Sept. 21 - Magic Date?

By STERLING F. GREEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON AP — There is widening belief in the administration that September 21 is the magic date for a turn about in President Nixon's antiinflation policy.

On that day Nixon will discuss with his 18-member National Commission on Productivity a recommendation for creating some form of wage-price review board or perhaps separate boards for basic segments of industry.

The meeting was mentioned by Nixon at his Aug. 4 news conference. He emphasized he would reject any wage-price-control proposal that would invite "a new bureaucracy with enormous criminal powers to fasten itself on the American economy." He said he had never seen a control plan without that flaw.

But Nixon still left open the way to adoption of a purely voluntary program for reviewing pending major wage settlements and price decisions. Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur F. Burns has been plugging for such an "incomes policy" for months.

The commission will look at industries in which major negotiations are pending, Nixon said, "and in addition to that we will consider a recommendation on wage-price boards."

Nixon's avowed skepticism that any workable stabilization policy can be achieved by persuasion led many congressmen to express doubt that the proposal would get beyond the debate stage.

But now a number of officials are convinced a White House decision for greater price-wage intervention has been all but made in principle, and that only the scale and structure of the effort remain in question.

"I don't believe the President would have mentioned the Productivity Commission in this connection unless he was preparing to raise some recommendations with them," one ranking administration official said.

An abrupt reversal of position by Secretary of the Treasury John B. Connally was cited by another source as convincing evidence of a new official line. When Nixon named Connally his chief economic spokesman late in June, Connally told newsmen at the White House:

"He, Nixon, isn't going to institute a wage-price review board. He isn't going to impose mandatory wage and price controls. He isn't going to ask Congress for any tax relief. He isn't going to increase fiscal spending."

BLASTS NIXON ADMINISTRATION — Indiana Democratic Senator, Birch Bayh, blasted the Nixon administration for what he termed it's Alice-in-Wonderland economic policies as he spoke to the Texas State AFL-CIO Convention in Dallas Thursday. Dollar Continues To Plunge

LONDON (AP) — The dollar continued its plunge on the European money markets today reaching a record low in West Germany where the American currency came under its greatest pressure.

Dealers reported the dollar was being hit by preweekend nervousness that usually accompanies a monetary crisis.

Another factor creating uncertainty in Europe was the Wall Street Journal's poll of leading American businessmen indicating a possible devaluation of the American currency, financial sources said.

In Frankfurt trading in the dollar opened at 3.3837 marks from Thursday's closing of 3.3850 marks. After a half hour, it had dropped to a record low of 3.3740 marks, and slipped even further in the next half hour to 3.3715 marks.

In London the dollar stood at 2.4197 to the pound sterling compared with $2.4194 at Thursday night's close. The rate was almost touching the pound's ceiling of $2.42 and the Bank of England was reported prepared to make further massive purchases of dollars to shore up the ailing American currency.

Financial sources estimated that the bank bought in about $250 million on Wednesday when large-scale support for the dollar became urgent in London.

Dealers reported many inquiries from speculators on the London market but relatively little business was done because of the mood of uncertainty.

In Zurich, Switzerland, the dollar rate dropped sharply to 4.03-04 Swiss franc's well below the voluntary support level of 4.06 at which the Swiss National Bank offers to buy, transferring the equivalent to blocked accounts.

ORDERS ALL-BLACK SCHOOL REOPENED

Wallace Challenges Nixon

TROY, Ala. (AP) — Gov. George C. Wallace, challenging President Nixon and the federal courts, today ordered the reopening under a freedom-of-choice plan of a black school closed two weeks ago by a federal court to speed integration.

Wallace issued an executive order directing the Limestone County school board to open the New Hope Junior High School and allow residents of the predominantly Negro community to choose the county school their children will attend this fall.

The New Hope School, established in the early 1920s, had only black pupils for many years. At the end of the 1970-71 school year, there were 184 Negro and 5 white children in the student body.

Wallace ordered the school board to reinstitute the attendance zone plan in effect last school year which permitted pupils in the New Hope community to attend that school or any other of their choice in the county. He directed the board to provide transportation for those who elect to attend other schools.

Acknowledging that his action will create an "economic burden" for the board, the governor said the state will contribute $30,000 "to help in renovating the New Hope School to provide adequate classrooms for all students in the New Hope community who desire to attend New Hope School."

Wallace said that under a federal court order handed down July 30, New Hope pupils were assigned to Tanner and East Limestone schools 20 to 22 miles away. Bus transportation to Tanner and East Limestone is dangerous, he said, because the route is heavily traveled, "bumper to bumper" at times.

New Hope is one of more than 140 Negro schools in Alabama closed by a three-judge federal court as part of a stepped-up integration formula. Their pupils were reassigned to predominantly white schools.

Wallace said one of the reasons he singled out the Limestone County school in northwest Alabama as the first to reopen is that more than 100 black parents petitioned him to intervene.

CONFRONTED BY NEWSMEN — Texas House Speaker Gus Mutscher Thursday as he was stopped by newsmen at the Houston Federal Court Building after appearing before the Federal Grand Jury. Mutscher was named in a $332,008 suit filed by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. which is liquidating the now defunct Sharpstown State Bank. (AP Wirephoto)

Gus Mutscher Named In Suit

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. Has filed a $332,008 suit against Texas House Speaker Gus Mutscher in connection with the liquidation of the defunct Sharpstown State Bank.

It was the second suit filed by the FDIC in as many days. A $170,000 suit was filed Wednesday against professional golfer Doug Sanders.

The suit against Mutscher alleges the Speaker owes $332,008 on a $340,000 loan from the bank, for which he pledged 17,000 shares of National Bankers Life Insurance Co. stock as collateral.

Including penalty, interest and collection fees, the overall amount the FDIC is seeking from Mutscher could exceed $400,000.

Mutscher was testifying before a federal grand jury here when the FDIC filed the state court action. The grand jury is investigating the collapse of the financial empire of Frank W. Sharp.

Mutscher, Sanders and a number of state officials were named in SEC documents filed in Dallas as having purchased National Bankers Life Stock, in most cases with money borrowed from the Sharpstown Bank. None were named as defendants in the SEC action.

The FDIC took over the Sharp-controlled bank after Sharp, the bank and the Sharp-controlled National Bankers Life Insurance Co. were among the 28 defendants named in a Jan. 18 civil injunction suit filed in Dallas by the Securities and Exchange Commission alleging stock manipulation.

Mutscher said after testifying here Thursday before the grand jury that the suit against him "reflects that I have lost a substantial amount of money investing in National Bankers Life Insurance stock."

Mutscher spent about two hours with the jury Thursday afternoon. He followed Dallas stock broker J. Quincy Adams and former State Sen. Jack Strong of Longview.

Adams is alleged to have been the Ling and Co. broker who "made the market" in NBL stock. He is a defendant in the SEC suit against Sharp, NBL and others.

Strong was the original Senate sponsor of the banking bills Sharp is said to have proposed which would have provided a state deposit insurance corporation.

Scientist Named For Apollo 17

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The space agency ended a months-long controversy today and named Dr. Harrison H. Schmitt as the first scientist-astronaut selected for an American space crew.

Schmitt, a Harvard-trained geologist, will fly on Apollo 17, last of the moon-lansing missions in the Apollo program. Commanding the flight will be Navy Capt. Eugene A. Cernon, veteran of two space trips. Rounding out the crew will be Ronald E. Evans, a Navy lieutenant commander who has not flown in space.

Cernan and Schmitt will land on the moon, while Evans mans the command ship in lunar orbit.

Named backups for the mission were the astronauts who last week completed the historic Apollo 15 flight—Col. David R. Scott, Lt. Col. James B. Irwin and Maj. Alfred M. Worden, all Air Force officers.

The naming of Schmitt was a victory for the space agency scientific community, which has long contended that NASA has given preference to long-time jet pilots in selecting space crews.

Sources reported the names of the Apollo 17 crew to The Associated Press Thursday, and a space agency spokesman later confirmed they would be announced formally today.

The landing site will be selected after experts have studied photographs and date returned from the recent Apollo 15 journey.

The Apollo 16 crew, named previously, consists of Navy Cmdr. John W. Young, Air Force Maj. Charles M. Duke Jr. and Navy Lt. Cmdr. Thomas K. Mattingly. Young and Duke are to explore near the crater Descartes in the moon's central highlands.

Apollo 16 is scheduled next March and Apollo 17 in December 1972.

