Special Grand Jury Considers Wm. Hamm Kidnaping Case; More Ransom Money Found

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS: The National Whirligig

WASHINGTON By George Durso Metered—

Perpetrating bituminous operators are here trying to bring order out of chaos in their industry.

Privately those in charge of National Recovery are about convinced the British system of controlled production will have to be applied to our bituminous industry if it is to survive.

Such a move would be right down the operators' alley. A lot of them have been wanting regional allocations of production since 1930 and before.

They are working on a plan of regional division with a consolidated selling agency in each. Then every mine would get a slice of production based on regional consumption.

In at least one field—the Appalachian—operators representing 70 per cent of produced tonnage had such a setup ready to go in operation last April.

Under the British system an operator would know exactly how much coal he could mine. A miner would know pretty definitely how many days a year he was going to work.

TODAY and TOMORROW

By WALTER LIPPMANN

Austria and the Nazis

Nearly three months have passed since Herr Hitler, speaking in the Reichstag, bowed to the pressure of a united world opinion and declared that "Germany does not wish to take any other path than that recognized as justified by the treaties themselves." Since that time, although the Nazi domestic propaganda has continued to be unrestrainedly militarist in character, the Nazi foreign policy confronting France and Poland has been unprovocative. Herr Hitler has been consolidating the revolution in Germany and seeking to check and suppress the more strongly anti-capitalistic impulses of his own followers. German foreign policy has been in a state of suspended animation, and a diplomatic truce has reigned in Europe.

DELICIOUS CEREAL OVERCOMES COMMON CONSTIPATION

ALL-BRAN Provides "Bulk," Vitamin B and Iron

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN meets a basic need of the American diet. It supplies "bulk"—so helpful in correcting common constipation. In seven years, ALL-BRAN has won millions of satisfied users.

New tests show added reasons for the success of ALL-BRAN. Laboratory experiments prove that, in addition to "bulk," it provides vitamin B to help tone the intestinal tract.

The headaches, loss of appetite and energy that so often result from constipation can be overcome by his pleasant cereal. How much better than using pills and drugs.

ALL-BRAN is mild. Its "bulk" is such like that of lettuce. Within the body, it absorbs moisture and forms a soft mass, which gently clears the intestines of wastes.

Two tablespoons daily are sufficient to overcome most types of constipation. Chronic cases, with every meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Another benefit of ALL-BRAN is that it has twice as much blood-building iron as an equal amount by weight of beef liver.

Serve as a cereal, or use in cooking. Tempting recipes on the red-and-green package. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

That truce has now been broken by what is in effect a revolutionary agitation, stimulated from Germany, against the Austrian government. Austria presents the most likely opportunity of territorial expansion open to the Nazis. The French frontier is impregnable by virtue of the French army. The Polish frontier is almost as impregnable. On neither of these frontiers is there any possibility of revision except at the end of a victorious war. But Austria is different. Although the independence of Austria is guaranteed by the peace treaties, Austria could be absorbed into Germany without outright violation of the legal terms of the treaty. The effective absorption of Austria could be brought about by a Nazi revolution in Austria. If such a revolution succeeded, Austria, without being legally incorporated in the Reich, would, in fact, be governed from Berlin.

The Nazis have been making great efforts to bring about the revolution in Austria, and their efforts have now brought them into a diplomatic conflict, openly, with Great Britain and France, with Italy somewhat less dramatically, and tacitly, we may be sure, with the Little Entente.

The procedure by which a nation is conquered by revolution from within rather than by open military aggression is, of course, not a new invention. The Nazis could cite many precedents. We, for example, settled the status of Panama by this method. During the war the Allies brought Greece to their side by this method. They used it, too, to arouse the Arabs against the Turkish Empire. The Communists have tried to use it whenever they look seriously at the purpose of the Third International. Japan has been using a variant of this method in setting up the so-called independent state of Manchukuo. And it is reasonably safe to assume that if the Nazis overthrow the Dollfus government in Vienna, Austria would be just as independent and no more independent than Manchukuo. That is to say, it would have no independence whatever. Now, against this method of internal aggression neither the traditional body of international law nor the new peace machinery of the League and Kellogg pact provides a clear defense. The treaties recently negotiated by Russia with

ACCIDENT DELAYS OCEAN HOP

The wheels of the plane in which the Australian aviator, Capt. Charles T. P. her neighbors go further than any others in attempting to outlaw this kind of aggression, but they have yet to be interpreted and enforced, and they do not, of course, apply to the German-Austrian case.

