Hall's bid for sheriff raises $55,000; Painter says office is 'not for sale'

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Mike Hall's 2000 campaign for Midland County sheriff has brought in about $55,000 in contributions — a sum more than three times the donations to Sheriff Gary Painter's re-election campaign and more than six times the contributions to contender Pat Bostick's campaign, according to records in the Midland County Elections Administration's Office.

"I am overwhelmed at the depth of support I've received to date," Hall, 53, said of his "broad-based support."

Painter, however, said that the sheriff's office is "not for sale."

Bostick said that he was "flabbergasted" by Hall's campaign coffer.

"This reinforces my belief that the taxpayers of Midland are ready for a change," said Hall, who noted that donations to his campaign came from 284 contributors, including more than 100 donations under $50, averaged less than $200 per donor, and represented "a broad cross-section of the community."

Hall is a 53-year-old sheriff's patrol sergeant now on leave to campaign for the Republican Party nomination for sheriff in the March 14 primary elections.

The highest individual gifts to his campaign were $5,000 each from Barbara Levin of New

Council votes to issue $35.9 million in bonds

■ Petitioners chose not to present 2,600 signatures; they will seek to get required number by April 6.

By Ian Heald
Staff Writer

Faced with a contentious crowd Tuesday, the City Council voted 7-0 to issue $35.9 million in certificates of obligation to fund construction of the Scharbauer Sports Complex.

Petitioners, led by Richard Stovall and Kara Wright, presented the council with more than 2,600 signatures opposing the issuance of the certificates of obligation.

They chose not to submit those signatures, saying they will wait another month and get the required number of signatures, equal to 10 percent of the number of voters registered in the last regular municipal election, by April 6.

This issuance is $3.05 million less than the $38.95 million the city passed after the first reading of the bonds at the Feb. 22 council meeting.

In the spirit of reducing the overall costs of the sports complex, Councilman Jose Cuevas recommended the city issue bonds in the lesser amount.

City Manager Rick Menchaca said that costs now will be trimmed.

"We need to go back and look at the entire scope of the project," said Menchaca, "which may include looking at roads, the access points into the stadium and then looking at all the options available out there to reduce costs without affecting the integrity of the sports complex, without affecting the capacity of the stadiums."

The primary concern of the petitioners among the capacity crowd in the City Council chamber was to convince the council not to issue certificates of obligation with property taxes and the water and sewer fund as collateral.

Petitioner Richard Stovall said the nature of the city's public notice of the certificates of obligation implied that property taxes would pay off the certificates, not sales tax as the voters originally were told.

Kara Wright, another petitioner, told the council that all they needed to do was change the wording of that notice to assure the voters that property taxes would never be in jeopardy.

"We still haven't communicated well enough that you don't understand

WHAT'S NEXT FOR THE ISSUANCE OF SPORTS COMPLEX BONDS?

■ City Council has approved the issuance of $35.9 million in certificates of obligation. The city must now wait 30 days before issuance of those certificates.

■ Petitioners say they plan on collecting enough signatures within the next 30 days to stop the issuance of the bonds.

■ The required number of signatures is equal to 10 percent of the number of registered voters in the last regular municipal election, held in May 1998. That number has yet to be determined.

■ If petitioners succeed, the City Council can either allow the 4b Corporation to issue revenue bonds or can allow a referendum to be held.

■ Any referendum would need to be held no less than 30 days after the vote. Voters would either support the city's issuance of certificates of obligation or reject it. Rejection would mean the 4b Corporation would have to issue revenue bonds.

■ The city's financial advisor, First Southwest Company, has said revenue bonds could cost Midland taxpayers an additional $7.4 million in interest.

SUPER TUESDAY

Bush takes California, New York, 5 other states

The Associated Press

George W. Bush won California, New York and five other Super Tuesday primaries, accelerating his drive to vanquish John McCain's political insurgency. "It's a huge step toward the nomination," Bush declared as McCain considered whether to continue his Republican presidential campaign.

Bush captured 162 delegates in California's winner-take-all primary.

Shortly after calling Bush to congratulate him on his victories, McCain told The AP: "We're very pleased with the victories we won and disappointed with the ones we lost." He said he will meet with his aides today "and talk about our future." McCain said no matter whether he continues in the race, "the crusade goes on."

■ Democratic primaries/4A

In a reflective mood, McCain said, "We've changed the face of politics and put reform on the agenda. We're proud of what we've done."

In a speech prepared for his victory rally, Bush said, "We have a national victory. Republicans and conservatives across American have said they want me to lead the Republican Party to victory come November, and I am ready and eager to do so."

Bush won Ohio, Georgia, Missouri and Maryland by double-digit margins — and he broke McCain's hold in the Northeast with narrower victories in New York and in Maine. McCain won Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Vermont as voters in 13 states participated in the year's largest night of Republican presidential contests.

Bush said he did not consider himself the certain nominee. "My frame of mind is to keep moving," he told The AP as the campaign moved swiftly to nine primaries in the next seven days.

Forging familiar coalitions, Bush relied on party faithful while McCain drew from independents and moderate Republicans. McCain's gamble of criticizing conservative Christian leaders may have backfired in key states, while Bush's visit to a South Carolina university with a history of anti-Catholic views

Taiwan: China is hiding much of its military spending

By Marcos Carlos Medina
Associated Press

TAIPEI, Taiwan — China's spending on weapons is probably three to five times higher than Beijing is willing to admit, a Taiwanese official said Tuesday.

A day after China announced it was boosting military spending by 12.7 percent, increasing the defense budget to $14.5 billion, Taiwan accused the mainland government of hiding much of its military spending.

"Regarding the numbers reported by the Chinese military, a lot of the information is not announced and cannot be confirmed," defense spokesman Kung Fan-ding said.

Beijing has steadily improved its military in the past decade, buying costly advanced weaponry, Kung said. Judging from its weapons acquisitions, Taiwan believes that Beijing is spending more than it actually reports.

China defended its double-digit increase in defense spending Tuesday, saying it was geared toward meeting outside threats.

"The money required for defense and military modernization still falls short of the real needs," China's Foreign Ministry spokesman, Zhu Bangzao, said in Beijing. "If there is no serious threat to the security and sovereignty of the country, defense expenditure will not increase substantially."

Zhu said the spending for the 2.5 million-strong army was the world's lowest per capita, and that much of the increase covered salaries and services or made up revenue lost in divesting commercial businesses.

But foreign analysts have said weapons research and foreign purchases are not included in China's public figure. China is spending more than $1 billion annually to buy foreign — particularly Russian — weapons, and that sum may triple over the next five years, they said.

China's announcement Monday came less than two weeks before Taiwan's March 18 presidential election, and Taiwanese fear Beijing may try to use military threats to influence the vote.

With the issue of Taiwan-China relations looming large in the campaign, the latest opinion polls showed the three main rivals for the presidency in a close race.

China and Taiwan split amid civil war in 1949, and Beijing has long warned that it would invade if the island seeks formal independence. Last month, Beijing added a new threat, saying it would attack if Taiwan indefinitely rebuffs talks about reunification.

Many military analysts believe China lacks the warships and planes to successfully overcome Taiwan's advanced defenses. The key to China's recovering the island is preventing the United States from supporting Taiwan, they said. Though the United States has not recognized Taiwan as sovereign, it is legally obliged to aid Taiwan's defense.

Beijing's aggressive plan to upgrade its weaponry could pose a more realistic threat in the next decade, analysts said.

Last month, a new Russian-built Sovremenny-class destroyer sailed through the Taiwan Strait to its new port on China's east coast. The warship was one of two that China ordered from Russia in 1997 in a $1 billion deal. The second ship will be delivered later this year, Russian officials have said.

Taiwan is also shopping for new weapons, and next month the United States is expected to make its annual announcement about what it is willing to sell the island.

Zhu expressed "deep concern" over reports that Washington was considering selling Taiwan advanced weaponry, such as guided-missile destroyers equipped with the AEGIS battle management system. China, Zhu noted, considers the ships part of an emerging regional anti-missile shield.

Zhu called on the United States to honor commitments to reduce arms sales to Taiwan "and refrain from doing anything that causes tension in the Taiwan Strait or that may harm or obstruct peaceful unification of China."

Vatican says pope plans historic apology

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Fulfilling a major goal of his papacy, Pope John Paul II plans to deliver a historic, sweeping apology for the sins of Roman Catholics over the centuries, Vatican officials said Tuesday.

It was unclear how specific the pope would be, although the very idea has drawn opposition from some cardinals and others in the church.

The pope's homily for the Day of Pardon Mass on Sunday in St. Peter's Basilica is apparently still being written.

But a document prepared by an international group of theologians that was released in Paris last week, and statements by officials Tuesday suggested the pope will at least allude to responsibility by the Catholics in the Holocaust, the Inquisition, the Crusades and acts against other Christians in wars of religions.

Lapses by present-day Catholics, including sins against women, the poor and failure to defend against abortion, could also be included.

"The reference to errors and sins in a liturgy must be frank and capable of specifying guilt; yet given the number of sins committed in the course of 20 centuries, it must necessarily be rather summary," said Bishop Piero Marini, who is in charge of papal ceremonies.

The officials, briefing reporters on the event, also appeared to be setting limits on how such an apology should be viewed.

"It cannot assume the aspect of a spectacular self-flagellation," said Cardinal Roger Etchegaray, president of the Vatican's 2000 Jubilee Committee. The pope has campaigned for a collective examination of conscience as the church begins its third millennium.

The idea for an apology has been on the pope's mind for some time.

No pope has ever gone to such lengths to seek forgiveness for past sins, Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro-Valls said.

The idea for an apology has been on the pope's mind for some time.

"What is interesting is that it is always the pope and the Catholic church who asked forgiveness while others remained silent," John Paul told reporters while flying to Brazil in 1997. "Maybe that is as it should be."

When the pope was planning celebrations for 2000, the Vatican acknowledged that some cardinals wanted him to look ahead and not backward through the church's history.

The theological commission document also spoke of reservations raised by those worried that an admission of fault by Catholics "may look like acquiescence in the face of accusations made by those prejudicially hostile to the church."

During the ceremony Sunday, the pope is expected to drop to his knees in prayer.

The theological document released last week broke little new ground and was instead intended to provide the context for the pope's call for a "purification" of the church.

On the Holocaust, the document said it was important to keep a "moral and religious memory" of the injury inflicted on Jews.

"In this area, much has already been done, but this should be confirmed and deepened," the document said.

Some Jews were upset that the Vatican's landmark 1998 document on the Holocaust did not condemn the church hierarchy for any failures to save Jews.

The Vatican and John Paul have consistently defended Pope Pius XII, who served during World War II and is a candidate for beatification.

Israeli Chief Rabbi Israel Meir Lau said the latest reference to the Holocaust was "quite disappointing."

"It adds nothing to the low-key statements made in the past," he said. "It is impossible to correct a crime of the past without any mention, for example, of Pius XII when he stood on the blood of the victims and did not say a word."

And an Italian gay rights group complained that the document failed to ask forgiveness for the treatment of homosexuals, calling them "the most numerous victims of theocratic violence, in the past as today."

The church condemns homosexual acts.

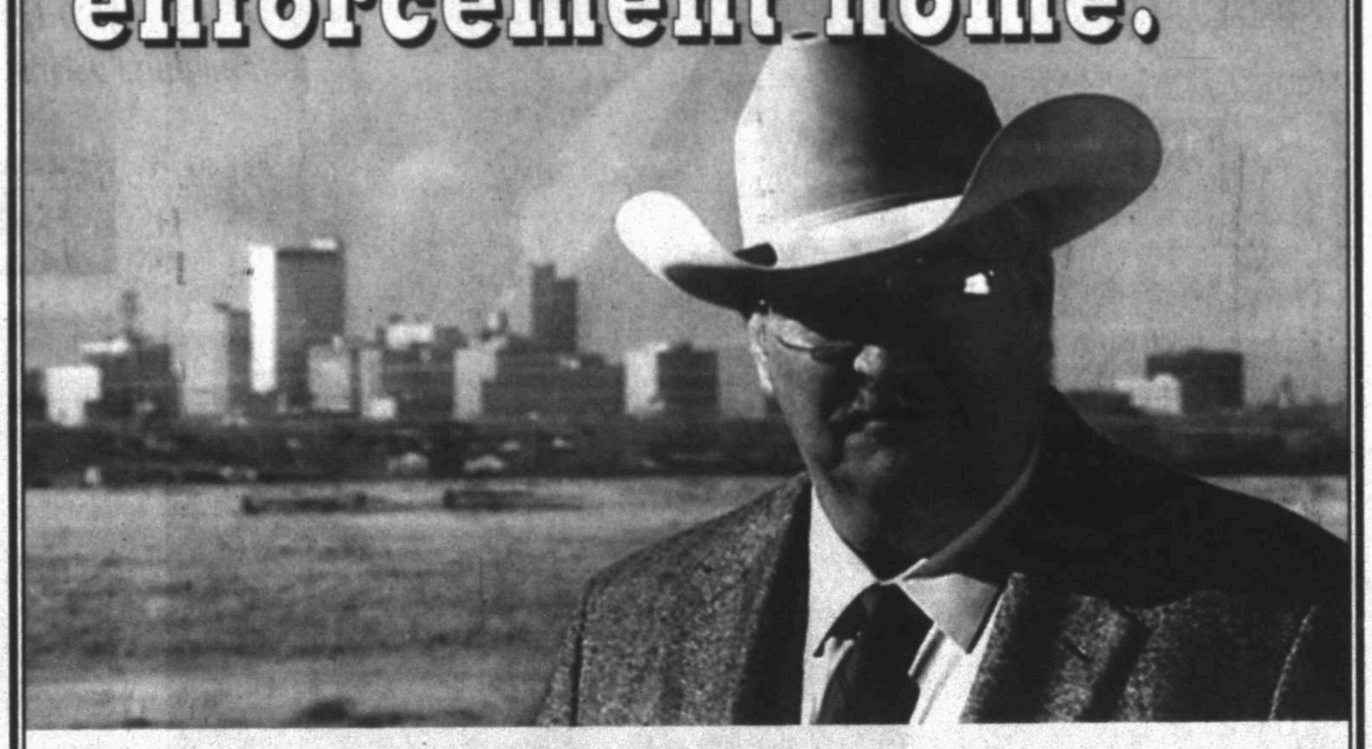
It's time to bring law enforcement home.


I'm Mike Hall, candidate for Midland County Sheriff in the Republican primary, and I'm asking for your vote.
I believe it's time to bring law enforcement back to Midland County and put the hard-working people of Midland County first.
We don't need to be chasing crooks or staging "stings" across Texas. You're already paying state and federal taxes for this. That's what the Texas Department of Public Safety, Drug Enforcement Administration, and F.B.I. are for.
I pledge that your County taxes will go to Midland County crime prevention and protection. I'll cooperate fully with state and federal law enforcement agencies.
As your Sheriff, I'll stay at home and focus or running your Sheriff's office. And I'll work with the County officials, putting you, the taxpayer, first.
I'm committed to making Midland County a better, safer place to live.
It's time for a change.

Aid workers try to reunite children, parents separated by floods

By Mike Cohen
Associated Press

CHAQUALANE, Mozambique — Stelio Mabunda and his brother Mahelane linger pensively under a tree, waiting for their mother. She may never come.

Eleven-year-old Stelio and his 6-year-old brother last saw their mother nine days ago, when rising floodwaters forced them to flee their home in Chokwe. Now they are among hundreds of Mozambican children wondering if they will ever see their parents again.

Aid workers say an unusually high number of children — as many as half of those arriving in camps — were separated from their parents during the catastrophe.

The Mabunda brothers are among 58 children being cared for by six Roman Catholic nuns in Chaqualane, a village 87 miles north of the capital Maputo that is now temporary home to 40,000 weary flood survivors.

A month of floods in this southeast African nation have left hundreds confirmed dead and an estimated 1 million people homeless. The floods have ebbed, but aid agency officials expect the death toll to soar into the thousands.

U.S. airplanes flew over flood-stricken areas of Mozambique on Tuesday, beaming back video images of marooned people and demolished terrain. The information gathered by a Hercules C-130 was to be passed to aid agencies in Maputo, Air Force Col. Gary Sadler said.

The Mabunda brothers became separated from their mother after a torrent of water slammed Chokwe, about 125 miles northeast of the capital.

"Our mother told us to run away when the water came," Stelio said. "She was trying to gather our things together."

Pushing through the deepening tide, the boys finally reached higher ground. There was no sign of their mother, and a truck brought them to Chaqualane, 40 miles away.

Looking at the ground with his hands folded behind his back, Stelio said Tuesday: "We think she is still in Chokwe."

Stelio said his father works in South Africa, but he did not know where.

Ian Macleod of UNICEF said the floods that engulfed central and southern Mozambique tore apart tens of thousands of families. Many were reunited as the floodwaters receded and survivors streamed into 72 makeshift camps.

Save the Children estimated up to 60 percent of the children arriving in some camps were unaccompanied. However, the number has dropped as children locate their parents, spokesman Roy Trivedy said Tuesday.

In the chaos besetting Mozambique, no one really knows how many children have been orphaned. Save the Children estimates 1,000 children are still separated from their families; UNICEF put the number closer to 500.

Sister Alda Macualua, who looks after the children in Chaqualane's makeshift camp, said 62 children had found their parents in recent days.

One woman, reunited with her two children Monday after more than a week apart, told of lifting one child into a tree and balancing the other on her head while she clung for two days to a tree trunk in chest-high water.

A helicopter rescued the children, but according to Macualua, the mother turned aside help. She remained in the tree for a week until the waters receded, the nun said.

The woman then started to walk, later finding her children in Chaqualane.

"The mother was crying and the children were crying," Macualua said. "The little one was holding the mother tight — she did not want to leave her."

No one knows if Stelio and Mahelane Mabunda will be as fortunate.

"The situation has started to stabilize. Most of the children who will find their parents have already done so," Save the Children's Christine Knudsen said Tuesday.

Two killed as Tokyo subway train hits oncoming train

TOKYO (AP) — A subway train derailed and sideswiped an oncoming train during rush hour Wednesday, killing two passengers and injuring at least 34 others, officials said.

The collision apparently sheared off the outer wall on one of the train's rear cars, according to footage broadcast on public television network NHK.

Three of the injured were rushed to hospitals in critical condition following the 9:03 a.m., said Tokyo Fire Department spokesman Fukuo Isozaki.

At least 31 others were less seriously injured. There were about 240 passengers on the train that derailed, and 1,300 on the oncoming train, the fire department estimated.

The cause of the derailment near Nakameguro Station in western Tokyo, one of Tokyo's busiest subway lines, was not immediately known, said spokesman Ryuichi Kinoshita of the Tokyo Rapid Transit Authority.

ATTENTION: If you have a plumbing emergency that needs immediate attention...DON'T PANIC!...

"How To Choose The Right Plumber If You Have Any of These 7 Problems And You Want It Fixed Today..."

I know it is frustrating when you need service. It seems like plumbing problems happen at the most inconvenient time. But, not to worry. Here's how you can easily and conveniently get your problem fixed.

Do You Have One of These 7 Problems Now?

☞Toilet Trouble. If your toilet is "gurgling" or leaking water into your floor or ceiling - or if your water bill is too high - or even if you have one of those 'water saver' toilets that need double flushing and a lot of plunging - PLUMBING NOW can quickly and economically solve your problem because our service trucks have 185% more parts in stock. This lets my plumber complete your job 70% faster, saving you money.

☞Water Leak. A dripping faucet is an annoyance, while a leak in a hidden pipe is a nightmare. I use a special 'radar detector' to find the exact spot of the leak to minimize your cost and make it a little more pleasant experience.

☞No Hot Water. About 62% of the time I can get your hot water back on without replacing your water heater. And if you do need a new water heater, I'll normally have it installed in less than two hours, saving you both time and money.

☞Clogged Drain. It doesn't make any difference whether the clogged drain is at your home or business. I have the high speed 'rooter' equipment that can get the job done quickly.

☞Blocked Sewer. There are two main problems - a broken line - or tree roots. PLUMBING NOW is the only company in the area that has Drain Vision™. This unique machine allows us to find your real problem quickly and virtually eliminates call-backs.

☞Gas Leak. If you smell gas don't mess around...call us right away. PLUMBING NOW is Certified, endorsed and recommended for all types of gas piping systems.

Well, that's about it except for one more thing.....

VOTE: Council insists pledging property taxes best decision that sales tax is all that will ever be used to pay these bonds? You don't understand that?" Councilman Dale Brown said.

Councilman Don Washburn responded to the petitioners' concerns by asking City Attorney Keith Stretcher why the wording of the public notice mentioned levying a property tax and if that language could be changed.

"Unfortunately, that's what the law requires," Stretcher said. "If you're going to pledge the ad valorum (property tax) as collateral you must use that language."

Menchaca said the city has pledged the property tax base for bond collateral on recent projects, including Midland International Airport.

"Then, obviously the property taxes must have gone up," Washburn said. "How much have they gone up in two years (since that project)?"

"Property taxes have actually decreased over the past five years," Menchaca replied.

The council had the option of approving, denying or deferring the issue.

Members of the council insisted that pledging the property tax base to get better bond ratings was the city's best business decision.

"I think you have got to look at all the financing available to you," Cuevas said. "You've got to look at ways to reduce the costs to reduce the cost to the taxpayers. I still believe this is all salvageable. I think that like you, mayor, I have served with each and every one of you and I know that there was no malice in any form or fashion. I know that these are honorable men. They're working very hard to try to bring this project into one with what the taxpayers thought they were voting on."

Mayor Bobby Burns reiterated those comments and assured the voters that the City Council wanted to make the best financial decision for the city.

"We have felt that using the certificates of obligation was the best business decision for the people of Midland," Burns said. "And, I probably still feel that's the best business decision."

Burns said the council may have made some mistakes, but none were intentional and that the city's best interest has always been the council's primary focus.

"In my opinion we are dealing with very honorable men up here," Burns said. "Not perfect. Not without mistakes. But I believe we're very honorable men that want to do the right thing for our city. And sometimes it's hard to find the right answer."

