Tank explodes, 1 dead, 7 injured

FORT HOOD, Texas (AP) — A tank exploded after it was hit by another tank's artillery fire during military exercises, killing one National Guardsman and injuring seven others, officials said today.

The M-60 tank blew up just before midnight Tuesday, a day after a military helicopter crashed in a clearing and killed all 10 reservists and National Guardsmen aboard. Both incidents occurred during the two-week Starburst '87 maneuvers.

The latest accident occurred at "during a training accident with an M-60 tank when an M-60 tank fired upon a second M-60 tank," Fort Hood spokesman Sgt. Roger Allen said.

All eight men inside the tank were taken to Darnall Community Hospital, where one died at 2:52 a.m., one was hospitalized in serious condition and the other six were treated and released, he said.

He said the guardsmen's identities were being withheld pending notification of next of kin. He said all were assigned to the Texas National Guard's 49th Armored Division.

Public affairs officers at the guard's Camp Mabry in Austin would only confirm that a "training accident" had occurred.

te budget...

College funds 'dream'

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate has approved a two-year state budget that would require new revenue of more than $6.6 billion but Gov. Bill Clements said one major section — on higher education — is merely a dream that's not going to come true.

Clements also renewed his vow Tuesday to veto any proposal that would require more than some $2.9 billion in new or increased taxes. In fact, the governor said he would only consider extending the "temporary" sales tax and motor fuel taxes that expire Sept. 1.

The budget approved by the Senate 26-3 on Tuesday totals $39.56 billion. It was sent to the House, where a committee scheduled discussion today on a $38.3 billion budget proposal.

Even though the Senate measure is approximately $1.3 billion higher than a House proposal, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby described it a "very bare-bones budget" and "a good bill."

The Senate bill is higher, Hobby said, because "we don't want to cut AFDC (state child welfare) or turn people out of nursing homes or cripple higher education — that's where the differences are."

But there are some human services reductions in child protective services, he said. "There is a reduction to the level where not even all life-threatening cases can be investigated," Hobby said. "That's tragic, but that's the situation we're in."

Three Republican senators — John Leedom of Dallas, Don Henderson of Houston and J.E. "Buster" Brown of Lake Jackson — voted against the bill.

The final legislative version of the appropriations bill almost certainly will be written by a House-Senate conference committee. A two-thirds vote of each house would be needed to override a gubernatorial veto.

Clements said Tuesday he was not worried about lawmakers overriding his veto.

Clements also said financing highways through bonds, which would free general revenue money, and a state lottery are being discussed.

Ask Us

Q. — How might a woman driver protect herself on the highway from being stopped by a someone impersonating a law enforcement officer?

A. — Local DPS troopers note that their vehicles are plainly marked with the "black and white" colors and that their officers wear distinctive gray uniforms. They say individuals should also look to see if the vehicle stopping them has "exempt" Texas license plates, door markings and a flashing red light. It is within the officer's right to ask the driver to step from the car, but they recommend women still unsure to lock their doors, crack their window and ask the officer for proper identification.

65,000 acres...

'87 cotton crop 'all in ground'

Except for some spot areas now being replanted, local ag officials estimate Scurry County cotton farmers have now planted "all the cotton were going to get."

The estimate for planted acreage is figured at 65,000 acres, and officials are now guardedly optimistic about this year's chances for cotton.

"We've got enough (acreage) to come up with a decent cotton crop," noted ASCS Director Joe Hefner.

A good crop would equal 60,000 to 70,000 bales.

Due to late spring rains, a large portion of the cotton now in the ground was planted later than normal.

Both Hefner and County Agent Marvin Ensor note, however, that if the weather cooperates for the remainder of the season, the 1987 cotton crop still stands a good chance.

June 15 is normally considered the last date to insure a sufficiently long season to grow cotton. A late, dry fall can add to this growing season, however.

This year's crop isn't lacking

Testimony begins in local rape case

The state continued to present its case Wednesday morning in the criminal trial of Louis Robles Martinez, 21, accused of aggravated sexual assault on a child.

Jury selection in 132nd District Court began shortly after 9 a.m. Tuesday with a six man-six woman jury chosen. The selection process ended just before 3 p.m.

Martinez is accused of raping a 13-year-old Snyder girl on the evening of Dec. 27, 1986.

That incident was reported to police on Feb. 11 and Martinez was indicted for that offense by a Scurry County grand jury in March.

The incident came to light as a result of the 13-year-old's pregnancy, testimony indicated. The pregnancy was aborted before it came to term.

District Attorney Ernie Armstrong began presentation of the

WTC seminar set to assist freshmen

A "freshman success seminar" for enrolling fulltime students at Western Texas College will begin at 8:30 a.m. Thursday on campus.

Entering students should assemble at the Student Center at that time. The seminar activity will begin at 9 a.m.

Students can pre-register for the fall term at the seminar. Counselors will be on hand to help work out the student's class schedule and to answer other questions about the college.

There is no charge for the seminar and a complimentary lunch will be served both to the students and their parents.