Scientists have pressed the National Aeronautics and Space Administration for some time to send Schmitt to the moon. They contend that while pilot-astronauts have done well for science on the surface, a trained geologist would be able to make more meaningful on-the-spot observations and evaluations.

They have said the last Apollo flight would be a natural for Schmitt, after experts have analyzed the data from all the earlier landings.

Schmitt is the only one of NASA's 13 scientist-astronauts who has worked actively toward a landing mission.

BARNES DENIES CHARGE

Sharp Names Barnes In SEC Stock Scandal

DALLAS (AP) — Convicted Houston promoter Frank Sharp has named Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes in connection with two controversial banking bills tied to the state stock-banking scandals. Barnes immediately denied the allegations vigorously.

The Houston businessman made the charges in a deposition given the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Sharp testified that a former business partner, John Osorio, told him that "Barnes was smarter than the others, that Barnes takes only cash," it was revealed Thursday.

Barnes, a candidate for governor, immediately denied the allegations and said they constituted another in a series of attempts "that have been made to destroy me politically..."

Barnes was to address the state AFL-CIO convention today in Dallas.

The allegations were recalled Wednesday by Sharp in a conversation he said took place with Osorio shortly after passage of the two banking bills in 1969.

News Director Eddie Barker of KDFW-TV said sources told him that Sharp testified Osorio said in a 1969 conversation that Barnes "delivered as he said he would."

Sharp wanted enactment of the banking bills, which would have exempted his Sharpstown State Bank in Houston from Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. Regulation. Gov. Preston Smith vetoed the measures after opening a special legislative session for them.

Sharp pleaded guilty earlier this year to charges arising from the SEC probe and a Houston judge assessed him a probated three-year prison term and a fine. The financier received immunity from further prosecution in exchange for grand jury testimony.

The Dallas News said in a copyrighted story today that Osorio, who now lives in New York, saw a copy of the deposition Thursday.

A source, the News said, related that Osorio scribbled in the margin of the transcript beside the mention of Barnes: "Cheap trick. Part of the SEC script. Nothing like this ever took place with Ben. (signed) John Osorio."

The News also said Sharp told the SEC this week that state Sen. A.R. "Babe" Schwartz of Galveston got a $30,000 loan from a Sharp-controlled bank in consideration for dropping his opposition to a banking bill in 1969.

"The facts show that nothing could be farther from the truth," Schwartz said Thursday night.

Twelve Subpoenaed

AUSTIN (AP)—Subpoenas are on the way for up to a dozen persons to testify Aug. 18 at "intensive hearings" before the House General Investigating Committee, which is probing an alleged stock scandal involving high Texas officials.

Rep. Menton Murray of Harlingen, committee chairman, said the subpoenas would be served on 10 or 12 persons "as quickly as possible."

Whether the hearings will be open "depends on how many get served and who they are," Murray said. He failed, however, to explain how the list of those served would determine whether the hearings will be public.

He declined to give the names of those who will be subpoenaed, but the list was believed to include Houston millionaire Frank Sharp, a key figure in the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission's stock fraud investigation.

Murray said a list of those subpoenaed will be released after all are served.

The committee concluded a two-day meeting behind closed doors Thursday.

Murray's formal statement said the five-member panel "heard a number of witnesses, including heads of state agencies, in their probe of possible involvement of state officials."

Included among the witnesses, he said, were representatives of the state banking and insurance departments.

Kerrville Flooded By Heavy Rains

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A deluge struck Kerrville in the early morning hours today, bringing more than 6 inches of rain in a few hours and increasing the rainfall total to 12 inches or so in two days.

Virtually all low spots in streets were flooded again and water got into some homes. Sewage backup because of the flooding was a problem Thursday.

Some workers could not get to their Kerrville jobs because of high water.

The heavy rains in Kerrville were only a part of massing rain area that caused flash flooding and threats of more floods from around San Angelo and Mertzon in West Texas and in much of the country west and north of San Antonio, particularly around Hondo.

The Rio Grande in the Eagle Pass, Del Rio and Laredo regions was on a rise from heavy rains on the watershed earlier in the week.

The Weather Service issued warnings of floods and flash floods in about a dozen counties Thursday and today.

One man was drowned when two creeks went on the rampage in Medina County Thursday, closing numerous highways, washing out bridges and forcing families from their homes.

He was identified as Clyde Jones, aged about 52, an employe of Bexar County Hospital, who was found in his stalled car at a crossing on San Geronimo Creek. The car apparently had been swept off a bridge and carried half a mile by the flood waters.

The alert was in effect until mid morning in Kerr, Bandera, Uvalde, Real and the northern half of Medina counties in Southwest Texas and Tom Green, Irion, Menard, Kimble Sutton and Crockett counties in West Texas.

Scattered showers also fell in the Tyler, Dallas-Fort Worth and Wichita Falls areas during the night.

Elsewhere considerable cloudiness covered the state in the early morning hours with the exception of the immediate coastal areas and the Lower Rio Grande Valley where skies were clear to partly cloudy.

Predawn temperatures spread from the mid 60s in the Panhandle to 81 degrees at Palacios and Galveston. Elsewhere thermometers were in the 70s.

The National Weather Service said the cloudiness should remain over the West while partly cloudy skies hung over East and South Texas.

Temperatures were to climb into the 80s and mid 90s.

The Department of Public Safety in San Antonio said several roads in surrounding counties closed Thursday due to heavy rains remained closed.

They included Texas 173 from Hondo to Devine and farm roads around Uvalde and Hondo.

Texas 90 from San Antonio to Del Rio was open but U.S. 277 south of Del Rio to Eagle Pass was still closed and a DPS spokesman indicated it might be after the weekend before the highway is reopened.

In San Angelo, the DPS reported no problems with flooding. Mertzon, 32 miles southwest of San Angelo, had serious flooding as a 22-foot wall of water roared down Spring Creek into the city before dawn Thursday.

Mertzon reported an official 7 inches or more in a 24-hour period.

Separating unruly kids improves their behavior

By Abigail Van Buren

[c 1971 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.]

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my husband. We have been married for 10 years and have three children, ages 4 thru 9.

My husband will not discipline the children. It is all left up to me. The only time he will do any correcting is if I am not at home. I work in a factory, eight hours a day, five days a week, and I am tired when I get home. When the kids fight among themselves, I yell at them, then my husband gets mad at me for yelling at the kids, but if they are fighting and I ask him to make them stop he says, "Leave me alone."

Now he tells me he can't stand my yelling at the kids all the time, and if I don't quit it, he is going to move out of the house.

I love him and want him to be happy, but I'm being pulled between knowing the kids need to be yelled at, and trying to keep my husband home. Please help me.

—PULLED BETWEEN

DEAR PULLED: Your method of disciplining the kids isn't working or you wouldn't be yelling all the time. Try another technique. When they fight, separate them until they get good and lonesome for each other. [Don't worry, they will.] And keep them apart until they learn to get along better. Time is in your favor. The older they get, the smarter they get.

DEAR ABBY: How do you feel about asking for a "doggie bag" in a high class restaurant? It is an acceptable practice in many places, but we have quite a debate going on at home about this. GLENDALE

DEAR GLENDALE: If I'm unable to do justice to the meal in a restaurant, I ask for a doggie bag, and I have no qualms. [I also have no dog, and the leftovers are delicious!]

DEAR ABBY: Below is a letter I have just received from my daughter in law, who is old enough to know better.

Dear Mother:

I am writing to thank you for the belated birthday gift you sent your only grandchild, Andrew. It was very nice of you to have sent such a generous gift, but I wish to express my feelings about your tardiness in sending gifts. I can understand a slip-up in the mails occasionally, but even that is no excuse for you, as you have nothing in the world to do but amuse yourself, and you are constantly shopping for yourself, so buying a gift well in advance of a special occasion should be no big chore.

I notice that when you send your son [my husband] a gift, it always arrives on time, but all gifts to ME and Andrew trail in late, which makes a birthday gift rather pointless when it arrives after the birthday. I think it is better to convey my true feelings to you than to feel this way and remain silent.

Love,
Linda

Well, Abby, there it is. I am still in shock. What would you do about such a letter? HER MOTHER-IN-LAW

DEAR MOTHER-IN-LAW: I would ignore it.

CONFIDENTIAL TO CONNIE: The biggest problem in the world could have been solved when it was small. What are you waiting for?

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069.

