Pope In Turkey

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) Pope John Paul II of the Roman Catholic Church embraced and kissed Patriarch Demetrius I of the Eastern Orthodox Church today as the leaders of Christianity's two largest branches symbolically launched their dialogue to end more than nine centuries of division.

The Roman Catholic pontiff also embraced and kissed Armenian Patriarch Snork Khaludjan shortly after arriving at Istanbul's airport from Ankara on the second day of his ecumenical visit to Turkey.

John Paul's plane landed in Istanbul, Christianity's former Eastern capital, under a bright sun breaking through scattered clouds. Turkish and Christian religious officials were on hand to greet the pontiff on the airport tarmac.

Cocaine Allegations Probed

WASHINGTON (AP)-A special three-judge court appointed a special prosecutor today to investigate allegations that President Carter's chief adviser, Hamilton Jordan, used the illegal drug cocaine.

The panel appointed as prosecutor Arthur H. Christy, a New York attorney who prosecuted mobster Frank Costello when Christy was U.S. Attorney for the Southern District of New York in 1958-59.

In its order, the court said it was acting "upon consideration of the application of the attorney general . . for the appointment of a special prosecutor to investigate the allegation that Hamilton Jordan possessed cocaine in the Southern District of New York on June 27, 1978."

Jordan has denied he has ever used cocaine.

Reopening Landmark Case

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP)-A federal judge today granted the request of a group of black parents to reopen the landmark Brown vs. Board of Education case, which led to the Supreme Court's 1954 ruling outlawing racial segregation in American schools.

U.S. District Judge Richard D. Rogers ruled the group of eight parents had shown good cause why they should be allowed to intervene in the historic decision.

The parents claim the intervention was necessary in order to get the court to force the Topeka school board to achieve better racial balance in the city's schools.

Wants Energy Search Spurred

AUSTIN (AP)-Texas Railroad Commissioner Mack Wallace today said he has asked President Carter to invoke the National Defense Production Act in an effort to spur an intensive search for domestic energy sources.

SCURRY'S GOLD STAR 4-H MEMBERS--Jeffrey Gilbert and Kelly Tolbert, Scurry County's Gold Star Award winners were among those honored at a district 4-H Club banquet at Lubbock.

At Lubbock Banquet...

Scurry Gold Star 4-H Winners Honored

LUBBOCK — Scurry County's Gold Star 4-H Club members, Kelly Tolbert and Jeffery Gilbert, were among outstanding youths honored at the annual District 2 4-H Gold Star banquet here.

Miss Tolbert is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Tolbert of Snyder, and Gilbert is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jady Gilbert of Snyder.

Forty boys and girls received the highest county award offered in the 4-H Club program---the Gold Star Award--at the banquet held at Coronado High School. They received the acclaim of parents, fellow 4-H members, government officials, Extension Service leaders and other community personalities.

John T. Montford, Lubbock criminal district attorney, challenged the award recipients to continue to accept roles of responsibility as they become adults.

Montford gave the 4-H'ers "four R's" to remember to help them continue to be good leaders. The key words, he said, are retain, resist, respect and responsibility.

He urged them to retain the fundamental values they already have formed. "Your heritage," he said, "stems from what has been the backbone of our nation, the family unit." and he said 4-H is based on the values of the productive, cooperative family.

Resisting peer pressure brings to the forefront the strongest aspect of leadership ability, the district attorney said. "Saying 'no' is not always the popular thing, but it may be the right thing," he noted.

Respect for the law, "the very foundation of our society," also is needed, Montford said. "The place to change the laws is in the legislative process," he stressed.

"Accept the responsibility the future holds for you," he urged. "Through your leadership, we'll regain our self-sufficiency" as a nation.

"No organization can do more to equip you to Professional football in Texas is "something else," according to Denne Freeman, the AP's sports writer for its Texas Bureau.

When covering a game, Freeman says, you've got to remember that there actually will be a dawn tomorrow if the Dallas Cowboys--or America's team as they like to call themselves ---should actually lose.

"You've got to remember that there still will be tides in the Gulf of Mexico should the Houston Oilers, may Earl Campbell's mother forgive me, lose," says Freeman.

But the fact is that life comes to a halt for many Texans when their professional football teams are in action.

"Ask any police department," Freeman suggests. "Your odds of getting mugged or molested drop to near zero when the Oilers and Cowboys are on the tube, unless you're in a bar and say something about the Lone Star State's twin entries in the professional football wars. The good ol' boys and good ol' girls wouldn't cotton kindly to such heresy. You could get a beer across your bow."

All of this means that Freeman and his AP cohorts have their hands full in the Dallas and Houston bureaus whenever the two teams play.

"Associated Press member newspapers absolutely cannot print enough about either team," Freeman declares.

That reminds us that we still think the Southwest Conference took a step backward when it let its radio broadcast contract to Mutual. There were a lot of complaints the first year, especially about commercials running into playing time. This still occurs, and moreover there are a lot of gaps in the coverage. Used to be that you could drive across the state on the day of SWC games and pick up the play-by-play of any and all games wherever you happened to be, but that's not the case any more, as we discovered on a recent Saturday. No matter what they tell us about improvements, it just ain't the same as it was when Hunble (now Exxon) had it.

Here are some timely tips from the Texas Medical Association on how joggers and others should dress for cold weather activity. Layers of loose-fitting clothing trap warm air between them and are warmer than one heavy garment. Wearing a cap or other head covering also is very important because the head can cause about a fourth of the body's entire heat loss.

Gloves and-or mittens also are important, because cold hands can make you feel chilly even if other body parts are reasonably warm.

If possible, when jogging on a cold day, run into the wind when starting and finish up with the wind to your back. This keeps the wind from drying any built-up sweat too quickly.

Court Of U.N. Asked To Order Hostages Freed

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States has filed suit against Iran today in the International Court of Justice in The Hague, seeking an order for the release of the 49 Americans held hostage in Tehran.

Details of the suit were not immediately available. But the function of the court is to arbitrate disputes between United Nations members.

The United States and Iran have signed several conventions and treaties which obligate them to protect the others' diplomats.

The World Court, however, has no mechanism to force Iran to obey an order. The move was apparently another in what President Carter said Wednesday night would be an exhaustive effort to use peaceful and legal means to gain release of the hostages.

Saying he cannot set a deadline for release of the hostages, Carter asked the American people to be determined but patient.

The court, composed of 15 international justices, is the principal judicial organ of the United Nations.

The U.S. request was seen by court observers here are largely a symbolic act and part of an American effort to seek a peaceful solution to the crisis."

But it could also put additional pressure on Iran when the subject of the embassy siege is debated in the U.N. Security Council. A meeting of the council is scheduled for Saturday night.

All members of the United Nations may bring disputes before the court, but all parties to its judgments must agree to accept its jurisdiction.

It was not known whether Iran would agree to come before the court, but Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has said he would refuse to accept any decision dictated by the Security Council.

In its 35-year history, the court has issued 16 advisories to international organizations and 39 judgments in disputes among U.N. members.

Ask Us

Q--Why doesn't Snyder have the Punt, Pass and Kick Contest anymore?

A--This contest is sponsored nation-wide by Ford. Locally, officials at Wilson Motors, the local Ford dealer, report that interest declined, not only among entrants, but among organizations to conduct it. Therefore, it was discontinued three years ago due to lack of interest.

Anti-American Demonstrators March In Iran

TEHRAN, Iran (AP)-Hundreds of thousands of demonstrators marched in Tehran today in response to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's call for massive anti-American protests under the guise of religious observances, but the demonstrators stayed away from the U.S. Embassy and the 49 Americans held hostage there.

Khomeini's Revolutionary Council fired Abolhassan Bani-Sadr as Iran's foreign policy spokesman Wednesday and replaced him with Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, a hard-line member of the council, apparently dooming U.S. Security Council efforts to ease the U.S.-Iranian crisis.

The huge crowds in Tehran converged initially around the capital's Revolution Square, some four miles from the U.S. Embassy where pro-Khomeini militants have been holding the hostages since Nov. 4 in a bid to get the U.S. government to extradite the shah.

They then marched to the towering Shahyad monument near the airport, in the opposite direction from the embassy, about 10 miles away. Some in the throng wore white shrouds emblazoned in red letters with the words: "Yankees, We Will Cut Off Your Hands," and "We Are Ready To Die For Islam."

Marshalls wearing lapel buttons controlled the movements of the hundreds of separate marching groups - men at the front of the various processions followed by women clad in chadors, the traditional black veils. Some women carried babies.

Militants with bullhorns set the tone for the marchers.

As the crowds chanted praise of Allah and Khomeini, the city thundered with "Allahu Akhbar, Khomeini Ragbar;" "God is Great, Khomeini is the Leader;" and "Islam Up, Carter Down."

School District Given Annual Audit Report

The Snyder Independent School District received its annual audit report Wednesday, although there was not a quorum of board members on hand to officially accept it.

Joe H. Morren, CPA, presented a brief review of the report, which showed that the school district ended its fiscal year Aug. 31 with revenues of $77,521.61 in excess of expenditures.

Operating fund revenues for the year totaled $6,259,540.88, while expenditures amounted to $6,182,019.27.

Total assets of the school district were pegged at $14,455,848.65.

The school district's bonded indebtedness is due to decline sharply after the 1979-80 school year, the audit report shows. The 1979-80 payment on outstanding bonds, including interest, will be $501,507.50. This will drop to $6,576.25 in 1980-81.

A separate audit report was required by the state this year on "child nutrition programs." This report showed an excess of revenue over expenditures of $15,776.75. However the figures included funds from the sale of the food service inventory to Greyhound Food Management, the contractor for food service this year, plus a $30,000 subsidy from local maintenance funds, plus workmen's compensation insurance paid from local maintenance. It did not include the salary of the food service director and costs of hauling commodities, etc.

Over-all, the audit showed that the food service program last year lost $18,911.81, plus the subsidy and workmen's compensation insurance payments, which combined for $34,688.56, plus the managers salary and transportation costs.

Since there was not a quorum of the board present, acceptance of the audit report will be considered at the board's next meeting. Board members attending were Bill Eiland, Lillie Sullivan and Bill Seale.

Anti-Oil Amendment Blockade Is Sought

WASHINGTON (AP)-Oil-state senators, fearing a setback in their efforts to weaken President Carter's "windfall-profits" tax, are trying to block an amendment that would cost the oil industry $22.5 billion over the next decade.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., and his allies began a talkathon Wednesday after the Senate, on a 58-39 vote, refused to kill the amendment.

Dole and Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd said they expected to break the stalemate sometime today.

The amendment, sponsored by Sens. Bill Bradley, D.N.J., and John Chafee, R-R.I., would raise from 60 percent to 75 percent the tax on future price increases of "new" oil, which generally is any oil discovered between 1973 and 1978.

Earlier this week, the Senate approved an amendment that would slash the impact of the tax by $10 billion by exempting the first 1,000 barrels of crude oil pumped daily by an independent operator.

The Senate version of the tax would cost the oil industry some $129 billion from 1980 through 1990. In contrast, the tax passed by the House and favored by Carter would cost $277 billion.

Meanwhile, other senators stepped up demands that Carter reimpose price controls on domestically produced crude oil until Congress approves a tough tax.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., chairman of the Energy Committee, said the watered-down tax being considered in the Senate amounts to little more than an effort to "Whitewash" a huge oil industry windfall.

Because of the weakening of the tax, Jackson told colleagues, it is up to Carter to protect consumers. "Anything short of price control reimposition will cheat the American people for the benefit of the oil industry," he said.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, who is challenging Carter for the Democratic presidential nomination, called again on the president to pledge to veto the tax bill unless it takes at least 50 percent of the oil industry's "windfall" over the next 11 years.

In a rubber bridge game with strong players there is apt to be a lot of jockeying for position in the bidding.

West wanted to get his partner to play a heart contract at as low a level as possible. North also hoped to let South become the declarer in spades.

Then, after West had persisted to five hearts, North decided to jump to six spades and hope that something really good would result.

East came through with a double. He didn't really know what was going on, but he did hold the king of clubs in back of North's original club bid.

West was pretty sure that East had something in clubs for his double but West had never bid his beautiful diamond suit. He led the king of diamonds.

South ruffed in dummy, led one spade to his hand and led a heart to dummy's king and East's ace. East led his last diamond to force dummy to use up another trump, but night had fallen for the defense. South discarded a club on the queen of hearts, then played the ace of clubs, ruffed a club, got to dummy with a trump, ruffed another club to clear the suit, led his last trump to dummy's king and made the rest of the tricks with clubs.

Oh, yes! As East pointed out, a club lead would have beaten the slam.

Pageant Carries Message

CLEVELAND (AP)— The blushing beauty pageant contestants, clad in tight swimsuits, paraded through onlookers who patted thighs and administered an occasional pinch.

"This has been really weird," said one of the six contestants -- all men -- who put their charms on display before an audience of women. "Now I recognize what women go through."

