Iranian Threatens Hostages' Reprisal

Official Ired By Diplomats' Escape

By The Associated Press

IRAN'S foreign minister, angered by the daring Canadian rescue of six Americans trapped in Tehran, declared Wednesday he expects the U.S. Embassy hostages to suffer for Canada's "duplicity."

The estimated 50 hostages "most probably" will now be treated more harshly, Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said, and the responsibility will be Canada's.

Ghotbzadeh, at a Tehran news conference, denounced the secret Canadian operation as a "flagrant violation" of international law and warned that retribution would be exacted from the Canadians sooner or later.

Reprisal "Irrational"

But the Moslem militants who have held the embassy and hostages for 88 days refrained from endorsing Ghotbzadeh's threat of tougher conditions for their captives. Spokesmen said a formal statement might be issued later, but some reports quoted militants as saying they would not treat the hostages any differently. A State Department spokesman said Tuesday such a reprisal would be "irrational."

The escaped American diplomats, who reportedly had gone to West Germany from Iran, returned to the United States on Wednesday at Dover Air Force Base, Del. They were to spend the night there, see their families today at the base, then travel to Washington for a Friday news conference.

Release Deal Sought

In Washington, administration sources said the United States was still trying to work out a deal for the release of the remaining hostages and was hoping to do so without further economic sanctions.

Spokesman Hodding Carter refused to rule out the prospect that the hostages might be released to a third party, such as the Red Cross, pending the deliberations of a United Nations tribunal on the reign of the former shah.

Iran's domestic political troubles flared into new violence, meanwhile. Bloody fighting was reported in Kurdistan and "clashes" — not further described — were reported at Tehran University.

10 Reported Killed

Reports reaching Tehran said at least 10 persons were killed and 20 others injured Wednesday in fighting between the central regime's revolutionary guards and Kurdish militants in western Iran.

The official Iranian news agency said two army officers held hostage since Monday by unidentified insurgents in the Kurdish town of Salmas were killed.

Since the victory of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolution a year ago, militants in Kurdistan have battled repeatedly with security forces in an effort to win greater autonomy for their region.

Tehran Radio, in a broadcast monitored in London, reported "clashes" Wednesday afternoon at Tehran University, and it quoted revolutionary authorities as saying such violence had been occurring in the city for some time "leading to disorders and disturbances."

Groups Unspecified

It did not say what groups were fighting, but in the past Marxist and anti-Marxist students have occasionally fought each other in Tehran's streets.

The Kurdistan violence and other developments in Tehran Wednesday were reliably reported by Western journalists in the Iranian capital.

In another development, Agriculture Minister Abbas Sheibani ordered the rationing of fresh meat, citing high prices, short supplies and a ban on imports of frozen meat. Every Iranian family will be allowed to buy up to 8.8 pounds of meat a week, the reports said. Tehran Radio reported the allotment in southern Tehran would be 4.4 pounds per family each week.

The escape of the six American diplomats, disclosed Tuesday morning in the West, was not reported to the general public in Tehran until midday Wednesday, when newspapers gave it front page treatment.

The half dozen Americans had avoided capture when the U.S. Embassy was seized Nov. 4 by the militants, who still demand return of the deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi in exchange for their prisoners' freedom.

The six stayed at Canadian diplomatic residences until they were spirited out of the country late last week or early this week under cover of false Canadian passports and forged visas. The Canadians closed down their embassy Monday and withdrew Ambassador Ken Taylor and his three remaining staff members.

Taylor, the man who masterminded the escape operation, was spotted on a Paris street Wednesday by a Canadian television crew and was asked whether he was satisfied with the way the plan worked.

"I think the conclusion speaks for itself," he replied.

Ghotbzadeh denounced the escape plot as an "act of espionage" and violation of international law that "justifies" the hostage-holding at the embassy because it supports what the militants have contended all along — that international law is a device used by the big powers to

U.S. Cheers Canada For Escape Of Six

By The Associated Press

AMERICANS cheered their northern neighbor Wednesday, emblazoning the border with signs proclaiming "Thank You Canada," and jamming Canadian consulate switchboards with hundreds of calls praising the nation's role in the daring escape of six Americans from Iran.

Teachers called Canadian officials to ask how their pupils could write letters of gratitude to Prime Minister Joe Clark, and across the United States, many were cheered by the apparent chink in the tough Iranian front.

In Washington, workers at an office building across from the Canadian Embassy pasted hand-made letters on their windows. With a maple leaf between them — Canada's national symbol — the letters spelled out the message: "THANKS CANADA."

On the official level, State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said the U.S. government expressed "deep appreciation" to Canada. And Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., introduced a resolution expressing the nation's gratitude to Canada for a "brave act in the highest tradition of friendship and cooperation."

Militant Iranians have held Americans hostage in Tehran since Nov. 4, when they stormed the U.S. Embassy. The six Americans who posed as Canadians to leave Iran eluded the takeover, going into hiding with Canadian diplomatic help. After months of preparation, the six left Iran with Canadian diplomats, posing as Canadians.

"Our hands have been united," one Canadian told a caller from Oklahoma during a radio hookup Wednesday between KTOK in Oklahoma City and CHML in Hamilton, Ontario.

"This is the expression and meaning of freedom," said an American caller in the international talk show. "I have great pride in my country," responded a Canadian.

In the Detroit area, billboards owned by General Tire Co. flashed "THANK YOU CANADA" on Wednesday, blinking the message near the Canadian border across the Detroit River.

And Eller Outdoor Advertising of Detroit prepared its own message — a 14 by 48 foot sign to be erected near the Ambassador Bridge linking Detroit and Windsor, Ontario — proclaiming "Thank you Canada" and decorated with a maple leaf and the U.S. flag.

Telephone calls to Canadian consulates began soon after news of the daring escape broke on Tuesday.

More than 700 calls and telegrams poured into the Canadian Embassy in Washington. One telegram, sent from Philadelphia by "a grateful U.S. citizen," said: "Thank you Canada for being there when we needed a friend." Another from California declared: "Thank you Canada for the wonderful job you did."

In New York, Vice Consul Paul Frazer said of the callers, "They said things like 'three cheers for Canada' and 'we wanted to let you know we were very happy and very pleased.'"

Other callers to the consulate in New York "mentioned that it would change

Another Cold, Icy Day In Prospect For Area

By RAYNIE HARDESTY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

BITTERLY cold temperatures and a slight chance for rain is expected to plague South Plains residents today as they continue to dig out from beneath a coating of ice that has triggered numerous power outages and traffic accidents across the area.

Although temperatures are not expected to rise out of the 30s this afternoon, and a slight chance for drizzle or rain remains in the forecast through Friday, National Weather Service officials are not expecting ice to build up again on area streets and power lines.

Even though the three-day accumulation of snow and ice began melting Wednesday, falling ice resulted in power outages affecting customers of South Plains Electric Co-op, General Telephone Company and Polka Lambro Telephone Co.

Ice accumulations on power lines and poles serviced by South Plains Electric Co-op caused wires, poles and cross arms to break "throughout the entire system," leaving about 3,000 customers in Lubbock, Hale, Hockley and Crosby counties without power throughout Tuesday night and most of Wednesday, said Bob Pierce, operations manager.

Pierce said ice buildup also affected other customers earlier in the week for shorter periods of time, before Monday's problems began.

"This is the first time in a long time, it's (damage) been extensive enough to cover our entire system," he said.

Pierce said that when ice began melting off of some lines before others, the lines "began flopping together" and breaking. Cross arms and poles also were reported broken by the heavy icy loads.

Some Without Electricity

Pierce, however, reported that power gradually was being restored throughout the company's system.

Falling ice in O'Donnell left four communities served by General Telephone Co. and Polka Lambro Telephone Co. without phone service for much of Wednesday, after melting ice plunged from a microwave tower and crashed through the roof of a building housing the operation's radio, said George Spivey, service manager for GTE.

Spivey said the incident, which occurred about 11:50 a.m. Wednesday, left customers in Lamesa, Punkin Center, Patricia and Hatch without long distance telephone service throughout the day.

"I hope to get it repaired before midnight," he said.

Lubbock's salt trucks, which have been treating the city's streets since Monday to speed the thawing of treacherous ice, were pulled off major roads at 6 p.m. Monday, although a city spokesman added, "If anything happens, then they'll be called back out."

To Patch Potholes

Street workers will continue today, however, to temporarily patch the potholes that have appeared in city streets since the latest freeze.

"Quite a few chugholes have shown up, but so far it's not extremely bad," said Don Jennings, city street superintendent.

The superintendent said the potholes would be filled with the temporary material until the weather gets warmer, but said he would welcome calls from the public about locations of potholes.

He added, however, that "it may take a little while" for city crews to repair the holes.

Even though a travelers advisory has not been issued for the South Plains region, a Lubbock National Weather Service spokesman warned late Wednesday that "patches of ice" may still exist on roadways because of below freezing temperatures and moisture already existing on surfaces from an ice storm that passed though Lubbock earlier this week.

Another front that moved into the Hub City on Wednesday was not expect-

School Suit Dismissed By Judge

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A 1978 AT-large election suit against Lubbock public schools has been dismissed from federal court, and plaintiffs say they will wait to find out the results of a similar action against the city before deciding whether to pursue their suit.

The suit was dismissed before it got to trial by federal judge Halbert O. Woodward upon the agreement of both parties in the case.

Another Suit Possible

The case also was dismissed "without prejudice," allowing another suit to be brought at a later time, noted Steve McIntyre of West Texas Legal Services, the firm representing the plaintiffs.

The suit was brought against the Lubbock Independent School District by a number of minorities in the city in an effort to establish a single-member district system.

The suit claimed that the school board's current citywide election system dilutes the voting strength of minorities.

Await Court Decision

William Garrett, of the Dallas office of West Texas Legal Services office, said the plaintiffs decided to wait on the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals decision on the city's at-large election suit before pursuing the case any farther.

Woodward ruled in June that the City Council's at-large system does not discriminate against black and Mexican-Americans, as alleged by plaintiffs. The decision was appealed to the Fifth Circuit in October, with Garrett designated as lead counsel in the appeal.

"The issues in the school and city case are very similar," Garrett said. "It would be pointless to go ahead with the school case until the city case had been resolved."

However, the city suit may not be settled for a some time. A spokesman in the appeals court clerk's office said Wednesday that cases are not put on the trial calendar until about a year and a half after it is filed. The city filed its appeal this past November.

Garrett said that a trial date had been

Women Urge Inclusion In Draft Signup

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women from politically diverse organizations advised the White House on Wednesday to include women in President Carter's draft registration program.

The women made their views known to Stuart Eizenstat, the president's domestic policy adviser, at a White House briefing.

The president announced the resumption of military draft registration in his State of the Union address a week ago, citing an increasing threat from the Soviet Union. However, he has not yet decided whether to include women, and aides have said a decision is likely by Feb. 9.

The women also met with Carter, but the subject of draft registration did not arise, according to Sarah Weddington, presidential adviser on women's affairs. The main topic of that session was the Equal Rights Amendment.

Mary Grefe, president of the American Association of University Women, told reporters later that the consensus of the group was to register women.

"Several organizations said they had no official position, but that in the interest of equality they felt women should be registered," she said.

"We did urge him to make his decision as quickly as possibly so that it

School Board Filing Voided By State Law

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THIS WEEK, Med Hunt got the jump on school board candidates when he became the first to file for a place on the board.

Next week he'll have the chance to do it again.

Hunt, as the sole candidate to file for a place on the school board, will have to refile after Feb. 4 because the school district permitted filings too early.

Juan Duran, a staff attorney with the Secretary of State's Office, said Wednesday that candidates in any type election on April 5 cannot file until Feb. 4.

However, the school district began accepting filings on Jan. 24, the day the school board officially called the April election.

"The law specifically states any applications filed prior to Feb. 4 are void," Duran said.

Prior to this year, filings could begin almost any time. But a new law approved by the legislature last year permits only a 30-day filing period, Duran said.

The new article added to the Election Code in September reads, "An application to have the name of a candidate placed on the ballot for any election may not be filed earlier than 30 days before the deadline prescribed by this code for filing the application."

The filing deadline for April elections is March 5, so filings cannot begin until Feb. 4.

Ronnie Gooch, school district assistant superintendent for business affairs, said school officials apparently were unaware of the recently enacted law, but would correct the oversight immediately.

Fatal Halloween Events Related

PLAINVIEW — Louise Stone, an avowed witch and the wife of murder defendant Loy Stone, took the stand Wednesday and told the court she and her husband had been harassed by area teen-agers "yelling and honking three and four cars at a time" for "what seemed like every night" in the weeks before Halloween 1977.

The Stones are accused of fatally shooting 15-year-old Roxanne Casas, who died Halloween night after being struck in the head by a shotgun blast as she rode in a pickup near the couple's rural Castro County residence. Mrs. Stone will be tried later.

During her five hours on the stand, Mrs. Stone described her actions the night of the shooting and told of a series of "nerve-wracking and very frightening" incidents of harassment ranging from vandalism to threats of arson and death.

"The main thing was the fear of being burned out," she said, testifying that on no less than three occasions her family was threatened with fire. "We were always hosing down the grass and the buildings on the property," she said.

"Once, some people outside the house said something about 'I bet it would be easy to set this house on fire,' and another time we heard someone say 'If we light a fire I'll bet they come out,'" she said, adding that she also had received an anonymous phone call threatening to "burn them or hang them."

In the weeks and months before Halloween, the Stones' property had been vandalized, the front door to her mother-in-law's home across the driveway had been blasted by a shotgun at close range, and cars and pickups repeatedly had driven near and on their property, with the occupants yelling and honking from early evening sometimes into the small hours of the morning, she said.

Under questioning by defense attorney Travis Shelton, Mrs. Stone testified she had carried a shotgun outside to join her husband about 7:15 p.m. that Halloween night and "watched five or ten minutes" while several youths in cars and pickups "were really shouting a lot. I handed Loy the gun and said I'd go call the sheriff again."

"Tell the jury your first knowledge that someone was in your driveway," Shelton said.

"We saw some lights pull in. I could barely discern it was a pickup. I didn't know what they were going to do and I didn't want to be seen, so I stayed out of sight," she said. "I came out a little and said, 'What do you want?' and there was no answer. So I said, 'Who are you?' and there was still no answer."

"What happened next?" Shelton

Wood Stove Accident Kills Couple, Children

CYPRESS, Ill. (UPI) — A fire blamed on a malfunctioning wood-burning stove killed a couple and their three children Wednesday and burned their 75-year-old home to the ground.

Six people escaped the flames, which spread from the two-story, frame home of the Tom Dennis family to a second house and destroyed it before firemen could control the blaze.

Johnson County Coroner Everett Whitnel listed the probable cause of the blaze as a malfunctioning wood-burning stove. Whitnel said it was not known whether the stove was old or new. The state fire marshal's office was investigating the blaze.

"You couldn't tell much," Whitnel said of the fire scene. "All that was left was debris and rubble about three feet deep."

Cypress Mayor Leo Neeley said someone who visited the Dennis home Tuesday night said two wood stoves in the home were "red hot."

"It was an old house — built around 1900 — with old flues," said Neeley. "Some people just don't realize the condition of some of these old flues. They get holes in them when the mortar falls out."

The alarm was sounded during a blinding snowstorm and firemen reported flames were shooting from the upstairs windows of the home when they arrived at the home across from the Town Hall in the Southern Illinois village of 250 residents. Water was hauled to the scene in tank trucks.

Flames spread to and destroyed an adjoining home but the occupants, Nadine McCormick and her daughter, Carol, escaped without injury.

The dead were identified as Dennis, 58; his wife, Annie, 48; son, Ed, 29; another son, Roger, 15; and a daughter, Barbara, 11.

Barbara's twin, Bonnie, was the only person to escpe from the second floor of the house. She told authorities she thought Barbara was right behind her as she came down the stairs.

Impatient Judge Questions Witness

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Lubbock public schools desegregation hearing Wednesday was marked by frequent questioning of government attorneys by federal Judge Halbert O. Woodward, who at one point took over the examination of a witness.

In the third day of the hearing, Woodward several times asked U.S. Justice Department attorney Robert Rodrigues for clarification of questions put to a government expert witness and noted that several inquiries already had been asked by the attorney.

Apparently trying to speed up the lengthy examination of the witness, Woodward even stopped school attorney Tom Johnson once to ask how much longer his questions would take. "I'm not getting much out of this testimony," Woodward said of remarks by sociologist Dr. George Henderson, who attested to the effects of discriminatory school board acts on housing patterns.

Apparently dissatisfied with the direction of testimony and questioning, Woodward took several minutes toward the end of the morning to ask Henderson specific questions about one particular school pertinent to the desegregation case.

Henderson's findings concerning the relationship between board acts and housing patterns were questioned earlier by Johnson, who claimed that Henderson had little specific knowledge of Lubbock.

Henderson testified to conclusions he made based on a number of studies that Johnson contended were not conducted based on information in the Lubbock case, but were of a general nature.

The trial was concluded for the day shortly after noon, and attorneys planned to spend the afternoon taking the deposition of government witness Harry Stokely in preparation for his testimony today.

During the morning's proceedings, Henderson, who has testified as an expert in several desegregation suits, said discriminatory school board acts do affect housing patterns. Areas near illegally segregated minority schools "cease to be attractive to potential white homeowners," he said.

His testimony presented a departure from the line of economic experts that had taken the stand in the past two days.

Henderson, chairman of the department of human relations at the University of Oklahoma in Norman, said that whites tend to "leap-frog over" areas that become predominantly minority through illegally segregation, and they move a greater distance out in the community.

Under examination by Rodrigues, Henderson also addressed a specific question posed by the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals upon remand of this case.

The appeals court told Woodward to determine whether the location of minority schools not included in his 1978 integration order near illegally segregated minority schools contributed to the present alleged segregated condition of those schools.

Henderson noted that "the closer a neighborhood school to a predominantly minority school, the more the community residents (Anglos) will consider moving."

Henderson, examined at length by Rodrigues, also disputed testimony by the school district's expert witnesses, who stated that schools are not important in housing decisions.

He cited a Harris poll, commissioned by the Department of Housing and Urban Development, showing that 50 percent of the respondents rated schools as an important variable in their buying decisions.

He continued that the reputation of schools affects decisions of home locations, saying that, "Once schools are identified as minority, they also tend to be identified as being inferior."

Henderson said that the residual effects of segregative acts by the school board "can last for many generations."

INDIAN MISSION SET

NEW DELHI, India (AP) -U.S. presidential envoy Clark Clifford on Wednesday began a mission aimed at calming India's worries over the U.S. weapons promised to Pakistan and to learn what India plans to do about the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan. American officials say Clifford, a former secretary of defense, has come both to explain the U.S. position and to listen to Indian opinion. Some predict he will end up as confused as many New Delhi diplomats and residents about the Indian government's waffling over the crisis.

Story Of Fugitives Withheld For Weeks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fearing that it was a matter of life or death, a number of Washington reporters withheld for many weeks the story that six American fugitives were being sheltered in the Canadian Embassy in Tehran.

Jean Pelletier, the Canadian reporter who broke the story on Tuesday, knew about the Americans' plight since Dec. 10. His secret also was known by several American newsmen.

Pelletier decided to release the story after receiving word on Monday that the Americans had left Iran. During the preceding seven weeks, he agreed to sit on the story at the personal urging of Canadian Ambassador Peter Towe and officials of the External Affairs Ministry in Ottawa.

"They said it would be extremely hazardous, a matter of life or death for the Canadians and the Americans, if we published," said Pelletier, a reporter for the Montreal newspaper La Presse.

The six Americans escaped Iran over the weekend using Canadian passports with forged Iranian visas.

Pelletier said he discovered the existence of the six Americans by comparing lists of U.S. diplomats' names before and after the Iranian militants seized the American embassy on Nov. 4. He said he realized that several were unaccounted for.

He also recalled a State Department briefing in which a spokesman mentioned that diplomats are told to head for friendly embassies if the American embassy is attacked. He checked with several Washington embassies of allied countries before finding a source at the Canadian embassy who confirmed his suspicions, he said.

Pelletier's story forced the State Department to disclose more than it had intended to about the Americans' escape from Iran.

Spokesman Hodding Carter said Wednesday the administration was prepared to announce the Americans' arrival in the United States but would not have mentioned Canada's role in harboring them.

One official said that based on his experience in a number of foreign capitals, it is "impossible to believe" that Iranian employees at the Canadian embassy did not report the presence of the Americans at the embassy. Among locally hired employees at foreign embassies, he said, there is usually at least one paid informant.

Perhaps the most critical period for the six Americans occurred a few days after the seizure of the embassy.

Beef Supplies Remain Below Recent Years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Beef supplies remain substantially below levels of recent years, according to the February food marketing alert from the Department of Agriculture.

Production will average 8 to 10 percent below last year's levels, officials said, and 17 percent below the average for February.

There was better news on the pork front, however, with supplies expected to be near record levels. Production is expected to be 18 to 20 percent ahead of last year.

And poultry is also expected to help fill in the beef gap.

The department said supplies of broilers and fryers are up 4 to 6 percent and there will be 35 to 40 percent more turkeys available than last year.

Egg supplies should be adequate with output about 1 percent above last year.

The department says supplies of milk and dairy products should be plentiful with production increasing seasonally. Stocks of butter and American cheese are well above year-earlier levels.

Fresh apples and winter pears are plentiful, as are fresh oranges and grapefruit, while there are adequate supplies of frozen, canned and chilled grapefruit juice and major canned non-citrus fruit. Supplies of canned and frozen cherries are light. Raisins are plentiful again.

Most processed vegetables are plentiful, particularly canned items such as snap beans, beets, sweet corn, green peas and tomatoes.

Wage-Price Chase On Again

WAGE/PRICE standards advanced by the administration seem to be drifting toward oblivion.

One possible outcome is that the standards program might quietly disappear from the scene without any official announcement of its demise.

That's what happened to the Kennedy-Johnson wage-price "guideposts" after the inflationary surge of 1966 revealed that economic absurdity for what it was.

Not a bad way of getting rid of a hopeless governmental program, really, but 1980 not only is a more inflationary but more political year than 1966.

"We may expect that political leaders will shortly be groping for some new form of wage-price policy to take the place of the standards program," writes economist George Hagedorn.

A LARGE PART of the public believes despite all the evidence of past experience that mandatory wage and price controls can be a solution to inflation.

Political candidates are aware of this attitude and are strongly tempted to take advantage of it. But they should not totally ignore the basic economic fact that wage and price controls do not work and therefore the sponsors of controls eventually will have a failure to explain away.

How long can a controls system, initiated some time in 1980, be expected to hold up as an apparent success in the public's eye. "The answer," says Hagedorn, vice president of the National Association of Manufacturers, "has to be 'not very long,' certainly not as long as the 15 months of apparent success enjoyed by the Nixon controls between Aug. 15, 1971 and election day, 1972."

Underlying inflationary forces are now much stronger and the present economic background is more like that of late 1973 when the Nixon controls became both an obvious economic failure and a political liability.

A DILEMMA for politicians lies in the fact that wage-price control has its maximum appeal when it is still a generalized proposal, without the details being filled in.

When the proposal is translated into a specific program, and the individual can see its impact on himself, then public support begins to erode.

The political risks of controls inhibited their serious consideration in 1979. But that dam might burst in 1980. If his political prospects become sufficiently desperate at some stage, Mr. Carter might even take the lead—again.

Legislative authority for his program will expire Sept. 30 and Congress must decide whether to let the issue lapse, renew it as is or replace it with a more coercive type of wage-price intervention.

Believers in the free market system know that controls, or cosmetic substitutes for controls, are not consistent with sound business practices. It remains to be seen if our lawmakers know that, too.

