NEW YORK (AP)—A roaring rattle and a punching young demon from California, brawny, handsome Max Baer, came out of the Far West with the charge of another Jack Dempsey Thursday night to smash down Max Schmeling, former heavyweight champion of the world.

From the state that sent Dempsey himself east, and Jim Corbett and Jim Jeffries before him, the curly-headed butcher boy of Livermore came to outclass the dogged Schmeling from the start.

Through the first three rounds the huge Baer, with 13 3-4 pounds of weight in his favor, and inches in height and reach, tossed Schmeling around the ring, whipped left hooks to the body, banging rights to the head, laughing at the German's punches, apparently enjoying himself immensely.

DARLING FOOL

CHAPTER XXXIII
 Dan said grimly, "Tell her I'm out."
 The new maid stood in the doorway, irresolute, as Mrs. Cardigan murmured protestingly, "Dan, you simply must go! It's disgraceful!"

Protesting, he arose and went to the telephone. "Hello! Yes. Oh, I've been terribly busy. I'm afraid—" There was a pause during which Dan grimaced at the table against which he was resting. Then he said, none too graciously, "Oh, all right. Around 7? Bye. Be seeing you."

After the servant was out of earshot Mrs. Cardigan, majestic in her morning draperies of trailing lavender, presiding with elegance over the silver coffee pot, began lightly to take her son to task. Underneath her bantering tones Dan detected real earnestness.

"Danny, it's really too bad of you. Sandra asked you to that big dinner last Wednesday and you refused. She'll begin to think you're a boor." She smiled at him, holding out her hand for his cup.

"No more, thanks," Dan retorted they were putting "the works" on him—his father, his mother, all of them. He was thoroughly out of temper and fed up with the whole business, he told himself. He'd half a mind to get out—go to South America—anywhere—on a cattle boat or a freight boat. Sandra was all right. She was a swell girl if you liked the type. Dan was just out of tune with the universe ever since he'd made that quick trip back from the west to find Monnie gone.

He'd sent a wire to her hotel in New York, having ascertained by telephoning to the News office where Miss Anstice Corey was to stay. But Monnie hadn't answered. Dan didn't understand it. That is, he didn't until Geraldine had dropped some of her nasty hints a few days later.

"I see your girl friend has gone abroad," Geraldine had crowed, waving the town paper at him. Dan had growled, "Don't know what you're talking about." He had been furious. Geraldine had lifted her eyebrows, looking superior in that maddening way she had. Great mistake, sending that girl east to school!

"Oh, you don't!" she had drawled. "Monica O'Dare's gone to Europe. Don't ask me how or why. Guess maybe the Charles Eustace could explain."

Dan had interrupted her, his eyes flashing, fists clenched. Even if she was his sister, by the Lord Harry, he'd make her eat her words. "What do you mean?" he had barked. Geraldine had been a bit frightened. Dan's temper was not to be roused unthinkingly.

"Nothing at all except that people are saying he wants to marry her," she had said hastily. "He has certain advantages before that happens."

"Hot!" Dan had not understood clearly the blind rage that flowed over him. Why, Monnie was on loan to him! She had understood that. Then in a flash he remembered the letter he had written her from the ranch. What had he said? He couldn't quite remember. Something about having to change their plans. He had thought, of course, he could see her soon and explain to her that the precarious condition of his father's business and their dependence on Mr. Lawrence's good will made it necessary to "sit tight" for a while. Then to come back and find her gone—

It was like a slap in the face, Dan told himself aggrievedly, forgetting wistfully that it was he who had struck the fatal blow.

And now his mother was working on him, reminding him without saying so, straight out, that it was up to him to keep Sandra happy so Dad could ride along with the bank crowd, so that they would not press him too hard just now.

"In going to the darn dinner," he observed sourly, "don't ask me to like it."

His mother gave him her firm, toothy smile—her "clubwoman smile" Dan thought it.

"That's my grand big boy!" When Mrs. Cardigan had her own way she could be nice. She ran them all, Dan's father and all of them, with an iron hand, but she smiled determinedly the while. Dan felt balked, baffled. He had to stand by Dad—for the present at least. Anyhow nothing much mattered if what Geraldine hinted about Charles and Monnie were true. He felt the old dull rage rise in him like a tide and clenched his fists, remembering—

"What's the matter, son?" Dan muttered something under his breath, choking down his toast. Yes, a fruit boat would be the thing, he was thinking. As soon as Dad's affairs were straight again he would clear out. Go away some place. They'd remember his name, remember—"That Cardigan boy—H! out, didn't he? I hear he has a plantation in Santa something or other—"

Meanwhile there was Sandra's "little dinner" to attend.

