FIRE SCENE -- Firemen soak burning embers inside this trailer home at 2111 Ave. N after fire blazed through the structure at 3:30 p.m. yesterday. It was not clear how the fire started or who its occupants were, though it was owned by Jack Dupree. There were no injuries. (SDN Staff Photo)

Reaction To Strike Effect Differs...

Air Strike Continues; Neither Side Budging

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government, its purge of striking air traffic controllers underway, says it now wants to begin "rebuilding the air traffic system." But the controllers believe time is on their side and vow not to give in.

The Reagan administration and the controllers union differed sharply on how many strikers have returned to work and what effect the walkout is having on air traffic and safety.

Determined to stick to its hard line, the government Wednesday began to fire those who had not returned to work. The deadline for dismissing the last of the 13,000 strikers was 11 a.m. EDT today as controllers report to their day shifts across the country.

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis said he expected to have a clearer indication later today of how many controllers remained on strike. He said at least 471 strikers returned to work Wednesday. While providing no actual figures he said 38 percent to 40 percent of the work force was on the job, including both union and non-union controllers.

Robert E. Poli, president of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, said the controllers remained united in their determination to continue the strike and said only about 3 percent of those who struck Monday had crossed picket lines.

The nation's air traffic, meanwhile, continued to operate smoothly, although on a reduced scale, J. Lynn Helms, administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration, told reporters. He said about three-fourths of the regularly scheduled flights were operating, but with some delays.

"The emphasis right now...is to figure out how we man this system and how we rebuild the system in the next six, eight, nine, 10 months," Lewis told reporters.

Although he hoped additional controllers would return to work, he said he considered the strike at an end, with anyone who not working by today's 11 a.m. EDT deadline to be fired with no opportunity for amnesty.

As the government began firing controllers Wednesday, federal judges in Kansas and Virginia ordered the first arrests on charges of disobeying court orders against the strike. Steven L. Wallaert of Norfolk, Va., was sentenced to 60 days in jail, and four union officials in Kansas were jailed until they promise to stop picketing or are fired by the government.

Poli, accused the administration of "the most blatant form of union busting I have ever seen" and told reporters the government tactic would not work. "It will not end the strike."

Some union members agreed. "If anything this has strengthened our resolve," declared Bob Cameron, a member of the Local 291 in Norfolk.

But the government also showed no sign of pulling back.

Lewis reiterated that he would not resume negotiations unless the union ended its strike. He said his attention now would be spent increasingly on implementing a plan to replace the dismissed workers.

French Citizens Stranded

PARIS (AP) — France sent another airliner to Iran today in a second attempt to evacuate 60 French citizens prevented from leaving Tehran airport.

France urged French citizens to leave Iran and recalled its ambassador Wednesday in a dispute with Iran that arose after France granted political asylum to former Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr.

Iran has demanded Bani-Sadr's extradition and has organized demonstrations at the French Embassy in Tehran.

Pilot Recalls Bombing

CINCINNATI (AP) — The pilot of the B-29 that dropped the first atomic bomb on Hiroshima 36 years ago today says he has never had second thoughts about the mission.

"Some people think I should have nightmares and tremendous guilt, but the answer is no, I don't. To me, it was completely impersonal," said Paul Tibbets, who has served as president of a profitable air taxi service in Columbus since 1975. He retired as a brigadier general in the U.S. Air Force.

Labor Talks Begin

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Labor-government talks began today on easing Poland's food crisis and a brief strike was held in the region south of Warsaw. A branch of the independent union Solidarity warned that some 1.5 million coal miners in southern Silesia might walk off the job.

"We should be optimistic and we hope everything will go well," Solidarity leader Lech Walesa said as he met Mieczyslaw Rakowski, Poland's top labor negotiator.

"We expect the government will come up with concrete replies to our concrete proposals," Walesa said. 'Otherwise, this beautiful weather will be wasted sitting inside these walls."

Clean Air Confrontation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is promising that its proposals to loosen the Clean Air Act could save consumers as much as $100 on each new car purchase.

Environmental Protection Administrator Anne M. Gorsuch introduced the administration's "broad proposals" for amending the 1970 law on Wednesday, acknowleging that the plan contained few specifics.

The plan's introduction brought about a pair of classic confrontations.

Environmentalists called the proposals vague and dangerous, and business groups said they would cut unnecessary restrictions but still maintain health standards.

IRA Bombers Strike Back

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — IRA bombers, ngered by the rising death toll in the Maze Prison unger strike, lashed out at authorities with a bomb olitz that rocked eight cities in Northern Ireland.

The bombs, planted in parked cars, exploded in a little more than one hour Wednesday, causing hundreds of thousands of dollars damage to offices, shops, auto showrooms and a hotel. One of the blasts wrecked a railroad bridge to the Irish Republic.

Police said a British soldier, a part-time Northern eland soldier, a policeman and four civilians suffered inor injuries in the blasts.

PLO Needs Part In Peace Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, urging President Reagan to open a dialogue with the Palestine Liberation Organization, says a separate Palestinian nation should be created as part of the Middle East peace process.

Reagan was reported to have listened to Sadat's ideas for bringing about an Arab-Israeli peace without agreeing with them.

Sadat said he told Reagan on Wednesday that he thinks the United States should reverse past policies and include the PLO in discussions aimed at a comprehensive Middle East peace.

The Egyptian leader is understood to have also told Reagan that there should be a separate Palestinian nation, something the Israelis have adamantly opposed. The Israelis also are against including the PLO in peace talks.

A senior administration official said Reagan didn't respond to Sadat, but indicated he probably would have a response at a meeting today.

The main purpose of the Reagan-Sadat meetings, the first between the two leaders, is to explore ways of resuming stalled negotiations on autonomy for Palestinians.

Summer Construction Surge Continues Here

Snyder's summer construction surge continued in July, brightening the prospects for a record year.

The city issued 25 permits during the month, covering construction projects with a total value of $1,767,247. It was the second month in a row for the city's building figures to exceed the $1½ million mark, and it pushed the total for the calendar year to $6,331,857.

At this time last year, the total was $2,893,844.

The July activity slightly exceeds the June figures, which totalled $1,557,200. Also, most of the July total came from commercial and industrial projects, while the June figures were dominated by residential work which included a 44-unit apartment complex and 10 single-family units.

July's biggest project was the Western Co. permit for construction costing $1,309,000. Other projects involving new commercial buildings included an office building for York Transport, $23,500; a new building for Bobby Ford, $30,000, and building for Bill Fisher to house a clock shop, $13,247.

The July permits ran the total for the city's fiscal year to $7,728,523. The fiscal year ends Sept. 30.

There were 11 single-family living units in the July permits. These included four conventional wellings and seven mobile homes.

So far this year, permits have been issued for 52 single-family dwellings, 64 mobile homes and one apartment complex to account for 160 new living units.

Prodigal Cockatiel, Australian Bird, Is Returned Home Safely

Mildred Hurst said she is just heartsick. Her pet cockatiel, an Australian bird, was lost for three weeks and she had given up all hopes of finding it again. But Monday, two men appeared at her door and handed her the bird.

She said she was so dumbfounded at seeing it again that she just asked the men if they had fed it and when they said no, she said "I have to go feed my bird," and closed the door. Now she wants to find the men again and thank them properly and even buy them a bird of their own.

Kal, the bird, was bought by Mildred and Don Hurst a year ago when it was still a baby. Kal had acquired a vocabulary and had a habit of staying on Don's shoulder whenever he came in the apartment.

Don said he had grown so used to the bird being on his shoulder, that three weeks ago, he walked out the door with the bird still there. The Hurst's watched their pet fly off over the top of the hospital and out of sight.

PRODIGAL BIRD— Kal, a pet cockatiel, seemed as happy to be back with his owners as Don and Mildred Hurst are to have him back. The bird was lost for three weeks and was returned to the Hurst's after two men found it in Roscoe. (SDN Staff Photo)

They worried over it because they missed him and because the bird had been raised in a cage and didn't know how to find food for himself.

They ran an ad in the newspaper for a week and had it broadcast on the radio asking anyone who saw it to call them. They received one report from a woman who read the ad that the bird had been by her house. The Hursts looked by the woman's house every chance they got, but to no avail.

After a week, they gave up. But two weeks later the two men appeared at the Hurst's residence at the Windridge Apartments.

They said they found it by the water tank at Roscoe and that one of them had planned to take it home. By then, the bird was thin and sick and it was possible to just walk up and pick the bird up. But the other man, a truck driver, said he knew who the bird belonged to because he heard the description over the radio.

The men called the radio station to find out Ms. Hurst's address and took Kal to her.

"I was so shocked when I saw the bird, I just walked in the house and dismissed those men. I feel so terrible," said Ms. Hurst. "Those men took time off from their work to drive 30 miles just to bring me a little bird, I just feel awful."

So, instead of looking for a bird, the Hursts are now looking for two men and would like anyone who might know who they are to call them at 573-0087.

It may surprise some people that residents of Bryant Pond, Me., do not want dial telephones.

According to reports on the news wire, Bryant Pond still has the old-fashioned "crank" phones. For the benefit of those who do not remember pre-World War II communications facilities, a crank phone had to be cranked to alert the operator, who, in turn, had to connect you with the telephone you were calling, regardless of whether it was around the corner or across the country.

