NASA officials dispute commission

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP) — Four Marshall Spaceflight Center rocket experts, returning fire from a presidential commission probing the Challenger disaster, today disputed the panel's conclusion that NASA's decision-making process was "clearly flawed" in the hours before the Jan. 28 launch.

"No, I think the launch decision process is sound. I think the launch decision process in this case was sound," said Lawrence Mulloy, the space agency executive in charge of the booster rocket program. After three days of public hearings, commission chairman William Rogers on Thursday bluntly rebuked officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration for giving the go-ahead for the Challenger liftoff when engineers had expressed deep concerns about the unusually cold pre-launch weather.

Two contractors — Morton Thiokol — maker of the booster rockets, and Rockwell International, maker of the spaceplane itself — had expressed reservations. The Morton Thiokol reservations were made to Mulloy and other Marshall center officials, but when company managers reversed their recommendation and gave their go-ahead, the Marshall officials decided it was unnecessary to pass word of the opposition to top launch managers.

NASA's procedures were "clearly flawed," Rogers said.

Addressing top NASA officials, including the Marshall rocket-program managers, Rogers said: "You eliminate the element of good judgment and common sense," and added that at some point the process allowed individuals "to vote maybe" when you "should require people to take stands and you should have a record on it."

But Mulloy rejected Rogers' complaints.

"What he is describing should be done was exactly what was done. A stand was taken; a rationale for flight was developed. And it was not a 'maybe'; it was a documented 'go,'" he said.

Mulloy's superior, Marshall deputy director for science and engineering, George Hardy, said "there is an apparent difference in interpretation" between Marshall officials on the one hand and the commission and news media on the other hand with respect to Thiokol's first recommendation that the shuttle not be launched in temperatures below 53 degrees Fahrenheit.

Hardy said that "if one wants to be highly technical" Thiokol recommended against the launch early on the evening of Jan. 27.

Cogdell board approves...

Policy addresses indigent transfer

Cogdell Memorial Hospital board members unanimously accepted Thursday a state mandated policy which regulates the transfer of indigent patients from Cogdell to other area hospitals.

The Texas Department of Public Health drew up the policy to conform to standards established by the new indigent health care bill. All Texas hospitals will come under it.

The new law and the new Cogdell policy will become effective Sept. 1.

Basically, the transfer policy will guarantee an indigent patient receives care at the local level rather than being transferred because of his economic status.

The policy further guarantees that should the patient require a transfer for medical reasons, they will not be transferred until their condition stabilizes.

In other action, Don Sealy, hospital business manager, reported that 49 delinquent accounts have been filed in small claims court. Some 15 judgments have been returned to date with some $1,900 recovered.

Kathy Minemier, public relations staffer, also updated board members on planned projects. She noted that the new birthing package implemented Feb. 14, "Lullaby Lane," had "exploded."

Because community response to the program has been favorable, plans call for additional advertising to be used in surrounding areas including Colorado City, Jayton, Hamlin, Rotan, Spur and other towns.

In his report, Administrator Cy Miller noted Medicare payments will be reduced by one percent beginning March 1.

Those present for the meeting included Sealy, Miller, Dr. James Howell and board members Ralph Price, Dan Cotton, John Jarrell, Rex Robinson and Jack Denman.

Leon Autry and County Judge Preston Wilson were absent.

Jail bookings here total 2,211 in 1985

During 1985, some 2,211 individual were booked into the Scurry County Jail — equaling an average of 37 prisoners per 24-hour period at the facility.

In addition, the county realized just over $43,000 in income by incarcerating an overflow of prisoners from the Midland County jail facility during the year's last seven months.

These and other facts were presented recently to the Scurry County commissioners court by Sheriff Keith Collier.

Collier noted that of local prisoners in jail, his department averaged four transfers per month to state-maintained Texas Department of Correction facilities.

The local jail facility houses both juvenile and adult suspects booked by the sheriffs department as well as city police.

Regarding county cases, the sheriffs department processed a toal of 1,197 prisoners during the year. City prisoners processed by the county totaled 829.

The Midland County prisoners accounted for another 185 out of the 2,211 total.

Of total prisoners booked, 44 of these were juveniles or suspects under the age of 17.

Also during the year, the sheriff's department served civil papers amounting to a 1,460 total. These included papers served for the justice of the peace, 488; county, 147; district court, 525; and foreign agencies, 300.

ASCS to hold crop program

The Scurry County ASCS office will hold a meeting Tuesday to discuss details of the 1986 cotton, feed grain and wheat programs.

It will begin at 7 p.m. at the Fine Arts Theatre on the campus of Western Texas College.

Also to be discussed will be the Conservation Reserve Program. All local producers are invited to attend.

PRACTICE FEED — The Snyder Kiwanis Club will offer an all-day pancake feed Saturday at the West Elementary cafeteria. Shown waiting to test the product is Billy Robbins (right), while Mike Banta offers up a high flying creation. All-you-can-eat tickets for the 7 a.m. until 7 p.m. event are available from local Kiwanians at $3 each. Tickets will also be sold at the door. (SDN Staff Photos by Noble B. Young)

Sesqui events Sunday

Dedication of the new bandstand on the courthouse square will highlight the Sunday observance of Texas Independence Day in Snyder.

In addition, at noon Sunday locals can expect to hear the city's siren system as well as other "joyful noise" as the second official Sesquicentennial day is observed here.

The program is to get underway at 2 p.m. when the Western Texas College Vocal Ensemble will sing. Their portion of the program will be concluded with two numbers especially selected for the Sesquicentennial observance, "Hill Country Theme" and "Texas, Our Texas."

Charles Anderson, chairman of the Historical Commission, will be master of ceremonies for the program.

The significance of Texas Independence Day will be emphasized by Dr. Franklin Pruitt, long-time local Texas history teacher.

Jim Rambo, drama director at WTC, will present a bit of nostalgia based on recollections of local residents who remember the bandstand which once stood on the northwest corner of the courthouse square.

It was that bandstand which inspired the construction of the present structure, built by residential construction students at WTC. Dr. Harry Krenek, acting chief executive officer at WTC, will officially present the bandstand to the county and Hassie Sneed, commissioner for Pct. 2, will accept.

Band students from Snyder High School who have volunteered to assist with the program will present a musical salute, and red, white and blue Sesquicentennial balloons will be launched to climax the ceremonies.

These balloons may be reserved for 25 cents each at the county library. They will be available also at the event.

Randall Gray, minister of the 37th Street Church of Christ, will give the invocation. Brent Hardegree will be directing the WTC Vocal Ensemble and Walter Reneau will direct the high school musicians. The balloon launch has been planned by the Drug charge follows report of dog attack

A Dallas man recently released from prison is now incarcerated again in the Scurry County Jail after local deputies responded to reports that an individual was allowing his dog to attack other persons at a local truck stop.

Local sheriff's office personnel say they found no witnesses to verify a dog attack, but did discover prohibited drug paraphernalia and a suspected controlled substance on the suspect after he was initially charged.

Richard Lance Copeland, 37, of Dallas, now stands charged with possession of a controlled substance as well as two misdemeanor counts for possession of paraphernalia and public intoxication.

He was arrested Tuesday shortly after 10 p.m. at Rip Griffin's Truck Stop east of the city.

Deputies say Copeland's probation officer based in Dallas has also indicated they will likely seek revocation proceedings against the suspect.

He was released Feb. 4 from Texas Department of Corrections custody after serving a 60-day "shock probation" period in prison.

He arrived at the local truck stop, officers say, after he was let out by traveling companions passing through the county. The dog which accompanied Copeland — a pit bulldog — has been impounded locally.

George Dolan, in the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, told about a Texas A&M economics professor who stayed at one of those big-city hotels. He liked the hotel so much that he made a reservation for an upcoming visit. He even asked for the same room.

When he checked in, a month later, he reminded the desk clerk of his request.

"Yes, sir," said the clerk, "we have the same room set aside for you, but I'm afraid we can't let you have it at the same price. This is a big football weekend, you know, when the demands for rooms exceeds the supply, so..."

