Peace Affirmed By Egypt, Israel

By The Associated Press

Israel and Egypt today exchanged the documents that formalized their historic peace treaty during a ceremony at an American surveillance station in Um Khashiba, a dusty crossing in the Sinai U.N. buffer zone.

Bands played with gusto after the exchange, which had been delayed more than two hours by a last-minute dispute, reportedly about whether a side letter dealing with the question of autonomy for Palestinians should be included in the ratification documents, as Egypt requested.

Delegates huddled and the obstacle was overcome, but there was no elaboration how.

In Beirut, Israel's warplanes buzzed Yasser Arafat's headquarters twice today and Arafat's command said Israeli gunboats and border artillery pounded Palestinian targets in southern Lebanon.

Israeli Defense Minister Ezer Weizman, arriving in Cairo for talks on withdrawal of Israelis from the Sinai, called on the Palestine Liberation Organization to "stop shooting and start talking," but later an Israeli source said the comment was a slip of the tongue.

The PLO said the Israeli planes also streaked over teeming Palestinian refugee camps on Beirut's southern edge on a "panic-spreading mission" that drew anti-aircraft fire from Palestinians and Syrian peacekeeping forces in Lebanon.

The roar of anti-aircraft fire shook the Lebanese capital as the jets thundered past in the second sweep over Beirut in six hours. The first swoop occurred during the morning rush hour. The second came during the lunch break.

The PLO said the jets also buzzed guerrilla positions along Lebanon's Mediterranean coast, and that an Israeli "missile boat flotilla' teamed with Israeli border artillery in a concerted barrage against Palestinian positions and camps near Tyre, 50 miles south of Beirut.

The guerrilla-controlled town of Nabatiyeh, 30 miles east of Tyre, also came under heavy artillery bombardment from daybreak to midday.

The Israeli command confirmed its artillery bombarded Palestinian positions in southern Lebanon after guerrilla forces rocketed Israeli settlements, but said it had no knowledge of Israeli warplanes buzzing the Lebanese capital or its gunboats shelling Palestinian positions.

Palestinian gunners in southern Lebanon fired Soviet-made Kathyusha rockets into northern Galilee, and Israeli artillery returned the fire, the Israeli army radio reported.

Israel's military command said three Israelis were slightly injured and reported electricity lines in northern Israeli settlements were severed and agricultural fields were set ablaze by rockets.

It was the fourth day of ground, naval and air hostilities that have killed 17 Palestinians and Lebanese since a seaborne guerrilla raid on the Israeli coastal town of Nahariya Sunday in which four Israelis were killed.

Austin Trip Nightmare For City Businessman

AUSTIN (AP) — Charley Pope had a tale of woe to tell when he finally appeared as guest speaker at a seminar at the Lakeway resort 30 miles west of here.

Pope, executive vice president of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Lubbock, flew to Austin on Monday afternoon. He rented a car, but as soon as he got on the expressway, a wheel fell off. He got another rent car at the airport, but it caught fire before he pulled out of the parking lot.

"Then I got lost," Pope admited, ending up in Round Rock, 18 miles north of Austin.

Finally at 2:30 a.m., eight and a half hours after leaving the Austin airport and 12 hours after leaving Lubbock, he reached the registration desk at Lakeway resort hotel. He was given a key to a room.

"I walked in, took off my pants, my shirt and was walking toward the bed when a woman screamed," he said. Then the woman's husband suggested in no uncertain terms that Pope was in the wrong room.

Back at the registration desk, Pope was given the key to a guest house and a Lakeway employee in a golf cart as a guide. But the employee got lost and had to return to the hotel. Forty-five minutes later the employee returned, saying the guest house he had been unable to find was occupied anyway. The employee had a key to another guest house.

"About 4 a.m. I finally got to bed," Pope told the seminar. "Pardon me if I seem a little sleepy."

Grand Forks' Dikes Hold Despite Rain

By The Associated Press

Six miles of leaking dikes held together through another long and rainy night in the Red River Valley of the north, but there was no rest for thousands of residents hard at work filling sandbags and plugging holes for the eighth straight day.

The rampaging Red River, spreading 15 miles over its banks in places, was measured at 48.94 feet today at Grand Forks, N.D., and is expected to crest Thursday or Friday at 49.5 feet, just below the tops of the miles of dirt and sandbag levees. Flood stage is 28 feet.

"The wear on the people is a little visible, but morale is up and we'll fight for two more days," said Jay Graba, assistant flood control coordinator at Grand Forks.

"There is no new crisis as of now," he added. "We got through the night all right."

In Mississippi, flood waters from the Pearl River slackened and officials predicted some of the 4,000 persons who fled Columbia, Miss., might start returning home Thursday.

The Army Corps of Engineers said the flooding in the Red River Valley that separates North Dakota and Minnesota will be the most expensive in the area's history. Preliminary damage estimates for North Dakota and Minnesota total $45.7 million, with 425,000 acres in North Dakota and 274,000 in Minnesota under water, the corps said.

The East Grand Forks, Minn., area received 2 more inches of unneeded moisture Tuesday from a mixture of snow and rain.

About 1,000 workers in East Grand Forks and its sister city, Grand Forks, N.D., built new dikes Tuesday and reinforced those that were sodden and giving way.

Hundreds of volunteers remained on duty throughout the night, walking lonely patrols along the miles of dikes, searching for weak spots. Others remained in flood control centers, ready to respond if a break occurred.

"There's a bunch of crabby people. They're overly tired and they're working hard, trying to save what they've got," said Jan Murray, an East Grand Forks liquor store owner doing a good businss.

Floodwaters also retreated in Southeast Texas, where the Neches River and Pine Island Bayou crested Tuesday and some residents began returning home.

"We still don't even know how much damage there is until the water recedes, said L.D. Farrow of the Jefferson County Civil Defense office. "Lots of people don't even know what kind of shape their homes are in."

Food Stamp Hike Upheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate today trampled an amendment that would have killed a $1-billion increase in federal spending for food stamps next year.

A 61-30 vote rejected the amendment by Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., who said it was designed to send administrators of the program a message that food-stamp eligibility requirements must be revised and abuse of the aid must be halted.

Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., said the amendment instead would send "a message to the poor of this country that they are going to eat less."

Lugar sought to hold 1980 spending for food stamps, which are used by about 17 million Americans, to this year's $6.2-billion maximum. The Senate Budget Committee, in writing a 1980 budget, recommended $7.2 billion because of soaring food costs.

Opponents of the amendment said that mainly because of inflation, the Lugar proposal would have resulted in an 18-percent cut in the value of food stamps, which provide an average of 33 cents per meal. Recipients' family income averages $3,600 a year.

Next on the Senate agenda was an amendment that would cut foreign aid, federal travel allowances and grants to states in order to accommodate a $35-billion tax cut over the next two years.

The proposal by Sen. William Roth, R-Del., scheduled for a vote today, calls for a $10 billion tax reduction in 1980 and a $25 billion cut in 1981 to partially offset higher Social Security taxes and increased income taxes caused by inflation.

It would slash the proposed 1980 budget recommended by the Senate Budget Committee.

Roth's amendment would hold the increase in federal spending to the same 7

Defiant House Ups Spending

AUSTIN (AP) — After a last-minute skirmish over abortion, the House has passed a $20.3 billion two-year state budget bill that defies Gov. Bill Clements' hold-the-line demands.

An 87-51 vote, with all but 23 House Republicans voting "no," sent the bill to the Senate, where that chamber's version of the bill has yet to reach the floor.

Clements wants $1 billion left over for property tax relief, but the House bill — not counting $269 million earmarked to avoid scheduled local school tax increases — leaves only $261 million for tax relief or other expenditures.

The governor said he hopes the final budget is lower than the House bill, which tops his spending recommendation by some $500 million.

"There are many steps left in the appropriations process before a final budget bill is agreed on. I am disappointed that the House did not provide for more tax relief, but I am still hopeful the final conference committee report will be more realistic and will leave on the table sufficient funds for additional tax reduction in the range that I have recommended," Clements said in a statement.

Shortly before the final House vote, Rep. Clay Smothers, D-Dallas, tried to add a rider prohibiting expenditure of state money for abortions for women on welfare.

Needing a two-thirds vote, the rider failed, 79-43, with 12 present but not voting.

Smothers conceded the Texas Department of Human Resources still could spend federal money on welfare abortions within the restrictions of the so-called Hyde Amendment.

"We can't control the federal government, but we can control state dollars. ... There are many who feel abortion is murder. I happen to be one who falls in that category," said Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, D-Goliad, a supporter of Smothers' amendment.

Opponents said Smothers' amendment would interfere with abortions to save the lives of expectant mothers or for victims of rape. The Hyde Amendment, however, allows the use of federal funds for abortions for those purposes.

Rep. Craig Washington, D-Houston, contended Smothers was just trying to "get a little more press" with his amendment.

The appropriations bill includes funds to give all teachers a 7 percent annual cost of living raise at a cost of $420 million.

Bond Sale Tops Council Agenda

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock City Council members are expected to decide the fate of an $8.82 million bond sale to finance water, street and fire protection improvements Thursday following a briefing on the city's financial ability to repay the bonds.

The bulk of the $8.82 million sale would be $6.14 million for water improvements, including a Southwest Lubbock pump station and reservoir which city officials say must be built before the summer of 1980.

Another $1.5 million would go for street improvements and $422,000 would pay for construction of a Northwest Lubbock fire station.

The bonds are part of a $28.4 million issue approved by voters in 1977, then delayed by litigation by city hall critic James G. Marshall.

City Manager Larry Cunningham said he plans to discuss with the council the original financing plan when the bonds were approved by voters and the changes which have occurred since that time.

He is expected to assess the impact on the city of the "Tax Relief Amendment" approved by voters in November, the tax cut approved by the council last year and the one-time use of $1 million in federal Revenue Sharing funds for city operations this fiscal year.

Also at the 9:30 a.m. meeting in council chambers, council members will decide whether to install heavy barricades to restrict traffic around Tech Terrace Park.

FORMER STUNTWOMAN NOW 95

Days Of Daring Just Memory

"GIRL WITHOUT FEAR"
Lillian Ward During Movie Years

By GREG THOMPSON

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — They called her "The Girl Without Fear" in the days of the silent movies, when it was nothing for her to crash locomotives and cars, ride a horse over cliffs and tumble down stairs.

But now she doesn't even dare challenge the few slippery feet of linoleum between her nursing home bed and bathroom. After all, Lillian Ward — "The Girl Without Fear" — is 95 years old and rarely leaves her wheelchair.

"Sometimes I step down on the slick floor around here and I slip. I say to myself, 'Lillian, don't be an old fool and fall all over yourself.' So I just don't try it anymore. I let the nurses help me when I try to walk," said Miss Ward.

Sixty years ago, however, Lillian Ward was one of the most sought-after stuntwomen in the fledgling movie industry. One major producer of the era called her, "the best stuntwoman of the East."

She doubled for virtually all of the big stars, including a few men, and commanded $150 a day. "We made big money at the time. We thought it was big money, anyway," she remembered.

When the "Perils of Pauline" script called for star Pearl White to risk her pretty — and expensive — neck for a stunt, the director called in Miss Ward. You'll probably never be able to detect it in the old movies, but that's Lillian Ward the diabolical villain has tied to the railroad tracks in front of the onrushing train. "It never came all that close," she said modestly.

Miss Ward dressed in cowboy garb and doubled for at least three male stars too frightened to perform dangerous riding scenes. All three have been dead for many years, but she still refuses to reveal their identities. "I don't want to embarrass them, so I'll never tell who they were," she said.

For one silent thriller, she piloted a New York Central locomotive into another train, leaping to safety a split second before the head-on crash. Dressed as a man, she rode Burnester, her favorite trick horse, off a cliff for one of the cowboy movies. She tumbled down a flight of stairs after being shot by an imaginary bullet in "Ashes of Vengence."

As a crack pilot, she signed a contract in 1928 — a year after Lindbergh — to become the first woman to fly alone

Ringo Starr Ailing

LONDON (AP) — Ex-Beatle Ringo Starr says he nearly died when he collapsed in his Monte Carlo home two weeks ago and later underwent surgery to remove part of his intestines.

STARR

"I had a good look at death in the face. I was convinced this was it," Starr, 38, said in an interview published in today's editions of the London Sun.

"It all went back to when I had peritonitis (inflammation of abdominal membrane that causes severe internal pain and fever) as a child. Suddenly everything twisted up inside me," Starr said in the interview at his London home.

"I was told that another minute or two and it was nearly curtains," he said of his collapse.

The Sun said Starr, who has concentrated on film and record production since the Beatles broke up nine years ago, looked weak and pale after the surgery.

Actress Wins $35,000 Settlement

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Barbara Rush, who costarred in such films as "Magnificent Obsession" and "The Young Philadelphians," has been awarded $35,000 by the Los Angeles City Council in an out-of-court settlement stemming from a 1974 accident involving a city garbage truck.

MISS RUSH

The award was approved by the council Monday on the advice of Deputy City Attorney Arthur Rutledge, who said the court had recommended a settlement of between $45,000 and $60,000.

Rutledge said a fully loaded sanitation truck struck Miss Rush's car Dec. 4, 1974, sending it crashing into another vehicle. The actress, who suffered numerous bruises and a back strain, claimed losses of $49,410 in earnings during the three months she was incapacitated.

John Wayne Back In Hospital

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — "The Duke" is back in the hospital, but a spokesman says John Wayne's bronchitis should not keep him down more than a few days.

Wayne, described Tuesday as "doing well," was at home recuperating from cancer surgery when the flu-sparked bronchitis forced a return trip to the hospital.

Brooke May Seek Office

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., says it's "too soon for vice presidential speculation," but he's not discounting a bid for some other unspecified office.

Meanwhile, the New York Daily News said in today's editions that Brooke, 59, would soon marry Ann Fleming, 29, daughter of the mayor of St. Martin, the French island in the Caribbean. Brooke could not be immediately reached for comment on the report.

Brooke, defeated in his try for a third term last fall, appeared before a Senate banking subcommittee Tuesday to ask for an increase in the budget allotment or federal housing subsidies. Brooke chairs the National Low Income Housing Coaliton.

Brooke, the first black to serve in the U.S. Senate since 1880, was mentioned as a possible vice presidential candidate in the last two elections. However, he told reporters he hasn't talked with any of the presidential hopefuls, announced or unannounced, about sharing a ticket.

"I don't expect I'll be running with anyone in 1980," he said, then added, "I'm not going to rule out any potential elective position."

One That Got Away

KAMLOOPS, British Columbia (AP) — Darrell Gradwell was so proud of his 21-pound, 4-ounce steelhead trout that he asked the local paper to take his picture with the prize catch.

The Lighter Side Of Today's News

The picture was taken and published — much to the interest of the local game warden.

Gradwell caught the trout using a flyrod with a three-pound test line in the Thompson River March 28. At the time, trout were not in season.

Gradwell pleaded guilty Tuesday in Provincial Court to fishing out of season. He was fined $25.

Kidco Purchases Town To Use As Tax Shelter

RAMONA, Calif. (AP) — The four San Diego kids who turned horse manure and dead gophers into a big money corporation called Kidco are making so much money they're buying a town — as a tax shelter.

That's not all. They've made a deal to sell the movie rights to their story for $150,000, plus a precentage of the profits, of course. The town they're buying for $750,000 is Gorda, 50 miles north of San Simeon, Calif.

"I'll tell you this, they have a horrendous tax liability and Gorda is just the shelter," their father, Richard Cessna, said in a telephone interview Tuesday.

"This never was just a bunch of kids catching gophers," said Cessna. "All of them have been taught to get out and hustle."

To Pacific Coast Highway travelers, Gorda is a 20-acre landmark and way-station near Big Sur about halfway between Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Two years ago, the Cessna kids — Dickie, 14, Bette, 13, June, 15, and Ne-Ne, 11 — found a good way to make extra money while helping their dad clean his horse stables, so they incorporated.

Kidco Ltd. Ventures sold manure as fertilizer, did cleanup jobs for a local developer and killed an occasional gopher for their neighbors in San Diego Country Estates near here.

They once said they made $3,000 a month selling fertilizer. But Cessna says they "shy away from talking about their earnings these days."

At the time, state government bureaucrats in Sacramento, sniffing revenue in the Kidco manure empire, demanded an explanation as to why Kidco had not collected or paid sales tax on the fertilizer.

In late April 1977, a 12-year-old Dickie strolled into the State Board of Equalization tax office under the glare of television lights and reporters and Kidco came out smelling like a rose. The state decided not to press for the back taxes, and the kids didn't have to pay.

The Cessna kids then fought the Department of Food and Agriculture over the formula for their "secret" gopher pesticide. After agreeing not to use the recipe, agriculture officials said Kidco needed a pest control license. That battle is at a standstill.

Cessna said the Kidco fortunes have been boosted by the creation of a new patented gopher trap, a forthcoming Warner Bros. movie about his childrens' trials and triumphs and a possible television series.

"The theme of the movie is the big bad bureaucrats leaning on the little children," Cessna said.

Last June, Cessna said he was skimming a San Diego newspaper when he spotted an ad listing Gorda for sale. He showed the ad to Kidco's board of directors — Dickie, Ne-Ne, Bette and June. They liked the idea, and the sale on the 20-acre town becomes final next month.

Kidco plans to build a recreational vehicle park in Gorda and will operate the gas station, restaurant and store. In addition, Cessna said Dickie would like to be mayor.

"The place has tremendous potential," Cessna said. "There's nothing along that whole stretch of highway where RV owners can park and camp for the night."

The children technically now own their father's business. Cessna turned over the equestrian center and his other holdings to Kidco.

"I'm not using the kids," Cessna said. "The kids are using themselves. When you have 10 children, life has to be pretty disciplined and orderly. Our life-style is quite old-fashioned by today's standards. There is no juvenile delinquency in this family."

Senior Citizens Visit Rosalynn Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some 1,300 senior citizens will have memories of a music-filled White House when they return home from a Washington visit.

The senior citizens, invited to the White House Tuesday by Rosalynn Carter, began singing such old favorites as "Shine on Harvest Moon" while waiting for the first lady. When Mrs. Carter walked into the East Room, she joined in the songfest with members of a group called the Flora Dora Review.

Police Comb Gimbel's For Robbery Clues

NEW YORK (UPI) — Police early today combed a dark Gimbel's department store at Herald Square for clues to burglars who took possibly as much as $1 million in diamonds and jewelry after closing hours Tuesday.

An inventory was under way to determine the exact amount of diamonds and gold jewelry taken from at least one safe in the store's fifth floor jewelry department.

Police officer John Whelan said investigators believe the burglars hid in the store when it closed Tuesday night, waited and then went to work with a crowbar, screwdrivers, hammers and other tools that were left scattered about the floor.

"It took them awhile to get their work done," Whelan said, noting that it definitely appeared more than one thief was involved.

He said the jewelry was taken from at least one of a series of combination safes located along the floor behind showcases in the jewelry department.

"One safe was open and several others had been tampered with," he said.

Authorities were alerted to the theft by an automatic alarm that went off at 11:42 p.m. Tuesday.

Police theorize the thieves got out of the store through a window that leads to the adjacent Statler-Hilton Hotel, which is always jammed with conventioneers using nearby Madison Square Garden.

Police searched the hotel, but a spokesman said no effort was made to conduct a door-to-door search of the 2,200-room facility.

Rhodesian Election Tests U.S. African Policy

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP)— The Carter administration's struggle to promote change in southern Africa is undergoing a tough test in the Rhodesian election.

For sure, blacks are winning a share of power. But the whites, who account for only 4 percent of the population, have reserved for themselves the key posts in running the country as well as 28 of the 100 seats in the Legislature.

"It's a step toward the ending of white minority rule," says Richard Moose, assistant secretary of state for African Affairs.

"But it may also be, simply because of the manner in which the election is carried out, a step closer to chaos, a step closer to a larger war."

The election in the breakaway British colony, to be known now as Zimbabwe-Rhodesia, was arranged by white Prime Minister Ian Smith, who has formed a partnership with three popular black leaders, including Bishop Abel Muzorewa.

Muzorewa was assured of becoming the nation's next prime minister when his party, the United African National Council, easily swept a majority of the 72 parliamentary seats reserved for blacks in last week's election.

The United States is suspicious of this arrangement, and so is Britain. Together, they have tried to promote black rule throughout southern Africa. Their first target is Rhodesia.

The Third World is solidly behind the guerrillas who are operating under the banner of the Patriotic Front and are trying to gain power in Salisbury through force. The election, therefore, has virtually no international support.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, Moose and others who have had a hand in shaping U.S. policy under President Carter believe a civil war might be inevitable unless the Patriotic Front has a voice in establishing a black majority government.

But opinion in the United States, particularly in Congress, could shift toward backing Smith's "internal settlement" if the election results are perceived as fair and democratic.

The administration could find itself with a dilemma. It could ignore the election results and have nothing to do with the new government. Or it could accept the results at the risk of alienating black Africa.

Under the law, it is up to Carter to make that tough decision once the election is over.

Last year, Smith agreed unconditionally to negotiate a settlement with the Patriotic Front. And he invited the guerrillas to lay down their arms and take part in the election.

Both offers were rejected by Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, the Patriotic Front's co-leaders. They chose to continue their war against Salisbury from sanctuaries in neighboring Zambia and Mozambique.

Analysis

But the crafty Smith seemed to be meeting the two conditions set by Congress for lifting the U.S. ban on trade with Rhodesia — negotiations with the Patriotic Front and a fair election in which all political elements were free to participate.

The embargo was imposed on Rhodesia by the world community in 1966, a year after Smith declared Rhodesian independence. The United States supports the trade embargo, except for tiny shipments of medicines and some educational materials.

This hurts the Rhodesian economy, which depends heavily on exports of chrome and other minerals, tobacco and agricultural products.

If Carter does lift the sanctions, Zimbabwe-Rhodesia's chances for survival would soar.

"We will have to await the completion of the election process," Moose said carefully, when asked whether the administration would accept the election results.

"Our position is that we will have to await the completion of the election process and the formation of a government before we take a formal position on that question," he said.

The administration opposed sending election observers to Rhodesia. A congressional move to send observers died in the House, complicating an American evaluation of the election's fairness.

But there is no lack of information from the press and unofficial observer groups. Most of them take a conservative view, but such prominent liberals as Bayard Rustin, a black civil rights leader, and Allard Lowenstein, former U.S. delegate to the United Nations Human Rights Commission, were also on the scene.

In a preliminary report, Rustin was impressed with the large turnout. "Despite the terrorism and confusion in the country," he said, "it seems the government has devised imaginative, concrete and complete plans to allow the elections to go forward successfully."

Rustin and Lowenstein are part of a team from Freedom House, an American human rights organization which, in an interim report, said the election represented a "significant advance" toward black rule.

In black Africa, there is almost no support for Smith, Muzorewa and the other Salisbury leaders.

In the United States, while conservatives and a few liberals question U.S. policy for its possible "tilt" toward the Patriotic Front, there is an opposing view that the administration has not pushed the black cause hard enough.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

This Tip Turned Sour...

MAYBE IT'S because they're so overjoyed to point the finger at folks who have made an even bigger mess of their business than the U.S. has made of its, but American politicians seem compelled to meddle in other countries' affairs.

House Speaker Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill is the latest to indulge himself thusly, kicking off a furor by saying that Great Britain has made a "political football" out of war-torn Ulster.

Heretofore, it has been the President's man—United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young—who has stuck his foot in his mouth repeatedly in irritating America's dwindling number of friends abroad.

TOURING NORTHERN Ireland during the Congressional Easter recess, Speaker O'Neill accused the British of having given a low priority to the civil war the Irish Republican Army has been waging since 1969.

The IRA wants to sever the Protestant-dominated province from Britain and unite it with the Irish Republic, which is 94 percent Roman Catholic.

"For Mr. O'Neill to indulge in third-generation Irish Nationalism is much the same thing as suggesting that white America should withdraw from the land plundered from the American Indians at about the same time that famine and the Irish troubles were driving the ancestors of such as Mr. O'Neill out of Ireland," said a former leader of a reconciliatory Northern Ireland group that won the 1976 Nobel Peace Prize.

THE IMMEDIATE effect of O'Neill's ill-timed and ill-considered remarks was to thrust the Irish issue into the forefront of the Parliamentary Elections on May 3.

Margaret Thatcher, leader of the opposition Conservative Party, took umbrage, saying "we have never used Ulster as a political football between the parties."

Speaking for the Labor Party government, Cabinet Minister Shirley Williams said O'Neill's remarks were "unfair" and added that Irish-Americans such as he have little understanding of what is happening in Ireland.

If so, that makes Mr. O'Neill consistent. He seems to have little understanding of what's happening in this country, either.

FORT WORTH has been having a lot of fun trying to elect a mayor.

First, the city had a two-man race and nobody won.

Now, in a Saturday runoff, the incumbent who started out as the Super Dog is cast both by himself and his opponent as the Underdog.

Mayor Hugh Parmer was elected two years ago as an anti-establishment, Jimmy Carter lovin' liberal who promised to "get things done through the processes of government."

His challenger this time is Woodie Woodrow Woods, who gave up a seat on the City Council to run as a conservative "little man" who believes America is such a land of opportunity that anybody can make good just like he did.

Woods led Parmer by 23 votes when Fort Worth's 32,000 votes were counted earlier this month.

Parmer countered that there were enough write-in votes to deny Woods the victory—then cast the tie-breaking vote when the City Council voted 4-4 whether to order a runoff.

WOODS IS A 58-year-old plumbing contractor who drives a Mercedes Benz on house calls. He has a seventh-grade education.

Parmer is a 39-year-old honors graduate of Yale who, as a political consultant, advises candidates from coast to coast and now finds himself in the embarrassing position of not being able to run his own show successfully.

D Magazine calls Woods "the last honest politician" and his friends say that, like George Washington, he never told a lie—except, maybe, once.

In World War II, Woods told the Navy he had a high school diploma because "if I'd told them the truth, the Navy wouldn't have taken me (and) I didn't much like the Army."

Parmer's friends, on the other hand, have been quoted in Metroplex newspapers as saying their man is "sincere, but it doesn't come across that way. He's ambitious and he shows it too much. He hasn't been able to shed the political wheeler-dealer image."

VOTERS IN COWTOWN, some of whom complain Parmer has turned it into Clowntown, have been amused by his efforts to postpone the runoff election and to get his shy, less articulate opponent into a platform debate.

Early on, the mayor proudly proclaimed he'd been invited to the White House for the signing of the Middle East peace treaties.

Woods scored Round 1 when he wondered aloud what in heaven's name the mayor of Fort Worth was doing with a foreign policy.

AS COUNCILMAN, Woods has voted against "federal giveaway programs" for the poor in Southeast Fort Worth. Yet, even Leonard Briscoe, the black incumbent he defeated in 1975, describes the plumbing contractor as a man "I cannot say anything unkind about."

Parmer, who served one term in the Texas Legislature (1963) as a John F. Kennedy worshipping 23-year-old, has a reputation as a cocky, grinning pro who'd like to move on to bigger things. Like governor, maybe.

He'll find out Saturday whether the voters, for the moment, want him movin' on or movin' out.

Holmes Alexander:

Combat Under Nuclear Umbrella

(Last of two parts)

WASHINGTON—Americans alive in the 1980s are likely to be closer to battle than at any time since the Civil War.

High-ranking Pentagon officers and civilians freely admit that the Soviet missile force had pinpointed some 2,100 Intercontinental Ballistic Missile (ICBM) silos and have zeroed-in on them as prime, immovable targets, equipped with nuclear multiple warheads (MIRVs) which could plaster the Soviet Union's bases and cities if permitted to fire.

Unless there is a total reversal of policy, or an unlikely truce, the American military will continue to plan a defensive, second-strike war.

The key word at the Pentagon is "survivability," and how to make a "safer" home for the Minutemen, giving them time to recover and shoot back.

IT IS HOPED that by withholding fire, the Americans may have several hundred missiles at a time when the enemy, having exhausted his fire, has few or none.

This happy turn of events could take place if the "hardened" silos are much more resilient than anybody really believes. Thus, there is much planning around the idea of the M-X, or Milestone.

This can either be a system of dummy holes, trenches, slope-sided pools, underground rails or —better yet—concealed air bases, out of which wide-bodied jets or fast takeoff planes get the M-X aloft and target bound for Russian territory.

Mobile missiles, preferably airborne, may be an idea whose time has come, but the real war-dogs of the Defense Department also count on the Triad.

IT IS THE combination of ground based missiles, with as many RVs (re-entry vehicles) as whatever treaty we are working under allows us, plus the manned bomber fleet of B-52s and F-IIIs, plus the little Cruise missiles which flip under the enemy radar and strike without warning, plus the underwater Navy of nuclear-hurling projectiles which at least reach the rim of enemy territory.

You might think that somewhere in the picture there would be some assistance from our allies. But nothing of the sort is voluntarily mentioned by American officers.

The USA has six or more ground divisions in Europe and perhaps as many as 10,000 tactical nuclear weapons. The military conservation generally works its way around to whether our GIs consider any war to be a "just" one.

But in the greater likelihood that they make battlefield decisions about fighting or surrendering, the word is that nuclear weapons will form an "umbrella" under which our soldiers would fight.

If it becomes possible to organize mobile or airborne shelters from which to fire our missiles, we may well give a good account of ourselves.

The Environmental Protection Agency apparently can require a Final Environmental Impact Statement to certify what area the military is allowed to choose for the country's defense.

In one instance, the farmers of South Platte Plains "questioned" the military reasoning for some productive land and strongly insisted "unproductive desert areas in the Southwest."

I asked a general if there was an ultimate weapon which might save us. He answered, "Yes. Religion."

I think he's right. It's going to take the intervention of a divine power to make Americans care as much for their beautiful country as Israelis, Egyptians and Arabs care for their rocks and sand.

Can You Afford To Do Business With China?

ARE YOU AN executive in a firm that could and wants to cash in on the anticipated growth in trade with China? Would you like to know more about how to go about grabbing a share? Learn what agencies to contact that buy from U.S. companies?

Then the U.S. Department of Commerce can help you—with its new guidelines that provide information on researching the market, establishing contacts, as well as visiting China itself.

