Message clear: 'We don't want it'

By DONNY BROWN
SDN Managing Editor

GAIL — "How do we keep you out?"

The question came at the end of a two hour-plus session, but it likely targeted the heart of the matter.

An estimated 300 Borden County residents filled their school's cafeteria Monday night to seek answers from four representatives of the Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority.

The meeting was in response to authority attempts to obtain Borden County property as a potential site for Texas' first dumping site for items identified as contaminated with "low-level" radioactivity.

It was prompted also by earlier reports from authority personnel that they had been in contact with a Borden County landowner and were in the negotiation phase of a possible land sale.

With this information as a basis, authority spokesman Tom Blackburn replied to the earlier question, "Don't sell us land."

Blackburn noted also, "write your state representatives, your state senators. We can't be unless you want us here."

A crowd member commented to this, "Tell us who the landowner is and we'll write to him."

The lively exchange was one of several during the evening. But, Borden

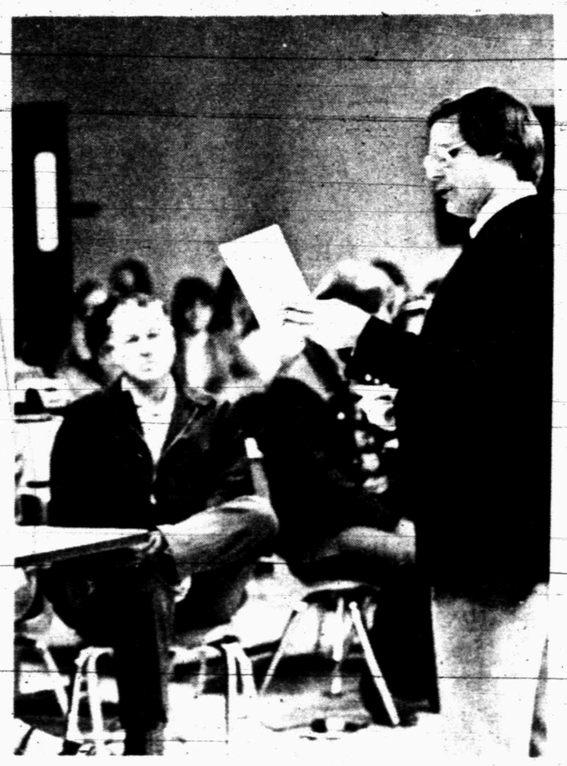
IN PROTEST — An estimated 300 Borden County residents filled the school cafeteria in Gail Monday night to offers questions and words of protest to representatives of the Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority. The selection of Borden County as a potential dump site facility prompted the meeting and, as one crowd member summed it up, "We don't want it here." (SDN Staff Photo)



IN REPLY — The general manager of the disposal authority, Rick Jacobi, told the gathering that "technically" Borden County is as good a place as exists in Texas for the dumping site. (SDN Staff Photo)

TESCO to seek rate increase

Texas Electric Service Company announced Tuesday that Texas Utilities Electric Company (TUEC) will file Friday a request for an increase in electric rates of $304.2 million, or an average increase of eight percent.

The request will be filed with the Public Utility Commission of Texas (PUC) and the cities served by Texas Electric, Dallas Power & Light Company, and Texas Power & Light Company, divisions of TUEC.

Company officials say the increase is needed to prevent further deterioration of the company's financial condition and to assure continuation of the company's major construction projects. They say these projects are needed to meet service needs and to develop cheaper fuel so that "customers' bills will be as low as possible."

For the first time in the history of the companies, bond ratings were downgraded in January from Aaa to Aa2 by Moody's Investors Service and in February from AAA to AA+ by Standard and Poor's.

"It is absolutely essential that we receive sufficient revenue if we are going to prevent erosion of our financial condition which would ultimately increase costs to customers and jeopardize continuation of our construction program, said Henry Clark, TESCO manager.

"Our construction program depends upon investors to supply construction capital, and the financial costs for those borrowed funds represent a large part of our costs to serve customers," Clark explained.

The majority of the company's financing is used for construction of new power plants, transmission lines and distribution facilities, as well as upgrading and replacement of equipment.

Relay systems theft at $30,000

The theft of some $30,000 worth of radio equipment was discovered Monday morning and reported to Scurry County sheriff's office personnel.

Bill Overhulser of Permian Communications in Snyder reported the incident. Noted as missing were six Motorola-brand radio relay systems which were housed beside a communication tower four miles north of Fluvanna.

According to investigator's reports, the radio systems were apparently taken from buildings adjacent to the relay tower sometime Sunday night. The thefts were discovered when Permian personnel, who operate the systems, reported for work Monday morning.

Owners of the missing radio relays included Exxon Corp., the Western Co., Holcomb Transports, Fluid Transports and CRC Wireline Service.

Houston Ave. on city agenda

The planned extension of Houston Ave. to the south — eventually linking it to the Big Spring Hwy. — is included in several agenda items Tuesday at the March city council meeting.

The session will begin at 6:30 p.m. at city hall.

The majority of funding for the street extension will come from state highway department-provided grant monies. Council items related to the project include:

—The possible dedication to the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation a right of way agreement received by the city from a local property owner in connection with the Houston Parkway project.

—Discussing annexation of property into the city limits south of Snyder to allow construction of the roadway.

—A bid item for fencing for the Houston Parkway right of way extension. Six bids have been received.

—Considering allowing the city manager to seek bids to have this fencing built along the right of way for the construction phase of the project.

In addition Tuesday, the council will conduct three public hearings involving requests to have specific areas of the city rezoned. These include:

—A request to change the east 50 ft. of a lot at 1807 40th St. changed from C-1 (commercial) to R-4 (general residential).

—A request to change lots located in the 600 Block of 32nd St. from R-3 (multi-family) to R-4 (general residential).

—A request to change a tract of land at 2801 25th St. from M-2 (heavy manufacturing) to R-4 (general residential).

Bid items will also take up council time. These include bids received for:

—A 1984 pickup for the animal control department. Bids have been received from two Snyder dealers.

Listed under "old business," the council will:

—Consider on second reading an ordinance prohibiting buildings classified as "dangerous" inside the city limits.

—Review a questioned water meter reading and billing for the month of December which totaled some $119.

"New business" items to be considered by the council include:

—Authorizing city officials to seek bids for 137 tons of liquid alum for the water treatment plant; 20 tons of chlorine and three

Five indictments from grand jury

The Scurry County grand jury, meeting in its regular March session Monday, returned five felony indictments against four individuals.

Named in two indictments for delivery of a controlled substance was 63-year-old Anderson (Son) Davis, Jr. of 1204 34rd St. Davis was charged with one count of the offense on Feb. 16 and one on Feb. 17.

