Nation's Jobless Rate Dips Again

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate fell to 5.7 percent in February, the lowest in 4½ years since the 1974-1975 recession, the government said today.

The jobless rate was 5.8 percent in January.

The February jobs report by the Labor Department gave no indication that President Carter's economic slowdown policies have yet begun to push people out of work. However, the department reported a rise in unemployment among blacks and other minority members, especially black teen-agers.

These are the groups that usually suffer first when the economy begins to falter.

But job losses among minority groups were more than offset by gains for white workers, whose unemployment rates fell to 4.9 percent from 5.1 percent in January.

The overall unemployment rate of 5.7 percent last month was the lowest since August 1974, when unemployment was 5.4 percent of the labor force.

The department said total employment increased in February by 345,000 jobs to a total of 96.6 million. The number of people without jobs remained the same at 5.9 million.

The department gave the following breakdpwn on unemployment in February, compared with January, for various population groups:

—Adult men, 4 percent, unchanged.

—Adult women, 5.7 percent, unchanged.

—Teen-agers, 16.1 percent, up from 15.7.

—Whites, 4.9 percent, down from 5.1.

—Blacks and other minorities, 11.9 percent, up from 11.2.

—Black and other minority teen-agers, 35.5 percent, up from 32.7.

—Full-time workers, 5.2 percent, unchanged.

—White-collar workers, 3.4 percent, up from 3.3.

—Blue-collar workers, 6.4 percent, unchanged.

Although the white-collar unemployment rate rose slightly, the Labor Department said these workers, especially professional and clerical help, were the big gainers in February.

The department said employment in retail trades rose by 115,000 persons during the month. It said employment gains among white-collar workers accounted for nearly 70 percent of the total increase in employment of 3.6 million persons during the past year.

The overall jobless rate has declined by 0.4 percent since February 1978, with a 250,000-worker reduction in the number of unemployed.

The number of persons with jobs as a percentage of the population hit a record 59.4 percent in February, the department said. The labor force totaled 102.5 million, which was 63.9 percent of the population, also a record high.

Although unemployment continued to decline in February, the administration says it will begin to increase at some point this year as result of Carter's actions to control inflation by slowing economic growth.

The Carter administration reluctantly concluded some time ago that it would have to postpone efforts to further reduce unemployment and even allow for some increase in 1979 to combat the nation's worsening inflation rate.

The Labor Department added new evidence of continuing inflation Thursday when it reported that wholesale prices rose 1 percent in February, with higher food prices again leading the way.

Prince Packs For Journey

State Department sources confirmed this morning that Iranian Crown Prince Reza Pahlavi will leave Lubbock sometime today to join his father and family members in Morocco.

Sources from a special Iranian task force at the department said that the prince has ended his training at Reese Air Force Base and will be leaving Lubbock permanently.

Reese Air Force Base officials still would not comment on the prince's plans. They did say that he was still on the base this morning.

Sources indicated that the U.S. Air Force would provide the prince with travel accommodations, but could not comment on whether the prince's plane would stop anywhere before arriving in Morocco.

Boxes that were apparently packing crates were spotted outside the prince's west Lubbock weekend retreat Thursday afternoon, indicating that departure plans might be imminent.

Speculation exists that the crown prince is going to Morocco to assist his mother with future family plans following the reported nervous collapse of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi at his Moroccan refuge.

The shah and his wife have been staying at a Moroccan resort since the middle of January, shortly after he fled politically divided Iran in the wake of a takeover by followers of Islamic leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

The shah's youngest son and two daughters later joined him in Morocco following a week and a half's stay with the Crown Prince at his Lubbock weekend residence.

The prince was seen late Thursday night at the lounge of a downtown Lubbock restaurant, apparently enjoying a night on the town before leaving his temporary West Texas home.

He arrived between 10 p.m. and 10:30 p.m. with an entourage of some three women and four men and was still at the club at 12:30 a.m.

The Crown Prince's trip to Morocco follows a first trip made at the end of January when he joined his brother and sisters for a flight to the African country. Accompanied by Ardeshir Zahedi, then Iranian ambassador to the United States, the prince vacationed with his family for about a week.

The prince's sister and brother, Prin-

City Police Nab 10 In Crackdown

Six undercover policemen, stopping at several Lubbock motels and private residences Thursday night and early this morning, arrested nine women suspected of being prostitutes and one woman who allegedly was giving massages without a permit.

Answering a newspaper ad, the officers first went to a residence in the 4300-block of 22nd Place where two women, ages 17 and 25, subsequently were arrested for prostitution. An 18-year-old female also was taken into custody after allegedly offering to give an officer a massage.

The 17-year-old woman was arrested after she offered to perform a sexual act with one of the officers for $60. The 25-year-old was taken into custody after she said she would have "straight sex" with one of the officers for $50, police said.

The arrests came about an hour after the plainclothes officers had gone to a 4400-block 36th Street residence where two women, ages 24 and 23, were taken into custody on suspicion of prostitution.

While police were there, each of the women reportedly offered to have sex with them for $30. In both calls to the private homes, police were answering newspaper ads which included advertisements for "nude dancing and wrestling."

The officers then started making calls on area motels, resulting in five arrests.

At 1:45 a.m. today, police went to a motel at 30th Street and Avenue H where a 17-year-old woman was taken into custo-

Sadat Asks Change In U.S. Peace Plan

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt (AP) — Rolling through the Nile delta on a slow train, President Carter and Egypt's Anwar Sadat said today problems and misunderstandings still block an Egyptian-Israeli treaty.

The Egyptian president said he is ready to sign such a treaty, but claimed that Israeli "misunderstandings" and mistrust block the way. He said that only "some words here or there" now separate the two nations.

U.S. officials indicated that it is Sadat who is unhappy with the American treaty proposals, however, and that the Egyptian leader is seeking revision of the plan agreed to by Israel.

Carter, speaking to reporters as he and Sadat rode an open railroad car from Cairo to this ancient port city, said talks are going well but "we still have some problems, obviously."

He planned to continue talks in Alexandria and to attend a state dinner with Sadat, remaining overnight and heading back for Cairo Saturday morning.

In Israel, Prime Minister Menachem Begin spent three hours briefing his cabinet and said afterward, "Everything now depends on the Egyptian answer. Israel has done its part."

The Israeli cabinet has already accepted compromise suggestions offered by Carter, but Sadat is seeking some modifications. Carter is scheduled to relay Sadat's response to Begin Saturday night in Israel.

Begin told a parliamentary committee that a positive response from Sadat would "pave the road to peace," but a negative response would be "Egypt's responsibility."

Israeli Justice Minister Shmuel Tamir said the cabinet had "paid notice" to Egypt's counterproposals and to Sadat's call on Thursday for "freedom" and "national rights" for Palestinians.

"I'm doing my best," Sadat said today. "But without the intensive effort by President Carter and the American people...we would have never reached a position" in which a treaty is within reach.

Carter and Sadat, said by U.S. officials to be unhappy with American treaty proposals, rode through 140 miles of blooming cotton and cheering throngs on the four-hour trip from Cairo to this ancient Mediterranean city.

Crowds along the way chanted, "Carter, Carter," and "Long live Sadat."

The train slowed, but did not stop as it passed through towns and villages. Helicopters hovered overhead during the trip.

In the populous town of Tanta, turbaned village musicians, berobed farmers, students and workers greeted the two leaders.

Hanging from trees and lampposts and clustered on rooftops an balconies, they shouted "We love you Carter; Viva Carter," and "We sacrifice souls and blood for you, Sadat."

There were reports the Secret Service had objected to the train trip, fearing that travel through open country, villages and towns was an invitation to trouble in a Middle East scarred with violence.

Carter and wife Rosalynn planned to

PRIME MINISTER BAZARGAN
Resignation Reportedly Refused

Khomeini Vows Support For Bazargan's Regime

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iranian Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan resigned from the country's provisional government today, but his resignation was turned down by the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, a source close to the prime minister reported.

Bazargan, 70, traveled 100 miles through a snow storm to submit his resignation to the ayatollah, Iran's religous and political leader, in the holy city of Qom.

Bazargan told the holy man Thursday he could not remain in office if "provocations" against his government continued.

The 78-year-old ayatollah, who masterminded the overthrow of the shah and appointed Bazargan to lead a new civilian government, reportedly gave Bazargan assurances of his continued support.

He was quoted as saying orders would be issued that would bolster government authority and curb the powers of Khomeini-appointed revolutionary committees, which run a parallel government to that of the prime minister.

Details of the directives to be issued have not been disclosed and confirmation of the resignation has not been confirmed by other sources.

Bazargan has increasingly criticized revolutionary committees for undermining the authority of his government, which was further eroded Tuesday when Khomeini publically criticized the Bazargan administration for being weak and for lacking a total committment to the establishment of an Islamic republic.

The source for the resignation report, who is close to the prime minister but requested anonymity, said today that Bazargan was still in the holy city meeting with Khomeini, but it was not immediately known how long he would remain there.

Solon Advocates Student Regents

By NANCY ALLEN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

State Rep. Froy Salinas, in an attempt to evoke "a more spirited student body" at Texas Tech University, said this morning he has introduced a bill which, if passed, would allow places for two Tech students as voting members of the board of regents.

According to Salinas' bill (HB 1897), the students would be appointed to the board by the president of the student association with the advice and consent of the student senate. They would not be appointed by the governor, as are all other regents.

"They must be the students' regents, not the governor's or anyone else's," Salinas commented.

The student regents would serve two-year terms, programmed to expire on alternate years. That would insure one experienced student regent at all times, said Salinas.

He likened the situation of students not having a regents vote to that of women not having that right at the polls.

"There presently is a good rapport among regents, university administrators and students," Salinas said, "but adding students to the regents board would make it better. It would make the university system work better for everyone involved."

Salinas cited more than 300 universities nationwide with voting student regents. "This is an idea whose time has come," he said."

In the sense that Salinas voiced support during his campaign for student regents at Tech, he said this bill -which he introduced this morning "by telephone" -is a fullfilment of a campaign promise.

Salinas indicated students he had talked to "would like to see some representation," adding, "I think it's right and I will work to get the bill passed in this session."

Today is the last day a bill can be introduced in the House without a suspension of the rules.

Grand Jury Indicts Three In Slayings

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A 21-year-old Tulsa, Okla., man today was indicted for murder in the beating death of a Lubbock man who was originally thought to have died of natural causes.

David G. Coronado, accused in the Feb. 8 death of 54-year-old Dillard O. Gaddy at a 2910 Avenue H apartment house, was among three men indicted for murder by a 140th District Court grand jury that returned 121 indictments at midday today.

He was arrested by Tulsa police a week after Gaddy was found dead and an autopsy indicated he had died of a heart attack. A 19-year-old Lubbock woman told Tulsa police, however, that Coronado had beaten Gaddy at his apartment and stolen $40 from him.

Jerry Ray Coe, 18, of 1601 Avenue C, No. 64, was indicted in the Feb. 11 stabbing death of John Lewis Gentry, 43, of 1606 Avenue C, No. 43.

Gentry was found lying in the street at 17th Street and Avenue C.

Coe was denied bond on the basis of having been indicted for aggravated robbery by the February grand jury.

Patrick Brito Olivas, 49, of Wichita, Kan., was indicted in the Jan. 15, 1977, beating death of a 3-month-old infant boy whose body was found Feb. 19 north of Lubbock.

Olivas was arrested in Kansas after a woman told Amarillo police he had beaten the child to death after the couple had an argument at a Lubbock motel. She led Lubbock authorities to where she said she had buried the child about a mile north of Farm 1729 and North University Avenue.

John Henry Galindo Pina, 48, of Fort Worth was indicted for possession of a controlled substance — heroin — in connection with his Feb. 22 arrest by Slaton police.

He was jailed under $500,000 bond after his arrest for heroin possession and for jumping bond in Fort Worth after being charged with possession of a controlled substance there.

Trinidad Lovato, 39, of 2101 Emery, No. 139, was indicted for injury to a child in the Feb. 28 serious beating of a 2-year-old boy.

Four Lubbock men were indicted for operating a gambling place in connection with a March 4 raid on a cockfight two miles east of Lubbock near U.S. 62-82.

They are Cruz Tijerina, 43, of 605 Zenith; Vonzie Hooper, 29, of 416 Idalou Road; Larry Mitchell, 24, of 1912 E. 19th St.; and Alberto Gonzales, 36, of 2917 Parkway Drive.

They were among 24 men arrested in the raid by law enforcement officers.

Adam Lovato, 16, of 1713 E. Cornell, a juvenile recently certified to stand trial as an adult, was indicted for burglary in a Nov. 30, 1978, home burglary in which two younger juveniles also were arrested.

The grand jury no-billed, or refused to indict, five persons.

Raymundo Castillo, 48, of 2813 Bates St., who had been charged with murder Jan. 29 stabbing death of 19-year-old Juan Luis Garcia of 1014 E. 28th St., was no-billed. A 23-year-old Smyer man, Raul

Congress Begins Studying 'Middle-Age' Problems

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional panel has solemnly declared old age to be "a direct outgrowth" of middle age. While this condition has existed for some time, the government is only now beginning to consider what to do about it.

Given the option, most middle-aged Americans would just as soon let nature take its course and make them older Americans.

House subcommittees on aging and retirement have set about studying the problems of middle-aged women, with the suggestion that there ought to be government programs to help them over midlife hurdles.

"They are now being 'discovered' much as the elderly and their problems were 'discovered' during the 1960s," said Dr. Robert N. Butler, director of the National Institute on Aging. "A general pattern may be found in this country when a particular group is perceived as a 'problem.'

"There is an increase in media attention, legislation, congressional hearings, professional conferences and academic seminars," he said. "Invariably, research relating to the newly defined 'problem' increases markedly once the federal government legitimizes the area through increased appropriation of funds."

There's no question that middle age brings problems, personal, psychological, professional and sometimes economic, and that they can be particularly difficult for women.

But there is room for doubt that the government can do anything about it, or that it should try.

Butler's description of the way a problem begets a program is a pretty good summary of the system that made the federal bureaucracy what it is today.

Actually, Congress got into the act five years ago when it created the National Institute on Aging in a bill that also declared "recent research efforts point the way toward alleviation of the problems of old age by extending the healthy middle years of life."

Analysis

Butler said his institute has not had the money or the personnel to conduct major studies of the middle years, but "middle age will certainly become a priority area as resources become available within the next several years."

Just where that would lead is not clear, although the 333-page congressional study of women in midlife includes suggestions for career counseling, education programs and legislative policies designed to put more women into elective and appointive offices.

The study is a compilation of 18 papers written by experts on the problems of midlife women. Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., chairman of the select committee on aging, said he hopes their proposals will be adopted soon.

"In the course of this committee's work in behalf of the elderly, we have become convinced that old age is not an isolated chapter of the human life cycle but a direct outgrowth and reflection of earlier years, especially middle age," said Pepper. "To the extent that the difficult struggles besetting many older American women can be identified at the point of inception in midlife, their adverse consequences can be mitigated and more responsive and cost-effective public policies developed."

Of course, if there are going to be public policies for middle-aged women, there will inevitably follow policies for middle-aged men. In most cases, their lives don't change as markedly and the problems are not so severe. Still, it would hardly do to leave a problem out there without a program.

FTC Report Defends Probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government trust-busters are defending their wide-ranging investigation into the auto industry that eventually could lead to such drastic action as breaking up General Motors.

"The automobile industry deserves considerable attention. It is one of America's largest and most concentrated industries. Yet, despite its enormous size, importance and concentrated nature, the automobile industry has not been the subject of a thorough scrutiny since 1939," Federal Trade Commission staffers said in a document released this week.

The auto industry has vigorously opposed the investigation, announced Aug. 2, 1976. The industry says it is a fishing expedition with no specific purpose.

The FTC staff document said the commission is looking at these general issues: pricing policies, profitability, how big an automaker must be to operate efficiently, vertical integration, product design and the exclusive dealership system.

"Although much has been written about the automobile industry, there exists a surprising dearth of information relevant to the six key areas of the commission's inquiry," the FTC document said.

Despite this lack of information, there has been no investigation based on internal company documents in the 40 years since the last federal antitrust probe, the FTC staff said.

The investigation resulted earlier this year in government-issued subpoenas for voluminous data from the four American automakers, FTC officials said at a news briefing. The officials refused to be identified publicly.

The subpoenas were challenged in federal court in Detroit by three of the automakers — General Motors Corp., Chrysler Corp., and American Motors Corp.

Ford Motor Co. did not join the suit, choosing instead to fight the subpoeanas before the commission.

GM, Chrysler and American Motors won a ruling by U.S. District Judge Fred W. Kaess that the subpoenas are so broad and vague the three they need not comply with them. The investigation as it applies to those three auto makers is at a standstill until an appeals court rules on the FTC's appeal of the lower court ruling.

FTC officials said Ford's decision not to join the Detroit court suit was the proper way to contest the subpoena. They said this move by Ford has resulted in about half of the demands being dropped from its subpoena through administrative action by the FTC.

Subpoenas directed at the other automakers could likewise be pared if they followed Ford's example, the officials said.

An FTC source said the probe is "not necessarily a law enforcement investigation," although he said the FTC has the authority to order the companies to sell part of their holdings.

An official said the investigation could be concluded in as little as two to three years, at which time the government antitrust experts could issue a report and ask for congressional action or file a case charging monopoly power in the industry.

Justice Department Endorses Merger Legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department's antitrust division has endorsed the concept of a bill by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., that would crack down on corporate mergers, but said the administration as a whole has not decided whether to support it.

Assistant Attorney General John H. Shenefield testified as the Senate Judiciary Committee, headed by Kennedy, began hearings on the proposal.

Kennedy's bill would prohibit mergers involving the 100 largest U.S. corporations — those with $2.5 billion in assets or revenues. Exceptions would be made when companies are willing to dispose of assets of the same size as the proposed acquisition.

The measure would place other limitations on mergers between companies in the top 500.

Shenefield stopped short of endorsing all details of the legislation, such as the precise dollar figures governing the size of corporations that would be affected.

"However, the basic outline of the statute ... is, the division believes, worthy of endorsement," he said.

"While the administration is closely examining the issue and its manifold implications, no final administration decision has been reached," Shenefield said.

At a White House briefing, administration officials said Shenefield would be speaking for the antitrust division and not for the administration in his testimony.

At the hearing, Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said the bill "could put American business in a straitjacket that could adversely affect the economic well-being of generations of Americans."

Hatch said the proposed restrictions on mergers "could reduce efficiency and technological advancement" and "could very well result in lower salaries and poorer working conditions."

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, chairman of the committee's antitrust subcommittee, said: "It is hard to make a convincing case that putting cigarettes, oil and gas and Hawaiian Punch under one corporate umbrella is going to bring about efficiencies."

Kennedy and Shenefield have argued that existing antitrust laws do not deal adequately with conglomerate mergers in which corporartions acquire unrelated businesses that are neither competitors, customers nor suppliers.

Shenefield said the government has not won a court case against a conglomerate merger since 1974.

An Associated Press-NBC News poll shows that most Americans are opposed to corporate mergers and believe they benefit executives and stockholders of corporations more than they do consumers.

The answers from the AP-NBC News poll are based on telephone interviews Feb. 5-6 with 1,600 adults across the country.

Here is the question asked in the poll:

"There have been a lot of mergers of American companies in the past year. Do you favor or oppose such mergers?"

The mergers were favored by 32 percent of those questioned, but 51 percent said they were opposed. Seventeen percent said they were not sure.

When asked if they favored or opposed the mergers of very large corporations, 23 percent of the respondents said they were in favor while 65 percent said they were opposed. Twelve percent were not sure.

Meanwhile, 82 percent of those questioned said they thought executives and stockholders benefit the most from corporate mergers, 7 percent said consumers benefit most, 4 percent said both groups benefit equally and 7 percent were not sure.

As with any sample survey, the results of the AP-NBC News poll could differ from the results of interviews with all Americans with telephones because of chance variations in the sample.

For polls with 1,600 interviews, the results should vary no more than 3 percentage points either way simply because of sample errors. That is, there is only one chance out of 20 that the results of interviews with all American adults would vary from these results by more than three percentage points.

Of course, the results could vary from other polls because of differences in the wording of questions, timing of interviews or the method of interviewing.

Caviar, Nut Supplies Dwindle

By United Press International

The gas pump isn't the only place reflecting the pain of high price and privation as the result of all that turmoil in Iran. People whose souls cry out for pistachio nuts and Persian beluga caviar are suffering too.

Iran is the primary exporter of both those delicacies and, as it is with oil, supplies have dwindled sharply since revolutionary forces deposed the shah and virtually shut the country down.

Shelves at Five Continents gourmet center in New York's Queens Center shopping mall offered only Icelandic caviar Wednesday and manager Robert Passante said the Iranian variety isn't likely to reappear for some time.

"The price of Iranian caviar — and that's Persian beluga, the best — has been unbelievably high since the first of the year," he said. "It's going now for $86 to $95 for four ounces, depending on where you buy it, if you can buy it at all."

The same applied, he said, for pistachio nuts, now selling at $21 per 5-pound bag.

In Los Angeles, "Mr. Zee" of Caviar, Inc. — who said the initial is an Anglicization of his long Russian name — also reported a shortage, but said his firm has plenty of the fancy fish eggs on hand.

"Due to turmoil, shipping is disrupted ... fishing was delayed due to uncertainties," he said. "But we have an exclusive contract with Iranian fisheries for another three years and we have a reasonable supply on hand — an ample supply ... for our regular customers."

Things weren't so sanguine for Jack Jurgenson who heads half a dozen caviar outlets in the Los Angeles area.

"It's been bad," he said of the beluga supply. "We've had a very short year. We pay $240 a pound. You couldn't command that price unless it was awfully short. I'm not out of caviar, but you invest $240 to get $298 out of it. If an ounce of caviar spoils, you're losing money."

The pistachio situation wasn't so bad.

"We had plenty at Christmas," he said. "We're doing all right. We sell a great number of 5-pound bags."

But the nut crunch is on in Baltimore.

"The whole thing sounds funny, but it's serious to my customers," said Danny Paskiewicz of the Cardinal Distributing Co. He said pistachio prices have gone up 10 cents, to $2.25 a pound, in Baltimore since last fall, and many outlets are selling them now for $5 to $6 a pound.

The nation's capital is no stranger to the caviar and pistachio famine either.

"Prices are up and we can't even get them," Steve Coopersmith of Marjack Co., Inc., said of pistachios. "I finally got my caviar order. I don't sell volu.ninous amounts, but I know the prices are up."

Across town, one outlet was posting caviar prices on a hand-written sign, for easy revision.

Howard Teitelbaum, of Associated Candy and Nut in New York, was suspicious of the whole thing.

"We've had contracts canceled on us. The importer tells us he can't complete the contract because there's no availability of goods, but we can still get pistachio nuts for above the contract price. It's like the old story with gasoline ... The information given to me is, yes, there is a shortege. Yet I can get pistacio nuts so I have to wonder if there really is a shortage."

A clerk at the nut and candy counter of New York's Abraham and Strauss department store entertained no such doubts.

"I don't know about Iran but we haven't had a pistachio nut in I don't know how long," she said.

Do customers complain?

Accused Teen Sniper Pleads Innocent

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — A teen-ager has pleaded innocent to killing two men in a sniper attack at an elementary school.

Brenda Spencer, 16, entered the plea Thursday, and her preliminary hearing was delayed until March 27. Miss Spencer is charged with two counts of murder and 18 other felony charges in the shootings on Jan. 29. Her lawyer has said he plans to appeal to the California Supreme Court a decision to try Miss Spencer as an adult.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

UFW Is Rolling In Dole

WHILE QUESTIONS are being raised here and throughout Texas about federally funded Comprehensive Education and Training Act (CETA) programs, Ronald Reagan's Citizens for the Republic Newsletter has revived interest in grants made in California.

There, Cesar Chavez' United Farm Workers union has been rolling in taxpayers' dough. Of late, Chavez has been itching to get back into the Texas farm labor union movement in a big way.

Are the taxpayers in effect financing his organizing activities?

ACCORDING TO the Citizens for the Republic, Labor Secretary Ray Marshall has signed some questionable grants to the UFW.

"Labor (Department) officials themselves did not know what type of grant they were awarding, or for how much, or even if they would be awarding a grant at all," the Newsletter quotes from a General Accounting Office report concerning one such grant.

It adds:

"So the government gave in to intransigent UFW officials and ended up awarding $120,925 to study the feasibility of conducting apprenticeship programs, $347,529 to teach English to 75 farm workers and $336,332 to teach manual skills to 16 workers.

"Total cost to taxpayers: $804,786. Cost per worker for the English classes conducted by a labor union: $4,633. Cost per worker to teach manual skills: $21,020.

AS THESE GRANTS indicate, there is a crying need for an investigation aimed at bringing to an end fat contracts awarded to non-government entities for classes better taught through the public schools if they are needed at all.

Instead, the CFTR alleges, the Department of Labor clearly "preferred to fund California agricultural apprenticeships specifically in a union context" and "there was no other agricultural union."

"THE GAO REPORT covers only Department of Labor grants but the Carter administration awarded the Chavez union more than $1 million in additional taxpayer funds in 1978," the Newsletter adds.

These were grants of $349,115 and of $600,000 from the Community Services Administration and of $195,000 from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, the latter to provide "technical and developmental aid for the UFW Credit Union."

Ever wonder why we have a federal budget deficit or where activist protest groups get their funding?

Junk The Junket?

THE FEDERAL DEFICIT for January alone was two billion, seven hundred thirty-one million dollars.

That's more money than 27,000 of us paying $2,000 each in income taxes every year would pay over a 50-year working lifetime. And the Guv'ment goes into the hole by at least that much every month!

CRITICS ARE labeling a weekend junket to Houston by state legislators as the moral equivalent of betting against the Longhorns when they play the Sooners.

Leave us be fair.

In the first place, as Randy Sanders grudgingly admits, the trip may have done some good.

"It got the Legislature out of Austin for a couple of days," he points out.

Sixty-six of the Legislature's 181 members took the all-expenses-paid four-day trip, which coincided with the Southwest Conference basketball tournament.

At a cost of an estimated $125,000 to Houston civic and business leaders, the "Harris County Weekend" had a noble purpose: to "educate" the legislators about the Houston Ship Channel, the Texas Medical Center, freeway congestion, institutions of higher learning, land subsidence and other matters of legislative interest.

Critics, of course, have zeroed in on the fun and frolic aspects of the trip and suggested that it constituted a questionable attempt at influence peddling.

THAT HOUSTON wanted to make points with the legislators is undeniable, just as does the University of Texas on a day-to-day basis and as do Lubbock and Texas Tech when they invite the members here once every two years for the Tech-Longhorn football game.

No one knows where the line is on improperly seeking to influence a lawmaker. Is it crossed when you buy him a cup of coffee? Or not until you give him a $500 suit?

Personally, I don't think any great harm can come from a community's giving a come-one-come-all freebie trip to the legislators.

If that's going to unduly influence anybody's vote, then the folks back in his district who sent him to Austin are the ones who made the mistake.

Holmes Alexander:

What You See Is What You Get

WASHINGTON—Call it another American Revolution, because that's what it is. Anybody who does not see the slow overturning of our government methods and social practices hasn't been looking.

The legislatures are anti-Congress, the people are anti-politicians. Some two dozen states at this writing are on record for reconvening the Constitutional Convention of 1789.

If two-thirds of the legislature unite in the call, the Revolution springs into action, and events take place. Rather than dread the change, we should rejoice in it, for it's overdue.

Prediction is a dangerous journalistic business, but these are some of the changes in view:

WITHOUT A doubt, the American majority is dead set against the deficit spending practice and all the abuses it has brought.

We must expect that important members of Congress will throw roadblocks against the Constitution reform movement, if for no other reason than that men do not often willingly give up high position and power.

No one should expect revolutionary reform to demand no sacrifice. The Associated Press and National Broadcasting Company released a poll which showed that 80 percent of those interviewed were ready to break from the federal patronage and pay for social benefits out of their own treasuries.

It was not very different in the first American Revolution. The Signers of the Declaration pledged "our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honors."

THE FIRST Convention startled the world and became one of its political miracles by achieving a Federal Union which was deemed impossible amid so many rivalries of farmers and seafarers, slave holders and wage-earners and their employers.

Another feature of the coming American Revolution has acquired the popular name of Proposition 13.

Two of the more foresighted men in the Senate, Dennis DiConcini (D) and Mark Hatfield (R) have entered a bill to make a national reality of the Proposition's central idea, which is that the American people are law-makers unto themselves.

The DiConcini-Hatfield measure is a joint resolution for a Constitutional Amendment so that the people "shall have the power to propose and enact laws" with some specific safeguards.

The time is here when Congress rather than the people should be restrained as to spending and expanded authority. If the social programs are passed back to the States, we could expect more genuine welfare and less bureaucracy.

A third entry for the new Constitution is really a counter-revolutionary measure—the return of prayers to the public schools. Again, as with budget-balancing, this demand is a revolt against the central government, the Supreme Court, in particular.

A fourth section of the second American Constitution will probably address itself to the Executive Department. The steady slide in character and stature of our Presidents is all too evident.

It was bad enough when we were deceived into joining other people's wars, with the inevitable loss of wealth and liberty. In recent years we have entered no-win wars, forfeited our good names as a treaty partner and allowed our essential self-sufficiency to dwindle into dependence on imported products.

A Constitutional Revolution must alter this. The first Convention gave us our best men for leaders. The second Convention must do as much, or the second American Revolution will fail us.

Sylvia Porter:

You Won't Be All Wet 'Diving' In Car Pool

WHAT CAN YOU, as one of America's millions of commuters by automobile, do to help checkmate your nation's evermore obvious vulnerability to blackmail by the oil-producing countries?

How can you protect your own pocketbook, already so battered by surging costs of other necessities—ranging from food to medical care—against energy hijacking?

Stop kidding around about carpooling and vanpooling! Share your driving with other commuters and you'll save truly eye-popping amounts.

Even before the latest blows from the oil producers, following the political shock waves in Iran, our demands for gasoline were still increasing and making the U.S. more vulnerable to any outside pressures.

ALTHOUGH OIL imports from foreign producers fell early in 1978—due to deliveries from Alaska's Arctic North Slope—they resumed their upsurge later. And for all of 1978, our demands for gas jumped 3 percent, says the American Petroleum Industry.

The Federal Highway Administration has developed significant statistics for commuters about the amount of money involved if you travel to and from work by driving alone, by carpooling and vanpooling.

They'll almost surely motivate you to save even more. In addition, they'll also help you to curb the negative impact on another of our priceless national assets: fresh air.

And another benefit: a highway system with fewer vehicles that is a lot more pleasant to drive on.

THE COST projections have been assembled on a conservative basis, using data from the Highway Administration as well as Federal Energy Administration studies that antedate the latest round of inflationary price hikes.

Meaning: the cost saving to you can be even greater than indicated.

At least two saving options are available:

(1) Shared driving which assumes that each person shares use of his or her car. All cars must carry insurance based on being driven to work, but each car gets a 10 percent discount due to reduction in work mileage.

(2) Shared driving in which one person's car is used. Costs for that car are shared equally among everyone in the carpool. Only that car must carry insurance based on being driven to work, but it does not get any discount due to reduction in work mileage.

TO ILLUSTRATE possible savings, say you drive a standard sized auto alone for a 20-mile trip (40-mile round trip) to work.

The federal government estimates that your total costs amount to $1,301 per year, exclusive of the costs of parking at work or any extra vehicle ownership costs if another car is needed in your household, since the commuting vehicle is not available.

The Highway Administration estimates you could save $557 by alternating driving with only one person in a shared-driving carpool ($1,301-$744) or save $976 by being one of four persons in a shared-riding carpool ($1,301-$325).

Even with a subcompact, your ridesharing savings can be considerable. Thus, your 20-mile subcompact solo trip is projected at $858 yearly. With two persons, your costs drop to $494.

In a two-person shared-riding subcompact carpool, your costs are estimated at $429. With four persons in the same carpool, your annual costs drop to only $215.

AND REMEMBER: these costs are now outdated! They were computed at gas prices of nearly 61 cents per gallon, against today's pump prices between 70 cents and 80 cents per gallon.

Get a worksheet with guidelines on how to tally your commuting costs by writing: Office of Public Affairs, Room 4208, Federal Highway Administration, 400 Seventh St., S.W. Washington, D.C. 20590. It's free.

Also get a 1979 Gas Mileage Guide, prepared by the U.S. Department of Energy by writing: Fuel Economy, Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo. 81009. It's free, too.

John D. Lofton:

Carter Leaves 'em Underwhelmed

WASHINGTON—"An incredible simulation."

This unintentionally oxymoronic description—being used here in TV ads to characterize a rock-and-roll show in which four young Americans impersonate the Beatles—came to mind as I read the text of President Carter's foreign policy talk in Atlanta at Georgia Tech.

Although a presidential aide says that the purpose of Carter's speech was to "show that ours is a consistent and well-thought-out policy—despite these charges that we are a weak, helpless giant and that we don't know what we're doing," the address, in fact, confirmed these charges.

A classic example of a performance that raised more questions than it was supposed to answer, Carter's Tech talk was not a demonstration of a President who has his head screwed on straight, but instead only an unconvincing imitation of such an individual.

CONSIDER CARTER'S remarks on the following subjects:

— Iran: On the one hand, the President said that among America's fundamental security responsibilities is to "stand by our allies and friends," to "protect the vital interests of the U.S.," and to "aid our friends and allies in time of trial."

On the other hand, Carter declared that the independence of Iran is "in our own vital interest and that of our closest allies—and we will support it."

Yet, in this same talk, Carter admitted that the U.S. did nothing to help our friend and ally, the shah of Iran, in his time of trial.

He said: "We have not and will not intervene in Iran," even though the future of this country "continues to be of deep concern to us and to our friends and allies."

In mid-January, the President told an NBC News interviewer: "I think that the Soviets—this is my personal opinion—basically want there to be a stable Iran."

BUT IN early January, the CBS Morning News reported that U.S. officials were concerned that inflammatory, anti-American Soviet broadcasts being beamed into Iran were endangering the lives of U.S. citizens in that country.

In early February, on ABC's "Issues and Answers," when asked if the Soviets were stirring up the disorders in Iran, CIA Director Stansfield Turner replied: "Oh, yes. They try to exploit any opportunity where there's unrest around the world."

In mid-February, a stern U.S. protest letter was handed to Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko complaining that false propaganda in official Soviet papers could damage "stability in Iran and U.S.-Soviet relations."

— Linkage: In his Tech talk, Carter warned that if other nations interfere in Iran, directly or indirectly, "they are on notice that this will have serious consequences and will affect our broader relationship with them."

BUT IN late January, at a White House background briefing, a senior administration foreign policy official rejected the notion of linkage, saying that linking SALT to other issues "would really create the preconditions for no progress on any issue."

— SALT: In his Tech talk, Carter said the SALT II agreement would establish "for the first time equal numbers of strategic arms for both sides." But SALT II will do nothing of the kind.

Under this pact the Soviets will be allowed to keep their 308 modern large ballistic missiles, whereas the U.S., which has none of these kinds of missiles, will not be allowed to build any.

This was not the first misstatement of fact the President has made about SALT II. In his State of the Union message he said that "just one" of our Poseidon submarines "carries enough warheads to destroy every large and medium-sized city in the Soviet Union."

BUT THIS, too, is a highly dubious assumption. As William Kintner, president of the Foreign Policy Research Institute, has noted:

"This statement assumes that all systems work perfectly from launching to target (100-percent reliable) and that all missiles will be fired before the Soviets locate the U.S. sub."

— Ambassador Adolph Dubs: In his Tech talk, Carter deplored the murder of our ambassador to Afghanistan at the hands of terrorists.

Despite the fact that the U.S. government has convincing evidence that at least three Soviet advisers were deeply involved in this slaying, the President has said nothing at all publicly about the role of the Soviets. The only action taken has been to cut U.S. aid to Afghanistan. Nothing specific has been done to the Soviets.

In a recent editorial, the New Republic magazine observed that "big and small nations, cartels and terrorist organizations have been competing with each other to use the U.S. as a doormat."

This is the reality. And no amount of presidential speechmaking will alter this sad state of affairs.

Redford Imposter Reported

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Some local residents insist Robert Redford already has arrived, but the blond box office smash isn't scheduled here for about a month.

REDFORD

Columbus' current Robert Redford is an impostor.

Someone has been introducing himself as the actor at night spots. He dances with women, says he's casting roles for his movie and takes interviews, says Mari Barnum, manager of the Ohio Film Bureau.

"I got 30 phone calls yesterday from people who insist they met Robert Redford," Miss Barnum said.

Redford is now in Utah filming another movie. He will be in central Ohio to work on "Brubaker," a prison film that uses an abandoned Ohio reformatory as its setting.

The Columbus impostor apparently bears a convincing resemblance to the actor. "He must be blond or something," Miss Barnum said.

Singer Raps IRS Action

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Jerry Lee Lewis, the piano-pounding rockabilly star, is singing the blues over IRS seizure of his property, and some of his comments sound like song titles:

"The IRS done me wrong. They treated me like a dog. There was nothing I could do." And, "They shouldn't have done that."

His comments Thursday were in his first interview since the Feb. 27 visit by Internal Revenue Service agents to his 30-acre ranch near Nesbit, Miss.

Acting on a writ of entry signed by a federal judge, the agents confiscated 20 vehicles, including a new $68,000 Rolls Royce, a Corvette, two Cadillacs, a Jeep and two antique Fords. The government says Lewis and his wife, Jaren, owe more than $168,000 in back taxes from 1976 and 1977.

Lewis said he wasn't told the agents and eight wreckers were coming.

"They just came to my house and didn't even knock, just took my cars away and didn't leave me one," he said. "They shouldn't have done that. They should have said, 'Jerry Lee, you owe us some money' — but I don't owe them that much money — then we could have worked something out. But they came right inside my house and even took my organ and my TV set."

Lewis, best known for his rousing "Great Balls O' Fire," doesn't think he'll see his cars again.

"I don't think they'll ever bring them back," Lewis said. "And I don't care if they don't. I'll go out and get me some more."

Israelis Honor Americans

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin presented awards to nine Americans who have made "unique contributions" to the rebirth of the Jewish state.

Recognized for their contributions to Israel were Leonard Bernstein, music; Richard Boone, cinema; Martha Graham, dance; Chaim Gross, fine arts; Jan Peerce, vocal arts; Dr. Albert Sabin, science; Dore Schary, dramatic arts; Roy Titus, industry, and Eli Weisel, literature.

The presentations came Thursday night at a dinner of the Israeli Bond Prime Minister's Club.

Bar Joy Juice In Jail

MADERA, Calif. (AP) — The inmates' sweet secret was spoiled by the sugar.

The Lighter Side Of Today's News

Correctional officers at the Madera County Jail went looking when they realized prisoners had bought 600 packets of sugar at the commissary recently.

They found the inmates had mixed the sugar in plastic bags with fruit served at meals. A couple more days, and the prisoners would have been drinking a home-made brew called "pruno."

"The name started years ago when the only fruit they received was prunes," Chuck Frazier, director of corrections, said Thursday. "They mix sugar and make prune wine. Now, they'll try anything they can get."

Frazier took the wine from the inmates but was philosophical about their attempt.

"This is a normal occurrence in a jail," he said. "They have nothing but time to figure out how to make a weapon, how to smuggle something in and how to make pruno."

He said the mixture would have made about 10 gallons of wine.

OIL SLICK SOLUTION

MOSCOW (AP) — A 50,000-square-yard oil slick in the eastern port of Vladivostok was mopped up in just 15 minutes with a new cleaning substance that turns the mess into 'gummy balls,' Tass reported Thursday. The official Soviet news agency did not say when the spill took place. According to the report, the Soviet cleaning fluid does not interfere with the free "breathing" of the sea or the atmosphere.

Reconciliation Fails; Greta Wants Divorce

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — John Rideout, acquitted in a widely publicized trial of raping his wife, says her decision to file for divorce two months after their reconciliation is "the final straw."

"This is the final straw. There's no turning back," Rideout said Thursday after learning that his wife, Greta, had filed a divorce petition in Marion County Circuit.

The couple announced their reconciliation Jan. 6 and told reporters they were happier than they had ever been.

But Rideout, who turned 22 Thursday, said he had not seen his wife or their 2½-year-old daughter, Jenny, since shortly before he received a note Tuesday from Mrs. Rideout saying she was leaving him.

Earlier this week, Rideout said, he learned that his wife had told a reporter that everything was not "peachy-keen" in their marriage.

"She left me everything here except her makeup and her car," said Rideout, referring to the north Salem residence they leased shortly after their reconciliation. "All of hers and Jenny's clothes are still here."

