Jackson: 'Keep your eyes on prize'

By JAMES CULLEN
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Jesse Jackson asked his supporters at the Texas Democratic Convention Friday to "keep your eyes on the prize" and continue his presidential campaign until the national convention in July.

Jackson said the campaign already has been successful — although Michael Dukakis has clinched the Democratic nomination — because Jackson got millions of people involved in the process and raised issues of vital interest to working people.

"We've touched the heartstrings of our nation," he told the Coalition of Black Democrats lunch on the opening day of the state convention. "We've done what a presidential campaign must do — keep hope alive."

"Our campaign started before Iowa. It will last beyond July," he later told more than 1,500 enthusiastic supporters. "We will seek delegates until the roll is called in Atlanta."

Jackson, who drew a minute-long standing ovation from the convention, expects to have 1,200 delegates in Atlanta and he said the job is not done.

"People get confused as to what the point is. The first obligation you have...is to keep your eyes on the prize. Don't spend your time on side issues, such as who's going to be treasurer without a treasury... Don't argue over who'll sit at the (head) table, the table will be torn down in 30 minutes. Let's keep our eyes on the real thing."

Among the goals he said they should work toward are:

— Universal same-day voter registration at polling places.

— A moratorium on foreclosures to help farmers and ranchers hurt by a drought in the Midwest, and sale of surplus government grain to prevent higher food prices as a result of the drought. "An act of God must not be exploited by an act of the devil, greed taking over their farms while their backs are against the wall."

— An energy policy that includes a tariff on imported oil to help revive domestic oil production. Consumers would be better off paying a few cents more per gallon of gas than seeing America become more dependent on foreign oil.

"Energy is the jugular vein for our democracy," he said. "We must discuss stability and security, and then price (of oil)."

Surveying the assembly hall sprinkled with white and Hispanic delegates as well as blacks, he said, "It ain't hard to organize these other caucuses, but look here... We're making a quilt, so make room for everybody."

Questions about "What does Jesse want" are "diversionary," he said. "The issue is what has Jesse built and where are we going."

He claimed credit for influencing the political debate. "When you hear (President) Reagan speaking of human rights, you know it's because of Jackson action."

He also claimed credit for getting Dukakis and George Bush talking about fighting drugs and regaining a Democratic majority in the Senate in 1986.

"Keep your heads high and your faith renewed," he said. "We won Texas and the best is yet to come."

Jackson hopes to win a large share of 64 at-large national delegates who remain to be chosen at the convention, after the March 8 primary gave Dukakis 43 and Jackson 42 delegates out of 119 allocated by the Super Tuesday primary.

Jackson carried Jefferson County but was entitled to only one of the five delegates from the 4th Senate District while Dukakis and Tennessee Sen. Al Gore split the other four.

White: GOP out to destroy Wright's name

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

HOUSTON — Happy to face a warm and friendly crowd, embattled House Speaker Jim Wright opened the Texas Democratic Convention Friday night without reference to the ethics probe waiting for him in Washington.

While the Fort Worth Democrat focused on the policy errors of the Reagan administration, former Gov. Mark White introduced Wright with a strong attack on so-called "Republican sleaze."

"You'll find the highest rate of inner-city crime at a staff meeting at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue," White told a cheering crowd at the George R. Brown Convention Center.

"No other presidency in the history of the United States has been more tarnished by wrongdoing."

Although the bi-partisan House Ethics Committee voted unanimously June 10 to investigate Wright, White blamed the speaker's problems on a Republican "mission to destroy the name and reputation of Jim Wright."

"I say to you Mr. (George) Bush, clean up your own house before you slander the name of Jim Wright," said White, who said later he enjoys his new role as Democratic hatchetman.

Speaking later to reporters, Wright called the ethics committee's planned investigation of his financial dealings "purely a partisan and political thing."

Asked to characterize his reception here, where the cheering crowd waved signs saying, "We Back Jim 100 %," Wright said, "Beautiful. You don't look a gift horse in the mouth."

Bush's hotel suite full of bologna

THE HOUSTONIAN HOTEL — At $515 a night, it's not cheap, but it was an opportunity Texas Democrats just couldn't pass up.

Democratic activist Ty Fain of Austin checked into room 271 here, Vice President George Bush's official Texas voting residence, to throw a little baloney — or is that balogna — around Friday.

Tongue firmly set in his cheek, Fain posed with a life-size cardboard cutout of Bush and toured reporters around the posh Houston hotel room, Bush's Texas homestead.

"The Bush kitchen doesn't seem to have a stove or a refrigerator," Fain joked. "But it does have room service."

To dramatize his point, Fain served himself a sandwich of "home-town-boy balogna" washed down with "voodoo economics wine."

In the hotel pool below, guests sunbathed and played volleyball oblivious to the political games underway on the other side of the darkened windows.

Odessa jobless statistics will be part of report

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — At least for the third quarter of 1988, employment statistics for the Odessa, Tyler and Victoria metropolitan statistical areas will be included in reports published by the federal Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Odell Crawford, manager of the Odessa Texas Employment Commission office, said he received word late Thursday from TEC Administrator Bill Grossenbacher that the state agency would provide funding for inclusion of the three MSAs in national labor publications at least through Sept. 30.

The announcement nearly 1½ months ago that the Odessa, Tyler and Victoria MSAs no longer would be included in the BLS monthly "Employment & Earning" report stirred up a storm of protest from political, business and civic leaders.

During a May 10 meeting with Odessa leaders, Terrence Travland, assistant chief of the TEC economic research analysis department in Austin, said the state agency was ordered to reduce its record-keeping budget by $55,000 as part of the Gramm-Rudman Act deficit reduction requirements.

He explained that the BLS order affected 22 MSAs throughout the nation and the total dollar cuts sought amounted to about $800,000.

Travland told Odessa leaders the TEC simply selected three MSAs where record-keeping costs totalled $55,000.

Odessa leaders questioned whether the decision to delete the city was politically motivated. Travland assured them it was not, that the decision was made strictly on the basis of dollar totals

Icahn: Shareholders' vote too close to call

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Texaco Inc. predicted victory in the biggest takeover fight in corporate history on Friday, but financier Carl C. Icahn argued that the vote by the oil giant's 211,000 shareholders was too close to call.

The actual outcome of the balloting for five seats on the board of directors is not expected to be known for a few weeks because it will take that long to sort out and count the votes representing 243 million shares.

Wall Street seemed to express skepticism about Icahn's chances of getting himself and four allies elected, as Texaco's stock dropped $1.50 a share to $48.

Icahn has sought the seats as a way to pressure Texaco's management to let shareholders vote on his proposal to buy up the company for $60 a share.

Meeting with reporters after the annual meeting, Texaco President James W. Kinnear said Texaco's advisers predicted the company's margin of victory would be substantial.

Icahn said the outcome could go either way. He said he believed the result would swing on a block of about 12 million votes controlled by the investment firm Kohlberg, Kravis & Roberts Co.

The voting at the meeting closed out a rancorous proxy fight between Texaco and Icahn, who is its largest shareholder with a 14.8 percent stake.

Icahn criticized Texaco's managment for refusing to give stockholders a chance to vote on his takeover offer.

"If we're elected, what we will do is keep our offer out there," he said. "Why should you not be allowed to decide? Simply because management does not want to take the risk of losing its position, its prerogatives."

Icahn's bid puts a $13.6 billion value on the company. Adding the $1.2 billion he paid for his stake to the $12.4 billion he is offering for the shares he does not own would produce the largest buyout in corporate history.

Home-grown vegetables will be available at farmers market

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Country-produced "merchandise" in the form of home-grown vegetables and possibly some fruit is coming to town next week for the duration of the growing season.

"It's going to be locally grown produce," Earnest Kiker, Midland County agricultural agent, said of the truck crops produced by members of the Permian Basin Farmers Market. "We feel like we are going to have an excellent market here."

The market, now beginning its third year, opens Tuesday morning under shaded stands at 1505 E. Front Ave. in Midland and also Tuesday morning in Odessa on the grounds of the Ector County Coliseum.

The market will be set up on Tuesdays, Fridays and Saturdays in Midland and Odessa and on Wednesdays in the Highland Mall in Big Spring, Kiker said.

"They will be there pretty early (in the morning), I'm sure," Kiker said of the producers. The market grounds will be sprinkled with water to "keep the dust down," Kiker said. "Just like last year, we'll be under the shade."

The truck-crop offerings are to include carrots, squash, zucchini, tomatoes, onions, potatoes, string beans, peas, cucumbers, and possibly some early okra, Kiker said.

"It's a little early for watermelon," he said. But the producers are trying to bring in some Pecos cantaloupes.

"There will be competitive prices."

Kiker doubts that much, if any, fruit such as peaches and apricot will be in the market. "That (spring) freeze got a lot of our fruit," he said. "We lost a good bit of fruit."

Hot weather forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Sunny skies and continued warm to hot temperatures are forecast across Midland and Odessa through the weekend.

Forecasters with the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport predict temperatures will reach the 100-degree mark today and Sunday under sunny skies. Winds today will be from the south at 5 to 15 mph.

Tonight, the forecast calls for fair skies and low in the upper 60s.

STATE

An unstable, somewhat moist air mass coupled with rising afternoon temperatures created scattered showers and thunderstorms over most of the state, bringing badly needed rain for some drought-stricken areas Friday.

Widely scattered showers and thunderstorms dotted parts of north Central and northeast Texas, while additional showers and thunderstorms graced parts of southeast Texas and the Gulf Coast.

A small area of thunderstorms was developing in the higher elevations of far West Texas late Friday afternoon.

Elsewhere, partly cloudy to mostly cloudy skies prevailed over much of the state.

The National Weather Service in Fort Worth reported a chance of scattered showers and thunderstorms for Saturday — especially over the eastern sections of the state — mainly during the late afternoon and evening hours.

Skies were expected to be fair to partly cloudy in western sections of the state Saturday and partly to mostly cloudy elsewhere.

NATION

A cold front from Nova Scotia through the mid-Atlantic Coast into the lower Mississippi Valley brought showers and scattered thunderstorms Friday to eastern New England and the mid-Atlantic states.

Showers and thunderstorms were spotty elsewhere in the nation.

In Des Moines, Iowa, where rainfall was 7½ inches below normal for te year, showers on Friday only brought .01 inches to the area.

Showers and thunderstorms developed in parched areas of the Southeast, from western North Carolina into south central Alabama, north central and northeast Texas and the central and southern Gulf Coast.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered in parts of eastern and southern Nevada, southwest Utah, northern Arizona, northwest New Mexico and central Colorado.

The national weather forecast for today includes scattered showers and thunderstorms in the front range of the Colorado Rockies, the lower Mississippi Valley and parts of the Middle Atlantic and southern Appalachian regions. The rest of the nation will have mostly sunny skies.

Dukakis says campaign won't be affected by Wright investigation

BOSTON (AP) — Michael Dukakis insists an investigation of House Speaker Jim Wright will not affect his presidential bid, but Republicans who think otherwise are looking forward to pressing the issue during what should be Dukakis' shining moment — the Democratic National Convention.

Dukakis, the certain Democratic presidential nominee, wasted few opportunities during the primary season to lambaste malfeasance in the Reagan administration, delivering particularly harsh criticism of embattled Attorney General Edwin Meese III.

Now Republicans, who successfully sought a House ethics investigation of Wright's conduct, are firing back and trying to neutralize the so-called GOP "sleaze factor" with attacks on the nation's highest-ranking elected Democrat.

Wright is chairman of the national convention in Atlanta and as such will attract lots of national television time during the three-day gathering.

Dukakis said, "I thought there was a presumption of innocence in this country," when asked if Wright's situation was embarrassment to him.

"In a politically charged atmosphere, it's going to take on a life of its own," said Bob Beckel, who managed Walter F. Mondale's 1984 presidential campaign. "The reality is that the Republicans are going to make every bit of political hay out of this — and they should."

When the Democrats huddle next month to crown Dukakis as their nominee and to set the tone for the campaign against Republican George Bush, there will be plenty of GOP strategists on hand to offer their perspective to the news media.

Wright will be in the limelight — and under the spotlight.

"He will be up there at the podium longer than Michael Dukakis or anyone else, for all to see, and that is an embarrassment," said William Schneider, a political analyst at the American Enterprise Institute.

"And every night we'll have (national GOP chairman) Frank Fahrenkopf on television talking about the Democrats and their 'sleaze factor,'" said Schneider. "Imagine if Ed Meese was running the Republican convention."

Dukakis aides say there have been no attempts to reduce Wright's visibility at the convention.

"The governor has talked to Speaker Wright and the speaker assured him that this will move expeditiously and that the outcome will be fine," said Chuck Campion, Dukakis' national political director. "We see no ramifications at all."

There may also be an independent investigation of allegations Wright lobbied improperly on behalf of oil companies with which he may have had financial relationships, questions surrounding publication of a book for which he received a higher-than-usual royalty and which was produced with the help of a congressionally paid staffer, contacts with federal officials on behalf of Texas savings and loans and the use of a condominium for which he paid no monthly rent.

Dukakis maintains the speaker's troubles are not comparable to those of Meese or others in the Reagan administration who have been convicted of or accused of wrongdoing — pointing to Wright's cooperation while saying many in the administration have tried to stonewall investigators.

And he sees no inconsistency in his demand that Meese resign while he is making no such request of Wright.

"If you're attorney general of this country and you've stumbled as often as he has and made as many mistakes as he has and provided as weak leadership as he has, you ought to leave office," Dukakis said.

He insists otherwise, but the allegations against Wright must trouble Dukakis, who built his reputation as a good-government reformer by challenging entrenched Boston pols who openly relished their power.

"It must irritate him wildly to see this thing happening to Democratic leaders," said Schneider. "One gets the impression that he'd like to fire Jim Wright."

BOLOGNA

"We've had enough baloney," Fain said. "That's how we feel about the official residence of George Bush. It's just a little baloney."

Jim Oberwetter, state director for the Bush campaign, called the stunt "phoney baloney." Oberwetter pointed out that Bush has spent 60 days campaigning in Texas over the past two years and voted in the state in every election since 1948.

"They have tried this many, many times," he said of the Democrats, "and that phoney baloney doesn't stick."

Since Bush moved his family home to Kennebunkport, Maine, years ago, Texas Democrats have tried to dispel the notion of George Bush, the Texan. They even sued unsuccessfully to remove Bush from Houston's voting roles.

Friday's media event, however, was much more light-hearted. Democratic National Committeewoman Bille Carr of Houston said Fain leased the suite to help Bush pay his rent.

"We have five different kinds of balogna," Carr said, "but any way you slice it, it's still baloney."

Although no personal momento linked the suite to the vice president, Fain assured reporters they were in the right place. "I checked it out with the bellhops and the maid," he said.

Other Democrats who couldn't resist a chance to take a shot at at Bush's multiple homes included: Lt. Gov Bill Hobby and Sen. Chet Edwards of Duncanville.

Said Hobby: "We know it's an election year, because George Bush is once again a Texan."

And Edwards said., "It's an honor to welcome all of you to George Bush's home town, one of 17 of 'em."

WRIGHT

Two-thirds of the way through the speaker's address, however, the Veteran's Peace Convoy caught the crowd's attention as it entered the convention hall carrying signs and banners. The convoy came to Houston after federal border guards in Laredo refused to let it carry a cache of non-military supplies to Nicaragua.

Ed Martin, executive director of the Texas Democratic Party, said he gladly issued guest passes to the veterans. "The Democratic Party's not going to turn these people away like the Reagan administration did at the border," Martin said.

Wright, who worked to bring the Nicaraguan Sandinistas and Contras to the bargaining table, praised the three-month cease fire in the long-running conflict. "This administration can't stand it," he said in his keynote address. "They can't wait to get the war going again."

After Wright's address, Democrats heard a Mexican worker unity song and speeches eulogizing the late Willie Velasquez of San Antonio, a Democratic activist who died of cancer Wednesday.

Late in the evening, they began the process of determining the makeup of the state's 211-member delegation to the national convention in Atlanta.

TEXACO

While Icahn clearly had his supporters, the tone of the questioning and the mood of the crowd often leaned toward the management of the White Plains, N.Y.-based company, which has many employees in Tulsa.

Shareholders everywhere sported buttons featuring the familiar Texaco star or wore various combinations of red and white, the corporate colors.

Kinnear touted "spectacular progress" the company made over the last 18 months, during which Texaco emerged in April from a year under bankruptcy court reorganization.

The reorganization plan included a $3 billion payment to Pennzoil Co. to settle a lawsuit resulting from Texaco's 1984 acquisition of Getty Oil Co. after Pennzoil had made earlier moves to acquire Getty.

The plan also includes sales of $5 billion worth of marginally profitable assets and a $1.7 billion distribution to shareholders.

"Our plan...is based on the building of value, both today and for the future," Kinnear said, charging that the Icahn group's true intention "is that they be designated as the brokers for the breakup and sale of this company's assets."

In a question and answer session, several shareholders expressed skepticism about Icahn's intentions.

"If you turned (the company) over to Mr. Icahn, it would be like giving your Stradivarius to a gorilla," said Bill Lenz of Flint, Conn.

Several Texaco distributors and wholesalers called for support of management and said Icahn's actions had harmed their businesses.

"Some of my dealers are looking for another supplier, (and) heating oil accounts are questioning whether I'll be able to supply heating oil this winter," said Carlos R. Leffler, a Pennsylvania distributor.

But it was not all clear sailing for management.

Reflecting a palpable current of shareholder unhappiness, Bill Collallas, a shareholder from Cherry Hill, N.J., said: "Anyone who has suffered for four years is well aware of the shoddy and incompetent management inflicted on us.

"You're demeaning my intelligence by refusing my right to vote on Mr. Icahn's proposal. And I resent it," he told Kinnear and Texaco Chairman Alfred C. DeCrane Jr.

TEC

He said Odessa, Tyler and Victoria were the areas where record-keeping costs were closest to the $55,000 target figure.

Travland also told Odessa leaders that, although statistics for Odessa, Tyler and Victoria would not be published by BLS, the TEC planned to continue publishing labor statistics for the areas in its state Labor Market Review publication.

On May 19, Grossenbacher and Jim Gordon, BLS representative from Dallas, met with Odessa leaders again in an effort to clarify the city's deletion from the BLS monthly employment statistical publication.

The state and federal officials said they wouldn't be surprised if the state is required next year to decertify as much as 50 percent of the Texas' MSAs to satisfy federal budget cuts under the Gramm-Rudman Act.

State Rep. Gary Watkins told Gordon that he and State Sen. John Montford wanted Odessa reinstated in the BLS monthly "Employment & Earnings" report and that he planned to contact U.S. Rep. Larry Combest and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen toward this end.

Mayor Don Carter criticized the TEC-BLS action, expressing the belief Odessa was being picked on, noting that the same thing had occurred about three years ago.

"I'm concerned about the criteria that was used in making this selection," the mayor told Gordon.

Crawford said that he did not know what would happen after Sept. 30, but that Odessa, Tyler and Victoria would be included in the BLS monthly statistical publication until that time.

MARKET

Some of the vegetable producers are cotton farmers who are growing and selling vegetables for added income, Kiker said.

Many produce vegetables on one-half acre to 10-acre tracts, he said. And about 50 families are producing market-quality produce in several Midland-area counties. Midkiff farmer Jerome Hoelscher is chairman of the farmers market board.

"The market has been very successful," Kiker said. He and his Texas Agricultural Extension Service staff for Midland County offered guidance and research in helping the farmers and other producers to set up the market. "We helped develop and organize the market and provided educational opportunities," he said.

"We are very pleased in the turnout of producers and the quality of the produce and the turnout of people," Kiker said. "We're looking for an excellent market. It should be a good season."

There's no cure for the bite of the bug

By PETE LITTERSKI

GREENVILLE, Texas (AP) — This is the story about an infatuation...an affair that started years before I was married and which continues to this day.

Now, before you pass judgment on me, please be aware that this love I have is for a special breed of car — the Volkswagen Beetle.

That's right. I have been, am now and always will be a fan of the Bug.

"Why," you ask, "would this grown man whose favorite spectator sport is auto racing be infatuated with a bug-eyed, underpowered, oil-dripping foreign product that is no longer in production for the American market?

Let me count the ways.

1. It was the first car I could really afford to buy. Before the VW Beetle became a collector's item, it was one of the best buys in used cars. For $100 or so, you could buy a 10-year-old Bug that dripped only a quart of oil a week and didn't have more than one or two holes rusted through the floor pan.

2. It was the first car I could figure out. Spark plugs, oil changes and fan belts used to intimidate me until I decided I could fix my own Bug. In no time at all, I was pulling whole motors out of the back of those things, switching the transmissions, adjusting clutches and even setting the timing.

3. It had a stick shift. When I was growing up every kid wanted a car with four on the floor and that's just what the Bug came with. Of course, that four on the floor wasn't backed up by lots of power like my friends' Chevy Super Sports and such. But, in my eyes it was less embarrassing to drive a Bug with four on the floor that it was to drive the family wagon.

4. It was a safe car to drive, no matter what anyone says. I've had two major accidents in my life — one a rollover in a snowy ditch after hitting glare ice at 50 mph and one a broadside collision when a brand new Toyota wagon crossed an intersection right in front of me. The fact that I'm here to tell you about the accidents is one thing. The fact that no one was injured is another thing.

But I think the greatest testimony to the Bug's sturdiness is the fact that after we righted the first VW after our rollover and got it towed out of the snowy ditch I was able to drive it away. And I drove it for another two years before trading it to Dad for a Ford stationwagon.

Two years later, after I plowed my second Bug into the side of a Toyota whose driver didn't realize she was at a two-way stop sign, I sold it for $100.

British lawmakers on way to Iran in effort to improve relations

LONDON (AP) — The Church of England said Friday night that four British legislators will travel to Iran in an effort to improve relations, hoping that this could lead to the release of three Britons kidnapped in Lebanon.

An announcement from the residence of Robert Runcie, archbishop of Canterbury, said the church had organized the mission at the invitation of the Iranian government.

The delegation is scheduled to leave Sunday and meet with high-ranking Iranian officials in Tehran.

Eighteen foreigners, including nine Americans, are missing in Lebanon and it is believed that most are held captive by members of the pro-Iranian Hezbollah, or Party of God, movement.

One of the missing Britons is Terry Waite, 49, Runcie's foreign affairs adviser, who disappeared Jan. 20, 1987, during his fifth mission to seek the freedom of hostages.

The other kidnapped Britons are John McCarthy, 31, a television journalist missing since Feb. 17, 1986, and Alec Collett, 64, a New York-based journalist who disappeared March 25, 1985, while on assignment for the United Nations Relief and Works Agency.

An Islamic extremist organization claimed Collett had been killed, but his body has not been found.

Brian Keenan, 36, from the British province of Northern Ireland, was abducted April 11, 1986, while walking to the American University of Beirut where he worked as an English teacher. He holds an Irish passport.

The longest-held hostage is American Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press, who was kidnapped in Beirut March 16, 1985.

Iran and Britain reduced their diplomatic staffs last summer in a series of retaliatory expulsions following the beating of a British diplomat in Tehran and the shoplifting arrest of an Iranian envoy in Britain. Iran now has only one diplomat in London and Britain has one in Tehran.

The four lawmakers on the mission to Iran are Cyril Townsend and Robert Hicks of the governing Conservative Party; Thomas Clarke of the Labor Party and Lord Tordoff of the Social Liberal Democrats.

"The group is not going to negotiate for the return of hostages. It is a fact-finding mission to find ways to improve relations with Iran which could lead to the freeing of Terry Waite and the other British hostages," said Runcie spokeswoman Eve Keatley.

"We have repeatedly made it clear we are not prepared to be party to any deal which would indicate in any way that hostage-taking pays dividends," she added.