The crank phones apparently are still getting the job done in Bryant Pond. And we suspect that the people there are fully cognizant of the fact that their telephone system is regarded as pretty much of a novelty in this modern age.

The fact that an operator participates in each call is something unusual now. And the fact that a caller must "ring her up" for every call is even more unusual.

The disappearance of operators may save a lot of time on millions of routine calls, but there can be situations when an operator is a valuable aassistant, especially around a newspaper office. In earlier days, before the dial instruments came into widespread use, if a reporter needed to "call a list," and they were not too busy at the telephone office, they might let an operator stay with you continuously until you completed the list.

And, even after the dial phones came, the long distance operators helped solve many problems for the newsroom, especially in tracking down people. If a reporter needed to get in touch with an individual in another city, usually, all he needed to tell the operator was the person's name, the city he or she might be in, and, if available, his or her occupation.

For example, you could tell an LD operator that you needed to talk to Johnny Jim Jonesmith, a crackerjack salesman believed to be attending a convention in some hotel in Chicago. Usually, within minutes, an alert LD operator would have your man on the phone.

★ ★ ★

Dial phones with area codes and long distance dialing are handy, of course, if you have all of the preliminary information at hand, but if nobody answers on the other end and you don't know another source, you are licked. Somehow, those long distance operators seemed to know how to track down people with a minimum of information.

Redistricting Vote Expected...

House Committee To Convene

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Speaker Bill Clayton says he is convinced Gov. Bill Clements would veto a loyalist Democrat redistricting bill that would deny Republicans an increase in their share of the Texas congressional delegation.

The House redistricting committee was expected to convene today to vote on a bill, which it amended Wednesday to eliminate virtually any chance of GOP gains.

Clayton told reporters he showed Clements a plan for Dallas similar to the one before the committee.

"He did look at it. I was informed this morning that it was not acceptable and that he would veto that plan," Clayton said.

The plan provides what Clements said he wanted, a Dallas district in which a black would have a chance to be elected congressman. But it lacks one major feature of the Senate-passed redistricting bill, which Clements endorsed. It does not convert a Democratic district in Dallas, now represented by liberal Congressman Jim Mattox, to a GOP district.

The committee proposal, offered by Rep. Paul Ragsdale, D-Dallas, not only leaves all Democratic districts as they are. It also changes the district of U.S. Rep. Ron Paul, R-Lake Jackson, from Republican to Democrat.

Clements told reporters he predicted "progress" on redistricting in the next day or so, was "still optimistic" and continued to favor the measure passed by the Senate.

The Senate's plan boosts the probable number of Republican congressmen from Texas from five to seven. Democrats would have 20 seats.

Clayton said he probably would have a plan of his own for the House to consider. It probably would be similar to the Senate's, since the speaker says he wants to avoid an impasse that would require a conference committee to attempt to draft a final bill.

Members of the House Democratic Caucus, led by its chairman, Rep. Bob Bush, D-Sherman, worked to get a Senate majority to sign onto the Ragsdale bill.

Bush said guaranteed Senate acceptance would improve the chances of passing the hardcore Democrats' bill through the House.

Clayton said that was all very well, but a veto would await the Ragsdale bill.

He and Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, D-Goliad, chairman of the redistricting committee, fed the notion that Clements might not call another special session if he vetoed a remap proposal. That probably would give the redistricting task to a federal court. But Clements has made no public statement that he would be willing to let the courts draw new districts.

The Ragsdale plan would take two counties, Ellis and Navarro, from Congressman Phil Gramm of College Station — who achieved national attention for helping President Reagan pass his budget cut bills. Ellis and Navarro, along with Henderson County and part of Kaufman County would go into the district represented by Congressman Martin Frost of Dallas.

Clayton said his only real objection to the Ragsdale plan "is what it does to Phil Gramm." But he acknowledged Gramm could win in his proposed district.

The 1980 census boosted Texas' congressional delegation from 24 to 27. The Ragsdale plan would cut two of the new districts in predominantly Democratic South Texas and East Harris County. The third would go to an area between Dallas and Fort Worth, which probably would go Republican. But that Republican gain would be offset by the loss of Ron Paul.

Emmy Selections To Be Announced

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Nominations for the 33rd annual Emmy awards were being announced today, with a large share expected to go to "Playing For Time," "Masada" and "East of Eden."

Acting nominations seem certain to go to Peter Strauss for his roles in ABC's "Masada" and "A Whale for the Killing," Peter O'Toole for "Masada," Vanessa Redgrave for CBS's "Playing for Time" and Jane Seymour for ABC's "East of Eden."

The nominations were to be announced at a news conference at the Pasadena Civic Auditorium, where CBS will telecast the awards presentation on Sunday, Sept. 13. Six stars representing the three major networks were to make the announcements.

Up to five nominees and ties in each category will be selected. The winners will be judged by blue ribbon panels of peers on the weekend of Aug. 22-23. The winners will be announced at the telecast or at the creative crafts awards banquet the Saturday evening preceding the ceremonies. The Sunday telecast will be followed by the Governors Ball at the Century Plaza Hotel.

Youth Slated For '81 Rally

Some 150 area youth are expected to participate in the Snyder Outreach '81, a youth rally that begins tonight at the East Side Church of Christ.

Registration will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. Friday. Activities will be held starting at 9 a.m. Saturday. The youth will then be in charge of Sunday services at East Side. Classes begin at 9:30 a.m. and worship at 10:30 a.m.

The youth rally is a joint effort of the young people of East Side and 37th Street congregations in Snyder. The forum is under the direction of the elders at East Side.

Theme for the event is "In Him and Through Him, I Know Who I Am." All ages are invited to attend.

at wits end

A group of women were discussing the draft the other night and we decided if we were invited to a war, we could jolly well have the imagination to think of some way to terminate it.

I suggested the best way to stop a war was to ask the men directions on how to get there. We'd never find it.

As the suggestions flowed in, we decided to make a list.

1. Let Tim Conway make a series out of it and it would run only 13 weeks.

2. Put the war in the hands of the post office. It might not stop it, but it would certainly slow it down.

3. Assign children to war zones and tell them they have to clean their rooms before they can go.

4. Tell your husband it's something he has to dress up for.

5. Transport troops via Amtrak.

6. Have one-size-fits-all uniforms that are issued in little eggs.

7. Schedule it on the same night Alan Alda is speaking to your child study group.

8. Spread the rumor hair bleach will be in short supply until the war is over.

9. Tell them the other side is fighting with a cellulite germ that makes thighs inflate upon impact.

Probably the best suggestion came from Barb, whose son graduated from high school and left home for the first time to join the Marine Corps. When he came home on leave he wasn't in the house five minutes before he engaged in a knock-down-drag-out fight with his 15-year-old brother.

Barb grabbed a large wooden spoon, jumped between them, and gave them a look that would get her 30 years.

They separated and backed off. Barb figures the only way to end a war is to draft experienced mothers, arm them with wooden spoons and "the look" and send them into battle.

You haven't seen desertion until you've seen children running from their mothers' tongues. You think they can stand hearing, "What do you think you're doing? Don't you have anything more constructive to do? I'll give you something to do. Now, put that gun down before someone gets hurt!"

Ridiculous, you say? Not half as ridiculous as wars.

Your Birthday

August 7, 1981

Before launching new projects or enterprises this year, first finish what you've already started. Your chances for success are best where you've already done the spadework.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Outsiders are likely to find you very easy to get along with today, but this may not be true of family members. Keep the peace at home as well. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Beware of a tendency today to overreact when you feel others have wronged you. There's a strong possibility you'll read more into things than were intended.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Financial conditions are likely to be mixed for you today. Through carelessness or extravagance, losses could overpower the gains.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Plan your moves carefully today. If you don't, there's a strong chance you will do things the hard way and goals which could be achieved won't be.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Usually you're the type who readily forgives and forgets, but today your actions toward another could be influenced by an old grudge.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Even if invited today, think twice before poking your nose into a friend's confidential affairs. You could be drawn into a very complicated morass.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Associates or companions could turn out to be more of a hindrance than a help today. When it comes to getting important things done, go it alone.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You could spend more time today talking about what you intend to do than in doing it. Produce first and let the results speak for themselves.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be careful about becoming involved in things today where control is mostly in the hands of others rather than in your own. Protect your interests.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your mate may be just as determined today to have his or her way as you are. An impasse will result unless someone gives.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Coworkers might not perform up to your expectations today, but it will only create more trouble if you come down on them too heavily. Set a good example instead.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't take risks today that could put something you value in jeopardy. This could pertain to a relationship as well as to material possessions.

Fruit Flies Are Found In Florida

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Shook by the discovery of three Mediterranean fruit flies in a backyard tree, officials began an intense hunt for more flies and sought to restrict California imports to save Florida's $4 billion-a-year produce industry.

"This is what our concern has been since we knew about the infestation in California a year ago — that it would leak out of that state and begin to affect our citrus industry," Gov. Bob Graham said Wednesday.

California officials weren't so sure that the destructive flies, the first found in Florida since 1963, came from California.

