WASHINGTON By George Durso

Jobless—
Statistics, generally, are somewhat, sometimes are downright unpleasant. The American Federation of Labor is about to issue a report on the employment situation which may fall in the latter category. They are recommended to all business men for study, for they will show exactly what this Nation is up against.

Figures now in course of final preparation will show there are still about 12,000,000 men and women out of work.
Rouy reports have been bandied about in Wall Street and elsewhere that 4,000,000 have been returned to jobs since the start of the New Deal. Bank, unfortunately, as a matter of fact, the number unemployed between March 1 and June 1 stood at 1,800,000. Since the latter date the upward trend has been negligible. The gain for this month over last will be about 7-10 of one per cent.

As July draws to a close the trade union unemployment trend continues to show no improvement over June. The building trades and the metal trades are going to show a decrease in jobs for July despite the fact that wholesale prices in those industries are leading the field in returning to a 1928 level.

Trade union employment is the backbone of the situation because it trickles into so many other lines. Furthermore, A. F. of L. information is going to show the auto and coal industries are still holding back in putting men to work. Steel was in the same boat until recently.

Drive—
Union labor meantime is letting no grass grow under its feet. Those on the inside at headquarters will tell you confidentially, and publicly, that over 30 brand new national charters have been granted since July 1.

This is a result of the most successful drives undertaken in organized labor's history. You may get an idea of how fast men and women are being unionized by considering the fact that before it started there was a grand total of 135 national and international charters.

And out in the field new locals are being formed right and left. Membership in old ones is swelling like buds in Spring. Crews of organizers in automobiles are working night and day in every section.

Look for a statement on this about the first of next week from National Secretary Frank Morrison.

Friction—
It is going to take all the finesse and diplomacy that President Roosevelt and General Hugh Johnson possess to avert an open showdown between industry and organized labor. Industrialists who are here literally by the thousands are complaining bitterly against unionization. It seems to be their one big remaining objection to NRA's progress. Although many are shaking in their shoes they have determined to go along with the administration, but they're having a lot of trouble getting the A. F. of L. past their tonils.

Dry Goods Group Discusses Code, Names Central Committee Members; Grocers' Leaders Meet This Evening

In what was reported to have developed into a heated session at intervals, the dry goods, ready-to-wear, shoe and allied trades of Big Spring Thursday evening discussed plans for joining in President Roosevelt's Industrial Recovery campaign and complying with his blanket re-employment agreement. The conference resulted in election of a committee of five to draw up a plan for complying with the president's code upon which all merchants in the group will attempt to agree.

President's Agreement In Mail Friday

Big Spring employers Friday were taking from their mail boxes President Roosevelt's official notification of his Re-employment Agreement, including copies of the agreement, to be signed by those willing to comply with its provisions and a Certificate of Compliance. Enclosed with the agreement and certificates were self-addressed envelopes for mailing the signed agreement. The envelopes were addressed to the Department of Commerce at Houston.

The Certificate of Compliance must be presented at the local post office at or after Aug. 1. When it is presented insignia of membership will be delivered. The insignia, shown on this page of The Herald, will signify that the recipient is complying with the Re-employment agreement.

The Re-employment Agreement is prefaced by this message: "To Every Employer: "This agreement is part of a nation-wide plan to raise wages, create employment and thus increase purchasing power and restore business. This plan depends on united action by all employers. For this reason I ask you, as an employer, to do your part by signing."

Beer Vote In County Is Not Yet Assured

No Indication Of Filing Date For Petition Is Seen Here

Voters of this county will ballot August 28 on national and state prohibition repeal and legalizing sale of 3.2 beverages. Whether they will voice an opinion on local option is still a matter of conjecture.

Petitions calling for a decision from the electorate concerning local option are still littered about town, presumably awaiting sufficient signatures. At any rate, they have not been presented to the county commissioners court for action, nor is there any indication from those pushing the petitions when they will be.

Summer Vegetable Salad
Marinate separately in French dressing equal quantities of sliced cooked beets, asparagus tips, green onions chopped in quarter-inch slices, diced celery. On each salad plate arrange 4 lettuce leaves and place a mound of each vegetable in the leaves. Fill the center of the plate with chopped, seasoned hard boiled eggs.

Eggs Add Protein To Diet And Lessen Meat Content

Rich in minerals and vitamins, delicious and adaptable to many dishes, eggs occupy an important place in the diet. Many very tempting recipes feature eggs as the main ingredient. Such are the recipes suggested below.

