Robertson to withdraw from race

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — Pat Robertson, the former television evangelist who failed to turn the fervent support of his "invisible army" into a significant share of Republican votes, will formally end his presidential bid today.

At the outset of the 1988 presidential race, Robertson was a wild card.

The Republican establishment nervously eyed his evangelical followers and his hefty warchest and wondered what kind of a showing he might make. Since many Robertson supporters were new to the political process, his potential impact was difficult to gauge.

In the end, Robertson spent $22 million and gained only 46 delegates to the Republican National Convention.

Robertson set the stage for his departure last week by endorsing the Republican nominee-to-be, George Bush, who already has a mathematical lock on the nomination.

He was holding a news conference today at his home to make official what has been clear to observers for months — that Robertson is not in contention for the Republican presidential nomination.

The former television evangelist was expected to hang onto his delegates until the convention, then release them to Bush on the first ballot.

■ Related story — 7A

The high point of the Robertson campaign came early on — the Feb. 8 Iowa caucuses, where he beat out Bush for second place, behind Kansas Sen. Bob Dole.

But in the next big battle — the New Hampshire primary — Robertson finished behind not only Bush and Dole, but also behind New York Rep. Jack Kemp and former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont.

Even then, Robertson gave every indication that he expected to make a comeback in the South, with its March 8 mega-primary.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he told his supporters after the disappointing showing in New Hampshire, "tomorrow I go into the South, and then we are going to be playing in my own backyard."

His backyard proved an unfriendly place. In the Southern primaries, he finished no better than second place — in Texas — and was third in his home state of Virginia.

Robertson continued to do well in the caucus states, winning in Hawaii, Nevada, Washington and Alaska, and doing well in Minnesota and Alaska.

But by mid-March Robertson was no longer even competing in states with primaries. He concentrated his scaled-down campaign on the caucuses, started talking about 1992, and about making his mark at the Republican National Convention in New Orleans this summer.

"I am the true conservative candidate and I will bring that voice to the convention," he said. Robertson said he hoped to shape the party's platform, bringing it in line with his conservative views.

"I want a platform like the 1984 platform — for school prayer, against abortion, for family values," he said.

The Robertson campaign was not without its other-worldly moments.

On Easter Sunday, Robertson told a Denver congregation his presidential bid was divinely inspired.

"There is an enterprise the Lord set me on a year or so ago — running for president," he said. And it wasn't over yet, he told the faithful.

"Out of what seems to be a defeat we are laying a foundation for a great victory for this nation. It may not be in 1988...but I am not going to quit...that is His plan for me and for this nation," Robertson said.

Teens pull friends from bus crash

CARROLLTON, Ky. (AP) — Two 16-year-olds helped pull their friends from a bus that burst into a fireball after it collided head-on with a pickup truck on an interstate highway, killing 27 in one of the nation's deadliest bus crashes.

"They were just laying down in the back door, stacked up on top of each other, and no one could get out 'cause they all fell down on top of each other," said Larry Flowers, who escaped from the bus and helped evacuate it with Jamie Hardesty. "I grabbed their arms and pulled."

A pickup truck going the wrong way on southbound Interstate 71 late Saturday plowed into the right front side of the bus, which was filled mostly with teen-agers from the Assembly of God Church in Radcliff returning home from an amusement park outing near Cincinnati, police said.

Nine of the 40 hurt sustained critical injuries and four serious ones, including the driver of the pickup truck, who was alone.

Those killed were charred beyond recognition.

Survivors said that as flames erupted in the bus' front, screaming passengers rushed toward the rear emergency door.

"Everyone started screaming and hollering," said Hardesty, a high school sophomore. "Everyone was trying to get off as fast as they could."

A passing truck driver, Patrick Presley of Dallas, and an unidentified trucker, rushed to the bus and yanked the rear door open.

Hardesty was among the first to escape.

"I thought maybe if I broke out the windows I could help some of them get out or at least let some of the smoke out," he said. "I busted windows hoping they could get out, but I don't guess they could."

Students try to cope with grief

RADCLIFF, Ky. (AP) — The only instruction being given today at Radcliff Middle School was in how to cope with grief as schoolchildren gathered to mourn classmates killed in a fiery bus accident.

"Today we've got to be more concerned with feelings than education," said principal Charlie Jones as school opened.

Saturday night's crash of a church bus, which burst into flames after it collided with a pickup truck, killed 27 people including 16 children from the middle school listed as missing and presumed dead.

Additional counselors were on hand to help students face the empty desks of classmates killed in the crash.

"I'm just trying to use good common sense and I'm trying to make it an hour at a time," Jones said. "It's going to be hard to mesh this big a tragedy to meet everybody's different problems."

Enrollment at the school totals 775 pupils, most of whom seemed to be present today, Jones said. He described them as "pretty quiet, not as much emotion as I figured."

The victims included 13 of Radcliff Middle School's eight-graders, one seventh-grader and two sixth-graders. Three other middle school pupils were hospitalized and three were at home.

Koop lumps together nicotine, cocaine

WASHINGTON (AP) — The surgeon general declared today that nicotine is addictive like heroin and cocaine, a finding that came as no surprise to researchers but which will provide new ammunition for anti-smoking forces.

The significance of the report by C. Everett Koop is not that it unveils new scientific evidence, but that he organized existing research into a systematic presentation lumping nicotine with heroin and cocaine as physiologically addictive substances.

"Careful examination of the data makes it clear that cigarettes and other forms of tobacco are addicting," Koop wrote in a preface. "An extensive body of research has shown that nicotine is the drug in tobacco that causes addiction.

"Moreover, the processes that determine tobacco addiction are similar to those that determine addiction to drugs such as heroin and cocaine."

Although his report places nicotine in essentially the same medical category as those two illicit drugs, Koop noted at a news conference that tobacco has a "favored place" in the United States and is not likely to be banned.

"I don't think we are every going to get to a point in our society where we can bring about prohibition of tobacco," he said. "I don't think this would be a practical solution. I think we learned this during the prohibition on alcohol."

He said steps should be taken to "protect children" from being exposed to nicotine, noting that 43 states already have laws, albeit "poorly enforced," against the sale of cigarettes to minors.

"I think we need a license to sell tobacco just they way we require one to sell alcohol," said Koop.

Asked later where he would set the age on banning sales to young people, the surgeon general noted that different states set different ages for such things as driving and buying alcohol and said that practice probably would continue with stricter anti-tobacco laws.

"I would set it at about 75," added the 71-year-old physician.

Asked whether his new report might highten antagonism between smokers and nonsmokers, Koop said, "That would be hard to predict. I think it would mean in general more sympathy for the person who can't quit. That certainly is the position I've taken ever since I have been in this job. You might get annoyed at people who smoke in your presense and make your eyes burn and your sinuses clog up and so forth, but your anger has to be abated by the fact that these people are addicted to a drug and I think this will make people more tolerant of the problems a smoker faces when he is trying to quit."

The report says nicotine can be addictive no matter how it enters the body, noting that so-called smokeless tobacco enters the blood stream through absorbtion in the mouth and that pipe and cigar smokers who do not inhale subject themselves to the same kind of absorbtion.

The report cites 171 separate studies, most of them conducted during the past decade, as references.

In a letter to Congress accompanying the report, Health and Human Services Secretary Otis R. Bowen advocates rotating a warning label on the addictive nature of tobacco with other health warnings on packages.

Clements wants state to process food products

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texas farmers and ranchers must stop "sending raw products out of state for processing elsewhere," Gov. Bill Clements told the first meeting of a new state task force this morning.

Clements called on the 26-member Task Force on Agricultural Development to develop state and federal recommendations that will "literally reinvigorate agriculture and stay the course of economic progress in Texas."

He asked them to present their proposals by September.

"I am particularly interested in your developing an initiative on food and fiber processing on a value-added basis," the governor said. "We must do more of this sort of thing."

Stark's overhaul being completed

BY NORMAN BLACK

WASHINGTON (AP) — For one hour on the night of May 17, 1987, it was business as usual for the crew and officers of the USS Stark after being told a jet was flying their way.

During that 60 minutes, the Stark steamed through Persian Gulf waters on a routine picket patrol, leisurely tracking the fighter it had been told was "assumed friendly, assumed Iraqi."

Then war came.

Two Exocet missiles slammed into the guided-missile frigate, 30 seconds apart. The first was a dud. The second left 37 sailors dead, almost sank the ship and snapped once and for all the public's somnambulance about the Iran-Iraq war.

Americans had died in the Persian Gulf.

One year later, the Stark sits dockside at Ingalls Shipbuilding in Pascagoula, Miss., receiving the finishing touches of an overhaul that will cost an estimated $100 million. The careers of two of her officers — including the skipper — have come to a forced end.

Iraq said its fighter pilot mistakenly fired on the Stark — thinking it was a tanker carrying oil for archenemy Iran. Iraq has pledged to make restitution, although no money has yet changed hands and probably won't for years.

Texans strike it rich on Caribbean island

Associated Press

Many Texans who left the Lone Star State after the collapse of the oil and real estate industry say they've struck a rich lifestyle on the Caribbean isle of St. Thomas.

"I lead a very idyllic life," said Randy Wheelis, a University of Texas graduate who manages a resort on St. Thomas in the U.S. Virgin Islands.

"I've got a Hobie Cat that I keep on the beach. I can be in St. John in an hour when the wind is right."

Not all the former Texans on St. Thomas are newcomers, but many of the Texans arriving lately have left because of the state's economic downturn, islanders say.

"There have been lots of people from Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana coming down after the oil bust," said Joanne Lechleiter of the U.S. Virgin Islands economic development office.

Although the numbers of Texans on St. Thomas is relatively few, between 100 and 300, they have made an impression on the island of at least 53,000.

"As a Texan I can say we're a loud and obnoxious bunch," Nicky Russell, a St. Thomas disc jockey who was born in Austin, told The Dallas Morning News.

Texans on the island have formed a Texas Society, which sponsors an annual chili cookoff.

However, there are some downsides to the tropical dream.

Living expenses are high, contamination of the groundwater supply has made pure drinking water a precious commodity and electrical service is prone to blackouts.

But East Texas businessman Hill Paddock says he has no regrets about swapping dealing real estate in Houston for running a restaurant on St. Thomas.

"I decided I'd just as soon go broke in St. Thomas," Paddock said.

"The last time I was in Conroe, the place looked like somebody who had been on a long diet and sagged," he said.

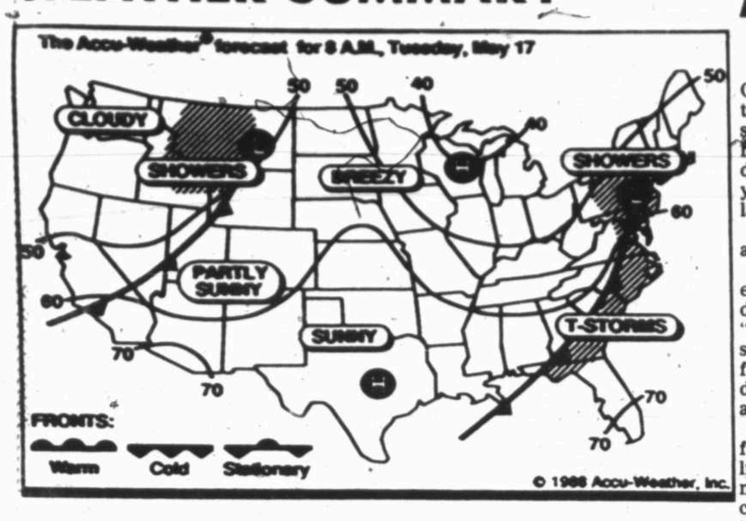
WEATHER SUMMARY



Fair, warm weather forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Tonight will be fair, with the low in the lower 60s and southeast winds at 5-10 mph, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tuesday is expected to be mostly fair with the high reaching into the middle 90s and winds shifting slightly to the south at 10-15 mph.

Sunday's high of 102 degrees set a new record high and was one degree warmer than the old record of 101 set for that date in 1937. The overnight low of 60 degrees was 18 degrees warmer than the record low of 42 degrees set for that date in 1945.

STATE

Some parts of North Texas received heavy rainfall today as thunderstorms rumbled across the Red River from the northwest.

A trough of low pressure that precedes a weak cold front, meanwhile, stretched from Oklahoma to the lower Pecos Valley. The cold front extended across the High Plains into eastern New Mexico.

Skies were partly to mostly cloudy over much of North, East and south Central Texas today, but clear skies dominated the rest of the state.

Skies should remain fair to partly cloudy tonight with a chance of widely scattered thunderstorms over parts of North and South Texas, the weather service said.

Some late night and morning cloudiness is expected over South Texas. Otherwise, it should be fair to partly cloudy over much of the state Tuesday. Afternoon highs are expected to be mostly in the 80s and 90s, although readings should stretch to near 100 degrees along the Rio Grande in the Big Bend.

NATION

Showers and thunderstorms rumbled across the central Great Lakes region and into the Southern Plains today after lightning, hail and high wind lashed Illinois, Michigan and Indiana, ripping down power lines and uprooting trees.

One branch of thunderstorms edged across the Ohio Valley from western New York into Ohio and Indiana, while another swept through southeast Kansas and parts of Oklahoma.

Thunderstorms across northeastern Illinois Sunday left a retired firefighter in critical condition after he was struck by lightning while fishing. The storms also knocked out electrical power for about 25,000 customers in the Chicago area.

Meanwhile, tornadoes spawned by severe thunderstorms touched down in at least four southeastern Michigan areas Sunday, knocking down trees and power lines.

In Indiana, wind gusting up to 70 mph accompanied thunderstorms that moved across the northern edge of the state on Sunday, downing trees and power lines.

The strongest thunderstorms early today were reported in central and southern Oklahoma and were accompanied by large hail and gusty wind. Golf ball-sized hail pelted Oklahoma City, along with winds up to 80 mph.

Elsewhere, a cold front brought showers to the Oregon coast.

Today's forecast called for showers and thunderstorms from northern New England and the Great Lakes region into the Ohio and Tennessee Valleys and the central and southern Appalachians; showers and thunderstorms from Georgia across Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas and southeast Oklahoma into northeast Texas; showers from the northern Pacific Coast region and northwest Nevada with a few thunderstorms over western Idaho and northwest Montana.

Meese fires department spokesman

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese III has fired the Justice Department's chief spokesman, Terry Eastland, saying he has done an inadequate job of defending the attorney general in a year-old criminal investigation, Eastland said today.

"Today's my last day; I don't have a job," Eastland told a reporter.

In a letter to Meese, Eastland noted that he had been relieved of his duties Friday. He wrote to Meese, "You have expressed to me your desire to have as director of public affairs someone willing to aggressively defend you against, in effect, any and all criticism."

Eastland said that he had defended Meese "to the best of my ability," while "exercising good judgment and acting in a manner consistent with the obligations of this office."

"You have concluded that my efforts have not sufficed," Eastland's letter said.

Eastland's letter said that Meese had offered him 30 days in which to conclude his work and look for a job, but "I have decided that the most appropriate course of action is to end my responsibilities today."

"I think this is the single greatest mistake Ed Meese has made since becoming attorney general," said Gary L. McDowell, a political conservative and Meese's former chief speechwriter.

"I'm still a supporter of the attorney general and I still think he would be poorly advised to resign," but "I think he has fallen prety to bad advice from those who confuse blind loyalty with good government," said McDowell.

Meese's counselor William Bradford Reynolds, and another of his top political aides, Charles Cooper, were unaware of Meese's decision to dismiss Eastland, according to Justice Department sources who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

The central figure pushing for Eastland's dismissal, according to the department sources, was Meese's former counselor, Ken Cribb, who now heads the White House office of domestic affairs.

Eastland, a political conservative who has written most of Meese's speeches, has been increasingly concerned in recent months by the effect on Justice Department operations of the ongoing probe of Meese by independent counsel James McKay, said department sources, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The sources said Eastland had planned to wait until after the independent counsel issued a report detailing Meese's activities before deciding whether he would leave the department.

McKay is expected to raise a number of ethical questions about Meese's activities that will be referred to the Office of Professional Responsibility, a Justice Department unit that examines possible wrongdoing by department officials.

On March 29, Deputy Attorney General Arnold Burns and criminal division chief William Weld resigned in protest over Meese's continued tenure at the Justice Department. Burns and Weld, like Eastland, were concerned that Meese's legal problems were damaging department operations, morale and its public image.

Eastland said in his letter that the public affairs office "has an obligation to serve not only the attorney general but also the Department of Justice and the American people.

"While we may disagree about the appropriate role of the director of this office, especially in present circumstances, I of course recognize your prerogative to have whomever you wish serving as director," said Eastland. "I am leaving today so that you will be at liberty to select a replacement."

McKay launched a criminal investigation of Meese on May 11, 1987. He has been investigating Meese's ties to the scandal-plagued Wedtech Corp. and to a $1 billion Iraqi oil pipeline. The independent counsel also has been investigating $14,000 in regional Bell telephone stock owned by the attorney general at a time when Meese was meeting at the Justice Department with Bell executives. Finally, McKay has been examining the $40,000-a-year job of Meese's wife, Ursula, paid for out of a charitable contribution from a Washington real estate family leasing space to the Justice Department.

Meese's longtime friend E. Robert Wallach, now under indictment for alleged racketeering in the Wedtech scandal, was involved in each of the matters under investigation by McKay's office.

BUS

"When I jumped off the bus, I saw him (Hardesty) carrying somebody and laid them down, and ran back up and was trying to get some more people," said 17-year-old Juan Holt.

"He ripped off my shirt, and he used it for bandages.... He put ice on people. He was like a doctor."

Jason Booher, 13, credited Hardesty with "saving a lot." Hardesty pushed burning victims from the bus and Booher said he then rolled them in grass.

Holt said Hardesty and Allen Tennison, 15-year-old son of the church's pastor, directed paramedics to those seriously injured.

The bus had been refueled with gasoline just before the accident, said Carroll County Coroner James Dunn. The fuel tank on the 1977 Ford school bus was on the right side, and ruptured upon impact, police said.

Five National Transportation Safety Board members arrived Sunday to begin investigating the 10:55 p.m. crash.

State Medical Examiner Dr. George Nichols met with about 60 family members in Carrollton and told them he did not want them to view the remains.

"The picture...of their children in that room is not what they have in their memories or wallets," he said.

Nichols said 19 females and eight males were killed. Preliminary examinations of 22 bodies indicated the smoke inhalation as the cause of death, he said. He expected to finish the examinations today.

The victims apparently died trying to flee, and the body of the driver was found near the steering wheel with a fire extinguisher between his legs, Nichols said.

A woman's body was found facing the front door, while the other bodies were headed toward the back of the bus.

As word of the accident spread, distraught relatives clutching dental and medical records arrived here Sunday to help identify the dead. Many came in a bus donated by Fort Knox, a military installation near Radcliff where most of the church members work, officials said.

Early Sunday, the hull of the bus — with bodies still inside — was moved to the National Guard armory in Carrollton, 75 miles northeast of Radcliff and 45 miles northeast of Louisville.

State Police Trooper Jim Mudd said it was not known how long or why the pickup was traveling the wrong way.

Its driver, 34-year-old Larry W. Mahoney, of Worthville, was listed in serious condition at Humana Hospital-University of Louisville.

What is believed to be the worst bus accident in U.S. history occurred Sept. 17, 1963, when a bus collided with a train near Salinas, Calif., killing 32 farm workers.

GRIEF

Additional counselors are also going to be available at North Hardin High School, said Principal Ray Story. He said teachers will be encouraged to allow the students to talk about the accident.

"It's silent, and that's the hardest part...," said Lori Coffey, an 18-year-old senior, after school opened at North Hardin High. "You walk down the hall and see the hurt, but no one is saying anything." The high school lost three students in the crash.

On Sunday evening, more than 700 friends and relatives turned out for a subdued service at the Assembly of God Church. Some of the 40 people injured in the crash attended the service, which attracted a standing-room-only crowd.

"At an hour like this, there's not much you can say," said Martha Tennison, wife of the Rev. W. Don Tennison, pastor of the Assembly of God Church. "You can just be there for them.

"Our faith in God will be just as strong or stronger than it has ever been," she said after the service.

"Our hope in God is an anchor to the soul," said Dan Mattingly, who led the evening prayers. "We're in the midst of a storm and we need an anchor."

The bus, with 67 aboard, was packed with teen-agers returning from Kings Island amusement park north of Cincinnati. The trip was an annual outing for the youths, who raised money for the event through car washes and mowing lawns.

Many friends and family members said their faith would help them cope with their tragedy.

"I don't have any answers for you this morning," Mrs. Tennison said during an informal service Sunday morning. "I can't figure it out. I wish I had the answers. I don't."

She said the task at hand was to gather strength to share with the families of the dead.

"If there's ever been an hour when they needed us the most, it's now. We'll be there for them," she said.

One church member said the community also would band together through its military ties. Radcliff, population 20,000, is adjacent to Fort Knox, a military installation where many of the families work.

"Our congregation is about 80 percent military families," Fred Rishel said. "We're close in the military, and we're close in the church."

Condolences poured in by telephone Sunday from churches as far away as Germany.

A Roman Catholic priest also helped out at the evangelical church, celebrating Mass early Sunday to help console gathering members.

"The whole community is in a state of shock," said the priest, the Rev. Leo Craycroft. "We are praying for the families and doing whatever we can to support them."

CLEMENTS

A spokesman for Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower praised Clements' suggestions. "A lot of people understand the potential that's out there," Andy Welch said.

Welch said Hightower has helped develop about 100 plants to process everything from crawfish to pickles to pasta, with combined potential sales of about $700 million a year.

The lack of financing and the new types of thinking needed to shift to these operations have been the roadblocks, he said.

"But things are so bad in the farm community and the rural community of Texas, people are thinking about change," Welch added.

Task force chairman Jerry Harris, a Lamesa cotton farmer, said the panel will undertake "the most thorough and exhaustive study of the Texas agricultural economy that's ever been attempted."

Also speaking to the task force, the deputy U.S. secretary of agriculture predicted improvements in Texas' agriculture economy. "We're on the mend and we're moving upward," Peter Myers told the group.

Myers said the USDA is trying to expand U.S. farm exports. "We've turned to the rest of the producing nations of the world and said, 'OK, we're willing to come to the table, put our subsidies on the table, all that we have...if you will do likewise,'" he said.

"Our goal is to, over the next 10 or 15 years, phase out subsidies, tariffs ...all over the world."

