British Foreign Secretary Resigns Over Falklands

LONDON (AP) — British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington resigned today, taking responsibility for his diplomatic failure to prevent Argentina's seizure of the Falkland Islands.

Carrington quit only hours after the aircraft carrier Invincible, leading Britain's mightiest fleet since the 1956 Suez crisis, left the southern naval base at Portsmouth on an 8,000-mile, two-week voyage to recapture the Falklands which Argentina seized Friday.

The resignation, accepted by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, followed three days of mounting demands from newspapers and lawmakers, including members of the ruling Conservative party, for him and Defense Secretary John Nott to leave the government over what critics called the Falklands debacle.

"In my view much of the criticism is unfounded but I have been responsible for the conduct of the policy," Carrington said in his letter of resignation. "I think it right that I resign."

Nott also tendered his resignation but Thatcher refused it, telling him in a letter she needed him to continue "as our forces prepare for the possibility of armed action. I have the fullest confidence in your ability to carry out the crucial tasks ahead."

Two of Carrington's aides, Deputy Foreign Secretary Humphrey Atkins and Richard Luce, Foreign Office minister of state for Latin America, also tendered resignations which were accepted.

Carrington quit as the 19,500-ton Invincible stacked with Harrier vertical-takeoff jets and Sea King anti-submarine helicopters steamed out of Portsmouth on England's south coast to sea. A flotilla of destroyers and frigates prepared to follow it.

"God speed Invincible!" 30,000 Britons lining the harbor screamed, waving Union Jacks.

Argentine President Leopoldo Galtieri said his nation would go to war with Britain to defend the islands 250 miles off the Argentine coast. His forces seized the archipelago Friday after 149 years of British rule.

In the Falklands the invaders dug in, imposed a 24-hour curfew on the 1,800 staunchly pro-British islanders, threatened jail terms for resisters to Argentine rule and decreed Spanish the official language. Most islanders are sheepherders of English and Scottish ancestry.

Argentina announced that its forces also occupied South Georgia, an island dependency of the Falklands 800 miles to the east. But the garrison of 22 British marines on the island was reported to have killed three of the invaders, raising Argentina's casualties to four dead and two wounded. No British casualties have been reported.

British Defense Secretary John Nott claimed the marines destroyed one of the Argentines' helicopters and damaged one of their ships before they were overwhelmed. Argentine naval sources denied this.

Meanwhile, the British governor of the Falklands, Rex Hunt, and the 82 marines captured with him on Friday were flown home. Argentina deported them to Uruguay.

Crews at the Portsmouth naval base worked feverishly through the night to ready the aircraft carriers Invincible and Hermes and their escort of destroyers and frigates for the expedition to the South Atlantic.

They were to rendezvous with another group of ships off Gibraltar to form a fleet of 40 warships, nearly two-thirds of Britain's naval strength.

The force includes 22-year-old Prince Andrew, second son of Queen Elizabeth II and one of the Invincible's 12 helicopter pilots.

"If we have to fight, we will. And we are not going to fight unless we win," said the defense secretary in a television interview.

"We are not making the largest task force available outside the two superpowers without the intention, if we have to, of using it."

Members of Parliament were demanding that Nott and Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington resign because of their failure to prevent the invasion. But press reports said although Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher rebuked them, no resignations were imminent.

In the Falklands, the new Argentine military administration ordered a round-the-clock curfew.

Court To Hear Customs Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today agreed to decide whether local governments may collect property taxes on imported goods stored in U.S. Customs warehouses awaiting sale and shipment to foreign countries.

The justices will study an attack against such taxes by the Xerox Corporation, which told the court that its ruling could affect "hundreds of millions of dollars worth of goods" nationwide.

The controversy arose in Houston, where Xerox was assessed a total of some $288,000 in property taxes for 1976 and 1977 by the city government and Harris County for $9 million worth of copying machines stored in customs bonded warehouses.

Xerox manufactures copying machines in the United States but in some instances sends unassembled parts out of the country for assembly by subsidiaries.

The assembled machines are then shipped back to the United States, where they are stored in the custody of the U.S. Customs Service until sold in foreign markets.

Xerox uses the Houston warehouses to store machines assembled in Mexico and designated for sale in Central and South America.

The Supreme Court appeal filed by Xerox cited "reasons of good will and to more effectively compete in the sale of copiers in Latin America" as reasons for the arrangement.

Lawyers for Houston said, "Xerox utilized this circuitous export-import-export arrangement to take advantage of the cheaper labor costs of Mexican workers, the more favorable U.S. Customs laws and Houston's excellent distribution facilities."

Delta Airliner Hijacked

MIAMI (AP) — Three Spanish-speaking men sloshed gasoline on a flight attendant and around the cabin of a Delta Air Lines jetliner to hijack the plane to Cuba today, passengers said after the plane returned here safely.

"They poured it everywhere, I was petrified," said Linda Infantino, an 18-year-old passenger who boarded Flight 591, which carried 96 passengers and a crew of seven, in her hometown of Chicago. She spoke to reporters after the plane landed at Miami International Airport after the brief stop in Havana.

"There were three people — a father and two sons," said passenger James Phillips of Miami. "They poured it all over the airplane and on a flight attendant." He said he heard the two younger men call the older man "father" in Spanish.

Miss Infantino said she saw one of the men produce a white bleach bottle filled with gasoline.

Shuttle Being Hoisted

WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE, N.M. (AP) — Two huge cranes hoisted the space shuttle onto the back of a jumbo jet early today, preparing Columbia for its flight home to Cape Canaveral, Fla.

A National Aeronautics and Space Administration official said high winds during the night had pushed the "mating" of the aircraft back by several hours.

The operation requires the shuttle to be lifted by the cranes while a modified Boeing 747 is rolled under it. Then the shuttle is bolted to the back of the jet in an operation that takes eight to ten hours.

Jim Harrington of NASA said workers hoped to complete the hoisting by noon, when winds were expected to pick up again. He said a decision would be made later today on whether the coupled aircraft would leave Northrup Strip this afternoon or wait until dawn Tuesday.