Last Dec. 27, a jury of eight women and four men acquitted Rideout in what was believed to be the first case in the United States of a man being charged with rape by a wife with whom he was living.

The latest separation is the couple's fourth since their marriage Nov. 15, 1976.

It came as no surprise to Charles Burt, one of the two lawyers who represented Rideout at his trial. "It's exactly what I expected," he said. "It fits the same pattern. They have separated and reconciled repeatedly, and it's a pretty tough history.

"They're just youngsters with a lot of problems."

Rideout said Thursday that his wife recently asked him to join her in seeing a marriage counselor. "I said, 'fine' but I never heard anything more about it," Rideout said.

When they reconciled, he said, "I tried to put everything in the past, and I felt I accomplished it."

In an interview last week with an Associated Press reporter, Mrs. Rideout said the couple had yet to visit a marriage counselor.

"We should," she said, "things aren't peachy-keen around here."

She did not elaborate except to say that when the subject of Rideout's trial comes up "we end up disagreeing and arguing ...."

Mexico Oil Estimates Based On 'Uncertain' Calculations

AUSTIN (AP) — Estimates that Mexico may have as much as 700 billion barrels of oil and gas in reserve are based on calculations that are "overwhelmingly uncertain," a University of Texas professor says.

William Fisher said, however, "It seems almost inevitable that Mexican oil and gas will also play a critical role in the energy future of the United States, in a manner not entirely known, or perhaps even knowable at the present."

Fisher is professor of geological sciences and director of the university's Bureau of Economic Geology. His views were presented in an article in the most recent issue of Texas Business Review.

He said Meixco's proven reserves at the end of 1978 stood at 40.2 billion barrels, and probable reserves -- as posted by the government oil monopoly PEMEX — totaled 44.6 billion barrels.

In both categories, Fisher said, about 70 percent is oil and 30 percent gas equivalent. "In addition, Mexico reports 200 billion barrels of potential reserves, with some sources giving a potential as high as 700 billion," he said.

"While proved reserves are known with a significant degree of certainty and probable reserves with reasonable, but less, certainty, potential reserves imply a very large degree of uncertainty, for they represent only the possible or speculative occurrences of oil and gas in structures and formations yet to be drilled and tested," Fisher said.

Apparently, he said, "the principal part of Mexico's potential reserve is based on assumptions about geophysically mapped structures, not on drilling tests."

Calculations from such mappings, he said, "are overwhelmingly uncertain and, from a technical standpoint, not very meaningful."

Fisher reported that a little more than 20 percent of the total holes now being drilled in Mexico are exploratory. By the end of 1978, he said, Mexico had 174 rigs operating, an increase of 14 from the previous year.

Mexican gas amounts to about 145 trillion cubic feet of the total proved and probable hydrocarbon reserves, or a little less than one-third the United States proved and inferred gas reserves.

"The United States, which now imports some 22 percent of its total energy consumption — a percentage that most likely will increase at least over the near term — logically is and will be looking to Mexican oil and gas," said Fisher.

"Mexican oil and gas will play a profound role in that country's economy and destiny," he said.

Multiplying Skunks Fuel Rabies Woes

AUSTIN (AP) — State health officials say skunks are multiplying like rabbits, and causing a serious rabies problem to boot.

"According to a review article, there are about a thousand times as many skunks today as there were when the Pilgrims landed," said Clifton J. Shepler of Tyler.

"It looks like we're actually going to double the actual number of clinically confirmed rabies cases in Texas," he told the House Committee on Environmental Affairs.

He testified on behalf of a bill that would ban the sale of certain live animals in Texas — skunks, armadillos, squirrels, bobcats, raccoons, porcupines, wolves, coyotes, bears and foxes.

"All of these wild animals have been (rabies) offenders," said the bill's sponsor, Rep. Bill Hollowell, D-Grand Saline. "We've had cases in all of them."

William R. Bilderback, a health department veterinarian in Austin, estimated that more than 1,000 Texans will need to get rabies shots this year. He said scientists are also studying whether armadillos might be carriers of leprosy.

The bill was referred to a favorable subcommittee for further consideration.

Research centers and zoos would be exempt from the ban on live animal purchases.

Shepler said the incubation period for rabies in skunks can be as long as 22 months and no vaccine can prevent it in wild animals.

Any human exposed to a skunk even before it showed symptoms of rabies would have to go through a painful series of rabies shots, he said.

Shepler added that a wild animal does not make a good pet.

"He belongs out in the wild where people can look at him and enjoy him at a distance," he said, with less danger of exposure to rabies.

Hollowell, an East Texas representative, said he became aware of the problem last year after health officials tried to track down potentially rabid skunks that had been purchased at a Canton trade fair.

"It was impossible to trace the exact skunks down because some of them changed hands five or six times," Shepler

Museum To Exhibit 185 Aztec Masks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Museum of Natural History is opening an exhibit of about 185 masks that Aztec priests and warriors wore in battle, to ward off evil spirits and to bury their dead.

The masks are among the surviving traditional Mexican art forms from the old Mexican Indian way of life. They were recently acquired by the Smithsonian Institute, which operates the museum, from the collection of Donald and Dorothy Cordry of Cuernavaca, Mexico. Cordry, who died last year, devoted about 50 years to the study, preservation and collection of Mexican folk arts and crafts. The exhibit will run throughout the year.

Brokerage Firms Stop Remote Checking

By PHILIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL

Chalk up a win for the Securities and Exchange Commission. After some poking and prodding from the commission, big stock brokerage firms are giving up a lucrative sideline — and their customers will be getting their own money a little faster.

Within the past few weeks, both Bache Halsey Stuart Shields and Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith said they will stop the "remote checking" practice that had kept investors waiting as much as 11 days for the use of their own money and let the firms rake in some extra, no-risk profits.

For the last few years, a number of firms were paying customers — dividends, interest and proceeds from sales — with checks drawn on banks at the other end of the country. East Coast customers received checks drawn on California banks and those on the West Coast were paid with checks from New York banks.

The reason was that it takes longer for cross-country checks to clear the banks, and that means the brokers had use of the money for a few extra days. At the current high level of interest rates, that meant that some firms were pulling in millions of dollars while investors had to wait for their money.

In October, the SEC issued an advisory statement warning the brokers that remote checking was unfair. The brokers also were warned about things like holding up dividend and interest payments until the end of the month (which allowed the firms to use the money in the meantime), and the commission went so far as to say that some of the practices could amount to fraud.

Initially, as we reported earlier, the brokers weren't impressed. Some of the big firms said they had no intention of chancing anything and argued that the real fault was with the banks, which are credited with money for out-of-town checks in two days and, therefore, didn't really have to make their depositors wait so long for their money.

Some SEC staffers didn't appreciate that response, however, and they applied some gentle pressure. The big firms got the hint and began to "re-evaluate" their policies. Bache was the first to switch over — all of its payments will be made from banks in New York. Merrill Lynch followed, paying proceeds of stock and bond sales from New York and dividends and interest from California. Other firms are likely to follow suit as well.

If you were a small, but highly-industrialized country in a very cold climate where you had to make the maximum use of your natural resources and native ingenuity to keep warm and keep your industry humming, you might have something to teach the rest of the world in these days of soaring energy costs. That's just what Finland's government and industry are about to do in this country.

Starting in Washington this week, and moving on to New York and Chicago next week, 15 Finish companies, plus some trade and government agencies, will present Finn Energy '79, a day-long conference on specialized energy technology. The idea is that the Scandinavian country has the know-how, experience and equipment it would like to share — for a price — with American companies and governmental agencies.

Finland also has a lot of peat for sale, and it knows how to develop that fuel as a major source of energy. In addition, it has long experience with the underground storage of oil, at which the U.S. is still a novice.

Thus, the series of conferences, which are designed to attract American utility and government officials, engineers, architects, builders and manufacturers and distributors of heating equipment, will feature such lecture topics as hydro power development in Finland, cost comparisons of peat as a competitive fuel, district heating systems, and how to contruct, manage and operate underground oil storage facilities.

These sessions are not exactly catering to a mass audience. But if the Finns can convince their listeners that their technology is worth buying, the land of the sauna could make a more significant contribution to keeping Americans warm in the years ahead.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has been the recipient of a $150,000 grant from American Telephone and Telegraph Corp. that it hopes will pay both social and monetary dividends for many years to come.

The Bell System has funded a sereis of six short films on the contributions that blacks have made to American life in the areas of music, art, dance, literature, theatre and leadership. The idea is to inform all American about those achievements and to reinforce in black youngsters a sense of pride about that heritage.

The films, which run from 11 to 21 minutes in length, are designed primarily for in-school use from the sixth grade on up and are about to be offered for sale to school systems, as well as governmental agencies, foundations and private organizations, around the country. A teacher's guide to encourage discussion of the subject matter has also been prepared.

Together with the accompanying printed materials, the color films will sell for around $900. What makes the project unusual — aside from its content and objective — is that the NAACP will continue to benefit from the sales of the series.

Firms Re-Evaluating Baltimore Canyon Expenses

NEW YORK (UPI) — Nearly a year ago, with much fanfare and effusive expressions of optimism, drilling operations began in the Baltimore Canyon, a massive prehistoric geological basin off the Mid Atlantic coast that was believed to contain huge quantites of oil and natural gas.

Now oil companies are re-evaluating the Canyon and, some observers have suggested, re-assessing the value of the entire U.S. outer continental shelf as a major domestic energy source.

One indication of the industry's loss of faith in th Canyon was the disappointingly low amount of money bid for leases in the govenment's second Mid Atlantic lease sale.

The first lease sale was held in 1976 at a dramatic meeting at a Manhattan hotel jammed with enthusiastic oil company executives, government officials and reporters.

The Canyon was then considered by many industry analysts as a potentially major source of domestic crude oil and natural gas and the oil companies endorsed this assessment with $1.13 billion worth of bids.

Last week, at the second government lease sale, oil companies bid only $41.7 million for 44 of the 109 tracts offered — one of the lowest lease sales ever.

Mobil Oil Co., the major partner in a consortium which made the largest bid in 1976 — $107.8 million — did not even participate.

Of the sixteen wells have been "spudded," nine were dry and six have not been completed.

Only one well, drilled by Texaco in an area once believed to hold 400 million to 1.4 billion barrels of oil and 9.4 trillion cubic feet of methane, has yielded any hydrocarbons. And that natural gas find may not even prove to be commercially viable.

In the heady days before the drilling, analysts thought the Canyon might supply as much as 250,000 barrels of oil a day within 10 years. Now, few oil executives hold much hope of a major find.

One reason for the pessimism is that the nine dry holes were located in the so-called Baltimore Dome and the Wilmington Dome, the two deepest and supposedly potentially richest areas of the 650,000-acre geological basin which stretches from Long Island, N.Y. to Virginia.

Those tracts cost the oil companies $272.3 million to lease and $102.1 million to explore. They have yielded nothing, and the blocks leased last week are located north, south and east of the two domes and are considered to have less potential.

Although no one yet has gone so far as to publicly say the Baltimore Canyon is a failure, that concern is on the minds of many oil company executives.

Frank Basile, director of the New York office of the U.S. Department of Interior's Outer Continental Shelf Office, said, "I don't think this area is written off yet, but it doesn't look as good as it did ..."

One indication of the oil industry's growing disenchantment with the Baltimore Canyon was Shell Oil Co.'s bid last week of $721,000 for two blocks.

Shell and several partners bid $183.4 million for 12 blocks in the 1976 lease sale. But, three of those blocks were dry and in January the company decided to suspend exploration of other nine. The total bill for Shell's part of the unsuccessful venture was about $90 million.

Other oil companies have shown little more enthusiasm than Shell.

Basile believes the fate of a second "confirmation" well Texaco is drilling 1½ miles west of the site where it discovered natural gas last year, will be critical.

Oil Refinery Threatens Bald Eagles

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Fish and Wildlife Service will reconsider plans for a Maine oil refinery and terminal because it threatens a struggling bald eagle population.

The service said the $700 million Pittston efinery at Eastport, Maine, would have an adverse impact on bald eagles from air pollution, oil spill contamination, and encroanhment on the eagles' habitat.

The company offered to clean up any oil spills from the refinery quickly, to feed the eagles in case of a spill, and to establish artificial reproductive programs if the eagles fail to multiply.

But Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus decided Wednesday to avoid another endangered species-development conflict.

The FWS last December told the Environmental Protection Agency the project would harm the bald eagle population in the region.

It said only 14 bald eagles were reproduced last year for the lowest rate of any major bald eagle population in the nation.

Maine is the only state north of New Jersey that produced fledgling eagles in 1977.

The Pittson case could have been the first full-fledged test of 1978 amendments to the Endangered Species Act which called for creation of a cabinet-level panel to decide whether a project had more economic and other benefits than a species in its way.

Under the act, the government is prohibited from taking any action which would wipe out a species. But the committee which Andrus chairs is empowered to grant exemptions.

"I firmly believe the Endangered Species Committee should serve only as a court of last resort," said Andrus. "First there should be ample opportunity to develop data, in the hope that accommodation can be reached without doing violence either to an endangered species or to a project."

Andrus' action will result in a delay in a review board's consideration of the Pittston application for up to 90 days.

A spokeswoman for the National Wildlife Federation said the bald eagle is "not the only problem" with the refinery. Fisheries are affected also.

Young Sisters Take Jewelry

DENVER (UPI) — A homeowner returned to find a 3-year-old girl, her pocket stuffed with stolen jewelry, and her 10-yearold sister inside the residence, police report.

Officers said this week the two girls apparently entered the home Monday by breaking a kitchen window. The home's owner returned while they still were inside and held them for police.

Two necklaces and a ring taken from the home were found inside the 3-year-old girl's pocket, officers said.

Police said the two girls and a 5-year-old brother were placed in a shelter home.

Divine Light Mission To Move To Miami

DENVER (AP) — The Divine Light Mission, headed by the Guru Maharaj Ji, is moving its national offices from Denver to the Miami area.

Mission spokesman Joe Anctil said this week the move is part of a two-year decentralization program. Florida was chosen, he said, because of its accessibility to overseas flights and the increasing number of mission festivals held there. About 30 persons will work in the headquarters in Miami, while the mission's legal office and its 10 staff members stay in Denver. The mission claims to have about 50,000 members.

Crazy Critter Invades Table

By SHARI LEWIS

Here's how you can make a crazy critter that will scuttle around your dining table in a very peculiar manner.

Before dinner, twist the four corners of a paper napkin to look like legs and (with felt-tipped pen) draw fierce eyes near one of the edges. Now shape the paper down over a lemon or orange, so the edges of the napkin just touch the surface of the table.

When your friends are eating, poke this napkin bug with your finger and he'll squirm this way and that as he changes directions. He'll look as though he can't decide whether to escape or attack!

TODAY'S BRAIN TWISTER: Place six pennies touching one another in two rows, as in the illustration. Can you change these two rows of coins into a circle of six coins in only three moves? The rules are: Handle only one penny at a time without moving any other; when a penny is moved to a new position, it must still touch two other coins. Tax Chaser Earns Keep STOCKHOLM, Sweden (UPI) — Sweden's first dog-tax collector caught 550 violators in his first month on the job, collecting $2,335 in delinquent dog license fees.

Nils Tyllander said he staked out parks, street corners and public squares in Stockholm, approaching dog owners whose pets lacked the $22.90 dog tax tags on their collars.

"Most of them are nice," he said. "But some gallop off when I start talking to them."

A dog tax office controller said Tyllander was a rare civil servant, who produced his own salary and more.

Surviving Siamese Twin Fed Formula

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A surviving Siamese twin, separated from her sister last week, is now being fed by formula and is in stable and satisfactory condition, a hospital official says.

A spokeswoman at St. Christopher's Hospital for Children said Wednesday that the infant, identified only as "Baby A," had been fed by intravenous fluids.

Houston's MTA Hits Snags

By STEVEN R. REED

HOUSTON (UPI) — Mass transit, disdained by Texans who equate freeways with freedom, is forging a money-strewn path across the South's largest metropolitan area in response to the panic of its urban commuters.

So urgent was the need to ease traffic-choked freeway queues that voters in and around the nation's fifth most populous city wed themselves to a few-billion-dollar, sales tax-supported plan last August, five years after kicking the hubcaps off another transit proposal that might have prevented the current crisis.

"We used to solve out problems by building a freeway," said Howard Horne, chairman of the Metropolitan Transit Authority that began operating Jan. 1. "That was our mass transportation system. Now it's clogged."

"The Houston freeway system," said Barry Goodman, executive director of the MTA and former city transportation director, "is in a state of confusion."

The city's transportation problems, and the growth of these problems, can be expressed in a few impressive statistics:

— Twelve of the 15 busiest roads in Texas are in Harris County, including the busiest intersection. The Highway Department counts 500,000 cars per day at the junction of Interstate 610 and U.S. 59 in southwest Houston.

— The Census Bureau reports 96 percent of the Houston work force drives to the job compared to 4 percent using mass transit. Of the non-transit users, 72 percent ride to work alone over a greater median distance — 9.2 miles one way — than any other urban area in the nation.

—The population increased by 70,000 last year, to 2.4 million, while the number of car registrations soared by 140,000 — a net increase o 383 cars daily onto the street system.

"It (traffic) is getting more and more critical every week," said Chris Olavson, area traffic manager for the Highway Department. "In the next 20 years we're going to add another 2 million people and another 1.5 to 2 million vehicles. Twice as many people, so twice as many trips.

Demand on the system will double."

During the same two decades the freeway system also double, to 400 paved miles, but the net effect is expected to be less than encouraging.

"We hope it's going to be a little better than it is today," Olavson said. "As far as any massive relief, I don't think so."

Psychologists say Houston drivers haven't learned how to cope with the traffic problems of their burgeoning, oil-supported community. Commuter frustration outweighed the climate of Proposition 13 and was the key to passage of the transit plan now off to a controversial start.

Voters hoping for overnight results provided overnight riches to a city-county appointed, seven-member MTA board.

The MTA concept eliminated subways as too costly; surface trains as inappropriate because of the problems of right-of-way acquisition; but agreed elevated, rail-guided "transitways" would work if the public could wait 10 years for them to be built atop existing freeways at a cost of perhaps $3.2 billion.

Meantime, the board offered lucrative salaries to attract a team of professional administrators, led by Goodman, to offer short-term relief through a highly publicized car-pooling plan, a park-and-ride program to lure first-time bus riders, contruction of special freeway lanes for multi-person vehicles and, most important, emergency measures to make the buses run on time.

Inundated with money, the adminstrators also inherited a mess.

"In my personal opinion this is absolutely the worst bus system in this country," said Richard Drake, MTA director of operations.

Drake spoke from the Houston bus barn, built in 1905 to house and repair trolleys.

As a sample: "The roof is so bad that when it rains you have to issue rain gear for the people who work inside," he said. "When you really get a downpour, the inspection pits fill up with water and you have to stop all work and bail them out."

While still in the stages of its infancy, the MTA board stumbled into a public relations disaster.

Acting on Goodman's recommendation, members approved the purchase of 38 air-conditioned, full-size V-8-equipped staff autos. The cars were to have white wall tires and remote control mirrors, among other extras.

Negative public reaction forced the board to reduce the order to 32 six-cylinder, mid-size cars while promising to ride the buses regularly to keep in touch with the "stockholders" (taxpayers).

With voters wondering if they had created a monster, one board member rebelled against his colleagues, offering his resignation amid criticism of Goodman and doubts for the future of the 10-year, $3.2 billion dollar scheme.

"I don't know if he's ever gotten on a bus except in Washington but he certainly doesn't know anything about running a bus system because he's never worked for one," board member Howard Fidler said of Goodman, a former lawyer in the federal Urban Mass Transit Project.

"I think before it's all over we'll make the BART system (in San Francisco) look good by comparison," said Fidler. "We're gonna turn this young man (Goodman) loose to spend all this money and pour all this (transitway) concrete and yet the board refuses to exercise control. If he's wrong, we have a tremendous problem. You can't rip it all out and start all over."

Goodman, the MTA's top administrator, and Horne, the wealthy MTA board chairman whose stake in the transit plan is tied to his role as the leading broker of downtown office space, rolled with the punches and insisted Houston will work out the kinks and join the mass transit big leagues.

Goodman said what the public must understand was clearly stated in the MTA plan and the pre-election rhetoric.

U.S. Maintains Oil Reserve

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States has an emergency supply of 75 million barrels of oil — the equivalent of nine days worth of imports — stored in three underground sites in Louisiana and Texas.

The so-called Strategic Petroleum Reserve was launched by Gerald Ford in 1975, and its total storage target was doubled by President Carter from 500 million barrels to 1 billion. But the storage program, plagued by management problems and accidents, is running more than a year behind schedule.

The reserve was started as a buffer against another serious energy crisis such as the one created by the 1973-74 oil embargo. But if necessary, according to energy department officials, it could be tapped to help solve such lesser problems such as the current Iran shortfall.

Officals said temporary pumps could be installed within 30 days of a decision to do so, providing a flow of 100,000 barrels a day, while permanent pumps — scheduled to be in place in August — could provide 300,000 barrels daily. There are no plans to tap the reserve at this time, officials said.

Emily Post, author of "Etiquette," wrote "The Personality of a House," a book on interior decoration, in 1930.

Einstein's Friend Addresses Symposium

PRINCETON, N.J. (UPI) — Finding a basic principle that would contain all the laws of nature was the last dream of Albert Einstein, but he never gave up hope that someone would discover it, an old friend and associate said Thursday.

Eugene P. Wigner of Princeton University, who won the Nobel Prize in Physics in 1963, spoke at the Einstein Centennial Symposium sponsored by the Institute for Advanced Study. The six-day event opened a national celebration of the 100th anniversary of Einstein's birth.

Wigner was the man who was teamed with scientist Leo Szilard in briefing Einstein in 1939 on their discovery that the Germans had managed to split the atom. Einstein agreed to write a letter to President Roosevelt alerting him to the possibility that Nazi Germany might try to make an atom bomb.

The "famous letter," as it now is known, was followed by Roosevelt's ordering the project that produced the first atomic weapons dropped on two Japanese cities in 1945, ushering in the atomic age.

Wigner lists himself in that connection in "Who's Who in Science" as, "contributed to establishing nuclear chain reaction and its exploitation."

He told an invited audience of distinguished scientists at the symposium today that he first saw Einstein in 1920 at a physics meeting held at the University of Berlin, about which a colleagse later wrote in remembrance of the great man:

"The magic of his personality imposed itself on almost everybody who came in touch with him, and the very name Einstein has assumed a charismatic sound...."

"Unfortunately," Wigner said, "much of this had changed" when Einstein came to the United States in 1930 to join the institute, where he stayed until his death in 1955.

The renowned father of relativity never felt at home with the English language and was deeply concerned that Hitler's Germany would defeat the democracies in World War II. In addition, said Wigner, "his interest deeply devoted to a modification of the general relativity theory so as to form a common basis for all physics and perhaps even for all science, was very different from the prime interest of his collegues."

Einstein "always hoped that such a theory would be established."

"Whether this theory," Wigner continued, "would also describe the regularities of the phenomenon of life is the question which I never have heard discussed by him — my impression is, and it is only an impression, that he did not expect that it would extend that far."

Wycliffe Translators Visit City Churches

A group of Wycliffe Bible Translators is in Lubbock this weekend, participating in services at various city churches Sunday.

John Tuggy is speaking at the chapel at Reese Air Force Base, beginning at 9:45 a.m. Sunday, and at Melonie Park Baptist Church at 6:10 p.m. Sunday.

He and his wife, Sheila, have been members of Wycliffe Bible Translators for more than 20 years. Tuggy, a native of Venezuela, and his wife, a native of Glasgow, Scotland, have recently completed the translation of the New Testament for a tribe in Peru.

They have been assigned to various administrative posts with Wycliffe in Peru, but their main interest and assignment has been in working with the Candoshi people of northeastern Peru. Mrs. Tuggy is presently involved in all the processing and proofreading of the Candoshi New Testament, which should be ready for distribution in September. Tuggy is presently in a study program working towards a master's degree in linguistics.

Mr. and Mrs. Tuggy expect to return to Peru in September for a new assignment as translation and linguistics consultants. They also hope to learn another language and be involved in translating the Scriptures for another group of people there.

John McIntosh, a former director of the Wycliffe work in Mexico, is speaking Sunday at 9:30 a.m. and at the morning worship at 10:30 a.m. at Grace Chapel, 45th Street and University.

McIntosh and his wife, Genevieve, joined the Wycliffe Translators in 1941, went to Mexico and translated the Gospels of John and Mark for the Huichol tribe of Mexico.

He also has directed the Wycliffe work in Bolivia and Central America and was instrumental in beginning the Wycliffe work in Japan. For the past several years, he and his wife have been in the Dallas area in charge of the South Central U.S. Regional Office of Wycliffe.

McIntosh also has done advanced work in linguistics at the University of Michigan. The McIntoshs' two sons are members of Wycliffe Translators, one serving in Colombia and the other serving in California.

Robin Farnsworth, a native of New Zealand, is speaking Sunday at Trinity Baptist Church at 9:30 a.m., South Plains Bible Chapel at 11 a.m., and Trinity Church at 5 p.m.

He and his wife, Marva, a native of Southern California, have completed the translation of the New Testament for the Mambu tribe in New Guinea. They are in the process of getting the tribe's New Testament printed and sent to the New Guinea tribe.

Mr. and Mrs. Farnsworth are currently residing near Dallas and he is teaching courses at the International Linguistic Center in the principles of translation. They expect to return to New Guinea later this year for the dedication of the tribe's New Testament and will then return to Dallas to resume teaching responsibilities.

Dave Linton, who has taught in the Wycliffe school for missionaries' children in Peru, is speaking Sunday for the adult Sunday School at 9:20 a.m. at Asbury United Methodist Church, at Oakwood United Methodist Church at 5 p.m. and at Asbury United Methodist Church at 6:30 p.m. The evening worship service at Asbury United Methodist Church will feature the new Wycliffe film on their translation work, "Mountain of Light."

In addition to six years in the teaching profession, Linton has served 5½ years with Youth for Christ in the northeastern United States. He and his wife, Sue, have been involved in representing Wycliffe in colleges, churches, banquets and mission conferences throughout the northeastern United States.

Recently transferred to the South Central Regional Office of Wycliffe in the Dallas area, Linton is coordinating regional programs which support the work of Bible translation.

Wycliffe Bible Translators was founded to provide the Scriptures for language groups who have no access to the Bible in a language they can read or understand. Teams assigned to more than 650 languages in 32 countries have already published more than 100 New Testaments. In the next two years, more than 100 more New Testaments are expected to be completed.

GOSPEL MUSIC PROGRAM — Host Tennessee Ernie Ford and special guest star Della Reese will be among the participants appearing on a two-hour gospel music program, "That Great American Gospel Sound," at 8 p.m. Tuesday on KTXT-TV Channel 5. The show was recorded live before a near-capacity crowd at Opryland, U.S.A., in Nashville, Tenn.

Dance Group Sets Appearance Here

AMARILLO (Special)—The Sacred Dance Group of Boulder, Colo., will be in the Amarillo Diocese of the Roman Catholic Church March 16-25, sponsored by the United Campus Ministry of West Texas State University in Canyon and the Christian Formation Office.

The group was formed in 1969 and has at least 20 members who feel called to pray and worship through prayerful movements and dance, according to a diocesan spokesman. The Sacred Dance Group is available for presentations, workshops and scripture-type services. The group has toured extensively in the United States and Canada and performed in England, Holland and Switzerland.

The Boulder group originally was directed by Bill and Paula Douthett, who have formed a ministry group in Longmead, England.

Cheryl Yarusso from St. Martin De-Porres Catholic Church in Boulder now directs the group.

They will give a performance of "Lenten Themes" from 2:30 p.m. to 4 p.m. March 18, hosted by Our Lady of Grace Catholic Church of Lubbock.

They will give a Penance service, with the theme "The Cross," at 7:30 p.m. March 18 at St. Michael's Catholic Church in Levelland.

At 7:30 p.m. March 19, the group will give a Penance service at St. Elizabeth-St. John Neumann Catholic Church in Lubbock.

At 7:30 p.m. March 21, the group will give a "Prayerful Movements and Dance" program with teens at Our Lady of Grace Catholic Church in Lubbock.

On March 23, the group will give a "Prayerful Movements and Dance" program with teens at Sacred Heart Catholic Church in Plainview from 4:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m., followed by a Penance celebration at 7:30 p.m. Theme for the Penance service March 23 at the Plainview church will be "The Cross."

Missionary Programs Scheduled

Methodist missionaries to Zaire, Africa, and a ministerial student from Liberia will be featured this weekend as Slaton and Tahoka United Methodist Churches conduct their annual missionary conferences.

Also appearing on the programs at both churches will be a representative of Lydia Patterson Institute, a Methodist missionary training facility in El Paso.

Both churches are beginning a three-day conference with a program tonight, followed by coffees in homes of members and programs for youth on Saturday, and special services Sunday morning with members of the visiting missionary teams in charge.

Also on Sunday, members of the two churches will pledge financial support to Methodist missionary programs in the form of "faith promises," according to ministers of the churches, Rev. Herb Tavenner of Slaton and Rev. Newton Starnes of Tahoka.

The two churches are not joining their programs, but are sharing the efforts of the visiting missionaries and students, who are commuting between the two cities this weekend.

Rev. and Mrs. Elwood Bartlett, missionaries to Zaire, are participating as is Daniel Brewer, a Liberian who now is a student at Southern Methodist University.

Sharon Pudlo of Levelland's First United Methodist Church is leading the music at the Slaton Methodist church and telling about Red Bird Mission in Beverly, Ky. Karen Sinnard is representing Lydia Patterson Institute during the special weekend events.

Bartlett has been a missionary to Zaire since 1940 and is now on the faculty of a training school for ministers in that country. A native of Plainville, Kan., he holds a master of arts degree from Columbia University.

Mrs. Bartlett has served in Zaire since 1945, teaching in the schools and promoting women's work in the conference. She is a graduate of Baldwin Wallace College in Ohio and also holds a master's degree from Columbia.

Brewer, 35, has taught school, edited a series of books for West African Sunday Schools and directed television programming. He now is a candidate for a master's degree at Perkins School of Theology at SMU.

Miss Pudlo, a Lubbock native, is a gradute of Southwestern University and has a master's degree in church music education from Scarritt College in Nashville, Tenn. She currently is director of music and youth at the Levelland Methodist church.

Miss Sinnard from Emporia, Kan., teaches science and algebra at the El Paso institute. She is discussing what is termed a US-2 missionary program.

Amarillo Woman To Speak In City

Mrs. Willie Rogers of Amarillo will speak at a Women's Aglow Fellowship of Lubbock meeting Thursday. The meeting is scheduled from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. at the Hodges Community Center, located at 41st Street and University Avenue.

Mrs. Rogers will be sharing her testimony of healing of asthma and also how healing was introduced to her family when she was a little girl, an organization spokesman said.

She has spoken to Women's Aglow Fellowships in Texas and Kansas. She has evangelized across the United States, Canada and Mexico and pastored churches in Okahoma and Texas. Her missionary tours include India, Hong Kong, China, Egypt, the Netherlands, England and the Philippines.

Anton Woman Writes Adult Sunday School Materials

A-J Correspondent

ANTON — Bessie L. Kennedy of Anton is a writer of Adult Sunday School curriculum materials for the Sunday School Board of the Southern Baptist Convention for the second quarter (April-June) 1979.

BESSIE L. KENNEDY

She has written the teaching procedures in the "Adult Bible Teacher," Life and Work Series, and the related materials in "Adult Leadership" magazine, "Sunday Morning Sessions," "Planning the Bible Study," and "Sunday Morning Department Period."

Mrs. Kennedy also contributed learning activities material for the "Adult Life and Work Resource Kit" for the same quarter.

She is the wife of Rev. Martin T. Kennedy, pastor of Central Baptist Church in Anton. They have three children, Mrs. Peggy Ann Peters, an elementary teacher in Mesilla Park, N.M.; Martin Jr., a public school teacher in Abernathy; and Kirby, a junior at Wayland Baptist College in Plainview.

Mrs. Kennedy is currently a teacher of young adults in Sunday School at the Anton church. She also is a regular substitute teacher in the Anton public schools.

Discussing teaching and teaching procedures, Mrs. Kennedy said, "My interest in teaching goes back a long way. My main concern as a teacher has been not only that I present to others truths that I have learned, but, more important, that I find ways to help others discover truths for themselves. This is what learning is all about."

She has been a conference leader for Southern Baptist Convention-wide teacher training conferences held during Sunday School Week at Glorieta Baptist Conference Center, N.M. She also has taught numerous Sunday School teacher training courses in local churches.

Mrs. Kennedy began writing for Baptist periodicals about four years ago. She said, "The New Mexico Sunday School Director, Ed Storm, recommended me to the Sunday School Board as a possible writer. I wrote a sample and was selected. This has been about a two-year assignment, from July, 1976, to June, 1978."

She added, "I attended a writer's conference in Nashville, Tenn., in January, 1977."

Discussing problems she encountered in writing, she said, "The biggest problem I had in writing was in making time to write. Daily living can take all of our time. Because of other duties, my schedule must be flexible. However, when I am working on an assignment I set aside four to six hours a day for writing. I may work from 5 a.m. to 9 a.m. or from 6 p.m. to midnight, but I try to get in the allotted number of hours each day."

Mrs. Kennedy attended Oklahoma Baptist University in Shawnee, Okla., and Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth, which had influence in directing her interests toward religious education and writing, she said.

Her husband has pastored frontier missions in the western states, New Mexico, Arizona and Texas, and Mrs. Kennedy said she has incorporated the practical experience from these pastorates into the teaching materials she writes.

First Baptist Invites Guest Speaker

Dr. Grady C. Cothen, president of the Sunday School Board of the Southern Baptist Convention, headquartered in Nashville, Tenn., will be the guest speaker at all three worship services Sunday at Lubbock's First Baptist Church.

The worship services Sunday at the church are 8:15 a.m., 10:45 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Dr. Cothen has been president of the Sunday School Board since February, 1975. The Poplarville, Miss., native is the son of the late Rev. and Mrs. Joseph H. Cothen.

A graduate of the Hattiesburg, Miss., High School, he received a bachelor's degree in 1941 from Mississippi College and a master's degree from New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary in 1944.

Dr. Cothen has received honorary degrees from California Baptist College, Mississippi College, William Jewell College, the University of Richmond and Oklahoma Baptist University.

He has pastored churches in Chattanooga, Tenn., Oklahoma City and Birmingham, Ala. He also has served as executive secretary-treasurer of the Southern Baptist General Convention of California, president of Oklahoma Baptist University and president of the New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary.

Dr. Cothen also has served as a trustee of the denomination's Foreign Mission Board, Oklahoma Baptist University and New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary. He has served as first vice president of the Southern Baptist Convention, on the executive committee of the Baptist World Alliance and the executive committee of the American Association of Theological Schools.

The guest preacher is a frequent contributor to professional and religious journals and is the author of "God of the Beginnings," and "Faith and Higher Education."

School Of Prayer Slated At Episcopal Church

The first Diocese of Northwest Texas of the Episcopal Church School of Prayer is scheduled March 30-31 at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Lubbock.

Rev. Donald N. Hungerford of Odessa and Betty Gilmore of Midland will lead the school.

Rev. Hungerford is rector of St. John's Parish in Odessa and Mrs. Gilmore is past president of the diocesan Episcopal Churchwomen.

The School of Prayer is open to both men and women. It is a joint project of the diocesan Churchwomen and the diocesan Commission of Christian Ministry and Mission.

The purpose of the school is to deepen, through study of prayer, the devotional life of those attending. The school has been designed for persons at all levels of prayer experience and will concentrate on participation and training in prayer and discussion of prayer.

Participants should arrive at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, 11th Street and Slide Road, by 6 p.m. March 30, according to a diocesan spokesman.

A light supper will be served March 30 and an evening session of the School of Prayer will follow. The event will continue at 8:30 a.m. March 31 with a Holy Eucharist service, followed by a morning session of the school. Lunch will be served March 31 and Rev. Hungerford will then lead a Passion meditation. The event will be dismissed at 1 p.m. March 31.

CHURCH BRIEFS

Lubbock Baptist Association's finalist high school choirs are participating today and Saturday in a state youth choir festival at Wayland Baptist College in Plainview.

The Vandelia Church of Christ will have homecoming services Sunday with Lamar Reinsch at guest speaker.

Missionary-evangelist Claude Updike will lead a mini-revival March 18-20 at the First Church of the Foursquare Gospel, 3115 2nd St.

The international and handbell choirs of Wayland Baptist College will present a program during the 7 p.m. worship service Sunday at Bellaire Baptist Church, 5514 34th St.

Mark McBrayer, director of Lubbock Youth for Christ, recently attended an annual staff and board conference of Youth for Christ in Florida. Johnny Cash, country music recording artist and entertainer, was named "Man of the Year" at the concluding session of Youth for Christ's annual staff conference.

The congregation of Lake Ridge United Methodist Church, the city's first United Methodist Church south of Loop 289, will meet at 10:50 a.m. Sunday for worship service in Room 3A of the Winfrey School, 83rd Street and Toledo Avenue.

The senior high fellowship of Covenant Presbyterian Church will sponsor a taco luncheon Sunday, immediately following the morning worship service. Proceeds from the luncheon will be used for a retreat to Six Flags Over Texas in Arlington May 25-27. Mr. and Mrs. Bud Jarrell are sponsors of the group.

The adult fellowship of Covenant Presbyterian Church is having a fiesta supper at 7 p.m. today in the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Hester, 4301 N. Boston Ave., No. 18.

Seminar Aims At Alcoholism

Alcoholism—a family concern—is the focus of a one-day seminar from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Saturday at the First Christian Church.

The seminar for youth and adults will provide individuals and families with the most up-to-date information available concerning the problems of alcoholism. Some of Lubbock's top authorities in the field of alcoholism and drugs will present lectures, groups, discussions, films, and panel discussions, all geared to help youth and adults deal more effectively with the problem.

There will be separate sessions for youth (junior and senior high age) and adults to deal with specific problems that confront both age groups.

Church Plans Youth Retreat

The Youth of Today at St. Elizabeth-St. John Neumann Catholic Church are sponsoring a special youth retreat today and Saturday, featuring Joe Reed.

The retreat is entitled "Victory in Christ" and is being held at St. Elizabeth-St. John Neumann School, 22nd Street and Frankford Avenue.

Reed, a professional player for the Detroit Lions football team, is ministering in concert at the retreat. He has been active with the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, Athletes in Action and Professional Athletes Outreach. He has appeared on the 700 Club, Billy Graham's Southeastern Michigan Crusade and in churches throughout the United States.

The concert is open to the public, free of charge, and begins at 8 p.m. today.

Area Pastors Receive New Assignments

New assignments were given to Rev. Alfred Bednorz, Rev. Robert Ibe, Rev. Peter Otto and Rev. George Roney.

Bednorz, who has been associate pastor at St. Laurence Cathedral since Jan. 7, 1978, has been appointed associate pastor of St. Margaret Mary Catholic Church in Lamesa. He was ordained to the priesthood June 24, 1977, and served as associate pastor of St. Mary's Parish in Amarillo until his appointment to St. Laurence Cathedral.

Ibe, who has been associate pastor at Our Lady of Grace Catholic Church since his ordination June 1, 1978, has been appointed associate pastor of St. Elizabeth-St. John Neumann in Lubbock.

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM The Newspaper Bible

Luke 11:31-41, The Living Bible

31 And at the Judgment Day the Queen of Sheba shall arise and point her finger at this generation, condemning it, for she went on a long, hard journey to listen to the wisdom of Solomon; but one far greater than Solomon is here (and the people pay no attention).

32 The men of Nineveh, too, shall arise and condemn this nation, for they repented at the preaching of Jonah; and someone far greater than Jonah is here (and it won't listen).

33 No one lights a lamp and hides it! Instead he puts it on a lampstand to give light to all who enter the room.

34 Your eye lights up your inward being.

A pure eye lets sunshine into your soul. A lustful eye shuts out the light and plunges you into darkness.

35 So watch out that the sunshine isn't blotted out.

36 If you are filled with light within, with no dark corners, then the outside will be radiant too, as though a floodlight is beamed upon you."

37, 38 As He was speaking, one of the Pharisees asked Him home for a meal. When Jesus arrived, He sat down to eat without first performing the ceremonial washing required by Jewish custom. This greatly surprised His host.

39 Then Jesus said to him, "You Pharisees wash the outside, but inside you are still unclean — full of greed and wickedness!