AN EDITORIAL:

Handy-Dandy Revenue Raiser

IN THE STRICTLY neutral world of plus-and minus economics, there appears to be merit in the proposal to adopt a national Value Added Tax. But VAT is not your typical sales tax. VAT, often compared to a national sales tax, is a nearly invisible tax.

That is why economists are given pause when they consider VAT as it is likely to emerge from Congress.

For example, Norman Ture, president of the Institute for Research on the Economics of Taxation, warns that federal lawmakers too easily could fall into the trap of using the VAT simply as a handy-dandy revenue raiser—politics being what they are, you know.

"The VAT would be highly productive," Ture says. "Potentially, therefore, the VAT poses a serious hazard as a governmental money machine which could lead to a sharp, upward expansion of federal spending."

THE PROPOSAL already has the support of the two Congressmen having the most to say about U.S. tax policy, Russell Long, D-La., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and Al Ullman, D-Ore., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Like most backers of the new tax, Long and Ullman speak of VAT in terms of a substitute for, not another layer of, taxes.

"Opposition to the VAT springs not from its theoretical promise, but from its political potential," McAllister said in a study released at a Capitol Hill briefing.

"The case for VAT is based on a comparison of the 'ideal' VAT with the existing tax structure. Proponents should recognize," said McAllister, "that the same forces which fashioned the allegedly inadequate current system will shape the legislated VAT."

VAT CRITICS acknowledge that it could increase domestic economic activity and boost U.S. exports. But they see a very real danger that it will be distorted by the political process into becoming a new federal money-raising mechanism.

According to conventional wisdom, a one percent VAT, for example, would raise anywhere from $10-$14 billion. The basic question then becomes quite simple:

Are the expected economic returns of sufficient value to warrant the risk of increased federal revenues, and hence, more spending?

Implicit within approval is a confidence that Congress will place a greater value on VAT's economic potential than its social uses.

Somewhat disconcerting is the fact that Congress did not always assign the highest priority to economic effects when it fashioned the existing system.

ART BUCHWALD:

Iowa Almost Derailed Kennedy Juggernaut

WASHINGTON—The role of the political pundit is to tell the reader what is going to happen before it happens, and then to explain what happened when it didn't.

I think it's time to explain what the Iowa caucus vote meant before all of us get too involved in New Hampshire.

Q—What did Iowa give George Bush, that he didn't have before?

A—Momentum.

Q—How did he get this momentum?

A—By beating the front-runner, Ronald Reagan.

Q—What was Bush before he ran in Iowa?

A—A virtual unknown.

Q—HOW DID it happen?

A—Reagan started out as the early favorite but his lead dropped dramatically when he failed to take Iowa voters seriously.

This was a strategic blunder of political magnitude because it propelled George Bush from obscurity into the position of leading challenger and what now looks like a two-horse race.

Q—What about the other Republican candidates?

A—They considered Iowa a "beauty contest" which had no national political significance.

Q—Did they always consider it that?

A—No. They only did after they fared so poorly with the independent-minded Midwesterners who turned out in record numbers to indicate their preferences through the straw ballot, which is very complicated and does not really decide anything.

Q—WHAT WILL the other candidates have to do now?

Q—Why?

A—In order to get back the momentum they lost to George Bush, who, up until Iowa, was an asterisk in the polls.

Q—Is this the end of Ronald Reagan?

A—No. But he has been politically wounded by his lack of grass-roots support in the heartland of America. He must now overthrow his complacency and lethargy in order to regain his momentum.

Q—What can we learn from President Carter's overwhelming and decisive victory in Iowa?

A—That Teddy Kennedy has a long way to go.

Q—WHAT WAS Teddy overwhelmed by?

A—Events at home and abroad.

Q—What did it put an end to?

A—The talk about the inevitable invincibility of the "Kennedy political juggernaut."

Q—What do you think Kennedy is doing now?

Q—What will Teddy have to do if he hopes to get back on the campaign trail?

A—Have an overwhelming victory in New Hampshire which is his own back yard.

Q—WAS IOWA a knockout blow for Kennedy?

A—No, but since it was the kickoff of the 1980 presidential campaign, and Teddy now has the ball on his own five-yard line, he has to figure out a way of hitting a home run in New Hampshire.

Q—What does he need to do it?

A—Momentum.

Overheard: "Well obviously no one can fool all the people. That's why all politicians need to get elected to office is a simple majority."

The man who is born with a silver spoon in his mouth seldom makes much of a stir with it.

GEORGE WILL:

Sakharov Speechless

WASHINGTON—When all is said and done—when the Kremlin has done its worst, and the West has said its piece—there is, perhaps, nothing worse to be said about the Soviet Union than this.

"It must be unique in history," writes Robert Conquest, "that so large a section of the creative minds of a country are in exile—that emigre literature now ranks far higher than that written at home."

Andrei Sakharov—physicist, dissident, winner of the Nobel Peace Prize—has been condemned to "internal exile" in the "closed" city of Gorky.

Closed cities are, among other things, repositories for open minds. Such cities are closed to foreigners. His banishment is cruel to him and to the dissidents he led.

"More than any regime in the past," Conquest says, "Communist rule in the USSR is based on the construction of a political machine capable of containing and outfacing the natural tendencies of its subjects."

There is such a thing—it is among the most important things—as "national character." The Soviet regime aims to alter the characters of the captive people at its mercy (building "the new socialist man," and all that).

After 62 years of pounding, it is hard to know what are the "natural tendencies" of the Kremlin's subjects. But some miracles of intelligence and individuality, such as Sakharov, survive and defy the pounding.

Such people are provoked to nobility by the institutionalization of ignorance that is the essence of the regime.

AS CONQUEST says, "A condition of sharp hostility has existed between the Soviet state and the best minds in the country from the start."

One reason is that the state always has been, and for the foreseeable future will be, in the hands of brutish people.

Furthermore, the state is not just deeply ignorant, it is officially, systematically, rigorously, aggressively, ignorant: It is wedded to Marxism.

Marxism is a closed philosophic system, a pseudo-science hostage to its prophecies, all of which have (to say no more) fared badly.

In my well-spent youth, I was a college professor, teaching political philosophy.

I came to the conclusion that, more than any other major figure in the history of Western political thought, most of what Marx said that is true is derivative from other thinkers, and most of what he originated is false.

BRYAN MAGEE, a Labor Party Member of Parliament in Britain and an accomplished student of philosophy, puts the point baldly and well: "I do not see how any rational man can...still be a Marxist."

Professor Richard Pipes of Harvard understands the consequence of having a great state ruled by uneducated men shut off from modern (and what is worse, from ancient) thought.

The consequence is that the state is dominated by a cabal not "predisposed by its cultural background to regard itself as part of a broader international community."

(A digression. Because President Carter evidently has not really changed as much as his new rhetoric suggests, he is not changing the failed men around him, men ankle deep in the rubble of their foreign policy. Too bad. Pipes would be a splendid choice for the role of token realist in the administration.)

WITH THE characteristic loutishness that never quite loses its power to astonish, the Kremlin has exiled Sakharov to a city of sinister symbolism.

Gorky was the scene of an early exercise in misplaced Western cooperativeness: Henry Ford helped the Soviet Union open its first automobile plant there in the early 1930s.

The Russian word "Gorky" means bitter, and is a good name for the city. Actually, the city was named, in 1932, for the novelist and playwright born there: Maxim Gorky. Five years later, Gorky died, almost certainly murdered.

Stalin thought that Gorky might oppose the purges and might embolden other leading Bolsheviks to oppose them. But like Sakharov, Gorky was protected, a bit, by the cloak of prominence.

So he could not be disposed of quite as casually as millions of the Kremlin's other victims.

ACCORDING TO one old Bolshevik, Gorky "remained until his death the only person whom Stalin was compelled to take into consideration, to some extent at least."

There is compelling evidence that Stalin ordered Gorky killed. Perhaps (this is less certain) Gorky was "doctored to death" in a hospital where he thought he was receiving proper medical attention.

In Stalin's Russia, medicine was perverted for torture and murder. It is perverted in Brezhnev's Russia, too. Russia may be the motherland of revolution, but it is remarkable for its continuities.

ANDREW TULLY:

It's U.S. Vs Them

WASHINGTON—A State Department official who speaks real street-corner English if promised anonymity said something optimistic about the cost of keeping warm and driving out to Grandma's for the weekend.

Asked if the revolution in Iran and the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan could ease America's oil-buying crisis, he used up less than 10 seconds before emitting the word "yes."

"Of course," he said diplomatically, "you used the word 'could.' My yes is addressed to that word. In this trade, you learn not to predict what other countries will do about any situation."

By other countries, he meant such as Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, and the United Arab Emirates, which sell a lot of oil.

"IT IS STATING the obvious that none of those three countries is comfortable about the Khomeini revolution and the Russian thrust at Afghanistan," he said.

"They all fear that the situation in Iran and Afghanistan are threats to their own status quo. They don't want to find themselves confronted with either an Iranian-type or a Marxist uprising."

So? So the man thinks there's a good chance that the Saudis, Kuwait, and the United Arab Emirates will keep their oil production high—and the back of their hands to the Iranian rebels, Moscow, and OPEC.

If this happens, there will be enough oil to go around, probably at much lower prices than the Western world is now paying.

AS THE man sees it, the main hope of those three oil-producing nations preserving their governmental way of life lies in the support of the U.S., Great Britain and other NATO allies.

The Saudis, Kuwaitis, and Arab Emirates could not alone defend themselves against the Russians or the fanatic Iranians. They don't have enough sophisticated weaponry or enough fighting men to operate such weaponry if they imported it.

"I'm not saying any of those countries is madly in love with the U.S.," the man said. "But there's nowhere else they can look for help except from America and its allies. Therefore, it seems to me they have to play ball with us."

Indeed, oil prospects look a lot better than they did last fall. World oil supplies have increased to the point where any country cut off by Iran could replace the lost crude by buying elsewhere.

MEANWHILE, THERE is in some U.S. government circles talk of an oil glut this spring, brought on by sharply higher prices and a slowdown of economic growth in the industrial countries.

At the same time, unemployment in Iran has risen to 50 percent. The country needs oil money to avoid going under.

"If I were dictator of an OPEC country, I'd be having some second and third thoughts," said the State Department source. "I would not like the idea that it might come down to OPEC against the world. I might even cut my oil prices against the day when I need help from the countries I've been gouging."

JAY HARRIS:

The Dim Past...

A SIZABLE segment of the American voting public has no personal recollection of some of the momentous events which have shaped recent history and their lives.

If as some claim that the age of 10 is the time when an event makes a lasting impression, then 68 percent of Americans today do not remember the vivid years of World War II.

Forty-four percent do not remember the assassination of President Kennedy in Dallas in 1963...Fifty-three percent do not recall Russia's launching of its first Sputnik and the storm of controversy it set off in the U.S...

And thirty-two percent are too young to remember when man, Americans, landed on the moon to take that first "giant step for man..."

THESE STARTLING facts may have a major impact not only on this year's presidential campaign, but on the future course of U.S. foreign policy, history, its fate.

They were brought to attention in a recent issue of U.S. News & World Report, in a look at what type person makes up the voting-age citizen among today's 220 million Americans.

According to USN&WR, some of the most traumatic events in the nation's history of just the past 20 years are not vividly recalled by 17.1 million men and women between the ages of 18 and 21 who will be eligible to vote for the first time in a presidential contest.

Those events include the early years of the Vietnam War, the racial riots of the Sixties, the death of President Kennedy, the U.S. landing on the Moon.

These voters were under 10 at the time. Today, they make up 10.7 percent of the voting-age population, enough to sway any election of recent years.

FOR THOSE who do not keep up with such things, it may come as a shock that vast numbers of the populace in the so-called middle age brackets also did not live through other major happenings...

For instance, as Inflation and threats of a recession or worse hang over the nation's economy, 74 percent of today's population is unable to recall the Great Depression. If they could, perhaps their concern over the state of the economy would match that of some of their elder friends.

But, just as startling, according to USN&WR and the U.S. Bureau of the Census, 68 percent today can't recall World War II.

Ninety-two percent are too young to remember when women couldn't vote, 86 percent did not experience the thrill as a teen-ager or adult of Lindbergh's famed solo flight to Paris in 1927. And 85 percent were spared, if that is the word, the trauma of the 1929 Stock Market crash and the ensuing Depression.

WHAT DOES this all mean to the nation, the candidates, issues, foreign policy, attitudes toward work, inflation, mores and morals?

It is somewhat sobering to know that for millions the only knowledge they may have of some of the past four decades comes from what they read, what they hear and what television sometimes presents as "authoritative" mini-documentaries.

Is history being rewritten in some respects? Are today's sometimes "moralistic" and "judgmental" chroniclers of the past, especially the recent past, placing a connotation of people and events which deserve better or worse?

Are the grade school, high school, even college and university level students getting the whole truth and nothing but the truth? In fact, are they getting history "up to date," or only as the time and semester allows?

SOME TIME ago, a young lady from one of Lubbock's high schools dropped in for an interview.

She wanted to know something about the newspaper profession, how one gets into it, how one advances, what the rewards might be, how one prepares oneself...

During the discussion, we suddenly stopped and asked: "By the way, do you know who Neville Chamberlain was?"

There was an awkward moment of silence and this blank look replaced a slight smile. "No, I don't believe I do," the young lady answered.

We attempted to enlighten her and then tried to explain why what the man stood for, what he did at a moment in history may have helped changed the course of history. The young lady apologized. "We didn't get quite that far the past semester," she said. "Maybe, next time..."

WE ARE acutely aware that a knowledge of Mr. Chamberlain, his umbrella and his remark about peace isn't a prerequisite to success in today's world.

But, we are also aware that two or more generations of Americans have grown up without the foggiest notion of how we got where we are, the advances the nation has made, the costs and sacrifices which made it possible, the mistakes, the successes.

Millions have been weaned on the bromide that the U.S. made the colossal mistake of all time in fighting the Vietnam War, without the benefit of learning it might have been avoided and certainly could have been won quickly.

Millions have only a casual knowledge of Russia as the exponent of Communism and its grand design to conquer the world. Millions do not remember the Cuban Missile Crisis.

It is of course impossible for any of us to live through all the great events of history. But, if history does repeat—and it does—then if we are to make the right choices in the future, survive if you please in the Atomic Age, then somehow as much attention needs to be given that area of our national life as say, the Super Bowl. The game we are now in could be Sudden Death...

L.M. BOYD:

Pass It On:

THAT CAR antifreeze most commonly used is ethylene glycol. Mixed half-and-half with water, it will protect an engine down to about minus 30 degrees F. Some people think it will protect at even lower temperatures, if undiluted. That's wrong. If poured in straight, it turns to mush just below freezing. It's useless that way.

What I like about Austria is that house payments there—both principal and interest—are tax deductible.

An old ordinance in Morristown, Pa., required a man to have a permit to shave and a woman to have a permit to use cosmetics.

Publisher Unloads Escape Story 'Burden'

MONTREAL (AP) — Roger Lemelin, publisher of the French-Canadian newspaper La Presse, said Tuesday it was "a terrible burden" knowing that the Canadian Embassy in Tehran was secretly harboring six Americans.

La Presse broke the story Tuesday that six American diplomats, who were not in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran when it was seized Nov. 4 by Iranian militants, were given refuge by the Canadian Embassy. The Americans, four men and two women, were flown out of Iran with papers forged by the Canadians before they closed their Tehran Embassy Monday. The Moslem militants are still holding up to 50 American hostages in the embassy.

Lemelin, in an interview, said the newspaper's Washington correspondent, Jean Pelletier, had been working on the story since Dec. 10.

"I was aware of the story for a week or so, and it was a terrible burden for us," Lemelin said. "I can tell you that, if we decided to publish it now, it's because we knew that the lives of the people (hostages) would not be in danger." He added.

"I'm not sure, but intuition tells me that the government in Tehran suspected that these people were in the embassy. So I don't think the hostages will be hurt by that."

Pelletier, interviewed in Washington, said La Presse had not published the story when it first had the information last month because it could have been "a matter of life or death."

He said when it was publicly announced Monday that Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance had thanked Canadian Foreign Secretary Flora MacDonald for Canada's "efforts" in Iran, he called the Canadian Embassy in Washington to tell officials he could no longer withhold the story.

Pelletier said he had had spoken in December with Peter Towe, the Canadian ambassador in Washington, after learning about the American refugees. "They said it would be extremely hazardous, a matter of life or death for the Canadians and Americans, if we published," he said, and he and the La Presse editors agreed not to print the story at that time.

When Miss MacDonald announced that Vance had thanked Canada's for its efforts in Iran, "We had to go with it because the whole story was bound to come out," Pelletier said.

Lemelin said it was La Presse's duty to publish the story and he did not agree with politicians and diplomats who said the newspaper should have kept it secret.

"The decision to publish it was taken when we knew that everyone was safe and that we had the straight facts," Lemelin said. "How can you stop the news from being told?"

Asked about the reaction of American journalists, Lemelin said, "They're astounded because their army of newspaper men, their media and their tremendous organization,' didn't know about the U.S. diplomats. "How come a French-Canadian newspaper gets information that they don't have?"

All U.S. news agencies operating in Iran were ordered on Jan. 14 to shut down and their reporters were told to leave the country.

In New York, the NBC News and CBS News said they knew about the diplomats in hiding.

NBC News said on the "Nightly News" Tuesday that it had kept the secret at the request of the State Department.

A CBS News spokeswoman, Mary Kane, said "A CBS correspondent knew the diplomats were in the embassy."

Asked why the information was withheld, another CBS spokeswoman, Marcia Stein, said, "Obviously because if it were released it would have endangered the lives of the diplomats."

ABC's Washington correspondent, Peter Jennings, who has covered the U.S. hostage crisis in Iran, said Tuesday in a television report from Washington he had met several times with the Canadian ambassador to Iran but never learned of the hidden diplomats.

Voter Registration Workshop To Be Held Here Saturday

The Conference of Organizations, a tri-ethnic group composed of 48 organizations, will sponsor a one-day voter registration workshop Saturday to kick off its 1980 drive to increase minority participation in elections.

Activities will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday in the First Presbyterian Church, 14th Street and Avenue O. The theme for the workshop will be "Hands That Picked Cotton Can Now Pick Public Officials."

The League of Women Voters will conduct one workshop session on voter registration and voter outreach. "How to Select Public Officials" will be the topic for another session led by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

A third session dealing with the role of churches in politics will be led by Imam Shakir H. Muhyee, a Lubbock Muslim leader.

Speakers at the workshop will be Ruben Bonilla, national director for the League of United Latin American Citizens; Ernest McGowan, a black member of the Houston City Council; Imam Ibrahim Kamal-Ud-din, regional Muslin leader from Houston; and Jose Angel Gutierrez, county judge in Zavala County and founder of the Raza Unida Party.

According to Frank Ortega, one of the organizers of the workshop, the goal of the Conference of Organizations is to inform people about the rules and regulations for voter registration and voting. He said the group will be working to get more people registered to vote.

Saturday's workshop will be open to the public, with no registration fee. Door prizes also are planned.

Jewett reported the theft occurred between Jan. 23 and Wednesday. A suspect was being sought Wednesday in connection with the theft.

Four wire-spoke wheel covers valued at $300 were taken from a 1978 Ford owned by Lesa Suzanne Rinehart, 19, of 4402 21st St., between 12 a.m. Monday and 3 p.m. Wednesday, reports indicate. The vehicle was parked at the woman's residence when the theft occurred.

A 19-inch color television was taken from the home of Jim Lindsey, 1707 Ave. J, between 7:30 a.m. Friday and 6:45 a.m. Wednesday, police said.

In other activity Tuesday night, police were called to Methodist Hospital about 11 p.m. after a 9-month-old girl brought to the emergency room by EMS attendants was found to have a swollen left eye, a burn on the right side of her neck and bruised buttocks.

Reports indicate the examining doctor told police the girl's swollen eye seemed to have been burned by some chemical and the bruises on her buttocks appeared to have been caused by repeated spankings. Police called child welfare authorities and the victim's mother, who came to the hospital in the ambulance, was questioned.

Police said the mother told them plumbers were repairing their sink and that chemicals they used to unclog it may have caused the child's swollen eyes. She also reportedly said a burn on the child's neck was caused by an accident with a cigarette and the bruises on the child's buttocks were caused by doctors and nurses in the emergency room as they were holding the child down for examination.

A 34-year-old woman told police her ex-husband came into her place of employment early Tuesday afternoon and threatened to kill her.

Reports show the man threatened her life and said, "Tell fat boy that I've got a contract for his life at about $200, and I've got one a lot cheaper on you."

The woman also told police that her former husband had once threatened to bomb her car.

The Soviet Union sent its third astronaut, Maj. A.G. Nikolayev, into orbit on Aug. 11, 1962. The next day the fourth Russian space explorer, Lt. Col. P. Posovich, followed Nikolayev into orbit and radio contact was established between the two spacecraft.

Threat Of Oil Price Hike Clouds Economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Another sharp increase in world oil prices could seriously worsen the already gloomy outlook for the nation's economy this year, President Carter and his advisers said Wednesday.

In addition, the president said inflation almost certainly will be worse if workers try to recover all of the increase in last year's energy costs through higher wages this year.

"The most immediate problem in 1980 is to ensure that last year's sharp increase in energy prices does not result in a new spiral of price and wage increases that would worsen the underlying inflation rate for many years to come," Carter said in his annual economic report to Congress.

The report repeated the administration's forecasts of a mild recession in the first half of 1980 with unemployment rising to 7.5 percent and consumer prices increasing 10.4 percent this year and 8.6 percent in 1981. Prices increased 13.3 percent last year.

But as bad as they are, those forecasts assume world oil prices will increase only slightly more than the rate of inflation, or not much more than 10 percent. This seems especially optimistic, because the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries doubled prices in the past 12 months.

In addition, Saudi Arabia and several other oil producers announced new increases in their oil prices of about 8 percent just this week.

Charles L. Schultze, chairman of Carter's Council of Economic Advisers, acknowledged to reporters that "should oil prices rise significantly more" than the forecast "it would cause us some trouble."

Schultze also said the administration projects the increase in domestic oil prices at about 20 percent. Domestic oil prices would rise more than the world price as the result of Carter's program to lift existing controls from domestic prices.

The annual economic report, which was prepared by the Council of Economic Avisers, was even more explicit about how another major increase in oil prices could affect the economy in 1980.

"As in 1979, a major threat to the outlook is that OPEC decisions about prices and production may lead to increases in world oil prices that go well beyond those announced recently," it said.

"Such a development would, in the short run, add to the restraint on the economy exerted by oil prices, exacerbate inflation and lead to lower economic growth and higher unemployment," it added.

The report said the increase in OPEC prices last year was equivalent to a tax increase on Americans of $53 billion. It said the shock of the increase didn't create a recession because the economy showed surprising strength, especially in consumer spending.

"The factors that sustained growth in 1979 should help to make the recession moderate in depth and duration," the report said. "But it is unlikely that they will cushion the economy's response to shocks to the same extent that they did in 1979."

Carter indicated he isn't completely convinced that a recession will occur in 1980, even though his administration is officially predicting one. "Our economy has shown remarkable resilience to date, and there is no evidence that recession has begun," he said.

The Commerce Department, meanwhile, released its index of economic indicators for December which showed the index unchanged for the month, following two months of steep declines. The three-month performance of the index indicated economic weakness, but not an outright recession.

While Carter seemed skeptical about a recession, he was adamant about the seriousness of the threat to the economy from inflation. In fact, no administration in memory has painted such a bleak outlook for inflation.

Carter said that while the immediate focus of government policy must be to keep inflation from getting worse than last year's 13.3 percent rate, progress must also be made in reducing the inflation rate.