"You needn't explain," the Aggie professor interrupted. "I teach the course."

"Excuse me," said Jones, "but I'm 50 cents short this week."

"You didn't complain last week when you were 50 cents long," the paymaster replied.

"No sir," said Jones. "I don't mind overlooking one mistake. But when it happens twice, then it's time to say something."

Ask Us

Q. — Why the inconsistency with regard to county policy on employees who have to resign to run for local political office?

A. — There is no county policy regarding this. Two employees at the sheriff's department resigned to seek office following a department policy of Sheriff Keith Collier, who said he believes running for political office is a fulltime job and would detract from the time required of a fulltime staffer in his department.

Analysts say rocket maker will remain NASA contractor

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah (AP) — Despite Morton Thiokol Inc.'s role in the controversy surrounding the loss of the Challenger, industry analysts say the company faces no immediate competition in the production of space shuttle rocket boosters and will remain a prime NASA contractor into the next decade.

"There is no one else that could be up and running with the space shuttle motors," said Mary Schoenbrod, an analyst for Duff & Phelps in Chicago.

Ms. Schoenbrod and other analysts say it would take another company at least five years and more than $100 million to develop the expertise and factories to compete with the Utah manufacturer, the sole maker of the giant booster rockets since the shuttle program began in the 1970s.

Thiokol is now completing a contract for 74 rockets at an estimated cost of $15 million to $30 million each.

Analysts believe Thiokol and NASA were near final agreement on a new contract for an additional 60 "sets" of the twin boosters. The contract also provided a clause for an additional 30 sets if NASA decided to exercise that option.

The loss of the Challenger and its seven astronauts Jan. 28 has put the agreement on hold with the rest of the shuttle program. But there is little doubt within the industry that when shuttle flights resume, they will be powered by Thiokol boosters.

"NASA needs Morton and Morton needs NASA," said James Cunningham, an analyst for First Boston Corp. in New York. "Once this all dies down they will sort of return to business as usual."

Investigators have focused on the possible failure of seals in the shuttle's right rocket booster as the possible cause for the shuttle disaster. There are indications exhaust gas may have escaped from the seals, causing the explosion.

Speculation has been raised that Thiokol managers — eager to land the new contract — may have given a go-ahead for the launch of the Challenger over the warnings of their engineers that cold weather could affect the performance of the seals.

But Lawrence Mulloy, NASA's manager of the booster rockets, said there was no competition for the contract.

JAMA escalates war against tobacco items

CHICAGO (AP) — The cover illustration is a grim Van Gogh painting of a skeleton smoking a cigarette, and the contents of today's Journal of the American Medical Association's special anti-smoking issue are just as graphic.

Articles in the journal's third anti-tobacco issue in 18 months call for a ban on advertising of all tobacco products; say smokeless tobacco users risk oral cancer; cite a higher survival rate for heart patients who quit smoking; and contend a higher cigarette tax would encourage millions to stop smoking.

"It is obvious that up to this point we have all failed dismally in trying to defeat tobacco," one editorial said.

"What other conclusion could one possibly reach when one looks at the 1,000 tobacco-associated deaths each day in our country alone?" it said.

"The use of (tobacco products) we regard as the greatest current public health problem of our society."

In one article, the AMA's Council of Scientific Affairs "recommends that the restrictions applying to (broadcast) advertising of cigarettes also be applied to the advertising of snuff and chewing tobacco."

The council also said users of smokeless tobaccos are exposed to "adverse health effects, such as oral cancer."

In another article, Dr. Ronald E. Vlietstra of the Mayo Clinic wrote that the mortality rate for heart patients who quit smoking is a third less than that of those who continue to smoke.

Economist Kenneth E. Warner concluded in another study that an 8-cent to 16-cent-per-pack increase in cigarette taxes would encourage between 1 million and 2 million young people and 800,000 to 1.5 million adults to stop smoking.

Dear Abby

Mom Is Reluctant to Shatter Daughter's Dreams of Father

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Eighteen years ago I gave up my infant daughter for adoption. I was young and unmarried. Four days before I found out I was pregnant, my boyfriend told me that I was just "practice" and he was moving on to the big league, so I never told him.

Well, two years ago my daughter contacted me. We met, and she is beautiful inside and out. She asked to meet her father, but I said, "No." She accepted my decision. Her father is not the honorable person she had built him up in her mind to be. He's an alcoholic, a gambler and has been in trouble with the law. His life was—and is—a shambles.

My daughter is now begging me to tell her who her father is. She wants to meet him, and I must tell her something sooner or later.

I don't want to shatter her dreams. When I looked him up a year ago to tell him that he had a daughter, I couldn't do it. (He thought I had come to see his elderly mother.) You see, I have never stopped loving him. I need some advice. Please help me.

TORN

DEAR TORN: Children need to be protected from cruel truths, but now that your daughter is a grown woman, this information should not be kept from her. Tell her. And also tell her father that he fathered your child.

DEAR ABBY: Recently I was unable to attend a baby shower for a friend I'll call Shelley. My neighbor, "Donna," said she was invited, and would be only too glad to take my shower gift along with hers. I thought that was very nice of her.

Imagine my surprise on receiving a note from Shelley saying, "Thank you for the lovely baby gift from you and Donna."

Thinking there must have been a mix-up in the cards, I called Shelley to straighten it out and learned that with my gift was a card with my name and Donna's on it.

I then called Donna and asked the obvious question: "Why?" She replied, "I didn't have time to buy a gift, and I didn't want to come empty-handed, so I just added my name to your card."

Needless to say, I was upset. Should I ask Donna to reimburse me for half the cost of my gift, or just forget the whole thing?

Donna is better off financially than I am, but she has a reputation for being cheap.

STUMPED

DEAR STUMPED: Tell Donna she should either buy a gift and send it to Shelley, or reimburse you for her half of your gift.

DEAR ABBY: Hearing aids are so small and inconspicuous these days, why doesn't some smart inventor come up with a filter to wear in the nose so people won't be bothered with pollutants in the air?

DEAR ABBY: Please make my day, my week, my year, and print my response to "Savannah" who wrote: "Women are constantly blowing off steam about their 'insatiable' sexual appetites, no man can satisfy them. This, of course, is a myth. Women run out of gas at an early age, their limitations are responsible for the oldest profession. One of women's principal traits is whining."

Well, I am a 46-year-old insatiable female who runs on regular, unleaded and premium. I have a hearty appetite and possess no limitations that are responsible for the world's oldest profession.

And, honey, for your information, most women don't whine—they hum—when an experienced driver is at the wheel.

Ag program will help reclaim land

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has allocated five million acres of highly erodible land to the states under a new, long-range program that will be opened for signup by farmers next week.

Under the voluntary Conservation Reserve Program, authorized by Congress in last year's farm bill, up to 45 million acres of deteriorated land could be on the way to recovery by 1990.

TWA, Ozark to merge

NEW YORK (AP) — Trans World Airlines and Ozark Air Lines, facing serious losses due to low-cost competitors, have announced that TWA will buy the smaller carrier for about $250 million cash as part of a strategy to become profitable.

Thursday's announcement marked the second major airline agreement in a week and heightened predictions that more carriers will merge for fear they will go out of business unless they adapt to deregulation.

Financially troubled Eastern Airlines agreed Monday to be acquired by Texas Air Corp. for $600 million, which would make Texas Air the country's largest airline. Texas Air also operates low-cost Continental Airlines and New York Air.

"Texas Air-Eastern is telling you a story, and anybody who doesn't read it is a fool," TWA Chairman Carl C. Icahn told a news conference at TWA's New York offices, where he announced the Ozark agreement, under which Ozark would operate as a wholly owned subsidiary.

Low-cost airlines such as Southwest and People Express have hurt TWA and Ozark. TWA expects to lose about $125 million in the first quarter of this year and Ozark expects to sustain unspecified losses, Icahn said.

TWA serves 23 foreign points and 63 domestic cities with a fleet of 165 planes. Ozark's fleet of 50 planes serves 66 domestic cities, most within 400 miles of St. Louis.

