Producers Asked To Call Mission Collect If Screwworms Found

Knowing immediately where every screwworm case in the southwest is located has become so important to the eradication program that arrangements have been made so livestock can call Mission headquarters collect when an infestation is detected.

When a screwworm case is found, a producer should do two things: (1) collect about 10 worms from the wound, place them in water or alcohol (vials are furnished) and (2) report the infestation to eradication officials by calling collect to Justice 5-1646 Mission, Texas. No telephone call should be made unless a sample is available.

Following information should be available at the time the call is made:

1. Name.
2. Address and telephone number where producer can be contacted.
3. Date when samples were taken.
4. Location of farm or ranch where sample was taken.
5. Location of wound of animal.

Producers are urged to call day or night, whenever the infestation is found. At night or week ends, the information will be relayed to eradication officials, who will contact the producer for further information and instruct him to either mail the sample or hold it to be picked up by a livestock inspector.

From the information received, a determination can be made as to the action that is necessary. In many cases, a screwworm livestock inspector will be sent to the premises to pick up the sample and obtain additional information. If the sample is identified as a true screwworm, sterile flies will be dispersed in the area.

The key to the system is that a sample of worms be collected at the time the wound is detected. Without the sample, they don't know whether the infestation was from a screwworm or some other maggot, similar in appearance and characteristics. Screwworm infestations are at a minimum at present, but through prompt reporting, action can be taken to prevent the infestation mushrooming into a large scale outbreak.

Salk Vaccine No. 3 To Be Given 28th

A week from today, on March 28th, the Type III Sabin Oral Polio Vaccine is to be administered to county citizens, from noon to 7:00 p.m. at the high school gym. Everyone is urged to plan to take advantage of this third and final dosage of the vaccine.

The mechanics of administering this vaccine will be about the same as the first two: you just chew up and swallow the lump of sugar than has two drops of the vaccine on it; donations of 25c a dose will be accepted but doses will be given free to those who cannot afford that charge; and trained medical attendants will be on hand to oversee the project. The school will send pupils a class at a time.

This third and final vaccine for the prevention of polio is yours for the little effort it takes to go to the gym next week. In next Thursday's Success, we will also remind you on this matter.

Interest Running High In Whitten Well

The Whitten well, located about three miles northwest of town, has been the object of a great deal of interest all this week. On Monday it was the scene of the biggest acidizing job ever made in the county when 12 large Dowell trucks were employed to force acid and sand into formations between 6 and 7 thousand feet. On Wednesday morning when the hole was opened it was found impossible to run tubing due to excessive pressure in the hole. After pumping a great deal of salt water into the hole, the pressure was reduced and tubing was run. Late yesterday preparations were being made to swab.

The well has been a tight hole and no official reports have been released, but street talk has it that the well might be a whopper.

In the meantime the road from here to the well is being kept hot an ever increasing number of visitors.

(Note: This report was written Wednesday night. By the time this paper reaches its readers the well might be blowing its head off.)

Top fine wool lambs in the recent San Antonio Livestock Exposition were acquired by the Texas A&M College for use in classroom teaching & in carcass evaluation studies. The champion, raised by Reese Lutich of Fabens, is shown at left by Dr. H. O. Kunkel, associate director, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station. Earl Rudder, A&M president, holds the reserve champion which was raised by Roger Langford of Sonora. Both Kunkel and Rudder will appear on the 15th annual ram performance test field day program at the Sonora Substation on March 23rd.

Sonora Ram Test Program Announced

Schleicher County ranchmen are invited to attend a special ram performance test program at the Sonora Experiment Station on March 23, County Agent W. G. Godwin announced today. Visitors are urged to arrive at the station by 10 a.m. for informal talks and inspection of rams on test. Following a barbecue lunch served by the Sutton County 4-H Club, the afternoon session will be opened by H. M. Phillips, editor of the Sheep and Goat Raiser.

The main address will be delivered by Earl Rudder, president of Texas A&M College. Rudder's interest in the sheep and goat industry is more than casual, Godwin pointed out. His 12-section ranch in Menard county is devoted primarily to the production of fine wool sheep and Angora goats, and his selection program stems from research done at the Sonora station and the college's wool and mohair laboratory.