The month of May marks an anniversary almost as significant in the U.S.-China relations as the official recognition of the People's Republic of China on Jan. 1, 1979.

For it then will have been six years since liaison offices were opened in the respective capitals of the two nations, signaling a dramatic shift in Sino-American relations. It was then that commerce began to expand—and the era of near-zero contacts with mainland China closed.

IN 1978 ALONE, mainland China trade with the U.S. exceeded $1 billion. With the improvement of relations between Washington and Peking (Beijing in the new spelling), trade could double to $2 billion in 1979. Last year, China spent $10 billion on imports.

Among the top purchases on China lists are agricultural commodities and industrial products.

You'll need time and patience to penetrate China's market successfully, whether you represent a large or small corporation, the Commerce Department warns. This applies both to imports and exports.

Weigh with care these five questions before you seriously try to penetrate the Chinese market:

(1) ARE YOU PREPARED to invest substantial sums initially without assurance of an early return?

(2) Are you ready to negotiate the first transaction for up to one year or longer?

(3) Can you pledge the senior technical talent that will be needed for a successful deal?

(4) Do you recognize that you may have to walk away from an unpromising negotiation at any time?

(5) Are you aware you may have to resist granting concessionary terms to enter this market?

A wide variety of groups in the U.S. will be surveying Chinese industries to assess the potential for your goods and services.

THE COMMERCE Department has an ongoing effort to develop marketing information. In addition, the National Council for U.S.-China Trade publishes good reports in the China Business Review.

Foreign trade is a state monopoly in China and it is controlled exclusively through a network of corporations. The companies are organized by the commodities or services for which they are responsible.

They range from China National Arts & Crafts Import and Export Corp. to the China National Machinery & Equipment Export Corp. All have headquarters in Beijing.

* Find out which of the Foreign Trade Corporations has jurisdiction over the areas of interest to you. Prepare a proposal and send it to Beijing.

* BE STRAIGHTFORWARD, explicit and technically comprehensive in your proposal to permit in-depth evaluation of the products you want to sell. Don't send annual reports or other material which may confuse the Chinese about the technology or commodities you offer.

* Detail the technological and cost advantages of your product. It also is considered courteous to invite the Chinese to the U.S. to see your plant or equipment in actual operation.

* For the list of the Foreign Trade Corporations and their addresses, send $1.80 to the Commerce Department, Room 4044, PRC Affairs, Washington, D.C. 20230 and request "Doing Business with China."

* SEND COPIES of your proposal to the Commercial Office, Embassy of the People's Republic of China, 2300 Connecticut Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20008; and to the Commercial Officer, Embassy of the U.S.A., 17 Guanghua Lu, Beijing, People's Republic of China.

* To facilitate handling, translate your proposal into Chinese and send any proposal in Chinese with an English original.

* For additional help, contact the U.S. Department of Commerce's Industry and Trade Administration, PRC Affairs Division, Room 4044, Washington, D.C. 20230.

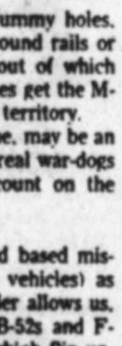
James J. Kilpatrick:

How To Lose Friends In Africa



WASHINGTON—This month's dust-up between the United States and South Africa provides one more dismal chapter in the chronicle of Jimmy Carter's blunders abroad.

The President is about to forfeit the friendship of our only significant allies in the whole of southern Africa in order to cozy up to various gangs of Marxist terrorists. The story baffles understanding.

The spy plane episode was resentfully viewed in Pretoria as quite simply the last straw. Of course our embassy plane was engaged in espionage. The only creditable thing that can be said of Carter is that he did not deny it.

The plane's mission was to closely photograph certain nuclear facilities that had been turned up by satellite scanners.

If this inquisitiveness could have been viewed in isolation, as a regrettable but certainly not unusual breach of manners, the incident might have passed with no more than a strong protest.

THE VERY blatancy of our spying expedition, coming on top of everything else since the first of the year, was more than the South African government could swallow.

They expelled three of our people; we retaliated by expelling two of theirs; Prime Minister Pieter Botha demanded an apology; Carter told him to go fish. Temporarily, there matters stand.

But only temporarily. The episode of the spy plane was merely the trigger. The explosion resulted from what is seen in Pretoria as a reneging by the United States on its commitment to a settlement in South West Africa.

Reneging is too kind of a word. Let us substitute "double cross."

South Africa's valid complaint is that the five Western nations that sponsored the plan for independence in South West Africa are conspiring to alter the plan in ways that are wholly unacceptable to South Africa.

LET US GO back a little. Almost a year to the day has passed since South Africa accepted the settlement proposal of the Western powers.

The proposal embraced free elections; it embraced an end to hostilities; it provided specifically for muzzling the Soviet-backed guerrillas of the South West African People's Organization (SWAPO).

The guerrillas were to be restricted to their then-existing bases in Zambia and Angola, and these bases were to be strictly monitored.

It was on that clear understanding—and only on that understanding—that South Africa went along with the plan.

But behold! Since the first of the year, the Western Five have caved in to SWAPO's demands for advantages the SWAPO guerrillas could not win in the field.

The perfidious notion is being advanced that SWAPO troops could set up five military bases inside the new Namibia. It is the old story of ushering foxes into the hen house.

JUST AS THE spy plane episode might have been glossed over, the monitoring of SWAPO forces might have been negotiated. But there have been other incidents also.

Carter, inexplicably, has joined in demanding that South Africa relinquish control of Walvis Bay to the new Namibia.

Carter, through UN Ambassador Andrew Young, has broken an understanding on the number of UN troops to be assigned to a peace-keeping mission.

Our President has thrown his influence at every step behind the Marxist forces in South West Africa precisely as he has embraced the Marxist forces seeking to shoot their way to power in Rhodesia.

If there were positive advantages to the United States in the President's course, it would be one thing. No such advantages can be perceived.

IN RHODESIA, Carter may yet wind up with an extension of Communist influence over that last bastion of British inheritance and tradition; he may yet wind up with primary responsibility for a bloody civil war and another brutal dictatorship as in Mozambique and Angola.

If Walvis Bay falls under the control of SWAPO revolutionaries, our fleet will find no friendly port for another 800 miles to Capetown. Walvis Bay could become a major Soviet naval base before we know it.

The prospects are unrelievedly gloomy. If the Tories win in England, that would help; some measures of firmness and reason might be restored.

But so long as President Carter plays Trilby to Andrew Young's Svengali, we will continue to lose friends in southern Africa and to waste our influence on a gaggle of tinpot dictators who know an Uncle Sucker when they see him.

Israelis Eye Technology As Major Growth Source

By PHILIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL

When an Israeli starts talking about his country being at a crucial crossroad in its development, a visitor tends to shrug and ask what else is new. But when the speaker is Uzia Galil and he's referring to Israel's future as a high-technology society, he's worth listening to.

Galil is a former naval engineer and university administrator who founded Elron Electronic Industries Ltd., one of Israel's most successful and sophisticated high-technology companies, back in 1962. "Today," he told us, "Israel must enter the post-industrial period much faster than the countries of Western Europe. It most follow the lead of the United States in doing so."

The reasons are simple, he explained. Israel must provide a "good standard of living and quality of life" not only for its present population, but be able to accept the Jews leaving the Soviet Union, attract emigres from the West and bring back Israelis now living abroad, he said.

"To do this in the face of a negative balance of payments, we must create new business and industrial opportunities," he added. "But we must do it in areas that do not require large outlays of capital, such as heavy industry. After all, we need capital and we don't have any natural resources. The only way to do it is through technology, which takes advantage of the human resources we do have here."

Galil says there are lots of businesses Israel can develop based on what he calls "intelligent service" — educational and vocational, information and communications, office automation, health and agricultural.

"This country has all the ingredients to move fast in this direction, while it does not have the ingredients to go the classical way of heavy industry," he noted. "In the next decade, we'll have to look at high technology for our major growth."

Ten-year-old Elscint Ltd., one of the half-dozen companies under the Elron holding company umbrella (though it is partly publicly owned itself), is a prime example of how a high-technology company can develop and prosper in a small and beleaguered country.

Elscint, a manufacturer of nuclear medical instrumentation and computerized axial tomography equipment (commonly known as CAT scanners), has carved out a significant share of the world market in competition with some global giants.

After visiting Galil in his office in Elron's industrial park setting on the outskirts of Haifa, we walked across the street to the modest building where Elscint's engineers and technicians design and produce some of the world's most advanced medical equipment.

"A third of our 1,000 employees are college graduates and 23 are Ph.D.'s," Zvi Porath, a former economics professor and official of the World Bank who now serves as a consultant to the company, proudly pointed out. "Our policy is to spend 15 percent of the cost of our products on research and development. That's double what most big American companies spend."

Elscint's strategy has been to focus on a narrow segment of the world and try to obtain a substantial market share there. "Other companies try to market in places where there is less competition," Porath explained. "But we believe in competing in some of the most sophisticated countries. Wherever we are, we've been able to capture our goal of 20 percent of the market." Those places, he added, include the Boston-to-Washington area of the northeastern U.S., Western Europe and, more recently, Brazil.

Why aim for only 20 percent? "Because we can get that much without forcing the giants to retaliate," he said with a smile.

Despite his obvious pride in the accomplishments so far of the Elron complex of companies, Galil conceded that there are a number of factors serving to limit future growth. He ticked off the need for more capital, manpower, management, new products and marketing prowess.

"At the particular moment in time," he said, "the cycle of limiting factors is in two areas — one is manpower and the other is financing "success" ventures that are ready for a dramatic takeoff."

That's why he's particularly interested in developing high-technology joint ventures with American companies that would include the establishment of subsidiaries in Israel. The marketing in the U.S. would be done by the American company, while the selling in Europe would be done by the Israeli unit. There could also be a valuable exchange of technology, he contended.

"This is the latest concept I'm trying to promote," Galil said, noting that some such ventures were already in the works. The areas of electronics and computer applications are most promising in this regard, he added.

One new Israeli offshoot that excites him, he said, was recently set up to develop computerized controls for irrigation and fertilizer systems. "This could be one of many new ventures to be enhanced by peace, and also applicable in the Arab world in due time," he added.

Mayor Blocks Crossing Gate

HIGHLAND, Ill. (UPI) — Mayor Homer Poss used a pickup truck and a police car to block a railroad crossing for more than an hour Monday because Conrail had not fixed crossing gates the city says have been broken for several years.

The blockade was lifted after Conrail officials in East St. Louis sent workers to the three grade crossings inside Highland's city limits.

Last Wednesday, the Illinois Commerce Commission ordered Conrail to post flagmen at the three crossings beginning Monday until the gates were fixed.

When the flagmen failed to show up, Mayor Poss and Police Chief Charles Barnett drove a five-ton pickup truck and a cruiser with its lights flashing onto the crossing and blocked the two main tracks.

The two vehicles delayed several trains, including Amtrak's eastbound National Ltd. "We did what we felt we had to do," said the mayor.

Poss said the crossing gates often remained down when no trains were in town and sometimes failed to come down when trains did go through town.

Stamp Collecting Not Profitable

By SHARI LEWIS

Stamp collecting is one of the world's most popular hobbies — but it's no way to make money, and most folks who have tried it have taken a licking. Whether you forgive the pun or not, the experts agree that's fact. Paul Moss of Wilshire Stamps says it breaks his heart when people walk in with treasured collections that have taken them years to put together, and he has to tell them that the stuff is worth less than face value (less than the price printed on each stamp).

He says there was a time when it paid to hurry to the post office to buy sheets of stamps on the day they were issued, and to snap up commemorative stamps (those put out to honor an event, person or subject). But that was in the early '30s. Today around 180 million of each issue are printed, and the market is flooded!

Mr. Summit of Summit Stamps Inc. says that there are few exceptions, like the 1976 Bicentennial souvenir sheets. (In that case, only 2 million were printed, and they were available only in special post offices. When sold, they cost a little over $4 a sheet. The going price now is somewhere in the ballpark of $15.)

But these are really flukes, and flukes and errors are probably the only two ways you can make even the slightest profit out of your stamp collection. (One example of a manufacturing error is the occasional sheet of stamps which was supposed to be perforated but isn't.)

But generally, the experts agree that you really have to spend a lot in order to get any money out of your collection. From a profit point of view, stamp collecting is strictly for the pros. However, stamps are fascinating, often beautiful, and they put you in contact with the whole world of yesterday as well as today. Stamp collecting is sure to bring you pleasure — as long as you don't bank on your collection to turn into a treasure.

YESTERDAY'S BRAIN TWISTER: Can you separate each of the coins in the illustration by drawing only three straight lines?

ANSWER: (See Illustration.)

Tokyo Tops Expensive Cities

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — If your income is in the Rockefeller or Rothschild class, you just might be able to afford living in Tokyo or Geneva. For the rest of us — well, there's always Sri Lanka or Jamaica.

According to a U.N. report, Tokyo is far and away the most expensive city in the world — twice as costly as New York, itself no bargain basement.

At the other end of the scale is Sri Lanka, an island off the tip of India. It used to be called Ceylon, and the U.N. study says it is the cheapest place on Earth to live today — especially if you like rain, an average of 153 days of it every year.

The figures, which include housing, are from the latest edition of the United Nations' Monthly Bulletin of Statistics and based on currency exchange rates of last December. It establishes New York at a base of 100 and relates the cost of living of other cities to that.

Tokyo's index is a whopping 199, meaning the cost of living there is virtually double that of New York. If you can afford a hamburger and french fries at $5 plus, you probably won't worry too much about it.

Next down the line is Kinshasa, Zaire, at 187, not that a whole lot of people are thinking of moving there anyway. It is part of what once was the Belgian Congo, and Muhammad Ali holds boxing matches there occasionally.

The third priciest city is, alas, lovely Geneva at 163, and No. 4 is Kampala, Uganda (at least it was when Idi Amin was still running the place) at 152.

The top 10 is rounded out by Brussels, Belgium, 150; Bonn, West Germany, 148; Bahrain (lots of oil, not much else), 147; Copenhagen, Denmark, 146; Central African Empire (complete with one of the world's few remaining emperors), 145; and Buenos Aires and The Hague, tied for 10th at 143.

But not every place requires a stock of gold bullion for survival. If you don't mind the occasional riot, there's Kingston, Jamaica, at 61, second only to Sri Lanka's 59 at the bottom end of the cost of living index. Rum is very cheap there.

Third on the inexpensive list, at 63, is Balmopan, Belize. The country once was known as British Honduras and is primarily of note for its penchant for getting hit by hurricanes.

Other inexpensive lovelies are Lima, Peru, at 72, and tied for fifth least expensive with an index of 73 are Warsaw, Poland; Maseru, Lesotho (a tiny nation in Africa); Valletta, Malta; and Maputo, Mozambique.

Rounding out the bargain 10 are Cairo, Egypt, and Katmandu, Nepal, each at 75. Katmandu has a good view of the Himalayas and a quaint hotel named the Royal run by an equally quaint ex-White Russian named Boris Lissanovitch, if he's not back in jail for building another still.

The U.N. report does concede the figures are based on the living costs of United Nations officials whose "consumption patterns differ from those of the indigenous population" — meaning they tend to live higher on the hog than the locals.

But then, U.N. people in the index base city of New York at not exactly famed for lifestyle austerity, so all things being relative the figures are probably pretty close to accurate for foreigners looking to settle elsewhere.

Generally speaking, western Europe is more expensive than New York — even London, considered by some the premier city of the world, but now hit by a cost of living index of 106. Of the major capitals on the continent, Rome alone is cheaper than New York, at 93.

Communist countries tend to be less expensive. The index for Havana, Cuba, is 82, Bucharest, Romania, 88, Vientiane, Laos, 79, and Belgrade, Yugoslavia, 99. An exception is Budapest, Hungary, slightly more expensive than New York at 104.

Georgetown, Guyana, has a cost of living index of 92 — probably a bargain, if you can tolerate such idiosyncracies as french-fried turkey for Thanksgiving and a national ban on scotch whiskey.

No figures are available for Moscow or Peking. But then, not a lot of foreigners are looking to settle in either, so it probably really doesn't matter.

College Students Construct Cheap, Legal Coffin

SAN MARCOS (UPI) — Some day, when they're referring to him as "the dearly departed," Louis Tanner will have his eyelids closed, his arms folded across his chest and, as he is lowered into the ground, will have a last laugh on the funeral industry.

As a special project, Tanner and Southwest Texas State University classmate Ray Belk researched the business of dying for a class, "The Sociology of Death and Dying."

During their study of state burial requirements and talks with funeral home directors, Tanner and Belk learned it's not necessary to spend thousands of dollars to get buried. In fact, about $40 will cover it.

As part of their project the pair constructed a coffin for $15.36. Of course, it doesn't have polished brass handles or a purple crushed velvet interior. But neither does it cost $1,500, and it is perfectly legal and Tanner plans to make it his final stop.

"When I am buried in this thing I want to rot," Tanner said. "I have no desire to be preserved for centuries in a copper-lined box filled with an inert gas."

The un-lined coffin is fashioned in the classic six-side shape and made of unpainted 1-by-6 tongue-and-groove lumber with strap hinges. To go with the bargain burial box, Belk said a plot in a small town cemetery can be acquired for about $15. Required paperwork will run the cost to about $40.

Texas burial laws are really quite simple, Belk and Tanner learned, and funeral homes and a big cash outlay are not all that necessary.

For instance:

—A cardboard box or a plastic "body bag" are legal for burial.

—Embalming is not necessary if burial is within 24 hours of death.

—Anyone owning at least one acre of land can bury someone on it if they publish notice of their intentions and there are no objections.

—A "pauper's funeral" costs about $250.

In their research Tanner and Belk found some funeral home directors uncooperative and considered the students to be competition. Others, especially in small towns, were very informative about their trade.

"We respect funeral directors for the services they render," Tanner said. "It is more than just the physical process of burying a body. Many people simply are not capable of burying a loved one themselves.

"At the same time, I personally can't help feeling a little hostile towards some funeral homes because of the prices they charge."

Questions Upset Mrs. Trudeau

NEW YORK (UPI) — Margaret Trudeau walked off the set of the NBC "Today" show this week in a "huff" over some of the questions asked by host Jane Pauley.

During the interview, she heatedly denied reports that she had had affairs with Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and King Hussein of Jordan and blamed the rumors on the press.

"She left in a huff when (the interview) was over. She was pretty upset when she left. She didn't like some questions," said an NBC official who was on the set.

He said Mrs. Trudeau walked out when she was asked to remain for some "cutaway" camera shots at the end of a 2½ hour interview.

Another NBC spokesman said as Mrs. Trudeau left the studio she was overheard telling an associate that she was miffed by the questions.

Mrs. Trudeau called the media "very vicious" and said the press "managed to really assassinate my character, particularly in Canada."

She said one reason she wrote her autobiography, "Beyond Reason," was to set the record straight about her life.

Committee To Review Decision

By CHERYL ARVIDSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate begins its disciplinary hearings of veteran Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., next week, but it's still up in the air whether the public will be able see and hear the proceedings or merely read about them.

The action against Talmadge marks the first time in 12 years that a sitting senator has faced the prospect of discipline by the Senate for wrongdoing. Like the 1967 investigation and subsequent censure of the late Sen. Thomas Dodd, D-Conn., Talmadge's case involves charges of financial malfeasance.

The ethics investigation of Talmadge has been going on for a year, but only recently have the television networks shown any interest whatsoever in joining the print journalists who have been covering each step of the probe.

The committee last week made a wise preliminary decision that television and radio coverage of the hearings would be inappropriate. But after shouts of protest from the networks, the members have now decided to review — and possibly reconsider — the decision.

The networks argue that if the hearings are open to the press, they should be open to every type of media. However, it is only cameras and recording devices that are affected by the original ruling. Nothing would stop the television correspondents from sitting through the hearings and covering them as every other reporter will be doing.

The major reason for prohibiting television and radio coverage is the court-like nature of the Talmadge hearings. In most courtrooms, the television cameras and recording devices are banned but their correspondents can still be present.

The ethics committee essentially will be sitting as judges of Talmadge, and the hearings will resemble a trial. The case against Talmadge will be presented by two lawyers who have conducted the committee's investigation and will be calling various witnesses to give testimony.

Ethics chairman Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., said the decision to keep the cameras and tape recorders out of the Talmadge hearings was made in an effort to preserve "decorum" of the proceedings. Even those committee members who favor television cameras agree that their presence can frequently cause a "disturbance."

Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., said if the Talmadge hearings go on "nationwide television, every person will be worrying about the image they project."

But Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., a former television commentator, says, "If you have any media, you ought to have all media." The "fundamental, overriding consideration is fairness" to Talmadge and the other individuals who will be party to the proceedings, he said.

"What I'm concerned about is the effect of a large television exposure on the witnesses," said Special Counsel Carl Eardley. "A lot of the witnesses are already nervous when they get here and when they see the television cameras, they become so worried about the camera that they start forgetting."

There's a lot of logic in Eardley's comment. Anyone who has been present at a televised proceeding of any sort can't help but notice the incredible glare of bright lights. And there's something tremendously disconcerting about a television camera when suddenly it is you that is being filmed.

The six senators on the committee — and Talmadge himself — are all public figures who are used to publicity and used to the cameras. But most of the would-be witnesses are private citizens who naturally might shy away from that sort of exposure.

And if the television reporters need some illustration of the Talmadge proceedings, they can employ artists to sketch the main figures and capture the flavor of the proceedings. This is not a revolutionary idea. The networks employ artists specifically for this sort of work and they use them almost every day in courtrooms across the country.

Edison Goes Ahead With Power Plants

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit Edison is going ahead with plans for three nuclear power plants after its shareholders rejected a proposal by a vote of 36 million to 4 million that it stop developing nuclear power as a source of electricity.

A proxy statement with the resolution was mailed to shareholders before the accident at Three Mile Island, near Harrisburg, Pa, and the vote was announced at the annual shareholders meeting Monday. Edison's first nuclear plant, Fermi 1, was built in 1956 and was damanged in 1966 because of a malfunctioning cooling system. It was re-opened in 1970, then shut down in 1972. Fermi II is 85 percent complete and is to go on line in 1980. Two other plants are to open in 1989 and 1991.

Alcoholism, Heredity Studied

By AL ROSSITER JR.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Alcoholism tends to run in families but if there is an inherited link to the disease, a Kansas University psychiatrist suggests it might be "a lack of intolerance for alcohol."

"At this point, we are not certain that anything is inherited," said Dr. Donald W. Goodwin.

In reviewing evidence for a familial connection to alcoholism, Goodwin noted that numerous studies have found a high prevalance of alcoholism among relatives of alcoholics.

He said most studies have found at least 25 percent of adult male relatives are alcoholic. And a higher than expected frequency of alcoholism, between 5 and 10 percent, has been seen in females related to alcoholics.

But this does not mean alcoholism is inherited, he said in a report in a recent issue of the medical journal, Archives of General Psychiatry. Speaking Chinese also runs in families, he said, but not because of genes.

Goodwin said that studies of twins, however, also suggest heredity might be a factor in alcoholism.

Another approach to try to separate biological influences from acquired influences in alcoholism is to compare children separated from their parents soon after birth and raised by foster parents.

A study Goodwin and his colleagues conducted of a group of Danish adoption cases a few years ago found that sons of alcoholics were four times more likely to be alcoholic than were sons of non-alcoholics, whether raised by non-alcoholic foster parents or their own parents. But studies of daughters were inconclusive.

All the evidence put together, Goodwin said, at least suggests the possibility of some kind of an inherited link to alcoholism.

That's where a "lack of intolerance" to alcohol might fit the picture.

Goodwin said there is a wide range of innate variations in the way people respond to alcohol.

He said Orientals offer the most conspicuous example. Three separate studies have shown that small amounts of alcohol cause the skin to flush and produce other unpleasant reactions in about three quarters of Orientals.

Goodwin said the the low rate of alcoholism in the Orient has usually been attributed to social factors. "Now it appears that a large number of Orientals are physiologically intolerant of alcohol and this to some extent protects them from alcoholism.

"Other groups with relatively low alcoholism rates similarly may be protected by an innate sensitivity to alcohol."

He said, for example, fewer women are alcoholic than men and informal surveys suggest many women experience unpleasant physical effects such as nausea and headache after modest amounts of alcohol.

Goodwin said there have been reports that more Jews than non-Jews have adverse physical reactions to alcohol "which conceivable may contribute to the low prevalence of alcoholism among Jews.

"In any case, it obviously is essential to be able to drink large quantities of alcohol to be alcoholic," he said.

"To summarize, large numbers of people are more or less 'protected' from becoming alcholic because of genetically determined adverse physical reactions to alcohol.

"Possibly, if anything is inherited in alcoholism, it is a lack of intolerance for alcohol."

Amtrak Passenger Bookings Increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Passenger bookings on Amtrak during the coming weeks are up 40 percent over the same period last year, but officials of the nation's federally-subsizided passenger rail system can't explain why.

Amtrak spokesman Joseph Vranich said some of the increase is due to a strike which grounded United Airlines planes March 31. But he said there have been advance bookings even where United does not fly. He added that the higher advance booking rate does not mean actual ridership will be up by 40 percent. Vranich said Amtrak trains carried 6,494,000 passengers between October 1978 and the end of January this year, an increase of 6 percent over the same period a year earlier.

Secretary Disputes Statement

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Beverly Hamby says she doesn't believe it, even if the United States government says it's so. No, she said, secretaries do not agree that their careers are at a dead end.

That notion was disseminated this week in a statement by the National Commission on Working Women, which ushered in National Secretaries Week with responses from a survey of 19,000 "secretaries."

But were they really secretaries? Mrs. Hamby, president of the National Secretaries Association, believes many responses were from clerks rather than secretaries. It happens all the time, she says.

Clerks, it seems, arbitrarily boost themselves into the higher classification, and in doing so confuse the definition. The title has lost prestige, she says. Even top professionals have lost pride.

"Women now say 'I'm only a secretary' in the same way they once said 'I'm only a housewife,' " she declared. It disturbs her. She abhors the tendency to denigrate one's own occupation.

"If a secretary is not just marking time and waiting from payday to payday, but instead works at her job as a career, I can't believe she thinks of it as a dead-end," said Mrs. Hamby, who is a CPS.

A CPS? A Certified Professional Secretary, earned in a two day, six-part examination encompassing behavioral science, business law, economics, management, accounting, decision-making, administration.

A clerk? No. There is a difference, and it is spelled out in exacting detail in the NSA's prototype job description, only fragments of which can be reported, but enough, still, to convey a sense of the message.

"A secretary relieves executive of various administrative details; coordinates and maintains effective procedures and efficient work flows; implements policies and procedures set by employer; establishes and maintains harmonious working relationships with superiors, coworkers, subordinates, customers or clients, and supplier."

Paragraph Two: "Schedules appointments and maintains calendar. Receives and assists visitors and telephone callers and refers them to executive or other appropriate person as circumstances warrant..."

It goes like that for nine more paragraphs, only a few words of which relate to shorthand and typing, which remain essential. The detail is dizzying. An unorderly mind might even get confused in the reading.

Is there a definition more abstract, less specific? There is:

"A secretary shall be defined as an executive assistant who possesses a mastery of office skills, demonstrates the ability to assume responsibility without direct supervison, exercises initiative and judgment, and makes decision within the scope of assigned authority."

Mrs. Hamby, mother of three, 34 years a professional, demonstrates her professional skills as secretary to Albert Golemon, a senior partner in the Golemon and Rolfe, architects. And she still takes courses.

A deadend? Absurd, she says. There is always a challenge. In fact, it is well known in executive circles that many a secretary knows more about the office, and the job, than does the executive in charge.

It's as it should be, she says. "The secrtary should know more about the office than the boss." The boss should be free to make decisions. "He, or she, shouldn't have to be concerned with trivialities."

Pride, in self and work. Attitude. They, it would seem, have as much to do with making the professional as does a knowledge of finance or law or management theory, which Mrs. Hamby studied in night courses.

But pride sometimes is offended, by the salaries. She agrees with the 55 percent in the government survey who complained of low pay. "I think there's no question about that," she said. "No question."

The survey found respondents earning about $8,500 a year, but in an earlier interview Mrs. Hamby said she thought that well-trained, competent beginners could command as much as $800 a month.

Recognition is coming too, she said in that interview last fall. In five years, she said, the same talent and experience will command "at least $1,000 to $1,200 a month." There is a shortage of good secretaries.

Certified Professional Secretaries now earn about $16,000 to $18,000 a year, she said, but she foresees the time when they too will be better rewarded. To what extent? "$24,000 to $30,000 in five years."

While inflation might account for some of that, money of that sort suggests growing recognition of the secretary's importance. It might not say the potential is open-ended. But dead-ended? Hardly.

Economic Pressure On Japan Could Be Revenge

NEW YORK (UPI) — Japan is coming under increasingly strong economic pressure from the United States and Western Europe. Ostensibly the reason is its huge trade surplus, but two experts think the real cause is animosity and jealousy, stemming from Japan's post-war economic success.

Herman Kahn, a noted American futorologist, and Thomas Pepper, Japan director of the Hudson Institute, a policy research organization, say in a book to be published here in May that the pressure is applied "in part, out of long run considerations — but mainly, it seems to us, out of a sense of irritation, frustration, and even revenge."

Kahn and Pepper say there is an increasingly widespread feeling in the United States and Western Europe that the Japanese have benefited more than anybody from the international trading system, yet have done little to help make it work well.

The feeling of irritation is shared — though for quite different reasons — by the Japanese themselves, Kahn and Pepper say.

The economists' book, "The Japanese Challenge: the Success and Failure of Economic Success" (Thomas Y. Crowell), says the Japanese feel they have been very successful in beating the West at its own game, and now the West is trying to change the rules in the middle of the game.

"The Japanese believe their success rests on their propensity to work hard, to save and invest huge sums, to apply themselves diligently and creatively, and to be willing to take great risks," according to Kahn and Pepper.

The Japanese, therefore, feel entitled to success, but believe that the West is trying, by sheer force and unfair tactics, to hold them back.

The Japanese can do little in the short run to change the situation significantly, according to the book.

