No immediate ruling in Texaco case

HOUSTON (AP) — A state district judge today took under advisement and refused to immediately rule on a jury's record $10.53 billion judgment against Texaco Inc. for illegally persuading Getty Oil Co. to break a merger with Pennzoil Co.

Visiting State District Judge Solomon Casseb Jr. said he would rule Tuesday on whether to accept, reverse or reduce the award, which would be the highest civil judgment in U.S. history.

Arguments concluded today with Texaco attorneys insisting that the acquisition of Getty was merely "taking advantage of a good business deal."

"There was no theft at anytime by Texaco," company attorney David Boies said. "It was open competitive business. If there was theft of any kind, it was an attempt to take a company at a price less, even by Pennzoil's own calculations, than it was worth."

A jury ruled Nov. 19 that Texaco illegally persuaded Getty Oil Co. to break a merger agreement with Pennzoil. Texaco then purchased Getty for $10.1 billion last year.

Jurors recommended Texaco pay Pennzoil $7.53 billion in actual damages and $3 billion in punitive damages.

But Texaco argued the "astronomical" judgment — 20 times greater than the price Pennzoil would have paid in the Getty merger — would shake the free enterprise system, threaten the jobs of 55,000 Texaco employees worldwide and possibily force the company into bankruptcy proceedings.

"Whatever size Texaco is or is not, an amount like that is not just large, it is not just massive. It is dangerous and irrational and not supported by the evidence or the law," Texaco attorney Richard Keeton said.

If efforts to overturn the $10.53 judgment fail, Texaco can appeal the verdict.

However, Texas law requires that if defendants appeal a damage judgment, they must post a bond in cash or liquid assets equal to an award, plus attorneys' fees and interest.

Texaco's appeal bond would thus total almost $12 billion, while the White Plains, N.Y.-based company says it has a stock market value of $8.6 billion.

In its $15 billion breach-of-contract suit, Pennzoil based its claim on the 1 billion barrels of oil and gas that it would have gained in the merger.

Pennzoil said it would have to spend more than $10 billion to find that volume of reserves.

TOP FOOTBALL FORECASTERS OF 1985 — The morning crew at Stinson Drug topped all other competitors in the Snyder Daily News coffee shop football picking contest for the 1985 season. The group became the first to receive what will become a traveling trophy presented by SDN Sports Editor Bill McClellan (right). The competition was close, however, with only one game separating second place Bell-Cypert-Seale and third place Spanish Inn. 5-year jail term assessed

Jerry William Grimes was sentenced to five years in the Texas Department of Corrections Thursday afternoon for sexual assault on a child.

The 71-year-old Grimes had been on trial in 132nd District Court since Nov. 25 for an alleged assault on a then 4-year-old girl last July.

The six-man, six-woman jury returned a verdict of guilty against the defendant Monday night at the conclusion of defense testimony.

The jurors then heard evidence and arguments in the punishment phase of the trial Tuesday and returned their verdict on the sentence that evening.

District Judge Gene Dulaney, however, elected to seal the verdict after Grimes became ill while the jury was deliberating the sentence.

He was taken from the courthouse and admitted to Cogdell Memorial Hospital Tuesday evening for a possible heart attack.

Doctors for the defendant temporarily released him from the hospital Thursday afternoon so he could appear for the reading of the sentence.

In addition to the prison term, Grimes was also assessed a fine of $5,000.

Following the reading of the sentence and the polling of the jury, Grimes was returned to the local hospital where he remained Friday morning.

Dulaney set an appeal bond for Grimes at $5,000. As of Friday morning, defense attorney Pete Greene had not given official notice of appeal and no bond had been posted.

Long range goals are trustee's focus

(Editor's note: A two-part series beginning with this issue will profile efforts by local school officials to identify and address long range goals for Snyder ISD.)

By DONNY BROWN
SDN Managing Editor

An informal "brain storming" session was held Thursday night by Snyder school board members — the first of what is expected to be several such gatherings designed to pinpoint long range goals for the district.

Superintendent Bob Hawes met with all seven board members for the 3½ hour session, conducted in a suite at the Willow Park Inn to add to the informality of the evening.

The net result Thursday was comments, questions and suggestions related to a wide range of school-related matters.

Trustees touched on such topics as:

—The pending litigation involving the school district's current method of at-large voting.

—Overall condition of district buildings and what changes might be needed to insure good maintenance of these facilities.

—What changes the 1 teacher to 22 student mandate might effect here beginning next fall.

—How to address teacher morale problems associated with new state mandates.

—How to improve communication between central administration and campus staffers.

—The district's approach toward new state mandates, in particular to what extent school policy should be written to adhere to the "letter or the in-

No-pass, no-pass has second report

For the second six weeks here, an increased percentage of failures were noted at the high school, while approximately the same percentage was noted for seventh and eighth graders.

These facts were noted as no-pass, no-play results were released Friday by officials at both Snyder High School and the junior high.

A total of 278 were reported sidelined at the high school for at least a six-weeks period. This reflects 32 percent of the total student body count of 879.

By comparison, for the first six weeks at SHS, an estimated 24 percent of students were said ineligible. In real numbers, this equaled 216 students of the 883 enrolled.

At the junior high, the total percentage was 30 percent as compared to 31 percent for the first six weeks.

At the end of the second six

The feller on Deep Creek says, "The person who can't lead and won't follow makes a dandy roadblock."

Keeping tabs on our neighbors:

Jimmy Carr, in the Vernon Daily Record, noted a Christmas countdown–25 days and grumbling.

"With the first of December coming only three days after Thanksgiving, some of the more devot holiday humbuggers have been caught napping. Well, it's catch-up time.

"In the slightly less than four weeks which remain before the big day, yuletide yellow-bellies can expect:

"–an unending assortment of well-known Christmas carols, with more versions of the old favorites than you can jingle a bell at...like the country and western interpretation of 'Little Drummer Boy.'

"–Several attacks of pocketbook-shock snydrom when confronted with the realization that sales catelogs are now offering items with costs that would rival those fabled Nieman-Marcus wishbooks of only a few years back.

–"A home life strained to the breaking point with the frenzy of shopping, hinting for gifts, wrapping presents, hosting or attending parties, cooking, cleaning and providing cash here and there to buy last-minute remembrances for folks like the plumber who comes to unstop the sewer line even on freezing cold weekends.

"Repeats of seasonal (and seasoned) TV shows which preempt some regular favorites, even to the point of making J.R. and the rest of the Ewings fall victim to a Grinch who stole Christmas.

"There's a lot of bah-ing and humbugging that can be done in the next 25 days, if you set your mind to it. However, if history repeats itself, something will creep in to spoil a perfectly rotten outlook for the season. Such as:

"–The spine-tingling sound that is unique to youngsters when they sing carols to shut-ins on a cold night...the familiar lump in the throat that comes when a parent receives a perfectly useless and often ugly item that will nonetheless be treasured because it was created at school by a child whose main though was 'mom and dad are gonna love this.'

–Or one of those unexpected quiet moments at home when family members look at each other and remember that the season isn't all getting, giving and going–that it's also a good time for simply being together."

Scrooges can often sing Jingle Bells with the best of 'em.

Community tree, Santa due tonight

Santa will return to the courthouse square Friday beginning at 6:30 p.m. to visit with Scurry County youngsters.

At the same time, county families are encouraged to bring Christmas ornaments to decorate a community Christmas tree erected on the south side of the square.

Regarding the ornaments, families are asked to put their names on these in some permanent way.

After Friday, ornaments may still be contributed. Individuals may place them on the tree themselves or bring them by the chamber office, 2302 Ave. R.

There is no limit to the number of ornaments per family. The chamber notes it cannot be responsible for returning these, however.

