MISD mulls 2nd bond election

Trustees to vote on whether to spend $5,000 on survey, focus groups

■ Administrators question why vote shifted, with more than 52 percent of Midlanders voting 'yes' during early voting.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Midland school board trustees called a special meeting Monday night to analyze the failed $110 million June bond election and to consider calling another election, most likely in the spring. The board will vote on Tuesday, Aug. 13, at the regular board meeting, on whether or not to spend $5,000 on a survey and focus groups to find out what kind of bond package Midlanders favor.

The June 1 bond failed with more than 55 percent of the voters in opposition of a bond package that would have provided extensive renovations to elementary school campuses and created one new high school.

MISD administrators questioned why the vote shifted, with more than 52 percent of Midlanders in favor of the bond during early voting.

"What happened between early voting and election day?" asked Joe Cummins, MISD executive director of administrative services, evaluation and planning. "What caused large groups of voters to come forward (in opposition) on election day? What caused people to not see favor in the package, many who have children?"

Using a precinct map, and a breakdown of votes per precinct, MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. noted the election was "defeated soundly in most neighborhoods."

Parents to get copies of curriculum

By Myra Lee Salcedo

Four Midland parents will get their copy of the fifth- and sixth-grade multicultural social studies curriculum "Celebrations" this morning. Tom and Jeanette Dragisic, and Billy and Janet Harris are expected to pick up a copy of the curriculum after their initial request to see it in May went to the attorney general.

Texas Attorney General Dan Morales, in an informal July 26 letter ruling, said that the school district "may not withhold the information."

MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. told the parents he would have a copy ready for the parents to inspect at 8:30 a.m. this morning.

Racers take drag boats out for a spin

By Gary Shanks

BIG SPRING — The normally placid Moss Lake in Big Spring rumbled with the sound of high-powered engines as drag boat racers from across the Southwest competed this past weekend in The Duel in the Desert.

This was the first such event at the lake in three years, according to promoter Jimmy Johnson of Big Spring. A different promoter in the area organized three previous races at the lake, beginning in 1991.

The race was sponsored by the West Texas Drag Boaters Association and sanctioned by the Southern Drag Boat Association.

About 100 speed boaters raced during the two-day event. Boat types varied, with those in the Lake Racer classes running hot rod ski boats for top quarter-mile speeds of 60-80 mph, Johnson explained.

The fastest boats at the races were in the Top Alcohol class, with the winner of this category, Steve Streeter of Parker Colorado, run-

Dole proposes $548 billion tax cut as part of economic plan

CHICAGO (AP) — Making a bold bid to capture a skeptical public's attention, Bob Dole proposed a $548 billion tax cut and asserted Monday he could balance the budget at the same time and "finish the job Ronald Reagan started."

Laying out the details of his campaign centerpiece, Dole proposed cutting the income tax rate 15 percent across-the-board, halving the capital-gains tax rate and giving lower and middle-income families a $500-per-child tax credit. He also vowed to "end the IRS as we know it" as part of his long range plan for a "simpler, flatter and fairer" tax system.

Dole unveils the centerpiece of his campaign in Chicago, Monday.

"As of this moment, Bill Clinton and his party are the defenders of the status quo," declared the Republican presidential candidate. "We are the party of change."

President Clinton countered that Dole's proposal would "balloon the deficit, raise interest rates and weaken the economy."

"It will hurt the American people ... I am unalterably opposed to going back to the mistake we made before and having big tax cuts that are not paid for," Clinton said, referring to the deficit-deepening 1980s.

The Clinton campaign immediately launched TV ads throughout much of the nation attacking Dole's plan: "America's economy is coming back. Now Bob Dole is endangering it all with a risky last-minute scheme..."

The launching of the economic package came at a critical time for Dole, who trails Clinton by as much as 20 percent in some national polls. He was close to naming a running mate and was preparing to be formally nominated at next week's Republican National Convention in San Diego.

For Dole, who has a history of preferring deficit reduction to huge tax cuts,

Fragments of bomb found in Jewell's apartment are souvenirs, lawyer says

ATLANTA (AP) — Fragments of the Centennial Olympic Park bomb were found in the apartment of the hero guard-turned-suspect, but they were given to him as a souvenir by police, his lawyer said Monday.

The scraps were found by investigators in the home of Richard Jewell, hailed as the man who spotted the pipe bomb in a knapsack shortly before it exploded and scattered shrapnel and debris into a concert audience early July 27. One woman was killed and 111 people injured.

"He had three pieces of metal fragments and a piece of wood and they supposedly had something to do with the explosion," one of his lawyers, G. Watson Bryant, told The Associated Press. "I guess if your in law enforcement, maybe you would keep such things as souvenirs."

He said the items were seized by federal investigators in a search Wednesday.

With the Olympic flame snuffed out and much of the park closed, sightseers have turned Jewell's apartment into a new attraction.

Several carloads of tourists found their way Monday to the apartment complex where the suspect in the Olympic park bombing remained out of sight and the FBI and media maintained round-the-clock scrutiny.

Some passed by for a quick peek and waved at the dwindling battery of television crews camped outside. One man stopped his car in the middle of a road and

Fear, frustration drives South African neighborhoods to vigilante violence

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — It would have been no surprise had Rashaad Staggie died his fiery death at the hands of rivals eager to snatch control of the drug empire he built with a mixture of cunning and brutality.

Instead, he was executed by the men of a working-class neighborhood driven to vigilante violence by frustration and fear.

Rashaad was buried Monday, a day after he was shot repeatedly and set on fire by a Molotov cocktail. Politicians, youth workers and even civil rights lawyers expressed sympathy for his killers.

"They see how our youth is undermined by drugs and they experience the totally unacceptable actions of the ... gangs on a daily basis," said Western Cape provincial premier Hernus Kriel.

Kriel urged the national government to send more police to the Cape Town area so that ordinary citizens would not feel compelled to take the law into their own hands.

Under apartheid, when black South Africans had no reason to believe the white-led police force and judicial system would protect their communities, it was not uncommon for "people's courts" to sentence alleged rapists, robbers or political traitors to beatings or death.

Since white minority rule ended in 1994, new black leaders have faced spiraling crime. Police are understaffed, under-equipped and, after years of operating as enforcers rather than investigators, seemingly no match for the robbers and murderers.

Staggie was killed allegedly by members of People Against Gangsterism and Drugs, or Pagad, a group linked to the Gatesville mosque, one of the most conservative mosques in Cape Town.

Pagad had held similar demonstrations in recent weeks, arriving at the homes of suspected drug dealers and shouting, "Kill the merchant!" Despite their violent words, their intention seemed to have been just to intimidate criminals.

About 200 members of the group were protesting Sunday outside a house Staggie is believed to own when shots were fired from the house.

Police rushed to the scene, but said they did not have enough officers to clear away the angry crowd.

'That the frustrations of these communities have boiled over into violence is not unexpected, in view of the commonly held perception that gangsters operate with impunity.'

— Lawyers for Human Rights said in a statement

When Staggie drove up in his sporty white truck, masked members of Pagad shot him in the head, and he fell from the vehicle. Someone threw a gasoline bomb and Staggie burst into flames. Still burning, he leapt up and ran a few feet before collapsing in the street.

Rescue workers doused the flames with a fire extinguisher, but more shots were fired into his body at close range by members of the crowd.

The attackers and their supporters left Staggie's body on the street and drove off to their mosque for a prayer service.

"What has happened tonight shows what happens when you put your trust in Allah," a masked speaker told worshipers. "Yes, we can clean our society and rid our society of scum."

Pagad vowed Sunday night to continue its anti-gang campaign, and police said they feared more clashes between the vigilantes and the gangs.

"We are expecting a lot of repercussions ... we are preparing for more bloodshed," said police spokesman John Sterrenberg.

Most South Africans in Cape Town trace their ancestry to Muslim and Malaysian slaves who were brought to the country in the 19th century. The majority of Cape Town residents of mixed race are Muslim, and Islam in South Africa contains a strong conservative element that believes in tough punishment.

Before the killing, a Pagad member had told The Sunday Independent newspaper he did not think of himself as a vigilante.

"We are simply a community driven by a shared concern, by the drugs and the gangs that rule our streets," Farouk Jaffer said.

In Cape Town's impoverished neighborhoods, criminals are divided up into scores of gangs that deal in drugs, prostitution and stolen goods. Residents complain that when police do manage to catch gang members, they are granted bail and back on the streets within days.

"That the frustrations of these communities have boiled over into violence is not unexpected, in view of the commonly held perception that gangsters operate with impunity," Lawyers for Human Rights, an independent civil rights group, said in a statement Monday.

"I think that people were basically frustrated because the criminal justice system takes so long to take its course," added Norman Jenkes, a social worker who specializes in gangs and counseled Rashaad Staggie and his twin brother, Rashied, when they were in jail several years ago.

Staggie had been arrested repeatedly on drug and weapons charges, but he was never held for long — often because investigators could never find anyone willing to testify against him.

The Staggie brothers built up their gang — known as the Hard Living Kids — into an estimated 3,000 members, second only to the Ugly Americans, the most powerful of the Cape Town criminal gangs with about 10,000 members.

The brothers bolstered the gang's membership both by intimidating and currying favor with the local community — giving money to children and paying the rent of families about to be evicted from their homes.

At his brother's funeral Monday, Rashied Staggie was defiant. Leaping onto a van to address the crowd of about 700 gang members and supporters, he said: "I dare the Muslims that killed my brother to come out and kill me, because I will kill them."

WEATHER WATCH

20 percent chance of showers

Staff Report

The forecast for today calls for partly cloudy skies and a 20 percent chance of showers, a high in the mid-90s and south winds at 10-20 mph, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight should be partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of showers or thundershowers and a low between 70-75, according to NWS.

Wednesday should be partly cloudy with a 20-percent chance of showers or thundershowers and a high in the mid-90s.

After an overnight low of 73, Monday's high reached 92, compared to the record high for that date of 103, set in 1964. The record low was 61, set in 1978.

STATE

Scattered showers and isolated thunderstorms provided some relief to hot temperatures in West Texas on Monday. Some showers also fell along the upper coast, but otherwise, the state was precipitation-free.

Temperatures at 9 p.m. ranged from 66 at Marfa to 91 at El Paso. The maximums for Monday in the region ranged from 84 at Alpine and Marfa to 100 at San Angelo.

The National Weather Service said scattered showers and thunderstorms are possible over much of West Texas through Wednesday.

Lows tonight will be in the 60s and 70s, with highs the next two days ranging from the upper 80s in the mountains to near 108 in the Big Bend.

Several cities reported temperatures above 100 on Monday. The state's high was 106 at Cotulla and Laredo.

Dalhart, in the northwest corner of the Panhandle, had the day's low of 61.

The weather service said there is a slight chance of mainly afernoon showers today over the coastal sections of Southeast Texas.

Highs today will rise to near 90 near the beaches and into the middle to upper 90s over inland areas. In the western portions of South Texas, highs should be from 101 to 107.

Skies were clear and temperatures were hot in North Texas on Monday. At 4 p.m. Monday, readings were about the normal high for the date, 98 degrees. Heat indices, which takes humidity into consideration, were above 100 throughout North Texas, led by a steamy 109 at Wichita Falls.

Temperatures ranged in late afternoon from 91 at Paris to 103 at Wichita Falls.

The weather service said today should be mostly sunny and continued hot for North Texas, with highs from 97 to 104. Readings should drop to the middle and upper 70s tonight.

NATION

Severe storms uprooted trees across Nebraska Monday and unleashed torrential rains that closed a highway. In the Southwest, temperatures topped 90, and muggy temperatures settled in across the Northeast.

The morning temperature in Elko, Nev., dropped to 37 degrees, breaking the old record of 38 — set in 1956.

In Nebraska, seven inches of rain soaked Wisner, forcing U.S. Highway 275 to close, and two hog barns were destroyed by high winds near Stanton. Wind gusts ranged from 60 mph across northern Kansas to 90 mph at Webster Dam.

Flood warnings were issued from near Omaha, Neb., to cities and towns east of Kansas City, Mo., along the Missouri River. The river could crest at five to seven feet above flood stage later this week, causing extensive lowland flooding along its banks.

A line of showers and some strong thunderstorms stretched from western Lake Superior and Wisconsin to southwestern Oklahoma.

A warm, humid air mass moved over New York and should remain stagnant for several days. Afternoon thunderstorms were developing across the Southeast.

There were scattered showers across southern Arizona and New Mexico and temperatures soared above 90 in Nevada. It was 76 and fair in Southern California. Parts of Washington state were starting to see some rain.

The nation's hot spot by mid-afternoon was China Lake, Calif., at 98 degrees. The low temperature was 32 in Big Piney, Wyo.

BOATS: Drag racers compete on lake

ning 202.590 mph as his boat, Untouchable, flashed by the finish buoy.

Gusts of south wind Sunday held Streeter back somewhat, with winds and choppy water causing some instability in his boat. "Especially when you get up around 200 mph, it gets a little shaky," Streeter said.

Even with a $12,000 Keith Black racing motor, putting out an estimated 2,500 horsepower, Streeter said he is rarely afraid when racing.

A Coahoma man, Travis Reid, won the Pro Limited Jet category, overcoming quite a bit of fear in the process.

In the early 1990s, Reid's boat went out of control at the end of the strip at Moss Lake, wiping out and flinging Reid's body against the finish buoy's tower. He broke several ribs and punctured a lung, according to his wife, Janie Reid.

After a few years off to build a new boat, however, Reid is racing again and winning.

One racer who went home early Sunday was Comp ET racer Lisa Winders, 28.

With her 97-mph boat "Restless Heart," Ms. Winders is normally a serious contender in the Comp ET class.

A medical assistant in her home town of Socorro, N.M., Ms. Winders has been racing drag boats for three years now. With her husband Mike Winders as mechanic for her 500 cubic-inch motor and boat, Ms. Winders is the top points holder in New Mexico's women's division.

A loss in the finals early Sunday, however, sent Ms. Winders, her husband and daughter, Nicole, heading back — winless — to New Mexico by late afternoon. Neither of the Winders were despondent about the outcome, however.

"A bad weekend drag boat racing is better than a good weekend of work," Winders joked.

Although the boats are expensive, drag boat racing is just a hobby for all of the racers, many of whom follow a circuit of sanctioned races across the southern United States.

"It's a hobby," Streeter said, although he and the boat's mechanical crew, Barry Lewis, Roger Barbich and Bob Buck, had just finished winning races in Fort Worth, Waco and Austin. All three men work for the same construction company in Colorado.

"Winning certainly helps with the travel expenses ... but we certainly don't do it to make a living at it," Streeter said.

The Duel in the Desert will be back again next year, according to promoters in Big Spring and Coahoma.

Hosting an event that draws thousands of spectators and participants is a daunting task, Ms. Reid explained, but much has been learned and this knowledge will be applied to next year's races, she said.

The gawkers caught no sight of Jewell, who has remained inside since meeting Sunday with new attorney Jack Martin.

Martin told The Atlanta Journal-Constitution that he hoped the case would be "based on facts, not trendy theories or speculation."

"My client says he's innocent. I presume he's innocent, as I hope everyone else does. That's what we believe in America," Martin said. He did not return phone calls Monday from the AP.

Jewell's heroic image crumbled when federal authorities began investigating him, apparently believing the ex-deputy sheriff fit a common profile of a "lone bomber" — a former cop, military man or aspiring police officer who seeks to become a hero.

FBI spokesman Jay Spadafore declined to comment Monday on the investigation. He suggested that Jewell, working at the Olympics as a privately hired security guard, shouldn't expect the agency to publicly vindicate him if it decides not to charge him.

"We don't announce that people are cleared. The FBI just doesn't do that," Spadafore said.

MISD: Board trustees consider conducting survey

(From 1A)

Some opponents said $110 million was too high, the bond payoff scheduled over too many years and that a new high school added late in the process wasn't well thought out.

Trustees said they have heard various opinions from the public on why the bond didn't fly.

Baressi suggested a survey, "a scientifically valid sample" would assist the district in learning why the bond failed. "I don't know that we had a real cross-section of the committee (that studied the needs and made a recommendation on the June 1 bond election)," he said.

Dallas accountant Mel Schonhorst of First Southwest Company, said the next bond program "must be determined based on community priorities."

He said news articles and MISD publications failed to educate Midlanders on why the bond was needed. "Most election information focused on what was needed and how much it would cost. Efforts should be taken to inform active voters regarding why each major project is needed," Schonhorst said.

Board President Robin Hightower said the city of Midland had a survey conducted to find out the community misconceptions concerning building a new air terminal.

"Yes, but people donated money for that survey," trustee Jackie Hamilton said, noting taxpayer money wasn't used.

Baressi said a survey would be valuable "... If it's what it takes for community support."

"But we just spent a lot of money and had the bond fail. This is a lot of money," Ms. Hamilton said.

Trustee Dianne Anderson agreed. "We had a group study this and give us recommendations, and what did we do? We didn't listen ... We have to stay focused on the information people give us and not be lured by logical appeals of people saying: 'We need this. Add that.' "

Schonhorst said a survey would indicate that "there are some projects universally agreed on as needed and some the community feels are unessential."

He said the public needs to be educated on the needs "project by project. You have to address concerns one at a time. If something gets very little support, don't even put it on the ballot."

A bond research proposal suggests four focus groups of voters (who voted in the last election) be formed to obtain information and public opinion, and to conduct the survey.

The focus groups would include a group of taxpayers that pays $10,000 or more a year to MISD, a group of MISD parents, a group of voters that does not have any relatives enrolled or employed by MISD, a group of MISD employees and a group with a Spanish-speaking moderator. The focus groups would develop a telephone survey for 100-150 randomly selected residents (who voted in the last election).

School district needs, broken down, include $53 million: to renovate 13 elementary schools, to enclose walkways at 16 elementary schools, to replace chillers, and to construct two new elementary schools; almost $8 million to improve junior high schools; about $5 million for freshman high school improvements; $38 million for high school improvements ($28 million for a new Midland High School, which has no room to expand on its present location); and almost $6 million for technology cabling.

It was suggested a bond election be called in December, February 1997 or March 1997.

Also, as an action item, the board appointed four people to various positions in the school district. Appointed were Debbie Oliver, language chairman for Lee High School; William Hernandez, administrative intern for Midland High School; Linda Bustilloz, team leader for Goddard Junior High School; and Randy Baiza, intern for Long Elementary School.

COPIES: School district to release Celebrations curriculum curriculum to Baressi Monday. "As you know, the Texas attorney general has rendered an opinion stating that this information should be provided to my clients ... I demand that you immediately turn over this material and cease your secretive flounderings. I consider that this failure on your part to provide this material as a jaded attempt to block public information in violation of the spirit if not the letter of the open government laws," the demand read.

Some teachers and educators across the country have praised the curriculum for exploring different cultures and religions through the theme of celebrations. Some parents, however, have said they found the lessons offensive and unnecessary.

School administrators said handing over the incomplete fifth- and sixth-grade curriculum was added to Monday's agenda as an item to be discussed in closed session.

However, the parents objected to that. Their attorney's demand said, "Government should be conducted in the open, especially when it pertains to our children."

At the beginning of Monday's 5 p.m. meeting, Baressi suggested the item be addressed publicly. He said, in question was whether or not the district should copyright the material. MISD Attorney Theodore "Ted" Kerr said the curriculum did not fall under the Open Records Act since it was incomplete, and "a work in progress."

"If we don't copyright it, we could forego revenue at a later date," Baressi said. "It would protect the materials from being reproduced without our permission."

Trustees voted 4-2 in favor of copyrighting the fifth- and sixth-grade curriculum. Jackie Hamilton and Dianne Anderson were opposed, and Michael Dobey was absent during the vote.

Ms. Hamilton stated publicly she expected an apology from Dragisic for calling board trustees "a bunch of hypocrites" in a news article. Dragisic said he called trustees hypocrites for telling the parents that they waited too late to protest the "Celebrations" kindergarten through fourth-grade curricula, then wouldn't release the fifth- and sixth-grade lessons for parents to study in advance of a board vote.

"I was insulted, being called a hypocrite," Ms. Hamilton said, noting she expected a telephone apology.

Dragisic said, "In response to being insulted for being called hypocrites, what did the board do from our first request May 6 to today to get the curriculum to the Dragisics and the Harrises?" he asked. "Actions speak louder than words."

PLAN: Dole vows 'to finish job' Reagan started proposing such a large tax cut was a difficult one.

Dole provided only vague details on how he would pay for the six-year plan — suggesting that 27 percent of it, or $147 billion — would come from "income growth effect."

Such supply-side economics — suggesting tax cuts can partly pay for themselves — have been disdained by many economists and in the past by Dole himself.

"I think the supply-siders have taken over the Dole campaign," said Sung Won Sohn, chief economist at Norwest Corp. in Minneapolis. "This certainly sounds like the Reagan program all over again."

Anticipating such criticism, Dole said, "Deficit reduction is in my blood and a balanced budget will be my legacy to America."

"I want to return to tax cuts — this time balancing the budget with a Republican Congress and finish the job Ronald Reagan started so brilliantly, but could not complete because the Democrats refused as usual to reduce spending," Dole added.

Financial markets took little notice of Dole's program on Monday and some analysts said the plan was more credible than Reagan's 1980 program, which coupled a huge tax cut with a huge defense buildup and the promise of a balanced budget by 1984. The Reagan tax package also resulted in the longest peacetime economic expansion in U.S. history.

"Dole's plan as it is written is highly optimistic, but not silly," said David Wyss, an economist at DRI-McGraw Hill Inc. "Economically, there is no reason you couldn't do it."

Major elements of Dole's plan include:

■ A 15-percent reduction in all personal income tax rates, to be phased in over three years in 5-percent installments.

■ Reducing the capital gains tax rate from 28 percent to 14 percent.

■ A tax credit for families of up to $500 a child, which also could be invested in tax-free education accounts for college expenses.

■ An expansion of Individual Retirement Accounts and repealing tax increases of 1993 on Social Security benefits of wealthier Americans.

■ Simplification of the tax code so that up to 40 million Americans would not have to file returns and a one-year tax-amnesty program during which individuals could pay back taxes without penalties.

"Families are being squeezed by rising taxes," he said.

In a blistering attack on the Internal Revenue Service, Dole called his economic plan "the opening salvo to repeal the current tax code and to end the IRS as we know it."

"We're going to downsize the IRS and upsize the amount of money Americans can keep in their pockets," Dole vowed. "... In short, my administration will free the American people from tax tyranny."

Defeated GOP rival Steve Forbes, who has become a Dole adviser, cautioned that Dole must stick to his plan. "He has to keep hitting it each and every day. If he is seen as backing off of it, then his campaign is over. And he knows it."

Dole announced his plan as Americans appear to be growing more skeptical of politicians and their election-year promises. A Wall Street Journal-NBC News poll last week found that seven in 10 Americans said they would regard a 15 percent tax cut as a campaign gimmick.

Dole's advisers said part of the tax cuts would be paid for with by a 10 percent government-wide reduction in administrative expenses in non-defense programs, through broadcast spectrum sales by the Federal Communications Commission, elimination of the Energy and Commerce Departments and other government efficiencies.

But a large portion — roughly 27 percent or $145 billion — would come from the assumption that the tax cuts would stimulate economic growth and help pay for themselves. The plan envisions growth of 3.5 percent a year, well above the average 2 percent average so far this decade.

Dole closely stuck to his carefully worded text.

At one point, he compared Clinton's economic policies to the alien invaders from outer space in the movie "Independence Day."

"For too long now, Bill Clinton's liberal policies have hovered like an alien ship over the American economy, blowing away growth and opportunity," he said. "Well, in 1992 he arrived. In 1993, he attacked. In 1996, America strikes back."

Many Americans say deficit reduction more important than tax cuts

NEW YORK (AP) — Polls conducted before Bob Dole proposed a 15 percent across-the-board reduction in federal income taxes found skepticism about such a plan:

■ By 58-36, Americans say balancing the federal budget is more important than cutting federal taxes, according to an ABC-Washington Post poll released Monday. By 53-42, respondents opposed "a tax cut for middle-income Americans if it meant it would be harder to balance the federal budget." But by 59-36, they favored a tax cut even if some federal programs might have to be cut.