Not Again

VANCOUVER, B.C. (AP) — A 20-ton truck loaded to the gills with fish heads was bound for a pet food plant in the State of Washington last week when the driver had to make a sudden stop at an intersection. Result: fish heads all over the street.

This week, the same driver tried to make the same run and had the same accident.

He commented to a service station attendant who was phoning authorities: "Tell the police it isn't as bad as the last one."

Sex Changer Rejects Offer

By JOE DI LEO
Associated Press Writer

BERNARDS TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — A music teacher who underwent a sex change operation has rejected a school board offer allowing her to continue teaching if she gave up the 14 years tenure she earned as a man.

The school board made its compromise offer at an open meeting Thursday but Paula Miriam Grossman, 52, turned it down saying she will fight to keep her job and full privileges.

"I don't think their request was fair. But I expected it," Mrs. Grossman said.

Under the offer, Mrs. Grossman could have resumed teaching in September if she agreed to resign and to obtain a state teaching certificate in her female name. The board also wanted her to agree to switch from elementary to high school teaching.

Until last March, Mrs. Grossman was Paul Monroe Grossman, a music teacher at Cedar Hill Elementary School with a wife and three daughters.

After sex reassignment surgery in March, she returned to the classroom dressed as man.

In May, Mrs. Grossman told School Supt. Myron Headington of the sex change, and he notified the school board on June 1. The board met privately with Mrs. Grossman and her attorney, Herbert Kostner.

At the board's request, Mrs. Grossman submitted to two psychiatric examinations. The results were not made public by the board but Kostner said that Mrs. Grossman "passed with flying colors."

Despite controversy that has ensued in this affluent hill community 30 miles from New York City, Mrs. Grossman says she wants to keep her job and will continue to live with her wife of 19 years and their three children.

The board intends to ask the state Board of Education to remove Mrs. Grossman's tenure on grounds she is incompetent, which is the only basis on which such an action can be taken against a teacher.

3 Martins Are In Stage Play

When the curtain rises tonight on the SHS Summer Theatre Production of MARY OF SCOTLAND, one Snyder family will have a rather large stock in the production. Kathy, Danny and Michael, all children of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Martin of 2403 Thirty-seventh Street, will play roles as well as help with technical requirements of the show.

CURTIS THOMPSON

Kathie, in the title role of Mary, will be supported by her younger brother Danny in the role of Lord Maitland, her secretary of state. In addition to their roles as performers, the Martins, have been instrumental in designing and making costumes and props for the show.

Miss Martin's elaborate gowns in the show have been designed and made almost entirely by herself. A sword which looks very authentic and will be worn by the Earl of Bothwell (Royce Starnes) was created by Michael who is working as a welders apprentice this summer at his fathers brick plant. In addition, Mike is official photographer for the show.

The three Martins in this play were preceeded by an older sister, Nan, who also starred in many high school productions, the most memorable being AUNTIE MAME. Kathie, just graduated from SHS this year, will attend the University of Texas on two drama scholarships awarded to her for twice winning the coveted Samuel French Award as most outstanding performer in the state. Michael is a Junior at Texas Tech, majoring in Electronic Engineering, and Danny will be a Junior at Snyder High in the coming semester.

SquareDancers To Meet Sat.

The Sparkle City Squares will have their regular dance at the Scurry County Coliseum at 8 p.m. Saturday., Aug. 14. Curtis Thompson will be the caller. He has called for the Snyder club several times in the past two years.

Thompson has been a square-dance caller for 7 years. He is currently the club caller for the Midland Town Hall Club, the Big Spring Squares and the Jeans and Queens of Odessa. He has made several recordings on the Mustang Label and has called for special festivals in Odessa, San Angelo, Big Spring, Eagle Pass and the State Festival four years.

Visitors and spectators are always welcome.

Woody Rites Today

Funeral for Rex Woody, 61, former resident of Scurry County, was held at 10:30 a.m. today in the Bell-Seale Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Cone Merritt, retired Baptist minister, officiating. Burial followed in the Snyder Cemetery under direction of Bell-Seale Funeral Home. He died at 2 a.m. Thursday in a Vernon Hospital.

AS FIREMAN

Fire Starter Serving Term

LYTLE CREEK, Calif. (AP) — Last year Phillip J. Kelley caused a blaze that ravaged 34,000 acres of watershed worth $16 million and cost $1.25 million to put out.

This summer he's back in the San Bernardino Mountains working to help the blackened lands recover, trying to prevent similar conflagrations while serving a four-month sentence.

A judge ordered the 22-year-old Rialto, Calif., native to spend his jail term with a U.S. Forest Service fire crew.

Every weekday morning, Kelley climbs into the back of a truck with nine other prisoners and rides into the charred mountains 40 miles east of Los Angeles to help clear and restore the land.

"I feel a lot of remorse, to say the least," said the hard-hatted Kelley, a bass guitar player with a rock music group before the fire. "It was a nightmare."

The fire started Sept. 28, a day after Kelley's group finished a recording session in nearby Riverside. Kelley says he had gone to Lytle Creek in the mountains "to check on six marijuana plants I had there.

"I brought along some fireworks I had purchased in Denver when the band was playing there. I started shooting them off. I was carefree, careless. I wasn't thinking how dry it was.

"Suddenly one caught in a bush close to me. It began to flame up. I tried stepping on it. That was a mistake. All it did was spread it out. In seconds it was too late."

As he fled from the fire he met a U.S. Forest Service crew. They questioned him and that night he admitted causing the blaze. As the fire spread during the next 36 hours, Kelley was in jail, feeling "pretty small, helpless."

"I prayed for rain, but the fire kept spreading," he said.

During his term, Kelley has "seen what the fire did. It's amazing. It looks like the moon ... completely devastated."

He's also helped extinguish a 400-acre brush fire in nearby Apple Valley.

Kelley, who considers himself lucky to have escaped a state prison term, plans to marry when he's released from jail. He also says he'll never smoke marijuana again and will become a Mormon.

Paris Baker Sculpts In Sugar

By ALISON LERRICK

PARIS (AP) — "Madame, the Eiffel Tower is served."

But if you'd prefer a gazebo, a Boeing 707 or simply Notre Dame, Etienne Tholoniat, "the king of sugar," will whip it up for you.

"A client can ask me to make anything. I always say yes and worry about how to do it later," says Tholoniat. He even makes three versions of the Eiffel Tower—simplified for $40, stylized for $100 and in full detail for $200. Queen Elizabeth chose the last.

A self-taught artist, he has through trial and breakage over 15 years learned how to create sculptures from sugar. The big pieces he molds cold "like piecrust." But his forte is the hot medium. He cooks the sugar at 300 degrees, pours it onto a marble slab and pulls it with his hands until it takes on a satiny sheen.

"Then I get to work," says Tholoniat. In his workshop on the rue Chateau d'Eau, he can turn out 40 roses in an hour if he is in a good mood. His Concorde, timed for its launching three years ago, is striped in blue, windowed in green and nestled on a bed of roses.

However, he is only the sugar king after noon. At dawn, he turns back into a baker and starts drudging with the dough. As prevot general of the maitres patissiers of France, he tours through Europe teaching pastry-makers their own business and gives a monthly lesson to the students at the Cordon Bleu.

"I eat tons of pastry, because in this field you have to be a bit gourmand," he says. When I take a trip, the first thing I do is look for a beautiful bakery. Sometimes I even eat too much."

ETIENNE THOLONIAT, "The King of Sugar," puts the finishing touches on one of his sculptures made of sugar.

Advice Offered For European Travelers

By JEANNE O'MALLEY
Written for Associated Press

The minute you announce you're going to Europe this summer, people will come from miles around to give you advice.

Some of it, like "Take twice as much money and half as many clothes," is as true as it was the day Baedeker left home.

But you'll find most of the free advice you get is for finding wonderful little places to eat. What's needed is advice on how to feel like eating when you get there.

The biggest blight on a three-week vacation is jet lag. The only sure way not to have jet lag is to take a boat. But if you fly, try to get a flight that leaves during the day, and, failing that, try to get some sleep on the plane. This means taking a sleep mask and ear plugs, because there are always those who talk until two in the morning, and the minute they subside, others who'll put up the shade to watch the sunrise.

Whether you sleep or not, by the time you get where you're going, you'll be fully prepared to believe it's five in the afternoon instead of 10 in the morning, and by the time the local bedtime arrives, you'll be ready.

