Bush roars into Houston

President vows to revive lagging campaign

HOUSTON — President Bush, firing up Republicans on the opening day of their 1992 national convention, on Monday swept into his adopted hometown with a feisty attack on Democrat Bill Clinton and promised to pull off the "most stunning political comeback since Harry Truman gave 'em hell in 1948."

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION 92 HOUSTON

"It's going to be curtains time for that ticket," the president declared at a rousing welcoming ceremony as he arrived in Houston with his wife, Barbara, and Vice President Dan Quayle.

Party stalwarts led by former President Ronald Reagan echoed the attack theme inside the convention hall, portraying Bush as a sure and steady leader and depicting Clinton as "slick" and inexperienced. Bush's former rival for the GOP nomination, Pat Buchanan, gave the president an enthusiastic endorsement while saying the Democratic nominee embodied the "failed liberalism" of the 1960s and 1970s.

Clinton's wife, Hillary, also became a target. Buchanan said she espouses "radical feminism" and urged Americans to reject the "Clinton and Clinton" ticket.

Reagan, in an emotional reunion with Republicans who nominated him to two terms in the White House, told the more than 2,000 delegates in the Astrodome that he "warmly, genuinely, wholeheartedly" supports the president's reelection.

He described his former vice president as "a quiet man, not a showman," adding, "His is a steady hand on the tiller through the choppy waters of the '90s."

Several Midlanders were on hand for Reagan's and Buchanan's speeches. Former mayor Ernest Angelo Jr., an at-large delegate, said Buchanan "is a standup guy and a true conservative. He opposed the president, but now he's on board with us."

Alternate delegate Billie Ross of Midland said, Reagan is "a wonderful man and a great president. He's done so

President George Bush

Vision variances: Stance, platform muddle message

By Terence Hunt
Associated Press writer

■ Analysis

HOUSTON — It's the vision thing, again. What does George Bush really stand for? It's hard to tell when you compare the Republican platform with the president's public position on abortion, trade, taxes and immigration.

The abortion plank, for example, urges an airtight ban on the operation, though Bush favors exceptions in cases of rape and incest and to save the life of the mother.

Bush told NBC News that if the platform does not reflect his views, "Never mind, I'll be compatible with the platform on many other things." Besides, Bush said, he hasn't even read the platform.

U.N. inspectors cancel visit, avoid showdown

By Eric Schmitt
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Acting at the last minute, U.N. inspectors in Baghdad canceled a visit Monday to a military ministry considered off-limits by Iraq, apparently abandoning for now a U.S. plan to demand access to sensitive sites.

American officials had said over the weekend that Washington and its allies could renew bombing raids on Baghdad if inspections were blocked.

The U.N. team, which made one inspection Monday but did not disclose where, plans to Abortion issue stirs strong emotions among delegates

By Karen Potter
N.Y. Times News Service

HOUSTON — Abortion takes up only a paragraph on one page of the Republicans' 95-page platform, but the issue has dominated media coverage and continued to stir strong emotions as delegates approved the platform Monday.

The Republican platform supports tax cuts, term limits, gun ownership, home schooling and school prayer. It proposes fighting illegal immigration by fortifying the U.S.-Mexico border with "structures necessary to secure the border." It opposes

Woody admits affair with Mia's daughter

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor-director Woody Allen admitted Monday that he is having an affair with the 21-year-old adopted daughter of his long-time companion, actress Mia Farrow.

"Regarding my love for Soon-Yi — it's real and happily all true," Allen said of Soon-Yi Farrow Previn in a statement issued by spokeswoman Leslee Dart. "She's a lovely, intelligent, sensitive woman who has and continues to turn my life around in a wonderfully positive way."

Allen, 56, denied that his affair with Korean-born Soon-Yi is related to the custody lawsuit he filed last Thursday for three of Farrow's 11 children. One of the three is his biological son.

"They are totally separate issues," he said.

The relationship between Allen and Farrow, who worked together in 13 movies, began falling apart long before he started the affair with her daughter, a source said Monday.

Allen's relationship with Farrow began deteriorating two to three years ago, said the source, who knows the couple and discussed the relationship only on condition of anonymity.

His affair with her daughter began about seven months ago, "when the relationship with Mia was virtually over," the source said.

Holding firm puts First City Texas-Midland up for sale

By Mella McEwen

First City Bancorp. of Texas has put First City Texas-Midland up for sale.

The local bank and 12 others to be sold represent approximately one-third of the holding company's assets. The move is part of First City's recapitalization plan designed to help it remain independent and bring its capitalization levels into compliance with applicable regulatory guidelines.

Bill Franklin, president and chief executive officer of the Midland bank, said the 13 banks, called community banks, "will be very attractive to any number of first-class banking companies."

He predicted that "it'll be a matter of weeks before something develops."

He said the Midland bank's board of directors met Friday to explore options or opportunities

Mortar shells hit jammed hotel in Sarajevo, five die

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Mortar shells smashed into a jammed refugee hotel in the Bosnian capital Monday, setting it ablaze and sending frightened people screaming into the dark streets. Sarajevo radio said five people died.

The Serb command said its gunners launched the attack in retaliation for shelling that hit a nursery and clinic in Pale, where the Serbs have their military headquarters.

The five-story Hotel Europe, home to 1,500 refugees, was still burning hours after four shells hit the building. Sarajevo was lighted by flashes of gunfire and explosions.

"There was fire everywhere," said 13-year-old Almier Jipa, who fled the hotel to an under-

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION
HOUSTON

Buchanan urges brigade back into Bush camp

By Tony Freemantle
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Patrick J. Buchanan, the firebrand conservative who bedeviled President Bush as his lone primary opponent, exhorted his supporters Monday to put their ideological differences aside and join Bush in a struggle "for the soul of America."

In a prime-time speech before thousands of cheering delegates to the Republican National Convention, Buchanan, looking thinner after recent heart surgery but still combative and passionate, congratulated Bush on winning the nomination and saved his vitriol for the Democrats.

"We may have taken the long way home, but we finally got here, home to Houston," Buchanan said. "And I want to congratulate President Bush, and remove any doubt about where we stand: The primaries are over, the heart is strong again, and the Buchanan Brigades are enlisted — all the way to a great Republican comeback victory in November."

Buchanan, a political commentator and former speechwriter for Richard Nixon, emerged as a Republican insurgent last December when he denounced Bush for breaking his "no new taxes" promise, made in the 1988 campaign, and for abandoning the conservatism of the Reagan Revolution.

In the campaign that ensued, Buchanan stunned GOP officials by picking up 37 percent of the Republican vote in the opening primary in New Hampshire and becoming the conservative voice of the party.

"One year ago, my friends, I could not have dreamt I would be here," Buchanan said. "But, I disagreed with the president; and so we challenged the president in the Republican primaries and fought as best we could."

"But tonight I want to talk to the 3 million Americans who voted for me: I will never forget you, nor the great honor you have done me. But I do believe, deep in my heart, that the right place for us to be now — in this presidential campaign — is right beside George Bush. This party is our home, this party is where we belong."

Buchanan saved his trademark acid tongue for the Democratic ticket, Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas and his running-mate Sen. Al Gore of Tennessee.

"Like many of you last month, I watched that giant masquerade ball at Madison Square Garden — where 20,000 radicals and liberals came dressed up as moderates and centrists in the greatest single exhibition of cross dressing in American political history."

To shouts from the floor of "Give him hell, Pat," he painted Clinton as a draft-dodger and Gore as an environmentalist who puts "insects, rats and birds" ahead of families and workers.

He noted Bush's military career and questioned where Clinton was during the war in Vietnam, setting off chants of "Where was Bill?" from the delegates.

Buchanan praised Bush's qualifications on foreign policy; he ridiculed Clinton's.

"As was said of an earlier Democratic candidate, Bill Clinton's foreign policy experience is pretty much confined to having had breakfast once at the International House of Pancakes," Buchanan said.

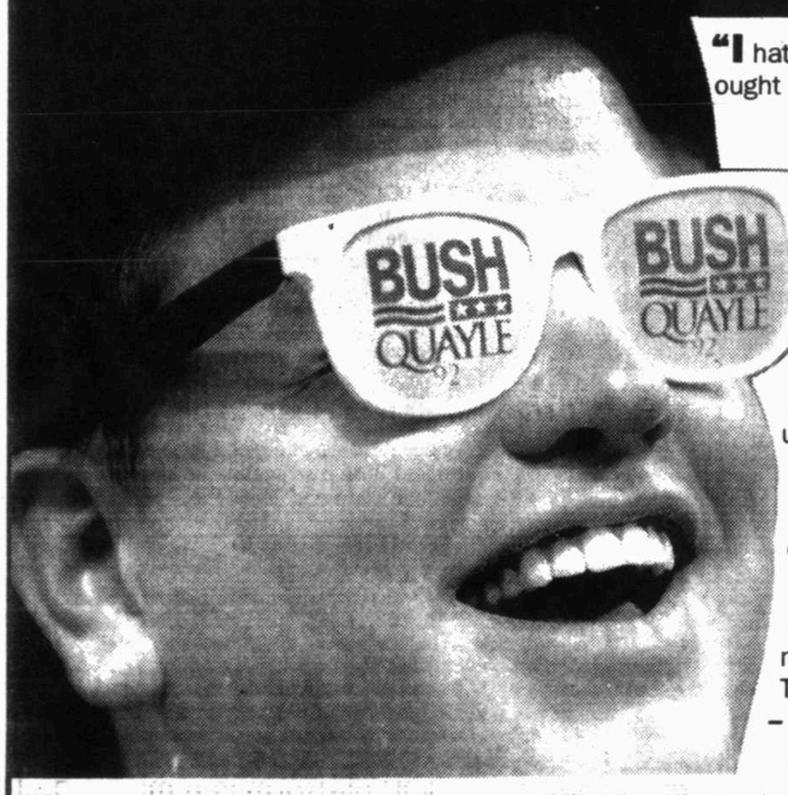
Echoing the "family values" theme of this convention, Buchanan attacked the Democrats, including Clinton's wife, Hillary, on questions of homosexual rights, abortion and feminism.

"Elect me and you get two for the price of one, Mr. Clinton says of his lawyer-spouse," Buchanan said. "And what does Hillary believe? Well, Hillary believes that 12-year-olds should have the right to sue their parents, and she has compared marriage as an institution to slavery, and life on an Indian reservation. Well, speak for yourself Hillary. Friends, this is radical feminism."

Buchanan said, "There is a religious war going on in our country for the soul of America. In that struggle, he said, "Clinton & Clinton are on the other side, and George Bush is on our side."

"We stand with him for freedom of choice in religious schools, and we stand with him against the amoral idea that gay and lesbian couples should have the same standing in law as married men and women," Buchanan said. "We stand with President Bush for right-to-life, and for voluntary prayer in the public schools, and against putting women in combat."

DELEGATES SPEAK OUT



"I hate even to say the word 'Clinton' right now. We ought to just call him Mr. Key for the week."

– Quineta Wylie of Oklahoma City, referring to Oklahoma delegation leader Clinton Key

"I can't think of a better place to honeymoon, can you?"

– Pearl Rex, Utah's oldest delegate at 70, who got married last week and is attending the convention with her new husband

"The platform has a thumb-your-nose-at-everyone-who-disagrees-with-you attitude. I think it will make other people feel uncomfortable and unwelcome."

– Former Indianapolis Mayor William H. Hudnut, who opposes the strong anti-abortion plank in the platform

"I'm never so rash as to disagree with the senator, his political judgment. Clearly, Dukakis early on wrote Texas off. It's going to take a lot more work on our part to get Clinton to write off Texas."

– Texas GOP Chairman Fred Meyer, commenting on Sen. Phil Gramm's prediction that the Democrats will give up on Texas before the election

"Look at our location on the floor. We're right down front and I think the people up there (on the platform) can almost hear us talking. I think the fact that Mississippi has a growing party, two Republican U.S. senators and its first Republican governor in 117 years has made an impression. We obviously scored a lot of points with the right people."

– Mississippi Gov. Kirk Fordice

Opening orators try to 'gussy up' well-worn words

By Andrew Rosenthal
N.Y. Times News Service

HOUSTON — This Republican National Convention being deep in the heart of Texas, speakers on the first night of the party's nominating session were trying to outdo each other with clever, folksy metaphors and sayings.

Just about everyone tried their hand at it, even the delegates. One of the delegates loyal to Patrick J. Buchanan, Bill Dearing, a 28-year-old lawyer from Tennessee, said Buchanan's rivals for the mantle of conservative leadership had "sold out like a bunch of kennel-fed dogs."

But the clear master of the evening was Sen. Alan K. Simpson of Wyoming, who has turned pungent soundbites into a cottage industry.

"This week," he proclaimed, "is where the rubber hits the road for our party."

Barely pausing to draw a breath, Simpson proclaimed that the Republicans would "blow away all this warm hazy stuff of summer with the cool crisp winds of fall" and the Democrats will "disappear like squash vines in the winter time."

And when the Republicans remind everyone about Gov. Bill Clinton's draft record, Simpson said, the Democrats will "holler like a gut-shot panther."

Every convention, it seems, needs a colorful woman from Texas to run it.

In New York, at the Democratic National Convention, it was Ann W. Richards, the governor.

In Houston, Kay Bailey Hutchison, the Texas treasurer, is also the temporary chairman.

Suggesting that Clinton had unrealistic views of the economy and just about everything else, she proclaimed: "You know something? I think he really did inhale."

Texans' talk is homespun

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — There's no place like Texas when it comes to cowboys and football, and it's a place where politicians are lost if they can't over-polish a cliche.

U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm and state Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison preferred the language of football in their campaign pep talks to Texas delegates Monday, while Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry took to the cowpokes.

From Gramm: "It's been a frustrating period, especially the last three months, to watch Bill Clinton run up and down the field when our team is not on the field."

From Hutchison: "We've had a year of a football game with only one team on the field. Now, our team is arriving."

And Perry: "You've got to get your spurs on. You've got to let your rope down and go out there and get the job done. And when some of those little dogies run off to the side and try to slip over there out of the herd, you've got to get back around them and bring 'em back."

Protesters decry Republicans outside Dome

HOUSTON (AP) — Hundreds of police and gay rights activists fought outside the Republican National Convention Monday night as protesters sought to block a street near the Astrodome.

The protest began as a march from the Texas Medical Center to complain about lack of funding for AIDS research, but when it reached the 'Dome erupted into a shoving match.

Six protesters were arrested, police said.

After the 2½-mile march, about 50 demonstrators lay in the street outside the Astrodome, prompting a police order to move.

The demonstrators ignored the order, and others in the crowd began burning an American flag, posters and various effigies of President Bush, setting off a giant bonfire in the middle of North Stadium Drive.

When protesters began throwing police barricades into the fire, some 100 officers — 24 on horseback and the rest carrying batons — began pushing the crowd away from the entrance.

Police leading the surge were swinging batons, hitting at least one demonstrator.

The confrontation lasted about half an hour. Some demonstrators were briefly pinned between cars and a fence as the mounted police moved them away from the entrance.

Observers from the American Civil Liberties Union and the Harris County District Attorney watched the confrontation.

Marchers had chanted the length of their parade, accusing the Bush administration of neglecting AIDS research.

"Basically, we're here to indict the Republican Party for perpetuating genocide," said Josh Wells, a member of the Los Angeles chapter of ACT UP, Aids Coalition to Unleash Power.

The parade is one of only four sanctioned.

Excerpts from Republican Party platform

N.Y. Times News Service

Following are excerpts from the platform adopted by the Republican National Convention.

PREAMBLE

Abraham Lincoln, our first Republican President, expressed the philosophy that inspires Republicans to this day: "The legitimate object of Government is to do for a community of people whatever they need to have done, but cannot do at all, or cannot so well do, for themselves in their separate and individual capacities. But in all that people can individually do as well for themselves, Government ought not to interfere." . . .

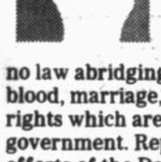
America had its rendezvous with destiny in 1980. Faced with crisis at home and abroad, Americans turned to Republican leadership in the White House. Presidents Reagan and Bush turned our Nation away from the path of over-taxation, hyper-regulation, and mega-government. Instead, we moved in a new direction. We cut taxes, reduced red tape, put people above bureaucracy. And so we vanquished the idea of the almighty state as the supervisor of our daily lives. In choosing hope over fear, Americans raised a beacon, reminding the world that we are a shining city on a hill, the last best hope for man on earth. . . .

We believe in a President who represents the national interest, not just the aggregation of well-connected special interests; a President who brings unity to the American purpose. . . .

UNITING OUR FAMILY

. . . Our greatness starts at home — literally. So Republicans believe government should strengthen families, not replace them. Today, more than ever, the traditional family is under assault. We believe our laws should reflect what makes our Nation prosperous and wholesome: faith in God, hard work, service to others, and limited government. . . .

Family: The Home of Freedom



THE RIGHTS OF THE FAMILY . . . Republicans trust parents and believe they, not courts and lawyers, know what is best for their children. That is why we will work to insure that the Congress and the States shall enact no law abridging the rights of the family formed by blood, marriage, adoption, or legal custody — rights which are anterior and superior to those of government. Republicans oppose and resist the efforts of the Democrat Party to redefine the traditional American family. . . .

CARING FOR CHILDREN George Bush secured the American family's most important victory of the last four years: his child care bill. . . .

The demands of employment and commuting often make it hard for parents to spend time with their children. Republicans advocate maximum flexibility in working and child care arrangements so that families can make the most of their schedules. We support pro-family policies: job sharing, telecommuting, compressed work weeks, parental leave negotiated between employer and employees, and flextime. . . .

Achieving Educational Excellence

. . . The Republican strategy is based on sound principle. Parents have the right to choose the best school for their children. Schools should teach right from wrong. Schools should reinforce parental authority, not replace it. We should increase flexibility from Federal regulation. We should explore a new generation of break-the-mold New American Schools. Standards and assessments should be raised, not reduced to a lowest common denominator. Communities should be empowered to find what works. The pursuit of excellence in education is a fundamental goal. Good teachers should be rewarded for teaching well. Alterative certification can bring desperately needed new people into the teaching profession. . . .

America must remain neutral toward particular religions, but we must not remain neutral toward religion itself or the values religion supports. Mindful of our country's Judeo-Christian heritage and rich religious pluralism, we support the right of students to engage in voluntary prayer in schools and the right of the community to do so at commencements or other occasions. We will strongly enforce the law guaranteeing equal access to school facilities. We also advocate recitation of the Pledge of Allegiance in schools as a reminder of the principles that sustain us as one Nation under God. . . .

For Healthier Families

PROMOTE HEALTH, PREVENT DISEASE, REFORM HEALTH CARE . . . Republicans believe government control of health care is irresponsible and ineffective. We believe health care choices should remain in the hands of the people, not government bureaucrats. This issue truly represents a fundamental difference between the two parties. . . .

AIDS The H.I.V./AIDS epidemic has exploded over the past decade into a crisis of tragic proportions. In our country, AIDS has already claimed more than 150,000 lives, and as many as one million more Americans may have been infected with the virus.

Epidemics have, throughout history, challenged governments, which have too often been powerless to combat them. Science — and human wisdom — have advanced, however, and we have met this crisis not only with a massive commitment of resources but also with a personal determination on the part of the President. That commitment and leadership will continue. . . .

PROMOTING CULTURAL VALUES . . . Elements within the media, the entertainment industry, academia, and the Democrat Party are waging a guerrilla war against American values. They deny personal responsibility, disparage traditional morality, denigrate religion, and promote hostility toward the family's way of life. Children, the members of our society most vulnerable to cultural influences, are barraged with violence and promiscuity, encouraging reckless and irresponsible behavior. This undermines the authority of parents, the ones most responsible for passing on to their offspring a sense of right and wrong. The lesson our Party draws is important — that all of us, individuals and corporations alike, have a responsibility to reflect the values we expect our fellow citizens to exhibit. . . .

We oppose any legislation or law which legally recognizes same-sex marriages and allows such couples to adopt children or provide foster care. . . .

Government has a responsibility, as well, to insure that it promotes the common moral values that bind us together as a Nation. We therefore condemn the use of public funds to subsidize obscenity and blasphemy masquerading as art. The fine arts, including those with public support, can certainly enrich our society. However, no artist has an inherent right to claim taxpayer support for his or her private vision of art if that vision mocks the moral and spiritual basis on which our society is founded. We believe a free market in art — with neither suppression nor favoritism by government — is the best way to foster the cultural revival our country needs.

Individual Rights, Good Homes and Safe Streets

REBUILDING THE DREAM . . . In the tradition of Lincoln, President Bush has replicated the American dream of home-ownership. For first-time home buyers, he has proposed a $5,000 tax credit. For lower-income families, he has worked to restore opportunity through HOPE, his initiative to help tenants now dependent on federal aid to buy their own homes; Mortgage Revenue Bonds, to assist more than 1.9 million families to buy a first home; Low Income Housing Tax Credits, already producing more than 420,000 decent apartments at affordable prices; and HOME, a partnership among all levels of government to help low-income families secure better housing. . . .

ENDING DEPENDENCY . . . Today's welfare system is anti-work and anti-marriage. It taxes families to subsidize illegitimacy. It rewards unethical

Oil leaders warn of industry collapse

■ Industry heavyweights, political leaders seize spotlight to illuminate oil and gas troubles.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — The blighted oil and gas industry may collapse without tax relief and the opening to drilling of environmentally protected areas, industry leaders and officials warned Monday at the Republican National Convention.

"I think it's time that the country realized that we have an industry that is in peril, we have the prospect of losing an entire industry. And once that industry is lost, you can't expect it to come back," Rep. Jack Fields, R-Texas, said at a news conference in the shadow of a 112-foot oil rig erected outside the Astrodome convention site.

The industry has lost 400,000 jobs over the last decade as the number of working oil and gas rigs has plummeted, said Tom Bowersox, chairman of the International Association of Drilling Contractors and president of Zapata Off-Shore Co., the company President Bush helped start in the 1950s.

Americans spent $46 billion last year for imported oil, representing 66 percent of the negative balance of trade, said Sen. Don Nickles, R-Oklahoma.

"I think it's vitally important that we wake up America for the fact that we're becoming far too dependent on unreliable foreign sources of oil — foreign sources of oil which are not cheap and which are not dependable," said Nickles, a member of the Energy Committee.

The industry leaders criticized Congress for failing to allow oil exploration in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge in Alaska and parts of the outer continental shelf. They also called for relief from the alternative minimum tax on drilling.

At a speech Monday to The Houston Club, Secretary of the Interior Manuel Lujan said the Bush administration supports allowing exploration and production in the Alaska refuge and lifting drilling moratoria on the continental shelf off the east and west coasts.

"We support those things. And what we need really is a change in the Congress. We don't need a change in the administration, because if we had a change in the Congress, if we had a Republican Congress, let me tell you, we would be rid of all this moratoria stuff that we have right now. And the oil companies would not be going away.

"But the oil industry is in terrible, terrible shape," Lujan said.

Fields, a member of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, said opening the wildlife refuge could create 735,000 jobs.

"That is not being produced, not being explored, because of some caribou, and these are not caribou that are even American caribou. These are Canadian caribou that trot across the line, eat some grass, drop their calves and go back to Canada," he said.

Bowersox and Lujan both said drilling in the United States lessens the danger of spills from tankers carrying imported oil.

"We need to do something in this country to encourage America's independent petroleum producers and our major oil producers to come back to the U.S., and we need a revitalized U.S. domestic industry," Bowersox said.

Although Nickles criticized Democratic vice presidential nominee Al Gore and the Democratic platform, the oil industry leaders stopped short of blasting either Bush or the Democrats.

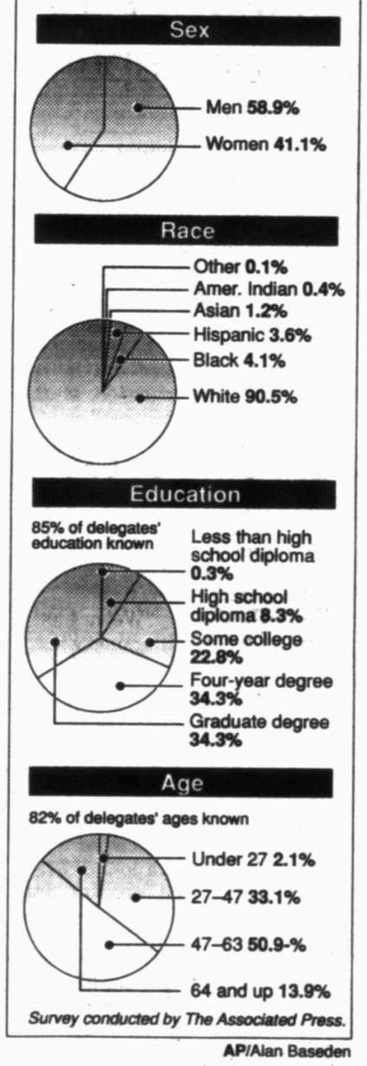
Delegate demographics

Profile of delegates to the Republican National Convention:



Survey conducted by The Associated Press.

AP/Alan Baseden

HOUSTON (AP) — Young leaders and the future are on delegate Jeanette Riel's mind at the Republican National Convention. She's 89.

Mrs. Riel, a longtime Republican volunteer from Vero Beach, Fla., is the senior delegate here, according to surveys of each state delegation by The Associated Press.

She first announces she is "over 80," then discloses she will turn 90 on Sept. 27. That's more than two months before South Carolina delegate Sen. Strom Thurmond. She said there's been some joking talk about the two of them having a joint 90th birthday party.

In the meantime, she's telling the other Republicans here the importance of young people to the party.

"We need young people to come up through the ranks. I'd like to see people who will have the vision to lead us," she said. "We have to work with the young people. Older people often have preconceived notions and we need to listen to the young."

Some of the highlights that stand out in her mind include sitting next to Neil Armstrong, the first man on the moon, at the 1972 convention in Miami Beach. She also recalls anti-war demonstrations — "a Jane Fonda problem" — at that convention.

The 1976 convention took her back to Kansas City, in her home state of Missouri; at the 1980 convention she was working for Paula Hawkins, who would win the U.S. Senate race that year; and in 1988 she went to New Orleans with her grandson — now a student at Notre Dame — and was impressed by his excitement over watching politics at work.

Black Republicans few, supportive

N.Y. Times News Service

HOUSTON — Riding the bus from his hotel to the Astrodome Monday morning, Jim McDowell could not help overhearing the lady in the seat behind him, and it seemed to him that she was, in a sense, talking about him.

"She was going on and on about how all these people on welfare were living better than she did, going to college and driving big cars and so on," McDowell recalled. "Well, I don't like the welfare system any better than she does, but . . ."

But McDowell is black, and such talk makes him a little uncomfortable and a little unhappy. "The unspoken word in that kind of talk is 'black,'" he said. "Blacks have the feeling that most whites, especially most Republican whites, think most blacks are on welfare, so we're sort of sensitive."

McDowell, a middle-aged insurance broker from Vallejo, Calif., who is an alternate delegate to the Republican convention here, has been enrolled as a Republican for only four years, and he believes that black Republicans must spread the word.

"We are the last group in the closet in all of America," he said. "We have to stand up unashamedly every day and say we are black Republicans, and we believe in the same things white Republicans do. We don't want handouts, we don't like welfare, we don't want to be wards of big government." He told this to the woman in the seat behind him and, he said, she understood his point. "That's what I do," he said. "Convert people one conversation at a time."

Women organize to promote candidates

HOUSTON (AP) — Republican women said they are trying to catch up with their Democratic sisters in the fund-raising game, but there's no reason for all the fuss about the number of Democratic women running for office this year.

A growing number of Republican women also are running for local and national offices, members of the newly-formed Women's Leadership Network said Monday.

"This is not only the year of the woman, it's the year of the Republican woman, too," said Judy A. Black, president of the group. Black served as a special assistant to former President Nixon for intergovernmental affairs.

The group was formed earlier this year to get more women elected to office and promoted to leadership positions in the private sector as well. About 200 women have joined.

Members also formed Leader-PAC, a political action committee in May, to raise more money for female candidates. So far, the committee has raised $100,000 said Sally Atwater, widow of Lee Atwater.

The money will be available for all Republican women nominated by their parties for seats in the House and Senate, regardless of their stands on issues, Black said.