But Florida Attorney General Jim Smith said Wednesday that he would ask U.S. District Judge Lynn Higby of Panama City to rescind his order of last month lifting Florida's stringent quarantine of California produce. A federal judge in Dallas also lifted Texas' blockade, but Texas is checking California produce at borders anyway.

The three dead flies found in a trap near Tampa were delivered by hand to Los Gatos, Calif., Wednesday so they could be tested to determine whether they had been capable of reproducing. Results from the test were expected today.

"I'm frankly not optimistic that they're going to be sterile," said Jerry Scribner, director of California's medfly project.

California has been releasing sterile fruit flies to interrupt the breeding cycle of the flies infesting fruit and vegetables in three residential counties south of San Francisco.

Graham said he supported the use of "the most effective actions available to us, which is aerial spraying" of the pesticide malathion if the flies were found to have been fertile.

Gov. Edmund Brown of California at first balked at aerial spraying when fruit flies were discovered there but ordered it July 9 after the federal government threatened to quarantine the entire state.

The three fruit flies — two males and a female — were found Tuesday by a U.S. Agriculture Department inspector. They were in a cardboard trap set in a calamondin tree about 15 miles from Polk County, the heart of Florida's citrus belt and responsible for 25 percent of the state's citrus harvest — more than the combined production of Texas, Arizona and California. Calamondin is a bitter citrus fruit used for making jam.

Florida used malathion spraying to wipe out medfly infestations from 1956 through 1958 and again in 1962 and 1963.

England To Expel Soviet Secretary

LONDON (AP) — The government is expelling a second secretary of the Soviet Embassy, Victor Lazine, from Britain for "activities incompatible with his status as a diplomat," the Foreign Office said. A spokesman refused to say whether he had been spying, saying only, "Draw your own conclusions."

Lazine has been at the embassy for four years and is the first Soviet diplomat to be expelled from Britain in 10 years. In 1971, the British government sent 105 Soviet personnel out of the country during a crackdown on espionage.

Mobile Home Fire Razes

A trailer house at 2111 Ave. N was gutted by fire at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday. Alan Martinez, 12, an eyewitness, said he saw a young boy who lived in the trailer running out of the house with a puppy in his arms shortly after the blaze started.

The trailer was owned by Jack Dupree but was being rented by an unidentified person. The boy was believed to be alone in the house when the fire started.

Alan said his mother called the fire department. His father said he entered the house to see if he could put the fire out but ran back out when the flames and smoke billowed up.

Drug Charge Earns Fine

Benito B. Ramon, charged with possession of more than four ounces of marijuana, was fined $1,500 and given five years probation in 132nd District Court proceedings Tuesday. Judge Wayland G. Holt presided.

Wednesday, Stanley Hendricks was fined $250 and given three years probation for theft by check.

OBITUARIES

D. C. Jones

Funeral service has been set for 2 p. m. Friday in the Bell-Seale Chapel here for D. C. Jones, 53, who died at 9:55 a. m. Wednesday in Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

Mr. Jones, a lease operator for Amerada-Hess in the Lake Thomas area of Southwest Scurry County, had been hospitalized Tuesday after he was bitten by a rattlesnake on the lease. He reportedly suffered several bites by a large rattlesnake on an arm and hand.

His son, the Rev. Rick Jones, pastor of First Assembly of God Church in Big Spring, will officiate at the funeral rites. He will be assisted by the Rev. Richard Owen, pastor of Bethel Assembly of God Church in Snyder, who is Mr. Jones' son-in-law. Mr. Jones himself had been an Assembly of God minister for 30 years, and he maintained membership in both the Big Spring and Snyder churches.

Burial will be in Hillside Memorial Gardens, with the Rev. James R. Jackson, pastor of First Assembly of God Church in Snyder, conducting rites at the graveside.

Surviving are his wife, Laura of the home; a daughter, Dianna Owen of Snyder; a son, the Rev. Rick Jones of Big Spring; his mother, Mrs. Lottie Teague of Cross Plains; a sister, Allie Gayle Price of Lake Whitney; and two brothers, Allen Teague of Brownwood and Bill Teague of Abilene.

Lunch for the family will be served at 11:30 a. m. Friday in the fellowship hall at Bethel Assembly of God Church.

TEC Plans Advisory Council

The Snyder office of the Texas Employment Commission is making every effort to comply with the provisions of Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, dealing with discrimination on the basis of being handicapped.

"For that reason, the commission has established an advisory council for the Texas offices of TEC," Jerre Howard, acting office manager, said. "This council's function is to assure that our agency complies in every possible way with the Rehabilitation Act of 1973."

A major function of the council, said Ms. Howard, is to provide an avenue for correcting deficiencies and continuing established policies for promotion of handicapped employees and applicants.

The advisory council, located in Austin, is chaired by Jimmie Dee Jones of the TEC tax department, and includes four handicapped employees. Complaints, however, are directed through TEC administrative channels for action.

Clif Mahoney acts as advisor for the commission in this respect and urges those who have problems relative to the Rehabilitation Act to make them known so that TEC can take appropriate action wherever possible.

Rocket Explodes During Engine Test

MATAGORDA ISLAND, Texas (AP) — A roaring ball of flame and smoke from an exploding rocket hurled 200 feet in the air signaled at least a months-long setback for a group of Texas entrepreneurs trying to launch a private enterprise age in space.

No one was injured when the 53-foot Percheron rocket exploded on the launch pad shortly before 5 p.m. Wednesday as engineers attempted a five-second test burn of the missile.

"The instant the engine started, I knew we had lost it," chief engineer Gary C. Hudson, chief engineer said Wednesday.

"We saw flame from the ignition, (and) it was considerably too orange," Hudson said. "It's supposed to be nearly white-orange."

Ironically, Hudson predicted earlier Wednesday the often-delayed test of the million-dollar rocket would fail.

"We knew they (preparations) were going to go like this. The odds are easily nine in 10 that it won't work ... that it will blow up," he said.

Wednesday's engine firing was the first test of the rocket Space Services Inc. hoped one day to use to launch satellites into orbit at prices below rates charged by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Hudson said officials weren't sure what caused the rocket to explode, but Space Services Inc. vice president Charles Chafer said engineers speculated a jammed propellant valve may have triggered the blast.

Chafer said the valve, designed to allow liquid oxygen and kerosene fuel to mix in the chamber, apparenly jammed preventing the mixture.

He said the ignition command caused the kerosene to explode, blowing the engine to one side of the orange launch pad and parts of the rocket 200 feet into the air.

Chafer said the engine appeared to be relatively undamaged and that the company planned to proceed with its testing program.

"We've got to build another one," he said, "we're in a testing program and it's time to do more of that."

Space Services spokesman Walt Pennino said the explosion would cost the company more than $1.2 million and set the firm's plans back at least six months.

The one hour, 33-minute countdown for the test had gone smoothly earlier in the day, unlike several attempts during the past two weeks to test-fire the engine.

If the engine tests had been successful, company officials said they hoped to launch a sub-orbital flight Aug. 12.

The flight plan for the sub-orbital mission called for the rocket to climb to an altitude of 14,500 feet and then drop into the Gulf of Mexico about three miles from the launch site.

FDA Says Cooley Needed Approval

HOUSTON (AP) — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration says Dr. Denton A. Cooley should have sought approval before implanting an experimental plastic heart in a critically ill patient, but stopped short of reprimanding the noted heart surgeon.

A surgical team headed by Cooley placed the artificial heart in Willebrordus A. Meuffels, of The Netherlands, on July 23. Meuffels lived for 54 hours until a human heart was found to replace the twin-chambered pump.

The 36-year-old retired tour bus driver died of a massive infection Sunday, just one week after receiving the donor heart from a 27-year-old Tennessee laborer.

In a letter to Cooley, Victor Zafra, acting director of the FDA's Bureau of Medical Devices, said he understood the circumstances surrounding the controversial procedure but insisted government regulations should have been followed.

"We fully appreciate the emergency confronting Dr. Cooley and we have no reason to question the circumstances surrounding the implantation...

"Our regulations are, however, designed to provide confidence that all experimental devices are appropriately used in a variety of clincal settings and those, in our opinion, regulations apply to this situation," Zafra said.

FDA spokesman Bill Rados said remark was "neither a criticism nor a reprimand" of Cooley's actions.

"The FDA is still in the information-gathering stage of this matter. It was never our intention to make this into a big controversy ..." Rados said.

But Gregg Waddill, the hospital's legal counsel, again insisted Cooley was "definitely and legally qualified" to employ last-ditch efforts to save a dying patient who was "virtually dead."

Noting that FDA allows exemptions in life-threatening situations, Waddill said, "It would appear that the FDA right now isn't sure what all of its own regulations and specific exceptions to those are."

Tech Course To Be Given At College

Texas Tech University will offer a graduate extension course titled General Public School Administration at Western Texas College the coming fall semester.

This course focuses on general administrative theory, including motivation theory, leader behavior and organizational climate. The application of these theories in school settings is illustrated.

Registration will be held at 6 p. m. Sept. 3 in the WTC administration building. Persons wishing further information may contact the office of Dr. Ben Brock, WTC vice president.