This poll also found President Clinton is trusted more to help the middle class and handle the economy, but pluralities trust Bob Dole more to reduce the deficit and cut taxes. (Telephone survey Thursday through Sunday of 1,408 adults; sampling error margin plus or minus 3 points.)

■ Fifty-two percent of Americans interviewed this weekend said the government cannot afford to give people tax cuts right now, 40 percent said it could and the rest didn't know or wouldn't answer, according to a CBS-New York Times poll released Monday. Republicans were just as skeptical, and Democrats more so; self-described independents were split.

This poll also found 47 percent saying that cutting everyone's federal income tax by 15 percent is "the wrong thing for the country" and 36 percent calling it the right thing. When those who favored the tax cut then were asked what they would think if it increased the federal deficit, half said it would be wrong. (Telephone survey of 827 adults conducted Saturday and Sunday; sampling error plus or minus 3 points.)

■ Seventy-one percent of 1,637 registered voters in an NBC-Wall Street Journal poll in late June said that if Dole proposed cutting federal income taxes 15 percent across the board, they would view it as a gimmick that wouldn't make them more likely to vote for him. Nineteen percent said it would be a commitment they agree with and would make them more likely to vote for Dole.

Israel ready to start negotiations, make peace with Syria, Netanyahu says

■ Israeli prime minister travels to Jordan to dispel Arab concerns that he is trying to avoid negotiating on central issues such as Golan.

Associated Press

AMMAN, Jordan — In an unexpected overture toward peace with Syria, Israel's prime minister said Monday he is prepared to enter into negotiations on "all outstanding matters" between the two countries.

Benjamin Netanyahu even suggested possible flexibility on the Golan Heights, which Israel captured from Syria in 1967 and Netanyahu has repeatedly vowed to keep.

"We believe if there is good will on the side of Syria we can resume negotiations, and are prepared to do so in the near future," he said.

Until now, Netanyahu had indicated any talks with Syria would focus on a limited agreement to end hostilities in Lebanon, which is dominated by Syria except for an Israeli-controlled strip in the south. He has repeatedly ruled out returning the Golan to Syria, a central Syrian demand.

Netanyahu traveled to Jordan Monday — his first visit since becoming prime minister — to dispel Arab concerns that he was trying to avoid negotiating on central issues such as the Golan.

"We are not limiting this to any one subject," he stressed at a news conference in Amman after meeting with Jordan's King Hussein.

"Our purpose is to achieve a formal peace with Syria. It is not to merely engage in process for process' sake."

He did say, however, that a "good starting point" for resuming talks between the two countries would be resolving the conflict in Lebanon.

Peace with Syria, the most reluctant of Israel's neighbors to reach an agreement with the Jewish state, would be a major step toward ending decades of hostilities between Israel and the Arab world. Talks between the two countries have been frozen since February.

Netanyahu told reporters he had sent a concrete proposal to the Syrians via the United States, but did not elaborate.

In the past, Syria has rejected Israeli proposals to reach a settlement on Lebanon before determining the fate of the Golan.

Netanyahu also said Israel was ready to resume negotiations with the Palestinians — stalled since his election — "in a couple of weeks." The talks are to include Israel's overdue withdrawal from Hebron, the last West Bank city occupied by Israeli troops.

Netanyahu said the resumption of talks was conditional on the Palestinians closing offices in Jerusalem that Israel says are illegal. He did not commit himself to pulling Israeli troops out of Hebron.

Speaking in the West Bank town of Ramallah, Palestinian Authority president Yasser Arafat said only that he hoped King Hussein was able to convince Netanyahu "to commit to what we agreed upon and to implement the agreement so we can move forward with the peace process."

Netanyahu flew to the hilly royal palace in downtown Amman Monday in a helicopter and met with Crown Prince Hassan, the king's younger brother, before entering talks with King Hussein. Later, he and his wife Sarah visited the ancient city of Petra.

King Hussein, who met with the Syrian president in Damascus on Saturday, has positioned himself as a prime mediator between Israel and Syria.

"I hope our efforts will enable us to speak more clearly and I hope we will see actions leading to the resolution of the Lebanese-Israeli problem," he said Monday.

The withdrawal of Israeli troops from southern Lebanon would be a "fulfillment of what our neighbors wish, and that is (for Israel) to withdraw from these territories as soon as possible," King Hussein said.

Netanyahu said violence had been escalating in southern Lebanon, where Israeli troops are fighting Iranian-backed Hezbollah guerrillas. Two Israeli soldiers were wounded early Monday when Hezbollah guerrillas shelled an Israeli outpost.

"We seek a resolution to this problem," Netanyahu said. "If this is agreed on by others, it could be a very good starting point to build a relationship of trust, a relationship of stability, and of confidence between Israel and Syria that will serve us well on other outstanding issues."

Netanyahu's comments were far more conciliatory than past speeches, in which he accused Syrian President Hafez Assad of supporting terrorism and using Hezbollah to put pressure on Israel.

Assad met Monday in Damascus with his Lebanese counterpart, Elias Hrawi. Assad's spokesman, Jubran Kourieh, said the five-hour session focused on the Middle East peace process and the "negative impact" of Israel's policy.

In other developments, Netanyahu said Monday he would ease the closure of the West Bank and Gaza Strip, permitting another 5,000 Palestinian workers to enter Israel, in addition to the 35,000 allowed in now.

Aidid's son tells supporters he will invite U.N. to return

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Now in control of his father's powerful faction and a large chunk of Somalia, Hussein Mohamed Aidid wants the same international aid his enemies are getting.

The late warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid accused the world community of supporting terrorism after the European Union gave $60 million in aid last month to areas controlled by his rivals.

On Monday, his son — a naturalized U.S. citizen and former Marine reservist — told a cheering crowd of 30,000 supporters that he would invite the United Nations back to rebuild the areas of Somalia under his control.

But given his father's reputation, the world body could well refuse.

The 31-year-old Aidid was named Sunday to replace his father, who died Thursday from gunshot wounds suffered in recent fighting over a south Mogadishu neighborhood.

The appointment dampened hopes the general's death would lead to reconciliation in Somalia. Prior to naming the younger Aidid, the faction formally rejected a proposal from rival leaders for negotiations between Somalia's 16 feuding factions.

One faction leader, Ali Madhi Mohamed, called Aidid's appointment a "lost opportunity" and said he was reconsidering a unilateral cease-fire he had declared Friday.

"We have put our forces on alert and supporters of the late Gen. Mohamed Farrah Aidid will bear the consequences of their actions," Ali Madhi, who controls north Mogadishu, said Monday in a radio interview.

The Horn of Africa nation of 8 million has been without effective central government since 1991, when it dissolved into a collection of fiefdoms after the overthrow of former dictator Mohamed Siad Barre. More than 350,000 Somalis have since died from starvation or in fighting.

Addressing the largest crowd assembled in Mogadishu since the outbreak of clan warfare, Aidid said Monday his self-styled government would improve security and "enlarge its territorial powers." He did not elaborate.

Speaking at a bombed-out soccer stadium in south Mogadishu, Aidid said he would welcome "anybody who is willing to help the Somali people ... without condition."

Hussein Aidid also said he planned no changes in "the political structure created by my father."

The two-year $60 million aid package the European Union granted to Somali regions controlled by Aidid's rivals were earmarked for areas "where peace and security prevail, and where there are responsible Somali authorities to ensure the necessary conditions" for delivering aid.

Areas under Aidid's control have been notorious for extortion and lack of security.

The fighting among the three main Somali factions for control of Mogadishu flared in March and has seriously impeded food distribution.

Japanese observe 51st anniversary of Hiroshima attack

HIROSHIMA, Japan (AP) — Tens of thousands of mourners bowed their heads in prayer and laid yellow-and-white wreaths today in a solemn ceremony marking the 51st anniversary of the world's first atomic attack.

At precisely 8:15 a.m., the moment the bomb exploded over Hiroshima on Aug. 6, 1945, a bronze bell tolled, echoing in the air.

The crowd packed into the city's Peace Park — built at what was the epicenter of the blast — observed a moment of silence, broken only by the buzzing of cicadas.

A flock of doves took flight, and a pair of schoolchildren, standing before a flame that burns in tribute to the bomb's 140,000 victims, said a plea for peace.

"No matter how much time passes, Hiroshima will never forget what happened," said Mayor Takashi Hiraoka.

This year's ceremony was shorter and more low-key than last year's 50th anniversary, which was preceded by months of debate inside and outside Japan about the country's wartime responsibility.

Many Japanese believe the atom bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki were unjustified, despite Japan's war of aggression. U.S. wartime leaders defended the bombings as the only alternative to a bloody land invasion of Japan.

War victims, including forced laborers and women conscripted into military brothels, have demanded compensation from the Japanese government. Tokyo has refused to make direct payments to victims, although a private government-backed fund has been set up for that purpose.

Debris of cockpit may give answer

While the recovery of wreckage and bodies from TWA Flight 800 has taken weeks, one has to be amazed by the expertise of the recovery workers.

Although the debris from the plane rests at 120 feet below the surface of the Atlantic Ocean, the investigators have continued to bring up parts of the aircraft and bodies in a grim retrieval process. They have worked in the dark, murky depths, doing a job no one could relish. And the results to this point have been outstanding.

Over the weekend, the prospects for determining what actually happened to the aircraft went up considerably after investigators found a major section of the cockpit, with the body of the pilot, Capt. Ralph G. Kevorkian, 58, of Garden Grove, Calif., still strapped in his seat.

Hopefully the recovery of the cockpit section will give the investigators vital clues as to what actually caused the disaster. Although speculation has centered on the possibility of a bomb in a forward cargo compartment or a missile fired at the aircraft from the ground, investigators have not ruled out the possibility that mechanical failure caused the explosion.

Americans are closely watching the recovery of the remains from TWA Flight 800 not only to see whether the airliner exploded as the result of a terroristic attack, but also to answer nagging questions about what happened to the aircraft. Millions of Americans fly daily and it's impossible to simply push aside fears that an air crash will occur or some other disaster. The fate of the TWA flight certainly didn't soothe those fears.

Finding out precisely what occurred will ease the concerns of many Americans.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The briefer the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis. Letters which are difficult to reduce in length will be returned to the writer to be edited before being re-submitted.
- We do not publish 'open' letters, copies of letters sent to others or multiple signatures.

There is. The fellow is a philodox, someone in love with his or her own opinions.

The world is teeming with people we can describe but don't know what to call. For example, did you know that a person who detests tobacco smoke is a misocapnist, that someone who sees an omen in every event is a pantomancer, that someone who claims to prevent or cure baldness is an alopecist, and that a person afraid of riding the subway is a bathysiderodromophobe? (That redoubtable word is formed from the Greek bathy, deep; sidero, iron; dromo, a course or track; and -phobe, one who fears.)

The English language abounds with useful terms for folks of every stripe. There's a word for a devotee of crossword puzzles (cruciverbalist), for a thief who preys on theatergoers (efter), and for someone who picks up stray balls during a tennis match (nacket). There's a word for a person who never laughs (agelast) and for a person who mocks God (theomicrist).

There's even a word for someone who imitates animals: theriomime. And would you believe that a crawk is a theriomime who does his thing on the radio?

Not surprisingly, there are at least five words for foolish, meddling gossips (quidnunc, numquid, polypragmon, yenta, from Yiddish, and badaud, from French) and no fewer than 10 words for what the politically correct might call "the calorically challenged": tenterbelly, gorbelly, gundygut, greedygut, gormandizer, swillbelly, bellygod, pangut(s), porknell, and, my personal favorite, fustilugs.

Our verbivoracious, omniloquent tongue has a term for almost every sort of person imaginable, including someone with a penchant for polysyllabic phrases like "our verbivoracious, omniloquent tongue."

Though I would prefer to be dubbed an aristophren, someone of superior intelligence, or a bel-esprit, a person of refined intellect and graceful wit, the proper term for me is lexiphanes (lek-SIF-uh-neez), a showoff with words. This lofty locution hails from the Greek lexis, speech, and phainein, to show, the source also of lexiphanicism, verbal ostentation.

Some of the most interesting, and most obscure, people terms have dialectal or colloquial roots. My favorite is stalko (from Anglo-Irish dialect), which the exquisitely genteel Webster's New International Dictionary, second edition, defines as "an impecunious idler posing as a gentleman."

A number of people terms come from professional or technical jargon, like that loudmouthed crawk (from 1930s radio slang) and timbromaniac, the original name for a stamp collector, which quickly got licked by philatelist. Another amusing word of this ilk is gork, medical slang for a person with unknown ailments, an acronymic appellation formed from "God only really knows."

As you might imagine, many people terms are simply nonce words or joculisms proffered by earlier generations of wits and witlings (people who think they're funny but aren't). In 1903, G.B. Shaw proposed hominist for someone who advocates equal rights for men; it was an unhappy bedfellow for feminist, which appeared about 1894. In his preface to "The Complete Sherlock Holmes" (1930), Christopher Morley minted infracaninophile for a champion of the underdog. Ten years later, H.L. Mencken — inspired by the zoological term ecdysis, the shedding of a layer of skin — invented ecdysiast, a euphemism for stripper. Mencken also came up with bibliobibuli for "people who read too much." I leave it to you to speculate on why the former word readily outstripped the latter.

Jack Hitt's entertaining collection of neologisms "In a Word" (Dell Laurel, 1992) contains a number of clever people terms: an eccedentesiast (coined by Florence King) is a person who fakes a smile; an autotonsorialist (coined by Christopher Corbett) is a person who looks as if he cuts his own hair; a monomath (coined by L.J. Davis) is someone who knows everything about one thing and nothing about anything else, and a fashimite (coined by Michael Lockwood) is a slave to fashion.

I could go on until the sun goes down, but I'm afraid my time is up. (Does that mean I'm a chronophobe, one who dreads the passing of time?) I shall leave you with a final word: ipsedixitist. Conceived circa 1832 by Jeremy Bentham from the Latin ipse dixit, "he himself said it," ipsedixitist means a person given to dogmatic assertions.

Now there's a locution any logogogue (language dictator) can love.

Many involved with Flight 800 are acting badly

I don't want to sound like a hard case, but politicians, the press and now even the survivors of people killed on TWA Flight 800 are acting badly.

Somebody ought to take Mayor Rudolph Giuliani, Gov. George Pataki, Sen. Alfonse D'Amato and that dorky congressman, Mike Forbes, out to the site, tie an anchor to their legs and drop them over the side.

These guys are worse than ambulance-chasing lawyers. They flock to the scene of the disaster solely to get their mugs on national television. Giuliani followed his usual practice of unjustly attacking someone else -- a TWA official, this time -- to make himself look good. Their shmoozing of the survivors, under the pretense of being there as comforters, is phony baloney.

Reese

Any political flack will tell you it is standard operating procedure to roust your pol out of bed and get his bum to the scene of any convenient nearby disaster so he can yak to the TV guys.

In fact, of course, these politicians were exploiting the tragedy and the grief in the same calloused way the press and the ambulance chasers do. The pols had no legitimate reason to be there. Their presence caused trouble to the people actually doing the work of rescue and recovery. And their big mouths have almost continuously spread misinformation.

As for the survivors, it's time to tell them to go home. There is no reason for them to stay there. Recovery operations in deep water takes days, at best. When and if their people's bodies are recovered and identified, they can be sent home for burial. Their people are dead. Holding press conferences and complaining unjustly about the hard work of recovery and investigation will not bring them back.

Giuliani, some character in the press and now some congressman all made the same stupid mistake in complaining that TWA did not release the names of those on board as fast as the politicians thought they should. Why, TWA agents had the boarding passes, didn't they?

Yes, and boarding passes do not tell you who was on the plane necessarily. Boarding passes tell you only who purchased the ticket that was used by the person who boarded the plane.

That's what took the TWA employees time -- verifying the identities of the people who were actually on the plane. And, of course, when a plane crashes, the airline cannot shut down. Those TWA employees also had to continue working on other flights taking off and landing.

Moreover, the so-called uncertainty the pols complained about was likewise a phony issue. I think most of the people who showed up at JFK airport darn well knew they had a relative or loved one on that flight. People who had intended to go but didn't would either have gone home or as soon as they heard about the crash, phoned their loved ones to tell them they were alive.

When someone you care about dies unexpectedly, you are naturally upset, but grief is no excuse for irrational behavior days after the event. The Navy, the Coast Guard, the National Transportation Safety Board, the police and fire department divers and the FBI are all working diligently and intelligently. They deserve no criticism. Nor does the airline. All of this criticism is based on ignorance or the attempt to hold people to a utopian standard.

And identifying bodies that may be burned or smashed up from a 13,000-foot fall is hardly a quick task. You can be sure the medical examiners have no desire to hang around a room full of smashed and burned corpses any longer than they have to.

The only people emerging from this tragedy with any dignity are the workers and the dead.

New film clearly shows Hollywood's mentality

In my limited experience with Hollywood types, I've come to the conclusion that their minds don't work the way the rest of ours do.

I'm not talking about all the sex and violence on the screen that former Senator Bob Dole has been carping about. In that regard, Hollywood people are normal, because most of us like sex and are fascinated by violence and they know it.

Royko

But recently a movie opened about a man who discovers that his apartment is infested with singing cockroaches.

As for the rest of the plot, I'm not sure, because I haven't seen it. But I've seen publicity snippets on TV, which show the little creatures singing, dancing and talking.

That's what I mean about Hollywood's strange thought processes.

Imagine, for a moment, that you no longer work in whatever your job is.

Instead, you are suddenly plopped down behind a big desk in Hollywood as the chief of a studio.

And a dealmaker comes in to make a pitch about a film.

"Got a script here I think you'll like. Could be big."

"Ah, yes, big. ... Always in the market for something big."

"Could even be a smasheroo."

"Ah, yes, big and a smasheroo. Sounding great. Tell me more."

"It's a bit different."

"Good. A big smasheroo and different, too. What's it about?"

"Uh, singing cockroaches."

"Say, what?"

"Cockroaches that sing. And they dance and talk, too."

"You said cockroaches."

"Right. Real live ones, not animated. We do the singing and talking with special effects, of course."

"Cockroaches. Singing live cockroaches? That's what you said?"

"Right. So, what do you think."

I suspect that most people would do something like this. You would pick up your phone and call studio security and say: "Please send up a couple of guards to take an individual from my office and escort him out the gates and make sure he never gets in here again."

But obviously that isn't what happened. Someone at or near the top of a studio liked the idea of a movie about singing cockroaches.

So the movie was made, at the usual cost of millions and millions, with the labors of the highly skilled technicians who can put incredible sights and sounds up on the screen.

It recently opened at theaters all over the country and almost instantly became one of the biggest flops of the summer movie season.

And I imagine that at the studio, the people who put the project together are now asking why something into which they put so much money and effort and faith is being rejected by American moviegoers.

They didn't do any market research. All they would have had to do was stand at any corner and ask people who walk by:

"Excuse me, I'm from Hollywood. I'd like to ask you some questions about cockroaches."

"Huh? You got a problem with cockroaches, tell your landlord. And keep your kitchen clean. It's usually slobs who get cockroaches because they leave leftovers and dirty dishes and grease all over the place."

"No, I don't have a problem. You see, we are thinking of making a movie about cockroaches."

"Oh, one of them creepy, scary movies, huh? About giant cockroaches that try to take over the Earth. I like movies like that, as long as at the end we blow them up with lasers or nukes."

"No, this would be a movie about cockroaches that sing and dance and are, in their own way, lovable. There will even be a wonderful scene of them singing in a dirty toilet bowl."

"Excuse me, but I got a weak stomach. G'bye."

If they stopped a thousand people on the streets of any American city, I doubt if they would have found even one cockroach enthusiast. ———

Clinton orders sanctions against foreign companies investing inside Lybia, Iran

WASHINGTON (AP) — Aggravating tensions with allies, President Clinton ordered sanctions Monday against foreign companies that invest in Iran and Libya. "You simply can't do business with people by day who are killing your people by night," the president declared.

Germany and France denounced the move as a barrier to international trade. The 15-nation European Union also protested. And Iran predicted the new law was "doomed to failure" because of the allies' objections.

The United States already was under fire from Canada, Mexico and other allies for a measure Clinton signed that penalizes foreign businesses that invest in property the Cuban government confiscated from current American citizens.

Clinton said he expected the allies would eventually come around to his way of thinking. But he also said, "Where we don't agree, the United States cannot and will not refuse to do what we believe is right."

With Americans still awaiting answers to the TWA disaster and the Olympics bombing, Clinton spoke out against terrorism in an Oval Office bill-signing ceremony and in a speech at George Washington University.

"Terrorism is the enemy of our generation and we must prevail," the president said. He singled out Iran and Libya as "two of the most dangerous supporters of terrorism in the world."

Clinton was joined at the White House by relatives of victims of the 1988 bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland. Also present were two of the Americans who had been held hostage at the American Embassy in Iran at the end of the Carter administration.

Clinton said the sanctions bill would heighten pressure on Libya to extradite two suspects in the Pan Am explosion.

And Victoria Cummock, president of Families of Pan Am 103, responded, "Today marks an important day in America's war against countries that use terrorism as an instrument of national policy against American citizens and the free world."

The new law, which cleared Congress on July 23, requires the president to penalize foreign firms that invest $40 million or more annually in the energy sectors of Iran and Libya. "The act will help to deny them the money they need to finance international terrorism or to acquire weapons of mass destruction," Clinton said.

However, the law would not cover existing contracts; instead, it affects only future investments, the administration said.

That seemingly would prevent immediate sanctions involving a French company, Total SA, which has been active in both Iran and Libya. Total angered U.S. officials by taking over development of two giant offshore oil and gas fields in Iran after Washington barred Conoco and other American companies from the project.

Total also has been among foreign oil companies trying to buy the assets of U.S. producers in Libya. White House deputy press secretary David Johnson said, "It stops them in their tracks."

Sanctions available under the law include denying Export-Import Bank loans, denying export licenses, barring U.S. banks from making loans of more than $10 million a year to sanctioned parties, barring sanctioned financial institutions from being primary dealers of U.S. government bonds or serving as repositories of U.S. government funds, banning U.S. government procurement of goods and services from sanctioned entities and imposing import barriers.

The sanctions measure was separate from legislation that stalled in Congress last week to tag explosives with chemical markers and to expand wiretap authority in suspected terrorist cases.

"I am disappointed and more importantly the American people are disappointed that that job was not done," Clinton said.

He said he will press Congress for the legislation after its August recess. Further, he said he will submit a bill to crack down on money laundering and strengthen extradition powers and border controls "to keep more criminals and terrorists out of America."

Congressional investigators release report on travel-office firings scandal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former White House chief of staff Mack McLarty told Congress he "felt a pressure" from Hillary Rodham Clinton in May 1993 to take action against the White House travel office. Three days later, the entire staff was fired.

And Hollywood producer Harry Thomason, who has emerged as a central figure in the controversial firings, told the same House investigators the first lady had said to him the workers "ought to be gotten out."

The two statements, both from close friends of the first family, were contained in depositions and documents released Monday by a Republican-led House investigative committee. The material portrays Mrs. Clinton as a prime instigator in the episode.

The firings, which presidential aides later acknowledged were improper, have become a major political embarrassment for the Clinton White House and the subject of a special prosecutor's investigation.

The possibility that the first lady played a role in the botched firings first emerged in January when a three-year-old draft memo by ex-White House administration chief David Watkins was belatedly discovered and turned over to investigators.

That memo said there would be "hell to pay" if Watkins did not fire the travel office workers "in conformity with the first lady's wishes."

Mrs. Clinton has said publicly — and has sworn in legal documents — that she expressed concerns about reports of financial mismanagement in the travel office but never pressured anyone to take action or suggested the workers be fired.

However, Thomason and McLarty both recounted in their depositions two conversation each had with Mrs. Clinton in the days before the firings. Both said their first conversations were brief, and the second more detailed.

"I think that when the first lady — the second conversation where it was more detailed — she said they ought to be gotten out, but what would we do about trips?" Thomason was quoted as saying.

McLarty said he felt pressure to take action after Mrs. Clinton spoke to him prior to a dinner in the White House residence on May 16, 1993, just three days before the firings.

"I believe the first lady had a serious concern about this matter, and I felt a pressure from her to take it seriously and to act upon it if necessary," McLarty was quoted as saying.

McLarty, a boyhood friend of the president, said three days before the dinner encounter, Mrs. Clinton requested a meeting with him to discuss the travel office for the first time. "She came to my office and raised this matter with me. And that was — I heard about it at that point," he said.