Students who do not have an ACT of SAT test score on file at WTC must take a placement test before enrolling. There is a $5 fee for this test.

The billing for tuition, fees and housing will be mailed in August, college officials note.

Dr. Duane Hood, dean of students, noted that all fulltime freshmen are encouraged to attend the seminar. This includes students who have been enrolled in WTC's early admission program and those who have taken summer classes.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "As we grow older it's not the mileage but the treadwear that bothers us."

Newspaper columnists across the country have had a field day with the Jim and Tammy Bakker PTL scandal. Here are just a few of the items we've collected from various newspapers concerning the former TV evangelist.

"Bumper sticker: 'Honk if you're not a Democratic candidate or a PTL minister.'"

Jim Bakker apparently told his wife, "Look on the bright side Tammy. After this, judgment day will be a piece of cake."

"Jim and Tammy are still smiling. It's my guess they got out of town with their mailing list."

"Jim Bakker's eyesight may not be too good. He may have read it, 'Count Your Ble$$ings.'"

"The PTL was paying Jim Bakker almost $2 million a year. Holy smoke. What did they think he was, a baseball player? Maybe so, but he sure struck out."

"When the IRS gets finished with the Bakkers, they'll need the air conditioned doghouse back for a place to live."

"Running for president can be very expensive. Pretty soon only TV evangelists will be able to afford it."

Some even had praise for Bakker. "At least he believed in nine of the Commandments."

"With sex scandals in the news, some denominations avoid referring to any group as lay persons."

"It's a shame those Marines got involved with women. If they had wanted that, they should have been TV preachers."

"Jim Bakker's personal physician must be Dr. Ruth."

"Jim and Tammy like to quote the passage, 'Love one another.' But you're not suppose to use the literal translation."

"President Reagan ought to send Jim and Tammy a thank you note. Their problems sure took the heat off the Oval Office."

Bishop's murder is an issue

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The unsolved 1980 assassination of Archbishop Oscar Romero has re-emerged as a political issue, with the church saying it has new evidence and the extreme right calling for a fresh investigation to clear its name.

The auxiliary archbishop of San Salvador, Monsignor Gregorio Rosa Chavez, said this week the Roman Catholic Church has some new information about Romero's murder, for which no one has been brought to trial.

Rosa Chavez declined to elaborate on the new evidence, saying, "For the moment it is confidential."

Romero was killed when a lone gunman fired a single shot into his heart while he was offering Mass on March 24, 1980, at a chapel in this capital.

In his weekly Sunday homilies, the archbishop had denounced violence from both left and right in the Salvadoran civil war. He read the names of the dead and disappeared, most of them believed to have been victims of right-wing death squads.

The day before his death, Romero exhorted the army and the nation's security forces: "Do not kill! No soldier is obliged to obey an order against the law of God. ... Stop the repression!"

Ultra-rightist Roberto D'Aubuisson, a cashiered army major, was alleged to have plotted the murder. He has repeatedly denied the allegations.

But former U.S. Ambassador Robert E. White told a U.S. congressional committee in 1984 that intelligence reports indicated "beyond any reasonable doubt" that D'Aubuisson "planned and ordered the assassination."

Alfredo Cristiani, secretary-general of D'Aubuisson's National Republican Alliance, known as Arena, said Tuesday his party wanted a new investigation into the murder to clear the former intelligence officer's name.

"It seems everyone is trying to blame Major D'Aubuisson," Cristiani said in an interview. "Everybody says they have proof. Why don't they come out once and for all and let the judicial system handle it?"

The outspoken D'Aubuisson drew opposition from moderates and leftists and support from conservative sectors for his anti-communist stand during a failed 1984 presidential bid against Jose Napoleon Duarte.

$1 trillion budget to face Senate consideration, veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats pressing for final congressional approval of a $1 trillion federal budget for 1988 already are training their fire on the spending plan's most formidable obstacle: President Reagan.

By a 215-201 vote Tuesday, the Democratic-led House approved the budget, which includes $19.3 billion in new taxes, along with military spending cuts and domestic program increases — all opposed by the president.

The Senate was expected to follow suit today, although Democrats hold a slim 54-46 majority there and the tally was predicted to be close.

Reagan repeatedly has denigrated the Democratic package. Democratic leaders concede that if his opposition continues, they would be unlikely to find the two-thirds majority needed to override future vetoes.

Many congressional Democrats hurled verbal brickbats at the president Tuesday, belittling him for his seemingly unshakeable stance that he would veto legislation containing new taxes or with different spending priorities than his own.

"I must say I don't have much hope for the president ... with respect to congressional budgets," complained Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., on the Senate floor.

Other lawmakers attributed devious motives to the president's persistence in opposing new taxes.

"What do you do when you're president, your popularity is plummeting, the Senate has gone to the other party, the Irangate hearings grind on day after day?" asked Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y.

Child-Proofing Home Should Be Done on Hands and Knees

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1987 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter in your column from "Kiki's Mom" who said that her 2-year-old daughter received a frightening shock when she stuck her mother's keys into an electrical outlet. She was indeed lucky her daughter was not more seriously injured — or killed.