The tree has been donated by Snyder Rotary.

Q. — Could printing the names and amounts of money given to United Way be legally viewed as an invasion of privacy?

A. — Officials with the Texas Press Association say no, noting it is a common practice in newspapers and other fund raising efforts such as public television, where specific amounts of contributions are quoted. Also, local United Way officials note any requests that contributions remain anonymous would be granted.

Star Wars

LONDON (AP) — Britain signed an agreement today with the United States to participate in research on President Reagan's controversial "Star Wars" space-based missile defense program, becoming the first ally to do so.

The agreement was signed by U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and British Defense Secretary Michael Heseltine, who appeared at a joint news conference at the British Defense Ministry.

WASHINGTON (AP) — "This is really my world," said William R. Graham with enthusiasm, in his first interview as boss of the $8 billion-a-year U.S. space program. "I do feel comfortable here. They can understand what I'm saying and I can understand what they say."

Brave words from a man who had only 10 days on the payroll to learn the complicated running of an agency with 22,000 employees who train astronauts, fly space shuttles, launch satellites, develop new aircraft, study charged particles in space and manage hundreds of other projects.

Jobless falls

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's civilian unemployment rate fell one-tenth of a percentage point to 7 percent in November, the Labor Department reported today, matching the record low rate of Ronald Reagan's presidency.

Payroll employment rose 180,000 in November.

Texans want budget plan brought to floor

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time, a majority of the House is backing a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution, say a group of about 40 congressmen, including eight Texans.

The congressmen, who held a news conference to call on the speaker to bring the measure to the House floor for a vote, released a list Thursday of 218 cosponsors of the amendment. The group, including 43 Democrats, began signing a letter to House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr.

"All we are asking is full consideration, fair consideration and prompt consideration," said Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford.

A majority of the 435-member House can order a bill brought directly to the floor, but Stenholm said there was no plan to do that "at this time."

"Almost a year ago, the speaker assured me that when significant numbers of House members want to bring legislation to the floor, he would not block it procedurally," said Stenholm, who at the beginning of the Congress threatened to offer himself as a conservative alternative to O'Neill as speaker.

O'Neill's spokesman, Christopher Matthews, said the speaker and other House leaders had been focusing their efforts on the Senate's Gramm-Rudman measure, which would statutorily limit spending. He had no immediate comment on O'Neill's plans for the constitutional amendment, which has been bottled up in the House Judiciary Committee.

Supporters of the an amendment say they favor it because it would be binding on Congress, unlike a statutory spending limitation, which Congress could alter.

"Congress has had a very difficult time making the hard choices needed to balance the budget," said Rep. Joe Barton, R-Ennis. "It must be forced to do it and the only force which can bind the Congress is the Constitution."

But a constitutional amendment is harder to pass. It must be approved by two-thirds of both the House and Senate and then ratified by legislatures in three-fourths of the states within seven years.

Masons slate meeting in Waco

WACO, Texas (AP) — George R. Scott, grandmaster of the Grand Lodge of Texas Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, said his one-year term has been mostly occupied with increasing the Masonic districts of Texas.

During his term, Scott said the organization has focused on Masonic education and the group's charities, Masonic Home and School in Fort Worth and a home for the aged.

This weekend an estimated 4,000 Texas Master Masons will be in Waco for the 150th Grand Communication of the organization.

At the meeting, Deputy Grand Master Perry M. Parker of Beaumont is expected to assume Scott's post as top Texas Mason.

Representatives from at least 400 of the 960 Texas Masonic lodges are expected to attend the meeting of the Waco-based group.

Masonry formally began with the creation of the Grand Lodge of England in 1717. But Scott said the organization traces its roots centuries ago, with biblical ties to King Solomon.

Dear Abby

Man's Tax Dodge Has Wife Looking Over Her Shoulder

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I have been a housewife for all our married years, never having held a job outside the home. My husband owns his own business.

In the last six years, he has not filed state or federal income tax. It was not his intention to defraud the government, but actually a case of poor bookkeeping methods and his inability to afford an accountant.

If the government catches up with him, would I be equally guilty? Could I be arrested?

I dearly wish he would file his taxes, pay what he owes and get it over with, but I have no control over his business affairs, and I don't want to be a nagging wife. The business is in his name only.

If we were to be divorced, would I be held liable for his past taxes during the years we were married?

Please answer in the newspaper. Obviously, I cannot risk having your answer delivered to our home in a Dear Abby envelope.

JUST ASKING

DEAR JUST: First, when a personal reply is requested, the writer sends a stamped, self-addressed envelope so there is no indication that the letter is from "Dear Abby."

Second, although I am not qualified to answer legal questions, I can offer some free advice: Tell your husband to see a lawyer immediately about his failure to file state and federal income tax. If he turns himself in before he is discovered, the penalty will probably be considerably lighter. Then, ask his lawyer (or another one) what your liability would be as a spouse or ex-spouse.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter was recently married at a formal church wedding, which we arranged to have videotaped at a considerable cost to us.

I heard that several people were planning to bring their children (several under 3 years of age), so we made arrangements to have the church nursery opened, and we even paid two licensed nursery workers to look after the children during the wedding. The ushers were instructed to politely ask those who brought children to take them to the nursery.

I was astonished at the number of guests who pushed past the ushers, ignored their request and took their children to sit with them during the wedding. Some children became restless during the ceremony and started to talk and whine. Instead of being taken out of the church, they were "shushed" and scolded—all clearly audible on the tapes.

These same children were permitted to crawl around on the floor during the reception!

Now, Dear Abby, how can a situation like this be prevented?

WEDDING RUINED
IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR WEDDING: It can't—unless one hires "bouncers" to back up the ushers whose polite requests are ignored.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Recently, after 55 years of marriage, I lost my loving wife. I lost my sweetheart, my gourmet cook, my nurse and my best friend.

In the 55 years we were married, I sent her flowers only twice. Now I put flowers on her grave twice a week.

I kiss her picture every morning and tell her how much I love her. Before she went away, my morning greeting was, "Is the coffee ready?"

Somewhere I read the following: "Carve not upon a stone the dirgeful words that mourners say at graveside, rather tell me while I live." I wish I had another chance.

A.R. IN N.Y.

DEAR A.R.: No one has "another chance," but because you took the time to put your thoughts on paper, somewhere just one thoughtless husband may see himself and show his young wife by word and deed how much he loves her. The "chance" you missed is still available to countless young men—and women, too. Thank you for a priceless reminder.

Students evacuated After break

AUSTIN (AP) — The rupture of a six-inch natural gas line forced the evacuations of about 3,000 students from a high school, authorities said.

Classes were canceled Thursday morning after a road construction crew broke the gas line, said Barry Crist, assistant princiapl at Crockett High.

The classes will resume at the normal time today at the school. There were no injuries.

Students were evacuated at 9:45 a.m. through exits on the south side of the school, said Crist. School officials by 10:15 a.m. decided to cancel classes for the rest of the day as a precaution.

Also, Austin Community College classes held at Crockett were canceled Thursday evening because of a lingering odor of gas and because the air conditioning and heating system was turned off after the break was detected, said Mike DeVault, ACC director of off-campus operations.

The line ruptured as a work crew used equipment to dig a hole in a roadway.

Last year "Politiken," a prominent morning paper in Denmark, celebrated its 100th anniversary with a bridge hand competition. Today's deal won the prize for December. Played at the Students' Club, it demonstrates how four defensive tricks are sometimes compressed into only three.

