Official: Air Park not viable site

■ A consultant determines that closing Air Park would take three to five years; council votes unanimously to support placing a proposed sports complex at Loop 250 and Highway 191.

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

Midland's Air Park dodged a bullet Tuesday, at least for the present.

In a briefing session, Deputy City Manager Glen Hackler told the City Council that Air Park was not a feasible locale for a new sports complex.

The municipal airport had been the focus of some discussions surrounding a proposed sports complex and its probable location. The sports complex, if approved by Midland voters, is supposed to be completed by 2001.

Airport and environmental consultants Barnard Dunkelberg and Company were asked to review the procedures for closing Air Park. Barnard Dunkelberg determined that closing the facility would require from three to five years.

"It's our conclusion that based on this information, Air Park is not a viable site for consideration of the sports complex," Hackler said.

The council, in regular session, did decide that a location at Loop 250 and Highway 191 was a viable site. It voted unanimously to support placing a new sports complex there.

But in regard to Air Park, officials didn't say that the facility wouldn't be closed sometime in the future.

"It appears to me that the City Council is making the preliminary move towards closing the airport," said local geologist and private pilot Lynn Cardwell. "Obviously the stadium issue is no longer relevant but the council apparently has other plans down the road. My impression was very strong that several councilmen are interested in closing Air Park no matter the reason."

The council instructed the city staff to go forward with an economic assessment to determine the overall economic impact of general aviation at both Air Park and Midland International Airport.

"We told them that in six to eight months we could bring back to the council this economic assessment as well as a more detailed timetable and cost estimate of what this environmental assessment would actually take," Hackler said.

An environmental assessment would be one of the first steps in initiating closure at Air Park.

"They have been continually saying there are no plans to close Air Park. But if there are no plans to close it then we should close the issue and go on to something else," said Cardwell, who was among some 30 citizens in opposition to an Air Park closure in attendance at the 9 a.m. briefing session.

Cardwell added that if closure was not a goal of the City Council that Tuesday's hearing would have been the obvious place to quash the idea.

Another local pilot, Curt Krehbiel, also came away

Those opposed to renaming road cite its historical value

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

A proposal to rename Fairgrounds Road met staunch opposition at Tuesday's City Council meeting.

Councilman Juluis Brooks had proposed that the street be named for civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Brooks had said that Fairgrounds was chosen because it would affect the fewest amount of people.

They were a vocal few.

Opposition to the project varied from inconvenience involved in a name change to mitigating the historical significance of Fairgrounds.

According to Lee Foster, a local woman who was against the proposal, Fairgrounds Road has been in existence since the late 19th century.

"It's one of only two roads in Midland that existed in the 1800s."

Nancy McKinley, president of the Midland County Historical Society said, "I am very much opposed to renaming Fairgrounds."

The historical aspect also was vocalized by one of the few challengers who actually maintained an address on Fairgrounds.

"I live on this road. I raised my family here and I utilize the businesses on this road. Every known family in Midland either started here or traveled this road and they so named the area because it was a meeting place for the whole area," Dawn Shafer said.

Ms. Foster and her brother Martin Meissner didn't want Fairgrounds

Air Park's rocky history

■ As part of Objectives for Midland in the 80s, moving Air Park was listed as a priority item to accomplish by the end of the decade. According to then-Director of Midland Aviation Col. Wilson Banks, two motivators fueled such discussions — safety concerns and those who "want to get their hands on the land."

■ In November 1983, the city of Midland accepted a proposal to swap 92 acres of land — 48 acres at Air Park and 44 acres at Midland Regional Airport — for 2,655 acres in Martin County. The property was sought as a possible replacement site for Air Park. Then Mayor G. Thane Akins said Air Park could be built on the new site within three to five years.

■ In 1984, the city issued $27 million in bonds to fund construction of the new facility. The oil bust soon followed, leading officials to return the money and scrap plans to replace Air Park.

■ A March 1989 Reporter-Telegram article reports that city officials are seeking federal funds to build a replacement for Air Park. The article also says this is the fourth time since 1967 that funds have been sought for such a purpose.

■ In 1996, the city received two offers on Air Park land from real estate developers and received inquiries from MISD. Mayor Bobby Burns said, "Once we see a buyer willing to pay what we want, I think the council will make a move."

Filters, software available to help avoid links to dark sites

Editor's Note: This is the third of a six-part series on "Keeping Our Kids Safe." Part 3 deals with how parents can keep their children's surfing "clean" on the Internet.

Parents and others seeking ways to avoid pornographic and hate-related sites on the Internet have a number of options available to them through local service providers and software programs.

Some Internet Service Providers make available filtering programs that make for safe surfing. Others provide guidance and links to software programs. At Midland-based Apex 2000, the system in place is called Cleanse Net and is affiliated with one of the highest-rated systems in use, according to the company's owners.

Keeping our Kids safe

"We subscribe to a service that reviews objectionable web sites for content," said Bob Dozier who along with Ty Roberson are owners of Apex. "If the site reviewed is deemed objectionable, the address to that site is put into a program on our system on a nightly basis."

Customers who spend $5 to utilize Cleanse Net are denied access to the sites that the filtering service has deemed objectionable.

"It's the No. 1 product in the industry," Roberson said. "It's server based. We have a dedicated server that gets daily feeds from the national organization that determines what should be filtered."

Roberson said their filtering system requires no overhead by personal computers, thus diminishing the power of home systems.

"The Internet is so dynamic," Roberson said. "We have Web bots (automated search robots) that go out and search millions of sites per hour. If our Web bot returns questionable or unknown content, it automatically filters."

Dozier said the site is not merely text based, but also searches out for objectionable pictures and

Student grievance at center of MISD school board's late-night discussion

By Daniel Arp
Staff Writer

The Midland Independent School District board of trustees still was grappling late Tuesday night with several emergency additions to the agenda involving a lawsuit and a possible open meeting violation at its last board meeting.

At the center of discussion was a student grievance against an MISD principal's disciplinary action that since has evolved into a civil rights lawsuit. The dispute also has spawned allegations that the district shut concerned parities out of what should have been a open vote on the matter taken in the early morning hours of May 12.

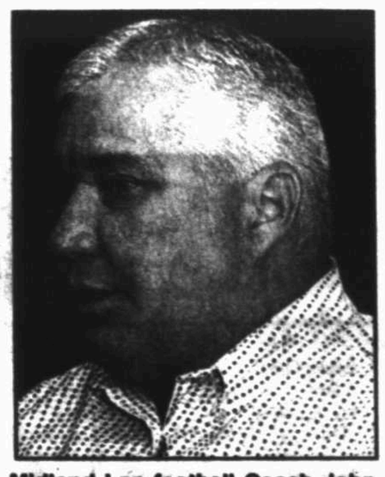
The board voted five to two at that time to uphold a Level II grievance against the student. But none of the student supporters who were waiting outside the board room till after 1 a.m. saw the vote. According to several eyewitnesses, they were told moments before the vote that they could not go into the board room and the sign outside the board room was never changed to show they were in open meeting.

"One of the kids asked if he could come in. Mr. (Joe) Cummins, executive director of Administrative Services Evaluation and Planning, shook his head and shut the door," said Tanya Hartman, former teacher in the district.

According to attorneys for the school district, they remain unconvinced open meeting laws were violated, but district attorney Al Schorre, who had been looking into the matter, informed the district this week that they might want to hold another vote.

The district chose to heed his advice and put the item on the agenda again for Tuesday's meeting.

School district attorneys and attorneys for the student also were negotiating Tuesday over a potential settlement for the lawsuit, though no formal offers were on the table before Tuesday's board meeting.



Midland Lee football Coach John Parchman was placed on the MISD board agenda for Tuesday regarding freshman eligibility. Parchman did not have a formal presentation, but told the board there was the feeling "the policy might need some fine-tuning." Story page 8A

Israel's new premier prefers ex-generals, experts to politicians

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Most Israelis have never heard of the people closest to Ehud Barak — the ex-army officers and young consultants who will shape policy after the prime minister-elect forms a government.

They are considered likely to advise Barak on how to achieve a peace agreement with the Palestinians that would be broadly acceptable to Israelis — unlike his Labor party colleagues who are committed to the party's dovish platform on Mideast peace.

Some warn that Barak is tinkering dangerously with the system by leaving his party out of the loop.

As the team trying to form a coalition government continued meeting with party delegations Tuesday, Barak spent the day stroking the egos of insulted politicians, left out of the campaign and wondering about their future.

Barak left the dingy old storefront Labor Party office on the Tel Aviv seashore to party faithful, moving his campaign headquarters to a shiny new office building a few miles away.

There, his young guard continues to plan and rule, though the election is over and won.

Typical of the Barak team is Moshe Gaon, a slim, casually dressed man in his 20s whose last name means "genius." He was in charge of the information end of Barak's election campaign, coordinating with Barak's American advisers — the same team that helped Bill Clinton win two presidencies.

The Labor Party appointed Avraham Burg, 40, an articulate and telegenic politician, as titular head of the campaign information branch. While Burg debated opposing politicians on television, Gaon and his team prepared TV ads and briefed reporters.

Gaon is headed for a top spot in Barak's office, while Burg is one of the politicians meeting with Barak, trying to get a feel for where he fits in now.

"I don't know anything, so I can talk about whatever I want," Burg joked, speculating about the coalition negotiations.

Others are not amused. Haim Ramon, an ex-Cabinet minister and renowned wheeler-dealer, assumed he would head the team putting together Barak's coalition government.

Instead, Barak handed the job to an ex-justice minister and two relative newcomers in the Labor Party hierarchy.

Miffed, Ramon found he had a family commitment that prevented him from attending Barak's victory celebration Sunday. Other politicians found themselves caught in traffic and were also no-shows.

Alon Liel, who has been advising Barak on politics and diplomacy, said there was no choice but to move the politicians aside during the campaign. "Labor could not win the election by itself," he said.

Liel, a former diplomat, heads a team of academics who advise Barak "whenever we have something to say." Countering reports that Barak is used to running things himself, Liel said, "if anything, he listens to too much advice."

Liel said he isn't sure if he will have a formal position in Barak's administration.

Another key adviser is lawyer Doron Cohen, Barak's brother-in-law and his closest behind-the-scenes confidante. Barak is likely to continue seeking Cohen's counsel without giving him a job.

Ex-army officers will run Barak's administration. Haggai Shalom, who worked with Barak when he was chief-of-staff, is tipped as Barak's administration chief, with an office next door.

NATO approves updated operations plan for Kosovo peacekeeping force

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — NATO approved a plan Tuesday that would nearly double its proposed Kosovo peacekeeping force to roughly 50,000 troops — with up to 8,000 from the United States — and position them to go into action as soon as Serb forces withdraw.

Though still denying any intention of invading the embattled Serb province by land, the 19-nation alliance wants the force to be ready to start repatriating the 830,000 ethnic Albanians who have been driven from the province.

"This is what I personally call our Teddy Roosevelt force," said NATO spokesman Jamie Shea. "It's a force that we are designing to speak softly, but to carry a big stick."

The plan by the North Atlantic Council, NATO's top policy-making body, capped weeks of work by the alliance's military planners.

It will go back to the military for what is called a force generation conference, expected before the end of the month, where NATO generals will decide exactly how many troops with what specialties will be needed.

Shea said the bulk of the force would come from NATO countries. The United States would probably contribute between 7,000 and 8,000 troops.

The allies insist NATO must form the core of any such international force, but have made it clear they will welcome non-NATO members.

The national makeup of the force depends in part on the outcome of diplomatic efforts under way by Russian envoy Viktor Chernomyrdin, Finnish President Markko Ahtisaari, U.S. Deputy Secretary of State Strobe Talbott and others. Their new tasks will include securing agreement with Yugoslavia on a much wider police function than envisioned last year.

The plan originally drawn up last year called for a NATO-led international force of 28,000 to implement an eventual peace agreement between the Yugoslav government and the Kosovo Albanians. That agreement never materialized.

When NATO began bombing Yugoslavia and Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic launched his campaign to drive ethnic Albanians out of Kosovo, NATO's military leaders were ordered to devise a new plan.

Confronted with the ethnic Albanians forced from Kosovo, as well as hundreds of thousands of homeless refugees who remain in the province, NATO realized its planned peacekeeping force will be faced with vastly different tasks than originally foreseen.

The force, officially know as Joint Guarantor, would have to move in quickly on the heels of the hoped-for Serb withdrawal to occupy the terrain and begin supervising the return of refugees.

"This is not a shadow invasion force," Pentagon spokesman Kenneth Bacon said Tuesday in Washington. "It's being constituted as a peacekeeping force."

To prepare for the flurry of activity that would follow a peace agreement, NATO wants to begin building up its force now. There are already about 16,000 allied troops in Macedonia.

"We've had intensive conversations, discussions in the past with the government of the former republic of Macedonia on the deployment of the NATO forces there," Shea said.

The force also will have to secure the principal roads, begin providing humanitarian aid to ethnic Albanians still in the province and remove the mines laid by Serbs in border areas in the past two months.

Those mines have been laid so extensively that they will slow the return of refugees, J. Brian Atwood, administrator of the U.S. Agency for International Development, said in Stockholm, Sweden on Tuesday.

Clearing the mines would be so time-consuming that the refugees would have to return in phases, leaving many of them to spend the winter in camps in Macedonia and Albania, Atwood said.

Mandela calls on Afrikaners to take part in system

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — President Nelson Mandela reassured Afrikaners on Tuesday that they would have a place in the new South Africa, but warned them not to "hanker after the past," when they ruled during apartheid.

Mandela, who has campaigned tirelessly for his African National Congress in advance of the June 2 election, spoke at a civic center Tuesday in Vereeniging, a mainly Afrikaner town about 40 miles south of Johannesburg.

Mandela said Afrikaners, the descendants of the original Dutch settlers and other Europeans, had contributed much to South Africa and continue to have a place in the country.

"There are still some people in the Afrikaner community who are negative about the changes in our country and who still hanker after the past," he said, according to South African Press Association. "Fortunately they are always a smaller, noisier group, but it does not become any Afrikaner to be part of this group."

Police, meanwhile, deactivated a crude explosive device found outside the Pretoria home of a local leader of the Freedom Front, a conservative white-dominated party. It was unclear who placed the device at Joseph Chiole's home.

"We hope this is not the start of intimidation being used in politics," said Freedom Front spokesman Kallie Kriel.

Earlier in the day, Mandela promised several thousand people in the nearby black township of Sebokeng that the next ANC government would deliver more employment opportunities. Since the ANC won the first all-race election in 1994, the economy has lost more than 500,000 jobs. The ANC is expected to sweep the June 2 vote.

"In the next five years we will speed up our plan. A major national offensive will be launched against the scourge of unemployment and poverty," Mandela said.

flags them as well.

Roberson, himself a parent like Dozier, said he uses the system at home. Not only does it block out pornography, hate sites and other objectionable content and pictures, it also filters e-mail and will block sites that describe how bombs are built.

Questions can be answered on the company's home page, at www.apex2000.net.

At Internet Global, the "Parental Guidance" icon at the bottom of the company's home page takes users to an instructional site regarding the Net's seamier side.

The Parental Guidance site offers suggestions for online safety handbooks and other electronic resources, including Net Parents, which provides additional links to blocking software, advice on safe access for kids, Net rating systems and kid-safe sites.

"It's an extremely comprehensive parental guidance area we've built," said Terry Phillips, regional manager of Internet Global's Midland office.

Though I-Global does not provide a filtering system through its service, the Parental Guidance sub-site links users to sites where such systems and software are available.

"We think this is a very important issue," Phillips said. "We don't feel like we have the responsibility to do the parent's job. Nor do we have the legal rights to monitor where our customers are surfing. We don't monitor where their footprints go at all. In our company, that's grounds for dismissal.

"I think ultimately that, as the Internet provider, we cannot sit in our home and watch what kids are doing and neither can the churches or the schools or the government. So where does that responsibility lie? It has to be with the parents. It's up to the parents that their children are getting enough rest, doing their homework. It has to be up to a parent to monitor what their child watches on TV and what they're listening to on a radio and try to instill their values in them."

NetWest Online has registered its site with SafeSurf, Cybersitter, RSACi, and Cyber Patrol, all four of which are given links at the bottom of Net West's page (www.nwol.net). Additional screening and monitoring software links are provided on an additional information page.

"Some of those sites are suited for consumers for at-home use, and some have both at-home use and business applications," said Phyllis Marshall, director of marketing and sales at NetWest. "They don't just filter, but they restrict access, and some of them also provide a history or information about where a user has been. We try to make it easy for users to make their own choices, depending upon their needs."

The software to which NetWest provides links are available for typically a $29-39 one-time purchase. Many of the programs also allow a user to download a 7-10 day trial version at no charge.

Parchman cites concerns with freshman eligibility rule

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The proverbial cart may have gone before the horse Tuesday at the MISD school board meeting.

John Parchman, the head football coach at Midland Lee, was placed on the board agenda for Tuesday regarding MISD's freshman eligibility rule. Parchman appeared at the meeting, but had no formal presentation to make.

"I have had several head coaches express to me some concern over the (freshman eligibility) policy," Parchman told board members. "There is a feeling that the policy might need some fine-tuning, but I'm not ready for a presentation.

"All I wanted was to generate some discussion between administrators and coaches and see if we need to make some changes. I didn't want to do this before the board."

Midland Lee principal George Cooper said that Parchman sent him a letter expressing some concern over the freshman eligibility policy.

"John also sent copies (of the letter) to Tim Whalen (MISD athletic director), (Joseph) Baressi (MISD superintendent), David Browning (head football coach at Midland High) and the (Lee) CEIC," Cooper said. "We haven't even discussed this matter yet, so John being asked to come before the board was a bit like the cart going before the horse."

Browning, too, attended the meeting and asked if there was a problem with the freshman eligibility rule that currently exists.

"If John (Parchman) isn't talking about it, I'm not going to talk about it," Browning said.

The freshman eligibility rule allows ninth-graders to compete on varsity high school teams even though they do not attend the MHS or Lee campus site, provided they make the team. They also may compete at sub-varsity levels if the sport isn't offered on freshman campuses.

The reason Parchman's insertion into the board agenda raised interest locally was the fact that the Ector County Independent School District recently disallowed freshman participation in Odessa schools.

However, Parchman did tell the board, "that this isn't about eliminating the freshman (eligibility) rule. We just need to look at it."

In Parchman's letter to Cooper, he listed six areas of concern with the freshman eligibility rule. They were:

■ Young athletes are being encouraged to specialize too early and multi-sport participation is being discouraged.

■ Some of our talented young athletes are being placed in a situation in which they are competing in varsity 5A competition for which they are either physically or mentally unprepared.

■ The continuity, structure and "team" concept at the freshman campus is being compromised.

■ Not every program is being treated fairly.

■ There are inherent administrative problems that have not been addressed.

■ Some parents and/or coaches have been guilty of "brokering" deals that may not be in the best interest of anyone concerned.

Parchman said that he would entertain questions from the board, but no questions were asked. He immediately left the building, as did Browning, without further comment.

MISD currently is completing its third year of the freshman eligibility policy. Many sports, especially in girls athletics, have made broad use of the policy. For instance, Lee softball, which has never failed to reach at least the region semifinals in all five years the sport has been played at the school, has started at least one freshman in all of the past three seasons. Football, basketball, tennis, golf, softball, swimming and soccer are some of the sports where freshmen athletes have had an impact at one local school or the other.

Abilene High and Abilene Cooper both allow freshman to compete on varsity high school teams, but the freshman class attend the high school campuses.

ROAD: Council defers Fairgrounds issue to later date

renamed because, "Martin Luther King is already honored by the city of Midland with a park."

Martin Luther King Park is located at Carver Street and Scharbauer.

The issue also drew several supporters. One such was Lee Washington, a 16-year old junior at Lee High School.

"It's important to the development of our city both socially and economically," said Washington, adding that renaming a street after King would enhance development along that street.