Japan has taken unfair advantage of the world trading system, Kahn and Pepper say, by placing, encouraging, or tolerating various explicit and implicit barriers to imports of manufactured goods.

But like it or not, they say, that is either past history or, to the degree that it continues today, a much less important part of the overall situation than the current conditions of excess capacity hanging over the Japanese domestic economy.

Partly because of excessive investment 5 to 10 years ago, they say, many Japanese manufacturing plants are relatively modern and there is little possibility they can be scrapped or retired.

For this reason also Japanese manufacturers are under great pressure to produce and sell, even at prices below average costs.

Japan is a country with high income but a much lower level of accumulated wealth, lagging behind other developed countries in almost every aspect of social infrastructure or amenities.

Kahn and Pepper suggest what they call a "Yonzenso" plan designed to more than double the "real tangible wealth" of the nation in a decade through large-scale public and private investments in super highways, housing, education, social welfare and social insurance programs.

"Some such program," they say, "would stand the best chance of solving the short and long-term problems of success now plaguing Japan — sopping up current excess capacity, getting private investment moving again, returning the consumer to the market, and reducing the enormous trade surpluses that bedevil Japan's relations with the United States, Europe, and increasingly, other countries in Asia."

Report Cites 82 Percent Voter Turnout For Presidential Election

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ronald Moe has published a minority report on voter turnout in the United States. He says it probably was at least 82 percent in 1976 — nearly 30 percent higher than the bare majority other authorities use for the last presidential election.

Moe, a specialist in American government for the Library of Congress, writing in the Republican National Committee's journal "Common Sense," bases his conclusion on the turnout of Americans who were actually registered to vote. Most other turnout statistics are based on voting age population, which is a rough estimate of the number of Americans 18 or older.

Based on voting age population, less than 54 percent of Americans who could have voted actually went to the polls in 1976. Based on Moe's calculations of "eligible" citizens — people who are both physically able and legally entitled to vote — the turnout was at least 82 percent, and could have been as high as 88 percent.

Washington Window

Moe's calculations require some leaps of faith. He estimates, for example, that because of time lags in "purging" registration lists, 6 percent of the people listed as eligible by the states may have died or moved away. That would mean the actual number of eligible voters is smaller than it appears and that the actual turnout percentage is larger.

Furthermore, Moe objects to the common practice of using the vote for president as the total vote cast: "There is always a significant number of persons ... who take the initiative to come to the polls and sign the register but who either do not vote for one of the presidential candidates or who have their completed ballots disqualified for some reason."

Moe says there are several good reasons for taking a closer look at the claims of extremely low voter turnout.

First, he says, "groups seeking changes in certain public policies are more likely to find a friendly reception to their ideas if it can be 'shown' that voting participation is low." He says it also "is possible to discern the emergence of an 'apathy industry' consisting of organizations whose existence and financial well being is dependent upon the continued appearance, if not reality, of apathy among American voters."

Communist Party Tries To Stem Flow Of West German Marks

By WELLINGTON LONG

BERLIN (UPI) — Turning slightly so that the light caught the Communist party badge on his lapel, the East German asked the head waiter for a table in East Berlin's most elegant restaurant-night club.

"Everything's booked," replied the waiter.

"Let me try," said the Communist's West German brother-in-law, handing the waiter a West German 10 mark note.

"How close to the orchestra?" asked the waiter as he waved them forward.

That episode, repeated thousands of times, has caused East Germany's ruling Communist Party to attempt to curb circulation of West German marks as a parallel currency more valued by East Germans than their own money.

Although the official exchange rate is one for one, on the open market one West German mark buys four East German marks.

But West German marks are even more valuable than this to East Germans because, until now, they could be spent in state-operated "Intershops." These stores sell West German, American and Japanese items — good coffee, cosmetics, radios, TV sets, detergents, spirits — unavailable or of inferior quality in other East German stores.

The Communists originally established the Intershop chain for foreign tourists. But after the two Germanys took up diplomatic relations, and some 8 million West Germans began visiting their East German relatives annually, the Communists realized they could tap an additional source of hard currency.

Seven years ago they began allowing East Germans who had West German marks to use the Intershops, too.

Overnight, West German marks became a parallel and elite currency.

Craftsmen offered official and unofficial price lists. For 10 percent of his fee paid in West German marks, in advance, a plumber or TV repairman would come to an East German's home immediately. Otherwise he would come around next month, maybe.

Through the 1960s, West Germans sent East German relatives packages containing such scarce items as coffee, cocoa, spokes for bicycle wheels, automobile tires and quality clothing.

Then, instead of packages West Germans sent or brought their East German relatives money.

The Intershop system began taking in about 700 million West German marks — worth $378 million — per year.

A bitter joke reflected the situation:

An East German pensioner (only the over-65's are granted exit visas to go to the West) returning from a visit to Duesseldorf is asked how he found it.

"A lot like East Germany," he replies. "You can get anything for West German marks."

In 1978, workers in several factories in East Berlin and other East German cities struck in unsuccessful attempts to force state-owned enterprises to pay part of their wages in West German marks.

Communist party members complained. They are officially forbidden to have any contact with West Germans, even relatives, so they had little or no access to the coveted West German marks.

This April the regime finally acted, but only in a tentative way, announcing that Intershops would accept only hard currency coupons.

East Germans still can accept West German marks from relatives — the Communist government does not intend to cut off that source of hard currency. But within 14 days, they are supposed to exchange the foreign marks for coupons.

The regime probably hopes this measure will move the hard currency into its treasury faster.

Holloman Cites 'Problems' With Texico Ledgers

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

CLOVIS, N.M. — An owner of the auditing firm that detected $27,000 missing from Texico, N.M., city funds this morning told jurors he found "problems" with city ledger sheets on his initial inspection in March, 1978.

Ribble Holloman, co-owner of the Texico firm hired to audit city finances, was the first witness today in the embezzlement trial of Clara Wiehl.

Mrs. Wiehl, 49, former Texico city clerk, is charged with 16 counts of embezzlement, 16 counts of failure to deposit public money and six counts of tampering with public records.

Although about $27,000 is reported missing, Mrs. Wiehl is charged only with the embezzlement of $5,000 to $6,000. That is the amount estimated missing during the period from October 1977 to March 1978.

Holloman told jurors in Judge Ruben Nieves' 9th District Court here how he began his initial audits of city finances March 9, 1978 — the day before Mrs. Wiehl resigned.

"I began tracing from the ledger card to the cash receipt listing to the stubs," he said.

"But some receipts of accounts were not showing up in what should have been a complete listing."

However, Holloman said, a second cash receipt listing sheet found wrapped around 23 discarded water payment stubs coincided with the stubs.

Those 23 stubs in question were discovered in a city hall waste basket by a co-worker of Mrs. Wiehl. That discovery and subsequent checking that revealed a doctored ledger sheet prompted Holloman's audit.

"I told Mrs. Wiehl I had some problems reconciling some figures (in the city ledger) and had a few questions I was sure she could straighten out," Holloman said.

"My plan was to return the next day and continue my audit, but I didn't because I got a call about 9 p.m. from the mayor telling me Clara had resigned."

Holloman said he then turned the ledger sheet found in the waste basket over to his associate Dutch Rains, who conducted Texico's official audit.

Mrs. R.E. Crooks of Texico also was called to the stand today to explain how she had paid her water bill from October 1977 to April 1978.

Mrs. Crooks said she paid all of her bills with cash to Mrs. Wiehl and was not given a receipt for the payments. However, she said that when she paid her March bill on April 5, 1978, after the missing funds had been discovered, Texico Water Superintendent Billy Lee Hammet gave her a receipt, according to the city's new policy.

Mrs. Crooks is one of three Texico water customers District Attorney Bill Bonem plans to call to the stand in an effort to prove that Mrs. Wiehl accepted payment for water bills but did not deposit the money in city accounts.

In testimony Tuesday, Hammet told how he found the 23 water bill receipts in question in a city hall waste basket in late February 1978. The receipts stubs were wrapped in a city cash ledger sheet, used to record customer payments.

The five-woman, seven-man jury heard a reading of Hammet's testimony. He could not appear in court because he is recuperating from back surgery.

"I couldn't believe what I found," said Hammet in testimony taken Saturday. "Clara and I have been good friends for a long time, and this cut me to the bone."

Hammet said the stubs totalled $588 in water bill payments.

Hammet said he and another city hall worker checked the city's water bill payment record and found that entries for payment of bills had been made for the stubs that were thrown away.

Before Hammet found the missing stubs, he said Mrs. Wiehl had told him "there's no use looking in the trash because it would have already been thrown away."

After finding the missing stubs and the doctored cash ledger, Hammet went to the Texico mayor. "I told him there was something going on down here that needed checking," he said.

The district attorney said Tuesday that the large number of witnesses called by both the state and defense would cause the trial to run at least through Friday.

Also testifying Tuesday was Mrs. Marie Christian, acting city clerk-treasurer. Mrs. Christian testified about bookkeeping practices used in city hall.

Mrs. Christian became city clerk-treasurer after Mrs. Wiehl quit her job on March 10, 1978.

Under cross examination by Dan Buzzard, Mrs. Wiehl's attorney, Mrs. Christian told the court that other city employees, including Hammet, accepted water bill payments and had keys to City Hall.

In earlier testimony, Mrs. Christian said that $7,000 in cash had been found in the city hall building the day after Mrs. Wiehl quit.

Lloyd Jeffries, a field engineer for the National Cash Register Corporation, told the court how the Texico City Hall accounting machine worked. He said it would be possible on the machine to show payment by customers, while not actually depositing any money into the city's account.

Mrs. Wiehl was indicted on Dec. 15 1978. All of the embezzlement charges, except four, were fourth degree felonies, which could carry a one-to-five year prison sentence.

Court Rules Against City Couple

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A Lubbock couple is not entitled to damages resulting from the alleged breach of warranty in the sale and installation of a mobile home they purchased, the Texas Supreme Court ruled today.

A Lubbock trial court and jury had reached much the same conclusion, refusing to award Roynold and Laverne Smail any damages to cover any inconvenience they incurred after purchasing the mobile home.

But, an appeals court reversed that decision, awarding the couple $1,000. Since purchasing the mobile home in 1974, the Smail's complained that doors and windows would not shut properly, and that there was a possibility the frame was not constructed properly.

The case the Smail's brought to the Supreme Court listed as defendant only the General Electric Credit Corp., which held the installation contract on the mobile home.

In their original suit, Sequoya Mobile Homes, the manufacturer, and Crawford Mobile Homes, the dealer, were also listed as defendants.

The suit before the Supreme Court alleged that General Electric Credit Corp. had violated both state and federal consumer lending laws by not disclosing the full extent of the service contract, including three years of insurance at a cost of $753.

In its opinion by Chief Justice Joe Greenhill, the Supreme Court ruled that General Electric was not required to include the insurance premiums as part of the finance charge under either state or federal law.

Facilities Make Two Requests

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Lubbock medical facilities have made two requests of the Texas Health Facilities Commission.

Methodist Hospital has asked the commission to extend the completion deadline in its ruling which authorized expansion and remodeling of four floors of the facility and remodeling and expansion of the dietary department. A 10 a.m. May 3 hearing is set.

West Texas Home Health Agency has asked the commission to rule that no permission is required from the state agency to assume the Odessa office of Schlesinger Home Health Service Agency and the patients served there when Schlesinger transfers its Provider Number from the Odessa sub-unit to its Laredo branch office.

Anyone who wants to become a party to the request has until May 1 to file notice with the commission.

Brownfield Regional Medical Center, Brownfield, has asked the commission to amend a certificate of need issued Nov. 17, 1977, to reflect an increase in the project cost.

Familiar Message Delivered During 'Child-Self' Seminar

By TOM GRIESS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The message was familiar but of special significance to the Lubbock area: Children are the hope of the future, they require parental and institutional love and without it the problems of today can only persist.

"I don't know how to explain our infant mortality rates any other way except to say they are the pits," Judy Atchison, director of the South Plains Health Systems, Inc., in Lubbock, told a large gathering at the United Way agency orientation institute at Reese Air Force Base this morning.

One of three speakers addressing the topic, "The Child and Self," Mrs. Atchison said, "We don't know yet about 1979 (infant mortality rate in Lubbock County), but we're afraid they're going to continue to rise."

She said the federally funded South Plains Health Systems, Inc., reflects the commitment of Washington to fight chronic health problems. The organization provides health care planning and seeks to coordinate the activities of local health care agencies.

Society tends to have a misconceived notion of the importance of the infant mortality level, Mrs. Atchison said.

"The infant mortality rate is one of the prime indicators of the health of a society," she said, adding that if the decision was in her hands, fighting infant mortality would be accorded highest priority among health problems.

Dr. Jeanette Jenkins, an assistant professor of home economics, child development at Texas Tech University, told the assembly that the waiting list to use the three United Way low-cost day care centers in Lubbock numbers "nearly 1000" persons.

"Low-cost day care is the only alternative for women having to work," she said, citing statistics which show 40 percent of Texas mothers with children under the age of six as part of the labor force.

She added that 54 percent of Texas mothers with school-age children now work and stressed that more women are joining the work force out of choice rather than need, making day care centers all the more necessary.

A unique educational program designed to help handicapped and slow developing children through age two was also brought to the gathering's attention.

Karen Meers, a teacher with the Developmental Education Birth Through Two (DEBT) program sponsored by the Lubbock Independent School District, said she and the other special education teachers on the staff work with parents in teaching basic skills to young children.

Sessions are conducted one hour per week, usually at the parents' home, Mrs. Meers said, and the child is instructed in four areas: gross motor skills; fine motor skills; personal-social skills, and language skills.

The children are also offered the use of gymnasium facilities and a splashing pool.

"Early intervention does make a difference," Mrs. Meers told the assembled. As the children grow out of the DEBT program, they are given follow-up service to determine where and how they will continue their skills and educational training.

Police Seek Evidence After Finding Fetus

Police early today said they are seeking for questioning a man who reportedly threw a dead fetus out the second-floor window of a hotel on the east edge of downtown Lubbock Tuesday.

The fetus, apparently in its fourth month of development, was found Tuesday afternoon in an alley behind the Rose Hotel at 804 Ave. G.

Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy said today he will withhold a ruling in the case until he had met with representatives from the criminal district attorney's office.

Police Lt. Billy Knox said he contacted the apparent mother and father of the fetus, and was told by the mother, a 19-year-old Mexican-American, that she had had a miscarriage about 9 a.m. that day.

The father, a black man thought to be in his 40s, said he wrapped the fetus in newspapers and threw it in the trash in the kitchen area of the hotel, Knox said.

The fetus, thought to be a boy, reportedly was thrown out the second-floor window of the hotel by a man police said they wished to question. Police indicated they did not know of any criminal action in connection with the incident.

A Lubbock woman said she made the discovery about 2 p.m., but did not call police because she could not find a telephone.

Authorities were notified about 4 p.m. when a man saw the fetus and flagged down a police parking control officer.

MARVELLA BAYH

Marvella Bayh Dies Of Cancer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Marvella Bayh, who accepted a futile fight against cancer as a way to leave a legacy of hope for millions, is dead at the age of 46.

Mrs. Bayh died Tuesday at the National Institutes of Health in a Maryland suburb of Washington, D.C. with her husband of 26 years, Indiana Sen. Birch Bayh, at her side.

She was hailed by political and personal friends alike for her strength and determination in an eight-year battle against the disease.

Mrs. Bayh underwent a mastectomy in October 1971, and learned 14 months ago that the cancer had returned and was inoperable. She said living with the disease helped her to learn to cherish life, and to set her own priorities.

Sears Halts Bids On Contracts

CHICAGO (AP) — Sears, Roebuck and Co., the nation's largest retailer, says it will accept no further federal contracts because of a "campaign of harassment" by federal investigators over Sears' hiring practices.

Company chairman Edward R. Telling said Tuesday that Sears will honor existing government contracts but will not bid upon or accept contracts "for an indefinite time, beginning immediately." The company's dealings with the government amount to about .1 percent of its annual business — $20 million of $17.2 billion in sales.

Telling said Sears was taking the action because the Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs had started what he said appears to be "a campaign of harassment, subterfuge or retaliation." Companies that bid on government contracts must comply with federal civil rights and affirmative action laws and regulations.

In January, Sears sued 10 federal agencies, including the contract compliance agency, to resolve what it described as conflicting laws and regulations restricting jobs and promotions for minorities and women.

"After 15 months of silence, but within weeks after our suit was filed, the OFCCP suddenly decided to 'field test' the company's model affirmative action compliance plan," Telling said. "Last month, the OFCCP told us it intends to conduct almost as many on-site reviews in the next two months as it conducted in all of 1978."

Agency director Weldon Rougeau said "the government has not harassed or intimidated Sears."

Rougeau said Sears approached his office two years ago to obtain approval of a national affirmative action program (AAP) that Sears had prepared.

"After review by our staff and lawyers, we determined that several changes were needed and requested that the format for the national AAP be tested at selected Sears facilities. Sears balked and refused to be cooperative with the government."

Telling said "representatives of OFCCP have failed to answer our letters questioning the reasons and methods for the proposed field tests."

Rougeau added that, "I don't think that a retail business ... of Sears' size ... should ever go out of business with the government because it cannot comply with equal employment requirements."

Goods provided under the federal contracts include refrigerators, stoves and other appliances, office furniture and a number of items used for disaster aid assistance, Sears spokesman Robert Shoup said.

Telling said that, "Although the profit margin has been small and sometimes non-existent, we have viewed our role as a government contractor as a public service."

He added that "Sears clearly is not taking this action to escape the affirmative action requirements ... since we have asked the court for an order declaring" the company has achieved the equal opportunity goals.

He said the federal General Services Administration, after more than three years of negotiations with Sears, approved a model affirmative action compliance plan and submitted it to the compliance office for approval in January 1978. The GSA said the plan met requirements of the compliance office regulations nationwide, Telling said.

The compliance office has reviewed Sears more than 1,000 times over the last 11 years, he said, and only technical violations have been cited.

Couple Can Remain Married

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Instead of getting a divorce over liquor, Phyllis and George Evans say they'll "have a great big party."

The state attorney general's office says they don't have to dissolve their marriage in order for Mrs. Evans to keep her state liquor license.

In an opinion written for the Washington State Liquor Control Board and released Tuesday, Deputy Attorney General Philip Austin said Mrs. Evans won't lose the beer and wine license for her Allentown Superette south of Seattle just because her husband is a beer truck driver.

State liquor laws say no one with a financial interest in liquor wholesaling can have an interest in retail outlets and Austin's opinion came in the nick of time for the Evanses.

"Thank goodness!" said Mrs. Evans, 34. "We were going ahead with our divorce, thinking it would be several years before we got a ruling. Our divorce would have been final the first of June."

In his opinion, Austin said, "a mere salaried beer truck driver" has no direct financial interest in the wholesaling firm, Sid Eland Co.

Evans does not make commissions and his paycheck does not amount to a wholesaler illegally giving money to a retailer, Austin said.

He also said a married couple could get around the liquor laws by drawing up separate property agreements.

Austin said a couple from Burien is suing the board rather than seeking a divorce. Gerald Junt has an interest in a distributing company and his wife works in a meat department of a supermarket where beer and wine are sold.

A third case that has drawn publicity involves Patricia and Lowen Clausen of Seattle. Mrs. Clausen wants to open a Danish restaurant and serve beer and wine. But her husband is a Seattle policeman, and the board has denied her a license, saying her husband enforces liquor laws.

The Clausens say they'll divorce and live together in hopes of getting a license that way, like the Evanses had planned.

INMATE MOTHER — Brenda Glass, 24-year-old Georgia-born federal prison inmate, poses with her son Nathan at a women's shelter in California. She is part of an experimental program at the Federal Correctional Institute at Pleasanton, Calif., which allows her to spend four to six months with her baby at the women's shelter while learning child care skills. Inmates Allowed To Rear Babies

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Brenda Glass is a new mother, and her pride in her 2-week-old son Nathan is obvious as she hums to the tiny infant in her arms.

Brenda Glass also is a federal prisoner, serving an 18-to 20-year prison term for a 1975 armed robbery at a Washington, D.C., motel during which $11 was taken. Her companions in crime included her brother and several friends.

She is rearing her baby while an inmate as part of an experimental program aimed at giving both the mother and child a chance to succeed on the outside.

"I may be overprotective, but he's so precious to me," said the 24-year-old Georgia-born inmate. "He's the only child I've had a chance to nurse and take care of." She gave up one daughter and left a second with the baby's grandmother because she was behind bars.

The program at the Federal Correctional Institution at Pleasanton, about 40 miles east of here, will allow Miss Glass to spend four to six months with her baby at a women's shelter in nearby Hayward while learning child care skills.

Miss Glass says motherhood will keep her "on a straight and narrow path" upon her release on parole this summer.

Psychologists say there is a new realization that both the jailed mother and her children need more contact with each other. The mother must work out fears and guilt at being responsible for the separation, and the children must learn to understand their mother's plight and develop a more positive attitude toward law enforcement.

At Pleasanton, women inmates and volunteers also run a privately funded children's center on the prison grounds, open Saturday and Sunday for mother-child visits.

Only low-risk prisoners are eligible for the Pregnant Inmate Program — one of a growing number of federal and state projects to allow inmate mothers to spend more time with their children and develop a stronger bond. Among the other programs:

—At Clinton Correctional Facility in New Jersey, a Camp Retreat Program gives low-security inmate mothers the opportunity to spend a few weekends camping with their children.

—A Florida correctional institution inmate, Terry Moore, was granted her request to raise her baby in the state women's prison by a circuit court judge last month. Miss Moore, 22, is serving a 7½-year term for robbery and arson. She will be allowed to raise her baby in prison for 18 months.

A few legislatures — Florida, Illinois, Montana, New York and Wyoming — have specifically provided that a mother's incarceration is a sufficient reason to take her child away.

But prison officials say there is a greater awareness of the mothering needs of 1,600 federal women inmates and thousands more in state prisons. According to statistics, more than 21,000 children in America have mothers in prison. Most of the women are young, uneducated single parents.

"There is more and more planning for the female inmate," said Karen Amy, administrative officer at the Federal Bureau of Prisons. "We believe the mother has an important role to play in interacting with her children."

Psychologists agree that the children, as much as their mothers, are victims of the woman's incarceration.

"The children feel that they've been abandoned and some become delinquents," said Ann Stanton, a lawyer-psychologist at the University of Minnesota, who has studied women inmates and their children.

"Many of the mothers develop unrealistic expectations while behind bars and don't anticipate negative reactions from their children," she added.

"You cannot assume that because a woman has committed a crime, she does not have a strong need to care for her children," said Betty McKenzie, social work supervisor at Clinton Correctional Facility.

A children's center on prison grounds allows the inmate mother to express her love in more relaxed surroundings than the crowded visiting area, where visitors and inmates often aren't allowed to touch each other. The center at Pleasanton looks like a nursery school, with toys and bright decorations.

"The child who comes to visit has a lot of misconceptions about prison. Some of the fears are resolved here," said Harold Kahler, who heads the education program at Pleasanton.

At the Santa Clara County women's residential center in San Jose, about 25 women inmates and up to nine children are housed in an apartment complex where there are no locks, fences or guards. The women go to work, study or learn vocational skills. Their sentences range from 80 days to nine months, said Maria Black, a registered nurse who directs the program.

The mothers go to work or class, while the children are cared for in a child care center in the complex. Of 204 participants, 26 have been sent back to the Santa Clara county jail for infractions of the rules and eight women were rearrested. No one has tried to escape.

"The woman inmate knows she wants to be a good mother, but needs support or specific skills," Ms. Black said.

Worker Says Signatures Forged

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A former Kerr-McGee Corp. plutonium worker continued Tuesday to claim two signatures on health and safety records are forgeries despite conflicting testimony from a handwriting expert.

Appearing as a defense witness, Randy Snodgrass, 24, of Oklahoma City told jurors in the $11.5 million Karen Silkwood plutonium contamination negligence trial he knew a handwriting expert had been summoned to challenge his earlier testimony he didn't sign a health and safety class acknowledgement.

"I still don't remember signing either one of those and neither look like my signature," Snodgrass said Tuesday.

During his earlier testimony, given in mid-March during the Silkwood estate's presentation of its case, Snodgrass said he attended some training sessions, but not a 20-hour, five-day series of classes.

Carter Defends SALT Pact

NEW YORK (AP) — President Carter declared today that the United States will be able to tell whether the Russians are cheating on a new strategic arms limitation treaty from the moment it is signed.

Campaigning for support of the yet-to-be completed treaty, Carter told the American Newspaper Publishers Association in a prepared speech that the nation is faced with the choice of a possibly imperfect treaty or "a dark nightmare of unrestrained arms competition."

In appealing to the publishers to help explain the treaty to their readers, Carter clearly hoped to gain votes for ratification when the agreement is sealed and submitted to the Senate later in the year.

Once again, Carter described the treaty as nearly complete, an optimistic report he has made for several months. He gave no inkling what remains in the way of a final agreement.

But State Department officials said privately there would have to be at least one more, and possibly several, negotiating sessions between Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin.

They said not to expect an announcement of a final agreement before early next week, if that soon.

One issue known to be unresolved is whether the treaty would have to be wrapped up before Carter held a summit meeting with Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev or whether they could leave some final details to be cleared away there.

Following the speech, possibly his most extensive defense of U.S. arms policy, Carter planned to attend a town meeting and a Democratic fund raiser in New Hampshire before flying home to the White House.

In his speech, Carter dealt directly with the issue of verification, which looms as possibly the most explosive aspect of debate over treaty ratification.

He insisted that the loss of two monitoring stations in Iran, which provided a ringside view of Soviet rocket launchings, deprived the United States of only one of many intelligence sources.

"We are concerned with that loss, but we must keep it in perspective," Carter said.

He said the stations, which were closed by Iran's revolutionary regime, helped mostly to check on the way the Soviets modernize their missiles — and on only a part of that process.

Photographic satellites and other systems enable the United States to look over the Russians' shoulders with great accuracy, Carter said.

"There is no question that any cheating which might affect our national security would be discovered in time for us to respond fully," he said.

Some critics of the treaty have questioned U.S. verification capabilities, particularly with the loss of the Iranian stations. They have seized on acknowledgements from within the administration that it will take some time to make up for what was lost in Iran.

Carter seemed to hedge at one point, saying he was confident no "significant" treaty violation could take place without U.S. detection.

But he also declared flatly: "The treaty must — and will be — verifiable from the day it is signed."

That confidence was the overriding theme of his speech.

Ticking off the advantages he claimed would result from a treaty limiting U.S. and Soviet strategic bombers and intercontinental ballistic missiles, Carter said SALT II would bring:

—Significant reductions in Soviet strategic forces.

—Flexibility to meet U.S. defense needs.

—A foundation for further controls on nuclear and conventional arms.

—Self-respect and the earned respect of the world for a United States committed to peace.

Without a treaty, he said, the Russians would be free of restraints and capable of an enormous weapons buildup and U.S. defense spending would have to rise sharply.

"Without SALT," Carter said, "the world would be forced to conclude that America had chosen confrontation rather than cooperation and peace."

Federal Agency Studies Shutdown Of Reactors

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission is deciding whether to temporarily shut down eight reactor units with design features similar to those of the stricken Three Mile Island unit.

The decision, expected today, follows a last-minute attempt by operators of the reactors to head off any closing.

Executives from four utilities and Babcock Wilcox, which designed the reactors, told NRC staffers Tuesday the plants can be operated safely.

Four of the eight units already are temporarily closed for refueling or safety checks.

If the NRC orders a shutdown, the hardest hit utility will be the Duke Power Co., whose three reactors provide electricity for much of South Carolina and North Carolina.

Warren Owen, the utility's senior vice president, said a shutdown would cause sporadic blackouts in his service area during the peak-demand month of August.

He said his company's three Oconee nuclear facilities provide 60 percent of the electric power in South Carolina and 40 percent of Duke Power's total output.

Operators of the Davis-Besse plant in Ohio, the Rancho Seco plant in California and Arkansas Unit One in Arkansas also argued against a shutdown. The other two plants involved, both among those already shut down, are Crystal River in Florida and Three Mile Island Unit 1, sister unit to the one striken March 28.

Besides the three South Carolina units, the only other Babcock & Wilcox plant now operating is the Rancho Seco reactor near Sacramento. California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. reiterated Tuesday his request that the facility be temporarily closed.

Two key NRC staff members — Roger Mattson, director of the division of system safety, and Edson Case, deputy director of nuclear reactor regulation — told NRC commissioners Monday that a temporary closing of the Babcock & Wilcox plants is advisable.

However, Case's superior, Harold Denton, who supervised emergency operations at Three Mile Island, suggested further discussions with the utilities and reactor manufacturer, prompting Tuesday's day-long meeting.

The NRC staff, including Denton, expressed concern Tuesday that the Babcock & Wilcox-equipped plants continue to have a number of design features which could make them susceptible to accidents such as the one at Three Mile Island near Harrisburg, Pa.

In related news, an NRC analyst said Tuesday the nuclear reactor at Three Mile Island was so badly damaged that workers may have trouble taking it apart.

Woman Recalls Daring Career

across the Atlantic. The deal fell through when a group of Paterson, N.J., businessmen failed to raise the necessary $35,000, but it earned her the nickname "Miss Lindy."

To learn the whole story, you must turn to the cracked, yellowed scrapbooks Miss Ward prizes above everything else she owns. Her own memory of her exploits is fogged by old age, but she becomes more lucid when she views the memorabilia.

And without the precious scrapbooks to support her stories, the officials at Friendship Villa Nursing Home would have probably dismissed them as the pitiful hallucinations of a senile old woman.

"When she first moved here last October, she tried to tell us about smme of her experiences, such as being in the movies and flying airplanes. Some of our residents hallucinate, so we didn't know how much of it to believe," said Joyce Hultgern, the nursing home's recreation director. "Her niece brought the books and we knew then to believe it. We learned that maybe we should pay more attention to our residents."

Miss Ward had been slightly ill the days before the interview and Mrs. Hultgern was concerned she wouldn't be able to remember her past clearly. At first Miss Ward had trouble recalling the events, but her memory sharpened as she turned the pages of the scrapbooks.

