55 indicted for drug trafficking

DEA works with local authorities in busts; 12 suspects remain at-large

By James Cannon
Staff Writer

Federal, state and local law enforcement agencies partnered to arrest and indict 55 people in connection with drug trafficking, including some suspects allegedly connected to Mexican drug cartels.

The charges range from street-level distribution to the manufacturing of narcotics, and they also include weapons charges. During the three separate investigations, agents seized more than $1.4 million in cash and checks, about 30 firearms and about 30 vehicles. The investigations also involved the raids made earlier this week on B&L Adult Bookstore in Odessa and the arrest of 20-year-old Rashawn Lewis, who is accused of distributing narcotics at the Peppermint Plantation day care.

The mass roundup began about 6 a.m. Thursday and was carried out in Midland and Ector counties.

"The arrests made today are part of the (Drug Enforcement Agency's) continuing effort to target the distribution of dangerous drugs at all levels," said Joseph Arabit, special agent in charge of the DEA El Paso Division. "Illicit drug abuse and related criminal activity takes a tremendous toll on our communities, including those in West Texas. We will continue to work closely with our federal, state and local law enforcement partners in order to enhance the quality of life

Midland schools part of new 'Little SWC'

By Len Hayward
Sports Editor

The University Interscholastic League announced its realignment for the 2012-2014 school years, and both Midland ISD high schools will be back with some long-time rivals as part of a nine-school district.

Lee and Midland High were grouped in the new District 2-5A with longtime rivals Abilene High, Abilene Cooper, Odessa High and Odessa Permian. Amarillo Tascosa, Lubbock Coronado and San Angelo Central also now will be part of the district.

The grouping of cities is the same as in the 1950s when each city had one high school. That district was referred to as the "Little Southwest Conference."

The major concerns for athletic officials in the new district are scheduling and how to deal with the amount of travel some teams face, especially San Angelo Central and Amarillo Tascosa.

Here is a brief look at how other Reporter-Telegram area schools fared on Thursday:

■ Greenwood remains in District 4-3A, but four new opponents will join it as Fort Stockton, Andrews and Seminole all went to a different district. Monahans will remain in 4-3A. Abilene Wylie, Big Spring, Sweetwater and Snyder will join the district from District 5-3A.

Fort Stockton will head west to 3-3A, while Andrews and Seminole will play in District 2-3A with Lubbock-area Class 3A schools.

■ Stanton and Coahoma will remain in Class 2A Division II in football and will be in District 3 with Alpine, Reagan County, Crane and Sonora. The two schools will complete in District 4-2A in basketball with Brownfield, Colorado City, Denver City and Larnesa.

■ Forsan dropped to Class A and will compete in Class A Division I District 4, and Class A Division I District 6 in basketball.

■ In Six-Man football, Fort Davis, Garden City and Rankin will remain in a district, this time in Division I District 5, and Marfa will join it. Grady will be in Division I District 4 with Borden County, Klondike and O'Donnell.

Suicide forum slated for Sunday

By Meredith Moriak
Staff Writer

Suicide is a topic of discussion for Midlanders, and adults say they're surprised by how many teens want to talk about it.

Since the creation on Dec. 7 of the Facebook group "Teen suicide, 100% Preventable.Help us. <3," more than 1,600 people have joined. What started as a peer support group for teens has shifted to a group that includes adults willing to listen to teens discuss their problems and struggles.

"Some of the kids like to talk to other kids, but some want to talk to adults, and that's why we're on there," said Shelby Massey, one of the group's original members. "A lot of them are feeling a lack of love at home, and they want to know they are loved and talk with someone who has a little more life experience."

More than 15 adults are active on the page and have their phone numbers listed so teens easily can contact them.

Kris Wanner said she's available for the kids because she can relate to what they're going through.

"I went through tough times when I was 16. I attempted suicide myself. I cut on myself. I know what they're going through and I can help them," said Wanner, who has two children, ages 6 and 1.

Greater Ideal wants to change southeast Midland through education

By Meredith Moriak
Staff Writer

Helping students whose learning methods are unconventional and who don't see college as an option and are at-risk for dropping out is the main goal for Ideal Preparatory Academy Charter School.

The school is a vision of Greater Ideal Baptist Church's minister, the Rev. George Bell, and is on path to become a reality. A team of 15 church members are putting the final touches on a 300-page application that will be submitted to the State Board of Education by Feb. 23.

The church held an informational meeting Thursday night at the MLK Jr. Center to talk about the school's future.

Bell opened the meeting with a prayer where he mentioned changing southeast Midland through education.

Ex-county lawyer's license suspended

By Betsy Blaney
Associated Press

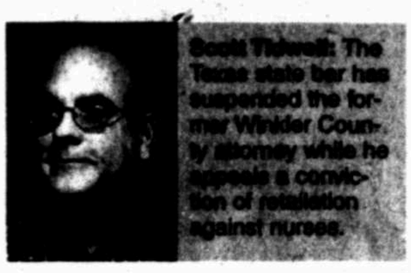
LUBBOCK — The Texas state bar has suspended the law license of a former county attorney who retaliated against two nurses for anonymously complaining about a doctor to state regulators, according to an order released Thursday.

Former Winkler County attorney Scott Tidwell cannot practice law while he appeals his conviction on felony retaliation and misuse of official information charges for retaliating against the nurses, the order states. He lost his job as county attorney when he was convicted and sentenced to 10 years of probation in October.

Tidwell, who got his law license in 1992, did not immediately return calls to his offices in Odessa and Kermit for comment. A message also was left with his attorney, Dave Zavoda in Odessa.



Scott Tidwell. The Texas state bar has suspended the former Winkler County attorney after he was convicted of retaliation against nurses.

Tidwell prosecuted Anne Mitchell and Vickilyn Galle, who anonymously told state regulators in 2009 that Dr. Rolando Arafiles Jr. used herbal remedies and had attempted to use hospital supplies to perform at-home procedures, among other things.

Arafiles asked a friend who was then the Winkler County sheriff to investigate the complaint. The nurses were fired from their jobs at a hospital in Kermit and charged with felonies. Mitchell eventually was acquitted, and charges against Galle were dropped.

The state bar will monitor the status of Tidwell's appeal of his conviction and make a final determination about his law license once the appeal is final, the order states. In a petition to the Board of Disciplinary Appeals — a group appointed by the Texas Supreme Court — the state bar recommended Tidwell be disbarred should his appeal be rejected.

Linda Acevedo, a spokeswoman for the state bar, wrote in an email that Tidwell could get his license back even if he is disbarred.

An attorney can apply in a district court for reinstatement no sooner than five years following the last day of his probation. If the court grants the request, the attorney must again pass the state bar exam to be reinstated, she wrote.

Arafiles accepted a plea deal in the case last fall that called for him to surrender his Texas medical license and serve five years of probation. Former Winkler County Sheriff Robert Roberts, who investigated the nurses at Arafiles' request, lost the job he had held for 20 years, was sentenced to 100 days has surrendered permanently his peace officer's license.

The two women sued the county, the hospital, Roberts and other officials alleging that their First Amendment rights had been violated and that their prosecutions had been vindictive. They won a $750,000 settlement in August 2010.

Last year lawmakers passed a bill that adds protections from retaliation when nurses advocate for patients. The bill provides immunity from criminal liability for reporting unsafe care and increases administrative fines to up to $25,000.

DPS hires ex-A&M exec

Associated Press

AUSTIN — A close friend of Gov. Rick Perry's who was fired as a Texas A&M University System executive after brandishing a pocket knife has a new job — assistant director of the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Jay Kimbrough, 64, is the new second-in-command at the DPS, the Austin American-Statesman reported. Director Steve McCraw said Kimbrough will oversee homeland security at the state's police agency.

McCraw said he recruited the Perry confidant because he had served as the state's homeland security director after the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks. He said he created the new position to help manage and coordinate the growing homeland security functions in Texas, and he chose Kimbrough from among 29 applicants. Kimbrough's salary will be $147,500.

"There was nobody who was even close to as qualified as he is," he said.

A&M System Chancellor John Sharp ousted Kimbrough from his $300,000-a-year deputy chancellor's job last fall. System attorneys said Kimbrough brandished a pocket knife after they told him of his termination. No charges were filed, but police escorted him from the building.

McCraw told the American-Statesman that the A&M incident did not influence his decision one way or the other.

"We just stuck with the facts" that no crime was committed, McCraw told the American-Statesman. "We made an evidence-based decision."

Kimbrough is a longtime friend of and troubleshooter for Perry, a former Texas A&M student. He served as Perry's chief of staff in 2008-09, deputy chief of staff in 2002 and 2004-05, and as Perry's homeland security director in 2003-04.

Kimbrough was Perry's special adviser to the A&M System Board of Regents in 2009-11, then served as deputy chancellor and interim chancellor after Mike McKinney stepped down as chancellor in early July.

Judge delays Fort Hood shooting trial

Associated Press

FORT HOOD — The Army psychiatrist accused of killing 13 people during the Fort Hood shooting rampage will go on trial in June, a military judge ruled Thursday after agreeing to a three-month delay.

Attorneys for Maj. Nidal Hasan argued during a hearing at the Army post in Texas that they still lacked key evidence needed to prepare for the March trial. Prosecutors insisted defense lawyers didn't need more time, saying one defense expert was hired nearly two years ago and that he alone has already racked up about $250,000 in fees billed to the government.

The defense had asked for a July trial, but the judge settled for June 12. The trial is expected to last about two months.

Hasan is charged with 13 counts of premeditated murder and 32 counts of attempted premeditated murder for the November 2009 attack at the sprawling Army post, which is about 130 miles southwest of Dallas. If convicted, he faces the death penalty. Hasan, who was arraigned in July, has not yet entered a plea.

Lt. Col. Kris Poppe, the lead defense attorney, said the defense team had received about 320,000 pages of documents from the government before December and another 60,000 pages in the past two months. Calling the volume of material "mind-boggling," he said each page has to be reviewed to decide whether it's relevant.

He also said their mitigation expert needed more time to gather extensive information on Hasan's childhood, academic and professional life, religious background, medical and mental health history and other issues. Such experts present evidence to jurors in an attempt to spare a defendant from a death sentence.

"That's why death-penalty cases take so long to go to trial," Poppe told the judge, Col. Gregory Gross, during Thursday's hearing.

But a military prosecutor, Lt. Col. Steve Henricks, noted that although a mitigation specialist is required in a death-penalty case, this expert was hired more than a year before Fort Hood's commanding general decided that Hasan would face the death penalty. Henricks also said many documents recently given to the defense have already been in the defense team's hands in other formats, and that Hasan's attorneys have crime scene data and other evidence, despite their claims to the contrary.

Before setting the new trial date, Gross questioned whether the mitigation expert had done enough since he was hired and said this case must become his top priority.

Gross also granted the defense team's earlier request for a jury consultant, but he denied a request for another expert to analyze the extensive pre-trial publicity and determine how that might influence potential jurors. The military jury will be brought from Fort Sill, Okla.

The judge didn't rule on a defense motion to force prosecutors to provide notes from meetings and conversations with President Barack Obama, the defense secretary and other high-ranking government officials after the Nov. 5, 2009, shootings. Defense attorneys said they want to determine if anything was discussed that may have unlawfully influenced Hasan's chain of command to prosecute him.

Prosecutors have insisted that no Army officers involved in the case have been influenced by higher ranking officials.

The 41-year-old Hasan remains jailed. He is paralyzed from the waist down, the result of being shot by police to end the rampage.

Ex-Stanford exec testifies of blood oath

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Jailed Texas financier R. Allen Stanford's extreme measures to hide his Caribbean bank's fraud included entering into a blood oath with a top regulator, the man who was in charge of the tycoon's books told jurors Thursday.

James M. Davis, the former chief financial officer for Stanford's companies, testified the financier came to an agreement with the official responsible for reviewing his bank on the island nation of Antigua where that person, Leroy King, would not dig too deeply into the institution's operations. Prosecutors allege Stanford masterminded a fraud in which he bilked investors out of more than $7 billion in a massive Ponzi scheme centered on the sales of certificates of deposit, or CDs, from the bank.

"Mr. Stanford said (he and King) actually cut themselves and had a blood oath," a frail-looking Davis, 63, said.

Davis said Stanford made regular cash payments of "hush money" to King and another regulator "for them to look the other way." He also testified the financier loaned the Antiguan government about $40 million, which was never repaid.

Authorities allege Stanford used depositors' money to fund his businesses and his lavish billionaire lifestyle and pay bribes to regulators and auditors. They also allege he lied to depositors by telling them their funds were invested safely.

Stanford's attorneys contend the financier was a savvy businessman whose financial empire, headquartered in Houston, was legitimate. They have suggested Davis, who worked 21 years for Stanford, is behind the fraud.

Stanford is on trial for 14 counts, including mail and wire fraud, and faces up to 20 years in prison if convicted. King also was indicted and is awaiting extradition to the U.S. Three other ex-Stanford company executives were also charged and await trial in September.

Davis said Stanford ran his business empire through a mix of flattery and fear, describing his management style as charismatic but also dictatorial.

Davis, the prosecution's star witness, told jurors Stanford laughed about the alleged fraud at the bank.

FROM WIRE REPORTS

TEXAS CITY

Man held over crime spree allegedly killed 2

A suspect in a Central Texas crime spree now has been accused of a double slaying in Texas City.

Dominique Alonzo Stokes, of Galveston, was in the Travis County Jail on Thursday with bond topping $2.3 million.

On Wednesday, Texas City police served capital murder warrants on Stokes over the Nov. 21 fatal shooting of Jorge Vargas and his 15-year-old daughter, Miranda.

The Galveston County Daily News reported that Stokes was arrested Dec. 9 in Austin in a stolen vehicle. Police said ballistic tests on a gun Stokes had matched a pistol used in the killings.

Online jail records had no attorney listed for Stokes, who also is accused of December home invasions in Austin and Temple.

Stokes faces multiple counts, including kidnapping, aggravated robbery, drug possession and parole violation.

SAN ANTONIO

Historical commission helps fund demolition

The Texas Historical Commission will help pay to demolish a windowless, granite addition to an 1890s courthouse in San Antonio.

The commission has awarded Bexar County a $2.5 million grant toward demolishing the 1970s-era Gondeck addition to the historic Bexar County Courthouse. The county has set aside more than $5 million to complete the project, possibly by 2014.

County Judge Nelson Wolff on Wednesday described the addition as an eyesore.

The complex, named for architect Edward Gondeck, was meant as a temporary addition to provide work space. Critics have complained about its look. More than half of the staff has relocated from the addition.

A courthouse restoration master plan, approved in 2000 by the Texas Historical Commission, included the Gondeck Addition demolition.