The contest at Case Western Reserve University was arranged by lecturer Warren Farrell, author of "The Liberated Man: Freeing Men and Their Relationships With Women."

Farrell lined up the men and told women in the audience to pick the ones they wanted to date. The men were told to decide which women they would date based on their salaries and what the women would be doing five years in the future.

"For most women, their body is what will determine the financial support they will have for the rest of their lives," Farrell said in a recent interview. "For every laugh we had, there was a serious message."

Christmas Salad From Mexico

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

We sugar freaks always find an excuse to fall off our diets and jump onto the dessert bandwagon during the holidays.

However, a good salad can allay the craving for sweets and offer an interesting change from the heavy meals we enjoy from Thanksgiving through New Year's.

Mexican Salad Navidad is just such a refreshing salad to serve as a main luncheon course or as an appetizer.

MEXICAN SALAD NAVIDAD

Lime Dressing
1 (20-ounce) can pineapple chunks
1 (1-pound) can pickled or plain sliced beets
2 medium green apples, thinly sliced
2 medium oranges, peeled and sectioned
2 bananas, sliced
1 cup mayonnaise or salad dressing
Romaine lettuce
½ cup roasted, diced, salted almonds
1/4 cup pomegranate seeds or sunflower nuts (optional)
Whole natural almonds

Prepare Lime Dressing (recipe follows).

FRUIT-vegetable salad with almonds and lime dressing is right for holidays.

Drain pineapple and beets. Lightly rinse beets with cold water and pat dry.

Combine pineapple, beets, apple slices, orange sections and bananas.

Blend ½ cup Lime Dressing with mayonnaise. Set aside. Pour remaining dressing over fruits. Chill.

Just before serving, line serving bowl with Romaine lettuce. Toss fruits and diced almonds together. Arrange in bowl.

Sprinkle with pomegranate seeds or sunflower nuts, if desired. Decorate with a few whole natural almonds. Pass reserved dressing.

This kitchen-tested recipe makes 8 servings or about 2 quarts of salad.

Lime Dressing

Combine ½ cup salad oil, 1/3 cup lime juice, 2 tablespoons brown sugar and 3/4 teaspoon salt in small jar. Cover tightly. Shake well to blend. Makes 1 cup dressing.

Eliminate the pressure

By Karen Blaker, Ph.D.

DEAR DR. BLAKER — My 10-year-old son has a lot of trouble getting to sleep.

Some nights are worse than others. He sometimes comes downstairs every 10 minutes to see if I am still up. I think he is afraid that I will go to sleep and that he will be alone in a dark house.

The more he tries to force himself to fall asleep, however, the more difficult it becomes. Then he gets anxious about whether he will be able to get up in the morning to go to school.

I want to try letting him stay up later. I think it would be easier for him to fall asleep if he was more tired when he went to bed.

But my husband says no. He feels we have very little time together as it is and he doesn't want to settle for less.

Now I'm really at a loss about what to do.

DEAR READER — Don't be angry with your husband.

Letting your son stay up later probably wouldn't help anyway. Once he got into bed he would only feel more pressure to fall asleep before you turned in.

What will help?

First, keep a record of your son's sleeping difficulties. For example, why does he have more trouble some nights than others?

Falling asleep is a kind of separation from the world. When children are afraid of losing the people (or the love) they need to survive, they may become terrified of that time of night when they have to give up control and submit to sleep.

I remember when my husband and I traded the traditionally sex-stereotyped jobs we had done for so long around the house. It was then that our 9-year-old daughter had problems falling asleep.

I think she felt frightened that Daddy might not be able to care for her as well as familiar Mommy.

Second, put your son to bed a half hour earlier than usual. That will give him more time to fall asleep and thereby reduce his tension.

Promise him that you will go into his room and kiss him goodnight before you go to sleep.

Finally, assure him that nothing terrible will happen to him if he does not sleep for one night.

This excerpt from Jane Lazarre's new book, "The Mother Knot," illustrates my last point:

"As a child I would frequently call my father into my room three, four, five times a night, frightened that I could not sleep. Once he told me that if I didn't fall asleep, it was all right, that I might just lie there and rest all night.

"And this stupendous, liberating realization — that if I stayed awake all night I would not die — became a chant which I demanded of him each time the terror began to inch its way into my stomach again.

"'Tell me it doesn't matter,' I would command.

"'It doesn't matter if you don't fall asleep as long as you relax,' he would repeat obediently. Soon I would be asleep."

Although sleeping problems are common after a child comes home from the hospital, learn how to prevent more serious disturbances in my new hotline, "When Your Child Goes to the Hospital." Order your copy by sending 50 cents plus a self-addressed, stamped envelope to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 475, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Pilot Blamed...

Jet Was On Wrong Side Of Volcano

CHRISTCHURCH, New Zealand (AP) — The New Zealand airliner that carried 257 persons to their deaths in the Antarctic was on the wrong side of the volcano it hit, and the pilot apparently was to blame, the director of the recovery operation said today.

"It would seem there has been a substantial error in navigation by the pilot," said Roy Thomsen, chief of the Antarctic division of New Zealand's Department of Scientific and Industrial Research.

"The plane was basically on the wrong wide of the mountain. It crashed on the northeast side of Mount Erebus. It should have been passing the mountain on the northwest side."

The DC-10 was on a sight-seeing trip along the Antarctic Coast when it crashed Wednesday, killing all aboard including 21 Americans. Thomson said he could almost certainly rule out the possibility of structural or mechanical failure.

"In my opinion the plane was certainly in the wrong place to come down so low," Thomson, one of the country's foremost authorities on the Antarctic, told reporters in Auckland before leaving to head up operations to try to recover the bodies.

It was the third fatal DC-10 crash this year and the fourth largest death toll in aviation history.

Treacherous winds, snow and sub-zero temperatures were delaying the recovery of bodies from the crash site. Thirty-knot winds whipped snow and updrafts around the volcano, and the wind chill factor was 35 below.

Three New Zealand mountaineers were lowered to the site today by a U.S. Navy helicopter. They said the plane apparently exploded when it crashed only 1,500 feet up the 12,400-foot volcano, which slopes at 35-degree angle.

Thomson's Department of Scientific and Industrial Research, which maintains New Zealand's Scott Base near the crash site, said the mountaineers found the tail section of the plane intact, but empty.

It said they reported the wreckage was spread over an area measuring 400 yards by 50 yards, on hard permanent ice covered by loosely packed snow but with deep crevasses and fissures.

The mountaineers reported no survivors among the 20 crew and 237 passengers, who included John Greenleaf Houghton, 39, an associate professor at the University of Nevada who specialized in the study of arctic climate. He was on a year's sabbatical at New Zealand's Otago University.

API Blames Computer

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Petroleum Institute says a computer error caused it to underestimate supplies of heating oil, gasoline and other petroleum products by several million barrels last week.

The institute, an industry organization representing oil companies in Washington, said Tuesday that data processing errors "tended to understate petroleum product stocks."

The errors were the fourth of their size announced by the institute in four months.

Dec. 2-8 Proclaimed As 'Texas Pecan Week'

AUSTIN—Texas Commissioner of Agriculture Reagan V. Brown has proclaimed Dec. 2-8 Texas Pecan Week in honor of the native crop that Texans have been eating since the first settlers arrived on Lone Star soil.

Brown said this is a particularly significant year for the pecan industry in view of the 95 million pounds that were predicted for harvest. It is the largest crop of Texas pecans ever recorded. Pecans will be available at reasonable prices during the holidays.

"We want to honor a Texas agricultural product that is a part of the state's history," said Brown.

When pioneers arrived here they found woods of pecan trees that shed their crop from fall to early winter. The trees were the source of a nutritious food that became a staple in homes lucky enough to be located near a wild stand.

The early settlers gathered pecans by hand and took them to market in wagons. In 1880 San Antonio was the center of pecan trade. That year 1,250,000 pounds were sold for five and six cents a pound in wagonload quantities. Most of the pecans were shipped east.

Mass production of shelled pecans had its beginnings not in Texas but in St. Louis in 1884. Eleven people -- one cracker holding a hammer and 10 meat pickers -- began doing what had been until then strictly an at-home project. Four years later a hand-powered cracking device was introduced to the industry.

Today's industry bears some resemblance to last century's, but very little. Pecan growing is still an avocation for many landowners here. They harvest their native varieties from private land along river banks and in valleys, selling them at roadside stands or to accumulators who pass them along to big wholesalers. Most of the increase in this year's crop, in fact, is due to an abundant native crop grown in this manner.

Commercial orchards, however, have made important inroads into the Texas pecan industry. Some orchards grow natives, but most are experimenting with improved hybrids. The newest growers are in El Paso county where all the pecans grown are these hybrids. The nuts are also raised commercially in south central Texas and in the Dallas-Fort Worth and Cross Timbers areas.

Instead of hand-picking, commercial growers use mechanical shakers that vibrate the tree trunks, sending mature nuts to the ground. The shakers are followed by machines called "finger reapers," so-named because of finger-like strips of rubber that flip the downed nuts into a hopper underneath the reaper. A finger reaper can hold about two trees' worth of pecans, which are bagged in the field and carried to a warehouse. There they go into a cleaner where light pecans and trash are removed.

Martinez New State-Federal Relations Head

AUSTIN (AP)-David Martinez, a man who - in Gov. Bill Clements' words - "knows how the hill works" - is the new director of the Office of State-Federal Relations in Washington.

Martinez, former administrative assistant to Sen. John Tower, was sworn in Wednesday.

Clements noted Martinez's GOP connections but said Martinez "is not up there on a paint-me-red Republican basis."

The job "is now a lobbying position," Clements told reporters. "He represents the state of Texas, and he understands that well."

Asked if having Martinez in Washington might reduce the number of trips Clements makes to the nation's capital, Clements replied, "They may increase - I don't know."

One of Martinez's primary responsibilities, Clements said, would be "To track federal funds available to come into Texas."

Asked if the office would emphasize energy, Clements said, "Energy already is a point of interest in that office."

Nineteen positions are authorized in the federal-state office, Martinez said, but only seven are filled.

"We will start rebuilding on the basis of necessity," Clements said. "We will build back up carefully and with prudence."

Clements said one reason so few are in the office is that six or seven resigned in 1978 after they "had been informed by 'guess who' they were going to be fired."

Asked if a small staff put Texas at a disadvantage in competing with other states for federal funds, Clements replied, "I think quality prevails. Warm bodies will not get the job done."

Clements also was asked if he thought a federal agency's disapproval of Texas' plans for distributing $6.5 million cold-weather grants to the needy was a "political move," and he responded, "I do."

Omar Harvey of the Texas Department of Community Affairs said Monday he would sue the U.S. Community Services Administration, and Clements said, "I support Omar Harvey 100 percent."

IT WAS LOVE at first sight when a 2-year-old llama named Pacha met a 5-year-old boy named Tom Hertenstein. The affectionate llama — one of two owned by an Illinois family — used to be taken out for walks wearing a dog collar before it grew to its current size.

Mill Shutdown At Youngstown

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP)—U.S. Steel said it was cold hard economics, but the news of another mill shutdown was a blow to the heart of a beleaguered Youngstown.

"We feel clobbered" said Bob Vasquez, union leader of the 3,500 workers who will lose their jobs when the company's Ohio and McDonald Works here are phased out.

In all, 13,000 U.S. Steel employees in 16 plants in eight states will be thrown out of work as part of the announced cutback.

But the cutback may be hardest on Youngstown, which was devastated two years ago when Youngstown Sheet & Tube closed its plant here and 4,000 workers were suddenly on the street.

Community groups tried unsuccessfully to take over that plant and save the jobs. The economic ripple reached almost every business in the Mahoning Valley. Social workers said the town might never recover.

The day of the Youngstown announcement in September 1977 became known as "Black Monday." Now there's a "Black Tuesday" to go with it.

Feminists Fuming At Governor...

Barefoot And Pregnant Award Given Clements

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP)—Local feminists have taken their "Not Quite Annual Barefoot and Pregnant Award" out of the attic, dusted it off and presented it to Gov. Bill Clements.

The Austin chapter of the National Organization for Women (NOW) announced the award at a news conference Wednesday.

Clements had this comeback:

"You can see I'm not barefoot and obviously I'm not pregnant."

Vicky Worsham, coordinator of the NOW chapter, said Clements earned the award by:

--Firing the staff of the Texas Commission on the Status of Women without hiring replacements.

"The commission exists legally but it doesn't have a staff," Ms. Worsham said.

--Vetoing $230,000 appropriated to the Texas Rehabilitation Commission for services to "displaced homemakers" -- women re-entering the job market upon divorce or widowhood.

Clements said there was plenty of money in various other state and federal programs to provide the necessary job training for such women.

--Reportedly wisecracking at Texas A&M that women "should go deep-sea diving to exercise birth control." An A&M scientist had just explained a research project that indicated deep-sea diving could damage a fetus.