"Mom" should go to the nearest hardware store and buy some plugged discs that fit into these outlets. Her child may not have her keys to play with, but there are other objects such as hairpins that could be stuck into outlets with the same results. Mothers should not attempt to cover electrical outlets with tape — a child will quickly learn how to pull it off.

"Mom" should go through her entire house to ensure that no safety hazards exist. Safety latches for cabinets are a good idea. All household cleaners should be stored out of reach — never under a kitchen sink. The best way to spot a problem is to get down on the floor and view a room the way a child sees it.

Grandparents who frequently have little guests should also child-proof their homes. Most grandparents have forgotten what it was like to have an inquisitive, exploring child in the house.

EVELYN IN TUSCALOOSA

DEAR EVELYN: Thank you for some valuable suggestions. And, readers, wouldn't a half-dozen of these "outlet pluggers" make a fine gift for a baby shower?

DEAR ABBY: My sister and I are both married. We decided to take a weekend trip together — just the two of us. Just as our plans were coming together, she comes up with a "proposition" — if I lose 10 pounds before we leave, she will buy me a new outfit while we're out of town. Mind you, I am 5 foot 6 and weigh 125 pounds. I am by no means "fat," but she would like to make me think I am. She's always telling me that if there is something I want, she'll give it to me if I "tone up" or lose weight.

I am tired of her finding fault with me when she is just one size smaller than I am. Is there some way I can tell her how I feel without hurting her feelings, although she has hurt mine more than once?

UP TO HERE IN CHARLOTTE, N.C.

DEAR UP: Why do you think it would hurt your sister's feelings if you were to tell her truthfully that she hurts your feelings when she suggests that you are overweight when you're not? That's the only way to get her off your back. Try it. You'll like it. And don't worry about whether she likes it or not.

The "weight" you'll lose will be the burden of your sister's hostility. And telling her will "tone up" your self-esteem like no other exercise.

DEAR ABBY: Recently you ran a letter in your column from a woman who wanted suggestions as to what to do about her husband's scratchy beard, short of shaving it off, which he refused to do.

Our residents here at the Good Samaritan Village in Albuquerque, N.M., enjoy having "Dear Abby" read to them, and they had a very lively discussion about that letter. One of the residents suggested that the woman give her husband a permanent, which would curl the ends under and make the beard less scratchy. What do you think of the idea?

MARY A. JOHNSON,
ACTIVITIES COORDINATOR

DEAR MARY: Tell that resident that she rates with the professionals. That suggestion was offered by several top-notch barbers and hairdressers.

Slain jeweler was looking forward to his retirement

By The Associated Press

After more than 40 years in the jewelry business, Joe Granado was looking forward to retirement.

His partner, Arturo Melendez, was preparing to buy the thriving downtown Beaumont shop.

But on April 8, 1982, they were gunned down during a robbery.

Elliot Rod Johnson, one of four men convicted in the robbery-slayings, was executed early today for Granado's death.

"He worked all of his life," Granado's widow, Lena, says. "He really didn't have any hobbies. He was fixing to retire in about a year. He was old enough to retire and he was going to turn his business over to Arthur.

"I don't think it's bitterness," she says of her husband's death. "It's just a deep hurt."

Mrs. Granado, of Vidor, said she and her husband were within two weeks of celebrating their third wedding anniversary when he was killed. They had known each other for years since she worked in downtown Beaumont checking parking meters. After both of their spouses died, they married.

"We had talked one time about this situation," she said about his fears of robbery. "He said he had been doing this for 40-some years and he told me he never was afraid. Sometimes he'd work at night till 12 or 1 o'clock during Christmas or other busy times."

The day of the shooting, she was at home. A relative called to say there had been a shooting downtown.

"It never once dawned on me," she says. "I called and got a busy signal. That wasn't unusual. So I still wasn't afraid. Then my daughter called me and someone had called her."

They went to the hospital, where doctors told her Joe was brain dead. Both he and Melendez were shot in the head at close range after being ordered to lie on the floor.

"He didn't have any brains," she says. "He lived an hour and a half."

Mrs. Granado says she doesn't consider herself a cruel person and was opposed to capital punishment before her husband's slaying.

"I used to think it was terrible to see somebody die," she says. "I said I wouldn't want to sit on a jury and decide that. I don't think that way anymore."

Pat Boone mentioned for PTL

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pat Boone, squeaky-clean crooner of the 1950s, pitchman for milk and baptizer of born-again Christians in his backyard pool, has twice been mentioned as a possible new leader for scandal-wracked PTL.

Attorney Melvin Belli, representing ousted PTL founders Jim and Tammy Bakker, suggested Monday that Boone, a charismatic Christian, take over the 518,000-member ministry temporarily. Belli said Boone has "no axe to grind."

Boone, in a statement issued through his manager, Tim Swift, said no representatives of the Bakkers or of the Rev. Jerry Falwell, who took over PTL after Bakker's downfall in a sex scandal, have contacted him.