Dallas area to emerge from drought

By Ramit Plushnick-Masti
Associated Press

Associated Press

In this Jan. 25 photo, submerged vehicles sit in high water following strong storms in Dallas. The U.S. Drought Monitor posted Thursday that it has reclassified the Dallas-Fort Worth area as not in drought for the first time since July, making it the first major metropolitan area in Texas to emerge from the most severe one-year drought in state history.

HOUSTON — The rain that started trickling into Texas in the fall may finally be making a dent in Dallas, but the rest of the massive state is still a long way off from being out of a historic drought, and climate experts are warning against any premature partying.

"It's still a very tenuous situation," said National Weather Service meteorologist Victor Murphy. "Water concerns are a high priority. If we have a dry spring and a hot summer it will be a very perilous situation."

The good news comes from the U.S. Drought Monitor map, a weekly analysis of dryness in the country. It indicated Thursday that the Dallas-Fort Worth region and a swath of North Texas stretching to the state's border with Oklahoma and Arkansas are officially out of drought for the first time since July. As a result, about 6.4 million people in the nation's fourth most-populous urban area will enjoy fuller lakes and greener trees.

But this makes up less than 5 percent of Texas, and the downside is that the same data show that parts of the state still in severe or exceptional drought has actually increased in the past week by 2 percent to 27.36 percent. In addition, almost 60 percent of the state is in some form of severe drought.

"Texas is so big you can't talk about the whole state in generalized terms," said Brian Fuchs, a climatologist with the National Drought Mitigation Center who helps draft the map. "As you go into summer again, some of these areas are still very prone because of the damage that's been done."

The Drought Monitor is a map that is compiled by the University of Nebraska's National Drought Mitigation Center in cooperation with the U.S. National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and several other agencies. Meteorologists and climate experts look at everything from rainfall to soil saturation to create the map, and sometimes look at information dating back months and years, Fuchs said.

The trend in Dallas is encouraging, he said, but he noted North Texas was the last area of the state to fall into drought, so recovery was easier.

"Does it help? Yes, it does. But does it mean conditions are where they were pre-drought? No," Fuchs said.

The drought in Texas, parts of Oklahoma, Arkansas, New Mexico and Louisiana began about a year ago, and some areas have been getting less than half the normal amount of rainfall.

For Texas, the situation has been especially dire because of its size. The state makes up nearly 7 percent of the land mass of the Lower 48, and the drought's severity has impacted everything from cattle numbers to bird migration and the health of the Gulf of Mexico. Ranchers have culled their herds, likely driving up future beef prices, while a devastated hay crop in the south has caused hay prices to spike.

The drought's impact will be felt for years, Fuchs said. In Texas, for example, ranchers reduced their herd size by an average of 38 percent — or between 600,000 to 800,000 head of cattle — causing a 12 percent to 16 percent drop in the nation's supply. It will take several years of calving, restocking and importing cattle to get the numbers back up.

Nebraska, meanwhile, had a good hay crop this year. Farmers there are trucking their hay south to sell for a high price, leaving some of the state's own ranchers high and dry, Fuchs said. In Missouri, there are reports of cattle farmers selling off their herds because they can't buy hay at the steep prices driven by the southern dilemma, he added.

"And now you start looking at how it trickles through the country, not only the region," Fuchs said.

Texas State Climatologist John Nielsen-Gammon said it's encouraging that the North Texas soil is now saturated, and he thinks the region's hay crop could be decent this season. But in parts of West and Central Texas, where some rain helped with an initial planting of winter wheat, an onset of drier conditions and dust is harming the crop, another key ingredient for ranching.

"I think things are going as well as we could hope for," Nielsen-Gammon said, but added, "The key going forward is to manage our supplies under the assumption that we're going to have a second year of drought."

Today in history

Today is Friday, Feb. 3, the 34th day of 2012. There are 332 days left in the year.

Today's highlight:

On Feb. 3, 1959, rock-and-roll stars Buddy Holly, Ritchie Valens and J.P. "The Big Bopper" Richardson died in a small plane crash near Clear Lake, Iowa.

On this date:

In 1913, the 16th Amendment to the Constitution, providing for a federal income tax, was ratified.

In 1943, during World War II, the U.S. transport ship Dorchester, which was carrying troops to Greenland, sank after being hit by a German torpedo; of the more than 900 men aboard, approximately 230 survived.

In 1966, the Soviet probe Luna 9 became the first manmade object to make a soft landing on the moon.

In 1998, Texas executed Karla Faye Tucker, 38, for the pickax killings of two people in 1983; she was the first woman executed in the United States since 1984.

Ten years ago: Former Enron chairman Kenneth Lay backed out of testifying before Congress about the collapse of the energy giant.

Five years ago: A suicide truck bomber struck a Baghdad market in a predominantly Shiite area; killing 137 people.

them about family problems, bullying, cutting, dating abuse and trying to cope with suicides.

"I just want them to know I'm not going to judge them," Wanner said. "Everyone's got problems; you just have to learn to deal with them."

Members of the group have met occasionally to talk about their feelings and to hear from the Rev. Paul Gossett, a minister who has been active online.

Massey said the adult members have helped the teens, but recent suicides have prompted them to hold another event, set for 2 p.m. Sunday in the back hall of VFW 4149.

While the group doesn't know yet what it is going to do, getting together is the first step.

Want to go?

Members of the Facebook group will hold an open forum at 2 p.m. Sunday at the back hall of VFW 4149, 409 Veterans Airpark Lane.

The meeting is open to the public, and group members encourage anyone interested in preventing suicides to attend.

"We want to brainstorm. Maybe we can do outreach through pamphlets and brochures to the students," said parent Sandy Childers.

Gossett has been in youth ministry for 30 years and said he joined the group because he saw it as an opportunity to minister to those needing help and hope.

"I get a lot of questions because I wear the collar, and kids assume I have the answers, but I don't," Gossett said. "I give the kids the best answers I can."

Plus, his firsthand experience coping after a suicide allows him to talk with the teens.

Ten years ago, Gossett and his wife were set to adopt a 15-year-old boy, but the boy killed himself two weeks before the adoption was finalized.

"The victims of suicide are not the ones who die — they're the ones who are left behind," Gossett said.

While the Facebook page and support group are helpful for some teens, all adults said they worry it may enable other teens to think of things they hadn't before.

"Kids are easily spooked," Gossett said. "It doesn't take much to get a school of fish turned around. They all go in one direction or the other."

Gossett said he's afraid of copycat suicides.

"What I'm seeing on Facebook is people who are overdramatic, and it diminished in some way the real crisis," Gossett said, noting many students are crying out for attention, rather than help.

Though Gossett has had to wade through some false alarms, he said he's not going to stop messaging students who need his help.

"I'd rather respond to 10 false alarms and catch every one who needs help than ignore signals and signs by calling people dramatic," Gossett said.

for the citizens in this region."

Of the 55 suspects indicted, all but 12 have been arrested.

The first and most significant investigation netted 24 people in "Operation Communication Breakdown," which targeted Permian Basin cocaine and marijuana distribution operations. Five of those indicted are considered fugitives; the other 19 suspects were rounded up this week. Most of them were arrested during Thursday's early morning raid.

The court documents allege 31-year-old Benjamin Valeriano Jr., of Ojinaga, Mexico, is the leader of the local syndicate of the Ojinaga Plaza for the La Linea cartel. He allegedly is responsible for the distribution of more than 500 kilograms of cocaine and more than 100 kilograms of marijuana since January 2010.

In the second investigation, law enforcement agents arrested 67-year-old Jimmy Wayne Wright, the owner of B&L Adult Bookstore in Odessa. He remains in custody after DEA agents arrested him Tuesday. He is awaiting a federal custody detention hearing on Monday.

The seven-count federal grand jury indictment charges Wright with the possession and distribution of products used to cut cocaine. The chemical agents — inositol, lidocaine, mannitol and "Bolivian rock" incense — are mixed into the powder cocaine to dilute the potency and increase the quantity, making it more profitable to drug dealers. Authorities found several cases of the cutting agents that had an estimated value of $400 a bottle, Arabit said at the press conference at the Midland Police Department.

During the course of the investigation, authorities seized about $727,000 from a bank account, $300,000 in cash, a $45,000 check made payable to Wright and multiple weapons, he said.

If convicted, he could face up to four years in prison for each count.

Arabit also said Wright was using his adult bookstore to distribute the narcotics.

The third investigation centered around mid-level and street-dealer distribution circles in Midland and Ector counties. The three-month-long investigation between city, county and the DEA's Mobile Enforcement Team resulted in federal drug and firearm charges and indictments against 31 people.

Charges include conspiracy, possession with intent to distribute a controlled substance, distribution of a controlled substance and possession of firearms by felons. Some of the alleged offenses occurred within 1,000 feet of a school or playground, which would increase the amount of prison time. Crack cocaine, powder cocaine, heroin, methamphetamine, BZP and hydrocodone were seized in the drug raids.

Undercover agents made several drug buys at Jaguars, the Ector County strip club on Interstate 20 near the Midland County line. One person arrested in the raid was a club employee. Ector County Sheriff Mark Donaldson said the drug purchases will be added to the list of nuisance abatement charges against the club.

Jeff Darr, Midland's deputy police chief, said the arrests will make a significant impact on the community. He said last year when the joint task force busted 96 people for drugs, burglary alone dropped more than 50 percent in the succeeding six weeks.

SCHOOL

between the general student population and those who are at-risk, church member Michelle Jarnagin has been leading the charge to develop the school.

Jarnagin moved to the Permian Basin from Connecticut and is an elementary school assistant principal for Ector County ISD.

Through that position, Jarnagin said she's seen so many students who don't think college or careers are an option.

"They think football and basketball are everything school's about and don't think they have the skills to succeed academically," Jarnagin said.

That idea is one the charter school hopes to change by providing students with the social and emotional support necessary to serve as a model school of excellence and prepare all students to be college-ready and work-life leaders, Jarnagin said during a PowerPoint presentation shared with the 20 people in attendance.

As a state-funded school, teachers still will have to prepare students for state-mandated STAAR tests, but Jarnagin said she doesn't think teachers should feel stifled or worried about teaching to the test.

"If you prepare students to think, the test is no problem," Jarnagin said.

With less bureaucracy than an independent school district, Jarnagin said many things will be different, including the schedule and commitment from each student.

Classes will run from 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday to allow for more time for enrichment classes such as gardening and fine arts. The school day will end at noon on Friday, and students can attend after-school programs at the Family Life Center.

Twice a month, teachers will have training and meetings on Friday afternoons. The other two afternoons can be used for doctor's appointments and other business teachers may need to attend to, Jarnagin said, noting the model aims to cut down on teachers' absences and the need for substitutes.

The longer school days also will allow teachers to teach core subjects, such as reading and math, to smaller groups of 10 to 12 students, Jarnagin said.

"Whatever it takes" will be the mantra for achieving success, and all students, parents and teachers will have to sign a contract saying they'll do their part to meet the end goal, Jarnagin said.

The school aims to be an extension of the Family Life Center's summer program, where students have intense academic classes from 8 a.m. to noon. Certified teachers from Midland and Ector County ISDs are hired to work with students on reading and math skills.

Often times, a student's reading level will increase by two grades during the course of the summer, Jarnagin said.

Bell said he hopes the state sees that success as an indication Greater Ideal can be successful at running a school.

"Parents were asking us to do more, and they want to do more. Now is our chance to do something," Bell said. "I'm just excited about the opportunity to take it to the next level and add grades as we go."

The school initially will start at the Family Life Center with 150 students and add a grade each year until the school has kindergarten through 12th grade, Jarnagin said. After about five years, the school will look for a new, larger location.

Greater Ideal church member Audrey White believes the school is a wonderful idea.

"They're doing something that has not been done before and offering something unique," White said.

Though her children are grown, White said it's something that will be beneficial to other families.

In September, the state will review all applications and award seven charters statewide for schools to open in fall 2013.

If Ideal Preparatory is not selected, Jarnagin said the fight will not stop. The committee will review the board's suggestions, improve the application and reapply until the school becomes a reality.

"I truly believe this is my calling to help these students, and I'm not going to stop until it happens," Jarnagin said. "There's a real need for it in this community."

An informational meeting about Ideal Preparatory Academy Charter School will be at 7 p.m. Monday at the Greater Ideal Family Life Center, 301 S. Tyler St.

MC to offer 12-week session

From staff reports

Midland College will offer a 12-week session beginning Feb. 13 in an effort to provide college courses to students unable to enroll during the regular spring semester registration period.

"We had approximately 400 new students who did not get the bacterial meningitis vaccine in time to register for spring semester classes," Michael Chavez, dean of Enrollment Management, said in a press release. "We are hoping they will take advantage of the 12-week session."

Chavez said students who plan to take the 12-week session and are new to MC must receive the bacterial meningitis vaccine by today. Walgreens will administer the vaccine 8 a.m.-noon today at the Scharbauer Student Center Club Room. The cost of the vaccine is $133.99; only cash and checks will be accepted.

Registration for the short session begins at 8 a.m. Monday. Students also can register online at www.midland.edu.

Course offerings during the 12-week session include English, math, government, history, sociology, education, art appreciation and music ensemble. In addition, several developmental math, English and reading courses will be offered. A complete list of courses is available at www.midland.edu.

Students who have not completed a MC application should do so before registering for classes, Chavez said. The application is available online at www.applytexas.org.

For more information, call the MC Admissions Office at 685-4501.

Rock The Desert tweet: Tebow to come to Midland

From staff reports

Tim Tebow has been confirmed to speak at an event scheduled for April 22, according to the official Twitter account for Rock the Desert.

Tebow, who is public about his Christian faith, is the starting quarterback for the Denver Broncos and a Heisman Trophy winner.

Time and place for the event have not been announced.

The stop in Midland is apparently the first of a two-day swing for Tebow in West Texas. Tebow is scheduled to appear at a fundraiser on April 23 for Trinity Christian School at Lubbock Memorial Civic Center. That event will include a reception and autograph session, according to the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal's website.

Rock the Desert had tweeted in December that a Midland event featuring Tebow and the band Switchfoot was "in the works."

LAS VEGAS

Trump endorses Romney after a puzzling Vegas day

With his trademark flair for spectacle, Donald Trump endorsed Mitt Romney for president Thursday on the famed Las Vegas strip — just hours after Newt Gingrich's advisers were spreading the word that The Donald would be anointing him instead.

Trump's endorsement seemed likely to affect this Saturday's Nevada primary — and the GOP nomination fight in general — about as much as a Sin City breeze disturbs the real estate mogul's legendary hair.

