EPA involvement in political races probed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The admission by a presidential aide that he held an extensive discussion on political races with an Environmental Protection Agency official will likely drive a House probe of the agency into a sharp turn toward the White House.

James M. Medas, White House special assistant for intergovernmental affairs, changed his earlier story and late Monday admitted that on July 13 he and then-EPA Assistant Administrator Rita M. Lavelle talked about several governors up for re-election.

Earlier in the day, he had said he and Ms. Lavelle held a discussion but discussed no campaigns except one in California.

Members of the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on investigations were ready Monday to question Lavelle about her meeting with Medas, but the former EPA official defied a committee subpoena and failed to appear. The panel voted 8-0 to cite her for contempt, an action which could lead to criminal prosecution.

The committee members have been looking for evidence that the White House and the EPA used the $1.6 billion toxic waste "superfund" for political purposes.

Even before Medas' statement, several panel members said handwritten notes of the meeting, taken by a Lavelle aide, confirmed political manipulation of the fund.

Medas gave his version of the meeting in a memorandum to White House spokesman Larry Speakes.

"At no time did I say, suggest or imply that EPA policies ought to be shaped to meet political considerations," Medas said.

"As I discussed the procedures for dealing with governors and their staff, Lavelle would make political comments about individual governors.

"Although we discussed a number of races, the only race I recall we discussed in any detail was the California governor's race because of our mutual California background."

He said Ms. Lavelle requested the meeting, which lasted about 15 minutes.

Rep. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., who introduced the contempt resolution against Ms. Lavelle, said the July 13 meeting showed the White House was using the toxic dump cleanup program "to influence the outcome" of political campaigns.

A packet of documents made public by the panel included handwritten notes from the meeting taken by Susan Baldyga, the Lavelle assistant who was fired along with her boss last February. She was scheduled to testify, but was excused to obtain an attorney.

Rep. James J. Florio, D-N.J., told subcommittee members and a crowded hearing room that he had wanted to have Ms. Lavelle present at the hearing to explain why copies of his official 1982 campaign contributors list were found on her desk when her office was secured after her dismissal.

Ms. Lavelle was fired by President Reagan after she refused a request from ex-EPA Administrator Anne McGill Burford to resign. The action followed sharp criticism by Ms. Lavelle of the agency's general counsel, Robert Perry.

Ms. Baldyga's notes of the Medas-Lavelle meeting included these references:

—New Jersey Gov. Thomas Kean, a Republican elected in 1981: "Help him all we can — new 'guv'."

—"Bend over backwards" for Republican Gov. Richard Snelling of Vermont, re-elected last year; and for conservative Democrat Edward King, former Massachusetts governor defeated in his state's 1982 primary.

—Democratic Gov. Bob Graham of Florida, "very wary; takes shots all the time."

—Former Texas Gov. Bill Clements, a Republican defeated in 1982, "tough fight."

—Gov. Dick Thornburgh of Pennsylvania, re-elected last year: "real solid; only media market Republican."

—James Thompson, re-elected Illinois governor last year in a close race, "tough, very important."

—Lamar Alexander, re-elected Republican governor of Tennessee last year, "terrific; very important, former chief to Baker." Alexander once was an aide to Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn.

—Democratic Gov. Charles Robb of Virginia, "quiet, highly ambitious, pretty."

—Robert List, former GOP governor of Nevada defeated in 1982, "tough re-election; support (Interior Secretary James) Watt, Gorsuch." Mrs. Burford was Anne Gorsuch before her recent marriage.

Ms. Lavelle's attorney, James J. Bierbower, said his client would testify if the subcommittee let her review the documents in its possession.

Clements' re-election bid among those targeted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Documents released by a House committee investigating the Environmental Protection Agency purport to show that the White House tried to use a part of the $1.6 billion "superfund" toxic waste cleanup program to boost the re-election bid of former Texas Gov. Bill Clements.

The documents, released Monday, contain terse references to several Republican candidates and denote, the committee claimed, White House political manipulation of the program.

Next to Clements' name was a notation of "tough fight" and two stars.

"That was indicated to be an important race to the White House," said Rep. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn.,

The documents were released by the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on investigations, which voted to cite former EPA official Rita M. Lavelle for contempt of Congress.

The subcommittee said the notes were taken at a White House meeting last July 13 between Ms. Lavelle and James M. Medas, a White House special assistant for intergovernmental affairs.

Gore said that "Texas fared well under pre-election superfund consideration because announcements were made regarding four sites during the August to September 1982 period."

Clements lost his re-election bid to then-Attorney General Mark White.

The notes reflected even more favorably on Gov. Thomas Kean, a New Jersey Republican. "Help him all we can — new 'guv'," the documents said, referring to Kean.

Which way is spring?

Wintry weather still plagues nation

By The Associated Press

Ignoring the calendar, wintry storms swept from Nevada to New England on the second full day of spring, leaving eight people dead in Wisconsin from shoveling snow and sending cars crashing helter-skelter on icy roads in the Northeast.

Snow fell from Illinois to New Hampshire and temperatures dipped into the 20s early today, with the cold reaching far enough south to threaten Georgia peaches.

Along the Atlantic coast, rain fell Monday on already saturated ground or drained into swollen rivers. Floods drove 16 families from their homes along the Merrimack River in Massachusetts.

The stormy weather has been blamed for 15 deaths since the weekend.

From Maryland to Massachusetts, dozens of rivers and streams were reported overflowing or near flood stage. "Plan ahead. Be ready to move quickly if necessary," a weather service bulletin in Massachusetts said.

Rushing rain water killed an electric company lineman in Providence, R.I., sweeping him through a sewer after he fell into an open manhole, authorities said.

"We're going to keep pumping until one of three things happens: either the rain stops, the pumps break, or we collapse," said Fire Chief Clem Silva, in Provincetown, Mass., where roads and basements were flooded and storm drains were clogged with sand.

Chicago, Milwaukee, Detroit and Fort Wayne, Ind., were tormented with half a foot or more of wind-blown snow after Monday's storm. Drifts were waist-high in parts of Indiana and southern Michigan, where up to a foot of snow fell.

A Purdue University student died in an accident involving two snowmobiles and a sled in West Lafayette, Ind.

Rain, snow and sleet made road conditions treacherous in western New York. "We've got a lit'le bit of everything today," said a forecaster for the National Weather Service in Buffalo, N.Y. "You name it, we've got it falling someplace."

The weather service predicted snow today from Ohio to New England as the storm marched northeast toward Quebec. A second winter storm was sweeping down from the Rocky Mountains and yet another storm was poised to hit the West Coast, said Nolan Duke of the weather service's Severe Storms Center in Kansas City, Mo.

Hundreds of traffic accidents were blamed on the weather. In the Buffalo, N.Y., area, 29 cars were damaged in three pile-ups early Monday and another crash killed a 34-year-old man. A 44-year-old man died in a two-car collision on a slippery highway in Watertown Township, Mich.

The snow posed a different threat in Wisconsin. Eight men, ranging in age from 58 to 82, collapsed and died Monday during or after shoveling snow in southeastern Wisconsin, according to sheriff's officials in Waukesha and Milwaukee counties.

One victim, Charles J. Casperson, 67, of Neenah, died of an apparent heart attack in an Oconomowoc hospital after having complained to passersby of chest pains while digging around his car after it got stuck on a rural road.

The others were shoveling snow at their homes and suffered from overexertion, officers said.

Mitchell Field, Milwaukee's airport, was closed for about seven hours Monday morning after ground crews gave up trying to keep runways clear of snow driven by wind gusts of up to 44 mph.

In the water-weary Northeast, drenching rains sent streams gushing out of their banks and forced evacuations in several communities.

Appointment will change EPA — but not probe

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — William Ruckelshaus, President Reagan's nominee as administrator of the embattled Environmental Protection Agency, will move rapidly to change its policies reducing restraints on industrial polluters, sources said Monday.

But the appointment of Ruckelshaus, who resigned as deputy attorney general in the Nixon administration rather than fire Watergate special prosecutor Archibald Cox, will not stop the six separate House committees from continuing their investigation of alleged wrongdoing at EPA, congressional sources added.

Administration officials stressed that Ruckelshaus, who returns to the EPA where he served the agency's first administrator from 1970 to 1973, was given "carte blanche" by President Reagan to "clean house" and do whatever is necessary to enforce the environmental laws.

He said it would take a few weeks before he could "get over to the EPA to take charge."

In appointing Ruckelshaus, President Reagan said his nominee has the authority to "conduct an agency-wide review of the personnel and resources" and urged him to run "an open and responsive" operation.

Ruckelshaus will replace Anne Burford, who resigned March 9 amid charges of mismanagement and favoritism to polluters, and John W. Hernandez Jr., the acting administrator, who was accused last week of ordering a softening of an EPA study which concluded that Dow Chemical Co. contaminated major Michigan waterways with toxic pollutants.

The Ruckelshaus selection was praised Monday by even such staunch critics of Reagan's environmental policies as House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, who said he would have no problem working with the nominee.

"Bill's a nice guy and he's extremely able," O'Neill added.

Democratic Senate Minority Leader Robert Byrd called Ruckelshaus "a good administrator who is perceived as a man of integrity" and expressed confidence Ruckelshaus will be swiftly confirmed by the Senate.

Congressional sources agreed Monday that the appointment of Ruckelshaus, a senior vice president of the Weyerhauser Timber Co., in Tacoma, Wash., would help the administration in the long run restore its tarnishd environmental credibility with the American people.

But they felt, however, that the controversy around the agency will not die soon because the allegations of impropriety against EPA officials may result in prosecutions.

"Ruckelshaus should bring back stability to EPA which has been wreaked by a series of charges of impropriety and favoritism," said a congressional aide who deals on a daily basis with EPA.

"These investigations of alleged political manipulation of the agency's toxic waste cleanup program, possible conflicts of interest and perjury involving top current and former officials, political hit lists and surveillance of agency employees and possible favoritism toward industrial polluters will continue," the aide said.

One congressional source said the investigations may drag on for months.

The House Science and Technology Committee will hold a hearing Wednesday to determine the involvement of Dow Chemical Co. officials in getting the EPA to soften a regional study that criticized the company for polluting Michigan rivers.

Unemployment in Midland and Odessa continued to rise in February as preliminary figures were made available today by the Texas Employment Commission in Austin.

Midland has 4,000 unemployed workers, compared to last month's 3,650, said the TEC. These out-of-work persons raised unemployment here to 6.1 percent in February, compared with 5.6 percent a month ago.

Midland's unemployment figure a year ago was 6.5 percent — slightly higher than the current rate.

But the labor force here holds steady at around 65,000, which is 1,000 fewer workers than in 1982. Odessa's labor force has been steadily declining since 1982, according to TEC figures.

In Odessa, the number of persons who work, or who say they will work, is 7,000 fewer than last year. The slimmed 72,300 work force is seeing less work, with 6,300 persons jobless compared to 4,200 last year.

Odessa's rate of unemployment was 8.7 percent for February, slightly up from 8.2 in January.

The figure reflects a higher unemployment rate in Odessa than the 5.3 percent reported a year ago.

Terence Travland, TEC's assistant chief economist in Austin, said, "The Midland-Odessa situation is difficult. The oil and gas industry is having some difficulties — and if anybody's going to feel (its effects) the Permian Basin will."

Among Texans, there was an 8.8 percent unemployment rate for February, compared with 5.8 percent unemployment a year ago.

Midland claims supervisor for the TEC, Charmian Carl, said this morning many people who have been unemployed for some time are seeing the situation is serious and applying for the TEC-administered jobless benefits.

"I think we're seeing more and more of those who have been laid off a while ago" finally applying for benefits.

"Those from professional categories are especially likely to do this," Ms. Carl said, "waiting for weeks to file a claim.

"They finally think, 'A job will not be all that easy to find,' and they come into our office. We try to make everyone as comfortable as possible — there are no lines to stand in." The Midland office provides seating for its waiting areas.

"We have temporaries (working at the Midland TEC) and we are moving as fast as we can go," said Ms. Carl. "It's as much as we can do to keep 'er afloat." There were 35 people waiting outside at 8 a.m. today when Ms. Carl opened the front office.

Frank Kasko, manager of Odessa's TEC office, said he has nearly twice as many employees, counting 20 temporaries. "Naturally the unemployment results from the world oil situation," he said, referring to pricing uncertainty in spot oil markets.

AP Laserphoto Map

Most areas of the nation will be colder, according to the National Weather Service. Showers are forecast for the central Gulf; snow flurries are expected for the eastern Plains and northern New England; rain is prediced for the northern half of the Pacific Coast.

Near-freezing night forecast

Though spring has sprung, another light touch of winter may be upon Midlanders tonight.

The mercury is to drop to the near-freezing mid-30s, said the weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. Winds, under partly skies, are to be southwesterly at 10 to 15 mph.

A milder day is in the offing for Wednesday, when the high is to be in the mid-60s. Winds are to be westerly at 10 to 15 mph.

Monday's high temperature of 52 degrees was far from the record high of 87 degrees for the date in 1934. Monday's low of 32 was only eight degrees higher than the record low of 24 degrees for the date in 1952.

Heavy rain, snow plague nation

By The Associated Press

New England was trying to shed itself of a heavy rainfall today, while the upper Midwest was still shoveling out from a wintry storm that dumped almost a foot of snow.

As snow fell from Illinois to New Hampshire and temperatures dipped into the 20s early today, winter-like chill extended south into Georgia. Winter storm or flash flood warnings remained in effect from Michigan to Maine.

Along the Atlantic coast Monday swollen rivers rose still further. From Maryland to Massachusetts dozens of rivers and streams were reported overflowing or near flood stage. In Provincetown, Mass., Fire Chief Clem Silva said: "We're going to keep pumping until one of three things happens: either the rain stops, the pumps break, or we collapse."

Forecasters predicted snow today from the Great Basin through the central Rockies into the central Plains, and from Ohio to New England. Rain was expected along the western Gulf coast.

Temperatures around the nation at 2 a.m. EST ranged from 11 degrees in Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., to 64 degrees in Key West, Fla.

Young suicide victim 'never OK'

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

EDGEWOOD, Md. — Melissa Putney, 14 years old and nine months pregnant, her room tidied and her locker emptied, opened her spiral notebook. "To my dear Mom..." she began, and went on to fill three pages.

Sitting on a bed of oak leaves in the woods behind school, Melissa and her 12-year-old cousin finished their picnic lunch and swallowed the last of their wine.

Twelve minutes before noon, a tiny white fleck of light appeared far down the railroad tracks. Then, seconds later, the crescendo of engines going 100 mph.

Amtrak 141 — The Bankers — was right on time.

Melissa ran to the tracks, knelt between the rails and clasped her hands in prayer. Her cousin, Pearl, tried to stop her, but Melissa had always been bigger and stronger.

Melissa Celeste Putney made the sign of the cross.

On that warm Tuesday midday last week in rural Maryland, a troubled eighth grader and her unborn baby boy died.

"You always ask me if there's anything wrong," she wrote to her mother. "I said, 'No, I'm OK.'

"Mom, I wasn't telling the truth. I was never OK. I was very depressed."

Melissa dealt with her pregnancy by denying it. "I am not pregnant," she wrote in the notebook, two weeks before she was due to give birth.

But the condition was apparent, even on her stocky 5-foot-6 frame.

"I ran away from all of my problems," she wrote. "I am taking the easy way out.

"I am admitting to myself that I am a weak person not able to handle the weight of life."

Born in Baltimore, Melissa moved to this rural community four years ago. Her mother, Patricia, worked as night custodian at the Middle School. Mrs. Putney, along with four daughters, two sons and some of her grandchildren, lived in a three-bedroom apartment in Beacon Terrace, a housing development.

Edgewood, 25 miles northeast of Baltimore, has 9,000 people, a half-dozen traffic lights, a volunteer fire department and no police force of its own. About a third of the residents work at the Aberdeen Proving Ground, where the Army develops and tests weapons; others commute to Baltimore.

Middle School Principal Joseph J. Brown described Melissa as an average student who "got along well with her peers."

"It's been a shock to this community, I'll tell you that," Brown said. "And it's going to be quite some time before we're over it."

There are two guidance counselors and a staff psychologist for the school's 1,170 pupils, but Melissa's friends said she had not sought help.

A tree-planting ceremony is planned when the weather turns warmer. "Just something so the kids can remember her," Brown said.

A framed school portrait on Melissa's casket showed her in a frilly white dress, her short hair parted on the side and a happy grin on her smooth black face.

"She was kinda pretty, and she had lots of friends," said a cousin, Dana Brown, 12, a seventh grader. "She was nice, easy going, could get along with anybody."

Many of the kids at school knew she was pregnant. "In gym class," said 11-year-old Tina Bailey, "you could tell."

Melissa was big for her age, often playing quarterback when the neighborhood kids gathered to play football in a field across the two-lane blacktop.

"She was the best girl out there," said Glenn Sargable, a 14-year-old neighbor. "When she ran, I'll tell you, I looked out."

Melissa wasn't perfect; she had been hauled to the office for talking back to teachers, smoking in the bathroom and playing hooky, her classmates said.

"She wasn't always nice, but she could make you laugh," said Caprice Alves, 13.

Melissa was baptised at Community Baptist Church, a one-room church on a hillside a few miles away in Joppa, Md. The Rev. Alpheus Jones remembers "a very lovely person. She'd always come to church, and when my wife wasn't in the choir they'd sit together."

Melissa hadn't been to church for several months.

"This is a need I'm sorry hadn't been brought to me at all," Jones said. "If I had known something about it earlier...."

Last Tuesday, March 15, Melissa walked the two miles to school. She and her cousin, Samaria "Pearl" Ridgley, slipped out a back door before 11 a.m., walked a half mile across the playing fields to the railroad tracks that carry 52 Amtrak trains past the school every day.

They had brought sandwiches in brown bags and two bottles of wine, according to the Maryland State Police.

The two girls ate, drank and talked, and Melissa wrote the note to her mother, later found among her school books. She also took some pills; state police say it will be several weeks before they know what she swallowed.

"I'm very sorry to put you all through the troubles. I think everything I have to do is done.

"I drank some wine and took some pills. But before I did all that I prayed to my father God in heaven. I asked him to forgive me but he won't. I don't blame him for that.

"Please pray that I don't be sent to hell, because then I won't be able to come back and watch over you and help you. I want to do that.

"Mom, please don't have a nervous breakdown and be crying all the time. I don't want you to. I want you to live forever and ever, the way you want to and I will always love you very much. Please try and forgive me.

"I love you always and always.

"Love, Melissa."

The train engineer, with a young daughter of his own, saw Melissa cross herself as he applied the brakes. He cannot bring himself to discuss it.

At the Putney home, sympathy cards were propped up on the coffee table and white sheets covered the sofas. Mrs. Putney was silent.

On Saturday, at a funeral home 12 miles up the track, more than 100 friends black and white gathered to mourn Melissa, in a Chesapeake Bay town called Havre de Grace. The name means Harbor of Mercy.

"I loved you Melissa. I don't know what was wrong," sobbed one of Melissa's sisters, rushing to the silver-colored casket and falling to her knees. Pearl was carried out screaming.

"How could we possibly know her exhaustion from the struggle?" the Rev. Bonita Davis asked the mourners who packed the tiny chapel.

"We cannot. That's why we have to turn to God. We know Melissa Putney was not fearful to face her God — right now."

Battle over withholding escalates

Debate stalls Social Security rescue plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — An increasingly bitter battle over withholding taxes from interest and dividends is trapping a $165 billion bill to shore up the troubled Social Security system.

Senators who want to repeal withholding "may win but not on this bill," vowed Sen. Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., manager of the Social Security legislation. "If we are going to have a Social Security bill, it's not going to have this amendment on it."

It thus appears unlikely Congress will be able to meet its deadline of completing work before Easter on the big Social Security measure. Lawmakers plan to recess all next week.

While there is no pressure to pass the Social Security provisions immediately, unless the bill is passed by March 31 supplemental jobless benefits for many of the nation's unemployed workers would lapse. A provision extending the benefits for up to eight weeks is attached to the bill.