Boone said he hopes "Jerry and Jim and their attorneys will get together in a room, close the doors, pray and not come out until they have a meeting of their hearts and minds and put the whole thing to rest."

Last month, a published report said PTL contributors had contacted Boone as a possible replacement for Falwell.

But Boone said no contributors had contacted him directly and that Falwell was doing a "great job." He also said he would "cringe to be even asked to shoulder that kind of responsibility."

Boone, an entertainer for more than 30 years, has long had a wholesome image. A 1956 album cover showed him on the Columbia University campus in his trademark white buck shoes and argyle socks.

"You know, there's something about me that makes a lot of people want to throw up," he said in a 1976 interview with Rolling Stone magazine.

Boone, a Florida native raised in Tennessee, had hits with "Two Hearts," "Love Letters in the Sand," and "April Love."

His versions of Fats Domino's "Ain't That A Shame" and Little Richard's "Tutti Frutti" gave him a reputation for diluting black rhythm and blues for a still racially divided record-buying audience.

He also had a variety show on television that ran three years. No liquor or cigarette advertisements were accepted.

"April Love" was the theme to a movie by the same name. In it, Boone's reputation as too much of a good guy really took hold. He refused to kiss co-star Shirley Jones.

He did not kiss the leading woman in the next two films, and by the time he planted one on co-star Diane Baker in the 1959 "Journey To The Center of The Earth," it made news.

Lottery estimate is now lowered

AUSTIN (AP) — State leaders say they're disappointed over a new estimate by Comptroller Bob Bullock showing that a state lottery, if created now, won't bring in as much money as previously estimated.

The House defeated a proposed constitutional amendment for a state-run lottery in the regular legislative session that ended June 1.

On Tuesday, Bullock said the delay in a possible lottery start-up date means his previous estimate of $624 million in income for 1988-89 must be lowered from at least $141 million to as much as $349 million.

His new estimates say the lottery could produce $483 million under the most optimistic conditions down to just $275 million in a longer start-up situation.

"Since the Legislature did not act on the subject during the regular session, any future start-up of a lottery is necessarily delayed," Bullock said in a letter to House Speaker Gib Lewis.

"The fewer months available for start-up of a lottery means less revenue," he added.

The warning was bad news for lawmakers who have suggested that a lottery plan might be a non-tax method for raising some state revenue.

Asked how the new estimate affected plans to use lottery proceeds to help balance the budget, Gov. Bill Clements had a one-word answer: "Badly."

By James Jacoby

Declarer ducked the opening lead in dummy. East won the heart king and switched to a low spade. When declarer played the clubs in normal fashion, he was a trick short, brought down by the unlucky holding of four clubs to the jack in the East hand. He would have fared better if he had looked for a sure-trick approach to the play.

Declarer can virtually guarantee his contract by taking the ace of hearts immediately. He should then lead the nine of clubs from dummy. If East plays low, so does South. Declarer does not base his play on having looked into East's hand. Instead, he is willing to lose a trick to the club jack in West's hand since doing so will still leave him with nine tricks and his contract. Playing low on the opening lead subjects declarer to the almost certain spade switch after East wins the heart king, and the further chance of losing the contract when either defender holds four clubs to the jack. It is true that the recommended play would still leave declarer in jeopardy when either defender started with all five clubs headed by the jack, but that possibility is extremely remote.

Although some might open one notrump with North's hand, 17 high with three aces and a strong six-card minor suit is too strong for that bid in our book. We like the jump to three clubs on the second round, since the North hand is notably lacking in honors that need to be protected on opening lead.

A new book by James Jacoby and his father, the late Oswald Jacoby, is now available at bookstores. It is "Jacoby on Card Games," published by Pharos Books.

Port Arthur man executed today

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A convicted killer who blamed drug use for his troubles with the law was put to death early today for the 1982 robbery-slaying of a Beaumont jeweler.

Elliot Rod Johnson, 28, of Port Arthur, asked for forgiveness while family members of his victim waited across the street from the Texas Department of Corrections Walls Unit to assure themselves the execution had been carried out.

The drugs began flowing into his arms at 12:43 a.m.

Fiery Martin blasts Rev. Jesse Jackson

BALTIMORE (AP) - Billy Martin, the outspoken four-time manager of the New York Yankees, blasted the Rev. Jesse Jackson for his call for an affirmative action program in major league baseball's front offices.

"Politics don't belong in baseball and Jesse Jackson has no right to bring it in," Martin said.

Martin criticized the possible candidate for the 1988 Democratic presidential nomination at a book signing session Tuesday afternoon, and repeated his statements between innings of the Yankees game against the Batltimore Orioles, which he was announcing on television.

"All he talked about was blacks and Hispanics," Martin said of Jackson. "What about American Indians, Japanese, Chinese, females? Jesse Jackson should stick with religion and keep politics out of baseball. A man or woman should earn a right to be in baseball and not be given the right because of color or creed."

