Erdmann gets American Spirit Award

"Freedom is not free," U.S. Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard C. "Buck" Marr said Wednesday in citing the nation's 1.3 million war dead since the American Revolutionary War.

Marr, who is director of the Air Force's Air Education and Training Command at Randolph Air Force Base near San Antonio, said that "God has blessed this country.

"We are the longest-standing democracy in the history of the world," he said at the Midland Downtown Lions Club's pre-Memorial Day program to honor the nation's war dead and to salute its veterans and the men and women in the nation's armed forces.

In winning and in preserving the nation's freedom, "there are 1.3 million who paid the ultimate price," including more than 116,000 in World War I, more than 405,000 in World War II, and almost 37,000 in the Korean War and more than 58,000 in the Vietnam War.

"There a lot of things you can do on Memorial Day," Marr said. "You can lay a legacy for and a challenge to the ones who are alive."

In a special ceremony, Marr and Air Force Col. Darrel R. Greer, also of Randolph, honored aviation enthusiast Paul Erdmann, 68, the city's military consultant.

MISD faces scrutiny of grand jury

By Daniel Arp
Staff Writer

District Attorney Al Schorre has said he will bring allegations of open meetings violations by school district officers before the grand jury sometime this summer.

At the center of the allegations is a student appeal of a disciplinary action taken by Midland High School Principal Neil Richmond against Casey Gold Riggan, which has since evolved into a federal civil rights lawsuit.

Riggan, a senior at Midland High School, has sued district officials, the board of trustees and Richmond for allegedly violating his due process rights at various steps of the appeals process — which passed through central administration until it reached the board of trustees during its regular meeting May 11.

While Schorre's inquiry is a separate matter from Riggan's lawsuit, it does touch some of the same events.

A central question: Do the following events constitute an open or closed meeting?

A group of students, teachers and parents who supported Riggan waited outside the board room until 1 a.m. on May 12 to hear the school board's verdict on Riggan's appeal.

They never did.

According to eyewitnesses, once the closed hearing was over, the sign outside the board room was not changed to indicate the public could enter. Casey, his mother, Gail, his father, Tim, and his attorney, Brian Carney, were ushered in for the vote by Joe Cummins, executive director of administrative services, evaluation and planning.

Joey Kindred, an MHS senior and friend of Casey's, was eating a pizza on the floor with friends after hours of waiting outside the board room.

"I walked up and said, 'We can come in, can't we?' And he (Cummins) just shook his head and shut the door," Kindred said.

Carney said he also asked if the vote would be open to the public.

"Mr. Cummins told me the meeting was closed," said Carney.

According to Texas open meetings laws, all actions, decisions or votes by a governing body must take place in a setting that is open to the public.

Schorre is aware of this and another alleged criminal violation — both misdemeanors if proven true — though the matter is only in a "pre-investigation" phase, he said.

"I will be bringing this to the grand jury's attention to see if they are interested or if they think further action or inquiry is warranted," said Schorre.

But the school district — even in the wake of a re-vote taken Tuesday at Schorre's suggestion — maintains that no open meetings laws were violated May 12. Answers vary as to why.

"I'm not sure there was any violation personally since the board upheld the Level II (prior administrative) decision by taking no action," said Superintendent Joseph P. Baressi Jr.

A motion to uphold Casey's request of a reversal was denied in a 2-5 vote at that time.

Possibilities of settlement remote in Riggan lawsuit against MISD

By Daniel Arp
Staff Writer

Two prospects seem clear regarding the case of Riggan vs. MISD et. al. — Casey Riggan will graduate from Midland High School Saturday and, barring a miraculous about-face by one of the parties, he will not be allowed to walk across the stage.

Any hope of settlement — at least before graduation — seemed to die Tuesday night after negotiations between attorneys for both parties broke down.

Despite the failure to reach a compromise, the board voted 6-1 late Tuesday night to authorize Superintendent Joseph P. Baressi Jr. to allow Casey to walk without writing his mandated letters of apology, on condition that he drops his civil rights lawsuit against the school district. Board member Patricia Hodges dissented.

But the Riggans and their attorney are saying they will not take the deal.

"The school board has offered to allow Casey Riggan to do what he is entitled to do but for their unlawful action. And in turn they want him to dismiss his lawsuit," said Brian Carney, Riggan's attorney. "That's not much of a deal."

Air Park experiencing turbulence, may lose Basin Aviation

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

Air Park's future may have been put aside for another eight months but the future of its most permanent resident may be in jeopardy.

Basin Aviation, which has been Air Park's fixed base operator (FBO) since 1980, provides fuel service, sublets hangars, teaches flying lessons, rents aircraft, operates a charter service, maintains and repairs aircraft and works on radios.

The company's long tenure and many services, however, may come to an end with the expiration of its contract Dec. 31, 1999.

Basin's contract has run its term twice before. In 1980 the company signed a 10-year lease with the city of Midland. That contract was extended in 1990.

In 1994, a new contract was written which expires in December.

Both times, before now, Basin's contract has been renewed without putting it out for competing proposals.

"Typically our contracts provide for some type of extension. This one does not. The only thing that it says is that in the event the contract expires, it goes month to month," said Glen Hackler, deputy city manager.

That might not have been a problem in years past. Previously, when Air Park's FBO contract came up no one else was interested. This time they are.

On April 31, Tom Perry, president and CEO of Avion Flight Centre, the FBO at Midland International, sent a letter to Mayor Bobby Burns and the City Council expressing interest in bidding that contract.

"Avion would like to advise you that our bid will be considerably higher than the current charges for these facilities," Perry's letter said.

Parents unwilling to face responsibility, report says

Overcoming denial and increasing parental involvement are two keys to combating the growing concerns involving young people in the community, according to supporters of a report written by the Junior League of Midland.

The report, "Where Shall We Go, What Shall We Do," reflects an alarming growth in alcohol and drug abuse, and criminal and gang activity among Midland youth. The report's findings are largely based on a study conducted by a Midland County grand jury in 1996-97.

The report concluded that, despite a number of resources in place, tobacco use, and drug and alcohol abuse in Midland is a "major problem" (among teens) in Midland. Educating the public and increased parent involvement are crucial to correcting the current path on which many of Midland's youth appear to be heading. In fact, the report concluded, parental involvement is essential to combatting drug and alco-

MISD: School district to face scrutiny

(From 1A)

"That is a decision, though," said Don Richards, a freedom of information attorney in Lubbock, when cited the details of the case. "Once they let some people in there they have to let everybody in."

District officials also say that Cummins was advised by one of the district's attorneys, Ted Kerr, to close the vote because Texas open meetings laws may conflict with federal right to privacy laws in this case.

"What was suggested last night (at the board meeting during executive session) is that we seek an attorney general's opinion," Baressi said.

Baressi said he did not know about Kerr's claim that there was a conflict in law at the time of the vote May 12 — which Baressi said he considered open — and student grievance votes always have been open to the public in the past.

"Our routine is to vote in open session at the end of the hearing," said Baressi.

Kerr said he did not know why the matter had never been brought up before.

"I haven't been involved before," he said.

Kerr said district officials did not ask Riggan on May 12 if he wished to waive his privacy rights during the vote.

"At that time nobody had suggested that they wanted to have the meeting open that I know of," Kerr said.

Before the re-vote taken Tuesday night in open session, however, Carney waived his client's privacy rights to ensure the board could vote in public this time.

The board upheld its previous decision in a 3-4 vote — Glen Bufler was the only board member to change his vote.

As for what transpired outside the board room May 12, district officials' recollections differ. All board members and most administrators, including Baressi, were inside the board room the whole time and had no knowledge of the alleged refusals of entrance as they were occurring.

Barney Welch, executive director of communications services, was standing outside during the vote but said he did not remember whether the sign was changed or Cummins told others they could not enter.

"He may have said that," said Welch, who added he was exhausted and engaged in conversation at the time of the vote. Welch also said he was not clear whether Cummins had made the statement at the time of the vote.

"I know I was very tired, and I don't have a clear recollection of everything that transpired," Welch said.

Cummins declined to comment Wednesday.

Meanwhile, questions also have been raised — and are cited in Riggans' lawsuit filed May 14 — about conversations among board members leading up to the May 12 vote.

The lawsuit contends that then-Board President Martha Manulik called or spoke with other board members before the meeting and informed them of information outside the record. The lawsuit further alleges that Ms. Manulik "conspired against (the) Plaintiff in an effort to defeat (the) Plaintiff's appeal."

Martha Manulik had no comment Wednesday about the allegations.

An answer to the lawsuit was filed Wednesday in which the school district responded: "(The) Defendants deny that Martha Manulik violated (the) Plaintiff's civil rights and further deny that she violated any state law."

Schorre said he was aware of the allegations but added that there was a "big fact question" yet to be answered.

"It depends on the nature of the conversation ... You have to have all the details."

Schorre said it may make a difference, for instance, whether board members committed to voting a certain way during the conversations.

Nevertheless, Schorre said, "That (the alleged conspiracy prior to the vote) is one thing that the grand jury may look at later on."

And what of the May 12 vote now that it has been re-taken? Officials for the school district claim that any open meetings violations with regard to the vote now have been cured.

FOI attorney Richards said a re-vote does not cure violations as a matter of law, but that it is up to the district attorney's discretion whether to prosecute.

Schorre said he based his advice to the school district to re-vote on advice he had received from the Attorney General's Office, which Schorre said tends to be more wary of violations regarding financial transactions.

