Col. North defends diversion plan

Diversion of funds called 'neat idea'

WASHINGTON (AP). — Lt. Col. Oliver North told Iran-Contra hearings today it was a "neat idea" to divert proceeds from Iranians arms sales to the Contra rebels, and stoutly defended the sale of arms in exchange for freedom for three American hostages in the Middle East.

Back in the witness chair for a second straight day of televised hearings, North also denied that President Reagan told him it was "important that I not know" about the diversion of the profits to the Nicaraguan rebels.

"I don't recall the conversation that way," North told House counsel John Nields, who was asking about a phone call last Nov. 25 from Reagan to the man he had just fired from the National Security Council staff.

As North fielded questions, key lawmakers said they believe the thrust of his first day's testimony — that he acted on orders from above in what he did. The result would be to place great importance on the expected testimony next week of Vice Adm John. Poindexter, who was national security adviser during much of North's tenure on the staff.

As he did on Tuesday, North appeared in his Marine uniform, complete with six rows of ribbons. He wore silver-framed glasses to aid in reading documents that Nields frequently called to his attention.

The morning produced its share of legal sparring. North's attorney, Brendan Sullivan, accused the committees of conducting a "stall job" by prolonging questioning of his client.

"May the record show that it took four and a half minutes to explain the stall," Inouye replied in a sarcastic bass.

In other testimony, North:

—Gave a flavor of the covert world in which he operated. Nields referred to notes North made of a conversation with Israeli Amiram Nir in which the NSC aide wrote that "Joshua has approved proceeding as we had hoped" to replenish the weapons that Israel had sold to Iran.

North said he thought "Joshua" was a code name for Israeli officials. Advised to look it up on a code sheet, he said "I was wrong, I had forgotten the codes."

Nields: "Who was Joshua?"

North: "The president."

—Sparred with Nields over whether retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord was an "authorized agent" in his role in arranging the sale of arms to Iran.

North used his second day as witness to offer a strong defense of the activities that lie at the heart of the Iran-Contra affair.

Ask Us

Q. — Has the sleeve at Lake J.B. Thomas, helped the city's clam problem yet?

A. — City officials note it is too soon to tell. The sleeve, which raised the lake's water intake from the bottom, was designed in part to draw fewer amounts of Asian Clams into the water treatment plant. The plant's settling basin has to be cleaned of clam shell debris frequently, but this has not been required since the sleeve was put into place.

Worker injured by fall

A 29-year-old Snyder oil field worker was flown to Lubbock's St. Mary's Hospital Tuesday afternoon for treatment of a neck injury sustained when he fell from a pulling unit.

A.C. Kellums, supervisor for Frontier Petroleum Services in Snyder, said Wednesday that Ralph Hoyle of 125 Browning St. was working on a pulling unit in the Mobil Salt Creek Field in Kent County when the mishap occurred around 4 p.m.

According to Kellums, Hoyle fell from the rig floor and sustained a puncture wound on the left side of his throat when he struck a hook on the unit.

Hoyle was taken from the field to Cogdell Memorial Hospital in Snyder in a company vehicle and later flown to Lubbock via St. Mary's helicopter ambulance service for examination and treatment.

Kellums reported that Hoyle was listed in good condition Wednesday morning and was expecting to be released from the hospital Wednesday afternoon.

In Brief

2 men caught

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Two convicted robbers who escaped by crashing through prison gates in a stolen truck were back behind bars today.

One was arrested during a restaurant robbery at Vidor after a day-long crime spree that spanned several Southeast Texas counties and the second surrendered to authorities about a mile from the prison unit.

Carl Lang, 44, turned himself in to law enforcement authorities at 7:45 p.m. Tuesday about a mile from the prison unit.

Jerry Wayne Ables, 28, was arrested earlier in the day in Vidor after he allegedly abducted three people and held up a restaurant, authorities said.

The two men broke out of the Texas Department of Corrections' Wynne Unit Monday night. Ables then launched a crime spree that spanned several southeast Texas counties, authorities said.

Wife denies

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The wife of the only survivor found last week among 19 illegal aliens in a locked boxcar denied that her husband recruited Mexican youths to go to the United States for work.

Miguel Tostado Rodriguez, 21, of Pabellon de Arteaga, was the only one alive when U.S. Border Patrol agents opened the airtight boxcar Thursday morning during a routine check in Sierra Blanca, 90 miles east of El Paso, and found 18 people dead.

Some family members of the dead have told a government official from the state of Zacatecas that Tostado urged the victims to head north.

Bus massacre

CHANDIGARH, India (AP) — Authorities today called out army troops and prohibited public assemblies in an effort to prevent Hindu mobs from seeking vengeance after Sikh terrorists massacred 72 Hindu bus passengers in two days.

Board scrutinizes staff pay, mineral value appraisal fee

The Scurry County Appraisal District met Tuesday night to discuss the preliminary appraisal budget for 1988--an operating estimate which mirrored last year's regarding the total figure.

Items which drew the most attention were salary increases and the renewing of the oil-related appraisal service contract.

No decision was reached on the budget, but board members agreed to meet again July 21 for further discussions.

The budget proposed for 1988 totals $360,413 which represents a slight increase of $404 over the current figure of $360,009.

Salary proposals commanded the biggest jump, from $183,890 in 1987 to $188,187 for 1988--an increase of $4,297.

Under the proposed salary adjustments for the new budget, Ray Peveler, chief appaiser, is seeking salary increases for four members of his staff who are in the process of completing advanced training courses.

The proposal does not involve a pay raise for either Peveler or his assistant chief appraiser.

Board member John Reed noted that he did not favor "just giving raises," but that merit raises for people who have improved themselves through aditional training might be considered. "No one is getting any raises now and now is not the time for us to do it either," he said.

Board members also expressed concern that the proposed budget calls for a $2,500 hike for the fee charged by Thomas Y. Pickett and Associates of Dallas, the firm contracted to do the appraisal work for mineral values.

Peveler said he only estimated that figure because he isn't sure what the company will ask. Board members noted they felt the company should receive less money instead of more.

Currently, the firm receives $57,500.

Board members, Peveler and representatives of Thomas Y. Pickett will meet Monday to discuss the contract renewal.

The board also has the option of seeking bids for the appraisal

Lions sweetheart set for month in Canada

Jennifer Goodwin, Lions Club sweetheart here, will visit Canada for one month this summer as part of the Lions Club International Youth Exchange program.

She plans to leave Snyder Saturday and will return Aug. 9.

She is a 1987 graduate of Snyder High School and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Goodwin.

Jennifer will be staying with the Frank Hoffele family in Harrison, Ontario. Harrison has a population of about 2,000 people. The Hoffeles have five married children and a foster son. They also have an exchange student from Germany living with them currently.

While in Canada, she will attend a Lions Youth Exchange Camp for one week. During that time, she will tour the eastern part of Canada.

She said she was asked in September if she wanted to participate in the Lions International Youth Exchange program. At that time, plans called for her to visit overseas. However, she said she opted to go to Canada to participate in the week-long camp.

This is her first trip outside of the United States.

When she returns, she plans to attend Western Texas College for one year and then transfer to Texas Tech where she will major in accounting.

Building still down in Snyder

One permit for a new residence plus five mobile home move-in applications helped boost the Snyder building permit total for June to more than $184,000.

The new residence and the mobile homes accounted for some $170,000 of the month's total. Regarding year-to-date figures, June ended with Snyder still 53 percent below new construction totals for the same period in 1986.

The total for this year now stands at some $1.4 million compared to $3.1 million last year. Exact figures are $1,445,873 and $3,102,659 respectively.

For June, the new residence

The SDN Column

The feller on Deep Creek says, "A balanced meal at our house means there's a 50-50 chance there will be one."