Rep. William Clinger, R-Pa., chairman of the House committee investigating the firings, accused the White House on Monday of protecting Mrs. Clinton by withholding documents, refusing to answer questions and providing witnesses with "hazy memories."

He called it a "most striking patterns of obfuscation and obstruction." Clinger also said he was giving the White House until mid-August to turn over documents or face a contempt of Congress vote.

Jury decides man should die for Klaas murder; verdict moves to appeal

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — The man who kidnapped and murdered 12-year-old Polly Klaas nearly three years ago should be executed, a jury decided Monday, ignoring defense pleas to show mercy for his troubled childhood.

Polly's father, Marc Klaas, clenched his fist in victory and said an exultant "Yes!" as the sentence was read. Other spectators smiled broadly, and a few clapped in approval.

Richard Allen Davis, in a black shirt, smirked as the jury was polled to confirm the sentence. He spoke quietly to his attorney afterwards and did not repeat the obscene gesture he made in ew of television cameras when he was convicted.

Davis, 42, was convicted June 18 of murdering Polly after kidnapping her from a slumber party in her bedroom on Oct. 1, 1993. Jurors agreed that the crime involved "special circumstances" of robbery, kidnapping, burglary and attempted lewd act on a child.

That meant Davis faced only two possible penalties: death or life without possibility of parole. The six-man, six-woman panel took about 21 hours in the jury room to decide.

"We sentenced a man to death," jury foreman Brian Bianco said. "I can't feel good about it. But on the other hand, I feel it was the right decision, so I don't feel bad about it."

Bianco said the jurors took their time so that each could decide without feeling pressured. He said seven were for death, two for life and three undecided in their first vote, and that several more were held until the final one Monday.

As for Davis' much-publicized obscene gesture after being found guilty, Bianco said only some jurors were aware of it and that it had no impact on the deliberations.

Their verdict will now be reviewed by Santa Clara County Superior Court Judge Thomas Hastings, who has the authority to change a sentence of death to life without parole. He scheduled Davis' formal sentencing for Sept. 26.

An appeal is automatic in death penalty cases in California and prosecutors said the process is likely to take several years.

Both sides had invoked Polly's name during closing arguments in the penalty phase of the trial.

The defense also said Davis was so damaged by his environment he could not help but make damaged choices in life. They said his mother was distant, once held his hand over a flame and all but abandoned him after a bitter divorce from his father. They also portrayed his father, now dead, as neglectful and abusive, once punching the boy's jaw so hard he broke or dislocated it.

Investigators search tangled remains of TWA cockpit

EAST MORICHES, N.Y. (AP) — Investigators looking for clues to the TWA Flight 800 disaster worked to untangle a ton of twisted metal, gauges and spaghetti-like wires Monday that were once part of the plane's cockpit.

Nineteen days after the crash, the examination of the demolished cockpit held out the prospect of advancing an investigation that so far has been unable to explain why the jet blew up in flight, killing all 230 aboard.

The mass of electronics below the cockpit looks like "the most compressed mumble-jumble of stuff that I've ever seen," said James Kallstrom, who is heading the FBI investigation.

"This is like a big ball of string," Kallstrom said. "There's really no way of making any sense out of it until you take it all apart."

Investigators from the FBI, the National Transportation Safety Board, TWA and Boeing examined the wreckage at a hangar on Long Island where pieces of the plane are being collected.

Investigators have made clear that unraveling the mystery will be a long and difficult task. While they suspect a bomb destroyed the plane, they have not ruled out a catastrophic mechanical failure or the possibility that the jumbo jet was hit by a missile.

No physical evidence — such as bomb residue on the wreckage — has been found to confirm suspicions of sabotage.

Investigators also said that the flight data recorder and the cockpit voice recorder failed to provide any information that would sway the investigation, or even explain what caused the split-second sound recorded in the cockpit just before the plane exploded.

"I'm afraid for the moment, at least, we're kind of at the end" with the tapes, said NTSB vice chairman Robert Francis.

Searchers said one more body had been pulled to the surface Monday, raising the number of victims recovered to 195 and leaving 35 missing.

At the crash site 10 miles off Long Island, Navy salvage ships muscled more wreckage to the surface in hopes of finding some of the remaining bodies trapped beneath it. Remote-controlled video cameras scanned debris, and divers rigged debris so it could be lifted.

"We'd recovered all the bodies we could without moving wreckage," Navy Cmdr. Ron Morse said.

A 15- to 20-foot chunk of the battered fuselage was brought ashore by barge. The half-cylindrical section with interior metal ribs appeared to be from the plane's silver underbelly.

Investigators still have recovered only a small part of the Paris-bound 747. They are particularly interested in finding the front cargo bay, where they suspect a bomb may have been hidden.

It was unclear how many of the cockpit's 900 gauges and dials and gadgets were in the recovered .

Police Department seeks grants

Money would provide for extra officers, training, computers

■ Officials expect word about grants to come sometime in September.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The Police Department has applied for three federal grants to hire additional officers, outfit the department with more personal computers and curb domestic violence through better officer training and counselors.

The COPS Universal Hiring Program Grant, if obtained, will help pay for three more patrol officers. The officers would be assigned to a community policing program — such as the department's future mobile substation or bike patrol — as a requirement of the grant.

The officers would be on the streets by April, following attendance at the police academy and field training, city officials said. The grant program allows funding for three years.

Officials expect to be notified about the grant applications in September.

The grant will be enough money to pay for 75 percent of employee costs, generally salary and benefits.

Last year, the city received a similar grant under the COPS program that allowed the hiring of four new officers. In addition, the city plans to budget money for the upcoming fiscal year to pay for three more detectives.

Through another grant — COPS Problem Solving Grant — the city hopes to receive full funding to better train officers responding to domestic violence calls and to hire two on-call counselors to be available at such times.

The program would be aimed at reducing the high incidence of domestic violence calls in Midland and reducing repeat calls at the same locations.

"The whole thing is to help minimize these calls ... so we have the officer available to respond to other emergencies," Assistant City Manger Rick Menchaca said.

A third grant — a law enforcement block grant essentially guaranteed for the asking — will improve communications and information access within the Police Department.

The grant — for $100,000 plus a required 10-percent match by the city — will pay for 25 to 30 personal computers and related costs. The computers will allow access to the department's records management system as well as internal communications.

Currently, the police department — aside from records-keeping areas — has a limited number of computers. In recent years, the department has received funding from city dollars to purchase about 10 computers annually; the grant notwithstanding, continued computer funding is expected to be budgeted, city officials said.

Roy Reyes, from left, Clyde Reyes, and Ruben Reyes have a patent for building Pitt Boss Bar-B-Q Pits. Clyde Reyes was the superintendent for the Midland Parks Department for 40 years. He began building the pits after retiring from the city. A park named for him and two others will be dedicated later in September.

Local men build barbecue pit that almost does it all

By Joe Gaines
Staff Writer

With summer just past its mid-way point, it's still not too late to use a barbecue grill and Clyde Reyes makes and sells one called the Pit Boss.

He, along with his five sons and a cousin, makes the grill at his residence in central Midland.

Reyes worked as superintendent for the Midland Parks Department for 40 years, retiring in 1987. During his time with the Parks Department, he supervised maintenance and designed the barbecue pits at Hogan Park.

A park on the east side of town will be named after him and two others at a dedication ceremony in September.

"But, I made sure my name would be first on the sign," he said.

The park initially won't have any of Reyes' Pit Bosses, but he said he hopes to have some there eventually.

After he retired, he and his sons wanted a grill that "could do a little bit of everything," not just barbecue.

Their idea for the Pit Boss, which the Reyeses sell for $450, started with the Mexican "disco," a disc on a plow. In Mexico, the disc was used for cooking, much like a wok, Roy Reyes, Clyde's son, said.

"The holes in the disc were filled up and it was put over a fire and used to cook," Roy Reyes said.

Net-making tradition may not live long, former shrimper concludes

FREEPORT (AP)— Blue-green nets cover the concrete floor where Hollis Forrester, 70, plies his trade. Behind him, the cinderblock walls of his net shop on Broad Street are drab and gray, but the shrimper-turned-netmaker brings color of his own to the room.

"Net-making is a dying trade," he says. "I don't know what's gonna happen in the next few years ... . Younger people won't take it up; it's too hard. It gets your mind, because you can't make mistakes — if you do, you've lost a day's work."

As he sews the edges of a net together, Forrester makes sure the knots all run in the same direction. The sewing itself is done with special "needles" as large as a man's hand.

"It looks easy to do, but you find me one person who can come into this shop and even learn to tie the knots in one day and I'll give you a thousand dollars," he says, grinning.

Forrester, son of a shrimper, was born in northern Florida and came to Freeport 47 years ago. At one time, he owned six shrimp boats and ran one of them himself, but a heart attack nine years ago forced him to stick to working on shore.

"But I haven't had any more trouble," he says. "I'm beginning to think they didn't know what they were talking about. My daddy fished up until he was 90-something years old. He was a net man, too."

Being able to repair nets was once a necessity for a shrimper, Forrester says.

"Back in the days when I was growing up, you couldn't get a job on a boat unless you could do nets. That was the first thing they asked, and they didn't take your word for it, either. They usually had a torn-up net somewhere on deck for you to work on."

Today, he says, the situation is different. "Crews today don't learn it, and not many people can do it," he says.

The piles of net lying around his workshop keep him busy, although he isn't as busy now as he was about two weeks ago, just before the mid-July to May shrimping season opened. In the rush for that opening, he and a helper worked 16-17 hours a day getting nets ready to haul in a harvest.

"The big shrimp boats drag four nets at a time so they usually keep at least eight spares in case they tear one up," Forrester says.

Plenty of things can tear a net, he adds. "The oil companies are continuously dropping junk offshore — pipe, steel plates, you name it," he says.

The good news is that a navigational device is now available to help shrimpers pinpoint areas where debris is a problem. "When you tear up on a place, you can write the numbers (coordinates) down in a book so you don't go back there if you can help it," Forrester says.

A torn-up net — without a spare — is very bad news.

"No net, no shrimp," he quips.

Two men admit to burning black family's future home

DALLAS (AP) — Two white men admitted Monday they tried to intimidate a black family by burning down their future home, an incident one prosecutor labeled a "graphic reminder of how far we still have to go in race relations."

Gary Wayne Stouard, 40, and Shannon Ray Singleton, 18, both of Wichita Falls, each pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy to violate the civil rights of another and one count of arson. Stouard also pleaded guilty to one count of aiding and abetting, federal officials said.

The men admitted they burned down a house in March in which Ruby Fleeks, a black woman, planned to live with her two children. Ms. Fleeks could not be reached for comment.

Assistant Attorney General Deval L. Patrick said the federal government would not tolerate acts of racial hatred.

"No American should live in fear of having their home attacked because of their race," he said.

The day before Ms. Fleeks planned to move into the home, which was directly across the street from Stouard's, he paid Singleton $50 to set fire to the residence, federal officials said. Stouard also placed a container of gasoline outside his home for Singleton to use to torch the house, they said.

After setting the fire by breaking a window and pouring the gas inside, Singleton ran to Stouard's home where he stayed overnight to hide from authorities, federal officials said.

The house, which already had many of the family's belongings inside, suffered $15,000 in damage, and the Fleeks couldn't move in.

"We treat this attack so seriously because it was aimed not simply at one African-American family, but an entire community," said U.S. Attorney Paul Coggins. "It is a graphic reminder of how far we still have to go in race relations in this country."

Singleton's attorney, Matthew Golla, said the fire should never have been set but wouldn't label his client a racist. He portrayed Singleton as an impressionable, high-school dropout who fell victim to Stouard's taunts.

"I think the co-defendant played on my client's immaturity and inexperience and lack of smarts in order to get him to burn the house down," Golla said. "He could have done this himself, but he had my client do it."

Said Stouard's attorney, Bruce Martin: "Mr. Singleton also pleaded guilty to the conspiracy and if he had a defense on the basis of duress or coercion I think he would have used it, but that's not what occurred.

DEATHS

PIT: Local family patents special pit

(From 1B)

The innovation of the disco and the desire for a grill that would do more than one thing, led to the Pit Boss, a seven-in-one cooking pit, Roy Reyes said.

Sounding somewhat like the promotion man for the Ginzu knife, Roy Reyes spoke of the wonders of the Pit Boss.

"You can barbecue, stir fry, fry, open broil, smoke, steam and dry meat with it," Roy Reyes said. "We've cooked with it and made sure it worked till we were blue in the face. I've even baked bread with it."

Adding baking makes it an eight-in-one pit, but Roy Reyes, a teacher at Midland Freshman High School, doesn't teach math; he teaches art.

Roy Reyes said the thing that makes the Pit Boss unique has to do with the butane used for heat. The butane can be moved easily to different levels for any type of cooking without having to unhook the butane, he said.

The butane flame burns blue, which is better for cooking; it can be modified for slow cooking or when a little heat is needed. Firewood can also be used and the pit is more able to withstand the high temperatures than other pits, he said.

The pit has removable grills and comes with a wok that can be moved out of the way and used as preparation area or table, he said.

Roy Reyes has been working weekends and summers with his dad to make and perfect the pit. His four brothers also help and a cousin does the welding, he said.

The Reyeses are hoping to mass market the pit, but need to find a company to manufacture it. A prototype of the new Pit Boss is larger, but lighter, portable and easierto assemble, Roy Reyes said.

"With a manufacturer and being able to buy in bulk, we could lower the price," Roy Reyes said. "We want something that is cheaper and more what people can afford."

The Reyeses said they have buyers willing to sell it in Mexico and a company in Dallas is interested in making the pit, but they would like to keep the Pit Boss in Midland.

"We want to keep it a family thing," Roy Reyes said.

Dallas superintendent to resign for new job

DALLAS (AP) — The superintendent of the Dallas public school system, which has been rocked this year by racial tensions and scandal, announced Monday that he will resign to become president of a nonprofit foundation.

Despite the controversies, Chad Woolery said leaving was his own idea. He will become president of the Dallas-based Voyager Foundation, which supports education for gifted students in urban areas.

"I was absolutely not pressured to leave. I had an opportunity. It's just the timing of it happens to be now to lead this national foundation," he said.

Woolery said he was offered the presidency of the Voyager Foundation 1 1/2 weeks ago.

But for Dallas school trustees and employees, the announcement came seemingly from nowhere just a week before classes are scheduled to begin.

Board Vice President Kathleen Leos got her first word on Woolery's departure in the form of a telephone rumor at 3:30 p.m. Monday, 1 1/2 hours before she appeared at his news conference.

"I certainly don't want to stand in the way of someone who has been given a better offer. I was just very surprised at the timing," she said in an interview after the news conference.

But Woolery assured that his departure will not disrupt school operations, although no effective date for the resignation has been set.

"The change will be happening quite soon, as soon as the board is able to make a transition," he told reporters at an afternoon news conference.

Ms. Leos agreed.

"Teachers still know how to teach. Principals still know how to be principals," she said.

Nevertheless, the resignation is the latest in a series of upheavals for DISD in 1996 — much of it centered on race.

Last fall, a white member of board was secretly tape-recorded uttering racial slurs. Dan Peavy resigned in disgrace shortly after the tapes were publicly aired, and is awaiting trial on charges he received $459,000 in bribes to help a partner sell insurance to the district.

At recent board meetings, scuffles have broken out between police and protesting blacks, and members of the New Black Panther Party have urged supporters to show up armed.

Two members of the party were arrested in May when they refused to sit down at a meeting and scuffled with police who took them from the hall. In June, a meeting has to be canceled when party co-founder Aaron Michaels called on others to show up outside with rifles and shotguns.

Of the issues confronting the next superintendent, "racial tension is something that will be addressed," Woolery said.

Suspect charged in two Greenville church burnings

DALLAS (AP) — A black teen who admitted he set fires at two predominantly black churches in Greenville has been charged with two counts of arson, according to federal indictments unsealed Monday.

In confessions to police, Mark Anthony Young, 18, said he set a total of four fires, including the two church blazes that inflamed racial tensions. He has been in custody since his July 17 arrest.

The New Light House of Prayer sustained $60,000 in damage in an arson fire June 9. A few hours later, the Church of the Living God suffered an estimated $2,000 in damage during a predawn fire.

Dozens of fires, mostly at vacant buildings, followed. Young confessed to the church fires in the town about 50 miles northeast of Dallas after being taken into custody in connection with a fire at a vacant house.

A federal grand jury on Friday returned the indictments charging Young with arson stemming from the two church fires, said U.S. Attorney Paul Coggins said.

"We're trying to convince arsonists don't do it, and for God's sake, don't target a church," he said. "When you burn a church it's not like just burning another building."

Young is scheduled to be arraigned Friday before U.S. District Judge Sidney Fitzwater. If convicted, he faces a maximum punishment of 40 years in prison and a fine of $500,000.

He is not a suspect in the other fires that have plagued the community, and federal agents are continuing their investigation into those incidents, Coggins said.

In his confessions, Young said he set the four fires because he was angry at his mother for not letting him stay with her and because she used drugs. After the confessions were made public, his mother, Annie Bell Young, said the two got along well and denied using drugs.

The NAACP and other local black leaders have said the confessions were coerced, and that authorities took advantage of Young because he is "learning disabled."

Texas bookseller takes comfortable, old-fashioned approach to business

By Maria Pierson
Waco Tribune-Herald

GROESBECK—Caught between a Wednesday afternoon phone call and a customer, trader Bill Bond chooses quickly.

"I got a victim that just came in, and I'm fixing to show him something, and I hope he doesn't commence to tremble," Bond says amiably into the line, holding the cordless phone as he pulls a book from the shelves.

Don Griffin, one of Bond's friends in the cow business, has already taken a seat in one of four chairs set around a table in the middle of the store.

"Uh-oh," Griffin responds apprehensively. "I never stop in with the purpose of buying a book, but he's always got something sitting around he knows I'll buy."

Today it's "The Last Trail Drive Through Downtown Dallas," one of the few Ben K. Green books Griffin doesn't already have.

"Isn't that great?" Bond asks, settling onto the floor.

Griffin asks the price. Bond names one, meandering on with the sales pitch, a narrative likely more rare in today's book-selling than the volume itself.

It's not a one-sentence exhortation of the author; Griffin already knows that.

So Bond relates how he got the volume, weaving a tale involving a vacation drive through Tularosa, N.M., and Aunt Ethel (or whatever her name was, Bond says) sitting in a secondhand bookstore.

Griffin shies away from the book. Bond offers another one before the conversation winds to horses, cattle, slaughterhouses and rainfall.

Bond, 60, is a fan of history stories. There are plenty of both in the downtown space where his grandfather and father had a dry-good store.

Last week, a former conductor of the Denver symphony — another story, Bond says — stopped by long enough to reminisce about a female college student who gave up her studies to become a bullfighter.

Bond talks of a recent drive through New Mexico.

"Are you familiar with the Anasazi Indians? Let me tell you. This is the short version," he says, giving a brief chronicle of the tribe.

Bond was a cattle trader through the 1980s, good years for the business. These aren't.

"But so many of us are so caught up in this tradition, we've been fooling with all our lives that we just can't imagine not having a cow," Bond said. "I'm not going to be without a cow."

He opened the store a year and a half ago, mainly from books and Western art he had at home.

"I just piled a bunch of stuff in here I like to look at, and I sell a little something every now and then," Bond tells a customer.

What he has includes the works of authors such as Willa Cather, Larry McMurtry, John Graves and Cormac McCarthy.

There is a mix of nonfiction ranging from a pictorial history of Waco to books about Mexican artists Diego Rivera and Frida Kahlo.

"I'm on real shaky ground setting myself up as a literary critic. I'm in the cow business. I run a country bookstore," Bond said.

But he can also speak easily about the duality of Kahlo or run through the works of Cather. There is a section on women of the West.

"Men usually had two or three wives. They worked 'em to death having babies and hauling water. Well, who's responsible for settling the West? It's not Billy the Kid. It's all these women," Bond said.

The art is Western or local. There is the work of Charles M. Russell and Frederic Remington as well as Melvin Warren of Clifton, Denver watercolorist William Matthews and Nevada photographer Linda Dufurrena.

"I have very little original art because original art is so expensive. Most of my things are good quality prints," Bond said.

The bulk of the original photography is by Peter Ogloff, a Canadian artist who moved to Groesbeck with his wife and has set up a darkroom in the back of Bond's store, an arrangement that evolved from a chance encounter.

Ogloff's wife came home from an overnight shift at the local hospital one morning and mentioned she had talked with another employee, Bond's wife, about black-and-white photography.

"A half hour later, this guy came to the door," Ogloff said of Bond. Ogloff's equipment and many of his pictures were in Canada; he had only one book to show Bond, a work published in the late 1970s.

"On the basis of that, he took this leap of faith," Ogloff said.

Bond footed the bill for supplemental equipment and financed his move into the store.

There is no payroll here. Ogloff and Little each work in the store some, as does Vickie Weaver, who runs a picture-framing business from the space.

Bond finds other ways of drawing in potential artists: a mechanic at the local Goodyear store showed him a picture taken of a comet over Groesbeck. Ogloff made reproductions, and the photographs are in Bond's store.

"It's a home run," Bond said.

An alternative-school student was in Bond's store hashing out ideas for an assignment to write a 250-word biography. He settled on the history of Idgey, the border collie that works cattle for Bond in the mornings and tends the store afternoons.

"If I like it, I'll buy it from you," Bond told the student. "You'll be a published author."

Bond paid $10 for the work which remains in the store.

"That's the first edition, a rare copy of Idgey's life, and it's 250 words," Bond said proudly, checking the biography for the correct spelling of the dog's name, which came from the movie "Fried Green Tomatoes."

He arranged for the high school Spanish teacher, originally from Mexico, to teach four months of Spanish lessons in the store, a reflection of Bond's passion for the country and efforts to be bilingual.

"This was Mexico before we stole it from them," Bond said, explaining his interest. "How many people do you think would know this wasn't always America?"

It isn't a rhetorical question. He waits for answers, then moves back into an all-day stream of anecdotes, questions, thoughts and stories.

As the last customer, an acquaintance who now lives in Kansas, starts strolling out around 5 p.m., Bond lingers, saying how he wants to get up that way next.

"I'm not smart about Kansas. Oregon Trail: That's really interesting to me," he says.

STATE IN BRIEF

■ Deliberations begin in 12-year-old's trial

AUSTIN — Jurors in the murder trial of a 12-year-old girl accused of beating to death a 2 1/2-year-old began deliberations Monday.

Defense attorney Kameron Johnson called no defense witnesses after prosecutors took a week to call about 20 witnesses. Johnson told the jury of six men and six women the prosecution did not prove his client did anything to 2 1/2-year-old Jayla Belton before she died May 24.

"They promised you that they were going to convince you by the end that (my client) intentionally committed capital murder," he said in his closing arguments. "They provided you with no motive, no explanation, no eye witness and no physical evidence."

Gary Cobb, an assistant Travis County district attorney, said he presented all the evidence there was and all the evidence needed to find the 12-year-old guilty.

■ Students must have 2nd measles shot

HOUSTON — An outbreak of measles near Houston prompted city health officials to announce Monday that all public and private school students must get a second measles immunization by Nov. 4.

The new policy applies to students in the Houston, Alief, Spring Branch and North Forest independent school districts. The second immunization is recommended but not required for day-care centers and colleges.

No measles cases have been found in Houston, but Harris County health officials have reported 15 cases since midsummer. Most have been in suburban Kingwood, northeast of Houston.

"There are presently 15 cases of measles at Houston's doorstep," said Dr. Mary desVignes-Kendrick, director of the city's Health and Human Services Department.

Meanwhile, a measles case in adjoining Galveston County moved health officials there to recommend immunizations for infants older than 6 months, said Chuck Chambers, an epidemiologist with the Galveston County Health District.

■ Tipster helps locate suspected murderer

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A fugitive from Montana who was living in El Paso under an alias was located Monday after an "America's Most Wanted" tipster notified authorities.

Randy Keyes, who was calling himself Stephen Robert Tagge, is wanted in Billings, Mont., in connection with a Sept. 30, 1994, murder and attempted murder. He is charged with shooting and wounding a rival drug enforcer, Dean LaFromboise, following a car chase. A passenger in LaFromboise's car, Jacine Chapel, was killed during the incident, authorities said.