Making it through the first night is the hardest part of jet lag because you can depend on being awakened. First it will be your stomach. It may be three o'clock in the morning in London but your stomach knows it's really eight o'clock in Chicago and it wants its dinner. So take along something to keep it quiet until morning. Save the milk and sugar packets from the plane. Give it a doughnut. Doughnuts don't mind being squashed in a plastic bag and will keep fresh long enough for your stomach to get on the local time schedule.

The next to wake you up will be your roommate. All European bathrooms have the light switch outside the door on the theory that you won't be so apt to electrocute yourself if they keep the switch out of arm's reach of the running water. So every time your roommate gets up in the night, he's going to wake you up turning on the light. Take one of those little nightlights and plug it into the shaver outlet.

Be on the lookout for UFOs. It's a rare European hotel that has window screens, and flying objects up to and including pigeons can come in your window. There's nothing more persistent than a French mosquito unless it's a heavy-footed Italian fly, so take a bottle of insect repellent.

The next thing that can blight your vacation is having your clothes come out looking like they'd been tied if not dyed. The answer to this is the plastic bag.

Pack your dresses and suits in the plastic bags from the cleaners. They retain just enough air to keep things from wrinkling. If it's something really fragile like pleated crepe or organdy, put it in a bag, blow it up like a balloon, and fasten it with cellophane tape. And pack that tape.

This method works for all kinds of things: packed mink, which normally comes out looking like licked cat; wigs, if you don't want the bother of a wig carrier; it even works for fresh flowers. So if you get going-away flowers or are met with them on your arrival, don't leave them behind for the maid. Put them in a plastic bag and pack them. They'll come out surprisingly well, and brighten up the dreariest hotel room.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

There is an old saying that about half the persons who purchase outside ladders wish at some later time they had bought larger sizes.

The first advice about buying an outside ladder therefore, is to be sure you get one that is long enough. Too often it is forgotten that the length of a ladder does not coincide with its working height. If you want to reach outside windows that are 10 feet high, you need a ladder that is at least 14 feet long and preferably 16 feet. You can't work at the top of a ladder; the third step from the top is about the farthest you should go.

What are called single ladders come in heights up to 20 feet. While extension ladders run as high as 60 feet, most of these are for professional use especially those over 40 feet.

Handling a long ladder can be a tough job if it is done haphazardly. The proper way to raise it is to place the ladder flat on the ground so that its lower end is against the foundation of the house. Go to the top end and raise it to the height of your shoulders. Now, remaining under the ladder, walk forward very slowly, moving your hands on the rungs of the ladder as you walk. Always be certain that one hand has a tight grip on the next rung before you remove the other hand from the previous rung.

Rest the top of the ladder against the house. Then, working slowly and carefully, shift the base farther away from the foundation. The base should come to rest about one-fourth the length of the ladder. Thus, the base would be about 5 feet from the house foundation when using a 20-foot ladder.

Buy a ladder which has rubber grips or some other gadget at the bottom to prevent slipping. Even with such safety devices, the feet of the ladder should be placed on a solid board when it is being used on soft ground. After the board is in place, bounce on the bottom rung of the ladder a few times to be sure it will hold properly.

When on the ladder, don't over-reach, don't push or pull and keep one hand on the ladder while working with the other.

There are accessories you can buy to prevent the top of the ladder from slipping, but even when using these, exercise as much care as if you didn't have them.

Wooden ladders are heavier than those made of metal, but they are safer to use around electrical wiring. Don't paint a wooden ladder, as the paint will hide any defects that may develop later. If you wish to protect the wood, use linseed oil or some other clear exterior finish.

Don't try to be a strong man. When a long, heavy ladder must be shifted, get someone to help you.

Complete Story On Einstein's Life

EINSTEIN: The Life and Times. By Ronald W. Clark. World Publishing. $15.

British science writer Clark, after an obviously predigious amount of research, has produced not only a thorough biography of Albert Einstein, but also a running record of the history of physics in his time.

It is a big book, and with notes, bibliography and index runs to more than 700 pages, plus illustrations. Clark has packed into it enough detail to make it the equivalent of an even larger book.

The general public still vaguely remembers Einstein as a sort of father of relativity, perhaps not recalling that he let himself be carried into an involvement with pacifism and Zionism.

Clark presents him as a contradictory man, in his later years a tragic figure who had fallen behind the scientific pace.

At the beginning Clark cites the contradictions: "the German who detested the Germans; the pacifist who encouraged men to arms and played a significant part in the birth of nuclear weapons; the Zionist who wished to placate the Arabs," and a physicist who clung to his own idea of the universe, simultaneously believing in a Greater Being.

The author tells how the young Einstein studied electromagnetism and produced his Special Theory; studied gravity and produced his General Theory. Clark gives a layman's explanation of relativity that is more understandable than most.

He also records the works of other physicists, showing how they were related to Einstein's work. He portrays his subject in his later years as resisting the new theories of indeterminacy and quantum mechanics, while struggling unsuccessfully to develop a theory that would encompass both electromagnetism and gravity. He delves into the personal anecdotes and myths that surrounded Einstein's life. And he devotes special attention to all the circumstances surrounding Einstein's letter to President Roosevelt in 1939 about the possibility of nuclear fission—and a bomb.

For the merely casual reader there is more meat in this book than he may care to chew. But it deserves far more attention than a casual reading. For both the scientist and the interested layman this is a remarkably complete story of an extraordinary man in an extraordinary time.

TO IDENTIFY DRIVER'S SKILL

Color-Coded License Plates Are Suggested

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Should automobile drivers be required to use color-coded license plates that identify them as good, poor or potentially dangerous drivers?

An Indiana professor who suggests the system be tried claims that several friends are dead "because they made average responses to situations where the cars around them were operated by much below average drivers."

He concludes: "They would be alive now if they had a chance to see in advance what they were really up against."

Should installment credit rates be determined by the risk the borrower represents instead of being regulated at about the same percentage for all?

A New York professor thinks it would cut down the number of deadbeats who don't pay. And he believes it would also make the industry more responsible in granting credit to those who might not be able to handle it.

These are two novel suggestions for old, old problems that have defied conventional thinking and which have, meanwhile, run up a toll in personal and financial tragedy.

Modern societies are overloaded with situations such as these that seem only to get worse.

Dr. Richard N. Farmer, professor of international business at Indiana University, finds it odd that license plates identify the automobile but tell nothing about the driver. "We are all anonymous to our fellow drivers," he says.

Farmer proposes that each driver be issued reflective plates with magnets attached. "No moving vehicle would be legal without these plates attached front and rear. The proper plates would belong to the driver, not the vehicle."

He would color-code them red, yellow, green and blue. In the red category would be "dangerous drivers, including all categories of persons who might reasonably be expected to be dangerous on the road."

To get out of the red category, he suggests, "a person would have to demonstrate that he deserved it. Such evidence would consist of usual driving tests, physical examinations, a clean moving-violations record and similar evidence."

Prof. David Caplovitz spent four years studying the consumer credit system while a senior research associate at Columbia University's Bureau of Applied Social Research.

One of his recommendations is that the price of credit be based on a borrower's credit rating. This, he said, would discourage the granting of credit to obviously poor risks. And it would encourage prompt payment.

"To have one's credit rating drop can be a severe blow to one's happiness and this alone might serve as sufficient control of the credit system," he observes. And it would hurt the pocketbook too, as anyone could understand.

In his hypothesis, persons reaching the age of 21 might be permitted to assume debt at a maximum rate of interest irrespective of income. Should they prove prompt and reliable they would become eligible for a reduced rate on their next loan "until they earned the right to pay the low rate of say six or seven per cent."

Junior Editors Quiz on SHORTCAKE

QUESTION: Why is strawberry shortcake called shortcake?

ANSWER: Strawberry shortcake is a dessert that is 100 per cent American. It consists of merely a simple biscuit dough, berries and some cream. Shortcake is a popular dessert, because it is easy to make, easily digested and has such a colorful appearance. It makes the plainest menu seem a great occasion.

This delightful dessert was created by an early American housewife. The hot biscuit and home-made bread were baked in every home in early days. Most people had strawberries growing in the garden. The wild strawberry is abundant in the United States and farmers through cultivation improved the strain and produced a larger berry. An American homemaker who had some hot biscuits left over and also some strawberries to use up, combined them. Happy chance — now the two are linked as a typical American dessert — strawberry shortcake.