ROBERTSON

Other signposts on the Robertson campaign trail:

— He sued former Rep. Paul McCloskey for libel when McCloskey said Robertson used the influence of his father — then a U.S. senator from Virginia — to avoid combat in the Korean War. After some messy preliminaries, Robertson dropped the suit because it was to go to trial on Super Tuesday. He was ordered to pay court costs.

— He contended it was unfair and bigoted to describe him as a former television evangelist, although that was how he became famous. He said cable businessman or religious broadcaster would be more accurate.

— His claim, in a New Hampshire debate, that there were nuclear missiles in Cuba aimed at this country. Robertson later said he had no first-hand information, but insisted that "nobody really knows." The contention was denied by the White House, the Joint Chiefs of Staff and others.

— His charges that Planned Parenthood founder Margaret Sanger "wanted to sterilize blacks, Jews, mental defectives, and fundamentalist Christians." Planned Parenthood officials dismissed the allegation. Scholars who have studied Sanger's writings said there was no basis for the claim.

Robertson has said he will return to the television network he founded nearly 30 years ago to help shore up its financial position.

STARK

More than two dozen U.S. Navy ships now operate in and around the gulf, escorting U.S. tankers as well as 11 Kuwaiti oil tankers reregistered to fly the American flag. The convoy work began despite congressional opposition spawned by the Stark incident.

Perhaps the Stark's most important legacy, however, has been a change in attitude within the military — the Navy has made the transition to a wartime footing in the Persian Gulf, with no end in sight.

The transition goes far beyond the payment of monthly "imminent danger" bonuses to sailors.

Skippers are authorized to shoot first and ask questions later. U.S. ships are now cleared to come to the aid of neutral merchant vessels in certain circumstances. Four different battles have been fought with Iranian forces. And the administration is vowing to protect the right of freedom of navigation indefinitely.

"There are really two U.S. navies — one for peace and one for war. The difference is mental readiness," Dr. Michael Vlahos, director of the State Department's Center for the Study of Foreign Affairs, observed recently.

"In war, one's senses are honed for battle; in peace, even where the threat of 'inadvertent attack' is considered, one's senses must be leashed."

That peacetime leashing might have left Stark's crew "mentally disarmed," Vlahos argues. Certainly, other Pentagon officials have questioned the clarity of the rules of engagement — the ground rules for fighting — given to Navy ships before the Stark attack.

The Navy, however, had no such qualms. Noting that "no ordnance was fired in defense of Stark or in retaliation for the attack," a board of inquiry concluded:

"The rules of engagement that were in existence on May 17, 1987, were sufficient to enable Stark to properly warn the Iraqi aircraft...and if the warning was not heeded...to defend herself against hostile intent and imminent danger without absorbing the first hit."

The ship's commander, Capt. Glenn R. Brindel, "failed to provide combat-oriented leadership, allowing Stark's anti-air warfare readiness to disintegrate to the point that his Combat Information Center team was unable to defend the ship," the board added.

Brindel's tactical action officer, Lt. Basil E. Moncrief, "failed to defend Stark as his duty required."

Brindel and Moncrief ultimately accepted responsibility for the Stark's failure to defend itself and were reprimanded rather than court-martialed. Brindel was allowed to retire at the lower rank of commander and Moncrief was allowed to resign without a pension.

Brindel, now a real estate agent in Virginia Beach, refuses to discuss that night in any detail. He refers reporters to a letter he wrote the newspaper Navy Times last November, blaming the failure to defend the ship on deficient radar and electronic sensor equipment.

Brindel says he's bitter the Navy investigation didn't touch on that aspect of the affair, but adds there were "a lot of good things that came out of it, too, like improving damage control on the ships in the gulf; the identification of each other's forces; rules of engagement, those sort of things."

Indeed, more extensive damage control training and equipment additions have been cited as reasons the crew of the USS Samuel B. Roberts saved that frigate after it struck a mine last month.

SMOKING

Bowen said cigarette smoking is "the chief avoidable cause of premature death in this country," causing more than 300,000 such deaths each year.

"The disease impact of smoking justifies placing the problem of tobacco use at the top of the public health agenda," Bowen wrote. "The conclusions of this report provide another compelling reason for strengthening our efforts to reduce tobacco use in our society."

In his opening remarks, Koop also called for an addiction warning on cigarette labels and advertising and said, "Treatment of tobacco addiction should be more widely available and should be considered at least as favorably by third-party payers as treatment of alcoholism and illicit drug addiction."

Koop handled some other controversial ideas as questions:

"With the evidence that tobacco is addicting, is it appropriate for tobacco products to be sold through vending machines, which are easily accessible to children?

"Is it appropriate for free samples of tobacco products to be sent through the mail or distributed on public property, where verification of age is difficult if not impossible? Should the sale of tobacco be treated less seriously than the sale of alcoholic beverages, for which a specific license is required (and revoked for repeated sales to minors)?

"In the face of overwhelming evidence that tobacco is addicting, policy-makers should address these questions without delay," Koop said.

Reaction was swift and predictable.

"This report and the surgeon general's findings should compel federal and state authorities to treat tobacco as the addictivve drug that it is," said Dr. Alan R. Nelson, chairman of the board of trustees of the American Medical Association.

Nelson said federal and state authorities should raise the age of those allowed to purchase cigarettes to 21, ban the access of tobacco products through vending machines, label tobacco products as addictive, ban the advertising of tobacco products and regulate the development of new nicotine products.

Although details of the report were not made public until today, one of the many federal health officials that helped prepare it disclosed the essential finding — that nicotine is addictive — in a television interview earlier this month.

A Tobacco Institute spokesman, Walker Merryman, reacted to that disclosure by Ronald M. Davis, director of the federal Office of Smoking and Health, by saying it showed "anti-tobacco zeal has overtaken common sense and good judgment."

In a statement today, the Tobacco Institute said "Smoking is truly a personal choice which can be stopped if and when a person decides to do so. The surgeon general's own Public Health Service figures indicate that about 40 million Americans are former smokers and that 95 percent of them quit smoking without help. These figures, and common sense, contradict any claim that smoking is an 'addiction.'"

The institute said the report "trivializes the serious drug problem faced by society. The claim that cigarette smoking is a drug addiction similar to cocaine or heroin use, or alcohol abuse, is unfortunate and unwarranted. The message to the American public is that using illegal drugs, such as crack or heroin, has the same risk of addiction as smoking."

Koop's last smoking report concluded — again based on a compilation of existing studies — that nonsmokers' health was endangered by inhaling smoke.

Fire breaks out on damaged tanker

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A fire broke out today aboard one of five tankers damaged in an Iraqi air raid on Iran's Larak Island oil terminal.

A Pentagon spokesman in Washington, meanwhile, said the wreckage of a U.S. helicopter was recovered along with the bodies of two crewmen.

The aircraft was reported missing in the Persian Gulf after a battle last month in which U.S. forces sank or disabled six Iranian ships.

Officials were still trying to determine today how many people died in the Iraqi raid Saturday on the Larak terminal in the Strait of Hormuz at the southern end of the gulf.

The attack set fire to the Spanish supertanker Barcelona, the Cypriot-flag tanker Argosy, the Liberian-flag supertanker Seawise Giant, British tanker Burmah Endeavour, and the Iranian tanker Khark.

The Seawise Giant and the Argosy were badly damaged in fires that raged out of control for many hours. The Burmah Endeavour and the Khark sustained minor damage, officials reported.

The Barcelona was beached to prevent it sinking. Although the fire aboard it appeared to have been extinguished Sunday, it reignited and Iranian-led salvage teams were combating the flames today, according to gulf shipping executives.

The London-based Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence Unit said the bodies of 16 of the Seawise Giant's crew have been recovered, one seaman was killed aboard the Barcelona and two crewmen were killed aboard the Argosy. It said three crewmen remained missing from the Barcelona.

But gulf-based shipping executives said only one crewman aboard the Seawise Giant was killed, with three missing, and that one man aboard the Barcelona was killed, with three other crewmen missing.

The Iraqi raid, the third on Larak in seven months, was aimed at throttling Iran's oil exports to force Tehran to the negotiating table.

Tehran radio monitored in Cyprus on Sunday quoted a senior Iranian air force officer as saying the U.S. Navy aided the Iraqi warplanes attacking Larak by jamming Iranian radar and radio communications for nine minutes. U.S. officials deny American involvement in the raid.

The bodies of the two U.S. Navy pilots and the wreckage of their helicopter were located in the southern Persian Gulf on Sunday, the Pentagon said, nearly a month after they disappeared during U.S.-Iranian clashes.

The destroyer USS Merrill, two chartered tugboats and a seagoing crane were sighted off the emirate of Sharjah, indicating an effort to retrieve the wreckage was under way, maritime salvage experts said.

In Washington, Lt. Col. Keith Schneider, a Pentagon spokesman, confirmed the wreckage of the Marine Corps AH-1 Cobra was located Sunday.

He said the bodies of Capt. Kenneth Hill, 33, of Thomasville, N.C., and Capt. Stephen Leslie, 30, of New Bern, N.C. were recovered.

They were the only American casualties in the fighting April 18, when U.S. naval forces destroyed two Iranian oil platforms and sank or disabled six naval craft. Iran said at the time that its forces shot down the helicopter.

Tehran said 44 Iranians were killed during the clash.

Ceremony staged for Soviet troops leaving Afghanistan

WORLD

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Gunfire rang out in the distance during a farewell ceremony today for 1,300 departing Soviet troops, a reminder that the war rages on even as the Red Army prepares its retreat.

President Najib spoke at the rally in Kabul for the first contingent of Soviet soldiers to leave under an international accord to end the Soviet Union's eight-year involvement in the war.

The 300-vehicle convoy pulled out of the garrison city of Jalalabad on Sunday, traveled the 88 miles to Kabul through mountain regions held by guerrillas, then departed this capital city today for the Soviet Union.

In a speech, Najib thanked the troops during a ceremony that featured thousands of flag-waving Afghan soldiers and civilians. Gunshots could be heard in the distance, apparently from clashes between the U.S.-backed guerrillas and pro-government forces.

Meanwhile, the leader of a Moslem guerrilla faction vowed on Sunday to seize Jalalabad as soon as the rest of the estimated 6,000 Soviet troops that were stationed there withdraw.

"We'll continue our jihad (holy war). We are fighting against an idea," said Mahmood, a commander in the radical Hezb-I-Islami guerrilla faction.

Soviet troops are expected to complete their retreat from the city in two weeks and be replaced by up to 12,000 Afghan army troops.

Mahmood said he had 10,000 men under his command but could not predict when Jalalabad, a strategic city 45 miles from the Pakistan border, would be in guerrilla hands.

"There will be a lot of army there. It will need a lot of pressure," Mahmood said in Peshawar, Pakistan, headquarters for the guerrilla factions.

Edmund McWilliams, deputy chief-of-mission at the U.S. Embassy in Kabul, said on Sunday the insurgents have moved closer and stepped up their rocket attacks on the city, the capital of Nangarhar province.

"It does not appear, though, at this point that the attacks...will be affecting the pullout," he said.

In the past month, insurgents reportedly have overrun dozens of security posts in eastern Afghanistan as Soviet forces handed them over to Afghan army troops.

The Red Army convoy arrived in Kabul on Sunday at the end of its daylong journey through mountains teeming with guerrillas. Officials said on Sunday the convoy included 1,200 men, but today raised that figure to 1,300.

On Sunday, the Communist Party leadership in Moscow thanked the departing troops. "Days of severe trials lie behind you," said the party Central Committee address, printed on the front page of the party daily Pravda. "You have fulfilled the order of your homeland."

Twenty Western journalists were brought to Jalalabad to ride with the convoy to Kabul, and during the night spent in Jalalabad they heard heavy bombardment and felt the impact of a surface-to-surface missile that landed 90 feet from their hotel.

Information about the start of the withdrawal was provided by a Reuters news agency pool report. Associated Press reporters were barred from covering the event. Soviet officials said the exclusion was the result of questions asked by the AP during a previous trip to Kabul.

Soviet troops and tanks moved into Afghanistan on Dec. 27, 1979, to fight the anti-communist insurgency and replace one pro-Soviet government with another. The United States has supplied arms to the insurgents.

About 115,000 Soviet troops are in Afghanistan to bolster Najib's forces, but all must pull back to Soviet territory within the next nine months to comply with U.N.-mediated peace accords signed in Geneva last month.

Half the troops are to leave by Aug. 15 under the agreement. Lt. Gen. Boris Gromov told reporters on Saturday that about one-quarter of the soldiers would be home before President Reagan visits Moscow on May 29.

The Soviet's departure will leave Najib's army of 50,000 alone in its battle against about 200,000 Moslem insurgents. The guerrillas have vowed to fight on to topple the Marxist government.

Guerrillas and Western observers estimate that about 1.5 million Afghans have died in the war. The U.S. State Department estimates Soviet casualties since 1979 at 33,000 to 38,000, more than one-third of whom were killed.

An estimated 2.9 million Afghan refugees are in Pakistan and an estimated 2.3 million are in Iran.

John Paul denounces drug trade, poverty which plague Peru

John Paul

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Pope John Paul II denounced the poverty, cocaine trade and political violence plaguing Peru and called on the people and their leaders to build a civilization based on love.

"May your homeland...be a place where exploitation, violence and terrorism do not leave their tragic sequels of oppression and death," he told a group of intellectuals and businessmen in Lima on Sunday.

The pope was to visit Paraguay today, where the authoritarian government is strongly at odds with the Roman Catholic clergy. Paraguay is the final stop on the pope's 12-day, four-nation South American tour which ends Wednesday.

In Peru, officials said leftist insurgents were responsible for four dynamite blasts in Lima on Saturday night that preceded the pope's arrival. There were no reported injuries, but the blasts knocked out electricity in a large section of the city.

John Paul, during his appearances in Lima on Sunday, repeatedly referred to the political violence that has claimed an estimated 10,000 lives in Peru in the 1980s. At a Mass in a park on the outskirts of the city, he appealed to an estimated 1.5 million Peruvians to build "a civilization of love."

"A civilization, which, resting on this foundation of love for the person who is near us — our neighbor — will transform...the whole world," he said.

During a meeting with Peru's bishops, he spoke of the "blind and insensitive violence" plaguing the nation, Peru's poverty and the country's major role in the South American drug trade.

Peru is a major source of the coca leaves that yield cocaine.

In a taped message broadcast on Peruvian radio, he referred to a 1986 prison uprising by members of the Maoist Shining Path guerrilla movement. The army killed more than 250 guerrillas in the clash.

"I know of the painful tensions which have cost lamentable blood quotas, and I know of your sufferings and needs, which in spite of noble and generous efforts on the part of authorities, have not been overcome," he said in the message to prison inmates.

An estimated 20,000 troops and police in riot gear sealed off downtown Lima and guarded public buildings and hotels after the bomb blasts Saturday night.

Parts of Lima were briefly blacked out when rebels used explosives to knock out power stations outside the city, police said. A bomb also went off near a bullfighting ring in Lima.

Heavy security was particularly evident when the pope paid a Sunday call on President Alan Garcia in the government palace.

As Garcia led John Paul through a garden, they passed two armored personnel carriers, soldiers carrying submachine guns and a special anti-terrorist team in red berets.

Tension was expected to continue in Paraguay, perhaps the most sensitive visit during the papal tour that began with trips to Uruguay and Bolivia.

The government of Gen. Alfredo Stroessner tried last week to alter the papal schedule in Paraguay by canceling a meeting with government opposition leaders, a move the Vatican said was unprecedented.

The government later backed down. But the papal visit has spotlighted deteriorating ties between the church and the rightist government, whose members often describe clerical critics as communists and subversives.

In turn, clerics frequently attack alleged government corruption, election fraud and human and civil rights violations.

The church has criticized the decision to allow only state-controlled radio and television to cover papal activities in Paraguay, where about 97 percent of the 3.8 million population is Catholic.

Gunmen kill Japanese businessman, his maid

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Four men killed a Japanese businessman and his Filipino maid and terrorized his household for 10 hours before fleeing early today with cash and jewelry, police said.

Police identified the dead Japanese as Hichiro Kubota, 51, who operated Starlight Promotions, a company which recruits Filipino entertainers to work in Japan. He was found in his bedroom with multiple stab wounds in the chest.

Manila radio station DZXL said the assailants fled with about $50,000 in cash and jewelry.

According to police, the four men, one of whom was a former employee, entered Kubota's home late Sunday night. They tied up Kubota, his two maids and his Filipino common-law wife and ransacked the house.

Police found one of the maids dead in the bathroom. She was naked and apparently had been raped, they said. Another maid and Kubota's common-law wife suffered minor injuries, police said.

31 people killed in blast

BEIJING (AP) — Thirty-one people were killed last month when a young farmer, upset after a fight with his mother, set off dynamite in a room crowded with people watching television.

The Hebei Daily, in a report seen in Beijing today, said 18 others were injured in the April 14 blast in Yujia village in the central Hebei province.

It said the "rare and catastrophic" explosion was set off by Yu Xiugang, 21, and linked it to an argument he had the previous day with his mother.

Yu bought five batteries and installed an igniter to sticks of dynamite he had, the report said. That evening he went to the home of Yu Mengjuan, where 50 people had gathered to watch a film on television.

The daily said Yu set off the dynamite, killing himself and 30 others. It was not clear whether Yu Mengjuan was his mother and whether she was killed in the blast.

Televisions are still rare in many parts of rural China, and it is common for crowds to congregate at the homes of people with TVs.

U.S., Japan hold naval drill

TOKYO (AP) — Japanese and U.S. naval forces today began a weeklong joint anti-submarine drill in the Pacific Ocean, defense officials said.

The exercises are being held in a 600-mile stretch of ocean from Izu-Oshima island, south of Tokyo, to Japan's southwestern main island of Kyushu, said Lt. Cmdr. Masanobu Ohtsuka, spokesman for the Maritime Self-Defense Force.

It is the 66th joint anti-submarine drill between the two forces since 1957 and the first time both sides contributed military transport vessels, he said.

The exercise involves 12 Maritime Self-Defense Force vessels, including transport ships, destroyers, submarines and anti-submarine patrol planes.

Six vessels, including one transport ship and two destroyers, joined the exercises from the U.S. Seventh Fleet based in Yokosuka, Ohtsuka said.

Officials planned to stage a mock battle to defend a group of transport vessels from a hypothetical attack by enemy submarines, Ohtsuka said.

Firm drops drilling bid

LONDON (AP) — British Petroleum has dropped its bid to drill for oil next to a southern English forest where A.A. Milne conjured up the immortal Winnie the Pooh more than 60 years ago, the Osberver newspaper reported Sunday.

It said the giant oil firm decided not to appeal the East Sussex County Council's refusal to grant a test-drilling permit for the area near Ashdown Forest.

Milne's son, Christopher Robin Milne, 67, was quoted as saying, however: "There never can be a total victory while it is government policy to drill for oil regardless of what lies on the surface.

"They will drill anywhere, except possibly under Buckingham Palace."

In 1925 the Milne family moved from London to the Sussex County woodlands, near Upper Hartfield village, which became the home of Christopher and his Bear of Very Little Brain.

3 people killed, 6 hurt in Belfast pub gunfire

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Two gunmen opened fire on a lunch-time crowd in a pub patronized by Roman Catholics, and police said three people were killed and six wounded.

The gunmen escaped in a stolen taxi after the attack on Sunday.

The incident fueled fears of reprisals in the sectarian warfare that has ravaged this predominantly Protestant British province since 1969.

An anonymous telephone caller to the British Broadcasting Corp. claimed responsibility in the name of the Protestant Action Force, which has been linked to outlawed paramilitary groups responsible for assassinating scores of Catholics in the early 1970s.

However, the BBC said the caller did not give a recognized code.

Witnesses said there were about 20 people in the Avenue Bar in Union Street when the attack occurred. The gunmen had stolen a taxi in the nearby Protestant Shankill Road just before the attack and afterward drove off in the direction of the Shankill, police said.

Police said two people died at the scene and the third was pronounced dead on arrival at a hospital. They identified the victims as Damien Devlin, 24, Paul McBride, 27, and Stephen McGahan.

Ten people were taken to hospitals, six with gunshot wounds and four suffering from shock, police said.

Britain's Northern Ireland secretary, Tom King, called the killings a "revolting outrage."

Gerry Adams, president of the Irish Republican Army's legal political wing, Sinn Fein, said the attack was "an attempt at premeditated mass murder."

Beggars called hazard

BEIJING (AP) — China has 670,000 beggars, and many have turned to begging as an easy way to make money, an official newspaper said today.

The China Daily said the nation's first conference on the homeless, which ended in Beijing last week, concluded that beggars pose a hazard to social order and should rouse wide concern.

The daily and other news reports said the number of beggars at the end of 1987 was down from 1.05 million in 1979, but that there has been a rise in "professional" beggars seeking money rather than food.

It said only 20 percent of those who beg do so because of natural disasters or personal misfortunes. Most turn to begging for the money, while others have mental problems or are runaways escaping arranged marriages.

Iceland devalues currency

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — Iceland devalued its currency, the kronur, by 10 percent after panic buying forced the central bank to halt all currency trading.

The government, which announced the devaluation on Sunday, said the central bank had requested the move. It said the bank also could devalue the kronur by a further 3 percent if that was deemed necessary in the near future.

The central bank halted all currency trading Friday after 25 percent of its foreign currency reserves dried up in frantic buying of foreign currencies by individuals and companies anticipating a 20 percent devaluation of the kronur.

The three-party coalition government announced the devaluation after lengthy discussions over the weekend.

Venice ritual renewed

VENICE, Italy (AP) — In a ritual that began nearly 1,000 years ago, the mayor of Venice renewed the city's links to the sea with fanfare and festivities.

Mayor Antonio Casellati and other dignitaries were in a procession of boats that went from St. Mark's Square to the port of St. Nicolo del Lido.

Casellati then blessed a ring and a laurel wreath and cast them into the sea, repeating the words of the ancient rite: "As a sign of eternal dominance, we marry you, oh sea."

The ceremony was first performed in 997 when the forces of Doge Pietro Orseolo II, the chief magistrate of the republic of Venice, conquered Dalmatia, a province of Croatia. The ritual was then repeated every year until 1797 when Napoleon canceled the ceremony after his troops conquered the area.

Soviet conference likely to be more important than Summit

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. experts on the Soviet Union expect little from the Moscow summit and are looking beyond it to an early summer Communist Party conference which by all accounts will be a watershed in Soviet politics.

Mikhail S. Gorbachev appears likely to survive for at least a couple more years as the party's general secretary, but he has failed to gain full control of the policy-making Central Committee, the 300-plus member body that so far has stymied his far-reaching reform efforts, according to the experts.