Accusing the banking lobby of misleading the public about withholding, Dole drew an angry response from Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz. "You are losing this for yourself," said Goldwater. "The American people don't like this and they don't care where (on what bill) you put this amendment."

Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, the Banking Committee chairman, wants to repeal withholding but not as part of the Social Secuity bill. "We've seen Senate demagoguery at its worst tonight," Garn said.

This is the second time this month that the withholding fight has blocked Senate action on major legislation. A package of relief for the unemployed and others hit hardest by the recession was stalled for a week until an accommodation was reached with opponents of withholding.

The Senate was moving steadily Monday toward final action on Social Security when Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont., offered an amendment to delay the start of withholding six months past the present July 1 schedule — to Jan. 1, 1984.

"The people are beginning to wonder if this is another imposition of the bureaucracy, if it's really worth it," said Melcher. The six-month delay would give Congress time to study the question, he said.

Dole, who has become the biggest champion of withholding, assailed Melcher's effort as a new attempt by the American Bankers Association to get its way. He accused ABA, which has led the drive to repeal withholding, of "an underhanded, heavy-handed campaign... a disgraceful, shameful campaign."

After the Senate voted 58-37 to keep Melcher's amendment alive, Dole struck back. He offered an amendment to delay withholding only if the prime interest rate charged by the nation's 10 largest banks is below 6 percent on June 30. The prime rate, which is generally the rate offered a bank's best corporate customers, is at 10.5 percent.

In addition, Dole's amendment would have required banks to allow savers with as little as $300 to invest in their high-yielding money-market accounts. The present minimum is $2,500.

The amendment failed, 57-35. But Dole said he will offer more amendments in an attempt to water down Melcher's proposal so that the Senate would let it die and return to consideration of Social Security amendments.

Withholding of 10 percent of interest and dividends for taxes was approved last year after the Internal Revenue Service estimated 20 million Americans fail to report some or all of their income from savings accounts and stocks — costing the government $25 billion a year in lost taxes. Withholding is estimated to shave that figure by about $4 billion a year.

Financial institutions say withholding would be expensive to administer and would be a disincentive to saving by taking away some interest.

Reagan fighting defense cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, warned Republicans probably cannot muster enough votes to win, is intensifying efforts to scuttle a House Democratic budget plan that would cut his military buildup in half.

With the House set to begin debateon the Democrats' plan Wednesday, Reagan set aside time today for three lobbying meetings with Republican congressmen, following two similar sessions on Monday.

House Republican Leader Robert Michel said he told Reagan Monday that Democrats probably would win. Michel said Reagan replied, "You've got to go out there and make the best fight you can."

With their ranks swollen by 26 seats in last November's elections, House Democrats hope to win approval of a budget that would wipe out many of the tax and spending cuts Reagan won during his first two years in power and slow down his military buildup.

But Michel said House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., "has everything going for him" in this fight. "I'd still like to be able to defeat it, but let's face it — we're 103 votes short politically. ..." Michel said.

"It's a long haul. We could lose," said White House spokesman Larry Speakes.

Michel, an Illinois Republican, predicted Reagan will "have something significant to say" on military spending in a speech Wednesday night. Speakes said an address from the Oval Office is in the works but not definitely scheduled.

Sources indicated Reagan's address would go beyond the Democratic budget, and involve other national security issues as well.

The White House is waging a come-from-behind battle to build support in Congress for the MX missile and to defeat a nuclear freeze resolution. Beyond that, the administration is on the defensive about increased aid to El Salvador and U.S.-Soviet arms negotiations.

To marshal support for Reagan's proposals, the administration is conducting a series of classified briefings for congressmen in the White House family theater on the Soviet military buildup, featuring aerial photography of Soviet installations.

Next week, the administration plans to begin a series of dinners for opinion leaders, such as publishers, labor leaders and others, who will hear briefings on national security topics from Secretary of State George P. Shultz, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan.

Beyond that, Cabinet secretaries have been instructed by Reagan to discuss defense issues at every opportunity.

Reagan himself has attacked the Democratic proposal as "a dagger aimed straight at the heart of American's rebuilding program." On Monday, O'Neill said Reagan's rhetoric "is beneath the dignity of the office."

The Democrats' budget presents the first major fight this year on spending.

Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., predicted Republicans will vote unanimously against the Democrats' proposal, and that there will be heavy Democratic defections. "I do not think they have a majority for a left-of-center budget," Gingrich said as he left the White House.

On Capitol Hill, Democratic sources speaking on condition they not be identified said some House Democrats were having second thoughts about their party's plan.

One source said before Reagan began his lobbying campaign, it appeared about 30 of the "boll weevils," conservative southern Democrats, would vote with the Republicans.

Now, the Democratic sources said, the number appears to be climbing toward 48 possible defections, the number which would kill the Democratic budget in the 435-member House.

House, Senate negotiators pound out compromise bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is on the verge of completing the first anti-recession bill of 1983, but action on the crucial Social Security bailout package is being delayed by the controversy over withholding taxes from interest and dividends.

House and Senate negotiators Monday night worked out a compromise on the anti-recession bill that would provide $4.6 billion for aid for the needy and for thousands of public works jobs.

The plan also would provide for $5 billion in urgently needed federal loans to assure continued payment of unemployment benefits in 27 states and the District of Columbia.

Congressional leaders say they hope for final passage by Wednesday. That would send the measure to President Reagan.

But while the jobs bill was heading toward passage, the battle over withholding was trapping the $165 billion plan to shore up the troubled Social Security system. The same dispute had stalled action on the anti-recession bill last week.

The Senate was moving steadily Monday toward final action on Social Security when Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont., offered an amendment to delay the start of withholding six months past the present July 1 schedule — to Jan. 1, 1984.

After the Senate voted 58-37 to keep Melcher's amendment alive, Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., who is spearheading the Social Security bill and has become the biggest champion of withholding, struck back.

He offered an amendment to delay withholding only if the prime interest rate charged by the nation's 10 largest banks is below 6 percent on June 30. The prime rate, which is generally the rate offered a bank's best corporate customers, is at 10.5 percent. Banks have been leading the fight against the withholding law.

The amendment failed, 57-35. But Dole said he will offer more amendments in an attempt to water down Melcher's proposal so that the Senate would let it die and return to consideration of Social Security amendments.

It thus appears unlikely Congress will be able to meet its deadline of completing work before Easter on the Social Security measure. Lawmakers plan to recess all next week.

Meanwhile, the president, warned that Republicans probably cannot muster enough votes to win, is intensifying efforts to scuttle a House Democratic budget plan that would cut his military buildup in half.

With the House set to begin debate on the Democrats' plan Wednesday, Reagan set aside time today for three lobbying meetings with Republican congressmen, following two similar sessions on Monday.

Residents at the Willow Creek Apartments in Dallas carry what they can from their homes, as a five-alarm fire rages through their complex. At least 100 apartments were damaged by Monday's fire, causing $6 million in damages.

Apartment fire declared most expensive in Dallas history

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas firefighters say it was a miracle no one was seriously hurt in a ferocious five-alarm blaze that destroyed about 170 apartments and left 400 people homeless.

The fire, the fifth multi-alarm blaze here in the past week, caused at least $6 million in damage Monday and was declared the most expensive fire in Dallas history.

Many of residents of the 824-unit Willow Creek Apartments had left for work when the fire broke out about 8:30 a.m., officials said.

Three firefighters were injured while battling the blaze in the north-side complex. Two residents who suffered minor injuries were taken in private vehicles to area hospitals, officials said.

"It was a miracle of God," said Lt. Kent Miller, a Dallas Fire Department arson investigator.

"If this had been 3 a.m. on a Saturday, we would have had a lot of ambulances out there," Miller said.

The firefighters were treated and released from Presbyterian Hospital of Dallas, said fire department spokesman Bill Jernigan.

"They were mostly sort of cuts and abrasions," Jernigan said. "One person had a burn around his eye area from probably a falling cinder or something."

Damage was estimated at $6 million to the buildings and $600,000 to the contents, Jernigan said, adding, "Those are preliminary, low numbers."

Fire department spokeswoman J.J. Howe said the fire, "in terms of dollar loss," was the largest in the city's history.

A fire at the apartments Aug. 18, 1980 caused $780,000 in damage, said fire department spokeswoman Judy Smith.

Mattox to give up intervention in GTE case

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox says he is giving up — for now — his attempt to intervene in General Telephone's rate case before the Public Utility Commission.

Mattox had charged no one was adequately representing consumers at the PUC. But he said Monday, "We're trying to give this PUC a chance to show they are consumer oriented."

He referred to a recent two-thirds turnover in membership at the commission, which had been accused of siding with utility companies too much.

In February, commission members George Cowden and T.G. Smith quit. Gov. Mark White replaced them with Alan Erwin, a former PUC member, and El Paso housewife Peggy Rosson.

Erwin was elected the new chairman, replacing Moak Rollins, who has stayed on the panel although he has hinted he will step down soon.

After his unanimous election, Erwin promised consumers they would not pay "a penny more" than they should for electricity or telephone service.

Mattox had sought to convince the PUC that he has authority to represent consumers before the panel.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, March 23, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Premier Philadelphia '76 center Moses Malone, Philadelphia Eagle quarterback Ron Jaworski, hockey's Ted Green and former Atlanta mayor Maynard Jackson celebrate birthdays today. Also born on this date: the late rocket expert Wernher von Braun and actress Joan Crawford. Mate is very supportive once you decide to break out of a negative pattern. Do not let old habits come between you and success. Although money is still not as plentiful as you would like, your finances show steady improvement. Those who have family businesses enjoy a particularly good year. Your contemporaries show great respect for what you are trying to do.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Put recent trials and tribulations behind you and get on with your life. Your fortunes will rise in direct relation to the amount of effort you invest. Work becomes more important to you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You need to get on the same wavelength as your associates. Live in the present, but always have an eye on the future. This is no time to slip behind the competition.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You form a close alliance with a member of the opposite sex, but it is strictly business. To obtain financial support, you will have to call and visit investors.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your sense of humor may seem offbeat to some people, but it endears you to your loved ones. Reserve more time for small children. A financial problem becomes less severe.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You show greater maturity and the boss begins to think of you as a leader. Do not let a competitor steal a march on you. An outsider sheds some light on a mystery.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A difficult day for money dealings. Avoid doing anything impulsive. Creditors are reasonable when you tell them the truth. Things will sort themselves out if you can buy yourself some time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An excellent day to concentrate on financial matters. Close friends offer valuable tips. Follow their advice to beat out the competitors. Look for opportunities to meet prospective clients. A new romance is possible.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Move ahead with confidence. Others welcome your leadership. Self-control is essential when confronted with an emotional situation. Throw your cares to the wind and enjoy yourself this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An outstanding day for handling money matters. Sign documents and agreements. Those at a distance can be very helpful now. Write letters to overseas contacts. A secret alliance proves rewarding.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You receive financial support from an unexpected quarter. Sign confidential agreements. An old idea can be recycled to bring new profits. Former romantic partner reenters the picture, causing certain problems.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Forgive a trusted friend who acts in an unpredictable manner. His reasons will justify his behavior. Mate or partner's advice will enhance your creative efforts. Romance takes a turn for the better.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Mend a romantic rift with a small gift or fresh flowers. Those at a distance offer encouraging advice.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East

Opening lead: Four of ◊.

Like most facets of bridge, defense is often no more than a matter of counting. If you don't come up with enough tricks to set the contract, you have to search for those you need.

South had a perfect preemptive bid at this vulnerability. East would have liked to reopen with a double, but the fact that he was vulnerable made it too risky a venture. Note that only a club ruff prevents East-West from making four diamonds. In addition, the defenders must negotiate this ruff quickly (either by leading a club, or by switching to a club at trick two after a spade lead).

West led his fourth-best diamond. East won the ace and shifted to the king of hearts. The fate of the contract hinged on how West chose to defend.

From West's angle, it seemed that the side suits would produce a maximum of four defensive tricks—two in each red suit. That meant that the trump suit would have to provide the setting trick. A trump promotion could be accomplished if East held any trump honor.

West overtook the king of hearts with the ace and took care to cash the king of diamonds. Next came a heart to the queen. East cooperated by continuing with another heart, and the defense had completed its task. Declarer had to ruff high to prevent an overruff, but now West could not be kept from scoring a trump trick for down one.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Growing danger

The 10th rabid skunk to be found in Midland County so far this year should be reason enough to alarm Midlanders to the local health danger. It's a danger none of us should overlook.

During recent months, it has become clear that the number of rabid animals — skunks and other animals — was approaching epidemic proportions. The most recent rabid animal found here pushed to 15 the number of rabid animals found in Midland County during the past 12 months.

A comparison of figures from previous years only confirms the rabies danger in Midland County this year. Last year there were only eight rabies cases reported, but that was in sharp contrast to the three immediately preceding years when two, none and three cases were reported.

State Health Department official, Dr. William Rosser, has said the prevalence of rabid animals this year may be largely the result of the mild winter and early spring. More skunks are roaming the West Texas countryside earlier this year and, as they do, there's an increased chance they'll come into contact with man.

Rabies vaccination (required by the state each year for all domestic dogs and cats provides a barrier between mankind and the dangerous disease lurking in the animal world. It's an effective barrier because dogs and cats are likely to come into contact with wild animals before man does. If your animals are protected against the disease, you're protected also.

Rice Freeman, rabies information officer for Midland's Animal Control, said, "About the only thing people can do besides vaccination is to be aware of the rabies problem and to watch for wild animals behaving contrary to normal." She also said anyone with rabies questions can obtain information by calling the city's Animal Control office.

That's a good service Midlanders should use when they have questions about the dread disease. It's time to get serious about fighting it.

Prosperity galore

One thing we all should remember about the American economy is that it is not an isolated phenomenon. When we do well other nations are helped, and when we do poorly other nations are affected adversely.

Throughout the 18 months of recession, capitals in Europe and Asia shared this nation's frustrations and concerns over the slump. At the same time they shared this nation's hopes that the economic corner would be turned at an early date, for they have long known that as the United States goes in the profit-and-loss game, so goes much of the world. In other words, prosperity is contagious.

This fiscal truth is being borne out now that the economic corner is being turned in the United States.

Our Canadian neighbors to the north, who were among the first to feel the cold winds of the American recession, are among the first to enjoy the warmer climate of recovery. Automobile production, housing and the retail business are among the leaders in the comeback. For the first time since 1981 the gross national product is expected to show a gain.

The skies are brighter in West Germany, due in no small measure to confidence generated by the victory of Chancellor Helmut Kohl. Production is up, and inflation is tapering off.

Great Britain is in the process of pulling out of a decline. The French economy is on the upswing. Other nations where economic revival is in the air, either from slumps or slowdowns in growth, are Mexico and Japan.

Recovery in these nations is not as fast as any of they, or any of us, would like. What is truly good news, however, is that what started out as a national recovery in the United States this past January, has now become the bellwether of a spreading movement toward world recovery.

Another View:

Resolve nuns' case

No single episode in the El Salvador war has bred more bitterness and cynicism, and for better reason, than the nuns' case. Four American churchwomen were brutally slain in December 1980.

The former soldiers accused of murdering them have yet to go on trial. Just the other day a judge in San Vicente said more evidence is needed — the latest in a series of delays suggesting that the Salvadoran authorities are playing with the case. Whether the United States has encouraged this attitude by insisting that American aid must flow regardless, or even by giving a few quiet winks of "understanding," is at least a question.

The case has become the focus of much heartfelt and political opposition to administration policy, and the judge's latest ruling, coming as Congress debates further aid, is bound to feed the flames.

The Salvadorans argue, essentially, that they are trying and that Americans cannot expect them to ignore the procedural requirements of their law. The argument is not without a certain appeal, but it is foolish of the Salvadorans to continue relying on it. It is no longer possible to maintain that the courts in El Salvador operate in an orbit outside the orbit of official power. The niceness with which the suspects have been treated is in such grating contrast to the savagery loosed upon the nuns, and upon thousands of other victims, that it is impossible to hold the authorities immune from responsibility.

There is a direct link, moreover, to the prospect of a political settlement. The administration's invitation to the left to join government-sponsored elections is premised on a guarantee of the personal security of all candidates and their supporters. How can even the most sorely tempted opposition members be expected to take up this offer as long as the accused slayers of the churchwomen are not brought to justice? This is no mere debating point: it is a hard political reality.

The issue is not merely that the nuns' case embarrasses the administration. It cheapens the United States, the whole nation, to be a party to this farce any longer. Sensitive and sensible people inside the administration grasp this truth quite well. The Salvadoran authorities should be the first to understand the risks to themselves of having a crucial aid decision taken in Washington under the cloud cast by the court in San Vicente.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

FBI might have saved woman

WASHINGTON — This week the Justice Department has loosened the guidelines that govern the FBI's use of informants and undercover agents who infiltrate domestic political groups.

Jack Anderson

The discarded rules were adopted in 1976 after evidence showed that the G-men had clearly gotten out of control in their zeal to satisfy the whims and personal prejudices of the late J. Edgar Hoover. The danger, of course, is that the FBI will interpret the relaxation of the rules as a license to return to the old practices.

Perhaps the most scandalous mishandling of an FBI informant involved the murder in Alabama of civil rights activist Viola Liuzzo on March 25, 1965, by a carload of armed Ku Klux Klan. Among them was FBI informant Gary Thomas Rowe.

Internal FBI files seen by my associates Indy Badhwar and Tony Capaccio show that the woman's murder might have been prevented — if FBI officials had acted on information Rowe had provided.

In fact, within three weeks of the Liuzzo slaying, Rowe's "handler," special agent Neil P. Shanahan, was quietly censured for failing to pass along what Rowe had told him before the shooting.

A memo to FBI officials in Washington, dated April 15, noted that Rowe had given Shanahan "certain items of information" on Klan activities that were news to the FBI and local authorities. For example:

On March 16, Rowe told Shanahan that Klan leaders were planning to drop hand grenades on any civil rights marchers in Birmingham.

On March 18, he reported that Klan leader Robert Shelton was planning to have two activists beaten up on the forthcoming march from Selma to Montgomery.

On March 21, he reported that he and three other Klansmen had delivered a load of weapons to Selma: two Browning automatic rifles with 12 clips of ammo, 25 hand grenades and six land mines.

Finally, on March 25 — the day of the murder — Rowe called Shanahan and told him he was leaving for the march area with three Klansmen, including Eugene Thomas, whom he had earlier identified as armed and violent.

Yet the only information the FBI gave local police was a description of Thomas' car, its tag numbers and the message: "Purpose of trip not known. These only known Klansmen of Birmingham in route to march."

Alabama police, in fact, flagged down the car shortly before the killing. Not having been told the men were armed and dangerous, the police issued a ticket for a noisy muffler and let them go.

The memo recommending Shanahan's censure said that he "deeply regrets his failure to have made a full and immediate dissemination of the information," and stressed that Shanahan "has been made fully aware of his dereliction."

The public, of course, was never made aware of it.

In one of the many ironies in the situation, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. — obviously unaware of the FBI agent's negligence in the Liuzzo murder — sent a telegram to Director Hoover on the occasion of the killers' arrest within 24 hours. "Let me congratulate you and the FBI for this speedy arrest," King wired.

Hoover's right-hand man, Cartha DeLoach, wrote in a memo: "I do not believe this wire should be acknowledged, because a reply would only help build up this character and a communication from Mr. Hoover will tie us in with him and put us under obligation to him. I likewise feel that King's telegram to the Director should not be released to the press for the same reason."

FAILED MISSION: Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir's main purpose in coming to Washington was to bypass President Reagan's special envoy in the Middle East, Philip Habib. Shamir tried to impress on Reagan and Secretary of State George Shultz the Israeli belief that Habib simply isn't up to the task of bringing peace to the area.