"The acquisition of Ozark will deliver much-needed facilities, smaller aircraft and presence in regional markets we simply could not gain quickly any other way," Icahn told reporters.

He discounted suggestions that the government would raise antitrust objections to the merger, and said he would ask the Department of Transportation for expedited approval.

Covering all the bases

By James Jacoby

Rixi Markus, who has retired from world championship play, has long been regarded as England's leading woman player and unquestionably remains Europe's leading woman bridge writer. Her aggressive bidding style is augmented by genuine flair for precise card play, as evidenced by today's deal played some years ago.

Two diamonds was an ACOL two-bid, not completely forcing to game but showing great strength. North raised. Rixi cue-bid the heart ace, perhaps to dissuade West from leading that suit, bid four spades next and then carried on to slam over her partner's five-diamond bid.

In the play she left nothing to chance. After winning the opening trump lead, she immediately ducked a heart which East won. East continued diamonds, Rixi winning in her hand. She played to dummy's spade queen and tried a low club. (Sometimes a suspicious East with the club ace and no queen will immediately rise.) When East played the club jack, she ruffed and now played out three more rounds of high spades. Unlucky East had to follow as declarer shed a heart from dummy. The ace of hearts and a heart ruff completed her plan and she now had 12 tricks and her slam contract.

Budget cuts may be hard on UTEP

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The University of Texas at El Paso may be unable to handle an additional 13 percent budget cut requested by Gov. Mark White, the chairman of the Select Committee on Higher Education says.

Larry Temple of Austin said Thursday UTEP already is struggling under the most serious financial difficulties of the 38 Texas public colleges and universities.

"It may be this institution falls short of being able to have a 13 percent cut," Temple said.

Temple predicted UTEP and other Texas colleges will have to ask the Legislature for special appropriations to help cushion already severe revenue shortfalls.

He said the Legislative Budget Board and other state agencies underestimated the impact of steeper statewide tuition on Texas college enrollment.

Losses at UTEP have included $2 million in revenue and an estimated 1,200 students since the new tuition rates went into effect in the fall.

A $6.5 million state allocation is inadequate to help colleges and universities cope with tuition revenue losses, Temple said. Latest state estimates put the state-wide tuition revenue shortfall at $24.2 million.

Temple said the state mandate is to cut back and eliminate costs without undermining the quality of service in all areas of government, not just higher education.

"I'm enough of an optimist to say I don't see a cutback in quality (education) yet at this point," he said.

UTEP President Haskell Monroe told the committee an additional 13 percent budget cut would affect educational programs and services severely and would compound the university's financial difficulties.

"If we were required to make a 13 percent reduction in our budget, I fear that this institution, like many others in the state, would not be able to provide the services which the people of the state expect us to provide," Monroe said.

Earlier in the hearing, witnesses told the committee that more cooperation between industry and higher education along the border will benefit Texas and Mexico as they move into the 21st century.

"To us, Mexico is not just our neighbor but our economic partner," County Judge Pat O'Rourke, El Paso's highest administrative officer, told the committee, similar to the H. Ross Perot committee that drew up school reforms in 1984.

O'Rourke was one of four panelists representing local government, business and higher education.

Tuition waivers for Mexican students, more vocational training "essential to El Paso's growth," programs to educate Hispanics and Americans about each other's culture and better accountability of those who manage higher education were among O'Rourke's recommendations to the committee.

O'Rourke and UTEP President Monroe agreed that the university needs more doctoral programs.

Temple said he had received the same request for more doctoral programs in southern Texas and the Panhandle, where the committee has heard testimony. The question, Temple said, is whether Texas can afford to set up such expensive programs in every part of state.

"For 355 years, (even) before Texas was founded, El Paso was already in business," O'Rourke said. "We have a unique opportunity to affect Mexico and South America."

Committee member Joe McCormick asked why the panelists did not recommend similar tuition breaks for American out-of-state students.

"As a Mexican citizen, I don't expect Texas taxpayers to solve the educational needs of the Mexicans," said panelist Federico Barrio. "But also as a Mexican citizen, I'd rather have the University of Texas (at El Paso) solve those problems rather than the University of Moscow."

The Juarez businessman explained to the committee the development of twin plants, or maquiladoras, in which the labor-intensive work on a product is done in Mexico, where labor is cheap, while leaving the capital-intensive part of production in the United States.

"The plants have found all levels of educated workers produced by Mexican or Texan schools and have increased the size and complexity of operations," said Barrio, who said the trend is for the twin plants to increase in size and number along the border.

Meese conducts news conference

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese said today that ousted Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos has been a longtime friend to the United States and granting him asylum is not "a liability."

At a news conference, Meese wouldn't say whether Marcos is under federal investigation concerning his possessions and wealth he reportedly brought into Hawaii with him.

"I have no personal knowledge of violations of any federal laws," Meese said. "It appears that the laws are being observed. Apparently, they have been reporting what they brought in accordingly."

The attorney general said he also couldn't comment on how the administration would respond if the new Philippine government asked the United States to return Marcos' possessions.

"I think Mr. Marcos has been a friend to the United States," he said. "I don't see this as being a liability at all."

Meese, who arrived in this Dallas suburb Thursday to speak as a guest lecturer at the University of Dallas, hosted a news conference today.

He said that although independent federal regulatory agencies have been criticized as being "a politically unaccountable fourth branch of national government," he does not see the need for reforms or restrictions.

Such agencies include the Federal Reserve Board, Federal Trade Commission and the Federal Communications Communications.

Whereabouts of javelina unknown

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Where's Bubba?

The question was approached Thursday when a judge ordered Texas Department of Parks and Wildlife officials to say where Bubba the javelina was released after being taken from a Corpus Christi family.

Soon after state District Court Judge Walter Dunham Jr. issued the order, Assistant Attorney General Reed Lockhoof said he would appeal the ruling to the 13th Court of Appeals.

Bubba's whereabouts will remain a mystery until the litigation winds its way through appeals court.

Network to premiere 2 situation comedies

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC is offering two different approaches to raising teen-agers who are raising Cain. Jack Klugman's "You Again" takes the high-decibel road. Valerie Harper's "Valerie" takes the low-key road.

Both comedies show that the parent-adolescent alliance is full of false starts, limit-testing and, at best, accommodations. Neither shows the relationship to be particularly funny, although Miss Harper's believable, tender-spirited sitcom holds far greater promise.

"You Again" stars Klugman as a divorced husband who has grown comfortable living alone and John Stamos as his 17-year-old rambunctious son who moves in with Dad after living with Mom for seven years. "You Again" was assured a large sampling when it was introduced Thursday night after "The Cosby Show." It moves to its regular Monday (8 p.m. EST) time slot next week.

"Valerie" will be unveiled Saturday night before landing in its regular Monday time slot behind Klugman's show.

"Valerie" casts Miss Harper as a sensitive '80s mother who raises her three boys virtually alone because her airline-pilot husband seems to be earning his wings every day. The three kids are a 16-year-old who is starting to feel his oats (Jason Bateman) and 13-year-old twins, one more bookish (Jeremy Licht), the other more devilish (Danny Ponce).

This is a logical progression for Miss Harper. She first won fame as the overweight, neurotic best chum on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," then spun off the Rhoda character into her own series. That show uncovered a slimmer, more confident Rhoda who found marital bliss with David Groh before it evolved into amicable separation.

Now she has the young, suburban family she's never had, allowing her to give her mothering to kids rather than adults for a change. It's these new relationships that distinguish Miss Harper's new venture from Miss Moore's "Mary," which, essentially, is a new, but not improved version of her old desktop comedy.

Miss Harper manages to bring her best qualities — sincerity, caring and her self-aware imperfection — to parenting. It's "Mother Knows Best," but not until some trial and error and tribulation. As the theme song suggests with its line, "love that starts by letting go," the learning process is open at both ends.

The opening program is pleasant and shows respect for the kids. But, when measured for laughs, it's only mildly amusing, although it never goes for the cheap joke, without which "You Again" would be just 30 minutes of pantomime shouting and hand gestures.