40 Fools! Didn't God make the inside as well as the outside?

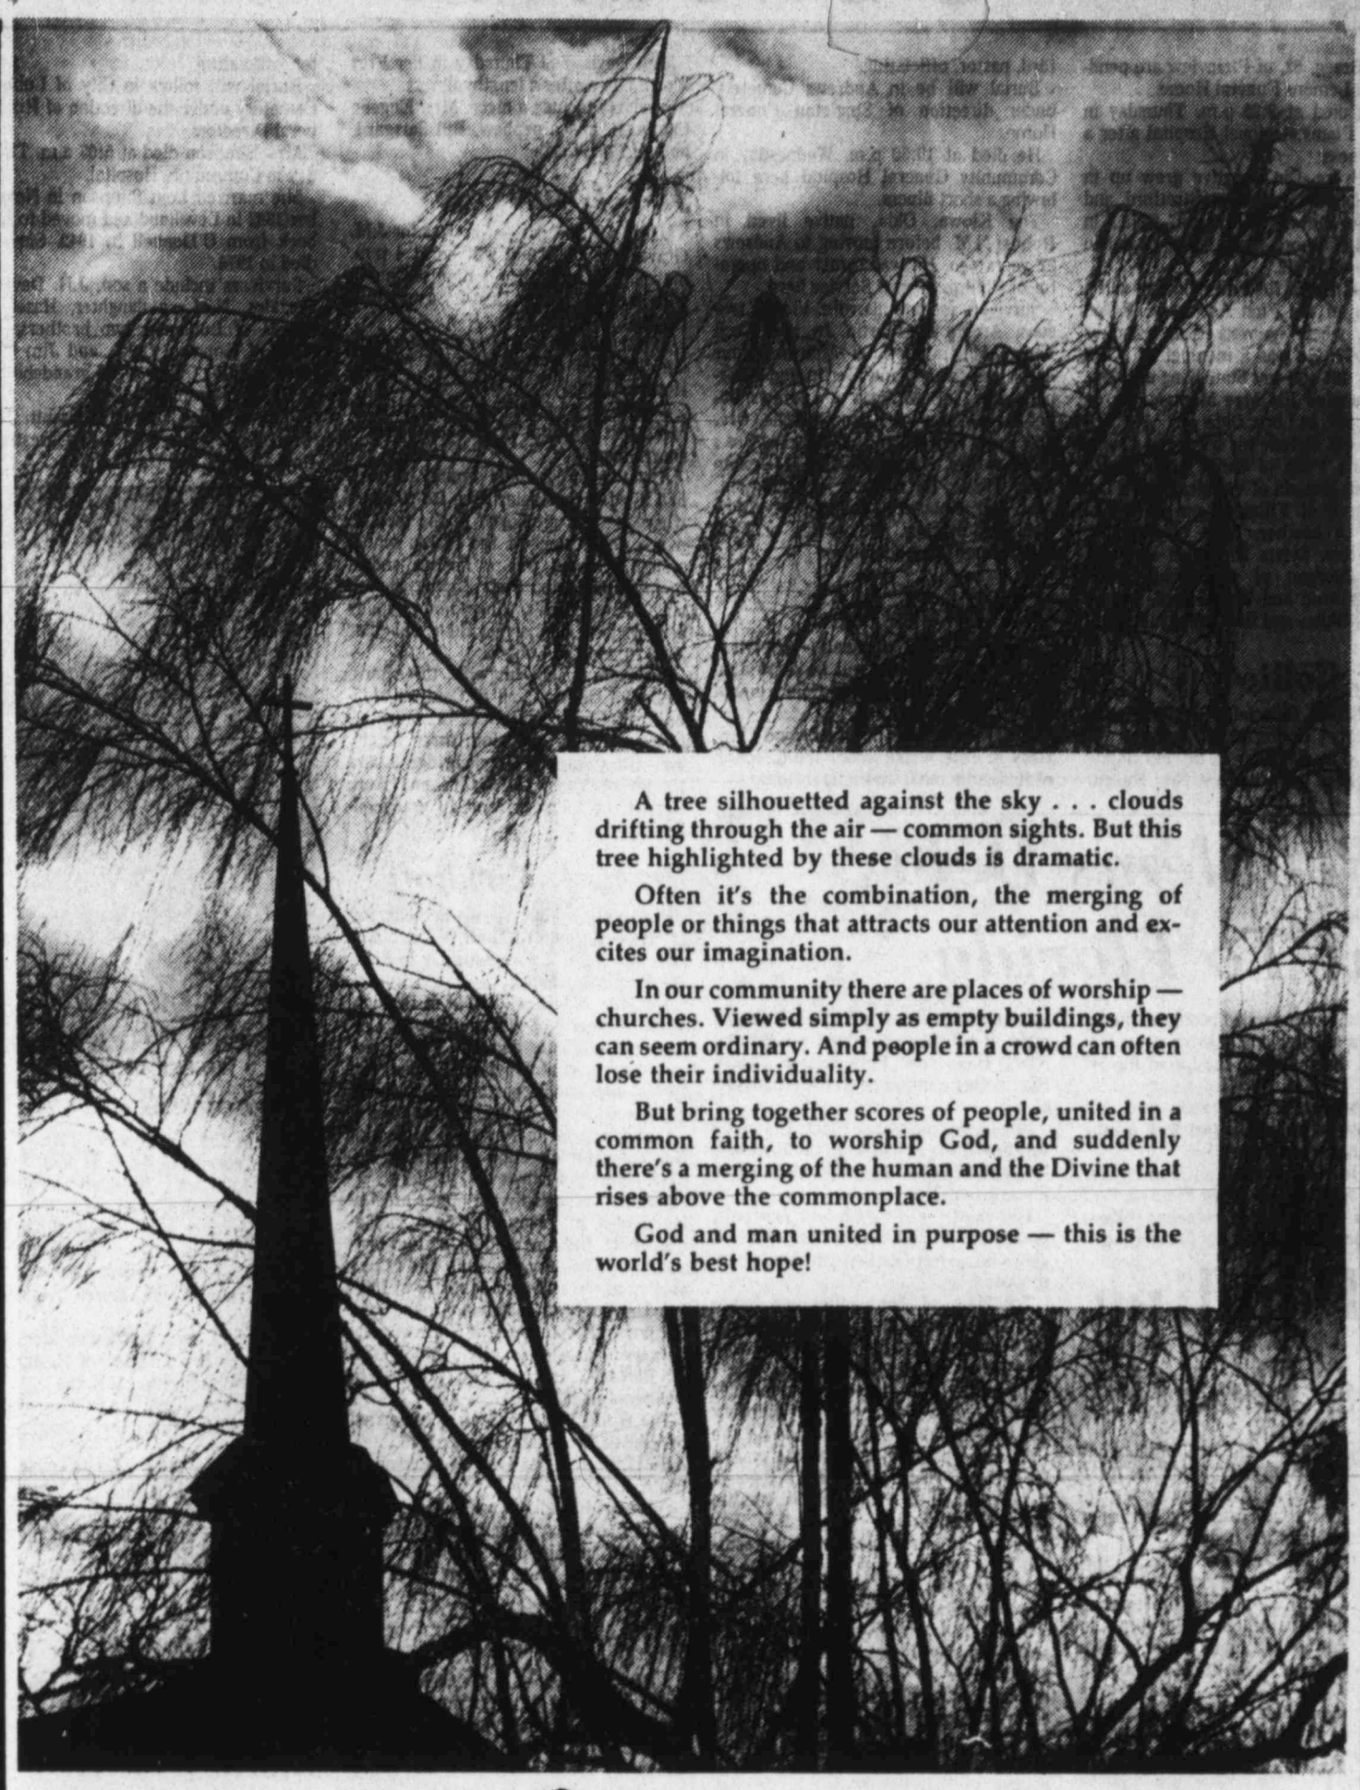
FIND STRENGTH FOR YOUR LIFE — ATTEND CHURCH



A tree silhouetted against the sky . . . clouds drifting through the air — common sights. But this tree highlighted by these clouds is dramatic.

Often it's the combination, the merging of people or things that attracts our attention and excites our imagination.

In our community there are places of worship — churches. Viewed simply as empty buildings, they can seem ordinary. And people in a crowd can often lose their individuality.

But bring together scores of people, united in a common faith, to worship God, and suddenly there's a merging of the human and the Divine that rises above the commonplace.

God and man united in purpose — this is the world's best hope!

Connecting Problems Delay Shuttle Flight To Florida

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The space shuttle Columbia's piggybcack flight to Florida was delayed today until at least Saturday by problems in mounting the new-generation spacecraft to the back of a jumbo jet.

"They'll have a test flight when they get done today and we'll take off tomorrow at 8:30 a.m.," said Dick Klein, a spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Adminstration.

He said workmen had problems during the night aligning one of three struts that connect the shuttle to the top of the 747 jet.

Spokesman Ralph Jackson said, "It will have no impact, it just took a little longer than we expected."

After leaving Edwards on Saturday, the shuttle will land at Biggs Field at Fort Bliss in El Paso for refueling before continuing on to Kelly Air Force Base in San Antonio where it will spend Saturday night. It will leave Sunday for Eglin Air Force Base near Fort Walton Beach, Fla., before continuing to Cape Canaveral.

Before the piggyback flight, Columbia was brought overland from the Rockwell International plant near Palmdale where it was assembled.

The shuttle is to return to Edwards, perhaps as early as November, when it glides home from its first two-day trip into space.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said Columbia will end its first few flights on a 15,000-foot runway laid out on a dry lake bed.

Columbia and three yet-to-be-built shuttles — the Challenger, the Discovery and the Atlantis — will be the basis of the U.S. space program through the end of the century, NASA has said. The agency has predicted as many as 500 shuttle flights by 1992.

Among its space age duties, the shuttles will carry teams of scientists to space, retrieve ailing satellites and place new ones in orbit.

Columbia's journey began at a snail's pace Thursday. It was towed at less than 5 mph over 38 miles of desert roads, mounted on a giant trailer and surrounded by polce cars, a fire engine and walking security men.

The eight-hour trip from the Rockwell hanger to NASA's Dryden Flight Research Center took Columbia through part of the Lancaster, Calif. business district.

Several hundred persons lined city streets as the shuttle's 78-foot wings passed within three feet of utility poles. Its five-story tall tail fin towered over pizza parlors, supermarkets and service stations.

Ruling Still Pending In City Man's Death

A ruling remained pending early today in the death of a 34-year-old city man who decomposed body was found about 8 p.m. Thursday in his 2910 Ave. H apartment, said Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy, who pronounced the man dead at the scene.

LeCroy added he had not decided whether to order an autopsy on the man.

The body of W.F. McDonald was discovered in his apartment at Motor Inn Apartments by a neighbor who told officers he had noticed an odor emanating from the room.

Ben Sanchez told officers that as he was heading to the apartment's club room, he noticed the smell and pinpointed its location as McDonald's room, No. 18.

Fire Department employees were called to the scene to break open the apartment door, which was locked from the inside.

McDonald's body was found lying sideways on the end of the bed. Although preliminary reports indicate he may have been beaten about the face, officers late Thursday were unsure whether the former Plains Co-Op Oil Mill employee's apparent wounds were caused by beating or decomposition of the body.

Neighbors told officers they last saw McDonald about a week ago, and Sanchez said he first noticed the unusual odor in the area March 1. Sanchez also said he had noticed lights on 24 hours a day in McDonald's apartment for about a week.

One neighor told police he noticed a black man living with McDonald in the apartment. That occupant also has not been seen for about a week, the neighbor said.

Police said the single-room apartment did not appear ransacked. McDonald's wallet, still in the left hip pocket of his pants, contained no money, officers said.

While some residents of the aparments said McDonald's 1963 or 1964 white Plymouth is missing, Sanchez said McDonald usually walked to and from work.

Lubbock Bar Members Reiterate Control Plea

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Members of Lubbock County Bar Association reiterated their plea for more local control of the operations of the Lubbock office of West Texas Legal Services Corp.

At a meeting this morning to get input on proposed expansion of Legal Services operations in the West Texas area, Lubbock bar representatives questioned the impact on their own Legal Aid Program.

George Nelson, past president of the Lubbock County Bar Association, noted there has been "considerable resistance of Legal Services to relinquish any control to any local policy-making board and to relinquish any control in the delivery of legal services."

The Lubbock office is operated by West Texas Legal Services Corp., headquartered in Fort Worth, and bar members said they have only one representative on the corporation's board.

Nelson said policy decisions on what kind of legal services are provided and "what kind of matters Legal Services is going to get involved in comes from Washington, D.C., Denver, or Fort Worth."

Suggestions that the board be restructured to provide more local input into the decisions of the corporation have been "flatly rejected," Nelson said.

A representative of the Amarillo Bar Association echoed the same sentiments, saying "we feel like we've been thrown together rather arbitrarily to administer the program."

Dan Benson, president of the Legal Aid Soceity, said a duplication of services was his main concern and that of the United Way, which funds Legal Aid programs.

Currently, Benson said, Legal Aid handles all domestic relations work for indigents in the county, while Legal Services handles other matters.

Benson asked whether the two organizations should continue or should be merged.

Legal Services Corp. is a non-profit corporation mandated by the federal government to make legal services available to all Americans. The proposed expansion of West Texas Legal Services follows that mandate.

TAHLEQUAH, Okla. (AP) — Mr. Ed, the famous "talking" horse of the television series which bore his name, is dead. There was no funeral or memorial service to mark the death of the 33-year-old horse. He was buried on the land where he lived for the last 15 years.

Firefighters, Student Charged With Arson

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — Four volunteer firefighters and a technical school student have been charged with third-degree arson, state police say.

The five, who surrendered Thursday, have been accused of setting fires between June and October of last year in an unoccupied grammar school, fields and vacant houses. Police said none of the fires was serious and the worst caused about $12,000 in damage.

Young Medical Volunteers To Deliver Services To Boat People

PARIS (AP) — A group of young medical volunteers is outfitting a floating ambulance to bring medical care to 50,000 Vietnamese "boat people" packed into refugee camps in Malaysia.

The volunteers, mostly French doctors, nurses and paramedics, are refitting the 963-ton cargo ship L'Ile de Lumiere for a mercy mission of indefinite duration and plan to sail from Singapore in early April.

"The boat now has enough money to keep it going for two months," said Dr. Bernard Kouchner, 37, one of the organizers of the project.

"But it is impossible to envisage working only two months because we would only be creating a need for medical services and then leave it unfulfilled," he added. "That's very bad. We must try to continue."

Kouchner said the idea for the hospital ship "was completely spontaneous on the part of a certain number of people who had been shocked by the history of the Hai Hong," the freighter packed with 2,500 Vietnamese refugees that was denied permission to dock in Malaysia last year. A group of Western nation, including France and the United States, eventually agreed to take the refugees.

France, a traditional haven for political refugees, has taken the lead in accepting Vietnamese boat people, at the rate of 1,000 per month. The government and private refugee organizations have organized a comprehensive program to welcome the refugees, teach them French, find them jobs and integrate them into French society.

The medical volunteers' original plan was for a team of four physicians and other personnel to bring help to the many boats full of Vietnamese refugees sailing about in the South China Sea and the Gulf of Siam looking for a country to accept them. But the project since has expanded.

"The boat wasn't originally planned specially for the refugee camps," Dr. Kouchner said. "It was planned for the refugees at sea and eventually for the refugees in the camps. We are doing all of that, but now above all we are a medical ship for the Asian camps with the (U.N.) High Commission for Refugees. Thus, the team of four doctors will be insufficient and it will require others."

L'Ile de Lumiere, rented from the Compagnie de Chargeurs Caledoniens, is being transformed into a floating hospital in Noumea, New Caledonia. It is scheduled to leave about April 1 for Singapore where the medical team will join it and the mission will begin.

The hospital ship will have consulting rooms, operating rooms, X-ray facilities and will be stocked with medical supplies provided by local organizing committees in New Caledonia and Australia, Kouchner said. The original four doctors are French, but the expanded team will require the addition of at least a radiologist, a surgeon and an anesthesiologist who may come from other countries.

The project is costing 13,000 francs ($3,100) a day. Kouchner said now that official permission has been received from Malaysia and the project is being taken seriously, the U.N. High Commission for Refugees may help with funding and the campaign for contributions will be intensified.

"Each 13,000 francs gives us another day, he said.

The main effort will be directed at the refugee camp at Poulo Bidong, an island near the Malaysian town of Kuala Trenganu, where about 30,000 Vietnamese are living.

"When I arrived, there were 27,000 refugees at Paulo Bidong," said Andre Gluckmann, one of the mission's organizers. "Three days later, there were 30,000. There is practically no water. Wooden shacks with plastic roofs constitute the only houses. For each five refugees that arrive on the island, only one leaves for a Western country."

Young Witness Breaks Down

ALLIANCE, Neb. (UPI) — A 7-year-old girl, called to testify in the trial of a man charged with raping her, broke down and cried and was removed from tte witness stand.

The girl was asked to testify Thursday in the trial of Clifford "Woody" Red Feather, 19, charged with first degree sexual assault.

The girl was called to the witness stand shortly after the trial began, but her testimony was cut short when she began crying and became too upset to answer questions.

The girl's mother told the seven-man, five-woman jury she left her home around 10:30 p.m. last Oct. 15 with her sister and two men, including her common-law husband.

When they returned around midnight, her daughter was standing in the bathroom doorway naked, crying hysterically and bleeding, the mother said. She said she asked her daughter what happended and the girl replied "Woody hurt me."

Cities Renew Feud Over County Seat

REED CITY, Mich. (UPI) — What began as an offhand remark at a political meeting has renewed a 90-year-old feud between Reed City and neighboring Evart over where the Osceola County seat belongs.

One skeptical observer has gone so far as to recommend elimination of the county as a solution to the problem.

Voters will decide April 2 whether to keep the seat of the sparsely populated county in Reed City or move it 12 miles to Evart.

"This whole thing is just plain silly," Reed City City Manager Ralph Westerburg said. "This is something that really was started three years ago. Some fellow made a comment at a county Republican organizational meeting."

That joke, however, blossomed into a full-fledged war with Evart backers, who say the county seat should never have been put in Reed City in the first place.

"The county is fairly evenly divided as far as population is concerned," said Paul Fershee, secretary of the committee organizing the movement. "The county seat should be in the geographic center of the county."

About 17,000 people live in the 460 square mile, mostly rural county and Reed City is the only town in that area that has two major highways, U.S. 131 and U.S. 10, running through it.

"The development around Reed City is much greater than the development around Evart," Westerburg said. "If you're serving the largest area of population, Reed city is the best place for the county seat."

Westerburg said Evart backers have been saying the county needs a new courthouse anyway, so why not just move the county seat and get it over with.

"But the jail's staying here (in Reed City) so the sheriff will have to spend most of his time traveling back and forth," Westerburg said.

"Besides, the courthouse is usable. They could use it for the next 20 years. The building isn't falling down," he said.

Westerburg estimates that by the time financing is arranged, a new courthouse will cost Osceola County residents $8 million to $10 million, which averages out to about $600 a person.

"This has generated more interest in county government than any other issue," Fershee said. "It was time to evaluate whether people would want a county seat more centrally located. It would not cost any more to move it than it would to build one (a new courthouse) in Reed City."

Trip Across Galaxy Lasts 600,000 Years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Traveling at the speed of 186,000 miles a second, scientists say it would take 600,000 years to traverse the most recently discovered galaxy.

The National Science Foundation said Wednesday the new galaxy, known as NGC 1961, probably contains hundreds of billions of stars and is at least three times the diameter of the Milky Way. Astronomers say the galaxy may have been formed by the collision of two smaller ones.

Viets Accuse China Of Halting Pullout

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam, disputing China's claim that it was withdrawing troops from Vietnam, said today the Chinese invaders were "worse than the French and Americans" who fought in Vietnam.

China said the Vietnamese were shelling and harassing its forces as they withdrew from northern Vietnam.

Hanoi Radio, which earlier this week confirmed the Chinese withdrawal, said in a broadcast monitored here said that China was planning to "rotate" its troops rather than withdraw them. Hanoi demanded an "immediate, complete and unconditional" pullout.

The Hanoi broadcast reiterated Vietnam's accusation of Chinese war crimes, saying Peking's soldiers were burning homes, destroying communication lines and stealing everything in sight "even women's underwear." Hanoi promised to crush the Chinese if they were using a purported "withdrawal as a smokescreen."

Western analysts were divided. One Indochina watcher in Bangkok said the fighting was minor and the Vietnamese were allowing the Chinese to withdraw peacefully. Another source said sharp clashes were still going on in some frontier areas, including Lang Son, Dong Dang, Cam Duong and Phuc Hua.

Analysts admitted it was difficult to say which side was responsible for eruptions of combat.

The latest battle report from Hanoi said Chinese artillery lobbed about 1,000 rounds against Lang Son and the surrounding area Thursday. Some of the heaviest fighting in the three-week-old frontier war has been around Lang Son, a provincial capital 80 miles northeast of Hanoi.

Peking's official Xinhua (Hsinhua) news agency said the Vietnamese shelled the Chinese as they withdrew toward the Dong Dang area northwest of Lang Son on Tuesday, and similar harassing incidents occurred Wednesday and Thursday in other front-line areas.

But Xinhua said after the first withdrawing units crossed the border, jubilant crowds in the Chinese city of Pinxiang (Pin Hsiang) cheered the truckloads of troops, set off firecrackers and beat welcoming gongs and drums.

The official Vietnam News Agency claimed heavy fighting continued Thursday around Lang Son, the chief city in the northeast frontier area which is on the traditional Chinese invasion route into Vietnam. It claimed more than 300 Chinese were killed.

The Vietnamese News Agency reported the scenic town had been reduced to "ruins and ashes" by the Chinese.

"The town of Lang Son has remained under round-the-clock shelling since March 5," according to VNA reporters at the front.

The Vietnamese said artillery shells had destroyed the railway station and schools, including one built with U.N. funds. Factories, houses, restaurants and libraries were destroyed, the agency said.

"All this gives a sharp lie to the Chinese aggressors who claimed that they had repaired houses and distributed relief rice to the local Vietnamese population who showed them 'profound affection,' it said.

Radio Hanoi said the nation must go ahead with a general mobilization ordered early this week and "take up positions to be ready for the Chinese troops when they come back."

Japanese Foreign Minister Sunao Sonoda told a parliamentary committee in Tokyo that his government was meeting separately with each side. He said his representatives were asking the Chinese to pull out and the Vietnamese to allow a smooth withdrawal. He added that the Japanese were relaying each side's peace conditions to the other, but he did not elaborate.

China said it went into Vietnam to punish Hanoi for border provocations, but analysts said another reason probably was to draw Vietnamese troops away from Cambodia, which they invaded Dec. 25 to oust the pro-Peking government of Premier Pol Pot.

The Vietnamese set up a pro-Hanoi government of Cambodian Communists in Phnom Penh on Jan. 7. Troops still loyal to Pol Pot have been waging guerrilla war against the Vietnamese and their Cambodian proteges, but observers in Bangkok said the new regime and the Vietnamese apparently are routing the holdouts from along the Thai-Cambodian border.

They said the guerrillas recently abandoned the ancient Buddhist temple of Preah Vihar, were driven out of Poipet, the main crossing point into Thailand, and were asking Thai officials along the border for food and other supplies.

MOVING INTO BATTLE — Dozens of trucks carry Vietnamese soldiers into the embattled city of Lang Son, as heavy fighting continues to rage in the area despite Chinese claims that their troops are being withdrawn. The provincial capital was the top target of the Chinese and fell to the invaders, at least briefly, earlier this week. (AP Laserphoto)

Connally Rules Out Second Spot On '80 Republican Ticket

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — Republican presidential hopeful John Connally believes his chances of gaining the GOP nomination "are very good," despite the just-announced candidacy of Ronald Reagan, "the obvious front-runner."

Connally vowed Thursday to stay in the campaign "until the very end, beyond any question," and said he wouldn't settle for a Reagan-Connally ticket. "I'd settle for a Connally-Reagan ticket," he said.

"Obviously, I'm not the front-runner today. Governor Reagan is," the former Texas governor said. "But the Gallup Poll in December showed me with 6 percent. Two weeks ago it showed me with 12 percent. I'm making progress."

Connally, in Rochester to attend an annual GOP fundraising dinner, then pulled out a copy of a Feb. 14 article from The Detroit News. The headine: "Connally tops with GOP."

"I hadn't been in Michigan for two years," Connally said. "When I got there, someone gave me a newspaper clipping. A writer interviewed 65 top GOP leaders in Michigan and 26 percent said Connally was their top choice. That was twice as many as the next closest."

The Democrat-turned Repubican defended his party against claims that it's replete with old faces and losers. He said the party doesn't need new faces — it needs new phrases.

"Some of us can't be characterized as losers. It's unfair to say the Republican Party is a party of losers," Connally said. "I think the party has to develop a new vernacular, a new definition of terms.

"What we have to do is talk to the average American workman," Connally said.

He feels he's best-suited to get that message across, largey because of his 40 years in politics.

"I know more about government than President Carter does and I have more experience," said Connally, who came to Washington as a 22-year-old congressional aide in 1939. "I frankly think I have a bettec background.

"The country's in trouble," he declared. "It's going to require a high degree of commitment that I can give the people."

Connally, who said he wouldn't be pressed into a "negative campaign," said many of Carter's failures aren't the president's fault. He chided Congress for not passing strong energy legislation.

"I think he's either been given bad advice or not following good advice. I suspect that many of the things that he gets blamed for he didn't do at all," Connally said of Carter.

Cold Front Ends Dream Of Spring Across State

A—J News Services

A moderate cold front swept across Northwest Texas early today, bringing gusty winds of more than 40 mph and brief snow flurries in the Panhandle.

Temperatures were dropping steadily behind the front late this morning, with chilly 35-degree readings at both Dalhart and Amarillo. Ahead of the front, the mercury climbed into the 60s and 70s.

At noon today, the front extended from the Dallas-Fort Worth area to just south of San Angelo and westward to El Paso. Forecasters said the cool air would push into Central Texas this afternoon, causing some scattered showers and thunderstorms in the Hill Country and eastern sections of the state as it advances.

Lubbock temperatures, which soared to 83 degrees Thursday, were expected to reach only the low 50s today before dropping to the upper 20s tonight.

In the Panhandle region, where the mercury this morning hovered in the 30s, temperatures were expected to peak in the 40s this afternoon. Forecasters also mentioned the possibility of light drizzle or snow flurries in the morning hours.

Across the state, the recent pattern of fair skies was expected to vanish as the cooling front continues southward. Hub City residents awoke this morning to a thick cloud cover which prevailed over the entire northwestern portion of the state.

In East and South Texas, partly cloudy skies were predicted today.

Just as quickly as the front arrived, though, it should depart, the NWS said this morning.

Lubbock skies will begin to clear tonight and be fair Saturday, with temperatures climbing to the upper 50s, reports said.

South Plains skies should remain mostly clear through Tuesday, and temperatures again will near 70 degrees early next week, the extended forecast said.

While the effects of the front lingered, however, Lubbock area winds today were expected to blow in a northerly direction at 20 to 30 mph, possibly kicking up dust on unprepared land. Winds tonight will calm to 5 to 10 mph, the NWS said.

The same cold air mass that brought winter back to the Southwest slowed the thaw in the upper Midwest today, raising hopes of a respite from floods caused by ice-gorged rivers and streams.

Southeast of Chicago, the Kankakee River receded slowly from a rampaging crest Thursday that smashed into riverfront homes with huge ice floes and forced about 80 families to flee to high ground.

The most serious damage was reported near Phelan Acres, which contains mostly summer cottages and cabins. Three houses were smashed by gigantic ice floes. At one point the normally tranquil river surged to 20 feet above flood stage.

"One of the houses got hit by such a large chunk of ice we thought at first it had exploded," said a Will County sheriff's office spokesman.

"We are letting some people back into Phelan Acres, but are keeping people out of certain homes atong the river at certain points because of things like escaping gas."

National Guard troops were sent to Shelby, Ind., to help authorities shore up a 30-foot wide break in an earthen dike caused by surging waters from the Kankakee. At least 10 families were evacuated.

Army Corps of Engineers officials kept cautious eyes on parts of the Mississippi River between Illinois, Missouri and Iowa, and on the Rock River in northwest Illinois. A spokesman said no major flooding was expected for 5-6 days.

The cold front moved swiftly down from Canada, spreading heavy snow in Montana and Wyoming and lighter amounts from Minnesota to Illinois. wtravelers advisories were issued in the Dakotas, Minnesota and owa.

Temperatures dipped into the 20s in most of the upper Midwest.

Sadat Haggling Over U.S. Plan

They will return to Cairo by helicopter Saturday for a final working lunch before Carter flies to Jerusalem for at least three days of treaty talks with Begin. Carter tentatively is scheduled to return home Monday.

But White House press secretary Jody Powell has told reporters the president will not leave the Middle East as long as a possibility remains that he can help forge a permanent settlement. "We'll stay as long as we have to," Powell said.

Aboard the train, Carter offered no details of his talks, but did say briefly that the Palestinian issue will have to be resolved in separate negotiations following conclusion of an Egyptian-Israeli treaty.

"The details obviously will have to be worked out over a period of a year after the treaty is signed," Carter said.

The 13-car train, pulled by two German-built diesels, slowed to a crawl when it reached towns along the way. Women carried their infants up to the presidential car and peered at Carter and Sadat.

In another car, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance worked on treaty provisions with Egyptian Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs, Mustafa Khalil.

"Welcome Richard Nixon," a sign remaining from the former president's visit and train ride in 1974, was the largest one in view. It was painted on a peeling building crammed with waving, friendly crowds.

Nearing Alexandria, as the train pulled away from a station, three small boys grabbed on to a rail, shouting "Ya Sadat," they hung on for dear life and rode along for a few miles. They were helped aboard by two policemen.

Carter, asked to assess prospects of completing the agreement twice remarked that problems remain.

He said, however, "President Sadat genuinely wants peace, so do I, so does Prime Minister Begin.

"We don't know yet what will happen until we get through the talks," Carter said.

He said it is possible he will delay his departure for Israel by a day if necessary, but said this doesn't appear likely.

City Arrests

A 41-year-old Fort Worth woman was arrested about 12:50 a.m. at a motel room at 34th Street and Avenue H after she quoted a $40 price for her services, according to police.

That arrest came just minutes after police had left a motel in the 400-block of Idalou Road with three woman in their 20s who are suspected of prostitution. At that location one of the women reportedly threw a can of soft drink at one of the officers. However, the policeman ducked and was only splashed.

In all the arrests made at the motels, reports show the officers were led to the suspects by simply asking motel employees, "Do you have any girls?"

Ford To Document Mileage Claim

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Ford Motor Co. will have to document any mileage claims made for Lincolns and Mercurys under an agreement reached with the Federal Trade Commission.

The FTC said Thursday that Ford has signed a consent order that it would not misrepresent the fuel economy of the cars. The case grew out of a 1974 case in which the FTC said Ford couldn't back up mileage figures.

County Officers Deny Suspect Had Gun Before Jail Transfer

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Several sources have indicated John Thomas Carter, found shot to death in his Crosby County Jail cell Wednesday morning, had the gun found near his body with him when he left the Lubbock County Jail Sunday.

"I feel sure of it," Crosby County Sheriff Fred Owen said this morning.

But the Lubbock County Sheriff's Department feels otherwise.

"He did not have the gun or the money when he left here," Lubbock County Sheriff C.H. "Choc" Blanchard said today.

Carter was transferred from the jail here to the county jail in Crosbyton Sunday. The jail there stands next to the courthouse where jury selection began Monday in Carter's murder trial in the Oct. 2, 1978, slaying of Valton Vernoid Gandy, 73, and his 68-year-old wife, Cora, of Lorenzo.

Two jurors had been selected when the 34-year-old murder defendant's body was found in his jail cell about 8 a.m. Wednesday, along with a .22-caliber pistol.

Investigating officials became even more mystified over the jail cell death several hours later that day when Carter's body was undressed at Lubbock's St. Mary's Hospital and 26 cartridges were found in a makeshift pouch sewn to a waistband worn by Carter.

In the dead man's sock was $113 cash.

Lubbock County jail adminstrator Gary McGrew admitted Thursday morning that Carter's underpants were not taken off when he was searched before leaving the jail here Sunday afternoon. The apparatus found at St. Mary's Hospital was under Carter's regular undershorts.

However, Lubbock County jailer Michael Lee Arnold, who searched Carter Sunday before his departure, stated in a sworn affidavit that, in his opinion, Carter did not have the gun, ammunition or cash on him when he left for Crosbyton.

"I'm going to take my officer's word before any other...until I'm convinced otherwise," Blanchard said today.

Arnold says in the affidavit he was called to the fourth floor of the county jail about 3:50 p.m. Sunday to take Carter out of his cell, occupied by eight or nine prisoners.

"He was dressed out in jail whites. We left the fourth floor by way of the elevator and went to the second floor. On the second floor, I took Carter to the clothing room where inmates get dressed out in their street clothes and return their whites.

"During that time I was never more than six to eight feet from him. Carter stripped down to his boxer style shorts to change clothing. As he put his legs in his street pants I could see up the leg openings.

"It is my opinion Carter had nothing under the boxer shorts."

Arnold said Carter also changed socks, leaving Blanchard, McGrew and other Lubbock County sheriff's deputies to believe the defendant could not have had the $113 hidden at that time.

So investigating officials, headed by Texas Ranger Jackie Peeples, remained, puzzled this morning on how Carter received the gun and other items.

If the investigation reveals who got the property to Carter, that person could face a third degree felony charge.

Blanchard said after Carter was found dead, two of the defendant's cell mates in Lubbock were questioned by him.

"The ones I talked to, without exception, said he definitely did not have the gun with him," the sheriff said.

Blanchard added that the two prisoners, one of whom is charged with murder, told him that "if he (Carter) had (the gun), it would have been for an escape attempt and we would have gone with him."

Prosecutors say the intent of a person who may have smuggled a weapon to Carter would determine whether the weapon supplier would be charged with aiding suicide or implementing escape.

Although authorities decline speculation on whether the accused capital murderer was contemplating escape, the discovery of live ammunition and cash in Carter's clothing prompted one official to say, "I don't think a person would need or want 26 bullets if he was going to commit suicide."

If the gun had been given to Carter to aid his escape, the person who provided the weapon could be charged with implementing escape, a third degree felony carrying a maximum penalty of two to 10 years in prison or a $5,000 fine.

Crown Prince

cess Leila, 8, and Prince Alireza, 12, and his grandmother, Farideh Diba, had been staying at the pilot trainee's home since Jan. 16 when they arrived from Iran under heavy State Department guard.

The crown prince's other sister, Princess Farahnaz, 15, had arrived in December to join her brother at his weekend home.

The children were seen playing about the lawn of the westside house periodically during their 11-day visit.

Though Iranian demonstrators never made an appearance, the threat existed when a group of students were reportedly headed for Lubbock from Houston the weekend after the family arrived.

The Department of Public Safety reportedly traced the group to near Abilene and then lost them. One source said the demonstrators returned because they learned that immigration authorities were in Lubbock in order to check their visas.

The Crown Prince has been in Lubbock since last summer, when he began what was supposed to be a year-long pilot training program. He was originally scheduled to complete training in July.

China Developing New Legal System

By WILLIAM J. HOLSTEIN

HONG KONG (UPI) — China is taking the first steps toward protecting the human rights of its citizens, subjected for decades to forced labor, "reeducation," torture and even death, in the opinion of an Asian legal expert.

A law governing the arrest and detention of criminal suspects was approved Feb. 23 by the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress. Laws on trials and other aspects of the legal system are promised.

"They chose this one as a symbolic first step because it represents their decision to try to protect human rights," said Jerome Cohen, director of Asian Legal Studies at Harvard law school.

"Protection against arbitrary actions is one of the basic demands of the Chinese people," he said in an interview. Cohen, also a consultant for the prestigious Coudert Brothers law firm, has made several trips to China and is returning to Peking to help create a tax system and a commercial code.

China's legal system began deteriorating in the late 1800s as the Ching dynasty neared collapse. It took a fresh beating after the Communists swept to power in 1949. Mao Tse-tung acknowledged in 1956 that 2 to 3 million "counter-revolutionaries" had been killed or jailed after the Communist victory.

During the Cultural Revolution that began in 1966, millions of Chinese accused of being "class enemies" or "capitalist roaders" were purged from their jobs, sent to labor camps and re-education facilties and sometimes tortured and killed if they failed to "confess."

The Cultural Revolution, which Mao launched to discipline China's massive bureaucracy, destroyed the police and courts as effective institutions. In their place, forced confessions and mass public trials emerged.

Now that a post-Mao leadership has emerged, one of China's top priorities appears to be reestablishing a legal system that will prevent arbitrary abuses of human rights. One pragmatic reason is the belief that a stable legal system will spur the country's economic modernization.

The new law also is important, Cohen says, because it will govern foreigners living and doing business in China, historically one of China's problems in dealing with the outside world.

The new law also may have a significant impact on any move by the Carter administration to grant most favred nation status to Peking. Congress is unlikely to approve such status unless satisfied that progress is being made on the human rights question.

The new law:

—requires police to notify a person's family within 24 hours of his arrest, telling where he is being held and why.

—requires police to question an arrested suspect within 24 hours. Previously, suspects often were locked up with no attempt to question or even identify them for days.

—requires police to decide within seven days of arrest whether to turn the suspect over to a prosecutor for formal charges.

China's new law is far from perfect, Cohen said, because its provisions covering search and arrest warrants and evidence are poorly defined.

And the major loophole, he said, is that once a person has been formally charged there is no time limit on how long he can be held without a trial.

One major question is whether the new legal system will apply to the "Gang of Four". The four radical leaders seized in October 1976 — including Mao's widow have never been brought to trial.

Still, Cohen believes the new arrest and detention law is a good compromise between respect for individual rights and China's need to preserve stability among its 800 million prople.

China is faced with a serious law and order problem, Cohen said. It needs to give police realistic powers but also to keep them under control.

Cohen also cautioned that China is unlikely to establish the rule of law as it is known in western countries. The Chinese leadership firmly believes the Communist party must remain supreme, meaning those on the opposite side of the political fence are still likely to run afoul of the legal system.

The policy of combining reform through labor with ideological education must be carried out for all convicted criminals, a recent Peoples Daily article said.

Bank Trade Association Wants Recent IRS Ruling Changed

By STEPHEN M. BROWN

NEW YORK (AP) — Lots of people get upset with the Internal Revenue Service about this time of year, but bankers and some holders of certificates of deposit are especially angry.

It seems that under an IRS ruling issued last month, some holders of six-month certificates are expected to declare as income the interest earned on certificates during 1978, even if the interest isn't distributed to the depositor until the CD matures some time in 1979.

The American Bankers Association, a trade group representing most of the nation's commerical banks, is clamoring for a change in that rule.

John H. Perkins, who is president of the ABA and of Continental Illinois National Bank of Trust Co. of Chicago, called the ruling "legally suspect, unfair, retroactive and disruptive."

A spokesman for the ABA said the organization had protested the ruling to the IRS, Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, officials in the Carter administration and members of Congress.

The ABA said the ruling is aimed at the hot-selling money-market certificates, those six-month CDs with interest rates tied to the current Treasury bill rate. But the ruling also can apply to other types of CDs with six-month maturities that spanned the New Year, the ABA said.

Money-market certificates, called MMCs, have been available since June, meaning that nearly all of them purchased last year had maturity dates in 1979.

The interest rates on the MMC's are set at the time of purchase by the current rate on Treasury bills and apply for the life of the certificate. For example, an MMC bought Thursday at a commercial bank could pay interest of up to 9.415 percent, the average yield on Treasury bills auctioned the previous Monday. Savings and loan associations and mutual savings banks are allowed to pay interest 0.25 of a percentage point higher than that.

Banks and S&Ls have to tell the IRS and depositors how much interest was earned during each calendar year. The forms used are similar to the W-2 forms filed by employers, showing each employee's annual earnings.

All companies that pay interest or dividends must file the forms.

A spokesman for the U.S. League of Savings Associations, which also wants the IRS to modify its rule, noted that one of three types of MMCs is affected.

These MMCs have a 90-day interest penalty and earn interest for six months, but the interest is not available to the account holder until maturity. If all or part of the CD is withdrawn before maturity, the penalty is a reduction of the interest rate to that of a regular passbook account — 5 percent or 5.25 percent — and forfeiture of three months' worth of interest.

According to the savings league, the IRS ruling requires banks and S&Ls to calculate a CD holder's "constructive receipt" for 1978 — the amount of interest the holder would have received if the MMC had been cashed on Dec 31, 1978. This must be done even if the MMC is held, and interest finally paid at maturity in 1979. The depositor may not wait until 1979 to declare the interest as income in one lump. Also, because 1978's theoretical interest was reduced by the penalty for premature withdrawal, the amount of the theoretical penalty must be added to 1979's theoretical interest.

The savings league asked the IRS to allow depositors the option of declaring as income the interest accrued, distributed or not, in a year, rather than figuring a theoretical penalty.