Romney said he was glad to get the support, but he seemed almost bemused to be caught up in the Trumpian drama.

WASHINGTON

Holder, House Republicans clash over documents

Attorney General Eric Holder clashed with Republicans at a House committee hearing Thursday over demands that the Justice Department turn over more documents about a flawed gun-smuggling investigation.

Chairman Darrell Issa, R-Calif., said the House Oversight and Government Reform Committee will do what is necessary to force the Justice Department to produce information on its handling of congressional inquiries on Operation Fast and Furious.

The attorney general said he will consider Issa's demand. But, he said the department, with one exception, was inclined to follow a longstanding tradition of withholding internal documents about how to respond to congressional inquiries in order to preserve the ability to get candid advice from top officials.

Issa has threatened to seek a contempt of Congress ruling against Holder for failing to provide the material. The lawmaker alleges the Justice Department is engaging in a cover-up.

The department says a Feb. 9 deadline set by Issa is too soon to process "the broad scope of the committee's requests." Some 6,000 documents have been produced, but Republicans are seeking many more.

Cancer charity confronts backlash over grant cuts

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Susan G. Komen for the Cure, the renowned breast-cancer charity, faced an escalating backlash Thursday over its decision to cut breast-screening grants to Planned Parenthood. Some of Komen's local affiliates are openly upset, and at least one top official has quit, reportedly in protest.

Meanwhile, Komen has been deluged with negative emails and Facebook postings, accusing it of knuckling under to pressure from anti-abortion groups, since the Associated Press reported on Tuesday that it was halting grants that Planned Parenthood affiliates used for breast exams and related services. The grants totaled $680,000 last year.

Planned Parenthood has been heartened by an outpouring of support in response to the cutoff. In addition to $400,000 in smaller donations from 6,000 people, it is receiving $250,000 from a family foundation in Dallas and a $250,000 pledge announced Thursday by New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg to match future donations.

In Washington, 26 U.S. senators — all Democrats except for independent Bernie Sanders, of Vermont — signed a letter calling on Komen to reconsider its decision.

"It would be tragic if any woman — let alone thousands of women — lost access to these potentially lifesaving screenings because of a politically motivated attack," the senators wrote.

Komen's top leaders, in their first news conference since the controversy erupted, denied Planned Parenthood's assertion that the decision was driven by pressure from anti-abortion groups.

"We don't base our decisions on whether one side or the other will be pleased," said Komen's founder and CEO, Nancy Brinker.

Komen has said the decision stemmed from newly adopted criteria barring grants to organizations under investigation — affecting Planned Parenthood because of an inquiry by a Republican congressman acting with encouragement from anti-abortion activists.

Brinker said Thursday that there were additional factors, notably changes in the types of breast-health service providers it wanted to support. However, she said grants would continue this year to three of the 19 Planned Parenthood affiliates — in Denver, California's Orange County, and Waco — because they served clientele with few other breast-screening options.

A source with direct knowledge of decision-making at Komen's headquarters in Dallas gave a different account, saying the grant-making criteria were adopted with the deliberate intention of targeting Planned Parenthood. The criteria's impact on Planned Parenthood, and its status as the focus of government investigations, were highlighted in a memo distributed to Komen affiliates in December.

According to the source, who spoke on condition of anonymity for fear of repercussions, a driving force behind the move was Karen Handel, who was hired by Komen last year as vice president for public policy after losing a campaign for governor in Georgia in which she stressed her anti-abortion views and frequently denounced Planned Parenthood.

Brinker, in an interview with MSNBC, said Handel didn't have a significant role in the policy change.

The source also said that Mollie Williams, who had been Komen's director of community health programs, had resigned in protest over the grant cutoff.

Williams, in an email, said she could not comment on her departure for reasons of professional confidentiality, but she was clear about her views.

"I have dedicated my career to fighting for the rights of the marginalized and underserved," she wrote. "And, I believe it would be a mistake for any organization to bow to political pressure and compromise its mission."

Williams said she was saddened by the rift because she admired both Komen and Planned Parenthood.

"I am hopeful their passionate and courageous leaders, Nancy Brinker and Cecile Richards, can swiftly resolve this conflict in a manner that benefits the women they both serve."

After IPO, Facebook will face new profit pressures

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — For all the huge numbers in Facebook's IPO papers, a surprisingly small figure stands out: $4.39, the amount the site generated per user last year.

It's one of the company's major challenges because the total is paltry compared with competing Internet companies. Google makes more than $30 a year from each registered user. Even struggling Yahoo and AOL make $7 and $10, respectively.

Once Facebook goes public, Wall Street surely will demand more. That means the social network almost certainly will have to attract a lot more users or be more aggressive with its advertising, perhaps by mining personal data even more than it does now.

But, can Facebook do all that without spoiling the user experience?

The company may have a tough time increasing the number of ads on a site that has become primarily a home for online conversations.

"It's a communications tool. Can you imagine what a turn-off it would be if we were talking on the phone and AT&T tried to play an ad in the middle of our conversation?" said University of Notre Dame finance professor Tim Loughran, who studies IPOs.

Facebook stock probably won't begin trading until at least May, but analysts already believe the company will try to sell shares at a price that will give it a market value of at least $100 billion — more than Yahoo, AOL and Hewlett Packard Co. combined.

To justify a valuation like that, Facebook will need to maximize its revenue to get closer to Google, one of its biggest rivals. Google's revenue of nearly $38 billion last year translated into about $35 per registered user.

Facebook recorded $3.7 billion in revenue last year.

The question is whether it can bring in more money without alienating the 845 million users who have become accustomed to hanging out with friends and family on the social network without an onslaught of ads.

Part of that online environment has been by design. Facebook co-founder and CEO Mark Zuckerberg wanted to get as many as people as possible to create profiles on the website before figuring out the best ways to profit from all the information about their interests and connections.

In theory, those insights should enable Facebook to target ads to people most likely to be interested in certain products or services. That should appeal to marketers, giving the site enough leverage to charge more for its ads than other sites. If the ads work, Facebook should easily increase revenue per user to $10 to $12 annually, said Wedbush Securities analyst Michael Pachter.

Before Google went public, it also faced questions about its ability to make money from selling ads next to search results, in emails and within videos. Evidently, most users don't mind because Google's annual revenue is now about 25 times higher than in 2003.

Advertising isn't the only way Facebook can make money. It charges a commission for some of the sales of games and other services on its website. Although advertising accounted for 85 percent of Facebook's revenue last year, that was less than at Google, where ads accounted for 96 percent of revenue.

Most of Facebook's non-advertising revenue comes from commissions paid by Zynga Inc., the maker of such popular Web games as CityVille and Words With Friends. In its IPO papers, Facebook says it may try to increase its revenue by introducing fees for other e-commerce features on its website.

Syria: Regime change not just about freedom

■ The fall of Bashar al-Assad could damage Iran's influence in the region and bring offer a rare example of the U.S. not having to choose between human rights and strategic advantage.

CHARLES KRAUTHAMMER
Washington Post Writers Group

Imperial regimes can crack when they are driven out of their major foreign outposts. The fall of the Berlin Wall did not just signal the liberation of Eastern Europe from Moscow. It prefigured the collapse of the Soviet Union itself just two years later.

The fall of Bashar al-Assad's Syria could be similarly ominous for Iran. The alliance with Syria is the centerpiece of Iran's expanding sphere of influence, a mini-Comintern that includes such clients as Iranian armed and directed Hezbollah, now the dominant power in Lebanon; and Hamas, which controls Gaza and threatens to take the rest of Palestine (the West Bank) from a feeble Fatah.

Additionally, Iran exerts growing pressure on Afghanistan to the east and growing influence in Iraq to the west. Tehran even has extended its horizon to Latin America, as symbolized by President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad's solidarity tour through Venezuela, Ecuador, Nicaragua and Cuba.

Of all these clients, Syria is the most important. It's the only Arab state openly allied with non-Arab Iran. This is significant because the Arabs see the Persians as having had centuries-old designs to dominate the Middle East. Indeed, Iranian arms and trainers, transshipped to Hezbollah through Syria, have given the Persians their first outpost on the Mediterranean in 2,300 years.

But the Arab-Iranian divide is not just national/ethnic. It is sectarian. The Arabs are overwhelmingly Sunni. Iran is Shiite. The Arab states fear Shiite Iran infiltrating the Sunni homeland through (apart from Iraq) Hezbollah in Lebanon, and through Syria, run by Assad's Alawites, a heterodox offshoot of Shiism.

Which is why the fate of the Assad regime is geopolitically crucial. It is, of course, highly significant for reasons of democracy and human rights as well. Syrian Baathism, while not as capricious and deranged as the Saddam Hussein variant, runs a ruthless police state that once killed 20,000 in Hama, and has now killed more than 5,400 during the current uprising.

Human rights — decency — is reason enough to do everything we can to bring down Assad. But strategic opportunity compounds the urgency. With its archipelago of clients anchored by Syria, Iran is today the greatest regional threat — to Saudi Arabia and the Gulf states terrified of Iranian nuclear hegemony; to traditional regimes menaced by Iranian jihadist subversion; to Israel, which the Islamic republic has pledged to annihilate; to America and the West, whom the mullahs have vowed to drive from the region.

No surprise that the Arab League, many of whose members are no tender-hearted humanitarians, is pressing hard for Assad's departure. His fall would deprive Iran of an intra-Arab staging area and sever its corridor to the Mediterranean. Syria would return to the Sunni fold. Hezbollah, Tehran's agent in Lebanon, could be next, withering on the vine without Syrian support and Iranian materiel. And Hamas would revert to Egyptian patronage.

At the end of this causal chain, Iran, shorn of key allies and already reeling from economic sanctions over its nuclear program, would be thrown back on its heels. The mullahs already are shaky enough to be making near-suicidal threats of blocking the Strait of Hormuz. The population they put down in the 2009 Green Revolution is still seething. The regime is particularly reviled by the young. And its increasing attempts to shore up Assad financially and militarily only have compounded anti-Iranian feeling in the region.

It's not just the Sunni Arabs lining up against Assad. Turkey, after a recent flirtation with a Syrian-Iranian-Turkish entente, has turned firmly against Assad, seeing an opportunity to extend its influence, as in Ottoman days, as protector/master of the Sunni Arabs. The alignment of forces suggests a unique opportunity for the West to help finish the job.

How? First, a total boycott of Syria, beyond just oil and including a full arms embargo. Second, a flood of aid to the resistance (through Turkey, which harbors both rebel militias and the political opposition, or directly and clandestinely into Syria). Third, a Security Council resolution calling for the removal of the Assad regime. Russia, Assad's last major outside ally, should be forced to either accede or incur the wrath of the Arab states with a veto.

Force the issue. Draw bright lines. Make clear American solidarity with the Arab League against a hegemonic Iran and its tottering Syrian client. In diplomacy, one often has to choose between human rights and strategic advantage. This is a rare case where we can advance both — so long as we do not compromise with Russia or relent until Assad falls.

OUR VIEW

We salute Greater Ideal's next community project

Laurels

■ For Greater Ideal Baptist Church members. This church in southeast Midland has a history of doing what it takes to make an impact within the community. The church has been involved in partnering with businesses to help development in its neighborhood. Now, it appears Greater Ideal members have education in their sights.

Greater Ideal members want to make a difference on the education front with the Ideal Preparatory Academy Charter School. We appreciate the hands-on approach Ideal members are taking. If their dream becomes reality, Midland, as a whole, stands to benefit. For those interested in hearing more, there is an information meeting at 7 p.m. Monday at Greater Ideal Family Life Center, 301 S. Tyler St.

■ For creative hiring: We read this week that some local Subway stores were offering a $1,000 bonus to find quality workers. The most recent statistics from the Bureau of Labor Statistics showed Midland's unemployment rate was tied for the fifth lowest in the nation. Judging by the price of oil and drilling activity in the Permian Basin, there doesn't appear to be any reason that will change soon.

We applaud those businessmen and women who are proactive when dealing with sub-4 percent employment. During times like these it is really easy to accept substandard work from employees, because you don't have an alternative. That doesn't have to be the case.

■ For the giving spirit of the Midland RockHounds and West Texas Sockers. Midland's Double-A baseball team and independent league soccer team put together another successful West Texas Sports Banquet and Memorabilia Auction this week. Midland sports fans not only had the opportunity to re-connect with former Midland Cub baseball player Lee Smith, but they also showed a giving side, contributing in the neighborhood of $20,000 through auction sales. The money raised will go to Casa de Amigos, the athletic foundation at St. Ann's School and the Scott Seator Foundation.

During the previous 20 years of the sports banquet and auction, around $375,000 had been raised for local charities and the Seator Foundation. The giving is another example of how the RockHounds and Sockers give back to our community.

■ For Kyle Huckaba. For his work with Midland's youth sports, specifically the Greater Midland Football League, Huckaba was honored with the Scott Seator Award at this week's West Texas Sports Banquet and Memorabilia Auction. Huckaba joins a list of Midlanders to have won the community service award, including Doc Dodson, Randy Velarde, Ken Marks, Brad Swendig and former Reporter-Telegram Sports Editor Ted Battles.

Reluctance not an option with Iran

■ There's only one right answer when it comes to Iran and its development of nuclear weapons.

CAL THOMAS
Tribune Media Services

One of several casualties of the vitriolic name-calling between Republican presidential candidates Mitt Romney and Newt Gingrich is what to do about Iran.

In interviews, Romney has spoken about tougher sanctions, but it's been difficult to consider the candidates' positions on Iran — or much else — with the childish talk about who is the bigger liar.

James Clapper, director of National Intelligence, testified Tuesday before the Senate Intelligence Committee. Clapper said that while American sanctions are likely to have a greater impact on Iran's nuclear program, they are not expected to lead to the demise of Iran's leadership.

Clapper said, "We assess Iran is keeping open the option to develop nuclear weapons, in part by developing various nuclear capabilities that better position it to produce such weapons, should it choose to do so."

Given the apocalyptic statements from Iran's leadership, is anyone in doubt about Iran's intentions? Clapper said Iran is expanding its capability to enrich uranium and that the end product can be used for either civil or weapons purposes.

Clapper acknowledged "Iran's technical advancement, particularly in uranium enrichment, strengthens our assessment that Iran has the scientific, technical and industrial capacity to eventually produce nuclear weapons, making the central issue its political will to do so."

The central issue for Israel and the United States is this: can Iran be stopped by a pre-emptive attack, or must we wait until it launches — or threatens to launch — a nuclear missile at Israel, or explodes — or threatens to explode — "suitcase bombs" in U.S. cities?