The term shortcake is used to describe the biscuit dough used. There is a large quantity of shortening, usually fat or butter, used in making the biscuit. Most recipes call for five tablespoons of shortening to two cups of flour.

SOLUTION OF YESTERDAY'S PUZZLE

Remarks Seldom Heard

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Remarks we dream about hearing but rarely do:

"I'm sorry I led you to a dog's life all these years, Fred. You've been a wonderful man to put up with me."

"No, I don't want to borrow the car tonight, Dad. I just want to stay home and spend the evening talking with you and Mom. I want your advice on what I should try to do with my life."

"Well, since you're an old friend and it isn't too big a hernia, I'll cut my regular operating fee by $200. But promise—not a word to any other of my patients."

"Know who was in the foursome following us: Arnold Palmer—no less! Know what he said about you? He said he couldn't help noticing what a beautiful drive you have, and that if you could get about 20 more yards on it, you'd have a good chance of making it on the pro tour."

"So you're the fine little lad who found my wallet and returned it. Well, I believe in encouraging honesty and youth, young fellow. I know that at 15 you have to get your parents' permission to work, but if that can be arranged, how would you like to join my firm as first junior vice president?"

"There won't be just a single door prize. Everyone who showed up here today will get a free trip to Hawaii as our guest."

"I know I've never let you kiss me before, Wilberforce, but something has made me feel so restless tonight—our pressed duck dinner, the ruby wine, the slow walk home, the full moon, the poetry you read to me by the fireside. No, not that way, Wilberforce—I'm sitting over here on the sofa—waiting."

"Why did your draft board send you here in the first place? You don't belong in the Army—you belong in a hospital bed."

"My wife took quite a fancy to you at the annual office dance, Timpkins. She'd like you to join us at dinner next Friday and meet our daughter, the one who was just made beauty queen at Yale. All right? Fine. After dinner you two kids can have the chauffeur and limousine for the evening. The chauffeur is off duty at midnight—but the limousine isn't."

"Both your rich uncle and the pet dog he planned to leave his money to died last week. Since the dog died first, that leaves you the only surviving heir."

Construction Projects OK'd

NACOGDOCHES, Tex. (AP) — Construction projects totaling nearly $7 million have been approved by the board of regents of Stephen F. Austin State University.

They include a new library, football stadium, major additions to the University Center, renovation of the administration building and a new parking lot.

Work on the new library, to cost $4 million, will start early next year. Comptroller C. G. Haas said the three-story building will contain a minimum of 100,000 books.

The new football stadium will be started as soon as the 1971 season ends, possibly by Dec. 1. Estimated cost of the 15,000-seat stadium is $1.5 million. There will be room for its expansion, Haas said.

Expansion of the University Center will cost $1 million.

Braves Crush Astros

By KEN RAPPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer

The San Francisco Giants, who have had a hard time beating anyone recently, took a day off and let the Los Angeles Dodgers beat themselves for a change.

It was a lift for their spirits, to say nothing of their lead in the National League West.

While the Giants didn't play, they improved their lead to four games over Los Angeles when the Dodgers fumbled over a 3-1, 13-inning loss to the Philadelphia Phillies Thursday night.

The Los Angeles' loss was good news to San Francisco, which had lost eight of 10 games and wasted most of a 10-game lead to the hot Dodgers.

Only three other games were played in the National League Thursday night as the Atlanta Braves crushed the Houston Astros 10-5, the St. Louis Cardinals nipped the Pittsburgh Pirates 3-2 and the San Diego Padres turned back the New York Mets 3-0.

In the American League, Baltimore smashed Minnesota 8-2; Cleveland clouted Chicago 6-2; Detroit trimmed Milwaukee 4-3; New York took a twi-night doubleheader from California, 3-0 and 2-1, Oakland stopped Boston 9-2 and Kansas City beat Washington 2-0 in the first game of a twin bill before dropping the nightcap, 2-1.

Despite Thursday night's loss, Los Angeles shortstop Maury Wills feels the Dodgers will eventually catch the skidding Giants.

The Dodgers didn't look like winners against the Phillies, though. They had a 1-0 lead in the eighth when second baseman Steve Garvey's error opened the door for the tying run.

Then they wasted scoring opportunities in the extra innings before Philadelphia's Don Money put it away with a two-run double in the 13th.

Rookie Earl Williams unleashed two homers in a four-hit night and knocked in four runs as Atlanta buried Houston under a 16-hit offense.

Williams had singled his first two times at bat before blasting a two-run homer in the fourth and a solo shot in the fifth, his 20th and 21st circuit clouts of the year. Williams also had a run-scoring single in the second inning to help Ron Reed coast to his 12th victory in 20 decisions.

St. Louis took advantage of shortstop Gene Alley's error to score three unearned runs in the third inning and made them stand up behind Steve Carlton's pitching.

Alley booted Dal Maxvill's leadoff bouncer and Carlton singled up the middle. Ted Kubiak forced Carlton at second, but Ted Sizemore doubled for one run, another scored on Matty Alou's bouncer and Joe Torre knocked in the winning run with a bloop single.

Pittsburgh scored two runs in the first inning but Carlton slammed the door the rest of the way to notch his 16th victory in 22 decisions.

Roberto Clemente delivered a two-run double before there were any outs, but then Carlton got out of hot water when he struck out Manny Sanguillen. Clemente was out trying to steal third and Richie Hebner also went down on strikes.

Steve Arlin pitched a six-hitter and Ollie Brown ripped a two-run single as San Diego shut out New York for the second night in a row.

The Padres capitalized on four walks, an error and Brown's key hit to send New York starter Nolan Ryan to the showers with a three-run first. Arlin assumed control of the game after that.

Schlee Has Slim Lead

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — John Schlee, winless in five years on the pro golf tour, nursed a slim lead in a bunched back while Ken "Hawk" Harrelson was the "peoples choice" today entering the second round of the $165,000 Massachusetts Classic.

Schlee, a 32-year-old one-time Memphis State star, fashioned a brilliant six-under-par 34-32—66 without fanfare while Harrelson drew the cheers while carding a 73 Thursday in the first round of the 72-hole tournament at Pleasant Valley Country Club.

A resident of Dallas and tutored by Ben Hogan, Schlee had seven birdies and a lone bogey in launching a bid for his first tour victory. The PGA Rookie of the Year in 1966, his best showing was a second place finish in the St. Paul Open that season.

Texas Is Choice In Annual Clash

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

WICHITA FALLS, Tex. (AP) — Texas is rated a touchdown choice over Oklahoma tonight in the 34th annual Oil Bowl Clash of Red River schoolboy football supremacy and observers are wondering just how big the spread would be if there were more South Texans on the team.

Only six Southerns are on the Texas squad from last week's Texas High School Coaches Association All-Star football game in which the South mangled the North 65-0.

"Texas sure has some good players at home," says one writer who covers the game annually. "Oklahoma has its best chance since it won 17-7 in 1969."

Of course, the Texas cupboard is far from bare. Such schoolboy household names as tailback Mike Thomas of Greenville, wing back Joey Aboussie of Wichita Falls, tight end Tommy Frank of Austin Reagan, split end Jeff Jobe of Corsicana, tackle John Rhiddlehoover of Abilene Cooper and center Jim Frasure of Houston Westchester dot the Texas roster with talent.

Texas won 38-28 last year in a slambang offensive show.

Oklahoma has enough offense and a fiery enough defense to make things most interesting again. Quarterback Clyde Crutchmer of Okmulgee, tailback Joe Daniels of Duncan, and fullback Jaimie Thomas of Ada could explode if the Texans take the Sooners lightly.

Some 20,000 fans are expected in Coyote Stadium for the 8 p.m. kickoff. The game is sponsored by Maskat Shrine Temple and the Oklahoma High School Coaches Association. The game has produced more than $500,000 for crippled children since 1945.

The University of Oklahoma has signed the most players in the game—10, including Thomas. Texas has eight and Texas Tech five.

Texas has a 19-5-1 overall edge in the series.

The offensive starters:

Texas—Tight end, Tommy Frank, Austin Reagan; tackles Henry Sheppard, Cuero, and Jon Rhiddlehoover, Abilene Cooper; Center—Jim Frasure, Houston Westchester; Guards — Greg Ferguson, Fort Worth Arlington Heights and Fred Pointer, San Antonio Jay; Split end—Jeff Jobe, Corsicana; Quarterback—Mike Bresley, Grand Prairie; tailback—Mike Thomas, Greenville; Wing back—Joey Aboussie, Wichita Falls; Fullback—Billy Phipps, Monahans; Kicking specialist—Mickey Macaluso, Austin S.F. Austin.