Jackson gave major league owners and operators until June 29 to work out a comprehensive plan to bring minorities into the front office or he said selected baseball teams could expect pickets, boycotts and other economic reprisals from civil-rights activists starting July 4.

Jackson's ultimatum came after former Los Angeles Dodgers vice-president Al Campanis had said on national televison that blacks lacked the "necessities" to handle management-level positions in baseball.

"The time for polite conversation and no results is over. We get along fine, but the issue is not attitude. It's the lack of a plan, the lack of commitment," Jackson said.

Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth named University of California sociology professor Dr. Harry Edwards on June 12 as a special assistant to aid in placing minorities in baseball management positions.

Jackson attended a meeting of owners in Philadelphia earlier this month at which affirmative action programs were discussed.

"Every single team will have a fair employment plan in place," Ueberroth said after the meeting, adding that the programs would be evaluated by Jackson, civil rights activists and a group of former players at a June 29 meeting in Chicago.

'PI' checking SMU programs

DALLAS (AP) - Private investigators for Southern Methodist University are looking into unconfirmed reports of rules violations in basketball, track and other athletic programs at the school, the Dallas Times Herald reported today in a copyright story.

Investigators have questioned most of the SMU basketball team as well as their high school coaches. The players' parents are also being interviewed, the Times Herald reported.

Inquiries have also been made into the SMU track program, and the tennis and golf programs also will be investigated, the Times Herald reported.

Sunshine greets Wimbledon; Martina opens with victory

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - Martina Navratilova began her quest for a record sixth consecutive Wimbledon women's title in quick fashion today, taking just 32 minutes to defeat Claudia Porwik of West Germany 6-1, 6-0 on Center Court.

Also winning easily was Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia, the fourth seed, who defeated Jo Louis of Britain 6-1, 6-4.

Others playing first-round matches in the weather-plagued tournament included men's third seed Mats Wilander of Sweden and 10th seed Tim Mayotte of the United States.

On Tuesday, defending champion Boris Becker opened the tournament with a victory at his favorite spot.

The third day of the two-week-long grass-court Grand Slam tournament opened under the best weather conditions thus far. After 1½ days of rain, brighter skies and even some sunshine and blue skies were the order.

Navratilova, ranked No. 1 but struggling without a tournament victory this year, never had any trouble against Porwik.

All of the American left-hander's shots were working, and she allowed her 18-year-old West German opponent just 13 points in the last 11 games.

Becker has called Center Court at Wimbledon his tennis birthplace, since it was there that he made his mark by becoming the youngest men's champion of the tournament two years ago at the age of 17.

As he stepped out onto the grass Tuesday, the West German glanced around, smiled faintly, then took less than two hours to successfully start his title defense.

"I was probably one of the few players who did not really care about the weather," the top-seeded Becker said after his 6-4, 6-2, 6-4 first-round victory over Karel Novacek of Czechoslovakia, the opening match of the tournament.

Under gloomy skies, Stefan Edberg of Sweden made sure he got into the second round fast, posting a 6-0, 6-0, 6-0 rout of countryman Stefan Eriksson in one hour.

Edberg became only the third player in Wimbledon's history known to have scored a triple-love success at the grass-court Grand Slam event.

The world's top-ranked player, Ivan Lendl, also beat the rain but struggled on his least-favorite surface, losing a set against Christian Saceanu, a qualifier, before prevailing 6-2, 3-6, 6-3, 7-5.

AMA adopts rules calling for AIDS tests for inmates

CHICAGO (AP) — Doctors hailed the American Medical Association's endorsement of mandatory AIDS testing of immigrants and prison inmates, but one AIDS-clinic physician said the policy should focus on prevention and care.

Policymakers for the 271,000-member AMA, the nation's largest organization of doctors, debated less than a half-hour Tuesday before adopting, virtually unchanged, 17 recommendations their trustees made Saturday.

"I did not hear a single dissenting voice," Dr. Robert E. McAfee, a trustee, said after the voice vote. "That says this is a very solid, broadly based, widely supported document."

Under the policy endorsed by the 406-member House of Delegates during the AMA's annual meeting, tests would be mandatory for inmates and immigrants but not marriage license applicants or all people entering a hospital. Blood and organ donors and military personnel already are tested for the AIDS virus.

The AMA also recommended elementary school pupils be taught how to prevent transmission of the deadly disease.

The recommendations on testing appeared to mirror those of President Reagan, who has called for mandatory testing of all immigrants and federal inmates but who apparently would make tests at the state level voluntary.

In a related development, Veterans Administration physicians sent Reagan a confidential memo opposing an administration suggestion to give AIDS tests to all patients admitted to veterans hospitals, The New York Times reported today.

The AMA recommendations now become the basis for AMA education and lobbying efforts on acquired immune deficiency syndrome, which has struck more than 35,000 people in the United States and killed more than 20,000.

Dr. Ron Sable of Cook County Hospital's AIDS clinic in Chicago said the AMA policy was hastily developed.

"The focus on testing as the key to AIDS control diverts attention from the real needs of AIDS prevention and the care of AIDS patients," Sable said. "I was also sorry that there was a failure to discuss in any way the responsibilities of medical personnel to care for people with AIDS."