"Our mission is to support women Republican candidates," Black said.

REPUBLICAN NATIONAL CONVENTION 1992 HOUSTON TEXAS

Convention activity in brief

■ Relative offers 'cousin George' advice

Even Bush admits the Republican presidential campaign is in trouble. Pittsburgh attorney Donald C. Bush, that is.

One of 91 delegates attending the Republican National Convention this week, the Pennsylvania Bush is a distant relative of the guest of honor, President George Bush.

"I call him cousin George," said Donald Bush.

Familial bias notwithstanding, the Pennsylvania Bush has his own advice for how his famous relative, engaged in an uphill fight, can defeat Democrat Bill Clinton in November.

"We carried the state last time only by about 100,000 votes. It will be a tough show," he said. "I think it's still possible, but right now we would be in trouble.

"He's got to tell us where he's going to take us in the next four years," he added. "I'd like to hear economic plans, more jobs, how they'll be created. I think he needs a general plan for why we should vote for Bush. He has to come up with a program to go out and sell to the people."

■ 'Mean green button machine' makes profit

Fellow Louisiana delegates call Floyd Gonzalez the "mean green button machine," not a bad title for an unemployed college student who turned a doodle into dollars.

"Don't laugh, it helped pay part of my way here," Gonzalez, his blue vest dotted with pro-life, pro-Bush buttons, said Monday from the floor of the Republican National Convention.

"I don't mind the attention," he said. "I've raised about $1,400, and it could be up to $1,800 by the time this thing is over."

Gonzalez, 26, of Baton Rouge, was doodling on a piece of paper and drew out a button that said, "Pro-Bush, Pro-Family, Pro-America." Louisiana delegates clamored for the buttons.

Gonzalez said a button recalling the Vice President Dan Quayle-Murphy Brown squabble over single parents was the hottest item. "It says 'Dan's right, Murphy's a Tramp,'" he said.

■ Rep. Archer defends Bush to his mother

It was supposed to have been the crowning of a local boy turned conquering hero but President Bush is struggling for popularity in the nation, his adopted home state and even the congressional district he once represented.

A constituent survey recently released by Rep. Bill Archer, the Republican who succeeded Bush in Houston's affluent 7th Congressional District, showed 57 percent disapprove of the way the president is doing his job.

Archer, an avid Bush supporter, says even his mother has been complaining about the president.

"She'll say, 'Why isn't the president doing more to help people?' and I'll say, 'He is Mom. It's just that not all of it gets reported,'" Archer said.

■ Gay leaders: GOP platform is a mistake

The Republican Party is making a mistake by bowing to the far right and using the GOP convention platform to turn homosexuals into the new No. 1 menace in America, gay leaders charged Monday.

"To be gay, conservative and Republican is not a contradiction," said Marvin Liebman. "I am proud to be all three; less proud this year to be a Republican."

Liebman, a founder of the modern conservative movement, held a news conference in Houston with other gay leaders and Rep. Bill Green, R-N.Y., to reproach the GOP for targeting gays.

■ Chancellor likes floor-job at real conventions

Network correspondent John Chancellor is embarking on his 20th and final national convention for NBC this week, and he says he is still fascinated at how the media coverage of the events has evolved.

"It was more fun being a floor reporter at the real conventions than being an anchorman or a commentator at the, what I'd guess you'd have to call, sort of half-conventions we have now," said Chancellor, who has been in broadcasting for 43 years.

behavior and penalizes initiative. It cannot be merely tinkered with by Congress; it must be recreated by states and localities. Republican Governors and legislators in several states have already launched dramatic reforms, especially with workfare and learnfare. Welfare can no longer be a check in the mail with no responsibility. . . .

SAFE HOMES AND STREETS

. . . The Republican Party is committed to a drug-free America. During the last twelve years, we have radically reversed the Democrats' attitude of tolerance toward narcotics, vastly increased Federal operations against drugs, cleaned up the military, and launched mandatory testing for employees in various fields, including White House personnel. As a result, overall drug abuse is falling. We urge that states and communities emphasize anti-drug education by police officers and others in schools to educate young children to the dangers of the drug culture. Dope is no longer trendy. . . .

NEW MEMBERS OF THE AMERICAN FAMILY Our Nation of immigrants continues to welcome those seeking a better life. This reflects our past, when some newcomers fled intolerance; some sought prosperity; some came as slaves. All suffered and sacrificed but hoped their children would have a better life. All searched for a shared vision — and found one in America. Today we are stronger for our diversity.

Illegal entry into the United States, on the other hand, threatens the social compact on which immigration is based. That IS, the Nation accepts immigrants and is enriched by their determination and values. Illegal immigration, on the other hand, undermines the integrity of border communities and already crowded urban neighborhoods. We will build on the already announced strengthening of the Border Patrol to better coordinate interdiction of illegal entrants through greater cross-border cooperation. . . .

INDIVIDUAL RIGHTS The protection of individual rights is the foundation for opportunity and security.

The Republican Party is unique in this regard. Since its inception, it has respected every person, even when that proposition was not universally popular. Today, as in the day of Lincoln, we insist that no American's rights are negotiable. . . .

We believe the unborn child has a fundamental individual right to life which cannot be infringed. We therefore reaffirm our support for a human life amendment to the Constitution, and we endorse legislation to make clear that the Fourteenth Amendment's protections apply to unborn children. . . .

UNITING OUR COUNTRY

. . . KEEPING WHAT YOU EARN The test of economic policy is whether it promotes economic growth and expands job opportunities. Lower taxes and an expanding economy depend on long term, consistent restraint in the growth of federal spending. . . .

The simple truth for the American people is this: The only safeguard between themselves and Democrat tax increases is the use of the veto by George Bush and enough Republican votes in Congress to sustain it. . . .

We will cut the capital gains tax rate to 15 percent — zero in enterprise zones — and index it so government cannot profit from inflation by taxing phantom capital gains, literally stealing from savings and pensions. . . .

LIBERATION THROUGH DEREGULATION . . . We support President Bush's freeze on new regulations. We applaud his Competitiveness Council, under Vice President Quayle, for fighting the regulatory mania, saving the public $20 billion with its initial 90-day moratorium on new regulations and billions more under the current 120-day freeze. . . .

JOB CREATION AND SMALL BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES . . . To create jobs and keep small business growing, the Republican Party supports increased access to capital for business expansion, exporting, long term investment, opportunity capital for the disadvantaged, and capital to bring new products and new technology to the market.

The Republican Party enthusiastically encourages the passage of Federal enterprise zones. Enterprise zones have been effective programs for promoting growth in urban and rural America. Republicans believe that the concept of enterprise zones is based on unyielding faith in the entrepreneurial spirit of all Americans. . . .

Reforming Government and the Legal System

CLEANING UP THE IMPERIAL CONGRESS. The Democrats have controlled the House of Representatives for 38 years — five years longer than Castro has held Cuba. They have held the Senate for 32 of those 38. Their entrenched power has produced a Congress arrogant, out of touch . . .. Republicans want to change all that. We reaffirm our support for a constitutional amendment to limit the number of terms House Members and Senators may serve. . . .

MANAGING GOVERNMENT IN THE PUBLIC INTEREST . . . We deplore the blatant political bias of the government-sponsored radio and television networks. It is especially outrageous that taxpayers are now forced to underwrite this biased broadcasting through the Corporation for Public Broadcasting (CPB). We call for sweeping reform of CPB . . .

Our Land, Food, and Resources

AGRICULTURE . . . The Republican Party is the home of the farmer, rancher, and forester. We have long championed their right to pursue growth, efficiency, and competitiveness through market incentives, diversification, and personal ingenuity. . . .

We value our Nation's real wetlands habitat and the diversity of our native animal and plant life. We oppose, however, bureaucratic harassment of farm, ranch, and timber families under statutes regarding endangered species and wetlands. . . .

PUBLIC LANDS . . . We believe that recreation, forestry, ranching, mining, oil and gas exploration, and production on our public lands can be conducted in a way compatible with their conservation. The United States has some of the richest mineral resources in the world. Our public lands should not be arbitrarily locked up and put off limits to responsible uses. . . .

Building on the legacy of Ronald Reagan, George Bush saw the chance to sweep away decadent Communism. He was the first Western leader to declare his determination to fashion "a Europe whole and free." . . .

Yet now that we have won the Cold War, we must also win the peace. We must not repeat the mistake of the past by throwing away victory through complacency. A new world beckons, unlike any we have ever known, filled with uncertainties. Old passions have reemerged. New democracies struggle to decide their destiny. Nations are torn asunder. Migrants and refugees strain the social fabric of continents. Tyrants work to build nuclear, chemical, and even biological weapons to threaten us and our neighbors. Drug trafficking and terrorism, often linked, menace Americans at home and abroad. . . .

PROVEN LEADERSHIP George Bush has been the most important architect of Western aspirations and designs for the challenging world we are now entering. . . .

The test of international leadership is on the field, not in a playbook. The Oval Office is no place for on-the job training — not in carrying out the Presidential duty to protect and defend our Nation, not in managing the arsenal of the supreme nuclear power. There are those who talk and those who perform. George Bush has clearly performed for America, making the right calls in a series of tough decisions that helped transform the world.

Buchanan urges brigade back into Bush camp

By Tony Freemantle
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Patrick J. Buchanan, the firebrand conservative who bedeviled President Bush as his lone primary opponent, exhorted his supporters Monday to put their ideological differences aside and join Bush in a struggle "for the soul of America."

In a prime-time speech before thousands of cheering delegates to the Republican National Convention, Buchanan, looking thinner after recent heart surgery but still combative and passionate, congratulated Bush on winning the nomination and saved his vitriol for the Democrats.

"We may have taken the long way home, but we finally got here, home to Houston," Buchanan said. "And I want to congratulate President Bush, and remove any doubt about where we stand: The primaries are over, the heart is strong again, and the Buchanan Brigades are enlisted — all the way to a great Republican comeback victory in November."

Buchanan, a political commentator and former speechwriter for Richard Nixon, emerged as a Republican insurgent last December when he denounced Bush for breaking his "no new taxes" promise, made in the 1988 campaign, and for abandoning the conservatism of the Reagan Revolution.

In the campaign that ensued, Buchanan stunned GOP officials by picking up 37 percent of the Republican vote in the opening primary in New Hampshire and becoming the conservative voice of the party.

"One year ago, my friends, I could not have dreamt I would be here," Buchanan said. "But, I disagreed with the president; and so we challenged the president in the Republican primaries and fought as best we could."

"But tonight I want to talk to the 3 million Americans who voted for me: I will never forget you, nor the great honor you have done me. But I do believe, deep in my heart, that the right place for us to be now — in this presidential campaign — is right beside George Bush. This party is our home, this party is where we belong."

Buchanan saved his trademark acid tongue for the Democratic ticket, Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas and his running-mate Sen. Al Gore of Tennessee.

"Like many of you last month, I watched that giant masquerade ball at Madison Square Garden — where 20,000 radicals and liberals came dressed up as moderates and centrists in the greatest single exhibition of cross dressing in American political history."

To shouts from the floor of "Give him hell, Pat," he painted Clinton as a draft-dodger and Gore as an environmentalist who puts "insects, rats and birds" ahead of families and workers.

He noted Bush's military career and questioned where Clinton was during the war in Vietnam, setting off chants of "Where was Bill?" from the delegates.

Buchanan praised Bush's qualifications on foreign policy; he ridiculed Clinton's.

"As was said of an earlier Democratic candidate, Bill Clinton's foreign policy experience is pretty much confined to having had breakfast once at the International House of Pancakes," Buchanan said.

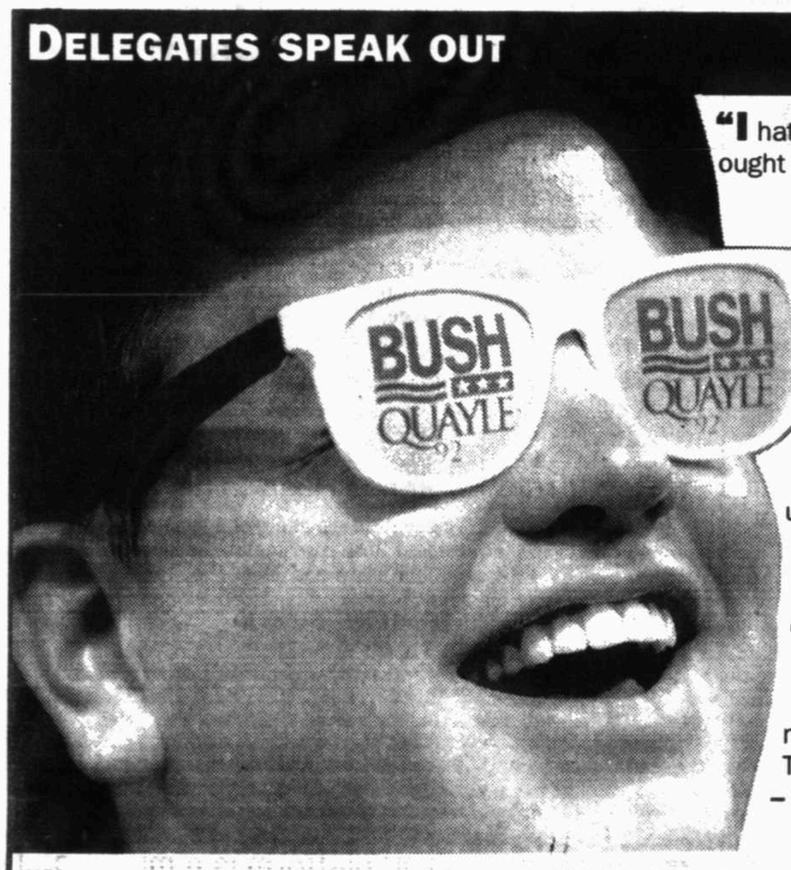
Echoing the "family values" theme of this convention, Buchanan attacked the Democrats, including Clinton's wife, Hillary, on questions of homosexual rights, abortion and feminism.

"Elect me and you get two for the price of one, Mr. Clinton says of his lawyer-spouse," Buchanan said. "And what does Hillary believe? Well, Hillary believes that 12-year-olds should have the right to sue their parents, and she has compared marriage as an institution to slavery, and life on an Indian reservation. Well, speak for yourself Hillary. Friends, this is radical feminism."

Buchanan said, "There is a religious war going on in our country for the soul of America. In that struggle, he said, "Clinton & Clinton are on the other side, and George Bush is on our side."

"We stand with him for freedom of choice in religious schools, and we stand with him against the amoral idea that gay and lesbian couples should have the same standing in law as married men and women," Buchanan said. "We stand with President Bush for right-to-life, and for voluntary prayer in the public schools, and against putting women in combat."

DELEGATES SPEAK OUT



"I hate even to say the word 'Clinton' right now. We ought to just call him Mr. Key for the week."

– Quineta Wylie of Oklahoma City, referring to Oklahoma delegation leader Clinton Key

"I can't think of a better place to honeymoon, can you?"

– Pearl Rex, Utah's oldest delegate at 70, who got married last week and is attending the convention with her new husband

"The platform has a thumb-your-nose-at-everyone-who-disagrees-with-you attitude. I think it will make other people feel uncomfortable and unwelcome."

– Former Indianapolis Mayor William H. Hudnut, who opposes the strong anti-abortion plank in the platform

"I'm never so rash as to disagree with the senator, his political judgment. Clearly, Dukakis early on wrote Texas off. It's going to take a lot more work on our part to get Clinton to write off Texas."

– Texas GOP Chairman Fred Meyer, commenting on Sen. Phil Gramm's prediction that the Democrats will give up on Texas before the election

"Look at our location on the floor. We're right down front and I think the people up there (on the platform) can almost hear us talking. I think the fact that Mississippi has a growing party, two Republican U.S. senators and its first Republican governor in 117 years has made an impression. We obviously scored a lot of points with the right people."

– Mississippi Gov. Kirk Fordice

Opening orators try to 'gussy up' well-worn words

By Andrew Rosenthal
N.Y. Times News Service

HOUSTON — This Republican National Convention being deep in the heart of Texas, speakers on the first night of the party's nominating session were trying to outdo each other with clever, folksy metaphors and sayings.

Just about everyone tried their hand at it, even the delegates. One of the delegates loyal to Patrick J. Buchanan, Bill Dearing, a 28-year-old lawyer from Tennessee, said Buchanan's rivals for the mantle of conservative leadership had "sold out like a bunch of kennel-fed dogs."

But the clear master of the evening was Sen. Alan K. Simpson of Wyoming, who has turned pungent soundbites into a cottage industry.

"This week," he proclaimed, "is where the rubber hits the road for our party."

Barely pausing to draw a breath, Simpson proclaimed that the Republicans would "blow away all this warm hazy stuff of summer with the cool crisp winds of fall" and the Democrats will "disappear like squash vines in the winter time."

And when the Republicans remind everyone about Gov. Bill Clinton's draft record, Simpson said, the Democrats will "holler like a gut-shot panther."

Every convention, it seems, needs a colorful woman from Texas to run it.

In New York, at the Democratic National Convention, it was Ann W. Richards, the governor.

In Houston, Kay Bailey Hutchison, the Texas treasurer, is also the temporary chairman.

Suggesting that Clinton had unrealistic views of the economy and just about everything else, she proclaimed: "You know something? I think he really did inhale."

Texans' talk is homespun

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — There's no place like Texas when it comes to cowboys and football, and it's a place where politicians are lost if they can't over-polish a cliche.

U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm and state Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison preferred the language of football in their campaign pep talks to Texas delegates Monday, while Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry took to the cowpokes.

From Gramm: "It's been a frustrating period, especially the last three months, to watch Bill Clinton run up and down the field when our team is not on the field."

From Hutchison: "We've had a year of a football game with only one team on the field. Now, our team is arriving."

And Perry: "You've got to get your spurs on. You've got to let your rope down and go out there and get the job done. And when some of those little dogies run off to the side and try to slip over there out of the herd, you've got to get back around them and bring 'em back."

Protesters decry Republicans outside Dome

HOUSTON (AP) — Hundreds of police and gay rights activists fought outside the Republican National Convention Monday night as protesters sought to block a street near the Astrodome.

The protest began as a march from the Texas Medical Center to complain about lack of funding for AIDS research, but when it reached the 'Dome erupted into a shoving match.

Six protesters were arrested, police said.

After the 2½-mile march, about 50 demonstrators lay in the street outside the Astrodome, prompting a police order to move.

The demonstrators ignored the order, and others in the crowd began burning an American flag, posters and various effigies of President Bush, setting off a giant bonfire in the middle of North Stadium Drive.

When protesters began throwing police barricades into the fire, some 100 officers — 24 on horseback and the rest carrying batons — began pushing the crowd away from the entrance.

Police leading the surge were swinging batons, hitting at least one demonstrator.

The confrontation lasted about half an hour. Some demonstrators were briefly pinned between cars and a fence as the mounted police moved them away from the entrance.

Observers from the American Civil Liberties Union and the Harris County District Attorney watched the confrontation.

Marchers had chanted the length of their parade, accusing the Bush administration of neglecting AIDS research.

"Basically, we're here to indict the Republican Party for perpetuating genocide," said Josh Wells, a member of the Los Angeles chapter of ACT UP, Aids Coalition to Unleash Power.

The parade is one of only four sanctioned.

Excerpts from Republican Party platform

N.Y. Times News Service

Following are excerpts from the platform adopted by the Republican National Convention.

PREAMBLE

Abraham Lincoln, our first Republican President, expressed the philosophy that inspires Republicans to this day: "The legitimate object of Government is to do for a community of people whatever they need to have done, but cannot do at all, or cannot so well do, for themselves in their separate and individual capacities. But in all that people can individually do as well for themselves, Government ought not to interfere." . . .

America had its rendezvous with destiny in 1980. Faced with crisis at home and abroad, Americans turned to Republican leadership in the White House. Presidents Reagan and Bush turned our Nation away from the path of over-taxation, hyper-regulation, and mega-government. Instead, we moved in a new direction. We cut taxes, reduced red tape, put people above bureaucracy. And so we vanquished the idea of the almighty state as the supervisor of our daily lives. In choosing hope over fear, Americans raised a beacon, reminding the world that we are a shining city on a hill, the last best hope for man on earth. . . .

We believe in a President who represents the national interest, not just the aggregation of well-connected special interests; a President who brings unity to the American purpose. . . .

UNITING OUR FAMILY

. . . Our greatness starts at home — literally. So Republicans believe government should strengthen families, not replace them. Today, more than ever, the traditional family is under assault. We believe our laws should reflect what makes our Nation prosperous and wholesome: faith in God, hard work, service to others, and limited government. . . .

Family: The Home of Freedom

THE RIGHTS OF THE FAMILY . . . Republicans trust parents and believe they, not courts and lawyers, know what is best for their children. That is why we will work to insure that the Congress and the States shall enact no law abridging the rights of the family formed by blood, marriage, adoption, or legal custody — rights which are anterior and superior to those of government. Republicans oppose and resist the efforts of the Democrat Party to redefine the traditional American family. . . .

CARING FOR CHILDREN George Bush secured the American family's most important victory of the last four years: his child care bill. . . .

The demands of employment and commuting often make it hard for parents to spend time with their children. Republicans advocate maximum flexibility in working and child care arrangements so that families can make the most of their schedules. We support pro-family policies: job sharing, telecommuting, compressed work weeks, parental leave negotiated between employer and employees, and flextime. . . .

Achieving Educational Excellence

. . . The Republican strategy is based on sound principle. Parents have the right to choose the best school for their children. Schools should teach right from wrong. Schools should reinforce parental authority, not replace it. We should increase flexibility from Federal regulation. We should explore a new generation of break-the-mold New American Schools. Standards and assessments should be raised, not reduced to a lowest common denominator. Communities should be empowered to find what works. The pursuit of excellence in education is a fundamental goal. Good teachers should be rewarded for teaching well. Alterative certification can bring desperately needed new people into the teaching profession. . . .

America must remain neutral toward particular religions, but we must not remain neutral toward religion itself or the values religion supports. Mindful of our country's Judeo-Christian heritage and rich religious pluralism, we support the right of students to engage in voluntary prayer in schools and the right of the community to do so at commencements or other occasions. We will strongly enforce the law guaranteeing equal access to school facilities. We also advocate recitation of the Pledge of Allegiance in schools as a reminder of the principles that sustain us as one Nation under God. . . .

For Healthier Families

PROMOTE HEALTH, PREVENT DISEASE, REFORM HEALTH CARE . . . Republicans believe government control of health care is irresponsible and ineffective. We believe health care choices should remain in the hands of the people, not government bureaucrats. This issue truly represents a fundamental difference between the two parties. . . .

AIDS The H.I.V./AIDS epidemic has exploded over the past decade into a crisis of tragic proportions. In our country, AIDS has already claimed more than 150,000 lives, and as many as one million more Americans may have been infected with the virus.

Epidemics have, throughout history, challenged governments, which have too often been powerless to combat them. Science — and human wisdom — have advanced, however, and we have met this crisis not only with a massive commitment of resources but also with a personal determination on the part of the President. That commitment and leadership will continue. . . .

PROMOTING CULTURAL VALUES . . . Elements within the media, the entertainment industry, academia, and the Democrat Party are waging a guerrilla war against American values. They deny personal responsibility, disparage traditional morality, denigrate religion, and promote hostility toward the family's way of life. Children, the members of our society most vulnerable to cultural influences, are barraged with violence and promiscuity, encouraging reckless and irresponsible behavior. This undermines the authority of parents, the ones most responsible for passing on to their offspring a sense of right and wrong. The lesson our Party draws is important — that all of us, individuals and corporations alike, have a responsibility to reflect the values we expect our fellow citizens to exhibit. . . .

We oppose any legislation or law which legally recognizes same-sex marriages and allows such couples to adopt children or provide foster care. . . .

Government has a responsibility, as well, to insure that it promotes the common moral values that bind us together as a Nation. We therefore condemn the use of public funds to subsidize obscenity and blasphemy masquerading as art. The fine arts, including those with public support, can certainly enrich our society. However, no artist has an inherent right to claim taxpayer support for his or her private vision of art if that vision mocks the moral and spiritual basis on which our society is founded. We believe a free market in art — with neither suppression nor favoritism by government — is the best way to foster the cultural revival our country needs.

Individual Rights, Good Homes and Safe Streets

REBUILDING THE DREAM . . . In the tradition of Lincoln, President Bush has replicated the American dream of home-ownership. For first-time home buyers, he has proposed a $5,000 tax credit. For lower-income families, he has worked to restore opportunity through HOPE, his initiative to help tenants now dependent on federal aid to buy their own homes; Mortgage Revenue Bonds, to assist more than 1.9 million families to buy a first home; Low Income Housing Tax Credits, already producing more than 420,000 decent apartments at affordable prices; and HOME, a partnership among all levels of government to help low-income families secure better housing. . . .

ENDING DEPENDENCY . . . Today's welfare system is anti-work and anti-marriage. It taxes families to subsidize illegitimacy. It rewards unethical

Oil leaders warn of industry collapse

■ Industry heavyweights, political leaders seize spotlight to illuminate oil and gas troubles.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — The blighted oil and gas industry may collapse without tax relief and the opening to drilling of environmentally protected areas, industry leaders and officials warned Monday at the Republican National Convention.

"I think it's time that the country realized that we have an industry that is in peril, we have the prospect of losing an entire industry. And once that industry is lost, you can't expect it to come back," Rep. Jack Fields, R-Texas, said at a news conference in the shadow of a 112-foot oil rig erected outside the Astrodome convention site.

The industry has lost 400,000 jobs over the last decade as the number of working oil and gas rigs has plummeted, said Tom Bowersox, chairman of the International Association of Drilling Contractors and president of Zapata Off-Shore Co., the company President Bush helped start in the 1950s.

Americans spent $46 billion last year for imported oil, representing 66 percent of the negative balance of trade, said Sen. Don Nickles, R-Oklahoma.

"I think it's vitally important that we wake up America for the fact that we're becoming far too dependent on unreliable foreign sources of oil — foreign sources of oil which are not cheap and which are not dependable," said Nickles, a member of the Energy Committee.

The industry leaders criticized Congress for failing to allow oil exploration in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge in Alaska and parts of the outer continental shelf. They also called for relief from the alternative minimum tax on drilling.

At a speech Monday to The Houston Club, Secretary of the Interior Manuel Lujan said the Bush administration supports allowing exploration and production in the Alaska refuge and lifting drilling moratoria on the continental shelf off the east and west coasts.

"We support those things. And what we need really is a change in the Congress. We don't need a change in the administration, because if we had a change in the Congress, if we had a Republican Congress, let me tell you, we would be rid of all this moratoria stuff that we have right now. And the oil companies would not be going away.

"But the oil industry is in terrible, terrible shape," Lujan said.

Fields, a member of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, said opening the wildlife refuge could create 735,000 jobs.

"That is not being produced, not being explored, because of some caribou, and these are not caribou that are even American caribou. These are Canadian caribou that trot across the line, eat some grass, drop their calves and go back to Canada," he said.

Bowersox and Lujan both said drilling in the United States lessens the danger of spills from tankers carrying imported oil.

"We need to do something in this country to encourage America's independent petroleum producers and our major oil producers to come back to the U.S., and we need a revitalized U.S. domestic industry," Bowersox said.

Although Nickles criticized Democratic vice presidential nominee Al Gore and the Democratic platform, the oil industry leaders stopped short of blasting either Bush or the Democrats.

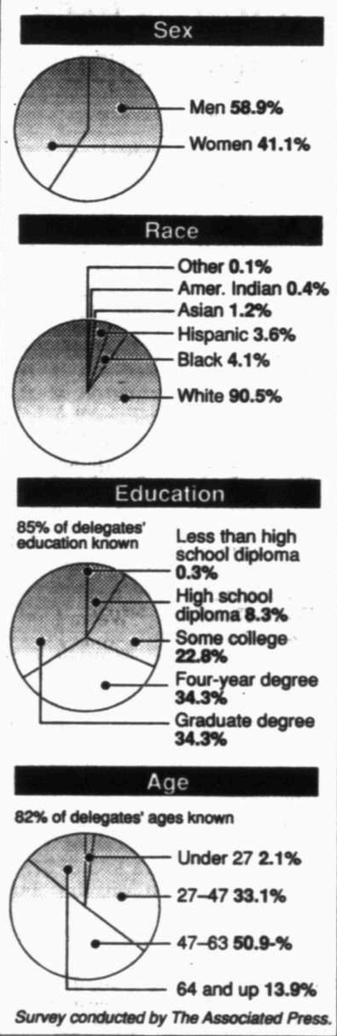
Delegate demographics

Profile of delegates to the Republican National Convention:



Survey conducted by The Associated Press.