The Southwest Fugitive Task Force of El Paso received a tip recently from a man who saw Keyes profiled on the July 13 edition of the TV show, according to the U.S. Marshal's Service. The tipster was able to tell law enforcers where Keyes lived.

Authorities confirmed his identify and arrested him as he left an apartment he shared with a woman. He was carrying identification bearing his real name, officials said.

Border infrastructure hasn't grown enough, officials say

By Kelley Shannon
Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Trade between the United States and Mexico has boomed under the North American Free Trade Agreement, but border infrastructure has not kept up, U.S. Commerce Secretary Mickey Kantor said Monday.

"We've lifted the barriers and cleared the tracks. Now we have to do much of the leg work," Kantor told some 500 public officials and business people from both nations meeting in San Antonio.

U.S. exports to Mexico totaled a monthly record of $4.7 billion in May, and from January through May of this year exports to Mexico were up 18 percent compared with the same period in 1995.

"But with growth comes burdens and pressures," Kantor said. "The disappointing infrastructure development has not kept pace with trade and economic growth."

Though some progress has been made, he said, without adequate water, wastewater, power plants and transportation along the international border the full potential of NAFTA won't be realized.

An estimated $15 billion in infrastructure is needed on both sides of the border in the coming decade, Kantor said.

As part of the trade agreement, the Border Environment Cooperation Commission and the North American Development Bank were created to identify and fund border environmental infrastructure projects.

The NADBank, as it is known, was funded beginning in late 1994 by the United States and Mexico. It has yet to close on a loan.

At Monday's meeting — a followup to a similar border infrastructure conference three years ago — NADBank managing director Alfredo Phillips Olmedo gave an overview of some projects under consideration by the San Antonio-based bank.

One project would improve drinking water lines in Nogales, Mexico. The bank would finance part of the $21.6 million plan.

Some other proposals that come before the bank don't provide for adequate operation and maintenance, and some are 20- to 25-year projects for which arranging financial resources can be difficult, Phillips said.

Both countries are responsible for developing workable projects through the BECC and NADBank, said Herminio Blanco Mendoza, Mexico's secretary of commerce and industrial development.

"Bilateral problems require bilateral approaches and solutions," said Blanco. A major challenge is to come up with infrastructure projects that can be financed under current market conditions, he said.

Deregulation and private investment in certain Mexican industries are helping with the efficiency of infrastructure projects, he said.

Like the United States, Mexico is reaping trade benefits under NAFTA, Blanco said. Mexico is expected to reach a historic $100 billion in exports this year, and NAFTA helped Mexico weather the economic storm it faced after the peso devaluation of December 1994, he said.

"We have left behind the most difficult months, and we are on the road to economic recovery," Blanco said.

Congressional investgators to report on NAFTA bank's deficiency

By Michelle Mittlestadt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The development bank created to make passage of the NAFTA more palatable to skittish lawmakers has not loaned one dollar to improve conditions along the impoverished, polluted U.S.-Mexico border.

Congressional investigators, in a report being released later this month, contend that the North American Development Bank's policies may inhibit loans to poor communities on both sides of the 2,000-mile border.

Designed to respond to criticism that the North American Free Trade Agreement would add new pressures on an already overburdened border infrastructure, NADBank has been capitalized with $224 million from the U.S. and Mexican governments. That money will be used to leverage private-sector funds, bringing the San Antonio-based bank's available lending capital to $1.5 billion.

But in the 18 months since NADBank has been able to loan money, no projects have been green-lighted.

At the same time, lack of basic water, wastewater and sanitation services continues to affect the well being of many of the 10 million Mexicans and Americans who live along the border, the General Accounting Office says in its report.

"Although the United States and Mexico have made some progress in improving the border region's environmental infrastructure, serious pollution problems persist that pose an ongoing threat to the health of residents and the environment," GAO said.

Cleaning up the border and bringing basic services to communities dotting the region would cost $8 billion over a decade. Apart from NADBank, the U.S. and Mexican governments are pledging $1.4 billion in grants over a decade for border improvements.

NADBank officials and other advocates argue that it's far more important for them to take the time necessary to approve viable projects than to rush out loans.

"We just don't think that enough time has been given to determine whether or not they are going to have any success," said Albert Jacquez, chief of staff to Rep. Esteban Torres.

Without question, Jib's chicken strips are unbeatable

Why did the chicken cross the road?

He was on his way to becoming chicken strips at Jib's.

What chicken would volunteer for that?

Only the bravest chickens. Only those that are ready to sacrifice themselves for the good of others make it to Jib's. Then, Joe and Johnnie Harper turn the tenderest, juiciest chicken breasts into mouth-wateringly delicious, golden brown chicken strips.

What kind of treatment is that?

Oh, they get the full treatment. First the meat is sliced into perfectly-sized pieces, then dipped in a homestyle egg wash and coated with flour and spices. Finally, the chicken is fried up to a crispy, golden brown. Any chicken's mother would be proud of the platter that comes out of Jib's kitchen.

Sounds like a lot of work to me. They must start all that as soon as the rooster crows.

Indeed, it is a good deal of work and we know all about the early bird, but Jib's waits until you order to start cooking. The chicken's done its part by growing up nice and tender. Such dedicated chicken deserves to be served while it is hot and crispy. So, you can bet, Jib's won't serve a cold, soggy chicken strip to their customers.

So, folks have time for a hen party while they're waiting on all that cooking?

No, not really. Jib's customers seem to enjoy visiting with each other, but they have to do it in between bites for the most part. Joe and Johnnie have organized their kitchen so efficiently that it will only be about 10 minutes from the time your order is chicken scratched on a ticket until it is in your mouth. During that time, most customers help themselves to a fresh salad and ice tea or a soft drink. There will be no need to "fly" back to work after a lunch break at Jib's.

Jib's chicken strips are served with creamy gravy, salad, Texas toast, and a choice of okra or french fries or green beans and home style mashed potatoes. A full order is only $5.50. Half orders are only $4.

Is this chicken a solo flight, or does it come with something?

Birds of a feather flock together...and so does good food. WITH your golden crisp chicken strips comes a big slice of Texas Toast, a bowl of smooth cream gravy, and your choice of either French fries or creamy mashed potatoes and green beans or crunchy fried okra.

Wouldn't I feel like a stuffed turkey if I ate all that?

If your appetite is more like a sparrow's, Jib's has half orders for just $4.00. And a full order is just a feathery $5.50.

That's all fine and good, but what if I don't have time to gobble up any lunch?

Then get your order to go, and eat at your desk. Jib's is ready for folks who have to fly the coop with their food.

Okay, okay, I'm convinced. Now, will you bring me a carryout order of chicken strips from Jib's?

Certainly! You'll find Jib's is truly the answer when it comes to mouth-watering chicken strips.

Jib's is located at 3316 W. Illinois, just "across the road" from Dunlap's. While they specialize in steak fingers, they serve up such other tempting food as catfish, chicken strips, char-broiled chicken and chicken fried steak. Hours are 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Saturday. The phone number is 699-3008. Carryouts are welcome.

El Dorado Trading Co. restores historic building

Shopkeeper David Bartko prepares for opening day at the new downtown location of his store, El Dorado Trading Company.

After a year and a half in the Montevallo Plaza near K-Mart, El Dorado Trading Company had outgrown its space. About the time he realized this, owner David Bartko learned of the availability of one of Midland's oldest retail buildings, at the corner of Main and Illinois.

Since El Dorado deals in authentic items and replicas of old west items such as black powder guns, furniture, clothing and uniforms, Bartko saw that this historic building would be a natural for him. "Restoring a hundred-year-old building fits perfectly with the theme of the store and offers us a chance to give something back to the community," he said.

Bartko plans to move to the building in early August as he continues to restore and improve it. He hopes to collect photos and other building memorabilia to be used in an in-store display.

Future plans call for El Dorado to lease space to others, such as antique dealers, who offer merchandise with a compatible theme.

In early August, El Dorado Trading Company will move from its 350 N. Midland Drive location (on the K-Mart parking lot) to Main and Illinois, downtown. Store hours are 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Saturday. The phone number is 689-4677.

Customers commend Steamatic for service and pricing

"We work very hard to make sure our customers are pleased with our service," says Andy Jencks, Manager of Midland's Blackmon Mooring Steamatic office. That is the main reason the company has compiled an impressive list of satisfied customers from carpet cleaning, flood restoration and duct cleaning.

"We're in business for the long haul," Jencks says of the 48-year-old company. "We want to make folks happy so they'll call us again, and they'll tell their friends about us."

Bob and Bea Williams had a rent house in which a departing occupant accidentally flooded the two-story house. By the time the Williamses had discovered the problem, the occupant had already called another flood service to the scene.

The Williamses called Steamatic because the other company had not successfully removed stains and odors from the carpet. Also, the Williamses deemed the other company's bill (which first appeared days later) to be extremely high.

Before beginning work, the Steamatic professional presented the Williamses with a detailed estimate, showing just what needed to be done and how much it would cost. "There were no surprises this way," says Bea Williams.

"Steamatic removed the rusty stains from the carpet," she says. "They also deodorized and disinfected it. If it had been up to us, we would have called them in the first place. Their up-front estimate showed that they would have saved hundreds of dollars."

Steamatic takes great care to discern the type of stain and the kind of carpet before they begin stain removal. This way the stain is gone and the carpet is not damaged.

"We are very particular about work done on our rent houses," she adds. "We have used Steamatic to clean carpet at another rent house, and will continue to use them. Their prices are very reasonable and their service and professionalism are outstanding."

J. M. Lawson's doctor suggested she have her home's ducts cleaned because of her recently developed asthma. She is very pleased with the job Blackmon Mooring Steamatic did.

"I expected to have to go back and dust everything after this procedure," she said. "They were so careful, I haven't found a speck of dust they left behind."

Steamatic's patented source removal process reduces dust from the system and collects it before it can get out into your home.

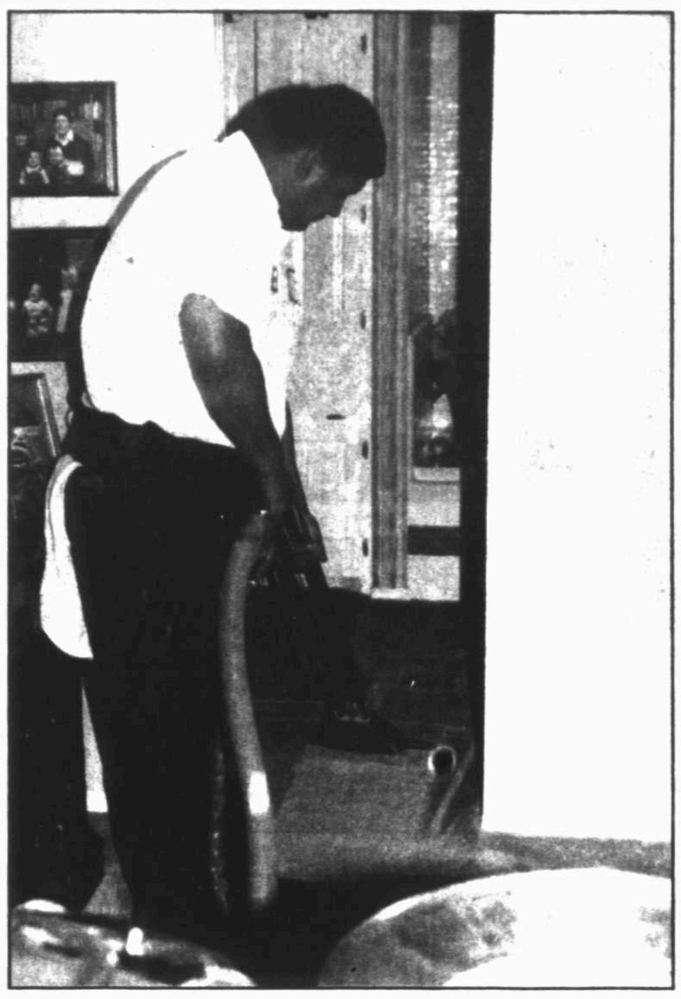
The Steamatic professionals cleaned not only the ducts but also the registers and the air handling unit. "They showed me how much dirt their machine had collected," she says. "The ducts were very dirty."

The work at Ms Lawson's 2600 square foot house was finished in about three hours. "The Steamatic people were very professional, courteous and efficient," she said. "I can't find any fault in the work they did. I would definitely use them again, although they tell me it will be six years before I have to have my ducts cleaned again."

One way Steamatic can reduce airborne contaminants is by treating the entire air conveyance system with EPA-registered products.

Typically, a thorough duct cleaning will also improve the efficiency of the system by removing restrictions on air flow.

Blackmon Mooring Steamatic, founded in 1948, offers a wide variety of home services. They clean air ducts, carpets and furniture. They do restoration and deodorizing from fire and water damage. Call 520-8121 for a free estimate. There is no extra charge for after hours flood or fire restoration.



Blackmon Mooring Steamatic works very hard at pleasing customers. That's one reason the company has been around for 48 years.

Graham's Pharmacy adds acclaimed Harbor Lights and Dollstones collectibles

Harbor Lights and Boyd's Dollstones are two of the hottest collectible lines in the world today. Despite their popularity, both can be hard to find because the makers choose their distributors carefully. Graham's Pharmacy is pleased to have added both of these to their impressive list of quality collectibles.

Harbor Lights is the top lighthouse collectible today, according to Graham's owner Kevin Keele. These intricately detailed miniatures of actual lighthouses have become true collectibles because most are signed and numbered limited editions.

Last year, many Graham's customers enjoyed the Boyd's Bearstones, the Plush Boyd's Bears and Hayes collectibles and the Folkstones. As a result of the popularity of these series in Midland, Boyd's has allowed the store to add their most popular collectible, the Dollstones. People worldwide love and collect these amazingly detailed and lifelike figures.

"With all the figure makers out there calling their products 'collectibles,' we are pleased to add these lines that have proven to be true collectors' items," Keele says. Harbor Lights and Dollstones join the longtime classic M. I. Hummel figurines and the Fenton Art Glass that Graham's has carried for years.

Graham's Pharmacy carries a wide selection of collectibles, cards, health and beauty aids as well as being a full service pharmacy. They deliver prescriptions and other merchandise citywide. They also have a full service fountain and lunch counter. Located at 319 Dodson Street in Old Town Midland, the phone number is 684-0569.

At Graham's Pharmacy old time service meets competitive pricing

At many of the mammoth discount stores, "service" can seem like a foreign word. Pricing, to them, is everything. At Graham's Pharmacy, they define "service" and "competitive pricing" the same way you do.

Grahams' employs three pharmacists who are glad to discuss your medication with you. If you need advice on non-prescription, over-the-counter medicine, they're happy to help you with that, too.

Oh, yes. Graham's invites you to compare prices. Are they serious? An independent drug store willing to compare prices with the big guys? Owner Kevin Keele says it's true.

"Our prices are usually very much in line with theirs, especially on store brand medicines or health and beauty aids."

Service at Graham's includes citywide delivery on prescriptions...and anything else in the store. "Our delivery service accommodates folks who are too ill or too busy to come by for refills or anything else," says Keele. "Delivery is a basic part of our service."

Service includes a fountain with a tasty assortment of homemade sandwiches and (the best part) REAL ICE CREAM. Floats, shakes, malts...they all taste much better with real ice cream. Remember, "A spoonful of sugar (or ice cream) makes the medicine go down, in the most delightful way."

DEAR ABBY

Young woman learns all about drug addiction

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 21-year-old college student with a lot of ambitions. I don't smoke, drink or use any drugs. My boyfriend, "John," is 18. We've been together for 2 1/2 years and are very happy. We plan to be married someday. He's my best friend.

The problem is that he smokes pot almost daily, and he drinks occasionally, too. I knew he did this when we got together. In fact, I did it too, but I stopped. This really bothers me because he often puts me second to going out to party with his friends.

VanBuren

When I talk to him about it, John thinks I'm overreacting. I also worry about him because his father is an alcoholic, even though John didn't grow up in that environment and swears he won't screw up his life like his father did. I am beginning to wonder how much control he has over his lifestyle.

I'm very much in love with John and want to spend the rest of my life with him. Do you think this is just a phase that he'll grow out of? I don't know what to do. Please help me. – SAD IN NEW YORK

DEAR SAD: The fact that your boyfriend prefers to party with his friends rather than go out with you speaks volumes. It says that he cares more about his friends and his drugs than he does you, and indicates how immature he is.

Although he does not intend for his drinking to get out of hand, because he is the child of an alcoholic, there is a good chance that it could before he realizes it. And if it does, he will undoubtedly try to rationalize his usage so that he can continue with his addiction.

Some say that marijuana is not addictive. But if it's not, then why do so many people continue using it long after they should have stopped? When it's used daily, pot affects judgment, short-term memory and the ability to concentrate.

Before you make a lifetime commitment to John, I urge you to learn all you can about drug and alcohol addiction. It could save you a world of heartache. Call the CSAP hotline (the Center for Substance Abuse) at 1-800-662-4357 for information about drug and alcohol addiction and/or referral to your local help agency.

DEAR ABBY: My husband was ill for many years, but we maintained a large circle of social and professional friends until his death. We were happily married for 58 years and four months.

Now I find myself addressed as "Mrs. Mae Jones" or "Mae Jones." This happens even when I receive mail from family members. My legal signature has not changed, and I'd still prefer to be known socially and professionally as "Mrs. William C. Jones."

I'm sure that many other widows besides me would appreciate guidance in this delicate area, since so many people make this frustrating mistake. – WILLIAM'S WIDOW IN MESA, ARIZ.

DEAR W.W.: I have mentioned this in my column before, but here's the answer. Photocopy this item and send it to the offenders with a courteous note:

Only divorced women are addressed as "Mrs." followed by their first names. A widow keeps her husband's name until she remarries.

DEAR ABBY: You were right on the mark when you explained that birth control pills can be used for purposes other than contraception.

I'm a 35-year-old virgin. Before I started on the pill two years ago, I had spent years dealing with disabling menstrual cramps accompanied by flu-like symptoms that interfered with my ability to work. It lasted an entire week of every month.

Thanks to the pill, my productive life is no longer confined to three-week intervals, and the pain is a thing of the past. If only people would stop jumping to conclusions.

Thank you for setting the record straight. – ON THE PILL BUT NOT PROMISCUOUS

YOUR HOROSCOPE

TUESDAY, AUGUST 6, 1996

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: New friends and experiences make your life more rewarding than ever. You gain a fresh perspective on something that happened a long time ago. This fall, look for ways to expand your professional horizons. Taking a second job could lead to a whole new career in 1997. Joining a community or church group boosts your popularity. A delightful romantic relationship takes you in a new direction. Be careful not to lose contact with long-time friends and supporters.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: basketball player David Robinson, actress Stepfanie Kramer, legendary comedian Lucille Ball, pop artist Andy Warhol.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Great accomplishments are possible now. Concentrate on work in progress. Finish pending projects before seeking approval for a new venture. Gloating over a triumph could cost your valuable support.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Make your point clearly if you want others to understand. When planning your work day, allow for changes and delays. Seniors will find satisfaction working with the needy.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be patient with yourself. You need time to weigh your options. Lessons learned in the past help you discard outdated ideas and techniques. A period of exploration and experimentation yields wonderful results.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your charm and warmth attract new admirers. Look within for guidance. Emotional thunderstorms can be avoided if you resist venting your frustration over trivial matters.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Adopting a more realistic attitude helps you see things as they really are. Busy yourself with practical tasks like organizing your work space. Music and dance are a source of inspiration.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be diligent about your work, but meet your family obligations as well. Avoid outside distractions and demanding acquaintances. If you need a confidant, choose someone you have known and trusted for a long time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A well-intentioned friend's financial advice could undermine your security. Consult accountants and bankers before investing your hard-earned money.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be cautious about entering into long-term agreements. Study current trends and consult marketing experts. A letter or check could be delayed in the mail.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Turn over a new leaf with your romantic partner. Stop acting self-centered. Quiet reflection and meditation resolve an inner conflict. Fax or e-mail will bring welcome financial news.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Make peace with your partner after owning up to an indiscretion. Devise a budget that takes into account everyone's needs. Keeping up with new developments in your field will help you make a winning presentation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Avoid creating problems for yourself. Discuss your differences with key people face-to-face. Kind words and generous gestures will restore harmony at work. Child care can be exhausting. Divide household chores with your mate.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Build on yesterday's momentum. Professional goals deserve top priority. Complete a major project with dispatch. Tenderness pays off in close relationships. Show a teenager more understanding. Offer moral support to someone making a fresh start.

The bidding:

4♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♠

The defenders will do all they can to damage your contract. There is no need to assist them by trying a line which you should know is doomed to failure.

East might have tried a weak two-bid in spades in second seat. Failure to act until the second round of the auction should have alerted declarer to where danger lurked. Since the king of spades was almost certainly worth nothing on offense, North's raise to game was decidedly optimistic.

West's jack of spades was allowed to win the first trick, and the continuation of the five was taken by East's queen. The defender persevered with the ace, and declarer did well to ruff with the ace of hearts. The king was cashed, East discarding a spade, and declarer continued with a low heart and took the marked finesse of the eight.

After cashing the queen of hearts, declarer fell from grace by leading a club to the king. West had no problem winning the ace and a club returned sealed declarer's fate — down one.

As a passed hand, it was virtually impossible for East to have a good six-card spade suit, a heart void and the ace of clubs. South should have taken advantage of being in dummy on the second round of trumps to lead a diamond and finesse the jack. When that holds, it is a simple matter to cash the king of diamonds, cross back to the table with the queen of hearts, drawing the last trump in the process, and then discard a club on the ace of diamonds. Seven trump tricks and three diamonds are just what the doctor ordered.

Prince Andrew, Duchess of York laugh it up, take divorce in stride

LONDON — Prince Andrew and the Duchess of York seem to take to divorce a little better than Charles and Di do.

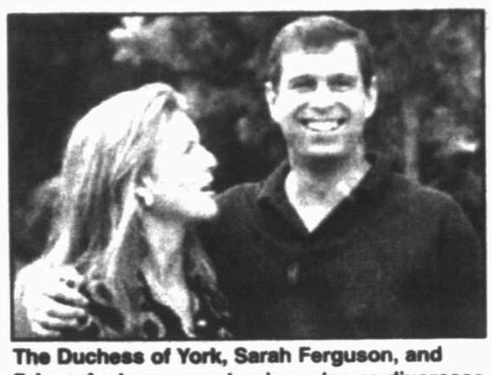
Acting like gay divorcees, Andrew and Sarah Ferguson appeared together Monday at a fund-raising golf tournament, laughing and chatting it up.



The Duchess of York, Sarah Ferguson, and Prince Andrew seem to play roles as divorcees better than Prince Charles and Princess Diana.

Joint appearances by Princess Diana and Charles are unlikely. In the last weeks of her 15-year marriage to Prince Charles, Diana appeared alone at public visits.

Andrew turned up for a golf tournament in support of the Motor Neurone Disease Association, of which Fergie is president. The couple divorced in May after nearly 10 years of marriage.

The prince drove his daughters, Beatrice and Eugenie, around in a golf cart, and joked and talked with his ex-wife as the whole family posed for pictures.

On the other hand, Diana was conspicuously absent from a recent birthday party for the Queen Mother Elizabeth. Charles and the couple's two sons were there.

NEW YORK — Vladimir Nabokov's "Lolita" has been made into another movie, and the director is worried American audiences will never see it.

Adrian Lyne, director of "Fatal Attraction," "9 1/2 Weeks" and "Indecent Proposal," finished filming six months ago and still does not have a U.S. distributor.

"If I were doing a movie about a 13-year-old getting chopped up by cannibals, there'd be no problem," said Lyne, who is bracing for a fight with the movies ratings board. "If people don't have a problem with the book, why should they have a problem with the movie?"

Lyne's is the second film version of the 1955 novel about a man's sexual obsession with a 14-year-old girl. Stanley Kubrick directed the first a generation ago.

"The novel is a magnificent work of art — which is why I'm so terrified by it," Lyne told Entertainment Weekly. "But then, why wouldn't I want to try to film it? Just because it involves pedophilia?"

The $50 million film was financed by a French company and stars Jeremy Irons as Professor Humbert Humbert and 14-year-old newcomer Dominique Swain as Lolita.