Mark Anniversary

By The Associated Press

Civil rights supporters around the nation marked the 14th anniversary of the assassination of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. by denouncing President Reagan's fiscal policies, appealing to blacks to vote and pleading for better treatment of Haitians.

"His life and his work shall not be in vain, and his dream of a beloved community shall come to pass," said Coretta Scott King, his wife, in ceremonies Sunday in Atlanta.

About 50 people were on hand at the gravesite at the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Non-Violent Social Change.

"We come here in some measure of sadness, but in greater of thanksgiving — thanksgiving that he lived, but also thanksgiving that his dream lives on," said Mayor Andrew Young, one of King's chief lieutenants.

4 Bitten During Hunt

WAURIKA, Okla. (AP) — Despite the fact that four people were bitten by rattlesnakes, organizers of the 21st Annual Waurika Rattlesnake Hunt held over the weekend say the event was a huge success.

"We had people here from all over the country, and the hunters collected six or seven times more snakes than they usually do," said David Herron, one of the organizers of the event held in this small, southern Oklahoma town.

Herron said Nancy Schaffer, of Stratford, was bitten by a snake while competing in the snake sacking contest. In the event, contestants compete to see who can pick up and toss a live rattlesnake into a gunny sack.

DISTRICT WINNERS—Three Snyder High School Students placed high in the District 4—AAAA Literary Contests in Midland last Saturday. Jack O'Banion took first place in poetry reading and Stocky Roberts took first place honors in shorthand and a third place in the spelling competition. Misty Merritt placed fourth in the typing contest and will be an alternate for the regional meet April 17 in Odessa. Snyder students placed third overall in the competition which featured 11 schools competing in math, science, ready writing, journalism, speech, drama, spelling and shorthand. (SDN Staff Photo)

Almost 2-1 Margin...

Snyder Voters Turn Down Bingo Election

Snyder voters said a resounding "no" to local option bingo by an almost a 2-1 margin during Saturday's municipal election. A total of 782 voted against it while 411 votes were cast in favor of bingo.

Votes were more evenly distributed in the unofficial Line Park referendum with 653 voting against development of the new park and 614 favoring it.

Ken Minyard, who had spearedheaded the petition to call the bingo election on a local basis, said Monday that the vote was clear cut and he doubted that local veterans organizations would bring up the issue in the near future.

"Our guys called it a game and they (the opposition) called it gambling. We'll have to come up with some other way to finance our commununity projects," Minyard said.

Minyard said his organization had not called bingo since Jan. 16 and the group would respect the law on the issue.

City Manager John Gayle said he was surprised with the narrow margin in the park referendum. "I don't think the council received a clear-cut mandate, so now the future of the park is back in the hands of the city council.

All other races in Saturday's city election were uncontested.

Ed Thrift, Place 2, and Don Gressett, Place, 4, retained their city council seats with total votes of 964 and 972, respectively.

Don Osborne was elected to Place 6 with 983 votes. Rod Waller, who had decided not to seek re-election to that post, was elected mayor with 1,021 votes.

Lillie Sullivan retained Place 1 on the Snyder School board with 853 votes.

Jerry McWilliams, Place 4, also an incumbent, received 903 votes.

Dr. Leslie Butler, Place 2, received 864 votes for that post. Bill Seale had not sought re-election.

Incumbents and original members of the Western Texas College Board of Trustees also retained their posts in uncontested races.

Edwin Parks, Place 5, received 772 votes in Snyder 52 in Hermleigh and 68 in Ira.

R. C. Patton, Place 6, received 748 votes in

City Council To Meet Here Tonight

The Snyder City Council is scheduled to canvass returns from Saturday's election and make several appointments to boards at its meeting this evening.

The meeting is set for 6:30 p. m. in the council room at city hall.

A request by Snyder Public Schools for a longer lease on the Humble-Smith School property will be heard. The council offered a 10-year lease at its March meeting.

Appointments up for consideration include two members of the Colorado Municipal Water District Board, a member of the builder's board of appeal, and three members of the zoning board of adjustments. Terms of James Rosser and H. W. Cargile expire on the CRMWD board, while the term of H. L. Bradley expires on the builder's board of appeal and the terms of Jack Gorman, Vernon Young and Jack Nesbit expire on the zoning board of adjustments.

Also on the agenda are a request by John Reed on behalf of Southern Electric to close 9th St. between College Ave. and Ave. R, a letter of complaint from Don Light, and a request for the puchase of two additional walkie-talkie radio units and assumption of major maintenance for Snyder EMS.

Authorization will be sought for the mayor to renew a lease for property on the east side of the municipal garage from RS&P Railroad.

Up for discussion will be a new proposal by the county to collect city taxes for a fee of .6 of one percent.

A.—Why do baseball coaches wear baseball uniforms when none of the other sports have their coaches "suit out."

Q.—Professional baseball requires anyone connected with the game who goes on the field of play to be in uniform. This includes coaches, umpires, batboys and players. We have uncovered no particular reason for this, except that it has been done for a long time. The legendary Connie Mack used to manage his team in a business suit, but he remained in the dugout.

Marketing Souvenirs To Finance British Tour

LONDON (AP) — The Roman Catholic Church in Britain has joined forces with American entrepreneur Mark McCormack to market 250 different souvenirs for the upcoming visit of Pope John Paul II — the first time church officials have used souvenir sales to help pay for a papal tour.

With John Paul's six-day visit starting May 28 expected to cost $10.8 million, the British Catholic hierarchy hired McCormack to market papal mementos and provide business expertise. The souvenirs will range in price from a 45-cent plastic bag to a $2,250 platinum medallion.

McCormack's Cleveland-based International Management Group, whose clients include tennis ace Bjorn Borg, golfer Arnold Palmer and boxer Muhammad Ali, stands to make $2 million from the deal, according to London's Observer newspaper.

McCormack, a Yale Law School graduate, formed IMG in 1959. With 400 employees, it's now the largest sports marketing and management organization in the world.

With 13 offices in 10 countries, IMG produces films and television programs, including the Wimbledon tennis tournament. It represents about 500 professional athletes in nearly every field of sports.

Richard Crow, an IMG executive in London, would not disclose how much the company expects to make from the souvenir sales but said it was "looking reasonably healthy."