A second kind of MMC distributes interest to the holder monthly or quarterly by check or by crediting it to the account. This interest, because it is actually paid, is reported to the IRS as income.

With a third type of MMC, a depositor who withdraws all or part of the MMC before maturity forfeits all the interest it would have earned. Since no interest is payable in this situation, there is no theoretical income for 1978 to declare.

Governing Officials Air SPAG Woes

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock city and county officials met Thursday to discuss the South Plains Association of Governments, but the upshot of the meeting was a sort of peace treaty between the two governmental entities.

Little was resolved at the meeting about the SPAG situtation, but there was no evidence of the past's bitter feuds.

The absence of rancor at the meeting prompted Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan to characterize it as the "most harmonious" between the two governing bodies in the seven years she has been on the city council.

The council initiated the city-county meeting in an attempt to make SPAG "more efficient and more responsive to the needs of the region and to the City of Lubbock," Lubbock Mayor Dirk West said.

No agreement was reached on how to accomplish that goal, but several suggestions were offered on how SPAG's operation could be improved.

Commissioner Alton Brazell suggested the city and county "be as active as possible" in the selection of a SPAG executive director to replace Truett Mayes, who died last week. The city and county should have input to ensure the person is concerned about all the region's problems, Brazell said.

Mrs. Jordan said the SPAG board of directors needs to "establish a broad policy" for the executive director, adding some of the problems with the council of governments have arisen because the director's responsibilities never have been defined.

Council members and commissioners seemed to agree that SPAG board members should be reminded of their purpose when reviewing projects for federal funding in the A-95 review process.

Instead of passing on whether project applications meet regional goals or duplicate existing projects, board members sometimes evaluate projects based on personal philosophies, Mrs. Jordan said.

As for SPAG committees, Mrs. Jordan complained their decisions are influenced by the association staff.

dations, it affects the decisions they (the committees) make — good, bad or otherwise," she said.

Committee members are "presented with certain kinds of information with a certain slant," she said. "It's a filter into the decision-making process."

Last week a member of the Criminal Justice Advisory Committee accused City Manager Larry Cunningham of lying to the council about a SPAG staffer influencing the committee.

Councilman Bill McAlister called those comments "asinine and ridiculous," adding he is "highly concerned about some of the comments and some of the treatment" the city has received at SPAG.

When County Judge Rod Shaw noted nearly half the members of the Criminal Justice Advisory Committee are from Lubbock County, McAlister replied, "The representation may be good, but the attitudes stink."

Mrs. Jordan suggested SPAG board members take a more active role in appointing committee members "to make sure committee members represent the city and county points of view."

Shaw asked the group to begin considering alternatives to the existing manpower consortium between Lubbock city and county, Garza County, and Hale County, to operate Comprehensive Employment Training Act programs.

The consortium now contracts with SPAG, which subcontracts with other agencies, to run CETA programs.

The consortium agreement expires Oct. 1, Shaw said, and the city and county must decide by April whether to continue

Prayer Provides Comfort

By FRAN ROBERTS
Newton, N.J.

When my brother said that Dad was in the hospital with pneumonia, I couldn't believe what I heard. Dad had been employed the same company 32 years and never missed a day's work because of illness.

MRS. ROBERTS

I had talked with Dad on the telephone only a few days earlier and he had said he had a cold. But now my brother had taken him to the hospital, and I was really worried. Telling my brother I'd visit Dad e next day, I began praying for his recovery. I believed God hears and answers prayers, but I couldn't imagine how He could communicate those answers to me.

That night at choir practice, I couldn't enjoy the music. I prayed again when I got home, asking God for a sign of His participating presence.

When I finished praying, a familiar hymn began running through mind: "Be not afraid, whate'er betide. God will take care of you...."

As I drove toward the hospital he next day, I prayed again for Dad and found myself singing: "Blessed assurance, Jesus is mine. Oh what a pathway to glory divine...."

I wondered why I should be singing praises at a time like that, but recalling the Biblical exhortation to praise God in all things, I continued singing.

While I was at the hospital, Dad (who was very weak) and I assured each other that everything was all right. But when I left, I oried. Ten years and one month before, I had visited my mother in another hospital. And she had died.

"Dear God," I prayed. "You know how much we all love Dad. And You know we don't want him to die. But You know better than we do, so I'm putting Dad in Your hands. If You want him with You, en take him. If You want him to stay with us, please make him well soon. Either way, I trust You because I know You love us and will do whatever is best."

An incredible peace filled me and another hymn began running through my mind: "Peace I give to you, My peace I give unto you...let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid...."

Three days later Dad left hospital. The first two weeks after his discharge, he rested at brother's house. Then, he drove to my house to spend some time.

That night after dinner, Dad said his doctor had called and asked him to go back into the hospital for tests. Dad couldn't imagine what kinds of tests they were, so I called his doctor to find out.

The doctor said an area of infection had shown up on Dad's chest X-rays, and some of the sputum cultures the hospital technicians had made were positive. Dad might have a lung tumor, and they wanted to find out so they could begin treatment.

"Are you talking about a malignancy?" I asked, unable to say cancer.

"Yes," he said, "and it is imperative that we determine the size and location immediately."

Hanging the phone, I prayed for God's guidance in telling Dad what the doctor had said.

No sooner was my prayer finished than part of a hymn began running through my mind: "...God will take care of you, through every day, o'er all the way."

Trying to avoid alarming him, I told Dad the cultures had produced some abnormal cells and at the doctors wanted to verify the cause.

I knew I hadn't fooled him. After a minute, he told me to call the doctor and make the hospital arrangements.

While he was in the hospital, we prayed regularly. And from time to time, I found myself singing: Go not far from me...O God. Cast me not away....

After two days of tests, Dad was taken to the operating room where doctors took sales of internal tissue.

That night I called the doctor. "Your father's lungs are clear," he said. "There is no mass (tumor) and his lymph glands and stomach are all clear, too. Of course, the results of the biopsy will be in tomorrow and then we can decide on a plan of treatment."

When I hung up the telephone, I started to cry.

"Oh, God," I sobbed, "I don't want Dad to have cancer." I had missed Mother so much over the years, and the thought of losing father as well was too painful to bear.

The next day, I could hardly wait to telephone the doctor. As we talked, I could almost see the doctor shaking his head in disbelief. "There is no sign of cancer in your father," he said. "And yet," he added, "those cancer cells had to come from somewhere...."

"Thank You, Lord," I prayed silently, and as if in answer, another hymn worked its way across my mind:

Detection Device Stops Book Loss

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Lubbock City-County Library system has joined the ranks of airports, department stores and other security-conscious operations that have installed detection devices, and the result has been a substantial curtailment of library material losses.

The Tattle-Tape Book Detection System, installed in the Mahon Library in August 1978, has stopped the loss of an estimated 85 books, magazines and other property from August to January, according to Marlene Harp, director of adult services for the library.

A large part of the potential losses detected by the device consists of encyclopedias and current magazines, said Mrs. Harp.

She said that the season sometimes accounts for the frequent detection of a particular item. Currently, there are "more students who set the alarm off" with encyclopedias because of the amount of term paper work that is done this time of year, the director said.

Those who attempt to leave the building with items that have not been processed at the desk are not all necessarily doing so with malice aforethought, either. "Some we assume are people who aren't thinking and forget to check the items out," said Mrs. Harp.

She also said that it is possible that some people are not aware that items such as current magazines must be checked out at the desk.

"But we find things in handbags and attache cases," she said, "and when it gets to that we know that someone's trying to leave with these things."

The detection system, which consists partly of metal entrance and exit gates through which patrons must pass, works on an electromagnetic-light beam principle. When an item that has not been processed passes through the gate, the light beam in the system is interrupted, an alarm sounds and the gate locks.

All library materials are treated with an electromagnetic substance, and must be processed at the front desk before they can pass through the exit gate.

The cost of the system, which was purchased with revenue sharing funds, was approximately $15,000. Mrs. Harp said that figure included the cost of a large supply of the marking equipment also.

She said that the library had had no extensive theft problems prior to purchase of the device, but that the cost of library materials, which has "almost tripled," and the need to secure public property warranted the necessity of the system.

"We wanted to follow the nationwide trend of securing things so the public can enjoy them," said Mrs. Harp. "If we buy things with city funds, we have the SPOTLIGHT ON...

Family News

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: Now I know why God lets the woman outlive her husband by about 10 years. She needs at least that much time to rest and recouperate. Pity the poor woman who's been married 50 years. I've been married 17 years, and if this man of mine doesn't go pretty soon, I pray to God that I will soon be laid to rest. I couldn't take another 33 years of this.

It's nag and brag! Rant and rave! Yell and cuss! All he has on his mind is eat, sleep and sex (especially sex). A poor woman goes to bed tired. All a man is good for is his paycheck.

I've heard women talk about how lonely they are after their husbands pass on. Well, here is one who is looking forward to that day.

No Sig In Garden City

Dear No Sig: Too bad you didn't sign your name. A husband is entitled to know how his wife feels about him. He may want to hire a food taster.

DEAR ABBY: You recently published a letter from Like It Legal, who complained because her boyfriend told her that the men in his family never married, they just took common-law wives. While you response was sound, you missed a good oportunity to correct a common misconception about common-law marriages.

A common-law marriage IS a legal and binding marriage, just as valid as a ceremonial marriage with a license!

A couple who live together, cohabit, and have established a reputation in their community as man and wife, are, in the eyes of the law, LEGALLY married.

Furthermore, common-law marriage cannot be ended by one spouse simply moving out. Each party has legal obligations to the other, just as husband and wife have in a so-called "legal" marriage.

Thus common-law marriage is much more than just "shacking up" or living together, and it should be made plain that all couples who decide to live together do not necessarily establish a common-law relationship.

Ohio Lawyer

Dear Lawyer: Thank you for pointing out that in those states where common-law marriages are recognized, they are as valid and binding as marriage can be. And thank you too for letting my readers know that "shacking up" does not necessarily constitute a common-law marriage.

DEAR ABBY: I am having a problem with my 11-year-old daughter, an only child. Annie thinks she's old enough to stay by herself when my husband and I go out for a few hours in the evening. She says she is the only one in her class who still has a sitter.

My husband thinks Annie is right. She isn't a dumb child. She's in a special class with gifted children, but to me, that doesn't matter. I still think an 11-year-old should not be left at night without an adult. I would appreciate your opinion.

Annie's Mom

Dear Mom: Age is not always the most important factor. (Some 11-year-olds have more sense that their 17-year-olds sitters.) I would not be influenced, however, by what the other kids in her class do. YOU must decide whether you daughter is able to stay by herself.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
5 ♠	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ◇.

Here's another opportunity for you to test your skill in handling the dummy. Cover the East and West hands with your thumbs and decide how you would play six spades after the lead of the king of diamonds.

You have bid well to reach a good slam. In view of your three aces and good intermediates, you judged your hand too strong to open one no trump. Now, when partner jump raised your spades, you elected to try for slam by issuing an invitation with a bid over game. Since you did not cue-bid, this invitation specifically asked partner about the quality of his trumps. Holding the top two honors, he was happy to accept.

West's king of diamonds lead hits your weak spot. However, you still have two good chances. Assuming trumps are 3-2, if the jack of hearts is guarded no more than twice, you can discard dummy's diamond loser on your fourth heart. If that falls through, there is always the club finesse.

Assume you win the ace of diamonds and draw trumps ending in dummy. If you take the club finesse and it loses, the defenders will quickly cash a diamond trick for down one. So obviously you must test the hearts first. You cash the king-queen and lead to the ace, but East shows out. You can ruff the fourth heart in dummy and try the club finesse, but even if it succeeds, you will be down one—you cannot get back to dummy to repeat the club finesse.

However, you can combine the two lines to better your chances. After drawing three rounds of trumps, cash three top hearts, ending in dummy! If the jack of hearts drops, return to your hand with the ace of clubs and discard a diamond on the ten of hearts. Concede a club and claim the slam.

If the jack of hearts does not drop, you are in dummy to take the club finesse. When that succeeds, you cross back to dummy by ruffing the ten of hearts and repeat the club finesse, and twelve tricks are yours.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

The whole philosophy of Motherhood has been built around the theory that children may not act like they appreciate your sacrifices, but secretly, they think you're really swell.

You see it on commercials. The one where the frazzled mother is hustling the laundry from one room to another lamenting, "He won't even notice how fresh his underwear smells" only to see the kid bury his face in it and look like he has just seen God.

I personally see children as a Christmas club where you make deposits all year long and get a pleasant surprise at the end of the year. There's no interest, but at least you get back what you put in.

One of those cashing in moments occurred this week when we were putting together our income tax. We said to our son, "Do you have your W-2 form from when you worked this summer? We are going to declare you as an exemption." He looked puzzled. "Why would you do that?" "Because for the last year we have fed, clothed, boarded, transported, indulged, and kept you in good health." "I'm filing separately," he said, "so I can get a refund." "But if we claim you, the government allows us $750 right off the top. If we don't get that exemption, we're in a higher bracket."

"You should have thought of that before you bugged me to go to work this summer. I wanted to stay here at home and visit with you and Dad and discuss my philosophy of life, but no, you weren't happy until I was out taking a job away from some poor unfortunate who needed his character built."

I looked at this child and suddenly saw him for what he was — a person who would tell the Gestapo his parents listened to Radio Free Europe on a radio hidden under the floor. A child who would see us attend open house at camp and pretend he was an orphan. A child who would keep me in my old age and put a pay TV in my room.

As we pored over the return, I thought of the 16 hours of labor that went into his birth...the demanding infant years...the dedication to his bad skin...the years of caring, running, and fetching.

Somehow, it's hard to accept the fact that your kids will sell you down the river for a lousy $15.95 refund.

RING AROUND THE YOLK

Do you wonder why your hard-cooked eggs have green rings around the yolks? The rings are a by-product of a chemical reaction between the iron and sulfur in the eggs and are usually caused by overcooking the eggs. Proper cooking and immediate cooling will help elinimate the unsightly but harmless rings.

Maldives Honors Centenary

By SYD KRONISH
Associated Press Writer

Sir Rowland Hill, recognized as the father of the modern prepaid postal system, is being honored this year by many countries on the 100th anniversary of his death.

The Republic of Maldives, a group of islands in the Indian Ocean, pays tribute to this centenary by issuing a set of five stamps and a special souvenir sheet.

One stamp shows postal delivery in the days before prepaid mail. The postman walked the streets ringing a bell to announce the arrival of mail. The postman is seen delivering a letter to a woman.

A second stamp depicts a four-horse mail coach receiving mail bags along the delivery route near London in 1840. A third illustrates the first mail box in London in 1855.

Each stamp bears an inscription "100th Anniversary of the death of Sir Rowland Hill."

Greenland has announced its 1979 stamp program, which should be of interest to those who specialize in this country.

The first stamp on the agenda will be a three-stamp set with a portrait of Queen Margrethe. The denominations will be 80 ore, 130 ore and 160 ore. In June a semi-postal is scheduled to honor the centenary of the birth of Knud Rasmussen, noted educator and traveler. The surcharge will go to the Knud Rasmussen Folk High School. A September stamp will feature a figure in soapstone and an October issue will be an adhesive in tribute to the international Year of the Child.

On the subject of the International Year of the Child, a new stamp set has been issued by Kenya to hail this ocnas n. The four stamps depict children in native scenes. Each stamp bears the "International Year of the Child" letters and symbol.

The 50-c shows native children playing in a school yard on the outskirts of Nairobi. The 2-SH illustrates a young child fishing. The 3-SH pictures children in native costumes playing African musical instruments. The 4-SH depicts children leading a caravan of camels surrounded by dogs.

FROM THE MAIL BAG: To Mrs. Ray Hamann of Jamestown, N.D., the recently issued U.S. set of Owl stamps was released as a foursome and therefore the printing you describe on the sheet is normal and not unusual... To Mr. King Jones Jr. of the Bronx, N.Y., the best way to start with the stamps you have on hand is to purchase an inexpensive stamp album for stamps of the world. However, you do not have to buy this kind if you prefer to use a blank-page album and insert the names of the country yourself. A Minkus or Scott catalogue will provide you with the latest values. Minkus also has a variety of albums for individual countries.

Larger-Than-Normal Purse Can Double As Briefcase

Each new season brings a change in the weather and an entire new array of the latest fashions as dictated by the "experts." Flare legs and wedges are out. And, this season, if you're in the know, you'll be wearing totally flat shoes or daringly high heels.

Some will always follow what fashion dictates, while others will maintain independence and wear their clothes, hairstyles, and shoes however they please and look great doing so.

Whether you follow the leaders or lead the followers, you'll agree that one part of women's fashion that hasn't changed much in the past few seasons is the look of the tote hanbag. This larger-than-normal purse can delightfully double as a briefcase to bring home all the paper work that you didn't finish in your busy day at the office. The tote bag becomes a shopping bag for small treasures and generally allows the busy woman to be prepared for whatever her day might bring. The tote bag — it's seen every place from the beach to the theater.

And, they're made from everything including an old pair of blue jeans to an intricately designed tapestry.

This Aran Motif Tote, pictured, is stunning and practical. It's needlepoint sturdiness lends itself well to guarding the report you have to bring home from the office to review — that mustin't be crumpled.

The Needlpoint Tote combines several stitches, and measures 9" x 9" x 3".

Anchor Nails Attach To Concrete Walls

By ANDY LANG
Associated Press Writer

Q — My hardware-store dealer doesn't know what anchor nails are. Neither do I. I read about them in a book which told about attaching furring strips to concrete walls. Can you tell me something about them so I will have a better idea of what I am looking for?

A — An anchor nail consists of a nail in the center of a perforated metal plate about 2 inches square. A special adhesive is smeared on the back of the plate, which is pressed against the wall with a slight twisting movement. When this is done, some of the adhesive pushes through the perforations in the metal plate. The nail sticks out horizontally from the plate. When the adhesive is thoroughly dry — usually about 24 hours, but follow the manufacturer's instructions — the wood is impaled on the nails, which have been set in a row. The nails then are clinched in place.

Q — I expect to install gypsum board in our attic in the near future. I have been told that this should not be done unless the weather is warm. Is this true?

A — No. Gypsum board can be installed indoors at any time. What your informant possibly meant is that the compound used to fill the joints, apply over corners and cover nailheads should not be used when there is a possibility that it might freeze. This is not likely to occur indoors except, perhaps, in the use of gypsum board in an unheated garage. Should the temperature there be below 55 degrees Fahrenheit, warm the compound inside the house for at least 24 hours before it is to be used.

Q — In making an addition to our house this summer, I plan on placing the extra room over a concrete slab. Can you give me any tips about this, most especially whether a mesh reinforcement is necessary?

A — Yes, a mesh reinforcement should be imbedded in the concrete. Such slabs should be from 4 to 6 inches thick and set into well-drained earth. Spread a 4-inch layer of coarse gravel, crushed stone or broken clay on the compacted earth. Place waterproof insulation around the perimeter of the slab to prevent the floors along the walls from becoming cold and being subjected to condensation.

(For either Andy Lang booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home" OR "Paint Your House Inside and Out," send 35 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

New Products Available For Do-It-Yourselfers

By The Associated Press

THE PRODUCT — A caulking material guaranteed to last as long as you own your house.

Manufacturer's claim — That this caulk clings tightly to clean glass, wood, concrete, plaster, dry walls, brick, plastics, ceramic and metal...that it is highly resistant to cracking, is not affected by sunlight or most chemicals and can be painted after its skin has formed, generally two hours or longer after application...that it forms a hard, waterproof finish...that it is a tough acrylic with moisture-repelling silicone...and that if it cakes, peels or separates while you own your home, it will be replaced without charge.

Manufacturer's claim — That it can be used on virtually any dark surface and, once dry, will not smear...that it is as durable as paint, yet can be removed with a solvent such as alcohol or acetone...that it can be applied at temperatures ranging from 20 degrees to 160 degrees Fahrenheit...and that it does not have a nib that clogs or a felt tip that dries out.

THE PRODUCT — A four-way screwdriver.

Manufacturer's claim — That this tool takes the place of four individual screwdrivers, having two slotted bits 3-16ths of an inch and one-quarter of an inch, and two Phillips bits...that the bits lock into the barrel of the driver, while the barrel locks into the handle...that a flip of the barrel places the designated bit into position for use...that all bits are protected with black oxide for rust resistance...and that the handle has a triangular shape that fits the fist naturally for better comfort and more torque with less effort.

(The caulking material is manufactured by Red Devil, Inc., 2400 Vauxhall Road, Union, N.J. 07083; the white marker by the Sanford Corp., 2740 Washington Blvd., Bellwood, Ill. 60104; and the four-way screwdriver by the Stanley Works, 195 Lake St., New Britain, Conn. 06050.)

Photos Favorite Of Collectors

By IRVING DESFOR
Associated Press Writer

(In this country, with collectors' specializing in oddities such as beer cans and barbed wire, it is not surprising that there are perhaps 10 to 20 thousand collectors of photographica, both old and new. To tell us something about antique photographs and how to tell them apart, this week's guest columnist is Harvey S. Zucker, former president and honorary life member of the Photographic Historical Society of New York and a recognized photographic conservator.)

Many collectors become interested in antique photographs after finding old family pictures stashed away in an attic or barn. Besides becoming involved in a search to identify long-ago relatives, perhaps, the budding collector becomes intrigued by the photographic image itself. Is it a daguerreotype? An ambrotype? Or a tintype?

Presumably, if one knows the type of photograph it is, the image can be dated more easily. And by dating the image, identities of forebears may be established more easily.

Generally, antique dealers who are not concerned with photographic accuracy, lump the three types of early photographs together and call them all "daguerreotypes." There are major differences in values and in the time periods in which they flourished.

Daguerreotypes and ambrotypes are usually found in small ornamental cases. Sometimes the cases are made of a hard, plastic-like substance which antique dealers call "gutta percha," but more often they are made of wood covered with a thick veneer of leather. Occasionally, tintypes are cased in such boxes also.

Real daguerreotypes are easy to spot. The picture was made on a silver-plated piece of sheet copper which was highly polished. The silver surface was so smoothly polished that the photograph looks as if it had been impressed on a mirror. The picture creates the illusion of being both a negative and a positive depending on the brightness of any nearby reflecting surface. Hold a white card over the image and you will see a reflection of the card.

In addition, the silver often shows sighs of tarnishing with varying amounts of bluish stains and specks on it, just like family silverware. However, unlike silverware, a daguerreotype can be ruined if an attempt is made to clean it with a silver polishing cloth. The image is formed from a very fine layer of mercury, and the delicate layer will come right off if any rubbing pressure is applied.

If you have a daguerreotype that needs to be restored or cleaned, it's best to let a photographic restoration expert take care of it. A local historical society or museum can usually refer you to such a specialist. The task of restoration is comparatively simple for experts, the results can be amazing and the fee shouldn't be too high.

Properly restored, cleaned and recased, daguerreotypes have an intriguing beauty and depth of clarity that is still unmatched by present-day photographic methods.

Daguerreotypes were most commonly made from 1840 to 1860. After that they grew less popular, and by the late 1870s they had been replaced by the ambrotype, which flourished between 1850 and the 1860s, and the tintype. The latter's vogue began in the 1860s and continued into the early 1900s. After the tintype, other types of photographs on paper followed to the present time.

The ambrotype, though usually placed in a case similar to the daguerreotype, lacks its shiny, silver-like surface. An ambrotype is a positive-appearing image on a piece of photographically treated glass. The knowledgeable collector can easily spot the comparatively dull reflection of the ambrotype image. An ambrotype with a peeling or flaking or otherwise damaged emulsion is difficult to repair

Chicago Machine To Roll On

By United Press International

Following is a sample of what the nation's newspapers have been saying this week:

Minneapolis Tribune:

Reports of the demise of Chicago's legendary political machine, fueled by Jane Byrne's upset of Mayor Michael Bilandic in Tuesday's Democratic primary, may be premature. The machine, tuned and oiled by the late Mayor Richard Daley, is likely to roll on. It will simply have a new operator.

Bilandic was perceived as the machine's custodian for good reason. Bilandic is a politician in the traditional Chicago mold.

Byrne, in contrast, seemed at first glance to have the credentials of an anti-machine reformer. She had served as Chicago's commissioner of consumer services — but was fired by Bilandic after alleging corruption in connection with a taxi-fare increase.

But Byrne is also a product of the machine. She was a Daley protege; that's one reason why she got her job as consumer commissioner. Early in her campaign, she contended that she reflected Daley's goals more closely than did Bilandic.

If she beats her Republican opponent in the general election — which seems probable — she is likely not to scrap the machine, but to take it over.

That's not necessarily a bad thing. A strong political base can mean strong, effective leadership and a smoothly run city. A machine becomes bad when its power is abused to foster and protect corruption. Chicagoans have traditionally accepted a little corruption as the price of "a city that works." If Byrne can make the city work without exacting that price, she will be a reformer even if she's not anti-machine.

Voters Stay Independent

Springfield (Mass.) Daily News

Who said you can't fight City Hall?

In Chicago, where the late Richard J. Daley commanded the country's most powerful political machine for years on end, voters rose up and rejected Mayor Michael A. Bilandic — who inherited the Daley organization.

The surprise winner in Democratic primary balloting was Mrs. Jane Byrne, a former Chicago official who was fired by Mayor Bilandic. Since Democrats outnumber Republicans in Daley's former domain, it appears that the next mayor of Chicago will be a woman. Mrs. Byrne will face GOP primary winner Wallace Johnson, an investment banker in the general election April 3.

In Kansas City, there was another upset, although less spectacular, as Mayor Charles B. Wheeler lost his bid for a third term. The leading mayoral vote-getter was Bruce Watkins, who could become the first black mayor of Kansas City.

And, in financially-troubled Cleveland, whhere Mayor Dennis Kucinich has been under attack, the young mayor won an unexpected vote of confidence as voters followed two of his recommendations — aimed at rescuing Cleveland from bankruptcy.

Election results in Chicago, Kansas City, and Cleveland demonstrate once against that the U.S. voter is an independent breed. In the privacy of the voting booth, he goes his own way defying public opinion poolls and political "experts."

Americans Rooked

St. Louis Globe-Democrat

The Chinese will pay Americans 41 cents on the dollar to settle $197 million in claims outstanding since the Chinese Communists expropriated American property in their 1949 takeover. U.S. Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal thinks it's a good deal.

"We consider this to be a very good and fair arrangement," said Blumenthal after getting President Carter's approval for the agreement. One wonders how many other such "good and fair" deals Blumenthal has made for Americans while in Peking....

But viewed from other angles, it appears that Americans are getting rooked, Blumenthal's ballyhoo notwithstanding. Not only are the Chinese getting off with only a partial payment of a long-standing debt, but the congressional appropriation for part of the balance will come from taxpayers' money. Americans are paying twice.

If this is any example of the kind of deals that can be expected under the new "normalization" of relations with Red China, Americans would be well advised not to bargain with the Chinese for anything such as wooden chopsticks — they might be full of splinters.

Switch To Practical

Houston Chronicle

National energy policymakers would be well advised to pay careful attention when a governor of Texas advocates a windfall profits tax to accompany an abolition of federal price controls on oil.

Washington has been taking a sociopolitical approach to its energy problems for five years now and has wound up with little more than the prospect of having to ration gasoline.

It is far past time to switch to the practical — all-out development of domestic supplies with other considerations taking a back seat. All those other considerations which fret Washington so much and which have so hampered energy development are going to loom pretty insignificant if this country gets into the nightmare of a real energy crunch, as recent events have shown could so easily happen.

Being practical means having the wisdom and courage to abolish price controls on the essential fuel — oil — and requiring that the resulting profits be plowed back into research, development and production of more domestically controlled energy supplies. "Domestically controlled energy supplies" is a fancy phrase for not letting somebody else call the tune and this country having to dance to it.

This is the common sense approach which Gov. William P. Clements was urging in Washington the other day: free the oil prices and put all that money into new energy. If it isn't put into new energy development, take away a windfall profits tax.

That would be doing something about energy instead of wringing hands and finding reasons why things can't be done...

Peace Hopes Dim

Scripps-Howard Newspapers

The chances for peace in the Middle East, which seemed so bright after the successful Camp David summit last September, regrettably now are as dim and nearly hopeless as before that diplomatic breakthrough.

There are a number of reasons for this sad and dangerous state of affairs.

First, Israel's Prime Minister Menachem Begin has been pursuing a chimera, the mistaken thought that he could have peace with Egypt without doing something meaningful for the Palestinians of the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Second, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, stung by charges that he is selling out the Arab cause by signing a separate peace with Israel, has been escalating his demands since Camp David. This had fed Israeli fears that his signature would be of little value on any agreement.

Third, the sweeping away of the Shah of Iran by a tide of Islamic nationalism has fearfully complicated the peace process. Sadat has reason to fear a similar fate if he signs with Israel...

At this point the Egyptian-Israeli peace talks are barely breathing, but alive. It will be tragic if they die because leaders in Jerusalem and Cairo shrink from taking high risks for peace that they accepted many times in war.

President Carter was absolutely right when he said that "history and our own children will condemn us" if Begin, Sadat and he let the present chance for a settlement between Israel and Egypt elude them. The way things are going in the Middle East there may not be another opportunity.

Athletic Idea Rapped

Dallas Times Herald

The former chancellor of East Carolina University suggested recently that collegiate athletes ought not be subjected to competition in the classroom and the athletic arena at the same time because their classmates have an unfair advantage over them — more study time and regular class attendance.

Leo Jenkins, who retired from ECU last year ..., believes athletes should be allowed to take only one course, or none at all, during an athletic season unless the individual is an exceptional student clearly capable of handling the rigors of two disciplines... .

"We're not being honest as it is," the former administrator says.

He's right, of course, but the way he proposes to deal with truth is considerably more flawed than the structure that now exists...

...Jenkins' ideas suggest a student wishing to compete in sports and receive a college education might easily spend the better part of a decade as a full-time undergraduate working to obtain a degree...

Further separation of athletes from scholarship isn't going to improve the situation any.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International

The moon is moving toward its new phase.

The morning stars are Venus and Mars.

The evening stars are Mercury, Jupiter and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Pisces.

Italian navigator Amerigo Vespucci was born March 9, 1451.

On this day in history:

In 1822, the first patent for artificial teeth was awarded to Charles Graham of New York City.

In 1947, after 440 days, the United Auto Workers reached an agreement with the Case Manufacturing Co. of Racine, Wis., to end one of the longest strikes on record.

In 1967, Russian Communist dictator Josef Stalin's daughter, Svetlana, defected to the United States.

In 1977, 12 gunmen belonging to the Hanafi Moslem sect invaded three Washington buildings, killed a black newsman and held 100 people hostage.

A thought for the day:

President Calvin Coolidge said, "There is no right to strike against the public safety by anybody, anywhere, anytime."

President Gearing Up For New Campaign

By HELEN THOMAS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter has not yet announced whether he will seek re-election, but his new campaign committee will be all set to go in a couple of weeks. The formal announcement later this year will be anticlimatic.

He has only one way to go — up — if one takes the popularity polls seriously. But as Harry Truman and others have proven, it's the last poll, at the ballot box, that counts.

Carter has tapped Evan Dobelle, Democratic Party treasurer, to be his campaign coordinator. In that position, Dobelle will begin fundraising, and setting up grass roots organizations in every state in support of Carter.

Carter's cronies will be very much involved in his political planning. But they will be doing that at the White Houee where they also can keep their powerful positions.

Washington Window

From published reports, they are pledging to be scrupulous in not permitting their political chores to interfere with the nation's business. But who knows where the line is drawn. As the president's chief domestic adviser, Hamilton Jordan, Carter's 1976 campaign manager, will have a lot to say about strategy. So will Carter's other closest aide, Jody Powell. Gerald Rafshoon, communications adviser, will continue his image building from the White House.

Dobelle, 33, a likeable, energetic strong Carter believer, will be getting his guidance from the men around Carter. The only woman in the political picture who gets a lot of credit for organizing support for Carter programs is Anne Wexler, who works behind the scenes, the way the Carter White House likes women advisers to operate.

Campaigning from the White House is the way it's usually done by an incumbent. Carter is not expected to be an exception, although he may hit the road more than some of his predecessors. The usual theme, however, is that a president is too busy governing to spend that much time on the campaign trail.

The president has lost the support of a lot of his original constituency. But for some there may be no other place to go. Labor, blacks, the women, all have their complaints against the Carter White House. But depending on who wins the Democratic nomination, there may be no other place for leaders in these categories to rally their forces.

The continuing bad news on the inflation front also confronts the White House with leadership problems. An easing of inflation later this year and early next year would be what the doctor ordered for Carter.

His main problems, however, are in the international field. The fall of the shah of Iran and the growing coolness of the Saudis and other changes in the picture put the United States in the position of having to reassert its power in the eyes of allies, and potential adversaries.

And so it comes to the Middle East. Any success would help Carter at this juncture. An Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty would enhance his role as a peacemaker and pay off his persistent dedication which he claims has cost him politically.

A strategic arms limitation agreement with the Soviet Union is all but signed and that, too, would be another plus.

Supercarrier Moves Toward Arabian Sea

WASHINGTON (AP) — It will take 10 days to two weeks for the United States supercarrier Constellation to reach the Arabian Sea, where it is being sent in a show of U.S. support for friendly Arab nations.

The 80,000-ton carrier left the Philippines Wednesday in an effort to demonstrate concern over military actions by the Soviet-backed South Yemeni invasion of North Yemen, the Pentagon announced.

It said the Constellation and the oil supply ship Kansas City will be joined by the guided-missile cruiser Sterett and the guided-missile destroyer Waddell in the South China Sea.

Pentagon officials aren't saying how long the Constellation will remain in the area. The ship, with its crew of more than 5,000, had been scheduled to return to the United States later this month.

In addition to the revolutionary changes in Iran, both the United States and Saudi Arabia have expressed concern about the South Yemen assault against North Yemen, which apparently had the support of 800 to 1,200 Soviet military advisers.

"The deployment reflects continued U.S. interest in the stability of the region," the Pentagon said in disclosing the Constellation's new mission. "The present situation along the (South Yemeni-North Yemeni) border has arisen because of attacks across an international frontier in an area of great importance to the United States."

The Constellation carries about 80 aircraft, including F-14 fighters, A-7 and A-6 bombers and anti-submarine warfare planes and helicopters.

LONGEST WAR

American combat involvement in Vietnam for about 12 years made the Vietnam War the longest in U.S. History.

Teamsters Demand 14 Percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Teamsters union is threatening to barrel through President Carter's anti-inflation wage guidelines with pay raise demands that more than double the 7 percent voluntary limit called for by Carter.

The union is asking the trucking industry for a first-year wage increase of 14 percent, sources say, while demanding full cost-of-living protection on top of that.

The 300,000 truck drivers and warehouse workers affected by the contract talks now make an average of $9.40 an hour in straight-time wages.

The union's demand is for a flat $1.35 hourly raise, plus additional increases tied to the inflation rate, said the sources, who requested anonymity.

The current agreement expires March 31. A top union official has expressed confidence the two sides can reach a settlement by the deadline to avert a potentially crippling nationwide strike.

In all, the union is seeking $2.35 over three years, a 25 percent general wage increase. When major fringe benefits and the cost-of-living raises are added, the demand equals a 50 percent to 55 percent boost overall.

One administration official acknowledged Thursday that the union's initial offer is "way above the guidelines." But the official, who declined to be named, said the industry might take a strong stand and hold the union to a settlement within the presidential guidelines.

"I think we're going to see three very tough weeks of bargaining ahead," said the official.

Carter's inflation fighters have said the 2.1-million-member union will provide a crucial test for the guidelines.

Some officials say the Teamsters, who won wage and fringe increases of more than 11 percent a year in their present three-year pact, could make or break Carter's guidelines.

The union historically sets wage patterns for other contract talks, and its settlement will weigh heavily on what several additional major unions do at the bargaining table later this year.

The settlement also will set the pattern for 200,000 other Teamsters covered by different contracts with the trucking industry that expire this year.

The union, which resumes bargaining with the industry this weekend in Hollywood, Fla., has refused to disclose any of its demands or confirm any details provided by the sources close to the negotiators.

In fact, it has been learned, the union has refused to tell even government officials of their initial demands, because Carter's inflation fighters have refused to bend the guidelines in ways the union has sought.

In the process, the government has angered Teamsters' President Frank E. Fitzsimmons. "Fitz is really peeved at us," said one official.

Kidnapped Teen-Agers Released After Appealing To Captor

SCITUATE, R.I. (AP) — The son and daughter of a prominent Rhode Island restaurateur were kidnapped at gunpoint and kept hostage in an abandoned bunker for nealy 10 hours before talking one of their captors into freeing them, state police said.

One suspect was arrested today and two were arrested Thursday night in connection with the abduction, police said.

Capt. Edward D. Pare, chief of state police detectives, said Frank Galleshaw Jr., 17, and his sister, Tammy, 15, were abducted on their way to school by a man with a gun as they entered the garage of their family's Burrillville home shortly before 8 a.m. Thursday.

Pare said a neighbor, Kenny Fullam, 17, also was abducted with the Galleshaws, but he was released shortly after it was determined he was not a member of the family.

None of the youngsters was harmed.

The Galleshaw youngsters escaped shortly after 6 p.m., apparently after talking one of the kidnappers into letting them go free.

"I'm very happy my children are home," said Frank T. Galleshaw, the children's father and operator of a restaurant located next to the family's lavish country estate. "God has looked over all of us."

During the alleged kidnapping, several calls were made to the family, one of which demanded a ransom of $500,000 in cash. Gerald Galleshaw, the teen-agers' uncle, said the money was raised, but police said it was never paid.

Arrested in the case, Pare said at a midnight news conference, were Salvatore Savastano Jr., 18, and Michael A. Ballard, 36, both of Bristol. The third man was not immediately identified.

Charges had not been filed early today, but Pare said Savastano and Ballard face charges of kidnapping and kidnapping with intent to extort money.

Pare said that after the children were abducted, they were driven to an isolated spot a mile away from their home.

At that point, Pare said, Savastano was met by two other men in another car. The children were transferred to the trunk of the second car and driven 52 miles to a bunker in the desolate Fort Getty area of Jamestown, which is on an island in Narragansett Bay.

About 6 p.m., after spending the day in the damp bunker with their initial kidnapper, police said, the two youngsters persuaded him first to unlock their handcuffs and then convinced him to allow them to escape.

The children said they "ran fast" to a nearby home and called their parents, who, accompanied by police, rushed across the state to retrieve the youngsters.

Grocer Pays Motel's Bill

EUGENE, Ore. (UPI) — A small-town grocer has obtained the $1 million Pierpont Inn for the price of the motel's unpaid grocery bill.

Robert Petersdorf, owner of a small supermarket in Florenne, was the only bidder at the sheriff's sale of the inn, which was auctioned off to satisfy Petersdorf's court judgment against Pierpont for $7,272.16, the amount of the unpaid grocery bill. That was the sum he bid to acquire the property.

The Pierpont is a 49-unit motel with restaurant, swimming pool, conference rooms and banquet room which seats 400.

Previous owners planned to make the facility into a convention center but financial and title problems and an inadequate water supply led to closure of the inn in December.

Petersdorf said he will reopen the inn if that is the only way he can collect his money.

Mania Sweeps Smith College

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (AP) — Spirits were flying high again as Mary Dickinson and hundreds of fellow Smith College students renewed their celebration of her return to the bottle.

But this time, the party was planned.

Using nearly $700 of the $2,500 bet she won from her mother for abstaining from all forms of alcohol for one year, Miss Dickinson threw a liquor-laden party Thursday night at the sedate western Massachusetts campus.

The campus was anything but sedate early Tuesday morning, when Miss Dickinson, a 20-year-old sophomore, ended her dry year with a peppermint schnapps. Her private celebration became giddy, campus-wide revelry.

The mania swept across the normally tranquil quadrangle and culminated in an early-morning sing-along involving some 400 students, many cavorting in nightgowns, and Jill Ker Conway, president of the 2,200-woman college.

"It was just incredible," said one freshman at Thursday night's bash. "It showed Smith has real spirit."

Among those attending the party — which printed invitations said was held "to celebrate the cessation of Mary Dickinson's sobriety" — was Eileen Dickinson, the woman who started it all.

Mrs. Dickinson came to her daughter's dormitory to meet some of the friends who participated in Mary's merry romp and to forgive her daughter a minor indulgence. On Wednesday, Miss Dickenson admitted to a reporter that she had sneaked a nip of tequila at the end of last summer after a quarrel with her mother.

"I thought she did a smashing job," said Mrs. Dickinson, a resident of Brainerd, N.Y., and president of the New York State Higher Education Assistance Corp. "And I thought her honesty was really touching."