Burns said the council's commitment now was to gain some credibility back from the voters.

"One of the most sad things that's happened in my life, other than losing some loved ones, is knowing we've lost some credibility out there .... I think we've probably made some mistakes but they've been unintentional mistakes," Burns said.

According to the city charter, petitioners have until April 6 to submit 10 percent of the signatures of voters registered in the last regular municipal election — about 5,000, Menchaca said — held in May 1998.

Menchaca said the county is still trying to determine the exact number of registered voters from that election.

Ms. Wright said despite the City Council's decision to issue the bonds, she feels the petitioners will have the necessary signatures by April 6.

"We made a point with the 2,600-plus (signatures)," Ms. Wright said. "We've got 30 days .... We really got what we wanted."

DONATE: Bostick amazed by contributions to Hall's campaign

(From 1A)

York City and Nancy Plunk of Midland. Midland rancher, oilman and philanthropist Joe Mabee gave $2,500 to Hall's campaign. Hall also secured a $5,000 loan from Larry Oldham of Midland, according to records, and has paid off the loan.

Bostick, whose donated campaign funds totaled $8,295 from about 55 listed donors, said, "I'm flabbergasted" by Hall's fund-raising results.

"That's amazing," Bostick said. "Fifty-five grand. Oh, wow. I don't know what to say.

"The people that are supporting me are the working-class people" Bostick added. "They are behind me."

Bostick, a 42-year-old district attorney's investigator and a former deputy sheriff under Painter, received a high contribution of $775.

Painter, who was first elected sheriff in 1984, said Hall's campaign money "does not necessarily mean that he has overwhelming support."

Painter reported almost $16,000 in donations to his campaign from about 80 listed donors, in addition to a $10,000 loan from Midland businessman-rancher Bobby Holt.

The money raised for Hall's campaign "means ... that somebody is doing a tremendous job of bringing in donation money for a campaign," Painter said.

"This election, the office of sheriff of Midland County, is not for sale," Painter said. "And I think the final tally is going to be on election night (March 14) — not at the bank."

Painter said, "Personally, I'm reluctant to ask people for money. I feel bad about it. I know I have to do it. But it's a very hard thing for me to do."

Painter received at least four $1,000 donations.

"People in the past have spent more money than I have, almost every election. And what people look at is the individual that is running and what he stands for," Painter, 52, said.

Painter noted that he has a "broad base of support of people that really can't afford to pay. I have people who have made donations of $15. That was the most that that individual could give. That says a lot. I have a lot of people who give $25 donations. And that says a lot."

Painter, who was first elected sheriff in 1984 in succeeding Sheriff Dallas Smith, was unopposed in 1988. Four years later, Painter won a landslide 63 percent of the vote in a four-way race for the party's nomination for sheriff in 1992 when he was unopposed in the general election. In 1996, he garnered 57 percent of the vote in the two-way race for the party's nomination for sheriff and was unopposed in that year's general election.

The 2000 Republican Party's nominee for Midland County sheriff will be challenged in the Nov. 7 general election by Joe Lozano, a 44-year-old Midland businessman and former 10-year (1986-1996) informer for the Sheriff's Office.

GOP: McCain to meet with aides today 'and talk about our future' seemed to be a beneficial campaign issue for McCain in some states.

With Super Tuesday voting, the general election began to take shape: Vice President Al Gore bid to sweep 16 Democratic contests, pushing Sen. Bill Bradley to the brink of withdrawal. McCain's situation was not so dire, but his candidacy was flagging with a tough week of Bush-friendly contests lying just ahead.

Bush and McCain are both running short of money. The Arizona senator greeted donors at a reception in California even as the votes were being counted. Bush, who has spent most of his $70 million warchest, has ordered his finance staff to raise $10 million by the end of April.

Neither candidate could accumulate the magic number of 1,034 delegates Tuesday, but Bush hoped for a string of victories that would drive McCain from the race and allow him to turn his attention to Gore, who has gained against the GOP front-runner in head-to-head polls.

Based on early returns, Bush picked up at least 309 delegates, pushing his total to date to 479. McCain won 90 delegates Tuesday, giving him 195 so far.

Looking past McCain to a potential fight with Gore, Bush congratulated the vice president for his victories in the Democratic primaries, but said, "He is the candidate of the status quo in Washington, D.C., and he has a tough case to make in the general election."

Oklahoma Gov. Frank Keating, a staunch Bush backer, called it a "fair night for McCain," but said his fellow governor had "a fabulous night." That difference spoke volumes.

Bush's spokeswoman, Karen Hughes, suggested gently that McCain might want to reassess his candidacy, "It will be up to Sen. McCain to decide how to proceed," she said.

Bush's victory in Ohio was sobering for McCain. He had won in Michigan and hoped to go next door to establish his strength in a conventional Republican setting. But it wasn't close, running behind 60 percent to 35.

Bush's margins of victory ranged from a single-digit win in Maine to a blowout in Georgia, 68 percent to McCain's 26. He led 57 to 36 in Maryland; and 59 percent to 35 percent in Missouri.

McCain was leading in Massachusetts 64 percent to 32; Connecticut 49 to 46, Vermont 61 to 35 and Rhode Island 60 to 37.

In state after state, Alan Keyes hovered at 5 percent or below.

Bush and McCain looked ahead to three Western state primaries Saturday and six Bush-friendly Southern state primaries next Tuesday, including his homestate of Texas.

Heading into the Super Tuesday contests, McCain advisers said he had to sweep the Northeast, win the majority of New York delegates and claim victories in Ohio and California to retain a reasonable shot at the nomination. With defeat in Ohio, his comeback scenarios were few.

McCain won Massachusetts, where Gov. Paul Cellucci had promised to deliver his state to Bush.

From Maine to California, with 613 delegates at stake, Super Tuesday voters brought to a climax six weeks of seesawing contests: McCain up in New Hampshire, down in South Carolina, up in Michigan and down again last we[illegible] when Bush swept Virginia, North Dakota and Washington state to solidify his claim as the GOP's fro[illegible] runner.

Bush, whose staff is already raising money and drawing up battle plans for November, said he was prepared for a tough campaign against Gore and his Clinton administration allies.

The exit surveys across the states showed women preferring Bush by a 2-to-1 margin over McCain. Among age groups, McCain carried only younger voters; those over 30 voted for Bush. Among Catholics, where Bush had stirred a tempest, the vote was split evenly between the two candidates. By a big margin, the voters said McCain was more likely than Bush to say what he believes.

In New York and Ohio, two key battlegrounds, Bush found strength among older voters and those with less education. He was favored by voters who said taxes and education were the most important issues, according to interviews conducted at polling places.

McCain did best with men, moderates, independents, people voting in their first Republican primary and those who decided to vote in the past week. Voters who ranked Social Security and Medicare as their top issues favored McCain, as did those looking for someone who would stand up for what they believe.

The weeklong Republican campaign in Super Tuesday states fueled a debate over religious tolerance and inflamed the personal feuding between the two candidates.

McCain's scathing indictment of two evangelical leaders, offered in the heat of the South Carolina primary, lingered throughout the Super Tuesday contests. He was forced to apologize for suggesting that Pat Robertson and Jerry Falwell were "evil influences," and Bush accused his rival of "pitting one religion against another."

Even McCain acknowledged that the controversy had forced him off message. He had transformed the race into a clash of political ideologies, squandering a chance to introduce his war-hero biography and reformist agenda to voters across the country.

With his polls numbers rising, Bush looked beyond McCain and retooled his message for the general election. He focused on education and breast cancer, seeking to close the gender gap with Democrats and to court suburban voters.

And he tried to make amends for angering Catholics with his visit to a university in South Carolina that has a history of anti-Catholic views. He apologized in a letter to Catholic leaders and said in a Los Angeles speech, "Tolerance can never be assumed, and it must always be taught.' Bush also planned to expand his senior political team by bringing aboard experienced presidential campaign hands, and raise $10 million to replenish his campaign accounts.

Gore sweeps Super Tuesday primaries

The Associated Press

Al Gore swept past Bill Bradley in Super Tuesday primaries from Maine to California, pushing his rival to the brink of withdrawal in the Democratic presidential campaign. "We need to build on our record of prosperity," the vice president said, turning his focus toward November.

"He won, I lost," said Bradley, all but conceding his challenge was over.

Gore won from New York to Georgia to Ohio to California, and at several stops in between, regularly gaining 60 percent of the vote or more.

Polling place interviews with voters in every region of the country underscored the vice president's strength among core constituencies vital in Democratic primaries.

Blacks preferred Gore over Bradley by a margin of 6-1; and Hispanics by 8-1. The margin among union members was smaller, but a healthy 3-1. Gore also won the vote of independents, a key element of Bradley's electoral strategy, and a group that the Democratic nominee will need in the general election race. The exit polling was conducted by Voter News Service, a consortium of the AP and television networks.

The vice president fashioned his shutout while Texas Gov. George W. Bush was gaining the upper hand in his battle for the Republican nomination, defeating John McCain in several big-state primaries.

Gore defeated Bradley in the New England states of Maine, Vermont, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island, completing a regional sweep that began in New Hampshire's lead-off primary more than a month ago. He triumphed, as well, in Georgia, where he was winning roughly 80 percent of the vote; Ohio, roughly 70 percent; and New York, Maryland and Missouri, roughly 60 percent.

California was his as well, and easily. Apart from the 367 delegates at stake there, California's unique open primary system listed all candidates on the same ballot in a popular vote contest, an early gauge of each party's strength in the state that offers the biggest Electoral College prize in the fall.

Bradley came closest in Vermont, where he was gaining 44 percent of the vote.

In addition to primaries in 11 states, Gore won party caucuses in North Dakota. He and Bradley also were competing in caucuses in three other states and American Samoa.

In remarks to supporters in Tennessee, the vice president said Democrats were "the party of the mainstream."

He said his approach was the right one to continue the current economic expansion begun under Bill Clinton — the only time he used the president's name. In an unnamed reference to Bush's policies, he cautioned against "wasting the surplus on a risky tax scheme."

The delegate tally lagged the popular vote by hours.

By mid-evening on the East Coast, the AP delegate tally showed Gore with 975 of the 2,170 needed to win the nomination at the Democratic National Convention this summer in Los Angeles. Bradley had 284.

Fight in divided town sparks violence, dozens wounded

By Aleksandar Vasovic
Associated Press

KOSOVSKA MITROVICA, Yugoslavia — A fight between an ethnic Albanian and a Serb escalated into a street battle Tuesday in which 16 French peacekeepers and 24 civilians were wounded, a further sign of the deep ethnic hatred dividing Kosovo.

The violence broke out on the northern side of Kosovska Mitrovica, forcing U.N. officials to suspend attempts to register Serbs wanting to return to their homes on the southern, ethnic Albanian side of town. Later, they moved up the divided city's curfew by two hours to 8 p.m.

According to witnesses, an ethnic Albanian identified as Luan Miftari attacked an unidentified Serb man with a crowbar in an Albanian neighborhood on the Serb-controlled side of Kosovska Mitrovica.

An Associated Press reporter saw several Serbs rush to help the injured man, while others went after Miftari. In the crush, an ethnic Albanian opened fire from the backyard of a nearby house, seriously wounding one Serb.

"That created panic," said Lt. Matthieu Mabin, a spokesman for the French peacekeepers, who arrived after the shooting started. The French troops and police were running down a narrow side street, toward the shots, when someone threw grenades at them.

Medics scrambled to stabilize one soldier's leg wound, as another lay on the ground moaning. Those who were not hurt in the blasts dragged injured comrades toward waiting ambulances.

"Hand grenades were thrown, we don't know from whom or from where ... but it created very many injured, especially French soldiers," Mabin confirmed.

Twenty Serbs, 16 French peacekeepers and four ethnic Albanians were injured, according to Lt. Col. Patrick Chanliau, another spokesman for the French peacekeepers. A seventeenth peacekeeper was injured in a separate incident, he said, but provided no details.

Four ethnic Albanians were arrested in the shootings, said Chanliau.

The number of wounded Tuesday was the most since Oct. 12, when 33 people were wounded near the bridge that connects the ethnically divided neighborhoods.

Three miles away from the fighting, peacekeepers escorted 13 ethnic Albanians to a high-rise apartment complex in the northern part of the city, where dozens of others were repatriated last week, French peacekeepers said. Serbs have consistently protested the return of ethnic Albanians to the northern half of Kosovska Mitrovica.

By late afternoon, a rocket hit one of the buildings, slamming into the structure's seventh floor. No injuries were reported.

The violence in Kosovska Mitrovica, located 20 miles northwest of Kosovo's provincial capital Pristina, underlines the difficulties NATO faces in attempting to return the town to its prewar, multiethnic status.

The northern neighborhood was inhabited by about 3,000 ethnic Albanians and several hundred Serbs until unrest early last month caused everyone to flee the area.

Members of a group of about 50 ethnic Albanians, who said they fled to the southern side Tuesday, claimed Serbs had thrown grenades at their homes, moving from one Albanian house to the next to drive out residents.

NATO-led peacekeepers moved into Kosovo last June after a 78-day bombing campaign that ended a yearlong Serb crackdown on ethnic Albanians. Kosovo is a province of Serbia, Yugoslavia's dominant republic.

Israeli cabinet minister accused of sexual assault

By Mark Lavie
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — To his admirers, Yitzhak Mordechai is Israeli machismo personified, a gruff war hero who always fought on the front lines.

On Tuesday, Mordechai, a one-time contender for prime minister, took a leave from his job as transport minister after police announced they were investigating a complaint that he sexually assaulted a young employee. He denied the allegation.

Women's activists said the case exposes a male-dominated culture in Israel that has bred tolerance for what they contend is widespread sexual harassment of women in the workplace.

The case also has political implications: It could further weaken Prime Minister Ehud Barak's coalition government, already battered after losing a key vote on peace with Syria last week. Parliament insiders said the scandal could splinter Mordechai's already fractious six-member Center Party faction, reducing Barak's majority in parliament.

The allegations against Mordechai, 55, who is married to a woman half his age, dominated discussions Tuesday in cafes, offices and on the airwaves.

Barak made only an oblique reference to the uproar. Delivering a speech to parliament to mark International Women's Day, Barak urged women "to report on every offense against them, whoever the offender is."

Mordechai's accuser, a 23-year-old woman, filed a complaint with police on Monday, said the woman's lawyer, Shira Dunevitch.

The woman, whose name cannot be published under Israeli law, told police that on Feb. 25, Mordechai summoned her to his office, flung her onto a sofa, slipped his hand under her blouse and fondled her, Dunevitch said.

After the incident, Mordechai called the employee and asked her not to talk about it, Dunevitch said, adding that her client said it was not the first time Mordechai had harassed her.

Mordechai denied the allegations. "These things never happened," he said in a televised statement, his voice strained. He said he was taking a leave until the police investigation was complete and pledged cooperation.

Mordechai is no stranger to media scrutiny of his relationships with women: It was widely reported in Israeli media that he had an affair with his second wife, Kochava, who served under him in the military, before they were married four years ago.

Mordechai entered politics in 1996, after a long career in the military, joining the hawkish Likud Party. Almost immediately, he was catapulted to the party's No. 2 spot, behind Benjamin Netanyahu.

His reputation as a courageous military leader and his ethnic origins — Mordechai was born in Iraq, and Jews of Middle East origin have long complained of discrimination in Israel — turned him into an almost irresistible political force.

Barak alluded to Mordechai's military achievements in praising his decision to take a leave during the investigation. "He is a man who has gone through many tough things, ... who knows how to take responsibility and make tough decisions when they are required," Barak said.

Mordechai served as defense minister under Netanyahu, but left in anger in January 1999. He ran against Netanyahu and Barak for prime minister in May 1999, but dropped out a day before the vote when it became apparent he would be trounced.

Mordechai led the Center Party into Barak's six-faction coalition. He was named a deputy prime minister, then was relegated to the relatively lowly post of transport minister.

Last month, Barak named him to a three-member committee that decides on the scope of Israeli retaliation for cross-border attacks by Lebanese guerrillas.

The investigation trained a spotlight on what women's activists say is a dark corner of Israeli society. Colette Avital, a lawmaker from Barak's One Israel party, said sexual harassment is not a rarity. "It has happened in the past that people in high places believe that their positions make them irresistible," she said.

The Israel Women's Network cited a 1997 survey showing that 48 percent of working women have been targets of sexual harassment on the job. Legislator Zehava Galon of the Meretz party said 75 percent of the victims do not file complaints.

Parliament Speaker Avraham Burg praised the ministry employee for coming forward despite the "Via Dolorosa that women go through in pursuing such a complaint."

However, Likud legislator Michael Eitan said Israel was no worse than other countries when it came to sexual harassment.

Thousands protest affirmative action changes

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — About 10,000 demonstrators chanting "Shame on Bush" jammed the state Capitol grounds Tuesday, demanding that Gov. Jeb Bush back off his plan to ban racial and gender preferences in university admissions and state contracting.

Pouring into Tallahassee from around the country, the demonstrators said they feared Bush's plan to end affirmative action would erase the gains blacks and other minorities have made since the civil rights movement. Bush has put portions of the plan into effect through executive order, but other segments still need legislative approval.

"This is the first step towards resegregation," said the Rev. Timothy McDonald, who came from Atlanta.

The rally was timed to coincide with the governor's State of the State address and the opening of the legislative session.

Police estimated the crowd at 9,000 to 11,000 people. Participants included the Rev. Jesse Jackson, NAACP President Kweisi Mfume, the Rev. Martin Luther King III, members of Congress and state legislators.

Protesters sang "Amazing Grace" and "We Shall Overcome," and waved signs reading "Jeb is Bush League," "Jeb Crow," and "Bush Whack."

Vicki Whitaker's 8-year-old son Zac carried a sign that read "My Mom Needs Affirmative Action." Whitaker, of Tallahassee, became a first-generation college student when she attended Florida State University.

"This is oppression, pure and simple," she said. "It's not about color, it's about oppression. They are telling us we have to trust people will do the right thing, and we know from our history that will just not happen."

Inside the Capitol, Bush defended the plan during his address.

"The vast majority of Floridians favor the elimination of affirmative action programs," he said.

The Republican governor's One Florida plan bans consideration of race and gender in admissions to the state's 10 public universities and in the awarding of state contracts. It guarantees college admission to the top 20 percent of each high school graduating class, provided the students have taken college preparatory classes.

Texas, Washington state and California have also ended affirmative action in university admissions.

Supporters of Florida's plan say the state will boost minority enrollment in college and participation in contracting by reaching out to blacks and others.

"There is a new energy for minority outreach that is unprecedented in state government," the governor said. "Our plan is working."

But Jackson said Bush doesn't understand the importance of affirmative action.

"When you inherit the name, when you inherit legal protection, when you inherit the wealth, when you inherit skin color, when you inherit your parents' friends for advantage, you just don't understand," Jackson said.

In Miami, nearly 600 school bus drivers took the day off to attend the rally, briefly stranding thousands of students.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, right, embraces NAACP President Kweisi Mfume before Mfume speaks to thousands gathered at the Capitol building in Tallahassee, Fla., Tuesday, to protest Gov. Jeb Bush's One Florida Plan. The march was scheduled on the day the state Legislature opens its annual two-month session.

Life sentence handed down to admitted killer

SIDNEY, Ohio (AP) — A man who killed three teen-age girls and a Bible studies teacher last year pleaded guilty and received a life sentence Tuesday, avoiding a possible death penalty.

"I'm sorry for taking your daughters' lives, so sorry for doing what I did," a sobbing and trembling Lawrence Michael Hensley told victims' families during a pretrial hearing.

Hensley, 30, pleaded guilty to aggravated murder, attempted aggravated murder and kidnapping before being sentenced. He gave no reason for the killings.

Hensley had earlier convictions for exposing himself, and prosecutors said Hensley had exposed himself to one or more of the girls.

Although they don't know what happened the day of the killings, prosecutors believe Hensley was involved in "activities" with some of the girls that could have led to criminal charges, Prosecutor James Stevenson said.

"He was concerned about the possible ramifications of that information being disclosed," Stevenson said.

Hensley's neighbor, Sherry Kimbler, 16, her cousin Tosha Barrett, 16, and their friend, Amy Mikesell, 14, were beaten, stabbed and shot to death in Hensley's home July 8.

An acquaintance of Hensley's, Veronica Eagy, 22, was shot, but hid in a closet and later escaped.

After his wife, Julie, arrived home, Hensley drove with her to the house of Bible teacher Brett Wildermuth for a prayer session. Hensley shot Wildermuth in the back and fled.

Julie Hensley called police. Hensley surrendered five days after the slayings after taking hostages at a gas station.

His attorney said Hensley had a sexual addiction to exposing himself and had studied satanism as part of a spiritual crisis created by his problems.

"He couldn't control himself," Kort Gatterdam said.

Mark Kimbler called the plea bargain a good decision. He said it would have taken at least 10 years for Hensley to get the death penalty.

"He took my daughter's life. He should have lost his," Kimbler said. "But we have to settle for this."

Regional jets' return should please residents

American Eagle's announcement that it will replace its turboprop aircraft with new regional jets on four of its nine daily flights between Midland International Airport and DFW Airport is welcome news for air travelers in this area.

According to Elizabeth Ninomiya, spokeswoman for American Eagle, effective May 1 the airline will begin using two 37-seat jets on two of its flights now served by the turboprops, and two 50-seat jets on the other two flights.

She also left open the possibility that more of the regional jets will be added to the Midland schedule, saying, "The jets are very much in demand" but that the airline intends to be a mostly regional jet airline by 2004.

The announcement and Ms. Ninomiya's words should please all those travelers in Midland and Odessa who have endured the ear-numbing drone of the turboprops.

The announcement and Ms. Ninomiya's words should please all those travelers in Midland and Odessa who have endured the ear-numbing drone of the turboprops and the other inconveniences of the smaller aircraft since American pulled its jets out of Midland in 1993.

Over the past several years, Midland and Odessa have comprised one of the strongest growth areas in Texas and a center of business activity that promises continued development. Midland International has a great new airport terminal and should have high quality air service.