Oklahoma: Quarterback—Clyde Crutchmer, Okmulgee; tailback—Joe Daniels, Duncan; fullback—Jaimie Thomas, Ada; Tight end—Doug Pearson, Pryor; Guards—Flynn Browning, Yukon; and Terry Webb, Muskogee; tackles—Mark Loman, Lindsay, and Mike Flesher, Lindsay; Center—Dennis Buchanan, Oklahoma City Southeast; Split end—Freddie Carolina, Oklahoma City Classen; Flanker—Thomas Bywaters, Claremore.

Royal Had Chance To Guide SMU

LUBBOCK (AP) — Texas Coach Darrell Royal has disclosed in Longhorn Football '71 Magazine that he would have gone to Southern Methodist as head football coach in 1956 if Athletic Director Matty Bell had followed up an earlier telephone call to clinch the deal.

Royal was head coach at Washington at the time and later that year was hired by Dana X. Bible of Texas.

Royal told sports writer Burle Pettit:

"I was interested...very interested in going to SMU and I told Matty so. I sure wanted that job—the appeal of coming back to the Southwest, of coming to Texas."

Bell telephoned Royal in December of 1956 but never followed up the contact and later hired Bill Meeks.

Royal was asked if he has ever wondered what would have happened if he had gone to SMU and he answered:

"Sure, I thought about what the difference could have been right now if I had gone to SMU. And had Darrell Royal stayed at Mississippi State what a difference it would have been. Or for that matter, if I was still up in Canada.

"Yeh, you have to be at the right place.

"I never have been under any false illusions. When we finished up that 30-game winning streak I didn't bust too many chest buttons.

Royal has won two national championships since he has been at Texas and numerous SWC titles as the Longhorns start their 15th season.

"I take pride in all this, sure," Royal said. "And I feel that we have done a good job. I'm not trying to eat humble pie and I'm not trying to be falsely modest. I'm proud of what we achieved. Yet, at the same time, I know that there are a lot of other capable men and capable coaches strung out all over the country that just haven't been in the right situation to get the job done.

"I have never lacked for confidence. I'm not trying to give that picture at all. I don't think I'm the greatest coach that ever came down the pike, and I sure as hell don't think I'm the worst."

The Longhorn '71 Magazine is published in Lubbock and made its dividend on the newsstands Thursday.

Pokes Host New Orleans Saturday

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Quarterback Dennis Dummit was passed over by all the National Football League teams during the draft, but he'll guide the Los Angeles Rams against the Cleveland Browns Friday under the watchful eye of his former college coach.

Tommy Prothro, Dummit's coach at UCLA and now field boss of the Rams, probably will let the 6-foot-0, 180-pound rookie call the signals in the second half, but is quick to add that Roman Gabriel remains the club's No. 1 quarterback.

Dummit sparkplugged the UCLA offense his last two years and Prothro was influential in the Rams signing the quarterback as a free agent.

Cleveland Coach Nick Skorich plans to use sophomore Mike Phipps at quarterback. Phipps spearheaded three long scoring drives last Sunday as the Browns bowed to San Francisco 38-24.

Meanwhile, Fran Tarkenton, star quarterback of the New York Giants, reached an agreement with the team. The scrambling signal caller's signing of a one-year pact ended the four-day-old dispute that started when he walked out on the Giants in Houston.

Wellington Mara, club president, said Tarkenton could face disciplinary action "as Coach Alex Webster sees fit."

Tarkenton said he was "very happy with the signing. I'm sorry for what I did on Sunday. I admit it was a hasty move."

In Friday's other exhibition clash, the Miami Dolphins host the San Francisco 49ers in a nationally televised game.

Still smarting from last week's 27-10 setback by Cincinnati Dolphins Coach Don Shula plans to spice Miami's ground attack with Jim Kiick and Larry Csonka.

The two running backs reported late to training camp because of a contract dispute and saw only one quarter of action each against the Bengals. The lethargic Miami rushing attack netted only 24 yards in the game.

Nine exhibition games are slated for Saturday—Chicago at Baltimore, Cincinnati at Detroit, Houston at St. Louis, Atlanta at Kansas City, Pittsburgh at Green Bay, New Orleans at Dallas, Washington at Denver, New York Jets at Oakland and Minnesota at San Diego.

Determined not to have repeat of last Saturday's fiasco when rookie center Danny Ryczek high-snapped the ball over punter Mike Bragg's head against San Diego, Washington Redskins Coach George Allen persuaded George Burman to come out of retirement.

Burman centered for the Los Angeles Rams and also saw duty as an offensive guard and tackle.

Sunday's preseason game pits the New York Giants against the New England Patriots. The slate of 13 weekend games ends Monday with Buffalo at Philadelphia.

Norm Snead, who has called signals for losers during most of his 10 NFL years, will start with the winning Vikings against San Diego. Minnesota has compiled 12-2 records for each of the past two seasons.

The Giants and Rams traded offensive tackles, with Rich Buzin going to Los Angeles and Joe Taffoni assigned to New York.

Ags Have Experience

DALLAS (AP) — If you use experience as a formula, the Texas Aggies should win the Southwest Conference football championship handily this fall with Arkansas a near cellar-dweller.

That's the way it is in the second annual Southwest Conference experience-formula championship.

The formula gives one point for each returning letterman, an additional point if he's a senior, and a third point if he's a returning starter. Then a point is subtracted for each letterman lost and an additional point is subtracted for each starter lost. SMU's Gary Hammond is worth three points to the Mustangs, for example, being a letterman, a senior and a returning starter. The Mustangs lose two points via the graduation of Ken Fleming, a letterman and a starter in 1970.

The Aggies total 75 points, almost doubling the total of runner-up Texas Tech. A&M returns 45 lettermen, 21 returnees who started at least part of the time in 1970, and 23 seniors—a total of 89 points. Deficits include losing ten lettermen, four starters—a total of 14 points.

Here's the experience-formula rating for 1971:

1, Texas A&M, 75 points; 2, Texas Tech, 39 points; 3, TCU, 31 points; 4, Texas, 24 points; 5, Rice, 23 points; 6, Baylor, 20 points; 7, Arkansas, 16 points; 8, SMU, 12 points.

Rice was the experience champion last year with 53 points, while TCU figured minus 4 points. Champion Texas ranked third in the experience battle with 36 points, runner-up Arkansas was fifth with 31 points and third-place Tech ranked second in points with 38.

Research over the last six seasons shows the conference champions for those years averaged 32.5 points in experience. They ranged from a high of 50 points (co-champion Texas in 1968) to a low of nine points (A&M, '67).

SWC Honors Humble Co.

FORT WORTH (AP) — The Humble Oil & Refining Co. was honored at the 13th annual Southwest Conference football rally here Thursday night.

The company received the Fort Worth Sports Committee award for outstanding contribution to the athletic community.

Humble, first firm ever to receive the award, will begin its 38th season of sponsoring Southwest Conference football games this fall.

Also honored was the late I. B. Hale, who was a member of the Fort Worth Sports Committee.

All eight SWC grid coaches attended the fete, which attracted a crowd of more than 1,000.

Players attending were Steve Judy and Ronnie Peoples of TCU, Eddie Phillips and Stan Mauldin of Texas, Steve Luebbehusen and Joey Herr of Texas A&M, Johnny Odom and Charles Napper of Texas Tech, Gary Hammond and Sherwin Blount of SMU, Joe Ferguson and Scott Binnion of Arkansas, Glen Chmelar and Ron Evans of Baylor and Bruce Gadd and Mike Tyler of Rice.

Cuba Replaces Canada As Runnerup In Games

CALI, Colombia (AP) — The flaming torch atop Pascual Guerrero Stadium will be doused in tropical twilight today ending the sixth Pan-American games—again dominated by the United States but spiced by fast coming Cuba.

Uncle Sam's athletic forces slipped slightly from their medal grab at Winnipeg in 1967, while Cuba, showing obvious Soviet training, impressively replaced Canada as the usual runnerup in the quadrennial games.

Including Thursday's historic cycling triumph by John Howard, an Army GI from Springfield, Mo., and a silver medal finish by the Yank Women's basketball team, the USA harvested 104 gold medals, 73 silver and 40 bronze, for an overall total of 217.