Miss Dickinson said her mother made the offer because some relatives had drinking problems.

"We're Irish and to be quite honest, we had some problem drinkers in our history," she said. "I never really liked getting too ripped but I thought I'd take on the experiment of not even drinking socially."

In an interview, Mrs. Dickinson said she had made a similar offer last year to her son, Edward, a freshman at Colgate University in Hamilton, N.Y. She said he turned it down then but is reconsidering.

Meanwhile, Ms. Dickinson, who intends to use the rest of her reward to pay for a trip to Antigua next month, said she's glad her year of abstinence has ended.

"I became a caffeine addict," she said. "People thought I had a can of Coca-Cola glued to my hand. And I found that most fraternity parties don't make provisions for non-drinkers."

Woman Sentenced To 'House Arrest'

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Found guilty of killing her drunk, gun-toting husband in a kitchen scuffle two years ago, Rebecca Brown is serving time for involuntary manslaughter — at home.

Mrs. Brown, a 46-year-old vocational nurse, is the first person sentenced to "house arrest" under an experimental program in Alameda County which officials say is unique in the country.

Under her sentence of one-year probation, Mrs. Brown continues to work and lives at home, but she must report to a probation officer twice each weekday for the next year. She cannot leave town and cannot leave her home on weekends.

Spawned as a cost-cutting measure after Proposition 13 reduced local revenues, the program is intended to save the county the $6,500 annual cost of keeping a prisoner in jail.

"It's the first time that I know of that house arrest has been used in the United States in a routine criminal case," says Joseph Bort, a lawyer and county supervisor who thought of the idea a few months ago.

Bort got approval from fellow supervisors to set up a study committee. The Brown case was the first in which "house arrest" has been put to test.

Judge Stanley Golde of Alameda County Superior Court, who sentenced Mrs. Brown Tuesday, said the program is designed for "somebody who should go to jail as punishment, but who is no real risk" to break the law again.

Golde said house arrest is less onerous than going to jail, but added: "The daily surveillance, the restriction of movement, staying home on the weekend — that is all punishment. It is punishment to the extent that it restricts her freedom."

He called Mrs. Brown an ideal candidate for house arrest because she has no prior criminal record and has worked almost all her adult life.

If she violates any of the terms, she can be sent to jail immediately.

The concept is an expansion of the existing work furlough system, under which a prisoner stays in jail on nights and weekends, but is permitted to leave on weekdays to work or look for a job.

The county spends $8.8 million a year for the jail where prisoners are confined, plus $1.1 million for its work furlough program.

Dawson Youth Wins Honor

Beam Entry Houston Stock Show Champ

HOUSTON (Special) — Before a crowd of more than 40,000 persons in the Houston Astrodome, Jim Bob Beam, a Dawson County 4-H member, led his 1,305-pound Limousin steer into the spotlight to receive the grand champion steer banner, blanket of flowers and trophy.

The Limousin-Angus cross steer was selected as the best of more than 1,000 market steer entries at the Houston Livestock Show last week.

Jim Bob is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Beam of Patricia. He is an eighth-grader at Klondike Junior High School.

Reserve grand champion honors went to the 1,222-pound Chianina breed champion exhibited by Reagon Brooks of Coahoma. The 15-year-old Coahoma High School sophomore is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Brooks.

In the Angus breed competition, Rodney Hunter of Hereford exhibited the reserve champion steer. He showed his sister Charlynn's 1,163-pound steer to win the honor.

The steer was named breed champion at the Castro County Stock Show and won first place slots at both the Lubbock and Amarillo stock shows.

Rodney and Charlynn are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hunter of Dimmitt. Rodney is an eighth-grader at Dimmitt Junior High School and Charlynn is in the fourth grade at Dimmitt Elementary School.

Cole Hunt of Ackerly won the breed champion title in the Hereford show with his 1,036-pound entry. Hunt is a 4-H member attending Sands Junior High School. The eighth-grader is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hunt.

A Lubbock County 4-H member won the first place banner in the mediumweight Hereford division with his 933-pound entry. Blake Anthony, 17-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Anthony, is also a member of Future Farmers of America.

First place in the lightweight Shorthorn division went to 16-year-old Nae Harris of Lamesa. Branden Harris, 11, showed his sister's calf into the winner's circle. They are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Harris.

Mark is a 4-H member and a fourth-grader at Greenwood Elementary School. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Graham.

The first place slot for lightweight Chianina steers went to Tracey Smith of Levelland. Tracey exhibited a 1,074-pound calf that also won first place ribbons at the San Antonio and Scotts Futurity shows.

The 17-year-old Levelland High School senior is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith. She is a member of both 4-H and FFA clubs in her community.

In English Crossbred steer competition, first place in the lightweight division went to Clinton Lewis for his 904-pound steer.

Clinton is an eighth-grader at Guthrie Junior High School and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Lewis.

Randy Vogel of Hereford showed the reserve champion Limousin steer. His 1,092-pound entry was the mediumweight winner and was also grand champion steer at the Hereford Young Farmers Show, first in his class at Fort Worth and second in his class at San Antonio.

Randy is a sophomore at Hereford High School.

Joie Brummett of Big Spring exhibited the animal. She is a sophomore at Borden High School where she is also a member of the FFA and FHA clubs.

She has been showing hogs for nine years.

A senior at Springlake-Earth High School, the 17-year-old is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thurman Lewis.

In the Duroc division of the barrow show, Bill Jack Haire, an 18-year-old FFA member from Slaton, exhibited the breed champion, which also was tops in the heavyweight class. It was the first show for the 243-pound pig and the first time for Billy Jack to show at the Houston show.

A senior at Slaton High School, Billy Jack is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Haire.

Mandi Shipman of Happy showed a 216-pound Duroc barrow to win first place in the lightweight division. Mandi is in the sixth grade at Happy Elementary School. She is a 4-H member and has been showing lambs and hogs for four years. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Shipman.

A 247-pound barrow owned and shown by Mike Nettles of Wilson was chosen breed champion in Berkshire competition. This FFA project pig also took third place at the Lynn County Livestock Show. The barrow was tops in the heavyweight class.

Mike, an 18-year-old at Wilson High School, has been showing pigs for four years. He is a FFA member and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ronnie Nettles.

Sharlet Johnson of Farwell took reserve champion breed honors for her 213-pound Berkshire barrow. The 4-H project also took the lightweight class title and has won local and county places in stock shows.

Jimmy is a 17-year-old senior at Happy High School. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Williams.

In Poland China competition, Mickey Kieth of New Home won the reserve champion title with the mediumweight winner owned by his brother, Murray. The 228-pound barrow was raised as a FFA project.

Mickey is a junior at New Home High School. The boys are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Kieth.

Mitch Bartley of Wilson was the owner of the lightweight class winner in the Poland China show. The 211-pound FFA project barrow was exhibited by Joel Clary, also of Wilson.

Reserve champion honors in the Hampshire class went to a heavyweight owned and exhibited by Ronny Hopper of Slaton. The team won second place in the heavyweight division before returning to the ring for the second highest award of the show.

A 15-year-old FFA'er, Ronny is a freshman at Slaton High School. His First place in the mediumweight Hampshire class went to a pig owned by Kevin Owens of Farwell and shown by Kevin's brother, Mark. The boys are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Owens. Mark, who is a junior at Farwell High School, has been showing pigs for three years.

Top Steer Brings Record $70,000

HOUSTON (Special) — World record premium prices were paid for all the grand champions and the reserve grand champions in the steer and barrow shows of the Houston Livestock Show auction sale last week.

Officials on the auction committee said pre-sale commitments, donations and prices paid in the auction should bring the final tally to more than $1 million to make this year the largest show in history.

Setting the pace early at the sale, four livestock show supporter's paid $70,000 for the grand champion steer, breaking the previous record of $52,000 set three weeks ago at Fort Worth.

Tommy Steele, Earl Gilbert, Doug Potts and Homer Scott, all of Houston, bought the 1,305-pound Limousin-Hereford. Jim Bob Beam, a Dawson County 4-H member from Lamesa, exhibited the wihning steer.

Exhibitor of the reserve champion was Reagon Brooks, a Howard County 4-H member from Big Spring.

In the barrow auction, Petra Lewis' 242-pound Crossbred grand champion sold to Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Nick Morrow for a record price of $25,000. Petra is a FFA member from Earth.

Moments later, the reserve grand champion barrow, a 241-pound Hampshire, sold for $13,000 to Don's Western Wear of Houston. Johnny Schaef, a Randall County 4-H member from Canyon, exhibited the animal.

The 26 remaining breed champion steers sold for a total of $355,262.50, an average of $13,663.94 each. That total exceeds previous year totals.

Corn Growers Shun Frito-Lay's Offer

By A-J Correspondent

DIMMITT — Members of the High Plains Farm Bargaining Association have voted by a margin of more than four-to-one to reject the latest food corn production contract offer of Frito-Lay Inc. of Dallas.

With a total of 54 former Frito contract growers participating in a special session here along with prospective contractors and other members of the bargaining group, the final tally was 58 against accepting the F-L proposal, and 14 in favor of taking the contract offered.

The vote represented an outright reject of a Frito-Lay contract offer made last week of $5.50 per hundredweight for food-grade yellow corn and $7 per hundredweight for food-grade white corn.

Those figures represented the most generous F-L contract offer to date, since negotiations between the young bargaining group and the Dallas-based firm opened in late January.

Members of the bargaining association originally set their price goals as $6 per hundredweight for yellow food corn and $7 per for white food corn, emphasizing that major production cost increases made the higher prices necessary.

Frito originally offered $5 per hundredweight for yellow corn contracts and $6 per hundredweight white corn contracts as negotiations began.

The final verdict came after members of the board of directors of the association deadlocked on a vote concerning a recommendation on signing or not signing the proposed contract.

"I wish we could come to you and say we have a definite recommendation on whether you should sign or not. Ultimately, the choice is going to be yours on whether to sign or not," commented Weldon Davis of Hart, president of the bargaining group.

"Up until now, the board has handled these matters as they came up, and if the current contract offer had been in line with what the membership had expressed a desire for, we would have completed negotiations. But we have no way of knowing if this is the final offer by Frito, or if we might continue negotiations, and we felt a vote by the membership was needed on this issue." he continued.

During the session, a number of farmers rose to offer comments on the latest contract proposal.

"We're being offered 25 cents more for three-quarters of the production, and $1 more for only a fourth of what we produce. We may have to pay $2 per mcf for gas this summer, and I just don't see how we can grow yellow corn for less than $5 per hundredweight under the current contract offer, I think that's what we would be doing. I would a whole lot rather have $6.50 per hundredweight for white corn and $6 percent for yellow. . . Then we'd be trading on the long end of the deal," said Jay Boston of Hereford.

Charles Schlabs of Hereford offered a comparison of corn prices, including hedging on the futures market, and emphasized the high dockage that many growers often see on their corn delivered for food purposes.

AS THE ECONOMY GOES, SO GOES COTTON.

That's a major reason why, at a time when "cotton's future is brighter than it has been in many years," economists at Cotton Inc. are sending up caution flags to America's cotton producers as they shape their 1979 planting and marketing plans.

"At the retail counter, cotton is the favored fiber," says Lawrence Shaw, associate director for supply economics. "Consumers' growing awareness of cotton's inherent qualities of comfort — now made even more desirable with easy-care characteristics — has sharply strengthened the long-term demand for U. S. cotton."

But while the trend "definitely bodes well for cotton's long-range future, he adds, there are some short-term problems to be overcome.

THESE INCLUDE THE FEDERAL COTTON dust regulations imposed on the textile industry; the danger of cotton being "regulated out of business...by overzealous government safety regulators;" and the threat of an economic recession this year.

"However competitive cotton is with other fibers, total fiber demand falls when economic growth slackens," Shaw points out. History, he says, clearly shows that cotton consumption rises and falls with the economy in general.

With that in mind, says Shaw, there is cause for concern, even though domestic consumption of cotton "continues strong" and exports of U. S. cotton are expected to increase by 9 percent during the current marketing year.

"An economic recession beginning sometime during 1979 is part of most well-respected economic forecasts," he says.

"THERE ARE SIGNS THAT THE ECONOMY is indeed slowing already...a significant slowing of economic activity may be just around the corner.

"The weight of history indicates that slower growth in the economy will have direct impact on the demand for clothing and textile home furnishings products, which in turn will reduce the demand for U. S. cotton."

If a recession does get underway in the second half of calendar year 1979, U. S. cotton offtake — domestic use plus exports — could decline by 500,000 bales in the 1979-80 marketing year "solely as the result of economic conditions," he adds.

For cotton producers, says Shaw, this poses the short-term risk of weakened cotton prices later in the year — a risk that will be heightened if there is a large crop, Shaw says.

"MUCH CAN STILL HAPPEN BETWEEN NOW and harvest time," the analyst points out. "But if favorable growing conditions prevail, U. S. producers could still turn out a 14-million-bale crop in 1979 — perhaps as much as 2 million bales more than expected offtake.

"The increase in carryover which these figures imply would put cotton prices under pressure by late summer and fall.

"In this environment, producers should expect prices at harvest to be lower than at planting time. Taking measures to lock in a profit prior to planting, if possible, seems to be the best way to avoid being at the mercy of the market should over-supply conditions develop."

Cattle Futures Set New Highs As Trade Continues Heavy Pace

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 42 to 135 points higher with only December lower by 30 Thursday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. August led the upturn after sharing a limit level advance with several other contracts. New highs were set in April through January in heavy trade of 35,124 cars.

April rose to a new historic high at 73.90 on buying led by the cash connected commission house. The limit level advance was the second in a row. Scattered later selling was prompted by some shaving of early firmness in beef.

Wholesale beef was unchanged at 106 cents a pound, f.o.b. river points, which is a record high. Cash cattle were up 50 to off 25 cents with the best top $72.50 per hundredweight. Omaha's top was $70. Slaughter was 134,000 head. About 4,350 head are expected today at the major terminals.

Feeder cattle futures closed 10 to 150 higher led by March and April at the limit the second day in a row. Sales were 5,596 lots. New highs were posted in March and April with the latter at a new historic peak at 92.40.

Prices were higher from the start on active support by the cash connected commission house with news that price controls would not be imposed on beef bolstering demand. The latter was down 1/2 cent at noon on packer to packer sales, however.

Deliveries total 180 thus far. Cash feeder cattle were steady to up $4 with the best top $123 per hundredweight at Louisville. Receipts at the major markets are expected to total 2,525 head.

Hog futures closed 50 lower to 40 higher on 9,405 contracts. April was off the most at the day's low with February up the most after December rose 75.

Early buying spilled over from limit level higher cattle futures but resistance was met on heavy hog runs and lower prices. Mixed trend to cash pork also made for uneasiness here. Fears of heavy hog runs next week also weighed on futures.

Wholesale hams were up 1 1/2 to off 1 cent at 85A to 92 3/4 cents a pound, f.o.b. river. Cash hogs were steady to off 75 cents with the best top $53 per hundredweight, which is a two-month low at Peoria.

Kill was 326,000 head. The major terminals are expecting about 21,800 head today.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 82 to 147 lower led by May at the day's low and the lowest in five weeks. Volume was 5,046 cars. The market retreated after an early gain of 47 on spillover buying from cattle futures.

Followthrough was lacking, however, as traders noted sizeable storage input locally along with increased hog kill. Late selling came despite firmer cash at noon.

Deliveries total 46 thus far. Wholesale bacon was unchanged to up 1 1/2 cent at 56 to 58 1/2 cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — A government report showing no more than the expected decline in year-end soybean supplies helped push soybean futures lower Thursday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Analysts said mixed prices for silver futures, viewed by some traders as an index of inflation, also helped lead to a late-session selling spree by commission houses and locals.

The Agriculture Department report showed a 10 million bushel decline in anticipated soybean stocks at the end of 1979 because of a corresponding expected increase in exports.

Drought damage to the Brazilian soybean crop is the main reason for the expected increase in demand for U.S. soybeans.

Many traders were expecting an even larger decline, analysts said. A government report that 200,000 tons of soybeans exported recently were sold to the Soviet Union had little impact on prices.

At the close, soybeans were 5 1/2 to 15 1/2 cents lower, March $7.41; wheat was unchanged to 1 3/4 cents lower, March $3.83 1/4; corn was 1/4 to 2 1/4 cents lower, March $2.39; and oats were 3/4 to 1 1/2 cents lower, March $1.32.

HIGH PLAINS COTTON
U. S. Department of Agriculture

Trading on the Lubbock spot cotton market Thursday was slow to moderate. Supplies of cotton for sale were moderate to heavy and demand was light to moderate.

Mixed lots brought growers around 700 to 900 points over 1978 loan rates.

Quotations are the approximate prices reported to the Agricultural Marketing Service for qualities equal to the U.S. Official Grade and Staple Standards. Prices are for micronaire (mike) readings of 3.5 through 4.9, in mixed lots, uncompressed, free of all charges in the warehouse in the market.

Price trend: higher on Thursday.

Governor Receives Advice On Primary

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says he is getting a lot of advice about a proposed Texas presidential primary, much of it from present and possible presidential contenders.

Clements said he has not made up his mind whether the Texas primary should be held separate from the regular primary voting or at the same time.

His advice, he told a news conference, included:

John Connally — "He says it doesn't make any difference, he is going to win anyway."

George Bush — "He feels strongly that the presidential primary should stay the same time as the election."

Ronald Reagan — "He says it should be the same day as the election."

Sen. John Tower — "He has mixed emotions but says he is leaning toward the presidential primary on the same day as the election."

Sen. Howard Baker — "He's interested."

Hit-Run Incident Injures Lubbock Police Officer

Like the calm before the storm, it had been several weeks since the city had recorded any major crimes until Thursday night, when a Lubbock policeman was run over and three men were shot in separate incidents.

Officer Billy F. Stafford escaped serious injury about 11:15 p.m. Thursday when he was struck by a car in the 2300-block of 19th Street and thrown on top of the vehicle's hood.

Stafford said he saw two young Mexican-American men swerve their car toward another vehicle and then attempt to hit a third car. One motorist was forced into oncoming traffic, causing traffic in all lanes to back up, he said.

The policeman said he stopped his patrol car and began walking up to the pair's stopped vehicle when the driver of the car accelerated toward him. Stafford said the impact knocked him on top of the hood.

Stafford said he was able to get a good look at the driver before he was thrown off the hood by the vehicle's swaying motion. The two men, traveling in a gold 1978 Pontiac Trans-Am, were last seen westbound on 19th Street. Reports show the officer suffered minor injuries to the knee and elbow.

In the first of three separate shootings Thursday, Jose Ferrazas, 45, operator of the Go-Gas service station at 504 Idalou Road was at work about 8:45 p.m. when he was gunned down during an apparent argument over money with another man.

Ferrazas, who suffered a gunshot wound in the stomach, was listed in serious condition this morning at West Texas Hospital.

A station employee also on duty told police he was in another part of the building when the shooting occurred. The employee said the man who allegedly shot Ferrazas took the victim to the hospital before EMS attendants could arrive.

About 15 minutes later, police arrived at a 1210 Ave. E location where they found Felipe Santiago Moralez, 41, of Lamesa shot in the left nostril. He was listed in satisfactory condition this morning at St. Mary's Hospital.

The victim told police he had been at a 14th Street club, where he met a young Mexican-American man and his female companion.

Reports show Moralez left the nightspot with the couple, and all three were walking in the 1200-block of Avenue E when the other man suddenly pulled a gun and shot Moralez in the nose.

Moralez ran to 1210 Ave. E where authorities were called.

About an hour after that shooting, Forrest Wayne Duty, 49, of 2910 Ave. H, No. 56, suffered a gunshot wound in the stomach.

Duty, who was in serious condition early today at St. Mary's Hospital, reportedly was shot by another man in a residence near his home. A witness to the shooting said the suspect, a slender, black man, between 25 and 30 years old, entered the residence and began fighting with Duty. During the scuffle, four shots were fired, the witness said.

Duty reportedly had been in a fight with the man earlier in the night at a nightclub parking lot.

In recently reported break-ins, Gary Henkel, general manager of A-1 Mobile Homes, said intruders broke a window in that 2000 N. University Ave. firm Wednesday night and took more than $2,000 of property.

Henkel reported missing $500 in stereo equipment, a $350 typewriter, $30 clock radio, and a $400 camera and $800 worth of camera attachments.

Eugene Alexander Silasi told police he lost $1,732 in property, including a television, guns and jewelry, when he was victimized by house burglars Wednesday afternoon.

Reports show $883 in guns were stolen from the 3714 46th St. home of F.L. McGuire Tuesday or Wednesday. McGuire said he found the house ransacked and the guns missing when he returned home about 6 p.m. Wednesday.

Buddy Gass said a welding machine, two air compressors and several other tools were stolen from Stuller Engineering, 502 N. Ave. H, Wednesday night. Gass, manager of the firm, set the loss at about $1,500.

Jimmy R. Dial, manager of Bosque Apartments at 1710 Main St., told officers $585 in rent receipts were missing from his office desk. He said he found the bank bag in which the money was kept on top of the desk about 7:30 a.m. Thursday.

A $500 television was the target of burglars who pried the back door of 2424 Baylor St., according to resident David Leroy Meyer. He said the burglary occurred between 7 a.m. and 12:20 p.m. Thursday.

Earl Carver, owner of Wayfarer Motel at 805 34th St., said a television, worth $400, was missing from one of the establishment's rooms. He said the bathroom window of the room had been broken and the television apparently was taken between 4 p.m. Wednesday and noon Thursday.

Deletion Stirs Food Ordinance Confusion

By TOM GRIESS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The absence of a paragraph on food establishment construction in the latest revision of the proposed city food ordinance sparked new confusion and flashes of indignation among Lubbock Health Board members Thursday.

As stated in state food sanitation regulations and the originally proposed city ordinance, "studs, joists, and rafters shall not be exposed" in food preparation and storage areas, equipment and utensil-washing areas and toilet rooms and vestibules.

The ban on exposure of studs, joists and rafters in those is not in the current revision, and board members wonder why.

"It was not the intent with the deletion to compromise standards," said Chairman Ray Santos, but others are skeptical of that.

"If they (the city administration) didn't want to compromise a standard, why did they delete (the paragraph) when they are standards?" asked board member Sellie Shine.

Santos and Denzel Percifull, city director of public services, said following the meeting that the matter is "still under advisement" with the city attorney.

That could mean a lengthy delay before a final resolution because the city attorney is still awaiting a legal brief from State Board of Health attorneys on the broader issue of the governing powers of home-rule cities versus the regulatory authority of the Teas Department of Health.

Assistant City Attorney Donald Vandiver, who approved the form of the current proposed ordinance revision, said the controversial paragraph deletion was made because studs, joists and rafters are not interpreted as "pertaining to food sanitation."

"The terms of the construction trade are not the terms that we (Lubbock) need to be using in a food ordinance," he explained.

Also, a number of construction specialists consulted on the matter could not agree agree on definitions for studs, joists and rafters, Vandiver said.

The stimulus to amend the ceiling construction section apparently was first provided by Roger Loter, a Lubbock restaurant owner and recently appointed health board member.

With his attorney, Loter approached the city several weeks ago seeking clarification of the "studs, joists and rafters exposure" clause.

Loter said Thursday his questioning of the clause stemmed from a letter he received Jan. 22 from the city health department, disapproving of his remodeling of a 50th Street restaurant that will be opened later this year.

The health department earlier approved the plans and specifications for the remodeling, Loter said, adding he asked for a clarification "because you're having situations where sanitarians are coming out and approving constructions and changing their minds."

City health department sanitarian Gayle Gaither confirmed that the health department approved the remodeling plans in late November, but added that a verbal agreement was made among the sanitarians and Loter and his architect that "there would be a need for a change in the ceiling (over the food preparation area of the 50th Street restaurant)."

After Loter informed the health department in early January that the ceiling beam construction over the food preparation area was of a covering and installation so as not to be studs, joists or rafters, the health department inspected, disagreed, and prepared the Jan. 22 letter, Gaither said.

The Lubbock building inspector later examined the restaurant food preparation area ceiling and called it a "roof joist," Vandiver said, which is different from a joist.

The general uncertainty over how to define the ceiling beams may have prompted the closer look at the disputed clause, but questions of legal interpretation have followed quickly.

Vandiver said that Department of Health, Education and Welfare recommendations for food sanitation ordinances, approved in 1962, refer to the undesirability of studs, joists and rafters exposure. But, he added, the city clause may not have been intended to be mandatory.

Solons Vote To End Slush Fund

AUSTIN (UPI) — House members have voted to put an end to a so-called "slush fund" used to finance a portion of the operations of the secretary of state's office, and ordered all fees collected by the office be channeled through the regular budget process.

The vote turned around the impact of a bill by Rep. Ben Grant, D-Marshall, that would have given legal authority to the secretary of state's current practice of charging $10 for expedited handling of applications for corporate charters.

Grant's bill, however, placed no limit on the amount of fee charged, and opponents contended the secretary of state wanted to use the fees as a slush fund to escape legislative supervision of expenditures.

The House overwhelmingly adopted an amendment by Rep. Charles Evans, D-Fort Worth, that not only limited the fees to $10, but required that revenue from the fees go to the general revenue fund and be appropriated by the Legislature.

"This amendment is going to get the secretary of state's office in the open so the public can see what they have been doing all the time," Evans said Thursday.

"What he is doing is what no other office in the state is allowed to do, and that is set up a slush fund for operation of the office. I don't like flower funds in these offices.

"The secretary of state is coming in and asking for less money so they can have this slush fund and the public can't see what they're doing with it. It is a complete change from anything we've ever done in the legislative process."

The House also gave its final approval Thursday to a $2.4 million emergency appropriation for the Texas Deepwater Port Authority, and returned the bill to the Senate for consideration of House changes.

Port Authority officials say the money is needed to finance administrative costs of the agency until bonds are issued next year to finance construction of a deepwater terminal to unoad oil supertankers in the Gulf of Mexico.

Rep. Jerry Benedict, D-Angleton, said construction of the port is necessary to assure a continuing supply of oil to the refining and petrochemical industries that line the Texas coast.

Also winning House approval Thursday before the Legislature adjourned for the weekend were bills appropriating $49,645 to Sam Houston State University to pay for repair of fire damage, and requiring that bailiffs of all courts be certified peace officers.

Former State Official Preaches Tax Relief

McALLEN (AP) — It starts to sound like a revival — complete with a reformed sinner trying to get others to see the light — when former Texas Atty. Gen. Waggoner Carr talks about tax reform.

"During my years in politics in this state I learned how to tax you when you didn't even know it. I learned how to put taxes on you and you like it because I knew how to do it," Carr told a small audience here Thursday night.

The West Texan who spent 17 years in state government is now trying to teach other Texans how to deal with their government. Carr is the president of Texas 13, an organization seeking tax relief and initiative and referendum rights for Texans.

"I don't apologize for that because I did it the best way I knew," Carr said of his years as a tax-setter. "But what I am trying to say to you is that I had a part in building this monster that's now out of control. I want to do everything I can to help you get it back under control."

Carr, a native of Lubbock, told the gathering of 40 persons that it is the system — not the people within the system — that offers the largest obstacle to tax relief.

anybody you want to. You can elect the best man or woman in your community as a representative or a senator, but the government is so big that there is no human way they'll have of doing much about it," he said.

He added that much of the blame for the evils of big government "lies with you and me."

"We've been taking a merry, easy ride and we're reaping the whirlwind. You were busy doing other things. You were looking the other way and while you were doing that other people were making bad decisions," he said.

The small audience nodded silent approval and agreement as Carr urged them to organize.

"Big government only listens to big groups," he said.

The former speaker of the Texas House said federal reports show that 45 cents of every dollar earned goes to taxes. That figure will jump to 80 cents in 20 years, he added.

"We're going to do this in a responsible manner," he said, speaking of Texas 13 push for legislative relief.

"We're not going to destroy our government nor harm the concept of democratic government. All we are saying is government has gotten so big it's not hearing us anymore."

Lubbock Man Gets Honor

Volney G. Chetty, supervising engineer in the Lubbock District, Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation, Thursday was named 1979 Engineer of the Year by the South Plains Chapter of the Texas Society of Professional Engineers.

The selection was announced at the chapter's annual banquet at Hillcrest Country Club.

Chetty is a registered professional engineer in Texas. An employee of the Texas Department of Highways and Pubic Transportation since 1954, he serves as supervising laboratory engineer with responsibility for testing all materials used in highway construction in the Lubbock District and as supervisor right-of-way engineer with responsibility for right-of-way acquisition for portions of IH27.

Chetty is a native of Lubbock and graduate of Lubbock High School and Texas Tech Univesity. He holds the bachelor's degree in civil engineering.

Before being employed by the highway department, he worked for the Southern Geophysical Company of Fort Worth and then was employed by C.H. Tubbs, consulting engineer of Lubbock.

Congratulations

Mr. and Mrs. George Grimes of Route 3, Box 146, Lubbock, on birth of a son weighing 5 pounds 15½ ounces at 10:12 p.m. Thursday in Methodist Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Wayne Shaw of O'Donnell on birth of a daughter weighing 6 pounds 13 ounces at 5:49 p.m. Thursday in Community Hospital.

Counsel For House Panel To Speak In Lubbock

Richard A. Ashworth, associate minority counsel for the House Committee on Public Works and Transportation will be in Lubbock later this month to address a joint meeting of transportation and agriculture interests.

The Transportation Club of Lubbock, the Delta Nu Alpha Transportation Fraternity and the Lubbock Agricultural Club will sponsor the meeting to be held on March 19 at the Hilton Inn. A social hour at 6:30 p.m. will be followed by dinner at 7:30 p.m.

Reservations at $10 per person may be made by contacting W.H. Lanier, Missouri Pacific Sales Manager, at 1616 Texas Ave., Lubbock, or by telephone at 744-4559.

Ashworth's speech will cover the coming Congressional docket on national legislation along with its relationship to agricultural commodities, as well as previous legislation.

The Public Works and Transportation Committee has jurisdiction over every major transportation segment of the nation's economy, except railroads which are under jurisdiction of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee. This includes federal highways and bridges, interstate motor carriers, inland waterways and barges, major airlines and commuter lines, plus public buildings and grounds, rivers and harbors and economic development.

Ashworth assumed his duties a year ago after serving a year as assistant minority counsel, a job he moved to after the change of administration at the U.S. Department of Agriculture where he was located for six years, serving as deputy undersecretary of agriculture.

In his present position, he holds the number two job on the committee staff which serves the committee's 17 Republican members. He works with all six legislative and oversight subcommittees as well as the full committee in handling new legislation and the administration of laws previously passed by the committee.

Prior to his six years at USDA, Ashworth worked on Capitol Hill as administrative assistant to U.S. Rep. Fletcher Thompson of Georgia.

Before his Washington service, Ashworth worked in Atlanta as an attorney at law, as a government official during two gubernatorial administrations, and as a newspaper reporter. A native of Atlanta, he holds a degree in journalism from the University of Georgia, and earned his law degree from Woodrow Wilson College of Law in Atlanta. He has been a member of the State Bar of Georgia since 1963.

Convicted Robber Given 75 Years

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

James Loggins Jr., sentenced to 40 years in prison after a burglary conviction here last month, was found guilty of aggravated robbery Thursday and sentenced to 75 years.

Prosecutors Travis Ware and Mark McBride said after the 137th District Court trial that a motion will be filed to make the two sentences consecutive rather than concurrent.

The jury took 29 minutes to decide Loggins, 27, was guilty of holding up the Payless Shoe Store at 53rd Street and Avenue Q Nov. 11, 1978. Judge Robert C. Wright assessed the 75-year sentence.

Women store employees testified Thursday that Loggins and another man entered the store about 8 p.m., threatened them with pistols and made them sit on the floor of a back room after the cash register was emptied.

One said Loggins told them, "Don't open that door or I'll kill you."

His wife and sister testified in the trial this week that he was home when the holdup occurred, and defense attorney John Collier argued that the identification of Loggins as one of the robbers was in doubt.

"Let's not be so overzealous in fighting crime that we go out and try to find things to convict people for," Collier said in final arguments. "Let's not convict innocent people just because we've got a fight on against crime."

Collier noted Loggins was the only black man in court when the store women were asked if the man who robbed them was in the room.

Ware countered that race was not an issue in identification because the two women who identified Loggins said they remembered him because of his distinctive, heavy-lidded eyes.

"The eyes, the windows of the mind — that's what they remembered," Ware said.

In asking for a life sentence, the prosecution introduced evidence that Loggins was convicted of theft in 1969 and burglary in 1971. He also was given the 40-year sentence last month in 99th District Court after being found guilty of breaking into a Radio Shack store at 82nd Street and Indiana Avenue Nov. 16, 1978.

New York Mayor Awards City Crime Medal To Assault Victim

NEW YORK (AP) — By all odds she should have been dead and buried long ago.

Flight attendant Anne Picyk, 29, flung onto subway tracks before an oncoming train and left for dead, instead sat amid a cluster of reporters recently to receive the first Mayor's Medal for Crime Victims, commissioned by an admiring Ed Koch to honor her bravery.

"The City of New York to Anne Picyk," read the medallion in its case, "whose courage and coolness under fire has inspired all New Yorkers."

"I went up to the hospital to see her," recalled Koch. "She was so heroic. I was overwhelmed with her courage."

Miss Picyk recounted the story of her underground terror on a warm July 8 morning last year, reminding many at the gala City Hall ceremony of a new rash of subway violence now plaguing New York.

Last July 8 began at 4:35 a.m. for the Eastern Airlines attendant as she entered the 96th Street IND subway station on Central Park West, heading for Kennedy Airport and a 6:30 a.m. flight to San Juan.

A man was already on the platform, the only other person in the station.

"He came up to me," she said. "He had a knife and he demanded my watch, my purse, my wallet and flight bag. ... He told me to turn around and then pushed me off the platform."

Spurred by the rumble of the approaching train, Miss Picyk tried to clamber to safety. Her assailant was still there, behind a pillar.

"He kicked me in the face," she said.

Thrown back onto the tracks, she broke bones on both feet.

She recalled for reporters how she thought, as the subway train's lights shone on her, "I'm not going to go this way!"

Laboriously, in pain, Miss Picyk climbed onto the platform ahead of the train. She dragged herself up the stairs to a change booth where an attendant summoned Transit Authority police.

When she told the officers her keys and address were in the stolen handbag, the TA police headed for her building. There they surprised Devereaux Wiggins, 20, as he burgled Miss Picyk's apartment.

"He was surprised to see me — I knew that from the look on his face," Miss Picyk told her audience.

Wiggins was sent to prison last November, sentenced to 4 to 12 years for robbery. Plea bargaining got a dismissal of a charge of attempted murder. He will be eligible for parole in 1982.

Although Miss Picyk was all smiles as she accepted her badge of courage, newspaper reports say she is suing the city and the Transit Authority for $1 million on charges of negligence.

As Miss Picyk told her story, a Brooklyn man was being indicted in state Supreme Court a few blocks away on charges of attempted murder. He was accused of trying to push a 55-year-old man in front of a train at the West 4th Street station March 1, an act which the indictment characterized as a "depraved indifference to human life."

Four days before that attack, a Korean native was killed when shoved in front of a train at the same station. A New Jersey man is charged with murder in that case.

HAS MEDAL, MAY SUE — Flight attendant Anne Picyk shows the medal she received from New York City Thursday, the first Mayor's Medal for Crime Victims. Last July Miss Picyk was robbed and thrown from a subway platform in front of a train. She escaped to the platform and helped police track down her assailant. Although Miss Picyk was all smiles as she accepted her medal, a newspaper report says she plans to sue the city and Transit Authority for $1 million on charges of negligence. (AP Laserphoto)

Blind, Deaf Woman Wants To Walk Again

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Kathryn Frick's last summer in the sun was filled with walks on the beach, castles in the sand and splashes of surf.

It was 74 years ago — just before she went blind, then deaf. Now, she is working to overcome another handicap.

The handicaps she suffered at age 5 didn't prevent her from writing magazine articles, addressing the Pennsylvania Legislature and winning prizes for knitting, weaving and crocheting.

Now, at age 79, Miss Frick has been crippled by a stroke and wants to learn to walk again.

"I try to take life as it comes, one day at a time," she says.

Her intensive training this time is at Moss Rehabilitation Hospital, which has never before had a patient who is both deaf and blind.

Miss Frick says she never received a full medical explanation of her loss of sight and speech. As her memory of language faded, she began losing her ability to speak.

The state legislature then paid her tuition to the Pennsylvania Institute for the Deaf and Dumb to "free her imprisoned mind, teach her silent lips to speak and show her how to 'see.'"

After a 1912 commencement speech, she was commended in newspapers for her "keenness of intellect, adaptability of temperament."

By the time she graduated in 1925, she had become a showcase for the institution — appearing several times before the Legislature, winning prizes for knitting, weaving and crocheting.

She then returned to her Harrisburg home where her father encouraged her to write. One of the articles, "In the Dark Alone," appeared in the Atlantic Monthly in 1930.

She had been at the Edith R. Rudolphy Residence for the Blind since the death of her mother in 1956.

At Moss, a communications system involving simple hand signals has been developed for her. A squeeze of Miss Frick's first finger means the nurse is present, a squeeze of her second finger means the doctor is present, and so on.

Some hospital workers began studying the manual alphabet so they could "talk" with Miss Frick in the only language she can understand — "hand language," in which signals are tapped into her right hand.

"She knows when I'm teasing her — she has a great sense of humor," said Harriet Levy, a social worker.

Margaret Trudeau Must Soon Make Decision

NEW YORK (AP) — April is the deadline for Margaret Trudeau.

Then, at the end of a two-year separation agreement with her husband, Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, she must decide which is more important — her marriage and her three young children or her freedom.

The free-spirited, jetsetting first lady says she left her husband, 29 years her senior, in a quest for "quality" and independence and hopes to re-establish their relationship, though not necessarily their marriage.

Her remarks, and her description of the written separation agreement, appeared in articles in the Daily Mirror of London and April's Ladies' Home Journal. Both articles were written by Alan Markfield, described as a journalist who has followed the 30-year-old Mrs. Trudeau in her world travels.

"Pierre and I are ever hopeful of working things out and getting back together," Mrs. Trudeau says in the Ladies' Home Journal article.

"I'll never leave Pierre," she says. "I never can. Whatever relationship we are able to succeed in having will be good and right for us — whether it is marriage or just the closest two people can be in helping each other survive a life that isn't easy."

Mrs. Trudeau, who has visited her family regularly during the separation, says she "couldn't be happier now."

But it wasn't always that way.

Before the separation, "I was at the edge of not being able to survive," because there was no room in the marriage for individuality. Mrs. Trudeau has since written an autobiography and is filming her second movie.

The article in the mass circulation Daily Mirror offers a different side of Mrs. Trudeau — the side that has seen her linked romantically with Rolling Stones lead singer Mick Jagger, an affair she denies existed.

In the Mirror, Mrs. Trudeau said she turns weak when her back is rubbed — "My back is the most sensitive part of my body. I only have nice thoughts about anyone who rubs it."

Government Selling Silver Dollars

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government expects to get far more than $1 for each of 978,000 silver dollars due to go on sale later this year.

President Carter signed legislation Wednesday to allow the sale of silver dollars minted in Carson City, Nev., in the 1880s. Officials said the government would seek bids of $60 per coin for some of the uncirculated dollars. Those in less-than-perfect condition would go for $15 each, the official said.

LEARNING CHINESE — John Haigis, left, a retired broadcaster, teaches Four Corners School pupils Chinese words during a class session in Greenfield, Mass. Each Thursday, Haigis teaches two classes showing kindergarteners and first graders how to count, sing and even play cards in Chinese. Children Being Taught Chinese

By RICK HAMPSON

GREENFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Kindergarten was never like this.

"Say hello to Mr. Hampson," says the teacher at Four Corners School in this western Massachusetts town, and the students turn toward the visitor and chant in unison, "Nei Haw Mah, Dung Yo!"

The children — some too young to read or write English — are speaking Chinese.

Teaching Chinese at this elementary school, however, is not just another manifestation of the mania for all things Eastern generated by the recent comings and goings of Chinese and American leaders.

Educational experts say the unusual program, started five years ago, helps the very young students to appreciate a culture different from their own and aids their learning of English.

It all started when a teacher asked John Haigis, owner of the local radio station, WHAI, to tutor a precocious child whose interests and abilities differed from his classmates'.

"I told her I'd work with him if she'd let me teach her students Chinese," Haigis laughs.

So Haigis, who knows smatterings of several languages but admits he is fluent in none, dug out an old Chinese textbook he bought during World War II and acquired some newer volumes published by Peking University.

Each Thursday, Haigis, now retired from his radio station, teaches two classes, showing kindergarteners and first graders how to count, sing and even play cards in Chinese.