The bidding by South was aggressive, and perhaps West should have guessed that he should attack clubs first, but then we would have had no story. On the lead of a spade, declarer must suppress the natural instinct to win the first trick with dummy's queen. Instead, after winning in hand, South plays his diamond jack, a diamond to dummy's queen, and then a third diamond. East ruffs low and declarer overruffs. Now back to dummy with the spade queen to play a fourth diamond. Once again East must ruff low, overruffed by declarer. A low spade ruffed in dummy allows the last diamond to be played. If East ruffs, that ruff will be with the heart king, and South can shed a losing club. If East discards, South lets go a club, and West ruffs low. However, if that is the case, when declarer comes back on lead and plays trumps, the ace and king will drop together.

If you want a moral for the defense, try this: Although it is a good rule not to lead away from aces against suit contracts, there are exceptions. In today's deal, for example, a club lead quickly beats four hearts.

Holiday dieting

It's party time again, and there go your good diet intentions. Consider how to hold down calories.

Spritzers or non-alcoholic drinks are reduced in calories. Go for vegetables or plain shrimp snacks, avoiding such foods as pastry-wrapped tidbits at parties.

Space your intake of nibblies at a party, and skip dinner, if you've overindulged. Have a small salad, fruit, bouillon, tea or coffee later. After all, there'll be more parties! However, if you do drink alcohol, do not drink on an empty stomach.

Using mascara

If you are loading your eyelashes with mascara to get the effect you want, you need to use a darker color that can be seen when applied thinly.

Kidneys need real medicine

DEAR DR. GOTT — Will drinking cranberry juice help my kidneys?

DEAR READER — Your question raises an issue that is sometimes considered to be a sacred cow in the medical world. The answer is "no," and here's why:

Before the advent of antibiotics, urinary infections were troublesome ailments that could lead to serious kidney diseases. In the course of trying first one thing, then another, early doctors eventually discovered that cranberry juice seemed to make a difference in the duration of urinary infections. Somewhere, someone recorded that cranberry juice was useful in this way, and the concept snowballed to the point where the juice achieved a reputation for being just plain good for the kidneys. Years passed before scientists identified a compound, called hippuric acid, that is present in small quantities in cranberries. Hippuric acid acts as a mild antiseptic in the urinary tract, but it is nowhere near as powerful and effective as antibiotics.

Cranberry juice does not benefit the kidneys or any other bodily organ, but it tastes good, contains vitamin C and is manufactured from a product grown in a lovely part of the world: Cape Cod and Nantucket. Cranberry juice is a healthful drink, but it doesn't contain any magical properties. Bottoms up!

DEAR DR. GOTT — Will it hurt to take Restoril at night so I can sleep? I am 83 and my nerves are real bad. It helps me get a good night's sleep, but I am weak; is that the cause?

DEAR READER — Restoril is a safe drug, and for a person your age, I doubt that any harm will befall you if you use it for the purpose you describe. Weakness normally accompanies the aging process as we become less active and muscle tissue loses its bulk. To be on the safe side, ask your doctor if the amount of your weakness is in keeping with your general health.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My husband, age 56, is concerned about the fact that during the past year, his penis had acquired a definite curve to the right. Can you give him some idea why this has occurred?

DEAR READER — Based on your observations, I conclude that your husband is developing Peyronie's disease. This is due to malfunction of one of the erection chambers on either side of the penis; so, during sexual arousal, he lists to port or starboard. In a mild form, the condition requires no treatment. However, I recommend that your husband see a urologist for an expert opinion.

Group considers smelter appeal

DALLAS (AP) — The attorney for a neighborhood group calling for the immediate closing of an Oak Cliff lead smelter says he is considering whether to appeal a court ruling allowing the plant to operate another five years.

District Judge Craig Enoch on Wednesday upehld an October 1984 order by the city's Board of Zoning Adjustment, which told Dixie Metals Co. to close the lead smelter by Dec. 31, 1990.

Area homeowners were disappointed with the ruling, said Joe Crews, attorney for the Neighborhood Committee on Lead Pollution.

"For the residents in that community who have been struggling with this problem for four or five years, they certainly don't consider it a victory," said Crews.

"They're going to have to put up with the plant for another five years and continue to live with that spectre of their children being contaminated and poisoned on a daily basis."

But Crews said no decision had been reached on whether to appeal.

The judge's order, although confirmed orally, has not been signed officially and Dixie was still considering options, said Dixie attorney Kenneth S. Beat.

"There hasn't been a decision made yet on whether that (Enoch's) decision will be appealed or not," said Beat.

Assistant City Attorney Don Postel said the zoning adjustment board ruled last year that Dixie did not comply with zoning codes and ordered it to close the plant by the end of 1990.

Dixie Metals and the neighborhood group have 30 days to appeal the ruling to the Court of Appeals in Dallas.

Mrs. Aquino may be only opponent

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Opposition leaders say the two leading candidates to challenge President Ferdinand E. Marcos in a special election have agreed on a united ticket, and indications were that Corazon Aquino would run for president.

Salvador Laurel, a former senator who also announced his candidacy for president, apparently would be the opposition's vice presidential candidate in the Feb. 7 election.

Laurel said Thursday that he and Mrs. Aquino would announce Sunday "the official candidate of the united opposition." Opposition unity behind a single candidate is considered crucial to any hopes of defeating Marcos, who has been in office for 20 years.

Mrs. Aquino, who accuses Marcos of responsibility for the assassination of her husband, opposition leader Benigno Aquino in August 1983, announced her candidacy Tuesday.

On Monday, a court placed blame for the assassination on Roland Galman, who the army said was a communist agent send to kill Aquino. The court aquitted 25 soldiers and a civilian charged with conspiring to kill Aquino.

A source close to Mrs. Aquino said "unity has been achieved" among the opposition, and Mrs. Aquino meanwhile told The Associated Press she definitely would not accept the vice presidential slot.

Other opposition sources said Thursday and today they believe there has been an agreement between the Aquino and Laurel camps, but they refused to comment further.

Mrs. Aquino has been endorsed by former presidential candidates Aquilino Pimentel, Jovito Salonga and Ramon Mitra, and leftist leader and former senator Lorenzo Tanada.

Marcos has said his politically powerful wife, Imelda, will not succeed him, but some observers have suggested she could be his vice presidential running mate.

Police chief takes action after slow police response

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — The 2½-hours it took for police to respond to an emergency call from a woman bound and handcuffed to her bed "could have led to tragic circumstances," Police Chief William Banner said.

Rosandra Rene Williams, a Nueces County correctional officer, said she managed to dial the 911 emergency number after an intruder broke into her home, but said she waited 2½ hours for the police to arrive.

The delayed response was "a human failing that could have led to tragic circumstances," Banner said.

Banner announced Thursday that a police lieutenant would be suspended for two days without pay and two dispatchers would receive written reprimands about carelessnes.

He declined to identify the officers.

Ms. Williams told police a man entered her apartment about 5 a.m. Saturday, handcuffed her to her bed, taped her mouth and taped her feet together.

Ms. Williams, 20, told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times she called the 911 emergency number about 6 a.m. but a police patrol unit did not respond until 8:46 a.m.

Libel award sends message to media, company states

CHICAGO (AP) — A $5.05 million libel award to the manufacturers of Viceroy cigarettes against CBS Inc. and a news commentator will tell the media they "cannot trample over people's good names," a tobacco company official says.

But Walter Jacobson, the commentator whose broadcast prompted the lawsuit said Thursday's award to Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp. shows the cigarette industry "will stop at nothing to stop us from telling the facts."

"It's a sweet victory," said Ernest Peeples, senior vice president and general counsel for Brown & Williamson after the award. "I think it benefits the press as well. Because they know that if somebody strays out of bounds ... they are responsible.

"The press cannot trample over people's good names without having to answer now and then."