"Personnel matters and that sort of thing ... don't ring the bells as much as when it's financial," he said.

Regardless, the grand jury will be looking at all the alleged violations when it convenes on the question — probably in June or July, Schorre said.

And the next step after that?

"That will be up to them," Schorre said.

LIONS: Erdmann honored at pre-Memorial Day ceremony

(From 1A)

Award, which also has been presented to comedian Bob Hope, commentator Paul Harvey and New York Mayor Rudolph Guiliani.

The Midland pilot was cited for his consistent national support (of the Air Force) and community service."

Greer presented the award to Erdmann on behalf of Air Force Brig. Gen. Peter Sutton, commander of the Air Force Recruiting Services at Randolph.

"Your longstanding recognition and support for Air Force people is legendary and a shining example of the 'American Spirit,'" Sutton had said of Erdmann.

Erdmann, an Illinois native who has lived in Midland since 1978 and who is in the crude-oil trading business, has been involved in aviation since the 1960s.

Veterans recognized at the ceremony were Harry Spannaus, a retired Air Force colonel and former wing commander at the old Webb Air Force Base in Big Spring; Ed Magruder, a World War II Navy flier; Elmer Ratliff, a World War II U.S. Army infantryman; Armand Baldinelli, a member of the Merchant Marines during World War II and the Korean War; and former Marine Mike Jackson.

"Those of us who are living are the only ones who can pay tribute to those who died," Magruder said.

Dale Brown, Lions Club member who coordinated the ceremony, noted that many people in the armed services "served not in the glamor parts of the service, but everybody who served is worthy of honor.

Lions Club President Ray Smith, who in World War II piloted the C-46 Commando transport in the Himalaya Mountains in the China-Burma-India Theater, said that many of his fellow pilots and aircrew members killed in action "are still over there.

"That makes you think about those boys that didn't come home. They were good friends," Smith said. "It (Memorial Day) reminds me of those people who gave their all.'

LAWSUIT: School board 'arrogant,' father says

(From 1A)

Attorneys for the school district seem to have made their final offer.

"That's it. That's the offer that's on the table," said Rick Strange, an attorney for the school district. "It's entirely up to Casey Riggan."

As far as Riggan is concerned, however, the tone of Tuesday's negotiations have convinced him, he said.

"I'd rather receive my diploma in the mail than to have to walk across the stage and shake hands for it," he said. "I have no respect for those people."

Riggan has his family's support as well.

"I'll support Casey in every way I can to stop Baressi and his untouchables," said his father, Tim Riggan. "Their arrogance knows no bounds ... It's got to stop somewhere."

The case, now in federal court and being overseen by Judge Royal Ferguson, began as a dispute between the Riggan family and Principal Neil Richmond about a disciplinary decision the principal made regarding Riggan.

In early April, Riggan was pulled out of class and questioned by Jimmie Kelly, director of compliance and administrative services for the Midland Independent School District, concerning an investigation Kelly was conducting of Richmond.

Riggan admitted he was in possession of photographs of Richmond's car parked on a public street in front of a teacher's house.

The lawsuit claims Riggan did not take the photos but was present while they were being taken. The lawsuit also claims Riggan did not distribute the photos at school.

Richmond suspended Riggan on April 19 for three days and sentenced him to five days in an Alternative Education Program for a Level III offense: "conduct containing elements of the offense of retaliation under Penal Code 36.06 against any school employee."

Riggan had been reprimanded by Richmond twice in January for wearing a T-shirt with inappropriate language to MHS basketball games.

Richmond also required Riggan to write two letters of apology to him and the female teacher.

Riggan then took an appeal to the next step in the school district's grievance procedure: MISD central administration.

Joe Cummins, executive director of administrative services, evaluation and planning conducted the April 26 hearing, in which Richmond cited Riggan as the source of rumors that Richmond was having an affair with the teacher and claimed to be in possession of statements from students and teachers that supported his assertion. Riggan was denied access to these statements, however.

Cummins decided on April 29 to decrease the charge to a lesser Level II offense: disrespect to an adult. Nevertheless, he upheld Richmond's sentence, including the required letters of apology.

The school district conducted a hearing on the matter during its May 11 board meeting and similarly rejected Riggan's appeal in the early morning hours of May 12 — again admitting evidence based on statements to which Riggan had no access.

The lawsuit claims that because Riggan was never allowed to see the statements or have access to the names of the people who made them, the district violated Riggan's due process rights to confront his accusers.

The school district, however, in a response that was filed along with a motion to dismiss the case Wednesday, claims Ferguson has no jurisdiction and Riggan has no due process rights at stake in this case.

"It is well settled that a student has no constitutionally implicated rights as a result of a disciplinary action unless a student is expelled or receives some other similar punishment," MISD attorneys wrote. "(The) Plaintiff has no constitutional rights which were implicated by the punishment he received. Specifically, he has no due process rights, nor any other constitutionally protected property interest at stake."

The lawsuit also claims then-Board President Martha Manulik conspired before the May 11 meeting to defeat Riggan's appeal "and further carry out Defendant Richmond's violation of (the) Plaintiff's civil right(s)" by contacting other board members to discuss information outside the record.

A hearing was conducted in federal court May 14 in which Riggan sought a temporary restraining order against the school district's decision. The reason for the urgency, Carney argued, was that Riggan had yet to serve out his sentence and may not be able to graduate if he had to, due to absences throughout the year.

The district countered that Ferguson lacked jurisdiction to grant a restraining order and offered the promise that Riggan would graduate.

Ferguson said he could not reach an adequate "comfort level" that it was within his jurisdiction to grant a restraining order but did not dismiss the case entirely.

"The school board has a decision to make here about whether they're going to exacerbate this problem or make it better," Ferguson said. "It seems to me the parties ought to all sit down and talk a little bit."

Now, with rancor only building on both sides, the focus for both would seem to be on pursuing their respective ends of the case.

While the school district was busy filing its motion to dismiss Wednesday, Riggan's attorneys were gearing up to conduct discovery.

"We'll proceed with discovery and legal motions and proceed toward trial," said Carney. "(We'll be) trying to figure out when we can get everyone deposed and under oath. Maybe they'll tell the truth."

In addition, the Riggans said they had contacted the ACLU Wednesday.

The lawsuit, as yet, does not ask for damages other than attorney's fees; the Riggans said they have not yet discussed whether they will seek any additional money.

"They suspended him for three days, put him in AEP for five ... he missed his senior picnic, has had some medical problems because of the stress," said Gail Riggan, his mother. "Basically they've ruined the last six weeks of his senior year. How do you put a price on that?"

AIR PARK: Basin Aviation may lose long-time berth at air field

(From 1A)

In 1998 Basin Aviation paid the city $117,520 for land rent at Air Park.

Avion's willing spirit poses some problems and could likely force a bid.

"Our preference would not be to bid that out," Hackler said. "Our preference would be to extend the contract with a long-standing tenant with a good track record."

But the city may not get its preference.

According to the Department of Airports' minimum standards for aeronautical activities, "A fair and reasonable opportunity, without discrimination, shall be accorded to all applicants to qualify, or otherwise compete for available airport facilities ..."

That requirement clashes with another, meant to protect a competitive climate amidst Midland's general aviation.

"There is no plain reading. We are going to have to make a determination and not make a rush decision," said Hackler. "I think at this point we need to do the right thing and there is some indication that the right thing is to bid it out."

He added that the final determination has not been made.

"If they want to put it out for bid, we'd be interested in bidding it," said Perry, whose company seeks to become the sole FBO for Midland airports.

Hackler stressed that, "The Basin agreement is not related to any type of closure."

Basin Aviation currently hangars about 90 planes. Ken Day, director of airports, estimated that there are 15,000-20,000 take-offs and landings each year at Air Park. The figure is only an estimate because the field is not a controlled field.

Avion hangars approximately 75 planes.

REPORT: Parent involvement key to prevention, Junior League president says

hol abuse as well as the gang and criminal activity.

"A lot of parents and people in the community are in denial that there is a serious problem here," said Susie Chancellor, incoming chairman of the Junior League's Public Policy Committee, and author of the report's Teen Issues findings. "One thing I've heard from a lot from the agencies I have talked to is that the parents are not willing to accept the fact that there are kids who are in trouble here. Parents don't seem to be willing to take some of the responsibility of being a parent."

A parent's failure to follow through on disciplining their children can reflect poorly on the adult's ability to parent, a main reason for the denial expressed, according to Vicki Jay, president of the Junior League.

"When our kids mess up, we feel like we've messed up," Ms. Jay said. "We have to enforce the consequences. Practice tough love. But people back off (discipline and consequences).

"Speaking not as a Junior Leaguer, but as a parent, too many kids get MIPs (minor in possession of alcohol citations), and too many parents fight those MIPs. They think if their child has one, it reflects poorly on them."

Ms. Jay said many parents turn over the teaching of values and responsibilities to schools and programs, when the parents should assume that role of teacher.

"In the past, families took responsibility for their own children," Jay said. "Now we tend to give that responsibility to others."

Ms. Chancellor said two recent forums involving teens show that children are yearning for direct parental involvement. Additional studies have shown how vital a parent's influence can be.

"Parental involvement is the No. 1 deterrent to drug abuse," Ms. Chancellor said. "So many of the kids today just don't know how their parents feel about drug or alcohol use or about anything. Parents need to be clear to their children about expectations and communicate that to their children. Parents need to take every opportunity to sit and talk to their kids."