Just in case the hot weather has you down--there may be a reason. Eye-lids tend to drop this time of year. Some folks may be anticipating a long-awaited vacation, and others are trying to get back into the work routine.

At any rate, there is help. July is National Anti-Boredom Month. The idea is to help people avoid being bored for at least 31 days.

Boredom attacks our best intentions. Combined with the heat, the result is a puddle of lost possibilities by the time August rolls around.

In Snyder, there is not much official help with the blahs. July 4th has already come and gone, and then we're on our own the rest of the month.

If you really want to get the adrenalin flowing, one might choose to attend one of several budget hearings scheduled prior to tax time.

Folks looking for something to do can assist the AJRA committee as it plans for the AJRA National Finals Rodeo next month.

Another place where boredom will not likely find a spot this summer is in the state legislative chambers. The special session will make an evening with TV re-runs look appealing.

Alan Caruba, founder of the Boring Institute, says July is a good time to assess the first six months of the year and then make plans to improve on the last half.

The best advice we can give is to find someone else who's bored and share a freezer of homemade ice cream...and we like butter pecan!

Some folks thought the regular session of the legislature was boring--and a waste of time. According to House Speaker Gib Lewis, 2,632 bills were introduced in his chamber during the regular session, and 711 were passed.

Some 114 constitutional amendments were introduced and 12 were passed. All of which means that this fall, you'll get to vote on at least 23 patches to our state constitution.

Reading the proposed amendments may not give relief to boredom in July, but it could put you to sleep until football season starts.

Freshman event is again set

Students who will be enrolling as fulltime freshmen at Western Texas College in the fall semester are requested to attend a Freshman Success Seminar July 14 if they did not attend the first summer seminar on June 23.

There is no charge to attend the seminar and a complimentary lunch will be served for all students and parents accompanying them.

Students may pre-register for the fall semester at the seminar. Students who do not have an ACT or SAT test score on file at WTC must take a placement test before enrolling and will pay a $5 fee for that test.

Panel asks dramatic changes in air traffic control operation

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal panel investigating the 1986 collision of a jetliner and a small plane near Los Angeles is calling for dramatic changes in the way air traffic controllers protect aircraft, saying too much emphasis is being placed on pilots scanning the skies.

The National Transportation Safety Board on Tuesday blamed failures in the air traffic control system and limitations and weaknesses in the so-called pilot "see-and-avoid" philosophy for the Aug. 31 collision of an Aeromexico DC-9 and a single-engine Piper PA-28.

The accident over Cerritos, Calif., claimed 82 lives including 15 people on the ground and prompted the Federal Aviation Administration to re-examine its control of air traffic in crowded airspace such as the Los Angeles basin.

But NTSB Chairman Jim Burnett told reporters the board wants "a new philosophy" that would require air traffic controllers to provide more protection to aircraft from planes flying under so-called visual flight rules, such as the Piper in the Cerritos collision.

These aircraft normally fly outside the air traffic control system and are not specifically directed by air traffic controllers. Such pilots rely on the "see-and-avoid" strategy to stay out of the paths of other aircraft.

The safety board said the FAA should require controllers to give equal priority to aircraft flying under visual flight rules when issuing traffic warnings. Under current procedures, controllers are responsible primarily for the separation of aircraft under their direct control and give traffic advisories about other aircraft only when workload permits.

The NTSB also urged the FAA to speed up its development of an automated computer system now being tested that would provide controllers with a warning when a plane not under direct control may be on a collision course with another aircraft.

Reliance on pilots scanning the skies for planes has severe limitations and may be outdated in today's airspace, in which fast-moving jetliners routinely mix with slower smaller planes, the safety board suggested.

"Even with good pilots and meticulous pilots there are limitations" to the see-and-avoid concept, said board member Joe Nall.

Commission staff investigators concluded that the Aeromexico plane and the Piper Cherokee likely were in view of each other for about a minute with good visibility before the collision.

But the investigators suggested that William Kramer, the Piper's pilot, might have been absorbed in trying to find guideposts on the ground to help keep him out of the restricted airspace or had his vision obscured by a passenger.

In any case, the NTSB cited a study of pilot scanning techniques that showed that even under ideal conditions, the pilot of a small plane may have only a 50 percent probability of seeing a jetliner in time to avoid a collision. The probability of the pilots of a DC-9 — even if both are looking — seeing the smaller plane drops to 30 percent, the board said.

At the time of the collision, Aeromexico co-pilot Hector Valencia, 26, was at the DC-9's controls and the captain, Arturo Valdes Prom, 46, had just completed a routine radio communication to the Los Angeles control tower.

Showers produce very little inflow

BIG SPRING--Unexpected early week showers did not produce much inflow for two Colorado River Municipal Water District reservoirs, but they contained two-thirds of combined capacity.

Heavy vegetation growth on the watersheds may have retarded the volume of runoff from the spotted but intense rain.

Lake J. B. Thomas and Lake E. V. Spence each caught more than 2,500 ac. ft. with a small flow continuing Thursday afternoon.

Lake Thomas had risen over half a foot to elevation 2,241.19 and with 98,380 ac. ft. was 48.23 percent of capacity. Lake Spence rose .23 of a foot to an elevation of 1,886.83 and with 352.130 was 72.19 percent full. Lake Thomas spillway is elevation 2,258 and Lake Spence is 1,898.

Natural Dam Lake, a natural reservoir 10 miles west of Big Spring, rose .50 of a foot to elevation 2,447 .44, but the spillway had been plugged and there is no outflow. Although CRMWD water quality is nearly one-third better than this time last year, spillage from the lake has tended to modify even more dramatic improvement.

Dear Abby

Couple's Photo Skirmish Becomes a War of Words

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1987 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My husband was married before and has a daughter who is living with her mother in another state. A few years ago, this daughter sent us a picture of herself, and it was beautiful. I bought a nice frame and proudly put the picture on display in our living room for all our friends to see.

A few weeks ago, this daughter sent us a new picture. (She just turned 15.) I don't care for this picture at all. She's wearing too much makeup, great big earrings, a sexy, low-cut dress, and her hair is all frizzy. I really would be ashamed to put that picture out for everyone to see.

Me: "I don't like this picture."

My husband: "I don't like it either. She looks cheap."

Me: "I agree. She looks like a prostitute."

Well, my husband hit the roof, and said, "Don't ever call my daughter a prostitute again!"

I said, "I never called your daughter a prostitute — I just said she looked like one."

We had a big fight over this, and he said I owed him an apology. Abby, my husband has called my sister a "whore" many times because she dates many men. She is not a whore; she's just a popular, friendly girl. I never demanded an apology.

Do you think I owe my husband one?

HATES TO FIGHT

DEAR HATES: No, but if you hate to fight, in the interest of peace, apologize for saying that you thought his daughter looked like a prostitute. And don't remind him that he called your sister a whore.

DEAR ABBY: I do not agree with your advice on divorce and remarriage. Have you read in the Bible what God says about this? "If you divorce and remarry you are living in adultery."

I hope you print this.

BELIEVER IN THE BIBLE

DEAR BELIEVER: Since you are so well-versed in the Bible, please recall Matthew 7:1-2: "Judge not, that you be not judged. For with what judgment you judge, you will be judged; and with the same measure you use, it will be measured back to you."

DEAR ABBY: I sympathize with the family in Kansas who recently lost their 4-month-old son. My 6-month-old nephew died in April, also while on a waterbed. However, the coroner's report listed the cause of death as Sudden Infant Death Syndrome (SIDS), not asphyxiation. Several states now require an autopsy whenever there is a sudden death of an infant. This allows the family to know if the child was ill, had a congenital problem, and also to conduct research on this unexplained and unpreventable tragedy.