The U.S. District Court jury deliberated about an hour and 45 minutes before levying the damages against Walter Jacobson, a commentator on WBBM-TV, and CBS Inc., which owns the station.

On Nov. 26 ruling, the jury found that Jacobson libeled Brown & Williamson in a 1981 commentary in which he said the cigarette maker was trying to lure children with advertising equating smoking with alcohol, sex and drugs.

"I'm very disappointed in the jury verdict," said Thomas Morsch, who represented CBS and Jacobson. "We're definitely going to appeal. Once you go to jury on a case like this ... it's a roll of the dice."

Jacobson, an award-winning broadcaster who is one of the highest paid local anchors in the nation, stood by his commentary which accused Brown & Williamson of trying to "hook children to poison" by relating cigarettes to "pot, wine, beer, sex and wearing a bra."

He also called the company "liars" in the Nov. 12, 1981, commentary.

Jacobson's comments were made on his "Perspective," generally a mixture of reporting and biting observations aimed at politicians and other high profile targets.

"I think it's a marvelous day for journalism," said Brown & Williamson attorney Martin London. "We think we did this on the behalf of everybody. We think everybody in the community is entitled to responsible journalism."

Jacobson said he based his commentary on a May 1981 Federal Trade Commission staff report that detailed cigarette company advertising campaigns over five years beginning in 1975.

The FTC report concluded, in part, that a proposed Viceroy advertising strategy was designed to induce young people to smoke the cigarettes by portraying smoking as a desirable adult activity.

Pioneer broadcaster hurt in gun accident

DALLAS (AP) — Gordon B. McLendon, a broadcasting pioneer and millionaire who dabbles in movies and other enterprises, accidentally shot himself while cleaning a pistol and remained hospitalized early today, his son said.

McLendon, 64, was admitted to Methodist Hospital and was in critical but stable condition Thursday night, said night administrator Keith Guier.

McLendon shot himself while trying to clean a .38 caliber pistol at his ranch, Cielo, on Lake Lewisville in nearby Denton County, said his son, Bart McLendon.

"He broke his jaw and did some other minor damage," the younger McLendon said.

The accident occurred, he said, about 2:30 p.m. Thursday and "it was probably over an hour and a half before he was discovered ... He lost a lot of blood."

Between 1947 and 1952, McLendon created and owned, with his father, B.R. McLendon, the nationwide 458-station Liberty Broadcasting System.

Calling himself "The Old Scotchman," McLendon did play-by-play sportscasting of baseball and football games.

His nationwide baseball "Game of the Day" and football "Game of the Week" were carried by the network, and he teamed with such greats as Dizzy Dean.

His family sold the last of numerous broadcasting properties in 1978 and invested the proceeds.

The family owned a string of drive-in motion picture theaters, and McLendon, a friend of the late actor John Wayne, produced several movies. He was executive producer of the 1981 release, "Victory," directed by John Huston and starring Sylvester Stallone, Michael Caine and soccer star Pele.

McLendon's 200-acre ranch 35 miles north of Dallas is his home and production facility for his early movies, "The Killer Shrews," "The Giant Gila Monster" and "My Dog Buddy."

McLendon is the author of numerous books, including "How to Succeed in Broadcasting."

His latest book, in 1981, "Get Really Rich in the Coming Super Metals Boom" established for him a reputation as an expert in the field of financing in strategic metals.

Occidental is to sell off stock

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Occidental Petroleum Corp. officials say they intend to sell their 20 percent stake in Dallas-based Southland Corp., the world's largest convenience-store operator, in a deal valued at about $394 million.

Occidental said Thursday it was selling the Southland stock as part of Occidental's efforts to concentrate on its core businesses of oil and gas exploration, chemicals, agribusiness and coal.

Ninety-one percent of 11th graders passed English test

AUSTIN (AP) — Ninety-one percent of state's 11th-graders passed the English portion of the new high school graduation test, the Texas Education Agency reported today.

Eighty-eight percent of the 191,000 students who took the exam in October passed the mathematics portion. The results surpassed the expectations of state educattion officials.

Beginning with the class of 1987, students must pass both parts of the exam to get a high school diploma. The requirement is part of the 1984 education reform package approved by state lawmakers.

State education officials had predicted a 25 percent failure rate. Although figures were not available on how many students passed both portions, the 91 percent and 88 percent pass rate indicated a strong showing overall.

"But we can't look at this test and say we're doing a great job in education," said Jon Brumley of Fort Worth, chairman of the State Board of Education.

The TEA staff presented the results to the board today.

"We are extremely pleased with these initial results, especially in light of our prediction that 25 percent would fail," said W.N. Kirby, state education commissioner.

High school juniors who failed either portion will have three more chances before graduation. A 70 percent score is required for passing. Each portion contains 72 questions.

District-by-district results were not available from the education agency. Those scores are being mailed to districts by the California firm that developed the exam.

TEA figures showed that white students performed best on the exam: 94 percent passed the math test, and 96 percent passed the English test.

Eighty-two percent of the Hispanic students passed the math test, and 84 percent of the Hispanics passed the English test.

Seventy-two percent of the blacks passed the math test, and 81 percent of the blacks passed the English test.

Overall, 22,400 students need "remediation" in math skills, and 16,900 need extra work in English skills, according to the education agency report.

"We know where we have weaknesses and where we need to improve," said Brumley.

Dallas school board member Kathlyn Gilliam said that although she is pleased with the 80 percent passing grade in Dallas, she is concerned about those that failed.

"The critical thing will be what kind of program we'll put in place to assist those kids," she said. "I don't think tutoring is the answer. I think it's going to have to be something tailor-made for those kids."

An informal survey of Texas school districts Thursday showed 80 percent to 100 percent of juniors passing the test.

"I think it shows that students can do the work if they are motivated," said Linus Wright, superintendent of the Dallas school district. "They realized this was a serious test and they responded."

Dallas saw about 80 percent of the students taking the test pass the math portion, and about 83 percent pass the language arts portion.

In the affluent Highland Park district, 100 percent of the students who took the test passed both parts.

Amarillo reported 92 percent on the language arts, and 90 percent on math. In El Paso, 89 percent of the juniors passed the math portion and 90 percent the language arts portion.

In Port Arthur, 79 percent of the juniors taking the mathematics portion of the test passed, and 80 percent mastered the language arts section.

San Antonio reported that only one of eight school districts fell below the predicted 75 percent.

"We wanted the students to realize that this test was important and we're happy," said Harlandale Superintendent Yvonne Katz.

Keith Cruse, director of the Texas Education Agency-administered tests, attributed higher-than-expected scores to school district's preparation of students — cram courses ranging from distribution of sample tests to tutoring.

But some administrators and students said the high marks came because the test was too simple.

"I don't think it was anything that any 11th grade student couldn't do," said Reggie Parmer, a Bay City high school student, after taking the test in October.

"What do they think we are — total morons?" echoed Mike Oates, also of Bay City.

Austin hospital offers transplants

AUSTIN (AP) — An Austin hospital will begin performing heart transplant surgery, with doctors saying the procedure is a realistic option for some heart patients.

"This is now a very viable form of treatment for end-stage cardiac disease," said Dr. John Oswalt, chairman of the transplant team for Seton Medical Ceneter.

"In the past year, over 400 transplantations were performed in the United States. It's an uncomplicated procedure, less so than those we perform in Austin today," Oswalt said Thursday.

Seton's program makes it one of a few hospitals in Texas and about 60 nationwide to perform the operation.

Seton officials say they expect to perform from three to six transplants a year, at a cost of $50,000 to $60,000 per operation.

"We are extremely fortunate in Austin to have a strong medical community that is committed to bringing the latest in state-of-the-art technology and medical procedures to this community," said Judith P. Smith, Seton president.