In the English edition of "Israel Hayom," the largest circulation Hebrew daily in Israel, former Israeli diplomat Yoram Ettinger writes about the history of pre-emptive strikes that did not materialize and the consequences of waiting to be attacked before acting, http://www.israelhayom.com/site/newsletter—opinion.php?id=1298.

Ettinger believes the reluctance to engage in a pre-emptive strike on Iran's nuclear facilities "is harmful, ignores precedents, plays into Iran's hands and threatens Israel's existence" because it conveys "hesitancy, skepticism and fatalism, aiming to preclude pre-emption and assuming that Israel can co-exist with a nuclear-armed Iran," which of course it cannot, anymore that the United States could have co-existed with Cuba when the Soviet Union placed nuclear missiles there during the Kennedy administration.

The continuing problem for the United States is that every modern administration falsely has believed that what Israel and America do or don't do can deter the stated objectives of radical Arab and Muslim leaders.

The history and consequences of American and Israeli reluctance to engage in pre-emption has been chronicled by Ettinger. Here are two of several examples: Oct. 5, 1973: Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir rejected the option of a pre-emptive strike against mobilizing Egyptian and Syrian troops. Meir didn't want to appear as the aggressor and damage ties with the U.S., which was pressuring Israel to do nothing, probably out of fear the incendiary situation would be "inflamed." Following the resultant Yom Kippur War, many came to view the cost of waiting as greater than it might have been had Israel attacked first.

In June 1981, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin considered a pre-emptive strike against Iraq's nuclear reactor. Most of the intelligence and military leadership in Israel opposed action. Begin concluded, correctly, the cost of restraint would be greater than the cost of action. The surprise Israeli air strike took out the reactor under construction near Baghdad. The United Nations Security Council denounced the attack and the Reagan administration issued the pro forma denunciations of Israel's actions, though there were reports the president tacitly approved. The results were favorable to Israel and the U.S., delaying further action against Saddam Hussein until Desert Storm in 1991 and his ultimate overthrow in 2003.

Now Israel and the U.S. are faced with another choice: a pre-emptive strike that would setback, or destroy Iran's nuclear capabilities, or wait and see what might happen. Does anyone — other than Ron Paul — deny the disaster that might occur if Iran had a nuclear device and the capability to deliver it against targets in Israel and America?

As the joke goes, "denial is not just a river in Egypt."

KENYA

Attack on orphanage yields $80k in donations

NGONG — Anthony Omari earned the still-fresh 11-stitch scar that runs from his forehead to his upper lip in one of the noblest ways imaginable: By taking a machete to the face while defending an under-resourced Kenyan orphanage from attacking thieves.

Young and traumatized orphans witnessed the assault, which split open Omari's face and soaked his clothes in blood.

But, thanks to a posting on an increasingly influential U.S.-based social networking website, this story has a fairy tale ending that brings smiles of amazement and tears of gratitude to Omari, his mother — who runs the orphanage — and 21-year-old tech-savvy Penn State student Ben Hardwick.

After Hardwick posted a picture of Omari and his zipper-like scar two days after the Jan. 23 attack, users of the website Reddit donated more than $80,000 to help upgrade the orphanage's defenses. More than 3,600 people donated from all 50 U.S. states and 46 countries — Slovenia, Brunei and Estonia included. One donation came in from the USS Mount Whitney.

Police pushed to reduce law enforcement killings

NEGRIL — Every day, Richard Hill has to pass the bullet-scarred courtyard outside his home where he saw his 47-year-old brother gunned down at point-blank range by a police officer.

That Thursday more than a year ago, police in a van skidded to a stop where Mickey Hill stood among friends and relatives outside his home on the main street in Negril, a western beach town popular with tourists. He had just returned from the store with a black plastic bag of groceries: canned milk, flour and cornmeal.

One of the policemen, addressing Mickey as "big man," ordered him to open the bag, Richard Hill said.

"When he brought his hand out, it was boom boom boom! Man, the first of the three shots went straight through the tinned milk he was holding in front of him," said Richard Hill. Police then threw his brother's lifeless body into the back of a jeep and drove away, he said.

The Hill case has become a rallying point to end what human rights activists say is a culture of impunity that has allowed police to serve as judge, jury and executioner. Police said they were investigating the presence of gunmen and had indeed recovered a gun, but witnesses insisted there was no gun, nor were there gunmen, in the area.

2 dead in Egypt street clashes over soccer riot

Associated Press

CAIRO — Police shot and killed two protesters in Suez, Egypt, early Friday, a health official said, the first to die in clashes that erupted around the country after a riot at a soccer stadium killed 74, as sports violence spiraled into a new political crisis for Egypt.

Protesters blame police for failing to control the riot after the soccer game in Port Said. In Cairo, thousands demonstrated Thursday in front of the Interior Ministry, which oversees the police. Demonstrators threw rocks, and police responded with clouds of tear gas. Hundreds were treated by medics.

In Suez, witnesses said about 3,000 people demonstrated in front of police headquarters after news spread that one of the victims in the Port Said riot was from their city.

Police responded with tear gas and then opened fire, witnesses said. Health official Mohammed Lasheen said two men were killed by bullets. Fifteen other protesters were wounded, he said.

The deaths of 74 people Wednesday night in a post-match stadium riot in the Mediterranean city of Port Said fueled anger at Egypt's ruling military and the already widely distrusted police forces. Many in the public and in the newly elected parliament blamed the leadership for letting it happen — whether from a lack of control or, as some alleged, on purpose.

Survivors of the riot described a nightmarish scene in the stadium. Police stood by doing nothing, they said, as fans of the winning home team, Al-Masry, attacked supporters of the top Cairo club, Al-Ahly, stabbing them and throwing them off bleachers.

A narrow exit corridor turned into a death trap as crowds of fans fled into it, only to be crushed against a locked gate as their rivals attacked them from behind.

A network of zealous Al-Ahly soccer fans known as Ultras vowed vengeance, accusing the police of intentionally letting rivals attack them because they have been among the most aggressive of Egypt's revolutionaries. Ultras were at the forefront of the anti-government uprising — first against toppled leader Hosni Mubarak a year ago and now against the military that took his place in power.

"Either they will die or we will die," one Ultra said, referring to the police, as he joined a march by some 10,000 people on the Cairo headquarters of the Interior Ministry, which oversees the security forces.

Roadshow to make stop in Lubbock

By Sara Higgins
Staff Writer

When Sidewalk Prophets' lead singer David Frey considered the kind of legacy he will leave behind some day, he was reminded of the "great cloud of witnesses" that surrounded him throughout his life. He was reminded of a respected teacher who could command attention with his silence, and of his grandparents, parents and pastors who gave him unconditional love.

"In my life I've had those people and they've made such a difference in my life," he said. "I realized that, through those people, what I long for is to live like Christ."

Those stories were the inspiration behind the group's latest single, "Live Like That," the first to be released off the band's sophomore album coming out in March. The single peaked at No. 3 on the iTunes Christian and Gospel chart on the day it was released.

Frey and the other three members of Sidewalk Prophets will be making their way to West Texas as part of this year's Rock and Worship Roadshow lineup. The show will come to the United Sprint Arena in Lubbock, 6 p.m. Feb. 18. Admission will be $10 at the door.

The tour's fourth year includes newcomers and veterans of the Contemporary Christian music scene with MercyMe, Tenth Avenue North, LeCrae, Hawk Nelson, Disciple and Rend Collective Experiment. The tour kicked off in Biloxi, Miss. on Jan. 26 and has 25

Teens share faith at Teen CBS

Editor's note: Rachel Eyler, 18, is a senior at Midland High School. She writes for the Tall City Teen section that appears every other Monday in the Reporter-Telegram.

Every Monday night, around 70 Midland teens are greeted warmly into Midland Bible Church by adult leaders and the smell of fresh baked cookies. They are gathering to learn about God's word at Teen Community Bible Study.

Teen CBS was conceived in Midland about 10 years ago by Dr. Robert Henry and his wife, Janice. What began with 18 teens has developed into a nationwide Bible study. Programs stretch all over the country, in cities such as St. Louis and Tampa, Fla.

Teen CBS is a unique Bible study that takes different approaches to reaching out to teens, offering something for everyone. At Teen CBS, performances planned across the U.S.

Sidewalk Prophets' debut album, These Simple Truths, has sold more than 135,000 copies since its release in 2009, and its first single "The Words I Would Say" maintained a spot in the top five Billboard Magazine's Christian Songs for more than 20 weeks. The group won the 2010 Dove Award for New Artist of the Year, and was nominated for Group of the Year in 2011.

Frey and bandmate Be McDonald got their start at Anderson University in Indiana by playing at chapel and anywhere else they could find an audience. Even though the four current band members are preparing to release their sophomore album, Frey doesn't have to think far back to remember the days of touring in a 15-passenger van and sleeping in nurseries and janitors' closets to try to regain energy between shows.

"Really, it's been the good, the bad and the ugly," he said. "It's been a long road. Those hard times and those times you just have to have faith, holy cow, they strengthen you so much."

Still, the road has become a familiar constant in the band members' lives. Sidewalk Prophets spent 250 days on the road last year, taking three weeks off during the holidays.

"That's what's great about being a musician; you can spend all this time on the road and when you get tired you can go back into the studio," Frey said.

Thanks to a recent fundraising campaign, the group was able to purchase its first tour bus. Through the efforts of fans, friends and family, the band raised more than $43,000 toward the cost of the bus, which the members hope will help them spread their message across the nation.

"Our hope is that every song is a reflection of our heart, and that when people come, they know who Jesus is a little better, or at least take a step closer to him," Frey said. "Even though God is going to be in the arena tonight, that doesn't have to be the end of it; you can take that love, that joy and experience you're having and give it to others."

VIP tickets for the tour also are available for purchase at therockandworshiproadshow.com for $50 each and include early seating, a T-shirt, tour laminate and a voucher for discounted Roadshow tour merchandise.

cliques are forgotten, borders are non-existent and there is never a lack of love. Everyone is there for a reason, and no one is unwelcome.

"Teen CBS is very youthful and focuses on teens," Midland High sophomore Rachel Castille said. "Everything we learn and discuss is very relatable to our lives."

A night at Teen CBS begins with a meal prepared by volunteers. This allows teens to mingle with each other as well as with the adult leaders while enjoying a delicious meal.

After everyone has had the chance to fill up their stomachs and catch up, music ministry begins. The whole group gathers and worships through singing. This time gives the teens the chance to switch gears from their busy lives with school, athletics and other activities and open their hearts to God.

Each week, an adult leader gives a personal testimony pertaining to how the Lord has worked in his or her life recently. This year's theme is "His Witness," so leaders talk about ways in which God has used them or others in their life to spread his word and love. A game then may be played, and an overview of the lesson for the evening is given before breaking into core groups.

Core group time is usually teens' favorite part of the night. Each group consists of about 10 teens with one or two adult leaders and is divided by gender. While in core group, teens feel able to ask questions and open up about anything they have on their hearts.

"I love my core group, because I have a group of people I can trust," Midland High junior Kim Molina said.

Instead of studying the Bible as a whole, the Teen CBS curriculum focuses on one book of the Bible every year. Each week, students are given a lesson to do at home, this year the lessons are over the book of Hebrews.

"Having to do my lessons is great accountability," Kim said, "it keeps me in the habit of studying the Bible on a daily basis."

Group discussions aren't just limited to the lesson, however. Many groups find themselves getting distracted on other topics such as school, differing beliefs and life in general. This type of off-subject discussion allows teens to talk with each other about things everyone faces and seek help from both the adult leaders and their peers.

"I love sharing my faith among my peers," junior Devan Crawford said. "It's great to know that other teens have the same questions and concerns I have, not just when it comes to the Bible, but life and faith in general."

As a Teen CBS attendee myself, I can say Teen CBS is a high point in my week. Everyone is always so warm and welcoming upon arrival and it's such a positive way to start off my week. The adult leaders make a point to make every single teen feel important. I love having the opportunity to delve deeper into the Bible, but also just talk with my core group. Though it is only my second year at Teen CBS, and my appearances there are quite sporadic, I have learned so much that I look forward to taking with me throughout my life.

C. Ray Allen

C. Ray Allen, 65, of Midland, left this world on January 25, 2012. He was born December 26, 1946, in Midland, Texas. He was a graduate of Robert E. Lee High School, where he played football and earned the affectionate nickname "The Beast". Ray married the love of his life, Jacqueline Walton Allen, in the fall of 1968. Both graduated from Texas Tech University and Texas Tech School of Law. Ray and Jacque practiced law together in Midland until her death in 2009.

Ray was a man of many talents, including woodworking, mechanics, restoring vintage cars, and fixing almost anything himself, instead of calling in a professional. His friends refused to play Trivial Pursuit with him because Ray could speak with some authority on almost any subject including history, chemistry, physics, anatomy, mathematics, and biology. Although Ray had the appearance of a rather large and intimidating man, he had the softest of hearts and always rooted for, and came to the defense of, the underdog. He was a beloved father to his only child, Stacy Allen Jewett, and a dedicated "Papa Bear" to his only grandson, Jack Matthew Jewett.

Ray was preceded in death by his father, Clarence L. Allen, Jr., and his wife, Jacqueline Walton Allen. He is survived by his mother, Evelyn Allen, of Midland; daughter, Stacy Allen Jewett, son-in-law, Matthew Jewett, and grandson, Jack Matthew Jewett, of Midland; brother, Rob Allen, of Houston; brother, Ronald Allen, of Midland; and brother, Rex Allen, of El Paso.

Services will be held at 10:00 a.m., on Saturday, February 4, 2012, at Resthaven Memorial Park, where his ashes will be laid to rest with his wife, Jacqueline Walton Allen.

The family requests that in lieu of flowers, donations be made to the Midland SPCA, at 2701 S County Road 1206, Midland, Texas, 79706, or the Lone Star SPCA, at 4200 N. Fairgrounds Road, Midland, Texas 79705.

Arrangements are under the direction of Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home & Crematory of Midland. Online condolences can be made at: www.npwelch.com.

Holmes Oliver Dille, Jr.

Holmes Oliver Dille, Jr., after a short illness, passed on to be with his Lord and Savior, on the evening of January, 30, 2012. Born on February 21, 1921, in Aurora, Illinois, to Holmes Oliver Dille, Sr. and Laura Grace Jennings Dille, Holmes was 3 weeks shy of his 91st birthday. He was a member of America's "Greatest Generation," growing up during the Great Depression and serving his country during World War II. During his youth, he was a member of the Boy Scouts, became an Eagle Scout, and was also a member of the Order of the Arrow. Holmes graduated from East Aurora High School in 3 1/2 years, in 1938, and enrolled at Aurora College. After Pearl Harbor, Holmes enlisted in the US Army and fought in the European theater. Landing at Normandy several months after D-Day, his battalion fought its way across France, Belgium, and into Germany and was involved in the Battle of the Bulge. Returning to the United States in February 1946, he dated and married the love of his life, Sabina Mazurek, on May 30, 1948, at Aurora's Fourth Street Methodist Church. They were married for almost 57 years, until Sabina's death in May 2005.