The problem presented to Britain and France comes down to this: How can they prevent a type of aggression not clearly outlawed, though if it succeeds, it will, in fact, violate the intention of the treaties and open up an era of enormous tension in Central Europe? For there can be no two opinions about the profound disturbance which would follow the absorption of Austria into Hitler's Reich. It would revolutionize the treaty structure, since it would then be evident that the Nazis had found a way to make a breach in it. No man in Europe would henceforth believe that such a success would fail to stimulate the Nazis to look for new worlds to conquer.

This accounts for the firmness with which Great Britain has set herself against the Austrian adventure. It is not because British opinion, or, for that matter, opinion elsewhere, is opposed to the reunion of the German peoples. It is that a reunion brought about by revolutionary aggression from within is a peculiarly dangerous form of aggression, especially when it would constitute a victory for the militarist spirit. Britain, France and Italy prevented an Austrian economic union with Germany when Dr. Brüning was the German Chancellor. If now they permitted a political union under Herr Hitler they would have demonstrated to Germany that they would yield to reason. They would have vindicated the Nazi propaganda and abdicated their influence in Central Europe. The Little Entente and Poland would know then that they must look to their own military force alone to protect themselves.

Cool, Crisp Salads Aid Meals When The Thermometer Soars

Cool, crisp salads have appetizing appeal when the thermometer soars. Salads may be greatly varied and they should occupy an important place in warm weather meals. The more substantial may be the main course for luncheon or supper; the dainty, appetizing combinations of fresh fruits in salads may take the place of desserts, and those of seasonable vegetables and greens with flavorful dressings should be generously woven into every day's menu. Recipes below are for salads of varied types:

Country Salad—3 cups diced tomato or other cold meat, 2 hard cooked eggs, 1 cup shredded cabbage, 1 small minced onion, and 1-2 cupfuls Fresh Cucumber Pickles, diced finely. Moisten with 1-2 cup Mayonnaise Salad Dressing. Mix well and season with salt, pepper and 1-2 teaspoon Prepared Mustard. Chill and serve in deep, crisp lettuce cups, garnishing each serving with a slice of Fresh Cucumber Pickle.

Molded Olive and Nut Salad—Dissolve a package of lemon flavored gelatin in 2 cupfuls boiling water and when slightly thickened, fold in 1-2 cup chopped nuts and 1-4 cup Stuffed Spanish Olives, sliced. Pour into individual molds, chill and serve in nests of lettuce. Serve with Mayonnaise Salad Dressing or Salad Cream.

Luncheon Salad—Heat 1 medium can Cream of Tomato Soup to the boiling point. Add 1 1-2 teaspoons plain gelatin that has been soaked for five minutes in 1-4 cup cold water. Add 2 packages soft, white cream cheese and 1-2 cup Mayonnaise Salad Dressing. Mix thoroughly, using a Dover beater. When chilled and beginning to thicken, add 1-2 cup diced celery, 1 green pepper chopped, and 1-4 cup Stuffed Spanish Olives, sliced. Mold and serve in lettuce nests, garnishing with slices of olive. This recipe serves 10.

Golden Gate Salad—Mix 1 cup honey ball melon or cantaloupe cubes, 1 cup pineapple cubes, 1 cup fresh peach cubes and 1 cup diced marshmallows. Chill fruit and moisture with Mayonnaise Salad Dressing. Heap generously in halves of chilled cantaloupe or small honey ball melon, from which part of the center has been removed. Over top, place a mound of whipped cream into which has been beaten current jelly. For each cup of whipped cream, use 2 table-spoons strained current jelly. Serve in nests of crisp lettuce.

'Obedience' Subject Of Melvin Wise

Open Air Revival Of Church Of Christ Drawing Crowds

Melvin J. Wise, who is doing the preaching in the Church of Christ revival, spoke to a splendid crowd last night. The meeting is being conducted in the open air, on the corner of Fourth and Johnson streets. Mr. Wise is to speak tonight at 8:15 o'clock on this subject: "Obedience." Last night he spoke on "Our Standard of Authority in Religion." He said in part:

"We are living in a day of standards with reference to material things. You go into the grocery store to purchase a pound of beans and you expect 16 ounces in that pound, weighed upon scales that have been inspected by the government. You walk into a dry goods store and purchase a yard of material, and you expect 36 inches in that yard. And why? Because these are accepted standards. We need standards in every activity of life, otherwise chaos and anarchy would be the result. But of all the standards needed in every phase of life, the most neglected—the most useful, is a standard in religion."