"I didn't think it was funny," Ms. Worsham said of Clements' reported remark. "It was an indication of a callous attitude."

The text of the award said, "It would be reprehensible to encourage childbearing women to endanger the health of their unborn children."

Ms. Worsham said Clements will receive a "suitable-for-framing certificate," probably by mail.

She also said the award - despite its tongue-in-cheek name -- is meant to be taken seriously.

"I am angry with the governor," she said.

Ms. Worsham said nominations were solicited from all members of the chapter, which has about 200 people on its mailing list.

"No one else was nominated," she said.

The last time the award was presented was in 1974, when University of Texas athletic director Darrell Royal received it for allegedly saying nobody would pay to watch women's athletic events.

Millions In Counterfeit Recordings Confiscated

FORT WORTH (AP)-FBI agents say they were overwhelmed by what they found during raids at two Fort Worth warehouses where they confiscated between $10 million and $15 million in counterfeit tape recordings.

"We thought it was big, but not this big," David Rarity, special agent in charge of the Fort Worth office, said Wednesday.

Agents said they expected to search a small, illegal family business Wednesday. Instead they walked into what they believe to be one of the largest production and distribution centers for counterfeit tape recordings in the country.

"We were stunned by what we saw," said Rarity.

Thousands of cassettes, apparently unauthorized reproductions of tapes with recording industry copyrights, filled rows of racks that lined one warehouse.

In the other, agents found more tapes and what is believed to be the "counterfeiters' reproduction center," containing sophisticated recording equipment, cassette holders and professionally-printed labels identical to those of legitimate recording companies.

"The magnitude has overwhelmed us. We are just beginning to assess what we confiscated," said Rarity.

"They had everything from religious music to Eric Clapton to Pat Boone's White Christmas," he said. "I think they were gearing up for the holidays - there was a lot of Christmas music."

No arrests were made Wednesday and Rarity said no complaints are expected to be filed against suspects soon.

It may be six to eight months before the FBI builds cases against those running the ring, said Rarity.

He said the Fort Worth FBI office had almost no experience handling counterfeit tape operations until someone called three months ago questioning the authenticity of cassettes he bought.

The case was assigned to veteran agent Mike Connelley, who Rarity said developed enough evidence to get a sealed search warrant late last week.

He said the Fort Worth agents were in contact with New York agents who have more experience tracking sources of pirated goods.

A spokesman for the Recording Industry Association of America in New York City said Wednesday that sales from illegally-made recordings last year amounted to $350 million.

More Courts Considered At College

A meeting to discuss the possibility of building more racquetball and-or handball courts at Western Texas College is planned for 6 p.m. Tuesday in the Snyder Savings & Loan Association Community Room.

WTC now has one court in the Health-Physical Education Building and it is in use 18-20 hours each day on weekdays plus other hours on Sunday afternoon. The college board and administration have indicated they would be interested in providing the extra facilities if there is a real demand. They would be operated as an auxiliary service of the college in the same way the golf course and pro shop and users would be required to pay fees as they do for the use of the golf facilities.

Ag Department Seeks Views Of Women

WASHINGTON (AP)—After listening primarily to men for most of its 117 years, the Agriculture Department is seeking farm women's opinions and suggestions.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland said Wednesday his department is providing $280,000 to the National Opinion Research Center of Chicago for a $305,000 study. The center will provide the balance.

"The intent of the survey is to provide a record of farm women's experience with USDA services and farm programs, and their perceptions of the department," Bergland said.

"It will also provide us with a knowledge of women's roles in making farm management decisions."

The survey will be among 4,100 farm women and will involve questions now being developed by the department and the Chicago-based center.

Officials said the survey will be conducted by telephone and is expected to begin next summer.

The survey is part of the department's Farm Women's Project recently established to look into the status of farm women.

In addition to the survey and study, comments and requests for information can be sent to: Farm Women's Project, 1548 South Building, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250. The telephone number is 202-447-2582.

Theft Case Under Probe

County Commissioner Charlie Yoast may have found himself a little colder this morning when he discovered someone had stolen two jackets from his pickup.

The theft occurred either late last night or early this morning. Vandalism was also reported because the pickup's windshield was broken. The case was worked by officer Kerry Fritz.

Reporting a theft last night was Jack Mize. He told officer Buddy Kinney someone had taken $100 from his residence.

A minor traffic accident was worked at 8:20 a.m. Wednesday. Involved in it were a 1967 Volkswagen driven by Billy Stroud and a 1968 Volkswagen driven by Mary Huckabee. It occurred in the 2300 block of 37th St. and was worked by officer Fritz.

Buy Christmas Trees Early

Buy your Christmas tree early and care for it properly so that it will last throughout the holiday season, advises a forestry specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. Make sure the tree you select is fresh. If the tree is shedding needles or is brittle, it's become too dry. As soon as you get the tree home, cut one to two inches off its base on a slant, and stand it in water. In the home, place the tree away from heat sources and check the water level often.

Hard Winter Seen For Southern Great Plains

By RANDOLPH SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) The Midwest, South and southern Great Plains should brace for another onslaught of colder-than-normal weather this winter, says the National Weather Service.

But the northwest quarter of the country should bask in milder than normal temperatures, along with that portion of New England generally east of the Connecticut River.

And those living in an area stretching from Tucson, Ariz., to the Pacific and then northward to San Francisco also are likely to enjoy a milder season.

Weather service official Donald Gillman said the experts simply have met been able to collect enough information to make a winter forecast for the rest of the East Coast south to South Carolina, southern Florida and much of the northern Great Plains.

In its annual winter prediction, issued Wednesday, the weather service said the Midwest, South and southern Great Plains face 2-1 odds of suffering through a fourth straight nasty winter.

But Gillman said that while these areas should have lower than normal temperatures, they will not necessarily experience the intense cold of the last few winters.

While acknowledging that freakish weather "blew away" his prediction last winter, Gillman said his long-term forecasts generally have been 65 percent accurate or better. He described last winter's unpredicted cold in the eastern states as an "exceptionally rare occurrence."

Milder than normal weather is predicted for much of the Northwest, he said. This includes areas stretching from Denver and Rapid City, S.D., to Northern California and the Pacific Northwest.

Turning to snow and rainfall, Gillman said there is a 55 percent chance of heavier than normal precipitation in the Rio Grande Valley, the Gulf Coast states, along the Appalachian Mountains, the upper Ohio Valley and all of the East Coast except southern Florida.

Likely to remain drier than usual is an area extending from California northeast through the Great Basin to the Northern Rockies and east to the Great Lakes.

If the prediction comes true, Gillman noted, some western ski areas may not have enough snow. But he said the dry winter should not lead to a serious drought unless next winter is also dry.

Gillman said much of the accuracy of the prediction depends on the strength of a ridge of high pressure over western Canada. His forecast anticipates that the high pressure ridge will not be strong this year, and thus warm Pacific air will blow into the Northwest while arctic winds from Canada enter the central part of the nation.

The circulation flowing north along the East Coast, meanwhile, remains hard to predict and the closeness of this high level wind to the coast will determine whether the East has a dry or stormy winter, he said.

Record 75 Whoopers Migrate From Canada

AUSTWELL, Texas (AP) The loud trumpeting of rare whooping cranes heralded their descent to the marshes of the Aransas National Wildlife Refuge and delighted the scientists who have studied the large white birds' rise from the brink of extinction.

Wildlife officials said so far a record 75 cranes have migrated from their summer nesting grounds in Canada to their winter home near the Texas coast.

"That's the most we've ever had," said an elated refuge manager Frank Johnson.

Last April, 74 cranes left Texas and Johnson said Canadian officials reported seven chicks were hatched during the summer.

"So we could have as many as 81," Johnson said. Of the 75 cranes counted, he said 69 are adults and the other six are young birds. Female cranes lay only two eggs a season.

The whooping cranes nearly died out during the 1930s, but scientists took steps to build up the only known flock.

Johnson said now there are between 120 and 126 whooping cranes left in the world, including 26 in captivity and 16 in the only other wild flock, which migrates between New Mexico and Idaho.

The largest cranes in North America spend their summers in the 11-million-acre Wood Buffalo Park in Northern Alberta before flying south to the much smaller, 54,000-acre refuge here.

Biologist Steve Labuda, who counts the rare cranes from a single-engine plane at least once a week, said the large, white birds with black wingtips stand four to five feet tall and have windpipes as long as five feet.

"They have a loud, rolling, trumpet-like call, almost a yodel," he said. "It's wild and pristine and very exciting if you've never heard it before."

Johnson said recent oil spills have not reached the cranes' winter nesting area.

"Fortunately the outer islands caught most of the brunt of the oil spill," he said.

"The bays and marshes which the cranes use are safe from the oil, so far."

He said this year's flock is the sixth year in a row the whooping crane population has increased. But 30 years ago the cranes were on the brink of extinction.

"In 1941 only 15 whooping cranes were seen by ground observers. That was before the time of flight observation, so there may have been some birds overlooked," said Labuda.

He said he counts the birds from the passenger seat of a Cessna 150 by using a map divided into sectors.

"I note how many birds are in each sector and then we tally it up. It's very unusual to find more than two or three birds in a group. They are scattered over a 10-square-mile area," he said.

Temperatures Drop To 20s

By The Associated Press

Another cold night covered the state as a large system of high pressure stretched from the Northern Rockies to the Texas coast.

Predawn temperatures across the state dropped into the teens and 20s in West Texas to the 30s in eastern sections. The Lower Rio Grande Valley was blanketed by cloudy skies and slightly warmer readings ranging from the upper 40s to the lower 50s.

Honor Groups Of Musicians Planned

ABILENE --United Methodist student musicians from Snyder are among those being invited to audition for the first United Methodist Church Honor Band and Honor Choir which will be formed this spring at McMurry College.

Snyder church and school officials have been asked to nominate young musicians for this program which McMurry hopes to make an annual event, says Dr. Macon Sumerlin, McMurry fine arts division chairman.

McMurry has traditionally had a strong music program, beginning with the opening of this four year liberal arts college in 1923, Dr. Sumerlin pointed out.

"The performers for these two very select groups will be chosen by competitive tape auditions to be judged by a panel of Methodist band and choir directors from Texas and New Mexico," Dr. Sumerlin says.

"The students will be chosen from among Methodist students currently enrolled in the public schools of Texas and New Mexico in grades 10 through 12," he adds.

The select group of superior instrumentalists and vocalists will have a period of intensive rehearsal June 8-13 on the McMurry campus. Then they will tour for three days.

Planes Coverage Too Close

FAA Probes Radar Failure At D-FW Airport

FORT WORTH (AP)— The Federal Aviation Administration has launched an investigation to determine why back-up radar failed to show two American Airlines jetliners converging within less than a mile of each other over Texarkana, officials said.

The incident occurred when the airplanes were under the control of the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport at the same time air traffic controllers reported a computerized radar system failure for a third time in three days.

"One airliner was at 28,000 feet and the other was at 31,000, descending to 28,000 feet. They were within a mile of each other laterally," said FAA spokesman George Burlage.

"They were noticed by air traffic controllers at D-FW at about 1,000 feet altitude, and by the time they corrected courses they had come to within 600 feet" of being at the same altitude, Burlage said.

Air traffic controllers try to keep aircraft separated by at least five miles laterally and at least 1,000 feet of altitude, he said.

The planes were en route Tuesday to Dallas-Fort Worth from Nashville, Tenn., and Little Rock, Ark.

Burlage said neither pilot filed a "near miss" report after landing safely at D-FW Airport.

"That's up to the pilot. It depends on how he sees it. Some pilots will declare a near miss if they come within three miles of another aircraft," Burlage said.

The back-up radar system was working at the time, but the computerized radar system, which gives air traffic controllers more information more clearly, was on the blink, Burlage said.

"The computerized radar went out from 9:14 a.m. to 9:18 a.m. It was restored, but two minutes later, at 9:20 a.m., there was a 20-second interruption. At the end of the 20-second interruption a controller noticed the two planes merging," Burlage said.

Besides the two failures Tuesday, the entire radar system failed for more than an hour Sunday, and pilots were advised to "look out their windows for other airplanes," according to controller Charlie Phillips.

"I had pilots calling in from 33,000 feet asking for help. I told them to look out their windows for other airplanes. There was nothing we could do," Phillips said.

Burlage said in the Texarkana incident, neither pilot reported seeing the other plane. He said the pilots corrected their courses after being advised by air traffic controllers in Dallas who spotted the problem in time.

"The Texarkana area is the final approach corridor where these planes from eastern points start descending to land at DFW," Burlage said. "We try to space them out and control the flow."

Rings Bells For Hostages

SAN ANTONIO (AP)—A local church Wednesday began tolling its bells 49 times daily for each of the 49 Americans held captive in Iran. The pastor said the practice will continue until the hostages are released by militant Iranian students.