Waite's brother, John Waite, said of the church mission: "I am s_re this would be Terry's way to advance the cause of the hostages. He is on record as saying that he didn't believe in deals.

"But he was a great believer in discovering the other person's point of view and finding common ground. That is what the delegation is all about."

The Friends of John McCarthy, a group formed to push for his release, also welcomed the mission.

"We support all efforts aimed at bringing the hostages home. We are glad that this mission is being organized under the auspices of the Church of England," said a spokesman.

"We hope that dialogue with the Iranian authorities will help to create an atmosphere for the release of hostages...This mission underlines the need to talk to all those who can aid their freedom."

Hostage's family makes appeal

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The mother and sisters of Irish hostage Brian Keenan appealed in a Beirut newspaper Friday to the kidnappers to declare their demands for his release.

"More than two years have lapsed since the disappearance of our son and brother in Beirut," said the appeal, published in the An-Nahar newspaper.

The letter was signed by Maria Keenan, the hostage's mother, and her two daughters, Brenda Geilham and Eliane Spinneys.

"Despite the fears we have suffered during this period, we still hope that Brian will be freed and return to his family in Ireland soon," they said.

"We have addressed previous appeals through the media in Lebanon for information about the fate of Brian Keenan. But no one has come forth with any information about him," they said. "If you are not prepared to free him, we ask you to declare what should be done so that he regains his freedom.

"We are poor people, but are willing to do everything we can to help Brian."

Defector from U.S. shown on Soviet TV

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet television aired an interview with CIA defector Edward Lee Howard Friday and showed him at a country dacha, walking down Moscow's Arbat shopping street and discussing his life since he arrived here in 1985.

The broadcast included a home movie Howard made for his family during travels around the Soviet Union. He said he was happy, but he also said he had few friends.

Howard's wife and son did not accompany him to the Soviet Union. His defection to Moscow was the first by someone known to have worked for the CIA.

The interview shed little light on how he managed to slip through FBI surveillance of his home in Santa Fe, N.M. and reach Soviet soil.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Vendor sentenced to death for murder of reggae star

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — Street vendor Dennis Lobban was found guilty and sentenced to hang Friday for the murder of reggae star Peter Tosh.

Lobban, 33, maintained his innocence throughout the trial. He claimed he was drinking with friends the night of Sept. 11, 1987 when Tosh, radio disc jockey Jeff Dixon and Wilton "Doc" Brown were murdered by three gunmen who burst into Tosh's home.

Lobban said he and Tosh were good friends and used to rehearse music together.

The trial before a jury of eight women and four men had begun Monday.

Like all trials involving illegal firearms, it was held behind closed doors, in the Gun Court Division of the Home Circuit Court. Reporters were allowed to attend on the condition they not publish the names of witnesses.

Sex magzine to aid Chinese

HONG KONG (AP) — China's first magazine on sex will appear next month, according to an official report appearing Friday.

"Sex Education" will be designed to help teachers, parents and doctors provide proper sex education so Communist China's people will grow up healthy, have harmonious marriages and not commit sex crimes, the China News Service said in a dispatch appearing in Hong Kong papers.

The magazine will be published in Shanghai by the city's Sex Education Research Society, the Chinese report said.

The report quoted the magazine's editor, Shanghai sociologist Liu Dalin, as saying local and overseas doctors, sociologists, psychologists and educators will be advisers of the magazine.

Briton sets off on boat trip

GWEEK, England (AP) — A British man set off Friday on a renewed attempt to become the first person to row solo around the world.

Geoff Cooper, 36, rowed away from this Cornish port in his 16-foot boat Water Rat I. He was confident, despite previous failures.

A 1986 attempt ended after just 36 hours when Cooper injured a wrist and had to be airlifted by helicopter to a hospital.

Last year, he was again rescued by a helicopter when he got into trouble off the Cornish coast during a practice trip.

He said he hoped to complete the 36,000-mile voyage in three years.

"All you need is a little luck, and it was against me previously," Cooper said.

Cooper, who is carrying radio equipment, is planning to row west around the world.

Dutch art work missing

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Thousands of works of art that decorated the walls of Dutch offices around the world are missing, the government says, and some of the paintings may even have ended up in the trash.

Koos de Jong, who oversees the government's collection of 360,000 works of art, said he discovered the pieces were missing when he took an inventory recently. He was quoted Friday by the Amsterdam daily De Volkskrant.

About 165,000 pieces had been lent to government offices and embassies around the world and many never came back, he said.

The government began collecting the works under a post-World War II program to support Dutch artists. The collection also includes antiques and paintings by masters of the 17th, 18th and 19th centuries.

"There may be several thousand — I can't predict for sure — that are certainly gone. Artworks got lost or were irreparably damaged because of ill-treatment," he said.

Exoneration urged for Trotsky

MOSCOW (AP) — A leading Soviet historian said Friday that revolutionary Leon Trotsky should be exonerated of criminal charges nearly 50 years after he was driven from the Soviet Union, reviled as a traitor to socialism and murdered.

"We have to rehabilitate all those people who were repressed and who were accused on false evidence, and all those accused must be rehabilitated," said Yuri Afanasyev. "And in line with those people is Trotsky."

Afanasyev, in one of the boldest proposals to date in the campaign for greater openness, also called for publication in the Soviet Union of Trotsky's works, which have been banned.

Exonerating Trotsky of criminal charges would be another major step toward the rehabilitation of early Soviet leaders who were purged and killed by Kremlin leader Josef Stalin.

Publishing Trotsky's work and revoking the criminal charges against him would continue an intensifying campaign against the legacy of Stalin, who died in 1953.

It could also lead to re-examination of the key role that Trotsky played in the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution, creating the Red Army and leading the Communists to victory against counterrevolutionaries in the ensuing Russian Civil War.

That might lead Soviet historians to re-evaluate and possibly diminish the role played by Vladmir I. Lenin, the founder of the Soviet state, who relied heavily on Trotsky during the early years of Bolshevik rule.

The Soviets have already taken several steps in this direction, even publishing an article mildly critical of Lenin.

The journal Novy Mir reported this month that Lenin was excessively harsh in abolishing all private property, establishing labor camps, and heavily taxing peasants. The article said Lenin later saw that he was wrong.

Following Lenin's death in 1924, Stalin defeated Trotsky in a power struggle, forcing him out of the Communist Party in 1927 and out of the Soviet Union two years later.

Trotsky was accused of leading an anti-Soviet plot and was murdered in Mexico City in 1940, reportedly on Stalin's orders.

Until last fall, Trotsky was a "nonperson" in the Soviet Union, his writings and works universally condemned.

Asked whether the works of Trotsky and former Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev might be published soon, Afanasyev answered:

"I can speak on behalf on myself and think they should be republished and accessible for all...I think it's very strange when professors and teachers try to criticize Trotsky while they haven't read a single word by Trotsky," Afanasyev told a news conference at the Foreign Ministry press center.

Afanasyev said that exonerating Trotsky of criminal charges and publishing his books would not constitute an endorsement of his ideas, which are out of line with the more liberal policies of Gorbachev.

Trotsky, born Lev Bronstein, was the son of a prosperous Jewish farmer. He helped direct the coup that brought the Bolsheviks to power, then became commissar for foreign affairs and later war, creating and commanding the Red Army.

He is known as the main advocate of the "Theory of Permanent Revolution," which held that the Bolshevik Revolution was a prelude to class uprisings throughout Europe.

After the death of Lenin, Stalin rallied his forces under the slogan of "Socialism in One Country," arguing that a socialist state could be created in the Soviet Union, despite the failure of revolutions elsewhere in Europe.

Trotsky also advocated raising capital for building up industry at the expense of the peasants. Stalin, at that time, called for leniency against the peasants, backing a policy authored by Nikolai Bukharin and supported by the two other leading Bolsheviks, Lev Kamenev and Gregory Zinoviev.

Trotsky was feared by his rivals for his skills as an orator and organizer, his popularity among youth and his support in the Red Army.

Following the defeat of Trotsky, Stalin switched tactics, and together with Kamenev and Zinoviev, began forced collectivization of agriculture from 1929 to 1932, causing a famine and costing the lives of millions of peasants.

Stalin later had Bukharin, Kamenev and Zinoviev tried, sentenced and executed in the purges of 1936-37.

Bukharin, whose ideas are similar to those advocated by Gorbachev, was exonerated of criminal charges in February, as were Kamenev and Zinoviev on Monday.

The Soviet Supreme Court on Monday also exonerated Karl Radek and Gregory Pyatakov, who were convicted in 1937 of plotting with Trotsky against Stalin.

The exoneration of Radek and Pyatakov raised the possibility that Trotsky might receive like treatment. None of those exonerated would be fully rehabilitated until their party membership was restored.

Gorbachev, in a major speech Nov. 2, became the first Soviet leader in decades to mention Trotsky publicly, but he condemned Trotsky's call for world revolution.

Security Council again appeals for Sharpeville Six

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Security Council on Friday appealed to the South African government to grant mercy to the Sharpeville Six, who have been sentenced to hang for the death of a town councilor.

The United States, which sometimes vetoes measures against South Africa, joined in the plea. It was a clear signal to the Pretoria government of Washington's displeasure with the death sentences.

The resolution was adopted unanimously without debate. The 15-member council said it was convinced the executions would "further inflame an already grave situation in South Africa."

It called "once again upon the South African authorities to stay execution and commute the death sentences imposed on the Sharpeville Six." It was the second time in three months the council has passed such a resolution.

South African Ambassador A. Leslie Manley criticized the action. "This is blatant interference in the internal affairs of a member state of the United Nations," Manley said.

South Africa has ignored worldwide appeals for clemency for the six blacks, who were convicted in the 1984 death of a Sharpeville town councilor killed during a riot. They were not found guilty of actually participating in the slaying but were convicted on the basis of their involvement with the rioters.

"This council decision was taken in contravention of the charter of the U.N. This is entirely an internal matter which is the subject of due process of law in South Africa," Manley said in a telephone interview.

The Dutch government Friday also urged South Africa to commute the death sentences. South African Ambassador Frank Quint was summoned to the Dutch Foreign Ministry, where top official Henri Wijnaendts asked for clemency for the five men and one woman.

A stay of execution was granted March 17, the day before the six were to hang, and last week a judge extended the stay until July 19 but rejected a request to reopen their trial.

On March 16, the Security Council adopted a resolution identical to that approved Friday.

Pledge to serve Soviet army dropped from Polish oath

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The parliament on Friday adopted a new military oath that deletes a pledge to serve in alliance with the Soviet army, a clause long criticized as an affront to Polish sovereignty.

A brief statement by the official news agency PAP said the new oath, which was recommended by the government and the defense ministry, was passed unanimously.

The government has called the change merely a matter of updating antiquated language and has said it would not affect relations with the Soviets.

Previously, military inductees pledged to guard peace in "brotherly alliance with the Soviet army and other allied armies." An outlawed opposition group, Freedom and Peace, had long charged the oath affronted Polish sovereignty.

The new oath contains no reference to the Soviet Union, and the pledge is only to "guard peace in the brotherhood of arms with the allied armies."

It also drops a reference to defending Poland against "the threats of imperialism."

Government spokesman Jerzy Urban has stressed that the revised wording does not reflect any lessening of Poland's alliance with the Soviet Union.

"The alliance with the Soviet Union provides the foundation for the Polish armed forces," Urban said last March. "No matter how this truth is expressed in words, the essence of the matter will not change."

The new oath contains no reference to the Soviet Union, and the pledge is only to "guard peace in the brotherhood of arms with the allied armies." It also drops a reference to defending Poland against "the threats of imperialism."

Urban said the oath was changed because "it came into existence some time ago, so it requires some adjustments."

"All periods in time have their specific styles," he added.

Freedom and Peace leader Jacek Czaputowicz said many people have been imprisoned simply for opposing the old oath. He said his group deserved credit for the proposed change.

"These changes are because of the activity of Freedom and Peace," he said.

The government has denied that Freedom and Peace affected the decision to change the oath.

Freedom and Peace says 16 of its supporters are in prison, either for refusing to take the oath or to comply with Poland's mandatory two-year military draft.

The group also demands the right to alternative national service for conscientious objectors. The government has announced it is considering some form of such service, but said inductees would have to serve up to four years.

The old oath also contained the promise to "guard unyieldingly the rights of the working people guaranteed in the constitution, unyieldingly stand guard of the people's rule and remain faithful to the government of the Polish People's Republic."

The new oath says simply: "I swear to serve the homeland and the nation," with no specific reference to the government or working people.

Czaputowicz said it was significant that the references to socialism and the government were dropped.

"Some people from Freedom and Peace who refused to take the oath said they cannot swear to the government because this government is not our government," he said. "It is not the government of the whole nation."

Five Freedom and Peace supporters from Gdansk were detained outside Parliament on Thursday, 15 minutes after they sat down on the pavement to demand passage of the new oath, Czaputowicz said.

The protesters were also calling for release of Freedom and Peace member Slawomir Dutkiewicz, 24, of Szczecin, who was imprisoned for resisting the draft.

Dutkiewicz has been force-fed since he began a hunger strike in November. He has lost 44 pounds and his health has deteriorated significantly, according to Dr. Zofia Kuratowska, a physician who examined him in prison earlier this week.

Gramm tries to protect space station project

STATE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Phil Gramm hand-delivered Friday a request that President Reagan veto spending for several social service agencies if the bill arrives on his desk with deep cuts to the space station project.

In the hand-delivered letter, Gramm told Reagan that "committees of both the House and the Senate have now approved cuts in the NASA budget which will decimate that agency and probably destroy the Space Station."

A Senate appropriations subcommittee voted Thursday to cut funding for the space station to $200 million — less than a fourth of Reagan's request for $967 million for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. Officials say at least $900 million is needed to keep the space station on schedule.

The House Appropriations Committee voted earlier in the week to spend $387 million on research and development for the space station next year, and put $514.4 million on hold until the next president decides whether he wants to continue with the project.

"Mr. President, this legislation is aimed at the next election instead of the next generation," wrote Gramm, R-Texas. "It marks the third consecutive year that Congress will have made reductions in your budget for the space program."

Gramm wrote that if an acceptable compromise cannot be reached before final passage, "I strongly urge you to exercise your veto power-...and accompany that veto with a strongly worded message that clearly spells out the danger to America's future that is posed by the type of funding priorities reflected in this congressional action."

Funding for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration is included in legislation that also includes funds for the Department of Housing and Urban Development, the Veterans Administration and other independent agencies.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said meanwhile that he is working with members of the Senate Appropriations Committee to persuade them to transfer funds from other sources to the space station.

"We want to mobilize the pro-space members of Congress and frankly, we need the president's personal help," Bentsen said.

The Senate committee's space station bill calls on the next administration to review the project in January and if the new president wants it to continue, he would have to ask Congress for additional funds.

In the House version, the Appropriations Committee voted to spend $387 million on research and development on the space station. Another $65.4 million would be held in an account, and should the next president decide not to continue with the program, those funds would be used to shut down the program.

Additionally, $450 million would be held through April 15. If the president decides to continue with the program, the money would go to the space station. If not, $150 million would be transferred to Space Flight Control and Data Communications at NASA, and the remaining $300 million would be rescinded.

Baptists didn't spend as much as city had hoped

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The flow of dollars usually evident from alcohol sales during big conventions was barely a trickle during the Southern Baptist Convention, city restaurant and bar owners say.

While the 40,000 conventioneers consumed their share of food before leaving Friday, liquor sales, where restaurant owners make fat profits, nearly dried up.

"We had $7,000 in sales yesterday and only sold $150 in liquor, wine and beer all day," said Aimee Lipscomb, manager of the Lone Star Cafe on the Riverwalk. "Normally, with a real convention, we'd make another $2,000 on liquor."

Lone Star Cafe bartender Rick Montez said he could count on two hands the number of drinks he poured Tuesday.

"All I served for two straight hours at lunchtime was milk and Diet Coke," he said.

Jamie Vidrine, manager at Dick's Last Resort, said liquor sales usually account for 40 percent of total business, but estimated only about 20 percent of sales would come from alcohol during the convention, which ended Thursday.

"You've heard of the Boston Tea Party," he told the Morris News Service. "This is the Baptist Tea Party."

Some Baptists, however, don't always ride the teetotaling wagon. Several conventioneers daringly ordered beers, Vidrine said.

"But they asked us to put it in a red plastic cup so no one could see," he said. "Don't ever believe all Baptists don't drink, because that's not true."

Several restaurateurs said they expected more spending from the largest convention ever to come to this city. The Convention and Vistor's Bureau had estimated the Baptists would spend $15 million this week.

But the Baptists' thrifty ways even led the mayor to poke fun.

"The Baptists came to town with the Ten Commandments and a $10 bill and don't intend to break either one," quipped Mayor Henry Cisneros.

Vidrine said one table of conventioneers even brought their own lemonade to the restaurant so they didn't have to pay for drinks.

"I thought I had seen it all," he said.

Veterans' Peace Convoy on way to Houston

AUSTIN (AP) — Members of the Veterans' Peace Convoy, who were turned back at Laredo in their bid to deliver food and other supplies to Nicaragua, Friday left Austin for Houston as their trip to Washington continued.

"Convoy si, contras no," chanted about 40 sign-carrying demonstrators as the convoy of trucks, buses and cars passed the Federal Building about 1 p.m. en route to Houston.

"We want to take these vehicles right to the White House and direct our protest right to the White House," said Gerry Conden, a national convoy coordinator from San Francisco.

Conden, who said he is an Army veteran, said the itinerary includes night stops at Houston; Baton Rouge, La.; Birmingham, Ala.; Atlanta; and Raleigh, N.C., before arriving in Washington on Wednesday.

"We believe that our presence willl provide a focal point for even greater opposition than ever before to the ongoing policies of the Reagan administration against Nicaragua," Conden said.

Conden said 34 vehicles, and approximately 100 persons, were in the convoy.

He said the convoy has no major organizational money but is being financed "hand-to-mouth, day-to-day" by private contributions.

He also said members of the convoy had no plans to camp in Washington.

The convoy headed to Washington from Laredo after it was blocked at the Mexican border by federal officials.

U.S. Customs Service agents impounded four convoy vehicles Wednesday after the group tried to go into Mexico without export authorization. U.S. Treasury Department officials said the convoy's plan to leave the vehicles in Nicaragua would violate a trade embargo.

More than 300 people may have food poisoning

AUSTIN (AP) — More than 300 people reported symptoms of food poisoning to the Austin-Travis County Health Department after eating at a popular Lake Travis waterfront restaurant.

Health officials said Thursday the outbreak is the largest number of food poisoning cases reported in recent Austin history.

The Captain's Club, in the Hudson Bend area of northwestern Travis County, voluntarily shut its doors pending the outcome of the health department's investigation.

"This is a very significant case, especially since the restaurant serves between 3,000 and 4,000 people a week," said Bruce Truitt, public information officer for the health department.

"We are refraining from commenting until we find out exactly what the problems are concerning the Captain's Club or if there are any problems," said Ray Clark, one of the restaurant's managers.

Truitt said health officials have confirmed eight cases of shigella, a bacterial-born food illness that has symptoms of diarrhea, abdominal cramps, fever, headaches and chills.

"We have tentatively traced it back to the Captain's Club," Truitt said. He said that as many as 15 to 20 of the 300 people who have reported the symptoms may have been hospitalized.

Man goes beserk on bus, shot in burglary attempt

EL PASO (AP) — An unidentified man went berserk in a bus and later was shot to death while breaking into a house, authorities said.

The man was seated at the back of a Greyhound bus headed to Abilene Thursday morning when he got up and ran up the aisle of the bus.

"He went sort of berserk and ran toward the front of the bus and hit his head against the...windshield," Sheriff's Capt. Paco Aguirre said. "He shattered the windshield with his head and began pounding on the door."

The bus driver opened the door and let the man out 15 miles east of downtown El Paso. He wound up at a house about 1½ miles away in the suburb of Clint, Aguirre said.

A Clint resident said he heard a noise outside his house and saw the man trying to pry open a sliding glass door. The homeowner yelled at the man to leave, but he didn't, Aguirre said. The homeowner then grabbed a rifle and went outside. He approached the burglar, who picked up a shovel, Aguirre said.

The homeowner then shot the man once in the chest, Aguirre said. He was pronounced dead at the scene.

Poisoning hotline available

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas residents who suspect they have been exposed to pesticides and are unable to get local medical treatment can turn to a statewide emergency number for help, said state Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower Friday.

Bilingual assistance is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week, by dialing 1-800-832-7347, Hightower said.

Hightower said the Texas Department of Agriculture has discovered that some who have been exposed to pesticides have not been able to get proper medical attention because of the distance to clinics, lack of medical personnel with specialized training in treating pesticide poisoning or inability to pay for services.

Short-term pesticide poisoning effects include irritation of eyes, skin or throat; itching; rash; headaches; blurry vision; dizziness; excessive sweating; vomiting and chest pains; said Olga Moya, the department's farmworker liaison.

Some pesticides are suspected to have long-term effects that include tumors, cancer, birth defects, reproductive problems, skin problems and injury to the liver or other organs.

The department staff has a statewide list of clinics, physicians and laboratory services for testing, diagnosis and treatment of pesticide poisoning, he said.

Plane ran out of fuel

PERRYTON (AP) — A plane crash in Central Texas which killed four Panhandle residents may have occurred when the single-engine Cessna ran out of fuel, said a federal investigator.

While the cause of the June 10 crash has not been determined officially, National Transportation Safety Board investigator J.O. Johnson said the pilot told air traffic controllers in Austin that he was out of fuel.

"There was no fuel in the aircraft or very much on the ground," Johnson said.

There was no evidence of a fuel leak in the aircraft, he said.

The plane crashed in a hay field six miles south of Elgin and was carrying four men associated with Ochiltree General Hospital.

A memorial service for Jerry Weatherly, Roy Henry Grunden and Doug Holmes, all of Perryton, and Dr. V.S. Christopher of Booker was held Thursday at the hospital here.

The men were flying to Austin for a meeting, officials said.

Johnson said a final report on the crash is not likely to be issued by the NTSB for another six months.

Man indicted for fraud

AUSTIN (AP) — The president of an Austin company that sold nearly $800,000 worth of promissory notes to area residents in 1985 and 1986 has been indicted for securities fraud, the State Securities Board said Friday.

A Travis County grand jury returned eight indictments late Thursday against Jerry L. Pettiet, president of Realty Based Investments, Inc. The indictments charge him with defrauding investors by making false statements and by failing to disclose facts about his business in violation of the Texas Securities Act, the board said.

Pettiet is charged with falsely representing to investors that company assets were under control of a trustee and that the assets would be used as collateral to secure investments, the board said.

He also is charged with falsely representing how investors' funds would be used and with failing to disclose the fact that the company was not an IRS-approved custodian for individual retirement accounts, the board said.

If convicted, Pettiet faces up to 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Man with AIDS virus agrees to protect partners

EL PASO (AP) — A man who carries the AIDS virus has agreed to stop having unprotected sex with high school students, a health official says.

The unidentified man has been threatened with quarantine, but such an action would be difficult because no one has filed a criminal complaint againste him.

Under a new state law, a district judge can order a quarantine of an AIDS carrier if someone files a criminal complaint accusing the carrier of assault or attempted murder.

Two people — neither of whom were high school students — have filed non-criminal complaints with the City-County Health District, said Director Dr. Laurance Nickey.

One of the complaints said the man was known to have had sex with male high school students without using condoms or informing his partners of his condition.

Jaime Perez, director of the Rio Bravo Association, which counsels AIDS victims, said last week that he knows "first-hand" that the man has had sex with high school students and that the man has sought counseling.

'Littlest defector' writes book about fight for U.S. future

Polovchak

CHICAGO (AP) — When the kid next door runs away frnm home, he's liable to gdt in trouble with his folks. Vhen Walter Polovchak ran away from home at age 12, he created an international incident as "the littlest defector."