Other program highlights will include "Results of 1962-63 Ram Test," by Jim Menzies, station animal husbandman; "Nutritional Diseases of Lambs," by H. O. Kunkel, associate director, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station; "Lamb Carcass Evaluations," by O. D. Butler, head of A&M's Animal Husbandry Department; and a discussion of problems confronting the sheep and wool industry by Jimmie Powell, president of the Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers Association.

The Sonora station is located about 28 miles south of Sonora and just north of State Highway 55. Dr. W. T. Hardy is station superintendent.

Christian Science Lecture Next Tuesday

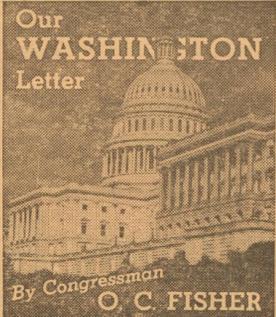

How scientific prayer makes true peace and security available will be the topic of a free public lecture on Christian Science to be given in San Angelo by Paul K. Wavro of Jacksonville, Florida.

On extensive tour as a member of The Christian Science Board of Lectureship, Mr. Wavro will speak in The Cotillion Room of the Town House Motor Hotel, at Concho and South Chadbourne streets Tuesday, March 26, at 8:00 p.m. under the auspices of the First Church of Christ, Scientist. His subject will be "The Revelation of True Security."

A native of Cleveland, Ohio, Mr. Wavro withdrew from business in 1942 to enter the public practice of Christian Science healing. He served as a Christian Science Wartime Minister during World War II. Actively interested in youth work, he was awarded the DeMolay Legion of Honor by the International Supreme Council Order of DeMolay. He has been an authorized teacher of Christian Science since 1949.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Etheredge were in Irving over the past week end as guests of their son, Billy Jack Etheredge and family. They returned to Eldorado on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert V. Graves of Brownsville have been guests of his sister, Mrs. Bob Bradley and Mr. Bradley. They were here from Friday until Wednesday and while here Mr. Graves attended to business.

By Congressman O. C. FISHER

An AFL-CIO drive to unionize all federal employees—some 2½ million of them—is gaining headway. Outside observers are a little worried lest this trend may eventually get out of hand. France is cited as an example of this danger. There the civil servants, solidly organized, are often able to call the shots on questions of wages, hours, etc., by threatening the use of strikes. If the latter weapon is employed they can virtually shut down the operation of the government.

Last year President Kennedy issued an executive order giving federal employee unions official bargaining rights and is believed to be preparing another order authorizing an automatic union dues checkoff system. Thus, Federal agencies would deduct union dues from employee salaries—if voluntarily agreed to by the employee.

This trend, if handled properly, would not necessarily be against the public interest—assuming that strikes against the government will be forever prohibited; but such trends in union activities have a way of always getting out of hand in power struggles among union leaders. And the trend lends itself to a breakdown of efficiency policies desired by agency heads where they come in conflict with union demands.

Already the Government employee union (AFL-CIO), numbering 800,000 members, is demanding a 35-hour work week, with some of them plugging for a 32-hour week, plus a 20-day annual leave privilege. Most of this agitation comes from those who want more pay for less work. AFL-CIO at its Miami meeting last month threw its support behind the "elimination of speedup practices now in effect" by employees in government work. Voluntary union activities, it used to promote efficiency, im-

Home Demonstration Agent's Column
By MRS. VIDA KREKLOW

For an hors d'oeuvre (called nibblings for most of us) that's different try—

Sweet Potato Date Balls

1½ cups mashed cooked yams
1 beaten egg
½ cup finely chopped dates
2 tablespoons butter pinch of cinnamon salt to taste.

Combine all ingredients. Chill and shape into tiny balls. Roll in finely chopped nut meats. (At this stage these potato balls may be frozen and kept until ready for use.) Bake on buttered baking sheet at 375 F. for 10 or 15 minutes or until browning begins. Serve hot or cold. Use tooth picks for easier serving.

The nuts take away the sweetness of the dates and sweet potatoes and add a crunchiness that goes very well with either hot or cold drinks.

Sweet potatoes are on the "good buy" list this month. Try some soon.