It's an unusual scene: a big, jolly man in this small American town, chattering in an exotic tongue with children a fraction of his size and age who can barely speak English.

How much Chinese are the kids learning?

Haigis says they would need to know at least 1,300 Chinese characters to read a newspaper. The first graders will know 300-400 by the end of the year.

"But that would be enough to get them started on a wall poster, anyway" he says, such as 'Imperial British Must Get Out of Hong Kong.'

As it is, "Some of the children do not know English as well as they know Chinese," he says.

"Chinese being a sing-song language, we like to sing a lot," says Haigis, and the class sings songs such as "Three Little Indians" using Chinese lyrics, with the Chinese words for "red adult" passing as "Indian."

"That's something you can say to your girl or your mom," Haigis tells his students.

Chinese, much more than English, uses symbols that combine to create words. The symbol for woman under a roof means peace, for example, despite a class member's incorrect guess that it means "lady's room."

A blond-haired boy walks up and tells Haigis, "My mother doesn't believe that I'm learning Chinese in school."

"We're not really teaching them to read or speak Chinese. It's more of a cultural thing," says the teacher, one of several non-professional volunteers working in Greenfield public schools under a special program.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You've been making a lot of points with important persons lately. Because of this, tomorrow they may provide you with a large boost in a helpful direction.

ARIES (March 11-April 19) You could find yourself much in demand socially with all your pals tomorrow. But take care you don't carry things to extremes.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your artistic qualities will cry for expression tomorrow as you putter around the house. But better not attempt to make changes for another member of your family.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Tomorrow may not be one of your better days for fixing things. You will be a little careless. Why not lay the tools down for the day and seek other diversions?

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You will know how to make money or stretch a dollar tomorrow, but you won't know how to handle it. Take care, especially if a risk is involved.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Because what you do will be well received by your friends tomorrow, you might get a wee bit cocky with the family. Forget it; they won't let you get away with it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Several opportunities could come your way tomorrow. They won't wait for you to make up your mind, so don't hesitate to take advantage of them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) There won't be anyone you'll fail to impress tomorrow. This, however, could be your downfall. You might unwittingly attract several freeloaders.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Concentrate on your more humanitarian projects tomorrow. This will contribute to your status as well as allow you to take pride in your accomplishments.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) As long as you remain optimistic, positive people will be drawn to you. The second you turn negative you'll find yourself standing alone.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 20) A joint venture looks most promising for you provided you don't try to alter its present course. Move with the flow of events.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) A philosophical approach will be your best way of handling situations tomorrow. There are times to get tough, but this won't be one of them.

Your Birthday

March 10, 1979

Joint ventures with persons who share your ideals and interests should turn out quite prosperously for you this coming year. Your outlook is very encouraging but you must maintain high standards.

Scientist Says Money Wasted

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — Spending money and time on the development of wind and solar energy is a waste, a retired Sandia Laboratories scientist contends.

Instead, Alan Pope believes the United States could become independent in energy resources in 15 to 20 years simply by utilizing its own oil reserves and using breeder reactors to generate electricity.

Pope, who served for 26 years as Sandia's associate director for aerodynamics, said the U.S. is "wasting a lot of time and money on solar collection and windmills."

"The sun doesn't have that much energy," he said. "If it did, it would burn us to a crisp."

He said it would take at least 1,000 solar collector towers like an experimental one at Sandia Laboratories to provide enough energy for a city the size of Albuquerque.

Pope contends there's enough oil shale underground and sufficient oil in unspent wells to keep the nation supplied with oil for another 200 years.

"I'm a firm believer that there's plenty of oil in this country," Pope said in an address to an Albuquerque service club. "There's a 40-year supply if we don't drill any new wells."

He said price controls have forced shutdown of many of wells which have 65 percent of their potential production still underground.

Pope said breeder reactors "could run for 1,000 years with the uranium that's already been mined."

Sites Considered For Possible Housing Project

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Lubbock Housing Authority Thursday considered three sites in south, west and northwest Lubbock as possible locations for federally subsidized low income housing.

Representatives from several real estate developers outlined plans for the construction of 62 housing units outside the traditionally low-income neighborhoods in East Lubbock.

Authority Director D.C. Fair stressed that the three plans are possibilities only and that final approval for a construction site rests with the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

Possible sites for the low-income construction include property at 3rd Street and Elkhart Avenue, 34th Street and La Salle Avenue, 65th Street between avenues L and P, and Avenue T between 66th and 67th streets.

Plans to locate low-income housing in more prosperous areas of Lubbock reflect a growing concern among HUD and housing authority representatives to avoid segregating low income housing in already deteriorating neighborhoods.

Though many factors, including financial limitations, are considered, HUD officials have placed location at the top of their list of priorities for new construction. Fair also noted that of three possible sites proposed to the board last year, none was approved by HUD.

Clyde Emmons, representing Gateway Housing Corp. of New York City, explained his firm's plans for construction at 34th Street and La Salle Avenue, an area west of Loop 289. Under his proposal, the Gateway Corp. would own the housing units but the housing authority would be responsible for management.

Emmons added that the housing authority would form a non-profit corporation to market bonds to finance the housing. The property would remain on the city tax rolls at full value and the interest on the purchased bonds would be tax-free.

Purchasing bonds of this type is a popular "tax shelter" for people in high-income brackets, Emmons said.

Gateway's construction would consist of 56 two-and three-family units and four single-family units.

Representatives from Temple Management of Temple discussed their proposed sites in south Lubbock. Tim Kirkscey explained that Temple would build on 65th Street between avenues L and P and on Avenue T between 66th and 67th Streets. Property in that area already is zoned for a medium concentration of multi-unit housing, he said.

Temple Management's proposal differs from Gateway's in that the housing authority would own the units and therefore take full responsibility for paying the bonds. HUD would guarantee occupancy of the housing and therefore payment of the bonds.

Friedman and Associates, a Houston-based firm, also has entered a plan for consideration, though company representatives were not present at Thursday's meeting.

Proposed construction at 3rd Street and Elkhart Avenue would be 62 one-to three-bedroom units, including four units designed for the handicapped.

HUD's attempts to locate low income housing outside low-income areas has been opposed in some cities. Residents often fear that low-income housing will reduce surrounding property values.

Fair acknowledged there may be opposition from some Lubbock residents. "I think we'll get some flak," he said, adding that people associate housing authority projects with slum areas.

"But we're not going to accept slum areas," Fair stressed. "We can't make the program work if we let it run down."

Fair added that existing housing authority units are being renovated and tenants are being pressured to maintain the buildings and surrounding grounds. Eviction is a real threat to those tenants who refuse to keep their end of the bargain, he said.

In other business, board members discussed the transfer of several lease-purchase housing units back to the regular rent rolls since it has been determined that present tenants are not suited to own the property.

Fair also explained the housing authority is trying to aquire 100 HUD certificates for the financing of existing property rentals. If issued the certificates, the housing authority can place low-income families in existing housing, using federal funds to pay the difference between the fair market rent value and what the tenants can afford.

HUD will pay a difference of up to $296 in some instances, Fair said.

Oil Man Blames Price Controls

By KIM PALMER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The United States will have an energy shortage about 1985, and it is too late to prevent it, an oil company executive said here Thursday.

The duration and severity of the shortage will depend upon how quickly Americans take steps to cure it, said Howard H. Hinson, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Texas Pacific Oil Co. Inc.

Hinson, in Lubbock to address the South Plains chapter of the Texas Society of Professional Engineers, said the U.S. may escape damage from the oil shortages caused by political turmoil in Iran. But, he said, an energy shortage will occur because the production of oil cannot keep pace with increasing world demand and alternate sources of fuel have not been developed.

The Texas Tech University graduate said the United States has ample supplies of energy but that price controls and increasing government intervention have discouraged development of the resources.

"What happens depends entirely on the government's action, but not all of the blame lies with the government," Hinson said. "Much of the blame lies with the people of this country. Until people realize that we need to get out from under some of this government regulation, the situation won't change much.

"People will have to decide which is more important, their corner service station or their current congressman. Our energy problems will last as many years as it takes people to realize the problems."

Hinson, a former Conoco executive, said he believes the nation's energy problems began in 1954, when Congress placed price controls on natural gas.

"The gas became so cheap that its usage became a large part of the world energy market. In spite of the increases in prices of other goods, the major oil companies cut world oil prices in order to try to compete with the natural gas market," he explained. "This action so infuriated the oil-supplying nations that they banded together to form OPEC."

"It's too late to do anything now about the shortage, but if the United States had started in 1973 to take corrective measures we would have no problems now," Hinson said.

The only immediate solution to energy problems is complete decontrol of gasoline prices and the increase of U.S. oil prices from $9 a barrel to about $15 a barrel to stimulate production and exploration, Hinson said.

Gasoline price controls were implemented in 1971 and will expire in May. President Carter has the authority to extend the controls until 1981.

Hinson does not expect the price controls to be removed this year. He said he believes Carter will bring U.S. oil prices up to world levels through "taxation, not deregulation."

The development of additional oil resources is "more a function of price than anything else," Hinson said. "But even if U.S. oil prices do come up to current world levels we will not find enough oil to meet future demand. We will find enough oil to ease the transition into other energy sources."

Hinson said he believes Carter's standby energy conservation plan is "too little, too late."

"We cannot conserve ourselves into prosperity and growth, we must have an increasing supply of energy."

Installation Of Device Curtails Book Losses

right to say they belong to everyone."

The library staff received a thorough education in the workings of the system and the handling of patrons who are caught with unprocessed materials.

"We try to deal with the public as gently as we can," said Mrs. Harp. "We don't want to make people feel like thieves."

She said that the librarians first acknowledge that they may not have processed the materials properly. If the alarm sounds a second time after the materials have been rechecked, patrons are asked to pass through the gate without their briefcase or purse.

If the need arises to check the patron's handbag or attache case, and articles are found concealed, the patron is asked to give up any other library materials he may have in his possession.

So far, "no one has refused to cooperate," said Mrs. Harp.

Nor have any library patrons complained about the security structure. She said that people have already grown accustomed to security systems because of the normal use of such devices in airports and department stores.

The system has functioned well, according to Mrs. Harp except for several false alarms when the system sounded the alarm at the detection of nickel in an old-fashioned baby stroller and in the core of an elderly woman's cane. The 3M Company, which installed the device, said the system would pick up the nickel that was used in the manufacture of items many years ago.

Mrs. Harp said library personnel are pleased with the system and said just the presence of the device in the building acts as a deterrent.

She said the staff hopes that a detection system will be installed in the new southwest library branch because "I think there's a need for one in every library," but no definite plans have been made as yet.

Governing Officials Meet the current arrangement.

The consortium could be continued without contracting with SPAG, Shaw said, adding either the city or the Texas Employment Commission could run the CETA programs.

Or, Shaw said, the consortium could be disbanded and the programs run by the governor's office.

"I for one would like to seriously look to see if we can avoid having a consortium," Shaw said. However, he said, more information is needed on how the governor's office would run the CETA programs and whether such an arrangement would affect the funding for Lubbock.

However, Commissioner Coy Biggs, the manpower consortium's Lubbock County representative, said he favors continuing the consortium and "see how the governor's office functions" in operating CETA programs.

"We don't have much time to work on it right now," he said.

Also at Thursday's meeting council members:

— Agreed to contract with BGR Architects and Engineers to draw up the plans for a new southwest Lubbock branch library for $32,000.

— Set the annual paving hearing for 1:30 p.m. on April 12.

— Set a public hearing on an amendment to the Pioneer Natural Gas Co. franchise agreement with the city for 11 a.m. April 12.

— Expanded the city's Water Resources Board to 15 members and appointed board members.

—Approved a reallocation of $347.60 in Community Development funds to be used in the Arnett Benson neighborhood and in the Butler Heights Area.

Senate Panel Seeks 1980 Budget Cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Appropriations Committee wants $800 million chopped from unspecified areas of President Carter's proposed $131 billion military spending plan for the 1980 budget year.

The Senate committee recommended the cuts Thursday.

TIPS FOR GARDENERS

Gardeners Grow Record-Breaking Vegetables

By EARL ARONSON
Associated Press Writer

If you'd like to try for record-size fruits and vegetables, here are a few of the more recent garden prizes submitted for inclusion in the "Guinness Book of World Records."

Earl Miller of Central Point, Ore., raised a Jumbo Pink 135-pound banana squash.

Ed Weeks of Tarboro, N.C., offered a cantaloupe weighing 39 pounds, beating his own 1976 cantaloupe that tipped the scale at 36 pounds 4 ounces.

Ross Ransford of Graysville, Ind., grew a 44-inch Armenian cucumber.

Dr. Leslie Miller of Columbus, Ohio, has been recognized by the American Gourd Society for the longest straight gourd, a Snake Longissima variety measuring 80¼ inches. John G. Ritz of Canton, Ohio, grew the heaviest gourd, 185 pounds.

Previous record holders in the United States are listed as:

D.G. Knutsen of Whittier, Calif., biggest lemon, measuring 28 3/4 inches in circumference. Bill Calendine of Tuscon, Ariz., heaviest orange, 3 pounds 11 ounces.

George Wynn of Gibsonville, Fla., reported the heaviest sweet potato weighing 22½ pounds, and June Rutherford of Hatch, N.M., grew a 13½-inch-long pepper.

If you think you have a record-breaking vegetable, fruit or flower, let Jane Grace of Grace's Gardens, Hackettstown, N.J., know about it. She is American coordinator for the Guinness book.

In addition to the world and national records, Mrs. Grace proposes state competitions, "to give hard-working and dedicated gardeners deserved recognition."

She cited the case of Herman Paskall of Topeka, Kan., who in 1977 grew a 22-foot 4-inch sunflower, just inches short of the world record of 23 feet 6½ inches set by Frank Kelland of Exeter, England, in 1976.

"There are many hard-earned, near-records that have come to my attention," Mrs. Grace said. "I think these gardeners are just as deserving of the type of recognition previously reserved only for world record holders."

Cucumbers Vary

There are male and female cucumber flowers. The difference is that the female cucumber flowers have an ovary that resembles a tiny, undeveloped cucumber behind the flower.

Landscape Advice

"Plan Your Own Landscape," by Allan Swenson (Grossett & Dunlap) takes you a long way toward making "your own portion of the planet Earth lovelier."

Simply and constructively, Swenson advises how to do most of the planning and planting yourself, providing basic plans. He offers decorative accents and specimens, suggests specific trees, shrubs, hedges and garden flowers.

"The Flower Gardener's Answer Book," by Francesca Morris (Van Nostrand Reinhold) asks and answers more than 200 of the most common questions about flowering plants.

The author properly notes that "in our haste to acquire a new plant we often neglect to ask all the pertinent questions about its proper care and tending. As a result, we find ourselves with a plant that languishes, fails to flower..." Her questions are practical and her answers most helpful.

Pace Of Agricultural Activity Quickens Throughout Texas

COLLEGE STATION (UPI) — The pace of agricultural activity has quickened across Texas, with spring planting increasing in the Rio Grande Valley and land preparation active in many other areas, says the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

While wet fields are still delaying planting in some parts of the Coastal Bend, seeding of corn, sorghum and cotton is increasing in the Valley, said the extension service. Corn and sorghum planting is 15 to 20 percent complete while some 5 percent of the cotton acreage has been planted, it said.

Planting of watermelons and spring vegetables is also active in the Valley, and early season vegetables such as onions and potatoes are being planted in parts of east Texas as well as in western areas, said the extension service.

While wet, cold soils have caused spring planting to fall behind schedule in southern sections, the rest of March should bring favorable field work, according to the National Weather Service's 30-day outlook, the service said. Temperatures should be near normal and rainfall, below normal.

The warmer weather will be needed, according to the extension service, to bring soil temperatures up to minimum levels recommended for good seed germination. They are 50 degrees for corn, 55 for sorghum and 65 for cotton. Currently the NWS reports soil temperatures at the four-inch depth as follows: Weslaco, 68; Corpus Christi and Beeville, 62; Dilley, 68; Uvalde, 61; Eagle Lake, 55; Beaumont, 57; College Station, 55; Austin and San Angelo, 56; McGregor, 51, and Lufkin, 53.

The recent warmer weather is causing range and pasture grasses to come up, and wheat, oats, clovers and ryegrasses are also beginning to grow, said the extension service. However, it added, grazing is still limited causing supplemental cattle feeding to continue in most counties.

The citrus harvest is nearing completion in the Rio Grande Valley, and some 23,000 acres of sugar cane have been harvested. Cabbage, carrot, onion and lettuce supplies remain light, the service said.

Cowboy Association Names Key Films

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The National Cowboy Hall of Fame has named two television programs, "Centennial" and "Stubby Pringle's Christmas" as Western Heritage Award for 1979 in the fiction category.

This is the first time judges have made two selections in the fictional category.

"Ishi, The Last of His Tribe" was named in the factual category Tuesday and composer Michael Small was named for the music in the motion picture "Comes a Horseman."

High-Speed Railroad System May Cost More Than Expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — A high-speed train system that has been plagued by waste and possible fraud may wind up costing more than the government's latest estimate, itself substantially higher than the original price tag, says Amtrak's top official.

Alan S. Boyd, Amtrak's president, told Congress this week he's not sure the Northeast Corridor passenger rail project can be built for its new target price of $2.4 billion.

The project originally was budgeted at $1.75 billion, but Transportation Secretary Brock Adams says that was unrealistic and the job will require an additional $654 million.

But Boyd said, "It's entirely possible in 1981-1982 we'll be back and say, 'Hey, this thing just didn't pan out. ...'

"We are hopeful but by no means certain the added (money) now being sought will fully finance completion of the project."

Boyd also wants the deadline for the program, ordered by Congress in 1976, pushed back from Feb. 5, 1981, to sometime in 1984.

The project calls for regularly-scheduled high-speed passenger trains making the Boston to New York run in three hours and 40 minutes, and the New York-Washington run in two hours and 40 minutes.

That would shave 50 minutes from the present high-speed Boston to New York schedule and 35 minutes between Washington and New York.

"Yes, there has been waste; yes, there has been inefficiency and maybe there has been fraud," Boyd told the House Commerce transportation subcommittee. The first year of the program was so disorganized, he said that "it's a wonder anything got done."

Rep. James J. Florio, D-N.J., the subcommittee chairman, said the FBI is investigating irregularities in Amtrak's purchases for the project.

Ad Economics Complicates Children's TV

By LeROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — The problems of children's programs on television and the advertising message carried by them is more complicated than the issues so far raised by the Federal Trade Commission staff, says Fletcher Waller, marketing vice president of General Mills.

Waller admits he has a personal conflict of interest over kids' programs because what might make the best programs for children would not be the most efficient for advertising.

"The simple reason for that," he told United Press International, "is that kids grow and develop mentally. From the standpoint of the parent, what is greatly needed is more diversity of television programs to appeal to different age groups. This certainly would make for higher quality programming. Five-and six-year-olds are not delighted by the same things as seven-and eight-year-olds."

The dilemma, Waller said, is that when you narrow the programs to age ranges of, say, two years, you fragment an already rather small market and make it much more expensive to reach.

He said few people realize the total effective market for children's TV programs is only about 10 million. If you divide that in three by aiming the programs at two-year age groups you arrive at markets that are economically too small.

The result, he said, is that children's TV programs try to reach all ages or the greater part of the market. This yields a product geared to the least common denominator, with an inevitable trend to mediocrity, he said.

Waller said he did not know how best to solve the problem, but he is sympathetic towards parents' desire for better children's programs. He mentioned the possibility of public subsidies for programs aimed at children of specific ages to improve their quality and at the same hold their cost to what national advertisers can afford but said he wasn't much sold on the idea.

Meanwhile, he is convinced, like the rest of the toymakers and cereal manufacturers (General Mills makes both), that the FTC's proposals to ban certain kinds of advertising aimed at children simply won't work. And he says if they are forced to give up or greatly reduce television ads aimed at the moppets, the toymakers and the breakfast cereal makers will have some rough times ahead.

Waller cited a lot of editorial comment that followed recent FTC hearings on the Pacific Coast on the impact of TV ads aimed at children. The comment was pretty uniform to the effect that the FTC staff is trying to make itself a super parent and to hold advertisers instead of parents responsible for every motivational problem with children that develops in society.

As one west coast editor put it, "If parents don't like sugared goods, let them boycott those goods.

WHY BUY OR LEASE PURCHASE?

Lock in todays prices! The single family home has been and will be the best investment you can make for your family! History will show an 8%-12% increase per year on single family homes in the correct locations in Lubbock. Compare todays prices with 1960, 1970, 1979. Had you purchased a home in 1960 you would have paid $10 per sq. ft. In 1970, $20 per sq. ft. In 1978 $28 per sq. ft. YOU CAN STILL BUY MORE HOUSE FOR THE MONEY IN LUBBOCK THAN ANY OTHER AREA IN THE SOUTHWEST!

ALL OUR HOMES ARE FULL ENERGY SAVING HOMES!

THAT'S THE BEST EPA ESTIMATED GASOLINE MILEAGE

This year, Datsun's 210 Hatchback with optional 5-speed got a superlative 35 MPG* in the Environmental Protection Agency estimated gasoline ratings. And that's better than any 1979 gasoline car tested. So come on down and see for yourself how we are driven to improve your economy by stretching your mileage.

Standard equipment: ●Split fold-down rear seat to carry passengers and cargo in equal comfort ●Fully reclining bucket seats ●Cut-pile carpeting ●Walk-in seat back release (slides forward to allow easy access to rear) ●Electric rear window defroster ●Side window defogger ●And many other standard features!

STOP HIGH DRIVING COSTS WITH A 210

New 210 Hatchback $4961.

*1979 EPA estimate for comparisons. Optional 5-speed. Your mileage may differ, depending on how and where you drive, condition of your car and optional equipment.

 Does not include license, taxes, destination charges and title fees.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
FEDERAL ENERGY REGULATORY COMMISSION

Central Power & Light Company
Public Service Company of Oklahoma
Southwestern Electric Power Company
West Texas Utilities Company

Docket No. EL79-8

NOTICE OF APPLICATION
(February 22, 1979)

Take notice that on February 9, 1979, the above captioned affiliated Companies tendered for filing, pursuant to Section 205 of the Public Utilities Regulatory Policies Act of 1978, an application for exemption from three orders of the Public Utility Commission of Texas which alledgedly prevent Central Power and Light Company and West Texas Utilities Company from voluntarily establishing or maintaining an electrical interconnection with any utility other than those comprising the Electric Reliability Council of Texas. Applicants also request an order of this Commission requiring interconnection, wheeling and related relief under Sections 202(b), 210, 211, and 212 of the Federal Power Act (as amended). Applicants state that the relief they seek would involve interconnections between their respective utility systems, with the Electric Reliability Council of Texas and with the Southwest Power Pool.

Section 210(a)(1) of the Federal Power Act, as promulgated in Title II of the Public Utility Regulatory Policies Act of 1978, provided the Commission with authority to issue orders requiring:

"(A) the physical connection of any cogeneration facility, any small power production facility, or the transmission facilities of any electric utility, with the facilities of such applicant,

"(B) such action as may be necessary to make effective any physical connection described in sub-paragraph (A), which physical connection is ineffective for any reason, such as inadequate size, poor maintenance, or physical unreliability.

"(C) such sale or enhance of electric energy, or other coordination, as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of any order under subparagraph (A) or (B), or

"(D) such increase in transmission capacity as may be necessary to cary out the purposes of any order under subparagraph (A) or (B)."

Section 210 (b) (1) of the Act provides that upon receipt of an application the Comission shall issue notice to each affected electric utility, each affective Federal power marketing agency, each affective owner or operator of a congeneration facility or small power production facility, and to the public.

Any person desiring to be heard or to protest said applicailon should file a petition to intervene or protest with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, 825 North Capitol Street, N.E., Washington, D.C. 20426, in accordance with Sections 1.8 and 1.10 of the Commission's Rules of Practice and Procedure (18 CFR 1.8, 1.10). All such petitions or protests should be filed on or before March 30, 1979. Protests will be considered by the Commission in determining the appropriate action to be taken, but will not serve to make protestants parties to the proceeding. Any person wishing to become a party must file a petition to intervene. Copies of this application are on file with the Commission and are available for public inspection.

Dallas Plans To Continue Quest For Presidential Convention

DALLAS (UPI) — The City Council has decided to try a second time to have a major political party's national presidential convention held in Dallas.

The city made an intense pitch to the GOP last year for its 1980 convention but lost to Detroit in a close vote.

Council members are hoping Democrats will take them up on their second convention offer. City Manager George Schrader's staff to inform the Democratic National Committee that Dallas would like to be in the running for the party's presidential nominating convention.

Don Fowler, chairman of the party's site selection committee, wrote Mayor Robert Folsom late last month and said Dallas had until March 15 to inform him whether a bid for the convention would be submitted, officials said.

But Folsom said he did not consider Fowler's letter an indication the Democratic Party was particularly interested in Dallas as a convention site.

In fact, the letter was addressed to the "Honorable Robert Folron," Folsom said.

The loss of the Republican convention was a bitter disappointment to several council members and local political leaders, who felt Dallas had the inside track for the GOP gathering.

Folsom said the same kind of intense effort that was made for the Republican convention would have to be undertaken if Dallas expected to have a chance at being selected by the Democrats.

"I think it would be good for the city," the mayor said. "And I believe it would be possible for the Democratic leadership here to gather the financial commitments necessary."

Folsom said the March 15 deadline only requires a statement of interest from the city rather than an actual outline of local financing proposals.

Dert is hoping Democratic leaders will follow the Republicans' lead and hold their 1980 national convention in Detroit.

Television network officials have said they would prefer — because of the cost — to hold both conventions in the same city next year.

Hoosiers End Tech Season With Rout

By DON HENRY
Executive Sports Editor

It was the Mike and Ray Show, and the ratings were super in Indiana.

One of the reasons the ratings were so great, Mike and Ray were super in Lubbock Coliseum Thursday night.

The combo of Mike Woodson and and Ray Tolbert completely dominated everything Texas Tech tried, and the two led Indiana to a convincing 78-59 victory over the Raiders in the first round of the National Invitational Tournament.

The score could have been worse but coach Bobby Knight had his players easing off the shooting in the latter stages.

As it was, the margin was the worst in almost 50 years at home. Not since West Texas State plastered the Raiders 52-21 in 1931 has Tech lost by such a large margin on its home floor.

To Raider coach Gerald Myers, it was a replay of a nightmare he lived through in Houston last week in the semifinals of the Southwest Conference tournament. That was the Arkansas game when the Razorbacks zipped to an early lead and put the game away early.

Ditto Thursday night as the Hoosiers hit their shots, Tech didn't, and suddenly, it was 15-2 in favor of the visitors. And it didn't get much better, 35-14 at one point in the first half.

Tech hit two of its first 20 shots, the Hoosiers 11 of their first 16 in the game's opening 13 minutes.

By that time, both teams were wearing red, the Hoosiers in those uniforms, the Raiders flushed with frustration.

As the Raiders continued to miss shots, Woodson and Tobert dominated the inside. Woodson hit 30 points, the most by an visiting player in Lubbock Coliseum this season. And he wasn't gunning, either; he hit 11 of 14. And when the 6-5 Woodson wasn't scoring, his 6-9 forward mate Tolbert was. Tobert connected on eight of ten from the floor and finished with 18 points.

Between them, they had 28 of the Hoosiers' 39 at halftime. Tech, at that midpoint had but 19.

"We played very well," said Knight, the Hoosiers' coach. "We got off to a start (the type) that there's not a helluva a lot you can do about it.

"The only difference is that we shot well and their shots wouldn't do down.

"Tech is as well a disciplined team, but we got some opportunities.

"And Woodson...he's the best guy to play the game who didn't even make honorable mention all-America. On a streak? He's just averaged 20 points for 90 games now."

Knight said that shooting was a "real factor. Since they weren't hitting and we had the lead, we were able to drop back inside."

The Indiana coach said the opening few minutes were a major factor.

"They come down and get two quick offensive rebounds and then miss those those. They hit those, and it could have been different.

"It was the same to start the second half. We started out well, and they missed their first 11 shots. Then, when they finally got started about middle of the last half, we didn't feel the pressure so much."

"It was just like the Arkansas game," said Myers of last week's 93-77 defeat. "We just couldn't hit, even though we had good shots. I thought they were a little tight at the first, then we seemed to kinda panic. I was disappinted in the way we played.

"Our defense was really poor, too.

"They (Indiana) are a very good team, well coached. They don't make mistakes.

"But, after about five minutes in the second half, we settled down and played better. . . but we were too far down."

When the game was decided, Tech hit but 19.4 percent (six of 31), and the visitors connected on 69 percent (18 of 26). And that 39-19 lead was enough.

The Hoosiers were getting most of their

Slaton Moves Into Finals

A-J News Service

AUSTIN—Slaton doubled Comanche in point production in the second and third periods and that output gave the Tigerettes ample working margin for a 48-32 triumph over Comanche in the Class AA semifinals of the state schoolgirl basketball tournament here Thursday.

Coach Cathy Wilson's defending state champions, now 32-2 on the season, will face 37-1 Pflugerville, a 47-32 winner over San Antonio Randolph in the other semifinal contest, for the 1979 title at 11 a.m. Saturday.

In other area action, Nazareth hit a sizzling 62.9 percent of its shots in defeating D'Hanis, 52-43, in Class B play. Brock edged Avinger, 64-61, also in B.

Both Slaton and Pflugerville had firm control of their contest from early in the second quarter on—but Wilson and Pflugerville coach Terri Szafranski had differing post-game analyses of their team's performances.

"Our kids gave another super effort, just as they have all year. We had every respect for Comanche (which finished its season at 26-2) going in. Once we got our press going, that turned the ball game," declared Miss Wilson. "Szafranski and Pflugerville didn't play well in its win."

Comanche turned over the ball 11 times in the first half against the Slaton press and the Panhandle team pulled away from an 8-8 first quarter tie to lead 25-14

Killingsworth Offered TCU Job

FORT WORTH (AP) — The job of head basketball coach at Texas Christian University has been offered to Oklahoma State basketball Coach Jim Killingsworth, according to published reports.

Killingsworth returned to Stillwater, Okla.. Thursday after meeting with TCU officials during a two-day visit to the Fort Worth campus.

The Daily Oklahoman reported in its Thursday's editions that a TCU source, who declined to be identified, said Killingsworth had been offered the head coaching job at TCU.

TCU Sports Information Director Pesky Hill said Athletic Director Frank Windegger had indicated Killingsworth was the man he wanted for the job. But Hill would not confirm that the 55-year-old coach had been offered the job.

The TCU job became vacant at the of this past season when Tim Sommerville resigned. TCU players had been openly critical of Somerville, who had two losing seasons at the Fort Worth school.

Killingsworth still has two years left in his contract with OSU. Officals there have had no comment on situation.

Killingsworth has a 597-155 record as a basketball coach, including 28 straight winning seasons. He coached at a number of high schools in Oklahoma before joining the college ranks. He came to Oklahoma State two years ago from Idaho State.

UTEP Again NCAA Track Pick

DETROIT (UPI) — If Texas-El Paso wins the team title again in the NCAA Indoor Track and Field Championships — and it is favored to take its fifth crown in six years — it would be fitting if the Miners were presented with a medal made in a foreign country.

Texas-El Paso is one of several schools that imports outstanding athletes who are generally older and thus have an experience edge on their American counterparts, a fact that rankles some schools that won't or can't attract foreign stars for their track teams.

UTEP bounced back to take the team championsip with 44 points last March after having a string of three broken by Washington State in 1977. And they are conceded a good chance to win again despite losing all but 10 of those points.

In their overseas prospecting, the Miners came up with Suleiman Nyambui from Tanzania and Keith Connor of England, both of whom rank among the favorites in their events. Seven events will be completed tonight with the remainder run off in Saturday afternoon's session.

CTK Golfers Dump Shallowater

The Christ the King A golf team took the dual match championship in a dual match with Shallowater at Pine Hills golf course Thursday afternoon.

The CTK A squad finished with a 367. The Shallowater A team was next with a 396 total. The CTK and Shallowater B teams both ended the day at 413.

CTK's Warren Stewart took the medalist honors by carding an 88.

Van Brocklin Has Surgery

ATLANTA (AP) — Former Atlanta Falcons Coach Norm Van Brocklin may have to undergo additional brain surgery if Thursday's operation does not increase the flow of blood to his brain, his doctor said.

But Dr. Alan Fleischer, a neurosurgeon at Emory University Hospital, said the four-hour operation went "very well" and the 53-year-old Van Brocklin was in satisfactory condition.

"If there are no complications and further surgery isn't required, he should be able to go home within a week or 10 days," Fleischer said.

On the eve of the operation, Van Brocklin, who joined the coaching staff at Georgia Tech last week, played down the seriousness of the surgery and said its major effect would be to delay his return to coaching.

"It's not nearly as serious as it sounds," he told The Atlanta Constitution in an interview from his hospital bed Wednesday. "I should be out of the hospital in about 10 days. I checked in here a couple of days ago, and they've decided to do the operation.

"I've informed Coach Pepper Rodgers that I'll be a few days late reporting to work at Georgia Tech," he said. He added that he had planned to start work this week.

Candlestick Grass Not Ready

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Unless the resodding of Candlestick Park picks up speed, the San Francisco Giants may have to play their home opener in San Diego on April 10 — or even forfeit the game — owner Bob Lurie said Thursday.

"I've begun to look into the situation to see what can be done if the field is unplayable." Lurie said after he told the Recreation and Park Commission that sodding had not begun, with the opener against the Padres just a month away.

Until December, Candlestick had an Astroturf field but that was ripped up after the last San Francisco 49ers game on Dec. 12 with the plan of putting down real grass over a sand base.

But Lurie said that Bay Cities Paving and Grading, the company doing the work, originally dumped tons of the "wrong sand" on the field.

"Sand quality and some broken pipes caused them delays," Lurie said. "But I can't really blame them just because some trucks ran over the pipe."

Jack Spring, the general manager of the Recreation annd Park Department, said that the contractor is expected to begin sodding on Monday and complete the job on March 21.

That would leave less than three weeks for the grass root, which Lurie said is probably not enough time for the Giants to practice on the field on April 9, the day before the scheduled home opener.

Money Not Problem In A's Sale

Neither will speak publicly of price.

Both say they're talking about the sale of the A's that Finley owns — apparently to an Oakland group that Eller heads and wants to keep the American League club there.

Finley admitted Thursday night that he's negotiating with the group, including Eller, a communications executive, and attorney Neil Papiano.

Finley, at first coy about his negotiations with Eller and Papiano, later said in a telephone interview that he has been talking with the group "say the last 30 days."

"In the past it's always been the people who are interested in the club are big hat and no cattle," said Finley.

Ashe Continues Hot Streak

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Arthur Ashe said they were the two finest sets of tennis he's played in his career, but he still wasn't fully satisfied.

The 35-year-old American routed Australian John Alexander, 6-0, 6-2, in the opening match of the World Cup Thursday night in what officials said was the worst beating in tournament history.

"It's not normal to best anybody six-love on the tour," Ashe said after the match. "I can count the number of six-love sets on the tour on both my hands.

"It wasn't that John was making errors," Ashe added. "I just couldn't do anything wrong."

Ashe, who has been on a tear for the past three months, allowed Alexander only 11 points in the first set. He broke the 8-years-younger Australian's service a total of five times in the match.

Tech Hits Road

WACO (Special) — James Miller, who preserved a win for Texas Tech in its last game, will be trying to pick up where he left off today, when the Raiders challenge Baylor University's baseballers to open a three-game series.

The two teams will collide in a single game beginning at 3 p.m. today. Saturday, they will play a pair, starting at 1 p.m.

Last time out, Miller, a transfer from Panola Junior College, went the last 5 2/3 innings as Tech held off Rice 15-7 in the second game of a Sunday doubleheader. He allowed but two hits.

But, if Miller is on the mound, it's not much different from previous games, as he has appeared in five of the Raiders' 11 games. Tech comes into today's game with a 6-5 season record and 1-2 in conference.

Baylor is 2-0 in conference, having been able to get in but two games against SMU last weekend. The Bears are 10-0 record for the season.

"They have several people who hit with good power, and in their park, that power will certainly be an advantage for them.

"For us to be able to compete with them," commented Segrest, "We will have to get better pitching than we've been getting."

Tech's earned-run average, as a team, is 7.50, and the Raiders have allowed 29 walks. As a staff, it has given up but 25 hits.

Meanwhile, "Baylor has a pitching staff that could be one of the better ones in the conference," remarked Segrest, "and if (Andy) Beene is healthy, they could have the best. We will have to be at our best to compete with them.

"Our whole story this season has been our ineffectiveness on the mound, and that could change at any time. Our hitting (team batting average of .270) has been okay; we've had only two bad games at the plate."

John Perlman, a left-handed senior with a 3-0 record this season, will pitch today for Baylor.

In Saturday's double bill, Segrest plans to use Chuck Johnson in one game and then wait to pick hos second hurler.

After this weekend's series, the Raiders will be at home next week to host TCU.

In the Southwest Conference today, Arkansas will be at Rice, Houston at Texas, and SMU at TCU.

Rout Ends Tech Cagers' Season

And it was Woodson who led that charge, getting 6 in a row on the tag end of a 13-0 spurt in the first five minutes.

Then, starting the second half, the Hoosiers hit 9 in a row before Tech could respond, freshman Jeff Taylor finally connecting on a pair of free shots. Up to that point, Tech had missed all eight of its shots.

But, the Raiders came back for their only streak of the game, hitting 9 straight points. And the crowd of 10,000 found something to cheer about.

Ben Hill connected, and after a turnover, Huston connected again. Tech picked up a bucket after a scramble, but it was disallowed by a back-court violation which had Myers steaming. But, Tech regained possession and Taylor scored on an 18-foot jumper, with 12:18 remaining. But, here came Woodson.

He hit a pair of free shots, then followed with a flying layup on a fast break, Taylor fouled him, and he hit the bonus. After guard Butch Carter converted a pair of free shots, Woodson scored again, and after Tobert dunked one, it was 61-30.

Carter, with 11, was the only other Hoosier in double figures.

Taylor finished with 15 points, and Huston came in with 14. Ben Hill had 10.

Indiana finished hitting 71 percent of its shots, Tech 35 percent. The margin reached 31 points in the second half.

Knight will now take his Hoosiers on to the second round of the NIT, but he praised the organization for picking both his team and Tech.

"I'm pleased that Tech got a chance to play in the NIT, and I'm pleased that we got to be in it. It's a good field. Tech has beaten some teams in the NCAA, and other teams have also. It's a good field."

The loss finished Tech's year at 19-11, and the Hoosiers will take a 19-12 record against Alcorn next Monday in the second round.

Young Levi Credits Spouse For Success

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (UPI) — There are few young men who will brag about having a nagging wife, but 26-year-old tour pro Wayne Levi is one of them.

The stylish blond golfer was making little headway in two years on the PGA tour until he got married last fall.

Less than a month after the marriage, Levi and Bob Mann won the Disney World Team Championship. This year he is 16th on the money list with $33,897 and Thursday he took a share of the lead with Tommy Aaron after one round of the $300,000 Jackie Gleason Inverrary Golf Classic.

Levi and 19-year veteran Aaron fashioned 66s over the usually demanding par-72 Inverrary East Course, playing sightly easier than usual because of immaculate conditioning.

Larry Nelson was next with a 67, and tied at 68 were Mark James, a little-known British golfer, Bruce Devlin and Charles Goody.

Jack Nicklaus is shooting for his fourth straight win here, but finished with a 74 Thursday. He said he felt he wasn't playing that badly and recalled he stumbled to a 3-over-par 75 in the second-round last year before rallying with five straight birdies on the final day to win by a shot.

Levi credits his recent success on the tour to an improved attitude, and his wife is largely responsible for the change.

"I've been hitting the ball well for three or four years, but once I hit a bad shot I got real upset. I'd give up. I'd just go up and hit it as fast as I could."

Tigerettes Win

at halftime. Cynthia Robinson and Linda Lewis led the Slaton charge, but Miss Wilson felt Debbie Bednarz was a defensive key for the Tigerettes.

"Comanche's center Fran Mayer and the guard, Dixie Mayer are two fine shooters and we did a good defensive job on them. Bednarz was on Fran Mayer and did a good job in holding her to 12 points (six field goals in 15 shots) and we were able to keep Dixie Mayer from getting many shots (four of four from the field)," said the Slaton coach.

Slaton's offensive execution produced consistency throughout. The Tigerettes hit 12 of 23 first half field goal efforts, and were 10 of 16 in the second half, with Miss Robinson finishing 5 of 7 from the field and Miss Lewis 8 of 13 from the field. Slaton forced 20 Comanche turnovers and cashed them in for 21 points while Slaton's miscues only led to 14 Comanche points.