She remembered always being fearless, from the time she rode wild horses as a teen-ager on her family's East Texas farm near Grand Saline. She then told of going to New York before she was 20 to attempt to land a job in vaudeville as a trick rider. Movie producers noticed her there.

"I just didn't ever think about being afraid of the stunts," she said. "I never gave it a thought.

"When you ride bucking horses, you get used to it. They buck, they throw you off. You just get up, get back on and ride some more. "You don't fuss about it. You just take it.

"It was nothing for me to fall off a horse. I never thought about being scared of anything. But I wouldn't work with snakes. Don't bring me around snakes. I don't like them," she said.

She broke her leg once while attempting to ford a creek as the double for June Grey in "Flower of Faith." She broke an arm after falling off a horse while practicing in New York for her vaudeville debut.

"I have faced death a dozen times and have come through many narrow shaves with only a few minor injuries. Black eyes, bruised shins and sprained ankles have been frequent in my career," she wrote in a 1929 edition of "Live Girl Stories."

By the advent of the "talkie" movies in the 1920s, Miss Ward had turned her attention to flying, primarily as a mail carrier. She later moved to Miami and dabbled in real estate. She said she hasn't piloted a plane in more than 40 years, but she drove her own car until she was 91.

She gave up her car and came to San Antonio four years ago to be near her nephew and niece, but continued to live independently in a mobile home nearby.

But they moved her to the nursing home last October. Doctors had decided "The Girl Without Fear" was no longer able to live alone.

City Council May Act On Bond Issue around the perimeter of the park, but council members will be asked to approve the barricades only for 60-90 days to see how the residents like them.

Currently, wooden barricades are being manned by police officers on the weekend at at cost of about $1,000 per weekend to the city.

Council members will be asked to approve a recommendation of the Civic Centers Board that rental rates be increased about 20 percent for the Municipal Auditorium and between 6 and 20 percent for the Coliseum.

If approved, the rates would become effective on May 1, except for Texas Tech University, which would be charged the higher rates beginning Sept. 1. This would be the first significant rate change since Jan. 1, 1976.

Also at the meeting council members will:

— Decide whether to continue city participation in a South Plains Manpower Consortium to sponsor Comprehensive Education and Training Act programs locally.

— Formalize previous council action authorizing up to $10,000 for the Lubbock Arts Festival from a special projects fund from the hotel-motel tax.

— Consider placing a plaque at the city's new central fire station in memory of three Lubbock firemen who died fighting a blaze March 25.

Cooler Air To Sweep Over Area

Forecasters say slightly cooler weather is in store for the Lubbock area, following the first 90-degree reading of the season Tuesday afternoon.

Temperatures were expected to reach the middle 80s today and climb only into the mid-70s Thursday afternoon, according to this morning's forecast.

Although at midmorning temperatures had already reached the 80-degree mark, weathermen said a cool front was due to push through the area early this afternoon, holding the mercury at a moderate level.

Meanwhile, the 10 a.m. temperature at Amarillo was only 58 degrees because of the front that entered the Panhandle this morning. Passage of the front there was accompanied by northerly winds gusting up to 38 mph.

Some thunderstorms broke out in the Dallas-Fort Worth area this morning, but no rain is predicted for the South Plains at least through Thursday.

Thunderheads popped up south and east of Lubbock Tuesday afternoon but quickly faded, leaving no significant amounts of rainfall.

The extended forecast calls for clear to partly cloudy weather with warm days and mild nights through the weekend.

Senate Defeats Economy Move

percent level the Carter administration seeks for wages and prices. But, because of inflation, the effect would be to cut the real level of spending below current levels.

The amendments are among nearly 40 awaiting action as the Senate attempts to set a ceiling on federal spending for fiscal 1980 — the 12 months beginning next Oct. 1. After the first two days of Senate consideration, the $532.4 billion budget recommended by the committee remained intact.

By lopsided votes, the Senate Tuesday rejected amendments that would have:

—Cut spending by $28.8 billion to balance the budget in 1980.

—Reduced military spending by $1 billion.

—Cut foreign aid by $1 billion.

—Eliminated the government's public-service jobs program for depressed areas, at a saving of $1.1 billion.

The budget committee's proposal would result in a $28.8 billion deficit in 1980, a balanced budget in 1981 and a surplus large enough to allow a $55 billion tax cut in 1982.

The committee — in a view shared by congressional leaders and the Carter administration — ruled out a general tax cut in 1980, saying that would worsen inflation.

"Unless taxes are reduced in 1980 and 1981, taxpayers in all brackets face substantive tax increases," Roth said in a statement Tuesday. "Inflation and Social Security tax increases will amount to at least $19 billion in 1980 and $36 billion in 1981."

A four-member family with a $10,000 annual income would face an 11.6 percent tax increase in 1980 because of Social Security and "taxflation" — the nudging of workers into ever-higher tax brackets as they get pay raises to offset inflation, he said. The same family would pay 12.9 percent more in 1981.

The $20,000 family of four would see its taxes rise 17.2 percent in 1980 and 18.2 percent the following year, Roth said.

Roth proposes cuts of $600 million in foreign aid, $750 million in federal travel spending, $2.2 billion in the scandal-ridden CETA jobs program, and $2.5 billion in grants to states. He also said $2.2 billion could be saved by stamping out fraud and waste in Medicaid and Medicare programs.

The Roth amendment also would cut $100 million each from farm price supports, the Census Bureau, urban aid and legal services.

Jail Fight Triggers Dispute

viction, was injured in a fight about 6 p.m. on the third floor of the jail.

Jail nurse Danny Layland said Huerta had suffered bruised eyes, a possible broken nose and two of his teeth had been knocked out. The inmate was not seen by a physician following the altercation with another inmate.

Layland and McGrew said, however, that Huerta, in their judgment, was not seriously injured and did not need to be attended by a doctor or taken to the hospital. Sheriff C.H. "Choc" Blanchard said the prisoner signed a statement that he did not wish to file charges against the other inmate.

Blanchard said he received a call at home from a family member of Huerta's who said the prisoner had been beaten "nearly to death," and needed to see a doctor. The sheriff said he called the jail and was told Huerta's injuries were not serious enough to warrant such action.

An unidentified woman also called The Avalanche-Jouranl Tuesday night complaining that she and Huerta's family had gone to the county facility and were told by jailers that the injuries were not "important" enough to seek medical attention.

McGrew refused to allow an A-J reporter to interview Huerta, or even see him. He said fights, many resulting in injuries, were commonplace in the jail, and that it would be impossible to notify a doctor everytime, unless the injuries were deemed serious enough by himself and Layland.

The jail nurse was not on duty when Huerta was injured, and did not examine him until this morning.

"This (fights among inmates) happens all the time," McGrew said.

Huerta, a trusty, reportedly was in a third-floor cell playing cards prior to the fight. Huerta's statement, according to Blanchard, states that the inmate sat on a table where another prisoner was slamming down dominoes.

"I asked him not to slam them on the table," Huerta said in his statement. "Before I knew it, we were swinging. I guess he hit me once and I fell against a table. Then I got up and the fight stopped."

Blanchard said the inmate had been advised that his nose was possibly broken, but that he refused treatment.

The sheriff said Layland advised jailers to give Huerta an ice pack for his nose, and to give him some non-prescription medicine for the pain and that Layland would see him this morning.

State Solons Warn Prosecutor To Stop Probes Of Officials

AUSTIN (UPI) — Travis County District Attorney Ronald Earle, pleading for more money to prosecute crimes against the state, has received a hostile audience from senators, one of whom accused him of trying to have state officials jailed.

"You ought to put some of these dope dealers, rapists, robbers and crooks in jail," Sen. Bill Moore, D-Bryan, shouted at Earle Tuesday. "And stop investigating officials and trying to get yourself elected to a higher office by putting state officials in jail."

Earle appeared before members of the Senate Finance Committee, seeking an additional $505,000 from the state. The senators, however, were largely unsympathetic. The panel postponed taking a vote on Earle's request because a quorum was not present.

Earle said the staffs of the Special Crimes Division and Public Integrity Division of his office spend 70 percent of their time on state-involved cases, while the divisions only receive $4,800 in state revenue.

Earle said the divisions operate on federal and county funds and need the additional appropriation from the state.

But most of the senators on the panel appeared to agree with Sen. Tom Creighton, D-Mineral Wells, who told Earle his office was the only district attorney's office currently receiving state funds and it did not have his sympathy.

"We don't need this money to be witch-hunters," Earle replied. "A witch hunter doesn't have to be right, just active — a rumor, or innuendo would do just fine. But we try to get to the truth in our investigations."

Steve Capelle, chief of SCD and supervisor of PID, said federal funds established the divisions to investigate white-collar crime, organized crime and special street crimes.

"Most of our time is not spent investigating public officials or people high in state government, but in investigating the state employee that dinker dobbs with his travel voucher in Tom Green County for example," Capelle explained.

He said state agency officials from other cities often ask his office to investigate or prosecute a crime because his staff has developed expertise in the area of white-collar crimes and has easier access to records and witnesses for the state.

Under venue provisions of Texas' penal code, alleged crimes generally are prosecuted in the county in which they occur. But alleged crimes against the state are prosecuted in Travis County.

Capelle said that even without the added state revenue, Travis County would still be forced to pay for prosecuting crimes against the state because of the state's venue laws.

"Local street crime in Travis County will have to take a back seat or crimes against the state will have to take a back seat, or we'll have to do a half—job of both," Capelle predicted.

"The county will be forced to absorb some more of the costs and some people will lose their jobs."

Strauss Named To Spur Continuing Peace Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert S. Strauss says his latest assignment from the president — to spur continuing Mideast peace talks — probably will be the toughest job of his life.

Strauss has served President Carter in two earlier trouble-shooting roles, first as the administration's chief inflation fighter and more recently as a special trade negotiator.

But after Carter announced late Tuesday that Strauss will be his "working partner" in seeking broadened Mideast agreements, the 61-year-old Texas lawyer told reporters:

"I suspect that of all the tasks I've undertaken since I became an adult, this is certainly the most difficult and the one that offers the greatest rewards."

Strauss concluded that everything he has done in business, law, government and politics was essential training for his new assignment.

Carter told reporters Strauss had been eager to return to private life and had to be talked into taking the job. Strauss had said in a recent interview that Carter "never gives me any easy jobs."

The president said the earthy Texan will play "a special and unique role" as ambassador-at-large and chief U.S. participant in the Mideast peace process.

Before making the announcement, Carter talked by telephone with both Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin about the Strauss assignment.

"Their response was positive and enthusiastic," said Carter.

Asked by a reporter whether his Jewish religion would be an obstacle, Strauss snapped: "I never considered my own religious origin as an obstacle to anything."

A former Democratic national chairman, Strauss only recently concluded negotiations on new international trade agreements and indicated he will not assume full responsibilities for Mideast negotiations until late summer after Congress acts on the trade accords.

When he does take over, Strauss will be responsible for guiding the Egyptian-Israeli negotiations toward a settlement of issues left unresolved after the signing of their peace treaty March 26.

Carter said Strauss will shoulder much of the negotiating burden for the United States, easing the workload borne by the president and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance during months of talks leading up to the treaty signing.

President Requests Treaty Ratification

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three thousand times or more since the beginning of 1967, Sen. Willia Proxmire, D-Wis., has taken the Senate floor to appeal for ratification of a 30-year-old treaty aimed at preventing the crime of genocide.

In a somber Capitol rotunda ceremony Tuesday, President Carter invoked the memories of the 11 million people exterminated during World War II and asked that the genocide treaty be ratified this year.

But key senators and congressional aides say that although the treaty has been pending in the Senate since June 1949 it may well be permanently stymied.

The genocide treaty grew out of a determination to prevent a recurrence of the policies of mass extermination of Jews and other minorities practiced by Nazi Germany in World War II.

It defines genocide as an act intended to destroy a national, ethnic, racial or religious group in full or in part.

The 83 nations which have ratified the treaty to date have pledged to bring persons accused of genocide to trial and to enact legislation to implement the provisions of the pact.

Critics of the treaty say it would force the United States to surrender part of its sovereignty and could result in some Americans being tried in foreign courts.

Carter made his appeal for ratification of the treaty during memorial services for the 6 million Jews and 5 million other Europeans systematically destroyed in the 1930s and '40s by what Carter called "a frightening spectacle of evil unleashed upon the world."

Proxmire, virtually alone, has been making similar appeals almost daily for the last 12 years. The Proxmire genocide speech has become a Senate institution.

He said his hope was that a daily reminder would speed the ratification process.

Court News Leak Leads To Firing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reports last week that gave premature word of Supreme Court decisions quickly led Chief Justice Warren E. Burger to fire a typesetter from his job in the court's print shop, The Associated Press has learned.

The firing followed a heated confrontation in Burger's chambers, during which the chief justice accused the printer of "leaking" information to an ABC News reporter, the AP was told.

Court spokesman Barrett McGurn refused to verify the firing, or to comment on whether the court's investigation into the apparent leaks ended with it.

But the fired printer, who denied Burger's accusations, confirmed his firing when contacted by the AP.

Leaks about Supreme Court deliberations are extremely rare, and no one is believed to have been fired in any such previous incidents.

ABC News reported accurately on its nationally televised evening news program April 16 that Justice Byron R. White would speak for the court in an important libel law ruling adverse to the news media.

Two days later, the court announced its ruling that public figures suing for libel may inquire into a journalist's "state of mind" and the editorial process that led to the allegedly libelous statement.

ABC also reported that Burger would speak for the court in a decision dealing with the rights of prisoners being considered for parole. That decision has not yet been made public.

Court sources, who asked that they not be identified, told the AP that Burger immediately ordered an investigation into the ABC reports — and that the probe quickly centered on the print shop and the office of the court's reporter of decisions.

Employees in both offices have access to final decisions, or parts of them, before they are released in written form.

Sources said also that the 32 law clerks who work closely with the nine justices never were interrogated about the apparent leaks.

The man fired from the court print shop, John Tucci, actually was not a court employee but works for the Government Printing Office as does most of the print shop staff. Tucci's status at the GPO is uncertain.

Other than confirming his firing and repeating a denial he said he gave to Burger, Tucci refused to discuss the matter.

But sources still at the court said that Tucci was fired last Friday.

They said that two days previously, last Wednesday, Tucci was called to Burger's chambers where he was confronted by the chief justice and print shop supervisor Louis Cornio.

Burger angrily waived in the air newspaper reports about the ABC stories, the AP was told. That was two days after the initial ABC report.

Carter Replaces Ambassador To Iran

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter took an important step to improve U.S. relations with Iran by officially replacing the American ambassador who — in the view of the new Ismalic government — was too closely associated with Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi.

Carter Tuesday chose career diplomat Walter Cutler, U.S. envoy to Zaire since 1975, as American ambassador to Iran to restore better relations with the oil-rich nation.

He is replacing career diplomat William Sullivan, who had become the key American symbol with the regime of the ousted shah. Sullivan was recalled to Washington for "consultations" several weeks ago.

Carter named another veteran career diplomat as new American envoy to Nicaragua, a country still facing the threat of a civil war and embroiled in political turmoil since last fall. Washington's ties with the Anastasio Somoza regime are cool, at best.

In Managua, Lawrence Pezzullo — ambassador to Uruguay since early 1977 — is replacing Mauricio Solaun, a University of Illinois professor who resigned recently for personal reasons.

Cutler, 47, joined the foreign service in 1956 and has also served overseas in the Cameroon, Turkey, South Korea and Vietnam. He was born in Massachusetts on Nov. 25, 1931, and is a graduate of Wesleyan University and the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy.

Pezzullo, 52, joined the foreign service in 1957 and has also served in Mexico, Vietnam, Bolivia, Colombia and Guatemala. From 1972 to 1974 he was deputy director of the State Department's Bureau for Central American Affairs.

Pezzullo was born May 3, 1926, in New York and is a graduate of Columbia University. He served with the U.S. Army and was a public school teacher for several years before joining the foreign service.

Sullivan had been ambassador to Iran since 1977 and was in constant touch with the shah during the final weeks of his reign.

Sullivan, 56, served in Laos during the Vietnam War, was ambassador to the Philippines and took part in the Paris peace talks, led by former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

Swedish officials hope to make wood the nation's main source of fuel within 10 to 15 years.

Majority View N-Plants As Threat To Health

NEW YORK (UPI) — Seventy-five percent of the nation's families viewed nuclear power plants a threat to health months before the Three Mile Island plant in Pennsylvania leaked radiation, according to a survey published today.

The survey, "Family Health in an Era of Stress," was done in October and November, four months before the nation's families learned from vivid newspaper, television and radio accounts of grave threats posed by a real nuclear accident.

The survey was a wide-ranging one, touching on health habits and hazards, probing attitudes about such things as doctor bills, old-fashioned treatments vs. wonder drugs and even teen-age pregnancy and national health insurance.

One general conclusion: among American families there is a tendency to live for today rather than worry about tomorrow.

Nuclear power plants were on a list of technological things families were asked to assess as either a threat to health, not a threat or not sure.

Among the 75 percent considering nuclear power plants a threat were 40 percent calling the threat "very serious." Fifteen percent at that time did not consider the plants a threat and 10 percent said they were "not sure."

The survey, conducted by Yankelovich, Skelly and White Inc. for General Mills, involved what is considered by pollsters to be a national probability sampling.

This consisted of in-depth interviews with one adult member of 1,254 families and 927 self-administered questionnaires, including 263 from teenagers.

In addition, "focus" group discussions were conducted with parents and teenagers in New York, Memphis, Seattle, Dallas, Minneapolis and Bridgeport, Conn.

The list of technological items included, besides nuclear plants, and the percentage of families considering each a threat:

Industrial waste, 93 percent; pollution, 92 percent; cigarettes, 90 percent; X-rays, 78 percent; mammography or X-ray of the breast, 53 percent; and hair dyes, 52 percent.

Those surveyed also were asked about government regulations and warning about products and matters affecting health. Seventy-six percent agree, iether strongly or partially, with this statement:

"With all the government regulations and warning these days, people don't know what's good or bad for them anymore."

But 72 percent agreed:

"It's better to be safe than sorry. The government should warn people about potentially unsafe products even if they later turn out to be okay."

Those not agreeing with that statement said the government should wait until a product is really proven to be unsafe before issuing a warning and not just rely on tests on rats.

In a check of attitudes toward doctors and medication, 80 percent agreed with this statement:

"Many doctors are too quick to give medication these days. You have to worry about overmedication."

Sixty-two percent agreed:

"Some of the old-fashioned remedies are more effective than all of the new wonder drugs."

Fifty-seven percent of the families said they like to get a second opinion about any serious medical problem in the family, while 42 percent said they think of their doctors as real friends — someone they can talk to.

Twenty-four percent said they are nervous about prescription drugs, believing there's a real danger of addiction and 16 percent are afraid of hospitals.

Also on te health front, the pollsters said there are many signs national health insurance "will be one of the big issues of the 1980 political campaign."

Forty-two percent of family members believe NHI will be just a giveaway program that will cost the taxpayers money, but 58 percent support such a national health program.

On the matter of pregnancy among teen-agers — at epidemic proportions with more than 1 million adolescent girls becoming pregnant annually, the teenagers themselves cited causes.

Blamed by a big 79 percent of the teenage boys and girls were: "outside influences such as peer pressure, television and movies." And 21 percent said the pregnancies are due to parents being too lax and permissive.

The survey found generally American families pay lip service to good health habits but neglect to adopt the lifestyles necessary for maximum longevity.

Around one-third of the families, however, are very health conscious and watch their diets, exercise regularly.

Generally, also, it was found there is confusion over what constitutes a good health practice. Many, for example, thought it a good idea to have physical check-ups. Thinking in the medical profession is that these really aren't necessary on an annual basis.

Major obstacles to wholesome lifestyles, the report showed, include:

—The lack of commitment to follow preventive health measures such as exercise and weight control.

—Increasing levels of stress. More than four out of five adult family members indicated a need for less stress in their daily lives — and many are finding it harder to cope today with the problems of everyday living than they did a few years ago.

Despite all the information on health put out by the government and appearing in newspapers and via brroadcast media, only one in four families feels well-informed about good health practices. An equal number say they are poorly informed.

Consortium Urged By County Officials

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A federally funded job training program should continue under joint sponsorship in at least three South Plains counties, officials from Lubbock, Hale and Garza counties agreed Tuesday.

The officials also agreed the manpower consortium formed by the sponsoring governments should continue to contract with the South Plains Association of Governments to administer the Comprehensive Education and Training Act programs, despite controversy over SPAG's handling of the programs.

The county officials met at the Garden and Arts Center at the invitation of the City of Lubbock to discuss the future of the South Plains Manpower Consortium, which presently includes the City of Lubbock and Lubbock, Hale and Garza counties.

However, Tuesday's action by the county officials is contingent on action by the Lubbock City Council Thursday to continue the city's participation in the two-year-old consortium.

Juanita Forbes, director of the local CETA program, told those attending the meeting that they had the option of forming a consortium to continue as "prime sponsor" of the CETA program or allowing the Texas Department of Community Affairs to administer the program.

The TDCA would take a certain portion of the funds allocated for the counties to cover administrative costs, and contract with a local agency to provide the job training and placement, she said.

The monetary advantage to forming a consortium varies from county to county, Mrs. Forbes said, adding Garza County's CETA allocation jumped almost 50 percent when it joined the consortium.

The counties in a consortium receive a 10 percent bonus for banding together and save about 4.5 percent in administrative costs charged by the TDCA.

In addition to the economic advantages to continuing the consortium, Lubbock Assistant City Manager Jim Blagg said the consortium members would "have the local ability to set priorities on how money will be spent and the ability to monitor the funds a little more closely."

Lubbock County Judge Rod Shaw said there is no way to know "what direction the program would go" if the TDCA began administering the program.

However, he said local officials "wouldn't be responsible for monitoring" the CETA program if it were administered by the TDCA and "wouldn't be worrying with it so much."

Hale and Garza County officials already had decided to continue in the consortium prior to Tuesday's meeting, and Lubbock County Commissioners made their decision during the discussion.

However, Lynn County Judge Melvin Burks said he didn't know yet what decision that county's commissioners will make regarding the consortium. Currently, the South Plains Community Action Agency in Levelland provides the CETA services to Lynn and other South Plains counties not in the consortium.

Although no decision was needed until May 15 on which agency should administer the CETA program during the coming year, the county representatives opted for SPAG, despite recent allegations of sloppy management of the program.

Some of those problems may be solved through a written contract between SPAG and the consortium defining SPAG's responsibilities, Blagg said.

Glenda Robinson, acting executive director of SPAG, also suggested defining the role of each consortium member in the contract.

The Comprehensive Employment and Training Act of 1978 makes federal assistance available for the operation of vocational and employment assistance programs to meet the employment needs of economically disadvantaged, unemployed or underemployed persons.

Jury Considers Cuevas Penalty

HOUSTON (AP) — Death by injection or a second life sentence once again face convicted murderer Ignacio Cuevas today as the jury that declared him guilty of causing the death of a prison librarian decides his punishment.

Cuevas' conviction Tuesday by a six-man, six-woman jury was his second for causing the death of Julia Standley during a bloody, 1974 escape attempt from a state prison following an 11-day siege — the longest in U.S. penal history.

Mrs. Standley and another librarian hostage, Elizabeth Beseda, were shot to death as three convicts attempted to escape from a prison unit called The Walls in Huntsville.

Fred Carrasco, Rudolpho Dominguez and Cuevas, who was serving 45 years on a 1971 murder conviction, hid within a moveable shield of lawbooks and chalkboards surrounded by 11 handcuffed hostages.

Carrasco, Dominguez and the two female hostages were shot to death as they attempted to move down a ramp from the third-floor prison library to an armored truck waiting at the bottom.

Cuevas lived to be tried in 1975, and was convicted by a nine-man, three-woman jury that deliberated a little more than two hours. The jury took 20 hours to recommend that he be given the death penalty.

After more than three years on death row, he was granted a new trial by the state Court of Criminal Appeals on the ground of a judicial error.

Tuesday's verdict came just five hours after deliberations began.

The jury sent several notes to District Judge Miron Love asking for testimony from three hostages, two of whom were taken inside the shield by the inmates prior to the escape attempt.

He asked the jurors to be more specific, and the jury's final note to Love at about 3:30 p.m. told him it had reached an impasse until it could hear testimony concerning how the inmates and hostages had entered the shield and who was handcuffed to whom.

The jury entered the courtroom at about 5 p.m., listened for about 30 minutes to the re-reading of testimony from hostages Rev. Joseph O'Brien, Novella Pollard and Dr. Ronald Robinson, then returned to its deliberations.

It buzzed almost immediately, however, this time to tell the bailiff it had reached a verdict.

"Whatever the question someone had on the jury apparently was answered when the testimony was read back," said Bert Graham, Harris County assistant district attorney.

Disaster Victims Apply For Aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — About 16,000 families in six states declared major disaster areas have registered for federal assistance in the most "severe and widespread" suffering from tornadoes and flooding in many years, a federal official says.

"The human hardship and suffering are the most severe and widespread that this nation has experienced in many years," said William H. Wilcox, administrator of the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration. Wilcox explained Tuesday that his agency was coordinating the multi-state recovery effort.

The six states which have been hit by tornadoes and flooding are Mississippi, Arkansas, Missouri, Alabama, Texas and Oklahoma.

In the five tornado-devastated counties of north Texas, 7,600 families have registered for assistance from federal, state and volunteer agencies.

Also in north Texas, a massive, multi-million dollar debris-removal effort is underway by contractors of the Army Corps of Engineers to clear the way for rebuilding, Wilcox said.

Some 740 families in seven tornado-wrecked Arkansas counties have sought assistance for temporary housing, reconstruction loans, grants and advice on taxes, insurance and legal matters.

The disaster assistance centers serving six tornado-damaged counties of Oklahoma have closed after serving 1,140 families. The FDAA administrator said eligibility for assistance remains open for individuals who contact the separate agencies at their regular office locations.

NY Pathologist To Witness Bario Autopsy

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A New York pathologist has been called in to observe an autopsy on the body of former undercover federal drug agent Sante Bario, who died early Tuesday — more than four months after lapsing into a mysterious coma while in his jail cell.

Bexar County medical examiner Dr. Ruben Santos will perform the autopsy "late this week" on the once flamboyant agent who was charged last October with accepting a $9,000 bribe.

Bario, 42, died about 1:30 a.m. Tuesday. He was stricken Dec. 16 in the Bexar County jail, where he was being held in lieu of $500,000 bond.

It was originally believed Bario was poisoned after traces of strychine were reportedly found in an initial test. But Santos said later test uncovered only normal traces of a prescribed anti-depressant.

Tests on drinking cups and a partially-eaten peanut butter sandwich in Bario's individual cell also turned up no traces of poison, Santos said.

Gerald Goldstein, Bario's attorney, said both sides had agreed to use Dr. David M. Spain of the Brookdale Medical Center in Brooklyn as "an advisor and observer" to the autopsy.

The attorney had said Spain was called in by the Justice Department, but Justice Department spokesman Joe Gross in Washington said federal officials had not hired Spain for this job.

Spain said Tuesday he was approached about the autopsy by attorney Ben Veniste, a former assistant Watergate prosecutor and friend of the Bario family. Gross said the Justice Department would pay for some toxocology test Spain had performed earlier in the case.

"He (Spain) has the reputation of being one of the best," said Frank Castillon, chief medical investigator for Santos.

Castillon said the autopsy would be performed "late this week" and speculated it would probably be late Thursday or Friday.

Goldstein said, however, that he fears it is impossible for the autopsy to show the cause of death because the former drug agent lingered long enough in the coma for his body to metabolize any traces of what it contained Dec. 16.

"I would hope that it would show what happened," he said Tuesday. "Whatever it was, it would at least lay to rest everyone's worries and the anxiety the family has felt.

"Realistically, the consensus of the pathologists I've talked to is that he lived long enough for it to be unlikely they would find traces of anything," added Goldstein.

Conference To Spotlight Children's Problems

By CONNIE CHAPMAN
Family News Staff

"Runaway children don't just run away from strict curfews or rules like that. They are running away from abuse."

With this statement, Jeanette Watson of Austin, director of the Early Childhood Development Division of the Texas Department of Community Affairs, described the leading problem of Texas children today. Mrs. Watson will be a speaker at today's United Way Agency Orientation Institute on Children at Reese Air Force Base. The conference is sponsored by the Community Planning Council and the Interagency Action Council.

Interviewed in Austin as she prepared to attend the conference, Mrs. Watson listed three other major problems affecting children which she feels must be faced realistically:

"Stress in the family unit resulting from such factors as divorce, changing lifestyle and unemployment is a major cause of problems," she said.

A second factor is a sizeable increase in the number of working mothers. She cited the figure that 40 percent of all Texas mothers with children under six years old are employed outside the home. This situation makes more acute the need for quality child care, the speaker indicated. "The second most important adult in a child's life is the child-care giver," she said.

Yet a third cause of problems with children is poverty and an attendant lack of health care. A 1975 survey showed that there were 24 counties in Texas which had no medical doctor. Nearly 8,000 infants born in Texas in 1977 had received no prenatal care.

In all of these areas, Mrs. Watson stressed the importance of prevention. "It is better and, in the long run, less costly to deal with these problems on a preventive basis rather than as crises later," said Mrs. Watson.

"The only way change in these areas is going to be cost-effective is through increased public awareness of the problems," she said.

Many programs presently in operation are aimed at dealing with such problems and are positive signs in the whole picture of child development, according to Mrs. Watson. She listed such programs as those teaching parenting skills, identifying handicaps in early childhood, and working with early childhood education among that category.

Also at the conference speaking as pan-and Self" are Judy Atchison, director of Project Review, South Plains Health Systems, Inc.; Karen Meers, special education instructor in the Lubbock Independent School District; and Dr. Jeanette Jenkins, College of Home Economics, Child development, Texas Tech University.

Serving as panel members discussing "The Child and Parents" are Dr. Jeanette Coufal, College of Home Economics, Parent Education, Texas Tech; Daniel H. Benson of the Texas tech School of Law; and Claude Dollins, marriage and family counselor.