Woman Charged With Assaulting Policeman

A 24 year-old woman arrested at 300 24th for allegedly driving while intoxicated at 11:10 p.m. Wednesday, was later charged with aggravated assault on a peace officer and for carrying a prohibited weapon, a long blade knife.

The woman was reported to have yelled obscenities at the arresting officer, Don Cheek, and to have struck at him. She was transferred to the sheriff's office today.

In other activity, Gene's Welding Shop was reported to have been broken in to. Taken was a broken skil-saw with no dollar value. The building was believed to have been entered sometime between 6:30 p.m. Tuesday and 8 a.m. Wednesday.

A 29 year-old man was taken into custody Wednesday at 2303 Ave. H on three warrants, all for harassing phone calls.

A minor accident occurred Wednesday at 10:41 p.m. at 300 24th. Involved was a 1977 Dodge driven by Bernadette E. Armatura and a legally parked 1973 Oldsmobile owned by John W. Ballinger. A wrecker was needed for the Dodge which had moderate damage, but there were no injuries reported.

Don Bryant, 2502 30th, at 4:54 p.m., told police part of his fence had been torn down but that nothing was broken and there was no dollar damage. However, at 11:51 p.m., Bryant reported that more of the fence had been torn down and that this time there was $25 damage.

Rig Theft Reported To Sheriff's Dept.

A set of tubing tongs with back-up and head, belonging to B&F Well Service, valued at $13,461, was reported stolen from a rig about 10 miles north of Snyder. Sheriff department officials said the theft occurred sometime between Tuesday evening and Wednesday morning.

In another incident, $140 was reported stolen from a wallet belonging to Duke Hill of Spur. The wallet was in a doghouse by a rig south of Lake J.B. Thomas. The theft occurred Wednesday afternoon.

Charlie Barnes told department officials he found a pulling unit type doghouse that had been missing from his lot near Lake Thomas for about a year. He said he saw it at someone else's house. It was no ordinary doghouse, officials said, it was a doghouse-outhouse which contained a toilet, sink and a shower, and value was estimated at $750.

Deputies spoke to the man who had the doghouse in his possession and were told that the Barnes had given him the outhouse, but he agreed to return it to its original owner. No charges were filed.

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Mental stress no substitute

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I need some help from you. You have said so much about exercise and physical fitness that my husband is after me. He is becoming a fitness nut. He claims that my lack of exercise is harmful, but he doesn't realize that I am tired.

I work in an office five days a week and am either typing or answering the telephone. After all I have to put up with during the day, when I get home I don't feel like Mrs. Energy USA and I am not about to go for a jog with him. If I did it would probably kill me.

It is all I can do to get dinner ready. He says that if I would do something besides watch TV I would feel better. Can you tell him that when you are tired that doing more exercise is just more work and makes matters worse? If you would he might listen to me. He reads your column and that is why he is such a fitness nut to begin with so you owe it to me to give me a break.

DEAR READER — The kind of break you should have is an exercise break. Your story is typical of millions of office workers. Sitting all day or engaging in only light activity is hard on your body. We call it deconditioning.

Our bodies are designed to be active, within reason. And the mental stress of office environments is no substitute for physical activity. It can add to your tired feeling. The antidote to mental stress is physical stress, in most instances, but you must be in shape to engage in adequate physical stress if it is going to help you any.

Sitting and limited physical activity is similar to bed rest in many respects. You accumulate adrenaline, the stress hormone, in your heart muscle and brain. Your heart gets small and loses its capacity to respond to increased levels of physical activity. The bone marrow gets sluggish and you can even lose calcium from your bones.

I have described in detail the adverse effects of inactivity in The Health Letter number 6-6, Effects of Inactivity, Including Bed Rest, which I am sending you.

Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

That tired feeling you have will begin to melt away if you will begin a light exercise program when you get home. A good walk is a good place to start. As you build up it is useful to develop a program you enjoy, whether it is jogging, swimming, tennis, dancing or whatever appeals to you.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Can appendicitis be determined by symptoms and X-rays so that a diagnosis can be made before a rupture occurs?

DEAR READER — Usually, but not always. Sometimes the first symptom may be when the appendix ruptures. In adults, particularly older persons, the symptoms of appendicitis are not at all typical and such cases are often difficult or impossible to diagnose. In children and young adults the symptoms are usually typical enough that the physical examination and blood tests are more reliable and are adequate to make a strong presumptive diagnosis before the appendix ruptures.

Even in young people there are a number of cases that are quite atypical. The pain may be in the wrong location or there may not be good physical findings of an inflamed appendix. There also are a number of other illnesses that mimic appendicitis. The diagnosis is not simple in all cases.

Preventive Care For Feet Urged

WASHINGTON (AP)—Feet hurt? You're not alone, according to U.S. Department of Health statistics which indicate that 87 percent of Americans have a foot problem during a lifetime.

And, many are painful. Not only do feet hurt, but a lot of people stoically endure the pain, say foot specialists.

"Foot pain is not a God-given trait," says Dr. Arlene Hoffman, a San Francisco podiatrist. "If we had one-tenth the pain in another part of our body, we'd run to the doctor to find out what's wrong."

Many other foot experts also consider feet to be the most neglected part of the body, she adds. To change that attitude, she and her colleagues at the American Podiatry Association have joined with Scholl to educate Americans about their feet and encourage better preventive foot health across the nation.

Why do people ignore their feet, even when they hurt? The podiatrists generally agree that it's because feet are covered up.

"Out of sight, out of mind," says Dr. William Munsey of Worthington, Ohio. "The fallacy of that, of course, is that the pain shows up in your face. Your fatigue level also increases when your feet hurt."

Fatigue also is cited as a symptom of sore feet by Dr. E. Dalton McGlamry, an Atlanta podiatrist.

"I can go down an assembly line and immediately identify people who tend toward excessive pronation (inward and downward rotation of the arch)," says McGlamry.

The doctor describes the symptoms of pronation: "They (people who pronate) fatigue early, become clock watchers and are more susceptible to injuries. Thirty minutes after they're on the job, their mind is off the job and on their feet. Overpronation is not a killer, but a killjoy."

Fear plays a role in foot neglect, say some experts.

"Young people are afraid a podiatrist will alter the shoes they wear," notes Springfield, Ill., specialist, Dr. Jerry Brant. "But there are many kinds of treatment besides wearing 'old lady' shoes," he emphasizes. And, according to Brant, surgery isn't the only option, either.

Brant, along with other specialists stresses the importance of paying attention to young feet. Some foot problems, such as bunions or hammertoes, can be inherited, and if diagnosed early enough, controlled or prevented, he says.

"Younger people often let a foot problem slide because it's not a constant source of pain — yet," says Brant. "but if a foot problem is not properly treated, it will probably get worse as you age.

"When feet start dictating what you can and can't do, then it's time to see a professional, find out what's wrong, and how it can be corrected," Brant adds.

Between check-ups, the podiatry group suggests some basic care tips:

—Good daily hygiene.

—An occasional foot soak.

—A daily shake of foot powder to keep feet dry and comfortable.

—Cushioning and padding on feet and in shoes to protect from daily "blows."

—Shoes, socks or stockings that fit comfortably.

This does not mean that women should toss out all their high heels. Rather, the doctors recommend alternating heel heights to maintain comfort and muscle flexibility in the legs.

Foot specialists caution diabetics and people with poor blood circulation to be especially careful about their feet. People with these conditions should see a phusician or podiatrist about even the simplest foot problem.

Also Multi-Purpose...

Manufacturers Offering High Quality Appliances

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Population trends, the changing style of homes, and consumer activism were not officially a part of the recentlyconcluded National Housewares Exposition in Chicago.

But these concepts certainly had a great deal to do with the products that were on sale at the semiannual market for retailers.

As manufacturer after manufacturer talked about the need for long-lasting, high-quality, multi-purpose appliances to fit today's pattern of living, it seemed clear they had gotten the message being sent by American consumers.

Having already saturated the market with multi-purpose and single-purpose small electric appliances, manufacturers brought out no new major types of miracle machines. Instead, they concentrated on offering new models of food processors, electric mixers, juicers, coffeemakers and electric cookers that combine as many functions as possible within the same machine.

For other products, such as electric irons and personal-care items, a greater variety of desirable features seemed designed to make the products so appealing that consumer sales resistance would disappear. Some irons, for example, offered more settings, rust-resistant water reservoirs and reversible cords.

Manufacturers of pots and pans — another major product category at the market — also stressed higher quality in nonstick coatings, heavy-duty construction and professional "restaurant" styling.

Comments from manufacturers reinforced the picture of an industry seeking to give the public what it seems to want. There was a decided marketing point-of-view in comments such as those by Carl Sondtheimer, president of Cuisinarts, Inc.

"The main fact of life that will influence marketing of food-preparation products over the coming few years is the reduction in size of kitchens. This is inevitable because population is growing while available space is not," he said.

"It means that multiple-use food-preparation products will increase in importance. But the day of the single-purpose food appliance has ended. While they will still be available, I expect to see their sales fall off slowly."

Cookware trends are hard to predict, Sondtheimer said. "But the need to make do with smaller storage space will cause people to buy higher quality cookware, but fewer pieces of it, in my opinion."