Knowing when is the best time to talk to a child can sometimes be difficult. Teen-agers may not be as reachable because of school concerns or other issues on their minds. At that point, parents should voice their desire to help if the child needs it, and express that they are there for the child to talk to if needed.

"There's a difference in talking to them and talking with them," Ms. Chancellor said. "Judging which is a real talent. Kids want to still have some parameters, but they want to start developing identities and to make their own decisions. It's sometimes tricky to know when to step in and when to say something, and when to let them make their own decisions."

In the grand jury report from which the Junior League's paper was drawn, parental neglect and abandonment of the child in early home life was identified as the first stage of juvenile activity that can later lead to gang involvement.

In the drug and alcohol abuse concerns, the Junior League identified three possibilities for implementation:

■ Forming a network of coordinated services, which would enhance communication and coordinate services between agencies that provide services to teens.

■ Education. "One of the greatest problems facing Midland is educating the community about the problems that drug and alcohol abuse are causing our community," the report said. "Most of the agencies in town all say that Midland 'is in denial about the problems it has.'"

■ Parental involvement. "Most experts have voiced the need to bring parents into the equation," Ms. Chancellor wrote. "The Junior League could develop or further programs that bring parents into their child's life. Parental involvement is the No. 1 counter to peer pressure."

Mary Beck, a member of the Junior League as well as the director of Midland Teen Court, said that programs are in place throughout the community to encourage parental participation and involvement in their child's life.

"Involvement is the key because parents are mentors to their children whether they realize it or not," Ms. Beck said. "All parents should want to be the best mentors possible to both our children and to their friends."

Ms. Chancellor said reversing the trends of denial and lack of involvement are what she hopes will be the ultimate result of the Junior League's involvement in teen issues. Forums such as The Voices of West Texas earlier this month, and a follow-up meeting Tuesday with a core group of teens from that forum are essential in giving kids a voice. And in those forums, they have expressed that increased communications with parents and other adults, is something they strongly desire.

"I would hope we can play a part in opening the lines of communication between parents and their children and the community and the teen-agers," Ms. Chancellor said. "We need to move it from an us-against-them mentality to a "We can all work together' effort to change these problems. That's where the Junior League wants to be involved, and we want to help in any way we can. Our commitment is to the community, not just Junior League families. We really want to make a concerted effort to facilitate change in the community through volunteerism."

The Junior League's public policy and community programming committees will work through the summer on the teen issue concerns and will continue on a broader scale when the league convenes in the fall.

NATO launches extensive strikes against Yugoslavia

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Blasts reverberated throughout dozens of Yugoslav cities Wednesday during a record number of NATO attack flights, which zeroed in once more on President Slobodan Milosevic's villa and hit army barracks and command posts.

Planes roared over Belgrade shortly before midnight Wednesday and the rattle of heavy anti-aircraft fire resounded in the capital soon after air raid sirens sounded, signaling a new night of NATO attacks.

Earlier Wednesday, allied jets bombarded Kosovo's capital, Pristina, its surroundings and the northern city of Novi Sad, Serb media reported. Sustained NATO strikes also were reported in central and southern Yugoslavia as well as an area north of the port of Bar in Montenegro, the pro-Western republic that along with Serbia makes up Yugoslavia.

NATO reported early Wednesday that it had flown 650 sorties in the previous 24 hours, including a record 284 attack flights, hitting artillery, tanks and mortars in Kosovo. It said all aircraft returned safely.

Targets also included television and radio relay stations in Belgrade and several other cities. A wide range of army barracks, ammunition storage sites, command posts and petroleum storage sites also were hit.

Alliance jets also focused again on Milosevic's villa just west of Belgrade, which NATO says contains a command and control bunker. It is believed to be Milosevic's main hideout, but his whereabouts were unknown at the time of the attack. It was the fourth time NATO has targeted the villa.

The Serb-run media center in Pristina said two children were killed and one seriously hurt Wednesday morning when a NATO missile hit the village of Radoste near Orahovac, 40 miles southwest of Pristina.

The state-run news agency Tanjug said a woman and a child were wounded when three missiles hit their home in the village of Gazivode, in northern Kosovo. Tanjug also said three people were injured when a missile hit the courtyard of a private home in a suburb of Novi Pazar, about 100 miles south of Belgrade.

Serb media also reported attacks on the cities of Uzice, where an airfield has been targeted repeatedly; Izbica, also near Novi Pazar; and Mount Tara, 85 miles southwest of Belgrade. The Beta news agency said two missiles slammed into and damaged apartment buildings in the outskirts of Zajecar, 115 miles southeast of the capital.

In neighboring Albania, an Associated Press Television News team at the Morini border crossing saw several mortar rounds exploding and heard automatic weapons and tank fire as Serbian forces clashed with guerrillas of the Kosovo Liberation Army.

International monitors from the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe reported Serb shelling of three Albanian villages near the border and said a man and a young woman were killed when a mortar shell hit a house in the village of Sahani.

More than 840,000 people — mostly ethnic Albanians — have fled Kosovo. Before the NATO air campaign began March 24, Kosovo had a population of 2 million of whom 90 percent were ethnic Albanians.

Despite the NATO bombings, Milosevic has so far rejected the key element of a U.S.-backed peace plan for Kosovo — the deployment of NATO-led troops to secure the safe return of hundreds of thousands of ethnic Albanian refugees who have fled his crackdown.

NATO officials maintain that they are not planning a ground invasion, but NATO's top policymaking body, the North Atlantic Council, approved a plan Tuesday to enlarge a proposed Kosovo peacekeeping force to 50,000, from the 28,000 originally planned. The force is intended to head into Kosovo once Serbian troops leave, and NATO officials contend it needs to be in place quickly to be ready if Milosevic bends.

India launches airstrikes in Kashmir against infiltrators

DRAS, India (AP) — Raising the stakes between the two new nuclear powers, Indian aircraft fired on separatist guerrillas in Kashmir province Wednesday and Pakistan threatened retaliation. It was the first use of air power in years in the long-running conflict over the Himalayan border region.

India said it had blasted at Pakistani soldiers and guerrillas entrenched in rugged, snow-capped mountains in the Indian-held part of Kashmir. Pakistan, however, denied that its troops were involved and said India's aircraft had bombed Pakistani territory.

Indian aircraft began attacking rebel positions in the 17,000-foot peaks at dawn. Later, warplanes and helicopters were still roaring over Dras, a village a mile from the Line of Control that divides Kashmir between the two nations, and the faint thud of bombs could be heard across the hills.

Pakistan called the airstrikes a grave escalation of tensions. "Pakistan armed forces reserve the right to respond," military spokesman Brig. Rashid Quereshi told The Associated Press.

American and British ambassadors in New Delhi met Indian Defense Minister George Fernandes and urged restraint by both sides. U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan called on all parties to stop the fighting, spokesman Manoel de Almeida y Silva said at U.N. headquarters in New York.

It was the first major confrontation between the two neighbors since they conducted nuclear tests a year ago and declared themselves nuclear powers. India and Pakistan have fought three wars, two of them over Kashmir.

Indian and Pakistani soldiers exchange fire along their disputed frontier almost every day. Indian soldiers also frequently open fire to thwart Pakistan-based guerrillas trying to cross into Indian-held areas to fight for independence for Kashmir.

This time, Indian satellite photos showed that about 600 guerrillas had pushed nearly 4 miles into India's territory, taking advantage of the melting snow to occupy posts Indian soldiers had vacated at the onset of winter.

Indian Home Minister Lal Krishna Advani, who is in charge of internal security, said "the intruders this time comprise Pakistani army regulars as well as mercenaries and this operation will be smashed."

Man suspected of abusing wife for years busted

EVERETT, Wash. (AP) — A man has been arrested for allegedly beating and starving his disabled wife for 17 years, hiding her from the world on a decrepit sailboat.

Victor Matthew David, 59, was arrested Tuesday on assault charges and jailed on $150,000 bail. He could get up to 10 years in prison.

In 1997, police were called to the couple's sailboat by a social worker who was trying to determine whether David was fraudulently collecting his wife's disability checks. She has multiple sclerosis.

Police found Linda David, 50, wearing filthy, vomit-stained clothes in a room covered with dog feces, according to court papers.

She was almost blind and barely able to speak. Her face was badly scarred, and her arms had been broken and had healed without medical attention.

Mrs. David, who is now recovering in a nursing home, said: "No way I could get off (the boat) to get help. That was home. I never had anywhere else."

Air Park closing decision should not be delayed

Midland Air Park and the local business community that would like to see it remain open "won" something of a debate during Tuesday's meeting of the Midland City Council when officials conceded that it was not a viable site for a proposed sports complex.

Councilman Dale Brown appropriately summed up the nonaction by noting, "What we decided today is that it's an airport and it's going to stay an airport until we have a good reason to change it."

The decision on closing Midland Air Park, while avoided for the present, should not be delayed too long.

The land on which Air Park is situated had arisen earlier this year as a prospective site for a Midland sports complex, a proposal that is to be put before voters this fall. But Deputy City Manager Glen Hackler told council members that the site was not a feasible location for the sports complex because airport and environmental consultants had determined it would take three to five years to close Midland Air Park. Target date for completion of the sports complex is 2001.

