Explosion rocks Olympics

4 people die in Centennial Park blast, morgue attendant says

■ Thousands were watching concert when explosion struck; there was no immediate word on cause.

Associated Press

ATLANTA (AP) — An explosion rocked Centennial Olympic Park early Saturday, injuring hundreds of people. A morgue attendant said he had been told four people were killed.

A spokeswoman for the Atlanta Fire Department, who would not give her name, said that 150 to 200 people were injured at about 1:15 a.m. when the explosion struck a tower near a stage where thousands of people were watching a concert.

R. Green, of the Fulton County Medical Examiner's Office, said he was told by the Atlanta Police Bomb Squad of the four deaths.

There was no immediate word on the cause of the blast.

The explosion that rocked neighboring buildings and could be heard throughout the downtown area, where thousands of people have gathered every night since the Olympic Games began July 19.

"I felt the ground shake," said Desmond Edwards, an Atlanta schoolteacher who witnessed the blast. "I think one lady was definitely dead. She wasn't moving.

"Some people looked really messed up. There were rivers of blood."

A sea of ambulances, fire trucks and police cars moved into the area trying to reach the injured, and at least 25 ambulances sped away from the scene, sirens wailing, taking the injured to nearby hospitals.

"I thought it was fireworks, like a big boom, and I saw three guys laying in the street," said Terry Tyson, who witnessed the explosion. "They all had leg injuries. Blood was running down the street. It was horrible."

Snenetricus Warford said the explosion appeared to come from a garbage can.

"I looked up, there was fire and smoke going up. People were there. It blew them over. Some people got hit, some people didn't get hit.

"People were dancing, watching the concert, having a good time and it went up," she said. "I saw flames."

The tower, apparently used for lighting and sound at the main concert stage in the park, was still standing after the blast, but debris littered the base of the structure.

Tom Williams was standing just across the street when he heard the tower "blow up."

"I was walking along and three people were laying in the street," he said. "I didn't see any fire, just smoke."

He said the three men he saw must have been "blown over the fence" that surrounds the park, since there was no other debris in the street.

Another witness, Chris Bender, said he heard what sounded like a cannon. "I saw a bunch of smoke come up and saw particles in my eyes," he said.

Plane hijacking

MIAMI — A man claiming he had a bomb hijacked a Madrid-to-Havana flight Friday and demanded to be taken to Miami where he surrendered to police. All 232 people aboard were safely taken off the plane, and the bomb turned out to be fake. Iberia Airlines Flight 6621 landed at Miami International Airport at 3 p.m., and once the DC-10 taxied to an open area in the middle of the airport, police stormed the plane. Page 10A

Airport security

Following the explosion of TWA Flight 800, security has been beefed up at national airports, including Midland International Airport, but most passengers aren't complaining. Passengers at Midland's airport on Friday saw evidence of this when security enforced the five-minute limit on curb parking, asked more questions about destinations and luggage at the ticket counter and searched carry-on luggage. A billboard on Highway 80 offers a birthday wish to slain Midland teen James Irvin Poole (Jip) Jr.: "Happy birthday Jip. We love you. We miss you. Born 7-27-77. Murdered 7-28-95. Justice for Jip?"

The words are few, but the billboard message on Highway 80 offering a birthday wish to a slain Midland teenager is striking. "Happy birthday Jip. We love you. We miss you. Born 7-27-77. Murdered 7-28-95. Justice for Jip?"

"It's hard to think about," said Kenny Walden, 20, a fellow Midland High School student and friend of James Irvin Poole (Jip) Jr.

Poole died from a single stab wound to the chest that penetrated his heart and lung. He went to a site of a planned fight where he was stabbed by Tommy John Rains, then 17, about 2 a.m. July 28, 1995, at 1010 S. County Road 1233 — the roadway leading to Midland Memorial Rehabilitation Hospital off Loop 250.

Poole's family has said, in previous Reporter-Telegram interviews, that the teen-ager expected to be involved in a "fair fight" without weapons. A Midland jury found Rains guilty of murder March 6, 1996, and sentenced him to 10 years in prison.

On Friday afternoon, Walden stopped to contemplate the billboard with the memorial message for his late friend. "He was a good kid and a good friend. He was just in the wrong place at the wrong time," Walden said, noting he lost Poole to violence, two other friends to suicide and another to drug addiction.

He said he has seen bumper stickers around town memorializing Poole and then found out about the billboard, and decided to view it for himself.

Poole would have been 19 today and Sunday is the one-year anniversary of his death. His family has decided to Inclusion program concerns some teachers; summit on topic planned

By Myra Lee Salcedo

ODESSA — Putting physically and mentally disabled students into regular classrooms isn't working, according to a survey of Texas teachers.

"Despite the best of intentions, educators have not received sufficient training in dealing with special needs students," said Larry Comer, director of public relations for the Association of Texas Professional Educators (ATPE).

Comer

ATPE representatives presented survey findings at a Friday morning news conference at Odessa's Aim High School. In an effort to bring educators, administrators, state leaders, advocates for the disabled and special education experts together, ATPE has organized a one-day "Inclusion Summit," set for Monday in Austin's Omni Hotel.

The ATPE survey polled opinions of 1,500 teachers statewide on the issue of inclusion, or including special education students into regular classrooms.

"In the survey, 85 percent of public school educators say that Texas teachers have not received sufficient training to deal with students with special needs," Comer said. "And 64 percent say that inclusion takes too much time away from students without disabilities. All too often we hear stories of how special education students are literally dumped into regular classrooms where their productive educational experience comes to a halt."

Of the educators surveyed, 43 percent have been teaching 16 years or more, and 79 percent were general education teachers. Only 32 percent said administrators provide teachers with the support they needed to teach special education students, and 54 percent said "General education teachers who work in or with the school to educate students with spe-

Boys weren't abandoned, officials say

By Joe Gaines
Staff Writer

Three boys who were found along State Highway 158 east of Greenwood Thursday had wandered from home and were not abandoned as Midland sheriff deputies originally thought.

The boys had told authorities that a family member had dropped them along the side of the highway with instructions to "head toward Austin," Sheriff's Office Lt. Ed Krevit said.

But the boys, all brothers, ages 9, 6, and 5, only had strayed about a mile from their home on South Lincoln Street, Krevit said.

"The boys are living with their grandmother," he said.

The children's mother is an inmate at a state penitentiary and their father died about a year ago, Sheriff Gary Painter said.

After the boys were picked up, they were taken to Midlander William Penn died at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center Friday from serious head injuries after an accident on State Highway 349 north of Midland. Police said Penn, driving north-bound, was turning into Midland Country Club when he was struck on the right side by a southbound oil-field truck.

Man dies after oil-field truck collides with car

From Staff Reports

A Midland man died after being hit by an oil-field truck at 6101 N. State Highway 349 late Friday morning.

William Penn, 87, was driving his white sedan north on State Highway 349 at around 11:30 a.m. when he veered left into the southbound lane.

Gregorio Levya, 38, driving an oil-field truck south, hit his brakes when he saw the sedan move into the southbound lane, but was unable to stop in time, according to a police report.

The truck's breaks locked and the truck hit the sedan on the passenger's side, according to the report.

Penn was conscious and alert before being taken to Memorial Hospital and Medical Center where he was pronounced dead two hours later.

Police said Penn died of massive internal and head injuries.

He was not wearing a seat belt, police said.

Levya was not injured, according to the report.

Bosnians venture to Belgrade, find it easier to talk money than politics

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — One thing was clear: it was easier to talk money than politics.

When 25 Bosnian officials and company managers ventured to the Yugoslav and Serbian capital Belgrade this week for the first time since war erupted in 1992, the managers got right down to business.

"We could, actually, almost skip the individual introductions," said Zivorad Ratajac, director of Belgrade's Kopaonik construction company. "You know me. I've been working with you for 30 years."

That was true for many of the suited men, sitting 15 on each side of a huge, polished conference table, with three U.S. diplomats in attendance. They sipped juice and strong coffee served in small cups.

The meeting was a U.S.-brokered effort to help promote a united Bosnia.

In Communist Yugoslavia, production had been divided up so that parts made in different regions were assembled in yet another. Those ties were cut by wars that left only Serbia and Montenegro in the current Yugoslavia.

If new deals are forged, goods traded between Bosnia and Serbia would have to pass through Bosnian Serb-held territory, weakening ties between Serbia and the Bosnian Serbs and helping keep Bosnia whole.

Serbia, which has suffered under international sanctions for its role in fomenting Bosnia's war, would gain more economic activity by winning a share of Bosnia's post-war reconstruction.

The losers would be the Bosnian Serbs, who would be farther than ever from their goal of an independent state that could unite with Serbia. They grumbled about Tuesday's meeting but were still smarting from the U.S.-forced ouster of their leader Radovan Karadzic last week.

Around the conference table, both sides seemed eager to reestablish ties. Talk of ceramic tiles, roof insulation, glass and chemicals flowed far more fluently than political haggling over minority rights and diplomatic ties.

"Gentlemen, my company imported goods for 140 million German marks ($93 million) in the last three months," said Salko Selimovic, general manager of Feroelektro, a Sarajevo electronics firm. "We calculated that half could have come from Serbia. You are welcome to participate in the competition."

The American diplomats were like teachers closely supervising a classroom. They had every word translated into English.

The Bosnian and Yugoslav delegations agreed to reopen telecommunications, air, road and rail links and to abolish visas to allow free movement. They also swiftly agreed on opening trade offices in Sarajevo and Belgrade.

Politics — and tempers — did intervene.

The agreement called it a deal between the Muslim-Croat federation, which controls half of Bosnia. The Bosnians insisted they represented all of Bosnia, including the Serbs who control the other half.

Belgrade said it already had a trade office with the Serb-held lands, and would not open a second one with the federation. The Bosnians joked that that office had the importance of a chess club, a delegation source said.

After six hours' haggling and intervention by U.S. Ambassador to Bosnia John Menzies, who was in Belgrade to handle any political problems, the Serbs agreed to the words "Bosnia-Herzegovina" in the agreement.

But even U.S. pressure could not break down the barriers over who started the war and who should pay for it.

Ejup Ganic, Bosnian vice president, got nowhere in persuading Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic to establish diplomatic relations with Bosnia.

Milosevic, who is widely blamed for fomenting Bosnia's war, countered that Bosnia should drop its World Court suit charging Yugoslavia with aggression and genocide. If Bosnia wins, it will seek war reparations.

"I told Milosevic, 'If you are innocent, there is nothing to worry about,'" Ganic said.

In keeping with his custom of appearing or speaking rarely in public, Milosevic said nothing about the visit and remained isolated from reporters by a wall of security.

In the street outside, people talked readily about money, complaining of a difficult life, low salaries and high prices — grievances common across most of war-wracked former Yugoslavia.

Most did not understand the reason for the international sanctions, which they blame for Serbia's economic ruin.

"With all due respect, lady," said Dragan Nikolic, 58, a mechanical engineer, "what has Serbia to do with war in your country?"

China executes 12 as part of crackdown on crime

BEIJING (AP) — Nine gang members convicted of murdering at least six people and three other convicted criminals were executed as part of a three-month crackdown on crime, official media reported Friday.

All 12 were shot to death Thursday, nine in Beijing and three in Shanghai, the reports said. Criminals are normally executed with a single bullet.

The gang had lured four taxi drivers to a gang member's house in Beijing, beat them to death and sold their taxis for a total of $43,000, the Beijing Daily said.

In Shanghai, 38-year-old Wang Jianguo was executed for killing a woman in April, the Xinmin Evening News reported. The newspaper did not provide details on the two other executions.

Israel seals off West Bank after Palesinians kill 2 in drive-by shooting

By Douglas Jehl
N.Y. Times News Service

JERUSALEM — Israel sealed off the West Bank Friday after suspected Palestinian militants killed two Israelis and critically wounded a third in a drive-by shooting after midnight on a road outside the capital.

The slaying was the first fatal attack on Jews in Israel since Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu took office, and it tested his vow to succeed where his predecessors failed in establishing a sense of security for ordinary Israelis.

After a stormy Cabinet meeting, Netanyahu issued a statement demanding that Yasser Arafat, the Palestinian leader, do more to "quash the terror of the terrorist organizations, without distinction."

But Arafat replied by denouncing the new blockade as "a breach" of agreements between Israel and the Palestinians. And one of his top advisers called the move "a barbaric act, a provocation and an act of revenge."

The shooting took place about 1 a.m. near the Israeli farming town of Tirosh, about 10 miles from the West Bank, when a moving car opened fire at a white sedan with four people inside.

The Israeli authorities identified those killed in the attack as Uri Munk and his daughter-in-law, Rachel Munk. Munk's son, Zeev, was critically wounded in the head, and the elder Munk's wife, Aliza, was treated for shock.

'How can the closure lead to an end of such attacks when it prevents the Palestinian people from making their daily bread?'
— Nabil Abu Rdainah, Yasser Arafat's media adviser

The shots, which shattered the sedan's side windows, were fired from a Kalashnikov assault rifle, Israel television said. The report Friday night also said police ballistics tests showed that the same rifle had been used in two other fatal drive-by shootings this year, including an attack in the same area last month that killed an Israeli couple.

The Israeli army radio said the authorities believed that the gunmen belonged to the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, a faction of the Palestine Liberation Organization that is opposed to peace with Israel.

As the army imposed a complete closing of the West Bank, barring its 1 million Palestinian residents from entering Israel, some members of Netanyahu's conservative government called for even harsher action, including a cessation of all peace talks.

The authorities said the new closing would remain in effect indefinitely, and the police set up roadblocks that prevented Palestinians from entering or leaving the West Bank town of Hebron, to which the gunmen were believed to have fled.

The drive-by shooting was the third since Netanyahu's election, but only the first since he took power last month, and Palestinian officials made plain their alarm at what they called an overreaction.

"How can the closure lead to an end of such attacks when it prevents the Palestinian people from making their daily bread?" said Nabil Abu Rdainah, Arafat's media adviser.

Cambodia urges monks to halt cremation of victims' bodies

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — The government begged Buddhist monks Friday to stop cremating the remains of victims massacred when the Khmer Rouge-ruled Cambodia, saying the bones are evidence needed to bring killers to justice.

Second Prime Minister Hun Sen appealed to monks to safeguard the evidence of the 1975-78 reign of terror, noting that a research team from the United States is gathering evidence on the killings.

Hun Sen said the evidence could even bring Pol Pot, the notorious Khmer Rouge leader, to justice before an international court.

"If anyone, including monks or civilians, attempts to burn Cambodian remains, it is wrong," he said during a speech in the northwestern province of Siem Reap. "The act will not be supported by millions of Cambodian people."

The Cambodian Genocide Project, financed primarily by the U.S. Congress, is engaged in a two-year program aimed at gathering evidence for possible prosecution of Khmer Rouge leaders.

The $500,000 project, run by Yale University, is scheduled for completion before the end of the year.

The Khmer Rouge sought to make Cambodia an agrarian-based Communist society, but relied mostly on terror to control the country. As many as 2 million Cambodians are believed to have perished from starvation, overwork and execution.

Already the project's researchers have uncovered hundreds of mass graves around the country, indicating the number of Cambodians killed during the Khmer Rouge's rule may be double previous estimates of 1 million.

The Khmer Rouge continues to defy the authority of the government which came to power in a 1993 U.N.-supervised election.

The government estimates that there are some 2,000 Khmer Rouge guerrillas remaining in the jungles along Cambodia's western and northern borders, though Western military observers put the number as high as 5,000.

Hun Sen was formerly with the Khmer Rouge and now is vice president of the formerly communist Cambodian People's Party, which was formed from the group which succeeded the Khmer Rouge in 1979. It shares power in a coalition government.

WEATHER WATCH

Forecast says high to be in mid-90s

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies, 20 percent chance of rain and a high in the mid-90s with south winds at 10-20 mph, according to the National Weather Service.

Tonight's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies, less than 20 percent chance of rain and a low near 70.

Sunday's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies, less than 20 percent chance of rain and a high in the mid-90s.

The high for Friday was 93, compared to the record high for that date of 105, set in 1995.

Friday's low was 70, compared to the record low of 61, set in 1933.

STATE

Texas skies were clear to cloudy Friday as conditions ranged from sunny and hot to wet and warm.

Rain dampened East Texas, the upper coast and low rolling plains. Hail the size of golfballs pounded Turkey in Hall County.

Numerous showers, thunderstorms and water spouts affected much of the middle and upper Texas coasts between San Antonio Bay and Port Arthur. The activity extended inland about 75 miles.

High temperatures peaked mostly in the 80s and 90s but readings ranged at 4 p.m. from 78 degrees in Port Arthur to 99 in Del Rio.

Winds were southerly at 10 mph with gusts to 20 mph in Denton.

The North Texas forecast is for partly cloudy skies today with a chance of thunderstorms. Highs will be 90 to 97 degrees. Lows will be 69 to 75.

South Texas will be partly cloudy with scattered showers and thunderstorms along and within 75 miles of the middle and upper coasts. Mostly sunny elsewhere. Temperatures will range from near 100 near the Rio Grande to near 90 along the upper coast. Lows in the 60s and 70s.

swarmed through the streets trying to clear the area, forcing people away from the park that sits at the hub of the Olympic Games. Three major sports arenas are adjacent to the park, though sports competition had ended when the explosion occurred.

The park was packed with people, many of whom ran through the streets in tears. Hospitals, meanwhile, braced to treat the injured.

"I know we've been told we'll been getting some injured people and to be prepared to accept them," said Shirley Hawkins, spokesman for Piedmont Hospital. "I don't know how many, but we got a call from the fire department that ambulances are on the way with injured people."

Flight 800 flew 24 seconds after initial catastrophe, radar shows

SMITHTOWN, N.Y. (NYT) — Radar records show that TWA Flight 800 apparently continued to fly for at least 24 seconds after the cataclysmic event that doomed it, raising the possibility that some of the passengers and crew may have been alive in the last horrifying seconds before the crippled jet broke apart in a fireball, investigators said Friday.

The radar information does not give a clue as to whether the cockpit crew had any functioning controls to work with after the plane was disabled at 13,700 feet by either a mechanical problem, a bomb or a missile — investigators still do not know which.

But the investigators said the records indicated that the jetliner's engines probably continued to run as it moved over the water at more than 400 miles an hour. The plane was also descending rapidly, and by the time it reached about 8,500 feet, a fireball erupted, fed by the jet fuel that investigators presume was gushing from the plane's tanks.

The scenario, based on information from a radar dish that takes 12 seconds to make a 360-degree sweep of several thousand miles, did not make investigators any more certain of the cause of the problems. But it did help establish the framework for a sequence of failures.

According to the investigators, the radar made two sweeps after the initial event in which the plane appeared to be basically intact. But by the time the radar made its third 12-second sweep, two pieces of the plane became visible on radar.

Federal officials said that there were no signs of problems on either the flight data recorder or cockpit voice recorder except for a loud noise at the end of the voice recorder, and except for the obvious fact that they quit working a fraction of a second after the noise was heard.

According to the National Transportation Safety Board, the last moment of normal functioning was at about 8:31:12 p.m., when the plane was climbing toward 15,000 feet with its wings level. Within 12 seconds of then — the time that a radar at Islip, N.Y., takes to make a full-circle snapshot of planes in its sector — the beacon that broadcasts the plane's identity and altitude failed.

About the same time, possibly at the same instant, power was cut to the flight data recorder and the cockpit voice recorder. And sometime around then the pilots' radios probably ceased to function.

But the plane was in the air for another 2.5 nautical miles, another 41 seconds. For at least 24 of those seconds, the jetliner continued at a more or less constant speed over the water, about 380 knots, but its speed through the air was apparently rising rapidly, because it was descending to the point where it became a fireball. A normal airliner descends at about 1,500 feet per minute; this would have been about five times faster.

In that rapid descent it was apparently also shedding some large, though relatively light pieces, which were found in what investigators now call Debris Field No. 2, an area southeast of the plane's track over the water. These may be sides of the fuselage, investigators say.

honor his memory with a 12-hour gathering of friends and family. "It would be hard to go to the party," Walden said. "But I think it is a healthy thing to do."

"People handle grief in different ways. Getting people together in a party and remembering someone is one way to handle grieving," said Lydia Frescaz, a victims' rights advocate and the mother of a woman who was murdered several years ago. "'It's terrible for Jip's parents. They lost their only son," she said.

Jip's father, James "Sonny" Poole, said today's event will give family and friends an opportunity to come together and talk, eat and play volleyball. "We are expecting about 200-300 people. We will get a lot of kids out here and keep them off the street for awhile."

Poole said the family plans to decorate the Midland County house that is the site of the gathering — and roadways leading to the house — with green ribbons. Green was Jip's favorite color and the ribbons now represent victims' rights to the family.

When asked about the difficulty of honoring their son's birthday and remembering his date of death so close together, Poole said it is actually a blessing in disguise.

"This way it's only one time of year we have to face both those things," he said.

The boys were healthy and in good condition, but hungry, Painter said.

Child Protective Services returned the children to their grandmother Friday, Krevit said.

Even though she could be charged with neglectful supervision, Krevit said those chances are slim.

The boys have six other siblings who are staying with relatives in Austin, Painter said.

DEATHS

Ted Meyers

Memorial services for Ted Meyers, 74, are to be at 4:30 p.m. today, July 27, at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Dick Braun officiating. Arrangements are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Meyers died Wednesday, July 24, at a local hospital.

She was born Nov. 30, 1921, in Honey Grove, where she was raised and educated.

She attended business college in Houston.

She married Robert Meyers in 1943.

She moved to Midland in 1949. She was a member of First Presbyterian Church and former member of Desk and Derrick Club. She was a volunteer for the Petroleum Museum and Hospice of Midland.

Midland International Airport boosts security

By Joe Gaines
Staff Writer

Following the explosion of TWA Flight 800, security has been beefed up at national airports, including Midland International Airport, but most passengers aren't complaining.

Passengers at Midland's airport on Friday saw evidence of this when security enforced the five-minute limit on curb parking, asked more questions about destinations and luggage at the ticket counter and searched carry-on luggage.

President Clinton ordered the new security measures for all domestic and international flights as a response to concern that terrorism might have brought down TWA Flight 800.

Midland airport officials received the orders Thursday night from the FAA, which reiterated the orders Friday morning, an airport official said.

Details of exact changes in security were not released, but passengers should come prepared for minor delays, said Marv Esterly, assistant director of airports.

"Passengers are asked to keep in constant contact with their luggage, especially carry-on," Esterly said.

He also warned that passengers should have proof of identification and have their luggage tagged.