Slaton, which defeated Pflugerville in last year's semifinals, will face another tough defensive assignment Miss Wilson said, in 6-2 junior post performer Karen Thompson, who led the Central Texans to a 42-17 lead over San Antonio Randolph in the fourth quarter and finished with 21 points and 13 rebounds before fouling out with five minutes left.

"We have to try and contain her. And Pflugerville runs a good press, too (Randolph finished with 47 turnovers) so we'll have to handle the ball well," said Miss Wilson.

Doretta Ramaekers and Lori Gerber — one of four Gerber girls in the starting lineup — each had 16 points for Nazareth, which has won two consecutive B titles.

Miss Ramaekers, a 5-foot-9 junior playing with an injured right knee, swished eight of nine field goal attempts, although she rested almost one-third of the game.

Annette Nester, the defending Class B girls' shot put champion, pitched in 28 points and grabbed 10 rebounds for D'Hanis.

Lori Gerber's sister, Colleen, a second-team all-state player on defense last year, was held scoreless, but cousins Sharon and Glenda Gerber scored 9 points and 8 points, respectively.

Class A competition begins today, with Rogers playing Bogata Rivercrest and Wall meeting Hale Center, whose only other appearance was in 1960. None of the teams has ever won a championship. Dallas South Oak Cliff, in quest of tis third straight 4A title, plays today against Alvin, 27-7.

Plainview, 30-2, plays Victoria, 30-7, today, also.

All five championship games are scheduled for Saturday.

Brownfield Flattens Mats

BROWNFIELD (Special)—Leroy Tealer struckout 17 batters as the Brownfield Cubs clobbered the Estacado Matadors in a nondistrict baseball game 15-1 Thursday afternoon.

Brownfield blew the game open in the second inning with 6 runs. The Cubs added 2 runs in the third, 3 in the fourth, 2 in the fifth and 2 in the sixth.

The loss drops the Matadors' record to 3-2.

Estacado will take today off from action to try and get its confidence back.

However, three city high school teams will be involved in nondistrict action today.

Monterey (1-3) will enter the Midland Tournament, Coronado (3-1) will travel to Amarillo to play Palo Duro, and Dunbar (0-3) hosts Andrews at Mackenzie fiel Park.

NHL Rejects WHA Merger Bid

KEY LARGO, Fla. (AP) — Reactions ranged from the effusive elation of Harold Ballard of the Toronto Maple Leafs to the deep disappointment of Ed Snider of the Philadelphia Flyers after the National Hockey League's board of governors voted Thursday to scrap a plan to add four World Hockey Association teams for the 1979-80 season.

"I feel so elated, it's just like the North beating the South in the Civil War," said Ballard after the two-day meetings resulted in the rejection of a motion to add the Edmonton Oilers, Winnipeg Jets, Quebec Nordiques and New England Whalers. The decision was believed to have been by one vote.

"There is no reality in the National Hockey League," said Snider.

Expansion requires that three-quarters of the NHL's 17 clubs vote in favor, and only 12 were believed to have supported the plan presented Thursday.

Buffamonte Leads EHS

By BOB BAJACKSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Slowly rolling down the sock over his left foot, Estacado coach Vince Buffamonte revealed the trademark of a hitting team. Near the arch in an assortment of colors was a bruise about the size of a baseball.

"I've been happy with our hitting so far," said Buffamonte, while wincing with pain. "We've been hitting shots. In fact, when I got this (the bruise), the ball came back so fast, I didn't have a chance to react. I looked like the galloping gormet when the ball hit though."

Buffamonte's injury occurred while throwing batting practice. Why not just use a pitching machine?

"Because if I could get a pitching machine eligible, then I would use it," said Buffamonte. "With a pitching machine, all the pitches are going to be the same. So, if some pitcher throws changeups, the batter is going to be in trouble."

Anyways, it's hard to argue with success. The Matadors have only had 12 batters go down on strikes. And when talking about hitting, the two names that quickly pop into Buffamonte's mind are first baseman Manuel Escamilla and third baseman Kenneth Davis.

Escamilla is leading the Matadors in RBIs with 9. So far, the Estacado senior has slugged three home runs.

"Manuel either singles or homers when he gets a hit," laughed Buffamonte. "You see, Escamilla needs to unhitch that trailer he's pulling. In other words, he's not really gifted with speed."

Buffamonte believes the biggest surprise so far has been Estacado's freshmen catching corps. Behind the chest protector and mask are Hector Limon and Dewayne Slaughter.

"Both are playing defense as well or better than any other cather in the city," stated Buffamonte. "Hector is batting .727 with one homer and 6 RBIs, while Dewayne is right behind with a .600 average."

Of course, Limon and Slaughter have had plenty of opportunites to show off their defensive abilities. That's because the Matador pitching staff has been keeping them on their toes, knees, stomachs and backs.

"Right now, I'm the pitcher on the staff," said Buffamonte. "I don't have any strikeouts, but I get the ball across the plate more consistently. My earned run average is 18, about the same as the rest of the team."

As for the defense...

"I saw where Bart (Lubbock High coach Hernandez) is hitting 1,000 balls a day to eliminate the problem," said Buffamonte in reference to a story about the Westerner baseball team. "Well, we're hitting a little more than a 1,000, because we have to make up 10 years."

NCAA Chef Serves Up 'Dessert Course' Tonight

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

"The season, that's the meat; this is the dessert."

The dessert, as reserve center Keith Jackson of the University of Detroit put it, is the NCAA basketball tournament, a 40-team dogfight that gets under way with eight first-round games tonight. It builds to a climax March 26 in Salt Lake City with the crowning of a successor to last year's college champion, Kentucky.

While most of the nation's powers received first-round byes and won't swing into action until Saturday or Sunday, 17th-ranked Detroit, 22-5, takes on Lamar, 22-8, in one of the Mideast Regional first-round games tonight at Murfreesboro, Tenn.

No. 20 Tennessee, 20-11 and winner of the Southeastern Conference tournament, goes against Eastern Kentucky, 21-7, winner of the Ohio Valley Conference tourney, in the other Mideast first-rounder.

In the East Regional at Raleigh, N.C., St. John's, N.Y., 18-10, plays No. 13 Temple, 25-3; and Iona, 23-5, meets Penn, 21-5; in the Midwest Regional at Lawrence, Kan., Virginia Tech, 21-8, takes on Jacksonville, 19-10, and Weber State, 24-8, opposes New Mexico State, 22-9; and in the West Regional at Los Angeles, Utah, 20-9, plays Pepperdine, 21-9, and Southern Cal, 19-8, goes against Utah State, 19-10.

Although Detroit beat such teams as No. 11 Georgetown and No. 12 Marquette during the regular season, Lamar Coach Billy Tubbs says his club is not intimidated.

"Our guys don't seem overly enthused, excited or fired up," said Tubbs. "They're taking it all in stride. But by the time the game gets here, we'll definitely be ready to play.

"The difference in our ball clubs is we haven't beaten anybody ranked and they have, but it's probably our turn now," added Tubbs. "We may be No. 40 in a field of 40, but we're in the NCAA playoffs."

Despite being ranked 20th nationally, Tennessee's 20-11 record is the worst of the six teams in the Mideast Regional and the Vols are 0-4 in NCAA tournament play. Thus Coach Don DeVoe is confident his team won't be looking past Eastern Kentucky.

"We can get things completely out of proportion if we think about anything but Eastern," said DeVoe. "They're good or they wouldn't be here. The mere fact that the University of Tennessee has never won an NCAA game will be a great motivating factor for us."

Eastern Kentucky's 21-7 record is its best since 1947, yet the school has received as little notice as any team in the tournament.

"Schools with regional names have identity problems, I guess," said Eastern Kentucky Coach Ed Byhre, "but I don't think that we or the Ohio Valley Conference have anything to be ashamed of."

Temple beat St. John's 74-73 in New York during the regular season, and the Redmen were something of a surprise selection for the NCAAs after losing to Iona 63-57 in the ECAC New York-New Jersey playoff.

New Mexico State is hoping to repeat its 63-58 regular-season victory over Weber State. Virginia Tech, winner of the Metro Conference tournament, takes an eight-game winning streak into its game against Jacksonville, which is enjoying a resurgence under first-year Coach Tates Locke.

"Jacksonville went five years in a row winning 20 games," noted Locke. "We're trying to breach the gap between the winning tradition and now, and we're having fun trying to give the people something to talk about."

Southern Cal, making its first NCAA playoff appearance since 1961, has won nine of its last 11 games, but Coach Bob Boyd has plenty of respect for Utah State.

"They're a strong, quick, good perimeter shooting team," said Boyd, who announced in midseason that he was resigning at the end of this year. "They've already beaten four teams in the NCAA tourney — Brigham Young, Utah, Pacific and Weber State — and that gives them credibility."

Center Cliff Robinson, Southern Cal's leading scorer, has missed the last six games because of a sprained left foot and may not play tonight.

LCC Home Briefly For Full Weekend

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

"Yeah, it's good to be home," said the coach of the Lubbock Christian College baseball team, fresh off a week-long road trip.

His Chaparrals will be back home for seven games this weekend, a doubleheader against Paul Quinn Saturday, a tripleheader with PQ and Jarvis Christian Saturday and another doubleheader with JCU on Sunday.

Today's and Sunday's twin bills are slated for 1 p.m. The Saturday tripleheader begins at 11.

If you're a Chap fan, you'd better get out this weekend because it's the last time this month the team will play at home. And that's why Hays was trying so hard to find the buried third-base stud, trying to get the field ready for the 1979 home opener.

The Chaps stand 4-2 on the season after series with Texas-El Paso and Jarvis Christian. One loss was a close 4-2 decistion to UTEP. The other was a wild 15-5 drop to JCU, the first time the ten-run rule has ever been invoked against LCC.

Highlighting (or lowlighting, depending on your point of view) the loss was a 12-run inning by Jarvis Christian.

"Well, except for that one inning we had a pretty good road trip," Hays said. "We were pretty competitive down at El Paso—that one we lost by 4-2 we had a shot at winning—but that one inning...

"We couldn't throw a strike. Four different pitchers couldn't get the ball over the plate."

That statement kind of points up the state of the LCC baseball team at this point in the season.

So far the Chaps are hitting the ball solidly, sporting a .301 batting average and a .459 on-base average. But the throwers have been troubled.

LCC now has a 6.69 earned run average (it would have been 3.33 without that blowout frame against JCU) and have allowed 34 walks versus 25 strikeouts.

"Pitching is going to be the key," Hays said. "Our people are keeping hitting and I'm really happy with the pitching of our two freshmen on Tuesday.

"At catcher, that's been a weakness the last couple of years, we're real solid. But we're not dominant up the middle like we have been. But we're strengthened a little behind the plate.

"That's a lot of question marks," he continued. "Right now we're not anywheres close to being sound. We may get tested tomorrow (today) and Saturday. If we do, we're going to be in trouble."

But if he's going to face a test anywhere, Hays would rather do it at home. "This ballpark fits us," he said, looking out over the new field. "We've got pretty good power and the wind usually blows out here."

The lineup for the Chaps will probable be: left fielder Tommy Inman (.500); centerfielder Brady Brashear (.235); second baseman Steve Brigante (.333); first baseman Tim Leslie (.444); third baseman Kenny Toney (.357); DH Scott Wolf (.333); right fielder Richard Bowles (.200); shortstop Lewis Stephenson (.111) and catcher Bob Nottebart (.167).

On the mound for today's double header will probably be righthanders John Ross (0-1 and 4.50) and Lou Swain (1-0, .25).

Tech Spring Drills Start

A year ago, Rex Dockery was new at this business of running a spring football training session. Today, when he begins, he has more knowledge — and more experience.

The Raiders, who compiled a 7-4 record to be one of the Southwest Conference's biggest surprises last fall, will start spring drills this afternoon, and 47 of them will be lettermen.

There are areas of concern, but there are areas of strength, too, as Dockery goes into his second spring as head coach after replacing Steve Sloan.

Missing are 11 lettermen from last fall, but returning are starters at seven offensive and nine defensive positions — a completely different experience outlook from a year ago.

However, Dockery is planning personnel changes, one of them being to try starting strong guard Joe Walstad to center, a position he has filled at times in his career at Tech.

"We're starting spring training earlier than usual for several reasons," Dockery said. "For one thing, if we have any injuries, we will have longer for them to heal both in reference to next fall and also to later in the spring. We're going Friday (today) and Saturday, then next week, then we're off for spring break.

"If we make some personnel changes, then we have that period of spring break to look at films, analyze the changes and see if we need to make additional changes."

Center is an area of concern, since Tech graduated its two top centers in Kim Taliaferro and Travis Mileur. If Walstad fills in, then Dockery will be looking for a guard, possibly returning letterman George Smitherman or Denny Harris.

"It depends on who comes to the front, either at center (where Randy Hudson, a squadman, and red shirt Jim Wosoba are playing) or guard," said Dockery.

Dockery lists wide receiver is a critical area, since both starters, Brian Nelson and Godfrey Turner, graduated. Dockery plans to start Mike Jackson, a squadman from Houston Lee, and Edwin Newsom, a senior from Houston Madison, at the two spots, "to see what they're going to do. We have Howie Lewis (coming off academic eligibility) and Darryl Green (coming from defense) there, too."

Defensively, Dockery plans to try noseguard Jamie Giles at outside linebacker and use defensive end Jeff McKinney, a 220-pounder from Bethany, Okla., at the nose position. Another move has Greg Tyler going from the defensive secondary to runningback.

At that tailback spot, the Raiders will look at Tyler, Mark Johnson (the converted quarterback), returnee Mark Olbert and sophomore-to-be Paul Rodgers. Olbert started some games at tailback, as did Don Earl (now in the secondary) and Phil Weatherall, who transferred to East Texas in January.

Tech's defensive needs are replacements for Curtis Reed in the defensive line and all-SWC Don Kelly at linebacker.

The secondary could be the strongest position, but already injuries have cut into the strength. Freshman starter Alan Swann sustained an injury during the Christmas holidays and hasn't recovered completely.

"You have a chance to move people around in the spring," said Dockery. "You look for players to improve, you have a chance to experiment with some new ideas, and you find out who wants to play in the spring."

In addition to the secondary, Tech's strength could be its offensive line, where only Taliaferro was lost to garduation. Quick tackle Ken Walter, who played last fall at 238, is now pushing 250. His quick-side mate at guard is Larry Martin, preparing for his third year as a starter.

Today's workout will begin at 3:45 p.m. Tech will work out Saturday, then go Monday through Friday next week before taking off for spring break. The Raiders will return to practice March 26 and hold their annual spring game on April 14.

Alcorn State Gets Win

By The Associated Press

It was much more than a basketball game for Alcorn State, a small, predominantly black school in Lorman, Miss., seeking to make its mark in the big time.

The Braves, getting a buzzer-beating basket by Larry Smith, rose to the occasion Thursday night and defeated Mississippi State 80-78 in the first round of the National Invitation Tournament.

"This game has a special meaning for a lot of small schools, not just black colleges, but all small schools," Whitney said. "A lot of people don't give them a chance."

Whitney, whose team is now 28-0, says those who downgrade Alcorn because of its schedule now have to "eat a few words." And he repeated his contention that the Braves should be ranked among the nation's best. Indiana State, the only other unbeaten major college team, is ranked No. 1.

It was the first basketball game ever played in Mississippi between a small, predominantly black school and a large, predominantly white university. Alcorn State plays in the unheralded Southwestern Athletic Conference while Mississippi State is a member of the prestigious Southeastern Conference.

Smith's eight-footer capped a comeback that erased an 11-point Mississippi State lead, 68-57, with 6:03 left in the game. Alcorn State had trailed by as many as 16 points in the first half.

Smith said teammate Joe Jenkins was to have taken the final shot but "the ball ended up in my hands. I just went up and the next thing I knew the ball was going off the glass and going in."

Smith, a 6-foot-8 forward who led Alcorn State in the regular season with averages of 17.6 points and 14 rebounds per game, topped the Braves with 19 points. Wiley Peck was high scorer for Mississippi State with 22, including 15 in the second half.

Peck's stuff and free throw gavve the Bulldogs a 68-57 lead, but the Braves' tenacious full-court press disrupted the Mississippi State attack. Alcorn ran off nine consecutive points and forged ahead 78-76 on Smith's steal and basket with 1:23 left.

Local Boys Attend Meet

Chuck Perry and Curtis Conaway, two of the city's top high school tracksters, will attempt to improve on their individual performances today at the West Texas Relays in Odessa.

Perry, who leaped 6-8 at the Lubbock Relays last week, and Conaway, a winner in the 880-yard dash, will lead the Monterey track team into the two-day competition.

Also competing from Lubbock will be the Estacado and Lubbock High teams.

At Sundown, the Roughneck Relays will be run today, with nine boy's and girl's teams competing in the Class B competition and 11 squads in the Class AA and A Division.

Competing at Sundown are teams from Amherst, Lazbuddi Meadow, New Home, Sundown, Valley, Wilson, Motley County and Whiteface. Also, Floydada, Frenship, Idalou, Cooper, Lockney, Muleshoe, New Deal, Plains, Ropes and Ralls.

The meet is set for a 9 a.m. start, with the final set for to begin at 4 p.m.

One of the largest meets in West Texas, the Odessa Relays have attracted teams from all over the state, insuring the Lubbock tracksters of ample competition.

Scientist Praises Ice Age Man

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI) — Modern man likes to think of himself as the inheritor of the Earth but Prof. Valerius Geist suggests it is time to stop bragging. He thinks the most impressive human of them all lived back in the Ice Age.

Geist suggests in a provocative theory published in New Scientist that only conditions of abundant resources produce really healthy individuals, and Ice Age man not only lived in such an environment but he regulated his population to prevent its destruction.

It's been down and up for the human race ever since, said the University of Calgary environmentalist, but the Ice Age represented a sort of peak. A few thousand years closer to our time Europeans were small of body and brain, suffered from diseased bones and teeth and went in for homicide and cannibalism.

"Bronze age and early middle-age Europeans also had eye-catching development, larger in average body size than present-day Europeans," Geist said. "Phenotypic development (the qualities acquired by a group) deteriorated thereafter, falling to a low during the Industrial Revolution.

He said recovery towards 'normal' development may still be in progress" — the growth increases of the recent decades — "but on average we are still less well developed than some earlier human populations."

Geist said his theory came to him during ecological studies he carried out in Canada's St. Elias Range which contains some 12,000 square miles of ice within massive glaciers. Contrary to popular belief, he said, glaciers are not hostile to life and at their edges produce conditions highly favorable to large mammals — of which Man is one.

He reached the connlusion that Ice Age Man had a hunting diet of animal products only occasionally supplemented with vegetables.

"They worked excruciatingly hard to gain tactical hunting skills against a dozen species of very dangerous large mammals, learned detailed strategies for hunting these prey, planned long in advance the execution of their communal interception hunts, and managed a labor force to covert spoilable meat quickly into products that could be stored.

"Confrontation hunting (closing in on prey) demanded superb strategic judgement, great bodily dexterity and skills in using weapons, great courage and unflinching loyalty to the hunting companions. Their physical development and robust health were achieved at the cost of great effort in mastering the multitude of diverse physical and intellectual skills.

"Whether this is a universal characteristic of the lifestyles of people with exceptional phenotypic development remains to be seen. What we know empirically of health-promoting practices certainly points that way, one reason why a lifestyle that promotes health may not be too popular."

Geist said his theory was open to scientific testing.

"As scientists, I believe we owe society an answer to the question of what kind of environment produces the most healthy individuals."

DR. LAMB

Losing Loose Skin

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 17-year-old male and I recently lost a great amount of weight by going on a diet and improving my exercise. I lost between 40 and 50 pounds. However, this great weight loss has left an excessive amount of flab on my abdomen. Please do not suggest sit-ups. I do them three times a day and it does not help. Can you suggest anything?

DEAR READER — I am really surprised at how often this question is raised. What to do depends upon what you mean by flab. Also, since I don't know how overweight you were to begin with, it's difficult for me to know whether you have still more fat to lose. You should be able to tell by feeling how much fat there is underneath your skin — if any.

Loose skin may never fully contract. That's why people shouldn't get fat in the first place, even if they're very young. If you stretch the skin too much, it will only snap back so far.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 3-7, Girth Control: Avoiding the Big Middle, even though I suspect you have accomplished a lot of what this issue advises. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

I am going to advise sit-ups and leg lifts for you. Many people don't realize that sit-ups do not tone up all of the abdomen. They are primarily for the upper abdominal muscels, those above the navel. They have very little effect on the muscles below the navel. These must be tightened up with leg lift type exercises. I'd like to add that anyone with back problems should not try doing leg lift exercises without his doctor's approval.

Sit-ups, voluntary contraction of abdominal muscles, leg lifts and eliminating fat under the skin and fat inside the abdomen are the keys to tightening up the waist area. If you still have a lot of loose skin a year after undergoing a fat control program then if you want to get rid of it, you'll have to consider surgical removal.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I was reading your column about transplanting an ovum from one woman into another woman's uterus. This set me to thinking. We don't have any children because I had a hysterctomy when I was very young. My ovaries were left intact, so apparently I still ovulate but, of course, since I don't have a uterus I don't have menstrual periods.

Now I understand there isn't such a thing as a uterus transplant yet, but what I'd like to know is if I'm producing normal ova, could one of those be fertilized and developed in some other woman's uterus? That way my husband and I could have a child that has our own genes.

DEAR READER — Theoretically, that would be possible and things very similar to that have been done in animal reproduction. At this particular writing, this hasn't been done in human beings, but most of the basic elements needed to do such a procedure have been worked out.

So, I can't tell you that you could have such a thing done now, but I do think it's entirely possible for a woman in your situation to have that done at some date in the future if she chooses to do so. Of course, that would entail finding another woman who was willing to go through the pregnancy for your child.

VFW Blasts Administration

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Veterans of Foreign Wars says it may have to become more active politically if veterans hope to compete in Congress against other special interest groups.

In a double-barreled attack on the Carter administration, VFW Commander Eric Sandstrom said Tuesday that his group may set up political action committees to raise money for sympathetic candidates.

"This may well be the needed vehicle to elect to office those who recognize the very special service of our veterans and the debt we all owe them," he said in testimony before House and Senate committees.

Sandstrom called the administration "the most anti-veteran" of any in recent history. And he said Max Cleland, who heads the Veterans Administration, "is knuckling under to the dictates" of the White House.

FDA Still Plans To Ban Artificial Sweetener

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration still plans to propose a ban on the artificial sweetener saccharin.

But an agency spokesman says a ban could not go into effect until the proposal went through a lengthy hearing process that would take at least a year.

That means calorie-counters will not have to hoard their diet food and low-calorie drinks after the congressional moratorium on banning the sugar substitute expires May 23.

The FDA said this week that while it still intends to propose a ban on the artificial sweetener when the deadline expires, such a ban would take a minimum of 12 to 15 months to go into effect.

"The FDA plans no precipitous action on saccharin when the moratorium expires," spokesman Wayne Pines said. "There will be plenty of time for Congress and everyone else to look at the whole question of food safety."

The FDA originally had proposed that the ban would take effect the day the moratorium ended, Pines said. But, he said, the regulatory agency will have to go through the process of proposing a ban and seeking public comment again.

Under the original FDA proposal, saccharin would have been barred from diet foods and soft drinks.

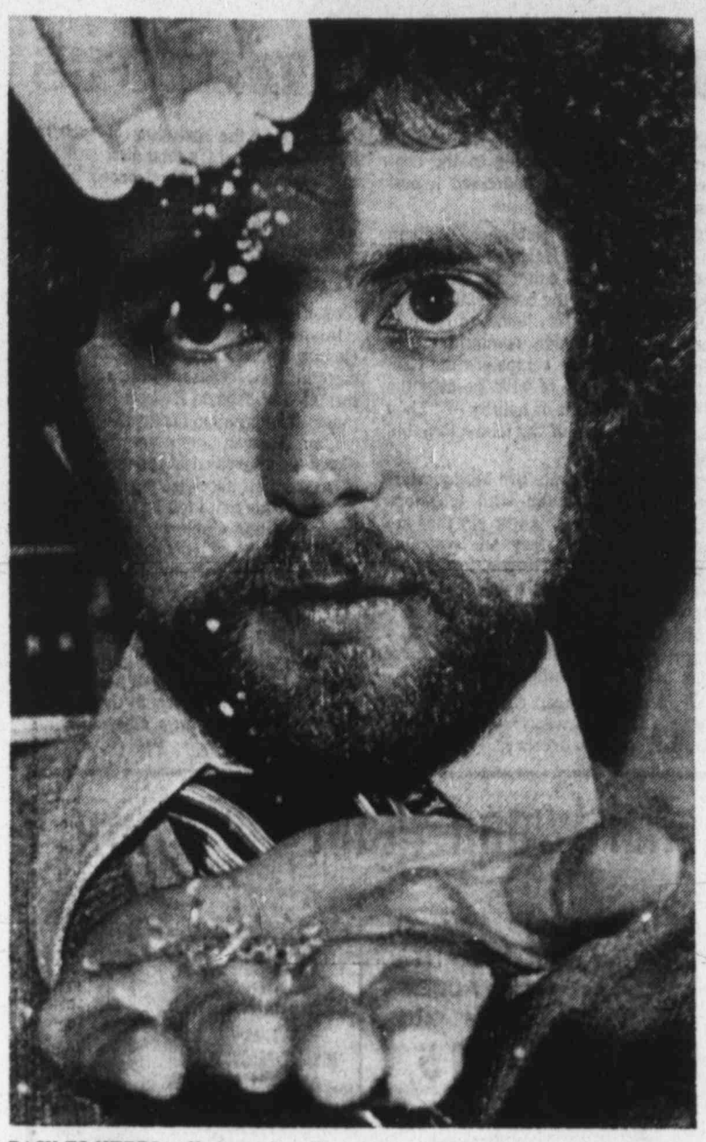
Scientist Studies Herbal Cures



BACK TO HERBS — Herbs, such as Pennyroyal, above, midwives and witch doctors may play a more accepted role in international health care by the year 2000. "Two-thirds of the world's population uses traditional medicine for primary health care," said Julian Gold of the National Center for Disease Control, who is researching herbal cures for the World Health Organization. (AP Laserphoto)

By BRENDA MOONEY

ATLANTA (AP) — A World Health Organization research team, noticing that women in Tibet have a relatively low fertility rate, set out to trace the cause. They found it in a green pea that is a staple of the Tibetan diet.

A chemical in the pea — m-xylohydrquinone — apparently is responsible.

That kind of discovery has caused Julian Gold, a scientist at the federal Center for Disease Control here, and researchers in more than 15 other countries to study the legitimate roles that herbal preparations, midwives and even witch doctors can play in meeting the world's health needs.

Gold's research is part of a larger study of such "traditional medicine" underway now at the World Health Organization, based in Geneva, Switzerland.

"Two-thirds of the world's population uses traditional medicine for primary health care," said Gold. "And if we can't provide health care by conventional medicine, we'll have to find another way."

Gold said a smorgasbord of purported herbal cures being tested by WHO include:

—An herb called Chinese Motherwort, known for thousands of years, which is supposed to cause the uterus to contract, stopping the implantation of the egg or inducing abortion.

—Portulacca Oleracea, a Chinese plant, used to make a tea which is given to patients with diarrhea.

—A combination of Vidanga Tankana and Pippali, two plants which are ingested by an Indian sect as birth control.

But Gold said there are some problems in using herbs for medical care, including the fact that cultural factors influence an herb's effectiveness in some societies.

This re-examination of primitive medical treatments is part of a revival of interest in holistic medicine. The term "holistic" is derived from the word "whole" and refers to a medical approach that attempts to treat whole persons rather than just bodies.

The Tibetan pea is an example, Gold said. "They tried it (the pea) on Indian women and it didn't work. That's what holistic medicine is all about," he said. The pea fit a lifestyle in Tibet but could not be forced on the Indian culture.

Holistic theories began to gain credence in modern times when WHO was begun as an arm of the United Nations.

"In September 1947, the U.N. defined what they believed health was. They said good health is not merely absence of disease and infirmity but also is the physical and emotional well-being of a person," said Jack LaPatra of the Georgia Institute of Technology.

LaPatra is the author of "Healing: The Coming Revolution in Holistic Medicine" and a health systems analyst at Georgia Tech.

In a recent report, WHO reaffirmed that stand, stating, "No health service starts in a vacuum. The people, the healers and the diseases are already there, and the priority attached to health varies, depending on the communities' other problems.

"If health services are to be provided to the people of the world by the year 2000, it will be necessary to find alternative approaches to meet the basic health needs of developing countries."

Gold said those needs have intensified as the cost of health care has skyrocketed and Western drug companies have failed to find more efficient and less expensive new drugs.

For example, he said, if someone in the United States discovered a male contraceptive today, it would take 20 years and $20 million to get it on the market.

The use of midwives also is of special interest to the researchers.

"The traditional birth attendant is often an accomplished herbalist, and infusions of herbs are frequently given to improve general health during pregnancy as well as to relieve discomfort," the WHO report said.

Faith healing — which is believed to be the most potent ingredient of witch doctoring — also is being reviewed, said Gold.

At least one form of faith healing is widely accepted in American society, he said — the use of placebos, or sugar pills containing no medicine. "Almost 40 percent of migraine sufferers get a positive effect from placebos," Gold said.

"Traditional medicine" has a rich heritage in Africa, Southeast Asia, the Western Pacific, the Eastern Mediterranean, and the developing cultures of the Americas. Gold said the acceptance of such medicine could have a far-reaching effect on the United States, where herbs and holism are little known and sometimes feared.

But, said Gold, careful studies of herbs are necessary before herbs are approved for medical use.

One example Gold gave of a lack of knowledge about herbs was the death of a Colorado woman last year, blamed on the herb pennyroyal. Pennyroyal — taken in an herbal tea — has been thought to induce menstruation for thousands of years, said Gold.

"The big question is what is an overdose," he said. "One cup of tea obviously is not going to do any harm. But if one cup doesn't bring on abortion, maybe two, or three or four will."

TOMBED

PARADISE, Wash. (AP)— The snowdrifts of Mt. Rainier have become a temporary tomb for veteran mountaineer Willi Unsoeld and Janie Diepenbrock of Sacramento, Calif., one of his students, who were killed in an avalanche Sunday while descending the 14,410-foot peak. A park spokesman said the search for the bodies had been canceled until more favorable weather arrives.

Teen-Age Pregnancies Increasing Rapidly

CHICAGO (AP) — The problem of teen-age pregnancy and parenting is increasing rapidly and has reached "epidemic proportions," three nursing authorities say.

And it involves the white middle class, not just black and hispanic families as in the past, they said Thursday.

But they told reporters at the national meeting of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists that it was not until white adolescents became significantly involved that public and government concern about the problem became apparent.

The three, speaking to reporters at a national meeting of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, appealed for government funding of special programs for teen-age parents.

Barbara Wallace-Catalano, director of the young parent clinic at Boston Hospital for Women, cited statistics showing that during the last 20 years, live births to girls between the ages of 10 and 14 rose from 6,000 annually to about 13,000 a year.

The two other nurses are Kathleen Horgan, nurse-midwife at Presbyterian Hospital in New York, and Linda Johns, childbirth educator at Memorial Hospital in Jacksonville, Fla.

The nurses, who lead a discussion on "Children Bearing Children," said some of the reasons teen-agers get pregnant include ignorance of contraceptive methods, family problems which make them want to increase their sense of self-worth and sexuality in the media.

Miss Johns said girls are going through puberty at an earlier age than they did a few generations ago, but are marrying later. And because of that, she said, they are torn between the biological desires of their bodies and restrictions of their parents and society for a longer time than in the past, she said.

Teen-age pregnancy also is detrimental to society, the nurses said.

Young mothers often drop out of school and never return. That, in turn, could add to the cost of welfare.

Babies born to these mothers also are likely to have more health problems and lower intelligence, they said, and adolescent parents often become abusive because they are not equipped to cope with the demands of a baby.

Mrs. Wallace-Catalano advocated a required high school course about how to be a parent. A student taking the course should receive credit for it.

The nurses also said interests of the teen-age father have been ignored, and nothing is done to help young men become responsible parents.

They also criticized the welfare system which cuts off benefits to young parents when they decide to get married. This leaves young married couples ineligible for medical and other programs available when they were unwed parents.

'Hunger Disease' Details Ravages Of Starvation

NEW YORK (AP) — First, the children stopped playing, growing listless and ill-tempered. Then came grotesque physical changes — bodies shriveled or bloated, eyes bulged.

An estimated 43,000 Jews starved to death in the Warsaw ghetto between 1940 and 1942. Twenty-eight doctors chronicled their living hell in works published in English today for the first time.

The record, published as "Hunger Disease," details the ravages of starvation on the human body and spirit. Many of its authors died in the ghetto or in the Nazi death camps set up in pursuit of the Final Solution — extermination of the Jewish people.

The book, edited by Dr. Myron Winick, is a scientific record of death. "It was our way of resisting," Winick quoted Dr. Henryk Fenigstein, a surviving member of the project, as saying.

The work was done secretly in makeshift hospitals in the walled-off section of Warsaw alloted Jews by the Germans. It was done, says Winick, "amid destruction, starvation and rampant infectious disease."

Winick, director of Columbia University's Institute of Human Nutrition, says the study is "one of the most complete descriptions ever given of the physiological consequences of hunger disease."

The words of the report are testimony to the pain. "Hunger was the most important factor of everyday life within the walls of the Warsaw ghetto," wrote Dr. Israel Milejkowski, head of the Department of Health Jewish Council in Warsaw.

"Its symptoms consisted of crowds of beggars and corpses often lying on the streets covered with newspapers..." he wrote.

Alcohol Woes Threatening Third World

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — A global increase in alcoholism and a subsequent increase in crime, drunk driving and absenteeism is so serious that urgent measures must be taken, the World Health Organization said today.

"So rapidly have alcoholism and alcohol-related problems increased that they now rank among the world's major health concerns, threatening to slow down economic development in the Third World and overburden the health services of most countries," a WHO report said.

It said the annual per capita consumption of alcohol increased in a representative 25-country sample by between 30 and 500 percent between 1950 and 1976.

Portugal, with an increase of 30 percent in alcoholic consumption, had the lowest rate of increase. West Germany's 500 percent increase was the highest.

In the United States, consumption increased by 52 percent over the 26-year period. The cost — medical, psychiatric and social — on the consequences of drinking is estimated at $43 billion per year.

"Drinking often becomes a symbol of prestige and success and there is no society in the world that can withstand these trends when they are coupled with heavy commercial pressure to drink," psychiatry professor and WHO consultant Griffith Edwards wrote in the report.

"It is an absurd paradox to use alcohol revenue to build the roads on which it is not safe to drive because of drunken drivers," Edwards added.

The WHO report lists crime, traffic accidents and absenteeism — which causes low productivity and therefore has serious economic implications — as the major side effects of alcoholism.

On the relationship between excessive drinking and crime, the report cites several U.S. studies which found that "alcohol was implicated in 13 to 50 percent of rapes, 24 to 72 percent of assaults and 28 to 86 percent of homicides worldwide in 1977."

Reagan Denies Staff Member Source Of Rumors

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ronald Reagan is denying that anyone on his campaign staff was the source of rumors about the sex life and drinking habits of fellow GOP presidential candidate Rep. Phil Crane and his wife Arlene.

The Illinois Republican said Thursday he was "outraged" over the "scurrilous, unfounded rumors" printed in two lengthy articles in the ultra-conservative Manchester, N.H., Union Leader. Crane said a reporter from the newspaper attributed them to "some Reagan campaign aides and supporters."

Crane sent Reagan a letter demanding he fire the campaign staffers involved.

In response, Reagan said, "I informed Congressman Crane that none of my staff was in any way responsible for the articles. I told Congressman Crane that if he had any evidence to the contrary it was his responsibility to get it to me personally."

The articles alleged Crane has been involved in numerous extramarital affairs and that he and his wife are heavy drinkers and frequent Washington partygoers.

The New Hampshire House unanimously passed a resolution condemning the article and apologizing to the congressman after Crane addressed it personally.

The newspaper's publisher, William Loeb, has endorsed Reagan for president and in the past has editorially lambasted Crane for splitting the conservative vote.

Reagan's supporters launched his 1980 presidential campaign committee only Wednesday. In past campaigns the Californian has spoken of what he calls the 11th commandment of politics — "Thou shall not speak ill of thy fellow Republican."

"At our New Hampshire headquarters we've been inundated with telephone calls from from people who say they are outraged, and that they are switching their support from Reagan to Crane," said Crane aide Laura Broderick in Washington. "This thing has backfired."

Miss Broderick said Crane met with a reporter from the newspaper for more than an hour Wednesday.

In a letter to Reagan, Crane said the reporter's questions went "well beyond the limits of common decency."

Crane said the spreading of such rumors represented j"a total disregard" for the lessons the country learned during Watergate.

"It is unusual that such scurrilous, unfounded rumors should be printed by this paper within 24 hours of the announcement of a Reagan for President Committee," Crane said.

In an editorial accompanying the articles on Crane, Loeb denied the stories were printed because we are supporting former Gov. Ronald Reagan for the Republican nomination for the presidency."

Some Reagan supporters and staff "have been involved in the development of a story so shocking, so unfair, and grossly untrue that I felt I must bring it to your attention," Crane wrote Reagan.

"It is distressing enough that I should have to oe unjustly subjected to base affronts to my character. It is much more sad that my wife and eight children are to be hurt and scandalized by unfounded rumors. All of my children will suffer deeply and I hope the scars will heal soon. I am particularly concerned that my 6-year-old daughter Carrie may never understand this."

Iranian Says Employees Hurt Interests

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Misbehavior by American employees of Bell Helicopter International in Iran "damaged" American interests thece more than any action of the U.S. government, an Iranian international affairs expert has charged.

A Bell Helicopter official refused comment Thursday on the allegation by Dr. Abbas Amirie, executive director of the Institute of International Political and Economic Studies in Tehran.

Amirie termed the Bell employees, who were recently pulled out of Iran by the company, "social outcasts...the wanderers of your society...(with) nonrespect for the Iranian civilization."

Informed of Amirie's comments, Tim Gette, a staff assistant at Bell's Ft. Worth, Texas, headquarters, said, "I won't even make a comment."

Bell, working under an American-Iranian governmental contract to help train the Iranian military, had as many as 3,00 helicopter pilots, mechanics and support personnel in Iran from 1973 to last month.

The firm began pulling out its employees last October and rushed out the last of them last month in the wake of the government overthrow.

Amirie, in an interview before participating in a Cincinnati Council on World Affairs meeting, bcought up the topic of the alleged misconduct of Americans when he predicted that the new Iranian government eventually will reform ties with America.

"There is no doubt in my mind the revolutionary government will come into the realization that a closer relation with the United States is inevitable," he said. "But it is not going to be anything like duringnthe Shah's regime when you had 50,000 technicians over there.

"And, my only hope is that the next time you do send technicians into Iran you will not send people like the ones that Bell Helicopter Co. sent — your social outcasts, who had no respect for Iranian culture, no respect for the Iranian civilization or no knowledge of it.

"They did more damage to your interests and to your image in Iran than your entire government.

"These were the people who served in Vietnam," Amirie said of the Bell employees in Iran.

Marvin Told Ex-Mistress To Stay Away From Set

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Lee Marvin testifiee that he told his former mistress, Michelle Triola Marvin, to stay away when he was filming movies because she could not fit into the life style of male camaraderie that he lived on location.

The actor, taking the stand Thursday in his own defense for the first time at his breach of contract trial, sought to show that he did not force Miss Marvin to give up her singing career to be with him while he made movies.

Turning down her request to go to London where he was filming "The Dirty Dozen," he said:

"I told her she didn't fit into a shooting company, she didn't understand the nature of the men I was working with, our comraderie and the life style in which we were locked."

He said he developed that attitude from the time he was filming "The Professionals" several weeks in Las Vegas, where Miss Marvin accompanied him.

Miss Marvin testified earlier that on that occasion she was apalled at Marvin's drinking at wild parties thrown by the film crew. She said that at one party she found him dangling a girl by the ankle out of an upper-story hotel window.

After the first few days, Marvin testified, he asked her to go back to their home in Malibu, Calif., but she told him: "I know this town and I know the dangers of it and I think I ought to be here."

Marvin said he told her she was a "detriment" to him, to the stunt men and the cast and that he wanted her to leave.

In March 1966, Marvin said, he went to London for seven months to make the film, "The Dirty Dozen." He said Miss Marvin wanted to join him but he told her, "No, never again. The experience with 'The Professionals' was enough."

Witness Testifies About Slaying

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A 25-year-old man has testified he was dealing marijuana on an Oakland street corner in 1974 when he saw Black Panther leader Huey Newton shoot and kill a prostitute.