They view the summit primarily as part of Gorbachev's effort to cement his control.

Gorbachev's reforms so far have not improved Soviet living standards, according to Western dispatches from Moscow and a recent analysis by the Central Intelligence Agency.

His biggest success has been in the foreign policy arena: improving the image of the Soviet Union around the world by improving relations with the United States, by making arms control proposals and by agreeing to withdraw the Red Army from Afghanistan.

He can brighten his own image further, at home and abroad, by playing host in the Kremlin to a smiling Ronald Reagan, who built a career on anti-communism and who began his presidency by branding the Soviet Union the "evil empire."

"Probably the most important thing Gorbachev needs is the symbolism of having Ronald Reagan in Moscow," said Marshall Shulman, a Columbia University lecturer and a top Carter administration expert on Soviet affairs.

American and Soviet officials have lowered public expectations for the summit, as the Senate delayed ratification of an arms control treaty signed last December and U.S. and Soviet negotiators remain far apart on a proposed pact to sharply cut strategic arsenals.

But, said a senior government analyst who spoke on condition of anonymity, "both parties want to see the summit come off smoothly. They don't want any embarrassments. They have made progress in the relationship."

Shulman agreed that "a successful, symbolic summit would be useful for Gorbachev, but it would not solve his problems. His basic problems are rooted in the domestic economy."

A summit marred by disagreements, on the other hand, could weaken Gorbachev's case at home, said the senior U.S. government analyst.

"The ferment in the Soviet leadership is as great as at any time since the 1920's," said the government expert. "But this will not be played out at the summit. We won't see much disarray there."

Gorbachev and his chief rival on the ruling Politburo, Yegor Ligachev, are expected to maintain their harmonious front, at least through the summit, said the analyst.

That is unless Gorbachev manages to ease Ligachev from the powerful party secretariat into the largely ceremonial post of president, now held by Andrei Gromyko, another Politburo member thought to be wary of sweeping reforms.

Under this scenario, which could be played out at meetings of the Central Committee and the Supreme Soviet expected the week before the May 29-June 2 summit, Ligachev would probably remain in the Politburo but Gromyko would not.

However, the Central Committee has been a thorn in Gorbachev's side, and may balk at leadership changes until he can gain greater control over it.

At the most recent party congress, in early 1987, Gorbachev replaced about 40 percent of the Central Committee, but needs to fill another 15 to 20 percent of the seats with his people for a comfortable majority, said Shulman.

The party conference is his chance to do that.

Agreement is reached to end three-day prison standoff

STRINGTOWN, Okla. (AP) — Inmates released one of their last two hostages this morning as prison officials and legislators worked to bring a peaceful ending to a three-day prison uprising that caused $2.5 million in damage.

The last of the eight hostages initially were to be released this morning, after officials agreed hours earlier to televise the surrender of the inmates.

Ronnie Scott, a corrections officer, was freed about 10 a.m. The release left Harold Yoder, a sergeant, with the inmates. Scott was undergoing medical examination, said prison spokesman Jerry Massie.

Two groups of inmates each were holding a hostage, Massie said. The group that released Scott was being searched and loaded onto the bus, he said.

A bus was brought to the prison to ferry 20 inmates to an unidentified state prison. However, at midmorning, the inmates had not surrendered.

Officials also agreed to a demand from the approximately 20 inmates that three state legislators the convicts met with Sunday would witness today's surrender, said Department of Corrections spokesman Jerry Massie.

The agreement was reached after a guard held with the others since the uprising began was released late Sunday, officials said.

One inmate and one guard sustained minor injuries during the takeover of the overcrowded, medium-security Mack Alford Correctional Center.

After the surrender, the inmates were be taken to another state penitentiary, Massie said.

Under the agreement, they were to let the hostages go after a bus arrives to take them away, then come out of the dormitory where they have been holed up since late Friday, said prison spokeswoman Anita Trammell. Both hostages and inmates would be given medical examinations, she said.

The bus to take the inmates to another prison arrived outside the center at 8:20 a.m. but did not immediately enter the prison grounds.

In exchange for food and the earlier meeting with the three state lawmakers, the inmates late Sunday released prison Capt. Lewis McGee.

"He's tired; he's in good health. He's glad its over with," Ms. Trammell said. She said the other hostages also were thought to be unharmed.

Authorities gave the convicts soft drinks, ice cream and cigarettes at their request, said corrections spokeswoman Joy Hadwiger. Temperatures in the area Sunday were in the low 90s.

The inmates also demanded restoration of electricity and meetings with reporters and an American Civil Liberties Union attorney who has helped prisoners, Ms. Trammell said. Officials did not say if those demands would be met.

One of the three lawmakers, Rep. Walt Roberts, said late Sunday the convicts feared an overnight raid, but he did not believe that would happen.

"The DOC is not going to do this but they don't know that," Roberts said.

In addition to corrections officers, an 18-member Highway Patrol tactical unit and as many as 40 other patrol officers have kept watch on the prison.

AIDS pamphlet could save lives

Because there is no cure for AIDS, the $17 million the federal government is spending to mail a brochure on acquired immune deficiency syndrome to 107 million American households may be the best expenditure of tax dollars in a long time.

The eight-page brochure prepared by the U.S. Surgeon General and the Centers for Disease Control of the U.S. Public Health Service provides the only known certain protection against AIDS — prevention.

"Some of the issues involved in this brochure may not be things you are used to discussing openly," wrote Surgeon General C. Everett Koop in the pamphlet that is scheduled to be mailed to virtually every U.S. household by June 30.

But if people read the brochure when it arrives at their homes, not only will lives be saved, but there can be avoidance of the type of panic that has already caused children with AIDS to be turned away from schools and resulted in some people being denied the opportunity to continue in their jobs.

You can get AIDS, the brochure says clearly in short, easy-to-understand stories, from having sex with a person infected with AIDS or sharing drug needles and syringes with an infected person. The AIDS virus can be transferred from a mother to a baby before or during birth. Some hemophilia victims have received the virus because of infected blood, although steps now taken to protect blood supplies have greatly reduced that source of the disease.

Equally important, especially in averting the panic this horrible disease can trigger, is a discussion of how we cannot get AIDS. You cannot, the brochure emphasizes, get AIDS from an insect bite, such as from a mosquito. You cannot get it from a kiss or from saliva, sweat, tears or urine. You cannot get AIDS by donating blood.

Surgeon General Koop and others in the medical community who helped prepare the AIDS brochure have done a great favor for Americans, especially for those people who have been confused by the sometimes heated political debates the disease has inspired.

There currently is no vaccine to protect us from AIDS. The "Understanding AIDS" brochure that will soon arrive in your mailbox and the advice it contains may be the best protection we now have against the disease.

Wish war on drugs

The House of Representatives has voted overwhelmingly to require the armed forces to "substantially halt the unlawful penetration of the United States borders by aircraft and vessels carrying narcotics" within 45 days. Will lawmakers next command the tides to stop?

Since 1981, the United States has doubled, to nearly $800 million, the amount of money it spends on interdicting drug shipments across the border, including armed forces support for the Customs Service and the Coast Guard. According to estimates compiled by government agencies, the percentage of smuggled cocaine seized at the border has gone up from 2 percent to 25 percent since the beginning of the decade. Yet in the same period, the U.S. price of cocaine has fallen by half, and officials estimate that the amount successfully imported has doubled. The purpose of interdiction is to discourage drug consumption by making drugs more costly and less available. By that measure, the increased interdiction efforts of the last seven years have been a stupendous failure, especially in the case of cocaine, the nation's most vexing problem.

By pulling the military more deeply into the war against smugglers, the House is hoping for something to change. But smugglers enjoy important advantages in the struggle. It's nearly impossible, even with a major investment, to achieve full radar coverage of thousands of miles of border. Even were the military able to track all the hundreds of thousands of planes and boats that ply the border areas, it would still have to identify likely smugglers among all the legitimate traffic, then pursue and arrest the smugglers before they drop off their small cargoes in the huge expanse of the southwest desert or the gulf coastline.

Sen. Sam Nunn, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, has suggested that interdicting most drug traffic would require 58 more sophisticated WACS radar aircraft and the entire Navy. At the least, it would require diverting billions of dollars worth of ships, radar surveillance planes, jet fighters, Army helicopters and soldiers from their defense missions.

And with what effect? A Rand Corp. study of military drug interdiction done recently for the Pentagon finds that even large increases in the rate of seizures of cocaine are likely to have little impact on domestic drug prices, consumption or availability. All the cocaine consumed annually in the United States could be imported in a single cargo plane. A typical shipment of 250 kilograms, purchased for $2 million in Colombia, is worth $9 million delivered on this side of the border. The risks of seizure would have to be very high before greedy people give up trying to make that kind of money for flying, driving or sailing a few hundred miles with an easily hidden cargo.

Almost everyone wants to stop drug smuggling. But effective anti-drug policy requires more than wishes and election-year posturing. Before the military is thrown more heavily into drug interdiction, Congress should determine that the nation's defenses won't thereby be weakened and that the military expenditure will yield better results than putting the same amount of money into programs — education and treatment — that will attack the problem at its source: Americans' appetite for illegal drugs. Until then, sending the military into the drug war is nothing but irresponsible and mindless political pandering.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, May 16, the 137th day of 1988. There are 229 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On May 16, 1929, the first Academy Awards were given out during a banquet at the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel. The movie "Wings" won "best production"; Emil Jannings and Janet Gaynor were named best actor and best actress, not for any one picture.

On this date:

In 1763, the English lexicographer, author and wit Samuel Johnson first met his future biographer, James Boswell.

In 1770, Marie Antoinette, then 14 years old, married the future King Louis XVI of France, who was 15.

In 1866, Congress authorized minting of the 5-cent piece.

In 1868, the U.S. Senate failed by one vote to convict President Andrew Johnson as it took its first ballot on one of 11 articles of impeachment against him.

In 1905, actor Henry Fonda was born in Grand Island, Neb.

In 1920, Joan of Arc was canonized in Rome.

JACK ANDERSON

Bush described as 'sensible, decent'

WASHINGTON — The presidential race has narrowed to three finalists. Since the winner will have a powerful impact on our lives, we should certainly get to know them before choosing among them.

Jack Anderson

With this in mind, we have put each one under the magnifying glass and we have tried to focus on the private man behind the public image. Today we appraise George Bush.

He's an authentic American aristocrat, blue blood, blue chip, who was chauffeured to day school, was sent to prep school and was graduated from Yale. His mother's father built a railroad, played championship polo and founded golf's Walker Cup competition. His father's father headed a steel company.

Yet, George Herman Walker Bush is not the pampered dilettante he might appear to be. He left prep school at 18 to become the Navy's youngest pilot in World War II. He flew a flaming torpedo bomber over the Japanese island of Chichi-shima, refusing to bail out until he had completed his bombing run. He was rescued and rejoined his squadron instead of invoking his option to go home.

At Yale after the war, he was Phi Beta Kappa and captain of the baseball team. He then packed his wife and new baby into a red Studebaker and set out for oil country. If he never quite acquired the look of a rough-and-tumble Texan, he rolled up his sleeves and played the part in the West Texas boom fields. He earned a small fortune on some dog-and-cat ventures that paid off.

But from boyhood, Bush had his eye on the White House. The idea of public service was bred into his bones. He moved up the political ladder — congressman, senatorial candidate, United Nations ambassador, Republican national chairman, head of the first mission to the Chinese mainland, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, vice president — as if he were training for the presidency.

Intimates agree that Bush's life is founded on God, home and country. He is a devout Christian, a family man and an unabashed patriot. The word friends use most often to describe him is "decent."

As a politician, Bush has also demonstrated a chameleon's ability to adjust to political change. He is a pragmatist who has learned how to weave enough ambiguity, evasion and obfuscation into his postures so that he won't alienate any major constituency.

He is now trying to move delicately out from under Ronald Reagan's shadow, striving alternately to bask in the president's triumphs and evade his failures. This has left Bush in the posture, unsatisfying to all, of half-completed retreat. Yet, those who know him insist he would never compromise his basic values. An exhaustive examination of his political past reveals a defender of the free market who is suspicious of government solutions.

He possesses a businessman's passion for balanced books and efficient operations. He would reduce the federal budget by tightening the purse strings. He would look for the most cuts in social programs, but he is willing to trim "some defense spending."

Bush sees a government role, though, in helping U.S. firms become what he calls "competitively efficient." He also wants to hold down taxes "to the minimum necessary to ensure a safe society, allowing each individual to have more money and freedom of choice on how to spend it."

When it comes to foreign policy, Bush is a hardliner who would continue to strengthen the nation's defenses on land and sea and in space. He would avoid situations like the Iran-contra affair and refuse to negotiate with terrorists. He would stay tough with the Ayatollah Khomeini, intervene to defend democracy in Central America and crack down on drug traffickers.

He would not be a great communicator nor great innovator, his admirers agree. But Bush would likely be a solid, sensible, competent president who would hold the government largely on its present course.

PLENTY OF WHISTLEBLOWERS — Judging from the response to a government fraud hotline, there is no shortage of people keeping a critical eye on Uncle Sam. The General Accounting Office established the hotline nine years ago to take calls from people with information about wrongdoing in government.

The GAO recently evaluated the success of the hotline and counted more than 94,000 calls over the nine years.

MINI-EDITORIAL — It is fashionable to bad mouth the French. We're reluctant to add to the chorus, but they make it so easy. In the global fight against terrorism, the French have covered their own derrieres first, pandering to vermin in hope that their own country will be spared a hit. The recent release of French hostages held in Lebanon stinks of compromise and concessions — concessions almost as rank as trading arms for hostages. Now, the French government has engineered an early release from prison for Capt. Dominique Prieur. In 1985, the French agent had a hand in blowing up the Greenpeace ship, Rainbow Warrior, killing a photographer. She was sentenced to a meager three years and served less than two. Freedom for the hostages and Prieur was unabashedly timed with French elections, proving again that the French will prostitute themselves for personal gain as well as for the national good. At least they're consistent.

CHARLEY REESE

Americans need to decide who's good, bad

People sometimes ask what can be done about terrorism and the answer is nothing if what they really mean to ask is how can it be stopped.

Charley Reese

Terrorism cannot be stopped because it works. For groups too small to make conventional war against a great power terrorism offers a way to strike a symbolic blow. For a great power like the Soviet Union, terrorism offers a way to disrupt the lives of its enemies without showing its ugly hand. It's also useful in removing key people if you wish to include assassinations in your definition of terrorism.

Personally, I don't. I define terrorism as an attack against randomly chosen civilian victims. Assassinations are a tactic of unconventional or guerrilla warfare.

A bomb placed in a supermarket is terrorism. Shooting or bombing an ambassador is unconventional war.

Political types have traditionally been more concerned with propaganda than with truth and thus all their enemies are terrorists. Our own politicians are guilty, too.

The bombing of the Marines in Lebanon was branded as terrorism but actually it was an attack against a military target.

Of course it suited our politicians to call it terrorism better than explaining why they put our Marines into a war zone with neither a logical mission nor appropriate rules of engagement. I blame Secretary of State George Shultz more than I do the makers of the bomb.

But if terrorism cannot be eliminated, it can be dealt with and the first step, which we have yet to take, is to recognize it for what it is, an act of war.

No act of terrorism should ever go unanswered. They strike us, then we strike them. When we can identify those who plan terrorist acts, then we should send men out to hunt them down and kill them. Attempting to use a peacetime, civilian criminal justice approach to terrorism is folly. The job should be handed over to a specialized commando unit of the army.

Secondly, we should recognize that terrorists cannot operate without the cooperation of governments. Every terrorist group in the world receives some assistance from some government. When those governments are identified, all ties, diplomatic and economic, should be severed immediately. If they persist, then diplomatic and economic sanctions should be applied.

Technically we are supposed to be doing that but the State Department finds it much too inconvenient. A general housecleaning of the State Department would be a good start toward revitalizing American foreign policy.

The key weapon against terrorism is sound intelligence. That means strengthening with personnel, money, and appropriate guidelines the counter-intelligence capability of the FBI, which is responsible for domestic intelligence.

It also means clear directions to and firm control of the CIA which is responsible for overseas intelligence. In the past the CIA has relied on the PLO for some of its information which is foolishness to the third power. The PLO is little more than the Middle East branch of the KGB. Perhaps the CIA personnel should be gathered together and told, in plain language, who the good guys are and who the bad guys are.

Finally it is pointless to worry about terrorism if we are going to go on pretending that there is no such thing as a fifth column in the United States and that communists are just cranks with different opinions. The principal sources of training and arms for terrorists worldwide are the Soviet Union and Cuba.

We as individuals must disabuse ourselves of the notion, so common among American liberals, that we are living in a plastic bubble, isolated and immune from the dangers and problems that beset other people in other countries.

We, too, need to decide who are the good guys and who are the bad guys. Some liberals persist in viewing their own government as more of a threat than the Soviet Union or communism. It isn't. Our government is sometimes foolish and inept but it isn't evil. Any American who can't figure that out is a hopeless dope.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Rock today truly would make sailors blush!

In doing research for another project it was necessary that I obtain the lyrics of some of today's rock songs.

Grizzard

I initially tuned in to a rock station on my radio and attempted to copy down the lyrics.

I could make out an occasional "Baaaa-by!" but that was about it. Today's rock music is generally two decibels higher than the Concorde taking off with a busted muffler, and that drowns out most of the lyrics.

I became interested in rock lyrics back when Mrs. Senator Al Gore (Tipper) said they were filthy and suggested they be printed on the outside of albums so parents could monitor what their children were listening to.

This, of course, brought outcries of censorship and reminded me of the same sort of uproar we had when I was a kid over the record "Louie, Louie" by the Kingsmen.

You couldn't understand any of the words to that song, but it had a nice beat and so all the teenagers listened to it.

A rumor got out, however, that the lyrics to "Louie, Louie" were dirty. I slowed my copy of the record down to 33 but all I heard were the same unintelligible lyrics being mumbled a great deal lower and slower.

Don't matter. "Louie, Louie" finally was banned by school officials and parents and no longer could be played at the Friday night record dances at the National Guard Armory.

Many years later, however, I did see a copy of the lyrics to "Louie, Louie" and they weren't dirty at all. They were stupid, but they weren't dirty.

I figured the same thing was going on with today's rock music. Tipper Gore was just being a buttinsky.

Then, however, I obtained some of the lyrics of today's rock music by means other than copying them down off the radio.

I was shocked. Drunken sailors wouldn't sing things like that.

Ever hear of Judas Priest's "Eat Me Alive"? or Samson's "Go to Hell"? or Great White's enchanting "On Your Knees"?

I'm embarrassed just typing the titles in a family newspaper. I wouldn't dare print any of the lyrics here, lyrics that are filled with violence and anger. These people sing about sexual escapades where you could break a leg or get an eye poked out.

There's a reference to "slamming you to the floor," as well as one line that begins, "I'm going to force you at gunpoint... "

The last thing you, as a parent, want to see happen is for those lyrics to be printed on the outside of albums so your kids will know exactly what they are listening to behind all that noise.

"Louie, Louie" was a comparative lullaby. Rock today is entirely something else.

How does the Penthouse letters set to music grab you, Baaaa-by?

Former trooper says he'd beg for electric chair if necessary

Duncan

ATMORE, Ala. (AP) — Joe Duncan, whose dark-blue state trooper uniform has been traded in for the prison whites of death row, says if all legal appeals fail, he will beg to be executed for the murder of his trooper girlfriend.

"If we develop the evidence we expect to in the next few weeks, I'll get a new trial," Duncan said last week during his first interview from death row at Holman Prison.

But if the appeals fail, the only choices are life without parole, or death. Duncan, 33, speaking amid clanging metal doors and inmates' yells, said he would prefer execution.

"If I had no chance of getting out of this institution...I'd beg them to put me in the electric chair," he said.

Duncan was sentenced April 12 in the shooting death of Trooper Elizabeth Cobb, 31, whose body was found Oct. 12 in her parked patrol car behind a church where Duncan said they used to meet. She was shot three times in the head.

Duncan initially denied even knowing where the church was located. But he changed his story, saying he found Miss Cobb's still-warm body, and failed to tell anyone for fear of being implicated.

Jurors recommended life without parole for Duncan after prosecutors presented a case based mostly on circumstantial evidence stemming from Duncan's taped statements to investigators.

"If I had no chance of getting out of this institution-...I'd beg them to put me in the electric chair."
— Joe Duncan, inmate

Circuit Judge J.C. Norton, however, overturned the recommendation and sentenced him to death.

On May 12, Duncan's attorneys formally asked Norton for a new trial. Among their reasons was an allegation that an unidentified juror may have known Duncan and Miss Cobb.

Officials believe Duncan is the state's first law officer to be sentenced to death.

"There is no way (to explain) what it's like to go from an Alabama state trooper — and I'm talking about probably the most prestigous law enforcement job in this state — to death row in six months," said Duncan.

Prosecutors said Duncan killed Miss Cobb to collect $350,000 from a life insurance policy that went into effect 10 days before her death. They said the policy was taken out June 30, and that Duncan was named as beneficiary.

Duncan said he developed a "romantic relationship" with Miss Cobb in early June and that they almost immediately began discussing marriage.

"If Joe Duncan had put a gun to Elizabeth's head and killed her for money, he ought to be put to death," said Duncan.

But Duncan, a 10-year law enforcement veteran, said he could have pulled off Miss Cobb's murder had he wanted. "I could have done it in a manner that wouldn't have pointed a finger at me."

He said the chief prosecutor, Assistant Attorney General Bill Wasden, misrepresented the facts while the judge allowed jurors to hear illegal evidence.

For instance, he said the prosecution lied when it said he was badly in debt and needed the insurance money to pay, among other things, child support for his four children from a previous marriage.

Duncan said he could have presented documented evidence that most of his debts were cleared in October.

Duncan said he was pleased with his attorneys, but "dissatisfied with the defense we went with."

Duncan did not have harsh words for the jury, saying he could see "where they probably came up with guilty (verdict)."

Duncan, who is among Alabama's 96 inmates awaiting execution, said he does not know whether anyone he helped put in jail might be imprisoned at Holman.

He is receiving special security arrangements. Inmates are cleared from halls when Duncan is coming through, and he exercises alone for 45 minutes a day in a fenced area he compared to a dog run.

"The inmates have been better to me than the institution has," he said. "The animals at the Birmingham zoo are in more humane conditions than what we're in...

"In my cell, when I stand beside my bunk I can't take one step without hitting the wall."