The church, however, probably will not recoup the tour costs from souvenir sales and will have to make up the difference through private donations, Crow said in an interview.

IMG is involved in all commercial aspects of the tour, including transportation, catering and setting up altar sites, but not with the tone of the pastoral visit, the first to Britain by a reigning pope, Crow said.

"We're not promoting the pope. The pope is not a client of ours," said Crow.

Because the pope's tour is a pastoral visit and not an official state visit, the British government is paying none of the costs. However, the Rev. Kevin O'Connell said taxpayers in cities where the pope will appear "may have to" bear some of the costs. He said discussions were already under way with the various municipalities involved.

The main expenses will be setting up and dismantling five large altars to be used for Masses expected to draw at least 500,000 people each. The church will have to provide on-site security, catering and press facilities.

The church is buying six vehicles, including two bubble-topped "popemobiles," one for motorcades and another for manuvering among large crowds. It is also hiring two helicopters and several buses.

IMG has contracts with 63 companies to manufacture souvenirs. On display near Crow's office is a sample — balloons, sweatshirts, neckties, coasters, mugs, badges, clocks and rosary beads.

There is a also a brick, costing $6.50, with the inscription, "to commemorate the visit of Pope John Paul II to Great Britain, 1982." People who buy the brick are supposed to use it to replace one in their own house.

Upscale items include a $1,080 gold bust of the pope, a $1,800 gold pocket watch and the $2,250 platinum medallion struck by the Royal Mint, bearing the image of the pontiff and Queen Elizabeth II.

3 Asian Allies Are Reassured

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger says he has reassured three Asian allies that the United States remains committed to a Pacific defense, but has stressed the common security burden must be a "shared enterprise."

Weinberger made his comments Sunday after returning from Japan, South Korea and the Philippines. It was his first trip to the Far East since he became defense secretary 14 months ago.

"It was more important than I had realized when I left that we reasssure those countries that it is indeed our intention to remain and carry a fair share of the whole burden of the defense against an increasing threat" from the Soviet Union, Weinberger said.

But, he added: "It's got to be a shared enterprise." And he said he told the allies that "it is necessary for us all to do more."

One of Weinberger's major objectives was to impress on the Japanese that they must contribute "substantially" more in defense spending to protect important sea lanes in the northern Pacific.

This, according to Weinberger's reasoning, would free U.S. naval and air resources for safeguarding oil tanker routes through the Indian Ocean to Japan and elsewhere.

The defense secretary said he "didn't sense any disagreement" with the U.S. analysis that Japan must do more in the common defense if the region.

But he said he did not gain any commitment from the Japanese for any major boost in their defense budget. "You are not going to get any commitment" of a specific size from the Japanese government, he said.

"I'm sure they know the United States can not go it alone in Asia," he added.

Shuttle Recovery Is Nearing Completition

WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE, N.M. (AP) — Technicians struggled today against the high winds that have hampered their work since Columbia landed as they tried to mount the space shuttle atop a Boeing 747 for its flight to Cape Canaveral, Fla.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration ground operations manager Jim Harrington said a decision would be made later today on whether the coupled aircraft would leave Northrup Strip this afternoon or wait until dawn Tuesday.

The modified 747 landed Sunday with no problem on the same gypsum runway where the Columbia returned to Earth on Tuesday. The shuttle landing was delayed one day by strong winds that turned the stark white desert into a swirling dustbowl.

Wind has been the enemy throughout the recovery operation. Work was interrupted Thursday night by winds as strong as the ones that delayed the landing, but progress was rapid after the storm ended Friday afternoon. But the winds picked up again Sunday afternoon.

Harrington said the shuttle was to be lifted by two giant cranes and the 747 rolled under it. Then the shuttle was to be bolted to the back of the jet in an operation expected to take eight to ten hours.

After the "mating" operation was completed, NASA officials and the crew of the jumbo jet were to decide whether to take off for the Kennedy Space Center at Cape Canaveral today or early Tuesday. The originally scheduled departure time was Wednesday morning.

The mating was the last of the operations to prepare the shuttle for its return to Kennedy. Since Tuesday, crews have checked the orbiter's systems and readied it for a different kind of flight from the eight-day space mission.

Saturday night, the fiberglass tailcone that protects the shuttle's engines during its piggyback ride was attached.

The weather was beautiful early Sunday as thousands of spectators traveled along crowded highways to get a last look at the shuttle before it returned to Kennedy. On Saturday, the spacecraft attracted an estimated 60,000 to 80,000 shuttle fans.

Rail travel phased out when jet travel came in.

First-class trains were unable to compete with first-class airlines in speed, comfort, services.

Now first-class air travel is phasing out and the Orient Express is making a comeback.

May 25 the fabled Orient Express will roll again. This one time epitome of travel luxury will roll from London's Victoria Station to Venice, Italy in 23 hours.

And the Orient Express is already more than half sold out for the entire year!

Food, furnishings and service promise to be as elegant as ever, the original cars renovated $18 million worth.

The ticket will cost $450 one way, slightly more than first class air travel but, as I say, there is no "first class" air travel anymore.

Airlines flying backward financially have cut back on amenities. Jumbo-jet passengers are herded like cattle and fed up front little more than the sandwiches they buy in the back.

New airlines configurations shrink seat space and the almonds have become peanuts and the former freebies — newspapers, seconds, mints and such — are altogether gone.

The overdue comeback for rail travel had to start someplace.

It starts in London, May 25.

In much of Europe and spreading is a parallel renaissance of intracity rail service, "streetcars.

During the postwar boom of the '40s, mass motorization of the world population put everybody on his own wheels.

Where 79 cities and towns in West Germany had operated streetcars, within 30 years there were only 32.

The trams disappeared and their tracks were torn up and in Hamburg the last line shut down in 1978.

Today, in a dramatic turnaround, 28 cities in West Germany are laying new rail.

In France, where the last streetcar was publicly burned in 1960, a new system is being built at a cost of more than $100 million.

The new streetcars, as the new trains, are a vast improvement over the rattletraps of a generation ago. And the modernized streetcar trend is spreading to North America and Japan and is perceptible most everywhere in the world.