- Basic Omelet Recipe
- 4 EGGS.
4 tablespoons cold water or milk.
2 tablespoons butter.
1-2 teaspoon paprika.
1-2 teaspoon salt.
- Beat eggs slightly, add liquid, salt and paprika. Melt butter in the pan and pour in egg mixture, stir slightly at first, then let it cook slowly for 2 minutes. Lift with fork so uncooked egg mixture may be distributed. Fold outside edges toward the center and turn out on platter folded side down. Just before the omelet is rolled, jelly, jams, chopped vegetables or mushrooms may be added. If sweet filling is used dust the omelet with powdered sugar.
- Frozen Strawberry Omelet
- 1 pint strawberries.
3 eggs.
1 tablespoon sugar.
6 tablespoons confectioner's sugar.
- Wash strawberries and add granulated sugar. Let stand and strain off juice. Separate eggs and beat the yolks until thick and lemon colored and whites until stiff. Add the berries to the egg yolks. Fold confectioner's sugar into egg whites and combine the two mixtures. To this add about 4 tablespoons of the strawberry juice. Remove cube divisions of the refrigerator tray and pile mixture lightly into trays. Freeze for two hours slice to serve.
- Scrambled Eggs
- 2 tablespoons green pepper.
1 tablespoon butter.
1-2 cup canned tomato soup.
4 eggs.
- Simmer chopped green peppers in butter. Stir in slightly beaten eggs. Scramble all together, seasoning to taste. Cook slowly until dry. Heat tomato soup and pour over eggs just before serving.
- Poached Eggs With Tomato
- 1 slice toast.
1 poached egg.
1 slice bacon.
1 slice tomato.
2 teaspoons cheese.
1 teaspoon cream.
Sauce.
- Cut toast round. Broil the tomato and put on top of toast, then place poached egg on tomato. Melt the cheese with the cream, add few drops sauce and pour over the egg. Garnish with slice of broiled bacon. Serve piping hot. Increase the recipe in proportion to the number of persons to be served.

24 Indicted For Chicago Racketeering

Aaron Sapiro, University Of Chicago Man Included

CHICAGO—Reputable attorneys and industrial arbiters, labor union bosses, plain hoodlums and Al Capone himself were named alike in a blanket indictment Thursday, charging 24 men with bombing, acid throwing, and restraint of legitimate trade through terrorism.

Eminent among the defendants were: Aaron Sapiro, New York attorney, a pioneer organizer of the cooperative marketing movement in the United States, named because he was counsel for nearly a year of the Chicago Laundry Owners association. He quit June 2.

Dr. Benjamin M. Squires, University of Chicago lecturer on economics, federal labor mediator, who was appointed head of the Master Cleaners and Dyers Institute of Chicago for the announced purpose of eradicating the gangster element in that industry and end a war of price cutting, bombing and acid hurling.

Alderman Oscar Nelson, republican leader of the city council, attorney for the Dye House Drivers union.

"Scarface Al" Capone, who might still be the czar of Chicago's outlaw labor racket, ruling by gun, had the government not put him in prison for 11 years on an income tax evasion conviction.

Murray Humphreys, heir to Capone as public enemy No. 1, business boss of the syndicate, a fugitive now from federal indictments charging that he, like Capone, dodged the government's income tax bill.

The state, struck swiftly, surprisingly, during a three months' investigation, two prosecutors had presented 588 witnesses before successive Cook county grand juries. One of the witnesses was Dr. Squires, who, at Reading, Pa., today where he is engaged in arbitration of a hosier workers' strike, expressed astonishment that a jury could have indicted him after his own testimony without signing a waiver of immunity.

State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney dispatched deputies to round up the defendants as soon as the indictment, which had been suppressed since Friday, was made public.

He said he would ask the government to lend Capone, now in prison at Atlanta, to be tried with the rest, so that an Illinois prison cell could be reserved for him when his term in federal penitentiary was over.

The indictments embraced the laundry, carbonated beverage and cleaners and dyers trades in Chicago. Those indicted were connected either with the organized industry, with the labor union involved, or with the underworld enforcement of the alleged conspiracy to

TODAY and TOMORROW

By WA'ITER LIPPMANN

The Crack

Last week's decline on the stock market, as measured by the Herald Tribune's index, erased all the gains since the lows of June 16. This may be more than an interesting coincidence. For it was during the week of June 10 to June 17 that the Administration and the Delegation in London began to fumble the task of monetary management. It was in that week that the first attempt at stabilization was made and rejected, and following that incident the Administration became more and more important with proposals for monetary control. In rather rapid succession statements were issued which not only rejected stabilization, but went on to reject with increasing vehemence all projects for discouraging speculation against the dollar.