What Shamir apparently didn't realize is that Habib had the president's unqualified support. I've learned that Habib, who suffers from heart trouble and is under family pressure to quit before the strain kills him, has told the president he's ready to retire anytime Reagan won't support his efforts. He asked for the president's full backing — and he got it.

The crux of Israeli discontent – and of Habib's difficulties – is the U.S. insistence on winning approval of a peace settlement from most of the Arab states, including Lebanon, Syria, Jordan and Saudi Arabia. The Israelis see this as an impossible dream.

Instead, Israel wants what it set out to get when it invaded Lebanon last year: a bilateral peace treaty with a friendly Lebanese government to protect Israel's northern flank. Shamir tried to persuade Reagan and Shultz that this could be achieved, but only if the United States gives its firm support.

INSIDE REPORT:

Reagan muscle flex raises hope

WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan flexed his presidential muscle last week to destroy the Catch-22 rule written by Israel to keep its troops in Lebanon, a use of strength that gives reason for restrained optimism about diplomatic progress in the Mideast.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Behind the muscle is growing White House suspicion that Israel wants to delay withdrawal and the president's overall Mideast peace plan until the 1984 presidential campaign. By then, pressure from Reagan on Israel could cost him the support of the American Jewish community and election. "They like our recent one-term presidencies," a key presidential aide told us. "It gives them leverage and the president is well aware of it."

That helps explain Reagan's performance last week in demolishing Israel's Catch-22 on vacating Lebanon, the essential first step in his peace plan. Barring a new roadblock from Israel (which currently is neither ruled in nor out by the White House), Reagan may finally have moved the Mideast off dead center.

The Catch-22 rule was a beauty. All at the same time, Israel was: demanding ludicrous limitations on Lebanon's own military forces permitted in the border area; demanding limits on Lebanese armaments; not allowing any international force to guarantee Israel's security; barring American help to police the border region ("We oppose it," Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir said here last week).

That left only one alternative: security on the Lebanese side of the border could only be assured by Israel itself with the help of its made-in-Jerusalem Lebanese ally, the 600-strong Christian contingent led by Maj. Saad Haddad. Thus, Israel's case against withdrawing from Lebanon rested on its insistence that there was no other way to avert chaos there.

Israel came to believe that Reagan's emissary, Ambassasdor Philip Habib, would never submit to Catch-22. Consequently, Prime Minister Menachem Begin quickly bought the suggestion of Defense Minister Moshe Arens to send Shamir to Washington to appeal to Reagan over Habib's head. But Reagan countered by inviting Lebanon's elder statesman and former prime minister, Saeb Salaam, to come at the same time. Salaam, leader of Lebanon's powerful Moslem Sunnis, brought a letter from President Amin Gemayal. Any vestige of Israel's army of occupation, the letter said, would "imperil this nation's consensus" and promote civil conflict.

Arens, who was Israel's respected former ambassador here before replacing ousted defense minister Ariel Sharon, misjudged Ronald Reagan in sending Shamir over Habib's head. With the president playing an uncharacteristically central role in the talks, Shamir was told these facts of life:

Israel's withdrawal must be "total," and Israel cannot dictate the size and armaments of Lebanon's army. Nor can Israel use its Lebanese client, Haddad, in any way, shape or form.

The U.S. will step up its training of special Lebanese units to police the Lebanese side of the border. The U.S. will guarantee cooperation between the Lebanese and Israeli armies. The Israeli flag will not be shown in southern Lebanon and Israeli patrols are out.

The U.S. will agree to any Lebanese-Israeli arrangement for increased American participation to insulate southern Lebanon from trouble. That was Reagan's answer to what Gen. Robert Barrow, the Marine Corps commandant, called the "life-threatening situations" his Marines have been exposed to in incidents "timed, orchestrated and executed for obtuse Israeli political purposes."

For Begin, Reagan's withdrawal plan contains seeds of political trouble by raising possible questions about Israel's invasion of Lebanon 10 months ago. The invasion has dominated Israeli politics ever since. If Israeli troops are forced out completely, Begin's domestic opposition may ask whether the invasion and its heavy casualties were worthwhile.

But Secretary of State George Shultz is pushing a new package of U.S. aid for Israel and holding out the prospect of a more extensive U.S.-Israeli military cooperation. The ball is now in Begin's court, and not even Reagan knows what the Israeli leader will do with it.

Catch-22, however, is dead. When Salaam praised Reagan in the Oval Office for taking "a big step forward," he said he hoped it would not be followed by "two steps back." No chance, the president said. On this issue, Ronald Reagan added, he has "no reverse gears."

LETTERS

Bond issue burns reader

To The Editor:

In light of the recently reported results of the Texas Health Facilities Commission ruling on the certificate of need request for construction by Midland Memorial Hospital and Parkview Hospital, I felt compelled to write this letter.

The decision by the commission to approve Midland Memorial's request and deny Parkview's request further enforces my feelings that this commission serves no real useful purpose in its intended purpose which is to serve the people.

Midland Memorial Hospital has stated that it will construct 77 additional beds at a cost of $15 million, the major portion of this funding to be provided by tax dollars through a major bond election. We the people will be asked to ultimately pay the bill.

Parkview Hospital planned to construct a new hospital with 110 medical surgical beds at a cost of $17 million, this project would be funded by private monies at no expense to the general public of Midland. I personally fail to see the financial equity of this decision. A new hospital in our city would be a multi-faceted asset in the fact that it would provide additional jobs for our citizens, it would give the people of Midland a choice of medical facilities in which they could be treated, it would provide our medical professionals with new and much needed surgical suites and would allow a longer segment of the population to be admitted to a hospital if and when it becomes necessary. This could be accomplished at no additional tax dollars to the citizens of Midland.

In a recently published article by Gail Burke, Midland Memorial Hospital's president, Ray Branson, is quoted as saying Midland Memorial is expected to lose $1.2 million in Medicare reimbursement over the next two years as a result of the New Law-Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsiblity Act of 1982. This loss is expected to be made up in part through increased patient charges. Again the citizens are expected to pay.

In another recent article by Ms. Burke, Mr. Dick Liley, administrator for Parkview Hospital stated the New Law-Tax Equity and Fiscal Reponsibility Act will not have the impact to Parkview that it will have on public hospitals. Liley further said, "I believe we are running an efficient hospital and under TEFRA efficiency is rewarded." If hospitals stay within a pre-determined target rate, they will be rewarded accordingly. Midland Memorial's proposed cost per bed, based on the total cost is estimated to be $194,805.19. Parkview Hospital's proposed cost per bed based on their total cost is estimated to be $154,545.45. This is a difference in the cost per bed of $40,259.74 more for Midland Memorial's request than Parkview.

In view of this information, I do not plan to vote for any bond issue proposed by MMH and will actively campaign against all proposed hospital tax increases until the level of fiscal responsibility increases at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Bye, Charley

To The Editor:

My whole world is crumbling around me. Being an advocate of such things as apple pie, the American flag, football and baseball, motherly love, M*A*S*H and Charley Reese, I was appalled to read that my favorite columnist would attack what has been well established as the most popular TV program to grace the tube ever — M*A*S*H.

In fact, Charley even criticized the program's theme and setting. Take it from me Charley, it did happen. There was a Korea, and there were young American boys there, slopping around in the mud, complaining, calling the locals "Gooks," "Sloaps," etc., and most unhappy about being there. And for you to character assassinate Alan Alda was too much, Charley. Many were the hours of pleasure I received from "Hawkeye." By the ratings, it appears that I wasn't the only one.

Being an ardent reader of Charley's column for many years, and being somewhat of a "redneck" myself, I possess a few beliefs unpopular with some of the younger generation — such as honor, duty and country. I was amazed how Charley and I saw eye-to-eye on issues. But, I guess I was wrong. Charley can't walk on water after all.

Having served in the armed services from 1943 to 1963 (WWII, Korea and Vietnam), please believe me, M*A*S*H is about as factual as a situation comedy (with special emphasis on comedy) can be. I have a feeling that M*A*S*H will outlive Charley. Goodbye Charley; hello rerun, rerun, rerun.

Kidnapper kills herself during FBI agents' visit

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A woman wanted a baby so desperately that she faked being pregnant, abducted a month-old boy from a mother she had befriended, then killed herself with a hidden gun when the FBI tracked her down, authorities said.

When two agents showed up Monday to ask Mary Ann Boynton where she got the baby at her side, the 26-year-old housewife became agitated and excused herself to go to the bathroom. There she shot herself in the head with a .357-caliber Magnum revolver, the FBI said.

She was pronounced dead at a hospital.

The child, Michael Williamson, later was reunited with his stunned mother, Christine Williamson, 18, and her husband, 23-year-old Elidieu, at the Coconut Creek police station.

"I'm so happy, because before I found my baby I couldn't sleep, I couldn't eat," said Mrs. Williamson, a Haitian woman who came to the United States two years ago and speaks little English.

When police first showed Michael to his mother, she displayed little emotion. Police speculated the mother was in shock. But a few minutes later she embraced the child and said, "He seems OK. He's not dead."

Mrs. Williamson told police last week that a woman she had met at Broward General Medical Center offered her and the boy a ride to a clinic when told the child wasn't feeling well, then forced her from the car at gunpoint and sped away with the baby.

Jim Freeman, the FBI agent directing the investigation, would say only that a "routine" lead brought them to Mrs. Boynton's home.

AP Laserphoto

Christine Williamson is reunited with her baby Michael in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Monday after FBI agents recovered him from the woman who abducted him seven days ago.

She told the FBI that she was the child's mother, but when agents began finding inconsistencies in her story, she interrupted the interview and asked to be excused to use the bathroom, he said.

After a quick check of the room, the agents let her enter. Moments later, "a shot rang out," Freeman said.

"The gun might have been wrapped in a towel and hidden in a water tank," Freeman said. "We're not sure."

Supreme Court to decide on 'proportionality review'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert Alton Harris abducted two teen-age boys from a San Diego hamburger drive-in, killed them and used their car in a bank robbery.

Prosecutors say he laughed about gunning down his victims while he ate the meals they never finished.

The Supreme Court said Monday it will decide whether Harris could be sentenced to die in California's gas chamber for those 1978 murders although no state court studied what punishment others in similar circumstances received.

A federal appeals court, in setting aside Harris' sentence, ruled last year that such a "proportionality review" is required for Harris and all other convicted murderers who receive the death sentence.

The high court's eventual decision, not expected until sometime next year, may spell out whether such comparison sentencing is required in all death penalty cases by the Constitution's ban on cruel and unusual punishment.

Just what impact the decision will have on the more than 1,100 people on death rows nationwide is clouded. Most state court systems already conduct such reviews in some form.

Company orders shutdown of chemical dump

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — A subsidiary of Waste Management Inc., accused by the state of Illinois of illegally dumping truckloads of suspected cancer-causing chemicals, has announced the shutdown of a large hazardous waste disposal site in Ohio.

The subsidiary, Chemical Waste Management, said Monday it is suspending dumping at the Vickery, Ohio, site after waste oil there was found to contain higher-than-permitted levels of the suspected carcinogen PCB.

Chemical Waste Management said it has notified the Ohio Environmental Protection Agency that 135,000 gallons of PCB-tainted waste oil are at the site, operated by another subsidiary, Ohio Liquid Disposal, southeast of Toledo.

Meanwhile, Waste Management declined specific comment on civil suits filed Monday by Illinois Attorney Neil Hartigan against Waste Management, Chemical Waste Management and Waste Management of Illinois Inc. seeking $2.2 million in damages. All three companies are related.

The actions claimed Waste Management dumped 400,000 gallons of PCBs at a Calumet City landfill without a permit and that it locked records in a safe to prevent their discovery by the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency.

PCBs, used to make dyes, are "known or reasonably suspected carcinigens," the federal government says.

Don Reddicliffe, Waste Management director of public relations, said the company is withholding comment until it examines the lawsuits.

However, he said, the violations alleged were "contrary to company policy and any statement that officials of Waste Management condoned or had knowledge of any such alleged violations is totally false."

Wall Street reacted to the suits Monday with a selloff of Waste Management stock, depressing the price on the New York Stock Exchange by 10¾ points, to 49⅛.

NTSB: Earlier warning might have aided crew

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal safety board, saying an earlier warning might have helped the crew of Pan Am Flight 759 avoid a violent, killer wind shear last summer, is urging the government to step up its development of wind shear detection equipment at airports and in the cockpits.

The Pan American World Airways jet crashed into a residential area seconds after take-off from New Orleans airport last July 9, killing all on board, when a powerful wind shear called a microburst slammed it to the ground, investigators said.

Although there were wind shear alerts and reports of a severe thunderstorm in the area of the airport, the National Transportation Safety Board said Monday the alerts did not allude to the dangers awaiting Flight 759 just beyond the runway at 100 feet.

"The captain's decision to take off was reasonable in light of the (weather) information avialable to him," the safety board said in its report on the crash. It added that the shear theoretically could have been survived by the Boeing 727, but that the crew did not have enough time to react.

The safety board, making more than a dozen recommendations, urged the Federal Aviation Administration to speed up its development of Doppler radar for use at airports and in aircraft to detect wind shears.

Although aviation and meteorological experts acknowledge that Doppler radar can detect a shear such as encountered by Flight 759, FAA officials say the use of Doppler radar at airports is still years away. In the short run the agency is relying on ground shear detection devices such as those that were being used at the New Orleans airport.

But the safety board called the ground detectors a contributing factor in the PanAm crash because of their "limited capability" in detecting shears. Most airlines tell their pilots to use the shear alerts as advisory information in conjunction with other weather reports.

Dear Neighbor:

Religion is a highly personal thing. People have their own ways of thinking or not thinking, about God. We are writing you to consider a view of God, including the healing power of the Christ, you may never have thought about before. Have you wondered about Christian Science? Does it use the Bible? Does it heal physical as well as mental problems? Does it promote peace and harmony in the family, in the community, and in the world? Our church would like to invite you to hear a free public lecture on "The Consciousness of the Healing Christ", which will show clearly that the answer to these questions is Yes!

This lecture will illustrate that the power to heal every kind of sickness and sin, which power Christ Jesus possessed, is available to us today. It is available to each and every one of us through the consciousness of the healing Christ, and the lecture will explain how each of us can cultivate this healing consciouness.

John A. Grant, C.S.B., a member of the Christain Science Board of Lectureship, will give this lecture at the Midland Center, 101 North Main Street, at 12 noon Wednesday, March 23, 1983. Mr. Grant says the most vivid proof of what an understanding of the relationship between man and God can mean is found in the life and works of Jesus. Please come and bring your friends. All are welcome.

TED BATTLES
BATTLE SCENE

(Second of two parts)

When leaving my first newspaper job in a small town in central Pennsylvania, someone confessed to me, "When you first came to work in Huntingdon, people couldn't wait to until your wife got here."

Seems, before she joined me, I had bought a nothing of a nightgown for her and word was all over town that the new sportswriter must have a sexy wife.

Midland may be a city, but, like Huntingdon, it still has a lot of small town left, thank goodness.

I think I mentioned to two or three people that I was due to have a Pacemaker installed because of a sometimes recalcitrant heart beat. In less than a day, it seemed like everybody knew. And it seemed like they all knew someone who had the Pacemaker experience. They assured the recipient was the better for it.

WHILE IT is considered major surgery, it's routine and not viewed as dangerous. Tedious perhaps is the term, especially for the surgeon. Floating wires through blood veins to the atrial or ventricle sounds a bit like throwing a trout hook against a fast moving brook current and trying to float it under that log or rock. Sometimes it takes forever.

The longer it takes the harder that operating table gets and one patient we know almost became "board" to death.

They wheeled me to the operating room at 10 a.m. a couple of Mondays ago. I emerged from surgery recovery at 2 p.m. the following Monday, although hospital officials assure me it was the same Monday as I went in.

Although wide awake during the entire operation, I couldn't see a thing. A covering over the face presumably kept blood from splattering into my eyes. There was visibility to one side, where a couple of TV screens monitored what was going on inside me. Gratefully, a couple of observing student nurses obstructed my view. However, whenever something critical seemed to be happening, I searched their eyes to see the reaction.

DR. SHELTON Viney assured me that he would perform the operation, but it could have been anybody. The ghostly figures hovering above me were all masked and their voices muffled, but I thought I did detect something that sounded like Keem-o-sabee and something else that sounded like Tonto. At least, it wasn't "Frank and Jesse".

My confidence that this was really Dr. Viney was not strengthened when he began making his first incision just below the right clavicle. Everybody knows the heart is on the left side. But I consoled myself with, "if they are wrong, what a story."

My ears were my worst enemy. First, there was that infernal beeping, just like the movies and TV soaps. I assumed when the beeps bunched up and Dr. Dorothy Lowery, the anesthetist, started counting, I was in trouble. And I knew when it stopped, that wasn't good. Sometimes I thought it would never start again...did I really want to see the nurses' eyes now?

If the bleepin' beeper wasn't broken, I didn't want to know.

THEN, THE age of satellite launchings and accompanying countdowns didn't help my peace of mind, either.

One of the wires seemingly was proving contrary and the countdown began at "3.0, 2.9, 2.8...it's still working...2.7, still working" and eventually a 1.9, "we lost it."

The procedure was repeated several times, always ending with a demoralizing "we lost it" it before the envisioned 1.0 blastoff or hookup. My reasoning was that if they reached 1.0, the worst would be over. Wrong again..."1.0, and working, 0.9...0.8...oops, we lost it."

Despair set in with the realization 0.0, at this rate, would never be reached. Then, a muffled voice, "bring it out a little. Okay, turn it counter clockwise. That's too far. Back in a little...okay." I felt like saying, "Hey, this is my heart your talking about.

A later explanation revealed my interpretation of a countdown was the result of watching too many launchings. It seems everything was functioning properly at around 2.4. Everything below that was better than normal.

NEXT CAME the second, longer incision through the skin and tissue down to the muscles. From all the tugging and pulling, it seemed they were going much deeper, but, at last, it was over. "Got the Pacemaker in?" I couldn't conceal the relief in my voice.

"No, we were just preparing the cavity," Dr. Viney replied twice. The second time must have been the echo.

By this time, the worst thing was my back. It seemed like I'd been on the table for four hours. I knew it was past noon."

"Do you take a lunch break?" I asked hopefully."

The muffled voice replied, "If we were in England we'd stop for tea and crumpets, but here we work right through." I cursed the luck that brought my forefathers to the barbaric colonies.

Admittedly, my plea for a break was selfishly motivated. I'd gone without breakfast and now it was obvious I was going to miss lunch, too. I began to fear my greatest danger was starvation.

SOMEONE ASKED, "Did anybody check this guy for a tape recorder?"

"Yes, but we didn't find one." I'm not sure how significant that exchange might have been to survival.

Later, needle jabs, a sizzling sound and what felt like hot sparks on my deadened chest. "What are you doing, welding it," I asked jocularly.

"Well, as a matter of fact..."

Just when everything seemed to be going right, there was one unsettling comment that I later forgot to ask about. A voice, not Tonto's, said, "Well, in a second here we'll find out if he's going to make it."

BY NOW my back was killing me and I was ready to fight to get off the table. I tried to lift my knees and they were pushed gently, but firmly back down.

It suddenly dawned that the back stiffness must be rigor mortis setting in. I asked what day it was.

"I'm stitching you up," the voice assured. "You know everything went so well, if there are no complications tonight, we may just release you in the morning instead of keeping you in for two days."

By noon, the next day, less than 24 hours after surgery and less than 48 hours after entering MMH, I was home.

By now all my part of the ordeal was over and it dawned on me that Dr. Viney had been delayed on my operation because of an emergency vascular stitching job on a mutilated leg at 5 a.m. and had not kept regular hours the night before. I knew because that Sunday night he had been visiting me instead of home sleeping.

And while I was flat on my back for what seemed an eternity, he was the one on his feet performing the delicate surgery.

It was then I was grateful to Edwin Nixon for being the cursed task master he was. Ed had been Shelton's cross-country coach at Midland High. Maybe that's where he developed his endurance.