After hearing the opposition, however, Brooks made a motion to defer the issue to a later date.

"Actually, I'm happy about that," said Washington. "I feel they need more time to think it over and examine it from all directions and then it will be for the better. Then when the decision is finally made, it will be the right decision."

Washington added that further consideration might even yield a more visible street than Fairgrounds.

Less pleased with the decision was Billy Ashley, pastor of Bethel Missionary Baptist Church.

"I'm very disappointed for a couple of reasons," said Ashley. "When you defer an issue, it gets lost in the shuffle."

Secondly, the pastor didn't feel the opposition was strong enough to defer the issue.

"If they are going to consider Fairgrounds a historical road, they could have done it long before now," Ashley said.

Councilman Lee Wood said that he tried to gain information about the road's history at the library but found nothing to support the claims.

The council did not say when it would reconsider the issue.

from the meeting feeling as if Air Park still may be in jeopardy.

"I still think there are people on the council who would like to see Midland Air Park done away with. They still think there might be better use for the Air Park land," Krehbiel said.

But what better use?

Councilman Lee Wood said that Midland Independent School District had expressed interest in the land as well as Midland College.

In a June 2, 1996 article, the Reporter-Telegram reported that MISD, "had expressed interest in building a high school there."

Also in that article, private developers were said to have made two offers on Midland Air Park land.

Councilman Dale Brown confirmed that several entities had expressed interest in Air Park land.

"Because of discussions in the past about the future of Air Park and concluding that it would eventually be closed, there has been talk about what the use of it would be once it was closed," Brown said. "One use discussed was the high school and when the sports complex came up, it became appropriate to discuss it as well."

Brown said that initially he was in favor of closing Air Park.

"But, it's clear now that many users at Air Park would not find that acceptable," said Brown, adding that he is at the point where he would need to see professional studies on the issue before he could make a decision.

Which, of course, is what the city chose to do — conduct some professional studies.

But Dallas Smith, co-owner and manager of Western Casting, questions why anyone is seeking to close Air Park regardless of its proposed uses.

"That property is already being properly utilized. It is not an abandoned or infrequently utilized piece of property. It already has a use," Smith said. "If Air Park was a facility that had just two or three airplanes hangared and just a couple of landings a week and just old rundown obsolete buildings and runways, those would be factors that facilitate closing.

"But the reality is that Air Park has late model buildings and structures, runways in good repair, and a large number of aircraft based there. It's a viable and useful facility."

And it may be a viable and useful facility well into the future.

"What we decided today (Tuesday) is that it's an airport and it's going to stay an airport until we have a good reason to change it," Brown said in conclusion.

Arbitrators hear testimony to decide Zapruder film's value

WASHINGTON (AP) — Is Abraham Zapruder's home movie of the assassination of President Kennedy just a thin strip of celluloid wrapped on a reel or more like Vincent van Gogh's "Sunflowers," which sold for $40 million in 1987?

A three-member arbitration panel began hearing testimony Tuesday to decide how much the government must pay the Zapruder family for the half-minute of history captured on 8mm film. The government must compensate the family because the Assassination Records Review Board in 1997 declared the film the permanent possession of the people of the United States.

The question is how much. The Zapruder family, represented by LMH Co., is asking $30 million. The government is offering $1 million.

Government appraiser C.C.M. Associates says that without projection, the 8mm Zapruder film is a "tiny strip of celluloid tightly wound on a plastic reel." Moreover, the government argues that Kennedy memorabilia sells for thousands, not millions, of dollars.

In 1996, the Sotheby's auction house in New York sold 1,200 items from the estate of former first lady Jacqueline Kennedy. The most expensive piece — an antique French desk where President Kennedy signed the Nuclear Test Ban Treaty — sold for $1.4 million. The entire collection took in about $34 million, government appraisers said.

"When compared to those results, LMH's demand of $30 million for the Zapruder film, an item President Kennedy never touched, is staggering," the government wrote in a brief.

Appraisers for the Zapruder family argue, however, the film is a piece of history or artwork that should be valued like the works of van Gogh or pop artist Andy Warhol's "Orange Marilyn" silkscreen of Marilyn Monroe, which sold for $17.3 million last year.

"It is a cultural icon, a historic document and a unique object that has itself become the embodiment of one of the most significant and well-remembered events of the 20th century," appraiser Beth Gates Warren wrote in a brief to bolster the Zapruders' case. "Additionally, the film is inextricable bound to the powerful Kennedy mystique and the controversy surrounding President Kennedy's murder."

Indonesian elections have remained peaceful at urging of top politicians

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Top politicians, driven by the need to demonstrate credibility and control, have been urging their ardent followers to abstain from violence in the campaign for the crucial June 7 parliamentary election.

So far, it's working.

With the campaign in its seventh day Tuesday, there has been little of the violence that many have predicted. The concerns had sparked beefed-up security and led many ethnic Chinese — who were targeted in previous unrest — and expatriates to flee the country.

Riot police have dispersed stone-throwing mobs with warning shots, but there have been few injuries. Media who swarmed to a rock-throwing incident Tuesday found only a dispute between two neighborhood gangs.

"Before this, the world was a little bit pessimistic that the general election in Indonesia would go peacefully," National Election Commission Chairman Rudini said. "Until now ... it has been good."

The country has not remained entirely free of violence.

In North Sumatra on Tuesday at least 15 people were injured when police fired rubber bullets to disperse an anti-government protest by students and farmers, witnesses said.

About 1,500 people took part in the demonstration in Tanjung Marawa, demanding dissolution of the ruling Golkar Party and the end of the military's role in politics.

AP Photo

Thousands of supporters of the United Developement Party (PPP) take to the tops of buses waving flags and snarling traffic with their show of support Tuesday in Jakarta.

And in the troubled Indonesian province of Aceh, separatist rebels shot a physician and nurse to death Tuesday as they rode in a police truck to carry out post mortem examinations on the bodies of two men killed earlier this week by rebels.

But the level of violence related to the campaign is much lower than had been expected.

One analyst said the frontrunners have told their supporters to exercise restraint because peaceful campaigning will boost their chances at the polls.

"The leadership of the contesting parties is aware that it has to have a successful general election," said Harry Tjan of Jakarta's Center for Strategic and International Studies. "That's why they put in a very hard effort to calm down their followers."

But Tjan said the risk of rioting remained, for example, if an attack on a political party's office spilled over into looting of nearby shops.

Mulya Lubis, a member of the national Election Supervisory Committee, said Tuesday that Golkar will get a "strong warning" for allegedly offering to pay people to attend its rallies and allowing its guards to carry sharp weapons.

Riot police fired warning shots Monday outside a Golkar branch office in Jakarta to disperse a crowd that claimed the party reneged on promises of free T-shirts and $6.

Ten of the 48 parties were allowed to hold rallies Tuesday. The green of the Muslim-based United Development Party, known as the PPP, dominated as about 10,000 supporters rode in long parades of overloaded trucks, buses and motorbikes along Jakarta's thoroughfares.

Hamzah Haz, who addressed one PPP rally, said he hopes the party will win in Jakarta, as it did in 1977 when it took more than 100 seats in Parliament.

Under Suharto, only three parties were permitted to field candidates. One is the PPP, which agreed last week to form a loose coalition with two other major opposition groups to ensure Golkar does not return to power.

Meanwhile, a top Golkar official who has previously criticized President B.J. Habibie said the ruling party still could reconsider its nomination of him as its presidential candidate.

Marzuki Darusman was quoted in local newspapers Tuesday as saying a decision could depend on progress in a government probe into allegations that Suharto enriched himself during his 32-year autocratic rule.

Habibie was Suharto's hand-picked successor and has been unable to shake his image as a loyalist friend. The next president will be chosen by a special assembly comprising the new Parliament and hand-picked government appointees.

Midland honoree deserves praise for her efforts

Midlander Carole Hobbs has a simple, down-to-earth philosophy about volunteerism. She says, "It is just part of my nature, it's what I do."

Mrs. Hobbs volunteers in a big way, too. This is no part-time endeavor for her. She believes that "our purpose in life is to glorify God," and it is clear that she is committed to doing that through her humanitarian work. In fact. since 1958 when she began volunteering at Midland Memorial Hospital, she has worked a total of 20,011 hours as a volunteer!

For that staggering number of hours and her other efforts, Mrs. Hobbs was selected as the third recipient of the City of Champions Award, presented by the City of Midland.

With her selection, Mrs. Hobbs joined Midland College trustee and Jack Sherman Chevrolet assistant sales manager William Howard, and Tomcat USA co-founder Mitch Clark in a very elite "club" — the recipients of the City of Champions Award.

Those selected to receive the award have done what most people do for their community — then they have gone a few steps further. In the process, they have become individuals we should all emulate. They have become champions.

For example, Carole Hobbs did not stop with her volunteer work at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center. She also was a co-founder of the Community Children's Clinic, as well as being involved in several other committees and organizations. In fact, her humanitarian efforts have also brought her other notable awards including the Golden Deeds Award by the Key Club and the Woman of the Year Award, presented by the Altrusa Club.

She is a tireless worker for others and the betterment of Midland. Her efforts are certainly worthy of praise, and we congratulate her on being selected as a recipient of the City of Champions Award.

Flynt trial ended in disappointing draw

It was supposed to be the Gunfight at the Cincinnati Corral, Part II. Good vs. Evil. The people of Hamilton County vs. Pornographer Larry Flynt.

But it didn't happen that way. On Wednesday, Good and Evil decided to sidestep the fight. Each declared victory and went home.

There can't be too many people in Greater Cincinnati who are upset about avoiding a disgusting, month-long trial centering on X-rated videos sold at Flynt's Hustler News & Gifts store in the heart of downtown Cincinnati.

Still, we're not wild about the outcome, and not quite sure what principle, if any, was established in the plea bargain which brought the trial to a sudden halt before a jury had even been seated.

By our calculations, this one ended in a draw.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, May 26, the 146th day of 1999. There are 219 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On May 26, 1868, the impeachment trial of President Andrew Johnson ended with his acquittal on all remaining charges as the Senate again fell one vote short of the two-thirds majority required for conviction.

On this date:

In 1521, Martin Luther was banned by the Edict of Worms because of his religious beliefs and writings.

In 1805, Napoleon Bonaparte was crowned king of Italy.

In 1865, arrangements were made in New Orleans for the surrender of Confederate forces west of the Mississippi.

In 1913, Actors' Equity Association was organized.

In 1940, the evacuation of Allied troops from Dunkirk, France, began during World War II.

In 1960, UN Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge accused the Soviets of hiding a microphone inside a wood carving of the Great Seal of the United States that they presented to the U.S. embassy in Moscow.

In 1969, the Apollo 10 astronauts returned to Earth after a successful eight-day dress rehearsal for the first manned moon landing.

In 1978, the first legal casino in the eastern United States opened in Atlantic City, N.J.

One year ago: The Supreme Court made it far more difficult for police to be sued by people hurt during high-speed chases. The Supreme Court ruled that Ellis Island — historic gateway for millions of immigrants — is mainly in New Jersey, not New York.

At what price intelligence? About $188,931 a secret

How much does it cost the United States to buy or steal a secret from a foreign country?

Anderson

That's one of the best-kept secrets in Washington, for unlike most other entities of the federal bureaucracy, the hydra-headed intelligence community can keep most of its budget confidential.

And few in Congress seem to worry whether the spy agencies are cost-effective in what they do.

In fact, far too much fraud, waste and abuse in military and intelligence programs are swept under the national security carpet. "It's classified" is the favorite "no comment" comment from the Pentagon when asked about failed American weapons, other waste or even general budgetary information.

Nearly every expenditure of intelligence agencies, from buildings to bug sprays, is classified. In fact, the very existence of some intelligence units or agencies — like the Air Force's spy-satellite-operating National Reconnaissance Office — has been classified at some point.

So it may seem a hopeless quest, but our associate Dale Van Atta, through intelligence sources and some deductive reasoning, thinks we can produce a very rough accounting of U.S. intelligence-gathering.

Except for the Central Intelligence Agency and a couple of obscure military units, which devote some money and manpower to covert action, the dozen-plus federal intelligence bodies exist primarily to collect and analyze information.

So their entire budgets should be counted on the cost side of the ledger when it comes to calculating the average price of a secret.

The U.S. taxpayers unknowingly ante up more than $30 billion annually to the CIA, Defense Intelligence Agency, National Security Agency and the plethora of sister intelligence outfits.

While this is already an enormous number, it is impossible to calculate the man-hours spent by ambassadors, Foreign Service personnel and other government officials who pass along secrets gathered to the intelligence services.

But how do we figure out how many secrets $30 billion buys? No one can say for sure, but there is an obscure agency that provides the material necessary for a reasonable guess.

That agency is an odd duck called the Information Security Oversight Office (ISOO), which is administratively part of the National Archives. But it is really an executive agency that reports directly to the president (through his executive orders) on the management and oversight of America's classification and declassification processes.

Most of the domestic secrets, those things we don't want other countries to know, are stamped either "confidential" or "secret" — categories applied to 95 percent of classification decisions. The remaining 5 percent — or 7,246 last year — are classified "top secret."

Even making the unlikely assumption that all 158,788 decisions involved foreign secrets, the cost would factor out to more than $188,931 a secret.

It's high time folks with a green eyeshade, the taxpayer's interest at heart, knowledge of the intelligence community and access to the secrets did more than the congressional intelligence committees to curtail the waste taking place under classified cover.

SPEAKING OUT

Controversy hearkens to Pagoda Field days

By Ted Battles

It has nothing to do with a new ballpark, whether we need it, which we do, or whether we don't need one, but let's straighten out the history of the "old" ballpark.

Newspaper, radio and TV media have proclaimed 1952 as the date of its construction. This is understandable, since those involved in campaigning for a new park were not in Midland during the 1950s, or, more likely, hadn't been born yet. However, if we are going to pick a year out of thin air, 1939 would be more impressive.

The grand opening for the field that would replace Indian Park, located in what is now the Village Shopping Center, was in July 1954.

The Class D Longhorn League Indians tumbled out of the roofless dugouts at Pagoda Park for the last time on Sunday, July 19, and lost to Artesia, 8-2.

Returning from a road trip seven days later, Midland had a new home on the northeastern outskirts of the city. Built in 90 days, the new park boasted of 1,100 boxes and 2,000 grandstand seats.

Six-five, 240-pound Joe Bauman, the first baseman for Roswell, made it a historic year on his way to 72 home runs and a spot in the minor-league section of Cooperstown's Baseball Hall of Fame.

Before the Indians closed up the old park, Bauman hit No. 42 off Romarico Soto and he blessed the Hogan Park edifice on his return to Midland in August with his 52nd in one game and his 53rd the next night, going 4-for-6 in a 17-3 win; however, few noticed that he also had three doubles.

If Joe Bauman had one regret in 1954, it might have been that he wasn't playing in Midland when he compiled his record 72 home runs. Evidence of Midland's generosity with the screen green was Selbo's $97.65 for an opening night home run was more than Wichita Falls raked in for its April 26 game with Big Spring.

It was in the new park on July 28 that Bud Hull topped Jim Prince's mark with his 34th homer, a total that would eventually reach 44, tying a club record.

Most significantly, Frank Pickens, a workaholic from Louisiana, became Midland's first black player and last 20-game winner.

With limited rosters, Manager Rudy Briner was decades ahead of his time, using Frank as a starter one night and bringing him on as a late inning closer the next night. Frank's whereabouts today? I'd love to know for the professional baseball history of Midland I'm working on.

While work was being rushed on the Indians' new home in Hogan Park, the old Pagoda Park was showing its age. If it wasn't the glaring lights beyond the outfield fence, it was poor lights in the left field corner which cost Tom Barton a double.

When Tom "doubled" into the corner, Pete Guzy, on first, couldn't tell if left fielder Audie Malone caught the ball, so he retraced his steps. Malone didn't catch the ball, but got a force on Guzy at second, depriving Barton of even a hit.

Ted Battles is the retired sports editor of the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

The subject of a municipal golf course received support in 1954, but … (May 12) two inches of rain during the week turned out to be the best soaking since 1949. The same day Mayor J.W. McMillan doused talk about a city golf links, declaring with finality, "We have a delicate water situation and we must look to new sources instead of new ways to put it to use."

Leland Hoffman's 1,033-signature petition for a public course "without half trying," brought terse rejection from McMillian, as quoted in the Midland Reporter-Telegram, "If we build a golf course, the next thing you know, they'll want us to build a polo field."

The municipal course at Hogan opened in 1958 with the clubhouse adjacent to the parking lot of the baseball field. Now it's on the verge of becoming a 27-hole course and the clubhouse is a mile away.

Original plans for the ball field at Hogan, included more seats and an adjacent 20,000-seat football stadium, but then the cost trimming began.

After a decade without pro ball, old Braves field was gutted in 1971 for Midland's entry into the Texas League. Actually, there was no need to gut the field; neglect had already taken its toll. The park, except for the steel girders, was rebuilt from scratch (and I have the pictures to prove it).

Work continued through the season. One night a wind knocked over the shaky outfield fence. As I recall, the club used three different scoreboards during the season — one, a Japanese scoreboard, shipped here by mistake; or, at least, that's what the guy at the newspaper wrote.

In 1972, Midland became famous, as a nation chuckled at the commentary "Amarillo at Midland, called because of grasshoppers." And the sign. Who could forget the outfield sign dedicated by a group of lawyers to Peter Marshall's son Pete, who played left field for the Midland Cubs, "Long Live LaCock," which happened to be Pete's last name.

History is history … but it has nothing to do with a vote on the new park. If I had my way, we'd still be playing at Pagoda. The players lived in the clubhouse and had an adjacent swimming pool. Think our new ballpark will have that kind of luxury? Fat chance.

Clinton lies when truth would better serve his purpose

WASHINGTON — We have a president who has a problem: he lies when he doesn't really have to.

Safire

This mysterious compulsion is not to be confused with the rational falsehood. His finger-wagging denial of a sexual relationship last year was designed to cut off further inquiry, and he could logically assume at the time he would not be contradicted by hard evidence. It was a calculated deception by a well-ordered brain.

The deceptions this year are different. Not only were the misleading statements made about the weightiest matters — war and national security — no purpose was served in uttering them. That's the puzzling part.

For example, on March 24, he said: "I do not intend to put our troops in Kosovo to fight a war." He reiterated that policy time and again. Vice President Gore dutifully followed his line when asked in April, "Are there any circumstances under which you would support using American ground troops?" Gore replied: "That option is not under consideration ... that option was removed from consideration."

Clinton was criticized immediately by Sen. John McCain and in this space for taking the potential use of troops off the table at the start. Even Clinton supporters now concede that the president erred by giving Slobodan Milosevic an assurance against invasion. When the leader of the Western alliance, Britain's Tony Blair, told Clinton recently that ground troops must at least be assembled, and when the NATO commander argued that the bombing alone would not accomplish the mission, Clinton properly changed his policy.

But he could not bring himself to say forthrightly that the time had come for such new pressure on Serbia. Instead, he insisted that he had "always said ... that we have not and will not take any option off the table."

That's just not so, and everybody knows it. Why does he do it? Does he imagine that nobody will remember what he has been saying all along?

His diehard defenders explain that his words "to fight a war" limited the meaning of "do not intend to put our troops in Kosovo." Under that parsing, he intended only to put them in a "permissive environment."

That's demonstrably untrue, too. His secretary of state says that the 50,000 NATO troops might well be used in a "non-permissive environment." (That euphemism for invasion means "a place where soldiers shoot at you." When is NPE Day?)

Another example of the unnecessary lie was his March 19 response to: "Can you assure the American people that under your watch, no valuable nuclear secrets were lost?"

We now know that he had been briefed last November about the FBI and CIA suspicions, and in January had received the secret Cox committee report detailing security lapses during the Clinton "watch."