AP/Alan Baseden

HOUSTON (AP) — Young leaders and the future are on delegate Jeanette Riel's mind at the Republican National Convention. She's 89.

Mrs. Riel, a longtime Republican volunteer from Vero Beach, Fla., is the senior delegate here, according to surveys of each state delegation by The Associated Press.

She first announces she is "over 80," then discloses she will turn 90 on Sept. 27. That's more than two months before South Carolina delegate Sen. Strom Thurmond. She said there's been some joking talk about the two of them having a joint 90th birthday party.

In the meantime, she's telling the other Republicans here the importance of young people to the party.

"We need young people to come up through the ranks. I'd like to see people who will have the vision to lead us," she said. "We have to work with the young people. Older people often have preconceived notions and we need to listen to the young."

Some of the highlights that stand out in her mind include sitting next to Neil Armstrong, the first man on the moon, at the 1972 convention in Miami Beach. She also recalls anti-war demonstrations — "a Jane Fonda problem" — at that convention.

The 1976 convention took her back to Kansas City, in her home state of Missouri; at the 1980 convention she was working for Paula Hawkins, who would win the U.S. Senate race that year; and in 1988 she went to New Orleans with her grandson — now a student at Notre Dame — and was impressed by his excitement over watching politics at work.

Black Republicans few, supportive

N.Y. Times News Service

HOUSTON — Riding the bus from his hotel to the Astrodome Monday morning, Jim McDowell could not help overhearing the lady in the seat behind him, and it seemed to him that she was, in a sense, talking about him.

"She was going on and on about how all these people on welfare were living better than she did, going to college and driving big cars and so on," McDowell recalled. "Well, I don't like the welfare system any better than she does, but . . ."

But McDowell is black, and such talk makes him a little uncomfortable and a little unhappy. "The unspoken word in that kind of talk is 'black,'" he said. "Blacks have the feeling that most whites, especially most Republican whites, think most blacks are on welfare, so we're sort of sensitive."

McDowell, a middle-aged insurance broker from Vallejo, Calif., who is an alternate delegate to the Republican convention here, has been enrolled as a Republican for only four years, and he believes that black Republicans must spread the word.

"We are the last group in the closet in all of America," he said. "We have to stand up unashamedly every day and say we are black Republicans, and we believe in the same things white Republicans do. We don't want handouts, we don't like welfare, we don't want to be wards of big government." He told this to the woman in the seat behind him and, he said, she understood his point. "That's what I do," he said. "Convert people one conversation at a time."

Women organize to promote candidates

HOUSTON (AP) — Republican women said they are trying to catch up with their Democratic sisters in the fund-raising game, but there's no reason for all the fuss about the number of Democratic women running for office this year.

A growing number of Republican women also are running for local and national offices, members of the newly-formed Women's Leadership Network said Monday.

"This is not only the year of the woman, it's the year of the Republican woman, too," said Judy A. Black, president of the group. Black served as a special assistant to former President Nixon for intergovernmental affairs.

The group was formed earlier this year to get more women elected to office and promoted to leadership positions in the private sector as well. About 200 women have joined.

Members also formed Leader-PAC, a political action committee in May, to raise more money for female candidates. So far, the committee has raised $100,000 said Sally Atwater, widow of Lee Atwater.

The money will be available for all Republican women nominated by their parties for seats in the House and Senate, regardless of their stands on issues, Black said.

"Our mission is to support women Republican candidates," Black said.

Convention activity in brief

■ Relative offers 'cousin George' advice

Even Bush admits the Republican presidential campaign is in trouble. Pittsburgh attorney Donald C. Bush, that is.

One of 91 delegates attending the Republican National Convention this week, the Pennsylvania Bush is a distant relative of the guest of honor, President George Bush.

"I call him cousin George," said Donald Bush.

Familial bias notwithstanding, the Pennsylvania Bush has his own advice for how his famous relative, engaged in an uphill fight, can defeat Democrat Bill Clinton in November.

"We carried the state last time only by about 100,000 votes. It will be a tough show," he said. "I think it's still possible, but right now we would be in trouble.

"He's got to tell us where he's going to take us in the next four years," he added. "I'd like to hear economic plans, more jobs, how they'll be created. I think he needs a general plan for why we should vote for Bush. He has to come up with a program to go out and sell to the people."

■ 'Mean green button machine' makes profit

Fellow Louisiana delegates call Floyd Gonzalez the "mean green button machine," not a bad title for an unemployed college student who turned a doodle into dollars.

"Don't laugh, it helped pay part of my way here," Gonzalez, his blue vest dotted with pro-life, pro-Bush buttons, said Monday from the floor of the Republican National Convention.

"I don't mind the attention," he said. "I've raised about $1,400, and it could be up to $1,800 by the time this thing is over."

Gonzalez, 26, of Baton Rouge, was doodling on a piece of paper and drew out a button that said, "Pro-Bush, Pro-Family, Pro-America." Louisiana delegates clamored for the buttons.

Gonzalez said a button recalling the Vice President Dan Quayle-Murphy Brown squabble over single parents was the hottest item. "It says 'Dan's right, Murphy's a Tramp,'" he said.

■ Rep. Archer defends Bush to his mother

It was supposed to have been the crowning of a local boy turned conquering hero but President Bush is struggling for popularity in the nation, his adopted home state and even the congressional district he once represented.

A constituent survey recently released by Rep. Bill Archer, the Republican who succeeded Bush in Houston's affluent 7th Congressional District, showed 57 percent disapprove of the way the president is doing his job.

Archer, an avid Bush supporter, says even his mother has been complaining about the president.

"She'll say, 'Why isn't the president doing more to help people?' and I'll say, 'He is Mom. It's just that not all of it gets reported,'" Archer said.

■ Gay leaders: GOP platform is a mistake

The Republican Party is making a mistake by bowing to the far right and using the GOP convention platform to turn homosexuals into the new No. 1 menace in America, gay leaders charged Monday.

"To be gay, conservative and Republican is not a contradiction," said Marvin Liebman. "I am proud to be all three; less proud this year to be a Republican."

Liebman, a founder of the modern conservative movement, held a news conference in Houston with other gay leaders and Rep. Bill Green, R-N.Y., to reproach the GOP for targeting gays.

■ Chancellor likes floor-job at real conventions

Network correspondent John Chancellor is embarking on his 20th and final national convention for NBC this week, and he says he is still fascinated at how the media coverage of the events has evolved.

"It was more fun being a floor reporter at the real conventions than being an anchorman or a commentator at the, what I'd guess you'd have to call, sort of half-conventions we have now," said Chancellor, who has been in broadcasting for 43 years.

behavior and penalizes initiative. It cannot be merely tinkered with by Congress; it must be recreated by states and localities. Republican Governors and legislators in several states have already launched dramatic reforms, especially with workfare and learnfare. Welfare can no longer be a check in the mail with no responsibility. . . .

SAFE HOMES AND STREETS

. . . The Republican Party is committed to a drug-free America. During the last twelve years, we have radically reversed the Democrats' attitude of tolerance toward narcotics, vastly increased Federal operations against drugs, cleaned up the military, and launched mandatory testing for employees in various fields, including White House personnel. As a result, overall drug abuse is falling. We urge that states and communities emphasize anti-drug education by police officers and others in schools to educate young children to the dangers of the drug culture. Dope is no longer trendy. . . .

NEW MEMBERS OF THE AMERICAN FAMILY Our Nation of immigrants continues to welcome those seeking a better life. This reflects our past, when some newcomers fled intolerance; some sought prosperity; some came as slaves. All suffered and sacrificed but hoped their children would have a better life. All searched for a shared vision — and found one in America. Today we are stronger for our diversity.

Illegal entry into the United States, on the other hand, threatens the social compact on which immigration is based. That IS, the Nation accepts immigrants and is enriched by their determination and values. Illegal immigration, on the other hand, undermines the integrity of border communities and already crowded urban neighborhoods. We will build on the already announced strengthening of the Border Patrol to better coordinate interdiction of illegal entrants through greater cross-border cooperation. . . .

INDIVIDUAL RIGHTS The protection of individual rights is the foundation for opportunity and security.

The Republican Party is unique in this regard. Since its inception, it has respected every person, even when that proposition was not universally popular. Today, as in the day of Lincoln, we insist that no American's rights are negotiable. . . .

We believe the unborn child has a fundamental individual right to life which cannot be infringed. We therefore reaffirm our support for a human life amendment to the Constitution, and we endorse legislation to make clear that the Fourteenth Amendment's protections apply to unborn children. . . .

UNITING OUR COUNTRY

. . . KEEPING WHAT YOU EARN The test of economic policy is whether it promotes economic growth and expands job opportunities. Lower taxes and an expanding economy depend on long term, consistent restraint in the growth of federal spending. . . .

The simple truth for the American people is this: The only safeguard between themselves and Democrat tax increases is the use of the veto by George Bush and enough Republican votes in Congress to sustain it. . . .

We will cut the capital gains tax rate to 15 percent — zero in enterprise zones — and index it so government cannot profit from inflation by taxing phantom capital gains, literally stealing from savings and pensions. . . .

LIBERATION THROUGH DEREGULATION . . . We support President Bush's freeze on new regulations. We applaud his Competitiveness Council, under Vice President Quayle, for fighting the regulatory mania, saving the public $20 billion with its initial 90-day moratorium on new regulations and billions more under the current 120-day freeze. . . .

JOB CREATION AND SMALL BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES . . . To create jobs and keep small business growing, the Republican Party supports increased access to capital for business expansion, exporting, long term investment, opportunity capital for the disadvantaged, and capital to bring new products and new technology to the market.

The Republican Party enthusiastically encourages the passage of Federal enterprise zones. Enterprise zones have been effective programs for promoting growth in urban and rural America. Republicans believe that the concept of enterprise zones is based on unyielding faith in the entrepreneurial spirit of all Americans. . . .

Reforming Government and the Legal System

CLEANING UP THE IMPERIAL CONGRESS. The Democrats have controlled the House of Representatives for 38 years — five years longer than Castro has held Cuba. They have held the Senate for 32 of those 38. Their entrenched power has produced a Congress arrogant, out of touch . . .. Republicans want to change all that. We reaffirm our support for a constitutional amendment to limit the number of terms House Members and Senators may serve. . . .

MANAGING GOVERNMENT IN THE PUBLIC INTEREST . . . We deplore the blatant political bias of the government-sponsored radio and television networks. It is especially outrageous that taxpayers are now forced to underwrite this biased broadcasting through the Corporation for Public Broadcasting (CPB). We call for sweeping reform of CPB . . .

Our Land, Food, and Resources

AGRICULTURE . . . The Republican Party is the home of the farmer, rancher, and forester. We have long championed their right to pursue growth, efficiency, and competitiveness through market incentives, diversification, and personal ingenuity. . . .

We value our Nation's real wetlands habitat and the diversity of our native animal and plant life. We oppose, however, bureaucratic harassment of farm, ranch, and timber families under statutes regarding endangered species and wetlands. . . .

PUBLIC LANDS . . . We believe that recreation, forestry, ranching, mining, oil and gas exploration, and production on our public lands can be conducted in a way compatible with their conservation. The United States has some of the richest mineral resources in the world. Our public lands should not be arbitrarily locked up and put off limits to responsible uses. . . .

Building on the legacy of Ronald Reagan, George Bush saw the chance to sweep away decadent Communism. He was the first Western leader to declare his determination to fashion "a Europe whole and free." . . .

Yet now that we have won the Cold War, we must also win the peace. We must not repeat the mistake of the past by throwing away victory through complacency. A new world beckons, unlike any we have ever known, filled with uncertainties. Old passions have reemerged. New democracies struggle to decide their destiny. Nations are torn asunder. Migrants and refugees strain the social fabric of continents. Tyrants work to build nuclear, chemical, and even biological weapons to threaten us and our neighbors. Drug trafficking and terrorism, often linked, menace Americans at home and abroad. . . .

PROVEN LEADERSHIP George Bush has been the most important architect of Western aspirations and designs for the challenging world we are now entering. . . .

The test of international leadership is on the field, not in a playbook. The Oval Office is no place for on-the job training — not in carrying out the Presidential duty to protect and defend our Nation, not in managing the arsenal of the supreme nuclear power. There are those who talk and those who perform. George Bush has clearly performed for America, making the right calls in a series of tough decisions that helped transform the world.

BUSH: President, speakers set combative tone much for this country" and she believes Buchanan is "going to come around and support the ticket 100 percent and we're all glad about that."

The upbeat first day of the 35th Republican quadrennial convention — which also included adoption of a platform that contains a proposed ban on abortions — seemed to achieve the desired effect of pumping up the troops and chasing away low morale caused by lagging polls.

"He is absolutely on fire," Rick Montoya of New Mexico, a former aide to ex-Gov. Bill Clements, said of Bush after the president's arrival speech at an exhibition hall in the Astrodome Complex. "It's just what we needed."

Supporters interrupted Bush with chants of "four more years" as the president described himself as a "fighter" and promised a hard-driving campaign to retake the lead from the Democrats.

"It starts now," he declared. He acknowledged trailing in the polls but added: "You know me. In politics, I've always done better when I fight back, when I'm behind."

Issuing a glowing endorsement of his running mate, the president called Quayle a "super vice president" who has never wavered in "the face of those unfair critics."

Quayle, introducing his boss, said Bush "is honest, not slick" and will provide "the character and leadership needed to guide the nation to the next century."

He said Bush leads "by principle ... not by public opinion polls."

Several thousand supporters erupted with chants and thunderous applause as Bush led the presidential party into the Astroarena to the strains of The Eyes of Texas. Placards declaring "Bush Will Win" and "We Love Barbara" bobbed among the hometown supporters.

"What a wonderful welcome home," beamed the president, a former Houston oilman who started his political career here more than two decades ago as party chairman and a local congressman.

Bush lampooned Clinton with a barrage of one-liners, saying the Arkansas governor "sounded the saxophone of change." But, he added, "By the time they're through, change is all you're going to have in your pocket."

The president said Clinton appears so confident of winning the Nov. 3 election that "I half expected when I went over to the Oval Office to find him there measuring the drapes.

"I have a message for him: Put those drapes on hold. It's going to be curtains time for that ticket."

Any remaining doubt that Republicans planned to keep the gloves on dissipated as Republican national chairman Rich Bond depicted Clinton as "the heartburn of the heartland."

MUDDLE: Plank is tougher than Bush's position

(From 1A)

Adding to the confusion, the army of convention speakers over four days is filled with champions of causes not embraced by Bush. The proclaimed purpose is to demonstrate diversity of views and tolerance. Put another way, it shows dissent and lack of unity over Bush's policies.

"I don't think the people perceive what the president is trying to get accomplished," former White House speech writer Landon Parvin said.

Republicans agree Bush has to give the speech of his life Thursday night to energize his floundering campaign, spell out a convincing agenda for a second term and instill a sense of solidarity among jittery Republicans.

It's an assignment the president has been unable to fulfill so far.

A New York Times-CBS News Poll published Monday found that only 15 percent of Americans felt Bush could bring off the real changes that are needed, while 63 percent thought it was possible that Democrat Bill Clinton could deliver.

Acknowledging his problems with voters, Bush said, "I've got to get out there and make sure they do know what my heartbeat is."

Even at his convention Bush's message is muddled by reminders of policy differences.

Environmental Protection Agency chief William Reilly will speak to the convention tonight. He frequently is at sharp odds with the White House on environmental policy. Labor Secretary Lynn Martin will nominate the president on Wednesday night. She opposes his position on abortion. Mary Fisher, a wealthy Republican infected with AIDS, speaks Thursday. She wants Bush to put more money and moral weight behind the battle against AIDS.

Ronald Reagan, the starring speaker on opening night, is the symbol of conservative principles that Republican critics complain Bush has abandoned. Reagan assured the convention that Bush is "a steady hand on the tiller through the choppy waters of the 90's."

Patrick Buchanan, another opening night speaker, used to ridicule Bush as "a warmed-over Jimmy Carter" and "King George." Throw that text away. Buchanan told the convention that "the right place to be now ... is right beside George Bush."

Buchanan's support was sealed with the militantly conservative platform that reads more like his manifesto than Bush's. The platform says the 1990 tax increase that Bush embraced should be repealed and that the nation should adopt an "American first" policy rather than the free trade policy often trumpeted by Bush.

A long fight over abortion showcased the deep divisions among Republicans on a politically explosive issue.

Conservatives prevailed with a plank that urges an absolute ban on abortion.

ISSUE: Platform remains true to conservatives marriage or adoption by same-sex couples, and endorses Vice President Dan Quayle's plan for reforming the legal profession.

While the Democratic platform was notable for its move to the center — several Texas Republicans said the Democrats' platform sounded like a refried Republican plan — the Republican platform remains true to the religious conservatives on the right of the party, who heavily influenced language on family values and abortion.

The abortion plank, which endorses a constitutional amendment to outlaw abortion, is stronger than President Bush's stated position against abortion except in cases of rape, incest and danger to the life of the mother. The platform spells out no exceptions from the proposed ban, a position that Mary Dent Crisp, co-chairwoman of the National Republican Coalition for Choice, said means the party "decided to risk the lives of women and girls for a few votes."

Abortion opponents said that is because the plank is a statement of philosophy rather than a proposed law.

"I read it as making a statement for life, protecting the life of the unborn," said Dick Weinhold, an abortion opponent from Bedford. "It's a statement of principle, philosophy. It doesn't get into laws. It doesn't get into all the intricacies."

Abortion rights supporters knew they were on the losing side when they walked into the Astrodome Monday morning, wearing white bandanas. They had not mustered enough support from six states to force debate on the platform language.

"I knew it was going to happen but the reality was very upsetting," said California delegate Kate Nyegaard, 57, a lifelong Republican from Modesto. "I'm angry at the situation. I want to vote Republican because I believe in everything else in the platform."

Abortion opponents rejoiced in their victory. Decked out in red straw hats, they cheered at the voice vote.

BANK: Move is part of recapitalization project

(From 1A)

the Midland bank could offer local investors.

Franklin sees the sale as positive. "The Midland bank has operated under the same charter since 1902 and I feel like whoever buys the bank, whichever bank company does, they will do all that's necessary to keep it operating as it has been."

When the Midland bank — then known as Midland National Bank — joined the holding company in 1972, it was among the first banks to do so. It is Midland's second-largest bank (behind NationsBank), with deposits of $307.5 million as of the end of July.

"I have some feelings about First City being split up, but I feel it's the best resolution for all of us," Franklin said.

He said the decision to sell the bank did not come as a surprise because it had been under consideration for several months.

"Obviously, First City would prefer to remain independent. I feel the chairman (C. Ivan Wilson) has done an admirable job of guiding this company. I endorse this resolution," he said.

First City has submitted its recapitalization plan to the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and other regulatory agencies for review and consideration. The plan does not require assistance from the FDIC.

Sale of the 13 community banks would bring in an estimated $210 million, which would recapitalize the remaining banks.

First City plans to keep 62 banks in Houston, Dallas-Fort Worth, Austin, San Antonio, Corpus Christi, Alice, Aransas Pass and McAllen.

After the sale of the banks, First City is expected to have assets of approximately $6 billion.

The plan includes renegotiating certain above-market leases and settling certain guarantees and other obligations to the FDIC, which could result in approximately $140 million of additional capital.

In addition, First City hopes to raise $100 million in new capital through private placement and by offering rights to existing shareholders.

For the second quarter, First City recorded a net loss of $18.5 million, down from a loss of $73.8 million in the first quarter and from a loss of $58.9 million in the second quarter of 1991.

ATTACK: Mortar shells smash into jammed hotel ground cafe. "I saw a lady bleeding in the street, but I couldn't help her because I was running, too."

(From 1A)

The Tanjug news agency quoted the Pale-based Serb command as saying the downtown hotel was the headquarters for a Muslim militia force, the Green Berets. There was no independent confirmation of the claim.

The Serbs said they were retaliating for the Muslim-led government's first major attack on Serb headquarters in Pale, an eastern suburb. If the Muslim side "continues with similar attacks, the Serbian army will not pick out its targets, and the enemy will pay a price ten times higher," the command said.

The upsurge in violence came as the United Nations was seeking to get the Serbs — who have been lobbing shells into the Bosnian capital for five months — to pull back heavy weapons and surrender them to the control of U.N. peacekeepers.

Earlier, two shells blasted Marshal Tito Boulevard, killing four people and wounding 44, said Dr. Mufid Lazovic at Kosevo Hospital. Two other people were killed in the city, one a 6-year-old boy hit in the head by a dumdum bullet, Lazovic said.

Sarajevo radio said five people were killed at the Hotel Europe. Mirhad Kurtovic, a Bosnian government soldier, said he and his crew had pulled two dead and 15 injured from the hotel.

Among the injured were two members of a British film crew. Independent Television News said its cameraman Nigel Thomson and sound recordist Jim Dutton were hospitalized with hand injuries.

AFFAIR: O'Sullivan comes to her daughter's defense to pianist-conductor Andre Previn and now a college student in New Jersey, is no longer allowed in Farrow's Manhattan home, the source said.

(From 1A)

Allen sued Farrow, 47, for custody of their adopted son, Moses, 14, their adopted daughter, Dylan, 7, and their biological son, Satchel, 4½.

He charged in sealed court papers filed Thursday that she was an unfit mother, said a lawyer familiar with the papers who requested anonymity because of the seal.

"In the matter of child custody: the last thing I wanted to do was go to court," Allen said. "I have tried agonizingly to work out the details privately, but finally I was left with no alternative."

Allen said he has more to say but will wait until he gets to court.

Farrow's mother, actress Maureen O'Sullivan, came to her daughter's defense over the weekend, calling Allen "a desperate and evil man" and terming the lawsuit "a cheap shot."

O'Sullivan, 81, was quoted by the Daily News as saying of the affair: "I am revolted. It's absolutely disgraceful. Maybe Soon-Yi was charmed by an old man of fame ... who is old enough to be her grandfather."

In several of his movies, Allen deals with the theme of older men involved with younger women.

In the 1979 film "Manhattan," Allen played a 42-year-old writer whose lover is 17. He quips that he is "dating a girl who does homework."

In "Hannah and Her Sisters," a film in which Allen cast O'Sullivan as Farrow's mother, Farrow played a woman whose husband has an affair with her younger sister.

And in "Husbands and Wives," scheduled for release next month, Allen plays a college professor who becomes romantically involved with a student, played by 19-year-old Juliette Lewis, who was in last year's "Cape Fear."

Raoul Felder, divorce lawyer with experience in countless child custody fights, said Allen's affair with Farrow's daughter will doom his lawsuit.

"For all intents and purposes, he has been her father," Felder said. "If this is the case, if the accusations are true, he'll never even be able to visit them, much less have custody."

A hearing on Allen's lawsuit is scheduled for Aug. 25.

Allen and Farrow, together since 1980, never married and always lived apart, but even as their relationship came apart they continued to see each other frequently because of the children, the source said.

Farrow had been Allen's favorite leading lady, starring in the 13 movies he has made since they met.

CANCEL: 'Publicity killed idea of confrontation' leave Iraq today, and the next round of inspections has not yet been scheduled, leaving uncertain when the United Nations might test Iraq's threat to bar access to military ministries.

It was not immediately clear why the planned inspection of an Iraqi military ministry Monday morning was postponed. Some Bush administration officials said the inspectors abandoned the plans out of concern they would appear to be pawns in Washington's effort to confront Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

Other administration officials said the White House itself had second thoughts after a report Sunday in The New York Times that described a plan to force inspections. The Times also reported that some officials familiar with the plan had said the timing appeared calculated to give President Bush a boost during the Republican National Convention.

Bush and others have angrily denied any political motivations.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney on Monday sharply criticized The New York Times article. "I think it's a new low in political reporting," he said in an interview on "The MacNeil-Lehrer Newshour" on PBS. "I'm outraged by it."

As the possibility of a confrontation over the inspections seemed to recede, Washington continued discussions with Britain, France, Saudi Arabia and Kuwait on creating new safeguards to protect Shiite Muslims in southern Iraq from Iraqi air attacks.

Under the plan, the United States and its allies would declare a "no fly" zone roughly below the 32nd parallel in Iraq in which Iraqi aircraft would be barred. The proposal comes as intelligence reports indicate that Saddam's government is preparing to renew an air and ground offensive against the Shiites, administration officials said Monday.

Regarding the inspections in Baghdad, which were supposed to include the Ministry of Military Industrialization on Monday, it was not clear whether any last-minute objections or misgivings at the United Nations originated with the inspection team in Baghdad, at higher levels of the United Nations or among one of the members of the Security Council.

"After the publicity, they decided it wouldn't be good to continue on," a Defense Department official said. "The publicity killed the idea of any confrontation."

Tim Trevan, a spokesman for the U.N. special commission in charge of destroying Iraq's major weapons, said at a news conference at the U.N. headquarters in New York that the 22-member team did not visit a ministry "because this time round we didn't have the need to."

Corrections

A word was unintentionally dropped from a sentence in the last paragraph of a letter from Midlander Lowry Hershey that appeared in Sunday's Reporter-Telegram.

Hershey's letter should have read, "Contradictory issues are common. Pro-life and, even improved, quality-of-life are not contradictory. To choose abortion is the hypocritical alternative."

The days listed for fifth- and sixth-grade orientation for Midland public school students were incorrect in Sunday's local section. Orientation for those students will be 7 p.m. today and Thursday.

Lewellen Construction long noted for dependability, quality work

Lewellen Construction has been in the Midland area, specializing in the siding business, longer than any other company. "I believe that would include Odessa as well," said president Bill Lewellen. He has 16 years experience in the siding, storm window installation and window replacement business. For the past 10 years he has worked exclusively in this area. The craftsmen he employs have been with him from between four and eight years. So it's no wonder area residents have come to trust and depend upon the skill, professionalism and longevity of Lewellen Construction.

Literally hundreds of Midland-Odessa residents have turned to Lewellen Construction for siding, replacement and storm windows — which are custom built — gutters and carport construction and installation.

One of the reasons homeowners depend on Lewellen Construction is the installation warranty that the company offers. The siding installed by Lewellen Construction not only carries a lifetime warranty on the material itself, but an installation warranty that lasts as long as the purchaser owns the home.

"Steel siding comes with a lifetime warranty," Lewellen said. "If it's properly installed, there's no reason it shouldn't last that long. That's why we've attached our own installation guarantee. I have absolute confidence in our experience and expertise."

The benefits of siding are numerous. According to Remodeling Magazine, replacing siding is one of the most sensible of all remodeling projects. The publication says that new vinyl and aluminum siding with insulation is a big plus, with buyers welcoming its maintenance-free protection.

The estimated national payback for vinyl and aluminum siding (the amount recovered at the time of the sale of a home) is 64 percent. Then add to that the cost benefits of low maintenance (never paint again). The siding pays for itself.

Another benefit of the home improvement project becomes obvious in a homeowner's tax return. "Anyone considering a home improvement loan to replace their siding should remember that the interest on such loans is still tax deductible. That, of course, is not true for the majority of other types of loans," Lewellen said.

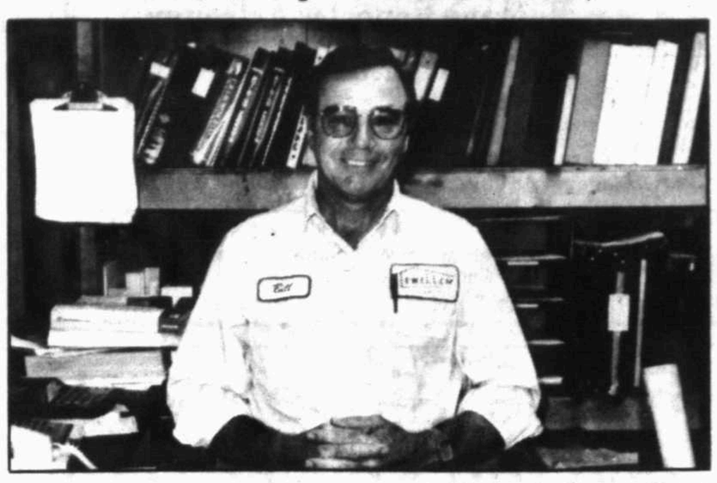
Another Lewellen Construction enterprise is the seamless aluminum guttering that they manufacture themselves. "We build it right on the job site to custom lengths," Lewellen said. "The guttering is completely seamless from corner to corner — which, of course, eliminates leaking joints."