Eight years later, the Soviet-born Polovchak — now a U.S. citizen and still a celebrity of sorts — has written a book about his years-long fight for a future in America.

The battle, fought in the glare of intense media scrutiny, pitted Polovchak against his Ukrainian parents, the United States against the Soviet Union, and bleak memories of a far-away village against the enticements of the American dream.

"Everybody says it was Jell-O and bananas. Sure, that was a little part of it," Polovchak says, recalling his child's perspective when he decided to run away from his parents rather than return with them to the Soviet Ukraine.

"But there were a lot of other things — like freedoms of religion and the freedom of movement and freedom of speech."

Polovchak has no doubts about the weighty decision he made as a child.

"It was terrifying, but now that I look back on it, I have no regrets or anything like that," he says.

"Freedom's Child," written by Polovchak with Kevin Klose, deputy national editor at the Washington Post, and published by Random Hotre, is intended to servd several purposer: provide on-the-job-training for a mediZ career. help pax hhr college dxpenses — and offer a lersage.

"I'd like to get a point acrosr to the Amdrican people that they should appreciate freedom and not take it for granted," Polovchak sayr.

At agd 20, he looks like many of his American peers: brown-haired, average build, casually clad and wearing a gold chain around his neck. He works in the mail room at a Chicago public relations firm.

He dates — nobody special, he says — and likes movies, cars and skiing.

And after years as a media subject, Polovchak wants to be a TV anchorman.

His story began in 1980 when his parents, Michael and Anna Polovchak, decided to return to the Ukraine after just six months in the United States.

Walter and his sister, Natalie, then 17, refused to go. In July, they moved in with a cousin, Walter Polowczak.

Polovchak's book chronicles the hectic years that followed — the court hearings, the conflicts with his parents, the times he was guarded by special federal agents and the trauma of adjusting to a new country.

The fierce rebellion by a 12-year-old startled the family and many others. The Soviet Embassy insisted young Walter had been kidnapped. Tass, the Soviet news agency, said he had been bribed with promises of a bike and a car.

But Polovchak said the groundwork for his revolt was laid in the Ukrainian village of Sambir.

"One of the problems was that my family was never close," Polovchak says.

"My father was home twice a week, three times a week. My mother was working afternoons. My grandmother basically brought us up."

A year after his grandmother's death in 1979, the family came to Chicago at the invitation of Walter's aunt.

But Michael Polovchak wanted to go back home almost from the start, his son recalls.

Runaway Walter was granted asylum after the intervention of then-Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher — an action his parents challenged in court. Natalie's decision to stay behind was uncontested, apparently because of her age.

The story of his years in the limelight is told in first-person segments by Polovchak, his sister, his cousin and numerous others with roles in the long drama — Julian Kulas, his Ukrainian attorney; the American Civil Liberties Union, which represented his parents, and reporters.

"I was brought up with reporters on an everyday basis," Polovchak recalls. "After a while, it just became part of my life."

Missing are the recollections of his parents, who returned to the Soviet Union in 1981. They now live in the Ukrainian village of Lvov with two younger children. Walter has never seen his youngest sister, Julia, born in 1983.

His fight to stay began in juvenile court, after he was picked up as a runaway.

It ended in 1985 before a federal appeals court, which ruled his parents' rights had been violated by U.S. government action that barred Walter from leaving the country, and ordered a trial on the issues.

But by the time the case reached that stage, Polovchak was nearly 18. He became a U.S. citizen on Oct. 8, 1985, five days after his birthday.

He receives little more than holiday greetings from his parents now.

"I'm not mad at them," Walter says. "After all, they are my parents. I love them. I just had to do what was best for me."

He won't consider visiting them because he is afraid he would be forced to stay in the Soviet Union.

Undocumented workers still taking risks for jobs in U.S.

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — "They keep crossing the river," said Mario Trejo in Ciudad Juarez on the Rio Grande.

He was talking about Mexican laborers and how the new U.S. immigration law wasn't stopping them from illegally crossing the border to work in the United States.

"And people still are coming from the central and south of Mexico hoping to go to the other side," Trejo said on the telephone. He is the press chief for Mayor Jaime Bermudez in Ciudad Juarez, on the other side of the Rio Grande from El Paso, Texas.

He and other Mexican authorities believe the unwritten law of supply and demand is winning out over the 1986 U.S. Immigration Reform and Control Act, also known as the Simpson-Rodino law, even though jobs are going begging in Northern Mexico.

"The undocumented migrants continue entering the United States as if there never had been a Simpson-Rodino law," Jorge Bustamante, director of the Tijuana-based Northern Border College and a leading critic of the immigration law, wrote in a recent newspaper column.

The law's supporters say its intent is to help the United States, "regain control of its borders."

U.S. Ambassador Charles Pilliod Jr. said in mid-May, however, that the "law was not conceived to eliminate the movement of Mexican workers to the United States."

"The United States needs these workers — not only in the farm area, but also in the many service sectors such as food outlets, hotels, etc.," Pilliod said in a speech to the American Chamber of Commerce in Mexico City.

The law gave legal status to aliens who were able to prove they have lived in the United States at least since 1982. In doing so, the aliens ensured themselves of such rights as a minimum wage, health care, and education.

Those who entered the United States after 1982 without legal documentation remain subject to deportation.

Pilliod said, however, that predictions of mass deportations are unfair.

"Granted, the Border Patrol will continue to apprehend and return undocumented aliens to their home countries as always, but there are no plans for mass roundups," he said.

Bustamante and others contend that the United States cannot reverse a 40-year trend with a law, because working in the United States, without documents if necessary, has become part of the lifestyle of thousands of Mexican families.

Mexicans who go to work in the United States, even those taking the most menial jobs, can earn five to 10 times what they earn at home, where the minimum wage is the equivalent of about $3.45 a day.

The Northern Border College estimates Mexicans working in the United States generate about $1 billion in foreign income for Mexico.

The Simpson-Rodino law gave illegal aliens who met certain requirements until May 4 to apply for legal status in the United States. The majority of the more than 1.6 million people who applied are Mexican.

But U.S. immigration officials estimate that half or more of the 6 million to 7 million illegal aliens in the United States are Mexican.

And nobody is reporting either a mass exodus or mass deportations of Mexicans since the May 4 deadline passed.

"Just as we predicted, based on investigations we do at the Northern Border College, nothing extraordinary has happened since May 5," Bustamante wrote in Excelsior of Mexico City.

Northern Border College offices from Tijuana to Matamoros have been studying undocumented workers for three years.

"For them, the main factor that determines their willingness to run the risks is the labor market," Bustamante wrote. "As long as they keep hiring, they will continue entering."

A key intent of the Simpson-Rodino law is to stop the hiring of illegal aliens by U.S. employers.

In the toughest provision of the law, employers who knowingly hire undocumented workers can receive stiff fines and other sanctions. Agricultural employers have until Dec. 1 before sanctioning begins.

Meanwhile, the crossings continue.

"The majority of those who cross here are farm workers and they've been given special considerations," said Mayor Ernesto Gomez Lira of Reynosa, south of McAllen, Texas.

Trejo and Gomez said their city governments have programs to help returning undocumented migrants find work and housing but so far the program have not been necessary.

"There's a tremendous need for workers in Juarez," Trejo said, referring to the booming foreign-owned assembly operations that have created a demand for workers.

"There's a real war going on. One company offers a 50 percent discount on cafeteria food and another offers to feed them for free," Trejo said.

"We want people to come so they can go to work."

Murray O'Hair celebrates 1963 ban on school prayer

AUSTIN (AP) — Atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair said a celebration Friday was the first time she has commemorated the 1963 U.S. Supreme Court decision outlawing school prayer.

"There wasn't anything to celebrate before. We were still struggling," said Mrs. O'Hair, 70, as she prepared for festivities celebrating the 25th anniversary of the court decision, which resulted from a suit she filed.

Now, she said, "We've made it. We're here. There is no way that we can be pushed out of society any more. There are too many atheists now. And we are a powerful symbol for all of them."

American Atheists, the organization Mrs. O'Hair founded, began the anniversary celebration with a ribbon-cutting for its new headquarters. The building cost $1.75 million before renovations, and was paid for in cash, as is the group's custom, Mrs. O'Hair said.

Along with the "silver anniversary" celebration of the court decision, the atheists planned tours of the headquarters and a weekend celebration of the summer solstice.

The Supreme Court in 1963 ruled that mandatory school prayer and reverential Bible reading violated the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution. Mrs. O'Hair — then Madalyn Murray — in 1959 had asked that her son, Bill, not be required to pray in his public school in Baltimore, Md.

Although the Southern Baptist Convention did not plan anniversary activities, an official of the organization said the court decision was wrong. The convention in the past has approved resolutions on the matter, said the Rev. Ralph Smith, an Austin pastor and recently elected president of the convention's pastors conference.

"We have not given up. We believe that the ruling of the Supreme Court is in opposition to all of our American tradition and even our constitution," Smith said. "We're firmly convinced the day will come when that will be reversed."

"There has been a long struggle," said Mrs. O'Hair, citing hostile actions that greeted her court victory. But she said her efforts are beginning to be successful.

The 17,500-square foot headquarters of the atheist group, which counts 38,000 families as members, contains computerized printing equipment for the group's magazine, and equipment for taping its cable television and radio shows.

An extensive library of atheist pamphlets, leaflets and books is in the building, along with a library of religious works. Seven telephone lines are available for calls, and a bookstore sells books, T-shirts and posters.

Mrs. O'Hair's son Jon and granddaughter Robin Murray-O'Hair, Bill's daughter, work with her. Mrs. O'Hair says she does not discuss Bill, who has become a Christian. The headquarters has a staff of 16 and four volunteers.

The organization has a budget of about $750,000 this year, Mrs. O'Hair said, and it has chapters in 35 states.

"The single thing we've done — what you've seen today — is I have established atheism as an institution in the United States and it's going to stay," Mrs. O'Hair said.

"Many, many people come to me and say 'Madalyn, you've mellowed.' What has happened is they've come to understand that atheism is here, and it's not going to go away," she said. "I haven't mellowed. I'm just as hard-line as I ever was."

Atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair, center, joins her son, Jon, and granddaughter Robin Murray-O'Hair for a celebration marking the 1963 Supreme Court decision banning school prayer. Mrs. O'Hair used the 25th anniversary of the ruling to dedicate the American Atheists' new headquarters in Austin.

Breast Cancer Detection Unit Available to Area Women

According to the American Cancer Society, one out of eleven women in the United states will develop breast cancer sometime in her lifetime. It is currently estimated that over 37,000 women die each year as the result of breast cancer.

Ninety percent of breast cancer are diagnosed by women or their physicians finding a lump in the breast. Women who are diagnosed with a lump large enough to feel have a 50 percent five year survival rate. A woman who is diagnosed as having breast cancer by mammography, before a lump can be felt, has a 97% five year survival rate. A mammogram can detect a cancer this small, & even before it can be felt. The American Cancer Society has established guidelines for a mammography in asymptomatic women.(Women who have no symptoms of disease). These guidelines have been adopted by the American Academy of Family Physicians, American College of Obstericians and Gynecologists, and the American College of Radiology. These guidelines are:

I. 35-40 years of age - One baseline mammogram.
II. 40-50 years of age - A mammogram every 1-2 years depending on breast type and risk factor.
III. 50 years of age and over. An annual physical examination and annual mammogram.
IV. Asymptomatic women under 50 years of age with significant high risk factors should be examined at appropriate intervals. These risk factors include previous breast cancer and family history of cancer.
V. A symptomatic woman should have a mammogram at any age when she experiences a mass, nipple discharge, skin changes or unexplained breast pain.

A screening mammogram is an x-ray of the breast using extremely low dosages of radiation (usually comparable to dental x-rays) and is designed to find very early cancers.

A female technologist who is highly trained in mammography will perform the examination.

The charge for the screening mammogram is $90.00. The unit accepts cash, check, Visa, Mastercard and American Express.

Painter's art inspires man to preach

NACOGDOCHES, Texas (AP) — Lee Phillips learned at a young age to be independent.

Phillips was still a boy when his father died and young Lee decided he needed to learn a trade and be self-supporting. The one he chose has fascinated him throughout his 87 years.

"I came home one day and told my mother that I wanted to learn to paint signs," he recalls. "And she said that would be fine, but that there was no one in the family to teach me."

But Phillips didn't let that stop him. "I was just a kid," he said. "But I went down to a sign painter and asked him if I could go to work for him. He told me that he didn't have much work for me, but he would pay me a dollar and a half a week to stay around and answer the phone. I worked for him until I got married, and I was making $9 an hour then."

He was 17 then. Phillips and his wife, Ruby, have been married 70 years.

Phillips learned a lot from the sign painter in Waco, and even though he loved the trade, he decided it wasn't his major calling in life.

"When I was 20 years old, I saw our need of God and started attending the Church of the Nazarene," Phillips said. "Later I moved to Houston and started studying and working there."

Phillips spent 40 years in the ministry before he retired in 1960. He remained active as a guest minister after giving up the pulpit as a full-time job.

Eight years ago, the Phillipses moved to Nacogdoches. He started working for a local sign company doing gold leaf painting.

"I wasn't all that interested in being retired," he said. "You have to do something to make a living."

Now self-employed, Phillips keeps busy.

"There's a lot more to the trade than people think," he said. "There are just three basic alphabets that a sign man uses — plain, script and Old English. But every sign man's work looks a little different and has a little different design.

"Every established painter in a community can recognize the other painters' work by the certain swing that each painter has."

Phillips says he has no plans to retire from the sign business in the near future. "Young love exerts itself," he said. "No matter what other profession you might journey into, the first love keeps coming back."

Beaumont probation officer helps girl find new life

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — She'd been a prostitute from the time she was 14, about the same time she started doing drugs.

It wasn't long before one pastime supported the other, and LaSonya Primes roamed the streets of Beaumont before she was out of junior high school, sometimes doing so much speed she'd stay awake for weeks.

She just wanted to "test the water," she says, in a world where everyone else was doing it — people who put more of a premium on not getting caught than finishing school, and more value on getting high than on eating a meal in a day's time.

She was furious when her boyfriend was sent to prison this past year — she can't even remember what for — and she just got madder when she was picked up for unauthorized use of a motor vehicle while on probation for possession of marijuana.

During the two months in the Jefferson County Jail, she got to the point she didn't feel anything any more, didn't care.

Enter Mary Randall, a Jefferson County probation officer.

Today the two laugh about the trip they made to Houston last September, when LaSonya, still high from the night before "drugging it," fought back tears and tried to tune out what Mary was saying.

She wasn't dumping LaSonya in a home, Mary tried to tell her, and she only was trying to get her out of an environment — where one of her relatives listed her address as that of a Beaumont liquor store — that had caused many of LaSonya's problems.

"All I knew is she held my freedom in that manila folder, and she was taking it away," LaSonya says. "I was upset."

But after three weeks at The Shoulder, Inc., in Houston, which offers long-term residential therapy for problem-ridden drug and alcohol abusers, LaSonya thought Mary might have something after all.

And she remembers with fondness the bag containing clothes and personal items, "right down to new underwear and brand-new stockings," LaSonya says, that Mary secretly packed and put in the trunk the day she took her to Houston.

Mary has always kept a keen eye out to catch sales at stores, and she filled LaSonya's bag with items she'd found on sale during the past few months. Sale-watching has come in handy more than once since Mary became a probation officer a year and a half ago, she says, offering a visitor a piece of Easter candy she'd bought on sale the week after Easter.

"I wanted her to have some nice things, for her not to start out there feeling inferior to the other people there," Mary said. And if those things came out of her own pocket, well, it was worth in, she says.

The Shoulder operates a 12-step recovery program similar to that of Alcoholics Anonymous, and it initially focuses on raising the client's self-esteem. The program offers daily "functions" that begin with a 5 a.m. breakfast and chapel service not long after, and includes Bible study, group therapy, physical exercise and ends each night with another chapel service.

Mary chose The Shoulder rather than other Southeast Texas rehabilitation programs "because LaSonya didn't know anybody in Houston. Sending her there was like sending her to a foreign country, and that was my intent. She didn't have any support from the negative things that had caused her problems."

Normally, candidates for the program go through an interview process, but Mary drove to Houston that day with no intention of taking "no" for an answer. "I called them before I left and told them I was prepared to humble myself and beg, but I needed to get somebody into the program," Mary said.

A month passed, and LaSonya received a keyring that signifies she spent a month sober and drug-free. She continued to earn the keyrings.

"My 22nd birthday was the first I'd spent sober that I can remember," she says. She says it won't be her last. "I don't want to ever get too comfortable in my sobriety because I don't want to ever get back to where I came from.

"I don't want to dwell on my past but I don't want to forget it, either," she says. "I'm always just a puff or a sip away from where I used to be."

She's not sure what she wants to major in when she is released from The Shoulder, but she wants to get a college degree.

"I've got book sense — I made straight A's before I dropped out of school," she says. "All the things I dreamed about doing when I was drugging, I am fully capable of doing now."

South African blacks lack basic housing

By DAVID CRARY

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Within an hour's drive of the Johannesburg Stock Exchange, the hub of Africa's richest economy, live roughly a million black squatters in shantytowns and backyard shacks.

Even in their squalor, many are under constant threat of eviction. How to deal with the squatters, and with a severe nationwide housing shortage for blacks, is one of the apartheid government's most difficult dilemmas.

In theory, the country's white leaders favor black homeownership, believing it promotes middle-class values and undercuts support for revolutionary change. In practice, the government is providing only a small fraction of the land, houses and funds needed to resolve the crisis.

"The desperate lack of homes for those in the lower income groups is like a time bomb," The Sowetan, the largest black-oriented daily newspaper, said in a recent editorial.

Squatting and homelessness are decades-old problems in South Africa, but the situation has worsened since 1986, when the government abolished the so-called pass laws that restricted the rights of blacks to live in urban areas.

Tens of thousands of blacks who previously feared arrest or forced removal have set up shacks on the outskirts of the big cities, where job opportunities are better.

The population of the Mofolo squatter camp in Soweto, Johannesburg's main black township, has mushroomed to an estimated 40,000 since it was established in 1986. Soweto's black administration charges the squatters rent but provides virtually no services.

IN SOWETO and other similar townships, black local officials often have initiated efforts to evict squatters and demolish their homes.

The Black Sash civil rights group has called for a moratorium on squatting arrests and demolitions until alternative sites are provided.

"These people have nowhere to live," said a recent Black Sash report. "They are not living in these illegal and hopeless conditions because they want to."

The government professes concern about the squatters' plight, yet it is toughening anti-squatting laws.

Constitutional Development Minister Chris Heunis says legislation is being drafted to increase the maximum penalties for illegal squatting to a $5,000 fine or five years in jail.

He said provisions would be made to allow for compulsory, summary evictions of squatters, even those who contend that they have permission from a landowner.

Along with these proposals, the government has appointed planning experts to identify white-owned land in the Johannesburg-Pretoria area that could be allocated for new black townships. But this endeavor is complicated by protests from whites who do not want large black settlements near their homes.

WEILER'S FARM, one of the few squatter camps formally recognized by the government, is due to be eliminated later this year following complaints by whites that the presence of blacks has boosted crime and depressed property values.

"The squatter problem is like measles — it spreads all over," said Koos van der Merwe, who represents the area for the far-right Conservative Party in Parliament.

Weiler's Farm, 25 miles south of Johannesburg, has grown in two years from 2,000 to more than 8,000 residents. They are due to be moved in October to a site further from Johannesburg.

The government estimates South Africa's housing backlog at more than 700,000 units. Some experts calculate that 5 million blacks, almost one in every five, are without a permanent, legal home.

It is estimated that by the year 2000, about 2 million new homes will be needed, or more than 200,000 a year at an annual cost of roughly $2.25 billion.

The private sector has assumed a major role in trying to reduce the housing backlog. Last year, the South African Housing Trust was formed, with the government providing the rand equivalent of $200 million on the understanding that business groups would contribute twice that amount.

BUT EVEN if this program is sustained through the end of the century, it would supply barely one-fourth of the funds needed to meet black housing demands.

The Housing Trust seeks to provide homes at a cost of about $7,000, to be purchased with installment payments of $58 a month.

However, experts estimate that only 25 percent of South Africa's blacks can make a meaningful contribution toward housing costs. Most squatters, and many other blacks, earn no more than $100 a month.

Asked if they could provide homes at less than $2,500, a cost perhaps within reach for a majority of black families, officials of the Housing Trust reported: "The odds are against us having success."

Railroad 'selling' ties

SAGINAW, Mich. (AP) — A fund-raising project is offering ties that are only $2.50 apiece, but men would have a hard time wearing one.

Business and government leaders attempting to resurrect a vintage railroad line between three southern Saginaw County towns are "selling" 1,100 ties needed to repair parts of track in order to raise money for the project.

Midland's Lia Watson
...the touch of confidence

Midlander captures Women's WT title

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

The 54th annual Women's West Texas Golf Association featured golfers with hundreds of years in cumulative golfing experience.

Now explain how championship flight finalists Lia Watson and Candy Morgan have played only eight years between them.

Morgan (three years) went into Friday's final match on the heels of a six-under-par performance on her home Mission Country Club course, but the former District 4-5A golf champion from Odessa Permian had bad luck on the greens on the front nine and Watson took advantage for a resounding 7 and 5 win.

Watson, wife of former Midland Lee golfer Montie Watson who has been playing less than five years, won six of the first eight holes in her championship match. But Morgan, who had had five makeable putts skirt the hole on the front nine, had it happen again on No. 12.

THE ODESSA youngster brought her second shot to within 10 feet of the pin, but couldn't convert the birdie putt. Watson, meanwhile, had shanked her second shot to the right of the green, but chipped to within 10 feet on her third shot and made her putt for par to remain 6-up.

Morgan then had to win all remaining holes to force a tie, but the match ended when she couldn't make up any ground on No. 13.

Watson was surprised to only play 13 holes Friday.

"I thought it would go 18, because she has a pretty good stroke," the 22-year-old said. "I think she (Morgan) has a pretty good stroke. Her putts just didn't drop.

"She hit them so close, she deserved some of them to drop," Watson added.

Watson was a volleyball player at her Corvallis, Ore. high school, and didn't take up golf until she was 17. She played last season on the Arizona State University golf team, but she said her game didn't really take off until her husband started working with her.

"He is probably the key to my success," Watson said. "He helped me change my putting grip and we worked on it a lot."

Watson has also changed her mental outlook.

"This past year, I really worked hard on my mental attitude," she said. "I used to have a bad temper and get really mad at myself."

But Watson felt the pressure was off Friday, because of her performances earlier in the week.

"I was a winner in my own eyes because I made it this far," she said. "Whether I won or lost, it was a great experience."

Watson, who plays out of the Hogan Park golf course, picked a toughie to beat for her first-ever tournament title. Morgan's string of accomplishments includes a second-place finish at the Region I meet and eighth in the state tournament.

And after shooting a 78 in Monday's qualifying round, the former Panther linkstress blew through her first three opponents in match play leading into the finals.

Morgan said she was confident going into Friday's match, but...

"I hit the ball well, but I didn't make my putts," she said. "I thought they'd start falling sooner or later. It was the most frustrating thing."

Simpson gets hot, Norman just out

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Defending champion Scott Simpson took sole control of the early second-round lead Friday in the 88th U.S. Open Golf Championship, and injured Greg Norman took a flight in search of medical attention.

Simpson, seeking to become the first man since Ben Hogan in 1951 to successfully defend his title, moved in front with a 5-under-par 66 that gave him a one-stroke lead at the halfway point.

Simpson's round, which came despite a double-bogey from the water on the 11th hole and a bogey on the 18th, ranked as the best of the tournament and left him at 7-under-par 135 after two trips over The Country Club.