She was especially nice to Dan that night. Sandra in her best mood, her gracious, interested, sisterly mood, was quite delightful. Even Dan had to admit it. She didn't demand compliments. She was casual, amusing. She sang a little French song—rather naughty, she said. The other guests, a brother and sister from Cincinnati, Helen and Tad Williston, applauded loudly while Dan pretended to understand. He felt inferior and adored Sandra for her cleverness. She was a darn smart girl, no two ways about it, and very effective, with her dark hair banded demurely back. Sandra was wearing the quaintest of puffed and ruffled frocks in a new shade—hyacinth blue, she said, which gave a sea-tinge to her long-lidded green eyes and made her fair skin look jazzing.

The Willistons insisted they couldn't stop over. Sandra had a vector's meeting in the morning and Sandra drove them to the 11:30 with Dan in the rumble seat beside the Williston girl. She was a competent looking, rather mannish individual with coal black hair cut crisply away from a broad brow and big, strong, delicate fingered hands. Dan liked her.

Demanding a cigaret, she made a gesture toward the two in the front seat.

"Nice girl, Sandra," she said briefly. "Lots of fun."

Dan agreed, impressed in spite of himself by the Willistons and their dictum. Williston & Co. were "big people" in his father's line. He had been hearing of them since he was a child. He could not help being impressed with the fact that Helen Williston who had seen everything and been everywhere dubbed Sandra "ice" and "lots of fun."

"Can't see why she buries herself in this little town," muttered Dan's companion.

Dan had almost begun to defend Belvedere with the best proper to a native son of the place when suddenly he remembered that he, too, was anxious to get away. He mumbled something, thinking that Miss Williston must think him a dull fellow.

On the ride home he was unusually silent. Sandra, seeming to sense his mood, talked in desultory snatches.

"Don't you want to come in and have a cigaret?" she asked as they approached the Lawrence place.

Dan roused himself. "Believe I will. Then I'll walk home. Need the exercise."

She ran the car into the big garage expertly, as she did everything, with a deft turn of the wheel. Dan helped her out, conscious of the fine, faint scent which always hovered about her beautifully groomed hair and skin. Sandra was well—perfection, in her way.

She slipped her cool hand into the crook of his arm. Her voice was very soft. "Worried about something, Danny?"

It was nice to know someone cared. His mother now—his mother was too busy, too absorbed in her own plans, to care in the least what Dan's private feelings were. And Monnie—well, she didn't love him any more. That was finished. You closed the door on things like that.

"Bored," Dan admitted in a troubled voice. "Wish I could light out, go some place where things happen."

"Ah, don't I know that feeling!" Sandra was all sweet sympathy. Suddenly the girl came very close. Cool, fragrant and golden, she stood looking at him, smiling.

"Can't you tell me all about it, Danny boy?" she asked.

The man hesitated. Almost before he knew what was happening Sandra was in his arms.

Theatre Man Must Serve Year And Day In Federal Prison

HOUSTON, (UP)—Will Horwitz, Houston theater man sentenced to a year and a day in Leavenworth for violation of the lottery laws, has been denied a pardon by President Roosevelt, the Houston Press was advised in a special Washington dispatch.

Horwitz was convicted a year ago of distributing lottery tickets in connection with the operation of wireless station XED at Reynosa, Mex., which he owned. He also was fined $5,000.

A petition signed by 75,000 Houstonians, all members of the Texas legislature and scores of prominent Texans asking clemency for Horwitz accompanied his pardon application to the White House.

The President's action on the application was based on Attorney General Cummings' recommendation that it be refused, and the refusal of the U. S. Pardons board to take action, the dispatch said.

Horwitz, owner of a chain of small theaters here, will go to Leavenworth as soon as commitment papers are signed by Federal Judge T. M. Kennerly, now holding court at Galveston.

Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Gooch and son have arrived in Big Spring for a short visit with relatives before continuing their journey to Bowling Green, Ky., and other points in the middle west. Mr. and Mrs. Gooch are from Cammie, Sonora, Mexico. They are making the trip by automobile.

This Is The GOLDEN AGE

OUR time is the greatest the world has ever seen. We have more to be happy with. We have better things, greater variety, keener comforts for our choosing, more conveniences to help us in our work, more things that elevate and entertain.

This is the day of better homes, better clothing, better babies, better health, better everything. Compare any phase of our life with that of years ago and you will find that it is better.

And what is the instrument that has made, and is making these better things possible? Advertising!

Advertising is the news of all the looms, all the furnaces, all the laboratories, all the shops, all the stores that are working, planning and building for you.