The best thing about "You Again" is Stamos, the former heartthrob on the daytime soap "General Hospital." He has a twinkly charm and effective comic timing that softens the edges of his James Dean-type teen-ager.

As for Klugman, who starred in "The Odd Couple" and "Quincy," his manic bluster has worn thin. At the end of the show, his bickering relationship with his son, which lacks any semblance of genuine affection, has gotten to him and he looks upward for divine assistance.

Obviously, the last hope of a desperate man and an even more desperate comedy.

DPS seize 'coke', arrest 3 persons

FALFURRIAS, Texas (AP) — Three men are in the Brooks County Jail after authorities confiscated more than 800 pounds of cocaine valued at $137 million, officials said.

The seizure was the third largest in Texas history, Department of Public Safety spokesman Mike Cox said Thursday.

The cocaine was seized after DPS narcotics agents — with help from federal marshals and Brooks County sheriff's deputies — stopped a tractor-trailer rig in front of the county courthouse in this South Texas town Wednesday night, authorities said.

"We found a load of onions covering 862.5 pounds of cocaine packed in large bales," DPS spokesman David Wells said.

The driver of the 18-wheel rig, Donald Nephi Watnon, 58, of Rockville, Md., was charged with aggravated possession of a controlled substance and was jailed in lieu of $500,000 bond, Wells said.

Also arrested in South Texas were Charles Keaton, 52, of McAllen and Arnoldo Perez, 52.

Radiologist diagnoses pain

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Actor Burt Reynolds had it, and the rumor mongers surmised it was something worse. Olympic skier Tracy Nelson may have gotten it from bumpy trips downhill. And some musicians may get it from playing the clarinet.

It's called temporomandibular joint syndrome — TMJ for short — and is believed to afflict 10 million Americans, many of whom have learned to accept headaches and pain in their jaws because doctors and dentists have had trouble understanding and diagnosing the disorder.

"It's embarrassing for them (doctors and dentists) not to know what is causing a problem and what you don't understand you tend to sweep under the rug," said Dr. Richard W. Katzberg, a radiologist at the University of Rochester Medical Center.

Using a magnetic resonance imager, the latest breakthrough in medical scanning devices, and a copper coil attachment that acts as a magnifier, Katzberg has developed a diagnosis technique he believes will solve the mystery of TMJ once and for all.

For many Americans, who can only open their mouths half way or who hear a clicking sound when they move their jaws or who get persistent headaches, the new technique may eventually mean relief.

Katzberg's method is detailed in the January issue of Radiology, the journal of the Radiological Society of North America.

TMJ occurs when the cartilage that's supposed to act as a cushion between the jaw bone (the mandible) and the skull (the temporal bone) slips out of place. The joint involved is just in front of the ear.

With the cartilage out of place, the bones grate against exposed nerve tissue and each other, causing pain and headaches, and eventually leading to arthritis.

Mexico undecided about loaning flag

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Mexican government has not made a final decision yet on whether to loan a flag that flew over the Alamo to Texas for its Sesquicentennial celebration, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said Thursday.

"The U.S. Embassy has been told that no decision has been made as to whether the flag will or will not be loaned to the state of Texas for its celebration," spokesman Lee Johnson said.

Yet there is little expectation here that the battle flag, believed to be the only one flying over the historic San Antonio mission when it fell to the Mexican army in 1836, will be allowed to leave Mexico.

Mexican officials have said repeatedly that it is undergoing restoration in a Mexico City museum and cannot be loaned or photographed.

Also, the subject of Texas' independence and the loss of the northwest Mexican territory that now makes up the southwestern United States is a touchy one and officials are reluctant to comment publicly.

U.S. Ambassador John Gavin said at a Feb. 6 news conference that the loan would be "the kind of exchange that indicates good relations between two neighbors" and "it would be a very friendly gesture on the part of Mexico."

He said he had written President Miguel de la Madrid asking that the battle flag be loaned to Texas.

The flag in question belonged to the New Orleans Grays, a contingent of soldiers from Louisiana. It was torn down and taken back to Mexico as proof that the United States was aiding the Texans.

It is not clear if the flag is in storage at the National History Museum in Chapultepec Park or at the National Museum of Interventions in the Coyoacan district of Mexico City.

A television crew from Texas that tried to locate the flag for filming earlier this month was unsuccessful.

The Texas congressional delegation last year appealed to de la Madrid to allow the flag to leave Mexico for the sesquicentennial celebration.

The Alamo defeat was a rallying point for Texans fighting for their independence from Mexico.

"...about Atheists and Agnostics"

By Randall Gray

The difference between these two terms is a matter of degree. The atheist says, "I know there is no God. God does not exist." The agnostic, on the other hand, says, "I don't know if God exists, or not."

Both these attitudes are condemned by the Bible. The atheistic attitude is condemned by passages like Psalm 14:1, "The fool hath said in his heart, 'There is no God.'" The agnostic attitude is also condemned. "Anyone who comes to God must believe that He exists, and that He rewards those who earnestly seek him." Heb. 11:6

The fact of the matter is that belief in God's existence is the base, the foundation of Christian faith. Nothing spiritual can be built in a person's life unless this foundation is first laid. How do you lay this foundation? Read Rom. 10:17 to find out.

Fitzwater okayed by panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the leader of the opposition breaking ranks and voting for him, 32-year-old Texas judge Sidney A. Fitzwater was approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee in an otherwise partisan, 10-5, vote.

If approved by the full Senate, Fitzwater would become the nation's youngest sitting federal judge.

"I'm sure he's probably philosophically more conservative than I am, since he was nominated by Phil Gramm, but I just felt that, on balance, the right vote was to confirm him," said Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said he was "obviously delighted" by Thursday's committee vote.

"It's been a long and difficult process," Gramm said.

Simon is the Democrats' "point man" on judicial nominations, and had led the move to have Fitzwater recalled for a second hearing before the committee to answer questions about his participation in the posting of intimidating anti-voter fraud signs in minority Dallas precincts just before the 1982 election.

"I think the fundamental question is, is he going to play it straight or is he going to be a person of prejudice on questions as they relate to race," said Simon.

Cisneros: budget battle is really 'matter of equality'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even an increase in defense, which could benefit his military-heavy city, is not worth losing urban programs axed by President Reagan's proposed federal budget, says San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros.

Reagan has proposed cutting or eliminating many urban program grants but wants an increase in defense spending.

"I think what we have to recognize in San Antonio is if we lose the CDBG (Community Development Block Grant) program and if we lose housing initiatives and if we lose a whole host of social programs, but we gain the possibility of the services of a new weapons system at Kelly Air Force Base, that that is not an equal trade," said Cisneros, who testified with other mayors, including New York's Ed Koch, at a hearing before the House Budget Committee on Thursday.

Speaking as president of the National League of Cities, Cisneros told Budget Chairman William Gray, D-Pa., that Reagan's proposed budget constitutes a dismantling of the partnership between the cities and the federal government.

"If we lose that, then I think what we will have lost is something very profound, the sense of Americans that they are living in a country that still believes in some ideals, a nation working for all its people, that sense of equality that makes it possible to sacrifice now in order that there's a better life around the corner," Cisneros said.

"If we lose that, we're going to be a nation of people who demand everything now, adversarial, hostility, and that's the stakes in this budget discussion."

The League of Cities favors a spending freeze and use of tax reform to find money to reduce the federal deficit, Cisneros said. He said Congress has erected a "Berlin Wall" between the budget process and tax reform.

"I understand the tendency, particularly of a committee like this, to want to separate what's happening on the spending side from the tax code. But in the cities, we catch it from both sides," Cisneros said. "On the one hand, the money is reduced and on the other, the capacity to fend for ourselves is eliminated."

Cisneros was referring to a provision in the tax reform measure that has effectively frozen the municipal bond market. The proposed bill would make many municipal bonds taxable, retroactive to Jan. 1, so bond houses have been unable to certify bonds as tax free.

Cisneros said San Antonio has not offered any bonds because of the tax reform bill.

James Michner gives $1 million donation

AUSTIN (AP) — Best-selling author James Michener so firmly believes the University of Texas should have a top-notch writing program that he is giving the school $1 million to help start one.