The injury was tentatively diagnosed as a torn ligament. Norman, his arm in a sling, left immediately for Birmingham, Ala. to consult with Dr. James Andrews, an orthopedic surgeon.

The Australian star said it was too soon to determine the extent of the injury or when he may be able to return to competition. He said he was unsure whether he would be able to play in the British Open in England next month.

Norman, one of the pre-tournament favorites, was injured when he hit a rock while playing a shot from the rough on the ninth hole.

"It sounded like he hit a boulder," said Larry Mize, who was playing with Norman.

After Norman departed, Mize went on to a 67 that put him at 136, one shot behind Simpson.

With about one-quarter of the field of 156 still on the course, Bob Gilder was third at 137 after shooting a 69.

Masters champion Sandy Lyle of Scotland, British Open title-holder Nick Faldo of England, Paul Azinger and Fred Couples were next among the early finishers at 139.

Couples and Faldo shot 67s. Azinger, the 1987 Player of the Year, shot a 70 and Lyle, who shared the first-round lead, matched par with a 71.

D.A. Weibring, with a 69, was at 140, one shot ahead of Lanny Wadkins, who shot a 71.

Mike Nicolette, whose first-round 68 gave him a share of the lead with Lyle and Gilder, was in the next-to-last threesome.

Jack Nicklaus, 48, holder of a record 18 major professional titles, had a second-round 73 and a 147 total, five over par and in danger of failing to qualify for the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

"I'll probably miss the cut by one shot," Nicklaus said.

Injured Greg Norman
...ninth hole wrist problems

U.S. Open

Tom Watson, at 145 after matching par on Friday, appeared safe. PGA champion Larry Nelson also was at 145 after a 67.

Norman, who said he has had previous problems with his left wrist, said he "felt something pop" when he hit the rock which was covered by high grass.

"I tried to persevere," he said. But, after playing two shots on the 10th hole, he told Mize, "Well, fellows, I can't play."

Norman, a former British Open champion and winner of five tournaments around the world this year, was 4-over when he sought medical attention.

Mize, who dropped a 60-foot birdie putt on the eighth hole, was 2-under for the day when Norman dropped out and went to 3-under with a 20-foot putt on the 12th.

He three-putted for bogey on the next hole, then got it back with an eight-footer for birdie on the par-5 14th.

That put him 5-under par for the tournament and in the lead.

"I knew I was playing well. When you know you're playing well, and in the lead, you get excited, pumped up," Mize said.

Mize, whose playoff pitch-in birdie defeated Norman for the 1987 Masters title, dropped a 20-foot putt for birdie on the 15th, lofted an 8-iron shot from the rough to within four feet of the flag on the 17th and went to 7-under for the tournament.

But he lost a shot after visiting two bunkers on the 18th and eventually making a four-foot putt for a bogey that, he said, "I was very happy to have."

Bill Davidson carries the big stick at Angel Stadium as the Midland Angels' general manager.

Davidson's Angel job hardly sports related

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

Bill Davidson remembers well July 1984. It may, in fact, be one of the highlights of his career.

It was at 2 o'clock one morning that Davidson, now the general manager of the Midland Angels, called and woke Eric Davis.

Why, would you ask, would waking up a baseball superstar at two in the morning be such a thrill?

Well, for starters, it was the subject matter of the call — Davidson had been told by the Cincinnati Reds' hierarchy to disturb the sleeping star and inform him it was time to transfer from a Triple A Wichita uniform to the threads of the Cincinnati Reds.

And those were the good years ... those hot summers in Wichita. Davidson was working in his first job in sports management and during his tenure there, Wichita fielded such present day greats as Davis, Kal Daniels, Tom Browning and Charlie Puleo.

But it was Davis he remembers most.

"He was a nice guy," Davidson said. "It might've been 110 in Wichita, but he'd have his leather pants on, driving his black BMW."

With all these Wichita memories, you'd think things may be like that here in Midland, too, right?

Wrong.

Davidson — who, by all means thoroughly enjoys his work — will be the first to tell you he's a businessman-slash-salesman who just happens to work for a product that is sports related.

As the Angels' GM, the 28-year-old bespectacled Davidson, who calls Detroit home, sells tickets and advertising in the off-season and runs the team's business operations during the season.

"Most people's perception of (general managers) is that you are the source who signs players, negotiates contracts, evaluates talent," Davidson said. "That's all true ... except in minor league baseball.

"My job is really focused in two areas — and it needs to be retitled — call it sales director/business manager."

A Purdue grauate with a bachelor's degree in public relations and journalism, Davidson obtained his master's in sports management at Wichita (Kan.) State.

Davidson said that 50 percent of his job is sales oriented — season tickets, promotionals, sponsorship, billboard space ...

"The other 50 percent — which is in-season — I would be more of a business manager. Making sure we have the appropriate support vehicles and making sure we've executed everything we've sold."

Davidson heads a staff of only five full-timers in the Angels' Midland office. He is assisted by John Frey (Director of Operations), Kevin Temperley (Director of Marketing), Deene Ehlis (Director of Broadcasting) and LuAnn Wall (Director of Community Services).

Angels lose, but now can start over

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

Whew!

You can sure bet the Midland Angels are glad to say goodbye to the San Antonio Missions. Even happier they won't see them again until August 10.

The Missions concluded the first half of the 1988 Texas League season Friday night with a 6-5 scraper over the Angels. The victory meant little for San Antonio, which had clinched the first half championship Tuesday night with a 5-2 win over Midland.

At the half-way mark, San Antonio boasts a 42-26 record and a four game lead over second-place El Paso; the Angels complete the half with a 28-40 mark, in last place and 14 games off the pace.

San Antonio pitchers surrendered just six hits Friday against the Angels with Midland's highlight coming in the bottom of the fourth.

Dan Grunhard led off the frame with a single and was followed by back-to-back walks to Jeff Manto and Tom Alfredson to load the bases. Second baseman Norm Carrasco, who entered the game hitting .261, blasted a grand slam home run over the left field wall that gave the Halos a brief 4-3 lead.

The Missions tied it in their half of the fifth when Luis Lopez doubled home Mike Huff, who reached first and went to second on starting pitcher Todd Eggertsen's consecutive errors.

Carrasco's blast was the only substantial high point of the night for Midland, but even his heroics were overshadowed by the offensive play of San Antonio right-fielder Manny Benitez.

Benitez finished the night 4-for-4 with three doubles, one run scored and two RBI, including the game winner.

In the seventh, Walt McConnell singled and went to second on a single by Lopez. After catcher Adam Brown struck out, reliever Vinicio Cedeno came on and, on a 2-1 count, yielded Benitez' third double of the evening, the clincher.

San Antonio middle man Mike Schweighoffer (4-2) earned the victory for the Missions, pitching two innings and allowing just one earned run on two hits.

But it was the late inning performance of Tony Mack that proved the best of the night. In just two innings, he faced eight batters, and of the six outs he recorded, five were strikeouts.

ANGEL DUST: The Angels open a six game home set with El Paso tonight ... With a 39-27 record, Shreveport laid claim to the first-half championship in the TL Eastern Division ... At 28-40, the Angels hold down the worst winning percentage (.412) in the league ...

Murphy dumps Houston twice

NL Roundup

ATLANTA — Dale Murphy's run-scoring single with one out capped a five-run ninth inning that rallied the Atlanta Braves past the Houston Astros 6-5 Friday for a doubleheader sweep.

Murphy's 10th home run with two out in the eighth inning gave the Braves a 4-3 victory in the opener. In the first game, the Braves trailed 3-0.

The Braves had seven hits off three Houston pitchers in the ninth. It was the first time the Braves had won a game when trailing after eight innings. They came in, 0-36.

Jerry Royster opened the ninth with a pinch single and Ron Gant followed with a single to chase reliever Rocky Childress. Juan Agosto then gave up consecutive RBI singles to Ken Oberkfell and Gerald Perry.

Ken Griffey greeted Dave Smith, 3-4, with a run-scoring single that scored Oberkfell and sent Perry to third. After Andres Thomas struck out, Ozzie Virgil singled in the tying run to set up Murphy's game winner.

The victory went to Juan Eichelberger, 2-0, who gave up one hit in three innings.

Glenn Davis had hit a two-run homer and disgruntled pitcher Joaquin Andujar allowed one run in five innings to help Houston take a 5-1 lead into the bottom of the ninth.

Andujar, activated between games, had threatened to retire rather than pitch, contending baseball officials singled him out unfairly for throwing inside.

Andujar was fined $500 last week by National League President Bart Giamatti for hitting Andre Dawson of the Chicago Cubs, almost hitting Tony Pena of the St. Louis Cardinals and walking off the mound toward Pena.

Andujar allowed eight hits with one walk and three strikeouts.

Murphy won the opener with a line shot over the right-field fence on a 1-0 pitch from reliever Larry Andersen, 1-3.

Paul Assenmacher, 2-3, picked up the victory with one inning of hitless relief and Bruce Sutter retired the side in order in the ninth to gain his 10th save. Sutter has seven saves in last seven save opportunities and has allowed one run in last 10 appearences.

Padres 7, Dodgers 4

LOS ANGELES — Tony Gwynn's two-run triple highlighted a five-run San Diego sixth inning as the Padres beat Los Angeles in the first game of a doubleheader..

The victory continued the Padres' success this season against the Dodgers, who have led the National League West much of the season but have won only two of eight games with San Diego.

Ed Whitson, who has won four straight, pitched 7⅔ innings and allowed 10 hits while improving to 7-5.

Jeff Hamilton's RBI single made it 7-3 in the eighth and Mark Davis relieved and got the last four outs for his 11th save in 11 opportunities.

Tim Leary, 5-5, shut out the Padres on two hits through the first five innings, but San Diego rallied on five hits and a walk to go ahead 5-1 in the sixth.

Whitson started the rally when he doubled to lead off the sixth. Following Marvell Wynne's infield single, Roberto Alomar singled to score Whitson and Gwynn put the Padres ahead with his triple. The other runs in the inning came on sacrifice flies by Keith Moreland and Chris Brown.

John Shelby's run-producing single gave Los Angeles a 1-0 lead in the first, and they got their second run on Franklin Stubb's RBI single.

Mike Sharperson's sacrifice fly made 7-4 in the ninth.

Cubs 7, Expos 3

CHICAGO — Vance Law had two hits and drove in two runs.

Rick Sutcliffe, making only his second start since coming off the disabled list on May 21, allowed seven hits in six-plus innings and improved to 5-4.

Tim Raines hit his seventh home run of the season leading off the fifth and Sutcliffe opened the seventh by yielding an infield single to Luis Rivera, then loaded the bases by walking pinch-hitter Herm Whittingham and Raines.

Les Lancaster, who got his second save, relieved and pinch-hitter Graig Nettles brought Montreal within 7-2 with a sacrifice fly. The Expos' final run scored when Lancaster balked Whittingham home.

The Cubs chased Bryn Smith with two runs in the fifth. Dawson singled with one out and Ryne Sandberg dropped Smith to his knees by singling sharply back up the middle. The Cubs then pulled off a double steal and Smith loaded the bases with an intentional walk to Mark Grace.

But that strategy backfired when Law singled to score Dawson and Sandberg and move Grace to third. The Expos then brought on Joe Hesketh to relieve.

Hesketh threw a wild pitch to move Law to second and Damon Berryhill followed with a sacrifice fly for a 6-1 lead. After an intentional pass to Jackson, Sutcliffe singled to score Law.

Phillies 3, Mets 1

NEW YORK — Mike Schmidt hit his 536th career home run and Kevin Gross allowed seven hits in 8⅔ innings as Philadelphia beat the New York Mets and Dwight Gooden.

The home run tied Schmidt for seventh place on the all-time list with Mickey Mantle.

Schmidt hit his sixth homer of the season on a 3-2 pitch with one out in the fourth inning to give the Phillies a 1-0 lead. Schmidt had not hit a homer in his previous 100 at-bats.

Schmidt is 11-for-48 in his career against Gooden with five homers and 12 runs batted in.He has 48 home runs and 157 RBI against the Mets in his career.

The RBI was the 1,537th of Schmidt's career, tying him for 24th place on the all-time list with Joe DiMaggio.

Reds 6, Giants 0

CINCINNATI — Danny Jackson pitched a five-hitter and Kal Daniels and Lloyd McClendon each drove in two runs.

Jackson, 7-3, walked two and struck out eight for his third shutout and fifth complete game of the season.

The Reds got their fifth victory in six games by handing the Giants their fifth loss in six games.

The Giants didn't arrive in town until 6 a.m. EST Friday following an exhibition game at Phoenix, Ariz., Thursday night. They fueled a decisive four-run fourth inning by Cincinnati with sloppy play.

Reds center fielder Eric Davis was hit by a pitch on the left elbow by Hammaker in the first inning. Team spokesman Jim Ferguson said X-rays showed no fracture. It wasn't immediately known whether Davis would be sidelined by the injury.

Cardinals 7, Pirates 3

PITTSBURGH — Joe Magrane allowed five hits over eight innings in his second start since coming off the disabled list and Willie McGee hit his first homer as St. Louis ended a six-game losing streak.

Tony Pena added a two-run single in the third and Ozzie Smith scored three runs as the Cardinals ended their longest losing streak of the season.

Magrane, 1-1, struck out six in his longest outing of the year. He was on the disabled list from April 16 through June 10 with a torn muscle in his right side and hadn't worked longer than seven innings in his previous four starts.

Todd Worrell got the last three outs for St. Louis, allowing a run on Andy Van Slyke's sacrifice fly.

The Cardinals took a 1-0 lead in the first when Smith walked, advanced on starter Mike Dunne's balk and wild pitch and scored on Tom Brunansky's two-out single.

Dunne, 4-5, who walked 10 in an 8-2 victory over Philadelphia last Saturday, was again hurt by erractic control. Smith walked with one out in the third inning and moved to third on McGee's hit-and-run single. McGee advanced to second on the play on right fielder Darnell Coles' throwing error. Pena followed with a two-run single.

Luis Alicea hit a sacrifice fly in the fourth before the Cardinals made it 6-0 in the fifth. Smith reached on second baseman Jose Lind's fielding error and McGee followed with a homer to right field.

Homecourt: Lakers' hope

NBA Playoffs

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers worked all season to get the homecourt advantage throughout the playoffs.

Now they get to find out if it was really worth it.

After losing to the Detroit Pistons Thursday night for the second consecutive game at the Pontiac Silverdome and falling behind 3-2 in the NBA championship series, the Lakers were relieved to be flying home Friday. The sixth game and the seventh, if necessary, will be played Sunday and Tuesday night.

"We're back home Sunday and I hope we can come through with our greatest effort," Lakers coach Pat Riley said. "Then we'll worry about the seventh game."

The Pistons won the opener at the Forum only to lose Game 3 at the Silverdome, returning the homecourt advantage back to the Lakers.

"We've got to go out there, concentrate and play defense," said Pistons forward Adrian Dantley, who scored 25 points in Detroit's 104-94 victory in Game 5. "We feel they're not going to come out and do their showtime stuff like they normally do if they're a game up. We figure they might be a little methodical now."

"I've been around too long to anticipate what's going to happen," coach Chuck Daly said. "All I know is that we're up 3-2 and we've got a chance."

"All we have to do is go to Los Angeles and play a good game," Pistons center Bill Laimbeer said. "We have two shots to win the championship."

Detroit, which now has two chances to win the franchise's first NBA title, has some history on its side.

To win the championship, the Lakers will have to become the first team to win three postseason series 4-3 the same year. They needed seven games to beat both Dallas and Utah in the Western Conference playoffs.

Riley, who said after winning the title a year ago, "I'm going to guarantee everyone we're going to repeat," did not back away from that statement after Thursday's defeat.

"I like our chances," Riley said. "I still believe this team is going to win the championship. I'm sure our fans will be very vocal. The buck stops in Los Angeles. We'll have to be highly motivated to get the job done."

The Lakers, who are in the NBA finals for the seventh time in the last nine years, are trying to become the first team since the 1968-69 Boston Celtics to repeat as champions.

But Mychal Thompson, who came off the bench to have his best game of the series with 14 points on 7-for-8 shooting, said the Lakers can't be thinking about winning the championship. Game 6 must go first on the agenda, he said.

"We can't think ahead past Sunday or they will blow right past us," Thompson said. "You guys (the media) have got to stop thinking that just because this ain't the Celtics that they don't deserve to be up 3-2. They are a hard-working team and they outplayed us two games here."

For awhile on Thursday, it looked like it would be the Lakers who would take the 3-2 lead back to California.

While Detroit had six turnovers in its first eight possessions, Los Angeles was grabbing a 15-2 lead less than five minutes into the game.

"They just came out and jumped on us," Dantley said. "It looked liked they were going to bury us."

But with Dantley scoring 18 points and Vinnie Johnson 12, the Pistons needed less than 17 minutes to outscore the Lakers 52-26, turning the 13-point deficit into a 13-point lead.

The comeback was aided by three Lakers being called for three fouls each, forcing them to the bench.

"Having three players on the bench with three fouls plays havoc with your continuity," Riley said.

The Lakers closed the gap to 59-50 at halftime and got within two twice in the third quarter, but Detroit led 81-75 going into the fourth period, and Los Angeles never got closer than that in the final 12 minutes.

"Their strength is the first and third quarters," Laimbeer said. "That's when they take their leads. If they can't get out to a big start in the third quarter, our defense will take over. Every game, we've played defense first. Our offense comes and goes, but our defense is constant. It wins games for us."

UT's Metcalf nears decision time

Mobil Outdoor Track

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Two-time NCAA champion Eric Metcalf of Texas used the best leap of his career to upset Michael Conley in winning the long jump title in the Mobil Outdoor Track and Field Championships on Friday.

Metcalf, a star running back for the Texas football team, sailed 27 feet, 8¼ inches, the fourth-best in American history and eighth-best in the world.

The jump was nearly eight inches farther than Metcalf's previous best of 27-0½. He had jumped 27-2¾ and 27-2 this year, but each was wind-aided.

Conley, who was trying to become the first athlete since 1949 to win both the long jump and triple jump in the national championships, jumped 26-9¾.

The victory could cause a dilemma for Metcalf, the son of former pro football star Terry Metcalf. The younger Metcalf, 20, had planned to jump in next month's U.S. Olympic Trials, but had said if he made the team he would skip the Seoul Games in favor of playing football in the fall.

"I have a chance at the Heisman (Trophy) and we (the Longhorns) have a chance to win the national title," Metcalf said. "But after today, I will have to make a decision on whether I go to the Olympics or not. It would put me right in the middle. I may have to reconsider.

"I enjoy football more, because my dad was an All-Pro. I want to try to prove I am as good as him or better than him."

Last season, Metcalf rushed for 1,161 yards and scored 10 touchdowns.

He said that beating Conley, the 1985 national champion and 1985 World Cup gold medalist, "gave me a big boost in confidence, because he's one of the best long jumpers in the world."

The jump by Metcalf, the national collegiate champion as a freshman in 1986 and again this year, pushed him ahead of Conley on the U.S. and world lists. Conley's best jump is 27-8.

Conley, in his first long jump final since last September, was "satisfied with where I'm at, because I know I'm better than where I finished."

Conley had said prior to the championships that if he did not jump well, he would compete in another meet before the Trials. Afterward, he said he would not jump again until the Trials.

"This being my first long jump in nine months was not bad," he said. "For me to expect better than that would be pushing it a little."

Conley had a busy day. Ealier, he qualified for Saturday's final in the triple jump, leaping 54-10¾ on his final attempt.

Charlie Simpkins, competing for the first time outdoors this season, led the triple jump qualifying at 55-11, while Willie Banks, the world record-holder at 58-11½, qualified at 53-5.

Dave Stephens became the first left-hander since Sam Colson in 1974 to win the men's javelin title, throwing 261-9. He beat Mike Barnett, the American leader this year, who wound up second at 259-0.

Lacy Barnes won the women's discus title, throwing 203-9 on her final attempt. Carol Cady, the American record-holder at 216-10, finished second at 203-4.

Maryanne Torrellas captured her third national title in the women's 10,000-meter walk with a time of 48 minutes, 25.3 seconds.

And Dwight Stones, two-time Olympic bronze medalist in the men's high jump, was among a group of 16 who qualified for Saturday's final by clearing 7-1¾.

DAVIDSON

Each employee, including Davidson, puts in some long and tedious hours in preparation for a successful season. Within the season, they continue to put in overtime for successful homestands.

When the Angels are on the road, Davidson says, it's basically a 9-5 type day. But, when they are in town, how does 9 a.m. to 1 a.m. sound? That's about a 16 hour day, just to make sure everything runs smooth for the improving crowds at Angel Stadium.

The adverse affect, though, is time away from family, which is probably the most difficult part of the GM position.

Davidson and wife Maureen have two small girls (2½- and 1-year-olds). His time away from his home life is, "very difficult. Your family has to be very strong to support you."

As for the favorable aspects of the job, Davidson said conception of marketing and promotional ideas, and viewing the successful execution of those same ideas rank right up there at the top.

"In September, we sit down and analyze all the promotions we've had — caps, jackets, watches — and determine which of them we want to continue. Are there new items we want to use?

"It's more interesting to me to be on the creative side of it. Far more exciting to create the ideas.

"But the bottom line is how you take care of the people when they're here. If you don't take care of 'em, they're not gonna come back. That is very important to us. We don't have any control over our players. And if we don't have control over the players and can't control the weather, we've got to work on the other variables."

Work on the "other variables" must be going well as the Angels are headed toward what would appear to be their fourth consecutive attendance record. The club is bringing in the crowds at an eight to 10 percent increase over last year at this time. "Our goal," Davidson said, "is to bring in 150,000 people. To do that, we need to have a 10 percent increase."

The Angels went from 101,000 fans in 1984 to 138,000 last year — a 50 percent jump.

Davidson and his staff's successful promotional ideas have played a huge role in the increase in numbers.

Tonight, for instance, it's KWES Radio T-Shirt night, Pecos County, and Hobbs Community night. Sunday is Hispanic Chamber of Commerce night, Mall Family night and KODM/Post Newsweek Cable night.

For the future, the Famous Chicken will be back in August and Davidson has, on the back burner, plans to bring in a concert night, possibly featuring the Austin-based Texas-blues band, The Fabulous Thunderbirds.

"We'll have the Chicken back as long as he continues to sell out the ball park," Davidson said. "If he sells it out, we can pay his rights fee."

The interesting aspect of Chicken Night was, of the 2,000 general admission tickets sold, 75 percent were bought by adults.

"We're going to continue to give the people more reasons to come to the ball park. I'm not trying to get people to stop going to Water Wonderland or bowling. But our aim is to have the best entertainment option ih West Texas. If we continue that and we continue our promotions, we'll continue to set attendance records."

ANGELS

... San Antonio has brutalized Midland all season and has now won 15 of 22 against the Angels ... The Missions have outscored (114-113) and out-homered (17-15) the Angels, but entering Friday night San Antonio held down a meager 10 point advantage in team batting (.288-.278) ... Midland third baseman Jeff Manto's 13 game hitting streak came to an end Friday. Manto was 0-for-1 with three walks and two runs scored ... After shortstop Craig Gerber fouled a pitch off his foot in the third inning, Midland manager Max Oliveras pulled a massive switcheroo, making six defensive changes that would hold through the remainder of the contest.

... Outfielder Lee Stevens had a seven game hit streak going, but was sidelined entering the weekend with a minor muscle pull.

New York Yankee Wayne Tolleson is tagged out at the plate by Cleveland's Andy Allanson to end a second inning threat.

Kittle comes back to haunt Yankees

Associated Press

AL Roundup

CLEVELAND — Ron Kittle homered in his first two at-bats against his former New York teammates Friday night, leading John Farrell and the Cleveland Indians over the Yankees 6-4.

The Indians got 10 hits, eight of them for extra bases, and ended John Candelaria's seven-game winning streak. Cleveland is 14-2 against left-handed starters.