"Over the longer term, we will either bring inflation down or it will assuredly get worse," Carter said. "Another sharp rise in oil prices or a world-wide crop shortage could provide the next turn of the ratchet."

If workers should demand wages that keep up with the rise in prices resulting from higher energy costs, it will only drive prices still higher, creating an ever-increasing wage-price spiral, the economic report said.

"The rise in hourly wages and other income has to be reduced in order to bring down the rate at which costs are rising," it said.

FIRE QUICKLY CONTROLLED — Firemen quickly extinguished a fire Wednesday afternoon at 2608 E. Bates St., where two rooms were extensively damaged. Firemen said the blaze began about 2:30 p.m. in the kitchen, where the house's occupant, French C. Woods, was cooking. The fire was confined to the kitchen and living room, although the rest of the house suffered smoke damage. The blaze was under control within 12 minutes of the arrival of the first of seven fire units. No one was injured. (Staff Photo by Gary Davis)

Lubbock One Of Five Sites Selected In State For Conference On Families

One of five statewide public hearings on the American family will be held in Lubbock as part of President Carter's White House Conference on Families.

Carter has declared the nation's families are under "unprecedented pressure," and has set up a 40-member national advisory committee to work with states on soliciting public input on the American family's strengths and problems.

One of the five Texas conferences will be held in Lubbock's Civic Center from 8:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. March 8.

Persons will be allowed five minutes to address a panel of hearing officers comprised of legislators, officials, educators and residents from the West Texas area. Registration forms to sign up for a five-minute period will be published in The Avalanche-Journal in early February.

Individuals, not just agency representatives, are being encouraged to speak on problems and solutions as well as strengths of the family. Suggested topics for participants include the changing role of family members; cultural, ethnic and regional differences in families; the impact of public and private institutional policies on families; the impact of discrimination on families; families with special needs, such as those with handicapped members or single parent families; coping with old age; and economic forces affecting the family.

There is no fee to speak at the meeting.

Scheduled to appear on Lubbock's hearing panel are State Sen. E.L. Short, State Rep. Buzz Robnett, State Rep. Froy Salinas, Amarillo Mayor Jerry Hodge, Lucy Acosta of El Paso's League of United Latin American Citizens, Midland housewife Cindy Miller, Dr. Douglas Chatfield, Texas Tech professor of psychology, and four members of the governor's advisory committee on the White Conference on Families.

U.S. Rep. Kent Hance also has been invited to appear on the panel, but he has said he is not sure he will be able to attend.

Other Texas hearings will be held Feb. 22 and 23 in Houston; Feb. 26 in San Marcos; March 1 in Dallas; and March 4 in Weslaco.

Involuntary Manslaughter Verdict Rendered In Infant's Death

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A Lubbock County jury decided Wednesday afternoon that Patrick Brito Olivas "recklessly" beat a 3-month-old infant three years ago, but that he did not intend the baby to die.

On the basis of that decision, the 140th District Court jury convicted the 49-year-old Olivas of involuntary manslaughter in connection with the Jan. 15, 1977, death of Serapio Roman Olivas, the son of the defendant's common-law wife, Phyllis. Mrs. Olivas says the defendant is the father of the infant, but he denied that on the witness stand Wednesday.

Wednesday's guilty verdict was the second child abuse-related conviction Olivas has received within the last six months.

In August last year, a Wichita, Kan., district court judge handed Olivas a six-month jail sentence for the beating he gave 3-month-old Tenelle Olivas on Jan. 16, 1979, almost two years to the day that Serapio died.

Tenelle, also the daughter of Mrs. Olivas, suffered brain damage and is blind in one eye as a result of the assault. However, Olivas was convicted of only a misdemeanor battery charge, and the half-year jail term was the maximum punishment allowed.

Because Olivas has appealed the Kansas conviction, Lubbock jurors were not made aware of the 1979 beating before they began their deliberations.

Similarly, prosecutors will not be allowed to allude to the Kansas beating and conviction during the punishment phase of the trial beginning this morning. Olivas can receive between two and 10 years in prison for Wednesday's involuntary manslaughter conviction.

The circumstances surrounding the infant's 1977 death here were not discovered until last year, when the child's mother told local authorites that Olivas had beaten the infant and that she had buried the dead child in northwest Lubbock County. On Feb. 19, 1979, sheriff's deputies unearthed the baby's skeletal remains from an unmarked grave about a mile north of FM 1729 on North University Avenue.

Olivas was indicted for murder in connection with the infant's death. The murder charge required that prosecutors prove the Amarillo man had intended to kill the baby when he slapped and slammed the infant against the bed in a Lubbock motel room that January night three years ago.

Judge William R. Shaver instructed jurors that if they believed Olivas did beat the infant and the beating caused the baby's death, but that the defendant had not intended to kill the child, they were to return with a conviction on the third-degree felony charge of involuntary manslaughter.

The four-woman, eight-man panel returned with that verdict at 5 p.m., after deliberating for two hours, 15 minutes.

Before testimony concluded in Olivas's trial, prosecutors Mark McBride and Rick Howell attempted to present testimony about the Kansas incident to show the defendant knew the possible fatal effects of his actions.

McBride acknowledged he could not present evidence concerning Olivas's battery conviction because the Kansas decision had been appealed.

However, during an hour-long hearing outside the presence of the jury, McBride asked Shaver if the Wichita investigating officer and Mrs. Olivas could testify about the 1979 beating of the 3-month-old girl.

McBride told Shaver that the way Tenelle was beaten, by being held by the feet and slammed against a bed, was similar to the beating that occurred in Lubbock.

Defense counsel Pat Simek called the prosecutors' request an attempt to inflame the Lubbock panel, saying testimony about the Kansas incident would prejudice the jurors "to the extent they could not render a verdict on the facts presented in this case."

Shaver allowed prosecutors to pursue their arguments, but when the judge discovered that all the testimony concerning the beating of the girl was circumstantial, he denied the state's request.

The judge cited several cases on which the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ruled such testimony be from eyewitnesses, rather than circumstantial.

Shaver also was concerned about the time element relating the two incidents, even though Serapio's bones were discovered only a month after the Kansas beating.

"I don't write the laws," Shaver told prosecutors. "I just try to follow them."

The hearing concerning the additional Kansas testimony followed Olivas's witness stand declaration Wednesday that Serapio had died in his arms and that it was Mrs. Olivas who did not want to call police that night three years ago.

Olivas said Serapio could have sustained skull fractures three days before his death, when Mrs. Olivas dropped the baby while attempting to change his diaper.

He said when Serapio died in his arms, Mrs. Olivas said, "Don't call the police because they might perform an autopsy on the baby." Olivas said his common-law wife of four years was afraid she would be held criminally responsible for Serapio's death because she had dropped him.

Olivas added that after taking the dead child to his aunt's house, he accompanied Mrs. Olivas to northwest Lubbock County where together they buried the child.

Report Says Insulation Increases Fire Hazards

WASHINGTON (AP) — Home insulation increases the chance of fires in the many American homes having electrical problems, a federal investigation said Wednesday.

A report by staff experts of the Consumer Product Safety Commission said insulation increases fire hazards if it is used around wiring that can overheat. The insulation keeps heat from escaping, making the temperature go up further and possibly leading to a fire, the staffers said in a report to the commissioners.

The staff said many homes, particularly older ones, have violations in electrical codes, including deteriorated or damaged wiring.

The commissioners directed the staff to draft a policy statement on the problem that will tell the Energy Department and others working on the national energy problem of the safety consideration.

"Everyone agrees that we should save energy. But we should put that concern in the context of safety considerations as well," said commission chairman Susan B. King.

"Thermal insulation increases the stress on the electrical deficiencies that we know many homes have," said Carl Blechschmidt, manager of the safety agency's electrical hazards program.

He recommended that the commission warn consumers of the potential problem and advise them to have their home electrical systems checked by professionals before installing insulation. The commissioners will consider this after the policy statement is issued.

The staff report noted that such a step could slow down addition of insulation to homes, which President Carter has urged as part of his energy program.

The United States celebrated a day of thanksgiving after the end of hostilities in the War of Independence.

Convicted Robbery Duo Fail In Appeal

AUSTIN (AP) — A man sentenced to death and a co-defendant given a life sentence in a 1979 robbery-stabbing failed Wednesday to have their capital murder convictions overturned by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

James Simmons Jr. and Milton Anthony were found guilty of murdering Truett Ledford in January 1979 during the course of a robbery.

Simmons received the death sentence and Anthony was ordered to spend life in prison.

Simmons' appeal contended the trial court should not have allowed testimony saying he was "carefree and unremorseful" in jail after the slaying. He claimed the testimony was akin to a confession and should not have been allowed.

The appeals court disagreed.

Anthony claimed the evidence failed to show he knew Simmons had a knife and that Ledford might be killed during the robbery. Both men testified that Anthony did not know Simmons was carrying a knife.

However, evidence presented by prosecutors showed the two men had talked about the robbery several days before it happened.

"Anthony said he was going to beat him, and Simmons pulled out a knife and said he was going to stab him," the appeals court opinion said. "Anthony then said he was going to put Ledford in the graveyard. We hold the evidence is sufficient to show murder should have been anticipated as a result of carrying out the robbery conspiracy."

The court also dismissed claims of improper searches. The opinion said both men surrendered when they heard they were being sought, and their confessions were given voluntarily.

Other cases considered Wednesday by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals:

•Reversed the murder conviction and 50-year sentence of Moses Betancur of Fort Bend County. The appeals court sent the case back for possible re-trial. Betancur was convicted in the July 1975 shooting death of Dionicio Garcia.

•Upheld the arson convictions of Raymond Beltran and David Romo, found guilty of setting fires in the Austin City Jail. Beltran was sentenced to 14 years in prison. Romo was given a 10-year sentence.

•Affirmed the murder conviction of Willie Smith in the January 1977 state prison death of Freeman Chase. Chase died as a result of burns after Smith threw naptha on him and set it ablaze. Smith was sentenced to life in prison.

•Upheld the murder conviction and life sentence of Donald Vaughn of Gainesville, who claimed his conviction should be overturned because the indictment failed to allege he wore shoes when he stomped his wife to death in 1976.

Supreme Court Rejects Patriot Group Case

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court Wednesday declined to consider the case of two officials of the Daughters of the American Revolution who were held in contempt of court for using DAR funds to cover legal expenses.

State DAR Regent Georgia Bingle Edman of Houston and the organization's state treasurer, Mrs. Kenneth Wickett of Fort Worth, were each fined $500 and ordered to pay court costs of $3,675.

The Texarkana Court of Civil Appeals said the women violated an injunction against using DAR money to defend themselves in a civil suit filed by some DAR Texas chapters.

The suit filed by the Fort Bend Chapter and joined by others in Texas claimed state officials improperly sold a Jefferson plantation that served as state DAR headquarters. The suit claimed the plantation was worth more than $100,000 but was sold for $75,000.

Plaintiffs also complained of financial irregularities in the Texas DAR. The Texarkana appeals court said "it appears from the evidence that some funds have not been accounted for in the annual treasurer's report." The opinion also said DAR funds had been "commingled" and that "unauthorized transfers had been made."

The Supreme Court found no reversible error and refused to hear the contempt case or an appeal of the injunction.

State DAR officials approved the spending of $47,000 in DAR funds to cover legal expenses incurred in the case.

The plaintiffs also claimed the lawyer representing the DAR should have been held in contempt for participating in the use of DAR funds for legal expenses after a court had ruled against such expenditures.

Action against the attorney has not been completed.

Other cases before the Supreme Court Wednesday:

—Set a March 19 hearing in a mineral rights dispute between South Texas banker-rancher Clinton Manges and a man who loaned him $2 million for land deals in Jim Hogg and Starr counties. A lower court ruled in Manges's favor.

—Refused to alter a $700,000 judgment against two Houston doctors who allegedly slandered the administrator of a hospital in which the doctors had a financial interest. John Hankins sued Drs. Erwin Winkel II, chief of the medical staff at North Central Hospital, and Norma Harris, resident radiologist.

Yarborough's Name May Get Double Takes

DALLAS (AP) — Voters in Dallas County will see a familiar name in an unfamiliar place on the ballot when they step into the booth to vote in the upcoming Democratic primary election.

They might do a double-take or at least think twice before they pull the lever.

Ralph Yarborough for sheriff of Dallas County?

Yes, that's right.

Yarborough, 42, a native of Colorado who says he's a distant relative of the former senator, paid his filing fee Monday as a candidate for sheriff in the Democratic primary election.

The man he doesn't want his name to be confused with is Don Yarbrough, although the spelling is different. Yarbrough was elected to the Texas Supreme Court in 1976 because many voters confused him with another Don Yarborough, who ran unsuccessfully several times for governor in the 1960s. Yarbrough was forced to resign from the high court amid legislative procedures to remove him in 1978. He later was convicted of perjury for lying to a grand jury.

Candidate Yarborough is giving up his eight-year career as a deputy to run for office.

Sheriff Carl Thomas, seeking another term, has said deputies who run for sheriff must either resign or be fired.

"It's my understanding he (Yarborough) typed up a resignation letter," the sheriff, a Republican, said.

Does it bother him to think he may get some votes from persons who merely recognize the name?

"I'll be happy to get any votes I can get, but I'd like to feel I will be elected by people who know I'm qualified for the job," Yarborough said.

Berkeley Faculty Due Poll On Labs

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — The 1,500-member faculty at the University of California at Berkeley will be polled by mail on a proposal that the university end its management of the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory and the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory.

The proposal was rejected 125-104 by the faculty senate on Tuesday. But opponents of the university's links to the nuclear weapons facilities got the senate to authorize the mail poll. Critics argue a university has no business dealing with weapons of mass death.

Berkeley contracts with the U.S. Department of Energy to manage the Livermore lab in Northern California and the Los Alamos facility in New Mexico.

Soviets Tightening Afghanistan Control

By United Press International

Soviet troops Wednesday tightened their control over occupied Afghanistan, sending their tanks rumbling through Kabul in a more visible military profile.

With the Soviet occupation in its second month and continued hostility from the population, the Russian troops were making little effort to maintain the official position that the Moscow-installed government Afghan is in charge.

UPI Correspondent Michael Keats reported from Kabul that a pistol-packing Soviet colonel summarily turned back an Afghan official who was taking Western correspondents on a guided tour to show atrocities by the previous regime.

Press passes issued correspondents by the Afghan Information Ministry to visit the countryside were disregarded by Soviet troops, who turned reporters and cameramen back.

Prisoners Not Executed

In London, the Times of London reported Afghan political prisoners thought to have been executed in the past two years since Afghanistan's first Marxist coup actually are being held inside the Soviet Union.

The newspaper said it learned of the political prisoners from a letter smuggled out of the Soviet Union with the help of a Russian worker and an Afghan student.

Keats said armored personnel carriers and tanks from the 18,000-strong Soviet force camped outside the capital clanked on patrol amid signs of a beefed up Soviet security ring.

This followed the shooting of at least two Soviet soldiers last week — the first confirmed attack on the invaders inside snow-bound Kabul.

New Roadblocks Set

Scores of new roadblocks have gone up on all roads leading out of the capital, manned either by gsoviet troops or Afghan soldiers — usually with a Russian detachment nearby.

All Westerners, including reporters and cameramen with passes issued by the Information Ministry of the nominal government, were turned back by Soviet troops within an area of about 10 miles from Kabul. Western foreigners attempting to fly on internal flights were refused tickets.

In other Afghanistan-related developments:

— The Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda, in an apparent attempt to allay Moslem fears it would crack down on religion in Afghanistan, Wednesday described Kabul as a busy center of Islam, Pravda published reports from the Afghan capital that said, "Any day in Kabul, just as in other Afghan cities nd villages, begins with morning prayer. Allegations concerning religious persecution in Afghanistan are absolutely groundless."

Chinese Captured

—The official Cuban press agency, Prensa Latina, reported that Afghan army troops captured two Chinese military advisers to the guerrillas in battles in the northern province of Badarhjan. Prensa Latina quoted Lt. Col. Nabi Mohammad Maximi in Rasvjob, 40 miles southeast of Kabul, as saying intelligence reports show "Peking sent especially trained agents, under various covers, to infiltrate each village in the province of Badarhjan, sow confusion and agitate against" the Moscow-backed regime in Afghanistan.

—Clark Clifford, President Carter's special envoy, met with Indian officials in New Delhi to allay Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's fears about proposed U.S. arms sales and military aid to Pakistan.

Clifford and Indian officials agreed Wednesday that there should be no Soviet or U.S. troops in South Asia. An Indian Foreign Ministry spokesman said India will maintain "normal" diplomatic relations with the Soviet-backed regime in Afghanistan.

Mrs. Gandhi, who meets with Clifford today, said her government is trying to help solve the Afghan crisis. "Our efforts are directed at securing speedy withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan," she told the lower house of parliament.

Western diplomatic sources said the estimated 85,000 Soviet invasion troops in Afghanistan were still mainly confined to their bases around Kabul, the western town of Herat and at Shindand, near the giranian border.

OFFICIAL INDICTED

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Louisiana Agriculture Commissioner Gil Dozier was indicted by a federal grand jury Wednesday on five counts of racketeering, public bribery and extortion.

their attitude toward Canada about travel and vacationing," said an official who asked not to be identified.

Calls also came in to consulates in Denver, San Francisco and Los Angeles. In Los Angeles, more than 100 calls came in early Wednesday. Teresa Allen, secretary to the Canadian consul general, said the callers "say that it is good to have a neighbor like Canada, and congratulations for a job well done."

In San Antonio, Texas, a newspaper Wednesday used a front page box, complete with a full-color Canadian flag, to thank Canada for smuggling six Americans out of Iran.

The San Antonio Light saluted Canada "for its humanitarian efforts in Iran on behalf of six Americans trapped in strife-ridden Tehran."

"Canada's bold initiative to rescue these Americans, hide them in the Canadian Embassy for nearly three months and then arrange for their escape represents the ultimate act of friendship, one in which all Canadians can take pride," the newspaper said.

Despite elation over their loved ones' dramatic escape from Iran, some relatives of the six Americans who eluded Iranian imprisonment turned their thoughts to the 50 American hostages left behind.

Worrying About Others

"I wish something could be done to bring the other people home," said Setsuko Amburn, whose daughter, Cora Lijek, and son-in-law, Mark Lijek, both 25, were among those who posed as Canadians to leave Iran. "I'm still worrying about the other people," Mrs. Amburn said Wednesday from her Oceanport, N.J., home.

Her daughter was a consul assistant in Tehran while her son-in-law was a consular official. They and four others were spirited out of the country in a U.S.-Canadian effort after they evaded the Nov. 4 takeover of the U.S. Embassy and spent nearly three months in hiding.

"I'm just going to grab her and cry," Mrs. Amburn said of her daughter.

The six were flown Wednesday from a U.S. military base in West Germany to Dover Air Force Base, Del.

In Norman, Okla., the grandmother of one of those who escaped also worried about the 50 Americans hostages, who have been held since militants took over the embassy.

Fear For Hostages

"I just hope they don't harm any of the hostages because of this. I hope the new president (of Iran) gets them released," said Lela Stafford. Her grandson, James D. Stafford Jr., 29, and his wife, Kathy, 28, were among those who escaped.

The position in Tehran was the first diplomatic position for Stafford, a Tulsa, Okla., native who was a consul officer. His wife was a consular assistant. They owned a home in Chattanooga, Tenn., about 100 miles from the home of Mrs. Stafford's mother, Mary Frank of Crossville, Tenn.

Mrs. Stafford said she prayed for the couple daily. "I said a prayer for them this morning, just like I do every day. I prayed to their guardian angels to take care of them."

Draft Role Advocated By Women

won't be identified with the Equal Rights Amendment."

In that connection, several persons asked the White House to make the decision before Feb. 6, when Missouri is likely to vote on the ERA. ERA supporters do not want the two issues linked.

Moments later, however, the ERA was withdrawn from consideration in the Missouri Senate and the sponsor said she considered the issue dead for the year.

Sen. Gwen Giles of St. Louis said she did not have the votes. Some senators reportedly were upset by Mrs. Giles' decision to delay a vote for a week or more because of the possibility women might be registered for the draft.

The organizations at the White House meeting ranged from the Girl Scouts to the National Women's Political Caucus.

Lynda Johnson Robb, head of the President's Advisory Commission on Women, said she polled that group "and we believe women should be registered."

Mrs. Robb said she didn't believe registration of women would harm the prospects for ERA ratification.

The ERA, which would outlaw discrimination based on sex, must be ratified by 38 states by June 30, 1982 to become part of the Constitution. The original deadline was March 22, 1979, but was extended by act of Congress.

To date, the ERA has been approved by 35 states, but five have since rescinded approval. The validity of that move still is in question and the Justice Department has said it is up to Congress to decide. The states that have rescinded approval are South Dakota, Kentucky, Tennessee, Idaho and Nebraska. Kentucky's action was vetoed, however.

"You don't need the ERA for Congress and the president to be able to register or draft men or women," Mrs. Robb said. "The Equal Rights Amendment does not make any difference. They can already do that."

Several of the women also said they believed the law prohibiting women from combat should be reconsidered, arguing that some jobs in the combat classification may not be terribly risky.

Several members of the House and Senate armed services committees, which would consider any legislation to register women, have said they oppose it because the military needs people in combat positions, which women couldn't fill.

Julie Arri, president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women, said she favors registration of women "because if we believe in equality, equal rights also means equal responsibility."

On the ERA, Mrs. Weddington quoted Carter as saying he was very disappointed with the recent failure of the amendment in his home state of Georgia.

The president and his wife, Rosalynn, called 23 Georgia senators in an effort to influence the outcome of the vote, Carter reportedly told the women.

"There were some votes he thought he could get," Mrs. Weddington said, but the senators apparently decided they would not support it.

set in the school case for some time within the "next 60-90 days."

Bidal Aguero, listed as a plaintiff in the school case, said, "If the at-large system for the city proves to be unconstitutional, I can't see where the school district would spend a million dollars on something they know they're going to lose."

Aguero said the suit probably will be brought up again, even if West Texas Legal Services does not act as counsel. "I'd like to stay involved in it," he said.

Garrett said the suit will be reconsidered at the time of the appeals court decision in the city case.

The at-large system of election allows citywide voting, with no residency restrictions. A single-member system would require that certain seats on the school board be designated for particular areas of the city.

The suit claimed that the board's failure to convert to the single-member system is a form of racial discrimination and that the board should pay $31 million in damages to minority voters.

However, in December 1978, Woodward denied those damages, saying the complaint for damages "lacks allegations of bad faith or malicious intent on the part of the defendants in calling and holding at-large elections..."

Attorneys for the school district have defended the current voting system, claiming that minorities are "enjoying full access to the processes of nominating and electing trustees."

Military's Topless Ordered Clubless

WASHINGTON (AP) — Topless dancers have been banned by the Army and Air Force service clubs around the world.

Commanders "cannot, even in the face of the expressed desires of a substantial number of patrons, abrogate their responsibility for protecting the overall interests of the Air Force," said the Air Force order.

Its order, issued last October, stressed that "each event ... must be capable of withstanding critical external scrutiny."

The Army's order was worded similarly, indicating it may have coordinated its policy with the Air Force or used the Air Force directive as a model. The new Army policy became effective Jan. 23.

Solons Praise Canada Action

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House and Senate overwhelmingly approved resolutions Wednesday praising Canada for engineering the escape of six American diplomats in Iran.

Passage by a cheering and applauding House came after Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill told the members that never before had the House passed a resolution praising another nation for its actions.

"History is being written," he said.

The full House rose in applause as the resolution was prepared for a final vote. It then approved the resolution by a vote of 370 to 0.

The Senate passed its resolution by voice vote only hours before the House action.

