Citizens talk about ways to thwart 14-school plan

By Johnnye Montgomery

Some 50 to 60 Midlanders crowded into a Sunday school room in the educational building of Our Lady of San Juan Catholic Church Friday night to discuss what could be done to forestall the proposed 14-school plan approved Tuesday by the MISD board of trustees.

There were representatives from Midland's south, east and west sides at the meeting, many of them Fairmont addition residents whose children will be bused when the plan goes into place next fall.

The Rev. Tom Kelly, who acted as facilitator, began by explaining that he had called the meeting as a means of investigating options and ways of coming together.

"We've been told by the school district that there is nothing we can do, that this is a fait accompli," he said, "but in good faith, a lot of people went to two public forums, and I heard differences, but I also heard tremendous similarities. I heard people talk about justice and fairness for all our children, being concerned that we really do the right thing. But I didn't hear a desire on anybody's part at either of those meetings to sacrifice any group of children in any part of this city.

'I came away from those meetings with a deep sense that white and black and brown were standing together with common concern and interest in fairness and justice."

At Carver Cultural Center, GEM students are guaranteeing a green spring with the "Bio-Diversity Courtyard."

The Bio-Diversity Courtyard is a multi-year project carried out by fourth-graders. The purpose of the project is to create a habitat of native trees and plants for native insects and animal life, while teaching students applicable science.

Some 220 fourth-graders at Carver are spending time in science classes, recesses and after school with dirt under their nails and a hoe in their hands.

According to Emmy Ulmschneider, a fourth-grade science teacher at the school, the courtyard project began last year as stu-

State committee to hear well-plugging complaints from oil, gas producers

John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

Midland oil and gas producers who want to present testimony on controversial new state well-plugging requirements will have that opportunity Wednesday at a public hearing to discuss oil and gas and other issues.

The Texas Senate Natural Resources Committee announced this week that it will hold local hearings to gain input on oil and gas, ground water and low level radioactive waste storage. The hearings will be begin 9:30 a.m., Wednesday at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum.

One of those on hand to present testimony will be Texas Railroad Commissioner Charles Matthews, who will present testimony on the need to identify Texas natural gas trends and their significance to the Texas electric utility industry. A number of the larger utilities are also expected to deliver testimony on this topic.

While well-plugging is not expected to be the focus of Matthew's testimony, it is expected the issue will generate considerable public comment on the subject. A recent proposal by Texas Railroad Commissioner Tony Garza to speed the plugging of nonproductive wells has created widespread concern in the oil and gas community.

Garza proposed changes to the Railroad Commission rules that would end extensions for nonproducing wells, and force the plugging of oil wells. He said 15,605 wells have been carried for over two years and need to be plugged. "We need to act immediately," Garza said.

Oil and gas producers, however, say that not all nonproductive wells are potential polluters and do not need to be plugged. Morris Burns, executive vice president Permian Basin Petroleum Association, said wells that are not polluting should be left alone. "A nonproductive well today, can become productive tomorrow with the right price," Burns said. He said Henry Petroleum,

Conference looks at effects of telecommunications changes

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Telecommunications today is the equivalent of the railroad in the 19th Century, says the Texas Department of Economic Development.

"Communities that got the railroad thrived; communities that didn't get the railroad got bypassed," said Mark Langdale, chairman of the department's governing board, president of Posades USA and managing director of Caprock Communications at the Texas Economic Development Council's spring conference.

The conference focused on "The Changing Landscape of the Telecommunications Industry" and brought attendees from as far away as San Angelo and the Metroplex.

Tom Higgins, council chair, agreed with Langdale's analogy.

"If you don't have the railroad, you can't have the commerce," he said.

Local officials say they're determined the Permian Basin won't be bypassed.

"Odessa and Midland are fast positioning ourselves by encouraging this broadband communications pipeline to be implemented in our communities," said Mike George, president of the Odessa Chamber of Commerce. "In the future, 90 percent of business will be done over these lines as opposed to the old method of shipping and invoic-

PUC goal is for everyone to benefit from telecommunications revolution

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The telecommunications revolution is in full swing, says Mark Langdale, chairman of the Texas Department of Economic Development's governing board, president of Posades USA and managing director of Caprock Communications.

"This telecommunications revolution is on us. It will change the way we live and work," he said at the spring conference of the Texas Economic Development Council, which focused on the changing landscape of the telecommunications industry. "It will change the way we educate our children, the way we entertain ourselves, the way we receive health care."

The task of the Public Utilities Commission is to ensure that all areas of Texas, urban and rural, are able to participate in that revolution, said Brett Perlman, commissioner with the PUC.

"We are making important decisions at the PUC," he told the gathering. "We are creating Texas' new economy and looking at the role of telecommunications and electric utility deregulation in that econ-

When in Rome, join the crowd: Easter visitors jam city

By Laura King
Associated Press

ROME — A chorus of honking horns arises from a gridlocked road almost in the shadow of St. Peter's Basilica. Sidewalks are clogged with tour groups doggedly following colorful plastic flags waved by their leaders.

In this Easter season in this millennial year, Rome is all but bursting at its ancient seams with visitors.

Many are Roman Catholic faithful heeding Pope John Paul II's call to come to the city during what the church has proclaimed a Holy Year, a 700-year-old tradition dating to Pope Boniface VIII.

But plenty of others are in town for pilgrimages of a decidedly secular sort, lured by the Eternal City's eternal seductions: sumptuous meals, designer Italian goods, eye-popping art and architecture, a cool and sunny Roman spring.

"I'm an agnostic — I'm here because it's beautiful," said Jane Forbell, a 52-year-old Canadian visitor heading into the Vatican for a look at the Renaissance paintings in its opulent museums.

The devout, too, are making their mark. In the four Rome basilicas designated as sites where pilgrims who visit this year can obtain plenary indulgences — wiping out or lessening punishment for sins — crowds of faithful light candles, bow their heads in prayer and head into booths to make confession in one of half a dozen offered languages.

AP Photo

A tourist guide waves a map of Rome depicting St. Peter's Cupola to call the attention of her group, as they tour downtown Rome Friday. In this Easter season in this millennial year, Rome is bursting at its ancient seams with visitors.

On a recent day at one of those basilicas, St. John Lateran, pilgrims waited in a long line to climb on their knees up the adjoining marble Scala Santa, or Holy Staircase. Tradition holds that the staircase was trod upon by Jesus. So the Empress Helena, the religiously industrious mother of Constantine, had the whole thing packed up and brought to Rome from Jerusalem.

Sister Katya, a young Romanian novice nun who arrived in Rome only last week, had tears in her eyes when she reached the top. "I am so fortunate to be in a holy place at a holy time," she said softly.

Heading into one of the year's most crowd-drawing seasons — Holy Week, commencing with Palm Sunday and ending with Easter — it wasn't yet clear whether official forecasts of up to 30 million visitors to the city this year will prove overblown.

Some hoteliers and restaurateurs grumble that millennial hype has actually scared away would-be tourists. And shopkeepers say that crowds of visitors don't necessarily translate into booming business.

The luscious-looking prosciutto ham and pecorino cheese in the window of Angelo Agneli's little grocery didn't draw as much as a glance from a jostling group of pilgrims marching past on their way to a nearby basilica.

"Are they going to stop and buy something nice to eat from me? No," Agneli said glumly. "They're going to get back on their bus and go to their hotel and eat there."

Teresa Belardeti, whose family runs the venerable Libreria Belardeti near Vatican City, said she had thought business would pick up in this holy year. But despite the flocks of faithful passing by her door, sales have stayed flat.

"Maybe the pilgrims are buying a few more religious items, but that's it," she said.

Show celebrates American diplomat's wartime heroism

PARIS (AP) — Marc Chagall, Max Ernst, Andre Breton. Three artists hunted by the Nazis who were spirited out of occupied France by Varian Fry, a soft-spoken American diplomat who risked his life to save others.

For the first time since pro-Nazi Vichy officials expelled Fry from the U.S. Consulate in Marseille nearly 60 years ago, the Harvard-educated intellectual is getting his due in Paris with a major exhibition honoring his heroism.

With photographs from the period, paintings, drawings and sculpture by the artists he saved, the show that opened Friday at the Mona Bismarck Foundation spotlights how one man rescued thousands, battling not only Vichy collaborators, but also disapproving American diplomats in France.

Fry was sent to France by the Emergency Rescue Committee in August 1940 with the blessing of first lady Eleanor Roosevelt. His mission: to save some 200 artists and intellectuals who had sought refuge in France from the Nazis.

By the time he was thrown out 13 months later, Fry had managed to rescue 3,500 people from deportation and almost certain death.

Fry bought exit visas, negotiated with foreign embassies for passports, and even worked with counterfeiters to obtain forged identity papers and other documents. When those channels failed, he accompanied refugees into Spain on foot and by train.

"I remember very well when my family crossed the Pyrenees into Spain," recalled Pierre Schneider, a French art critic who was persecuted as a Jew during World War II.

"When we had to change trains, my father rushed to a phone to call Fry and tell him about the route we had just taken. My father had nothing to do with art, but Fry tried to help anyone he could."

Fry arrived in the southern port city of Marseille in August 1940, two months after France surrendered to Germany. France was divided into two zones — the northern zone occupied by the Nazis, and the south controlled by the collaborationist Vichy regime.

Artists and intellectuals by the thousands fled south to temporary safety, hoping to reach the Portuguese coast where ships were still leaving for North America.

Chagall, Breton, Ernst, Marcel Duchamps, Wilfredo Lam, Andre Masson, Jacques Lipchitz and Roberto Matta were among them. Fry set up his office at an estate outside Marseille where he housed dozens of artists, including Breton and his wife.

"He was such a modest, soft-spoken man, so cultivated, yet so passionate about his work," recalled Dina Vierny, the muse and companion of French sculptor Aristide Maillol. "Years later he would say that his only regret was that he didn't save more."

Vierny was Fry's link to many endangered artists and she became one of his most valuable "passeurs," leading groups of refugees through the rugged terrain into Spain.

"I didn't know the mountains, and it was Maillol who showed me the mule paths taken by smugglers and other criminals," she said.

Sales tax increase gets little reaction

By Ian Heald
Staff Writer

There has been a mixed reaction from shoppers in Midland regarding the quarter-cent sales tax increase that took effect April 1. The sales tax rate is now 8 percent.

The sales tax increase was approved by voters Nov. 2, 1999, with proceeds to be used to pay off the bonds used to build the Scharbauer Sports Complex.

Once the sports complex is paid for, the additional sales tax will be eliminated, according to city officials. City Manager Rick Menchaca has estimated the bonds could be paid off within 15 to 17 years.

Lisa Rodriguez, manager of Bealls Department Store, said there has been no customer reaction, positive or negative, to the quarter-cent sales increase. "Not really. I haven't had any responses or reaction at all from it," Ms. Rodriguez said.

Ms. Rodriguez said the average purchase from her store averages at about $100, which costs 25 cents more in sales tax for the purchase.

Dawn Martin, manager of Mervyn's department store, said the sales tax increase had sparked no reaction from her customers. "I have not heard a word. Not a word."

The same was true at Kmart, according to the store's manager, Frank Florez. "No complaints whatsoever."

But, Cary Caldwell, part owner of a local furniture store, on the other hand reports that many of his customers have voiced resentment over the new sales tax. Caldwell requested that the store's name not be used.

"Customers are not happy with the increase in taxes," Caldwell said. "They haven't been rude about it but they don't like it because the amount is way too much."

Caldwell shared the sentiment of his customers. "I think kids need to have a wonderful place to go but I'm nervous about it being so much money."

Items sold in Caldwell's store range from $2500 to $22,000 in price, or $6.25 to $55 extra in sales tax since April 1.

Caldwell said that in early April some customers went as far as request that the store charge them the 7.75 percent sales tax rate in order to avoid the added expense.

Midlanders celebrate contribution to Tall City at Volunteer Showcase

By Mary Maddox
Staff Writer

Even in the heat of a late spring afternoon in West Texas, Midland volunteers gathered in Centennial Plaza Thursday for a community-wide celebration of their contribution in making the Tall City a better place to live.

Sponsored by the Leadership Midland Alumni, the second annual Community Volunteer Showcase included the presentation of a check for almost $7 million representing a monetary value derived from the more than 500 thousand hours spent by volunteers in the community this year.

Thirty-eight Permian Basin organizations, including Habitat for Humanity, Camp Fire Boys and Girls, Texas Scholars, Safe Place, United Way, and Casa de Amigos, totaled hours spent by citizens giving up their time in order to lend a helping hand. Each volunteer hour was then multiplied by approximately $13.34, a calculation of the average pay per hour that would have been earned by the volunteer.

The showcase began at 5 p.m. with Bill Dingus serving as master of ceremonies. Mayor Bobby Burns was also present to give a proclamation. Certificates were presented by volunteer agencies, followed by the presentation of the check by the Showcase committee and an assortment of featured speakers.

Coordinators stressed the importance of taking time out to recognize the work of volunteers in the community, especially during National Volunteer Week.

"We just wanted to let volunteers know that they are appreciated," said coordinator Lynn Pope, adding that often people become too busy to give proper thanks to local volunteers, and the Volunteer Showcase was designed to do exactly that.

TESTIMONY: Committee to focus on 3 charges with higher oil prices, had been able to reopen 15 abandoned wells that are now producing 100 barrels of oil per day.

The Senate committee has eight charges of responsibility, but will focus only on three at the hearing: The future of the Texas oil and gas industry will be the prime focus, along with ground water resources and the storage of low-level radioactive waste.

All three issues have been the focus of media attention and public concern in West Texas in recent months.

A spokesman for the Senate Natural Resources Committee said the hearings were being held in Midland, because of the high level of concern in all three focus areas, and that quality input was expected.

PLAN: 'We need to do something solid and direct'

(From 1A)

Kelly went on to say that while the cluster system wasn't perfect, that it had gone a long way toward achieving an integrated school system.

"We probably have many more black and Mexican/Hispanic teachers than we did 20 years ago.

"I think I would be equally outraged if 75 percent of white/Anglo children were being bused somewhere and the rest were not, or if 75 percent of black children were being bused and the rest were not.

"I'm incensed that it appears to me that the school board did so simply and casually ignore months of discussion. There's something in me that doesn't accept that. The busing now affects the younger children. We don't live in a society where we can have our kindergarten children waiting outside in the dark every morning for the bus.

"The reason why I wanted each of you here is that we need to do something solid and direct.

"I think the way to go is by the law and by way of the courts. If it takes money to hire lawyers, then whatever, we should raise the money to take that court action."

Other points that came up were that the children of the southside area will be bused for their entire school career.

Some questions brought up were:

- Are they going to put seat belts on the buses for those tiny children whose heads don't even reach the top of the seats?
- Are they going to have security guards to protect the little kids from the big kids?
- What is going to happen to integration when the magnet schools start up?
- Could we bring an injunction against this plan?

While many of the parents voiced desires for a return to neighborhood schools, there were dissenters.

"Neighborhood schools are great, but before the cluster system, they were not equal. And we really don't know whether they would be equal if we returned to them," said Midland High School teacher Teresa Marmolejo.

Alma Marshall said while the prospect of going to court might sound appealing, any court action would be heard before the same judge, because there's no final judgment as yet.

"You do need to understand that as far as having a direct voice to the judge, no one except the Coleman and LULAC intervenors have legal status and can be heard."

The meeting wound up with Kelly calling for consensus.

The group agreed that what everybody wants is integration with equity and to maintain the cluster system until they can set up a committee that would reflect the community and would develop a more equitable plan, or ask the judge to appoint a school master who would develop a plan. A process for such a committee is already in place, known as "Section 10," of the agreed judgment.

They decided that each neighborhood group will meet with their individual members and parents and determine whether they are in agreement to maintain a cluster system until another plan can be developed.

These groups also will ask if they're willing to financially support the intervenors who are in place now, or form a new group to form a coalition and seek intervenor status from Judge Edward Prado.

KIDS: Students working on Bio-Diversity Courtyard at Carver Cultural Center

dents received practical instruction on the sciences, through planning the project. Students took soil samples, studied the native plants, animals and insects in the courtyard, then used that information to determine what type of habitat would best suit the expanse between the two main buildings at Carver.

Students submitted several landscaping designs, which were sent to a committee of parents and teachers. The committee selected what they felt was the best plan and the current crop of fourth-graders began work on the project.

"We had help from the Master Gardeners doing the landscaping and the horticulture," said fifth-grader Garrett Smith, who was part of the original planning process.

According to 11-year-old Stephanie Strauss, who also served on the planning team, the information collected through soil samples and other studies, helped the group determine what type of courtyard they wanted to create.

The final product will include a patch of buffalo grass, butterfly gardens and a pond.

"We wanted to do a pond, because it's so dry here in Midland," Stephanie said.

Fourth-graders are digging the ground, planting trees and plants and watering them. Ms. Ulmschneider, who heads the project along with Jennifer Walker, said the project serves to teach students the application of several disciplines of science — experiment, investigation, horticulture, soil science, biology and entomology. And whether they know they're learning, the students see it as fun.

"My favorite part is planting," Ashley Ruggleys said. "We planted all the plants and trees."

Before the project, the courtyard was covered in Bermuda grass, which had to be sprayed with grass killer. Students then tilled the ground and prepared it for planting.

Kelsey Fink — who along with Ashley, Austin Bullock and Nathan Ham, is a project coordinator — said she's anxious to see the final results. "I want to see all the different plants, because it's so brown out here," Kelsey said, adding that she's particularly interested in seeing the butterfly garden and the pond. "I am so proud of them and what they have done," added Ms. Ulmschneider. "They are leaving a legacy."

The courtyard is not expected to be complete for a few more years.

However, in June, the courtyard will be dedicated to past graduates of Carver High School and future students in the GEM program.

The project is expected to cost in the neighborhood of $10,000 when complete. The school has raised approximately $2,600 through various fund-raisers and would not turn away community members who might want to donate supplies or money for the project.

For more information, call Ms. Ulmschneider at Carver Cultural Center, 689-1420.

CHANGES: Local officials determined for basin not to be bypassed

(From 1A)

ing by mail. We feel like, because of our amenities in being a smaller community, good traffic patterns, quality of life and high unemployment, we'll be attractive to high-tech, emerging companies and we'll do everything in our power to see we're on the cutting edge of this technology for the Permian Basin."

Midland Mayor Bobby Burns said he was pleased to see high speed Internet access becoming more accessible to cities Midland's size.

"Midland and Odessa are ready to capitalize," he said, agreeing with George. "If we work hard, we'll be successful in bringing new business and jobs to Midland. And with our airport and the access we offer, that opens a lot of doors. Those high-technology jobs are a big part of our future and we have to work to capture a piece of that opportunity."

Langdale pointed out that Ford Motor and General Electric have already announced they want their supply chain converted to e-commerce in the next 18 months.

He said the telecommunications revolution will have a major impact on small and medium-size communities like Midland and Odessa.

"Broadband access will be the No. 1 economic development tool for your community. If you have access, industries will be interested in you. If you don't, they won't be," he said. "Local communities must be educated to the economic potential of broadband. For years communities have looked at utilities for extra revenues, like a hidden tax. With deregulation, things are different."

For example, he said, his company, which is set to complete laying 7,000 miles of fiber optic cable in 30 larger and mid-size communities, wanted to build an "off-ramp" in Victoria. But the community wanted to charge a big fee to install the cable and then charge high franchise fees, prompting the company to cancel its plans.

After an agreement was reached with the city on fees and the company's plans were announced, "the incumbent service provider, which hadn't upgraded its system there in years, suddenly completely updated its system so now Victoria has enhanced services it didn't before competition arrived."

Experts predict that telecommunications lines, which carried 90 percent voice transmissions and 10 percent data transmissions in 1996, will carry 90 percent data and 10 percent voice transmissions by 2003. Langdale went further than that, saying he believed by 2003, 99 percent of the transmissions will be data sent through high speed bandwidth pipes.

That bandwidth, he said, will allow Texans to market their products and services globally without leaving their communities.