"We're going to be praying for the whole world to be pulled back from the brink of disaster," said Rev. Dan E. Solomon, pastor of the Travis Park United Methodist Church. "The whole world is being held hostage right now by the events in Iran."

The bells will toll at noon each day, Solomon said.

The pastor said other churches in San Antonio had expressed interest in joining the practice. "It is our hope that every church in the city will toll their bells until things in Iran are resolved," he added.

Cabbies Respond To Drivers Call

HOUSTON (AP)— Cab driver Craig Anderson radioed for help from other drivers when four men tried to rob him.

Within minutes, four other drivers were on the scene at a southwest Houston apartment complex.

Anderson said he and another driver, Allen McDonald, caught one of the men a few blocks away, put him in the trunk of Anderson's cab and delivered him to police.

The man was charged with simple assault and on Tuesday paid a $203.50 fine.

"This is something the cab drivers started doing on their own because they can get there a lot faster than the police can," McDonald said.

"Cab drivers have to help other cab drivers."

Due to spiraling costs, mobile home buyers should explore all avenues to financing before acquiring a new or used unit, advises a real estate economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. Common forms of mobile home financing are directly through a lending institution, through a mobile home dealer, or through a conventional home loan.

Arab Sheiks No Longer Cheering For Khomeini

By ELIAS ANTAR
Associated Press Writer

ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — The ruling sheiks of the United Arab Emirates welcomed Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's rise to power in Iran, but now they are increasingly worried that his revolution will cause them trouble, say political sources here.

The Emirates applauded Khomeini's takeover in February because he was an Islamic leader in contrast to the shah, who promoted secularism. But now the Emirates president Zayed Bin Sultan Al Nahayan and the other sheiks fear they will become the targets of disorders incited by Iran, the sources said.

Iranian broadcasts in Arabic constantly call on Moslems to rise up against "oppressors of the people." The sheiks believe Khomeini's revolutionary regime is becoming more insecure and therefore prone to stirring up trouble on the Arab side of the Persian Gulf as a means of muting discontent at home, the sources said.

The seizure of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran was particularly disturbing to them, said one source close to the center of authority here.

"They totally disapprove of this kind of thing no matter who the excuse," said the source, who declined use of his name.

The United Arab Emirates, occupying a southeastern corner of the Arabian Peninsula, is a loose federation of seven sheikdoms formed in 1971 after Britain withdrew its protection and left the region. The federation supplies the United States with 3.6 percent of its oil imports.

The federation's native Arab inhabitants are preponderantly Sunni Moslems while Khomeini and most of the Iranians are non-Arab Persians and members of the Shiite branch of Islam. But in the course of the oil boom, the Emirates let in hundreds of thousands of Asians and other Arabs who now make up the majority of the population of 800 000 people.

Such a diversity of loyalties calls for vigilance, one source here said. When an Iranian religious leader arrived in the emirate of Dubai on a private visit some months ago, the federal authorities here in Abu Dhabi detained him for a short period and then deported him.

Western diplomatic sources say the federation and its Arab neighbors are now convinced of the need for more coordination on security matters. The sheiks see the security of the Persian Gulf as primarily the security of their own regimes.

The Emirates closely follow the political and oil policies of neighboring Saudi Arabia and maintain close ties with other Arab gulf states. Their military strength is small, and the sheiks believe the major deterrent against trouble from outside is their longstanding policy of maintaining good relations with as broad a spectrum of countries as possible. The sources said although the Emirates are pro-Western, they do not want a U.S. military presence in the gulf because they fear it would limit their own freedom of action.

"The rulers feel that Saudi Arabia, their own moderate position on most issues, and their money are reliable ramparts against most external threats," said one source.

But there are some stirrings in the local population, several sources said. With a younger, more educated generation building up, there have been calls for a more representative form of government.

Executive power now rests in a Supreme Council made up of the seven rulers headed by Zayed. A federal National Assembly whose 40 members are appointed by the rulers can advise but has no legislative power. It is headed by Taryam Omran, who observers here say is one of the leading exponents of change.

"Because of education, because of more communication with the rest of the world, young people are demanding more representation, more changes," said Omran in an interview. "I hope the government satisfies this, because it would be a factor for stability here and therefore in the entire region."

Western diplomatic sources here say such demands are a growing element in local politics and Azyed recognizes this.

"But it is not a burning issue as it was in Iran against the shah," one senior source said.

"The army has no problem maintaining internal security," said one independent source. "But if ever there were trouble from abroad, the most it could do would be hold the fort for a while until outside help arrived."

Faculty Wages Lag Behind Inflation

AUSTIN (AP)-Faculty salaries at state colleges and universities in Texas have failed for the fourth consecutive year to keep up with inflation, the Texas College Coordinating Board said Tuesday.

The board's commissioner, Kenneth Ashworth, said average budgeted salaries rose 5.9 percent this fall, compared with a 12 percent nationwide inflation rate.

He said the Texas inflation rate, however, appears to be even higher, hitting 13.8 percent in Houston and 13 percent in Dallas.

"This inflation rate represents at least a 6 to 8 percent loss for the year in buying power for faculty members," Ashworth said.

New England vs Dolphins Tonight...

Pats' Goals On Line; Miami's Pride

MIAMI (AP)-For the New England Patriots and the Miami Dolphins, it all comes down to tonight. With a victory, the Patriots can fulfill the championship potential that's expected of them. With a victory, the struggling Dolphins can salve the pains of a rebuilding season.

The winner of the nationally televised National Football League game will virtually lock up the American Football Conference East Division title. Both teams are 8-5. If the Patriots win, they will be one victory from clinching the title because they whipped the Dolphins 28-13 earlier this season. If the Dolphins win, they would need only a Patriots' loss to the New York Jets Dec. 9 or a victory over the Jets here Dec. 15.

"It's ironic that we've been struggling and haven't won the big game this year," Miami Coach Don Shula said, "but it comes down to us needing the one big game Thursday night. We're due in that situation."

In Shula's 10th season at Miami, the Dolphins are a sometimes unsteady mix of the old with the inexperienced. Ten-year center Jim Langer will be placed on injured reserve tonight because of a knee injury, and veteran linemen Larry Little and Mike Current both say they'll retire at season's end.

Don Strock, 28, will start at quarterback replacing Bob Griese, 34, who was benched last Sunday. The Dolphins are hoping that Strock, stronger and more mobile than Griese, will handle the Patriots pass rush. The Pats lead the NFL in sacks, while Griese, who prefers to stand in the pocket and pick apart defenses, has had less time to throw this year and has been sacked 21 times.

The Dolphin pass rush, meanwhile, has been punchless in recent weeks. Pats' quarterback Steve Grogan, probably the best running quarterback in the league, "presents a particular problem to the defense. He was obviously the difference in the last game," Shula said.

The Patriots have lost safety Doug Deaudoin and offensive tackles Dwight Wheeler and Shelby Jordan to injuries recently. Gary Puetz, who couldn't keep a job on Tampa Bay's porous line last year, is a new starter.

Injuries don't begin to explain how the Patriots came to be in a do-or-die situation tonight. Probably nothing explains how a team powerful enough to bury the Jets 56-3 and Baltimore 50-21 can lose to Baltimore, Green Bay and at home to Buffalo.

"We find it too hard to take the easy road," suggested linebacker Steve Nelson.

Tigers Try Vernon At Regional Meet

LUBBOCK--Coach Joyce Elrod's Snyder Tigers venture this way Saturday hoping for a second consecutive regional volleyball championship as the Region I Class AA and AAA tournaments get underway here at Lubbock High School.

The Tigers, 32-6 on the season, are scheduled against District 4-3A title holder Vernon, 12-1, at 11:30.

In the other Class AAA matchup, 2-3A champion Monahans (26-3) meet 1-3A Lubbock Dunbar (15-16) at 10:30. The championship match has been slated for 2:30, with the victor earning a berth to the state volleyball tournament.

Class AA matchups pit Perryton against Seminole at 8 a.m., followed by Fabens and Muleshoe at 9. Winners play at 1 p.m. for the regional title.

Tickets for the double tournament are $2 for adults and $1 for students.

Wilkinson Dealt Joker; No Longer Cards Coach

ST. LOUIS (AP)-Given a second chance, ousted St. Louis Cardinals Coach Bud Wilkinson says he would not alter his handling of the National Football League team.

"When I came back, I thought I would take this team to the Super Bowl and take it there with class," an unbowed Wilkinson reflected Wednesday night only hours after he had been fired.

"I'm sorry that I will not have an opportunity to take part in the realization of that dream," Wilkinson added. "I feel that progress has been made. I think we were very close to being a contending team."

The firing of the 63-year-old Wilkinson was announced at a news conference three games before the collegiate coaching legend was to have completed his second pro season.

"I have determined to take immediate action...in what I consider to be the best interest of the football team," said Cards' owner Bill Bidwill, who named director of pro personnel Larry Wilson an interim replacement.

"This decision was made when it became apparent Coach Wilkinson and I had opposite positions on the subject of our program for the remainder of the season."

Bidwill labeled Wilkinson's refusal to use backup Steve Pisarkiewicz, "our quarterback of the future," as the "catalyst" to the final breach.

WTC Battles NMMI Tonight

ROSWELL--Coach Nolan Richardson's Westerners, 9-0, will open Western Athletic Conference play here tonight, taking on New Mexico Military Institute at 8 o'clock.

Since Richardson took over the Westerners three years ago, WTC has never defeated NMMI in Roswell. The teams are 3-3 against each other. NMMI has also never beaten WTC in Snyder.

Stones' Back; Olympics Up

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)-Dwight Stones is off and running toward another Olympics.

The world-class high jumper was reinstated Wednesday by the Amateur Athletic Union, and needs only clearance from the International Amateur Athletic Federation IAAF to be eligible for his third Olympics appearance.

"The only thing that I care about are the Olympic trials and the Olympic Games," said Stones, who won bronze medals in the 1972 Olympics at Munich and the 1976 Montreal Olympics. "I'm happy it went the way it did. I can't make any other statements now."

The AAU Board of Governors voted 62-18 to reinstate Stones, who had been suspended June 19, 1978, for accepting $33,633.33 for participating in ABC-TV's Superstars.

The reinstatement goes into effect in 30 days if Stones fulfills a requirement with a written agreement with the AAU.

Fights Leonard Saturday...

Benitez Not Awed At All

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)-Wilfred Benitez is well aware of Sugar Ray Leonard's fighting credentials, but he is hardly in awe of boxing's current glamor boy.

"Remember, everybody says he's looked tremendous, but this time he's fighting a champion," said Benitez.

At age 21, Benitez is a two-time world champion who conquered Antonio Cervantes and Carlos Palomino.

He outpointed Cervantes, the legendary Kid Pambele from Colombia, for the World Boxing Association junior welterweight (140-pound limit) title in 1976. Last Jan. 14, he outpointed Palomino for the World Boxing Council welterweight (147 pounds) title, which he will defend against Leonard Friday night at Caesars Palace.

Yet Leonard is an overwhelming favorite to win the richest non-heavyweight fight in history. Benitez is getting $1.2 million and Leonard $1 million. In a real oddity, a parlay bet on Benitez and Vito Antuofermo, who will defend the universal middleweight title against Marvin Hagler, will get you 14-1. That means you can bet $10 to win $140 on two world champions who have combined record of 81-3-2.

Noting the popularity of Leonard, who has fought on national television 20 times in his short career, Benitez's manager, Jimmy Jacobs, called the 4-1 odds against his fighter "an emotional odds."

Benitez said simply, "I'm the champion."

The two title fights here will be part of a national televised triple-header with WBA light heavyweight championship bout in New Orleans between champion Victor Galindez and Marvin Johnson, the former WBC light heavyweight champ.

ABC will televise from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m.

"I think my ambition is to retire financially independent and unharmed," Leonard told a press luncheon Wednesday. He is well on the way to financial freedom, having earned almost $4 million in posting a 25-0 record since turning pro in 1977, about six months after winning an Olympic gold medal in Montreal.

But Leonard has another goal, one that concerns pride, not money.

"I don't want to be remembered as just a good fighter," said the 23-year-old resident of Palmer Park, Md. "I want to be something great, something special."

Snyderites Head For Tournaments

PLAINVIEW -- Coach George Byerly and his Snyder Tiger varsity basketball team are scheduled to begin competition in the Plainview Tournament here today.

The Tigers, 0-1, will face Crosbyton at 4:30 p.m. Winner of the contest will play a Lubbock Estacado-Lubbock Christian victor at 6:15 Friday. Losers vie at 2:15.

Eight teams fill the tourney, including Plainview, Palo Duro and Brownfield.

"We're ready to get started again," said Byerly, whose Tigers have not played in 10 days. "It's been kind of hard having 10 days off. You like to practice and play a game and practice a day and play again. But I think all this practice has helped a great deal."