San Diego as a new light rail system and San Jose and Minneapolis are thinking about it.

Why? High fuel costs, high car prices, car traffic congestion, pollution, parking inconvenience.

And operating buses costs more and operating subways costs twice as much — as streetcars. What do you know?

My wife was right. She always said that "If the Lord and meant for us to fly, he'd never have given us railroads!"

Teenager Sets 8 Fires

BROCKTON, Mass. (AP) — A teen-ager arrested over the weekend has admitted setting eight fires in the past three weeks that left about two dozen people homeless, police said.

The 15-year-old was arrested after he allegedly set three fires on Saturday, police said.

The youth, whose name was withheld because of his age, confessed to setting the fires after he was taken to the police station by his father, police said.

He was released to the custody of his parents and will be arraigned Monday in Brockton District Court, police said.

Oswald: "The skill factor in pair tournaments is most important. A pair that plays well is going to finish near the top, but good play alone does not determine the winner."

Today's hand from the Dallas regional is an example of the luck factor. Every North-South pair wound up in three no-trump. Usually South was the declarer but some Norths got to play the hand. Most declarers made 10 tricks but a few got bad scores because they were held to just nine."

Alan: "The pair that won the event were lucky enough to come home with 11 tricks and an absolute top score on the hand. It wasn't a matter of great play by declarer. It just happened that West decided to make the unusual attacking lead of the queen of diamonds."

Oswald: "That lead by itself didn't give South his top. East could have ducked but East played his ace and returned the suit.

Alan: "South won that second trick with dummy's nine and had no trouble collecting four diamonds, four clubs, two spades, one heart and all the match points."

Oswald: "As you can see it wasn't a matter of great declarer play. Once that queen and ace were played at trick one, any declarer was sure of 11 tricks. It was what golf players call 'a lucky rub of the green.' "

For Roast Turkey...

Old-Fashioned Stuffing

By Cecily Brownstone
AP Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: My grandmother used to stuff turkey with a dressing made from white bread and cornbread. Its texture somewhat resembled cornmeal mush. It was a simple stuffing I'd love to reproduce, but I've never found a recipe for it. Have you? — SOUTHERNER.

DEAR SOUTHERNER: No. But I heard of a cook who uses a turkey dressing of the sort you describe and learned how to make it. I was told it was one of those family recipes handed down by word of mouth. Like you, I enjoyed the dressing's honest flavor and different texture. When I served the turkey and dressing, I accompanied them with chutney rather than the usual cranberry sauce. I'm happy to pass along this recipe now because turkeys are plentiful and reasonable in price. — C.B.

OLD-FASHIONED TURKEY STUFFING

½ cup butter
1 large onion, finely chopped
1 large rib celery, finely chopped
3 cups crumbed soft white bread (nine to ten ⅜-inch thick slices, untrimmed)
4½ cups crumbed soft cornbread, see Note
½ teaspoon poultry seasoning
¼ teaspoon pepper
Salt to taste

Over moderately low heat, melt the butter; add the onion and celery and cook gently until the onion has wilted and yellowed. Toss with the white bread crumbs, cornbread crumbs, poultry seasoning, pepper and salt. (No liquid is called for.) Use as stuffing for the body and neck cavities of an 11-pound turkey; roast in your favorite way. Use the drippings in the pan for gravy to serve with the turkey and stuffing. (When we tested this recipe we roasted the turkey in a portable convection oven at 350 degrees for 2¾ hours.)

NOTE: For the cornbread we used a recipe calling for 1 cup all-purpose flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, ¼ teaspoon baking soda, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 cup stoneground fine white cornmeal, 1 large egg, 1½ cups buttermilk and ¼ cup butter (melted) baked in a well-buttered 9-inch square pan in a preheated 425-degree oven for 25 minutes. Six 3-inch squares (two-thirds of the cornbread) were needed to make the amount of crumbs called for in the recipe.

Planning Makes Kids More Helpful At Home

NEW YORK (AP) — "It's ironic that before children are old enough to be very useful at home tasks their one passion is to help Mommy. Alas, by the time they are 10 or 12, and could give working parents a real hand, excuse-itis has set in," says Esther Hautzig, author of a number of activity books for children.

"I wasn't told ... I didn't know how ... I couldn't read your note ... you forgot I had a meeting ... the job was too hard." These are some of the common excuses of children, along with the old favorite, "I forgot," notes Mrs. Hautzig, whose book, "Life With Working Parents," is written from the child's viewpoint.

If parents need chores done after school, without supervision, it's better to settle for modest help given regularly, instead of spasmodic major efforts, she advises. By planning, they can forestall alibis and structure tasks as "set-ups for success," she explains.

"If you and your children agree on what is reasonable, and make sure the task is doable, they find a lot of satisfaction," she observes. "Then there's a chance for helping to become a habit."

Ingredients for a working plan, she points out, include a family calendar, so a chore assignment won't overlap a play rehearsal, for instance. Then there's "Message Central," a bulletin board or chalkboard everyone learns to consult automatically upon coming home.

After that, parents can identify areas where a little regular help is most useful, and reach agreement with the kids, says Mrs. Hautzig, who adds that these tips from an informal poll of working mothers conducted by the Regina Corp. will help dehassle after-school jobs and ease children into more responsibility successfully:

—Quick Cleaning: A once-over-lightly is easier when equipment is convenient for youngsters to use: a lightweight electric vacuum cleaner for whisking over rugs and floors; a hand brush and squeegee mop for spills; a pump-spray cleaner and sponges for spritzing the kitchen appliances.

—Room-tidying: Many parents sigh and surrender to a closed-door policy, but if a child's room is always cluttered, maybe more storage space will help. Work with the child to add shelves, hooks, cupboards, until there can be an assigned place for everything.

—Shopping: A common plaint is "You didn't say what kind you wanted!". One answer is a photocopied quantity of Mom's customized shopping list, showing all regularly used items, with brand and size preferences.

A quick morning checkoff does it, or a call from the office — and the child has confidence about choosing correctly.

—Dinner: The easiest phase-in is to ask kids to put a premixed casserole from the refrigerator into the oven at the right time. Non-cooking preparations like washing salad greens are simple.