A crowd of 56,485 saw the third-place Indians pull within two games of the first-place Yankees in the American League East. New York has lost three in a row.

Kittle, who was not offered a contract by the Yankees after a neck problem hampered him last year, hit Candelaria's second pitch in the second inning for his eighth home run. Kittle then broke a 1-1 tie in the fourth, lining a 2-2 pitch into the left-field seats for his ninth homer, and his fifth in his last four games.

Farrell, 7-4, gave up four runs, three of them earned, on six hits in 7⅔ innings. Doug Jones got his 16th save, including 12 straight appearances.

The Indians scored four times in the sixth for a 6-1 lead, aided by a critical New York error. Joe Carter led off with a single and one out later moved to second on Brook Jacoby's grounder to short, which might have been a double play if second baseman Wayne Tolleson had not dropped Rafael Santana's short toss.

Cory Snyder followed with an RBI double that bounced over the center-field fence, and pinch-hitter Mel Hall greeted reliever Neil Allen with a two-run single. Hall scored on Ron Washington's double.

The Yankees got an unearned run in the second when Claudell Washington tripled and and scored on second baseman Julio Franco's two-out error.

Washington tripled again in the seventh and Santana hit an RBI single. Jack Clark hit his 13th home run, a two-run shot, that finished Farrell with two outs in the eighth.

Tigers 12, Blue Jays 5

DETROIT — Chet Lemon, who tripled and doubled earlier, hit a tie-breaking, two-run homer in the seventh inning as the Detroit Tigers beat the Toronto Blue Jays in the longest-running nine-inning night game in American League history.

The game took 3 hours, 59 minutes. The previous longest was 3 hours, 56 minutes on Aug. 1, 1977, between Texas and Chicago.

Lemon's fourth home run made it 7-5. Alan Trammell hit a leadoff single against David Wells, 3-4, and Lemon homered just inside the left-field foul pole.

Detroit scored five times in the eighth on Darrell Evans' three-run homer, an RBI single by Luis Salazar and a balk. Lemon, trying to become the first Detroit player to hit for the cycle since Hoot Evers in 1950, got up in the eighth but drew a walk from Duane Ward and disgustedly threw his bat to the ground.

Guillermo Hernandez, 4-2, the third Detroit pitcher, got the victory.

Detroit made four errors and threw one wild pitch. The Blue Jays had two errors, four wild pitches and two balks.

Twins 4, Mariners 1

MINNEAPOLIS — Tim Laudner's three-run double broke a sixth-inning tie and Frank Viola posted his 16th straight Metrodome victory.

Laudner's two-out hit snapped a 1-1 tie and came on a 3-2 pitch from reliever Mike Jackson, who inherited a 3-0 count when he replaced injured Edwin Nunez.

Nunez was in for starter Scott Bankhead, 1-3, who yielded Kent Hrbek's leadoff single and a walk to Gary Gaetti before departing. Nunez, who left with back spasms, had intentionally walked Gene Larkin to load the bases.

Viola, 10-2, hasn't lost a home game since May 22, 1987. This season, the left-hander is 7-0 with a 2.05 ERA at the Metrodome, considered a hitter's paradise. He allowed six hits in six-plus innings.

Juan Berenguer took over with two on and none out in the seventh and retired the side in order. Jeff Reardon pitched the ninth for his 18th save.

The Twins, who have won 19 of 25 games, have a 2.14 ERA in their last nine contests.

Seattle is 3-8 under interim manager Jimmy Snyder, who replaced the fired Dick Williams two weeks ago.

Brewers 7, White Sox 2

MILWAUKEE — Jeffrey Leonard hit his first American League homer and Jim Gantner drove in three runs.

Leonard, who came to the Brewers in a June 8 trade with the San Francisco Giants, homered in the fifth off Bill Long, 2-3, for a 4-0 lead. Leonard immediately broke into his "one flap down" home-run trot — one arm held down to his side — to the delight of 33,657 fans at County Stadium.

In his next at-bat, Leonard was hit in the leg by Long's first pitch and walked slowly to first as home plate umpire Al Clark went to the mound to warn Long.

Rookie Don August, called up from Triple-A June 2, beat the White Sox for the second time in a week. He ran his record to 3-1 with a six-inning, four-hit effort.

Steve Lyons hit a two-run homer in the Chicago sixth that made it 4-2. Paul Mirabella took over in the seventh and Chuck Crim went 1⅓ innings for his third save.

Leonard also had a sacrifice fly, Paul Molitor got three hits and Dale Sveum doubled twice for Milwaukee.

The Brewers grabbed a 2-0 lead in the first off Long, who was making his first start of the season after 27 relief appearances.

Orioles 3, Red Sox 2

BALTIMORE — Jim Traber singled home Eddie Murray with one out in the 11th inning to Boston.

Murray drew a one-out walk from Dennis Lamp, 1-3. Murray then stole his fourth base of the season and continued to third when catcher Rich Gedman's throw went into center field. Traber followed with a single to center.

Dave Schmidt, who pitched two innings of hitless relief, got the victory and is 3-2. Lamp, the third Boston pitcher, entered the game in the 10th.

Orioles startr Jay Tibbs allowed three hits in nine innings, and retired 21 of the last 22 batters he faced. The only man to reach base against Tibbs in his final six innings was Marty Barrett, who drew an eighth-inning walk.

Baltimore center fielder Fred Lynn robbed Wade Boggs of a home run with a leaping catch in the top of the sixth and then homered to tie the score in the Orioles' half of the inning. Traber singled with one out and Lynn hit his ninth home run that made it 2-2.

Angels 9, Royals 7

KANSAS CITY — Chili Davis led off the eighth inning a home run and Bob Boone went 5-for-5 during California's season-high 19-hit attack as the Angels ended the Royals' six-game winning streak.

Dick Schofield got four hits for California, which had four doubles. The Royals, who lost for only the second time in 15 games, had 10 hits with five doubles and a triple.

The game took 3 hours, 46 minutes and was the longest nine-inning game in Royals' history.

Stu Cliburn, 2-0, got the victory and Gene Garber, 0-3, took the loss. Garber entered to begin the eighth and Davis hit his eighth home run.

California scored an insurance run in the ninth on Steve Farr's wild pitch.

The Royals made it 7-7 with an unearned run in the seventh. Danny Tartabull walked and Kevin Seitzer laid down a sacrifice bunt that pitcher Sherman Corbett fielded but threw wildly. Tartabull took third and scored on Pat Tabler's sacrifice fly.

Dick Schofield singled on the first pitch of the game and Jim Eppard hit Ted Power's next pitch for an RBI double.

Bill Buckner hit a three-run double in the Royals' first and scored on Tabler's single for a 4-1 lead.

Schofield singled home a run in the second. Brian Downing, Davis and Armas hit doubles in the third and Jack Howell had an RBI single that put California ahead 5-4.

Longhorn football freed of NCAA probation

AUSTIN (AP) — The NCAA has lifted the probation placed on the University of Texas football program, and UT president William Cunningham pledged today that that the school will play by the rules.

"We are very pleased that the NCAA probation has been lifted," Cunningham said.

"As I have indicated on several occasions, I believe the NCAA treated the university very fairly. The university will continue to do everything possible to ensure that we can take great pride in our intercollegiate athletics program and that it is operated in a manner totally consistent with the rules and regulations of the NCAA," he said.

The two-year probationary period was reduced to one year, which ended today.

The original penalities by the National Collegiate Athletic Assocation included a provision for the university to submit a report after one year indicating the status of 13 corrective actions ordered by Cunningham.

The NCAA Committee on Infractions reviewed the report last month and recommended the expiration of the probationary period.

Other sanctions imposed in June 1987 relating to recruiting and grants-in-aid in the football program were not affected by the decision, the NCAA said.

On June 13, 1987, the NCAA handed down penalties against the school for 38 rules violations.

Some of the violations Texas was cited for included execessive entertainment by a school booster and other improper recruiting contacts, the sale of complimentary football tickets by 10 players, comments to prosepctive recruits that they could expect special benefits.

Senna grabs Detroit pole post

DETROIT (AP) — Ayrton Senna continued his amazing qualifying mastery Friday by winning the provisional pole for the Detroit Grand Prix.

The brilliant Brazilian, who has started all five Formula One races this season from the pole position, will be a strong favorite to keep his McLaren-Honda in the top spot in the final qualifying session on Saturday.

The fastest 26 cars through the 120 minutes of time trials over two days will determine the starting grid for Sunday's race through the streets of downtown Detroit.

Senna was clocked at 1 minute, 40.606 seconds, translating to 89.458 mph on the 2.5-mile circuit.

Reds' Concepcion fined, tossed out for two games

CINCINNATI (AP) — Dave Concepcion of the Cincinnati Reds was given a two-game suspension and fined on his 40th birthday Friday for throwing a base during a tantrum last week.

Though the Reds said they would not appeal the penalties imposed by National League President Bart Giamatti, Concepcion did, and he will be allowed to play pending a hearing.

The penalties stem from an incident last Saturday in a game against the Giants in San Francisco. Concepcion, after being ejected for protesting a called third strike, picked up first base and heaved it.

Giamatti said the infielder's behavior went "beyond the bounds of the sensible or permissible or professional."

Jim Ferguson, the Reds vice president for public relations, said earlier Friday that the club had no plans to appeal and that Concepcion would miss games against the Giants Friday night and Saturday afternoon in Cincinnati.

However, Concepcion after talking with Gene Orza, a counsel for the players' union, filed an appeal.

"Nobody files an appeal unless he thinks he has a good case," said Don Fehr, executive director of the players association. "He will have a chance to look at the umpires' report, see videotape of the incident and get whatever other evidence he needs."

The episode took in the fifth inning after umpire Mark Hirschbeck called the second baseman out on strikes. While arguing the call, Concepcion drew a line with his bat in the dirt, and as the argument grew more heated, he was ejected. Concepcion became even more enraged and had to be restrained by his teammates and other umpires. The infielder then tossed his helmet and strode across the field to the clubhouse.

On his way, he pulled up first base and threw it, amid jeers from the crowd at Candlestick Park.

Former Keystone winners share LPGA lead

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Defending champion Ayako Okamoto and two-time winner Juli Inkster shot 5-under-par 67s Friday to share the first-round lead at the $300,000 Lady Keystone Open.

Inkster, who passed out while playing a practice round Tuesday, birdied four of her last six holes.

Inkster, who won here in 1985 and 1986, started on the back nine and had eight pars before getting her first birdie. She birdied Nos. 4-5-6 before finishing with a birdie on the 375-yard ninth hole.

"I thought I'd have to withdraw when I got up Thursday morning," said Inkster, who has had a problem with low blood pressure for three years. "I felt terrible. I felt a lot better today."

Okamoto, who shot a final-round 64 to win last year, birdied Nos. 11, 13 and 16 to tie Inkster for the lead.

"Everything is much better," said Okamoto, who went home to Japan to rest after the LPGA championship three weeks ago. "I'm very happy with the way I played. The greens were a little wet, but that was good for me because I wasn't hitting close to the pin. I was lucky to get a 67."

Laurie Rinker, Connie Chillemi, Marci Bozarth, Colleen Walker, Betsy King and Shirley Furlong are next at 68.

Ok-Hee Ku, Sandra Palmer, Sherri Steinhauer, Susie McAllister and Patty Jordan are grouped at 69.

Chillemi, who hasn't won in 11 years on the LPGA Tour, lost a chance to tie for the lead when she bogeyed the final hole.

Bozarth, who hasn't won in four years on the Tour, also missed a chance to tie for the top spot when she took a bogey at No. 12.

King, No. 2 on the money list last year, missed a 12-foot birdie putt at 18. Furlong sank five birdies after she took a bogey on the opening hole.

Walker had a share of the lead after a birdie at 14, but lost it when her second shot on 15 landed under a tree and she had to take a penalty for an unplayable lie.

Borrowed driver pushes Devlin into Northville lead

JERICHO, N.Y. (AP) — Bruce Devlin, using a driver borrowed from leading money-winner Orville Moody, shot a 6-under-par 66 on Friday for the first-round lead in the $350,000 Northville Invitational seniors golf tournament at the Meadow Brook Club.

The 50-year-old Devlin, who joined the PGA Seniors Tour last year after devoting 5½ years to constructing golf courses, had seven birdies against a lone bogey. His 12-foot birdie putt on the 157-yard, par-3 18th hole gave him the lead over Harold Henning and Bobby Nichols.

Bruce Crampton, runnerup in this tournament last year when he lost in a playoff to Gary Player, was at 68, one stroke better than Dave Hill and Don Bies.

Bob Charles, Lou Graham, Dick Howell and Charlie Owens had 70s while Gene Littler, Moody, Walt Zembriski and Dale Douglass had 71s over the 7,100-yard Meadow Brook course.

Protesters march against higher property taxes

SHERMAN, Texas (AP) — More than 4,000 people took their fight against higher property taxes to the streets of this North Texas town Friday in a short but fierce downtown march downtown, protest organizers said.

H.K. Lyde, 66, said he organized the march to fight "no taxation without representation, just like the Boston Tea Party."

Lyde's gripe is against the Grayson County Appraisal District, which he said set his property value far too high. The district is not subject to the scrutiny of voters, he noted..

"People can say whatever they want to about me, but I'm not a tax rebel, I just want these taxing people to start living within their means," he said.

Bob Tollison, chief administrator for the district, said the marchers, many senior citizens, have it all wrong.

"In the first place, once they are 65, their school taxes can't go up," Tollison said, although their county and city taxes can rise.

Meanwhile, Lyde said, "They are going to tell you that the senior citizens are looking for another tax break. They make us into a bunch of old bones. My wife's sitting here and and will tell you right now she dosn't mind paying taxes.

"We are Texans. We grew up the hard way. All we want is to be treated fairly. It's time that these politicians learn that we aren't out for a handout, but are real Americans," he said.

"We are sending the message that we are fed up with this tax, tax, tax business."

Tollison said he appraises the property value according to state law, and under the instruction of the non-elected board of directors of the Grayson Appraisal Ditrsict.

"They (marchers) are wanting more exemptions, and it's not up to us to decide," he said. "We don't set the tax rate. We just appraise the property. It's the city council and the county board and others who set the tax rate."

Lyde said the district is passing the tax buck.

"Everyone says they're not in charge and I'm tired of hearing it," he said. "I know somone is reponsible for this, and they ought to have to answer to the voters."

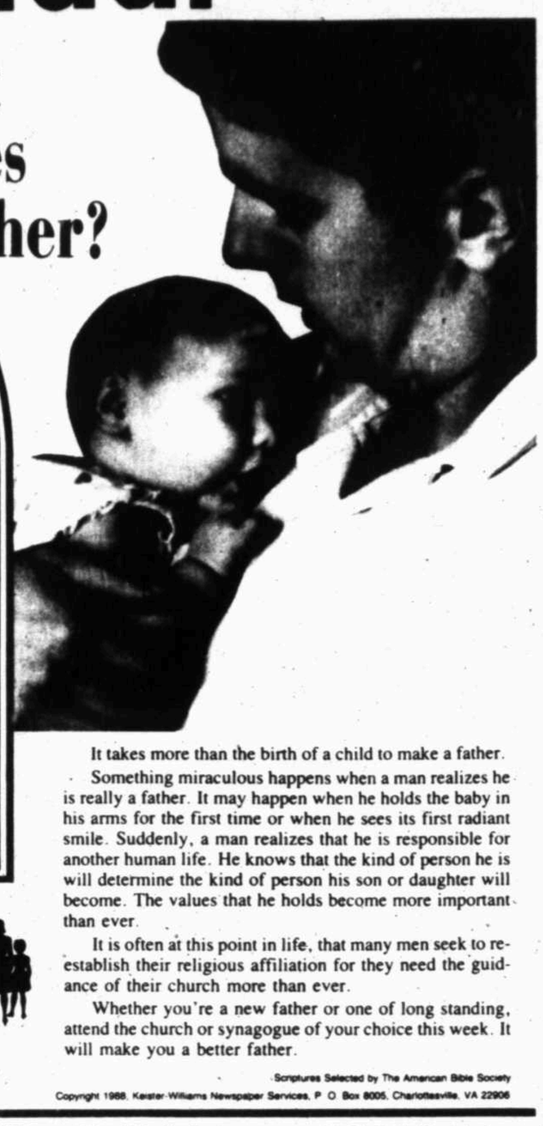
What Makes A Father?



Sunday Psalm 27
Monday Psalm 31
Tuesday Psalm 41
Wednesday Psalm 51
Thursday Psalm 59
Friday Psalm 61
Saturday Psalm 70

It takes more than the birth of a child to make a father.

Something miraculous happens when a man realizes he is really a father. It may happen when he holds the baby in his arms for the first time or when he sees its first radiant smile. Suddenly, a man realizes that he is responsible for another human life. He knows that the kind of person he is will determine the kind of person his son or daughter will become. The values that he holds become more important than ever.

It is often at this point in life, that many men seek to re-establish their religious affiliation for they need the guidance of their church more than ever.

Whether you're a new father or one of long standing, attend the church or synagogue of your choice this week. It will make you a better father.

LIFESCOPE

Think You're Happy Living Like 'The Devil'? Lifescope Says, "When The Party's Over, What Then?"

A rich man had a fertile farm that produced fine crops. In fact, his barns were full to overflowing - he couldn't get everything in. He thought about his problem, and finally exclaimed, "I know - I'll tear down my barns and build bigger ones! Then I'll have room enough. And I'll sit back and say to myself, 'Friend, you have enough stored away for years to come. Now take it easy! Wine, women, and song for you!' "

But God said to him, "Fool! Tonight you die. Then who will get it all?" Yes, every man is a fool who gets rich on earth but not in heaven.

A man who loves pleasure becomes poor; wine and luxury are not the way to riches!

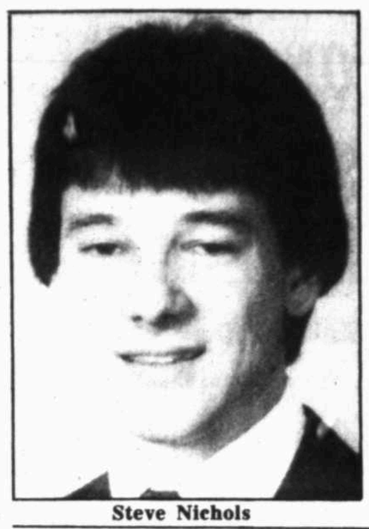
Laughter cannot mask a heavy heart. When the laughter ends, the grief remains. I, (Soloman) said to myself, "Come now, be merry; enjoy yourself to the fullest." But I found that this, too, was futile. For it is silly to be laughing all the time; what good does it do?

So after a lot of thinking, I decided to try the road of drink. Next I followed the path of folly, so that I could experience the only happiness most men have throughout their lives. Then I tried to find fulfillment by inaugurating a great public works program: homes, vineyards, gardens, parks and orchards for myself, and reservoirs to hold the water to irrigate my plantations. Next I bought slaves, both men and women . . . I bred great herds and flocks, and collected silver and gold. In the cultural arts, I organized men's and women's choirs and orchestras. And then there were my many beautiful women.

But as I looked at everything I had tried, it was all so useless. SO LET US HEAR THE CONCLUSION OF THE WHOLE MATTER: FEAR GOD AND KEEP HIS COMMANDMENTS, FOR THIS IS THE WHOLE DUTY OF MAN!!!!

Two Midlanders named as missionaries

Nichold to serve in Brownwood; Paris will be going to Oregon



Steve Nichols

Aimee Paris

Steve Nichols and Aimee Paris are serving as Baptist Student Union Summer Missionaries in Brownwood and Oregon respectively.

Nichols, the son of Don Nichols of Midland, and Miss Paris, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tex Paris of Midland, are students at Texas Tech University.

"They are part of a group of 126 Texas college students from across the state who are sharing the good news of Jesus Christ in 22 states and five foreign countries," said Jack Greever of Dallas, director of the Division of Student Work with the 2.4 million-member Baptist General Convention of Texas.

Supported by their fellor BSU members who raised $130,000 to undergrid the vast missions effort, the student volunteers are serving with career missionaries and other Baptist leaders.

Out of the 126, 27 are working in Australia where they will be joined July 20 through August 2 by 660 other Texas Baptist volunteers serving in the Texas-Australia Baptist Partnership Crusade.

"These enthusiatic young Christians are shining examples of what God is doing on our college campuses," Greever said. "They go out to serve in the name of Christ around the world and will return to be better Christian citizens on their campuses and in their communities."

Televangelist raises food for hungry children

RELIGION

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Revelations of financial extravagance and sexual wrongdoing involving top televangelists have severely hurt not only all charities but the people least able to help themselves, the hungry children of the world, an Oklahoma evangelist says.

Reduced donations to the Jimmy Swaggart ministry alone caused 26,000 children in El Salvador, Guatemala, Haiti and Honduras to be dropped from feeding programs, says Larry Jones, head of Feed the Children.

"This is the biggest scandal in Christendom," says Jones, a televangelist whose programs are seen on four of the nation's "superstations" and in more than 100 other markets. "I think the consequence of that scandal is, how do you handle the hungry without appearing you're judging? The last thing I want to do is attack, judge or get involved in any of that.

"Yet, at the same time, we who have programs to feed children are really put on the spot because, how do we tactfully do this? How do you attack this without sounding like you're attacking Jimmy Swaggart? It's put us in a different perspective because we're trying to help feed those children. It's a very frustrating experience."

He says controversies concerning the ministries of Oral Roberts, Jim and Tammy Bakker and Swaggart have put a dent in his operations. He has had to lay off about 40 workers at his Oklahoma City headquarters — his staff now is down to about 70, plus another 150 in 12 foreign countries.

"The last six months of the past fiscal year we were off 24 percent" in income, Jones says. His financial records are audited by Coopers & Lybrand, one of the nation's major auditing firms, and he says they are made public as the auditors finish.

"You can draw a chart, and from when the Bakker thing happened, it just started down," Jones says of contributions.

Outdoor pageant staged

Summer productions of The Kendrick Religious Pageant "The Life of Christ" will be staged at 9 p.m. Thursday and Friday nights through August 12.

The outdoor pageant, termed by the July 1980 edition of Texas Monthly as the best outdoor drama in the State of Texas, traces the life of Christ from birth through the resurrection in 60 scenes.

The script for the non-denominational production is taken word for word from the King James version of the Holy Bible. Included in the cast is a grey donkey for Mother Mary, a white donkey for the triumphant entry of Jesus, a camel for the wisemen and sheep for the shepherds in the field.

Admission is $3 per-person.

Free parking and free overnight camping is allowed on the grounds. Electric and water hookups are available for a fee. Restrooms are available on the grounds for the convenience of those attending.

Also located on the pageant grounds is Texas' only all Religious Diorama and Museum which is open daily from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The diorama features scenes from the Old and New Testaments set with 140 life-sized figures and narration from the King James version of the Bible.

"As you view the scenes, you are actually standing right in the midst of the figures, giving you the feeling of being right there with the biblical characters," says a news release from the J.H. Kendrick family and pageant cast.

Admission to the Diorama is $2 for children 6 through 11 and $2.50 for adults. Each tour lasts 90 minutes.

For more information contact the Life of Christ Pageant, Route No. 2, Box 46, Cisco, Texas 76437 or call 1-817-629-8672.

Elders ordained at UMS conference

ABILENE — "The Church Aflame: Kindled by Brace," was the theme of the Northwest Texas Annual Conference of the United Methodist Church which met here in June.

Highlights of the 79th session, held at St. Paul United Methodist Church, included acceptance of pastoral appontments, the service of ordination for elders and deacons and Bishop Louis W. Schowengerdt's State of the Church address. Schowengerdt, of Albuquerque, N.M., is bishop of both the New Mexico and Northwest Texas annual conferences of the UM Church.