American Eagle's announcement brings that level of quality one step closer to what it should be. As Thomas noted, the people of the Permian Basin should be delighted.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Ash Wednesday, March 8, the 68th day of 2000. There are 298 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On March 8, 1854, U.S. Commodore Matthew C. Perry made his second landing in Japan. Within a month, he concluded a treaty with the Japanese.

On this date:
In 1702, England's Queen Anne ascended the throne upon the death of King William III.
In 1841, Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr., the "Great Dissenter," was born in Boston.
In 1874, the 13th president of the United States, Millard Fillmore, died in Buffalo, N.Y.
In 1917, Russia's "February Revolution" (so called because of the Old Style calendar used by Russians at the time) began with rioting and strikes in St. Petersburg.
In 1917, the U.S. Senate voted to limit filibusters by adopting the cloture rule.
In 1930, the 27th president of the United States, William Howard Taft, died in Washington.
In 1942, Japanese forces captured Rangoon, Burma, during World War II.
In 1944, U.S. bombers resumed bombing Berlin.
In 1965, the United States landed about 3,500 Marines in South Vietnam.
In 1986, four French television crew members were abducted in west Beirut; a caller claimed Islamic Jihad was responsible. (All four were eventually released.)

Ten years ago: Opening arguments were heard in the Iran-Contra trial of former national security adviser John M. Poindexter.

Five years ago: Two United States diplomats were killed, one injured, when their car was ambushed as they were driving to the U.S. Consulate in Karachi, Pakistan. The plummeting dollar stabilized after Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan called the decline unwarranted.

One year ago: New York Yankees baseball star Joe DiMaggio died in Hollywood, Fla., at age 84. The Clinton administration directed the firing of nuclear scientist Wen Ho Lee from his job at the Los Alamos National Laboratory because of alleged security violations. President Clinton began a tour of Central America.

Thought for Today: "We do not acquire humility. There is humility in us — only we humiliate ourselves before false gods." — Simone Weil, French philosopher (1909-1943).

War in nuclear age poses constitutional challenge

WASHINGTON — The age of tall ships and slow wind is gone, gone as a mode of transportation, gone as a means of communication. Yet in that slower age, the U.S. Constitution was written, including, of current concern, the war-making provision.

Anderson

It is a tribute to the constitutional framers that their document has held up so well, better than even Thomas Jefferson — who proposed it be rewritten every 20 years — dreamed it would. Internal combustion, flight, satellites, atomic energy, computers, etc. evolved and thrived unhampered by its framework.

But speed of travel and communication has caused some cracks to appear. The business of the world occurs more quickly now than then, and because that business includes the work of governments, the time allotted for debate suffers. The Cuban Missile Crisis in 1962 made the point all too clear where the Constitution's war-making provisions were concerned. President John F. Kennedy informed the country in his famous televised address that "It shall be the policy of this nation to regard any nuclear missile launched from Cuba against any nation in the Western Hemisphere as an attack by the Soviet Union on the United States, requiring a full retaliatory response upon the Soviet Union."

Clearly based upon the Monroe Doctrine, this declaration, however, went a step further. Kennedy unequivocally, and without congressional authorization, committed the United States on a course toward war in defense of, not just the nation, but the hemisphere. Such a decision was questioned in the backroom pre-address maneuverings, but according to Kennedy biographer, Theodore Sorensen, "The president was adamant. He was acting by Executive Order, presidential proclamation and inherent powers, not under any resolution or act of the Congress. He had earlier rejected all suggestions of reconvening Congress or requesting a formal declaration of war...."

He did summon 20 congressional leaders to the White House to explain his decision, but a precedent had been set. The president would decide when and why the United States would go to war in the Nuclear Age. Or would he? Logic demands a speed in the decision-making process comparable to the speed of modern weaponry, but the Constitution simply does not provide for such a mechanism.

Congress, however, can solve the problem. Indeed, it is a congressional problem, lest it give up one of its most important constitutional powers.

The Gulf Crisis provided a case in point. Congress followed the United Nation's example of authorizing war without declaring it.

In such a "declaration," Congress can provide an open-ended option or provide it with restrictions.

Either way, Congress asserts its authority by delegating that authority to the executive branch, but only on a case by case basis, thereby preserving its prerogatives. And that is in keeping with both the intent and letter of the Constitution.

Jack Anderson's and Doug Cohn's column is distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

Burns' motivations are honest, sincere

I would like to express my appreciation to Mayor Bobby Burns for setting the record straight regarding the details of the sports complex. At no time did I ever suspect Mayor Burns of hiding the truth about the cost of the complex.

I've known Bobby long before he became mayor of Midland and his desires for a better Midland are honest and sincere. His motives have only been to improve Midland and make it a better place for all Midlanders. I resent the insinuations by the current watchdog group that he is corrupt and intentionally hid the truth about the costs.

I believe that Midland must find other industries to develop in Midland and that the sports complex and the sports industry that comes with it will be a major positive source of revenue and economic impact for our city.

Thank you, Bobby, for being the man you are and for volunteering your time and energy, and the family sacrifices you have given to me, a voter, and the City of Midland.

I'm proud of your track record as mayor and you should be also.

David W. Carroll

Patel is man of honor, compassion

I have been a patient of P.V. Patel for over 20 years. I consider him not only my doctor but also a friend. When one inquires about P. V. in more advanced medical communities, you find that he enjoys a wonderful reputation and is considered an expert in the treatment and care of cardiovascular disease.

I believe Patel to be a man of honor and compassion and one with whom I trust my life. Midland is fortunate to have him as a member of its community.

Opponents seem to agree on all but who's in charge

I often read your endorsements and sometimes agree with them. I have a couple of observations about your endorsement in the race for sheriff. It seems to me that the objections to the current sheriff are (1) that he refuses to let the county judge and commissioners run his department and (2) that he cooperates with other agencies throughout West Texas.

It is interesting to note that in the Reporter-Telegram of Feb. 28 that Pat Bostick was quoted as saying "the STAR concept is good, we just don't need to be in charge of it." In other words it is good, but let George do it. Mike Hall was quoted as saying that "we need a heightened level of cooperation among law enforcement agencies at the community, regional, state and federal levels."

It appears that both opponents agree with different parts of what Gary Painter is doing, they just don't like the way that he does it or more specifically that it is him instead of them.

It seems to me that it would be in the best interest of the citizens of Midland County to get criminals off the street wherever and whenever it is possible to do so and I think that it is great that we have a sheriff that will take the lead in doing so.

I personally will vote for Gary Painter and I will carefully watch the records of our county commissioner's court and will oppose any of them who try to hinder the performance of the Sheriff's department whomever fills that office.

It may be that Painter is doing too good of a job, I understand that the jail is again overcrowded. Someone is arresting law violators faster than the courts can turn them loose.

ANOTHER VIEW

Arm-twisting lobbyists even go after their own

The taxpayer/voter is seeing another revelation in the world of big-time lobbying. Its practitioners, it appears, not only lobby sitting politicians, they lobby their own employers for bigger bucks and perks. ...

The leverage of lobbyists with their employers surfaced recently when it was disclosed that special-interest groups spent $697 million to lobby Congress and the federal agencies during the first six months of 1999.

That's $116 million per month spent to influence the federal government, according to the report by FEC Info, an Internet consulting firm that specializes in tracking political money.

The numbers aren't startling. The unusual twist to the matter was provided by the founder of FEC, the firm that did the survey.

The idea that the people who provide the money for lobbying are also being taken in by their hired arm-twisters doesn't provide us with much comfort. It simply shows that when they get loose, even their keepers aren't safe.

Bush's Wyly tactics are proof campaign finance reform needed

WASHINGTON — Cringing in the spotlight placed on his university's racism by John McCain, Bob Jones III has just announced a reversal of his dating policy: henceforth, a white student can buy a soda for an Asian student without being expelled.

How's that for tangible results from McCain, the real reformer? One day the extremist who provided the Bush campaign launchpad may even stop teaching that Catholicism is a "frightening cult."

Safire

Meanwhile, in California, Ohio and New York, "Wyly Coyote" struck with a last-minute TV smear. Two of George W. Bush's biggest Texas fat cats and overnight guests, the Wyly brothers, secretly put up $2.5 million in soft money to mislead voters about McCain's clean-air record. Bush professes total ignorance of his cronies' pollution of the airwaves — but never tells them to stop.

How's that for proof positive of the need for McCain's campaign finance reform? When financiers who make millions running University of Texas investments deliver a last-minute low blow from ambush, they make the case for stopping such hidden money's corruption of our politics.

On Long Island, when informed that suburban Republican women were unimpressed by orders from the Pataki machine to support the bosses' choice, Bush approved what hardball connoisseurs will remember as his "breast cancer deception."

In that too-cute trick, Bush staged an event and had a woman cut a spot that all but implied McCain was soft on cancer. The falsification of McCain's long record supporting breast cancer research relied on the sly selection of a couple of principled McCain votes against unexamined, uncompetitive federal spending.

When informed that McCain's sister, a breast cancer victim herself, called such a cruel charge "absurd," Bush showed the same insensitivity he displayed toward David Letterman's heart operation. "All the more reason to remind him," he shot back — causing Long Island Republican Rep. Peter King to marvel at the Texan's "heart of stone."

Every political pro knows that Bush's callous exploitation of women's concern about breast cancer is a card off the bottom of the deck, but worried people bombarded with that official campaign spot might be fooled.

Similarly, environmentalists know that while pollution in Bush's Houston and Dallas has worsened, McCain's clean-air record is sound — but many viewers of Wyly Coyote's $2.5 million mudslinging ad campaign will be deceived.

What does this pattern of soft-money deception and hard-money half-truth tell us about the Bush campaign?

It tells us, first, that it is sore about being caught and exposed as beholden to Pat Robertson and other "agents of intolerance" for its salvation. Bush reacted to the public reaction against the extremists by showing high dudgeon at being held responsible for his chosen bedfellows. As a result, he hardened his attitude of "anything it takes to win the nomination.".

Surely it woke up Bush and improved his style in crowds. But as the Wyly Coyote and breast cancer tricks show, early adversity toughened rather than strengthened his strategy, losing independent voters. He has shied away from the necessary one-on-one debate preparation, lately using Alan Keyes as his buffer, on Sunday ducking the longstanding invitation of "Meet the Press" to debate his chief opponent only.

Worse, by mounting the soft-money tiger, Bush — if he becomes the candidate — gives cover to the sort of smashmouth campaign that the Democrats perfected in stealing the 1996 election.

Democrats are gleeful at the prospect of ameliorating Gore's Buddhist temple scandal by exposing the soft-money chicanery of the Bush fat cats and religious extremists. Turnout's the key. The popular vote in California may again confound the pollsters.

Clinton urges passage of gun show checks bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Complaining that Congress "has kept the American people waiting long enough," President Clinton urged lawmakers Tuesday to break an eight-month deadlock and require background checks on gun show sales. But Senate Republicans reacted cooly to Clinton's plea.

"We are poles apart," said Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, chairman of a House-Senate negotiating committee charged with writing a compromise juvenile justice bill containing gun control provisions.

Clinton called on Congress to pass a gun bill by the April 20 anniversary of the Columbine High School slayings a year ago.

"How many people have to get killed before we do something?" he asked.

A week after the fatal shooting of Michigan first-grader Kayla Rolland, Clinton met privately with the 6-year-old girl's mother, Veronica McQueen. In a television interview earlier, McQueen said, " just don't want to see another parent have to bury another baby over this, over something that is preventable, something that is very, very preventable."

With election-year politics clouding Congress' agenda, Clinton summoned the leaders of the House-Senate conference committee led by Hatch. Last year, the Senate voted to institute 72 hour background checks on gun show sales, but the House rejected that provision when Republicans complained it was too strict and some Democrats complained it was too weak.

Despite White House prodding, the conference committee has not met since August.

"I know the gun lobby is cranking up pressure on Congress again," the president said. "But when first graders shoot first graders, it's time for Congress to do what's right for America's families."

Leaving the White House, Hatch appeared reluctant to heed Clinton's request for a committee meeting, saying that "might help polarize (matters) even more."

But beyond that, Hatch cited the Second Amendment's guarantee to bear arms and said, "I'm very loathe to go along with some of the suggestions that have been made by those on the other side."

Hatch said one Senate bill provision — a 72-hour waiting period sponsored by Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J. — "would basically do away with gun shows and it would push these people out into the streets where we'd have more problems with guns."

House Judiciary Committee Chairman Henry Hyde, R-Ill., promised to search — with Rep. John Conyers of Michigan, the panel's senior Democrat — for a compromise outside the formal conference.

"I'm hopeful, and we aren't going to abandon this at all," said Hyde, who has been trying to build support among20 times more likely to be turned down .... We have to have some provision to deal with them."

On Capitol Hill, Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., said Congress should proceed with the juvenile justice bill and gun control provisions that have broad support, such as a requirement for child safety locks and a ban on sales to people with juvenile records. Lott said it was unfortunate that Clinton did not want House Democrats to vote for a bill that contained those provisions but lacked the gun show check.

Conyers decried Hatch's reluctance to call a new conference session and said inaction would carry a political cost: "That's going to cost the Republicans votes at the polls in November, not us."

Faulty fasteners found in 20 Boeing jets

SEATTLE (AP)—Twenty Boeing jets now in service have faulty fasteners on their engine housings that could corrode and crack, the world's No. 1 aircraft maker said Tuesday.

In addition, an unknown number of aircraft still on the assembly line will be held up while Boeing searches for and replaces the defective fasteners, which are used to attach a plane's metal skin.

Deliveries of many Boeing planes have already been delayed because of the strike that began Feb. 9 by Boeing's engineers and technical workers.

The fasteners, mistakenly made of an aluminum alloy that is prone to cracking, were installed on planes on Boeing's Seattle-area production lines since December, Boeing spokeswoman Yvonne Leach said.

The 20 planes already in service are all 737s, 757s and 777s. Boeing would not identify the airlines involved.

The fasteners are small circular collars that hold pins in place. The problem was first reported in Tuesday's Wall Street Journal.

No fastener failures have been reported.

Boeing met Monday with the Federal Aviation Administration, which determined the problem does not pose a safety threat, Leach said.

More than 330,000 of the fasteners were delivered to Boeing by a unit of Cordant Technologies Inc. of Salt Lake City. Cordant spokeswoman Lauren Sides said the company received the wrong alloy from a supplier.

4,000 Oscar ballots disappear

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Ten mailbags with all 4,000 Oscar ballots were missing Tuesday in a real Hollywood whodunit for Academy Awards executives, a distinguished accounting firm and the Postal Service.

Part of the mystery was solved in the early afternoon when postal workers found two of the missing sacks, Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences spokesman John Pavlik said. They had been hauled from the 90210 post office to a bulk mail warehouse in South Central Los Angeles.

"They have tracked them in the third-class system and found some of the sacks in the general mail facility," post office spokeswoman Terri Bouffiou said. "We anticipate finding them all there.

A week after mailing the ballots, tucked in business envelopes with 33-cent, first-class postage, the Academy learned members still hadn't received them.

The deadline for returning ballots is March 21. The Oscars are March 26.

"We mailed the ballots, 4,000 of them, to Academy members last Wednesday and Price Waterhouse Coopers took the 10 mailbags to the Beverly Hills Post Office and left them there as would anybody," Pavlik said.

The mailing had been treated with considerable fanfare by the Oscar people, who invite the news media to witness the annual ritual at the Academy's offices.

If all of the ballots aren't found, the numbers on them will be invalidated and new ones will be printed and mailed as early as Tuesday night.

Ballots have been lost by the post office before. In 1982, nominating ballots were mistakenly stuck into a bin marked for non-priority bulk mail. They were found in time.

Curved paths on Capitol lawn to help Congress meditate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of Congress accustomed to navigating the mazes of lawmaking will have one or more labyrinths — curved paths intended to help walkers reach inner peace — laid out for Lent on the Capitol's East Lawn.

Beginning Monday, members and visitor to the Capitol will be able to walk through the labyrinths and meditate. Sandra Wasko-Flood, an artist from nearby Alexandria, Va., won approval for the project through her congressman, Democrat Rep. James Moran.

She belongs to the Labyrinth Society of New Canaan, Conn., which promotes building them throughout the United States.

"A labyrinth is a simple path ... tool for personal, psychological and spiritual transformation," the society says. "They are right-brain activity enhancers."

Wasko-Flood said in an interview she will start work on "Labyrinths for Peace: 2000" on March 12, the first Sunday in Lent.

"For Christians," she said, "the connection is with Christ's redemption of mankind, which is a kind of transformation."

In Christian doctrine, redemption is symbolized by Christ's crucifixion and resurrection celebrated at Easter, the end of Lent.

Beginning Monday and through March 25, Wasko-Flood and her friends will lay out curved paths, enclosed in circles, each morning on the East Lawn of the Capitol. Each circle may be 12 feet to 48 feet across. She would like to have the curved paths wide enough for wheel chairs and marked with little surveyor's flags about a foot high.

On any particular day, there may be one or more labyrinths, she said. She is looking for musicians, especially flute-players, she said, to station themselves near the labyrinths to provide accompaniment. Details have not been worked out, but the labyrinths will be dismantled every day at 5 p.m. and retraced next morning.

Wasko-Flood and the Labyrinth Society draw a distinction between a maze and a labyrinth. A labyrinth, they say, consists of only one clear path, though it may curve several times around a circle, while a maze offers many choices and wrong turnings. She noted that standard dictionaries do not make this distinction.

Wasko-Flood said the idea for a labyrinth on the Capitol grounds originated in Chaco Canyon, N.M, amid the ruins of structures built by American Indians about 900 years ago. She was sitting in a kiva, she said, a spiritual center of the builders.

Council defers vote on foreign trade status

By Ian Heald
Staff Writer

The City Council deferred an issue allowing Phillips Petroleum to import foreign oil tariff free through Midland's Foreign Trade Zone.

Councilmen said they wanted to take their time, learn more about the issue and make a final decision later.

"I don't think I have enough information to make an informed decision," Councilman Jose Cuevas said. "I'm not too sure I don't support it. I just needed more time to study it."

Councilman Berry Simpson supported granting FTZ status to Phillips.

"If any of us can find a way to eliminate operating costs by 10.5 cents per barrel I say we jump on it," Simpson said. "I think we need to be a good neighbor and approve it."

According to Mark Headley, spokesman for Phillips Petroleum, based in Borger, the company was seeking FTZ status to eliminate the 10.5 cent per barrel tariff it currently pays to import foreign oil.

The FTZ status could have saved Phillips roughly $450,000 a year, Headley said.

"Denying the Foreign Trade Zone status would have the potential to decrease possible numbers and possible sales of Permian Basin crude oil," Headley warned.

'Denying the Foreign Trade Zone status would have the potential to decrease possible numbers and possible sales of Permian Basin crude oil.'

—Mark Headley, spokesman for Phillips Petroleum

Headley insisted they'd prefer to have status in the Permian Basin, but if unsuccessful could go to a Gulf Coast city, such as Corpus Christi, to attain status.

"If 10.5 cents a barrel is all we're talking about, then this has no impact on domestic crude oil and our ability to sell our oil," Landreth said. "I as an independent am not concerned."

"We're a producer here, too," Headley added. "Phillips Petroleum isn't going to do anything to hurt themselves and not anything to hurt the producers here."

Local producer Roger Allen said it was impossible to gauge the full affects of granting Phillips FTZ status without more information.

"I don't know anything about this but I'd like to study it," said Allen. "I just like to say let's have a little time to look at it and study it."