The major benefit of the long gameless period has been to get late-coming football players tuned up for the indoor sport, and that has gone well, according to the coach.

"Our footballers have been getting into the swing of things and doing a real good job. I'm confident in using any one of them right now," he said.

At the three-day tournament here, Byerly said he would "try to play everybody quite a bit and get as good a look as possible at all of them."

However, senior forward Dayton Robertson is not expected to see action today, and Brad Richardson, 6-1 junior guard, and Keith Wallace, 6-0 sophomore Forward, may play only slightly due to ankle injuries.

Other members of the 1979 team are 5-11 senior Kyle Short, the team captain; 5-8 senior Thomas Selmon; 5-10 guard Keith McClain; 6-5 senior Brent Taylor; 6-2 senior Mark Preston; 6-3 junior Barry Blackmon; 6-3 junior Eric Arnold; and 6-2 junior Kris Seale.

Hood Keys LSC Team

ABILENE (AP)-Stephen F. Austin tailback Paul Hood and Texas A&I linebacker Andy Hawkins have been named the Lone Star Conference Back and Lineman of the Year on the coaches' All-LSC team.

The first team offense included quarterback Wade Wilson of East Texas state; running backs Tony January of Sam Houston State; Robert Poole of Texas A&I and Hood; tight end Steve Thomas of Abilene Christian; wide receivers Lonie Cunigan of East Texas and John Herrera of Texas A&I; tackles Greg Feasel of Abilene Christian and Steve Washington of East Texas; guards Eldon Wilie of Texas A&I Kevin Steen of Angelo State; and Randy Courtney of S.F. Austin and center Dwayne Overstreet of Angelo State.

Feasel and Overstreet were unanimous choices of the first offensive unit.

Hawks Waking Up With Strong Second Unit

By The Associated Press

The way the Atlanta Hawks' second team is playing these days, Coach Hubie Brown might consider making it his first.

"Our second unit, just like last night, brought us back with an outstanding defensive effort," Brown said Wednesday night after a 106-99 National Basketball Association victory over the Portland Trail Blazers. 'It's so beautiful to see Charlie Criss, that little rascal, open up the way he did. He's making the big splash for us."

Criss, one of the NBA's smallest players at 5 feet-8, scored 12 points for the Hawks coming off the bench.

"Charlie has some good skills," said Portland Coach Jack Ramsay. "Size is not that important a factor at the guard position. He can penetrate well and he shoots well."

The suddenly-revitalized Hawks improved their Central Division-leading record to 15-10 with the victory.

Elsewhere in the NBC, Philadelphia defeated Washington 120-102; New Jersey trimmed Detroit 98-89; Boston turned back Denver 119-97; Milwaukee whipped Indiana 87-79; Houston edged Cleveland 113-111; San Diego stepped Golden State 114-108 and Seattle beat Phoenix 127-116.

Sixers 120, Bullets 102

Julius Erving scored 21 points to lead Philadelphia over Washington for the 76ers' fourth straight victory. Philadelphia got strong support from the bench as Steve Mix, Bobby Jones, Henry Bibby and Jim Spanarkel sparked a fourth-quarter drive that sent the 76ers ahead by as much as 27 points.

The Bullets' Roger Phegley led all scorers with 22 points. Greg Ballard and Mitch Kupchak both scored 20 for Washington.

Nets 98, Pistons 89

Mike Newlin rebounded from a cold shooting first half to score eight key points in the final-quarter, leading New Jersey over Detroit. The Nets, who led by as many as 17 points in the second half, saw their advantage shrink to five as Detroit's Bob Lanier scored 23 of his game-high 29 points.

Celtics 119, Nuggets 97

Larry Bird scored 29 points and Chris Ford tied an NBA record by hitting on five three-point field goals as Boston whipped Denver.

Bird scored 17 points as the Celtics opened up a 58-50 lead in the first half and Boston pulled away in the third period. The Denver offense sagged with the absence of superstar David Thompson, injured in the second quarter.

Bucks 87, Pacers 79

Marques Johnson scored 19 points and Junior Bridgeman came off the bench with 14 as Milwaukee beat Indiana. The Pacers started strong, building an 11-point lead early in the second quarter before falling apart. The Bucks scored seven straight points to tie the game midway through the second period, then scored the last six points of the quarter to take the lead for good, at 48-44.

Rockets 113, Cavs 111

Allen Leavell, starting his first pro game, led Houston's fourth-quarter rally and scored four overtime points as the Rockets edged Cleveland. Leavell, the 104th player selected in the 1979 NBA draft, scored a career-high 21 points as he started in place of Tom Henderson.

Warriors 114, Clippers 108

San Diego came from behind with some great outside shooting by Freeman Williams, and strong rebounding to beat Golden State. The Clippers trailed by 16 points during the first period and by 37-23 at the end of the quarter. But they caught the Warriors and tied the score at 57 by halftime as Williams made seven of 11 shots in the second quarter.

Seniors 127, Suns 116

Gus Williams scored a career-high 41 points, powering Seattle past Phoenix. Williams tossed in 10 points and blocked two shots to lead a Seattle rally which wiped out an eight-point Phoenix lead late in the third quarter.

Before assuming the role of Tarzan in the movies, Johnny Weissmuller won five Olympic gold medals in swimming.

Once Upon A Time Returning...

Art Of Storytelling Being Rediscovered

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer

MADISON, Wis. (AP)— Once upon a time, people told stories.

Some of them taught lessons on how people should get along together, like Bible stories before there was a Bible. They helped explain things like thunder and lightning. Or life and death.

All stories were entertaining, but some were especially fun. These were the stories about princess and princesses, witches, trolls, dragons, giants, flying carpets, evil spells and enchanged kingdoms.

For these, you see, were the days of the old magic.

But over the years, there came to be a new kind of magic, the magic of books and newspapers and radio and television. People did not need the old storytellers to come around telling the old stories.

Oh, some people still liked stories, especially children. But there were only a few storytellers left to tell them.

Then a few years ago, young mothers and fathers began telling their children stories they had read or heard when they were young.

The children liked the stories, and some of the parents found that they liked telling stories at night more than watching TV.

Some parents liked it so much that they began telling them to each other. They began forming groups to tell and listen to stories.

In New York City, these young storytellers are people like Laura Simms, who performs before live audiences. Or Robert Rodriguez, who is blind, like the ancient Greek poet Homer. He tells stories over the radio, as Homer probably would if he were alive today.

There are also new storytellers like Nancy Shimmel, who roams the country in her white van, "Moby Jane," telling tales of uppity women in folklore.

The few old storytellers like Jane Farewell of Ridgeway, Wis., are very happy about all the new young storytellers.

"So many young people are enthused about reviving storytelling as a lost art," says Ms. Farwell, who has taught folklore for 35 years.

Two of these young storytellers, Reid Miller, 29, and Mark Wagler, 35, work mostly around Madison, telling stories at schools, libraries, hospitals, nursing homes and about everywhere they can.

"I'll tell a story whenever I'm asked, whether I'm paid or not," says Miller, raised on a steady diet of Pecos Bill in Oklahoma and later on voodoo swamp stories when his family moved to Louisiana.

Wagler, who has a Wisconsin Humanities Council grant to travel the state collecting folklore for a planned anthology, also has worked at seminars to help teachers develop storytelling techniques.

Scouters Set Annual Banquet

The annual leader recognition banquet of the Lone Buffalo District of the Boy Scouts of America will be held Friday evening, Dec. 7, at the First United Methodist Church.

Guest speaker will be Bill Waddell of Odessa. Waddell is a longtime scoutmaster and teaches industrial arts at Permian High School.

New District officers for 1980 will be installed at the banquet.

Tickets may be obtained at the door or by calling Thelma Deere at 573-6576.

Three Juveniles Held For Arson

HOUSTON (AP) — Three juveniles have been arrested in the investigation of a $100,000 elementary school fire.

Arson investigators said the three boys, ages 12, 13, and 14, were taken into custody after the 12-year-old sought to collect $450 in rewards for information on the Saturday fire at Alcott Elementary.

Wemken Acquires Snyder Nursery

Jimmy Wemken, a former Hermleigh resident who has returned home, has purchased Snyder Nursery from R.C. Eoff.

The official transfer of ownership was Monday. Eoff had run the nursery nearly 16 years.

Wemken is a 1971 graduate of Hermleigh High School and a 1978 graduate of A&M University. At A&M, he majored in horticulture and landscaping, and also has 1½ years' experience in the nursery business.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Doyle Wemken of Hermleigh.

"I would say being raised in this type of country, I knew where God's country was," said Wemken of his decision to return to Scurry County.

Eoff said he has no specific plans for the future, but after spending 37 years in the nursery business he noted, "I'm not likely to change fields at this stage of the game."

Saudi Students Moving Again

MILTON, Wis. (AP)- Thirty-four Saudi Arabian students came to Milton College after problems with townsfolk at another Wisconsin school. Now they're moving to a third college - after fights with American students here.

"It seems that the cultural bridge that exists between Middle Easterners and Americans is just a little too great for us to cross," said David Waters, vice president of the 318-student Milton College.

The Saudis, in the United States for a two-year police traffic course, will be sent this week from the small liberal arts school here to Madison, said Barbara Lewis, project director for the company that is training the students.

The Saudi students' departure follows a "beer brawl" at a dance Nov. 15 in which two Saudis were injured and four Americans were told to leave the campus for several days, college spokesman Linda Krupke said. The Saudis were treated for cuts at a local hospital.

In October, a Saudi and a football player got in a fight over the way two Saudis were driving, Waters said. The Saudis were "squealing their tires as kids with cars will do," he said.

Waters said the college and the group of young Saudi men came to a "mutual agreement that things weren't working out the way we both hoped they would."

He said that while the decision was a mutual one, "We (the college) were the instigators."

The Saudis had been at this community of 4,000 persons in southern Wisconsin since late September, when they left the University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh after complaining that townspeople there harassed them. The group arrived at Oshkosh last May for the first part of their schooling, paid for by the Saudi government and run by Systems for International Training of Chicago Systran, Ms. Lewis said.

"The students at Oshkosh were very good. But most of the people closed up to us. They wouldn't sit with us or talk with us," said Saudi student Ariz Hamd, 21, after arriving at Milton.

At both Milton and Oshkosh, the Saudis lived on campus but were not enrolled, Ms. Lewis said. Systran rented classrooms and dormitories and provided its own teachers, she said.

Master of ceremonies was State Rep. Jim Rudd of Brownfield. Four-H'ers Steve Smith of Yoakum County and Kim Reese of Terry County narrated the awards presentation.

Hosts for the banquet were 12 member-owned electric cooperatives serving the counties in Extension District 2. Welcoming the guests on behalf of the cooperatives were Jim Payne, general manager of Lyntegar Electric Cooperative, Tahoka. Chuck Senter of Dawson County, District 2 4-H Council chairman, responded.

Dinner music was provided by 4-Hers Suzanne Gillespie and Ricky Neal, both of Cochran County. Other 4-H'ers on the program were Lisa Zuber, Cochran County, and Sandra Mims, Hockley County.

Carter Signs Milk Price Support Bill

WASHINGTON (AP)— President Carter has signed a bill that continues the government's current basic milk price support formula for two more years.

But Carter warned that if the federal support triggers surplus milk production and a buildup in government stocks of dairy products at taxpayer expense, he will ask Congress to reconsider.

"There is currently some concern that milk production could exceed demand sometime during the next two years. It may become necessary to give the secretary of agriculture authority to adjust the future rate of increase in support levels, should supplies become excessive," he said.

The measure signed Wednesday allows the government to set its milk price support at between 80 percent and 90 percent of parity.

One study shows that 47 percent of unborn babies died when their mother was thrown from a vehicle but 89 percent of the women who stayed in their vehicles saved both their lives and their babies' lives, Mrs. Piernot reports.

Nixon Makes Freudian Slip In Interview

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It was just a "Freudian slip," said former president Richard Nixon.

In an interview Monday with KABC-TV anchorman Jerry Dunphy, Nixon was asked for his reaction to statements Sen. Edward Kennedy, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, made regarding American diplomatic contact with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Responded Nixon: "I'm not here to defend President Kennedy."

Nixon, who lost a 1960 presidential bid to Kennedy's late brother, John, quickly added: "I mean, uh, or I think he wants to be president at least. I guess that was a Freudian slip. President Carter wouldn't appreciate that."

Reaction Mixed On Carter's Handling Of Iranian Situation

By Sharon Herbaugh
Associated Press Writer

The United States must wait rather than send in the military to secure the release of 49 Americans held captive by Islamic militants at the U.S. embassy in Tehran, the mother of a former hostage said.

But a Dallas businessman believes President Carter should "have come out swinging right from the start" until all the hostages were returned safely to the United States.

"They (the Iranians) are using threatening tactics toward the hostages," said Arie Ruth Walker from her home in Prairie View following Carter's televised news conference Wednesday night.