While that resolved for the immediate the issue of possibly closing Air Park, it is a question that will come back to haunt City Council members at a date in the not too distant future. Midland's growth makes the acreage now occupied by Air Park increasingly valuable and there will likely be continual pressure to close that facility.

That will not be a welcome decision for the firms that now utilize Midland Air Park as they will have to begin using Midland International Airport, but it is one we believe the Midland City Council should make in the near future. The Air Park land is prime property located in a heavy growth area. Its proximity to Loop 250 means it could be used to spur even more development for Midland in that part of the city.

The decision on closing Midland Air Park, while avoided for the present, should not be delayed too long.

Bill Clinton takes turn as columnist, twists truth

WASHINGTON—Bill Clinton, a better president than columnist, traduces the truth the way a shark feeds—relentlessly, voraciously, as a metabolic necessity. As in his column in Sunday's New York Times, which began with these words: "We are in Kosovo with our allies to stand for ..."

Will

He could not go three words without involving the truth in a fender-bender. We are not "in" Kosovo any more than we were "in" Germany in 1943. You may ask, what is a preposition among friends? Well, as Mark Twain said, "the difference between the almost right word and the right word is really a large matter—'tis the difference between the lightning bug and the lightning." But sticking to the truth—"We are over Kosovo with our allies ..."—would have sacrificed style to facts. The Times, careless about the semantic niceties involved in what is called "coercive diplomacy," titled Clinton's column, "A Just and Necessary War," thereby using, as Clinton did not, the "W" word. Columnist Clinton spoke only of "our military campaign." The president, who has not stopped campaigning since he was in his 20s, confuses war, which is about the destruction of the enemy's forces, with modern politics, which is about inducing mood swings in mass audiences.

Still, all wars end. This one will. When and how? Opinions differ.

The lead story in Monday's Washington Post reported the commander of NATO's air war, U.S. Air Force Lt. Gen. Michael Short, saying of the Yugoslav army in Kosovo, "I don't have a good feel for knowing how close they are to breaking" but he has a feeling that two more months of the campaign as it now is being conducted will either "kill" it or "send it on the run." He said if you are being pounded so relentlessly that you "know that every time you move you're liable to be hit, at some point your spirit will break, particularly if you're not getting any help from Belgrade."

The lead story in Monday's New York Times reported that Belgrade is sending fresh troops into Kosovo. NATO's military spokesman, Maj. Gen. Walter Jertz: "We have no sign of withdrawal. The contrary is correct."

Paddy Ashdown, a former Royal Marine commando, now leader of Britain's Liberal Democrats, says he has never heard of anyone "surrendering to an aircraft." However, NATO is being methodical, which can be a military virtue. But time may be on the side of Slobodan Milosevic, who may be able to hunker down longer than NATO can continue papering over its differences, which will widen as NATO's target list expands and civilian casualties multiply.

Italy wants a bombing halt. Greece says Turkey's planes participating in the air war cannot cross Greek air space. Hungary says it will not be a staging ground for a ground attack. National Journal's James Kitfield reports on "passive resistance" within NATO at war. He says that early in the air war some governments of NATO members showed displeasure with certain target selections by flying their missions but refusing to release their ordinance, claiming mechanical or weather problems.

And Germany vows to veto any NATO use of ground forces except in a "permissive" environment, meaning with Milosevic's permission. Perhaps, there is something to be said for ending the 20th century worrying about German military reluctance.

Columnist Clinton says "I do not rule out" such options as ground forces. A spokesman for Clinton's National Security Council says the administration is "steadfast" against ground troops. Open- minded about what it steadfastly opposes, the administration plans to make the Balkans whole again with ... perhaps something analogous to the Tennessee Valley Authority.

While satellites in their quiet orbits photograph mass graves, NATO planners in quiet conference rooms anticipate the return of the survivors of the buried to live under the sovereignty of the buriers. And Clinton plans reconciliation: "There needs to be a magnet, a stronger force pulling people together than the forces pulling people apart. That means there needs to be an economic revitalization program that embraces the region."

The "military campaign" may not be going exactly as planned, but postwar recovery will be a piece of cake. We will write a check.

It is beyond parody; it is impervious to satire. In the midst of a war demonstrating, emphatically and redundantly, the fierce salience of religious and ethnic fevers, and the centuries-spanning durability of historical memories, Clinton, who evidently has not noticed the 20th century, stands as the last economic determinist. His shallowness amazes.

George Will's column is distributed by the Washington Post Writers Group.

Failed compulsory unitization act was not widely supported

I have no intention of becoming involved in the latest "West-Craddick" problem. However, I do feel it is incumbent on me to respond to Robert D. Kiker's reference to the failed compulsory unitization act (Reporter-Telegram, May 21). Kiker may not be aware that despite his claims of great support by all of the regional and state oil and gas associations, there was, in fact, substantial opposition to this onerous legislation by many independent oil and gas operators, non-operators and royalty owners. They expressed their concern by appearing and testifying against this bill at the hearing of the Energy Resources Committee in Austin.

I was most grateful for the efforts of everyone involved to defeat what was, in my opinion, another infringement on my right of self-determination by legislative process. We are currently covered up with state and federal bureaucratic rules and legislation restricting what we do and how we live. This proposed compulsory unitization was another prime example of a select group trying to accomplish by legislation what they cannot do on a fair and voluntary basis. In that vein, the general public should know that in Ector County alone, more than 100 units have been formed on a voluntary, equitable basis without any legislative coercion.

I sincerely trust that our representatives in Austin will meet further efforts to revive this legislation with the same enlightened opposition.

Are baby zoo animals more important than human babies?

Pardon me. I must have made a wrong turn. Did I not see on NBC tonight (May 18) during a special segment, that the nation is having a problem finding a place to put all the little baby animals in the zoos once we tire of looking at them?

Excuse me. Why are so many folks not even blinking at abortion and yet find it so alarming about baby animals?

Don't get me wrong. I love animals. I have several and care for them. They are part of our family. And I am concerned about not only the baby animals but the adult animals out there in our "civilized" world.

But we have a much more serious problem ... our unborn citizens. To paraphrase lyrics from a popular song, "Where have all our senses gone?" I stand on this premise, if we fail to see the criminal acts we commit against our own children, how can we be alarmed about something like zoo animals?

Folks, let's get our heads on straight and do something about abortion. And I have a suggestion. Let's stop it.

Mr. and Mrs. M.Q. Ashcraft

Rusk Elementary program was pleasurable, inspiring

I just had the pleasure of attending a special program sponsored by the students and faculty at Rusk Elementary School. The program was not the typical elementary school program, but instead was a celebration.

It was a celebration of honor. It celebrated character, country, flag, members of our armed forces and veterans. In the end, there wasn't a dry eye in the packed gymnasium. It made me proud to be an American; it made me proud to live in Midland; and most of all, it made me proud of those young boys and girls who enthusiastically supported the goals and principles upon which our country was founded.

Today, it seems like society is struggling to answer why tragedies plague our culture. Some might say the problem is "the system;" some say it is peer pressure; some say lack of family unity; some say it is a lack of religious strength. The answer is, in my opinion, due in part to all of these (and undoubtedly others too). Nevertheless, a return to basic character values beginning at entry levels of society would be a good start. Respect for individuals, the recognition of right and wrong, and honor for forefathers, fathers, God and country make a sound foundation upon which to build our future.

I sincerely hope Midland Independent School District, parents, politicians and all other responsible parties recognize the potential started here today at Rusk. I would like to see this movement grow and perpetuate the sort of moral fiber necessary to populate a society with character fit to honor. Congratulations to Rusk students — one and all.

A turning point for our country has just arrived

After casting the tie-breaking Senate vote on a bill that would add new restrictions on gun sales, Vice President Al Gore proclaimed the measure "a turning point for our country." The bill isn't a turning point, but the school shootings -- the latest last week in a suburban Atlanta school -- could be.

Thomas

When faced with a matter of principle, many politicians can usually be counted on to do whatever is expedient. Editorialists aren't much better. The Washington Post intoned: "There could be no shootings if there were no guns." Yes, and there would be no failures if there were no successes and no death if there were no life.

Liberal secularists continue to put faith in the doctrine that what is in the human hand is more important than what is in the human heart.

A panel of teenagers testified before a congressional subcommittee last week -- two days before the Georgia school shooting. All came from high schools shattered by the transgressions of classmates in the last two years.

Seventeen-year-old Stephen Keene saw three friends killed and five wounded, including his brother, during the December 1997 shooting in Paducah, Ky. Did Keene think too few laws caused the shooting at his school? He testified: "I believe the first place to look is within our homes. Education needs to start at home with strong moral and spiritual values, taught at home and practiced in the home. We can't expect our schools to raise children."

Keene told the representatives, whose sessions open with prayer: "We must bring God back into our families and, yes, once again hang the Ten Commandments (in our classrooms) as a visible sign to everyone that there is good and there is wrong."

Adam Campbell, 18, a graduate of Columbine High School in Littleton, Colo., said: "Hate will cause wrong choices. If a person has a bad heart, you cannot change it. Only God can change a bad heart .... I feel that our schools have done as well as they can because you cannot change or control teen behavior. They have to make their own choices."

Rep. Carolyn McCarthy (D-N.Y.), whose husband was killed and son injured in a 1993 shooting aboard the Long Island Railroad, didn't appear to get it. She responded to Keene's testimony that "easy access to guns" is a key element in school violence, and she urged her colleagues to pass more gun-control laws.