Dr. Marian Craighill, an alternate AMA delegate from Boston, said she was glad there was no call for AIDS testing of marriage license applicants.

"The marriage license idea makes absolutely no sense epidemiologically," she said. "The vast majority of people applying for marriage licenses these days already have been cohabitating, and the population segments most exposed to intravenous drug abuse and other AIDS hazards are the least likely to seek marriage in the first place."

The AMA paper called for education of elementary and young adults on how AIDS is spread — usually through sex or sharing of contaminated hypodermic needles — and how it can be prevented.

Dr. Alan R. Nelson, chairman of the AMA board of trustees, said doctors can help school boards incorporate such material into curriculums.

for moisture with above average rainfall during 1986 and to date for 1987.

"What we don't need right now is any wind or rain," said Hefner. "Then, it would be nice to have a little shower in July."

The estimate of 60,000 planted acres closely mirrors the amount placed under cultivation last summer. Early fall rains and cool weather cutback that crop dramatically, however, ending with approximately 5,000 bales produced.

Some county cotton is now moving into the "square" stage, and County Entomologist Deanna Myers said it is particularly important for farmers to begin scouting this cotton for boll weevils.

The late planted cotton will benefit somewhat, she noted, since this past week was the time period when the heaviest emergence of "overwintered" boll weevils traditionally occurs.

Hefner reminded county farmers that July 15 is the last date to certify cotton and grain sorghum acreage.

During the season, scout reports regarding the boll weevils will be posted at four county locations.

These include the Farmer's Co-Op Gin, Richard's Chevron in Hermleigh, the Chevron gas station in Ira and at the Paymaster Gin.

DM's son freed; no word on Glass

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Kidnappers today released the son of Lebanon's defense minister but held on to U.S. journalist Charles Glass, who was seized with him a week ago, police and relatives said.

Ali Osseiran, 40, and his driver, Suleiman Salman, who had also been taken hostage, arrived at the Osseirans' home in the coastal town of Rmeileh south of Beirut this morning, said Afaf Osseiran Saidi, the freed man's sister.

The Christian-controlled Voice of Lebanon radio station said the two men arrived in Rmeileh today in Osseiran's white Volvo. The three men had been traveling in the Volvo last Wednesday in southern Beirut when 14 kidnappers stopped the car and seized them.

A police spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity, confirmed Osseiran and Salman had been freed and said there was no word on Glass.

Asked about her brother, Mrs. Osseiran Saidi told The Associated Press: "He's swimming at Rmeileh now."

"He doesn't want to see anyone except members of the family for the time being," she said.

The police spokesman said, "It appears Mr. Glass has joined the list of foreign hostages in Lebanon despite Syria's pressure to free him."

"The release of Osseiran and his driver, minus Glass, appears to be a compromise sought by the kidnappers to ease Syrian pressure. But it remains to be seen whether the Syrians will settle for it," he said.

Most of the 25 foreigners missing in Lebanon are believed held in Beirut's Shiite slums.

2 arrests noted

Police logged two misdemeanor arrests Tuesday evening.

One local man was jailed for driving while intoxicated and another was arrested for public intoxication.

German Cabinet rejects request

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The West German Cabinet today rejected a U.S. request to extradite Mohammed Ali Hamadi and decided to try the Lebanese hijacking suspect in West Germany instead, a government source said.

Government sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the plan was presented to the Cabinet this morning by Justice Minister Hans Engelhard and supported by Chancellor Helmut Kohl. An official announcement of the decision was expected later today.

The United States was to be informed of the decision in a formal diplomatic note, one source said. A spokesman at the U.S. Embassy in Bonn could not be reached for comment.

"No one in the cabinet opposed this plan," the Bonn government source told The Associated Press.

The source said Hamadi will be put on trial on charges of murder and air piracy as well as possession of dangerous explosives.

U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese III, during a one-day visit to Bonn Tuesday, told West German officials that Washington would accept the decision not to extradite Hamadi, the sources told the AP.

Hamadi, a 23-year-old Shiite Moslem, is wanted in the United States on charges of air piracy and murder in connection with the June 1985 hijacking of a TWA airliner to Beirut.

Hamadi is accused of being one of four hijackers who killed U.S. Navy diver Robert Stethem of Waldorf, Md., and held 39 Americans prisoner for 17 days.

The government sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Meese had sought assurances that Hamadi would be tried for murder and air piracy in West Germany.

Meese was apparently concerned West Germany would try Hamadi on lesser charges out of fear for the safety of two German hostages held in Beirut, according to the sources.

Hamadi was arrested at the Frankfurt airport on Jan. 13.

North tried to cover up gift of security system for home

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former White House aide Oliver L. North created bogus documents to cover up the potentially illegal gift of a $14,000 security system for his home, a former CIA employee says.

North's effort, complete with the apparent defacing of typewriter keys to make the documents appear authentic, came just days after the cover was blown on the Iran-Contra affair last November, with the documents backdated by as much as six months.