That this policy of refusing to exercise any monetary control was the chief cause of the speculation which cracked up last week can scarcely be doubted. Nor can it, I think, be denied that those responsible for monetary policy in Washington were the victims of a confusion of mind, having failed to distinguish between immediate stabilization and a de facto return to the gold standard, which were neither practicable nor desirable, and the sober, orderly management of money, which, for a country off the gold standard, is indispensable. The trouble has not been that the Administration refused to stabilize but that its method of rejecting stabilization was not balanced by a policy to control a speculation in dollar which reflected itself in stock and commodities. The refusal to stabilize the dollar became identified in the minds of speculators with a refusal to manage and control the dollar, whereas in a well conceived policy the decision not to stabilize should have carried with it an increased determination to manage and control.

While the fundamental cause of the extremely unhealthy speculation has been the indecision and indeterminateness of the Administration's monetary policy, an important contributing cause was the excessive efficiency with which bomb, to dynamite, to boycott, and to restrain trade by the terrorist's methods of threats, acid-throwing, window-smashing, and wrecking industrial plants.

American markets are organized to encourage the deep speculative instinct of the American people. Our love of speculation has its roots deep in our history. A nation which has expanded as we have expanded upon the richest natural resources in the world is naturally and inevitably bullish. There is no reason to be astonished that speculation is easier to incite in America than anywhere else in the world. On the whole and in the long run speculation for a rise has always seemed to justify itself.

But this instinct to speculate has just such in the past. In the present, when the economic machinery has become so intricate, speculation is by way of becoming a dangerous vice. That is the reason why it has become necessary to seek out measures to restrain it. It is not easy to devise such measures and even less easy to have the courage to employ them. But the main fact are perfectly clear. It is altogether too easy to buy on the exchanges and much too easy to borrow in order to buy. The trading mechanism is so efficient that, with the large public participation in the markets, the ordinary man scarcely realizes that he has bought into a property when he shares, or that he has gone into debt when his broker sets up a margin account. When to this you add the fact that really understandable information on which to base judgments of value is not available to the ordinary man so that he really buys blind, on tips, under pressure of salesmen, on superstitious hunches and under the invisible influence of pools, you arrive at a condition where, to the large public, the stock market is a gambling casino. It is no exaggeration to say that the average small speculator knows less about his stocks than the man who bets on horses at a race track. The horse he can at least see, but his stocks are abstract symbols communicated to him on the ticker.

If all that happened on the exchanges were that the lambs were shorn, one might say that gamblers must take their losses. But this form of gambling which we indulge in is far more dangerous than horse racing, or roulette, or poker, or the national lotteries which are common in other countries. Our gambling is inextricably entangled with business and agriculture, and whenever it becomes serious it endangers the whole system by which men earn their living. It is so thoroughly infectious that when the fever is on banking and business and political judgment are betrayed, as they were on a grand scale in 1929-1930, on a smaller scale in the past thirty days. For it might as well be admitted that the same fear of "hurting business" which prevented the Coolidge and Hoover Administrations from acting in time has in some considerable measure prevented the Roosevelt Administration from taking control.

The lesson of this crackup is clear. The administration must make up its mind to manage the dollar. All its other projects are important, but unless there is firm, intelligent management of money, they will be insecure and will in the end be defeated. Over and above the recovery which natural forces here and abroad have produced, the great recent advance in the United States has clearly been due to monetary influences. These influences are the central and dynamic part of the movement since April, and nothing else is much worth doing unless these influences are wisely directed.

McGee's Mother Says Death Penalty Will Increase Kidnapings

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UP)—Mrs. Jane McGee, mother of Walter McGee, the kidnaper who faces the gallows for his part in the abduction of Miss Mary McEvoy, predicted the death penalty would cause an increase in fatal kidnapings.

"In the future," she said, "Kidnapers will know their crime will result in their death if they are apprehended.

"Victims of kidnapa never will be returned to their families. They will remove the victims as potential witnesses in their trials."

Mrs. McGee charged her son had not had a fair trial.