"One man may testify that his conscience should be the standard—that we should go according to our feelings. But feelings vary with individuals as well as with the same individuals; hence we would by that way, have about as many standards as we have individuals. Solomon says: 'There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death.' Prov. 14:12. Again he says: 'He that trusteth in his own heart is a fool.' Prov. 28:26. Why is he a fool? Because his feelings can be deceived. When Paul persecuted the church prior to his conversion, he really thought that he was doing the right thing. Acts 26:9. When the report came to Jesus that his son Joseph was dead, he mourned as bitterly as if Joseph had been dead. But Joseph was not dead, Jacob's feelings were merely deceived."

"Another man suggests that one should be religiously, what the majority are. But what majority? 'The majority in the world,' he says. In that case we would be religious for the majority in the world are not religious at all. Matt. 7:12-14, Matt. 23:14. But the advocate of this theory suggests the majority in your own country. In that case we would still be irreligious, for only 10 out of every 25 are religious in America. 'But the majority in the state in which you live,' he says. In that case if you lived out in the state of Utah, you would have to submit to become a Mormon. Then the majority in the community in which you live. But in that case you would be forced to change your religion every time you changed your community."

"Another man suggests that we should be religiously what our parents are. Follow the example of mother and dad. But what if mother and dad are divided religiously as is often the case? Jesus said: 'He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me.' Matt. 10:37. Paul was the most zealous follower of his father's religion that I know anything about, but when the Lord appeared to him on the way from Jerusalem to Damascus, he didn't contend for his parents' religion, but he said: 'Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?' In our religious conviction, it should not be a matter of what father or mother says, but what does the Lord say."

"Another man suggests that the preachers, who give their lives to the study of the Bible, should come together and agree on a standard. Attend pep rally Methodist church tonight—adv."

The most pleasant spot in summer often is the porch or lawn. Then it is delightful to serve the meal plate-style and carry it to the porch or yard. Probably most of the foods are chilled and can be served, as readily, out of doors as within. All of the main course may be on the plate. The dessert, unless frozen, and the beverage, should be taken out before the meal is served and placed within easy reach on a convenient table.

The following menus for such suppers have been planned with a view to ease of serving as well as nutritive value and attractiveness:

- Cold Baked Cottage Ham*
- Oven-Baked Beans (Use ready-to-serve beans)
- Lettuce and Tomato Salad with Special Dressing*
- Buttered Rolls
- Frozen Peanut Cream with Chocolate Sauce
- Iced Tea with Mint

- Mexican Spaghetti*
- Fresh Fruit Salad
- Buttered Rolls
- Ice Cream with Butterscotch Sauce or Coffee

* Indicates that recipes are given below.

Cold Baked Cottage Ham: Soak Cottage Ham over night in water. Pour water off. Cover ham with cold water and bring to boiling point slowly. Simmer until tender. Stick 1 dozen whole cloves in cooked ham, pour over sauce, cover side of ham with bread crumbs and bake, basting with liquid syrup. Bake until delicately brown. Serve hot or cold.

Special Dressing: Mix 1-2 cup Mayonnaise Salad Dressing, 1-4 cup finely chopped celery or red radishes, 1-4 cup sliced Stuffed Spanish Olives, 1-4 cup finely chopped nuts. Chill and serve over cups of lettuce filled with small leaves of lettuce or shredded lettuce.

Beer Padlock Drive Fails In Fort Worth

DALLAS (UP)—The much advertised padlock campaign against beer dispensers here has apparently collapsed.

At Amarillo, Federal Judge James C. Wilson in effect ruled that the federal district court had no jurisdiction over the sale of 3.2 per cent beer. He issued a permanent padlock order against an establishment operated here by Ernest Gamble on the grounds that the place was a public nuisance.

An attorney representing Gamble emphasized here today that Judge Wilson said the padlock order was clearly not for beer sale violations.

District Attorney Clyde Eastus of Fort Worth, who issued an ultimatum to beer dispensers here last week—quit sales or get closed up—is in Washington and assistants in his office have no instructions in regard to the campaign.

NATIONAL RECOVERY

Is Wholly Dependent Upon An Increased Volume Of Business!

ADVERTISING

Is The Only Way To Get Your Share Of The Increased Buying Power Made Possible By Higher Wages and Increased Employment!