He was arrested Feb. 21 and charged with delivery of the drug Dilaudid. He posted bonds of $15,000 in connection with each charge and was released from the Scurry County Jail March 1.

Also named in a delivery of a controlled substance indictment was 38-year-old Samuel Lee Davis, son of Anderson Davis, Jr. He was arrested by city police Feb. 20 and charged with the delivery of the drug Dilaudid on the evening of Feb. 16.

He is also free after posting a $20,000 bond in connection with the charge March 1.

Michael McKinley, formerly of Snyder, was indicted Monday for hindering a secured creditor. He is charged with leaving the state on or

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Horse sense is that faculty which keeps horses from betting on people."

According to friends, if Ted Crenwelge farmed the same way he fishes, he'd never grow a bale of cotton.

Crenwelge is known as one of the county's best farmers, but get him in a boat and the only luck he has is no luck at all. His traditional fishing companions say they have attempted to help Crenwelge in every possible manner. "All of us have given him lessons and tips," says one of the group which includes Mickey Nunley, Max von Roeder and Bill J. Hood. Dean Floyd even started closing on Saturday afternoon in hopes that he could help Crenwelge sharpen his fishing skills.

A couple of weekends ago, Crenwelge and Nunley entered a tournament in Colorado City. It appeared that all the coaching had finally paid off. Nunley and Crenwelge were fishing out of the same rig, and Ted was hauling 'em in.

Nunley told Ted, "You'll place no lower than third, if you stop right now." Ted had his momentum and assured Nunley he wanted to stay at it.

After some time, Nunley convinced Crenwelge to head for shore for the weigh-in. In anticipation of his trophy, Crenwelge urged Nunley to hurry.

When they reached the dock, Crenwelge reached for his prize catch and realized that the stringer had not been hauled inside the boat. His worst fears were realized when he grabbed the stringer and it felt light...with only a scant evidence of his day's work remaining.

Says Nunley, "The record books show he still hasn't ever caught a fish.".

Ask Us

Q. — Why didn't the residents of Borden County know sooner that their county was being considered as a dump site?

A. — This question was asked and answered Monday night at the Borden County meeting in Gail. An authority spokesman said that due to a "shortage of manpower" within their own organization, the policy had been to notify of a possible land sale after negotiations had begun in the county. Tom Blackburn, director of special projects, said "as a form of an apology, perhaps we should have come directly to county administrators when we began looking at the county."

In Brief

Cruise test now underway

GRAND CENTRE, Alberta (AP) — An unarmed cruise missile, riding on a U.S. B-52 bomber, took off from North Dakota today for a test run over Canada, and a Canadian court rejected anti-nuclear protesters' efforts to stop it.

The Federal Court of Canada in Ottawa this morning dismissed an anti-cruise coalition's request for an injunction to halt the test. Lt. Jim Stratford, public affairs officer at the Grand Forks Air Force Base in North Dakota, said, "The test is going to proceed as planned."

The injunction was sought by Operation Dismantle, a coalition of peace, women's and labor groups. Gordon Henderson, a lawyer for the group, contended that allowing the flight to begin before the Supreme Court of Canada rules on another case questioning the permissibility of the tests would be an "abuse of power" by the United States government.

Independence is leaving

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. naval fleet off Lebanon has been reduced to its smallest size since the November buildup after the suicide bombing of the Marine headquarters at the Beirut airport, Pentagon sources say.

The aircraft carrier Independence is leaving the Lebanese coast to join a major NATO fleet exercise in the North Atlantic and Norwegian Sea, the sources said Monday.

When the Independence heads into the Atlantic about mid-week, it will be the first time the U.S. force in the Mediterranean has been reduced to one carrier battlegroup since Nov. 7. The only remaining carrier is the John F. Kennedy.

There are now 12 U.S. naval ships off Lebanon, plus the battleship New Jersey visiting Haifa, Israel, down the coast, according to Pentagon sources who asked to remain anonymous.

The U.S. Marine force of about 1,300 men was withdrawn from Beirut in late February. Between 200 and 300 U.S. military personnel remain behind to guard U.S. diplomatic buildings and to train Lebanese troops.

Deputy governor is killed

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — IRA gunmen shot and killed a deputy governor of the Maze prison outside his Belfast home today in front of his wife and 3-year-old daughter, police said.

A police spokesman said two gunmen approached the victim on foot and fired several shots from point-blank range as the wife and child screamed.

District to mull map plan

An automated mapping system is to be considered again by members of the Scurry County Appraisal District board of directors at their March meeting Tuesday.

The session will begin at 7 p.m. in the appraisal district offices, 2612 College Ave.

The district had discussed purchasing this system — which uses computer technology to create three-dimensional graphics — in conjunction with the City of Snyder.

Snyder city council members eventually voted against participating in such an agreement, however.

In other business Tuesday, the board will consider bids for building contents and liability insurance.

Area school breaks slated

Ira and Hermleigh schools will be off this week for spring break.

Ira students, teachers and school personnel will be off Thursday and Friday with regular classes resuming on Monday.

Hermleigh students, teachers and school personnel will not be in class Friday and Monday but will return on Tuesday at the regular hour.

SOCAL agrees to save Gulf from Pickens group

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Standard Oil Co. of California reached agreement to acquire embattled Gulf Corp. for $13.2 billion, in what would be the largest business takeover in U.S. history.

The deal, if approved by the U.S. Justice Department's Anti-Trust Division, would create the nation's third largest oil company behind industry leader Exxon Corp. and No. 2 Mobil Corp.

Under a definitive merger agreement approved Monday by both boards, fifth-ranked Socal would pay $80 per share for 165 million outstanding shares in Gulf, the nation's sixth-largest oil company according to 1983 production figures.

In San Francisco, Socal spokesman Guy Caruthers said undetermined operations probably would be divested to satisfy possible government concerns about the new company's share of the gasoline refining and retail markets.

"That's the key issue. Will they be able to get it around the Justice Department?" said Bryan Jacoboski, an industry analyst for Paine Webber Mitchell Hutchins Inc.

The antitrust concerns probably will revolve around the refining and marketing operations, he said.

The Kuwait Petroleum Co., which bought most of Gulf's European refining and marketing operations, "would solve Socal's problems" by bidding for the properties, Jacoboski said.

The agreement ended intense speculation on which oil giant would emerge as a "white knight" to counter a hostile $65-a-share offer led by Texas oilman T. Boone Pickens Jr., chairman of Mesa Petroleum Corp.