According to Seton officials, 81 percent of heart transplant patients survive for a year after surgery. The survival rate for two years is 76 percent, 71 percent for three years and more than 50 percent for five years.

Patients who are candidates for heart transplants generally aren't expected to live for more than six months with their own hearts, doctors said.

At present, the Seton officials said, other Texas hospitals offering heart transplants include St. Luke's Hospital in Houston, Methodist Hospital in Houston, St. Paul Hospital in Dallas and the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston. Nationwide, about 60 perform the operation, they said.

However, Oswalt said, many patients aren't being served by the other programs.

"There are people that are dying because we haven't started this procedure (in Central Texas). People that want to stay with their families during their illness, have their families' support, stay in their hometown setting ... have actually turned down the offering of heart transplantation because it required moving to another city," he said.

More importantly, Oswalt said, "This is going to become a more commonplace procedure.

Hospital officials also said they have no current plans to try to use artificial hearts in their surgery.

Ask The Preacher

"...about the Christian conscience."

By Randall Gray

A long-time shoe salesman stacked a large pile of shoeboxes in front of his female customer. With a look of resigned acceptance, he took out his shoe-horn and said, "OK, let's start with the larger sizes and work down until we get that special stab of pain we're looking for..."

Unfortunately, a lot of Christians see their conscience that way. They're not comfortable unless their conscience is stabbing them! But God didn't design us to live in constant pain, and that's not what your conscience is for.

The word "conscience" comes from a compound Latin root-word which means, "with knowledge". The knowledge referred to here is the knowledge of right and wrong, of good and evil. Thus your conscience serves as an alarm, a reminder, or an indicator to inform you when you begin to say, think or do something that you know is wrong. And, by the way, if you think a certain thing is wrong (no matter what it is), for you, at least, that thing is wrong.

But be careful! Although it is always wrong to violate your conscience, realize that it is possible for your conscience to be mistaken. For example, the apostle Paul, before his conversion, killed Christians with a clear conscience, thinking he was serving God! Acts 23:1 So, we can't make our consciences to be our ultimate authority for right and wrong. They must be "programmed" by the truth of God's word.

Failing grades way of life in Dallas school

DALLAS (AP) — Twelve-year-old Monica Torres is failing five of her six courses at Edward H. Cary Middle School, and she says she doesn't care. Instead of attending class, she sneaks away to "hang around the 7-Eleven and a bunch of other stores."

Like Monica, three out of every four students at Cary are failing at least one course, and like her, many are apathetic about it.

Teachers and administrators say youngsters aren't motivated to learn and contend that is why the failure rate for Dallas secondary school students has hovered around 50 percent since the Legislature raised the minimum passing score from 60 to 70 last fall.

According to statistics released by the Dallas Independent School District, 55.9 percent of all high school students are failing at least one course, and 57.6 percent of all middle school students are failing.

Cary has the highest failure rate among Dallas' 52 secondary schools, with 76.7 percent of the students failing at least one class.

Cary's racial makeup is close to the district average, with a 749-student enrollment that is 40 percent black, 20 percent white and 31 percent Hispanic. About 40 percent of the students qualify for free lunches under the government subsidized program for children from poor families. Some of the students are bused in from West Dallas under the desegregation court order.

"I hardly care; I don't care," Monica said during her lunch period Wednesday. "I failed 'cause I was absent too much. I get my friends, and we leave (the campus) and go walking around. We go to the 7-Eleven and a bunch of other stores. We don't come back."

Monica said she hates school and would rather "be home watching cable (television) or going partying or having fun."

Marina Lara, 13, is failing homemaking because she doesn't do her homework.

"Oh it's easy; all we have to do is an hour of work at home, and our parents are supposed to sign this thing that says we did it," she explained. "I just kept forgetting. It doesn't matter. I don't care."

Marina says she's making good grades in all her other classes and suggests that many students continue to fail because "they don't think education is important."

"There's a lot of jobs you can get without an education," she says, when asked what she will do after leaving school. "You can be a truck driver. You can be a cashier lady. The people who want to have a job in an office or something, they want to get an education."

Luther Johnson, a science teacher at Cary, said parents no longer teach children to respect teachers or education.

"They are not taught how to behave in class. They (students) are not placing an emphasis on academics. They are interested in fun and games," he said, adding that television is one of his greatest adversaries.

"The only thing that keeps their interest is the things they see on TV," he said.

Johnson also said that teachers are seeing fewer parents at PTA meetings and are not getting the kind of support from families they used to receive.

"Parents need to be more involved," he said.

Some students such as Duane Eddy, 14, who is failing math, blame teachers for "picking" on them.

"Like this morning, they've got this new thing where if you're talking too loud or running in the hall, they tell you and they have a conference with your parents," he said.

British withdrawal is blow to United Nations Agency

PARIS (AP) — Britain's decision to withdraw from UNESCO a year after the United States deals another blow to the U.N. agency and indicates the British concluded the organization could not change under its present leadership.

The British move, announced Thursday in London, appears to push the 160-nation U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization toward further disintegration and to weaken what remains of the movement to reform it.

Pressure is also likely to mount on other Western member nations and Japan, which have been criticial of UNESCO programs and practices, to review their own participation in the Paris-based U.N. agency.

They have until Dec. 31 to give formal notice of withdrawal. Singapore has already said that for economic reasons, it will leave with Britain at the end of the year, reducing membership to 158 nations.

"We knew the U.S. withdrawal meant a big financial loss," one UNESCO delegate said, speaking on condition he not be identified. "But Britain's departure will be an emotional shock from which we might not recover."

AP analysis

Britain's minister for overseas development, Timothy Raison, told the House of Commons on Thursday that Britain was pulling out of UNESCO because the agency was "harmfully politicized," inefficient and did not control its spending.

The Reagan administration withdrew at the end of 1984, citing the same concerns.

UNESCO's director general, Amadou Mahtar M'Bow, expressed deep regret at the British decision and said it was a surprise in view of efforts to alter the organization's programs and practices.

M'Bow, the controversial Senegalese who has headed the agency for the past 11 years, is now expected to come under increasing pressure to declare he will not run for a third term in 1987 or serve if chosen.

Many Western and Third World delegates regard M'Bow, 64, a French-trained intellectual, as the man responsible for bringing UNESCO to its biggest crisis ever.

M'Bow, however, has said there has been adequate reform in the past 18 months at UNESCO, and has resisted efforts by the agency's governing board to monitor him and the secretariat.

The United States and Britain, which between them provided nearly a third of UNESCO's budget, set at $374 million for 1984-85, were among the nations that founded the agency 40 years ago to promote "collaboration among the nations

Abortions for AIDS-infected women?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Centers for Disease Control, in guidelines carefully described as "abortion-neutral," said today that pregnant women infected with the AIDS virus run a high risk of transmitting the disease to their unborn children and may also increase their own risks of developing the illness.

The CDC, in its weekly bulletin, cited one study indicating the risk to the fetus may be as high as 65 percent if the mother is infected. Another study suggests that pregnancy may make a woman more vulnerable to AIDS virus already in her body.

The federal agency recommended that women in high-risk groups who are pregnant or plan to become pregnant should be asked to undergo voluntary testing for the AIDS antibody, which indicates exposure to the virus.

Pregnant women testing positive for the AIDS virus should be counseled on the management of their pregnancy, the guidelines say. No mention is made of abortion, but Dr. Anthony S. Fauci of the National Institutes of Health said at a news conference Thursday, "I think it's naive to think it wouldn't come up."

Women who are infected but who are not pregnant should be advised to delay pregnancy until more is known about the disease and the vulnerability of the fetus and the mother, the CDC said.