The Blanket Code, Road Building, Industrial Control and the cotton and wheat bonus will put billions of dollars into the pockets of millions of people. However, the success of all these reconstruction measures depends on the INCREASED CONSUMPTION OF MERCHANDISE.

To get people to spend that money intelligently, to get them to put it back into circulation and to keep it circulating will mean the complete success of the program and the restoration of our nation to prosperity and happiness.

Already, in Big Spring and the rest of the nation, there is a marked improvement in wholesale and retail business. Everyone is enthused and hopeful. But the real success depends upon a continuance of this improvement..... and only adequate advertising can supply the needed stimulus to keep it improving.

The Big Spring merchant and manufacturer is more interested and dependent upon the improvement of business in this territory. Therefore he should plan his advertising with the thought in mind of getting the most returns possible per dollar invested.

The Big Spring Daily Herald offers the local merchant and manufacturer the maximum of coverage and results at a minimum cost. A consistent advertising schedule of appropriate space in The Daily Herald will not only solve his individual selling problems, but will add substantially in the general upturn of business.

CHAPTER 39

Several days passed. Mary again worked late with Foster on the evening after she had driven out to the Colonial Inn with Frazier for dinner; but Foster did not invite her to dinner with him. He murmured something about an engagement and let Mary go home alone.

He had said to her on the day when he returned from Blair's office, "I saw your sister this morning, Mary. I didn't know she was working in New York. You always talked as if she stayed at home."

"Oh, yes, Bonnie just went to work for Jameson Blair a few weeks ago. It is her first place to work in New York."

"Bonnie—cute name," he mused. "She is a beautiful child, Mary, and doesn't look strong enough to be commuting from away over in Jersey. You shouldn't allow her to do it, knowing what a strain it is. You had to give it up, finally, you know."

"Mother and I tried to dissuade her, but she would try it." She thought, "I made the trip for four years, and I didn't have to come to New York to live because I couldn't stand the commuting, though I did get most awfully tired of it. But if he can't see that let him think whatever he pleases."

"Plucky little kid, all right," was Foster's comment, still thinking of Bonnie's guileless smile and extravagant compliments.

That week Mrs. Vaughn was taken ill, and had to send for Mary. The trip home seemed interminable to Mary, now unaccustomed to the long ordeal and anxious to reach her mother. Mom must be seriously ill, to have summoned her in the middle of the day, she concluded.

The doctor was calling when Mary arrived. She flew up the stairs and stood fearfully at the door of Mom's room for a moment before she pushed it open and entered. Her mother's face on the white pillow seemed to Mary as gray as the tumbled hair about it.

With a little cry of dismay, she had flung herself on her knees beside the bed, her strong, eager arms almost lifting her mother off the bed.

"Mom, darling—what is it? Why didn't you call me sooner?" Tears choked her words. "Doctor Beaman, what is wrong, please?"

The doctor was brusquely cheerful. "Oh, nothing so serious now. A cold, and gripe. But I suspect that isn't all. She's tired and lonely, Mary. Too bad you girls can't be at home more. I think if you can, you had better stay here for a few days and get her cheered up. Pneumonia could set in if we're not careful. You're the best nurse I know for her—and the best medicine. I'll leave a prescription for two to be filled. Think you could manage to be home for a few days?"

"Why, of course, if Mom needs me, Dr. Beaman. You know I wouldn't work in New York if I didn't need the money. It isn't my choice, but I can earn more there."

"I know," he nodded kindly. He had known the family ever since the twins arrived, when he had officiated. "Your mother tells me that Bonnie works in the city, too. I didn't suppose she could make more money there than she could right here in Paterson, with little experience."

"No," Mary defended her, "but positions are so difficult to find now, that she decided a little was better than nothing."

"Of course," agreed the doctor. "Well, you girls get busy and cheer Mom up a bit, now," he smiled at the woman whose eyes already were alight with the joy of seeing Mary. He left instructions for the patient and departed.

"Pshaw," Mom declared, when he had gone. "He don't know so much as he thinks he does. I'm not sick, only a cold that I couldn't seem to shake off. Don't you go staying home now and maybe losing your job just for me, Mary."

"Don't you worry about that, dear. I think I need a vacation, myself, for that matter. It won't hurt Foster to do without me for a few days, so we shall both have a rest and a good visit while you get well again." She was already busy with putting the room to rights, smoothing the bed clothes and bringing Mom a drink of water.