The ordination process is a major step in the UMC's ordained ministry. Among the 11 ordained as Elders were Hadley Robroy Edwards of Midland, John Michael Baird of Stinnett and William Craig Curry of Hale Center. Darren Skinner of Tulsa, Okla. was among the six ordained as Deacons.

Baird, a 1967 graduate of Midland's Lee High School, earned his bachelor's degree in parks management from Texas Tech University. Curry graduated from Seminole High School, where he was valedictorian, in 1977, and earned his bachelor of arts degree at Texas Tech University.

Skinner was a 1981 graduate of Lamesa High School. He earned his bachelor of music degree from Angelo State University in 1985 and has served as youth pastor at Trinity UMC in Snyder since mid-May. Following ordination, Skinner will continue as youth pastor at Trinity UMC and finish his last year at Oral Roberts University.

The Northwest Texas Conference, which includes Midland, consists of seven districts — Abilene, Amarillo, Big Spring, Lubbock, Pampa, Plainview and Seymour.

Women break male roles in Swedish church

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Three decades after breaking the all-male tradition in the Church of Sweden, more and more women are becoming priests, and some think the clergy could become a female profession.

The Lutheran state church was one of the last bastions of conservatism to yield to feminism in this open-minded country, where sexual equality has long been a watchword.

Krister Stendahl, the bishop of Stockholm and former dean of the Harvard Divinity School, calls it a blessing that a growing number of women are wearing the white collar.

"One of the exciting things in our times and in theology is that women are beginning to think not just equal to men, but are trying to find whether they have insights" which men do not have, the bishop told Swedish radio.

Annicka Kronberg, a former actress ordained in January, said she found "most men in my group (at divinity school) understood the value of having more women and how we can enrich the language, the forms and behavior" in church.

Ms. Kronberg's decision to leave a successful stage career for the pulpit has drawn attention to the dramatic change since 1960 when the first woman was ordained.

In the Stockholm Diocese, which sponsors special "feminist services," nearly half of the 481 priests are women. Women comprise about 20 percent of the 4,913 priests throughout the country.

Last year, 43 women were among the 96 graduates of the Theological Institute of Uppsala University. The female enrolment was 53 percent, up from 38 percent 10 years ago, and the school has introduced a course on "feminine theology."

'Joni' to be shown at Fannin Terrace

The motion picture "Joni" will be shown at 7 p.m. Sunday at Fannin Terrace Baptist Church, 2800 Mogford St.

"Joni" is the dramatic story of a young woman's struggle to find a useful life in the wake of a tragic accident which left her handicapped.

According to her yearbook, her graduating class at Woodlawn Senior High School in Maryland had voted Joni Eareckson the "Most Athletic" girl in the senior class. She was not only active, but outstanding in a variety of sports including ice hockey, baseball, basketball and diving. In addition, she was an excellent horsewoman, a winner at both trick and show riding.

A month after graduation, diving from a raft in the shallow waters of the Chesapeake Bay, she found her world had changed. Her head struck something solid and, in a fraction of a second, she had suffered a broken neck.

She survived the broken neck; she was alive. But she would never walk again, and against that she rebelled with all the quiet rage of her Scandinavian heritage.

The film follows Miss Eareckson's progress from the moment she becomes a quadriplegic.

"Every step along the road to recovery was an obstacle she refused to face until, drawing on her faith in God, she saw a purpose to her existence and began the long, hard fight toward rehabilitation, not always winning, but never giving up," says a news release from World Wide Pictures.

"In a powerful and dramatic film, the agonies, achievements, joys and hopes of Joni's experience are shared with the viewer," the release says. "And the impact of its message is made even mre outstanding by the performance of the star of the film: Joni Eareckson portraying herself."

The public is invited to attend the free showing, which will be held in lieu of the Sunday evening service. A free will offering will be taken.

Cher promises U.N. agency she won't perform in South Africa

Cher

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Cher, the actress and entertainer, once performed in South Africa but has been taken off a list kept by the U.N. anti-apartheid agency because she promised not to do so again.

The list contains the names of more than 200 performers and members of related professions who have worked in South Africa since 1981. A person can be taken off by promising in writing not to perform there while the government practices the apartheid policy of race segregation.

The sixth annual list will be published next month. Frank Sinatra, Tina Turner, Eartha Kitt and others were removed earlier this year.

Sotirios G. Mousouris, assistant secretary-general of the U.N. Center Against Apartheid, said Friday the letter from Cher responded to one he wrote to the actress.

In an interview, he said he congratulated her on the Academy Award she won for her performance in "Moonstruck."

After telling Cher "her career had been marked by sensitivity and talent and her roles in 'Silkwood,' 'Mask' and 'Suspect' show her concern about injustice and oppression," he expressed surprise that her name was on the list.

Mousouris said he suggested that she might be unaware of it, since the listing dated from a performance in August 1981.

In a letter dated May 25, Cher wrote: "This is to state that I shall not be performing in South Africa as long as apartheid lasts in that country."

The list's purpose is to persuade performers to join the boycott and inform countries, groups and individuals about those who work in South Africa.

"Most artists are sensitive to the issue of racial justice and would want to be removed," Mousouris said, adding that Linda Ronstadt, Goldie Hawn and Telly Savalas were among those to whom he would write letters similar to the one he sent Cher.

Fighting apartheid has been a major cause in the U.N. General Assembly and Security Council, which have condemned the race laws that preserve power for South Africa's 5 million whites and deny a voice in national affairs to the 26 million blacks.

On Sept. 2-4, the U.N. Special Committee Against Apartheid will sponsor a meeting in Athens at which prominent artists, performers, theater and movie directors and writers will discuss the cultural boycott.

Among about 30 people expected to attend are Harry Belafonte, Jules Dassin, Yves Montand and Joseph Papp.

CLEVELAND (AP) — It was a super birthday party.

But what else would you expect? The guest of honor was Superman himself, joined by Wonder Woman, Luke Skywalker, and Rocky and Bullwinkle.

The four-day International Superman Exposition is expected to draw up to 30,000 visitors before it ends Sunday.

While the Man of Steel arrived on Earth from Krypton, his birthplace is actually Cleveland. Superman was created by Cleveland high school students Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster and the first Superman comic book appeared in June 1938.

Superhero devotees have come to browse through comic books, watch science fiction movies, and shop for memorabilia, including rare Superman prints, said Tim Gorman of Neverending Battle Inc., a nonprofit organization founded to honor Siegel and Shuster and sponsoring the symposium.

On Thursday, Gorman unveiled a 2-foot-high shining steel model of Superman in flight, right fist thrust high in a familiar pose. The organization plans to raise enough money to build a larger statue and a museum in Cleveland.

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — A midwife-paramedic rushed in "like the cavalry" to save the day for U.S. Sen. Lawton Chiles' seventh grandchild, unexpectedly born at home in breech position, said the frightened father.

Ed Chiles said there wasn't time to rush wife Anne to the hospital Thursday, so he called help to their Holmes Beach home.

But Kristin Anne was born feet first, and paramedics couldn't get her head out and had to call for more help. Paramedic Doreen Virginiak, one of only three registered midwives in the area, showed up.

"It was like the cavalry came when she got here," Ed Chiles said. "We proceeded to have a miracle."

Within 10 minutes, the baby was delivered.

"She was lethargic and wasn't breathing," said Ms. Virginiak, who massaged the baby into breathing.

"I was pretty frightened," the new father said hours later. "Now it looks like we're going to have a nice baby girl."

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., announced the birth during a Senate Appropriations Committee meeting in Washington.

"He probably got the strongest applause that he's gotten since he came to the Senate," said Jack Pridgen, an aide to the senior Chiles, D-Fla.

Gossett

JONESBOROUGH, Tenn. (AP) — Award-winning actor Louis Gossett Jr. says starring roles are nice, but they're not everything.

"Sometimes actors confine themselves to just the lead role," he said. "I promised myself never to get an egotistical attitude on the parts I choose, and instead I look at the role, whether it is a lead role or a cameo."

Gossett is in Jonesborough this month for filming of "Goodbye, Miss Liberty," a movie for cable television's Disney Channel about a Greek family who encounters prejudice in the early 1900s.

Gossett won an Emmy for his portrayal of Fiddler in the television miniseries "Roots" and an Academy Award for his role as a tough drill instructor in "An Officer and a Gentleman."

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Bruce Babbitt attended Georgetown University "in spirit," and the school says that's enough to entitle the former Arizona governor to its Bicentennial Medal.

The Washington D.C., university said Babbitt inherited the school's virtues from his father, a Georgetown alumnus.

The award was presented to Babbitt Wednesday at a meeting of Georgetown alumni in Phoenix. Three Phoenix-area descendants of Georgetown founder, Archbishop John Carroll, also received the medals marking the university's 200th anniversary.

Jewish cultural pride finds fertile ground in South

By LEANNE WAXMAN
Associated Press Writer

Two worlds have touched and clashed, yet they have blended and succeeded. In Dixie they are Jews, but Southern to the core.

"I am not certain what it means to be both a Jew and a Southerner," Eli Evans wrote in his personal account of growing up in Durham, N.C. "To have inherited the Jewish longing for a homeland while being raised with the Southerner's sense of home."

Jews have lived in the South for more than 200 years, but their history as a "sub-group" has long been ignored.

Jewish academics have slowly honed in on the unique face of Southern Jewry as younger generations leave their hometowns for good but pursue their Jewish roots more vigorously than ever before. Their cultural pride has swelled in the new South's open, larger cities as they continue to make more contact with Jews from other places and mix with the region's non-Jewish newcomers.

"Being Southern, in the sense of family and home and tradition, is very much akin to being Jewish," said Judy Peiser, who grew up in Memphis, Tenn., and is executive director of the Center for Southern Folklore there. "Religion is more important in the Bible Belt. I'm always explaining the Jewish culture. It's a constant learning process for them (non-Jewish Southerners) and a teaching process for Jews. You've got to know the answers."

THE ISSUES facing most American Jews loom large in the Dixie sky — assimilation, anti-Semitism, links to the Bible's Old Testament and the politics of Israel. Added in the still relatively homogeneous South are the roles Jews played in Civil War times and the influences on the region of "outsiders" — Jews and non-Jews — enticed by Atlanta, Miami, Houston, New Orleans and smaller but ever-growing cities.

Sunbelt migration has changed and boosted the Jewish population to about 1.1 million in Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia, according to a 1987 estimate made for the American Jewish Committee.

The committee counts about 5.9 million Jews throughout the United States. The Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith estimates 438,000 Jews in the South Florida counties of Dade, Broward and Palm Beach. The three counties combined amount to the largest Jewish population in the South.

Jews historically were scattered in rural communities across the region, and their presence remains in medium-sized cities and small towns through active congregations. Old storefronts, grave markers and other remnants stand today as evidence of the long, Jewish presence in the South. In the late 1870s, for example, 60 cities and towns in the South had roughly 100 or more Jews.

"SOUTHERN JEWS are seen by other Jews and non-Southerners in general as unique and exotic," wrote Carolyn Lipson-Walker, herself a Jew who was raised in Tuscaloosa, Ala. "Many non-Southerners and non-Southern Jews are totally unaware of the existence of Jews in the South."

They are the descendants of immigrants who ventured down from the North or took more direct routes to flee unfriendly European and Spanish homelands via ocean ports in Galveston, Texas, Charleston, S.C., and other Southern cities accessible by boat.

They are the descendants of peddlers who first set out on foot, then saved enough money to buy horses, wagons and later opened up shops. From the start, Jews often took prominent places in their new Southern hometowns, and the region today lacks a distinct blue-collar Jewish class.

"Jews had to walk a very tight line," said Abraham Peck, administrative director of the American Jewish Archives at Hebrew Union College in Cincinnati. "It's really an amazing thing that they were able to live in two worlds, one a world of (their own) religious liberalism and the other a closed-off, segregated society."

American Judaism's most liberal faction, Reform Judaism, was born in the South, where Jews more consciously tried to blend in and were economically dependent on their non-Jewish neighbors — black and white.

MS. LIPSON-WALKER, whose doctoral dissertation is titled "Shalom Y'all: The Folklore and Culture of Southern Jews," said at a recent conference in Asheville, N.C., that Southern Jews "have ardently adapted and adopted the culture of the region." They fused their social and religious practices to produce a biculturality that is sometimes ignored by the American Jewish establishment in the Northeast, she said.

A cookbook put together by the women of a synagogue in Baton Rouge, La., includes a recipe for matzoh ball gumbo, a synagogue in Brookhaven, Miss., for years held a high holy day shrimp fry in contrast to traditional Jewish dietary laws that ban shellfish, and a Jewish family in Texas often barbecued matzoh on their backyard grill, Ms. Lipson-Walker said, drawing on the many examples from her research of Southern Jewish distinctiveness.

"Nowhere else in the world did Jews so flagrantly defy traditional dietary laws," she said, taking into account the lack of availability of kosher foods in rural America overall.

A Jewish man from Savannah, Ga., explained to Ms. Lipson-Walker that he never thought of marrying outside of his faith. Asked what he meant, she said he replied, "Well, Southern Jews, of course."

Jewish history in South long been ignored

By LEANNE WAXMAN
Associated Press Writer

Jews have lived in the South for more than 200 years, but their history as a subgroup has long been ignored. Their religious roots and desire to fit in alongside their often fundamentalist Christian neighbors have produced a cultural blending that sets them apart from the American Jewish establishment.

"I am not certain what it means to be both a Jew and a Southerner," Eli Evans wrote in his personal account of growing up in Durham, N.C. "To have inherited the Jewish longing for a homeland while being raised with the Southerner's sense of home."

The Sunbelt is home for more Jews now. The Jewish population in the South has grown to about 1.1 million in Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia, according to a 1987 estimate made for the American Jewish Committee. Florida has about half of the South's Jewish population, mostly in the southern part of the state.

The committee counts about 5.9 million Jews throughout the United States.

Jews historically were scattered in rural communities across the region, and their presence remains strongest in medium-sized cities and small towns through active congregations like B'nai Shalom in tiny Blountville, Tenn.

"I have to come in for a cultural injection now and then because I miss it," said Sharon Moskowitz, 36, a New York native who with her husband and two children travels from Marion, Va., to Blountville most Friday nights to attend services at B'nai Shalom.

They are the only Jews in Marion, a town of about 7,000 in southwestern Virginia near the northeastern Tennessee border.

"I used to be super, super anxious about it," Ms. Moskowitz said of rearing her 6-year-old son and 3-year-old daughter in a non-Jewish town. "My son goes to camp in Long Island and he was the only one who knew the Hebrew songs at the camp. In the North, they live it so they don't have to learn it. We can't take it for granted."

Jews first ventured to the South from the Northeast or took more direct routes to flee unfriendly European and Spanish homelands via ocean ports in Galveston, Texas, Charleston, S.C., and other Southern cities.

The first arrivals were refugees of the fading Spanish Inquisition who dived early into the American melting pot and enthusiastically adopted the aristocratic Southern culture.

The Spanish-speaking Jews were followed in the early- to mid-1800s by Jews from Germany who set out on foot as peddlers, saved enough money to buy horses, then wagons and later opened shops. They were followed by a huge wave of East European immigrants who were more outwardly religious and who disdained the assimilationist tendencies of the earlier arrivals.

The South has its notorious examples of violent anti-Semitism, including the Ku Klux Klan and the Atlanta lynching of Leo Frank for the murder of a 14-year-old pencil factory worker in 1913. But Gail Gans, a researcher in New York for the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, said the region no longer stands out as a bastion of discrimination and hatred against Jews.

"It has historically, of course," she said.

Peck and other researchers agreed the post-Civil War period was among the worst for anti-Semitism in the South.

A notable example was the scapegoating of Judah P. Benjamin, a New Orleans lawyer who served as attorney general, secretary of war and secretary of state under Jefferson Davis. Many blamed him for the Confederacy's defeat, while others falsely accused him of involvement in Abraham Lincoln's assassination, Evans said. Benjamin fled in disguise to England.

"During the 1870s and through the beginning of the 20th century, anti-Semitism in the South, in all its manifestations...were the actions of powerless men reaching out to compensate for their economic distress," Peck wrote in a paper on Southern Jewry.

Married priests say it's time Vatican accepts them

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Married Roman Catholic priests forbidden to say Mass or lead a parish said Friday it was time the Vatican welcomed them back into the fold because "women and marriage...have enhanced our ability to minister."

"We have two calls: the call to priestly work and the call to marriage. We can be faithful to both," said Frank Bonnike, a founder of Corps of Reserve Priests United for Service.

Members of the group spoke as they gathered for their first national conference this weekend. They planned to recommend that the church allow them to perform as priests to ease the growing shortage of Catholic clergy. About 10 percent of U.S. parishes have no full-time priest, according to the group, which said the figure is more than 40 percent worldwide.

"We have reached a period in the church where it is a crisis of massive proportions," said Terrance A. Sweeney, whose 1986 survey of U.S. bishops showed that nearly a quarter favored optional celibacy for priests.

Sweeney, who resigned from the Jesuits after refusing orders to destroy his poll, called the church's policy against marriage for priests "contrary to God and human nature."

"It's a scandal that the church proclaims the dignity of the human person and human rights to the world, but within her own walls and her canon laws...forbids this fundamental human right," he said.

Since the 12th century, the Catholic church has demanded priests take a vow of celibacy, maintaining that unmarried clergymen are better able to devote themselves to God and the priesthood.

Priests who marry are forbidden to say Mass or have a parish but are allowed to perform some sacraments in an emergency. The church terms them "former priests," although once a priest is ordained he is considered a priest for life.

The priests' group says there are between 15,000 and 17,000 married priests in the United States. The National Conference of Catholic Bishops said it had no figures and declined further comment Friday.

Bonnike feels it is wrong for the church to think that priests who have married "have suddenly become inept for ministry."

"We feel...that women and marriage and family and children have enhanced our ability to minister," he said.

Carl Hemmer, of Fairfax, Va., is a former Jesuit who this month is celebrating his 20th wedding anniversary. He has a full-time job with the federal government but continues to perform weddings and other functions that, while not recognized by the church, are legal for civil authorities.

"I'm not against the Roman Catholic church, but at the same time, I don't see where I add anything. I'm baggage," he said. "They haven't been able to accept us."

Women who marry priests face problems of their own, said Pamela Sweeney, who has been married to Terrance Sweeney for seven months.

"I really went through a very soul-searching period. I didn't know whether I should feel ashamed and guilty and dirty to fall in love with this man," she said. "I have been called every name in the book — seductress and temptress and the devil. It's very painful."

"It's a scandal that the church proclaims the dignity of the human person and human rights to the world, but within her own walls and her canon laws...forbids this fundamental human right."