NATION IN BRIEF

Brooklyn College changes school song

NEW YORK (AP) — In 1933, Brooklyn College staged a competition to choose an official anthem. The winner began with these inspirational lines:

"On campus green, with towers of marble
Lifting white spires in the air.
Oh, Brooklyn is our Alma Mater,
And she is wondrous fair."

Not to mention wondrous gullible. Those lyrics, it turns out a half century later, were a joke, and the college has decided to adopt a new alma mater.

In 1933, the college was a new, working-class school spread out in rented space in a half-dozen buildings in downtown Brooklyn. There was no campus green, no towers of marble to lift white spires in the air.

But a professor decided that the college needed an alma mater.

The university now has a new song and officials say it is a big improvement, and not because the composer recently donated $250,000 to the scholarship fund.

About 100 fish with Bush

ON THE ROGUE RIVER, Ore. (AP) — The close-up is a simple picture of quiet relaxation — a man wearing a U.S. Forest Service hat casts his line into the water in hopes of hooking a spring Chinook salmon.

But the wide-angle view is different — Vice President George Bush fishing with rafts, kayaks and boats full of Secret Service agents, reporters, camera crews and high-tech communications gear trailing him down the rapids.

And above on the cliffs is the motorcade — limousine, police cars and ambulance moving slowly down the road Sunday.

Such a break in the middle of a weeklong Western campaign swing is not just a matter of deciding to rent a boat. Bush's seven-mile ride down this southern Oregon river involved nearly 100 people, on the river and on the shore.

Burglar found asleep

NEWBERRY, S.C. (AP) — A man who broke into a convenience store, drank several beers and fell asleep was arrested when it opened the next morning, authorities said.

Stephen Ray Kirkpatrick, 21, of Newberry County, was charged with burglary in the break-in at Buddy's Open Air Market, authorities said.

Kirkpatrick was arrested early Thursday after the manager found him sleeping behind the counter, with nine packs of cigarettes in his coat lining and surrounded by 16 cans of beer, several of which were empty, said Sheriff's Chief Deputy Tom Summer said

Store manager Mac Jones said the man told him he was waiting for the owner, "but it looked to me like he just broke in and had himself a little party."

Kirkpatrick, who is unemployed, was being held on $5,000 bond in the county detention center, authorities said.

Deal creates questions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration will be hounded by unanswered questions for months if it negotiates a deal with Panamanian strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega after taking tough stands on Nicaragua and Libya, says a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., chairman of the Foreign Relations subcommittee on Western Hemisphere and Peace Corps affairs, on Sunday questioned the administration's recent foreign policy stance. Kerry opposes U.S. willingness to drop drug-smuggling indictments against Noriega in exchange for the Panamanian's departure from his country.

"Why does an administration which was willing to be tough with (Libyan leader Moammar) Gadhafi, which has spent 7½ years sometimes flouting the law in its policy against Nicaragua...why are they folding where, in fact, they have far more compelling reasons to be tough with unanimity on both Democratic and Republican sides than they have had in many of those endeavors?" Kerry asked on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press."

"That unanswered question is going to dog this administration for months and perhaps even years to come," he said.

Debates may end Tuesday

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate could begin debate as early as Tuesday on the U.S.-Soviet medium-range missile treaty, opening a race to ratify it before President Reagan's summit with Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Just 13 days remain before the May 29 opening of the Moscow summit, and it is an open question whether the Senate can conclude debate on the landmark arms control pact in the time remaining.

The last pre-debate hurdle came today as the Senate's Foreign Relations, Intelligence and Armed Services committee held hearings to examine the anti-cheating arrangements agreed to in Geneva last week by Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

Reagan wants to take a ratified treaty to the Kremlin to spur further arms control progress, especially on the Strategic Arms Reduction or START treaty aimed at cutting long-range nuclear arms by as much as 50 percent.

Bear enjoys new home

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Thor, a 6-foot-2, 450-pound pet bear, is enjoying his new country home after being forced out of the suburbs, says a woman who calls herself his "grandma."

"Thor is very happy. He has a pond to splash around in," said Walterine Crosby, mother of the cinnamon-black bear's owners.

"We miss him terribly," Mrs. Crosby said Sunday.

Gertrude Brown, mother-in-law of Democratic Presidential candidate Jesse Jackson, displays her diploma during graduation ceremonies at the Hampton Coliseum in Hampton, Va. on Sunday

Mother-in-law's education struggle symbol for Jackson

HAMPTON, Va. (AP) — To her daughter, she was the "chief example of my life." To her classmates, she was a grandmother who sometimes seemed as young as they. To her son-in-law, Jesse Jackson, she was a symbol of stubborn determination in the face of overwhelming odds.

On Sunday, Gertrude Brown graduated from college at the age of 61. And Jackson, who continues his quest for the Democratic presidential nomination despite mounting obstacles, was here to pay tribute to her.

For Mrs. Brown, a teen-age unwed mother and high-school dropout who went on to raise five children, a college diploma was a lifelong dream.

"She is of strong character, and she never surrendered," Jackson told the crowd of 11,000 at commencement ceremonies for predominantly black Hampton University.

"Against all odds she is graduating today...That is what this graduation is all about," he said.

Jackson has always cited humble beginnings as a source of strength. He did so again Sunday as he praised the mother of his wife, Jacqueline.

He opened his speech with a biblical story from the Book of Acts about a shipwreck. Those who could swam to shore, while the others clung to broken pieces of the ship to survive, he said.

"I want to talk today about the challenge to keep hope alive — of making it on broken pieces," said Jackson. "Keep hope alive. Keep hope alive."

He described Mrs. Brown's battle to raise her family and educate her children while working full time. Three of her children went on to win advanced degrees, he said.

"I can remember her as a struggling young woman, who was a positive person, a realist," said daughter Jacqueline in an interview. "I can also remember a number of whippings because my vocabulary contained phrases like 'I can't.' She was my chief example in life."

When she was 49, Mrs. Brown got her high school diploma. Then she slowly began her college education, still working full time, taking one or two classes a semester.

The degree she won Sunday was in social work. Mrs. Brown said she wanted skills to help people — especially teen-agers who become parents, as she did. She retains a special fondness for young people.

"I'll miss all those students on campus — they were like my grandchildren, but they talked to me like I was their age," she said.

"I'm not stopping here," she said. "I'm going to get my master's degree."

"The struggle must continue," he said. "We must not surrender."

El Paso High School assistant principal Manuel Aguirre insists that students with abnormal problems outside the school environment should not be taught with normal methods.

Principal takes troubled students under his wing

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Once in a while, Manuel Aguirre yanks truants out of bed, shoves them into the shower and then escorts them to school.

El Paso High School students define Aguirre as an eccentric problem-solver. Aguirre calls himself a hard-nosed assistant principal dispensing tough discipline with a personal touch.

This year, Aguirre adopted 15 of the school's worst problem students and tucked them under his wing.

His unorthodox methods are working so well that El Paso High plans to enlist all 93 teachers next year to guide not only the potential dropout but the high achiever and average student as well.

Aguirre is campus parent, counselor and inspirational leader for 15 to 20 boys and girls, mostly freshmen and sophomores. Some students were failing so badly that they had not earned any credits in four years of high school.

Aguirre doesn't patrol the hallways with a baseball bat to make his point. He simply badgers students, demands performance.

He directs students to tutoring, finds them jobs, and sometimes jumps directly into their personal problems.

Teachers send progress reports and report cards directly to Aguirre.

Some hard-core cases, students frequently tossed out of school for habitual truancy or serious discipline problems, are now earning passing grades. They are suddenly caring about school.

For all this, Aguirre is earning a reputation as a miracle-worker of sorts.

Marcella "Chops" Smith, who has been struggling four years in ninth grade at El Paso High, cried when she tried to describe how Aguirre influenced her to stop being a loser. Recently, she baked a cake to celebrate Aguirre's 52nd birthday.

"I always thought I was dumb, spent a lot of time in detention," she said. "He made me understand that I can accomplish anything I want."

Miss Smith has raised her grades from zeros to 80s and 90s in the nine months under Aguirre's spell.

"He's the father I never had," she said. "He's shown me that life is beautiful."

Her mother, Estela Smith, said, "He has helped me a lot with all my children. To me, he's a special person, very giving. I've seen a total change in my daughter."

Other student testimonials:

Malcolm Hunt, 16, a towering freshman aiming to star in basketball: "Before, all I wanted to do was play basketball and cut school. He gave me a chance, taught me that without school, I can't play ball. I learned to sacrifice. It's like he defines consistency. He stayed on my butt, and now my grades are up."

Joseph Venegas, 17, sophomore, who hopes to play football without grades making him ineligible at mid-season: "I was failing pretty bad. It's like getting a second chance. Now, I'm doing my work, hitting the books."

Panamanian finds a sport by way of female curiosity

It's all a woman's fault.

Little did 14-year-old Orlando Temple know that his infatuation with a lovely young lady was going to result in him becoming the Panamanian National Fencing Champion.

"She was the most graceful thing I had ever seen," says Temple, now 51, about his run-in with fate.

"I saw her with some gear hanging around her shoulder and I was curious, so I followed her to the gym. She got changed and came out in a strange, white uniform and began to take fencing lessons. I kept hanging around watching her and finally the coach asked me if I wanted learn."

The rest is, so to speak, history.

Temple won his first novice tournament, beating older and more experienced fencers.

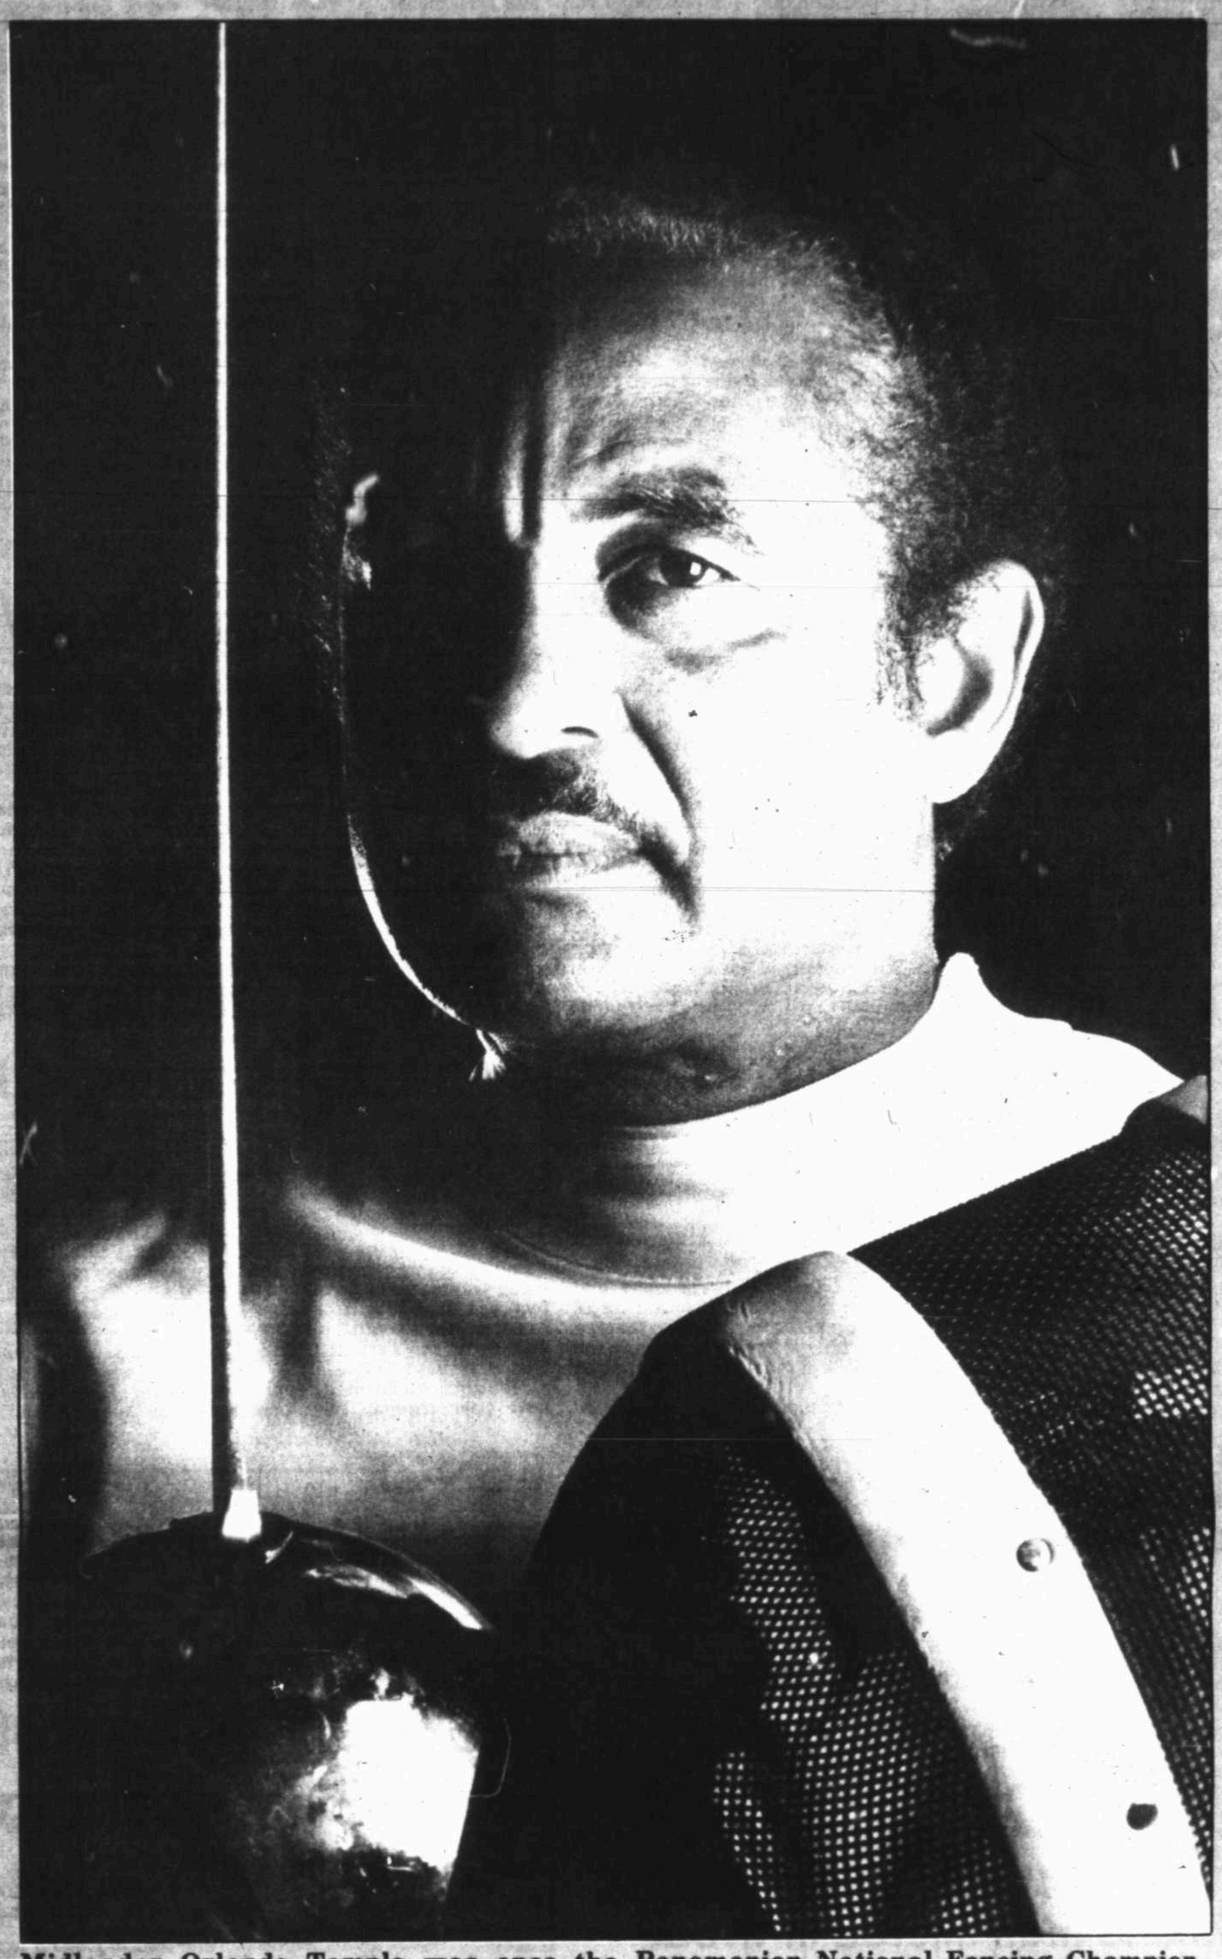
"After I won that tournament all the other girls were after me. There were prettier girls than the one I had followed after me," Temple said.

By the time he was 18 he had become accomplished enough at his sport to win the national championship in epee, one of three types of competition, the others being foil and sabre.

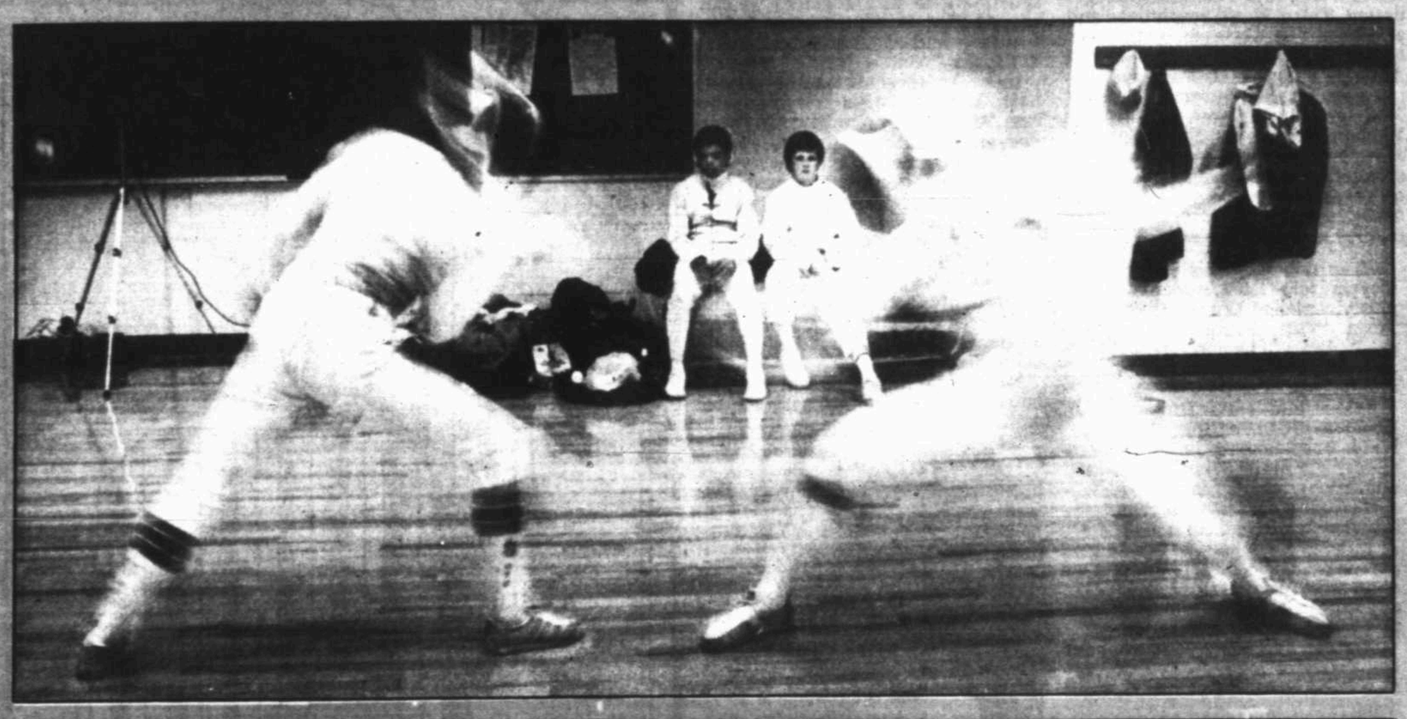
In 1962, at the age of 25, he represented Panama in the Caribbean Olympics. Although he lost in the finals he did get to meet Princess Margaret, who is a big fan of fencing. "She was very, very beautiful and graceful," recalled Temple, "now she doesn't look anything like she did then."

Soon after the Caribbean Olympics Temple came to the United States in hopes of going to New York University, unfortunately for Temple, who was still a Panamanian citizen, he got drafted by the United States Army. But the army did send Temple overseas to the home of fencing, France.

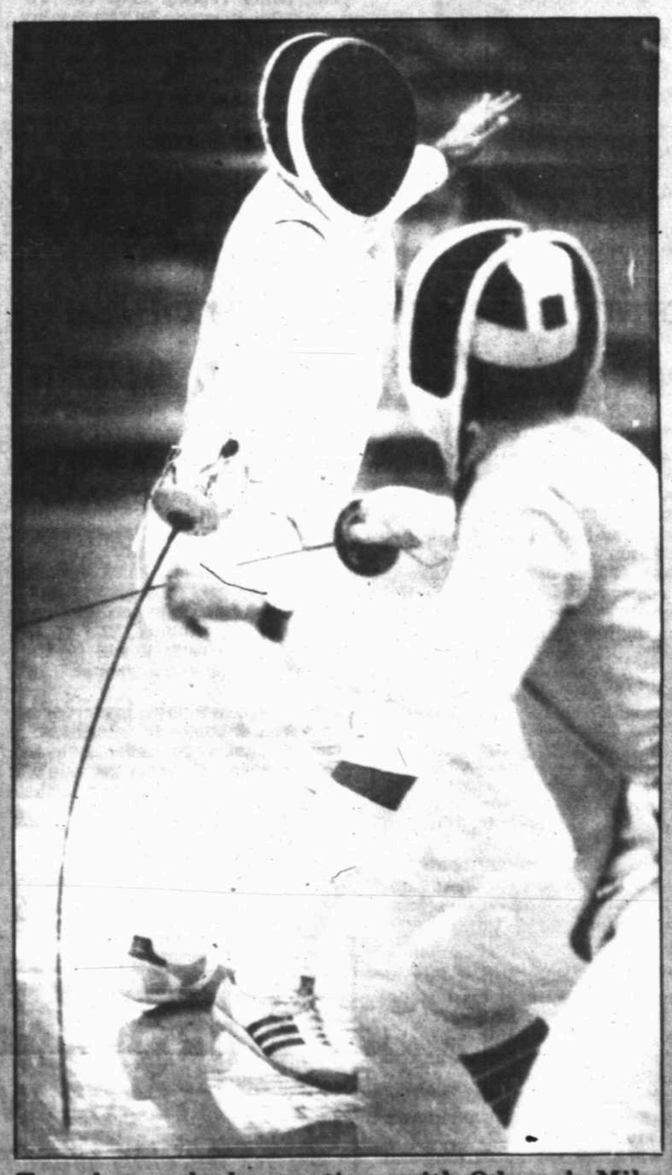
Please see FENCING, Page 2B



Midlander Orlando Temple was once the Panamanian National Fencing Champion.