Car Rental Companies' Figures Do Not Tally With Carriers' Reports

AUSTIN, (UP)—Figures of car rental companies in paying state occupation taxes do not agree with figures reported by the railroads who rent the cars, the state auditor Moore Lynn said here. He said that some of the car rental companies pay occupation tax on less than one per cent of their receipts. When they paid on $146,466, Lynn said, railroad reports showed they received $2,807,539. He said they claim an exemption under an Interstate Commerce Commission ruling which is not applicable.

CHAPTER IV
THE SOFT creaking of the door as Dick's departure shattered through Mary's taut body and she crumpled into a little tortured heap on the floor. The roses scattered about her, like colorful hopes and dreams tossed from her life in a hopeless disarray.

She stared into space without seeing—only a vast, bleak, empty future; she felt pain without realizing it; she heard the drumming of the transax and the clicking of the tacker in the adjoining rooms without being conscious of her surroundings.

After awhile, she aroused from her lethargy, vaguely wondering what had happened, remembering where she was and got to her feet. She seemed to have been gone somewhere for awhile—where, she just couldn't recall.

Mechanically, she picked up the roses and set them haphazardly in a vase in which there was no water. The telephone rang. The voice at the other end of the wire called her instant return to reality. In a moment, Mary was by the brick, busy normal self. A nameless without a heart. Her heart had gone away with Dick.

Well, that was that! She would not let herself think of it again, she resolved fiercely. Life was easier, more simple without love, anyway. The alternate ecstasy and grief were too disturbing and exhausting.

Mary was just beginning to learn that her sincerest laughter with some pain is fraught. That when we can love a man with the kind of love a woman gives who loves completely and generously, she may count on having for every hour of joy, two hours of pain. For as the man she loves can afford her exquisite joy at the slightest effort to please, so can he inflict excruciating pain at the slightest intent or neglect. That woman who demand much and give little, lose the heights, but escape the depths, and can manage men more successfully with their calculating selfishness than all the love in the world can accomplish.

Mary was grateful for having to work late again that night. For when she left the office, she would have to face the horrible monster that waited around the corner of her mind ready to spring out at her.

When she reached home, she found Bonnie dashing around in great excitement. Bonnie had had a fingerwave and a manicure in New York that day and her mother was still occupied with pressing and mending all her clothes at 10 o'clock, as if Bonnie were going to wear them all at once. That was Bonnie. When she got stirred up, she revolved at high speed, and carried everyone else along with her. When her spirits were low, she spilled gloom all over her world.

Mom looked at Mar, sharply, when she came into the harsh light of the dining room, where table and chairs were strewn with Bonnie's raiment. Her disconcerting eye noted the gray pallor of Mary's face and the dark rings under her eyes.

"Mary Vaughn, you're killing yourself with work. Can't that man Foster see you're over-doing? He must be a regular slave driver, and I'd like to give him a piece of my mind, that I would!"

"I'm all right, just tired," Mary tried to smile, but she had to turn away quickly and pretend to examine a blouse of Bonnie's that she picked up, to keep the tears from falling which sprang to her eyes. "I see you got the job, Bonnie."

"Did I? Dick practically gave them to understand that I had operated switchboards ever since before they were invented—in fact, that I used to plug the board for Cleopatra when Anthony sailed in with his galleons and pined her from the pier that he had landed and would be right up to the palace with a bag of jewels for her 'Whoopee!'"

Mary wondered how much Bonnie knew about Dick and her. He had said that it was Bonnie who had told him about her going out with Frazier. Probably some careless remark she had made about it. Then, he had brooded over it. Then, his coming in and seeing her with the flowers had fanned the smoldering fire of his anger into a flame. Oh, well, if he had so little faith in her, before that the dream was shattered before it became too real. She held no resentment against Bonnie, even for her flirtations at attempts to attract Dick. If his love for her were not broad and deep enough to exempt him from suspicion and neglect of her, she didn't want it.

Mary dragged herself to bed and tried to eradicate from her aching brain all thoughts of Dick. But waves of misery swept over her and engulfed her. It was near dawn when she slept, to awake later with a frightened gasp at the appalling truth which faced her.

With a little prayer of thanks for work that demanded her strength and mind, she went to the office. Life lapsed into a monotonous routine. It was some what like it had been before she ever met Dick, only the zeal and urge were gone. Long rows of arid days stretched their lonely expanse before her.