"All we can do is sit and wait rather than harming them all by sending the military in," Mrs. Walker said.

Her son, Marine Staff Sgt. David Rogers Walker, was one of the Americans captured by Iranian students who overran the embassy Nov. 4.

Walker, released along with nine other hostages, was unavailable for comment Wednesday night, but his mother said she was "pretty well pleased" with the president's comments.

However, Charles Caldwell, who owns a printing shop in the Dallas suburb of Oak Cliff, appeared less impressed.

"It's a very serious, very difficult situation," Caldwell, 51, said. "And I agree the president should pursue and develop all avenues of peace, but ... the longer it goes on, the more dignity and self-respect we'll lose."

Caldwell, who called himself a conservative Republican, said the president seemed wrapped up in rhetoric. He also noted Carter declined at least three times during the 30-minute news conference to reveal his "other options" should diplomacy fail.

"Right now, my gut feeling is to send in the paratroopers, but that might be too strong. The worldwide situation is so much more critical now than it was 20 years ago," said Caldwell, a World War II veteran.

He speculated that the United States might resort to diplomatic isolation and economic boycotts in retaliation for the seizure of the Embassy, saying "Sometimes people like that only understand violence, and the Iranians have proven what they are -- rebels and idiots.

And it may take isolation and boycotts to show them we mean business."

Both Walker and Caldwell said they thought the American people have acted in a dignified, controlled manner.

Small Farmers Need Allocation Plan On Diesel

AUSTIN (AP)—Elimination of the diesel fuel allocation system would hasten the demise of the family farm, a Muleshoe dealer told a House subcommittee Wednesday.

Jerry Wiedebush, who said he has both Mobil and Conoco dealerships, appeared before a House subcommittee probing diesel shortages in farming areas.

Fuel shortages have curtailed harvests and delayed planting of crops in various parts of Texas, the subcommittee's hearing notice said.

Wiedebush criticized oil company allocations, which he said deny dealers flexibility in selling diesel to farmers.

"Mobil sets the prices and tells me what I can do," he said.

Wiedebush said if he loses a customer, Mobil will not permit him to take on a new one or sell anybody more diesel than he bought the year before.

He predicted a severe problem in coming months.

"No customer is completely out, but I am afraid this is going to get progressively worse. When the farmers get to doing their heavy work, tilling the land to put in their crops, I am afraid we are going to be in a sad situation up there," he said.

Rep. Foster Whaley, D-Pampa, asked why not simply put diesel on a "supply and demand basis and let the high dollar rule?"

Wiedebush said large dealers and large farmers would end up with all the available fuel because they could pay the price.

"The big guy would black market the fuel to his neighbor. ... It would still escalate the prices. ... The big ones are getting bigger and the small ones are getting out," he said.

Larry Webb, manager of the Bovina Wheat Growers Cooperative, said several farmers in his area could not get diesel.

He said he was unaware of any black market in unallocated fuel in his area. Webb said diesel could not sell at black market prices, reportedly as much as 30 cents per gallon above normal.

"Even though diesel might be available, it is not practical to expect a farmer to pay that kind of price and get a profit from his crop," Webb said.

Cold Weather Covers Nation

The Nation's Weather
By The Associated Press

The unseasonably warm weather enjoyed by some regions in recent days has given way to cold weather across most of the nation.

Freeze warnings were issued early today from the northern third of Georgia through much of Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana.

Below freezing temperatures frosted the Great Lakes and Ohio Valley regions, while sub-zero readings were recorded in the Northern and Central Rockies. Winds of 20 to 30 mph dragged the wind chill factor below zero in parts of the Mississippi Valley and the northern and central Plains.

Snow dusted the northern and central Plains into the middle Mississippi Valley, the Ohio Valley and the Central Appalachians. Heavy snow warnings were issued for sections of the Great Lakes region.

Light rain early today dampened portions of the Oregon Coast.

Temperatures before dawn ranged from 9 below at Butte, Mont., to 75 at Key West, Fla.

Some other reports:

Eastern United States - Atlanta 37 clear, Boston 44 partly cloudy, Cincinnati 29 snow, Cleveland 25 clear, Detroit 24 clear, Miami 73 cloudy, New York 42 clear, Philadelphia 39 clear, Pittsburgh 29 snow, Washington 42 clear.

Central United States - Chicago 25 partly cloudy, Denver 10 clear, Des Moines 22 snow, Fort Worth 36 fair, Indianapolis 22 cloudy, Kansas City 22 clear, Louisville 28 cloudy, Minneapolis-St. Paul 25 snow, Nashville 32 cloudy, New Orleans 45 clear, St. Louis 24 windy.

Western United States - Anchorage 38 rain, Los Angeles 64 cloudy, Phoenix 47 partly cloudy, Salt Lake City 15 clear, San Diego 59 clear, San Francisco not available, Seattle 43 windy.

New Experience For U.S. ...

American Ill Will Viewed On Television

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Suddenly, wholly, there is a new American experience: The unrelenting image of another people a world away crying a fevered ill will toward the United States.

It is a strange and frightening image, and pervasive. Television viewers are confrontred with the image from sign-on until sign off, in regular news programs and in frequent special reports.

The taking of the American Embassy in Tehran and the international crisis it precipitated have created a ravenous hunger of information, and the three major television networks have been obliging. ABC, NBC and CBS have demonstrated to varying degrees television news at its best -- live and on-the-spot with pictures.

Viewers subject to moments of idle curiosity might have considered the paradoxical matter of American correspondents sending home pictures of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini reminding his nation that America is Iran's foremost enemy.

Strangely, network correspondents are sending their reports to the United States from the state-run Iranian Television facilities. American television reporters have, for the most part, been unhindered in Iran. It's been suggested that Khomeini is seeking to calm American passions by distinguishing between the American people in his vituperations.

Thus, he granted interviews to ABC, CBS and NBC while refusing to meet with a State Department delegation. Former President Richard Nixon considers such actions masterful media manipulation on he part of Khomeini "He's crazy like a fox," Nixon said in a TV interview this week.

Ulterior motives or no, the relative freedom of movement accorded to American correspondents has made possible an admirable performance by all three networks. And the performance of ABC News, somewhat surprisingly, stands above the rest.

A bit of good luck got ABC off to a good start from the very beginning. ABC News sent radio correspondent Bob Dyk to Tehran from London as soon as the story broke. Dyk made it to Tehran, but soon afterwards, the Iranian government barred Western journalists.

Dyk and ABC were alone in Iran for 3½ days with fresh on-the-spot coverage. Although NBC and CBS made do nicely with footage purchased from European news agencies, ABC had a leg-up in coverage of the story.

"A lot in news is based on luck," said a CBS staffer. "We were literally on the next plane to Iran when they closed down the country to Western journalists. There was no rhyme nor reason as to who got in and who didn't."

By Friday, Nov. 10, CBS and NBC had crews and correspondents in Tehran, and all three networks were regularly feeding full coverage of the story to the United States from Iranian Television. Again, ABC excelled.

the perils of power

It is not easy to become a great power.

That not always enviable status is usually the result of a winning combination of a number of highly variable national attributes - material resources, favorable or challenging geography, population size, competent if not inspired leadership and more often than not some measure of luck.

Nor, once attained, is it always easy to play the role of a great power. It has its limitations, requiring at times a forbearance that can be exceedingly difficult to endure.

Which is the point raised explosively by the estimable George Will in a recent column inspired by the Iranian situation. Pained by the spectacle of bound and blindfolded Americans, he catalogs affronts to and setbacks for the United States in recent years from Vietnam to Cuban insolence and the fall of the shah and sees reflected in them a nation whose enemies think it impotent.

"Enduring the contempt of the comtemptible is just one severity that life has in store for a declining nation," observes Will with an uncharacteristic lack of cool.

That may well be true. It may also be more than a little premature.

Evidence of imminent American decline has been glimpsed before - in the "loss" of China, in Soviet launching of the space age with the first earth satellite, in Moscow's penetration of the Mideast through the Egyptian connection.

Today, the Soviet "victory" in China appears increasingly to have been of the Pyrrhic variety. When the subject is achievements in space, it is not the Soviets the world thinks of first. Egypt has swung back to the West and the Soviets despite decades of intriguing remain on the periphery of mideastern affairs, even in chaotic Iran which has not gone leftist but to the other extreme.

What Iran today and earlier crises demonstrate is less the decline of power than its limitations. Not even the greatest of nations and empires have enjoyed truly unlimited power.

Rome possibly came closest. But, unable to subdue the viciously disrespectful Picts and Scots, still had to stop short of the conquest of all Britain. A much later Britain, even in the turn-of-the-century imperial heyday, did not possess it, expending seven years and immense casualties for a transient victory over South Africa's Boers.

The United States may have appeared to have something approaching it after World War II, but that was an unnatural situation in an otherwise exhausted world that was soon to recover.

A problem with power is that often those possessing the super weapons and the biggest battalions find it inconvenient to apply them. But that doesn't mean that the power is any less real, only that the targets are not appropriate.

Raging at such a situation does not change it. Time, however, often does. Odds are that American power will be a reality when revolutionary Iran, the siege of the Tehran embassy and the Ayatollah Khomeini are footnotes in history.

If great power is not easily achieved, neither is it easily dismissed.

my turn

by john long

The slide has already started, I think.

The slide I am referring to is the slide toward Jimmy Carter as the standard bearer for the Democratic Party in the upcoming presidential election.

I recently read a wire story stating that Texas Democrats Bill Hobby, Bill Clayton, Bob Armstrong and Warren G. Harding are endorsing Carter for re-election.

I think it should be clear. Who wants Teddy Kennedy to head the Democratic ticket?

Why would anyone want a basically weak, indecisive man, a man who has shown little talent in handling the economy, to head the ticket for the most powerful office in the country? They want Carter to do it because they don't want a weaker, more indecisive man to do it.

When the choice comes down between Carter and Kennedy, many people will choose Carter, faults and all, because he is the lesser of two evils.

Kennedy scares me. Although his idea of a national health plan may be noble, I don't like the idea of having to pay for the sicknesses and illnesses of other people. I work to keep myself in top form, and I think others should do the same.

Also, morality and honesty enter into the picture. The worst one can say about Carter is that he has publicly admitted to lusting after women in his heart. He is bound by a Baptist morality that permits no dallying around.

Kennedy, on the other hand, has probably done a lot more than lust after women in his heart. When all the politicians, both Democrats and Republicans, say that Chappaquiddick is not an issue, they are saying that it really is by constantly speaking of it.

Among Democrats, the race boils down to Carter or Kennedy. What of the Republicans? Well, you can take your pick. At last count, there about nine of them in the picture.

The Republicans, though divided in their own ranks right now, will almost have to do better in fielding a stronger candidate.

After all, who wants either Carter or Kennedy?

For the first time since Ford I believe we are on the verge of seeing a Republican in the White House.

Carter, Reagan Win Straw Vote

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)- Democrat Jimmy Carter and Republican Ronald Reagan came out on top in a presidential straw vote at the state Farm Bureau convention.

Reagan took 40 percent of the votes against other GOP candidates on Tuesday's ballot and Carter got 39.9 percent of the Democratic votes.

Ballots were cast by 482 members of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation at the group's 61st annual meeting.

overextending charity

When the preacher in the pulpit or on television emphasizes what his ministry is doing for overseas missions every widow in the audience is led to feel that her contributed "mite" makes her personally important, part of a worldwide ministry.

And, after all, we are admonished by Scripture to "go unto all the world" with the Gospel message.

Thus a church "with outreach" is fulfilling its mission.

Recently, however, a new church emphasis on resettling Indochinese in the United States has further loosened purse strings in the pews.

You do what you are divinely guided to do but don't let yourself be used!

Americans generally are getting fed up with parasitism, are rightly resentful of the Welfare Cadillac, the professional unemployed and food stamps misused to buy booze.

Hard-working, behaving, dues-paying Americans have had enough of red ink on their books because of goldbricks on their backs.

Yet now we are urged to extend our charity to other than homefolks.

And some of the outsiders now inside are using our freedoms to demonstrate against our government.

Some bring with them old world ways in diametrical contradiction to ours. They buy and sell their teen-age daughters; they skin and eat dogs and cats; they ravage our fishing grounds.

Transporting them here is cruel to them and a rude affront to our own jobless.

Recent resentment against Iranian students flared into violence in some cities, resulted in deportation of many. That should be a warning.

There is no more toxic way to pollute our environment than recklessly to overpopulate it.

And there is no more effective way to subvert our political, economic and social system than to dilute it.

The import-anybody promoters, whether for mercenary or entirely altruistic motives, are playing a dangerous game with our already precarious balance.

Again---

When the preacher in the pulpit or on television emphasizes what his ministry is doing for overseas missions every widow in the audience is led to feel that her contributed "mite" makes her personally important, part of a worldwide ministry.