"It's tougher than I thought it would be. A lot of guys had more speed than I expected to see. And the execution was better; I guess that's the biggest adjustment I have to make." — Herschel Walker, of the New Jersey Generals, commenting on his first professional football games in the USFL.

Hank Aaron was not only a long ball hitter, but a good base stealer. He was caught stealing only 72 times in his long career, a record among players with 300 or more attempted steals.

Big Ten drops; TCU wins again

By The Associated Press

The Big Ten's stock dropped a bit in the National Invitation Tournament when the Minnesota Gophers lost last week.

Monday night, the bottom dropped out completely for one of the nation's strongest basketball leagues as both Northwestern and Michigan State were eliminated.

DePaul rallied to pull out a dramatic 65-63 victory over Northwestern and Fresno State upset Michigan State 72-58 in two of eight NIT games Monday night, leaving the Big Ten without a team to compete in the nation's oldest post-season basketball tournament. It was the second close victory over a Big Ten team in this tourney for DePaul, which beat Minnesota 76-73 in a first-round game last Tuesday night.

Also advancing to quarterfinal games later this week were Wake Forest, Texas Christian, Mississippi, South Carolina, Nebraska and Oregon State. Wake Forest beat Vanderbilt 75-58, TCU tripped Arizona State 78-76, Mississippi defeated South Florida 65-57, South Carolina stopped Virginia Tech 75-68, Nebraska trimmed Iona 85-73 and Oregon State walloped New Orleans 88-71.

Monday night's results set up quarterfinal pairings for Thursday and Friday nights.

On Thursday, TCU plays at Nebraska, Wake Forest meets South Carolina at Greensboro, N.C., and Fresno State travels to Oregon State. On Friday, Mississippi meets DePaul at Rosemont, Ill.

Darrell Browder scored 29 points and Doug Arnold had 20 of his 26 in the second half as TCU held on to beat Arizona State. The host Sun Devils were kept in the game throughout by the 33-point effort of Byron Scott.

"TCU played a solid, error-free game," Arizona State Coach Bob Weinhauer said. "They maintained their composure even after Browder fouled out and Arnold took over the game from there. It's a tribute to them that they didn't get flustered."

Ron Anderson and Desi Barmore scored 16 points apiece to lead Fresno State over Michigan State. The Spartans maintained a five-point lead throughout most of the second half, but the Bulldogs rallied to outscore Michigan State 8-2 and grab a 53-52 lead.

Fresno State's Omel Nieves scored the go-ahead basket with 3:47 remaining. Michigan State, meanwhile, could hit only one of nine shots in the stretch. Fresno State sank 15 of 16 free throws in the final three minutes to put the game away.

Wake Forest's Delaney Rudd scored 15 of his game-high 21 points in the second half to rally the Demon Deacons over Vanderbilt. The loss denied Vanderbilt a chance to post the school's first 20-victory season since 1973-74. The Commodores finished the season with a 19-14 record.

Carlos Clark's 30 points led Mississippi over South Florida. Clark keyed a 10-0 scoring spurt that gave Ole Miss a 21-11 lead it never relinquished. It demoralized South Florida, which got no closer than six points in the second half.

Mike Brittain and Brad Jergensen scored 15 points each as South Carolina defeated Virginia Tech. The balanced Gamecock scoring overshadowed a strong performance by Dell Curry, who scored a game-high 27 points for Virginia Tech.

Bryant's 177 yards sinks Stallions, 17-10

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Kelvin Bryant ran so well it didn't matter that quarterback Chuck Fusina had an off-night.

Bryant carried 27 times for 177 yards in Philadelphia's 17-10 United States Football League victory over the Birmingham Stallions Monday night, setting up a match next weekend between the league's only two undefeated teams, the Stars and the Tampa Bay Bandits.

"I don't feel I played a good game, but we work hard on both the run and the throw. But we were running so good there's no need to throw," said Fusina, who completed eight of 15 passes for just 56 yards. The Stars rushed 30 times for 200 yards.

"We were pretty conservative," Fusina said.

Bryant credited his success to the Stars' offensive line.

"It lets me know our offensive line did a great job," Bryant said. "We've got some big horses up front. I just try to go out and play 100 percent. I don't worry about what people say about me."

When asked about his performance compared to Heisman Trophy-winner Herschel Walker of the New Jersey Generals, who has only 164 yards in 48 carries for the season, Bryant said: "Our offensive line is better than New Jersey's."

Stallions Coach Rollie Dotsch said, "Bryant demonstrated he is one of the best backs in the USFL, if not the country."

"I'm never pleased when a guy runs the ball down our throat," Dotsch said. "Our tackling was shoddy in the first half," when Bryant rushed for 139 yards. "There are two things we do well, rush the passer and protect the passer. There are elements in our game I'm not pleased with."

Alvin Harvin scored the Stars' first touchdown on a 2-yard run around left end in the first quarter and set up Bryant's third-period TD with a 67-yard return of the second-half kickoff. Bryant then rushed five consecutive plays, scoring from the 1.

Reggie Collier took the Stallions 58 yards in five plays for a touchdown, keeping the ball and sprinting around left end for the final 4 yards to tie the game in the first period.

David Trout's 23-yard, second-period field goal gave the Stars a lead they never relinquished.

Some coaches stay, others leave

By The Associated Press

Officials at North Texas State University and Kansas are looking for new basketball coaches, Oregon has a new coach and the Aggies of Texas A&M will have Shelby Metcalf again.

Officials at NTSU say they will move quickly to find a new head basketball coach to replace Bill Blakeley, who was ousted after posting a 134-85 record in eight years.

Following Monday's annoucement that his contract would not be renewed, Blakeley said he had no other plans, other than cleaning out his desk.

A search committee was appointed to find a successor, said Athletic Director Fred McCain.

"After careful consideration of all the facts in our present basketball program, we have come to the conclusion that a change is necessary in order to develop the strongest possible basketball program within our financial limits," McCain said.

McCain said the university hopes to hire a successor in about two to three weeks.

Blakeley said he did not know the reason for his dismissal.

"I wasn't given any," Blakeley said. "But the school and the program have been hurt enough without me adding any fuel to the fire."

NTSU posted a 15-15 record this year, losing the finals of the Southland Conference basketball tournament to Lamar. It was Blakeley's third straight 15-win season for the school.

Blakeley's first year — 1975-76 — was his best, with a 22-4 record.

SINCE BECOMING athletic director at the University of Kansas late last November, Monte Johnson has used two bold strokes to cast out more than 60 years of his school's athletic heritage.

First to go was Don Fambrough, the head football coach who had served the university in one capacity or another since the late 1940s. On Sunday, Johnson's axe fell on Ted Owens, assistant basketball coach for four years, head basketball coach for 19.

Johnson brought to the job a reputation of being unafraid to take bold, decisive action.

"I wish you would reword that to say, 'bold, decisive and intelligent action,'" he said with a chuckle in an interview Monday. "And add 'objective' to intelligent. At least I hope that's what people will come to feel. Only time will tell."

Even though Owens had been a frequent object of dismissal rumors off and on throughout his career, his firing was less expected than Fambrough's. The football program had sunk to dismal depths and the NCAA was known to be conducting a preliminary inquiry into allegations of recruiting violations.

OREGON WAS looking for someone to restore some energy to the Ducks' sagging basketball program. Don Monson came with just the right credentials.

Monson posted a 100-41 record in five seasons at Idaho, which had won only 26 games in the four years prior to his arrival. He led the Vandals to two NCAA tournaments and one NIT tournament in three years.

"His reputation is impeccable," said Rick Bay, Oregon athletic director. "He is highly thought of at the University of Idaho and by the coaches against whom he has competed.

"Secondly, he is a coach who has established a winning program at a Division I school and has competed successfully against other top-notch coaches such as Ralph Miller (Oregon State), George Raveling (Washington State) and Marv Harshman (Washington)," Bay added.

"And his record is such that he can command instant credibility with the Eugene community and Oregon basketball fans everywhere. He knows the Northwest and the Pac-10 so the transition will be as easy as anyone can hope for."

SHELBY METCALF, Texas A&M's basketball coach for the past 20 years, has been awarded a new, three-year contract that will automatically renew itself after each season, school officials announced.

Metcalf was reported in danger of being fired earlier in the year, but his team rallied to overtake Texas Christian and finish third place in the Southwest Conference basketball race.

"I'm very pleased with with the progress, record and leadership of our basketball program," Athletic Director Jackie Sherrill said Monday in announcing the new rollover contract.

Bradshaw has secret arm surgery

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Pittsburgh Steeler quarterback Terry Bradshaw, who entered a Shreveport hospital under another name earlier this month, has been released after surgery to repair tears in an arm muscle, his doctor says.

"He's doing well," said Dr. Bill Bundrick, who performed the operation on the four-time Super Bowl player.

He said Bradshaw will be prohibited from throwing during a recuperation period while he works on strength excercises, but will be throwing again in June and should have no problems.

Bundrick said the surgery was to repair tears in the muscle near the right elbow, a condition called "micro trauma."

"We did it to give him some relief," the doctor told the Shreveport Times. "It's something he's had for about a year."

He said cronic muscle tears often develop in the elbow of an athlete who throws frequently. "It's the same thing as 'tennis elbow,'" he said.

Bradshaw entered Doctors' Hospital on March 3 under the name of Thomas Brady, and was released a short time later.

Bundrick said the alias was not Bradshaw's idea.

Evonne Goolagong is back

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Her name has the ring of a melody. Her game is pure symphony — all beauty and grace.

Evonne Goolagong shouldn't be a tennis player. She should be a ballerina, flying through the air and pirouetting on royal stages. She should be a sonnet. They ought to set her to music.

Now she is back — this laughing free spirit from Australia's aboriginal outlands — preparing to match her rare innate skills against the intense, nail-biting, racket-slamming young tigresses of the Virginia Slims ladies' tour.

"IT'S GREAT to have you in the tournament," an official said when Goolagong appeared in Madison Square Garden's Hall of Fame room Monday with most of the other 15 competitors who will play in this week's $350,000 New York Championships.

"I'm happy to be invited," Evonne said, referring to her wild card entry in an event for which she would otherwise — on the basis of current record — not have been qualified.

"Evonne should have carte blanche acceptance anywhere she wants to play," someone remarked, expressing the feelings of everybody in the crowded room not to mention tennis fans around the globe.

Evonne Goolagong Cawley, now 32, wife and mother of two, is still the darling of tennis — looking as young and as fresh as when she captured the fancy of the sports world a dozen years ago.

"Before playing in the Australian Open in January, I spent a month getting in shape in the Fiji Islands," she said.

Her dimpled face is a rich bronze, framed by a head of little copper curls — her trademark. Although now living in Hilton Head, S. C., wife of a successful English businessman, she has maintained her rich Australian accent and blithe, refreshing personality.

HER LAUGH echoes around the room.

"She is nature's sprite," said Ted Tinling, consultant for the tour who has followed the sport from the days of France's Suzanne Lenglen in the 1920s to the two-fisted precisionists of today, many of whom he has clothed as a well-known dress designer.

"In all my years, I have seen only two personalities like this — Evonne and Henri Cochet. They played in another world. They could reach great heights of brilliance and fall to unbelievable depths of form. But all their pinnacles had valleys and their valleys great peaks."

Cochet was one of France's "Four Musketeers" who dominated tennis in the 1920s.

One wonders what greater impact Evonne Goolagong might have had on the game had her career not been marked by a succession of foot problems and sabbaticals for the purpose of having babies.

"I never regretted sacrificing some of my tennis career for my family life," she said. "I love tennis but my family is everything."

Evonne, part aboriginal, grew up in a remote outback village some 450 miles from Sydney. She recalls how at age six, she carved primitive rackets wooden boxes and batted rubber balls against a wall.

When she was nine, her mother brought her a cheap junior racket, which quickly fell apart. By the time she was 11 she was traveling all over Australia with junior teams.

She was only 18 when she upset Margaret Court in the Victoria women's finals in Melbourne. Authorities decided she was ready to go overseas, chaperoned by her coach, Vic Edwards.

ALMOST AT the same time Chris Evert was emerging as the teen-age phenom of American tennis, and fans could hardly wait for the first confrontation of these court prodigies.

It happened at Wimbledon in 1972 — Evonne 20, Chris 17 — the floating, effortless laughing girl against the stolid shotmaking machine. Evonne won in three sets. It was the start of a long and exciting series, Chris gaining a 25-13 edge.

"That didn't please me as much as our match in 1980," Evonne said. "The matches were nine years apart. We met in the finals. I had been out with foot injuries and taken time off to have Kelly, who was then 3. Morgan was not to be born until the next May.

"I can't tell you what a nice feeling it was to win Wimbledon again — this time as a mother. That was the greatest thrill of all."

New Mets come of age

TL graduate Strawberry connects

By The Associated Press

Some of the New York Mets' "players of the future" are showing results now in spring training.

Brent Gaff and Jeff Bittiger, a couple of pitchers the Mets expect big things from, and Darryl Strawberry, an outfielder who was the Texas League player of the year last season, stood out Monday as a Mets' split squad defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 3-1 in exhibition baseball.

Gaff and Bittiger combined to pitch eight shutout innings and Strawberry blasted a home run in the contest, one of two Met victories Monday. Another Met split squad defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates 8-6.The Mets had only won three games since the start of spring training before Monday's two-game sweep which gave them a 5-8 record.

Strawberry cracked his second homer of the spring, off veteran Randy Moffitt in the eighth inning of the game with Toronto in Dunedin, Fla.

In St. Petersburg, Fla., Dave Kingman, Tom Veryzer and Dave Cochrane hit two-run homers and George Foster and Mike Bishop added solo shots for the Mets in their victory over the Pirates.

Winner Craig Swann gave up five runs and 11 hits in six innings, including a wind-blown homer to Gene Tenace. "I knew if it was to left field, it would go out," said Swann of the strong wind to left.

Swan told Manager George Bamberger he felt good, and the manager let him remain in the game for six innings.

In other action Monday, Los Angeles shortstop Dave Anderson's throwing error allowed the winning run to score in the 10th inning as Montreal beat the Dodgers 7-6. Fernando Valenzuela pitched six innings for the Dodgers, allowing six hits and three runs.

Exhibition Baseball

German Barranca singled home the tie-breaking run in the 10th inning, leading Detroit to a 10-8 victory over the Boston Red Sox. In Clearwater, Fla., Gary Matthews hit a two-run homer in the seventh inning to give the Philadelphia Phillies a 5-3 victory over the world champion St. Louis Cardinals.

In Tampa, Fla., Bill Scherrer walked Ray Knight with the bases loaded and two out in the ninth inning to give Houston a 3-2 victory over Cincinnati. In Pompano Beach, Fla., Texas scored two runs on Kansas City catcher Don Slaught's throwing error in the eighth innning and Larry Parrish added a run-scoring double as the Rangers beat the Royals 3-1.

In Palm Springs, Calif., Daryl Sconiers tripled home the tying and winning runs to cap a six-run eighth-inning rally that gave California a 10-9 victory over Cleveland.

In Miami, Mike Young's two-run homer with two outs in the ninth inning gave the Baltimore Orioles an 8-6 victory over the Braves. In Sarasota, Fla., rookie right-hander Lee Tunnell limited a Chicago White Sox split squad to one hit in six innings to give the Pirates' split squad a 3-2 victory. The Pirates broke a 35-inning scoreless streak with two runs in the fourth off Floyd Bannister.

In night action at San Juan, P.R., seventh-inning home runs by Gary Ward and Gary Gaetti carried the Minnesota Twins to an 8-7 comeback victory over the rest of the White Sox.

Three games were rained out — San Francisco-Oakland, San Diego-Seattle and Chicago Cubs-Milwaukee.

Herzog: Newest guru

By THOMAS BOSWELL
The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — As the ball leaves the bat of pitcher Bob Forsch, Whitey Herzog is the first to know it will be a home run.

Before the ball smacks the beer sign beyond the left field fence, Herzog is already crowing to his world champion St. Louis Cardinals, "You see why I let him hit. I had to talk that man into goin' up there."

When Forsch returns to the bench, Herzog ignores the celebration around his pitcher until, eventually, he catches Forsch's eye.

"What was that?" says Herzog, the picture of boredom. "A home run?"

The next time the pitcher is due to hit, Herzog sends up a pinch hitter, saying to Forsch, "Sit down. I can't stand to watch you hit another one. It's embarrassing to my other players."

Forsch exits and Bruce Sutter enters, throwing his split-finger fast ball. One perfect pitch drops a foot, leaving a young Philadelphia hitter agape.

HERZOG CAN'T resist. "Give him that good one now," he snaps at Sutter.

The Cardinals snicker behind their hands. The rookie, perhaps wondering what the good one might look like, takes strike three. The Cardinals laugh out loud.

"Throw like a catcher on that split finger," Herzog reminds Sutter as the reliever reaches the dugout. "Release right from the ear. Don't reach back."

Herzog puts his thumbs in his belt, sticks his confident stomach far out and spits a little Red Man in the red clay before him. Man in his element.

The Phillies put a pitcher with an unlisted uniform number in the game. The Cardinals can't figure out who he is. "It's Sid Monge," says Herzog. "He forgot his (normal) uniform. Whaddaya expect? He's only been in the game 16 years."

Throughout his club's Grapefruit League victory, Herzog is a man enjoying a little bit of heaven. Every play receives his involuntary, reflexive commentary — a sort of ongoing annotation.

WHEN HIS favorite part-timer, Dane Iorg, a .297 career hitter, gets a seeing-eye hit, Herzog murmurs affectionately, "Hit the ball right, Dane Iorg. Damn eight-hoppers up the middle ... And you think we're not gettin' smarter."

When it's mentioned his Cardinals always tag up at second base on routine long flies, something many teams neglect, Herzog says for cryptic explanation, "They don't drop too many fly balls in this league, do they?"

With the retirement of Earl Weaver, Herzog is heir apparent to the game's role of resident guru. True, every October victor becomes a universal genius by the following March. Nonetheless, Dorrel Norman Elvert Herzog, who lives "on the highest point in Independence, Mo.," has one of those rare minds that touch all the bases of his world.

At 51, he is the only man who has held every basic job in his sport: big-league player, coach, scout, farm system director, manager and general manager.

Herzog has changed teams or job descriptions a dozen times. Perhaps that is why the thought of being fired holds little terror for him. In fact, Herzog is one of a dwindling breed of big-time pro sports bosses who genuinely relishes his work, rather than being tormented by it.

WHILE MANY like Weaver or Dick Vermeil are retiring for their health, taking a sabbatical or lamenting the fad disease "coach burnout," Herzog seems blithely oblivious. He dreamed about managing a big-league club from the time he was 12 "listening to Babe Ruth's radio show on Saturday morning."

"People ask me when I'm going to quit managing," says Herzog, winner of almost every award as man of the year, manager of the year and executive of the year over the past two seasons for his rebuilding of the Cardinals. "I have no idea. As long as I'm having this good a time, I'm sure as hell not gonna quit.

"I really do enjoy it. In July of '79 (with the Kansas City Royals), we lost 14 out of 15. Our pitching fell apart. In two weeks, I only gave two signs because we were always behind, 5-0, 6-0, so fast.

"The writers brought me a half-gallon of scotch with a nice note. I've still got it. Basically, they thanked me for not being a jerk. I could have locked the clubhouse (to the press), blown up at everybody, but I didn't.

"I managed my rear off that year to keep us in the race until the last week. We even set an attendance record.

"I enjoyed it."

Householder has hepatitis

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Cincinnati Reds personnel are being innoculated against hepatitis because outfielder Paul Householder has contracted the disease.

Householder is the 91st diagnosed case in an epidemic centered at the Fort Mitchell Country Club, just south of Cincinnati in Fort Mitchell, Ky.Householder, Manager Russ Nixon and Reds President Dick Wagner attended a dinner there Jan. 26.

Dr. George Ballou, Reds team physician, innoculated about 50 people Monday with gamma globulin, a blood component that offers some protection against the disease.