If children want to tackle a whole meal, have them cook the whole menu several times on weekends, when you're around, so it will be tried-and-true when they're on their own.

—Laundry: It's not hard to get family members to put dirty clothes in a hamper or utility room, and washer-dryers do the actual cleaning job. But, as any weary sock-matcher can testify, the real bother is sorting and restoring items to bureau and closet.

It's a big help to supply each child with large zippered netting bags to use for socks, underwear or other knitted clothes requiring no ironing or folding. Bags can go from hamper to washer and dryer and back into rooms with no sorting on anybody's part.

Bribery Probe Is Finally Over

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — What began with a reporter looking into the expenditures of a county judge's office has ended after a 4½-year bribery investigation that produced indictments against 14 county judges.

U.S. Attorney George Proctor Jr. of Little Rock said March 19 that the investigation of public servant bribery in his 40-county district of eastern Arkansas ended with the indictment of Forsythe, Mo., salesman Robert E. Simpson on charges of perjury and bribing a county judge. Five other vendors also have been indicted.

Of the 14 men indicted, 13 were convicted or pled guilty. Because of a technicality, Proctor said, a judge dismissed the case against former Pope County Judge Ermil Grant. None of the 14 are still in office.

In the western district, four past or present county judges either pleaded guilty or were convicted after a similar investigation. A jury acquitted a fifth. U.S. Attorney Asa Hutchinson of Fort Smith said in a telephone interview Wednesday he hopes to close that investigation in a month.

Probes sprouting from the one in Arkansas have developed in Alabama, Oklahoma, Texas and Tennessee.

Larry Fugate, associate editor of The Jonesboro Sun, said he was checking Craighead County purchases when, in 1975, he noticed inconsistencies. "Things were just jumping out at me like jack rabbits," he said in a telephone interview Wednesday night.

For example, one invoice had what was purported to be a signature of a man dead six months.

Fugate said purchasing prices for the same product varied widely. "The county might purchase a diesel fuel additive," he said. "If they bought it locally, they might pay X amount of dollars. If they bought it from a Jack O'Roark or a Paul Baldwin or someone else, they might pay three times that local amount."

Baldwin, a Hernando, Miss., vendor, was convicted of bribing public officials in Arkansas and sentenced to 15 months in prison. The government granted immunity to O'Roark, a West Memphis businessman, for testimony.

In 1977, Fugate's findings prompted Craighead County Judge Dennis Gillam to ask the FBI to investigate records of his predecessor, Bill Clark, who served from 1967-1976. By the end of 1977, a legislative committee was asked to investigate records of all counties that did business with eight companies during 1974, 1975 and 1976.

In 1980, a jury convicted Clark of eight counts of accepting bribes. Sentenced to three years imprisonment and fined $25,000, he is on probation.

"I never thought it was going to go this far," Fugate said. "I thought I was dealing with a guy and some confederates who had stolen a couple hundred thousand dollars in Craighead County."

In a telephone interview Wednesday night, Clark, 54, of Jonesboro said he was innocent and his conviction was unjust. "I was convicted by the media."

"I just think it was an aftermath of Watergate and Abscam. There was just no way for a county official at this time to get a fair trial.

"If I had done anything," he said, "I would have done only what the county officials had done for 150 years."

Clark, who spent 14 months in a penal camp, said the experience was degrading. "Here I am — a high-ranking Army officer ... an All-American boy so to speak. ... I was convicted of racketeering."

Although the majority of county judges were honest, Proctor said, "We found that often times there was a pattern where all the judges in a succession were taking bribes. I think some of the judges probably sought the office because they were aware of the setup. They saw how well their predecessor did.

"I think you have a different type of individual seeking the office now," Proctor said.

On Proctor's office wall hangs a watercolor picture of Clark's trial, which typified what the U.S. attorney's office would face in other cases as well.

"All the courtrooms would usually be filled with local supporters and character witnesses," Proctor said Wednesday. "In the Bill Clark case, as the character witnesses left the stand, they would shake hands with Clark until the judge stopped that. There was just an atmosphere of support which could have easily been intimidating to the jurors."

Proctor said the system was partly to blame for the briberies. Before the Arkansas Constitution was amended to give quorum courts more power over county finances, he said, "The county judge was practically a feudal lord, and ... there was no check and balance on the judge."

"In many cases, white collar criminals have access to positions of trust, and very seldom do they have anyone looking over their shoulders," said Dudley Beard.

Brezhnev Is Home Again

MOSCOW (AP) — Ailing President Leonid I. Brezhnev has been sent home from the hospital and may be able to join the rest of the Soviet leadership in a television appearance in a few weeks, according to a Soviet source.

The source, whose information on the health of Soviet leaders has proved accurate in the past, said the 75-year-old Communist Party chief is still under constant medical supervision and might have to go back to the hospital at any time.

But he predicted Brezhnev would make a TV appearance "soon," either on April 11, the birthday of Vladimir Lenin, the founder of the Soviet state, or at the annual May Day parade through Red Square.

Soviet sources reported earlier that Brezhnev was taken to a hospital when he returned from Tashkent, in Soviet Asia, on March 25. Some sources said he was suffering from exhaustion, others said he had a stroke.

The departure of Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko to Belgrade Sunday was considered an indication that the president was out of danger.

Brezhnev has been in precarious health for years. He has been reported suffering from cancer, heart trouble and the after-effects of a stroke.

Understanding ovulation

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband and I have decided to begin a family and there are some questions in our minds. I am 27 and have had no previous pregnancies. My periods average anywhere from 28 to 33 day cycles and are light. My husband is 25 years old and in good health. We don't smoke and we don't drink alcohol to excess.

I have been experimenting with the basal temperature method to determine ovulation. I detect a rise in body temperature in midcycle. I am assuming that is when ovulation is occurring.

With that in mind, when is the best time for sex? Our understanding is that the egg must be fertilized 24 hours after ovulation. Does this mean there is a very critical one-day occurance for pregnancy or are there several days preceding and following the rise in body temperature?

I also notice a non-annoying discharge for several days and a slight aching in my breasts. Are those additional signs my ovaries are functioning properly? We would appreciate any advice you can give us.