Clinton carefully rephrased the question: "Can I tell you that there has been no espionage at the labs since I have been president? I can tell you that no one has reported to me that they suspect such a thing has occurred." And again: "To the best of my knowledge" (he wasn't even under-oath) "no one has said anything to me about any espionage which occurred by the Chinese against the labs during my presidency."

Thus does the requirement to cover the president's slippery prevarications corrupt everyone loyal to him.

In time, the truth will out, but deeper questions will remain: Why the Clinton compulsion to pretend he never makes a mistake? Why the sneaky word games when the truth is sure to come out? What mental process accounts for his strange habit of unnecessary denial?

William Safire's column is distributed by the N.Y. Times news service.

Four in family killed while walking on train tracks in Connecticut

FAIRFIELD, Conn. (AP) — An apparently desperate woman and three of her sons were killed by an Amtrak train that struck them from behind as they trudged across a railroad bridge Tuesday in the middle of the night. A fourth son was critically injured.

Officials said the family was from Ecuador and had an "unstable" housing situation. But few other details were disclosed.

"For children and an adult to be walking on train tracks at 2 in the morning, obviously they were scared and had nowhere to go," said First Selectman Ken Flatto, the town's top elected official. "It's obvious they weren't going for a joy ride. This was a family in distress."

The boys were 3, 6, 10 and 12. The 6-year-old was the only survivor. The boy's left leg was severed by the train, and he suffered a grave head injury and fractures of his legs and pelvis. He lay in a coma.

The Twilight Shoreliner from Boston to Newport News, Va., struck the family as they crossed a trestle over a two-lane street in Fairfield, about 50 miles northeast of New York City.

The front of the train was splattered with blood. Lying amid the shattered bodies were books, backpacks, a small tennis shoe and a Sesame Street figurine.

James O'Donnell, chief of the Metropolitan Transit Authority, which owns the tracks, said the engineer reported seeing a child on the right side of the tracks. A split-second later, he saw a woman and three other children on the left side of the tracks.

The woman crossed the tracks in front of the oncoming train to reach the child, and the other youngsters followed, O'Donnell said.

"Her last act was an attempt to save her other child," O'Donnell said.

O'Donnell identified the survivor as Angel Gabriel Urgiles Toledo. The names of the other victims were not released.

It was not immediately clear how fast the train was going, but the speed limit was 75 mph.

Kenneth Gambardella, an official with the state Transportation Department, said that at 75 mph, the train would have needed more than a mile to stop. The engineer's only option would have been to blow the whistle, pull the emergency brakes "and pray," Gambardella said.

The train had two electric locomotives, which are much quieter than diesel models, Gambardella said. The welded track in the area also reduces train noise.

"Sometimes you can't hear these trains at all until they're right on top of you, and by then, of course, it's too late," he said.

There were no injuries on the train, which had about 185 passengers.

Dairy recalls cheese after discovery of possible bacteria

WASHINGTON (AP) — A small Missouri dairy is recalling 135 pounds of specialty cheese that may be contaminated with dangerous listeria.

Consumers should not eat the recalled Morningland Dairy Chives Colby Cheese, but return it to the place of purchase for a refund.

Morningland Dairy Farms Inc. recalled the cheese, which is made from raw milk, Tuesday after testing by Missouri and federal health officials discovered the bacterial contamination.

Listeria can cause serious, potentially fatal, infections in young children, the elderly and people with weak immune systems.

Supreme Court bans media from raids

■ Midland police, press agree with the court's ruling.

By Rick López
Staff Writer

Police can be sued for letting TV crews and journalists accompany them into people's homes to observe arrests or searches, the Supreme Court has ruled.

But the ruling still won't keep the media from accompanying police officers, as long as reporters stay outside when officers enter private homes.

Midland law enforcement said the ruling has little effect on how they'll cooperate with the local press.

"The media is just like any citizen. They're allowed to go where any average citizen has the right to go. We don't ask them to do anything different," said Tina Jauz, spokeswoman for the Midland Police Department.

The court's ruling stems from unanimous decisions made in cases from Montana and Maryland.

In the Maryland case, sheriff's deputies and U.S. marshals took along a Washington Post reporter and photographer when they entered Charles and Geraldine Wilson's home in Rockville.

The officers wanted to arrest the Wilsons' fugitive adult son, who was not at their home but turned himself in later. Photographs, one showing Wilson wearing only his undershorts with a police officer's gun at his head, were not published.

The Montana case was filed by Paul and Erma Berger against federal agents and a prosecutor who let a CNN reporter and camera crew accompany them to the couple's ranch.

Government agents were seeking evidence of eagle poisoning, but Paul Berger was convicted only of improper use of a pesticide, a minor offense. CNN later aired footage of the raid.

The court believes that police who authorize "reporter ride-alongs" to raids and searches are in violation of privacy rights preserved by the Constitution.

"It is a violation of the Fourth Amendment for police to bring members of the media or other third parties into a home during the execution of a warrant when the third parties are not in aid of the execution," Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist wrote for the nation's highest court.

Televised raids

It is a scene repeated countless times daily across American TV: Police officers burst into a house or some other private place and seek their quarry.

Court's decision in fifth-grader's case ensures students' safety

By Rick López
Staff Writer

A decision made by the U.S. Supreme Court holding schools responsible for sexual harassment between students may have a ripple effect on schools across the country.

The 5-4 ruling Monday opens the door to lawsuits against school boards, but only if officials were deliberately indifferent to sexual harassment so severe and pervasive that it deprived a student of his or her right to an education.

"This is a very high standard," said Catherine Fisk, a law expert at Loyola University in Los Angeles, who has written extensively on sexual harassment. "I don't think it is a big change in what most people thought the law was."

Andra Chamberlin, spokeswoman for the Children's Advocacy Center in Midland, said the ruling reinforces the importance for school districts to create a procedure for investigating sexual harassment complaints.

"It's good to know the schools have to do something about it. It could be devastating if they didn't," Ms. Chamberlin said.

The Supreme Court ruling follows a decision last June that schools could be sued under the anti-bias federal law known as Title IX for a teacher's sexual harassment of a pupil.

Monday's judgment extends that to student-against-student harassment.

The decision stems from a Georgia case in which the mother of a fifth-grade girl named LaShonda Davis claimed that school officials ignored her daughter's repeated complaints about a classmate who had allegedly groped and sexually threatened her.

The high court set a very high standard for holding school officials responsible, saying they had to have direct knowledge of the harassment and failed to act.

Since 1991, Midland Independent School District has followed a strict guideline on how to follow up on harassment complaints.

'Granny D' walks the streets for campaign finance reform

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

She said she hopes that by taking to the road, she'll highlight for the "man in the street" the importance of campaign finance reform.

"Today, a poor man has to sell his soul to a corporation to run for office," said Doris Haddock, 89, better known as 'Granny D', as she waited to throw out the first pitch at Tuesday's Midland RockHounds ball game. "It's getting so that only the rich can run, and that's not what was meant by 'Of the people, for the people.'"

The Dublin, N.H. resident added that "I'm working hard to change that so all young people will be free to run for office. I have 11 great-grandchildren and I want them to grow up in a democracy, not the farce it is today."

To support federal legislation reforming campaign finance, Granny D began walking New Year's Day from Pasadena, Calif. and plans to arrive in Washington, D.C. on January 24, 2000, her 90th birthday. She walks 10 miles daily six days a week. Her route took her through West Texas this week.

Michael Higgins, chairman of the Midland County Democratic Party, said that campaign finance reform "would be a big step in reinvigorating the political process. It's become too infused with money," he said, adding "Anything that helps end apathy, Democrats will support."

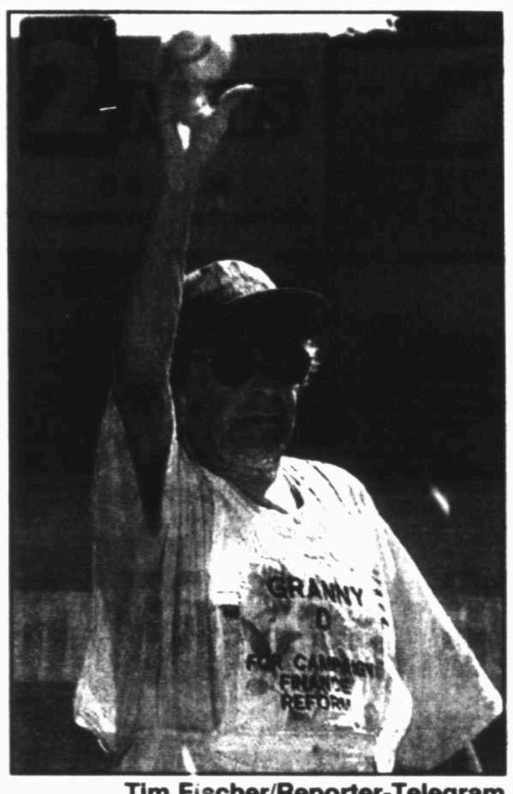
Granny D said the fact that only 35 percent of the nation's eligible voters actually vote shows that "The system has broken down. It's not a Republican problem or Democratic problem. It's no longer a democracy."

State Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, said that state legislators have looked at campaign finance reform and limit the amounts contributors can give and candidates receive.

"At the federal level, they're trying to eliminate 'soft money,' and there's a lot of controversy over that," Craddick said. At the state level, candidates can use 'soft money' but its use is limited to operations and political action committees (PACs) and not for campaign activities.

"It can be used to compile mailing lists or make 'get out the vote' calls but not 'Vote for Tom Craddick' calls," he said.

While there are groups who want to limit the amount of funds candidates can spend on campaigns and contributors can give, "that plays to the incumbent. When you limit the amount you can spend or raise, it benefits the incumbent rather than the challenger."



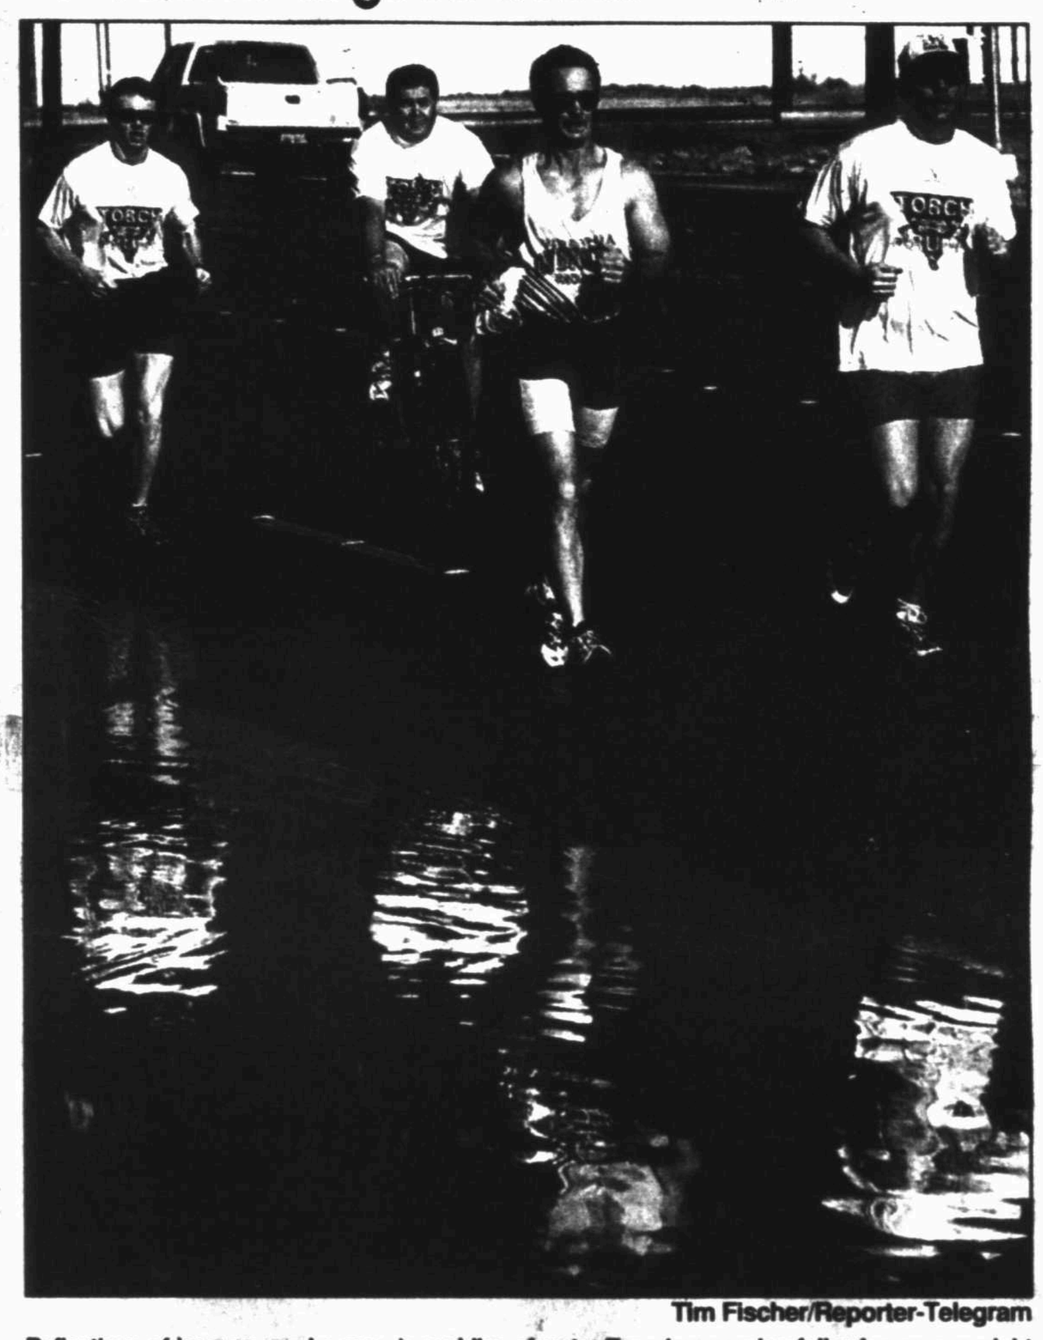
Tim Fischer/Reporter-Telegram
Doris Haddock throws out the first pitch Tuesday afternoon at the RockHounds game. Haddock, known as Granny D, is walking across America to raise awareness for campaign finance reform.

U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith, also a Republican, said that he has supported reform and pointed out that in an earlier Congress, he introduced legislation to limit the amount of money a candidate could take from PACs, requiring that two-thirds of campaign contributions come from individuals.

"In my own case, I raise 80 percent of my funds from individuals, mostly at barbecues I hold for my supporters throughout the 21st District," he said.

Currently the House of Representatives is considering legislation including the Shays-Meehan bill to eliminate soft money, and a Senate bill introduced by Sen. Max Cleland and co-sponsored by Sen. John Kerry to reform the Federal Election Commission and reporting requirements.

Reflections of good deeds



Tim Fischer/Reporter-Telegram
Reflections of joggers can be seen in puddles of water Tuesday morning following an overnight shower that dumped .55 of an inch of rain on Midland. The joggers — members of local law enforcement agencies — were participating in a event to benefit Special Olympics. Officers from Lubbock, Amarillo, Snyder, Midland, and Odessa joined local law enforcement officers from Big Spring to continue their "torch run" in support of the Special Olympic Games in Houston. Lions Club to honor military with ceremony

From Staff Reports

The Midland Downtown Lions Club is to honor the United States military forces in a pre-Memorial Day ceremony at noon today in the club's Activity Center at 200 Plaza St.

The event, which begins at 11:30 a.m., is to feature U.S. Air Force Gen. Richard C. Marr, who is director of the USAF Air Education and Training Command at Randolph Air Force Base near San Antonio.

Memorial Day, formerly called Decoration Day, honors Americans who died in the war-time service of their country and has been celebrated since the American Civil War of the 1860s.

The Sun Country Gentlemen, barbershop chorus, is to sing patriotic music at Wednesday's event.

Dale Brown, the Lions Club's program chairman, said that the celebration is to salute the armed forces' men and women and especially is to honor fallen warriors, including the "heroes who sacrificed much to help build a strong America for the defense of freedom around the world.

"I do not have personal military experience," Brown said. "But (I) feel greatly in the debt of my friends and loved ones who have served on my behalf."

Parched soil receives welcome drink of rain water

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The rains that swept over West Texas plains late Monday night and into Tuesday turned Midland streets into canals, provided a refreshing early-morning outing for runners, walkers, and cyclists, and quenched the dry land ... at least for awhile.

"It's looking pretty promising for more (rainfall)," said National Weather Service meteorologist Jim DeBerry at Midland International Airport. "I'm not complaining (about the rain), and I don't think anybody else is, either."

This week's rain put 0.55 inch of moisture into the NWS rain gauge and, noted DeBerry, brought the year's total rainfall in Midland to 2.48 inches or about 63 percent of the 3.96-inch normal rainfall through late May.

May and September are the heaviest rainfall seasons for Midland.

Midland's annual average moisture by rain, hail, snow, and sleet is 14.96 inches figured over a 30-year-average. The normal precipitation month-by-

TEEN BEAT

Shhh ... Here's the top secret plans for persevering through Finals Week

By Matt Josefy

World War III is erupting right here in our own backyard. It is not the Yugoslavs or even resurrected Germans who present this threat, but the world superpowers of emotion have mounted the largest assault on the teen-age brain ever recorded, with tensions expected to reach a pinnacle sometime Thursday morning.

Josefy

Every school and people of all backgrounds must deal with the threat. Parents, please discuss this problem with your child and be aware of his or her plight.

Apathy vs. concern, intimidation vs. confidence, dread vs. anticipation, fear vs. hope, hate vs. resignation, grief vs. celebration. These are the battles that are being waged in the head as we head into FINALS WEEK!

In two-hour increments, students from junior high to high school take the test that is equivalent to six weeks of work. When the last bell rings Thursday afternoon, the casualties and the survivors will be separated. Even better than the Medal of Honor, the almighty course credit is bestowed upon those who obtain a final average of 69.5 or better.

This is not a test but an emergency for many. Finals week is a challenging mind game that only the few and the proud can successfully conquer. Emotions wrestle back and forth, trying to be king of the hill as each answer is marked. Fortunately, I have swiped instructions, to be utilized in the war of the human mind, that guarantee victory. Shhh! Please don't divulge the following top secret information or I could be convicted of espionage:

When students receive their answer card, they read NAME. That's fairly easy (hopefully). Then, the blanks start to get hard: DATE. I never have understood how teachers can put an X on my paper just because I don't have any dates. It just doesn't seem fair to me. PERIOD. As I draw a small dot in the blank and then make it bigger to make sure the teacher sees it, I wonder why the questions change difficulty level so quickly ...

Skipping down to the problems that actually have a number, the first major battle is that of apathy vs. concern. Many students just don't care. Either they don't understand a subject's relevance or else they don't understand the implications of a good grade. The cannons of school faculty and parents are the weapons to defeat this problem. Parents may give enticing incentives, teachers have the obligation to make a subject interesting, and counselors should highlight the benefits and the costs of high school performance.

Once a student is taught to care, there's the classic struggle of intimidation vs. confidence. Like the Battle of the Bulge, this one can only be won with the machine gun of relentless work and determination. All too many students are severely intimidated by the mere words FINAL EXAM.

While this student may have spent a year learning the information, uncertainty continues to threaten his or her abilities. Thoughts flood the brain, which already faces overload. Torpedoes of distraction are fired from those in nearby seats or events going on outside the window. It becomes a struggle to concentrate instead of trying to calculate the score needed to get a certain semester average. The terrified students wonders if they even recall their birthday correctly. This self-doubt can affect performance drastically and is only conquered through extreme confidence. Confidence can only be created through the laborious process of studying the material until you know it like the back of your hand. When you can do the problems in your sleep, your brain will continue to function properly. Then, go with your first instincts.

