the recommendation of a panel appointed by Gov. Bob Kerrey that Christian schools not be required to hire certified teachers.

The judge also voided warrants for the arrest of the men's wives. The women fled Nebraska in November to avoid arrest. A seventh father was freed last month after he decided to testify. A warrant for his wife's arrest was also voided Thursday.

Reagan let stand, however, arrest warrants for the Rev. Everett Sileven, pastor of the Faith Baptist Church and director of the school, and Sileven's daughter, Tresa Schmidt, who has taught at the school. Both Sileven and his daughter have remained out of the state to avoid arrest.

A compromise Wednesday by Cass County Attorney Ron Moravec and Michael Farris, attorney for the six men, led to the release order.

Moravec "made me this offer, that the men wouldn't have to testify in exchange for their promise not to send their children to Faith Christian School," Farris said. "The men didn't want to testify against themselves, their family, the other people in the church or the pastor."

The children of the six fathers have not attended the school since the men were jailed, Farris said.

"The children won't return to public or private schools in the state of Nebraska," Farris said, without elaborating.

Pauley will return to post

NEW YORK (AP) — Jane Pauley confesses to being a bit nervous about returning to her co-anchor job on NBC's "Today" show after a three-month hiatus, but there's one topic on which she has plenty to say.

"I've just spent three months dedicated to the heart things," said the Miss Pauley, who returns to the show Monday. "Of course I'm going to wax poetic about motherhood."

Her husband, "Doonesbury" creator Garry Trudeau, works at home and takes care of twins Rachel and Ross when Miss Pauley can't be there.

She felt no jealousy, just some anxiety attacks, watching the women who substituted for her on "Today," she said.

"Since January, I'd been attuned to babies crying, and my brain had gone to mashed potatoes. I haven't been required to finish a sentence. People say it's like riding a bicycle, but I have visions of going downhill at 60 mph. People fall off bicycles, you know."

Clinch regional berth...

Dusters scorch NMJC in second half

HOBBS, N.M. -- After a sluggish first half, Western Texas College Coach Joe Cushing told his team they were going to have to do extra work for every point under 90 they scored. Maybe he owes them now, because the Dusters rocketed for 55 second-half points in a runaway 92-69 win over the Lady Thunderbirds of New Mexico Junior College here Thursday.

The win left the Dusters in second place in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference race with a 9-3 record and assures them of a berth in the upcoming regional tournament. NMJC fell to 2-11 in conference play and 9-18 overall.

"We had too many turnovers and too many mental mistakes in the first half," said Cushing, whose Dusters were down 12-2 early in the game. "They were really fired up. It was their homecoming and Parent's Night too and they were really ready to play."

Western led by as many as 12 points in the first half, but a series of turnovers left the lead at 37-30 by intermission. The Dusters came out in the second half and took control quickly, running up a 20-point advantage.

Mary Nell Clayton sacked up 23 points and had seven assists for the Dusters, who are fast closing in on their best-ever season record. The win put the team at 24-7, two wins under the record of 26.

Western also got a thunderous effort from 6-2 freshman Clara Campbell who had 17 points, 20 rebounds and six blocked shots. Lyndy French came off the bench for 15 points while guard Rhonda Hoelting bagged 13 and had nine assists. Karen Kuykendall and Renvy Evans scored 8 apiece.

Western was 34 of 68 from the field and 24 of 36 from the line. The Dusters out rebounded the hosts 48 to 37.

April Odom led the Thunderbirds with 19 points. Sharon Smith scored 15.

Over Thunderbirds...

Westerner team effort provides 65-64 win

HOBBS, N.M. -- Western Texas College's Westerners overcame a torrid shooting pace set by New Mexico Junior College to squeeze out an important conference win here Thursday, 65-64.

The victory leaves Western at 9-6 in conference play and in a three-way tie for third place in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference. The Westerners host Amarillo College, a 69-58 victor over Frank Phillips, Monday at 8 p.m. in Scurry County Coliseum.

New Mexico shot 67 per cent from the field and 86 from the line but missed a couple of key shots down the stretch that may have made the difference in the ballgame.

The Thunderbirds led by five points with just under three minutes to play. Western rallied on a couple of steals, cutting the lead to 64-63 with a minute left in the game. New Mexico then turned the ball over again to the press and Anthony Smith canned a bucket at the 30-second mark to put WTC ahead to stay.

The Thunderbirds had two more chances. They missed a first field goal attempt and Western was able to rebound and run the clock down to six seconds. Westerner sophomore Eugene Lewis was sent to the line at that point. He missed both shots and New Mexico rebounded for a last go-ahead attempt, but it too was no good.

"I thought we had a real good team effort," said WTC's Coach Barry Davis. "We had 23 assists and I was pleased to see that. We had some people that came in and really did a super job for us. They were Jeff Gibson, Billy Chambers, Victor Spencer and Vince Turner. It really helps your total team effort when you get guys to come in off the bench and produce."

Smith led the Westerners with 18 points. Gibson and Spencer added 10 apiece while Lewis had 9, Larry Banks 8, and Turner and Richie Fells 4 apiece. Turner led on the boards with six rebounds. Smith had six assists and Spencer five.