BENEFIT: Technologies are available to serve rural areas

omy."

The Texas Legislature, he said, is concerned that as the telecommunications and electric utility industries move from regulated monopolies to deregulated industries, all areas, but especially rural areas will be able to benefit.

"I'll be working over the next year on the provision of advances services," he said. "The telecommunications infrastructure is so important for economic development, and there's no inherent reason for the historic rural distance penalty any more."

Joe Binns, executive director with Southwestern Bell in Austin, said that his company has been working with the PUC, providing information on the deployment of its services in Texas, particularly its advanced services like Digital Subscriber Lines, which the company is rapidly making available throughout the state.

He pointed out that different technologies are available to serve rural areas, including wireless access.

"In the next six to 18 months, other companies will be coming online to provide high speed access on both the download and upload sides. These technologies aren't available from telecommunications companies but they are available," he said.

Perlman predicted that telecommunications deregulation will drive competition into the local telephone markets, benefiting consumers.

Competition in long distance has driven long distance prices down, and companies like AT&T, MCI Worldcom and Sprint are looking for new areas of profitability, finding possibilities in local service, he said, adding that they are also seeing profit potential in connecting customers to the Internet.

"There's going to be a huge fight between cable companies, the telephone companies and new service providers, and this will drive a new round of competition," he said.

Russian lawmakers approve START II treaty to scrap nuclear warheads

MOSCOW (AP) — Ending years of deadlock, lawmakers on Friday approved the START II treaty to scrap thousands of U.S. and Russian nuclear warheads, but the government warned it would abandon all arms-control pacts if Washington goes ahead with an anti-missile system.

The swift approval of START II was President Vladimir Putin's first major foreign policy action and underlined his strong authority and the willingness of the new centrist majority in parliament to work with the government.

Putin, who took the unusual step of attending the debate to urge ratification, warned that Moscow would pull out of arms agreements if the United States breaches the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty.

"I want to stress that in this case, we will have the chance and we will withdraw not only from the START II treaty, but from the whole system of treaties on limitation and control of strategic and conventional weapons," he told deputies before the vote.

The State Duma, the lower chamber of parliament, easily approved START II by a vote of 288 to 131. Communists and hard-liners in the Duma had for years blocked the pact, which was ratified by the U.S. Senate in 1996.

START II would halve U.S. and Russian nuclear arsenals to 3,000-3,500 warheads each by the end of 2007. A new treaty, START III, which is being discussed, envisages cuts to 1,500-2,500 warheads.

Approval of START II is likely to boost Moscow's ties with Washington, strained by Chechnya and other disputes. It may also soften the image of Putin, whose call to restore Russia as a great power has alarmed some Western officials.

Secretary of State Madeleine Albright, on a visit to Ukraine, hailed the vote. "I congratulate the Russian people on the Duma's decisive ratification of the START II treaty. This is a big step forward," she said.

The treaty must now be ratified by the Federation Council, the upper chamber of parliament, which is expected to approve it.

While the West will welcome approval of START II, it may lead to new friction with Washington over the 1972 ABM treaty. Washington wants to amend the treaty to build a limited missile-defense system against possible attacks from "rogue states" such as North Korea.

Russia vehemently opposes the plan, saying it would make its own forces ineffective and trigger a new arms race. Washington insists the system would not be able to counter a major attack and does not pose a threat to Russia.

Albright said Friday that "our discussions with the Russians have been not about withdrawing but about adjusting the treaty — which has been done before."

But Putin warned that Moscow would not accept changes. "The ball is in their court," he said, referring to the Americans.

The Duma approved a non-binding resolution stipulating that Russia would have the right to revoke START II if Washington breaks the ABM agreement.

Analysts downplayed some of Putin's tough talk, saying it may be aimed at appeasing nationalists and that Moscow is interested in preserving good ties with Washington and does not want a serious breach over the ABM treaty.

Putin may accept a deal on the ABM treaty, possibly in return for Washington agreeing to relax a ban on multiple warheads on land-based missiles — something the Russian military favors, they said.

"To get concessions from the United States, Russia has no other bargaining chip save its consent for ABM modification," said Alexander Pikayev, an analyst at the Carnegie Endowment's Moscow office.

Putin said Russia had to avoid a new international arms race and that START II and III would cut Moscow's bill for nuclear forces by more than half over the next decade. He said the money could be used to boost the country's crumbling conventional forces.

"It preserves a powerful nuclear shield, but also allows us to channel funds to the support of the conventional forces and allows us to make our army more combat ready," he said.

Zimbabwe farm occupations worry, confuse one family

By Ravi Nessman
Associated Press

CHINHOYI, Zimbabwe — At the ominous sound of distant drumbeats, Glynis Purkiss' gentle smile disappears in a wave of anxiety.

For the past 10 days her white family's farm has been occupied by black squatters demanding, at the very least, a good chunk of land for themselves. The squatters' drumming has been a near-constant, vibrating reminder of the fight over white-owned farms simmering throughout Zimbabwe.

"We'll certainly be pushed off rather than go. It's worth fighting for," the 38-year-old former nurse said from the safety of the gated homestead inside her family's 7,400-acre farm.

In this agriculture-dependent country of 13 million where 4,000 white farmers own one-third of the productive farmland, thousands of squatters have occupied more than 900 white-owned farms.

The High Court on Thursday backed the farmers and ordered authorities to remove the squatters. But President Robert Mugabe, who has backed the squatters, refused to follow earlier court rulings to remove them. And police did not appear to be making any moves Friday, though there were scattered reports of some squatters preparing to leave farms on their own.

AP Photo

Zimbabwean commercial farmer Arthur Purkiss works with his staff on his Chikuti Estates in the Karoi district, 100 miles north of Harare, Zimbabwe Thursday. For more than a week, his white family's farm has been occupied by black squatters demanding, at the very least, a good chunk of land for themselves.

Mugabe's government has argued that police action against the squatters — many of whom are armed with clubs, knives, spears and guns — could trigger a civil war. Opposition politicians say Mugabe instigated the occupations as a distraction from the unemployment and inflation crippling the country as it prepares for parliamentary elections.

After the court Thursday ruling, Vice President Joseph Msika appealed for the squatters to leave. But squatters may have gotten a different signal from Mugabe.

Speaking from a summit in Cuba, Mugabe continued to sound a defiant tone despite international criticism. He again threatened to use a new constitutional amendment to seize white-owned land without compensation.

"I want to assure you that the land will be acquired, sanctions or no sanctions," he said in Havana on Thursday.

Some squatters say they are frustrated because government plans to buy some of white-owned land and redistribute it to landless blacks have foundered since Zimbabwe gained independence from Britain in 1980.

Arthur Purkiss' father bought their hilly farm as uninhabited bushland in 1952. Now, with about 600 arable acres, it is mostly used to breed cattle and raise game for hunters to stalk.

When squatters began occupying farms across the country at the end of February, the Purkiss farm 100 miles west of the capital, Harare, was spared at first.

Then, on April 3, a group came to his gate and demanded Purkiss sign over his land.

He refused, and the squatters took up camp just outside the gate, screaming and threatening him for two days until police forced them to move further from the house. But they periodically returned to yell at the family.

"I've been trying to keep it cool, but it's difficult when they are thrashing at the gate and calling you all sorts of names," Arthur Purkiss said.

Worried for the safety of her 11-year-old daughter, Kelly, and 13-year-old son, Sean, Glynis Purkiss stays awake in her living room late into the night until she feels confident the squatters are sleeping.

In recent days, the squatters have begun surveying the land and putting down pegs to mark the areas they plan to farm.

The occupation has placed strains on the farm's 40 laborers. Some sympathize with the occupiers but question their methods.

The squatters "are our neighbors," said Lawrence Chimika, 36, the farm's black foreman. "To be on the side of Mr. Purkiss would be a problem, but to be on the side of the veterans would be a problem as well."

The squatters have portrayed themselves as veterans of Zimbabwe's independence war who are merely seeking economic justice. But many are far too young to have fought in the battles that ended two decades ago.

Carole Lee, 66, a long-time social worker and health educator, works at the Retired Senior Volunteer Program Thursday in Cleveland. Lee says the earnings limit repeal won't erase hiring discrimination against the elderly but reflects a growing realization that at 65 people are "not just ready for the retirement home."

Senior citizens will be free to make as much as they want

By Dave Carpenter
Associated Press

They will be managing offices in Chicago, leading tours in Utah, bagging groceries in San Diego and flipping burgers in Maine.

Retirement-age Americans, newly freed from Social Security earnings limits, will soon be working more, much to the delight of stores, restaurants, vacation spots and other employers struggling to find help in this booming economy.

While the newly employed older people won't immediately reshape the work force, they could help curb inflation by increasing the labor supply.

And some employers say the senior citizens' solid work ethic will be a good influence on others.

"They're very dependable. They work real well with our younger people, and they're really customer service-oriented," says Karen Poppe, human resource director at Wall Drug, a big Western-style restaurant, museum and tourist haven in South Dakota.

Faced by the tightest labor market in memory, Congress last month voted unanimously to repeal Depression-era legislation in which people ages 65 to 69 lost $1 in Social Security benefits for every $3 they earned above an annual limit of $17,000. President Clinton signed it April 7.

The law, retroactive to Jan. 1, immediately affects about 800,000 Social Security recipients who are working and 100,000 more who haven't sought benefits.

And that's just the beginning of a longer-term trend of older workers, as baby boomers close in on retirement.

Only about 13 percent of those age 65 or older work, according to the American Association of Retired People, but most baby boomers have indicated in recent surveys that they intend to work at least part time at that age.

Experts see several effects of freeing the 65-to-69 age group to work without penalties.

For instance, states with the largest percentages of senior citizens and the most tourist jobs may reap the biggest rewards.

The traditional retirement havens of Florida and Arizona may see more white-collar and technology jobs as telecommuting gives older professionals more opportunities, says John Challenger, chief executive of Chicago-based Challenger, Gray & Christmas, an executive employment firm.

"We're moving into an era when technology is going to be a tremendous boon for people over 60," Challenger says.

Jumps in consumer prices, core inflation rate, rattle Wall Street

By Jeaninne Aversa
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Consumer prices surged in March, reflecting higher costs for everything from gasoline to housing. The unexpectely bad news on inflation triggered the worst one-day point drop in Wall Street history.

Friday's report prompted investors, already suffering a dismal week, to unload stocks feverishly. The selling turned into a panic as the session wore on.

The Dow plunged 616.23 points, or 5.6 percent, to 10,307.32. At its lowest point, it was off 722 points; The Nasdaq dropped 361.58, or 10 percent, to 3,315.20, by preliminary calculations.

Most troubling to investors and economists: the core rate of inflation, which ignores volatile food and energy prices, jumped by the largest amount in five years.

On a wild day on Wall Street, Federal Reserve chairman Alan Greenspan renewed a warning that while technological improvements have helped investors manage risk better, the nation's financial markets are not immune to a sudden loss of confidence.

"It is the general human experience that when confronted with uncertainty, whether in financial markets or in any other aspect of life, disengagement is the normal protective reaction," Greenspan said in a speech.

Treasury Secretary Lawrence Summers, asked about Wall Street's dramatic slide in an appearance on CNN, said: "We're watching developments in the markets, as we always do." But Summers stressed that the fundamentals of the U.S economy remain sound.

The Consumer Price Index, the most closely watched inflation gauge, shot up 0.7 percent last month, the biggest spike in close to a year, which followed a sizable 0.5 percent increase in February, the Labor Department said.

While the overall figure surprised economists and investors, it was the 0.4 percent increase in the core rate of inflation, reflecting fairly widespread price increases, that really stunned them. The core rate took its biggest leap in five years, a rise twice as fast as many analysts expected.

"The Fed has been worried that inflation would accelerate but had not seen evidence of a 'smoking gun.' ... It's fair to say that the gun has smoked," First Union economist David Orr said of the core rate.

Higher prices for housing, clothing, airline fares, medical care and other items all contributed to the jump in the core rate, which had risen by a mild 0.2 percent in February.

The inflation report raises the odds that the Federal Reserve might boost interest rates by half a percentage point when policy-makers meet May 16, economists said. Still, many believe the Fed will stick with its steady-as-she-goes approach and boost rates by a quarter of a point.

The central bank has raised rates five times since June 30, each a quarter of a point, to slow the red-hot economy and keep inflation under control.

A huge 4.9 percent increase in energy costs, the largest since last April, helped catapult overall consumer prices in March.

Gasoline prices rose 11.1 percent and natural gas went up 1.9 percent, both increases the largest since September. However, fuel oil prices, which posted a record increase in February, fell in March by 14.2 percent, the biggest decline in 10 years.

Production limits by oil-producing nations largely accounted for the rise in overall energy costs. Crude oil prices hit $34 a barrel in early March, the latest in a series of nine-year highs that have sent gasoline prices soaring. Given that oil prices have fallen since then, economists believe the April CPI report should show lower energy prices.

A decision by oil-producing countries to boost production should eventually provide additional relief.

Of more concern to economists, though, were increases in other prices that they did not believe were linked to higher energy costs.

Housing costs, a big chunk of the total CPI, rose 0.4 percent reflecting low supply and strong demand, economists said.

Clothing prices rose 0.3 percent, and medical care costs grew by 0.5 percent last month.

PORTERVILLE, Calif. — President Clinton is extending greater protection to more than 30 groves of giant sequoia trees across California, employing his executive authority to add to his environmental legacy in his final year in office.

The declaration Saturday would add to the 2.8 million acres of national monuments Clinton already has created, giving him perhaps the best conservation record in the Lower 48 states since Theodore Roosevelt.

The sequoias can grow close to 300 feet tall and 40 feet thick and are found in ancient groves scattered through the Sierra Nevada range.

The massive reddish trunks create what are often described as nature's cathedrals, with thick carpets of pine needles that mute most sound and sunlight that filters dimly through the branches.

"These trees are truly amazing," says Don Holtan, a Madison, Wis., engineer who stopped in Sequoia National Park on Thursday to walk among the giants. "I think they are truly humbling."

About half of America's sequoia groves are already protected because they lie within the Sequoia, Kings Canyon and Yosemite National Parks. Clinton's declaration applies to most of the other half.

Those trees are already in national forests and are protected from logging. But changing the land's designation from a "national forest" to a "national monument" creates a buffer zone around the trees where logging of other species would be banned along with some forms of recreation and development.

President Clinton is expected to set aside 355,000 acres of forests in California as a federal monument to permanently protect groves of giant sequoia trees in Sequoia National Forest, officials said Wednesday

Clinton is protecting 355,000 acres under the Antiquities Act of 1906, which allows him to designate land a "national monument" without going to Congress.

That angers some Republicans, and many residents of the foothills here, who say the president's move is yet another federal land grab. Others worry that business and recreation will be squeezed out.

"I don't think we really need this," said Brian Clausen, a Porterville convenience store clerk. "I think the president is just trying to leave a legacy so people do not think so much about the sex scandal."

California GOP Chairman said: "The best way to preserve this area is to have the public use it carefully, not shut it down completely."

The declaration will bring the amount of land set aside by Clinton in the Lower 48 states to 3.1 million acres — more than any president including Theodore Roosevelt, who created the national park system.

Jimmy Carter holds the conservation record. Frustrated after battles with Congress, he used the Antiquities Act to create 54 million acres of national monuments in Alaska.

Previously, Clinton created the 1.7-million-acre Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument in Utah in 1996. In January, he designated the Grand Canyon-Parashant and Agua Fria national monuments in Arizona, which total more than 1 million acres, and the California Coastal National Monument, which encompasses thousands of offshore rocks and tiny islands the length of the California coast.

In October, he ordered the Forest Service to study whether to designate "wilderness areas" across 50 million acres of national forest in 38 states. A wilderness designation is the highest degree of protection; it bars logging, grazing, road-building and all use of motorized vehicles.

"That may make him the Teddy Roosevelt of the 21st century," said Carl Pope, executive director of the Sierra Club.

Israelis, Palestinians put views on paper

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israeli and Palestinian negotiators, nearing the end of another round of talks, have exchanged documents outlining their views on a Palestinian state, the future of Jerusalem and other tough problems.

State Department spokesman James P. Rubin said although these could become the "core elements" of an overall settlement, he did not want to overstate the significance of the step.

The talks, in a second round at Bolling Air Force Base Washington, are to wind up this weekend. In about two weeks, the two sides will resume work at a site in the Middle East on an accord.

'American Psycho': From media obsession to minor cult item

By Hillel Italie
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Reading to a standing-room-only crowd at Barnes & Noble, Bret Easton Ellis didn't suggest a youth icon or a man who inspired hate mail. He's a modest sort, pudgy and balding, his voice less a sharpened blade than a dull whine, like a waiter reciting the daily specials.

The 36-year-old novelist was at the store this week to promote his latest book, 1999's "Glamorama," but audience members wanted to talk about "American Psycho," his notorious riff on a sociopathic yuppie that came out Friday as a movie.

"Yes, there were death threats before the book came out," Ellis told a young-looking gathering of about 100 men and women, some sitting cross-legged in the aisles, others standing tippy-toe in the back. "The threats stopped once people had the chance to read it."

Nearly 10 years after publication, "American Psycho" has evolved from a reviled media obsession to a minor cult item. More than 400,000 copies are in print — it's Ellis' most popular work — with more than 80,000 shipped this year because of the movie.

Ellis said he still gets letters, mostly positive. College students send him their theses, and fans maintain Web sites.

AP Photo

Christian Bale appears in a scene from the Lions Gate Films' thriller "American Psycho," which opened in theaters nationwide on Friday. Bale plays Patrick Bateman, a financial whiz kid whose interest in mergers and acquisitions gives way to "murders and executions."

Tom Cushman, manager of the New York-based Murder Ink bookstore, said the gory 1991 novel has been a slow but steady seller.

"When people buy it at the store, they don't just happen to find the book, they're looking for it," Cushman said Thursday. "We have some people who just want serial killer books, the grislier the better. Other people have heard something about it. Controversy will pique their interest."

Set during the stock-market boom of the 1980s, "American Psycho" tells the story of Wall Street hotshot Patrick Bateman, whose interests run to serial killing. Like such earlier Ellis novels as "Less Than Zero," the book was a catalog of materialism and amorality, but many wondered whether the author satirized or symbolized the subject matter.

Feminists attacked its encyclopedic depictions of violence against women, with the Los Angeles chapter of the National Organization for Women playing excerpts on an information hot line. Some bookstores refused to carry it and Ellis said he received 13 death threats.

Ellis' publisher, Simon & Schuster, dropped "American Psycho" despite having paid a $300,000 advance. Vintage Books quickly acquired the novel but did not send Ellis on a tour and included no promotional material in copies mailed to the press.

Most critics hated the book.

Jonathan Yardley of The Washington Post called it "a contemptible piece of pornography." Norman Mailer, writing in Vanity Fair, defended Ellis' right to be published but believed "American Psycho" the work of "a half-competent and narcissistic young pen."

"It's amazing to me the book still sells," said Roger Rosenblatt, a columnist for Time who panned the novel back then in The New York Times. "I think the fact that 400,000 copies are in print doesn't mean it's any good. It just means 400,000 people are interested in it."

The movie version is more lighthearted and less bloody, but it, too, has had some trouble. An anti-violence group in Toronto, where the film was made, pointed out that a local serial killer had owned a copy of "American Psycho." Although at least one of the murders happened before Ellis' book came out, the production team lost permission for some location shooting and had to build sets instead.

Rock star Huey Lewis, whose "Hip to be Square" becomes music for Bateman to murder by, pulled the song from the soundtrack album. (It remains in the movie).

The film version was made by a woman, Mary Harron, and stars British actor Christian Bale. Ellis called the adaptation "intelligent" and true to the book.

Whistlers blow into N. Carolina for convention

LOUISBURG, N.C. (AP) — Whistle a happy tune, whistle the blues, whistle a passage from Beethoven — it doesn't matter what at the 27th annual International Whistlers Convention, just pucker your lips and blow.

Actually, you don't even have to blow.