Holmes attended Aurora College prior to World War II and graduated from Northwestern University, with a BS in Business Administration, in August of 1948. He started his career at Boye Needle Company and spent most of his professional career as an accountant for LeTourneau Westinghouse Corporation in Peoria, Illinois. Holmes and his family spent five years in Brazil, where he worked in the Finance and Accounting Department of Tratores do Brasil, a Brazilian subsidiary of LeTorneau Westinghouse Corporation. While in Brazil, Holmes became fluent in Portuguese and continued to develop his photographic hobby, taking (and developing in his own dark room) numerous pictures and slides of the colorful Brazilian countryside and lifestyle. Several of his photographs won awards in local shows and magazines.

Returning to the United States in 1960, Holmes and family were able to stop and visit a number of Latin American countries. In addition to working in Brazil, Holmes also took work-related trips to Europe and Africa, finally retiring in October 1985. Holmes' hobbies (besides photography) included reading, coin and stamp collecting. He entered stamp exhibits in numerous stamp shows. He was an avid bridge player and very competitive at every game he played. Holmes was actively involved in Habitat for Humanity and served as president of Peoria's United Churches for Better Housing. He and Sabina were active, lifelong members in the First United Methodist Church in Peoria, Illinois. Holmes taught adult Sunday school classes for many of those years. After moving to Midland, Texas, in 2000, they became members of the Midland First United Methodist Church.

He is is survived by son and daughter-in-law, Brian Keith and Diana Rae Dille, and granddaughter, Tamara Dille, all of Odessa, Texas; daughter, Patricia Ann Dille of Quito, Ecuador; brother, Dave Dille of Kingwood, Texas; sister, Joyce Dille Reich and brother-in-law, Jack Reich of Lago Vista, Texas; sister- and brother-in-law, Irene and Russ Warczak of Denver City, North Carolina, and numerous cousins.

Holmes was preceded in death by his parents, Holmes Oliver Dille, Sr. and Laura Grace Jennings Dille; and wife, Sabina Mazurek Dille.

There will be a graveside service held at 2:00 p.m., on Saturday, February 4, 2012, at Sunset Memorial Gardens in Odessa, Texas.

The family would like to thank the loving caregivers who cared for Holmes in the Vogel Unit at Manor Park; the caring sitters from Poppy Flowers, who kept him company during his last 8 months at Manor Park; and the nurses, aides and staff at Manor Park's Younger Alzheimer's Center; and the staff of Hospice Midland, who were involved in his care during the final week of his life.

In lieu of flowers, donations can be made to HCJB Global, P.O. Box 39800, Colorado Springs, Co. 80949 (daughter Patricia is a missionary nurse at their hospital in Quito, Ecuador.)

Funeral arrangements are under the direction of Sunset Funeral Home. To sign the guest book, go to our website at: www.sunsetodessa.com.

Larry is survived by his mother, Bobbie Jean Hagler, his sister, Linda Hagler, and his special sweetheart, Karin Owens Denton. He is also survived by his uncle William Lynn Newgent of Odessa, TX, his aunt, Lela Jo McElroy of Salado, TX, and his three cousins, Larry McElroy and wife, Michelle; Cynthia Andrews and husband Jim; and Sherry Sewell.

A Celebration of Life will be held on Friday, February 3rd, at 1:00 p.m., at the Golf Course Rd. Church of Christ, 3500 Golf Course Rd., Midland, TX, with Tod Brown officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park, 4616 N. Big Spring St. Family visitation will be Thursday, February 2nd, from 6:00 p.m. to 8:00 p.m., at Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home, 3800 Big Spring St., Midland, TX.

Larry loved and worshipped the Lord all of his life. He was baptized at Jefferson Street Church of Christ in Hobbs, NM, and was a member there eleven years. When the Hagler family moved to Midland in 1970, Larry placed membership at Golf Course Rd., Church of Christ and worshipped there for over forty-one years. When Larry was forty years old, he had the amazing honor and opportunity of baptizing his father, his grandmother, Della, and his uncle, Lynn.

Larry was a compassionate and gentle giant that went about helping others. Though he lived a simple life, he frequently gave money to help with other people's needs. Larry loved to make people laugh and had an amazing quick wit and great sense of humor. Larry frequented Furr's Cafeteria and enjoyed reading his newspapers and joking with the staff. He also loved and adored his two dogs, Rusty, age seventeen, and Tiger, his German Shepherd.

Larry graduated from Hobbs High School in 1970. He attended Lubbock Christian University, Abilene Christian University, Texas Tech, Midland College, and completed his Bachelor's Degree in Management from UTPB. He was brilliant and most often made the highest grade in the class. He loved learning and had around 228 college credit hours, enough for 3 Master's degrees or a doctorate. He had an Associate's Degree in Law Enforcement and received his Advanced Peace Officer Certification in June of 2010. Larry and his father, Leo, shared the love of flying and both had their private pilots license and shared a single engine airplane. Both were also two of the first people in Texas to receive their Concealed Hand Gun license. Larry frequently encouraged people to get their concealed hand gun license. He also had a Real Estate license, was a graduate of the Midland College Heavy-Truck Driving School, and most recently was a graduate of the Midland College Pharmacy Tech Program.

Larry had many varied interests. He was a letter carrier for the U. S. Postal Service, an accounting assistant at Main & Hurdman, CPA's, a senior accountant at Texaco for 17 1/2 years, a Municipal Court Bailiff in Odessa for 4 1/2 years and received their outstanding bailiff award, and most recently was a policeman at Midland College for the past 5 1/2 years.

Any memorial donations in Larry's memory may be made to Golf Course Rd. Church of Christ Benevolence Fund or KWO Ministries (Kenya Widows & Orphans) through Golf Course Rd. Church of Christ, 3500 Golf Course Rd., Midland, TX, 79703.

Pallbearers will be Burke Brack, Tom Cooper, Robert Day, Tim Galyon, Mark Hall, Dr. Gene Lusk, John McKinney, and Randy Prude. Honorary pallbearers are the Golf Course Rd. Church of Christ Elders, Sheriff Gary Painter, and the Midland College Police Officers: Chief Martin Garcia, Corporal Don Lemmon, and officers, Marihya Houck, Rocklyn Derouen, Ricardo Martinez, and Michele Van Stavern.

In memory of Larry being a policeman, there will be an Honor Guard.

'The Woman in Black' summons suspense

By Jake Coyle
Associated Press

"The Woman in Black" very nearly suffocates under the mounting weight of its gothic kitsch — an abandoned house, child ghosts, spooky dolls, oh my! — but nevertheless summons ornately crafted, old-fashioned suspense.

This is the second film for British director James Watkins, whose previous "Eden Lake" gathered an intriguing story about class out of a confrontation in the woods between a vacationing couple (Michael Fassbender and Kelly Reilly) and a violent gang of youths.

Watkins prefers the term "thriller" to "horror," and by these two films, it's obvious he's interested in using fright for more than just shock and something closer to real life.

In his first post-Potter film, Daniel Radcliffe stars as the struggling, widowed London lawyer Arthur Kipps. With a little facial scruff and clad in an early 20th century suit of the time, Radcliffe looks respectably adult.

Kipps is a morose young man, still grieving the loss of his wife in childbirth. His now 4-year-old son (Misha Handley) already has him down, in caricature, drawing him as a stick figure with a giant frown. Yes, young Harry Potter is now a (believable) dad, which means we can all collectively sigh and pretend to shoot ourselves.

He's dispatched to the (fictional) remote eastern British village of Crythin Gifford to put in order the estate of the recently deceased Alice Drablow. The sense of foreboding comes quickly and thickly, as the townspeople eye him suspiciously and Kipps is placed in an inn room where three young sisters killed themselves.

Death hangs over the town so heavily that whimpering comes even from a parrot, which no doubt had plenty of chances to mimic the sound.

The ivy-covered Eel Marsh House, which Kipps is to sort, is classically menacing in the Victorian way. Set back from the village down the ominously named Nine Lives Causeway, it's an island in a cold marsh that ebbs with the tide.

Inside the cobwebbed home, reflections, apparitions and shadows steadily increase as Kipps digs into the history of the Drablows as well as the village. Tragedies of the town's children populate its past and present — occurrences that seem connected to a lurking, dark figure.

THE WOMAN IN BLACK
CBS Films
95 minutes
★★½☆

As he always does, Ciaran Hinds considerably helps the film. (He also played the lead in another fine film that mixed grief with the supernatural, 2010's "The Eclipse.")

Hinds plays Samuel Daily, the only friend in town to Kipps and, himself, one of those who has lost a child. His wife (an enjoyably loony Janet McTeer) has gone off the deep end, to the point that her two small dogs dine at the table with them like Paris Hilton Chihuahuas.

Daily is the staunch holdout in the superstitious town. Declaring paranormal worries "rubbish," he warns Kipps not to "go chasing shadows." But even he, when Kipps declares he'll stay overnight at Eel Marsh, raises an eyebrow and says, "Take the dog."

"The Woman in Black" is adapted from Susan Hill's 1983 novel, which was earlier turned into a long-running play in London. It's the second film from the reconstituted Hammer Film Productions, the famed British house of horror best known for the lush gothics it churned out in the '60s and '70s.

Watkins' film, nifty and taught, is a worthy enough heir to that tradition. It's a film, ultimately, about the trappings of grief wallowing.

As a wand-less detective, Radcliffe comports himself well. He plays Kipps with downcast desperation, striving simultaneously after the memory of his wife and the future of his son.

The basic clichis on which the film is built threaten to overwhelm it. And it could certainly use a little more dialogue and a bit less creaky hallways. But the appeal of a good ol' ghost story is strong, and the simplicity of "The Woman in Black" suits the tradition.

"BIG MIRACLE" — If a movie is cheesy and knows it's cheesy — if it embraces the soft, gooey texture and pungent aroma of its own fromage — does that make it any more palatable as a meal? That is the question to ponder while watching this rousing, feel-good, family-friendly animal adventure which has the added benefit of being based on a true story. It's a weird hodgepodge, mixing the large cast and the melodrama of a 1970s disaster movie with the small-town quirkiness of "Northern Exposure," with just a touch of the big-haired ambition of "Broadcast News." At its center are three gray whales — a mother, father and baby who found themselves trapped within the quickly forming Arctic ice near Barrow, Alaska, the northernmost point in the United States, in 1988. The effort to free them in the open water brought together a disparate alliance of environmental activists, oil executives, journalists, native people and even the Soviets toward the end of the Cold War, and it fascinated viewers worldwide. John Krasinski plays Adam, the boyishly enthusiastic local TV reporter who breaks the story. He gets some help from an adorable little native boy (Ahmaogak Sweeney) who looks up to him as a big brother as well as from his idealistic ex-girlfriend, Greenpeace leader Rachel (Drew Barrymore). But soon everyone's invading this small, remote town for a piece of the action, which sets up all the fish-out-of-water scenarios you'd expect. Ted Danson and Kristen Bell are among the ensemble cast. PG for language. 107 minutes. Two and a half stars out of four.

— Christy Lemire, AP Movie Critic

"CHRONICLE" — It owes a great debt to the found-footage conceit of "The Blair Witch Project," has some of the aesthetic and tonal touches of "Cloverfield" and probes the same sorts of philosophical notions about the burden of power that serve as the basis for the "X-Men" series. And yet, "Chronicle" still has enough energy and ingenuity to serve as thrilling entertainment all its own. First-time feature director Josh Trank and writer Max Landis (as in son-of-John) have come up with a clever way to tell a hand-held, point-of-view story without relying on the same old grainy, headache-inducing shaky-cam techniques: The camera can levitate. Because the three teenagers who take turns operating it have acquired the power of telekinesis. These are three recognizable high school types: nerdy loner Andrew (Dane DeHaan), popular athlete Steve (Michael B. Jordan) and Matt (Alex Russell), Andrew's cousin who falls somewhere in the middle of the social hierarchy. One night in the woods outside a party, they discover a hole in the ground and decide to explore it. Since Andrew chronicles everything with his video camera, he documents what they find: some sort of glowing cosmic thing which fascinates them, and also gives them the ability to move and manipulate things with their minds. Rather than embark on some important superhero adventure, they do what regular kids would do. They mess with people at Wal-Mart. The third act goes a little haywire, though, especially as the camera device collapses in favor of various points of view. PG-13 for intense action and violence, thematic material, some language, sexual content and teen drinking. 84 minutes. Three stars out of four.

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: Throughout the years I've stayed in touch with my childhood best friend, "Claire." We talk a few times a year, and I attended her wedding 10 years ago.

In the intervening years, her husband, "Kirk," has cheated on her multiple times and was once arrested by an undercover cop when he tried to meet a 14-year-old for a sexual liaison. Despite it all, Claire has chosen to stay with him. I have made peace with the fact that it is her decision and, because she lives in another state, it hasn't affected my life in any practical way — until now.

I will be married next year, and Claire has expressed excitement at attending my wedding. I'd like to invite her, but not Kirk. I think he would be too much of a distraction for me. There will be enough people keeping an eye on the kids, but I know if I see him talking to my niece or nephew, it will make me extremely uncomfortable. God forbid, if he did something inappropriate, it would end my friendship with Claire.

Am I worrying too much? I don't want to hurt my friend, but I also don't want to put any child in harm's way or have my memory of the day marred with scanning the crowd to make sure Kirk isn't doing anything suspect. Your opinion would be helpful. — APPREHENSIVE

BRIDE-TO-BE

DEAR APPREHENSIVE: You need to be up front and sort this out with Claire before issuing an invitation. It is possible that her husband is legally enjoined from having contact with minors and could not attend your wedding even if invited. If you prefer that he not attend, you need to have the courage to say so. It probably won't be the first time she has heard it. But, safety of the young people, not to mention your peace of mind, must come first.

DEAR ABBY: A few months ago I joined a small church. It had a sign-up sheet for people to bring food to an event. The information requested included my name and email address. The person in charge of the church email added me to the announcements list and sent every email as a "cc" instead of a blind copy. Now, people I never gave my email address to (and would not have given it to) are replying "all," sending messages to everyone and emailing me directly. It bothers me that they do this. I'm not sure how to approach them about this problem. I guess the rest don't have issues with it, but I do. — E-PEEVED IN OKLAHOMA

DEAR E-PEEVED: You have two choices: Go through the hassle of changing your email address and notifying your friends and family — or simply hit "delete" when one of those emails pops up. I vote for the latter. As you stated, it's a small church.