"Everyone's luggage will not be searched, but there will be more searches than usual," Esterly said.

An additional guard was added at the checkpoint before the gates. Security officers would not say what might initiate a search of someone's carry-on luggage, but passengers with electronic devices like beepers or lap top computers were asked to have their luggage examined.

The added security created lines that were longer than usual, but most passengers came prepared and no one seemed to be complaining.

One passenger who was stopped at the checkpoint was asked to open his lap top computer and turn it on.

"I found out last night about the added security and came early," said Rod Walsh who was traveling to Houston. "But you can't take any chances. It's unfortunate that it's needed, but I'm surprised it took them so long to start doing this."

Another passenger, destined for Dallas came prepared and was glad for the tightened security.

"It doesn't bother me at all," Laurie Ward, of Odessa, said. "I'd rather they search more than not enough."

After passing the checkpoint, Ms. Ward found a long line to receive her boarding pass. "I didn't expect this kind of line though for four in the afternoon," Ms. Ward said.

Midland's airport is at a level three security and has been since August 1995. The highest level of security is a level four, which was ordered by the FAA during Desert Storm, Esterly said.

"The FAA can add or modify these levels at any time," he said.

Even though the level of security has been modified, Esterly said the airport has enough officers to handle the FAA's security changes.

At the ticket counter, passengers should expect the same as usual, said Erin Esterly, a Southwest Airline customer service supervisor.

"We are taking added security measures, but we can not say what those are," she said.

In the past, passengers have been told to arrive at the airport an hour before their departure time. But officials could not agree whether passengers needed to arrive earlier because of added security and delays.

"They have been asking passengers at the larger airports, like DFW, to arrive an hour and half earlier, but because of our size and easier access, I don't know if that would be necessary here," Esterly said.

Officials a Southwest's ticket counter agreed.

"We are still asking passengers to arrive an hour before their flight," Ms. Esterly said.

Divers find 2 TWA engines; technicians analyze recorded sound

EAST MORICHES, N.Y. (AP) — Divers spotted two of the shattered TWA jetliner's four engines Friday and used grappling hooks to look for chunks of wreckage with tell-tale marks of a bomb or a missile.

In Washington, meanwhile, technicians compared the split-second sound recorded just before the cockpit tape broke off with a sound library of explosions from previous terrorist attacks.

Robert Francis, vice chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board, characterized the discovery of the engines as "extraordinarily important."

But officials said that they did not know what shape the engines were in and they probably would not be lifted to the surface immediately.

Francis said Friday that wreckage would henceforth be raised to the surface if divers suspected it contained bodies. That would help forensics experts, who still have less than 1 percent of the plane's wreckage.

No physical evidence — such as chemical residue from explosives on airline debris, or suspect material in victims' bodies — has been found to support, much less confirm, suspicions of terrorism.

But "mechanical failure" — for a week the mantra of the cautious or simply the optimistic — faded as a likely explanation.

A safety board investigator said Friday that the cockpit tape recording — which captured a mysterious, split-second noise, followed abruptly by stone silence — serves to help eliminate that possibility.

"When you have a (mechanical) emergency on an aircraft, there is usually some time to deal with it, even if the plane lost power in all four engines," said the investigator, who spoke on condition of anonymity. "An aircraft does not just stop flying, even in the event of an electrical failure."

And such failure, he said, is unlikely to cause a catastrophic explosion.

The 747 burst into fire over the Atlantic on July 17, killing all 230 aboard in the second-worst disaster in U.S. aviation history.

More than half the victims' bodies have been recovered. Divers brought up 12 more late Thursday and early Friday for a total of 138.

On Friday, the safety board set up a "family information center" at the Kennedy Airport hotel where about 125 families are staying.

NTSB technicians subjected the cockpit voice tape to sound spectrum analysis, a process capable of differentiating between an explosion caused by a mechanical malfunction and one caused by a bomb.

"Even a fraction of a second could show us that," said the board investigator.

Barry Trotter, a former NTSB senior investigator, said technicians use computers to "enhance the sound, slow it down, spread it out," and chart it on a graph.

A fast-moving bomb noise would show a sharp, steep line, while a slower-moving fuel explosion sound would have more of a slope.

The board has a library of sounds from other crashes, said Trotter, including the brief, sudden burst of the bomb that destroyed Pan Am Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, in 1988.

Technicians, he said, would "overlay one tape over the other and compare the various identifiable sounds to the fraction of a second they retrieved."

If the tape was not illuminating, investigators could at least look forward to having more wreckage, the recovery of which has been subordinated to retrieval of bodies.

Trotter noted that a bomb leaves a distinct signature of tiny pock marks on metal.

Aviation experts cite only four previous cases of a 747 being destroyed by a midair explosion: Pan Am 103; the 1983 downing of a Korean Air Lines flight by a Soviet fighter; a 1985 Air India crash off the Irish coast, which was later attributed to a terrorist bomb; and a 747 that had been converted into a freighter for the Iranian Air Force that caught fire, exploded and crashed in Spain in 1976. (The cause of the 1976 incident has never been determined, and the Iranian government did not allow a complete investigation.)

Engines can fail, but they rarely cause catastrophic explosions.

Thousands of veterans confront Bosnian president, demand benefits

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Thousands of angry Bosnian war veterans, many on crutches or in wheelchairs, converged on parliament Friday to demand the government pay back pensions and other state aid.

"We have fought for this country! We are ready to grab weapons and fight against this government if necessary!" one veteran shouted.

The government owes the veterans and families of soldiers killed in the 3½-year war about $52 million in back pensions, according to Amir Kriko, president of the veterans' group that organized the protest.

He said the vets, who are entitled to up to $20 a month, have received no state aid for the past seven months.

About 4,000 veterans traveled in buses from all over the country to join Friday's protest.

Chanting "This country is no good!" they demanded a meeting with President Alija Izetbegovic. Some tried to force their way into the parliament building, but were pushed back by police.

'We, who honestly degended this country, want to be equal citizens.'
— Amir Kriko, president of Bosnian veterans' organization

A shaken Izetbegovic abruptly left a meeting with Iran's vice president and told the crowd their demands would be met except for the overdue pension payments.

"We just don't have it," Izetbegovic said.

Idriz Zukan, who was wounded in the war, said the group gave the government a list of demands a month ago but officials were unresponsive. He said he, his wife and child had not received the $3 a month they were entitled to for seven months.

The Bosnian president was swept into the middle of the crowd, many of whom waved Bosnian flags and his picture and tried to touch or kiss him.

"Remove the thieves, Alija!" the protesters shouted, pointing at parliament. "Clean this building."

A distressed-looking Izetbegovic told them: "This country has enormous problems. We have a big crisis in Mostar. There could be another war down there."

Kriko read a list of demands, including immediate payment of overdue pensions and benefits, free medical care and public transportation, and special status for their veterans' group.

After consulting with the prime minister, Izetbegovic promised a two-month payment by Wednesday.

The veterans also asked the government to cancel business contracts made during the war by people who fled the country and are now returning to run businesses.

"We, who honestly defended this country, want to be equal citizens," Kriko said.

Sri Lankan government launches new offensive against Tamil rebel stronghold

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Sri Lanka's military, seeking to avenge its worst defeat in 13 years of civil war, sent jet fighters, field guns and tanks on a new offensive Friday against Tamil guerrilla strongholds in the northern jungles.

Fifteen soldiers were killed and 60 were wounded as the forces marched to within about 3½ miles of Kilinochchi, the town that has become the main base of the Tamil Tiger rebels, military officials said.

Most of the rebels and many civilians appeared to have fled the town. Some international relief agencies also withdrew their workers after the army began building up its forces in the area.

The army put Kilinochchi under curfew, and civilians were told to take shelter in schools, churches or Hindu temples, a military statement said.

Also Friday, thousands of soldiers began evacuating a military base after recapturing it from rebel fighters, the military said.

The Tamil attack on the Mullaittivu camp, 170 miles north of Colombo on the northeast coast, was the worst military defeat yet in the war. Only 30 soldiers from the 1,200-man garrison were found to have survived, and the camp was flattened by bulldozers.

Even as warships evacuated the troops from Mullaittivu on Friday, rebel mortar fire hit a naval landing craft, killing one soldier, the army said.

Meanwhile, at a police station in Colombo, police paraded Tamil suspects in front of survivors of a commuter train bombing that killed 63 people, hoping they could identify who planted the two bombs, officials said.

Meanwhile, at a police station in Colombo, police paraded Tamil suspects in front of survivors of a commuter train bombing that killed 63 people, hoping they could identify who planted the two bombs, officials said.

At least 40 Tamils from the war-torn north, including about a dozen women, have been picked up in police sweeps of Tamil neighborhoods near Dehiwala station, where the bombing occurred Wednesday, police officials said on condition of anonymity.

The two bombs exploded within seconds of each other on separate cars of the commuter train, wounding 350 people. A third bomb was discovered and defused.

Immediately after the blasts, police detained two Tamils at the train station whom passengers claimed had acted suspiciously.

The government has blamed the bombing on the Tamil Tigers, who have fought since 1983 for an independent homeland for the Tamil minority. More than 43,000 people have been killed in the civil war in this predominantly Sinhalese country.

The Tigers have denied responsibility for the bombing.

More than 100 Buddhist monks in saffron robes demonstrated Friday outside Colombo's main railway terminal to protest the bombing.

INCLUSION: Some don't believe program works

cial needs should receive on-site, student-specific training."

Area educators from Andrews and Odessa said they weren't opposed to naving special education students in regular classrooms, provided teachers had the training and materials they needed.

"We're not in teaching by accident. We're professionals, but we need tools and resources so all of our students don't suffer," said Gayla Roberson, fine arts teacher at Clearfork Elementary School in Andrews and ATPE president for Region 18.

As professionals, educators in Midland and Odessa have said they are reluctant to speak out about problems with inclusion.

Marsha Dry, librarian at Ireland Magnet School in Odessa, agreed. "We are supposed to be professionals. You don't hear doctors complaining about patients. But no one told us you are going to encounter people different than what you are trained to handle," she said.

Ms. Dry, who often assists special education students in the school library, said, "These are kids we are talking about. They have a right to a great education," she said, noting that special education students were often kept at home in the past. "But it's difficult to help mentally or physically handicapped students when you have 22 children in a class. The special education students don't need to be dumped. I was never given any training in college to help them."

Teachers have been hesitant to address the issue of inclusion, Comer said. "There is no collective voice. Teachers have been living in their own private torment, and spending money out of their pockets trying to get resources. When we talk to teachers one-on-one, most educators have at least two stories to tell, and they usually are about special education students being dumped into classrooms."

Other educators at the news conference said there is also a problem with behavior of some special education students "who act out," and disrupt the classroom environment.

Comer said that of 3.5 million Texas students, about 11 percent have special needs. "And the process of inclusion is just not working."

No Midland educators were at the news conference.

Several Midland teachers, however, have said "dumping" is not a problem in MISD because the district operates some self-contained classrooms for special education students and moves students into regular classrooms as they are able to participate. Former MISD special education teacher Angie Ragsdale said putting special education students in classrooms beyond their ability only serves to frustrate them and doesn't help them progress.

MISD special education teacher Debra Coleman said special education students "only go out into regular classrooms when they are able to."

The Goddard Junior High School teacher said it is the responsibility of universities and administrators to train general education teachers to teach special education students.

"Some teachers are afraid of having special education students in their classrooms because they don't have the experience. But there isn't anything super about the training special education teachers have," Ms. Coleman said. "It takes reinforcing materials, using more visuals and more equipment like computers, which is good for every child."

She said some general education teachers have been reluctant to have students with disabilities in their classrooms. "But once they get to know them, they tell me: 'These are the best kids in my class.' "

Ms. Coleman said adapting lessons for students of all abilities comes with the territory of being a teacher. "Everybody can help. If you have children (age) 2, 4 or 8, they can all contribute. What you let them do is different."

She said the "key" to teaching students with varying degrees of ability "is to think of all students as the same. That's what I do."

ATPE representatives however, said "dumping" is going on in some districts, and too few teachers have training to handle special education students, so the Inclusion Summit will address those issues. ATPE Region 18 Director Teresa Gross of Andrews will attend the summit.

POLICE REPORTS

Aggravated assault

A Midland woman was injured after a reported gang member tried to run her over with a vehicle in the 3200 block of Franklin Avenue early Friday morning, police said.

Four male juveniles, around age 15, were slashing tires when one of the residents heard and came outside. The juveniles jumped in a car to flee, but turned around and came back to the residence, police said.

After the juveniles returned, they got out and started fighting with residents. During the fight, one of the juveniles got back into the vehicle and attempted to run over the residents, police said.

One resident, Juana Quiroz-Villafranco, was struck and taken to the hospital where she was treated and released.

The driver also damaged at least three other vehicles, police said.

"It seems he was banging into cars along the street while trying to run over the residents," said Tina Sanders, Midland public information officer.

Midland police arrived as the juveniles got back into the vehicle and were attempting to leave. Police arrested the juveniles and recovered the knife used to slash the tires, police said.

Police believe the incident is gang-related and the tire slashing was possibly an act of retaliation. They could not say what the retaliation was for.

The juveniles were arrested and are in custody at Culver Youth Home. They have been charged with aggravated assault and engaging in organized criminal activity.

Traffic fatality

A man was killed after he was struck by a van around midnight Thursday less than a mile west of Big Spring on Interstate 20.

James Randall Skaggs of Abilene told the Texas Department of Safety that he was westbound on Interstate 20 in the right hand lane when he saw the man walking in his lane.

The man was pronounced dead at the scene. His name has not been released.

Skaggs was not injured, and no citations were given.

Queen draws criticism over removal of Diana's royal status, title

N.Y. Times News Service

LONDON — Queen Elizabeth II's decision to strip ex-daughter-in-law Diana of her title of royal highness has come under heavy attack here as short-sighted and likely to backfire.

Critics warn that the move will bedevil the British monarchy by adding to widespread popular sympathy for the divorced wife of the heir to the throne.

Little more than two weeks after the official announcement of the divorce settlement between Diana and Prince Charles, the struggle between the tempestuous 32-year-old princess and the increasingly unpopular royal clan shows little sign of ending.

Diana has declared that she plans to ease herself out of public life, but some observers are skeptical.

Rightwing political analyst Paul Johnson, author of best-selling histories, pointed out that Diana, as a commoner, is now eligible to run for a seat in parliament. It's a step, he added, that cannot be "ruled out."

Writing in The Spectator, a conservative weekly here, Johnson described Prince Charles's "discarded wife" as a "strong-minded ... ambitious" woman who "now has a strong grievance."

If she were to enter politics, she would become the "focus of a great deal of discontent (among) the growing number of women in Britain today with young children who have been divorced against their will, as she has," Johnson declared.

He accused the Queen of being "mean" and "foolish" in taking away Diana's title of royal highness. He called Charles "selfish to the last" for refusing "to put up a fight for the woman he once pledged to defend and protect."

Johnson suggested that Elizabeth would be "prudent to have second thoughts" and restore Diana's title.

The same view has been widely expressed elsewhere. The mass circulation London Daily Mirror urged the British courts to delay finalizing the divorce decree as scheduled on Aug. 26 unless Diana is given back her royal rank by then.

The paper asserted that, as the mother of a future king — 14-year-old Prince William — Diana had every right to retain the title in spite of the "incredible petty-mindedness" of the queen and her advisers.

But denunciation of Diana's treatment hasn't been confined to the tabloid press.

William Rees-Mogg, a former editor-in-chief of the prestigious London Times and a member of the House of Lords, also condemned the decision to withdraw her royal status as "mean" and "ill-judged" in an article in his former newspaper.

Rees-Mogg is regarded as an eminent member of the so-called "establishment" — the influential public figures who shape the tone and direction of British politics and social life.

"When someone like him assails the royal family and, especially, the queen, the situation is serious" said Robert Nevins, an adviser to the Conservative Party.

The attacks directed personally at the queen by Rees-Mogg, Johnson and others suggest that the heat surrounding the controversy has risen a notch or two.

Until now, the 70-year-old sovereign has been mostly absolved of blame no matter how sharp the criticism leveled at Charles or other royals for their marital misadventures and the damage they have inflicted on the royal institution.

But according to Nevins: "By her treatment of Diana, the queen has placed herself squarely in the firing line, further damaging the monarchy."

Kurds join Turks in hunger strike; 7th prisoner dies

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — In a show of solidarity, thousands of Kurdish prisoners in Turkish jails have joined leftist Turkish inmates in their nationwide hunger strike for better prison conditions, a pro-Kurdish news agency reported today.

Seven people have died in the 68-day-old fast, with the latest death today in Istanbul's Bayrampasa prison. Hundreds of prisoners are said to be near death, and pressure for the government to end the strike mounted on the streets of Turkey and in foreign capitals.

"We are no longer able to keep track of strikers in critical condition," said Erol Anar of Human Rights Association, which has been allowed into the prisons to check on the inmates. "Even if the strike stops today, we won't be able to bring many back to life."

The some 4,000 Kurdish prisoners who joined the strike — all convicted or accused of links to a rebel group fighting for autonomy in southeastern Turkey since 1984 — denounce the government's attitude toward leftist hunger strikers as "mass murder," Can Yuce, a spokesman for the group told the DEM news agency based in Germany.

The striking Kurds are in about 40 prisons, DEM reported.

"To stop the strikes, we need to launch an operation into prisons which could result in the loss of 50 lives," Justice Minister Sevket Kazan was quoted as saying in today's Milliyet daily.

The inmates — and human rights groups — allege widespread torture and other abuses behind bars, especially against suspected terrorists and rebels.

They are demanding better access to legal defense and medical treatment and an end to transfers and beatings in jails. They also insist that the government close Eskisehir prison, which unlike other Turkish prisons has cells instead of the larger wards.

The hunger strikers, weakening quickly after more than two months of only plain or sugared water, have gained little sympathy from the majority of Turks because of their alleged ties to terrorism.

Two decades of unrest — including guerrilla warfare on city streets in the late 1970s when more than 20 people were killed daily — have left little tolerance for armed protests and urban violence in Turkey.

But the inmates have their sympathizers outside. Authorities blamed the inmates' supporters for two attacks on police in Istanbul on Thursday, in which gunmen killed two officers and seriously wounded another, the Anatolia news agency said.

The European Union expressed its concern while Italy cautioned that without urgent measures the hunger strike "could have negative repercussions on Turkey's international image."

Germany urged the Turkish government today to speed up prison reforms as a way to stop hunger strikes by inmates, as the prison unrest triggered fresh firebombings of Turkish businesses in Germany.

Police said they detained four Kurds after two predawn arson attacks in Lower Saxony state.

German government spokesman Peter Hausmann expressed regret at the deaths of Turkish hunger strikers and urged "all sides to do everything to prevent further victims."

Basque separatists claim responsibility in killing

ORDIZIA, Spain (AP) — A Basque businessman was shot to death early Friday morning in an attack authorities blamed on Basque separatists.

Isidro Usabiagawas, 52, shot five times and died enroute to the hospital, a spokesman for the Basque region's Interior Department said.

Usabiaga had received threats on his life from the Basque separatist group ETA for refusing to pay a so-called revolutionary tax, which ETA uses to finance its violent campaign for Basque independence, the spokesman said.

ETA has claimed responsibility for more than a dozen explosions at Spanish resorts this month, including a bomb at an airport terminal in the Mediterranean city of Tarragona that injured 35 people Saturday.

ETA stands for Basque Homeland and Liberty in the Basque language.

Cubans hear message of hope in Castro's annual revolution speech

HOLGUIN, Cuba (AP) — bans massed by the thousands a national celebration Friday plete with cheap beer and tropl music — and Fidel Castro as aster of ceremonies. For a ange, they had something to eer about.

Despite stiffened U.S. sanctions, e economy is turning around, owing faster this year than at y time since Cuba lost critical d from Communist bloc trading rtners in the late 1980s.

So instead of the austere affairs recent years noting the anniverry of the revolution, Communist arty ward leaders this year orgazed mass revelry — with celeants brought in by train, bus and en plane. The jamboree began ursday night.

"Long live the 26th!" shouted a Labrada, a Communist ty block leader as she and her ighbors celebrated the July 26 day Friday with a live orchesand a thick pork stew — known caldosa" — bubbling over an en fire in the middle of the eet.

The tiny woman with dangling rings and dark hair piled high er her head seemed excited out attending the speech later in day by "el comandante," the -year-old president.

"We have gone through some difcult years," said Labrada, a 38-ear-old social worker who is in harge of her neighborhood block's 'vigilance' to the Communist ause. "But the economic situation s getting better. We even have ore resources for the fiesta of the 6th."

Some blocks remained dark and quiet, though, producing frowns on the faces of the more "revolutionary" residents of Holguin, 430 miles east-southeast of Havana. Even on Labrada's block, some apathetic residents watched the celebration from their balconies.

"We recognize that everyone is not content during this special period," Labrada said, using the official term for the economic crisis. "But our committee is disciplined, organized, enthusiastic."

At Holguin's Plaza of the Revolution, around 5,000 political leaders were expected for Castro's evening address. Red, white and blue Cuban flags and the black-and-red banners of the July 26th Movement were strung above the podium. TV sound trucks with satellite dishes were parked nearby.

State factories — adorned with pictures of Castro, tiny paper flags and signs declaring "Viva Fidel!" — closed Wednesday so workers could greet the president and celebrate the 1953 start of the revolution.

Until recently, Cuba was in deep recession. This year, officials are forecasting a 5 percent rise in the gross domestic product, following smaller increases in 1994 and 1995.

On Tuesday, the government reported that Cuba's nickel, sugar and tourism industries surged as its gross domestic product rose 9.6 percent in the first half of 1996 as compared with the same period in 1995.

'After suffering the first five years of the decade with dramatic declines in living standards, (Cubans) are going to begin to see a glimmer of light at the end of the tunnel.'
— Andrew Zimbalist, Cuba expert at Smith College

The president's annual address was expected to give Castro an opportunity to rally Cubans behind him and against renewed pressure by the United States, which is seeking to tighten a 36-year embargo against the Communist nation.

"Although I think they have a very, very long road ahead, there is some optimism," said economist Andrew Zimbalist, a Cuba expert at Smith College. "After suffering the first five years of the decade with dramatic declines in living standards, they are going to begin to see a glimmer of light at the end of the tunnel."

Castro hopes that glimmer of light will help him recapture some of the support he lost during Cuba's prolonged economic crisis.

"There is now more of a need to rally people around ... the revolution," Zimbalist said.