"My husband is a Quaker. He is a writer. And he has said whatever money he makes from the arts goes back to the arts," Mari Michener said after the gift was announced.

University president William Cunningham said the money will be used to help create two graduate programs — in writing and book publishing.

The gift will be "a tremendous assist to our hopes, dreams and plans," Cunningham said, explaining that Michener has been encouraging the university to establish a "first-class" writers' program for some time.

"Mr. Michener remarks that it (the donation) has been made possible in part by the wide acceptance of his novel, 'Texas,' both in the state and elsewhere," Cunningham added.

The donation was announced during ceremonies marking publication of a special edition of that best-selling novel. Published by the University of Texas Press, the two-volume limited edition of "Texas" is being released to mark Sunday's 150th anniversary of Texas' independence from Mexico.

The $1 million contribution adds to the growing list of ties between Michener and the university.

The author of more than 30 books, Michener came to UT in the fall of 1982 at the invitation of then-Gov. Bill Clements to write "Texas."

West first graders...

Give your students a home project, get their parents involved and the results can be fantastic," said Mrs. Martha Floyd, first grade teacher at West Elementary.

Her 23 students have discovered the best way to find out about Snyder is to build it--on a small scale that is. Since the task was deemed too much for teacher and students to do alone parents were asked to "come forward and get involved."

Higginbotham Bartlett Lumber Co. donated scrap lumber for the project. Each child chose the place of business he or she wanted to construct. Some chose the place where mom or dad works.

Since planning was needed before the actual construction began, parent and child, with a pad and pencil in hand, drove to the location of the business they wanted to build to make a sketch of it. They decided on various details such as sidewalks, flagpoles, parking lots, trees and the color and shape of the buildings.

"The buildings turned out so realistic and can be so easily identified," Mrs. Floyd said. "The children are so proud of the results and they are eager to show parents and friends their little town of Snyder.

As a followup the children were expected to find out information about the different businesses and give an oral report to the class. This was a good learning experience, Mrs. Floyd said.

Six-year-old Sheila Wiseman showed her elaborate courthouse, along with the white buffalo and the bandstand. She reported that you might need to go to the courthouse "if you get a ticket for not fastening your seatbelt or to get a copy of your birth certificate or to get a marriage license."

Julie Jenkins displayed her school building, complete with playground equipment, bikes and schoolbuses. She painted little children in the windows of the school house. She told the class what is taught at school and how much education a person needs to become a teacher. She concluded by saying, "education is free to all of us."

Clark Church knew first hand about his dad's veterinarian business. "Sometimes a cow has trouble giving birth to a calf and my dad has to assist by doing..." His animal clinic was complete with pens and animals.

Dr. Church said his son had been drawing plans for days. "We're excited about doing the project."

Meagan Hill made a "Sugar Plum Tree." She learned that the clothes are purchased in Dallas. The owner decided on the store name after looking through a nursery rhyme book.

Luke Green visited with a banker and found out how to open up a savings account. His bank was complete with a drive-in window.

Troy Allen showed his airport, hangar and runway. He explained about the jet fuel pump and the flags to show the direction of the wind.

David Clarady knew all about his dad's work at G&G Glass. "He fixes broken car windows after a wreck." He let the class know that handling glass was dangerous.

Melanie Gibson had a complete layout of the WTC campus. The buildings were shaped out of styrofoam and sprinkled with a sand and glue mixture to resemble adobe. Her dad, John Gibson, teaches art classes at WTC so Melanie was able to share some facts about the college.

If you want to know more about cutting horses and race horses, ask Clayton West who chose to make their ranch. He included buildings, fences and many animals. He told about working on a ranch.

Don't be afraid to go to the hospital when you're sick," Stephanie Spencer told the class as she explained how the hospital staff helps people. "I got to paint the little handicap signs on the parking lot."

The firemen have a very important job. They save people's lives and homes everyday.

Kristi Sowell's post office is a little miniature version of the real thing. As you peep inside you can see the mail boxes with people walking into and out of the building. She has a U. S. flag and the shrubs are made of hay and sprayed green. "Many people get mail from around the world here. A person puts the flag up every morning and takes it down at night."

Jessica Hodges' red brick library has a gravel roof and a car parked outdoors. "There are books about many things. They also have films and magazines," she said.

Emily Rice told the class that "every day new things come to the K-Mart store. Some trucks come from a warehouse in Corsicana, Tex."

"Josh insisted on doing his project all by himself," said his mother, Melanie Kornegay. Josh showed his display of cars at his Denson's Car Lot.

The largest building of all is the Scurry County Coliseum. It was constructed of wood and has glass doors across the front. Jeremy Clifton brought a collection of little people to make it seem more realistic.

Alicia Blakey's Burgess Pharmacy has a drive in window. "When you go to a doctor he gives you a perscription to get filled," she said.

Tony Gonce's service station has gas pumps and cars.

Corey Williamson brought a pump jack to share.

Kyle Mueller explained what you could buy at a Safeway store. "It has electric doors, too," he said.

Matthew Miller worked several days with his dad on the church building. He told about the work of the church helpers.

Molly Wilson went to the John Deere place to get an authentic sign to put in front of the tractor house she built by herself.

Little photographs were glued in the windows of Pam Zeck's Photography Studio. Her daughter, Emily, painted the awning at the front. "Mom has a room in the studio where little children can't go."

The first week in March is designated Public School Week. All parents are invited to visit their child's school. Mrs. Floyd said that her group of first graders are making plans to dress up like little business people. "We expect to see a nurse, rancher, post office worker, service station attendant, and many other 'little adults' walking the halls of West Elementary."

Brazil recorded an estimated growth rate of 4.5 percent in gross domestic product in 1984, the third highest in Latin America behind Costa Rica and Chile, according to the InterAmerican Development Bank. This compares with a 3.1 percent annual rate of growth for Latin America as a while.

Crowder, Briscoe, White all debate about debating

AUSTIN (AP) — The Democratic gubernatorial debate on debating continues, with two of Gov. Mark White's opponents claiming he is trying to duck them.

But a White spokesman called that nonsense, saying the governor will be participating in a debate-like forum March 11.

Dallas businessman Andrew Briscoe said Thursday he doesn't think White wants his Democratic opponents to challenge him face-to-face.

"I can only assume Mark White knows his strengths and weaknesses, and if I had his four-year record I would hate to have to justify that," Briscoe said Thursday.

McKinney lawyer A. Don Crowder said White was engaged in "stalling tactics," and described it as "just another example of White's lack of leadership and indecisiveness that have marked his entire first term."

White, who is seeking re-election, has said he is willing to debate his Democratic opponents.

Crowder said he has asked state Democratic officials to try to persuade White to debate.

"My reasoning was that it seemed foolish to allow the Republicans millions of dollars worth of free air time with which to rip the Democratic Party and Mark White in particular," he said.

The Texas League of Women Voters is sponsoring a GOP candidates debate in April. That session will be offered to television stations statewide. But league officials say they have been unable to make arrangements for a Democratic debate.

White's campaign press secretary, Mark McKinnon, said Thursday that White is not only interested in facing his opponents — he will.

The meeting will come at a panel discussion featuring the major gubernatorial candidates, scheduled to be held before a Texas Daily Newspaper Association meeting on March 11.

Officials of the newspaper group said White, Crowder, Briscoe and Republicans Bill Clements, Tom Loeffler and Kent Hance all were invited to take part.

Although the panel session isn't a formal debate, McKinnon said that since all would be there and have an opportunity to speak, "That's a debate."

In other political developments Thursday:

— Hance accused Clements of breaking the GOP's "11th Commandment" against criticizing fellow Republicans by calling Hance "ignorant" in a recent campaign appearance. Hance also said Clements later denied it.

"I think that Clements is now ashamed for breaking the 11th commandment and is now engaging in a little bit of a coverup," Hance said.

Psychological problems of hostages are called severe

DALLAS (AP) — People taken hostage during terrorist attacks aboard airplanes may suffer the same type of psychological trauma as prisoners of war, a psychiatrist told a convention of lawyers who deal with laws of the air.