"Based on what we know now, they need to be aware that they put themselves at risk and their infant at risk if they become pregnant," said Dr. Donald R. Hopkins, the CDC's deputy director.

The guidelines on pregnancy are part of a series being issued by CDC and the Public Health Service on AIDS precautions.

As of Monday, the CDC had recorded 217 cases of acquired immune deficiency syndrome in children under age 13, of whom more than 130 have died. In 165 of those cases — 76 percent — the mother was the only risk factor.

While the risk of transmission is not firmly established, Hopkins said limited data "suggest a high rate of transmission — in one study as high as 65 percent." Hopkins also said researchers also have found one case in which AIDS appears to have been transmitted to the child through breast feeding.

The guidelines note that transmission to a fetus is not inevitable.

'We didn't show up to play...'

Hawks claw WTC Westerners

Howard College's Hawks hit eight shots in eight tries from the free throw line in the final two minutes here Thursday to hold off a desperate Western Texas College team and win their conference opener, 80-72.

For Western, it wasn't the conference home debut they wanted for the vocal fans. They trailed from Nate Archibald's bucket just two minutes into the game and were never able to catch up. The Hawks started the contest by hitting eight of 10 shots from the field. Western, in the same six-minute time span, was just two of 14.

"We just didn't show up to play," said a dejected WTC Coach Phil Spradling after the game. "This team has got a long way to go. We missed a lot of layups tonight. Our outside game wasn't hitting, yes, but layups alone would have kept us right with them. And Howard had two great shooters," he said of Mike McCall and Bruce Kimble.

The loss left Western 1-1 in conference play and 10-5 for the season. The team hosts Odessa at 8 Monday evening.

"If we play this way against Odessa they'll blow us right off the court," Spradling said. "I don't know what it is. We did the same thing last week. We played Midland real tough (in the Odessa Tournament) and then played just like this, terrible, the next night against South Plains. This time we play the Military (Tuesday's win over New Mexico Military Institute) well and then play terrible at home against Howard."

Howard led by as many as 13 points in the first half and by 14 in the second. The Hawks were in front by that number, 70-56, when James Dawn went to the line for the first of 10 consecutive Westerner points with 3:28 to play in the game.

Dawn punched in the freethrows, and two buckets by Alvin Hicks and a foursome of free shots from Cliff Langford made it a 70-66 ballgame with 2:09 to play.

But that was as close as Western would come.

With 1:56 left, Nate Archibald hit both ends of a bonus free throw situation for the Hawks. The 5-11 player from Dix Hills, New York, had been to the line three times before, but had been unable to connect.

Western couldn't take advantage of its next scoring opportunity and with 1:13 remaining Walker nailed down the lid with two more charity shots, 74-66.

Both teams traded points the rest of the way, with Archibald popping two free throws and Kimble four for the visitors.

It had at first appeared as if Western might get on track at the end of the first half. Trailing 42-29, James Dawn and Wally Manns put up four points apiece to chase the lead down to just five points. A bucket by McCall at the buzzer left the halftime score at 44-37.

Western also tallied the first score of the second half - a field goal by Manns - and Howard's lead was just 44-39.

The Hawks fought back, however, getting six straight points from Kimble and Walker. Howard led in the 11-to-8 point range until the final minutes of the ballgame.

"Everytime we'd get a little momentum we'd turn the ball over or we'd miss a shot from outside instead of working the ball inside," said Spradling. "I just don't think anybody came to play."

Howard did, especially Kimble. The 6-4 sophomore bagged 29 points - most from long range. Walker added 13 and McCall had 12. For the night, the Hawks slipped in 30 of 64 shots from the field and 20 of 28 free throws.

In sharp contrast, Western was just 30 of 82 from the field and 12 of 20 from the line. As an example of the frustration, 6-9 Langford was only five of 21 from the field and Alvin Lee, who came into the game as the conference's leading scorer with a 21-point average, got 8 points on a four-of-13 night.

Sophomore guard Alvin Hicks, who had been averaging in the high teens, point-wise, scored just 4 points. He was two-of-11 from the field.

Dawn, the 6-4 sophomore from Amarillo, led WTC with 23 points. Langford got 17 and pulled down a hefty 21 rebounds. Manns, a 6-6 freshman from Los Angeles, added another 16 points and had 8 rebounds.

Dusters blast Queens 72-50

Western Texas College's Dusters got some key bench help here Thursday night and defeated the Hawk Queens of Howard College, 72-50, in a Western Junior College Athletic Conference ballgame.

Western Texas led 19-16 when Dee Ann Marr came off the bench to hit three straight buckets. A basket from Wendy Milner gave the team a 27-16 advantage.

Howard struck back on a two-pointer from Terri Powell, but Brenda Welch and Marr tallied again for the hosts, giving them a 31-18 advantage with about two minutes to play in the first half.

Western went up by 23 points early in the second half as the Dusters outscored the Queens 8-2 over the first 3:17. Though Howard rallied midway through the half with eight straight points, Western's lead never dwindled to less than 16 points the rest of the way.

"That's a good win to start off with," beamed WTC Coach Kelly Chadwick, whose Dusters have now won four ballgames in a row. Tuesday's game was their WJCAC opener.

As usual, Chadwick gave most of the credit to the defense.

"Our peremiter defense was excellent and our inside defense...well, our entire defense was just super in the first half," he said. "They were in a box and one (defense) early and Diana Quincy made a big basket or two to help us. Then Dee Ann came off the bench and really gave us a lift. I've been saying all along that she can shoot the ball and I've been talking to her about it. Maybe it paid off."

The coach went on to praise several members of the team, including Wendy Milner, point-guard Angela Jeans and others.

Western needed the help because while mainstays Welch and Pam Cox were playing good defense, they were not having a stellar night offensively.

Cox finished the night with 14 points and Welch with 11.

"They didn't have a great night shooting the ball, but they helped in other ways," said Chadwick.

Jeans, meanwhile, popped for a dozen points and Marr, a 5-10 freshman from Weatherford, had 10.

Western also got 9 points from Gigi Robinson, 8 from Milner and 6 from Qunicy.

Howard made its second-half rally on the press, and in retrospect, Chadwick was glad it happened.

"The press bothered us some and I'm glad they (Howard) used it. We know we need to work on it now," said the coach.

Western shot an unofficial 33 of 56 from the field - almost 59 percent - while the Queens plugged just 20 of 62 shots. The Dusters also won on the boards, outrebounding the visitors 37 to 33. Quincy led for WTC with 12. Welch and Cox had 8 apiece.

The Queens were paced by the 5-7 Powell, who got 14 points, mostly from outside. Sophomore Lori French got 12 points and had 7 rebounds. Trina Allen and Carolyn Willandt scored 6 points apiece.

The loss knocks Howard to 5-8 on the season and 0-1 in conference play.

Western has one more contest before taking time off for the holiday break. The Dusters will host No. 1 ranked Odessa College at 6 p.m. Monday in Scurry County Coliseum.

Suspect charged in teacher's death

BRENHAM, Texas (AP) — The Texas Department of Public Safety says a 22-year-old man has been charged in the August slayings of a Brenham schoolteacher and her 11-year-old son.

A Washington County grand jury indicted Kevin Wayne Lincecum in the deaths of Kathy Coppedge, 36, and her son, Casey, said DPS spokesman Mike Cox.

Authorities said Mrs. Coppedge and her son disappeared Aug. 11 after attending church services in Brenham, a town of about 11,000 located 110 miles northwest of Houston. Their bodies were found later that night in the trunk of their abandoned car off U.S. 290 near Burton, 11 miles west of Brenham.