DEAR READER — It is important for everyone to understand the basic functions of their bodies. I am glad you have discovered the basal temperature method. But the temperature rise occurs one to three days after ovulation. The temperature usually falls a day or two before ovulation. If you abstain until the temperature is elevated you are not likely to get pregnant.

The released ovum actually may live only six hours. The factor that expands the length of time that sex can induce a pregnancy is the time the sperm cells live, as long as three days. It follows that sperm cells from three days before ovulation actually occurs, which are already in the uterus or the tube, will be able to cause fertilization. The actual union (fertilization) of the egg and sperm cell occurs in the tube.

The discharge is probably normal mucus which can also help pinpoint the time of ovulation. I am sending you The Health Letter number 17-2, Female Reproductive Function, which will help you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have just found out I am 11 weeks pregnant. Before I knew I was pregnant I went to one of those sun tanning booths with ultraviolet light that you stand in to get tanned. I went six times in one week when I couldn't have been more than a week along. I went another time when I couldn't have been more than three weeks along. I am afraid that this might have harmed the baby. Can you give me any information on this?

DEAR READER — No, the exposure will not hurt your baby. Think of it as super sunshine. After all, it is the ultraviolet light in sunshine that causes the skin to tan. It is no more dangerous to your pregnancy than exposure to sunlight.

Now that doesn't mean I approve of such devices. They are hard on your skin in the same way that too much sunshine can damage and prematurely age your skin. And unless you are protected you can damage your eyes.

Of Soviet Nuclear Capacity...

Jackson Disagrees With Reagan On Superiority

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., says he disagrees with President Reagan's statement that the Soviet Union has a nuclear weapons superiority over the United States.

"I don't agree with the president that they are superior ... and I think he would have been better advised not to say it," Jackson said. "There are imbalances, but in the aggregate, we have the capability now of deterring the Soviets."

Although Jackson said the Soviets enjoy a numerical superiority, "they know we have a qualitative advantage."

Jackson, along with Sen. John Warner, R-Va., has sponsored a nuclear freeze resolution that would require the Soviets to reduce the number of their missiles aimed at Europe and at U.S. silos in exchange for an agreement by Washington to forego deploying any more weapons.

Reagan has endorsed the resolution.

Jackson, Paul Warnke, the chief arms negotiator in the Carter administration, and Richard Burt, head of the State Department's Bureau of Politico-Military Affairs were all interviewed Sunday on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley" show.

Warnke claimed Reagan's declaration of Soviet superiority was mistaken.

"Obviously he has been misled," Warnke said of Reagan. "There is roughly a situation of parity at the present time."

But Burt contended Moscow has a nuclear advantage in Europe and a superior capability to knock out U.S. land-based missiles — the so-called widow of vulnerability.

"What we have to be concerned about is that, at any level, because the stakes are so high, the Soviet Union would not believe that it could get away with using nuclear weapons," Burt said, adding that has been the policy of every American administration back through President Kennedy.

While backing the Jackson-Warner freeze resolution, the administration has opposed another resolution sponsored by Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Mark Hatfield, R-Ore. That measure calls on the United States and Soviet Union to "pursue a complete halt to the nuclear arms race."

Of Plane Wreckage...

Navy Rescuers To Examine Site

NORFOLK, Va (AP) — Navy rescuers made preprations today to examine the wreckage of a cargo-passenger plane following its discovery on a mountainside on the island of Crete.

Eleven people were aboard the plane, found Sunday, when it took off from the Norfolk-based aircraft carrier Dwight D. Eisenhower last week on a flight to Souda Bay on Crete.

"Due to darkness and terrain, a Navy casualty assistance team from the Eisenhower will not be able to get to the scene until first light," a Navy spokesman said Sunday night.

There was no word on the possibility of survivors aboard the C1A Trader, found scattered 800 to 1,200 feet up a mountainside six miles north of Souda Bay, said Lt. Cmdr. Tom Connor, a spokesman for the Atlantic Fleet Naval Air Headquarters in Norfolk.

The wreckage was spotted by a Navy search plane about 11:15 a.m. EST Sunday, 6:15 p.m. Greek time, Connor said. The plane, carrying four crewmen and seven passengers, all assigned to the Eisenhower, had been missing since Friday.

Search efforts over the weekend had been hampered by haze and low clouds, Connor said.

The crew members were identified as Cmdr. Richard W. Beiser, 38, the pilot, of Cincinnati, Ohio; Lt. Cmdr Bruce L. Cook, 39, the copilot, Laporte, Ind.; Petty Officer 1st Class Carter C. Criz, 34, Syracuse, N.Y., and Airman Brian E. Haley, 19, South Yarmouth, Maine.

Connor listed the passengers as Petty Officer 1st Class David E. Newbill, 35, Miami, assigned to VS31, an air antisubmarine squadron based in Cecil Field Naval Air Station, Jacksonville, Fla.; Petty Officer 1st Class Michael A. Nichols, 36, Phoenix, Ariz., assigned to HAS5, a helicopter antisubmarine squadron based in Jacksonville; Petty Officer 1st Class Brian D. Lafferty, 26, Aurora, Colo., VAQ132, a tactical electronic warfare squadron based in Whitbey Island, Wash.; Petty Officer 3rd Class Miles T. Glover, 23, Goose Creek, S.C., HAS5; Petty Officer 2nd Class Michael W. Davis, 25, Ellsworth, Maine, and Petty Officer 3rd Class John C. Shabella, 22, Campbell, Ohio, both Eisenhower crewmen, and Petty Officer 2nd Class Kenneth R. Sorby, 27, Anderson, S.C., VS31.

Three Eruptions From Mount St. Helens Noted

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Mount St. Helens awoke unexpectedly from a fortnight's slumber with two mild eruptions, the latter coming in two brief "pulses" early today, shooting a plume of steam and ash nearly four miles high, officials said.

No evacuations were ordered and there were no reports of injuries, property damage or flooding.

"We had a small eruption of Mount St. Helens at 8:52 p.m. PST (Sunday)," said Kathy Cashman, a geologist with the U.S. Geological Survey volcano information headquarters here.