DEAR ABBY: I have been in a relationship with "Danny" for two years. He's smart, charming and funny. However, after we argue, I'm always the one to start talking to try to come to a solution or a compromise. Danny never takes the initiative. I think he has a problem communicating with me about his feelings. What should I do? — TALKER IN PORTLAND, MAINE

DEAR TALKER: If after two years your boyfriend is unwilling or unable to resolve disagreements in an adult fashion, you should suggest couples counseling. It could avert serious problems in the future if you decide to invest more time in this relationship.

It is again time for us to run some of Eddie Kantar's "Thinking Bridge" deals, designed for players eager to improve their game and published in the Daily Bulletins of the Fall ACBL North American Championships in Seattle.

"South has a near maximum weak-two opening bid and North has a choice of responses. A raise to four hearts is reasonable as is two no-trump, asking for more information. If North tries two no-trump, South bids three clubs, showing a feature — the ace or king. This might encourage North to bid three no-trump, which happens to be cold.

"As East, give count in spades. After declarer has pre-empted or bid two suits and partner leads the ace, presumably from ace-king and dummy has the queen, third hand gives count playing the deuce — the lowest from an odd number of cards. As West, it looks right to switch to a low club. Partner figures to have an honor or two in the suit given the fact that South has a weak hand. As East play the king of clubs at trick two, the higher of unequal honors. If you had equal honors such as the queen-jack, you would play your lower equal.

"As South, you start with nine top tricks — six hearts, the diamond ace-king and the ace of clubs. Rather than pin your hopes on the diamond finesse, use dummy's queen-jack of spades to develop your 10th trick. Win the ace of clubs, draw trumps ending in dummy and lead the queen of spades, discarding a club. West wins the king, cashes the queen of clubs and leads a third club that you ruff. All that is left is to cross to dummy with a diamond and discard a diamond on the jack of spades. No diamond finesse is necessary..."

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Friday, Feb. 3, 2012:

This year, deal with your strong feelings. You won't take on what others project on you. This clarity will make your life work better. Use caution with your funds. You easily could lose money, have your wallet stolen or even be swindled. Your creativity soars, whatever your focus might be. If you are single, you are a magnet to those who are lighthearted and playful. If you are attached, sometimes the two of you will behave in a manner that is reminiscent of new lovers. CANCER pushes you hard to do what he or she wants.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ Think before you speak, as you could put your foot in your mouth with ease. You might mean well, but your subconscious becomes more activated and will remain so. Make it a habit to choose your words carefully. Tonight: Join friends.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★ Juggle your finances with care. You could find that what seems clear to you is hogwash to another person. Test ideas on others, as you could be subject to odd thinking right now, especially if you're born at the beginning of the sign. Tonight: Nap, then decide.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ Someone seems to test your temper more often than not. You wonder when to say "that is enough." There is no time like the present to initiate a change. Honor who you are. Don't accept people going past your boundaries. Tonight: Be spontaneous.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★ Continue being low-key, especially as your mind weighs the pros and cons of a personal situation. Ask for feedback only from people you respect; otherwise, don't dare. You sense a different perspective and an opening up coming. Tonight: You will know what to do.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ You might need to rethink your plans. A meeting results in common goals and support. You might be rather taken aback by everything winding up as you had wished. Tonight: Only what you want to do!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ It could be close to impossible to pursue any other course than the immediate one. You take the lead, whether you are in charge or not. Be aware that there could be a backlash that might not be too pleasant. Keeping the appropriate image might be very important. Tonight: To the wee hours.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ You might want to evaluate what has been a problem once more. You'll easily find a solution and realize how irrelevant the issue might have been. By getting less caught up in black-and-white thinking, your mind opens up. Tonight: Take off ASAP. Adventure lies ahead.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ Visualize a deeper partnership that allows greater give-and-take. You could be set back by a conversation from a while ago. Why not try it again? The results could be beneficial. Remain optimistic. Tonight: You are happiest with few people.

The UIL shuffle

Tim Fischer/Reporter-Telegram

Area high school coaches line up to receive their UIL realignment packets from John Petree, right, assistant exeutive director of Region 18 on Thursday at the Region 18 Service Center. Midland High and Lee will be in the new nine-team District 2-5A.

Realignment gives Lee, Midland High pretty much what they expected

By Len Hayward
Sports Editor

No realignment is ever perfect, but when the University Interscholastic League announced new districts for the 2012-2014 school years, athletic directors in the new District 2-5A were relieved as much as anything else.

The new nine-team Class 5A district that will go from the Panhandle to the Concho River is similar to the 10-team behemoth that was created in 2008, but what is different this time around was there were expectations of this coming and they were preparing for it.

Lee and Midland High will be in the new district with longtime rivals Odessa Permian, Odessa High, Abilene High, Abilene Cooper, and will be joined by San Angelo Central, Lubbock Coronado and Amarillo Tascosa. It's a reunion of sorts of the District 2-5A created in 2008, but one where officials know more what to expect.

"I tell you what, there was no panic today," Midland ISD Executive Director of Athletics Todd Howey said. "The last time we went through this big realignment with Amarillo and Lubbock, our cell phones were burning up and we were burning up the Internet. Now we are done already as we've already drawn for our schedules (for football) and it's been a pretty calm day."

Howey said the district's athletic directors had met in Lamesa two weeks ago and tentatively set up the football schedule for a seven-team and nine-team district. It was a move to pre-empt realignment to make the process a little easier on Thursday, and in the future.

University Interscholastic League Athletic Director Mark Cousins said on Thursday they talked a lot about what to do with the Class 5As in West Texas, and he said that keeping Abilene with those schools was the best option. But he added that with Amarillo High, Lubbock Monterey and Lubbock High dropping it made for some tough choices.

"It was something that we debated and talked about to do what was best for everybody involved," Cousins said. "We came to the determination that we thought that was best. Certainly, remembering what happened (in 2008) and the discussion at that time that was part of our thought process and those discussions did come into play."

But plenty of work still remains, especially in scheduling.

The hard part will be putting together schedules in sports such as basketball, baseball, softball and soccer, and balancing the extensive travel with the loss of school time. Plus, the eight-team district schedule decreases the amount of non-district games a team can play, which was something that Lubbock ISD Athletic Mark Ball said he was not a big fan of.

A perfect schedule is not likely, but the feeling is that the relationship is good enough between the athletic directors that as fair a schedule as possible will be made for the next two years.

"It's going to be extremely hard," said San Angelo ISD Athletic Director Jim Slaughter. "We have already had some discussions about moving certain sports to Friday and Saturday, depending on how far you go to travel. The travel part is going to be tough, but again we are in familiar territory and playing with people that we are used to playing with."

Some of the ideas being floated around for scheduling include doing Friday and Saturday games for teams that will have to travel long distances, and in baseball and softball the possibility of doubleheaders.

But unlike in 2008 when athletic offi-

Biggest moves seen in 4-3A as district splintered 3-ways

Tim Fischer/Reporter-Telegram

Greenwood coaches Doug Young, left, and Shad Hanna, right, look over and make notes on the just released UIL realignment paperwork Thursday morning at the Region 18 Service Center.

Sports Writer

The coaches from what had become the traditional District 4-3A are having to step out of their comfort zone this coming fall.

For years, the foundation of District 4-3A had been made up of Greenwood, Andrews, Seminole, Monahans and Fort Stockton. Other teams came and went from the district, but those five remained together.

That foundation was rocked Thursday with the University Interscholastic League sending those teams in three different directions in its latest statewide district realignment. The move left the coaches of the former 4-3A both shocked and disappointed.

"It was a surprise," Greenwood football coach and athletic director Shad Hanna said. "I never thought Andrews would be gone. I thought Seminole and Fort Stockton might be moved and we'd get Big Spring, but I thought we'd still be with Monahans and Andrews. I never thought we'd be heading east."

The only schools remaining in District 4-3A are Greenwood and Monahans, which head east to join Big Spring, Sweetwater, Snyder and Abilene Wylie in the new league. Fort Stockton has been moved to the west in District 3-3A matched with Anthony, Clint, Clint Mountain View, Fabens, Fort Stockton and Pecos.

Coaches may sleep well tonight as this year's realignment ends

OSCAR LEROY
Sports Writer

Every two years, coaches and athletic directors get more nervous ticks than going to a meeting with their booster clubs thanks to the University Interscholastic League's realignment.

You never know what the powers that be down in Austin are going to decide in terms of putting a school in a certain district while taking into account enrollment and travel. It's not an easy job but at least we haven't seen, for example, Stanton in the same district as Anthony. Not exactly the UIL's proudest moment.

I will also never forget the "travel is relative" response that I got from a UIL official 10 years ago. That irks to me to this day.

But at least in recent years, the UIL has shown that common sense does exist in some leadership circles. And no matter what decisions the UIL makes, somebody will always be a little ticked off.

All the UIL has to do is ask officials at the NCAA what it's like to try to make everybody happy — that just doesn't happen in the real world.

The oddest move in this year's realignment to me when it came to area schools was in District 3-2A, Division II where you have Alpine with Reagan County, Coahoma, Crane, Sonora and Stanton.

Looking up on Mapquest, the time it takes to travel from Coahoma to Alpine is about 3 hours, 40 minutes, and that's by car. If you're traveling by school bus, that could mean a good four-hour, one-way ride. The kids will probably look at those trips as some nice getaways from school. The coaches, on the other hand, will be loaded up with Advil and Rolaids. This will definitely be one of the most spread out districts in the state.

Over in Class 3A, probably the biggest shocker came with the break-up of District 4-3A. Some of the coaches in the five-team district thought they might lose Fort Stockton and/or maybe Seminole, but the district went in three different directions.

Greenwood stays with Monahans in District 4 but will be joined by Abilene Wylie, Big Spring, Sweetwater and Snyder. I'm sure nobody's more freaked out about this than Greenwood football coach and athletic director Shad Hanna.

Lady Chaps use inside presence to pull away

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

Frank Phillips College is a difficult matchup for the Midland College women's basketball team.

Because the Lady Plainsmen don't have the size to equal the Lady Chaparrals' interior presence, they rely heavily on their quickness to create turnovers and their outside shots to stay in most games.

The Lady Chaps turned the ball over 22 times but overcame those mistakes by going more to their post players in the second half and holding Frank Phillips to 30 percent shooting to eventually pull away for a 74-53 victory at Chaparral Center on Thursday night.

"Because of the style (the Lady Plainsmen) play, they limit the number of possessions and it's a difficult game to play," MC coach Ron Jones said. "There were some things we could have done better. At least for a long stretch in the game we limited them to one layup and limited them to one shot and started separating. We'll take it."

Four players were in double figures for Midland College (18-5, 4-1 in Western Junior College Athletic Conference), led by Achiri Ade's 12th double-double of the season, 10 points and 13 rebounds. Alexis Kelley had 14 points and nine rebounds, Lindsay Ansley had 12 points and eight rebounds, while Nety Sousa added 10 points.

"We started going inside a lot more (in the second half) and we were making our shots," Ansley said. "We did have a size advantage against them."

Chaps dominate second half in rout of FPC

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

Midland College men's basketball coach Chris Craig had a strong message to his team after trailing 39-33 at halftime to Frank Phillips College on Thursday night. It was heard loud and clear by the Chaparrals.

"Coach threatened us," said MC sophomore forward Melvin Tabb. "We have (today) off and coach came in and said, 'If you lose this game, practice tomorrow is going to be hell.' I'm sure that triggered us. In all actuality, everybody just had their input on the game and we just gave great effort on the glass in the second half."

Thanks in part to a double-double by Tabb and a 57-31 rebounding edge, the Chaparrals recovered from a sloppy first half to roll past the Plainsmen 86-67 in a Western Junior College Athletic Conference game at Chaparral Center.

Tabb finished with 19 points and 12 rebounds. Mike Taylor also had a double-double with 11 points and 10 boards. Jarekious Bradley came off the bench and had 17 points, and Tre Bowman returned from missing two games for unspecified reasons and scored 11 points for the Chaps (16-4, 4-2).

"I think we had a different focus (in the second half), we really wanted to win and didn't want to let our fans down," Tabb said. "We were more in the flow of our offense and we were happy for each other. We put our egos to the side."

Last game: Lee 70, Abilene Cooper 68, OT; Central 80, Odessa Permian 73

Last meeting: Central 76, Lee 62 on Jan. 10

Notes & Quotes: After an exhilarating overtime win against Abilene Cooper, Lee hits the road to face the second of only two teams to beat them in district play, Central. And after that first game against Central, a 14-point Bobcat victory, the Rebels feel they have a better idea of what it will take to beat the Bobcats. "We're going to need to slow them down as much as possible," Lee coach Mark Coffman said. "I really think the game needs to be in the 50s, not in the 70s, for us to win." ... Lee was unable to do that in the last meeting, as Central shot 61 percent from the floor and got 21 points from Justin Saddler, allowing the Bobcats to run away with the game despite leading scorer Reggie Sutton scoring a quiet 10 points. ... That Central is still perfect eight games into the district season doesn't bother Coffman or his team. "We're going to go over there with the attitude that no one expects us to win," Coffman said. "The pressure's not on us." ... Lee, however, can put pressure on Odessa Permian if it is able to pull the upset, as the Rebels and Panthers sport identical 6-3 district records behind first-place Central, with Permian holding the tiebreaker.

Coming off of a 54-point loss to No. 4 Lubbock Trinity on the road, the Mustangs return home to face the state's top-ranked team in Arlington Grace Prep. ... The Lions have yet to lose a district game, and the closest a team has come to toppling the state power is 37 points. ... The Knights got their first district win of the season against Arbor Christian in Amarillo and will look to close district with consecutive wins to move to .500 in district play. ... John Stallings had a game-high 16 points to go with 14 points from both Rett Taylor and Jared Nelson and 10 points from Harrison Haest in that game, and the Knights have to feel good about their chances if they can get that type of production again. Midland Classical closes its season Feb. 7 on Senior Night against Lubbock Christian.

MCS FRESHMAN HITS ACE AT GREEN TREE

Christian Gegelman made a hole-in-one on No. 3 on the North Course at Green Tree Country Club on Wednesday. He aced the 167-yard Par 3 with a fairway wood. Gegelman is a freshman at Midland Christian School.

HUDSON NAMED OVC FRESHMAN OF THE WEEK

Former Midland High girls basketball standout Chelsea Hudson was honored by the Ohio Valley Conference as the Freshman of the Week on Tuesday. Hudson exploded for 38 points and pulled down 17 rebounds for Tennessee State in a loss against Tennessee-Martin. Ten of those boards came on the offensive end, while she also blocked two shots.