Dread and anticipation also have it out within the mind. There is that internal dread for the silent test room, but on the other hand, the anticipation of the looming summer days and trips. Here, targeting the lasers of emotion can result in victory. Looking forward to the summer can be used as inspiration, rather than a distraction, to get tests over with in quality fashion.

Every major emotion, with the exception of love, is involved in this turmoil: balancing hate for a class

JOSEFY: Brain nukes are the only effective weapon in this battle with the resignation that you have to take it anyway; to handling the grief or celebration of one grade when another exam is yet to be taken; to the hope of meeting expectations to the fear of shattering dreams. Final exams wreak havoc on those involved.

There is, however, one reason to appreciate these seemingly meaningless bubbling of answers and painfully written essays. If you can't handle a week of torture that quizzes mere knowledge, how will you be able to overcome a lifetime of choices that measure wisdom? Final exams are 99 percent mental and 1percent physical. It doesn't take much strength to bubble in a correct answer, but it takes mental discipline to focus. The positive connotation of final exams is knowing that if you can jump these hurdles, you will be more prepared for the larger ones down the road.

This week, nuclear bombs will be to no avail. The weapons of the mind are the only things that will win this battle. Once these weapons are part of the arsenal, what interrogation cannot be defeated? May I announce V-Day, Victory Day, over the appalling examinations?

There are two kinds of people in this world: the veterans of mental battle, and those in training. Someone who can control thoughts and emotions is destined for the highest ranks. George Bernard Shaw coined the saying "The test of a man or woman's breeding is how they behave in a quarrel." This week students are quarreling with test answers; every week people everywhere quarrel with jobs, situations, friends and even family. The true test lies in the ability to maintain the mental edge required to beat every strenuous situation, not just those on paper.

One last weapon is the desperation missile of probability: I recommend guessing the letter 'C' on every question.

RAIN: May is the ideal time for moisture for area cotton farmers month is: January, 0.4; February, 0.62; March, 0.58; April, 0.83; May, 1.98; June 1.55; July, 1.70; August, 1.69; September, 2.62; October, 1.74; November, 0.69, and December, 0.56.

For cotton farmers who seek omens for the "planting rains" from late April through early June, May is the ideal time for rain.

"It came right at the right time," said Mike Denny, manager of the Midland Farmers Cooperative. If "we could just get a little more rain," he said, things, meaning the farmland crops and the rangeland, would be much better off.

The spotty rains dropped 1.2 inch of moisture at the co-op cotton gin east of town, 0.70 inch at Denny's rural place south of Midland, and about three inches in parts of the Greenwood community. "But it was pretty spotty.

"It's enough to plant and probably get it up, but it won't have much moisture to stay alive," Denny said of the dryland cotton. "You can plant it and probably get it up, but it won't be enough to keep it up" due to the lack of underground moisture.

And the winds and warm days following rains often "will sap it (moisture) out."

But the rain "picks the spirits up" among the farmers and ranchers. "Anytime it rains, it helps."

While most dryland and irrigated farmers have planted their fields, Denny said that others are "kind of holding off, waiting to see what happens.

"We had a little rain in April when that tornado came through" south of Midland and into the Valley View community. "In places, it got up to four (inches of rain) right in the center of storm, but it ran off," Denny said.

Following the rains, the 'ranchlands ... are going to start getting some green-up," said Jim Word, Texas Agricultural Extension Service agent for Ector County.

"I guess we could call it 'cautious optimism'," Word said. "Our range forage resources, due to several years of drought, is way, way below normal. As we do get rains, it is going to be interesting to see if this forage base is at such a point we can get some fairly quick recovery. It is going to be a wait-and-see thing."

Martin County farmer-ginner Michael "Mike" Mitchell of Lenorah said that rainfall in the community ranged from half an inch to just under three inches.

"We are still very, very dry," he said. "This rain was encouraging. It will take a lot more than this" to make a crop. "We will need a rain like this probably about every other week throughout the summer to sustain a crop because we don't have a good underground supply of moisture — any preseason rain. Every place I've heard of or visited, it seems like everybody is about in the same boat."

In the Lenorah area, most cotton is "pretty much" dryland.

"There are some people who already have planted. Some people were debating whether to get started just yet" until they got good planting rains.

Mitchell, who farms with his father, Myrl Mitchell, said, "We had just started last week. We had to dry plant what we had planted."

Fate of radioactive waste bill up in air

By Richard Acosta
Staff Writer

Determining if the radioactive waste bill be on the governor's desk or in a trash can may be decided by a single vote.

The bill has already been passed by the Texas Senate and will be soon brought up on the House floor for a concurrence vote. If the House votes to concur, the bill goes to the governor's office. If the House votes not to concur, the bill will go to a concurrence committee.

If the bill is sent to concurrence committee, five representatives from the House and five from the Senate will debate on the bill. However, the House representatives will have the deciding vote on the issue.

If the committee votes to concur then the bill will go to the governor's desk. If not the bill could die in committee. As of Tuesday night four of the five House representatives had been chosen.

- Warren Chisum R-Pampa
- Edmund Kuempel R-Seguin
- Gary Walker D-Plains
- Zeb Zbranek D-Liberty

Reports from Chisum's office say that he will kill the bill unless he can get Department of Energy Waste and private ownership taken off the bill.

Zbranek is believed to agree with Chisum on being against the bill, while Walker and Kuempel are for the bill. The fifth person on the committee could be the deciding factor on whether the bill makes it to the Gov. George W. Bush's desk or not.

As of press time Tuesday night, the bill had still not be brought up on the floor.

RAIDS: Department says ruling reinforces trend

(From 1B)

er courts have disagreed with police taking the news media with them.

Hardly new, such ride-alongs have been given higher visibility in recent years by true-life television programs focusing on police work.

"I've always wondered how they do that on 'COPS,'" said David Bradshaw, commander of the West Texas Narcotics Task Force.

The Supreme Court's decision will not likely affect how the task force handles it's media policy, Bradshaw said. Just two weeks ago, the task force brought the local press along to a drug round-up in Fort Stockton.

"What we've always done is talk to the media and asked them to stay by the curb line," Bradshaw said. "I never had a problem with journalists. We don't take them with us in our cars. We just tell them where we're going."

Jerry Vazquez, news director at KMID, said he understands why authorities set boundaries for journalists. He agrees with the court's ruling.

The court's restriction "refers to these programs like 'COPS', where police are looking for suspects, but they aren't always inside the house," Vazquez said. "But where there's a sidewalk, we have a right to be there. People want to know what's happening in their neighborhood, and we have a right to report on that."

Police, media cooperation

Penny Parrish, spokeswoman for the Minneapolis Police Department, said the ruling "may dampen officers' desire to take media with them."

This is one more thing on the side of 'is it worth it?'" Ms. Parrish said.

Another metropolitan department said the ruling reinforces a trend.

In March, the Los Angeles Police Department reaffirmed guidelines barring TV crews from entering private property without an owner's permission.

"When it comes to weighing ride-along requests, a news program would get priority over a reality show like 'COPS,'" said LAPD Lt. Anthony Alba. "We're satisfied with the court's ruling. We're already engaged in a media ride-along policy that mirrors their ruling."

Representatives of news organizations — like the Associated Press, Washington Post and CNN — cited several reasons for inviting the press to raids, like:

- publicizing government efforts to fight crime,
- helping ensure accurate reporting on law enforcement activities and
- minimizing police abuses.

Rehnquist said those reasons "fall short of justifying the presence of media inside a home."

"When you're a journalist, it's not a God-given right to go anywhere you want," said Gayle Hill, news director at KWES.

By the same token, Ms. Hill remembers a time when there was a legitimate reason for TV crews to be inside crime scenes.

"Before, the officers used to ask (and) permit us to go in and videotape the scene, because they didn't have access to the equipment themselves," Ms. Hill said.

But now that police have their own resources, TV stations should have less involvement in raids, she said.

"As far as going to someone's house, no, we don't belong in somebody's house," Ms. Hill said. "Do we belong on the street filming someone's house? Yes, it's in public view and we have public access."

The benefit of inviting the press to raids is that they give the public a chance to see police work in progress, Bradshaw said.

We don't have anything to hide from the media. It's good public relations," he said. "They give the public an inside view that assures them we're doing more than just riding in our cars."

Media, police won't change policies

The Midland Police Department will continue to grant media requests on a case-by-case basis, Ms. Jauz said.

She said the department has always provided arrest information to the media, but has never allowed them to set foot in a crime scene, private property or residence.

"I think the media will go (to raids) if you invite them or not. They're going to hear all the activity on the scanner. Why not be there, be prepared and have their cooperation?" Ms. Jauz said.

Once a year, the MPD and other agencies invite the media to "drug round-ups" — an operation in which authorities go house-to-house executing warrants on unsuspecting defendants.

In the past, family members who were inadvertently captured on video have complained that they were associated with criminals.

"People have said, 'I don't like you showing my family or house on the news?' I say we're sorry, but we can't keep the media from doing their job," Ms. Jauz said. "They have the right to be there, and all the information they have is public record."

For some stations, simple things, like filming a crime scene from plain view, has drawn some criticism from viewers — even though the station took every possible measure to be non-intrusive.

"We had one recent call from an educator who didn't want us filming children at a school," Ms. Hill said. "We explained that we need pictures to tell stories, but we don't need to be obtrusive. We filmed only hands and feet, not faces."

Rehnquist said media ride-alongs have become common police practice by 1992, but that there were no judicial rulings holding it unlawful when they enter a home.

He said the U.S. Marshals Service at the time allowed ride-alongs, but that policy was later overturned by the U.S. Department of Justice.

Justice John Paul Stevens dissented from that part of the ruling. He said a homeowner's "right to protection against this type of trespass was clearly established long before April 16, 1992," and that the conduct of the officers should not be shielded from liability.

John Langley, the executive producer of "COPS," said he expects his camera crews to conduct "business as usual" since the show already tries to respect privacy rights.

"COPS" producers "routinely obtains permission when filming on private property and also obtains releases from everyone involved in the program," he said.

Associated Press TV writer Lynn Elber contributed to this story.

SAFETY: MISD follows strict guidelines

(From 1B)

vices, said all student-against-student complaints — whether they're based on verbal, physical or sexual misconduct — are channeled to Superintendent Joseph Baressi within 24 hours.

Baressi then assigns two investigators to the case, usually Kelly and another director from administration building. On average, they have up to seven days to take statements and gather evidence to either support or disprove the allegations.

If the complaint is substantiated, the student can be punished with a few days in an Alternative Education Program and even expulsion — depending on the severity of the case.

"Both kids have rights. You can't pull another kid's rights just because he has a complaint filed against him," Kelly said.

Students are separated during the investigation only if the charges are drastic, Kelly said.

Some education officials said Monday's ruling is a narrower definition than Education Department guidelines issued in 1997. Under the guidelines, officials have a responsibility even if they had no knowledge of sexual harassment, but should have known.

"The court was quite clear that it has to be pretty egregious to be liable for damages. Basically, you knew about it and didn't do anything at all," said Stephen Yurek, general counsel for the National Association of Secondary School Principals.

Baressi agreed that the Supreme Court ruling, as is, has little impact on school districts that already have a solid policy.

"Our sexual harassment policy is published in our handbooks. Obviously, it makes us liable only if we can be found guilty of gross indifference," Baressi said.

Paul Houston, executive director of the American Association of School Administrators, which opposed the high court decision, said he worried the case could raise schools' legal costs and prompt officials to overreact to student misconduct.

"I'm afraid that people may come down overly hard on kids for things that aren't actually sexual harassment," he said.

But Ms. Chamberlin said that children's safety should be not be sacrificed by educators who think a student's "over-reacting" to a situation.

"It's not frivolous for kids to complain about a classmate touching them," Ms. Chamberlin said. "People have the idea that boys will be boys, but some boys grow up to be rapists."

Associated Press writer Paul Haven contributed to this report.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll have: 5-Dymanic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Wednesday, May 26, 1999: Popularity remains high. Children and/or romantic interests could become more demanding. Establish limits with friends and loved ones. You give off an air of being most capable; yet at the same time, you're aware of your limits. Focus on your goals, take the most direct route to success and you'll make it happen. If you are single, romance happens easily. However, you might need to pick and choose between several suitors. If attached, you'll experience many passionate moments. Excitement surrounds a new addition, be it a pet, a child or a grandchild. Libra knows how to make you smile.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★★ Meet requests and demands with calm efficiency. You could feel pressured by others — or delighted by your popularity. Count on someone to express his opinions loud and clear. Ignore anyone who attempts to make you the target of his anger. Tonight: Join a partner.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ Work demands are overwhelming. You have the energy to handle whatever happens, so don't worry. You get a lot done very quickly. Precision marks your interactions. Another might not see a situation as you do. Tonight: Set a pace you can be comfortable with.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ Juggle work, play, friendship and love. You have your hands full as another makes strong demands. Listen to a friend. Make time for a meeting. Never lose focus on what you want. High energy allows you to cruise through the tension. Tonight: Kick up your heels and play.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Handle domestic issues early. Otherwise, you could find yourself in a most disagreeable situation. Bosses demand a lot from you. Ultimately, you handle everything, though you feel extraordinarily pressured. Tonight: You need some fun!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★★ Reach out for others; return calls. Take a necessary risk. You might feel the need to express yourself in a harsh manner, but your opinions are valued. Unusual information could land in your lap. Pressure mounts; be efficient and organized. Tonight: Out and about.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Initiate a money discussion. You could be delighted by how much another offers. Think about a loved one and how he will ultimately fit into your plans for the future. Consider your expectations. Accent security and building a strong foundation. Tonight: House hunt.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★★ You could be more gruff than usual. Be willing to express your feelings. You are in the middle of a social whirl. Don't get carried away! Establish boundaries. Honor previous demands, including work! Your high energy gives you that extra edge. Tonight: Indulge.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ Others both irritate and pressure you. Anger could get out of control at work and with co-workers. Knowing when enough is enough is critical; you could easily overwhelm another! Don't be surprised if you have to do more than your share. Tonight: Nap, then decide.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★★ Get together with others. Be sure about what you want. Don't allow another to push you beyond your limits. You might agree to something you will regret later. Your social skills help you juggle another's demands. Clarify your expectations of a child or of a developing relationship. Tonight: Where the gang is.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Others make demands. The real question is how you handle the pressure. You might want to blow off some steam and give another a piece of your mind. Think before you do anything. You are on overload but are capable of handling it all. Tonight: Work, then do whatever you want.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★★ Refuse to settle for less than perfection. Follow a great idea. Seek answers from unusual sources. You might need to screen calls or postpone a meeting to accomplish everything you plan to accomplish. Everyone wants you at once! Tonight: Write to an older relative.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ A partner creates an uproar, especially over a money arrangement. You have enough pressure to contend with already! Revamping a schedule is critical. Maintain a high profile; know what you want. Tonight: Where the music is.

Opening lead: Six of ♣ Toronto's Sami Kehela is generally regarded as one of the world's great technicians. Watch him at work on this deal from a team match.

Since North-South were playing forcing one-no-trump responses, South could have been very weak.

No matter. North's raise to two no trump did full justice to the hand, and South had more than enough to proceed to game.

The six of clubs was covered with the seven and 10 and won with the queen.

That gave declarer an eighth trick and a problem.

It seemed that South would have to establish a diamond for the game-going trick, but the moment declarer surrendered a trick, the defenders could probably cash enough club tricks to set the contract.

At times like this declarer can put pressure on the defenders by cashing out a long suit, so Kehela started running spades, discarding a heart and two diamonds from hand.

West could not afford to let go a heart, and pitching a club would have limited the defenders to four tricks, so West was forced to part with three diamonds.

Reading the position perfectly, Kehela wrapped things up quickly.

The ace of hearts was cashed, after which the eight of clubs was led. West cashed four club tricks, on which declarer discarded all the diamonds from both the closed hand and dummy. At trick 12 West had to lead away from the queen of hearts into declarer's combined king-jack tenace for the fulfilling trick.

Gates' wife gives birth to 2nd child

SEATTLE — Multi-billionaire Bill Gates has a new tax deduction.

Melinda Gates, wife of the Microsoft chief, gave birth Sunday to their second child, Rory John Gates. He weighed in at 8 pounds, 12 ounces.

They're "thrilled to be parents again," Microsoft spokesman Dan Leach said Monday. The Gateses have a 3-year-old daughter.

Gates was by his wife's side for the birth and planned to take a few days off.

MISSOULA, Mont. — Ted Turner says he won't be running for president because wife Jane Fonda won't let him.

"I thought about it a number of times," Turner said Monday at the University of Montana. "But my wife, who was married to a politician before, said she would leave me."

Fonda was married to Tom Hayden, a '60s radical and state senator in California.

Turner's not sure he's up for the White House anyway.

"I'm only 60 but I've got a lot of mileage," he said. "It takes a lot of energy for that job and I don't have it."

LONDON — Prince William is the new co-captain of the Eton swim team.

Starting in September, his final year at the prep school, William will help select team members, train younger boys, oversee the keeping of records and greet visiting teams, the royal family said Tuesday.

The post was awarded in recognition of the 16-year-old's swimming prowess, the palace said.

The prince's swimming trunks are said to read W.O.W, for William of Wales.

CHICAGO — Sammy Sosa's looking to serve up food instead of home runs with his own restaurant.

The Cubs home run king said Monday he is working with the operators of Michael Jordan's Restaurant to start up a Sosa eatery that would open in September or October and serve Spanish and American food.

It's the second food venture on Sosa's plate. His Slammin' Sammy Cereal is coming out soon.

TOKYO — A recording company said Tuesday it has canceled plans to market a CD featuring the favorite music of Empress Michiko.

Toshiba-EMI Ltd. said its stock of recordings differed from some of the original artists' works favored by the empress.

The CD was to go on sale Wednesday. It was to have been a collection of mostly classical works, some of which the empress listened to while recovering from a loss of speech ailment.

The imperial household had no comment.

LOS ANGELES — Gwyneth Paltrow's Harry Winston jewels and Jerry Seinfeld's Porsche 911 made it onto a luxury lifestyle magazine's "Best of the Best" list for 1999.

Callaway golf clubs, preferred by President Clinton, were also included on the 11th annual list in the Robb Report's June issue.

"It is inevitable that celebrities and world leaders are buying and using the luxury items that our readers chose as the best for 1999. What good is working hard if you can't enjoy the best there is?" publisher Dan Phillips said Tuesday.

Readers of the monthly magazine chose items in more than 170 categories, including clothing, accessories, vehicles and wine.

The Yamaha YZF-R1 sport motorcycle, driven by Lyle Lovett, was on the list. So were Giorgio Armani suits worn by Martin Scorsese and Michael Caine, Luigi Borelli shirts preferred by Rupert Murdoch and Patek Philippe wristwatches worn by Nicolas Cage.

Christians spread message on streets of Big Spring

By T.E. Jenkins
Big Spring Correspondent

BIG SPRING — Dancing in the streets?

That's exactly what more than 1,000 Big Spring area residents did last weekend as the annual March for Jesus made its 20-block tour to promote the non-denominational message of Christ.

Accompanied by flag bearers, banners, Christian music, and cotton candy, participants of the march took to the streets of downtown Big Spring in true West Texas fashion, spreading their message of peace and love.

Project coordinator Jack Nixson said the day's events were aimed at promoting the importance of having Jesus in people's lives, as well as several other worthy projects going on within the city's church community.

"We are already talking about next year's march," said Nixson. "We want to make next year's event a day-long celebration, and there is a lot of work that will have to go into the project between now and then.

"I'm in charge of organizing the marching aspect of next year's celebration for Christ, but I need as much help getting the other parts together as I can get, so we are definitely looking for volunteers."

The crowd could be heard al over downtown Big Spring, as Nixson shouted "Who are we here for?" and the crowd replied "Jesus" in a resonating chorus that filled the streets.

Also on hand for the celebration was Big Spring City Mayor Tim Blackshear, who took the stage following the 20-block march that ended where it began, on the east lawn of the Howard County Courthouse.