Early today, the volcano erupted again in two pulses four minutes apart, said A.B. Adams of the University of Washington's Geophysics Center. Although today's eruption also was described as mild, Adams said monitoring equipment recorded "enormous" seismic activity at the time, although it later calmed down.

Geologists considered the recent blasts a continuation of an eruptive phase that began with steam and ash eruptions March 19 and 20, said Bill Chadwick, another USGS geologist.

Bob Norris of UW's Geophysics Center said that because most of the snow in the volcano's crater melted during last month's eruption, he didn't expect any mudflows or flooding.

After Sunday night's eruption, the National Weather Service issued a flash flood watch for a 15-mile radius around the volcano and along the north fork of the Toutle River, which flows west from the mountain. There were no "significant changes" in the levels of streams and rivers near the mountain, weather service observers said.

Sunday's and today's eruptions shot a cloud of steam and ash into the sky, although the ash quickly dissipated, Ms. Cashman said. Winds were blowing to the north-northeast, but there were no reports of ashfall.

The restricted access "hazard zone" around the peak has been closed since March 19, Chadwick said, and seismic activity at the volcano did not return to background levels after last month's blasts.

Woman Regrets Losing What She Didn't Know She Had

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: The letter signed "Missing Something" rang a bell with me. The writer was a young woman who was living with a man whom she described as "almost a saint," but she wasn't as madly in love with him as he was with her — so she felt that she was missing something.

I was 17 when I married. He was a wonderful man who adored me, but I, too, felt that I was "missing something," so I divorced him for a man who had what I thought I was missing. I soon found out that I had made the worst mistake of my life.

Now, 30 years later, I am alone. (Divorced.) My first husband is also single (divorced) and I would like to have him back, but he has been terribly hurt in his life (it all started with my leaving him) and he is a bitter and disillusioned man.

I realized too late that I didn't miss a thing but the love, kindness and respect of my first husband. Sign me ...

MISSED THE BOAT IN YAKIMA

DEAR MISSED: That boat may sail again. Why don't you pick up the phone — or write a note — and let him know how you feel? The worst thing you could experience would be rejection. And the best would be a reunion. What do you have to lose?

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem with my son (I'll call him Billy), and I pray you will have an answer for me. He is 12 years old and has a terrible temper. This morning, a neighbor kicked our dog for snapping at him, so Billy pulled a knife on him. This isn't the first time Billy pulled a knife on somebody. He pulled a knife on his sister last summer after an argument and she called the police, but after talking to Billy a while, they dismissed him. (I was at work.)

A few months ago, Billy moved my car after being told he was never to touch it, so I smacked him. Then he took a run at me and drove his head into my stomach with such force he knocked the wind out of me. I nearly fainted.

At times he's a sweet and loving boy, but when he's reprimanded or somebody provokes him, he gets violent. I'm at my wit's end with this boy. I'm so afraid when he is older he will get into real bad trouble. Help me.

TROUBLED MAMA

DEAR MAMA: Please don't wait until Billy kills somebody before you have him psychiatrically examined. His violent behavior could be a symptom of a mental disorder. Your son should not be allowed to have a knife in his possession, and if you knowingly permit it, you must share the responsibility for whatever occurs as a result of it. Please act at once. Ask your family physician to guide you, or call your local mental health clinic. Billy clearly needs evaluation and therapy.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: "Too Tired for Love" complains because her husband works the night shift and she works days. "When he comes home at 2 a.m. he's wide-awake and ready for romance, but I am already three hours into a deep sleep by then," says she.

She asks how she can keep him happy and get enough sleep. You suggest they "synchronize" their work schedules. That's easier said than done.

Haven't you heard there's a recession going on? Synchronizing work schedules could be hazardous to that couple's economic health.

I have a better idea: Have the wife set her alarm a little early and wake her husband after he is already a few hours into a deep sleep. She can start off her day with a bang, and he can see how ready for romance he is in the middle of the night. Or they can alternate. And after alternating a few times, maybe they will both be so tired they will decide to save it all up for the weekend.

Caldwell 6-6, Parham 14.8...

Tigers Second At Sweetwater

SWEETWATER -- Snyder's boys showed their best improvement of the season here Saturday as they placed second in the Mustang Relays.

The Tigers didn't have the depth to compete with meet champion San Angelo Lake View, which won the meet by 106 points with a 228 total. Snyder did pull off five first places and five second places, and added several thirds, fourths, fifths and sixths to tally 122 points. Sweetwater took third with 86.

Snyder grabbed surprise wins in at least two events, and found a potential district champion in the process. Glen Parham, who already hails as one of the top 300 intermediate hurdle runners in District 2-AAAA, zipped off a first-place, 14.8 time in the 110 highs here Saturday.

"I was surprised because that's the first time I've run it all year," said the junior, who was less than estatic about his time in the 300s. "I hit almost every hurdle," he panned, shrugging off the fact that his 41.4 time won the event by almost a second.

Coach Robert Crawford was also intrigued by Parham's run in the 110s. "We were hoping he would get second because the kid from Lake View (Andy Mercer) is a good hurdler and this was the first time Glen has run it. Right now I think it (the 14.8) is the fastest time anyone has run in the district."

Snyder also got unexpected points from David Miller, who held off Lake View's Mike Nichols down the stretch to win first place in the 800 meters. Miller, also a junior, won the event in 2:08.3. Miller, however, is not expected to compete in the 800 at district.

One of the most talked about victories was James Caldwell's first place in the high jump. With Caldwell however, it wasn't that he won the event, but that he jumped 6-6 to do it. It was the best effort by a Tiger athlete since state high jump champion Bradley Richardson competed two years ago.

In addition to those blue ribbon performances, Quent Gilbert took the pole vault with a 10-6 effort.

Snyder got multiple milage out of most of its performers, including Parham, Miller and Caldwell - and Ross Bawcum. Bawcum took second in the shot put with a throw of 49-4. It bettered his previous best by over two feet. He also placed third in the discus.