In a win against Austin Peay on Saturday, Hudson had eight points and five rebounds. She is just the fourth player in Tennessee State history to score at least 38 points in a game.

CHAPS

From 1C

Craig said the first half in which the Chaps shot 35 percent and turned the ball over nine times was ugly to watch.

"We were just dead to start the game," Craig said. "We had no energy, we weren't competing and that's how we looked like the last two days of practice. We looked like 11 individuals in the first half."

The Chaps were playing without sophomore guard Kelvin Agee, who sat out the game because of a mandated NJCAA suspension after picking up two technical fouls against New Mexico Military Institute on Monday. Craig said Agee's absence was felt in the game.

"You realize exactly how much he means to us from a leadership, toughness and emotional standpoint," Craig said.

Thanks to a wake-up call from their coach and by playing more as a team, the Chaps flipped on the light switch and went to work on both ends of the court.

With a little more than 14 minutes left in the game, the Chaps broke a 47-all tie by going on a 13-0 run spurred by the play Tabb and Bradley, who scored 15 of his points in the second half.

"That's what coach wants from me," said Tabb, the 6-foot-9 product from Raleigh, N.C. "I feel like I played well and I gave a better effort in the second half. I don't think my effort was there in the first half. I definitely played better in the second half on the defensive end. That goes to my teammates for encouraging me and picking me up at halftime by telling me to stay with it."

After MC went on that run, the Chaps didn't let up as they held the Plainsmen (9-13, 1-5) to only one shot on their possessions and proceeded to run away with the victory.

LADY CHAPS

From 1C

sloppy play in the first half kept the Lady Plainsmen (5-15, 0-5) within 27-20 at the half.

"It is hard to play against them because you don't really know what they're going to do," said Ansley about the Lady Plainsmen, who were 7 of 31 from 3-point range. "Once you get into the flow, you can just play your game."

The Lady Plainsmen pulled to within 29-28 behind early in the second half behind a steal and a layup by Lee grad Shay O'Neal.

But that's when MC's went to work. The 6-foot-1 Ade started a 15-2 run by scoring the first three points on a free throw and a layup en route to a 44-30 lead. MC eventually built the lead to as much as 27 points (69-42).

Jones said the Lady Chaps had opportunities to go inside the entire game but they weren't doing a good job of getting the ball to the post players.

"I felt like we didn't do a good job of taking care of the ball," Jones said. "Sometimes we just didn't execute getting the ball inside."

The Lady Chaps played without returning third-team NJCAA All-American Danesha Long in the game as she has been battling tendonitis in her right knee. Jones said he decided to rest her to get her ready to play at rival Odessa College on Monday.

FROM WIRE REPORTS

SPURS 93, HORNETS 81

SAN ANTONIO — Tim Duncan scored 19 points, Tony Parker had 18 and the San Antonio Spurs won their third in a row, beating the New Orleans Hornets 93-81 Thursday night.

A night after Duncan scored 25 in a win over Houston, it was somewhat surprising that he even played. Coach Gregg Popovich has vowed to limit the 35-year-old's minutes and playing the West's worst team seemed to invite a night off.

But the Hornets didn't make it easy. Carly Landry scored 17 points and Grevis Vasquez added 16 points staring in place of Jarrett Jack, keeping New Orleans close before the Spurs blew out the game in the fourth.

BULLS 105, KNICKS 102

NEW YORK — Derrick Rose scored 32 points to outduel fellow All-Star starter Carmelo Anthony.

Rose had 15 in the fourth quarter and repeatedly answered when the Knicks rallied. With Chicago leading 88-83 midway through the final period, the reigning MVP scored on three straight possessions. He split Anthony and Amare Stoudemire to flip in a shot from past the backboard, then hit a 3-pointer to put the Bulls up 95-88.

GRIZZLIES 96, HAWKS 77

ATLANTA — Rudy Gay scored 21 points to lead five Memphis players in double figures and Memphis blew out the listless Atlanta Hawks.

The Grizzlies pulled away late in the first half, closing on an 18-7 run that gave the Grizzlies a 10-point lead at the break. They totally blew it open in the third quarter after Atlanta missed its first seven shots and turned it over three times.

Other sports forced to adjust again to bigger 2-5A schedule

By Jordan Mason
Sports Writer

Just 24 hours after National Signing Day, football-crazed high school sports fans statewide happily devoured a second helping of offseason headlines with Thursday's unveiling of district realignment for the 2012-2014 seasons and the subsequent finalization of 2012 football schedules.

Yet lost in the never-ending hunger for football news was how Thursday's realignment affected everyone else, as coaches in non-football sports in the newly formed District 2-5A were left with more questions than answers.

No one was surprised by the addition of Amarillo Tascosa and Lubbock Coronado to the current 3-5A alignment, and San Angelo Central, added to 2-5A for football, is already a part of the current alignment in every other sport.

But for sports that don't just play each district team once on a fall Friday night, the new nine-team alignment creates a bevy of questions that simply can't be answered until coaches know when district play will start in their respective sports.

Even then, life won't get much easier for sports like volleyball, basketball, baseball and softball with 16 district games to try to fit in a schedule with cherished non-district tournaments.

"In order to keep your tournament, that means district play, for us, starts pretty much right recently retired MHS volleyball coach Terri McColloch.

Russell

Coffman

McColloch

Bulldog baseball coach Barry Russell said it can be an even bigger problem for his team, who generally hosts a tournament and plays in two more before the start district play.

"Do you start the season and go one game, tournament, then district game, tournament, then district game, tournament?" Russel said. "That's the question probably."

For Lee boys basketball coach Mark Coffman and girls basketball coach Rosalind Lawrence, the additional district games may even mean losing the Tall City Oilman's tournament that Lee has hosted the past two seasons.

Coffman said he's already looking for ways to save the tournament, even possibly changing it to an earlier date, after it had to be canceled in Lee's last tenure in a 10-team district prior to the current alignment.

"Hopefully, it won't be (canceled) because we had a really good tournament this year," Coffman said.

Lawrence added: "I'm sure we'll figure something out because I really enjoy playing two tournaments at home."

And while most coaches welcomed the competition, with Coronado strong in many non-football sports, many understood that their teams were going to need to be ready for a district run earlier than normal.

"We'll probably have to start (district play) at the beginning of December," Lawrence said. "You have to come in prepared."

Travel, meanwhile, didn't seem to be a concern to many coaches, with MHS softball coach Shawnda Vines even pointing out that her team still won't have to travel as much as it did in the 10-team 2-5A that preceded the current alignment.

And while each coach was quick to note that the new alignment will make for a long district season, the new District 2-5A was generally well-received, and coaches seemed ready and willing to deal with the slew of questions that may be answered later than sooner. Russell said he's even traded texts with coaches at Lubbock Coronado and Abilene High to jumpstart the process of finding a consensus on the best solutions.

"It's not that there aren't any worries," Lee baseball coach Hector Limon said. "I just know it'll work out."

AREA REALIGNMENT NOTES

■ Monahans was the most taken aback by the formation of the next District 4-3A. Head football coach Mickey Owens had set up Big Spring, Sweetwater, Snyder and Abilene Wylie as the Loboes non-district opponents. Now all four are district foes.

That has left Owens scrambling for games and he's still got two openings to fill, which has him worried about potentially losing some home games.

"It's like a crime scene," Owens said. "You better get it figured out within 24 hours or you're going to make it really tough. This really caught me off guard. And where we're located doesn't help in getting games. If we were closer to Abilene, you could almost go to the Metroplex to play, but obviously we aren't. We might have to look at playing some teams from across the state and you can't really go home-and-home with them. Then you start losing home games."

Having a long trip for a non-district game would only add to what is already going to be a taxing travel schedule for district play.

■ Coahoma and Stanton were kept in the same district with Crane, Reagan County, Alpine and Sonora joining the two rivals in District 3-2A, Division II for football only. Coahoma football coach and athletic director Trey Gardner isn't thrilled about some of the travel.

"I'm not excited about the travel with Alpine being over 200 miles away," Gardner said. "We're not really looking forward to the trips, but it looks like a very competitive district from top to bottom.

Stanton football coach and athletic director John Peterson is impressed with the quality of competition in the new league.

"There isn't really a team that stands out above the rest like we saw with Idalou the last two years," Peterson said. "But I feel the middle of the district is a lot stronger. There isn't that team that you feel you're going to play and expect a gimme."

■ Garden City football coach Vance Jones has the rare satisfaction of seeing exactly what he expected to happen in realignment to actually take place. The Bearkats are in a district with traditional rivals Rankin and Fort Davis, while Marfa joins the league in its first season of playing Six-Man football.

However, Jones did notice Throckmorton was moved back into one of the west regions, meaning the Greyhounds — the defending state champions — would be an earlier playoff opponent.

"We were not real sure what would happen with Rankin, but they stayed Division I and it worked out like we thought," Jones said. "The biggest move for us was Throckmorton being moved back into the west. That really leaves no strong teams in the east. There are five or six programs in the west now that can contend for state every year."

Moves

From 1C

Finally, Andrews and Seminole are headed north to the South Plains in District 2-3A, joining a league with Levelland, Lubbock Cooper, Lubbock Estacado and Shallowater. Saying Andrews football coach and athletic director Jeff Cordell was shocked with the move would be an understatement.

"My jaw just about hit the floor," Cordell admitted. "Seminole thought they could go north, but we really didn't think this would happen to us. To open up the packet and see District 4-3A being totally obliviated surprised me. It's a little quirky to me. UIL really threw a screwball at us."

Andrews and Seminole were pulled to the north due largely to Brownfield and Lamesa dropping to Class 2A, but also because Amarillo River Road ascended to the Class 3A ranks. The move didn't surprise Seminole football coach and athletic director Chris Burtch nearly as much.

"Honestly, I planned on going north," Burtch said. "I'm a little disappointed they broke up the district we were in into three parts. It worked out pretty well for me from a scheduling perspective, though."

Burtch believes the new District 2-3A will be just as competitive as the former 4-3A in football, but notes how much harder it got across in the board in just about every other sport.

"That's a really tough basketball district and it's going to very good in baseball especially," Burtch said. "That's as good of a baseball district as there is in the state. It will be tough in all sports. Every sport got a little bit tougher in realignment with the exception of probably volleyball."

The same could be said for the new District 4-3A. The addition of Abilene Wylie brings in an athletic program with top tier teams in nearly every sport.

"It's good top to bottom in everything," Monahans football coach and athletic director Mickey Owens said. "I thought our last district was really tough. This one is even tougher."

At least one area 4-3A coach is thrilled with the new alignment.

"I'm very excited (about realignment)," Big Spring football coach and athletic director Phillip Ritchey said. "I was very surprised. I never envisioned being the middle of a district. I thought we would be on the edge to the east or the edge to the west. Our travel is going to be cut down significantly."

cials in the district were scrambling to put together schedules, they feel more prepared with what has transpired and will make the process easier.

Midland ISD Superintendent Ryder Warren said he's never gotten really excited about realignment, knowing a school takes what they get and move on but said even with the travel expected he said he's confident it will work.

"The business person in me knows a larger district like that presents some more challenges, just from the travel and things we have to do," Warren said. "But it is what it is. Knowing our coaching staff the way I do, and all of our directors and fine arts people the way I do, they are not going to skip a beat."

Beyond the issues that will come from the creation of the district, the officials are glad to be working with people they know and to reform a district that features the same cities that were involved in the mid 1950s when each of the cities had only one high school, and when the Little Southwest Conference moniker began to be used.

"We maintained those traditions that we have with those schools," Ector County ISD Athletic Director Todd Vesely said. "We are all locked in, we are all the same and they are almost our brethren in athletics we've been doing this for so long."

He already has to struggle with numbers, but now the Rangers have to compete in an even tougher district and against more schools with much larger enrollments. The silver lining for the Rangers is at least they don't have to travel to Alpine or El Paso County.

Meanwhile, Seminole and Andrews stayed together but go north to District 2 with Levelland, Lubbock Cooper, Lubbock Estacado and Shallowater. Seminole and Andrews keep their long-standing rivalry with the move, but lose some nice rivalries they had going with Monahans and Greenwood.

And finally Fort Stockton heads back west with Pecos and will join El Paso County schools Anthony, Clint, Clint Mountain View and Fabens in District 3. The bad news for Fort Stockton are the long 3-hour, 40-minute one-way trips to Anthony. The good news is that the Panthers are back in a district where they've previously had a lot of football success. Let's be honest, if I were a football coach I'd rather face Fabens than Monahans.

The biggest move in the Class A or Six-man ranks is that Marfa is heading down to Six-Man and will join stalwarts Fort Davis, Rankin and Garden City.

The rest of District 5-A, Division II stayed intact with Iraan, McCamey, Wink and Van Horn. Wink has long been rumored to be heading to the Six-Man ranks, but with a recent enrollment of 103, it's still hanging on as a Class A program.

The day of big decisions for the UIL has come and gone. Schools can still appeal a ruling and there will be plenty of debates ahead.

But for the rest of the school coaches and administrators in the state, the nervous ticks and the extra sleepless nights can at least wait for another two years.

THURSDAY'S NHL ROUNDUP

FROM WIRE REPORTS

HURRICANES 3, BRUINS 0

BOSTON — Cam Ward made 47 saves — 22 in the first period and 20 in the third — Brandon Sutter had a goal and an assist, and the Carolina Hurricanes finished their first season-sweep of the Boston Bruins with a 3-0 victory on Thursday night.

The Hurricanes, who won all four meetings with the Bruins, are 15-25-9 against the rest of the NHL and are last in the Eastern Conference. Carolina outscored Boston 14-5 in the season sweep, the franchise's first over Boston, dating to the days when the team was the Hartford Whalers.

Eric Staal scored in the first period, Tuomo Ruutu converted Sutter's rebound in the second, and Sutter added a goal 3:13 into the third.

Ward, 11-11-2 against the Bruins, posted his third shutout of the season and 19th of his NHL career — including three over Boston.

FLYERS 4, PREDATORS 1

PHILADELPHIA — Wayne Simmonds had two goals, Matt Read and Claude Giroux also scored, and Philadelphia snapped Nashville's five-game winning streak.

Ilya Bryzgalov made 26 saves to earn his 175th career win, and the Flyers finally played just 60 minutes. They went to a shootout in their previous three games, losing twice.

Ryan Suter had Nashville's lone goal. The Predators had won nine of 10 and entered with the NHL's best record since Dec. 28, going 13-2.

DEVILS 5, CANADIENS 3

NEWARK, N.J. — Zach Parise scored two goals, including the go-ahead tally with 2:44 remaining, and New Jersey rallied to beat Montreal.