Now, while I'm thinking about it—let me give you Nell Dudley's recipe for "Lemon Chess Pie." Of course it is loaded with calories but my theory is that if you are going to break over the calorie traces, make it good and this is:

Lemon Chess Pie

4 eggs and 2 cups sugar, beat until frothy;
Rind and juice of two lemons
½ cup melted butter;
small dash salt.

Mix all ingredients except butter and pour into unbaked pastry shell. Cover top of pie with melted butter. Bake at 350 F. for 15 minutes and reduce heat to 325 for 45 minutes. It's good!

The American Bankers Association is getting a little worried about all of us from a financial angle. And what they offer is not a loan but advice. It's true, advice to a spending family is a little hard to take; especially when we've got our needs and wants and indulgencies all scrambled like we have.

Anyway, their advice is good; it makes sense and we might as well take it standing up; I have a feeling we may need to know about these things someday.

They say—
Don't kid yourself by figuring your total income. Get the taxes and deductions scooped off the top and see if there is any left. If there is—that's what you actually have to spend.

Decide what's worth saving and scrimping for and then stick to your guns.

Count everybody in the family. Let, mama, papa, and all the children know the true financial picture of the family. Much impulsive spending has resulted from a feeling of false financial security.

Use checks to pay your bills. Makes for a very simple bookkeeping system and your cancelled checks are proof of payments on your income tax.

Earmark a set sum for regular savings. The bankers say try to save between 5 and 10 per cent of your take home pay. (If any of you young marrieds wonder how this can be done just check with your parents—they remember the depression of the 'thirties.)

What makes humans so human? Figures released by the National Livestock and meat board show that about 10 million Americans eat this minute following the advice of food quacks or faddists. I guess we just can't help that streak in our nature that keeps us hoping that someday we will get something for nothing—or that we will be able to do a hard job the easy way.

In reality the person who figures this way is gambling with the greatest stakes he will ever control—his health. Rather than to get good medical attention some send for books, answer radio promises, spend not only money but hopes and valuable time—for misguidance.

In high school it's the girls who do without breakfast, eat as they please and in general treat Mother Nature pretty shabbily.

By the time these boys and girls hit college the story has changed. It's the men who abuse their health by missing breakfast, eating hamburgers constantly and trying to get by on snacks. A recent survey shows that only 62% of college men ate breakfast while 80% of the girls let the first meal of the day literally break their all night fast.

So, things have changed. We used to have to eat breakfast in the dormitories. Somebody checked the tables and we had three squares a day. Of course I will admit that some of us looked like it, too. But oh, we were a healthy lot.

One physician has put the health and nutrition story this way. Dr. David B. Allman, one time president of the American Medical Association, says:

"Good nutrition is not a proverbial fountain of youth, but it can help every American retain—for the longest time possible—many of the characteristics of youth.

"Good nutrition does not come overnight. And it is not a hit-or-miss proposition. Good nutrition is a result of a lifetime of daily good

Boy Scouts & Cubs To Sell Tickets

Members of Eldorado's Boy Scout troop and Cub Scout pack will start selling tickets tomorrow at noon for the Scout Exposition to be held April 20th in San Angelo and in which hundreds of Scouts from all over the Concho Valley Council will participate.

Fred Watson, institutional representative of the Lions club which sponsors both local units, reported this week that tickets were given local Boy Scouts at their meeting Monday night and that Cubs will receive theirs at their meeting tonight. The sale will get under way locally tomorrow.

The tickets are to be sold to adults for $1 each. Children are to be admitted to the Exposition free.

Mr. Watson reported that there are two "mystery houses" here in town, one on each side of the north-south highway. The first Scout or Cub to try to sell a ticket to either will receive a silver dollar.

Local Scouts, under direction of Scoutmaster Gail Mittel, are planning to participate in this year's Exposition by giving a Physical Fitness demonstration. All the Scouting skills, such as first aid, cooking, scoutcraft, etc., will be demonstrated during the big event. A percentage of the ticket sales are retained in the local unit treasury.

The Boy Scout troop is now in the process of re-registering for the new year.

The local troop plans to go to summer camp this year beginning July 7th when they will leave for Camp Sol Mayer near Fort McKavett to spend a week.

Austin.—A $3 billion budget bill has been passed by the House of Representatives. Before it cleared the House and went on to the Senate, the bill elicited several cries of anguish from some who protested agency bequests as too small and some who claimed certain allotments were too big.