A third panel will discuss "The Child and Society." Panel members are Dr. Robert Pinder, College of Home Economics, Family Studies, Texas Tech; Mike Kelly, Drug Abuse Services of Lubbock Regional MH/MR; Lloyd Watts, administrator of Lubbock County Juvenile probation; and Drs. Ray H. Brown and Richard L. Wall, psychologists.

If we were to suggest to our readers that it takes five tricks to defeat a three no trump contract, we would be accused of adopting a patronizing attitude. But from time to time a hand comes up that reinforces our belief that that is exactly what we should do.

Everyone is aware that declarer should plan his campaign before playing to the first trick. But the fact that the defense should also adopt an organized plan is frequently lost sight of. Observe what happened after West led the top of his spade sequence against South's three no trump contract, reached in routine fashion.

Declarer allowed West to win the first trick, then won the spade continuation with the king. He led the king and queen of clubs, and West allowed both to win to shut out dummy's club suit. The third club went to the ace, and West continued with the ten of spades to remove declarer's last stopper in the suit.

The queen and jack of hearts were led, and this time it was East who held up the ace to prevent dummy's king from becoming an entry. With nothing better to do for the moment, declarer continued with a heart to the king and ace.

East promptly led his last spade. West won, but he was obliged to lead away from his king of diamonds, giving declarer two tricks in the suit and his contract—two spade tricks, three hearts, two diamonds and two clubs.

East was guilty of playing without planning. When he won the ace of hearts, he knew his partner had only one more spade to cash, and that would be only defensive trick number four. Since five tricks were required, it would be necessary for the defense to score a diamond trick. If West did not have a high diamond, there was no way to defeat the hand. And since West might find it embarrassing to lead a diamond, East's proper play at that point was to switch to the suit. Declarer would have had no recourse but to take the finesse, and the king of diamonds would have been the setting trick.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: My husband has told me that he wants to be cremated. Then his last wish is to have his ashes scattered over the local country club where he was turned down for membership three times. (He never did make it, so he joined another club.)

I told him I thought he was foolish to want his ashes scattered over a club that wouldn't accept him as a member, but he insists that this is the way he wants it and nobody is going to talk him out of it.

What do you think of his idea?

Better Half

Dear Half: Permission is required to scatter one's ashes on private property, so tell your persistent husband that he probably won't have any better luck crashing that club after he makes an ash of himself than before.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I will be going on our vacation soon. After much persuasion, we agreed to let our two sons, 17 and 19, stay home and "bach it."

We just learned they're planning to invite about 10 couples to a party at our house while we're gone.

We firmly told them they could have the party only if an aunt and uncle chaperoned it. The boys didn't like that idea, and suggested instead that a newly-married couple of their acquaintance be the chaperones. (This couple is about the age of our elder son.) My husband promptly vetoed that suggestion. We then gave the boys a choice of postponing the party until we return, have the party before we go, or having the aunt and uncle chaperone it. Well, their noses have been out of joint ever since.

Abby, my husband and I have looked forward to a well-earned vacation. We would not feel at ease unless we were reasonably certain that everything was all right at home. Do you think we are being fair in our demands?

Mom And Pop

Dear Mom And Pop: Yes. And hooray for you and for all other parents who insist on having a clean-cut understanding of what their children may and may not do in their absence.

Lubbock Symphony Guild Leader Heads TWASO

CONTEMPORARY ACTIVE WEAR — This shirt and matching gym shorts are styled for multi-purpose use. The duo is made of a blend of polyester and cotton with piping in contrasting trim.

"I could talk for three days straight on symphony orchestras and what they add to the life of the community," said Mrs. Jack Wirtz during a recent interview.

And Carole Wirtz has been doing just that during these last three days as conference chairman for the Texas Women's Association of Symphony Orchestras (TWASO) at its annual meeting held in Lubbock.

Yesterday Mrs. Wirtz was installed as the new state president of TWASO, an honor and a responsibility for this vivacious Lubbock matron.

"I just can't imagine any woman being bored!" Mrs. Wirtz said recently. "If you ever get involved, you can never get it out of your system."

And involved Mrs. Wirtz has surely been during the six years her family has lived here. This recent honor is a milestone in a busy and varied volunteer career. She is an active member of the Junior League of Lubbock, on the board of directors of the South Plains Children's Shelter, on the board of the Lubbock Symphony, a member of the ARCS Foundatiion, the Cultural Affairs Council, and the Women's Division of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce.

Her major interest, however, is music. She has been on the TWASO board for five years and is a member of the Women's Council of the American Symphony Orchestra League, the national organization for groups associated with local orchestras. Mrs. Wirtz was elected 1979 conferference chairman two years ago and now assumes the presidency.

During her college years at Texas Tech University, she played the organ, piano and violin, performing on the violin with both the Amarillo and Lubbock orchestras. Now she plays only for her own enjoyment, she reports.

Other hobbies which she enjoys are ice skating, snow and water skiiing, boating, swimming, fishing and tennis.

After the family moved to Lubbock in 1972, when Jack Wirtz opened a second office of his general contracting firm of Page and Wirtz Construction Company, Mrs. Wirtz immediately became an active member of the Lubbock Symphony Guild. She assisted in the restructure and reoranganizion of the Guild.

Mrs. Wirtz is proud of the many accomplihsments of TWASO-related organizations thoughout Texas. Represented at this week's meeting were groups from 22 cities with a total of more than eight thousand members. These members contribute more than 12 percent of the operating expenses of the orchestras they support.

The various guilds and leagues engage in many different fund raising activities such as charity balls, garage sales, compiling and selling cookbooks, and, like the Lubbock Guild, putting together and selling living appointment books. Of course the women also participate in the usual supportive acvitivies associated with annual membership and season tickets drives by the symphonies.

Many of the women's organizations emphasize and promote the educational possibilities of the orchestra within the community. Activities include sponsorship of youth concerts, young artists competitions, and student scholarships.

TWASO is one of only three state organizations in the nation associated with the American Symphony Orchestra League. TWASO was the idea of Mrs. Henry Miller of Dallas. She had attended the national meeting and thought that a state organization would allow for sharing of ideas among a smaller group of women. This conference is a delegated one and each organization may send delegates and alternates.

Mrs. Wirtz was anxious to have this year's TWASO meeting here in Lubbock so that many more of our local women might attend the sessions and enjoy meeting persons from across the state who are similarly involved in the work with orchestras. The many social activities asociated with the conference, as well as the general meetings and workshops, have allowed that kind of interaction to occur. Mrs. Wirtz feels our local guild has been enriched by the experiences of this week's meeting.

She is also looking forward to visiting with many of the guilds and leagues in Texas during her term as state president, and thinks she will bring home many new ideas garnered while making new friends.

The long hours of preperation for this conference (she often worked well into the wee hours of the morning making plans and arrangements during these past months) are just a prelude to the busy year she will spend as state president.

She is helped greatly by her family throughout all these responsibilities. The couple has a 14-year-old son, Erick, who has many musical interests himself.

In her dedication to the many activites of the Lubbock Symphony Guild, and now as TWASO president, Carole Wirtz is living proof of her belief that "volunteerism has its own psychic income."

WATER CONSERVATION TIP

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Save water by doing two jobs at once: drive your car onto your lawn before you wash it. That way the water that cleans the car also washes the lawn, says a water conservation booklet prepared by Extension USDA specialists. What marks this leaves in the grass is something the booklet doesn't explain.

UPI Writers See Only Partial Peace In Mideast

James Anderson, who covers the State department in Washington, Joseph W. Grigg of the London bureau and Alan Dawson of the Bangkok bureau addressed a luncheon for UPI subscribers attending the annual American Newspaper Publishers Association convention at the Waldorf Astoria hotel.

Anderson said the peace treaty between Israel and Egypt has created an unspoken anti-Soviet alliance in the Middle East and commits the United States to a military role if fighting breaks out involving Israel.

Grigg reported there are open fears in Western Europe that the United States would not risk nuclear warfare should the Soviet Union decide to overrun Western Europe.

Dawson spoke of an aggressive Vietnam defying China in seeking control of Southeast Asia while China remains fearful of Soviet encroachment.

Anderson, who has made frequent trips to the Middle East with President Carter and Secretaries of State Henry Kissinger and Cyrus Vance, said the Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty has brought only a partial peace in the Middle East, not the general settlement Carter wants.

"We got something else, something that dare not speak its own name," Anderson said.

"What is new is that we now have an anti-Soviet alliance, informal and unspoken, and in its formative states. Although it is the U.S. intention and expectation that it will be widened to include Saudi Arabia and Jordan, at the very least, the de facto alliance is not being proclaimed.

"Although the State Department steadfastly refuses to use the language, it is also clear that the U.S.-Israeli memorandum of agreement, which was negotiated in literally the final hours, commits the United States to some military role in the Middle East if fighting should ever break out involving Israel," Anderson said.,

Grigg, UPI's senior diplomatic correspondent in Europe, said diplomats view the events in Iran as an ominous power vacuum opening up — "one the Soviets will be only too happy to move into," one the Iranians could not stop because their army is in tatters.

Adding to the grim outlook, he said, is the fact the United States has lost its most important facilities for monitoring Soviet weapon tests.

In Europe, Grigg said, there is growing distrust of the United States.

"To put it bluntly," he said, "Soviet military strength in Europe now is so much greater than NATO's that some European leaders — notably West Germany's Helmuth Schmidt — are concerned that in a showdown the United States might be tempted to let Western Europe be overrun rather than risk total nuclear warfare and destruction of American cities." Dawson, who visited Hanoi during the recent month-long China-Vietnam border war, said that the combatants are frightened — China of Soviet threats to its long border and elsewhere in Asia, Vietnam of Chinese encirclement in Cambodia and Laos.

This byplay also has aroused concern among other Southeast Asian nations iincluding Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore, Indonesia and the Philippines, Dawson said.

The Soviets are moving more cautiously to fill the power vacuum in Asia than they and the Cubans did in Africa, he said.

Dawson said both China and the United States are seeking to gain influence in the region through economic means, with the United States doing more trading with the region that it does with Western Europe.

"I don't think any Southeast Asian leader feels he can depend on the United States militarily in the region, and countries are going their own way politically," Dawson said.

Oriental Seeks 'First American Friend'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — "Why is (it) one has to commit crime or to do something daring before the news people will do any write-up? I see and read of people who are united quite frequently, so why not me? If you can help I will be so grateful to you."

So wrote Michael Kan in a letter to United Press International. It was an appeal for help in a mission to which he has devoted 30 years without success.

Kan wants to locate an American corporal he met in a Chinese town on the Burma road near the close of World War II. He was an 18-year-old Chinese boy fascinated by GIs and he became a close buddy of the corporal, who was only 20 himself.

They were together only about six months. Then, in 1945, the soldier was shipped home. Kan came to America in 1948 as a student, joined the U.S. Air Force, became a citizen and is now married to an American woman.

All during that time he has tried to find his buddy. He hasn't had much to go on.

All he knows is that the Air Force corporal was named Stuart (he can't recall the first name). He was a disc jockey for the Armed Forces Radio Network in Kunming, the base of the Flying Tigers. He thinks — but is not sure — Stuart was from the Midwest. He has a 34-year-old photo of the two of them together in China.

Why is Kan so eager and determined to find Stuart?

"Well, he was my first American friend. And he was a very good friend. Actually he was the first male friend I ever had. I had been raised by an American missionary and I was surrounded by women and girls.

"I met some other GIs, but I noticed that very soon they were asking me to find girls for them. They didn't put it quite that way, but I understood. Stuart wasn't like that. He justed wanted to be my friend."

At one time, Kan had Stuart's full name and address, but a pickpocket stole the notebook in which he had jotted it down.

Kan's original name was Kan Man Loh. He was 3 months old when his father died. His mother remarried and he was adopted by Cornelia Morgan, an American missionary and granddaughter of John Tyler Morgan, Alabama's senator for 30 years.

When he was 18, Kan began hanging around the Air Force base, first in his home town of Tsuyung and later in Kunming. He got an unofficial job as an interpreter. From that early contact, he decided he wanted to come to America.

Kan spent four years in the Air Force and had an export-import business for 10 years. He works now in the women's shoe department of a Los Angeles department store and lives in suburban La Habra with his wife.

He has tried to find his friend through everyone from President Carter to congressmen, senators and the Air Force. He even tried the FCC because he thought Stuart might have continued a career in radio.

So, all right, Mike Kan. You don't have to commit a crime to get in the papers.

"Lost: one good GI buddy of 34 years ago. Answers to name of Stuart. May be in the Midwest. Could be working for a radio station. If found, contact Michael Kan through UPI Los Angeles. Reward: Gratitude."

Natural Sonar Interests Navy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Navy, impressed with the natural "sonar" of dolphins, is trying to develop that capacity artificially to improve underwater detection abilities.

The sea mammal's large, complex brain receives, sends and interprets underwater sounds and objects.

"Our present electronic equipment can't match a dolphin's abilities — not by a factor of 10," said Richard Soule, an official of the Naval Ocean Systems Center in Hawaii in an interview with National Geographic.

By emitting a series of clicks at superhuman frequencies, the dolphin can pinpoint and identify objects as small as a vitamin capsule dropped into the far end of a large pool.

The Navy wants to devise bionic sonar equipment to match this ability.

So far, Navy scientists have developed electronically produced dolphin pulses which, when beamed into water, stretch the echoes down to human hearing range. This enables blindfolded divers to discriminate between two targets.

A Navy spokesman denied reports dolphins have been trained to carry explosives.

"We have deployed porpoises in open-ocean work," he said. "We are making use of their remarkable sensory capabilities ... but the Navy has never used porpoises for anything that would harm either the animals or any human being."

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

Q: Is it true that the late, great clown, Emmett Kelly, was an "honorary" mascot for the Brooklyn Dodgers? How did he invent "Weary Willie?" And did he feel funny in that tramp makeup? — Mrs. B. Boggs, Sarasota, Fla.

A: "No," he once told us, "I don't feel funny when I'm this hobo character. I feel like a misfit — a reject. No self-respecting hobo would wear such a ragged hand-me-down as Willie wears." He dreamed up this character while doing what was known in vaudeville as a "chalk talk" act in the traditional white-faced clown costume. About being an honorary mascot for the Brooklyn Dodgers, that was true until the team moved to L. A. "The Los Angeles Coliseum," he explained when invited to go west of the Gowanus, "is too big for one clown!"

Q: Our family enjoyed Mary Tyler Moore's revived variety show tremendously. What made her double welcome in our living room was her reuniting with Dick Van Dyke. He's still the funniest fellow on TV. What do you think? — Betsy and Bill Roth, Philadelphia.

A: We had the same reaction. Dick is one of the few originals on the mini-screen. Whether dancing, speaking or doing pantomime, his every word or move is a classic. We hope he'll do more specials — for whenever the low-profiled performer is on a program it is a special!

John Crittenden, columnist and sports editor of the Miami News, thinks Muhammand Ali is mellowing with maturity. Speaking with John, the champ mused: "My wife Veronica was only five years old the first time I beat Sonny Liston. She told me she used to ask her mama, 'Why does that man talk so much?

Q: As old admirers of Zero Mostel, we caught his son, Josh, in the TV series, "Delta House." We noticed little, if any, resemblance between father and son. Is there any? — Peter S., Las Vegas.

A: Not enough to pick him out of a lineup for a positive I.D. But what the young man has inherited from his famous father is talent-by-instinct, plus an affability with strangers without being pushy. Also pop's jowls, chins and obesity. We met the kid on the "Faber College" campus (at Universal City, Calif.) and discovered that, while he's proud of his late father's achievements, he's determined to make it big on his own.

Q: I understand that President Abraham Lincoln never had his photograph taken with his wife. Were they estranged or something? —M.E.N., Omaha

A: No, they were on friendly terms. But Mrs. Lincoln was so much shorter than her husband, legend has it she feared she'd look ridiculous posing with him. Frequently, you'll see pictures of the two together, but that's only an illusion, created by photographers. "In all the years of their marriage," says Lincoln authority Harold Holzer, "they never once visited a photographer together."

Q: During the 1960's Jane Fonda angered a lot of Americans because of her outspoken opposition to the Vietnam war. Does she feel her career was stunted by her political beliefs? — P. Griffen, Springfield, Mass.

A: No way. The actress didn't take a step backwards before and sees no reason to do so now. Actually, she's a bigger name and box office draw than ever, one of the genuine and venerable superstars of tthe movies and happily married to dissident Tom Hayden, former head of the SDS. The couple is confident that he will become an important figure in politics. His first try for the Senate drew enough votes to encourage him to make another go at such a race. Perhaps next time around.

Q: Was Roberta Peters ever married to Robert Merrill? — G.H. Council Bluffs, Iowa.

A: Yes. The two Metropolitan Opera stars were Mr. and Mrs. for a relatively short time. Until they both realized there was no harmony between them. So they divorced. Time proved the wisdom of their thinking. Their next spouses turned out to be made-to-order and the new twosomes have lived happily ever after. (They've even appeared together on TV benefit programs.)

Unemployment Figures Drop

LUXEMBOURG (AP) — Unemployment in the nine European Common Market countries fell 5 percent in March to 6.15 million persons from 6.48 million the previous month, the European Commission reported Tuesday.

The decline represented a drop in the jobless rate to 5.7 percent from 6 percent.

But the March unemployment figure was 2.5 percent higher than that of the same month in 1978, the commission said.

This year's February-to-March dip was the greatest in Germany, down 15.6 percent, and the smallest in France and Italy, each down 2.2 percent.

"The higher total unemployment figure in comparison with the previous year was due to a further rise in female unemployment," the commission said in a statement.

"While the number of unemployed men declined slightly (by 0.5 percent), the figure in the case of women increased by 6.9 percent," the commission said.

Health Clinics Within Federal Guidelines

AUSTIN (UPI) — Staff members at health clinics are caught between federal law — allowing them to dispense contraceptives and perform abortions on teen-age girls without parental consent — and state law, which forbids such actions.

Rep. Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, said Tuesday the clinics were within federal laws and guidelines but not state statutes.

Berlanga said Supreme Court rulings and federal guidelines require clinics that receive federal funds to perform abortions, dispense contraceptives and treat venereal diseases of minors without requiring the clinic to obtain the consent of the minors' parents.

Under current Texas law, however, parents must be informed and give their consent for children who are 17 years old or younger to obtain an abortion or contraceptives. Minors can be treated for venereal disease under Texas law without parental consent.

Berlanga said the difference in state and federal law is causing problems for some clinics and many physicians who are unsure of their legal defense if they respond to a minor's request for aid with some forms of family planning. His bill would change the state law to allow minors to receive contraceptives without parental permission.

"It's really absurd," Berlanga said of the current state law. "We're treating kids after the fact.

"It's absurd to say that after a teen-ager becomes pregnant the clinics can give her prenatal care and tell her what to do about the baby, but after she has that baby they can't give her contraceptives to keep it from happening again."

Berlanga said he personally opposes abortion and believes the bill would not only help doctors and teen-agers, but would drastically reduce the number of abortions in Texas by preventing pregnancies.

The Corpus Christi legislator emphasized the bill would prevent minors from obtaining an abortion or sterilization without their parents' knowledge and agreement.

"We're not cutting into the family structure. I have great faith in the family structure," Berlanga said. "But as witnesses at the subcommittee hearing said, if a family doesn't have control over their children by the time they are 14 or 15 — if they haven't accepted their values by then — then what makes them think they can in the next two years?"

He said most objections to the bill came from people who were concerned about particular contraceptive products that might be dispensed.

"I'm not interested in the products — that's up to the doctors to decide," he said, adding the bill was supported by the Texas Medical Association, school counselors, parents and teen-agers, themselves.

The young legislator said he introduced the bill after a Planned Parenthood clinic in Corpus Christi told him of growing numbers of teen-age pregnancies and the difficulties in trying to control them without giving minors the opportunity to use contraceptives.

Dr. Susan Holck of the Texas Department of Health told a House subcommittee that studied the bill 45,595 babies were born to Texas teen-agers in 1977 with 1,074 of them born to girls 14 years old or younger.

She said statistics show approximately one of every nine girls in Texas, between 15 and 19 years old, becomes pregnant each year.

Dr. Holck said while the total number of births to teen-agers has decreased since 1971, the number of births to girls younger than 15 has increased 85 percent since 1966.

"In Texas, there are currently an estimated 119,000 sexually active unmarried teenage girls not using contraception regularly and at high risk for becoming pregnant," Dr. Holck said.

Berlanga said the bill, which is still in committee, would easily pass the House because "the statistics speak for themselves."

Indian Monk To Speak At Tech

The word 'religion' normally refers to a particular set of rituals and beliefs, but a Texas Tech speaker representing the Vedanta Society says his group has no doctrine other than the pursuit of truth and knowledge.

Swami Prabudhananda said at a press conference Tuesday that dialogue among individuals is the group's main source of knowledge but that the society uses tenets from Jesus Christ, Buddha and "all the great" religious figures.

He will discuss "Dehypnotizing Ourselves" at 7:30 p.m. today in the Senate Room at Texas Tech University where his appearance is sponsored by the Student Counseling Center and the philosophy department.

Materialism hypnotizes people, he said, and that creates a distance between people and fear. By dehypnotizing ourselves and opening our minds to truth, he said, "We are all one. We're all brothers. We're all sisters. Rich and poor. Black and white. Indian and American."

Wealth is acceptable, the swami said, as long as an individual doesn't have a fierce protectiveness of his possessions.

"It's that sense of clinging to possessions that brings trouble," he said, adding that learning to fight that attachment and be less selfish is a "lifetime job."

The Indian monk, who came to the United States nine years ago, said some people try to solve the problems of life through physical or psychological means but "We try to talk of problems in terms of spirituality — what we usually call God."

Even though some people may not believe in a Supreme Being, the swami said, "Who is not interested in real love? That is truth. That is God. The spirit is in you and me and everyone."

The definition of the group's name, 'Vedanta,' he said means "culmination of knowledge" and the group uses the basic principles of all religions.

"All religions are true," he said, adding that some practices of different religions may differ in details.

Although he wears the dress of an Indian monk, the swami said followers of the Vedanta Society follow no codes of dress, diet, prayer or other types of discipline. While all group members believe in the "higher values of life in general" he said individuals are free to make their own decisions on details such as whether to believe in reincarnation, and other matters.

"There are many truths," he said. He will discuss secular and spiritual freedom at 8 p.m. Thursday at the First Unitarian Church.

TV Watcher Seeks Mark

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (UPI) — It doesn't matter whether it's old Superman reruns or the soaps. Don Berry plans to get into the Guinness Book of Records and raise some money for charity.

Berry, 25, a former Indiana University student, is watching television for 100 straight hours — a record, he figures, since Guinness has no listing for that category.

Berry, who has been sitting in an armchair in a record store window near the IU campus, hopes to finish sometime Sunday by raising $5,000 for the American Heart Association.

Monroe Cable TV made a special hookup for Berry, but in case the offerings get thin, he also will depend on WTTV, a 24-hour station.

Man Charged With Forgery

Richard Earle Smith Jr., of 1811 Broadway, is accused of forging a $65 check April 13, in charges filed by the Criminal District Attorney's office. A $25,000 bond was recommended.

In other charges filed Tuesday Joe Savandra, 40, of Sundown was charged with unlawfully carrying a weapon into a east Fourth Street club on April 21. Police arrested Savandra that night at the Fiesta Club, 1904 E. Fourth St., after an employee of the club reported he had carried a pistol onto the premises. A $2,500 bond was recommended for Savandra.

Wesley Glenn York, 17, of 1312 25th St., was charged with burglary and a $2,500 bond was recommended for him.

York is charged with stealing a $300 television from April 8 from Troy Biggs' 1312 25th St. rear residence.

A $5,000 bond was recommended for Greg James Lawrence, who was charged with the April 19 theft of a stereo from Mark Fisher's 1913 Baylor St. No. 39 residence. Lawrence, 21, of 1213 48th St., was arrested by police April 23.

Timothy Dale Gould, 17, of 206 51st St. was charged with stealing a motorcycle April 16 from James Swofford. According to police reports, the motorcycle was parked in the 5400 block of Avenue D at the time of the theft, and the CDA recommended a $2,500 bond for Gould.

Tony Carrol Price, 23, of 2501-C Weber Ave. was charged with theft of $866 worth of checks from the Village Inn Pancake House. A $5,000 bond was recommended for Price.

Kennedy Wants Plan For Health Research

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy is calling on Congress to approve legislation that would create a panel to draw up a five-year plan for federal support of health research.

The Massachusetts Democrat introduced the legislation Tuesday, saying Congress needed to "provide some predictability and continuity to our support of health-related research" in a period of fiscal restraint. In the past, he said Congress became known as the "Disease of the Month" club because it funded research programs for specific ailments.

City Council Votes To Abolish Curfew

WICHITA FALLS (UPI) — The City Council has passed six emergency ordinances in an effort to speed reconstruction efforts in the tornado-stricken city.

Council members voted Tuesday to abolish an 11 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew in a heavily destroyed area, but declared a state of disaster would continue to exist citywide until May 2.

The tornado that rampaged through the southern third of the city April 10 took 44 lives and caused more than $200 million in property and commercial damage.

The council said a retail price ceiling on specific goods and commodities would remain in effect until May 11.

Since Wichita Falls and Houston are the only two Texas cities without a comprehensive zoning plan, the council passed an ordinance to allow the city to sue if deed restrictions that were in effect before the storm were breached.

There were numerous rumors that outside commercial interests would attempt to buy large tracts of land in devastated areas and the deed restriction ordinance was aimed at curbing such attempts, observers said.

The seven-member council also suspended, until May 11, competitive bid requirements, providing the suspension does not interfere with the city's eligibility for disaster aid.

The council also voted to waive local licensing restrictions for electricians from other cities who come to Wichita Falls to assist in reconstruction work.

An ordinance was amended to allow residents to place mobile homes on vacant plots or areas where an existing building is located, provided existing deed restrictions are not contravened.

The council also resolved to reinstate a citizen's advisory committee formed in November to outline the city's future bond proposals. A reconstruction and redevelopment committee also was formed to provide short-range recommendations to ensure that commercial entities remain in devastated areas.

of rain falling on the flood-swollen Pearl River in Mississippi, federal state disaster assistance centers began winding up their operations in the northern part of the state as the Gulf Coast area braced for the flood crest still to come. So far, 6,500 families have registered in nine centers serving 29 counties.

In Alabama, one-stop assistance centers staffed by representatives of some 20 agencies opened Tuesday morning to start the processing of assistance applications for thousands of flood victims in 25 counties.

In Missouri, the most recent state declared a major disaster by the president because of tornadoes and flooding, the FDAA and the state were planning to open centers today to serve 14 counties.

Dance To Benefit Family

A benefit dance for the Robert L. Nichols family has been set for Saturday night at the Elks Lodge at 3045 Slide Road.

The Nichols family, a couple with three children, lost all its belongings when a fire destroyed their trailer home near New Deal Thursday.

The dance, from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m., will feature music by Mary Beth and the West Texas Travelers, a Lubbock Country and Western group. Admission is $10 per couple.

According to Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Miers, who are sponsoring the benefit, all proceeds will go to the Nichols family.

Earlier, a trust fund was established at Plains National Bank to assist the family, which lost all belongings including clothing in the fire. Their losses were not covered by insurance, a spokesman said.

Subsidized Competition Raises Profit Question

By LeROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — A strong plea for vigorous measures by Congress to protect American trade and business from unfair and dangerous competition of governmentdominated foreign companies has been voiced by two University of Washington professors.

Professors Kenneth Walters and R. Joseph Monsen, writing in the Harvard Business Review, also raise the much broader issue of the future in the world of economics based on the profit motivation.

They say the "biggest advantage of state-owned companies is their ability to succeed and thrive without earning profits. Although political goals can deflect the state-owned company from operating efficiently even an inefficient company can pose formidable competition when it is subsidized and when its deficits are covered by the government."

In calling for Congressional action to protect American business from such competition, Walters and Monsen also charge that this competition is partly responsible for the current foreign trade imbalance and the decline in the value of the dollar.

They say United States foreign policy for the past 20 years, aimed at helping western Europe and Japan recover from the ravages of World War II, has succeeded too well.

They suggest a federal government office should monitor the behavior and impact on the American economy of the operations of state-owned enterprises abroad and say imports from these countries — regarded as U.S. allies — should be treated on the same basis as those from communist countries.

They pointed out, for example, that the subsidiaries of state-owned companies in France have multiplied from 266 to 650 in the past 20 years and that British government is aggressively moving into new businesses all around.

"Since we now know how to estimate what the real costs of Iron Curtain country goods are and adjust duties accordingly, a strong case can be made that goods from state-owned companies throughout the world should be analyzed accordingly," the two professors argued.

They said U.S. law and policy should recognize explicitly that state-owned companies that are not making the same level of return on investment as their private enterprise counterparts are in fact being subsidized and their prices should not be allowed to undercut private sector competitors.

Spreading government is driving U.S. business completely out of some markets, Walters and Monsen contend. They cite as formidable competitors government-owned airlines, chemical companies, steel mills, the French Renault automobile combine, which has just agreed to buy 20 percent of Mack Trucks, and numerous state-controlled industrial combines.

Walters and Monsen appear to believe the tide of competition by foreign state-owned enterprises can be stemmed and profit-motivated private enterprise protected by tariff adjustment.

But the questions they raise bring to mind the late Howard Scott, who 50 years ago founded the movement called Technocracy and predicted no economic system founded on the profit motive would survive in the world to the end of this century.

He said economic and other scientific logic inevitably would destroy both and that all societies would develop along the lines of government-owned operations whose accomplishment is not measured by profit but by their overall social and economic utility.

He also said he'd not want to live in a Technocratic society.

Apartment Conversions Seen As Threat

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — When the buyer, the seller and the bank all like the proposal, you have the makings of a deal, even if it sometimes displeases local government officials.

The deal, in this instance, is the conversion of rental apartments to condominiums or cooperatives. It's been described in some areas as mass hysteria, in others as a fever, and in many places as frantic.

The owner receives more than he would in selling the building as a unit; the buyer gets an inflation hedge; the bank gets to lend money on a secure asset at today's very high interest rates.

A study by Advance Mortgage Corp. and Citicorp Real Estate calls conversions the hottest sector of the housing boom. Though ignored in official statistics, the number doubled last year to 100,000-plus.