Walker leads Lee Freshman

Jimmy Walker, Midland Lee Freshman School, won the boys singles in the Odessa Junior High Boys Singles while Wade Weisepape took first in the consolation bracket.

In doubles, Lee's teams also placed high as Chris-Engleman and Will Thompson finished second while Craig Gifford and Brenner Carmondy took consolation. In girls play, Karen Wagner and Tammy Palmer finished second while Karen Marley and Lisa Looney were the consolation winners.

ARE YOU AFRAID OF THE IRS?
YOU DON'T HAVE TO BE . . .

. . . Because we're taking on the Internal Revenue Service . . . and winning. Here's how you can help end IRS abuse of taxpayer rights . . .

You've probably heard some of the IRS horror stories . . . the Colorado woman whose $80,000 home was seized and sold by the IRS, not one cent of which was applied to her $1,600 tax delinquency . . . The Amish cabinet maker in rural Maryland whose tools were seized by 60 armed IRS agents for an alleged $800 tax delinquency . . . the pregnant woman in Alaska pulled through a broken glass window as armed IRS agents seized her car for an unexplained $4,000 tax "delinquency."

Most Americans will never suffer IRS abuse like this, but most Americans are justifiably afraid of random IRS audits, unexplained IRS tax assessments and arbitrary IRS denial of legitimate tax deductions.

Fear: The #1 IRS Weapon

The IRS, of course, wants you to fear them. They want you to forget that legitimate tax deduction for fear you'll be audited. Two former IRS Commissioners have testified before Congress that fear is an essential element in the collection of taxes.

The IRS is Prosecutor, Judge and Jury

Heaven help the taxpayer who stands up for his rights:

- The IRS can seize taxpayer property without a court order.
- The IRS can force taxpayers to try their cases in a special court governed by the IRS.
- The IRS, without court order, can seize all but $50 of your weekly wages for taxes the IRS decides you owe.
- Only the IRS, among all Government agencies, has this kind of power.

What's being done to Curb these IRS Abuses?

The Association of Concerned Taxpayers (A.C.T.)—a non-profit, non-partisan citizens tax lobby—is pushing Congress to pass the Taxpayer Protection ACT (HR 171) introduced by Congressman George Hansen of Idaho.

Congressman Hansen's Taxpayer Protection Act will end these abuses and limit the IRS to fairly collecting taxes—not scalps.

Congress is moving quickly to clamp down on IRS abuse.

Already, Congressional hearings on IRS taxpayer abuse have been held and over 150 Representatives from 47 States are cosponsoring Congressman Hansen's Taxpayer Protection Act. More Representatives are coming on board every week.

These 150 Congressional Co-Sponsors are Republicans, Democrats, Conservatives, and Liberals.

Your help is needed to pass the Taxpayer Protection Act

1. Write your Representative (Washington, D.C. 20515) and make it known that you want quick passage of Congressman George Hansen's Taxpayer Protection Act (HR 171).
2. Use the coupon below to send a donation of $100, $50, $25, or even just $20 or $15 to help the Association of Concerned Taxpayers keep lobbying for the Taxpayer Protection Act.

REMEMBER—THE IRS GETS AWAY WITH THESE ABUSES ONLY BECAUSE WE LET THEM.

I'm enclosing my donation to help the Association of Concerned Taxpayers (ACT) expand its lobbying efforts and public education programs to bring the IRS under control.

Tough Hough is on road to recovery

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Charlie Hough of the Texas Rangers, exponent extraordinaire of the knuckleball, was hobbling along on a newly reconstructed knee joint.

"The average man would be crawling," he said as he headed for the weight room to do some strengthening exercises.

"This is my first day walking," he said later as he returned from a strenuous bout with an isometric dynamometer. "And I'm just a shade under my mile speed."

Hough, 35 and already slightly arthritic in the knees, had had surgery on his right knee last Friday in Fort Lauderdale with an arthroscope — an instrument that allows doctors to do major surgery with smaller incisions.

On Monday he was walking stiffly with a heavy wrap on the knee.

The operation was to repair some cartilage damage that "had been building up since last June or so," and to try to alleviate the arthritic condition.

Although he hasn't been to the doctor since surgery, and "I really don't know much about this type of injury," Hough said he didn't expect to miss more than one or two starts for the Rangers this season. That's good news to Manager Doug Rader.

Hough, who had been used primarily as a reliever in his 7½ seasons with Los Angeles, won 16 games last year, a single-season career high, while losing 13. He had an earned-run average of 3.95. In two spring training appearances, the last a week ago today, Hough worked nine innings, giving up eight hits and one run for an ERA of 1.00.

"I worked five innings my last time out," Hough said. "It (the knee) hurt that last couple of innings, even though I pitched good. I knew it would be very hard for me to pitch again with that pain."

Hough, who has an appointment to go back to see the doctor on Thursday.

NHL's Rangers could use exorcist

By The Associated Press

The New Jersey Devils are about a dozen points — some folks might say a dozen years — away from the National Hockey League playoffs. But when the New York Rangers cross the Hudson River, the Devils' adrenaline starts pumping at Stanley Cup speed.

"From our point, it was the biggest game of the year," said Aaron Broten, who scored two goals, including the third-period tie-breaker, Monday night to give the Devils a 4-2 victory over their playoff-bound rivals.

"This was the most important game of the season for us," said Coach Billy MacMillan, whose Devils are mathematicelly out of playoff contention. "I'm really encouraged the way we took this game away from the Rangers."

It deadlocked the series between the cross-river rivals at three apiece with one remaining.

"The April 1 return game in Madison Square Garden will be it for us," said Broten. "Billy told us before the game that if we win tonight and in the Garden, it's our playoffs."

With the score 2-2 at 1:41 of the third period, Broten batted his own rebound past Rangers' goaltender Glen Hanlon. Less than three minutes later, with the Devils on a power play, Tapio Levo shoveled the puck cross-ice and Broten tipped in the insurance goal.

Steve Tambellini and Murray Brumwell also scored for New Jersey. Barry Beck and Reijo Ruotsalainen had the Rangers' goals.

NHL Roundup

Oilers 4, Maple Leafs 1

Wayne Gretzky scored his 66th goal and added two assists to lead the Oilers to their 11th victory in 13 games. The Oilers trail only Boston in the overall standings. Toronto has lost four in a row.

"It's a good idea to go into the playoffs with a lot of momentum," said Mark Messier, whose empty-net goal in the final minute wrapped up the Oilers' scoring.

North Stars 4, Black Hawks 3

Brad Maxwell rested up for nearly an hour along with a couple of his Minnesota teammates — most of the others were busy trying to beat up the Black Hawks — then scored the goal that beat Chicago on the scoreboard.

Both benches emptied with 5:50 to play. The fighting lasted 20 minutes and delayed play for 52 minutes.

"I guess we still have the reputation to be able to be intimidated — but we don't get intimidated. We stand up and fight," said the North Stars' Dino Ciccarelli.

Twenty-nine penalties and 48 seconds later, with each team two men short, Maxwell put a blue-line slapshot past Black Hawks goalie Tony Esposito, pushing the North Stars within three points of first-place Chicago in the Norris Division.

Canucks 7, Penguins 3

Darcy Rota scored two goals to equal a Vancouver single-season high of 40 in leading the Canucks over Pittsburgh.

The victory was Vancouver's eighth straight at home. That broke the previous club record of seven straight at the Pacific Coliseum and moved the Canucks within a point of idle Calgary in the race for second place in the Smythe Division.

Rota scored his first goal of the night at 6:31 of the first period. The Canucks then added scores from Kevin McCarthy and Patrik Sundstrom to make it 3-0 after one period, then went up 4-0 in the second period on Rota's second goal of the night and the eventual game-winner.

NBA works to beat strike deadline

NEW YORK (AP) — If bargaining time means anything, negotiators in National Basketball Association contract talks may be getting down to business.

After about seven hours of talks Monday, the two sides were at it again today, a day closer to the April 2 strike deadline set by the players association.

The session Monday was the longest since bargaining began last fall over what appear to be two major issues — the league's demand for a cap on team salaries and the union's insistence on maintaining the ability of free agents to move from team to team.

Whether it was a fruitful session and whether it brought the club owners and the players any closer to an agreement is not known.

The talks are so secret that even the site was a mystery. Unlike negotiations the past two years in the major league baseball and the National Football League contract disputes, newsmen are unable to question negotiators when they break. Neither side issues statements.

Alex Sachare, a public relations spokesman for the league, declined to say what took place at the latest session, and Larry Fleisher, who directs the talks for the players union, was not at his suburban home Monday night. He was staying in New York, at an undisclosed location, unavailable for comment.

Among those with Fleisher, general counsel to the players association, were his aide Charles Grantham, and Maurice Lucas, player representative of the Phoenix Suns.

Bob Lanier of the Bucks, the association president, failed to make his expected appearance because he was snowbound in Milwaukee.

Commissioner Larry O'Brien again headed the management team which also included Executive Vice President David Stern, the league's chief negotiator, and three members of the league's labor relations committee, Larry Weinberg, president of the Portland Trail Blazers; Jack Krumpe, president of the New York Knicks, and Alan Cohen, chairman of the New Jersey Nets.

Though the previous contract expired last June, there has been no interruption of play. The April 2 strike deadline falls about two weeks before the start of the post-season playoffs, usually very lucrative for the teams.

The club owners have said there can be no new contract until the players show a willingness to help ease the league's financial problems.

NC State given one year probation

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State University has been given one year of probation by the NCAA for football recruiting violations during the 1981-82 school year.

N.C. State was guilty of five violations involving an unnamed prospective football player who enrolled at the university, said William L. Matthews, acting chairman of the NCAA Committee on Infractions.

The probation does not include any sanctions affecting N.C. State's eligibility for football bowl games or television appearances. But the player will be ineligible to represent the university in a post-season game during the period.

Wolfpack Coach Tom Reed, who took over in December after Monte Kiffin resigned, said he didn't expect the sanctions to affect the team.

"Our football program will see no difference," Reed said Monday night in a telephone interview. "The verdict of the NCAA speaks for itself. I'm just looking forward to starting the season."

Reed said he thought the school would attempt to have the player reinstated.

"I think there's an appeal process that's open where we can pursue this further," Reed said.

Gnomes believe recovery's coming fast

By Bernard D. Kaplan
HearstEuropean Correspondent

PARIS — The famous Gnomes of Zurich, who are not given to wishful thinking, believe that Western economic recovery, paced by the U.S., is underway — and coming on faster than widely supposed.

The hard-eyed Swiss banking fraternity not only agrees with recent American assessments concerning an upturn, but goes further. It is advising its far-flung customers that a moderate, but solid economic boom will be in full swing within six months, its beginnings already visible in America and starting to sprout in some European industries.

For this, the Gnomes give almost the whole credit to two men — President Reagan and Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker. Hero worship isn't exactly their line, but if they had a hero, it clearly would be Reagan.

"The first president in more than a decade to protect America's economic interests and therefore those of the West" was how the Swiss Bank Corporation's Damasus Reolon described him.

"His approach to the problems of social and labor costs for Western industrial countries is the only sound one and is now being proved correct and effective," the banker added.

IF REAGAN COMES first in the Gnomes' pantheon, Volcker isn't far behind. The latter has become an international "symbol" of sound financial practices, much needed in an era when it had been widely assumed that such practices were no longer politically feasible.

"Volcker is the equivalent of $20 billion in reserve currency for the U.S. government so far as foreign bankers are concerned," in the view of Creditverein's Axel Schmidt. The unmistakable implication was that Reagan would be making a cardinal error not to reappoint him as Federal Reserve chief when his term expires soon.

A consensus of bankers here predicted that recovery would be "gradual." It would not take the form of a dramatic take-off. But that, they agreed, was a good thing.

"Sudden expansion would only bring with it a return to the wages-and-prices spiral that caused so much trouble in the seventies," Schmidt warned. "What's needed is a stretched-out period of stable growth in which European and American industries can reassess their markets and their future in order not to repeat their recent mistakes."

In this scenario, the Gnomes are virtually one in believing that the U.S. economy will play the central role of catalyst. They are putting their money behind their opinions.

"Overseas investment in the U.S. is again on the rise," Reolon said. "Foreigners are investing heavily, particularly in computers, insurance, services, warehousing and other fields."

A BIG REASON for this confidence in America is a general belief that the dollar's recent strength isn't a flash in the pan.

"The dollar will stay strong," said Gerhard Zangher of Hypo Bank. "There will be pronounced swings — that's inevitable given the massive amounts of dollars bouncing around the world. But, essentially, it is one of the world's strongest currencies and will remain so."

Surprisingly, the Gnomes are cautious about Japan. They incline to the view that the future of its economy may have been over-sold. They haven't gone as far as to try to dissuade customers from investing in Japan — in so far as it is possible for outsiders to do so — but they're not especially bullish.

"The Japanese have ignored fundamental problems, for instance, in the way they're destroying their environment, and they'll have to pay for it in the future," Reolon said.

"Furthermore, nobody really knows what Japanese labor costs are. Nobody knows for certain how Japanese industry is financed. Their industries have benefitted from cheap government money, as well as from the institutionalized links between banks and manufacturing companies. Many banks and companies are, in reality, under a single direction and ownership. The advantages are obvious and can last over a long period. But whether, ultimately, the Japanese can escape the basic laws of investment and return on capital is more doubtful."

IN SHORT, in the cool, hard view of the Gnomes, Japan's economic success rests on shakier foundations than is usually assumed.

They also detect a problem on the horizon that, while not uniquely affecting Japan, is a serious threat to its current domination of many consumer products markets.

"There are simply too many new and 'improved' products entering the market before the costs of earlier models have been amortized," Schmidt contended. "A kind of crazed determination to bring on ever newer versions of the same thing has become a longterm threat to the structure of many industries. Research and competition are cornerstones of capitalism and product improvement is to be applauded. But it is threatening to get totally out of hand."

Customers have been conditioned to expect something 'new' in the electronics and related fields every few months, he said.

"This has two calamitous results," he added. "They postpone purchases, believing that they'll do better by waiting. Firms hardly have time to market a new item and get a reasonable return on the research costs involved before they're forced to replace it."

Slowing down this process, while maintaining competition and a healthy level of research and development, will, in the Gnomes' view, be one of the major economic challenges of the late Eighties and Nineties."

Mexican Beetles infest Southwest

DETROIT (AP) — The Volkswagen Beetle, that droop-nosed, air-cooled economy car so big on college campuses during the 1960s, is making a comeback with nostalgia buffs — but not everyone loves the Bug.

The German-based manufacturer stopped shipping the car to the United States country in 1979. But they are still made in Mexico, and because of peso devaluations, Beetles can be bought in that country for as little as $2,500.

The cars are turning up in California, Texas and other Sunbelt states, but U.S. customs officials say the Mexican models don't meet federal emissions and safety standards. Authorities are trying to stamp out car rings that import and sell the unauthorized versions.

"There are a number of them (organized rings) under investigation," said Charles Conroy, a Customs spokesman in Houston. "They buy them for $3,000 or less, and turn around and sell them in Texas for double."

The bootleg importers don't bother to upgrade the cars' safety and emissions features, he said, and consumers trying to get away with an unconverted Beetle may wind up having it seized.

If discovered, buyers must bring the car into compliance themselves — which could cost as much as $7,000 in some areas — ship them back out of the country or just leave them in government hands and lose their investment, officials said.

Customs officials say they have seized hundreds of cars, and not just Beetles, for non-compliance with federal regulations.

Ted Kade, a spokesman for Volkswagen of America Inc. in Troy, Mich., said Monday that the south-of-the-border Beetles aren't covered by a company warranty because the cars aren't sold in the United States.

"It's not something we're encouraging," Kade said.

Still, the Beetle has its champions.

"People are treating this car as a long-lost friend," said Joseph Molina, a spokesman for The People's Car Co., a Solana Beach, Calif., company that legally imports the VWs into this country.

"The market is huge to say the least," Molina said. "Most of the people who are buying them have owned a Bug before. There's intense loyalty ... it's a nostalgia thing."

The company spends about $2,500 to convert the vehicles to U.S. standards, including strengthening bumpers, changing window glass, installing seat belts and a warning buzzer, Molina said.

The cars also must have catalytic converters and be made to run on unleaded gasoline to meet emission standards, he said. The company also pays import duties.

Shaid trial moved back

TYLER, Texas (AP) — A federal judge has ruled that a man previously convicted of bank fraud will stand trial on charges of bilking at least two banks April 4.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice on Monday postponed Orin Shaid Jr.'s trial after defense attorneys said they had not been given enough time to prepare for it.

Shaid's lawyers pointed out that under law, Shaid was entitled to 30 days between his arraignment and trial date. The defendant was arraigned March 4 on a 19-count indictment that superseded an indictment returned by a federal grand jury Jan. 12.

Justice also lowered Shaid's bond from $200,000 to $175,000. The judge previously lowered the bond from $250,000 for Shaid, who has been in Smith County Jail since Nov. 29.

"I'm not disappointed about it (the delay)," said Assistant U.S. Attorney Chris Harrison. "He's just giving us more time to get ready."

Shaid, whom Justice sentenced to eight years in prison on a 1972 bank fraud conviction, is accused of bilking funds from two East Texas banks.

The indictment claimed Shaid schemed to defraud at least two banks by presenting loan collateral in the form of bogus $100,000 CDs from the Ranchlander National Bank in Melvin.

Shaid, court documents claim, was one of the owners of the now defuct bank. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. took control of the Ranchlander National Bank four months ago after significant loan losses were discovered.

Left hook hits Right Guard

NEW YORK (AP) — The Mennen Co. has filed suit accusing the rival Gillette Co. of infringing on its trademark with a new package design for "Right Guard" deodorant and antiperspirant.

A U.S. District Court judge was asked Monday to enjoin Gillette and its advertising agency, Young & Rubicam Inc., from distributing or selling "Right Guard" packages with the new design.

WTGS to hear Burke

Kevin Burke, professor of geology, State University of New York, Albany, will address a meeting of the West Texas Geological society Friday, 11:30 a.m., at Midland Center. Burke is an AAPG distinguished lecturer. He will talk about "Dvelopment and Distribution of Rift Systems."

Those wishing to attend should make reservations before 4 p.m. Wednesday by phoning the Society office at 683-1573.

Burke was born and educated in London. He taught geology at the University of Ghana, the University of Idaban in Nigeria and University of the West Indies in Jamaica. He served on the Geological Survey of Great Britain and has been a nuclear raw materials advisor to the Republic of Korea.

"Secrets of Selling"
Seminar

THIS SEMINAR IS DESIGNED FOR ANYONE (MEN & WOMEN) IN SALES: Sales Managers, Real Estate, Insurance, Auto Sales, Direct Sales (Amway, Shaklee, Mary Kay, etc.), Door-to-Door sales, Telephone Sales, Swimming Pools, Mobile Homes, Motorcycles, Marine, Music Stores, Stock Brokers, Bankers, Advertising, Heavy Equipment, Medical, Major Appliances, Furniture, Industrial and Institutional, Store Owners, Office Supply, Students, Executive Recruiters, Mail Order, Franchise Sales, Retirees, Secretaries, Consultants, Housewives, Contractors, Job-Seekers, Etc.

SEMINAR LEADER: The seminar leader is Dayle (Mr. Ideas) Maloney, a salesman who has closed more than 15,000 "High Ticket" sales in 10 years. He has sold retail, wholesale, tangibles and intangibles. He has also developed weekend sales promotions that attracted 20,000 people. He has shared the platform with speakers such as Zig Ziglar, Joe Girard, Art Linkletter, Dr. Denis Waitley, Terry Bradshaw, The Rice Twins, Merrill Womach, Etc.

TOPICS COVERED AT THE SEMINAR INCLUDE: America's #1 Bird-Dog System . . . The new business card that could increase sales 25% . . . How to give out 3,000 business cards a month . . . "Can't Miss" cold call prospecting hints (I cold-sell $25,000 sales) . . . Telephone selling techniques . . . Shopper Stoppers . . . Converting "Be Backers" to buyers . . . The "personal" classified ad that draws up to 1,000 buyers . . . 100 low cost/no cost clever advertisements that never fail.