The guttering can be ordered in a large variety of colors to match or complement the home's color.

"Lewellen Construction has the same products available as the nation's largest retailers, only at lower prices and better service because we're local," Lewellen said. "The large discounts you may see advertised don't even come close to our season discounts."

Besides longevity, good prices, excellent craftsmanship and dependability there's another good reason to call Lewellen Construction. The company is now offering a 10 percent siding discount to senior citizens. For free estimates call Lewellen at 686-8007 or 563-4520.

Lewellen Construction is located at 410 East County Road 130 — just four miles south of downtown.



Bill Lewellen has 16 years experience in the siding business. He's pictured here in his office, posed in front of his many siding sample books. One of the ways he uses the samples to assist those whose homes have suffered storm or other damage in identifying and matching siding that needs to be replaced.

Ready to take a late vacation and want something new and exciting to wear? Then your timing is just perfect. It Figures is holding an August clearance sale. They've reduced most summer items and all jewelry by 25 percent — and, they have two racks of clothes that are 40 percent off!

Even if you're not planning a late summer getaway, you can take this opportunity to add to your wardrobe at very little cost. It Figures has cute short sets, separates, slacks, split skirts, shorts and an assortment of blouses.

Choose clothes for school, office or fun times. Sizes range from junior to missy to plus sizes.

You can be one of a select group that people stop on the street and say, "My, what a cute outfit! Where did you get it?" Shop from It Figures' exclusive selection and you won't see your clothes on half the other people in town.

Reasonable prices is another plus to shopping at It Figures. Their "regular prices" beat most other store's "sale prices." So when they have a sale, It Figures' prices are a "steal."

And, don't forget, you can tone and and tan at It Figures. Let them help you get into your favorite outfit — the one that may be a "little" too snug.

Exercise in comfort, with no sweat or muss — it works!

It Figures, now in business for four years, has helped many Midlanders lose unwanted inches and get into shape and/or maintain it.

A friendly, relaxed atmosphere makes exercising a pleasure instead of a chore. If you want to maintain or lose inches, exercise a minimum of three times a week. Most people see results by the third week. The average inch loss is ½ to 1 inch per session over a four-week period.

Toning specials are 12 sessions for $35 or, one month of unlimited toning for $40.

There are no contracts or membership fees. Toning demonstrations are free.

Unlimited one-month tanning is $40, three months for $100.

Do what lots of Midlanders are doing, make It Figures your one-stop toning, tanning and shopping spot. They'll help you look your overall best!

It Figures opens at 7 a.m. weekdays for those early birds and stays open to 7:30 p.m. You can shop on your way to work. Laura, Billee and Maedell will be there to assist you in toning, tanning and clothes buying.

You can also get in shape the easy way, no stress, no sweat, no gravity pull on the joints. You don't suffer through high-impact aerobics that might wreak havoc on your joints, you don't sign intimidating contracts or pay an extra membership fee. All you do is lose inches the easy way with passive resistance exercise on seven different fitness machines.

It Figures works hard to make things convenient for its clients. Senior citizens receive a 15 percent discount (not applicable to specials). Husbands and wives also receive a discount when they sign up together (not applicable to specials), and toning customers receive a discount on tanning sessions. It Figures is located at 3205 W. Cuthbert in Midland. Call 697-5996 for more information.

Supreme Water Treatment takes soft approach to hard minerals

Many water supplies contain hardness minerals (calcium and magnesium). These minerals form a scale and create problems in water heaters, washing machines, dishwashers, coffee makers, humidifiers and plumbing systems. A modern and efficient water conditioning system eliminates hard water problems. It removes calcium and magnesium from your water supply by filtering it through a resin softening medium. Salt is used to revitalize the system periodically to provide soft water for your daily needs. The control for The Supreme Water Conditioning System is designed and engineered to give you reliable operation and conserve the water and salt required in the regeneration process. Take a close look at all of the advantages of the Supreme System. You'll find that conditioned water makes a refreshing difference in your life and will save you money now and in the years ahead. Here are a few of the pluses:

- Machine-washed clothes last longer, come out fresher, cleaner and softer. Colors stay brighter, too.
- The cost of cleaning supplies drops dramatically with conditioned water because less soap is needed.
- Conditioned water eliminates streaks and spots on glassware and dishes. And it helps dishwashers last longer.
- Water heaters last longer because conditioned water minimizes the scale build up created by hot water minerals.
- Shampooing with conditioned water revives hair color and makes it more radiant and manageable.
- All bathroom fixtures benefit from conditioned water. It eliminates unsightly rings, stains and mineral build up that darkens porcelain.

Check the ad in this section today for free normal installation on a rental water softener system Supreme Water.

Supreme Water is also well known for the state-of-the-art reverse osmosis system they service and install. They remind you that an investment in a quality reverse-osmosis drinking water system contributes not only only to good taste, but good health and on-tap convenience.

We live in an area where pure water is of great concern. Our water contains 1,800 to 3,000 parts per million of total dissolved solids. Supreme Water's system drops the solids to 200 parts per million. Some other systems' water, after treatment, contains 1,200 parts per million. This doesn't meet Texas law's requirement for bottled water, which is under 500 parts per million. But Supreme Water's system drops it significantly under state requirements.

It also protects health by providing water appropriate for low-sodium diets. And, it saves money by replacing expensive bottled water, by operating more efficiently and saving 1,000 gallons or more as compared to other reverse-osmosis systems.

Supreme Water Treatment has been serving Midland since 1981 with conditioned water systems, certified equipment and professional service. The company is well known for its dependability and quality service. For free estimates, drop by Supreme Water's new offices at 3113 W. Industrial in Midland. Hours are Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to noon and 1 to 5 p.m. Call 689-8868 for more information.

Force alone won't end the Shining Path

Peru's Shining Path guerrillas are a political nightmare come true, fanatics who think like the killers of Cambodia's Khmer Rouge and who finance their brutality with "taxes" extorted from drug traffickers. Despite President Alberto Fujimori's recent seizure of dictatorial powers, Shining Path terror steadily paralyzes more and more of Lima, home of one of every three Peruvians.

The tide can still be turned, but not from outside. Peruvians have no use for the Shining Path. But they have grown dangerously estranged from their government and armed forces. The answer is more democracy, not less.

During the Cold War, Washington would have felt an ideological obligation to block a Shining Path victory. Strong humanitarian and drug-policy arguments still carry weight. Yet there are hard limits on what the U.S. can or should do.

For one, the Peruvian government has not asked for U.S. military intervention. If it did, Washington would have to take into account the Peruvian army's atrocious human rights record and Fujimori's brazen contempt for democratic norms. And it's far from clear that American military intervention would produce more than a prolonged stalemate.

Shining Path's tenacity is astonishing. It has no foreign sanctuaries and only 5,000 to 20,000 activists. On the other side, are the 120,000 soldiers of the regular armed forces plus 200,000 peasants in village militias. Yet the territory and population under rebel control steadily increase. Fanaticism alone does not explain this. The sea these guerrillas swim in is the alienation of millions of Peruvians from their armed forces and government.

The military, which ruled Peru through the 1970s, is notoriously brutal and corrupt. It too makes deals with drug traffickers. And its drives against Shining Path have cost thousands of innocent lives. Meanwhile, Indian and mixed-race Peruvians feel particularly estranged from the European-descended power structure.

Fujimori, before he turned against democracy, seemed to grasp the need to broaden political power. That means, at a minimum, extending public services through Lima's shantytowns, assuring citizens the protection of an independent judiciary, and replacing bureaucracy with democratic accountability at all levels of national life.

Fujimori still talks about "real democracy" and promises a return to elections plus constitutional reform. But in practice, he now relies on military repression. Force alone, U.S. or Peruvian, cannot defeat Shining Path.

Rail authority needs help

From its very inception in May 1989, the Texas High-Speed Rail Authority, the agency created to regulate the proposed bullet train, has suffered from an identity crisis. Although its job is to regulate the consortium that was awarded the train franchise, it has such a close relationship to that group that it has become its de facto facilitator.

The fact that the authority is funded entirely by the group hoping to build and operate a high-speed rail system in Texas has added an uncomfortable level of conflict to a situation that can at best be described as murky.

The problems at the authority have been brewing for more than a year, and they will only worsen if radical measures are not quickly applied.

Tiny voices not always heard

Little 2-year-old Donny Martin of Garland died May 16 from blunt force trauma to his stomach, according to an autopsy. Today, the child's common-law father, Robert Morris Rose Jr., remains jailed on a first-degree felony charge of injury to a child.

It's a tragic and complex story. The technical term blunt force trauma does not portray what really happened. Was the child punched, hit with an object or kicked? We don't know. But, this story is a reminder of the grim reality that 97 Texas children died last year from abuse or neglect. The public seldom hears about these cases or the thousands of children more who are raped, sexually molested, mutilated, tortured, starved, beaten or neglected each year.

Texas is losing the war on child abuse. Since 1988, confirmed cases of child abuse and neglect have risen from 28,377 to 34,759 in 1991.

Now, experts predict the number of abused and neglected Texas children will increase 18.4 percent this year to 41,170 children. Children's voices aren't very loud in speaking out for their own welfare. Certainly, little Donny Martin couldn't lobby the Legislature to keep him safe and his cries for help were missed. How many tiny voices like Donny Martin's won't be heard?

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Aug. 18, the 231st day of 1992. There are 135 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

One year ago, on Aug. 18, 1991, Soviet hard-liners launched a coup aimed at toppling President Mikhail S. Gorbachev. A delegation arrived at Gorbachev's vacation spot in the Crimea to demand the Soviet leader's resignation; he defiantly refused. Gorbachev and members of his family remained effectively imprisoned until the coup collapsed three days later.

On this date:

In 1227, the Mongol conqueror Genghis Khan died.

In 1587, Virginia Dare became the first child of English parents to be born on American soil, on what is now Roanoke Island, N.C.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Media bites Republicans; they bite back

Yes, of course, it will come off as political bombast, special-interest whining. And yet, my fellow Americans, top Republican spokesmen are right: The media are for Bill Clinton; they want him in the White House. They want George Bush out, out, out.

Murchison

"I think we know who the media want to win this election — and I don't think it's George Bush and the American people," GOP national chairman Rich Bond told the Republican National Committee. Just what you'd expect to hear from a GOP national chairman, right?

Then there's Dan Quayle. "I want to say something to you good journalists," the vice president said at a news conference. "You are being overwhelmed by the bad journalism and the bad journalists of America."

We all know how this will play with the media — the way a hand buzzer plays at a wedding reception. The media, who credit Dan Quayle with the mental agility of a cocker spaniel, will snicker and jeer. The issue of media bias in the 1992 campaign won't get talked about with any seriousness. But it should. The issue is real.

Quayle's and Bond's immediate provocation was the tale of George Bush's imputed extramarital affair with a former aide, concerning which Bush was questioned twice this week by TV golden throats. "It's a lie," replied the president of the United States.

The accusation is not, shall we say, wholly persuasive. It comes from a footnote in a book. The footnote, to which the "New York Post" drew our attention last Tuesday, quotes a dead man as saying he had once arranged for Bush and the aide to use a guest house. This — even if it happened — is an affair? Yet it was all over television the next day. ABC spent nearly a half-hour airing the matter.

The media, I say, want Bush and Quayle gone. This is obvious in the hectoring, nit-picking tone of Bush-Quayle coverage, as well as in the adulatory coverage of Clinton and Gore. You would have thought, to take in the coverage of the Democratic duo's post-convention bus tour, that their vehicle was flying a foot off the highway, supported on the palms of angels.

I do not suggest the existence of some get-Bush conspiracy involving the networks, the newsmagazines, The New York Times, and The Washington Post. I suggest a common, unifying hope that Bill Clinton, come Jan. 20, will take the inaugural oath as president. This suffices. It produces campaign coverage slanted against Bush-Quayle and in favor of Clinton-Gore.

Dislike of a president, any president, is fine and thoroughly American. But let's remember the role the media play in our democratic republic — that of fact-collector. The facts the media show us, assuming their factuality, are the ones we think about and act upon, whereas those facts the media downplay or ignore rarely become part of public discourse. So high a privilege entails a high responsibility — that of accuracy and fairness to both sides.

The national media, overwhelmingly liberal and sick of Republican presidents, have thrown accuracy and fairness to the winds. Their motto seems to be, if it helps Clinton and hurts Bush, go with it. Sure Clinton himself has had a hard time on the infidelity issue. This was a horse of a similar but still quite different color. Gennifer Flowers went public with the charges in a supermarket tabloid. No jilted mistress has accused Bush of anything. This whole unpleasantness — so at odds with the image of the George Bush we have known — arises from rank hearsay evidence.

Our profession, journalism, is composed of fallible humans, but we didn't use to be this bad, this one-sided. This liberal Democratic partisanship in the media dates from the mid-to-late '60s. It engaged public attention 24 years ago when then-Vice President Spiro Agnew assailed the "nattering nabobs of negativism." Afterwards it died down, in part because Ronald Reagan communicated so successfully over the media's heads. Well, communication isn't George Bush's forte, and fairness obviously isn't the media's. It's going to be a dirty campaign, not one bit brighter for the media's increasing forgetfulness of what it owes the customers.

WHOM TO WRITE

Following is a list of the names and addresses of various state and federal officials Midlanders may wish to contact from time-to-time:

SENATORS: Lloyd Bentsen (D) and Phil Gramm (R), Senate Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20510.

CHARLEY REESE

It's time for the Yankee to stay at home

The politicians are watching TV again. Everytime they see heart-rending pictures of children on TV these civilian pols, most of whom wouldn't know one end of a gun from another, get an itch to send the troops.

Reese

Now some Democrats, Bill Clinton among them, think the U.S. ought to provide some military aid to stop the slaughter in the Balkans. These guys first of all know nothing about military force and even less about the history of the Balkan Peninsula.

Nazi Germany put about 100 divisions into Yugoslavia. In two weeks, they defeated the Yugoslavian army. In three years, they could not quell the guerrillas and partisans. Now the Nazis acted with a great deal more ruthlessness and ferocity than we are prepared to act with and they could not silence the guns with 100 divisions. How then, pray tell, do the sages of the Senate and the campaign stump propose to do it with a token force?

Snipers and men firing small mortars are not good targets for air strikes. Moreover, unlike the flat bare desert of Kuwait and Iraq, the Balkans are mountainous and, as the military likes to say, "foliated." In English, that's lots of trees — as in green, bushy things on sticks under which people and stuff can hide from aircraft and lay ambushes.

In short, in an era in which there is a cascade of stupid ideas tumbling forth from politicians, getting the United States involved militarily in the war in what was Yugoslavia is the stupidest.

In all seriousness, the human suffering in the Balkans is terrible. But so is the human suffering in Somalia and other places. The Balkans are Europe's problem. The NATO countries live next door and they are getting the refugees. You will notice, however, that they — the Europeans — have not been eager at all to get involved in the conflict militarily. That's because they know the terrain, the people, and the history.

There is no biff-bam, lickety-split quick and easy way to stop that war. Enmities run deep, memories are long, and the bloody history of the Balkans — stretching back centuries — is a terrible burden too many people refuse to bury and forget. Before it's over the Greeks and Turks may get into it.

For Americans to die in the Balkans would be as senseless and as useless as it was for Americans to die in Lebanon. Nothing would be accomplished by their deaths. The dead would be martyrs to political buffoonery.

We Americans should demand of both George Bush and Clinton that they take the American military forces out of the presidential campaign — just park them somewhere until after November. It is outrageous to involve the lives of our armed forces in making political gestures for campaign purposes. Bush threatening Iraq — Clinton calling for military force in Bosnia.

If Bush and Clinton want to have a macho-man contest, they can buy themselves a couple of sabers and have at it on a sandbar in the Mississippi.

I've been present for the entire World War II and postwar period. I'm tired of seeing American lives thrown away like poker chips on foreign tables by politicians playing the Great Game.

If the Europeans cannot keep peace in Europe, that's their problem. Twice in this century we have gone to war in Europe, and for the entire postwar period we bore a heavy burden protecting Europe.

If the Balkans war isn't to your taste, stay tuned. The Romanians and the Hungarians may go at it over Transylvania. Still other ethnic conflicts could arise. But they are all none of our business. It's time for the Yankee to come home, stay home, and turn off the TV.

Charley Reese's column is distributed by King Features Syndicate.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Fang was my all-time second favorite dog

I called my friend B.A., who's a fellow dog lover.

I stay in a lot of hotel rooms and that's where I see a lot of movies.

"There's a dog movie you need to see," I said to B.A. "I saw it in a hotel room. It's called 'Beethoven,' and it's about this big St. Bernard who takes up with a family.

Grizzard

"I don't want to spoil it for you, but the dog, who is named Beethoven, is dognapped by his own vet who is going to use him for a test on a new bullet.

But just in time the family was able to save Beethoven."

"I guess you haven't heard about Fang?" B.A. asked me.

Fang is B.A.'s German shepherd, the sweetest dog I've ever met. Kids pull on Fang's ears and tail, but she always seems to enjoy it.

"We had to put Fang to sleep," B.A. said.

I was startled.

"She had a stomach tumor," B. A. explained. "It was just a matter of time. We didn't want her to suffer."

Next to my dog, Catfish, the black Lab, Fang was my all-time second favorite dog. I knew her as long as I've known B.A. — 12 years.

I'm godfather to B.A.'s little girl and they named the recently arrived William Lewis Crew Anderson, in my honor.

And I looked upon Fang as my own, too. I threw her about a million tennis balls over the years in B.A.'s back yard.

You said to Fang, "Where's your ball?" and she would fetch it, then drop it in front of your feet and wait for your toss.

Let me tell you how smart Fang was. As well as the usual five or six tennis balls in B.A.'s back yard, there were also a lot of pine cones.

Fang would be in the house and B.A. would say to her, "Go get me a tennis ball."

Out the door Fang would go and she'd bring a tennis ball back to B.A.

Then, he'd say, "Go get me a pine cone."

And Fang would bring in a pine cone. Knowing the difference between a pine cone and a tennis ball is pretty smart stuff for a dog, I'd say.

B.A., and his wife, Nancy, visited me a few years back and they brought Fang, who promptly escaped from my back yard.

We went all over the neighborhood looking for her. No luck. A couple of days later I wrote a column about her, which turned up Fang, thank God.

Fang was standing in the street and a man saw her and took her home to his small apartment.

"She was such a sweet dog," the man said. "I was afraid if I left her there she'd get run over."

The man was going to put a classified ad in the paper, but then he read my column, and Fang was reunited with her family.

"She was a big part of my life," B.A. said. "Before I met Nancy, it was just me and Fang. She was a lot of company and a lot of comfort on some cold, rainy, lonely nights."

To me good dogs rank pretty high. I've had my share of them, and I've got one now. But one less than I had. I loved ol' Fang and I think she loved me. That will have to do me now that she's gone.

Gorbachev issues stinging blasts at Yeltsin a year after failed coup

MOSCOW (AP) — A year after the start of the failed coup that began his downfall, Mikhail S. Gorbachev launched a stinging attack Monday on President Boris Yeltsin for destroying the Soviet Union and failing to reform Russia.

"Where are we now? On the verge of economic collapse and total impoverishment," a tanned, confident Gorbachev said at a news conference to mark the first anniversary of the Aug. 18-21 coup attempt.

The former Kremlin leader seemed unwilling to part with his old dream of preserving the Soviet Union. He even quoted Vladimir Lenin at one point, saying that now "national interests were above those of the proletariat."

But Gorbachev also displayed anger and bitterness when a Russian journalist suggested he leave the capital and return to his native Stavropol region in southern Russia.

"I was president of a big country. . . . I ask you to bear this in mind," an emotional Gorbachev said, adding he could do more in Moscow.

The news conference came at the start of a week in which Russians will mark the tumultuous events that a year ago hastened the disintegration of the Soviet Union and Communist power.

On Aug. 18, 1991, hard-liners in the Communist Party, military and KGB who sought to preserve their power and reverse Gorbachev's reforms put him under house arrest at his summer home on the Black Sea.

The coup leaders sent tanks into Moscow, but Yeltsin defended democracy on the barricades in front of the Russian parliament, joined by tens of thousands of supporters.

Gorbachev returned to power after three days, but his authority was weakened by the Communist Party's leading role in the coup. He eventually resigned Dec. 25, without a Soviet Union to lead.

Although Yeltsin's actions brought Gorbachev back to power and perhaps saved his life, the former Soviet president has attacked Yeltsin's reforms.

On Monday, he called Yeltsin's economic reforms "utopian," an impractical attempt "to resolve the problems overnight, at one fell swoop."

"The individual is regarded as a cog, if not as a sheep," he said at the Gorbachev Foundation, the think tank he founded after resigning.

Gorbachev blasted Yeltsin's advisers as "too self-assured, too ambitious."

And he said Yeltsin's initiative Dec. 8 to form the Commonwealth of Independent States "crossed out" his reforms behind his back.

'Where are we now? On the verge of economic collapse and total impoverishment.'
— Mikhail S. Gorbachev

But Gorbachev, who became Communist Party leader in 1985, said a return to the past was improbable.

"We may be in for a painful zigzagging which quite often occurs in history," he said.

He said he would propose creating a new union of states — an idea that got support Monday from conservative Russian parliament chairman Ruslan Khasbulatov. Khasbulatov told a separate news conference Russia was "miles away from democracy."

"I generally support the idea of restoring the old economic links, coordinating structures ... We should be talking about a confederation, a common market," Khasbulatov said.

There have been persistent reports that Gorbachev somehow was behind the coup, possibly in a bid to preserve his own failing authority.

Former Soviet parliament speaker Anatoly Lukyanov, a college friend of Gorbachev's who was arrested in the plot, has said the former president knew of the plotters' actions beforehand.

"That's a lie from start to finish," Gorbachev replied Monday.

He said the plotters were afraid of losing power under the loose confederation of republics he had proposed.

He also lamented the battle now before Russia's Constitutional Court, in which former Communists are trying to overturn Yeltsin's ban on the party.

"They want to have a political trial, a trial of history," Gorbachev said of Russia's leaders. He said he would not testify "even if they put me in handcuffs."

Is Your Child Too Small?

Growing up always has its hazards, but for some children just the process of growing can be difficult. For these children, a normal growth rate does not occur because they lack an essential hormone.

By three years of age, children should grow at least two inches a year until they are 10 to 14 years of age, when they experience an even faster growth. If children are not growing at this rate and are smaller than children their own age, they may have hormone deficiencies.

Odessa Women's and Children's Hospital is offering a FREE Growth Screening for children. By taking an accurate measurement of height. We can determine if their height is normal for their age group. And, if below normal, further evaluation and assessment will be recommended.

Khmer Rouge refusal to disarm threatens U.N.-brokered peace accord

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (NYT) — Nearly a year after the United Nations brokered a peace accord intended to end Cambodia's decades of bloodshed and terror, the settlement is under threat of collapse because of the refusal of the Khmer Rouge to disarm its tens of thousands of rebel soldiers.

Some diplomats and Cambodians remain hopeful that the Maoist-inspired Khmer Rouge will begin at least a partial disarmament in time for elections next spring, but no one can be certain of the intentions of the secretive group.

In Phnom Penh, which has become a chaotic boom town with the arrival of more than 18,000 U.N. peacekeeping troops and civilian workers, there is a debate over what should be done if the Khmer Rouge remain obstinate and do not disarm. The alternatives include using armed U.N. troops to force the Khmer Rouge to cooperate.

The Khmer Rouge controlled the government in the 1970s and directed a "peasant revolution," a radical restructuring of Cambodian society. Estimates of the number of Cambodians who died range from hundreds of thousands to more than 1 million.

One of four warring factions that signed the peace accord, the Khmer Rouge have issued a set of demands intended to strengthen their hand in the elections and to dismantle the current Vietnamese-installed government.

During a visit to Phnom Penh this month, the U.S. representative to the United Nations, Edward J. Perkins, said in an interview that "I'm more hopeful than not hopeful" about the prospects for peace. "Of course," he added, "I don't know what is on the mind of the Khmer Rouge."

Diplomats say that any grounds for hope lies in the expectation that the Khmer Rouge will determine, on the basis of a cold calcuation of the facts and nothing else, that they must return to the peace process and begin to demobilize. According to this reasoning, Khmer Rouge leaders would otherwise risk being abandoned by their remaining allies, most importantly the Chinese government and the Thai military, and giving up whatever international legitimacy they have secured through the peace settlement.

Even if the current stalemate is resolved with the Khmer Rouge, however, diplomats and many Cambodians agree that the peace process is almost certain to bog down again and again as the Khmer Rouge and other factions demand new concessions.

It is impossible to find anyone here who believes that the guerrillas of the Khmer Rouge will ever simply lay down their arms and disappear into the jungle, even if their leaders do agree to rejoin the peace process this year.

Despite so many dire predictions about Cambodia's future, the presence of the large U.N. force has produced in many Cambodians a sense of relief, even of opportunity, that they had never experienced.

There have been repeated cease-fire violations in recent months by the Khmer Rouge, including shooting attacks on U.N. helicopters flying over their territory.

ANC rejects amnesty plan; 18 die in weekend violence

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The African National Congress said Monday it rejects a blanket amnesty for government security forces because it would absolve killers and torturers.

The country's main black opposition group was responding to a call last week from the white minority government for amnesty for all members of the security forces and black resistance groups for any politically motivated offenses.

The ANC said an amnesty could only be granted to security force members who provided information to help expose past crimes and halt political violence.

"To absolve the South African military or police of capital crimes, torture or ill treatment through a general amnesty law places its members above the law," the ANC said in a statement.

The ANC wants a full disclosure of any illegal acts by the security forces. Government forces have been implicated in killings and beatings of anti-apartheid activists in the past.

"Crimes against humanity are the most serious crime in international law. The way a general amnesty is being presented equates the acts of those who opposed apartheid with the acts carried out to maintain this vile system," the ANC said.

The ANC pulled out of power-sharing talks in June to protest political violence in black townships. It is demanding an interim government and other concessions as the condition for returning to the talks.

In war, famine, 1 Somali's life turns into dust

By Greg Myre
Associated Press writer

MOGADISHU, Somalia — Before Somalia shattered into a million pieces, Yusuf Ali Giumla wore a suit to work, drove a late-model pickup and owned a six-room, whitewashed house in the same neighborhood as the president.

Today, he and 4,000 other displaced Somalis live on the termite-infested sands surrounding La-Foole Hospital, an oasis offering food and shelter to the destitute in this starving African nation.

"We never dreamed something this bad could happen to Somalia," said Ali Giumla, 48, an environmentalist trained in the former Soviet Union and Bowling Green University outside Toledo, Ohio.

From afar, Somalia is an all-too-familiar African tale of war, drought, famine and ceaseless misery. Up close, it is a story of the broken dreams of people like Ali Giumla, a man who no longer thinks of his future.

"We are just trying to survive," said Ali Giumla, who shares a corrugated tin shack with his wife and five children, aged two months to 10 years. "I cannot think about rebuilding my life yet. The future is too unpredictable."

The hospital-turned-refugee camp is filled with the elderly too weak to stand and listless, stick-figure children. They have migrated to the camp, 12 miles south of Mogadishu, from the countryside, where food has run out and no relief has arrived.

About 100 men, women and children showed up Saturday on foot after a week-long journey from Baidoa, 180 miles across the desert.

Exhausted, the most recent arrivals sleep on a cement patio, too tired to imitate the other residents who have built conical shelters from the branches of thorn trees, topped with aqua-colored plastic sheeting donated by the United Nations.

About four people a day die at the hospital, most of them children, Dr. Hawa Abdi Diblawe said Sunday in a brief interview between operations.

But, she added proudly, "No one died yesterday. It was a happy day for us."

The sad days are more common, and children aren't the only victims.