The kids know what the politicians don't. A society that respects neither laws nor life, because it acts as an authority unto itself, is not about to respect additional laws that seek to protect lives already downgraded into insignificance by politicians, judges, "ethicists," certain theologians, the entertainment industry, academia and the medical profession.

For nearly four decades we have taught two generations that only what they feel at a given moment matters. They have learned this lesson well, and now when some of them follow that lesson to a radical conclusion, we are shocked that they took us seriously. We might as well expect a wild animal to become tame once it is released from its cage because we are sympathetic about its confinement. Once unleashed, a wild culture is hard to control.

Cal Thomas' column is distributed by the Los Angeles Times Syndicate.

Espionage furor is overblown, say critics

By John Diamond
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The loss of U.S. nuclear secrets to China represents, at worst, a marginal threat to national security, according to arms control advocates and defense experts whose views have been largely drowned out in the furor over Chinese espionage.

China has yet to field a weapon a decade after it allegedly stole design information from U.S. nuclear weapons labs, they say. Some of the information Beijing's spies collected is now declassified.

And in the world of nuclear strategy, a somewhat improved Chinese nuclear arsenal may actually add to superpower stability, these critics argue. They say if China has greater mobility and confidence in its weapons, it will have less worry of losing its arsenal to a first strike.

Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, who served two Republican presidents, cautioned Wednesday against overreacting to the espionage in a way that so demonizes China that it hurts U.S. relations.

He told senators that even with stolen U.S. nuclear secrets it would take China 15 years to develop the capacity to manufacture weapons.

"I am worried about the deterioration in our relations with China," Kissinger told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Such assessments of Chinese espionage have been overshadowed partly because Democrats and Republicans alike are anxious to position themselves as concerned and responsive to the perceived threat — though some Democrats have said predictions in this week's congressional report were written in a "worst-case fashion."

Lost in the alarmist rhetoric on Capitol Hill is the fact that Tuesday's report that started it all is filled with conditional phrases: China "could" or "may" take detrimental actions "if the PRC decides to develop" weapons it currently does not possess.

"The depiction of China as an impending nuclear nemesis just does not accord with the facts," said Robert Norris, a nuclear weapons expert with the Natural Resources Defense Council, an arms control and environmental organization.

Much of the report hinges on a prediction that China will soon test and field improved weapons based in part on secrets stolen from U.S. nuclear weapons labs. For example, China is developing a mobile DF-31 missile that the report says could be tested later this year and fielded in 2002.

"It's a 15-year-old weapons system already. It's never been tested," said Norris. "It may be tested this year. I think five years ago I said the same thing."

Rep. Christopher Cox, R-Calif., who chaired the House committee that wrote the report, said nothing was blown out of proportion.

"We did not engage in opinion. We reported only facts, and that is why we could agree with one another," Cox said.

One fact not in dispute is that the U.S. arsenal is vastly superior to Beijing's. China now has 20 single-warhead ICBMs capable of reaching North America. The United States has about 6,000 nuclear warheads that could reach China.

To field improved nuclear weapons with any confidence, China would have to conduct several explosive tests per weapon, said Daryl Kimble of the Coalition to Reduce Nuclear Dangers.

But China has signed the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty, a pact about to be considered for ratification by the National Peoples Assembly. The treaty bans all nuclear testing, including underground.

Nonetheless, Kimble is concerned about how Chinese weapons modernization might harm regional stability, particularly the prospect that an expanding and improving Chinese arsenal could accelerate plans in India to deploy nuclear missiles.

An independent review panel established by the CIA also warned that Beijing may be more willing to sell more sophisticated weapons to such countries as Iran and Pakistan as its own arsenal improves.

U.S. officials say Milosevic indictment to be announced

By John Solomon
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The world tribunal that prosecutes war crimes will announce as early as Thursday the indictment of Yugoslav leader Slobodan Milosevic for atrocities in his homeland, U.S. officials said Wednesday.

One official said he believed the indictment had already been handed down by the U.N. body in The Hague, Netherlands. Two others said they did not know the exact timing of the indictment. All spoke only on condition of anonymity.

"The decision has been made," one official said.

The action by the tribunal comes as NATO intensifies its bombing in Kosovo in an effort to pressure Milosevic to withdraw his Serb troops from the province and end attacks on the ethnic Albanians who live there.

The U.N. court's chief prosecutor, Louise Arbour, said she would make "an important announcement" Thursday, but she would not confirm an indictment. The tribunal never comments on indictments before announcing them.

However, a diplomatic source at NATO headquarters in Brussels, Belgium, told The Associated Press that an indictment of Milosevic appeared to have been in the works for several weeks.

The indictment may indeed have been issued in secret at an earlier date, a tactic the Yugoslav war crimes tribunal used in arranging the capture of suspects in connection with the Bosnian war-era atrocities it was set up to prosecute.

Secretary of State Madeleine Albright said it would be inappropriate for her to comment on the report of an impending indictment. White House spokesman Joe Lockhart, in Yulee, Fla., where President Clinton was on vacation, said he had no comment.

As troubling accounts of alleged massacres and rapes continue to come from ethnic Albanians fleeing Kosovo, the tribunal has faced increasing calls from human rights groups, politicians and others to indict top Yugoslav officials.

On Monday, the U.S. Senate passed a resolution urging "vigorous investigation" of genocide and other war crimes in Kosovo. It urged the tribunal to issue indictments of those responsible "regardless of their position within the Serbian leadership."

In doing so, the court would be bringing charges on the basis of so-called "command responsibility" — the failure of leaders to prevent or punish war crimes carried out by subordinates.

Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., who has long advocated that Milosevic be indicted, said on the Senate floor Wednesday that such an action would be "good news. It shows the war crimes tribunal means business."

Separately, 63 members of the House urged the Clinton administration to make Milosevic's indictment for war crimes a top priority, and urged the administration to provide the tribunal with all information it has that could lead to an indictment.

Arbour's spokesman, Paul Risley, told a weekly briefing in The Hague on Wednesday that the court's investigators already had amassed "evidence of war crimes on a massive scale."

"The challenge is not to receive the information but to determine which areas to focus on, to zero in on," Risley said. He would not offer specifics, but said: "We will have a lot of information to back up the charges."

The tribunal has been forced to rely largely on eyewitness accounts from refugees who have fled to neighboring Macedonia and Albania, since Belgrade authorities repeatedly have refused Arbour or her deputies access to Kosovo itself. The tribunal has become more strident in recent weeks on the urgency to gather as much evidence as possible, fearing that the Serbs may be destroying it to cover their tracks.

As diplomatic efforts to end the conflict picked up momentum, so did concerns that an indictment against Milosevic would put Western envoys in the awkward position of having to negotiate with an official war crimes suspect.

There had been speculation that a negotiated settlement to end the war could include a deal providing Milosevic with at least limited immunity from prosecution for war crimes. However, the tribunal has always vowed to follow the chain of command to the top, and Arbour is known for ignoring the political consequences of indictments.

Security bolstered for graduations

By Rick López
Staff Writer

Robert Carouth is apprehensive about large school events.

With three school shootings shocking the nation this year, he's concerned about the safety of his 18-year-old daughter, Amanda, a Midland High School senior.

As a lawman, he knows big gatherings are sometimes an opportunity for disasters.

"You know that graduation is the end of the school year, and if someone has been wanting to do something, then that could be their target date," said Carouth, a court bailiff for the 142nd District Court.

Dan Walkenshaw, chief of police for the Midland Independent School District, said Wednesday the district will increase security significantly at high school graduations Saturday.

Bomb-finding dogs and hand-held metal detectors will be used at Chaparral Center — where Midland High School and Lee High School are holding their commencements.

"We're not doing this because there was a big movement. This is in response to what's been going on nationally," Walkenshaw said. "Some parents have called and expressed some concerns, but our principals feel we need to ensure the public that they're going to be safe."

Carouth said he's glad the school district came through with a strong plan.

"I've thought about this before, and I've hoped the schools would be taking extra security measures," he said. "Once these graduations are over with, we'll be able to breathe a sigh of relief."

LHS will have their ceremony at 1 p.m. Saturday, and MHS at 5 p.m. The security measures should not cause an inconvenience, Walkenshaw said.

"If they're carrying a suspicious item, a big briefcase or cardboard box, we're going to ask them if we can look at that," Walkenshaw said.

In addition, 11 security officers, eight state-licensed MISD officers and five city police officers will be present at both ceremonies, he said. Manpower has not been increased, he said.

Glenn Barber, superintendent of Greenwood Independent School District, said he has hired two Midland County sheriff's deputies to bolster Greenwood High School's commencement — which will be held at 8 p.m. today at Chaparral Center.

In the past, only one officer provided security for the event, Barber said. GISD won't be hiring any bomb-finding dogs, but doesn't need to, he said.

"It works out for us because MISD will shake down the place after their graduation rehearsals, and then our ceremonies are held later that night," he said.

Barber said GHS will have less police presence because they only have 100 graduates. In comparison, MHS has 560 and LHS has around 700, principals said.

VISION 2000

Mary Lou Cassidy is head of arts, entertainment, sports task force

Editor's Note: This is the first in a weekly series on the Vision 2000 task forces and their chairmen.

By Jennifer Cherry

Although the year 2000 may scare many people, some Midlanders are looking forward to the year and beyond.

Many residents are associated with "Midland Vision 2000 and Beyond," including native Midlander Mary Lou Cassidy, chairman of one of the nine tasks forces in the project.