Gulf Chairman James E. Lee and Socal Chairman George M. Keller announced the merger in a joint statement following a special meeting of Gulf's directors in Pittsburgh.

Atlantic Richfield Co., which reportedly had arranged a $12 billion credit line, said it too had bid at Gulf's invitation.

"Another bid was selected and we wish them and the Gulf Oil Corp. well in their endeavors," Arco said in a statement.

Socal's deal would surpass Texaco Inc.'s recent $10.13 billion purchase of Getty Oil Co. as the largest U.S. business takeover.

Socal said it would not be bound to purchase Gulf's 165 million outstanding shares unless 85 million shares, or 51 percent, are tendered. The agreement also grants Socal an option to buy 30.5 million Gulf shares at $80 per share.

An $80-per-share offer from Socal would generate a substantial profit for members of Pickens' group, which acquired 22.7 million Gulf shares for $978 million and can sell them to Socal for $1.7 billion.

Gulf's management opposed the Pickens group, which has said it might liquidate Gulf's assets if it won control.

"A serious issue is what is Pickens going to do with his money now that he's got so much," said Jacoboski, suggesting the Mesa chairman might try to take over another oil company.

Gulf said last week it had opened merger negotiations with "several" companies in its attempt to block Pickens.

Pickens' group holds slightly more than 13 percent of Gulf's common shares and made a tender offer for an additional 8.2 percent of the stock at $65 a share.

A call to Pickens' office at Mesa headquarters in Amarillo, Texas, was not returned late Monday.

Any Gulf shares not tendered under Socal's cash offer can be redeemed for a right to receive $80 cash in exchange, the companies said.

Gulf's common stock rose $1.25 a share Monday to finish the day at $70.75.

Berry's World

"You're RIGHT! It HAS been a while since any of the gang has made an insensitive remark."

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I received a questionnaire the other day on being a parent. There were only four questions and the first three were a piece of cake to answer.

How do you keep kids in car seats happy? Easy. Cut a hole in it and tell them, "Go potty." They won't make a sound for three days.

Is it harder to adjust to a third child because parents are outnumbered? Not really. Tell him you got him "on approval."

What is the one thing you've done to promote your child's self-esteem? Simple. Buy his high school diploma.

It was the fourth question that threw me. "As a parent, what do you feel you did wrong or would do differently if you had it to do over?" They left a blank open to accommodate two sentences.

Given a choice, I have always felt I should have been younger when the children were born and they should have been older. I needed the stamina of a 15-year-old who could get by on four hours of sleep a night and giggle when things weren't funny. Had they been older maybe the bugs in their plumbing could have been worked out and they could communicate with you once in awhile.

I talked too much. I had good material, but I used it indiscriminately. I used the same two-hour speech on filling their glass too full of milk as I used when they stayed out all night without calling home. The speech lost its effectiveness.

Every hour I said, "Why don't you grow up?" and when they did, I accused them of wanting to be an adult too fast.

I never really looked at them. When I looked at their mouth, I saw dirt around it. When I looked at their nose, I saw it running. When I looked at their eyes, I saw them open when they should have been closed. When I saw their hair, it needed combing or cutting. I never really looked at the whole face, without offering some advice.

For 20 years, I invited myself into their lives. I put sweaters on them when I was cold, removed blankets from their bed when I was hot. I fed them when I was hungry and put them to bed when I was tired. I put them on diets when I was fat. I carpooled them when I felt the distance was too far for me to walk. Then I told them they took a lot of my time.

I never realized as I dedicated my life to yellow wax buildup and ring-around-the-collar that cleanliness is not next to godliness — children are.

As for what I'd do differently if I had it to do over again? Give me another sheet of paper.

Powell remembered for grace, elegance

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — The death of William Powell has taken from the film world a brilliant actor and deprived those who knew him of a friend possessing grace and elegance, said performers who worked with Powell during his 33-year career.

Powell, best known for his work in "The Thin Man" detective movies and "Mister Roberts," died Monday at age 91 from "the infirmities of old age," said his physician, Dr. Irving Hirshleifer.

Powell entered Desert Hospital on Sunday after experiencing trouble breathing, said Hirshleifer.

Powell's wife of 44 years, former actress Diana Lewis, was with him when he died.

"Bill was possibly the most attractive man I've ever met," said Jack Lemmon, who earned an Academy Award as for his supporting role alongside Powell in the 1955 classic, "Mister Roberts," Powell's last film.

Powell had played "Doc" to Lemmon's Ensign Pulver and Henry Fonda's Roberts.

He was one of the top performers at MGM during Hollywood's golden years. It was at MGM he met Diana Lewis, also a contract player there.

He had been married twice before, to actress Carole Lombard, and to Eileen Wilson, who bore his son. William Jr. committed suicide in 1968 at the age of 43.

Powell also was engaged to glamorous actress Jean Harlow when she died in 1937.

Powell won Academy Award nominations for "My Man Godfrey" in 1936, "Life With Father" in 1947, and the 1934 "The Thin Man."

Other screen roles included "Beau Geste" in 1926; "Street of Chance" 1930; "The Great Ziegfeld" 1936 and "How to Marry a Millionaire" in 1953.

Tuna: high-protein, low-calorie

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

Tuna has been on dieters' lists for many years. It makes a good sandwich spread, is ideal for hot casseroles and is especially versatile in salads.

Here is a flavorful, high-protein salad that is low in calories.

Start with hot bouillon and serve fresh fruit for dessert.

LOW-CALORIE TUNA

- 1 can (6 1/2 or 7 ounces) tuna in vegetable oil
- 1 medium tomato, peeled and diced
- 1 jar (4 ounces) pimiento, drained
- 1/2 cup low-fat creamed cottage cheese
- 1/2 teaspoon lemon juice
- 1/2 teaspoon salt (optional)
- 1 onion slice
- 2 tablespoons chopped parsley
- Stuffed olives

In medium bowl, mix tuna and tomato. Place 3 tablespoons on each of 8 seafood shells or ramekins. In container of electric blender, combine pimiento, cottage cheese, lemon juice, salt and onion slice. Cover and process at high speed until smooth. Stir in parsley. Spoon 2 tablespoons pimiento sauce over each serving of tuna and top with slice of stuffed olive. Place under broiler for 3 minutes or until hot. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 8 servings; 50 calories per serving. This recipe may be doubled to make 16 servings.)

By Oswald Jacoby and James Jacoby

The maxim of today's Kelsey hand is a simple one. It is: "Don't signal when you can only help declarer."

The game was a team-of-four event. Both declarers reached three no-trump on identical bidding. At table one, South received a club lead and had little trouble collecting 10 tricks. At the other table, West, having decided that East had to hold spades, opened the 10 of that suit. Declarer played low from dummy and East signaled strength with the nine.