Ingenious storage systems should do well, he added, because of space limitations.

"In cookstoves, convection ovens should replace all other types of ovens in built-in stoves because the food either cooks faster or at a lower temperature than in standard, radiant-heat ovens." Microwave ovens, in Sondtheimer's opinion, will be popular "especially in homes where defrosting food is a major activity and where there is no interest in gourmet cooking."

Top Ice Cream With Butterscotch Sauce

DEAR CECILY: I have always agreed with the idea you and other food writers have advocated: vary the food categories in the different courses of a menu. For example, don't serve a cold fruit soup and then a fruit salad. But in summer when fresh fruit is so delicious and abundant, I'm wondering whether it isn't permissible to depart somewhat from the old rule. For a special company dinner, I want to serve melone con prosciutto as a first course and homemade vanilla ice cream with a fresh strawberry sauce as dessert. Do you think that's too much fruit? — UNDECIDED.

DEAR UNDECIDED: I am less rigid than I used to be about sticking to the old rule of not using the same category of food in more than one course of a menu. For example, I now think it is permissible at a brunch to offer orange juice and then go on to scrambled eggs and sausage patties with apple rings. Nevertheless, I think the melon and strawberries you are considering serving on the same menu are a bit much. Why not have a dessert sauce that's out of the fruit realm? We've just tested a fabulously good Macadamia Butterscotch Sauce that would be well worth putting over your homemade vanilla ice cream for special guests. —C.B.

MACADAMIA BUTTERSCOTCH SAUCE

2 tablespoons butter ¾ cup firmly packed light brown sugar

1-3rd cup light corn syrup ¼ cup half-and-half

1-3rd cup coarsely chopped macadamia nuts

In a heavy medium-size saucepan over low heat, melt the butter; stir in the sugar and syrup. Over medium heat, stirring constantly, bring to a full boil — mixture will lighten in color and become thinner because the sugar will have completely melted — this may take as long as 15 minutes.

Off heat, gradually stir in the half-and-half; stir in the macadamias. Serve warm over vanilla ice cream.

The sauce may be made several days ahead; in this case, store, tightly closed, in the refrigerator. At serving time, reheat gently, stirring, on top of the range; or reheat briefly in a microwave oven.

Makes about 1¼ cups.

Shortage Of Secretarys Will Continue

PHILADELPHIA (AP) —There will be a continuing shortage of secretarial help through the 1980s despite advances in automation, predicts the president of a firm that supplies temporary office help.

"No matter how sophisticated office machines become, there will always be a need for people to run those machines," says Howard W. Scott Jr. of CDI Temporary Services Inc. "Anyone with good secretarial skills will be able to find a job.

"Even with the prospects of voice-activated typewriters, the demand for secretaries will remain strong throughout the decade ahead," he adds.

Black skin care

If you are black and have skin that tends to be oily and break out, you should care for it in a special way. Wash with soap and water twice a day, followed by an astringent. Resist squeezing or picking at blemishes — your skin is prone to developing dark spots or raised scars (called keloids) at the site of an irritation or cut.

Touch of spring

To revise your winter wardrobe, add a few early touches of spring. A lacy sweater in a pastel shade of peach, yellow or pink will look lovely now and later. A bright cotton blouse can be worn under jackets or sweaters for now. Add one big, sporty accessory, such as a printed scarf, chunky wooden beads, wide bangle or large button earrings in pastel or vivid shades.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

West's preemptive three-spade opening really put it to North-South.

South virtually had a strong two bid, but he had no safe way of showing it. If he doubled and North bid the expected four hearts, then what? He couldn't pass with only two-card support and five diamonds would be only a wild stab. Finally, after several agonizing minutes, South bid three notrump, muttering inwardly about "that" preempt.

West's opening lead of the king of spades was allowed to hold the first trick, East unblocking with the jack. West returned the queen of spades and South won. Declarer hopefully played out his ace, king of diamonds, but the suit failed to break. Spades had to be 7-2 or declarer had no chance.

If South routinely continued diamonds, East would win the jack and lead a heart. Another diamond to East and a heart return. Declarer would have one spade, four diamonds, two hearts and one club, but that would be all. When East later got on play with the club king he would cross to West's queen of hearts to defeat the game.

Declarer envisioned this and made a counter play. If clubs divide 3-2 and East has the king, game can still be made. Accordingly, South led a low club out of his hand at trick four. Although West might have a singleton king of clubs it was unlikely. East had to allow dummy's club to hold or declarer would make nine tricks with one spade, two hearts, two diamonds and four clubs.

Once declarer had his second club trick, game was cold. South played a club to his ace and gave East a diamond. A heart was returned, South won and led another diamond to East. Declarer still had the heart ace and those good diamonds. West's spades were good, but he had no fast entry. South had timed his plays perfectly to make game.

"OH, YEAH... MR. WILSON WANTS TO THANK YOU FOR NOT MAKING ME TWINS."

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My problem is a thoughtless, cheap co-worker who rides to and from work with me every day. She even has the nerve to ask me to drop her somewhere else after work frequently, taking me miles out of my way. It's my own fault because I invited her to ride with me since she lives nearby. She accepted readily, reminding me that my insurance would be voided if I accepted reimbursement to help pay for the gas. (I had heard this before.)

She sees me put $20 worth of gas in my tank each week and just looks out the window. At Christmas she gives me some cheap little doodad that doesn't begin to compensate for all the money she saves by my chauffeur service. Why must it be so one-sided? Sign me....

BEING HAD IN ILLINOIS

DEAR BEING HAD: You were misinformed. Your insurance would not be voided if your ride-along passenger paid enough to cover the expenses. However, if you were to carry passengers for profit, you would require additional insurance. Advise your ride-along that she can pay for half the cost of the gasoline without affecting your insurance.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I just returned from our first vacation without our kids. We've been married for 13 years, have four kids, and it was a real treat.

My wife's parents saw us off at the airport, and just as we were taking off, my mother-in-law asked, "Did you make a will in case something happens to both of you at the same time?" Then she laughed as though it was some kind of joke.

Of course we hadn't made a will. I realize there's always a one-in-a-million chance that our plane would crash and we'd both be killed, but her question stayed on my mind during our whole vacation, and I have to tell you, it sort of spoiled it for me.

Wasn't that a lousy thing for her to say?

STILL UPSET

DEAR UPSET: Her timing was lousy. But the idea was a good one.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend and I have plans to marry as soon as his divorce is final. He is now separated from his wife. Please let me know if it is acceptable for us to announce our engagement at this time.

CAN'T WAIT

DEAR CAN'T WAIT: I suggest you do.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Re the letter from COLD SHOULDERS, who complained because her office co-workers continually took turns moving the air-conditioning controls. (First someone would adjust the thermostat, saying, "It's too chilly in here." Then someone else would readjust it and say, "Who turned the air conditioning off?")

That reminds me of the time a friend was showing me through his new plant. When we came to the main office, he pointed to the thermostat on the wall and said, "That's a dummy. It's not connected to anything, and it regulates nothing. It just keeps the office people happy adjusting it up and down all day."

I later learned that the thermostat that really controlled the temperature was located in his office.

P.M.H.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My fiance and I are planning our wedding, which will take place in December. Between us we already have just about everything we need to set up housekeeping, and with things the way they are today, we would really prefer money instead of wedding gifts.

Would you please advise us how to let our friends and relatives know how we feel about this? I mean, is there some tactful way of including this information with our wedding invitations?

HAVE EVERYTHING

DEAR HAVE: If they ask what you want or need, you could tell them. But to include this information with your wedding invitations would be more tacky than tactful.

Homespun Newspaper Thrives On Democracy

PITTSBURGH (AP) — One recent summer night, a group of 20 laborers, housewives and retirees clustered in a tiny North Side house, the staff of that month's edition of a homespun city paper bearing the unlikely name of the Mill Hunk Herald.

Their task was to review each of 85 articles, stories and letters. Every person in the group had written at least one of the items under scrutiny. On the back of each piece, they scrawled comments and a numerical rating between 1 and 5, with 1 indicating top-quality stuff.

Top-rated pieces got the nod for publication.

Founder Larry Evans, his wife, Leslie, and what they affectionately call a "strong core" of friends and supporters, boast that the Herald is the only democratically run newspaper in the country.

Democracy is dear to the young couple — the Herald even sponsors a women's softball team whose players vote on their starting lineup — and it was Evans' fervor for majority rule that helped get the Mill Hunk started.

"We think it's an example of how the future is going to roll. There's got to be a more democratic way of expressing how things go into the magazines," said the tan, blond steelworker who regularly punches a clock at U.S. Steel's mill in the city's Homestead section.

The tiny paper (circulation 5,000) is a freestyle collection of blue-collar commentary — mostly pro-little guy and anti-big companies and government.

An example:

"...Whatever happened...? Our unions, just like politics, have become corrupt with hand-picked men that are only personal friends of our top union officials. Now who do we have to represent us? No one."

There is also poetry:

"aint shor bout tamaro — but shor bout taday

"gonna meet my gal in phille — goin back ta pittsberg p-a

"...i wuz born in dat distric — da one calld da hill

"wen yore born in dat distric — da nex stops da mill"

"We won't go and revise somebody's work," Evans said. "If somebody has something to say, we want them to say it in the language they know best. We try to keep the free spirit of the writer."