"We have some whistlers who whistle entirely by whistling in. No air goes out," said Allen deHart, the convention founder and assistant to the president at Louisburg College, where the competition began Friday.

Winners will be announced Saturday in the adult, teen, child and "allied arts" divisions, the last for people who whistle with their fingers or practice ventriloquism.

Kilgour Shives, 84, of Vancouver, Canada, attending for the seventh time, prefers to whistle a capella rather than with a taped musical accompaniment as he must do at the competition, but likes the challenge anyway.

"I get enjoyment when people hear me whistle," Shives said. He planned to compete with opera accompaniment.

Yoshiharu Takamoku came from Osaka, Japan, to compete. He spoke little English but whistled clearly and handed out laminated cards announcing the Japan Whistlers Association.

One judge, Barry Rector of Vancouver, said whistling isn't as popular a commercial art as it was 100 years ago.

"Whistlers that had a talent were hired by the rich and famous to come whistle in their parlors," Rector said during a break Thursday in a whistling class, where 20 or so students brushed up on their vibrato and were counseled to keep a glass of water and lip balm handy.

The contest began in 1974 when the local arts festival held a singing competition and Darrell Williams of Durham asked to whistle his selection. He was the first whistling competition winner. He returned the next year, bringing five or six other whistlers with him.

Once there were hundreds of contestants, but this year there will be between 60 and 100 finalists; serious whistlers submitted tapes in advance and some were eliminated.

Back from rehab, congressman talks about battle with alcoholism

By Jennifer Loven
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Rep. Phil Crane's alcohol use grew to almost nightly 10-Heineken binges until a surprise intervention by friends, family and fellow lawmakers made him reluctantly agree to get help.

Now, after three weeks in a Maryland rehabilitation facility, the Illinois Republican is back in the fray of Congress, conducting soul-baring interviews with reporters and even briefly running the House floor for the first time in his 16 terms on Capitol Hill.

Crane, the House's most-senior Republican and a former presidential candidate, declared Friday he has given up alcohol for good and already feels better.

"My victories are on a roll. ... See, rehab and now I'm speaker," the 69-year-old congressman from Chicago's northwest suburbs joked during a wide-ranging interview.

Still, Crane appeared to struggle with the widely accepted view of alcoholism that it is a lifelong addiction and disease. Instead, he repeatedly referred to it as a "habit" he has successfully kicked, even bragging that he left his treatment program after 26 days — four days early — because counselors deemed him ready.

"Not that you conquer it," he quickly corrected himself. "You do it day by day, they stress that, hour by hour."

He said he has been invigorated since his return on Monday by colleagues' "hugs and pats" and applause.

But Crane said he was especially anxious to get back before lawmakers left for a two-week recess so he could work on his longtime pet project: extending new trade benefits to African, Central American and Caribbean nations. Indeed, a tentative House-Senate agreement was reached just Thursday night.

He also acknowledged that addressing his drinking problem was important as he strives to become chairman of the powerful House Ways and Means Committee next year.

Crane is next in line to succeed retiring Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, as head of the tax-writing panel. But Crane faces a stiff challenge from Rep. Bill Thomas, R-Calif., and perhaps others, in part because of his reputation for being largely absent from some of the committee's toughest battles.

Over the last few months, the congressman said he had become "vaguely aware" he was drinking too much as he counted up to 10 empty bottles many evenings.

"It hadn't gotten that bad, except I had put on weight," Crane said. "This takes a toll on your health in terms of your vigor. My scheduling was escalating in intensity at a time when I was really undermining my capability to deal with it."

Crane traces his increased intake to the death of his 31-year-old daughter, Rachel, of non-Hodgkins lymphoma the day after Christmas 1997. Two months later, after a bout with pneumonia, he gave up 50 years of smoking Camels and, he said, substituted one habit for another.

Antibodies may be link to Gulf illnesses, study says

WASHINGTON (AP) — A study has found a possible link between antibodies to a natural molecule used in experimental vaccines and unexplained illnesses afflicting thousands of military personnel who served in the Gulf War.

The Tulane University Medical School study found high levels of antibodies to squalene in a large percentage of sick veterans vaccinated for Gulf War service.

Pentagon officials dismiss the study as flawed and say none of the vaccines administered during the Gulf War contained squalene.

But in response to congressional pressure, the Defense Department late last month asked the Armed Forces Epidemiological Board to review the study. The National Academy of Sciences' Institute of Medicine also is reviewing the research and assessing what, if any role squalene may play in Gulf illnesses.

"All known, testable hypotheses concerning illnesses among Gulf War veterans have been or are being pursued," Sue Bailey, the assistant secretary of defense for health affairs, told Rep. Jack Metcalf, R-Wash., in a letter last month.

Squalene is a cholesterol-builder in humans and also is found in vegetable oils, shark liver oil, cosmetics and various health supplements. The Defense Department and National Institutes of Health in the late 1980s began researching the use of squalene in vaccines in an effort to make vaccines more effective.

Defense officials told the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, that they considered — but decided against — using vaccines with squalene during the Gulf War.

The Tulane study, published in the February issue of Experimental and Molecular Pathology, found that all but two of 38 sick veterans who served in the Gulf and received at least one vaccination had elevated squalene antibodies.

Another six sick veterans who were vaccinated but did not go to the Gulf produced similar results, according to the study. Those results were blinded, meaning the researchers did not know the source of blood samples.

Non-blinded portions of the study found 59 of 86 Gulf War-era veterans, civilian employees and military contractors tested positive for squalene antibodies, although it was not known how many of those were vaccinated.

Other groups, including the general public and sick non-veterans with symptoms similar to Gulf illnesses, rarely tested positive for the antibodies.

The Tulane study offered no conclusions as to whether Gulf War vaccines contained squalene, what might have produced the squalene antibodies or what — if any — role the antibodies played in the illnesses.

Still, the research "sets off alarm bells" that should prompt more investigation into Gulf War vaccines and the safety of vaccines that contain squalene, said Pam Asa, an immunologist from Memphis, Tenn., and the lead researcher.

Robert F. Garry, a study author and immunologist at Tulane, said the results may not point to vaccines containing squalene but that veterans could have produced the antibodies as the result of receiving so many vaccines at one time, or from some other organism in a vaccine that may mimic squalene.

Pentagon officials question the study methods, saying researchers did not verify the validity of their antibody test before they began using it.

"Because I question the method of the test, I have to question all of the findings," said Lt. Col. John Grabenstein, deputy director of the military's anthrax vaccine immunization program.

Dr. Julius Cruse, editor and chief of the journal that published the study, defended the study, saying it was peer reviewed by 10 to 12 clinicians.

Ten members of Congress, led by Metcalf, want the Pentagon to consider using the Tulane test on other veterans, saying it could help answer questions about Gulf illnesses.

Lady Rebels win game, win flip for playoff spot

■ Midland High must play Abilene Cooper on Monday in district playoff.

Staff Report

SAN ANGELO — The Midland Lee softball team played only one game Friday, but the Lady Rebels got two big victories out of it.

Lee defeated San Angelo Central 5-0 on Friday to force a three-way tie for second place in the District 4-5A softball race with Abilene Cooper and Midland High. All three teams finished regular season district play at 8-4. Cooper defeated Odessa High, 11-7, Friday while Midland High was open.

But then came Lee's second victory. Lee won the three-way coin flip with Cooper and MHS following the game, giving Lee a bye in the district playoff and an automatic state playoff berth, the school's sixth consecutive state playoff berth.

That also means that Cooper and MHS will have to stage a district playoff game, with the winner earning a state playoff berth while the loser will see its season end.

The MHS-Cooper game will be played on a neutral site at 4:30 p.m. Monday in Snyder. The Lady Bulldogs have defeated Cooper in both meetings this season, winning big, 21-3, in Midland.

Lee lures Lampasas cage coach Coffman

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland Lee has a new head basketball coach — again — and this one says its going to stick.

Mark Coffman, the head basketball coach at Class 4A Lampasas, signed a contract with the Midland Independent School District Friday.

Two weeks ago, Lee had named Stanton's Doug Gordon as the Rebels' basketball coach to replace Jon House, who resigned after the season to further his education. Gordon verbally accepted the position, but then decided to stay in Stanton, saying, "I accepted the job too quick. It all happened so fast, and I just didn't think it through enough. This (Stanton) is where I want to be."

But Midland athletic director Tim Whalen said Friday, "I think this one is going to stick. At least, he has signed a contract. I think we got a good coach."

Coffman, 40, said, "I've always thought that Lee was one of the premier schools in the state. I'm excited about coming to Lee High School.

"I have four boys and I really wanted to get them into a school they could be proud of. Also, my wife (Darla) has a sister (Mindy Flowers) who lives in Midland and that also played into it. We

NEW YORK — Peter Warrick wants people to forget his past troubles and look at him as a premium player, not a potential problem.

"What I did was wrong, but I'm a better person than that," the Florida State All-American said Friday on the eve of the NFL draft. "Don't judge me by what I did. I can't please everybody. I can't be what somebody else wants. I can only be myself."

■ NFL Draft Capsules/2B

Warrick was arrested last year in connection with a department store scam in which he was accused of paying $21.40 for $412.38 worth of clothing.

He received probation and was suspended for two games by the school. The episode probably cost him the wide receiver Heisman Trophy and perhaps the top spot in Saturday's draft.

Right now, Warrick is the likely No. 4 pick behind Penn State defensive teammates LaVar Arrington and Courtney Brown, and Alabama offensive tackle Chris Samuels. That's fine with him. He just wants to get it done.

There is also the issue of some less than glittering 40-yard dash times hanging over him.

"I'm not the fastest in workouts," he said. "But I'm fast on Sunday."

Instead of dwelling on the negatives, Warrick preaches the positives.

"The team that drafts me gets a complete player," he said. "I can do a lot. I can go there and make plays."

He showed that in the Sugar Bowl when put an exclamation point on his college career by scoring a record 20 points. There were two touchdown catches, a punt returned for a TD and a 2-point conversion as Florida State clinched the national championship with a 46-29 victory over Virginia Tech.

That's the stuff of a No. 1 choice, but Warrick said he won't be disappointed if that doesn't happen.

"It doesn't matter," he said. "My dream is to be in the NFL, not

Shortly after 11 a.m. (CDT) today, NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue will announce the first overall selection in the NFL Draft — and there is some suspense. The Cleveland Browns have the first pick, and they are expected to choose between two defensive standouts from Penn State: linebacker LaVar Arrington or end Courtney Brown.

Cowboys wait for second round

By Jaime Aron

IRVING — If the Dallas Cowboys get bored Saturday while waiting to make their first draft pick at No. 49, they could always pop in some videotape of newly acquired receiver Joey Galloway.

After all, he's the reason Dallas doesn't have a first-round pick. Or a third-rounder. Or a first-rounder next year.

The Cowboys gladly sent those unknown commodities to Seattle for Galloway, a former rookie of the year, because they believe he can be the go-to guy quarterback Troy Aikman desperately needs.

With that offensive obstacle addressed, Dallas can focus on solving some defensive problems in the draft.

The Cowboys need at least one more good cornerback to help cushion the expected loss of Deion Sanders and they're desperate for depth at linebacker because leading tackler Randall Godfrey signed with Tennessee.

Finding players for both positions will be tough as Dallas' first pick comes 19 spots into the second round and the Cowboys don't go on the clock again until the fourth round, after another 60 players are taken.

Owner Jerry Jones isn't fond of sitting around and waiting. He's probably already cooking up schemes to snag more selections.

"It could be better for us to move down to early in the third and get another pick," Jones said. "I wouldn't attempt to speculate as to what would happen until two picks before it's our time."

Cornerback would seem like the Cowboys' top priority just because it's so vital to their scheme. Defensive backs are often left in one-on-one coverage without help while linebackers primarily supplement the defensive line.

Dallas has signed free agent Ryan McNeil to essentially replace Sanders. Kevin Mathis and Kevin Smith are still around, but they're injury prone. Injuries to both Kevins and Sanders at the same time last year taught Dallas a lesson in the need for depth at cornerback.

'Hounds go 10 innings to end slide

By Oscar LeRoy

It had to end some time.

The Midland RockHounds snapped what appeared to be a never ending six-game losing streak Friday night with an exciting 8-7 win over the Round Rock Express in 10 innings at Christensen Stadium, which had its largest crowd of the year at 4,193.

The 'Hounds scored four runs in the bottom of the 10th, including the game-winning run by Cody McKay as he scored all the way from first base off a double by Jacques Landry to left-center field. This came after Round Rock had scored three runs in the top of the 10th to take what appeared to be an commanding 7-4 lead.

As McKay was picking himself up from home plate after sliding in, it seemed like a big weight was lifted off the shoulders of the RockHounds, who tasted their first win in almost a week.

"It's not like we've played bad," said Landry of the losing streak. "Last night (a 7-3 loss to Round Rock on Thursday) we only had four hits but we hit a lot of balls right at them. Give a lot of credit to this team. This is a long season and we know that. Plus the fact that this team never quits. We came back in the bottom of the ninth and again in the 10th."

"If this doesn't give us momentum, nothing will," McKay said.

McKay, who was exhausted after the game, was happy to make up for the bottom of the ninth when he was tagged out at home trying to score from second on a single by Todd Mensik.

"They (Express) had to do something wrong in order for us to score," said McKay about the bottom of the ninth. "They just made a perfect throw and there was nothing we could do about that."

Midland tied the game at 4-4 in the bottom of the ninth as Mensik singled in pinch runner Esteban German with a hit to left field. Midland, however, got a little too overaggressive as manager Tony DeFrancesco sent McKay home from second base. McKay was no match for the arm of left fielder Eric Cole who had come in at the beginning of the inning as a defensive replacement. Cole nailed McKay at the plate without McKay having to slide to give Midland two outs in the inning.

Round Rock was able to get out of the ninth as Express reliever Jason Green (0-1) struck out Eric Byrnes looking.

In the bottom of the 10th, McKay made sure he wasn't going to be tagged out at home.

"I wondered if somebody had a stop watch on me because I was flying," said McKay, who not only scored the game-winner but went 3-for-4 at the plate and drove in three runs. "We had a big crowd today and it was nice. Hopefully, they enjoyed this one."

The Express jumped on the RockHounds in the top of the second inning when Colin Porter blasted his first home run of the season with a three-run shot over the right field fence off Midland starter Justin Miller. The 'Hounds righthander caught a bit of a bad break one batter before when left fielder Rusty Keith lost what appeared to be a routine

El Paso Community College sweeps conference twinbill from Lady Chaps

By H. A. Tuck
MRT Correspondent

Timely hitting, aided by poor defense, combined for El Paso Community College's sweep over Midland College's Lady Chaps Friday, 11-4 and 16-2. The two conference rivals play two more this afternoon, starting at 1 p.m. at the Bill Williams Softball Complex.

Midland had defeated the Tejanas in El Paso, three games to one in their first four loop contests last month. Since then, El Paso has swept Howard eight straight games to grab a 9-3 conference record. They'll wind up their loop season today, while Midland hosts Howard next Wednesday and Thursday. Starting the day, Midland was 5-3 in conference and needing only two wins to nab second place and a spot in the Region V tournament. El Paso saw to it that the Lady Chaps still need those two victories.

MC grabbed a 2-0 lead in the bottom of the first inning of the opening game, which had a 40-minute delay in starting due to late arrival of one umpire. Leadoff batter Crystal Shelton walked and came in on J. R. Chavira's triple to right center. Chavira was erased at the plate trying to stretch her hit to an inside-the-park homer. Frannie Salcido singled and scored on Lauren Wallace's single.

Pitcher Chavira kept El Paso at bay until the top of the third, when they got their first hit of the day, a single by number nine hitter Lori Pollard. She scored on Jenn Gordon's double. Gordon plated on Erica Aguilar's double.

El Paso added three in the third on an error, passed ball, sacrifice bunt and Gordon's second straight double. MC got one back in the bottom of the fourth on Julie Stanford's single ahead of a fielder's choice, another single by Shelton and an RBI-producing walk to Chavira.

But El Paso answered with two more in the fifth, thanks to a hit batter and a homer by Lisamarie Castro. The Tejanas got four runs in the seventh with three singles and a grand-slam homer over left field by Pollard.

Midland could get just one in the last of the seventh, courtesy of three errors, a fielder's choice and a single by Jessica Cobos.

NFL DRAFT — TEAM-BY-TEAM

NEW YORK (AP) — Team-by-team capsules by selection order for the 2000 NFL draft, to be held Saturday and Sunday:

1. CLEVELAND (2-14)

LAST YEAR: Returned to NFL as expansion team. Wins came at New Orleans and Pittsburgh. Improved late, but offense and defense ranked at bottom of NFL.

NEEDS: Everything. Orlando Brown's eye injury makes OT important. Also needs offense to complement QB Tim Couch, and pass rusher.

DRAFT DECADE: Decision to take Couch over Ricky Williams with 1999 No. 1 was correct, as was taking WR Kevin Johnson in second round. Biggest mistake was not taking RB until seventh round.

ADDITIONS: DE Orpheus Roye, OT Roman Oben, OL Everett Lindsay, FS Percy Ellsworth, RB Errict Rhett, DE Keith McKenzie, LB Marty Moore, KR/WR David Patten.

SUBTRACTIONS: OT Scott Rehberg, S Marquez Pope, CB Ryan McNeil, OT Lomas Brown, DT John Jurkovic.

GOALS FOR 2000: No playoffs, but six wins would be nice.

POSSIBLE FIRST-ROUNDER: Penn Staters DE Courtney Brown or LB LaVar Arrington over WR Peter Warrick.

2, 3. WASHINGTON (10-6)

LAST YEAR: Made playoffs for first time in seven years despite 30th-ranked defense. RB Stephen Davis, solid line and QB Brad Johnson stood out.

NEEDS: LT, where Andy Heck is 33; CB, where Darrell Green is 40; impact LB.

DRAFT DECADE: Former GM Charley Casserly and coach Norv Turner produced first-round flops (Heath Shuler, Bobby Wilson, Desmond Howard, Andre Johnson) and good low-round finds (Brian Mitchell, Tre Johnson, Cory Raymer, Davis, Stephen Alexander, Jon Jansen). Casserly, fired by new owner Dan Snyder, left legacy in excellent draft position, getting first-rounders for rights to Ricky Williams and Sean Gilbert, which Skins used to move up this year.

ADDITIONS: QB Jeff George, DE Bruce Smith and S Mark Carrier, perhaps CB Deion Sanders this summer.

SUBTRACTIONS: S Leomont Evans and S Matt Stevens.

GOALS FOR 2000: Super Bowl or bust for Snyder.

POSSIBLE FIRST-ROUNDERS: They want Arrington at all costs, with fallback to Brown and OT Chris Samuels, Alabama.

4. CINCINNATI (4-12)

LAST YEAR: Finished as NFL's worst team of the '90s. Decided to bring back coach Bruce Coslet for final year of contract.

NEEDS: A master plan by the front office. Team emphasizes defense one year, offense the next. Short term needs at CB, DE, LT, S, WR, plus RB to complement disgruntled Corey Dillon.

DRAFT DECADE: Had first overall pick twice and took Dan Wilkinson and Ki-Jana Carter. Wilkinson is ordinary, Carter always hurt. LBs Takeo Spikes and Brian Simmons have met expectations.

ADDITIONS: QB Scott Mitchell, S Darryl Williams, OL Scott Rehberg, DT Tom Barndt, DE Vaughn Booker.

SUBTRACTIONS: QB Jeff Blake, DL Kimo Von Oehlffen. Dillon, restricted free agent, wants out.

GOALS FOR 2000: Move into Paul Brown Stadium on time, get Akili Smith established at QB after injury-shortened rookie season.

POSSIBLE FIRST-ROUND PICK: Warrick is likely, allowing release of disgruntled WR Carl Pickens.

5, 10. BALTIMORE (8-8)

LAST YEAR: Reached .500 with NFL's second-ranked defense. First-year coach Brian Billick used three QBs before settling on Tony Banks, who directed Ravens to four straight wins before loss to New England in finale.