Rep. Forrest Harding of San Angelo claimed appropriations for the State Armory Board and the State Board of Control were too big, since they involved $1,000 salary raises for executive directors of those agencies.

Rep. Terry Townsend of Brady claimed deputy commissioners in the Texas Education Agency draw a total of $14,800 more than the Legislature authorized.

Townsend also tried to cut out a $250,000 appropriation to improve the newly-donated Wheatley Ranch in Blanco County as a state park. He claimed the money was needed for established parks. But this move failed.

High Cost Of Flying

Another attempt to cut a specific recommendation out of the budget bill almost was successful.

Rep. James Cotten of Weatherford tried to get the House to "ground" the State Land Office airplane. He pointed out that $100,000 is appropriated annually for operation and maintenance of a high-powered Land Office plane.

Cotten showed a photostatic copy of the plane's flight log for the year ended October, 1962. He stated, "In a year's time, only 68 flights were recorded. Sixteen were test flights to familiarize the pilot with the plane before he broke the propeller when he collided with another plane in a hangar and then he had to take eight more test flights to familiarize himself with the new propeller!"

Rep. Joe Chapman of Sulphur Springs disagreed. He said that the plane is necessary for aerial surveys and photographs to confirm the 1941 state land survey.

Cotten insisted that the Land Office should hire commercial aerial photographers, as the Texas Water Commission does.

Cotten's amendment to strike out the plane appropriation failed by a narrow 72-68 vote.

Low Cost Of Education

Complaints about too-low appropriations came from members who said allotments for higher education in 1964-65 are too small.

The last Legislature appropriated $159.6 million from the State General Revenue Fund for higher education in 1962-63.

State college administrators requested $243 million for the coming two years. Former Gov. Price Daniel and the Legislative Budget Board recommended $226 million. Gov. John B. Connally recommends $225 million. Paducah Rep. Bill Healy's appropriations bill allows for $187.6 million to educate the bumper crop of war babies that is expected to begin to flow into state colleges next year.

Rep. Hugh Parmer of Ft. Worth claimed the Healy committee had slashed Arlington State College's library budget so drastically, the school might not be accredited next year.

So, Parmer and Rep. Don Gladden of Fort Worth begged for an amendment to raise Arlington's appropriation. It failed by a vote of 94-41.

The $172,000 needed to make the Texas Maritime Academy in Galveston a reality was absent from the appropriations bill. But Governor Connally said, "I have real hope of getting the Legislature to restore the maritime money." He didn't say whether he had any hope of getting the allotment for higher education boosted.

County Buying May Be Easier

Rep. Vernon Beckham of Denison got a green light from the House Committee on Counties on his bill to raise the amount a county purchasing agent may spend on emergency purchases without advertising for competitive bidding.

Since 1925, the amount that may be spent without competitive bidding has been $150. Beckham said this is unrealistic in the view of rising costs. He proposed it be raised to $500. However, the subcommittee set it at $300.

Reps. Henry Grover and J. C. Whitfield of Houston won approval from the House State Affairs Committee on their bill to require competitive bidding on public school purchases above $1,000.

Sales Tax Freeze Fails

An attempt by Rep. John Allen

of Longview to pass a constitutional amendment to freeze the state sales tax at two per cent and keep food and drugs exempt failed by a 72-64 vote.

However, food may remain safe from the sales tax if a measure by Rep. Ben Atwell of Dallas and Rep. Charles Wilson of Trinity passes. They have proposed legislation to simplify sales tax book-keeping for grocers. Since grocers have been the ones fighting for a net tax, this bill may satisfy them.

Tuition Raises Proposed

Representative Atwell picked up a recommendation by the Commission on Higher Education to double state college tuition, and filed a bill to raise it from $50 to $100 a semester.

Governor Connally has ignored the commission's suggestion.

Rep. Dick Morgan, Republican from Dallas, chose a good compromise. He introduced a bill to raise tuition to $75 a semester.

Children of members of the Texas National Guard who have been killed in the "cold war crisis" since 1950 will be provided free tuition in state colleges, if a bill by Representative Parmer is passed.