Agency revises textile regs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Revisions in the 7-year-old regulation that protects more than 170,000 workers in textile and other industries from the effects of cotton dust have been issued by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

Officials said revisions, which stem largely from the Reagan administration's commitment to deregulation, reduce some of the standard's worker protection requirements.

But Labor Secretary William Brock said in a statement Thursday the changes in the regulation "guarantee the continuation of the necessary protections.

"At the same time, it will make the standard more cost-effective and performance-oriented," he said.

Prolonged exposure to cotton dust can cause brown lung disease, a chronic respiratory ailment which can lead to permanent disabling lung damage.

Under the revisions, in work areas where cotton dust levels are found to be consistently low, medical examinations for employees now will only be required every two years instead of annually.

In addition, in low-dust workplaces, monitoring of dust levels will be required just once a year. Monitoring had been required every six months, and the twice-a-year requirement will continue in areas that have higher dust levels of more than 100 micrograms of cotton dust per cubic meter of air averaged over an eight-hour workday.

Another revision eliminates regulation in the knitting industry, where studies indicate the workforce will remain healthy without a federal standard. A new health study will be performed, however, to ensure that workers remain healthy without regulation, said the Labor Department.

The new standard maintains the current maximum allowable exposure limits and requirements for engineering controls and education and training established in 1978 for the textile industry. Since the standard was introduced, studies show substantial reductions in incidences of lung disease in workplaces where the dust level limits have been met.

The new standard also requires that workers who are transferred to other departments because of an inability to wear respirators are guaranteed they will receive the same pay, despite the move. The department says workers who fear loss of wages in the past might attempt to cover up symptoms of health problems to prevent a transfer.

The revisions, while prompted in large measure by the Reagan administration, come out of an agreement worked out between the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers union and an industry trade association, the American Textile Manufacturers Institute.

The revised standard will continue to protect workers, said Eric Frumin, health and safety director of the textile workers union.

But "it's unfortunate that the administration is still primarily concerned with deregulating industries covered by protective standards instead of providing new protections for workers who desperately need it," said Frumin.

The White House Office of Management and Budget last month had contended that medical surveillance of workers would be too expensive when measured against the potential benefits to society, according to three sources in the Labor Department, who spoke only on condition that they not be identified. OMB spokesman Edwin Dale had acknowledged that the agency had problems with the proposal, but he said an agreement would be worked out.

Benefit music show set Saturday

County residents are invited Saturday to a concert featuring gospel, bluegrass and country music planned in the Scurry County Coliseum by the Snyder Country Music Association.

Proceeds from the show — expected to last from 4:30 until past 11 p.m. — will benefit the West Texas Rehabilitation Center. In addition, the concession stand proceeds will benefit SCOOP, a home for abused or neglected teenage girls.

Ticket prices will be $3 for adults and $1.50 for children age 12 and older. Youngsters 11 and under will be admitted free.

Beginning the show at 4:30 p.m. will be a fiddler's contest. At 7 p.m., the evening's regular entertainment will begin.

Another feature will be a drawing every hour beginning at 8 p.m. for a free turkey. Four drawings will be held. Turkeys have been donated by Furr's, Safeway, Piggly Wiggly and Everybody's Thriftway.

Featured Saturday will be such area groups as Nelson McGee and the Concho Grass of San Angelo and Bob Suggs and Sandy Land of Lubbock.

Also appearing will be The Richburgs of Sweetwater and Chester Derrick of Odessa plus such local groups as Robert Allen and the Country Boys and the gospel group Witness. The Senior Citizens Kitchen Band will perform also.

Other individual performers will include Eric Lull of Fort Worth, a 14-year-old fiddle player who began his musical career at age 8. In addition to five locals, area performers will include Sharon Murdock and Bert De La Vega.

Local talent performing will include Brian Fowler, the 11-year-old fiddler from Snyder. Also performing will be Leona Davis, E.L. Hill, Laurie Walker and David Hines.

One wreck noted

A single minor traffic accident was reported in Snyder Thursday.

Involved in the 8:11 a.m. mishap in the 2600 Block of 35th St. were a 1980 Ford driven by Brett Wayne Morton of Hermleigh and a 1984 Mercury driven by Pamela Hicks Thompson of 3408 Ave. V.

Glitzy car convoy arrives at home

CARROLLTON, Texas (AP) — Robert Roethlisberger gazed out over a sea of metal-flaked seafoam, flames and fantasy before nodding decisively and murmuring, "Looks good."

And then one by one, the 85 Rolls-Royces that had been trucked 2,000 miles from Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh's defunct central Oregon commune rolled off the auto carriers and into Roethlisberger's Dallas-area car dealership Thursday.

Lured by curiosity and a fascination for the Indian guru's connection to the immense fleet of luxury automobiles, Roethlisberger traveled to Rajneeshpuram last week to seal a $7 million deal for the cars.

Rajneesh, ordered out of the country after pleading guilty to two immigration violations last month, had amassed the glittering collection over the past few years as gifts from his disciples.

Assault on policeman filed here

Police jailed a 20-year-old man on felony charges of assault on a peace officer Thursday night following an incident at the LD Club at the intersection of 37th St. and East Highway.

According to reports, officers were attempting to arrest Jesse Delao of 1201 Ave. O and another subject on misdemeanor charges of being intoxicated on a premises licensed to sell alcohol.

A struggle reportedly broke out between Delao and patrolman Wayne McGlothlin.

Delao is alleged to have kicked the officer during the course of the scuffle. No weapons were involved in the incident.

Delao remained in the Scurry County Jail Friday morning in lieu of bond set at $1,500 on the assault charge.

Misdemeanor charges of being intoxicated on a premises licensed to sell alcohol and possession of prohibited drug paraphernalia were also filed against Delao.

Former mental patient sentenced

SHERMAN, Texas (AP) — A former mental patient has been sentenced to 60 years in prison for killing a woman with a shotgun blast of fishing weights in belief she had cast a voodoo spell on him.

A seven-man, five-woman jury rejected David Joe Benson's insanity plea and deliberated three hours Thursday before returning the guilty verdict against the 24-year-old drifter from Marshall.

Benson was convicted in the death of Sueann Chapin, 50, of Sherman. Mrs. Chapin, the wife of a former Sherman city councilman, was shot in the back of the head on Oct. 17, 1984, while strolling along the Red River, east of the Denison Dam. She died Jan. 25.

Benson was arrested near the scene in a park area just east of Denison Dam a short time after the shooting. He did not know Mrs. Chapin, and apparently fired at her in a random act climaxing years of mental anguish, according to testimony.

Judge Joe Joiner said Texas law will require Benson to serve at least 20 years before he is eligible for parole. Benson could have been sentenced to life in prison.

"In view of that, it's a pretty stiff sentence," Joiner said.

Benson's court-appointed attorney, R.J. Hagood of Denison, said his client, a former mental patient, wants to appeal the verdict.

The defendant, who spent six terms at the Rusk State Mental Hospital, will probably be assigned to a psychiatric ward of the Texas Department of Corrections, the judge said.

Since 1979, Benson had been treated for a variety of mental illnesses, including paranoia, schizophrenia, hallucinations and inner voices that ordered him to commit suicide.

His sister testified he had been in and out of halfway houses and the state hospital. She told jurors he had tried to kill himself on at least three occasions, once by slitting his wrists and another time by trying to swallow his tounge on "orders of inner voices."

The defense presented no evidence that Benson didn't fire the shot that killed Mrs. Chapin, but a Denison psychiatrist testified that Benson claimed she used voodoo on him.

Mrs. Chapin's family has pending a civil lawsuit against the state of Texas, claiming it was negligent for releasing Benson from the state hospital. A $2 million judgment against the state following its failure to appear at the trial two months ago was set aside when the state filed a motion for a new trial.