After the first day, she began to hope and believe that Dick would not let her rashness and soon come to her for forgiveness. She had it all laid out and waiting for him. Surely, he couldn't say the words he had said, lock the way he had looked at her and do the things he had done—then let this little misunderstanding destroy it all! She ached for him with a continual, relentless ache.

For a week, her heart beat with stiffling violence every time the telephone rang or the door opened. He would come to her—she day. Love would bring him, compel him.

And then—that hope left her. Bonnie began to stay in New York for the evenings, and Mary learned that she was with Dick. Bonnie said, the first evening she came in late, "Oh, I had a date with one of the fellows in the office."

"Is he—nice?" Mary asked, with instant concern for protecting her little sister. "Be careful, honey, whom you go with in New York. It isn't wise to accept invitations too quickly. When you've been there longer, you can learn more about them all. You hear and see things that are pretty good indicators of the people with whom you work."

"Oh, sure, I'm no baby, Mary," Bonnie retorted, bending down and brushing her bright golden hair over her eyes.

The next time she staved away, Mary happened to look down into the street when she went over to the window before setting in to bed. She saw a dimly and tripped the window all with both hands. A chill of pain shivered through her body, weak and fain.

The familiar Stutz coupe was marked in the street below. In a flash, Mary saw it all then. As in a delirium, she left the window and the cool sheets soothed her burning flesh. She lay there rigid and aching, her wide eyes staring up at the ceiling where the light from the street cast moving shadows of tree branches that drew fantastic handwriting on the wall. There was no longer a mystery to decipher. Mary's mind. Her romance was dead, and her mind evicted with a ceaseless, merciless threnody of grief.

Finally, when Bonnie came in, Mary pretended to be asleep. It cost her no little effort. One part of her wanted to rise up and shout for her accusations to Bonnie to denounce her deception and cruelty. No wonder Bonnie suddenly wanted to get work in New York that she had already given it up.

But her reason argued: If she had to fight with her own sister for Dick's love—did she want it? If Dick didn't want to recognize her love, when he had already given it up to him, did she want to force it up

Patronage Troubles Roll Off Roosevelt Like Water Off Duck

Farley Turned Loose With General Provisions That Selections Must Be Not Only Democrats, But Competent Ones

By RAYMOND CLAFFIER
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, (UP)—Patronage troubles have rolled off President Roosevelt's back like water off a duck.

This job of rewarding the faithful has made life miserable for most presidents. It made Wilson so angry he once refused to see anyone seeking a job. Harding mostly okayed names as they were put before him by Harry Daugherty, his political manager, or named personal friends whom he found congenial personally. A number of them brought him grief.

The problems worried Hoover. Shortly before he left the White House he confided to a friend that patronage would cause Mr. Roosevelt no end of trouble. He predicted Congress would strip the president, take up all of his time, keep his mind off of war debts and other problems.