Somali women prefer brightly colored head scarves of red, green or purple. But a number at this camp wear white, the traditional garb for recent widows.

To add protein to the diet, Dr. Hawa often manages to find $50 to buy a camel, which immediately becomes camel soup.

High school seniors should apply for financial aid now, official says

Staff report

High school seniors who plan to seek financial aid to attend college next year need to think about applying for loans and scholarships now.

"If you need help paying for college, get started applying for it now," said Lydia Marshall, senior vice president of the Washington, D.C., Sallie Mae (Student Loan Marketing Association) office.

Sallie Mae is the nation's largest provider of financing for higher education. The corporation buys education loans from banks and other lenders and provides a variety of education-related financial products and services to lenders, schools, and students and their parents.

"Financial aid is awarded to students representing a broader range of income than you might think," said Dennis A. Kernahan, also a senior vice president at the Sallie Mae national office.

"Income is only one of the factors used to determine eligibility for financial aid," he said. "Other factors include the number of children in college, the total cost of the tuition, and the family's current circumstances, such as a recent job loss or major illness.

Kernahan said money held in certain retirement accounts — such as 401(k)s, IRAs and Keoghs — won't be counted in the formula for calculating family need, he said.

"Most schools want to allocate their funds early so that students will have a better idea of how much they have to pay before making their final college selection," Ms. Marshall said.

To get started, students should select colleges they would like to attend and begin requesting financial aid application forms. Forms also are available from high school guidance counselors.

The application will determine a student's eligibility for federally sponsored grants and loans, work-study programs, and in some cases, the college's own resources and private aid programs.

Ms. Marshall notes, however, that the earliest that loan applications may be mailed is Jan. 1 because of the requirement of reporting the previous year's income.

"Forms mailed any earlier than the rules allow will be returned, and valuable time will be wasted during the return and resubmission process," Ms. Marshall said.

Between now and the Jan. 1 deadline, students should also pursue local scholarships given through civic groups and businesses.

Students will usually be notified between March and May if they qualify for aid.

Greenwood pupils hit books; Midland waits another summer week

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

While Midland public school students were enjoying their last Monday of summer vacation, Greenwood pupils filed into classrooms for their first day of school.

Next Monday is the first day of school for Midland students, with the exception of Midland High School students who officially begin school next Thursday because of a new program extending MHS teacher inservice days.

Midland city workers have been checking school crossing signs, and Midland public school teachers are preparing for the onslaught of the 21,000 to 22,000-plus district-wide enrollment expected.

As Midland Independent School District students went about summer activities another day, 1,315 students met their teachers and hit the books in Greenwood.

First-day enrollment was up for the grade school (kindergarten through fifth grade). "We picked up 23 students by adding the pre-kindergarten," said a spokesman in the elementary school office.

Enrollment for Greenwood Independent School District was a little bit lower than what was expected, according to superintendent Quentin Burnett.

"We expect at least another 20 students before the dust settles. We had 29 no-shows in kinder-

Lee student tries college credits early

■ Midlander enters scholarship program at the University of North Texas in Denton.

By Michael Kashgarian

The last two years of high school for Ashley Kumar will be more like college. In fact, it will be college.

Kumar

Actually, it will be both.

"You're doing four years work in two years," said Ashley, 16.

Beginning this fall, Ashley — who recently completed her sophomore year at Lee High School — will be taking classes at the University of North Texas in Denton.

Ashley is one of about 200 students statewide entering the scholarship program offered by the Texas Academy of Mathematics and Sciences.

"Basically, I'll be taking biology, chemistry, pre-cal (calculus) and English" the first semester, she said. "You go take these with university kids."

The program is aimed at two fields of study, bio-medical, in which Ashley will be enrolled, and physics and engineering.

"It's going to be a lot of work, but it's going to be a lot of fun also," Ashley said.

After two years of university studies, Ashley will receive a high school diploma as well as the college credits she earned.

After that she plans to continue her education but hasn't considered a school yet.

"I'd like to be a doctor, leaning toward pediatrics ... because I really like helping people, and I like being around kids," she said.

This summer, Ashley received some experience in the medical field when she spent two months in Ann Arbor, Mich., working on a research program in the nephrology department at the University of Michigan Medical School.

Ashley, who was recruited for the college program because of her high Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test (PSAT) scores, said she didn't have to think twice about accepting the opportunity.

Voters face Oct. 4 deadline to register for November election

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

More than 3,400 voter registrations in Midland County have been canceled because voters failed to update changes of address, according to the elections administrator.

Last week was the deadline for voters — who moved and did not receive a new blue voter certificate mailed in December and January — to notify the registrar to prevent cancellation.

"We purged 3,415 and originally had 5,685" (voters with new addresses), said Bettye Calvert, Midland County Elections Administrator.

"That's a pretty good correction ratio," she said.

"I think most of the ones left off did move out of town, but there are a sizeable number of Midlanders that will be unhappy campers on Election Day because we canceled them," Ms. Calvert said.

But that doesn't mean there isn't time to re-register. The deadline to register to vote in time for the Nov. 3 election is Oct. 4.

Those persons who are not sure if they are on the voter registration rolls in Midland County can "come in to our office or call, and we will be glad to look them up and see if they are current," Ms. Calvert said.

The Elections Administration office is located at 709 W. Washington Ave.

Class accents speech patterns in effort to control Southern drawl

By Christopher Sullivan
Associated Press writer

GREENVILLE, S.C. — Stories told in David Pence's class are often tragedies on a small stage. If they sound comic, you must not be from around here.

The class is called "How to Control Your Southern Accent."

There was the story of the Southern auto racer, trying to buy clothing in California, who couldn't make the vendor understand that "rice wire" translated to "race wear."

There was the pair of travelers, far from their home in the Piedmont, who ordered "ahss tay." The waitress begged their pardon. "Ahss tay, plaze," they repeated, meaning the cool drink made from steeped tea leaves. The waitress tapped her pencil on the order pad.

"Finally they said, 'Can we have a soda?' " explained Pence, a speech pathologist by day who has taught the evening course at Greenville Technical College for 3½ years.

He smiled in telling the iced tea saga but said accents are not a laughing matter. A student in his first class burst into tears.

"All these handkerchiefs came out," he recalled, as the woman sobbed, "I've been harassed about my accent so much. ... You don't know how upsetting it is."

The Encyclopedia of Southern Culture says Southerners are "often schizophrenic about their speech" — proud of its color and expressiveness, but "insecure" about being heard outside their region. Some parents, it adds, try to expunge Southern features from their children's speech.

The goal of Pence's six-week, $65 class is straightforward but hardly simple: to give his students a choice in how they communicate, especially with non-Southerners.

"If people start listening to how you're saying something, instead of what you're saying, then you're losing effectiveness," he said.

But in a region wary that Yankee influences are already spreading like the unkillable kudzu vine, Pence's effort sounds to some like "Gomer Pyle Meets Henry Higgins" — and they hear snickers.

"Go home. We'll never miss you!" declared one of several hate letters he's received. ("I'm from

Redistricting hearing raises possibility of new primaries

AUSTIN (AP) — A state lawyer urged a federal court Monday to order new Senate primaries if that's what it takes to put a Legislature-approved redistricting map in place.

Secretary of State John Hannah has directed that the Legislature's map be substituted in the November general election for the plan used in the March primary elections.

The primary map was ordered by a federal three-judge panel in Austin, but the Legislature's plan subsequently won approval from a Washington three-judge panel.

Republicans and others are challenging the order by Hannah, a Democrat. The Austin panel of judges took the matter under advisement, and lawyers anticipate a decision this week.

Assistant Attorney General Renea Hicks said Hannah didn't have the authority to order new primaries, so he devised a different method for using the Legislature's Senate map in November. Hannah's order has been submitted to the U.S. Justice Department for approval.

"Are you inviting us to order you to have a primary?" asked U.S. District Judge Harry Hudspeth, one of the judges presiding over the case in Austin.

Hicks said the state has concerns about minority turnout in new primaries, but that such elections would be preferable to forcing the state to use a "tainted" map.

He suggested as another option holding over the old Senate for a period of time.

U.S. District Judge James Nowlin of Austin drew up the plan used in the primaries. But he stepped down from the case after he was reprimanded by a panel of federal judges who said he violated judicial rules by getting secret help from a Republican lawmaker.

Hudspeth replaced Nowlin on the panel, which also includes federal judges Walter Smith Jr. and Will Garwood.

Hannah and others have said the Legislature's plan is fairer to minorities. It is favored by Democratic leaders.

But Republicans say minorities would be hurt by changing to a different map from that used in the primary elections. The primary map also was expected to give the GOP increased strength in the Senate.

"Our first priority is to see the rights of minorities are protected and the state's will is worked," Hicks said after the hearing.

SPEAK: Speech class accents Southern drawl

(From 1B)

Arkansas; that's considered Southern," Pence protests, his own native twang threading faintly through his speech, like the still-blue seams of jeans bleached to white.)

Another letter writer stormed that he'd rather hear "someone from central Georgia read the phone book than listen to Beethoven. . . . To my mind you are participating in the destruction of a priceless piece of Americana."

An editorial in The News and Courier of Charleston, S.C., took note of Pence's class and just chuckled.

"Can y'all stand it?" the newspaper scoffed. Southern speech "has character and resonance that sets it apart from the unaccented, homogenized speech that afflicts most of the nation."

No argument there from Pence. But what about those who don't want their accent to set them apart?

Kathy Young, an executive secretary who's taking the course for the second time, said, "There's no room in the professional world for a hillbilly secretary" — a perception she hears reflected in Northerners' comments and blames on television.

Portrayals of rubes, from "The Beverly Hillbillies" to the "Dukes of Hazzard" and beyond, have stereotyped those who use any of the 25 or so distinct Southern dialects that researchers have counted. Even Yale- and Oxford-educated Bill Clinton didn't escape the "Bubba" tag in New York.

Pence gave a more positive reason for wanting to control a Southern accent: As major corporations locate in this booming corner of the Sunbelt — BMW, the latest, announced in June it would build a $250 million auto plant outside Greenville — getting and keeping a job depend on being understood.

It was the influx of foreign companies that indirectly led Pence to offer his course.

Typical clients he sees in his private practice are stutterers or stroke patients relearning speech, but a few years ago Pence began offering foreign-born executives help in pronouncing English.

Not long afterward, he said, "I started getting people saying, 'Can you work on my Southern accent?' "

One of those was Nancy Humphries. "In 1987, I was crowned Miss South Carolina," she said, and state pageant officials gave her some advice. "To go to Miss America, they wanted me to have more of a general American accent."

"It's 'How to Control' — not eradicate, destroy, eliminate — 'Your Accent'," Pence said. And yet he reflected some of the region's linguistic schizophrenia when asked if his class wasn't aiding in the deconstruction of Dixie.

"On a limited basis," he replied. "It's allowing someone their choice to become homogenized or not. I can go into it (an anywhere-USA accent) when I need to, get what I need to be done, then I can go back to my Southern lifestyle, who I am . . .

"I love a Southern accent."

SCHOOL: Midland has another week of summer

garten, and enrollment was low in high school," he said, noting students moving in from other states are often surprised "we start this early."

Total enrollment for GISD on the first day of school was 1,315 (632 in kindergarten through fifth grade; 356 in sixth, seventh and eighth grades; and 327 in grades nine through 12).

Kindergarten and first-grade teachers donned colorfully painted T-shirts depicting gingerbread men, huge peppermint candies and hearts.

Elementary school students sported bright name tags, and the hallway walls and classroom doors were covered in artwork welcoming pupils.

"Students were very excited today. We had nothing but smiling faces — and no tears. The students were all happy to be here. I can't speak for the kindergarteners though," said second-grade teacher Shari Harrison, while her young charges enjoyed a late afternoon recess.

Second-grader Amber Sellers, 7, said she was nervous, "make that very nervous" about coming to school, even though she rode on the bus with her teacher. When asked if she was happy that school started, she said, "No, staying home all day is more fun."

Fellow second-grader Adrian Kyle, 7, said she had mixed emotions about the first day of school. "I was happy to start school, but I felt sad about leaving my friends in Crane," she said. The new Greenwood resident just beamed and nodded when asked if she expected to make a lot of new friends.

Aside from first-day jitters, superintendent Burnett said "everything went smoothly — smoother than any opening day I've ever been associated with. There is always some confusion, especially with secondary schedules for the first 40 minutes until they get ironed out."

After school ended, Burnett said, "Now the real test is getting everyone home without overlooking somebody."

would really be good for me," she said. "I'm just really excited about it. I'm really glad I got the opportunity to go."

Because of her stay in Michigan, Ashley said she isn't apprehensive about being away from home. She's not apprehensive about being thrust into higher academics, either.

"I'm pretty sure I'll be able to adjust," she said with confidence.

While at North Texas, Ashley will be staying in a dormitory specifically for the program's students.

"Dorm life. I'm excited to see how that works . . . you have to take care of yourself," she said.

Ashley said she will naturally miss her parents, Anil and Mamta Kumar, and particularly her brother, 9-year-old Rishi.

But she won't miss her last two years of regular high school.

"What's to miss?" she asked.

"There's not much to miss. You can go out with your friends there . . .," she said, adding that the school has their own prom.

And the program enables Ashley to visit home once a month.

Mrs. Kumar said the family will miss Ashley.

"She's going (to college) two years earlier than planned. We were not prepared for that, but she's mature for her age," Ms. Kumar said.

But that doesn't negate Mrs. Kumar's happiness.

"We feel very excited about it . . . and think it is a very good opportunity," she said.

■ George defense decides not to call Gates

WASHINGTON — The presentation of testimony in the Iran-Contra trial of Clair E. George ended suddenly Monday as the defense reversed itself and decided not to call as a witness Robert M. Gates, the current head of the CIA.

The jury will begin deliberating Thursday in the case of George, who is charged with lying to Congress and investigators about the agency's knowledge of the Iran-Contra affair as it unraveled in the final months of 1986. At the time, Gates was deputy director of Central Intelligence, the No. 2 official in the agency and George's immediate superior.

His testimony was to have been a final highlight in the five-week trial of George, the most senior CIA official charged in the Iran-Contra affair. But Richard A. Hibey, George's lawyer, said abruptly in court this morning that he would not have Gates testify.

The trial then quickly wound down as both sides completed their final testimony. U.S. District Court Judge Royce C. Lamberth said that the lawyers would present closing arguments on Wednesday and that the jurors would begin deliberating after he gives them legal instructions on Thursday morning.

■ Court denies 'Soldier of Fortune' appeal

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — A federal appeals court has upheld a $4.37 million judgment against Soldier of Fortune magazine for printing a mercenary ad involved in a contract killing.

A three-judge panel of the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals rejected the magazine's free speech argument. Judge R. Lanier Anderson III wrote in Friday's 2-1 decision that "it is well settled that the First Amendment does not protect commercial speech related to illegal activity."

The ruling upheld the judgment in favor of brothers Michael and Ian Braun, whose father was killed in 1985.

"This is not particularly good news for the First Amendment rights of print journalism," said Alex McCall, director of special projects for the magazine in Boulder, Colo.

The magazine's attorney, Chad Morriss of Montgomery, said Monday he will ask all of the judges on the 11th Circuit to review the case.

■ State Department replaces Yugoslav flag

WASHINGTON — Reflecting Bush administration sentiment, the State Department on Monday removed the flag of Yugoslavia from its lobby and hoisted the flags of Bosnia-Herzegovina, Croatia and Slovenia.

For most of the day, in the confusing proliferation of new nations, Serbia's banner also was included in the display of foreign flags.

It was taken down at day's end, embarrassed officials explaining the maintenance department had its signals crossed.

■ QE2 captain: Liner moved at safe speed

BOSTON — The Queen Elizabeth 2 was moving fast, but not too fast, when it hit bottom earlier this month, its captain and the local pilot guiding the cruise ship at the time testified Monday.

The 937-foot luxury liner had increased speed to 24 knots the night of Aug. 7 before striking submerged rocks off the coast of southern Massachusetts. There were no injuries, but 1,815 passengers were evacuated at sea.

Twenty-four nautical miles per hour equals about 28 mph. The ship suffered extensive hull gashes and is in drydock here for repairs.

Coastal pilot John Hadley, who was brought aboard the QE2 to navigate through a relatively narrow passage near Martha's Vineyard, said he normally would pass through the area slower with such a large ship, but he felt secure because of the QE2 has an excellent crew.

"I considered it the standard operating procedure of the vessel," Hadley said at a Coast Guard hearing. "The QE2 is probably the epitome of bridge management."

Nautical charts indicated a depth of 39 feet in the area, ample for the cruise ship whose hull extends 32 feet below the surface under normal conditions.

■ Balloon crews ready for trans-Atlantic race

BANGOR, Maine — Five teams of balloonists from the United States and Europe await the green light from meteorologists to begin an unprecedented race where the finish line is vague and danger constant.

The five two-man teams in the first trans-Atlantic balloon race are vying for a two-foot-tall bronze trophy and the chance to become a ballooning legend.

Entrants say a safe ocean crossing by all five balloons would be a prize in itself. Only five of the 16 previous attempts to cross the Atlantic by balloon were successful; five ended in tragedy.

The window of departure for the race began at midnight Saturday, but race director Alan Noble of Britain said weather won't permit the balloons to take off before Wednesday.

The racers are hoping for a band of low pressure followed by a relatively tranquil air mass, then another low pressure system a couple of days later, Noble said.

Such conditions would propel the balloonists toward Europe without subjecting them to vicious storms that could spell disaster. The 3,000-mile trip is expected to take three to five days.

Clinton team begins retaliation campaign

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (NYT) — Aides to Gov. Bill Clinton began a campaign of long-distance retaliation Monday, issuing sharp challenges to the Republicans to provide a counterpoint to the convention in Houston.

George Stephanopoulos, communications director for the Clinton campaign, told reporters in Little Rock that President Bush should dismiss two prominent Republicans — U.S. Treasurer Catalina V. Villalpando and Robert A. Mosbacher, President Bush's campaign chairman — because both referred Sunday to Clinton's personal life.

President Bush has said he would dismiss anyone in his campaign who injected what he called "sleaze" issues into the contest.

"He's going to have a busy day," Stephanopoulos said.

On Sunday, Mosbacher said at a breakfast meeting with delegates in Houston that Clinton's marital background "should be one of the yardsticks" by which voters judge him.

And Ms. Villalpando, whose signature appears on U.S. currency, told New Jersey delegates that Clinton was a "skirt-chaser" and not qualified to be president.

Clinton campaign workers distributed articles referring to both comments at a briefing for reporters in Arkansas Monday.

■ More national news/2D

Ms. Villalpando issued a statement Monday apologizing "deeply" for her remarks. Mosbacher said that he had made his comment only in response to a question directed to him and that the Clinton campaign officials had taken his remarks out of context.

The Democrats have made arrangements to respond quickly to events at the Republican convention, dispatching campaign and party aides to Houston and purchasing advertising time on television stations there.

Clinton campaign officials confirmed Monday that their "response" advertising in Houston would be intended to catch the attention of Republicans and the thousands of journalists reporting on them. The advertising could begin as soon as today.

Ronald H. Brown, the Democratic national chairman, held a joint news conference in Houston on Monday with Betsey Wright, a top official of the Clinton campaign, saying the Democrats were on hand to "set the record straight, to respond, to indicate that this is not 1988 revisited for Democrats."

"We are not a turn-the-other-cheek party anymore," he said. "We are going to respond, and respond in kind."

Ms. Wright added that the Republicans had "made it clear that they're here as much to attack Governor Clinton, his family, his cat, his record, as they are to tout their own proposals."

Clinton's aides are convinced that the Republican strategy will be to deflate Clinton's current popularity by raising questions about his record in government and his trustworthiness. So the Democrats are preparing to do the same to Bush.

Clinton spent Monday working on Arkansas government business, including a plan to erase a $20 million shortage in the state's Department of Human Services.

He told reporters that the remarks from Ms. Villalpando and Mosbacher, a former Cabinet official, had come from administration officials who "desperately, desperately, desperately want to hold on to their jobs in Washington."

Referring to Bush's comments, Clinton said, "He says this has no place in the campaign. Then his people come right back with it. That's typical."

Firefighters struggle against California blazes

Associated Press

Firefighters in California's Gold Rush country struggled Monday to catch up with a wind-driven blaze that chased more than 300 people from their homes, and Oregon fire crews turned their attention to new fires started by lightning.

In the foothills of California's Sierra Nevada, more than 1,400 firefighters contained only 20 percent of a timber and brush fire that had covered more than 1,200 acres three miles east of the town of San Andreas, according to the California Department of Forestry.

Between 300 and 400 people had been told to evacuate their homes since late Sunday, the Calaveras County Sheriff's department said.

The fire was being stoked through rugged terrain by dry wind blowing at more than 12 mph and temperatures above 100, said CDF spokeswoman Kathy Villegas.

"The wind's whipping," Villegas said. "The last we heard was that it's blowing up-canyon toward major communities."

Villegas said the fire was moving toward Mountain Ranch, one of several towns in the one-time gold mining region.

One minor injury was reported, but no buildings had burned in the area 50 miles southeast of Sacrmento. The cause of the fire, reported Sunday afternoon, was not yet known.

In south-central Oregon, firefighters had finished digging lines around two fires that had burned about 700 acres of timber in the Fremont National Forest near Lakeview.

The crews turned their attention Monday to central and northeastern Oregon, where lightning started several new fires on the Deschutes and Ochoco national forests and the Warm Springs Indian Reservation.

Fires in the Deschutes forest ranged in size from a few acres to 60 to 70 acres, said John Keith, spokesman for the Northwest Interagency Coordination Center in Portland.

A fire near the north-central Washington state town of Okanogan that had swept across 1,600 acres of sagebrush and grass was contained Sunday and Bureau of Indian Affairs crews were already reseeding Monday, said David Nee, BIA fire management officer.

Elsewhere in Northern California, firefighters mopped up after a blaze on 175 acres east of Clearlake, about 80 miles north of San Francisco. The fire, blamed on children playing with matches, briefly forced about 40 people to evacuate Sunday. A car and garage were burned.

In Southern California, firefighters on Monday controlled the last of three weekend brush fires that blackened at least 190 acres. The flames had threatened many homes but only two were reported damaged.

Strikebound paper tests for town crier

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The strikebound Pittsburgh Post-Gazette says it will try getting the news out the old-fashioned way: a town crier shouting the latest from a street corner.

The newspaper will hold auditions for the job today. Qualifications include a loud voice, a sense of humor and a willingness to parade in public in colonial garb: powdered wig, tricorn hat, brocade jacket and knickers, white stockings and ruffled shirt.

The crier supplies the shoes; the paper will supply the silver buckles.

Delivery drivers, represented by Teamsters Local 211, went on strike May 17 against the Pittsburgh Press Co., which publishes the Press and prints and distributes the Post-Gazette under a joint operating agreement. Informal talks are scheduled for today.

The town crier's job was announced over the weekend.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Powerful friends help you overcome obstacles that have slowed you down in the past. By late fall, free-lance projects or work done on speculation will give you a nice financial cushion. Moving to smaller quarters would also help reduce expenses. Welcome a new addition to the family circle in early 1993. Romance becomes increasingly happy as spring approaches. A long-desired vacation may be less expensive than you think. Read various travel guides.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actors Patrick Swayze and Robert Redford, director Roman Polanski, Olympian Rafer Johnson.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Trying to force the pace at work will only create chaos. Continue to work quietly behind the scenes. Remember, it is not the hare but the tortoise that wins the race!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Make your motto: mind over matter. Discard any negative habits or childhood fears. Create a more appealing home or work atmosphere for yourself by adding a few plants and splashes of color.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A personality clash could remind you of two trains colliding head-on. Listen quietly while someone lets off steam. An athletic workout will help relieve the tension.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You can expect good things to happen for you financially now. Seize an opportunity to call the shots and name your price. A fun social event will only be the icing on the cake.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may have to strap yourself in and hold on tight today. Something or someone is about to blow. You would be wise to keep a low profile while the fur flies.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Anything designed to improve joint assets should get the seal of approval. If people want to do nice things for you, why not let them? Donate time to a charitable enterprise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The emphasis today is on establishing healthier habits. Steer clear of booze and fattening snacks. Do not let false pride keep you from accepting a last-minute invitation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Keeping up with world affairs will make you a more interesting conversationalist. A disappointment could lead you to rethink your goals and values.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Welcome an opportunity to work with bigwigs. Publicize your special talents in a subtle way. Go to work on your image. A new work wardrobe could be worth its weight in gold.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Sticking your neck out on a dare is just plain foolish. A streamlined work schedule will allow you to accomplish great things in record time. Enlist the help of your colleagues.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Contact important clients early in the day when you feel fresh and clear-headed. Romance finds you when you least expect it. Socialize with people who can advance your career.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Working in seclusion proves particularly beneficial today. You are well aware that being alone is not the same as being lonely. Perfecting a technique will give you more time for relaxation.

TODAY'S CHILDREN will want to run before they even know how to walk. They have a clear vision of what they hope to accomplish and are eager to get right to business. Wise parents will point out the need for proper preparation and training. Optimistic and flexible, these Leos sometimes lack patience with less adventurous types. A stable home life means everything to these family-oriented lions. They must be careful to choose a spouse who has the same priorities.

Opening lead: Two of ◇

The power of a 4-3 fit in a major suit was espoused by the late Alphonse "Sonny" Moyse during his days as editor of The Bridge World This hand, from a recent tournament in Crans-Montana, Switzerland, is unusual in that declarer can get home by a dummy reversal in a Moysian fit!

South's one-spade overcall will be frowned upon by purists. It did, however, propel North-South quickly to a game which could have been made.

West led a diamond and, after banking a second diamond trick, on which West discarded a heart, East shifted to the jack of trumps. Declarer must win in hand with the queen and cash the ace of trumps, which removes East's remaining trump.

After playing off the ace and king of clubs, declarer ruffs a club, returns to dummy with the king of hearts and ruffs another club, establishing a long club in dummy. Now declarer has a couple of ways to get home.

One is to cash two rounds of hearts and the king of trumps for a total of 10 tricks. With the hand counted out, however, there is an even prettier ending available. Declarer crosses to the board with the ace of hearts, cashes the king of trumps and leads the established club. West ruffs, but now must bring South's queen of hearts to life as the fulfilling trick.

Sonny would have liked the hand.

Las Vegas star Wayne Newton files for bankruptcy protection

RENO, Nev. — Wayne Newton, the singer-actor who began as a child star and rose to fame as a headliner on the Las Vegas Strip, has filed for bankruptcy protection over an estimated $20 million in debts.

Newton

Newton's assets listed in the Chapter 11 petition filed in U.S. Bankruptcy Court late Friday have not yet been appraised, but "pretty much include everything he has," said his lawyer, Gerald Gordon.

The holdings include Newton's Arabian horse ranch, his mansion on the outskirts of Las Vegas and a Lake Tahoe property. Accountants and appraisers were to value his assets in the next few weeks.

Newton's largest debt is $8.3 million owed to Northeastern Bank of Pennsylvania, representing a series of loans, Gordon said.

Newton, 50, gained fame with the 1963 hit "Danke Schoen." He performs about 20 weeks a year at the Las Vegas Hilton and lives on his 52-acre estate, Casa de Shenandoah.

The entertainer makes millions of dollars a year, but some of his investments have gotten him into trouble.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The Oak Ridge Boys say singing gospel music on a Public Broadcasting Service special brought back good memories of the old days.

The Oak Ridge Boys were a gospel group until switching to country in the 1970s and turning out hits such as "Elvira" and "Lucky Moon."

The 90-minute special "The Oak Ridge Boys With Emmylou Harris in Concert" will be broadcast on PBS stations late this month and in early September.

Richard Sterban, bass singer for the quartet, said doing some gospel tunes on the show "gave us a chance to dig back into our roots. It gave us a chance to do what we grew up doing . . ."

There also is country, bluegrass and rock 'n' roll on the special, which was taped four months ago in Atlanta.

The show, to be aired during PBS pledge drives, is scheduled to be broadcast again next spring.

GLASGOW, Scotland — Princess Diana on Monday urged people not to judge alcoholics and drug addicts.

Speaking to the 36th International Congress on Alcohol and Drug Abuse, Diana said addicts are often highly sensitive and creative people.