Cubans hear message of hope in Castro's annual revolution speech

HOLGUIN, Cuba (AP) — Cubans massed by the thousands for a national celebration Friday replete with cheap beer and tropical music — and Fidel Castro as master of ceremonies. For a change, they had something to cheer about.

Despite stiffened U.S. sanctions, the economy is turning around, growing faster this year than at any time since Cuba lost critical aid from Communist bloc trading partners in the late 1980s.

So instead of the austere affairs of recent years noting the anniversary of the revolution, Communist Party ward leaders this year organized mass revelry — with celebrants brought in by train, bus and even plane. The jamboree began Thursday night.

"Long live the 26th!" shouted Marta Labrada, a Communist Party block leader as she and her neighbors celebrated the July 26 holiday Friday with a live orchestra and a thick pork stew — known as "caldosa" — bubbling over an open fire in the middle of the street.

The tiny woman with dangling earrings and dark hair piled high atop her head seemed excited about attending the speech later in the day by "el comandante," the 69-year-old president.

"We have gone through some difficult years," said Labrada, a 38-year-old social worker who is in charge of her neighborhood block's "vigilance" to the Communist cause. "But the economic situation is getting better. We even have more resources for the fiesta of the 26th."

Some blocks remained dark and quiet, though, producing frowns on the faces of the more "revolutionary" residents of Holguin, 430 miles east-southeast of Havana. Even on Labrada's block, some apathetic residents watched the celebration from their balconies.

"We recognize that everyone is not content during this special period," Labrada said, using the official term for the economic crisis. "But our committee is disciplined, organized, enthusiastic."

At Holguin's Plaza of the Revolution, around 5,000 political leaders were expected for Castro's evening address. Red, white and blue Cuban flags and the black-and-red banners of the July 26th Movement were strung above the podium. TV sound trucks with satellite dishes were parked nearby.

State factories — adorned with pictures of Castro, tiny paper flags and signs declaring "Viva Fidel!" — closed Wednesday so workers could greet the president and celebrate the 1953 start of the revolution.

Until recently, Cuba was in deep recession. This year, officials are forecasting a 5 percent rise in the gross domestic product, following smaller increases in 1994 and 1995.

On Tuesday, the government reported that Cuba's nickel, sugar and tourism industries surged as its gross domestic product rose 9.6 percent in the first half of 1996 as compared with the same period in 1995.

'After suffering the first five years of the decade with dramatic declines in living standards, (Cubans) are going to begin to see a glimmer of light at the end of the tunnel.'

— Andrew Zimbalist, Cuba expert at Smith College

The president's annual address was expected to give Castro an opportunity to rally Cubans behind him and against renewed pressure by the United States, which is seeking to tighten a 36-year embargo against the Communist nation.

"Although I think they have a very, very long road ahead, there is some optimism," said economist Andrew Zimbalist, a Cuba expert at Smith College. "After suffering the first five years of the decade with dramatic declines in living standards, they are going to begin to see a glimmer of light at the end of the tunnel."

Castro hopes that glimmer of light will help him recapture some of the support he lost during Cuba's prolonged economic crisis.

"There is now more of a need to rally people around ... the revolution," Zimbalist said.

Refugee camp escapee hijacks plane to Miami, surrenders peacefully

MIAMI (AP) — A man claiming he had a bomb hijacked a Madrid-to-Havana flight Friday and demanded to be taken to Miami where he surrendered to police. All 232 people aboard were safely taken off the plane, and the bomb turned out to be fake.

Iberia Airlines Flight 6621 landed at Miami International Airport at 3 p.m., and once the DC-10 taxied to an open area in the middle of the airport, police stormed the plane.

"He indicated he had an explosive device and he told an air stewardess that he wanted to go to Miami," Metro-Dade police Detective Ed Munn said.

FBI spokesman Paul Philip in Miami gave hijacker's name as Saado Ibrahim, about 28, from Lebanon.

Philip said he would be charged with air piracy, a felony with a minimum sentence of 20 years in prison.

A Spanish government spokesman in Madrid, Francisco Garcia, said the Lebanese man left Beirut on Thursday and arrived in Madrid after a stop in Zurich, Switzerland. He had escaped from a refugee camp in southern Lebanon, Spanish Foreign Affairms Ministry spokesmna Inocencio Arias said in Madrid.

The "bomb" he displayed to the crew was just a tape recorder covered with aluminum foil, with a couple of wires pulled out, Garcia said.

According to Garcia, Ibrahim said, "If I put these two wires together, this bomb will blow up." He also threatened the crew with a letter opener, Garcia said.

"There was never a bomb on board the plane," he said.

The hijacker was taken into custody by federal authorities, said Salvador Humbert, general manager of the Spanish airline in Miami. None of the 218 passengers or 14 crew members aboard was injured. The plane will not go to Havana until Saturday and the passengers will spend the night in Miami, Arias said.

"He simply did not want to go to Havana. He wanted to go to the U.S.," the FBI's Philip said.

Security officials at Barajas Airport in Madrid detected nothing unusual about the flight before it departed for Miami, the government's news service, Efe, reported.

Flight 6621 departed Madrid at 6:28 a.m. EDT for its daily nine-hour flight to Havana. The airline was notified of the hijacking at 1:45 p.m.

Negotiations in flight between the man and the FBI began an hour later, Philip said.

The hijacking comes a day after President Clinton announced tighter security measures at U.S. airports following the July 17 crash of TWA Flight 800 in New York.

The incident coincided with a national holiday Friday in Cuba commemorating the communist revolution. President Fidel Castro was expected to use the occasion for a speech Friday night heralding signs of an economic recovery.

Judge orders defense to produce documents, knives

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — O.J. Simpson must hand over financial documents, knives, sweatshirts and gloves sought by plaintiffs who have sued the former football star for wrongful death, a judge ruled Friday.

Judge Jack Newman said he expected full compliance from the defense by Aug. 2.

Simpson is being sued for damages by the families of his slain ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ron Goldman. Simpson was acquitted of their murders in October.

Simpson lawyer Melissa Bluestein accused Daniel Petrocelli, lawyer for Goldman's father Fred Goldman, of peppering the defense with new requests as a distraction.

"It is part of their tactic to get us to focus our efforts on nonsense rather than prepare for trial," she told the judge.

Outside court, Petrocelli called that assertion "ludicrous." He said the defense has resisted turning over any documents or items of evidence in spite of court orders dating back to January.

Petrocelli contended he has not received a single piece of paper or items such as gloves, sweatsuits and knives which were requested from Simpson.

"We have documents and information from a number of sources," he said. "But if he has anything else out there, I need to see it. I'm not supposed to see it for the first time at trial."

The trial is set to begin Sept. 9.

FDA warns eye specialists against use of illegal lasers in eye surgery

GAITHERSBURG, Md. (AP) — Federal regulators issued an unusually strong warning Friday to stop eye doctors from using unapproved machines for laser surgery to nearsighted Americans.

The warning is the latest in a blitz of controversy to overtake a popular laser surgery that promises better vision without glasses to many of the 60 million Americans who are nearsighted.

The FDA has approved two lasers since last fall, made by Summit Technology and Visx, to help people see more clearly at a distance.

But some doctors are importing cheaper, used lasers from Europe, where they have been sold for several years, or building their own, meaning some patients are undergoing surgery on machines not FDA-approved as safe.

That's illegal, the FDA warned at a meeting of eye specialists Friday. Doctors either must use FDA-approved lasers or, if they feel their own lasers are superior, get government permission to study them while informing patients that the devices are experimental.

The FDA does not know how many unapproved lasers are being used. Alpert advised patients to ask their doctor before surgery about the machine they use and their success rate. She also advised they demand FDA-approved patient leaflets and ask to speak with previous patients.

"This — let us be clear — is irreversible surgery," she said. "Wait until you're sure."

Outraged doctors said they are offering their patients better care than the FDA-approved equipment can provide, and that the FDA has no business interfering in their practice of medicine.

"Why did I get involved in non-regulated lasers?" asked Dr. Ralph Berkely of Houston, who built his own laser. "My moral and ethical responsibility to do what I believe is in the best interest of my patients."

If the FDA would speed up its review of new lasers to keep up with Europe, doctors wouldn't be forced to use "untested techniques," said Dr. Stephen Trokel of the American Society for Cataract and Refractive Surgery.

In photorefractive keratectomy, or PRK, a laser burns off bits of the corneal surface to flatten it and improve mild or moderate nearsightedness.

Some 30,000 eyes have been treated so far, but PRK already is controversial:

—Last spring, the FDA and Federal Trade Commission warned thousands of doctors against falsely advertising PRK. Ads saying consumers could "throw away your glasses" glossed over the risks and seemingly promised perfection, the warning said. While PRK usually works well, it sometimes results in patients need reading glasses or causes glare, hazy vision and other problems.

—In Idaho, ophthalmologists — who have medical degrees — have sued optometrists — who don't — to stop them from offering PRK. The optometrists say PRK is so computerized that no special surgical skill is needed.

The newest fight comes because the FDA-approved lasers don't perform higher-powered surgery to correct severe nearsightedness, which European models or home-built ones can do. Nor are they supposed to be used for a similar but less painful and possibly better surgery replacing PRK in Europe, called LASIK.

LASIK still is under study here, but the Summit and Visx lasers are capable of performing it and the FDA cannot forbid doctors from offering it. But it is illegal for doctors to advertise LASIK, as well as to use unapproved machines, Alpert said.

Critics say doctors are trying to avoid paying a $250 royalty for each eye treated with the $500,000 Summit or Visx lasers.

Government proposes limits to flights over Grand Canyon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government wants to reduce noise pollution at the Grand Canyon by banning air tours over most of the park and limiting the hours that sightseeing planes can fly in the rest.

The Interior and Transportation departments announced proposed rules Friday that also would cap the number of flights allowable over the canyon each year.

The rule proposes to ban flights over 87 percent of the canyon, including new no-fly zones over Marble Canyon and the Sanup Plateau. Flying now is banned over about 45 percent of the canyon.

In addition, the new rules would prohibit commercial sightseeing flights before 8 a.m. and after 6 p.m. in summer, before 9 a.m. and after 5 p.m. in winter.

The total number of annual flights in the next two years would be limited to the number flown between Aug. 1, 1995, and next Wednesday, July 31.

During summer, more than 10,000 visitors a day take sightseeing flights to get birds-eye views of the canyon. About 40 air tour companies fly an estimated 800,000 people over the canyon annually.

The proposed rules will be open for public comment for 60 days. Those interested can obtain copies of the proposal from the Federal Aviation Administration.

Bush promises to support former rival Dole in presidential campaign

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine (AP) — Repaying an old political debt, former President Bush on Friday vowed to actively campaign for GOP presidential candidate Bob Dole this fall. "My heart lies in this," he asserted.

Bush's determination to give all-out active support was evident from the start of their meeting here, when Bush stood in a heavy rain at a local airport to greet Dole personally.

"Barbara and I and all the Bushes are in unanimous, enthusiastic agreement that America needs Bob Dole's character, his courage, his decency and his common sense," Bush told reporters after the two met at Bush's oceanside home.

Bush said he hadn't given Dole any specific advice about the campaign — but would if asked.

"I'll do anything Senator Dole wants me to do," Bush said.

Although the two were bitter rivals in 1988, Bush praised Dole for standing by him as Senate minority leader during his presidency and said he wanted to return the favor and the loyalty.

"My heart lies in this ... at this level (active campaigning), at the Dole level, and I'll do anything they ask me to do," Bush said.

For his part, Dole warmly welcomed Bush's support.

Bush, who saw his "no new taxes" pledge in his 1988 acceptance speech return to haunt him after he supported a 1990 tax increase, was asked if Dole was walking into a similar minefield if he promises a massive tax cut in his own campaign.

"Not if he plays it right," Bush said. "I'm confident that Senator Dole will engage in fiscal sanity."

Bush admitted "I paid a price" for going back on his no-new-taxes pledge. But he said he thinks he's still getting a bum rap from President Clinton on economic policy.

"I don't want to sound defensive, but we handed him an economy growing at 5.7 percent in the fourth quarter (of 1992)," Bush said. "That was not recession. That was not out of touch."

Then, Bush added, "That did sound defensive, didn't it."

In addition to greeting Dole in the rain at nearby Sanford, Maine, Airport, Bush shook hands individually with every passenger who got off Dole's campaign plane, some of them reporters who had covered him in the White House.

Dole and Bush were bitter rivals for the GOP presidential nomination in 1988. Dole long carried a grudge against a Bush campaign ad's depiction of him as "Sen. Straddle" on taxes in the New Hampshire primary, which Dole lost to Bush.

However, Dole put the hard feelings aside and later as Senate minority leader became one of Bush's most loyal supporters.

"He never tried to protect his own flank by jumping away from me," Bush said on Friday.

Both Bush and Dole saluted the sixth anniversary of the Americans With Disabilities Act, which Dole sponsored and Bush signed.

The two were joined by their wives and by Texas Gov. George W. Bush, the eldest of Bush's four sons, for a private lunch.

Asked by a reporter in a picture-taking session what was for lunch, Bush cracked, "You're not invited."

But Barbara Bush provided the information: "Soup and warm chicken salad." And blueberry pie for desert.

Stalking bill logjam could be over soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — A two-month-old Senate logjam over new anti-stalking legislation has been broken, although the compromise required to end the stalemate could pose some trouble in the House.

The legislation's authors said Friday they hope differences can be swiftly ironed out between the bill passed Thursday by the Senate and one approved last May by the House.

"I hope that it goes quickly," said Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas, author of the Senate version.

Both the House- and Senate-passed bills would make it a crime for anyone to cross state lines to stalk another person. The measures also would make restraining orders from one state valid in all, which they currently aren't. And, the legislation would give federal law enforcement authority to investigate and prosecute stalkers.

The bill was stalled in the Senate after Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., insisted on attaching to it language denying firearms possession to people convicted of domestic violence.

After much bargaining, Lautenberg agreed to drop the provision.

Legislators continue work on welfare overhaul bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican lawmakers negotiating the welfare overhaul bill are leaning toward giving President Clinton some of what he wants, such as smaller cuts in the tax credit for the working poor.

But Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., who has written books on welfare and poverty, urged Clinton to cast his third welfare veto. He cited new estimates that the bill would throw 1.1 million children into poverty.

Clinton has supported the gist of both the Senate and House bills that would end six decades of federal policy guaranteeing assistance to the poor and would push people from the welfare rolls into work. He has objected, among other things, to cuts in the tax credit benefits.

Republicans now appear ready to go along with Clinton on this one, noting that it would serve GOP aims as well.

"We do not want to give the president an opportunity to beat up the Republicans by calling the (Earned Income Tax Credit changes) a tax increase," said Rep. Clay Shaw, R-Fla., chairman of the Ways and Means welfare subcommittee. "And we are going to avoid that problem, fastidiously."

The Senate-passed version anticipates saving nearly $5 billion over six years by cutting the tax credit benefits; the House-passed bill envisions savings of $1.6 billion over that time. Clinton wants the House version as well as some tightening of eligibility requirements to ensure that only the poor can take advantage of the tax credit.

Republicans did not appear inclined to give Clinton something else the White House wants: vouchers for benefits for children after their parents exhaust their eligibility for welfare. Both the House and Senate had rejected such noncash assistance.

Some Democrats pressed Clinton to veto the bill, saying all the changes being talked about were marginal. Moynihan noted that a new Urban Institute report estimates the bill would cause 2.6 million people, including 1.1 million children, to fall below the poverty line.

"There's nothing in conference that can improve this legislation," said Moynihan.

The bill aims to end an era in which the poor were automatically eligible for welfare benefits. It would limit lifetime assistance to five years per family and force recipients to work after two years, with hardship exemptions allowed for up to 20 percent of families.

In addition to its worries about protections for children, the White House has expressed concerns about the more than $50 billion in savings the bills anticipate over six years — half of it coming from the food stamp program and some from cutting benefits for legal immigrants who are not citizens.

Clinton and those speaking for him in the White House and Congress have given mixed signals about whether he would sign or veto the bill.

It would be the third veto of welfare legislation for Clinton, who promised during the 1992 campaign to "end welfare as we know it." And Republicans were betting that, given the public popularity of such changes, he would ultimately sign.

"I believe the White House will sign just about anything we send them," a top legislative aide to House Speaker Newt Gingrich, Jack Howard, wrote the speaker in a memo, Congress Daily reported Friday. "So we should make them eat as much as we can."

Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle said Republicans shouldn't count on that.

The Howard memo inflamed Democratic senators who urged Clinton to veto the bill.

"We should 'make them eat as much as we can' so that poor children in America will be eating less?" said Sen. Paul Wellstone, D-Minn., the only Democratic senator seeking re-election this year who voted against the welfare bill when it passed the Senate 74-24 on Tuesday. "Mr. President, the poor children of America are now depending on you."

Conferees also might change a House-passed provision that would prohibit giving extra federal benefits to a woman who has a child while already receiving welfare, unless states voted to exempt their residents, some Republicans said. The Senate dropped a similar provision from its bill.

Clinton rejects Israeli spy's bid for clemency

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton rejected a clemency plea from convicted spy Jonathan Pollard after more than 10 years in prison, citing the enormity of his crime, Pollard's lack of remorse and the damage he caused U.S. security.

Friday's decision was a blow to Israel and American Jewish groups, which had campaigned for his release from a life sentence. B'nai B'rith, the world's largest Jewish organization, urged Clinton to reconsider, saying his decision was contrary to his record on humanitarian issues.

A one-time Navy analyst, Pollard was arrested outside the Israeli embassy in Washington in 1985 and convicted of espionage in 1986. He admitted selling Israel military intelligence documents, including satellite photographs.

After Clinton's decision was announced, Pollard's wife Esther declared in Israel that she would stage a hunger strike "until death" for his release. She accused Israel's new prime minister, Benjamin Netanyahu, of failing to fight hard enough for her husband's freedom.

"How long can one hold on after 11 years of empty promises?" she told a television interviewer.

StockQuote HotLine

Cityline 560-2400

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update: which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
- You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
- You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).
Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
- You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

U.S. sends envoy to ease Burundi crisis

N. Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — White House envoy Howard Wolpe leaves Saturday for central Africa, hoping to head off a potentially explosive political crisis in strife-ridden Burundi.

Wolpe, a former congressman from Michigan, will press for negotiations between ethnic Hutus and Burundi's Tutsi leader, retired army Maj. Pierre Buyoya, who seized power in a bloodless coup Thursday.

Wolpe will also meet with representatives from several central African countries to try to nail down contingency plans for a U.S.-backed African peacekeeping force to stand by in case Buyoya's coup incites widespread bloodshed, or even civil war, in Burundi.

Several African nations have said they would supply troops for such a force, if needed. The Pentagon has stopped short of committing troops, but has said it would provide transportation, communications and other logistical support for such a force should it be required.

The White House, which has strongly condemned the coup, conceded Friday that it was dealing with Buyoya in an effort to avert violence and attain a workable solution to Burundi's long-burning ethnic crisis.

"The reality is that a new group of people have taken power in Burundi," said State Department spokesman Nick Burns. "We will have to work with these people."

U.S. Ambassador to Burundi Morris Hughes has met twice with Buyoya since Thursday's coup, and Wolpe is expected to meet again with Buyoya after first touching base with former Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere, who is trying to broker peace between rival Hutus and Tutsis in Burundi.

In Burundi's capital, Bujumbura, Buyoya said Friday in a speech that he had seized power in an effort to arrest the rapidly deteriorating security conditions in Burundi, where more than 1,000 Hutus and Tutsis have been killed in ethnic violence in recent weeks.

"It is an action to save a people in distress and stop repeated massacres and killings all over the country," the 46-year-old Buyoya said, the Associated Press reported from Bujumbura. "Our intention is to get back to democracy very soon. That could take 12 or 18 months, we cannot speculate."

Officially, the United States continues to recognize as president Sylvestre Ntibantunganya, who took office two years ago in a power-sharing arrangement agreed to by democratically-elected officials. Ntibantunganya and three of his senior advisers remained holed up in the U.S. Ambassador's residence in Bujumbara Friday, where they have been since Burundi troops surrounded key government buildings Tuesday.

While condemning the coup, U.S. diplomats regard Buyoya — who seized power in a bloodless coup in 1987 and yielded power five years later when he was defeated in Burundi's first free elections — as a man with democratic leanings tempered by his loyalty to the Tutsi-dominated army.

Tutsis account for about 15 percent of Burundi's 6 million people, but have traditionally run the country's political, military and economic institutions, discriminating against Hutus, who account for about 85 percent of the population.

Some 150,000 people have been killed in civil strife across Burundi in the past three years.

Wolpe's mission — to try to bring the two groups into power-sharing negotiations — is partly an attempt to reconcile the two sides of Buyoya.

"It's going to be a hard nut," said a White House spokesman. "We want a solution which will stabilize the situation there and not lead to any increased killing in the area. On the other hand, we have strongly condemned the way that the current leadership there has come into power."

Good mother gene makes mice care for young

BOSTON (AP) — Scientists have discovered a good mother gene, an inborn trigger that prompts female mice to care for their young.

When this gene is missing, mice show no interest in their babies. Instead, they curl up on a corner and let the young ones die.

The discovery is part of an effort by scientists to learn the genetic factors that control complex behaviors in animals.

This particular gene, called fosB, is a kind of regulatory switch that turns on other genes in response to outside cues. In this case, the gene is probably activated by the sight and smell of baby mice.

Humans, too, have a fosB gene. But whether it plays any role in prompting women to nurture their babies is unknown.

Indeed, while many believe that genes influence all sorts of human behavior, this is a sensitive point and difficult to sort out, since learning, experience and social conditions are also clearly important.

The study was conducted by Jennifer R. Brown, a doctoral student in Greenberg's lab at Children's Hospital in Boston. It was published in Friday's issue of the biweekly journal Cell.

The scientists began by creating a "knockout" mouse, an animal that was missing the fosB gene. The goal was to learn the gene's function by seeing how the animal acted without it.

The mutant mice seemed normal until they gave birth. Ordinarily, a female mouse put in a cage with her babies will crouch over them and keep them warm within a minute.

"The mutant will go and investigate them but fails to retrieve them and eventually goes off in a corner and ignores them," said Greenberg.

Not fed or tended in any way, the babies die in a day or two.

The gene also controls nurturing in male mice (although this drive is less pronounced in males) and it may come into play in other kinds of behavior, as well.

FosB is one of a small family of genes, called immediate early genes, that Greenberg and colleagues have been studying for about a decade. Experts believe these genes trigger animals' responses to a variety of outside stimuli, including stress, changes in light levels and addictive drugs.