Maybe the Kansas grandson died of SIDS. If so, it might help the family to know that they could not have prevented his tragic death, thereby relieving them of any guilt.

There may be a local SIDS support group where they can obtain more information. If not, they can contact the National Sudden Infant Death Syndrome Foundation Inc., 8200 Professional Place, Suite 104, Landover, Md. 20785. The toll-free telephone number (outside of Maryland) is (800)-221-SIDS. (In Maryland, the number is 301-459-3388.) Sign me ...

D.V., ALSO GRIEVING

DEAR D.V.: Thank you for your compassionate letter. Please accept my sympathy on the loss of your nephew. In the hopes that your letter may enlighten other families stricken by this kind of tragedy, I am sharing it with my readers.

U. S. judge: state schools are in need of more money

DALLAS (AP) — U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders says he will rule in August on whether the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation is violating court orders and constitutional standards of care for retarded people.

The department runs 13 state institutions for retarded people, but a seven-day contempt of court trial before Sanders focused on Fort Worth State School, the newest and smallest school.

Testimony ended Tuesday with Sanders declaring that the evidence shows an indisputable need for more money and resources for retarded people in Texas.

"There is no dispute that the state ranks last of all the states and the District of Columbia in its funding," Sanders said. "That is a sad and negative commentary on the attitude of the citizens of this state.

"There is very little dispute, if any, that more resources are needed."

The state's last-place ranking in retardation funding "is not a matter for judicial concern, except as it bears on funds being available for (state) compliance" with federal court orders, Sanders said.

The judge lauded the workers at the Fort Worth school as "caring and concerned." He said, "The deficiencies, if any, at Fort Worth have to do with deficiencies in resources and deficiencies in procedures, and administration is a part of that."

Attorneys representing some of the retarded patients told Sanders in closing arguments that retarded Texans are abused, neglected and given inadequate training in Fort Worth State School.

The state argued it is complying with constitutional and federal standards as well as the 1983 agreement that settled a class-action suit against conditions in state schools.

Muddying the waters

For all the years I have known him, Al Roth has been an outstanding player, theorist, writer and teacher in the world of bridge. He has also been a "system" player, with a reputation for adhering to his own espoused methods. Thus it was with great interest that I read about one of his early exploits in the Granovetters' new book, "Tops and Bottoms" (Granovetter Books, 80-85 Dumfries Place, Jamaica, NY 11432 — $11.95 postpaid). Bearing in mind that this deal took place in 1942, you can readily see that the bidding methods used by Roth (seated South) were unusual, to say the least.

Because Al had shown diamonds instead of clubs, he received the opening lead of his best suit. He assumed that lead to be from four cards, so to further complicate the opponents' defense, he ducked, playing the eight. East continued the suit. Declarer won the club ace and played a low heart to the nine in dummy, forcing the queen. Now East shifted to a diamond, but it was too late. Al cashed his club winners, played a spade to the ace, and came off dummy with the heart jack, smothering the 10 in West's hand to make his contract. This was the 1942 National Open Pairs, and Al and his partner, Tobias Stone, won the event. Their opponents on this round, Harry Fishbein and Waldemar Von Zedtwitz, finished second. Do you think this deal mattered?

Newborn's photo said released

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Beirut University College today released a photograph of American hostage Robert Turner's 2-week-old daughter in the hope his kidnappers would show him the picture of the child he has never seen.

"I had hoped you would be the first person to see my face after my birth," said the letter, addressed to "Daddy" and written in Arabic by Turner's Lebanese-born wife Badr, for the baby, Joanna. It was accompanied by a black-and-white snapshot.

Beef cow herds make money

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers and ranchers who operate beef cow herds are making a little money now, but an Agriculture Department economist says they're still in financial danger.

No massive expansion in the nation's cattle herd is in sight due to the financial uncertainty and because it takes about 2½ years from the time a cow is bred to produce a calf and grow it for the beef market.

In 1986, the nation's cow-calf operators generally enjoyed substantial net cash returns for the first time in five years, says Russell Bowe of the department's Economic Research Service.

Producers netted an estimated average of $35.70 per cow last year and may realize more than $45 in 1987, according to Bowe's analysis.

The estimates represent net cash income, the difference between cash receipts and cash expenses for a year. No allowance is made for capital costs of replacing and maintaining buildings and equipment.

But net cash income is one way to illustrate the financial condition of agricultural producers, and it shows how much a farmer or rancher has left over — or lost — after paying out-of-pocket expenses.

In 1978 and 1979, when cattle prices were relatively high and feed costs low, net cash returns of cow-calf operators nationally averaged $55.70 and $121.14, respectively, per cow. In 1980, returns dropped to about $55 per cow, and by 1984 were in the red. Operators about broke even in 1985 before returns went up last year.

"Positive returns near $36 per cow in 1986 and projected favorable returns in 1987 may encourage cow-calf producers to expand their beef cow herds and take advantage of abundant forage supplies," Bowe said. "However, the incentives for a sharp, broad national expansion are not present."

He added: "By 1988, large pork and poultry meat supplies may reduce net returns, limiting additional expansion in the beef herd."

As computed, cash receipts for average cow-calf operators include the sales of steer and heifer calves, yearling steers and heifers, and cull cows. The agency has been publishing the annual estimates since 1977.

Despite the improvement in net cash income, when allowances are made for capital improvments, the cow-calf operators still are losing money, as they have since 1979, Bowe's report found.

Looking further at the cow-calf cash balance sheet, Bowe said total cash expenses stood at about $164 per cow in 1977 and peaked at $277 in 1984. Feed costs rose by 45 percent, other variable expenses rose 63 percent, and fixed expenses more than doubled during the 1977-84 period.

Since 1984, cash expenses have dropped substantially and may average around $234 this year, he said.

Meanwhile, cash receipts rose from about $147 per cow in 1977 to an estimated $352 in 1979, dropping to $307 in 1980 and $247 in 1983. Last year, the average beef cow returned $262 in total receipts and may go to about $279 this year.

Corn crop

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's Joint Agricultural Weather Facility says the nation's corn crop, which was planted this spring for harvest in the fall, is mostly in good shape although some dry areas are developing.

Rains helped growth in the eastern and southern Corn Belt and in the central Great Plains, the facility said Tuesday in a weekly report. Soil moisture remained short in the northern Corn Belt and northern Great Plains, however.

In the major corn-producing states, an estimated 20 percent of the crop was in the silking stage of development by July 5, ahead of the 14 percent pace of a year ago and the average of 7 percent for this time of the season, the report said. Silking was under way in all states except Colorado, Minnesota, Pennsylvania and South Dakota.

The 1987 winter wheat harvest advanced rapidly last week to about 60 percent completed, 4 percentage points ahead of a year ago and 14 points ahead of the average for July 5.

In Kansas, the wheat harvest was 85 percent finished, behind the 98 percent pace of a year ago but ahead of the long-time average of 55 percent.

Soybeans were 98 percent planted, matching the year-ago pace and slightly ahead of the average for this time, the report said. About 30 percent of the soybeans were in bloom, compared with 12 percent a year ago and 7 percent on the average.

Clouded outlook

WASHINGTON (AP) — The outlook for food production in African countries south of the Sahara is still clouded, despite a rebound from the drought-stricken conditions of 1982-84, an Agriculture Department report says.

"In 1986, output increased by 4 percent over 1985," according to a report released Tuesday.

TDC needs to hire corrections officers

The Texas Department of Corrections needs corrections officers, lots of them, and quickly! TDC must hire 1,500 corrections officers in the next two months. By September 1, TDC officials will have interviewed 400 applicants per week in order to fill these positions.