NEW YORK — "Home Alone" star Macaulay Culkin is willing to dip into his fortune to save his parents from the financial ruin brought about by a long-running custody battle.

The 15-year-old actor, whose worth is estimated at $17 million, also has no interest in acting until his parents' squabbling ends, said his lawyer Kenneth Weinrib.

The actor's never-married parents, Christopher "Kit" Culkin, 51, and Patricia Brentrup, 40, have spent so much on their legal fight that they are near bankruptcy, the Daily News reported Monday.

NEW YORK — Alicia Silverstone longs for the good life, not the glamorous one.

"I really love what I'm doing on this movie, but, at the same time, I'd rather be married and have beautiful babies and millions of animals and eat delicious food and get as fat as I want. Live! You know?" she said in the September issue of Vanity Fair.

The 19-year-old "Clueless" star is producing a movie tentatively titled "Excess Baggage," but she's not a big fan of the business.

She called Hollywood "very cold and very dry and very dark. But the people, they always have a smile on their face, though I always wonder, how deep in that smile is the knife?

She said Hollywood is not the kind of place where people reach out and say, "I know you can do it." For that reason, "I never hang out with people in the industry."

LOS ANGELES — Members of Jack Mack and the Heart Attack almost had one when the Atlanta bomb went off.

"It came close to knocking me off my stool," said John Paruolo, keyboardist for the band playing at Olympic Centennial Park at the time.

"It was 200 feet away from us, but fortunately the stage was 30 feet above ground. I stood up and realized immediately it was a bomb," Paruolo said in Sunday's Los Angeles Daily News. "I saw this gaping hole in the bottom of the sound tower and some of the injured laying on the ground."

Band members hope to contact some of the victims to wish them well.

"After all, they were there at the park listening to us," Paruolo said.

STORM TRACKER FACTS

Thunderstorms continued to pop up across sections of the Permian Basin on Monday afternoon..but for the most part were isolated. The associated cloud cover from late-night showers is helping with the daytime temperatures as highs were only in the low 90s. A feed of moisture from the Pacific Ocean will continue and combine with daytime heating to keep showers in the late-afternoon forecast.

Tech TV

LUBBOCK — Television commitments, including a national appearance, have caused the kickoff times of two early Texas Tech games to be moved. ESPN2 has picked up Tech's Sept. 21 game at Georgia and moved the start to 4:30 p.m. The scheduled kickoff was at noon. The Red Raiders' Sept. 7 game against Oklahoma State at Texas Stadium in Irving will begin at 11:30 a.m. because of a Fox Sports broadcast of the game.

WAC games

DENVER — Western Athletic Conference officials say 34 WAC basketball games will be televised during the 1996-1997 season, the most in the league's 35-year history.
Commissioner Karl Benson said Monday that ESPN will carry 19 games involving WAC teams. Eleven will be carried on ESPN2, three on CBS and one on NBC.
All 16 WAC teams will be featured in the television schedule.

Dils replaces Cass

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Alan Dils has been named head tennis coach at New Mexico after his predecessor and mentor, Tim Cass, moved to Texas A&M last month, athletic director Rudy Davalos announced Monday. Dils, 30, a Lobo alumnus, had spent the past seven years as an assistant under Cass, and during that period, New Mexico won five straight Western Athletic Conference team championships and advanced to the NCAA championships six times.

Krumrie DUI

WILMINGTON, Ohio — Cincinnati Bengals defensive line coach Tim Krumrie pleaded guilty to drunken driving and was fined $1,000 and had his driver's license suspended for six months. Krumrie made the plea and was sentenced Friday, although his court appearance had been scheduled for Tuesday. The State Highway Patrol arrested Krumrie at about 3:30 a.m. July 22 in Richland Township, not far from the Bengals' training camp at Wilmington College. The patrol charged Krumrie with drunken driving and driving left of center on the road.

Mahorn to Detroit

DETROIT — The Detroit Pistons have agreed to sign forward Rick Mahorn to a one-year contract, agent Al Waldon said Monday. Mahorn, 38, who helped the Pistons win the 1988-89 NBA championship, has spent the last four seasons with the New Jersey Nets.
Waldon would not confirm Mahorn's salary, although WDIV-TV in Detroit reported it is worth $400,000.
"I had some great years there as we built a championship team in the 1980s and I look forward to seeing what I can do to help the Pistons develop into contenders once again," Mahorn said in a statement.

Chiefs teach 'Boys 'futbol Americano'

By Nick Anderson
Associated Press Writer

MONTERREY, Mexico — The Kansas City Chiefs trounced the Dallas Cowboys 32-6 Monday night as the NFL took its show south of the border for an exhibition of "futbol americano."
The Chiefs got a kick out of their first preseason game, being successful on four field goals, including two long ones.
Dallas dropped to 1-1, but the Cowboys learned for the first time that quarterback Troy Aikman can go deep to defender-turned-receiver Deion Sanders.
Played in a city ringed by the majestic eastern Sierra Madre, the game was the 27th in an international exhibition series that began in London in 1986. The NFL's American Bowl also has been played in Asia, Europe and Canada.
Mexico's first American Bowl, in 1994 in Mexico City, drew a league-record 112,376 in Aztec Stadium. On Monday night, Monterrey's 45,218-seat University Stadium was sold out.
The Chiefs were auditioning two kickers: Roman Anderson and Bjorn Nittmo, both formerly of the Canadian Football League. The Chiefs released last year's kicker, Lin Elliott, after he missed three field goals in a 10-7 playoff loss to the Indianapolis Colts.
In the first half, Anderson made both field goals he tried — from 19 and 29 yards — and an extra point. In the second half, Nittmo hit booming 50- and 48-yard field goals with room to spare.
The Chiefs took a 13-3 lead at halftime on a pair of field

Mid-City makes it to finals

Staff Report

HOMESTEAD, Fla. — Two more wins and the Midland Mid-City baseball team is in the Big League National Tournament.
Mid-City broke a 1-1 tie in the top half of the last inning to beat Augusta, Ga., 2-1 Monday and win the loser's bracket of the Southern Regional Big League Tournament. The team of 16-18 year olds will have to beat Miami Dade today and Wednesday to win the competition and play at Nationals, beginning Friday in Miami.
Mid-City plays Miami Dade at 7 p.m. today and 7 p.m. Wednesday if there is an "if" game. Dade beat Mid-City 5-3 Sunday to put the Midland team into the loser's bracket
Ross Nobles, who led off the seventh inning with a single, scored on a balk for the winning run. Mid-City's Keith Lant got the win in relief of Joey Schlaffer.
Lant got a double play to end the second inning after Augusta took a 1-0 lead. He struck out three and allowed two hits in 5 2/3 innings of work.
The Georgia team scored on three straight singles off Mid-City starter Schlaffer, who gave up only the one run on three hits.
Mid-City came back to tie the game in the fifth inning. With one out Joel Bermea reached on an error and John Butler singled him to third. He scored on Lant's sacrifice fly.
Mid-City took the lead when Nobles singled, Chad Villarreal was hit by a pitch and Nobles went to third on a throwing error by Augusta's left fielder. The Georgia pitcher then threw his balk trying to walk Butler.
Clay Johnston tripled for one of Mid-City's four hits.

1996 PGA CHAMPIONSHIP: VISITING VALHALLA

Heat turns club to Hades

■ Even Vijay Singh, regarded as hardest-working man in golf, could not withstand soaring temperatures in practice.

By Larry Dorman
N.Y. Times News Service

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Vijay Singh slumped in front of his locker at Valhalla Golf Club on Monday, the front of his shirt stuck to his stomach, sweat trickling down the side of his face. He had just gone 18 holes, but looked more like he had gone 10 rounds with Mike Tyson. There would be no extra work on the range Monday afternoon.
"Hot, very hot," said Singh, who is generally regarded as the hardest-working man in golf. "Some of the fairways are down in valleys, and the air isn't moving at all."
As golfers gather in Louisville early in the week to prepare for the PGA Championship that begins Thursday, there are two obstacles to overcome. The first is unfamiliarity with the golf course, which is making its debut as a major championship site. The second is the heat index, an oppressive combination of temperatures in the 90s and humidity in the same neighborhood.
"I don't know if it's going to be Memphis-hot," said Billy Andrade, referring to the annual Fed-Ex St. Jude sweat-fest, "but it'll be close."
Early reviews of the Jack Nicklaus-designed Valhalla course are more temperate. Designed in the early '80s and opened 10 years ago, the course has some sharp angles and severe slopes on the greens. As with most Nicklaus courses, the fairways are very generous and — in another Nicklaus leitmotif — the course sets up to favor high-ball-hitting faders.
"It's a lot like Muirfield Village and Glen Abbey," said Davis Love 3rd, referring to the sites of the Memorial tournament and Canadian Open, both Nicklaus courses. "I don't really think anybody will have much of an advantage here, since nobody has really played it."
One potential advantage for long-hitters has been eliminated. The seventh

Hernandez resolved to future in jail

By Janine Zuniga
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — A former Dallas policeman who put out a contract on Cowboys star Michael Irvin savored his fleeting independence surrounded by family and friends and resolved to a future behind bars.
Almost two dozen people descended on Johnnie Hernandez's home in the Dallas suburb of Cedar Hill on his last free night.
"We had dinner and discussions about old times, kind of like a Last Supper," said Hernandez, who was to surrender himself to officials at the Lew Sterrett Justice Center on Monday.
After pleading guilty last week to solicitation of capital murder and an unrelated bribery charge, Hernandez said he's ready to go to prison and accepts responsibility for his actions.
"I'm mentally prepared to do it," he said. "I'm the one who did it. I take full responsibility for what I did."
Hernandez, 28, was sentenced to two, six-year prison terms that he will serve simultaneously. With good behavior, the time could be shortened to about two years.
Hernandez claimed he was upset with Irvin because of alleged threats the Dallas receiver made against his girlfriend, Rachelle Smith, who testified against Irvin at his trial. She told the judge that Irvin provided drugs for several sex parties with topless dancers and that he threatened to harm her and Hernandez if she cooperated with prosecutors.
"I look back and I think, and people don't realize, I was a Dallas police offi-

Bulgarian, Russian first to fail drug test

By Stephen Wilson
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — A Bulgarian triple jumper and a Russian hurdler Monday became the first athletes caught using steroids at the Atlanta Games.
Meeting the morning after the games closed, the International Olympic Committee said Iva Prandzheva and Natalya Shekodanova tested positive for the banned performance-enhancing drugs.
The announcement came on the same day the IOC lifted the expulsions of the five athletes and two team officials involved in the use of the controversial drug bromantan.
An arbitration panel ruled Sunday there was no scientific proof that bromantan is a stimulant.
"We have canceled all the decisions effective immediately in view of the court ruling," IOC director general Francois Carrard said. "It was the logical step."
Carrard said Prandzheva, fourth-place finisher in the women's triple jump, tested positive for metadienone. She was disqualified and her results wiped off the books, he said.
Prandzheva was a silver medalist at the 1995 world outdoor and indoor championships. She finished first at the European indoor championships earlier this

Atlanta feels pretty good about itself after Games' end

By Marc Rice
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA — In perhaps the most dramatic testament to what the Olympics meant to Atlanta, this perpetually self-doubting city was feeling pretty darn good about itself Monday.
Notwithstanding a lukewarm review by the International Olympic Committee president, the assessment from the streets of Atlanta to the rooftop of the Chamber of Commerce was swift and unanimous: the Summer Games were the greatest ever.
"When we left Barcelona, we were quaking in our boots. How could we live up to that?" said former mayor Andrew Young. "And yet we did it our way. And I feel as good about our games as Barcelona did about theirs, as Seoul did about theirs and as Los Angeles did about theirs."
Distinguished by spectacular athletic performances and record-setting attendance, but plagued by a fatal bombing and criticized for tacky commercialism, the Atlanta Games failed to get the customary "greatest ever" nod Sunday night from IOC president Juan Antonio Samaranch at the closing ceremony.
"Most exceptional," was the way Samaranch described them, drawing a muted response from more than 83,000 people at Olympic Stadium.

Yoemans wins Goodwrench

Just three hours after a dust storm blew through Twins Cities Speedway Saturday Slick Yoemans created his own storm, winning the GM Goodwrench 100 Texas International Drivers Association Late Model Series race.

Defending series champion Yoeman's started on the pole after qualifying with a 13.948 time. Points leader Tommy Grimes qualified second and battled Yoeman's side by side for the first four laps. Grimes passed Yoemans and led the first two circuits, but retired after 56 laps with a rear axle problem.

Yoemans took control on lap three and led the way to the checkered flag. It was his 23rd TIDA win and his third of the season.

Midland's Jay Watson started fifth, but finished 4.34 seconds back of the winner. With his runner-up finish, Watson took over the championship points lead from Grimes by a mere point.

Sooner International Raceway in Altus, Okla., is the next stop for the TIDA Late Model Series on August.

Point standings and results from Saturday's TIDA race at Twin Cities:

Angels take 3-of-5 from Missions

Staff Report

SAN ANTONIO — The Angels may be seven games out of first place. But they took three of five games from first-place San Antonio with a 9-5 win Monday and face first-place El Paso for five games in Midland beginning tonight.

Chances for a run at the second half division title, with only 25 games left, remain remote. But Midland can at least have something to do with who wins the crown. It plays ten games against the division leaders in this the last month of the season.

Monday the Angels (19-28) pounded out 15 hits, including a 4-for-4 night from Aaron Guiel, and had a good starting performance from Phil Leftwich (1-0). Midland answered the Missions four-run eighth with three runs in the ninth to seal the win.

Leftwich joined the Angels after a demotion from Triple A Vancouver and gave up one run in six innings. But the Missions (26-21) scored four runs on one hit in the eighth to make the game close at 6-5.

In the ninth Greg Shockey had the only Angel hit that drove in more than one run with a single that plated Guiel and Jovino Carvajal. Carvajal had doubled to score David Davallilo earlier in the inning.

Midland led 5-0 after a three-run third inning. The Angels also scored two runs in the second. It was only the ninth time in the last 26 games the Angels played a contest decided by more than one run.

The loss dropped the Missions into a first-place tie with El Paso, which beat Wichita Monday 8-1. The Angels' Matt Beaumont will start today against the Diablos tonight at 7 p.m. at Christensen Stadium.

Report: California Angels manager will be fired as team hits tailspin

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Marcel Lachemann, whose team blew a 13-game division lead over Seattle last season and has gone into a tailspin again this year, reportedly will be fired as the California Angels' manager.

KCAL-TV in Los Angeles reported Monday night that Lachemann's dismissal is expected to be announced Tuesday.

Lachemann and Angels officials were flying back Monday night from Cooperstown, N.Y., where California had played to a 6-6 tie with the Montreal Expos in the annual Hall of Fame exhibition game. Lachemann would become the second manager let go this season; the other was his brother, Rene, who was dismissed by the Florida Marlins.

The Lachemanns were the first brothers to manage in the majors at the same time in this century.= The Angels are returning from a 1-5 road trip that included three lopsided losses at Detroit, which has baseball's worst record this season, and a 7-1 loss at Toronto on Sunday. That left California at 52-59, last in the AL West and 11 games behind division-leading Texas. Lachemann, 55, became the Angels manager on May 17 1994, when Buck Rodgers was fired. Lachemann, a former Angels pitching coach, had a 30-44 record that year and was 78-67 in 1995. After losing their big lead last year, the Angels came back to tie Seattle for the division title on the final day of the regular season, but lost a one-game playoff to the Mariners.

PGA: Heat descends upon Valhalla on first day of practice hole, a 605-yard par-5 that offered players the risky option of driving at an island fairway to the left or taking a conventional route to the right, has been altered to eliminate the perilous, but potentially rewarding, short cut. Where long-hitters would have had a chance to go for the green with a mid-iron second shot if they hit a precise tee shot, they now must take the long way home, all but eliminating eagle from the equation.

"It doesn't make any sense," Lee Janzen said of the change, which was ordered by the PGA of America. "I think a hole where you can make a three or a six is better than one where you can make a four or a five."

Nicklaus was, according to a Golf Digest article, "flabbergasted" when he was informed by PGA officials of the decision. Officials have said the decision was prompted by concerns over gallery flow and by the fact that growing the rough on the island fairway would severely limit a player's option if he missed the fairway.

Some critics have speculated that it was done to make the course play at least a shot harder, since the other par-5s are reachable.

It remains to be seen whether Valhalla is hard — there is some debate among the players on that score — but there is not any doubt that it is hotter than a two-dollar pistol. The controversy over the seventh should heat things up even more.

DALLAS: Kansas City rips Cowboys in exhibition contest goals and a touchdown pass from No. 2 quarterback Rich Gannon to running back Todd McNair.

With 58 seconds left in the half and the Chiefs on the Cowboys 23, Gannon hit McNair in the right flat. McNair romped into the end zone untouched. For the game, Gannon completed an impressive 10 of 11 for 143 yards.

Starting quarterback Steve Bono looked rusty during three series, finishing with four completions in 10 attempts and one interception by Cowboy safety Darren Woodson. But he led the Chiefs on a 71-yard drive for a field goal in the first quarter.

Aikman and Sanders lifted the Cowboys in the first quarter with a 62-yard bomb that showed — if there were any doubts — the speedy erstwhile cornerback is a deep threat.

Sanders beat left cornerback Darrer Anderson on a fly pattern, catching the ball in stride at the Chiefs' 40 and running another 29 yards.

Dallas has been looking to bolster its receiving corps since the NFL suspended Michael Irvin for five games after the star wideout pleaded no contest to a drug charge.

A chance for a touchdown was lost when running back Sherman Williams was stuffed for no gain on fourth down at the 2-yard line.

With star running back Emmitt Smith sidelined with a throat infection, the Cowboys' starting offense was stifled in the first half, managing only a field goal.

The Chiefs added two touchdowns in the fourth quarter.

The Chiefs, who last year had a league-best 13-3 record during the regular season, did not have the crowd on their side. The fans in this northern Mexican city clearly are in the camp of the Super Bowl champion Cowboys, known in these parts as the "Vaqueros."

The game gave Monterrey, celebrating its 400th anniversary this year, a chance to preen before nationwide audiences in both countries. ABC televised it in the United States and Television Azteca in Mexico.

Monterrey, with a metropolitan population of 3 million, is a leading exporter of steel, glass and cement and a poster city for the North American Free Trade Agreement. It has more in common with Texas, its citizens say, than Mexico City.

That makes Monterrey fertile ground for NFL promotion in a country where football is better known as a sport requiring a spherical ball and a netted goal.

"Hopefully, this can continue to grow," NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue told TV Azteca, "and maybe someday we'll have an expansion team here in Mexico."

JAIL: Hernandez spends final free day with family, friends

(From 1C)

cer and he still did what he did to Rachelle right after she testified at the grand jury, you know, strip searched her, had a wand checking for wire taps," he said.

Irvin's attorney has denied his client made any threats.

Hernandez said he holds no grudges against Irvin, who cut short his trial during Ms. Smith's testimony by pleading no contest to felony cocaine possession. Irvin was sentenced to four years' probation and also received a five-game suspension from the National Football League.

"I think he had a lot of problems, and I'm sure that he's going to do the right thing," Hernandez said. "I don't have anything against him. I'm not going to judge him, because I'm sure he was in a pretty stressful situation also."

But Hernandez said "believe me, yes" it seems ironic that he is the one going to prison, not Irvin.

Hernandez was arrested June 27 after giving an undercover drug agent posing as a hitman a $2,960 down payment on Irvin's murder. He resigned his police commission the same day.

Hernandez said he decided to plead guilty because he didn't want to put his family and friends through a lengthy, high-profile trial, even though he said many would have supported him.

"Everybody I talked to thought I could win the case," he said. "But the (district attorney) was fair with me. They gave me a deal I accepted. It was what I wanted to do."

Prosecutors have called Hernandez a corrupt cop who was paid to protect people he believed were drug dealers and planned a lucrative life with his underworld associates. They said he concocted the murder-for-hire plot so his activities wouldn't come to light during Irvin's drug trial.

Hernandez wouldn't discuss the allegations, but has labeled as absolutely not true "rumors and speculation" that he was involved in other misconduct, with other officers.

"My actions were my own. I alone am responsible," he said in a statement read by his lawyer after Friday's court appearance.

Defense attorney Frank Perez said there was a lot of speculation about his client, although Hernandez admits "he made some mistakes these past few months."

As for life after prison, Hernandez said he and Ms. Smith will start making marriage plans once he is free.

"I think if we're together through this, we're definitely going to stay together for that," he said. "What we went through together probably was the hardest thing that any couple would have to go through."

Crane tips over on stadium

PHOENIX (AP) — A 200-foot tall construction crane at Bank One Ballpark tipped and fell to the ground Monday, raising a huge cloud of dust but causing no injuries, authorities said.

The crane was being used for work on the stadium's north side when something caused it to tip, fire officials and witnesses said.

"All of a sudden I could see it coming down. I said to the driver that I thought it was coming down too fast. By the time the driver looked up, it had already hit the ground. All we saw was a big cloud of dust," said Alex Chavez, a street cleaner.

The cab of the crane was only about 15 feet off the ground when the crane fell about 1:45 p.m. It glanced off a vehicle but it apparently did not hit the stadium as it fell. The operator escaped without injury.

"It's miraculous with the number of people working that nobody got hurt," said Bob Khan, a fire department spokesman.

The cab's placement near the caterpillar-style wheels of the crane saved the operator's life, said firefighter Matt Roberts.

"If there's any place where the cab could be placed for this kind of accident, that's where it would be," Roberts said.

Workers were preparing the crane to remove one of the hydraulic jacks form the stadium's northwest support tower when it went over, said Bob Crawford, media relations manager for the Arizona DiamondBacks.

"We got off pretty lucky. The key thing is nobody got hurt. The fact that is missed the building is secondary," Crawford said.

Crawford could not immediately say whether the accident would delay construction on the stadium, and there was no immediate word on what caused the crane to fall.

The most immediate concern was the 70 gallons of diesel fuel that spilled, Khan said. Firefighters were mixing it with 2,000 gallons of water and treating it as a biohazard situation.

The $335 million stadium will be home to the Arizona Diamondbacks when the expansion team begins play in 1998. It will have a retractable roof, air conditioning and a natural grass playing field.

Lemieux rules out World Cup

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Mario Lemieux, still undecided about returning to the Pittsburgh Penguins, has ruled out playing for Canada in the World Cup.

"In no way should this be construed as a signal that I will not be playing for the Penguins this year," Lemieux said Monday. "I still need a little more time to decide."

Lemieux, 30, returned last season after sitting out the 1994-95 season to recover from chemotherapy for Hodgkin's disease and to rest his back. If he stays away, he will forego a contract worth nearly $11 million.

Penguins owner Howard Baldwin said he expected to make an announcement about Lemieux this month and was optimistic he will return. Lemieux led the NHL in scoring last season with 161 points on 69 goals and 92 assists.

Canada opens the World Cup against Russia on Aug. 29 at Vancouver, British Columbia.

Tech's Thomas to start for Miami

■ Dolphins release Jack Del Rio in favor of rookie, who won middle linebacker position; Del Rio retires.

Associated Press

Jimmy Johnson has added and subtracted players all his career, but the new coach of the Miami Dolphins says veteran Jack Del Rio is different.

Johnson on Monday released Del Rio, a 33-year-old linebacker who has played for five teams in his career, the last four with Minnesota.

Camps Roundup

"Jack is a true professional. He's intelligent, a competitor and a team player," Johnson said, calling the decision his most difficult ever.

Del Rio became expendable because rookie Zach Thomas has been exceptional. Thomas had eight tackles in last week's 13-10 exhibition victory against Tampa Bay and on Monday was named the Dolphins' starting middle linebacker.

"The bottom line is that Zach Thomas was making plays," Johnson said. "He has quickness, he's an instinctive player, and he makes plays."

Del Rio announced his retirement later in the afternoon.

"I'm not going to move my family around the country anymore," he said.

Thomas, a fifth-round draft pick from Texas Tech, is small at 5-foot-11 and 231 pounds, but he's quick and gets in position to make plays.

"I came in with one goal, and that was to play my best and work hard," Thomas said. "I came in to do a job, and I still have to stay motivated because I really haven't done anything yet. We've only had one preseason game."