That goes for humor, too.

"One of the things that characterizes the Herald is that it has a sense of humor. Satire goes over real well," said Mrs. Evans.

The seed for the Herald sprouted first with The Union Coupler, a mimeographed news sheet started in 1977 by Evans and several others at the McConway Torley mill here.

Evans said they were unhappy with the mill's union paper, which he described as "full of obituaries and bowling scores."

"We'd sit in the bar sometimes before the midnight shift, and I'd write as they talked. I'd read it back to them and say 'Is that OK?' and that'd be their article," Evans recalled.

The Coupler was not popular with management, and Evans claims that's the reason he and his 13 fellow contributors were fired. Evans moved on to the Homestead mill.

The first Mill Hunk Herald appeared in 1979, the name coming from a once-derogatory term for Hungarian immigrants who toiled in the mills. Laid out in helter-skelter fashion, it carried every item submitted.

Things have changed.

Widowed Dad Left With Girl

ORANGE, Calif. (AP) — Randal Frith has signed up for a baby-feeding class and is counting on help from relatives to care for his infant daughter — delivered prematurely by Caesarean section as his wife lay dying of a burst blood vessel in the brain.

"I just take one thing at a time — now I'm up to a full day at a time," Frith said.

Doctors gave the baby, Lacey Frith, only a one-in-20 chance of surviving when she was born about two months prematurely on July 11, weighing only 2 pounds, 9½-ounces. Her 24-year-old mother, Karen Frith, died three days later.

Lacey is now given an 80 percent chance of making it and is under care at the highly specialized neonatal unit at Children's Hospital of Orange County.

Frith, also 24, says he is counting on the help of both of the child's grandmothers and his brother's fiancee to help him act as both mother and father to his newborn daughter.

"Some of my friends have said they couldn't do it, but God has given me strength," he said. "I know it's going to be hard, but I know I'm going to make it."

Mrs. Frith was 29 or 30 weeks pregnant July 9 when she told her supervisor at the La Habra branch of Security Pacific National Bank that she had a severe headache. She left her teller's cage and went to a back room, where she collapsed.

She was taken to La Habra Community Hospital, then transfered to the larger St. Jude Hospital in Fullerton.

Doctors told her husband that a blood vessel had burst in her brain and that she had little chance of surviving.

Doctors continued to monitor the heartbeat of the fetus, who was doing fine. But July 11, Mrs. Frith had another attack. Her brain waves flattened out, and doctors put her on life-support machines.

Soon, the fetus's heartbeat began to drop dangerously. Frith was told that the fetus would have to be delivered immediately or be lost, but the baby's chances of surviving on her own would be only one in 20. At 9:45 a.m. Lacey was born.

Mrs. Frith was pronounced dead three days later, but she had already chosen the name of Lacey for her daughter.

At first, Lacey's weight dropped to 2 pounds, 3½ ounces. Since then, however, she has been gaining weight, and doctors expect she will be ready to leave the hospital in a month.

Frith, a salesman of hydraulic seals in Santa Fe Springs, says he's thrilled every time he sees his little girl.

INGENUITY--A partially disabling stroke three years ago has slowed down but has not stopped Tenner Lokse of Fluvanna. For a man who had farmed most of his life, working in the yard just seemed to come naturally. Rather than give up a passtime he enjoys very much, Lokse used a little ingenuity and asked a friend (Bobby Stansel) to attach a hoe on the end of one of his crutches so that he can get around in the yard and keep the weeds and goatheads trimmed. Lokse said he works awhile and rests awhile. (The circle marks the spot where the hoe is attached to the crutch.) Sitting around doing nothing all day long was not to the Fluvanna man's liking. Besides yard work, Lokse also likes to play dominoes and go fishing. Lokse's wife, Florene, said without the help of the "good people of Fluvanna" she and her husband would never have made it when he was first stricken. (SDN Staff Photo By Shirley A. Gorman)

Snyder Jaycettes Meet In Richardson Home

The Snyder Jaycettes met in the home of Mrs. Helen Richardson for their monthly meeting. In addition to regular business, Jennifer Brown was awarded a certificate and pin naming her "Jaycette of the Quarter."

Aiding the Jaycees with the AJRA Rodeo and a skate-a-thon for muscular dystrophy heads the calendar of events for the organization. The AJRA is set for August 11-15 and the skate-a-thon is slated for August 22. Details will be published later.

The Jaycees and Jaycettes will also be traveling to Tyler for a summer board meeting later this month. Preparations are also underway for the MD Telethon and Labor Day Rest Stop.

Turtle Pines For Lost Love

RENTON, Wash. (AP) — Slow Drag is finding life a bummer without her Big Dude. She "just leaves her watermelon and peas, even the romaine lettuce," has tried to creep away from home and even "jumped off the porch the other day."

That is the assessment of Sherwood Martin. Big Dude, an 8-by-6-inch turtle, disappeared from Martin's home more than a month ago. Martin was turtle-sitting for friends, and now, instead of a pair of turtle loves, he's stuck with a pet who has lost herself in a shell.

"It's a real tragedy," Martin said. "I have trouble keeping pets caged up."

Martin is offering a $25 reward to anyone who finds Big Dude.

IRA Accounts Available To Self-Employed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Beginning next January, all working Americans will be allowed to open up a personal tax-deferred retirement account — an investment opportunity now set aside only for those without an on-the-job pension plan.

Under the new tax law, all 99 million working Americans could set up an Individual Retirement Account (IRA) or a comparable Keogh plan if they are self-employed.

The measure, approved by Congress and awaiting President Reagan's signature, is intended to stimulate savings and reduce dependence on the ailing Social Security system.

Under current law, only people without group pension plans can open an IRA. But starting next Jan. 1, an estimated 45 million Americans covered by pension plans can start individual accounts, too, and those already eligible will be able to put more away each year without paying taxes on the money until it is withdrawn.

A major reason for the change is to reverse a sharp decline in the nation's savings rate, one of the principal goals of Reagan's economic program.

However, it is not just coincidence that incentives to set up individual pension plans are being increased at a time when the administration is pushing to reduce future Social Security benefits, both to shore up the financially troubled system and to achieve budget savings.

"The primary reason (for the legislation) is to encourage people to make provisions for their own retirement income because we don't want to continue the burden on Social Security," said Norman B. Ture, undersecretary of the treasury for tax policy.

Congress, which is reluctant to enter the political maelstrom created by the administration's proposed Social Security cuts, appeared to act more out of concern for increasing personal savings so that more money would be available for investment and interest rates would come down. But the desire to reduce future pensioners' reliance on Social Security was also a consideration, congressional aides report.

Currently, those eligible to set up an IRA can place no more than 15 percent of their income in an account, up to $1,500 a year. The new law would let anyone deposit all of his or her income in an IRA, up to $2,000 a year.

A married couple with both spouses working can set aside up to $4,000 a year, providing each has a separate account with no more than $2,000 a year added. A couple with one working spouse can set aside up to $2,250 a year divided between two accounts, up from $1,750 under current law.

The broadened incentives for retirement plans will cost the Treasury an estimated $9.1 billion in lost revenue through 1986.

Tax-deferred pension plans, which first came into existence in 1975, have not been very popular with the public, but the administration hopes the new incentives will change that.

Prison Says...

'Triple-Celling' Deadline Met

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A court-imposed deadline against "triple-celling" has been met, but because of it, many Texas prison inmates will spend at least part of the winter in tents, a Texas Department of Corrections spokesman says.

Prisoners were moved into eight-man Army tents earlier this summer to meet an Aug. 1 deadline on U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice's order to stop putting three prisoners in a cell designed for one.

Texas is appealing the ruling which also ordered the TDC to have only one inmate per 45-square-foot cell by August of 1983.

The state's plan to ease overcrowding also includes a "work-furlough" program under which about 1,500 inmates were released to half-way houses during the summer.

The current population of the 18-unit prison is 30,254.

TDC spokesman Rick Hartley said Wednesday about 1,270 inmates at eight prison units — including 240 prisoners at the maximum security Ellis Unit — are sleeping in the tents loaned to the prison by the National Guard.

Most of the tent-dwellers can expect to spend at least part of the winter in the tents — which as yet have no heat, Hartley said. He said the TDC did not expect to have permanent inmate housing available in time to move all the prisoners of the tents for the winter.

"We recognized that our construction program would have a lag between the time the tents went up and the time conventional housing went on line," Hartley said.

Hartley said TDC construction workers are trying to decide how to heat the canvas tents. They have made no recommendations so far, he said.

Meanwhile, Hartley said, the TDC is trying to come up with permanent housing to meet the continued problem of prison overcrowding.

A new cell block will open at the Beto Unit in Anderson County on Sept. 1, Hartley said. New cellblocks at other units are scheduled to receive inmates every two months until next summer. Combined, those units are expected to house 2,400 prisoners, he said.

Hartley said the three "emergency" housing units funded by the Legislature early this year will be finished next summer, taking care of 960 more inmates.