The Texas Department of Corrections and the Texas Employment Commission have developed a statewide recruitment program to supply the Texas Department of Corrections with prospective correctional officers. Corrections officers supervise inmates at all times to maintain necessary security in cellblocks, dormitories, dining facilities, and on work assignments.

Newly selected employees are familiarized with the work, policies, and procedures of the Texas Department of Corrections and the work of corrections officers during an intensive three week training program.

The initial salary is $1,212 per month. The employee's salary will be increased every six months, and after 18 months of continuous service career level will be attained at $1,784 per month. Other benefits including vacations, sick leave, retirement, uniforms, equipment, laundry and dry cleaning service are also available.

Applicants must be 18 to 70 years old and be in good physical condition. Applicants must have clear criminal histories and be high school graduates or possess GEDs.

Additional information can be obtained at the Snyder Texas Employment Commission Office located at 2501 College Ave, 573-5745; or at the Sweetwater Texas Employment Commission office located at 121 E. 3rd., 235-4324.

But must start in minor league...

Howe can resume career

DALLAS (AP) - Left-handed former Major League pitcher Steve Howe, who has been troubled by drug abuse in the past, can resume his baseball career, but he will have to begin in the minor league, a baseball official says.

Johnny Johnson, president of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, the governing body of the minor leagues, announced Tuesday he has lifted Howe's suspension effective July 12, clearing the way for him to sign a contract. Johnson said Howe would have to agree to "certain conditions," including regular testing for drug use.

The Texas Rangers have been the most active team in pursuing Howe since he returned last month from Mexico, where he pitched 23 innings, allowing four hits and no runs for the Tabasco Banana Pickers.

Howe, however, has been given permission only to sign a minor league contract.

Major league contracts must be approved by the Player Relations Committee, a branch of the office of commissioner Peter Ueberroth.

A spokesman Tuesday told the Dallas Morning News such approval would not be given immediately. A source close to Howe said the pitcher would be required to spend a month in the minor leagues.

"If Steve Howe can demonstrate compliance with a drug treatment program over a reasonable period of time and does not show any indications of a resumption of drug use, the office of the commissioner will, with proper safeguards, allow the assignment of his contract to a major league team," Ed Durso, secretary treasurer and executive vice president of the office of the commissioner, said.

The commissioner evidently wants more proof than what Johnson required in rescinding the suspension of Howe, which Johnson handed down in May 1986.

At the time, Howe was pitching for San Jose in the Class A California League. Howe disputed the positive results of a drug test. While the matter was being settled, Howe pitched for San Jose against orders from Johnson and was suspended.

"When he left the ballcub, we said he could return if he compiled documentation (proving he was drug free), and his agent has been gathering that," Johnson said when contacted in Midland, Texas, where he was attending the Texas League meeting.

Johnson said the July 12 return date was set "in fairness to all clubs so they have a chance to make a decision on him."

Rangers president Mike Stone said the Rangers are still "investigating" Howe.

"No contract parameters or terms have been discussed," Stone said. "We are continuing to gather information about him, and we have talked to the commissioner a couple of times. He wants some assurance to prevent what happened before."

Yanks rally from 7-0 deficit; halt Minnesota's win streak

by The Associated Press

As fast as they could say Steve Lombardozzi, the New York Yankees had rallied from a seven-run deficit.

The Yankees entered the bottom of the seventh inning trailing 7-0 to the Minnesota Twins and former teammate Joe Niekro Tuesday night.

With one out, Mike Pagliarulo homered and Dan Schatzeder relieved. Pinch-hitter Rick Cerone hit a grounder toward second that got by Lombardozzi for an error, and the Yankees had the break they needed.

New York went on to score six more runs in the seventh - all unearned - to tie the score and then won the game 12-7 with five runs in the eighth. The Yankees snapped the tie on two consecutive wild pitches by reliever Juan Berenguer.

"That's not a rally, that's an explosion. That's the quickest runs I've seen scored in a long time," Yankee Manager Lou Piniella said, apparently forgetting an 11-run third inning against Boston and Roger Clemens on June 26 that wiped out a 9-0 deficit.

Elsewhere in the American League, Chicago beat Baltimore 9-3; Cleveland defeated Kansas City 6-4; Toronto tripped Texas 6-2; California beat Boston 9-4; Detroit downed Oakland 6-4; and Seattle outlasted Milwaukee 9-5.

New York broke the 7-7 tie in the eighth, starting when Cerone drew a leadoff walk from Keith Atherton, 4-4.

After Wayne Tolleson sacrificed and Rickey Henderson walked, Berenguer took over and got ahead of Willie Randolph 1-2. But his next two pitches sailed over the head of catcher Tim Laudner, allowing Cerone to score and putting the Yankees in front.

Tim Stoddard, 2-1, the third New York pitcher, worked two scoreless innings as the Yankees ended Minnesota's four-game winning streak.

Blue Jays 6, Rangers 2

Tony Fernandez hit a two-run double, Toronto took advantage of sloppy fielding by Texas in the fifth inning and Jim Clancy, 9-6, won for only the second time in his last nine starts.

Clancy entered the eighth with a three-hitter, but with one out Oddibe McDowell hit his 10th homer to make the score 6-2. Tom Henke pitched the final 1 2-3 innings for his 15th save.

White Sox 9, Orioles 3

Carlton Fisk drove in four runs with a two-run homer and a double and Floyd Bannister pitched three-hit ball for seven innings as Chicago sent Baltimore to its 31st defeat in 37 games.

Fisk, 9-for-18 in his last four games, hit his ninth homer after Greg Walker led off the second with a single.

Walker hit his 17th homer in the eighth to give Chicago a 6-2 lead, and the White Sox added three runs in the ninth on Harold Baines' RBI single and Fisk's two-run double.

Indians 6, Royals 4

Cleveland's Joe Carter hit a two-run homer just inside the left field foul pole off reliever Dan Quisenberry with one out in the ninth inning.

Carter had tied the game 4-4 with a two-run single off Quisenberry, 4-1, in the seventh.

Carter's 18th homer of the season came on a 2-2 pitch and followed a leadoff single by Tony Bernazard. Doug Jones, 2-1, pitched 2 2-3 hitless innings for the victory.

Tigers 6, Athletics 4

Bill Madlock hit a two-run homer and Frank Tanana pitched seven-hit ball for 6 1-3 innings as Detroit defeated Oakland, snapping the Athletics' three-game winning streak.

Lou Whitaker walked to lead off the game and Madlock followed with a two-run homer off Joaquin Andujar, 3-2. The Athletics made it 2-1 in their half of the inning on Mike Davis' 19th homer of the season.

Angels 9, Red Sox 4

Jack Howell and Bob Boone drove in three runs each and California scored six runs in the fifth inning on only three hits.

Mike Witt, 10-5, allowed 11 hits in 7 1-3 innings and DeWayne Buice finished for his eighth save.

Offers and counteroffers; 'Pokes look to sign picks

DALLAS (AP) - What could become an annual ritual is being played out days before the Dallas Cowboys training camp begins in Thousand Oaks, Calif.

Representatives for the Cowboys' first-round draft pick have made a counteroffer to the team's initial deal.

Tony Agnone, who is representing Danny Noonan with Tom Condon, said he has mailed a counteroffer to the Cowboys' initial offer, which was believed to be for $1 million or less for four years.

Last year's top pick, Mike Sherrard, signed a $1.38 million package for four years after he missed the first two preseason games. The team's first offer to Sherrard was $865,000 for four years.

In fact, none of the top four picks signed until after camp had begun in 1986.

In 1985, No. 1 draftee Kevin Brooks missed the opening of camp while he wrangled over a contract.