The House resolution, introduced by Rep. Joe Moakley, D-Mass., commended Canada and its citizens for actions that "protected, housed and arranged the safe departure" of the six diplomats.

The Senate's resolution, introduced by Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., also cited Canadian Ambassador Kenneth Tayler, who helped hide the Americans for 12 weeks and then closed his embassy in Tehran after arranging their escape, for "particular courage and compassion."

"The Senate, on behalf of all Americans, hereby commends the Government of Canada for its actions in protecting ... United States citizens," the resolution said.

Rep. James J. Howard, D-N.J., told the House that it was not only "appropriate but obligatory" that the House commend Canada and its citizens "for protecting and engineering the escape of six hostages" and for "standing by us in this critical time."

CHEERS FOR NEIGHBOR — A 14 by 48 foot billboard located at the base of the Ambassador Bridge in Detroit carries a message, erected late Wednesday, thanking the Canadians for their help in the escape of six Americans from Iran. Halloween Events Related At Trial asked.

"I heard a noise like a shot and the pickup began spinning its wheels and backing out of there," she said. "I backed into the trees and Loy was standing there with me."

"Did he have the shotgun in his hands?" Shelton asked.

"I believe he did," she said. "We watched them go, and Loy said, 'I hope that scares them enough that they won't come back.'"

Mrs. Stone said she called the Castro County Sheriff's Office three times before the pickup had arrived, but that Sheriff Granville Martin didn't arrive until "30 or 40 minutes later."

"What did the sheriff say?" Shelton asked.

"He asked Loy, 'Is that a gun you have there?' and Loy said, 'Yes,'" she said. "Then he asked, 'Did you shoot?' and Loy said, 'I fired once in the air to scare some kids away,' and the sheriff said, 'Take that gun inside and don't come back out.'"

Department of Public Safety trooper Jackie Gunnels, who arrived at the same time as Martin, remained while Martin went back to town and eventually returned to the house, she said. Within minutes, every Castro county law officer with the exception of city police arrived at the scene.

"I had gone to Mom's house (her mother-in law) and came back when I saw the lights," she said. "As I entered the house, I heard Loy say, 'Yes, it's in the closet. Do you want me to get it or do you want to?,' and the sheriff said, 'Would you please?'"

"Did they ever read you your rights about remaining silent or being searched?" Shelton asked.

"No," she said.

"Did they ever tell you anyone had died or that they were going to file on you for murder?" Shelton asked.

"They did not," she said.

Mrs. Stone, a lifelong Castro County resident with a bachelors degree in history from West Texas State University, told the court that the Church of Wicca, of which she and her husband are members, refers to its followers as witches. Its philosophy, she explained, is that "by working with natural forces, you can gain spiritual harmony with the forces of nature and God."

She said witchcraft "is a part of the rituals," but quickly added they "absolutely do not worhsip Satan or perform sacrificial ceremonies."

Before Mrs. Stone took the stand, the defense brought in three more area youths, all of whom said they had driven around the Stones' residence in the weeks before Halloween. The students told the court they had heard at school in Dimmitt and Hereford that the Stones were "devil worshipers and were going to have some sort of ceremony or seance and we wanted to see it."

The prosecution rested its case Tuesday in the highly-publicized and much delayed trial, which was moved from Dimmitt to Plainview after a state district judge ruled the Stones would not get a fair trial in their home town because of their religious background and racial tension stirred up by the incident.

Threat Made On Hostages suppress small nations.

"The Canadian government will sooner or later pay for ... this duplicity and cheating," he said.

Asked whether harsher treatment might be in store for the embassy hostages, the foreign minister replied, "Most probably."

Ghotbzadeh claimed he received word from Canadian Prime Minister Joe Clark, through an unspecified third country, that the dramatic escape mission was carried out at this time because it might boost the chances of Clark's Progressive Conservative Party in Canada's Feb. 18 general election. Clark apologized for it, the Iranian claimed.

But Clark denied he had sent such a message to Tehran. "It is absolutely false," the Canadian leader said while campaigning in Wingham, Ontario.

Canadian Foreign Minister Flora MacDonald, interviewed on NBC-TV's "Today" show, sounded unconcerned about Ghotbzadeh's threats against Canada. Reprisals are not "something that is going to suddenly take place," she said.

She also dismissed the idea that Canada had done anything extraordinary for Americans.

"We happen to be closest neighbors best friends. What else would one have done?" she said.

But at least one Canadian was not afraid to boast.

"We're very proud they brought this off," said Celia Lucy of Winnipeg, Manitoba, mother of Roger Lucy, one of the four Canadian diplomats who got the Americans out. "They really achieved something."

School Board Candidate Must Refile

State to confirm the statute change, Gooch said the school district will not accept any more filings until Feb. 4 and would ask Hunt to come in and refile.

"We need to be legal, although we thought we were," he said. "I guess that one little area just got by us."

School board president Monte Hasie also confessed ignorance of the new law, and said school attorneys could have overlooked the law because they "have had their hands full" with a rehearing of the school desegregation case.

Hunt, who filed for Place 5 on the school board on Jan. 24, said he was "just misinformed" by school officials when he was told he could file the day the election was called.

"I thought they would have known," he said.

However, said he doesn't mind having to file again. "All it is is a trip down there," he said.

Lubbock municipal elections also will be held April 5, but city officials have refused to accept filings until Feb. 4 because of the state law.

Utility Poles Downed; Valuable Wire Removed

WOONSOCKET, R.I. (AP) — Thieves chopped down 50 utility poles and made off with about four miles of copper wire worth about $5,000 during the past six months, officials say.

Blackstone Valley Electric Co. safety manager Arthur Keegan said the wire was stolen in four separate incidents from an unused power line from a substation here to Plainville, Mass. Taken were lengths of the ⅜-inch wire and copper clips holding the wire to the poles, he said.

Cold, Icy Weather Due Over Area Again Today

ed to bring any precipitation to the area until later today. Forecasters are issuing a 20 percent chance for freezing light rain or drizzle in the area tonight, which may change to drizzle on Friday.

Calmer Winds Today

Although temperatures today are not not expected to be any warmer than Wednesday's readings, calmer winds should lessen the chill factor considerably.

Temperatures which dipped to 25 Wednesday afternoon, combined with 15 mph winds blowing from the northeast to produce a wind chill factor of near 2 degrees.

The mercury tonight is expected to drop from the middle 30s into the low 20s tonight, as winds blow from the east at five to 10 mph.

Warmer readings are expected to begin thawing a frozen South Plains on Friday, as the mercury climbs into the middle 40s. Milder readings also are expected during the weekend, as afternoon highs continue to warm into the 50s and 60s, recuperating each time from overnight lows which should range from the 20s on Saturday to near 40 by Monday.

Panhandle Roads Slick

Although no travelers advisories are in effect this morning for the South Plains, an advisory is continuing through this morning for the Texas Panhandle, where roadways remained wet throughout Wednesday.

A winter storm also battered Southern California, leaving many residents mired in mud, and buried some Western states under knee-deep snow.

In Southern California, where five people died in earlier rain storms, mud was 10 feet deep on one street in San Bernardino and overflow from a dam in Tijuana covered parts of San Diego, drowning 15 horses. A mudslide in the Los Angeles suburb of Malibu blocked the northbound lanes of the Pacific Coast Highway.

National Tree Festooned On Behalf Of Hostages

WASHINGTON (AP) — The national Christmas tree, which remained unlit during the holiday season because of the Americans held hostage in Iran, was festooned with 50 yellow ribbons Wednesday to symbolize their continued captivity.

The idea was conceived and carried out by two sisters with the help of the National Park Service and the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.

"We're just a group of American citizens who wanted to express our concern for the hostages and decided that the national Christmas tree, since it had been dedicated once for them, should be rededicated for them," said Gail R. Carlson, one of the sisters.

Last Dec. 13, while hundreds waited for the sparkling climax to the annual tree lighting ceremony, President Carter pushed the button and only the crowning star blaze to life. The president then explained 'we will turn on the other lights on the tree when the American hostages come home."

Mrs. Carlson and her sister, Karen Helfert, have tied yellow ribbons around trees near the Iranian Embassy, the White House, the State Department, and the embassies of members of the U.N. Security Council.

The ribbon-tying practice stems from a song about an ex-convict returning home after three years in prison who asked his sweetheart to "tie a yellow ribbon around the old oak tree" if he is welcome. The idea was first adapted to the current hostage situation by Mrs. Bruce Laingen, wife of one of the Americans in IRAN.

About two dozen people and three dozen reporters and cameramen turned out for a brief ceremony at the tree in 29-degree weather. A telephone company cherry picker hoisted Mrs. Helfert so she could festoon the top of the 30-foot tree with the ribbons.

Among those attending was Mrs. Adolph Dubs, widow of the U.S. ambassador to Afghanistan. Dubs was kidnaped Feb. 14, 1979 in Kabul and killed when Afghan police — ignoring U.S. pleas for negotiation — shot their way into a hotel room where he was being held hostage.

She said the ribbon-tying "shows support for the people who are here and who need support. It has a symbolic meaning."

Turkish Terrorists' Capture Reported

ISTANBUL (AP) — Martial law authorities Wednesday announced the capture of 98 leftist terrorists suspected of killing at least 18 persons, including three policemen.

A communique from the Istanbul Martial Law Command said the terrorists were affiliated with the "Turkish Communist Party-Marxist Leninist."

In addition to ambush-killings, the group was responsible for a string of bomb attacks and for planting posters fitted with explosive devices, the command said.

The command said many of the targets were rightwing students or sympathizers as well as security authorities.

Political terrorism in Turkey has claimed more than 2,500 lives in the past two years.

Carter Says Military Stance Not Necessary For Caribbean Area

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter says he sees no outside threat to the Caribbean area and therefore will not promise to use military force to defend it.

Carter thus declined to place the neighboring Caribbean in the same "vital interest" category as the Persian Gulf. He also asserted that the United States would not be able, now or in the future, to defend the Persian Gulf area by itself.

The president made the statements Tuesday in a question and answer session with visiting editors and broadcasters. The White House released a transcript of the session Wednesday.

Carter, who declared last week that any outside threat to the oil-rich Persian Gulf would be repelled by military force if necessary, was asked if the Caribbean also was considered of vital interest to the United States.

"Obviously," Carter responded, "the Caribbean is of great interest to our country, and is our closest group of neighbors." But he added:

"I see no military threat to the integrity of the nations in the Caribbean from an outside force, and therefore don't consider it necessary to define it as one of vital interest where military action by our own country would be necessary to defend it.... I would not want to threaten military force there."

Asked if "we do indeed have what it takes militarily" to redeem his pledge to repel any Soviet threat to the Persian Gulf area, Carter said:

"I don't think it would be accurate for me to claim that at this time, or in the future, we expect to have enough military strength and enough military presence there to defend the region unilaterally."

The president said the United States would need "cooperation" from nations "who are heavily dependent, even more than we are, on an uninterrupted supply of oil from that region" — a reference to Western Europe and Japan.

In his State of the Union address, Carter had said any outside effort to gain control of the Persian Gulf "will be regarded as an assault on the vital interests of the United States of America and such an assault will be repelled by any means necessary, including military force."

White House press secretary Jody Powell said Carter, in his remarks on the Caribbean, "obviously was resisting making some kind of threat when there was no need to make one." He said if the Caribbean faces an outside threat in the future "perhaps such a statement might be called for."

Carter also gave his visitors his first public response to a speech Monday in which Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, his chief rival for the Democratic presidential nomination, was sharply critical of administration policies ranging from the economy to the crises in the Persian Gulf.

Responding to Kennedy's statement that "we should not be moving toward the brink of sending another generation of the young to die for failures of the old in politics," Carter said:

"I have tried to keep our country at peace. And so far I thank God that we have not had any American service men or women give their lives in combat since I have been in office. I hope I can go out of this White House with the same record intact."

As for a Kennedy statement that Carter was surprised by Soviet by intervention in Afghanistan and that "for many months, the administration had ignored the warning signals," the president said:

"We were not caught by surprise, but there was no way to anticipate that they would actually invade Afghanistan. We did know about their high presence there, and also about their high build-up."

Insisting that "we did have adequate intelligence prior to the Soviets' action," Carter said the United States "let our deep concern be expressed directly and forcefully." But, he said, Moscow "ignored our warning."

Asked if he would recommend legislation requiring women to register for the military draft, the president said, "I have my own opinion now that I am not ready to announce."

Windmills Brought Water To Dry Plains

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The windmill, symbol of civilization in the early West, is alive and well in the Ranching Heritage Center at The Museum of Texas Tech University.

Because it is, first day of issue ceremonies for a postage stamp booklet honoring five historic American windmills will be held in the museum at 11 a.m. Feb. 7.

Four other windmills, all with wooden wheels, are preserved at the 12-acre outdoor ranch museum to show how windmills made life possible on the waterless plains.

"The windmill symbolizes ranching in America and having it put on the stamp only helps to increase the knowledge of the ranching industry and its many facets of operation today and yesterday," Jim Kassahn, president of the Ranching Heritage Association, said.

To enhance the first day festivities, the association prepared a first day cover to aid stamp collectors with their hobby and non-collectors with a simple memento of Lubbock's first day of issue honor.

Kassahn termed the RHA first day cover a gesture of appreciation to the U.S. Postal Service for the local, state and national exposure the event will give the ranch museum.

Envelopes, bearing the image of the classic Eclipse which furnishes the RHA logo, will be given away, three to a person, through Feb. 7.

Any of the 4,000 covers remaining after the first day festivities will be sold as regular stationary envelopes at 35 cents each or three for $1.

Persons desiring the envelopes for first day ceremonies may get them from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. Friday and at the same hours Monday through Wednesday at the RHA office in the orientation center at the RHC.

Providing free covers for windmill stamps will carry the story of ranching preserved at the site all over the nation.

That way the importance of the windmill to the ranch industry also will spread.

The windmill marched as a vanguard of civilization across land termed "uninhabitable and shall remain so forever" by Army explorer Randolph B. Marcy in 1849.

But, by the time Col. Ranald S. Mackenzie had cleared the Comanche from the Texas High Plains, the Eclipse was ready.

In its wake came the rancher with permanent herds to replace the wandering throngs that had roamed where water and free graze could be found in scattered space.

The windmill, and almost without exception it was the Eclipse, heralded the end of squabbles over canyon streams or spring lakes too few and far between for the massive herds sweeping northwestward on open range.

The windmill's influence was felt at the height of a romantic era on the sprawling High Plains with vast cattle empires, cattle barons and cowboys. Without the windmill, this era of the cowboy could not have been. Neither could that of the settler that followed.

In land that rolled and dipped, dropped into rocky canyons or just stretched endlessly to the horizon, the windmill wheel and fantail peeping skyward was a welcome sight to cowboy and traveler alike.

On huge ranches there was a windmill man who made the rounds like a modern day mechanic, keeping the parts in working order.

There was the town blacksmith who loaded his toolbox on the wagon and made a pilgrimage around the smaller ranches to give windmills their annual checkup.

The Eclipse, praised by oldtimers as the only early windmill that could get the deep plains water, had to be oiled weekly, a chore cowboys likened to posthole digging. When the Eclipse was replaced, it was with a mill with a closed gear box that needed less maintenance.

When newcomers climbed off their covered wagons and later off the Santa Fe trains, their first impression of a West Texas town was that it was all windmills.

Early fires saw bucket brigades lined up to the nearest mill, and there was a community windmill on the courthouse square.

With electricity and gas-fired pumps, the windmill for a while fell to disuse, rousing collectors to its rescue.

One collector, Johan Laubhan of Follet, found the metal parts of an Eclipse in sand and weeds and restored it to old catalog specifications for the RHC.

With the spread of windmill stamps on RHC covers all over the nation, the story of the Eclipse and other winmdills and structures at the ranch museum will spread, also.

Providing free envelops is the association's way of saying thanks for carrying the RHC to new fans of the cowboy and ranching.

Froy Salinas Announces Try For Third Term

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

State Rep. Froy Salinas formally announced for re-election Wednesday, calling his only opponent's charges of ineffective representation the remarks of a "desperate politician trying to make a name for himself."

Democrat Salinas enters his race for a third term as representative for District 75-B with only a few days left before the filing deadline for the May 3 primary and Nov. 4 general election.

Republican McKinley Shephard, pastor of First Progressive Baptist Church, announced his candidacy several weeks ago.

Shephard charged Salinas with ineffective representation, unwillingness to listen to his constituents, non-cooperation and non-compatibility with fellow representatives when he announced for office. Salinas countered the charges, saying his office maintains a 24-hour answering service as well as a Saturday office staff to remain answerable to his constituents.

Salinas stressed his experience as a qualifying factor, saying that experience will be needed in upcoming re-districting studies as well as the search for state funding for teaching hospitals and the Texas Tech nursing school. He has spoken with the governor on the issue of funding the nursing school, concluding that Clements perhaps has been misinformed on the need for the institution, Salinas.

Convincing Clements to fund teaching costs for Health Sciences Center Hospital and other teaching hospitals will be a harder job, he thinks, since the governor appears to disagree with the concept.

Salinas said he doesn't think the minority issue will enter into the race because he is a Democrat and Shephard is Republican. Shephard, who if elected would become the first black Republican to be elected to the Legislature since Reconstruction, has recruited as his campaign treasurer David Hester, who was Salinas' opponent in the last election.

"He might be sore because he lost, I don't know," Salinas said of Hester's involvement with the Shephard campaign.

Salinas called the governor's planned special session unnecessary and based entirely on political motivation. "I somewhat resent him calling a special session for political reasons," he said, adding that a special session called in the fall would interrupt the campaigning of the largely Democratic Legislature while leaving free the Republican candidates.

He added that it was unrealistic for the county hospital district's Board of Managers to hope that a bill for state aid to teaching hospitals would be included in the session.

Salinas said his biggest accomplishment while in office has been the elimination of the auto tax. He hopes to cut in half property taxes for school finance by increasing the tax on Texas-produced oil that leaves the state. This would shift some of the burden to out-of-state buyers, he said.

Salinas, 40 years old, is a Tahoka native. He was a salesman for Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. for 13 years before his first term in office which began Jan. 1977.

He and his wife Olivia have four children, ranging in age from 18 to 8.

District 75-B was ordered into existence in January 1974 as the result of a re-districting suit in which Salinas was one of the plaintiffs.

Goodwill Industries Honors Set Tonight

Announcement of Goodwill Industries of Lubbock's selection of an employer and employee of the year will be made at the organization's annual banquet tonight.

The dinner and awards presentation is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. at Hillcrest Country Club.

Other highlights of the banquet will be the selection of a local businessman who will be inducted into the Goodwill Industries Hall of Fame and the presentation of plaques to special friends of Goodwill.

The Hall of Fame selection is awarded to a handicapped person in the city who has made a major contribution to the community.

Scheduled to speak at the banquet is the Rev. Ted Dotts, pastor of St. John United Methodist Church.

New members to the Goodwill board of directors also will be installed.

In 1911, Norwegian explorer Roald Amundsen became the first man to reach the South Pole.

POPE IN BRAZIL

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II will visit Brazil, the world's largest Roman Catholic country, in July, the Vatican announced Wednesday. The Vatican's chief spokesman, the Rev. Romeo Panciroli, gave no details other than to confirm persistent reports of the trip.

LAWYERS ON STRIKE

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Several hundred Syrian lawyers have planned a one-day strike today to protest against "the large number of political prisoners" they claim are being unfairly detained by Syrian authorities, the International Commission of Jurists announced Wednesday. A commission statement said the lawyers, all members of the Damascus Bar Association, would refuse to appear before any court during that day

Reader's Exchange

By JEANNE LIVELY
Family News Staff

Should we begin this week with some requests?

Mrs. D.C. Majors, Shallowater, wonders if anyone has a recipe for "Potato Caramel Cake"?

Lorene also wrote, "My family is a very allergic family and my family before me was. Here is a recipe that has been with us about 40 years. I hope it will be a help to the Stolle family and others who might have this problem."

EGGLESS, MILKLESS, BUTTERLESS CAKE

1 cup cold water
1 tsp. soda
1 cup sugar
1/3 cup shortening
1/4 tsp. salt
1 tsp. cinnamon
1/4 tsp. nutmeg
1 tsp. baking powder
2 cups flour
2 cups raisins

Dissolve soda in water and set aside. Mix flour, salt, cinnamon, nutmeg, baking powder and raisins and set aside. In large mixing bowl, cream together sugar and shortening. Add flour mixture, little at a time and water, gradually and beat two minutes. Divide batter into two 9-inch cake pans and bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes.

Lorene also wrote, "I don't know if this is what Mrs. Hinson is asking for or not, but we love this as our evening dessert."

FRUIT SOUP

2 cups mixed dried fruit (12-oz. package) such as currents, raisins, prunes, pears, apricots, peaches or apples
3 cups water (half-fruit juice may be used)
1/2 lemon, sliced
1 tbsp. tapioca
1/4 tsp. salt
1/2 to 2/3 cup sugar
1 stick cinnamon

Mix ingredients and cook in a 2-qt. saucepan (I like my slow cooker for this) 30 to 40 minutes or until fruit is tender. Serve hot or cold. Serves four.

And, another from Lorene.

JELLIED FRUIT SOUP

3/4 cup cherry juice
3/4 cup pineapple juice
1/2 cup orange juice
2½ tbsps. lemon juice
2 tbsps. plain gelatin
1/2 cup cold water
1 cup boiling water
1/4 cup sugar

Combine fruit juices. Soften gelatin in the 1/2 cup cold water, then dissolve with sugar in the 1 cup boiling water. Combine with fruit juices and chill. At serving time, break up with a fork and serve in bouillon cups or cocktail glasses. Makes four to six servings.

Grace Davis, Lubbock, would appreciate a recipe for a dip. She wrote, "I don't know the name of it, but it is made with pork sausage and processed American cheese (loaf-type).

Grace also wrote, "I enjoy cooking very much, especially for my husband (Grace is a diabetic and says she has to watch what she eats)."

Here is Grace's recipe.

PARTY POPCORN

12 cups popped popcorn
1 cup almonds
1 cup pecans or any other nuts desired

In double boiler, mix 1/2 cup packed brown sugar, ½ cup melted butter, 1/2 tsp. salt. Cook over boiling water until sugar melts. Set aside.

Have a 13 x 10 x 2-in. Stir in nuts and bake 10-15 minutes at 350 degrees. Stir once or twice. When nuts are slightly brown, add popcorn and nuts. Pour sugar over this, and bake 10 minutes at 350 degrees, stirring once. Cool. Store in tight container.

Grace calls this recipe "Sad Cake" but vouches that it's delicious.

SAD CAKE

1 box brown sugar (Grace uses light brown)
2 cups prepared dry biscuit mix
1/2 cup cooking oil
4 eggs

Mix together, then add 1 cup coconut (angel flake) and 1 cup pecans, 1 tsp. vanilla. Bake in a pan about 9 x 13 x 2-inches for about 25 minutes or until good and brown. Let set awhile (until it falls). Cut in squares. (Note: Grace says this cake is called "Sad" because it is! It is supposed to fall and makes a cookie-like dessert.)

Grace also sent the following.

BATTER FOR "DIFFERENT" FRIED CHICKEN

2½ or 3 lb. fryer, cut up

Beat together: 1 egg, 1 cup milk and set aside.

Combine 2 tsps. garlic salt, 1 tsp. paprika, 1/4 tsp. sage (or poultry seasoning), 1 tsp. black pepper.

Put last four ingredients in a paper bag. Shake chicken in seasoned flour; dip chicken pieces in egg mixture; then shake in flour mixture again. Fry in deep hot fat in an electric skillet (if you have one).