American GI Forum founder dies at 82

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Hector P. Garcia, a Hispanic rights activist who founded the American GI Forum in 1948, died today after a long illness. He was 82.

Garcia had been in failing health for years and was hospitalized earlier this year after experiencing a loss of appetite and extreme exhaustion.

He had been an advisor to several presidents, and was awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom by President Reagan in 1984.

Known as "Doctor Hector," Garcia practiced medicine for 50 years in Corpus Christi until closing his office in March.

A native of Liera, Mexico, Garcia received his bachelor's degree in zoology from the University of Texas at Austin in 1936. He completed his medical degree in 1940.

Garcia then joined the Army, which awarded him the Bronze Star with six battle stars for service during World War II.

After the war, Garcia returned home to start a medical practice, and founded the American GI Forum to fight for Hispanic veterans' rights.

Garcia's organization first entered the national spotlight in 1949 when he took up the fight of Beatriz Longoria, a Texas war widow who had been denied use of a hometown funeral chapel for her husband, Felix, because he was Hispanic.

The story of Felix Longoria, whose remains had been returned home four years after he was killed in action, ran on The Associated Press wire. Within days, the case drew the ire of people nationwide. Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson, D-Texas, intervened, and Longoria was given a hero's burial at Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia.

As president, Johnson appointed Garcia in 1967 to serve as than alternate ambassador to the United Nations to promote better relations with Latin America and Spain. Garcia also served on the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights.

In an article published earlier this year in the San Antonio Express-News, Beatriz Longoria's sister, Sara Moreno Posas of Corpus Christi, recalled how Garcia helped her family.

"Dr. Garcia represented a lot of hope and a lot of security. ... He represented to me a hero," Ms. Posas said. "Today, I'm just grateful to him because I have seen the many changes that have happened in civil rights in this part of Texas."

When Garcia closed his medical practice, Corpus Christi libraries director Herb Canales looked back on his tireless work.

"I recall his speeches on the value of human rights and his emphasis on education as the key to everything in our society," Canales told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times. "He encouraged a lot of young people to continue. He certainly encouraged me."

85,562 handgun permits approved

AUSTIN (AP) — More than 85,000 Texans now have permits to carry concealed handguns, according to the Department of Public Safety.

The DPS on Friday released statistical information about 76,093 concealed gun licensees approved through July 3. Information also was released on 398 Texans denied permits through the same time period.

As of Thursday, the latest information available, 85,562 permits had been issued, 510 denied and 8,385 applications remained pending.

Nearly 270,000 Texans have requested paperwork to begin the application process, the department reported.

The DPS releases statistical information about licensees monthly by ZIP code, age, race and sex. No personal information about individual licensees can be made public without their permission under the 1995 law allowing most state residents to carry concealed handguns.

According to the statistics released Friday:

— White men held 58,770 permits, just over 77 percent of the 76,093 permits issued through July 3. Some of those could be held by Hispanics, who are not counted as a separate group.

— Blacks held 2,158, or 2.84 percent, with black men carrying 1,896 of those.

— Twenty-one-year-olds, the youngest Texans eligible, carry 119 concealed handgun permits.

Convicted rapist-killer McDuff may escape execution because of illness

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — The most notorious serial rapist-murderer in modern Texas history says a fatal disease could kill him before the state can execute him for two sex slayings.

"I consider myself dead," said Kenneth Allen McDuff, 50, condemned to die by three Texas juries, one of them 30 years ago.

"I'm just waiting to be buried," said McDuff, convicted of killing three teens in 1966 and also suspected of killing at least six other women.

Relatives of two victims welcomed the news.

"Oh, good!" said Lori Bible of Austin, sister of Colleen Reed, who was abducted, raped, tortured and apparently slain by McDuff. Her body was never found.

"I hope he suffers. I know that's horrible, but I do ... It sort of sounds like I'm really calloused and hard about it, but we're not safe as long as he's alive."

"And if anybody deserves to suffer, it's him."

Emily Northrup, sister-in-law of another McDuff victim, Melissa Northrup, said from her home in Waco that her family would prefer McDuff be executed.

"But," she added, "if he dies quicker this way, it's better for us. I definitely don't feel sorry for him."

Interviewed on Death Row, McDuff said he suffers from hepatitis C and cirrhosis, two often related and sometimes fatal liver diseases.

"They tell me it's no longer treatable," he said, but added that doctors could not or would not predict how long he can expect to live.

"Maybe tomorrow, maybe next month, maybe next year," he said he was told. "They don't know."

The Texas Department of Corrections confirmed Friday that McDuff is receiving treatment for a "chronic illness" and acknowledged that he has been taken four times to a Galveston hospital.

A spokesman said he could not disclose the illness because of patient confidentiality.

Hepatitis C is a viral disease usually transmitted through sexual contact, blood transfusions or intravenous drug abuse. Cirrhosis is advanced liver disease frequently associated with alcohol abuse.

McDuff insisted he does not know how he picked up the disease but he is convinced it is killing him.

"I guess it's just a matter of time until it happens," he said.

Dr. Pat Wimmer, a Fort Worth physician, said, "Once liver failure has begun, treatment is primarily supportive with a life expectancy from months to perhaps a few years.

"Death is usually the result of bleeding and/or infection."

McDuff says he was rushed to Galveston twice by ambulance because of internal bleeding.

A native of the Central Texas town of Rosebud, McDuff is currently on Death Row for the 1991 slaying of Ms. Reed, an Austin accountant, and the 1992 murder of Mrs. Northrup, a Waco mother of two.

A Seguin jury assessed McDuff the death penalty for killing Ms. Reed, 28, who was abducted from an Austin car wash. A Houston jury ruled that McDuff should die for killing Mrs. Northrup, 22, who was abducted from a Waco convenience store.

Mrs. Northrup's body was discovered in a Dallas County gravel pit. Ms. Reed's body is believed to have been buried somewhere in Bell County.

Both cases are under appeal, but McDuff said he was not optimistic either verdict would be overturned.

"I really don't care about living the rest of my life in prison," he said. "I'm already in poor health. I think the illness will kill me before they can execute me.

"I'd just as soon die a natural death, although injection is less painful."

McDuff is in fact ambivalent, weighing the stigma of execution against what he perceives as a prolonged and painful death from liver disease.

"I've seen a guy die of a liver ailment," he recalled with a shudder. "It was terrible. He was all swelled up and in severe agony and he was begging for drugs.

"It was one of the worst things I've seen in my life."

On the other hand, he said he would like to avoid all the "bitterness" and "formalities" of an execution.

"They make it as unpleasant as possible," he said, quickly adding with a hollow laugh, "Of course, it is an execution."

McDuff almost died years ago in the electric chair.

A Fort Worth jury convicted him of capital murder in the 1966 shooting deaths of two teen-age boys and the rape-strangulation of their 16-year-old companion.

But the U.S. Supreme Court in 1972 struck down the death penalty as unconstitutional, and his sentence was commuted to life in prison.

On Oct. 11, 1989, McDuff was paroled under circumstances still shrouded in controversy. Although returned to prison briefly, he was released again on Dec. 18, 1990.

"When they let him out they knew he would kill again," Lori Bible insists. "They had been told he would kill again, and sure enough, he did."

At least half a dozen young women, some of them prostitutes, disappeared in the Waco-Temple area after McDuff's release.

Board of Health proposes turning ephedrine prescription drug in Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Board of Health on Friday approved a proposal that would make ephedrine-based products available only by prescription in Texas.

The vote follows three years of research by the Texas Department of Health and a warning issued by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration that at least 15 people have died after taking ephedrine-containing supplements.

Under state law, the Health Department can regulate more tightly than the FDA drugs it considers dangerous or abused. Already, 16 states require prescriptions for at least some ephedrine-containing products. Another dozen states consider the drug a controlled substance, TDH officials said.

The FDA has received at least 400 reports of side effects from ephedrine, from heart attacks and seizures to psychosis.

Over-the-counter supplements containing ephedrine are advertised to young people — sometimes as a "natural" alternative to illegal drugs — promising euphoria, heightened sexual awareness, weight loss and enhanced athletic performance, the department said.

The Texas proposal, which received unanimous approval from the six-person board, will now be subject to public comment and will likely be considered for a final vote by the Board of Health in October.

The earliest the regulation could take effect, if approved, would be December, said Gary Coody, senior pharmacist of the Texas Department of Health.

"The proposal would move ephedrine-containing products to prescription status and limit their availability to someone licensed to prescribe drugs," Coody said, adding that anyone in possession of the drug without a prescription could face criminal charges.

Coody said the Department of Health has been collecting and investigating injury reports connected to ephedrine for about three years.

"We convened an internal panel and a Texas Medical Association expert panel to review the information we collected, and it was their decision that the products be removed from over-the-counter status," Coody said.

The federal government has told consumers not to buy such dietary supplements as Herbal Ecstacy that contain ephedrine.

The FDA is collecting coroners' reports and other evidence in an effort to take regulatory action against manufacturers.

The products are "recreational, street-drug-like products that are masquerading as dietary supplements," said FDA Commissioner David Kessler, who investigated when the relatives of a 20-year-old who died questioned him about ephedrine. "I believe they're drugs and should be treated as such."

Herbal Ecstacy manufacturer Global World Media Corp. of Venice, Calif., denies the herbal versions of ephedrine are harmful.

"It's pretty silly that the FDA is trying to ban botanicals," said spokesman Sean Shayan, who acknowledged his company's product was developed as an alternative to the illegal drug MDMA or "ecstasy."

Ephedrine, an amphetamine-like stimulant and a common ingredient in certain nonprescription asthma medicines, has long been controversial.

Muster upset

KITZBUEHEL, Austria — Unseeded Emilio Alvarez of Spain upset Thomas Muster 6-1, 7-5 Friday in the quarterfinals of the Generali Open, sending the world's No. 2 player to his third clay loss this year.

Alvarez was one of four Spaniards to advance to the semifinals.

His opponent will be fifth-seeded Alberto Berasategui, the highest-ranked player left in the tournament. He beat unseeded Argentine Franco Squillari 6-3, 1-6, 6-2 Friday.

Unseeded qualifier Juan-Albert Viloca beat Nicholas Kiefer of Germany 7-5, 6-4. He next will meet Alex Corretja, seeded 11th, who beat Filip Dewulf of Belgium 6-3, 6-1.

Alvarez, 160th in the rankings, even failed to qualify for Kitzbuehel but got a "lucky loser" spot.

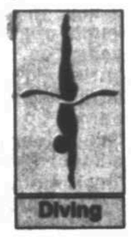
ATLANTA '96: THE SUMMER OLYMPICS

Consistency the Ruehl in diving

■ U.S. Diver Becky Ruehl, competing in her first Olympics, is second in the 10-meter platform after the preliminaries.



ATLANTA — U.S. diver Becky Ruehl sent a graceful message Friday to the skeptics who said she could never win a medal here: Difficulty counts in diving but so does consistency.

Ruehl, competing in her first Olympics, is in second place after the preliminary rounds of women's platform event. She trails defending gold medalist Fu Mingxia of China by six points.

Guo Jingjing of China is third going into today's semifinals and finals. Ruehl's U.S. teammate, Mary Ellen Clark, survived two bad dives to finish 12th and advance to the semis.

Ruehl, 18, electrified the sellout crowd at Georgia Tech Aquatic Center with the best dives of the day. More important, she did not score lower than 7.5s on any one of her five dives.

Ruehl has been the most consistent diver among U.S. women for the last two years, winning three out of four national championships on the platform. But her medal chances were considered slight by some because her dives are not as difficult as those of the Chinese and other medal contenders.

Friday's scores will not be counted in the final standings, although they will be used to determine which 12 divers advance to the finals. Nevertheless, Ruehl's performance gave her confidence that she can keep up with the competition, especially the Chinese.

"It does make me feel good that I could be up this far," said Ruehl. "I really didn't expect it."

If Ruehl was awed by her Olympic debut, it didn't show in her steely performance. "I felt exactly how I wanted to," she said. "I was nervous, but I wasn't too nervous to move.

"I felt like something was pulling me toward the water head-first."

Clark, on the other hand, missed badly on two of her dives, including an inward 31/2 somersault that is the most difficult in her repertoire. With one dive remaining, she was in 18th place and in danger of being eliminated, but she finished well while some other divers faltered.

"She's fortunate that she did that today and survived," said Clark's coach, Ron O'Brien, who is also one of the head coaches of the U.S. team.

Angels rally in ninth to drop Captains 8-7

Captains	7
Angels	8

Ben Molina lay crumpled at home plate grimacing in pain, thinking his season may be over. And Angel fans rained boos down on the diamond.

It looked like anything but the end of a five-game losing streak.

Just the same, Midland will take the 8-7 win over Shreveport Friday just like Molina took an inside fastball to the left hand with the bases loaded for the winning run.

And they talk about the agony of defeat.

"You got to take it anyway you can take one," said Molina as he gingerly opened and closed his swollen hand in the clubhouse after the Angels first win since Saturday. "But you hope some others you take another way, not as hard."

It was only the second time this year the Angels beat the Captains in seven games between the clubs.

Molina took a hard pitch from Shreveport reliever Russell Ortiz (1-1) in the bottom of the ninth with one out. He said the hand was "fine" but he would have it checked it today. Shortly after that Molina was wearing a large bag of ice on the victimized appendage.

Two pitches before he was hit Molina had to jackknife out of the way of an Ortiz inside pitch to keep from getting hit.

"The guys in the dugout told me to take it for the team," Molina said. "But that's kind of tough to do. You don't ever think about that."

On the next pitch Molina barley reached an outside pitch to foul it off and stay alive with a 2-2 count.

"I thought he was going to come in but he went away," said Molina, who had two RBIs in the Texas League game. "My thinking was now he's going to come in on me."

That he did. And it left Molina on the dirt thinking the worst. It took the Angel catcher several minutes to recover and slowly walked down to first base to officially win the game. That jaunt brought the cheers back from the crowd.

Teams take aim at course in Blowout

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

The Ranchland Hills 1996 Blowout lived up to its name as the four-man teams took dead aim at par-70 country club course lay out.

And on a day when a number of teams made significant moves for the top spot, the foursome of Gary Dunkerson, Isabel Soto, Monnie Soto and Derrick Pursley fired a 10-under-par score to put them on top of the leader board after the first round.

"We are glad to be in the race for it," said Dunkerson, whose team fired a 130 in the format where the two lowest scores on each hole are counted. "We had a solid round. We are fortunate to be in the lead."

Dunkerson's group leads the team of Steve Hammel, Josh Jacobs, Bobby Sharp and Doyce Haney by one stroke and two others by a pair.

The foursome had four birdies on the front nine, but lit it up the back nine for seven birdies. On the back, the group started to get the putts to fall for two team birdies on No. 10 and one birdie a piece on 11, 14, 15,16 and 18. The team felt

Walker returns for Super Bowl ring

By Denne H. Freeman

AUSTIN — Herschel Walker rips into the secondary and runs over four players on a draw play. Two of them get up limping.

He catches a little slant pass and flattens a safety.

He blocks on a punt, knocking his man down.

He blocks for Emmitt Smith, producing a huge hole.

Why is this multimillionaire who lives in a luxurious home on a golf course risking heat stroke on a 100-degree day?

Why is he playing for the NFL minimum of $275,000, which is chump change, a penny on the dollar for what he has made throughout his career?

The ring.

Despite all his successes in life, he doesn't own a Super Bowl ring. Walker has only played in two NFL playoff games in his 10-year NFL career.

People he has never heard of before have Super Bowl rings. But they've played for the Dallas Cowboys three out of the last four years. Last year, while he played for the New York Giants, the Cowboys were winning another NFL title.

Renfro enshrined into Hall of Fame

Associated Press

CANTON, Ohio — Dan Dierdorf is coming home, ending a journey that began nearly a quarter of a century ago just a mile from the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

It was in 1962 that a thrilled Dierdorf accompanied his father to the Hall's groundbreaking ceremony in his hometown. This time, he won't need a ticket to enter.

Dierdorf will be inducted into the hall Saturday along with lineman Lou Creekmur, coach Joe Gibbs, wide receiver Charlie Joiner and former Dallas Cowboys defensive back Mel Renfro.

Renfro, renowned as a cornerback, safety and kick returner for the Dallas Cowboys from 1964-77, was selected to the Pro Bowl in his first 10 seasons. The former Oregon running back played in four Super Bowls, closing out his career with a victory in the 1978 game.

Hall of Fame coach Tom Landry will present Renfro for induction. Gibbs will be presented by Don Coryell, his head coach when Gibbs was an assistant in San Diego, while Joiner will be introduced by Grambling's Eddie Robinson, the winningest college coach of all time. Another Hall of Famer, Doak Walker, will present

Rebel Select splits games

BURKEBURNETT — The Midland Rebel Select Baseball team splits games over on Thursday and Friday at the Amateur Athletic Baseball Congress' State Tournament.

The Rebels defeated the El Paso Rebels 1-0 on Friday behind the six-strikeout performance of Aaron Erdwurm, who picked up the win.

Scott Worley, who had the only extra-base hit for Midland, scored the lone run on the bottom of the seventh.

Midland lost to the Texas Stars 6-1 on Thursday. The Texas Stars recevied a one-hitter from its pitcher Justin Garcia, who allowed a solo homer to Midland's Matt Winston. Garcia struck out 16 Midland batters for the Stars, the two-time defending national champions.

Wentworth places third at Juniors

HOUSTON — Midland's Stephanie Wentworth placed third 3,000 -meter run in the intermediate division in the National Junior Olympic Track and Field meet held at the University of Houston Thursday.

Wentworth, who competes for the Crusader Track Team, ran a time of 10 minutes and 37.75 seconds. The soon to-be sophomore will compete this weekend for the City of Midland swim team in Austin at the Texas Age Group Swimming Championships.

Winchell, Lindgren win junior golf

Shelley Winchell shot an 87 in the second round and Jason Lindgren equaled his first-round 72 as the two won their divisions this week at Hogan Park in the 1996 North Texas Professional Golf Association Junior Golf Foundation West Texas Area Championship.

The top three finishers from each division will play at the NTPGA Junior Golf Foundation/Pepsi Tournament of Champions at Plano's Hyatt Bear Creek Golf Club August 6 and 7. The other divisions were won by Blake Parks, Kathy Rakel and Brent Bennett.

Bennett has won six of the seven tournaments he has entered over the summer as well as the Holiday Classic in Dallas. He will compete in the NTPGA's Tournament of Champions at Bear Creek in Dallas.

Former Midland Lee District 4-5A champion and soon to-be Midland College Chap Charlie Prince won the 16-18 age division.

Top three finishers from Wednesday's NTPGA Junior Golf Foundation West Texas Area Championship:

Girls 12-14-year-old division: 1. Shelley Winchell 91, 87-178; 2. Randi Reed 93, 93-186; 3. Laura Rakel 93, 96-189. Boys 12-13: 1. Jason Lindgren 72, 72-144; 2. Travis Lovins 73, 72-145; 3. Prieto, Haas make supers

Douglas Prieto and Laurie Haas both reached the Super Championship Division in Texas tennis earlier this month at the Houston Junior Open. Prieto advanced to the semifinals of the Boys 16s while Haas reached the quarterfinals in the Girls 18s.

Big League action set

Big League Section I champion Midland Mid-City will face Section 2 champ Austin at 8 p.m. Saturday at Baylor's Ferrell Field in Waco in the first round of the Texas State Tournament. If Mid-City wins they play the Woodville-San Antonio Northwest winner Sunday at 8 p.m. If they lose they face the loser of the same game at 10 a.m.

This will be the fourth state tournament for Mid-City's Jason Rogers and Russell Dunlavy, third for Kory Doran, Clay Johnston and Chad Villareal and second for Ross Nobles.

Inline All-Stars play regionals

NEW ORLEANS — Midland's Inline Hockey League Junior All-Star team attended the national Inline Hockey Association's regional tournament here July 3 and 4. Nathan Madrid was named the "Second Star" of a 5-3 loss to the CCHL Lunartics after scoring two goals.

The Midland team lost its other game 9-1 to the Arlington Stray Pucks. Damien Franco scored a goal in the second game and Tommy Johnson had two assists.

Heat completes season at region

FORT WORTH — The West Texas Heat 12-under girls fastpitch softball team finished a best-ever eighth at the regional tournament held at Gateway Park.

Out of the 24 team field, the Heat took wins over Katy Legend 6-1, and Mesquite Babes 3-2, but lost 6-0 to the Fort Worth State Metro champs Everman Cowgirls 6-0 and the Katy Express 3-2 in extra innings. The top three teams qualified for the National Tournament later this summer.

The Heat concluded their season with a 55-14 record and having won four tournaments, placing in two others and qualifying for this regional.

The team members are Ashley Harris, Donna Sheppard, Cara Brininstool, Erin Evans, Wykia Wallace, Kelly Moore, Claire Howard, Sarah Eckard, Laura Mauldin, Lauren Burr and Kelsi Berry. The coaches are Rickey Evans, Terry Harris and Dan Sheppard.

HALL: Canton inducts new members

(From 1B)

Creekmur for induction.

"The honor of being elected to the Hall of Fame is staggering in its own right, so I understand how the other inductees feel in that respect," said Dierdorf, now an analyst on ABC's Monday Night Football. "But they don't know how I feel, especially to be born and raised here in Canton."

The honor was never a certainty for Dierdorf, an All-America career at Michigan who spent 13 stellar seasons with the St. Louis Cardinals. Four times Dierdorf was passed over by the selection committee.

When the day finally comes, Dierdorf's father, Don, won't be there to share it. He died 15 years ago. But Dierdorf's mother, Evelyn, still lives a short distance from the hall.

She remembers what it was like, waiting for the announcement of inductees each year on the day before the Super Bowl.

"I was right here in my living room with a couple of my friends those other years on Saturday afternoon, waiting," she said. "When we found out he made it this time, we all jumped up and down and cheered. We celebrated like we were at the Super Bowl."

It has also been emotional for Dierdorf's wife of 17 years, Debbie.

"Every time Dan and I try to talk about it and discuss what it's going to be like, we both just choke up, because we know it's just going to be an amazing thing," she said.

Dierdorf played on average teams for much of his career in St. Louis. His Cardinal teams of the 70s and early 80s had some success, though.

In the mid 70s, winning two NFC Eastern Division championships in both 1974 and 1975, but losing in the first round of the playoffs both seasons.

He never made a trip to the Super Bowl and never received the attendant acclaim that comes with playing for an elite team.