She went downstairs and telephoned to Foster, who was kind and reassuring. He would do the best he could without her, and she was to remain at home until her mother was quite recovered.

With a sigh of relief, Mary turned from the telephone. It was a sigh of weariness, too. Weariness of body, mind and soul. She felt more than physical fatigue, for it was the utter exhaustion of grief and tangled thoughts. It was good to be home and remote from the struggle. A few quiet days with Mom would restore her mental balance and physical strength.

She looked about her. The house showed evidences of Mom's very unusual neglect. A box of sweaters hung limply over one chair, a cap lay in a corner, soiled dishes were stacked in the sink and little gray dust balls rolled gleefully around the bare floors that bordered the rugs.

Mary first went to the drug store and had the prescriptions filled. She brought home oranges and lemons, gave Mom a glass of cool orange juice and made a pitcher of lemonade for her to keep beside her, so she would have plenty of water to drink. Then she changed from her office jersey to a house dress, and delved into the task before her.

By the time the twins burst into the house and almost strangled her with their "hallo" greetings, she had had the house spic and span and a steaming dinner ready for them.

"Gee, Mary, it's good to have you home," Ted declared. "Aw, say, why did you go to live in New York? Ain't it had enough to work there every day, without staying there nights, too?"

"Yes, Ted, I don't know why I did leave. But I won't again. I'm staying home for a few days until Mom gets well; then when I do go back to work, I shall come home every night like I used to."

The two almost choked her again in their delight. Tim said soberly: "Mom ain't like herself when you are gone, Mary. Gee, this house has been like a well, like a tomb, these few days. Mom felt so bad, and Mary comforted him while he bravely sniffed them away."

Bonnie did not come home for dinner that night, so Mary had a long, comfortable evening with her mother.

"You are not going to work so hard, when you are well again," she told her, sitting beside the bed and stroking Mom's hand affectionately. "No more sewing. It is too hard on your nerves. Trying to please everyone, and working over tedious seams and materials. I'll make up the difference some way. And I'm coming back home to stay."

"Now you will do something to make a baby of me because I have a little cold. I'll be all right in a day or two and you just let me go on my own way. Don't I know it's a lot better for you not to make that trip back and forth?"

"It is, in some ways. But I get homesick, too, and I need you more than I can tell you, or more than I ever realized. I am coming back to stay with you a ways."

Her mother smiled, but there was a glow around her face, and there by those words, "I need you." There are no sweeter words to a mother whose children are grown and have become so sufficient. "I hope not," she said gently. "You will have to forget what's past, Mary, and make your life over. I've had to do that. We all have to, some time. You will learn to make the changes easier as you get older. None of life is easy if we live and live and work like it is meant to be should. Even the ones who try to get out of the trouble and work, have to face problems some time. But you're not that way, Mary. You take life as it comes and struggle with it. You will win out."

Mary sighed and said resentfully: "It never seems to be that way, Mom. I have so often thought that those who sit back idly and refuse to learn to do everything, seem to live so easily and always get done for them what they can't do. While the people who do everything with all the ardent strength they possess and learn to do anything that is expected of them, have to do not only for themselves but for the people who are willing to let others do for them. They are the ones who have so much expected of them, and the helpless ones get all the sympathy." She thought of Bonnie, of her boastful helpfulness, of Foster's sympathy and concern for her, of his dependence upon herself, who was only made of flesh and blood the same as Bonnie was.

Mom shook her head thoughtfully. "That is what I once thought, too. But I've learned it isn't right, and that you get out of life just what you put into it. I have found that anger and heart-break and pain that is kept hidden, even though it almost bursts you with the hurt, will bring you more sympathy and admiration than tears and reproaches and resentments will. Tears will more often awake the anger of others than they will bring you pity."

Mary could not quite agree with her mother's philosophy that night; but months later, she came to recognize its truth, as the wisdom of all mothers eventually claims its appreciation. Looking back, then, Mary also realized that those few days at home with Mom were the climax of the situation in which she and her whole family were involved.

Championship matches at Cincinnati. Moreland, suffering noticeably from an injured knee, was one of five who qualified at the sectional play for Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma here yesterday. Play was over the Brook Hollow golf club course.

The Dallas man, shooting a 147 for the 36 holes, however, was not in the spotlight. Honors for the day went to Leland Hamman of Waco, who registered from his old home course at Paris.