This gave South a clear picture of the spade situation. West had clearly opened a doubleton 10, and East held six of that suit. South reasoned further that East held nothing else or he would have overcalled with one spade, had he held either the diamond king or the club ace.

Therefore South ducked the first spade, won the second (he had to) and led a diamond to pick up West's singleton king. He cashed the queen of diamonds to see if West held K-x instead of a singleton king. Then he took his three high hearts, went back to dummy with the diamond jack, threw West in with a heart, and eventually scored two club tricks to make his contract.

Mrs. League's program on energy saving tips

Snyder Garden Club met March 1 at the Martha Ann Woman's Club. Members answered roll call with "an energy saving idea I use in my garden."

An update of the Cornelius-Dodson House landscaping project was given by Jo Ann Nunley. She reported phase II of the two-year project will begin when it is determined which plants survived the winter weather.

President Julie Fox encouraged members to take part in the garage sale March 3 sponsored by the MAWC board.

Carol Davis announced the District VIII spring convention will be held March 23 at Coleman. Several members made reservations to attend.

Plans were made for the garden club to head the flower show for the Scurry County Fair to be held this fall.

Gertrude League presented the program "Gardening to Save Energy."

During the Martha Ann Woman's Club report, the group was informed of upcoming events, Margaret's style show March 17, and the MAWC style show and hair fashions to be April 7. Laverne Hood reminded the group that tickets must be bought prior to the events and reservations will be necessary.

Hostesses were Bertha Terry and Glenna Jones. The club's next meeting is April 5 at the clubhouse.

Spring jewelry will be colorful

NEW YORK (AP) — There will be strong emphasis on color in jewelry for spring, reports Kae McCulloch, fashion director of the Jewelry Industry Council.

Pearls, in natural colors as well as permanently dyed hues, will be popular, with pink, gold, blue and cream making a strong showing. Colored pearls mix and match with gemstones and monochromatic or contrasting color schemes.

Colored gemstones will be used as the centerpieces of pearl necklaces, she notes. And simple strands of pearls will be embellished with faceted gold or diamond rondelles between each pearl, or stations of varicolored stones.

Education panel proposes school for four-year-olds

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — If a recommendation by a subcommittee of the Select Committee on Public Education is approved, all Texas children aged 5 would have to go to kindergarten a full day, with the state picking up the tab.

The subcomittee made the unanimous recommendation Monday. The panel also proposed that Texas public schools offer full-day pre-kindergarten programs for 4-year-olds. But the panel said such attendance would be optional.

During the subcommittee's final meeting Monday, the group also approved a long list of other educational recommendations. These subjects will be taken up and debated in Dallas on March 14, when the full committee meets.

From there, the recommendations will be sent to the Legislature for consideration.

Monday's recommendation proposed that all students attend kindergarten at age 5 and that the state pay for the full day.

Under current law, students must enter school by age 7. The state pays only for half-time kindergarten, although the Austin school district already operates a full-day kindergarten program.

The subcommittee balked at requiring mandatory attendance for 4-year-olds.

"I'm willing to establish programs for parents who want them, but it has to be voluntary," said subcommittee chairman Jon Fleming of Fort Worth.

Panel members said they were emphasizing early childhood education because of expert testimony saying it increases a child's chances for success in school.

Committee member and former legislator Tony Bonilla of Corpus Christi argued that many leading educators now believe formal schooling should begin at age 4.

"The comment of the authorities in the field is that a great deal can be accomplished educationally with 4-year-old children," Bonilla said. "If we want to get out of the rut we're in, we need to do what the experts say, that learning can begin as early as age 4."

Two of the seven subcommittee members voted against this proposal, saying age 4 is too early for most children to start school.

"I think 5 is soon enough," said State Rep. Bill Haley, D-Center, a member of the committee.

E.R. Clegg, a committee member and also a member of the State Board of Education, voted against the proposal after citing huge costs that would result after schools expanded to admit a younger age bracket.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Adolescent pregnancy

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have an 11-year-old daughter who has had regular monthly menstrual cycles for the last six months. This early age runs in the family. When I was 13 I became pregnant with her in junior high school. My daughter will be entering junior high school next year and I'd like to prevent her from having an early pregnancy.

She has seen several physicians, but I want your opinion.

DEAR READER — I'm a little old-fashioned and think young people shouldn't engage in sex at such a tender age. There are a lot of emotional experiences involved. The pill can't possibly solve all those adjustments, even if it does prevent an unwanted pregnancy. Engaging in sex with another person should be delayed until people are emotionally and intellectually mature enough to know what they're doing. Physiological maturity may have little to do with emotional and intellectual maturity.

From a biological point of view, however, I think oral contraceptives are probably the best. There are too many problems with intrauterine devices and other temporary methods of birth control are not as reliable as oral contraceptives.

In light of new information on hormones, oral contraceptives really pose few dangers and even offer some pluses. I've discussed the new information in the Health Letter SR-12, Oral Contraceptives and Postmenopausal Estrogens, which I'm sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Young people should realize oral contraceptives don't protect against venereal disease or herpes.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm 31 and a recent pap smear came back Class III. My gynecologist did a biopsy and told me I had classic condyloma. He told me he could freeze the cervix, do a cone biopsy or remove the cervix and uterus.

I decided to start with freezing. He told me this was unreliable, but if I wanted to keep my fertility I could start with this. My decision was not based on keeping my fertility, but on my desire to avoid major surgery if possible. Did I do the right thing?

DEAR READER — Some people would call condylomas moist warts. When they're present on the cervix, the small flat area can't be differentiated from cancer without doing a biopsy. I presume from your letter that the biopsy revealed you had moist warts. These are caused by a common virus. They may develop during pregnancy because of increased secretions. The warm, moist environment seems to be conducive to their occurrence.

You probably made the right decision. Many gynecologists remove such lesions with freezing. The process is called cryosurgery and it's used to remove abnormal tissues with freezing rather than with cutting. Doctors who use this technique report a very high success rate. And if recurrences of the lesions occur, the treatment can be repeated, improving the success rate even more.

These moist warts are not cancerous, although some doctors feel the virus that produces them may increase a person's chances of developing cervial cancer.

Dear Abby

Frantic Grandparents Search For Hold on Child's Future

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Our 17-year-old son and his 16-year-old girlfriend have gotten themselves in trouble. The baby is due next month, and we are frantic!

They have decided not to get married and are putting the baby up for adoption instead. The girl's parents wholeheartedly support this decision, and to our sorrow, so does our son.