Carles Buie, who agreed to appear only after being placed in the Federal Witness Protection Program, took the stand Thursday on the second day of Newton's trial on charges he murdered 17-year-old Kathleen Smith.

He was the second witness to the slaying to testify. The first was a former prostitute.

"I was standing 10 feet away," Buie said Thursday. He said he saw Newton reach into his pants and pull out a pearl handled, nickel plated pistol.

"He stuck it in her face and shot her. She fell like she was in slow motion. It took 10 seconds for her to hit the ground. I saw her fall about 20 times in my mind."

Dissident Pleads For Insistence On Rights Issue

By MIHAJLO MIHAJLOV

How strange it is! For 13 years, up to a year ago, I was being arrested, tried, bounced around from prison to prison — and somewhere in the world people were protesting, demonstrating, signing petitions urguing my release.

But now I am here, not in that other world. It is not I being tried and sentenced, it is not I strangers are attempting to console by offering their moral support. Today, I am in the free world, and it is I who must write protests, demonstrate and join defense committees on behalf of people far away who are obviously innocent but have fallen prey to a barbaric regime.

I have been enjoying the incredible, indescribable air of freedom that, like all sustenance, tends to be cherished most when it is no longer available. Here you can go wherever your eyes lead you, read whatever you wish, say and write anything that comes to mind. There is no checking in with the police, no ideological campaign in the press, no omnipotent Party.

I find myself in gigantic New York City, gazing out the window onto the rooftops of buildings whose storage tanks seem like sprawling spiders. On the streets below, an exotic life teems. I see faces — white, black, sometimes yellow. Everyone dresses differently. There is no effort to be uniform — not in thought, in ideology, in party adherence or in hair style. Only here, in America, can one truly begin to comprehend that if humanity is to have a future, it must be free. It is here, in the United States, that the embryo of humanity's future is to be found.

I would be happy just to sit here and enjoy this freedom and not think of what is distant in time and space. But then, suddenly, newspaper headlines knock like heavy fists at my door. There has been a new wave of trials in that other world and the sentence are being handed down: Yuri Orloy-seven years in prison and five years' internal exile; Anatoly Shcharansky — 13 years in prison and labor camp; Aleksandr Ginzburg — eight years; Viktoras Petkusten — 10 years in prison plus five in exile. So it goes, on and on... There are trials and retributions for espionage (making public statements about illegal persecutions), for engaging in subversive activities (helping the families of prisoners), for slander and hostile propaganda (telling the truth).

How familiar it is. Even here in New York, reading reports of these Soviet trials, I begin to smell the putrid prison urinal and the more repulsive, animalistic odor of violence. I know that somewhere, at this very moment, someone in an isolation cell is being beaten by fat-faced warders with red five-cornered stars on their caps. Somewhere a verdict is being read that had been decided long before the arrest and trial.

How familiar it all is. Soon the spider storage tanks change into watch towers. The soft clicking of the elevator behind my wall grows into the clang of the jail door which always causes a prisoner's heart to stop beating.

I remember my first imprisonment. It came so suddenly that I wasn't certain whether anyone in the neighboring city, let alone the West, knew of my arrest. And I shall never forget the moment when the investigator hissed in an angry voice, "Well, your little friends in the West who have raised all of that fuss aren't going to help you." When I heard those words my entire being radiated with joy. That meant people were keeping watch. I wasn't alone. How much strength that gave me!

The most frightening thing that can happen to a person is to be forgotten in prison. Therefore, I cannot allow myself to sit back and simply enjoy my sweet freedom. Now it is also my duty to do everything possible to help people understand and keep in mind those countlesss men and women in the prisons of the communist world.

Yet what is involved is more than merely the matter of human solidarity. Throughout history there have been trials where not only the fate of the accused was decided, but much more–the fate of the future. Such are the cases of Orlov, Shcharansky, Ginzburg, Petkus and the many others in the news. All are in jail today because they were members of groups that had taken it upon themselves to monitor Soviet compliance with the human-rights provisions agreed to by 35 signatories at Helsinki in the summer of 1975.

The only purpose of the dissident trials in the Soviet Union is to tear out of the free world's hands — out of the hands of the United States — the most dangerous weapon that can be used against the communist dictatorship, to show the entire world that the politics of defending human rights will fail.

I recall vividly the great hope everyone felt when President Carter proclaimed that a primary goal of his Administrtion would be the protection of human rights everywhere in the world. It seemed that for the first time in recent history America had found the ideological and spiritual weapon that could penetrate communist totalitarianism.

There, on the other side, everyone grasped this immediately, including the prisoners and their jailors. Everyone realized that to communist dictatorships the struggle for human rights was far more dangerous than hydrogen or neutron bombs.

Here in the West this is not always understood. Moreover, it has gradually become evident that, outside of a great deal of verbal noise, the democracies are not going to do much about the communists' non-adherence to Helsinki — a non-adherence that, in effect, proclaims the Kremlin's intention of disregarding any international agreement that it may be a party to. This strengthens the communists' conviction that the West will swallow anything as long as there is some sort of arms-limitation agreement to be signed.

If they are right, and the West, instead of responding in serious fashion, limits itself to empty words and written protests, then I am convinced that we shall witness the end of detente, the first steps toward a new war. We are again facing a crucial moment: the fate of the democratic states is being decided. A successful liquidation of dissent in the U.S.S.R. will strengthen the more dogmatic and aggressive elements within its Communist Party. Thus, in the struggle for peace, the treatment of human-rights activiss is far more important than the signing of any SALT agreement.

As long as the communist countries continue blatantly to violate human rights, I believe that the single correct course of action for the West is to nullify the Helsinki Agreement. This, of course, would only be a minimum response. For the free world has at its disposal a number of other possible actions that would constitute a more meaningful and painful counterattack. It could cancel technical, technological and scientific aid to the U.S.S.R., stop credits, and end the sale of all computers, drilling equipment, wheat and much else.

About The Author

Yugoslav author and journalist Mihajlo Mihajlov, 44, was arrested three times by the Tito regime — in 1965, 1966 and 1974 — and spent nearly seven years in prison.

His crimes? "Damaging the reputation of a foreign state" (after visiting the U.S.S.R. on a cultural-exchange program, Mihajlov wrote in his book 'Moscow Summer' that "the first 'death camps' were not founded by the Germans, but by the Soviets"); publishing and disseminating "hostile propaganda" (he wrote and sent abroad what he believed to be the truth about his country.)

In Novenber 1977, Mihajlov was granted amnesty during the Helsinki Agreement follow-up conference. He obtained a visa and came to the United States last June. Shortly thereafter, a new wave of trials began in the Soviet Union's campaign against human rights — and Mihajlov wrote this essay.

GROWING OLDER

Flexitime Allows Part-Time Work

By LOU COTTIN

We seniors have lived out our years in boxes of time.

When young, we went to school. In our middle years, we worked. In our later years, usually after 65, we retired and drew Social Security.

Our unions had won for us the eight-hour day and the 35-to 40-hour workweek. Our lives settled into a fixed pattern of working time, leisure time and sleeping time.

There has been some new thinking about the neatly boxed rigidities of the working schedule. A number of factories and offices have conducted experiments on a program called "flexitime" or "flexi-work."

The basic mechanics of flexitime are simple.

The hours during which everyone is expected to work are designated "core time." This period is commonly four to six hours long, spanning the middle of what was formerly the regular workday.

But instead of starting at a specific time, employees can choose to begin work any time within a span of several hours. Similarly, a single quitting time is replaced by a band of several hours following core time.

If a certain number of hours must be put in each day, a worker's quitting time is determined by the hour at which he or she began work that day. In more flexible systems, credit and debit hours can be carried over to other days; a worker can elect to stop work any time after the core period. The flexitime idea originated in Sweden and is also being tried in Germany, Switzerland and Great Britain.

In the United States, flexitime systems have been explanded to include time sharing, which usually involves workers who want to taper off their working hours. Under this system, older men and women who are not ready for full retirement can share a job by each working half a day.

One worker might put in four hours on a machine five mornings a week. The other works four hours on the same machine during the afternoon. Both go home after four hours of work.

In other cases, one worker puts in two and a half days a week on the job. His or her partner works the remaining two and a half days.

Companies that have experimented with flexitime have shown that the system has substantial benefits. Productivity per man-hour usually rises. Accidents decrease.

As we know, the retirement age is now legally established at 70. One of the many good reasons for the change was that a man or woman is not really finished at age 65. Indeed, many now believe that mandated retirement at any age is harmful to industry and workers alike. As long as a person can do a job, that person should be allowed to keep it.

But the years between 65 and 70 can be hard on older workers.

The changes caused by retirement are emotional as well as financial. A sudden change in status from worker to retiree can be traumatic. Working fewer hours a day or fewer days a week can help people adjust to some of the realities of total retirement.

Now we get to those of us who are already retired. For 1979, the Social Security earning limit for retirees between 65 and 72 increased $500, from $4,000 to $4,500.

For many retirees, $4,500 is just the amount we need to add to our Social Security checks.

We should, therefore, look for half-time jobs at our regular trades or professions. Offices and plants that have adopted flexitime may need our special skills.

That way, we don't cut into our Social Security income. And we gain the dollars we need to live more graciously during this semi-retirement period. Additionally, we keep our hand in the productive process.

This could make our early months or years of retirement less difficult. And the extra income might enable us to save a small bundle as protection against rising medical costs that are not covered by Medicare.

Industry and labor should get together on flexitime. A new category should be set up for workers who want to work part-time after age 65.

Californians Favor Low Speed Limit

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A majority of Californians admit they often exceed the 55 mph speed limit, but many drivers favor maintaining the law to reduce the accident rate, The California Poll, a private survey organization, reported Wednesday.

The desire to maintain the speed limit is stronger in southern California where 57 percent favor it, with most of them believing it saves fuel, the poll found. In northern California, 42 percent favor maintaining the law.

TODAY'S STOCK PRICES

Mart Mixed In Heavy Trading

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed in heavy trading today, running into some resistance after the rally of the past several sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up more than 5 points in early trading, was off .26 at 844.59 by noontime.

The average piled up a net gain of 29.10 points from Monday through Thursday.

Gainers held a 2-1 lead over losers in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts say the market's early-March rally, accompanied by rising volume, has been fueled more by hopes than by any concrete developments.

Traders seem optimistic, they said, that President Carter's Middle East trip will lead to a peace agreement between Egypt and Israel.

Some investors also apparently feel that interest rates might be approaching a turning point after their sharp and steady rise last year.

By mid-morning today, however, brokers said sellers who had been waiting for a rise in prices like the one this week began to make their presence felt.

Gambling stocks turned downward after a sharp runup in recent days. Caesars World, which hit a new high on Thursday, fell 3½ to 59½; Bally Manufacturing was off 1¼ at 64⅛, and Del E. Webb dropped 1⅛ to 22⅞.

The NYSE's composite index rose .13 to 55.94, and the American Stock Exchange market value index was up .43 at 167.12.

S&L Group Files Paper

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — An application for a new Lubbock savings and loan association, with proposed capital of $2,000,000, was filed here Thursday with the Texas Savings and Loan Department.

Former Savings and Loan Commissioner W. Sale Lewis, Austin, filed the application on behalf of the proposed Lubbock Savings and Loan Association, to be located at 82nd Street and Indiana Avenue in southwest Lubbock.

Lewis noted that the name is that used formerly by a Lubbock association but was abandoned upon merger.

Listed as principals in the application are W.L. Bates, D.D. Tusha, Dr., Royce C. Lewis Jr., Adele McGinty, Willard R. Paine, Robert C. Taylor, Max R. Tarbox and William F. Warnick, all of Lubbock.

"We've got a good group," Lewis said.

The application will be sent for a hearing most likely in late May or early June.

The hearing will be conducted by an examiner, with Savings and Loan Commissioner Alvis Vandygriff then considering the charter application.

Portions Of Carter's Rationing Plans Draw Fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter may be forced to rewrite parts of his standby gasoline rationing and energy conservation plan to win Senate approval, Senate energy leaders are saying.

The rationing plan is in deep trouble unless the administration changes it to make more gasoline available to rural Americans, suggested Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La.

And portions of Carter's standby energy-conservation plan calling for a ban on weekend gasoline sales and restricting outdoor advertising also are drawing heavy congressional fire.

The standby plan cannot be amended by Congress so any changes must be made by the administration.

Johnston, chairman of a subcommittee studying the rationing proposal, cited strong Senate opposition to the plan as currently written, especially among senators from the West.

Johnston said in an interview that he will urge the full Senate Energy Committee to ask the administration to revamp the plan to give states more say in how much gasoline individuals would receive.

"Gasoline allocations should be granted to each state based on average use within that state," Johnston said.

Committee Chairman Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., also raised the possibility Thursday that the administration might have to amend its proposals to win Senate approval.

He disclosed that administration officials had indicated a willingness to congressional leaders to make some changes in the plan, if necessary, to win its approval.

Jackson said he believes the overall prospect for congressional approval of the energy-conservation plan, including the controversial section on rationing, seems good.

"We have to have in place a rationing plan that we can call on in case of further blow-up in the Mideast," Jackson told a reporter.

Both houses must approve the standby plan within 60 days of last week's submission to Congress for it to take effect. The proposals cannot be amended.

Even if the standby plan is approved, any attempt by the president to invoke it could be rejected by either house within a 15-day period.

Some hearings have already been held in both the House and Senate on the program and more are planned for later this month.

The standby rationing plan, which officials say will be invoked only as a last resort, would allocate a certain amount of gasoline for each registered motor vehicle in the country.

Although no quantities were specified, officials have generally indicated that a ration of two gallons per day might result from the kind of crisis — at least a 20 percent cut in supplies — that could prompt rationing.

That would be grossly inadequate in the West and other rural areas where average driving distances are long, Johnston said.

He also said he believes Congress will reject that part of the plan restricting neon and other advertising signs, which even the administration has acknowledged is largely symbolic and would only save about 4,400 barrels of oil a day.

"This discriminates against one industry all because the administration considers it to be a symbol," Johnston said.

Both Johnston and Jackson said the proposal to close gasoline stations on weekend days also may have trouble making it through the Senate as written.

Jackson said moves will likely be made to persuade the administration to give states more leeway in deciding when to ban gasoline sales.

The Energy Committee chairman said that the part of the president's plan which appears to be in the best shape is mandatory temperature controls for public buildings of 65 degrees in the winter and 80 degrees in the summer.

Officials say this would save nearly 600,000 barrels of oil daily, roughly equal to the shortage caused by the Iranian production cutoff.

The adminstration has said it will shortly announce another set of steps tailored to respond to the halt in Iranian oil imports — including measures to encourage more use of natural gas and to relax environmental controls over gasoline and coal.

Kennedy Calls For Tougher Hospital Cost Restrictions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is taking its case for federal hospital cost controls to Capitol Hill, but the chairman of the Senate panel hearing the administration's case says the proposal isn't tough enough.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said that hospitals for too long have been reimbursed at "whatever limit they wanted."

"In our fight against inflation, we cannot take the easy route and cut programs that lack the lobbying strength of the hospital industry. We cannot pick on the weak while the special interests run wild," the chairman of the Senate health subcommittee said in remarks prepared for today's hearing.

The administration bill would give hospitals until year's end to slow rising costs or face mandatory federal ceilings. The bill's "national voluntary limit" for fee increases in 1979 is 9.7 percent. However, that figure could be relaxed if industry costs exceed expectations. Those costs also would have a bearing on any future mandatory limits.

Kennedy said more than two-thirds of the nation's hospitals increased their rates more than 9.7 percent last year and predicted new statistics will show even more hospitals are raising their rates in excess of that percentage this year.

Stating the administration's case for the bill, a weakened version of one that failed to clear Congress last year, were Joseph A. Califano Jr., secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, and Charles Schultze, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers.

The hospital industry insisted it is acting responsibly to hold down costs.

John Alexander McMahon, president of the American Hospital Association, said in prepared testimony that the administration's approach "would lead to serious disruption in the delivery of hospital care to patients."

He said the industry expects costs to rise by about 14 percent this year. If this projection is correct, it will be difficult even to achieve the industry's self-imposed goal of holding the increase to 11.6 percent, he said.

Michael D. Bromberg, executive director of the Federation of American Hospitals, predicted the savings the adminstration envisions would occur only if hospitals postponed replacing equipment and modernizing facilities, failed to add new services, eliminated services and postponed elective surgeries.

Schultze, in his prepared testimony, said the administration's proposal "is strong enough effectively to limit hospital cost increases, but flexible enough to account for the special features of individual hospitals."

He said hospital care, which cost Americans $183 billion last year, is rising at about 15.3 percent a year.

Schultze maintained that the rapid rate of increase can be attributed to the shift to more expensive procedures, more tests and more services in hospitals rather than to increasing wages or prices.

He estimated that over the next five years, the administration plan, if enacted, would reduce employer premiums for health care plans about $14 billion, shrink Medicare costs by $19 billion, cut payroll costs more than $5 billion a year and whittle public health program costs by $9 billion.

The president wants Medicare, Medicaid and Blue Cross, the major payers of American hospital bills, to be able to refuse payments to hospitals which exceed the mandatory limit.

The Carter plan also contains a system of penalties and incentives to win industry support for compliance.

The hearing, the first on the administration's revised approach, was being held at the Children's Hospital National Medical Center, a private, non-profit hospital.

Loss Of Spy Posts Hurts SALT Odds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., reports the loss of electronic spy stations in Iran leaves the United States unable to check Soviet compliance with crucial missile restrictions in the emerging SALT treaty.

In releasing excerpts of a speech he is scheduled to deliver today at the Forum Club of Houston, Jackson urged the administration to admit the treaty would contain this and other "verificaton" loopholes so Americans may "decide whether to accept the risks that the administration is inviting us to share."

His challenge, though not unexpected, underscores the problems President Carter will face when he submits a new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty for Senate ratification.

Jackson, a defense expert and an outspoken critic of Soviet policies, will be a pivotal figure in any SALT II ratification debate and his views will prevail with many conservatives.

Jackson made clear he will oppose or at least try to change any SALT treaty that does not provide for full verification of Soviet compliance.

Rejecting the contrary assurances of administration officials, he said the loss of U.S. electronic listening posts in Iran, near the Soviet border, had done "irreperable harm for years to come" to U.S. surveillance capabilities.

"However much some may seek to minimize the impact of the loss of Iranian facilities and our ability to verify Soviet compliance with SALT II, the fact is that we now find ourselves unable to learn whether crucial developments prohibited by SALT are actually taking place," Jackson said.

"Even before the recent events in Iran," he said, "the emerging SALT II treaty contained a number of provisions that we are unable to verify" — including, he said, whether the Russians were upgrading the capability of their "Backfire" bomber or complying with the agreed range for cruise missiles.

"Since Iran," he added, "We have lost our ability to verify Soviet adherence to the ban on new types of ballistic missiles that is a central part of the treaty."

Jackson said the full range of verification problems constitutes "a risk that it is imprudent for the United States to take."

"I urge the administration to acknowldge that a number of provisions of the emerging treaty and protocol simply cannot be verified," he said. "The Senate and the American people can then decide whether to accept the risks that the administration is inviting us to share."

Foreign Students Checked

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In its latest effort to ensure foreign students in the United States are indeed going to school, the Justice Department is cracking down on colleges that allow aliens to get student visas without enrolling.

The department announced Thursday it has begun a criminal investigation of possible fraudulent recruiting methods by colleges in the Los Angeles area, Vermont and Connecticut.

U.S. attorneys offices are investigationg allegations that some recruiters have sold or passed forms to foreigners, clearing them for entrance to the United States on student visas whether or not they actually go to school.

Other steps are being taken by the Immigration and Naturalization Service to make sure the abuses end. Attorney General Griffin Bell first ordered the crackdown on foreign students in response to violent demonstrations by Iranian students, who he said may have violated terms of their visas.

The department wants to "get a better handle" on how many foreigners hold student visas, spokesman John Russell said.

A recent INS check indicated there are 235,509 foreign students enrolled in U.S. colleges and universities, but immigration and Justice officials have no idea how many other foreigners hold student visas and are not in school.

Russell said the INS has discovered that recruiters for many of those colleges are selling foreigners blank I-20 forms, stating an individual has been accepted for enrollment and pre-signed by college officials.

The forms, which can be used to obtain a student visa, have sold overseas for up to $80, Russell said.

"The student puts his name on it and shows it to the consulates overseas, and it allows them to obtain a student visa to come into this country," he said. "There's no control to see if the student who comes here actually enrolls in the school."

Terrence Adamson, chief department spokesman, said schools that have issued presigned I-20 forms "are being informed by letter that continuation of this practice may result in withdrawal of their authority to enroll foreign students under INS regulations."

He said the Justice Department may require schools to send completed enrollment forms to the State Department before issuance of the visa.

Senators Decide To Postpone Imposing Extra Income Limit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, without a roll-call vote, has decided to delay imposing for four years an $8,600 limit on how much its members may earn above their $57,500 salary.

They are thus free to earn an extra $25,000 a year for speeches and unlimited additional income from law practices and other private sources.

Stevens, an Alaska Republican, said that, "while it is not easy to provide college educations to five children, keep homes in two of the highest cost cities in the nation and travel back and forth regularly, I have not lost money while here."

"But I know of others in this body who are less fortunate, with more children, less savings, and higher costs, for whom these arbitrary limits are a burden," he added.

Stevens was supported by Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., who noted that "we come to this body in different circumstances. Some of us have families in different stages of growth."

Educational costs and inflationary pressures, Moynihan said, are "a cloud" hanging over senators.

While none of the fewer than 20 members present requested an on-the-record vote, Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio; Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz.; and Max Baucus, D-Mont., said they wanted to be on the record as opposed to delaying the income limitation.

The Senate had approved the $8,600 lid in 1977 during a controversy over raising congressional salaries from $44,600 to $57,500.

Stevenson Looks For Series To Fit Personality

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — McLean Stevenson's odyssey of four TV series in as many years is like no other in recent Hollywood memory.

Stevenson, an eminently likeable man off-screen and on, is a personality in search of a viable vehicle.

The tall, lean McLean, a relative of late presidential aspirant Adlai Stevenson, came to acting relatively late in life after dropping out of Northwestern Law School and becoming assistant director of Athletics at that university. He was also a hospital supply house salesman.

He studied acting in New York's Music Theatre Academy and worked as an understudy at Manhattan's famed Upstairs at the Downstairs club. Stevenson put in time in summer stock, TV commercials and guest shots.

After moving to Hollywood he did some comedy writing for the Smothers Brothers and became a regular on "The Doris Day Show" and "The Tim Conway Comedy Hour."

Viewers discovered Stevenson in "M-A-S-H" playing Lt. Col. Henry Blake, the laconic commander of the fouled-up hospital unit.

In actuality, "M-A-S-H" was Stevenson's third series and was followed in quick succession by three more — an unsuccessful variety show, "The McLean Stevenson" sitcom in which he played the head of a family and "In The Beginning," portraying a Roman Catholic priest.

Currently McLean stars in the title role of "Hello, Larry," another sitcom in whirh he plays a divorced father of two daughters trying to raise the girls as a single parent.

He joined "Hello, Larry" a scant 10 days after receiving word that "In The Beginning" was canceled.

Obviously, somebody up there loves McLean Stevenson, who is now in his sixth series. At the moment that somebody is Fred Silverman who, as president and chief executive officer of NBC, is one of the most powerful men in television.

Silverman personally telephoned Stevenson when "In the Beginning" was canceled by CBS to say that NBC had a first-rate series for him.

The merry-go-round effect of one series after another has left Stevenson somewhat shaken. Since leaving "M-A-S-H" he has been a square peg in a round hole.

Television executives and producers like him. The public has demonstrated a fondness for his low-key style of comedy. But Stevenson hasn't really caught on with a hit.

"Hello, Larry" so far has a spotty Nielsen record. Sometimes it is respectably rated, sometimes it isn't.

Stevenson, analyzing "Hello, Larry," says it started off on the wrong foot.

"We couldn't get the ensemble together in the pilot," he said. "Partly because there was a time element involved. We didn't know if it was to be an 8:30, family-oriented show or a 9:30, more sophisticated show.

"After the first six weeks we made a complete turnaround in the direction of the series. The emphasis was put on Larry and his daughters instead of Larry's job as a radio disc jockey.

"In the first episodes Larry was a buffoon, the cliche TV father. He was changed into a man dealing with the teen-age problems of his daughter, a strong, secure father who takes on some of the responsibilities of a mother.

"I'm a divorced father personally. The two girls who play my daughters, Kim Richards and Donna Wilkes, both live with single parents. We've been communicating with one another off the set as well as on.

"We're developing a real relationship which is beginning to show on the screen. They're behaving like real kids and I'm reacting as a genuine father, not a TV caricature.

"I also made the mistake when I began the role by announcing I was the new Bonnie Franklin of TV (One Day At A Time) — the single parent raising a couple of daughters. The show started that way, but that's not the way it is now.

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

Q: Is Peter ("Pink Panther") Sellers and his newest wife (his fourth or fifth) still married? — F.R., Long Beach, Calif.

A: Yes. When last heard from Sellers was still smitten by 23-year-old actress Lynn Frederick — the fourth Mrs. Sellers. Sellers is going to remake "Prisoner of Zenda" co-starring his spouse. "She's completely unselfish," he says of her. "She doesn't have this driving ambition, this hardness, this killer instinct that a lot of actresses have. She's virtually a reincarnation of my mother. And she's also a clairvoyant."

Sellers is currently excited about the progress he and his wife have made in thought transfer. And, coupled with recovery from a near-fatal illness, he has a philosophical outlook about the future. "Suffice it to say that I'm quite happy in my mind, and if I died at the instant you stopped your tape recorder," Sellers told Freddie Robbins, "it wouldn't matter that much to me. Lynn would understand and take care of everything."

A: Practically. She's already collected an Oscar, a Tony, a Grammy and two Emmys; but she still isn't entirely satisfied with her statuettes and plaques until she wins AGVA's "Georgie." Currently filming "Anatomy of a Seduction," Rita laments, "If I hadn't won an Emmy for my performance on 'Rockford Files' last season, I'd have a good shot at this year's Emmy for my role in 'Seduction' — it's that strong." In it Rita plays the mother of a teenager having an affair with her best friend.

Q: Weren't the makers of the film version of the best-seller "Caravans," leary about doing all the filming in Iran, or on the border? — B.D., Eugene, Ore.

A: You can be sure that before the actors, their agents, managers and technical crewmen flew to an embattled war zone they were better covered, insurance-wise, than the combatants. Most of the filming was done in the rugged, arid terrain surrounding Isfahan, the ancient capital of Persia, prior to the recent violence.

Anthony Quinn, Jennifer O'Neill, Joseph Cotten, Christopher Lee, Barry Sullivan and Michael Sarrazin spent months shooting the picture and gathered enough conversation material to appear on every talk show without repetition. An added attraction is Behooz Vosouthi, alleged top film star in Iran.

"Caravans" is Quinn's fourth desert feature. He had previously "fought" in "The Lost Command," "Lawrence of Arab and "Mohammad — Messenger of God" shot in Morocco and Libya's Sahara regions.

"Instead of waiting for wardrobe to buy new old clothes for my character," he explained, "I found I could get the right look by buying my costumes from the natives. That way (almost by the smell of the soot and dirt) I knew they were authentic."

Miss O'Neill and Sarrazin, camera buffs, said they took so many photos on location, they've been approached by a publisher to write and illustrate a picture book on Iran. Quinn's big kick was getting an illustrated children's book signed by a Mohammad Kahnemoee — who, he later discovered, was the camel tender who played that role in the movie.

Bob Orben's salty sally: "President Carter worked out an agreement to prevent Israel from being invaded and Egypt from being attacked. Now if he could only keep Billy from getting bombed!"

Send your questions to Hy Gardner, "Glad You Asked That," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 11748, Chicago, Ill. 60611. Marilyn and Hy Gardner will answer as many questions as they can in their column, but the volume of mail makes personal replies impossible.

FILMING MOVIE — Cutline: Anthony Quinn and Jennifer O'Neill filmed James Michener's best-seller "Caravans" in Iran — before the recent violence in that country.

Flashback Scenes Tell Maples' Story

By JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two people love each other, marry, have children, live in suburban prosperity — and their marriage falls apart. Why?

That's the question asked — but not answereb — in "Too Far To Go," an NBC movie based on the Maples short stories by John Updike, without the roles of Joan and Richard Maple brilliantly portrayed by Blythe Danner and Michael Moriarty. The film airs Monday at 8 p.m., Central time.

The Maples' story is artfully told in a series of flashbacks as the couple go through the last days of their marriage, deciding how and when to tell their four semi-grown children, seeing lawyers, but mainly, looking back.

The flashback scenes range from the early years of the marriage, with the husband tenderly kissing his sleeping wife and telling her how much he loves her (which, of course, she can't hear) through the later bitterness of jealousy and adultery to a final lethargy which proves lethal to the already ailing marriage.

As the finishing touch of irony, the Maples' marriage ends with a kiss.

This is a film for people who like nuances and can live with the illogic of people. Those who want sharply delineated relationships, easily defined villains and victims, should go elsewhere for their entertainment.

Entertainment of an entirely different and very elegant sort will be on hand over the next weeks when PBS puts on the new Masterpiece Theatre series — "Lillie" — the story of the fabulous beauty Lillie Langtry.

The show's first episode: to air March 11, 9-10 p.m. Eastern time (check local listings) introduces Lillie — then still called Emilie LeBreton — as an adolescent tomboy from the Isle of Jersey, where her father is church dean. She suffers her first humiliating taste of London society and marries Edward Langtry, who she thinks is a rich yachtsman.

But the series doesn't really to life until a couple of episodes later, when the Jersey Lillie begins to come into her own, turning away King Leopold of Belgium but not the prince of Wales — Queen Victoria's son Bertie who will become Edward VII.

Francesca Annis, a lovely readhead, plays Lillie with an enigmatic smile and serene self-possession, as her beauty draws such diverse admirers as Oscar Wilde and Prince Louis of Battenberg.

Alistair Cooke, in introducing the series, makes the point that Lillie was more than what the French would call "a grand horizontal" — her charm lay not only in her beauty, but in her intelligence and wit as well.

There must always by a mystery about great beauties — and Miss Annis preserves Lillie's in the gorgeous costumes amid the beautiful sets that have became trademarks of Masterpiece Theatre presentations.

Lillie was naughty — but how nice to watch her.

Chermak's Magic Saves 'CHiPs' For NBC-TV

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cy Chermak is not an humble man. He's a bit pompous, and something of a braggart.

There are lots of men like that in Hollywood. But Chermak is rare among them.

Chermak's show, "CHiPs," and "Little House on the Prarie" are NBC's only weekly series holding their own in the ratings.

"It's wonderful at NBC when you produce one of only two hits they have," he says. He beams self-content. "It promulgates an attitude of being important to NBC. They don't (mess) with you when you've got one of their two hit shows."

It's hard to resent Chermak's brand of bragging. It's delivered straight, and with a smile.

"It's difficult to be humble when you've got their only hit. They return your telephone calls. It's very nice."

Chermak calls himself the "series doctor," a producer-for-hire with a knack of saving other producer's flops. Among his rescues: "Ironsides," "The Virginian" and now "CHiPs."

"CHiPs," in case you don't watch TV on Saturday night, is a cop show without blaring guns. Its action is in stunts — chases, car wrecks and the like. After a very shaky beginning two seasons ago, "CHiPs" has made its way to the upper half in the ratings and appears to be getting stronger.

"It started out as a ... flop," he recalls, "there was a change in management and they brought me in. We got a very marginal renewal. But by the end of the first season, we'd changed it from a flop to something that was very respectable."

Chermak says he watched the first 10 episodes of the show when it was really struggling. "They said to me, 'What do you think?' I said it was a dog. They said, 'Aw, c'mon, it's not that bad.' I told them, yes it was, it was dreadful. They asked me if I would do it, and I said yes.

"I thought the potential was enormous. I said to myself, 'I can be a hero with this show.' The ingredients were there. Larry Wilcox and Erik Estrada (the show's stars) were young, attractive and exciting. And there were stunts. Before 'CHiPs,' if you wanted to see stunts and chases, something like 'Smokey and the Bandit,' you had to get out of your chair and go to a drive-in movie.

You may not believe this, but Chermak has a fine sense of perspective about "CHiPs."

"Let's talk about quality," he says. "To me, quality means a show that can be enjoyed by a broad spectrum of the audience. As a quality show, 'CHiPs' is not high drama. Lawrence Olivier is never gonna call me and ask if he can guest on the show.

"And I don't know if we're ever going to win an Emmy. Every real good dramtic show could beat us out. And we're never going to be a comedy.

"We're just a fast-paced action adventure, well-done, and dammit, there are an awful lot of people who want to come home at night after work, kick off their shoes and have a little fun. The show is fun to watch."

Committee To Vote On School Fund

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Education and Labor Committee will vote on legislation designed to set up a $30 million fund to help schools replace asbestos originally installed for soundproofing and fire retardation.

Asbestos has recently been found to be a cancer-causing agent. The legislation approved by a subcommittee this week would help the schools that used asbestos to replace it with other material. The fund would be paid for with assessments against companies that had produced asbestos.

Hitchcock Honored For Lifetime In Crime

HITCHCOCK ACKNOWLEDGES AWARD — Master of suspense and humor, Alfred Hitchcock, 79, received the Seventh Annual American Film Institute Life Achievement Award during a testimonial dinner-program in his honor in Beverly Hills, Calif., this week. HOLLYWOOD (AP) — It was a macabre kind of celebration, with the 79-year-old guest of honor being saluted for a lifetime in crime.

Alfred Hitchcock, the master of the suspense film, was honored earlier this week with the Lifetime Achievement Award of the American Film Institute. His misdeeds, ranging from stabbings ("Psycho") to garrottings ("Dial M for Murder") to simple shootings ("The Man Who Knew Too Much"), were portrayed on the screens of the Beverly Hilton Hotel.

"Hitch is a gentleman farmer who raises gooseflesh," said Ingrid Bergman, mistress of ceremonies for the program, which will be telecast Monday on CBS.

Actors who have appeared in Hitchcock films gave testimony to the director's authority on the set. Miss Bergman told of protesting that she couldn't portray an emotion the director asked for in the 1945 "Spellbound."

James Stewart, star of "Rear Window" and "Vertigo," remarked:

"When you work with Hitch, you don't do a scene two ways; you do it one way — his."

Said Janet Leigh, the victim of "Psycho": "Actors are there to accommodate him."

John Forsythe, of "The Trouble With Harry," added: "Hitch's genius is that he can put so much life in death."

Others appearing briefly on the program included such co-workers as Teresa Wright, Jane Wyman, Edith Head, Rod Taylor, Vera Miles, Sean Connery, Judith Anderson, Cary Grant and daughter Patricia Hitchcock.

Although ailing with arthritis, Hitchcock was able to walk to the table of honor on his own, amid a standing ovation. His wife for 53 years, Alma Reville Hitchcock, sat beside him.

Hitchcock remained his usual droll self in the acceptance speech, terming the award "meaningful because it comes from my fellow dealers in celluloid."

"After all, when a man is found guilty of murder and condemned to death, it always makes him feel much better to know it was done by a jury of his friends and neighbors ... with the help of an inadequate attorney."

William Makepeace Thackeray, novelist, died in 1863.

'Homage To Diaghilev' Highlighted By Nureyev

By MARY CAMPBELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Rudolf Nureyev is the dancing soul of poetry as a guest in the Joffrey Ballet's worthy "Homage to Diaghilev" which opened Wednesday night for four weeks at Broadway's Mark Hellinger Theater.

The program is the same four carefully reconstructed works at every performance, with Nureyev dancing in three, in roles created by the famous Vaslav Nijinksy. The season was almost sold out before opening night.

Russian impresario Serge Diaghilev, who died 50 years ago, is the man who made the emergence of modern ballet possible. He believed painting and music should star along with choreography and dancers.

For "Petrouchka," which begins the current program, Stravinsky wrote the music, Fokine choreographed and Benois did scenery and costumes. For the jolly "Parade," which Nureyev is not in, Cocteau wrote the story, Satie wrote the music, Massine choreographed and Picasso painted curtain, scenery and Cubist costumes.

Today, "Le Spectre de la Rose" and "Afternoon of a Faun" look like poems expressed in dance. Nureyev danced the spirit of the rose in a girl's dream, with masculine fervor in his solo, and gentleness in his duet with the sleeping girl. He wisely stayed away from the original pink-petal costume and wore a gray leotard with a few dark red petals sewn around the top. He was fine, although at 40, his strenuous solo does not look as effortless as it once did.

As the faun, to Debussy's mesmerizing music, Nureyev has a brief pas de deux with a nymph and has to convey the emotions of an animal who falls instantly, rivetingly, hopelessly in love with another kind of being. When these ballets were new in 1911 and 1912, people swooned at the final exit of the spirit of the rose and were scandalized at the erotic ending of the faun's afternoon.

From excitement, these ballets have come to represent lovely poems or pastels. Nureyev and the Joffrey dancers have drawn the colors delicately, with subtle dramatic tension.

Nureyev is one of the best Petrouchkas ever. As the puppet with human feelings, at first he has an uncomprehending air. In the section, "Up in Petrouchka's Room," he poignantly struggles to get an idea, quickly showing off when the girl puppet appears.

Nureyev, although clearly the star of the evening, is not its only asset. The live music sounded good. The St. Petersburg fair scenes in "Petrouchka" are crisp and lively. The dancers are good, especially Christian Holder in "Parade."

And the huge backdrop curtain by Bakst for "Faun," now in the Pompidou Museum in Paris, was reproduced beautifully for this season.

OBESITY WIDESPREAD

Obesity is more widespread in the United States than malnutrition from hunger, The Conference Board notes. Nearly 40 percent of the American people are overweight, according to recent estimates.

NBC Chairman Plans Early Retirement

NEW YORK (AP) — Julian Goodman, who worked his way up at NBC from news writer to president and then board chairman, will retire May 31.

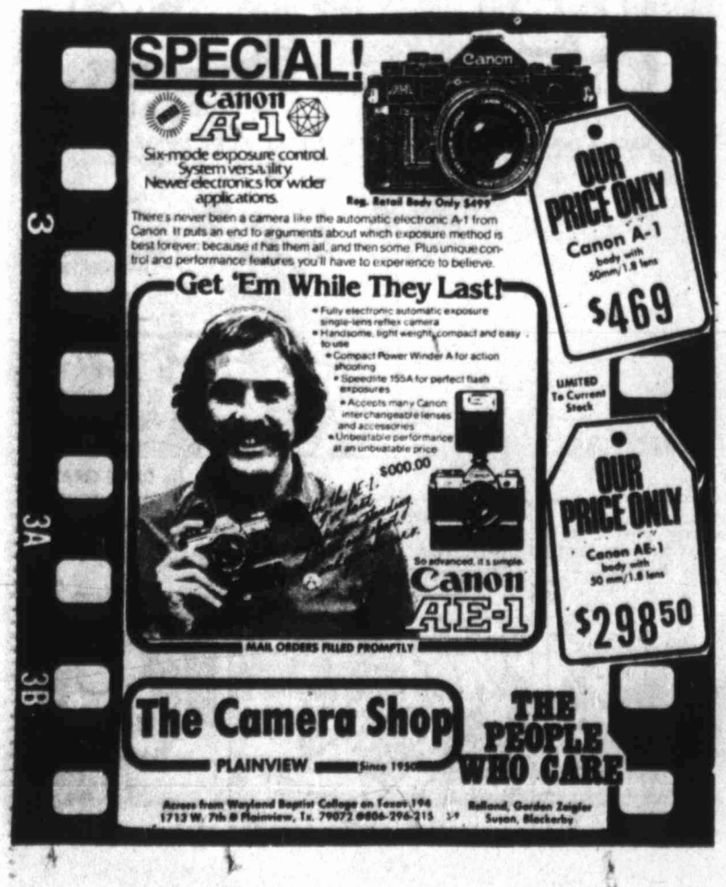
Goodman, a native of Glasgow, Ky., will take early retirement after less than a year as chairman of NBC's executive committee, which was created last October.

He is best known for his 20-year association with NBC News, which began in 1945 when he was hired as a writer at WRC, the network's radio station in Washington, D.C.

Shortly thereafter, he was named manager of the radio network and became manager of news and special events for NBC's television network in 1951.

Goodman was assigned to the network's New York headquarters in 1959 as director of news and public affairs, and was appointed vice president for news in 1961 and executive vice president for news in 1965.

Two months later, Goodman was named the network's chief executive officer.

He was president of NBC from 1966 to 1974.


Goodman is a member of the Associated Press Board of Directors and has a number of honors to his credit, including the National Association of Broadcasters Distinguished Service Award which he received in 1976.