Because of advertising, luxuries and necessities that once would have been worth a king's ransom, are yours at little cost. Advertising pits merchant against merchant, artisan against artisan, manufacturer against manufacturer, for your benefit. This competition brings out the best there is in everything for your personal benefit.

You wouldn't know about many boons of modern life except through advertising. That is why you are not taking full advantage of the better things today if you consistently overlook the advertisements.

Get Rid of Body Odor This New Way No telltale M. S. to betray!

End Body Odor... Instantly... by Removing Stale Perspiration Curds with Deep-Pore Cleansing

ARE you worried because you are subject to Body Odor—yet hesitate to bathe with a strong-smelling soap that betrays its purpose? Then read what research chemists have discovered. Every specialist knows that objectionable body odor does not come from fresh perspiration but from stale perspiration deep in the pores. Stale perspiration contains calcium, salt and particles of fat. The thick and sticky lather of most ordinary toilet soaps is unsuited chemically to mix with this waste material and set it free. Instead, it hardens into clogging curds! That's why deep-pore cleansing is needed to remove the objectionable curds—and it is a scientific fact that there is only one way to accomplish this. Kirk's Coco Castile—being a 100% pure vegetable oil soap—mixes with the particles of perspiration curds, loosens them, then

TODAY and TOMORROW By WALTER LIPPMANN Is Fear the Motive?

That there has been a substantial improvement in economic conditions since March 14 is not denied by any one. But there is much discussion as to whether this improvement has taken place because of, or in spite of, or independently of, the departure from the gold standard and the decision to manage the currency. The question is one that probably can not be settled conclusively at this time. We have in fact been off the gold standard since March 4, and formally we have been off it since April 19. During these three months we have seen the most impressive signs of recovery since the beginning of the depression.

than to argue that the so-called currency tinkering is the sole or even the main cause of the present recovery. I do not know what is the sole cause or the main cause, and I never met any one who got any further than to think that he thought he knew. But I do think it is plain that fear can not be the chief motive at work and that it is impossible to explain the strength of the bond market except in terms of hope and confidence for the future.

BAER

whaled away with both hands. The sound of his feet on the floor was heard in the room. He started for his corner, he waved a befuddled protest to Referee Arthur Donovan. Too badly hurt to recover in the short minute rest between the ninth and tenth, Schmeling shuffled for the tenth, a mark for the terrific blast Baer loosed with a fury the ring hasn't seen since the night Dempsey battled Louis Firpo into oblivion in the Polo Grounds.

Now, the most interesting part of this matter is revealed when these totals are broken up. Orthodox theory would have said that with a depreciated dollar, the speculative and second grade bonds might rise, behaving much like common stocks, but that the highest grade bonds would certainly not be wanted by investors. Why should an investor want a bond which can not rise much in price when the dollar income from the bond is threatened with depreciation? Yet we find that the highest grade bonds which stood at 83.77 a year ago were 103.82 last week, and that since the gold embargo, the Thomas inflation amendment, the repeal of the gold clause, and what have you have risen from 97.78 to 103.82. Are the hard-boiled bankers and the careful investors who buy the highest grade bonds crazy? Or is it possible that they do not take seriously the fears which are instilled into them by the most reputable and distinguished financial writers?

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1) boys in Congress that the reason they had to adjourn was that the World Economic Conference was convening Monday. That was an absurd excuse. No body expects the Conference to do anything for three weeks. A few days more for Congress would make no difference. It might make some difference on the war debt issue. Installment are due next Thursday.

Forestry—There is no one connected with it was entitled to any bouquets but the facts were not as bad as they sounded. Possibly $100,000 was lost to the government because everyone was in such a hurry to get the forestry movement going.

Outlook—The administration's private preliminary figures indicate business is holding up well beyond the seasonal trend. The two figures they are watching closest are showing up well. They are department store sales and factory employment. These indicate the present and future consuming market. Production will follow these so no one pays any attention to it any more.

Notes—The one thing the Morgans privately wanted was an assurance that their competitors would be fried the same as they were. They went back to New York believing they had such an assurance. Democrats and Republicans broke fairly even on the Morgan expose.

State of Texas To Have Chicago Display AUSTIN (UP)—J. E. McDonald, state agricultural commissioner, announced here that Texas has decided definitely to have a state display at the Century of Progress exposition in Chicago. At a meeting of the Texas display commissioners in San Antonio Thursday, Chairman L. E. Snavely was directed to make the initial payment on the space allotted to Texas by the fair management. Texas' reservation has been used as a lounge since the exposition opened. "Texas Day" at the fair will be August 23. The state's exhibit may be set up by the end of this month, and be complete within six weeks. It will include exhibits of citrus from the Rio Grande Valley and a large peon display. Daughters of the Republic of Texas are sending a group of historical relics. Displays of products from West Texas and the winter garden district are already being prepared for shipment, it was announced.