We, as the child's grandparents, are opposed to this adoption idea. Because our son is a minor, he needs our signature on the adoption papers along with his own. The girl's parents must also sign the adoption papers, and, of course, they will.

Our son, who will be 18 in November, says if we refuse to sign, the baby will go from the hospital to a foster home and stay there until our son turns 18 and can sign without us.

Do we have any rights in this matter? Hurry, please. Time is running out.

CARING PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: The laws relating to adoption and minors differ drastically from state to state, so it's not possible to tell you what your rights are, if indeed you have any concerning the future of your soon-to-be-born grandchild.

The physically ill lose no time in consulting physicians whom they gladly pay for their services. Why, then, do so many people who need legal services hesitate to consult a lawyer? Please see one. Time is indeed running out.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I had plans to get married in June and I need your advice. My future husband is now unemployed, but I have a job. I told him that we could manage on what I make, but he wants to call off the wedding. He says he doesn't want a woman supporting him.

I tried to tell him that a lot of women are working because their husbands are unemployed, but he doesn't believe me.

Please help me change his mind, Abby. I love him and I know we could make it on my job if we are careful.

B. IN KENTUCKY

DEAR B.: It's true, in some families the wife is the only one bringing in a paycheck, and it works out fine. But if a man (or woman) does not want to get married—regardless of the reason—I would not try to change his (or her) mind.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I travel a lot by automobile, and we listen to the radio for company and weather reports. It is really frustrating when the radio announcer says, "This is Station XYZ and we have tornado warnings out for Windsor County," with no mention that the station is in River City, Okla.! The tornado could be right next to us, or 300 miles away because radio stations have such a long range now.

The FCC should require that stations give their city and state with the station's call letters.

We live in Vermont and used to hear Bob Steel in Hartford, Conn., and Mr. Steel is the only announcer we have ever heard give the city and state with the call letters. Thank you, Bob Steel.

TICKED-OFF TRAVELERS

DEAR TICKED: Thanks for a sensible suggestion. Are you listening, FCC?

Fire department investigates handling of ambulance call

DALLAS (AP) — An emergency call for an ambulance that took several minutes because a nurse wanted to talk to a dying woman is being investigated by the Dallas Fire Department, officials said.

Television station KDFW broadcast Monday a tape of the emergency call Larry Boff, 40, made Jan. 5 when his stepmother, Lillian Boff, became ill. Mrs. Boff died before paramedics arrived, the station reported.

KDFW said it obtained the tape recording from the Dallas Fire Department under the Texas Open Records Act.

Fire Department Capt. Mike Jones told the station that the department was investigating the case. Registered nurses are hired by the fire department to screen emergency requests for ambulances. Jones told the station that screening calls normally takes about a minute.

Here are transcripts of calls to the emergency number made by Boff and his roommate:

Nurse: "And what is the problem there."

Boff: "I don't know, if I knew I wouldn't be..."

Nurse: "Sir, would you answer my questions, please?. What is the problem?"

Boff: "She's having difficulty in breathing."

Nurse: "How old is this person?"

Boff: "She's 60 years old."

Nurse: "Where is she now?"

Boff: "She is in the bedroom right now."

Nurse: "Can I speak with her please?"

Boff: "No, you can't. She seems like she's incoherent."

Nurse: "Why is she incoherent?"

Boff: "How the hell do I know!"

Nurse: "Sir, don't curse me."

Boff: "Well, I don't care. You stupid — questions you're asking. Give me someone who knows what they're doing. Why don't you send an ambulance out here?"

Nurse: "Sir, we only come out on life-threatening emergencies."

Boff: "Well, this is a life-threatening emergency."

Nurse: "Hold on, sir. I'll let you speak with my super... uh, officer."

Supervisor: "Hello?"

Boff: "What do I have to do to get an ambulance out to this house?"

Supervisor: "You have to answer the nurse's questions."

Boff: "All right! What are they, before she dies will you please tell me what the hell you want?"

Supervisor: "Well, I tell you what, if you curse one more time I'm gonna hang up the phone."

Boff: "Well, I'll tell you what, what if this were your mother in there and can't breathe, what would you do?"

Supervisor: "You answer that nurse's questions and we'll get you some help."

Boff: "She's having difficulty in breathing she cannot talk."

Supervisor: "OK, she's back on the air. Don't you cuss her again."

Nurse: "OK, sir, I need to talk to her still."

Boff: "You can't. She is incoherent."

Nurse: "Let me talk to her sir."

Boff (to his roommate): "Please tell her she's incoherent and cannot talk. (to the nurse) She cannot talk at all.

Nurse: "Why?"

Boff: "Well, how am I supposed to know?"

Nurse: "Well give her the phone."

Boff: (to his roommate) "Give her the phone in there. Give her the phone. I know she can't talk but they want to talk to her. But she can't talk. (to the nurse) Forget it. I'll call the main hospital around here, all right?

Nurse: "OK. Bye-bye."

Boff called the nearby Mesquite Hospital but was told it could not send an ambulance to his house in Dallas, the television station reported. With Mrs. Boff's condition worsening, Boff's roommate, Dennis Fleming placed a second call to the emergency number:

Nurse: "Are you the same man I was talking to earlier?"

Fleming: "No, that was my roommate."

Nurse: "Uh huh. Why can't I talk to the lady?"

Fleming: "She cannot talk."

Nurse: "Why?"

Fleming: "She's in... she's just out of it. In fact, he's going in there now. He thinks she's dead."

Nurse: "What do you mean by 'out of it?'"

Fleming: "She is incoherent."

Boff (back on the line): "She's dead now. Thank you, ma'am! Would you please send an ambulance? Would you please send an ambulance here?"

Fire department officials said the nurse was "sanctioned" for her handling of the call, KDFW reported. The nurse was never identified.

Christ allowed in Christmas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court's decision allowing Christ to be included in public Christmas observances has caused the widely divergent reaction that befits a ruling reached by the narrowest of margins.

Municipal and religious leaders nationwide swiftly praised or panned the court's 5-4 decision Monday that Pawtucket, R.I. — and communities nationwide — may include nativity scenes in officially sponsored holiday displays.

"It's a victory for religious tolerance," said Richmond, Va., lawyer James Knicely for the Coalition of Religious Liberty.

"The nativity scene relates to both the national holiday and to the holy day, and you can't separate the two," exulted former Pawtucket mayor Dennis Lynch, who led the legal fight to restore his city's sponsorship of a nativity scene, often called a creche.

But Myron Hall of the Ecumenical Ministries of Oregon saw danger in the decision. "People are no longer able to distinguish between what is American and what is Christian," he said. "That, from a theological point of view, is not very good."