Hartley said prison officials were "very pleased" with U.S. Supreme Court Justice Lewis Powell's refusal Monday to intervene to stop overcrowding in Texas prisons pending the state's appeal of Justice's ruling.

The Supreme Court has yet to rule on the merits of the long Texas prison suit, but Hartley said of Monday's decision, "I think it's very encouraging. It restates the court's feeling that there's no language in the Constitution that prohibits double-celling."

The lawsuit that resulted in Justice's 250-page order last December dates back to 1972. Lawyers for prison inmates contend constitutional prohibitions against "cruel and unusual punishment" are violated by overcrowded conditions in Texas prisons.

Unions Support Air Controllers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Several unions are rallying behind striking air traffic controllers, with most offering moral support and the machinists' president saying he expects his members to honor any picket lines they encounter.

"I expect our people to act like trade unionists," said William Winpisinger, president of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers. "I expect them not to cross a picket line if they confront it."

There was no indication, however, that picketing by the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization had caused machinists — who work as baggage handlers, airport technicians and aircraft mechanics — to stay off the job.

PATCO has not picketed at all air control facilities. At some airports their picket lines were at locations separate from work entrances used by other unionized employees.

Airport operations could be disrupted if other unionized workers honor the PATCO lines. So far, no other union leader had made a statement similar to Winpisinger's.

In Boston, Donald C. McLaughlin, financial secretary of machinists Local 1726, pledged cooperation with the controllers.

"We'll be glad to help them," said McLaughlin, whose local has 1,700 members working at Logan International Airport. "We're giving them all the moral support we can.

"If they put up picket lines and we're told to honor them, we'll honor them," he said. "If they tell us to pull our people, we'll pull them. That'll close down the airport."

But he said that decision was up to Winpisinger.

Other union officials issued statements backing the striking controllers.

The American Federation of Government Employees asserted Wednesday that the Reagan administration "is intent on breaking PATCO and all it stands for....

"The events leading up to this confrontation and the repressive measures taken since lead to the unmistakable conclusion," said the AFGE, which represents 700,000 members.

"All other government employees are all too familiar with the pressures and attitudes that have led the controllers to take the steps which they have taken," the AFGE said.

In Chicago, leaders of the 15-million-member AFL-CIO, the nation's largest labor federation, joined some three dozen strikers manning a picket line around the control tower at O'Hare International Airport.

Judge Unveils Unusual Plan

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — An unusual lottery type student assignment system has been proposed by a federal judge as a method of desegregating Beaumont's South Park Independent School District.

U.S. District Judge Robert Parker said the plan is designed to eliminate "safe havens" for families trying to flee desegreation and to places the burden on both whites and blacks.

The plan would have to be agreed upon by plaintiffs in a suit filed to desegregate the school and by school officials before it would be used.

The drawing would assign families with school-age chidlren to two feeder systems of elementary, middle and high schools on a random basis.

Parker devised the luck of the draw system over a total of seven U.S. Justice Department and school district proposals.

Children from kindergarten through the third grade would be exempt and go to neighborhood schools.

The complex ruling would allow students to go fourth and fifth grades at two schools, one traditionally white and the other black and then go to other schools for the sixth, seventh and eighth grades.

Implementation of the high school part of the plan begins in the 1982-83 school year and the rest starts this fall.

School Trustee Dr. Richard Price said the plan is equitable and spreads the "burdern of integration evenly among the black and white communities."

Leon Pettis, a lawyer representing a group of anti-busing school patrons, called the plan "about as fair as any plan could be as far as sharing the burden goes. The judge did about as good a job as any judge could do."

Edward Moore, chairman of a black citizen's group that intervened in the case, said he did not like the plan. "This plan will require a lot of busing. I don't like it, but if that's the only way integration will be accomplished, it has to be done," Moore said.

Superintendent Dr. Mike Taylor and South Park School attorney Tanner Hunt Jr. delcined comment on the plan, saying they needed time to study it.

The suit to desegregate the district was originally filed in 1970. The U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals rejected another plan May 28 and ordered a new plan drawn up.

Kabul Police To Reinforce Soviet Troops

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Afghanistan's Communist government is sending police from Kabul to reinforce Soviet and Afghan troops attempting to capture the rebel-held town of Kapisa, 47 miles north of the cap;ital, according to a sourcein Kabul.

Family Given Presents By Small Town

WILLOUGHBY, Ohio (AP) — The officer spotted the New York plates. He tailed the car as it cruised through town. Seeing the crime, he intercepted the station wagon and arrested the offending family.

The charge: Not saying hello to the people of this Lake Erie village.

"This is fantastic. It's a great way to end a vacation," said James Coward of Orchard Park, N.Y., after he; his wife, Bonnie; and their two daughters were hauled in, booked by Municipal Judge Elaine Crane and put behind bars — for a few moments.

Their "misdemeanor" also brought them a free lunch and a shower of gifts. Saturday was Willoughby Lions Club Arrest Day, an event held one day a year for the past 30 years in which the cops look for out-of-state drivers to pull over and show off the town's sense of humor.

"I couldn't understand why he pulled us over," Mrs. Coward said.

Biggest Weakness Is Speed, But...

Experience Could Be Key To Tiger Success In '81

By BILL MCCLELLAN

Snyder's Tigers have been delegated to finish seventh in the nine-team 2-AAAA district but that doesn't bother new head football coach George Byerly.

"I think considering we have a new coaching staff...a losing record last year...lack of experience in some areas...we could be picked to finish seventh," he said, "but very seldom do those picks come true. It's always my goal to finish on top every year and that's what we'll try to do this year."

Two-a-days for varsity and junior varsity gridders begin with a team meeting at 7:35 a.m. Aug. 10. The first scrimmage is Aug. 21 against Vernon and the season officially starts with the first game, Sept. 4 in Big Spring.

"We've got some things working against us, sure, but that doesn't mean we can't do it (win district)," said the coach. "Anybody that comes out here feeling like we're not going to do well is probably not going to help us."

Byerly and company will draw on the experience of 18 returning players to build on this year, including 14 who started or saw a lot of action during the 1980 season.

"We're going to be counting on a lot of kids to play well...all we can ask out of them," the coach said. "Of course, it's pretty well known that experience doesn't help if you don't use it."

Byerly sees experience as the team's greatest strength at present. Snyder also has good size among its players, but "no depth in size" said the coach.

"Our biggest weakness is speed. That was obvious from the district track meet," he pointed out.

As a result, Tiger fans will probably see a straightforward approach to the game this year.

"We need to play power football. We're just going to have to line up and whip some people," Byerly noted. "And not get too fancy."

Plans are for the Tigers to run out of the Straight T offense, and a Split-6 even-man-front defense he calls the "Split 6 Monster". At present, the Tiger game plan looks simple and straight forward with few tricks.

Snyder returns almost an entire offensive line, though injuries caused numerous changes last year. Returning are tight end Curtis Gafford, left tackle Trey Harlin, left guard Ross Bawcum, center Steve Gressett, right tackle Barry Davis, and split ends Glenn Parham and Brent Roemisch. Also back are running backs Perry Echols, Mark Shaw and Kirk Herrley.

The biggest immediate hole in the offense is a quarterback. Brent Beck, backup last year, received only limited experience.

Byerly was quick to point out however, that, "I hope none of these kids comes in feeling like they've got a position nailed down. That's not the case. We're going to put the best people out there. We expect a lot of competition between the players."

Defensively, Snyder returns linebackers Jesse Hernandez and Matt Davis and cornerbacks Ronnie Rosas and Casey Peterson. Roemisch also action at safety late in the season, and several players, like Davis, played on the defensive line at times.

Dr. Hillis Attends Training Facility

Dr. Shelby Hillis, Western Texas College judo coach, attended a United States Olympic Training Center session in Colorado Springs as a member of the coaching staff recently.

Ken Levens, a former student of Hillis at WTC now at Texas Tech University, also attended. Chuck Wood, a freshman from Louisiana who plans to enroll at Western Texas this fall, and Greg Ford, Odessa, who plans to attend WTC in 1982-83, were among the students attending.

Approximately 120 national level competitors attended the camp, Hillis said.

Hafley Inks Pact With Golf Team

Mike Hafley, a two-time all-district golfer from Richland Hills High School in Fort Worth, has signed with Western Texas College, Dave Foster, golf coach, has announced.

Hafley "was one of the more highly recruited golfers out of Fort Worth," said Foster. "He has a good high school record and I am looking forward to working with him."

MIKE HAFLEY
...golfer signs with WTC

Hafley placed third three times and was fifth seat all-district in 1980 and third seat in 1981. During the past summer he won local qualifing for the Insurance Youth Classic with a 74 and won the President's Flight of the Men's West Texas with scores of 76-74-71-72.

Hafley, who has been playing "serious tournament golf" since age 15, has won or finished well in numerous tournaments during the past two years.

Philadelphia To Try Out Shotgun On Oilers Today

HOUSTON (AP) - Head coach Dick Vermeil will try out a new weapon when his Philadelphia Eagles meet the Houston Oilers today - a shotgun.

The Eagles have gone so far as to hire Ed Hughes, who helped the Dallas Cowboys install the formation in the mid-1970's, as an offensive assistant.