NEEDS: RB to complement Priest Holmes, who can't take pounding of a 16-game season. WR, OL and LB, particularly if MLB Ray Lewis, charged with murder in Atlanta, is not available.

DRAFT DECADE: Personnel director Ozzie Newsome got Pro Bowl OT Jonathan Ogden and Lewis in first round in 1996; LBs Peter Boulware and Jamie Sharper in 1997; starting CB Duane Starks in 1998; and rapidly developing CB Chris McAlister last year.

ADDITIONS: TE Shannon Sharpe, QB Trent Dilfer, LB Dennis Stallings, OL Robert Bailey, OL Damon Denson.

SUBTRACTIONS: RB Errict Rhett, CB DeRon Jenkins, QB Scott Mitchell, G Everett Lindsay.

GOALS FOR 2000: Make playoffs for first time in Baltimore. Owner Art Modell will hand over the team to Stephen Bisciotti in 2004, and desperately craves his first Super Bowl before then.

POSSIBLE FIRST-ROUNDERS: If Warrick falls, he's the one. If not, RB Thomas Jones of Virginia or RB Jamal Lewis, Tennessee, then a receiver with other first-round pick — Florida's Travis Taylor or Michigan State's Plaxico Burress.

6. PHILADELPHIA (5-11)

LAST YEAR: Won two more games than in 1998 under rookie coach Andy Reid.

NEEDS: A lot. WR, DL, TE at the top.

DRAFT DECADE: Eagles spent '90s taking OLs who failed. Last two No. 1s, QB Donovan McNabb and OT Tra Thomas, appear to be keepers.

ADDITIONS: Free-agent OT Jon Runyan and Thomas are good bookends; FB Stanley Pritchett; LB Carlos Emmons.

SUBTRACTIONS: LB William Thomas, released after 11 seasons.

GOALS FOR 2000: Hope for .500.

POSSIBLE FIRST-ROUNDER: WR Taylor or DT Corey Simon, Florida State.

7. ARIZONA (6-10)

LAST YEAR: Followed 1998 playoff berth, first in 16 years, by falling right back. QB Jake Plummer, plagued by injuries, bad decisions and young OL; had miserable season.

NEEDS: RB, OLB, TE, G, DL.

DRAFT DECADE: Better recently. WR Rob Moore via a trade of first-round pick, and WR Frank Sanders in 1995; DE Simeon Rice in 1996; Plummer and DE Mark Smith (in the seventh round) in 1997; and DE Andre Wadsworth in 1998. WR David Boston and OT L.J. Shelton, first-rounders last year, became contributors.

ADDITIONS: K Cary Blanchard, C Mike Gruttadauria.

SUBTRACTIONS: RB Adrian Murrell, K Chris Jacke, C Aaron Graham.

GOALS FOR 2000: Playoffs, comeback for Plummer. Coach Vince Tobin in the final year of contract.

POSSIBLE FIRST-ROUNDERS: Jones, Lewis, LB Brian Urlacher, New Mexico.

8. PITTSBURGH (6-10)

LAST YEAR: Lost seven of final eight and finished with worst record in 11 years. QB Kordell Stewart threw only five TD passes before being benched with five games left. RB Jerome Bettis couldn't find running room and pass rush was nonexistent. Coach Bill Cowher survived, but director of football operations Tom Donahoe didn't.

NEEDS: QB, WR and pass-rushing OLB, DBs.

DRAFT DECADE: Steelers built teams that advanced to three AFC championship games in four years via smart drafts (Levon Kirkland, Chad Brown, Leon Searcy) and shrewd trades (Bettis). Last three No. 1 picks are starters: WR Troy Edwards, G Alan Faneca, CB Chad Scott, but lower rounds have produced little. Botched No. 1 pick of OT Jamain Stephens in 1996.

ADDITIONS: QB Kent Graham, RG Rich Tylski, DL Chris Sullivan, NG Kimo von Oelhoffen, OT Larry Tharpe.

SUBTRACTIONS: OLB Carlos Emmons, OL Jim Sweeney, RG Brendan Stai, QB Mike Tomczak, QB Pete Gonzalez, DE Nolan Harrison, DE Orpheus Roye.

POSSIBLE FIRST-ROUNDER: Burress or QB Chad Pennington, Marshall.

9. CHICAGO (6-10)

LAST YEAR: Finished below .500 for sixth time in eight years but made progress. Despite quarterback merry-go-round and weak defense, improved their 1997 and 1998 records by two games under Dick Jauron. Discovered a huge playmaker in WR Marcus Robinson.

NEEDS: DE and DB; another RB to help injury-plagued Curtis Enis.

DRAFT DECADE: If offer is right, Mark Hatley is willing to deal. He turned six picks into 13 last year, and still managed to get QB Cade McNown. Earlier moves? Remember getting Rick Mirer for No. 11 overall pick?

ADDITIONS: DE Phillip Daniels, CB Thomas Smith, S Shawn Wooden, WR Eddie Kennison.

SUBTRACTIONS: P Todd Sauerbrun, WR Curtis Conway, QB Shane Matthews, possibly WR Bobby Engram, LB Rico McDonald, G Todd Perry.

GOALS FOR 2000: Playoffs.

POSSIBLE FIRST-ROUNDER: Urlacher, who can play TE, S, or LB.

11. NEW YORK GIANTS (7-9)

LAST YEAR: Looked good early, but lost six of last eight, including final three, leaving coach Jim Fassel in playoff-or-else mode for this year.

NEEDS: RB, LB, CB. Rookie RB Joe Montgomery led team with 348 yards.

DRAFT DECADE: Most first-rounders were busts or disappointments. Did well in other rounds with DE Michael Strahan, LB Jessie Armstead, FB Charles Way, WR Amani Toomer.

ADDITIONS: LB Micheal Barrow is major upgrade and OLs Lomas Brown, Glenn Parker and Dusty Ziegler add experience; CB Dave Thomas; backup QB Jason Garrett.

SUBTRACTIONS: LT Roman Oben, S Percy Ellsworth, DL Bernard Holsey, LB Scott Galyon, C Brian Williams, backup QB Kent Graham, DT Robert Harris, OT Scott Gragg, CB Phillippi Sparks.

GOALS FOR 2000: Playoffs, or Fassel is probably gone.

POSSIBLE FIRST-ROUNDER: Heavy duty RB — Shaun Alexander, Alabama or Ron Dayne, Wisconsin.

16, 24. SAN FRANCISCO (4-12)

LAST YEAR: Steve Young played only three games after a concussion and 49ers won just two of the next 13. Had trouble stopping anybody and failed to win 10 games in nonstrike season for first time since 1980.

NEEDS: Everything. Must find QB even if Young returns. OL, DE, CB.

DRAFT DECADE: Team can't continue to miss with top draft picks, a distressing pattern through the '90s. Todd Kelly, R.W. McQuarters, Jim Druckenmiller, Dana Hall, J.J. Stokes are busts or failed to live up to expectations.

ADDITIONS: None. Salary cap problems.

SUBTRACTIONS: S Tim McDonald, LB Lee Woodall, CB Darnell Walker, DE Charles Haley, DE Marvin Washington, RB Tommy Vardell, QB Steve Stenstrom.

GOALS FOR 2000: Super Bowl or bust is now six wins or bust.

POSSIBLE FIRST-ROUNDER: Traded down twice for extra picks. Pennington; LB Julian Peterson, Michigan State; Urlacher.

12, 13, 18, 27. NEW YORK JETS (8-8)

LAST YEAR: Season pretty much ended when Vinny Testaverde tore Achilles' tendon in opener. Team built for Super Bowl sputtered until it won last four games.

NEEDS: Pass-rushing DL. Also TE, deep receiving threat and safety. Might get all in the first round.

DRAFT DECADE: Very mixed bag. Top choices have included Blair Thomas and Kyle Brady, but also Keyshawn Johnson and Aaron Glenn. Best pick was LB Mo Lewis in third round in 1991.

ADDITIONS: DL Shane Burton; rebuilt coaching staff, with Al Groh in charge.

SUBTRACTIONS: Bill Parcells, now chief of football operations, but probably not beyond July; WR Keyshawn Johnson, S Steve Atwater, TE Eric Green and LB Chad Cascadden, OT Jumbo Elliott.

GOALS FOR 2000: Expect to compete for AFC East crown. If coaching transition goes smoothly and what should be great draft pays off, they could contend.

POSSIBLE FIRST-ROUNDERS: After trading Johnson to Tampa Bay for two more first-rounders, the Jets are only team ever with four first-round selections. Then made move from 16 to 12, sending Niners a second-rounder. Could trade up to No. 1 spot, trade somewhere else, or simply use them on the likes of Ellis or DE Darren Howard, Kansas State, Bubba Franks, TE, Miami; Taylor or Dez White, WR, Georgia Tech.

14. GREEN BAY (8-8)

LAST YEAR: Missed playoffs for the first time in seven seasons and first-year coach Ray Rhodes was fired. Claiming discipline and focus were problems, GM Ron Wolf hired Mike Sherman.

NEEDS: Defensive and offensive lines.

DRAFT DECADE: Hidden gems in the third round (WRs Robert Brooks and Antonio Freeman, LB Brian Williams, OT Earl Dotson and CB Mike McKenzie). Used early picks to fill critical needs.

SUBTRACTIONS: TE Jeff Thomason, DE Keith McKenzie, DE Vaughn Booker.

GOALS FOR 2000: Return to playoffs only acceptable destination.

POSSIBLE FIRST-ROUNDER: DE Shaun Ellis, Tennessee; Peterson; Boston College DT Chris Hovan and Wisconsin G Chris McIntosh.

15. DENVER (6-10)

LAST YEAR: After two straight Super Bowl wins, slid back without John Elway (retired) and injured Terrell Davis; Shannon Sharpe and John Mobley. Lost first four games behind young QB Brian Griese and never recovered.

NEEDS: Speed at WR; CB if Dale Carter gets suspended for a year; OL, DL.

DRAFT DECADE: Two NFL titles speak for themselves. Best (and luckiest) pick was Davis, sixth-rounder in 1995.

ADDITIONS: QB Gus Frerotte, DE Kavika Pittman, DE Lester Archambeau, DT Nathan Davis, SS Billy Jenkins, CBs Jeremy Lincoln, Darryl Pounds and Jimmy Spencer. Don't discount coach Mike Shanahan's desire to lure Steve Young.

SUBTRACTIONS: Sharpe, DE Alfred Williams, DE Neil Smith, QBs Chris Miller and Bubby Brister, RB Derek Loville, CB Tory James, DB Darrius Johnson, DT Cyron Brown, DE David Bowens. Carter's future pending outcome of appeal of substance-abuse suspension.

GOALS FOR 2000: Playoffs.

POSSIBLE FIRST-ROUNDER: Traded down with Baltimore. Love LB-DE John Abraham, South Carolina and can probably get him here..

17. OAKLAND (8-8)

LAST YEAR: Second consecutive 8-8 season under coach Jon Gruden, sixth straight season the Raiders missed the playoffs. Fired defensive coordinator Willie Shaw in January and replaced him with Chuck Bresnahan.

NEEDS: LB, and WR to complement Tim Brown.

DRAFT DECADE: Owner Al Davis loves to package picks to move up in the draft. Had busts like QB Todd Marinovich and budding stars like DT Darrell Russell.

ADDITIONS: DBs Je'Rod Cherry and Tory James.

SUBTRACTIONS: DT Russell Maryland, SS Anthony Newman, LB Richard Harvey — all starters last season — and TE Derrick Walker.

GOALS FOR 2000: Breaking playoff drought. A schedule that includes just two 1999 playoff teams should help.

POSSIBLE FIRST-ROUNDER: Ellis; Rob Morris, LB, Brigham Young; John Engleberger, DE, Virginia Tech; Peterson.

19, 22. SEATTLE (9-7)

LAST YEAR: Under new coach-GM Mike Holmgren, Seahawks made playoffs for first time since 1988 and had first winning season since 1990. Lost to Miami in wild-card game, giving them a 1-6 finish after an 8-2 start.

NEEDS: In second draft, Holmgren needs run stopper at MLB and another WR after the trade of Joey Galloway to Dallas.

DRAFT DECADE: Holmgren's first draft in Seattle got Lamar King, who will start at DE this season. Charlie Rogers led the NFL and set a team record with a 14.5-yard punt return average.

ADDITIONS: SS Reggie Tongue, C Robbie Tobeck.

SUBTRACTIONS: Galloway, DE Phillip Daniels, OT Grant Williams, SS Darryl Williams, C Kevin Glover, G Brian Habib, OLB Darrin Smith.

GOALS FOR 2000: Despite loss of eight key players and a tougher schedule, Seahawks are still hoping to make the playoffs.

POSSIBLE FIRST-ROUNDER: Rob Morris, White, Sylvester Morris, WR, Jackson State.

20. DETROIT (8-8)

LAST YEAR: Made playoffs at .500, but lost at Washington.

NEEDS: RB, OL, DB.

DRAFT DECADE: Discounting QB Andre Ware in 1990, Lions have done well with first-round picks. WR Herman Moore, DE Robert Porcher, WR Johnnie Morton, DT Luther Elliss, LB Reggie Brown. LB Chris Claiborne was rookie starter last season.

ADDITIONS: RB James Stewart, CB Kurt Schulz, QBs Mike Tomczak and Steve Stenstrom.

SUBTRACTIONS: QB Gus Frerotte and CB Mark Carrier.

GOALS FOR 2000: Win NFC Central and at least one playoff game.

POSSIBLE FIRST-ROUNDERS: RB J.R. Redmond, Arizona State; OL Stockar McDougle, Oklahoma; OL Todd Wade, Mississippi; Engelberger.

21. KANSAS CITY (9-7)

LAST YEAR: Just missed playoffs in Gunther Cunningham's first season as head coach. In horrible offseason, LB Derrick Thomas died after car accident and KR Tamarick Vanover pleaded guilty to car theft.

NEEDS: CB, where starters James Hasty and Cris Dishman are almost 35; pass-rushing LB to replace Thomas; big RB.

DRAFT DECADE: GM Carl Peterson hates to trade No. 1s, and did it only to get Joe Montana. In 11 drafts, Peterson has had most luck with defense and offensive linemen. TE Tony Gonzalez is the only skill position player developed.

ADDITIONS: OLB Lew Bush; P Todd Sauerbrun; DE Duane Clemons.

SUBTRACTIONS: OT Glenn Parker, S Reggie Tongue, DE Tom Barndt, WR Joe Horn and Thomas.

GOALS FOR 2000: The playoffs.

POSSIBLE FIRST-ROUNDER: They'd love Dayne.

23. CAROLINA (8-8)

LAST YEAR: Rebounded from 4-12 in George Seifert's first season, making a late playoff push. Offense is strength.

NEEDS: Ranked 26th on defense last year. DT Sean Gilbert played better up front, but not worth two No. 1 picks.

DRAFT DECADE: Two of four previous No. 1 picks are no longer with the team (QB Kerry Collins and WR Rae Carruth, who is facing murder charges). Tshimanga Biakabutuka ('96) and Jason Peter ('98) have been troubled by injuries.

ADDITIONS: LB Lee Woodall, DE Chuck Smith, DL Jay Williams, CB Jimmy Hitchcock.

GOALS FOR 2000: Find a pass rush and defense to get team's offense on the field more. Keep aging QB Steve Beuerlein healthy.

POSSIBLE FIRST-ROUND PICK: Engelberger or Abraham; Deon Grant, S, Tennessee.

25. MINNESOTA (10-6)

LAST YEAR: Coach Dennis Green gained full authority and first year was calamitous. Bypassed Jevon Kearse for QB Daunte Culpepper, then took DE Dimitrius Underwood in first round, refused to renegotiate G Randall McDaniel's contract. Favorites to represent NFC in Super Bowl, started 2-4 and QB Jeff George replaced Randall Cunningham. Made playoffs, but lost to St. Louis after beating Dallas.

NEEDS: DE, DB.

DRAFT DECADE: Until last year, excelled at finding gems in middle rounds. Green is intent on starting Culpepper as soon as possible to show pick wasn't as bad as it looks.

ADDITIONS: Nothing major.

SUBTRACTIONS: George, C Jeff Christy, McDaniel, WR Jake Reed, TE Andrew Glover, CB Jimmy Hitchcock. Half the coaching staff, including coordinators Foge Fazio and Ray Sherman, left in a shakeup by Green.

GOALS FOR 2000: Green insists Vikings remain a Super Bowl contender, but defense needs overhaul and whoever is QB won't have the protection Christy and McDaniel provided. If Culpepper starts, 8-8 might be good.

POSSIBLE FIRST-ROUNDER: Rashard Anderson, CB, Jackson State; Ahmed Plummer, CB, Ohio State.

26. BUFFALO (11-5)

LAST YEAR: Immaculate Deception (Music City Miracle to those outside of Buffalo). A successful season, and QB controversy involving Doug Flutie and Rob Johnson, overshadowed by Titans' remarkable kickoff return in playoffs.

NEEDS: DB, because Thomas Smith and Kurt Schulz left.

DRAFT DECADE: Headed by GM John Butler, Bills have reputation for making smart picks from poor draft position. Selected 23rd overall or worse seven times in the 1990s, still had 18 starters from draft last season.

ADDITIONS: No newcomers, but resigned G Ruben Brown and TE Jay Riemersma, and extended OT John Fina's contract.

SUBTRACTIONS: G Dusty Zeigler, DE Sean Moran, LB Dan Brandenburg, Smith and Schulz. Waived WR Andre Reed, DE Bruce Smith and RB Thurman Thomas, aging stars.

GOALS FOR 2000: Tough schedule, but could contend in AFC East.

POSSIBLE FIRST-ROUNDER: Plummer, Anderson or Dwayne Goodrich, CB, Tennessee.

28. INDIANAPOLIS (13-3)

LAST YEAR: Enjoyed most successful year since 1968 NFL championship in Baltimore. QB Peyton Manning, WR Marvin Harrison and rookie RB Edgerrin James were Pro Bowl starters.

NEEDS: Depth on defense, especially LB, where health of Cornelius Bennett is uncertain and Michael Barber was released. Deep threat at WR to complement Harrison.

DRAFT DECADE: Excellent last two years with Bill Polian as president. Top four picks in 1998 became starters, and Polian's decision to take James ahead of Ricky Williams paid off. LB Mike Peterson, second-round pick, also became a starter. Top picks have become starters as rookies the past six years, including Marshall Faulk, Tarik Glenn, Harrison and Ellis Johnson. Injuries and personal problems in early part of decade with likes of Jeff George, Steve Emtman, Quentin Coryatt, Trev Alberts.

ADDITIONS: Used available money to re-sign TE Ken Dilger, Harrison and OT Adam Meadows to long-term contracts; QB Pete Gonzalez, DL Bernard Holsey.

SUBTRACTIONS: Barber; DL Tony McCoy expected to be released after June 1.

GOALS FOR 2000: Advancing in playoffs, where coach Jim Mora is 0-5 in 13 years as NFL head coach.

POSSIBLE FIRST-ROUNDER: Sylvester Morris; Hovan and Engleberger.

29. JACKSONVILLE (14-2)

LAST YEAR: Won AFC Central and home-field advantage through the playoffs. Lost to Tennessee, only team to beat them all season, in AFC title game.

NEEDS: Third receiver — Jaguars got little from backup WRs Reggie Barlow and Alvis Whitted. OL, with Tony Boselli recovering from knee injury, Ben Coleman leaving and Rich Tylski already gone. This is an area where they must get better.

DRAFT DECADE: Tom Coughlin, coach and GM, has drafted excellently — almost all his picks since franchise's first year in 1995 have made it.

ADDITIONS: LB Hardy Nickerson.

SUBTRACTIONS: Tylski, LB Bryce Paup, RB James Stewart, QB Jay Fiedler.

GOALS FOR 2000: Nothing less than Super Bowl.