Hamman, playing superb golf, scored a sub-par 132. Hamman, smallest of the 18 qualifiers, shot seven birdie on the 36 holes. He came to the last green needing par to win medalist honors. He was in two and two-putted for his par.

In addition to Hamman and Moreland, bertha were won by Jack Munger, who, playing over his home course, turned in a 140; Reynolds Smith, Dallas city champion, with a 146, and W. R. (Shorty) Long, Austin banker and runner-up to Moreland in the 1932 state championship at Texarkana, who shot 147.

Munger paced the morning round with a hot 35-34-68. He started the final 18 with par through the first four holes but ran into trouble at the fifth where he took 8 strokes. Congressman Joseph Weldon Bailey Jr., who deserted his role as campaign speaker for the wets in the August 28 election to enter the qualifying test, ended the 36 holes with a 153.

Qualifying scores were: Leland Hamman, Paris 139; Jack Munger, Dallas, 140; Reynolds Smith, Dallas, 140; Gus Moreland, Dallas, 147; W. R. MOVE TO COMBAT MILK STRIKE

Ways and means to cope with the "right to the finish" attitude of milk strikers occupied the attention of Gov. Herbert H. Lehman (left) as disorders continued over the New York milk sectors. He conferred with Maj. Gen. William Haskell (upper right) to determine what forces would be available if it became necessary to call out the state militia. Dr. Thomas Parran, Jr. (lower right), member of the state milk control board, notified health officers that the milk shed would be widened, if necessary, to prevent a milk famine. She appeared in programs in several southwestern theatres of the Public chain. Her radio appearances were in Fort Worth and Albuquerque. She gave her debut recital at Santa Fe, with Elizabeth Garrett, famed blind singer and composer of New Mexico. Miss Moreland will be open for engagements with church and clubs as organist or pianist, and in the planning of programs. For two years she has been in charge of entertainment at the New Mexico State Fair in Roswell.

In connection with private lessons in piano Miss Moreland will conduct a class lesson each week in theoretical graded courses, including ear training, sight singing, history of music and interpretation. After a certain amount of this work has been done the pupil will be given credit for it in schools and colleges. She also will offer a special course for older persons who wish to take church music or popular music or who wish to continue their work started in college.

Miss Moreland has been the house guest of Mrs. Ralph Link for several days and may now be reached at the Settles Hotel, for interviews.

The Roswell Morning Dispatch recently had this to say: "Among the outstanding features of the tenth annual New Mexico State Fair were the various entertainments at the exposition hall, provided by Miss Caroline Moreland, a Roswell girl, who was brought from Albuquerque to repeat her success of a year ago, when for the first time she displayed entertainment features of the fair."

"Miss Moreland has been broadcasting over station KOGM at Albuquerque, where she has made a great success. She has also appeared at various theatres in the southwest and has always made a great hit."

cents per bushel tax on wheat and you will find where the present price of flour came from. The farmers and the government are getting the benefit of the increased price and not the retail merchants.

When retailers are forced to raise prices to stay in business it naturally follows that buying power must be increased. If prices rise and employment is not created then the breach between ability to buy and prices at which goods must be sold is widened and condition of buyer and seller alike rendered more hopeless.

Any way you look at it industrial recovery's success depends upon unselfish cooperation by manufacturer, wholesaler, retailer, and consumer in the employment, wage, hours of operation and price phases of the codes.

Modified Code For Restaurant Workers Approved By Johnson

Minimum Hourly Wage, Exclusive Of Tips, Fixed According To Size Of Town; Employers May Make Deductions For Meals

WASHINGTON (AP)—Recovery Administrator Johnson Thursday approved a modified reemployment for the restaurant industry permitting employers who comply with the wage and hour provisions fixed to receive the Blue Eagle.

The scale for restaurant employees placed them under a flat minimum wage, exclusive of the tips they receive.

The agreement provides a maximum work week of 54 hours for male employees and 48 for female with wages ranging from 28 cents an hour in cities above 500,000 down to 23 cents an hour in towns of less than 2,500. In addition, a differential of two cents per hour was fixed for Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Mexico, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia and West Virginia.

Under the agreement, the maximum hour provisions will not supersede lower maximums prescribed in some state laws, and it was provided further that no work week "shall be longer than the shortest week in the same job of July 15, 1929."

The agreement requires that "no minimum hourly rate shall be less than of July 15, 1929."