"It's really an aggressive formation," quarterback Ron Jaworski said. "We put in another wide receiver for a tight end and another receiving halfback for the fullback. That's five people who can catch and run with the ball, and that puts a lot of pressure on the defense."

In the shotgun, the quarterback stands several yards behind the center to take the snap. The Dallas Cowboys were the first professional team to use the formation successfully.

Vermeil said the team will run about a dozen plays from the spread.

New Oilers head coach Ed Biles will use today's game to observe his four quarterbacks. That position became a point of concern when 13-year veteran Ken Stabler surprised the team by retiring as training camp opened.

Gifford Nielsen, named to the starting job, will play for the first half, said Gregg Stengel, Oilers' administrative assistant for public relations.

He will be followed by journeyman John Reaves, an eight-year veteran from the University of Florida who was signed as a backup quarterback after Stabler's announcement, Stengel said.

After that will come third-year man Craig Bradshaw, brother of Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback Terry, and second-year player Harold Bailey.

"If one of them doesn't see action this game, he'll be second next time against New Orleans," Stengel said.

Replacing Stabler with Nielsen has its good points, Biles says.

"We have not altered our passing game a great deal to tailor Gifford because both he and Kenny are intermediate range passers," Biles said. "Giff can throw deep when the situation arises but most of our patterns will be middle range in distance, probably 20 yards or less."

The Oilers' defense will have some new faces. All-Pro safety Mike Reinfeldt, who showed up late for training camp after a contract dispute, will be replaced by Carter Hartwig, Stengel said.

John Corker will start at outside linebacker, replacing Ted Washington, who broke his finger in a workout this week.

Progress Excellent For Waters And Hughes, Club Says

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) - Veteran Dallas Cowboys' safeties Charlie Waters and Randy Hughes, both attempting comebacks following off-season surgery, are making excellent progress in training camp, head coach Tom Landry says.

"They're both so much better than they were last year," Landry said Wednesday.

"There's no comparison with Hughes. He's hitting, coming up, tackling the dummy. He's doing everything. The shoulder doesn't seem to be bothering him at all."

Landry said Waters, who had surgery on his right knee for the second time in February, "worked all the two-a-days, which I didn't think he could do."

And he's not getting much fluid in his knee and he's not getting a great deal of soreness. Those are all encouraging factors."

Waters, who played the entire 1980 season with a knee brace and led the Cowboys with five interceptions, said "the knee feels much tighter than it did last year. It's not giving me as much trouble and I'm moving better, much faster that I did last year."

Hughes, had surgery on his right shoulder a year ago after dislocating it during the preseason. He missed most of the season, then dislocated the shoulder again during playoffs.

The Cowboys leave for Dallas Friday morning to get ready for their exhibition season opener against Green Bay in Texas Stadium Saturday night.

Seahawks Blow Chance To Break Home 'Jinx'

SEATTLE (AP) - The Seattle Seahawks had a chance to halt their enigmatic Kingdome jinx Wednesday night.

But Coach Jack Patera went for a touchdown - instead of a field goal - and the Seahawks wound up losing to the San Francisco 49ers 27-24 in the clubs' National Football League exhibition openers.

It was the ninth straight loss at home for the Seahawks, who were 0-8 during the regular season last year in the Kingdome.

"Yes, we have something to prove this year," said Jim Zorn, the Seahawks' No. 1 quarterback. "That we can win in the Dome. We're 0 for 9 here now."

Before 56,958 disappointed fans, the Seahawks blew their chances of victory with two minutes left in regulation play.

The 49ers wound up winning in overtime on Ray Wersching's 39-yard field goal with 5:29 elapsed in the 15-minute extra session.

With the score 24-24, the Seahawks had the ball on the 49ers' 1-yard line on a fourth down.

Patera called a running play - instead of the short field goal - but rookie Eric Lane tripped and fell.

"Sometime in the regular season, we're going to be on the six-inch line," Patera explained. "I wanted to see if we could do it now."

Zorn wasn't in the game in the fourth quarter but refused to second-guess his coach.

"You've got to have confidence you can put the ball in the end zone," he said. "You can miss a field goal, too. Then people will say you should have gone for the touchdown."

San Francisco Coach Bill Walsh was distressed because 49er tight end Eason Ramson limped off the field in the overtime session with what was diagnosed as a knee sprain.

"This win is really clouded by that injury," Walsh said. "If we lose Eason, it could be disastrous."

Both the 49ers and the Seahawks both have something to prove this season. San Francisco was 6-10 last season while Seattle was 4-10. They will meet Aug. 22 in another preseason contest in San Francisco's Candlestick Park.

The first full week of NFL exhibitions continues tonight with the National Conference champion Philadelphia Eagles at Houston. On Friday, Kansas City is at Washington and the New York Jets visit Denver.

On Saturday, it's Detroit at Buffalo; Cincinnati at Tampa Bay; the New York Giants at Chicago; Pittsburgh at Cleveland; Baltimore at New Orleans; St.Louis at San Diego; Green Bay at Dallas; Miami at Minnesota and Atlanta at Oakland.

New England winds up the extended slate of preseason contests at Los Angeles next Monday night.

There were 20,958 base hits made in the American League in 1980, a major-league record.

Major Leaguers Slated For Exhibitions Today

by The Associated Press

Major leaguers were scheduled to "Play Ball!" for the first time in 56 days today, one day after they voted overwhelmingly to ratify the contract that ended their seven-week strike.

At the same time, team owners were expected to ratify the contract at a meeting in Chicago today, when they also would take up the format for the rest of the season.

There seemed to be heavy support for a split season, with division winners from the first portion - prior to the June 12 strike - qualifying for the playoffs and everyone starting the second portion of the season from scratch.

With 20 of the 26 teams reporting their votes, 10 had approved the contract unanimously. They were Detroit, Milwaukee, Kansas City, Baltimore, Toronto, Montreal, Houston, St. Louis, Atlanta and the Chicago Cubs.

Overall, the players had supported the settlement by a 448-25 margin. A simple majority of the 650 players on active major league rosters, plus those on injured reserve, was needed for ratification.

Ironically, that majority was achieved on the day that the owners' $50 million strike insurance expired.

Other team votes were: New York Mets, 24-1; Texas Rangers, 24-1; Oakland A's, 26-1; California Angels, 21-4; Chicago White Sox, 23-4; Seattle Mariners 23-3; San Francisco Giants 23-2; San Diego Padres, 22-3, and Minnesota Twins, 21-6.

The Astros' J.R. Richard, recovering from a stroke and major surgery, had been expected to go a couple of innings in the game, but he was scratched Wednesday. Astros Manager Bill Virdon said Richard, who had thrown 15 minutes of batting practice Monday, was "not quite ready" to pitch competitively.

The rest of the schedule had the Albuquerque Dukes of the Pacific Coast League at the Los Angeles Dodgers, their parent club; Baltimore at Philadelphia; Oakland at San Diego; Pittsburgh at Cleveland, and Atlanta at Milwaukee.

The regular season is scheduled to resume Monday, one day after the All-Star Game in Cleveland.

Nicklaus Looking For 'New' Start

DULUTH, Ga. (AP) - Jack Nicklaus, golf's greatest performer ever, is facing the grim prospect of not winning for the second time in three years.

And, naturally, this 41-year-old perfectionist does not like it.

"Sure, it gnaws at me," he said before the start of today's 63rd PGA National Championship over the 7,070-yard, par-70 Atlanta Athletic Club course.

Nicklaus was the defending champion against 149 challengers in this $400,000 event, the last of the four annual majors.

Despite his mediocre year - he's been second three times in 13 starts - Nicklaus' name frequently has been mentioned as a favorite to win the $60,000 first prize.

Also drawing considerable support were these anticipated challengers:

--Tom Watson, Masters champion, No. 1 money-winner and three-time titleholder this season, still searching for his first PGA crown.

--Raymond Floyd, another three-time champion in 1981, the 1969 PGA king whose $324,000 in yearly earnings are just $11,000 short of Watson.

--Bruce Lietzke, the winner of the Bob Hope, San Diego and Byron Nelson Classic this year and No. 3 on the money tree.

--David Graham, the current U.S. Open champion who won this crown two years ago.

--Jerry Pate, the winner of the last major championship on this course, the Open in 1976.

Jurors Deliberating NFL-Oakland Trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) - The jurors in the Oakland Raiders-National Football League antitrust trial were scheduled to begin their eighth day of deliberations today.

The jury of seven women and three men, which received the case on July 29, concluded its seventh day of deliberations Wednesday without reaching a verdict. The trial was held in the courtroom of U.S. District Judge Harry Pregerson.

The Raiders and Los Angeles Coliseum Commission are suing the NFL for blocking the defending Super Bowl champions' move from Oakland to Los Angeles. Jury members were chosen in part because their lack of knowledge about sports.

Meanwhile, members of the L.A. Coliseum Commission unanimously passed a resolution expressing confidence in a court victory Wednesday, and said: "Attorneys for the NFL are publicly hoping for a hung jury, which is a clear indication that they acknowledge they have no chance of winning this case. We, on the other hand, are confident of our position."

Fresh Yankee, a Canadian harness horse, raced in the Roosevelt International Trot a record six times and won it once, in 1970.