Rabbi Alexander Schindler, president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, said: "The ruling is a defeat not only for church-state separation but for the very principle of religious freedom in our country, and thus for the cause of religion itself."

The court ruled that Pawtucket did not violate the constitutionally required separation of church and state when it included a scene depicting the Biblical version of Jesus Christ's birth among its annual Christmas decorations.

Two lower courts had struck down the city's 40-year tradition of displaying the creche.

Borden residents protest dump site

County residents — supported by elected officials from Scurry, Howard and Dawson Counties as well as a state representative and senator — repeatedly made their point clear.

As one crowd member summed it up, "We don't want it here. That's the point of this whole meeting."

The general manager of the low-level waste authority, Rick Jacobi, responded that a federal mandate insures that the disposal site will be located somewhere in Texas.

The reason for this echoed another question heard frequently Monday in Gail. "Where is (the waste) produced and why isn't it dumped there?"

Under federal law, after 1986 each state must take responsibility for its own nuclear waste disposal. Such material now goes to a site in Hanford, Wash.

As to "why" Borden County is now being considered, Jacobi commented that "technically" the county was as good a place as exists in Texas for the dumping site.

A majority of low-level wastes produced in Texas come from the Galveston-Houston area and from research being conducted at the University of Texas in Austin, they said.

But a combination of reasons makes these parts of the state unsuitable, the authority's chief engineer, Ruben Alvarado, pointed out.

The physical characteristics missing in those parts of Texas but identified in Borden County include a deep water table, a layer of underlying clay resistant to water seepage, a relatively low rainfall, a good highway system in and out and a sparse population.

"The real concern is the contamination of ground water," Alvarado said.

This possibility figured in another series of concerns from Borden County residents — the fact that the majority of their county involves the upstream watershed which runs into Lake J.B. Thomas.

Authority personnel maintained that the "technology" of such a site has advanced to a point now that this risk would be minimal.

They noted that the key is that no "liquid" wastes would be disposed of at the site.

But one state-elected official at Monday's meeting questioned this technology. John T. Montford, the Lubbock state senator who represents Borden County and 13 other counties to the west and north, said in his opinion "There's just not enough expertise yet for such waste — including low-level waste."

Montford added, "I'm tired of West Texas being used as a receptable for the rest of the state's waste. Let's put it in Highland Park of River Oaks if it's so safe."

Another elected official, Steven Carriker of Roby, the state representative for such counties surrounding Borden as Lynn, Garza, Kent and Scurry, questioned also the possible stigma attached to a county where any type of nuclear dumping site has been located.

"I think there's a fear that once you've got a site, it serves as a magnet for other types of waste." He pointed to the possibility that some type of commercial waste site might locate in Borden "just because they've already got a nuclear waste site."

Authority manager Jacobi responded that the "different technologies involved" (in storage) would make such a possibiliy "not automatic."

As an example, he said that the technology required to store high-level radioactive waste is "totally incompatible" with low-level dumping.

His comment was that it would be "technically impossible" to have facilities for both in the same area.

Concerning the current search, authority spokesmen restated the current status of this effort.

The authority currently has a signed option to purchase land in South Texas near Asherton (Dimmit County) and has two other sites identified on University of Texas-owned land in Hudspeth County near El Paso.

From a legal standpoint, the authority must purchase the land to include both surface and mineral rights. Under its current charter, it does not have the right to condemn land "in the public good" for such a facility — the right of "imminent domain."

When asked "what if you eventually don't have land which you can purchase," Blackburn said the authority would have to return to the state legislature for direction.

The possibility that an imminent domain power might eventually be granted was not discounted, however.

This would assume that attempts to locate a site would fail under the current plan, guidelines set down by the Texas State Legislature when it created the authority in 1981.

The authority staff's job is to identify as many sites as possible and to make a recommendation to a six-member board previously appointed by Texas Gov. Mark White.

This board will then authorize the staff to apply for a license through the Texas Department of Health to operate the facility at one of these sites.

This site selection decision is expected this coming April.

The authority must then go through a series of public hearings involving obtaining this license — hearings which will be conducted in the county eventually named.

The decision making process then ultimately rests with the commissioner for the state health board — who must give final approval for the licensing.

Once a license is granted, the operation of the facility will begin. This identification and licensing process is expected to take five years, one of which has already elapsed.

Once the site is operating, it is to be used for a 30-year period, then closed. Under the law, the authority will be responsible for monitoring the facility for 100 years after the closing.

TDC official quits position

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — The Texas prison system's assistant director for business, who has announced his retirement, says no one person has overall control of prison finances and has urged the appointment of one financial overseer.

Jack Kyle, who has held his position for 19 years, informed state prison board chairman Robert Gunn of his decision in a letter Monday.

"Anybody would expect the assistant director of business to be in control of all finances," Kyle said. "That simply is not true. This has not been done in the past and therein lies the problem."

Each assistant director within the Texas Department of Corrections is responsible for his budget, Kyle said.

Kyle is the latest of a growing number of TDC personnel to leave the prison system. Longtime director W.J. Estelle resigned in October and eight TDC employees were fired recently following an investigation into allegations of brutality against inmates.

Last week, acting director Dan V. McKaskle announced he would retire, but changed his mind the same day after meeting with Gov. Mark White.

TDC's business practices are under review by consultants who already have found more than $1 million in questionable architectural fees.

Kyle said he had thought of retiring for several months and discussed it with Estelle as early as last summer. He said he felt no pressure to quit, but added that the job had become increasingly frustrating.

"It's frustrating when someone starts asking you a question and you have no answer for it because you have no responsibility over that area," he said.

In his letter to Gunn, Kyle urged the prison board to appoint one staff member who has ultimate control of TDC funds.

"No one staff member has overall fiscal authority in our current procedure," Gunn said. "Call the position comptroller, finance director, assistant director or any title, but such a position involves more than a title."

Kyle's responsibilities included overseeing the prison's food service operations, its print shop and vehicle maintenance shop, he said. But Kyle said he exercised little control over other areas, such as agricultural, construction, security or prison industries.

Assistant directors overseeing those areas were responsible for those expenditures, Kyle said.

"Any time you don't have one person (with overall responsibility), you're asking for trouble," he said.

Kyle, a 26-year employee of the prison system, said he will assist in the transition process if the corrections board wants him to do so. Kyle said he probably will leave the department no earlier than July or later than September.

Gunn said the board, which is scheduled to meet Monday, will make choosing Kyle's successor a top priority.

"We're trying very hard to fill it," Gunn said. "I don't know if we can or will by the next meeting, but we consider it a very essential role in our new administrative structure."

Arrests noted

Snyder police logged two misdemeanor arrests Monday evening.