25 WAYS TO CLOSE THE SALE: Quote Sheet close . . . Silent close . . . Yes, yes, yes No, no, no close . . . We're far apart close . . . What's your best deal close . . . Sold sign close . . . Sorry close . . . Proposal close . . . Hesitation close . . . Private loan close . . . $10 bill close . . . Mother and father close . . . Eyeball close . . . Two-bit close . . . Alternate choice close . . . Call back close . . . Balance Sheet close . . . "Toy Poodle" close . . . Serial number close . . . What's that noise close . . . Have to talk to wife close . . . I got a better deal . . . T.O. close . . . Low pressure close . . . Buy the lunch close . . . You can close 95% of your prospects with these closes.

HOW TO SELL WORLD'S BEST PRODUCT —YOU . . . World's #1 monthly mailing program . . . Improving your trades . . . Recruiting a sales force . . . 7 objections to buying and how to overcome them . . . An allotment letter that brings you more buyers than you can handle (an Indiana AMC dealer sold 25 Ramblers from one mailing and a wig salesman made 442 sales in 3 days with the letter) . . . The personal introduction that never fails . . . Making the most important sale of the day . . . How to sell women . . . How to get paid for public speeches.

Ancient system studied

NORMAN, Okla. — An early Egyptian device for drawing water is being re-investigated by a University of Oklahoma research team in an effort to meet today's challenge of pumping oil from great depths more efficiently.

The sucker rod system for pumping oil, derived from a method used by Egyptians as early as 476 A.D. to draw water, is the subject of a cooperative project between OU researchers and the Venezuelan research organization INTEVEP.

The one-year study is being funded by a $100,000 contract from INTEVEP, a government-owned organization established to perform energy research, particularly on petroleum.

The Egyptian invention consisted of a tripod that supported a wooden beam offset by weights. When the sucker rod string (usually a rope) was set into motion, water was drawn into a stone jar from deep within a well.

Researchers at OU and INTEVEP believe this simple and economical system, now used to pump a large precentage of the world's oil, can be modernized to produce oil more efficiently. That's the focus of the research being conducted under the cooperative agreement, said John Purcupile, project coordinator and OU professor of aerospace, mechanical and nuclear engineering.

"Although the concept has remained the same, the sucker rod system has been extended to greater depths, greater loads, higher flow rates, longer life and greater efficiency", said the OU researcher.

One of the purposes of the OU-INTEVEP cooperative research program is to stand back and rethink the problem, said Purcupile. The sucker rod system should be looked at as a "mechanical transmission line" for transmitting horsepower from the surface to the bottom of the oil well, he said.

Purcupile is working on the project with Luther White, OU associate professor of mathematics, and OU mechanical engineering students from Venezuela, Jesus E. Chacin and Gustave E. Arellano. Participating from INTEVEP as coordinator is Ammon Vadasz, who completed his bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees at Oklahoma State University.

Developing a mathematical model of the walking beam geometry, the springiness of the sucker rod and the downhole pump is one of the first steps of the resarch project, said Purcupile.

Next, the mathematical model is programmed into a computer and the computer stimulates running the pump, he said. "In this way, new ideas first can be tried on the computer before extensive field tests are made."

During the study, the researchers will conduct tests on OU's Sooner No. 1, an oil well located on OU property and operated by National Oil. "We will be monitoring the pump and testing our ideas," said Purcupile.

The ultimate goal of the project is to "optimize production and develop new methods for detecting pump off," which occurs when the pumping rate is higher than well production.

In addition to the timely research, one of the objectives of the program is to enable Venezuelan graduate students to work on resolving problems facing their country's petroleum industry as part of their graduate studies.

"Based on our interest in having people prepared in this area (heavy crude pumping), we sent what we consider to be two top students to OU," said Vadasz, The two Venezuelan graduate students enlisted to assist in the resarch are recipients of scholarships from Fonives, a Venezuelan government institution. Arellano completed his undergraduate studies at the University of Los Andes in Merida, Venezuela, in May 1978. At OU, he is pursuing a master's degree in mechnical engineering.

Basin trust spreading wealth

FORT WORTH (SWN) — The First National Bank of Fort Worth, as Trustee of the Permian Basin Royalty Trust, has declared a cash distribution to the holders of its units of beneficial interest of $.092072 per unit, payable April 14, 1983, to unit holders of record on March 31, 1983.

HOW TO MAKE A FORTUNE TODAY
Starting with No Cash!
Here's What The New York Times Says:
"... thanks to the breaks the Internal Revenue Service will give you, and the infinite possibilities that Dr. Lowry teaches you, there is no limit to the fortune you can build this way." Christopher Lehmann - Haupt N. Y. Times

PUBLIC INVITED
90 MINUTE LECTURE

Dr. Albert Lowry moved from supermarket butcher to America's foremost authority on financial security, and famous lecturer-author (How You Can Become Financially Independent By Investing In Real Estate - Simon & Schuster).
This famous self made millionaire decided ten years ago to sponsor what has become America's most respected, most famous, most complete investor's seminar. It teaches you step by step the proven success formula that within five years will permit you to retire with an income of not less than $25,000 a year for life, completely TAX FREE!
The Great American Dream. What's yours? Financial independence? Managing your property or investments more wisely? Freedom from federal income taxes? Insurance against inflation? Freedom from want in your old age? Whatever it is, Dr. Albert J. Lowry promises he can show you how to achieve it, regardless of your age or experience. Yes, YOUR Great American Dream is about to come true.
What Our Grads Say:
"In less than 6 months I have gone from $400 in the bank to having borrowed over $100,000, and I got my loans while being unemployed. As a matter of fact, I rode to the banks for my first two loans on my used motorcycle. So much for having to have money to get more."
D. P. - Seattle
"I own $2,100,000 of apartment buildings and my net worth is about $700,000. All of this has been achieved in just twelve months, and I started with NO cash. I plan to be a millionaire within the next 120 days."
D. H. S. - Jacksonville

Here's Just A Sample of What We'll Discuss
• How to buy property with no money down.
• How to stop negative cash flow.
• How to buy foreclosures at 50c on the dollar with no money down and put cash in your pocket.
• How to avoid foreclosure.
• How to get around the due-on-sale clause.
• How to use equity sharing to increase your leverage.
• Interest-Free Borrowing from Uncle Sam.
• How to get 110% financing even with bad credit.
• Tax shelters available to the "little guy."
• The secret of using O.P.M. — other people's money.
• Balloon payments — how to avoid them or use them to your advantage.
• Finding assets you never knew you had.

Don't Miss This Exciting Lecture
Millions of Americans have attended these exciting lectures and more than 150,000 have gone on to take their first steps toward financial independence. Whether you are a home owner, a renter or a first-time investor, you'll find this fact-filled lecture one of the most rewarding you'll ever have the opportunity to attend.
There are hundreds of money making opportunities you can take advantage of, if you have the necessary knowledge. Young people, retired people, singles and married couples have already learned the famous techniques that you will be introduced to in this fact-filled fully illustrated 90-minute lecture. You will hear some startling, proven facts that could change your life. Please bring a pen or pencil because there's plenty of note-taking space in the sixteen page guide you will be given at the lecture.

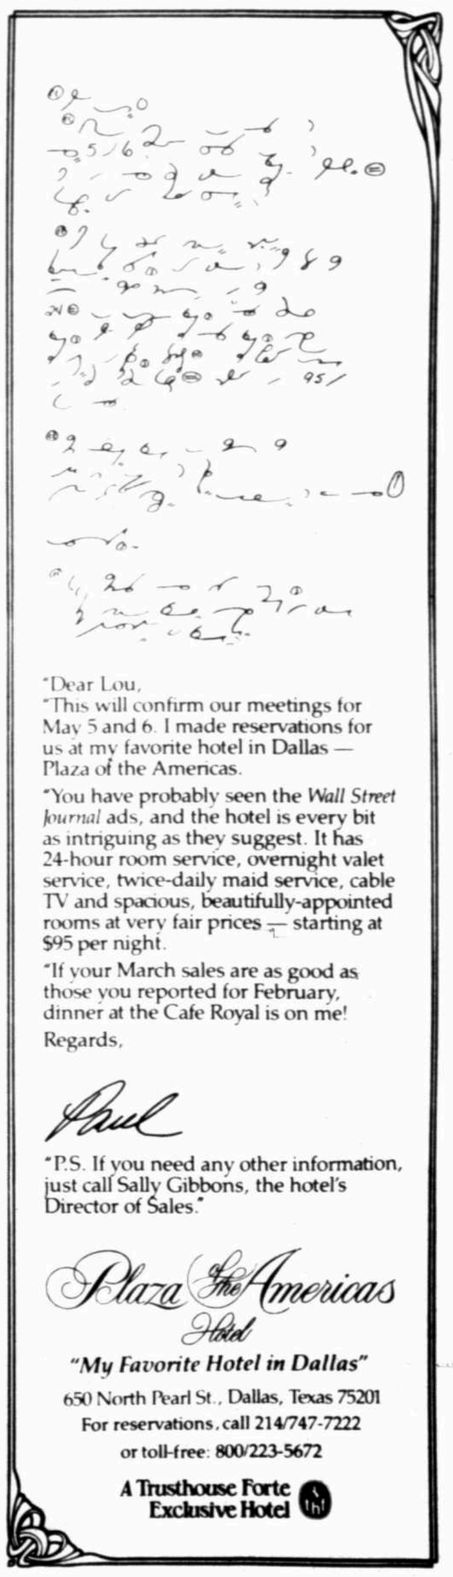
A presentation will be made for the Lowry Seminar, for which there is a fee.



"Dear Lou,
"This will confirm our meetings for May 5 and 6. I made reservations for us at my favorite hotel in Dallas — Plaza of the Americas.
"You have probably seen the Wall Street Journal ads, and the hotel is every bit as intriguing as they suggest. It has 24-hour room service, overnight valet service, twice-daily maid service, cable TV and spacious, beautifully-appointed rooms at very fair prices — starting at $95 per night.
"If your March sales are as good as those you reported for February, dinner at the Cafe Royal is on me!
Regards,
Paul
"P.S. If you need any other information, just call Sally Gibbons, the hotel's Director of Sales."

Price of unleaded gasoline dips below $1

Gasoline price dips

Unleaded gas prices dipped to less than a dollar per gallon in Midland Wednesday at the Taylor Petroleum station, 2500 W. Front Ave. The price cut comes about a month after regular gasoline prices dropped to less than a dollar per gallon in Midland.

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

The price of unleaded gasoline dipped to less than a dollar a gallon at the pumps of at least one Midland gas station last week. But one area wholesaler suggested Monday that the march toward lower prices should swing about-face beginning April 1.

About a month after the price for a gallon of regular gasoline in Midland dropped to less than a dollar, prices for a self-service gallon of unleaded dipped to 99.9 cents Wednesday at the Taylor Petroleum station, 2500 W. Front Ave.

Marge McCowin, station manager, said the price was cut from $103.9 after a regular survey of local gas outlets revealed some stations pricing their unleaded as cheap as $1.01.9.

Ms. McCowin said she relayed the pricing information to the Taylor Petroleum home office in Amarillo, and was instructed to cut the price to less than a dollar.

Marlin Conner, Taylor's area supervisor, said, "We just watch the street price and our wholesale price, and that's how we determine our price." But Conner said he was unable to discuss the wholesale price or the station's profit margin per gallon.

Conner said Taylor's wasn't the first area station to cut unleaded prices to less than a dollar a gallon. But a check of several area gas stations Monday failed to find another station with unleaded prices less than a dollar.

Harry Hinkle, president of Hinkle Distributors, an area gasoline wholesaler, said gas price decreases recently have been passed on throughout the distribution chain — from the refinery to the gas station.

But Hinkle said despite the decreases, stations selling gas for close to a dollar or less are likely nursing a very thin profit margin.

"The margins now are way below what they were in the past," said Hinkle, who estimated that when the gas market is strong, refineries, wholesalers and retailers each take their cut from about an 8- to 10-cent profit spread.

"If you're doing real poorly, you might have a penny or two" spread from which to exact profits, said Hinkle. "We're much closer to a penny than we are to 10 cents. We're all trying to keep a piece of a shrinking pie.

"It's real competitive," said Hinkle, who added that retailers selling gas for "real close" to cost is indicative of the competition for Midland's automobile gas tanks.

Hinkle said that because lower gasoline prices are both a help and a hindrance in Midland, where petroleum production fuels the area economy, declining gas prices mean "we might find the whole country pulling out of the recession at our expense."

Ralph Arrell, vice president of Eddins-Walcher Co., a wholesaler which supplies several local industrial accounts and a smattering of service stations, thinks lower prices reflect an attempt by refineries to dispose of large reserves. He said he expects gas prices to stop falling as refineries dispose of their price-depressing reserves.

Arrell said at least two West Texas refineries announced price increases during the last few days.

He said the additional nickel-a-gallon federal gasoline tax, set to take effect April 1, should send prices back up at the pump. The extra nickel tax will bring the federal surcharge to 9 cents on each gallon of gas. Proceeds from the tax are targeted for road repairs and construction.

Because retailers must pay the extra gas tax on their inventories as of April 1, Arrell said most retailers won't be rushing to fill their storage tanks to beat the impending tax hike.

But Arrell predicted area motorists will rush to "fill 'er up" before the tax begins.

"They're going to all want those tanks nice and full on Thursday the 31st," he said. "It'll be like Fourth of July weekend and Christmas all rolled into one." Arrell said he wouldn't be surprised to see spot shortages at some area gas stations March 31.

Suit filed by Odessan claims he was 'unlawfully restrained'

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

An Odessa convict who claims he was cajoled into pleading guilty and settling for three concurrent life sentences in state prison has filed a writ of habeas corpus in federal court here to show cause why he should be imprisoned in the first place.

The Odessan, Henry Newton Jones, who was arrested in 1980 for aggravated kidnapping, aggravated rape and burglary of a habitation, claims the Ector County district attorney offered him "three life sentences" in exchange for his guilty pleas. However, the DA's offer was made without Jones' having benefit of legal counsel, Jones alleges.

Later, Jones' court-appointed attorney, Gerald Lopez, advised him not to accept the DA's offer and suggested that he plead "not guilty" and present his case to a jury.

"Mr. Lopez immediately realized that the agreement was too severe," Jones wrote in his application for a writ of habeas corpus. "He (Lopez) felt that he might be able to work out a better deal with the district attorney," who in 1980 was John Green.

"However, the defendant was afraid that the district attorney would vacate his original offer if he (Jones)...did not cooperate. Mr. Lopez states that he would be eligible for parole in 20 years in any case."

Jones notes in his application that Lopez admonished him not to plead guilty and not to accept the DA's offer but that Jones "remained adamant about taking the prosecutor's offer."

As a result, Jones reasons that he was "thus effectively denied counseled plea bargaining with the prosecutor."

Jones notes that he, without legal counsel, "agreed to what was essentially the maximum sentence" for the offenses.

"In spite of the best efforts of his appointed attorney, (Jones)....insisted on pleading guilty to three life sentences," Jones says. "The state...was able to indelibly establish the erroneous impression that there were significant differences between three life sentences running concurrently and three not running concurrently."

He pleaded guilty before the judge in 161st State District Court in Odessa.

Jones notes that he "followed through on his uncounseled agreement although his appointed attorney advised him that he may be able to strike a better bargain or even a jury might not impose so strict a sentence."

Jones admits that Lopez was "vehemently opposed" to his accepting the DA's original offer.

Nevertheless, Jones maintains that he was "irreparably harmed by the fact that he was not appointed or afforded an attorney at the most critical stage of his prosecution."

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton is to hear Jones' case of alleged unlawful restraint.

MISD teachers voice discontent at candidates' forum

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

If one thing was apparent at the Meet the Candidates Forum Monday afternoon, it was the teachers' adamant disapproval of a few school board policies.

Before the meeting, the three candidates for Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees were unaware of the degree of teacher discontent, they said.

About 15 teachers, principals and administrators attended the forum, sponsored by Midland Educators Association.

"I'm hearing all of this now, but I don't think the board knows," said Ron Britton, unopposed candidate for re-election to Place 1.

Complaints against board policies requiring teachers to phone parents of students whose grades drop by two letter grades during a semester and to issue an automatic 50 to a child who has four unexcused absences occupied much of the meeting.

Also, inconsistency with a teacher promotion policy of "promoting from within" was referred to as a "fallacy of policy" by at least one teacher.

CANDIDATES FOR Place 2 on the board, incumbent Bill Jackson and challenger Gil Kenney, also attended the two-hour session.

Teachers, one who came equipped with a thick book of logged phone calls, complained about the time and effort wasted in trying to contact parents of students with rapidly falling grades by telephone.

Since many schools require three-week progress reports, teachers said they felt that was ample communication.

Gil Kenney

The policy of phoning parents was approved by board members following reports of teachers being verbally abused by angry parents at the school after their children received unsatisfactory grades.

"The whole idea was to make sure we were protecting the teachers," Britton said.

Britton, the only board member to vote against the policy, said, "I think it's ridiculous we have y'all trying to call parents. The ones y'all are having trouble with can't be reached by phone anywhere.

"I wanted it to be a one-time written response. You can call, fine. But if you don't get ahold of them, drop a letter — then get on with your business of teaching the other kids. I want it changed back. If you write a letter one time and see that it's delivered to parents, they can't come back and say 'the teacher never contacted me.' "

"I think we're trying desperately to teach these children some responsibility and at the same time, we're bending over backwards to do the parents' responsibilities," one teacher said. "Aren't we spending thousands and thousands of dollars (on paperwork for progress reports?)"

According to Alma Marshall, MEA immediate past president, a "lengthy comment" made by her at the meeting prior to the board's vote on the policy, was ignored. "Nobody seemed to stop and take even a little hesitation as to the problems we teachers may have (with the phoning). For one thing, we don't have enough phones and we use other systems such as grading reports (to communicate with parents.)"

"WHAT WE ATTEMPTED to do was set up a system we felt was better than what we had," Jackson said. "It's not etched in stone but at least we made some attempt at bettering the communication between parents and teachers.

"If it's not working, let's look at it."

Teachers also complained about academically punishing a student for disciplinary problems. According to one teacher, the board policy of giving a student a 50 for the six-weeks grading period after the third unexcused absence does that.

The policy was approved on the recommendation of secondary principals to discourage unexcused absences, including those with parental permission, Jackson said.

Bill Jackson

Students who are planning to miss school can receive permission from teachers three days in advance in order to make up work. This applies to unexcused absences for a deer hunting trip or to look at a college campus.

But a problem arises when teachers and the principal do not grant permission.

"If he missed, he just missed," one teacher said. "Put the responsibility on him."

"It's a fallacy of policy," another said. "The kids will go anyway and call in sick."

"The problem is there is no consistency," Britton said. "One teacher wouldn't call if the kid missed 20 days."

Another policy — or the inconsistency with which it is handled — is the within-district promotion of staff to fill vacancies.

"I PERCEIVE a morale problem here," Ms. Marsall said. "People feel we've been inundated by people from other places and that our people's blood, sweat and tears are being ignored."

"I've heard those rumors but when you look at the total numbers..." Britton said, referring to district-wide transfers and promotions of teachers, principals and administrators. "We started the intern program to have more people trained to do the job."

Interns this year were placed at each freshman high and high school.

"The first place you need to look is in your school district," Jackson said. "But I always ask one question: 'Is this the best person we can find anywhere?' "

"I'm not aware we had any big problems with transfers and promotions," Britton said.

Kenney said he perceived the problem to be the unhappiness of people in-district who have met the qualifications — which the board and administrative staff has on paper — but feel they still are being overlooked.

At least eight persons from outside or with one year or less experience in the district were hired or promoted to administrative positions for the 1982-83 school year.