The hysteria occurs in New York City, California and Chicago, the two companies say. Big Manhattan conversions sell out when the offering is filed. In San Diego, sellouts occur while buyers line up.

"In less frantic markets, such as Boston, Minneapolis and Denver, 50-100-unit conversions sell out in six to eight months; in Seattle, in two to four months."

At the moment, the party most distessed by conversions are city officials, who fight the trend as a threat to their rental stocks and as a displacer of poor and elderly households.

Others, such as buyers, might be distressed later, when they find, perhaps, that rising maintenance offsets tax benefits. But most seem to feel the immediate benefits are good. Let others fight.

Some fight hard. The District of Columbia permits conversions only of buildings where rents exceed a certain minimum, raised each year. New York requires consent of 35 percent of tenants. Boston and Denver require tenants be given 120 days notice and first refusal rights.

Such impediments do little to stop the practice, and Advance Mortgage and Citicorp Realty estimate the total will reach at least 130,000 this year.

They see the practice growing out of two trends, the demand for ownership by people who used to rent, and the realization by building owners that their return is higher selling than renting.

The desire to own, particularly strong among singles and childless couples, emanates from financial considerations. Tax benefits are one advantage, equity build-up another, appreciation a third.

Market values rise sharply in the first year after conversion. "It runs a minimum of 20 percent in most markets and there are some examples of 50 percent and 100 percent," the study determined.

Thereafter, except in Manhattan and some downtown high-rises in other cities, it found, appreciation settles down to a bit less than that on single-family homes.

The second thrust comes from landlords who realize that even in markets with high occupancy they are unable to achieve rent returns that keep pace with costs. Rent controls help exaggerate the trend.

In New York, which has rent control, "apartment buildings are worth half again or twice as much as conversional material than as rental," the two companies, both Citicorp subsidiaries, stated.

Another factor might also be involved. The study found that most condo-conversions, especially in central cities and in prime suburban sites, are by professional converters.

Some converters are going national, the two companies state. "A California converter operates in five Sunbelt states. Chicago converters have acquired quality rental buildings in Atlanta, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Memphis, Tenn., and some 20 other cities."

After acquisition, the pro seeks to complete conversion and sellout within 18 months. He sets below-market prices; he gives discounts to occupants, a large occupant sale being essential to quick sellout.

Distinguished Drama Wins Praise From Critic

By FREDERICK M. WINSHIP

NEW YORK (UPI) — The waning Broadway season has acquired a drama of distinction with the transfer of "The Elephant Man" from a church playhouse to the Booth Theater.

If there is one play presently on the boards that must be seen, this is it. The subject, based on the actual life of a hideously deformed Englishman in the Victorian period, is a fascinating one and the performances are of virtuoso quality. Young Philip Anglim in the title role has leaped to stardom.

The play is a flawed masterpiece which tends to wind down in the second act as the vital spark in the elephant man flickers and death approaches. Playwright Bernard Pomerance's parable of a natural man's loss of innocence in the course of the civilizing process is not always clear in its expression but it never lacks in haunting appeal to the emotions.

"The Elephant Man" won immediate acclaim when it opened in the basement theater of St. Peter's Lutheran Church several months ago, and the trip across town to the larger Booth on April 19 may even have improved it. The play is too powerful for intimate showcasing.

Anglim plays John Merrick, whose disfiguring malady resembles elephantiasis, without makeup, conveying the horror of his appearance by distorting his body. Merrick is rescued from a freak show by an up-and-coming London doctor and given a home in a hospital that uses his presence as a means of garnishing its reputation.

Merrick is intelligent and original in his views and he becomes something of a social elephant, visited and patronized by some of the luminaries of the period, including Alexandra, Princess of Wales. Most of these folk are self-serving except for a prominent actress, Mrs. Kendal, gloriously portrayed by Carole Shelley.

Her loyalty extends to baring herself above the waist so Kendall can have his first glimpse of female anatomy. This is a gesture that touches off the wrath of Merrick's keeper, Dr. Frederick Treves, played with flawless attention to nuance by Kevin Conway.

Treves is appalled at the idea of anyone encouraging Merrick to even dream of a romantic relationship that Victorian society — perhaps any society — would abhor, and so Mrs. Kendal is dismissed from Merrick's life. It is the beginning of the end for the elephant man, who dies shortly after he symbolically caps the spire of a miniature church he has built with a tiny gilded cross.

His cleric friend and spiritual adviser, Bishop Walsham How, bombastically played by I.M. Hobson, is sure that Merrick has found peace in his transformation from monster to man . The audience has no such surety.

The direction by Jack Hofsiss is inspired and there are cleverly mobile settings by David Jenkins and handsome period costumes by Julie Weiss. The American National Theater and Academy can be inordinately proud of having sponsored this production.

Another brilliant play, "Whose Life Is It Anyway?" has opened on Broadway. Reviewed by Lillian O'Connell:

Tom Conti is one actor who really knows how to use his head. And use it he does for a stunning performance in Brian Clark's tragicomedy, "Whose Life Is It Anyway?" which opened April 17 at the Trafalgar Theater, former the Billy Rose.

In the starring role of Ken Harrison, a young sculptor, paralyzed from the neck down by a severed spinal cord suffered in an auto accident, Conti slashes away at the heartstrings with witticisms so incisive they hurt.

Best known to Americans for his TV roles in PBS productions of "The Norman Conquests" and "Glittering Prizes," Conti shares top billing with Jean Marsh, Emmy winner for her role in the TV series "Upstairs, Downstairs."

Miss Marsh is cast as Dr. Scott, who, with Philip Bosco as Dr. Emerson, tries to convince Harrison that life is still worth living, even it it means tranquilizing his brilliant mind and repressing his sexual desires.

As the play opens, Harison has been in his hospital bed for six months and has come to regard his surroundings as the "ante-room to the morgue." He demands to know what his chances are of ever moving his arms or legs again, commenting, "Doctors dole out information rather like a kosher butcher doles out pork sausages."

Told his case is hopeless, he asks to be discharged so he can die, a form of suicide. Dr. Emerson refuses. Lawyers, psychiatrists and finally a judge are called in to decide Harrison's fate.

Conti commands the full attention of the audience with only his head and facial expressions. But he is supported by a cast so well chosen for their parts that this British import directed by Michael Lindsay-Hogg is a singular stage triumph.

A biographical play, "Manny," has opened on Broadway. Reviewed by Gay Pauley:

The plot doesn't thicken as "Manny" progresses at the Century theater. It's already thick as porridge from the opening scene in which Raymond Serra, playing the late actor Edward G. Robinson, is testifying before the House UnAmerican Activities Committee on charges of Communist sympathies and support, to the bitter end when Robinson fades into the sunset mentally composing the speech he will make at the annual Academy Awards dinner.

The awards officials, knowing that Robinson is dying, notified him in advance of the presentation the movie industry was making in recognition of his contributions.

Sir Laurence Olivier writes him a letter, addressing him as "Dear Manny" — Robinson's real name was Emmanuel Goldenberg. "He called me Manny," said Robinson, touched to tears.

Serra also wrote the play, which opened April 18, and if there was a soap opera angle left out, it was an oversight. If Serra can tighten the first of the two acts and focus more on one facet of the actor's many-faceted life, he has a good play. But it's difficult for the audience to absorb the portrait of a fine actor who worked for 60 years for first the stage (he made his debut in 1913), then the screen, when it's done in a two-hour span.

We start with Manny's career with a flashback to 1947 when he is testifying before the House committee in the witch hunt days. We keep flashing back to the hearings until April 1952 when he is tacitly cleared.

The play is interspersed with old film clips which show the tough guy roles that made Robinson a star and a wealthy man.

But in real life, Manny can't seem to do anything right except work, work, work, and collect art. The latter also plays a part in his family problems.

He tears down his son's tennis court in Beverly Hills, Calif., to make room for an art gallery.

Manny agonizes over whether, as an already successful stage actor, he should accept the million-dollar movie contracts waved before him by both Irving Thalberg and Harry Warner.

Eventually his career drive overwhelms his wife who goes into a nervous decline and then divorces him, while his son, Eddie, Jr., is estranged and lost in the bottle for a while, and the hearings on communism put him on movie hiring blacklists for several years.

Serra tackles the Robinson role with bluster and bombast, with rare moments showing the gentler, learned Edward G. The role is Serra's tour de force, cigar, rasping voice, and all, and he grows with the role through family and career crisis, becoming a believable Robinson.

Q: I received he final billing for some merchandise we recently purchased and paid for it with a check marked Paid In Full. The store cashed my check but the following month sent another bill for payment. Am I legally expected to pay this second bill? What can I do to make sure this won't give me "bad credit"?

A: Assuming you did pay the account in full, you are not obligated to pay the second bill. In general, unless there is a genuine dispute between the debtor and creditor as to the amount owed, the mere payment of a check for less than the total will not discharge the debt, even if the check is marked "Paid In Full."

You may request a copy of your credit record from the credit bureau. If the record incorrectly shows the account as "unpaid" you may dispute the report and have the claim investigated and corrected.

Q: My ex-husband has, in effect, kidnapped my son right out of my yard. I know the child is also his, but in our divorce, I received total custody rights. I don't want my son to live with him. What can I do? Can he be arrested for kidnapping his own son?

A: When a child has been taken from the managing conservator — that is, the person given custody of the child in the decree of divorce — by the other parent — the proper remedy is a writ of habeas corpus.

If the other parent does not comply with the order of the court resulting from the habeas corpus proceeding, he may be sent to jail for contempt of court.

If the child is taken out of the state in violation of a court's custody order, the individual may be guilty of a third degree felony.

Q: When my divorce was granted, my share of the settlement included the family cemetery plots. I have since discovered that two of these already have people buried on them. Is there anything I can do to have the bodies moved out of our family plot?

A: You must obtain the consent of the cemetery association and of the surviving spouse of the deceased; if there is no surviving spouse, then of the children, and if there are no children, then of the brothers or sisters of the deceased. If you cannot obtain the consent of any such person or of the cemetery association, you must obtain permission from the County Court in the county in which the cemetery is located. In addition, you must obtain a written order of the health department having jurisdiction, or of the county court of any county in which the cemetery is located, permitting you to remove the remains.

Send your questions to "You and the Law," State Bar of Texas, P.O. Box 12487. Answers may appear in columns in hypothetical terms; personal answers not possible.

Fraudulent Returns Costing Government

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most Americans consider filing one federal income tax return burdensome enough, but hundreds of "taxpayers" are submitting extra returns and finding the practice profitable, although illegal.

The tax refund schemes, which involve use of fictitious names on income tax returns and phony W-2 forms listing money never withheld, are estimated to be costing the government millions of dollars a year.

However, the Internal Revenue Service says it has no estimate on how many of its 64 million tax returns a year are from ficticious persons or how much tax money is being lost.

A House Government Operations oversight subcommittee began hearings on the fraudulent tax schemes Tuesday. Testimony was expected today from IRS Commissioner Jerome Kurtz on what the government's tax collectors are doing to stop the fraud.

In testimony Tuesday, an investigator for the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, said the fraudulent tax refund schemes require only a limited understanding of tax laws.

"Almost anyone — automobile dealers, waitresses, salesmen, laborers, machinists, students — can become a multiple filer," said GAO's Richard L. Fogel.

"All it takes is minimal knowledge of how to prepare a tax return, access to certain forms which for the most part are readily available to the public and the nerve to follow through on a scheme aimed at defrauding the government."

Rep. Benjamin S. Rosenthal, D-N.Y., subcommittee chairman, said later that despite discussion of how the fraud is perpetrated, he did not believe the hearings would result in more tax refund schemes.

"I don't think any information came out that would cause (those) side effects," Rosenthal said, adding that the purpose of the hearings was rather to "energize" the government into greater action against the tax refund schemes.

Fogel said the keys to carrying out such a tax scheme are obtaining a false Social Security number and filing of fake W-2 forms.

He said multiple filers either use fictitious names to obtain Social Security numbers from the government, take the Social Security numbers of persons, such as derelicts or students, who are not likely to file their own returns, or use the numbers of dead people.

The tax fraud scheme also requires obtaining blank W-2 forms, putting down amounts of money earned and withheld, and including an employer identification number. Fraudulent filers normally use a valid company's number, apply for their own or make one up, Fogel said.

Fogel said the IRS identified 512 questionable refund schemes in 1978, but largely because of difficulty in determining the identities of the filers, 287 — more than half — were rejected for investigation by the IRS' criminal division.

In one current case, the Justice Department is seeking the extradition of a 40-year-old West German national from Switzerland on charges of defrauding the U.S. government of $500,000 through refunds to 60 fictitious persons.

Man Finds Baby Lying In Road

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Robert Pichelman was headed for work when he spotted a small bundle lying in the middle of a street. The bundle was a baby boy that had fallen from the trunk of a car driven by the baby's mother.

"I saw a small ear and as I moved closer I realized it was a baby," said Pichelman. "It looked at me with wide eyes, but it didn't cry."

Pichelman called for help, and police took the 4-month-old boy to a nearby hospital. He was uninjured.

Police later determined the baby fell into the road from the trunk of his mother's car, where a friend had placed it. The mother, believing the friend placed the infant inside the vehicle, drove off and didn't realize her son was missing until she arrived home.

They were reunited about 2½ hours later.

"Sometimes parents will have truck stops or rest stops on the highway while traveling and take a head count and realize they have left one or two youngsters behind," said Richard McKiddy, commander of the juvenile custody division. "But this was a rare occurrence."

Police would not identify the mother.

Bear Killings Concern Finns

HELSINKI, Finland (UPI) — Bare survival is the rule for bears in Finland and tasty bear meat dishes served up in Finnish restaurants are not helping stop illegal killings of the valuable animal.

In an appeal to the Finnish Hotel and Restaurant Board, World Wildlife Fund-Finland General Secretary Mauri Rautkari asked the delicacy be removed from restaurant menus.

While the number of bears has increased since the government severely limited the bear-hunting season, 10 to 20 bears are still killed illegally each year for their valuable skins, skull and meat, worth up to $3,250.

Most poachers catch the bear in its lair or hunt it from motorized vehicles, both illegal methods.

There are 250 bears in Finland at the moment, up from 150 only nine years ago. But the Wildlife Fund feels that is still too low a number.

Bear meat also often carries trichina, the worm whose larvae causes trichinosis.

Peru's Gold Treasures To Be Shown In Houston

HOUSTON (Special) — Peru's Golden Treasures, an international exhibition of gold artifacts from five pre-Hispanic Peruvian civilizations, will be presented by the Houston Museum of Natural Science from June 4 through September 3, it was announced today by Herbert J. Frensley, president of the Museum.

Frensley also announced that the exhibition, which already has been seen by more than a million people in five U.S. cities, will be sponsored in Houston by Texas Eastern Corporation and Houston Natural Gas Corporation. It will be the first major international anthropological exhibition ever to be shown in Houston.

"The appeal of this exhibition," said Frensley, "is not just to the anthropologist or the history buff. It's also a spectacular display of 2,000 years of the goldsmith's art that will delight anyone who appreciates the beauty of fine jewelry or handcrafts. When you combine its historical and artistic value with the montary value of the gold itself, Peru's Golden Treasures truly can be called priceless."

Robert R. Herring, chairman of Houston Natural Gas Corporation, and Dr. George Kirby, chairman of Texas Eastern Corporation, both expressed enthusiasm for their companies' role in sponsoring the exhibition.

"We feel that Peru's Golden Teasures is a fascinating and beautiful art exhibit," Herring said, "and one that will bring enjoyment to people of all artistic and ethnic backgrounds. Its presence in our museum gives Houston a rare opportunity to gain a greater appreciation of such intriguing primitive cultures."

Kirby stated: "We are pleased to participate in an event as outstanding as this exhibition. Rarely in our modern technological society do we have a chance to enjoy such remarkable examples of artistic technique."

Organized by the American Museum of Natural History in New York, Peru's Golden Treasures consists of 222 exquisite pieces of pre-Columbian Peruvian gold from the Museo Oro del Peru in Lima. It is presented under the auspices of the government of Peru, through a special ministerial resolution that has been extended to permit showing in Houston. The exhibit is supported by a federal indemnity from the U.S. Council on the Arts and the Humanities.

Peru's Golden Treasures, the largest collection of Peruvian gold ever shown in the United States, has appeared in New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Detroit and New Orleans over the past 18 months.

Covering the art of five civilizations from 200 B.C. to 1532 A.D., the exhibition is representative of the relatively few examples of Peru's goldworking tradition that survived the Spanish conquest of the Incas in 1532. At that time, most of the country's ancient gold objects, particularly those of the Incas, were melted down by the conquistadors, who also enslaved the entire nation.

"One of the greatest attractions of this exhibition," said Dr. Thomas Pulley, director of the Houston museum, "is the lure of gold. Gold has captured man's imagination for thousands of years. In pre-Hispanic Peru, as in ancient Egypt, gold was symbolic of the sun and played a major role in religious observances. Only the rulers and nobility could wear gold, and it was buried with them. But to the conquering Spaniards, it represented only a source of booty and wealth."

Interest in Peru's Golden Treasures has been stirred not only by its appearances in Toronto and five U.S. cities, but also by recent U.S. showing of artifacts from other bygone civilizations. These have included shows of items from King Tut's tomb, Pompeii and ancient China, none of which have been seen in Houston.

At the Houston Museum of Natural Science, the huge funeral masks and gloves, the animal and human figurines, the ceremonial staffs and maces, the drinking vessels, the jewelry and other adornments that make up the Peruvian gold exhibition will be housed in the Brown Auditorium and the MacDannald Hall of the American Indian on the museum's first floor.

The show will open to the public on June 4, after several weekend previews for dignitaries and members of the Museum Society. A press preview is scheduled Tuesday, May 29.

The museum has adopted special hours for the Peru's Golden Treasures exhibition. Public hours will be from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., seven days a week. Tickets, sold only at the museum on a first-come, first-served basis, will be $2 for adults and $1 for children under 12.

In addition, groups of 250 or more may attend exclusive reserved showings from from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Tuesdays, Fridays and Saturdays. Smaller groups of 20 or more may make reservations for any evening when large groups are not scheduled, or they may visit the exhibition by reservation from 9 a.m. to 10 a.m., Monday through Saturday. Prices for group reservations are $4 per person, and reservations may be made by phoning the museum at (713) 526-7026.

Members of the Museum Society will be admitted free during public hours.

GOLDEN GLOVES — Ceremonial golden gloves, which probably were used on the mummy of a deceased Chimu noble, are one of the most striking elements of "Peru's Golden Treasures," a major international exhibition which will be displayed at the Houston Museum of Natural Science from June 4 to September 3.

Dynamite Shipment Explodes In Quarry

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A truckload of dynamite exploded at a Lancaster quarry a few miles fom here, wrecking dozens of cars, shattering windows and injuring nine workers, none seriously.

"It's a miracle nobody was killed," said town supervisor Stanley Keysa. "But fortunately this happened at an isolated area." The explosion Monday tore a hole in the ground 6 feet deep and 20 feet wide. The blast shattered workers' cars and trucks, tore down power lines and jolted people 10 to 15 miles away. One school canceled classes for the day because of broken windows. James Phofl, plant manager, declined comment on the blast, saying he was waiting for authorities to complete an investigation.

U.S. Not Forcing Iranians To Leave

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iranians in the United States will not be forced to leave this country before Sept. 1 due to Iran's unstable political situation, the Immigration and Naturalization Service says.

A State Department official said Monday the Sept. 1 date was selected to allow time for U.S. officials to assess the political turbulence in Iran after of the ouster of the shah. "Out of fairness we don't think people who don't want to go back should be forced to return," said the official who asked not to be identified. The INS said 44 Iranians were deported in 1977 but no total is available for last year.

Kennedy Says Public Financing Needed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy says representative government "is in the worst shape I have seen it in my 17 years in Congress" because of a Senate and House of Representatives "awash in a sea of special interest campaign contributions and special interest lobbying."

The Massachusetts Democrat told an AFL-CIO conference Monday his calls for public financing of congressional races should be heeded to help remedy the situation.

CHEVY CITATION

Citation goes a long way on a tank of gas. But that's just the start. Citation has the traction of front wheel drive, rack and pinion steering, front disc brakes, and a transverse mounted engine that's cradled in rubber cushioned mountings to reduce engine vibration. Sleek Citation is easy to park, yet big enough for five adults and lots of cargo. See Chevy Citation for yourself. And to really appreciate it, get behind the wheel!

With standard 4-cylinder engine and manual transmission.

Remember: Compare the estimated MPG to the "estimated MPG" of other cars. You may get different mileage depending on your speed, trip length, and weather. Your actual mileage will be lower in heavy city traffic, and your actual highway mileage will probably be less than the estimated highway fuel economy. the "estimated MPG" is more likely to reflect actual overall mileage than the "combined estimate".
Chevrolet cars are equipped with GM built engines produced by various divisions.

TEST DRIVE THE ALL NEW CHEVY CITATION.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat and soybean futures rallied today on the Chicago Board of Trade.

An Agriculture Department report showing heavier-than-expected soybean exports last week helped push soybean futures 7 to 13 1/2 cents higher. The reported 14.8-million-bushel exports were only half of the previous week's levels but more than expected by traders.

In a separate report, the department said domestic wheat supplies were about 1.22 billion bushels, 20 percent less than a year ago and less than expected.

Domestic soybean supplies at 871 million bushels were 3 percent above last year's levels.

USDA Forecasters See Few Changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Repeatedly stressing the uncertainty of predictions so early in the growing season, the Agriculture Department's forecasters expect only modest changes in soybean, food grain and feedgrain prices and supplies into 1980.

Feedgrain prices do have a good chance to rise next season, they said, if the weather is only slightly bad and if the pork and poultry markets continue their present expansion.

That's essentially what the Outlook and Situation Board has been saying all year. But Tuesday's formal update of current and 1979-80 supply and demand estimates did have some new wrinkles.

For one thing it placed increased emphasis on uncertainty. Sometimes twice a page, the forecasters noted that the weather is too unstable now for them to have a good feel for crop supplies, uses and prices.

Another new aspect was an improved outlook for the feedgrain market.

For example, a "sharper than expected expansion in pork production," along with more poultry to feed, caused the board to raise its estimate of corn going to feed this season by 100 million bushels.

That would mean 4.1 billion bushels of corn used for feed, compared to 3.71 billion in 1977-78. Depending on the new crop, which depends on the weather, animals could consume 3.9 billion to 4.4 billion bushels of a 1979-80 crop tentatively set at a range of 5.8 billion to 7 billion bushels.

Expanded hog and poultry production also means good movement of record soybean stocks, the board said.

It also raised by 25 million bushels its estimate of feed use of wheat this season, to 175 million. At the same time it hiked export projections by that amount, to almost 1.18 billion bushels. That will bring wheat stocks down to 951 million bushels in June after three years above 1 billion.

The board now expects feedgrain stocks at harvest this fall to total about 54 million metric tons, some 13 million above last fall but 3 million less than the last update foresaw.

Tentative planting intentions indicate the lowest feedgrain acreage since 1972 — 118 million acres — because of a shift to better-priced soybeans and sunflowers, the board said. And wet weather is delaying fieldwork, it noted.

Its best assessment now, it said, "suggests some reduction in supplies coupled with larger disappearance. Thus, stocks would likely decline, resulting in strong ... prices."

But for wheat, soybeans, rice and cotton, the board sees either surpluses or renewed large crops offsetting both the strong demand from foreign markets and any reduced production because of smaller plantings or weather problems.

Bergland Opposes Planned Boycott

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland is suggesting that high-priced beef to a consumer is a little like a high-priced tractor to a farmer: "If you can't afford it, don't buy it."

But Bergland said Tuesday he is opposed to a planned consumer boycott of beef or "meatless days" to protest high prices.

"I think we who consume should buy what we can afford," he said. "There is no way to alleviate a shortage except by price."

Bergland told the annual meeting of the Newspaper Farm Writers of America that beef supplies will not increase until cattle producers finish rebuilding herds two or three years from now.

Until that happens, he said, prices will stay high and the limited amount of beef available will go to those with enough money to buy it.

Handicapped Youth Wins Boy Scouts' Top Award

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Paul Schneider, left retarded by polio as an infant, had little hope of ever living a normal life. But this week a change in the national Boy Scout rules has allowed Schneider to become special.

In 1973, the formation of a Scout troop for handicapped boys had already given Paul new hope. As a troop member he was credited with saving the life of a fellow Scout and worked hard during the past six years toward the organization's highest rank.

Recently, he was given the Eagle Scout award at a special banquet, becoming the first handicapped Scout in Missouri to achieve it and only the third in the nation.

"He is so thrilled he hardly knows what to do," Ann Suttles, Paul's mother, said. "The Disabled American Veterans (sponsors of the troop) put on all of this for Paul and took care of all the expenses. Around 100 people attended."

Paul recently completed the requirements for the Eagle Scout badge, but was unable to receive it because nationally the BSA had an age limit of 17 for attaining the award.

"It took a change nationally for allow Paul to get it," Mrs. Suttles said. "They lifted the age limit and now it can be given to a person of any age. I'd really rather you not give his age, but he is long past the old 17 age limit."

She emphasized that as a member of Boy Scout Troop 213, all of the Scouts worked hard for their achievements.

"They don't give them these things," Mrs. Suttles said. "They have to work very hard."

As part of the requirement, he put in 123 volunteer hours at the Harry S. Truman Memorial Veterans Hospital in Columbia. There he would escort patients and guide their wheelchairs, and spenp many hours collecting more than 200 books for the hospital library.

Paul also was credited with saving the life of a fellow Scout. The troop was at Camp Hohn at the Lake of the Ozarks in July of 1977 when a colleague, Gordon Barnes, and Paul began tracking the 170 feet of steep cliff and winding ledges of Kit Carson Trail.

At the top, Gordon stumbled and lost his footing, falling to a rocky ledge. Paul rushed to Gordon, who was hanging on to a twig to keep from falling further, and was credited with having prevented a fatal fall. For his action, Paul received a Certificate of Merit.

"He's worked very hard and he's very happy," Mrs. Suttles said of her son, who works daily at the Jefferson City Sheltered Workshop. "He is just tickled to death."

Feed Experts Leave For Trip To Russia

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five government and private experts on mixed feeds in other countries left Sunday for a 24-day trip to Moscow and four other cities in the Soviet Union, the Agriculture Department says.

The team, travelling under a 1973 U.S.-Soviet agricultural pact, wants to study the structure of the Russian mixed-feed industry, its relationship to over-all livestock feeding and current trends on feed use and efficiency.

Philip L. Mackie ot USDA's Foreign Agricultural Service leads the group, which includes Arthur L. Coffing and Keith Severin, also from FAS; William B. Briggs of Atlanta, from the U.S. Feed Grains Council, and Dr. George H. Wellington of Ithaca, N.Y., from the American Soybean Association.

ABC Planning To Introduce Six New Shows On Fall Schedule

By JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Cylons couldn't shoot down "Battlestar Galactica," but ABC could and did — particularly since it was an abnormally big budget show with mediocre ratings.

"Starsky and Hutch" could uphold law and order but couldn't sustain the big audiences.

And the Nielsen ratings of "Delta House," "What's Happening," "Makin' It" and "Welcome Back, Kotter," were no laughing matter to the ABC programmers.

All will be off the air when ABC goes on with its new 1979-80 fall schedule next September. "Salvage I" probably will escape the scrap heap by moving into the 7 p.m., Eastern time, hour on Sundays, but the fate of the Osmond Family Hour, "How the West Was Won" and "Carter Country" remain in doubt.

ABC plans to introduce six new shows — three half-hour sitcoms and three hour-long dramas. And it will use the old programming adage that if you can lead an audience to comedy, maybe you can't make it laugh but getting them there is three-fourths of the battle.

To give the newcomers the biggest possible introductory audience, the network will shuffle its deck of winning comedies.

On Sunday, "Mork and Mindy" will turn up 8 p.m., Eastern time, to be followed by "The Associates," billed as a comedy about life in a law office and put together by those wonderful folks who gave us "Taxi."

The sitcom is based on the book by the same name by John Jay Osborn Jr. It was Osborn's earlier book on which CBS's "The Paper Chase" was based — a show that's been a critical success and ratings catastrophe.

"Laverne & Shirley" has been moved from its Tuesday slot after "Happy Days" to 8 p.m., Thursday. Its Tuesday replacement is "Hart in San Francisco," a farce about an unorthodox Scotland Yard inspector who winds up on the San Francisco force. The title is tentative because ABC has another "Hart" title coming up.

On Thursday "Laverne & Shirley" will lead into "Benson," in which the Tate's butler from "Soap" goes to work for a naive governor.

The remaining comedy is "Hart to Hart," starring Robert Wagner and Stefanie Powers as a wealthy husband-wife detective team, ala Nick and Nora Charles. One of those Hart titles must go.

On the less comic side, ABC will offer "240-Robert," an action-adventure tale of a Los Angeles search and rescue outfit, and "The Lazarus Syndrome," a hospital drama with Lou Gossett Jr., as a brillian heart surgeon and Ronald Hunter as a tough newspaperman who's his patient and somehow winds up helping him run the hospital.

CBS and NBC are expected to produce their fall schedules within the next week or two — traditionally the dominant network announces first. That's when the big shuffle begins as networks switch their lineups like losing baseball managers. They're trying to change the answer to "Who's on first?"

Police Investigating Tire Repair Shop Robbery

Police today were investigating the reported aggravated robbery of a business owner which netted the bandits $150 shortly after 5 p.m. Tuesday.

A patrol car was flagged down in the 1000-block of Avenue A, and police were led to a tire repair shop at 512 Ave. A. The shop owner, William E. Morris, 71, of 1509 36th St., told police three black men entered his business, and one of the men, armed with a revolver, snatched his wallet containing the cash.

Morris said after the three men, in their 20s or 30s, entered the shop, one of them asked to see some "wide tires." He said when he led the man to the back of the shop, he displayed a black, short-barreled revolver and ordered him to go back to the front.

The owner said that as he walked back to the front of the store at gunpoint the bandit took his wallet, containing $150, which was attached to his belt.