Blackshear offered his prayers for the city during these trying economical times, as well as the people and leaders of America.

Blackshear was followed by several local figures, who offered their prayers as well, citing events in Littleton, Colo., and most recently the shootings that took place in a Georgia school.

The Big Spring Children's Worship Team performed their rendition of "Amazing Grace" for the crowds as well, giving the song a new twist by performing it in American Sign Language (ASL). The Big Spring High School Flag Corps. performed shortly after, twirling their flags to a bagpipe version of "Amazing Grace" as well.

"It kind of makes a chill go up your spine," commented one onlooker.

As if that were not enough, the march even came complete with its own set of mimes, acting out a tale of returning to God and His ways.

"We just want to get the message out," said publicity coordinator Ron Alton. "It's important that people remember what's important in their lives, and this is just our way of giving them a little reminder."

Special Olympics benefits from run held by officers

By T.E. Jenkins
Staff Writer

Law enforcement officers from all over West Texas converged on Big Spring Tuesday afternoon, but not for any kind of bust or raid.

Officers from Lubbock, Amarillo, Snyder, Midland, and Odessa joined local law enforcement officers from Big Spring to continue their "torch run" in support of the Special Olympic Games in Houston.

Leading the Big Spring leg of the relay torch run was Big Spring Police Department Det. Lupe Lidiecke, who said she is looking forward to the foot-fall journey south.

"We are really excited about the whole thing," Lidiecke said. "We have officers here from all over the West Texas area, and we are all here for one cause."

Lidiecke said the group planned to stop in San Angelo Tuesday evening, and expects to continue to journey this morning.

"It's going to be a really long road just to get to San Angelo today (Tuesday), but I think we are ready for the challenge," Lidiecke said. "Everyone here is just fired up about the whole thing."

Javier Becerra, one of the event's coordinators, said they have a very special reason they do this each year, and the reason is a very special cause.

"Special Olympians aren't just kids," Becerra said. "They are adults just like you and me, as well as school kids. They work really hard all year long getting ready for the special olympics, and this is really the least we can do to make this a special time for them."

Becerra said having worked with mentally and physically challenged people in the Special Olympics program, the experience has given him a new outlook on handicapped people.

"They can really be great people," said Becerra. "You have to get to know them, though. Getting to know them personally is a lot different from just seeing them in Wal-Mart, or on the street. They have a very special personality, their own way of doing things, and that just makes them more special."

Customs Officer shot in head while sitting in his car

HOUSTON (AP) — An off-duty U.S. Customs officer was shot in the head while sitting in his car early Tuesday, police said.

Louis Hall was listed in serious condition at Ben Taub Hospital.

Investigators said Hall managed to call his wife after he was wounded. Police located him at 2:24 a.m.

Hall said a woman shot him after he stopped to talk with someone in a northeast Houston neighborhood. His family said the shooting had nothing to do with his job.

Sources: Starr notifies judges he won't retry McDougal, Steele

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bowing to legal setbacks, Kenneth Starr won't retry Whitewater figure Susan McDougal and another woman accused of hindering his investigation, The Associated Press has learned. Both cases ended in mistrials this spring.

Starr on Tuesday informed the federal judges who oversaw the cases of Mrs. McDougal in Little Rock, Ark., and Julie Hiatt Steele in Virginia, according to legal sources familiar with his decision.

The independent counsel's move came after juries handed him consecutive setbacks in his effort to punish witnesses he contended were uncooperative or gave false testimony that delayed his investigation. Jurors deadlocked in both cases.

Mrs. McDougal's brother, a fierce critic of Starr, praised the decision.

"I don't believe he would have gotten a conviction and he would only have put my family through the misery of a retrial," William Henley said in a telephone interview. "I think he did the right thing."

Attorney Nancy Luque, who represented Ms. Steele, wasn't immediately available for comment, her office said Tuesday.

Starr still has two more trials involving another witness he has accused of being uncooperative, presidential friend and former Justice Department official Webster Hubbell.

Hubbell, who has already served prison time on charges brought by Starr, faces separate indictments alleging tax evasion and false testimony. The first of those trials is set to begin in August.

But the decisions in the McDougal and Steele cases suggest that, in the aftermath of President Clinton's impeachment, Starr may be closer to winding down his five-year, $40 million-plus investigation.

Three of Starr's key deputies during the height of the investigation left his office to join private law firms this spring.

Starr had accused Mrs. McDougal, a former business partner of the president and first lady, of obstructing his investigation and defying a federal judge's order by refusing to testify before the grand jury that probed the Clintons' Arkansas business dealings.

A jury in April acquitted Mrs. McDougal of the obstruction charge and deadlocked on the two contempt of court charges.

Starr's office charged Ms. Steele, of Richmond, Va., with lying to federal investigators in testimony that undercut the claims of presidential accuser Kathleen Willey.

Mrs. Willey alleged Clinton made an unwanted sexual advance inside the White House in 1993 and that she told Ms. Steele immediately about the episode. Ms. Steele testified that Mrs. Willey had not told her about the incident and later asked her to lie about it.

Though Starr provided testimony from friends that Ms. Steele had indeed told them about Mrs. Willey's allegation shortly after the alleged incident occurred, a jury in northern Virginia deadlocked on the charges.

Mistrials were declared in both cases, giving Starr the option to pursue the charges again.

In both cases, defense lawyers made an issue of the tactics used by Starr's office in pursuing a wide-ranging investigation that included the Clintons' Whitewater business dealings, the gathering of FBI files inside the White House the firing of the White House travel office and the Monica Lewinsky affair.

Mrs. McDougal, who served prison time on Whitewater-related charges earlier in the investigation, testified in her own defense. She said she refused to talk to the grand jury because she feared that Starr would punish her if she did not give testimony that matched his theory of the case.

Ms. Steele's lawyers criticized Starr repeatedly but surprised many by resting their case without calling any witnesses.

In recent interviews with the AP, jurors in both cases described widely varying views of Starr's work.

Donald Thomas, the jury foreman in the McDougal case, said that he was put off by the "arrogance" of Starr's prosecutors and that some jurors were convinced that Mrs. McDougal's fears about testifying were justified.

But Jack Hawxhurst, the jury foreman in the Steele case, said the evidence that Ms. Steele lied was "very persuasive" and he believed Starr should seek a retrial.

China spying serious, continuous, House panel says

WASHINGTON (AP) — China has stolen secret information about every nuclear weapon in the U.S. arsenal in a spying campaign that almost surely continues "to this very day," the chairman of a congressional investigation said Tuesday. His panel's report cataloged 20 years of Chinese espionage.

Though the most critical thefts were said to have occurred in previous administrations, the findings by a bipartisan special House committee brought demands by some Republican lawmakers for the resignation of President Clinton's national security adviser and attorney general. There also were renewed questions about why Clinton did not move earlier to boost security at federal weapons labs.

Clinton said his administration was already "moving aggressively to tighten security" at nuclear laboratories and would work with Congress to follow the recommendations of the committee. But he also said the administration would continue dealing with China on a range of matters because that, too, was in the national interest.

While defending the president's response, Rep. Norman Dicks of Washington, the panel's ranking Democrat, said that Chinese penetration of nuclear weapons laboratories was "a major counterintelligence failure ... one of the worst failures in the nation's history."

The three-volume report, covering more than 700 pages, concluded that by stealing nuclear secrets China had "leaped in a handful of years from 1950s-era strategic nuclear capabilities" to a position where its weapon designs soon will be "on par with our own."

Dicks and another committee member, Rep. John Spratt, D-S.C., characterized that conclusion as an overstatement based on "worst case" assumptions. They said China has yet to deploy any warhead from information believed to have been obtained in the 1980s, and that the Chinese have only a few nuclear weapons compared to the thousands in the U.S. arsenal.

China denied the allegations entirely, dismissing them as a "despicable attempt" to shift attention from the NATO bombing of the Chinese Embassy in Yugoslavia.

Rep. Christopher Cox, R-Calif., whose committee of five Republicans and four Democrats began investigating China's acquisition of U.S. technology last July and by fall turned its focus to espionage, said the findings in Tuesday's unclassified report were based on facts set out in a longer classified version.

"Our committee did not engage in surmising, did not engage in opinion," Cox told a news conference.

Energy Secretary Bill Richardson, who in recent months has moved to boost security at the weapons research labs, called the panel's document "a good solid report" but also challenged its conclusions in regard to China's ability to use the stolen technology.

"China is not up to par with the United States on nuclear development. It is far behind us," said Richardson in an interview. "There is no evidence that is changing."

But even Democrats expressed concern.

"I'm baffled at how this investigation has been handled," Spratt said, referring to a case, still being investigated by the FBI, of the loss of design material from one of the country's most sophisticated warheads, the W-88, from the Los Alamos weapons lab in New Mexico.

While that information was believed obtained by China in the 1980s, the theft was not discovered until 1995 and then its impact was only slowly recognized, the congressional report said.

Stars deliver message to Avalanche

■ Stars' desperate play Monday squared series with Colorado which sends a message that it could be a long, tough series.

By John Mossman
AP Sports Writer

DENVER — Playing with desperation and a street-fighter mentality, the Dallas Stars delivered a message to the Colorado Avalanche: This will be a long, tough playoff series.

The Stars squared the Western Conference final with Monday night's 4-2 victory in Dallas. The best-of-7 series shifts to Denver for Games 3 and 4 on Wednesday and Friday.

"They were a desperate team and they had to be," Avalanche forward Theo Fleury said, referring to the Stars losing Game 1 at home. "They threw everything at us in the third period."

"The bottom line is, this is the semifinals," Dallas center Guy Carbonneau said Tuesday. "You play each shift as if it were your last."

Joe Nieuwendyk and Mike Modano scored in the Stars' dominating third period, when they outshot Colorado 15-1. For the game, Dallas outshot Colorado 45-19.

"We finally found some seams and cracks through the defense to get to the net," Modano said. "The second and third shots were finally there."

Stars coach Ken Hitchcock said his team's more aggressive approach on Monday night was by design.

"I think for us to play well, we have to press the pace," he said. "It doesn't matter who we're playing. We've played two pretty good hockey games. Unfortunately, we lost the first one. I thought the difference was we played with desperation, knowing our status. We took some chances and we didn't get hurt by it.

"When you're playing a team as good and as skilled as Colorado, you can take one of two attitudes — either stand back and wait and hope that's going to work out, or press the issue. Obviously, by the way we played, we've made the decision to press the issue."

Instead of a suffocating defensive game, Modano felt as if he had been turned loose Monday night. That observation drew a chuckle from Hitchcock.

"He might think he's been turned loose, but he's not," Hitchcock said. "This is just a different series. There just is no play in the neutral zone. It's in one end or the other. The games are very similar to the way we play against Phoenix.

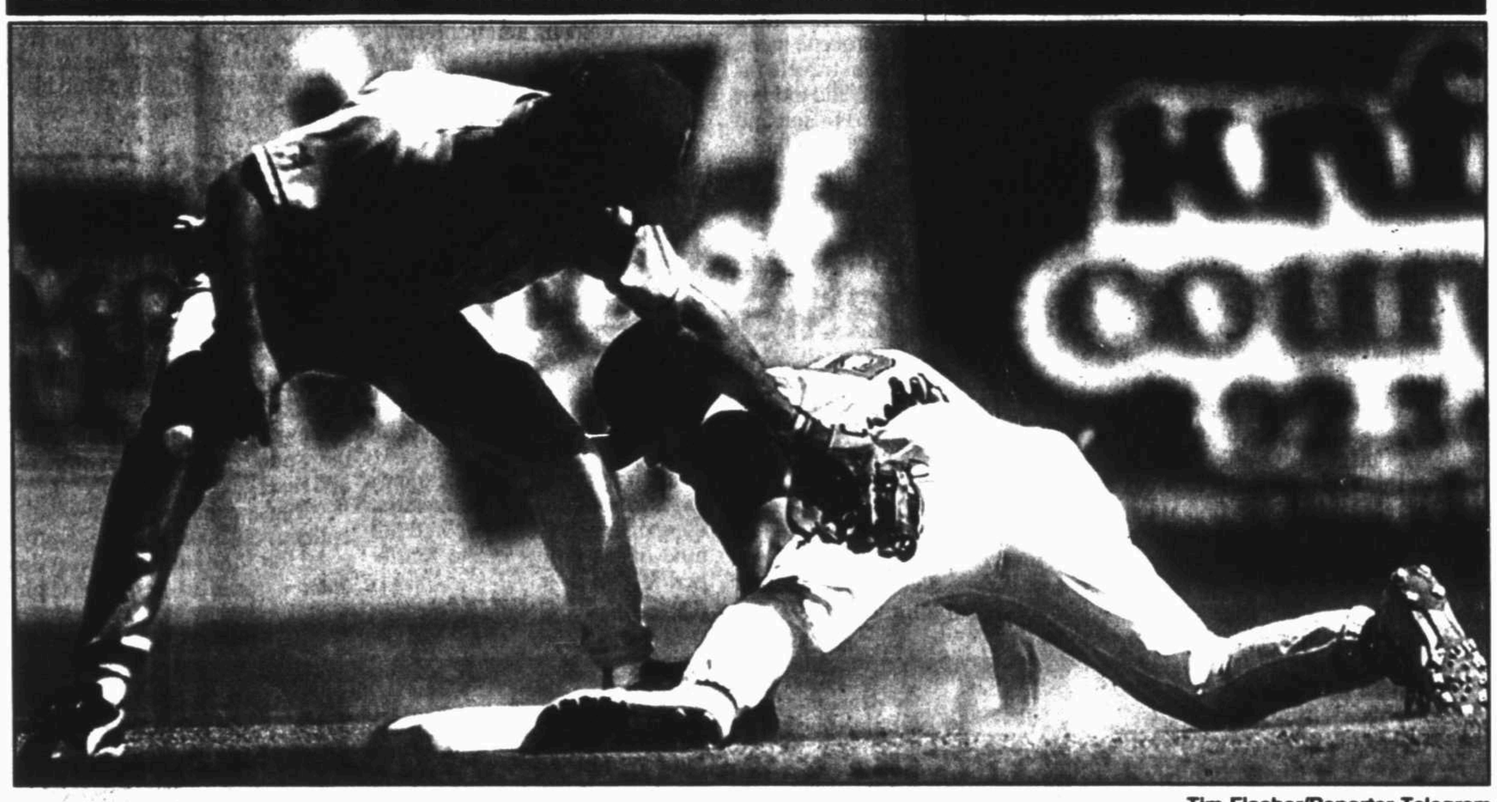
ROCKHOUNDS' DAYLIGHT SPECIAL



Tim Fischer/Reporter-Telegram
Midland RockHounds' Josue Espada slides and beats the throw to second base on a steal as Tulsa's second basemanTom Sergio puts the late tag Tuesday afternoon at Christensen Stadium. Midland won the game 8-4 to take the series 3-2 from the Drillers.

'Hounds serve homers for lunch

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Some of the Midland RockHounds didn't even know there was an 11 a.m. on a regular day clock, but the unusual starting time for a Texas League game posed no problems for the reflexes Tuesday.

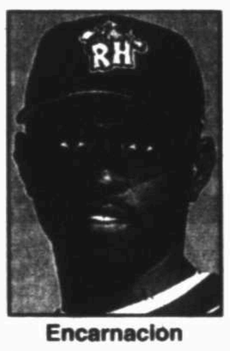
Mario Encarnacion hit two home runs and T.R. Marcinczyk belted another Tuesday MORNING blast at Christensen Stadium, driving in six runs between them to beat the Tulsa Drillers 8-4.

Day games are as rare as hot dogs for breakfast in the Texas League, but this one was played for the D.A.R.E. Graduation ceremonies before 4,187 elementary students.

And as games go in the TL, this was a big one for the 'Hounds, considering that the win gives Midland a 5-5 season split with Tulsa. The two teams do not meet again.

It was also a big win when you consider that Tulsa's Cory Lee was on the mound. Lee, the Texas Rangers' No. 1 pick (32nd overall) in the 1996 draft, was a perfect 4-0 on the year.

It made little difference to Encarnacion and Marcinczyk, who each took Lee deep to provide the margin of victory.



Encarnacion

"We went into this game knowing that Tulsa has a good pitching staff and we knew that Lee would throw strikes," Encarnacion said. "You just have to be patient, just like I did today. (On the second homer) he (Lee) hung a change, made a mistake, and I got it. That's the way baseball is sometimes."

Encarnacion hit an opposite field solo shot off of Lee in the second to stake Midland to a 1-0 lead, one the RockHounds never surrendered.

Marcinczyk highlighted a four-run third with a three-run shot for his eighth homer of the year and Encarnacion followed a leadoff triple by Jeff DaVanon for a two-run thump, his ninth of the season, in the sixth.

"Almost every year I've hit two homers in a game, but this is the first time for me to do that this year," Encarnacion said.

With two runners on in the third, Marcinczyk wasn't trying to clear the Rock Yard. He just wanted to make contact.

"Actually, I was shortening up with my two-strike approach," Marcinczyk said. "I just wanted to get the ball in play and try to get at least a run home."

Marcinczyk is one of the 'Hounds who doesn't particularly like day games.

"I don't like playing in the afternoon. I really don't know why, but I'd rather play at night," Marcinczyk said before adding, "but I'll take the three RBIs any time of day."

Tulsa's Mike Lamb, who was a triple away from hitting for the cycle, hit a two-run homer

Spurs reserves ready for next playoff round

By Kelley Shannon
AP Sports Writer

SAN ANTONIO — Jaren Jackson, Malik Rose and their buddies on the Spurs bench have played a quiet but important role in San Antonio's success all season.

In the playoffs, the reserves are shining almost as brightly as the Spurs' big stars.

"We're all coming off the bench trying to help this team get as many wins as possible," Rose said. "We really take pride in coming in and changing the flow of the game."

As the Spurs waited Tuesday to find out whether they'll face Portland or Utah in the Western Conference finals, several Spurs reserves took part in an optional workout at the Alamodome.

"Just keep a sweat going every day, try to stay loose and fit and be ready to focus on the next game, whenever it comes," said Jackson who scored a career playoff-high 22 points on Saturday in the Spurs' Game 3 victory over the Lakers.

Jackson followed with 20 points on Sunday as the Spurs swept the best-of-7 series 4-0.

Jackson, a guard who began the season as a starter, was replaced in that role by Mario Elie several games into the season. Jackson's performance as a reserve blossomed as the playoffs arrived.

Though he'd been a little stiff early in the Lakers series, Jackson said he got some rest and felt good entering the final two games.

"I just let my game come to me. I was a little bit more aggressive," he said. "I just wanted to make sure I did my share coming off the bench."

Rose was one of several San Antonio players assigned to guard Shaquille O'Neal during the series. Rose also scored 13 points and had five rebounds in Game 2 and scored eight points in Game 4.

"You guys are just noticing it," Rose told reporters. "But for the entire season the bench has been playing well."

On any given night, Rose said, he, Jackson, Jerome Kersey or another reserve comes through with a strong game.

Spurs center David Robinson has said that with some teams, bench players can only be expected to hold their own until the starters return. With the San Antonio reserves on the court, a run can get going and the defensive intensity remains high.

In the first game of the Lakers series, the San Antonio reserves outscored the Los Angeles reserves 17-2. Will Perdue came off the bench to grab nine rebounds, more than any other Spurs player.

Sampras wobbles to five-set win at French

By Steve Wilstein
AP Tennis Writer

PARIS — For 4 hours and 18 minutes, Pete Sampras played as if he were trapped in a movie montage of his ugliest and longest matches.

He muttered and sputtered, letting his mind drift back to the way he survived so many other brutal five setters. Matches when he was sick and cramped and barely able to stand, his racquet serving as a crutch between points.

Then he won once again, shuffling away caked in red clay.