State Rights Stand

The House passed a resolution to ask Congress to call a constitutional convention to leave legislative reapportionment to state legislatures. Rep. Bill J. Parsley of Lubbock said, "This may be the last time the state can take a stand on what may be the last of state's rights."

If the proposed amendment is adopted by a sufficient number of states, Texas could insure a rural dominated legislature, despite urban growth.

Farmers and ranchers of the Eldorado-Divide S.C.D. are beginning to wonder if this spring will be dry like the spring of 1962. Since the rainfall was below normal throughout most of the district last year, soil moisture is almost as low as the drouth years.

It was during the last drouth that farmers began to put into action something they had been considering for years; that being, the drilling of irrigation wells. The reasoning was that even most good rainfall years there is nearly always a time when a good 4-inch rain or 4 inches of water applied from an irrigation well would increase crop yields considerably. Also, farmers had learned from experience that when moisture conditions were good at planting time, a good crop could be made even though rainfall was light through the remainder of the crop year. With water from irrigation wells, farmers could be assured that their soil moisture condition at planting time would be excellent.

The importance of each irrigation should never be minimized. However, if any one irrigation ranks higher in importance, it is the irrigation before crops are planted. This irrigation puts water in the soil that is available for crops through the entire crop year. With this in mind farmers should be sure they are applying all the water needed. Enough water should be applied to fill the soil profile to the depth that the roots of the crop will reach. By applying the water until full field capacity is reached, several inches of water is stored for future crop use. This is the water that helps prevent the crop from going into stress during the hot summer months when the plants reach their peak consumption period.

When to apply the preplanting irrigation and how much water to apply are two important decisions made by irrigation farmers. The amount of rainfall and when it comes following the preplanting irrigation makes it difficult to make this a 100% correct decision. If the field is irrigated to field capacity and a big rain is received just before planting time, planting of crops are delayed. However, it is impossible to determine whether or not any rain will be received before crops are planted. The only choice left for the irrigation farmer is to be sure the field is wet to full field capacity by irrigation water. The preplanting irrigation should be applied in time to allow the field to dry to planting condition by the time crops are to be planted.

The amount of water applied by preplanting irrigation should always bring the soils to field capacity through the effective root zone. To accomplish this it is necessary to know how much water is needed for the soils to reach field capacity. Three things must be known before it can be determined how much water is needed. How much water is present in the soil, how deep the soil is or how deep is the effective root zone, and how much water will the soil hold per foot of depth.

To determine how much water is in the soil a hole is dug and each foot of root zone depth is examined. Assuming each foot of depth contained 25% moisture and at field capacity it would hold 2.5 inches of water; approximately 1.9 inches would be needed for each foot of depth to reach field capacity. If the water was being applied to a root zone depth of three feet, 5.6 inches would be applied. Assuming that 80% efficiency was being obtained the gross application would be seven inches.

Information is available from the Soil Conservation Service that will help irrigation farmers solve these and other irrigation problems. The assistance of the Soil Conservation Service technicians can be obtained farmers and ranchers of the District in planning and applying soil, water and plant conservation plans on their land. Cost share in applying enduring type conservation practices can be received through the Schleicher County Agricultural Stabilization Conservation office and the Great Plains Conservation Program.

'Phantom Of The Opera'
Shows Tonight, Friday

Showing tonight and tomorrow night at the Eagle Drive-In Theatre is "Phantom of the Opera," which is in color and is the third film version of the Gaston Leroux novel which was written in French in 1911 and translated a year later into almost every other language. The actor with many faces, Lon Chaney, made a silent film version in 1925 which ranked only under "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" as the best Chaney movie of his 16 Hollywood years. "Phantom" was remade in 1943 as a talky in color with Claude Rains in the part made famous by Chaney who died in 1930.

Herbert Lom, a Czech-born actor stars in the title role in the current version which was made by England's Hammer Film Production Company.

The Hammer people are the ones who delight in the Technicolor remake of the horror staple of the 1930's, "Curse of Frankenstein," "Brides of Dracula," etc. As such, they follow the formula well: Lots of colored blood, startling entrances of hanged corpses, heroine Heather Sears being abducted along the sewer pipes under the opera house, the masked Phantom hiding his acid-scarred face until the finale . . .