Mrs. J. Storrs, Lubbock, would like a recipe for "Black Forest Cake." She wrote, "I know that this cake is too rich to make very often. But I'd like the recipe to use for very special occasions."

Our readers are amazing! Someone — unfortunately we failed to get the reader's name — actually had the recipe for the Gridiron's famed blueberry muffins and sent it (oh, lucky us!). Thanks to this ingenious person.

BLUEBERRY MUFFINS

1 stick oleomargarine
2 eggs
1/3 can of blueberries
1½ cups sugar
1 tbsp. baking powder
1/2 cup salad oil
1 tbsp. Butavan flavoring (buy at Watson Institutional Foods)
3 cups flour
1 cup buttermilk
1 tsp. soda

Drain blueberries and save juice. Mix oil and oleomargarine. Add sugar, eggs, flour, Butavan, baking soda and baking powder. Add buttermilk, juice, and gently stir in berries. Grease muffin pan and bake at 400 degrees for 18 to 20 minutes. It is difficult to say how many muffins this will make, due to the fact that pan sizes vary, also some people will want to make small muffins and others, large.

Send tips, recipes and requests to: Reader's Exchange, Family News Department, Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 491, Lubbock, Tx. 79408. Recipes printed are not tested by the Family News Department.

BETSEY CLARK

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I always believed that a personal letter was a confidential communication between myself and the person I was writing.

Several weeks ago, it became apparent that many letters which I had written to a member of the family had been sent to relatives. Each person put his own interpretation on the statements I had made, and before I knew it I was defending myself against people who had no business seeing the letters in the first place.

When I telephoned the party to whom I had originally written and expressed my surprise at her lack of integrity for passing around my personal letters without permission, she replied, "Your childishness and immaturity are shocking! Your letters are so amusing I thought you'd be flattered that I considered them too good to keep for myself!"

I leave it to you, Ann Landers. Am I "childish and immature"? — Sold Out In Sandusky

Dear Sand: Bull-feathers! The guilty party is trying to get off the hook by buttering you up. Don't fall for it.

A personal letter should never be passed on to a third set of eyes without permission of the writer. Her breach of confidence was a betrayal.

Dear Ann Landers: You once printed a definition of class. I loved it. And now can you come up with a definition of charm? This is another elusive quality that I have never been able to nail down. Do try. — I Read You In Caracas, Venezuela

Dear Caracas: Thanks for the challenge. I'll do my best.

Charm walks on art-gum soles. It is gentle, but it can pack a wallop like a bag of wet cement.

Charm has a magical quality that defrosts, disarms, delights and fascinates. It is not a sudden gush of sweetness that can be turned off and on like a faucet. It is woven subtly into the fabric of the personality, like a silver thread. It glistens. It shines, and it wears well. For months. For years. Forever.

Dear Ann Landers: I know you won't print this letter because you will be able to tell from the handwriting that I am not a grown-up person. I am going to write it anyway and take a chance.

There is so much trouble in the world today what we need is something to make people feel better. Everyone wants to be liked, no matter who he is or what he has. So why don't all you readers write on a piece of paper, "I like you," and send it to somebody who needs to be cheered up? (This means almost everybody.) No one should sign a name. Let the person wonder.

Before you say it is a crazy idea, just think of how many lives would be brightened by getting that message in the mail. — An Idea From St. Louis

Dear St. Louis: I like your idea, and I like YOU, too. You must be quite a person to have thought of it. I hope lots of "I-like-you" messages go out today.

Air Circulation Saves Energy

COLLEGE STATION (Special) — Convection ovens can save energy, they cook faster, and they cook at lower temperatures — but shop around buying one, a home economist says.

Price, performance, capacity and other features vary considerably among models on the market, so consumers should compare models and consider their own needs in shopping for a range, Lillian Chenoweth advises.

Mrs. Chenoweth is a family resource management specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Unlike the microwave oven, the convection oven is not a new way of cooking.

However, it's now more readily available to non-professionals.

Bakers and chefs have long used convection ovens due to evenness of browning.

Convection ovens — portable or full-size — use a fan to provide forced circulation of air inside the oven as it is being heated.

Just as a cold winter wind makes one feel colder (the wind-chill factor), the same principle works in the oven as the fan moves hot air.

Most preparation times are 20-30 percent less for convection ovens than with conventional ovens.

Also, full-size convection ovens generally cook with temperatures 40 degrees lower than conventional ovens.

Manufacturers claim that convection ovens save up to 50 percent energy — compared with conventional ovens, although the portable convection models may not save as much.

Extension Service Provides Program

COLLEGE STATION (Special) — Community officials can obtain information on financing certain development projects through the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

This service is known as the Federal Assistance Program Retrieval System (FAPRS — pronounced "Fappers").

FAPRS makes available more than 1,000 sources of federal funds listed in the Catalogue of Federal Domestic Assistance. These listings are on computer tape in Washington, D.C., and the Extension Service has access to it through a remote computer terminal at Texas A&M University.

Jones, a community development specialist, says an Extension agent or specialist initiating the search needs the city's name, population, address and telephone number. He also needs to know if the city is incorporated, what county it's in, and the funds' intended purpose.

Urgent request for computer assistnace may be obtained within hours by contacting Jones at College Station (713/845-4445).

To Your Good Health

By PAUL DONOHUE, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I had a painful tailbone after a fall on my behind. I went to my doctor. He ordered x-rays, told me everything was fine, just to go home, take some aspirins, apply some heat and stay off my feet for a couple of days. Where do I go from here? Why do doctors think a few aspirins are the cure for everything? — M.V.S.

There are misconceptions about backaches. One is that every backache means something in the spine is broken. The simple truth is more than 80 percent of all backaches are caused by muscles, not the bony spine proper.

The jolt you got from the fall you had may have caused some muscle inflammation or caused the muscles to go into spasm. Spasm is a protective reaction of such tissue.

Where do you go from here? Why not follow your doctor's advice? It works. This is not to say that anyone who suffers a fall followed by painful symptoms should not see their doctor. The x-rays were precautionary to determine if anything besides muscles were involved.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I developed a fungus infection in one of my nails. I am told that complete removal of the nail is necessary. I have heard of medicine for this, the kind you can take by mouth. Can you explain? — Mrs. R.W.

First of all, nail fungus is one of the most difficult to get rid of.

Indeed, there are anti-fungal medicines that can be taken by mouth. They are effective, but sometimes must be taken over a long period and they are not without potential unpleasant side effects. However, this is usually the only real cure available. Nail removal is not usually the answer.

For a discussion of nails, see the booklet, "Solving Your Nail Problems." For a copy, send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Our 10-year-old son has known since age three where babies come from. Now he has asked how they get there. We are at a loss for words. He is definitely mature enough to understand and accept the answers. But not being very good with such explanations we are afraid of giving him wrong impressions about the facts of life. Is there a book in children's language we could get for him to read? It would be so much easier to answer specific questions he may have after reading a professional explanation. Also, we want to be sure he has a clean and healthy attitude about sex. — Mrs. M.P.

There are excellent books in most bookstores that will fill his needs. I hesitate to suggest one in particular. It would be best to look these books over for yourself to be sure the one you pick deals effectively with your particular concerns.

Your plan to let him read such a book, leaving yourselves available for specific follow-up questions, is a good one. Parents are the best teachers of clean and healthy attitudes in this and other matters.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Recently, something happened that disturbed me. My husband and I had just finished having intercourse, during which I experienced a climax. When I got up from my bed my vision became impaired so that I could not see at all. It lasted a few minutes and I got weak and felt strange. After lying down a few seconds it went away. It still worries me. When it happened I could only see one number on the digital clock in the room. Should I see a doctor or wait to see if it happens again? — Y.Y.

Visual disturbance that occurs after physical activity suggests a blood circulation problem. That should be investigated. Do not wait for a repeat incident. What happened might have been a T.I.A. (transient ischemic attack), which can be the forerunner of a stroke.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Could having two bladder infections in four months delay my monthly menstrual period? — A.W.

Bladder infections should have no effect on menstrual periods.

Dear Dr. Donohue: What happens when you have too much air in your stomach? What causes it? — K.A.

Usually you burp. Most of the excess air is from swallowing it while eating.

NOTE TO MRS. M.M.: Ticrynafen is a newer anti-hypertensive (high blood pressure) and diuretic (water-release) drug. So far as I know it is effective and safe. Its potential side effects are comparable to those from the more familiar thiazide medicines.

Do you often have a stomach ache? If so, your stomach may not be the real trouble spot. The booklet, "Stomach and Other Abdominal Pains: A Checklist," tells you why. For a copy, write to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Hints From Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I have a big problem with a waffle iron that originally was my mother's. It was in good condition until I messed it up.

The last time I baked waffles the batter stuck to the plates. Since I could not remove all of the batter, I was told to apply unsalted shortening and plug the appliance into the electrical outlet. I ended up having a house full of smoke and the waffle iron was even worse.

The waffle plates were removed and I cleaned them with a brush, immersed them and boiled them in water with liquid laundry detergent, off and on for a few days.

Finally a transmission shop cleaned them in a fluid which they use to clean car parts. To me, the plates now look worse.

Please, Heloise, do you know of anyway that these waffle plates can be cleaned and be safe to use again?

Thanks for any help you oan give. — Estelle Lipnicki

Maybe your waffle iron needs tempering again. We suggest that you do the following:

Don't go to the trouble of greasing the waffle iron with unsalted fat, instead take a slice of bread, grease it on both sides with unsalted fat (never use salted fat on your waffle iron) and lay it in your iron, close the lid and let it brown.

This is a great way to temper a waffle iron because the little squares need something, like greased bread, to hold the grease on them.

Now take the bread out of the iron and give it to the birds or just crumble it and use it in salad.

Many restaurants use canning-type paraffin on waffle irons. Here's how:

After heating your iron, rub a small amount of wax over both sides, then pour in the batter.

After it has thoroughly cooked, remove and discard the first waffle.

Now your iron has been tempered and is ready for use. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

It sometimes is difficult to give that "spoonful" of medicine without a mishap.

I measure out the prescribed dosage and pour it into a one-or two-ounce glass. The medicine is so much easier to take this way — no spilling! Great for youngsters and older folks alike. — Mrs. M. Schopper

DEAR HELOISE:

To paint around windows, cut newspaper into even strips about two and a half inches wide.

Dip them in water and press on the glass close to the wood frame.

When the painted frames are dry, moisten the newspaper with a well dampened sponge and it will be removed easily. — J. Wierman

DEAR HELOISE:

I crumbled the rubber backs of my bathroom rugs by putting them in the dryer but otherwise they are perfect.

I got a brain storm and backed them with pieces cut off of thermo (rubber) backed drapes I had saved but hadn't found a use for.

I cut them to fit the rug, fabric side next to the rug, and stitched. This put the rubberized side next to the floor.

It worked just great — non-skid, washable and gives that needed body. — Rita Bickford

DEAR HELOISE:

I found an easy way to cover up a burned spot on the carpet caused by a cigarette.

I cut the burned area out of the rug, being careful to cut only what needed to be removed.

I then cut out enough of the nap from a piece of leftover carpet to match the size of the hole.

After putting epoxy glue (that all-purpose white glue would work too) into the cigarette hole, I firmly pressed the nap into it.

You've told us well, and we love you for it. What a great hint, especially now that the holiday parties are over, because I'll bet a fortune cookie some readers are faced with similar carpet disasters as a result of all the celebrating.

Did you know that if you don't have any leftover carpet scraps around, you can gather some "fuzz" from around the baseboards or other inconspicious places and glue it into the cleaned-out burn spot? — Hugs, Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

For the woman who lives alone and has a mouse in her house, but is deathly afraid to even look at it, much less carry it out, here's an alternative.

Use a dab of bait (I use peanut butter) and set the trap on a shoe box lid.

As soon as I see (with a quick glance) that the mouse has been caught (and is really dead), I fold a newspaper in half and drop it over the lid.

I gently lift the whole contents, trap and all, and drop it in the open garbage can.

Mission accomplished! — Marilyn Johnson.

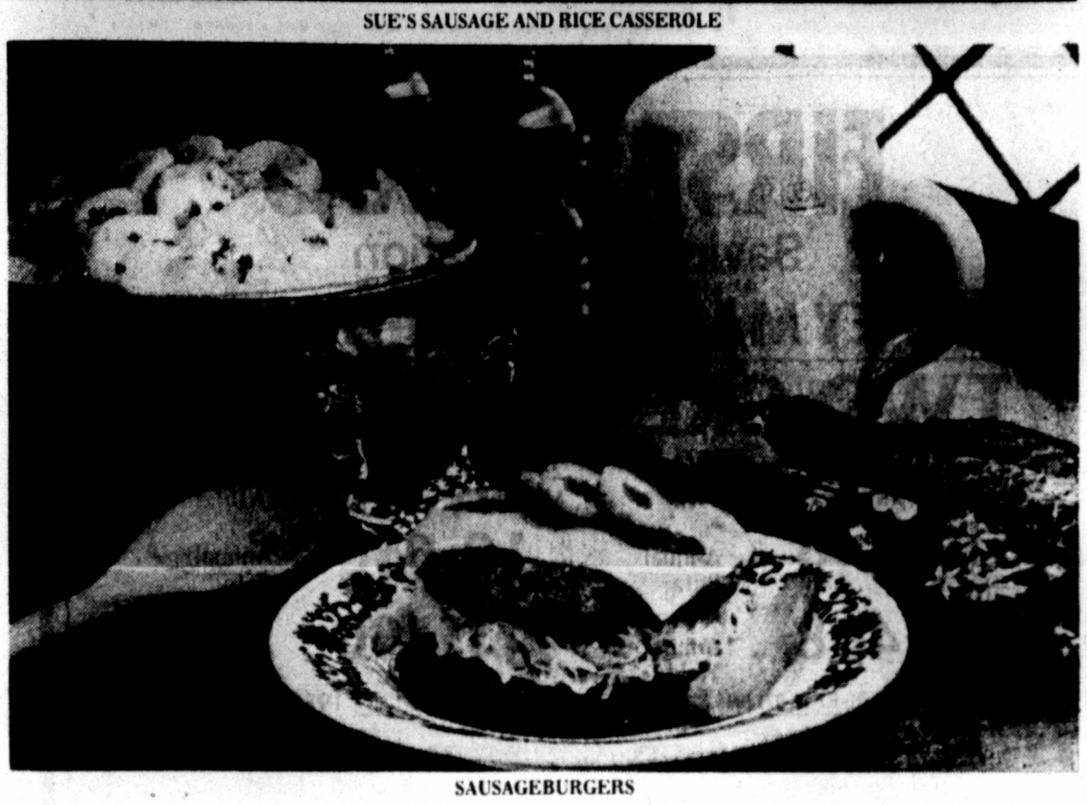
SUE'S SAUSAGE AND RICE CASSEROLE



SAUSAGEBURGERS

Sausage Recipes Stretch Food Dollars

By JEANNE LIVELY
Family News Staff

With the cost of ground beef continuing to rise, why not try sausage?

Homemakers will appreciate the savings of cooking with sausage. A pound of top quality sausage is only about half as expensive as ground beef and wastage is far less. Using sausage in recipes that call for ground beef will stretch food dollars.

Besides, there seems to be so many tasty ways that sausage can be used!

SUE'S SAUSAGE AND RICE CASSEROLE
(Recipe Courtesy of Owens Country Style Sausage)

1 lb. sausage
1 4 cup chopped green pepper
1 2 cup chopped celery
1 large onion, chopped
4½ cups boiling water
2 pkgs. chicken noodle soup, dry mix
1 cup uncooked instant rice
12-oz. can mushrooms

Brown sausage, pepper, celery and onion together in a skillet. Drain. Combine remaining ingredients, add the meat mixture and bake in a greased casserole at 350 degrees for one hour. Serves eight generously. Delicious with chilled green asparagus!

OH BOY FARM BOY
(Recipe courtesy of Owens Country Style Sausage)

1½ lbs. sausage
2-3 tbsps. water
1 tsp. butter
3 4 cup washed, drained sauerkraut
1 2 tsp. carraway seed
6 slices Swiss cheese
6 hamburger buns, toasted and buttered
18 slices pimento stuffed green olives

Make 6 patties. Place with water in cold frying pan. Cover tightly and cook slowly 5 minutes. Remove cover and pour off drippings. Cook until brown. Melt butter in saucepan. Add kraut and seed. Cook slowly until heated through. Place patties on broiler rack. Top each pattie with a slice of Swiss cheese. Broil 3-inches from heat until cheese is melted slightly. Place 2 tbsps. sauerkraut mixture on bottom half of bun. Place sausage pattie and cheese on top. Top each with 3 slices of olive.

SAUSAGEBURGERS
(Recipe courtesy of Owens Country Style Sausage)

Fry sausage patties. When almost done put Mozzarella or Monterey Jack cheese on top to soften. Add all the usual trimmings — lettuce, tomato, mustard or mayonnaise.

By Oswald Jacoby

A lot of players would overcall one spade, but the student doubled. He just hoped that the Professor who sat South could bid that suit.

Clubs were led and continued. The Professor ruffed the third club and noted that his only problem was to pick up the queen of trumps. The ordinary player might go right after trumps but the Professor decided there was no need for haste in that department. Instead he led a diamond to dummy's king (needless to say West ducked). Then he cashed dummy's king and queen of hearts. He didn't think that the suit was going to break 6-1. East would probably have shown any six-card heart suit.

Next came the five of diamonds to his 10 and West's ace. West returned the nine of diamonds and East didn't bother to play his jack so the Professor knew that East had been dealt four diamonds. Now the Professor, who had discarded dummy's last heart on that diamond led his ace of hearts and ruffed it in dummy.

At this point it was all over, but the mopping up. West had started with two hearts, three diamonds, four or five clubs and three or four spades.

Carlsbad Out As N-Waste Disposal Site

CARLSBAD (AP) — The Department of Energy announcement that it was canceling, at least for now, plans to establish a nuclear waste disposal site near here has brought reactions ranging from dismay to delight from those who have been close to the issue for a decade.

Roxanne Kartchner, leader of the Carlsbad Nuclear Waste Forum, the main Carlsbad group opposing the project, told the Carlsbad Current-Argus in an interview that she was delighted.

"If it is done, it is because it's President Carter's decision to look into the safety of the program," she said. "It gives me a lot more confidence in the government if it uses a sane approach and looks for the best site."

Carlsbad Mayor Walter Gerrells, a prime supporter of the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant, said he hates "to see this action taken after eight years of study. The site here met all criteria as far as environmental safeguards go.

"I understand President Carter wants a site which would be NRC-licensed and be available for spent fuel rods. I hear he wants to look at sites in the state of Washington, in Nevada and the site here," Gerrells said.

The Department of Energy's budget report included $22 million for fiscal 1981 for "site protection" by lease acquisition "so as not to preclude its future use." The project, which has been authorized under defense waste management in the past, would come under the commercial waste management budget.

State Rep. James Otts, D-Eddy, said reports on exactly what had happened in Washington varied.

"Apparently WIPP is dead — but the future of a commercial repository in New Mexico is still very much alive," Otts said.

He said the president's budget removes military waste from the Carlsbad site, "which would take control of the site away from U.S. Rep. Mel Price's Armed Services Committee."

Price has opposed Nuclear Regulatory Commission licensing of the facility or giving New Mexico a say over the project.

But, Otts said, "If Congress should approve, the Carlsbad site will continue to be developed and explored, although the scope will be changed to commercial disposal. With that site characterization, it may take five years for NRC licensing, but the original proposal was going to take several years anyway."

Rep. Jack Skinner, D-Eddy, was not as optimistic.

"I am dismayed because I think this is another indication of indecision in the Carter administration concerning the energy crisis," he said. "I suspect the administration is going to continue to flounder on the energy issue at least until after the November elections.

"The economic loss to Carlsbad certainly is not my prime concern here, although that is significant. My prime concern is that the administration does not seem to be moving toward solving the energy problem the nation faces."

Chamber Optimistic About Success Of 'Austin Sales Blitz'

The "Austin sales blitz," in which 30 Lubbockites traveled to Austin to encourage various associations to bring conventions here, is going very well, say Lubbock Chamber of Commerce officials.

Judy Rogers, executive director of the Visitors and Convention Bureau said Tuesday the Lubbock people were enthusiastic. "Everybody jumped out of bed, grabbed some breakfast and began making calls early," Miss Rogers said.

She predicted that the number of calls made would hit the 225-250 mark. There were 10 two-person teams making calls Tuesday and more were coming down Wednesday, she said.

The team of Lubbock residents arrived in Austin Monday for a three-day trip to meet with executive directors of associations, give them literature about Lubbock and invite them to consider Lubbock as a possible convention site, Logan said.

ACTIVIST INTERROGATED

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — A Czech human rights activist was interrogated by police who then told him to walk the 31 miles back to Prague, emigrant sources said here Wednesday. They said activist Rudolf Battek was interrogated for a few hours on Jan. 25 along with Ivan Kyncl, the son of former Washington correspondent Karel Kyncl, at the police station at Dolni Bouzov.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

THIS WEEK'S DOMESTIC COTTON USE report for December was called neutral to slightly bearish by textile industry sources.

The increase from year-earlier consumption narrowed for the second consecutive month. About 21,857 running bales were consumed daily in December, up slightly from the 21,735 bales used daily in the corresponding period a year earlier and down from about 24,009 bales consumed daily in November.

This was the ninth consecutive month in which consumption was up from year-earlier levels. However, sources said only slight increases in December and November might indicate a leveling off in demand for cotton or for textiles and apparel in general.

But the same sources said they expect consumption to remain above year-earlier levels at least through the first quarter of 1980. After that, they said, mills might begin feeling decreased demand from the retail level if a recession reduces demand for textiles and apparel.

ONE MILL SOURCE REPORTED HE ALREADY is receiving requests to slow down shipments to some retail outlets. This, he said, was to allow the retailers to make adjustments in their inventories.

Other sources said mill consumption in December was even higher than the figures indicated because Christmas fell in the middle of the week, resulting in more vacation time than a year earlier, when Christmas fell on Monday.

Sources consider the drop in consumption in December from November normal because of the holidays.

Calculations by the National Cotton Council indicate cotton consumption in December was at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 6.4 million bales (480 pounds). This was about the same as for calendar year 1979 and slightly higher than in calendar year 1978.

Cotton's share of total fiber consumption, however, dropped to 24.5 percent, down from 25.2 percent in 1978. Man-made fibers' share increased to 74.5 percent, up from 73.8 percent.

Total fiber consumption increased about 3.5 percent to the equivalent of slightly more than 26 million bales.

DELEGATES TO THE NATIONAL COTTON Council's annual convention this week at New Orleans voted to ask the secretary of agriculture for a voluntary paid land diversion program on at least 10 percent of the 1980 estimated cotton acreage.

They also adopted an amended resolution saying that a set-aside program for cotton should be established only if the secretary can assure that domestic cotton production will be large enough to maintain at least the current U. S. market share in world cotton trade.

The NCC voted to encourage all cotton organizations, the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health, and the U. S. Department of Agriculture to increase research funding by $9 million during the next 24 months to identify and eliminate the causative agent of byssinosis in cotton dust.

Sen. Russell Long, D-La., told the convention that the Carter administration has not done enough to help farmers after the partial embargo of grain shipments to the Soviet Un ion.

Long said the cost of an embargo should be shared equally throughout the economy and should not rest solely on farmers.

He also said farmers need an advance guarantee that they will receive priority treatment in energy supply allocation.

MEANWHILE, THE COTTON BOARD, meeting in conjunction with the convention, decided that Cotton Inc. should use its "own funds" account to repay the board for the costs of an investigation last fall of CI employees.

Cotton Inc. and hired outside help last fall conducted an investigation of employees suspected of mailing articles critical of CI president J. Dukes Wooters. The investigation was paid for out of producer checkoff funds allocated to Cotton Inc. by the Cotton Board.