"We'll have a little more idea where we are going if we have something to strive for," she said.

Midland Vision 2000 and Beyond was a goal-setting initiative of the Chamber of Commerce, said Johnye Harriman with the chamber.

Ms. Cassidy is the chairman of the art, sports and recreation task force. She said her "real" job is an oil and gas and probate lawyer at Stubbeman, McRae, Sealy, Laughlin & Browder in Midland.

Ms. Cassidy has always been involved in the community. In the 1970s, she was Stagnasia, the evil witch who hosted horror movies every Saturday night on Channel 2.

"It's how I got to law school," she said. "I told everyone I was a witch."

Among Ms. Cassidy's many talents, she has been involved in the theater since the third grade and Summer Mummers since the late '80s.

"I am the lady in the bathrobe and the pink bunny slippers," Ms. Cassidy said.

Her character plays a musical instrument.

"I am splendid. I have a bad attitude."

During the Christmas season Ms. Cassidy, a member of the Midland Executive Women club, entertained members with her one-woman show of "The Best Christmas Pageant Ever."

She said she joined the Vision 2000 project because she is going to be in Midland 10 years from now, so she may as well "have a say in what goes on."

The art, sports and recreation task force must gather information from major organizations involved in all

Hundreds plan to take part in annual party for graduates

By Matt Josefy

With graduation right around the corner, parties, celebrations, and congratulations are in line. Perhaps the most comprehensive community-wide effort will take place Saturday at Midland Center.

Based on last year's attendance, it is estimated that more than 800 or 900 seniors will attend, as well as 300 to 400 guests.

The combined event for graduates of all local high schools is headed by chairmen Ed and Diane Anderson of Midland High School and Mark and Ann Parker of Lee High School.

Linda Bennett, chairwoman for games, states that the purpose of this program is to "keep students substance-free for the evening of their graduation by celebrating the late night with all their friends in the most fun environment of their whole high school career. This party is the greatest thing in town in order to keep these seniors in attendance."

Refreshments will be provided throughout the evening and cash and other prizes will be given away in random drawings.

An all-night bingo game and a mock casino, complete with dealers dressed in tuxedo shirts and bow ties, round out the avenue to give away an anticipated $25,000 in cash and prizes spread among all seniors who attend.

Five inflatable activities are being imported from Dallas, including Sumo Wrestling, Bunjee Run, Human Foosball, Slamball, and an Obstacle Course.

The doors will be locked at midnight, and after that time, students may leave, but may not return, Ms. Bennett said. Security guards and nurses will be present in an effort to "keep our children safe on their graduation night, which is historically across the nation rated as the most deadly night of the year for teenagers, surpassing New Years' Eve."

Local attractions include the Gyroride, Walla Balla, and Midnight Roping, as well as a putt-putt hole and an arm wrestling table, she said.

Other events include 16 team basketball and volleyball tournaments, a free-throw competition and Bunko.

Prizes will be presented at about 4 a.m. to conclude the ninth annual Project Graduation, Ms. Bennett said.

Commissioners' Court wishes Goulet 'well' following heart surgery

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Midland County Commissioner Henry Goulet, who was in critical condition at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center Wednesday following heart surgery, has received the support and prayers of his fellow commissioners.

Goulet

"We wish him well, absolutely," County Judge Bill Morrow said of the 78-year-old commissioner, who on Monday underwent a coronary artery bypass graft. "He is a delightful person. We need him back. We need his humor. We need his judgment. We need his experience. We need him back as quick as we can get him back."

Morrow said that Goulet, a World War II veteran who was first elected to office in 1992, "contributes years of experience, knowledge about what has gone on before, good sense of knowledge about what's happening now, and is a tremendous spirit."

"Get well soon," said County Treasurer Julie Fry.

Win Brown, a former commissioner who visited Goulet earlier in the day, said that Goulet "is doing fine and is responding quite well. He's doing great" in the critical-care unit.

The Commissioners' Court, in an esprit-de-corps move to build morale within county government, saluted Nancy White, a 16-year county employee who is assistant purchasing agent, as Employee of the Month of May "for your outstanding service and exemplary level of achievement."

Also, Barbara Porsch of Permian Basin Master Gardeners told the court that the all-volunteer Master Gardeners performed "635 hours on the courthouse (landscape) project.

"And I'm not sure which of those hours are more valuable: The sitting and thinking and drawing hours or the manual labor hours," she said.

Morrow noted "the talent that you folks show," and said that "their work "does look wonderful. That's not minimum-wage work."

Ms. Porsch had said that the gardeners' courthouse hours at $5 per hour would total $3,175.

Texas Department of Health rates MCHD tops in outpatient care

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The Community Health Care Clinics operated by the Midland County Hospital District scored a near perfect 97.56 percent rating by a Texas Department of Health team that recently surveyed the district's three clinics.

"The thing that impressed the team was that they have really looked at the needs of the community and the indigent population and have gone out and taken steps to meet those needs," said TDH team leader Hilda Mikan.

Steve Kuzmich, MCHD president, that the district's board of directors is "very well pleased with the performance of our clinics" for children, women, and families.

"It's a great testament to (Memorial Hospital and Medical Center) and especially the people who are involved in our outpatient clinics," he said,

Kuzmich noted that the TDH team checked out 83 categories.

"We scored an average of 97.5 percent, which, if not the highest, is one of the highest in the state."

The nine-member TDH team made the survey, "to make sure that the grant money is being used appropriately," said Dr. Harold Rubin, president of Memorial Hospital.

The TDH funded the MCHD $670,000 toward providing health care for the uninsured or underinsured people at the Community Health Care Clinic for Women's Services at 4334 W. Illinois Ave., the Community Health Care Clinic for Family Services at 801 E Florida Ave., and Community Health Care Clinic for Pediatrics at 2500 DeLano Ave.

In 1998 a total of 42,009 people used the clinics: 10,913 at the family clinic; 9,375 at the women's clinic, and 21,721 for pediatrics services.

The funds came through the TDH's Community Oriented Primary Care Grant.

MCHD, which governs Memorial Hospital, "identified problems in health issues in certain parts of the city and put the clinics in those areas so that they could go there instead of the (more costly) emergency room," Ms. Mikan said. "The thing that is very impressive ... is their focus on prevention. They provide education so people know how to take care of themselves, not develop chronic illnesses, and live a healthier lifestyle."

Time flies on wings as days lived become history, nostalgia

Who would have even suspected that a young fellow growing up would be witnessing history, seeing what is today times past.

Todd

That, fellow old-timers and those yet to become of age, is just part of aging if we are so blessed to enjoy, at least experience, the gamut of life.

Many there are whose life is abbreviated from quirks of nature to a multitude of causes both deliberate and accidental and, also tragic, because of mankind bestowed curses called war, neglect and indifference.

Is it not well to experience life's stages from childhood and youth to the mainstream years to senior status euphemistically called the "golden years"?

So vividly do I recall those iron wood-burning stoves for cooking and heating, the teams of mules and horses pulling wagons and the lone draft horse or mule acting as a modern-day tractor in plowing fields, those ice boxes, and rural electrification that put hurricane lamps and kerosene-burning lanterns into antique houses.

Born in 1938, which seems only as if it were yesterday, I recall the 1940s war years, training aircraft and warplanes, especially the P-38 Lightning, flying over rural East Texas, my parents getting out the war-time rationing books when going to town to buy goods, and Daddy heading over to the school grounds to ring the victory bell at war's end.

In the main, muddy roads have been coated over like hardtack, mud chains were discarded, and rural schools across the country were consolidated due to more and more drivable roads. The Saturday Evening Post and Life magazines no longer were their former grandeur as television spread across the land and also made old radio antiquated but now, in retrospect, charming. And more and more folks left their country homes, the backwoods and those isolated communities, and sought the fascination, sophistication and economic opportunities of city life. Generations later, many folks long to return to the land of their memories.

The grand patriotism and unity of purpose associated with World War I, "the war to end all wars," and World War II, the "last good war," are instilled in history and memories. But their purpose and mystique did not carry over to subsequent wars.

The affordable ink fountain pen, once the king or queen of writing instruments and certainly the most common of pens, all but disappeared after the ball-point emerged in the post-war years. It is now back often as a status symbol and as a value to collectors.

The old manual typewriter, once so modern and convenient and then upscaled when redesigned and fitted with an electric motor, is now among the antique collectables. Personal computers and some not so personal have usurped the typewriter. Television news endangered and killed out the old newsreel features at the motion-picture shows. And today the computer world's Internet is rivaling the ink-on-paper ventures from newspapers to books, which old-timers figure are here to stay put.

Things change, I suppose, with more rapidity than do people since folks, unlike things, gimmicks and gadgets, have memories and sentiment and, if they so seek, the sense of history and perspective.

MCHD: TDH support has been used for 5 years

(From 1B)

Ms. Mikan is quality assurance director for the deputyship for the TDH's Community Health and Prevention.

"We've had this (TDH) support for five years," noted Rubin. "It's very competitive in the state to get a grant like this, and we won it."

The community clinics approach toward health care and preventive medicine is "cost-effective for the community," Rubin said. "It costs about $25 a patient on an outpatient ambulatory basis as opposed to the emergency room, which is several hundred dollars and up because of the high degree of technical services."