Some hostages may suffer "post traumatic stress disorder" long after they are freed, Dr. Gerald J. McKenna said Thursday at the 20th Southern Methodist University Air Law Symposium.

"Post traumatic stress disorder is firmly found in a variety of 20th century experiences," including hostage cases, said McKenna, of the Beverly Neuropsychiatric Center in Los Angeles.

Symptoms of the disorder include recurrent, intrusive memories of the ordeal and frequent dreams about it, he said. A person may also feel detached or numb to his world.

The stress disorder can occur when someone is subjected "to something so disastrous that most anyone would be stressed," he said.

"Hostages are highly vulnerable to psychological problems and they need to be recognized," he said, adding that such problems are treatable.

But the disorder is hard to diagnosis and may be misinterpreted as depression or anxiety, he said.

"You need to get someone familiar with the disorder," he said.

And the belief that people who are victims of terrorist acts at airports have no rights unless they are on board an airplane is slowly evaporating, attorney Marc S. Moller told those attending the symposium.

"Terrorism is a facet of the 80s' environment we're just going to have to live with and come to grips with," said Moller, who has worked on cases involving terrorist victims.

In 1974, some cases involving claims filed by victims of terrorist acts at airports were dismissed on the basis that criminals acts were not forseeable, Moller said.

But as terrorism increases, Moller said, "no one can suggest that terrorist attacks aren't possible at airports."

"When you get this type of client, don't send him out saying he has no rights," he said.

Moller talked about the anguish suffered by those on board the TWA jetliner hijacked last summer after it left Greece. Many of the passengers were held hostage in Beirut.

"What is mental anguish worth? Have a man kept in Lebanon for 17 days tell you about it. I doubt if you'll have to worry about small verdicts," he said.

In 1920, Holland refused to turn former German Kaiser Wilhelm II over to the Allies for punishment as a war criminal.

Bruising may be sign of illness

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Lately I've been bruising really easily, and it takes a long time for the bruises to disappear. I'm a college student and, needless to say, I don't eat very well. Could I be missing something important in my diet?

DEAR READER — You bet. Go to the student health service and get a checkup. Easy bruising is not normal and may reflect a dietary deficiency or a problem with your coagulation system. Bruising is sometimes an early sign of mononucleosis. Have you been feeling unusually run-down lately?

DEAR DR. GOTT — How would you treat me if I had classical migraine, Meniere's disease, chronic back strain, hypotension and nervous disorders? I'm a male, 36.

DEAR READER — I would send you to a neurologist. Migraine can be prevented by using beta-blockers. Meniere's disease may be helped by anti-motion-sickness medicine. Chronic back strain may require special exercises. Hypotension, if it exists as an ailment, doesn't require treatment. Nervous disorders tend to make everything worse. So it's off to the neurologist to see if your panoply of complaints has a common origin.

DEAR DR. GOTT — After my friend's children are in the pool they go into her air-conditioned house. Couldn't they get sick?

DEAR READER — Yes, but not from the air conditioner. Colds are caused by viruses. You don't catch a cold by getting cold, unless that exposure is prolonged and upsets your resistance to disease. I doubt that the change from pool to house is likely to affect healthy children. However, they could get sick from being exposed to a contagious disease.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am 74 and have osteoporosis. Everything I read about this bone disease tells how to prevent it. I'm interested in knowing some measures I can take to prevent broken bones. I take Indocin and calcium.

DEAR READER — I am sorry to tell you that at age 74, you can do little to prevent broken bones — except to avoid having accidents or falling. The use of calcium and vitamin D may help to arrest mineral loss from your bones, but what is gone is gone. The purpose of treatment is really to prevent further calcium loss. Had you maintained a high calcium intake since your reproductive years, you might have been able to avoid some osteoporosis, but doctors did not commonly recommend calcium supplements years ago. In my opinion, the most appropriate approach is to see a metabolism specialist (endocrinologist), who may wish to alter your dose of calcium and vitamin D, consider estrogen, add a thiazide diuretic, use fluoride or try calcitonin (a new drug therapy).

If you have questions about MENOPAUSE, you can get answers in Dr. Gott's new Health Report on the subject. Send 75 cents plus a long self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2597, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to ask for the Health Report on Menopause.

Sophs come through as Dusters clip SPC

LEVELLAND -- Coach Kelly Chadwick's Dusters relied on experience to defeat South Plains 65-63 and wrap up second place in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference here Thursday night.

The victory puts the Dusters at 23-8 for the season as they prepare to face Weatherford next Tuesday in the first round of the Women's Region V Tournament in Snyder. South Plains, 18-10, will take the Western Junior College Athletic Conference's third seed into the tourney and open with McLennan Community College.

"Our sophomores really came through for us. They made the difference. And I tell you, we had a freshman that really put in some pressure free throws for us, too," said Coach Chadwick after the victory.

Chadwick was referring to Gigi Robinson, who provided what were eventually the winning points when she notched two free throws with 22 seconds left in the game.

Ironically, the down-to-the-wire contest started off as a runaway by the Dusters. They rattled off the first 15 points of the ballgame, holding South Plains scoreless until Penny Elkins scored two free throws with 13:57 to play in the first half.

Western went on to lead 24-8, but began to lose authority with about six minutes to go in the half.

"Our offense broke down," mused Chadwick. "We had worked very hard on a zone offense and they started off that way. I thought they would because they had used a man-to-man against us before and it wasn't too successful. But they changed their defense and we came down and missed some shots and began to get out of our offense. And, they (South Plains) started shooting the ball better. They were doing a good job offensively but our post defense was atrociously poor."

The Lady Texans outscored WTC 15-3 during a three-minute time span to pull within three points, 29-26, with about two and a half minutes to play. Western held the lead and went into halftime ahead 35-29.

Western got into foul trouble early in the second half. Brenda Welch, 5-10 freshman, got her fourth infraction just three minutes deep into the half. Her third and fourth fouls came just 28 seconds apart.

South Plains eventually tied the game 39-39 on a basket by Sally Walling. Walling later gave the Late buckets won't drop...

South Plains edges Western

LEVELLAND -- Western Texas College's Westerners came up empty here Thursday night as they missed two shots that would have forced an overtime before falling to South Plains 77-73 in the regular season finale.

The victory gave South Plains sole possession of second place in the Westerner Junior College Athletic Conference and assured the Texans of a second place seeding in next week's Region V Tournament. Western, which had only a scant hope of taking the second seed, will go into the tournament seeded third.

Coach Phil Spradling's Westerners had the Texans bewildered in the first half. The Westerners went in front by 11 points, 33-22, when John Lewis stole the ball and scored a lay up with 5:43 to go in the half.

The score at intermission was 43-34 in favor of Western Texas.

But South Plains began to get hot in the second half. Western was hurt inside when 6-9 sophomore Cliff Langford drew his fourth foul with 15:29 still to go, and the Texans had an advantage on the boards.

The score was still a nine-point spread, 51-42, before Reggie Gibbs and 6-8 sophomore Henry James scored back-to-back buckets for the hosts. Lavell Garror added a free throw with 12:54 remaining to put the Texans within five points.

It wasn't until 7:36, however, that Garror scored off of a WTC turnover to give South Plains its first lead of the game, 60-59. The scoreboard flashed a different leader with the next 12 buckets as Western and SPC traded blows.

Western led 71-70 and got the ball back on a rebound by James Dawn but the Westerners were called for charging. Again, Western got the ball back - this time on a rebound from Ed Teal. The visitors were whistled for another turnover, however.

South Plains finally took advantage of the whistles and Robby Garner scored for a 72-71 lead with 1:16 left.

Darryl Rudolph and Western's Dawn aced a pair of free throws apiece as the game moved inside the minute mark. Dawn's gave the Westerners what would be their final points of the contest.

South Plains had a chance to go in front by three points when Rudolph went to the line with 23 seconds to play. He hit the front end of a bonus situation but couldn't connect on the second. Langford rebounded and Western went down the floor as time was running out.