The New Orleans action was taken in response to a USDA request that the Cotton Board study CI's investigation to make sure no intimidation had been used.

Glenn Stephens, a member of the Cotton Board, said the board was satisfied there had been no intimidation.

In other action, the Cotton Board also said it found that Cotton Inc. had not opened an office in London. The board acted in response to a suggestion that CI had opened a new office without Cotton Board or USDA approval.

The board did say that Cotton Inc. had a person in London and had an option to lease office space. The option has been extended to April, the board said.

LATE COMMISSION HOUSE SELLING against what was reported to have been trade buying spelled a mixed close Wednesday for cotton futures, with nearbys ending up 17 to off 23 points and October through March in the new-crop months showing losses of 45 to 23 points.

Estimated volume was a heavy 17,500 lots. Open interest going into the session again was at a new all-time high of 52,255 lots, up 704 from the previous day.

Floor brokers said nervous local selling was tempered by trade buying of March to close that month up 17 points at 84.05 cents, the only gainer.

Trade selling and local profit taking edged prices lower early in the session. This gave way to renewed commission house buying and nearbys moved out to gains of as much as 100 points, registering new contract highs, before falling back mostly into the loss column.

Some sources said shorts getting out of March — where the open interest stands at almost 1.6 million bales — may have been a factor in its performance. The March-May difference closed on the board at 66 points, down from 157 last Friday, and there are those who believe March may continue to close in on May.

THE MARKET GENERALLY IGNORED the December consumption report Tuesday and seemed to pay little or no attention to it Wednesday.

Most traders said the trade deficit figures released Tuesday afternoon by the U. S. Commerce Department had no effect on the market, but a few disagreed.

Some said the cotton market was one of only a few still open when the figures were released and added that there were those who bought the market on the data, which they interpreted as inflationary. The trade deficit in December totaled $3.08 billion, sharply above expectations.

Trading on Telcot was somewhat sporadic, following erratic moves in the futures market, and totaled 13,994 bales. Activity was dull after futures ended mostly lower.

The average price was 56.11 cents, an average of 1,423 points over the loan. Price quotes ended unchanged after having been up 25 points much of the day.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Talk of continuing export interest in U.S. grains and reports that the longshoremen have begun loading a ship bound for Russia helped grain and soybean futures prices close significantly higher Wednesday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Traders said reports that the International Longshoremen's Union agreed to load one bulk carrier in New Orleans with grain for the Soviet Union provided psychological support for prices, which then continued higher with commercial selling and buying.

As prices rose, technical market factors came into play, with buying continuing to feed on itself in anticipation of still higher prices. Rumors that a Soviet trade mission was in Argentina to purchase wheat and corn helped propel prices higher because traders reasoned that Argentina's traditional customers would be forced to look to the U.S. for grains.

In addition, rumors of new Mexican interest in U.S. wheat and corn added fuel to a market anxious for bullish news.

At the close, soybeans were 3 1/2 to 6 cents higher, March $6.66 3/4; wheat was 4 1/2 to 10 cents higher, March, $4.62; corn was 1 1/4 to 2 3/4 cents higher, March $2.75 1/2; and oats were 3/4 to 2 1/4 cents higher, March, $1.47.

Livestock Futures Again Higher

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 40 to 142 points higher paced by February, which posted the daily limit in its closing range Wednesday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. Sales totaled 36,207 lots.

Futures reached new daily highs late on local and commission house buying. Some support was attributed to mostly firmer live markets and steady cash beef at noon. Stops were touched off on the climb. The mixed trend early seemed to be evening up ahead of the cattle inventory report.

There have been 385 deliveries thus far. Wholesale beef was unchanged at 97¼ to 100¼ cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash cattle were weak to up $1 with the best top $68 per hundredweight. Slaughter was 118,000 head. About 7,800 head are expected today at the major markets.

Cattle and calves on farms and ranches on Jan. 1 totaled 110,960,000 head, basically unchanged from the 110,864,000 head a year earlier, the U. S. Department of Agriculture reported.

Initial comments on the cattle inventory report by Chicago Mercantile Exchange floor traders were mostly bullish.

They expect futures to open higher today based on the virtually unchanged total cattle and calves versus a year ago.

Feeder cattle futures closed 110 to 140 higher paced by May. Volume was 4,057 lots.

April and May reached limit gains before midday on scattered local and commission house buying.

Rigsby To Seek Election To School Post

By MARY ALICE ROBBINS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

School trustee Deaton Rigsby said Wednesday that he will seek election to the Place 3 school board seat he has held for the past seven months.

The 47-year-old independent insurance agent was appointed to the school board in June 1979 to fill the vacancy created by the death of Charles Waters. He was selected from a field of 12 candidates and was sworn into office June 28.

Speaking at a mid-morning news conference, Rigsby said he has enjoyed serving on the school board and would like to serve a full term.

"We have an excellent school system," Rigsby said, "but we can't stand still." He noted that the obvious goal of a school system is to provide an environment and atmosphere conducive to quality education and said that he would always be working to fulfill that goal.

According to Rigsby, the budget will be the most important issue facing the school board during the next six years. "Inflation has been eating away at our pocketbooks," he said.

This year's budget for the school district totals more than $51 million, Rigsby said. The district is spending about $2 million annually on operation, ownership and depreciation of buses used in the desegregation plan, he said, noting that the school system would be faced with spending a lot more money if it is forced to implement districtwide busing.

Rigsby, who describes himself as a fiscal conservative, said he has pushed for a bus maintenance facility here and expressed hope that the facility will be built in the future. School officials have estimated that construction of such a facility would cost approximately $270,000, but Rigsby said the district should realize savings on its maintenance cost.

The school trustee praised the Lubbock Exemplary Academic Program started last fall at Lubbock High School, saying he believes it is working.

He predicted that enrollment at Lubbock High would go up to 2,000 within the next few years.

Although this will be Rigsby's first campaign for the school board, he has been involved in local politics in the past. He served on the city council from 1968 until 1972, when he made an unsuccessful run for the office of mayor.

A Texas Tech graduate, Rigsby has lived in Lubbock since 1950. He is president of the Rape Crisis Center and is on the executive committee for Texas Boys Ranch.

CROP FAIR TO GOOD

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says the nation's winter wheat crop is rated "fair to mostly good" in the major production areas. As of Jan. 27, new precipitation "improved survival conditions for winter wheat" in much of the nation, officials said Tuesday in a weekly report on weather and crop conditions.

CBS Takes Prime Time Ratings Lead Over ABC

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS won the networks' prime-time ratings race for the fifth week in a row, and claimed first place in the three-way competition for the season as a whole for the first time since April 19, 1976.

CBS' grip on first place was not a tight one. ABC, which began its prime-time season a week ahead of the opposition and had led the race since early fall, said it was still No. 1, despite CBS' recent surge.

CBS' first-place finish for the week ending Jan. 27 was clear-cut. The leader's average rating for the week was 21.7 to 20.3 for ABC and 16.4 for NBC.

The networks say that means that in an average prime-time minute during the week, 21.7 percent of the homes in the country with television were tuned to CBS.

But for the season to date, CBS said it led ABC with averages of 19.5 to 19.4, while ABC's calculation was 19.5-19.3, with ABC first.

In any case, CBS did it in the most recent survey with five of the week's 10 highest-rated programs, including No. 1 "Dukes of Hazzard" and "60 Minutes" in second place.

The rating for "Dukes of Hazzard" was 29.8, Nielsen says that means of all the TV-equipped homes in the country, 29.8 percent saw at least part of the situation comedy.

A new ABC series, "Tenspeed and Brownshoe," scored its first time out, finishing eighth. And CBS got a boost from a couple of specials, "The People's Choice Awards Show," which finished tied for 11th with a CBS regular, "Archie Bunker's Place," and a General Electric Theater production, "Once Upon a Family," which was No. 16.

ABC's revival of last season's "Battlestar Galactica" series, "Galactica: 1980," did not fare as well, finishing 31st for the week, nor did the first installment in NBC's miniseries, "The Martian Chronicles." It was No. 39.

NBC's Tom Snyder was on the air twice during the week, once as host of a special, "Tom Snyder's Celebrity Spotlight," No. 36 in the ratings, and again as anchorman for the network's "Prime Time Saturday," which was next to last in the ratings, No. 65.

NBC had the week's five least-watched programs, starting with No. 62 "Shirley," and followed by "The Best of Saturday Night Live," a movie, "Marriage is Alive and Well," "Prime Time Saturday," and a political announcement by presidential candidate Lyndon Larouche.

Here are the week's Top 10 shows:

Actor Listed Fair Following Surgery

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Burt Lancaster was in fair condition Wednesday after being taken off the critical list following 11 hours of abdominal surgery, a spokesman for Cedars-Sinai Medical Center said.

Robert Powell said the 66-year-old Lancaster underwent what he described as "successful and very intricate abdominal surgery" last Wednesday.

Powell said Lancaster, who won an Academy Award as best actor for his performance as the womanizing preacher in "Elmer Gantry," was taken off the critical list Tuesday and may be allowed to go home by this weekend.

PBS' 'Bill Moyers' Journal' Ready To Begin Seventh Season

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Moyers returned to public television last season after two years at CBS, and quickly re-established his "Bill Moyers' Journal" as one of the medium's leading public affairs programs.

The series' seventh season begins tonight at 7 on channel 5, with Moyers clearly as enthusiastic as ever.

"PBS has been a happy home for me," he says, "because it's allowed my curiosity to roam almost at will.

"Because of that, I like to think of the 'Journal' as a kind of archives of Americans in passage through the '70s."

Moyers, 45, begins the new season, appropriately, with a program called "Our Times."

"It's the reflections of a reporter," Moyers says, "who has criss-crossed the country many times, and thinks he has at least one idea of what has happened to us in the last decade, and why."

The "Journal" continues Feb. 7 with a special 90-minute entry, "The World of David Rockefeller," an intimate portrait of the powerful banker and world figure.

"It becomes fairly obvious in the film," Moyers says, "that he uses his name, his bank and his contacts in a way that is unique to banking, and he uses each of those elements to enhance the others.

"The film demonstrates this fusion of the several different roles he plays, and I think it will become clear to the discerning viewer why he has this power, and how he uses it."

Born in Oklahoma and raised in Marshall, Texas, Moyers at one time considered an academic career. He was summoned to Washington, however, by then-Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson, and in 1961 helped organize the Peace Corps.

By the time he left the White House in 1967 to become publisher of the Long Island newspaper Newsday, he had been, among other things, Johnson's press secretary.

Moyers left Newsday to write "Listening to America," an account of his travels across the country, and in 1971, he took that concept to public TV with "Bill Moyers' Journal."

Moyers left PBS in 1976 to become chief correspondent for "CBS Reports," but announced his return to public TV two years later. "I enjoy television journalism most for the versatility that characterized my 'Journal' for five years," he said at the time, "and I return to it for its variety of subject, flexibility of format, and regularity of schedule."

"Bill Moyers' Journal," in 1980, will include expanded political coverage through the presidential election. The Feb. 14 installment, "What's a Party For?" examines the decline of political parties, and the program scheduled for Feb. 21, "Diary of a Dark Horse," profiles John Anderson, the Republican congressman from Illinois competing for his party's presidential nomination.

The Feb. 21 "Journal" will be followed by a half-hour "Reporter's Roundup," during which Moyers and a group of National Public Radio reorters will evaluate campaign politics.

"I feel pretty good about it," Moyers says of the upcoming season. "I never really know how a program works until I see it on the screen, but I have a good feeling about what we've done so far.

"I'm gambling some, and I like that," he says. "And I think the viewer will find the 'Journal' this year interesting for several reasons, including the variety."

In addition to the programs already mentioned, Moyers plans "Barry Commoner and the Politics of Energy" for Feb. 28 and "A Vietnam Retrospective" for March 6.

Moyers continues to produce the weekly series with a modest budget, about $2 million a year.

"We're over-extended and underbudgeted," he says, "but that gives a sense of excitement to what we do. I don't know how long we can keep going like that.

"I'm nervous about the fate of public broadcasting," he says, "because costs are zooming and budget increases are harder and harder to come by."

Moyers, a member of the recent Carnegie Commission on the Future of Public Broadcasting, says non-commercial radio and television face, in addition to the generally tight money situation, a challenge from cable systems and other new forms of program distritubtion.

"I think we'll have to be more commercial," he says. "We ought to find our own way in the world. The public's been generous, but shouldn't be required to provide an indefinite subsidy."

GOP Launches Anti-Demo Ad Campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republicans kicked off a $5 million television advertising blitz against the Democratic-controlled Congress Tuesday, including a commercial portraying a blustery House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill running out of gasoline in his car.

The GOP commercial, designed to imply that Democrats in Congress aren't doing enough to promote increased domestic energy production, stars Ed Steffey, a bulky, silver-haired New York actor who bears a striking resemblance to the House leader from Massachusetts.

In the 60-second commercial, one of four to be aired around the country beginning Friday, Steffey mumbles to himself and shrugs off several attempts by a passenger to tell him he's running out of gas.

Finally, the car stops. "Hey, we're out of gas," the O'Neill character declares as he fumes, grumbles and finally gets out of his car to kick a tire.

The real O'Neill, after viewing a still picture of the actor playing him, told reporters Tuesday he didn't really think the resemblance was that close. "I'm a much handsomer man," O'Neill said.

Swedish Actress Awarded TV Role As Greta Garbo Lookalike

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Kristina Wayborn read a newspaper item last September in her native Sweden announcing a search for a Greta Garbo lookalike to star in a TV Miniseries in Hollywood.

Kristina, blonde, 26 and beautiful, had been told most of her life that she resembled the great Garbo.

She had never seen any of the actress' films which are not released in Sweden nor shown on that country's television stations.

Kristina spent two weeks studying "Camille," "Anna Christie," "Anna Karenina," "Flesh and the Devil," "As You Desire Me," "Ninotchka," "Queen Christina" and others.

The young actress then researched old newspaper clippings, books and magazine stories to learn more about the patron saint of Swedish actresses.

Armed with her knowledge of Garbo, her Swedish accent and a letter of introduction from Bergman, Kristina headed for Hollywood to beard David Wolper and Stan Margulies, producers of "Moviola."

She took Bergman's letter to agents Paul and Walter Kohner, who specialize in foreign performers. They led her to The Burbank Studios where Wolper and Margulies were stunned by her appearance.

After several readings, Kristina was signed to star opposite Gary Bostwick (as John Gilbert, Garbo costar in her silent films) in the two-hour segment subtitled "Silent Lovers" of the six-hour "Moviola" miniseries.

Kristina had Garbo's fragile beauty and coloring but she lacked the young Garbo's chubbiness, outsized hands and enormous feet. Padding, makeup and wardrobe would ameliorate the differences.

In order to heighten her likeness to Garbo, hair stylist Leonard Drake snipped 20 inches from Kristina's hair and darkened it from light to honey blonde. Makeup artist Dick Blair gave her bushy eyebrows and rounded out her face.

Kristina, who has never worked in a film either in Sweden or Hollywood, had posed as Greta the Great before.

After winning her role in the TV miniseries, Kristina was mailed a snapshot of herself "as Garbo" taken by her parents when she was 9. For the photograph she wore dark glasses, a large floppy hat and one of her mother's old coats.

Her current trip to Hollywood was not Kristina's first. She visited movie mecca in 1976 bent on becoming a film actress.

She was turned away by producers but won job as spokeswoman for a series of TV Commercials for a cosmetics manufacturer.

"I returned to Sweden very discouraged," Kristina said in her mobile home dressing room. "It's not easy to put your dreams aside. I'd worked hard and long to become an actress and I had failed in Hollywood.

"I didn't think I would get another chance. Certainly not Garbo. Like her, I am a recluse myself. I live at home with my parents on the island of Oland.

"It's a large house in the woods on the Baltic Sea. I had three horses there. I'm a licensed jockey in Sweden. And when I came here last fall, before I started working in 'Moviola,' I exercised the race horses at Santa Anita.

"I've never had many friends. I spent most of my time with animals. At one time I studied to become a veterinarian and I worked as an assisant to a vet in Sweden.

"Now I find it almost impossible to believe that I am actually playing Garbo in this film. She's more of a legend in Sweden than she is in the United States. Mention her name today and even children in Sweden know who she is. I Don't think young American kids know her.

"It seems peculiar to be playing her in a way. Garbo is my grandmother's age. And, of course, she is still alive.

"I studied her movies to see what she was really like on the screen. I take great pride in this assignment and I'm scared to death. I want my performance to be perfect, but it won't be an imitation. I have to be me.

"After watching many of her old films, I can tell you she never overacted. She is not dated like a lot of the other stars of the '20s and '30s. Her acting is still good and fresh by today's standards.

"I didn't know it at the time, but I will be playing scenes from four of Garbo's movies — 'The Torrent,' 'The Temptress,' 'Camille' and 'The Flesh and the Devil.' In that last one Garbo and Gilbert set a film record with 89 kisses by actual count."

Kristina has become something of an authority on Garbo.

"I'd love to meet her someday," gkristina concluded. "And if she sees the TV show, I hope she knows I played the role with love and care."

Rock Music Star Sues Record Company

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Rock star Donna Summer filed a $10 million lawsuit Tuesday against Casablanca Records and Filmworks, claiming the company used "undue influence, misrepresentation and fraud" to gain exclusive rights to her recording career.

Miss Summer, claiming she was "physically and emotionally ill" when she signed with the company, seeks to break her contract with Casablanca, which released her first major hit, "Love to Love You, Baby," and subsequently distributed her many million-selling albums.

Her suit, filed by attorney Don Engel, alleges Casablanca president Neil Bogart and his wife, Joyce, collaborated on decisions concerning Miss Summer's career at a time when Mrs. Bogart was the singer's manager, an arrangement she says involved conflict of interest.

"Miss Summer claims that the agreements were unfair to her and extremely beneficial to Casablanca," said her spokesman, David Brokaw, "and that she has been damaged by receiving less than fair and reasonable amounts for her services as a recording artist and motion picture performer ...."

Miss Summer, who named the Bogarts as codefendants in her suit, alleged that the couple chose attorneys, accountants and business managers for her at a time when she "was physically and emotionally ill and lacked finances ... whereas Casablanca and the other defendants were sophisticated, experienced and knowledgeable and had unlimited funds to pursue their interests."

She seeks $5 million in actual damages and $5 million in punitive damages and asked the court to nullify all of her contracts with Casablanca. She said the contracts were signed in 1977, '78 and '79.

Miss Summer also asked that Casablanca "be enjoined from interfering with her efforts to have her future recordings distributed by others."

Brokaw said Miss Summer would make no personal comment on the litigation.

Bogart said the lawsuit took him by surprise and expressed hope the singer would decide to stay with Casablanca.

"Donna and Casablanca have enjoyed a fabulously successful relationship in all facets of the entertainment business as evidenced by her numerous gold and platinum albums and many music awards," Bogart said. "... As recently as Sunday night, the collaboration of Casablanca on Donna Summer's television special not only won the time slot but scored one of the highest ratings of any music special.

"We look forward to a continuing and successful relationship together," Bogart said, "covering at least the balance of the three years remaining on her contract."

Miss Summer, the reigning queen of disco rock, was a struggling unknown singer living in Germany when Bogart heard a recording of her "Love to Love You" recording and flew her to the United States. She drew instant attention with the recording, then gained stardom with albums which were million-sellers before their release.

Bogart was credited with orchestrating the initial impact of Miss Summer's career. But Miss Summer also was credited with establishing Casablanca, a tiny record company, as a major force in the recording industry.

Miss Summer later appeared in the company's disco movie, "Thank God It's Friday," which featured her hit song, "Last Dance."

She starred in her first TV special last Sunday night and is nominated for five Grammy Awards, including best rock, pop and rhythm and blues singer and best disco record.

THE SUPERMARKET SHOPPER

By MARTIN SLOANE

What do you do with a refund form for Duncan Hines Cake Mix if you prefer Betty Crocker?

What do you do with all those dog-food coupons if you have a cat?

One of the best ways to trade cash-off coupons and refund is a coupon-club meetings

A coupon club is a group of shoppers who meet regularly to trade copons and refund forms. Their objective is to turn a lot of useless pieces of paper into new money-saving opportunities.

It's not unusual for a club member to arrive at a meeting with $20 worth of unwanted coupons and refund forms and to leave at the end of the evening with $20 worth of new ones that can be turned into big savings the very next morning.

A coupon club will not only multiply your savings. It will also provide you with many new friends and a lot of fun.

This is the first of several columns that will show you how easy it is to start a coupon club. I will also explain how typical meetings are conducted and how to make those meetings more enjoyable and worthwhile.

The first step in starting a coupon club is to pick a date about four weeks in advance for your first meeting.

This will give you sufficient time to get organized and spread word of the meeting. Many clubs have their first meeting on a weekday evening.

Finding members for your club should be easy with so many shoppers interested in coupons and refunds. Here are a few methods you can use:

•Put up signs on bulletin boards at nearby supermarkets. A simple notice is best. For example: "New coupon club being formed. Call Sally for information at 555-0000."

•Ask community newspapers to inform readers that a new coupon club is forming and that you can be contacted for information. You might also consider running a small classified ad containing the same information as the bulletin-board sign.

•Tell a dozen friends and neighbors about the meeting. Ask each of them to bring a friend.

I recommend having 15 to 20 persons at your first meeting. A group of this size is small enought to comfortably control yet large enough for a worthwhile and exciting trading session.

When people call for information, explain that the purpose of the meeting is to trade coupons and refund forms. Inform beginners that there will be a special class for them.

Be sure your directions for reaching the meeting place are easy to follow.

Remind each caller to bring all his or her unwanted coupons and refund forms as well as a business-size envelope.

Next week I will tell you how to make your first meeting a successful one.

For more details on starting and running a coupon club, order a copy of my "Coupon Clipper's Newsletter No. 2: Coupon Clubs." Send 75 cents plus a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Supermarket Shopper, P.O. Box 461, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to aks for newsletter No. 2

Black Youths 'Sit-In' On History Lesson

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Four frightened young black men, 17 and 18 years old, sat down at a lunch counter 20 years ago.

What they did changed the course of American history. What they have become is a history lesson itself.

Friday marks the 20th anniversary of the beginning of the lunch counter sit-ins in Greensboro. Within days, sit-ins for integration of public facilities had spread to 54 cities in nine states. Within a year, more than 100 cities had desegregated some public facilities.

"In sitting down," the late Frank Porter Graham, a one-time Democratic senator from North Carolina, said during the subsequent years of protests, "(the demonstrators) are standing up for the American Dream."

"It took us a while to get the courage to go," Richmond recalled recently. "The manager came and told us to leave; the waitresses told us to leave. When the police arrived, they just stood there. They didn't know what to do.

"I was the most fearful. If you had said 'boo,' I probably would have fallen off the stool," he said.

Richmond, now living in Franklinton, has been unemployed for six months. He has worked in federal jobs programs and does odd jobs. Richmond is the only one of the four who did not complete college.

"A lot of negative things have happened to me since," he said, but added, "If you take the risk, you have to be able to accept the consequences."

For McNeil, "The need for (the sit-ins) was very obvious." On his way home from New York after Christmas, McNeil was refused service at a lunch counter at the Greensboro bus station.

"This disturbed him greatly," said Khazan. "We discussed this. He suggested a boycott, but we didn't know exactly what (to do.)"

The night before the sit-in, Khazan visited his parents. He asked if they would be embarrassed if he got into trouble. "Why?" they asked.

"Because tomorrow we're going to do something that will shake up this town," he replied.