The MCHD is funded by $7 million in taxpayer funds, which go toward patients' care for those uninsured and underinsured people who cannot pay their medical bills. The hospital annually bills about $180 million for patient services and collects about $100 million from all sources, including private, company, insurance, federal, including Medicare and Medicaid.

"So, if we can keep people healthy, and we can keep them out of the hospital, everyone is winner — the patient, the hospital, the community," Rubin said. "Everyone benefits."

Rubin noted that MCHD has "not asked for a tax increase in the past seven years. Grants like this help offset that. Tax money is strictly for patients. We try to get patients to pay a portion of their bill," he said, and Medicare pays for those who meet federal poverty guidelines.

MCHD tries to "make the taxpayer of Midland the last resort" in providing funds for those unable to take care of themselves financially.

Margaret Robinson, the hospital's vice president of patient care, said that MCHD provides "outpatient care to those who are uninsured or underinsured, and we put significant emphasis on trying to treat patients in the outpatient setting so that they don't require hospitalization" and regain their health or stay healthy.

COURT: Porsch and gardeners thanked for work

(From 1B)

"And the judge thought that was cheap, that we were worth more than that," Ms. Porsch said.

The Master Gardeners designed and landscaped the Confederate Air Force's Memorial Gardens at Midland International Airport following the invitation of CAF Col. Billy Barnhill.

The gardeners, who are under the guidance of Texas Agricultural Extension Service horticulturist Deborah Benge Frost, enjoy camaraderie.

"We can even argue and still love each other because we all have a common love of horticulture and seeing things grow and seeing things look good," said Ms. Porsch, who was joined by follow gardeners Pat Adams, Barbara Searle, Eunice Barkes, and Ms. Benge Frost.

"You look at a seed, and you see what's coming up from the seed: It's the future life of a plant," Ms. Porsch said. "And who has enough smarts to put that together but God?"

The Commissioners' Court honored Thelma Gibbs, the outgoing executive director of Midland County Housing Authority, "for making Midland better place to live."

Ms. Gibbs said that she has "changed the face" of the MCHA and "especially of the employees and also of some of the clients that we serve.

"More of the clients are more responsible now," she said. "We instituted the criminal-background check, and we started to look at people who were abusing the system. And we really want to help people that want to be helped instead of people who are abusing the system. And then we recruited some people, employees, who are compassionate but also professional and were able to give Midland County Housing Authority a new face."

The MCHA serves 425 families through federal subsidized housing.

In other business, the court heard reports from Highlander Environmental and Meridian Alliance Group on clean-up efforts of the old Midland County fuel depot in far southeast Midland; and on the county's involvement with the Texas Department of Transportation in buying right-of-way land along County Road 60 West from Holiday Hill Road to Farm-to-Market Road 1788.

Authorities accuse employee in death of missing atheist

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Federal authorities alleged for the first time Wednesday that a former employee of Madalyn Murray O'Hair killed the atheist leader and two of her adult children, burying their bodies in a Texas field.

The accusations against David R. Waters and three others allegedly involved in the murder plot came in a 36-page court document.

Authorities said Waters, now jailed in Austin on weapons charges, orchestrated the plot to steal at least $600,000 from Ms. O'Hair's United Secularists of America, according to the document.

But money does not appear to have been the only motive.

The document, citing a confidential informant, said Waters' hatred of Ms. O'Hair extended to fantasizing about "seeing Madalyn suffer, and snipping off her toes."

The document, an affidavit from Internal Revenue Service special agent Edmund I. Martin, names Waters, along with Gary Karr, now imprisoned in Detroit; Danny Fry, who was killed shortly after the O'Hairs vanished; and Gerald Lee Osborne, also known as "Chico," of Fort Worth.

Ms. O'Hair disappeared in September 1995 along with her son, Jon Garth Murray, and adopted daughter Robin Murray O'Hair.

Martin's affidavit was used in early March to obtain a search warrant of Waters' Austin apartment. The document was unsealed a day before Thursday's scheduled court appearance of Waters on a gun charge.

Waters' lawyer, Patrick Ganne, told the San Antonio Express-News on Wednesday that he hadn't seen the document.

Waters has not been charged with the O'Hair murders. In fact, federal authorities have never said publicly until now that the O'Hairs were even dead.

In his affidavit, Martin also stated that Waters was responsible for the death of Fry, whose headless, handless body was dumped in eastern Dallas County on Oct. 2, 1995, two days after the three O'Hairs vanished.

"Waters and Karr turned on Fry and killed him. They then dumped the beheaded and handless body of Fry in Dallas County," Martin stated.

Martin said items found at Waters' apartment on March 24 included ammunition, a knife and personal correspondence of Jon Murray.

Waters, who worked for Ms. O'Hair in Austin in 1993 and 1994, "was open about his dislike of the O'Hairs and made comments about harming Madalyn," the document said, citing an informant.

The informant said that after Waters pleaded guilty in May 1995 to stealing money from the O'Hairs, Ms. O'Hair wrote a long article in the American Atheist newsletter detailing his criminal history.

"At this point in time, Waters had serious change of attitude regarding the O'Hairs," the affidavit said. "Waters mentioned that he would like to get revenge for what had been written and expressed fantasies of killing Madalyn. He spoke about seeing Madalyn suffer and snipping off her toes."

Authorities have theorized the O'Hairs' remains were buried in large barrels, but two searches of a ranch near San Antonio recently failed to find either barrels or bodies.

According to a second confidential informant, Karr has talked about Waters committing four murders in Texas, following a card game.

"After the card game, Waters drove four people involved in the card game back home. Waters killed them, took the jewelry, (rings and Rolexes) off the bodies, and buried them in a field in Texas near a subdivision," read the affidavit.

Waters used a van rented by Karr to transport the bodies, and Karr told the informant that one of the persons killed was a woman named O'Hair, her daughter and son and another man, the affidavit said.

areas of sports, the arts, parks, museums and libraries.

"We let them (organization leaders) tell us what they want," Ms. Cassidy said.

The project is still "getting off of the ground," Mrs. Harriman said.

The committee has met three times and already ideas seem to be flowing. The task force had to cover so many areas that were so diverse that Ms. Cassidy split her task force into two sub-committees. One group researches possible ideas wanted for sports and parks. The other committee researches different venues needed for arts and entertainment.

The "hottest" issues Ms. Cassidy said were the possibilities of a new sports center that would house football and baseball games and track meets and a performing arts center.

Many people on the task force are tired of watching the symphony and ballets in high school auditoriums.

"Right now, we're in the dreaming stage," Ms. Cassidy said.

The group's purpose is to brainstorm ideas about what Midland needs to carry it into the future and then to research those ideas. From the task force's research, they will be able to determine which ideas are feasible. Such research will determine how many other people support the idea and what locations might be best.

Many people want more live concerts in Midland; however, there are no facilities that can accommodate large crowds. Ms. Cassidy said this could boost Midland's economy because of the fact that many people from small towns would come to see the shows.

Some committee members have considered the idea of a lake or some type of reservoir, Ms. Cassidy said. It was quickly decided that this plan was not feasible because of the lack of water in this region.

The group is also looking to improve already existing structures in Midland. Other ideas discussed were ways to preserve Midland's history that would mean the development of areas of Midland that are deteriorating.

"Perhaps we look forward too quickly," Mrs. Cassidy said. "We want to pave everything."

Questions concerning the development of an improved branch library have also been discussed. New parks and the development of current parks are also on the agenda.

"We do not want to reinvent the wheel," Ms. Cassidy said.

The task force will interview individuals and gather information and then in August must put everything together and prepare it for the public's input. Neighborhood meetings and city meetings, much like the gathering on March 4, will be initiated.

At that initial meeting, more than 450 people attended. Participants were asked to think of things Midland needs and what they would like to see in Midland in 2010, Mrs. Harriman said.

The steering committee then separated all ideas into nine categories that became the tasks forces. Members of the task forces are people who had signed up to become more involved in Vision 2000 and others involved in the community.

After the task forces turn in a preliminary report of their findings in August, neighborhood meetings will be organized. The steering committee will meet in November to read revised final reports and in December all of the results from this project will be published for the public to view, Mrs. Harriman said.

The length of time it takes for the ideas to actually become reality depends on how close Midland is to getting it, Ms. Cassidy said. The amount of financing and whether a building has to be built or not are factors in the amount of time between these visions and reality.

She used the sports complex as an example. Although her task force is "dreaming" of it, she said that the community's recent attempts at passing the idea into reality will result in the project's groundbreaking sooner than other projects that are products of Vision 2000.

Midland College, the development of University of Texas of the Permian Basin and the new the airport terminal are examples of projects that emerged because of similar programs, Mrs. Harriman said. In 1967 and 1980 the project was named Objectives for Midland; in 1990 it was Objectives 2000.

"This is an outgrowth of a project that started four decades ago," Ms. Cassidy said.

SECURITY: Bomb-sniffing dogs to check Chap Center

(From 1B)

Walkenshaw said his police have tested the bomb-sniffing dogs by hiding gun clips and letting the dogs find them. The practice was flawless, he said.

For two years, the Midland school district has signed a contract with Team BJR of Gainesville, which has a satellite office here.

Steve Harris, a K-9 handler in Midland, said the local office has signed contracts to provide bomb-sniffing dogs at graduations in Big Spring, Monahans, El Paso and Lubbock.

He said the number of requests from area schools has increased from 20 to 50 calls since the Littleton, Colo., shootings.