POSSIBLE FIRST-ROUNDER: OLs Cosey Coleman, Tennessee, or Travis Claridge, Southern Cal; White, Jerry Porter, WR, West Virginia

30. TENNESSEE (13-3)

LAST YEAR: Storybook season for NFL nomads. Finally settled into a new home, played before sold-out crowds and reached first Super Bowl in 40-year franchise history.

NEEDS: Few holes. Need depth at CB, LB and DT, where Josh Evans will miss the season with a one-year drug suspension.

DRAFT DECADE: Six first-round picks started in the Super Bowl, but the Titans have never drafted this late. Best was last year, when DE Jevon Kearse fell to them at No. 16. With nine picks, a trade up for an LB or CB is possible.

ADDITIONS: LB Randall Godfrey and RT Fred Miller.

SUBTRACTIONS: OT Jon Runyan and TE Jackie Harris.

GOALS FOR 2000: Only a return trip to the Super Bowl and 1 more yard will do.

POSSIBLE FIRST-ROUNDER: CB Deltha O'Neal of California.

31. ST. LOUIS (13-3)

LAST YEAR: Went from 4-12 to Super Bowl champs, largely because QB Kurt Warner, a career third-stringer, emerged as NFL MVP.

NEEDS: OL.

DRAFT DECADE: First year since Rams moved from Los Angeles in 1995 that they don't enter draft with sixth overall pick, although traded up for No. 1 in '97 to get OT Orlando Pace. Other hits: DE Kevin Carter ('95), DE Grant Wistrom ('98) and WR Torry Holt ('99). Miss in 1996 with RB Lawrence Phillips.

ADDITIONS: Coach Mike Martz, former offensive coordinator, replaces retired Dick Vermeil.

SUBTRACTIONS: Vermeil and much of his staff, C Mike Gruttadauria, OT Fred Miller, S Billy Jenkins, LB Charlie Clemons, DE Jay Williams, QB Paul Justin.

GOALS FOR 2000: Repeat surprise showing with tougher, first-place schedule. Until last year, Rams hadn't had winning record in decade.

POSSIBLE FIRST-ROUNDER: Hard to tell this late.

33. NEW ORLEANS (3-13)

LAST YEAR: Record was second worst in mostly dismal 33-year history. Third straight losing season under Mike Ditka, seventh straight non-winning year. Owner Tom Benson cleaned house, firing Ditka and GM Bill Kuharich.

NEEDS: Using four QBS — Billy Joe Hobert, Billy Joe Tolliver, Danny Wuerffel and Jake Delhomme — New Orleans scored 260 points, just over 16 a game. Defense allowed 434, second most in team history. Don't have picks to fix, thanks to Ditka's trade for the rights to Ricky Williams. WR, OT, FB, SB, S at top of list.

DRAFT DECADE: Ditka drafts were unusual even before the only one-player draft in NFL history. Ditka, who loved tough, hard-nosed overachievers, drafted RB Troy Davis and Wuerffel, college heroes with questionable pro potential. Of his 14 picks in three years, only three started regularly last season.

ADDITIONS: QB Jeff Blake, LB Charlie Clemons, DT Norman Hand, WRs Jake Reed and Joe Horn, TE Andrew Glover.

SUBTRACTIONS: CB Ashley Ambrose, DB Je'Rod Cherry, C Kendall Gammon, WR Eddie Kennison, DE Brady Smith, RB Lamar Smith.

GOALS FOR 2000: Demonstrate enough to get fans to buy tickets. Owner Tom Benson has new marketing department and moved training camp back to Louisiana to attract fans. New Orleans has not had a home-game sellout since 1998 vs. Cowboys, when most of the fans came from Dallas.

POSSIBLE FIRST PICK: Too late to predict.

37. ATLANTA (5-11)

LAST YEAR: Fell apart after winning first NFC championship in 1998. RB Jamal Anderson went down with knee injury in Week 2. QB Chris Chandler had little help on offense and got hurt, as usual. Defense struggled to cope with loss of LB Cornelius Bennett.

NEEDS: Depth on offensive and defensive lines; backup QB, as always.

DRAFT DECADE: Before coach Dan Reeves, the Falcons were plagued by poor decisions, picking flops like Bruce Pickens and Lincoln Kennedy in the first round. Reeves wasted first-rounder on CB Michael Booker in 1997. LB Keith Brooking, No. 1 pick in 1998, has shown promise, but Reeves made horrible blunder by dealing away this year's top pick to draft TE Reggie Kelly in second round a year ago. Kelly caught eight passes for 146 yards and Baltimore has Atlanta's first pick, No. 5 overall.

ADDITIONS: CB Ashley Ambrose, WR Shawn Jefferson, DE Brady Smith and OL Anthony Redmon.

SUBTRACTIONS: DEs Chuck Smith and Lester Archambeau leave holes on each side of the line. C Robbie Tobeck, S Eugene Robinson.

GOALS FOR 2000: In weak NFC West, there's hope for a quick turnaround.

POSSIBLE FIRST PICK: Ask the Ravens, who have the pick that should have belonged to the Falcons.

43. SAN DIEGO (8-8)

LAST YEAR: Remained in playoff hunt until mid-December under new coach Mike Riley. Bounced back from six-game losing streak to win four of their last five. QB Ryan Leaf, second overall pick in 1998, didn't play a down due to a shoulder injury and was suspended for four weeks for cursing out GM Bobby Beathard.

NEEDS: DT. Also could take OL, WR, LB, S and DE.

DRAFT DECADE: Beathard made it interesting by taking LB Junior Seau in the first round in 1990 and then reverting to habit of dumping future first-round picks for second-round picks. Beathard got RB Natrone Means that way in 1993 — but often he ended up with marginal players or busts like WR Bryan Still. Leaf, second overall pick in 1998, has been nothing but trouble.

ADDITIONS: WR Curtis Conway, CB DeRon Jenkins, OL Joe Patton, RB Robert Chancey, DE Darren Mickell.

SUBTRACTIONS: Means, LB Lew Bush, DT Norman Hand, QB Erik Kramer.

GOALS FOR 2000: To make playoffs for the first time since 1995. The players love Riley and play hard for him.

POSSIBLE FIRST PICK: Chargers spent this year's No. 1 back in 1998, sending it to Tampa Bay to take WR Mikhael Ricks in the second round.

46. NEW ENGLAND (8-8)

LAST YEAR: Six losses in last eight games cost coach Pete Carroll his job. QB Drew Bledsoe struggled with a weak offensive line and poor running game.

NEEDS: Almost everything. OTs Bruce Armstrong and Zefross Moss were released, as was TE Ben Coates; CB; LB because of new coach Bill Belichick's switch to a 3-4 defense; RB.

DRAFT DECADE: The Patriots did well under Bill Parcells from 1993-96, choosing Bledsoe, Chris Slade, Troy Brown, Willie McGinest, Ty Law, Ted Johnson, Terry Glenn, Lawyer Milloy and Tedy Bruschi. Good 1998 pick, RB Robert Edwards, is trying to come back from serious leg injury.

ADDITIONS: RB Raymont Harris, TE Eric Bjornson, OT Grant Williams, WR/KR Aaron Bailey.

SUBTRACTIONS: Coates, Armstrong, RB Terry Allen, WR Shawn Jefferson, DE Chris Sullivan, LB Marty Moore.

GOALS FOR 2000: The playoffs.

POSSIBLE FIRST PICK: Too late — first-rounder went to Jets as compensation for signing new coach Bill Belichick.

49. DALLAS (8-8)

LAST YEAR: After 3-0 start, never won consecutive games, costing coach Chan Gailey his job. Offensive ineptitude, especially once Michael Irvin got hurt.

NEEDS: Replacing Irvin at WR and maybe CB Deion Sanders, who'll probably be cut. Team addressed issue by trading for Joey Galloway and signing Ryan McNeil. Also need depth in secondary, WR and OL.

DRAFT DECADE: Jerry Jones loves to trade down, and already has by giving up first-round picks this year and next for Galloway.

ADDITIONS: Galloway, McNeil, TE Jackie Harris, DE Dimitrius Underwood, QB Paul Justin.

SUBTRACTIONS: LB Randall Godfrey, DE Kavika Pittman, OL Everett McIver, QB Jason Garrett, TE Eric Bjornson, RB Robert Chancey. FB Daryl Johnston, Irvin will probably retire. Maybe Sanders.

GOALS FOR 2000: As long as Troy Aikman and Emmitt Smith are around, Jones believes Cowboys can win Super Bowl. Wishful thinking.

POSSIBLE FIRST PICK: Too late.

53. MIAMI (9-7)

LAST YEAR: Faded after a 7-1 start, barely made the playoffs and then lost in the second round to Jacksonville, 62-7, worst defeat in franchise history. Coach Jimmy Johnson quit the next day, and Dan Marino retired with most of the NFL's important passing records.

NEEDS: OL, OLB, TE and, of course, QB, where for now, Damon Huard and Jay Fiedler will compete.

DRAFT DECADE: Johnson liked to swap picks and loved sleepers, such as Pro Bowl middle linebacker Zach Thomas in the fifth round in 1996. Dave Wannstedt has only five choices.

ADDITIONS: RBs Thurman Thomas and Lamar Smith, G Heath Irwin, Fiedler, P Matt Turk and LB Scott Galyon.

SUBTRACTIONS: Marino; S Shawn Wooden departed via free agency.

GOALS FOR NEXT YEAR: Year of transition at coach and quarterback. Playoffs seem a reach.

POSSIBLE FIRST PICK: Too late to predict.

57. TAMPA BAY (11-5)

LAST YEAR: Most successful season in franchise history ended with 11-6 loss in NFC Championship game that reflected what was right and wrong with the team. Defense carried it, but a rookie QB and anemic offense couldn't deliver a Super Bowl berth.

NEEDS: OL, backup QB. LT Paul Gruber is considering retirement, which would create a need despite addition of free agents G Randall McDaniel and C Jeff Christy.

DRAFT DECADE: GM Rich McKay has succeeded by drafting fast, highly productive college players instead of gambling on underachievers.

ADDITIONS: McDaniel, Christy, but biggest was getting first big-play offensive player in 25-year history in deal with Jets for Keyshawn Johnson.

SUBTRACTIONS: QB Trent Dilfer, LB Hardy Nickerson, C Tony Mayberry, LG Jorge Diaz.

GOALS FOR 2000: Anything short of the Super Bowl, which will be played in Tampa, would be a disappointment.

POSSIBLE FIRST PICK: Too late to tell, but getting Johnson makes their draft.

Winners were Ashley Larso (in the 1600 meters), Angelica Hinojos (100 meters), Ashley Larson (3,200), Leandra Williams (shot put), Rachelle Guinn (34-3) and April McGee (long jump).

Andrews got individual gold from Amber Menefee (in the 200) and Judy Delhierro (high jump).

On the boys side, Andrews' Kyle Humphries won the high jump, and Jamie Bueno won the 400.

Top two finishers in each event qualified for the regional meet. The Big Spring girls will send 13 entries to the meet, which will be held here April 28-29. The Lady Mustangs will send six. The Andrews boys will send three while Big Spring earned one.

Tech-ex Morris faces charges

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Former Kansas City Chiefs running back Bam Morris was jailed on charges that he and two other suspects conspired to distribute at least 220 pounds of marijuana.

Morris, arrested Thursday at his suburban Kansas City home, appeared in court Friday with his lawyer. The U.S. Attorney's office asked that he be held without bond.

Morris was given probation in 1996 when he pleaded guilty to marijuana possession in Rockwall, Texas. He was sentenced to 10 years in prison in 1998 for violating probation, but served only 89 days after his attorney was able to arrange a plea bargain.

State District Judge Sue Pirtle, who approved the agreement, made it clear in 1998 that it would be his last chance.

"It may look like you're getting off, but if you don't report to all meetings (or) if you are involved with drugs or even alcohol, you have a sentence for 10 years already in place," Pirtle told Morris then.

Morris will remain in jail pending a detention hearing Wednesday.

Another suspect, Dewayne Calvin Bryant, was arrested in Dallas, where he lives, FBI spokesman Jeff Lanza said. The other man, Robert Corey Myers, was being sought.

Morris, 28, unexpectedly announced his retirement from football after the 1999 season, shortly before disclosure of a federal investigation of alleged drug and car-theft rings.

Morris was mentioned earlier this year in an affidavit filed in connection with drug charges against a personal assistant of Chiefs return specialist Tamarick Vanover.

Vanover pleaded guilty in February to aiding and assisting in the sale of a stolen motor vehicle and agreed to cooperate with federal investigators. Vanover, who has agreed to cooperate with federal authorities investigating wide-ranging drug and car theft rings, was cut by the Chiefs on Friday.

The reference to Morris in the earlier affidavit said that he was a passenger in a vehicle that was found to have marijuana residue in it after it left Vanover's driveway. His agent said then that Morris was "an innocent party."

DRAFT: 'Skins will take leftovers

(From 1B)

to be the No. 1 pick."

Cleveland, armed with No. 1, is expected to select either Arrington, a linebacker some scouts describe as the next Lawrence Taylor, or Brown, a mammoth defensive end equipped with size and speed.

The Penn State pals know they are almost certain to be separated by the draft with the Browns taking one of them and Washington, which owns both the second and third picks, grabbing the other.

"You never know what's going to happen," Arrington said. "I might know, but I'm not telling."

Barring any trades, the Redskins are expected to pick the other Penn State player at No. 2 and then follow with Samuels at No. 3, although Warrick remains a possibility there.

Samuels wants to be the guy.

"I'm hopeful I'm in the first three picks," he said. "I'm hopeful Washington takes me, But if I'm in the top 10 overall, I'll be happy."

That seems to be a cinch. A cranky right knee was no problem in predraft workouts and the Redskins and Pittsburgh Steelers brought Samuels in for second looks. The big tackle offered a scouting report on himself.

"I'm very athletic for my size," he said. "I run well. I'm a smart player and a great person and I won't do anything to hurt the program."

Warrick and running back Thomas Jones from the University of Virginia appear to be the top skill position players in the draft.

"I feel I'm a good back," Jones said. "There are a lot of good backs in the draft. To be the first one taken wouldn't be a bad thing, either."

Jones said all the teams he's talked to have been complimentary.

"Everyone said 'You're a special player,'" he said. "But nobody said, 'You're the guy we want'"

That part comes Saturday.

COACH: Rebs get coach signed

(From 1B)

will be around more family."

Drew, a freshman and the oldest of the Coffman clan, started for his Dad this past season in Lampasas. Jordan is an eighth grader, Riley is a third grader and Grant is four years old.

Of course, Coffman knew that he was a second choice, so to speak. It didn't bother him a bit.

"John Wooden wasn't the first choice by UCLA, either," Coffman said. "I can live with that. I'm just glad to get the job whether I'm the first or fourth pick. That really doesn't matter to me at all. I'm on Cloud 9."

Coffman didn't know when he would officially report to the Lee campus, but he is anxious to arrive in Midland.

"I still have to get my release from Lampasas, but I want to get there (Midland) as soon as possible and go to work. I can't wait," Coffman said.

He has already checked out District 4-5A basketball.

"I've got friends in this district and they have all told me that there isn't 10 points difference between any of the teams.

"I know Midland High has had a great basketball tradition there, but it's time for Lee to build a little tradition, too."

Coffman has turned a few basketball programs around in his 18 years as a head basketball coach, a fact that he is proud of.

"When I took over at Lampasas two years ago, the team was 6-24 overall and 0-10 in district play," Coffman said. "We were 22-14 and in the regional tournament this past season."

Prior to Lampasas, Coffman was the head coach at Class 2A Haskell for eight seasons, where he was in the region tournament four times and gained a state berth in 1996, losing to Krum in the semifinals.

He coached three years at Class 3A Bridgeport.

"We never did make the playoffs at Bridgeport, but we had winning seasons all three years and they had not been winning," Coffman said.

Coffman started his head coaching experience in Class A Weinert.

"Weinert is a really small town," Coffman said. "We made the playoffs in two of the five years I was there, but that was a big deal then because they hadn't had even a winning season in a while."

George Cooper, Lee principal, headed up the search committee for the Lee basketball position. Whalen, Tim Holland, director of human resources for MISD and John Parchman, Lee head football coach, were also on the committee.

Coffman became the man of choice on Friday's last day search. Matt Clark of Class 3A Lake Dallas was also interviewed by the committee as the list narrowed to two.

jobs were as Dallas' defensive coordinator and secondary coach, is probably wearing out his VCR studying candidates.

Some of the clips he's likely rewound the most feature Dwayne Goodrich of Tennessee, Mario Edwards of Florida State, Jacoby Shepherd of Oklahoma State and Kareem Larrimore of West Texas A&M. They're not the cream of the crop, but they are the most likely to be available at No. 49.

Godfrey's departure makes a starter out of Dat Nguyen, a third-round pick last year who saw a lot of action as the fourth linebacker. Now Dallas needs someone else to fill that role. It needs to be someone good, too, because Pro Bowler Dexter Coakley is likely to follow Godfrey to free agency riches after next season.

Possible second- and third-rounders include Na'il Diggs of Ohio State, Corey Moore of Virginia Tech and Brandon Short of Penn State. Diggs moved from defensive end in college and Moore will try making the switch in the NFL.

Dallas has taken a defensive linemen with its first pick in the last two drafts, three of the last four and four of the last six. It's not likely to happen this time because the Cowboys feel good about depth there.

Greg Ellis and Ebenezer Ekuban, the last two first-round picks, will start at ends. The Cowboys also have signed Dimitrius Underwood, a first-round pick last year for Minnesota who still has tremendous potential but must first prove he can handle life in the NFL.

fly ball hit by Morgan Ensberg, which landed for a double.

The 'Hounds answered in the bottom of the second with back-to-back homers from Jason Hart and McKay off Round Rock lefty Bryan Braswell to pull to within 3-2.

Round Rock answered back in the top of the third as Keith Ginter, the leading hitter in the Texas League, knocked in Nelson Samboy with a single to left field. Samboy had singled and got into scoring position by stealing second base.

Early in the game it seemed Midland could only score runs courtesy of the long ball. 'Hounds center fielder Justin Bowles cut the Express' lead in the bottom of the sixth with a solo shot to left, the third off Braswell, to make it 4-3 in favor of the Express.

ROCKHOUND BITES: Pitcher Eric DuBose saw his first action of the year as he came in the seventh inning and pitched 1 1/3 innings without giving up a run or hit. DuBose walked three and struck out one... For a stretch of 27 Round Rock batters from the third through the ninth, RockHound pitchers did not allow a hit, although they did issue eight walks during that span.

Midland Lee vs. Abilene High

When: 2 p.m.
Where: Lee's Ernie Johnson Field.
Records: Lee is 16-9 overall and 5-3 in District 4-5A. Abilene High is 14-4 and 5-2.
4-5A Significance: If Lee wins and Abilene Cooper beats Midland High, the Rebels will be tied with Cooper and MHS for first. At worst, Lee will be alone in second with a win. A loss could throw the Rebels as far back as fourth place. If Abilene High wins and Cooper beats Midland High, the Eagles are alone in first place. A loss drops Abilene High to at least third place and maybe as low as fourth.
Notes: Lee recovered from a disappointing loss to crosstown rival MHS to open the second half of district by beating Odessa Permian 5-1 Thursday, as Collin Gilliam stayed unbeaten in district with a three-hitter. Joe Frazier struck a big blow with a three-run home run... Such a combination today would be a big improvement over the last time the Rebels met the Eagles. Abilene High routed Lee 9-0 as the Rebels managed only two hits off Abilene High junior right-hander Chris Gage... Senior right-hander Jon Rogers, who has lost two in a row after winning six straight, figures to get the call today for Lee.
Next: The Rebels will go on the road Thursday for what figures to be big district game against Abilene Cooper at 4:30 p.m.