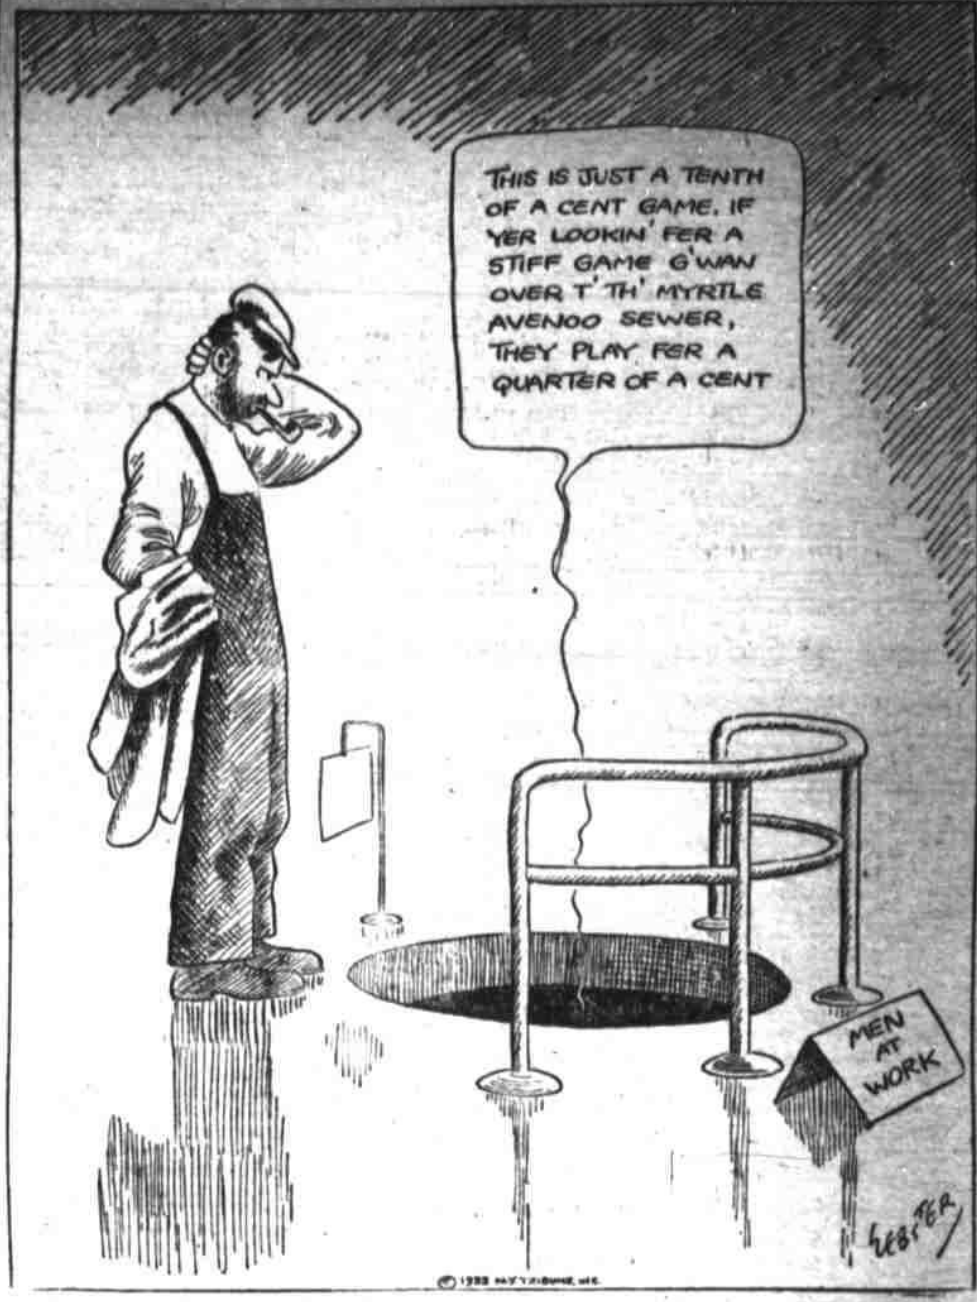

President Roosevelt turned patronage over to Postmaster James A. Farley upon whose judgment and loyalty he could depend. Beyond a general understanding that there was to be no brasserie counter rush, that selections had to be not only Democrats but competent Democrats and that appointments were to be held back until Congress did its share in putting through the emergency plan.

This was where the matter rested until President Roosevelt stepped in a few days ago to extend the civil service. There was an immediate flurry of rumors to the effect that Mr. Roosevelt and Farley were at odds. That is not the case. Farley is subjected to heavy pressure from job-holders and him? Never! As the days added to weeks, she even thought that Dick might soon tire of Bonnie and return to her. Would she forgive him and accept him, even yet? She thought she would—then.

adopted and approved by the president and the work week that may be under consideration by various industries now framing their permanent codes have nothing to do with the blanket agreement.

And it full compliance with the president's Reemployment Agreement that entitles a business man to display the NRA insignia. The time is coming "ere long when those falling under provisions of the agreement who are not exhibiting the insignia will suffer heavily as a result.

In other words there is no way to comply with the agreement without putting more people to work—you must remember that that is the purpose of the agreement. It was not proposed simply to open the way for retailers to hike prices or to eliminate competition in price. It was framed to increase buying power so that retailers may sell goods at profitable prices.

The agreement is not intended to eliminate the right kind of competition between retailers. It was drawn for the purpose of eliminating wasteful competition—that is competition damaging to seller or buyer or both. It is intended to eliminate selling below cost. It is not intended to wipe out all margin for competition in price. It simply limits such margin to stop destructive competition for protection of the merchant and on the other hand to protect the buyer from profiteering.

WHIRLIGIG—

 To explain over and over that the government can do nothing about it. The Industrial Recovery Act clearly confers the right of collective bargaining, self-organization and appointment of representatives to all employees. They can join a company union if they want. Also they can acquire a union card. And the devil will take the hindmost.