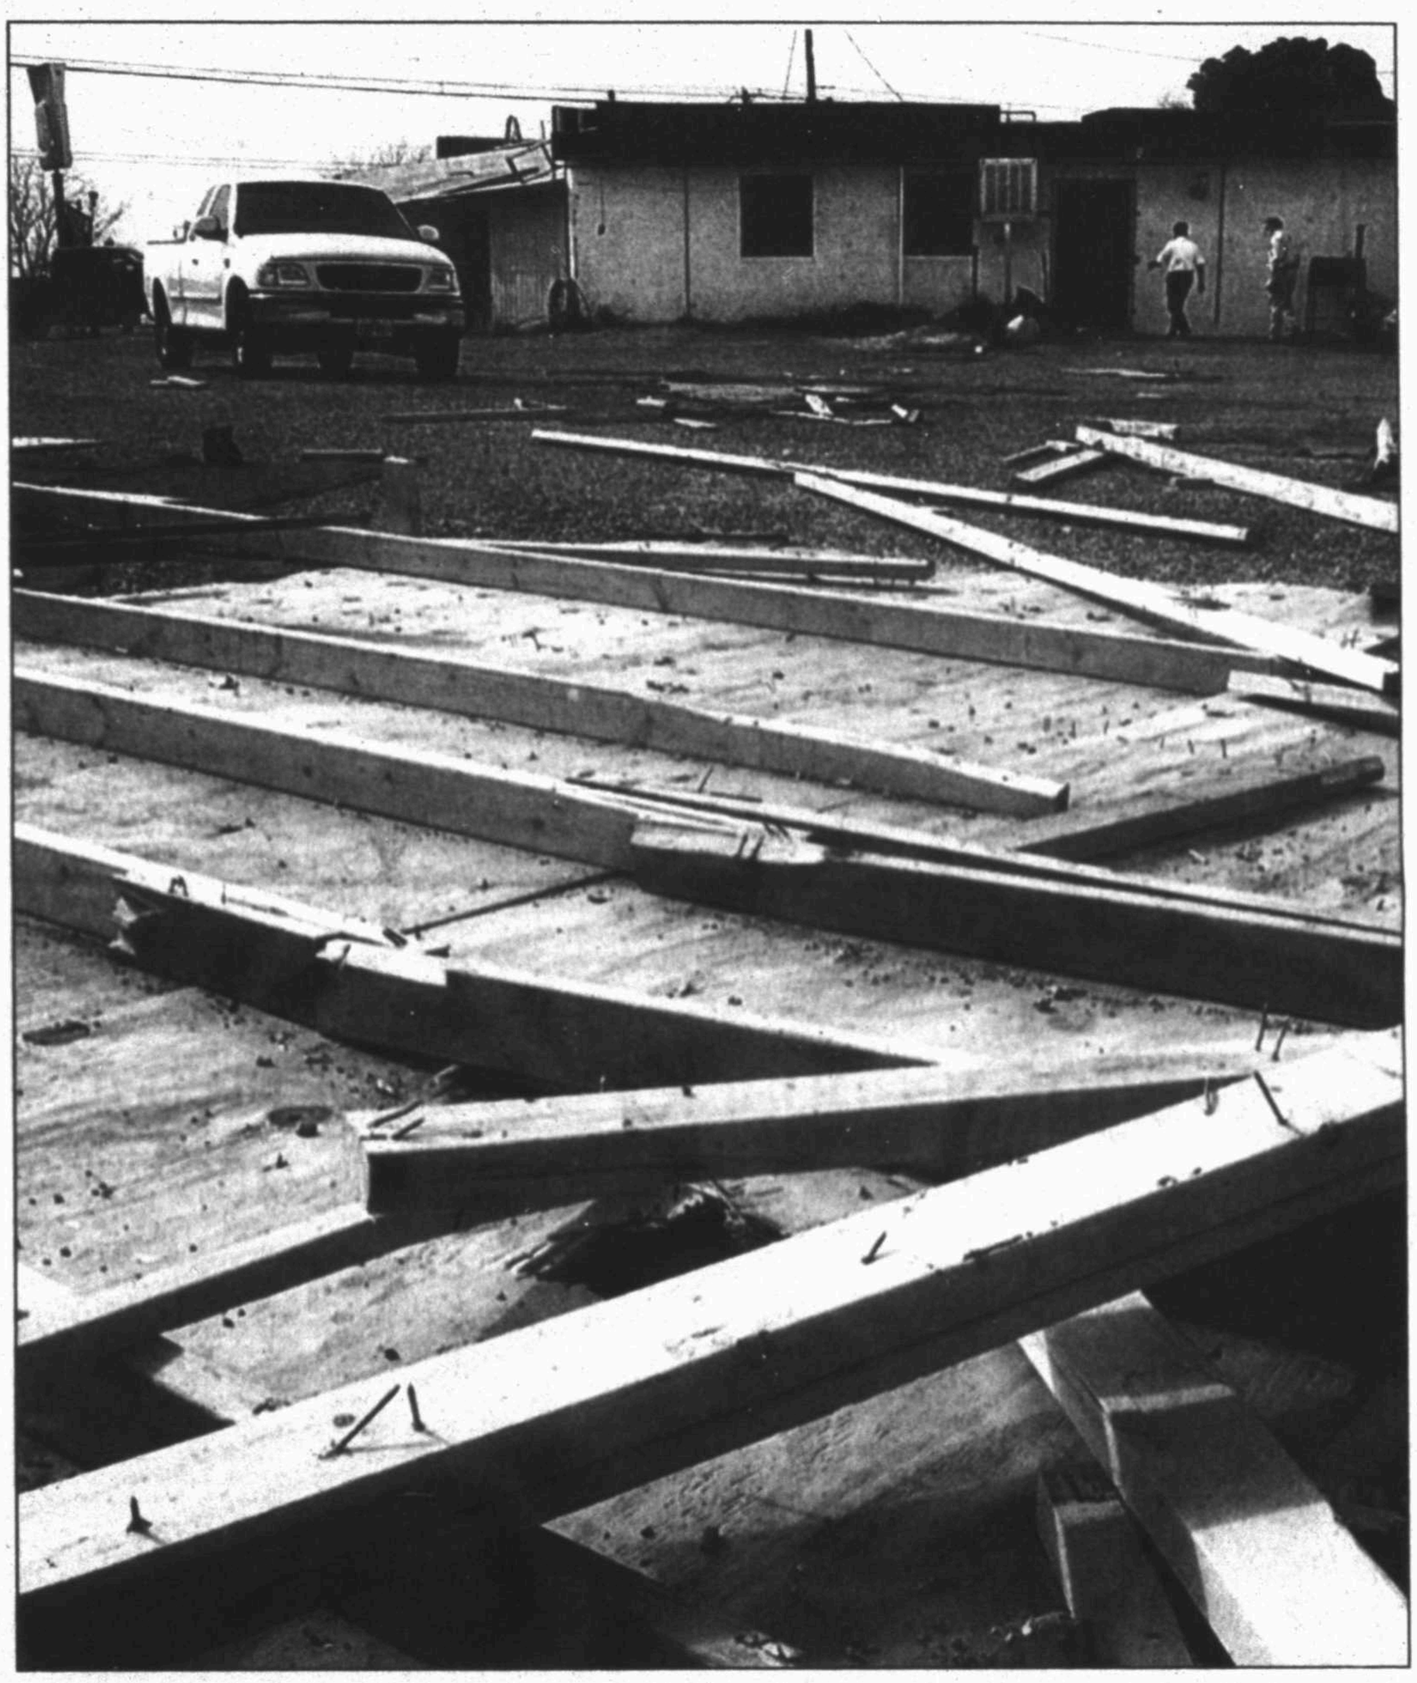
Bill Mathis, another local producer, insisted this was a bad deal for Midland.

"Let someone else be the bad guy," said Mathis, who felt that the burden on granting Phillips FTZ status should be put on the shoulders of another city. "Let's not be the bad guy. Let's don't do anything to make it easier to bring foreign crude into competition with producers in Texas and the Permian Basin … . I'm a land man and I make my living making deals. And gentlemen, I can tell you this is a bad deal for the city of Midland. Mr. Mayor, members of the council, I feel it would be a terrible injustice to vote on this."

Headley maintained the best decision would be for the council to grant Phillips the FTZ status, but said if denied, there are other cities requesting him to apply there.

"I'm going to run it whether I get this status or not," Headley said. "We would like to partner with the city of Midland and the Midland Foreign Trade Zone. It made sense to the Permian Basin to keep a customer alive and viable for them to be able to sell their crude to."

Wicked Wind



Brian Adamcik/ Reporter-Telegram

High winds tore roofing off Manuel's Country Store at 3905 South Highway 349 Tuesday. A storm system moving through West Texas produced gusts as fast as 54 mph and damaged power lines from Midland to Andrews.

Fast-moving storm makes West Texas skies dark and dirty

By Rick McLaughlin
Staff Writer

An old-fashioned West Texas dust storm — mixed with rain and driven by winds up to 54 mph — sent muddy rain, tumbleweeds and more across the plains of the Permian Basin Tuesday.

The mixture of wind and dirt turned overcast gray skies of morning into a darkened ocher-colored curtain by late morning. The dark skies, wind and muddy rain caused traffic to slow and some to stop on Interstate 20, where some windows of a van were blown out.

The roof of Manuel's Country Store on Rankin Highway, south of Midland, was torn from the building and scattered over the area about 1:30 p.m., according to neighbor Cindy Magee. She said a 14-foot by 20-foot storage building was "demolished" and the roof of a neighboring mobile home was damaged.

Damage to a roof at 4009 S. County Road 1184 was also reported by the Midland County Sheriff's Office.

"A strong storm system out of New Mexico, colliding with warm moist air from the Gulf of Mexico, produced a variety of weather conditions," said meteorologist Brian Curran of the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

"That produced windy and muggy conditions this morning and a line of thunderstorms that moved through the Permian Basin late this morning and early afternoon," Curran added.

"We had a tornado watch in effect for much of the central and northern Permian Basin this afternoon. We had a report of hanger damage at Sky West Airport south of Midland."

Curran said the damage reported at Manuel's on the Rankin Highway was due to a "gustnado," something more than a big wind gust, but not really a tornado, although it may look like one. "We saw it real well," Curran said of the mini twister, "and it did not have signatures in it for a tornadic storm."

However, the collision of the cold air with the moist air can produce winds at 60 to 80 miles mph. "It's almost impossible to warn for them because they're small and brief," he said of the gustnados. The storm also produced 0.10 of an inch of much-need rain.

Midland County Fire Marshal and Emergency Management Coordinator Dale Little said storage buildings and shingles "were flying here and there with lots of blowing sand and dirt" in different parts of the county. One mobile home he saw was blown loose from it tie-downs, while another mobile home on Cotton Flat Road south of County Road 130 suffered roof damage.

TXU District Manager Mike Navarro said the power utility had almost no trouble in Midland but "we did have a little trouble in Monahans, Andrews, Odessa and Wink with 10 poles down.

"We'd have blocks of customers here and there out for few minutes to an hour," Navarro noted. "There were 500 customers in Odessa out for four minutes. In Wink, there were 100 out for an hour."

But Midland was virtually trouble free, with no poles down, he said.

"There were isolated outages, but no more than a customer or two out at a time."

Boundary change meetings off, MISD says

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

The Midland Independent School District announced Tuesday that anticipated meetings with plaintiff-intervenors regarding boundary changes are off.

"The two groups from LULAC are not going to be participating," said board President Becky Oekerman. "Dr. (Viola) Coleman is still interested in talking and that is something we are pursuing."

By the close of the discussion, however, even talks with the Coleman intervenors had been canceled. The board decided by consensus vote to place an action item on the next agenda to adopt a boundary plan.

On Feb. 11, the board held a special meeting and decided that one solution to its boundary change woes would be a mediated meeting between the school board and members of the three plaintiff-intervenor groups.

According to Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr., representatives from the League of United Latin American Citizens will not meet with the board unless they can do so in a closed meeting.

Cotton, Bledsoe, Tighe and Dawson attorney Ellen House, who represents the school district, advised the board that it can not meet in executive session for this matter.

"A formal committee of the board is subject to the Open Meetings Act just like the board is," said Ms. House.

LULAC representatives have not responded to Reporter-Telegram queries as to their hesitance.

As for the boundary plan, Baressi said the only plan that meets the requirements of the settlement agreement is the 14-school plan.

The 14-school plan currently on the table calls for busing 123 elementary school students from Bush to Long and 155 rural students to Bush from Scharbauer.

Bowie would receive 86 Emerson rural students. Burnet would move 137 rural students to Rusk. Milam would move 93 students to Emerson.

In addition to moving 86 students to Bowie, Emerson would move 61 students to Santa Rita and receive 93 students from Milam. Pease would move 123 students to Santa Rita. South would move 122 students to Parker and receive 128 students from Travis.

According to Baressi, 1,028 students would be bused under the proposal, compared to 3,000 students being bused under the cluster system. Of those 1,028, 461 are rural students and would be bused, regardless of the assignment plan.

Anglo students make up 338 or 32.9 percent of those being bused; Hispanic students, 591 or 57.5 percent; African-American students, 94 or 9.1 percent; Asian students, 3 or 0.3 percent and Native American students, 2 or 0.2 percent.

That plan was presented at a public forum Feb. 8, and the 600-plus parents in attendance voiced strong objection to the plan. Many parents even advocated sticking with the cluster system if the board could not come up with a plan that maintained neighborhood schools while keeping busing equitable. In the wake of the meeting, several board members also said they would have trouble approving the plan.

At a subsequent meeting on Feb. 22, the board presented an alternative plan, the 12-school plan.

That plan would achieve so called "natural integration" for just 12 schools instead of the 14 drawn out in the settlement agreement. However, Baressi said the latest map will achieve the same results with less busing.

"It involves fewer students," said Baressi. "What we are trying to do is eliminate the busing of any student, who

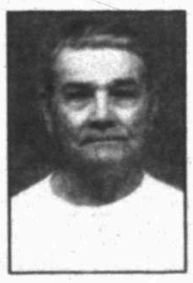
Man arrested in connection with sexual assault of 5-year-old girls

By Rick McLaughlin
Staff Writer

A 69-year-old Midland man was released from jail Monday in connection with two reported incidents of aggravated sexual assault involving two 5-year-old girls at Midland Christian School.



Bowen

Thomas Boyd Bowen, an employee of the school, was arrested Monday afternoon after one of the girls told a family member that Bowen had allegedly assaulted her, said police spokeswoman Tina Jauz.

Bowen was released from the Midland County jail on a $10,550 bond.

The assaults were said to have been at Midland Christian School, 2001 Culver St., and were believed to have occurred Feb. 29. Police were notified Thursday, which is when an investigation began, Ms. Jauz said.

'The police are conducting an investigation and I think it would be better if we didn't make any comments.'

— Eddie Lee, president of Midland Christian School

Midland Christian School Superintendent Eddie Lee said that no one from the school could comment at this time.

"The police are conducting an investigation and I think it would be better if we didn't make any comments," he said.

If convicted, aggravated sexual assault of a child is a first-degree felony with a sentence that can range from five to 99 years or life in prison and a fine up to $10,000.

Eagle Award

Brandon Carr, son of Larry and Becky Carr, was honored at a dinner given in his behalf recognizing his achievements of Scouting highest rank. Brandon, a freshman at Midland College, was a member of Troop 19.

While with Troop 19, Brandon demonstrated his leadership by becoming senior patrol leader and a patrol leader for National Jamboree Troop 1639, which visited Washington D.C. and Fort A.P. Hill in Virginia.

He earned 31 merit badges and was also a Cub Scout. Brandon completed a High Ropes C.O.P.E. course at Wehenapay Mountain Camp near Cloudcroft, N.M. as well as a Horsemanship Cavalcade at the Buffalo Trail Scout Ranch near Ft. Davis. In addition, Carr has made two 60-mile treks at Philmont Scout Ranch, serving as crew leader on a 1998 expedition.

His Eagle project was to supervise and organize men and material for the installation of a drip irrigation system for the city of Midland tree nursery, which required several weekends and volunteers to complete. His accomplishments include his graduating from Lee High School and making the dean's list at Midland College. He enjoys writing and is an active member of AMPTGARD in Midland.

A son, Eric S. Hignojoz, preceded her in death in 1997.

Survivors include her husband, Angelo Riojas of Midland; her parents, Benino Sanchez Sr. and Eugenia C. Sanchez of Toyah, Texas; her daughters, Monica L. Hignojoz of Abilene, Stacie Riojas and Kristen Hignojoz, both of Midland; her sisters, Adela George of Pecos, Maria McComb of Smithland Kentucky, Seninda Sutton of Corpus Christi, Cruz Millan of Andrews, Josepha Jimenez of Pecos, Eufemia (Mary) McKern of Salem, Oregon, Olga Lopez of Pecos, and Anna McIntyre of Lee Summit, Missouri; brothers, Benino Sanchez Jr. of Pecos and Ramon Sanchez of Odessa; a grandson, Marcus Lee Hignojoz; and 29 nieces and nephews.

Pallbearers will be Lionel M. Acosta, David Gill, Joey Garcia, Nicholas Arce, Anthony Lopez, and Robert McKern.

Obituary & Death Notice policy

There is no charge for death notices of residents or former residents of Midland or for those who have Midland relatives. We also publish death notices for residents of the surrounding West Texas area.

Free death notices include date and place of death, service and burial information, funeral home handling arrangements, date and place of birth, brief biography, survivors and memorials. A longer, more detailed obituary is available for a charge. It may include tributes, expanded biography, organizational associations, notes of appreciation, pallbearers, honorary pallbearers and a photo.

Deadline for both free death notices and paid obituaries is 3:30 p.m. and information must be either received from or verified by a funeral home.

ISSUE: Baressi encourages feedback

The 12 school plan would bus 766 students instead of the 1,028 bused in the 14-school plan now on the table or the 1,169 bused in the districts initial boundary plan.

The 12-school plan would still seek to integrate a total of 16 schools. Baressi said the difference is that the 12-school plan would have four magnet schools instead of two.

Baressi said Tuesday, however, that the 12-school plan isn't likely to be approved by Judge Edward Prado: the federal judge overseeing the unitary status case. That plan, in fact, already has been rejected by the U.S. Justice Department.

Trustee James Fuller has presented a third plan or at least a wrinkle in the 12-school plan. He is asking that the district consider a modified cluster system that would pair racially identifiable schools with one another for an exchange of fifth- and sixth-graders.

The 14-school plan, without modification, would have nine racially identifiable schools (three Anglo identifiable and six minority identifiable), before the addition of magnet schools. The 12-school plan would have 11 racially identifiable schools (five identifiable as Anglo and six as minority). Magnet schools in either plan would lower the number to seven racially identifiable schools.

Fuller is proposing that the racially identifiable schools be neighborhood schools through fourth grade, with fifth grade going to one school and sixth grade going to the other school in the pairing. Schools falling within the integration range would be left as strictly neighborhood schools.

Baressi said that proposal would be part of the March 28 discussion.

He also told parents and teachers at the Midland Council of PTAs Monday that although a majority of parents speaking at the public forums were not in support of current plans, that the same sentiment may not be shared by the entire community.

In fact, he encouraged those parents to call their board members and express their wishes about how the board should proceed. The choices available are: keeping the cluster system, until a better plan can be adopted, the 14-school plan, the 12-school plan or the 12-school plan with a modified cluster.

Baressi said he would encourage all parents to call any or all board members and express their wishes. He emphasized that all board members, although elected as single district members, represent the entire community and that parental input will help them make their decision.

Board members for MISD are Ms. Oekerman, Fuller, George Lara, Shane Boring, Glen Bufler, Martha Manulik and Pat Hodges.

Board members can be reached by calling:

- Pat Hodges 699-0285
- Fuller, home 682-2864, work 685-4625
- Boring, home 570-0890, work 563-2222
- Ms. Manulik, home 682-8198, work 682-9495
- Bufler, home 689-7542, work 685-7365
- Ms. Oekerman, home 697-3563, work 552-2141
- George Lara, home 682-3439, work, 686-7868

Also at Tuesday's meeting, the board discussed alternatives to a site for the new Midland High School. At the last meeting, Downtown Midland Inc. made a presentation asking the board to consider building the new campus at its current downtown location.

Tuesday, the board decided to ask the group to seek confirmation from downtown property owners that they would not block such a move. The board's major concern regarding a downtown site is that they not have to use eminent domain to acquire the property. The board also heard of two alternative sites for construction in south and southeast Midland.

The board would make a decision about the site at the March 28 meeting or its April 11 meeting.

The board also met in executive session with attorney's to discuss questions of Midland High School Principal Neil Richmond's use of his district-issued cell phone. The board did not take any action. According to Baressi, the board saw results of the district's investigation into the matter and received advice from attorneys on how to proceed.

Governor prepares to party Texas-style

As voters from Maine to California cast their ballots in primaries that will yield 613 delegates — more than half the total needed for the Republican presidential nomination — Bush spent the day in Austin tending to state business.

The governor who's spent much of his recent time out of Texas and on the campaign trail went for a midmorning jog, then went through his mail, wrote a few letters, and met with staff and Lt. Gov. Rick Perry, said spokeswoman Linda Edwards.

"He really did a lot today, " she said.

Later, Bush told reporters he is studying a request by civil rights groups to remove an image of the Confederate battle flag from the Texas Supreme Court building.

But as daylight faded over the Texas capital, attention turned from state business to presidential politics.

Bush hoped to celebrate coast-to-coast victories over GOP challenger John McCain at a party scheduled for Tuesday evening at the Four Seasons Hotel. Early results showed Bush won primaries in Maine, Missouri, Maryland, Ohio and Georgia.

Several hundred fellow Republicans and other Bush supporters attended the party, which the campaign sponsored. Texas teacher Phyllis Hunter was to introduce Bush to partygoers.

Hunter was principal at Northern California's Hayward Unified School District before being appointed to Region IV Education Service Center as a consultant for the Texas Statewide Reading Initiatives, part of Bush's push to have all children reading by third grade.

"Reading is the new civil right. It is a gateway skill that allows our children to be successful in the new millennium, " Hunter said Tuesday. "Governor Bush will work hard to ensure that no child is left behind. "

As secret service agents carried red, white and blue balloons into the ballroom where Bush was scheduled to speak, a crowd of supporters cheered when Bush victories were broadcast on big screen televisions.

Backstreet Boys concert attendance gets students suspended

Christian school in San Antonio punishes four students who attended a concert that violates the school rule of 'involvement with inappropriate music.'

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A private Christian school has suspended four students for attending a Backstreet Boys concert.

Sunnybrook Christian Academy issued the suspensions late last week because the students broke a school rule barring "involvement with inappropriate music," school administrator Trudie Perez said Tuesday.

The Backstreet Boys, a band that's wildly popular with teen-age girls, played to a packed Alamodome crowd last Wednesday night. Once school officials confirmed some students had attended, they gave them one-day suspensions.

Two students completed their suspensions and were back in school Friday. Another will complete hers upon returning from an out-of-town trip with her family.

A fourth student, high school senior Jason Trejo, and his family are complaining about the school's policy.

Trejo was enrolled in the school more than two years ago by a former stepfather he was living with, Perez said.

Trejo's mother, with whom he now lives, complained about the music policy and refused to sign a statement saying she agrees with it and other school rules, Perez said, adding that his mother has filled out papers to withdraw him from the private school.

"I pointed out, he has to abide by our rules if he's going to be here," the administrator said. "We did not expel him. He was withdrawn."

John Bernal, Jason Trejo's stepfather, said the boy's mother refuses to sign a statement agreeing with the school policy. The family maintains the policy on inappropriate music says nothing about concerts.

The Christian school forbids "involvement" with music groups such as the Backstreet Boys because of some song lyrics, Perez said.

"They have some good music, but some of the music, I have been told, has certain sexual references," Perez said. She cited the band's song lyrics, "Are you sexual?" and "I want to touch your body all night."

"That's not the message that we want to convey to our young people," Perez said. "We send the message of sexual abstinence."

The school has 315 students in kindergarten through 12th grade.

Trejo, who is scheduled to graduate in three months, may have to finish the year at a public school, his family said.

Jetliner comes within 39 feet of gas pumps

By Erica Werner
Associated Press

BURBANK, Calif. — A day after a jet carrying 142 people hurtled off a runway and skidded to a stop just short of a gas station, everyone was talking more about what could have happened than what did happen.

After landing at Burbank from Las Vegas, Flight 1455 slammed through a metal wall and fence Sunday evening in a cloud of smoke and stopped with its nose just 39 feet short of the gas pumps at a Chevron station on Hollywood Way.