Prosecutor Jim Holt called the verdict "appropriate," but defense attorney Hagood said "people are less inclined to be sympathetic in a case involving mental illnesses."

More education is being urged

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas colleges and universities must concentrate on training scientists and engineers in preparation for the high technology problems of the 21st Century, the Select Committee on Higher Education was told.

Human resources must become the primary aim of higher education in the state instead of natural resources such as oil and gas, said committee member Norman Hackerman, former president of the University of Texas at Austin and of Rice University.

In stressing the need for research, Hackerman said Thursday the state has no choice but to push for advanced technology in Texas universities and colleges.

tent" of the law.

Board President Mike Reed chaired the loosely-structured session.

It used as a basis specific areas identified earlier during interviews conducted with both board members and administrators. These were handled by staffers with the Texas Association of School Boards (TASB) and were conducted Nov. 8-9.

From these sessions, five general areas were targeted for future "goal setting" sessions: school finances, personnel, curriculum, facilities and the community of Snyder as it relates to the district.

The sessions consisted of similar questions posed to both administrative personnel and school board members.

In this way, according to Hawes, TASB staffers hoped to point out where long range goals of both groups differed or agreed.

Other board members attending Thursday's session were J.M. Kayser, G.A. Parks Jr., J.D. Hinton, Allen Grimmett, Charlene Light and Mike Jordan.

(In Sunday's issue, the opinions expressed by both administrators and school board members during the TASB interviews will be profiled.)

Station caters to bilinguals

MISSION, Texas (AP) — Yolanda Vela, headphones over her ears, leaned forward to the microphone and said, "Son las nueve con ocho minutos. That means it's 9:08 here at KITM, Star 105."

Welcome to bilingual radio.

Ms. Vela is one of eight disc jockeys at the FM station that began operating in November 1984 from a tiny office at a shopping center in this community just north of the Rio Grande.

Throughout the day songs from Spanish musicians such as Julio Iglesias, Juan Gabriel, Little Joe, La Mafia, Mazz, La Sombra, Miami Sound Machine and their counterparts are played. But so are songs from Lionel Richie, Wham, Madonna, Hall & Oates, Phil Collins and other English popular artists. And it doesn't stop there.

Country and western crooners such as Willie Nelson, Eddie Rabbitt, Barbara Mandrell, Janie Fricke and their colleagues also invade the airwaves from the Mission station, which has a broadcast range of 40 miles.

Manny Lopez, 43, the station manager, said he decided on bilingual radio because the market in the Rio Grande Valley was inundated with other formats.

Power struggles said way of life

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan just can't seem to make people understand that his administration is one big, happy family.

The president tried to get his point across when he appeared in the White House briefing room earlier this week to announce that Robert C. McFarlane was resigning as national security adviser.

Reagan looked a little exasperated as he faced reporters who had been writing that McFarlane was departing because he lost a power struggle with White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan. McFarlane looked a little ill.

"You have all been misinformed about that," the president said of the news reports about an administration power struggle.

AP analysis

Only two months ago, Reagan stood in the same briefing room and looked just as exasperated. At his side, looking uncomfortable, was Margaret Heckler, the secretary of health and human services. She was on her way out, being promoted, in a manner of speaking, to the post of ambassador to Ireland.

Then, too, there had been those rumors, that she had been forced out. Another power struggle, another loser.

"I don't know where this was coming from," the president said of the reports that the White House was displeased with the way his secretary was handling her job. "It was malicious. It was false."

It was life at the top in Washington. The power struggles go on, though the style might vary from one administration to another.

Like so many of his predecessors, Reagan prizes loyalty. He is a compassionate man.

He would not stand up and say he thought new leadership was needed at the Department of Health and Human Services. Instead, he said Mrs. Heckler had done a "fine job."

Then he added, "As a matter of fact, if she hadn't done such a good job, I wouldn't have been so eager to seek her out to be ambassador to Ireland."

No one needed a degree in political science to know that her new job was a step down from the Cabinet.

But this wasn't a case where accuracy mattered. In fact, Reagan was demonstrating, once again, something he understands better than most politicians — the art of doing what most people would call "the decent thing."

Inmates support penalty

AUSTIN (AP) — While nearly two-thirds of Texas prison inmates favor the death penalty for some crimes, they aren't convinced that executions deter crime, says a survey conducted by the inmates' newspaper.

Only about one in four prisoners believes the death penalty generally deters criminals, the survey found.

But a slim majority of the inmates who responded said a death penalty threat for prison murders might help reduce the violence behind the walls of the Texas Department of Corrections system.

The Echo newspaper, published at Huntsville for state prison inmates, recently asked its inmate-readers to send in responses to questions about the death penalty. The results of the unscientific sampling were published in its latest edition.

"Similar to recent national surveys of the American population, the prison populace responded in favor of the death penalty by a 63 percent to 37 percent majority," The Echo said.

Land commissioner Garry Mauro seeking re-election

AUSTIN (AP) — State Land Commissioner Garry Mauro officially is seeking re-election, saying he has made good on his campaign promises.

Since taking over the General Land Office, Mauro said, he has streamlined the veterans land program, efficiently implemented a veterans housing program and made better use of state lands.

"The days of sloppy management, unbusinesslike procedures, bloated bureaucracies, unproductive employees — those days are over as far as I am concerned," Mauro told supporters at an Austin fund raiser Thursday.

"I think my four-year performance will stand the test of hard scrutiny," he said.

Mauro, a Democrat who first won election to the land commissioner's post in 1982, said he believes voters will appreciate improvements he made in land office operations.

"It used to take up to 18 months to close a veterans land loan. Today, it takes less than 90 days for regular loans and less than 45 days for our new subdivision program loans," he said.

"There used to be a waiting list with 14,000 names on it just to get an application. Now you can call our toll-free number or walk in and get an application on the spot," he said.

The land program is funded through bond sales, so taxpayers aren't charged, Mauro noted.

Mauro said he also followed through with the veterans housing program, something younger veterans need to help them cope with the high costs of buying a first home today.

"We created a blend of public and private sector in a government program that works, not just for veterans but for all Texans," he said.

"Nearly $500 million in loans have been committed under the housing program. It's created 25,000 jobs for Texans in the private sector.

Cancer program gets calls

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — The woman's voice on the telephone was soft, plaintive.

"I saw the television report last night about new experimental cancer therapy. My mother has lung cancer. We're at a crisis point with her. She had surgery, and conventional chemotherapy doesn't seem to be working. She's real depressed and refuses to continue chemo. She's given up."

And a young man:

"I have renal cell cancer. I found out this morning it's in my lung and spinal cord. I've had a kidney removed. (My doctor) said nothing could be done."

All day Thursday, the telephone lines at the Cancer Information Service here were jammed with calls from people desperate for a cancer cure. They'd heard or read about a new treatment developed at the National Cancer Institute.

Officials at the federal center caution the treatment is still highly experimental, carries toxic side effects and is very expensive. It is available thus far only at the institute in Bethesda, Md., a Washington suburb.

But it shows promise, the experts say. And for the millions of people with cancer, the treatment — however experimental — spells hope, maybe a last hope.

"My mother had a malignant tumor. She has less than a year to live."

"How do I sign up?"

"Is there any way he can go in as a research patient?"

Operators told the disappointed callers the program is filled, although there are plans to open more research centers around the nation. They were given more details about Dr. Steven Rosenberg's research, or referred to other clinical research programs, or told to have their doctors contact the National Cancer Institute.

The information service, which can be reached at 1-800-4-CANCER, had received more than 1,000 calls by midday Thursday.