And, after all, we are admonished by Scripture to "go unto all the world" with the Gospel message.

Thus a church "with outreach" is fulfilling its mission.

Recently, however, a new church emphasis on resettling Indochinese in the United States has further loosened purse-strings in the pews.

That is not traditional charity.

Anybody we can help we should help -- but that does not include bringing them home to live with us -- or pretty soon we'd not have a home any more.

Now, if your heart tells you otherwise, follow your heart.

But don't let yourself be used.

Berry's World

"The tea leaves refuse to tell whether you should announce your support for President Carter or Senator Kennedy."

in washington

robert walters

WASHINGTON (NEA)— A former member of President Carter's cabinet talks about "literally pushing money out the door with a wheelbarrow." A Virginia congressman bluntly describes it as "a rathole that Congress must close."

They're both referring to the same scandalous practice -- the longstanding but little publicized tradition of "dumping" uncounted billions of taxpayer dollars in the closing weeks and months of the federal government's fiscal year.

The rationale behind that profligacy may be hard to accept but it's easy to understand.

Congress annually authorizes and appropriates a budget for each federal department and agency. In most cases, money that remains unspent at the end of the fiscal year, Sept. 30, automatically reverts back to the Treasury Department's general fund.

The government office that doesn't expend the maximum it is allowed also risks having its budget for future fiscal years cut by congressional committees convinced that the operation can be funded at a lower level.

According to Rep. Herbert E. Harris II, D-Va., the Department of Housing and Urban Development last year obligated 40 percent -- more than $18 billion -- of its entire annual appropriation in the final month of the fiscal year.

The National Taxpayers Union says the Treasury Department's own statistics show that in the 1978 fiscal year federal spending averaged $44.7 billion per month, but in September, the closing month of the year, "spending skyrocketed to $86.2 billion, almost twice the monthly average."

Behind those boxcar-sized numbers are individual cases of incredible waste and mismanagement. Some examples:

As the 1978 fiscal year drew to a close, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare dumped $184,000 into a highly questionable contract with a consulting firm to study waste in the administration of the welfare system.

The consultants' proposal was written in less than 24 hours and awarded without competitive bidding. Federal officials now are investigating allegations that four employees of the consulting firm improperly collected at least $29,000 by billing the government for 84 days in which they did no work on the project.

On the final day of the 1977 fiscal year, the Defense Department's Administrative Support Center ordered more than $119,000 worth of magazine subscriptions for the next year.

Three weeks before the end of the 1978 fiscal year, an official of HEW's Office of Education prepared a memo boasting that he had found more than $2 million in unspent money but warning colleagues that "we need to move quickly as these funds lapse at midnight on Sept. 30."

Among the suggestions offered (but later rejected) for dumping the money was a $60,000 expenditure for "remodeling of the commissioner's and executive deputy commissioner's offices."

In the closing months of the 1978 fiscal year, HUD's Denver regional office spent more than $87,000 for furniture. But almost a year later, departmental investigators discovered more than $65,000 worth of the merchandise sitting in warehouses.

Found unpacked in their original shipping cartons were 111 desks, 128 chairs, 24 file cabinets, 24 couches and 13 credenzas. The investigators concluded that the purchases were made "merely to exhaust fiscal year 1978 appropriation balances."

Former Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal warns that if some way can't be found to stop the year-end spending frenzy, it will continue to cost the taxpayers "literally a couple of billion dollars a year."

Harris has proposed one possible solution: Limit all federal offices to spending no more than 20 percent of their annual budget in the final two months of the fiscal year.

That approach might lead only to a spending rush at the end of the 10th month instead of the 12th month, but at least it's a starting point for a long-overdue congressional debate on the issue.

Back to natural fibers

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read your column about clean feet and shoes to eliminate foot odors. You didn't mention wearing cotton socks but cotton socks still can be found in some supermarkets and in large department stores. Cotton is much more absorbent than the nylon socks that are so common nowadays. We've had great success by switching to cotton for my husband's smelly feet. I wear my husband's cotton hose with slacks and my athlete's foot problem has been eliminated.

DEAR READER — It wasn't possible to discuss everything in a short column. However, you are absolutely right and I do discuss this problem in The Health Letter number 10-8, Your Feet And How To Care For Them. I am sending a copy for your use. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

As I mentioned in The Health Letter, I'm sending you, wool socks are also useful, particularly in winter. A frequent change of either wool or cotton socks, at least twice a day if you have a real problem, also helps.

Nylon and our synthetic clothes not only fail to absorb but, if they're closely woven, act to trap moisture which creates body odors. Since most of these fabrics depend on oil as a source of the synthetic perhaps we'll begin to see less of these and there will be a return to natural cotton and wool clothing which may have some benefits.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My 14-year-old grandson has complained of pain that he thought might be a rupture. His mother took him to a reputable surgeon who said he had a varicocele. He's booked for surgery to have this corrected. He's 5 foot 7-and-a-half, weighs 130 pounds and is very active. He rollerskates, swims, hunts, shovels snow and enjoys athletics so naturally he's rebelling at surgery which will require him to be inactive for five weeks. His mother didn't find out too much about the varicocele and there's nothing in my medical book except it does use the word tumor. Can you give me some more information? Is this surgery usually a complete cure and is there a chance of cancer?

DEAR READER — A varicocele can be thought of as varicose veins in the cord to the testicle. They can be quite huge. The large dilated veins tend to accumulate stagnant blood and this does interfere with circulation to the testicle and can cause symptoms in some individuals.

It can also cause sterility and one of the successful methods of improving the fertility of a man who has a low sperm count with a significant varicocele is to remove it.

The temperature in the testicle is very important in terms of producing normal healthy sperm cells. A varicocele can interfere with the normal temperature controlling mechanism achieved through normal circulation to the testicles. The reason they're outside the body in the first place is to help regulate their temperature. If the testicles are retained within the body, the individual will be sterile.

Now varicoceles don't have a thing to do with cancer so you can forget about that entirely.

Many men have mild varicoceles that do not require surgical correction. The decision has to be based on the examination of the individual.

Tale Of Snub To Black Advisor Never Happened

By BROOKS JACKSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The story told how Jimmy Carter's chief black adviser, Louis Martin, was snubbed by the New York Times and how the White House chose to ignore the slight.

In the words of a prominent black journalist, the incident "mirrored the ugliness of the coming battle between the president and Sen. Ted Kennedy."

It is a gripping tale. The only problem is that it never happened.

The facts:

On Nov. 6 the New York Times ran a front-page feature story on Carter's daily routine. It was written by reporter Terence Smith, whom Carter had allowed to attend meetings of his innermost circle of advisers for the purpose of gathering material for the story.

The trouble began with the photograph the Times ran to illustrate the story. It pictured Carter, his back to the camera, sitting in the oval office speaking to six of his top aides, who were drawn up in a semicircle facing him.

Also in the picture appeared a mysterious figure seated between White House efficiency expert Alonzo C. McDonald Jr. and domestic policy chief Stuart Eizenstat.

The Times had toned down one image. But who was it?

Jet magazine's Washington bureau chief Simeon Booker thought he recognized the figure and was outraged. "It looked so much like Louis," Booker said in a telephone interview, much later.

So he wrote a scathing piece in the Nov. 29 issue of Jet, a magazine aimed chiefly at a black audience, stating flatly that the mystery figure was Louis Martin.

Booker even quoted Martin as saying he was at the meeting and was bewildered by the whole affair.

Booker's magazine account continued: "Aides in Jody Powell's White House press office hadn't noticed the snub to their only black special assistant. The slight to Louis Martin was unprotested even from the White House."

But the figure was not Martin, at all. Fellow White House reporters had instantly recognized the "blob" as correspondent Smith, the man who wrote the story and who was sitting in the meeting.

Dane Bath, photo editor for the Times, said that Smith's image was toned down because the purpose of the photo was to show Carter with a group of senior advisers and that Smith is not a Carter adviser.

"We toned him down to detract from his high degree of visibility," Bath said. "There was no attempt to pretend he wasn't there."

Booker says now he may print a retraction, and blames the misunderstanding on the failure of Powell's aides or New York Times officials to answer his inquiries.

"They could care less... Who cares about Jet?" Booker said. Booker said Martin himself also was under the impression — incorrect, as it turns out — that he was among those at the meeting photographed by the Times. "I just thought I'd go with it," Booker said.

Stay Of Execution Denied Henry

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — The Florida Supreme Court has denied a stay of execution for convicted murderer James Dupree Henry, rejecting defense arguments that the death penalty was improperly imposed.

Henry's lawyer, Craig Barnard, argued Tuesday that murder convictions and death sentences are handed out more frequently in Orange County than elsewhere in the state. "No preliminary factual basis for the contention was presented to the trial judge in this case," the court wrote in a two-page denial.

Hopes Lighthouse Will Attract More Tourists

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Officials hope the old red and white Absecon Lighthouse, once a warning to stay away from these shores, will now draw additional tourists to Atlantic City.

The historic lighthouse, which has stood at Absecon Inlet for 122 years, is again open to the curious who want to climb its spiraling 228 steps and examine its long-dark lantern.

A new group, the Atlantic City Coastal Museum, made up of several local civic boosters, has reopened the lighthouse. From November to May, the lighthouse will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Friday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday. After that, it will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily except Wednesday.

Admission to a marine environmental museum at the base of the lighthouse is free. Adults pay 50 cents and children pay 25 cents to climb the 167 feet to the observation deck and lightroom.

The state Department of Environmental Protection owns the lighthouse, but the structure has been closed in recent years because of vandalism, lack of interest and maintenance problems.

Elizabeth Marsh, an environmental-studies professor at nearby Stockton State College who co-chairs the museum group, said officials hoped to relight its original Fresnel lens each night on the landward side of the city.

The Absecon Lighthouse, originally known as "Abscombe Light on Tucker's Beach," was built at a cost of $52,187 in 1856 and 1857 after several wrecks near Absecon Island, which includes the present Atlantic City.

The nearby wrecks included the sailing ship Mermaid, which went down with 145 people aboard in March 1779, and the Powhatan, which went down with 311 people in April 1854.

The army engineer in charge of the construction was George Gordon Meade, who later was General of the Army of the Potomac during the Civil War.

In 1817, the University of Michigan became the nation's first large state institution to be governed directly by the people of the state.

Stole Furters, Frank About It

By Abigail Van Buren

1979 by Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: While shopping in a supermarket recently, I observed an elderly, nice-looking, neatly dressed man pushing a shopping cart in which there were a few items. Then I saw him slip a package of frankfurters into his coat pocket!

I went over to him and quietly said, "I wouldn't do that if I were you." He did not respond, so I repeated the statement. He then took the frankfurters from his pocket and placed them in his shopping cart, and said, "Thank you."

Before leaving him, I said, "It wouldn't have been worth it."

When I told my family about this, I received mixed reactions. One said, "You should have reported him to the management."

Another said, "Why try to play policeman? You should have looked the other way and minded your own business. The poor man probably went to bed hungry that night."

Another said, "You took an awful chance. He could have pulled a knife on you!"

One of my children thought I did the right thing, but suggested I should have offered to give the man the money for the frankfurters.

What do you say, Abby?

ANOTHER SENIOR CITIZEN

DEAR ANOTHER: I think you raised a wise and compassionate child.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 14-year-old girl who's in love with a 17-year-old guy. He doesn't love me, or even like me as a friend, but we kissed in his car once before he found out how old I was.

We go to the same church and he sits behind me. Sometimes I catch him looking at me, but when I look back he turns his head the other way.

He told his best friend that he would take me out if I were a little older.

I've tried every way I know to get him to ask me out, but nothing seems to work. I really love him, Abby, and want him to love me, too. Please help me.

LOVESICK IN LOCKPORT

DEAR LOVESICK: Your feelings are normal and natural for a 14-year-old. You won't always be "too young" for him, but if you don't quit chasing him, you might be too pushy for him. Be patient, honey. Time is on your side.

DEAR ABBY: My best friend is getting married soon and I will be her maid of honor. My parents are invited to the wedding.

My Aunt Ingrid and Uncle Hugo have also been invited to the wedding. The problem is, my parents and this aunt and uncle had a falling out a few years ago and aren't on speaking terms.

Should my mother mention to the bride's mother that she would prefer not to be seated at the same table with Aunt Ingrid and Uncle Hugo? Should I say something to the bride? Or should nothing be said at all?

PERPLEXED IN MINNESOTA

DEAR PERPLEXED: Nothing should be said. Weddings are a time for joy and merrymaking. All past grievances should be checked at the door, the guests should sit where the hostess has seated them, and try to behave in an adult and civilized manner.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "WORRIED IN ROCKFORD, ILL": Don't worry about what to tell people. Your friends won't ask, and your enemies won't believe you anyway.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple do-your-own thing ceremony, get Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Shark Attacks Surfer

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) —A 26-year-old surfer rode a white-water wave to safety, then collapsed, bleeding profusely, after being attacked by a shark described as at least 10 feet long.