George Moore arched a short jumper but it missed the mark. Western stayed alive when Langford came down with the rebound. Langford had trouble controlling the ball, however, and there were just eight seconds left when he scooped it off the floor and tried a six-foot one-handed shot - apparently not hearing Coach Spradling's desperate cries for a time out.

South Plains rebounded Langford's effort and added its final two points when Gibbs was fouled and sank two free throws with four seconds left.

Lee led Western, now 19-10, with 28 points. Dawn scored 19, Teal 12 and Lewis 10.

The Texans, who will take a 23-8 record into next week's tournament, got 20 points from Rudolph, 14 from James, 13 from Lorne Joshua and 11 from Gibbs.

Levelland outlasts top-rated 'Cats with clutch free throws

AUSTIN (AP) - In a rematch of their 1983 state championship battle, the Levelland Loboettes defeated Calallen again in the feature game of Thursday's opening day of the 1986 girls' state high school basketball tournament.

Calallen was undefeated and ranked No. 1 in the state, but No. 2-ranked Levelland took an early lead, built it to nine points in the third quarter, and then got accuracy at the free throw line to hold off Calallen's closing rally.

Levelland's 49-40 victory put the Loboettes into Saturday's championship game against A&M Consolidated, which defeated McKinney 65-48 Thursday night.

In other state tournament action Thursday, defending champion Nazareth and Snook won berths in the Class 1A finals, while Ingleside and Sour Lake-Hardin Jefferson advanced into the Class 3A championship games.

Class 2A and 5A schools are in action today to complete Saturday's round of five championship matches. In 2A, it's Abernathy vs. Olney and Rogers vs. Paris Demar-West Lamar. In 5A, it's Victoria vs. Houston Yates and Tyler Lee vs. Irving MacArthur.

Levelland 49, Calallen 40

Kristi Schonerstedt hit three free throws in the final minute to ice the upset victory and their spot in the 4A finals. The Loboettes improved their record to 31-2.

Calallen, led by Christie Shippy's 14 points and 11 rebounds, cut Levelland's nine-point third-quarter lead to five, 45-40, with 1:21 left in the game. Schonerstedt hit one free throw with 1:30 left and a pair with 56 seconds left to stifle the Wildcats' comeback.

Kim Cavanaugh was Levelland's top scorer with 16 points, despite fouling out with 5:43 left in the game.

Levelland, whose coach, Dean Weese, once coached the Dallas Diamonds in a women's protessional basketball league, improved its record to 31-2 with the win over Calallen.

Ingleside 48, Vernon 47

Vernon came literally within inches of making a repeat trip to the Class 3A championship game that it captured last year. But a hurried, desperation shot just before the final buzzer wouldn't fall.

Vernon led 46-45 with 1:12 left in the game, but Stacie Scott and LeAnn Collums missed the first of 1-and-1 free throw situations, and Shannon Griffith swished three of four free throws for Ingleside.

This gave Ingleside a 48-47 lead, and it had Julie Redden at the free throw line with nine seconds remaining.

Redden missed her first shot, and after Vernon rebounded, LaSonya Hall of Vernon pushed up a 25-footer with four seconds left. The ball bounced off the rim, but Collums got the rebound. Her seemingly cinch three-foot shot that would have won the game missed as time expired. She was in tears 20 minutes later.

Lisa McKitrick, a 6-2 senior, scored 26 points and grabbed 16 rebounds for Ingleside.

Scott had 16 points for Vernon. Collums and Hall added 12 points each.

The Lady Tigers shot a first-day 395 with Leslie Light's 94 leading the way.

In addition to Light's 94, Xalyn Harris shot a 96, Michelle Holder a 104, Angie Lay a 101 and Camille Reed a 109.

The girls were to finish play in the tournament today, then trek to Lubbock for the Lubbock Invitational on Saturday.

Houston makes space in Midwest Division

by The Associated Press

The Houston Rockets couldn't shrug it off as just another game.

Center Akeem Olajuwon was still sidelined by a knee injury, and the Rockets were playing host to Denver, the team that trailed them in the Midwest Division standings.

But Ralph Sampson scored 31 points, and Robert Reid, playing more in Olajuwon's absence, scored 23 as the Rockets defeated the Nuggets 117-111 Thursday to open up a 2½-game lead in the division.

"Denver could say this is just another win for us and the road game speaks for itself," Reid said, "but this is a big win for us and they know it."

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Washington 114, Golden State 102; Utah 109, Indiana 92, and Seattle 107, Portland 94.

Reid hit many of his baskets from the outside and scored 17 points in the second half when the Rockets rallied from a 12-point deficit to take control.

Alex English had 35 points for Denver, which led 61-53 at halftime.

Frogs still looking for title

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - The Texas Christian Horned Frogs get one more chance to earn a piece of their first Southwest Conference basketball title in 15 years.

Tight and tense TCU suffered its worst loss of the season Wednesday night, getting blown out 62-52 by the Texas Tech Red Raiders.

The loss got Texas and Texas A&M back into the title picture as Texas Tech rode the career-high 25 points of Tony Benford to knock TCU back into a tie with Texas for the SWC leadership with 12-3 records.

Texas A&M lurks a game back at 11-4 with a Saturday game on the road in Arkansas left on the schedule.

TCU plays at Houston Saturday night while Texas hosts the Raiders Sunday afternoon in Austin. If TCU beats Houston it can still clinch the No. 1 seed in the SWC post-season tournament in Dallas next week and at least the co-championship.

TCU had no magic in Lubbock, a graveyard where the Frogs have lost 13 of their last 14 games.

"I think we were awfully tight," TCU Coach Jim Killingsworth said. "We just never got anything going. We just didn't play good. It was a simple as that."

Texas Tech's Tobin Doda said the Red Raiders could sense the Frogs wanted to win too much.

"They might have had a little pressure on them because they were trying to win the championship," said Doda. "We were loose. I think at the end they were pressing a little bit. They were frustrated."

Killingsworth didn't relish the idea of playing in Houston in Coach Guy V. Lewis' regular season finale.

"It won't be easy going to Houston but I guess we have to," said Killingsworth. "We're really put a lot of pressure on ourselves now."

Carl Lott, who led TCU with 21 points, said, "Coach Killingsworth told us Tech would come out fired up and they did, but we obviously didn't."

DUSTERS WIN

hosts their first lead, 41-40, with 13:06 to play.

Lyndon Hardin's Lady Texans battled even with the Dusters the rest of the way with neither team gaining an edge in momentum. South Plains kept a scant lead until late, when Western's sophomore tamdem of Angela Jeans and Pam Cox led a determined rally.

"We knew we had to do it," stated Jeans, who said she was "still in shock" after the game. "We had to do everything we could to try and pull it out."

Jeans aced a 20-footer to put Western within two, 61-59 with 1:29 to play. South Plains turned the ball over on a walking violation, then fouled WTC's Cox moments later.

Cox went to the line to hit two free throws with 59 seconds left. The 5-6 player from San Antonio came through defensively, too, as Western put on the press when South Plains tried to inbound and she tipped a pass to teammate Jeans.

The drama continued as Cox put Western in front with 34 seconds left. SPC turned the ball over again to the press, and Robinson answered the challenge by swishing two free throws for a 65-61 lead.

The game wasn't quite over, however. Leona Gerber managed to score for SPC with 11 seconds left. When Western inbounded the ball, Jeans was called for traveling. The Lady Texas' bid to force an overtime failed when Kami Schonerstedt's 15-foot shot bounced from the rim and Jeans grabbed the rebound.

"I'm real proud of these girls. I told the girls this was a must win situation and that all our games from here on out will be must win situations," Chadwick said. "I thought when the girls came back at the end and won they showed a lot of character and pride. They showed what I wanted to see."

Cox led the Dusters with 20 points. Welch had 15 and Jeans scored 10.

For SPC, Shari Schilling poured in 28 and Walling added 11.

Opposition chief goes home

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — An ex-senator who led U.S.-based opposition to Ferdinand E. Marcos returned home today from 14 years in exile and credited President Reagan with the "final touch" that toppled the Philippine ruler.