In other results, Parham placed second in the high jump and long jump, and Caldwell took second in the 400 meters and fourth in the long jump. Others included David Nicholson, fourth in the pole vault; Gilbert, fifth in the high jump and in the 200 meters; D.W. Lofton, fourth in the 800 meters and fifth in the 1600 meters; Lee Minyard, sixth in the 110 hurdles; and Mike Everett, sixth in the 3200 meters

Nicholson, Miller, Caldwell and Parham also teamed to take second place in the 1600 meter relay with a time of 3:35.9.

Golfers Attending Final Loop Meet

ANDREWS -- Snyder's girls golf team was aiming for the District 2-AAAA title here today, expecting its biggest opposition to come from current standings leader Fort Stockton.

The top two teams in the final district standings advance to regional play, which will be held April 21-22 at Odessa's Mission Country Club.

Snyder, coached by Jan Kruse, was 16 strokes behind the Lady Panthers, heading into this, the final district tournament of the season. Fort Stockton has a total score of 1,166. Snyder is at 1,182.

Snyder was also hoping to come away with medalist honors. Senior Theresa Hildreth is currently tied with Fort Stockton's Kim Deerfield for the lead, both with 273's. Lisa Franklin, sophomore from Snyder, is two strokes back at 275.

Lee Awarded MVP Honors

AMARILLO -- Darren Lee, Western Texas College sophomore, earned Most Valuable Player honors in the second annual Dr. Pepper-WJCAC All-Star Game, held here over the weekend.

DARREN LEE

Lee scored 25 points and pulled down 12 rebounds in leading the White All-Stars to a 125-108 victory over the Blue All-Stars.

The 6-4 guard-forward averaged 19 points and almost eight rebounds a game for Western Texas' Westerners this year.

One of the Western Conference's top players, Lee will also compete in the annual Juco All-Star Game, April 16 at 8 p.m. at McLennan Community College in Waco.

Coaching the White team for the Dr. Pepper-WJCAC game were Dennis Berryman of South Plains and Ben Ledbetter of NMMI. Coach for the Blue team was Ron Black of New Mexico Junior College.

Lee is a native of Spring Valley, Calif.

Snyder Girls Do Well; 2-4A Races Thursday

SWEETWATER -- Snyder's girls came up with 79 points to place fourth behind Sweetwater, Lake View and Coahoma in the Mustang Relays here Saturday.

"I was pleased with our effort," said Coach Patty Grimmett of her young squad. "I think everybody on the team had faster times or better distances than they've had all year."

Snyder now gears for the District 2-AAAA Girl's Meet, which will be held Thursday in Monahans. Grimmett was to attend a district meeting tonight which would determine the heats for the conference track and field running.

Host Sweetwater polled 192 points to dominate here, while Lake View showed good depth in bringing in 120. Coahoma took third with 111½.

Snyder was led once again by Brenda Anderson, who took first place in two events, fourth in another, and ran on two relays which took second places.

The two-time state participant threw the shot put 40-feet, 9 inches, her best of the season, to beat out main challenger Wanda Gardner of Sweetwater (40-2). Anderson also won the 100 meters with a 12.6, and placed fourth in the discus with a throw of 110 feet, two inches.

Another senior, Michelle Townsel, showed promising strength in the 200 meters as she turned in a third place time of 27.2.

Townsel and Anderson teamed with Andrena Kitchens and Sherry Spells for a second-place, 53.2, time in the 400 meter relay. The same lineup also took second in the 800 relay with a time of 1:53.6.

Kitchens and Spells also provided additional points. Kitchens finished fourth in the 200 meters with a 27.6 and Spells took fifth in the triple jump with a leap of 34-4½. Spells also joined with Patty Gleastine, Thelma Garza and Kim Knight to take fourth in the 1600 relay with a 4:58.0 running.

Andrews Next Opponent...

9-Men Crack Lubbock

All of these schedule changes and cancellations may be confusing the fans, and the sportswriters, but they haven't slowed down Coach Albert Lewis' Tigers any.

The Tigers didn't get any baseball action Friday but they made up for it Saturday, winning both games of a doubleheader against Lubbock High at Moffett Field here.

The Tigers, who pick up 2-AAAA play again Thursday at Andrews, were forced to cancel Friday's scheduled game at Lubbock Coronado when strong wind gusts filled the skys with sand. As most fans already know, Tuesday's game with Odessa Ector has been moved to April 12, making Thursday the next playing date for the Tigers. The Andrews game had originally been set to be played here, but sites were switched last week. And incidentally, the game time has since been changed from 4 to 7:30 p.m. because of a problem getting umpires.

Saturday's victories, 3-2 and 7-3, gave the team some good action and upped its record to 13-5 for the season.

John Wilson earned his fifth win for the season in Saturday's opener, held at 1 o'clock. Perry Echols proved to be Snyder's big bat of the game as he knocked in every Tiger run.

Gerald Don Hicks, now 6-1, picked up the win in the second game, with relief help from Tommy Gressett, Monte Gambol and Charles Bollinger.

Wilson, already named to start against Andrews on Thursday, allowed just six hits over seven innings. Lubbock High scored first to lead 1-0, but Snyder tied the game in the second when Gary Don Edmiaston singled and two outs later Echols knocked him around.

Lubbock went back in front 2-1 in the fourth, but Snyder came up with two runs in the fifth to win the game. This time Wilson and Britt Vincent both got aboard on a pair of fielder's choices, and Echols singled them home.

Snyder also got behind in the late game, trailing 2-0 after the top half of the second inning. The Tigers got on track in the bottom of the stanza when Jesse Hernandez cracked a double And Brent Roemisch singled him across. Curtis Gafford got aboard on a fielder's choice and Johnny Overton, Trey Harlin and Wilson all singled and later scored.

Snyder added another run in the fourth as Wilson made first on a fielder's choice and Echols rapped him home.

Hicks worked the mound for four innings, Gressett for two, Gambol for two-thirds and Bollinger for the final out.

Key hitters for the day included Echols, who went two-for-three in the first game and one for three in the second. Wilson was two-for-three in the second game, as were Hernandez and Harlin.

Snyder executed three double plays in the first game.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A mild earthquake, centered 31 miles southwest of the coast of Palos Verdes, Calif., caused barely a stir among the town's residents, authorities reported.

The quake registered 4.0 on the Richter scale, said Dennis Meredith of the California Institute of Technology. The scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs.