"I guarantee if you go back and collect job applications, you will find discrepancies (with the consistency of the policy)," Ms. Marshall said. "It's gotten to the point when certain positions are posted, people walk by the (bulletin) board and say, 'Hey, wanna bet who this one was written for?'"

Ron Britton

POSITIONS AT two elementary schools and Midland High School are open now.

"People are saying that the people involved in the writing of the criteria (for positions) are writing them with certain persons in mind," Ms. Marshall said.

"If they're doing it, they're doing it cleverly," Britton said. "I don't think there are any cinches on whose going to have those jobs until all seven (board members) have voted."

"There are teachers who believe the purge is on," one teacher said.

"That's erroneous," Britton said.

"Maybe," the teacher replied, "but when action speaks loudly..."

Midland College to institute program to provide special assistance

A Special Needs Coordinating Service begins this week at Midland College.

As a comprehensive community college with an open-door admissions policy, MC attracts many students who have special needs and aren't able to succeed in college without special assistance. Programs are being developed for academic under-achievers, women and handicapped students.

"Due to a variety of reasons, many students need some type of special assistance in order to be successful at Midland College," Dr. Richard Holmes, dean of Vocational Studies, said. "It can be social problems, low academic achievement, physical handicap, poor study skills or many other reasons."

Coordinator Wanda Phillips will work through vocational and technical instructors to identify students who are not making satisfactory progress.

"In order to help these students, instructors will have to recommend them for the Special Needs program," she said. "We will not try to identify these under-achieving students directly, but will be relying on the instructors who work closely with them."

She also will be developing support services for women to provide programs of career exploration and planning, especially for non-traditional employment in the job market.

"Too many women still feel that occupational opportunities are limited to certain jobs, while there are many options available to them," Mrs. Phillips said. "In today's economy, many young women will be employed for most of their adult lives. The two-income family is a reality and so is the single-parent household. Our goal is to open horizons. Today, many women re-enter the job market after having raised children and they don't realize there are so many possibilities for them."

The support services for vocational students may include special tutors, financial counseling, career planning or assistance for those with physical handicaps.

"Many persons with physical handicaps don't realize there are still many vocational courses and employment avenues open to them," Mrs. Phillips said. "We will be seeking out these people...both those already attending classes or those in the community who could benefit from the training. Once they are identified, we can provide special services to help them succeed in their studies, whether it's a sign language interpreter for the deaf or a guide for a person who's sightless."

Additional information may be obtained by contacting Mrs. Phillips at the Adult Learning Center, Room 127, Occupational-Technical Building, or by calling 684-7851, extension 243.

Farm workers hope legislature passes compensation insurance bills

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texas farm workers were to be making their first moves today to win approval of an ambitious legislative program when House and Senate committees take up measures to bring farm workers under worker's compensation insurance.

It won't be the first time for farm workers to make such a request, but the sponsors of the bills — HB 521 by Rep. Juan Hinojosa, D-McAllen, and SB 521 by Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville — are hoping this session will see the measures approved.

These will be the first hearings to pass a comprehensive program, reports Lafe Larson, who works in Austin with farm workers groups. The program also includes unemployment compensation, increasing minimum wages and creating an agricultural labor relations board.

Hinojosa says the bill on workers' compensation insurance will be amended in committee to exempt small family farms and ranches. As it's now written, the bill strikes the words "farm laborers" from the section of exemptions in the current law.

"This bill really is aimed at the large farming corporations and the large growers," says Hinojosa. He argues worker's compensation makes sense for farmers and ranchers because most "are not judgment proof," and could be subject to lawsuits if a worker who isn't covered by compensation coverage is injured or killed.

Also introduced is legislation bringing farm workers under unemployment compensation — HB 2173 by Rep. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin.

That measure would strike current exemptions for such workers and specifies types of employment which would be covered.

Barrientos' aide, Cappy White, said "90 percent of farm workers don't qualify for unemployment compensation and under the current law they never will."

The minimum wage legislation is carried in the House as HB 925 by Rep. Al Moreno, D-Edinburg, and in the Senate as SB 592 by Sen. Craig Washington, D-Houston. Those measures would strike current provisions relating to "piece rate workers" employed in agriculture, along with provisions relating to contract labor and use of "man days" calculating wages for agriculture workers.

The bills would set the minimum wage at $3.35 an hour or "20 cents an hour less than the federal minimum wage, whichever amount is higher."

Rep. Lloyd Criss, D-Texas City, is sponsor of HB 2287, providing for creation and operation of the Agricultural Labor Relations Board. This nine-member board would be appointed by the governor, with advice and consent of the Senate, with members serving five-year terms.

The board would be given powers to examine and subpoena records, investigate complaints and hold hearings regarding labor practices with penalties set for interfering with the board's operation or its agents.

Farm workers also are seeking to amend a law passed in 1981 which prohibited use of hoes with handles less than four feet long to cover other tools.

Postmistress braves Texas weather

PENWELL (AP) — Six mornings a week, the postmaster here proves that mail distribution doesn't have to be the sole reason for braving the whims of West Texas weather.

For Penwell Postmaster Shirley Been, the weather itself can be the motivation.

Each day, except Sundays and holidays, Mrs. Been steps outside the one-room Penwell Post Office on FM 1601 to do a second chore for Uncle Sam — taking 9 a.m. temperature and precipitation readings for the National Climatic Center in Asheville, N.C., a sister agency to the National Weather Service.

Mrs. Been, who was reared in Penwell but who now lives just west of Odessa, also records the high and low temperatures for the 24-hour period preceding her trek to the weather gauges.

At the end of each month, she sends a report to the weather center detailing her daily readings.

As is the case for thousands of other observers nationwide, Been doesn't get paid for the weather work.

With a population of 74, Penwell — 15 miles west of Odessa — is the only Ector County community that has a weather observer to relay both temperature and precipitation data to the national center. Odessa, the only other community in the county that sends data to the center, reports only daily precipitation readings.

A sand and dirt path leads to Mrs. Been's weather equipment. The path turns to mud on rainy days, and walking it on a cold winter morning during a spring windstorm or after a heavy rain can make the simple job difficult, she said.

"It's not much fun on cold days to go out there. On windy days, the gravel and tumbleweed is dirty, dirty," Mrs. Been said.

And there are other job-related discomforts — she once found a rattlesnake coiled under a box containing her thermometers. "You just remember to look out here."

But the job, she said, "is not that much of a problem. It's kind of fun."

Two thermometers — one to measure high temperatures, the other for low readings — and a thermograph that automatically charts temperatures around-the-clock are housed in a stilt-elevated wooden box that has slatted sides to allow for air flow.

Farther down the path, a cylindrical rain gauge stands ready to catch moisture. A measuring stick is dipped into the gauge to get a reading.

Mrs. Been, 47, said she became a weather observer 10 years ago — after a NWS representative from Lubbock asked her to do the job. "He said it wouldn't be hard," she recalled.

Since then, she has become a weather authority for Penwell. She said she receives calls and visits, often after extreme weather, at the post office.

"Especially when it rains, ranchers will call or come in and ask, 'Shirley, how much rain?'"

Men rob Odessa delicatessen

ODESSA — Two men who yelled, "This is a holdup" as they entered Sparky's Deli at 706 S. Grandview St. Monday night escaped with an undisclosed amount of cash after putting a gun to the clerk's throat.

The clerk told police officers the men, both of whom were armed with handguns, came in about 7:40 p.m. and ordered her to open the safe. When she told them she didn't have the combination, they took money from the cash register and from another employee's purse before fleeing on foot.

They were described as Hispanic, in their mid-20s and wearing bandanas and toboggan hats over their faces.

Bill would protect royalty owners

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A bill introduced by Midland Rep. Tom Craddick which creates a security interest on oil and gas for royalty owner's protection after an initial sale has been tentatively passed by the House on a voice vote.

No opposition was voiced to Craddick's HB 846, designed to protect royalty owners and producers when a purchaser "goes belly up."

The bill was reported favorably to the House by the Natural Resources Committee two weeks ago.

Cycle accident victim is stable

ODESSA — An Odessa man injured in a motorcycle accident Monday night was listed in stable condition at Medical Center Hospital this morning.

According to police, 38-year-old Robert Carl Ditmore suffered rib and chest injuries when the motorcycle he was riding slid out from under him as he rounded the corner of 52nd and Clover streets about 6:15 p.m.

Fire damages home's fireplace

A fire believed caused by a leaking gas line heavily damaged the fireplace, chimney and outside wall of the Vicki Baker residence at 3216 Travis about 9:20 p.m. Monday.

Five fire department units responded to the call and firemen spent an hour at the scene.

DEAR ABBY

New diagnosis

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to offer hope to other women who have possibly been misdiagnosed as I was.

My symptoms began almost 10 years ago. I went to my G.P., who sent me to a gynecologist, who said I had genital herpes. For 10 years I had periodic flare-ups that were most common after menstrual periods or sexual activity. These episodes caused a tremendous strain on my emotional system as well as my marriage. I can't begin to tell you the pain and frustration it caused, or the tears I shed.

Finally, in desperation I went to another gynecologist. Bless him! He told me that I did not have a trace of herpes. What I DID have was an allergy to the dye in the colored toilet tissue I had been using for years!

This allergy had been keeping me in a constant state of irritation for years. Since learning of this and using only unscented, white toilet tissue, I have been symptom-free!

If any of your readers are in doubt about a herpes diagnosis, I urge them to consider seeing another doctor. Doing so changed my life. — THE NEW ME

DEAR ME: Thanks for wanting to help others. Many women will bless you. But I'm not so sure about the manufacturers of scented, colored toilet tissue.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I recently spent four days of our vacation with my brother and his wife. We had a wonderful time except for one thing — there was no window shade in the guest room, and the curtains were so sheer that we were awakened at sunrise every day.

After the first night, my brother asked us how we had slept, and I told him that we had slept very well but not long enough, thanks to "Ol' Mr. Sol."

Nothing was done about covering the window so that we could sleep longer. I felt that my comment was taken as an insult, though it wasn't intended to be.

Abby, I try to do all I can to make our guests' visits enjoyable, and I would welcome suggestions on how to add to their comfort. Was I wrong to point out the problem? Or should I have kept my mouth shut? — SLEEPY-EYED

DEAR SLEEPY-EYED: You were not wrong to have pointed out the problem. Most hosts would have appreciated your candor and done something about it. Now that you've seen the light, buy eyeshades for your next visit.

AT WIT'S END

Housework

By ERMA BOMBECK

When over half of the mothers in this country got a job outside the home, the problem of who was to do all the domestic chores went to Plan A. Plan A was simple enough. The entire family would share equally in running the house.

To be honest, Plan A never got any farther than, "If you're sure you've got the flu, Margaret, I can go out and bring in a pizza."

It should be obvious that what this country needs is a Plan B: a paradise where no one cleans the house. It cleans itself.

Several people are on the right track, but ironically women aren't picking up on the idea. A housewife from Kentucky wrote that when a woman appeared on the Phil Donahue show who had created a self-cleaning house, the women in the audience practically ridiculed her.

I say get hold of yourselves, girls, we've got momentum going here. What's so weird about storing your dishes in a cupboard that also washes and dries them? Huh? Or a bathtub that is always warm because it serves as a furnace outlet?

The woman from Kentucky said the first thing she'd eliminate in a house are the closets. She would substitute a "clothes processing room." This is the way it would work. You'd line it with shelves, clothes rods, washer and dryer and EVERYONE'S clothes would be in this room. The only way they'd leave is on someone's back. Your clothes would be washed, ironed and mended here and everyone would dress and undress here.

Maybe we should take a good look at computerized homes where you don't have a door key, but a code number, and the lights go on and off by themselves and the heat and air conditioning are controlled by computers.

A robot would even say hello when you walk in the door, which is more than I ever got.

One thing is certain, women can no longer go on trying to maintain a house in the same way their mothers and grandmothers did. If they try, they're going to end up in a ha-ha home.

When you think of it, it's ironic that when this country went to the two-paycheck family, all the other problems got priority: How can I dress for success on a budget? How can I cook dinner in 15 minutes? How can I earn equal money for work of comparable value? Where can I get the best child care? What are the psychological pitfalls of earning more than my husband?

All that is academic. What it really boils down to is, "Who takes out the garbage and who changes the toilet tissue spindles?"

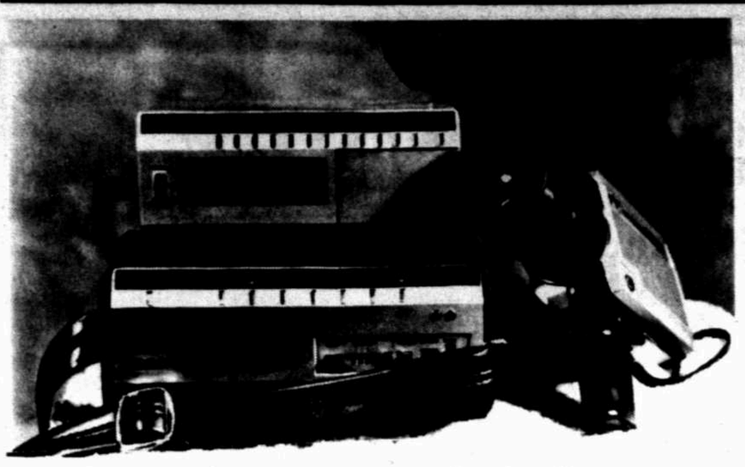
Where your money makes a difference.



Aaron Salton, manager of Fast Photo Service, offers a new service which can give you a permanent record of your valued possessions. It's called "Immediate Inventory" and is a video taped recording of your valuables for reference in case of fire or theft. Call Fast Photo Service for an appointment in your home or place of business at 699-5041.

'Immediate Inventory' at Fast Photo Service

Have you been meaning to inventory your possessions, but just consider it a headache? Now Fast Photo Service can give you a complete home inventory of your valuables with a new service. It's called "Immediate Inventory", and it's fast becoming the sensible way to assure you have a complete record of your treasured possessions in case of fire or theft.

Here's how it works. Call Fast Photo Service and make an appointment. A professional cameraman will come to your home or office, set up and video tape the objects you wish to have a record of for future reference. Then, keep the video cassette in a safe or lockbox as a sight and sound recording of your valuable possessions. For your protection, Fast Photo is bonded and insured.

There are many uses for this video taping service, such as weddings or other special events. A video cassette of these once-in-a-lifetime events can provide you with a permanent record which cannot be duplicated by photographs alone.

Of course, Fast Phot still offers their one-hour film processing service. And with Easter coming up, you'll want those shots of the children on Easter morning back as quickly as possible. You can count on the quality of the prints as well, as Fast Photo gives not only fast service, but personal service, to their customers. Fast Photo also uses only Kodak papers for their prints.

Fast Photo stocks all types of Kodak and Fuji films, as well, and if you've bought a VIP card, you can save money on replacement film in sizes 110, 126, 135, color slide film and black & white film. Ask about the VIP card the next time you come in. It can really save you money.

Fast Photo has several other convenient services, such as one-day service on black and white processing; in fact, Fast Photo is one of the few places in town who will process black and white film; studio passport photos while you wait; and, if you're in a hurry, there's a convenient drive-in window on the east side of the store, as well as a "night drop" located at the front of the store for after hours.

Fast Photo Service is conveniently located at Midkiff and Cuthbert in the Town & Country Shopping Center. Their hours are Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. and on Saturday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Jerry Riel, owner of Jerry's Sheet Metal Co., 700 N. Ft. Worth is proud to handle the Payne line of home comfort products. With summer just around the corner, now is the time to install a Payne quality air conditioner in your home. For more information, give Jerry a call at 684-4495 or 682-0395.

Prepare for summer with Payne cool air

Spring is here, and it's a delight to enjoy the mild temperatures and cool evenings; however, that sure won't last long. In a few weeks, we'll begin to feel the effects of that hot West Texas sun. So, whether you're building a lovely new home or just managed to make it through last summer with your old air conditioner, now is the perfect time to install cool, energy-efficient Payne air conditioning. Jerry's Sheet Metal, located at 700 N. Ft. Worth, has a complete line of Payne air conditioners, and has years of experience in helping Midlanders beat the summer heat.

Of course, Payne has been manufacturing quality products since 1914, and has placed customer satisfaction above anything else. This caring for their customers has been the primary goal for Payne, but there is something else which is equally as important: making sure their products are not only efficient, but economical as well.

This dedication to efficiency and economy has resulted in the design and construction of high efficiency home comfort products which use less energy, which means your fuel bills can be kept within manageable limits.

Payne air conditioners operate so quietly, you may not even know they are running—except of course, you'll feel the gentle cooling atmosphere of your home.

In addition to the Payne line of air conditioners, Jerr's Sheet Metal also has the Payne heat pump for warming your home in the winter.

For more information about installation of a Payne air conditioning system in your home, call Jerry's Sheet Metal, 684-4495 or 682-0395 Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. You'll get a good deal from Jerry Riel and his professional, factory-trained staff.

Princess Diana is surrounded by a sea of Australian flags and adoring school children during a visit to the School of the Air, Alice Springs, Australia.

Children of outback greet Charles, Diana

TENNANT CREEK, Australia (AP) — More than 600 Aboriginal children journeyed to this outback town by bus today to greet a sunburnt Prince Charles and Princess Diana and present them with a hunting boomerang.

Charles, dressed in a safari suit, waved the primitive weapon toward some of the 100-odd reporters accompanying the royal couple on their six-week tour of Australia and New Zealand.

"Perhaps I can use it on the press," he joked.

The 21-year-old princess, a favorite target of British tabloids, was dogged by reporters as she trudged, red-faced and bare-legged, on a 20-minute tour of this former gold and copper mining center on the edge of the Simpson Desert.

"I can't cope with the heat very well," said the fair-skinned Diana, provoking reports in London tabloids she was suffering from sunstroke.

"Are you kidding?" replied Charles' press secretary, Victor Chapman, when asked about the reports. "Absolute rubbish, and that's quotable."

Charles himself told a woman who remarked on his peeling nose that he loved the weather, which approached 90 degrees.

"When you come from England, all you want to see is the sun," he said.

The Aboriginal children from 14 schools and their teachers traveled as far as 500 miles across the parched red countryside to catch a glimpse of the 34-year-old heir to the British throne and his bride.

Among them were the Walpuri, known as "dog dreaming children" because their tribal totem is the native wild dog or dingo, which they had painted on their T-shirts specially for the royal visit.

Most of the children, who come from places with no newspapers, radio stations or television, acknowledged they knew little about Charles or Diana.

One young aboriginal boy named Jacko said he thought Buckingham Palace was "a million miles that way," pointing south.

"They got plenty water," said another boy from a region where it rains no more than three days a year.

"They got plenty beer at his palace too," his friend added.

One young schoolboy greeted Charles with a question: "are you the king?"

Currency realignment completed

By DAVID MASON
Chief European Correspondent

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Leaders of the 10-nation European Common Market conclude a regular thrice-yearly summit today, their attention turned to the Middle East, East-West relations and perennial internal problems.

Their return to more routine questions follows successful conclusion Monday of a seventh realignment of eight currencies in the community's monetary regulatory body.

After marathon sessions over the weekend extending into Monday, finance ministers in the European Monetary System revalued upward the healthy West German mark by 5.5 percent against a fixed central rate, and devalued the ailing French franc by 2.5 percent. The move was designed to boost sales of French exports to help France reduce its $13.6 billion foreign trade deficit.

Though the U.S. dollar was not directly involved in the new parity fixings, it rose sharply against the mark, the franc and other currencies in the European Monetary System.

If the trend were maintained, it would mean cheaper European holidays for tourists with dollars and other strong non-European currencies. It would also mean easier markets abroad for European products.

Gerhard Stoltenberg, West German finance minister who chaired the monetary system crisis session, hailed the agreement, saying failure "would have been very serious for European cooperation."

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, French President Francois Mitterrand and the seven other chiefs of state or government touched briefly late Monday on such issues as youth unemployment, acid-rain pollution and the persistent problem of contributions to the economic bloc's common budget.