"I don't think you're seeing anything but ridiculous offers being made right now," Agnone said. "I think the team's attitudes are, 'Let's see if someone blinks.' Right now, I don't think anybody's blinking."

Cowboys vice president Joe Bailey said he had made offers to 11 of the Cowboys' 12 draft choices, but he doesn't think some agents are inclined to make deals yet.

"I predicted we wouldn't have this again this year, but maybe it was wishful thinking. You still get answers from a number of people that they don't want to do anything until seeing what others do," Bailey said. "It's kind of up to them as to when they sign."

Agnone said he thinks Noonan should get compensation similar to Detroit quarterback Chuck Long - four years, $1.75 million - and said last week's meeting with Bailey was productive.

"Hopefully, we showed we have an understanding of Danny's role with the team," he said. "We think Danny's walking into a defensive line where he will be asked to provide immediate help. I think (Bailey) knows that if he wants to make a deal, we're willing to go ahead."

Hearns going for 4th crown

NEW YORK (AP) - Despite winning three world boxing titles, Thomas Hearns has always been overshadowed by Sugar Ray Leonard and Marvelous Marvin Hagler.

That could change Oct. 29 when Hearns meets Juan Roldan in Las Vegas, Nev., for the vacant World Boxing Council middleweight title. A victory would make Hearns the first fighter to win world titles in four weight divisions.

"It's been a dream of mine for a long time," Hearns said Tuesday. "I'm in a position to do something that's never been done before. It's a chance to put my name in the record books."

Ten fighters, including Leonard, Roberto Duran and Alexis Arguello, have won titles in three weight divisions. Arguello and Duran lost their bids for a fourth title.

Hearns, 29, knocked out Pipino Cuevas in 1980 to win the World Boxing Association welterweight championship. In 1982, he won the WBC super welterweight title with a 15-round decision over Wilfred Benitez. On March 7, Hearns captured his third belt by beating Dennis Andries for the WBC light heavyweight title.

Despite his success, Hearns is probably best known for his losses to Leonard and Hagler - the only two defeats in his 46-bout professional career.

"They're behind me now," he said at a news conference also attended by Roldan. "If Ray Leonard wants a fourth title, he needs me. I don't need him."

To meet the 160-pound middleweight limit, Hearns will have to lose about 14 pounds.

Roldan has won 61 of 67 bouts, including 41 by knockout.

The 30-year-old Argentinian was stopped by Hagler in a middleweight title bout in 1984 after knocking the champion down for the first time in his career.

Roldan has won 12 straight fights since that loss.

Roldan, speaking through an interpreter, said he isn't worried about Hearns' punching power.

"Outside the ring, I respect him a lot," he said. "But when he is in the ring, I am going to kill him."

The Hearns-Roldan fight will be held in a 10,000-seat outdoor arena at the Las Vegas Hilton.

Looking for sixth win of 1987...

Rodriguez is back for Open

FAIRFIELD, Conn. (AP) - It should have been good news for the other golfers that Chi Chi Rodriguez hadn't played for 10 days before arriving for the U.S. Senior Open. It isn't shaping up that way.

"I haven't played much lately because my mother died recently. But I played today for the first time in 10 days and I did very, very well," Rodriguez announced Tuesday after a practice round.

"The golf course was made for me. I saw it for the first time today and thought I was in heaven."

The news doesn't bode well for the other 149 golfers participating in the U.S. Senior Open, which begins Thursday on the hilly par-71, 6,559-yard Brooklawn Country Club course.

Rodriguez has won five tournaments this year on the PGA Seniors Tour, including four straight in one stretch. He also has two second-place finishes, a third, a fourth, a fifth and a seventh.

For his efforts, the native of Puerto Rico has pocketed $274,133.

Coming off rainy practice rounds, Rodriguez and Billy Casper both said the course, redesigned by A.W. Tillinghast in 1930, was in excellent shape.

Tillinghast, famous for his work on the Winged Foot, Baltusrol and San Francisco Golf Club courses, fashioned Brooklawn with "collecting" greens, which means the putting surfaces are dished in from the sides.

Although the greens are in good condition, their subtle twists will pose the biggest challenge for the players this week, Casper predicted.

"The scoring will depend on what happens on the greens and where the USGA places the flags," Casper said.

"They may be the most perfect greens I've seen in a long time. If you read it right and stroke it right, there's no way you should miss a putt."

The question of course readiness served as just another straight line for Rodriguez, well-known for his fun-loving approach to the game.

"The greens were perfect, the fairways were perfect," Rodriguez said, "and I don't know about the rough because I wasn't in it."

Rodriguez, who had moderate success on the regular PGA Tour, says he can't explain why he was reborn last year on the Seniors Tour.

He credits Jack Nicklaus for helping his confidence several years ago by inviting him, even though he was struggling, to join his golf club company.

"I used to see where not to hit it. Now I see where to hit it," he said.

More recently, he credits golf guru Bob Toski for helping him regain his putting stroke.

And there may be yet another reason for all this winning, Rodriguez added.

"I think maybe I died and was reincarnated as Arnold Palmer."

Lars Nilsen suspended

DALLAS (AP) - Lars Nilsen, who won the 1986 outdoor and 1987 indoor NCAA shot put championships, has been suspended from international competition by the Norwegian Sports Federation after testing positive for anabolic steroids, a newspaper reported today.

Nilsen, who will be a senior this fall at Southern Methodist University, could be declared ineligible to represent Norway in the 1988 Olympics, where he is a legitimate gold medal contender, The Dallas Morning News reported.

Junior Clinic slated soon

A Junior Clinic for boys and girls ages 8 through 18 will be held later this month at Snyder Country Club.

The clinic is scheduled for July 21-24. Entry fee is $50 per child and non-members are welcome.

Dave Foster, WTC golf coach, will be helping with the clinic.

Youngsters age 8-11 will participated from 8 a.m. until 10 a.m. The older group will learn from 10:30 a.m. until 12:30 p.m.

For more information on the clinic, call the country club Pro Shop at (915) 573-7101.

Owens' pleas unheeded; no carts in Senior Open

FAIRFIELD, Conn. (AP) - Golf carts were allowed in the U.S. Senior Open two years ago and P.J. Boatwright Jr., the USGA's executive director of rules and competition, didn't like it one bit.

"Aesthetically, it wasn't a pretty sight to see spectators, many of them older than the players, walking up hills while the golfers rode carts," he said. "It takes away a lot of the dignity, I think."

In the face of a protest by Charles Owens, the United States Golf Association and Boatwright stood firm on Tuesday in defending their decision not to allow carts in their championship events.

Owens, who has a fused left knee and ankle as well as back problems, said he would play in this week's U.S. Senior Open but probably would be on crutches by the time he finishes the first round.

Despite letters from his doctor and from four advocacy agencies for the handicapped, Owens, 57, said he was told by USGA officials that they would make no exception to allow him to use a golf cart this week on the hilly Brooklawn Country Club course.

"I don't think the USGA should discriminate against the handicapped," Owens said. "That's what they're doing. I'm handicapped, golf is my living and I need to be able to make a living."

Owens was told he couldn't use a cart even for a practice round, so he passed up the opportunity because he wanted to try to save his body for the opening round Thursday.

Carts are optional on the Seniors Tour, which is sanctioned by the PGA, and so Owens is able to play as many tournaments as he wants. But carts are not allowed by the USGA, which sanctions Open competition at all levels.

Hundreds chant 'tax, tax, tax' in state Capitol

AUSTIN (AP) — Hundreds of demonstrators who flocked to the Capitol are telling lawmakers they prefer higher taxes to reductions in vital state services.

A rally, organized by the Texas Industrial Areas Foundation and other community groups, drew a crowed estimated by organizers at 3,000 to the Capitol on Tuesday.