The Southwest Airlines Boeing 737-300 struck a car, pinning its hood under the aircraft, but the driver and her 4-year-old daughter weren't hurt. Fifteen passengers on the plane were slightly injured.

Airport shuttle bus driver Abayomi Omolewu said he and two other drivers were waiting to be sent on a call when they saw the plane blast through the fence and wall.

"We saw it was going to crash into the gas station and the gas station was going to get into a flame," he said Monday. "That's why we were like, 'Man, is that plane going to fall on us?'"

Omolewu said he and the two other drivers ran. Omolewu turned around to grab his cell phone, but because of the smoke, he couldn't see to dial.

As the noise subsided, Omolewu and others ran toward the plane, where they helped frightened passengers climb down off the wing and off an emergency chute.

The 54-ton jetliner still had about 1,000 gallons of fuel in its 5,311-gallon tanks. Thousands of gallons of gas were stored at the Chevron station. Although the plane leaked about 10 gallons of fuel, there was no fire.

Southwest called it the worst accident in its 29-year history.

"My feeling is they were very fortunate that it wasn't more serious than it was," said Southwest CEO Herb Kelleher. The airline, known for its bargain ticket prices, has never had a fatality.

Investigators said the cause of the crash was not yet known.

The battered plane was hoisted by cranes Monday and towed to a secure area of the airport. Cockpit data recorders were removed from the aircraft and flown to the National Transportation Safety Board's lab in Washington for analysis.

The pilot, a Southwest veteran since 1988 with more than 18,000 flying hours, will be interviewed Tuesday, said Jefferey R. Rich, the NTSB's lead investigator. The weather was clear at the time of the crash and the jet, built in 1985, had its last maintenance check on Thursday.

The plane landed on a relatively short runway — 6,032 feet — at Burbank-Glendale-Pasadena Airport, northeast of downtown Los Angeles. The runway is well known to arriving travelers, who have to brace themselves for the rapid stop when thrust reversers and brakes are applied.

Depending on weight, flap configuration and runway conditions, a Boeing 737-300 requires between 3,200 feet and 4,500 feet to land, Boeing spokesman Craig Martin said.

"I have no idea what the gross weight of that particular airplane was," he said. "There are a whole lot of things that go into it. ... It depends on what flaps they were using, wet or dry runway, on and on and on."

Asked whether the runway was long enough, Rich would only say: "I wouldn't necessarily consider it short, I wouldn't consider it long."

Energy department probes nuclear contamination

By H. Josef Herbert
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Energy Department is investigating whether a contractor at the Pantex nuclear weapons plant in Texas properly reported contamination of a nearby underground water source.

Officials at the plant acknowledged this week that a toxic industrial solvent used at the plant had been found in the Ogallala Aquifer, which is near the plant and also provides irrigation and drinking water for Amarillo.

According to DOE officials, the solvent, trichloroethylene, or TCE, was found at levels significantly greater than federal drinking water standards during testing in June. It was found again, at lower levels, in September and November.

The contractor, Mason & Hanger Corp., of Colorado Springs, Colo., which operates the weapons plant, did not disclose the contamination until last Friday, although the high June reading was found at a test site a half-mile from a well field that provides about a third of Amarillo's drinking water.

"I'm concerned about the discovery ... as well as the delay in reporting the information," Energy Secretary Bill Richardson said in a statement Tuesday. He said he wanted to make certain the issue was promptly addressed.

The Pantex plant is part of the Energy Department's complex of nuclear weapons facilities. Its primary function is to dismantle nuclear warheads and storage plutonium "pits" from dismantled weapons.

Officials of the department's Office of Environmental Safety and Health are to investigate whether Pantex's monitoring and reporting plans are sufficient and whether procedures were followed, Richardson said.

He also directed that Pantex officials host a public meeting to make information available on groundwater monitoring at the plant and develop a response plan to prevent further contamination.

The Energy Department has for years denied allegations by local environmentalists that deep groundwater, which serves as the source of irrigation and drinking water for the Texas Panhandle community, was being contaminated by activities at the weapons plant.

TCE, a solvent used to clean machinery, "was discovered during regular quarterly sampling" of a test well in June, September and November 1999, but this was not disclosed until March 1, the Energy Department said. It said wells belonging to property owners near the plant were being sampled to determine if contaminants are present. No results were given for any of the tests.

Pantex is the nation's primary nuclear weapons disassembly site and serves as the interim storage site for more than 8,000 pits from dismantled warheads.

Court orders slain teen's father to quit spending donations

By Stephen Hawkins
Associated Press

FORT WORTH — A court has ordered the father of Amy Robinson to account for money he received through a fund he set up after his 19-year-old daughter's 1998 torture and killing.

Robinson's grandmother has filed a civil lawsuit against Ben Grogan, claiming he misused donations intended for the girl's funeral and alleging he may not be the teen's biological father.

"They can say whatever they want. My attorney is going to take care of this for me," Grogan said Tuesday after a hearing on the case.

Carolyn Bradley, the grandmother and court-appointed executioner of Robinson's estate, contends in her suit that Grogan bought motorcycles and a pickup truck for his girlfriend.

Tarrant County Probate Judge Steve M. King gave Grogan 45 days to account for donations intended for Robinson's estate. The judge also prohibited Grogan from spending any more of the money or disposing of any assets attained with such funds.

Larry Wright, one of Bradley's lawyers, said records indicate more than $13,000 is in question.

"What this hearing was about is to get an accounting of the money ... to find out what was accumulated, what happened to those funds and to trail it so it can be brought into the estate," said Daniel Smith, another attorney for the grandmother. "We're kind of on the outside looking in."

The injunction issued by King was a modification of a ruling a week earlier that basically prevented Grogan from spending any money at all.

Robert Neville Jr. and Michael Wayne Hall both have been convicted of capital murder and sentenced to die for the February 1998 killing. Both are appealing their sentences.

Robinson, who was developmentally disabled, was riding her bike to work at a Kroger grocery store when Hall and Neville picked her up. The girl knew Hall, who also had worked at the store.

Grogan's attorney said an affidavit on file with the court provides DNA evidence that his client was Robinson's biological father.

"He is the father, and always held the position and the obligation of being the father," attorney George Griffith said. "He had a relationship with Amy so it's kind of a surprise now that they contend he is not the father."

Grogan says he paid most of Robinson's funeral costs, and acknowledges without elaborating that he spent some of the money on other things.

Bradley's lawyers say a victims' rights group paid for the funeral and that the grandmother bought a headstone for Robinson's grave.

Refineries settle 7-year-old lawsuit with $6 million payment

CORPUS CHRISTI — Two refineries will pay $6 million to 3,300 Corpus Christi households in a settlement that has taken almost seven years to reach.

The plaintiffs originally filed the lawsuit against several refinery companies, and all but two of the defendants — Coastal and Javelina — settled over the past few years.

The other companies will pay about $18.2 million as part of those other settlements, for a total award of about $24.5 million.

Plaintiffs' attorneys are expected to make between $5.3 million and $6 million from the settlement, with the remainder of the more than $24.5 million divided proportionately among the plaintiffs depending on how close they live to the refineries, the Corpus Christi Caller-Times reported in Tuesday's editions.

The final settlement with Coastal and Javelina marks the end of a class-action lawsuit that began more than seven years ago. The lawsuit alleged that the refineries were liable for air and ground contamination and damage to properties.

Coastal Corp. operates the Coastal and Javelina refineries in Corpus Christi, and those two refineries were the only defendants to go to a jury trial. The Coastal and Javelina trial started in January but ended in a mistrial two weeks later after a witness gave testimony that had been previously ruled inadmissible by a judge.

The trial began again with a second jury on Feb. 17, with the settlement reached late last week before the jury started its deliberations, said Steve Hastings, one of about seven attorneys representing the plaintiffs.

In earlier out-of-court settlements with refineries, Amerada Hess paid $2.2 million, Southwestern paid $6.9 million, Champlin paid $1.6 million and Oxy-Chem paid $575,000. Those settlements already have been distributed to the plaintiffs.

Settlements that have been agreed upon but not yet paid to plaintiffs include those in which Koch Industries will pay $1.2 million; Citgo, about $5 million; and American Chrome and Chemical, $1.1 million.

Gambling ring busted

HOUSTON — A federal grand jury on Tuesday indicted four men, two from Boston, for allegedly running a sports betting business.

Kenneth Miller, 38, and Jeffrey Lynn Warren, 40, both of Houston; and Bostonians Thomas Whelan Malloy and Joseph Figueroa, both 28, face up to five years in federal prison if convicted of violating gaming laws, prosecutors said.

The indictment charges the men with operating their bookmaking business between September 1995 and March 1997.

Fall of Alamo remembered

SAN ANTONIO — The fall of the Alamo was remembered during a ceremony Monday, 164 years after the former Spanish mission fell to the Mexican army.

The San Antonio Living History Association ponsors the Dawn at the Alamo ceremony each year.

The event, which features people dressed in costumes, reminds the public of what occurred March 6, 1836, when about 5,000 Mexican soldiers stormed the Alamo.

More than 180 men who remained inside the former Spanish mission died. Less than two months later, the Mexican army was defeated at San Jacinto.

The crowd grew hushed as the "deguello," or death march, sounded by musicians from the Jefferson High School fine arts magnet program signaled the start of the assault on the Alamo, the San Antonio Express-News reported for its Tuesday editions.

A narrator read from the eyewitness account of Mexican Lt. Col. Jose Enrique de la Pena of the chaos that reigned during the early morning battle.

The ceremony also included 13 candles for the 13 days of the siege, the placing of wreaths at the Alamo Cenotaph and a musket salute to the Alamo dead.

Former House speaker dies

AUSTIN — Byron M. Tunnell, the former railroad commissioner best known for instituting a Statehouse dress code while 64th Speaker of the Texas House, died Tuesday at his Lake Palestine home after a lengthy battle with cancer. He was 74.

The Democrat spent about 16 years in public service, starting in 1957 when voters from Smith and Gregg counties sent him to the House.

He became speaker during his fourth consecutive term, in 1963, and enacted a decorum code that still stands.

During Tunnell's tenure, lawmakers passed a bill creating the Texas Tourist Development Agency and the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department. Another measure designated a portion of the Texas coast to be acquired by the federal government to establish Padre Island National Seashore.

The so-called loan shark bill, the Texas Regulatory Loan Act, also passed during Tunnell's reign as speaker.

He was reelected in 1964, but before the Legislature convened, then-Gov. John Connally appointed him to a vacancy on the Texas Railroad Commission.

Tunnell was elected to the commission in 1966 and 1972, when he became chairman. He left a year later to work for Tenneco Inc., a Houston oil and gas firm, as vice president in charge of government relations. He retired in 1990.

From 1952-55, Tunnell was Smith County assistant district attorney before moving into private practice

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Wednesday, March 8, 2000:

A lot goes on behind the scenes, but what others see are results. You often view situations differently than others do, however. Avoid the tendency to take situations more personally than necessary. Distance yourself before making judgments, especially with emotional matters. You make money easily, but you also spend it well! If you are single, you could become involved with someone who is emotionally unavailable yet quite fascinating. You can't seem to resist this person. Check others out before you let them be your bosom buddies. If attached, your mate finds you unusually exciting this year. Be open. ARIES knows how to trigger you!

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★★ Unexpected developments keep you busy. You might have way too much energy for your own good. Schedule a hearty game of racquetball or a brisk walk. Not only will exercise make you feel good, it will also chill you out. Tonight: Enjoy your friends.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ You want another's attention, and you know how to command it. Bring others together. Reveal what is on your mind. Be aware of any undercurrents at work. Validate any reservations you might have. Stay on top of work. Tonight: Make it an early night.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ Mean what you say and do; otherwise, events could come back to haunt you. There is nothing wrong with a strong stand if you are willing to accept the ramifications. Empathy can go a long way, especially with another at a distance. Tonight: Hook up with friends.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★ Accept another's good will and efforts, but recognize the need to take necessary action. Others cannot do your work for you. Popularity mounts. Attend meetings. You could find those close to you rather unpredictable. (They are!) Tonight: A must appearance.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★★ Taking a broad perspective separates you from others. You see events in a different context than others do. Your advice is sought after. An associate goes way beyond the call of duty — he might be soft on you! Be sensitive to others' feelings and treat them with care. Tonight: Off to the movies.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Others seek you out. Maintain an even pace, and your energy will go farther than you think. Initiate talks about a new idea at work while it will be well received. Be willing to debate pros and cons. Encourage others to speak with candor. Tonight: Do something relaxing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Activity surrounds you. Another goes out of his way to make contact. You might not like what is said, but your diplomatic abilities come into play. Use gentle persuasion rather than confrontation. Others are highly responsive. Tonight: Let a partner have the floor.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ Work proves demanding, yet you effectively clear out your desk. Your ability to read between the lines makes a big difference. Listen to your instincts in a family matter. Be a little indulgent. Intuition takes you far. Tonight: Buy some flowers on the way home.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★★ Allow your creativity and high vitality to speak. Others respond to your ideas, actions and communication. Do the unexpected; shake up the status quo. Rush in and take action. Others follow your lead and thank you for your leadership. Tonight: Relax and enjoy life.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ You might not be on top of a money matter, and, at this point, you might not care — unusual as that may be. You are ready to take action, and you don't want to be held back. Indulge a family member; not only will it be appreciated, but it will also warm up the familial climate. Tonight: Order in.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★★ Beam in what you want. Your gregarious side emerges while dealing with your day-to-day life. Others care about you and let you know, despite your high level of unpredictability. Take action; make calls; reach out for others. Tonight: Just ask.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★ You might understand more than you would like to reveal. Your feelings could be easily hurt. Step back if you can. Avoid spending money carelessly to release tension. The long-term damages outweigh the immediate relief! Tonight: Take care of yourself.

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1NT	Pass	2♣	Pass
2♡	Pass	4♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠ "An amusing hand," remarked the kibitzer. "Unless spades break 6-1, the contract probably cannot be made." This is the hand in question, with one of the world's great players in the South seat.

North's decision to check for a heart fit with the Stayman Convention is a tad unusual — normally you would raise notrump with a hand that did not contain a ruffing value. That would certainly have been the winning action here, since three no-trump depends on little more than finding East with the ace of clubs.

Declarer won the opening spade lead with the ace, crossed to the king of hearts and led a club, inserting the king when East played low. When that held, the queen and ace of hearts were cashed, West discarding a spade, and another club was led. East rose with the ace and returned a club to declarer's queen.

By now, declarer had an almost complete count of the hand. East's failure to return a spade made it a moral certainty that West had started with six spades and East just one. West had followed to two rounds of trumps and three of clubs, accounting for 11 cards. That left room for at most two diamonds in the West hand.

Declarer now cashed the ace and king of diamonds before exiting with a spade. West could bank two spade tricks, but then had to continue the suit, allowing declarer to ruff in dummy while getting rid of the diamond loser in hand. Declarer lost only three tricks in the black suits.

QVC diva to host daytime talk show

WEST GOSHEN, Pa. — The diva of Diamonique is leaving television retailer QVC to host a daytime talk show.

Kathy Levine is leaving the Pennsylvania-based television shopping network at the end of April, according to a letter posted on QVC's Web site.

"Well folks, I must be doing something right, for now another dream has come true for me," Levine wrote. "I've been given an opportunity to host a daytime talk show."

Levine didn't release any details about the show.

"I leave QVC with a happy heart, but not without a few tears," she said. "What can I say? I'm a very lucky lady. I will miss you all."

Ellen Rubin, a QVC spokeswoman, said the network is sad to see Levine go, but happy about her new opportunity.

LONDON — The father of Princess Diana's boyfriend Dodi Fayed has lost his attempt to block a British newspaper from printing excerpts from a book by the only survivor of the 1997 crash that killed the couple.

Lawyers for Mohammed Al Fayed went to the High Court on Monday to seek an injunction against The Daily Telegraph, which printed an extensive interview with Diana's former bodyguard, Trevor Rees-Jones, on Saturday. The paper began serializing his upcoming book on the crash Monday.

Al Fayed's lawyers claimed Rees-Jones, who worked for the Fayeds, was contractually forbidden from profiting from information obtained during his employment.

Justice Anne Rafferty dismissed the claim, saying Al Fayed's lawyers could have sought the court's intervention earlier.

In "The Bodyguard's Story," Rees-Jones dismisses claims by Al Fayed that his son and the princess were planning to marry. He also takes issue with Al Fayed's accusations of a royal conspiracy.

LONDON — The field of finalists for the richest annual literary award for a single work of fiction was narrowed to seven on Monday.

This year's International IMPAC Dublin prize finalists: "Wide Open" by Nicola Barker of England; "Trumpet" by Jackie Kay of Scotland; "This Side of Brightness" by Colum McCann of Ireland; and four books by American writers: "Charming Billy" by Alice McDermott; "The Hours" by Michael Cunningham; "Paradise" by Toni Morrison; and "I Married a Communist" by Philip Roth.

The winner is to be announced May 9.

The prize, which carried a $122,000 award, was established in 1996 by U.S. management company IMPAC and Dublin Corporation.

SANTA ANA, Calif. — The Worm is in trouble again.

Basketball star Dennis Rodman was charged Tuesday with drunken driving stemming from a December arrest in Costa Mesa. Meanwhile, his court date in Las Vegas on a cocktail waitress's claim that he grabbed her breasts is nearing.

Police said the 38-year-old Dallas Mavericks forward had a blood-alcohol level of .15, nearly twice the state's legal limit, when he was pulled over Dec. 22.

After his arrest, a smiling Rodman told reporters he had a couple of beers and had no criticism for officers who stopped him.

"They're doing their job, they're doing their job," he said.

His arraignment on the misdemeanor charge is scheduled for April 3, one week after the scheduled start of his trial in the waitress's federal lawsuit accusing him of battery and intentional infliction of emotional distress.

GOUVIEUX, France — The wife of the Aga Khan, the 49th hereditary imam of the Ismaili Muslim community, gave birth to a son Tuesday in Paris.

Newborn Prince Aly Muhammad was named for his late grandfather and Hezrat Aly, the cousin and son-in-law of the Prophet Mohammad and the first imam of the Ismaili Muslims. The Ismaili Muslim community has a following of 12 million to 15 million worldwide.

The young prince and his 36-year-old German-born mother, Begum Inaara Aga Khan, were doing well, according to the Aga Khan's press office.

Report: Parents juggling multiple care arrangement for kids

WASHINGTON (AP) — On some mornings, Nikole Rendon awakens at 2:15 a.m. to get her baby to day care so she can report to work as a hotel reservationist by 4:15 a.m. On other days, Rendon's mother takes care of the infant.

The 20-year-old single mother isn't alone in juggling day-care arrangements. More than a third of working parents depend on more than one option, using day-care centers part of the time and relying on friends, relatives or neighbors to watch their youngsters on other occasions, according to a new study.

About 30 percent of parents have two child-care arrangements for children and another 8 percent are using at least three, a survey of more than 44,000 households by the Urban Institute showed.

With more women in the workplace — many in jobs that involve nights and weekend hours — and a dearth of formal day-care centers that stay open during non-traditional hours, parents are scrambling to find child care that fits their schedules, say experts.

The choices are especially limited for low-income families.

More than 15 million people worked nontraditional hours in 1997, the latest year for which statistics are available.That number is expected to increase. Occupations with a high number of employees working nights and weekends are expected to account for 27 percent of all job growth over an 11-year period that ends 2005, according to a report by the Washington State Child Care Resource and Referral Network.

The Urban Institute survey, part of a multiyear project looking at federal and state social programs, found that 65 percent of parents juggling multiple child-care arrangements use a combination of formal daycare centers, Head Start programs and baby-sitting by relatives and friends.

Twenty percent use two separate day-care centers.

Infants and toddlers are the least likely to be in multiple care arrangements, according to the survey. Forty-four percent of 3-year-olds and 4-year-olds are in two or more, compared to 34 percent of younger children. The study has a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

There are no national statistics on the number of day-care centers that operate in the evenings and on weekends, but child-care experts say supply doesn't meet demand, which has increased in recent years as people coming off welfare found jobs in restaurants, cleaning services and other places that require them to work at night and on weekends.

In King County, Wash., which includes Seattle, 2 percent of day care centers and 14 percent of private homes that operate as day care centers will take children in the evening. Even fewer take kids on weekends.

But many parents are looking for just that kind of care. About 13,000 — or 28 percent — of the nearly 46,000 requests to a statewide child care referral service in 1998 were for nonstandard hour care, according to the Washington state report.

The state offers child care providers an extra $108 child per month for every child they take during off-hours.

"It's an incentive for centers to take these kids," said Elizabeth Bonbright Thompson, executive director of the Washington referral network.

Alleged gunman berated whites, 'racist doctors'

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A black man accused of shooting five whites, killing three, left a suicide note along with writings in which he ranted about "racist, biased doctors and nurses" who had treated him "like dirt."

"As long as the system remains racist white and racist Jew, black people will never overcome," Ronald Taylor, 39, wrote in one of the notes published Tuesday by the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.

Police found the writings, which included four pages of a suicide note, in Taylor's home in Wilkinsburg after he allegedly went on a rampage March 2 at his apartment building and at two fast-food restaurants.

Authorities have charged Taylor with criminal homicide and hate crimes.

In his notes, Taylor, who has said he has a history of mental illness, referred to "my plan" and expressed concern at how his actions might affect his loved ones.

"To my family starting with you, mother, who I love so much, I know this will probably destroy your life but I've been suffering physically for too long. ... I've been patient year after year, decade after decade with my health, but I decided to end it all," Taylor wrote.

In one note, he apologized to his mother "for taking my own life with your gun that I sneaked for the second time in two years."

Other excerpts:

—"Try to understand when a person is physically suffering for a long time and I'm treated by racist, biased doctors and nurses who so often give me generic, cheap medication that is ineffective and causes return visits to emergency rooms that frustration so often sets in. I get fed up with doctors treating black patients differently from whites in terms of unfairness, unequally and like dirt."

—"Jesus Christ made a very costly mistake putting white people on the face of the earth. I'll see all of my enemies in hell. Ha, ha, ha, ha, ha."