Leroux's setting for his "Phantom" novel is the Paris Opera, designed and started under Napoleon III and finished in 1875. This building is estimated as having unexcelled backstage accommodations today and only ordinary facilities for the public, excepting, of course, the gigantic marble stairway in the foyer.

While a-building, the Paris Opera encountered subterranean waterways and had to go to the levels of four cellars before reaching rock. The fourth cellar intrigued Leroux's fancy. There he built in his mind's eye a hidden "palais" for Erik, architect and man with a past.

Erik's disability was hideosity. His face had parchment skin and was a gaunt as a death's head. When a youth, his father had kicked him off the Rouen farm because he couldn't stand the sight of him—as if it had been Erik's fault. After many adventures, Erik built himself a home under the Paris Opera.

Erik loved music, played a virtuosic pipe organ, and composed an opera, "Don Juan Triumphant." He terrorized the Opera management into reserving a box for him nightly, frightened the usher-maid into admitting him. He wore a protective mask in public, which, however, barely disguised his ugliness.

Then Erik fell in love with a young soprano, Christine Daae, and taught her to sing in his downstairs chambers. Before his death he enjoyed her kisses on his bony lips—"loved for himself" at last. When Opera House intrigue got thick, as it often does, Erik merely loosened the large crystal dome chandelier and let it crash havoc among the full-dressed parterre class.

Leroux's flair for making his stories read like documents or matter-of-fact press reports was a nimble literary dressing to this gaudy tale. It is loaded with the macabre, youthful innocence, supernatural practical powers and what have you.

The new picture by England's Hammer Films takes some liberties with the novel. The Opera of the new picture is not in Paris but in London. Lom's phantom is not a monstrosity but a talented composer disfigured by corrosive acid.

The Paris Opera with its four basements—the Paris "underworld"—has plenty of legends dealing with early Christians, with refugees from the St. Bartholomew Night's massacre and with the victims of the Revolution and the Commune. But now the haunted atmosphere changes to Covent Garden.

Texas is at last about to get around to paying tribute to some of the state's more famous and distinguished Confederate fighting units. The tributes will be in the form of markers or memorials erected at or near the site where the units were mustered into Confederate service and will be erected by the State Historical Survey Committee in cooperation with the Texas Civil War Centennial Commission.

When we learned that this was to be done, we asked Colonel Lester Newton Fitzhugh, the Dallas County Criminal Court of Appeals Judge who is probably the state's foremost authority on the history of Texas Confederate units, to select those commands which he considered most outstanding.

Here are his selections:
Good's (later Douglas') Tex. Btry.
3rd Texas Cav. Regt.
6th Tex. Cav. Regt.
9th Tex. Cav. Regt.
27th Tex. Cav. Regt. (Whitfield's Legion)
8th Tex. Cav. Regt. (Terry's Texas Rangers)
11th Tex. Cav. Regt.
1st Texas Inf. Regt.
4th Texas Inf. Regt.
5th Tex. Inf. Regt.
2nd Tex. Inf. Regt.
7th Tex. Inf. Regt.
Waul's Legion.

Colonel Fitzhugh bases his opinion of these units on his belief that had they been elements of the World War II American Army, each would have rated one or more "Distinguished Unit" citations. He also expresses belief that these superior units had several things in common. Among these were early organization, uniformly good to superior leadership, fortunate introduction to combat, acquisition, at a fairly early date of some sort of actual reputation, and an element of luck involved in the making of any distinguished command.

He says those units organized in the spring, summer or early fall of 1861 were composed of the best stock of volunteers and that the men who went to war with superior leadership had an advantage with which to begin. There were, of course, exceptions to this latter rule but there's no doubt of the quality of the leadership found in the leaders mentioned by Colonel Fitzhugh as having been responsible in large measure for building reputations for their units; men like H. P. Mabry, Walter P. Layne, Sul Ross, Jack Wharton, Dud Jones, N. W. Townes, Joseph Bounds, George R. Reeves, Tom Harrison, John A. Warton, Gustave Cook, A. T. Rainey, John Marshall, R. M. Powell, W. P. Rogers, Hiram Granbury, and W. L. Moody.