Thomas said he found out about Del Rio's release Sunday night after a team meeting and was shocked by the news.

"He taught me a lot in the short time that he was here," Thomas said. "I learned a lot from him. I'm shocked because you never know who's coming and who's going in this league."

Del Rio has played 11 seasons. He joined the Dolphins as a free agent after spending the previous four years in Minnesota. He was in his second tour with Johnson after playing for the coach from 1989-91 at Dallas.

Del Rio said he understood the decision and expressed no hard feelings toward his former coach.

"I came in and played hard and I thought I competed well," Del Rio said. "I appreciate having one last shot at giving all I had."

Buccaneers

Errict Rhett's training camp holdout is on again.

Tampa Bay's third-year running back was a no-show for practice Monday, resuming a walkout he supposedly ended Friday. Rhett wants a long-term deal worth $3 million per year, including a hefty signing bonus.

The Bucs, who offered a six-year package averaging about $2.3 million annually before camp began last month, are now insisting the two-time, 1,000-yard rusher play under the terms of his current, $336,000 contract.

"For me, enough was enough the first day of camp," Bucs coach Tony Dungy said. "I'm very supportive of Errict, but it's kind of like it's not relevant. We really have to focus on the guys who are here."

Giants

Dave Brown is out as the New York Giants' starting quarterback, at least for this weekend's game against the Baltimore Ravens.

Coach Dan Reeves said Tommy Maddox and Stan White will see most of the action and Brown won't even play because Reeves doesn't want him working with the second team. Maddox and White are battling for a roster spot.

Maddox, a former first-round draft choice of Reeves when he was coaching the Denver Broncos, completed 9 of 13 passes for 118 yards in the Giants' 24-17 victory against Jacksonville. Brown was 9 of 15 for 93 yards.

Ravens

Rookie Jermaine Lewis, who returned a punt 75 yards for a touchdown on Saturday against Philadelphia, missed practice Monday with a sore groin. He said he was hurt when tackled earlier in Baltimore's 17-9 victory.

Lewis, who also fumbled a punt and dropped a pass in his first professional action, said the touchdown gave him a confidence boost, but, "I still know I've got a lot of work to do."

Steelers

Dermontti Dawson, a Pro Bowl center four times, doesn't want to be called the league's best center, even if the experts think the title fits.

"I don't like it when people put that in a magazine," Dawson said. "What's happened in the past is in the past. I'm one year older, and each season you have to start over and work like it's your first year."

For Dawson, that's meant playing 120 straight games, the last 116 as a starter, and proving year in and year out that he is one of the best.

Meanwhile, cornerback Alvoid Mays left camp. Mays started six games last season and played in 13 following cornerback Rod Woodson's knee injury.

Broncos

It looks like the transition from Kutztown University to the NFL will be an easy one for John Mobley, already a starting linebacker for Denver.

"We thought we knew what type of athlete we got when we signed him," coach Mike Shanahan said after Mobley was credited with 10 tackles, two passes defended and a sack in Denver's 20-17 win over San Francisco.

"I really think he's the type of person who can have an impact on this football team," the coach said. "His awareness and athletic ability were demonstrated yesterday, but his maturity level and the way he handles himself is very impressive as well."

Quarterback queries linger for Pittsburgh

■ Team's inability to replace O'Donnell has fans wondering if Steelers can make it back to Super Bowl.

By Timothy W. Smith
N.Y. Times News Service

LATROBE, Pa. — With under five minutes to play in last season's Super Bowl, the Pittsburgh Steelers were in the driver's seat, marching down the field for the go-ahead touchdown. The quarterback in that game, Neil O'Donnell, threw an interception that snuffed the drive and the Dallas Cowboys won, 27-17.

But Steelers Coach Bill Cowher will not allow himself to harbor negative thoughts about the loss.

"When I think about the Super Bowl, I think of a wonderful season that ended with a game that typified our season — we were down and fought back," Cowher said. "I talk about it as a positive experience. That, to me, is why you want to go back. It was within our grasps. There are a lot of players on this team that were there a year ago that I believe are using that as the impetus for this season."

The players who have left the team, however, particularly O'Donnell, have many football fans wondering whether the Steelers can make another run at the Super Bowl. O'Donnell, the Steelers' starter for four years, bolted to the Jets for a $25 million free-agent contract.

Besides O'Donnell, the Steelers lost three other starters. Tackle Leon Searcy went to Jacksonville as a free agent, linebacker Kevin Greene went to Carolina as a free agent and running back Bam Morris was suspended for violating the league's substance-abuse policy.

Pittsburgh did an admirable job finding replacements for everyone except O'Donnell. The Steelers signed the Pro Bowl tackle Will Wolford and traded for the Pro Bowl running back Jerome Bettis. They added depth to the offensive line by signing the free-agent guard Bernard Dafney and drafting tackle Jamain Stephens in the first round. But they didn't sign a veteran to replace O'Donnell.

Instead they decided to go with the 12-year veteran Mike Tomczak, last year's backup, the third-year man Jim Miller and Kordell Stewart, who electrified the team as a rookie last year and earned the nickname Slash with his exploits as a quarterback/receiver/running back.

Unless one of the three quarterback candidates emerges as a strong, consistent force to guide the Steelers' offense, Pittsburgh's Super Bowl chances may be slim.

If Cowher is worried about the departure of O'Donnell, Greene, Searcy and Morris, his demeanor doesn't show it. He sounds confident that the Steelers will survive those losses, just as they survived last season after losing cornerback Rod Woodson with a knee injury, the veteran kicker Gary Anderson and tight end Eric Green to free agency and the maverick running back Barry Foster in a trade to Carolina.

"There's a good nucleus still there," Cowher said. "Guys like John Jackson, Dermontti Dawson, Justin Strzelczyk, Yancey Thigpen, Ernie Mills. You've got a lot of solid people that have been here. We try to keep a large nucleus together, which we've been able to do. When you have new people come in, that makes it a lot easier to blend in and accept."

However, it's the quarterback question that looms over the Steelers' preseason like a gathering storm cloud. Cowher, who must make a decision before the Steelers' final preseason game Aug. 23, said he would not rush a decision and contended that all three players are in the running right now.

Houston issues ultimatum to holdout linebacker Barrow

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The Houston Oilers sent holdout linebacker Micheal Barrow a five-day letter Monday, meaning if he does not report to the team by Friday he will be ineligible for the Sept. 1 regular-season opener against the Kansas City Chiefs.

Under the league's collective bargaining agreement with the players, the letter is for players with less than four years' experience who do not have signed contracts.

Barrow, beginning his fourth season, has rejected a $765,000 one-year offer and also balked at several multiyear deals.

According to NFL rules, Barrow will be ineligible for one game for each preseason game he misses starting with the second game.

General manager Floyd Reese said he would rather handle the matter differently, but it is mandated by NFL rules.

■ Oilers Notebook

IN DEFENSE OF JOHN HENRY: With Micheal Barrow absent and Lemanski Hall out with a groin pull, the Oilers likely will start John Henry Mills at right outside linebacker in Thursday night's scrimmage with the Dallas Cowboys in El Paso and Saturday night against the Indianapolis Colts in Houston.

It will be a crash course for Mills, the fourth-year pro who has played tight end, H-Back, fullback and slot receiver and been a demon on special teams. He moved to defense in the spring.

"Until the spring he had never played defense in his life," Oilers coach Jeff Fisher said. "He's shown us instincts you don't usually see out of guys who have never played defense. He was always an offensive player with a defensive mentality."

BACK TO WORK: Linebacker Terry Killeens and running back Ronnie Harmon returned to limited practice. Both have been sidelined with hamstring strains.

Everett finds fountain of youth

By Mary Foster
AP Sports Writer

LA CROSSE, Wis. — Jim Everett finds it hard to believe he's entering his 11th year in the NFL. Being 33 years old is something of a surprise, too.

"Sometimes I even wonder why they invented a calendar to judge who's old and who's young," he said.

"I feel like I'm just coming into my prime. I feel physically as good as I ever have, and mentally I'm on top of what I'm doing. I'm running an offense that I've run for a couple of years and I feel good about what we can do."

In his second year with the Saints, Everett set team records for yards (3,970) and had a quarterback rating of 87. He threw 26 touchdowns against 14 interceptions last season and became the unquestioned leader of New Orleans' offense.

Records won't satisfy Everett this season unless they're coupled with victories. Although he's shaken off the anger from Los Angeles, where he was benched and pronounced washed up before being traded to the Saints for a seventh-round pick, Everett has not led a team to a winning season since taking the Rams to the 1989 NFC championship game.

"I expect a lot from this team this year," Everett said. "There's going to have to be some real internal fortitude from everyone to make this happen. But it can. We've got some talented individuals."

This season, Everett will work without his two favorite receivers. Quinn Early and tight end Wesley Walls were lost to free agency.

General manager Bill Kuharich publicly challenged Michael Haynes, Torrance Small and Lee DeRamus to step up their production after Early and Walls departed.

Haynes, who was acquired from Atlanta to bring speed to the receiving corps, had 41 receptions for 597 yards and four touchdowns last season. Small had 38 catches for 461 yards and five touchdowns. DeRamus spent most of the year rehabilitating a broken leg that forced him to sit out his senior year at Wisconsin.

Walls was replaced by Paul Green, who played for Seattle in 1992-94 and caught 62 passes for 453 yards and three touchdowns during that period. He did not play last year.

This year, he broke three ribs early in training camp and just returned to practice Sunday.

Tight end Irv Smith, a four-year veteran who had 45 receptions last year, has the most catches of any returning veteran.

"This whole offense is new, but I'm looking to be a very stable player when things change and understand that the ball's going to go to different people and we're going to be a little different system," Everett said. "But I can't be paranoid about it. I just want to get my job done and get it done well."

Everett, whose 32 consecutive starts is third longest among NFL quarterbacks, was sacked only 27 times last year. This year he still has All-Pro William Roaf and solid veteran Jim Dombrowski on the left side, but will have untested players at center and on the right side of the line.

Meantime, despite throwing interceptions in each of the first two exhibition games, Everett is having an excellent camp, his best since joining the Saints, coach Jim Mora said.

"I feel very efficient. The first two weeks I didn't throw an interception in practice," Everett said. "I like the things we're working on. Sure, we have things that we aren't quite sure about now, but I like the attitude here. I feel like we have a chance to make the Super Bowl a home game this year."

Braves return to Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — Mark Wohlers spent almost three weeks away from his pregnant wife. Traveling secretary Bill Acree ran out of meal money ($60.50 per player per day). An injured and restless Jeff Blauser bemoaned missing the Olympics.

On Tuesday night, for the first time since July 16, following a 20-day trip covering 6,493 miles and costing approximately $330,000, the Atlanta Braves finally get to take the field at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium.

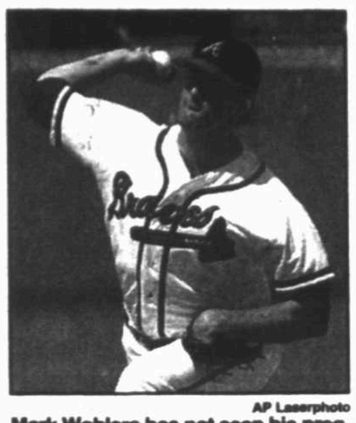
And unlike former Braves pitcher Pascual Perez, they shouldn't have any trouble finding the place for their game against Philadelphia.

"We've been gone for 17 games, which is little abnormal," said center fielder Marquis Grissom, who batted .329 with four homers during that stretch. "But it's nothing to cry about, and it shouldn't even be exaggerated as a long road trip. It would be a lot longer if we were 5-12."

The Braves were 9-8 on the trip, averaged 3.8 runs and homered in each of the first 12 games. They had a .247 team batting average and a 3.23 ERA, while their lead in the NL East shrunk from nine games to seven over the Montreal Expos.

"You have to give these guys credit for turning what was not a very good road trip into a decent road trip by winning two out of three these last two series," pitcher Tom Glavine said. "That was big for us."

Long road trips are nothing new to Grissom. He was playing for the Expos when a 55-foot concrete beam fell from the side of Olympic Stadium and forced them on the road for the final 26 games of the 1991 season.



AP Laserphoto

Mark Wohlers has not seen his pregnant wife in three weeks.

"That wasn't any problem, either," Grissom said. "We came together as a ballclub on that trip and we played well, which was the most important thing.

"It's the same scenario here. There are no excuses. Some people might get tired being on the road, but I just accept it as part of my job. I came to play baseball, whether it was 18 games, 20 games or 30 games."

Blauser, who is out for at least another five weeks with a broken left hand, joined the trip on July 27 at San Francisco.

"It was still long," the shortstop said. "The time that I was home I waited the whole day to watch the game, and a lot of times I had a hard time staying awake through the whole game.

"When you're playing, it takes up every waking hour, and it gets old, just sitting around. There's only so many rallying cries you can do before you finally get tired of it after awhile."

The Braves, who play 15 of their next 19 at home, were extended to extra innings only twice during their excursion through Houston, St. Louis, San Francisco, San Diego and Los Angeles.

One of those games was an 18-inning, 5-3 victory last Saturday at Dodger Stadium, which matched the franchise's fourth-longest game since it left Milwaukee for Atlanta in 1966.

"The length of the trip hasn't been bad, as far as the cities we've gone to," said Wohlers, who had seven saves. "It could have been worse. It could have been zig-zagging across the country, so from that aspect, we've been kind of fortunate.

"There's been so much talk about this trip all year long. But we've dealt with it, it's over with, and now we can just play like everybody else."

Like the Braves, the Dodgers were on the road for 13 games in 1984 while Los Angeles staged the Olympics. They went 7-6, were shut out three times and played four extra-inning games, winning three of them.

"What do I remember? That I was glad I was out of town," said Dodgers manager-turned-vice president Tom Lasorda. "It was pretty hectic around here. I'll bet the Braves feel pretty good about not being there."

Not Blauser, who would have liked to attend some Olympic events.

"I've lived in Atlanta for about eight years and I consider myself an Atlantan now, so I was happy for the city," he said. "But I just don't think it would have been very feasible for us to have been there at the same time. And I think, for the most part, the guys are glad that we were out of town."

Former Midland Angel Jorge Fabregas, now a catcher with the big league club, studies the plaques of some of the Baseball Hall of Fame members Monday before the Hall of Fame game.

Past meets present at Hall of Fame

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — Jorge Fabregas eyed the plaque of Joe DiMaggio. Rick Burleson studied pictures of Connie Mack Stadium. Moises Alou imitated the high leg kick of Juan Marichal.

Baseball's past met its present Monday when the California Angels and Montreal Expos toured the Hall of Fame before their exhibition game. A few players came with cameras, some bought souvenirs and many seemed to leave with a greater appreciation of the sport they play for a living.

"You see the names, the exhibits, the history, and it makes you kind of think of what it's all about," Angels pitcher Dennis Springer said. "It's a place I'd always wanted to see, but I never thought I'd make it, especially not while I was playing."

Former Negro Leaguer Buck O'Neil, now a member of the Hall's Veterans Committee, was at the door to greet the teams. Later, before the players, coaches and managers watched a short film, he told them, "You've got a chance to be here one day."

After that, the Expos and Angels wandered at their leisure through the shrine for 90 minutes, mixing and mingling with regular folks while becoming fans themselves. Aside from Mark Langston, Jim Abbott and a couple of others, they walked around unnoticed.

Abbott made sure he spotted the ball from the no-hitter he pitched with the New York Yankees. Alou made sure he found a display featuring the hat he wore when he won the 1994 All-Star game with a 10th-inning double. He also ran into Rex Hudler in the room where the 228 Hall plaques are displayed, and listened as the California cutup stood in front of Phil Rizzuto's bronze bust and did his best "Holy Cow!"

"For us, it's a chance to see a lot of things you never knew about the game," Alou said. "My father has told me about a lot of these players, like Juan Marichal, but I never saw them."

In the past, teams making the quick trip to Cooperstown for the annual Hall of Fame game didn't get much time to look around. Last summer, Detroit shortstop Alan Trammell ran the three blocks along Main Street from Doubleday Field to the shrine — in uniform — for a half-hour visit.

This year, though, the Angels and Expos arranged longer stays. In fact, a group of eight Angels, including Jim Edmonds and Chili Davis, came to town Sunday night for a special one-hour lookaround.

The Angels, who spent the night about an hour away in Utica, and Expos both were to leave the central New York village right after the game. California is heading home and Montreal is going to Houston.

"This is something we really wanted to do," Expos general manager Jim Beattie said.

The visit came a day after new Hall members Earl Weaver, Jim Bunning, Bill Foster and Ned Hanlon were inducted. A couple of players asked Hall officials where they could see the newest plaques.

Infielders Jack Howell of the Angels and Mark Grudzielanek were surprised by some things they saw.

Howell looked at the beat-up catcher's mitt worn by Ernie Lombardi in 1938 and joked to an older teammate, "Hey, they got your rookie ball glove in here."

Later, Howell strolled with Burleson, an Angels coach, through an exhibit of ballparks that are long gone. Burleson pointed out parts of Connie Mack Stadium in Philadelphia to the younger player and also showed Howell how Crosley Field in Cincinnati had a terrace in left field that sloped uphill.

"They didn't really play on that, did they?" Howell said.

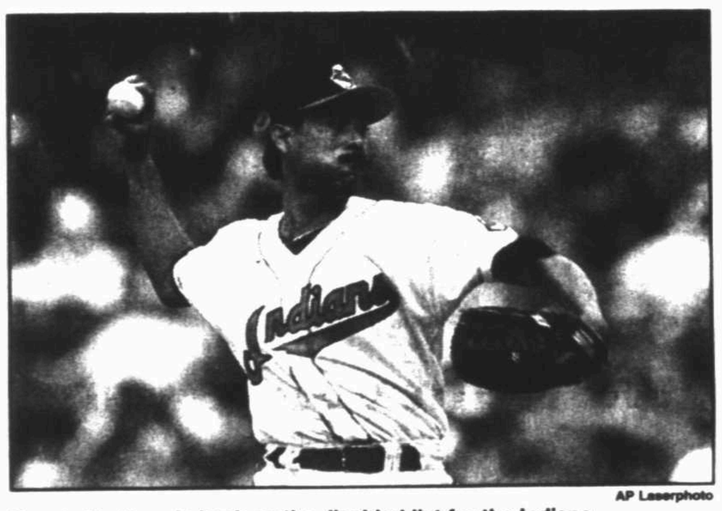
Grudzielanek and his teammates got a laugh looking at old uniforms. There were the flannels of the 1942 St. Louis Browns — "how hot were those?" they asked, incredulously — and a picture of the short pants the Chicago White Sox briefly tried in the mid-1970s.

"There is no way they wore those," one player said, doing a double-take. "How could you slide in them?"

Fabregas, the California catcher, searched until he found the plaques of DiMaggio and Reggie Jackson, plus the one honoring Angels coach Rod Carew.

"I was a big Yankees fan growing up, so I wasn't going to miss DiMaggio and Reggie," he said. "This place is awesome. To see some of the players you've read about and seen movies of, it is amazing."

Cleveland's Martinez back on disabled list



AP Laserphoto

Dennis Martinez is back on the disabled list for the Indians.

CLEVELAND (AP) — Dennis Martinez shook his head and put on his warmup jacket, which meant warmups were over.

Martinez, his elbow scarred and aching from all these years of pitching, is back on the disabled list. His only two stints on the DL since 1986 have come in the last month.

This time, Martinez has a strained elbow tendon. He was scratched from his start for the Cleveland Indians on Sunday when he warmed up and said he couldn't pitch. It was only Martinez's third start since coming off the disabled list.

"I really believe he'll be OK," manager Mike Hargrove said. "This is one of those better-safe-than-sorry moves."

Texas' lead to one after 15-5 loss

■ AL Roundup

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Wilson Alvarez won his 12th game in his last 17 starts and Robin Ventura hit a three-run homer Monday night to power the Chicago White Sox to a 15-5 win over the Texas Rangers.

Alvarez (14-5) won his fourth straight decision, surviving a fourth-inning grand slam by Kevin Elster as the White Sox won three games of the four-game series.

The left-hander gave up five runs and eight hits in 6 2-3 innings, striking out four and walking four.

The White Sox finished the season 8-4 against the Rangers.

Texas, which has lost five of its last eight, now leads the AL West by just one game over Seattle, which was idle Monday.

Brewers 13, A's 3

OAKLAND, Calif. — Mike Matheny hit a grand slam and four other Brewers also homered as Milwaukee did its best imitation of Oakland's Bash Brothers in a victory against the Athletics.

Mark McGwire and Terry Steinbach picked up on the theme for Oakland, too, McGwire with his major league-high 39th homer and Steinbach with his 27th, but the A's were otherwise stymied.

Red Sox 3, Blue Jays 1

BOSTON— Tim Wakefield pitched a six-hitter for his third complete game and Boston scored three unearned runs off Juan Guzman. Darren Bragg went 2-for-3 with the only RBI for Boston.

Wakefield (9-10) retired the first 10 batters and had a two-hit shutout until the seventh inning, when John Olerud's solo homer was followed by consecutive singles.

Orioles 13, Indians 10

CLEVELAND — Chris Hoiles homered and drove in four runs and David Wells beat the team he was almost traded to.

The Orioles, who saw Cleveland score 11 runs in the eighth against them on Sunday, put up four in the seventh and six in the eighth to break a 3-3 tie.

Baltimore then survived a six-run rally by the Indians in the ninth to split the four-game series.

Yankees 5, Royals 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Jimmy Key won for the seventh time in nine decisions and Derek Jeter had four hits for New York.

Key (9-8) gave up two runs — one earned — in six innings, struck out three and walked two.

Key came out after his left index finger became irritated. Mariano Rivera pitched two innings and John Wetteland finished for his 38th save in 41 chances.

Wade Boggs, in a 2-for-20 slump, had a pinch-single with one out in the seventh and the score 2-2. Jeter singled Boggs to third and Joe Girardi drove in the go-ahead with a safety squeeze bunt to the first-base side.

Angels beat Expos in shrine's game

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — This home run thing is getting so out of whack that now even the coaches are hitting them.

California bullpen catcher Mick Billmeyer stepped to the plate for the first time in three seasons and launched a drive over the right-field seats, one of a record 10 home runs Monday as the Angels and Montreal Expos played to a 6-6 tie in the Hall of Fame exhibition game.

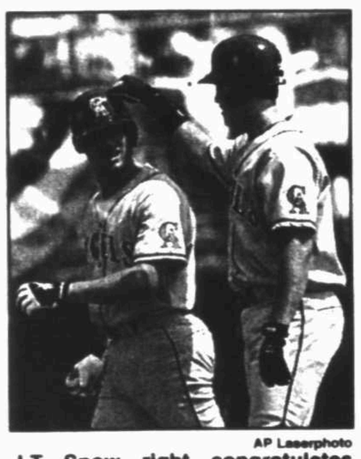
"I'm saying to the guys, 'It ain't that hard,'" Billmeyer said with a wide smile.

Henry Rodriguez and Sherman Obando hit consecutive home runs for Montreal, and Tim Spehr's solo shot in the ninth tied it for the Expos. George Arias and Randy Velarde hit consecutive homers for California as both teams took advantage of the cozy configuration at Doubleday Field.

In this year of offense, the outburst in the 50th annual Hall game was no surprise, especially since the park is a generous 296 feet to left field, just 336 to the trees overlooking the alley and 312 to right. The previous record for homers in Cooperstown was nine by Texas and San Diego in 1979.

The game was called after nine innings because the teams had flights to catch.

Billmeyer was told before the game by manager Marcel Lachemann that he might get an at-bat. He got his chance in the eighth, and hit a two-run shot off minor leaguer Shayne Bennett that gave the Angels a 6-5 lead.



AP Laserphoto

J.T. Snow, right, congratulates George Arias after Arias hit a home run in the Hall of Fame Game. Both are former Midland Angels.

Billmeyer, 32, is in his third year on the Angels' staff. Popular with the players, the former catcher played nine years in the minors with the California, Baltimore and Texas systems, hitting .250 lifetime with 29 home runs.

Told to hit for Don Slaught, who homered earlier, Billmeyer grabbed Garret Anderson's bat and fouled off three straight fastballs before connecting. He took a protracted trot around the bases, kidding with a couple of Expos along the way, and got a big greeting when he arrived at home plate.