"I had a premonition. ... I had a feeling this was something big, but I didn't have any idea it would have the ramifications it did," Khazan said last week. "We were not trained politically; we knew nothing about law. Everything we knew came from church and from school."

Khazan said his role in the sit-ins was a high spot in his life. He added, however, "I consider my contribution just one drop, no more."

Khazan now lives in New Bedford, Mass., and works with the city's federal jobs program.

When asked whether he would get as involved again, Khazan chuckled and quoted singer B.B. King: "'The things I used to do, Lord, I don't do them no more.'"

McNeil is a stockbroker in Fayetteville. After college he entered the Air Force, rising to the rank of major before he left.

"It taught you an awful lot about life quickly," McNeil said of the sit-ins. "... What essentially we were striving for was the opportunity to do things. We never expected it to be handed to us. To the extent that we've achieved that, it was worthwhile."

Board To Seek Probe Exonerating MacArthur

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The board of directors of the MacArthur Memorial Foundation said Wednesday it will ask for a congressional investigation to prove there was nothing wrong with Gen. Douglas MacArthur accepting $500,000 from the president of the Philippines.

Retired Marine Corps Gen. Norman Anderson, executive director of the foundation, said MacArthur received the money in 1942 as a grant from wartime Philippine President Manuel Quezon for "almost five years of outstanding service to the Philippine nation."

MacArthur, World War II commander in the Pacific Theater, died April 5, 1964, and is entombed in Norfolk. Last weekend, his widow and more than 700 friends and wartime comrades gathered here to mark the 100th anniversary of his birth.

The MacArthur Foundation has known "as a matter of routine about the gracious grant from President Quezon," the foundation's Board of Directors said in a statement Wednesday.

The board said it will ask for a congressional investigation into the matter "to the end of presenting the full, unassailable truth about Gen. MacArthur."

"The charge that Gen. MacArthur ever accepted money for reasons other than those totally honorable is ridiculous," Anderson said. "This must not be permitted to go unchallenged."

Questions about the money were raised in a recent copyright story in the Lexington (Ky.) Herald-Leader.

The newspaper said questions about whether the payment affected MacArthur's later decision to evacuate Quezon from an island under siege by the Japanese were discussed by historians attending a conference in Lexington.

Although the 1938 U.S. Army Code prohibited officers from accepting gifts, the matter was referred to Washington under the requirement that any "unusual arrangement" be approved by higher authority, Anderson said.

The payment was subsequently approved by President Roosevelt and the secretaries of the Interior and Defense.

The grant totaling $640,000 to MacArthur and three unnamed aides was made "in recognition of outstanding service" during the years 1935 through 1941, Anderson said. MacArthur was not called to active duty in the army until November 1941.

MacArthur had been an adviser to Quezon for several years before World War II, Anderson said.

"In light of the length of that service and the unparalleled quality of that service, the grant was not excessive," he said.

Cities Service Joins Other Oil Companies With Profits Boost

By The Associated Press

Cities Service Co. said Wednesday it earned $347.5 million in 1979, 195 percent above its earnings of a year earlier when the shutdown of some of its industrial chemical operations cut its profits.

The report by the nation's 17th-largest oil company followed similar announcements of higher earnings 1979 at other major oil companies as oil prices spiraled.

The Cities Service report was coupled with a statement by President Charles J. Waidelich that his company's earnings would help pay for such projects as oil exploration in the Georges Bank area off New England's coast.

"We're not denying we had a great year in 1979. What I'm saying is you need a tremendous amount of cash to look for hydrocarbons," he told a news conference in Boston, a major market for the Tulsa, Okla., company.

"The percentage gain is seemingly large unless you put it into perspective. We are plowing back all of the money into oil exploration," he said. "The money we earn goes back into the development of oil, coal and minerals."

In another development, No. 1-ranked Exxon Corp. said it is boosting its quarterly dividend by a dime to $1.20 a share, effective Marh 10 for shareholders of record Feb. 8. Exxon's 1979 profits totaled $4.3 billion.

Cities Service said 1979 earnings were $347.5 million, or $12.54 a share. In 1978, the costs of the chemical operations shutdown cut net income from $202.5 million to $118 million — or from $7.32 to $4.27 a share.

In the fourth quarter of 1979, Cities Services earned $106.2 million, or $3.83 a share, compared to a loss of $30.3 million in the last quarter of 1978 due to the shutdown.

Quartertly revenues rose to $1.8 billion from $1.2 billion, while annual sales rose to $6.4 billion from $4.7 billion.

Cities Service's 1979 return on shareholders' equity — a measure of profitability equal to the ratio of net income to the shareholders' investment in the company — was 16.6 percent.

In 1979, it had a 10.4 percent return before the closings were taken into account.

The typical U.S. manufacturing company's return was 16.7 percent in the first nine months of 1979, the Federal Trade Commission said.

Waidelich said Cities Services spent $760 million last year on energy exploration, production and transportation, and on other major projects.

Waidelich said it would take six years and cost nearly $700 million before his company could produce oil or gas from offshore wells in the Georges Bank fishing grounds.

Oil Official Views Shortage

CLEVELAND (AP) — The specter of oil supply shortages from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries was raised Wednesday by the chairman of Gulf Oil Corp.

"There is no question that we are on the knife's edge of any significant interruption" of oil supplies, Jerry McAfee, head of the nation's fifth-largest oil company, told the Cleveland Society of Security Analysts.

McAfee said politics, international turmoil or natural accidents could affect OPEC, which provides 30 percent of the United States' oil.

In one year, Gulf went from a "crude-rich" position, with more oil than needed, to where there could be shortages in the third or fourth quarter of 1980, he said.

"With conservation efforts and a slowdown in the major world economies, the world will need about 30 million barrels per day from the OPEC nations in 1980," said McAfee.

"However, we estimate that at today's prices, the OPEC nations could produce as little as 22 million barrels per day and still meet their basic economic requirements. This means that production of 7 to 8 million barrels per day will be at the discretion of these producers, giving them enormous leverage in the marketplace."

McAfee said before the revolution in Iran, Gulf was taking 250,000 barrels of oil out of the ground a day as a member of the Iranian consortium and was purchasing an additional 100,000 barrels a day. It has been unable to contract for 1980 oil there. In Kuwait, Gulf has been lifting more than 500,000 barrels a day under a contract. But McAfee said Gulf has been informed that after March 30, it will be allowed to lift only 150,000 barrels a day.

As a result of such reductions, Gulf told its outside customers it is unable, for the time being, to supply them with oil, he said.

McAfee was asked about a surprise $2-a-barrel increases by Kuwait, Iraq, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates and prospects for other hikes.

"It's an uncertain, unstable world where psychology seems to be a bigger factor than economics. It's hard to predict," he said. "We need meaningful, hard-hitting, head-knocking negotiations between oil producing and oil consuming nations."

McAfee said oil-consuming nations are in a better position than most would think. "A producing country's oil is not worth anything without a market for it. When we get ourselves in a position — through hard work, conservation and concerted international action — to say 'Thank you very much, your price is too high,' we can walk away from the table," he said.

He said it would take national will, national leadership and statesmanship by this country, other consuming nations and oil producing countries to create stable oil prices.

Gulf is among companies waiting to see if Nigeria, which supplies 6 percent of the U.S. oil needs, will follow Libya and raise prices from $30 to $35 a barrel.

"They (Nigeria) have been price leaders," he said. "It (raising prices) seems to be the popular thing to do these days."

DRIVES FOR TWO — Jeff Taylor (44) of Texas Tech puts in a layup as Larry Rogers (34) defends for the University of Houston Cougars. The Red Raiders lost the Southwest Conference match to the Coogs 75-63 Wednesday night in Houston's Hofheinz Pavilion. (AP Laserphoto)

Cougars Down Raiders

HOUSTON — This was one for the record books.

Highlights (or lowlights) of Wednesday night's Texas Tech-Houston basketball game include, in no particular order:

1. Tech coach Gerald Myers drew three techinal fouls and was thrown out of a game for the first time in his career.

2. Assistant George Davidson also collected a technical for speaking to the official calmly.

3. David Little, after taking a brutal shot to the chin and still being called for the foul, also drew a technical for complaining.

4. The Raiders threw the ball away seven of their first eight trips down the floor to start the second half.

5. After trailing by only one point (32-31) at halftime, the Raiders scored only two points in the first eight minutes of the second half.

6. For the first time this year, Jeff Taylor missed a slam dunk.

8. Oh yeah, the Cougars handed the Red Raiders their third straight loss 75-63 here Wednesday night in Hofheinz and dropped the Raiders to 5-4 in Southwest Conference play.

Tech turned the ball over 25 times and from the opening moments of the second half, the Raiders never really threatened. The officiating, which obviously angered Myers, had plenty to do with that, but it was the Raiders who proved to be their own worst enemy.

"I have to say this was the worst game played this year," Myers admitted afterwards. "The conference has a gag rule about taling about the officials, but my feelings should be obvious."

The Cougars, pressing from the opening tip, were able to reach in and strip the Raiders of the ball time and time again. But Myers felt the Coogs were grabbing a little more than the ball.

"You cannot consistently reach around and grab at people without fouling," explained Myers. "There was some hacking and reaching, but it was not any particular call (that resulted in the techinals). It was all the things that built up."

The first explosion came at 11:53 in the second half with Tech trailing 44-35. Myers charged out onto the court and chased the official the length of the court for his first technical. When he refused to leave, Myers was slapped with another T. Thirty-six second later, Davidson got his.

Kenneth Williams got six free throws out of the deal, made four of them and the Coogs got another bucket after taking the ball out of bounds. That made the score 50-35 and the Raiders could not come back, although they had plenty of chances.

Houston, which had gone into the four-corner offense at the outset of the second half, was patiently working for the good shot, while the frustrated Raiders couldn't do much damage at the other end.

The Cougars are now 4-5 in conference play and 9-10 overall, while the Raiders are 11-8 and 5-4.

Leading the Cougar charge was freshman Rob Williams, who led all scorers with 21 points — nine of those coming at the line. Kenneth Williams added 15 points — 13 in the second half and shot eight technical foul chances. Larry Rogers added 13 points to aid the Houston charge.

Ralph Brewster and Ben Hill combined for 31 points to lead the Raiders. But most of the Tech cagers were ineffective in the second half. The Hill-Brewster duo scored only eight points in the second stanza. Steve Smith was the only other Raider in double figures, scoring 10 points.

Obviously the techinal fouls effected the Raiders, but they weren't the difference in the game.

"They just outplayed us," said Tech's Kent Williams. "This is about the third tough game we've had. We just have to take a big step and turn things around."

"They beat us," added Brewster. "The officials made a few good calls but that wasn't the difference. We just couldn't get by their press."

After falling beind by 15 points, 50-35, with 10:36 left in the second half, the Raiders ripped off eight unanswered point and cut the lead to 50-43 when Hill got a slam dunk with 7:37 left. But that was all she wrote for Tech.

The Raiders would come no closer than 10 points in the game's final five minutes.

The crowning blow came with 2:21 remaining when Victor Ewing flattened Little. As Little lay on the ground, the official blew his whistle and pointed at the Tech sophomore. In disbelief, Little slapped the floor and was called for a technical. Ewing hit both free throws and got a layup on the out-of-bounds play and the Coogs were in control.

With 1:27 remaining, Tech's Smith hit a five-foot bank shot, the officials ruled the basket good, but said he had double-dribbed before the shot. Myers, at this point, drew his last techinal and was escorted out of the building. Moments later, Little mercifully drew foul number five and left the game with 1:25 remaining.

Unfortunately for the rest of the Tech cagers, they had to play it out.

Raiders Win Move Support

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Bengals assistant general manager Mike Brown admits he sympathizes with loyal Raider fans, but says he'd probably vote anyway to approve that National Football League team's move to Los Angeles.

"Because we are in some respects a monopoly, we have certain rights and I think we have certain responsibilities that normal businesses don't have," Brown said. "I think you owe something to the city, for better or for worse.

"But I would probably vote in favor (of the move) on the basis that it's their business and if Oakland can and does move it would enhance the bargaining position of every team in the NFL with their landlords," Brown said. "They got the people in Oakland to make an offer to them that far exceeded what they expected before they started talking about moving."

Raiders Land Top Lineman

Big D, little A, double L. A. S. might be a nice place to visit, but Kelly Grammer certainly doesn't want to play football there for the next four years.

"I'm just West Texas," commented Grammer.

That contraction, followed by those other three words, was music to Rex Dockery and the rest of the Texas Tech coaching staff. Although Dockery could not comment one way or the other, The Avalanche-Journal learned Tuesday that Grammer, a 252-pound offensive tackle from Lubbock Monterey, will sign a Southwest Conference letter of intent with the Raiders Feb. 13.

"I thought about it for a long time," said Grammer. "This (Texas Tech) is where I want to go. I've got family all over West Texas and I want them to watch me play."

Grammer, who shared most valuable player of District 4-AAAA honors along with teammate Willie Johnson, visited Southern Methodist University, Texas A&M and Baylor before deciding to stay in Lubbock.

"They are all good schools," noted Grammer. "But Dallas was too big for me and there was just something about A&M that I wasn't sure of. I didn't feel comfortable there."

Ruling out A&M and SMU wasn't difficult, Grammer said, but telling Grant Teaff no was another story. "I really like Baylor a lot," said Grammer. "But I started thinking about my family and decided, why go anywhere else but Tech."

Although Grammer is from Lubbock, he said Tech did not take it for granted that he would naturally sign with the Raiders.

KELLY GRAMMER
He'll Stay In Lubbock

"They got out and recruited me hard," Grammer said. "They started sending me letters at the start of the season. I don't think they assumed anything."

Used as an offensive guard and a defensive tackle during his senior season at Monterey, Grammer said he was told that the guard position would be home from here on out. And that pleases Grammer a great deal.

"I like to play guard a lot more than tackle," Grammer pointed out. "As a guard, I'll be able to pull a lot more. That means I can get some good shots at the linebackers. But as a tackle I'd have to block straight ahead most of the time. I don't like that as much."

Grammer joins Splendora running back Donald Moore as the only two high school football recruits who have verbally committed themselves to Tech. Moore announced Tuesday he would play for the Red Raiders.

Sports Magazine Fails

By NORVAL POLLARD
Executive Sports Editor

The long-awaited first edition of "Red Raider" (Inside Texas Tech Sports) magazine finally made it off the presses Monday. It's now on it way to some 1,200 followers of Tech athletics.

It will be the only edition of the magazine released because of financial difficulties encountered by its publisher.

LeDuc Enterprises, Inc., publisher of the magazine, decided last week to discontinue publication of "Red Raider" and all its similar individual college sports magazines around the nation because of poor subscription figures.

Instead, LeDuc will publish a monthly magazine encompassing all collegiate sports programs across the country.

The Kansas City, Mo., based firm has guaranteed to refund all $25 subscriptions immediately. Subscribers should receive a letter from LeDuc within the next few days explaining the situation. Subscribers will have the option of taking the new national publication, which begins in March, or having their money returned.

"I would like to make it clear that Texas Tech had nothing to do with the cancellation of the magazine," stated Tech athletic director Dick Tamburo. "There is a clause in the contract that allows LeDuc to pull out if they cannot make a financial go of it."

Tech was one of 26 major universities around the country that had a contract with LeDuc to publish nine monthly (from December to August) and 11 weekly (from September through November) editions of the magazine.

LeDuc decided to discontinue its individual school format because of low subscribtion renewals at Nebraska and several other schools that had received the magazine for over a year.

LHS Junior Faces New Nickname

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Last week when Levelland's Dwight Phillips earned The Avalanche-Journal's Class AAA player of the week honor, his teammates tried to change his nickname from "D" to "POW."

It looks as if "D" might be stuck with that tag.

At least Estacado coach J.J. Wood thinks so. When asked for his nomination for the top player of the week, Wood recommended Phillips.

And who can blame him? All the 6-8 junior did to the Matadors was score 16 points, pull down an awesome 19 rebounds, block five shots and dish out three assists.

And, by the way, knock Estacado out of sole possession of the District 1-AAA lead.

That was enough to earn Phillips his second straight player of the week honor and, maybe, a new nickname. But he says Estacado wasn't his best game.

"Nah, it wasn't," he said. "I thought when I played Dunbar, that was my best game."

That venture earned him last week's honor.

"I had more rebounds, more points. I just played real well against Dunbar. I felt a little slow against Estacado. When I played Dunbar I was physically ready."

Why wasn't he ready for Estacado? After all, the Mats were sitting on top of the district.

"I was sorta scared," he admitted shyly. "Estacado's got some big old players, they really muscle up so I can't get inside. Then when I found out they weren't going to block out, I went on inside."

Coming out for the team this year, Phillips felt sure he would start, even though he is just a junior. After all, he is 6-8, and he is very agile for a player of his youth and height. And, the Lobos only had five lettermen coming back from last year.

That wasn't the way it worked out though. Coach Don Abbott had him riding the pine early in the year.

"After my brother (returning all-district honorable mention pick Dennis) had knee surgery, I really figured I'd start but at first I hardly started at all," Phillips said.

"I guess coach was trying to keep me from being in foul trouble. I'm sure he did the right thing, I was fouling an awful lot."

The Avalanche-Journal's co-players of the week from the girls' ranks are Canyon's Terri Mayfield and Cindy Maddox. They tallied 16 points apiece Tuesday night as the Eagles knocked off Dumas 51-44.

The loss was the Demon girls' first of the District 1-AAA season (against five wins) and only their second loss of the season. The first was to perennial girls' Class AAAA power Dallas South Oak Cliff.

Running down the rest of the outstanding boys' performances for the week, Brian Templeton scored 29 as Andrews cruised by Odessa Ector 85-75 in a big District 2-AAA showdown. Ike Kimbrough sacked 34 for the losers.

Estacado, despite losing to Levelland, got back-to-back performances from a couple of players. John Jones scored 15 points in the win over Borger, despite playing only three quarters, then scored 21 in the loss to Levelland. Preston Davis got 17 against Borger and 14 against the Lobos.

Scott Herron and Tommy Butler chipped in 24 and 36 points Friday night as Dumas snowed Dunbar 104-60.

Other strong girls' performances were turned in by Dumas' Trisha Fortenberry, who scored 26 in a 76-63 win over Dunbar, and Estacado's Joy Dale Guyton, who tallied 17 in a 54-44 win over Borger.

Also, Paula Brown scored 30 points and Kim Dalbert pulled down 14 rebounds as the Andrews girls blasted Pecos 74-45.

Law Named Week's Top Player

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Most basketball coaches probably would trade a happy marriage — and toss in a couple of kids, along with the keys to the station wagon — for a Sam Law or a player just like him.

He isn't about to dazzle anybody with either his scoring or rebounding averages. They're decent, 11.0 and 5.8 respectively, but nothing to write home to mama about. It's the assist department — that often-overlooked stat — where Law exceeds. Through 24 games, the CHS senior has dished out 125 feeds to his teammates. (Scott Williams, with 67 assists, is second to Law on the Coronado club.)

"Oftentimes, he'll give up a good shot just to give (a teammate) a better one," noted Arnwine. "He's a team player."

Asked if Law doesn't sometimes go overboard with all that generosity, Arnwine said: "Not at all. I'd rather have someone like that than someone who constantly wants to shoot."

All this is why Law has been named the city AAAA player of the week by The Avalanche-Journal.

Through the first three District 4-AAAA games, Law has been on a tear, of sorts. He currently leads the Mustangs in scoring (38 points), free throw shooting (10-10) and ranks second in rebounding (20), heading into the first-round closing game against Hereford Friday night.

Last week, Law really demonstrated what kind of player he really is. With Coronado trailing Monterey by one point early in the third quarter, Law stole the ball and commenced to dribble the length of the floor for an easy layup. However, before he got to the bucket a Monterey defender had somehow managed to work himself between Law and the hoop. Things looked hopeless. But instead of drawing a charging foul or taking a poor shot, Law fed the ball — behind his back — to Williams who hit a 12-footer to give Coronado its first lead since the opening period.

Gay Hemphill copped the weekly girls' honor by hitting 32 points in a losing effort to Monterey. Miss Hemphill entered the game as the leading scorer in District 4-AAAA, currently averaging 24.6 points an outing.

Miss Hemphill, a junior at Plainview, is also the top rebounder in the conference with a 10.8 average after 27 games.

Also nominated for the A-J honor were:

—Gary Hodges of Monterey, who played in place of injured Ian Hyslop. Hodges scored 16 points in MHS's overtime win over Plainview. According to Plainsmen coach Joe Michalka, Hodges has been one of the key forces behind MHS's march to the first-half title.

—Kirk Cole of Lubbock, who drew the praises of head coach Craig Wells following LHS's loss to Coronado. "I thought he did a fine job." Cole is the second-leading scorer for LHS, with an 11.5 average.

Aggies Beat Baylor, Up SWC Mark To 9-0

By The Associated Press

Rynn Wright and Vernon Smith triggered a second-half rally Wednesday night to propel the Texas Aggies to a 59-50 victory over the Baylor Bears to maintain their unbeaten record in Southwest Conference play.

Smith, Wright and little David Goff broke open a close game as they outscored Baylor 15-4 during the first 10 minutes of the second half. The Aggies led 27-25 at intermission, but then turned on the steam and took advantage of a Baylor dry spell to put the game out of reach.

The Aggies led 44-30 with 10:25 remaining and then withstood a final challenge by the Bears that cut the lead to six with five minutes remaining.

Wright and Rudy Woods had eight points each in the tell-tale second half and Wright finished as the Aggies' leading scorer with 17 points. Smith finished with 15 and Woods 14, while Goff added 10.

Baylor's Terry Teagle, the conference's leading scorer, was the game's high scorer with 24 points, 16 in the first half.

The victory gave A&M a 9-0 record in SWC action and 17-5 for the season. Baylor slipped to 3-6 in conference and 8-11 for the year.

Texas 113, SMU 80

Ron Baxter — the all-star "fat boy" of Southwest Conference basketball — poured in 30 points Wednesday night in breaking the Texas Longhorn career scoring record as Texas whalloped Southern Methodist 113-80.

Texas' previous high for the season was 99 points in defeating Houston.

Baxter, a 6-4 senior from Los Angeles, broke Jim Krivacs' school record of 1,673 points with two free throws early in the game. He had 18 points at halftime and finished only two points below his single-game high.

Baxter, who has had persistent problems keeping his weight down, was the SWC newcomer of the year as a freshman and was all-SWC as a sophomore.

"I wanted to get it (the record) at home, and I wanted to get it early to get it off my teammates' mind and my mind," said Baxter. His record-breaking free throws came with just 2:30 elapsed in the game.

Another senior, John Danks, scored 23 for Texas and freshman teammate LaSalle Thompson had 22. Billy Allen, son of the SMU coach, was high for the Mustangs with 16.

Baxter who has started since he was a freshman, was averaging 16.1 points a game, second best in the conference, going into th game. He already held the Texas rebound record of 828.

The victory extended Texas' season record to 12-7. The Longhorns are 5-4 in the SWC. Southern Methodist is 11-8 and 3-6.

Rice 60, TCU 59

Ricky Pierce's tip-in with two seconds to play gave the Rice Owls a 60-59 Southwest Conference victory over the Texas Christian Horned Frogs Wednesday night.

Bobby Tudor stole Darrell Browder's errant pass with 15 seconds remaining to give the Owls the final shot.

TCU led the entire second half until Pierce's goal, and the Horned Frogs held a 30-21 halftime edge. Helping to TCU's downfall was a frigid 11-of-21 performance at the free throw line the last 20 minutes.

The decision left both teams tied for the SWC cellar with 2-7 marks. Rice is 4-13 for the season and TCU 7-11.

Kenny Austin paced the Owls with 21 points and 14 rebounds, while Pierce tossed in 13 points and 13 rebounds. Tudor added 14.