Troops warned on faulty suits only after problems made public

By John M. Donnelly
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Although a Pentagon agency warned the Army and Air Force in early February not to use potentially flawed chemical suits, the services didn't pass the message on to the field until weeks later — the day after the problem was made public, military officials say.

Even now it is unclear how widely the message has spread among U.S. forces deployed worldwide.

On Feb. 3, the Defense Logistics Agency, or DLA, told all the military services' logistics offices not to use suits from two suspect lots in any real emergency. But it was not until Feb. 28, the day after The Associated Press reported that many of the suits contained holes and tears and the contractor had been charged with fraud, that the message went beyond the logistics offices.

Unaware of the problem's scope were troops at Army and Air Force bases who, the Pentagon inspector general says, could have been killed wearing faulty suits during a gas or germ attack.

Only last Friday did the DLA send a memo to four-star generals and admirals on every continent, the Army and Air Force chiefs and others — as opposed to logistics offices. The latest memo provides more detailed information on what items to set aside and who to call with questions.

The Feb. 3 warning said 1989 and 1992 lots of "battle dress overgarments" made by Isratex, Inc., of New York City should be removed from the active inventory. An alert last December to the same logistics offices had mentioned only the 1992 lot.

The Air Force didn't tell air bases around the world that either lot was defective until the day after the story broke, said Maj. Donna Nicholas, an Air Force spokeswoman. The Army had told its soldiers about the 1992 lot but not about the 1989 lot, because Army headquarters didn't get the Feb. 3 memo and they first learned about it in the press, said Army spokeswoman Nancy Ray. A Navy spokesman, Lt. Matt O'Neal,said sailors and Marines have their own protective suits and none are made by Isratex.

Although the 1989 lot has not been proven defective, it was pulled with the 1992 lot and is considered suspect because of the company that made it, DLA and inspector general officials have said. All told, the company provided 780,000 suits to the military at a cost of $49 million.

Nicholas said officials at Air Force headquarters never got the December message. And she said the Feb. 3 warning was sent to the wrong Air Force location and wasn't received by headquarters until Feb. 15. Nearly two more weeks then passed before the Air Force issued a warning memo Feb. 28, the day after the AP story.

The belated Feb. 28 memo was sent not to field units such as air bases in Korea or the Middle East but to the supply offices of major commands and to Air Force centers that store such equipment.

The service telephoned "high-threat" places such as Korea to notify them of the problem suits, Nicholas said, though she could not document such contacts nor say precisely when they occurred. She called it "coincidence" that the service's warning came soon after the press report.

Although the Army warned the field about 1992 lots, headquarters never got the Feb. 3 memo on the 1989 lot, Ray said. She and others said the news stories alerted officials to the 1989 lot and that on Feb. 28, numerous phone calls were made to warn units from Georgia to Germany about both lots.

Col. Larry Barker, responsible for chemical gear for the 85,000 troops in the 18th Airborne Corps, said the first time he heard about the 1989 lot being a potential problem was Feb. 28.

As far back as 1994, Pentagon officials have conceded they knew that Isratex was being investigated for allegedly selling inferior products with the intent to defraud the military. Eventually, five different Isratex contracts were included in an indictment against the firm. Last September, company officials pleaded guilty to various charges in U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of New York. Sentencing is set for April.

After tests last September showed flaws on suits from the 1992 lot were more serious than previously believed, the Defense Logistics Agency issued the Dec. 2 warning to 18 logistics offices. The December warning cites only the 1992 deal but says all suits "that are connected with/manufactured by subject contractor be used for TRAINING ONLY!"

The Feb. 3 memo went out to the same recipients. This time it said both the 1989 and 1992 lots "have been tested and identified as being unsuitable as chemical protective suits."

There was no deadline for action in either memo, but both requested "widest possible dissemination of this document."

Arizonans make history with first Internet election

PHOENIX (AP) — Arizona Democrats on Tuesday started what they believe is the future of voting — using the Internet in the nation's first such ballot cast in a binding election for public office.

"I think it's just wonderful. I can't believe they're doing this," said Mary O'Neil of Sun City, who voted early in the Democratic presidential primary using a computer.

Maricopa County Supervisor Mary Rose Wilcox cast the first vote from state party headquarters at 12:01 a.m. By mid-afternoon, about 7,000 people had voted and the Web site was recording about 100 votes every 5 minutes.

"There's been occasions during the day when things have locked up. When traffic gets heavy you look for ways to smooth out the bumps," said Bill Taylor of Election.com, the company hired to run the election. "This has been a really good first day."

Dennis and Roberta Jensen of Sun City, invited their neighbors over to vote in the den, drink coffee and nosh on freshly baked cookies.

"We're a convenience society. We're all used to doing things the easiest way possible," said Dennis Jensen, who planned to vote by Internet Wednesday. "Elections haven't been convenient. They've been highly inconvenient. This is just the opposite."

To vote, registered Democrats visit Election.com, which leads them to the Web page where they can vote. They have to enter a personal identification number along with state and date of birth. Early voting continues through Friday for Saturday's primary.

On primary day, other voters will have to go to one of 124 polling places where they can use either a traditional paper ballot or computer.

The Voting Integrity Project had sued to stop the online election, arguing that it would harm the voting rights of the poor and minorities who have less computer access than wealthier whites. A judge refused to stop the election, but the group plans to challenge the results.

"Everybody seems to be so eager to embrace this technology no matter what the cost," said Deborah Phillips, president of the Virginia-based group. "This is a real election with real voters whose rights are being trampled on."

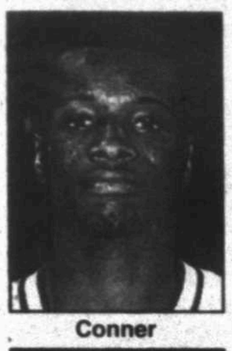
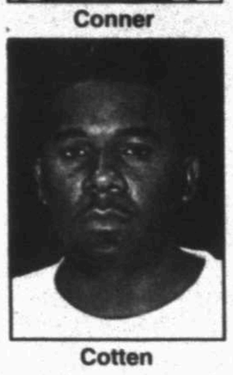
National tourney-bound Chaparral men rack up conference hardware



Conner



Cotten

Staff Report

The No. 13-ranked Midland College Chaparrals took the top honors of the Western Junior College Athletic Conference All-Conference men's basketball team.

Not surprising, Eugene Costello was named Most Valuable Player, while the Chaps' first-year coach Junsie Cotten was named as the Coach of the Year.

Costello, a 5-foot-9 sophomore guard from New Orleans, averaged 23.3 points, 4.3 rebounds and 2.6 assists during the regular season.

After serving as an MC assistant for two years, Cotten has had a lot of success as the Chaps' head coach. Cotten has guided the team to a 29-4 overall record, which includes a 13-1 record in the WJCAC and a share of the conference title. Cotten is also the first coach since Steve Green in 1994 to take Midland College to the NJCAA National Tournament, which starts next Tuesday against Champlain (Vt.) College at 9:30 p.m..

Joining Costello on the first team was Chap 6-3 sophomore Teohn Conner from Ferriday, La. Conner was the Chaps' second leading scorer with 11 points per game.

Lady Chaps put four on first team

The Midland College Lady Chaparrals dominated the Women's Western Junior College Athletic Conference All-Conference team with four selections.

Fatime Ndiaye, a 6-foot-2 sophomore from Dakar, Senegal, led the way as the WJCAC MVP.

Conner and Costello also made the All-Region V team. Costello was also named as the region's MVP.

Chaps selected honorable mention were 6-4 sophomore Ricky Duff, 6-2 sophomore Alvin Brooks and 5-11 sophomore Armon Whitaker.

Co-WJCAC champion Howard had the most selections to the first team as Steve Bonner, Daryl

No. 5 Bulldogs blast Andrews

Staff Report

The Midland High baseball team reached a perfect 10 Tuesday afternoon against the defending state Class 4A champions.

The Bulldogs, ranked No. 5 in the state in a Class 5A coaches poll in the preseason, won their 10th straight game after losing their season opener with an 18-11 win over Andrews at Zachery Field. It was hardly an artistic game by either side as the score and wind-blown conditions would indicate.

Midland High	18
Andrews	11

Perhaps it was appropriate that the game ended when Andrews pitcher Scott Kello hit Midland High's Jeff Brock with a pitch with the bases loaded to bring home a run. The umpires called off the remainder of the game due to impending darkness.

"We didn't play very well and the weather was indicative of how the game went," said MHS coach Barry Russell. "We were kind of flat after the tournament."

That would be the Tournament of Champions, which Midland High won this past weekend. Competition wise, Andrews would have fit into that tournament well based on last year's track record, having won the 4A state title.

The Mustangs struck for four runs off MHS starter Marc Majors in the top of the first, including a run-scoring double by Simon DeLaCruz. That might have been what the Bulldogs needed to wake them up.

MHS softball kicks Cooper

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland High didn't necessarily order gale force winds at the new MHS softball complex on Loop 250 Tuesday afternoon, but the results were good.

Midland High	21
Cooper	3

The Lady Bulldogs pounded out 19 wind-aided hits in a 21-3 District 4-5A run-rule softball win over Abilene Cooper, which is one of the most decisive victories ever by MHS in softball.

MHS led 15-0 before Cooper scratched against Lady Bulldog pitcher Collin Lange, who gave up the three runs in the fourth inning.

"The wind really helped my drop ball," Lange said. "Some of my pitches drifted up (in the fourth) and they got some runs. I just had to keep that pitch low."

Lange did not allow a fair ball in the air through the first three innings as she faced the minimum nine batters. That was the way to win on this nasty day where anything in the air was almost uncatchable.

Lee girls fall/4C

Meanwhile, the MHS bats sent nearly everything skyward and Cooper outfielders couldn't gage where the ball would land, often looking like a bunch of cowboys trying to circle the wagons.

Senior Kristi Heard continued her hitting onslaught with three hits, 5 RBIs and a three-run double for the second week in a row.

"The bases loaded double seems to be my little thing this year," Heard said. "I can't seem to hit anything more than a double, but if three runs score, I'll take it. The wind really helped anything hit to left field and we hit a lot of balls to left today."

In all, MHS cracked nine doubles that raced to the fence. Tiffany Robinson, Collin Lange and Kim Combs each doubled twice while

Coleman scores two, leads Midland High over Abilene

By Jay Peden
Sports Writer

The Midland High girls' soccer team put another strong defensive effort together with two Kathleen Coleman goals and came up with its second straight win over a playoff contender.

Coleman

"We have a winning streak," said a gleeful Coleman after the game.

On Saturday, it was a 1-0 win over San Angelo Central, and on Tuesday at the new MHS Soccer Field, it was a 2-0 victory over Abilene High. And while the Lady Dawgs aren't going to the playoffs, they put a crimp in Abilene High's playoff hopes with this win. If AHS had won, it would have tied Midland Lee for third in District 4-5A after the Lady Rebels' loss at Abilene Cooper.

With a young team — Coleman is one of only five seniors on the roster — Midland High has taken a while to get on the winning track, but now the Lady Dawgs are going full-steam ahead.

"We are playing better soccer than we were at the beginning of the season," MHS coach Scott Hodkinson said. "It's too late for the seniors, and I'm sorry for them. But it's good to see the team coming together. I gives

Rebs down Coogs, 6-3

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

The Abilene Cooper Cougars had thoughts of an upset when they stepped onto the Midland Lee soccer field Tuesday afternoon.

Coming into Tuesday's contest against the Rebels winless in District 4-5A play and having scored only three district goals, the Cougars probably felt that they needed a good quick start in order to have a chance at an upset.

The Cougars had two quick strikes on the Rebels within the first 10 minutes of the contest to surprisingly go up 2-0. The first goal came in the fifth minute when Simon Nagel scored on a shot from the left side. Cooper would get another quick strike in the 10th minute as Dallas Jones scored on a breakaway.

Cooper's upset hopes were eventually dashed as Lee's Eric Mora scored on a penalty kick in the 17th minute. After that, it was all Lee as the Rebels scored five unanswered goals

Bruins' McSorley charged

VANCOUVER, British Columbia — Marty McSorley must now answer in a Canadian court for his stick attack on Vancouver's Donald Brashear.

The Boston Bruins defenseman — one of the league's tough guys — was charged with one count of assault with a weapon for his Feb. 21 attack. He plans to plead innocent, his lawyer said.

McSorley, who will not have to appear at the hearing, would face a maximum of 18 months in jail if convicted.

Jacks drop another, fall to Arkansas, 6-3

Staff Report

ODESSA — The Odessa Jackalopes couldn't recover from a bad start Tuesday night.

The Jacks gave up four first period goals, which turned out to be more than enough for the Arkansas GlacierCats, who went on to defeat the Jacks 6-3 at the Ector County Coliseum. Odessa now finds itself in something of a tailspin, having lost three in a row to fall back to .500 on the season (27-27-6).

It only took 18 seconds for the Cats to take control of the game as Ben Maidment scored the first of his two goals of the period shortly after the face-off from an assist by Dan Harrison. After Maidment and Rob Giffin added goals in less than a two minute period almost 15 minutes later, Arkansas led 4-1 and the Jacks had to play catch-up.

The Jacks mounted a comeback in the third period as Derek Laxdal scored his second goal of the night to cut it to 4-2. Early in the third period, Paul Vincent scored to cut the deficit to a single goal, but the Jacks couldn't score again.

Cowboys hire QB coach

Associated Press

IRVING — The Dallas Cowboys struck out when they tried to persuade longtime backup quarterback Jason Garrett to be their new quarterbacks coach.

Instead, the Cowboys found another former Troy Aikman backup for the job.

Cowboys owner Jerry Jones has hired 41-year-old Wade Wilson to be the new quarterbacks coach for coach Dave Campo's staff. He succeeds Buddy Geis.

"Wade brings 19 years of NFL playing experience at the quarterback position to our coaching staff," Jones said. "He not only has a great level of familiarity with our offensive scheme, but he also has the benefit of working in several other offensive systems on the professional level."

Jones cited Wilson's relationship with Aikman as a reason for his hiring.

"I believe Troy Aikman will be very comfortable with him as our quarterbacks coach, and I believe Wade will be able to help us identify and develop young quarterback prospects for the future," Jones said.

Tour should allow Martin to drive on

By Doug Ferguson
AP Golf Writer

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. — Some words of advice for the PGA Tour: Forget another round of appeals and let the kid ride in peace.

Allow the swelling to subside from the public relations pounding you already have absorbed. Save your strength. Because the next time someone takes you to court over the right to use a cart, you must climb back into the ring.

Casey Martin was all but ensured a smooth ride for the remainder of his rookie season when a federal appeals court in San Francisco on Monday upheld a lower court ruling that gave him the right to use a cart in the first place.

The appeals process took nearly two years, during which Martin became much more than a sympathetic figure. He proved he could flat out play, which explains what he is doing on the PGA Tour.

There's no telling how long another appeal will take, or even if the U.S. Supreme Court would accept it. There's no telling how much longer the rare circulatory disease in Martin's right leg will enable him to play, or even walk.

More than one doctor has said amputation is a possibility.

If the cart gives Martin an unfair advantage — and no one will ever know — the results don't seem to bear that out. The only two events in which he has missed the cut were the Bob Hope Classic and Pebble Beach, both played on multiple courses with six-hour rounds because of amateur partners.

His best finish is a tie for 17th in Tucson, the same week the top 64 players in the world were at La Costa for the Match Play Championship. He is 124th on the money list with $51,015, chump change compared to money lawyers are making.

Suddenly, he is in the spotlight again during the Honda Classic. But the more interesting development will unfold next week.

Martin received an invitation to play in the Bay Hill Invitational from the host — Arnold Palmer, an outspoken critic of carts on the PGA Tour who testified against him at trial.

Behind closed doors the day before the tournament, commissioner Tim Finchem will preside over a regularly scheduled Policy Board meeting to discuss the next step in "Martin vs. PGA Tour."

Among the issues to consider: Whether it's worth the mounting legal fees to continue, and whether another round in court would cause more harm than good.

Sadly, carts have taken over the game on a recreational level, and the tour shares some of that blame. The majority, if not all, of the courses in its vast TPC network do not allow walking because of the enormous revenue carts bring in.

Nevertheless, walking remains a critical component at the highest form of competition. The tour has every right to protect it. It has a duty to protect it.

The most damaging impact of Martin's lawsuit is that judges, some of whom might not know the difference between a birdie and a bogey, can determine whether competition is fundamentally altered without walking.

Consider two opinions from two courts the past two days, both on lawsuits in which a player has sued under the Americans with Disabilities Act for the right to ride.

A federal judge in Oregon said Martin should get a cart, and a three-member panel in San Francisco on Monday upheld that verdict.

Then there's Ford Olinger. The club pro from Indiana, who suffers from a degenerative hip, sued the USGA to use a cart in U.S. Open qualifying. Olinger lost his case.

And on Tuesday, the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago upheld the lower court.

Olinger used a cart in qualifying for the '98 U.S. Open, shot an 83 and didn't advance.

Martin used a cart and not only qualified for the U.S. Open, but finished higher (tie for 23rd) than two-time U.S. Open champion Ernie Els and British Open champion Justin Leonard.

Did their ability affect the outcome of their lawsuit?

Count on this: The tour will face more challenges over the right to ride. It will win some and lose some. And one of these days, the tour will have to decide whether to take its case to the Supreme Court.

Now is not the time.

Even though Martin wasn't blessed with two good legs, he was blessed with enough heart — not to mention sheer talent — to qualify for the PGA Tour, the most elite roster of any sport.

He is a rare breed. Some might say, as Jack Nicklaus did, that he is one in a million.

Save the battle for another day. There might not be another player with a physical disability to makes it as far as Martin has.

A federal appeals court refused Monday to overturn a ruling that allows Casey Martin, a disabled golfer, to ride between shots in PGA tournaments. Martin, who has a circulatory disorder that makes it painful for him to walk long distances, is the first golfer to use a cart in PGA events.

Birthday boy O'Neal makes case for MVP with 61-point outing

By Beth Harris
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES — In this season of campaigns, Shaquille O'Neal made a convincing pitch to MVP voters — a career-high 61 points.

"It's a good feeling," O'Neal said after the Los Angeles Lakers beat the Clippers 123-103 Monday night for their 16th consecutive victory, equaling their longest winning streak of the season.

"My shots were falling and I felt pretty good. The crowd gave me a lot of energy and I was running," he said. "They weren't double-teaming me that much, so I was just trying to get it deep and take the high-percentage shot."

O'Neal, playing on his 28th birthday, also grabbed 23 rebounds. He shot 24-for-35 from the field and 13-for-22 from the line in 45 minutes.

"He's the MVP without a doubt," Glen Rice said. "He's having a tremendous season both offensively and defensively and he's been a great leader for this team."

A sellout crowd of 20,385 at Staples Center — the largest to attend an NBA game in Southern California — certainly thought so.

Fans chanted "MVP, MVP" when O'Neal sank a free throw to complete a three-point play for his 59th point with 4:12 remaining. The usually blase Los Angeles fans were on their feet cheering each time O'Neal scored in the fourth quarter.

O'Neal's teammates were happy to help him break the 60-point barrier, making him the first NBA player to do since San Antonio's David Robinson scored 71 points against the Clippers in April 1994.

"We showed our appreciation to him that he is having a heck of a year," said Ron Harper, who had four assists. "I'm not surprised he hasn't scored 60 before. That's something that's hard to do."

Making it easier was the fact that 7-foot Clippers center Michael Olowokandi played just 14 minutes because of five fouls. His absence created a size deficit against the 7-foot-1 O'Neal that the Clippers couldn't overcome.

"We knew that if we moved the ball and found Shaq in the middle of the lane, he'd have the position," Lakers coach Phil Jackson said. "So the team hooked up well and played exactly the way we'd like to see them do it."

O'Neal thanked his teammates for giving him the ball where he likes it, down in the low post so he can dunk with abandon.

"I think every star will admit that it takes a lot of team play for a guy to have a night like that," Jackson said. "But it takes the individual effort to want to do that and have the doggedness that it takes to persevere in very difficult situations.

"Shaq started out shooting foul shots very poorly, but kept his confidence going. I think that helped him and the crowd helped him," Jackson said. "Then he got his rhythm during the course of the game and it seemed like everything started to go for him."

Asked if O'Neal should be the league's MVP, Jackson replied, "Who knows? That's for someone else to decide. He's our MVP."

O'Neal dominated the final quarter, scoring 19 points — including 15 straight — capped by a dunk off an assist from Kobe Bryant before leaving with 2:33 remaining.

Rangers, Astros drop close games

Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Jose Canseco's back felt fine, so his spring debut would have been a success even without a run-scoring single in the Tampa Bay Devil Rays' 3-1 victory over the Texas Rangers on Tuesday.

"I'm healthy. That's my main concern," the 35-year-old designated hitter said after going 1-for-3 with a walk. "Whether I would have struck out four times or hit four home runs, that's not my concern at all. My concern is being out there again tomorrow."

Canseco sat out the first weekend of exhibition games after arriving in camp five days late. He was sidelined for six weeks following back surgery last summer, and manager Larry Rothschild is allowing him to get into playing shape at his own pace.

The only game plan when it comes to Canseco seems to be to do whatever is necessary to keep him fresh for the regular season. Last year, he had 34 homers and 95 RBIs in 113 games.

"He wanted four at-bats today and I was going to give them to him as long as he didn't have to run the bases too much," said Rothschild, who lifted Canseco for a pinch runner after his eighth-inning single drove in Tampa Bay's final run.

Canseco intends to stay in the lineup for home games Wednesday and Thursday, giving the Devil Rays a couple of more looks at what the team is promoting as "The Hit Show" — a powerful core of the batting order also featuring Fred McGriff and offseason acquisitions Greg Vaughn and Vinny Castilla.

Indians 2, Astros 1

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. — Lance Johnson singled and scored the winning run on a headfirst slide into home plate Tuesday as the Cleveland Indians rallied in the ninth inning to beat the Houston Astros 2-1.

Houston starter Shane Reynolds pitched three scoreless innings and Dwight Gooden, who played for Cleveland in 1998 and '99, followed with two perfect innings. Gooden has now pitched four innings this spring without giving up a hit.