"The legacy that you leave should be greater than the heritage you receive," said Barry Jackson, a leader of Austin Interfaith. "We want them to be courageous. We're willing for them to tax us."

Speaker after speaker urged lawmakers to pass, and Gov. Bill Clements to sign, a state budget that wouldn't cut public education, higher education, indigent health care programs, child protective services and human service programs.

"Thank God you're here because the cause is important," San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros told the crowd. "The next 10 days will decide whether we go backward or forward. I say let's go forward.

"If there's enough money to buy foreign cars and Gucci shoes and apartment complexes, there's enough money to pay for the education of the children," Cisneros said.

"We want a future for these children," said Hector Rodriguez of Valley Interfaith. "We're here to do one thing — that's to make sure 150 representatives and 31 senators get the job done."

Also speaking to the rally were members of the Legislature, along with Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Attorney General Jim Mattox.

"It's time to help the needy, not the greedy," said Rep. Larry Evans, D-Houston, chairman of the Legislative Black Caucus. "Hell will freeze over before we go along with the cuts that have been proposed by our governor."

Rep. Al Luna, D-Houston, noted that Clements, a Republican, has been saying opinion polls show public opposition to higher taxes.

"Gov. Clements believes that most Texas citizens aren't willing to pay higher taxes," Luna said. "Gov. Clements needs to look down here (from his second-floor Capitol office) and see another Texas poll."

Hobby, who presides over a Senate that has passed a $39.5 billion budget that Clements says is larger than the state can afford, urged the crowd to "call on your representatives, call on your senators ... let them know how strongly you feel."

Mattox called the demonstrators "the voice of your children," and he said cuts in education spending would "make it impossible for me to defend our education system (in court). So keep fighting."

Private questioning affect public hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lt. Col. Oliver L. North's insistence on only limited private questioning is making the Iran-Contra committees' search for the truth more difficult and time-consuming, but not impossible.

Members of the congressional investigating committees say they are determined that all proper questions about North's activities will be asked and answered in as much time as that takes.

Although investigators originally said their intention was to confine North's testimony to just four days this week, it is now clear that more time will be required and that the questioning will spill over into next week for at least one, possibly two days.

At the same time, it appears that North and his lawyers have heeded advice — voiced by many committee members — to disengage from verbal combat with North's questioners, at least for the present.

These House and Senate members say they detected a definite shift in tone between the morning and afternoon sessions Tuesday, a shift from what they called almost arrogant hostility to a more businesslike approach.

In effect, they are saying North might be well served by eating a little humble pie.

It was "a horrible beginning," said Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, who added that a quick apparent shift in tactics by the Tuesday afternoon session to a "less combative approach" was "creating a much better impression."

AP analysis

When John Nields, chief counsel of the House Iran-Contra committee, in the afternoon moved off the subject of what President Reagan may have known about Iran-Contra connection and began to explore other issues, the pace of the questioning slowed and the rhythm appeared awkward.

Nields often introduced a new line of questioning by asking North to "give me a narrative."

Nields then listened closely and asked a series of questions relating to what he had just heard for the first time.

"It's making it much longer and much more difficult," said Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine.

"It just takes a lot longer to set the stage for the cross examination that will follow," said Sen. Paul Trible, R-Va. "But it makes no difference. We've got all the time in the world."

Clements unveils $408 million plan

AUSTIN (AP) — Prison officials say Gov. Bill Clements' proposed, $408 million prison construction plan could help solve the overcrowding problems that have closed Texas prisons to new admissions 13 times this year.

Clements' staff unveiled the proposal to build 19,000 new prison beds over the next four years to help ease crowding caused by court orders on prison population and increased convictions.

"It meets the objectives that we feel are absolutely necessary," said Jim Lynaugh, director of the Texas Department of Corrections.

"We must have additional capacity to house the inmates, and we must have the funds to comply with (court-ordered) construction. Both of these items are included in the plan," Lynaugh said.

Rider Scott, the governor's general counsel, said Clements' four-year plan should alleviate the prison crowding crisis.

"The Texas Department of Corrections was closed yesterday for the 13th time this year. We have received certification from the attorney general that we must declare an overcrowding crisis today and credit 'good time' to inmates. This situation must end," Scott said.

Unless new beds are added, he said, court-ordered reforms over the next two years actually would reduce the number of inmates the 38,000-prisoner system can hold.

"During the next two years, there may not be room for almost 10,000 felons who have been duly, legally convicted and sentenced by the courts because of a shortage of beds," Scott said.

The proposal offers several financing options, Scott said.

The construction program could be carried out with proceeds of bond sales, lease-purchase arrangements with county governments, contracts with private firms and from the state's general revenue fund.

The plan calls for building 10,950 beds over the next two years, with another 8,396 to be added in 1990-91.

Included would be four 500-bed private facilities, five trusty camps, two 2,250-bed prisons, four regional "reintegration centers" in urban areas, six shock probation centers and other facilities.

The Legislature's current special session would need to act on some phases of the proposal, Scott said. Lawmakers would have to approve legislation to allow counties to construct prisons, then lease them back to the state. Clements added that subject to the session's agenda last week.

About $67.7 million more in operating funds would be needed in 1988-89, but Scott said lawmakers already have approved $30 million of that total.

Lynaugh said the crowding crisis has had widespread effects, both on county jails which can't quickly send convicts to state prisons and on rehabilitation efforts with inmates who know they won't be confined long.

"We fully understand, as a law enforcement agency, the problems that we cause when each day, to take one inmate in, we must release from the criminal justice system one inmate," Lynaugh said. "When we close the doors, we understand that we back up the incoming inmates into the county jails.

"Inmates know, those with lightweight sentences, they will not be with us very long. And as a result, (they) are not inclined to actively participate in some of our programs," he added.

North's credibility remains at stake

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a full day of testimony before the congressional Iran-Contra committees, Lt. Col. Oliver L. North's credibility was still at stake, according to committee members.

"I think Colonel North came across as a witness who was, at least on the main issues, trying to tell the truth," Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga. said at the close of North's opening day of testimony Tuesday.

"Whether we will have the same judgment at the end of four days or not, I don't know," said Nunn.

Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, added, "I think all of us ought to withhold assessments of the candor of anyone until he has completed his testimony."

But Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, chairman of the Senate committee, said, "I would say that today, he was pretty honest."

"There were moments that surprised me because of what he said, and I thought he was rather honest, for example, in saying that someone always directed him, or ordered him to do whatever he did," Inouye said Tuesday night on a CBS-TV special report on the hearings.

"Secondly, the way he went after the attorney general, almost with a vengeance surprised me. I don't think a man who lies would do that," Inouye said.

Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., the vice chairman of the Senate committee, said: "There's an incentive for him on the major issues to tell the truth because the one thing he doesn't want to face is a perjury charge.

"I thought he was candid today on a number of issues," Rudman said on the CBS special, but added that he questioned North's explanation for why he shredded documents.

District views appraisal costs service, but Peveler said he did not favor this since bidding for the service in the past has not generated lower cost estimates.

The question of whether to collect taxes for the Ira and Hermleigh school systems also came up. Members agreed that if the schools wish the district to continue collecting the taxes, it will do so and charge them accordingly.

Board members were shown a preliminary and "very tentative" collection budget for 1988. The total budget was $10,984, down from the current $65,352 which included collecting taxes for Snyder ISD.

Peveler told the board that since they may not be collecting taxes as in previous years, the collection staff would be reduced. He said he plans to move some of his collecting personnel into appraisal work and he anticipates reductions in the appraisal staff.

By the end of the year, Peveler told the board, one less person might be on the appraisal staff and a year from now might see another reduction in staff by one person.