Browder shared scoring honors for TCU with Deckery Johnson. Both had 15 points, with reserve Warren Bridges adding 10.

Rice led in rebounds 17-15 at the half, but dominated the boards the second half and finished with a lopsided 47-29 rebounding advantage.

FULL-COURT JEST— Globetrotter player-coach Nate Branch has to follow referee Bob Blutinger very closely. He and the rest of the Harlem bunch will be appearing at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 7 at the Coliseum. Tickets are on sale at Flipside Records and the Sears ticket office in the South Plains Mall.

U.S. Skier Leads Standings

DENVER (AP) — Lonny Vanatta is only 22 years old, a mere 5-foot-7 and 150 pounds, with a quiet demeanor that gives no hint of the intense competitive streak that lies beneath the surface.

After a lackluster career as an amateur skier, Vanatta didn't figure to be a factor on the World Pro Skiing tour. In fact, he began his professional career in 1977 on the Colorado Pro Tour, a sort of "B" circuit for those, like Vanatta, who "didn't feel confident enough of making it on the main tour."

Small wonder, then, that his dizzying climb to the top of the World Pro Skiing standings this season has shocked Vanatta as much as anyone.

"It's pretty hard for me to believe," he admitted during an interview prior to this weekend's series of races at Winter Park, Colo.

Vanatta claimed the standings lead last week, finishing first in the giant slalom and third in the slalom at Big White, British Columbia. He moved ahead of two-time tour champion Andre Arnold of Austria, who was eliminated in the first round of both races.

The previous week at Stowe, Vt., Vanatta swept both races. After a history of faring poorly in giant slalom races, Vanatta actually has earned five more points in GS than in the slaloms this year.

At the halfway point of the season, Vanatta has earned $41,224 and has 315 points, compared with 295 points for Arnold and 275 for third-place Hans Hinterseer of Austria.

The native of Steamboat Springs, Colo., is the first American to lead the World Pro Skiing tour since 1975, when Hank Kashiwa claimed the championship.

"I'm trying not to think about the title," he said. "That's when you get in trouble. You have to take it one race at a time.

"In pro racing, you have to ski 10 races to win an event, so consistency is the name of the game. In the last two weekends, I've made 40 runs and had only one bad one. I'm skiing very well, with a lot of confidence."

Vanatta is building a home in Steamboat Springs, but plans for a trophy case may have to wait. His decision to pass up the downhill races — of which there are five on the tour — could prove costly.

Four of the downhills still have to be contested, and both Arnold and Hinterseer will compete in those.

"I know it will be tough to win the title without any downhill points," he admitted, "and I hate sitting back and letting those other guys get cheap points. But I've never been good in downhill, and I don't have the time to train for it properly."

Vanatta believes Hinterseer, not Arnold, is his main threat the rest of the year. "He's skiing better than Arnold right now," said Vanatta. "Arnold just had his worst weekend ever."

LCC Selects Murdock Week's Top Player

Lubbock Christian College has named basketball player Rick Murdock its athlete of the week.

Murdock, a reserve forward, played only 45 minutes in three Chap victories last week, but hit 9 of 13 shots from the field, 4 of 4 at the free throw line, had three rebounds and two assists.

LCC currently is riding the crest of a six-game winning streak and stands at 14-12 on the season.

Runner-up to Murdock was reserve Jim Steensma, who hit the game-winning shot in a 62-61 win over McMurry in Abilene Saturday.

LCHS Players Named All-Staters

Four Lubbock Christian High School football players were named to the Texas Association of Private Schools' all-state grid teams Wednesday.

First-team picks were 6-3, 180-pound split end Shawn Williams, who caught 64 passes for 713 yards and 11 touchdowns last season; and defensive tackle Clint McDowell, 6-1 and 235. McDowell averaged 12 tackles per game.

Williams also was named to the second team, qualifying as a safety with nine interceptions during 1979. Other second-team picks were quarterback Brian Manus, 6-0 and 175, who threw for 1,444 yards and 15 touchdowns; and nose guard Scott Hawley, 6-1 and 185, who averaged 10 tackles per contest.

"This was really good," said LCHS coach George Harper. "We did as well as anybody else in the state. It's nice to know that our kids have been recognized. I'm proud of them."

West All-Stars Beat East In WBL Match

CHICAGO (AP) — Mollie Bolin of Iowa and Alfreda Abernathy of Dallas led the West to a 115-112 victory over the East Wednesday night in the second annual Women's Professional Basketball League All-Star Game.

Bolin scored 25 points, 13 in a 33-point third quarter in which the West went ahead to stay with an 89-83 lead. Abernathy scored 22, which included a game-clinching free throw with nine seconds remaining.

Charlene McWhorter of Milwaukee led the East with 31 points, 23 in the first half. McWhorter missed most of the third quarter after drawing her fifth foul and then returned in the fourth quarter only to foul out with 7:02 remaining.

Soviet Team Target Of New York Suit

NEW YORK (AP) — A Rockland County resident filed suit Wednesday in an effort to block Soviet participation in the Winter Olympic games in Lake Placid next month.

The suit was filed in Manhattan's U.S. District Court by Stanley J. Dale Jr., of New City.

Dale asked the court to issue an order barring federal authorities from granting entry visas to the Soviet team and revoking any permits already issued.

The request was made on grounds that members of the USSR Olympic team are "aliens who seek to engage in activities which would be prejudicial to the United States."

The defendants in the suit include the State and Justice departments and the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

The court complaint said some or all of the Soviet athletes, trainers and related personnel were either members of the Communist Party or the Soviet armed forces and therefore are ineligible for entry visas under U.S. laws.

"The said aliens, as nationals of a country guilty of a major act of aggression and flagrant violation of international law, and a country condemned by the United States and the world community for said aggression, seek by their participation in the Olympics to obtain the condonation and approval of the United States and the world community," Dale's complaint said.

Third World Nations Preferred As Alternate Sites For Games

WASHINGTON (AP) — A State Department official suggested Wednesday that the Carter Administration would prefer that any alternative Games to the Moscow Olympics not be held in the United States but at one or more sites overseas, perhaps in the Third World.

The suggestion was made in a House subcommittee hearing at which Gov. Brendan T. Byrne of New Jersey offered the New York metropolitan area as a viable alternate for the staging of a summer sports festival if the United States decides not to send its athletes to Moscow.

F. Donald Miller, executive director of the United States Olympic Committee, testified that he did not believe alternate Games could be held this year. He said he believed it would take at least two years to prepare for such competition and would conflict with planning for the scheduled 1984 Olympic Games in Los Angeles.

Miller also said it would cost from $250 million to $350 million to prepare a site for an alternate competition.

New York Times sports columnist Red Smith, who said the United States should immediately pull out of the Summer Olympic Games in Moscow, said alternate games could be held at several sites, such as Munich, Montreal and Los Angeles.

The only problem would be housing, but there would be many empty college dormitories available in the Los Angeles area, for instance, to handle the influx of athletes, Smith said.

The differing view on alternate Games were offered during a hearing conducted by the House transportation and commerce subcommittee. Rep. James J. Florio, D-N.J., panel chairman, said the hearing was held because some of the options might require legislative action.

Byrne, who did not testify because he had to leave for a meeting in New Jersey, submitted a prepared statement in which he said the New York metropolitan area "boasts some of the newest and finest sports and recreation facilities anywhere in the world."

Byrne told reporters it would easy to stage the games in the New York-New Jersey area because "there would be a need for only a couple of capital improvements."

His presentation, he said, was based on the bid that New York made to the USOC in September 1978, in an effort to host the 1984 Olympic Games, which went to Los Angeles.

Byrne said he had not discussed his proposal with New York Gov. Hugh Carey or New York City Mayor Edward Koch. He said he talked to Richard Ravitch, chairman of the Metropolitan Transportation Authority, who had prepared the presentation for bid of the Olympic Games.

The New Jersey governor also said he did not include Connecticut in his statement because he had not discussed his proposal with any one from that state yet.

"I'm not running a sports festival," he said. "I just think we ought to let everybody know we can have alternate Games in the metropolitan area ... that facilities are available."

Nelson Ledsky, deputy assistant secretary of state for congressional relations and a member of the ad hoc task force on the Olympics, said the administration's position is that "we must convince the Soviets that they will pay a price for their aggression, whether in Afghanistan or elsewhere."

He said the administration's position "is growing around the world.

"The United States would favor organizing some form of alternate Games in the fall or summer of 1980," Ledsky said. "We want our athletes to be able to compete. They have worked very hard, often for years, to perfect their skills.

"We will join as apropriate in working with other governments to organize such alternative Games," he added. "Our preference is that such Games not be held in the United States ... At the same time, the United States would be ready if necessary to host such Games."

Ledsky said he couldn't estimate the cost of holding alternate competition.

"It is too early to answer this question," he said. "Much would depend on where the games would be located, how many nations would agree to participate, and what contributions we might be able to obtain from others."

Pastorini Denies Asking For Trade Deal

HOUSTON (AP) — Quarterback Dan Pastorini, at odds with Houston Oiler management over his contract and his attempts to race dragsters, said in a copyright story with the Houston Chronicle Wednesday he wanted to be traded and then denied it later in radio interviews.

"I love it here, but I want out," Pastorini said in the newspaper story, which added Pastorini had asked Coach Bum Phillips to trade him to Los Angeles, Oakland, San Francisco or Denver before the start of next season.

Pastorini later Wednesday denied he had asked to be traded.

"I have not requested to be traded," Pastorini said in an interview with KTRH sportscaster Dave Courtney. "I love it here. There is a contract problem but I didn't request to be trade."

Pastorini told KPRC Radio sportscaster Steve Gilmartin: "There might be a misunderstanding. Number one, I want to stay in Houston. Number two, I don't want to be traded. Number three, I hope we can work this (contract) out. But as far as me wanting to be traded, that's a bunch of bull."

Pastorini, in the second year of a six-year contract, reportedly wants to renegotiate his $300,000-to-$340,000 per year salary to include fewer deferred payments.

Phillips could not be reached immediately for comment and Oiler assistant general manager Pat Peppler, who negotiates Oiler contracts, denied Pastorini had asked to renegotiate his contract.

"He may have said something to Bum but he hasn't said anything to me," Peppler said.

Pastorini had been negotiating to purchase a top fuel dragster from Ray Beadle of Dallas but said Wednesday he would not buy the dragster because the Oilers had exercised an option in his contract to keep him from driving it.

"The Oilers got an injunction against me racing the car, so there's no reason to buy the car if I can't race it," Pastorini said.

"I haven't heard anything directly from Dan about drag racing," Peppler said. "He may have talked to Bum about it. Of course, we aren't even fond of the guys doing anything as heavy as skiing."

Pastorini was involved in speedboat racing during the off season until 1977 when his boat crashed into a crowd. Two persons were killed and five others injured in the accident on Lake Liberty north of Houston.

When Pastorini signed his six-year contract, the Oilers put the clause in his contract giving them an option to restrict off-season activities they considered too hazardous.

K.S. "Bud" Adams, owner of the Oilers, said Wednesday there is a stipulation in Pastorini's contract he cannot engage in any activity detrimental to his health but Adams said he had not talked with the quarterback about drag racing.

"That's in Phillips' hands," Adams said. "If Bum says he can race the car then he can race the car but I don't know if Bum will let his quarterback put his life on the limb. I'm not saying it's dangerous but any time you have to use a parachute to stop a car then it has to be dangerous."

In later editions, the Houston Chronicle said King Hill, the Oiler quarterback coach, had called to criticize use of the story.

"That's the sort of thing that doesn't belong in the paper," Hill was quoted as saying.

UNM Investigation Aimed At Various Irregularities

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — State prosecutors say their investigation of the University of New Mexico basketball program is aimed at more allegations than point shaving and gambling.

Deputy Attorney General Michael Francke said Wednesday the probe also involves possible "false travel vouchers, welfare fraud, payments and loans to athletes, irregularities with season tickets and conflicts of interest on the part of individuals in the athletic department."

Francke said Wednesday prosecutors will ask for a special investigative grand jury.

"It is impossible at this time to say when we're going to be ready to go the grand jury," he said. "But I can confirm that we will be using an investigative grand jury to pursue this matter."

Francke said alleged ticket irregularities involved "using the tickets to generate cash."

He said the conflicts of interest are not necessarily criminal matters.

There are three investigations of the New Mexico program in progress. A federal grand jury has been hearing testimony on UNM athletics since December and the NCAA is conducting its own probe.

The New York Post reported in Tuesday editions that the state's probe involved two games, including the stunning upset of the Lobos in the 1977-78 NCAA regional playoffs by unheralded Cal State-Fullerton.

But Francke, who heads the attorney general's criminal division, said investigators have not been limited to the two.

"They are not ruling out any games that have been played as far as point shaving is concerned," he said. "Our investigation does not, however, exclude the Fullerton game."

Cal-Fullerton nipped the Lobos 90-85 in Tempe, Ariz., then went on to the finals of the NCAA Far West regionals in Albuquerque before losing to Arkansas. New Mexico was a 16-point favorite in the Cal-Fullerton game.

The San Diego Union said this past weekend it had learned that former San Diego State basketball Coach Tim Vezie had been interviewed by the FBI and reportedly had been asked about possible point shaving by UNM in a game with San Diego State.

The San Diego newspaper quoted various "reliable sources" throughout its story.

Since it reconvened this week, the federal grand jury has heard testimony from New Mexico basketball Coach Charlie Harrison and officials from other schools.

Federal agents announced their investigation after release late last year of a transcript of a wiretap in which former New Mexico Coach Norm Ellenberger and a top assitant, Manny Goldstein, discussed paying a junior college official to doctor the transcript of a student.

Ellenberger subsequently was fired, and Goldstein resigned.

Watson Sizes Up Competition In Bing Crosby Golf Tourney

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Tom Watson looked at the list of entries and started naming some of his top potential challengers in the $300,000 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am.

"Well, obviously (Lon) Hinkle," Watson said. "He's very long and that helps here. He's the defending champion and he played awfully well last week (finishing third). You have to expect him to play well.

"And D.A. Weibring. He's improved a great deal in the last year. I played two rounds with him last week and I was impressed. He doesn't make many bad swings. He has a good game. He'll be up there winning before the year is over."

But Watson, a playoff winner over Weibring in San Diego last week, is the obvious favorite in the unique event that begins Thursday on three Monterey Peninsula courses.

He's been the outstanding player in the game for the past three seasons. He won in his first start of the year last week, which means he's obviously playing well. And he's playing in an event he's won twice and on two of the courses he calls "among my favorites in the world."

Those are Pebble Beach and Cypress Point. Spyglass Hill, however, may be the key, he said. "The tournament could revolve around Spyglass. It's playing long and tough. If you can get by there with a decent score, you might have a chance."

The format calls for the pros and their amateur partners — many of them show-business celebrities — to play one round on each course before the field is cut for the final round Sunday at Pebble Beach.

"I love the format," Watson said. "It's fun way to play golf.

"I love to play here. These courses make you want to play. And I'm ready to play. I'm excited about playing. I have a lot of enthusiasm."

All of which makes him a solid favorite in the strongest field of the year, a field that includes Jack Nicklaus.

Nicklaus, making his first start of the season and attempting a comeback from the first non-winning year of his career, has won this tournament three times and also won the national amateur and a U.S. Open at Pebble Beach.

"He's coming back to play where he likes to play. Nothing wrong with that," Watson said.

CBS will provide national television coverage of portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

Cardinals Select New Football Coach

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals Wednesday named former offensive line coach Jim Hanifan as head coach of the National Football League team for next season.

Hanifan, 45, was with the Cardinals for five seasons, leaving at the end of the 1978 season to become offensive line coach for the San Diego Chargers under former Cardinal coach Don Coryell.

He had earlier served in the same position for Coryell when Coryell was coach at San Diego State in 1972.

Under Hanifan, who was popular with the Cardinal players, the offensive line led the NFL in the fewest quarterback sacks for three consecutive seasons.

He inherits a team which has had records of 6-10 and 5-11 the past two seasons.

Spurs Rally To Defeat Houston

By The Associated Press

San Antonio's George Gervin hit 25 points and teammate James Silas hit 24 to lead the San Antonio Spurs to a 118-111 win Wednesday night over the Houston Rockets in National Basketball Association play.

Houston led the Spurs 99-93 with eight minutes left in the game, but a strong San Antonio rally led by ex-Rocket John Shumate and no Rocket field goals in the last three minutes gave the Spurs the win.

The Spurs trailed Houston most of the first half and finally moved into a 61-59 lead when Kevin Restani converted a three-point play with 9:43 remaining in the third quarter.

But the Rockets came back, outscoring the Spurs 19-4 in the next four minutes to take a commanding 78-65 lead. Center Moses Malone led the Rocket scoring binge with 13 points in the third quarter.

Suns 122, Nuggets 114

Paul Westphal, Walter Davis and Len "Truck" Robinson combined for 85 points as the Phoenix Suns dumped the Denver Nuggets 122-114 Wednesday night.

Westphal had 30 points, 18 in the second half, as the Suns boosted their season record to 35-19. Davis had 29 points, 19 in the second half, and Robinson had 28, including 15 in the last two periods, as the Suns beat the Nuggets for the fourth straight time this season.

76ers 121, Pistons 108

Julius Erving led all scorers with 27 points as the Philadelphia 76ers snapped a three-game losing streak by beating the Detroit Pistons 121-108 in a National Basketball Association game Wednesday night.

Celtics 110, Cavaliers 103

Larry Bird, set down twice in the first half because of poor shooting, ignited a sluggish offense, and the Boston Celtics rallied Wednesday night for a 110-103 victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers.

The Celtics, who fell behind by as much as seven points, in the third period wore down the weary Cavaliers, who edged Los Angeles in four overtimes 24 hours earlier.

Jazz 102, Nets 100

Ben Poquette poured in 27 points and Adrian Dantley and Alan Bristow added 18 each to lead the Utah Jazz to a 102-100 victory over the New Jersey Nets Wednesday.

In a battle of cellar dwellers, the Jazz took advantage of the Nets' poor shooting to register their 18th win against 37 losses. The Jazz have won five of their last seven. The Nets dropped to 22-31.

Trailing the Nets 21-18 going into the second quarter, Poquette spirited the Jazz scoring attack as the 6-10 center reeled off nine straight points to catapult Utah into the lead 39-37 with four minutes left in the half. At halftime, Utah led 49-40.

Bullets 120, Pacers 119

Two free throws by Kevin Grevey clinched a 120 to 119 victory for the Washington Bullets Wednesday night, with Mickey Johnson of the Indiana Pacers sinking a free throw with one second remaining while trying to deliberately miss.

Johnson, who scored a career high 41 points, was fouled in the backcourt by Bob Dandridge.

Picturephone Service Sampled To Cut Travel

DETROIT (AP) — A subsidiary of Ford Motor Co. on Wednesday started using a tool it expects will revolutionize management productivity — its own Picturephone service to replace increasingly expensive busines travel.

American Telephone & Telegraph Co. has offered Picturephone Meeting Service in its own facilities since 1977, but Ford is the first company to admit to its own television conference center. AT&T said an accounting firm, was first but does not want to be identified.

Ford Aerospace & Communications Corp. staged what executives said was a "totally unrehearsed" hour-long meeting with engineers from a plant in Palo Alto, Calif.

AT&T charged Ford $390 for the circuit and the use of the Picturephone Meeting Service room in San Francisco. Ford said its own costs, principally AT&T lease charges for television cameras and sets and the cost of the room, would bring the total to $690.

Other Ford meetings will also use AT&T rooms in other cities until Ford decides whether to install similar rooms elsewhere.

AT&T's rate and service are experimental, and the charge could be different after 1981 if the company decides to keep the service.

"To tell you the truth, we have discouraged people," said Roger Moody, AT&T assistant vice president for business markets.

It is conceivable that AT&T could drop the whole thing, but Moody said he did not think that would happen.

"The point is the intangibles," said Henry E. Hockeimer, president of Ford Aerospace.

"The facility gives us a practical alternative to having a manager spend a full day or more of travel time away from his job just getting there and back."

Hockeimer said he would use the televised conference room to replace "at least half" of his own four trips a month, two to California and two to the East Coast.

Because he takes two aides with him, he will save at least $2,268 in airline tickets a month, based on one-way coach fares of $282 to San Francisco and $96 to Philadelphia. That would buy four hours of televised conferences evenly split between Philadephia and San Francisco, before even counting meals, taxis, hotel rooms and time.

The replaced trips will be for "program review meetings," held to bring headquarters up to date on various projects.

"I may want to have program review meetings once a week to keep the pressure on," Hockeimer said.

Parker said Ford Aerospace "hypothetically scheduled 15 hours a month" of televised conferences, "but we could well exceed that."

The conference room has six seats side by side at a table, with 12 chairs arranged behind them. Slides and videotapes may be transmitted, with a copier making a print of any slide needed at the other end.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. When I retired in January, 1979, I elected to put the $51,000 from my retirement account into an annuity which will pay me $440 a month for as long as I live. If my wife survives me, she will receive $220 a month for the rest of her life. Upon the death of both of us, however, there will be nothing left for our heirs.

Am I getting the best return for my money? Or could I do better by putting my money in a six-month savings certificate for a higher return?

A. There's no doubt that, in these days of high interest rates, you are not getting the best possible return on your money. Nor is there any doubt that you would now be doing better if you had your money in a six-month savings certificate — or a fair umber of other places with little or no risk.

That $440 a month annuity check brings you $5,280 a year. On $51,000, that's 10.35 percent. Insured six-month savings certificates are yielding around 12 percent, as are short-term U.S. Treasury bills. And there are many other high-yield investments available.

But it's most unlikely that you will be able to get your money out of that annuity. An annuity is a contract — usually with an insurance company. If yours has a clause allowing you to pull out and get your $51,000, I'll be surprised. I'm afraid you're stuck.

You have what is known in the annuity business as a "joint and 50 percent survivor, non-refundable annuity." When you signed your annuity contract, interest rates were a good deal lower than they are now. The organization with which you have the annuity based the return it sends to you on January, 1979, interest rates — not the higher rates available in the market today.

About the only way to come out ahead on an annuity is to take one out when interest rates are very high and then live a very long life. Annuity-writing outfits use life expectancy tables to set payout rates.

Q. My smart-aleck son-in-law claims that it is "absolutely necessary" to deal with a broker to buy and sell stook — or even to transfer stock from one member of the family to another. I say I can avoid brokers and save commissions. What do you say?

A. You win that family argument. If you want to sell some stock you own and find someone who wants to buy it, here's what you do:

You and the buyer agree on a price. You sign the stock certificate on the back, exactly as your name appears on the front. Have your signature "guaranteed" by either a broker or a commercial bank. Deliver the certificate in person or by registered mail to the transfer agent — usually a bank — with instructions to issue a new certificate in the buyer's name.

The transfer agent will inform you what minor transfer taxes, if any, are due. You get paid by the buyer and give the buyer a bill of sale. The buyer gives you a receipt. You'll need the receipt and the buyer will need the bill of sale for tax record purposes.

For the transfer, without a sale, you go through the same basic procedures — without money changing hands. When you make a gift of stock, be sure to give the recipient records of both the price you paid and the value of the stock on the date of the gift — again for his or her tax record purposes.

Q. I have been buying 30-day commerciial paper issued by the financial subsidiary of a very large company through my bank. At first the bank charged me $25, then $35. Now the charge is $50.

Can I deal directly with the company and avoid this charge?

A. No. But you can shop around at different banks and brokerage houses in hopes of getting a lower charge. There's no such thing as a standard schedule of commissions and other fees. Everything is "negotiated" — meaning that brokers and banks can charge whatever the traffic will bear, until customers take their business elsewhere.