COUSINS—
 Now that all the shooting is over at London many persons are asking just how Senator James Couzens of Michigan, the lone Republican on the American delegation, fitted in.

Take it on the word of a trained and capable observer who returned from the Economic Conference just before it closed that Couzens fitted in darn well. "If Couzens didn't do anything else," said this man who must remain nameless, "with the aid of Senator Pittman he kept a lot of feet on the ground. "But what's the difference?" was added. "This was the first conference we didn't lose, wasn't it?"

GUNMEN—
 Government agents are finding one great deterrent in their drive against the gangster and the racketeer in the fact that so many states do not require the licensing of automobile drivers.

There are 21 states in which a person may drive an auto without examination or registration. Eighteen of these states do not even call for licensing of chauffeurs. Illinois is one of the states where Federal men most earnestly wish the driving permit would be adopted.

Breaks—
 The fair-weather boys who called their radio stations last Monday night and subscribed effulgently to President Roosevelt's ethereal appeal for support ought to uncross their fingers.

Old Uncle Bogy Man from Washington will catch up with them yet.

It was all very well for every enthusiast of the moment to call or wire in a trick endorsement of the blanket code with fancy phrases to get around a literal application. The temporary code contains just so many words. Each one means exactly what it says according to our best legal interpretations.

Notes—
 It was kind of funny the other night to be in country club supper and hear the conversation from three adjoining tables . . . The hosts at all three were substantial business executives. Before their late meal was half through each had asked his guests for an opinion of what President Roosevelt was "going to do" . . . Take another tip as to what Big

NEW YORK

Discipline—
 The big stick, 1933 model, hangs heavy over the oil industry's head. It is due to crack down on stubborn skulls in the near future.

Local oil men get private but emphatic word that the government is fed up with the "any antics of the biggest troupe of non-cooperators in the country. If the boys pull any more phony gestures they will wake up wondering what hit them.

Several leaders in the industry really want to play ball but their voices have been drowned in the babble of "individualist" ideas. So they have given up hope of international agreement and privately appealed to the government to do its stuff. The government will.

The Big Stick will swing in two directions. One will be stiff Federal licensing requirements for companies and individual operators. They will be required to subscribe to a code drafted by NRA itself in order to do business. And the code will be a pipkin.

The other part of the stick work will be even more drastic and will aim straight at the industry's worst disease, over-production. It involves the Federal purchase of operating oil properties whether the owners want to sell or not. The properties would be turned over to the Navy Department and taken out of production. Opinion here is that the President has power to do this as a national emergency measure if he wants to.

This plan ties in nicely with the Navy Department's long suppressed desire to set up an oil plant of its own complete with pipe lines and refineries. At present all it has is some untapped land. It doesn't even know for sure whether there is any oil under it or not.

This measure has not been finally decided upon but it under serious consideration. The whisper is that the proportionate land purchases from various companies will be in inverse ratio to the spirit of cooperation they have shown. What could be sweeter?

Lumber—

The big stick may also be used on the lumber industry. They tried to sneak over a fast one when General Johnson wasn't looking. They urged immediate acceptance of their code on grounds of patriotic zeal to get going. The code contained provision for a forty to forty-eight hour week, with the accent on the forty-eight. They actually hoped to get away with it. They won't. General Johnson wasn't too busy to get the idea. The code they will get will be quite different from the one they tried to put across.

New York leaders say that a couple of horrible examples will do a world of good.

Too many business men have had the idea that the NRA was just playing poker. They were beginning to think that any old code they chose to offer would be accepted in the sacred name of voluntary cooperation. They will find out otherwise.

The dope here is that pats on the head and kicks where they will do the most good will be distributed roughly as deserved. There will be a lot of changed attitudes when that sinks in.

Blanket—

The President's radio talk about the Blanket Code went over big in New York. Even the most confirmed Tories see a different picture than they did a few weeks ago. They admit privately there is no use trying to play King Canine against the tide of public opinion Mr. Roosevelt has mobilized.

Escaped Convict Wanted Here Says He Helped Rob Bank

Ed Davis, one of the convicts who escaped from the Kan. penitentiary last Memorial Day and one of the five of the escapes who sent a letter to Oklahoma City officers asking blame for robbing a bank at Black Rock, Ark., is wanted in Big Spring on an indictment charging burglary of the Collins Bros. drug store here.