Two men were arrested for public intoxication late Monday and one of the men was also charged with disorderly conduct and one count of misdemeanor criminal mischief.

Congress talks prayer issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — As House supporters of a proposed constitutional amendment to restore officially sanctioned prayer to public schools talked all night, Senate sponsors braced for a long, drawn out battle that could ultimately be decided by the narrowest of margins.

House sympathizers lent their support for the amendment by keeping the House in a rare, all-night session that continued until 8:52 a.m. EST today — 19½ hours after it began.

In the Senate, sponsors searched for votes while opponents vowed delaying tactics that could stretch out debate until early June.

President Reagan, who made adoption of the prayer amendment a major campaign theme, renewed his call for the amendment in a Columbus, Ohio, speech prepared for the National Association of Evangelicals.

The House talkathon began early Monday afternoon. Speaker after speaker praised the effort to permit officially sponsored prayer in schools — often addressing a chamber empty of other members and watched by few spectators.

By daybreak, a single person sat in the gallery overlooking the Senate floor.

The session was telecast by one Washington-area station and by cable TV systems around the country.

"The prayer amendment is needed to permit the American people to reaffirm that there is a standard of right or wrong higher than the state," said Rep. Chalmers P. Wylie, R-Ohio, one of several dozen participants in the marathon session.

Another supporter, Rep. Lawrence Coughlin, R-Pa., noted that the motto "In God We Trust" was engraved above the speaker's chair in the chamber. "It's ironic that we open a day's session with prayer, and flatly prohibit prayer in schools," he said.

About 60 people gathered in a separate room in the Capitol for an all-night prayer vigil.

plants that use low-cost lignite fuel has already produced net savings to customers of $2.8 billion since 1975. The Commnche Peak nuclear plant is another step in the process and, even with its higher construction costs, customers will benefit in the future with lower cost electricity from Commanche Peak than from other alternatives because of its low fuel costs, Clark continued.

Completion of Commanche Peak and the continued construction of four scheduled lignite coal units are necessary to provide added fuel flexibility and reliable, reasonably priced electricity to one of the fastest growing areas in the nation, Clark added.

"The company's construction program has helped keep electric rates in this area below the average of major U. S. cities, and we are committed to continuing this record of supplying reliable electric service at the most reasonable cost possible," Clark said.

The company provides electric service in 91 counties of north central, east and west Texas to more than 4.5 million people. It's service area spans some 600 miles from west to east, extending from near the New Mexico border into far east Texas, and 250 miles from north to south, from the Red River into the center of the state.

Westerners regional-bound

By BILL McCLELLAN
SDN Sports Editor

For the first time in four years, Western Texas College's Westerners are headed to the Region V Tournament.

The Westerners earned the berth here Monday as they fought to a 23-point lead with 13 minutes to play, then held off a furious South Plains rally to win 71-66 in a Western Junior College Athletic Conference playoff game.

Western, now 21-10 for the season, will take on McLennan Community College in Thursday's first-round regional action at the Chaparral Center in Midland. Tip-off is set for 2 p.m.

Coach Barry Davis, whose Westerners were just 10-21 a year ago, was somewhere between jubilant and reserved.

"This was the first step toward getting the opportunity to maybe go to the nationals," said the coach, who was receiving and giving hugs to fans. "We play Thursday and we'll go there with the intention of playing three games, one game at a time. We will get ourselves ready to play."

Western was certainly ready to play the Texans on Monday. They had lost to South Plains in last year's playoffs, and in both conference games this season. It wasn't to happen this time.

It was a two-point game until the 4:55 mark of the first half when 6-5 sophomore Larry Banks hit a field goal to put Western ahead 25-23. He was fouled on the play and missed the freeshot, but Fred Johnson was there to rebound and stick the ball through the hoop. Eugene Lewis and Melroy Butler got in on the scoring then as Western outscored the Texans 14-4 through the next four minutes to lead 37-27.

A turnover and missed shot led to South Plains' points, however, and WTC held only a 37-31 advantage at intermission.

But Western came out in the second half with a vengence. With freshman guard Billy Chambers directing traffic, Lewis and Banks turned on the green light and paced Western to a 20-3 scoring spree. Lewis, a 6-7 sophomore, hit 8 points in the seven-minute span while Banks scored 6. The blitz resulted in a 57-34 advantage for the Westerners.

"At halftime, I just told the guys to play hard and have fun. I didn't want them to think 'I've got to do this and do that' and get tight. As it turned out, we did get tight there for a while and we stopped having fun," Davis said.

Just as it looked as if Western might have the game wrapped up early, back came South Plains. Aided by an all-around performance from 6-3 guard George Kohelem and the outside shooting of Earl Harris, the Texans quickly cut into the 23-point lead. With 10 minutes left in the game, Coach Davis made the decision to work the clock.

"By then, our opponent was no longer South Plains, it was the clock," said the coach. "We wanted to run some time off, get into the one-and-one (bonus freethrows) and hopefully they'd foul us and we'd make the freethrows. If I had it all to do over again I'd do the same thing. I expected South Plains to get back in the game. You don't get to this point by not having a good basketball team and a good basketball team isn't going to quit. They are going to figure out a way to get back into the basketball game," he said.

But several turnovers and a couple of missed layups caused the Westerners to tighten up. The Texans took advantage and rallied to outpoint the hosts 18-4 over the next several minutes, pulling within eight points, 62-54, with 4:28 to go.

For a while, it seemed as if putting WTC at the line was not a good strategy - the Westerners hit only one of five attempts as the clock ticked from 1:47 to 56 seconds. Meanwhile, Harris and Kohelem stipped the lead to just five points, 67-62.

But Banks drilled a pair of charity shots with 56 seconds left and Jeff Gibson added two more at the 0:27 mark, sealing the victory.

"The guys did a good job, especially defensively and on the boards," said Davis. "It was just a great team effort. We had some good help off the bench. Melroy (Butler) came in a really helped out and Victor (Spencer and Jeff (Gibson) did too."

Chambers had 8 assists and 4 steals while Banks was high-point man for the Westerners with 23. Lewis battled for 18 points and 11 rebounds and Richie Fells had 11 points and 6 assists while Johnson contributed 8 points and 6 rebounds. Western hit 31 of 57 field goals and outrebounded the Texans 37 to 31.

South Plains, which ends the season with a 22-11 slate, got 23 from Kohelem and 19 from Harris. Chris Cooper added 12.

Dusters open region bid against Wranglers

MIDLAND -- Western Texas College Coach Joe Cushing knows well how hard it its to beat a team four straight times, but he believes his Dusters can do it today.