Reports state that the armed man instructed his two companions to make Morris and two customers lie on the floor and to tie them up with extension cord.

Morris said, however, the other two men refused to follow the instructions, and the pistol-wielding suspect then led Morris and his two customers into a toilet, where they were ordered to stay for 10 minutes.

Reports indicate that when the three came out, the suspects had fled. When they attempted to call police they found the business phone had been ripped off the wall.

In other activity, an employee at a club told police he was assaulted about 1:45 a.m. today by two Mexican-American males when he tried to break up an altercation inside the club.

He told police he saw the pair arguing with another employee, and that they were taking off their belts. He said when he walked up one of the men struck him in the forehead with his belt buckle, and then the two fled the club. The employee was treated and released at Methodist Hospital.

Reports indicate that one of the men the employee accused of hitting him was questioned by police at Health Sciences Center Hospital, where he was treated for minor injuries thought to have been sustained in the same incident.

The 19-year-old Texas Tech student, a Mexican-American, said that he was the one assaulted at the club. He said that several of the employees jumped him inside the club while he looked for a friend. The student told police he was struck several times by the employees before being thrown out of the club.

No arrests had been made by early this morning in connection with the incident.

About 5 a.m. today, a 24-year-old Lubbock woman said a 48-year-old white man hit her in the face and threatened to kill her if she notified police.

She said she, a friend and the suspect had gone to her residence from a club. She said the man got a glass of milk, drank it and then hurled the glass in her face, cutting her lip.

The woman was taken to a local hospital where she was treated and released. Reports did not indicate what prompted the attack.

Police Tuesday rounded up three Lubbock women they say are suspected of being prostitutes.

The first arrest came about 2:15 p.m. at a location in the 2400-block of 34th Street. Reports state an undercover police detective went to a massage parlor where a woman quoted him several prices for rubdowns, including one for $100.

The plain-clothed officer asked what he got for the $100 and she reportedly answered, "everything." The woman was taken into custody, according to reports, after the policeman again asked what the $100 paid for and she said, "You know, it includes everything."

The woman allegedly walked up to an unmarked police car and asked two detectives, "What are you guys looking for? " When the undercover policemen answered, "Oh, we're just looking for a little fun," the woman reportedly suggested they have sex with her for $30 each. The woman was transported to the county jail, where she was booked for prostitution.

About 3 p.m., two vice officers reportedly were asked by a woman what they were doing at 16th Street and Avenue C. When the detectives answered they were driving around "just having a good time," the woman allegedly offered them sex for $20. She was arrested.

A burglar trying to carry a TV set out of Mary Helen Johnson's residence at 1917 E. 1st Place early Tuesday was forced to flee minus his haul after he was spotted by a neighbor, who became suspicious after hearing several dogs bark.

The neighbor, upon seeing the man with the TV, went back inside to get a gun and when he returned, the man had fled without the TV set, worth $700.

Burglars, apparently with an eye for sunny days at the lake, robbed Furr Marine, Route 1, Lubbock, over the weekend.

Lubbock County sheriff's deputies said someone entered the boat shop and took seven slalom water skis, together valued at $1,435.

Property worth some $600, including a stereo, a TV set, a clock and some records, was removed from Patrick Asogwa's residence at 2107 8th St., sometime early Tuesday, according to police report.

Security officers nabbed a would-be shoplifter at J.C. Penney's in South Plains Mall shortly after noon Tuesday.

The officers caught the 18-year-old boy after he left the store without paying for a $190 camera. He was turned over to juvenile authorities following his arrest.

Kelley Young said someone broke into his car while it sat in the parking lot of the College Inn at 1001 University Ave. early Tuesday.

Young said the burglars broke into his car and took a CB radio and antenna, and two sections of his T-top roof. The missing items are valued at $885, he said.

Gas Rationing Plan Set Back

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Commerce Committee today narrowly voted disapproval of President Carter's standby gasoline rationing plan.

The 23-19 vote marked a major setback but not not final defeat for the plan, which will get another chance later on the House floor.

Under Carter's rationing program, gasoline coupons would be allocated depending on the number of cars owned by each person.

Opponents said it would be unfair because the coupons would become a kind of money dispensed only to those who owned cars.

"It was designed by privileged technocrats for the economic elite," said Rep. Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., shortly before the vote.

On Tuesday the committee also rejected the president's request for standby authority to close gasoline stations on weekends if there were an energy emergency.

If it were enacted, the rationing plan would call for the federal government to send out rationing checks based on car registrations.

Car owners would then go to banks or other financial institutions and cash in the checks for coupons, which would be redeemed for gasoline.

Coupons could be freely sold by anyone who used less gasoline than he had coupons for.

While the full House will also vote on the plan, Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the Commerce Committee's subcommittee on energy, said it was unlikely the rationing plan would survive if the committee recommeded disapproval.

Meanwhile, Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger said an anticipated summer gasoline shortage may be made worse deliberately to keep heating oil flowing to homes next winter.

Schlesinger said the administration may soon have to take steps to see that crude oil normally destined for refining into gasoline is used to make home heating oil instead.

Meanwhile, an administration proposal to give the president standby authority to save fuel by ordering weekend closings of gasoline stations has been turned down by an important House committee.

Schlesinger was scheduled to appear today before a House-Senate Economic subcommittee chaired by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., to defend the president's recent decision to lift price controls on domestically produced oil.

Other witnesses called included Charles L. Schultze, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers; Alice Rivlin, director of the Congressional Budget Office; and several private ecomomists.

Kennedy said today's hearing would "look at the whole range of direct and indirect economic impacts of oil decontrol" and "how any revenue collected through a windfall profits tax, if it is enacted, will be used."

Carter has proposed using some of the money from his proposed tax to help low-income people pay heating bills. But Schlesiger said Tuesday specifics of the plan have yet to be worked out.

The steps to ensure an adequate supply of heating oil will begin with "polite conversations" with oil companies but could end up with orders to refineries to produce less gasoline and more heating oil, Schlesinger said Tuesday.

Because of the nearly three-month loss of Iranian oil, home heating oil supplies are now at critically low levels, Schlesinger said.

"The message is clear," he said. "We are not going into next winter's heating season with the risk that homes that need oil for heat will be short."

Testifying before the House Commerce energy and power subcommittee, Schlesinger said that although decontrol is needed to ease potential long range oil shortages, it won't do anything to avoid possible heating oil shortages next winter.

The full House Commerce Committee turns its attention to Carter's standby proposal for gasoline rationing today after rejecting Tuesday the president's request for authority to close service stations on weekends. The administraton has esimated that closings from Friday noon to Sunday midnight could save about 246,000 barrels of gasoline a day.

Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the energy and power subcommittee, told reporters: "Signs do not augur well for approval of gasoline rationing." But despite the major setback for the administration in the committee, Dingell said he will try to arrange for a full House vote on the issues.

Schlesinger told Dingell's panel that gasoline shortages — especially of unleaded fuel — are a near certainty this summer.

He said the nation's heating oil supplies are at an historic low for this time of year of 112 million barrels — roughly half what is needed. Schlesinger said the administration would watch the situation very closely for the next few weeks and "unless refineries build up these stocks we may have to take mandatory steps."

Schlesinger said that although oil price decontrol would raise gasoline prices by seven cents a gallon by 1981, the extra cost would result in more than 700,000 barrels a day in new oil supplies.

In other energy-related developments Tuesday:

—Texaco Inc., the nation's third largest oil company, said net earnings in the first quarter of 1979 rose 80.9 percent to $307 million compared with $169.7 million in the first quarter of 1978.

Gulf Oil Co. said its earnings rose rose 60.6 percent to $241 million in the first three months of this year compared with the same period last year.

A 16 percent increase to $224 million for the quarter was reported by Shell Oil, while Phillips Petroleum reported a 4 percent increase in profits.

Five Class-Action Suits Filed As Result Of Nuclear Mishap

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — The nuclear reactor accident at Three Mile Island already has led to five lawsuits filed in behalf of area residents who claim the crisis has hurt their businesses, depressed values of their property and caused them mental and bodily harm.

And it may take years to resolve the legal issues growing out of the March 28 incident that caused the biggest scare in the history of this country's commercial nuclear energy program.

None of the class-action suits, which effectively blanket all 636,000 people and merchants living with 20 miles of the plant, seeks a specific dollar amount in total damages. Lawyers say the hefty tab still is being computed.

But three of the suits estimate damage will at least match the $560 million limit established by a 22-year-old federal law to pay the costs of a nuclear accident.

"I've been here 20 years and I don't remember anything quite like this," said Ken Mulhulland, federal clerk of courts who received four of the suits. "I think there will be more coming."

Raymond Hovis, a York, Pa., lawyer, sued on behalf of all the people and businesses within a five-mile radius of the plant.

"In terms of the human element, I don't know of anything like it," he said. "I can see this thing going on for — and let me stress this is just a guess — three to six years."

Named as defendants in the various suits were:

General Public Utilities, the consortium that owns the plant; Metropolitan Edison Co., the plant's operator; Babcock & Wilcox Co., the plant's designer; and Catalytic Inc., the company responsible for plant maintenance.

Generally, the suits claim negligenee or defects in the plant's design, operation and maintenance as the accident's cause and insist the owners are liable for damages.

Low level radiation has been drifting from the plant since a series of human and mechanicial blunders severely damaged a nuclear reactor and almost caused a catastrophe.

For 11 days, Gov. Dick Thornburgh advised pregnant women and pre-school children to leave if they lived within five miles of the plant. An estimated 75,000 others evacuated on their own.

One suit filed in Dauphin County Court asks that the crippled facility be closed for good and that its owners be forced to pay for medical treatment of the 636,000 people living in a 20-mile radius for the next 20 years.

The suit claims that residents should be reimbursed for medical treatments, asking that those nearby be checked four times a year for the next two decades to detect possible cancers resulting from radiation.

The four suits filed in federal court claim that homes have dropped in value because no one wants to buy them and live next to the disabled plant.

Jury Deliberating Carpenter Penalty

A 99th District Court jury at noon today was still deliberating punishment for Rayford Wayne Carpenter after finding him guilty Tuesday night of the Jan. 5 armed robbery of Al's Texaco Station.

The five-woman, seven-man panel deliberated almost three hours before returning a guilty verdict at 7:15 p.m. Tuesday.

Key testimony against the 17-year-old defendant was provided by a former Lubbock teen-ager, who told the court he had driven the getaway car the afternoon the station was robbed.

The "accomplice," who was arrested shortly after the robbery but never charged in the incident, said that Carpenter and another youth had met him the morning of the robbery in the parking lot of a 34th Street pool hall.

The Corpus Christi teen-ager told jurors Carpenter had suggested the robbery because he knew the station owner, Allen Treadwell, carried a large amount of cash in his billfold while working at the 4202 Boston Ave. station.

He said Carpenter and his companion then convinced him to drive them to the station, and he watched Carpenter assemble a sawed-off shotgun and place a toboggan cap on his head before getting out of the car and walking toward the station.

The accomplice testimony was to be introduced as identification evidence by Dist. Judge Thomas L. Clinton because the pair who robbed the station had ski masks covering their faces and Treadwell and station employee Tommy Edwards were unable to provide positive identification of the bandits.

Because state law demands that accomplice testimony alone cannot be considered by a jury, Assistant District Attorneys Mark McBride and Travis Ware also called Treadwell to the witness stand.

Treadwell told jurors that he had seen Carpenter in the station numerous times before the robbery and that shortly before the holdup, he had made change from his wallet for the teen-ager.

After 2 1/2 hours of deliberation, two jurors requested to hear again Treadwell's testimony that Carpenter was aware of the large amount of cash the station owner carried in his wallet.

At 7:15 p.m., 20 minutes after the court reporter read Treadwell's testimony to the jury, the guilty verdict was returned.

DR. HOWARD R. STEWART

Stewart Elected Board Chairman

Dr. Howard R. Stewart of Lubbock, a 32nd degree Mason, has been elected chairman of the board of trustees of the Scottish Rite Learning Center of West Texas by the advisory conference of the Lubbock Scottish Rite Bodies.

Dr. Stewart replaces R.P. "Bob" Fuller, also of Lubbock and a 32nd degree Mason, who had held the post since the inception of the learning center in 1974.

The Scottish Rite Learning Center of West Texas is unique in that it is the first school for dyslexic children to be established in a Scottish Rite Temple, which is located at 602 Ave. Q in the former K. Carter Elementary School.

The learning center's primary function is to train children, who because of visual interpretation problems, cannot learn to read, write or spell by usual classroom methods even though of normal or above normal intelligence.

The center is directed by Dr. Lena Waters. Its first students were enrolled in November, 1975. Currently, more applications are received than can be accommodated, according to a center spokesman.

Future plans for the center call for a demonstration school, in cooperation with area colleges and universities in which elementary teachers may be instructed to detect and retrain the child with dyslexia early in his school carrer.

A.M. Muldrow, 33rd degree Mason is chairman of the advisory conference of Lubbock Scottish Rite Bodies.

Lake Placid Structures Said Poorly Constructed

By LARRY LOPEZ

SARANAC LAKE, N.Y. (AP) — Construction for the 1980 Winter Olympics includes "shoddy work" that could endanger both construction crews and athletes, according to two federal engineers assigned to monitor work on the Lake Placid sites near here.

The engineers, one of whom is losing his job at the end of this week, and the other who says his job is now in jeopardy, accused their superiors in Washington of political cowardice in the face of design defects and cost overruns of about 30 percent by the Lake Placid Olympic Organizing Committee and its construction manager, the Gilbane Building Co.

"We are holding this conference because the media is our last resort in presenting and attempting to remedy the life safety and other Olympic concerns created by mismanagement and other forms of incompetence," David T. Evans and Michael Oliver said at an "unauthorized" news conference here.

"We've tried to initiate corrective action at high levels of the U.S. Department of Commerce but with limited results," they said.

The LPOOC and Gilbane would neither confirm nor deny the charges, saying they had not seen the full text of the engineers' statement.

Evans said he believes his job is in jeopardy because of outspokenness. Oliver said his job was being eliminated at the end of the week as a cost-cutting step.

They said their superiors in the Economic Development Administration's Washington offices "usurped much of the authority of the EDA-Lake Placid" because officials were "afraid someone will come along and accuse someone of interfering with something that is in the same category ... with motherhood and apple pie."

In Washington, EDA spokesman Jim Register declined to comment on specific charges, saying a review was under way, but he said, "We categorically deny that any decisions have been made out of political considerations."

The EDA, a branch of the Commerce Department, is charged with overseeing the more than $57 million in federal money already committed for construction for the Games in February.

The LPOOC is asking for another $18 million to meet what it has called unanticipated expenses.

Evans and Oliver attributed much of the extra expense to bad management and construction practices, although they said that changes ordered by the International Olympic Committee accounted for part of the overruns.

They said the EDA's Lake Placid office had disapproved $200,000 in change orders for work at the Ray Brook Olympic Village site, only to be reversed by the Washington office.

Evans asserted their superior in Washington, Orin Fayle, told them their decision was reversed on grounds of "political expediency." Fayle was not available for comment.

Oliver, the Ray Brook site's project inspector, said the buildings that will

Hawks Barely Staying Alive

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Terry Furlow and Tom McMillen, a pair of three-year men who spent most of the season on the bench, have rescued the Atlanta Hawks from extinction and carried them back into the National Basketball Association quarter-final series against the defending champion Washington Bullets.

Furlow was a midseason acquisition from Cleveland. McMillen, has bounced around with several teams. They came off the bench when starters Armond Hill and John Drew got into early foul trouble, and combined for 40 points to power the Hawks' 107-103 victory over the Bullets in the only NBA playoff game Tuesday night.

Seattle, boasting a 3-1 lead, looks to clinch its Western Conference semifinal series at home tonight against Los Angeles. The Phoenix Suns are at Kansas City tonight, leading the Kings 2-1.

San Antonio leads Philadelphia 3-1 in the other Eastern Conference semifinal. Those teams resume Thursday on the Spurs' court.

With Washington holding a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven series, the teams return to Atlanta Thursday night. The Hawks had a 35-9 record at their Omni home this season, including a 17-game winning streak.

But they have lost twice to the Bullets there in this series.

"This is the most courageous win in my three years as the Hawks' coach," said Hubie Brown after Atlanta survived injuries to starters Eddie Johnson, Drew and reserv Tree Rolins, and the overcame the early foul trouble to Hill and Drew.

"There are not enough adjectives to describe the game played by Furlow and McMillen. McMillen kept us in the game in the first half when we were struggling," Brown said.

McMillen got 12 of his 19 points in the first half while Furlow came through with 16 of his team-high 21 points in the second, including two free throws with eight seconds left that iced the game.

The Hawks went into the fourth quarter with an 81-80 lead. Atlanta built up a 99-90 lead with 5:46 left and watched it slip away to 105-103 with 24 seconds remaining.

"That wasn't pretty," said Brown, of his team's inability to maintain the big margin.

"We had a chance to win," said Washington Coach Dick Motta. "(Bobby) Dandridge shot the ball where we wanted it."

Dandridge scored 24 points in the contest, two fewer than the game-leading figure of teammate Elvin Hayes.

With 24 seconds remaining, Dandridge took a shot from the baseline and had it blocked by Rollins. He got the ball back and put it up again from 12 feet but

Auerbach 'Threatening' Says Larry Bird's Agent

BOSTON (AP) — The two weeks of secret talks concerning Indiana State All-American Larry Bird's multimillion dollar bid to become the highest paid player in the National Basketball Association as a rookie have erupted in open confrontation.

Bird's lawyer, Bob Woolf, says he is going to complain to the NBA Players Association about what he called "threats and intimidation" by Red Auerbach, the Boston Celtics general manager, who said Tuesday that the contract talks broke down.

Auerbach hid out in Boston, refusing comment after he announced the breakdown.

As for talk of "threats and intimidation," Jeff Cohen, a Celtics' vice president, said of Woolf, "I really don't know what he is talking about. It's impossible for me to respond."

Woolf disputed the Celtics' announcement and said he had made "a dramatically modified proposal" to Auerbach during their 90-minute meeting Tuesday.

Bird reportedly has requested a $6 million, 6-year contract, but Woolf refused to discuss figures.

"As a result of today's meeting, we have decided to end negotiations at this time," said Auerbach Tuesday afternoon.

"I don't think it looks good for our getting Larry," said Cohen.

Woolf accused Auerbach of making "implied threats and intimidation" and said he planned to meet today with the players association to complain for Bird, the Celtics' No. 1 draft choice last year.

Rookie Umps Settle For Summit

By United Press International

President Carter would have been proud.

"It was some kind of compromise, like the Camp David accord," said New York Manager Joe Torre after his Mets had been involved in a bizarre 10-3 victory over the San Francisco Giants. "I think they all agreed on one thing — they were all confused."

The Mets put runners on first and third in the opening inning, when Lee Mazzilli started the trouble with a drive into right center that outfielder Jack Clark tracked down and appeared to catch.

Frank Taveras tagged up and scored from third as Clark dropped the ball, touching off a dispute that had the umps baffled and searching for explanations. Richie Hebner had gone halfway to second on Mazzilli's fly, started back where he came from when the ball was touched by Clark and was called out when Bill Madlock took Clark's throw and stepped on first.

"I guess they didn't feel right calling both men out," Torre said.

Initially, Mazzilli and Hebner were both called out until Torre came storming from the dugout. When the umps appeared to be bending to Torre — who contended the ball was never caught — Giants' Manager Joe Altobelli came out for his say. Finally, Clark was ruled to have caught the ball and Hebner was allowed to return to first base for no apparent reason.

"I thought the ball was caught," said Hebner, explaining why he returned to first on the play. "God no, I don't want to hear the answer why I was sent to first base. I don't have a clue."

Tom Gorman, the supervisor of National League umpires, happened to be on hand for the festivities.

"As far as I know, this is the first compromise ruling ever," Gorman said. "The ump called the catch all the way but they got confused in the argument."

And in case nobody noticed, Joel Youngblood knocked in five runs with a three-run homer and a single and rookie Mike Scott notched a victory in his first major-league start to send Vida Blue down to defeat for the first time in five decisions.

Pirates 9, Reds 2

Phillies 7, Dodgers 6

Cardinals 6, Braves 5

Expos 5, Padres 1

Ellis Valentine drove in two runs with his first homer and a single and Ross Grimsley scattered six hits to pace Montreal's victory over San Diego.

Pitcher Making Name

By United Press International

They're still pronouncing his name wrong, but at least Dave Lemanczyk is happy people are taking notice of him again.

Two years ago Lemanczyk was the best pitcher on the expansion Toronto Blue Jays, but last year was a total disaster.

Tuesday night he earned his spot in the starting rotation by becoming the first pitcher in Toronto history to toss a one-hitter, as the Jays beat Texas, 2-0.

Lemanczyk was touched only for a third-inning single by rookie Pat Putnam in recording his first victory of the season.

"I had good command of everything," said Lemanczyk. "This is a good feeling. It's been so long since I won this early in the season."

Royals 5, White Sox 0

Indians 7, Twins 2

Andre Thornton doubled home two runs in a five-run first inning and belted a solo homer in the seventh to spark the Indians to victory over the Twins.

Orioles 7, Angels 2

Ken Singleton hit a pair of solo homers and Rich Dauer belted another in helping the Orioles to their sixth straight victory.

Yankees 3, A's 1

Bucky Dent and Willie Randolph scored a pair of unearned runs in the ninth inning on a throwing error by reliever Dave Heaverlo, giving the Yankees and Tommy John a victory over the A's.

Red Sox 4, Mariners 3

Larry Wolfe's sacrifice fly in the 12th inning scored Butch Hobson with the run that gave the Red Sox their fifth straight victory and handed the Mariners their ninth consecutive loss.

Hawks Battle Back To Tip Washington

missed, and the rebound went to Atlanta.

"The second shot wasn't on key," said Dandridge. "If we ran the same play again, I would take the same shot again and hope it would fall."

Furlow sees nothing strange about his performance. He expects to perform as well all the time — if he is able to get in the game.

"I just need an opportunity to compete," said Furlow, who came to Atlanta just before the All-Star break and played only 576 minutes in 29 games. "I'm just getting an opportunity to show what I can do."

As for the series returning to Atlanta, Furlow said, "We're still the underdogs. We have to execute and eliminate all the mental errors. I'm sure Washington now feels a little pressure, but they've been there before, so they can handle it.

"We just cannot beat ourselves, as we have done in two of the three losses to Washington. We can't make mental mistakes that take us out of the game. They've got great players who thrive on that psychological edge," Furlow added.

McMillen agrees. "We've got to be the underdogs. But I don't think it is unrealistic for us to win it all. We have a good enough team to do it."

The Lakers might be considered the underdog against the SuperSonics, who return to their former home, the Seattle Coliseum, in trying to wrap up the Western Conference semifinal. The Sonics have won 37 of 41 games at the Coliseum in the 17 months since Len Wilkens became coach.

They played at the Coliseum for 11 years before shifting to the spacious Kingdome for their home games this season. The dome is occupied by a Mariners-Boston Red Sox baseball game Wednesday night.

The Suns, who have been effective in shutting down rookie Kansas City guard Phil Ford, hope to extend their lead to 3-1 against the Kings. Phoenix has forced Ford to take outside shots most of the time, and the youngster has made just eight of his 35 attempts — including a stretch of three-for-17.

"Phil hasn't had a good game yet," said Kansas City Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons, "and we're not the same team when Phil's off his game."

"It seems like the roof has fallen in," said Ford. "And when the shots don't go down, you begin to think about it more."

Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham has been thinking about the plight of his 76ers, who face elimination in San Antonio Thursday night.

"If we win down there Thursday," he said, "it's going to be a seven-game series.

"The biggest problem we've had, as far as I can figure, is that we haven't been able to hold them to one shot." said Cunningham.

"We have to hold them to only one shot the next game because they shoot the ball exceptionally well in their building," added Philadelphia's Julius Erving.

Walton Blames Self For Injury

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Basketball star Bill Walton says he doesn't blame the Portland Trail Blazers' team doctor for treatment of his broken foot, an injury that has sidelined him for the entire season.

"I don't blame the doctor. I blame myself. Hey, I let him do it," the 26-year-old center said Monday night in a speech at Stanford University.

In the past, Walton has criticized Dr. Robert Cook, the Portland team physician, for giving him injections in his foot after he was injured two seasons ago.

Walton didn't endorse the treatment in his speech but put the responsibility on himself for agreeing to it.

Yanks Mum On Fines

NEW YORK (AP) — It may take until next Tuesday — payday — to find out how much the New York Yankees will fine relief pitcher Rich Gossage and reserve catcher Cliff Johnson for their clubhouse fistfight last Thursday. But players association director Marvin Miller warns extensive financial discipline against the players may result in a claim of breach of contract.

"Gossage's contract is guaranteed, and although there are some exceptions — such as if he went sky diving or contemplated suicide — in this case, it's air tight," Miller said Tuesday. "They must pay his salary or otherwise it's breach of contract."

The players association executive expressed similar sentiments over the contract of Johnson, who was uninjured in the fight that severed a ligament in Gossage's right thumb and necessitated surgery.

Gossage, released from the hospital Tuesday, is not expected back until mid-June at least.

"In Johnson's case, they are saying he should play and not be paid at all," said Miller. "He's not injured, so they would be making a profit at his expense."

The Yankees have taken no official action, but they have sent written messages to both players. According to published reports, the message informed Gossage he would be fined a day's pay — reportedly $1,800, based on his six-year, $2.7 million contract — for each day he is sidelined.

There also have been reports Johnson would be fined a day's pay for each day the right-handed reliever misses.

"If I am to believe what they (the Yankees) are saying in their statement, they are not refusing to pay Gossage but instead they are fining him the amount of a day's pay until he is able to pitch again," said Miller. "Any arbitrator will see right through that."

Arbitrators will become involved if a grievance procedure is enacted by a player.

Chaps Take Two By One Run

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

In presenting Randy Vinson the Frank Hord award at the Lubbock Christian College sports awards banquet Monday night, coach Larry Hays said the plaque went to the kind of kid who "always had a dirty uniform".

Well, if Vinson's uniform is dirty, his record is near spotless. The senior relief pitcher picked up a save as LCC dumped Hardin-Simmons 6-5 in the first game of a doubleheader; then collected his second win of the year in guiding the Chaps to a 5-4 nightcap decision.

As you could probably tell by the score, both games went down to the wire.

The Chaps pounded starter Ken McLeod for three homers and 4 scores in the third inning of the opener to take a 6-4 lead. But Hardin-Simmons didn't go down without a fight. A Jim Nelson infield single scored Steve Tietze in the top of the sixth and then, with a man on second and only one out, Hays called on Vinson to put out the fire in the seventh to save the win for Noel Delgado.

Bob Nottebart opened the big third inning with a single to deep short. Richard Bowles scored him with a homer off a 0-2 pitch. Then, with one out, Tim Leslie and Kenny Toney knocked back-to-back, first-pitch homers. Surprisingly, hurler McLeod repented his generous ways. He went the distance and shut out the Chaps the rest of the way, holding LCC hitless.

H-SU appeared to have the edge in the nightcap as it took a 3-2 lead in the sixth. But Tommy Inman, playing his first home game since breaking his ankle against Jarvis Christian in the season's first home series, popped a solo homer in the botton of the inning to tie the score.

The Cowboys came back. Rusty Hamric knocked a double to score Rick Lewis in the top of the seventh. But again LCC refused to quit.

Richard Bowles doubled inside the third base bag, then Steve Brigante singled to center and moved to second when H-SU tried unsuccessfully to catch Bowles at the plate.

Brigante moved to third on a Leslie groundout, bringing up Toney. He blooped a high fly just right of the pitchers mound. Three players converged on it and catcher Rodney Smith and first baseman Mark Setser collided going for the ball.

Brigante streaked home but Smith rolled out of the tangle holding the ball high in his mitt. He had held on.

Inman also provided the big hit in the final inning (he finished 3-of-4 in the nightcap with a run scored and 2 RBIs).

The third hit was a sharp single to center that chased starter Wayne Norton and brought on Larry Martindale. Martindale got Doe out but Dave Hanna bounced a ground-rule double over the fence in center field.

Bye bye Martindale, hello Rick Craft, who started his duty with an intentional walk to Brady Brashear, loading the bases with one out and bringing up sub catcher Charles Casiano.

Net Heroes Have Long-Standing Feud

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Over the past couple of years, Estacado's Sammy Lovato and Dunbar's Kevin Bryant have gotten to know each other rather well.

But really they haven't had much choice— the two tennis players have completely dominated the 3-AAA boys's tennis scene for the last two seasons.

Both will be traveling to Odessa this weekend to represent the district in the Region I meeting, also for the second straight year.

Two weeks ago in Plainview Lovato and Bryant met in the singles finals of the district meet. And for the second straight year, the results were the same—Lovato defeated Bryant for the district title.

But that isn't meant to imply that the Matador netter has dominated Bryant. The Dunbar senior has beaten Lovato in three previous meetings this season.

"Sammy's a slow starter," says his coach Ralph Cox. "But he came on pretty strong later in the year. He won the Lubbock Valentine tournament and the Odessa Invitational."

In addition to Lovato, the Estacado mentor will also be taking his doubles team of Kenneth Taylor and Kennth Carr to the regional meet in Odessa. The two finishe second to a team from Borger in the district meet.

Taylor was also named the outstanding Estacado tennis player at the EHS all-sports banquet.

In last year's regional meet, Lovato finished third and Bryant was eliminated in the first round. (This is the first trip for Taylor and Carr.)

But the top two finishers from last year have graduated and, according to their coaches, the Lubbock singles players have a good chance of advancing to state.

"It's going to be tough," said Dunbar coach Charles Morris. "There is a kid from Monahans who's beaten Sammy (Lovato) and a kid from Vernon who's beaten Kevin (Bryant) once.

"But I like Kevin's chances, he's going to be the dark horse."

And Bryant said that he liked it that way.

"That takes the pressure off of me," he said. "But I'm going down there to win—and I think that I can."

Bryant was hampered by a sore shoulder in the latter part of the district schedule and was even forced to play underhanded for a couple of weeks. And his serve was not at its strongest for the district meet.

Coronado baseball coach John Dudley strolled to the mound about as many times as the number of runs the Mustangs lost to Lubbock High in the first game.