'The honor of being elected to the Hall of Fame is staggering in its own right, so I understand howe the other inductees feel in that respect...But they don't know how I feel, especially to be born and raised right here in Canton'

— Dan Dierdorf, on being elected a a member of the NFL's Hall of Fame.

"There are a lot of good players out there like me who didn't play for good teams, and it's wonderful to be recognized in that respect," he said. "The bottom line is that there are a lot fewer Hall of Fame rings than there are Super Bowl rings. This is sweet redemption."

Dierdorf, who retired after the 1983 season, will be presented for induction by Jim Hanifan, the Washington Redskins' offensive line coach. Hanifan was Dierdorf's position coach and later his head coach with the Cardinals.

Creekmur, who played guard and tackle from 1950-59, came out of William & Mary to help the Detroit Lions to NFL championships in 1952, '53 and '57. He made it to the Pro Bowl in his first eight seasons.

Gibbs led the Washington Redskins to a 124-60 regular-season record and was 16-5 in postseason games and coached three Super Bowl winners. His .683 winning percentage from 1981 to 1992 is the third-best in NFL history.

Joiner played for Houston (1969-72), Cincinnati (1972-75) and San Diego (1976-86), catching 750 passes for 12,146 yards and 65 touchdowns.

The Grambling product played more games than any other wide receiver.

DALLAS: Cowboys play Raiders tonight

athletics, but just once I'd like to experience being on a championship NFL team, one that wins it all," Walker said.

"Herschel's on a mission," coach Barry Switzer said after a recent scrimmage in which Walker shined with his blocking, receiving and running. "The way he is playing he is looking like the Herschel of old."

Like the Herschel who once was the leader of the Cowboys.

Like the Herschel who led the NFC in rushing in 1988.

Like the Herschel who became the first running back to rush for over 1,000 yards and catch passes for over 1,000 yards in the same season.

"I can still catch, and I can still run," Walker said. "There's still some good football left in Herschel."

Walker often refers to himself in the third person, as in "Herschel is different than a lot of players. He stays in good shape all the time."

Of course, the Cowboys traded Walker to Minnesota to set the foundation for their run of Super Bowls. Such players as Smith and Darren Woodson were taken with the draft picks.

Dallas owner Jerry Jones paid Walker an even $1 million to accept the trade to the Vikings and leave town.

Now Jones is paying Walker with the change in his pocket, a fraction of what he gave to placate Herschel in the steal of a deal that changed the course of NFL history.

"It is ironic," said scouting director Larry Lacewell. "But Herschel has played like a hungry player since he has been here. He definitely adds to our versatility on offense."

Walker, for the most part, will play backup fullback behind Daryl Johnston. He will sub on occasion for Smith at tailback. He will play on special teams. He will be slipped into the offense as a receiver.

"I enjoy special teams," Walker said. "It's a great way to contribute to the team. I like being on the field. I'll play anywhere. Do anything."

Johnston said it's great to have Walker back.

"There are things Herschel can do I can't do because he is such a great athlete," Johnston said. "He helped me when I was a rookie on this team. I could ask him questions, and he didn't act like it was a burden to answer. I appreciated his help. And now he's back helping again."

Walker could do a lot of damage to other NFL teams this year. However, in a recent scrimmage he hurt two of his Dallas teammates on one play.

"We've got to start holding him out of the camp scrimmages," Lacewell said. "He has no idea how to ease up."

Walker will be on display Saturday when the Oakland Raiders and Dallas Cowboys meet in a preseason game.

After the matchup at Texas Stadium, the Cowboys return to Austin, site of the team's training camp at St. Edward's University, for three days of scrimmages and workouts.

It will be the 16th preseason game between the two clubs and the eighth since 1987. Oakland holds an 11-5 series advantage.

The teams have split regular season games with Dallas winning 34-21 in Oakland last year.

Besides the appearance of Walker, it will be interesting to see how the crowd accepts former Cowboys Larry Brown and Russell Maryland when they are introduced to the crowd.

Both won Super Bowl rings with the Cowboys last year and Brown was the MVP.

Centennial Games: Day 8

Capsules

BADMINTON

Top-seeded Joko Suprianto of Indonesia and No. 2 Poul-Erik Hoyer-Larsen of Denmark reached the men's round of 16 with easy victories. Defending champion Susi Susanti of Indonesia and top-seeded Ye Zhaoying of China advanced in women's play.

BASKETBALL (MEN)

Andrew Gaze scored 29 points and Shane Heal had 28 as Australia reached the semifinals by beating Puerto Rico 101-96. Arturas Karnishovas scored 20 points and Arvydas Sabonis had 12 points, 10 rebounds and eight assists in Lithuania's 85-49 victory over Angola. Greece clinched a quarterfinal berth with a 108-86 victory over South Korea and Yugoslavia remained unbeaten with a 101-82 victory over Brazil.

BEACH VOLLEYBALL

Karch Kiraly and Kent Steffes won their showdown on the sand, defeating fellow Americans Sinjin Smith and Carl Henkel 17-15 to advance to the semifinals. "This was like a made-for-TV movie," Steffes said of the first matchup between beach stars Kiraly and Smith in three years.

Americans Mike Dodd and Mike Whitmarsh also remained undefeated, beating Spain 15-6.

BOXING

Albert Guardado, the smallest U.S. boxer, used effective counter punching to beat Anicet Rasonnaivo of Madagascar 9-4 in a 106-pound bout. Another U.S. boxer, 132-pounder Terrance Cauthen, also advanced with a 10-9 decision over Tumentsetsec Ultumen of Mongolia.

Cuba sustained its first lost after 14 wins when Mansueto Velasco of the Philippines outpointed Yosvani Aguilera 14-5 at 106 pounds.

CYCLING

The SuperBikes were a super disappointment again as the U.S. pursuit team was ousted in the quarterfinals by world-record holder Australia. Rebecca Twigg, who ditched her SuperBike after a disappointing race Thursday, also was eliminated in the women's individual pursuits quarterfinals.

DIVING

Mary Ellen Clark's hopes for another diving medal almost ended on the first day of competition. Clark, bronze medalist at Barcelona in 1992, needed a strong final dive to secure her spot among the 18 qualifiers who advanced to Saturday's semifinals.

"There was a moment when I did think, 'This could be my last dive ever,' " Clark said. "But that thought quickly went away ..."

EQUESTRIAN

New Zealanders Blyth Tait and Sally Clark finished 1-2 in the three-day event, with American Kerry Millikin third.

FIELD HOCKEY

The medal chances of the U.S. women's team remained in jeopardy when officials rejected the team's protest of a 2-1 loss to Argentina. The Americans then played a 1-1 tie against Germany, with Vice President Al Gore and his wife Tipper in attendance.

JUDO

North Korea's Kye Sun ended the 84-match winning streak of Japan's Ryoko Tamura as the women's under-106-pound division ended. In the men's event, Tadahiro Nomura of Japan stopped Girolamo Giovinazzo of Italy to win the under-132-pound class.

ROWING

Americans Teresa Bell and Lindsay Burns won their semifinal by a half-boat length to advance to the lightweight double sculls final. Three of four U.S. boats moved on to the medal finals.

SHOOTING

China won three medals, including two golds. Yang Ling won the 10-meter running target gold, leading a 1-2 Chinese finish, and Li Duihong took the gold in the 25-meter women's pistol event. Li cried on the medal stand as the Chinese national anthem was played.

"When I saw the national flag go up, I could not control myself," she said. "I'm proud to win the medal for myself and my country."

TABLE TENNIS

Jan-Ove Waldner, the defending champion from Sweden, registered a 21-11, 21-19 victory over South Korea's Lee Chul-seung. China's Kong Linghui, the 1995 world champion, defeated Toshio Tasaki of Japan 21-9, 21-14.

TEAM HANDBALL (WOMEN)

Anja Jul Andersen scored eight goals as Denmark beat the United States 29-19. Two-time defending champion South Korea topped Germany 33-20, Hungary beat China 29-19 and Norway defeated Angola 30-18.

TENNIS

MaliVai Washington and Andre Agassi won their first-round doubles match, beating Mexico's Oscar Ortiz and Alejandro Hernandez 6-3, 4-6, 6-4.

Washington, the men's No. 4 seed, beat Oleg Ogorodov of Uzbekistan 6-3, 6-4. In women's play, No. 2 seed Conchita Martinez of Spain, No. 7 Mary Joe Fernandez and No. 9 Lindsay Davenport won in straight sets.

TRACK AND FIELD

Michael Johnson nonchalantly passed his first test in the men's 400 meters — the opening step in his quest for an unprecedented double triumph in the 200 and 400. Johnson second in his heat in 45.80.

"Running fast in this round is not going to give me any special privileges in the next round," Johnson said.

Gail Devers and Gwen Torrence advanced to the semifinals in the women's 100. The fastest men's 100 time was 9.93 by Frankie Fredericks of Namibia, who missed Carl Lewis' Olympic record by .01 second. Americans Dennis Mitchell, Mike Marsh and Jon Drummond also advanced to Saturday's semifinals, along with Olympic champ Linford Christie and world champion Donovan Bailey.

VOLLEYBALL (WOMEN)

Russia (3-1) remained in the chase for the top seed in Pool B with a 15-11, 15-8, 15-1 victory over Peru, and the Netherlands defeated South Korea 15-11, 15-12, 7-15, 15-8.

WATER POLO

Spain beat the United States 5-4, ending the Americans' medal hopes. Croatia won its first showdown with Yugoslavia in any sport, 8-6, to reach the semifinals, and Hungary beat Greece 12-8.

Van Dyken wins fourth gold medal

By Howard Ulman

Swimming

ATLANTA — Suddenly, Amy Van Dyken is America's new swimming sensation.

Van Dyken, with a record-setting fourth gold medal Friday night at the Olympics, led the underrated American swimmers to their greatest gold-medal rush since the Los Angeles Games.

The surprise star of the U.S. team won the 50-meter freestyle on the final night of swimming, adding to her golds in the 100 butterfly and two relays. She became the first American female to win four golds in a single Olympics.

"It feels really great," she said. "I wasn't expecting anything like this, that's for sure."

Van Dyken was unaware of the four-gold record until after the race. No U.S. woman — not Janet Evans, Jackie Joyner-Kersee, Mary Lou Retton or Bonnie Blair — had ever won four gold medals at the Summer or Winter Olympics.

"It's special to be included in a category with all those great athletes," Van Dyken said.

The men's 400 medley relay team also sped into the record books, setting a world record in the last race of the competition. It made the United States a perfect 6-for-6 in relays at the games and was the 400th medal in its Olympic swimming history.

The final tally for the Americans: 13 golds and 26 total medals.

After the final gold medals were handed out to the relay team, its four members — Jeff Rouse, Jeremy Linn, Mark Henderson and Gary Hall Jr. — unfurled a white banner with red letters.

The Americans won three of the five events Friday night as Brad Bridgewater picked up the gold medal in the 200 backstroke.

Australia won the other two races on its best night in the pool, finishing 1-2 in two events.

In the first race of the night, Susan O'Neill and Petria Thomas gave Australia gold and silver in the 200 butterfly as triple gold medalist Michelle Smith of Ireland finished third.

Aussies pull softball stunner, beat US 2-1

COLUMBUS, Ga. — She was one strike away from a perfect game. And then Lisa Fernandez threw "a fatty."

"I knew that if it wasn't gone, it was going to knock the fence over," said the U.S. softball pitcher, her face streaked with tears. "It was supposed to be a rise ball, but it flattened out of the middle of the plate."

Joanne Brown knocked the two-strike, two-out fatty over the fence for a two-run homer — the only ball to leave the U.S. infield — as Australia stunned the heavily favored Americans 2-1 Friday in 10 innings.

"I had two strikes on her, and Pitching 101 will show you that you shouldn't come with something over the plate when you are ahead that far in the count," Fernandez said, sobbing. "I love the responsibility of having the game in my hands, and I let it get away. Right now it hurts."

During the U.S. team's 60-1 pre-Olympic tour, Fernandez was 14-0, didn't give up a run and allowed only two hits in 70 innings. The team had been 115-1 in international play since 1986.

And yet, victory wasn't assured.

"You come here and want to put on a show, to dominate. And that is what this team did," said Fernandez, who retired the first 29 batters and struck out 15. "And all of a sudden, the brakes went out. This was definitely an eye-opener to let everyone in this world know that ... the favorite is (not) always going to end up on top."

The U.S. team would have won the game 1-0 in the regulation seven innings if not for a blunder by third baseman Dani Tyler. She hit a ball over the center-field fence in the fifth inning but blew the home run by failing to touch home plate.

"I can't imagine missing any of the plate trotting, but I was so excited I don't remember positively touching it," Tyler said. "I can't really tell you for sure."

Umpire Michael Hornak of Canada called Tyler out after an appeal by Australia.

"The batter-baserunner clearly failed to touch home plate," Merle Butler, director of umpires for the International Softball Federation, said after talking to Hornak.

Was Hornak aware of the magnitude of the call?

"Magnitude makes no difference. It was the right call," said Butler.

Television replays indicated the call was accurate.

"I should have made a better effort to look right at it and step right on it," Tyler said. "I just can't believe I missed it."

The United States (5-1) had been the only unbeaten team in the eight-team, round-robin preliminary round. Despite the loss, the Americans still clinched a berth as one of the final four teams in Monday's semifinals.

The Americans have won 11 international championships since 1986. Their only other loss in that span was a 1-0 defeat to China in a tournament last August.

Agassi, Washington duo a smash for American tennis

STONE MOUNTAIN, Ga. — The new U.S. doubles team is a smash.

MaliVai Washington and new partner Andre Agassi, drafted into doubles due to an injury, won their first-round match Friday at the Olympics by beating Mexico's Oscar Ortiz and Alejandro Hernandez 6-3, 4-6, 6-4.

The victory meant a double-header sweep for Washington, who won his second-round singles match earlier in the day, eliminating Oleg Ogorodov of Uzbekistan 6-3, 6-4.

Agassi, the top seed in singles, will play his third-round match Saturday against Andrea Gaudenzi of Italy.

The U.S. women remained unbeaten, with Mary Joe Fernandez and Lindsay Davenport advancing to third round of singles competition.

Fernandez, seeded seventh, overcame two set points in the opening set and survived 50 unforced errors to beat Shi-Ting Wang of Taipei 7-6 (7-4), 2-6, 6-1. Davenport, seeded ninth, swept Naoko Sawamatsu of Japan 6-2, 6-2.

The doubles entry of Fernandez and Gigi Fernandez play their opening match Saturday.

Agassi, who had played just one doubles match previously this year, agreed Wednesday to replace the injured Richey Reneberg.

The new duo immediately became a big attraction.

Fans unable to get into the match on Court 1 lined the top row of the adjacent center-court stadium to watch.

"It's always fun when you're playing some pretty good tennis with that kind of crowd out there," Washington said.

"We both played well considering we haven't played together and haven't really played a whole lot of doubles," Agassi said.

Washington and Agassi exchanged smiles, high-fives and pats on the backside following especially good shots.

And, after the match, they exchanged banter regarding their decision not to use behind-the-back signals before serving the ball, as many veteran doubles teams do.

Germany's Marc Huster celebrates a world record, which was subsequently broken.

Dim wins lifting duel, wins second gold

By John Nadel
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — Once again, Pyrros Dimas outlifted Marc Huster. This time, the only drama involved the world record attempts each made.

Dimas, of Greece, won his second straight Olympic weightlifting gold medal Friday — becoming just the 13th lifter ever to accomplish such a feat — by prevailing in the 182 3/4-pound division.

Dimas set a world record by lifting 865 1/4 pounds with his best efforts in the snatch and clean-and-jerk. He set the previous standard of 854 1/4 pounds on May 5, 1995.

He beat Huster in the 1995 and 1993 world championships but the German outlifted Dimas in 1994.

Dimas' 396 3/4-pound lift in the snatch broke his previous world record of 391 1/4 pounds, and gave him an insurmountable 22-pound lead entering the clean-and-jerk portion of the competition.

Huster, of Germany, won the silver medal by lifting a total of 843 1/4 pounds, and Andrzej Cofalik of Poland won the bronze with 821 pounds.

No Americans were among the 20 entries.

Actually, Dimas and Huster both lifted totals higher than listed, because both were going for world records in the clean-and-jerk.

First, Dimas broke his previous record of 468 1/4 pounds by lifting 469 1/4 pounds. Then Huster, who already had the silver medal wrapped up, lifted 470 1/2 pounds.

An athlete's total for both lifts only goes up in 5 1/2-pound increments.

Moments after the competition finished, Dimas already was talking about equaling — and eclipsing — the feat of Naim Suleymanoglu of Turkey, also known as "Pocket Hercules," who earlier in the week became the first lifter ever to win three Olympic weightlifting gold medals.

"If you win a gold medal, you feel the same if it's the first time or the second," Dimas said through an interpreter.

U.S. cyclists fall flat in quest for Olympic gold

By Arne Stapleton
AP Sports Writer

Cycling

STONE MOUNTAIN, Ga. — The bikes were super. The people riding them weren't.

The U.S. team has won just one medal — Erin Hartwell's silver in the men's 1-kilometer time trial — despite having the SuperBike, a high-tech creation that's considered the best bike in the world.

The pursuit team was ousted in shocking fashion on Friday along with Rebecca Twigg, who ditched her SuperBike after a disappointing individual pursuit race on Thursday but fared no better on a conventional bike.

The Americans couldn't figure it out.

"We had better preparation both physiologically and technologically than any team out there," cyclist Mike McCarthy said. "Project '96 was absolutely the golden egg for us."

Instead, it was a golden dud.

"The goals we set for ourselves required us to ride on such a fine line between being super and being nothing," McCarthy said. "It was basically an all-or-nothing situation, and maybe we just fell on that nothing side of the line."

The SuperBike II was part of Project '96, a training and technology program designed to reverse the long history of poor performances by the Americans in international competitions.

U.S. cyclists were ranked 11th in the world when the first-generation SuperBike was introduced in 1994. At the 1995 world championships, the team moved up to No. 3.

Other countries have developed their own versions of SuperBike, but the American bike was considered superior because of its ultra-slim carbon-fiber frame.

But, like auto racing, what really counts in cycling is the engine — the athlete. In Atlanta, the U.S. cyclists have been a major disappointment.

Barnes storms to gold

■ Former A&M star ends hard luck career, adds gold medal to world record.

By Hal Bock
AP Sports Writer

Track

ATLANTA — With one throw to go in the Olympic shot put Friday night, Randy Barnes' mind raced.

"Relax," he told himself. "Just relax."

That was more easily said than done. There were better than 80,000 fans jammed in Olympic Stadium, roaring as the duel developed between Barnes and John Godina, the ghost of shot put past and the vision of shot put future.

Godina was leading but disgusted with his effort. Barnes had the opportunity to catch him on this one last throw. And he knew firsthand that it could be done.

In 1988 at the Seoul Games, Barnes was cruising toward the Olympic gold medal. Then, on the meet's final throw, East Germany's Ulf Timmermann snatched the title away.

In Atlanta, on one final throw, Barnes turned the tables with a heave of 70 feet, 11 1/4 inches that moved him from sixth to first and dropped Godina to second. Even before his rival threw, the disappointment was etched in Godina's face. "I knew he would do what he did," Godina said. "It was gone."

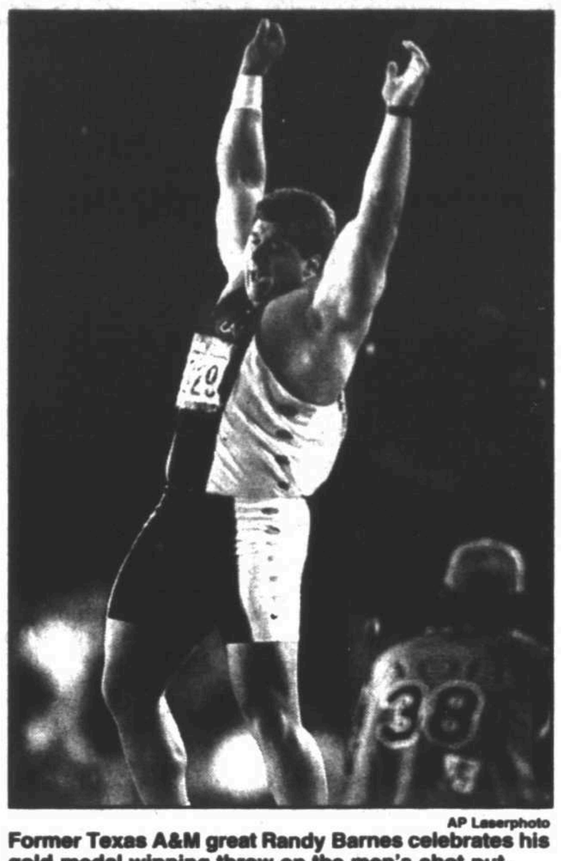
Barnes was sympathetic with his teammate. "I know what John is going through, exactly," he said. "A lot of it is the luck of position."

Both Barnes, 30, and Godina, 24, had struggled throughout the competition, fighting off nerves.

"I know what I should have done, but I wasn't close," Godina said. "I had a problem relaxing. It's been that way all year. It cost me six or seven feet tonight. If I had done what I should have done, I'd be the Olympic champion. It was good enough to get second with a complete and utter failure."

The night wasn't exactly a walk on the beach for Barnes, either. "I was tight," he said. "I couldn't relax. I knew I was capable but there was a fear of letting the opportunity get by. I felt like a freshman out there. I was tight as I ever remember being."

It's been a long time since Barnes was a freshman, attacking the records set by Randy Matson at Texas A&M, then shattering world records. That was the up side. The down side was a two-year suspension after he tested positive for steroids in 1989.



AP Laserphoto

Former Texas A&M great Randy Barnes celebrates his gold-medal winning throw on the men's shot put.

"It's been a long road back," he said. "I just turned 30. John has two more Olympics and he still won't be my age. He's got time on his side. It was important for me to take advantage of this with the games in the United States and it being the centennial.

"This is the pinnacle of my career, definitely. I have both world records, outdoor and indoor and now I have an Olympic gold medal. It solidifies my career. I'm relieved and I'm happy."

First step in Johnson's quest complete

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Michael Johnson's gold shoes were a bit overstated for a guy who looked as though he was out for a weekend jog.

Johnson nonchalantly passed his first test in the men's 400 meters — the opening step in his quest for an unprecedented Olympic double triumph in the 200 and 400.