That compared with 120 golds, 63 silver and 42 bronze for a USA 225 total in the Winnipeg Games. Despite a defeat by Jamaica's Don Quarrie in the sprints, U.S. men's track power exploded for 12 of 16 gold medals. Uncle Sam's swimmers swept 14 of 15 events, plus both diving gold medals.

Cuba which unveiled a world record triple jumper in Pedro Perez and upset the Yank men's basketball team made tremendous gains since 1967.

With the USA cagers eliminated, Brazil Thursday won the men's basketball title by shading Cuba 63-62, with Puerto Rico taking the silver medal and Cuba the bronze.

The Cubans, who also dethroned the USA in baseball and men's and women's volleyball, and cracked American monopoly in wrestling, piled up 31 golds, 49 silver, and 24 bronze for 103 medals.

That contrasted with a weak Cuban Winnipeg performance of only 8 golds, 14 silvers and 26 bronze and 48 overall.

Although Canada's feminine stars fared well in track and field, swimming and equestrian competition, the Maple Leaf squad wound up with 18 golds, 20 silver and 40 bronze and 78 overall.

As a token force of some 3,000 athletes from 30 nations in the original field were slated to parade in the colorful closing ceremony, the USA still buzzed over the unprecedented triumph in the 198-kilometer individual road cycling race by the 23-year-old Howard.

Unlike track, swimming, baseball and basketball—in which a 20-year Yankee dynasty was shattered—cycling had not been the USA's strong point.

Howard became the first American cycling gold medal winner in Pan-Am history.

Howard clutched a rosary as he out-pedaled Brazil's No. 2 world class star, Luis Carlos Florez, by one second in the 122.7 mile grind.

The USA's women cagers, with a 5-1 record, yielded the gold medal to unbeaten Brazil which Thursday defeated Cuba 66-62 after the USA closed with a 54-35 triumph over Ecuador.

Meanwhile, the USA's volleyball team was due to arrive today in Cuba for the regional Olympic eliminations at Havana with a somewhat sticky situation carrying over from the Pan-Am Games.

The USA still hasn't had a Cuba reply to a formal demand for an apology for an assault on an American gymnast by some Cuban athletes in a flag-raiding melee in the Pan-Am village Monday night.

Only one team will qualify at Havana for a volleyball berth in the Munich Olympics, and Cuba batted the Pan-Am gold medal from the USA, 15-6, 15-13, 15-10, in a windup match Wednesday night.

Aunt Sarah, I love you.

Remember my 10th birthday, when you gave me that funny piece of green paper and everybody made such a fuss over it. (Except me.) Frankly, it was a pretty disappointing present for a kid. I couldn't eat it, couldn't play with it, couldn't wear it—and Mom took it away from me practically the minute I got it.

And every birthday after that (and Christmas, too), you gave me another one of those Bonds, you called them. I thought you were pretty gooney.

At least, I never had to guess what I was going to get from good old reliable Aunt Sarah.

And what I got was good old reliable U.S. Savings Bonds.

What I didn't realize then was that you gave me a gift of security for the future. Thanks to you and those Bonds, I had extra funds for college. And they helped when I bought my first new car.

Next week, I'm giving my nephew, Harry, his first U.S. Savings Bond. I know the kid is gonna think I'm some kind of nut. But, someday . . .

Take stock in America.
Now Bonds pay a bonus at maturity.

Sculptor Works On Crazy Horse

By WILLIAM C. WERTZ
Associated Press Writer

CRAZY HORSE, S. D. (AP) — As summer warms the high reaches of South Dakota's Black Hills, the boom of dynamite is heard once more on Thunderhead Mountain.

The tourists gawk, the natives grumble, and sculptor Korczak Ziolkowski keeps chipping away at his 18-million-ton rock.

He has been working on it 23 years now, and there still is not much to look at. A notch has been carved into one side of the granite bluff and a round tunnel blasted straight through. It still takes plenty of imagination to see it as a statue of Crazy Horse, the famed Sioux warrior who defeated Gen. George Custer and the U. S. Cavalry—a statue so huge 4,000 men could stand on the chief's outflung arm.

But that is Ziolkowski's dream, an immense undertaking that began with a letter from a Sioux, Chief Henry Standing Bear, who asked the sculptor to "caress a mountain so the white man will know that the red man had great heroes too."

Since then, the Crazy Horse monument, which includes in its final form a $50 million American Indian Center with a hospital, university, museum and airport, has been his obsession.

"Some people say I'll never finish," Ziolkowski, 62, says. "I say so what. The hell with them. It hasn't cost them a cent."

The tourists who keep Ziolkowski's project solvent walk through many of the rooms in his 57-room studio-home at the base of the mountain peering at his antique furniture, admiring his smaller sculptures and reading the hundreds of newspaper and magazine articles about himself Ziolkowski has mounted on the wall.

"This town is amazing," he says. "I think it's fair to say that I'm not universally liked here. If lumber costs you $10 it will cost me $12. Everything's like that.... Tourists come from all over the country to see this and Custer lives on tourists. They like me for that, there's no question about that.

"But they sit down there and say: 'Why doesn't the old man get going? Why doesn't he get it finished?' You see, they want even more tourists. They want another Mount Rushmore. They're afraid I'll drop dead before it's done and then they'll have nothing. They think I'm fooling around up here, sitting back and living the good life.

Ziolkowski was not welcomed with open arms when he accepted Standing Bear's request and went to the Black Hills in 1947 to begin work on the Crazy Horse monument.

Newspapers editorialized against making the Black Hills a sculptor's gallery and Indians, including Standing Bear himself, were critical of Ziolkowski's marble model of the memorial. The sculptor had the figure's hair loose and flowing. His research, he said, showed the Sioux wore their hair into battle that way. Those who thought Crazy Horse's hair was braided or that he wore a war bonnet were unconvinced, but Ziolkowski was adamant, and there was no picture of the chieftain to prove him wrong.

So Crazy Horse it was, the strategist and tactician who united the Sioux nation in its brightest moment at Little Big Horn in 1876, a chieftain Ziolkowski describes as "an Indian's Indian."

When a scoffing white man once asked Crazy Horse what had become of his lands, he is reported to have replied, pointing: "My lands are where my dead lie buried." Ziolkowski's monument will depict Crazy Horse in this pose, and, when and if it is ever finished, it will dwarf every other work of art known to man, including the great pyramids of Egypt, the Washington Monument and Mount Rushmore itself. The feather in Crazy Horse's hair will be 44 feet high. A 12-room house would sit comfortably in his pony's nostril, and a 10-story building would fit in the space between the chief's arm and the pony's neck.

Already Ziolkowski has blasted three million tons of rock off the mountain, some eight times more than it took to complete Mount Rushmore. He figures he's about half through. It is a mining-engineering job, and Ziolkowski attacks it with huge air compressors to drill, tons of dynamite to blast and gigantic bulldozers to clear away the rubble.

The finances for the monument are handled by the Crazy Horse Memorial Commission, composed of prominent area residents. Ziolkowski draws no official salary from the commission and pays no personal income tax. The commission has tax-exempt status and contributions to it are deductible. But tourists, at $2 per carload, bring in the bulk of the funds, $179,000 in 1970, Ziolkowski says, the best year ever.

A few more good years, the sculptor says, and the public will begin to see the shape of the Indian emerge from the stone mountain. Some are concerned he won't get those years.

"If I die, I die. It's all over. I'll have done my best. I won't owe anybody anything. The white men didn't ask me here. They've got nothing coming," he says.

"This is my dream. If I die, my dream dies too."

Ziolkowski has faith, he says, that completion of the statue lies close at hand, perhaps as early as 1978. But Thunderhead Mountain, in spite of all Ziolkowski's efforts over two decades, still stands relatively unchanged and immobile. Most who see it agree that the sculptor will need more than faith to move it.

US Casualties Up Slightly

SAIGON (AP) — The total of American battlefield deaths in Vietnam increased slightly last week but maintained the six-year low that has prevailed for the past month, the U.S. Command reported today.

The total of South Vietnamese killed in action was the lowest in more than two years, and the enemy toll was nearly 40 per cent less than the week before.

The U.S. Command reported 18 Americans killed in action, four more than were reported the previous week.

The South Vietnamese command reported 170 government troops killed in combat last week, the lowest toll since May 3, 1969.

The allied commands reported 1,006 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong killed last week, 628 less than the week before.