"Sadly, many people still regard addictions as a moral weakness," said the 31-year-old princess. "A number of these self-appointed moralists even choose to make such judgments from behind a cloud of cigarette smoke."

She said people with lively imaginations often hide in fantasy for protection from the world.

"Imaginative children lose themselves in fantasy worlds through stories. Later they might chose to escape through Ecstasy, uppers, alcohol and addiction," she said. Ecstasy is the mood-altering drug MDMA, often sold illegally in dance clubs.

Diana is married to Prince Charles, heir to the British throne. A recent book portrayed the marriage as loveless and Diana as suicidally unhappy and suffering from an eating disorder. As is customary with British royalty, she has refused to comment.

ATLANTA — Rap singer Hammer joined volunteers in the kitchen of a shelter for the homeless where he served up fried chicken, corn and french fries.

The visit to the Atlanta Union Mission before a concert Sunday helped launch a USA Harvest hunger relief drive.

USA Harvest, based in Louisville, Ky., delivers donated foods nationwide to homeless shelters. Hammer became involved in the project in May after performing at a Hunger Relief concert in Louisville.

"It's been a team effort here today just to continue with the program we started," Hammer said before he began helping other volunteers unload an estimated 40,000 pounds of frozen biscuits.

More than 600,000 pounds of food has been donated through Hammer's efforts, said Stan Curtis, USA Harvest chairman.

MONTEVIDEO, Minn. — He moves a little more slowly now. Sometimes, he tells the same joke twice. But at age 89, Bob Hope still can make an audience laugh.

Hope had several thousand people cheering and clapping Saturday evening at the Montevideo High School. Hope and his wife, Dolores, also sang a few songs. The performance was a benefit for a building project at the Johnson Memorial Home, a nursing home in Dawson.

Hope said he still plays golf "every chance I get." And asked if he would go to entertain the troops this Christmas if the country went to war, he responded, "You bet I would!"

Before Hope's monologue, he was shown on video performing in vaudeville acts, on radio, in movies and on television with Bing Crosby, Dorothy Lamour, Jack Benny, Jimmy Durante, Lucille Ball and many others.

DEAR ABBY

Older bride's shower is her chance to make a splash

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dear Abby is on a two-week vacation. Following is a selection of some of her favorite past letters from 1972 and '73.)

By Abigail Van Buren

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I can't believe I'm actually writing a "Dear Abby" letter, but a friend has just put me on the spot, and I don't know how to handle it.

Sarah is a 59-year-old widow who is marrying a 72-year-old widower she met on a cruise last winter. They are being married soon. She was just here and is as excited as a teen-ager. I think she's flipped her lid. She wants a bridal shower! Abby, Sarah has everything she needs, and she can afford to buy anything she wants, but she insists it's not the gifts, it's just the idea of having a shower.

She said when she was married the first time, things were rough and she never had a shower, and now she'd like one. Sarah is such a dear and generous person I hate to let her down, but, Abby, how can I invite women to a bridal shower for a 59-year-old bride who has everything? — ON THE SPOT IN PASSAIC

DEAR ON: Easy. Make it a gag gift shower. Ask everyone to bring a cute little inexpensive present for the 59-year-old bride of a 72-year-old groom. The possibilities are endless.

DEAR ABBY: I am a single girl living in New York City. I have my own car and I am dating a guy who doesn't have a car. It takes about an hour and 15 minutes from his house to mine using public transportation, but it's only 15 minutes by car. I find myself in the position of picking him up and taking him home whenever we go out.

Compounding the problem is the fact that I must use the toll bridge to get to and from his house, which adds up considerably for me.

I find this a very difficult adjustment, as I have been accustomed to having my dates pick me up and take me home. Should I continue this pickup and delivery service? He's not a native New Yorker and is afraid to take the subway late at night. — DOOR-TO-DOOR SERVICE

DEAR DOOR: Thirty minutes in an automobile beats two and a half hours in a subway, no matter who does the driving. If he hasn't offered to pay for the toll, suggest it. If he can't or won't pay for it, you will have to decide whether dating him is worth the portal-to-portal service you're providing.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "GRATEFUL BEYOND WORDS": Most small-town clergymen are overworked and underpaid, so since you say you can "well afford it," offer him a gift of cash. If he wishes to donate it to the church, let it be his option. Your letter indicates that your clergyman went far above and beyond the call of duty on your behalf, so be as generous with him as he was with you. (And if he's "insulted," you can blame me.)

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." AT WIT'S END

Path of the greedy always turns out to be a dead end

By Erma Bombeck

Bombeck

From my front porch I have a view of a mountaintop home that would make Robin Leach salivate. By day, it is pointed out by sightseeing buses and enjoys celebrity status. By night, it sinks into anonymity with a single light burning inside.

The first reaction of people to the dwelling is, "Wow! What must it be like to live in a house like that!"

The owner wouldn't know. It is one of the homes of Leona Helmsley, who is serving time for tax evasion.

About a mile and a half down the road from me is another home cocooned within the safety of a wall that spans a square block. It is accessorized by an Olympic-size swimming pool and winding drives. The bus slows down here too. The owner is S&L kingpin Charlie Keating, who is also not in residence. He is serving time for fraud.

I wish every young person in America who is in pursuit of success would take that sightseeing bus and learn from what they see. Both houses should be proclaimed national monuments to greed. Neither resident "needed the money." They brushed shoulders with success for years, but they didn't recognize it. It seemed too plain, too ordinary, too easy, too accessible to be the Holy Grail to which they aspired.

Most people don't know when they are rich enough, thin enough, important enough, powerful enough or happy enough. They keep searching for it when they passed it up two miles back.

If someone gave them a good marriage, healthy children, a job, food on the table and a roof over their heads, they'd say, "Is this it? Are you saying this is as good as it gets?" Fall on your knees.

The problem is, crime pays. It is well rewarded with book contracts, mini-series, big lecture fees and the covers of Time and Newsweek.

But it's a bargain with the devil. You have to give back your self-respect, the trust you once enjoyed, your reputation, and the freedom to play with your grandchildren or view sunsets from your mountain.

Parents have a big job explaining to their children the differences between fame and success. Television tends to glamorize criminals to the point where they become folk heroes because they survive under tough odds. So do cockroaches, and we don't put them on trading cards.

Success isn't one big book that is published, one important film that you make or one hit record that you record. It's a lot of little things . . . overcoming an illness, trying something hard and making it, forgiving an enemy and handling disappointment.

Look carefully at your life. You may be a success and don't know it.

California can't swallow drop in wine production, sales

By Gavin Power
N.Y. Times News Service

Wine industry observers say there are two reasons for the expected drop in California production: a virulent root louse called phylloxera and a general decline in consumption brought on by health concerns and the recession.

SAN FRANCISCO — California wine production will slow dramatically during the next five years because of declining consumption and a nasty little bug devouring scores of prime vineyards, according to a new study.

"These findings do not bode well for the industry," said Robert Smiley, a dean at the University of California at Davis and director of the survey.

The 1992 Wine Industry Financial Survey was conducted by UC Davis — which boasts one of the world's most respected viticulture schools — to identify critical issues facing California's $6 billion wine industry.

Among the key findings from the survey of 79 wineries:

■ The number of cases of wine produced at those wineries is expected to grow by only 13 percent during the 1991-'96 period, down from 31 percent during the previous five years.

■ Capital availability — such as bank financing — was rated as "difficult" or "extremely difficult" by more than 60 percent of the respondents.

Wine industry observers say there are two reasons for the expected drop in California production: a virulent root louse called phylloxera and a general decline in consumption brought on by health concerns and the recession.

"Phylloxera is a big problem," said Walt Klenz, president of Beringer Vineyards in St. Helena. "There will be a significant effect on the grape supply."

The pest feeds on the roots of vines, causing a progressive decline in grape production and eventual vine death. Although the louse has been around for centuries, a new strain has developed in recent years that has a particularly voracious appetite for grape vines.

Many wineries that have sustained substantial damage from phylloxera have begun tearing up their vineyards, replanting them with different root stock. The cost is substantial: $12,000 to $15,000 per acre.

Some wine experts estimate the total cost for Napa and Sonoma growers could reach $2 billion by the end of the decade.

Motto, Kryla & Fisher, a wine consultancy based in St. Helena, predicts that the grape supply from Napa and Sonoma vintners will decline to 180,000 tons in 1997 from about 250,000 tons last year.

"This is very serious for growers," said Shirley Winston, a vice president of the California Association of Wine Grape Growers in Sacramento. "Production will definitely fall as vineyards are replanted."

Robert Mondavi, the renowned Oakville winery, started replanting its vineyards five years ago.

"We're in good shape," said Harvey Posert, a vice president at Mondavi. "But for small wineries that can't afford the replanting, it could be tragic."

The decline in the growth of production is expected to lead to an increase in prices for many varietal wines. But whether budget-conscious consumers will be willing to pay the higher prices is another matter.

U.S. wine consumption per capita has fallen steadily over the past 10 years, according to Impact, a New York-based beverage research firm.

In 1980, Americans drank an average of 2.2 gallons of California-produced wine. That dropped to 1.8 gallons by 1990. Impact reckons that per capita consumption will fall to 1.58 gallons by the year 2000.

"It's been really tough in the market," said Jim Spaulding, owner of Stonegate Winery in Calistoga. "You've got increasing competition and a leveling out of buying on the high end of the market." He said his winery's sales have been flat for five years.

John Fisher, a wine industry investment banker with Hambrecht and Quist in San Francisco, said generic wines have suffered the most from declining sales. A varietal wine is made predominantly from a single type of high-quality grape, while a generic wine is a blend of lesser-quality grapes.

Another problem facing the vintners is scarcity of capital. Many banks and savings-and-loan companies have dramatically reduced lending to wineries. That could cause serious trouble for cash-strapped operations thet need to replant their pest-ravaged vineyards.

"Nobody quite knows where the money is going to come from," said UC's Smiley.

Thirteen-year-old gives tickets for convention to grandfather

HOUSTON (AP) — Tickets to the Republican National Convention are hard to come by, but not for a 13-year-old girl with a special request.

Lindsey Smith wrote Houston Host Committee Chairman Ken Lay, asking for tickets for her grandfather's 75th birthday. She pointed out that her grandfather, Byron Forney, had attended Houston's only other convention in 1928.

And now, she wanted to surprise him with tickets to this one.

Lay has refused dozens of other ticket requests, but this time he couldn't.

"This seemed like a special situation. I doubt there are many third generation Houstonians who went to the '28 convention and now have an interest in attending this one," he said.

Lay presented Lindsey and grandfather with a pair of tickets for each of the convention sessions on Thursday.

Forney, who was 10 when he went to his first convention in a Model-T Ford, said he hopes this convention will be more memorable than last time.

"I don't remember much about it except that it was crowded, smoky and hot," he said. "They didn't have air conditioning then. At the time, I was so little, I was bored to death."

He plans to enjoy this convention.

"This is the greatest gift because I know all the love and affection that went behind it. This is something special," Forney said.

He plans to frame the ticket stubs.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kevin Gross pitched the first no-hitter of 1992, retiring 22 of the final 23 batters Monday night as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat San Francisco 2-0.

Gross (6-12) allowed second-inning walks to Cory Snyder and Matt Williams and hit pinch-hitter Mark Leonard with a pitch in the ninth. The ball that came closest to a hit was a leadoff line drive by Robby Thompson in the eighth inning that shortstop Jose Offerman caught while moving to his right.

Cowboy moves

IRVING — The Dallas Cowboys have announced the release of three players, including former Texas Rangers centerfielder Donald Harris, who was just signed as safety last month.

Offensive tackle James Brown and cornerback Michael James also were released.

Harris, who spent 3½ seasons with the Texas Rangers, signed with the Cowboys July 27, after being a 1992 12th-round draft pick. He played football for Texas Tech during the 1987-88 season.

Brown was drafted in the third round from Virginia State and James was signed as a free agent out of Arkansas.

The releases announced Monday bring the Cowboys roster to 70 players.

LONDON — On his first day as the Formula One world champion, Nigel Mansell rested and Great Britain celebrated.

The 39-year-old Briton clinched the title with a second-place finish at the Hungarian Grand Prix on Sunday, bringing to an end 13 years of frustration marked by three runnerup showings in the championship standings.

He returned to his home on the Isle of Man in the Irish Sea late Sunday and was greeted by a large crowd of neighbors and fans at the local airport.

"We have lived here for 12 years," Mansell told the crowd on what could be called the "Isle of Mansell." "Without your support and the anonymity you have allowed us to have, I would not have been able to succeed."

Mansell, his wife Rosanne and three children spent Monday at home, celebrating the 10th birthday of his oldest daughter, Chloe.

Bulldogs turn out in force

■ Over 90 MHS players report for their first fall workout under new head coach Ronnie Reeger.

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

Cool weather greeted the Midland High football team Monday at Memorial Stadium as new head football coach Ronnie Reeger put his Bulldogs through their first fall practice session for the 1992 season.

Over 90 Bulldogs reported to the first practice session, but Reeger expects that number to climb over the next few days.

"We've got a few people out of place, who didn't get their physicals done for various reasons, but basically the team is out," Reeger said. "We've lost a couple of players, including Freddie Stricklin, who is probably moving. We thought he was one of the players who could really help us in the defensive secondary this year."

Review was the key catch word Monday for a 9 a.m. workout.

"It seems like we got a lot of things done," Reeger said. "The kids were willing and working at it. We basically reviewed offensively and defensively the things we put in during spring training. It will be a day or two before we start working on the kicking game.

"All we did was review our base defense and our base offense. We worked on our base run and pass offense and refreshed them on the formations we have and checkoff systems."

'It seems like we got a lot of things done. The kids were willing and working at it.'

— Ronnie Reeger

Reeger was pleased with what he saw Monday.

"The kids responded pretty decent," Reeger said. "There seemed to be good retention of what little we put in during spring training. We're going to be able to build off of that. Of course, we had a few who were lost out there because they didn't go through spring training."

Asked if his players reported to practice in good shape, Reeger responded, "Well, it was so cool for our first practice, it was hard to tell. But I would guess no. We're never satisfied with the kind of shape they are in, so I'll just say no."

The Bulldogs have to work out in shorts and helmets until Friday when they can don full pads. That will be the next significant step for MHS. Step 3 will come Friday, Aug. 28, when the Bulldogs face an outside opponent for the first time under Reeger.

The Bulldogs scrimmage Class 4A Big Spring in Big Spring on Aug. 28, but a time hasn't been set for that scrimmage.

"We're in school by then," Reeger noted, "so I'm sure we'll start with the sophomores around 5 p.m. or so. It

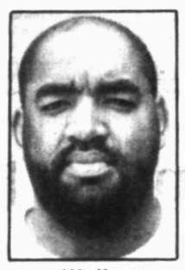
Six-year MC assistant coach moves on



Walker

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

George Walker, who has been an assistant basketball coach at Midland College for the past six years, announced Monday that he has accepted the head basketball coaching position at South Florida Community College in Avon Park, Fla.

"I'm the new head basketball coach at South Florida Community College," Walker said in a press conference Monday afternoon. "It was a long, hard drawn-out decision on whether to leave Midland or not. It was a matter of if I wanted to be a head coach at a junior college. This is a big move for me and made me start thinking of my personal goals."

Walker served under three coaches while at Midland College in Jerry Stone, Reggie Franklin and Steve Green since he came to Midland in 1986. Prior to that, Walker served under Guy Lewis at the Univerisity of Houston, where he was also a star basketball player.

"George is one of the finest individuals you would ever want to meet and he made an impact at Midland College since he recruited some of our best players over the years he was here," said Delnor Poss, MC athletic director.

Green, too, said he would feel the loss of Walker, but the MC coach still wants Walker on his schedule.

"The first thing I need to do is find a way to get George's team on my schedule," Green deadpanned. "He's taking this job late and his team is depleted and I need to play him — but only if he comes here.

"Seriously," Green added, "anytime you lose someone who has been a valuable cog in your program, it

Aggie ills nothing to frown on

■ R.C. Slocum's problems at Texas A&M are happy ones.

Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION — Texas A&M coach R.C. Slocum has happy problems to discuss.

He's happy to talk about the growing numbers problem he has at quarterback, bolstered by the return of Jeff Granger.

There's another problem of finding enough playing time for two good running backs, Greg Hill and Rodney Thomas.

Then, there's the problem of high expectations the Aggies face, being picked to repeat their 1991 SWC championship with ease.

These are the problems that make a coach giggle.

"It's a challenge for the coaching staff to make sure we play with our feet on the ground every game," Slocum said. "There are no guarantees that we'll win a game but given my preference, I'd rather be picked.

"The good programs around the country don't sneak up on people. Miami and Notre Dame get everyone's best shot when they play. I hope we have that type of program."

It would be hard to exclude the 1992 Aggies from the elite list. Despite several notable losses, (quarterback Bucky Richardson, cornerback Kevin Smith and linebacker Quentin Coryatt) the Aggies are double-tough.

Slocum has 16 returning starters that made the Aggies favorites to repeat as SWC ti-

Lee, MHS spikers see '92 playoffs as real possibility

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

The 1992 high school volleyball season could be considered a rebuilding year for both the Midland High Lady Bulldogs and Midland Lee Lady Rebels. Both squads lost key contributors to graduation, but both also possess enough firepower to compete for one of the three playoff spots available in District 4-5A.

Yes, three. Volleyball becomes the first sport since football in 1990 to begin an athletic season with an expanded playoff format.

Not surprisingly, both MHS head coach Sonya Pittman and Midland Lee boss Anita Corder are in favor of the extra chance at playing into the postseason.

"It's great," Pittman said. "I've been the bridesmaid so many times. Plus, it'll take some of the pressure off of going 10-2."

Midland Lee opens non-district play tonight at home against Big Spring, while Midland High begins its non-district season Friday at the Duncanville Tournament of Champions, an event where only last year's playoff teams are invited.

District play opens September 12 when Lee and MHS face off at the Lee gym. The regular season ends October 27.

Midland High, which finished with a 15-6 overall record last season, also pulled down runner-up status in the district with a 10-2 mark before losing in the first round of the playoffs.

Gone off that team are all-district members Sally Gibson, Mich Neatherlin and Lisa Sanchez, who was named outstanding setter in the league.

Other seniors at Lee are Roxanne Furrow, Tanisha Mills, Carrie Zamora, Kimberlee Blackburn and Courtney McHugh.

Another strength in the Lady Rebs' corner is height. Six players are over 5-10, including Blackburn the tallest of the group at 6-1.

Wakefield keeps Pittsburgh from knuckling under

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — With a flitter and a flutter and a whole lot of foolery, rookie Tim Wakefield's dancing knuckleball has given the Pittsburgh Pirates' pitching staff a much-needed wake-up call for the pennant race.

"He's been like catching lightning in a bottle," Pirates manager Jim Leyland said.

So far, that lightning has struck three teams: the Cardinals, Mets and Braves, and Wakefield has a 3-0 record and 1.32 ERA in four major-league starts to show for it.

Wakefield, who started the season 10-3 at Triple-A Buffalo, has pitched at least eight innings in every start. He has two complete games and hasn't allowed more than two runs in any outing.

The Braves, whose pitching staff consisted of knuckleballing Phil Niekro and not much else for years, became the latest victim of Wakefield's wobbler, losing 4-2 Sunday in a weekend shootout of NL division leaders.

Atlanta had outscored Pittsburgh 22-5 in the first two games of the four-game series, only to be shut out on four hits until Greg Olson's two-run double in the ninth inning.

"His knuckleball is comparable to Phil Niekro's. His knuckleball is real," Pirates general manager Ted Simmons said. "To sum it up, he's for real."

Now the Braves know what other teams felt like trying to hit a pitch that tumbles like an out-of-orbit satellite in need of a NASA rescue mission.

"It's like a butterfly. It doesn't fly straight," the Braves' Otis Nixon said. "It goes all over the place."

One of just two pure knuckleballers in the majors — Charlie Hough is the other — Wakefield, 26, is a rarity among pitchers, a young gun who doesn't rely on heat or a sizzling slider. The Dodgers' Tom Candiotti also uses the knuckler, but throws just as many breaking balls.

One scout clocked a Wakefield knuckler at 46mph, or less than the speed limit on most highways. That's not even half as fast as Nolan Ryan's 98-mph heater, but the frustration of trying to hit a pitch that darts and dances and dips is already wearing on NL hitters.

"As a hitter, you're conditioned to hitting the 90-mph fastball and the slider. But you can't take batting practice against the knuckleball," Pirates catcher Mike LaValliere said. "It's like nothing else you see."

No hitter has yet stepped out of the box and yelled at Wakefield to challenge him, but if one does, "I'll challenge him ... I'll throw it slower," Wakefield said.

"It don't buy the theory that hitters will adjust to him once they've seen him," Leyland said. "As long as he can throw it for strikes, I don't know if you can adjust. With the knuckleball, there's no way you can prepare for what it's going to do."

It's evident what Wakefield has meant to a first-place team that's won 13 of its last 16 games. He's stabilized a rotation that has lacked an effective fifth starter — the Pirates' No. 5 starters are 4-8 with a 4.81 ERA — and soon may be without Zane Smith, who has a sore shoulder.

Remarkably, Wakefield didn't turn to pitching until 1989. He and his father fooled around with the knuckler in their backyard in Melbourne, Fla.,

But he was drafted as a first baseman in 1988. Only after he hit .189 in his first pro season and rookie ball manager Woody Huyke spotted him throwing the knuckler did he turn to pitching.

"When I started having success in Buffalo against guys who played in the big leagues, I said, 'Hey, I might be able to do it,'" Wakefield said.

What he's done is keep the Pirates in first place in the NL East.

"Maybe the hitters will adjust, maybe they won't," Wakefield said. "All I know is I'm going to keep throwing the knuckleball. They want it 90 mph, I'll throw it 50."

El Paso beats Midland as TL West tightens

Staff report

EL PASO — Midland's lead in the Texas League West has been on a three-week diet, and following a 3-2 loss to the El Paso Diablos here Monday night to start a 10-game road trip, the Angels are within a loss of kicking the fat of leadership good-bye.

In fact, should Midland lose to El Paso tonight, the Angels could be tied with the Diablos for second place. San Antonio defeated Wichita, 8-7, Monday and stand just ½-game behind the Angels while El Paso is only one game down.

Monday's loss was a tough one. El Paso won it in the bottom of the ninth when Troy Percival walked Edgar Caceras with the bases loaded and two outs. The Diablos scored the run without a hit in the inning with three walks and one hit batsman.

Midland had just tied the game at 3-3 in the top of the ninth after trailing all night when Edgar Alfonzo hit a two-out, last ditch home run, only his fourth of the season.

But Midland couldn't shut the door in the bottom of the inning as the Texas League West becomes a who-wants-it barnyard race.

El Paso jumped to a 2-0 lead in the first on a two-run single by Ed Smith. Midland starter Erik Bennett gave up three of his seven hits in the inning and then went on to finish seven strong innings. He did give up a run scoring single to Bo Dotson in the third.

Mike Farrell (6-5) went the distance for El Paso. Eduardo Perez (in the second) and J.R. Phillips (in the seventh) touched Farrell for run scoring hits and Alfonzo took him deep in the ninth, but other than that, Farrell was just about untouchable.

Ranger fans boo Sierra during Sunday's 6-0 loss

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Texas Rangers fans are frustrated, and it's showing.

The below-average Arlington Stadium crowd which attended Sunday's 6-0 loss to Detroit took out its aggression on outfielder Ruben Sierra, booing him when he popped out in the eighth.

"It made me feel mad, made me feel bad. I'm not happy," said Sierra, who responded by sarcastically tipping his batting helmet to the crowd twice. He was hitless in four at-bats, hitting only one ball out of the infield Sunday.

Sierra, who is earning a club-record $5 million, is batting .279 with 12 homers and 62 RBIs this season, but is hitting 49-points less with seven homers and 27 RBIs at home.

In 1991, he batted .320 with 12 homers and 61 RBIs at home.

Although he is not the only Ranger slumping, his high salary and pending free agency have made him a target of the fans' jeers.

"They forget about what I've done for five years before. This is a bad year, and they boo me," Sierra said. "They don't appreciate what we do here. They're (expletive) fans."

Of his gesture, Sierra said "I was trying to say thank you."

Texas, a major-league worst 27-36 at home, travels to Chicago to face the White Sox for three games beginning Tuesday.

No immediate disciplinary action was taken by the team against Sierra, who stayed in the game to play in the outfield in the ninth inning. He did not bat again.

"There was frustration on Ruben's part and the fans' part," general manager Tom Grieve said. "The fans are frustrated, and I don't blame them. They're paying good money to come out here and watch this. It's got to be tough to take for them."

"I know if I was a fan, I'd probably be right up there (booing)," Grieve said. "If the players in here were fans, they'd be booing too."

Dodgers' Kevin Gross hurls year's first no-hitter

Associated Press

NL

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kevin Gross pitched the first no-hitter of 1992, retiring 22 of the final 23 batters Monday night as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat San Francisco 2-0.

Gross (6-12) allowed second-inning walks to Cory Snyder and Matt Williams and hit pinch-hitter Mark Leonard with a pitch in the ninth. The ball that came closest to a hit was a leadoff line drive by Robby Thompson in the eighth inning that shortstop Jose Offerman caught while moving to his right.

There were seven no-hitters in the major leagues in 1991.

When Willie McGee flied to left for the final out, catcher Mike Scioscia dashed to the mound and hugged Gross. Then his teammates mobbed him on the mound and a crowd of 25,561 gave him standing ovation.

Gross, whose previous best in 253 career starts was a three-hitter, won for the first time since shutting out St. Louis on July 12.

The right-hander retired 13 Giants on ground balls, five on fly balls, two on pop-ups, one on a line drive and six on strikeouts.

Seventy-one of his 99 pitches were strikes.

Braves 5, Pirates 4

PITTSBURGH — Mark Lemke's two-out double in the 10th inning ended Pittsburgh's run of extra-inning victories as Atlanta beat the Pirates, its third victory in the four-game series between NL division leaders.

The Pirates, who lost the season series to Atlanta 7-5, had won four straight and five of their last six in extra innings. Losing pitcher Bob Patterson (5-2) had won four times in extra innings this season and 12 times among his 17 major-league victories.

White Sox drop Yankees into last-place tie, 4-3

Associated Press

AL

CHICAGO — Greg Hibbard pitched a four-hitter over eight innings and the Chicago White Sox scored a pair of unearned runs in the fifth inning Monday night to defeat the New York Yankees 4-3.

The victory was the second straight and 14th in the last 19 games for the White Sox. The Yankees dropped their fifth in the last seven games and fell into a last-place tie with the idle Cleveland Indians in the American League East.

Hibbard (8-5) picked up his first victory since July 5. He had had one loss and five no-decisions in that span. Monday night, he struck out three and walked three before needing relief help.

Scott Radinsky came in to get the last two outs for his 12th save after Bobby Thigpen struggled at the start of the ninth.

Royals 6, Tigers 5

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Mike Macfarlane drove in three runs with two doubles and his third homer in three games to power Kansas City over Detroit.

Macfarlane's second double, a line drive to left-center with two out in the seventh, scored Gary Thurman from first base. Thurman drew a leadoff walk from reliever Kurt Knudsen (2-2).

The win was the third in a row for the Royals and only the second loss in the last 10 games for the Tigers, who tied the game 5-5 on Tony Phillips' two-out, two-run double in the seventh. Scott Livingstone singled and Gary Pettis doubled before Phillips delivered.

Diagnosis good for Guzman's back

TORONTO (AP) — Toronto Blue Jays pitcher Juan Guzman had his aching back examined in Birmingham, Ala., and the diagnosis was encouraging.

Guzman, on the 15-day disabled list since Aug. 4, has a strained muscle in his back below his right shoulder. Dr. James Andrews told Guzman to resume throwing in a week to 10 days in anticipation of a rehabilitation assignment.

There was no shoulder damage, Andrews said.

Guzman is 12-3 with a 2.35 ERA in 21 starts for the first-place Blue Jays.

AGGIES: Sixteen starters back to play

tlists that's underscored with the addition of Granger, who changed his mind about giving up football to concentrate on baseball.

Granger likely will start but Slocum won't hand him the job.

"I haven't seen Jeff do anything in football since last fall," Slocum said. "He obviously has more experience than anyone we have. He's had two years of coaching and played as our backup last year. He adds experience to the contest."