Glenn Robinette, the former CIA employee, testified Tuesday that North's effort was intended to make it appear that North, rather than retired Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord, was paying for the system.

In fact, Secord took at least part of the money for the system from proceeds from the Iran arms sales, which he managed on North's behalf.

In other developments:

—The House and Senate committees planned further discussions on ground rules for North's testimony in early July. North's lawyers have been placing conditions on his appearance, and the panels were trying to pin down final details of a letter outlining the "understandings" governing the length and scope of his testimony and other factors.

—A check by another congressional investigating panel turned up names of several Contras and Contra supporters among those known to be violators or suspected of violating U.S. customs laws. The list was submitted to Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., chairman of the House narcotics committee.

Tuesday's testimony, together with the revelation that Secord's legal defense fund recently and mysteriously had received half a million dollars from a Swiss bank account, further clouded the motives of the affair's top operatives.

While both North and Secord have been described in earlier testimony as motivated by patriotism, a growing body of evidence suggests that personal profit figured prominently in their actions.

Robinette testified that Secord approached him in April 1986 to set up a home security system for North, whose family had been plagued by harassment and who believed he may have been a target for terrorists. The system cost about $13,900, which was paid by Secord. One $9,000 check to Robinette came from Udall Corp., an account used by Secord in Iran-Contra dealings.

North never inquired about payment for the system until early December of last year, about a week after the Iran-Contra scandal had been made public, when he called Robinette and asked to be sent a bill. Robinette sent two backdated bills, and soon afterward received two letters from North, also backdated and designed to look like responses to the bills.

A documents expert retained by the committees verified North's signature on the letters and said defects in the type on the later letter appeared to be caused by an intentional filing down of typewriter characters, in what apparently was an attempt to give the impression that the letters were typed at different times.

When Robinette later told Secord about having sent the phony bills, Secord responded, "You did the right thing," Robinette testified.

In later testimony, Noel Koch, a former Pentagon official who had started a legal defense fund for Secord, said he resigned as trustee of the fund last week after being unable to trace $500,000 that flowed into the account over the past six weeks from Credit Suisse, the same Swiss bank used by Secord in the Iran-Contra dealings.

While Koch said he did not know the precise origin of the money, he added: "Money from that particular source ... had a peculiar odor to it."

Ship may be sent to Persian Gulf

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy is seriously considering sending the battleship Missouri to the Persian Gulf to back up President Reagan's pledge to protect Kuwaiti tankers, Sen. John Glenn says.

The Ohio Democrat, a supporter of the proposal, said Tuesday that "if there was ever a situation in which the battleship would be useful, it's defending our interests in the Persian Gulf."

The Navy has refused to say publicly what ships it would send to the gulf, beyond telling Congress that three more warships would be added to the five-ship Mideast Task Force now in the gulf.

The Pentagon told Congress last week that it was considering using one of the three World War II-era battleships which have been recalled from mothballs and overhauled, but it did not name the vessel.

The Missouri and the New Jersey are based at Long Beach, Calif., while the Iowa is berthed at Norfolk, Va. A fourth battleship, the Wisconsin, is in drydock.

Bentsen releases new report on oil

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new study of oil consumption and demand in the United States predicts a dwindling amount of oil from non-OPEC countries through the turn of the century.

The six-page Congressional Research Service study was released Tuesday by U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

U.S. oil production is projected to decline by between 25 percent and 50 percent and imports from many non-OPEC countries are also on the wane, according to the study, which used past U.S. production rates as a basis for its conclusions.

The United Kingdom will see a 50 percent drop in oil production by 2000 and Canada will trail off by at least 10 percent, according to the report.

Mexico, also a major source of U.S. imports, is projected to double its production by the turn of the century, as is Norway, but at considerably greater cost than in the past, the survey states.

"The upshot of these facts and figures is that new U.S. imports of oil must come largely from OPEC members in the Persian Gulf and North Africa," Bentsen said in a letter to his Senate colleagues.

The CRS study predicts that consequently, OPEC countries will be pumping up to three times as much oil into the United States in 2000 than in 1986.

"In 1986, .745 barrels per day of crude oil was imported from Persian Gulf countries (82 percent from Saudi Arabia) and this constituted about 18 percent of total U.S. crude oil imports," according to the study.

Even if all additional production were realized in non-OPEC countries and all of that sent to the United States, the study estimates an additional 2.18 million barrels per day will be needed in 13 years.

"The CRS study draws the conclusion that even in the unlikely event that the United States is able to purchase the entire export volume of Mexico, Venezuela, Ecuador, Indonesia and Nigeria in 1995, we will still have to more than triple imports of Persian Gulf oil to three million barrels a day," Bentsen wrote.

"We need an energy policy consisting of more than OPEC-dominated markets and a return to gunboat diplomacy. The first step toward a better energy policy is retention of the energy security provision in the trade bill," he said.