Deputy Sheriff C. M. Lane of Walnut Spring, Ark., viewed the letter with skepticism.

"Those five have all been sent up for extra long terms and so talking the rap for another crime wouldn't affect them much," Deputy Lane said in expressing the opinion the letter might be a "frame up."

"As far as I know now, we're going to continue our fight to have the two men held in Oklahoma brought to Arkansas for trial in the case. They have been identified as being around Black at the time of the robbery," Lane said.

Thelbert Brady, 23, El Reno, Ok., and E. J. Wyatt, 28, Tulsa, have instituted habeas corpus proceedings as they resist extradition to Arkansas. Both claim alibis. Sheriff W. E. Roher was in Oklahoma City in an attempt to gain their custody.

Finger prints on the letter purporting to be a confession of the five Kansas convicts were identified as those of Wilbur Underhill, life term for murder; Joe Brady, life term as an habitual criminal; Jim Clark, Harvey Bailey and Ed Davis, each 20 to 100 years for a Kansas bank robbery.

The letter was postmarked Monday 2:30 p. m. at Coalgate, Ok.

State Ranger John R. Williams returned Thursday, night from Austin, Dallas, Fort Worth and other points in East Texas.

3.2 Beer Not Intoxicating Court Decides

San Antonio District Judge Dismisses Injunction Again Sale

SAN ANTONIO, (UP)—Sale of 3.2 per cent beer gained ground here supported by a court decision in which a district judge refused to grant an injunction against a cigar store where the brew had been sold.

Judge W. W. McCrory dismissed the city's injunction action when he ruled they failed to prove beer sold at the Marr Cigar Store here was "intoxicating." The city attorneys introduced evidence the brew seized had an alcoholic content of 2.78 per cent. Witnesses for the defense declared it was not intoxicating.

Judge McCrory explained the state has its remedy at law under the criminal statutes which was interpreted as an additional reason for refusal to grant the injunction.

"In view of the definition of intoxicating liquors in state statutes the state has recourse in criminal prosecution," the judge said. "The defense has met the issue raised by the prima facie case. The witnesses have proved that the beer is not intoxicating. Therefore, I refuse the injunction and let the case remain as is to be tried in the October term of court."

The state election on August 25 may end the case, attorneys indicated. Attorneys for the defense said the Dean Law was in conflict with national statutes which ruled 3.2 per cent beer was not intoxicating.

Witnesses for the defense said the brew was not intoxicating, one saying it drank ten bottles without effect.

Shettlesworth Speaks To Lions

A storm of increased activity which R. J. Shettlesworth told Lions Friday was certain to come within weeks of months, will shake "dead branches" from not only service organizations, but from positions of responsibility in the world.

"The old question 'Am I my brother's keeper?' is being answered now in the strong affirmative: 'I am my brother's brother,'" said Shettlesworth. "That is the thing that is going to make wheels of industry go and to put men to work."

Program for the day was in charge of the group headed by Leon Bergin. A quartet drafted from Bergin's ranks drew applause from their own claque and jibes and painful silence from the opposing group headed by J. E. Payne.

T. H. Lewis, who is a new resident of this city and affiliated with Montgomery Ward, was guest for the day.

Washington Lengthens Lead By Taking 10-Inning Game Of Yanks

WASHINGTON—The Senators boosted their American League lead over the Yanks to two full games Thursday by beating out their New York rivals, 3 to 2, in a great 10 inning battle which opened a four game "crucial" series.

A pinch hit from the bat of a third string catcher, Cliff Bolton of Chattanooga, with two out and the bases full in the tenth, gave Manager Joe Cronin's charges a head earned victory in a game which packed nearly every variety of baseball thrills.

William Harrison, president of the American League, and 12,000 shrieking Washington fans watched the Senators beat the Yanks for the eighth time in eleven starts after being overhauled in the ninth and pressed to the limit in the extra frame.

Walter Stewart, slim southpaw, held the New York heavy hitters scoreless up to the eighth but weakened just when the Senators were seeing visions of handing the Yankees their first shutout since August 5, 1931.

Although their big guns, Ruth and Gehrig were the most part silent, the Yanks ran their string of scoring games to 304 when they tied it up in the fighting finish.

For seven inning Stewart shaded the burly Yank right-hander Ruffing, holding the enemy to two hits, but tired and gave way to a pinch hitter in the eighth, Jack Russell finishing and getting credit for the game.