Fencers Temple and Mike Husband are just a blur, above, as their sons Lanny, 14, and Chris, 13, watch the action, while Temple, right, practices outside his Midland apartment under the watchful eye of a young neighbor.



Temple regularly practices with Odessa's Mike Husband at the Odessa College Sports Center.

Survey shows blacks frustrated they don't share in city's power

DALLAS (AP) — A newspaper survey of Dallas residents showed whites and blacks have sharply different views on problems in the community.

The Dallas Morning News reported Sunday that many whites are frightened by rising crime and are impatient of minority criticisms, while minorities feel frustrated that they still do not fully share in the city's power and opportunities.

"I think it's at a boiling point in this city," said Pettis Norman, a black Dallas businessman and co-chairman of Dallas Together, the mayor's task force on ethnic relations.

The survey showed 42 percent of blacks believed Dallas is more racially divided than other cities of similar size, compared to 31 percent of whites. Forty-four percent of respondents of both races said race relations had deteriorated in the past five years.

"Police relations may be where it explodes, but economics is the real festering problem," said the Rev. Mark Herbener, a white minister who has preached in the predominantly black Mount Olive Lutheran Church in south Dallas for 26 years.

A racial controversy has been brewing in the police department since 1986 when a white officer shot and killed a 70-year-old black woman who had summoned police to report a burglary next door. In January of this year, a mentally disturbed black man, reportedly egged on by a few black youths in a crowd, shot and killed white Officer John Chase on a downtown street.

The survey showed 67 percent of blacks interviewed said it was definitely or probably true that Dallas police are more likely to mistreat blacks, compared to 35 percent of whites.

The recent flare up in race relations ironically comes at a time when the city has appointed a black city manager, initiated a major set of police reforms and hired its first black school superintendent.

The survey consisted of interviews with 395 white and 396 black residents, using a combination of randomly selected households with telephones in all areas of the city and targeted households in census tracts with more than 30 percent black residents.

Hispanics were excluded, as were people without telephones. The survey's margin of error was plus or minus 5 percentage points.

Some community leaders say perceptions vary partly because white residents don't really see the problems of poor minorities.

"It's a dead end to think so many people in this city can be undereducated, underemployed, underfed, underutilized and it will all work out," said Jack Lowe Jr., president and chairman of TDIndustries and one time chairman of the Dallas Alliance.

Lowe, who is white, said minorities' struggle is often overlooked.

"An awful lot of my friends are just oblivious to it. They say, 'What, I thought that was all over 20 years ago.' It's just not a big deal in their lives," he said.

He died Sunday.

Rainbow Family discusses legal plan

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — Rainbow Family members say will challenge federal efforts to regulate their planned summer gathering on U.S. Forest Service land.

During the weekend, members of the self-styled back-to-nature group met at an undisclosed location in East Texas to discuss legal strategy and select a site for the July "Rainbow Gathering of the Tribes," said spokesman Stephen Principle.

He said attorneys of the group will go to court today to challenge parts of a temporary restraining order banning the group from meeting on U.S. Forest Service land without a special use permit, which the group refuses to request.

The order was issued Thursday by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice.

On Sunday, Principle said group members were not meeting on U.S. Forest Service land, but the meetings covered legal strategy and site selection for the July annual gathering of several thousand family members.

He said the group will ask Justice to rewrite the restraining order to allow members to meet on developed recreational areas in national forests.

Forest Service officials fear the large July gathering could attract as many as 20,000 people, causing sanitation and safety hazards and enormous traffic jams.

A federal magistrate in Lufkin, a town about 120 miles northeast of Houston, postponed until Thursday a decision whether to prohibit the annual summer gathering at an East Texas forest, which has been requested by the Forest Service. Family members say they plan to fight the request.

Neither federal attorneys representing the Forest Service nor Larry Daves, the attorney representing the family, could be reached for comment Sunday.

Officials say rehabilitation program cheating homeless

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Local and state authorities are concerned that a foundation offering drug and alcohol rehabilitation and jobs for homeless men may be abusing its workforce.

The Second Chance Foundation, a self-described non-profit drug and alcohol rehabilitation house with 96 beds, promises food, shelter, therapy and a full-paying job in 90 days, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Sunday.

But former residents and social service and government workers in Tarrant County say the 3½-year-old foundation is not delivering on its promises.

"Our concern is that people not employed are being brought in or bused in to our community and are being taken advantage of, and in effect are supplying free labor for someone else's profit," said Stephen Chaney of the Tarrant County District Attorney's Office.

"We get a whole lot of people who have gone through their program and they don't seem a whole lot better off," said the Rev. Andrew Short, director of Fort Worth's Presbyterian Night Shelter.

"That's why generally they're coming to us. They need a place to stay, they're out of work and broke," he said. "I have a lot of questions about the place."

Charles Palmieri, executive director of Second Chance, said that officials who criticize his progam have never visited the foundation. But the Star-Telegram said he refused to be interviewed for their report.

According to former residents, the men at Second Chance are put to work through contracts for lawn work at apartment complexes, labor at construction sites, housekeeping at hotels and other unskilled jobs for private firms. They also work at the foundation's car wash.

The private firms pay Second Chance from the minimum wage of $3.35 per hour to $6 per hour for the men's labor. The foundation, meanwhile, pays nothing to boarders during their first month. For the next two months, they are supposed to get $5 per week along with the promise of food, shelter, a chance of clothes and substance abuse counseling.

"I saw what it was — a racket," said Leon Morrow, 35, who left after three days. "They get paid by the contractors for your work."

"It's a slave camp," added 31-year-old Willie Gibson, who says he was brought from Los Angeles in a Second Chance van.

More than $2,000 in items taken in two burglaries

From Staff Reports

Midland County Sheriff's officers are investigating two burglaries which netted burglared items valued at more than $2,000.

According to reports, a depth finder valued at $300, five fishing rods valued at $250, a house jack valued at $300, two boat batteries valued at $90, a tool box and tools valued at $50, and a battery charger valued at $25 were stolen from a storage building near the intersection of County Road 1135 North and the north service road of Interstate 20.

Reports said the items were stolen between 12:30 p.m. Friday and 11 a.m. Sunday.

In other reports, a residence and storage building east of FM 715 on CR 140 were burglarized Sunday between 10 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

A snow cone machine valued at $700 was reported stolen from the building, and a fireplace valued at $200, an exercise bicycle valued at $90, and copper tubing valued at $10 were stolen from the unoccupied residence.

Midland man injured in wreck

From Staff Reports

A 21-year-old Midland man was still hospitalized early today from injuries he sustained in a two-vehicle accident late Sunday, police said.

Rodney Avila, 1611 S. Terrell St., was listed in satisfactory condition at Midland Memorial Hospital with a broken leg, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Avila was injured about 9:35 p.m. in the 1400 block of North Lamesa Road, police reports said. The Yamaha 400 motorcycle he was driving northbound hit the rear of another vehicle which had slowed to make a left turn off Lamesa, reports said.

The wreckage caught fire and Avila's wallet was burned in the blaze, officers said.

The driver of the car, Suzie Subia, 59, suffered minor injuries in the mishap, reports said.

Avila was not wearing a helmet, according to reports.

Famous Texans plot course for State Cemetery in Austin

AUSTIN (AP) — Today's leading Texans are lining up to get into the state's most exclusive cemetery that has become the final resting place for such diverse residents as Steven F. Austin and impeached Gov. James E. Ferguson.

About 120 modern-day Texans have reservations for space in the 17.6-acre State Cemetery in Austin. Among them are House Speaker Gib Lewis, former State Supreme Court Judge Don Yarbrough, Comptroller Bob Bullock and former Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes.

Detailed maps of the State Cemetery — kind of a subterranean "Who's Who" — show the location of an estimated 2,880 present occupants and plots selected by future occupants.

"I didn't care much about the pecking order," said Rep. Barry Connelly, R-Houston. "I just didn't want anyone behind me — you know politicians."

Former state Rep. Milton Fox of Houston was precise in his instructions to the grounds keeper.

"I made one stipulation — that I didn't want to be downhill from Gib Lewis. I'd looked up at him at the speaker's podium long enough," said Fox, a Republican and well-known Lewis adversary.

Fox will be buried one furlong and six live oaks south of the Lewis plot.

To be admitted to one of the 4,000 spaces in the State Cemetery, one must either have been favored with a governor's proclamation or served as a state official, in the Legislature or in appointive office.

The state provides free burial plots for each designee and spouse. All other funeral and burial expenses must be paid privately.

A divorced official must specify which spouse gets the adjacent plot, said Clifford Beaver, superintendent of the Capitol grounds. "It's up to them to notify us if it will be the first, second or third spouse," he said.

Beaver said individual preferences vary when it comes to interment.

"Some want to be under a shade tree. Some want to be on the side of a hill or some want to be next to the road," Beaver said. "Others may choose a spot because of who they'll be next to, like someone they played cards with or served on the bench with."

FENCE

With visions of the Three Musketeers in his mind, Temple did battle with the French Air Force fencing champion — and beat him.

"I remember hearing my colonel say after I had won, 'well, there goes the Franco-American friendship.' "

Temple, who has lived in Midland since 1980, has just recently begun fencing again after putting up his foil from 1964 to 1981. He works as a traffic engineer technician for the City of Midland but wants to start teaching the age-old swashbuckling sport of fencing to Permian Basin residents who are interested in learning the sport.

"I wish there were more people interested in the sport," Temple said. "It's a human chess game. It creates good poise, it keeps your mind alert, your eyes and vision have to be always watching and your body needs to be physically fit to make the necessary moves."

Temple will be leaving for the Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs, Colorado on July 30 where he will complete a fencing coaching program that he feels will help him in starting up classes in the Midland/Odessa area. He is currently looking for a location for his classes.

He now works out with the La-Belle Fencing Club, a local group of about 15 members. He also can be seen behind his Watson Street apartment complex practicing with a target board. But he won't be wearing his white fencing outfit.

"If I go out in my suit to practice then my neighbors say, 'Look at our crazy neighbor,' " Temple said.

He had planned on teaching his 14-year-old son Lanny to be his sparring partner, but Lanny decided that it was easier to play tennis. After all, one just can't go down the street and pick up a duel.

But Lanny may eventually fall into that dangerous woman trap that happened to his father at the same age. "Women always seem to ruin a man's life," the elder Temple stated, "but this one enlightened mine.

"I don't know where she is now, but I sure wish I did."

Graduates warned of riots, budget deficit, struggles

Associated Press

The messages were almost enough to inspire a retreat into graduate school.

This year's college graduates were warned they face a mounting budget deficit, Third World revolutions and a constant struggle to maintain a competitive education system and America's middle class standards.

Journalist Bill Moyers, Treasury Secretary James Baker, FBI Director William Sessions and House Speaker Jim Wright were among several speakers who encouraged thousands of Texas college and university students in weekend graduation ceremonies around the state.

"I do not envy this year's class," Moyers told 1,400 students at the newly renamed University of North Texas. "This generation (of college graduates) will be hard-pressed to do as well...to achieve and maintain a middle-class standard."

Baker told 4,835 University of Houston graduates that the United States needs to curb its budget deficit, reform Social Security, and raise educational standards.

"I've long agreed with those who say that by tolerating a deficit we Americans have been voting to give ourselves goods and services that we don't have to pay for," he said. Baker advocates a balanced budget amendment with limits on taxation.

Sessions told 500 graduates at the University of Texas in El Paso they should maintain control in their lives.

"You do have control, always, over your attitude," he said. "Is it good, or is it bad? Is it optimistic, or is it pessimistic? Is the glass half full, or is the glass half empty? Is the race lost before the starting gun, or is there always a possibility that you will win?"

Wright, one of three speakers at commencement ceremonies at Texas A&M University over the weekend, told more than 3,100 graduates that they should have high standards for the future.

"Mediocrity is not our destiny," Wright said. "We don't have to be satisfied with that. Together we can see a better future, affirm a better future — and together we can make it happen."

In other speeches at the school, both Marine Corps Commandant Gen. Alfred Gray and U.S. Air Force Secretary Edward C. "Pete" Aldridge Jr. said war is likely for the graduating generation and the forces must be prepared with better education as well as weapons.

Gray, a member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told 87 new military officers at A&M that "in this decade or certainly in the next," U.S. fighting forces would be engaged in "revolutionary warfare" in Third World countries.

Meanwhile, Aldridge said without education, the battles will not be won.

Woman's model trains profitable business

By DAVE FERMAN

DALLAS (AP) — Bobbye Hall never cared a whit about model trains as a kid.

"Nope, I never did build one when I was young," she says. "I did like waving at the engineers as (real trains) went by, though. I just never paid attention to models."

Now model railroaders the world over pay attention to Bobbye Hall.

In her simple red brick building across from a gutted 7-Eleven store, the 79-year-old Mrs. Hall has built a nationally known hobby shop and an internationally acclaimed line of model trains.

The woman who knew nothing about trains now runs a model railroading business and a hobby shop that each gross more than $1 million per year.

"She does well what everyone else does not as well," says Fred Hamilton, advertising sales manager for the Milwaukee-based Model Railroader magazine, which has a circulation of more than 180,000.

"Her store is definitely one of the top 10 stores in the country."

Fred Hill, owner of The Original Whistlestop, a Pasadena, Calif., hobby store, says, "She's had tremendous impact on the model railroad industry."

AP Laserphoto

Dallas model train mogul Bobbye Hall never cared about model trains when she was a child, but now runs a model railroading business and a hobby shop in Dallas that each gross more than $1 million per year.

EVERY YEAR since 1966, huge shipments of Mrs. Hall's own model train line — Hallmarks — have come from factories in Japan (and since 1972, from Korea). And every year, they have gone out to more than 1,000 dealers in America, Europe and Australia who eagerly await the deliveries.

Hill, whose California store has its own line of imported trains, says "When she announces she's coming in with a new line, I immediately put in an order, because I know they'll be quality. If people know it's a Hallmark, they'll buy it.

"By her demanding such high quality, she's made the Hallmarks extremely sought-after items."

Which is more than even Bobbye Hall could have hoped for when she got sidetracked into opening the store.

Born and reared on a ranch near Whitney, Texas, she attended Abilene Christian College until her mother died. Bobbye and her family moved to Crystal City, where her father ran a convenience store and bakery.

She met Buddy Hall, a civil engineer, in Beaumont, and the couple were married at a relative's house in Dallas. At the outbreak of World War II, Buddy joined the Army and was transferred to Omaha, Neb.

There, the two began making model trains and airplanes and buildings, mainly to pass the time. Her first effort, she says, was a cardboard and wood replica of Omaha's Fort Crook train depot.

"We made them from scratch in those days," she says. "I liked it — working with my hands and all."

SHE VOLUNTEERED to help the American Red Cross and soon was assigned to talk to a man who had lost several limbs in battle and had since refused to see his family. He felt useless; he came from a farm near Omaha, and his injuries confined him to a wheelchair.

The man eventually was transferred to a hospital on the East Coast without ever having talked to his folks. Mrs. Hall kept thinking about him — and about what it would be like if Buddy were called into battle and came back missing an arm, or his legs. What kind of work could he do?

He could, she figured, run a hobby shop from a wheelchair.

She mentioned this to Buddy and, even after the war ended and the couple moved to Dallas, she kept the thought in the back of her mind.

Buddy was thinking about it, too.

"He just came in one day — this was October of 1945 — and said, 'I've rented you a building. You're going to run a hobby shop,' " Mrs. Hall recalls.

"Well, it had been an ice cream parlor, and there was ice cream all over the floor and the walls. I had to scrub it all off. I wanted to be open by Christmas, but it took until February to get the place ready."

The hobby industry in 1946, Mrs. Hall says, was made up mom-and-pop shops and mom-and-pop manufacturers, making crude models of metal or wood in their garages or basements.

When Hall's Hobby House first opened, the Halls had so little stock that they devoted half the space to antique furniture.

Post-war '40s and '50s America, however, was prosperous, and millions of people were flocking to cities for industrial jobs. There was more leisure time for more people than ever before. The antiques disappeared from the shop as the model industry boomed.

MRS. HALL, working the store alone most days, was determined to keep up.

"I'd never sold anything before in my life, and I liked it. I like a challenge," she says. "The (neighborhood) kids would help me. Those boys would come in after school and teach me. You had to know which prop went with which plane. You had to get the right materials to sell to a person to complete a model. All kinds of stuff.

"At night, I studied train magazines and made models myself, because I had to know what I was talking about."

By 1960, the Halls had opened a second store in far East Dallas. When they divorced that year, Mrs. Hall retained the downtown Dallas store.

Buddy Hall's store closed four or five years later, Mrs. Hall says, and he died not long after that.

Mrs. Hall's store kept growing, and by 1966, she noticed that customers kept asking for models of the trains that ran in the Southwest. But it was a demand that none of her suppliers was able to fill. Such trains simply weren't made.

Her customers were persistent, and finally Mrs. Hall began writing to the manufacturers of the actual trains, asking for plans that her design engineer, Dean Hale, could reduce to N gauge or HO gauge.

Then she began asking model train importers about companies in the Orient that would manufacture the models at a price she was willing to pay.

By summer, she was in Tokyo, talking to manufacturers and going over plans. And by autumn, the first shipment of hand-made, brass model trains arrived.

THEY CARRIED the insignia of companies that rumbled through Texas and the Southwest earlier this century — lines like the Southern Pacific and Cotton Belt, Texas Pacific and Burlington.

They were an immediate success, and soon Mrs. Hall was making yearly trips to the Orient to place orders and go over specifics with manufacturers.

"We set up a year's production in one shot," she says. "We do a lot of doodling and drawing on the plans and haggle over the price and all that."

Professor's geology course is class act

ORVALLIS, Ore. (AP) — Once you've been shot from a cannon and tap-danced atop a piano — all in the name of education — there's not much left for an encore.

Unless, of course, you pop out of the screen during a showing of "Alien."

Julius Dasch is forever searching for new ways to generate interest in "Rock and Stars," the most popular elective course ever offered at Oregon State University here. A professor of geology, Dasch has become a master at mixing science and showmanship.

How many other geology professors would allow themselves to be shot from a cannon in a parody of the "big bang" theory? Create a class syllabus with coupons from a local pizza parlor? Sponsor a rock concert to raise money for a guest speaker?

"We haven't had any live births during class — yet," Dasch deadpanned. "We did have a guy pass out once, though."

"Rocks and Stars" began in 1981 as an attempt to draw more students into geology. In designing the class, Dasch combined his profession, geology, with his love of outer space. He poured a lot of energy and a little bit of money into promotion.

His colorful advertisements drew 274 students the first term. Word of the lively guest lectures and interesting topics spread. The second year 649 students enrolled in the spring term class.

The response caught everyone by surprise. The class had to be moved into Orgeon State's largest teaching auditorium. While waiting for stragglers that first day, Dasch played music from "Cosmos" and lit up the overhead screen with space art.

"It really caught on," he said. "And then somewhere in there, I guess I went bananas."

ROCK MUSIC replaced the ubiquitoous class-ending buzzers. Students contributed music, and ideas for new topics. To begin year three, Dasch staged the skit in which he was "blown" out of a cannon. The students went wild over the idea of a skit. A new tradition was born.

The class has been a sellout ever since. This spring, though, the effervescent Dasch was worried. "Rocks and Stars" hadn't been offered for two years while Dasch was on leave working at the Johnson Space Center in Houston. Many underclassmen at OSU had never heard of it.

But more than 1,000 students signed up, roughly one out of every 15 students at Oregon State University.

"I heard from a girl friend that it was a fun class," said one enrollee, Christy Waitt, a senior in health care administration. "Well, it caught me a little off guard, but I thought it was great," she said of the first day of class.

And then there was 72-year-old Oliver Zehr, the oldest student at Oregon State. After watching Dasch burst through the screen during "Alien," participate in several well-rehearsed skits and finally bust a guitar on stage, Zehr plainly was taken aback by education in the late 1980s.

"I don't hardly know what to think," Zehr sputtered after class. "What a bunch of nuts. I've always wondered just how they filled this place. I took some astronomy in high school and learned about the planets, so I thought I'd give this a whirl. But I've got to admit, I was a bit bewildered this morning."

BASCH HAS bewildered a number of people, including department heads from around the country who want to imitate the "Rocks and Stars" format at their own universities. His success with the class has also impressed NASA officials, who may have discovered a new way to reach future voters.

As enrollment for the course grew over the years, NASA took on an annual sponsorship of two speakers, plus expenses for an engineer to spend a week in Corvallis, plus half the fee for a visitor from the Johnson Space Center. Dasch's on-campus maneuvering has drawn financial support to attract other prominent speakers.

"I used to worry about how these people would react to the class, which is a bit unorthodox," Dasch understated. "But, absolutely without exception, they have all been extremely enthusiastic, even the heaviest scientists. It brings out the ham in people."

"I probably worry about credibility more than anyone," Dasch said. "It's a legitimate question. I suppose there shouldn't be a lot of courses like this one, but there is room for one. A lot of learning goes on here. Something about holding a meteorite or a lunar rock makes them forget my name. The hype is called 'getting their attention.' "

THE CRITICS are quickly forgotten in the heat of battle — like the day Dasch tap-danced on top of a piano. A film on the San Francisco earthquake wasn't delivered on time, so a scrambling Dasch found an ancient, and silent, film on the disaster that was "really quite good."

"I decided to put on a Scott Joplin record in the style of the old, silent movies, but then had a brainstorm and brought out a piano from backstage," Dasch explained somewhat sheepishly. "A student held a flashlight, and I pretended to play the piano while the Joplin music was playing. One thing led to another, and pretty soon I was tap-dancing on top of the piano."

'Put on happy face' not always good advice

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I could have written the letter from "Insulted," who was always being told to smile! All my life I've had people walk up to me and say, "Who are you mad at?" Abby, I'm not mad at anybody; I guess I just have one of those sad-looking faces.