Banks—The New York banks had it all figured out how to get around the Vandenberg amendment if it had gone through. The insurance fund was to have been raised by direct levies against accounts of less than $2,500. Several banks actually had announcements printed and ready to send out that deposits below $2,500 were no longer acceptable. That would have let them out of contributing to the fund and they would not have minded losing the small business. National banks are cooperating with the government by using the note issue privilege much more freely. Circulation of National bank currency has increased sharply in the past few weeks.

Pew Addresses Texas News Men

HOUSTON, (UP)—The "best press the American people have ever seen" is being published, Marjorie E. Pew, New York, editor of the magazine Editor and Publisher, said in an address before the Texas Press association convention here. Referring to the years immediately preceding the stock market break of October, 1929, which he declared produced the "most unsatisfactory press," Pew told the assembled publishers: "During those crazed years of unhappy memory the same lustful, delirious, anti-social influences that preyed upon almost every institution in the post-war inflation, dragging a free nation perilously near to ruin, sapped some of their blood of journalism."

Tammany—New York democrats will be treated to a surprise. According to intimates of John McCooey, the powerful Brooklyn boss, alderman "Tommy" Ryan is about to receive the choice federal plum of Appraiser of the Port. "This is no help and comfort for Tammany Hall, because Ryan recently has been designated privately as crown prince for the Brooklyn leadership by McCooey himself. Power piles up on that side of the river."

Britain—Financial leaders here have figured to show that there is more money on deposit in English banks today than there has ever been before. London financial circles say that a great part of this money is "bad money," in the sense that it is foreign hoardings which may be withdrawn at any moment. It is arriving daily by sea and air.

Gold—Confidential reports from Holland, Belgium and Switzerland show that as a result of gold hoarding the amount of gold per capita in those countries has risen from a normal level of about ten dollars to fifty dollars.

Sidelights—The Security Bill has cramped the style of the boys who write brokerage house market letters. Some houses are considering cutting them out entirely. Brokers' lunch offices which cater largely to women have been especially active lately. The ladies line up to watch the board as they did in '29. (Copyright McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

BANK BOBBED

PEKIN (UP)—Two men held up a bank messenger and bookkeeper on a street Friday, and escaped with $10,000.

Public Records Building Permits C. E. Talbot, to make general repairs to a residence belonging to Mrs. Jennie Shumaker, at 1510 Austin, cost $350. E. M. LaBeff to repair structure at 300 Scurry for Tom Ashley, cost $25. Currie and Cavnar to move a garage from North Main and Sixth to South Goliad and 5th, cost $25.

Firemen Make Three Calls, Little Damage Firemen made three runs Thursday and arrived each time to prevent noticeable damage. First run was scarcely half a block from the station when a barn caught fire. It was promptly put out. The second run was to East Second street where a car was ablaze. The final one was to a grass fire on the same street.

Girl Fights, Goes To Hospital, Sees Police Twice In One Hour DALLAS (UP)—Estell Thomas Early fought two women, went to the hospital twice and had two interviews with police, all in less than an hour. The first fight, in which the other combatant wielded a high-heeled shoe, sent her to a hospital for treatment of four deep cuts on the head. Forty-five minutes after she was released, police were called to a hotel room to find her in battle with a Mexican girl. She remained in the hospital after the second visit for treatment of more scalp wounds.

Beer Leader For This District Named FORT WORTH (UP)—E. H. Robertson of Lubbock was appointed director of the campaign in the 19th senatorial district for repeal of the 18th amendment and legalization of 3.2 beer. His appointment as district chairman was announced here by Judge John M. Mathis, Houston, state chairman of the Texas Liberal Legion. The 19th district is comprised of the counties of Bailey, Lamb, Hale, Floyd, Motley, Cottle, Cochran, Hockley, Lubbock, Crosby, Dickens, King, Yoakum, Terry, Lynn, Garza, Kent, Stonewall, Gaines, Dawson, Borden, Andrews, Martin and Howard.

Got Rid of Pains In Her Back and Sides "I was not only weak and run-down, but I was nervous," writes Mrs. Ira Prince, of North Little Rock, Ark. "I suffered from pain in my back and sides. I did not rest well at night and would get up in the morning feeling miserable. My mother had taken Cardui with good results and advised me to try it. The first bottle helped me, so I continued taking it until I had taken four bottles. It certainly helped me. My back and sides quit hurting and I rested so much better." Thousands of women have said that when they had built up their strength with the help of Cardui, real relief was obtained and their general health and feeling of well-being improved. Cardui is sold at drug stores here.