However, Coronado came up with four insurance runs in the top of the seventh, and then held off a last Westerner rally to gain a split of the 4-AAAA doubleheader. Lubbock High took the first game 16-6, with Coronado grabbing the nightcap 11-8.

The split virtually ends all hopes of Lubbock High winning the second half loop crown. The Westerners' loop mark goes to 1-3, while Coronado is at 1-1. Overall, Lubbock High sports a 15-11 record, with Coronado at 17-8.

It seemed like the Mustangs were going to easily win the second game. Coronado took an 11-5 advantage into Lubbock High's last bat in the seventh.

"I was feeling mighty good at the start of the inning," said Mustang coach Dudley. "And I have to admit when we got the first two runners out, I felt even better."

So when pitcher David Rush came to the plate, the Westerners were down to their last chance.

Rush bounced the ball to Mustang third baseman Mark King for what first seemed like the final out. But the ball sailed over first baseman Jim Wells head to give Lubbock High some extra life.

Right fielder Oscar Rush's bouncer scored second baseman Larry Walker who had reached base on a walk to start the inning.

Then rightfielder Oscar Lopez doubled to deep center field to bring home Rush, and the Lubbock High crowd rose to its feet to help support the rally.

Shortstop Andy Vasquez responded the cheers with a double down the right field line to bring home Lopez with run number three.

However, Johnson wasn't able to put out the fire for two batters. Pinch hitter Larry DeLeon surprised everyone in the park by laying down a bunt along the third base line which moved Vasquez to third.

After some strategy talks, Lubbock High coach Bart Hernandez sent Sammy Chavez to the plate ast the potential tying run.

But Chavez, on a checked swing, chopped the ball towards the third base side of the pitcher's mound and Johnson grabbed the ball and threw to Wells two steps ahead of Chavez to end the game.

"We were able to hit the ball," said Lubbock High coach Bart Hernandez. "I bet nobody has hit Segrest (Mustang ace pitcher Gene) like we did in the first game. In the second game, we just didn't have the pitching."

The Westerners tagged Segrest for six runs before Dudley relieved him.

"Gene's arm was a little sore," said Dudley. "He said he just couldn't go in the second game if we needed him."

Walker paced the Lubbock High scoring attack in the first game with a 3-4 showing at the plate. Lubbock High built a 15-5 lead in the fifth with six runs, but since the two coaches didn't discuss the 10-run rule prior to the start of the doubleheader, the game went the distance.

Coronado and Lubbock High will return to action Saturday in district action. The Mustangs host Hereford, while the Westerners visit Plainview.

MHS Splits

PLAINVIEW (Special)—Steve Coleman settled down after the second inning and drove in three runs to lead the Monterey Plainsmen past the Plainview Bulldogs in the first game of a 4-AAAA doubleheader Tuesday 10-6.

The Bulldogs, however, rebounded in the second game to gain a split of the twinbill. Plainview took the second contest 7-6.

Monterey had its chance to sweep the twinbill in the top of the seventh. The Plainsmen had the bases loaded with nobody out. However, Monterey couldn't get the run home.

The Bulldogs then went to bat with the score tied 6-6 in the bottom of the last inning and loaded the sacks with nobody out.

Matadors Wallop

Hector Limon hurled a three-hitter, striking out three, and Manuel Escamilla drove in 3 runs as the Estacado Matadors pummelled Dunbar 10-1 Tuesday.

The Matadors did most of the damage in the fifth when they exploded for 6 runs. Bernard Conner led off with a single, stole second and then scored on a double from Limon.

And Limon quickly came accross the plate himself as Escamilla doubled. Ken Davis followed with a walk and Micheal Sykes singled to bring a couple of more runners around. Sykes then scored on an infield error.

The win raises Estacado's district mark to 2-5 while the Panthers slipped to 0-7. Overall EHS owns a 13-13 season slate and Dunbar is 3-23.

O'Brien Sees League Expanding To World

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Worldwide competition is on tap for the National Basketball Association in the 1980s, Commissioner Larry O'Brien says.

Despite declining attendance in three major NBA cities — New York, Chiago and Boston — O'Brien said Tuesday that the league is moving ahead with expansion plans beginning with the 1980-81 season.

He told The Associated Press Sports Editors Association of New England and Upstate New York that five years after two unspecified American cities are added to the NBA, teams will begin playing squads from outside the United States. O'Brien gave no further details on the competition, but said talks on the subject are underway at league headquarters.

"This is not a dying sport," the commissioner said, seeking to downgrade declining network television ratings.

O'Brien told the annual meeting of regional sports editors that the NBA "needs winning teams in strategic Nielsen (rating) cities — New York, Chicago and Boston." But he insisted the league will not take special steps to help improve those franchises, adding that a comeback by the Knicks, Bulls and Celtics will come about because of sound local management.

O'Brien did say, however, that the future of the Boston Celtics — once the NBA's dominant team — depends in part on improvements at Boston Garden or a move to a new facility.

"I am very concerned with the conditions at Boston Garden," he said. "It doesn't measure up as a sports arena."

The Celtics had to ask the league to move the site of the 1980 NBA All-Star game because of obstructed views from many seats and the generally poor physical plant. Celtics owner Harry Mangurian is investigating building a baketball arena outside Boston with private capital, while the owners of the Boston Garden — the corporation that owns the Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League — are considering a multimillion dollar renovation of the 15-year-old facility.

Construction Slammed

house athletes do not meet New York State fire safety standards, although he conceded they meet the standards of the federal Bureau of Prisons, which is to take over the facility after the games.

Sewage systems may be insufficient for the roughly 3,000 athletes and support staff that may stay there, he said, noting that installing fire alarms and emergency lighting will also boost costs.

Many of the pair's charges have surfaced before or concerned problems that have already been remedied.

But the engineers added new details and cited the problems as evidence "that Gilbane has withheld information not only from the EDA but also from the Committeee (the LPOOC) until the problems have been revealed elsewhere."

"There is virtually no inspection of work other than what each contractor provides on his own work," Evans complained.

"Although there is some testing of materials and workmanship, this is either insufficient or deficient. It is in this inspection vacuum that EPA-Lake Placid has found, and is finding, questionable design and construction," Evans said.

He said the $16.5 million Olympic Fieldhouse is probably safe from collapse but is plagued by "serious structural concerns, as well as ramshackle designs."

The Fieldhouse has been under intense scrutiny since a Commerce Department investigator alleged 25 deficiencies including a sagging roof.

The engineers also warned that construction workers "are in danger of being seriously hurt or killed" because of unsafe working conditions and "grossly inadequate" inspections by the federal Occupational Health and Safety Administration.

Evans did not list all the alleged problems a the Fieldhouse but they said included were:

—Mismatched trusses used to brace two ice rink buildings in the Fieldhouse complex. As a result the trusses were welded instead of being bolted, he said.

Shopping Center Blast Kills One In Salisbury

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — A bomb exploded in a shopping center today, killing one black and wounding another, a military spokesman announced. The bombing occurred as thousands of supporters of Bishop Abel Muzorewa gathered in the capital to celebrate his election as the first black prime minister of Rhodesia.

A military spokesman said the bomb exploded in an alley of the shopping center, which is primarily used by blacks. There was no immediate word on the origin of the bomb.

Black nationalist guerrilla leaders Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo said last week they considered the election a fraud and would press ahead with their hit-and-run war against the government.

Today, the prime minister-elect began strategy talks with his top lieutenants on how to win international recognition for his new administration.

At a victory news conference Tuesday night, Muzorewa said his number one task was to bring peace to Rhodesia, torn by seven years of guerrilla war in which some 16,000 persons have been killed.

But he also appealed to Britain to grant recognition to its former colony, and to lift military and economic sanctions on grounds fair elections have been held.

It appeared more likely, however, that Britain and the United States will continue to push for a conference of all parties involved, including Nkomo and Mugabe. Muzorewa and his advisers began working today on what their position will be on such a conference, once they assume power in June.

Muzorewa's United African National Council won 51 of the 72 seats reserved for blacks in the new 100-seat Zimbabwe-Rhodesian Parliament, according to final returns from last week's five-day election. That entitles his party to 10 cabinet posts, and Muzorewa and his advisers also were considering today who would be named to the top government posts.

The party of the Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole, a black moderate allied with Muzorewa in the interim government established 13 months ago, won 12 seats, and the party of Chief Jeremiah Chirau, another black moderate in the transition government, won nine.

Meanwhile, the biracial transitional government headed by white Prime Minister Ian Smith continued to rule the country. Rhodesian security forces said heavily armed patrols would continue in many areas in anticipation of guerrilla attacks on blacks who voted in the elections.

The guerrillas considered the voting a farce because Rhodesia's major institutions will remain in the hands of the 230,000 white minority in this nation of 6.7 million blacks.

Whites will hold 28 seats in Parliament for up to 10 years that will allow them to block constitutional changes. They also will control the police, military, judiciary and civil service for five years.

Bazargan Appeals For Iranian Unity

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan made a new appeal for national unity, urging Iran's citizens to "do away with the sense of revenge" and work together for progress.

But Bazargan said in a radio-TV address Tuesday night he was not criticizing Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolutionary tribunals, which have sent 158 of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's men before firing squads since the ayatollah's forces took power 10 weeks ago.

Bazargan appeared instead to be opposing a more general national mood of resentment against remnants of the shah's rule. Some of this resentment has hampered Iran's economic reconstruction through worker-management disputes.

Bazargan's remarks also reflected continuing government concern over conflicting power plays in the country among guerrilla groups including the leftist Mojahedeen faction, and Khomeini's revolutionary committees.

"The guerrillas, the Mojahedeen and the committees all have a share in the revolution, but their responsibility at the moment is to unite for the progress of the revolution," Bazargan said.

He said activities by certain groups, "which are well-meant, have created some kind of weakness and disorder that has caused problems for the revolutionary government."

On the issue of revenge, he said that "in order for us to move toward a further constructive period in our revolution, I must ask my countrymen to do away with the sense of revenge many of them have."

He said that with Khomeini's approval, he was asking people to forget the past and establish cooperation and brotherhood "because of our own reputation and our own name in the world."

A man in an air force uniform was foiled in an assassination attempt against Bazargan and some of his Cabinet ministers Tuesday as they walked in a funeral procession for a general assassinated Monday. Witnesses said government security men pulled a hand grenade from the man then kicked him to the ground before he cold fire a submachine gun.

A government aide denied an assassination attempt had been made, but reporters and other witnesses saw the man in the air force uniform disarmed and said he and at least one other person were taken into custody. The two were not identified and their motives were not known.

The assassination Monday of Gen. Mohammad Vali Gharani, the first army chief of staff appointed after the revolution but fired a month ago for failing to get deserters back to the barracks, was claimed by a little-known secret organization called Forghan.

Opinion Polls Indicate Party's Lead Dwindling

LONDON (AP) — Margaret Thatcher's chances of becoming Britain's first woman prime minister in the May 3 general election dimmed today as opinions polls showed her Conservative Party's lead over Labor dwindling steadily.

The polls published in two staunchly Conservative newspapers also showed that Labor Prime Minister James Callaghan is more popular than Mrs. Thatcher with Britain's 40 million voters.

With only eight days to go before Britain's general election, a Market and Opinion Research International poll in the Daily Express said the Tory lead has slumped from 12 percentage points last week to six.

The poll, completed Monday, gave the Conservatives 46 percent, Labor 40 and the middle-road Liberals 11. A poll by the same organization March 30 gave the Conservatives a nine-point margin.

The latest poll showed Mrs. Thatcher's personal popularity tumbled from 37 percent last week to 33 percent, while Callaghan increased his lead from 45 percent last week to 46 percent.

The Daily Express said Callaghan's low-key "let's keep a good thing going" campaign "is paying dividends whereas the new and radical challenge offered by Mrs. Thatcher seems ... to worry the voters."

A Gallup Poll in the Daily Telegraph put the Conservative lead at 4.5 percentage points — a half-point down on a Gallup survey a week ago.

The poll, conducted April 19-21, gave the Conservatives 46.5 percent, Labor 42 and the Liberals 10. Gallup gave the Conservatives a 14.5-point lead in mid-March.

Both polls published today appeared to support an opinion survey published over the weekend which indicated Labor is narrowing the gap.

However, the papers noted that if the Conservatives can hold their present lead, Mrs. Thatcher would still occupy 10 Downing Street, the official residence of British prime ministers, next month with a comfortable overall majority in the 635-member House of Commons of around 12.

Vietnamese Shells Fall Near Thailand Border

ARANYAPRATHET, Thailand (AP) — Vietnamese troops and their Cambodian allies shelled an area south of this Thai border town today in a futile attempt to prevent thousands of soldiers loyal to ousted Premier Pol Pot from returning to Cambodia.

Aranyaprathet authorities said the artillery landed at Ban Pan Suk, about six miles away from where an estimated 50,000 Cambodians, including some 10,000 Pol Pot soldiers, were reported moving back into Cambodia in the rugged area about 30 miles south of Aranyaprathet.

The group crossed into Thailand last weekend under heavy pressure from tank-led Vietnamese and Cambodian government forces which have launched a major offensive in western Cambodia.

Thai military sources said the group was establishing a base in the 1,000-foot-high range near the border and had already sent smaller units southward to make contact with other Pol Pot groups along the Thai border.

The area where the 50,000 are establishing a base is near the Thai frontier in a crook of land which juts into Thailand. The hills slope gently toward Thailand but have steep, densely-forested approaches from the Cambodian interior.

The sources said about 20,000 other Cambodians, including 8,000 Pol Pot soldiers, were camped near the frontier opposite Thailand's Pong Nam Rong district, about 60 miles south of Aranyaprathet. Vietnamese forces and those of the new Phnom Penh government were reported moving against both groups.

Meanwhile, the Thai Interior Ministry confirmed reports that the Pol Pot soldiers had killed at least half a dozen persons in their trek through Thailand. These included two Thai villagers who apparently cheated the soldiers in a sale and four to five ethnic Chinese who the ministry said refused to return to Cambodia.

The Pol Pot soldiers slashed the throats of the Chinese, an execution style frequently reported by refugees from the brutal regime of Pol Pot over the past four years.

Reporters at the scene of the trek over the past few days said it was apparent that a number of civilians were accompanying the Pol Pot soldiers against their will.

The Pol Pot troops have been waging guerrilla war since the Vietnamese invaded four months ago and installed the pro-Vietnamese government of President Heng Samrin in Phnom Penh.

Russian Immigrants Land In New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The largest airlift of Soviet Jews to the United States under relaxed immigration policies has brought more than 600 Russian immigrants to this country.

Thousands of persons thronged the overseas arrival terminal at Kennedy Airport on Tuesday to greet Soviet friends and relatives arriving on three separate flights.

The group was among 10,000 refugees who waited months in Rome and nearby Italian communities for visas to enter the United States.

Nearly 9,000 are expected to enter the United States by the end of June, with others going to Canada and Australia.

The backup of refugees in Italy resulted when the U.S. quota on immigrants from Russia was filled for the year. But under the same procedure used to allow entrance of Vietnamese refugees, the Carter administration has lifted immigration quotas for the Soviet Union to allow up to 25,000 Jews to enter.

Tanzanian Forces Continue Offensive

BOMBO, Uganda (UPI) — A two-pronged Tanzanian offensive moved toward Idi Amin's birthplace in northwest Uganda today in an effort to wipe out the last pockets of resistance and end weeks of terror.

Tanzanian officers said one prong of the offensive was moving by trucks in the far west from Ft. Portal in the direction of Arua in the far northwest of the country near the border with Zaire.

The officers said the Tanzanians have already reached Hoima, 120 miles northwest of Bombo, and are moving fast.

Forces loyal to Amin are reported to have built a stronghold in Arua, Amin's birthplace, stockpiling ammunition, supplies and looted booty over the past two months.

A second Tanzanian column was pushing north of Kampala and is now on the outskirts of Nakasongola, 80 miles north of the capital.

Western journalists were able to drive about 60 miles north on the road to Nakasongola Tuesday before being turned back by Tanzanian roadblocks.

The Tanzanians said they were meeting only minimal resistance, mostly groups of four of five Ugandan soldiers wandering through the lush vegetation near the highway.

The drive against the north follows the capture of the eastern city of Jinja on Sunday. Jinja, Uganda's second largest city, is the site of the Owen Falls Dam and power station, the source of the country's electricity.

The Tanzanians were reported about 20 miles east of Jinja Tuesday, driving twoard the Kenyan border in an effort to reopen Uganda's key lifeline to the sea.

Uganda receives most of its fuel and other essential commodities through the Kenyan port of Mombasa on the Indian Ocean.

There have been reports that the Tanzanians plan to swing north from the border and link up with the troops at Nakasongola for the march on the north. But they would first have to capture the important towns of Soroti and Mbale on the road to Nakasongola.

Nakasongola is the site of an airstrip from which Libyan pilots flew airstrikes against Tanzanian positions in the final days before the capture of Kampala. The Libyans withdrew shortly before the fall of Kampala.

Amin reportedly left the country after the Libyan pullout, flying first to Tripoli, the Libyan capital, and then to Iraq, where he had earlier sent his family.

Doctors Urge Short Strike

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Nicaragua's doctors association has called on its members to stage a one-day strike in protest to the alleged killing of two doctors and a nurse by the national guard in Esteli two weeks ago.

High school students in Managua, Leon and Jinotepe moved into the second day of a strike today to protest the killing of five youths by the National Guard in Leon Sunday and Monday. Universities in Nicaragua are on vacation.

The Nicaraguan Medical Association, which represents all private doctors, issued the protest on late Tuesday, calling for a one-day strike on Thursday as a public outcry against the shootings of Dr. Alejandro Bolanos, Dr. Eduardo Selva, and a nurse.

Witnesses charged that government troops two weeks ago entered the San Juan de Dios Hospital in Esteli and dragged the three victims out after surgery as Sandinista National Liberation Army guerrillas held parts of the city for six days. They said the guardsmen shot the three and incinerated the bodies.

The government has not commented on the charges, but President Anastasio Somoza said last week that Bolanos was the leader of the Communist Party in Esteli.

Sandinistas and National Guardsmen battled for an hour Tuesday in the streets of Leon, Nicaragua's second largest city. No casualties were reported.

Witnesses and military sources said the rebels entered the city in two small buses and escaped into nearby homes after heavy street fighting.

TODAY'S STOCK PRICES

Stock Mart Inches Forward

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market inched ahead today, extending the erratic rally of the past three sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 11.61 from last Friday through Tuesday's close, added another .95 to 867.81 by noontime today.

Gainers led losers by a 3-2 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said strong first-quarter earnings reports have helped the market in recent sessions.

Another bit of bad inflation news is expected Thursday when the government makes its monthly report on the consumer price index.

But brokers noted that an increase in the CPI at around a 10 percent annual rate for March would not come as any surprise, and they voiced the hope that the market could take it in stride.

Playboy Enterprises climbed 2 to 21⅝. The company said it and Elsinore Corp. completed formation of a joint venture to operate a hotel-casino in Atlantic City, N.J., which they hope to open late next year.

Oil stocks were generally higher, continuing to benefit from strong first-quarter earnings reports. Texaco rose ⅜ to 27⅛ and Gulf Oil ⅜ to 27½.

General Public Utilities led the active list, unchanged at 11. The company, owner of the Three Mile Island nuclear plant in Pennsylvania where an accident occurred last month, is scheduled to hold a board meeting Thursday to consider matters including the dividend.

The NYSE's composite index added .16 to 57.78. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.03 at 183.47.

Volume on the Big Board came to 14.22 million shares at noontime, against 14.75 million at the same point Tuesday.

U.S. Senate Confirms Nominees

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four of 10 nominees to fill new federal judgeships in Texas moved closer to the bench late Tuesday when the U.S. Senate confirmed their appointments.

Robert M. Parker of Longview, Mary Lou Robinson of Amarillo, David O. Belew Jr. of Fort Worth and Barefoot Sanders of Dallas will be able to schedule their swearing-in ceremonies after President Carter attaches his signature, an action expected in the next two to three days.

Carter made the nominations upon the recommendation of U.S. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

"These four new Texas judges were nominated following a lengthy merit selection process," Bentsen said today. "They are among 117 federal district judges being chosen nationwide under the 1978 judgeship bill and it is gratifying that they are among the first to be confirmed by the Senate."

The Senate Judiciary Committee gave its approval after a public hearing Monday.

Parker, 41, a former administrative aide for Rep. Ray Roberts, D-Texas, will fill a new slot in the Eastern District.

Sanders, 54, a former state legislator, White House aide and unsuccessful U.S. Senate candidate in 1972; Belew, 59, former president of the Fort Worth-Tarrant County Bar Association; and Mrs. Robinson, 52, chief justice of the 7th Court of Criminal Appeals, are nominees for Northern District posts.

The judiciary committee will hold hearings May 2 for five Bentsen choices for Southern District judgeships:

— George Edward Cire, 56, judge on the 14th Court of Civil Appeals in Houston.

— James DeAnda, 53, of McAllen, a national board member of the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund.

— George P. Kazen, 39, of Laredo, a lawyer and nephew of Rep. Abraham "Chick" Kazen.

— Norman W. Black, 47, of Houston, a U.S. magistrate.

— Gabrielle K. McDonald, 37, of Houston, who would become the first black federal judge in Texas.

The nomination is pending for Bentsen's selection for a new Western District position, 226th District Judge Ted Butler, 51, of San Antonio.

Texas will have 32 federal judges with the 10 additions.

U.S. District Judge Finis Cowan of Galveston has announced he will resign June 30 to return to a Houston private law practice. Bentsen said his recommendation to replace Cowan will be 56th District Judge Hugh Gibson of Galveston.

Group Sponsors Bike-A-Thon

In an effort to raise funds for diabetes research, the Lubbock Chapter of the American Diabetes Association is sponsoring a bike-a-thon Sunday in Maxey Park.

Competition will be in four age classifications, elementary (ages 5 to 11), junior high (ages 12 to 14), high school (ages 15 to 18) and adult (ages 19 and up).

Entrants must have at least two sponsors who will pledge a certain amount of money per mile over the 10-mile course that has been mapped out in Maxey Park. Prizes will be awarded on the local level in each classification to those with the most money pledged to aid diabetes research.

A grand prize of a trip for two to the Bahamas will be awarded to the entrant with the most money pledged in the 13-chapter area of the North Texas affiliate of the American Diabetes Association.

The bike-a-thon begins at 2 p.m. and riders may start anytime between then and 4 p.m. Entry forms and sponsor lists may be obtained at any Burger King restaurant or by stopping by the Lubbock Chapter office at 2608 43rd St. (792-4597).

Efforts To Control Costs Recognized

Methodist Hospital's voluntary effort to control health costs has brought it recognition from the Joint Commission of Accreditation of Hospitals.

In observance of National Hospital Week, May 6-12, the hospital has built a large display in the lobby, illustrating its participation in the Texas and national voluntary effort to control health care costs.

The Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals is a private non-profit organization which sets standards for and surveys health and health-related facilities and services.

A&M Club To Award Two Scholarships

For the 19th year, the Lubbock A&M Club will award $800 one-year scholarships to two qualified graduates of Lubbock County high schools to attend Texas A&M University.

Applications will be taken from graduates until June 1.

Applicants must meet all Texas A&M entrance requirements, have a good high school attendance record and need financial assistance to go to college.

More information is available from James W. King, scholarship committee chairman, at 799-8547 or 745-4411, or from committee members Alan Brashears, Lawrence Stone or Leo Padgett.

Some NCI Tests Called Waste Of Money

WASHINGTON (AP) — National Cancer Institute officials concede that some of their costly animal tests involving suspected cancer-causing agents have been a waste of money.

But Harriet Kennedy, an institute spokeswoman, adds in response to a General Accounting Office report that congressional investigators could have been a "little more charitable" in their findings.

The GAO report released Tueday said the federal anti-cancer agency has decided not to complete technical reports on tests it conducted for 51 of 207 suspected cancer-causing agents because of experimental deficiencies. The institute and congressional officials say each test costs from $200,000 to $400,000.

In addition, the cancer institute is struggling to publish formal reports on its test results for several of the remaining substances, and has test results on another 223 chemicals in its files that it never told Congress about, said the GAO, an investigate arm of Congress.

Regulatory agencies such as the Environmental Protection Agency and the Food and Drug Administration use the institute's technical reports when deciding whether a substance is a health hazard.

The accounting office study, which is generally critical of the National Cancer Institute's management of its carcinogen testing program, was conducted at the request of Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., chairman of an influential House health subcommittee.

Waxman said the study's conclusions amounted to a "serious indictment of management practices at NCI" which waste millions of dollars.

Referring to tests on 19 of the 51 chemicals, Mrs. Kennedy said "you can say (they) were a waste of money. You could also be a little bit more charitable and say the agency was having growing pains."

Mrs. Kennedy said a scientific journal has published reports on the remaining 32 substances. Institute officials also said raw test data is available to regulatory agencies.

Dr. Richard A. Griesemer, who directs the institute's testing program, said the accounting office report was "generally fair and accurate and pinpoints some areas where the ... testing program has had problems in the past."

He also said the report had noted improvements in some areas of the program.

The accounting office said the institute was ill-prepared and under-staffed when it began stepping up its testing program in the early 1970s. For several years, the report said, private laboratories receiving contracts to conduct the tests were not required to produce the reports.

In 1974, the agency awarded a contract to a private firm in Rockville, Md., to oversee the program and as a result the backlog of reports has been reduced, the GAO found. The contract is for about $41 million.

Meanwhile, the accounting office said the private firm, Tracor-Jitco, Inc., has not told the institute about certain laboratory deficiencies it found and the firm didn't always make sure the shortcomings were corrected. Compounding the problem, the GAO said, institute officials did not monitor Tracor-Jitco's performance closely.

The congressional report added that GAO-hired experts found deficiencies during laboratory inspections that "could affect the quality" of the tests.

Gilbert Maton, president of Tracor-Jitco, said he was a "little disappointed" in the report and he defended his company's performance.

Maton said some of the accounting office's information was two years old, adding that the institute program was "constantly changing" and required "constant vigilance."

Study Reveals Smoking Inhibits Fetus' Growth

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Doctors have known for years that babies born to women who smoked cigarettes during their pregnancy were smaller than average, but now a study from Johns Hopkins University explains why.

The new study also has found that women who smoke while they are pregnant run a greater risk than non-smokers of delivering babies who are premature or stillborn, a Hopkins researcher said this week.

Mary Meyer, an associate professor of epidemiology at the university's School of Hygiene and Public Health, said doctors used to believe that smaller babies were born to smoking mothers because the habit depressed the woman's appetite.

But the study found "the baby is smaller because of an effect on the pregnancy itself, not because of an effect on the mother's appetite," she said. No matter how much the mother eats, the fetus' growth will be stunted.

The study showed that the adverse affects of the mother's smoking on the infant are lessened if the mother was young and healthy. Anemic mothers who smoke are most likely to have smaller, less healthy babies.

Data was collected by 10 teaching hospitals in Ontario, Canada, which tested 51,000 women and their babies. The Hopkins team then analyzed the data to determine the effect of smoking on pregnant women and their offspring.

Mrs. Meyer, who is part of a team of reseachers studying the effects of smoking on pregnant women, said the new study shows that smoking inhibits a fetus' growth and could also kill the fetus by robbing it of enough oxygen.

She also said her tests showed that women who smoked frequently developed a variety of other gynecological problems during their pregnancy that could harm the infant.

FURNITURE TRADE INCREASES

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. foreign trade in household furniture rose to a record high in 1978, the Commerce Department says. Total foreign trade in furniture amounted to $776 million in 1978, it said. Imports increased 34 percent over 1977 to $620 million, and accounted for 80 percent of the total trade. Exports, accounting for 20 percent of the total, rose 14 percent to $156 million. The trade deficit for the year reached $464 million, 42 percent above the previous high in 1977.

DR. LAMB

Problem With Callous

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have been a runner for more than four-and-one-half years and have run more than 18,000 miles. I ran the Boston marathon twice.

I have a callous which builds up on the ball of my right foot and becomes hard and often burns. I cut it down and use the sanding method. Can you recommend something to use on it?

I also have heard that runners will live 10 to 15 years longer. Once I was a near alcoholic but when I started running, I quit alcohol. Do you think the alcohol is out of my system by now? Anyway, I feel great from a 15-mile workout and I hope I run until I'm six feet under.

DEAR READER — Congratulations on kicking a bad habit and developing a good one. If everyone could make such important changes in lifestyle, we'd have a lot less medical problems in our society.

Certainly you have no residuals of alcohol in your system at this time. Unfortunately, alcohol is a tissue toxin and some of the liver damage that it causes may persist. It's like any other tissue that injures and heals, it may cause scar tissue in the healing process. However, if you're doing as well as your letter suggests, I would suspect that you have little if any residual damage.

Now about that callous on your foot. That means that the ball of your right foot is bearing more weight than the rest of the foot. I suggest that you see an orthopedic specialist and let him fit your foot with a pad or insert that will decrease the weight in that area.

A callous on the bottom of the foot is just like a callous on the hand. It's because of work rubbing and irritating that area. If you wear gloves on your hands, you're less likely to develop callouses on your palms. If you adequately protect an area that's responding in this way on the bottom of the foot, you'll have less problem from the callous.

Finally, about runners living longer. Many of them do. One of the reasons is because many of them are lean. The amount of exercise they do helps prevent obesity. That, in turn, decreases problems of fatty-cholesterol buildup in the bloodstream and it helps to prevent high blood pressure. These are important factors in preventing heart attacks and strokes. Also most of the runners I know don't smoke. That's important, too.

So, as a group most runners do live quite a bit longer than their sedentary counterparts who are overweight, underexercised and often have other undesirable aspects to their lifestyle. That doesn't mean everyone who runs will live 10 or 15 years longer than other people.

Because of your interest in running, and the effort you've made, I'm sending you The Health Letter number 4-2, Jogging, Exertion, Sudden Death, to give you a better balanced idea of the relationship of running and health. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Every once in awhile you hear about some prominent public figure who drops dead while running. But you seldom hear any emphasis on the point that someone died in bed. If you spend a large part of your time running, you increase your chances of something happening to you while you're running.