— former priest Terrance Sweeney

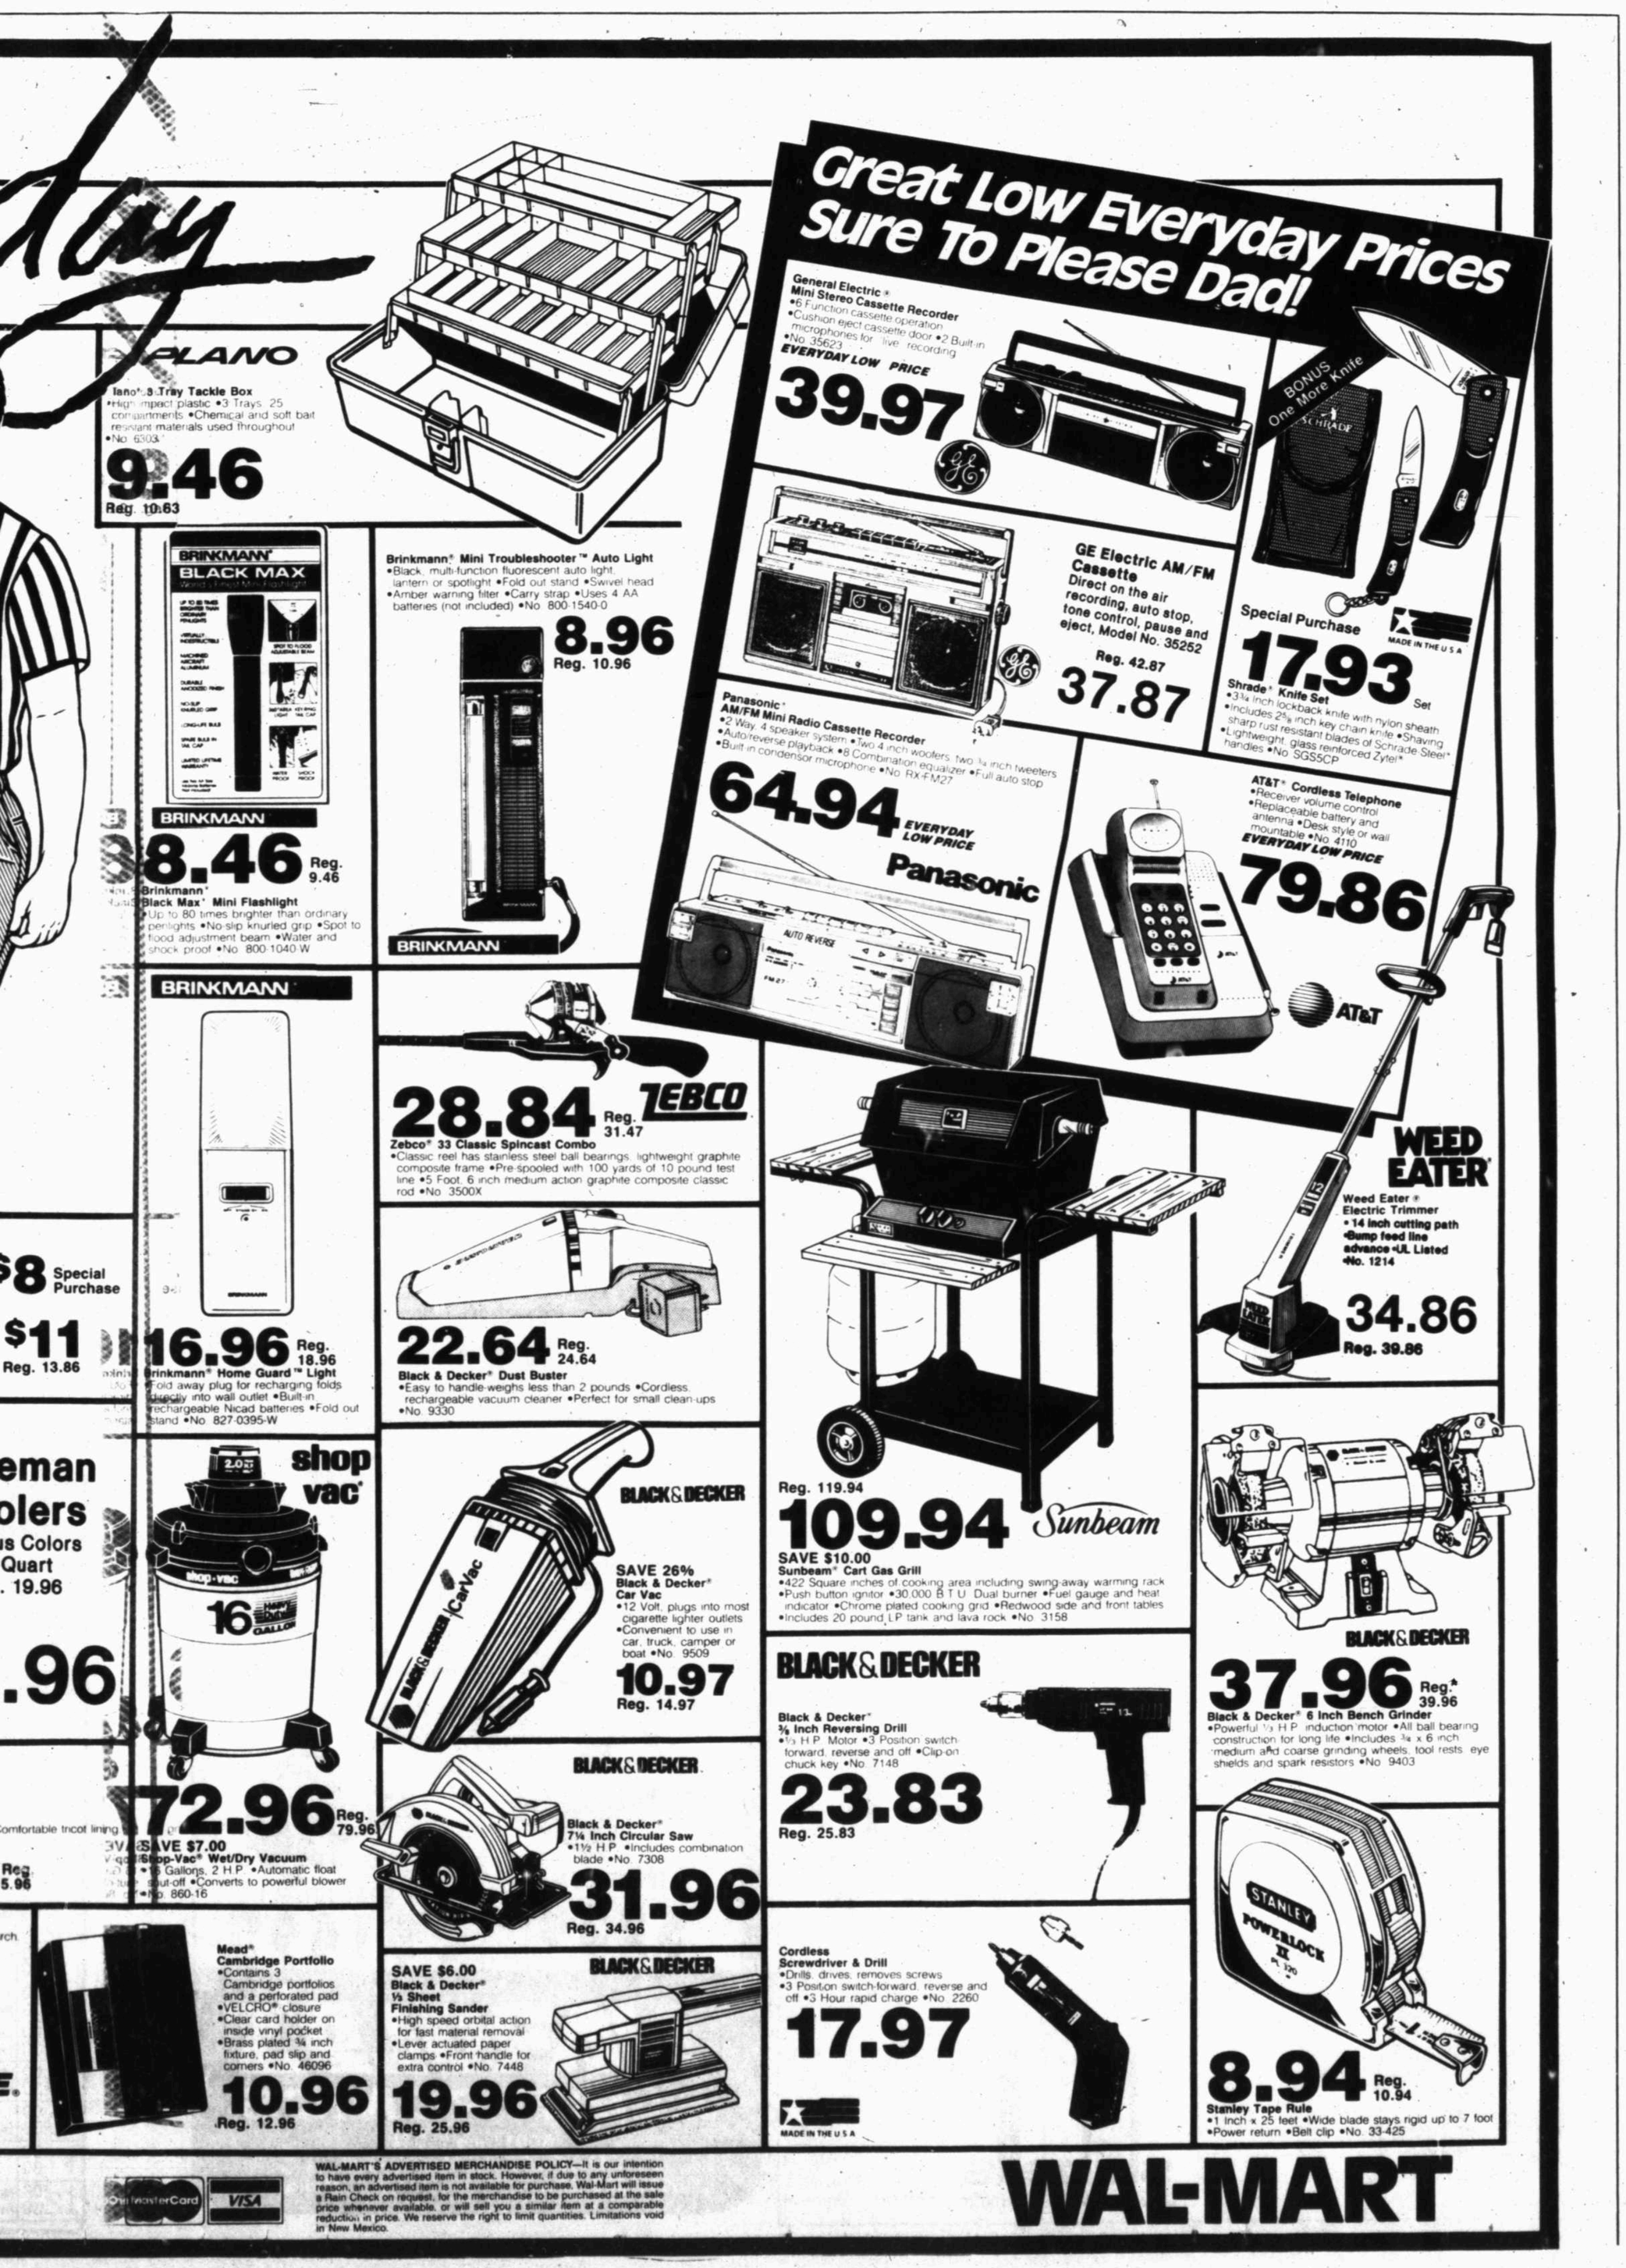
She feels women are not to blame for taking men away from the priesthood but rather, "it's that the church is preventing them from functioning."

"Priests do fall in love, and no law that imposes celibacy can say that those emotions are not going to take place," she said.

Like many such couples, the Sweeneys had a difficult time finding a priest to marry them. They settled for an Episcopal service in Los Angeles. Sweeney, who has won several Emmy awards for religious programming and documentaries, received national publicity at the time because of his clash with the Vatican on the celibacy survey.

And much has been made of the fact that Sweeney was a technical adviser on "The Thorn Birds," a 1983 television miniseries about a priest who fell in love with a parishioner, Mrs. Sweeney noted.

"I can't tell you in how many magazines there's always a picture of (actors) Richard Chamberlain and Rachel Ward, and across the page there's a picture of Terry and me," she said. "At least we have a happy ending."



Barges idle near shallow spots on rivers

Associated Press

Parched farmland soaked up moderate rain in parts of Iowa on Friday, Ohio officials warned of the possibility of mandatory water conservation, and barges sat idle near shallow sections of the busy Mississippi and Ohio rivers.

"I don't think the public understands the gravity of this problem," Ohio Lt. Gov. Paul Leonard said Friday. "They think this is a great summer. From the beach point of view, this may be a great summer. But from a water availability point of view, this could be a dangerous summer."

In the South, reservoirs on the Savannah River in South Carolina are at low levels comparable to their status during the severe droughts of the 1930s and 1950s, the Army Corps of Engineers said.

Several points in northwestern and north-central Iowa received half an inch of rain or more Friday, but other areas got nothing more than clouds when a warm front made its way southeast through the region.

"This is probably our last chance for rain for a week," said Chuck Myers, forecaster for the National Weather Service in Iowa. He said weather patterns would shut off any moisture from the Gulf of Mexico; Friday's rain came from a weak weather system that came all the way from the Pacific.

Iowa State extension climatologist Elwynn Taylor said Friday's rain barely made a dent in the amount of moisture needed. He said dry counties in northeastern Iowa need five inches of rain to get back to normal growing conditions. The rest of the state needs between two and four inches.

In other developments, Iowa ordered irrigators and other heavy water users along the Winnebago, English and Little Cedar rivers and a section of the Cedar River to stop pumping, with officials saying similar action is being considered to protect other low-flowing streams.

The weather service has predicted a continuation of the unusually dry Midwestern weather through at least July 15, raising the possibility of a 20-25 percent loss in corn yields as opposed to the 10 percent loss suffered to date.

Futures traders on Chicago, Kansas City and Minneapolis commodities exchanges have been bidding up prices for future delivery of grains and soybeans. On the Chicago Board of Trade, corn futures have risen about 40 percent since May 1 and soybeans have advanced about 35 percent, and cash prices have followed suit.

In Ohio, the lieutenant governor was named by Gov. Richard Celeste to head a special state agency task force being created to draft recommendations for gubernatorial and legislative action in response to the drought.

Leonard said that while dry farms have gotten most of the public's attention, "In my opinion, an equally serious risk is facing Ohio communities in terms of potential water shortages or eventual contamination of water supplies in Ohio communities."

Leonard would not rule out the possibility of mandatory restrictions. "That would certainly be a last resort, but at this point in time you can't rule anything in, or rule anything out, until you get a good assessment of the problem," he said.

About 1,000 barges were halted on the Mississippi near Greenville, Miss., while nearly 700 barges were stranded on the Ohio near Mound City, Ill., authorities said, with water down to 7 feet deep in spots, 2 feet too shallow for loaded barges.

The Coast Guard shut down a 7-mile stretch of the Ohio near Mound City on Tuesday to begin dredging a 2,100-foot channel, 11 feet deep by 250 feet wide. The Guard planned to reopen the Ohio to traffic Thursday night, shifted that to Friday, then delayed the opening again until Sunday because of dredging problems.

The Mississippi is at its lowest levels since authorities began keeping records in 1872. Eight dredges from Greenville to Cairo, Ill., were working round-the-clock and only a few barges were passing at a time.

Water theft has become a new problem in Georgia's Henry County, just south of Atlanta. Eight people have been cited for tapping onto county water lines in the past four weeks.

Habitat practices economics of the Bible

EDITOR'S NOTE — When Jimmy Carter went to New York a few years ago to help build homes for the poor, the media came out in force. Since then, the volunteer organization sponsoring the project has grown dramatically, today doing work in 280 cities in the United States and Canada, plus 25 Third World countries. Here is a look at Habitat for Humanity and the man who started it all.

By JOSEPH B. FRAZIER
Associated Press Writer

AMERICUS, Ga. — Millard Fuller is fond of quoting a passage from Luke: "Whoever has two shirts must give one to the man who has none."

"That's the only thing that works," he says. "It's the economics of the Bible."

Fuller heeded that lesson two decades ago when he decided to save his failing marriage by giving away his fortune and refocusing his life.

Now, one of his projects, Habitat for Humanity, mixing "sweat equity" and "biblical economics," is moving thousands of working poor families out of substandard housing and into their own basic but adequate new homes.

Habitat, whose volunteer carpenters include former President Jimmy Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, has mushroomed since its founding in 1976.

By 1980 it was in 11 American cities and three countries. Now it operates in 280 cities in the United States and Canada, plus 25 Third World countries. It has built more than 4,000 homes, including 1,200 last year. Habitat projects finishing 2,000 homes this year and 4,000 in 1989.

The goal, Fuller says is to reach 2,000 American towns and cities and 60 countries by 1996.

"We go where we're invited, but we have the word out all over the world," Fuller says. "We believe the poor need capital, not charity, and that's what Habitat provides."

Carter, involved with Habitat since 1984, will join about 1,000 other volunteers to build 20 homes in a down-at-heels neighborhood in southeastern Atlanta June 27-July 1 in Habitat's most ambitious single project to date.

He has said Habitat is one of the few volunteer efforts to which he gives large amounts of time.

On one Habitat project, in which he helped renovate run-down homes in New York City, Carter recalls, "I had more fun and made more friends that week than any time since I left the White House."

Habitat, Fuller says, uses volunteers and help from the private sector to make homeowners of the poor.

"Homeowners make better citizens and upgrade neighborhoods," he says. "Someone is less likely to bust down a door or smash a window if it is his door or window."

When a Habitat project opens in a city, homeowners are chosen by a committee based on need, willingness to help with the work and ability to repay, which eliminates the poorest of the poor but keeps most low-income families eligible.

"In general, recipients have to be too poor to go to a bank for a housing loan," Fuller explains.

They are people like Evelyn Jackson, whose new home in Atlanta was recently completed. "This will mean so much to me and my children," she says. "We're all so happy. You don't know how good it feels to have your own place."

A recipient family must include children and able-bodied members of the family are expected to help build their house, as well as others, paying only the value of the land and materials, at no interest, over 20 years. Payments average $150-$180 a month, including taxes and insurance. The money is recycled to finance future homes.

With a few skilled carpenters and a bevy of volunteers, the wood-frame houses, up to three bedrooms, can be finished in less than a week at from $25,000 to $28,000, including land costs, in the United States. In developing countries the cost is far less.

Fuller says Habitat, based in Americus, is firmly rooted in the principles of fundamental Christianity, but operates in countries such as in India where there are few Christians.

He said Christianity is not a requirement for participation but that Habitat welcomes the chance to spread the word. A Bible is presented to new homeowners.

"It's totally ecumenical," he says. "Habitat includes every denomination you can think of."

It was a point he stressed at a recent speech in Macon to a moderate faction of the Southern Baptist Convention.

The 53-year-old Fuller, a tall, thin man with a magnetic smile, noted he was not a Baptist. But, he said, his life still was directed "by GAWD, and by JEEE-sus."

Cable car operator rings in victory

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Only hours after he clanged and chimed his way to his ninth victory in the 25th annual Cable Car Bell Ringing Competition, Carl Payne already was thinking about next year's contest.

"I have to be constantly thinking of something that's catchy, a little different," the 47-year-old cable car gripman said Wednesday.

Payne, who has been at the controls — and the bell — of a cable car for the past two decades, says he is serious about his bell-ringing art, in which he combines popular songs, everyday sounds and his own fanciful rhythms.

Wednesday, Payne's inventiveness and skill led to victory against five other gripmen and conductors on the city's cable car system. The six finalists were chosen from about 30 contestants in last week's preliminary "ringoff."

While Payne thinks highly of his colleagues, he had special praise for the winner of the amateur category — 15-year-old David Fillippone of Moraga.

David clanged out a medley of "Camptown Races" and "Good King Wenceslaus."

"The boy has a lot of talent, a lot of potential for ringing the bell, Payne said.

Martha Esch plans to hitch rides on vintage planes such as this one — a 1943 Stearman biplane which recently took her to Houston — in her journey to all 48 contiguous states.

Woman hitches dreams to vintage airplanes

By CHERYL COGGINS FRINK

AUSTIN (AP) — She's not looking for in-flight movies, air-sick bags, flotation devices or complimentary cocktails. She doesn't expect a fold-down tray or stereo headphones. And Martha Esch knows there never will be any smoking in the lavatory on her plane trips because there simply won't be any lavatory.

No, all Ms. Esch is asking for is a ride. Just a ride in a few hundred elderly airplanes that will allow her to live out a personal dream and deliver social commentary all in one five-month, cross-country adventure.

Ms. Esch, who flew out of Orlando, Fla., 21 days ago, plans to hitch rides on vintage airplanes in her journey to all 48 contiguous states. She has made arrangements for trips from "one aerodrome to the next" with more than 125 owners or pilots who operate aircraft at least 25 years old. Among those is Gary Neely of Austin, who flew Ms. Esch to Houston Tuesday in his blue and gold 1943 Stearman biplane, a World War II training aircraft.

"I grew up in the back yard of Cleveland Hopkins Airport, and I would see the old planes fly over the house," says Ms. Esch, who plans to photograph the pilots who cart her around the country for a book she is writing about her barnstorming adventure.

"I just love these old birds. I always wanted to fly them. It's the simple time they represent. The pilots used just a few instruments on a panel because it wasn't in the technical computer age. And it's fun to get up in the air and listen to the wind through the wires. It makes you feel like you're back in a movie," says Ms. Esch, a self-employed artist who holds a commercial pilot's license.

Ms. Esch also wants this escapade to serve as a reminder of the freedom Americans enjoy in flying.

"I'm hoping that it will make a comment on the freedom of personal flight that still exists in America. General aviation doesn't exist in all countries. In a lot of countries, a person can't own a plane. But aviation is still available in America to anyone who seeks it out," Ms. Esch said.

In her flights around the country, Ms. Esch likes to wear a leather Sopwith Camel helmet, World War I goggles, a silk scarf and knee-high boots she found at a flea market. She carries a pilot's license on loan from the Valiant Air Command out of Titusville, Fla. The license is dated 1930 and names Wilbur Wright as one of her instructors.

When asked her age, Ms. Esch pulls out the license and simply says, "Well, this says in 1930 I was 29 years old."

The trip, which Ms. Esch estimates will carry her more than 20,000 miles, originated near her home in Zellwood, Fla. Planning for the junket began last year when she placed an ad in a national aviation publication asking for rides in older airplanes. She received more than 100 responses from owner-pilots interested in helping Ms. Esch undertake what she says is an aviation first. By the time she finishes, she says, 300 to 400 pilots will have helped her out.

Although the pilots are not being paid for the flights, Ms. Esch will photograph each with his or her plane and include it in her book on her journey. Thus far, her travels have put her in a variety of planes, ranging from a 1941 Waco to a 1928 Travel Air biplane. "The fastest one so far has been a 600 horsepower AT-6," she said.

Mecham says he may run for governor in 1990

GLENDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Former Gov. Evan Mecham, celebrating his acquittal on criminal charges, said Friday he may run for governor again in 1990.

Mecham told reporters he had no vindictive feelings following his acquittal on criminal charges of concealing a $350,000 campaign loan. His brother, Willard, also was cleared of all charges following a Superior Court trial.

However, Mecham accused Attorney General Bob Corbin of abusing his office and vowed to support a petition campaign to recall the prosecutor from office.

"We went through eight months of misery" after Corbin's investigation of the campaign loan began last fall, Mecham said. "Thank God those jurors could see through the accusations and get to the facts."

Willard Mecham, his brother's 1986 campaign treasurer, said testifying before state grand juries was "by far the most evil experiences I have ever had...The perjury in this case was committed by the state attorneys who prosecuted us."

Evan Mecham said he felt vindicated "on the legal issues, but justice in the political arena will take a little longer." Mecham was removed from office April 4 when the Senate convicted him of two unrelated impeachment counts.

He said he may run for governor again in 1990 but that there was "always a chance" of a campaign this year for U.S. Senate or Congress.

Mecham said his political action committee, Forward Arizona, will work to elect a Legislature "that represents the people and not the hidden power brokers."

He said the group will consider starting an alternative newspaper to counter what he views as a biased Phoenix press. Plans are in the works for two books, a TV movie and a feature film, he said, joking that he would like to be portrayed by actor Clint Eastwood.

During a news conference at his private office, Mecham was jubilant while his brother often appeared on the verge of tears. Afterward, Mecham cut a cake that said "Truth Prevails — Evan and Willard."

Mecham said Corbin was "obsessed" with getting him out of office.

As for Mecham's support of a recall for prosecutor, Corbin said, "He doesn't know what he's talking about. He's always supported it, I expected him to."

The former governor also accused a Court of Appeals judge — whom he did not name — of ruling on an appeal in his criminal case despite having "openly declared that I was dishonest and should be in jail."

Two of the three Court of Appeals judges who handled the case, Judge Melvyn T. Shelley and Judge Sarah D. Grant, said they had made no such statement and had not heard Mecham's accusation before.

The third judge, J. Thomas Brooks, was out of town and unavailable for comment, but Shelley and Ms. Grant said they had not heard him make such a statement.

Mecham's attorney, Michael Scott, said a complaint might be filed with the state Bar Association's judicial ethics committee.

Mecham was prosecuted for failing to itemize the $350,000 campaign loan from attorney-developer Barry Wolfson on either his personal or campaign finance reports.

The defense contended the loan was properly reported as part of a $465,000 lump sum listed as a contribution from Mecham, and that the failure to itemize it was an innocent mistake by Willard Mecham. The defense also insisted the loan was "common knowledge" among Mecham insiders.

Dukakis decries impact of drug traffic

Associated Press

Republican George Bush vowed Friday to "lay to rest the myth that Michael Dukakis is some kind of a conservative." His Democratic rival promised to lead a National Alliance Against Drugs to reverse a national "sense that things are out of control."

Dukakis kept pounding away at drug abuse and drug pushers on the second day of a Southern campaign swing, while Bush campaigned from his vice presidential office in Washington.

Dukakis began his day by meeting with law enforcement officials from around the country to talk about drug abuse, then flew to Mississippi to announce his ideas for a public-private partnership with the goal of "drug-free schools in every community in America in the 1990s."

"Nobody is going to tell me we have to run up the white flag of surrender on this issue," he told the Mississippi Municipal Association convention in Biloxi.

He decried the impact of drug traffic on America, saying "There's a sense that things are out of control" and "our citizens can't walk down the street and buy a bottle of milk without being in fear of their lives."

Bush, his travel hobbled by a shrunken campaign treasury, spoke to Republican state conventions in Idaho and Minnesota by telephone and called reporters to his office to say he was "offended and shocked" by allegations of corruption at the Pentagon.

"I will not tolerate lawlessness — in the Pentagon, in the streets or in the Congress," Bush said, reading a prepared statement. "The public should know that a Bush administration will see to it that any and all charges are aggressively prosecuted and that the full force of the law is applied to anyone convicted."

Earlier in the day, the vice president told the gathering in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, that he was ready to "lay to rest the myth that Michael Dukakis is some kind of a conservative." Bush said he and Dukakis "violently disagree" on a range of issues, including the death penalty for drug kingpins.

Speaking to the Independent-Republican convention in Rochester, Minn., Bush said, "This is going to be a very close election and party unity matters."

Earlier at the Minnesota meeting, television evangelist Pat Robertson urged people who had supported his presidential candidacy to work hard for Bush.

"It matters whether the man in the White House is a mediocre liberal who returns us to the policies of Jimmy Carter, or a distinguished conservative who builds upon the foundation of a great Republican, Ronald Reagan," he said.

Republican officials have been dogging Dukakis on his Southern trip with attacks on the same theme, that his philosphy is "liberal to the extreme."

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., attacked Dukakis in Tennessee and Florida on Thursday, referring to the candidate as "a Teddy Kennedy liberal" and "clearly soft on crime."

Dukakis tried to shrug off the attacks and wouldn't repsond to McCain.

Pressed on the matter, the Massachusetts governor shrugged and said: "They send some guy from Arizona to Florida who doesn't know beans from brown bread."

In other political developments on Friday:

— Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgi said he is discouraging talk of his being Michael Dukakis' running mate, but the chairman of the Senate Armed Services Commmittee refused to slam the door on the idea after meeting with Dukakis campaign chairman Paul Brountas.

— Bush's aides said the vice president's office will stop mailing campaign speeches to news organizations at public expense. The Evening Sun in Baltimore said that, after it inquired about the practice, aides said the mailings were a mistake and future campaign speeches would be sent only by Bush's presidential campaign.