Mrs. Thatcher contends Britain contributes an unfairly large sum to the budget. While there is general agreement that a long-range readjustment must be made to the bloc's budgeting methods, progress has been slow.

The British leader urged speedy action on the budget problem, reminding her colleagues she must call an election within coming months and failure to meet Britain's demands would encourage resentment for the Common Market in Britain. The 10 leaders were expected to publish a statement on the Middle East, reasserting their 1980 Venice Declaration which called for recognition of Israel's right to exist and a role for the Palestine Liberation Organization in peace negotiations.

The Common Market leaders also were expected to make a fresh assessment of Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov, who took power last Nov. 12, following the death of President Leonid I. Brezhnev.

At their last summit in Copenhagen Dec. 3-4, the European leaders called on Andropov to "make the necessary contributions to improve confidence in international affairs."

Besides Britain, West Germany and France, the Common Market also includes Italy, Denmark, the Netherlands, Ireland, Luxembourg, Greece and Belgium. Its total population is about 270 million.

Founded in 1957 by the Treaty of Rome, the Common Market is the biggest single trading bloc in the world. Its founders hoped it would one day become a "United States of Europe" with political as well as economic integration.

But no member country has been willing to cede the necessary sovereignty for the community to integrate politically.

However, on some international issues, the Common Market has spoken with one voice.

Three years ago the Venice Declaration brought the countries together on a Middle East peace initiative.The community also has united on attitudes toward the crackdown in Poland and the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

During the Falklands Islands war last year, the community levied trade and arms sanctions against Argentina at Britain's request.

Relations between the Common Market and the United States have been strained in recent years.

Last summer, the United States threatened to slap extra import duties on European steel imports, claiming the heavily subsidized European industry was competing unfairly with U.S. steel companies. A compromise averted a crisis.

Nicaraguan, Honduran war feared

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist Sandinista government says it verges on war with neighboring Honduras because of escalating fighting between army troops and Honduran-based rebels that has killed 270 people since February.

"Our troops, planes, tanks, artillery and our entire armament are ready to take action against the anti-Sandinistas and the puppet armies of any country," Defense Minister Humberto Ortega told a news conference late Monday.

"The situation is serious, not from the threat of the (rebel) bands, but from a danger of war with Honduras because of the support that the Honduran army gives these groups."

The government identified one of the rebel organizers as Adolfo Calero Portocarrero, a businessman who owned a Coca-Cola bottling concession in Nicaragua until he left the country in December for exile in Costa Rica.

Two hours after the news conference, 20 policemen took over the bottling plant, telling workers that they were "intervening" because the plant's earnings had been used to support the "counterrevolution."

It was not immediately clear if the government intended to close the plant, which employs an estimated 1,000 Nicaraguans.

Ortega said Nicaraguan soldiers and militias were battling at least 1,200 rebels backed by "Yankee imperialism" — an apparent reference to the U.S.-backed Honduran military — in areas of Matagalpa and Jinotega provinces.

He said 205 rebels, 57 Nicaraguan troopers and eight civilians have been killed in the intensified fighting that began last month. At least 104 anti-government guerrillas, 40 Nicaraguan soldiers and 20 civilians had been reported wounded or missing, Ortega said.

A state of military emergency has been in effect since March 1982 in Jinotega and four other provinces along the Honduran border because of frequent clashes between rebels and government troops. But Monday was the first time officials acknowledged fighting as far south as Matagalpa, in central Nicaragua about 60 miles from the Honduran border.

The rebel Nicaraguan Democratic Force claimed late Sunday its forces controlled the towns of San Ramon, Muy Muy, Los LLanos and San Dionisio in the northern part of Matagalpa.

But Ortega said rebel attempts to takes towns in the area had failed and "they have practically been wiped out."

Elections planned for war-torn El Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The U.S.-backed government of interim President Alvaro Magana is planning general elections and an amnesty for leftist guerrillas in an effort to pacify this war-torn nation.

But political analysts say it is too early to predict whether the rebels, locked in a 3½-year struggle to topple the government, will accept the overture.

Pressured by the Reagan administration, Magana announced March 6 that he was moving up the date for general elections, originally scheduled for 1984, to December. This week he is studying an amnesty plan by a government peace commission. He is expected to send it to the Constituent Assembly within days.

Whether rebels decide to lay down their weapons and participate in the election "will depend on a lot of things that happen in the next few weeks — how amnesty gets worked out, the security arrangements for their candidates and other factors," said a foreign diplomat who asked not to be identified.

The rebels' initial reaction has been negative. Their clandestine Radio Venceremos charged last week that the amnesty offer and promise of elections were "a crude attempt to halt the collapse of the regime" and justify continued U.S. aid to the government.

But the Peace Commission's president, Francisco Quinonez, told The Associated Press on Monday he is convinced many rebels will accept amnesty once they learn details of the plan.

The proposal provides for economic aid to guerrillas who accept amnesty and, unlike an amnesty offer in 1980, does not require them to surrender to the army and confess their rebel activities.

"I think that is one of the characteristics that limited in great measure acceptance" of the previous offer, Quinonez said.

"Many of these people don't have a way to earn a living. That is why the plan includes a rehabilitation committee," Quinonez said.

He said the committee would help rebels who turned themselves in to get work and loans.

Leftists refused to participate in elections for the Constituent Assembly last March. Though their participation in the December elections is still in doubt, the effort to achieve political power through the ballot box instead of a gun barrel is already under way.

Herzog elected president

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israeli Parliament today rebuffed Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government by electing the opposition's candidate for the largely ceremonial post of president.

Labor Party legislator Chaim Herzog, 64, a former general and diplomat, defeated Supreme Court Justice Menachem Elon, 60, a member of Begin's ruling coalition.

The vote was 61-57 on the first ballot in the 120-seat Knesset, Israel's Parliament. Speaker Menachem Savidor said afterward that two votes in the secret balloting were left blank.

'Specialists' aid Lebanon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has sent 70 military training specialists, including 28 Green Berets, to help the Lebanese army while Congress considers a $251 million military aid package.

The Lebanese army would play a key role in maintaining anti-terrorist security after Israeli and other foreign forces withdraw from the country.

A House Mideast subcommittee begins consideration of the aid request today.

Lt. Col. Mark Foutch said manpower in 16 Lebanese battalions was increased to 75 percent from 50 percent by February. He said sending the new training specialists opens a second phase in U.S. assistance to the Lebanese army.

Carrier demonstrations end

SASEBO, Japan (AP) — Riot police have taken down the barricades and the 7,000 anti-American demonstrators have left town or gone back to work, leaving the streets of Sasebo to the U.S. Navy today.

Groups of the more than 6,000 crew members of the nuclear-powered U.S. aircraft carrier Enterprise, here for four days of shore leave, swarmed through streets where the "Get out of Japan!" banners had given way overnight to signs in shops saying "Welcome Navy."

Chief arrested

MONTREAL (AP) — Henri Marchessault, scourge of local drug dealers as chief of the Montreal police drug squad for more than three years, has been arrested and charged with narcotics trafficking.

Marchessault, who faced a court hearing today, is a 25-year veteran.

Israeli leader denies charges

ALEY, Lebanon (AP) — Israel's commander in Lebanon, denying Marine charges that his troops shoot carelessly into civilian zones, says he cannot understand why the leathernecks act "as if we are their greatest enemy in the area."

Gen. Amnon Lifkin, in an interview Monday, also said his soldiers have strict orders to avoid any conflict with the Marine contingent of the multinational peacekeeping force in Beirut.

Protesters plan to block train which may be carrying nuclear warheads

BANGOR, Wash. (AP) — A prayer vigil began today outside the Navy's West Coast base for Trident submarines, as protesters planned to block a train which they claim is loaded with 100 nuclear warheads.

Hundreds of demonstrators were massing along a country road paralleling railroad tracks outside the submarine base at Bangor and several people planned to risk arrest by blocking the tracks leading to the base, protest leaders said.

The vigil began around midnight with the arrival of a group of Japanese Buddhist monks from the Nippon Myo Hoji (temple), who are staying on nearby Bainbridge Island, said Marya Barr, a volunteer with the Ground Zero Center for Non-Violent Action near Bangor.

"We've got calls from Seattle, Olympia, Tacoma, people coming here instead of their own towns," Ms. Barr said.

About 20 protesters held hands and prayed aloud Monday afternoon outside the Burlington Northern railroad yard in downtown Spokane when the train passed through.

The train includes two engines, 14 white cars and a caboose. Two of the cars have what appear to be gun turrets on top. Government officials have not confirmed the train's cargo, although they say it is specially equipped to carry nuclear weapons.

Anti-nuclear groups believe the train is carrying about 100 warheads from the Pantex Corp. nuclear plant outside Amarillo, Texas, to the Trident base for loading onto the recently arrived USS Michigan submarine. Trident subs can carry 24 multiple-warhead nuclear missiles.

Protesters have tracked the train since Friday as it rolled out of Texas, through Colorado, Montana, Idaho and Washington.

Man charged in son's burning held

FULLERTON, Calif. (AP) — A divorced father charged with attempted murder and arson for allegedly setting fire to his 8-year-old son was held in lieu of $250,000 bond pending an April 15 hearing.

Charles D. Rothenberg, 42, of New York City, pleaded innocent Monday to charges stemming from a fire at a Buena Park motel March 3 that left his son, David, with second- and third-degree burns over most of his body. The boy remained hospitalized Monday in critical condition.

Rothenberg was arrested March 9 in San Francisco after a nationwide manhunt.

Environmentalists' protest succeeds

DOYLESTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Environmentalists who sought to block a new water pumping project on the Delaware River say their 63-day vigil outside Bucks County Courthouse succeeded by getting a public vote on the project.

Study reveals bias

BALTIMORE (AP) — A year-long study of apartment complexes in the Baltimore area, using undercover volunteers, found that almost half of the complexes surveyed are reluctant to rent to blacks, a housing group says.

The survey used 63 undercover volunteers, both black and white, who posed as potential tenants at 35 apartment complexes, said Donald J. Miller, associate director of Baltimore Neighborhoods Inc.

Miller said 16 of the complexes, which account for 9,944 apartments, discriminated against blacks.

Miller wouldn't identify the complexes, but said his nonprofit group is planning legal action against some of the landlords.

"We don't want them to change their practices or to build a case against us. We don't want them to give our evidence away to the public," Miller told a news conference Monday.

The white volunteers visited the complexes and applied for apartments and within an hour, black volunteers would do the same, Miller said.

Doctors 'concerned' about Clark's condition

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Barney Clark's deteriorating kidney function and recurring fever have sent "concerned" doctors back to the lab, looking for a possible infection that may have caused another setback for the artificial heart recipient.

Clark was still listed in fair condition today, his 111th on the plastic heart, but University of Utah Medical Center spokeswoman Anne Brillinger said his physicians were worried.

She said Monday that Clark's kidney functions had deteriorated over a 24-hour period. Results of lab tests today could determine whether an infection is responsible, she said.

"They (Clark's doctors) are concerned about it," Ms. Brillinger said.

The 62-year-old retired dentist has experienced an intermittent fever for the past two weeks, hospital and family sources said.

Clark's daughter-in-law, Terry Clark of Seattle, said she learned of the fever Sunday night from Clark's wife, Una Loy.

"I've gotten the impression he's been running a fever off and on, up and down, for the past two weeks," she said Monday. "I think what everyone doesn't realize is just how sick he is."

Director of Nursing Helen Kee said late Monday that doctors did not yet know how serious the infection might be. "I think anything can be serious for Dr. Clark, but it's also treatable.

"I would be inclined to wait for the laboratory reports," she said. "I think everybody has a wait-and-see attitude."

Seven protesters lie on the street blockading a line of cars going into the main gate at Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., as a military security official points at them early Monday morning. The demonstrators are protesting the testing of nuclear missiles on the base.

Demonstrators vow to continue anti-nuclear protest at base

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Security forces were put on alert again today as demonstrators vowed to continue an anti-nuclear protest campaign that has led to 415 arrests at this sprawling missiles testing site.

Demonstrators, who blockaded the main gate of Vandenberg Air Force Base on Monday, promised to keep up acts of civil disobedience through Wednesday.

The base commander, meanwhile, expressed concern for the protesters' safety.

"I have men out there with loaded weapons," said Maj. Gen. Jack L. Watkins. "I'm concerned that younger people would be encouraged to put themselves in a position where they could be harmed."

Watkins said military security officers were prepared for "large numbers" of demonstrators at the base 130 miles northwest of Los Angeles.

Five or six demonstrators were captured at the Missile Assembly Building, about eight miles inside the base, Watkins said.

Pam Benda of the Nuclear Resistence Coalition said the protest would continue, "with some people trying to penetrate the base...from the back country."

Watkins said in Los Angeles that 16 demonstrators were stopped inside the rugged, rural northern section of the base and another 18 were picked up hiking along a high ridge.

The demonstrators have demanded an end to first-strike nuclear missiles and an end to use of Pacific islands as a test range. They were organized by a group called the Vandenberg Action Coalition.

Beginning early Monday, Air Force security personnel detained at least 280 people for blockading or trespassing on the base. California Highway Patrol and Santa Barbara County sheriff's deputies arrested another 135 men, women and children for blocking roadways.

It was the second major anti-nuclear protest at the base this year.

Watkins said at a news conference that he had asked the U.S. attorney to seek stiffer penalties for the demonstrators to deter them from repeating their actions.

Hollywood has little respect for stars, Joan Fontaine says

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Academy Award-winning actress Joan Fontaine says Hollywood shows too little respect for its stars, adding that filmmakers — particularly in television — have forsaken depth to go commercial.

Joan Fontaine

"I'm not bitter about the way Hollywood is now — I live in New York," Ms. Fontaine, 65, said Monday before giving a speech at the University of Toledo on the "golden years" of the film industry.

Ms. Fontaine, who won an Oscar for her role in Alfred Hitchcock's "Suspicion" in 1940, says she prefers life on the lecture circuit to being on television.

After going to Hollywood recently to film a segment for a television series, the program's producers wouldn't give her a car, she said. They told her to take a taxi, Ms. Fontaine said.

"TV films are what we used to call 'B' movies back then," Ms. Fontaine said. "There is no delving into a character."

Ms. Fontaine walks with the aid of a cane because of a bout of fibromyositis, a muscle inflammation triggered by the flu. But she still makes it to the golf course. "I got my second hole-in-one in July and I'm hoping for the third one next July," she said.

COARSEGOLD, Calif. (AP) — Richard Kiel, the steel-toothed baddie in two James Bond movies, says he's finally getting the chance to play a good guy.

The 7-foot-2 semi-villain of "The Spy Who Loved Me" and "Moonraker" said Monday he recently completed shooting for a guest role on the "Simon and Simon" television series which will be aired soon.

"That was really exciting for me," the actor said. "I'm a good guy. I get the girl and even get to kiss the girl which is the first time for me in my nearly 23 years in the business."

Kiel makes his home in Coarsegold, a rural Sierra Nevada foothill community about 200 miles north of Hollywood.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Conductor-composer Gunther Schuller, who delayed a 1981 performance with the Pittsburgh Symphony while fuming backstage over some program notes, is back in the city with another complaint.

Schuller says he is angry because he hasn't been given enough time to rehearse for this week's performances of Beethoven's "Fidelio" by the Pittsburgh Opera.

"You guys (the critics) will be saying Schuller didn't keep the orchestra together," he said. "It won't be my fault. When I accepted this gig I had no idea I would have so little rehearsal time. What am I supposed to do, perform a miracle? I tried to break my contract but I can't and I am sick about it."

In 1981, Schuller was furious over inaccuracies about his music in Pittsburgh Symphony program notes and delayed the program's start for seven minutes. It turned out, however, that Schuller's own office had sent along wrong information.

NEW YORK (AP) — The national director of the Guardian Angels patrol group, Lisa Sliwa, says she will help police look for the "animals" she said beat and tried to rape her — but vowed the Angels also will take matters into their own hands.

Mrs. Sliwa, 29, released from a New York City hospital Monday, said she and her husband, Angel founder Curtis Sliwa, plan to distribute 50,000 copies of a "wanted" poster guaranteeing a $10,000 reward to anyone who can lead them to the men who assaulted her.

She told police three men attacked her last Tuesday afternoon in the hallway of the group's new Manhattan headquarters.

Millersville State College police director J. David Smith, background, escorts an unidentified man from the Lancaster, Pa., police station Monday. The man, whose identity is still not known, used false credentials to teach at two Pennsylvania colleges.

False identities let man teach

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — At one college he was economics professor Peter H. Pearse; at the other he was computer science professor John Byron Hext. At home his landlady knew him as Anthony S. Williams. On the arrest warrant he was "John Doe."

Police, who even had trouble getting the man's fingerprints because they were so faint, were still trying to determine his identity as the man sat in Lancaster County Prison in lieu of $40,000 bail.

He asked to be arraigned as Anthony S. Williams at his appearance Monday before District Justice Doris James.

Meanwhile, academic committees at Millersville State College and Shippensburg State College are reviewing classes taught by the professor, to decide if students should be given credit.

"Whatever else they discover, this man was bright and capable — and burning the candle at both ends," said Dr. Keith Lovin, provost at Millersville.

"He must have been a master to teach at two schools at the same time," said Lancaster Police Captain Luther Henry.

The bearded man, in his 50s, faces charges of theft by deception, tampering with public records and false swearing for posing as Hext at Shippensburg, police said.

He could face additional charges for his employment at Millersville, where he taught business and economics using the name of Pearse, claiming he held a doctorate from the University of Edinburgh in Scotland.

The colleges are about 75 miles apart. The man began working at both schools last fall, holding classes on staggered days.

At Shippensburg, "Hext" taught a graduate course in Hardware-Software Systems and Computer Programming II, a sophomore course. He was paid $30,000 a year.

At Millersville, "Pearse" taught Introduction to Quantitative Concepts, a freshman statistics course, and Managerial Finance and Investment Analysis, two sophomore-level courses. He earned $28,000 a year there, the criminal complaint said.

TEXAS DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH
PUBLIC HEALTH REGION
PUBLIC NOTICE

Public input concerning local health needs is being sought by the Texas Department of Health (TDH) in preliminary planning for the distribution of Maternal and Child Health and Preventive Health block grant funds in Texas for fiscal 1984.

Consumers and providers of services are invited to attend a preliminary block grant hearing at 1:30 p.m., on March 30, at George Mahon Library, 1306 9th Street, Lubbock, Texas.

Information and recommendations are requested at the preliminary public hearing to assist the TDH in drafting an intended use of the federal funds report so that grant funds will go to the areas and programs needing them the most.

The public will also be able to review this report in public hearings to be scheduled later.

Funding for the Maternal and Child Health block grant for 1983 is $16,207,596. Maternal and Child Health Services, Crippled Children's Services, Lead Based Poisoning Prevention, Hemophilia Treatment, Adolescent Pregnancy programs, services for disabled children through the Social Security Income Program, and the Sudden Infant Death Syndrome program, are included in the grant.

The funding level for the Preventive Health and Health Services block grant for 1983 is $3,569,223. Programs consolidated into this block grant and administered by the TDH include Hypertension Control, Fluoridation, Training for Health Aides, Health Education-Risk Reduction, Emergency Medical Services, Rodent Control, Rape Prevention and Crisis Services, and the Local Health Department Health Incentive (314d).

Comments on the administration of the Primary Care block grant will also be accepted. The Primary Care block grant combines the funding for projects under the Community Health Centers Program, charged with the responsibility of delivering health services to underserved areas.

If you are unable to attend the preliminary block grant public hearing, written testimony will also be accepted on or before April 1, 1983, and can be forwarded to: Ms. Terry Bleier, Chief of the Office of Grants and Contract Development, Texas Department of Health, 1100 West 49th Street, Austin, Texas, 78756. Phone: 512-458-7640.

For more information regarding the preliminary block grant hearing, please contact Public Health Region 2/12, at 4709 66th Street, Lubbock, Texas 79414, (806) 797-4331.