Restaurant owners would be permitted to deduct not more than $3 a week from wages for meals to employees and be required to pay time and one-third for overtime.

The agreement would permit the operation of "split shifts" limited to two periods plus the interval of inactivity between them not to exceed 12 hours in any one working day.

The wages provided were: In cities of 500,000 or more, 28 cents an hour; from 250,000 to 500,000, 27 cents; from 200,000 to 250,000, 26 cents; less than 2,500, 23 cents.

Dissatisfaction with the restaurant code was expressed on behalf of organized labor by John F. Kearney of Boston, international vice president of the hotel and restaurant employes and beverage dispensers international alliance, which is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Paylor and children, Frances, George and T. E. Jr., are visiting Mrs. Dorton's sister, Mrs. Ira Dorton, and Mr. Dorton in Abilene. Paul Harper of Big Spring is a guest of Lester Dorton in Abilene.

Odessa Holds Top Of Permian Loop

McCAMEY—The Odessa baseball team downed the strong Iran brigade 6 to 4 in Odessa last Sunday to remain at the top of the Permian Basin League percentage column while the Iranians dropped to the second position. Shortly after the game the Iran management filed an official protest of the tilt with the league secretary against an umpire's decision. The protest will be heard at the next meeting of the league directors.

The McCamey team defeated the Big Lake aggregation 15 to 0 here.

Next Sunday will find Odessa at McCamey, Crane at Iran and Midland at Big Lake. The Wink team will be idle.

The league standings:

Odessa	3	3	0	1.000
Iran	4	3	1	.750
Crane	4	3	1	.750
Wink	4	3	1	.750

Obie Bristow At Coaches' School

LUBBOCK—Among the 302 coaches from twenty states here attending the third annual Texas Tech coaching school is Obie Bristow, high school coach at Big Spring, Texas.

Football, basketball, track, physical education, treatment of injuries, boxing, wrestling and administration of athletics are being taught by twelve leading coaches. Classes begin at 8 o'clock in the morning and continue until six in the afternoon, with a few night sessions.

Football is being handled by Kiser, Purdie, Kripke, Michigan; Kerr, Colgate; and Bierman, Minnesota.

Attendance at the school, the high variety of subjects and the quality of the teaching staff are used as a basis of claiming that the Tech school is again the largest in the United States, Pete W. Cawthon, Tech coach, declares.

We take this method to express our thanks and appreciation for all the nice things that were said and done for us when we lost our home by fire. Especially do we thank the Royal Neighbors. May God bless you all in our prayer.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Runyan and Family.

We are in receipt of a note from Clyde Bays, secretary of the San Angelo Country Club, to the effect that the Concho Invitation golf tournament will be held September 14th, 1933, at San Angelo, Texas.

"Through some source," the story has gone out from here that our tournament was to be held Labor Day. That date is not to be used by our club, and the report was erroneous.

Golfing fans, both here and over West Texas, will be glad to hear that the San Angelo dates will not conflict with the tournament to be held here September 2, 3 and 4 as many players will want to attend both meets.

Interest in tennis has been revived here among both boys and girls after gradually losing its lure through the years. Players may be seen on the courts all day long and as high as fifteen or twenty late in the afternoons. However, a warning has been issued to players that unless rules about trespassing are obeyed, fans may lose their chance to play. Several windows have been broken the past week by players bouncing balls against the building.

We note with pride that the athletic field north of town is in fine shape for the approaching season. Bill Olsen, with a special watering device for the field and some R. F. C. help, has the ground in excellent shape with a smooth surface of turf covering the entire field. All of the "pace" back of the goal posts and under the grandstand has been cleaned and leveled.

School officials are working on a plan whereby the present grandstand may be lengthened on each end. The idea of erecting another on the east side of the field was dropped because the sun would blind spectators. Such improvements will be a great attraction to this field as it is one of the best in West Texas. Due to the northwest corner being two feet higher than the southeast, no serious damage has ever been done by heavy rains.

By a roundabout method we finally learned that Pampa had definitely been booked for an opening home game here October 7. Pampa and Lubbock, the first two teams the Steers play, should prove a good drawing attraction.

George Gentry promised to write as soon as the date with Pampa was definitely settled, but knowing what an unreliable scamp he is, we expected nothing.

Curtis Bishop is an applicant for Director of Publicity of the University of Texas. The athletic council will act on the application on Tuesday, August 15. Bishop has many friends throughout West Texas, who are hopeful that his application will be accepted.