Midland High vs. Abilene Cooper

When: 2 p.m.
Where: Abilene Cooper.
Records: Midland High is 20-4 overall and 6-2 in District 4-5A. Cooper is 12-8 and 5-3.
4-5A Significance: Quite large. With a victory, the Bulldogs will remain alone in first place in the district, but with a loss, they'll fall into a tie with Cooper. That tie would be for second if Abilene High beats Midland Lee. Cooper will share first if it wins and Lee beats Abilene High, but if Lee wins and the Cougars lose, they'll fall into fourth place.
Notes and quotes: The Bulldogs are rolling, having won five straight district games, including a 13-5 win over Odessa High Tuesday to claim the district lead. But Cooper has been a nemesis to Midland High the last two seasons. The Cougars have won three straight over the Bulldogs, including a 9-7 win at Zachery Field in the first half of district in which Cooper's Tommy Arko belted two home runs. That was the last time MHS lost. "It's a big game for both of us," said Midland High coach Barry Russell. "For them to get back in the district championship race they have to beat us. We've got to win to prove we can beat them and win the district."... The Bulldogs will likely throw freshman right-hander Casey Zachry, who is 3-0 in district.
Next: The Bulldogs will return home Tuesday to face San Angelo Central in a district game at 4:30 p.m.

WJCAC: MC, EPCC play two today

(From 1B)

The second game began just like the first one, with MC getting a pair of runs in the first inning. Stanford singled ahead of Melissa Martinez' homer over right center.

El Paso got a run in the second on a single, two errors and another single. Three runs in the third gave them their first lead. A single, error, two walks, and a double by Melissa Rodriguez accounted for the three.

Nibbling away at the Chaps, El Paso got another in the fourth on a single by Pollard, stolen base, sacrifice and another error. They plated two more in the fifth, thanks to two errors, a double by Castro and a single by Toni Guevara.

The dam burst in the fifth, as El Paso sent 14 batters to the plate, scoring nine runs on nine hits, including a three-run homer by Rodriguez, and aided by three errors.

"They just hit the ball, got it in the gaps, and we didn't," MC coach Tommy Ramos said. "When we took three from them in El Paso, they didn't hit like that...but they did today."

El Paso now is 40-14 overall and 11-3 in conference. MC is 29-15, having lost its last four, and 5-5 in conference. Howard College, which split with MC and lost all eight to El Paso, is 2-10.

Love brings his top game to same old Harbour Town

Associated Press

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. — If Davis Love III has a secret about playing at Harbour Town, he's not telling.

''Guys are kind of like, 'Well, what is he doing? Here he goes again. How does he do it?''' said Love, whose 5-under-par 66 Friday lifted him — again — into the lead after two rounds of the MCI Classic. ''You can tell that maybe they think I know something that they don't. But I don't.''

Love, a four-time champion in this event, looked every bit at home as he does in nearby Sea Island, Ga., cutting through cold, damp conditions to move a stroke ahead of Ernie Els.

Els, second at the Masters last week, shot a 67 and was at 135.

Steve Lowery had a 7-under 64 and was three strokes off the lead with Notah Begay and first-round leader Dan Forsman. Begay, with a 66, and Forsman, with a 71, both played in the afternoon as a steady, sometimes heavy, rain cleared the course of everyone but the golfers.

Masters champion Vijay Singh briefly moved within a shot of Love midway through the round. But Singh had three bogeys on the back nine to fall to his second straight 70 and was six shots behind.

Defending champion Glen Day followed his opening 74 with a 69.

Love is as overwhelming a favorite at Harbour Town as Tiger Woods seems to be at most other courses. His four victories are an MCI record, as is the $941,533 he has won here. He broke 70 in eight of his last 10 tournament rounds.

''It is kind of strange that for some reason after the Masters I always come here and play well,'' Love said. Players ''have asked me a lot, 'How do you play this hole?' or 'How do you play that hole?'''

Rain hits Seniors Championship

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. — Five inches of rain in 12 hours wiped out play Friday at the PGA Seniors Championship.

Weather permitting, the first round will be finished and the second round completed Saturday.

''It's just a bad day for everybody,'' said defending champion Allen Doyle, who was 1 under for 12 holes with two birdies and a bogey when darkness stopped play Thursday.

''I'd hate to be in the PGA's shoes. But you want to be sure it's playable and fair for everyone when you start playing again.''

Japan's Seiji Ebihara was the clubhouse leader Thursday at 68. He had been caught at 4-under par by Doug Tewell, who birdied the 11th, 14th and 15th holes before darkness halted play.

Inkster takes 2nd-round lead

LINCOLN, Calif. — Defending champion Juli Inkster shot a 5-under-par 67 Friday and took a one-stroke lead after two rounds of the LPGA Longs Drugs Challenge.

Last year, Inkster took the lead for good on the second day at Twelve Bridges Golf Club, also shooting a 67.

This year, her 137 total was one stroke ahead of Carin Koch and Brandie Burton.

Inkster had six birdies and one bogey Friday, mastering the par-5s with a birdie on all four.

Koch, who was runner-up in the 1998 tournament, and Burton each matched their opening-round 69s. Koch had three birdies Friday, while Burton had five.

Mayfield captures DieHard 500 pole

Associated Press

TALLADEGA, Ala. — For a while, it seemed like old times at Talladega Superspeedway, even if the cars were going much slower. Then, Jeremy Mayfield ruined things for the sentimental favorite.

Mayfield won the third NASCAR Winston Cup pole of his career Friday with a speed of 186.969 mph for Sunday's DieHard 500, making him the slowest pole-sitter at the sport's longest, fastest track in 26 years.

Mayfield's effort on the 2.66-mile trioval bumped crowd favorite Bill Elliott from the top spot, denying the Georgia driver his first pole since 1997.

The session, delayed two hours by morning rain, was completed in eerie darkness at the unlighted track. The cars were illuminated on the frontstretch by faint lights from the massive grandstands, then disappeared into the night on the backstretch. But the drivers didn't seem to have any problems.

Elliott was second at 186.936, followed by Dale Jarrett (186.747), Dale Earnhardt (186.518), Mark Martin (186.354) and Dale Earnhardt Jr. (186.173).

In the days when no one had heard of restrictor plates and 200 mph speeds were commonplace at Talladega, Elliott was the track's most dominant driver. He won six straight poles from 1985-87, setting the qualifying record of 212.809 mph for the 1987 DieHard 500.

But the ever-frightening speeds prompted NASCAR officials to mandate restrictor plates at Talladega and Daytona, dropping speeds back under 200 mph. The vigilant battle to keep the cars under control took another step this year, when the sport's sanctioning body reduced the plate holes by 1/32 of an inch to seven-eighths.

The result was the slowest pole speed at Talladega since David Pearson started up front for the 1974 Winston 500 at 184.926 mph. In fact, Mayfield was slower than Martin's winning speed for the 1997 Winston 500, when he set a record for a 500-mile race with a caution-free 188.354.

SOFTBALL: Rebs' Row throws shutout

tor, said that the teams have some choices on what to do after Monday's game.

"Lee, and the winner of the MHS-Cooper game, have a couple of choices," Whalen said. "They can have a playoff for seeding purposes or they can flip for second and third place if they don't want to play against each other again. If one of the coaches wants to play the game, the game has to be played. That will have to be done on Tuesday if the game is played because playoff teams must be certified to the UIL by Tuesday night."

As bad as the news has to be for Midland High, it may be the best possible scenario for Midland in general. Had Cooper won the coin flip, one of the Midland teams would have been eliminated since they would have had to play each other. Now, both Midland teams can still make the state playoffs.

"The flip was a huge deal," said Lee coach Wes Overton. "Both (MHS coach) Shawnda (Vines) and I were pulling for either one of us to win the flip because we really didn't want to have to play against each other in an elimination game. Now, the way it turned out, both Midland schools have a chance to go to the playoffs and that's what we would like to see happen."

This same scenario didn't work so well in the boys soccer race recently when Odessa Permian won the coin flip after a three-way tie for second place while MHS and Lee had to play each other in an elimination game. Of course, that battle will long be remembered because Lee won the district playoff over MHS and then had to forfeit the game for playing an ineligible player, and MHS ended up in the state playoffs.

Lee's Overton, however, said he wants to play a seeding game between Monday's winner between MHS and Lee.

"Coach Vines and I were both in agreement on this before the flip Friday that if there was a seeding game between us, we would play it," Overton said. "We had already flipped and that game will be at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday. If weather is a problem, we would have to flip.

"If Cooper beats Midland High, I don't think they want to play it off. They want to flip. But we want to play the seeding game, so I think the district rules allow us to force that if we want it. If that happens, we would probably be back in Snyder on Tuesday to play Cooper. I hope it doesn't come down to that."

Against San Angelo, the Lady Rebels got a four-hit shutout from junior Brandie Row. Lee scored all five of its runs in the first two innings, coming up with a four-spot in the second. Sophomore Erin Evans had a double for Lee, the only extra base hit of the game.

Pacers beat reeling Heat

MIAMI (AP) — Reggie Miller had 26 points to lead Indiana in scoring for the first time in more than a month, and the Pacers closed in on the Eastern Conference title by beating the reeling Miami Heat 105-101 Friday night.

Miami lost its third game in a row. Tim Hardaway didn't dress because of inflammation in his left foot, and Alonzo Mourning didn't start because he overslept and missed the morning shootaround.

The Heat were 0-for-11 on 3-pointers until Dan Majerle sank one with 10.5 seconds left, extending their NBA-record streak to 504 consecutive games with at least one 3-pointer. The last time Miami was shut out on 3-pointers was Jan. 19, 1994, at Indiana.

Passover Seders unite people of different faiths

By Julia Lieblich
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK — Ohio State University student Patricia Cunningham II is going to not one, but two Passover Seders this year, and she's preparing with the fervor of the scholar she is. She's reading Exodus and feminist commentaries, and she's talked to a couple of rabbis about the holiday's meaning.

No matter that she's not Jewish. She wants to learn more about the story of Jews' liberation from slavery in Egypt and to talk about her own African-American heritage — all over matzoh and wine.

Throughout the country, families and communities are inviting Christians and Muslims, blacks and Latinos to Seders, whether intimate dinners or gatherings for hundreds to re-enact the story of freedom. For non-Jews, it's an opportunity to learn about the Jewish experience and tradition; for Jews, it's a chance to see how others draw meaning from that tradition.

Passover is uniquely Jewish but also universal, says Ruth Broyde-Sharone, a documentary filmmaker who has shot 95 hours of Seders with guests ranging from Latino garment workers to a Middle Eastern imam. This year, she is taking 36 Jews, Christians, and Muslims on a journey from Egypt to Israel to retrace the Exodus.

"People from different backgrounds who cannot agree what to call God come to this ritual meal and it's everyone's story," she said.

Such Seders were unheard of in the late 1960s when writer Arthur Waskow decided to open his family Passover meal to "what was going on in the street."

It was April 1968 in Washington, days after the assassination of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., and rioting that followed in many cities. Soldiers in an armored car were stationed on his corner.

"Walking home, I thought I'm going to do Pesach (Passover), and this is Pharaoh's Army," said Waskow, director of the Philadelphia-based Shalom Center, which promotes peace. In the past, his family had never talked about current events during the Seder. "That night we began to talk about what the Seder meant in America."

He soon was compiling a new Haggada, the Passover liturgy, incorporating writings by

Palm Sunday

Palm Sunday observance ushers in Easter week

Throughout Midland, Christians will be marching Sunday, saying the age-old liturgy, waving palm fronds as they process in a ceremony that goes back to Christ's entry into Jerusalem on the back of a donkey.

For some churches, the tradition is inextricably woven through the fabric of the year. Others, such as First Christian Church, will be taking up the custom for the first time.

In at least one church in Midland, the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, a donkey will bear extra palm fronds and walk behind the clergy in the processional. Children will process at Trinity Presbyterian. At Grace Lutheran, 15-year-olds will celebrate their first communion. Five United Methodist churches will join at Midland High School for a huge processional and joint services. And in a larger sense, they'll all be linked by this common pageant.

Lutherans, United Methodists, Presbyterians, Catholics, Episcopalians — the length and breadth of the city will line up, take palms in one hand and scripts in the other, and turn themselves into a processional.

Little boys in Sunday suits will wield their palm fronds in their best Walt Disney fashion, staging sword fights until their parents stop them. It's a dance to the death, a ceremony fraught with portent.

Christians all know the story. The triumphal entry, a time of high spirits and festivity, is followed by the ignominy of the arrest and trial. The procession into the church is followed by the reading of the passion found in the gospels. There is no drama more searing than this, with mem-

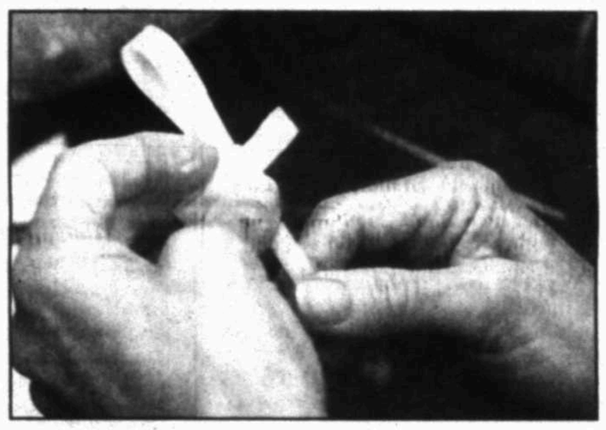
Tish Taylor, left, and Elizabeth Greaves helped make hundreds of palm crosses that will be handed out Sunday at Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity Sunday, which is Palm Sunday.



Anne Herbig finishes one of the palm crosses that will be distributed during Palm Sunday services at Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity. In order to make the crosses, the fronds must first be soaked and the fibrous outer edge removed. Many churches pass out palms — either the fronds or crosses — to commemorate Jesus' entry into Jerusalem.

Some churches make, hand out palm crosses

Palm Sunday, the Sunday before Easter, is so named because many Christians traditionally celebrate Jesus' triumphal entry into Jerusalem on a path strewn with palm leaves thrown down by his admirers and followers.

Churches observing Palm Sunday customarily use palm leaves and fronds from growers and other suppliers, either intact or stripped and folded into crosses that can be pinned to lapels or carried.

Many Midland churches hand out the long fronds for members of the congregations to process with, then pass out the folded crosses for them to wear or carry once they're inside the church. Churches can buy the palm crosses or they can make from intact fronds.

The women of the Episcopal parishes of St. Nicholas and Holy Trinity make the folded crosses.

Anne Herbig of Holy Trinity has been folding crosses for 20 years on the Friday before Palm Sunday. She says the activity and the camaraderie is meaningful and rich.

"I will give up any other activity to do the palm crosses, because that's the start of my Easter week."

Ms. Herbig said the whole process — soaking the palms, stripping the fronds and folding the crosses — can take hours.

"But you don't have to do the whole thing," she explained. "People will come in and work for 30 or 40 minutes when they can, and then leave. It's a wonderful time to visit and catch up on gossip and just be a part of the work of the church."

Buttercup, a Sicilian donkey owned by Midlanders Bonnie and Orman Hubbard, will be part of the Palm Sunday procession at Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity. Buttercup stands on 34 inches high at her shoulder.

Donkey owned by local couple to be part of procession

As any 4-year-old Christian child can tell you, donkeys play an important role in the story of Christ.

His mother rode a donkey into Bethlehem just hours before his birth, donkeys figure prominently in nativity scenes every year at Christmas, and Jesus rode into Jerusalem on a donkey.

The parish of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity found it fitting, therefore, to invite Buttercup, a blaze-faced gray Sicilian donkey wearing the shadow of the cross on her back, to lead the Palm Sunday procession.

She won't go into the nave of the church; she'll stop at the narthex, ever mindful of her humble place as donkeys have been through the strands of time.

Buttercup, who stands 34 inches high where the shadow of the cross appears at her shoulders, is one of a herd of donkeys owned by Midlanders Bonnie and Orman Hubbard, who are Holy Trinity parishioners.

Hubbard said this will be Buttercup's first time to participate in the Palm Sunday processional, although she's been visiting Trinity School for several years. Hubbard said he started taking the donkey to Trinity after his daughter, Paige Gates — who teaches art at Trinity School — listened in on a storytelling session with Vina Rahlfs, also a Trinity teacher.

"Vina told this wonderful tale about how the donkey got its cross and when she found out that we had donkeys, she invited us to bring some to the school," Hubbard said

How the donkey got his cross ...

Trinity School teacher Vina Rahlfs tells her students the legend of how the donkey got its cross:

It was winter, and there was an edict sent out from Caesar that all the male residents of Judea had to return to the town of their birth to be counted and taxed. Joseph, a carpenter, who was born in Bethlehem, prepared for the trip with his wife, Mary, who was expecting a child.

He had a small donkey named Ali, and he lifted Mary upon Ali's back for the ride to Bethlehem.

The trip was long and arduous, but Ali was very careful to step gently and carry Mary smoothly on his back. As the road got rockier and steeper, Ali grew very tired. But each time he decided that he would not be able to take another step, Mary would lean over and whisper in his ear, "Thank you, dear friend, for carrying me so gently," and he would be able to continue.

By the time they reached Bethlehem, Ali was exhausted. But their journey was not yet over. The first inn they came to, Joseph went in while Ali and Mary waited, and Joseph came back to say

Waiting for things on Earth should be prelude to waiting to get to heaven

Recently a group of us sat in an elegant dining room, some of us famished enough to eat the napkins, but we wore our party manners and waited politely for everyone to get there before we surged through the buffet line. As I was hungrily eyeing the lemon rind in my water glass, my dinner partner leaned over and said, "I've figured out that I spend one-third of my life waiting."

Williams

At first we laughed. Then we despaired. Somewhere out there was a sociological study to prove he was probably right.

We also spend one-third of our lives sleeping, but that's a different story. Sleeping is quality time. Sleep is one of life's blessings. The older I get, the more I measure the success of a vacation not in terms of adventure, fun, or excitement, but in terms of rest.

This waiting business, though, has varying levels of irritation and frustration, which can be classified in terms of muscle groups involved. The lowest level involves the hand muscles and occurs when you have an urgent 8 a.m. appointment, and the driver of car ahead of you (who, incidentally, has had the left blinker on for the last five blocks), has mistaken rush hour for a drive in the country and stops just before the light turns yellow. Your knuckles turn white on the steering wheel because you know darn good and well that both of you could have made it through that yellow light. Now you have to wait.

The next level involves the mandible muscles around the jaw. After you've arrived late to the 8 a.m. meeting, you realize that you're missing one piece of information, which should take a second and a half to find out. You dial the company. A mechanical voice values you as a customer but is taking calls in the order they have been received. You join the chain of blinking lights on hold all over America.

When the mechanical voice returns, you then suffer through a 13-step menu — which in your haste you bungle near the end. Starting over, you again wait in line. Seventeen minutes later, a live person responds, but by this time, you realize the meeting is probably over, and your jaw is so tight you can barely speak.

These two levels are daily, superficial problems and can be managed by deep breaths, an active fantasy life, or a tape of Johnny Mathis. The next level is more problematic and involves the gastrointestinal muscle group and sometimes the heart: waiting to hear about a job, a loan, a raise, a cut-back; waiting to adopt a baby; waiting for a relationship to get better; waiting to move; waiting for life to begin.

In waiting for these kinds of things, the danger is that we miss out on life altogether, reaching, finally, the kind of waiting that all other waiting should prepare us for and often doesn't: the end, either ours or someone we love. This kind of waiting — in hospital waiting rooms, doctors' offices, at home — involves the muscles of the soul, during which we enter into another kind of time altogether. God's time, KAIROS. Angst-free time. Time when praises sung to God will erase all memories of sighs. The time we will all eventually swim in.

One-third of life is a long time to spend with cramped muscles. A friend once joked, "Don't ever pray for patience. If you do, God will give you a multitude of opportunities to develop it."

If we're lucky, God will give us opportunities anyway. Like warm spots in life's cold river, the fleeting moments of God's time that we experience on earth soothe us and prepare us for all our Easter moments.

Church is founded on music of jazz icon John Coltrane

■ Music is not a gimmick to get people to attend, but the path toward enlightenment, said Bishop Franzo King.

Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — On Sunday mornings, the sweet strains of a saxophone and the infectious beat of a drum float from a tiny storefront on Divisadero Street. Inside, the Church of St. John Coltrane is in full swing.

"Amen!" the congregation sings, and even indifferent visitors are caught up in the music. Toes tap, hands clap, heads bob to the syncopated beat, and, sometimes unexpectedly, a hearty "Praise the Lord!" sneaks out.

The church is a real one, though Coltrane, the jazz icon who died of cancer in 1967, isn't an official saint. It's officially the African Orthodox Church and its services are an eclectic mix of free-form jazz and religion, in jam sessions that can last three hours.

The church was founded on the music of Coltrane, an intensely spiritual man whose 1964 musical meditation, "A Love Supreme," is a powerful expression of faith.

But soon the music will be silenced here. After nearly 30 years at its Divisadero location, the church has fallen victim to the city's real estate crunch. Its last service at the Divisadero location is Easter.

According to Bishop Franzo King, the landlord wanted a month-to-month lease, meaning the $2,500 rent can increase each month, a real possibility with lucrative technology jobs luring high-salaried workers to the San Francisco Bay area.

King is determined to continue preaching in a new, $1,800-a-month space he found all the way across town, but it needs a lot of work and approval from city planners. In the meantime, he hopes to continue services temporarily at a nearby church.

News of the move startled longtime congregants as well as other San Franciscans who consider the church part of the city's quirky charm. Services in the past few weeks have been packed.

Sister Mary Deborah greets visitors to the church with a smile. By the time the service starts, a handful of mismatched pews are filled, many worshippers are left standing and a line snakes out the door.

Buttoned-down yuppies sit with tattooed hipsters and camera-toting tourists as children frolic on the altar. A drum set and a scattering of amplifiers round the edges of the small room, where King plays the drums and leads a small group of musicians.

Looking down on the congregation is a gold-leaf portrait of Coltrane grasping a flaming saxophone; a banner quotes Coltrane's liner notes for "A Love Supreme" — "Let us sing all songs to God. Let us pursue Him in the righteous path. Yes, it is true; 'Seek and ye shall find.'"

Before the music starts, Sister Mary Deborah extolls: "We do need one another — and we need the Lord."

A congregant adds: "We need John Coltrane music, too."

David Ellis, a goateed visitor from New York, stumbled across the church's Web site one day (it is also listed in nearly every San Francisco guide book).

"I thought it seemed like an interesting place to go," Ellis said. "I wasn't expecting too much, to be honest. But the music is amazing. And there's so much spirit here."

That's the idea, King said. For many, the music is the path toward enlightenment. It's not a gimmick to get people to listen to his sermons.

"I don't think it's an afterthought. I think it's part of the process," he said. "We feel that the music has its job, and it is working in concert with everything else. We believe the spirit of the Lord is in the music."

The son of preachers, King got the idea for the church in the 1960s, when he received his "sound baptism" at a Coltrane performance.

"I became aware that John Coltrane's music was more than highly emotional," he said. "It was highly spiritual."

Visitors often find a spark of revelation to take home, wherever home may be. At a recent service, they came from as far as Denmark and Australia.

"I don't know what's in people's minds, if they think they're going to a church or a cult or something," King said.

"But I do know that there are people that, once here, have a profound experience and have accepted the Lord into their lives. I talk to people who go back to their churches strengthened and encouraged in the Lord."

King hopes to move his church within six months. The new property has room for expansion, so the church can continue a wide variety of community outreach programs, including a vegetarian soup kitchen for the poor.

In the meantime, the church is holding fund-raisers, and King remains characteristically upbeat about the reluctant move.

"It's a mess, what can I say?" he said. "But I have faith it will all work out."

PALM: Making crosses is long and involved task

(From 1C)

She said she began cross-folding when she first moved to Midland. Some of the women she met then are still involved.

The job of folding crosses is not as easy as it sounds. The palm fronds come from the grower cut from the stem but not stripped. They must be soaked before the sharp fibrous outer edge is removed in order to make them pliable for folding without bloodying the hands of the folders.

Ms. Herbig said the job of soaking and stripping was once done by Midlander Polly Kellogg. Now the Junior Daughters of the King — an order that prays for special needs and requests of parishioners — have assumed the job of soaking and stripping the palms in preparation for the folding, which was done Friday.

The more experienced folders demonstrate the process to the newcomers. Ms. Herbig is one of the teachers.

"You hold the frond horizontally and bend the right end straight up from the center to form a right angle. Fold this strip from the center, back and down, up and over again to form a square at the back. Bring the left strip forward and fold over the center towards the right. Fold away from you, and pull through the square at back all the way.

"Bend the top strip forward and put the end through the center square to make a shaft," she continues. "Fold the left-hand strip back and through the back square, making the left crossbar. Fold the right strip back, put it through the back square and fasten."

Ms. Herbig said the group folds 500 to 600 crosses so the volunteers have plenty of chances to practice.

The crosses cannot be handed out to the congregation until they are blessed. Ms. Herbig said at Holy Trinity the crosses are usually laid on the altar to be blessed during the 7:45 a.m. service on Palm Sunday and given out afterward.

She said because the fronds are blessed, they should not be discarded into the trash when the ceremony is over. They should either be kept or reverently disposed of by burning or burial.

"We keep the left over fronds and let them dry out; then save them to burn just prior to Ash Wednesday the next year and these are the ashes."

She said people often return their crosses to the church to be used in this way but that there are always plenty.

"The first year that the Presbyterians started imposing ashes, they borrowed some from us. Believe me, we won't run out of ashes."

Fran Bessire, who heads an altar guild team at the church, said they burn the crosses in a cake pan on the church's patio, then sift them and put them into receptacles.

Ms. Herbig said she buries her cross and her husband's cross in their flower bed at home.

"I had no idea how long they stayed intact after being buried, but this year I got a new puppy and he has brought me a lot of crosses that he dug out of the flower bed."

Do you think God appreciates objects of beauty and ornate design? Whether in His instructions to Solomon on building the temple or to Moses in construction of the tabernacle, God laid out His plans with great precision and detail. These buildings were not only sacred places of worship, but were of ornate beauty built precisely according to God's plan. With this in mind, Anita created this cross with intricate detailed designs, reflective of God's majestic beauty and His great appreciation for ornate and beautiful things.

USHERS: Holy Week services include Maundy Thursday, Good Friday

(From 1C)

bers of the congregation taking the parts of Pilate, of Jesus, the high priest. When Pilate offers to release Jesus, he directs his offer to the congregation. It is the congregation, the friends and neighbors who sit side by side in the pews, who turn ugly.

"Release Barabbas!" they shout. "Then what shall I do with this man?" Pilate asks. And they shout, "Crucify him."

Churches will no soon finish cleaning up the litter left by the crowd on Sunday than they will begin to prepare for the solemnity of Maundy Thursday. The palm fronds will be collected and dried, saved to be burned and reduced to the ashes used in Ash Wednesday ceremonies next year.

The crosses will be draped in purple gauze. Pilgrims observing Lent are headed into the final week, the culmination of their introspection and sacrifice for Easter.

On Maundy Thursday there's the humility of foot washing observed by some churches. Then the last communion before the trial. Once again they recreate the horror of the mock trial. They shout the words, Crucify him! They've become the enemy of Christ. They've become the people he begged God to forgive — "For they know not what they do."

They watch on Thursday as the clergy and lay readers do quickly what they have to do. They extinguish the candles, strip the altar, bring water and wash it, hurrying to do the dreadful preparation.

They replace the purple gauze with black. Last of all, they snuff out the Sanctus lamp. Some parishioners stay on in the church in silence, remembering Jesus' words, "Could you not stay with me one hour?"

Friday dawns and the drama continues. Once again there is the telling of the story. Betrayal of Christ. Death of Christ. Church bells tolling. Somber and reflective, they leave the church.

This would be hard to take indeed if they didn't know the end of the story.

But even as they leave the church on Friday, with the bells tolling mournfully, there is a sense of relief. The joy will be richer for coming through the pain.

Gary Gross, associate pastor at First Christian Church, said First Christian has come to feel that it is important to reflect on the middle part of the Passion play as well as the festivity and joy.

"First Christian will have the traditional Palm Sunday procession with children, and will enter with palms, then move through the story of Holy Week," he said.

"This will be the first time we've done this. So often our church people don't have the opportunity during the Holy Week to experience the fullness of the story. We have pretty much been a congregation that has celebrated the procession of the palms and Jesus' arrival into Jerusalem and then gone on to the resurrection.

"But we feel that it's very appropriate historically and liturgically to add the Passion, the betrayal, the crucifixion, ending the service with a time for reflection and remembrance."

Gross said First Christian will also have a Maundy Thursday service with communion, and join other churches throughout the community with a prayer vigil for the 24 hours of Good Friday.

STORY: Donkey has cross on his back

(From 1C)

that there was no room.

They came to another inn and Joseph went in, and this one too was full.

The next inn was also full but the innkeeper, seeing how exhausted Mary looked, said, "I have a stable out back, and it is clean. You may stay there if you wish."

Ali took the last few steps around the back to the stable and as Joseph lifted Mary off his back, she placed her hand gently on his shoulder and whispered into his ear, "Thank you, dear friend."

And when she took her hand away, there was a new mark on him — a cross, that has remained on the shoulders of all his descendants to show the precious burden Ali bore on the rocky roads of Judea.

UNITE: Non-Jews attend Seders

(From 1C)

King and poet Allen Ginsberg into the traditional text. The Rev. Channing Phillips, a civil rights leader, offered his church basement for a public Seder, bringing together blacks and Jews. It drew a crowd of 800.

"It was an amazing, amazing moment," said Waskow, now a rabbi. "To know that our own memory and experience speaks to the experience of other people always strengthens us."

Rabbi Arthur Schneier, who has hosted Christian and Muslim diplomats at Seders, agrees. "The Seder is not only a reaffirmation of one's faith and one's people, it's also an opportunity to learn the lessons of oppression and liberation that are applicable in every part of the world," said Schneier, president of the interfaith Appeal of Conscience Foundation.

Still, while inviting non-Jews to a Seder is easy, "involving them is the challenge," said Adam Shyevitch of The Community Builders, a Boston group that develops affordable housing. In 1990, he helped organize a Haitian-Jewish Seder. In addition to the Jewish matzoh, the participants ate kasav, a bread Haitians make when they can't afford flour. They recited Haitian poetry, told Haitian stories of oppression and freedom, and said blessings in English and Créole.

"Both of us know what it is like to be strangers in a strange land," the Haggada said.

When the Dalai Lama, Tibet's Buddhist leader in exile, donned a yarmulke at a Washington Seder three years ago, he thanked his hosts for incorporating into the ritual his own people's efforts for cultural survival.

Cardinal William H. Keeler of Baltimore says he'll never forget a Seder he attended as a priest in the mid-1970s at the home of Aaron Feinerman, the board chairman of a local Catholic hospital. "I had a sense of the Scripture coming alive," he said. "(It) helped illumine my own preaching during the season, and (it) sealed my relationship with the family." When Keeler was installed as bishop, Feinerman and his daughter sat in the front row.

When the Rev. Eugene Rivers, of Dorchester, Mass., attends a Seder, "I'm there to learn and share," he said.

"What was most meaningful to me is that the Jewish community emphasizes the importance of memory, which involves successes and failures, the great and the banal. It provides a moral and conceptual basis for a vision of the future."

Still, he said, he's seen some Seders "become little more than networking opportunities ... to trade business cards under the pretext of being a genuine interfaith experience."

Others warn against allowing Passover to be appropriated by other faiths.

Rabbi A. James Rudin, a leader in interreligious affairs, notes the holiday's link to Christianity — "That's why Jesus was going to Jerusalem: to observe the Passover." But says the Jewish Seder should be "authentically Jewish. The matzoh is matzoh; it's not a host. The wine is wine; it's not blood."

Johann Christoph Arnold, an elder with the Bruderhof religious community, agrees. The Bruderhof, an Anabaptist pacifist group founded in the 1920s, has its own Seders with Christian themes. But he said it would be a "real disservice to impose my religion" at a Jewish Seder. "I want to feel what (Passover) means to them."

PART: Donkey was birthday gift

cross on their shoulders. Hubbard said he didn't start out to acquire a herd.

"There was a woman in Monahans who raised them and we had wanted one for years, but we wanted a female," he said. "People who raise them really don't want to sell the females and this woman didn't either but I kept going by there and talking to her. ... It was Bonnie's birthday and the woman agreed to let me have Buttercup for a present. It wasn't too long after that that the woman's health began to fail and she called and asked if we'd like to buy her herd."

The Hubbards bought the herd — the jack, Rocky, and six jennies: Jelly Bean, Buttons, Sassy, Stinky, Mattie and Calico. Since then, their herd has grown to include the babies, which include Patti, Princess, Duchess, Bobby and two others.

He said they sell the jacks and keep the females. The Hubbards also have a Great Dane, which towers over the diminutive donkeys, none of which stand more than 37 inches high at the shoulders.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, April 15, 2000:
Know where you are heading financially this year. Investments could take longer to come to term than you think. Make choices accordingly. Work harder to create the kind of security you seek. You are goal-directed, and, as a result, you succeed. Be logical and thorough. If you are single, you are likely to meet someone next winter who could be very important to you. Meanwhile, you have a good time and tie up loose ends in your life. If attached, the two of you make major life decisions. Your mate depends on your common sense. VIRGO is always practical.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Carefully check out an investment. You might not like the news you get or what you hear. Study different options, even though they could involve some additional footwork. Once you make a decision, you will be firm and secure. Tonight: Make sure it is relaxing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ You can be stubborn, and right now you are determined to have your way. Creativity surrounds a loved one, who will bend to your request. Make sure his actions are coming from the heart; otherwise, there could be problems later. Tonight: Lighten up the mood.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ You act instinctively today. Though others might find you a bit severe, you succeed. No one but you can make choices for you. Remain sure of yourself, knowing what you expect and want. Don't let anyone shake your stability. Tonight: Close to home.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ Establish what you need to do in order to make headway with another. Creativity and ingenuity mix. Your understanding of what is workable changes when you have a discussion with a friend. Join friends; make calls; allow more lightness into a project. Tonight: Where the gang is.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ Expenses go out of whack. Keep your goals in mind, even if you are sorely tempted to spend. Learning to say no might be very important. Make time for an older relative whom you enjoy a lot. Take a long-term action. Tonight: A must show.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★★ You are personality plus, and even though others might not be easy, they are highly responsive. Reach out for another at a distance. Discuss a potential trip and changes. Your attitude lets another know you are not kidding! Tonight: Off to a movie.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★ Examine long-term interests. As you reach out, you might lock horns with someone you rarely concur with financially and who tends to withhold or be testy. Sometimes you can't win! Go off and do your own thing. Tonight: Take time for you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ Zoom right in and go for what you want. Your sense of humor comes into play with a touchy, contrary partner. Greet rigidity and anger with openness. Clear the air, eyeing what you want from this person in the future. Tonight: Where the party is.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ Pressure builds. Even if you don't want to be concerned with work, demands are made. Share a project with a loved one. Do what you must do. Another doesn't mean to be antagonistic, but he certainly shares his point of view! Tonight: Display your executive abilities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ Reach out for another. By not standing on ceremony, you open doors. Allow caring to emanate. Let your creativity come forth. Ideas flow. Create better understanding with a child or loved one. Act when the timing feels right. Tonight: Could be dreamy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ A partner shows his true colors. A family member could be a bit stubborn or testy. You can't change him, but you can change your response. Decide what is best for you. Make a personal decision and stick to it. Tonight: Work as a team.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ Another could test your patience. Knowing when to put a halt to a pattern is important. Avoid losing your temper. State your terms and needs calmly. Others will respond when they understand your limits. Tonight: Out and about.

Newman wakes up surprised every day

NEW YORK — At 75, Paul Newman says he wakes up surprised every day.

''I'm at that age when you really start thinking about what the end is going to be like and how gracefully you're gonna do that,'' he said in Esquire's May issue.

''If I would have to say I was preoccupied with anything, it would be that; just wondering how graceful that exit is gonna be.''

He ain't dead yet. In fact, Newman's got a new movie, ''Where The Money Is,'' about an aging bank robber cajoled into one last heist.

The movie was shot two years ago. He hasn't had many prospects for work since.

''Lean stuff out there,'' Newman said. ''It's dry, a dry season.''

LOS ANGELES — A man was charged with trying to extort money from ''Family Feud'' host Louie Anderson by threatening to reveal the comedian allegedly asked him for sex.

Richard J. Gordon, 31, of Mesa, Ariz., and a second man, Matthew Auten, were arrested Tuesday after Gordon allegedly picked up a $250,000 cashier's check from an FBI agent posing as Anderson's assistant, authorities said.

Gordon alleged that Anderson once asked him to come home with him and urged the comedian to pay money ''so your secrets don't get out and blow your future.''

Anderson's lawyer told federal authorities earlier this month that Gordon received nearly $100,000 from Anderson but demanded another $250,000, according to court papers.

Anderson, the voice of the Fox animated children's show ''Life With Louie,'' paid at first because he was afraid the story would hurt his career, the court papers said.

Julie Nathanson, a publicist representing Anderson, said in a statement that being ''a target of criminal activity is an unfortunate and increasingly common byproduct of celebrity.''

Gordon and Auten remained in custody Friday.

NEW ORLEANS — Emeril Lagasse is known for his cuisine, restaurants and television shows.

So when negotiations didn't persuade a local caterer to stop using ''Emeril'' to direct customers to his Web site, Lagasse went to court under a five-month-old federal ''cybersquatting'' law.

The case was a short one. The suit was filed last week and former waiter Tim Howard agreed Thursday to give up the domain names he registered 18 months ago, including ''essenceofemeril.com and emerilspice.com.

''I never had any intention of selling the domain names for profit and have not done so,'' said Howard, who once worked in two of Lagasse's restaurants. ''I sincerely regret any harm that I have caused to Mr. Lagasse.''

Lagasse's attorney, Mark S. Stein, had no comment.

LITTLE ROCK — President Clinton has picked a friend to build his presidential library.

Clinton recently decided on William E. Clark, who runs CDI Contractors, to be the general contractor for the project, said library coordinator Skip Rutherford.

The president and Clark have been friends since Clinton was Arkansas governor.

''The president has told us that we're going to do the project,'' Clark said Thursday. ''We don't have a written contract, but I'm sure his word is good, aren't you?''

Among CDI's projects are a $70 million shopping mall in Oveido, Fla., and some Embassy Suites hotels and Dillard's department stores.

NEW ORLEANS — Harry Connick Jr. is helping low-income families in his hometown get a place to live through Habitat for Humanity.

In the past few weeks, Connick has led a fund-raising drive for the nonprofit organization, donating 1,000 tickets to his May 4 Big Band concert and patron party in New Orleans. The gift was worth about $136,000.

''Although my career takes me all over the world, I know that there is no place quite like New Orleans,'' Connick wrote in a letter being sent to 6,000 people requesting contributions for the project. ''The natural resources of this city — its people, culture and heritage — are beyond compare.''

The New Orleans Area Habitat for Humanity has built 43 homes in the city since its founding in 1983.

Connick said he will be among the workers helping build the Habitat home on Music Street.

Traffic slows to a crawl along Seawall Boulevard on Friday in Galveston as revelers arrive for Beach Party Weekend. Galveston city officials expect the annual gathering of college students from traditionally black colleges to draw more than 200,000 people

Galveston Island bracing for college crowds from Beach Party weekend

GALVESTON (AP) — Crowded streets and full hotel rooms are expected as an expected quarter-million people will pack Galveston Island for the annual Beach Party event this weekend.

Expecting long lines on Interstate 45, the major roadway that leads into the island, at least 30 Texas Department of Public Safety troopers and 20 Galveston County Sheriff's Department deputies will be stationed along the freeway.

More than 700 officers from around the region will be working on the island.

"We're expecting up to 250,000 people and that means that traffic is going to be backed up on I-45 for hours and hours and hours," Galveston Police Chief Kim Schoolcraft told the Houston Chronicle.