The man who has won 54 straight finals in the 400, a streak that stretches back to Feb. 24, 1989, took a comfortable lead coming off the final turn. With 50 meters left, he glanced twice to his right. With 20 meters to go, he slowed to a trot.

At the finish line he was second, letting a Sri Lankan pass him at the end. He grinned after crossing the finish line in a mediocre 45.80 seconds.

"There's no sense in doing anything but to get to the next round," Johnson said. "Running fast in this (first) round is not going to give me any special privileges in the next round. I'm trying to get to the final as easily as possible."

There were a couple of spectacular runs in the men's 100 on the opening day of track and field. Gail Devers and Gwen Torrence advanced to the women's 100 semifinals, but Torrence, who was hampered by a sore left quadriceps at last month's U.S. trials, grimaced and grabbed her right thigh after each heat.

The Olympics ended quickly for Mary Slaney this time. Slaney, perhaps America's greatest female distance runner but never an Olympic medalist, was seventh in her 5,000 heat in 15 minutes, 41.30 seconds and failed to advance to Sunday's final.

The day's fastest 100 time was 9.93 seconds by Frankie Fredericks of Namibia, who slowed in the final 12 meters and missed Carl Lewis' Olympic record by a hundredth of a second. Ato Boldon of Trinidad ran a 9.95.

Americans Dennis Mitchell, Mike Marsh and Jon Drummond joined Fredericks and Boldon in Saturday's semifinals. So did reigning Olympic champ Linford Christie and world champion Donovan Bailey.

Boldon promised that Leroy Burrell's world record of 9.85 seconds will be broken in the final on Saturday night.

Johnson, who is favored to become the first man to win the Olympic 200 and 400, got off to a decent start and led the field coming off the final turn. He had planned to take it easy in the preliminary rounds, and stayed true to that plan on the final straightaway.

Though he maintained his upright running style until the end, the piston-like efficiency of his arms and legs slowed nearly to a halt at the end of the race, when Sugath Thilakaratne of Sri Lanka edged him to win in 45.79.

Also advancing easily to Saturday's second round were Americans Butch Reynolds, who holds the world record of 43.29, and Alvin Harrison.

There were no big surprises in the two preliminary rounds of the women's 100. All three Americans advanced — defending Olympic champion Devers, world champion Torrence and NCAA champion D'Andre Hill.

Devers was the only woman to go under 11 seconds, running 10.92 in the first round and 10.94 in the second round. Her long-time rival Torrence ran two 11.11s to win both of her heats, but grabbed her right thigh after each one.

We have a rout: Dream Team finally gets much-anticipated offensive show

Basketball

ATLANTA (AP) — The Dream Team finally came up with the game everybody was waiting for, a run-and-gun dunkfest that set a record for most points by the United States in an Olympic basketball game.

In a game that turned into a rout before the starting five left the floor, the U.S. team trounced China 133-70. It broke the record of 127 points reached twice in 1992.

The United States did as it pleased for the entire 40 minutes. It pulled away in the first half behind the outside shooting of Reggie Miller and the all-around play of Scottie Pippen.

It was easily the Dream Team's best game of the Olympics, and it woke up a home crowd that had been almost lifeless in the first three games of the tournament.

The crowd, announced as an Olympic record 34,417, gave the Dream Team its biggest round of applause early in the second half when Charles Barkley spelled out the letters Y-M-C-A while the Village People song played during a timeout.

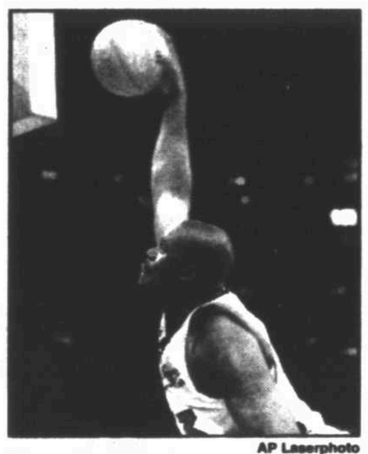
It was followed by chants of "We Want Barkley" and "U-S-A," but the crowd never got its wish as Barkley became the first U.S. player to sit out an entire game.

The United States more than doubled its average margin of victory from the first three games. Miller set a U.S. team record by making five 3-pointers and Pippen had four. The previous record was three set several times.

The record of 127 points was tied with 2:47 left on a basket by Mitch Richmond. It fell 19 seconds later when Grant Hill banked the ball in off the glass after a nice lob pass by John Stockton.

Pippen finished with 24 points, the most by a Dream Teamer in the torurnament, and Hill had 19. Shaquille O'Neal had 13 points and 10 rebounds and Anfernee Hardaway had 15 points and 10 assists.

Finally, the Americans faced a team unafraid to play an uptempo style. And China played right into the hands of the Dream Team, which previously was frustrated by the slowdown pace of its opponents.



AP Laserphoto

Shaquille O'Neal scores on a dunk versus China in the U.S. rout.

The rout was on just a few minutes in as Pippen and Karl Malone scored the first 14 points for the U.S. team, most of them on fastbreaks.

Centennial Games: Day 8

Cauthen earning wins in boxing the hard way

■ American boxer Terrance Cauthen recovered from a knockdown to advance in the 132-pound division.

AP Boxing Writer

ATLANTA — Terrance Cauthen heard the boos from the crowd as he danced away from his opponent, but it wasn't the crowd he was worried about.

Then shortly after the final bell, the 20-year-old Philadelphian heard the sweet music of his name being announced as the 10-9 winner of a 132-pound bout against Tumentsetsec Ultumen of Mongolia in the Olympic boxing tournament Friday.

"Nobody said getting this gold medal was going to be easy, and I see that it's not going to be easy," said the left-handed Cauthen, who found out first hand how difficult it can be to box a southpaw.

"It was like I was fighting myself," he said.

Albert Guardado of Topeka, Kan., advanced at 106 pounds with a 9-4 decision over Anicet Rasonnaivo of Madagascar.

Cauthen and Guardado joined heavyweight Nate Jones of Chicago as U.S. boxers to reach the quarterfinals. Six more Americans can reach the quarterfinals, including Rhoshii Wells of Riverdale, Ga., who was to box at 165 pounds Friday night.

Cuba sustained its first lost after 14 wins when Mansueto Velasco of the Philippines outpointed Yosvani Aguilera 14-5 at 106 pounds Friday night. Two other Cubans were to fight on the night card.

Three members of the undefeated Cuban team also were to box Friday night. The Cubans are 14-0, with three of their boxers already in the quarterfinals.

Cauthen, a counterpuncher, scored the last two points of the first round and led 5-3. He was ahead 8-5 after the second round, but he was hurt by two hard lefts to the head from the strong, aggressive Mongolian.

"He stunned me a little bit," Cauthen said. "He rocked me."

Cauthen recorded two of the first three scoring blows to take a 10-6 lead in the third. Ultumea got in two more scoring blows and Cauthen concentrated on keeping out of range, to a chorus of boos. His strategy worked, although the Mongolian landed another scoring blow in the final seconds.

"If I would have listened to the crowd, I might not be here to tell you about it," Cauthen said. "I had to do what was best for me. I had to box smart."

The 23-year-old Guardado opened slowly and was tied 1-1 with Rasonnaivo, but he stuck to his fight plan and controlled the last two rounds.

Rasonnaivo is a good defensive boxer who keeps his hands very high. So, Guardado said, "the plan was to go to the body and make him drop his hands."

Not only did it work, Guardado got a point from two left hooks to the body in the second round.

"I told Albert and the other boxers don't take anything for granted and in each round step up the pace," said Al Mitchell, head coach of the U.S. team. "That's what Albert did."

The left-handed Velasco raked the taller Aguilera with right hooks and dominated the Cuban from the outset, winning the first round 4-1, the second 6-3 and the third 4-1.

In another 106-pound bout on the afternoon card, Daniel Petrov of Bulgaria, a 1992 Olympic silver medalist and the reigning world and European champion, outpointed Nshan Munchyan of Armenia 11-5.

U.S. leads 470 women, shares top in Soling

Yachting

SAVANNAH, Ga. — American sailors, feeling pressure to duplicate their brilliant performance at the 1992 Olympics, finally began to live up to expectations Friday.

Kris Stookey and Louise Van Voorhis sailed to victory in the women's 470 double-handed dingy to move ahead of the Ukrainian team of Rusiana Taran and Olena Pakholchik.

Californians Jeff Madrigali, Jim Barton and Kent Massey claimed a share of the Soling lead with Germany's Thomas Flach, Jochen Schuemann and Bernd Jaekel. The U.S. team finished second and fifth in its two races Friday.

After winning medals in nine of 10 classes four years ago, these games were beginning to look grim for the U.S. — until Friday.

"There's a lot of pressure on us to match that," team leader Bill Shore said. "What they don't realize is that over half of the U.S. medalists retired. A lot of our new recruits are doing very well."

It's the first Olympic appearance for both American teams at the top of the standings.

"We have no regatta strategy right now," Barton said. "The talent is too deep. If guys would just sail the way they've always sailed the last few years, they would be doing a lot better."

The Americans stumbled in two other classes where they had been right in contention — the Star, featuring defending gold medalist Mark Reynolds of San Diego and Hal Haenel of Los Angeles, and the Europe with Courtenay Becker-Dey of The Dalles, Ore.

Reynolds and Haenel had a terrible day, finishing out of the top five for the first time at 21st and 15th. They were left with a net of 35 points, 19 behind the leading Australians, Colin Beashel and David Giles.

Becker-Dey fell into third place, 19 points behind world champion Kristine Roug of Denmark.

After losing 23 races to afternoon thunderstorms in the first four days, officials decided to start an hour earlier Friday and put all 10 classes in the water. They also got a break — cloudy skies, temperatures in the low 80s and no storms.

In men's 470s, Ukraine's duo of Yevhen Braslavets and Ihor Matviyenko had a comfortable 18-point lead after finishing third. Americans Morgan Reeser and Kevin Burnham finished sixth Friday and were 10th overall.

John Lovell of New Orleans and Charlie Ogletree of Kemah, were tied for third with France's Frederic LePeutrec and Franck Citeau in the Tornado Class. The Lovell-Ogletree duo had eighth and fourth-place finishes.

The lead in the catamarans was shared by Mitch Booth and Andrew Landenberger of Australia and Fernando Leon and Jose Luis Ballester of Spain.

South Korean wins event with a Bang

Badminton

ATLANTA — Bang, you're gone.

Olympic badminton competition for Nigeria's Obigeli Olorunsola lasted just 10 minutes Friday.

That's all the time that Bang Soo-hyn of South Korea needed to beat Olorunsola 11-0, 11-0 and advance to the round of 16 in women's singles.

Just how quick was this victory? An average straight-set match last between 25-30 minutes, and the players usually go through at least four shuttlecocks. Bang and Olorunsola used just one birdie, and it was in the air a total of only 3 minutes, 41 seconds.

The average rally last just 6 strokes and none went longer than 13.

Bang, the 1992 silver medalist and third-seeded here, on Saturday will face Yasuko Mizui of Japan, a 11-4, 11-6 winner over Santi Wibowo of Switzerland Friday.

Defending champion Susi Susanti of Indonesia defeated Doris Piche of Canada, 11-1, 11-3, while top-seeded Ye Zhaoying of China defeated Fong Chan Chia Fong of Malaysia, 11-4, 11-1.

In men's singles, top-seeded Joko Suprianto of Indonesia defeated Jens Olsson of Sweden, 15-11, 15-12, and No. 3 Dong Jiong of China defeated Thomas Stuer-Lauridsen of Denmark, 15-6, 18-15.

In mixed doubles, Nick Ponting and Joanne Wright of Britain defeated Michael Keck and Karen Stechmann of Germany 15-10, 18-14.

There were no U.S. players in action.

Bang was runner-up to Susanti in Barcelona and won the prestigious All-England Championships this year.

DIVING: Both Americans make semis

(From 1B)

Barcelona after undergoing heart surgery but nothing could keep him from her second Olympics.

"He had a smile on his face," said Clark, who at 33 is the oldest woman diver in the Games. "And he's proud."

Ruehl is from Lakeside Park, Ky. and is enrolled at the University of Cincinnati, where they don't even have a 10-meter platform.

"She's got that knack," Clark said of Ruehl, who is her roommate in the Olympic Village. "She's doing her thing. And her thing works."

Ruehl said she even surprised herself with Friday's showing.

"I was just hoping to make the finals coming in," Ruehl said. "Last year I finished seventh in the World Cup. I was hoping to do at least that good or better."

Having the veteran Clark around, said Ruehl, is keeping her young mind on the task at hand.

"She and I have been putting up positive messages all around our room, for us and the others," Ruehl said. "And her advice was great. She said not to have any expectations placewise. Just go out and dive your best."

Clark intends to practice what she preached to her protege. "I'm gonna come out and go after every dive tomorrow," she said. "I believe anything's possible."

All proceeds to benefit the Boys & Girls Clubs of Midland

Last year this golf marathon raised over $80,000 for the Boys & Girls Club kids. That money went a long way to help our youth "Beat the Streets." This year with the help of people like you, we are shooting to raise $100,000! 100% of the proceeds from the Scorcher '96 will benefit The Boys & Girls Club of Midland.

Thanks!

The Boys and Girls Club Movement

Boys and Girls Club of America is a natiionwide organization working to help youth of all backgrounds, with special concern for those from disadvantaged circumstances. Emphasis is placed upon the development of the qualities needed to become responsible citizens and leaders. Established in 1860, and chartered by Congress in 1956, Boys and Girls Clubs provide "The Positive Place for Kids".

Our mission is to provide a core program of activities based on the physical, emotional, cultural and social needs of boys and girls in their communities. This in turn gives our youth a sense of belonging, usefulness, competence and influence that enhances self-esteem and encourages them to achieve their full potential.

Trio rips Senior British Open course to lead event

Coles, Barnes, Charles Share Lead

PORTRUSH, Northern Ireland (AP) — England's Neil Coles, Scotland's Brian Barnes and Bob Charles of New Zealand were tied for the lead after two rounds of the Senior British Open.

Pro Golf Roundup

Barnes fired a 7-under-par 65 Friday to finish 36 holes with a 137 total.

Charles got there with a 69 that included in hole-in-one on the 166-yard 11th hole. Coles shot a 70.

American Tom Wargo shot a 70 to trail the leaders by one stroke. Fellow American David Oakley was a further shot back with a second-round 68 and Chick Evans, also of the United States, shot a 70 to sit three strokes off the pace.

Gary Player, a 60-year-old South African who has seven victories in major tournaments, showed you're never too old to learn on a golf course.

Player, who finished the round nine strokes behind the leaders, was saved from disqualification by an observant official.

Player's problem came on the par-5 17th when he drove into a monstrous hillside bunker.

LPGA Heartland Classic

ST. LOUIS — Vicki Fergon, a 20-year LPGA tour veteran who has missed the cut in five of her last 10 starts, shot a tournament-record 9-under-par 63 to take a six-stroke lead in the Heartland Classic.

"I got my tempo down on my tee shots really well," said Fergon, who had a 10-under 134 total on the Forest Hills course. "I was seeing the target, and I hit everything straight at it. Other than that, I can't explain it."

Fergon, 40, who won the 1984 S&H Classic for the last of two tour titles, had seven birdies and an eagle to break the tournament mark of 65 set by Joan Pitcock in 1994. Fergon also was one off the LPGA record of 62, which she shares with three players.

"It's one of those things where I saw the hole and my stroke went right to the hole," said Fergon, who holed an 8-iron shot from 137 yards for eagle on the 560-yard, par-5 16th hole. "It was very strange. It's just a feeling that's there. Whether it's there the next day is another story."

Melissa McNamara followed her opening-round 71 with a 69 to move into second place at 4-under. First-round leader Danielle Ammaccapane shot a 74 to drop into a three-way tie for third, seven shots behind Fergon.

Fergon opened with two birdies and made the turn at 4-under. She made a 12-foot birdie putt on No. 12, added a 15-footer on No. 15, eagled No. 16 and closed with a 25-foot birdie putt on No. 18.

Recalling that she followed her 11-under 62 in the 1984 San Jose Classic with a 3-over 76, Fergon said the best strategy entering the third round will be to forget about her record-setting performance.

"You try not to put pressure on yourself to do the same thing," she said. "When I shot my 11-under, I was fairly young still and didn't know how to handle it. You really just have to put that behind you. If you start thinking about it, you put pressure on yourself. But I haven't had that feeling for a while, so I don't know what I'll feel like."

PGA Charity Classic

SUTTON, Mass. — Same story, different day. Welcome to the second round of the CVS Charity Classic at Pleasant Valley, where the story line seemed to be: If it ain't broke, don't fix it.

Certainly, Bruce Fleisher and John Cook adhered to that credo. After matching 65s Thursday, the first-day leaders turned in 67s Friday for two-day totals of 10-under-par 132 and a share of the lead with Russ Cochran, who fired a 64 as he zoomed to the top of a leaderboard dotted with red (sub-par) numbers.

Not that 10 under was a security blanket. Chasing hard was Patrick Burke, who matched Cochran's 64 and came in at 134.

Burke's run was particularly dazzling on the back nine as he knocked in birdies at 14, 15, 17, and 18.

RHCC: Dunkerson back in lead again that once they could get a feel of the RHCC greens they would be fine. That assessment was correct.

"Ranchland Hills doesn't produce many birdies because of the greens," said Dunkerson, who teamed with the Sotos and Adoff Garza to take second in 1995. "Derrick had a lot of putts that lipped out (on the front). We felt that on the back, the would start falling."

The round was reminiscent of the 15-under-par Blowout record by Dunkerson's group in last year's final round. The RHCC member, however, said that this round was more consistent.

"We went out on fire," said Dunkerson, whose group had two eagles on the par-5 14th hole in 1995. "We had a lot of double birdies, but also three bogeys. This round was more solid. We had only one bogey.

"We would like to have an average of 10-11 under-par and let it fall where it may. But we wouldn't turn down a hot round."

One of the teams two stokes back is the team of Ron Huckabee, Dub Huckabee, Doug Noah and Larry Snyder. The defending champions, didn't come out of the chute with all pistons firing, but that changed on the back.

Making the most of some great shots, the group played holes 11-16 at 5-under and played the last eight holes at 7-under. That included two birdies on 14. Not a bad finish after a 1-under front nine.

"We didn't get off to a good start," said Noah, who teamed with Steve Whiteside to win the Green Tree Country Club Jamboree earlier this season. "It took a while to get going. There were opportunities. We just didn't make any putts."

The team of Noah, Snyder and the Huckabees have won the Blowout a number of times and are well-aware of what it needs to do.

"(In the first round) You just need to stay in the tournament," said Noah, whose team is tied at 132 with Joe Williams, Brian Gilley, John Castillo and Derek Edmonds. "(With this type of format) You can make up or lose a lot of ground."

Brian Adamcik/Reporter Telegram

Gary Dunkerson watches his shot sdail toward the green Friday in the rfirst round of the RHCC Blowout.

Jacobs, Hammel, Sharp and Haney set the front nine on fire en route to a nine-hole score of 7-under. But like the other groups, finding the touch on the unpredictable greens made birdies a rare commodity down the stretch. Except for two birdies by Jacobs, a soon to-be sophomore at Midland College, it was comparatively lackluster nine.

With the championship flight going out first, instead of last as one the first day, putting may be made easier. That may mean the 15-under par mark set last year may be in danger, but for now, it remains to be seen if the course will be blown away.

Harper back with Mavs once again

By Jay Jorden
Associated Press

DALLAS — Derek Harper simply wanted to come home, and the Dallas Mavericks left the light on.

The free agent guard, traded to the New York Knicks in 1994 after spending his first 10 1/2 seasons with the Mavericks, signed Friday with Dallas.

The club would not confirm terms of the agreement, but it's reportedly worth $3 million over two years.

Harper, who made about $3 million last season, turned down more money from other clubs in order to return to the Dallas area, where he lives.

"Words can't explain how happy I am to be coming back," Harper said. "I thank God that I have the choice to play where I want to play. I am choosing Dallas because this is where I want to be.

"This is where my career started, and I want it to end here."

Although he won't consider himself the main player, Harper said he thinks he'll get respect from teammates for a leadership role and will bring stability to the team.

Keith Grant, Mavericks vice president of basketball operations, said the organization is excited at Harper's return.

"He brings a lot of experience to our entire ballclub," Grant said. "He's been in the league a long time, and knows the 'ins' and 'outs.' He will help our young team learn how to win."

Head Coach Jim Cleamons said the 6-4, 206-pound guard will bring needed experience to that position.

Eighth-inning rally gives Houston 4-3 win

Associated Press

NL Roundup

HOUSTON — Derek Bell doubled home the tying run and scored the game-winner on Bill Spiers' sacrifice fly in the eighth inning as the Houston Astros beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 4-3 Friday night.

Bell doubled to the left-field corner to drive in Jeff Bagwell from first to tie the score at 3-3. Bell moved to third on a sacrifice and after Derrick May was intentionally walked, Spiers pinch-hit for Ricky Gutierrez and drove in Bell with the game-winner.

Reds 7, Mets 4

CINCINNATI — John Smiley and Bret Boone drove in two runs each in a six-run fifth inning as Cincinnati beat New York 7-4 and extended its winning streak to five.

Smiley (9-9) allowed five hits in seven innings, struck out four and walked three. Cincinnati (49-49) reached .500 for the first time since April 21, when the Reds were 9-9.

Pirates 7, Phillies 4

PITTSBURGH — Jason Kendall hit a two-run double off Ricky Bottalico (2-5) in the eighth to break a 4-4 tie and scored on Jermaine Allensworth's double as Pittsburgh extended its winning streak to five, matching its season high.

John Ericks (2-3) blew a one-run lead in the top half when Kevin Stocker singled in a run. Dan Plesac pitched the ninth for his eighth save.

Padres 3, Marlins 0

MIAMI — Ken Caminiti hit a three-run double off Donn Pall (1-1) with one out in the 11th.

San Diego's John Flaherty extended his hitting streak to 26 games, the longest in the majors this season, with a double in the sixth. He tied Gabby Hartnett (1937) for the second-longest streak by a major league catcher behind Benito Santiago's 34-game run in 1987.

Expos 5, Cardinals 1

ST. LOUIS — Jeff Fassero (10-7) pitched a three-hitter for his third complete game of the season and struck out 11, matching his career high. St. Louis lost its fifth straight.

St. Louis, 2-7 on its 11-game homestand, has scored just 12 runs in its last five games. Donovan Osborne (9-6) allowed four runs and 12 hits in seven innings with a season-high nine strikeouts and one walk.