As for a "fortunate introduction to combat," the Colonel says that all those units selected with the exception of the 7th Texas Infantry had brisk early actions in which they got "blooded" without taking losses so high as to be demoralizing. He notes that green troops who have this happy experience tend to "swell" when it is over, convince themselves they are real "line breakers", and go into action the next time determined to live up to their, as at that time, self-bestowed reputation.

The chosen units early acquired some sort of actual reputation and Fitzhugh says that men who feel themselves to be something special will die to keep the distinction.

"Just being Texans, the only ones in Lee's Army, was good enough to make the Texas Brigade all that it was. And I'm convinced the 8th Texas Cavalry got trapped by a completely spurious reputation. They innocently adopted the name 'Texas Rangers' and the people of Tennessee, Kentucky and Georgia thought they were THE Texas Rangers. What could Terry's people do but try to live up to that?"

And commenting on the "element of luck involved in the making of any distinguished command," Fitzhugh points out that the Civil War is full of examples of misfortunes which wrecked the reputation and expectations of commanders and commands. He cites as examples Waul's Legion and the 2nd Texas Infantry which were never the same after Vicksburg, and says that had General Van Dorn been caught after plundering and burning Grant's Holly Springs base in 1862, it might have been the end of the Texas Brigade with him and Sul Ross might never have been governor of Texas!

In this foremost authority's opinion, the 13 units listed "went further, fought harder, and killed more Yankees than all the rest put together. Not one of them ever failed in any assigned military task reasonable within their power to accomplish. Most of them were fighting as hard on the last day of the war as in their first battle." "They, more than any others, carried the reputation of Texas on Civil War Battlefields."

RECOMMENDED Reading This Week: Monday was the publication date for the University of Texas Press "Federalists on the Frontier," the journal of a Union soldier who, among other places, served for several months in Brownsville during that city's capture by the Yankees. Edited by Nannie M. Tilley, the book is especially valuable for the observations it includes on things Texas: Texas Unionists, Confederate trade with Mexico, rumors of Rip Ford's expedition to recapture the city, and details of life in Brownsville. Almost a third of the entries in the diary are concerned with Texas, and we predict this to be one of the most unusual items to be published during the Centennial.

And we're quite excited over prospects of a book due next month from the Texian Press in Waco entitled "Gaines Mill to Appomattox," by Colonel H. B. Simpson, the Civil War buff who has turned out many superior lectures, papers and books with a War theme. The sub-title of the book is "Waco and McLennan County in Hood's Texas Brigade" and is the story of Co. E, 4th Texas Infantry, Hood's Texas Brigade in the Army of Northern Virginia. It takes the company from its organization in Waco in July, 1861, through the bloody battles of Gaines' Mill, Second Manassas, Antietam, Gettysburg, Chickamauga and the Wilderness and then follows the few survivors home again to McLennan County.

Knowing Colonel Simpson's penchant for sound research and vivid, readable style, we can hardly wait.

Reynolds H. D. Has Meeting On Hobbies

Hobbies can be expensive, but by exchanging patterns and molds, several buying together and getting larger quantities and looking at the different brands of the same materials, the costs can be cut sharply.

The Reynolds Home Demonstration club was told that when they met with Mrs. Wayne Mikeska, The vice president, Mrs. J. Tom Williams, presided in the absence of the president, Mrs. Charles Wimer.

Mrs. Lynn Griffin gave an interesting demonstration of molding and painting plaques. She had several different styles of plaques on display. Mrs. Vida Kreklow showed how decorative paper can be used for many items and be covered with clear varnish or shellac for durability.

Refreshments of cake and ice cream were served. The next meeting will be April 9 with Mrs. Lynn Griffin. —Rep.

General Telephone towns are on the move!

Port O'Connor Defies a Hurricane's Fury

In September of 1961, the Texas Gulf resort and fishing center of Port O'Connor suffered almost total destruction from Hurricane Carla.

come-back is another reason why we say that big things are happening in General Telephone towns.

But the proud, determined and energetic community of about a thousand people, refused to admit defeat. Today, homes, business buildings and fishing facilities have been rebuilt larger, more permanently and with a fresh, new look.

Yes, towns in our service area are on the move. Community improvements are under way, local resources are being developed, new industries are coming in. If your town seeks additional information about this expansion, we are at your service. Just write our Community Development Dept., Box 1001, San Angelo, Texas.