U.S. eases ban on payments to Panama

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. government agencies and private firms operating in Panama will be allowed to pay social security payroll taxes to the Panamanian government for their Panamanian employees, the State Department said Friday.

Department spokesman Charles E. Redman described the decision as an exemption to an April order by President Reagan halting all payments to the Panamanian government by American citizens.

Another official, who asked not to be identified, said the exemption will provide about $3 million a month to the Panamanian government.

But he said the exemption would not necessarily be a net gain for Panama, pointing out that the taxes are used to provide health care to Panamanian workers and their families.

Redman said the exemption was made for humanitarian purposes. He said that ousted President Eric Arturo Delvalle, whom the United States continues to recognize as the legitimate authority in Panama, had expressed concern about the possibility of severe hardships for Panamanians who might otherwise have been denied medical care at state facilities.

Another official said some Panamanians already had been turned away from these facilities because their U.S. employers had not been contributing to the social security system.

Redman said the exemption in no way reflects a softening of the U.S. policy of bringing economic pressure to bear on the Panamanian government. The administration's objective is to force Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, commander of Panama's Defense Forces, to surrender power.

Woman sentenced to 90 years in poisoning

SEATTLE (AP) — A judge on Friday sentenced a woman to 90 years in prison for putting cyanide in the pain relief medicine that killed her husband and a stranger in the first case under a federal death by product tampering law to reach trial.

Stella Nickell appeared pale and unsmiling, but did not otherwise respond when sentenced.

U.S. District Judge William Dwyer recommended that Mrs. Nickell, 44, of suburban Auburn, not be eligible for parole for a minimum of 30 years.

Prosecutors alleged Mrs. Nickell killed her husband because she was tired of him and wanted to collect $176,000 in life insurance. They said a woman who died had no connection with the couple but became a victim of a plot to make Bruce Nickell's death appear the work of a random killer.

The deaths set off a nationwide tampering scare and caused Excedrin manufacturer Bristol-Myers Co. to recall its non-prescription capsule medicines.

The key witness in Mrs. Nickell's trial was her daughter, Cindy Hamilton, who testified her mother repeatedly discussed ways of killing Nickell, including copying the 1982 Tylenol poisonings in which seven Chicago-area people died. That case has never been solved.

Asked by Dwyer if she wanted to say anything before sentencing, she quietly replied "No sir."

"It must be said that these are crimes of exceptional callousness and cruelty," Dwyer said, noting that poisoned capsules were left on store shelves and could easily have fallen into the hands of other people.

Mrs. Nickell, convicted May 9, received 90-year terms on each of two counts of product tampering resulting in the deaths of her husband and of Susan Katherine Snow, also of Auburn.

She also was sentenced to 10-year terms on each of three tampering counts for poisoning bottles of Extra-Strength Excedrin and Anacin found in the Nickells' home and on store shelves.

All terms were to run concurrently. In addition, Dwyer levied a mandatory $250 minimum fine and said any of Mrs. Nickell's assets should be used to compensate her victims, especially Mrs. Snow's family.

However, Assistant U.S. Attorney Joanne Maida said Mrs. Nickell was indigent and the compensation issue was "academic."

Mrs. Nickell's attorney, Thomas Hillier, told Dwyer his client maintains her innocence and would appeal her conviction.

Hillier later said his client accepted the sentence stoically. "We were prepared for it. We were prepared for worse," he said.

Prosecutors had requested a 230-year sentence, with a minimum 67 years before parole eligibility, saying entire families could have died because of the tampering.

'Cactus cops' catch thief of rare saguaro

Wildlife officials say cactus rustling increasing

EDITOR'S NOTE: Cactus rustling is on the increase in America, and the rustlers are a slippery lot. Tracking them can take the shape of a detective thriller, especially when the prize is a desert rarity and the felony conviction of the thieves a judicial first.

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — It stood like a crowned monarch, 19 feet tall, arms upraised in regal benediction. Its realm was an acre and a half of tame desert flora at a suburban plant nursery in Nevada.

The nursery workers saluted it each time they passed: "Buenas dias, senor."

They did not discover until later that their splendid saguaro cactus was a victim of a lucrative form of crime which authorities say is on a rapid increase in the American Southwest — cactus rustling.

This monarch's true realm was the isolated splendor of Arizona's Sonora Desert.

"The trouble is," said John Keeler of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, "it's almost impossible to prove that a particular cactus was uprooted illegally. They don't have brands on them, you know. The crooks are aware of this, and that's why it's big business. This time we got lucky."

BIG BUSINESS, yes, though not in comparison with the traffic in drugs or even illegal birds smuggled through the American Southwest. But these states are facing dwindling water supplies and are encouraging developers, resort operators and homeowners to turn to desert plants for their landscaping. As a result, the legal trade in cactus in Arizona, just one state, has grown to about $2 million a year. The illegal trade, according to state experts, is probably half again as much. The cactus in the nursery had a sticker price, as it were, of $15,000.

Moreover, the sleuths who pursue cactus rustlers seem every bit as determined as yesterday's cattle-rustler posses and today's narcotics detectives, and the crime just as pernicious.

They view the illegal ripping of a fragile plant out of a fragile desert as a desecration, a ruthless violation of a cathedral of nature. All they have to do is look south across the Mexican border to see the unholy bleakness of the very same desert practically laid bare by cactus rustlers and smugglers.

Such was their dedication that luck played only a minor role in catching the thieves who stole the great cactus that wound up in the Las Vegas nursery.

That capture came about because of an observant nature-lover from Oregon whose outrage set on the thief's trail wildlife agents from three states and the federal government. Their hunt took eight months. It led to the nation's first and only felony conviction to date for the crime of cactus rustling.

Of all the 5,000 varieties of cactuses, the one that comes to mind with the very word is the saguaro, Cereus giganteus, the giant of the desert, pronounced suh-WAH-row.

If you see saguaros growing in the wild you are looking at southern Arizona, their only natural home on this planet. If you see them at sunset, the needles covering their giant torsos and uplifted arms reflect an aura of gold; in moonlight, silver. They seem to possess a mystical quality.

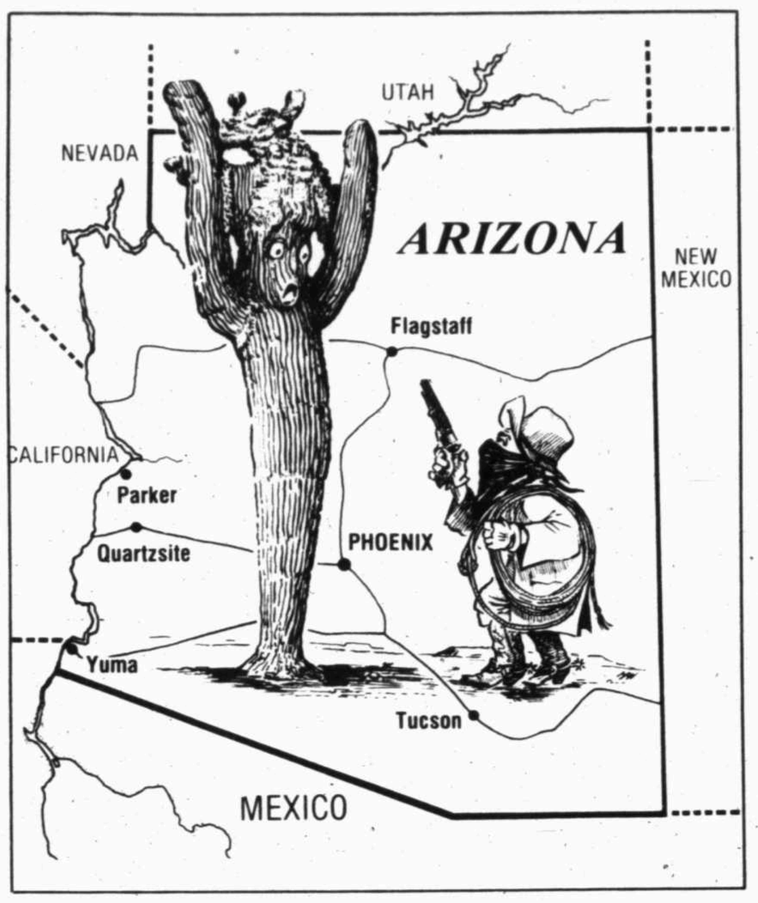
Victor Gass, curator of the Desert Botanical Gardens in Phoenix, Ariz., poses in front of a rare crested saguaro cactus. He said perhaps one saguaro in 200,000 develops a crest, a fan-shaped growth — actually a deformity — on the top of the plant's main stem.



AP Illustration

THE PAPAGO Indians, who harvest cactus fruit to make wine and jelly, call saguaros "the old men." The residents of Quartzsite, Ariz., had a special name for the one tracked to that Nevada nursery: "Old Granddad."

A saguaro grows only an inch or less a year in the arid desert. That would make Old Granddad 200 years old. Saguaros don't even develop their characteristic arms until they are at least 70.

Old Granddad stood in utter remoteness 20 miles east of Quartzsite, an old stagecoach stop on what is now I-10. But Old Granddad, which stood there before the first stagecoach arrived, wasn't visible from any paved road.

Roy and Rosslee Crockett, from Baker, Ore., heard about the majestic saguaro when they first wintered near Quartzsite back in 1977.

"It was not like any other saguaro we had ever seen," Mrs. Crockett said.

She and Crockett of course took snapshots of each other standing next to Old Granddad. Each winter thereafter the Crocketts drove their camper to southwestern Arizona, and each year made a trip out to visit Old Granddad and make snapshots.

And indeed it was like no other saguaro they had seen or were likely to see.

It was a crested saguaro, the rarest of the rare. According to Victor Gass, curator of the Desert Botanical Gardens in Phoenix, maybe one saguaro in 200,000 develops a crest, and Old Granddad had the most developed crest Gass or any of his colleagues had ever seen.

A CREST is a fan-shaped growth on the top of the plant's main stem. It is actually a deformity, a botanical aberration called "fasciation." Nobody knows what causes it. It occurs only in the wild and can't be reproduced in a nursery. On this particular saguaro the crest measured more than 6 feet across and 4 feet tall.

On the Crockett's ninth winter in Quartzsite, Old Granddad was gone.

"We didn't know what to do or what to think," Mrs. Crockett said. "The more I thought about it the madder I got. Finally I called the sheriff."

The following day Mrs. Crockett's report reached Alex Leivas, an agent of the Arizona Agricultural and Horticultural Commission whose district encompasses Quartzsite and whose duties include that of cactus cop, as they are known in the state.

She led him to the hole in the ground where the old cactus had stood. Leivas found some tire tracks and took some pictures. She showed him her own pictures of Old Granddad.

"I had figured it was just another saguaro," Leivas said. "When I saw her pictures, I thought, wow. I had never seen such a crested saguaro."

Leivas returned to the site with survey maps and confirmed his suspicion that it was on land controlled by the Bureau of Land Management, federal land, and phoned Keeler, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife agent.

Then he recalled a "transit notice" he had received earlier from a border agent in California, information the two states exchange when native plants are transported across state lines. To uproot a protected plant legally requires a permit from the state and a metal tag affixed to the plant.

THE NOTICE said that a load of cactuses, duly tagged, had passed through Vidal Junction, Calif., on a flatbed truck Feb. 3. It mentioned no crested saguaro, but, as Leivas discovered later, the saguaro had been hidden beneath other varieties of especially prickly plants, concealed as if by barbed wire. The notice said the load was bound for Las Vegas, the carrier listed as Rattlesnake Ranch near Wenden, Ariz.

Leivas decided to check it out. Meanwhile, he had Mrs. Crockett's pictures made into a sort of wanted poster, like a missing-child bulletin in a supermarket, and mailed a copy to every border checkpoint in Arizona, California, Nevada and New Mexico.

He also sent a poster to John Jones of the Nevada Division of Forestry in Las Vegas, and told him about the load of cactuses. Jones immediately recognized the picture of the crested saguaro as one that recently arrived at Cactus King, a leading Nevada nursery.

But a picture is not, as the cops say, a positive I.D., so Keeler and Leivas arranged to drive the 300 miles to Las Vegas with Mr. and Mrs. Crockett and have them take a look.

"There it is!" Roy Crockett cried, even before they pulled into the nursery.

Said Linda Akers, the assistant U.S. attorney who prepared the case for trial, "It was the only plant lineup I've ever heard of. I mean, 'Mr. and Mrs. Crockett, do you recognize any plant among that bunch?' You have to admit it's bizarre."

It turned out the deal had been made through a middleman, a broker, and the nursery owner was unaware that it was illegal. The thief sold it for $1,300 to the broker, who resold it to the nursery for $1,500. That would be about the markup for any saguaro this size, but this crested beauty was special.

"After it was here a week I was offered $7,500," said the nursery owner, Jeff Meckley. "Obviously I wasn't going to let it go for the first offer, but the truth is I didn't want to sell it at all. That's why I marked it up to $15,000. It was so magnificent I wanted to keep it myself."

MECKLEY, DISAPPOINTED, bundled up Old Granddad with loving care and proper equipment. He hauled it to where Keeler had arranged for its keeping, the Desert Botanical Gardens in Phoenix.

It is no easy job to move a giant saguaro without damage, internal or external. They are deceptively heavy, storing enough water within to last as long as four years without a refill. This one weighed two tons. Transporting one safely involves hydraulic hoists and slings and padded cradles. The thief had used none.

Now Keeler and Leivas had their cactus, but not their case.

The cactus was tagged with a legitimate tag, No. 10108. It was issued to Glen and Karen Clontz of the Rattlesnake Ranch on Jan. 10, 1986. It authorized them to dig cactuses along a 100-foot-wide right-of-way for an oil pipeline across the Arizona desert.

The only time permission is given to uproot any of Arizona's 212 species of protected plants from state or federal land — which constitutes 87 percent of Arizona soil — is when they are in certain danger of being destroyed by such a project.

Keeler found Rattlesnake Ranch "out in the middle of nowhere" in a place known as Butler Valley. The "ranch" turned out to be a trailer and a few other beat-up vehicles. No electricity. No running water.

The Clontzes admitted they had dug the crested cactus. They maintained that they had saved it in the nick of time from the pipeline bulldozers. Keeler noticed a dozen saguaros scattered about, with no tags, and also an immature red-tailed hawk, a protected bird, which he found starving to death in a cage. He took the pitiful creature to a rehabilitation center in Phoenix.

"Who's to say precisely where a cactus was taken?" Keeler said. "He claimed it came from the pipeline path. Without the Crockett's photos we didn't have much of a case."

SO KEELER took the photos out to the site and stood in the exact spot where the Crocketts had stood and snapped his own pictures. The backgrounds matched. Only Old Granddad was missing — a mile from the pipeline. That sewed it up.

"The evidence was so overwhelming," said U.S. attorney Akers, "that we let the Clontzes plead guilty and saved the expense of a trial."

Under Arizona law cactus rustling is a misdemeanor. Under federal law it is a felony and this was the first time the government had had the evidence to make it stick. In recognition, the Crocketts received a $2,000 reward.

On Feb. 23, 1987, a year and a day after Mrs. Crockett reported the missing saguaro to the sheriff, Glen and Karen Clontz were each fined $250 and he was sent off to the federal penitentiary in Boron, Calif., where he served six months of a two-year sentence. Both were put on five years supervised probation and forbidden to deal in plants for that period.

Hillary says 'hills are getting steeper now'

By EILEEN ALT POWELL

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — What Sir Edmund Hillary recalls most vividly about standing at the top of Mount Everest 35 years ago is the ice — prickly, biting slivers of ice billowing around like a white halo.

"They bore into your face, cutting and tingling," he said. "And exhilarating."

On May 29, 1953, Hillary and the Sherpa guide Tenzing Norgay became the first men to conquer the world's tallest mountain.

Neither Hillary nor Norgay, who died in 1986, ever said who got there first.

"We reached it together, that's all," Hillary said in an interview, abruptly ending any further discussion of the question.

Since their ascent, 202 men and women have followed them up the massive 29,028-foot mountain on the border of Nepal and Tibet.

To many, Everest symbolizes the literal and figurative high point of a mountaineer's career.

BUT HILLARY views it as "a beginning rather than the end of adventurous activity."

It won the New Zealander a knighthood from Queen Elizabeth II. More important, he said, it earned him the financial backing to climb scores of other peaks in the Himalayan chain, to trek to the South Pole and even to go off on a lark, an unfruitful quest for "yeti," the legendary abominable snowman.

Hillary, now 68, now spends much of his time behind desks in the capitals of India, Nepal and Bangladesh as New Zealand's ambassador to all three countries.

Although his broad shoulders and 6-foot-3-inch frame suggest he could still take on Everest, he holds to trekking, hiking and other lower-altitude sports.

"I'm finding the hills are getting steeper," he said.

Sir Edmund Hillary, who with the guide Tenzing Norgay conquered Mount Everest 35 years ago, now serves as ambassador of New Zealand to India, Bangladesh and Nepal. Behind him is a landscape painting of his native New Zealand.

Friends, including the Indian teen-agers he has led on white-water rafting trips and the tribal Sherpa children he visits at mountain schools, call him "Sir Ed."

Born Edmund Percival Hillary in Auckland on July 20, 1919, he spent a good deal of his childhood reading adventure books and daydreaming.

"There was a phase when I was the 'fastest gun in the West,' another when I explored the Antarctic," Hillary said. "I would walk for hours with my mind drifting to all these things."

THERE WASN'T much money available in his family for adventure, however. His father, a newspaper editor-turned-beekeeper, was "energetic and very active but never very good at making money."

Hillary took up skiing in high school but didn't try climbing until he was 19 or 20. His first summit was the 7,500-foot Mount Olivier in southern New Zealand.

"It wasn't a difficult mountain by any manner or means, but making it through the snow to the ridge, then along the ridge and up to the summit really captured me," Hillary recalled. "It was then that I resolved I was going to do a lot more mountains. And I did."

Hillary was already a veteran of numerous Indian Himalayan peaks when he was asked to join a British expedition in 1951 to the Everest region. The reconnaissance team explored the Khumbu glacier and an ice fall in the shadow of the great mountain.

"We were the first to realize there was a potential route up Everest from the south side," he said.

Two years later, he and Norgay and 11 others set out with the British Everest Expedition on that route. Hillary was 33 at the time, Norgay 38. At least 14 expeditions before them had failed.

Hillary said their equipment was less sophisticated than the gear available now. Although they had early nylon ropes and oxygen cylinders, they struggled with primitive, metal-spiked clampons for their boots and ice axes that lacked the curve that facilitates vertical climbing nowadays.

THERE WAS also a psychological barrier: "Physicians had warned us that even if we got to the top with oxygen, we might collapse and die because of the thin air."

Just short of the summit, Hillary and Norgay hit what appeared to be an insurmountable obstacle, a vertical "rock step" 40 feet high. Maneuvering carefully, they found a crack where the ice was breaking away from the rock and eased their way up. The spot is known to mountaineers today as "Hillary's step."

Hillary says he is most often asked if reaching the summit was accompanied by some religious or spiritual experience.

"For me, no," Hillary said. "It was mostly a sense of satisfaction and surprise actually." Norgay, he said, was more emotional.

"I shook his hand," Hillary recalled. "He threw his arms around my shoulders and gave me a tremendous hug." Later, Norgay, a Buddhist, buried bits of candy and biscuits in the snow as "a gift to the gods," Hillary said.

Atop Everest, Hillary said, he quickly found his attention turning to other unconquered peaks. With the ice particles cutting into his face and frosting his cheeks, he scanned nearby Makalu peak (27,807 feet) and worked out a climbing route.

Hillary failed in an attempt on Makalu in 1954, but a French team made it up several years later.

IF HIS vocation today is diplomacy and the outdoors, his avocation is working to improve the lot of the poor Sherpa tribesmen who live in the hills below Everest.

Since 1961, he has raised about $200,000 a year to build schools, hospitals and water systems for the Sherpas of Nepal.

The effort has cost him more than time and energy. His wife Louise and 16-year-old daughter Belinda were killed in a plane crash in 1975 en route to join him at one of his Sherpa hospitals.

His son Peter, 33, of Melbourne, Australia, makes his living as a ski instructor and mountaineer. Peter has failed twice in efforts to climb Everest. A daughter, Sarah, 31, is an art restorer in Auckland.

Thirteen people have climbed Everest more than once, including the Nepali Sungdare Sherpa who has been to the top four times.

But Hillary said he never had any desire to repeat the trip.

"There were so many other mountains."

Midlander named to state water board

From Staff Reports

Governor Bill Clements Friday named Wesley Edwin Pitman of Midland to the Texas Water Development Board.

Pitman, general manager of Wagner & Brown Oil Co. in Midland, replaces George W. McCleskey of Lubbock whose term expired and will serve through December 1993.

A graduate of Rice University with a bachelor of scinece degree in petroleum engineer, Pitman is a former president and chairman of the board of First City National Bank San Angelo. He is also past campaign chairman of San Angelo United Way and that city's annual Fiesta del Concho.

Pitman was one of five named by the governor to state boards on Friday.

Fish hatchery to increase fish population

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Depleted gamefish populations along the Texas coast received a boost Friday with the opening of a new $4.3 million hatchery and research center for such troubled species as redfish and speckled sea trout.

"The pressure of sport fishing on Texas bays is increasing dramatically," said William Rutledge, chief of fish hatcheries for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department. "The more that people fish, the more that these (gamefish) populations cannot sustain themselves."

The new Ben F. Vaughn Jr. Hatchery and Research Center will nearly triple production of gamefish at the Gulf Coast Conservation Association-Central Power & Light Marine Development Center in Flour Bluff, Rutledge said.

Production will increase from the current 7 million fish annually to 20 million by next year, he said.

The center is a joint venture of the parks and wildlife department, GCCA and CPL, which donated the land and provides heated water from a power station.

In 1982, the Marine Development Center opened as the John Wilson Redfish Hatchery. Since then, it has released more than 36 million small redfish into Texas bays from Port Arthur to Brownsville, Rutledge said.

"In every bay we've stocked except Matagorda, the number of 18-inch (legal minimum) redfish has doubled," Rutledge said. "We've learned that stocked fish do work."

He said no studies have been conducted on survival rates of the hatchery fish.

The state is considering tightening game fishing regulations, because officials are concerned that not enough fish are escaping from the bays into the Gulf of Mexico.

To date, the center has concentrated on restoring the redfish population, which was badly depleted in the late 1970s from heavy commercial and sport fishing.

The new hatchery facility adds 16 new spawning tanks to the Marine Development Center. That expansion, Rutledge said, will allow the center to go beyond redfish production and begin experimenting with other depleted gamefish, including speckled sea trout, snook and tarpon.

Odessa man jailed on marijuana charge

From Staff Reports

A 44-year-old Odessa man was in custody today in the Brewster County Jail following his arrest early Friday on a marijuana possession charge, a spokesman for the U.S. Border Patrol in Marfa reported.

The man, whose name was withheld pending arraignment this afternoon, was arrested about 8 a.m. Friday after Border Patrol agents seized 285 pounds of what was believed to be marijuana from the trunk of his 1978 Mercury sedan, according to Border Patrol spokesman Louis Reynold.

Agents made the arrest on Texas Highway 17 about 5 miles south of Fort Davis, said Reynold, adding that the marijuana is believed to be valued at $228,000.

Now Pick.

It's tough when they look so similar. And so with apartments. Many communities look similar, but looks can be deceiving. So how do you pick the good apple in the bunch?
Begin by looking at a Balcor Community. Saddle Club Apartments have been individually designed for their location. And developed to be worthy of the highest honor you can give it - to call it home.
But there's more...something at the core of each Balcor Community that can't be seen at all. And, that's a passion for service. Saddle Club management professionals will go out of their way to ensure that your neighborhood is what you expect it to be. The very best.
So look beyond the first blush on the apple. And you'll pick Saddle Club every time.
Expect the Best.