David Clarkson also scored twice, including an empty-netter in the final seconds. Dainius Zubrus added a goal, and Ilya Kovalchuk had three assists for the Devils, who have won two straight. Martin Brodeur made 27 saves.

David Desharnais, Andrei Kostitsyn and Mathieu Darche scored for Montreal, which had 18 saves from Carey Price.

Parise's second goal gave the Devils their first lead of the night. He deflected Kovalchuk's shot past Price to break a 3-3 tie. Clarkson finished the scoring for the Devils, who had trailed 2-0 and 3-1.

JETS 2, LIGHTNING 1, OT

TAMPA, Fla. — Kyle Wellwood scored 3:14 into overtime to lead Winnipeg past Tampa Bay.

Wellwood scored from in close off a left-circle pass from Blake Wheeler.

Wheeler also scored for the Jets, who had lost seven straight at Tampa Bay, dating to the franchise's time in Atlanta. Ondrej Pavelec finished with 30 saves.

Victor Hedman scored and Mathieu Garon stopped 22 shots for the Lightning, who had a season-best, five-game winning streak snapped. Garon fell to 5-1 against the Atlanta/Winnipeg franchise.

Hedman tied it 1-all at 10:34 of the third after taking a nifty neutral zone touch pass by Martin St. Louis. The defenseman snapped a 25-game goal drought, dating to Oct. 22 against Buffalo.

St. Louis has 10 assists and 13 points during an eight-game point streak. The right wing has at least one assist in every game of the spurt.

COLLEGE SIGNING

FROM STAFF REPORTS

MICAH RAIES

College: Dallas Baptist
High School: Midland Classical Academy
Sport: Cross Country
Raies on why he signed with Dallas Baptist: "I wasn't planning on running cross country in college, but I was already planning on going to DBU. The cross country coach heard that I was attending DBU, and asked if I would want to go talk to them. I wanted to go run for them, and I was already dead set on going to DBU."

Raies

Notes: Raies has a brother who attends Dallas Baptist, and that was a big reason he wanted to go to the school in the first place. Raies has competed in the TAPPS 3A state meet since he was a freshman, and finished 15th overall in this year's event.

Hall of Famer Dorsett suing NFL

Associated Press

The helmet-to-helmet shot knocked Tony Dorsett out cold in the second quarter of a 1984 Cowboys-Eagles game, the hardest hit he ever took during his Hall of Fame NFL career.

"It was like a freight train hitting a Volkswagen," Dorsett says now.

"Did they know it was a concussion?" he asks rhetorically during an interview with the Associated Press. "They thought I was half-dead."

Dorsett

And yet, he said, after being examined in the locker room — a light shined in his eyes; queries such as who sat next to him on the Cowboys' bus ride to the stadium — Dorsett returned to the field and gained 99 yards in the second half. Mainly, he said, by running plays the wrong way, because he couldn't remember what he was supposed to do.

"That ain't the first time I was knocked out or been dazed over the course of my career, and now I'm suffering for it," the 57-year-old former tailback said. "And the NFL is trying to deny it."

Dorsett traced several health problems to concussions during a career that lasted from 1977-88, and he has joined more than 300 former players — including three other members of the Pro Football Hall of Fame, and at least 32 first- or second-team All-Pro selections — in suing the NFL, its teams and, in some cases, helmet maker Riddell. More should have been done in the past to warn about the dangers of concussions, their lawyers argue, and more can be done now and in the future to help retired players deal with mental and physical problems they attribute to their days in the NFL.

In interviews conducted by the AP over the past two months with a dozen plaintiffs, what emerged was, at best, a depiction of a culture of indifference on the part of the league and its teams toward concussions and other injuries. At worst, there was a strong sense of a willful disregard for players' well-being.

"It's not about whether players understood you could get a concussion playing football. It's about the negligence of care, post-concussion, that occurred," says Kyle Turley, an offensive lineman for the Saints, Rams and Chiefs who was the No. 7 overall pick in the 1998 draft and an All-Pro in 2000.

Players complain that they carried owners to their profits, in an industry that now has more than $9 billion in annual revenues, without the safety nets of guaranteed contracts or lifetime medical insurance.

"Yeah, I understand you paid me to do this, but still yet, I put my life on the line for you, I put my health on the line," Dorsett said. "And yet when the time comes, you turn your back on me? That's not right. That's not the American way."

Head injuries are a major topic of conversation every day of the NFL season. With the Super Bowl as a global stage, the NFL will air a one-minute TV commercial during Sunday's game highlighting rules changes through the years that have made the sport safer.

The owners of the teams playing for the Lombardi Trophy in Indianapolis — Bob Kraft of the New England Patriots and John Mara of the New York Giants — acknowledge the issue's significance.

"There's more of a focus on it now, without question, and I think that's a good thing, and I think it'll continue to be a focus. Because none of us want to put players in perilous situations like that," Mara says. "I don't want to see guys that are on this team, 20 years from now, with debilitating injuries, no matter what they are."

Says Kraft: "We know this is a physical game, and when people play the game, they know it comes with certain risks. We have tried to stay ahead of it."

The most accomplished and best-known plaintiff in the flurry of lawsuits — a star for the Cowboys after winning the 1976 Heisman Trophy at Pittsburgh — Dorsett agreed to two interviews with the AP, one over the telephone and one at his suburban Dallas home.

"I don't want to get to the point where it turns into dementia, Alzheimer's. I don't want that," says Dorsett, who ran for 12,739 yards, the eighth-highest total in league history. He is, in that moment, sad and deflated — in others, pumped up and angry, fists flying to punctuate his words. "There's no doubt in my mind that ... what I went through as a football player is taking an effect on me today. There's no ifs ands or buts about that. I'm just hoping and praying I can find a way to cut it off at the pass."

Report: Rangers' Hamilton has relapse with alcohol

Associated Press

DALLAS — The Dallas Morning News is reporting Rangers outfielder and recovering drug addict Josh Hamilton had a relapse earlier this week when he drank alcohol at a bar.

The newspaper, citing unidentified "individuals familiar with the episode," reported Thursday night that Hamilton was drinking at a Dallas area bar Monday.

In a statement to the newspaper, the Rangers said they were "aware of a situation, but we don't have further comment at this time."

Hamilton, 30, was suspended for more than three years for drug and alcohol use while in the Tampa Bay organization. He missed the entire 2004-05 seasons. He won the AL MVP in 2010.

This was Hamilton's second alcohol-related relapse in three years. In January, 2009, he drank to excess in a bar in Tempe, Ariz. Before that, Hamilton said he hadn't taken a drink of alcohol since Oct. 6, 2005.

When the Rangers acquired the 28-year-old outfielder from the Cincinnati Reds on Dec. 21, 2007, they were aware of Hamilton's off-the-field problems and came out with a "zero tolerance" policy regarding his drinking.

He is tested for drug use three times a week and has had an accountability partner to support him in his recovery — though that job is now vacant.

The Rangers announced last month that Hamilton's father-in-law had been hired as a staff special assistant to be the accountability partner for the slugger. But Michael Dean Chadwick has since decided against accepting that position due to "family considerations."

Hitting coach Johnny Narron filled that role before he left in November for Milwaukee. Narron joined the Rangers when Hamilton was acquired four years ago in a trade from Cincinnati. His primary role was to support the former No. 1 overall draft pick, who rebounded from his substance-abuse problems to become one of the top players in baseball.

Hamilton can become a free agent after this season, and has said he will not negotiate an extension after he reports to spring training.

He said he plans to leave for spring training on Feb. 17, a full week before the full-squad reporting date in Arizona.

Giants' DeOssie will start Super Bowl with Tails

By Joe Kay
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — One word from Giants special teams captain Zak DeOssie will begin the Super Bowl.

With more than 100 million people watching in the United States alone, the long snapper from New York, other Giants captains and their counterparts from New England will see referee John Parry display both sides of a special commemorative coin for the opening toss.

Then, DeOssie will choose his side.

"I've called 'tails' every single time this year, and that's what it's going to be this weekend," DeOssie said in an interview Thursday.

Chances are, he'll be right.

The National Conference has won the last 14 Super Bowl coin flips, though that hasn't turned out so well in the end. The American Conference has won nine of those 14 title games.

Want to pick the Super Bowl winner? Might as well just flip a coin. The team that's won the opening toss is only 22-23 in the title game, evidence that it has very little impact on whatever happens next.

It's still a special moment, one that gamblers lay money on and businesses build promotions around. One chain is offering its rewards program customers a free pizza if the coin comes up heads.

It's also significant in another way: A rare game decision left entirely up to the players.

"I'm out of that one," Giants coach Tom Coughlin said Thursday. "We have our captains and they decide who's going to make that call. We do keep track of who wins and who loses, thank you very much."

DeOssie, whose father Steve also played in the NFL, got the honor on a whim.

He and the other two Giants captains — quarterback Eli Manning and defensive end Justin Tuck — were walking toward midfield before the season opener in Washington when the subject came up for the first time.

"Eli turned to Tuck and said, 'You want to call it?'" DeOssie said. "And Tuck said, 'Nah, I don't feel like it. I don't need to call it. Zak, you want to call it?' I said yeah, sure."

It was his job the rest of the way.

In the NFL, the visiting team gets to call the coin flip. DeOssie went 4-4 during the regular season, and the Giants chose to receive the kickoff rather than defer all four times. It came up heads during a second-round playoff win at Green Bay, but DeOssie got the coin to land his way twice during a win at San Francisco in the NFC title game, including overtime.

Coughlin wouldn't say what he'll pick if it comes up tails on Sunday. He has chosen to receive the kickoff most times.

Like everything else in the NFL, coin flips are tracked for trends.

During the 2011 regular season, teams that won the flip and chose to take the ball went 71-79, according to STATS LLC. Teams that deferred to the second half were 64-42. Weather and home-field advantage play into those results.

The first Super Bowl coin flip landed on the grass at Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum on Jan. 15, 1967. Green Bay captains Bob Skoronski and Willie Davis met Kansas City's captains at midfield, won the toss and the game.

Yuri Godin, of Charlotte, N.C., pumps gas at a Costco in Matthews, N.C., in November 2011. Costco Wholesale Corp. said Thursday that revenue at stores open at least a year climbed 8 percent in January, helped by higher gas prices.

Retailers deliver solid sales gains for January, but results divided

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Americans were shopping in January, but not every store was feeling the love.

Retailers reported mixed sales results for the month in a sign that U.S. consumers continue to be cautious about when and where they spend their money in the shaky economy.

Overall, merchants on Thursday reported a 4.8 percent increase for January, according to the International Council of Shopping Center's tally of 20 retailers. That's above the 3 percent gain that ICSC had expected.

But, the results were divided. Retailers such as Target that sell basic household goods did well, as did chains like Saks that cater to wealthier shoppers. Meanwhile, Macy's and other stores that sell mid-price clothing posted disappointing results.

"The takeaway is that the underlying demand is still there, but business continues to be uneven," said Michael P. Niemira, ICSC's chief economist. "It was definitely a divided picture."

The results provide a glimpse into the psyche of the American consumer. January typically is the time when stores offer deep discounts on winter stuff so they can clear it out to make room for spring merchandise. This past January, the average consumer continued to focus more on buying what they need, while unseasonably warm weather made markdowns on puffy coats and furry boots at mid-priced chains unappealing.

Industry watchers look closely at retailers' monthly sales numbers, but only a small number of retailers report those figures. Home Depot, Best Buy and even Walmart, the world's largest retailer, don't report monthly revenue. A fuller picture of January spending will come in a government retail sales report that will be released Feb. 14.

January's reports of revenue at stores open at least a year — a gauge of a retailer's health — show that Americans were most willing to shop at discounters and wholesale clubs that offer more of a variety in merchandise.

Costco continued its streak, reporting that revenue at stores open at least a year climbed 8 percent, helped by higher gas prices. Results topped the 6.1 percent predicted by analysts polled by Thomson Reuters.

Target Corp. also said revenue at stores open at least a year rose beat Wall Street estimates. The retailer reported a 4.3 percent gain in January, compared with the 2.1 percent expected by analysts. The company said in a recording that some of its strongest performers were shoes, health care products and children's clothing.

The luxury sector also did well as well-heeled shoppers continued to buy. Saks Inc. posted revenue at stores opened at least a year that rose 10.5 percent during January, driven by sales of women's apparel, handbags and men's accessories.

Meanwhile, stores that sell clothing faced big challenges because in part to the weather. The Bon-Ton Stores Inc. reported a 3.5 percent decrease in revenue at stores opened at least a year. Tony Buccina, president of merchandising, blamed the poor performance on the mild winter.

"January sales were below expectations due to the continuation of the milder weather in our markets, which had an adverse impact on sales of cold-weather merchandise and comprised the majority of our sales shortfall," he said.

Natural gas jumps

Natural gas prices climbed more than 7 percent Thursday after the government said the nation's supplies shrank last week.

Gas supplies dropped by 132 billion cubic feet last week, according to the Energy Information Administration. The decline was more than analysts expected, but the overall storage level of 2.97 trillion cubic feet remains well above five-year levels for this time of year.

Natural gas supplies have been growing in recent years as producers develop more deposits in shale formations across the country. Mild weather in much of the U.S. this winter has kept demand low. About half the homes in the nation use gas for heating.

Natural gas futures rose 17 cents to finish at $2.55 per 1,000 cubic feet in New York.

Meanwhile, benchmark crude fell by $1.25 to end at $96.36 per barrel in New York, reflecting weak demand for petroleum products in the U.S. Brent crude rose by 51 cents to finish at $112.07 per barrel in London.

The government said Wednesday that demand for petroleum products fell by 4.3 percent last week when compared with a year ago. Gasoline demand dropped by 7.3 percent, and demand for distillates — which include diesel and heating oil — fell by 1.7 percent.

Retail gasoline prices rose less than a penny to a national average of $3.46 per gallon, according to AAA, Wright Express and Oil Price Information Service. A gallon of regular is about 18 cents higher than a month ago and 35 cents higher than a year ago.

Dollar mixed

The dollar traded mixed against other currencies Thursday after the government said unemployment claims fell last week but Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke told lawmakers that the economic recovery is "frustratingly slow."

The euro fell to $1.3141 in late trading Thursday from $1.3158 late Wednesday.

In other trading, the British pound fell to $1.5798 from $1.5836. The dollar fell to 76.16 Japanese yen from 76.22 yen.

The dollar rose to 0.9170 Swiss franc from 0.9157 franc and to 99.93 Canadian cents from 99.85 Canadian cents.

Gold for April delivery rose $9.80 to finish at $1,759.30 per ounce.