You were right to say that most people have a serious look — or even a frown — on their faces when they're deep in thought. That's me, but I don't think I should go around grinning like a Cheshire cat for no reason at all.

Thanks for understanding that it hurts to be constantly reminded to smile. Maybe if you print this, people will think twice before they say it. — SAD FACE IN TWIN FALLS

DEAR SAD: I never realized until I ran that letter from "Insulted" how many people had the same problem. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: At last, I am no longer alone. I, too, am one of those people with a sad-looking face who is always being told to smile. Thanks for saying, "Folks who go around smiling all the time for no reason at all are often followed by a non-smiling person with a butterfly net."

I agree with you, Abby. Perpetual smilers look like idiots. Nobody can be that happy all the time. I'm basically a happy person, but it doesn't show on my face. Thanks for printing that letter. I feel better knowing that I'm not the only one with a grumpy face and a happy heart. — SACRAMENTO SOURPUSS

DEAR ABBY: Perhaps the person who is constantly told to smile should read what Dale Carnegie had to say in his book, "How to Win Friends and Influence People":

THE VALUE OF A SMILE

It costs nothing, but creates much;
It enriches those who receive,
without impoverishing those who give;
It happens in a flash, and the memory of it sometimes lasts forever;
None are so rich they can get along without it, and none so poor but are richer for its benefits.
It creates happiness in the home, fosters good will in a business, and is the countersign of friends.
It is rest to the weary, daylight to the discouraged, sunshine to the sad, and nature's best antidote for trouble.
Yet it cannot be bought, begged, borrowed or stolen, for it is of no earthly good to anybody until it is given away.
Nobody needs to smile so much as those who have none left to give.

STATE

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, celebrated defense attorney for former Fort Worth millionaire Cullen Davis, is back in Amarillo readying himself for a murder-for-hire trial.

Haynes pulled off a stunning acquittal for Davis in Amarillo 11 years ago when the Fort Worth businessman stood accused of killing his stepdaughter, Andrea Wilborn.

Now the flamboyant attorney has returned to the Panhandle to defend Jane Ada Callaway, who is accused of masterminding the murder of her boss' wife.

Opening arguments were scheduled to begin today in a large-capacity Potter County courtroom repainted for the trial with money donated by Amarillo defense lawyers. Jury selection in the capital murder case has consumed more than a month.

The trial was moved to Amarillo on a change of venue from Houston — the same circumstances that brought Haynes to Amarillo from Fort Worth to defend Davis in 1977.

State District Judge Michael McSpadden of Houston has issued a gag order prohibiting attorneys and witnesses from discussing the trial.

Ms. Callaway, a Houston secretary, is charged with hiring a gunman to kill Judy Saragusa on Sept. 2, 1987.

Mrs. Saragusa's husband, Michael, was Ms. Callaway's boss and the co-owner of a wholesale liquor distributor company.

During pretrial hearings, Saragusa admitted he had had an affair with Ms. Callaway, but said it had ended two months before his 39-year-old wife's slaying in the bedroom of the couple's mansion.

An attractive, twice-divorced 36-year-old, Ms. Callaway is free on $50,000 bail and had to be ordered by a judge to stop telephoning her former boss.

After police identified a car seen leaving the murder scene as belonging to Ms. Callaway, she signed a police statement saying she had lent her car to Michael Richardson, accused of being the middleman in the murder plot, on the night of the shooting.

Richardson's stepbrother, Leon Hawkins Jr., surrendered to police two days after the shooting and told reporters, "They made me do it" after being charged with capital murder.

Richardson has agreed to testify for the state in exchange for a 10-year prison sentence, said his attorney, John Ackerman, last week.

"It's not an open and shut case, but it's a very good case," prosecutor Chuck Rosenthal told the Houston Post in September about the evidence against Ms. Callaway.

Saragusa, expected to be another of the state's key witnesses, is likely to be subjected to Haynes' famous cross-examination.

Haynes' ruthless questioning of Priscilla Davis, Davis' estranged wife, essentially put her on trial for her lifestyle and dependence on the narcotic painkiller Percodan.

Davis was acquitted, despite the testimony of three eyewitnesses identifying him as the black-wigged gunman who went on a shooting spree at the Davis' $6 million mansion. The shooting spree also left Ms. Davis', boyfriend, Stan Farr, dead and Ms. Davis and another mansion visitor injured.

Officers approve compromise plan

DALLAS (AP) — Police voted to delay a decision on continuing their push for a public showdown on a controversial review board after most officers approved a compromise plan for restructuring the panel, a spokeswoman said.

Dallas Police Association President Monica Smith would not reveal the results of weekend balloting Sunday, but said most officers were in favor of the plan.

"My feeling is that they felt that this was a well-thought-out plan, and they were praising (City Manager) Richard Knight for his efforts," she said. Smith.

The plan was developed by Knight, along with an attorney for Dallas billionaire H. Ross Perot and other city leaders. About 800 of the association's 2,200 members voted on the plan during a series of six meetings with Perot, who explained the plan to officers.

Ms. Smith said that only after the Dallas City Council considers the compromise May 25 would the association decide if it will turn in the 20,000 signatures it has collected to force an Aug. 13 referendum on the board.

"The membership has said wait and see what the City Council does with the plan," she said.

Mayor Annette Strauss and a majority of City Council members have already said they approve of Knight's plan.

The police association wants the 7-year-old review board abolished or stripped of its power to subpoena officers and conduct independent investigations.

Officials involved in drawing up the compromise plan declined to discuss specific proposals, but officials have said the proposal alters the board's subpoena power and forces Dallas lawyer Pete Lesser off the board.

Lesser has represented several clients in lawsuits against officers.

Minority leaders have criticized the concessions.

"Any tampering with this already weak review board borders on the ludicrous," said City Councilman Al Lipscomb.

Pettis Norman, a Dallas businessman and black community leader present during negotiations of the compromise plan, said Perot was premature in presenting the plan to police association members before community leaders and the City Council had a chance to review it.

Mrs. Strauss, who just weeks ago said she would oppose any efforts to remove Lesser, said Sunday she had changed her mind because she did not believe police would back down from their demand that he be removed.

"He obviously is a person that the police do not feel comfortable with," Strauss said. "One person cannot be the cause of a referendum in this city. I had not realized the intensity of the feeling."

Hospital rennovation causes jams

HOUSTON (AP) — So much construction is under way at the Texas Medical Center that center officials meet each week to find ways to keep bottlenecks and traffic jams from forming.

"There's no place in the United States where such a concentration of construction is going on," says Dr. Richard E. Wainerdi, president of the Medical Center. "We're trying to cope."

Almost all of the medical center's 13 hospitals and nine academic institutions have at least one remodeling job under way, and construction work is sometimes shifted from weekdays to weekends in order to avoid crunches, Wainerdi said.

All told, about $1.5 billion worth of construction is underway at the center, employing about 3,000 construction workers.

Cement truck arrivals must be tightly scheduled around the Medical Center area to avoid traffic jams, and one hospital's new helicopter landing pad is temporarily closed because of nearby construction cranes.

Each Tuesday, Medical Center officials meet to coordinate construction activity, locating storage areas for building materials, parking places for construction workers and assuring that ubiquitous construction trucks don't block ambulances, officials say.

"I have been told there have been as many as 27 concrete trucks (in line) ready to pour," said Philip Sun, senior vice president of the Harris County Hospital District.

The projects range from parking garages to a 338-bed addition and a $55 million children's nutrition center complete with a greenhouse, Wainerdi said.

While experts have estimated Houston's 22,624 hospital beds have an occupancy rate of 50 percent, Wainerdi said the medical center construction is essential to modernize hospital facilities with the latest technology.

Construction companies say that with little retail or office buildings being built, the hospital construction has been a life-saver.

Bruce Lietzke

Lietzke tops Rose in Byron Nelson playoff

From Wire Reports

IRVING, Texas — Bruce Lietzke did unto Clarence Rose Sunday what he had done previously to Gene Littler, Ray Floyd, Tom Watson and Andy Bean. In winning his fifth playoff in seven attempts on the PGA Tour, Lietzke cooly sank a 20-foot birdie putt on the first playoff green to beat Rose in the $750,000 Byron Nelson Golf Classic.

"I wish I could say I had a magic feeling when I hit that putt but I really didn't," Lietzke said. "I had been on the left lips and right lips all day but that one went straight into the hole....I felt good once I got into the playoff," he said. "I've got a pretty good record there. I've beaten some big names. It was the first time in four years I had a chance to win and I did it."

Rose said he wasn't nervous. "Just give Lietzke credit, he made a great putt. Well, second place again for me. Bruce just let me in the playoff then he took it away. He's a competitor."

Lietzke, an Oklahoma native who is in the process of moving his family to Texas, said he may only play golf for two more years. "My predictions don't hold a lot of water but I really want a change from the tour life and spend more time with my family. I've been saying 'only two more years' for six years."

Former U.S. Open champion David Graham shot a 2-under-par 68 and 1983 Nelson winner Ben Crenshaw had a 1-over 71 to finish at 272, a shot behind the leaders.

Crampton does it

MALVERN, Pa. — With a sudden-death victory at the United Hospitals Senior Classic, Bruce Crampton hit a milestone Sunday that took him 26 years to accomplish on the PGA Tour. Crampton birdied the first hole of the playoff to beat Billy Casper for a $33,750 first prize out of the $225,000 purse, making Crampton a millionaire on the Senior circuit with a total of $1,001,441.

Casper lost a chance to win the tournament when he missed a two-foot putt on the 18th green for his first bogey in 41 holes of the tournament.

The missed putt enabled Crampton to tie for the lead and cost Casper $14,500, giving him a second-place earnings of $19,250.

Andrews, Canyon clash in 4A play this weekend

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

ANDREWS — Most baseball teams that make the high school playoffs have time to prepare for a specific opponent. It didn't work that way for the Andrews Mustangs, however.

The Mustangs, who ended their regular season on May 6, didn't learn until Saturday that Canyon would be their bi-district playoff opponent.

Andrews opens its best two-of-three playoff series against District 1-4A runnerup Canyon at 6 p.m. Friday on the Texas Tech University baseball field in Lubbock. The second game will be played at 1 p.m. Saturday, immediately followed by a third game if necessary.

Coach Joe Halsey's Mustangs are 21-5 overall and 12-2 in District 2-4A going into Friday's game — the fifth playoff appearance in six years for Andrews. The Mustangs have also been ranked among the state's top 10 Class 4A teams most of the season before dropping out of the ratings with a late-season loss to Pecos.

Mustang assistant coach Charlie Adams said the uncertainty regarding the 1-4A runnerup may actually have helped Andrews.

"We've seen all three of these teams two or three times," he said. "The kids don't care who they play anyway — they just want to go play."

Worried that a two-week break from interscholastic competition would leave the Mustangs rusty going into Friday's game, Halsey and Adams had their team play an intrasquad game late last week.

"That way, we didn't miss a pitching rotation," Adams said. "But I think the break was all right for the kids after our hard-fought district battle."

Either sophomore righthander Brent Leffingwell or junior lefty Sidney Micecoby will start on the mound Friday. Leffingwell is 12-0 with a 1.80 earned run average, while Micecoby is 5-2, 1.72, despite missing six weeks in mid-season with grade problems. Sophomore reliever Kelly Cornejo has been the Mustangs' late-inning stopper.

In fact, the Mustangs have four sophomores playing extensively — Leffingwell, Cornejo, catcher Jason Graham, and outfielder Teddy Jennings. Adams said the quintet has played beyond their meager years.

"You expect your sophomores to play like sophomores, but these guys have fallen in there and done a super job."

Graham is hitting .304, while first baseman Tony Valdez (.353), second baseman Todd Lucas (.361) and shortstop Daniel Renteria (.540, 2HR, 31 RBI) have provided senior leadership.

They have to. The three infielders are the only three seniors in the starting lineup.

"They've provided excellent leadership. We have real good camaraderie among our kids," Adams said.

Third baseman Ricky Morris (.312) rounds out the infield, while the outfield includes center fielder David Emiliano (.210), right fielder Clay Gidney (.224), and either the right-handed hitting Jennings (.372) or lefty-swinging Michael Hernandez (.226) in left field.

Intensity and the pitchers' ability to stay within their limitations are the keys to Mustang playoff success, Adams said.

"I feel like the kids have to play with the same intensity they showd during the regular season and even crank it a notch higher," Adams said. "The pitchers have to try not to overdo it — to stay within their abilities."

Canyon, 15-10 overall and 10-6 in 1-4A play, is led by pitcher David Adkins, catcher Kevin Dewey, second baseman Jason Roach, first baseman Walt Garrison, and left fielder Brad Boyd.

Lakers square series with Jazz

The defending champion Los Angeles Lakers went into Sunday's NBA playoff game against the Utah Jazz with renewed respect for their opponent and, in the second half, some concern. They came out of it with a 113-100 victory, knotting their best-of-seven series 2-2.

NBA

"I thought we didn't come in and respect them as a team," Lakers guard Magic Johnson said. "That's why we lost the last couple of games."

Then came the concern.

"We were concerned when we were down by that much," James Worthy said when Utah went up 65-56 early in the second half.

"Being down 3-1 is hard," Johnson said. "We knew what we had to do. We've been playing good defense on them all the games. We just hadn't scored and played our game. Finally we got into our game."

In other NBA games Sunday, Detroit defeated Chicago 96-77 to take a 3-1 lead in their series; Atlanta took a 110-92 victory over Boston, which still holds a 2-1 lead; and Dallas evened its series with Devner 2-2 with a 124-103 win.

Lakers 113, Jazz 100

The Jazz surprised the Lakers 101-97 in the Forum last week, then put the Lakers in unfamiliar territory of trailing 2-1 in a playoff series with a 96-89 victory at Salt Lake City Friday night.

Worthy scored 21 of his 29 points in the first half and Johnson scored 10 of his 24 points during a third-quarter run to lead the Lakers.

Utah coach Frank Layden said the Jazz may have felt too comfortable when Bobby Hansen put them ahead by 10 points with a 3-point basket with 9:05 left in the third quarter.

"They're too good a team for that," Layden said. "You always got to play like it's nothing-nothing."

The Lakers took control and tied the game at 71-71 on a 15-6 run sparked by Johnson, Worthy and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

"I thought we didn't come in and respect them as a team, That's why we lost the last couple of games."
...Magic Johnson.

Abdul-Jabbar, who finished with 20 points, tied the game on a sky hook with 4:00 left in the third quarter. The Lakers built their lead to 85-75 going into the fourth period and Utah never got closer than six points after that.

Karl Malone paced the Jazz with 29 points.

"It's a three-game series," Layden said. "There are two (games) at their place and we have to do something that no one else has done except us. It's not easy."

Pistons 96, Bulls 77

Adrian Dantley scored 24 points and Isiah Thomas had nine of his 19 points in the final 4:57 of the fourth quarter as Detroit handed the Bulls their first playoff defeat this year at Chicago. The Pistons can clinch the best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinals with a victory Wednesday at Pontiac, Mich.

The Bulls, who trailed 71-55 after three quarters, closed within 81-76 with 4:57 left. But Thomas took over and the Pistons outscored the Bulls 15-1 to put the game away.

The Pistons held Michael Jordan to a playoff-low 23 points. Jordan was 11 of 22 from the field, made two turnovers in the last minutes and missed the final shot of the game.

"Detroit does a great job on me — they won't let me penetrate and I kept giving up the ball," said Jordan, who came into the game averging 39.4 points in the playoffs after leading all scorers during the NBA regular season with a 35-point-per-game average.

"They had three people playing Michael. That's not the problem," Bulls coach Doug Collins said. "The other guys aren't hitting their shots."

Hawks 110, Celtics 92

In Atlanta, Kevin Willis had 23 points and 13 rebounds and reserve guard John Battle scored 10 points during a 30-17 second-half surge that led the Hawks over Boston. Game 4 will be held in Atlanta Monday night.

Only four teams in NBA playoff history have rallied from a 2-0 deficit to win a best-of-seven series, and it has never happened against the Celtics.

Atlanta never trailed in the game, but had only a 56-53 advantage with 8:58 left in the third quarter. The Hawks then outscored Boston 26-15 for the rest of the period for an 82-68 margin. The Celtics made only four of 14 shots in the quarter, then missed their first seven of the fourth period and finished 27-for-70 for the game.

Larry Bird led Boston with 22 points. Dominique Wilkins paced Atlanta with 25 points.

Mavericks 124, Nuggets 103

At Dallas, Mark Aguirre broke out of playoff shooting slump with 34 points and Roy Tarpley had 24 points and 13 rebounds against injury-slowed Denver.

Angels rally for win

From Staff Reports

JACKSON, MISS.— Midland's Angels rallied for two runs in the sixth to tie and then pushed over three more runs in the seventh to even the five-game series with the Jackson Mets at 1-1 with a 6-3 Texas League victory Sunday afternoon.

The win gives Manager Max Oliveras' steadily climbing Angels a 4-2 record on the swing through the East. The Angels return home Friday to open a 10-game stand against the Mets and Arkansas Travelers.

Todd Eggerston, 2-2, goes for the Angels 7:30 tonight against Kyle Hartshorne, 4-2.

Mike Knapp walked to open the seventh and after a force out, Jim Thomas delivered a hit-and-run singled and Jesus Alfaro was walked intentionally to load the bases. Relief pitcher Rich Rodriquez balked home one run and then Tom Alfredson and Jeff Manto delivered RBI singles. That gave starter Tim Burcham his first victory of the season. The loser was Rodriquez, 1-3.

Midland tied it in the sixth when Alfredson and Lee Stevens hit doubles for one run and Erik Pappas singled home the tying run.

Midland's first run came in the second when Manto doubled, Stevens walked, Pappas sacrificed and Knapp's fly ball chased the run home.

Sherman Corbett came on in the seven and pitched three innings of two hit ball for his second save of the season.

In other Texas League action Sunday,

The Shreveport Captains pounded 14 hits, including a 4-for-5 performance by Greg Litton, to tie the five-game series with the San Antonio Missions at one game apiece while and rain postponed a scheduled game between Tulsa and Wichita.

Shreveport's John Skurla belted a home run and also scored four runs to back the pitching of Dean Freeland (3-4), who picked up the win in 8.

He limited the Missions to five hits and all three runs. Freeland was never in trouble, though, as the Captains enjoyed an 8-1 lead after a fight-marred seventh inning.

Four players were ejected after the brawl and could face fines and suspensions.

San Antonio's John Wetteland, 4-3, took the loss. He worked six innings, yielded 10 hits and five runs, three of them earned. Domingo Michel homered for San Antonio in the seventh, went 2 for 4 and drove in two runs.

MHS-PHS bidistrict series had thrills...and disappointment

Patterson

And now, it's all up to Abilene Cooper.

When the District 4-5A season began, those who are in the know felt like Cooper would once again be the team to beat. But Midland High proved everyone wrong. The Bulldogs pulled off two straight 2-0 wins over Cooper during district to grab the title, their first since 1973.

And now, the playoffs.

Midland High's out. The 'Dogs went with barely a whimper Saturday afternoon, giving one away to the visiting Plainview Bulldogs, 4-3. MHS dropped two out of the three games by a total of four runs. Not that the Bulldogs made it a habit of scoring any runs during the three game series.

And now, for the numbers.

Why did the Bulldogs play dead for Plainview?

The pitching was OK. It wasn't at its best, but it was certainly on a par with Plainview's.

Hard luck fielding and non-existent hitting played key roles in Midland High's elimination.

In the first game, pitcher Eric Boyt suffered through his worst outing of the season, yielding five earned runs on seven hits. Midland High managed only four hits and three runs.

Game 2 evened the series at a win apiece for the two 'Dogs, as MHS took a close one, 4-2. The game could've gone either way, but thanks to bad fielding by PHS, Midland High hung in there. Of the four runs MHS scored, only two were earned. The home team didn't exactly make any threats at breaking any hitting records in this one either, as two Plainview pitchers combined to three-hit the 'Dogs.

Game 3 saw Midland High's bats finally come alive as they pounded out 11 hits in the 4-3 loss. Miscues in the field — a rarity for Midland High this season — played a key role. An error by Boyt in the second inning allowed one run. Kyle Lusby let a throw to third get away for another, the winning run in the ninth. The hitting problem was solved, but the inexplicable mistakes on defense had put a deadly kink in Midland High's chances.

And the fielding errors were mysterious: Before Saturday's season ender for MHS, Lusby and Boyt had combined for only two errors in the previous 14 games.

As for the offense, it has been hit and miss all year, mostly miss in the Plainview series.

The team hit a collective .217 (18-for-83) in the three games. Only David Danley (.400), Jason Stone (.400), Scot Mowles (.333) and Boyt (.333) hit above .111

The Bulldogs' No. 1 and No. 2 hitters, Tony Perez and Jamie Surratt, combined for only two hits in eighteen at bats — both of which came in Saturday's loss.

Midland High's only extra-base hit was a Perez double, also in the final loss. The Bulldogs failed 12 times to bring runners home in scoring position.

So now, in an ironic twist, it all comes down to Cooper again. District runners-up in what was Midland High's best year of the 80's, Cooper remains in the playoffs while the Bulldogs must watch from afar.

Cooper wrapped up its best-of-three bi-district series with Lubbock Monterey Saturday as pitcher Jason Satre tossed a no-hitter. Cooper won 10-0 in five innings and Satre came within one walk of hurling a perfect game.

Cooper next faces El Paso Coronado in the area playoffs. Plenty of Bulldog fans will likely be pulling for Cooper as the district's only representative which remains alive, but plenty more must be wondering about what could have been. MHS would have faced Cooper again down the playoff road. The Bulldogs had defeated Cooper twice before.

Could they have done it twice more?

Kansas City's Kevin Seitzer is felled by a Charlie Hough pitch at Arlington Stadium. Seitzer shrugged it off with "lucky it was his fast ball."

Rangers' 8-game streak goes pffft!

Associated Press

Gene Garber made a great escape for the Kansas City Royals and it made the Texas Rangers' eight-game winning streak disappear.

Garber got out of a bases-loaded, no-out jam in the seventh inning Sunday and preserved Kansas City's 5-4 victory over Texas.

AL

The Royals, who had lost eight of their last nine, led 5-0 in the fifth before Texas rallied. The Rangers' winning streak tied for the longest in team history.

"How about Harry Houdini?" Royals manager John Wathan said of Garber, who earned his fifth save. Mark Gubicza, 4-4, struggled through six innings, allowing four runs on 11 hits. Bud Black balked home a run in the seventh, pulling Texas within 5-4.

Garber took over and got Larry Parrish to ground into a forceout at home and Geno Petralli to bounce into a double play.