Hospital officials said Kenny Doudt of Reedsport, Ore., was in critical condition when he was admitted with wounds to the chest and abdomen, but was in satisfactory condition after 2 hours of surgery. He initially was treated at Seaside General Hospital, about 10 miles away, where a spokesman said he had a large bite on his left flank and some broken ribs.

Doudt was surfing Sunday morning at Cannon Beach on the northern Oregon Coast when he was attacked. A companion, Jack Bird, said he heard Doudt yell and then saw a shark "at least 10 feet long" attack him, thrashing around with Doudt in his mouth.

"The shark was pushing at Kenny and his tail was thrashing back and forth on top of the water. I started paddling and looked back, but couldn't see very much because water was splashing all over," Bird said.

After the shark released him, Doudt pulled himself back on his surfboard, caught a wave and floated toward shore, Bird said.

"Kenny rode in on his board after the shark attacked. He did it himself. He fell off as he got in towards us, and we picked him out of the water," said another surfer, Josh Gizdavich, 23, of Seaside.

THESE WIDE-EYED CREATURES are real night owls — or, more properly, owl monkeys. Unlike other monkeys native to the American tropics, they do their roving after dark. Because of the hours the monkeys keep, zoogoers seldom see them at their liveliest. But thanks to special lighting, these owl monkeys have recently begun staying awake to greet visitors to New York's Bronx Zoo.

Writer On Vacation...

Arthur Hailey Taking Break To Enjoy Self

By DIANE COPELON

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) - Arthur Hailey says he's taking a break from writing best-selling novels to enjoy himself for a few years.

"I want to quit now because I'm a little tired of writing, I mean physically tired. I've seen too many people wait too long to enjoy the fruits of what they've done. It's my time to reap a little," the 59-year-old author said in an interview.

"My husband said he has retired for at least a few years, so I'm not going to tie myself to a typewriter," added Hailey's wife of 23 years, Sheila, who has become an author herself.

Hailey, a British-born Canadian, came to West Germany to present the German language edition of his latest book, "Overload" at the Frankfurt Book Fair.

Later he and his wife, who has just published the German edition of her first book, "I Married a Best Seller," drove to Munich for an autograph session at a bookstore and a four-day Bavarian holiday.

"I've always wanted to visit Bavaria," he said. "I want to try the beer. I hear it's the greatest in the world."

Hailey, who lives in the Bahamas, isn't sure how many copies of his dozen best-sellers have been sold, including "Hotel," "Airport" and "The Moneychangers."

He said that before "Overload" was released in January 1979, "my American publishers estimated that 100 million copies of my books were in circulation."

"Pride is harmful, but I will admit to being proud that my books are in 30 languages and discussions for a 31st are under way," he said.

Hailey called "Overload" his most successful book to date. The subject is what happens when the lights start to go out.

"The United States is moving to a critical electrical shortage, which may happen in Germany and the rest of the world in the next few years.

"The accident at Three Mile Island slowed up nuclear development, and whatever you feel or don't feel about nuclear development, the effect is there and the shortage, which is going to be critical, will change the American way of life."

Hailey said he did not write "Overload" with a shock effect in mind.

"I like to be timely," he said. "My wife calls me a 'newsoholic' because I follow the news very closely and I seem to have a sense of what is going to happen. Things I wrote about in 'The Moneychangers' - banking, money, hard currency - are all coming true at this moment.

"If anyone can find a formula in my books they're welcome to it," he said. "I write a profile of a segment of our times, complete with technology, which like it or not is a part of our lives."

Custom Work Specialty Of ASU's Glassblower

By JAMES E. WALTERS
Associated Press Writer

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP)-For almost five years now Mike Wheeler has been Arizona State University's full-time glassblower.

"I only make things they can't buy," he says.

His current major project is a monster, 11-foot-long, 3-foot-high diffusion pump apparatus with approximately 300 separate seals and tubes. Some parts look like a half-size tuba. Others are only a quarter-inch round and a couple of inches long. He expects it to take a week and a half and estimates the cost in materials alone at $5,000.

As he worked on it in his sunny 25-foot-by-30-foot lab, Gerard Spinnier, a graduate student in chemistry, came in holding two small glass tubes. He looked despondent.

"Could they be put together?" he asked. "I need them badly for an experiment and somebody broke them apart when I wasn't around."

Wheeler laughed, sympathetically, and said sure.

"How long?" Spinnier asked.

"Five minutes," was the reply. Wheeler lit up a combination gas-oxygen torch on his work bench, turned the glass into molten putty, spun it deftly and so fast the eye could barely follow and, almost that fast, the two pieces were back together.

Wheeler says that's the way his days go. From major projects to projects that are major only to the requester, he likes to do anything that comes along.

His office is in the chemistry department, and he figures most of his work is for it. But anyone in the university can ask him for help.

Wheeler got into glassblowing at the University of Wisconsin, where he served a four-year apprenticeship and then worked four years before coming here. His father, William, also is a glassblower.

"I can't think of anything I'd rather do," says the son. "There's always the challenge of something new. Just about every job is a different challenge. I have my own shop at home, too, and my wife sometimes gets upset at how much time I spend there."

Wheeler never studied chemistry in college, but his knowledge of it is exceptional.

That's because most of the sketches he works from are not exact scale. To make certain the glassware does what's needed, he asks the originator to explain what the project is supposed to do.

"By now, I understand all the basic techniques in chemistry," he says.

Wheeler says that a custom glassblower usually has a lot of leeway since most dimensions need not be precise. As a rough rule of thumb, once the technique is mastered, the most complicated - appearing work may be the easiest.

To demonstrate, he took a piece of one-inch glass tubing, heated it, blew into it while twirling it, and quickly had a graceful swan.

"You can't hesitate while blowing or twirling, or it will sag somewhere," he explained.

Family Budget Danger Signals

By The Associated Press

Warning: Your family budget may be headed for trouble.

Here are some of the danger signals:

-Delaying payments a little bit each month.

-Charging necessities and little things. Using credit to buy groceries. Or pulling out a piece of plastic for a $5 purchase.

-Paying only the minimum due each month on revolving accounts.

-Using savings to meet current expenses. You should keep an easily usable savings account equal to one or two months of income.

-Letting debts pile up. As a general rule, your monthly installment debt - not counting the mortgage - should equal no more than 20 percent of your monthly take-home pay.

-Regularly writing checks for more than you have in your account, then rushing to the bank a day or two later to deposit money to cover yourself.

-Families in trouble can get help from local affiliates of the National Foundation for Consumer Credit, 1819 H St. N.W., Washington, D.C., 20006. The 190 local counseling centers listed in the white pages of the telephone book under "credit" or "consumer" work out budgets and help people plan extended debt repayment programs.

Pope Scoffs At Danger In Turkey

ANKARA, Turkey (AP)-Pope John Paul II has arrived in Turkey to advance the cause of Christian unity, but the Moslem nation's press was hostile and security was heavy after a death threat.

"Love is greater than danger," the pontiff said. As he stepped off his special Alitalia jetliner from Rome, the pope kissed the red carpet that led from the plane's ramp to a military honor guard.

He was met at the Ankara airport by Turkish President Fahri Koruturk, Premier Suleyman Demirel, Foreign Minister Hayrettin Erkmen and other officials. The weather was chilly and the sky was overcast with dark clouds.

HOW CAN YOU shoot an ice-skating scene without snow and ice? To transform an abandoned British airfield into a winter wonderland, producers of public television's "Love for Lydia" used tons of salt and granulated white polystyrene along with enough white sheets to cover a warehouse-full of king-size beds. Mel Martin (right) stars as Lydia in the series based on the romantic novel by H.E. Bates.

Contestant Wins Quiet Victory In Horse Show

PORT ORANGE, Fla. (AP)-The crowd at the Silver Sands Bridle Club horse show went wild when first place was awarded to a young woman on a big Appaloosa. But the winner wasn't listening.

Josie Meyer has been deaf since birth.

It wasn't until someone flashed her a victorious hand signal that she knew the blue ribbon was finally hers.

For Miss Meyer, 21, it was the end of a long climb.

A 1976 graduate of the Florida School for the Deaf and Blind in St. Augustine, Miss Meyer began competing in horse shows in the Daytona Beach area two years ago. She and her mother, Billie, moved to nearby Ormond Beach from Miami five years earlier.

Josie began devoting all her spare time to her two horses. Her mother laughingly suggested that it would be simpler if Josie just moved out of the house and into the barn.

Josie managed some fourth-and fifth-place ribbons, but no first-place finishes.

She toiled through six months of equestrian training under the eye of Julie McKean, a well-known instructor in the Daytona Beach area. Miss McKean learned sign language to help communicate with Josie.

"Sometimes we didn't understand each other," said Miss McKean, "but we both love horses. She works hard at it because she knows she has to."

Still, no blue ribbon. Even with her new training. Josie suffered a degree of handicap in competition. In horsemanship events, she has to take hand signals from a steward, making for a slightly slower reaction time than competitors who can hear and anticipate a judge's orders given over a loudspeaker.

She practiced more.

"She realized she wasn't going to win just because she was handicapped," Miss McKean said.

Which explains why the crowd at the Silver Sands went wild when Josie won her blue ribbon last month.

How does the winner feel? She grins and holds her thumb and forefinger up in a sign that needs no translation - the universal symbol for "ok."

Prices Hiked At McDonald's

CHICAGO (AP)-McDonald's Corp., which announced a cut in hamburger and cheeseburger prices last summer, has quietly raised prices on nearly all other products.

In August, McDonald's used a national advertising campaign to announce that it was lowering by a nickel, or about 10 percent, the prices on its two staples. On Nov. 16, the restaurant chain raised prices by 2 to 11 cents, which is a 5-percent to 11-percent increase.

The increases went into effect in all company-owned stores.

The price of hamburgers was not changed. The highest increases were in coffee and pie prices, which were raised 14 percent to 20 percent, and drinks, french fries and milk, which showed 5-percent to 10-percent increases.

"It is certainly safe to say these price increases are considerably more dramatic than the price cuts they posted this summer," said Robert L. Emerson, a stock analyst for Salomon Brother of New York.

Breweries Big Business In Belgium

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP)-Belgium - which still bans the sale of hard liquor in cafes - has about 100 breweries that produce more than 200 very different kinds of beer.

The involvement of this Maryland-size nation of 1 million in brewing dates back to the 13th century.

And it continues unabated. When Brussels prepared to celebrate its 1,000th anniversary this year, Artois - Belgium's largest brewery - brought out a special millenium beer.

If you order "Carbonades Flamandes" in Belgium, you'll get beef stewed in beer.

From the francophone cafes in the Ardennes hills of southern Belgium to the port pubs of Flemish-speaking Antwerp in the north, Belgians display a Breughelian zest for the suds.

In 1978, the average Belgian drank 125 liters of beer, which compares with almost 150 liters for the average German, the world's leader in beer consumption. The average American downs 85 liters of beer a year.

Beer's popularity in Belgium is helped along by the fact that no license is required to operate a pub, of which the country has no fewer than 50,000. But more than that, Belgian beer comes in dozens of varieties.

They range from the thirst-quenching pilsners to the heavy beers of the trappist abbeys.

Of the 15 Trappist abbeys in Belgium, only five still make their monastic beer on the premises and have the exclusive right to label their products as "Biere Trappiste" or "Trappistenbier."

The Cistercian Trappists provide Belgian beer lovers with a potent copper-colored or dark beverage, and their own orders with a handy income to support their philanthropic work.

Among Belgium's more unusual, regional, beers are the white wheat beers or the Leuven area milky-colored brews, the reds of the Roeselare area aged for 18 months in oak casks, and the sour-tasting Gueuze beers made in 16 small breweries just south and west of Brussels.

In the Gueuze brewing region, beer drinkers can also get a taste of Krisk beer, which is made from black cherries. In addition, Belgium has a variety of British-style beers, such as Scotch Highlander, that are brewed in this country.

The rising popularity of soft drinks and growing competition with foreign breweries has in recent years caused a slight decline in Belgium's beer production.

The country's 1978 output of 1.3 billion liters was 10 million liters below that of the early 1970s.

But although overall production is down somewhat, Belgium's small beer producers are experiencing a revival of sorts.

Statistics show Belgians are increasingly reaching out for more sophisticated, heavier beers.

Drop Peter Hamill's Column

NEW YORK (AP)—Writer Pete Hamill says the New York Daily News has decided to drop his thrice-weekly column because its sentiments were too far to the left and were "unbalancing" the paper.

"I was kind of stunned by the whole thing," Hamill said Tuesday.

In a statement to the staff posted Tuesday afternoon, editor and executive vice president Michael J. O'Neill called Hamill "a marvelously gifted writer and a great guy who produced many memorable columns for the paper. We hope that he will continue to contribute occasional columns or articles in the future."