Braves 2, Giants 1

SAN FRANCISCO — Tom Glavine and two relievers scattered eight hits, and Marquis Grissom hit a tie-breaking home run in the fifth inning.

Glavine (11-5) allowed seven hits, matched his season-high with nine strikeouts and walked three. He left with two outs in the seventh and a runner on third, but reliever Brad Clontz got Matt Williams to ground to second. Mark Wohlers pitched the ninth for his 24th save.

Cubs 17, Rockies 4

DENVER — Tyler Houston drove in a career-high six runs and Sammy Sosa hit his NL-leading 34th homer.

Leo Gomez added four RBIs, hitting his 16th homer. Chicago, which scored its most runs this season, had 17 hits off five pitchers. Jaime Navarro (8-9) got the victory.

Fernandez stops Rangers

Associated Press

AL Roundup

CHICAGO — Wilson Alvarez struck out 11 in eight innings, scattering four hits as the Chicago White Sox beat the Texas Rangers 6-2 Friday night and stopped a four-game losing streak.

Alvarez (13-5) walked none and increased his record at home to 7-1 this season. The strikeouts were one short of his season high.

Darren Oliver (8-4) allowed all six runs and seven hits in 5 1-3 innings.

Indians 14, Orioles 9

BALTIMORE — Albert Belle went 4-for-5 with a three-run homer, and Cleveland used 20 hits to beat Baltimore in a game that featured seven home runs.

Belle's performance was a suitable encore from Thursday night, when he had three hits, two homers and five RBIs against Baltimore.

Yankees 15, Royals 1

NEW YORK — Bernie Williams, Tino Martinez and Gerald Williams drove in three runs each and New York had 21 hits, its highest total in almost 12 years.

Joe Girardi and Mariano Duncan both had four hits for the Yankees, who had their most hits since getting 23 on Aug. 25, 1984, at Seattle.

Twins 5, Red Sox 1

MINNEAPOLIS — Brad Radke outpitched Roger Clemens for only his third victory in 3 1/2 months, and Minnesota earned its fifth straight win.

Radke (6-13) won his first three starts, but he had lost his last three starts and hadn't won since July 3 at Chicago. Clemens (4-10) once again got little help in losing for the fifth time in six decisions. He is 1-6 in his last 12 starts.

Athletics 5, Blue Jays 3

TORONTO — Mark McGwire homered for the fourth straight game, tying the score in the eighth with his major league-leading 38th, and Ernie Young hit a two-run homer in the ninth.

McGwire, who has played just 80 games, has seven homers in his last eight games.

He was batting for Rafael Bournigal and tied the score 3-3 against Paul Quantrill with his first pinch homer since Oct. 1, 1991. It was the fourth pinch homer of McGwire's career.

Terry Steinbach led off the ninth with a single off Tony Castillo (2-2). One out later, Young hit his 14th homer.

Buddy Groom (5-0) pitched two-thirds of an inning, and Billy Taylor got three outs for his 11th save.

Lind charged with wife battery

Associated Press

OLATHE, Kan. — Former Kansas City Royals second baseman Jose Lind was charged Friday with battering his ex-wife, violating a restraining order, and cocaine possession.

Lind, 36, was arrested Thursday by Leawood police responding to a domestic disturbance at the home of his ex-wife, Lizza Lind. Police said they found about a half gram of cocaine and a small straw in his possession.

Johnson County District Court Judge Steve Tatum scheduled Jose Lind's preliminary hearing for Sept. 11 and released him on $5,000 bond.

After Friday's hearing, Lizza Lind and Jose Lind's girlfriend, Zaida Oyola, fought outside the courtroom. No one was arrested, but deputies took statements to submit to the district attorney.

Jose Lind's attorney, Dennis Moore, told Tatum that his client lives in Orlando, Fla., but was in town to visit his two daughters.

The Linds' divorce became final last month, but issues relating to their financial agreement remain unresolved. A hearing on that is scheduled within the next few days.

Lizza Lind, 29, filed for divorce in May 1995, citing incompatibility. When Johnson County sheriff's deputies served Jose Lind with divorce papers two weeks later, he disappeared.

Shortly after that, Jose Lind was disqualified from the Royals' roster and was later released. He was picked up by the California Angels, but was released him in late 1995. He has not been in major league baseball since.

ANGELS: Victory snaps losing streak

(From 1B)

"I was thinking, 'God help me.' I was thinking I've seen a lot of guys get hit in the hand and their seasons were over," Molina said.

The Angels fell behind again early. Thursday they came to bat the first time down 6-0 and Friday was not much better. Shreveport rocked Midland starter Matt Beaumont for four runs in the first.

But the Angels scratched back and were down by only one going into the last inning.

"I didn't think there was going to be any problem coming back," Molina said. "I was just hoping the pitchers would hold them."

Anthony Chavez did the holding, going 3 1/3 innings and not giving up a hit. Mike Freehill (7-3) pitched a perfect ninth to get the win.

Midland got the first four batters of the ninth on base against Ortiz, who walked Jovino Carvajal and Keith Luuloa. Basilio Ortiz, who entered the game with the Texas League's best batting average at .333 and a 14-game hit streak, hit a loop double to right that scored the tying run.

But Greg Shockey was intentionally walked and Eddie Christian struck out setting up Molina's heroic at bat. It was the 12th 1-run game the Angels have played in their last 17.

The third game of the 6-game series is today with Midland's Kyle Abbott (2-5) going against the Captains' Keith Foulke (9-6).

Shop the 'Net

DALLAS (AP) — It had to come to this: shopping for groceries on the Internet.

Kroger has allowed customers to order groceries by telephone and fax for more than a year. Last month, it expanded to the Internet.

After a customer selects items from the supermarket's home page, a professional shopper uses the list to collect groceries at the store. The order is then delivered.

Several other chains in Texas soon will be competing online with Cinncinnati-based Kroger.

Tom Thumb and Randalls have set up a home page with plans to add online shopping and delivery by the end of this year in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, Houston and Austin. San Antonio-based HEB Stores also has a Web site and is considering the service.

Home Improvement

ATLANTA — Books That Work, the most reliable publisher of do-it-yourself software, has just produced Version 3 of its Home Improvement Encyclopedia, which enhances that image.

This CD-ROM for Windows maintains the firm's reputation for useful, thoughtful advice and instruction in a package that is very easy to use. It is thoroughly up to date; it uses Netscape Navigator for its interface, includes a package with an Internet service provider if you don't already have one, and contains hundreds of topic-specific links to Web sites. When you first open the Encyclopedia, you're given an opportunity to describe your house and your attitudes toward maintenance through a series of questions and a checklist laced with a lot of stand-up-comedic humor that you may or may not find funny.

It's well worth enduring, however, because the result is a monthly checklist of things to do, which you may consult at any time and which is neither depressing nor overbearing. Following all the recommendations very carefully won't take all that long, generally speaking, and will certainly pay dividends in the long run.

Have you any unusual scars or marks? Ever awakened at night startled? Have you experienced a self-esteem problem or had the feeling of being watched? Any unusual nose bleeds? Or compulsive or addictive behavior? Have you ever been afraid of your closet? Or heard strange humming or pulsing sounds? Do you have a difficult time trusting other people, especially authority figures?

If so, neurosis may be the least of your problems. According to one site on the World Wide Web, (http://www.cybergate.com/ufonline/52questi.htm) you may have had an alien encounter.

The site poses 52 questions "compiled to help you determine if you are an abductee"; it may be that the last question is the most conclusive: Do you have many of these traits "but can't remember anything about an abduction or alien encounter?" A sure sign that it happened.

In fact, who hasn't had such an encounter, even without nose bleeds or addictive behavior? Aliens are inescapable, on magazine covers and television shows and movies, tentacled or gentle-faced, lizards or billiard balls, New Age avatars or blood-sucking leeches.

Internet telephone moves closer to becoming reality

By David Einstein
N.Y. Times News Service

Microsoft and Intel this week announced a cross-licensing agreement aimed at making it easy to place voice and video calls on the Internet.

The companies said they will share technology and develop a standard set of communication protocols. As a result, they said millions of personal computer users will be able to hold conversations over the Internet regardless of what kind of computer systems they have.

Microsoft, the world's largest software company, and Intel, the No.1 chipmaker, also plan to make it possible for people to find each other on the Internet through a sort of cyberspace white pages.

Both Redmond, Wash.-based Microsoft and Intel, of Santa Clara, plan to incorporate the shared standards into new products. Microsoft is expected to offer the technology in a version of its NetMeeting software later this year, and Intel is poised to announce new Internet products in the coming weeks.

'We're going to make low-cost voice, data sharing and ultimately video conferencing available to all PC users on the Net,' said Frank Gill, general manager of Intel's Internet and Communications Group.

Industry analysts called yesterday's agreement a step in the right direction, but noted that the Internet will not be a practical communications medium until telephone companies install high-speed lines in resi-

Microhard: Ballmer aggressive as No. 2

By Evan Ramstad
AP Business Writer

REDMOND, Wash. — Steve Ballmer is cooking up a new idea and needs a whiteboard to think it out.

It is a way to measure the market for computer servers, the machines that manipulate data around networks of smaller computers. As Microsoft Corp.'s top marketer, Ballmer is trying to understand the market to sell more of the company's software into it.

After 15 minutes of scribbling boxes and pyramids with different magic markers and talking all the while, Ballmer spots a connection between two parts of the market that he hadn't noticed before.

Pleased by the discovery, he declares: "My brain works better when my mouth is going."

Big and bombastic, Ballmer is second only to Bill Gates in influence at Microsoft. Their drive is the same, but their personalities are different.

Gates is shy, Ballmer, outgoing. Gates is a programmer who understands marketing, Ballmer a marketer who understands programming. Gates is most persuasive in small groups, Ballmer in a crowd of 10,000.

"I make things black and white. I say 'This is what we've got to do' and that works in a big crowd," said Ballmer, whom Gates relies on to fire up new recruits and sales representatives. "I tend to make things simple, simple, simple. I can't get across shades of gray."

TECHTALK

Bam, ding, crunch: Ah, the memories

By Stephan Lazaroff

As I was sitting contemplating the ever-changing landscape of computer technology, I began to wonder whatever happened to that great old word documenting piece of ironware, the Underwood "sticky key" typewriter. I owned one of those great old machines, and yes, the keys did indeed tend to stick for no other reason than because young hands slammed the keys faster than was intended. No amount of training slowed those fingers down, and no amount of WD-40 kept those keys from sticking.

Then of course there's the sound of the keys striking. That reassuring "bam, bam, bam" of the Underwood steel letter strikers against the platen. Back in my youth, the louder that sound, the better the impression on the paper. In fact, one could slam those keys so hard the paper would become a battlefield of tiny holes and smudges. I enjoyed that in some perverse way.

Of course today's computer keyboards don't stick, at least for the most part, and my fingers have slowed considerably. Therefore, I'm not sure if it's the former or the latter that makes the computer such an efficient method for writing. But anyone who has tried to write on a deadline will admit that there's no way to beat a good computer and Word Perfect! Not only is this the most efficient way to bring a story in on time ... it's the easiest. Once complete it's a simple matter of printing to Win Fax Pro rather than the laser jet, and off the work goes to the editor. Fast, quiet, clean and efficient. However, I still miss the banging of the keys and the sick bell tone that marked the end of every line on my old Underwood!

Once I retired the Underwood in favor of a Royal, I was amazed to find that the keys didn't stick and the "clunk" of the carriage on return was greatly diminished. The fact was, this machine blew away my old Underwood! Soon however, on the heels ofthe Royal came the Commodore 64, and this heralded, (for me at least), the dawn of the word processor. Spelling corrections could be made without erasing and tearing the paper into useless shreds, and rewriting could be performed without redoing the entire document.

Today, we've come a long, long way from the Underwood and sticky key syndrome, but, from time to time...when writing late at night, I still miss the "bam, bam, bam...DING...Crunch", of that first Underwood!

Writer's views on Mac touch off controversy

By Douglas Bailey
N.Y. Times News Service

My friend and colleague Alex Beam touched off a firestorm of electronic debate with a column about how the Apple Macintosh has become obsolete. His reasoning that the Mac was dead came because a:) he could not find a copy of the latest, fastest, neatest software to run on his outdated Performa at -CompUSA; b:) Apple had a big loss in the first quarter; c:) Apple "never" licensed its operating system, and d:) his old Mac Classic is a $50 doorstop.

Whew! I sympathize with Alex's troubles. These are hard times to be an Apple Mac fan. But unlike Alex, I'm not ready yet to give up be assimilated by the Microsoft Borg.

Technological obsolescence is a frustrating byproduct of the computer age, but it isn't limited to the Mac. Just ask anyone with a 386

Dear Amy: My folks say that since we can't go to Atlanta this year we might go to the next Olympics. Where will they be held? — Sean, Vancouver, BC

Dear Sean: It depends on whether you are going to the Summer or Winter Games. If you are going to the Winter Games, you'll be heading for Nagano, Japan, in 1998. The Nagano Olympic Planning Committee has a really nice World Wide Web site at: http://www.linc.or.jp/Nagano/ The next Summer Games will be in Sydney, Australia, in the year 2000. You can visit their Web site at http://www.sydney.olympic.org/ Have fun wherever you go!

Dear Amy: My cousin in Minneapolis got his picture in the newspaper. I would like to see his picture, but I don't live in Minneapolis. How can I find out if the Minneapolis newspaper has a Web site? — Fernanda, Tucumcari, NM

Dear Fernanda: There are two good sources for finding newspapers on the Web. One is the Editor and Publisher Online Newspapers at http://www.mediainfo.com/ephome/npaper/nphtm/online.htm and the other is NewsLink at http://www.newslink.org/news.html Each site has links to hundreds of online newspapers. If the Minneapolis paper that you are looking for is online, you should be able to find a link to it in one of these indices.

Hard to beat the price of a reformatted disk

By Dr. Emilio Bombay
N.Y. Times News Service

DEAR DR. BOMBAY: I must have a hundred of those free disks from America Online and CompuServe. I hate to throw them away, but what good are they? —Inundated

DEAR IN: True, you can only subscribe once. Or at least I hope that's all you did. I never can tell with you people.

The online services love to give away their software and trial subscriptions. It only costs them a few cents per disk. When you activate the accounts, you provide a credit card number, just in case you exceed the free connect time. Meanwhile, there's an army of accountants back at corporate headquarters rubbing their hands together hoping you'll find something online you like enough to keep coming back.

Once you're hooked, they've got a steady source of income, at least until you realize that everybody else in the "Teen girl seeks older man" chat room is a computer science major who hasn't bathed since Arbor Day or shaved since the last Star Trek convention and not the wholesome, virginal woman of your dreams. Unless you like that sort of thing, that is.

Meanwhile, the disks pile up. You have three alternatives:

1. You could give some to your friends, but if you're reading this column, it's obvious that you have — at the extreme outside — only one or two friends, so that's not going to solve the problem.

2. Surprise your wife by tiling the kitchen floor with them. Trust me, it will be much more of a conversation-starter than that expensive, passe hand-fired Spanish tile she originally wanted. Of course, the conversation may start with "You pea-brained moron!"

3. Reformat them and use them as blank disks. If they're good enough for multimillion-dollar online providers to pin their futures on, they're probably good enough to hold your grocery list. Just make sure to pick up labels to cover the originals so people won't know how really cheap you are.

ALIENS: Get carried away on the Internet

(From 1C)

And if you think that the Web might provide some refuge from invading aliens blasting down their firestorms on the world's cities in "Independence Day," think again.

On the Web, it seems, residents of the Pleiades, along with wise Zetas and Santinians (as some alien visitors have been called) have already taken up residence, their oozy flesh reaching far into the alt.alien newsgroups and Web sites.

And they have far more protectors than detractors. One organization, the Center for the Study of Extraterrestrial Intelligence, which pledges to make contact with aliens, posted a news release on its home page (http://www2.ari.net/home/celestar/cseti.html) objecting to the "growing trend toward negative portrayals of nonhuman life forms."

The center contends that the "inflammatory" portrayals of alien life in films might seem harmless but could lead to a tragic, xenophobic response to visits already taking place.

One earthling eyewitness, who calls herself Uriel, announces on her home page that she has in fact met "supercelestial beings" and traveled to "as many as 60 planets." She offers, in testimony, a painting of life on Venus (http://hpl3sn02.cern.ch/aaron-page/restricted/fored1.html).

And lest surfers think someone is pulling their mouse

On one site, some anxiety does creep in, with articles like, 'Is an Invasion Occurring Across Our Planet?' There are tales of a woman who disappeared in her bed, and of mysterious red stains appearing on her hands.

cords in jest, there are more solemn sites, including the links and assistance offered by Abductees' Anonymous (http://www.cybergate.com/ufonline), which solicits tales of alien abduction, each of which will be responded to by veteran abductees for a $10 membership fee.

On this site, some anxiety does creep in, with articles like "Is an Invasion Occurring Across Our Planet?" There are tales of a woman who disappears in her bed, of mysterious red stains appearing on hands, and an account of an artist who believes that earth is not his home and longs for his next assignment.

After those stories, one warily surveys the pages of links to sites about aliens around the world: http://www.citadel.co.uk/citadel/eclipse/futura/bufora/misc/link/lin k.htm, say, from England, or http://www.algonet.se/ufo/english.html for accounts with a Swedish flavor or, more locally, the Virtual Library (http://ernie.bgsu.edu/jzawodn/ufo/), which seems to sum it all up.

For any skeptics, there are accounts of the Area 51 research center in Rachel, Nev. — the top-secret government base where "Independence Day" suggests alien remains have been stored. There are knee-knocking accounts of white Jeep Cherokees chasing stray drivers down a nearby dirt road and suggestions of men in dark suits who know how to discourage inquiries.

Scout around and find Jimmy Carter's account of his 1969 UFO sighting (http://www.interport.net/regulus/small/carter.html), UFO sightings by astronauts, and details about the supposed 1947 crash of a UFO at Roswell, N.M., (which plays a crucial role in "Independence Day").

There are first-person accounts of seeing "God" on an aircraft carrier, of surgery that removed "alien implants" from an abductee's toes, and newsgroups like alt.alien.visitors, which has an informative history of UFOs and alien civilizations posted as part of its Frequently Asked Questions file.

One newsgroup correspondent notes that Hitler had figured out how to make flying saucers during World War II and "actually used them in battle." A European who lived through the war confesses that he had never heard of that technology being used and politely asks for sources.

It should be no surprise, of course, that the Web is so hospitable to paranoia and utopianism, apocalyptic fears and visions of conspiracy; they can easily be found on the Internet even without alien influence.

But the invasion is overwhelming, dwarfing even the occasional entry by a skeptic (http://goliath.inrs-ener.uquebec.ca/paynter/paynter/skeptic.html). And the site devoted to "Independence Day" (http://www.id4.com), taps into all of these feelings.

But how to strike back? Courageous postings in rec.arts.sf.movies and misc.writing.screenplays point out the plot absurdities in "Independence Day" and nearly sabotage that cinematic invasion.

But what about other plots of alien encounters? Those images that come from inverted reflections of ourselves, from dark closet fears, compulsions, thwarted religious feelings and stunted dreams?

There are, no doubt, serious inquiries to be made. But there are times one seems to be "going crazy for even thinking about these sorts of things" or having "dreams of destruction or catastrophe" in response. Are these examples of exasperation? Dismay?

No. They are more of the 52 signs that I have been abducted by aliens.

BALLMER: No. 2 man always noticed before he enters room at Microsoft

(From 1C)

they were in the same residence hall at Harvard in 1973. Ballmer beat Gates on a national math test in those days.

But Gates' programming skills, and prodding from his friend Paul Allen, prompted him to leave college. The two then started Microsoft.

"I've never written a line of code for this company," Ballmer said. "I've never been a technical guy. I'm a nontechnical guy who can learn about technical products."

Indeed, much of Gates' public praise for Ballmer has been for the way he ingratiated himself with programmers in product management jobs.

Ballmer, who is 40, joined Microsoft in 1980. After graduating from Harvard, he worked at Procter & Gamble and then attended Stanford Business School before Gates invited him to Redmond.

"They have been a formidable combination," said George Colony, president of Forrester Research, a technology consulting and market research firm in Cambridge, Mass. "They tend to compensate for each other's weaknesses."

As a marketer, Ballmer sometimes immerses himself in a region, living for a few months in Europe or acting as sales manager for the Phoenix area, to get a better feel for the process or customers.

He has also led recruiting at Microsoft, managed strategic alliances and helped sell its core operating systems to personal computer makers.

"Ballmer is the best salesman I've ever met," said Stewart Alsop, an industry columnist and venture capitalist. "He's the guy who figured out how to get all those manufacturers to pay for DOS and then Windows so happily and to set up Microsoft in such a position of influence."

Ballmer is also Microsoft's other billionaire, though his $3.7 billion fortune is half of Allen's and nearly a fifth of Gates'. And, away from Microsoft and computer industry events, Ballmer can walk around without being recognized.

"That's a bigger challenge for Bill," Ballmer said. "Except at a Comdex show, I can be anywhere and no one knows me."

On Microsoft's campus, Ballmer is easy to spot. With a booming voice, he tends to get noticed before he enters a room and, standing 6-foot-5, take it over once he does. He is cheerful and funny and, to an errant programmer or sales rep, intimidating.

Now executive vice president for sales and support, Ballmer is responsible not only for getting Microsoft's message heard by customers but getting customers' message heard at Microsoft. The second task can be harder than the first.

Microsoft was months behind other big technology companies in recognizing the growth of the Internet and the implications that would have on its business. After the launch of Windows 95 last August, the company scrambled to adapt to the change.

Gates, Ballmer and other executives are consumed with the idea that Microsoft could lose its influence, not just in product sales but in how software is created and used, because of the Internet's rise.

Ballmer and other executives now often point out that no company has been able to maintain its influence from one computing era to the next. Microsoft wants to be the first.

That's why Ballmer is looking at the server computer market. Marking up that whiteboard, he boisterously meshed sales growth figures of small computers with installed base figures of big computers. The data came from public sources like investment reports and news accounts, he said.

"I just sit there and keep picking away at new data," Ballmer said. "That will be a valuable asset for us, to understand this market in ways that others don't."

dential areas.

"The initial area where this will work is the Intranet," said Alan Weiner of Dataquest in San Jose. He added that agreements, such as yesterday's, will help prod phone companies into adding bandwidth.

In a separate development yesterday, Microsoft Chairman Bill Gates told a cable television marketing conference in Boston that he believes the $2,000 personal computer of today will sell for $500 by the end of the decade and will resemble a television.