Danny Tartabull hit his fourth career grand slam and a double and Willie Wilson went 4-for-4, including a homer to lead off the game.

The Royals scored five runs in 3 1-3 innings off Charlie Hough, 4-5.

Athletics 7, Orioles 4

BALTIMORE — Mark McGwire and Jose Canseco hit their 10th home runs of the season and rookie Walter Weiss hit the first homer of his career.

McGwire led off the fourth inning with home run against Mark Williamson, 1-2, for a 3-1 lead and Canseco hit a two-run homer in the eighth against Dave Schmidt.

Curt Young, 3-1, got the victory and Dennis Eckersley earned his 13th save.

Yankees 9, Angels 2

NEW YORK — Charles Hudson, 4-1, pitched a four-hitter, pinch hitter Claudell Washington and Dave Winfield homered in a five-run seventh inning and the New York Yankees took advantage of a balk to score four times in the fourth.

Brian Downing hit a two-run homer in the sixth, the third straight game he homered for California. Chuck Finley, 2-6, was the loser.

Mariners 11, Red Sox 7

BOSTON — Jim Presley's tie-breaking single keyed a four-run ninth inning against Boston relief ace Lee Smith as the Seattle Mariners snapped a four-game losing streak.

Smith, 2-2, struck out the first two batters in the ninth but then walked Alvin Davis. Mickey Brantley followed with a single and Presley's single made it 8-7. David Valle hit a two-run triple and Glenn Wilson added an RBI single.

Mike Jackson, 1-1, stopped Boston's three-run rally in the eighth.

Twins 10, Tigers 2

DETROIT — Kent Hrbek hit two home runs, leading a five-homer assault that carried Frank Viola and Minnesota over Detroit.

Viola, 6-1, won his fifth consecutive game with home-run support from Kirby Puckett, Tom Herr and Randy Bush. Viola, who has allowed just seven earned runs in his last 38 2-3 innings, allowed two runs on seven hits in six innings and struck out five.

Jack Morris, 3-5, was pounded for eight runs on 11 hits in six innings. He is winless in four starts at Tiger Stadium this season and has not won at home since Sept. 16, a span of six starts.

Brewers 9, Indians 5

MILWAUKEE — Joey Meyer's two-run homer capped a four-run fourth inning and the Milwaukee Brewers ended a five-game losing streak.

Joe Carter hit two home runs and a triple for Cleveland, which had its five-game winning string stopped. Milwaukee, a streaky team last season, had won 10 straight games before losing five in a row.

Robin Yount hit a solo homer in the first off Scott Bailes, 2-4. He tied Cecil Cooper as the team's career RBI leader with 944.

White Sox 6, Blue Jays 5

CHICAGO — Rookie Dave Gallagher, promoted from the minors two days earlier, hit his first major league home run in the 11th inning for the White Sox.

The Blue Jays had tied the game at 3 on Kelly Gruber's two-run single in the ninth. Lloyd Moseby's two-run double put Toronto ahead 5-3 in the top of the 10th before the White Sox scored twice in their half.

Kornegay services scheduled Tuesday

HOUSTON (AP) — Services for Raymond T. Kornegay, who covered high school athletics for the Houston Chronicle from the late 1920s through the 1940s, are scheduled for Tuesday morning.

Kornegay, who had lived in Bellaire since retiring in 1974, died Saturday in a local hospital of a heart attack following surgery for an aneurysm. He was 80.

Kornegay was born in Comanche County, but his family moved to Beaumont where he graduated from high school and from South Park College. He then came to Houston hoping to attend Rice University, but instead was hired by the Chronicle.

On leaving the Chronicle about 1950, Kornegay worked in public relations and insurance.

"I'm proud to have accomplished the millionaire objective in three years on the Senior circuit," Crampton said. "It took me from 1957 to 1983 to do the same thing on the PGA tour."

Casper shot a 2-under-par 68 in the third and final round and Crampton a 69.

Lopez back on top

MIDDLETOWN, N.J. — Nancy Lopez came into 1988 looking to regain the top spot on the LPGA Tour. Thirteen weeks into the season, she has done it, although she won't come out and say it directly. Lopez shot a 6-under-par 66 on and scored a runaway eight-shot victory over Jan Stephenson in the $250,000 Chrysler-Plymouth Classic, making the Hall of Famer the first three-time winner on the tour this year.

There is no doubt Lopez is on top. She has finished in the top 10 in seven of the nine events she has entered and has earnings of $189,882, tops on the tour this year. With her 39th career victory, Lopez collected $37,500 to push her career bankroll to $2,105,783, moving her into third place all-time ahead of Amy Alcott.

Rahal qualifies

INDIANAPOLIS — Comeback driver Jim Crawford of Scotland and former winner Bobby Rahal were the only qualifiers Sunday as a hot, slick track continued to make the search for speed a frustrating job on the second day of time trials for the May 29 Indianapolis 500.

The successful late-afternoon runs by Crawford and Rahal were far short of the record-setting efforts of pole-winner Rick Mears Saturday, the first of four days of qualifications for the 72nd Indy classic.

Crawford, who suffered severe ankle and leg injuries in a crash on the opening day of qualifications last year and now walks with the aid of a cane, was the first to make a qualifying attempt Sunday. He waited until the track had cooled under a cloud cover in the final 30 minutes.

He drove a 1987 Buick-powered Lola, owned by drag racing star Kenny Bernstein, to a tentative spot in field with a four-lap, 10-mile average of 210.564 mph.

That was the 10th-fastest speed among the 21 drivers who now have made it into the tentative lineup. The rest of the 33-car field will be filled in time trials next Saturday and Sunday.

Rahal, who won here in 1986, came up with a consistent but scary run of 208.526.

Knight to stay with Hoosiers

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Bobby Knight says he will remain at Indiana and turn down an offer to become the basketball coach at New Mexico, according to a published report.

The Star Tribune of Minneapolis reported on Monday that Knight met Sunday with Indiana University president Thomas Ehrlich to tell him of his decision to remain in the job he has held for 17 years.

New Mexico athletic director John Koenig, who conducted interviews with Knight at Albuquerque last week, expressed surprise at the report when contacted at Anaheim, Calif.

"We're still talking," Koenig said. "I've received messages all day and there wasn't one from him." He said he assumes Knight would have contacted him had the coach reached a decision on his coaching future.

Ken Johns, an influential Albuquerque businessman and a member of the university's board of regents, also said he "hadn't heard anything at all. That's news to us."

Knight, who has won three NCAA championships at Indiana, said there was no truth to reports of trouble between him and Ehrlich and difficulties in recruiting.

Cubs nudge Astros, 2-1

HOUSTON (AP) — Leading the National League in hitting hasn't satisfied Rafael Palmeiro of the Chicago Cubs.

"I don't care if my average drops to .280. I want to drive in runs and hit home runs. That's what wins games," Palmeiro said after going 2-for-4 to raise his average to .356 in the Cubs' 2-1 victory over the Houston Astros Sunday.

NL

"I know I can do it. When I hit home runs they fall in bunches," Palmeiro said.

Palmeiro has two homers and 15 RBI in 133 at-bats this season.

"Batting average doesn't mean that much to me. I just want to hit .300 and hit as many home runs as I can," Palmeiro said. "If I can drive in 100 runs, that would be great."

Rick Sutcliffe, 3-3, was the winner.

It was Sutcliffe's fourth complete game of the season to tie him for the league lead.

Danny Darwin, 2-3, was the loser.

"You can't keep giving alibis for not scoring runs. We have to give our pitchers more support," Houston manager Hal Lanier said.

Chicago scored both of its runs in the fourth.

Palmiero started the rally with had a one-out double, his league-leading 15th and the Cubs' first hit of the game. Jerry Mumphrey doubled him home and scored on Vance Law's RBI single.

Houston cut the deficit to 2-1 in the bottom of the inning when Billy Hatcher singled with one out, moved to second on a Sutcliffe balk and took third on a wild pitch. He scored on Glenn Davis' grounder to shortstop, Davis' league-leading 34th RBI.

Reds 7, Pirates 6

Pinch-hitter Bo Diaz's sacrifice fly in the 12th inning drove in Eric Davis with the winning run. Davis started the 12th with a double, the Reds' first hit since Chris Sabo's two-run single in the sixth. Barry Jones, 1-1, the Pirates' sixth pitcher, then got Ron Roenicke to pop up, but Lloyd McClendon followed with an infield single, moving Davis to third.

Diaz then hit a sinking liner that Barry Bonds speared with a diving catch, but Davis scored well ahead of the throw.

Cardinals 7, Braves 6

ST. LOUIS — Pinch-hitter Willie McGee's two-out, single in the bottom of the ninth gave St. Louis a victory over the Atlanta Braves. McGee's hit came off reliever Bruce Sutter, 1-1, to cap a two-run Cardinals rally.

Padres 2, Expos 1

SAN DIEGO — Shane Mack's RBI single in the seventh inning scored Benito Santiago with the winning run. The victory gave the Padres their third straight win and a sweep of the weekend series in which the Expos scored just four runs.

The game-winner came against Montreal right-hander Jeff Parrett, 1-3, who camé on in the seventh inning to relieve starter Bryn Smith.

Santiago led off the seventh with a single and moved to second on a bunt. One out later, Mack singled to center for his second game-winning hit of the series.

Andy Hawkins, 4-3, got the victory.

Giants 5, Mets 1

SAN FRANCISCO — Kevin Mitchell knocked in three runs with a two-run homer and a fielder's choice grounder to power the San Francisco Giants to a sweep of their three-game series with the New York Mets.

Right-hander Mike LaCoss, 2-3, posted his first victory since April 8.

The Mets, being swept in a series and losing three straight games for the first time this season, fell behind in the first inning when Will Clark hit a two-out double to left and Mitchell followed with his sixth home run of the season.

The Giants added a final run in the seventh on a one-out single by pinch-hitter Joel Youngblood and a wind-blown, two-out triple by Robby Thompson.

Dodgers 9, Phillies 2

LOS ANGELES — Kirk Gibson's bases-loaded double and Pedro Guerrero's two-run homer capped a seven-run fourth inning.

Tim Belcher, 3-1, got the victory, the first complete game of his career.

Deaths of 2 runners mar San Francisco road race

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Marred by a two deaths, Sunday's Bay to Breakers — featuring a record horde of over 100,000 runners — was won by top world road racer Arturo Barrios of Mexico in a 7.5-mile footrace, social event and mob-scene ramble.

A 77-year-old man and a man about 30, at least one of whom was definitely in the race, died after suffering apparent heart attacks, according to hospital officials. The victims' names were withheld until their relatives are notified.

The event, more a cherished mad, mad happening than a serious athletic event, included bizarre entries, starring at least a dozen lurching centipedes, a running toothbrush from a local dental school, and two men jogging with only their numbers and G-strings. A Santa Barbara couple ran as Nancy Reagan and her astrologer.

The field stretched about five miles and took an hour and 10 minutes to pass a given point. It was unofficially estimated that the unregistered runners must have swelled the race to at least 110,000 participants.

You don't have to be a professional athlete to take care of yourself like one. Introducing Athleticare:

Every athlete can get hurt, even the family athlete. Now, there's Athleticare.® New from Johnson & Johnson. It offers you professional-quality care.

1. Athleticare® Sports Tape. It's the number-one selling tape to professional athletes and teams.

2. Athleticare® Blister Dressing. It creates the ideal environment for blister and wound healing. It helps prevent blisters, too. No wonder the same dressing is used by doctors.

3. Athleticare® Supports. The knee, ankle, wrist and elbow supports are all made of Neoprene, which is used by many professional athletes, because it retains body heat and warms aching joints.

The Athleticare Wrist Support has adjustable straps, so you can make it as firm as you like.

4. Athleticare® Elastic Bandage. It offers unique, soft support. And it has permanently attached clips.

Look for Athleticare. You may or may not play like a pro. But you can play better when you take care of yourself like one.

TUESDAY, MAY 17, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Financial changes will work to your advantage. Two incomes will make life even easier! Look for new outlets for your managerial skills. Stress can be reduced by moderating your aggressive approach. Let others know when they have your full support. A change of residence could solve more than one problem. Do not despair over a romantic relationship.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: boxer Sugar Ray Leonard, actor Dennis Hopper, author Stewart Alsop, Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox, Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini, singer Birgit Nilsson, baseball coach Ozzie Virgil.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Charity work brings deep personal satisfaction. You are better off as a spectator in the political arena. Stick to what you do best. Concentrate on improving the bottom line in business.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may have too much ambition for those you work with. Put money needs first. A former romance could suddenly reignite. Look out!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Take public transportation whenever possible today. Postpone signing agreements or deciding the terms of a contract. Playing for time will give you an advantage. Avoid rushing in where angels fear to tread.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): If time is heavy on your hands, spend a few hours at the library. You could make a discovery that will bring both pleasure and cash. Consolidate last week's gains.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do not ignore the seriousness of a financial or family situation. Quick action can eliminate danger. Beware of someone who may be trying to give you the fast shuffle in romance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You are talented at handling money and business negotiations today. Recognition comes for past achievements. Share the credit with those who deserve it. Your love life becomes more stable.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Independence and originality net you new business, perhaps even a promotion. By being frank with superiors, you gain a sympathetic ear. Keep spending and eating within moderation. Self-control brings big benefits.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Returning favors wins you respect. New career and business opportunities attract your attention. Working at a deliberate pace helps you avoid costly mistakes. Expect an exciting new relationship to be somewhat stormy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may waiver a bit before reaching an important decision. In time, the right solution comes to you. Budget your money more carefully. Creativity is encouraged by a fascinating newcomer.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A surprise move by another person puts you in a unique position. The news from abroad is terrific! Do business through a third party to reap the highest profits.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Take care of insurance and tax payments. Business affairs can be advanced. Postpone travel until you can see more people. Romance takes a temporary backseat to business.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Tact helps resolve a personality conflict. Your love for books reflects your thirst for knowledge. Postpone travel. When the truth comes out, you will solve an old puzzle. Play a waiting game.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q874 ♡85 ◇KJ102 ♣953
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	2 ♡	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Make the same bid you would have made had there been no interference—a raise to two spades. If you elect to pass, you might find that by the time the bidding gets back to you it is at an uncomfortably high level, and you won't know whether or not to compete.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠QJ74 ♡9 ◇A10762 ♣953
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South
1 ♠	2 ♡	?

What do you bid now?
A.—You have limited defensive capabilities but great offensive potential. Had East not interposed a bid, you would have jumped to four spades. Make the same bid now.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠985 ♡QJ762 ◇83 ♣A93
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 NT	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Although partner's jump to two no trump is not forcing, just highly invitational, you should not pass unless you have a sub-minimum response. Here, you are full value for your bid. Since your hand is balanced, don't rebid your hearts. Simply raise to three no trump.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ62 ♡Q103 ◇AJ983 ♣5
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—In support of spades, your hand revalues to 14 points. Since the equivalent of an opening bid facing an opening should be enough for game, jump to four spades. Don't bid only three spades; that would be invitational, and partner might pass with a minimum.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠8 ♡A1076 ◇KJ854 ♣J93
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 NT	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Although partner has responded to your Stayman inquiry with the "wrong" major, he could hold a four-card heart suit as well. For the moment show partner that you have game-going values with a heart suit by jumping to three no trump. If partner does have hearts as well, he will correct to four hearts.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ7 ♡J6 ◇K6 ♣AQJ873
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	3 ♣	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—We think you are worth one try, and we have a sneaky admiration for those who bark out three no trump without giving a thought to the heart situation or worrying about losing a partial when the no trump game fails. We would bid three spades, and hope that partner has the sort of heart holding that would permit him to convert to three no trump.

Celebrities raise money for homeless

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Stars of the new "Gidget" and the old "Star Trek" television series joined nearly 1,000 people for a weekend walk-a-thon to raise money for the homeless.

Mayor Tom Bradley greeted actress Caryn Richman, the new "Gidget," and Walter Koenig and Nichelle Nichols, who portrayed Chekov and Lt. Uhuru in the original "Star Trek" series and movies, as the walk began Saturday.

The San Fernando Valley Mayor's Fund, a volunteer group, will distribute money brought in by the 6.6-mile event. Figures were not available Sunday, but organizers had estimated it would raise $24,000.

"People are beginning to realize that we are not talking about homeless on Skid Row, we are talking about families and neighbors," said actress Marsha Hunt, a founder of the fund.

• • •

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer-actress Rita Moreno, who has won every major award from the Grammy to the Oscar, was installed as honorary mayor of Pacific Palisades, an affluent neighborhood overlooking Santa Monica Bay.

"You may ask how a simple girl like me became honorary mayor of Pacific Palisades?" she told the installation audience Sunday. "As a matter of fact, I was running for honorary governor of all of California until I handed the final negotiations over to the William Morris Agency, my agents.... Well, I'll have to settle for being honorary mayor."

Miss Moreno, 56, who starred in the movie "West Side Story," made it clear she will be more than just a ceremonial official.

"I certainly plan to break all precedent and get involved," she said. "When I told one of the Chamber (of Commerce) directors that I intend to attend meetings, she almost dropped the phone."

She plans to push a pilot recycling program, and drew cheers with a pointed remark about planned oil drilling along the coast.

"I'm rather conservationist," she said. "I turned off the pilot light in the gas range years ago. I don't use the electric dryer. I use a clothesline." She also refuses double bags at the grocery store and grows her own tomatoes and herbs.

Her two-year tenure follows that of comedian Chevy Chase, who attended the installation along with such celebrities as Debbie Reynolds and Dick Van Patten.

Ball

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Lucille Ball was released from Cedars-Sinai Medical Center after nearly a week's stay, a spokesman said.

"She's doing fine," said hospital spokesman Ron Wise, after the 76-year-old Miss Ball was released Sunday afternoon.

Miss Ball was brought in Wednesday by her husband, Gary Morton, after complaining that she did not feel well, Wise said.

"There was initial concern that she was having cardiac problems, but subsequent tests indicated that her general condition was good," Wise said.

He did not know if doctors had determined the problem, but "if it was anything significant, she wouldn't have been out this fast," Wise said.

The comedian usually has a yearly checkup at the medical center, and last year underwent surgery there to remove a cyst from her thyroid gland, Wise said.

• • •

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Blair Underwood, who portrays that hunk of an attorney Jonathan Rollins on NBC-TV's "L.A. Law," received his bachelor of fine arts degree at Carnegie Mellon University, 3½ years after dropping out to seek his fortune.

The 23-year-old Underwood, who received his degree Sunday, said he was determined to get it one way or another, even though it was irrelevant in terms of his acting career.

"In the industry, you walk into an audition and they don't say, 'Do you have your college degree?' They just want to know if you look the part, can you play the part. That's it," he said.

"But for me, I just wanted to finish. I hate starting something and leaving it hang."

Last season after various television roles and commercials, Underwood joined "L.A. Law," produced by another Carnegie Mellon alumnus, Steven Bochco. The show's creators were looking for a young black actor to portray an entertainment attorney.

Carnegie Mellon officials allowed Underwood to use his acting experience toward a student internship. His final research paper for graduation was entitled "The Business of Show."

Redford

CANNES, France (AP) — Robert Redford presented his film "The Milagro Beanfield War" at the Cannes Film Festival even though it wasn't entered in the festival's competition.

The movie, directed by Redford, is about the inhabitants of Milagro, a small town in New Mexico, and a resident who diverts water from a real estate development to irrigate a patch of his land.

Although the movie is not entered in the competition, Redford said he brought it to Cannes "because the film is very important for me and I was in the neighborhood."

"The rampant development that's going on in the U.S. should be questioned," he said Sunday. "But there is also the need to preserve a 400-year-old culture."

• • •

NEW YORK (AP) — Film critic Gene Shalit gets a chance to blow off some hot air tonight, along with 39 other bassoonists at a "Bassoon Monsoon."

The all-bassoon ensemble, which also will include Peter "P.D.Q. Bach" Shickele, hopes to raise money to endow the bassoon chair of the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center.

Shalit, of NBC's "Today," and Shickele, who has performed as Johann Sebastian Bach's "long-lost son," said the bassoon was not their instrument of choice.

"We had a very fine clarinetist in Fargo, North Dakota," said Shickele. "After a few years, I was sent to him for lessons. He said, 'Peter, you've picked up too many bad habits. It would be easier to start over on a new instrument.'"

Shalit also started with the clarinet. "I didn't practice for a few weeks," he said, "and the teacher got furious.

"He took away my clarinet and as punishment he said, 'From now on, you're gonna play this.'"

NEW YORK (AP) — Robert Shaplen, a correspondent and staff writer for The New Yorker magazine who became an expert on Asia in a career that spanned five decades, died Sunday. He was 71.

The Princeton, N.J., resident became ill on a recent trip to Southeast Asia and entered the Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center three weeks ago for treatment of thyroid cancer.

Shaplen, born in Philadelphia, reported for The New York Herald Tribune and was an Asia correspondent for Newsweek, Fortune and Collier's magazines before joining The New Yorker, where he worked for 36 years starting in 1952.

FDIC warns banking industry

Get solvent or face music

By NATHANIEL C. NASH
New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. has been warning the banking and savings industries that if the long-term problems of the insolvent savings and loan insurance fund are not resolved soon, the next president might come up with some very unpalatable solutions.

In the last few weeks, L. William Seidman, the FDIC chairman, has addressed three industry groups, warning them that the troubles in the savings industry are so large that they are likely to be a top priority for the next president during his first 100 days in office, when presidents try to get unpopular policies behind them.

Seidman has repeatedly warned that, in the worst case, the independent federal regulators could lose control of the banking and savings industries.

He contends that the next president could possibly decide to form one giant banking agency, under the control of the Treasury Department, to regulate all deposit-taking institutions.

Seidman has said that neither he nor current Treasury officials support such a one-agency approach. But he argues that the government would probably need to bail out the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. and that if Treasury funds were used, the executive branch might insist on ultimate control of the banking industry.

"I've been trying to get people to focus on this problem early," Seidman said in an interview last week. "If you don't watch out, the industry might find that a solution is forced upon it."

Seidman is the second major regulator to begin warning publicly that the FSLIC's resources are far from sufficient to handle an estimated $20 billion to $60 billion in losses at more than 500 insolvent savings institutions.

Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, in a letter to Congress last month, warned that

No quick fix for thrifts

DALLAS (AP) — Texas thrifts need the federally backed "Southwest Plan" to survive, but the bailout won't mean a quick fix to the state's savings and loan crisis, analysts say.

Under the plan, 25 to 30 thrifts will acquire 100 insolvent savings and loans while receiving an infusion of new funds from private sources and from the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp.