"It's 'Welcome to Paris,' I guess," Sampras said after taking his first-round match Tuesday against Juan Antonio Marin 6-7 (5-7), 6-4, 7-5, 7-6 (11-9), 6-4 at the French Open.

"How did I survive it? Grace of God, I guess," he said.

Sampras did everything he could to blow this match, including double-faulting on match point in the fourth-set tiebreaker, but then he did everything he could to win it on wobbly legs in the fifth.

"It was just pure will, just hanging in there and fighting hard," he said. "I wasn't going to stop, by any means. When it's in the fifth set, it comes down to heart and how much you want it."

Sampras wants to win his first French Open in the worst way, and that's just how he started out. He was determined to play true to his own attacking style, but he found himself becoming tentative against the clay-loving Marin, and too often got caught in the no-man's land between the baseline and the net.

Marin, a 5-foot-9 Costa Rican who had lost all seven of his previous Grand Slam matches and was ranked No. 92, displayed a knack for keeping the ball in play and frustrating Sampras. Never did that come in handier than when Sampras held the first of his two match points at 8-7 in the fourth-set tiebreaker.

Sampras drove a forehand crosscourt into the corner that looked like a solid winner to everyone except Marin.

"Pete thought I was not going to get to that ball," Marin said. "All the crowd also, because they shouted like the match was over. I got to that ball, and I run to the other side because I know I have to."

Surprised as Sampras was, he whacked another shot the other way, only to see Marin track that down, too, with what he called, with no exaggeration, "an unbelievable backhand" down the line that Sampras couldn't touch. Instead, Sampras lunged and tumbled to the court, lay sprawled for a long moment, then sat up with the back of his white shirt, shorts and socks covered in red.

Marin raised his hands in triumph

Jazz stay alive vs. TrailBlazers

By Greg Beacham
AP Sports Writer

SALT LAKE CITY — Early on, Portland's Brian Grant was whacked again by one of Karl Malone's infamous elbows.

Toward the end, Trail Blazers coach Mike Dunleavy blew his stack and got himself ejected.

While the Utah Jazz played like their playoff lives depended on it, the Portland Trail Blazers lost their composure — and Game 5 — Tuesday night.

Malone had 23 points and Bryon Russell added 22 as Utah avoided elimination by beating Portland 88-71. The victory cut Portland's second-round series lead to 3-2 and forced Game 6 Thursday night at the Rose Garden.

The game featured numerous testy exchanges between players from both teams, which was no surprise after Malone bloodied Grant with an elbow in the first quarter. Malone had already been fined $10,000 by the NBA for elbowing Grant in Game 1 of the series.

"It was a very physical game, and we answered that tonight," Utah's Jeff Hornacek said. "We were also hitting our shots for a change, so that was a winning combination."

The Jazz are hoping to become the seventh team in NBA history to recover from a 3-1 deficit to win a series, the most recent being the Miami Heat, who beat the Knicks in seven games in 1997. Utah is 6-1 in the last seven playoff games in which it faced elimination.

With nine minutes to play and Portland down 72-58, the Blazers came unraveled. Grant was called for a foul for violently swinging his elbows on a rebound, and after the Jazz missed their next shot and Grant rebounded, he got a taunting technical foul for miming a throwing motion at Malone's head.

When the technical was called, Portland coach Mike Dun-

Broyles, Royal inducted into Cotton Bowl Hall

By Stephen F. Holder
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Their contributions to Cotton Bowl history on the field and off have made their names synonymous with the annual New Year's Day college football game.

Sammy Baugh led Texas Christian to victory in the first contest, in 1937. James Street guided Texas to victories in 1969 and 1970. David Hodge became the second player to win back-to-back game MVP honors as a Houston linebacker in 1979-80.

Frank Broyles coached Arkansas in four games, winning twice. Gussie Nell Davis was the founder of the Kilgore Rangerettes, who have performed at every game since 1949. Felix McKnight was in charge of picking teams for 31 years.

On Tuesday, the group became the second class of inductees into the Cotton Bowl Hall of Fame.

Topping last year's inaugural class was difficult with an inductee list highlighted by former Syracuse star Jim Brown and Southern Methodist back Doak Walker. But this year's list was nonetheless impressive.

"This award has a special place for me because the Cotton Bowl is home for me," said Broyles, Arkansas' athletic director. "It's been home to me for over 30 years."

Street engineered a masterful, marathon drive to give the Longhorns a 21-17 victory over Notre Dame in 1970, extending his 20-game winning streak as a starter and providing him with his favorite Cotton Bowl memory.

"When you came to the Cotton Bowl, you were the champion of the Southwest Conference and that was a big deal," Street said. "So I never wanted to go to the Orange Bowl, I never wanted to go to the Sugar Bowl. Fortunately for us I was able to come up here two years in a row."

All the inductees have helped to add to the Cotton Bowl's mystique. Hodge did so by defining himself as a defensive terror, recording 35 tackles and an interception while appearing in three games in four years.

McKnight helped secure teams to play in the Cotton Bowl as the team selection chairman from 1943-74 and was on the executive committee from 1953-99. He also covered the game for several decades as an Associated Press sportswriter and as an editor at The Dallas Morning News and Dallas Times-Herald.

Davis' Rangerettes have become a permanent element of the game. The danceline group has remained popular despite her death in 1993.

Baugh, who helped revolutionize the passing game as a pro, led three long scoring drives in a 16-6 victory over Marquette in the first game. He seldom travels far from his Rotan ranch and did not attend the ceremony. His son and a friend accepted on his behalf.

The Cotton Bowl, and its hall of fame, are sponsored by Southwestern Bell.

Big 12 Honors

Baylor's Jennings, A&M's Johnson get top awards

DALLAS (AP) — Jason Jennings, who shared Big 12 player of the year honors last season, won the award outright Tuesday and Texas A&M's Mark Johnson was named coach of the year for the second straight season.

Missouri pitcher Jody Harris, a junior, was named newcomer of the year and Nebraska pitcher Shane Komine was picked as the top freshman.

All honorees were selected by league coaches.

Jennings, who split top player honors with Texas A&M outfielder Jason Tyner in 1998, has a 12-1 record as a pitcher going into NCAA Regional play, with a league-leading 159 strikeouts in 133 2-3 innings. He also hit around .400 for most of the season.

Johnson, who became the winningest coach in A&M history on May 20 with his 661st victory, guided the Aggies to their first back-to-back conference crowns since the 1977-78. Johnson will coach the Team USA national summer all-star squad.

Harris (8-4, 2.77 ERA) had a 1.62 ERA in conference games, striking out 54 in 61 innings and holding opposing hitters batted to a .201 average.

Komine (6-2, 78 strikeouts in 76 1-3 innings) helped Nebraska win its first conference baseball postseason tournament and earn its first NCAA invitation since 1985.

Oklahoma State had four first-teamers in third baseman Josh Holliday, utility player Billy Gasparino, outfielder Lamont Matthews and pitcher Matt Smith.

Baylor honorees included Jennings, outfielder Jon Topolski and second baseman Eric Nelson.

Texas A&M was represented by outfielder Daylan Holt and pitchers Casey Fossum and Chris Russ.

Other first-teamers include Missouri's Harris, Texas Tech catcher Josh Bard and pitcher Brandon Roberson, Nebraska first baseman Ken Harvey, Texas shortstop Jason Moore, Kansas State outfielder Kasey Weishaar and Oklahoma designated hitter Casey Bookout.

JAZZ: Grant, Malone have heated battle

(From 1C)

leavy burst onto the court to confront referee Ron Garretson. He was ejected and had to be restrained by two assistant coaches and guard Greg Anthony.

"It was out of frustration, I'm sure," Dunleavy said of Grant's actions. "It was the right call. ... He had guys hanging on him all night, though. My guy gets hit in the head, and he gets the foul. That's what set him off and set me off, too."

Howard Eisley missed both technical free throws, but the Jazz pulled away with a 9-3 run shortly thereafter, and Russell's 3-pointer with 1:51 to play sealed the win.

The winner of the series faces San Antonio in the conference finals.After winning the first game of the series at home, the Jazz lost Game 2 on a last-second layup miss by John Stockton. Utah then dropped two games in Portland over the weekend, losing three straight for the first time since the 1998 NBA Finals.

Grant continued his mini-slump by going 1-for-7 from the field and scoring eight points. Grant, Portland's second-leading scorer in the postseason, had just seven points in Portland's Game 4 win.

Compounding Grant's struggles was a nasty cut he received over his right eye after being inadvertently elbowed by Malone on a rebound in the first quarter. Grant left the game and received stitches, but returned in the second quarter.

Rider led the Blazers with 16 points, while all of Wallace's 15 came in the first half. Hornacek had 14 for the Jazz.

"They missed a lot of shots out there, just like in Game 1," Jazz coach Jerry Sloan said. "I don't think it was anything we did."

For the first time in the series, the Jazz played a strong first quarter, scoring the game's first six points and leading 20-8 just seven minutes in. Malone scored 11 points in the quarter.

Utah shot 63 percent in the first half and was up by 14 early in the second quarter, but the Blazers kept it close and cut their deficit to 49-42 at halftime.

SPURS: Reserves step up big for playoff wins

(From 1C)

In Game 3, Spurs reserves outrebounded Lakers reserves 19-8.

In Sunday's fourth game, Kersey scored five points and Jackson hit a 3-pointer in a 13-0 Spurs run to start the final quarter. Jackson hit six 3-pointers in the game, and Kersey scored all nine of his points in the fourth period.

Rose has a nickname for the bench guys.

"We're all collectively the 'bum rush,' " he said. "There's no one bigger than the other."

Jackson plans to continue trying to improve the reputation of the Spurs' guards, both starters and reserves.

"It just so happens that we all collectively have done a pretty good job," he said. "We just do what it takes to help the team win."

Houston Astros' Richard Hidalgo, left, slides across home plate after being tagged out by Colorado Rockies catcher Henry Blanco on a fielder's choice hit by Paul Bako during the second inning on Tuesday. Houston won 2-1 in 12 innings.

Astros escape Rockies in 12

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Carl Everett singled under third baseman Lenny Harris' glove with one out in the 12th inning Tuesday night, giving the Houston Astros a 2-1 victory over the Colorado Rockies.

With the bases loaded and one out, Everett hit a potential double-play grounder to the drawn-in Harris, who tied a Colorado record with three errors Monday night.

The ball went under Harris' glove and into left field, scoring Bill Spiers with the winning run.

The play was originally scored as an error on Harris. A few minutes after the game ended, the official scorer changed the call to a hit.

Craig Biggio drew a leadoff walk from Mike DeJean (0-2) in the 12th and stole second on a close play. Colorado manager Jim Leyland came out to argue and was ejected by second-base umpire Jerry Layne.

Spiers bunted and the ball was fielded by DeJean, whose throw to third was too late to get Biggio.

Jeff Bagwell was intentionally walked, loading the bases. Derek Bell grounded back to the mound and Biggio was forced at the plate, bringing up Everett.

Scott Elarton (3-1) pitched a scoreless inning for the victory.

The Astros tied it at 1 in the eighth on Everett's RBI double off reliever Curtis Leskanic. Bagwell walked with one out and after Bell struck out, Everett followed with a double.

■ NL Roundup

Rockies starter Darryl Kile pitched seven shutout innings. Mike Hampton allowed one run and five hits before being lifted for a pinch hitter in the ninth.

The Rockies took a 1-0 lead in the first on an RBI single by Vinny Castilla.

Giants 17, Cardinals 1

ST. LOUIS — Bill Mueller's grand slam was one of four San Francisco homers and the Giants obliterated their previous season high for runs in a 17-1 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals on Tuesday night.

Mark McGwire homered for the fifth time in six games, hitting his 13th for St. Louis.

Braves 5, Brewers 2

MILWAUKEE — Pinch-hitters Keith Lockhart and Javy Lopez homered to start the ninth and Walt Weiss homered later in the inning, lifting the Atlanta Braves over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Greg Maddux, who has not won since April 29, allowed five hits in seven scoreless innings. He wound up with a no-decision and avoided his first four-game losing streak in three seasons.

Expos 4, Phillies 2, 11 innings

PHILADELPHIA — Manny Martinez's two-run homer with two outs in the 11th inning gave the Montreal Expos a victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Mets 8, Pirates 3

PITTSBURGH — Brian McRae hit a three-run homer and Mike Piazza added a solo shot estimated at 443 feet during a four-run fourth inning and the New York Mets went on to beat the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Piazza was 3-for-5 with a double and three RBIs and Matt Franco hit a two-run pinch-hit homer as the Mets won their fifth in seventh games. New York stopped the Pirates' three-game winning streak.

Reds 3, Dodgers 2

CINCINNATI — The Cincinnati Reds moved three games over .500 for the first time since 1996, taking advantage of Los Angeles' fielding gaffes behind Kevin Brown.

The Reds won for the eighth time in nine games by turning Todd Hundley's passed ball and throwing error into a pair of unearned runs in the fourth.

Steve Parris (3-0) got his third straight win. Danny Graves pitched two innings for his sixth save.

Marlins 6, Cubs 3

CHICAGO — Preston Wilson hit two home runs and Mark Kotsay added a two-run shot, leading the Florida Marlins over the Chicago Cubs.

Wilson hit a solo home run in the fourth inning off Steve Trachsel (2-5). Wilson hit his team-leading 10th homer, a two-run drive in the eighth off Rodney Myers, for his first two-homer game in the majors. Brian Meadows (4-4) won for the first time since April 20, having gone 0-4 in his last six starts.

Stanley's 3-run homer beats Yankees

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Rookie Brian Rose beat the Yankees again, and Mike Stanley hit a three-run homer against his former team as the Boston Red Sox defeated New York 5-2 Tuesday night.

Nomar Garciaparra also homered as the Red Sox won their fourth in a row.

Rose (2-0), whose only two starts this season have come against the Yankees, allowed three hits in six innings. He struck out three and walked two.

Rose got off to a shaky start when Chuck Knoblauch hit the 20th leadoff home run of his career. One out later, Paul O'Neill tripled, but Rose struck out Bernie Williams and got Tino Martinez on a grounder.

Tom Gordon pitched the ninth for his eighth save. He extended his major league record by converting his 51st straight save chance in the regular season.

Rangers 7, Devil Rays 2

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Rookie pitchers Ryan Glynn and Mike Venafro allowed two runs over eight innings and Juan Gonzalez extended his season-high RBI streak to seven games.

Venafro (1-0) retired 11 of the 13 hitters he faced over 3 2-3 scoreless innings to get his first major league win. He needed only two pitches to retire Wade Boggs and Paul Sorrento on groundouts after replacing Glynn with a runner on second and one out in the fifth inning.

Rusty Greer's sacrifice fly and a run-scoring single by Gonzalez keyed a three-run, third-inning that put Texas up 4-0.

Glynn pitched in and out of trouble during his first major league start, stranding seven baserunners through four innings. He was pulled just two outs away from possibly qualifying for his first victory.

Venafro entered in the fifth with the Rangers leading 5-2. The left-hander allowed just two singles, to Fred McGriff and Miguel Cairo.

Indians 3, White Sox 1

CLEVELAND — Charles Nagy pitched seven strong innings to give Cleveland's bullpen some rest and Richie Sexson homered as the Indians beat the Chicago White Sox.

Nagy (5-3) defeated both the White Sox and Jim Parque (5-4) for the second time in a week.

■ AL Roundup

Last Wednesday in Chicago, Nagy went eight innings in a 13-7 rout. He didn't get nearly as much run support this time, but didn't need it as his sinker had the White Sox overswinging and hitting 10 groundball outs.

Blue Jays 5, Tigers 3

DETROIT — Dave Hollins hit a two-run homer and Roy Halladay kept up his mastery of Detroit.

Halladay (4-2), who shut out the Tigers 7-0 in his last start, allowed three runs and eight hits in 5 2-3 innings. Billy Koch pitched the last two innings for his third save.

Mariners 15, Twins 5

MINNEAPOLIS — Rob Radlosky, called up from the minors earlier in the day, got a rude welcome from Ken Griffey Jr. and the Seattle Mariners in his major league debut.

Griffey hit his major league-leading 18th homer and the Mariners scored eight runs in the fourth inning to snap the Twins' four-game winning streak.

Radlosky entered the game in the fourth after starter Gary Rath allowed the first five Mariners to reach base and Seattle had scored three runs to cut Minnesota's lead to 4-3.

FCA places items for bid

The Permian Basin Fellowship of Christian Athletes have three Dallas Cowboys memorabilia items for sale through Friday by phone bids.

There are two limited edition prints (Nos. 79 and 80 of 100) depicting former Dallas greats, Coach Tom Landry, Roger Staubach and Bob Lilly. The prints are 15 x 22. An opening bid of $700 is being asked.

Also, there is an autographed football of 12 Cowboys, including head coach Chan Gailey and owner Jerry Jones, that is up for phone bids.

John Cooke said that bids may be called into him at 685-0873 through Friday.

"One of these prints went for $2,200 in an FCA auction in New Mexico," Cooke said. "It is really a special item."

Cooke said that all the proceeds gained from the sale of the three items will help send as many coaches and athletes to a leadership camp at Hardin-Simmons University on June 7-11.

"At our recent dinner, we were able to raise enough money to award 12 $200 scholarships for the camp," Cooke said. "We also gave one full scholarship to the Lee FCA huddle as they prepare to send up to 20 campers to the FCA's national coed sports camp in Estes Park, Colo. The recipients of the scholarships included three students at Stanton, five at McCamey and four at Goddard Junior High."

Munden cards ace at Hogan

Jeff Munden scored his first ever hole-in-one Tuesday afternoon at Hogan Park Golf Course. Munden scored his ace on Hogan's No. 22, 140-yard par 3 hole using a pitching wedge.

Stacey Petrich, Don Riley and J.T. Boswell were witnesses.

WPHL penalizes Shreveport

The Western Professional Hockey League has imposed penalties on the league champion Shreveport Mudbugs for violating the league's salary cap guidelines.

The Mudbugs were fined an undisclosed amount for the transgressions. Details and individuals involoved were not made available.

"It is absoultely imperative that the policies and guidelines established are adhered to by all WPHL member teams," said league Director of Hockey Operations Brad Treliving.

HOUNDS: Travelers come to town off Midland starter Tim Manwiller in the fifth. Manwiller pitched well for four innings before giving up three runs in the fifth, but made it far enough into the game to record his second win in four decisions.

(From 1C)

Chad Harville was brought in with the bases loaded in the seventh, but he got Ryan Lane to pop up and then finished the game for his seventh save.

So, what do the 'Hounds do with a whole night off in the middle of a homestand?

"Well, we start with a round of golf," Marcinczyk said. "I've got a 2:30 (p.m.) tee time."

There is a whole new world out there when you play a morning game.

ROCK PILE: Encarnacion and Marcinczyk may have come up with the big hits on the day, but no one was probably happier than Midland's Justin Bowles. His single in the seventh inning ended a woeful 0-for-16 streak at the plate. Bowles now has a hitting streak going into the series opener with Arkansas today at 7:11 p.m... Arkansas and Midland will play six games in the next five days with a scheduled doubleheader at 6 p.m. on Friday... Arkansas has won three of four games with Midland this season, but had to move one of its home games to the Tall City since the Travelers lost their stadium lights in the last game on Midland's trip to Little Rock... The Drillers left 10 runners on base Tuesday while Midland stranded only four...

OPEN: Top Women have easier time as the crowd roared, and he would have more reason to celebrate a few points later. Serving for the match at 9-8, Sampras double-faulted, then Marin swiped the set with the help of two big forehands.

(From 1C)

Sampras wasn't too concerned about most of his 14 double-faults, though that one hurt.

"It depends on the time of the double-fault," he said. "Match point isn't recommended."

But when it came down to the fifth set, with the match already 3 1-2 hours old and evening shadows blanketing the court, Sampras had a familiar feeling. He'd been down this road many times, winning 26 of his 36 previous five-setters. He remembered digging out a match, even when he was sick and vomiting, against Alex Corretja in the 1996 U.S. Open. He remembered how he suffered with cramps but won three other five setters at the French Open the same year.