Munsel Signed For Musical

NEW YORK (AP) — Opera star Patrice Munsel has been signed to star in a Broadway musical based on the life of writer Dorothy Parker. Material for the show was acquired from the estate of Miss Parker. Plans call for staging in the fall of next year.

Ella To Regain Useful Vision

BOSTON (AP) — Jazz singer Ella Fitzgerald can expect to regain useful vision after cataract surgery in both eyes, say specialists at Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary.

all breath has ceased,
Unmeasured in the sea of time
with every joy increased,
While bitterness, envy, and hatred and wrongs of every kind
Are all destroyed completely
or somehow left behind,
And where each single thought always holds a kindly glow,
As love becomes at once the

Dallas Has Bus Shortage

DALLAS (AP) — A shortage of buses in the Dallas school system to implement a federally ordered desegregation plan may affect almost 6,000 black pupils, a school official said Thursday.

The plan requires about 105 buses, the spokesman said, and only about 50 buses may be available.

Pupils having to travel the greatest distances may be given bus transportation priority when school begins Sept. 7, the spokesman said.

Dallas Mayor Wes Wise met with two White House aides Thursday and said afterwards he was convinced that President Nixon is receiving "good intelligence" on school desegregation problems in Dallas and other cities.

City and White House officials spent three hours going over Dallas maps.

"They emphasized the federal government is looking for help, advice and information and that is why they came down here," Wise said.

In other school developments, the Catholic Diocesan School Board said the freeze on new registrations for Catholic schools in Dallas County will continue indefinitely.

The freeze was put into effect July 8 as a reaction to the desegregation suit in the public school system. At the time board officials and the diocesean clergy said it was a move to keep the Catholic schools from becoming "havens for segregationists."

Dr. Emmett Conrad, the first Negro elected to the school board, cast the only negative vote against the plan because it mainly involves blacks.

The plan calls for the transfer of about 7,000 pupils, including about 6,000 blacks.

"We're trying to get buses now, but we might have to limit bus transportation only to those students with the greatest need," a school official said.

"If the community is really concerned about busing," Conrad said, "then they should be concerned about the five or six thousand blacks. If they're not, then people here are just pure hypocrites."

VICTIMS OF VIOLENCE — Five-month-old Teresa Glennon, youngest refugee at the Irish army camp set up at Gormanston, County Louth, in the Irish Republic is held by Paula Curran of Belfast. Wave Of Violence Ebbs In Northern Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The tide of violence in Northern Ireland ebbed today after four days of rioting, shooting and firebombing that has left 25 dead and hundreds injured.

Despite the lull, which appeared to be a recess of exhaustion by British troops and the Irish Republican Army, more hundreds of Roman Catholics fled south to the Irish Republic.

Slowly as the day brought no fresh outbursts of violence, the 412,000 residents of Belfast began filling the stores and the offices, to work and to shop in almost normal fashion.

Wholesale trucks once more ventured on their rounds. Slowly they conquered the food shortages of the week. Belfast, except in the burned out trouble areas, began to look almost normal.

In Belfast, Londonderry and Newry, all centers of religious and IRA fury since last weekend, the snipers and the bombers went underground.

One blast marred the peace—an explosion that damaged a Northern Ireland government building near Castlederg.

Police, freed of fires and snipers, moved to stem the flow of refugees, the thousands of Roman Catholics and Protestants who fled their homes this week in fear. Police said they would deal harshly with any cases where militants intimidate residents.

Still the Catholics fled to the Irish Republic and the Protestants to friends in the quiestest parts of Belfast, to Liverpool across the Irish Sea and to other English cities.

Brig. Marston Tickell, army chief of staff in Northern Ireland, hailed the fragile armistice as an outright defeat of gunmen of the outlawed IRA at least, in part the result of the provincial internment-without-trial campaign.

It was this government internment order that touched off the latest round of fighting led by the IRA. It wants to unite Northern Ireland with the Irish Republic.

British troops, targets of both Catholic and Protestant snipers during the wave of violence, killed another civilian Thursday night during an ambush of a military patrol in Londonderry's Catholic Bogside district. An army spokesman said a pistol was found at the dead man's side.

Troops and roaming gunmen in Belfast exchanged shots but no casualties were reported. Four explosions occurred in the town of Newry, near the Irish border, and a frontier roadblock at Aughnacloy, County Tyrone, was peppered by a dozen shots from the Irish side of the border.

In Dublin, capital of the Irish Republic, Prime Minister Jack Lynch called for replacement of Northern Ireland's all-Protestant government by an administration giving equal voice to the province's Catholic minority and Protestant majority.

Lynch, regarded as a moderate in the Catholic South, also denounced the terrorists of the outlawed Irish Republican Army but blamed "the misgovernment to which the North has been subjected for so long" for the bloodshed.

Mass arrests and internment by the Belfast government of more than 300 suspected republican terrorists early Monday touched off the rioting.

Bathing Suit Causes Stir

LONDON (AP) — The state-owned British Broadcasting Corp. has caused a minor stir by distributing pictures of Princess Anne in a bathing suit.

Taken by BBC television cameramen, the pictures were issued Thursday as illustrations for reviews of a BBC booklet on the princess' safari in East Africa earlier this year.

One shows Anne walking with a companion along an Indian Ocean beach in Kenya, wearing a one-piece bathing suit. The photo is of the type the royal family has always barred photographers from taking.

Some sources said the royal family had permitted the pictures to be taken and published on assurances proceeds from sale of the 72-cent booklet would aid the Save the Children Fund, but the Daily Mirror said the princess was being used.

"Extraordinarily, any cash benefits ... go to the BBC, not to the charity. Right or wrong, the fund takes second place," the Daily Mirror said.

"The book underlines the astonishing way in which the royal family, normally so wary of their image, allow themselves to be manipulated by television, almost like professional performers."

Radio Program

Rev. D. L. Nipp will bring the message over Radio Station KVMC (1320), Colorado City, at 2 p.m. Sunday. He will speak on "This I Believe - Be Ye Doers of the Word and Not Hearers Only, Deceiving Only Yourselves."

"Time To Reason" Is Heard Weekly

Rev. Clarence Minton, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Loraine, is the regular speaker on the radio program "Time to Reason." This program is presented at 7:30 a.m. each Sunday morning over Radio Station KVMC (1320), Colorado City.

Profit Eyed On Ike Dollars

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government hopes to earn more than $100 million from sale of the Eisenhower silver dollar, making it the most profitable U.S. coin ever minted. It also may be the last made of silver.

The profit will be stretched out over several years as the U.S. Mint disposes of some 150 million Ike silver dollars to collectors and others interested in buying it at a premium.

Mary T. Brooks, director of the mint, says she hopes the sale will net the Treasury well in excess of $100 million, although she said she can provide no exact profit estimate.

"It goes to the taxpayer, right into the Treasury," she said. "The mint isn't trying to make any money."

The silver dollar, first one minted in the United States since 1935, is being sold at two prices to the public—$3 for mass-produced uncirculated coins and $10 for the highly polished, high-relief proof coin.

According to Mrs. Brooks, orders for the silver coin bearing the likeness of former President Dwight D. Eisenhower "are coming in by the millions."

"We hope to make $1 each on the uncirculated dollars," she said. The mint plans to strike 130 million of those.

She would give no estimate of profit—or loss—on the $10 proof coins, which are minted by hand, polished with diamond dust, and sealed in a plastic case.

"We're very modest in our prices on our proof coins," she said. "A proof coin we sell for $5 here goes for $12 and $15 overseas."

In the past, the Treasury has picked up no more than $4 million a year from its proof-coin sales. And, the total profit last year on both proof and uncirculated coins for collectors was about $9 million.

The Eisenhower proof dollar should double in value quickly, Mrs. Brooks said, with the uncirculated dollar coin, doubling in value in five years.

She said it probably will be the last silver coin ever minted in the United States.

Bath, England's noted spa, was once a Roman bath.

HOLD ON

How we love to watch these trapeze artists perform! We watch them in amazement, though feeling some peril in their doings. We can almost hear the crowd say "Hold On!" It is a parable of you and me. God is the strong member of the team. We live every day in peril and difficulty . . . we hang from His hand.

We must hold to the hand of God if we win. Prayer is our aid to keep his hand in ours. We read The Book and attend His church for courage and strength. But a closer look will give us hope. We are "holding on" to God but better still God is "holding on" to us.

God does not faint or grow weary. Then "hold on" to Him, for "He shall renew thy strength."

You In The Church The Church In You