Bentsen, who chairs the Finance Committee, faces an uphill fight on that measure. Many eastern and midwestern senators are strongly opposed to the energy security provision, which would require the president to act if projections of oil imports top 50 percent.

Bloodshot eyes need checking

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am male, 21, and have bloodshot eyes and a red face much of the time. I can feel blood rushing to my head, especially when I am embarrassed. Can anything be done to prevent this?

DEAR READER — You seem to be describing two conditions.

Bloodshot eyes and a red face may be due to air pollution, allergies or to the use of drugs, especially alcohol and marijuana. In addition, some people inherit a tendency to plethora, increased blood supply to the facial tissues. Finally, certain diseases, such as polycythemia (an overabundance of red blood cells) can produce red eyes and face. You should see a doctor to make sure that you do not have a treatable disease underlying your symptoms.

The second problem, flushing when you are embarrassed, is a common reaction. The degree of blushing is built into your genes. Nonetheless, you might be helped by learning ways to reduce anxiety. Stress-management clinics or counseling could aid you in overcoming this unwanted reaction.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My son, 42, has the type of hearing loss that is not helped by a hearing aid. How can I find a support group for him?

DEAR READER — Some forms of nerve damage produce hearing loss that is not helped by hearing aids. If your son has been thoroughly checked by an ear specialist (otolaryngologist), I suggest that you contact the National Health Information Clearinghouse (800-336-4797) and ask for information about support resources.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I had a vasectomy five years ago. I sit a lot (driving and talking to customers) in my job. Sometimes I will get a buildup of semen that works its way out and stains my pants. This is very embarrassing. Is this normal after a vasectomy?

DEAR READER — No, it isn't. A vasectomy interrupts the flow of sperm from the testicles. It does not affect the prostate, a gland that produces the major portion of the seminal fluid. That is why vasectomy does not interfere with normal sexual functioning and is a splendid method of birth control for couples who are not interested in having more children.

In your case, the prolonged sitting while driving may be stimulating your prostate gland to secrete fluid at inappropriate times. See a urologist to make sure everything is working properly.

For a more complete discussion of the prostate gland, I'm sending you a free copy of my Health Report on THE PROSTATE GLAND. Other readers who want a copy should send $1 with their name and address to P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to mention the title.

Jurors deciding AIDS case

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Jurors are trying to determine whether the mouth of a federal convict who tested positive for the AIDS virus and allegedly bit two prison guards is a deadly weapon.

The case of James V. Moore, 44, charged with assault with a deadly and dangerous weapon, went to a jury in U.S. District Court Tuesday.

AF drug abuse declines faster

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Drug abuse in the Air Force has declined dramatically, much faster than civilian drug abuse, authorities say.

Figures show a six-fold drop in marijuana use and only slight cocaine use in the Air Force, officials said.

Cocaine use has declined some among the general public and marijuana use has fallen substantially, but not as much as they have in the Air Force.

The Air Force Drug Testing Laboratory at Brooks Air Force Base, which checks the urine of all U.S. Air Force personnel, released figures this month showing that in 1986, 2.2 percent of urine samples showed exposure to marijuana.

Three years ago, that figure was 12.3 percent.

Similar figures for other drugs were not available, but officials said marijuana findings indicate that drug use among Air Force personnel is declining.

Cocaine for the past nine months has been present in one-half of 1 percent of urine samples. Comparative figures from other time periods were not available, the San Antonio Light reported Tuesday.

To keep Air Force drug abuse down, new procedures have been implemented that cut in half the time it takes to verify cocaine in urine. Officials said the new techniques could also eliminate delays in discipline.

"This is an important development in the Air Force's effort to help combat drug abuse," Col. Brian Lyttle said.

Lyttle is the vice commander of Brooks' drug testing laboratory, which evaluates 250,000 urine samples a year for signs of marijuana or cocaine. Ten percent also are checked for amphetamines and barbiturates.

University to divest from companies

HOUSTON (AP) — The University of Houston board of regents' decision to totally divest from companies doing business in South Africa makes the school the first Southern university to do so, one regent said.

A resolution approved unanimously by the board will liquidate UH's $6.4 million initial investment in companies doing business in South Africa over a two-year period and prohibit investing school funds in companies operating there.

"We are the first in the South and probably the Southwest to do this," Regent Xavier Lemond said of Tuesday's vote. "We've been working on this for quite a while. The first step toward complete divestment was our endorsement of the Sullivan Principles in 1985.

"When you look at what our investment managers have been doing, the (university's) portfolio shows we've been gradually moving away from companies in South Africa.

"The resolution specifically says our money managers or university officers will not invest university funds in companies that do business in South Africa," Lemond said.

Linda Bright, UH treasurer, said $6.4 million of the school's $42 million endowment is invested in 19 companies doing business in South Africa.

The companies include American Cyanamid, Cigna, Chevron, Bell & Howell, Du Pont, Eli Lilly, Ford, Gillette, Goodyear, Kellogg, Kraft, 3M, Mobil, Pfizer, RJR Nabisco, Royal Dutch, SmithKline Beckman, Sterling Drug and Warner Lambert.