But former Sen. Raul Manglapus said that despite his gratitude for the U.S. role in ending Marcos' 20-year reign and bringing Corazon Aquino to power, he found it "lamentable that it took such a long time for them to do it."

Later, Mrs. Aquino and Manglapus hugged as he visited her at her headquarters. Manglapus handed her a box of yellow chrysanthemums, and Mrs. Aquino said, "I'm so glad to welcome you back."

Mrs. Aquino's government, now 3 days old, continued to free political prisoners jailed under Marcos and to take control of government offices. Government business still was being run from a private building owned by Mrs. Aquino's family.

A spokeswoman for Task Force Detainees, a private human rights group, said 16 prisoners had been released from military detention by this morning, including 10 in Manila and three in both Iloilo and Davao.

The government, which ordered 39 prisoners set free on Thursday, said hundreds would probably be released by next week. Officials say the process has been slowed by medical clearances, and because releases must be appproved by several people in different locations.

Officials have said more than 500 people were being detained on politically related charges when Marcos fled the country.

Scores of people greeted Manglapus as he landed at Manila International Airport. The former president of the U.S.-based Movement for Free Philippines left his Asian island nation the day before Marcos decreed martial law in 1972 and had led anti-Marcos forces in the United States.

Marcos had accused Manglapus, a former foreign secretary and constitutional law professor, of subversion and of allegedly giving long-distance support to terrorists.

Sesquicentennial souvenirs and refreshments will be available before and after the program, which is expected to last about 45 minutes to an hour. Persons attending may wish to bring lawn chairs or blankets and sit on the courthouse grounds.

Also planned during the afternoon is the awarding of ribbons to winners in a window decorating contest for local businesses.

The committee will offer for the first time Sunday a new map for a self-guided walking tour of historical markers on and near the courthouse square.

Also Sunday, orders will be taken for a county Sesquicentennial cookbook which is to be ready in April.

The program is being planned by the Scurry County Sesquicentennial Committee as part of the county's observance of the state's 150th anniversary.

The next Sesquicentennial event being planned by the local committee is a Texas Wildflower Day program in April.

Liz Chagra guilty

AUSTIN (AP) — Elizabeth Chagra has been convicted a second time for her part in a plot to kill U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr., who was slain in 1979 when he was scheduled to preside over her husband's narcotics trial.

The verdict came about 10 hours after the eight men and four women in the federal court jury began deliberations.

Mrs. Chagra, 32, showed no reaction Thursday to the reading of the verdict, which could cost her up to 30 years in prison at a sentencing hearing March 10.

"Keep your chins up. I've got mine up," she later told her parents, Mrs. and Mrs. Leon Nichols of El Paso.

Wood, known as "Maximum John" for his stiff sentences to drug dealers, was shot in the back by a sniper as he left his San Antonio condominium on May 29, 1979. He had been scheduled to preside at a narcotics trafficking trial for Jimmy Chagra, the defendant's husband, who in 1983 was acquitted of plotting the murder.

"I would hate to be one of the jurors who voted for this verdict and then finds out that Jimmy Chagra was acquitted of this same thing previously," Mrs. Chagra's chief defense attorney, Warren Burnett, said Thursday.

"We could not show this to the jury because of a court order. It might have made a great difference," Burnett said.

"There definitely will be an appeal," said defense attorney Larry Zinn. "I think we have a better chance than we had before."

Mrs. Chagra was convicted of a conspiracy to commit murder charge in 1982, but an appeals court overturned the conviction because of improper jury instructions.

Shortly before the verdict, jurors listened to testimony about how Mrs. Chagra delivered $250,000 that went to Wood's hired killer, Charles Harrelson.

Wagon train route includes San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Boyd Ivey says he has lost count of how many horseshoes he has replaced on the animals in the Sesquicentennial Texas Wagon Train.

"I will have done hundreds from start to finish," he said Thursday from the back of his mobil horse-shoeing truck.

Ivey, of DeKalb, Texas, was among about 500 people and about 50 wagons that rolled into campgrounds south of here for Texas Independence Day celebrations Sunday.

The wagon train, now a third of the way through its 3,000-mile journey across Texas, was to roll by the Alamo today on its way to Freeman Coliseum.

The wagons will be on display at the coliseum all day Saturday.

Ivey said he began work a month before the wagon train left Sulphur Springs Jan. 2. He is in charge of shoeing about 50 horses and mules ridden by the wagon train staff.

He freelances anyone else who wants his services — $45 for an entire horse.

The biggest problem the horses and mules have on such a trip, Ivey said, is slippery concrete surfaces.

He has to weld tungsten carbide chips onto the horseshoes to give the animals traction.

Ivey and his fellow travelers braved gusty, dusty winds in excess of 20 mph Thursday as they rode from Poteet to San Antonio.

"We had a dress rehearsal this morning for West Texas," said Jan France, executive director of the wagon train.

"It was something else. We've had wind but we haven't had the dust and dirt," she said, a wide-brimmed cowboy hat perched on her head.

The wagons will head north to Johnson City after San Antonio, then begin the long journey across West Texas to El Paso.

The journey ends July 3 in Fort Worth.

Mrs. France said she got the idea for the wagon train after reading a story in her hometown newspaper in 1983 about the Sesquicentennial. The story, she said, urged people to suggest ideas for celebrating Texas' 150th anniversary.

"A lot of states have wagon train associations and have rides every year," she said. "Texas does not. We have trail rides here, but no wagon trains.

"I thought it would be a good way to kick off a wagon train event," she said.

"It's a way of life that people don't have any more. We're showing the younger generation what this way of life is," she said.

Some people, adults included, have never seen a covered wagon or touched a horse, Mrs. France said.

"The wagon train is an exhibit of our western heritage," she said.

Mrs. France said it took her about two weeks to really begin appreciating the hardships the pioneers went through to travel by covered wagon.

"It's rough for us on these graded roads. Just imagine what it would be like on open terrain," she said.

Cities incur emergency care bills for aliens

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Georgina Moreno, writhing with labor pains, was rushed to the county hospital with her anxious husband, Jose, at her side.

When officials at Thomason General Hospital realized Mrs. Moreno was not a U.S. citizen or resident and couldn't put up a $1,500 advance deposit, they told her husband to take her across the Rio Grande to a Mexican hospital.

Mrs. Moreno "held back" from delivering while her husband searched for medical help, according to a federal lawsuit. Their son, Eduardo, was born 10 minutes after Mrs. Moreno found a midwife nearby.

The class-action suit against the hospital district was filed last March by the Legal Assistance Society on behalf of the Morenos and several other El Paso residents. All claim they were denied medical help when they couldn't produce cash or documents showing their immigration status.

Thomason since has stopped questioning emergency patients about their citizenship status. But the Moreno incident illustrates a wider problem faced by such cities as El Paso, Los Angeles and Miami which pay millions of dollars yearly in hospital bills for their growing populations of illegal aliens.

The federal government requires that public hospitals provide emergency care for illegal aliens, but does not reimburse the hospitals, local officials say.

In early January, El Paso County sent President Reagan a bill for $7.5 million in unreimbursed costs for services provided by Thomason to penniless illegal aliens in 1985.

Los Angeles County, which incurred $115 million last year in unreimbursed costs for health services to illegal aliens, also wrote Reagan in late January asking for help. The county's lawyers are studying a possible lawsuit against the federal government to recover the costs if the plea goes unheeded.

In Miami, Jackson Memorial Hospital in 1985 had to write off $13.5 million not covered by federal aid intended for the thousands of Cuban and Haitian refugees who have settled in Dade County. The hospital wrote off an additional $2.4 million in health costs for undocumented aliens ineligible for federal aid programs.

Local taxpayers end up footing a bill they claim is the federal government's responsibility. In El Paso County, that has meant three tax hikes in as many years to support Thomason.

Bill Kennedy, the hospital's executive director, won't comment on the suit, but he does have some observations about the border city's headache.

"The problem primarily, from my perspective, is not necessarily a question of legal versus illegal as much as uncontrolled immigration," Kennedy said.