Granger played in nine games last season. He hit 22 of 48 passes for 395 yards and five touchdowns. He was unexpectedly cut from the U.S. Olympic baseball squad and elected to rejoin the football team.

Senior Kent Petty and redshirt freshmen Matt Miller and Tommy Preston are the other quarterback candidates. True freshman Cory Pullig also is a part of the mix.

"I'd say the position is still up in the air," Slocum said. "At this point, we'll start and see where Jeff is and how he compares to the other guys but he's already been through a lot of quarterback meetings."

Hill got his Aggie career off at a record pace in 1991. He gained 1,126 yards on 240 carries and scored 12 touchdowns, becoming the first freshman in SWC history to gain 1,000 yards.

Richardson and right tackle Keith Alex are the only offensive losses, giving whoever plays quarterback the hope of strong protection. The top three receivers from last year, Tony Harrison, Brian Mitchell and Ryan Matthews, also return.

There are able replacements on defense for the big-play artistry of Smith and Coryatt.

But here's where Slocum has a problem that really does bother him.

"Think of all the big plays you can remember last year," Slocum said. "The punt returns and interceptions by Kevin Smith, the big hits by Quentin and the runs by Bucky.

"Most of those plays are made by guys who are gone now. Several of those guys are once-in-a-lifetime players. No one has the depth to replace those guys."

Cornerback Derrick Frazier, free safety Patrick Bates and linebacker Marcus Buckley will help Slocum forget his 1991 lineup.

"What you hope for is that a guy like Derrick will come out of the shadow and emerge as a good player," Slocum said. "Patrick Bates has a chance to become a premier player and so does Buckley.

"They'll be comparable to the players around the country at their positions."

The Aggies finished last season 10-2, including a 10-2 loss to Florida State in the Mobil Cotton Bowl. They'll open this season Aug. 26 against Stanford in the Disneyland Pigskin Classic.

Razorbacks gear up for opener with Citadel

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — With less than three weeks remaining until the season opener against The Citadel on Sept. 5, the University of Arkansas football team is ready to get down to business.

"Tomorrow (Tuesday) we'll come out in full pads and get after each other," coach Jack Crowe said. "We're going to go at it at full speed and stress tackling and blocking. I think they're ready to start hitting each other."

He said the emphasis Monday was on pass protection and trying to get into a routine on both sides of the ball.

"It didn't appear to me that they were real comfortable today, but that will improve," Crowe said. "The offensive line looked a little rusty."

The Razorbacks continued their two-a-day practices on Monday, but were in shoulder pads and helmets for the first time since spring drills.

The Razorbacks concluded their evening workout with a 20-minute scrimmage that featured hurry-up situations and last-second field goal attempts. The Razorbacks will hold game-type scrimmages Saturday and next Wednesday in preparation for The Citadel.

Crowe said he was impressed with freshman noseguard Junior Soli.

Navratilova in top form, vs. Monica

Associated Press

MANHATTAN BEACH, Calif. — Martina Navratilova winning a fifth U.S. Open title at age 35? What seemed unlikely a few days ago now seems not at all out of the question.

With a decisive victory over No. 1-ranked Monica Seles in the Virginia Slims of Los Angeles tournament, Navratilova showed herself to be in top form two weeks before the tournament at Flushing Meadow, N.Y.

She last won the Open in 1987, before physical problems crept up on her. This time, Navratilova is in great shape and is playing excellent tennis.

She likes her chances.

"This opens it up a little bit," Navratilova said Sunday after beating Seles 6-4, 6-2. "The people who were writing me off will have to stop and say, 'Wait a minute. Maybe I jumped the gun.'"

Playing against the 18-year-old Seles, a woman almost half her age, Navratilova executed her serve-and-volley game almost to perfection. Her usual weapons misfiring, Seles never even got a break point on her.

Navratilova lost only 11 points on her serve and made just 10 unforced errors.

"It's a great confidence booster," said Navratilova, who moved up a spot to replace Gabriela Sabatini as the No. 3 player in this week's rankings. "I wasn't sure if I could do it, but I proved myself wrong."

An added bonus was proving wrong those who say Navratilova should step aside, make way for the 25-and-under crowd. She tries not to read stories that say she's too old, but she knows the skeptics are out there.

Her response: "Why shouldn't I still be playing if I can do this? Even if it's just once a year, it's worth it.

"For me, the positives outweigh the negatives. It's like a relationship, if the negatives outweigh the positives, it's time to get out."

There isn't much left for her to accomplish. The $70,000 winner's purse here pushed her career earnings past the $18 million mark, and she increased her own record by winning her 160th tournament title.

Another U.S. Open title would be nice, and Navratilova thinks she's as ready now as she's ever been. A lot of the credit, she said, goes to TeamTennis, a league dismissed by many as a mere gimmick.

After losing a tough three-setter to Seles in the Wimbledon semifinals, Navratilova joined up with the Atlanta Thunder and helped it to the league championship.

"Team Tennis gets you ready for pressure, there's no question about it," she said. "You only play one set in each event and every single game counts and you have no ads.

"You have many more big points in team tennis than you do in tournament tennis."

Navratilova also credits TeamTennis with keeping her on an even keel last year when she was battling former companion Judy Nelson in a palimony suit.

Now that her off-the-court life is more stable, she's honed her game to the point where she's "just grooved."

After losing to Seles last year in the final of the U.S. Open, Navratilova expressed doubts about her ability to keep competing on the top level of women's tennis. Those doubts aren't likely to recur this year.

As long as there's something to look forward to, Navratilova said, she'll keep with it.

"There's always next week. That's what's nice about being a tennis player," she said. "It's not once every four years, like when you're in the Olympics. Tennis is immediate gratification, and that's wonderful."

Allison's funeral attracts over 500

Associated Press

BESSEMER, Ala. — The funeral for race car driver Clifford Allison attracted more than 500 people on Monday, including drivers who competed against him and his family.

Allison, 27, of Hueytown, Ala., was killed Thursday when he lost control of his car during a practice lap at Michigan International Speedway. He is the son of former NASCAR Winston Cup champion Bobby Allison and younger brother of current Winston Cup contender Davey Allison.

"You never know. You just never know," Davey Allison said while receiving friends Sunday night at the funeral home in Hueytown. He flew home Sunday night after finishing fifth in Sunday's Winston Cup race at the track where his brother died.

Among those attending the funeral Monday at St. Aloysius Church in Bessemer were NASCAR president Bill France Jr. and several present and former NASCAR drivers, including Hut Stricklin, Neil Bonnett and Bennie Parsons.

Allison is survived by his wife, Elisa, and three children.

In a tribute to her husband, Mrs. Allison said, "Try not to be sad, but be proud for Clifford. He stands waiting with the Lord in heaven's victory lane, a true champion in every way."

Allison began racing late-model stock cars at short tracks in Birmingham and Montgomery when he was 19.

what they're capable of. They matured over the summer both physically and emotionally. They have a great deal more ball control. It's kind of like the difference between a puppy and a full grown dog. They're a group that's so mature in a lot of ways."

At Midland High, it's firepower, not animals, to which Pittman compares her team.

"We don't have the guns, but we have a lot of ammunition," Pittman said. "(Last year), with Mich and Sally, and Lisa setting, all of our opponents knew who was going to get the sets. This year, they can all hit, and I think we'll be a deceptively strong team."

The MHS seniors are led by Stephanie Saxon, a strong hitter who made the leap from the junior varsity at mid-season last year and who "ended up being awesome," Pittman said. Other final year players include Laura Baressi, Michelle Fitts, Alisha Gonzales and Sheena Salcido.

"This group is a real evenly balanced unit," Pittman said. "We have a lot of lineup possibilities. We're very setter strong; we have four players who are trained setters.

"I think the district respects Midland High and they know we'll always be competitive. I would be surprised if anyone was picking us this year, though."

Lee's Corder continues to be impressed with the strength and ability of her girls.

"The biggest difference with this bunch compared to last year is everyone of these kids is very athletic," Corder said. "They've been athletes all their lives. They're pure bred athletes. You give them a really good workout, and come game time, they're ready to play."

Two of those top notch athletes are Strambler, who also letters in basketball and track, and Mills, who won the state title in the girls 400 meters in Class 5A track.

Back from injury is McHugh, a setter who blew out a knee in basketball and just last week was released by her physician, allowing her to participate in sports again.

will have to be a night scrimmage."

Step 4 is the season opener on Sept. 4 when the Bulldogs host El Paso Irvin at 8 p.m. at Memorial Stadium. It will be Reeger's debut as head coach, but it will also be an opportunity for the Bulldogs to end their nine-game losing streak suffered last season.

Meanwhile, Midland Lee, starting a week earlier than MHS since the Rebels didn't have spring training, is already in full pads and held its first intra-squad scrimmage Saturday. Lee will meet San Antonio Clark at 10 a.m. Saturday in a scrimmage session in Sonora.

WALKER: Chaps will feel loss hurts. George has taught me a few things and I've benefited from some of the kids he has recruited. In fact, his impact at Midland College will still be felt here for the next two years."

Walker said that South Florida CC had an 18-14 record last season under Tony Shields, who recently left the school to become an assistant coach at Bethune-Cookman.

"South Florida has been playing basketball for only five years, so it's a new program. The school has 15,000 students in six branches. The campus I'll be at has about 4,500 students," Walker said.

Walker will be headed for a tough conference with Polk and Brevard two of the better known junior college basketball programs around.

"George will be stepping out of the fire and into the frying pan at South Florida," Green said. "Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas and Florida have the strongest junior college basketball programs in the nation. But George won't be awed by it because it will be pretty much like what he has seen here at Midland College."

Walker said that five to seven players will return to South Florida this year, so he will have some immediate recruiting to do.

"There is no question that I'm going to have to scramble this year for players," Walker said.

Green said that MC had two full time assistants this past year, but that MC might go with only one this year by not replacing Walker. Randall Dickey is the other MC assistant.

When asked who would fill George's shoes, Green replied, "Randall will do his job and George's too. Don't look at me."

Midland College will also be losing Walker's wife, Gloria, who works in the school's financial department. Gloria said that she, too, has been offered a job at South Florida, but the position doesn't open until July.

"I guess I'm going to be just a mom for a while. I've never really been just a mom. I may go crazy," Mrs. Walker said.

Coryatt finally gets full contact

ANDERSON, Ind. (AP) — Rookie Quentin Coryatt went through full-contact drills for the first time since an ankle injury July 22 as the Indianapolis Colts resumed practice Monday.

Coryatt, the second pick overall in April's NFL draft, is still hobbled by the ailment, but coach Ted Marchibroda said he was happy with the linebacker's performance in practice.

"He got through practice all right and was impressive in what he did," Marchibroda said.

One oil analyst said reports of possible U.S. military intervention in Iraq seemed improbable to oil traders.

Natural gas prices were lower, with contracts for delivery in September settling at $1.762 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 7.0 cents.

Fed likely to keep rates unchanged

■ The Fed likely won't change interest rates during the GOP convention.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With Republicans meeting in Houston, Federal Reserve policy makers are likely to keep interest rates unchanged this week rather than appear to be buckling under to political pressure, analysts said Monday.

But these analysts point to an economy that has been moving sideways recently and said that, if it were to deteriorate anew, the central bank probably would be prepared to cut rates further to stimulate growth.

"I don't think the data has been conclusive enough to justify a further move at this point," said Laurence H. Meyer, head of a St. Louis economic forecasting company. "I believe the Fed would prefer to sit on the sidelines and wait and see if its earlier actions are having any effect."

David Jones, an economist with Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., a New York securities dealer, agreed. "They're really under the political spotlight right now with the Republican convention in operation."

Members of the Federal Open Market Committee, who pride themselves on their independence, meet privately Tuesday to consider monetary policy. The committee is composed of the seven Fed governors and the presidents of the 12 regional Fed banks, five of whom are voting members.

The Bush administration has repeatedly urged further interest rate cuts to stimulate the economy. The Fed last slashed rates July 2, shortly after the Labor Department said that unemployment had jumped to 7.8 percent in June, the highest since March 1984, and that payrolls unexpectedly had shrunk by 117,000 jobs.

At the time, the Fed cited "sustained weakness in credit and money growth, continued movement toward price stability and the uneven progress of the economic recovery."

The monthly employment report is one of the most closely watched economic indicators. Many analysts believe the Fed will not act again before seeing the August report on Sept. 4.

The unemployment rate dipped to 7.7 percent in July, when 198,000 jobs were created.

"We doubt that anything will inspire the Fed to ease prior to the release of the August payroll report," economist Jeremy A. Gluck wrote in Mitsubishi Bank's weekly Money Market Comment. "The Fed's relatively bold ... easing on July 2 is, at best, just beginning to affect the economy."

That easing included a cut in the discount rate from 3.5 percent to 3 percent, its lowest level since July 1963. The discount rate is what the Fed charges commercial banks for loans.

The cut was accompanied by a drop in the federal funds rate to 3.25 percent from 3.75 percent. The funds rate is what banks charge each other for overnight loans.

Since then, many other interest rates have declined. Fixed-rate, 30-year mortgages have dropped below 8 percent for the first time in nearly 20 years. Analysts say that should help revive the housing industry.

Still, many areas of the economy remain in the doldrums. The manufacturing sector, which had been a bright spot, showed virtually no growth in July. Automobile sales have softened recently and retail sales were no higher in July than they had been in May.

But Jones of Aubrey G. Lanston contended that prior Fed easings have laid the foundation "for a recovery, however uneven and slow it might be. What it will do, therefore, is keep policy on an unchanged basis."

At the same time, Jones said the committee probably would adopt a policy including an understanding that Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan would call a special meeting if there were another weak employment number in August.

Retailers see weak profits

N.Y. Times News Service

Reflecting weak confidence among bargain-hunters and affluent shoppers alike, the Kmart Corp.,the nation's second-largest retailer, behind Wal-Mart Stores Inc., reported a limp 3.1 percent increase in second-quarter earnings Monday, and Tiffany & Co. reported a 45.8 percent plunge in profits.

But Toys 'R' Us, which sell more than 25 percent of the stuffed animals, video games, dolls and other toys sold in America, defied the depressing trend in retail earnings in the second quarter, when its profits skyrocketed 39.7 percent.

Kmart said its earnings rose to $168 million, or 37 cents a share, from $163 million, or 40 cents a share, during the similar period last year.

Sales increased 8.8 percent, to $9.14 billion, from $8.40 billion in the second quarter of 1991.

Toys 'R Us lifted its profits to $32.7 million, or 11 cents a share, during the quarter that ended Aug. 1, from $23.4 million, or 8 cents a share, last year. Sales grew 18 percent, to $1.3 billion.

Sematech faces government cuts

AUSTIN (AP) — The Sematech manufacturing research consortium is on target toward achieving its five-year goals but may soon face less government backing, the General Accounting Office said Monday.

A Defense Department agency has spent $100 million during each of Sematech's first five years with about 14 leading semiconductor makers combining for another $100 million annually.

But the new GAO report says the Pentagon will scale back its research budget on semiconductor manufacturing to $80 million and that not all of that will go to Sematech in future years.

The Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency, or DARPA, asked Congress for $80 million to spend on Sematech in 1993. Congress raised the amount to $100 million.

Sematech leaders have said reduced government funding would change the direction of the research consortium.

Shell to pay $7.8 million to end dispute

HOUSTON (AP) — Shell Oil Co. has tentatively agreed to pay former shareholders $7.8 million to settle a dispute over a dividend paid just after it became a wholly owned subsidiary of the giant Royal Dutch-Shell Group of Cos., shareholders' attorneys said Monday.

If approved by a Delaware judge in October, the settlement would be the third payment former shareholders have won from Shell over the 1985 merger.

The company earlier was ordered to pay $110 million to about 1,000 former stockholders who asked for a court appraisal of Shell's stock at the time of the merger.

And it was ordered to pay $37 million to 20,000 former shareholders for failing to fully disclose oil and gas reserves of more than $1 billion during the merger.

The latest dispute involved the timing of a dividend payment by Shell to Royal Dutch, which took place three days after the merger was completed.

The shareholders alleged Shell timed the merger to deprive them of the 50 cents per share dividend. More than 20,000 shareholders are plaintiffs in the case, said their attorney, Ken McNeil of Houston.

Under terms of the proposed settlement, the former shareholders would receive payment of 25 cents per share plus 12.5 percent simple interest from June 1985 to June 1992.

Also under the settlement, Shell does not admit any liability and would pay attorneys' fees as long as the total of fees and payments to plaintiffs does not exceed $8.7 million.

Shell attorney Richard Sutton did not immediately return a phone call seeking comment.

Houston-based Shell, the nation's seventh-largest oil company, became a wholly owned subsidiary of the giant Royal Dutch-Shell Group in June 1985.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Locked-in interest helps sell CDs, T-bills

By Bill Doyle

Q: I am currently earning 4.45 percent on my checking account balance. Considering this, why would anyone buy U.S. Treasury bills or certificates of deposit, which pay lower interest?

Doyle

A: You're in line either for congratulations for locating a checking account paying unusually high interest or for a rude awakening to the fact you are not getting 4.45 percent.

As I pound out this column, the 100 Highest Yields newsletter reports the highest interest rate on any money market account — interest-paying checking — is 4.07 percent. The companion newsletter Bank Rate Monitor puts the national average interest rate on such accounts at 3.18 percent.

Around the date you penned your letter, the same sources report the highest rate on money market accounts was 4.75 percent and the average rate was 3.37 percent.

So, although your checking account could have been paying 4.45 percent awhile back, it's more than unlikely you're getting that much now. As interest rates in general have continued to decline, banks have steadily reduced interest on checking and savings accounts.

That's a big reason why people put their money into Treasury bills and CDs, where rates are locked in. When you invest in fixed-income securities, you know exactly what interest you will get until maturity. Interest rates on T-bills and CDs now are higher than on interest-paying checking accounts.

Q: Is there a difference in the way banks calculate CD interest rates compared with savings and checking account rates?

A: There are a myriad of interest rate methods banks can and do use to figure out interest payments on all types of accounts. The list includes such things as basing interest on a 360-day or a 365-day year, on average balances or period-ending balances and on interest-crediting dates. The list goes on and on.

The most important element is frequency of compounding, so that interest in an account earns more interest. Annual compounding is better than simple interest, on which there is no compounding. Semiannual compounding is better than annual compounding; quarterly compounding better than semiannual; monthly better than quarterly; daily better than monthly. There is no appreciable difference between daily compounding and continuous compounding.

The thing to check for is the annual effective yield — the interest your money actually earns.

For example, on a 4.25 percent simple interest CD, the annual effective yield is 4.25 percent. On a one-year 4.25 percent CD compounded daily, the annual effective yield is 4.34 percent.

On the simple interest account, you would get $4.25 per year for each $100 on deposit. On the CD with daily compounding you would get $4.34.

Q: I have read, many times, that it takes the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. two months to two years to pay off claims on insured deposits at failed banks. Isn't there a federal law or regulation requiring the claims to be settled within 30 days?

A: It's hard to imagine where you read such an inaccurate statement, much less "many times." Do you subscribe to some scaremonger newsletter?

The FDIC has been Johnny on the spot in paying off depositors at busted banks. And, because deposit insurance is backed by the full faith and credit of our federal government, it's safe to assume that will continue to be true.

When a bank is slammed shut by regulatory authorities, depositors can obtain their money as soon as the doors are reopened — usually the very next business day.

If the failed bank is merged into another bank or savings and loan association, depositors deal with the surviving institution just as they did with the bank that went under, and get their money equally fast.

Occasionally, there are delays of a couple of weeks, until records are squared away. But "two months to two years" is way out of line.

DeBartolo balks at demands of Jerry Rice

Star wide receiver wants $16 million over four years, may sit out '92 season

Associated Press

The man who ought to know says he doesn't think All-Pro wide receiver Jerry Rice will be playing for the San Francisco 49ers this season.

Club owner Ed DeBartolo, Jr. has balked at Rice's four-year, $16 million contract demand, saying, "I don't think they intend to come off their demands and we don't intend to raise our proposal.

"I do not think he will be in a 49ers uniform this year."

The San Francisco Chronicle reported that Rice and the 49ers are about $1.5 million apart. The wide receiver has said he is prepared to sit out the season.

Club president Carmen Policy, who is negotiating the contract, said he planned to call Rice's agent, Jim Steiner, on Tuesday with what he called a restructured but not increased proposal.

"I have personal bad vibes about the situation," DeBartolo said. "We haven't had somebody hold out a whole season since I've been an owner. We might as well start now."

NFL Camps

Cowboys

Dallas released three players, including former Texas Rangers center fielder Donald Harris, who was just signed as a safety last month.

Also cut were offensive tackle James Brown and cornerback Michael James.

Harris, who spent 3½ seasons with the Rangers, signed with the Cowboys on July 27, after being a 1992 12th-round draft pick. He played football for Texas Tech during the 1987-88 season.

Brown was drafted in the third round from Virginia State and James was signed as a free agent out of Arkansas.

The releases reduced the Cowboys roster to 70 players, not including four unsigned veterans — Michael Irvin, Jay Novacek, Mark Stepnoski and Tony Tolbert.

Broncos

Rookie quarterback Tommy Maddox of the Denver Broncos had a rocky introduction to the NFL.

Interceptions, fumbles and sacks troubled the 20-year-old No. 1 draft pick in the second half of Denver's 31-27 exhibition loss against Miami in Berlin.

"I think every quarterback has a rough start," Broncos coach Dan Reeves said. "I don't think anybody comes in this league and, all of a sudden, boom, they light it up. You look for the little things: arm strength, touch, poise.

"He never got rattled. I never saw a look in his eyes and said, 'Oh, God, he's panicked.' He was calm. He was even joking about it later. He said, 'Well, I guess you've got to start somewhere.' I'll be the first one to admit, he's got a long, long ways to go."

Maddox was sacked twice during his first series of American Bowl '92, with the Broncos recovering the first of his three fumbles. On his second series, he threw an interception. On his third series, he lost a fumble.

On the next series, Maddox hit Barry Johnson with a 9-yard touchdown pass. In the fourth quarter, it was more of the same.

He was sacked on third down to end a drive, threw an interception on the first play of the next series, followed with a 39-yard touchdown pass, threw an interception and was sacked on fourth down near the end of the game.

Eagles

Strong safety Andre Waters, embroiled in a bitter contract dispute, says he wants to be traded.

"I'm fed up with not being treated fairly," Waters told the Philadelphia newspapers from his home in Tampa. "When they start comparing me to second-rate safeties, they're insulting my intelligence and showing a total lack of respect and appreciation for what I've done for the Philadelphia Eagles. I no longer want to be an Eagle, if that's what they think of me."

Eagles president Harry Gamble downplayed Waters' statements to The Philadelphia Inquirer and Daily News.

"Statements such as that are not uncommon during negotiations," Gamble said. "In my opinion, they originate from the frustrations of the negotiating process, and more often than not, it resolves itself."

The Daily News reported the Eagles offering about $650,000. Last season, Waters was paid $500,000 in base salary plus nearly $100,000 in incentives. The newspaper reported that Waters is seeking a financial package just above $775,000.

In addition to Waters, the Eagles haven't signed cornerback Eric Allen, linebacker Byron Evans, tight end Keith Jackson, kicker Roger Ruzek and wide receiver Calvin Williams.

Bengals

After two straight exhibition losses, coach Dave Shula says it's time to concentrate on offense. He plans to use more starting players for a longer time in this week's game with Indianapolis.

"You'll see, when I announce our plans, that there's no need to wonder about whether our first group will get enough work," Shula said. "I'm not going to say today exactly what we'll do, but they'll be playing a lot more."

The offense, operating mostly without regular Boomer Esiason, has generated only one touchdown in each of Cincinnati's losses to Philadelphia and the New York Giants.

"I expect to play a full three quarters both this week and next week," Esiason said. "It's time to get going. It's time to start establishing what we're going to try to do on offense. You don't go crazy over the preseason. One thing I've learned is we've looked like gangbusters in the preseason and started 0-6; and other preseasons we don't look like anything and we go 6-0."

Giants

Eric Moore will probably get a new contract from the New York Giants sometime soon. Getting back his starting job at right guard may take a bit more time.

Offensive line coach Fred Hoaglin said he expects Bob Kratch to start at right guard when the Giants open the season at home against the San Francisco 49ers in less than three weeks.

Moore, the Giants' top draft pick in 1988, hasn't endeared himself to the coaching staff by missing the opening month of training camp and scrambling plans for shuffling the team's offensive line.

The experiment, which was canceled on Sunday by coach Ray Handley, didn't get off the ground with Moore holding out and Roberts sidelined with a rapid heartbeat.

Jets

Veteran quarterback Ken O'Brien ended his training camp holdout, agreeing to two one-year contracts with the New York Jets. Terms weren't announced.

O'Brien, expected to back up second-year quarterback Browning Nagle, joined the team immediately.

He is starting his 10th season with the Jets.

Denver tackle should be well by Dallas game

GREELEY, Colo. (AP) — Denver Broncos offensive tackle Ken Lanier has a sprained right ankle that should sideline him for only a few days making him available to play in this weekend's preseason game at Dallas, trainer Steve Antonopulos said Monday.

Lanier was injured in Saturday's 31-27 preseason loss to the Miami Dolphins in Berlin. At the time, the injury was feared to be a broken bone in his foot, but X-rays taken upon the team's return to Greeley showed no fracture.

Antonopulos said the injury, which was confined more to Lanier's ankle than foot, was progressing nicely.

The durable Lanier, in his 12th season, has started 115 consecutive regular-season games.

Further examination of backup quarterback Shawn Moore's left (non-throwing) shoulder showed a slight separation which also wasn't believed serious, Antonopulos said. "In a worst-case scenario, he might miss this week's game," Antonopulos said.

"It's just a mild separation," Moore said. "I've hurt it before, about three years ago."

The Broncos suffered no other injuries of consequence in the Miami game. The concussions incurred by safety Dennis Smith and offensive guard Sean Farrell were mild.

New Orleans blanks Steelers, 26-0

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Bobby Hebert passed for 106 yards in just over a quarter, setting up two scores to start New Orleans on the way to a 26-0 NFL exhibition victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers Monday night.

Hebert, who completed eight of 10 passes, threw for 69 yards in New Orleans' first scoring drive, culminated by the first of three field goals by Cary Blanchard, a 48-yarder. He also connected from 48 and 43 yards in the fourth quarter.

Hebert's passing and running set up New Orleans' first touchdown, which came early in the second quarter on a 9-yard run by Craig Heyward. Heyward ran 2 yards for another score just before halftime.

Heyward ran six times for 18 yards and caught two passes for 15.

The Saints, 11-5 and NFC West champions last year, are 2-0 in exhibition play. The Steelers, 7-9 last season in the AFC Central, are 0-2.

Pittsburgh's problems started early, when quarterback Neil O'Donnell was sacked for an 8-yard loss on the first play of the game.

O'Donnell, who completed 11 of 20 passes for 241 yards and three touchdowns against Philadelphia last week, completed only one of five for 9 yards against New Orleans and was sacked three times for 21 yards.

In the first half, New Orleans had the ball for 21 minutes, 39 seconds to Pittsburgh's 8:21.

Mike Buck, the Saints third-string quarterback who took over for Hebert in the second quarter, completed seven of 11 passes for 85 yards. Steve Walsh played the fourth period, completing five of nine for 49 yards. He was sacked twice.

Rick Strom played the third quarter for the Steelers, completing two of five for 50 yards with one interception. Bubby Brister played the fourth quarter for Pittsburgh, completing six of 11 passes for 57 yards with two interceptions.

Bills 30, Lions 24

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Barry Sanders and Thurman Thomas don't have to worry. Maybe Andre Ware does.

While Sanders and Thomas — rivals for the title of "best running back in the NFL" — didn't have the best statistics, it was only because they spent most of their time on the sidelines.

Ware, the 1989 Heisman Trophy winner fighting for a job as Detroit's backup quarterback, got ample playing time but didn't do much with it as the Buffalo Bills beat the Lions.

Playing with the Lions' first string, Ware was unimpressive in playing the first 1½ quarters, finishing 0 for 3.

He had nothing to do with Detroit's only score during his tenure, which came when Sanders followed up a zig-zag, 24-yard run by bursting over from the 3-yard line to put the Lions up 7-0.