He would just have to find a way to do it again.

"Sure, when you're in the fifth set you think of matches you played," he said. "You know how to conserve energy. When it's a big point, you push hard. If it's 40-love, there's no sense in killing yourself. Experience always helps. The longer the match goes, the better I feel about my chances. You believe in yourself that you can kind of come through, and I did today."

As relieved as he was to win, Sampras knows that a five-setter to start off the tournament doesn't bode well for his chances to win the one major that has eluded him.

"It's never good to play 4 1-2 hours in the first round," he joked. "But I'm still alive."

The top women had a far easier time than Sampras. Steffi Graf, Monica Seles, Lindsay Davenport and Mary Pierce all advanced with no trouble. Also winning was Jennifer Capriati, just days after she won her first title in more than six years.

Graf, a five-time champion at the French, was making her 16th appearance at Roland Garros, where she hasn't lost before the quarterfinals in her last 12 tries. She skipped the French Open last year because of an injury.

After beating Magdalena Maleeva 6-2, 6-0, Graf said she isn't yet certain she can regain the form that brought her 21 career Grand Slam titles.

"I think I can, you know," she said. "I probably just need to believe in it a little more."

Seles, seeded third and a three-time winner at the French, won 6-2, 6-4 against Fang Li of China.

Asked about last year's loss in the final to Arantxa Sanchez Vicario, she said: "Thank goodness my memory is not long. That day was very difficult. I tried to learn from it."

Davenport, seeded second, made easy work of fellow American Jane Chi, winning 6-3, 6-1. Capriati also won easily with a 6-2, 6-3 victory over Virginia Ruano-Pascal of Spain. Anna Kournikova beat Tamarine Tanasugarn of Thailand 6-3, 6-3.

With an affectionate crowd behind him, former French Open champion Gustavo Kuerten powered his way into the second round with a straight-sets victory over Galo Blanco of Spain.

Kuerten has been having the best year on clay of anyone on the tour, and it showed in his methodic victory, with sharp groundstrokes punctuated by delicate drop shots.

"It couldn't have been better today," Kuerten said after his 6-4, 6-4, 6-3 win. "I played my best tennis, and everybody is treating me so well."

In other men's play, No. 3 Patrick Rafter beat Switzerland's Roger Federer 5-7, 6-3, 6-0, 6-2, while Aussie compatriot Mark Philippoussis lost to countryman Jason Stoltenberg 7-6 (7-4), 6-4, 6-1.

STARS: Dallas loses forward Hogue

(From 1C)

"In the series against St. Louis, there was a tremendous amount of counter-attacking and neutral zone play. In this series, there is none. So the feeling is that there's a lot of room because you're coming through that area between the two blue lines with a lot of speed."

Asked to explain Colorado's somewhat lackluster play in Game 2, Hitchcock said, "They got what they wanted. They got the split in our building."

"Now, we have to come in here and do that, too. And if our attitude is we're going to weather the storm, then that's the wrong attitude because we're going to be on our heels all night. We have to go and attack," he said. "It's going to make for some high-risk hockey, and I think their team probably has the same attitude."

Dallas lost forward Benoit Hogue for the remainder of the playoffs after he tore knee ligaments in the first period.

The Avalanche, meanwhile, were hopeful of getting back center Stephane Yelle, their best penalty-killer. Yelle has been sidelined since May 3 with a sprained left knee.

"He's probably going to be a game-time decision," Colorado coach Bob Hartley said.

Yelle, who skated for the fifth straight day on Tuesday, said his injury "has been improving and I've been feeling more and more comfortable. I want to get back. It's been tough to sit and watch the guys play."

Besides cutting down on the number of shots faced by goalie Patrick Roy, the Avalanche were eager to get more production from Fleury and Joe Sakic, normally two of their most prolific scorers.

Fleury's assist Monday night was his first point since Game 3 of the Detroit series. Sakic has just one goal and one assist in Colorado's last eight playoff games.

"We've had some great chances as a line," Fleury said. "The puck is just not going in, for some reason. We're too good of players not to get on the scoreboard. We're doing all the right things. It's just a matter of time. But Milan is playing great."

Milan Hejduk, a rookie and Fleury's linemate, scored his sixth goal of the playoffs Monday night.

Major League Baseball fires curve at ESPN

NEW YORK (AP) — The nasty feud continues between ESPN and Major League Baseball, with MLB countersuing the cable network over three late-season games that conflict with NFL telecasts.

ESPN sued MLB earlier this month after the sport terminated a regular-season contract with the cable network that was supposed to run through 2002.

MLB countersued Friday in papers filed in U.S. District Court in Manhattan. The judge received the papers Monday.

MLB is claiming it should be paid damages because the cable television network broke its contract when it decided three football games would draw much higher ratings than three baseball games.

Last year, ESPN wanted to switch three Sunday baseball games to ESPN2 so it could show three NFL games instead. The two sides couldn't reach an agreement and the games were given back to local outlets.

"The NFL was and is unwilling to have its games telecast on ESPN2, even three games in September at the very start of its season," MLB said.

MLB said in court papers that ESPN deliberately broke its 1996 contract "solely to cut a deal that it viewed as promising and having a more positive impact on the network's pricing structure and the corporate bottom line."

MLB demanded unspecified damages, saying ESPN2, which is available in 64 million homes, to be inferior to ESPN, which is in 76 million homes.

Ping celebrates 40 years

By Doug Ferguson
AP Golf Writer

It started with two sugar cubes, two popsicle sticks and a "ping."

Karsten Solheim was working as a mechanical engineer for General Electric in 1959 when he developed the design for his 1-A putter, placing the sticks on each side of the cubes with a shaft in the middle.

Upon contact with a golf ball, the putter made a high-pitched ringing sound that gave birth to the brand name Ping.

The sleeve of a 78-rpm record made Solheim leave GE for a new career making clubs. On that sleeve is his sketch of a revolutionary idea for another putter — the Ping Anser, which has become a model for today's most popular styles.

Having grown from such extraordinary roots, Ping is celebrating its 40th anniversary this year as a family run business that has helped shape the golf-equipment industry.

The founder, who gave women's golf the Solheim Cup and has two college golf courses named for him, spends most of his time in a wheelchair now. Solheim has Parkinson's disease and is unable to communicate effectively.

Still, he has lunch with his wife every day at Moon Valley Golf Club. He also joined the Ping staff for pizza and soft drinks when it held a 40th birthday party this year.

"Knowing that he's helped so many people's golf games just made him feel real good inside," said John Solheim, his son and now chairman and chief executive officer of Ping.

John Solheim was in junior high when his father began making the 1-A putter in the garage of their Redwood City, Calif., home.

"Dad had me drilling the holes in the putter head for the shaft," Solheim said. "My brother was doing the grips. It turned into a family affair."

Looking back over 40 years, Solheim went silent when asked what first comes to mind when Ping is mentioned.

Perhaps the Anser putter, which has been used to win 500 events on professional tours around the world, or investment casting, another Solheim innovation aimed at improving product consistency.

Who can forget perimeter weighting on the Ping Eye2 irons? Solheim was the first to design clubs that distributed weight to the extremities, which increased the sweet spot and offered more forgiveness.

Ping also put an "L" on a high-lofted club that has become part of golf's glossary these days — the lob wedge.

John Solheim is just as enthused looking forward as looking back at 40 years.

He measured Ping's growth in double digits last year and anticipates a big push over the next 12 months. Having done well with its new TiSi driver, Ping plans to unveil a new line of fairway metals in the fall.

"They have a low center of gravity, but not the shallow heads like what the current market trend is," he said.

The big surprise is what's in store next year. The company that has become known for its offset clubs with the modern cavity back plans to introduce its own line of blade irons.

"We totally believe in the offset club," Solheim said. "There is part of the marketplace that refused to go with offset. We decided we're going to build a blade — but not like every else's blade."

In a way, Ping will have come full circle. The company essentially took off when Karsten Solheim was looking for an answer to the blade putters that Arnold Palmer popularized by winning six major championship in a five-year span.

The answer, which became the Anser, can be found on the record sleeve and dated Jan. 16, 1966. The sketch shows a cavity-back design for heel-toe balance and the offset hosel.

Dollar falls

NEW YORK — The dollar fell against the yen Tuesday as news surfaced about possible Senatorial opposition to Lawrence Summers' nomination to be Treasury secretary.

In listless, low-volume trading, the dollar's fall against the yen sparked the dollar's slide against other major currencies.

The dollar fell to 122.70 yen from 123.21 Monday. The euro was quoted at $1.0601, rising from $1.0594. The dollar also was quoted at 1.5038 Swiss francs, down from 1.5122; and 1.4657 Canadian dollars, up from 1.4546. The British pound rose to $1.6028 from $1.5964.

Traders sent the dollar lower during Asian trading after a report that senators from steel states were thinking about blocking Summers' nomination to get the attention of the Clinton administration about protecting the U.S. steel industry. President Clinton nominated Summers to replace the well-respected Robert Rubin.

Stocks fall

NEW YORK — Stocks fell sharply Tuesday, extending the Dow industrials' worst losing streak since late March, as continued concerns about interest rates and Internet stocks outweighed a sign of continued optimism about the U.S. economy.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 1.2 percent, dropping 123.58 points to close at 10,531.09. The Dow has now finished lower in four consecutive sessions, including a 174.61-point tumble Monday.

Broader stock indicators also surrendered early gains to finish lower. The Standard & Poor's 500 fell 22.25 to 1,284.40, and the technology-heavy Nasdaq composite index fell 72.76 to 2,380.90.

The Nasdaq is now 10 percent below its all-time record of 2,652.05, set April 26, the S&P 500 is down 6 percent from its May 13 record of 1,367.56 and the Dow is off more than 5 percent from its record of 11,107.19, also set May 13.

Initially, stocks appeared poised for a rally Tuesday. The Conference Board reported that consumer confidence, a key indicator of future economic activity, rose in May for a record-setting seventh consecutive month.

Oil prices higher

NEW YORK (AP) — Crude oil prices edged higher on the New York Mercantile Exchange Tuesday as traders anticipated a slight decline in U.S. crude supplies.

Light sweet crude oil for delivery in July rose 8 cents to $17.14 per barrel.

Products also moved higher. Unleaded gasoline for delivery in June rose 0.60 cent to 49.08 cents per gallon, and June home heating oil rose 0.33 cent to 40.32 cents per gallon.

Natural gas rose 2.4 cents to $2.200 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Traders have been hoping that promised cuts in production by oil-producing nations would begin abating a glut in crude oil supplies, which has been pushing prices for the commodity lower.

After trading closed, the American Petroleum Institute reported that U.S. crude oil stocks fell 3.3 million barrels last week to 332.1 million barrels, while gasoline stocks rose 771,000 barrels to 220 million barrels. Refineries operated at 96.7 percent capacity, up slightly from 96.6 percent.

Kent converts to Texaco gas

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Just as Petro Express finished converting the former Eugene's stores from the Chevron gasoline brand to the Shell gasoline brand, another chain is rebranding its group of stores.

Bill Kent, president of Kent Oil, said Tuesday that his company has agreed to convert its Kent Kwik convenience stores from the Diamond Shamrock to the Texaco gasoline brand.

One service station owner who just completed a conversion from Chevron to Texaco is Richard Stegall, owner of Richard's Village Texaco at 2110 W. Wall

He said the conversion has gone smoothly. "The customers have been real good about it. Most even had Texaco cards already," he said. "So far it's worked out great. I don't like change, but this has been simple."

The change was prompted, he explained, by Petroplex Petroleum's conversion to the Shell brand and their refusal to rebrand his station "because I'm not a convenience store. And I didn't want to do that, I operate a service station, so I ended up with Texaco."

Interestingly enough, Kent said, both Shell and Texaco are part of Equilon Enterprises, a joint venture between the two major oil producers to produce and market gasoline and other fuels in the western part of the United States. On the Gulf Coast and in the eastern part of the United States, the alliance is known as Motiva.

He said he expects the first nine stores, including the Buck's on Loop 250 and Midkiff, which is 90 percent converted, to be rebranded by mid-June. Then the company will begin phase two, converting 10 other stores, a process that will be completed by September or October.

After the conversion, he said, the stores will accept all gasoline cards for a limited time while giving customers an opportunity to apply for a Texaco card, Kent said.

Of the remaining six stores in the 25-store chain, two stores, including the Kent Kwik on Rankin Highway, will be converted to Texaco after a new, larger store is built near the current location, either later this year or early next year. The remaining four will be assessed, he said.

Kent said his company had been approached by different oil companies over the last several years, a fairly common practice in his industry.

"Texaco felt it doesn't have the representation it thought it needs in this marketplace and we've been in negotiations with them and several other companies," Kent said. "We chose Texaco because they have a good program. We've been pleased with Diamond Shamrock, but we felt that nationally the Texaco gasoline card is more widely accepted."

The conversion also gives Kent the opportunity to upgrade its locations, he said, with some stores receiving completely new gasoline facilities, including the Kent Kwik on Fairgrounds Road. All will have dispensers with pay-at-the-pump terminals.

In addition, he said, his vice president of marketing, Coney Elliott, and his department are reviewing the merchandising at all Kent Kwiks and will be making changes. Some will also undergo interior renovations.

"Not only will the outside look different, but customers will see a difference inside," Kent said.

Tim Fischer/Reporter-Telegram

David Stone, top, and his brother, Larry Stone, both with Lone Star Signs, put the final touches on the new Texaco sign outside Buck's Convenience Store off Loop 250 near Midkiff Road. The store recently switched from Diamond Shamrock to Texaco gasoline.

Courses mine bard's works to help businessmen climb corporate ladder

LONDON (AP) — If you really want to succeed in business, study the masters: Warren Buffett. Lee Iacocca. Bill Gates.

And William Shakespeare.

Yes, the Bard of Avon can make you a Master of the Universe — or so says Cranfield University, which has teamed up with Shakespeare's Globe Theater and the late Laurence Olivier's son to offer courses that mine the playwright's works for advice on climbing the corporate ladder.

To weather acts of betrayal, you might turn to "Julius Caesar." To learn how best to inspire your team to victory, read "Henry V." And "A Winter's Tale" might be just the ticket for those tips on coping with mid-career changes.

"Business leaders are, more and more, having to manage companies like kings and queens were managing nation-states 400 years ago," explains Richard Olivier, a veteran Shakespearean director who teaches the courses for Cranfield's School of Management.

"Shakespeare's plays deal with people in positions of power and responsibility," he says. "They explore how human nature copes with those stresses."

Olivier, the son of the late actor and actress Joan Plowright, says newly promoted leaders can find parallels with Shakespeare's "Henry V," who struggles to gain respect in his new role as king.

And consider "Hamlet," which Olivier says can provoke discussions about when indecision becomes harmful and action becomes necessary.

The Globe's Susan Tranter says it shouldn't be surprising that Shakespeare is being applied to the corporate world.

"Everyone talks about the accessibility of Shakespeare and his appeal to all walks of life," she says. "It is natural that he has something to say to business leaders."

AP Photo

Richard Olivier, son of British actor Sir Laurence Olivier, is seen in this undated handout picture. Olivier runs a university course that encourages business leaders to use the works of William Shakespeare for advice on climbing the corporate ladder.

Participants pay $1,600 for a two-day workshop at the Globe in London, focused around one Shakespearean play.

Also included are some basic acting lessons. Participants learn how to make rousing speeches and project confidence — techniques Olivier believes can easily be translated to the boardroom.

"This is not about teaching people to speak in verse ... but simply about the power of speaking well," he says.

At the end of the workshop, a ticket to a Globe production is thrown in, for good measure.

Olivier notes that the courses aren't just designed for Shakespeare lovers. If you and the Bard didn't have the best of relationships during your schooldays, don't be put off, he says.

"A byproduct is that people do tend to come out of the course much more inspired about Shakespeare than when they went in," Olivier says. "But the goal is to get them to relate the stories to their own working lives."

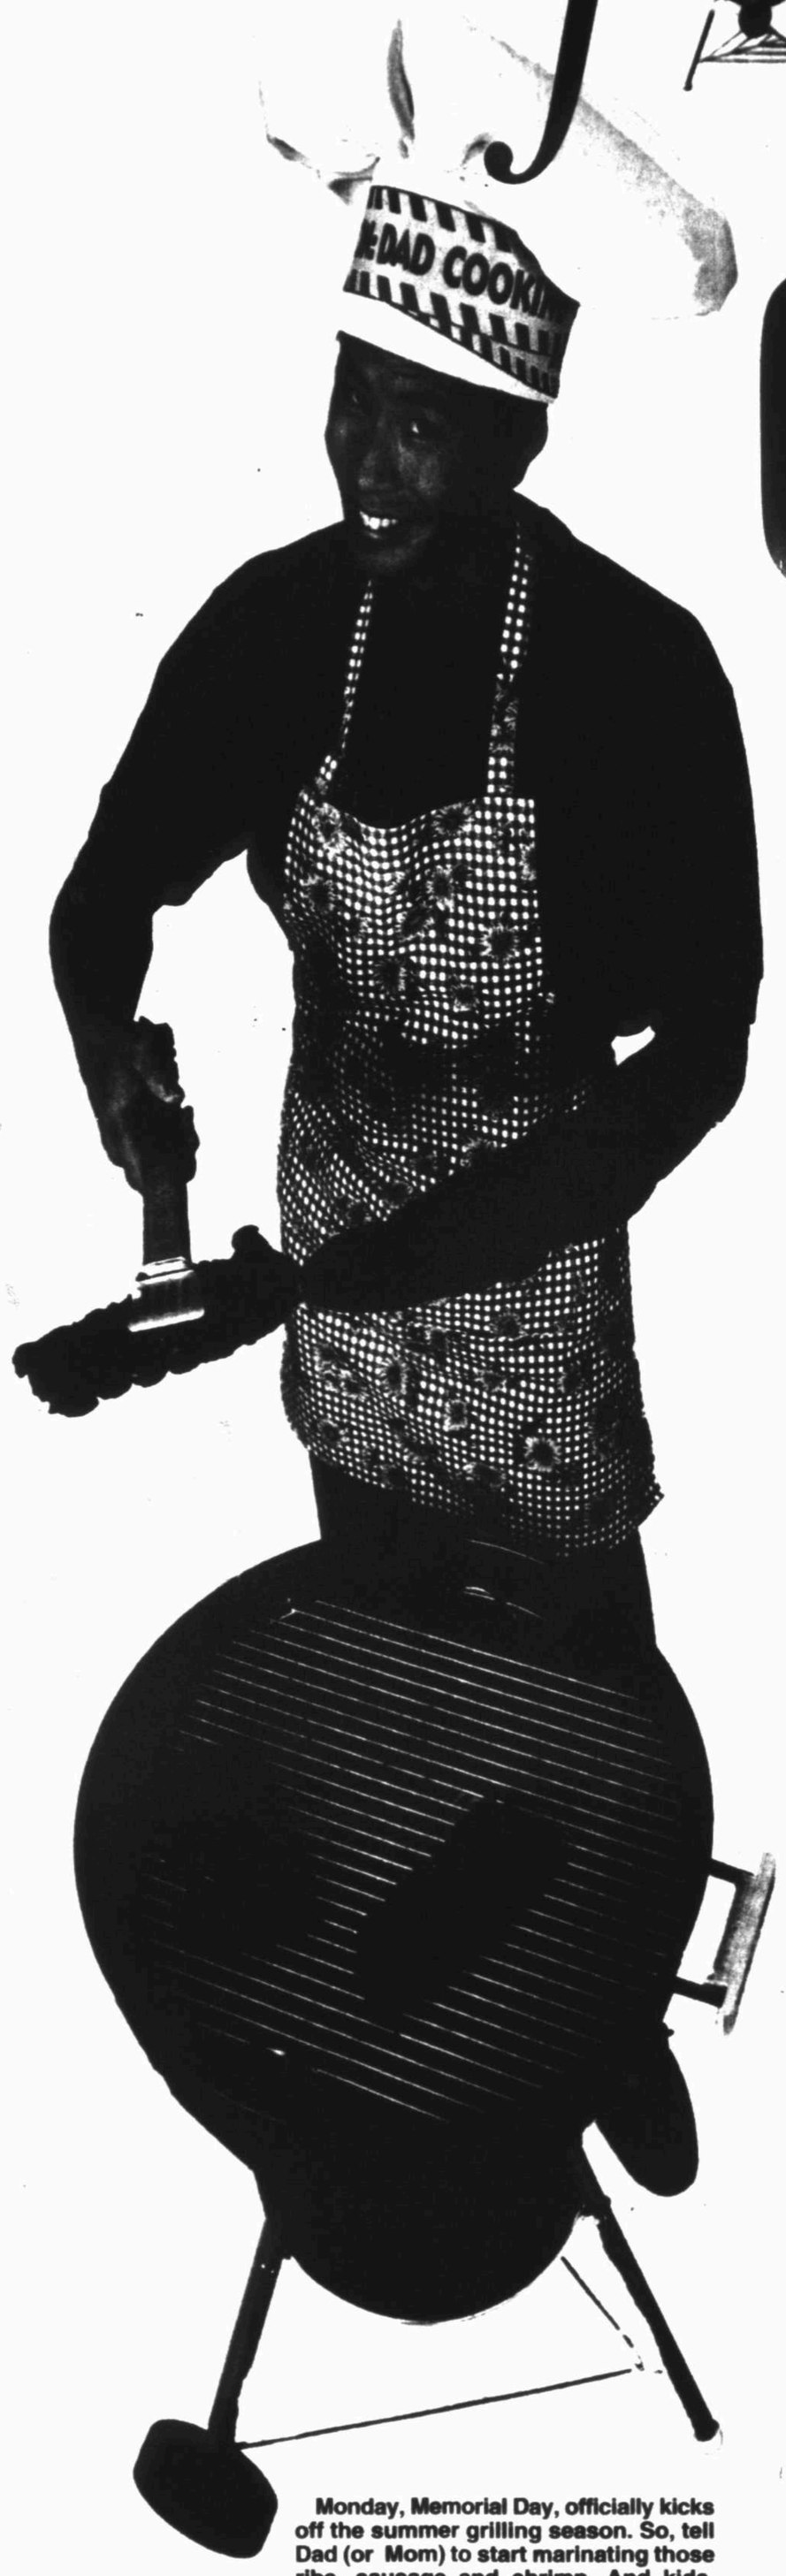
Around Town/1D
Dear Abby/1D



Monday, Memorial Day, officially kicks off the summer grilling season. So, tell Dad (or Mom) to start marinating those ribs, sausage and shrimp. And kids, please stand back when Dad lights the grill.