Suns down Rockets

HOUSTON (AP) — Rodney Rogers scored six of his 15 points in the final two minutes to spark the Phoenix Suns to 108-101 victory over the Houston Rockets on Tuesday night.

Anfernee Hardaway led Phoenix with 24 points, followed by Tom Gugliotta with 23, Cliff Robinson with 19 and Jason Kidd and Rogers each with 15.

Francis scored 17 third-quarter points, including 12 in the final four minutes of the period.

Phoenix moved ahead 10-2 after two baskets by Gugliotta. Consecutive baskets by Anderson gave Houston its first lead, 19-18, with 3:48 left in the period. The Suns then outscored Houston 14-6 to lead 32-25 going into the second quarter.

Texas outhits TCU

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas overcame two five-run innings by TCU to win 17-15 Tuesday afternoon.

Jeff Ontiveros had a career-best six RBIs and scored his sixth home run of the season. Kevin Frizzell (1-0) got his first collegiate win, throwing a career-high three innings of scoreless relief.

Frizzell entered the game in the sixth with the Longhorns trailing 12-7 and held the Horned Frogs to just three hits over three innings.

David Trombella (1-2) took the loss for TCU, giving up four runs in one inning.

SAN ANGELO — Four Midlanders have earned the right to advance to state level competition in the Knights of Columbus free throw shooting contest.

Garrison Marks, 10; Briana Bertelson, 11; Justine "J.B." Sosa, 12; and Amy Stretcher, 13, won region titles in their age groups here Saturday to earn a trip to the state competition in Austin.

Marks made 17-of-25 free throws in the regional competition while Bertelson hit 15-of-25. Sosa made 13-of-25 while Stretcher had the best overall performance of the foursome, hitting 22-of-25.

Bertelson and Marks attend St. Ann's while Sosa and Stretcher are students at Midland Christian.

Stretcher has now earned four consecutive trips to the state competition while Sosa is making his second consecutive appearance in the state competition.

Coahoma nips Lady Mustangs

A rally by the Midland Christian softball team fell short Tuesday, as Coahoma escaped the Bill Williams Softball Complex with a 10-8 win.

Coahoma broke open a scoreless game with five runs in the third inning, then added four more in the fourth. The Lady Mustangs started the comeback with a five-run burst of their own in the bottom of the fourth, then added three in the fifth, but it was too little, too late.

MC's Jessica Valle went 2-for-2 with an RBI in each scoring rally. Kailee Johnson had an RBI triple in the fifth.

The Lady Mustangs, now 4-11, start district play this weekend in the Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools. They play two games at Dallas Lutheran this weekend: one at 4 p.m. Friday and the other at 11 a.m. Saturday.

Greenwood, Lamesa tie

GREENWOOD — The Greenwood baseball team scored two runs in the bottom of the sixth to tie Lamesa at 7-7 in a game which was called after regulation due to darkness Tuesday.

Lamesa's Koby Page hit two-run homers in both the fifth and sixth innings to give the Tors a 7-5 lead. Greenwood (2-5-1) salvaged a tie on a two-run single by Travis Latham in the bottom of the sixth.

Rangerettes rip Lady Tors

GREENWOOD — Greenwood's softball team had no trouble with Lamesa Tuesday, rolling to a 17-0 run rule victory.

Betsy Langdon had four hits and drove in two runs for the Rangerettes (11-4); Holly Kiehne had two hits and four RBIs; Ashley Awalt had two hits, three RBIs; and Gillian Danley drove in three runs.

Sophomore pitcher Erin Smith not only gave up only one hit, struck out nine and walked none, but she also had three hits and drove in three runs.

Horne aces at Hogan

Matthew Horne scored a hole-in-one Monday at Hogan Park Golf Course. Horne aced the No. 6 hole on the Quail Course using a 3-wood on the 180-yard hole. Evan McLaughlin was the witness.

BOYS: Rebels rally

(From 1C)

en route to a 5-3 victory over the Cougars, who remain winless in district at 0-11.

Mora said there wasn't really much concern after the Cougars (4-16 overall) struck first.

"We just tried to stay on our game plan, we created stuff, scored and came back," said Mora, who had two goals and an assist on the afternoon. "It was a good thing to get us back in the game because it got everything rolling from there."

"They (Cooper) played in the 60 mile-an-hour wind and I thought they did a good job," said Lee coach Shane Barden. "I give them a lot of credit."

Things really started to roll for the Rebels (9-6-1 overall, 6-4 in district) who ended up dominating the Cougars on the afternoon. Lee outshot Cooper, 18-6, as Lee goalkeeper Trey Lawson only touched the ball five times the entire afternoon.

The Rebels also got some very fortunate goals. On Lee's fourth score of the day, Cooper goalkeeper Brad Everts saved a Lee shot but dropped the ball in front of his own goal, only to be punched in by Lee's Robbie Martin, who made the heads-up play.

The Cougars apparently fell asleep on Mora's second goal. The senior forward kicked a long-range bomb from the right side of the field and scored when the ball found the left corner of the Cooper net without much of an attempt by the Cooper defense. Mora said he wasn't even trying to score on that play.

"I was told to play the back post and that's where I kicked it," he said.

Barden said that despite Cooper jumping out to those two quick scores he felt comfortable throughout the game.

Lady Cougars knock off Lady Rebels; MHS loses

Staff Report

ABILENE — On a day that saw upsets all over District 4-5A soccer pitches, the Midland Lee girls were the rule rather than the exception. They lost to Abilene Cooper, 3-1, Tuesday at the Lee Soccer Complex.

"The wind was blowing pretty hard," Lee coach Mike Simpson said. "They put two in over the top — just floated them in. And we were able to score a goal against the wind. In the second half, the wind died, and we just didn't get much done. We had many many opportunities to score; we just didn't finish. We had the ball inside the six(-yard line) and didn't convert."

All three of the girls' soccer games played Tuesday were upsets, at least according to the district standings. In San Angelo, Central inflicted Odessa Permian's first district loss, 1-0, and Midland High beat Abilene High, 2-0, in Midland.

Permian (9-1) has clinched a playoff berth — in fact Permian can finish no worse than second in district. Central (7-3) is next, followed by Lee (6-4) and AHS (5-5). None of those four teams has an easy schedule in its remaining two games. The closest any of the four has to a sure win is Lee, which hosts Odessa High on Saturday. But Tuesday's games ought to prove there aren't any sure wins.

ABILENE — The Salas boys proved too much for the Midland High soccer team, as David Salas had two assists and Joe Salas scored a goal to lead Abilene High over MHS, 3-1 Tuesday at the Lee Soccer Complex.

The win also vaulted Abilene High, winners of six games in a row, into first place in District 4-5A at 9-1 and 15-3 overall. Midland High fell to 7-4 and 14-5.

Matt Lozano scored MHS' only goal late in the second half, but AHS led 2-0 by then.

"And the seniors should feel good about it," he said. "At a point when we were out of it playoff-wise, they've kept working hard, and they've set a good example."

And this is a team that needed a good example. Adrienne Monroe is one of several freshmen who have gotten playing time, and as stopper, she's a big part of a defense that owns two straight shutouts. MHS has given up only two goals in its last four games.

"We're actually starting to put passes together, actually playing as a team and getting comfortable with each other," said Monroe, who sees a bright future. "This is just the beginning."

Coleman scored both MHS goals in final 10 minutes of the first half. The first goal, in the 31st minute, was relatively easy, coming on a free kick. The second, in the 38th minute, came off a scramble in front of the goal, and senior Jessica Salgado was credited with an assist.

"That was more of a team goal," Coleman said. "Everyone was in the box. I just happened to be the one to get it in."

Midland High has only one game left in the season, since its open spot in the District 4-5A schedule falls on the regular season's last date. On Saturday, the Lady Dawgs will go to Odessa and try to hand Odessa Permian (9-1, 17-3) its second district loss. Permian's first district loss came Tuesday, 1-0 to San Angelo Central.

Before learning of Permian's loss, Hodkinson said that beating Permian would be the "mother of all upsets," but after MHS' two straight upset wins, apparently nothing is impossible.

"This is the World Cup final for us," he said. "We've got nothing to hold back. We'll let it all hang out and see how it goes." "And the seniors should feel good about it," he said. "At a point when we were out of it playoff-wise, they've kept working hard, and they've set a good example."

BASEBALL: Dawgs triumph

(From 1C)

"I think Andrews gave us a good push," said Russell. "They woke us up a bit. To go up against them is good for us. They've been to where we want to go."

In the bottom of the first, Laynce Nix hit a two-run home run to cut the lead in half and Midland High tied it in the second. Tyson Dever hit a solo homer in the top of the third for the Mustangs to make it 5-4, but Jason South and Nix each had two-run singles in the bottom of the third to give the Bulldogs the lead for good.

Midland High took its biggest lead at 15-5 in the bottom of the fourth on a three-run homer by Cotey-Joe Cswaykus. Andrews answered back with six runs over the next two innings as a two-run single by Robert Bolding off MHS reliever Casey Zachery made it 15-11. In the bottom of the sixth, though, Midland High's Blake Johnston hit a two-run homer to give the Bulldogs a cushion.

Nix went 3-for-5 while South had two hits and drove in three runs. Brock also had two hits. Majors went four innings pick up the win.

For Andrews, Angel DeLaCruz, Simon DeLaCruz and Bryan Holt each had two hits, while Derrick Hicks and Bolding each had two hits and drove in two runs.

Rampley

Brazzle

Fatime Ndiaye, a 6-foot-2 sophomore from Dakar, Senegal, led the way as the WJCAC Most Valuable Player. Ndiaye led the WJCAC champion Lady Chaparrals in scoring with 16.7 points per contest. Ndiaye also pulled down eight rebounds per game. Ndiaye also made the NJCAA All-Region V team.

Joining Ndiaye on the first team were 5-10 guard Julie Rampley from Hereford, 5-7 sophomore guard Shekinah Brazzle from Portland, Ore., and 6-3 freshman post Chanovia Rhodes from Fort Worth.

Rampley was the second leading scorer for the Lady Chaps at 11.8 points per game. Brazzle averaged 9.2 points per contest and was the team's co-leader with Rampley with 3.3 assists per game. Rhodes averaged 9.4 points and pulled down a team-high 8.2 rebounds per game.

The No. 22-ranked Lady Chaps finished the season at 27-6 overall and one game short of making a return trip to the NJCAA National Tournament in Salina, Kan., with a 75-65 loss to No. 2-ranked Grayson County in the Region V Tournament championship game.

Taking home Coach of the Year honors was Odessa College's Tricia Floyd, who led the Lady Wranglers to a 20-12 overall record and to OC's first appearance in seven years in the Region V Tournament.

Howard College and South Plains were the only two other WJCAC schools to have at two first-team All-Conference selections.

AHS takes over first with victory over Lee

Staff Report

ABILENE — The Abilene High Lady Eagles took over sole possession of first place in the young District 4-5A softball race here Tuesday with an 8-2 win over defending district champion Midland Lee.

These were the top two teams from last year going at each other. The two teams split games a year ago, but Lee won the district crown with an 11-1 record, losing in this same point in the season last year.

"Well, I guess we definitely got that one bad game of the year out of the way with this one," said Lee coach Wes Overton. "We took a 2-0 lead in the first inning, then the rain started and we just fell apart."

Overton said the game had rain, wind and blowing sand.

Abilene High climbs to 2-0 in 4-5A play while Lee falls to 2-1 and into a second place tie with Midland High, a 21-3 winner over Abilene Cooper on Tuesday, and Odessa High, a 7-5 winner over San Angelo Central in nine innings.

AHS erased the 2-0 Lee lead in the second, tying the game at 2-2, but produced three runs in each of the third and fourth innings off Lee pitcher Mandy Hacker to put the game away.

Lee had only five hits in the game while AHS had 10. There were also eight errors in the game played under less than ideal conditions, three by Lee and five by AHS.

SOFTBALL: MHS girls pound 19 hits, 21 runs

(From 1C)

Amanda Martin and Crystal Martinez joined Heard with a two-bagger each.

"I had been in a hitting slump, so this did a lot of good," said Robinson, who had three hits and scored four runs in her leadoff role. "We want to take this win into Saturday (against San Angelo Central) and build on it."

MHS batted around on Cooper in three of the four innings the team got to bat. The biggest inning was in the third when the Lady Bulldogs scored eight times. That was the same inning that Heard belted her bases clearing double.

The victory gives the Lady Bulldogs a 2-1 record in District 4-5A play and 10-5 for the year. It also keeps them in good position for a state playoff run. Cooper fell to 1-2 in the league chase and off the playoff pace in the early going.

With the win, MHS is now tied for second place in the league race with Midland Lee, which was beaten 8-2 by Abilene High Tuesday. Abilene High, 2-0, took over sole possession of first place in the 4-5A softball standings with the home win over Lee.

MHS travels to San Angelo Central for a 2 p.m. game on Saturday. A win there will put MHS in good shape to face Odessa Permian and Abilene High down the first half stretch run.

Oil higher

Crude oil futures rocketed 6 percent higher Tuesday, crashing through the $33- and $34-a-barrel price barriers for the first time since late 1990 as nervousness about shrinking world supplies increased.

No dramatic developments were responsible for oil's latest rise, even though the near-term contract, for April delivery, jumped $1.95 to settle at $34.13 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange after reaching as high as $34.20.

In a tight market, confirmation that Nigeria had halted crude loadings because of an oil workers' strike and more evidence of a rift within OPEC between Iran and Saudi Arabia were enough to ignite prices.

The closing price was the highest since it hit $35.53 on Nov. 8, 1990, when thousands of U.S. troops were in the Middle East, preparing for the Gulf War.

With Tuesday's surge, prices have now more than tripled since hitting a 12-year low of less than $11 a barrel in December 1998, before OPEC slashed production to force prices higher.

The API data may slow the bull run. They showed that U.S. gasoline inventories, instead of declining as expected, rose 4.016 million barrels last week. Crude stocks increased by 7.624 million barrels, also far exceeding analysts' expectations.

Dollar higher

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar came under late-day selling pressure Tuesday after U.S. stocks tumbled for a second straight day.

In late New York trading, the euro was quoted at 95.76 cents, down from 95.90 cents late Monday. The dollar was quoted at 106.16 Japanese yen, down from 107.53 yen.

The Dow Jones industrials plummeted nearly 375 points, on top of a 197-point drop on Monday. The Nasdaq composite index, which lost about 10 points on Monday, fell 57 points.

The slump on Wall Street trickled over into the foreign-exchange market. After overseas investors sold their stocks, they then sold their dollars and repatriated the money in their local currencies, said David Solin, a partner at Foreign Exchange Analytics in Essex, Conn.

Besides the selloff on Wall Street, the dollar was under pressure as Japanese companies converted their overseas earnings into yen ahead of the end of Japan's fiscal year on March 31.

Late in New York, the dollar also was quoted at 1.6791 Swiss francs, up from 1.6772, and 1.4543 Canadian dollars, up slightly from 1.4525. The British pound rose to $1.5793 from $1.5741.

Gold up

Gold closed in London at $291.70 bid per troy ounce, up from $287.80 on Friday. In Zurich the bid price was $291.95, up from $288.15. Gold fell 50 cents in Hong Kong to $288.375.

Bank United begins adding services

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Settling into life as the Midland branch of Houston-based Bank United, the former Midland American Bank has begun adding services offered by its parent company.

Bank United Securities, a separate division, recently opened an office on the first floor of the bank's building in downtown Midland, staffed by native Midlander Peter Walper and an assistant.

Vern Stockton, director of public relations for Bank United in Houston, said that as a federally chartered savings and loan, the company has had the capability to own a securities operation for some time, and opened the securities division five years ago.

Though the Midland branch is just now getting a securities division, it is leading the company into energy lending. The company just announced it would launch an oil and gas lending initiative, focusing on financing independent oil and gas companies developing or acquiring energy-producing assets in Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas.

"We of course have offered energy loans for a long time," said John Grist, president of the Midland branch. "Midland is headquarters to many oil companies, so it was natural we'd start an energy division."

Stockton said that the Midland energy lending division was the first in the company's system and that Bank United is pleased to offer the additional service to its customers.

Grist said that he has noticed an increase in activity in the Permian Basin, noting that he just received notice from the Houston office that it had funded a major energy loan, which he takes as a sign interest is returning to the oil and gas industry.

"I just hope lenders and borrowers are approaching the industry more cautiously than 10 or 15 years ago," he said.

Stockton said the decision to open a securities division in Midland was consistent with what the company was doing in its Dallas, Fort Worth and Houston locations.

Grist said that Bank United is careful to separate the securities division, which sells non-Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.-insured products like stocks, bonds and life insurance annuities from FDIC-insured bank products.

He said Walper, new to Bank United, has been in the securities business and said "we've already had a good response and gotten clients involved in securities."

He added that "This is just one more step toward the concept of a one-stop shopping place for financial needs. As Midland American Bank, we did not offer brokerage services of any kind. We now have that capability under the Bank United umbrella. Before, when we had customers with financial needs, we would call Houston, make an appointment and someone from Houston would fly out and serve the customer. Now we have the staff here in Midland."

Stockton said the securities division "has worked well as we've gone through a trend of shrinking interest rates for certificates of deposit. Customers said they wanted a way to maximize their returns. People were not satisfied with their certificates of deposit and, given what's happening with the markets, wanted to get into the markets and be a part of 20 and 30 percent returns."

Dow disaster

Productivity soars; but higher interest rates are expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — A key to economic prosperity that helps keep inflation in check took its biggest leap in seven years, rising at a 6.4 percent rate at the end of 1999. But the surge in American workers' productivity didn't change economists' predictions of higher interest rates in the coming months.

Productivity — the amount of output for each hour of work — was even stronger than the government previously estimated for the fourth quarter and exceeded the stellar 5 percent annual rate of growth posted in the third quarter, the Labor Department said Tuesday.

Economists consider healthy productivity gains the key to economic vitality and rising living standards. Sizable gains means companies can pay employees more, hold the line on prices and still deliver increased profits to shareholders. Computers, satellites and other technological advances are credited with helping to boost workers' efficiency.

The Dow Jones stock average, focusing instead on a steep drop in Procter & Gamble, plunged 374.47 points to close at 9,796.03, its fourth-biggest one-day point drop and its lowest close since March 31, 1999. The Nasdaq index, which briefly soared above the 5,000 mark for the first time, also finished lower.

In another report, Americans rang up an unexpectedly large $17 billion in consumer debt in January, the largest monthly increase since November 1995, the Federal Reserve said. With plentiful jobs and rising incomes, consumers are feeling wealthy and in the mood to spend, economists said. The surge reflected heavy credit card use and robust borrowing for everything from cars to vacations.

The new fourth-quarter productivity figure — in line with many analysts' expectations — was revised upward from a previous estimate of a 5 percent rate and marked the biggest leap in productivity growth since the end of 1992 when it rose at a 7.4 percent rate.

"The productivity of the American worker apparently knows no bounds," said economist Joel Naroff of Naroff Economic Advisors.

At the same time, unit labor costs — a key barometer of underlying inflation pressures — fell by a bigger-than-expected 2.5 percent rate in the fourth quarter, the steepest drop in seven years.

That means the costs of producing a particular piece of merchandise fell. It also suggests that companies are under less pressure to raise prices to cover these costs, economists said. Unit labor costs are closely watched by economists because the bulk of U.S. companies' expenses involve paying for wages, benefits and other labor-related items.

Even with Tuesday's report showing strong productivity gains coupled with falling unit labor costs, many economists didn't believe it would deter the Federal Reserve from bumping up interest rates several more times this year.

The central bank has raised interest rates four times since June to slow the red-hot economy and keep inflation under control. But economists said those actions have yet to rein in the economy, which grew at a breakneck 6.9 percent rate in the fourth quarter.

Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan said Monday he saw no signs that the solid gains in productivity growth will peter out soon. But he expressed new worries about an overheated economy and sounded a warning that interest rates will be raised if the economy doesn't slow.

BUSINESS SCENE

Linens and Things building store by IHOP and Best Buy

By Mella McEwen

Under construction on Loop 250 behind International House of Pancakes and by Best Buy is LINENS AND THINGS.

The 34,000-square-foot store is expected to open its doors July 15.

Based in Clifton, N.J., the retailer carries home decorating items, storage and cleaning items, items for the bath, for the bedroom like pillows and comforters, and for the kitchen, like cookware and dinnerware.

Just opened at 900 S. Garfield is THE FLOOR STORE.

Owned by Ken Gohr and Rod Curtis, the store carries indoor and outdoor carpet, tile, wooden flooring, vinyl flooring and laminates.

"If you pick out something in stock, we can probably get it out the next day," the partners say.

They can do installation or arrange for a specific installer, and same day estimates are also available.

Hours are 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday.

Returned to Midland is THOROUGHBRED LANDSCAPE CO.

Owner Marc Christian, returned to Midland from Dallas and San Angelo, said he specializes in residential lawn maintenance, "mowing, trimming, fertilizing and weed control. I also do smaller commercial properties and some landscaping."

He said he can recommend a maintenance schedule or advise the homeowner on what needs to be done, "But I'll tailor the job to the customer's wishes."

Now open its new location is McKAY'S FINE FURNISHINGS, relocated to the former Furr's Supermarket in Plaza Oaks Shopping Center, Garfield and Wadley, from 36 Village Circle next to Walgreen's.

Owner David McKay said the new location is almost double the size of his former store, allowing him to handle additional lines, among them Kincaid, Flexsteel, Pulaski and Mayo.

"We plan to do different things that Midland has never seen before. We plan to add a coffee bar and offer refreshments on Saturdays and put in a play center with Disney movies and toys for the children while their parents shop," he said.

He said the store will be set up with "vignettes," furniture displayed in room settings.

The new location will be under construction for the next 45 days, he said.

Hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Stuffed Cabbage Rolls: Make most of produce

By Carol J.G. Ward
Knight Ridder Newspapers (KRT)

Fresh produce may not be all that fresh if it's shipped from faraway places and then sits in the store for days.