The multibillionaire said such drastic price cuts will bring PCs into 60 percent of U.S. homes, up from 40 percent now. Already, PCs are starting to appear for under $1,000. AST Research became the first to break the barrier last month, and yesterday Fremont-based Everex Systems announced a sub-$1,000 system. It's Explora995 is powered by a Pentium-class chip from AMD, includes a monitor and sells for $995.

Microsoft sees a major shift for computers

By John Markoff
N.Y. Times News Service

Microsoft Corp., seeking to translate its dominance of personal computing into an upper hand on the Internet, is preparing to release new software that would bring the most fundamental change to personal computers since the machines were invented in the 1970s.

The software, which the company demonstrated privately late last week and plans to begin distributing free to the public later this summer, is designed to blend seamlessly the multimedia technology of the Internet's World Wide Web with the Microsoft Windows 95 operating system that comes as standard equipment on most new personal computers.

The move will no doubt raise alarms among Microsoft's rivals and its many critics, ever watchful for potential antitrust violations in the company's ceaseless efforts to dictate computer technology.

And yet this new technological course represents a sea change for Microsoft, the company that has long fought to maintain its control of the personal computing industry by insuring that most computing power remains inside the desktop machines controlled by Microsoft's Windows operating system.

The company's new effort to blend desktop computing into global networking, if it succeeds, portends a future in which PC users would detect little difference between information created and stored inside their own computers or housed in a Web computer a hemisphere away.

"This is going to make enormous changes possible," said Jesse Berst, editor of Windows Watcher, a trade publication. "It's analogous to the advent of the automobile."

As envisioned by Microsoft, personal computers would abandon the decades-old metaphor of creating and storing information as "files" in "folders" and instead treat each parcel of material as a document with all the stand-alone capabilities of a Web page.

The Microsoft technology would make it much easier to find information, whether on the computer's hard disk or out on the Internet. But much more significantly, the new approach would mean that each piece of material a user created on a personal computer — whether an E-mail message, a memo to the boss or an interactive soft-drink advertisement — would have all the underlying technology for embellishing it with images, audio and video.

Each of these documents would also automatically contain so-called hyperlinks so that the creator of a document could make it available for reading, listening or viewing anywhere on the global Web.

Some industry experts say the technology represents a new paradigm for personal computing.

"We're moving into a new world; we now have a new metaphor," said John Seely Brown, director of Xerox Corp.'s Palo Alto Research Center. The Xerox center was where the "file and folder" personal computing metaphor was invented in the 1970s, before being popularized by Apple Computer's Macintosh software in the 1980s and then imitated by Microsoft's Windows software in the 1990s.

"The beauty of the World Wide Web hyperlink notion is that everything is represented by a document," he said, and Microsoft's approach, "will dramatically simplify the way we deal with our documents."

Microsoft officials acknowledge that the new technology represents a big departure from the company's longstanding approach to personal computing. "The content of the Web now becomes a fundamental part of your computing environment," John Ludwig, a vice president in Microsoft's new Internet division, said last week as he demonstrated the new technology at the company's headquarters in Redmond, Wash.

There is no guarantee, of course, that Microsoft will succeed in this mission. So far in the Internet field, the company trails its most direct software rival, Netscape Communications Corp. But Microsoft has tremendous financial resources on its side.

The company plans to release its fourth-quarter financial results Monday after the stock market closes. Wall Street is expecting Microsoft to report earnings of about 84 cents a share, according to a survey of 24 analysts by IBES International Inc.

David Readerman, a software industry analyst at Montgomery Securities, noted that Microsoft has almost $7 billion in cash. "They're in a very strong position," he said.

But because the bulk of Microsoft's revenues and profits is still tied to software sales for stand-alone and office-network PCs, the company is looking for ways to profit from the Internet's World Wide Web — and even dominate it, if possible.

The efforts include new ventures like the MSNBC cable television and World Wide Web news service that Microsoft introduced with NBC. But more important to Microsoft is the development of software for controlling the basic operations of computers that use the Web.

Microsoft's new technology will be included in version 4.0 of the company's Internet Explorer software, a navigational program for the World Wide Web that competes head-on with Netscape's Navigator software.

So far, Netscape's Navigator holds a commanding market lead. But so intensely has Microsoft been trying to overtake Netscape, that this next version of Explorer will be the fourth within the last 12 months.

Version 4.0 of Explorer, which will be available in test versions over the next few months, will become an integral part of Microsoft's Windows 95 operating system. After the test, Microsoft will distribute the new Explorer free over the Internet, for any PC users who want to add it to their versions of Windows 95.

At that point, Explorer 4.0 would be bundled into any newly sold copies of Windows 95 and its sibling program for corporate computer networks, Windows NT. And for users who might want to run Explorer on Apple Macintoshes or other types of computers not reliant on Windows software, Microsoft will offer a stand-alone version of Explorer 4.0.

By effectively incorporating the Web directly into the personal computer, Microsoft acknowledges that it is entering uncharted territory where it is difficult to predict how the new features will alter the way desktop PCs are used.

MS designers offer web-savvy mouse

By Steve Lohr
N.Y. Times News Service

When Microsoft reports its earnings Monday afternoon, it is a safe bet that no one on Wall Street will be focusing on how well Rick Thompson's business did. The 36-year-old Thompson runs a fast-growing operation within Microsoft Corp. that gets little attention, no analysts' questions, no magazine stories and no business-school case studies.

Thompson and his team — a hardware business within a software powerhouse — are the poor relations of the Microsoft product family. "We're the other guys at Microsoft," he observed.

Yet selling computer mouses, keyboards and joysticks has been a lucrative niche business for Microsoft. If it were a stand-alone company, Thompson's so-called input-devices group would be regarded as a high-growth company employing a business model that management experts call the "virtual corporation."

In the fiscal year ended June 30, Microsoft's input-devices group increased sales by 38 percent, to $370 million.

APPLE: Sales of Macintosh clones are soaring mhz PC who wants to run the latest software made only for Windows 95.

(From 1C)

Alex's problem is he bought the Performa when Apple had a backlog of the home computers it was trying to unload while it converted to the PowerPC. A couple of hours with a trade press publication instead of a slick CompUSA salesman, and he would have known to beware.

I faced the same problem last fall when I swallowed hard and bought a Mac PowerPC 7500. Within weeks, Apple said it was canceling production of the 7500 in favor of the new, improved, 7600.

But you know what? The 7500 is tooling along quite nicely — I have two now, one at home and one at work — and it will last for years.

And so will Apple. Maybe not as an independent company, maybe broken into parts, but it will live.

In the meantime, here's some grist for Mac fans to spew when confronted with more Beamisms, compiled with the help of MacWorld editor David Pogue:

■ Apple's supposedly paltry 9 percent share of the personal computer market is larger than the combined market shares of Saab, Mercedes, Infinity, Volvo, Lexus, and BMW, according to Automotive World. Yet nobody is talking about them going out of business.

■ According to Apple Corp., more than 900 programs are available only for the Mac. Beam is half right that the release of PC software precedes the Mac versions. The other half of the time, the Mac version comes first.

■ There are 56 million Macintosh users and they spend more than $1 billion in software each year. What's more, Mac users buy twice as much software than PC users — 18 percent of all software purchased in 1994 in fact, according to Software Publishers Association. What company can afford to simply abandon 18 percent of its sales?

■ While it's true Apple has mismanaged many opportunities and its sales have fallen dramatically, sales of Mac clones (Yes, Alex, there are such things) are flying. Lockheed Martin just bought 3,000 Power Computing models fitted with the Mac OS.

■ Apple Macintosh sales are down maybe 20 percent (not 50 percent) but it's not because people don't want to buy. According to Computer Intelligence InfoCorp., the demand for new Apples, particularly PowerBooks, still hasn't caught up with production.

So, Alex, go ahead and learn to config.sys, batch file process and update sound driver.dll if you want. For me, there's no retreat and, baby, no surrender.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will be much happier if you stop worrying so much. Dramatic career or financial progress is likely once you adopt a new strategy. Intriguing self-employment opportunities surface next winter. A sudden flash of insight helps you grab the brass ring! Romance seeks you out when you are busy with other matters. A move to another city or the countryside is possible in spring of '97. Seek a professional's advice if you decide to sell your home at that time.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: figure skater Peggy Fleming, producer Norman Lear, singer Maureen McGovern, baseball manager Leo Durocher.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You can expect to be on the move today. Ration your time to avoid spreading yourself too thin. A change of scenery proves very welcome tonight.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Projecting an air of mystery will cause talk. Resist the urge to exchange gossip with the neighbors. A night on the town sounds fine if you set a limit on spending.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Getting a word in edgewise with a relative may be difficult this morning. Seek a quiet setting for a discussion with your one-and-only. Staying home could be more fun than going out tonight.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Spinning tall tales could have the desired effect on social climbers. Dress stylishly to project an image of prosperity. You need to be careful about disclosing your private sources of information.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Sports play a role in today's plans. Your friendship with an older person helps you get the information you need to resolve a financial matter. A loved one works hard to rejuvenate your relationship.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Romance heats up when you show your passionate, emotional side. Postpone a discussion until another day. Delay signing documents, too.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A flirtation is not harmless if it hurts a loved one's feelings. Seek a lasting solution to a recurring household problem. A money matter requires immediate attention.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The domestic and financial decisions you make now will probably be good ones. Loved ones ask questions that give you second thoughts about a proposed deal.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Consult experts about your financial plans; they could point out things you have overlooked. What someone does not say could tell you volumes.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Local events put a smile on your face. Your reassurances help ease a loved one's doubts. Resistance will melt away. Your charm completely wins over a newcomer.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A project gets the go-ahead signal when you agree to a VIP's agenda. A cooperative venture could lead to fame and fortune! An outsider's observations help you resolve a domestic problem.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Salvaging a relationship will require a bold, new approac' A mentor encourages you to use your imagination. Extend a helping hand to someone who is down on his luck.

University conference to scare up talk on Stephen King's many works

ORONO, Maine — The horrors of censorship are on the agenda at a University of Maine conference on the work of Stephen King.

Stephen King will speak at the opening dinner of conference.

Some educators consider King's popular horror books a good way to get kids who don't like to read interested in books, while other school boards have banned his books.

Topics at the Oct. 11-12 conference include "Before and After the Fall: The Passage from Childhood to Adulthood in King's 'It,'" "Morality in the Horror Fiction of Stephen King" and "Screams and Whispers: Redemption through Friendship in Selected works of Stephen King."

King, a Maine alumnus who lives in nearby Bangor, will speak at the opening dinner. He has written more than 30 novels, five short-story collections ar i eight screenplays since the early 1970s.

NEW YORK — Subway gunman Bernhard Goetz is being sued by one of his former lawyers for backing out of a book contract, the New York Post reported Friday.

Joseph Kelner, who represented Goetz for three years in the 1980s, says he agreed to forgo payment in exchange for exclusive rights to research, prepare and write a book about the gunman who shot four black teens on a subway in 1984.

Goetz was acquitted in a criminal trial but was ordered earlier this year to pay $43 million in civil damages to Darrell Cabey, who was paralyzed. Goetz subsequently filed for bankruptcy.

Goetz has said Kelner's contract is fraudulent and says Kelner agreed in a 1985 letter to waive his fees, the Post reported.

Goetz's current lawyer, Darnay Hoffman, also claims the contract is illegal. Goetz has counter-sued, accusing Kelner of harassment and seeking a $10,000 sanction, the Post said.

MALIBU, Calif. — Robert Downey Jr. is ready to enter a locked drug rehabilitation center, his lawyer says, but a prosecutor has a different lockup in mind: jail.

The 31-year-old actor, arrested three times in the last month, has been in a jail hospital since Saturday, when he walked out of a court-ordered rehabilitation center.

At a hearing Thursday, prosecutor Ellen Aragon suggested at least another month in jail for Downey, "to make it more serious and impress on him the need to change."

Defense lawyer Charles English said he had spoken to officials of a "lock-down" drug center about taking Downey, but the center hadn't decided whether to accept the actor. Judge Lawrence J. Mira said he would evaluate the facility and hear the proposal Monday.

Downey was arrested June 23 when police said they found crack cocaine, heroin and an unloaded gun in his truck during a traffic stop. Hours before his arraignment, police arrested him after he was found asleep in a child's bed at a neighbor's home.

Downey received an Oscar nomination for the 1992 film "Chaplin." His other films include "Less Than Zero," "Restoration" and "Natural Born Killers."

LONDON — Paul Newman donated $40,000 to a charity for inner-city youths Friday, a group started by a British soldier badly burned during the Falklands War.

Rush is on for Limbaughcaps, shirts, bumper stickers.

Newman couldn't make the donation in person because he's about to start filming a new movie, so Ursula Hotchner, who helped the actor launch his salad dressing and food company, Newman's Own Inc., handed the check to Simon Weston, founder of The Weston Spirit.

All the after-tax profits from Newman's Own are donated to charity — about $70 million so far.

Several of the more than 1,000 youngsters between the ages of 16 and 18 who have been helped by the charity were in attendance.

"It's widened my horizons," said 18-year-old Robert Mooney, who got training that helped him land a job in the photo industry.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Vince Gill is repeating as host of this year's Country Music Association awards show.

CBS will telecast the Oct. 2 show live from the Grand Ole Opry House.

Gill hosted the show in 1994 and in 1995, when the program topped the nightly network TV ratings. He co-hosted with Clint Black in 1993 and with Reba McEntire in 1992.

Gill's current hit is "Worlds Apart."

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Missionaries speak

Parish missionaries from St. Nicholas' Episcopal Church will speak during the Sunday School hour, 9:15-10:15 a.m. Sunday, in the Parish Hall, 2900 Princeton Ave. Ken and Deanna Moore recently returned from short term missionary trip to Russia and Abigail Beeghley recently returned from Thailand. All three will share their experiences during the program. The public is invited to attend.

Church services are at 8 and 10:30 a.m. and at 5:30 p.m. each Sunday. For more information call 694-8856.

Group to perform

The 12-member Celebration group from Azusa Pacific University will perform at 7 p.m. Wednesday at the First Church of the Nazarene, 1208 W. Wall St.

The ensemble provides a balance of music ranging from the treasured classics of the past to the exciting music of today. Azusa Pacific is an independent, Christian liberal arts university founded in 1899.

For more information on the concert call 682-4524. For more information on the university call 1-800-TALKAPU.

Camp to begin

ALPINE — The 76th consecutive session of the Paisano Baptist Encampment will be Sunday through Friday at the mile high historic encampment located midway between Alpine and Marfa on Highway 90 near Paisano Peak.

Started in 1916 by a group of cowboys and their families, the encampment has met every year since 1921 on the 1,000-acre, oak-grove-clustered campgrounds in the cool Davis mountains.

The Revs. Gene Garrison, who just retired as pastor of the First Baptist Church, Oklahoma City, and William Tolar, provost and vice president for academic affairs at the Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth, will be the preachers.

There are a few cabins and RV spots still available. Contact Lloyd Conner, camp manager, at 1-915-837-3074, for additional information and reservations. The first meal served will be at 6 p.m. Sunday. The first service will be at 8 p.m. Sunday in the Crawford Mitchell Tabernacle.

Conference hosted

St. Paul CME Church recently hosted the district conference.

One of the highlights of the Conference was Mission's Night, "The Woman in White." During this service, the district women made a presentation to the community hosting the conference. Dr. Viola Coleman, a member of the St. Paul congregation, recommended that the women consider contributing to Freewill Foster Home. In response, the home was given many boxes and baskets of gifts to be used by the foster children as needed.

Mount Rose Baptist Church added to the month's shower as it made weekly church tithe contributions to Freewill. St. Luke AME Missionary Society also gave a financial contribution.

Freewill Foster Home expressed its gratitude for the gifts.

Woman selected

Patricia Ann Sharp Jones of Midland was selected as the 1996 Female Alumnus of the Year by the Harrison-Chilhowee Baptist Academy (King's Academy) Alumni Association Board. Retired pastor Aubrey A. Carlton of Lenior City, Tenn., was selected as the distinguished male recipient.

Mrs. Jones owns First Choice Insurance Co. in Midland and co-owns Midland Business Center with her husband, Jerry Lee Jones. A Seymour resident when she attended Harrison-Chilhowee, Mrs. Jones attended Bethany University in West Virginia where she earned her bachelor's degree in journalism.

She has been active in Gideons International, a Christian organization that is committed to the distribution of Bibles throughout the world. Within the Gideons, Mrs. Jones has served in multiple capacities at the local and state level, including chaplain, secretary-treasurer and area coordinator. She is vice president of the Gideons Auxiliary at the state level in Texas.

During her career, she has served in the communications department for two educational systems.

In the local church, Mrs. Jones teaches Sunday School and has held various offices. she was instrumental in developing a women's retreat for her church.

The Joneses have three daughters: Amy Quellar of Dallas; Le Ann Barrows of Lubbock; and Melody Jones of Tulsa, Okla., and four grandchildren.

Annual event held

Nearly 2,000 people flooded the Wise County Sheriff's Posse Rodeo Grounds in Decatur for the fourth annual Cowboys for Christ National convention and Cowboy gathering in June.

Highlighting the convention were the arena events with world champions like Leroy Ashcraft, Hall of Fame cutter; Bob Blackwood, nationally known spur and bit maker and champion rodeo hand; Shirley Robben and Ellen Blackwood, barrel racers; Kelly Clark, world champion bull rider and bull riding director for IPRA; Dale Livingston, many times world champion pleasure and reigning; and Scott Mendes, three-time national finals and Reserve World Champion Bull Rider, PRCA.

The event is organized through the Fort Worth-based Cowboys for Christ. Those wanting more information on the organization or a free subscription to the Christian Ranchman newspaper write Cowboys for Christ, P.O. Box 7557, Fort Worth, Texas 76111, or call 1-817-236-0023.

Assignment accepted

David Alderks, son of Dave and Kathy Alderks, has accepted an assignment to serve a two-year voluntary mission in San Pablo, Philippines, for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

A special farewell service will be held in his honor at 1 p.m. Sunday in the chapel at 4805 Gateway. Friends and visitors are invited to attend.

Alderks will leave Tuesday or the Missionary Training Center in Provo, Utah, where he will study the Tagalog language in preparation for his departure to the Philippines.

Alderks, who completed his freshman year at Brigham Young University, is a 1995 graduate of Midland High School, where he was a member of the National Honor Society, Student Council, German Club, and Science Club. He is a Texas Scholar, math and science booster honoree, and the recipient of a German award, geology award and academic letters.

An Eagle Scout with five palms, and a participant of Christmas in April, Alderks is also a graduate of his church's four-year early morning seminary program.

Speakers featured

Gary Lynn Jones and Chad Lewis Rigtrup, volunteer missionaries for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, will be featured speakers at a special service in the chapel at 4805 Gateway, at 9 a.m. Sunday.

Jones, the son of Glenn and Midge Jones, has accepted an assignment to serve a two-year mission in Quito, Ecuador, and will begin his mission Aug. 7 with a two-month intensive study of the Spanish language at the Mission Training Center, Provo, Utah.

He is a 1995 graduate of Midland High School where he was active n varsity track, swimming and the Science Club. he also is an Eagle Scout and a participant of Christmas in April, as well as a four-year graduate of the church's seminary program and a member of the church choir.

Jones, who has three brothers and four sisters, is the fourth in his family to serve a mission. He plans to major in physical therapy at Texas Tech University upon his return.

Rigtrup, son of Newell and Coleen Rigtrup, is returning from a two-year assignment in Tacoma, Wash., where he served as a trainer, district leader, zone leader and assistant to the president.

"I have truly loved my service as a missionary," Rigtrup said.

He plans to continue his college education with a major in optometry.

Friends and visitors are invited to the service.

Forum scheduled

The Unitarian-Universalist Church of Midland, Neely Avenue at Midkiff Road, will be hosting its summer forum at 10:30 a.m. Sunday.

This week's guest speaker will be Ann Cook Calhoun, professor of English at Vanderbilt University and current chairman of the International Shakespeare Association. In addition to having spoken at several seminars and forums, Ms. Calhoun has written three books and numerous articles on various aspects of Shakespearean literature. Her discussion topic will be "Shakespeare Around the World," an analysis of the use of Shakespeare as a positive and negative cultural tool.

The public is invited to attend.

All interested persons are invited to attend. For more information call 561-9159.

Concert performed

ODESSA — Hosanna Music recording artist Paul Wilbur performs in concert at 7 p.m. Aug. 3 at Permian High School, 1800 E. 42nd St.

He also will be speaking and singing at 10:30 a.m. Aug. 4 at Midland Christian Fellowship, 200 Baldwin, Midland, and at 6:30 p.m. Aug. 4 at Parker Heights Christian Church, 1414 E. University.

He will be joined with Celebration tambourine group from Christian fellowship.

Under the auspices of Bridges for Peace in West Texas, local sponsors include the Rev. Nicholas A. Marziani, associate rector at St. Nicholas Episcopal Church.

After completing a bachelors degree in music education at Baldwin Wallace College in Cleveland, Wilbur moved to Milan, Italy, to study opera, Italian and voice. After a year of intensive work, he returned to Cleveland where he taught choral music and guitar for the public high school system for two years. He then moved to Bloomington, Ind., to pursue a master's degree in vocal.

Wilbur and two friends formed the popular singing group known as "Harvest."

After four years and several recordings with The Benson Co., Wilbur changed directions and formed a group called "Israel Hope," which recorded two albums on the Marantha label and toured the United States and Israel for eight years.

Wilbur tours as a single artist and with Hosanna's Worship International.

STORM TRACKER FACTS

The Permian Basin got quite a surprise as thunderstorms were expected, but all we got was heat. The mercury zoomed to 99 degrees Friday afternoon with no thunderstorms in sight. Our weather pattern is being dominated by a ridge of high pressure to the west and a storm system to the northeast. This pattern will keep thunderstorms in the forecast, and highs in the mid- to upper-90s.

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN
(Never known of Fail)

O Most beautiful flower of Mount Carmel, Faithful vine splendor of Heaven, blessed mother of the Son of God, Immaculate virgin assist me in my necessity.
O Star of the sea,
Help me and show me here you are my mother, O Holy Mary Mother of God Queen of Heaven and earth. I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart, to secure me in my necessity (make request), There are none that can withstand your power.
O Mary conceived without sin, Pray for us who have recoursed to Thee (3 times), Holy Mary I place this cause in your hands (3 times). Say this prayer for 3 consecutive days and then you must publish and it will be granted to you.
M. G.