The event was formerly known as Kappa Weekend because of its beginnings in the 1980s as a relatively small gathering of members and alumni of the black national fraternity Kappa Alpha Psi, Inc.

All of the city's 4,300 hotel rooms are booked and many of the area's beach houses have been rented, said tourist officials.

To limit cruising along the city's Seawall Boulevard, which in years past has been clogged by traffic, the Galveston City Council gave promoters permission to set up a 49-block entertainment district along the boulevard and charge anybody who wishes to cruise past the district $20 per vehicle.

The promoters of the party, KappaFest 2000 have invested about $1.5 million in the event. The city's budget for the event was more than $421,000, with KappaFest 2000 paying the city $375,000 to promote it.

The Galveston City Council on Thursday delayed taking any action on approving next year's party so it can assess how this year's event turns out.

Last hospitalized Aggie goes home after five months

By Mike Crissey
Associated Press

DALLAS — John Comstock, who spent more time in hospitals than he did as a student at Texas A&M University, went home Friday, five months after being injured in the bonfire collapse that killed 12 young people and injured 26.

Comstock was the last Aggie remaining hospitalized after the Nov. 18 accident. He left Zale Lipshy University Hospital at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center after extensive surgery, recovery and therapy.

Despite the loss of part of his left leg, partial paralysis in his right arm, and the prospect of a year or more in therapy, Comstock said he looks forward to returning to the university and its traditions.

"We are not an Aggie family. John just went down there, and he is very much for Aggieland and the whole bit, and I support him in that," said Dixie Edwards, Comstock's mother.

Comstock, who lives in the Dallas suburb of Richardson, has begun taking college classes via the Internet from A&M's biomedical-science program. Comstock said he plans to return to school in College Station by next spring.

But he would like to make it back to the university next Friday for the Aggie tradition of muster, when the names of absent Aggies are read and Silver Taps is played for those who have died.

"I'd like to go to see what happens," Comstock said.

The 19-year-old freshman was wiring logs together on the fourth tier of the 59-foot-high pyramid of logs when it fell, killing 11 students and one former student and injuring 26 others.

When the wedding-cake pile of logs began tipping, Comstock grabbed the logs in front of him and rode them to the ground. After being trapped for seven hours under the logs, Comstock was the last person pulled from the pile alive.

John Comstock, front, the last Texas A&M University student to be rescued from last year's fatal bonfire collapse, leaves the Zale Lipshy Hospital at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center in Dallas Friday. Walking out with him is his mother, Dixie Edwards, center, Dr. Karen Kowalske, right and in background Roy Bode, vice president of Public Affairs with the University of Texas Southwestern.

Dr. Karen Kowalske said Comstock's exit from the hospital in a wheelchair was a big improvement from his arrival.

"When John got here, he came on a stretcher he was not able to sit ... he had a feeding tube, and he was not able to use his right arm or either of his legs," Kowalske said.

Comstock is able to get himself out of bed and into his wheelchair and has strength in his right elbow and shoulder, she said.

Comstock will undergo outpatient therapy at the hospital five times a week.

"I am expecting full recovery with use of prosthetics," Comstock said. "I think as long as I believe it hard enough, it will happen."

Neither son nor mother said they thought the bonfire was unsafe. Comstock said he didn't think the university could have prevented the accident.

"I firmly believe the tradition should continue. We can learn from it," Comstock said. But, he added, the structure would be safer if it were built during daylight hours and with more supervision.

In three weeks, a commission investigating the bonfire collapse will issue a formal report on its $2 million inquiry. There are many theories to explain the collapse, including a flawed structural design and a weakened centerpole.

Female prison guard taken hostage by male prisoner

AMARILLO (AP) — A prison inmate took a female guard hostage in a small room here Friday afternoon, prison officials said.

It was the second time in as many months that a female corrections officer was held hostage in a Texas prison.

Charles Lamon Polk, an inmate at the Clements Unit, began holding the guard in a room in the kitchen area about 2:30 p.m., Texas Department of Criminal Justice spokesman Glen Castlebury said.

Officials did not know how Polk got her into the room and were not sure what kind of weapon, if any, he was using, Castlebury said. Polk either forced the woman into the room or caught her there, he said.

The name of the corrections officer was not immediately released.

Polk made no threats but asked to talk to his sister. Prison officials were negotiating with him throughout the afternoon.

Texas Department of Criminal Justice guards close the main entrance to the William J. Clements Jr. Unit in Amarillo Friday after an inmate took a female corrections officer hostage, prison officials said. Prison officials were negotiating with the inmate throughout the afternoon.

Polk came to the Clements Unit on June 21, 1989, from Dallas County to serve a 25-year sentence for aggravated robbery with a deadly weapon. The Clements Unit holds 3,900 inmates of all classifications.

In the last hostage situation, two armed death row inmates used homemade weapons to hold a female guard, Jeanette Bledsoe, hostage in the Terrell Unit near Livingston on Feb. 21. The 57-year-old guard was released unharmed after 13 hours.

Correctional officers say recent incidents indicate changes need to be made in how the prison system is managed. They are pushing for higher pay and better staffing.

Besides the recent hostage situations, guard Danny Nagle was stabbed to death on Dec. 17 at a prison in Beeville, about 90 miles southeast of San Antonio.

Union officials blamed Nagle's death and a riot at the same facility just days later on staff shortages. He was the first Texas correctional officer killed in 17 years.

Texas has about 28,000 guards watching over some 151,000 inmates. Guard levels are about 1,700 to 2,000 short of what has been approved by the Legislature, prison officials have said.

Judge says AP may publish story about ag loan program

AUSTIN (AP) — A judge today said The Associated Press is free to publish a news story about a state-funded program that guarantees loans to innovative agricultural businesses.

State District Judge Suzanne Covington said there was no legal reason to keep secret public documents that had been given to the AP by the Texas Department of Agriculture.

Covington said the AP and its reporter, Chris Williams, did nothing wrong in obtaining the information for news stories and that shrimp farmer Bart Reid and the First National Bank of Monahans had no right to a prior restraint on publication of the information.

David Donaldson, a lawyer for the AP, said the judge recognized that an eight-day-old restraining order was unconstitutional.

"We (the public) have an interest in what's going on," Donaldson said of the loan program.

At issue were documents from the Texas Agricultural Finance Authority about a state loan guarantee for Permian Sea Shrimp and Seafood Ltd. of Imperial. The agriculture department gave them to an AP reporter who requested them under the Texas Public Information Act.

Permian raises shrimp in West Texas in Pecos County, about 200 miles northwest of San Antonio. The agriculture department released its staff-written summary of the proposed loan guarantee for Permian Sea, which was reviewed when the Agricultural Finance Authority was making its decision.

The company and its lender, the First National Bank of Monahans, contended that the documents contained trade secrets that might give a competitor an advantage.

Reid said the privacy of his financial records — not the First Amendment right of a free press — was the issue. "This information should have never been released" by the agriculture department, he said.

His lender, bank president Mark Gatzki, urged other bankers to contact state lawmakers to change laws that make the records public.

Reid signed a statement acknowledging his loan information could be made public when he sought the state guarantee.

Donaldson noted that Gatzki testified his bank wouldn't make the loan to Reid without the taxpayer-funded guarantee. He said that once the company chose to go into business with the state, the public was entitled to know about the loan.

"If he wanted money from the people of the state of Texas, then he was warned that the people had a right to see that information," Donaldson said.

Small town's assets headed for auction block

WESTMINSTER (AP) — The most valuable assets and two bank accounts of this financially-troubled North Texas city have been seized by court order.

Two Collin County deputy constables this week confiscated seven pieces of city equipment, including a tractor, a road grader and two police cars. The items will be auctioned this month, with the receipts applied to the city's whopping debt.

"They said if this wasn't enough, they'd be back for the (city hall) building," council member Frances Haines said of the deputies.

The Dallas law firm Vial Hamilton Koch & Knox sued Westminster to collect three years worth of unpaid bills. And after the city didn't respond to the suit or appear in court, a Dallas County judge last month granted a $16,936.16 default judgment against the city.

City Administrator Pete Collumb said Westminster doesn't have the money. The city owes an estimated $360,000, including about $300,000 to the state in unpaid traffic fines and court fees.

"Don't make me a bad guy. I'm just trying to collect our money," Vial Hamilton attorney Richard DaFoe told The Dallas Morning News. "We're just doing what we have a right to do as creditors."

Collumb said Westminster was planning to sell the equipment to pay some of its bills, starting with an $8,340 debt to Collin County for police dispatching services. The city also owes $11,261 on the seized tractor.

On Thursday, Westminster officials learned that a court had frozen two city bank accounts totaling about $6,100.

The court actions won't kill the city of about 400 people, Collumb said, but will further delay its efforts to climb out of the financial hole.

"We're determined to keep the place going," he said. The city government brings in about $40,000 a year in taxes and fees.

Years of deficit spending, political upheaval and public bickering have stunted the city. Looking to avoid bankruptcy and save the 104-year-old town, the City Council voted in November to ask a state district judge to appoint a receiver to temporarily handle Westminster's business.

The council has yet to make that request, but it appointed Collumb, at $1 a year, to take over city operations. The Plano resident in January closed the city's police department to save money.

Program must overcome past problems

AUSTIN (AP) — On West Texas land famously free of oceans, Bart Reid is raising shrimp in the desert with the backing of the Texas Department of Agriculture.

"West Texas is a lot like a third-world country, only it is in America," said Reid, owner of Permian Sea Shrimp & Seafood of Imperial City. "But it works pretty good for this kind of deal."

Pecos County is ideal for shrimp farming, he says, because its aquifers hold water with the same salinity as the fertile bays of the Gulf of Mexico. "It's perfect," he said. "The shrimp love it."

Texas Agricultural Finance Authority documents obtained by The Associated Press under the state's Public Information Act show that the authority is backing Reid's company by guaranteeing 80 percent of his $360,000 start-up loan. Reid's loan is current, according to his lender.

TAFA officials hope businesses like Permian Sea and others will repay their loans to help pull the program out of an $8.7 million deficit, built up by 22 loan defaults since 1993. Permian Sea sold 190,000 pounds of shrimp last year to restaurants along the Gulf Coast and elsewhere, but it was in the red. Reid said it could sell 300,000 pounds this year and turn a profit.

"We probably lost money last year, to be honest, but we stayed afloat," he said. "Hopefully everything goes right this year; I should start getting into the black."

Even so, the company was expected to show an $81,600 net profit in its first year, according to financial projections filed with TAFA in 1998. The plan to raise seafood 400 miles from the surf might seem an unlikely way to make the public forget the authority's previous and regrettable forays into emu ranching, but Reid is optimistic.

An old geological survey, he said, shows those aquifers contain 300 million acre feet of water, but because it's not fit for plants, cattle or humans, no one even remembers their names.

"There is a whole lot of water out here that is only good for shrimp farmers," he said.

Reid said his seven years' experience in the shrimp farming businesses, including a stint at another West Texas farm, probably was the deciding factor for the state and his bank approving the loan.

In documents by the Texas Agriculture Department, Mark Gatzki, president of First National Bank of Monahans, cited Reid's experience in the shrimp farming industry as a reason to grant the loan.

He still requested a 90 percent guarantee from the state loan program due to the inherent risks of a new business in a new industry, documents show.

Reid admits there is some financial risk in wrangling prawns, but he promised it would turn out all right.

"People look at the price of shrimp and think this is a gold mine, but it's not. It's still farming. There are low margins," he said, adding, "You'll see, they will be happy with this deal."

The AP used the Texas Public Information Act to obtain details of the loan, but Reidand First National sued the AP on April 3 to keep those details secret. They argued that the documents included trade secrets that might give a competitor an advantage.

State District Judge Margaret Cooper ordered the AP on April 5 not to reveal the contents of a summary of the loan terms on file with TAFA. On Friday, District Judge Suzanne Covington dissolved Cooper's order after hearing arguments that prior restraint on publication was unconstitutional.

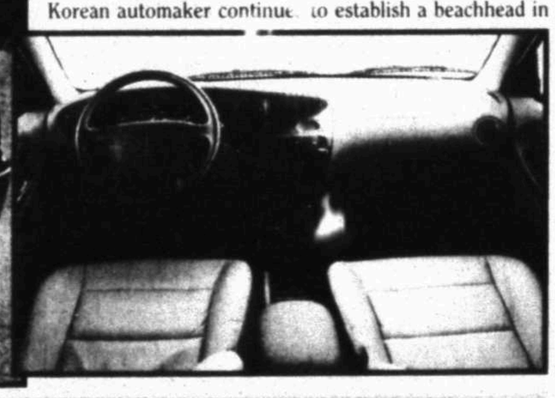
Affordable flagship: 2000 DAEWOO LEGANZA sedan

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr

The empire of Daewoo is growing as the South Korean automaker continues to establish a beachhead in the United States. As the latest import to hit American shores, Daewoo seems to have learned plenty from those that have gone before – namely Hyundai and Kia.



Currently fielding a lineup of three models: the subcompact Lanos, compact Nubira and flagship Leganza, Daewoo is adding dealers to its one-year-old network daily!

The Daewoo Leganza is the automaker's entry in a competitive field of family sedans. The word "Leganza" is derived from the Italian words "elegante" for elegant and "forza" for power. Its handsome sheetmetal was designed by master automotive designer Giorgetto Guigiaro – producing a "look" is both distinctive and timeless.

Imported from South Korea, the Daewoo Leganza is available in SE, SX, and CDX trim levels. The sole powerplant is a powerful 2.2L DOHC 16-valve D-TEC four-cylinder engine. A manual five-speed gearbox is standard with a four-speed automatic $800 option on the SE.

The entry level SE model with the automatic transmission is impressive. On the road, the four-cylinder engine is peppy and responsive off the line – handling is reminiscent of a Honda Accord sedan.

A four-wheel independent suspension system features rubber bushings attached to a high-strength wheel carrier, to absorb even the slightest chassis vibration, front and rear shocks, and stabilizer bars are precision tuned to improve riding comfort and directional stability. Shock absorbers and chassis are connected by a two-way distribution structure to provide superior handling and a smooth ride. Hankook Radial H406 P205/60R15 tires work with the suspension system to keep the big Daewoo sedan firmly on the ground.

Inside the cabin is an absolute delight! Various manual adjustments make the driver seat very accommodating. Straight forward displays and controls greet the driver. The outward view of the road is very good.

Underway, the cabin is quiet, solid and comfortable. Doors open wide and the seating is low enough to make the sedan very accessible. Armrests center front and rear add to the pleasant experience. The rear seat is a 60/40 split fold down which increases the available cargo carrying capability. The rear seating area can carry two adults comfortably.

Fit and finish is top notch throughout the cabin. Thoughtful touches such as a self supporting engine hood and a high level of standard features make the Leganza an excellent value for the money.

By the numbers

Engine performance numbers are 131 hp at 5,200 rpm and 148 lb/ft of torque at 2,800 rpm. EPA fuel economy figures range from 20 city/29 highway for the five-speed manual to 20 city/28 highway for the four-speed automatic using regular unleaded gasoline. Underhood fluids are easily accessible, but not consistently marked.

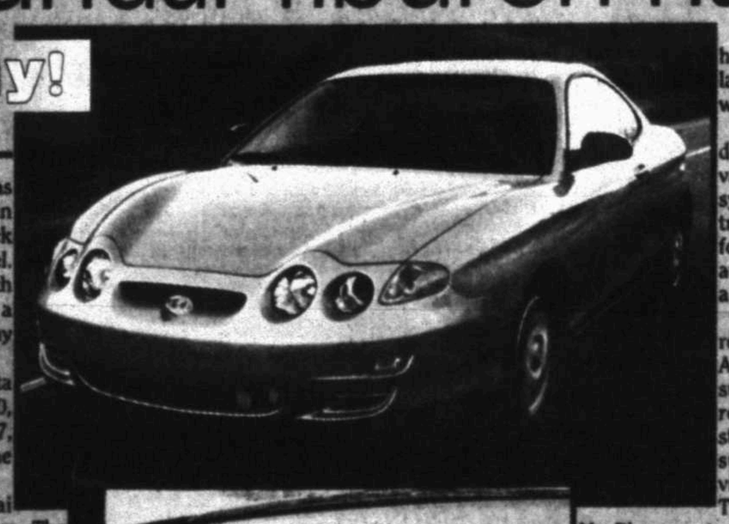
Standard safety/security equipment includes: four-wheel disc brakes, dual front airbags, full size spare tire and security code protection for the audio system. The SX adds four-wheel anti-lock brakes, an anti-theft system with remote keyless entry and fog lights. The CDX adds traction control.

The base Manufacturers Suggested Retail Price is $13,660 for the SE up to $18,660 for the CDX. Destination charge adds $330. Dealers report good inventories of the Daewoo Leganza sedan, so picking one should not be a problem.

STYLISH & AFFORDABLE: 2000 Hyundai Tiburon hatchback

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.

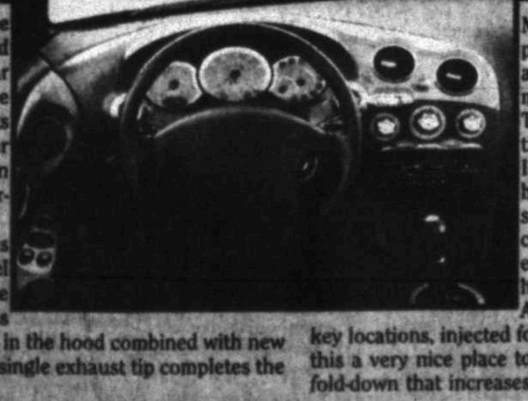


It is amazing just how far Hyundai has come since its debut in the United States in February 1986. Leading the charge back then was a boxy subcompact called the Excel. While it was inexpensive and loaded with value, its initial quality established a reputation that would take the company almost 10 years to shake.

Other vehicles followed – the midsize Sonata sedan in 1989, the Scoupe 2 + 2 in 1990, Elantra sedan in 1991 and wagon in 1997, the Accent subcompact in 1995, and the Tiburon in 1997.

Today, sales are up with Hyundai enjoying one of the best times in its history. The automaker has both lowered prices and increased standard equipment on just about all of its car lines. It's awesome new vehicle warranty, The Hyundai Advantage, offers consumers buying its cars a five-year/60,000 bumper to bumper warranty plus a ten-year/100,000 powertrain warranty – standing firmly behind its ever-improving automobiles.

Hyundai's commitment to quality and value is evident in the new Tiburon hatchback. This model year marks the first revision to the hatchback since its 1997 debut. All-new front-end styling features four projector beam headlights and character lines in the hood combined with new rear-end styling featuring new tail-lamps and large single exhaust tip completes the external changes.



Now available in just one trim level, the hatchback now includes many features of last year's discontinued upscale FX model, with the same base price as last year.

Propulsion comes from a Hyundai-designed and engineered 2.0L DOHC 16-valve four-cylinder engine. A fully synchronized five-speed manual transmission is the standard gearbox with a four-speed electronically controlled automatic with lock-up torque converter as a $750 option.

On the road, the drivetrain delivers good response over the entire powerband.

A sport-tuned, fully independent four-wheel suspension includes an extra front reinforcing crossmember that further strengthens the front end, maximizing suspension performance and reducing vibration.

The front suspension features traditional MacPherson struts with a pivoting arm at each wheel to precisely control vertical movement of strut and wheel assembly. The rear suspension incorporates an advanced multi-link attachment between the wheels and the body. The Tiburon is shod with Michelin XGT V4 P195/55HR15 tires to provide grip and help maintain control.

Inside the cabin, Hyundai engineers upgraded the interior by adding lumbar support to the seats, a leather wrapped shift lever and a new cockpit-styled dashboard with metal-color trim and cupholders. Noise/Vibration/Harshness enhancements improve the experience inside the hatchback.

A more rigid body, anti-vibration/sound deadening pads in key locations, injected foam into pillar cavities and hydraulic engine mounts make this a very nice place to spend some quality time. The rear seat is a 50/50 split fold-down that increases available cargo space.