"The first one he threw, it felt like he was throwing 100 miles an hour because I hadn't hit in three years," Billmeyer said.

But a few pitches later, Billmeyer gave his eight family members in attendance a moment to remember.

"See, that home run contest they had, I should've been in that," he said.

Billmeyer actually pitched in the pregame derby, won by California's Jack Howell, and the homers continued once the Expos and Angels took the field.

Ryan McGwire, Dave Silvestri and Yamil Benitez also homered for Montreal. Rex Hudler was the biggest hit with the sellout crowd of 9,971, throwing several balls into the stands, talking nonstop with the fans in center field and waving his helmet after hitting a triple in the eighth.

Two batters later, No. 57, not even listed in the scorecard, came up and cleared the bleachers.

Benes wins eighth straight for Pads

■ NL Roundup

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS— Andy Benes won his eighth straight decision, overcoming Greg Vaughn's first National League homer as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the San Diego Padres 8-2 Monday night.

Benes (11-8), pitching on three days' rest for the first time this season, allowed two runs and four hits in 6 2-3 innings. He became the first St. Louis pitcher to win eight straight since John Tudor won 11 in a row in 1985.

Danny Jackson, making his first appearance since breaking his right ankle last Aug. 11, pitched a perfect ninth.

Cubs 7, Mets 3

CHICAGO (AP) — Mark Grace and Sammy Sosa hit back-to-back homers and Steve Trachsel reached 10 wins for the first time in his career.

Trachsel (10-6) allowed four hits in 7 1-3 innings, including Alvaro Espinoza's first homer as a Met and Todd Hundley's 34th, to win his third straight decision. He also doubled in the go-ahead run in the second inning.

Grace led off the third with just his fourth homer of the season and first since May 11. Sosa then followed with his NL-leading 38th, a liner to left off Paul Wilson (4-7) that made it 4-1. It was Sosa's sixth homer this season against the Mets.

Trachsel's two-out double in the second scored Scott Servais, who'd reached on New York's major league-leading 113th error of the season.

Phillies 3, Pirates 0

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Curt Schilling pitched a four-hitter for his first shutout in three years, and Benito Santiago hit his career-high 19th homer.

Schilling (5-4), who started the season on the disabled list after arthroscopic surgery on his right shoulder last August, struck out a season-high 10 and walked two in his seventh career shutout, his first since a five-hitter against the Los Angeles Dodgers on April 23, 1993.

Schilling, making his 16th start of the season, pitched his second complete game this year and the 11th of his career.

Denny Neagle (12-5) allowed all three runs and nine hits in 6 1-3 innings.

Marlins 16, Rockies 9

DENVER— Gary Sheffield drove in four runs with a pair of homers that raised his total to 31, and Devon White had four hits as the Marlins scored their most runs this season.

White doubled three times to tie a team record and had three RBIs, Jeff Conine hit his 20th homer as the Marlins out-hit Colorado 22-11.

ATP Championship honors Edberg

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Stefan Edberg and Todd Martin were both winners Monday night.

Edberg, making his farewell tour before his retirement from pro tennis, was honored at the ATP Championship with gifts, a standing ovation and a surprise rendition of the Swedish national anthem.

Martin, playing his first match since being upset in the semifinals at Wimbledon, easily battled his way into the second round of the hardcourt tournament, defeating fellow American Michael Joyce 6-0, 6-4.

Edberg received a painting of himself and $15,000 in checks for a foundation he has established with $300,000 of his own money to provide tennis education for teenagers in his native Sweden.

Edberg, 30, plays the opening match of his final ATP Championship tournament today against Stefano Pescosolido. Edberg has played the tournament 14 consecutive years, winning twice and reaching the final six times.

AP Laserphoto

Thomas Enqvist of Sweden, above, beats Byron Black of Zimbabwe.

He has already received gifts including golf clubs, golf bag, surfboard and a Caribbean cruise on his farewell tour. But he said seeing his fans for the last time — and raising money for his Stefan Edberg Foundation — are what makes it special.

"It is giving people a chance to come out and see you play and say goodbye. That's what it's all about," he said.

Martin, seeded 12th in the tournament and ranked 15th in the world, took almost a month off after Wimbledon, where he lost to MaliVai Washington. Martin said the rest revived him, but he still hasn't forgotten losing at Wimbledon after having led Washington early in their match.

"I'm not satisfied at all with what happened at Wimbledon, but I took away some things I can learn from it ... Mal took his game up to another level," Martin said. "It's very humbling to know the game can get the best of you like that."

Thomas Enqvist, knocked out in the quarterfinals of the Olympics, routed Zimbabwe's Byron Black 6-1, 6-2, earlier Monday.

Enqvist, seeded 10th and ranked 12th in the world, won the first five games and surged through the first set in 21 minutes.

The Swede had missed two weeks prior to the Olympics with an inflamed left foot.

Jason Stoltenberg, the tournament's No. 16 seed, beat Jim Grabb 6-4, 7-6 (7-2).

In the afternoon, Daniel Vasek of the Czech Republic beat Alex Corretja of Spain 6-4, 6-4.

Also, Vincent Spadea of Boca Raton, Fla., beat Hicham Arazi of Morocco 6-3, 6-1; Bernd Karbacher of Germany defeated Jacco Eltingh of the Netherlands 6-2, 6-4; Greg Rusedski of England downed Kenneth Carlsen on Denmark 7-6 (7-4) 6-2; Chris Woodruff of Knoxville, Tenn., took Andrei Chesnokov of Russia 4-6, 7-6 (7-0) 6-1; and Tim Henman of England eased past Jan Siemerink of the Netherlands 6-3, 6-2.

Citadel football coach Charlie Taafe was suspended Monday after his second driving under the influence arrest in three years.

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Citadel football coach Charlie Taaffe was suspended for the season Monday after his second drunken-driven arrest in three years.

Athletic director Walt Nadzak said Taaffe will teach in the physical education department while assistant coach Don Powers runs the team.

"Coach Taaffe will not coach the football team this season," Nadzak said. "We will evaluate things at the appropriate time."

Nadzak, a close friend of Taaffe who hired the coach almost 10 years ago at the state military college, fought back tears as he made the announcement.

"Our coaches in all sports are held to a higher degree of responsibility and a higher standard of behavior," he said.

Taaffe, was arrested July 27 and charged with driving under the influence after allegedly running a red light in Mount Pleasant. He was acquitted of a DUI charge after he was stopped on Interstate 26 in 1993.

Powers, the defensive coordinator and Taaffe's assistant for eight seasons, was appointed acting head coach. Nadzak will serve as director of football operations, overseeing the football staff.

Taaife, 55-41-1 with one Southern Conference championship in nine seasons at The Citadel, is the winningest coach in school history. The Citadel, which went 2-9 last season, opens Sept. 7 at Miami.

Taaffe's lawyer, Akim Anastopoulo, said neither he nor Taaffe had seen anything in writing about The Citadel decision.

"We're obviously disappointed by The Citadel's announcement," he said. "Our position is Charlie wants to coach football, he has a contract to coach football and that is what he wants to do."

He said there has been no decision whether Taaffe might sue to get his job back.

"We have requested more specifics on what The Citadel plans to do and we will evaluate those options at the time," he said.

AP Laserphoto

Citadel defensive assistant head coach Don Powers will replace Taaffe on the sidelines for now.

Nadzak said he told Taaffe about the decision Thursday. Taaffe did not return a telephone message seeking comment.

He recorded a 0.09 percent blood-alcohol level on a breath test, according to a police report from last month's arrest.

Someone with a blood-alcohol level of more than 0.10 percent may be inferred to be under the influence under state law.

Powers said he had mixed emotions about taking the head coaching job but said his first responsibility was to the players.

"Basically they're shocked," tight end George Hampton said of his teammates. "We don't want to lose him. He's a great coach and a great man. But he's also human; you can't fault him."

Edinburg coach on sidelines after reassignment

■ School official silent on reasons behind decision.

By Linda Freidlieb
The McAllen Monitor

EDINBURG — When the Edinburg High School Bobcats start a new season of practices and games Wednesday, Joe Vasquez will merely be an observer after over two decades of pacing the sidelines and yelling instructions to his players.

Vasquez will start the school year as the dean of students at the Edinburg school district's sixth grade campus. It is not a change of scenery the longtime coach sought or wanted.

Vasquez, the school's former head football coach, was reassigned to his new position on July 26 — one day after a long and emotional executive session board meeting which dealt with complaints made against the coach. It was a move that stunned Vasquez and his supporters. After 27 years of working for the school district, Vasquez will have to adjust to academic life that does not include football.

"I feel so sorry for him because he hasn't done anything," said Mary Jane Vasquez, the coach's wife and a teacher at Edinburg's Canterbury Elementary School. "Think about it. If he had done something really bad, they wouldn't have put him on another campus."

What prompted the sudden reassignment remains shrouded in secrecy. Superintendent Douglas Moore — the school official who reassigned Vasquez — has declined to comment on the move, saying the matter is a personnel issue. Vasquez's transfer appears to have come after a complaint was lodged by Edinburg businessman Richard Ruiz, who is the parent of an Edinburg High School student.

District administrators will not discuss the contents of Ruiz's complaint or release the complaint. All the parties involved are forbidden to discuss what was said behind the closed doors of the executive session board meeting.

"I don't have any comment because I don't think it's going to help the situation at all," Moore said.

Regardless of the complaint, members of Vasquez's family say he has been treated horribly by the district he served loyally for so long. They say he was given the impression he would retain the position of head coach at the July 25 meeting, and then reassigned secretively the next day.

Vasquez has declined to comment on the move, but some of his family members and supporters have spoken up in his defense.

"I think he (Joe Vasquez) chooses not to address the concerns. He's still employed by the district and certainly retaliation is always in the back of his mind," said Homer Vasquez, an assistant district attorney who is the coach's brother. "His reassignment did not sit well with him. It was not a brave act by the superintendent."

Edinburg school board president Jose "Rosie" Longoria said there was no talk of Vasquez's reassignment during the executive session, but that Moore did not make the decision lightly.

"Emotions are running high in the community and that's unfortunate," Longoria said. "I don't think it was something done over coffee. I'm positive Dr. Moore had information he carefully considered before reassigning coach."

Board member Cayetano Cavazos said the board does not get involved in personnel matters, but that he knew of only one complaint made against Vasquez.

Ruiz, the parent who made that complaint, did not return numerous phone calls for this story. But Nick Molina, an Edinburg resident who attended the school board meeting as Ruiz's designated advocate, said he has faith in Moore's decision.

"We're just protecting these kids," said Molina, a frequent and vocal critic of coaches at Edinburg High School. "Not necessarily with coach Vasquez, but this has been going on for years."

But others say the situation is more about politics and less about safety. They question whether Vasquez's reassignment had more to do with a vendetta by a small group of parents, or last season's 3-7 football team record then with a single complaint.

Vasquez did enjoy plenty of success as a head football coach after spending several years as an assistant coach in Edinburg. He compiled a 41-23-2 record and won two district championships in six years as head coach. The highlight of Vasquez's coaching career may have come in 1994 when his team stunned heavily favored Mission in winning the District 31-5A championship.

He also enjoyed several successful seasons as the head varsity baseball coach before taking on the football duties.

For many Bobcat football fans, it never seemed to be good enough. Vasquez stepped into the shoes of a South Texas coaching legend, Richard Flores, who is now the district's athletic director. Flores is a member of the Texas High School Coaches Association Hall of Honor, and took the Bobcats deep into the 5A playoffs several times during the 1980s.

Bobcat fans who enjoyed the great successes during the Flores era grumbled about various aspects of Vasquez's record. In football, Edinburg High has been unable to beat its cross-town rivals, the Edinburg North Cougars, since the new school opened in 1991. That has been a sore spot of epic proportions for avid Bobcat fans.

Gene Torres, the father of a recent Edinburg High graduate and football player, believes Vasquez was the victim of a group of parents looking for anything to use against Edinburg High coaches. He said Molina had approached him previously and asked him to join a group of concerned parents making complaints about various coaches at the school.

"I just didn't agree, and don't agree to this point of time, with what they've done." Torres said. "My opinion is there was Sunday morning quarterbacking, and they took it to heart because their sons were not involved as much in playing the game."

Torres believes his son, Robert, was part of the incident discussed in Ruiz's complaint, yet neither Gene nor Robert Torres were approached by administrators to tell their side of the story.

"I wasn't aware all this was going on," the elder Torres said. "Had I been aware a little more beforehand, I would have addressed it earlier on."

Vasquez's family members are worried about the rumors flying around the community about the coach's reassignment.

"My concern is that there is a misconception in the community over what may have happened," said Homer Vasquez. "It was certainly a situation he (coach) viewed as innocent repartee...that got him into this situation of being reassigned."

Molina, a longtime employee in the county's juvenile probation department, said he and Ruiz did not ask for Vasquez's reassignment, nor did he have any grudges against the football coach.

"I stand on my record of 20 years of advocacy," said Molina, whose son played on Edinburg High's varsity basketball team last season. "I've had the same tickets on the 50-yard line for over 20 years and I never had a son who played football."

Torres and members of Vasquez's family spoke to a group of Edinburg High School parents gathered for an athletic boosters meeting last week in an effort, they said, to dispel rumors. After the meeting, many parents said they thought the coach had been treated unfairly.

"My sons love him. He handles my boys when they're out of order. He disciplines them real good," Angie Dominguez said. "I think what they're doing is just wrong. They're just trying to get him off the program."

Maria Moreno said her son Albert was stunned and hurt by the news, and that she believed Vasquez had done an excellent job as coach.

"I feel that right now the kids are without a leader. I know they can adjust because they're great boys," she said. "But you're supposed to put the kids first, and I don't think the kids were thought of at all."

Longoria, the school board member, said the talk around town has blown the situation out of control.

"He (Vasquez) didn't lose any pay. He's got another assignment," Longoria said, adding that Moore may have moved Vasquez because of a need at the sixth grade campus. "Obviously there's two camps here. You ask where I'm at. I'm in the middle."

Brown gets coordinated with marketing company

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — There soon will be just one shade of brown at Brown, which has hired a marketing company to promote its sports teams.

Brown is the first Ivy League school to enter such an arrangement. Strategic Merchandising Associates will do everything from coordinate jersey colors to choose the hot dogs served in the stands.

"It's the food, it's the entertainment, it's the promotions, it's the entire overall experience," said Carson Woods of Strategic Merchandising. "When you go to a football game, whether or not the team is winning or losing, you want to enhance the experience."

Strategic Merchandising, a New York firm, represents Purdue University and Major League Soccer and handles product licensing for the Heisman Trophy. It will decide what kinds of food and drinks are sold at Brown's concession stands, choose the entertainment at games, enlist more corporate sponsors and get Brown apparel in more stores. It's a far cry from the current marketing scheme, which consists of selling Brown clothing at the college bookstore and at games.

"We've dabbled in it, but with no one having the time to do it on a full-time basis, it's difficult to get consistency," athletic director Dave Roach said.

Olympic team players bought coach's pitch

ATLANTA (AP) — Tara VanDerveer did quite a coaching job with the U.S. Olympic women's basketball team. Quite a selling job, too.

Before VanDerveer could begin the push for the gold medal her team won Sunday night, she first had to sell the players on her basic tenets of discipline and conditioning.

And that had to start with the older players, specifically the team's only Olympic veterans, Teresa Edwards and Katrina McClain.

"I have a theory with teams that your best players have to be your leaders," VanDerveer said. "And when you don't have your best players as leaders, you have trouble."

That leadership emerged quickly.

While the players were home last summer, they had to keep track of their workouts and send back reports every two weeks. The laggards would have to meet for early morning conditioning sessions — breakfast club, VanDerveer called it — when the team gathered in Colorado Springs last October for practice.

When VanDerveer saw the reports from Edwards and McClain, plus those of international veterans Dawn Staley and Jennifer Azzi, she knew they had bought her pitch.

"Teresa's was a book. You could look at her and know what everyone else should have been doing," VanDerveer said. "Katrina, too. I think it was a great sign when we started up in October that Teresa, Katrina, Dawn and Jennifer had no makeup work. They were not in the breakfast club."

With the veterans setting the example, the other players followed along and the team took off on a magical journey that culminated with a 111-87 victory over Brazil in the gold-medal game, the final event of the Centennial Olympics.

Given more time and money — $3 million — to prepare than any previous Olympic team, VanDerveer and her players responded by going 52-0 on a worldwide warmup tour and then sweeping past eight foes in Atlanta by an average margin of 28 points.

"I wasn't trying to make it totally miserable for anyone," VanDerveer said. "But I just think it was a matter that we had to do things differently around here. The way I explained to the players was the two things that are the very most important are work ethic and discipline. The discipline that people showed during the summer really helped and laid the foundation."

The United States had to do things differently because it was falling behind in the women's game. Previous teams for international competitions were put together only a couple of months beforehand and for a while, the system worked fine. America dominated the sport in the 1980s and won the 1990 world championship.

Then came disappointment. A bronze medal in the 1991 Pan-American Games. Another bronze at the Barcelona Olympics. And another at the 1994 world championships.

Something had to be done. To not win the gold in Atlanta would have been embarassing. So USA Basketball put VanDerveer and her players together a year ago for the specific purpose of preparing for the Summer Games. The players were paid $50,000 — less than they would have made in the European pro leagues but enough to keep them home for a year.

"The opportunities were too huge here in Atlanta to go about business as usual," USA Basketball executive director Warren Brown said. "Our record wasn't too good in international competition and I think a large part of it had to do with not enough preparation and not having the players be together and learn about each other as people as well as players."

This team certainly was able to do that, traveling more than 100,000 miles while playing on four continents. When they arrived in Atlanta, they were a finely tuned, cohesive unit.

Johnson leads endorsement picks

NEW YORK (AP) — You watched them go for the gold, silver and bronze during the 17-day Summer Games. It will take a little longer before you see the results of the Olympian scramble for the green of endorsement contracts.

Marketing experts rate gold medal sprinter Michael Johnson as a favorite in the post-Olympic dash for dollars. Gymnast Kerri Strug, who injured herself while helping clinch a team gold medal, and decathlon gold medal winner Dan O'Brien are other top contenders for commercial riches.

All three will appear on Wheaties boxes scheduled to hit the stores next week. The General Mills Inc. cereal brand opted to go with five different boxes featuring Olympians this year rather than the usual single honoree.

Strug appears with the women's gymnastics team, while Johnson, O'Brien and gold medal swimmers Tom Dolan and Amy Van Dyken each get their own boxes.

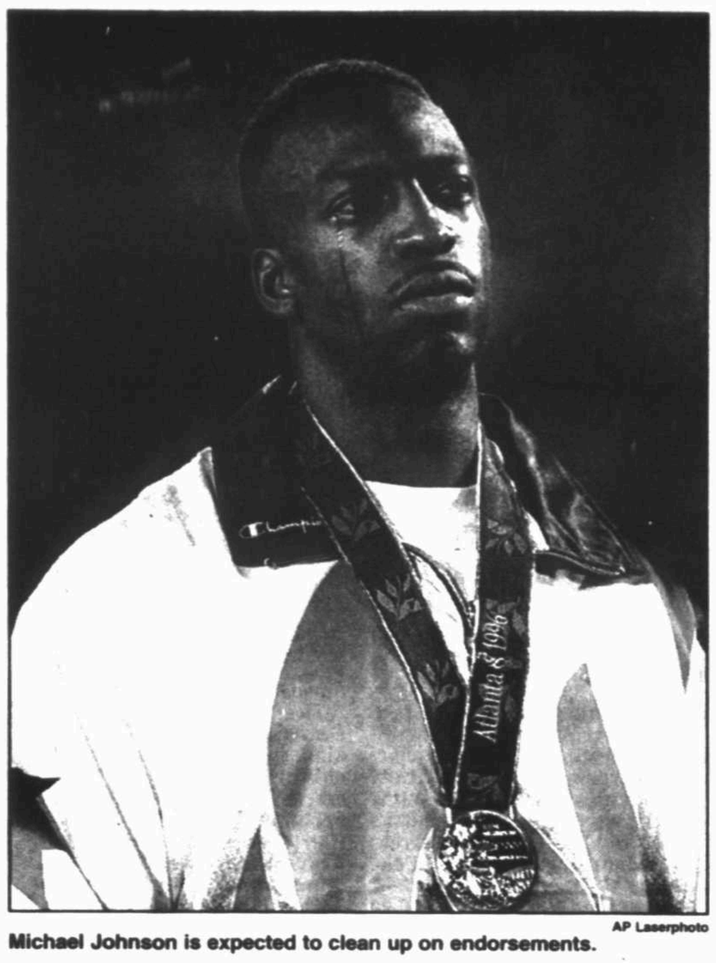
"It indicates nobody stood out — there was not one definitive Olympian," said Nova Lanktree, a sports celebrity broker from Chicago.

Others said the multiple boxes reflected shrewd marketing, especially as cereal makers have recently been driven to cut prices to stimulate sales. Five boxes helps Wheaties appeal to the widest possible audience and gives collectors a reason to buy extra cereal.

Johnson won in the 200- and 400-meter races as he had been expected to do. In the past, he had been faulted for failing to project warmth.

Stan Becker, chief creative officer for the ad agency Saatchi & Saatchi Advertising, said the image of Johnson shedding a single tear on the medal stand after the 400-meter victory endeared him to the television audience.

Johnson's ad career could be hurt, however, because the spotlight in the United States typically moves away from track after the Olympic Games.



AP Laserphoto

Michael Johnson is expected to clean up on endorsements.

Strug vaulted unexpectedly onto the world stage when she appeared as the final U.S. performer in the team competition and hurt her leg on her first jump. At the time, it appeared she needed to score well to assure a U.S. gold medal. She came through before collapsing to the mat with torn tendons.

"She is young and fresh-faced, and her moment was the moment of the games," said Bob Dorfman, a senior writer at the ad agency Foote Cone & Belding in San Francisco. He likes her for soap, cosmetics and jeans ads.

Strug decided to turn professional after endorsement offers began arriving and is joining the gymnastic team's planned exhibition tour. But critics say she lacks the appeal of Mary Lou Retton, another gold medal gymnast who won wide commercial exposure after the 1984 games.

O'Brien offered a remarkable comeback story. He was favored for a decathlon medal four years ago, but failed to make the U.S. team because he missed clearing the bar in the pole vault. He won this year by a comfortable margin, becoming the first American since Bruce Jenner in 1976 to lay claim to the title "the world's best athlete."

Jenner has enjoyed a long career in commercials and personal appearances.

"Over the long haul, O'Brien could be the biggest winner. Decathlon winners seem to have an enormous shelf life," said Arthur Kaminsky, president of the entertainment management firm Athletes & Artists Inc.

American women seized the moment in the Atlanta Olympics, with women's teams capturing gold medals and huge audiences in softball, soccer, gymnastics and basketball and in track and swimming relays.

Saatchi's Becker said advertisers and agencies should figure how to align their products with the efforts of those teams.

"I'm sure Nike won't miss a beat on these women's teams," he said, referring to the sneaker marketer that has been actively promoting girls' involvement in sports.

Some Olympic medal winners may never get a shot at a big endorsement deal because their sport attracts little coverage even during the games. Others may have been hurt by falling short of pre-Olympic expectations.

Nine-time career gold medal winner Carl Lewis may have hurt his endorsement potential by trying to become a late addition to a relay team that could have carried him to a 10th gold medal, some talent brokers say. Dominique Moceanu shared the team gymnastics gold but at 14 fell short of superstardom.

Kaminsky said the commercial sleeper of the Olympics may have been a former gold medal winner — Muhammad Ali.

"I don't know anyone who got more publicity than he did," Kaminsky said of the ailing former heavyweight boxing champion who lit the Olympic Stadium cauldron to start the games.

Atlanta wakes up from its biggest party; prices go down

ATLANTA (AP) — The metal barricades came down Monday. So did the prices. It didn't take long to realize that the city's biggest party is really over.

"Parking. $5," advertised a lot near Centennial Olympic Park that was charging $20 for cars to enter less than 12 hours earlier.

The park, which was such a popular gathering spot during the Olympics, was closed off except for narrow walkway, allowing workers to clean up the mess and begin taking down the huge sponsor exhibits. Of course, people could still get to the "Super Store," which remained open for those wanting to pick up a last-minute souvenir — one, final testament to the most commercial games in history.