Sanders, who finished with 31 yards on three carries, played only slightly longer than Thomas, who left the game halfway through the first quarter after getting the wind knocked out of him on Buffalo's second series.

The NFL's combined yardage leader for the past two seasons, Thomas had 14 yards on three carries and caught one pass for 9 yards.

Their replacements, Ken Davis of Buffalo (1-1) and Detroit rookie Ed Tillison, took over and did well.

Davis scored twice on touchdown runs of 1 and 4 yards, gaining 56 yards on 10 carries. Although he fumbled twice, Tillison, an eighth-round draft choice out of Northwest Missouri State, ran six times for 73 yards and scored on a 1-yard pass from Chuck Long.

Colts' lineman charged with resisting arrest

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Offensive lineman Pat Tomberlin of the Indianapolis Colts was arrested on public intoxication and resisting arrest charges after he was found slumped over the steering wheel of his pickup truck, police said.

Tomberlin was found at 5:45 a.m. Sunday after his truck apparently jumped a curb, police said. Marion County sheriff's deputies said he tried to start the truck when a deputy told him to get out. Tomberlin refused to be handcuffed by two deputies, who then sprayed him with a chemical repellant, police said.

Empty beer cans were found on the front seat of the truck and Tomberlin smelled of alcohol, police said.

Tomberlin, 26, a 1989 draft pick, was released on $1,500 bail and was scheduled to appear in court Aug. 26.

Browns cut Baab

BEREA, Ohio (AP) — The Cleveland Browns released veteran center Mike Baab on Monday, a move coach Bill Belichick called the toughest decision he has had to make since taking over the team.

While preparing for his 11th NFL season, the 32-year-old Baab was anticipating he would again be Cleveland's starting center. The 6-foot-4 275-pounder, the Browns' fifth-round draft pick out of Texas in 1982, had played eight seasons with the Browns, including the last two.

The Browns traded Baab to the New England Patriots Aug. 29, 1988, for a fifth-round draft pick, which Cleveland later traded to Green Bay.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?
Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:
1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.
2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.
3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.
4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options
• You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
• You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).
Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
• You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.
5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

Lessons of PGA's less fortunate not lost on Price

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — From the hard lessons of long ago, Nick Price learned how to win one of golf's majors. The misfortunes of others have taught him how to handle it.

"I've seen what has happened to Greg Norman and Payne Stewart. And I just will not let myself get burned out," Price said following his 3-shot triumph in the PGA Sunday, his first victory in a major.

Stewart has played most of his golf abroad, reaping huge guarantees, since his 1991 U.S. Open triumph.

But his game suffered in the constant crossing of the Atlantic. He has not won since and he was a not a factor in any of golf's major events this year.

Norman's saga is well known and over-chronicled. From the absolute peak of world golf, the flamboyant Australian has drifted back into the ranks of the also-rans, a non-winner for more than two years and another non-factor in the game's great tournaments.

They are not alone.

Australian David Graham, a former U.S. Open and PGA champ, and former British Open winner Bill Rogers are other examples.

Rogers chased appearance money around the world and disappeared from tournament golf.

Graham also burned himself out more than a decade ago after winning the American national championship.

"I'm not Jack Nicklaus and I never will be," Graham said at the time. "I know that. I have to take advantage of the opportunities when I have them."

He won only once in the 11 years since.

These lessons are not lost on Price.

"I do not intend to wear myself thin," Price said. "If I find myself getting tired, I'll just take some time off."

Price has a history that shows he will not hesitate to back away from golf when the situation calls for it.

An example is his withdrawal from the 1991 PGA, when he was at the peak of his game, to be with his wife at the birth of their first child. Ironically, his replacement was John Daly, the first alternate, who ended up winning.

"I feel the birth of your first child is a very special thing and the place to be is there when it happens," he said.

Winning his first major also was very special, Price said. Particularly so following losses in British Opens in 1982 and '88.

But Price said he learned from those losses.

"I learned that to win a major, you have to play a special game," Price said.

"For the last 18 months, I've felt I was close to that special game, close to taking the next step.

"In this tournament, I think I took that next step," he said.

In taking that step up, Price probably became a very marketable commodity. He is personable, presentable, articulate. He has the spice of a foreign flavor (a native of South Africa, a veteran of the Rhodesian air force, holder of a British passport but a resident of Orlando, Fla.) that Americans seem to like.

But he's being very careful about furture plans and commitments.

His victory made him immediately eligible for the World Series of Golf, next year's Tournament of Champions and Masters, for such year-end events as the PGA's Grand Slam and the World Open in Jamaica.

He will pick and choose.

"The temptation is there," he admitted.

"Your manager always want you to do so much, and you want to provide for your family's security. I hope to be able to continue to play 20 tournaments a year in the U.S. and maybe four or five others world-wide.

"But I will not let myself get burned out."

That could have happened had he won that British Open a decade ago when he squandered a three-shot lead with six holes to go.

"It probably was good for me," he said. "Who knows what would have happened if I had won at age 25?" he asked, then answered himself:

"I know one thing. I don't think I would be the same person I am now."

SEC will conduct first playoff for bowl berth

Associated Press

ATLANTA — The Southeastern Conference gives college football a new twist in 1992 — a playoff game to determine its champion and Sugar Bowl representative.

If the season unfolds as expected, Alabama will win the Western Division and Florida the East, setting up a championship showdown at Legion Field in Birmingham, Ala., on Dec. 5.

Coach Steve Spurrier of defending SEC champion Florida would like to see it blossom into a national playoff in Division I-A.

"We're the only sport in the world that does not have a playoff or a tournament at the end of the season," he said. "I've always tried to figure out why we were right and everyone else was wrong. It would be as big as the Super Bowl if we could get it going. But it's not going to happen anytime soon."

It took expansion for the SEC to qualify for a conference playoff under NCAA rules. Conferences with 12 or more teams can split into divisions and hold a playoff to determine a champion.

The SEC reached the 12-team requirement when Arkansas and South Carolina joined last year, completing the marriage with football eligibility this year.

While the SEC is charting new waters with a playoff format, the Atlantic Coast Conference probably found its 1992 champion through expansion to nine schools.

Florida State, a perennial power as an independent, makes its football debut in the ACC after participating in all other league sports last year. The Seminoles, who flirted with national titles in recent years, are favored to beat out Clemson for the ACC crown.

The South lost one of its most successful teams through expansion when Miami of Florida joined the Big East Conference.

The SEC hasn't won a national championship since Georgia's in 1980. The expansion schedule has each team playing eight conference games — five division foes and three in the other division.

"We're going to have some bloody noses coming out of our conference," Auburn coach Pat Dye said. "It's not going to be easy for a Southeastern Conference team to have enough left at the end of the year to win a national championship."

Shane Matthews is back to direct the Florida offense, but he'll be operating behind a new offensive line caused by the departure of four 1991 starters. The Gators also have two new tackles on the defensive front.

Spurrier says the new linemen have talent.

The Gators also have star running back Errict Rhett and receiver Willie Jackson back to help Matthews, the returning all-conference performer, generate the offense.

The only team expected to challenge Florida in the East is Georgia, led by three of the SEC's top performers at their positions — quarterback Eric Zeier, running back Garrison Hearst and wide receiver Andre Hastings.

Coach Johnny Majors has seen nine of his Tennessee Vols drafted by the pros in the last two years. He says this will be his youngest teams in 10 years or more.

The Vols figure to finish third in the East, followed by Vanderbilt, Kentucky and South Carolina.

Alabama went 11-1 last year — the only loss a 35-0 drubbing at Florida.

Coach Gene Stallings is so concerned about quarterback Jay Barker's lack of experience that he's considering using flanker David Palmer some at the position.

"He can throw the football, has an excellent arm, and I think he's a very unselfish player," Stalling said.

Palmer provided most of the offensive excitement for the Tide last year, thriving on receptions, reverses and kick returns. He also has an offseason drunken driving charge to resolve. Stallings says he's the only one that knows what punishment Palmer might receive from the team, adding that he's not saying.

With 19 starters back from last year's 7-5 team, Mississippi State figures to give Alabama its biggest challenge in the East. Auburn, a longtime power, should bounce back from last year's 5-6 team, but doesn't figure to seriously challenge the Crimson Tide.

Louisiana State figures to finish fourth in the West, newcomer Arkansas fifth and Mississippi in the cellar.

The ACC isn't ready to hand the title to Coach Bobby Bowden's Seminoles on a platter.

"I don't care who you are, it's a lot different playing in a conference," Wake Forest coach Bill Dooley said. "When you're an independent, you can break up your tough games with east games."

McCartney believes in Buffs' new offense

■ Colorado coach intent on one-back approach.

Associated Press

Bill McCartney would love to talk about his defense at Colorado, but is anyone listening?

Not really. Not when you scrap an offense that has produced three Big Eight Conference titles and a national championship the past three years.

"This is a big step for us," McCartney says. "It's a risk, I know that."

So does everyone else. The Buffaloes unveiled the new look — a pass-oriented scheme with one back and three receivers — in losing 30-25 to Alabama in the Blockbuster Bowl.

McCartney arrived at Colorado 10 years ago with a passing game, and the Buffaloes won a total of seven games his first three years, including a 1-10 record in 1984.

A year later he went to the wishbone, which later evolved into the I-bone, and Colorado has gone 58-24-3 since then, 30-5-2 over the past three years. Still, McCartney is convinced the new offense will make Colorado a perennial winner.

"We all felt like it was time," he said. "As we look to the future, we thought the schedule was very challenging. We didn't want to wait one year too long and say we wish we'd done it before."

Now all he needs is a quarterback. Kordell Stewart and Vance Joseph go into fall practice in a deadlock, and McCartney isn't ruling out Koy Detmer, brother of former Heisman Trophy winner Ty Detmer.

The defense could be McCartney's best ever. Eight starters return, led by one of the finest group of linebackers in the nation. Greg Biekert has led the team in tackles the past two years, averaging 12½ a game. Outside linebacker Ron Woolfork had 13 sacks last year and Chad Brown has come on strong since moving to the outside.

"Defensively, we won't be changing looks that much, but we want to play more aggressively and be less predictable," McCartney said.

Nebraska coach Tom Osborne knows a little about uncertainty at quarterback. He's been through that the past three years, and this year is no different.

"It would be nice to have a two- or three-year starter back," Osborne said.

What he has is senior Mike Grant, who missed last year with a broken collarbone and was erratic in the few games he has started. Grant at least has some game experience. Osborne's options are freshmen Tommie Frazier and Tony Veland.

But the Cornhuskers also have two of the top running backs in the country. Calvin Jones averaged 8.3 yards per carry last year as a freshman, and Derek Brown led the Huskers with 1,313 yards.

"They're probably the best pair of backs we've had here since Roger Craig and Mike Rozier," Osborne says.

Oklahoma is two years removed from NCAA sanctions and has its thinnest squad in years. Any injuries, especially in the interior lines, could be devastating.

But coach Gary Gibbs' only worry at quarterback is that Cale Gundy spent the spring playing baseball. Gibbs believes Gundy, who finished last year throwing for 329 yards in a Gator Bowl blowout over Virginia, is ready to make this his team.

"That needs to happen, he's anxious for that to happen and he has the talent to make that happen," Gibbs said. "There's a clear understanding on everyone's part that we've got a quality quarterback."

Oklahoma State has not had a quality quarterback since Cale's brother, Mike Gundy, graduated three years ago. Coach Pat Jones signed two junior college transfers from California, Andy Loveland and Derek Chapman.

But Chapman, listed first on the depth chart, said Monday he would not return to Stillwater for reasons he would not specify.

For the first time in 71 years, the Cowboys failed to win a game last season. But Jones said goodbye to three years of NCAA sanctions that have crippled a team that just four years ago went 10-2.

Say hello to a revival in the state of Kansas. Both Kansas and Kansas State had winning seasons last year, the first time that has happened in 58 years.

Coach Glen Mason believes this is the most depth he's had at Kansas, although the Jayhawks must replace running back Tony Sands. Kansas State loses quarterback Paul Watson and receiver Michael Smith, but the defensive line could be best the Wildcats have ever had.

"We've made a lot of progress, but we know we have a long way to go," Kansas State coach Bill Snyder said. "It would be very easy to slip back to the bottom."

Iowa State, which has had just two winning seasons (6-5) the past 12 years, is going to the option.

"It's not going to be three yards and a cloud of dust," coach Jim Walden says. "Nebraska says, 'Here we come.' We're not a school that can say that. We say, 'Here we come, catch us if you can.' The option fools you, that's all."

Missouri returns quarterback Phil Johnson, who set a school record last year with 2,187 yards in total offense. But the Tigers finished second to last in total defense last year and have a non-conference schedule that includes Illinois, Indiana and Texas A&M.

Tulsa, an independent, parlayed a stunning victory over Texas A&M last year into a 10-2 year and No. 21 final ranking. The Golden Hurricane loses quarterback T.J. Rubley and linebacker Mike White, but coach Dave Rader likes the depth.

Is Tulsa for real? We'll find out quickly. It opens the season against Houston, at Texas A&M, Kansas and at Oklahoma State, where the Hurricane hasn't won since 1951.

Volvo officials postpone matches due to day-long rain

Associated Press

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — Upsets have come to be expected at the Volvo International tennis tournament, and on Monday there were plenty of people upset by a full day of rain.

"It's hard on everyone involved — the officials, the fans and the players," said Australia's Broderick Dyke, whose qualifying match Monday was moved indoors to Yale University's Cullman Courts. "It's tough physically and mentally."

Many fans tried to wait out the rain Monday, but tournament officials finally postponed the matches after a five-hour delay. Night matches, scheduled to begin at 7 p.m., were postponed at 8 p.m. In all, seven singles matches in the main draw and four doubles matches were postponed.

The postponements meant that all 29 first-round singles matches must be played Tuesday, or else players will have to play two matches a day. With forecasts calling for showers Tuesday, tournament referee Sean Sloane wasn't too optimistic about completing the first round on schedule.

Sloane said the tournament could withstand two more days of rain before it would be in danger. Rain forced cancelation of the tournament in 1987, when it was held in Stratton Mountain, Vt.

"In the history of the Volvo we have had two or three moments like this. Historically it has happened more at the end of the tournament than at the beginning," Sloane said. "Here there's still a chance to rescue ourselves."

The number of courts being used will be increased from five to seven on Tuesday and could be increased to as many as 10 later in the week, Sloane said.

Fans with tickets to the Monday afternoon session will be admitted to the outer courts Tuesday, but not to the Stadium Court.

Dyke said trying to wait out the rain can be wearing.

"A lot of players get tired just sitting around all day. Quite often it's more tiring than if they had to play a two-set match because you can't just go off and relax," he said.

Texan leads ABC

MECHANICSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Greg Kemp of Bryan, Texas, rolled a 270 in his final game Monday night to move atop the leader board after two rounds of the Professional Bowlers Association $125,000 ABC West Lanes Open.

Kemp averaged 243 over 12 games en route to a 2,917 pinfall. Kemp started the round in second place, one pin behind Brian Voss.

Border checkpoints key weapon in drug war

Editor's Note: Second of a three-part series by the Houston Chronicle that reveals the meager results of the federal government's multi-million-dollar effort to intercept airborne drug traffickers. The series is the result of a five-month investigation by the Chronicle.

By Bob Sablatura
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — The battle to stop drug traffickers has gone high-tech.

Technicians sit aboard expensive surveillance airplanes and in electronic-laden communication centers trying to sort out which blip on a computer screen is a Mexican crop-duster and which is an international cocaine smuggler.

The technological warfare is part of an overall federal strategy to break the backs of the large drug trafficking organizations and disrupt their transportation networks.

But despite the dazzling display of circuitry in the drug war, a study by the Houston Chronicle shows that the most successful method of locating and seizing illegal drugs is decidedly low-tech: A sweating army of U.S. Customs inspectors and U.S. Border Patrol agents and their drug-sniffing dogs seize thousands of pounds of illegal cocaine and marijuana every day.

And the smugglers they net are generally low-level couriers, not the decision-making traffickers targeted by national drug war strategists.

"We don't have any sophisticated radar equipment. We don't have any expensive Lear jets or any super-duper technology," said Sam Stewart, agent-in-charge of the U.S. Border Patrol checkpoint in Falfurrias, Texas. "What we do have is a bunch of motivated agents standing out there on the highway."

A five-month study of drug cases in five federal judicial districts along the U.S.-Mexico border during 1991 shows that almost 85 percent of the interdiction seizures were made either by Customs border inspectors or Border Patrol agents manning highway checkpoints throughout the southwestern region.

Stewart said there is no real secret to what he and his men do. They follow their instincts and keep a vigilant watch on the hundreds of drivers and vehicles that pass through the checkpoint every day. His agents watch for the warning signs that indicate possible drug smuggling, such as extreme nervousness and unusual behavior.

They also learn to give suspect vehicles a thorough inspection aided by five drug-sniffing canines assigned to the facility.

The result is often the discovery of a load of marijuana taken out of the smuggling pipeline before it reaches the street. In the past five years, the Falfurrias checkpoint has been responsible for seizing more than a quarter-million pounds of marijuana, making it one of the most active checkpoints in the country. It has had similar success in seizing cocaine.

The Border Patrol operates 28 highway checkpoints along the U.S.-Mexico border. While the primary purpose is to stop the flow of illegal aliens into the country, the checkpoints — along with the 31 Customs border crossings between the two countries — have become the most effective anti-smuggling weapon in the federal interdiction arsenal.

The smugglers being caught in the interdiction net, however, are generally lower-echelon members of the drug organizations, whom national anti-drug planners consider relatively insignificant.

The principle objective of interdiction, according to President Bush's national drug control strategy released in January, is to identify and target key individuals — such as pilots, money managers and field managers — as part of an effort to break the backbone of drug transportation networks.

"Although they are important to the drug distribution process, low-level drug carriers are easily replaced and apprehending them generally causes no lasting or significant disruption to trafficking organizations," the strategy report said.

The Chronicle's study also showed that small drug cases have all but clogged the federal court system, and only 3 percent of federal prosecutions are aimed at large drug-trafficking organizations.

U.S. Attorney Ronald G. Woods of the Southern District of Texas said that while the percentage of large cases may appear low, it doesn't accurately reflect the level of resources being devoted to cases against major drug traffickers.

The most significant aspect not shown by case load alone, he said, is that cases against drug organizations almost always have several — sometimes dozens — of criminal defendants.

Most of the 41 large cases in his district involve investigations that are tracing seizures to determine how the drugs were brought into the country, he said.

But despite the efforts being made in the Southern District, some of Wood's prosecutors still believe the large number of small drug cases — coupled with a shortage of Drug Enforcement Administration and Customs agents stationed in south Texas — makes it virtually impossible to build cases against large traffickers.

The primary responsibility to coordinate investigations against the major organizations operating in the southwestern region rests with two federal task forces headquartered in Houston and San Diego, Calif.

Part of OCDETF, the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force, the groups are made up of the U.S. Attorney's office and eight federal law enforcement agencies.

Federal lawmakers have budgeted $76 million in 1992 to fund 13 such task forces across the country.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Ken Magidson, regional OCDETF coordinator in Houston, said the task force mission is to identify, investigate and prosecute members of high-level drug trafficking organizations in an effort to dismantle them.

"It's like any attack on organized crime," Magidson said. "You have to figure out who the organizations are and what they are doing, then come up with a plan to disrupt them."

In 1991, the Houston task force filed 27 cases in the Southern District of Texas and has already filed 19 such cases this year.

Paul H. Boeker, a member of the private Inter-American Commission on Drug Policy, said prosecutions against drug organizations are worth doing because they can cause disruption in the supply chain, even though the results are often exaggerated.

One of the major problems with this approach, he said, is that as soon as federal authorities put one network out of business, others are waiting in the wings.

Wednesday: Despite spending billions of dollars on drug interdiction, cocaine is as plentiful and inexpensive as ever.

Customs, other agencies often stretch statistics

By Bob Sablatura
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — There is an adage that numbers lie and so do bureaucrats.

And nowhere is that better illustrated than in the numbers game being waged by federal agencies fighting the war on drugs.

Drug seizure statistics have become the yardstick of success used to justify an agency's existence and safeguard its budget.

The U.S. Customs Service, the Drug Enforcement Administration, the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS), the U.S. Coast Guard, and the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) all get into the act.

But while all of the federal agencies play the numbers game, the U.S. Customs Service appears to be the undisputed master.

An analysis of Customs seizure statistics reveals that Customs officials often claim other agencies' seizures as their own and make outlandish seizure claims to justify their anti-smuggling programs.

Customs' 1991 annual report illustrates just how fast and loose the agency plays with the numbers.

The agency claims in the report that it seized 169,000 pounds of cocaine during fiscal year 1991, which ended Sept. 30.

That is almost 75 percent of the cocaine seized by all federal agencies in 1991, according to the Office of Drug Control Policy — the so-called drug czar's office.

Customs officials, as well as officials at other federal agencies, take credit for a drug seizure if its agents played a role in the operation.

As an example, Customs claimed its high-tech air program was directly responsible for two 1991 seizures — a 51-pound marijuana bust in Arizona and a 798-pound cocaine seizure in Houston.

The marijuana bust turned out to be a case of the U.S. Border Patrol, a division of the INS, in which the marijuana was seized from a backpacker. In the second case, the 798 pounds of cocaine was located by DEA agents in the trunk of a car in Houston.

Victoria Nolan, a spokeswoman for the Office of Drug Control Policy, said duplicate reporting has become commonplace.

The office has even begun to weed out duplicate seizures in the agencies' claims so it can get a better idea of how much marijuana and cocaine is actually being seized.

In 1991, the combined claims of Customs, the DEA, the IRS, the U.S. Coast Guard and the FBI amounted to almost 360,000 pounds of cocaine seized. The actual figure, according to the drug czar's office, is 229,000 pounds.

Customs Service spokeswoman Kathy Hamor could not explain why the agency claimed seizures made primarily by other agencies.

These tactics have cost the Customs Service credibility and have made the agency the target of ridicule among many involved in the federal anti-drug crusade.

Connecticut rules state gives no rights to unborn

By Dirk Johnson
N.Y. Times News Service

HARTFORD, Conn. — Connecticut's highest court ruled Monday that a pregnant woman who injected cocaine into one of her veins as she was about to go into labor had not abused her baby, even though the child was born several hours later severely traumatized, pale and deprived of oxygen.

The State Supreme Court said in a unanimous ruling that state law gives no legal rights to the unborn and that child-welfare workers had erred in using the mother's actions before the birth in July 1989 to justify taking the baby away shortly after the birth.

The decision cut across a swath of deeply divisive issues, from abortion and the pivotal question of when life begins, to the efforts by many states to encourage better prenatal care by expectant mothers.

As the number of children severely affected by their mothers' drug use has grown, child-welfare officials and the courts have struggled with the issue of whether the mothers' actions constitute child abuse and whether the state has any right to interfere. Some have favored jailing drug-addicted mothers to prevent them from using drugs, but others have argued that such action would be a gross violation of the mothers' rights.

In the Connecticut case, the court ordered a new trial on whether the mother's rights were wrongly terminated, and lawyers in the case were divided about whether that means the child, an apparently healthy 3-year-old named Valerie, will be returned to a mother she has never lived with. Throughout the 44-page decision, written by Justice David M. Borden, the court took on a tone of regret at the course it felt compelled to take.

"Certainly, no one approves of the intravenous injection of cocaine by a pregnant woman who had been warned of the risks to her fetus," the decision said. However, the court concluded that up until the moment of birth, Valerie was not a "child" as defined by law and that therefore the mother's actions were not "parental conduct" regulated by civil statutes.

The mother's conduct had been "egregious," the court said. She had used the drug even as she was preparing to go to the hospital, it said. Yet the court said the implications of penalizing an expectant mother for bad or nonexistent prenatal care were even more dire for society since it might result in fewer women seeking prenatal care if they knew their conduct might lead to the removal of the child.

"We do not believe the legislature intended the statute as currently drafted to have such sweeping consequences," Borden wrote.

A spokeswoman for the American Civil Liberties Union, which participated in the case on behalf of the mother, said that since the mid-1980s, at least 167 women in 24 states have been charged with abusing an unborn child.

Of those cases, at least 17 were appealed, said the spokeswoman, Andrea Della Monica, and all those appeals resulted in charges being thrown out. But the Connecticut case is apparently only the second to reach the level of a high state court. A Florida Supreme Court case last month was the first. There, the court threw out misdemeanor criminal-abuse charges against a woman who had used cocaine during her pregnancy.

The woman in the Connecticut case, whose name was not given in the court papers, was not charged with any criminal wrongdoing, and the sole issue in Monday's decision was whether the rights to her child had been severed properly.

What happens now to Valerie, her mother and the foster family that has raised the little girl for the last two years is not clear. Connecticut's Attorney General, Richard Blumenthal, said his "initial interpretation" of the ruling was that "it does not require the child to be returned" to the mother and that a trial judge could find that Valerie's best interests would best be served by keeping her where she is. He also said an appeal might be filed to the United States Supreme Court.

But several lawyers for the mother, who is now 23 years old, said that by throwing out the basis for the child's initial removal, the State Supreme Court had left little room for a lower-court judge to maneuver.

The court also ruled that lack of a "parental relationship" between Valerie and her mother could not be used as evidence against the mother because the separation of the mother and child had been entirely a state action rather than abandonment, or neglect, for example.

"They acted under a law that did not properly apply here," said Nadine Taub, a lawyer who represented the mother. She said she thought the trial court would be bound to return the child. "I think that's what the court has to do," she said.

Other issues remain in the background for now, perhaps to emerge later.

One lawyer who was Valerie's advocate in the court proceedings, Jewel A. Gutman, said she believed that the Civil Liberties Union had been "looking for a case" to pursue its own agenda of "reproductive rights" and that the best interests of the child had been overlooked.

Taking Valerie from the only home she has ever known "would be a very traumatic change in her life," Ms. Gutman said.

Individuals, companies get burned by phone card fraud

By Karen Haywood
Associated Press writer

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — Jess Behringer memorized his company phone card number. He refused to say it out loud to an operator, using it only if he could punch it in the phone himself. And then he punched quickly.

Still, someone managed to pirate the number as Behringer stood at a pay phone in Grand Central Station in New York. It subsequently was used to make thousands of dollars in calls to several foreign countries.

Behringer learned the hard way that telephone fraud has become a billion-dollar black-market industry.

"You try as hard as I do to realize this goes on, when it does you feel like you've been violated," said Behringer, director of Williamsburg Shops at Colonial Williamsburg. He no longer uses his telephone card in public.

At pay phones, thieves steal the card numbers by listening as people give them to an operator or watching as the numbers are punched into push-button phones. Some crooks even videotape people as they enter the numbers.

Another method is through corporate telephone systems, some of which allow employees to dial in from outside and then make long-distance calls. If an employee can access the system, a criminal can usually break in.

The thieves then use the card number or corporate code to make long-distance calls for others — at a price. Recent immigrants who want to call home at a big discount and drug dealers who do not want to be traced are typical customers, said Jim Snyder, an investigator and special counsel for MCI.

"Some of the people selling calls on the street are making hundreds of thousands of dollars a year," Snyder said.

Estimates of the fraud's cost to businesses and phone companies range from $1.2 billion to more than $3 billion a year, he said.

"There's a perception the companies that are hit can afford it," Snyder said.

The fraud drives up the cost of business and "in the end everybody ends up paying," said Andrew Myers, a spokesman for AT&T.

Like other credit cards, telephone cards are protected in case of theft. A consumer or business is responsible for only the first $50 in fraudulent calls and many times the long-distance carriers absorb that cost themselves.

The most popular time to use stolen credit card numbers or gain illegal access to a telephone system is over a three-day weekend because the calls generally are not caught until Tuesday morning.

Gene Kapp, a spokesman for the Christian Broadcasting Network in Virginia, said that over Labor Day weekend in 1987, more than $40,000 worth of calls to Pakistan were charged to CBN via a pay phone in Brooklyn.

CBN contested the bill from AT&T and never paid it. AT&T eventually let the bill drop, Kapp said.

"If you're a company and your system has been hacked, AT&T and the other carriers will work with you" to settle the bill, Myers said.

The perception of phone fraud has changed since CBN's problems five years ago, Kapp said.

"It was almost a corporate embarrassment in some circles to admit that your phone system had been compromised in some fashion," Kapp said.