Western, now 18-9 on the season, was 29 of 56 from the field (52 per cent) and 7 of 10 from the line.

New Mexico, 15-14 and 6-10 in WJCAC play, got 18 points each from Mike Richmond and Anthony Newell. Frank Bagley added 14.

Haskell Indians hold off Hale Center Owls

Haskell fans held their breath here Thursday as their Indians outlasted a comeback-minded Hale Center team, 73-71 in Class 2A bi-district playoff action.

Haskell held a 14-point lead going into the fourth quarter, but unnecessary fouls, turnovers and a poor night at the charity stripe let the Owls back into the contest. Fortunately for the Indians, Hale Center also suffered at the freethrow line, and that was probably the difference in the game.

Haskell, perhaps conjuring up thoughts of a year ago when Hale Center beat them in bi-district, had problems with Hale Center's fourth-quarter press. The Owls got at least seven turnovers off of the defense, and turned most of them into points.

The clock read 2:12 to play when Hale Center's Ernest Smith came up with a three-point play to cut the advantage to 67-64. Haskell retaliated when 6-5 senior Patrick McCoy put up a rebound, however. But the Indians went to the line four times in the following minute and came away with just two points. In between, Kurt Ashmore scored twice for Hale Center, cutting the margin to 70-69 with under a minute to play.

McCoy and Ashmore went to the line and both hit, keeping the one-point advantage intact with just 26 seconds left. It then appear as if Hale Center might take the lead when Ashmore stole the ball and got it to Smith. The 6-1 junior missed from four feet however, and was whistled for fouling McCoy on the rebound.

McCoy went to the line with 10 seconds to go but missed. Teammate Shane Hadaway was there for the crucial rebound and he was fouled with three seconds left. He made one of the two shots to give the game its final, 73-71 score.

Hale Center got the ball back into play, but Ennis Smith's 45-foot running shot at the buzzer didn't come close.

Haskell had jumped out to a 20-15 lead in the game and entended it to 44-19 at halftime.

McCoy led Haskell with 25 points while Hadaway, a 6-4 junior, had 24. Doug Lanier added 8.

Ashmore and Ernest Smith each tallied 24 points for the Owls. Terry Lowery had 10 and J.R. Compton notched 8.

Haskell was 9 of 19 from the freethrow line while Hale Center was 15 of 25 - 11 of 19 in the fourth quarter.

Klondike outlasts Highland Hornets

Brent Airhart scored eight points in the final three minutes to lead Klondike to a 62-53 victory over Highland's Hornets in a Class 1-A bi-district playoff game here Thursday night.

Klondike took an early 19-16 lead but Highland pulled within a point by halftime, 30-29. The Hornets then went ahead just before the end of the third quarter, 41-40.

Lane Turner put Klondike back in front with three minutes to go in the game and Airhart added two freethrows just nine seconds later to make it a four-point advantage, 52-48.

Highland then turned the ball over and Klondike spread out its offense to run the clock. With 1:33 left, Airhart was sent to the line again and he hit both shots as Klondike went up by 54-46.

That followed by some fine individual play from Airhart and Highland's Duane Hyde, who traded off the next eight points - four each - as the score grew to 58-52.

Klondike went to the line to score four of five freethrows in the final minute, sealing the victory.

Airhart ended the night with 10 points, but it was Klondike's balanced scoring that made for the win. Turner had 17 and Tim Copeland 15 while Ricky Webb matched Airhart's 10. Mitch Mitchell added 8.

Courtney Gothard scored 20 for the Hornets. Light had 17 and Royce Petty added 12.

Arkansas defeats Tech, takes on UH Sunday

by The Associated Press

The Arkansas Razorbacks were impressive in dispensing with the last hurdle in their way before Sunday's Southwest Conference basketball showdown with powerful Houston before a national television audience.

Coach Eddie Sutton's 11th-ranked squad made 20 of 33 field goal attempts Thursday night to brush aside Texas Tech, 55-49, in Lubbock.

The victory ran Arkansas' record to 12-1 in SWC play and 22-4 for the year. Only a stunning upset by Rice keeps the Razorbacks from sharing a perfect 13-0 mark in conference play.

Houston, the nation's No. 3 team, has a streak of 37 straight victories in SWC action. Arkansas fell out of the national rankings after the loss at Rice, but moved up dramatically after shocking No. 1 North Carolina last week.

Texas Tech, 14-10, fell to 8-5 with Thursday night's loss to Arkansas. Four of their five league defeats came at the hands of Houston and Arkansas.

Joe Kleine used his muscle on the inside over the smaller Texas Tech players to lead a tough Arkansas defense. Kleine, who has been averaging 19 points and 9.4 rebounds a game, was held to 10 points and six rebounds.

Alvin Robertson and Ricky Norton each had 11 points and Leroy Sutton chipped in 10 for Arkansas.

Bubba Jennings and Vince Taylor had 10 for Tech, which made only 37 percent of its shots.

The Razorbacks led 28-19 at the half, but Tech rallied to cut Arkansas' edge to 36-33 on a jump shot by Dwight Phillips with 12:41 to play. But Norton led a counterattack, and the Porkers built steadily up to a nine-point lead again, 44-35, with 4:08 remaining.