Board members were also asked if they wanted the appraisal district to join the Real Estate Board at a fee of $156 per year. They declined.

Those attending the meeting were Reed, Mairl McFaul, Ross Blanchard, Pete Heser and Dwaine McWilliams.

Indictment here leads to arrest

Police officers jailed a 19-year-old Snyder man indicted by a Scurry County grand jury Tuesday night.

Tharron Brown of 4001 Ave. R had been indicted for one count of burglary of a vehicle Monday in connection with the burglary of a car owned by Darnell Robertson of Snyder in September 1986.

He was picked up by local police at 11:55 p.m. Tuesday ad remains in the Scurry County Jail in lieu of bond set at $5,000.

City officers also cleared a recent criminal mischief complaint Tuesday evening with the arrest of a 39-year-old Snyder man.

That arrest was made in connection with a misdemeanor vandalism report filed by Bennie Jones of Snyder on June 30 who had reported tires cut on her car.

In other action Tuesday, police jailed one man on warrants issued for failure to pay traffic citations issued by the Department of Public Safety.

More physicists must be hired

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A group of Southern economic development specialists says the South must overcome a lack of intellectual capital to improve the region's chances of landing a federal super collider project.

The Southern Growth Policies Board meeting here Tuesday concluded that Southern states will have to hire more particle physicists to make the region more attractive to the U.S. Department of Energy's planned project.

The board — created by the legislatures of 12 states to encourage economic development — also urged the governors of those states to support a Southern state that becomes a finalist in the selection process.

Project leader disappointed at San Angelo backing out

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — The project manager of the West Texas commission that is trying to lure the "super collider" project to Garden City expressed disappointment that the city of San Angelo has backed out of the maverick effort.

Thane Akins, project manager of the Garden City Superconducting Super Collider Commission, said, however, that the San Angelo City Council "doesn't necessarily represent the opinions of some of the San Angelo members of the commission."

San Angelo's City Council unanimously voted Tuesday to support the state's official choices of sites near Amarillo and Dallas for the atom-smashing project. San Angelo, with the council's decision, joins Odessa in backing out of the Garden City project. Odessa cancelled its push for the Garden City site last month.

Meanwhile, the two cities still left in the Garden City Superconducting Super Collider task force, Midland and Big Spring, agreed Tuesday to pay $50,000 for a Washington-based engineering firm, ICF Technology, to help prepare their proposal.

Akins said he doesn't think the independent bid is going against the state and that the Garden City site is the most economical.

ICF Director Tom Hall said his firm will deal mainly with the proposal's packaging, and that a greater emphasis will be put on the socioeconomic conditions of the cities surrounding the Garden City site, such as the educational and research amenities available.

The commission "still has confidence we will get a fair, technical review" from the U.S. Department of Energy, Akins said.

The DOE project, expected to employ 2,500 people, became the focus this spring of intense competition among more than 40 states, including 14 potential sites in Texas.

The Texas National Research Laboratory Commission in May chose sites near Dallas and Amarillo. The submission deadline to the DOE is Aug. 3.

The four-city Garden City SSC Commission board of directors — from Odessa, Midland, San Angelo and Big Spring — met June 8 to decide whether to independently submit a site to the DOE. That proposal failed by a vote of 13-10.

But Chairman Ralph McLaughlin and Akins resurrected the bid soon after when they discovered apparent violations in commission bylaws concerning meeting notices.

On June 24, the group changed its mind and voted to send an independent proposal to the DOE.

Representatives of the sparsely populated, oil-dependent counties surrounding Garden City finally helped turn the tide of votes toward a national push. The final vote was 39-34 in favor of submitting an independent bid.

The men of 1787

Their deeds outlived their names

By Tom Tiede

PHILADELPHIA (NEA) — Not long ago, one of the nation's largest newspapers carried an editorial cartoon that featured Thomas Jefferson writing the U.S. Constitution. That's wrong, of course. Jefferson was living in France, as an American diplomat, when the venerable document was created.

But the mistake is not so silly as it seems. There has always been a good deal of popular confusion regarding the Constitution. Even now, 200 years after the laws of the land were framed in convention, many Americans still have only a vague notion of how the whole matter came to pass.

That wanting extends to the participants as well. Most of the people who wrote the Constitution have been long forgotten. Everyone clearly remembers the likes of Jefferson, John Adams and John Hancock laboring over the Declaration of Independence, but the constitutional machinations? Not as much.

Yes, George Washington was involved. Benjamin Franklin and Alexander Hamilton also had a part. Yet most of the heroes of the Revolution either could not or would not attend the lawmaking assembly, and a few, like Tom Paine, were too radical to be invited; that left the ranks to the mere mortals.

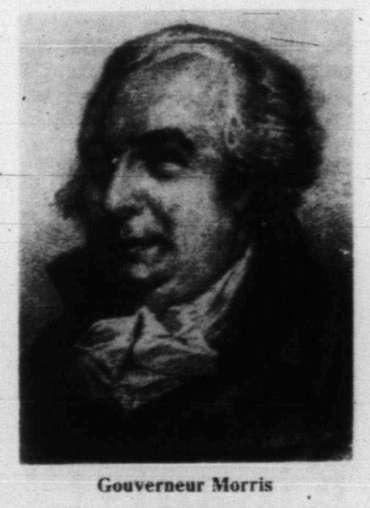
We the People

Framers of the Constitution

Gunning Bedford helped write the Constitution, remember him? And someone named Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer. There was John Rutledge, who had once been a virtual dictator in South Carolina; Richard Spaight, who would be killed in a duel; and William Blount, the first man to be expelled from the new Senate.

In sum, there were 55 participants. All men, to be certain. And the group represented 12 of the 13 states. Twenty-nine delegates were college graduates, the average age was 34; and they were, in turn, soldiers, merchants, planters, doctors, teachers, speculators, lawyers and judges.

It should be added that there were no common folk. The men who invented the Constitution may not be household names today, but they were the aristocracy of their time. Snobs, if you will. They were, to a name, propertied and respected, and most of them came to Philadelphia with power and family money.



Gouverneur Morris

They came in the spring of 1787, for the most part. The convention was a bit vague even then, and some of the delegates straggled in over a period of weeks. The first meeting was held on May 14 in the Pennsylvania State House, now Independence Hall, and every session took place behind closed doors.

The secrecy was said to be necessary to promote open and unfettered debate. The delegates did not want to be gossip in the streets. They drew the curtains, posted guards, prohibited loitering, and, in so doing, they helped to regulate themselves to the Lethean edges of the country's history.

Five examples of the participants:

• Robert Morris of Pennsylvania. He was one of two men at the convention (the other was Robert Sherman) to sign the Declaration of Independence, the Articles of Confederation and the Constitution. He was also one of the richest citizens of the time, though he was eventually jailed for debt and died broke.

• Jonathan Dayton of New Jersey. He was, at 26, the youngest delegate at the Philadelphia convention and destined to be shamed by scandal. He apparently joined Aaron Burr in the scheme to build a sovereign empire in the Southwest, and died an enigma, in Ohio near the town later named in his honor.

• Gouverneur Morris of Pennsylvania. He was a witty, haughty businessman and was instrumental in giving the Constitution its literary style (dry). He was also something of a scamp; he did nothing to discourage the story that he had broken and lost a leg during an emergency leap from a lady's boudoir.

• William Few of Georgia. He was one of a handful of self-made men in attendance. He was born on a frontier farm; his formal education consisted of one year in primary school. But he learned the law by reading and became a member of the Continental Congress and director of a pair of New York banks.

• George Wylie of Virginia. He was an educator and an attorney. He was also the author of Virginia's constitution, in which Negroes were then prohibited from testifying in court trials. Wylie was poisoned to death by a nephew, and, ironically, the only witness was a household servant who was black.