This is not really an issue in June and July, when it's easy to take advantage of well-stocked groceries and farmers' markets. But in months when harvests aren't at their peak and pickings in the produce aisle are slim, consumers should look to the many frozen and canned options at hand, according to experts at the American Institute for Cancer Research.

While canned or frozen fruits and vegetables might not look as appealing as their fresh counterparts, when it comes to nutrition, both have their advantages, according to dietitians at the USDA's Children's Nutrition Research Center in Houston.

Fruits and vegetables destined for the canning and freezing are picked at full ripeness and processed within hours. Flash freezing and other new technologies trap nutrients and phytochemicals immediately after harvest.

Frozen spinach, for example, typically contains about 80 percent more beta-carotene than fresh spinach, which loses the nutrient in shipment and while sitting in the produce aisle.

Canning and cooking also can yield some advantages. Heat breaks down cell structures, increasing the amount of beta-carotene and lycopene, cancer-fighting antioxidants. For example, processed tomato products canned, jarred, or in sauces contain much higher levels of lycopene than fresh.

There is a nutritional downside, however. Canning, like cooking, causes the loss of some heat-sensitive and water-soluble nutrients such as vitamin C and folic acid; although, most can be reclaimed by using the canning liquid.

■ What to buy. Getting the full nutrient value of fresh vegetables and fruits requires careful selection and storage as well as timely consumption.

As a rule of thumb, buy only as many fresh fruits and vegetables as you expect to use in about three days. After sitting in your pantry or refrigerator any longer than that, many fresh produce lose nutritive value.

Others, including leafy greens, broccoli and green beans may fade more quickly.

■ What to watch out for. Experts caution that consumers should choose packaged produce carefully. Avoid frozen and canned vegetables that have sauces with added fat and sodium.

Instead, look for cans of low-fat, no-sodium-added vegetables and canned fruits packed in "light" juice with no sugar added.

■ What to cook. To incorporate frozen or canned produce and sturdy varieties into your meals, try Stuffed Cabbage Leaves, a recipe from "The Winter Vegetarian." Serve Peach Upside Down Gingerbread for dessert.

In "The Winter Vegetarian," author Darra Goldstein offers 150 hearty recipes using winter vegetables, grains, eggs and cheese inspired by colder climates in Italy, Norway, Russia, Turkey and Brittany.

STUFFED CABBAGE ROLLS

1 small head cabbage, about 2 pounds
2 large onions, chopped
3 tablespoons oil
FILLING:
1/2 cup raw barley
1 cup water
1 teaspoon salt
Freshly ground black pepper
1 large carrot, peeled and grated
1/4 cup minced parsley
1 garlic clove, minced
1 eggs, lightly beaten
SAUCE:
1 (28-ounce) can tomatoes, drained and chopped
1/3 cup freshly squeezed lemon juice
1/4 cup firmly packed dark brown sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt

Core the cabbage and blanch it in a pot of boiling water for 8-10 minutes. Remove from the pot and gently peel off the outer leaves. (If the inner leaves are still too stiff to be removed, return the cabbage to the boiling water for another minute or so.)

Reserve the large outer cabbage leaves, and use the small inner leaves to line the bottom and sides of a 3-quart saucepan. Reserve the blanching liquid.

Place the onions and olive oil in a heavy-bottomed frying pan, and pour over just enough of the reserve cabbage water to cover them. Bring to a boil and simmer slowly, uncovered, for 45 minutes to 1 hour, until the water has evaporated and the onions are golden. Stir occasionally to make sure the onions don't stick to the pan.

Meanwhile, in a small pan, bring the barley and water to a boil and simmer, covered, for 15 minutes until the water has been absorbed. (The grains will still be firm.)

Place the barley in a large mixing bowl and stir in the salt, pepper, grated carrot, parsley, garlic and egg. Blend well.

Take a large cabbage leaf and place a mound of the filling along the center. Tuck up the bottom edge; then roll and tuck the cabbage leaf until the filling is enclosed. Continue until all the filling is used, about 12 rolls.

Place half of the rolls in the cabbage-lined pot in a single layer. Cover with half of the prepared onions; then top with the remaining cabbage rolls and onions.

In a medium saucepan, bring the tomatoes to a boil with the lemon juice, sugar and salt. Pour over cabbage rolls, cover the pan and simmer for 1-1/2 to 2 hours.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am 57. Two years ago, I married a widower with four grown children. This is my second marriage. We moved to Louisville when my husband accepted a lucrative job here.

Van Buren

My dilemma is his four children. Three of them have spouses. Approximately every six weeks, all seven of them visit for a three-day weekend. Abby, they are wearing me out from cooking (none of the girls cook), picking up after them and doing mounds of laundry. After they leave, it takes me three days to clean up the house and recover.

I love my husband and have told him that I just can't do it anymore. He is upset with me and makes me feel like I am keeping him from his children. I have offered to host Thanksgiving, Christmas and Easter, which is all I can handle. I'm at the point that I dread the holidays.

I have two children of my own and two grandchildren. I love to see them, but not every six weeks! I visit — or they visit — every three to four months, which is enough for me.

Abby, please tell me how to handle the situation without being the "wicked stepmother." — OVERWHELMED IN KENTUCKY

DEAR OVERWHELMED: It is unfair for your husband to expect you to be cook and housemaid for houseguests that frequently. In order to lighten the burden on you, your husband should agree to hire part-time help during the weekends when his children descend upon you, so you'll have the time and energy to enjoy their company, too.

You deserve a break once in a while; consider planning an occasional weekend with friends to coincide with his children's visits.

DEAR ABBY: I am now in my third year of marriage to my husband. We have a daughter who is a year old. Unfortunately, it has become painfully clear that we do not have even one interest in common. My husband could survive to the end of his days with a bed, a computer, a television and a VCR.

I have accepted the fact that this man will never take the world by storm because of his complete lack of ambition. What I can no longer accept is that he has no respect for anyone. He seems to lack a fundamental concern, compassion and respect for other human beings. On top of this, he is sneaky. His work ethic is low, and he categorizes people who enjoy their work as "workaholics who work and one day die." He lacks passion, has no hobbies outside of TV and computers, and could not be less enthused about life.

During the holidays, my mom kills herself to lay out a spread that makes the Ritz pale by comparison, and each year my husband shows up in jeans and a sweatshirt. When I ask him each year to please pack something nice, he gets an attitude. The kicker is that she tries hard each time he is coming to prepare the things he likes. He treats his own mother the same way. She laughs it off and seems to take his lack of manners in stride.

Is there any hope of changing someone who doesn't care what others think of him, or what his actions do in regard to other people's feelings? — STUMPED IN NORTH CAROLINA

DEAR STUMPED: Sorry — you are fighting a losing battle. There is no way to help someone who is not willing to help himself. But if any of my readers have managed to "raise the dead," I'll pass along their input.

Low-fat recipes are tasty

By Molly Lopez
New York Daily News (KRT)

Not many people smile when they think of eating low-fat foods. Instead, "low-fat" conjures images of dry, tasteless meats and boring salads. However, not only is the new low-fat cookbook, "Crazy Plates" by Janet and Greta Podleski, full of original, tasty recipes, it's full of comic strips and jokes!

The recipe titles alone are enough to make you smile: Quiche Me, You Fool!, Corn in the U.S.A., Love Me Tenderloin, and Pump up the Jumbalaya are just a few.

Here are two recipes that I tried and liked.

IT'S-A-BELLA TORTELLINI

10 sun-dried tomatoes (not oil packed)
1/2 ounce dried wild mushrooms
1 teaspoon olive oil
1 cup chopped red onion
2 cloves garlic, peeled and minced
1 (28-ounce) can diced tomatoes, undrained
1 (6-ounce) can tomato paste
1/4 cup chopped fresh oregano or 1 tablespoon dried
1/2 teaspoon dried mint
1/4 teaspoon each salt and black pepper
1/4 teaspoon crushed red pepper flakes
1-1/2 pounds fresh or frozen cheese-filled tortellini
Grated Parmesan cheese, optional

Place sun-dried tomatoes and wild mushrooms in a small bowl. Pour 1 cup boiling water over top and let stand for 30 minutes. For sauce, heat the oil in a large, non-stick saucepan over medium heat. Add onions and garlic. Cook and stir until vegetables begin to soften, about 3 minutes. Add diced tomatoes and their liquid, tomato paste, oregano, mint, salt, pepper and crushed red pepper flakes if using. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat to low. Cover and simmer for 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add soaking liquid from sun-dried tomatoes and mushrooms to the tomato sauce.Chop tomatoes and mushrooms and add to sauce. Simmer, covered for 10 more minutes.

While sauce is simmering, cook the tortellini according to package directions. Drain well. Toss the hot tortellini with sauce and sprinkle with Parmesan cheese, if desired. Serve immediately.

BONBON JOVI

2 cups sugar
6 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa powder
1/2 cup evaporated low-fat (2 percent) milk
1/3 cup margarine (be sure it's non-hydrogenated)
1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract
3 cups quick-cooking rolled oats
1 cup sweetened shredded coconut

In a medium saucepan, combine sugar, cocoa, evaporated milk, and margarine. Cook and stir over medium heat until mixture comes to a boil. Boil for 1 minute, stirring constantly.

Remove from heat. Stir in vanilla. Add rolled oats and coconut and mix well. Drop by tablespoons onto a cookie sheet lined with waxed paper. Refrigerate until firm, about 30 minutes to 1 hour. Store in an airtight container in the refrigerator or at room temperature.

'Gourmet trailer' home to more than ordinary lunch fare

By Lauren Gelfand

WHEAT RIDGE, Colo. (AP) — The scent of raspberry glaze hangs in the air, beckoning connoisseurs of haute cuisine and junk-food junkies to a 1930s-era trailer decked out like a chuck wagon.

People come to O'Brien's Wings and Things to sample seven flavors of chicken wings, hand-cut onion rings and burgers encrusted with green olives, all served by owners Kevin and April O'Brien from a walk-up window and a drive-thru.

The couple opened the business in 1997 in an older part of this Denver suburb. The trailer is set on a concrete foundation in a small lot next to a Dairy Queen. Previous owners had sold hot dogs, Mexican food and other short-order fare for three decades.

"I've always said we have two kinds of customers," Kevin O'Brien said. "First-timers and addicts. That's all we have. Even the mean people come back."

O'Brien cuts and batters onion rings, caramelizes onions for salads and burgers and sautes mushrooms in a white wine sauce to serve his customers from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. on weekdays.

His dazzling array of homemade sauces, all available from mild to super hot, includes jalapeno, sesame, sweet and sour, hot cherry and the traditional buffalo sauce.

"I've been coming here at least once a week since they opened," James Powers said after he got out of his car to greet April O'Brien at the window. "I have tried everything on the menu. It's damn good. Even my girlfriend was impressed."

Shane Gordon downs a quarter-pounder and fries every day for lunch. "I was walking by and smelled this place and literally turned around and ran to the window the first time," Gordon said. "Why eat fast food? Why go somewhere that everything is made in bulk when you can come here and experience this?"

No meal is complete without at least a taste of the barbecue raspberry glaze, a pungent and sweetly subtle sauce that coats fresh-cut chicken wings, serves as a condiment for hand-shaped burgers and is the crowning glory in the chicken-fried steak sandwich O'Brien calls a "Sloppy John."

"One day I am going to bottle this stuff, not just for food but for the women who want to wear it as perfume," O'Brien said, only half-joking. "Nobody can make this stuff like I can and do it cost effectively. It's one of the reasons I have been so successful."

O'Brien's first foray into the kitchen was at a Denver restaurant at the age of 13. With no formal training, he worked his way up through a series of hotel and casino restaurants before he became executive chef of a five-star hotel restaurant in Denver that was renamed O'Brien's. "I got beat up (by my chefs) almost from the beginning," O'Brien, 39, recalled. "I think that's the best thing for anyone who wants to work in a kitchen — the on-the-job training from an old master means so much more than any two-hour class."

O'Brien also had modest success with his own upscale restaurant, which he ran for two years. O'Brien's at Heritage Square in Golden, another Denver suburb, was often compared to the nearby Briarwood Restaurant with a steak bearnaise that April O'Brien said was "so good you wanted to roll around on the plate with the sauce."

Going from a hotel kitchen to a workspace O'Brien is the first to call "rinky-dink" was an adjustment, but he said the kitchen isn't what keeps customers coming back. "What makes my food so good is that I care about what I make and even if you don't notice the little things I did, you can taste them," he said. "But food is food. If I make people happy with the food I make, it doesn't matter what I prepare for them."

Potatoes 'dressed' low fat way

Associated Press

Bread may be the staff of life, but potatoes can't be far behind. At least not since today's health-conscious generation has been reminded time and again that potatoes come from the earth fat-free and remain fat-free until they are "dressed."

So here, for spud lovers everywhere, are baked fries with a variety of seasonings and sauces high on taste, low in fat. The potatoes can be served as a snack or with dinner.

HOT FRIES; MILD AND MEDIUM, TOO

Cooking spray

Preheat oven to 500 degrees. Cut potatoes in half lengthwise. Place each half, cut-side down, on cutting board and cut lengthwise into 1/4-inch thick shoestrings. Place slices in a mixing bowl and toss with desired seasoning mixture (recipes follow) or salt and pepper to taste.

Line two baking sheets with foil; coat foil lightly with cooking spray. Divide potatoes between the two pans and spread evenly. Bake about 10 minutes, remove from oven and turn over potato slices. Return pans to oven and bake another 10 to 15 minutes, until potatoes are lightly browned and fork tender.

SEASONINGS

Onion Paprika: In a small bowl combine 2 teaspoons paprika, 1 teaspoon onion powder and 1/2 teaspoon salt. For a spicier mixture, add 1/4 teaspoon cayenne pepper.

Garlic Pepper: In a small bowl, combine 1/4 teaspoon garlic powder, 1/2 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper and 1/2 teaspoon of salt. For more zip, double up on the garlic and pepper.

Chili: In a small bowl, combine 1 teaspoon chili powder, 1 teaspoon cumin powder and 1/2 teaspoon salt. For more heat, add 1 teaspoon crushed red pepper flakes.

HORSERADISH CREAM SAUCE

3 tablespoons prepared horseradish with beets
Salt to taste

In a medium mixing bowl, combine ingredients and stir well. Season with salt, if desired.

PUREED SQUASH AND GINGER SAUCE

12-ounce package frozen, cooked and pureed squash (thawed)
1-1/2 teaspoons freshly grated ginger root
1 tablespoon soy sauce
2 teaspoons honey

In a medium mixing bowl, combine ingredients and stir well.

ROASTED PEPPER AND HERB SAUCE

12-ounce jar roasted red peppers, drained
1 tablespoon balsamic vinegar
1/2 teaspoon Italian seasoning
1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
Salt to taste

In a medium mixing bowl, combine ingredients and stir well. Transfer mixture to a blender or food processor and process until smooth. Season to taste with salt, if desired.

BARBECUE SAUCE

3/4 cup bottled chili sauce
1/4 cup steak sauce
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon red wine vinegar
1 tablespoon dry mustard

In a medium mixing bowl, combine ingredients and stir well.

Casserole captures flavor of Ireland

Associated Press

Some may say the Irish Food Board's task of promoting abroad what the Irish eat at home is near-futile. But to the Emerald Isle's credit, its cooking is becoming more interesting, if not more sophisticated.

Yes, there are lamb kidneys and pig's feet and blood pudding, all taking some thought before tasting. And there is the traditional fare we associate with St. Patrick's Day: corned beef and cabbage, soda bread, Irish stew, Irish coffee and Guinness and Murphys.

So what's new? Savoy Cabbage & Cheese Loaf, for one. Ingredients are familiar and preparation is simple. The casserole can be served as a main course or as a side dish with flank steak or a roast.

CABBAGE & CHEESE LOAF

3 tablespoons unsalted butter
2 tablespoons canola oil
1/4 cup diced onion
1 head Savoy cabbage, 2 to 3 pounds
Salt and freshly ground pepper, to taste.
3 eggs
1/2 cup heavy cream
1 cup grated cheddar cheese
3/4 cup fresh bread crumbs

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Grease a standard loaf pan 5x9x3-inches. Wash, dry and quarter the cabbage, then slice into 1/4-inch strips. In a large saute pan, heat butter and oil. Add the onion and saute until translucent. Add cabbage and stir well to coat with the butter and oil. Cover and simmer until the cabbage is wilted and has released its liquid. Remove the cover and cook over medium to high heat until the moisture in the pan has evaporated. Remove the pan from the heat and season cabbage to taste with salt and pepper.

In a medium mixing bowl, beat together eggs and cream. Add the cheese and 1/4 cup of the bread crumbs. Mix gently and pour into the loaf pan. Press remaining crumbs on top. Place the pan on the middle rack of the oven and bake for 40 to 45 minutes. The loaf should be quite firm to touch and golden brown on top. Let rest for 20 minutes before slicing.

Tex-Mex Rice and Beans not exactly as labeled, but still good

By Linda Anderson

I can't resist something that looks like Mexican food, even if it comes from the supermarket's freezer section, which could be why I bought a package of Hearty Budget Gourmet's Tex-Mex Rice and Beans. Of course, the fact that it was in a box marked "50 percent more food" that cost $1.99 (less than many other frozen entrees) might have had something to do with it.

Anderson

Budget Gourmet's frozen entrees are usually pretty tasty (for frozen foods) and less expensive than some of the other brands, which are two points in their favor. Of course, packaging isn't very fancy, but who cares?

Label advertising on the back of the box declared: "Hearty Budget Gourmet offers generous servings of your favorite, satisfying meals. Each Hearty recipe delivers the delicious taste and great value you expect from Budget Gourmet."

I didn't check the label advertising before I bought the entree, but I did check the nutrition label, which told me that the serving in the 14-ounce box contained 470 calories with 130 of them from fat. OK, that's more calories that I usually like to get in a frozen entree, but it was said to be contain "50 percent more food," so I could accept that. And the percentage of fat calories was close to the guidelines suggested by the American Heart Association that say only about 30 percent of daily calories be from fat.

My home-grown taste-tester doesn't like rice, so I knew this taste-test was mine, all mine, which was just fine with me, because I do like rice; also beans and the cheese that was pictured as being on top of the entree.

Imagine my surprise when I discovered that the Tex-Mex Rice and Beans was mostly rice and very few beans. OK, I can deal with that since, after all, I do like rice. It also had some corn and other veggies laced in there, and a whole lot of cheese on top — which is probably the source of most of those fat calories, since rice doesn't contain much fat.

The whole entree was tasty enough. It wasn't very spicy, but usually these things are made for more Yankee-fied taste buds that may not be used to the spices typical of real Tex-Mex. Oh well, you can always add salsa or something.

It was good though. Needed salt, but that's easy enough. But where were the beans? I only found a few in the whole 14 ounces. Why call it rice and beans when there are so few beans? Why not call it rice and cheese with a few beans and a little bit of corn? That may be more accurate.

All in all, I liked the entree. I'll probably buy it again. Going to make sure I've got some salsa on hand though.

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

McSorley faces assault charges

■ Bruins defenseman has already been suspended by the NHL for his stick attack on Edmonton's Donald Brashear.

Associated Press

VANCOUVER, British Columbia — Marty McSorley must now answer in a Canadian court for his stick attack on Vancouver's Donald Brashear.

The Boston Bruins defenseman — one of the league's tough guys — was charged with one count of assault with a weapon for his Feb. 21 attack. He plans to plead innocent, his lawyer said.

McSorley, who will not have to appear at the hearing, would face a maximum of 18 months in jail if convicted.

"I'm disappointed," McSorley said in an interview with ESPN. "I'm disappointed it's going to court because I don't know if anybody really knows right now how much I've already lost."

The 36-year-old defenseman was suspended by the NHL for the rest of the season in the league's harshest penalty ever for an on-ice infraction. He must meet with commissioner Gary Bettman before the league will consider letting him play again.

"I've been in contact with a very good lawyer in Vancouver and we were trying to not have it go to court," McSorley said. His suspension already will cost him an estimated $72,000 in salary.

Geoff Gaul, a spokesman for the British Columbia criminal justice branch, said the decision to charge McSorley was made after a prosecutor's review and a police investigation.

The NHL said it does not agree with the move, but said it will fully cooperate with Canadian authorities.

"We believe the league dealt with the matter quickly, decisively and appropriately — and did not feel that any further action was either warranted or necessary," said Bill Daly, the NHL's chief legal officer.

Bruins president and general manager Harry Sinden also expressed disappointment that the courts were getting involved.

"The National Hockey League has handed down a severe discipline in this case and we feel that was sufficient," he said, adding that the team would also cooperate fully.

After McSorley hit him in the right temple, Brashear fell backward, striking his head against the ice as his helmet came off. His body twitched and blood came from his nose. He was diagnosed with the most serious kind of concussion and his status is to be reviewed in about a week.

McSorley and Brashear, another NHL tough guy, had fought earlier in the game, and McSorley said he was trying to goad Brashear into another fight at the end of the game, a 5-2 victory by the Canucks.

"I had absolutely no intention of hurting Donald Brashear with my hockey stick," McSorley told ESPN. "I wanted a confrontation with Donald Brasher, no different than I've done on so many other nights. ... It just went badly."

McSorley has lasted 17 years in the league because of his ability to fight and protect his more skilled teammates. He had six previous suspensions in his career.

He is best known for serving as Wayne Gretzky's protector with the Edmonton Oilers and then with Los Angeles as the two were traded together in one of hockey's biggest deals.

McSorley said he has received calls of support from players in the league and Hall of Famers — "numerous tough guys" — who say they understand what happened and offered to speak on his behalf.

He told them to stay out of it because he didn't want attention drawn from the game.

"That's one thing I really feel bad about is the fact the game doesn't need a black eye — and I don't want to be the cause of it," he said in the interview.

It took police just over a week to investigate the slash, which was witnessed by thousands of fans at the game and shown repeatedly on TV highlight clips.

"There's a lot more involved in this than just that second and a half or two seconds that the video shows," McSorley said. "I think he embarrassed me. You definitely want a rematch. You have to stand up for yourself. Our bench was challenged. Our team was challenged."