The Dusters, 26-7, are scheduled to tip off against Cisco Junior College at 4 p.m. here in round one of the Women's Region V Tournament.

Before the Dusters take the Chaparral Center floor, Amarillo will face McLennan at 2 p.m. In other games today, Howard plays Cooke County at 7 and Odessa takes on Ranger at 9.

Tickets for the tournament are be $4 for adults and $2 for students. A tournament package, good for all 14 women's and men's tournament games, will be available for $20 to both adults and students.

Western defeated the Wranglers by scores of 68-61, 55-53 and 74-66; three losses on Cisco's 20-11 season record. Cushing said his Dusters will not be overconfident today, however.

"This (Duster) team is unique in its personality in that they play one at a time. They know it's ground zero when you play over there. We've got several girls who played in state playoffs and they know what it is like. That's good because we rely on our freshmen a lot. I think we'll react positively to anything Cisco will throw against us."

The key to the Lady Wranglers' attack is 5-10 sophomore Barbara Williams. She consistantly lands in double figures - scoring 17, 19 and 22 in games against WTC - and had 32 points in her final regular season game.

"We'll have to stop her, but she's not the only weapon they have. They hit the boards well, they are quick and they are an extremely good outside shooting team. We won't be able to zone them," said Cushing.

Winner of the contest will play the McLennan-Amarillo victor at 7 p.m. Wednesday.

Tigers facing Central today

SAN ANGELO -- Snyder Coach Albert Lewis said his Tigers will play San Angelo Central here today at 4 p.m., despite the cool temperature.

The Tigers were to have played Plainview Monday, but that game was cancelled. Lewis said the game would be made up "sometime towards the end of the month."

Snyder will start senior Paul Tate (1-0) on the mound and relieve with William Cotton if necessary. Jay Mayo will take second base in the absence of Chris Sanders, who suffered an injury to his right hand this week.

"Defensively, we'll be fine. Jay is an excellent defensive player," said Lewis. "Chris had been one of our leading hitters in preseason and we'll probably miss his power. Other than that, we're fine."

Snyder is scheduled to entertain Big Spring at 4 p.m. Wednesday to close out the week. The Tigers have a full schedule after that, playing in Big Spring next Monday, in Plainview on Tuesday and hosting the Snyder Tournament on March 15-17.

Express signs Young for $40 million

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Never has there been anything like the contract All-American quarterback Steve Young now has with the Los Angeles Express of the United States Football League.

The agreement, which involves four seasons of football, will allow Young to earn $40 million over the next 43 years.

Young, who set or tied 13 NCAA passing and total offense records the past two years at Brigham Young, signed the mind-boggling contract Monday that overshadows any agreement ever signed by any athlete in any sport.

Young will receive in excess of $30 million in deferred payments from 1990 to 2027 - when he is 65 - through the income earned in graduated annuities.

"I hope to fix up my car and take my girlfriend out to dinner for the first time in four years .....," a grinning Young said at a press conference called to announce his signing.

Despite the probable effects of inflation, and the fact that $1 million deposited in a tax-free account today at 12 percent interest would grow to more than $93 million by 2024, the $40 million figure puts Young on a new plateau.

As a yardstick, President Reagan's annual salary is $200,000 a year plus a $50,00 expense account. Muhammad Ali earned approximately $50 million in 20 years of fighting. Donald Trump bought the USFL's New Jersey Generals for $10 million. The Metrodome in Minneapolis was built for $55 million.

The top total money contract in the National Football League now is that of San Diego quarterback Dan Fouts, who is receiving some $6 million over six years. The richest in the National Basketball Association belongs to Los Angeles' Earvin "Magic" Johnson, $25 million for 25 years. In baseball, it's the $21 million being paid over 10 years to the New York Yankees' Dave Winfield.

In the National Hockey League, it's the $21 million, 21-year contract owned by Edmonton's Wayne Gretzky.

Young is the latest beneficiary of the bidding competition between the USFL, which in its second season, is seeking to establish credibility by signing stars, and the NFL.

The newer league has grabbed two big 1983 prizes - running back Mike Rozier, the Heisman Trophy winner from Nebraska, and Young, runnerup in the Heisman voting.

Young's contract with Los Angeles, a source told The Associated Press, will be worth $1 million a year for the first four years and includes a $2½ million signing bonus. The complex agreement also includes a $100,000 annual endorsement policy with a savings and loan company in Salt Lake City, and a scholarship policy with BYU worth $183,000.

Young, who said he expects to be ready to play regularly for the Express in "a couple of weeks," insisted that money was not the deciding factor.

Alexander Pest Control will help you to combat termites

Question: What causes more damage every year than tornadoes, hurricanes and all other wind storms combined? Answer: The common subterranean termite!

Every year termites cause over $500 million in property damage, and this destructive insect is native to the Snyder and Scurry County area.

Termites are hard for the homeowner to spot because they live in the ground outside or under the house. They tunnel through the soil or build above ground mud tubes to reach their food which is the wooden parts of your house. These tiny insects can squeeze through cracks as small as one-sixty-fourth of an inch wide.

The workers and nymphs of the colony are the cellulose eaters. They supply food to the soldiers and reproductive termites. Occasionally you'll see flying termites or the wings they leave behind. These termites are the reproductive ones flying off to start new colonies.

FOR EFFICIENT, PROFESSIONAL PEST CONTROL call Craig Alexander at Alexander's Pest Control. The number is 573-7133. (SDN Staff Photo)

It is very important to protect your home and it's contents from termites. They eat not only the structural wood, but also books, clothing and anything else that contains cellulose.

It is very difficult if not impossible to control subterranean termites on a do-it-yourself basis. You need a professional pest control specialist.

Alexander's Pest Control specializes in the control of these destructive insects. They will place a chemical barrier around your home by injecting chemicals in the soil. This will eliminate any new infestation of your home. The foundation of the structure will also be treated. If necessary, cellulose debris will be removed from around the structure.

Owner Craig Alexander keeps abreast of the latest methods of pest and weed control by holding membership in both the National Pest Control Association and the Texas Pest Control Association.

Call Alexander's Pest Control at 573-7133 for all your pest control needs.

Playwright likes acting

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Playwright Beth Henley is finding as much satisfaction in front of the footlights as in penning Pulitzer Prize-winning scripts for others to perform.

"I just get a kick out of acting. I've been too busy writing to do it much," says the author of "Crimes of the Heart," which snared the 1981 New York Critics Circle Award as well as the nation's most prestigious writing honor.

"Crimes" repeated its Broadway triumph at Los Angeles' Ahmanson Theatre last spring and the touring company continues to earn acclaim nationwide.