These men were among 39 delegates who stayed for the entire Philadelphia convention. And on Sept. 17 the group produced a 10-to-12 page constitution of about 6,500 words. They argued everything from monarchy to mob rule during the while, and settled largely on a series of republican compromises.

That product has since won respect and envy around the world. It's been called a "miracle," and a "beacon," and a "precious depository." William Gladstone, once prime minister of England, said "the American Constitution is the most wonderful work ever struck off ... by the brain and purpose of man."

Yet the men who struck it are remembered with less enthusiasm. And, with some exceptions, their fate might be exemplified by a delegate named John Lansing. He was a lawyer from New York who walked out of a Manhattan hotel one evening in 1829, vanished and was never heard from again.

Old Philadelphia

Philadelphia was the largest and most cosmopolitan city in America when the constitutional delegates met in convention in 1787. The city was a century old, the streets were cleaned and lighted at night, and the 40,000 residents were leaders in science, medicine, commerce and culture.

But the modern plague of urban civilization was not yet known. Ladies and gentlemen saw no need for vulgar haste. Many of the delegates had pressing business elsewhere, but the custom was to remain relaxed. There were no telegrams, no railroads and scant concern to race the timepiece.

Some historians think this leisurely pace contributed to the quality of the Constitution. The men took the time to do it right. They met at the State House in Philadelphia (later to be known as Independence Hall) up to seven hours a day, for nearly four months, holidays excepted, so, as George Washington put it, they might "raise a standard to which the wise and honest can repair."

North is putting on a riveting show; Reagan not watching

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan may not be watching, but Lt. Col. Oliver North has riveted Washington's workday attention like nobody since John Dean aired Richard Nixon's dirty linen on nationwide television 14 years ago.

From the Cafe Capris on Capitol Hill to Clyde's in Georgetown, from the U.S. Courthouse to the Pentagon, bureaucrats and busboys alike huddled around the tube to witness North's break with silence after the seven most tortured months of Reagan's presidency.

"There are better ways of spending an afternoon," said the colonel during a recess.

But at the Defense Department, chief spokesman Robert Sims declared at his midday briefing: "We should finish this quickly, so we can get back to the television."

Reagan, who has long pronounced himself eager to hear the full story of how and why the profits of arms sales to Iran were diverted to Nicaraguan rebels, was not watching when his former National Security Council aide finally appeared before Congress.

Though the president's schedule appeared light, "he just hasn't had a chance to watch television," said spokesman Marlin Fitzwater. Vice President George Bush did tune in, as did Attorney General Edwin Meese III.

At the U.S. Courthouse, clerks and lawyers on lunch breaks huddled around a television set installed especially for the event. Independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh, who opposed North's appearance before Congress under a grant of limited immunity, allowed only a few members of his staff to watch.

Walsh explained that most of his team is under orders to avoid any press or broadcast accounts of the congressional hearings, in an attempt to stem defense claims that that's where they got their leads.

Under the immunity agreement, the special prosecutor may pursue leads that his staff develops independently but may not use information available only from the hearings.

At the Pentagon, occupants of nearly every office, from privates to generals, were working within earshot of a television or radio. "Who do you think is winning?" one naval officer asked a reporter who dropped by his office to discuss events in the Persian Gulf. "I think Ollie is."

At Clyde's, a popular restaurant in the shopping area of Georgetown, employees avidly watched the morning session of North's testimony, but their interest wasn't shared by tourists who arrived for lunch. "We had the Kiwanis in, and they were talking about voting in women. They didn't want to hear about Ollie North," said manager Hank Hemmendinger.

Thomas Osborne, a bartender at the Cafe Capris, watched along with a handful of staffers from the Senate and the nearby Heritage Foundation, the conservative think tank. After listening to some argument among his customers, he declared: "Whether he broke the law is too convoluted for me to figure out. But I think I'd like him for a neighbor."

Kiwanis Club votes to let women join

WASHINGTON (AP) — The overwhelming vote by Kiwanis International to accept women as members marks the end of an era for the nation's major service organizations, but don't look for an overnight influx of Kiwanis club females.

"I think it'll be gradual," incoming Kiwanis International president Tony Kaiser said Tuesday after the group, in its third try in three years, voted to end a 72-year tradition of limiting members to business and professional men.

"Many of our clubs and members are just so ... comfortable with the male membership that it will take them a little while to adjust their thinking," Kaiser explained.

The membership gave every indication of enthusiasm for the new rule, with well over two-thirds of the 5,636 delegates to the Kiwanis' annual convention rising noisily to their feet when asked who supported the amendment. Cheers filled the Washington Convention Center when the result was announced and a paper balloting procedure was declared unnecessary.

"I was surprised," acknowledged outgoing Kiwanis president Frank DiNoto, who presided over the session. "It was overwhelming."

Only 47 percent of the delegates to last year's convention in Houston supported the change.

Fleas require major attack

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Do you have a remedy for fleas? My son gets them playing with the dogs. His arms and legs are full of bites, and small bumps have appeared in his hair.

DEAR READER — Fleas can be a real problem. Although they prefer to feed on animals, they will be attracted to humans in a pinch. Fleas can live for long periods in carpeting and upholstery without a host.

In addition to de-fleaing your dog, you will have to fumigate the house. While the flea bomb is working indoors, take the children outside, comb their hair with a fine-toothed comb and remove any fleas on them. Once the fleas on your dogs and in the house are killed, your son should be OK.

DEAR DR. GOTT — How do I go about finding a doctor to insert a balloon in my stomach for weight loss? Does it work?

DEAR READER — The balloon treatment for obesity is still experimental. It is being performed in some medical centers. Ask your doctor's advice. He or she can refer you, if necessary. However, there are safer and less expensive ways to loss weight that might be more appropriate for you. To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report, WINNING THE BATTLE OF THE BULGE, which tells you how to lose weight wisely — and keep it off. Others who want a copy should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to ask for WINNING THE BATTLE OF THE BULGE.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I heard that doctors can do a test on infants which shows if the infant is a potential alcoholic. If doctors can recognize the missing enzyme or whatever it is, why can't it be replaced? Would this help the addiction?

DEAR READER — Although some people believe that alcoholism is a genetic or enzymatic disease, no scientifically valid blood test is generally available to detect the condition. Some investigators have suggested that alcoholics do not metabolize alcohol in the same way that non-alcoholics do. However, much work needs to be performed in checking this hypothesis before tests can be devised to identify potential alcoholics. Such tests would be extremely valuable in identifying the disease before it produced behavioral problems, but, alas, we are still a long way from having this ability.

Convicted killer executed Tuesday

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Convicted killer John Russell Thompson, with his father and a brother watching only a few feet away, was put to death early today for fatally shooting a 70-year-old San Antonio woman during a robbery 10 years ago.

Thompson, 32, had no final statement and died quietly at 12:20 a.m., nine minutes after the lethal drugs began flowing through his veins.

"He did not want anyone to think he was discourteous, but he wanted his last words to be with God and not with anybody here," said Attorney General Jim Mattox, who spoke with Thompson as the convict was being strapped to the death chamber gurney.

He never acknowledged the presence of his father, brother or other friends and relatives who quietly watched as he was put to death.

The former laborer from Cibolo contended the May 21, 1977, shooting death of Mary Kneupper was an accident. Mrs. Kneupper was killed during a daylight robbery of the San Antonio mini-storage warehouse business she operated with her husband.

The execution came after state and federal courts Tuesday rejected legal motions for a stay and Gov. Bill Clements refused to grant a reprieve.

In an unusual move earlier Tuesday, the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles met for a second time this week to consider whether Thompson was entitled to a reprieve or commutation.