On the street, the vendors who were criticized for turning downtown into a tacky flea market either packed their stands or tried to sell off their remaining goods. Anyone for a T-shirt, baseball cap or one of those omnipresent pins?

The Atlanta Games came to end Sunday night with a Southern-style jam session featuring Little Richard and B.B. King, who had the athletes rocking on the field in the Olympics' final moments. The five-ringed flag was passed from Mayor Bill Campbell to Frank Sartor, his counterpart in Sydney, which is already making plans for its own party in four years.

Some locals seethed over the perceived snub from International Olympic Committee president Juan Antonio Samaranch, who used the closing ceremony to call the games "most exceptional" rather than "the best ever," his assessment after previous Olympics.

"I was disappointed that we didn't get 'the best games' last night in the speech," Debbie Beckham said, making her way back to work in a downtown minus the Olympic throngs. "I think there was a lot of spirit here."

There also were some wonderful athletic achievements. From Michael Johnson's historic double in track and field to Kerri Strug's gutsy vault that secured a gymnastics gold for the Americans. From Michelle Smith's three gold medals in the pool to Donovan Bailey's world record in the 100-meter dash.

Sunday evening, shortly before the closing ceremony, America's female Dream Team won the last gold medal of the games with a 111-87 rout of Brazil in the women's basketball finals. It was an suitable way to end the games in two respects. For one, the United States, cheered on by millions of flag-waving fans, used the home-field advantage to top the medal charts in a boycott-free Olympics for the first time since 1968. Americans won 101 medals (44 golds, 32 silvers, 25 bronze), followed by Germany's 65 (20-18-27) and Russia's 63 (26-21-16).

Also, women were deserving of the final medals in Atlanta: The number of female athletes was 40 percent higher than at Barcelona four years ago, and many of them played their games in front of record crowds — especially on the basketball court and the soccer field.

The Atlanta Games may ultimately be remembered as a landmark moment in boosting the popularity of women's sports.

On the other hand, Atlanta joins Munich on a more infamous scroll. For the first time since 1972, terrorism marred the Olympics when a bomb exploded in Centennial Park, killing one woman and injuring more than 100 people. But the park reopened after three days and was soon filled again with joyous crowds, which Atlanta's Olympic chief, Billy Payne, called his most poignant memory of the games.

Investigators, meanwhile, are still trying to determine who planted the bomb. The probe has centered on security guard Richard Jewell, who remained secluded in his apartment Monday while sightseers and tourists gathered outside. At Atlanta Hartsfield Airport, some 252,000 people were expected to make their way back home Monday. Officials reported long lines at security checkpoints, and ticketing was held up by people who wanted to check extra bags.

Prince Alexandre de Merode, chairman of the IOC medical commission, said Shekodanova tested positive for stanozolol — the same steroid which got Canadian sprinter Ben Johnson kicked out of the 1988 Seoul Olympics.

De Merode said the analysis of Shekodanova's second sample was expected to be confirmed later today. If it is positive, her seventh-place finish in the women's 100-meter hurdles will be thrown out.

Both athletes face four-year bans under rules of track and field's world governing body, the International Amateur Athletic Federation.

De Merode said the two positives were detected by standard testing equipment, not the new high-resolution mass spectrometers which were supposed to be three times more effective in detecting use of anabolic steroids.

De Merode did not rule out the possibility of more positive cases. A backlog of tests are still being analyzed and should be completed by Wednesday, he said.

If no more positives are found when the testing is completed, it would be the fewest cases at any summer Olympics since the 1980 Moscow Games, when none were reported.

No one believes that athletes have stopped taking performance-enhancing drugs. The cheaters just know how to beat the tests.

"We are in a difficult situation," Carrard said. "If we have many cases, people say it's very bad. If we have no cases, people say it's very bad, too."

In Sunday's decision, the Court of Arbitration for Sport said it gave swimmer Andrei Korneyev and Greco-Roman wrestler Zafar Gulyov the benefit of the doubt because of uncertainty over whether bromantan is a stimulant.

Korneyev got back the bronze medal he won in the 200-meter breaststroke and Gulyov got back the bronze in the light-flyweight (105 1/2-pound) class.

Russian Olympic Committee president Vitaly Smirnov said the ruling was fair.

"From the very beginning I told the IOC the athletes are not guilty," Smirnov said. "If there is a mistake and by chance this medicine can be considered a drug or stimulant, this is the fault of our scientists."

Britain's Nick Gillingham, who was fourth in the swimming final behind Korneyev and briefly thought he would get the bronze, called the reinstatements "absolute nonsense."

"How can they in one breath admit he took a banned substance and in the next say there is insufficient evidence to disqualify?" Gillingham said.

Korneyev and Gulyov were among five athletes from the former Soviet Union — four Russians and one Lithuanian — expelled for using bromantan.

The IOC medical commission said bromantan was a performance-enhancing stimulant similar to amphetamines.

But Russian Olympic officials argued that bromantan was not a stimulant and was not officially on the banned list. The Russians said their athletes took the drug to strengthen their immune system to combat Atlanta's heat and humidity. The appeals panel reached its decision after hearing testimony from John M. Holbrook, a professor of pharmaceutical science at Mercer University in Atlanta.

END: Atlanta says goodbye to Games after 17 days of fun

(From 1C)

Yet Atlanta, whose civic inferiority complex is legendary, responded to Samaranch's remark not with shame or soul searching. So that's his opinion, the city seemed to say as it shrugged and rolled its collective eyes.

"I think he's wrong," said Sylvia Odmark of Norcross; Ga., who watched the closing ceremony on a giant TV screen at the Centennial Olympic Park. "I think they are the greatest."

The jumble of souvenir tents and refreshment stands that turned Atlanta's streets into a pseudo-boardwalk and offended some IOC members, Ms. Odmark said, was part of the appeal.

"It's given this a party atmosphere, like a two-week Mardi Gras," she said.

Diane Arabie of Duluth, Ga., didn't understand Samaranch's problem.

"It must be a personal thing for him," she said.

Mayor Bill Campbell said he didn't consider Samaranch's statement to be an insult.

"Not at all," he said. "I don't think any one person defines these games. We thought they were the best games ever.

"By any objective criteria, they were the largest, the most athletes, the most female athletes, the most nations and we think it was very successful. So we will allow historians to judge," Campbell said.

The Atlanta Journal-Constitution described Samaranch's comment as "the ultimate slap on the wrist, with half the planet watching."

Young, co-chairman of the Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games, said at a news conference at the top of the Chamber of Commerce building that he believed Samaranch really enjoyed the games.

"I don't think there's any question that he feels very good about these games," said Young, who wore a gold Olympic Order medallion given to him earlier in the morning by Samaranch.

Young said the closing ceremony remarks didn't bother him.

"After all, we feel very good about these games," Young said. "I never did like grades."

Young urged Atlanta residents to focus instead on the economic benefits he said the South will enjoy for years to come because of the Olympics.

Young said the Olympics generated $5.1 billion in business, jobs and tax revenue for the region. Although that was the figure projected before the games, some economists now say the actual economic impact actually was about $4 billion.

Though the visible signs of the Olympics, such as temporary sponsor pavilions and street advertising, were rapidly being taken down Monday, Young said the economic benefits of the games will continue for years to come.

"We will probably do another $5 billion before the turn of the century because of the influence of these games," Young said.

"We in the South have been most of our lifetime a very poor region. The wealth that has come here we have had to find ways to generate, and the Olympic Games has come through for us at a very wonderful time," he said.

Young said he expects increased convention business, airport traffic and corporate relocations as an outgrowth of the generally positive experiences of Olympic visitors.

Jockey Brumfield inducted

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — Go for Wand never made it to the finish line in her last race. On Monday, the great filly made it to the Hall of Fame.

Go for Wand, who took a fatal spill in the stretch run of the 1990 Breeders' Cup Distaff, was enshrined in the National Racing Museum. Go for Wand is buried in the Saratoga Race Course infield, 50 yards past the finish line.

Also inducted were former jockey Don Brumfield, the late trainer James Conway, Kentucky Derby winner Sunday Silence, 19th-century jockey George Barbee and Sun Beau, an equine star of the late 1920s and early '30s.

The champion juvenile filly of 1989, Go for Wand had won seven of eight races in 1990 when she was locked in stretch duel with Bayakoa in the Breeders' Cup Distaff. Go for Wand fell and was fatally injured in one of racing's most heartbreaking moments.

The filly is well remembered in Saratoga, where she won the Test and Alabama stakes.

"I remember the wonderful days in August when the Wand won the Test and Alabama, and I said 'It will never happen again,'" said Jane duPont Lunger, the filly's owner. "Well, now she's in the Hall of Fame."

Go for Wand won $1,373,338 in career earnings with 10 wins and two seconds in 13 starts.

Brumfield, born into a horse racing family, rode 4,573 winners in a career that lasted from 1954 to 1989. His first winner was at Monmouth Park on a mount trained by his father. He later won the Ashland Stakes on a horse owned by his mother.

In 1966, Brumfield won the Kentucky Oaks on Native Street and the next day won the Kentucky Derby aboard Kauai King. He also rode Kauai King to a win in that year's Preakness.

A mainstay at Kentucky tracks, Brumfield was the career leading rider at Keeneland and Churchill Downs when he retired. Brumfield, 58, said he was more surprised than anyone to receive racing's highest honor.

"I never would have thought I would get here because I didn't think I was the kind of person to get into the Hall of Fame," he said.

Sunday Silence won the 1989 Derby, Preakness and Breeders' Cup Classic to capture Horse of the Year honors. He earned $4,968,554 from nine wins and five second-place finishes in 14 starts. An injury forced him into retirement in 1990.

"Sunday Silence never quit ... and would never give up," said Arthur Hancock III, who owned the horse along with Ernest Gaillard and trainer Charlie Whittingham. "His heart and his courage made him the horse that he is."

Conway, who died in 1984, saddled 43 stakes winners in a 38-year career that began in 1946. One of his charges, My Request, won 17 stakes. He trained Chateaugay to wins in the 1963 Kentucky Derby and Belmont.

Barbee was one of the premier riders of the late 19th century. The English-born jockey won the Preakness three times, the Belmont once and two Travers Stakes during a career that included 186 wins from 1872-84.

Sun Beau raced for eight trainers during a four-year career that included 74 starts. He won 33 of them, with 12 seconds and 10 thirds for $376,744 in earnings, a record that stood for nine years.

Breeder's Cup wants Churchill Downs to sweeten pot

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Louisville may have to come up with some cash and put on a brighter face if it hopes to have the Breeders' Cup return in 1998.

Churchill Downs has held the showcase event three times since 1988, and the Breeders' Cup drew a record crowd of 71,671 to the track in 1994. Mayor Jerry Abramson and Churchill Downs president Thomas Meeker set up a task force that met Monday to study demands made by Ted Bassett, president of the Lexington organization that sponsors the races.

"We had a very productive session with various community organizations," said Karl Schmitt Jr., vice president of corporate communications for the race track.

Schmitt said the task force reviewed Bassett's recommendations and will consider them again at another meeting. "We look forward to having the Cup at the Downs in 1998," Schmitt said.

Bassett pointed out in an April 22 letter to Meeker that offers of financial incentives have been received from other cities, but none from Louisville or Kentucky.

The Breeders' Cup would like to consider returning to Churchill Downs, Bassett wrote, but not "until we have some major commitment on behalf of the city of Louisville and the state of Kentucky in tax concessions, marketing and promotional incentives."

Bassett noted that the Canadian province of Ontario is putting up $1.5 million for this year's Breeders' Cup in Toronto on Oct. 26; California has waived its tax on interstate simulcast revenues, which would total about $500,000, when the races are held at Hollywood Park next year; and Florida waived the state's pari-mutuel tax when the event was there.

Prices retreat

NEW YORK — Energy prices were mostly lower Monday in technical trading and profit-taking after solid gains last week.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in September settled at $21.23 per barrel, down 11 cents at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Prices initially rose Monday amid perceptions that new U.S. sanctions Monday against foreign companies investing in Iran may harm that country's output. However, prices then fell in a steady liquidation of positions through the rest of the day.

Natural gas prices were also lower, with contracts for delivery in September settling at $2.215 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 10 cents.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar rose against the German mark and fell against the Japanese yen Monday, caught in the middle as traders moved out of marks and into yen.

In New York, the dollar traded at 1.4826 marks, up from 1.4750 Friday. The dollar traded at 106.60 yen, down from 106.89. The British pound cost $1.5440, down from $1.5520. Overall, the dollar rose against major currencies.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Friday: 1.2023 Swiss francs, up from 1.2000; 5.0360 French francs, up from 5.0135; 1,515 Italian lire, down from 1,516; and 1.3738 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3733.

Stocks drift lower

NEW YORK — Stocks drifted lower Monday in unusually quiet trading, pausing from a four-session rally with bonds, as interest rates edged higher before this week's big auction of new U.S. Treasury debt.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 5.55 to 5,674.28, halting a powerful 245-point advance spurred by four days of encouraging economic news. The Dow had started the day higher, moving within four points of 5,700, but then backed away amid some profit-taking.

Declining issues outnumbered advancers by a slim margin on the New York Stock Exchange, where volume totaled just 303.77 million shares, making it the second slowest full-session of the year.

The NYSE's composite index fell 1.06 to 352.81, and the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index fell 2.26 to 660.23.

The Nasdaq composite index fell 4.39 to 1,120.53, and the American Stock Exchange's market value index fell 0.38 to 548.59.

Bid rejected

DALLAS — Rexene Corp. announced today that its Board of Directors has reviewed Huntsman Corporation's unsolicited proposal to acquire all the outstanding common stock of Rexene for $15 per share and unanimously rejected it as not in the best interest of the company's stockholders.

Andrew J. Smith, chairman and CEO for Rexene Corporation, said, "After a thorough evaluation with the assistance of our financial advisors, the Board firmly believes that we will generate increased value to our stockholders by continuing to expand and strengthen our business —largely by focusing our flexible manufacturing capabilities on meeting our customers' specific needs. Our strategic investment program, which is adding approximately 350 million pounds of annual capacity through 1998, is targeted to achieve profitable growth for our specialty businesses by providing a broader range of material solutions for our customers.

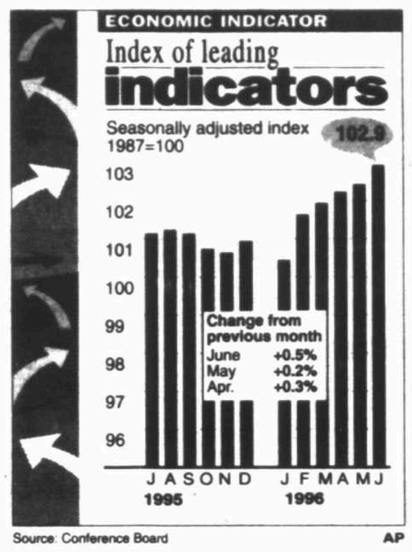
Economic indicators hit all-time high



Source: Conference Board AP

■ Forecast for second half of year indicates economy may be regaining momentum.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — An index of future economic activity rose in June to the highest level ever, slightly exceeding market forecasts and following a spate of numbers suggesting economic growth has been cooling off.

The 0.5 percent increase in the Index of Leading Economic Indicators, released Monday by the Conference Board, comes as Wall Street waits anxiously for the Aug. 20 meeting of Federal Reserve policy-makers. Signs of a surging economy could revive inflation fears and lead the Fed to increase interest rates.

June's advance follows a revised 0.2 percent gain in May and a 0.3 percent increase in April. Wall Street had been expecting a June increase of 0.3 percent.

The June reading of 102.9 represents the highest since the index began in the late 1960s if historic numbers are re-calculated to account for changes in the index construction, said Michael Boldin, a senior economist at the Conference Board.

The prior high, after adjustment, was 102.6 in December 1994 and January 1995, Boldin said.

The index's gain was its fifth in a row. It followed the release Friday of government data showing slower than expected job growth in July and a drop in consumer spending in June.

The index is designed to forecast economic activity six to nine months in advance. It is seen by economists, however, as most useful in forecasting the economy's direction rather than its pace.

"This will not affect the Fed's deliberation. I don't think the Fed is going to move," said Stephen S. Roach, chief economist at Morgan Stanley & Co. "A lot of us, including myself, changed our view of the Fed. For me, it was the Friday numbers."

Of the leading index's 11 components, six rose in June. The biggest gains came in sensitive materials prices, the performance of retail vendors, consumer expectations and money supply. Components hurting the most were unfilled durable goods orders and orders for plant and equipment.

On Friday, the Labor Department reported about 193,000 jobs were created in July, down from an average of 273,000 a month during the second quarter and slightly below Wall Street expectations. The Commerce Department said consumer spending fell 0.2 percent in June.

Also Friday, the Commerce Department reported that orders to U.S. factories dropped 0.9 percent in June.

Those reports sent both stock and bond prices higher as the suggestions of economic weakness led traders to believe the chances of a rate hike at the Fed's Aug. 20 meeting had decreased.

Parker & Parsley unit settles lawsuit

■ Midland independent will get $7 million in settlement, interest in 14 Kansas wells.

Staff Reports

Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co. announced that its wholly owned subsidiaries, Parker & Parsley Development L.P. and Parker & Parsley Gas Processing Co. have concluded an agreement with Dorchester Hugoton, Ltd. regarding the settlement of all outstanding litigation between the parties.

The settlement agreement provides for a cash payment of $7.0 million to Parker & Parsley and annual formula based production payments beginning in February 1997 and continuing through the year 2026.

The company estimates that the 1997 payment will be $800,000 to $1.0 million. Although dependent on future gas prices and related transportation costs, Parker & Parsley estimates the total value of the production payments to be at least $5.0 million. The settlement will result in a substantial 1996 book gain for the company.

The agreement further provides confirmation of Parker & Parsley's ownership in a high pressure gas pipeline system and three solar compressors which form an integral part of the value of the company's Hooker Gas Plant.

Parker & Parsley is to receive Dorchester's 32 percent working interest in 14 wells located in Kansas and operated by Anadarko Petroleum in exchange for Parker & Parsley's 20 percent working interest in 18 wells, also in Kansas, operated by Dorchester.

Dorchester Hugoton will receive ownership of the low pressure gas gathering system which presently services its own Oklahoma Hugoton wells and confirmation of its right to process the gas from those same wells.

All pending litigation and appeals between the parties are to be vacated, including the $6.5 million judgment previously entered against Parker & Parsley by the District Court of Texas County, Oklahoma.

Other than Dorchester's continuing obligation to Parker & Parsley for the production payment through 2026, the settlement severs all business ties between the companies.

Parker & Parsley Petroleum Company is one of the largest public independent oil and gas exploration and production companies in the United States. Parker & Parsley's oil and gas properties are located in the United States principally in the Permian Basin of West Texas, the onshore Gulf Coast region of South Texas and Louisiana, the Mid-Continent region and in Argentina.

Margaret and Richard Rhodes, both in their 70s, are surrounded by shoe boxes in their living room in San Antonio. The couple started a golf shoe manufacturing business called King Step Co. and run it from their home.

Twosome walks away from retirement

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — When Margaret and Richard Rhodes decided to fend off retirement by starting a business, their 10 children weren't surprised.

The twosome founded The King Step Co., a golf shoe manufacturing company, in November in their San Antonio home after a lifetime of entrepreneurial experience.

"If they didn't work they would go stir crazy because they don't know how to be retired people," said the couple's 51-year-old son, Leonard Rhodes, a ranch foreman in Camp Verde.

"They don't like to play golf or do other things associated with retirement."

Although the Rhodes rarely play golf, the couple studied the golf shoe market and polled golfers for five years before they started The King Step Co.

The pair studied wear and tear from golfers' worn shoes to determine where shoes could be reinforced for improved comfort.

"We found a lot of golfers were having problems with their knees, hips and back that resulted from their feet," Margaret Rhodes said.

"So we decided to design a shoe that would help prevent those aches and pains."

After 30 years of marriage, the couple knows how to function as a team.

Margaret Rhodes, 75, is the company's designer. Richard Rhodes, who just turned 74, handles finances and marketing.

Margaret Rhodes designed the company's 14 styles of golf shoes that are manufactured in Mexico and sold at golf courses and hotels in San Antonio.

The couple used personal funds to open their new company. They are no strangers to the business world.

The pair's resume includes entrepreneurial experience and volunteer work to promote businesses around the world.

They founded Arizona Construction, Avondale Investments and Rhodell Aviation Co. in Phoenix, where they lived before they moved here 20 years ago. The companies in Phoenix were dissolved.

The couple also founded Auscot, a cotton company in New South Wales, Australia, in 1963.

They sold Auscot two years later, and the business remains successful.

For the past five years, they have traveled around the world promoting private business in Third World countries as volunteer executives for the Connecticut-based International Executive Service Corps.

Although postponing retirement was a factor in starting The King Step Co., the couple also hoped the company would allow them to share their business experience with young people.

"What you get makes a living, but what you give makes a life," Richard Rhodes said.

"We want to help others, especially younger people make successes of themselves."

The pair intends to hand off the business to their young staff of three, all in their 20s and 30s.

"We hope these young people can add on to our dreams after we're gone," Margaret Rhodes said.

The King Step Co. manufactures about 2,000 pairs of golf shoes weekly.

The shoes are sold at The Dominion Country Club Golf Center, Hyatt Regency Hill Country Resort, Oak Hills Country Club, San Antonio Country Club and The Quarry Golf Club.

The company's regular line of all-leather golf shoes sell for about $220 a pair.

The King Step Co. also sells exotic shoes.

A pair of the company's lizard shoes costs about $270, and a pair of leather and crocodile shoes sells for $550.

The couple plans to evade retirement for as long as they can.

"We'd rather work than sit and wait for the grim reaper," Margaret Rhodes said.

Richard Rhodes agrees that sitting and waiting aren't their style.

"We like to keep our oar in the water," he said with a laugh.

"They're going to have to knock us out to put us in that coffin."

Plans are in the works to build a small shoe outlet and customer showroom in San Antonio within a few years.

The couple also intends to add a line of 10 styles of street shoes to the company's offerings.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Investing for college can harm financial aid chances

By Eric Tyson

Q: My husband and I, with a combined income or $80,000 per year, are having a child later this year. We are going to invest approximately $5,000 for his/her education in the first couple of years. Of course, we are looking for a high rate of return on our investment, low taxes and low or no cost for setup and administration.

Tyson

We have considered certificates of deposit and Series EE U.S. savings bonds but are discouraged by the low returns. What do you suggest?

A: Congratulations! Good health and good luck to you all! And kudos to you for planning ahead financially for your little bundle of joy.

As I've repeatedly urged new parents, make sure you understand how the college financial-aid system treats your investments. Specifically, you need to know that money invested outside of retirement accounts counts against your child's ability to qualify for financial aid. And money invested in your child's name, such as in custodial accounts, is penalized even more.

Money invested inside retirement accounts, on the other hand, not only gives you great tax breaks but also is ignored in most financial-aid analyses.

Before you put away money specifically for your child's education, exhaust contributing to your retirement accounts. You would be doing yourself and your child a favor.

If you've done that and have money left over to earmark for your child's college costs, keep that money in your name, unless you expect to be so affluent in the future that you can afford to pay for 100 percent of your child's college costs yourself. Few parents can afford that luxury.

I agree that CDs and savings bonds are too conservative for an 18-year investment. You could be reasonably aggressive, investing 65 to 75 percent of the college money in some diversified stock mutual funds, at least a third of which would be foreign funds, with the balance in a low-cost bond fund that fits your tax situation.

Q: I was blessed recently with a granddaughter. For the next 20 years, I would like to invest $500 per month for her. What would you suggest?

A: Congratulations to you, too!

As I advised in the previous question, don't put the money in your granddaughter's name, because that would hurt her ability to qualify for college financial aid. Better to give the money to her parents and allow them to invest it.

Some grandparents are afraid of doing that out of fear that the parents would misuse the money. Talk to the child's parents about your guidelines for the money, and discuss investment options. At this point, you probably have a feel of how responsible they will be.

If you're concerned they might not use the money as it was intended, you could try some other approaches. One would be for you to invest the money in your own name and then pay for your granddaughter's college expenses when the time comes. Another would be to place the money in a trust for the child. Speak with a tax adviser experienced with such trusts about their pros and cons.