The state's 279 thrifts lost $6.4 billion during 1987, while the state's banks recorded a $2 billion loss, according to Sheshunoff Information Services Inc. of Austin.

But Alex Sheshunoff, founder of the analyst firm, said even though the thrift industry needs the plan to survive, results may be slow in coming.

"That will be the discouraging part," he said. "Expectations of a very fast turnaround simply won't happen."

J. Stephen Skaggs, a vice president of investment services at Sheshunoff, said year-end figures for 1987 show that the industry's problems have expanded to include several more than those initially cited for speculative lending activities.

Of the 25 Texas thrifts with the largest asset bases, only two earned a profit, the Sheshunoff data showed. And a total of 111 savings and loans — nearly 40 percent of the industry — had negative regulatory capital, meaning that they had exhausted all equity in the institution.

INDICATORS

Industrial production shows significant hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Production at the nation's factories, mines and utilities shot up 0.7 percent in April, the biggest gain in six months, the government reported today.

The Federal Reserve said the April advance followed increases of 0.4 percent in January and 0.2 percent in March and no change at all in February. It was the largest advance since a 1.1 percent surge last October.

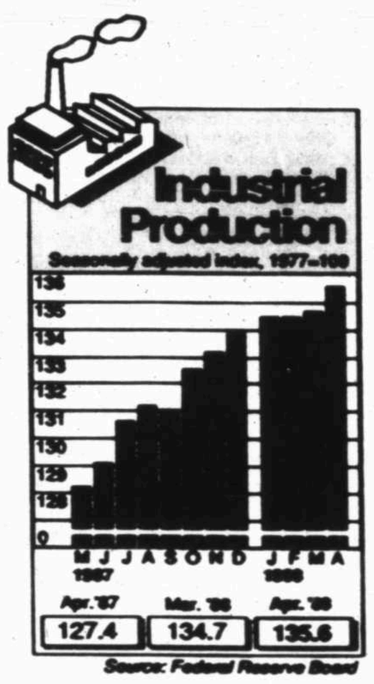
The increase was in line with expectations as economists had predicted a strong showing based on a pickup in production at auto factories.

Autos were assembled at an annual rate of 7 million units last month, up from a rate of 6.6 million units in March.

With the latest improvement, overall industrial production is now 6.4 percent higher than it was a year ago, a further sign of the resurgence of the U.S. manufacturing sector, which has enjoyed booming export sales because of the decline in the value of the dollar.

The Reagan administration is counting on further reductions in the U.S. trade deficit to contribute almost half of the expected growth in the overall economy this year.

The April advance in industrial output followed a period of generally sluggish activity in the first part of the year as production gains slowed while manufacturers, particularly in the auto industry, tried to work down an overhang of unsold goods.



Business leaders see more growth

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — Prospects for economic growth are good this year but interest rates, if they continue to rise, threaten to topple the United States into a recession by the end of 1989, the country's business leaders say.

Most members of the Business Council, composed of 61 chief executives of some of the nation's largest companies, say business so far in 1988 is better than they expected at the end of 1987, when many were worried about the effects of the October stock market crash.

Now, the executives, with the exception of those heading financial service firms such as brokerage and insurance companies, report signs of moderate or better growth.

"The car business is going great, actually stronger than any of us anticipated," said Roger B. Smith, chairman of General Motors Corp.

Other executives attending the council's twice-a-year meeting last weekend at The Homestead, a posh resort in the mountains of western Virginia, echoed Smith's sentiments, reporting other signs of strong demand.

"We're seeing a surprising increase in demand for motor gasoline in the United States, at least 2 percentage points above what we expected," said George M. Keller, chairman of Chevron Corp.

But amid the satisfaction over the country's more than 5-year-old business expansion, the longest since the 1960s, was concern that possible renewed inflation could trigger rising interest rates.

Charles W. Parry, retired chairman of the Aluminum Company of America, said prices of metals, chemicals and other basic commodities are up significantly.

Such a rise "often has been a precursor of an increase in inflation rates ... and that has me a little bit worried," Parry said.

A forecast, representing a consensus of economists employed by Business Council member companies, predicts modest growth as measured by the gross national product of 2.4 percent this year. That compares with 3.8 percent in 1987.

"Inflationary signs ... remain muted," the economists said, predicting a rise in consumer prices of 3.9 percent this year and 4.6 percent in 1989, compared with 4.4 percent last year.

P&P begins exchange of partnerships

From Staff Reports

Parker & Parsley Development Partners, L.P. will begin a major exchange of limited partner interests, according to company sources.

The publicly traded limited partnership of which Midland-based Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co. is the general partner, has announced that it will begin an offer to exchange its units of limited partner interest for interests in 17 limited partnerships sponsored by One Liberty Oil Company (formerly Indian Wells Oil Company) and 11 limited partnerships sponsored by MGF Oil Corporation or NFC Petroleum Corporation.

The exchange offer, which is expected to get underway about May 20, is subject to approval by the limited partners in certain of the limited partnerships, and approval by Parker & Parsley Development Partners, L.P. existing unitholders of record as of May 16, 1988. The exchange offer is expected to close in July 1988. Dean Witter Capital Markets is the dealer manager of the exchange offer.

The exchange calls for one unit to be issued for each $14.71 of exchange value assigned to the interests. Assuming 100 percent acceptance, the aggregate exchange value attributable to all limited partnerships is approximately $30.3 million and the present value of future net revenues of the oil and gas properties attributable to such limited partnerships is approximately $41 million calculated in accordance with SEC guidelines. These oil and gas properties represent, as of December 31, 1987, approximately 50 billion cubic feet of natural gas and four million barrels of oil.

Parker & Parsley Development Partners, L.P., which was formed in December 1987, has over $123 million.

Suzanne Voltz found her niche in sales

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

After a couple of false starts Suzanne Voltz is convinced she has finally found her career in sales.

She has ample reason to believe that she has finally found her calling. Since joining the publisher of law and tax books nine months ago, she has consistently ranked near the top among a national sales force of 600 and on one occasion came in third in the nation. Commerce Clearing House, the 75-year old book publisher, definitely considers her one of its top up and coming young salemen.

Suzanne knows a career in direct sales is not easy. A salesperson has to learn to be regarded with suspicion, accept rejection, handle customer complaints and not take it all personally, but she is convinced she has the temperment to meet those challenges.

Oil prices edge slightly higher

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil futures prices are continuing Friday's trend, gaining 9 cents to stand at $17.58 at midmorning.

Friday, prices edged higher in a lethargic trading session.

Contracts for June delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude grade, closed at $17.49 per 42-gallon barrel, up 1 cent from Thursday's close on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Among refined products for June delivery, contracts for wholesale unleaded gasoline settled .42 cent higher at 52.34 cents per gallon, while wholesale heating oil rose .24 cent to 47.47 cents per gallon.

"It was a total non-event, honestly," said John Azarow, an analyst at the Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc. securities firm. He said volume was down, as it had been all week, mainly on the absence of any news to move prices one way or the other.

He said volume was also affected by some traders' reluctance to trade too heavily before the next meeting of oil ministers from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, which is scheduled to begin June 8 in Vienna, Austria.

At the meeting, the OPEC ministers are expected to try to find a way to restrict production in order to drive prices higher.

Dollar firms in quiet trading

LONDON (AP) — The dollar firmed against most major foreign currencies, including the strong British pound, in quiet European trading today. Gold prices also rose.

Foreign currency dealers said the dollar was supported by market expectations that the U.S. trade deficit narrowed in March from February's $13.8 billion. The March trade figures are scheduled to be released in Washington on Tuesday.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose 0.03 yen to a closing 124.73. Later, in London, it was quoted at 124.78 yen.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Friday:

–1.6857 West German marks, up from 1.6830

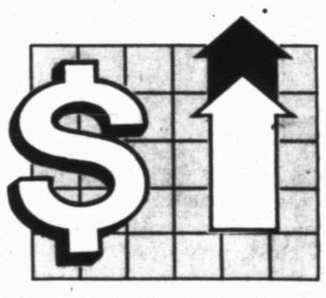
–1.4010 Swiss francs, up from 1.4000

–5.7205 French francs, up from 5.7063

–1.8905 Dutch guilders, up from 1.8855

–1,254.10 Italian lire, up from 1,249.00

–1.2317 Canadian dollars, down from 1.2336



Gold also firmed in moderate European trading. At midmorning, London's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $453.40 a troy ounce, up from the opening bid of $452.50 and from late Friday's 449.00.

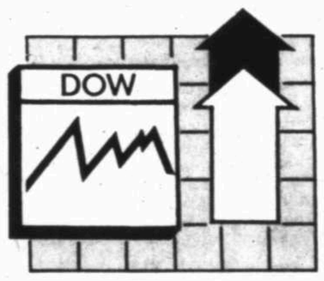
In Zurich, the bid price was $453.50, up from $450.00 late Friday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose $2.39 to close at a bid $455.24.

Silver was quoted in London Monday at a bid $6.65 dollars a troy ounce, up from Friday's $6.52.

Stock prices climb 22 points

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market recouped some of its recent losses with a broad rally Friday, aided by declining interest rates and a steady dollar in foreign exchange.



The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 22.55 to 1,990.55, cutting its loss for the week to 16.91 points.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by more than 2 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 1,076 up, 446 down and 462 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 147.24 million shares, against 143.88 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades at regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 166.48 million shares.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market increased $25.74 billion, or 1.77 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks added 1.52 to 145.30.

Standard & Poor's industrial index rose 3.52 to 298.23, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up 2.93 at 256.78.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market gained 2.25 to 372.48. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 297.94, up 1.33.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Business sales, inventories advance

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 1.9 percent rise in business sales in March was the largest advance in more than a year, but the 0.3 percent rise in business inventories was the smallest since last August, the government says.

The Commerce Department said Friday total business sales rose to a seasonally adjusted $479.5 billion in March. It was the largest advance in 13 months and followed an equally strong 1.1 percent rise in February.

Business inventories rose to $720 billion, the smallest rise since last August. Inventories had grown by 0.4 percent in February.

Businessmen: Economy too good to be true

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — The state of the economy seems almost too good to be true less than seven months after the stock market plunge, business leaders say.

The Business Council, composed of 61 executives from the largest U.S. corporations, predicted modest growth, low unemployment and moderate inflation this year in a report issued Friday at its meeting at the Homestead resort.

U.S. auto sales leap 35.2 percent

DETROIT (AP) — The rush to beat widespread buyer-incentive deadlines boosted sales of domestic-made car and light trucks 35.2 percent in early May compared with a year ago, industry analysts say.

Automakers sold 204,270 domestic-made cars and light trucks in the eight-selling days from May 1-10, up from 151,131 in the identical period a year ago, the companies reported Friday.

General Motors Corp. sold 35.1 percent more cars and light trucks, while Ford Motor Co. rose 31.5 percent and Chrysler Corp. sales jumped 48.6 percent.

Car dealers 'hostage' to trade disputes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Far-reaching trade legislation on its way to President Reagan would hold nearly 10,000 imported auto franchises in the United States hostage to the nation's trade disputes, a car dealer group says.

The American International Automobile Dealers Association said Friday that it felt it was "the first target for retaliation."

State agency plans to boost efforts in international trade

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas has succeeded in international business almost without really trying, but hard times are prompting state leaders to see how well they can do with a little effort.

"What we've acquired to date has been by sheer accident," said Edward O. Vetter, chairman of the year-old Texas Department of Commerce, which intends to become a focal point for Texas' foray into worldwide competition.

The Commerce Department, a consolidation of several state economic agencies, was formed about a year ago by Gov. Bill Clements to help take up the slack left by collapsing oil prices.

In its international budget, Texas lags far behind other state spending totals, with just $443,000 in fiscal 1988, compared to California's $6.5 million in 1987. Thirteen states spent $1 million or more. Dallas, by itself, even has more to spend: $500,000.

"This state is woefully — and that's a mild word — underfunded," said Scott Eubanks, executive vice president of the Dallas Partnership, the Dallas Chamber of Commerce's economic development arm.

Despite the lean funding, the Commerce Department believes Texas can go far because it's well-known overseas and is an attractive place to do business.

"The hardest part of my job is taken care of," said Bill Luttrell, director of the Office of International Business Development, charged with luring foreign firms to Texas. "Most investors overseas know about Texas."

The Commerce Department will send delegates abroad, make direct mailings to potential investors, make loans for exporters and try to spread Texas' name in foreign business journals.

The department plans to unfurl the Texas banner at trade shows in Seoul, South Korea, in October and Taipei, Taiwan, and Mexico City in December.

And, the department will try to enlarge the state's role as a supplier to Mexico's booming "maquiladora" industry, with more than 400 U.S. plants just across the Rio Grande.

Brochures are being prepared in Japanese, Chinese, Korean, French, German, Italian and Spanish. They'll be sent overseas, probably this summer, to counter the impression that Texas' economy has gone into a permanent decline.

The message: "We're still kickin" — as J. William Lauderback, the Commerce Department's executive director, put it. "The world didn't come to an end, no matter what you've heard about our economy," he told The Dallas Morning News.

To provide export financing, the department is authorized to issue $20 million in bonds that would be used for loans or guarantees to Texas companies that need working capital to fill orders from overseas.

Some cities, such as Houston and Garland, impatient that the state doesn't have a stronger presence abroad, have ventured out on their own.

Dallas has been looking into similar arrangements, but is waiting to see what the Commerce Department will do.

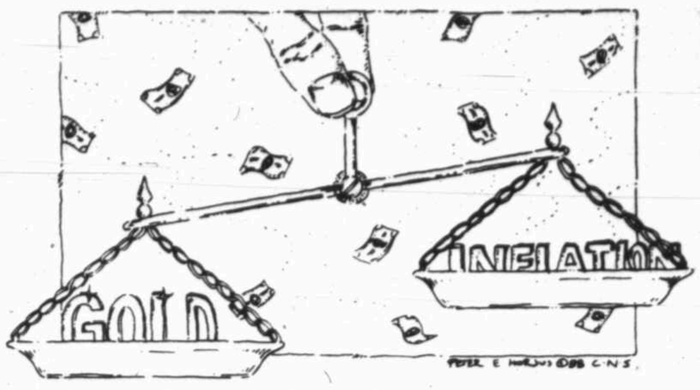
The department can't establish offices without the Legislature's approval, but it appears sold on the idea. Officials said separate city offices would be counterproductive because Texas needs to project a cohesive image.

The department hopes to use funds from the private sector and local development agencies to open an office in the Far East, probably in Tokyo, by the end of the summer.

"We're very concerned we don't have an office in Tokyo or Seoul or Taipei or London or Brussels," Lauderback said. "Everybody else is out there."

Gold's future dulled by uncertainty

By Benjamin Seto
Hearst News Service



Frank Orrell wants to return to the days when money was gold and the dollar was, well, paper. The modern-day prospector and chairman of Mother Lode Gold Mines Consolidated of San Francisco is staking his hopes on the nation's love for the precious metal in the face of inflationary fears.

"In the past, when you had gold in the bank vault, you knew you had something of value," Orrell said.

But some industry observers say recent fluctuations in gold prices reflect investors' confusion over whether the glittering metal can still be used to hedge off inflation. A recent bearish forecast by the WEFA Group, which predicted a crash in gold prices within five years, also dulled some of the metal's luster.

"We feel a surge in supply, changes in technology permitting lower operating costs, combined with very minimal increases in demand will result in a downward pressure on prices," John Jacobson, director of basic industries, said from WEFA's Bala Cynwyd, Pa., headquarters. WEFA, formerly Wharton Econometric, said gold prices should fall somewhere between $300 and $350 an ounce by the early 1990s, with maybe a brief drop to $250 during that period. Gold now sells for around $450 an ounce.

Orrell and Mother Lode Executive Vice President John Gruen discounted the WEFA report, saying it did not consider other factors affecting gold prices. Major mining companies recently offered "gold loans" that had a negative impact on prices, Gruen said. The loans, used by companies to raise capital on the basis of future gold production, caused investors to lose interest because of the apparent abundance of gold.

Kathleen Glancy, an analyst with Pershing & Co. of New York, said, "There's so much sentiment behind gold prices. It's hard to look at five years from now and say production is going to be X, (CQ) so prices are going to go down."

Orrell and Mother Lode – named after the fabled California gold-producing region – see a new gold rush ahead.

Mother Lode was formed in 1974 as an explorational and gold finance company. But it is only since the start of this year that activities have begun to stir at the junior mine company's various properties, many of which it owns through partnerships:

– The Royal/Mountain King mine near Copperopolis: Mother Lode, in a joint venture with Meridian Minerals Co., broke ground in March for a $45 million mill expected to go into production in the first few months of 1989. The mine, which will consist of three open pits, is expected to produce 60,000 ounces of gold and an equal amount of silver each year for about 12 years.

– Idaho-Maryland/Brunswick mine in the Grass Valley area: A Mother Lode subsidiary, Northern Mines Inc., acquired the mine last month for an undisclosed amount. Mother Lode expects the mine, filled with narrow gold veins, to be in production within five years. Orrell said the mine produced more than 2 million ounces of gold between 1851 and 1956.

– Amador United mines: A cluster of mines in the heart of the Mother Lode "Gold Belt." The mines are owned by Amador United Gold Mines, in which Mother Lode holds a 43 percent stake. Under exploration with Meridian, Mother Lode expects the mines to produce 30,000 ounces of gold a year.

– Plymouth mine: A part of the Amador group on the gold belt. Mother Lode has done some drilling and expects production in two years.

Orrell also said Mother Lode is in the late stages of negotiating the purchase of a mine along a five-mile stretch in Calaveras County. He would not elaborate on the site, but said the company hopes to construct a major production facility there.

Other mining companies also have been active in acquiring mines.

San Francisco's Homestake Mining Co., one of the nation's largest gold producers, last month completed its tender offer for a controlling interest in North American Metals Corp., a British Columbia firm developing a mine with Chevron Corp. Homestake also completed last April a $50 million deal for a gold mine in Chile.

Still, analysts don't expect gold prices to climb near the high of $500 an ounce it reached last December. But Vahid Fathi, metals analyst with Prescott Ball & Turben Inc. of Cleveland, said prices will be at the higher end later this year as interest rates go up.

Orrell said gold prices have always been affected by the depreciation of the dollar.

"There's never been a case in history where the paper currency survives," he said.

VOLTZ

Despite her success, her entry into sales was not direct nor intentionally. After trying a couple of other occupations, Suzanne Voltz found her calling in sales. After graduating from Texas Tech, she spent two years teaching second grade in Kermit. "I knew if I got my teaching certificate, I'd have something to fall back on," she explained. She then went to work at Conoco as a geoscience technician. Wanting to establish a career in land, she joined Coquina Oil's land department.

When Coquina was acquired by another company, Voltz switched to sales and, as she put it, found her niche. She sold phone systems for Executone, and for approximately four years was salesman-of-the-month for nearly every month.

The secret to sales success, she says, is persistence in making the sale, follow-up after the sale and knowing that thin line between persistence and being obnoxious.

"Most of the time I can feel when to back off. I let the customer tell me when to call back, and then I do it."

Although Voltz has learned to keep her personal feelings out of her job, she still cares about pleasing the customer. "I'm eager to please people. I get upset when I can't please people," she said. "I want my clients to be happy, and I want to do whatever it takes to make them happy." She said she makes a point of calling her clients after their books have been shipped, to see if there's anything else she can do.

One thing the outgoing Texarkana native likes about her career is the freedom it allows her. Since she offices out of her home, she is, in essence, her own boss. Her immediate supervisor lives in Dallas. However, she pointed out, such freedom requires a greater amount of discipline.

"It's tempting to ease up, sleep a little later," she admitted. "It takes willpower to get up and make those calls and then go out and see people." But, she added, she knows that the harder she works, the more money she can earn. 'In sales, you have that control," she remarked.

At Texas Tech, Voltz's specialization was guidance and counseling. It pays off in her job because, she says, "I learn from people. I like meeting people, learning about them — what makes them tick. The more people you meet, the more you understand people."

She concluded: "I've made a lot of friends being in sales. I've made some friends in most of the companies I've sold to."

FDIC

the $10.8 billion in borrowing authority that FSLIC received from Congress last year would be insufficient to handle the problems and that Congress, at some point soon, would have to deal with the issue again.

Seidman contends that any rescue of the FSLIC — which was insolvent by $13 billion at the end of 1987 — could be so costly, yet unavoidable, that "a new president may want to act on this in his honeymoon period, following the good advice, 'Get the tough ones behind you in the first 100 days.' "

Seidman acknowledges that a probable solution would involve merging the $18 billion FDIC fund into the FSLIC.

But he contends that while his agency can handle the problems in the banking industry, "we do not have the resources to handle the significant problems in both industries."

Thus, he has said, the FDIC has begun a major new study on the future of deposit insurance, which he hopes "will be helpful to either Mr. B or Mr. D," referring to Vice President Bush and Gov. Michael S. Dukakis of Massachusetts, the probable presidential nominees.

Some bank experts have wondered whether Seidman's statements reflect a growing concern on his part about the adequacy of the FDIC itself, which might face total expenses of $2 billion to $3 billion in rescuing the First Republicbank Corp. of Dallas.

The statements by Seidman come at a time when Federal regulators are beginning to feel more pressure from smaller bankers and some state attorneys general over a double standard between the treatment of depositors at large banks and those at small ones.

Specifically, the Independent Bankers Association of Texas has complained that the FDIC, in its $1 billion temporary rescue of First Republicbank in March, guaranteed all uninsured depositors, while the agency had repeatedly not guaranteed the uninsured depositors at smaller Texas banks that failed.

"They are closing our banks at a rate of two a week, and what does the FDIC do, it gives unlimited insurance to First Republic and the Fed extends a $5 billion line of credit," said F. Hagen McMahon Jr., executive director of the Texas association.

"Three thousand depositors have lost $58 million in uninsured deposits at our banks," he said. "And no one lost a dime at First Republic. I call that blatant discrimination."

McMahon also said that as a result of the blanket guarantees by the FDIC of First Republicbank deposits, many of the state's smaller banks had experienced an outflow of deposits to First Republic.

McMahon, other small Texas bankers and some Texas legislators have urged Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox to bring a lawsuit against federal regulators, charging discrimination.

Seidman himself admits there is a double standard, and contends that for that reason he wants the banking industry to offer plans to deal with the future of deposit insurance so that depositors at all financial institutions are treated equally.

Regulators have warned that the nation's largest banks are too large to be allowed to fail, because the collapse of one could jeopardize the stability of the entire banking system.