Start up the Grill

By Joyce Rosencrans
Scripps Howard News Service

Here are some rib rules and other barbecue tips from the School of Southern BBQ.

■ It's important to trim the fat from ribs if cooking them in a water-smoker. If grilling directly over charcoal, about half the fat should be left on.

■ Cooking ribs in a smoker is a lot less work than in a charcoal grill. But, for more labor, you get ribs from a grill in half the time (about two hours as opposed to four hours in a smoker set at 275 degrees).

■ Don't bury meat with dry-rub spices; they burn and blacken the meat. MSG is a good thing to cut the rub with ; it doesn't burn. A quart of dry rub will do five or six cases of ribs (30 pounds each). Sprinkle meat side only.

■ Don't turn your nose up at meat tenderizer . Follow directions; don't apply it too early or it can cause mushiness. A tenderizer gives the cooking a head start if you're using the direct heat of a charcoal grill.

■ Some barbecuers believe in cooking hot and fast, as opposed to the common wisdom of low and slow. With new strains of dangerous bacteria, you want to get the meat and bones hot right away. If meat sets at 140 degrees or below, bacteria can grow rapidly and you'll make someone sick.

■ Italian dressing is hard to beat as a basting sauce, and it's a fantastic marinade.

■ You never buy anything off the shelf that's got things the way you want it. But a great sauce to start with — before doctoring it — is plain bottled barbecue sauce.

■ You lose a lot of heat from pepper and chilies during grilling.

■ Never reuse a marinade from chicken or poultry; discard it. And never put cooked chicken on the same unwashed plate touched by the raw chicken.

■ For ribs on the grill, spread briquets out; if they're touching or piled up, the fire will be too hot.

■ When using a smoker, if you get black smoke on your meat, your wood's too dry. Green wood doesn't put off black smoke. At 275 degrees, wood burns clean, with very little smoke. If wood is more than six weeks cut, get rid of it.

■ Don't stick holes in meat with a fork to test doneness or you'll lose juices; use tongs to move it around. To test doneness on large pieces of pork, you can use an ice pick.

■ Buy good-quality charcoal briquets.

■ Biscuits and cornbread are great with barbecued food. Smoked rice, beans and coleslaw are good too.

Sausage kabobs are a no-think entree for a quick grill-out meal.

Sausage kabobs are a colorful meal when the meat is alternated on skewers with an assortment of fruits and vegetables. Set the kabobs on a bed of rice to serve.

Don't forget to dress up the rice. A favorite pilaf starts with sauteing a chopped garlic clove and onion with at least 1 teaspoon curry powder in a tablespoon of butter. Add 1 cup Arkansas or Texas basmati rice, 2 cups chicken broth and salt as necessary, depending on broth. Stir in a handful of dried currants, chopped raisins or dried apricots. Follow package directions for cooking rice.

The important part is shopping for the sausage. Supermarket brands will do, but independent meat shops sometimes turn out their own sausage mixtures.

Either links cut into short lengths or little meatballs made from spicy bulk sausage can be placed on skewers, along with an assortment of harvest fruits and vegetables.

Apple wedges are a natural with sausage chunks, but mango or peach paired with pineapple and bell-pepper squares is another possibility.

For basting, turn to the tremendous assortment of bottled sauces at the supermarket. Instead of red barbecue sauce, try a teriyaki or sweet-sour sauce. Lacking that, simply brush the kabobs with red-wine vinegar mixed with honey and a dash of dry mustard.

Grilled Sausage Kabobs

3 hot dogs
3 Polish sausages
3 bratwursts
1 red bell pepper
1 green bell pepper
10 mushrooms
1 cup fresh pineapple
1 yellow summer squash
1 zucchini
1 large onion
2 apples or peaches
1 cup bottled teriyaki sauce
Curried or plain rice
Lime wedges to garnish
Yield: 6 servings

Cut any assortment of fully cooked sausages you like into 1-inch sections.

Cut fruit and vegetables into small wedges. Marinate ingredients in the teriyaki for 30 minutes.

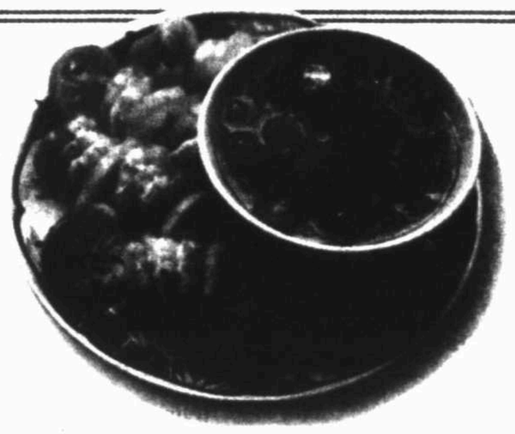
Place sausages, fruit and vegetables alternately on skewers (soaked first, if using bamboo, to keep them from burning on the grill).

Cook kabobs on grill, turning frequently and basting with the teriyaki sauce.

Serve over curried rice with currants and lime wedges for garnish.

Variation: Alternate pieces of kielbasa with fresh pineapple, mango or peach chunks; green pepper squares; and orange wedges (still on rind). Grill, basting with bottled or homemade sweet-sour sauce, and serve over rice dressed up with stiry-fried onions and garlic.

Recipe adapted from the National Hot Dog and Sausage Council.



Marinated Shrimp on Rosemary Skewers with a Cherry Tomato, Black Olive and Garlic Salsa

6 tablespoons extra virgin olive oil
1/4 cup fresh lemon juice
2 teaspoons grated lemon zest
4 cloves garlic
1 teaspoon hot pepper flakes
24 large shrimp, peeled and deveined
Salt and freshly ground black pepper
8 twigs of rosemary with thick woody stems, about 6 to 8 inches in length
16 slices of lemon, 1/4-inch thick

SALSA:
2 pints red and/or yellow cherry tomatoes, stemmed and halved or quartered
2 cloves garlic, finely minced
1 cup black olives, pitted and coarsely chopped
1/4 cup finely chopped parsley
1/4 cup fresh lemon juice
1/4 cup extra virgin olive oil
Salt and freshly ground black pepper

In a bowl, whisk together the olive oil, lemon juice, lemon zest, garlic and hot pepper flakes. In a shallow dish, pour the marinade over the shrimp. Cover, refrigerate and let marinate for 15-30 minutes.

Skewer 3 of the marinated shrimp, alternating in a decorative pattern, with 2 of the lemon slices, on each of the rosemary twigs. Grill the shrimp for 2 to 3 minutes per side until just cooked through.

In a bowl, combine the cherry tomatoes, garlic, black olives, parsley, lemon juice, olive oil, salt and pepper.

Serve the grilled shrimp with the salsa.

Yield: 4 servings.

Canned honey butter biscuits much too hard to resist

By Linda Anderson

I've got siblings. I know what it's like to grow up in a house with brothers and sisters. So when I saw a commercial for Pillsbury's new Honey and Butter Hungry Jack Biscuits, and the commercial showed the sister getting the better of her brother, I snickered and promised myself I'd buy some.

Anderson

Don't get me wrong, the commercial wasn't the only reason I bought the refrigerated canned biscuits. It just so happens I love honey and butter, and I like the other flavors of Hungry Jack Biscuits that I've already tried. It's just that the commercial looked so familiar...

A 10-ounce package containing dough for eight biscuits cost $1.09.

Pillsbury doesn't put too much label advertising on its cans of biscuit dough — guess the product has been around for so long that advertising isn't really necessary on the label — but the company does list several methods of communicating with it, if the customer is so included:
(1) Address is The Pillsbury Company, 2866 Pillsbury Center, Minneapolis, Minn. 55402-1464;
(2) Toll-free telephone number is 1-800-775-4777 from 8 a.m.-6 p.m. central time; and
(3) E-mail address is ask.biscuits@pillsbury.com

I always appreciate when a company provides me with that much information about where it can be reached. Even if I never call them, it's nice to know I can.

Nutrition label lists one biscuit as having 110 calories with 35 of them from fat. Of course, if you add butter to the hot biscuits, you have to add more fat and calories to the count. Sure is hard to resist adding butter, though, and letting it melt down and ooze through the layers...

I basically bought the canned biscuits for me, and it's a good thing since I couldn't convince most of the tasters to join in. My kid announced that no, she didn't like honey and wouldn't taste even a tiny little bite.

And although one of the other kids helped out, he wasn't all that enthused at first (big lunches can cut your enthusiasm for eating for the rest of the day).

In spite of all the strikes against it, the taste test turned out to be a success. Within their limitations as canned biscuits, the Honey and Butter Hungry Jacks are surprisingly tasty. They don't really taste like honey, just slightly sweet. (I put a little extra butter on mine though.)

And the really interesting thing was, that although no one was really wild about participating in the taste test, the biscuits managed to disappear pretty quickly.

Amazing how that works, isn't it? Guess I'll have to buy some more.

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

Guests jump for joy when served Frogmore Stew

By John Owen
Hearst News Service

There are no frogs in Frogmore Stew. Good thing, too, or this one-dish meal would create more of a mess than a mud-rassling match atop Martha Stewart's coffee table.

As a matter of fact, if Martha Stewart decided to serve Frogmore Stew, she might have to saw a hole in the table and install a bucket underneath. That's what they do in some restaurants in the Gullah district of South Carolina.

A retired Navy officer, Al Wood, lives near St. Helena Island, which was dubbed Frogmore by early inhabitants. We met Wood far from his South Carolina home, on a cross-country skiing trail at Jasper, Alberta. He seemed to sense that the author of a cookbook called "Gluttony Without Guilt" would be a candidate for the Frogmore Stew Appreciation Society.

Essential equipment at a Frogmore Stew feast includes at least two rolls of paper towels as napkins, a galvanized bucket and a large appetite. Here is Wood's recipe.

FROGMORE STEW

3 pounds unshelled medium shrimp (40 to 50 per pound)
1/4 pound of butter
2 pounds of mild sausage cut in slices
5 ears of corn, cut in half
2 pounds of medium new red potatoes, diced in large pieces
1 large onion, diced in large pieces
4 tablespoons Old Bay seasoning
4 teaspoons salt

You could probably substitute any good brand of kielbasa or other precooked sausage in the recipe. One bag of crab boil might also be substituted for the Old Bay seasoning.

What you do is to half-fill your largest cooking pot with water. Add the butter, salt, crab boil, the pieces of sausage and the onion. Bring this mess to a boil, then add the corn and potatoes. Continue to boil for four minutes, then add the unpeeled shrimp and stir-cook four to six minutes, or until the shrimp rise to the top of the water.

Turn stove off and let the ingredients sit for four minutes, or as long as it takes you to hum two choruses of "Carolina Moon."

With a perforated serving spoon, transfer the ingredients of the pot into a large bowl.

Furnish five guests with melted butter or seafood sauce as a dip. Then let everybody attack the contents of the bowl. The shrimp shells and corncobs go into the bucket.

Wood says the above recipe is widely circulated in his part of the country. The same is true of the following gut-busting dessert.

The first time I encountered it, the dessert was described as "Bear Bryant's favorite mud pie," in reference to the late, great Southern football coach.

The same recipe, with different names, has appeared in two or three community cookbooks we have acquired. Like Frogmore Stew, this dish is awfully easy and awfully good. So don't put away those paper towels quite yet. We can make a meal out of Frogmore Stew and:

PUDDING CAKE FOR A BEAR

1 cup sifted flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa
2/3 cup sugar
1/2 cup milk
1/2 cup chopped walnuts
2 tablespoons melted butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
Pudding topping (recipe below)
1 cup boiling water
Whipped cream

Sift the flour with the baking powder, salt and cocoa. Stir in the sugar. Add the milk, walnuts, butter and vanilla. Mix thoroughly, then plop this sludge into an ungreased, 8-inch-square glass baking dish.

Spread the topping over the cake mixture. Pour 1 cup boiling water over all, and DO NOT STIR!

Shove the dish into a preheated 350-degree oven for about 40 minutes, or until the pudding cake is slightly crusty on top. Let sit for a while, then serve warm with whipped cream on top. Feeds four to six.

FOR THE TOPPING

Mix together:
1/4 cup white sugar
1/2 cup brown sugar
3 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla

You can also throw any leftover pudding cake into the galvanized bucket.

Except there won't be any leftovers.

Soldiers help feed refugees

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — NATO troops in Macedonia have gone beyond their peace implementation mission in Kosovo. They also have been plucking chickens and baking scones.

The estimated 16,000 NATO troops in Macedonia, Yugoslavia's southern neighbor, have been given the added duty of emergency refugee support, and have come through nobly. Among other tasks, they have been cooking up a storm for hungry Kosovo Albanians, according to NATO spokesman Jamie Shea.

He said Britain's Royal Engineers, in addition to their other duties, have prepared 46,000 chickens. What's more, he said, "Since April 5, they have prepared 48,000 kilograms (about 53 tons) of goulash. They have baked 19,500 scones, hard-boiled 16,000 eggs. In all they have cooked 129,000 meals, distributed 442,000 chocolate bars and 145,000 kilograms (about 160 tons) of fruit."

DEAR ABBY

School shootings give mom license to spy on teen-agers

By Abigail Van Buren

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Now, after the recent school shootings, I have a genuine reason to write to you to tell you just how much I disagreed with you every time you said a child's room and belongings are their private business, and parents should respect this so-called "privacy" and not snoop. BULL!

Now I no longer feel guilty for all the times I secretly "invaded" my kids' privacy by reading their diaries and going through their backpacks and purses, dresser drawers and closets, and even eavesdropping on their phone conversations. If the kids don't have anything to hide, they shouldn't need to worry.

Call me a snoopy mom, but I know what my kids are up to, what their plans are and who they plan to do it with, and I no longer feel guilty whatsoever, thank you, ma'am! —SNOOPY MOM, EDNA, TEXAS

DEAR SNOOPY MOM: Interest, or concern, is not spying. Until children reach legal age, parents are responsible for their health, education and growth. If children are overly secretive about what's going on in their lives, of course their parents will pry. If parents have a legitimate reason to question their child's honesty, it's only common sense to check.

But nosiness is not a legitimate reason, especially if teens have proven by their actions that they can be trusted.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 46-year-old woman who married a 41-year-old man in January of this year. It's my second marriage and his first.

He hasn't told me he loves me since the day we were married. When I share my needs with him, he doesn't respond in a reassuring way. He usually gets hurt or mad, and ignores me as if he's the injured party.

Among other issues, here's the clincher: He has not told his parents or other family members that we are married. We both told my parents about the engagement and that we were being married in a private ceremony. (My parents didn't really understand that part.)

His excuse for not telling his parents is that he wants to make sure our marriage works, plus he doesn't want to hear any negative feedback. However, his mother has introduced me to others as her "future daughter-in-law."

Also, he wanted a "private and confidential" marriage. I went along with it because he promised me we would have a church wedding and a honeymoon in about a year.

Recently he has started saying he no longer wants another ceremony, claiming, "We're married and it's a done deal."

I feel our wedding vows of "love, honor and cherish" are all a big lie. I feel he's dishonoring me by not telling his parents. He's leading them to believe we're living together in sin.

He is also talking about his first love when he was 17, and a recent crush that a 20-year-old young woman at work has on him. He wants to buy her a card and a rose for her birthday. I thought that was a gift for someone with romantic intentions.

It hasn't even been six months, and already our marriage is a disaster. I know the first year is difficult, but this is just too much.

I'm so hurt. I'm torn between honoring my marriage vows and calling it quits. What should I do? — HURT AND CONFUSED, FOUNTAIN VALLEY, CALIF.

DEAR HURT AND CONFUSED: It takes two people working together to build a successful marriage. Offer your husband the option of sharing the news of your nuptials with his family and of seeking marriage counseling immediately. If he gives you an argument, lose this loser.

PROPERTY ADJUSTER

Midland/ Odessa, regional independent claims company looking for experienced adjuster- prefer 3- 5 years. Good pay and benefits. Fax resume to 972-247-6117.

*CUSTOMER SERVICE

Do You...

consider your self #1 at customer service? Do you know how to make customers happy? Do you go that extra mile to make sure the job gets done? Do you love talking to people on the phone? If you possess these qualifications plus have basic computer skills then read further.

We're looking for a person who can make 60+ outbound calls per day to existing customers. The main focus will be to encourage customers to make payment, thereby continuing their service with our company. This position is mostly customer service/sales.

We would like applicants with a friendly and out-going nature, but aggressive enough to ask for payment. The applicant should have at least 3+ years experience in an office and be able to work on his or her own with light supervision. This is a temporary position with a strong possibility of turning into a permanent position for the right person. The successful applicant will work 40 hours per week, Monday through Friday. You must be able to work from 11AM - 8 PM daily (after training). The hourly rate of pay will be $7.00 - $8.00 per hour depending on experience.

If you really are #1 in customer service and have the skills, attitude and desire for longevity that this job requires, fax your resume to: CUSTOMER SERVICE at 682-3791. Make sure to include daytime and evening phone numbers. (We will contact only those chosen for interviews). No phone calls please.