"It's a horrible increase. We'd rather have to be part of a drug-deterrent program than have to go into a school to look for a bomb," Harris said.

But before the business brought drug- and bomb-sniffing dogs to West Texas, a U.S. Air Force base in San Antonio was the closest office that could provide that service, Harris said.

Ricardo Torres, MISD director of secondary education, said the school will also be on the lookout for graduation pranksters — specifically those who smuggle beach balls or cans of Silly String to the stage.

"We don't think it's cute. It wouldn't look good if little Timmy was escorted off the stage by two burly police officers," Torres said.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll have: 5-Dymanic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Thursday, May 27, 1999:
Deal with others in a constructive and positive way. Despite your resourcefulness and excellent communication skills, those you interact with might not always be rational. Let humor play a greater role in your life. Don't keep pushing an associate or friend to see things your way; he won't. Avoid power plays of any kind. If you are single, romance might be tough, even depressing, at times. Be aware of a tendency to put another on a pedestal, thinking he is someone he isn't.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★ On days like this, you would prefer to stay in bed! Confusion, hassles and power plays mar your interactions. Stay on a one-to-one level with others. Confirm ideas. Consider different types of thinking. The more open you are, the fewer problems you will have. Tonight: With a special friend.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ Despite your best intentions, convincing others is challenging. Uproar marks your interactions. Your message may fall upon deaf ears or may meet with clueless recipients. Money matters are especially tense and difficult. Another has a great idea — using your funds! Tonight: Make it easy.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★ Confusion irks you, though you could be the source. Negativity mars discussions and work, affecting your mood. Avoid intrigues. Take care of yourself; add some extra exercise to your day. Postpone anything you don't have to do; focus on what you must do. Tonight: Soak away stress.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Creativity is essential in handling surrounding negativity. Your emotional state impacts your perception of uproar, problems and restrictions. Loosen up. Reach out to a friend who is having a difficult time. Don't take another's opinion personally. Tonight: To the gym, then talk to a loved one.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★ Say little and don't react, if possible. Tension is remarkably high. Evaluate your options in handling a difficult work situation, a bad risk or an evasive associate. You might consider playing ostrich! Humor goes a long way in taking the heat off a problem. Tonight: Cocoon.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★ Keep communication flowing. Pressure intensifies as you attempt to get down to the basics. Another appears to be defensive and unwilling to share key information. Staying focused is all you can do. Demands at home are just as troublesome as those at work. Tonight: Handle one thing at a time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ Others clearly do not see any issue the same way as you do. What you think is a brilliant idea could actually be the product of hazy thinking. Get to the root of a problem without being controlling. Another truly doesn't understand. Don't worry — this too will pass. Tonight: Pay bills.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ Associates could be difficult, at best. Confidence is sorely lacking from those around you. Loosen up and let others give more input. Show your caring. You can get around a money problem if you're willing to say "no." Domestic matters are confusing. Tonight: Let your smile warm another up.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★ Head (or stay) home. Consider being mum. You might not agree with others right now. In fact, you could be feeling downright rigid. Be sensitive to others. You could be causing power struggles and/or misunderstandings. Is this what you really want? Tonight: Chill out.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Know what you want. Don't let anyone deter you. Listen to what others offer. Be sure about your direction. Another clearly doesn't visualize a situation the same way that you do. A loved one or child could be quite contrary. Tonight: Hook up with friends.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ Take the lead. Seek to understand what is going on with others who are contrary. You may be confusing to them, as well. Stay focused on a goal; be willing to try a new direction, if need be. You are full of ideas. Another appreciates your creativity. Tonight: Working late.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★ You might be feeling weighed down and challenged to take an overview. Take a breath of fresh air; walk, if possible. Remain in contact with your feelings. A boss wants you to do things his way. Remember who the chief is! Tonight: Try a new restaurant.

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
3◇	Pass	Pass	Dbl
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡

As a defender, do not do declarer's work. Declarer likes nothing better than to single in trumps when an opponent holds a stack.

West was delighted when East reopened the bidding with a double. It looked as if the upcoming Memorial Day would be celebrated in style, and days early.

The opening lead of the king of hearts won as East signaled with the eight. West continued with the queen, ruffed by declarer. The king of diamonds was cashed to confirm the bad break, and a spade was led to the queen and ace.

East shifted to the king of clubs, taken by the ace. Declarer ruffed another heart, crossed to dummy with the king of spades and ruffed a spade.

Declarer, with six tricks in the bank, was now down to three trumps and two clubs while West had four diamonds and a club. East won the club exit but West was forced to ruff the next trick and lead a trump.

Declarer still had to lose a trump but escaped for down one — an excellent result considering that East-West could make four hearts with careful play.

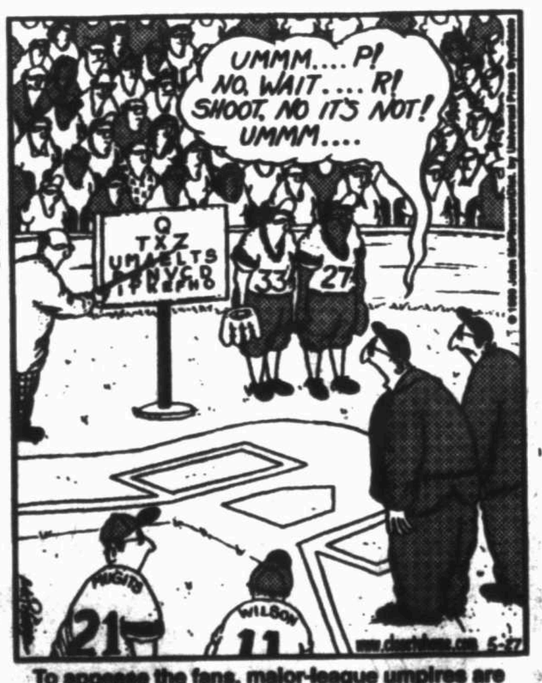
The defense was very friendly.

Instead of helping declarer score trump tricks, West should have led a short suit, in this case clubs.

As the cards lie, the defenders would then collect two club tricks, the two major-suit aces and three trump tricks, since declarer would end up having to lead trumps from hand.

That would have netted East-West 800 points — a highly satisfactory outcome.

CLOSE TO HOME



To appease the fans, major-league umpires are now required to take eye exams during the seventh inning stretch.

Matthau hospitalized with pneumonia

LOS ANGELES — Walter Matthau is in the hospital with pneumonia.

The 78-year-old "Odd Couple" actor was "doing better" and the prognosis was good, son Charles Matthau said Wednesday. He may go home in a couple of days.

Matthau was taken to an undisclosed hospital on May 16, complaining of a bad cough.

He recently completed the film "Hanging Up," starring Diane Keaton, Meg Ryan and Lisa Kudrow.

LAS VEGAS — Robbie Knievel's jump over a gorge at the Grand Canyon last week has landed him a place among some of Las Vegas' favorite entertainers and historical figures.

Knievel — still on crutches — was inducted Tuesday into the Casino Legends Hall of Fame at the Tropicana Hotel, where other members include Frank Sinatra, Howard Hughes and Siegfried and Roy. The banged-up bike Knievel used will be put in a glass case.

Knievel, the son of daredevil Evel Knievel, suffered two cracked ribs and a sprained ankle in the 231-foot jump over a 1,500-foot Grand Canyon gorge.

"Everything I do is crazy to the normal person," Knievel said. "The main reason I do it is to show people how fast a bike can go. It is a spiritual, mental and physical feeling before a jump."

Knievel said his next stunt — a jump over 25 pickup trucks parked side by side at the Pikes Peak International Raceway in Colorado — is planned for July 24.

MIAMI — O.J. Simpson was in no mood to skimp during a house-hunting excursion in South Florida.

The former football star is scouting some of the area's finest real estate — homes priced from $870,000 to $1.2 million, The Miami Herald reported Wednesday.

Simpson rejected a five-bedroom home because it didn't have enough baths to allow daughter Sydney, 13, and son Justin, 10, to have their own, the newspaper said. He also checked out a $995,000 home in a gated community in the Coconut Grove neighborhood.

Simpson was acquitted of murder in the 1994 slayings of former wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend, Ronald Goldman. Simpson was found liable in a civil trial and ordered to pay $33.5 million to the victims' families.

The verdict excluded his football pension plan, which pays him up to $25,000 a month.

PORT-OF-SPAIN, Trinidad — Donald Trump is setting his investment sights on Trinidad and Tobago.

Trump, in the Caribbean for Wednesday night's Miss Universe pageant, said he has a "good feeling" about investing here. He declined to be more specific.

"You go to some places and you have a good feeling and you go to other places and you don't have a good feeling," he said Wednesday at brunch attended by Prime Minister Basdeo Panday, other politicians and business people.

"I'm very much an instinct person — I go by my gut. I just have a very good feeling about Trinidad and Tobago, and that's because of the people."

The twin-island nation already gets massive investment from U.S. and European firms focused on petroleum and natural gas reserves.

KEARNEY, Mo. — Jesse James aficionados never give up.

Four years ago, a team of scientists exhumed remains from James' grave in Kearney and used DNA testing to conclude that the outlaw was indeed the man buried there.

Now, extensive research by the director of the Jesse James Farm and Museum has shown that two guns James supposedly used in a train robbery actually were made after he died.

The error was discovered after a tourist asked an innocuous question about one of the guns, a Winchester rifle, prompting museum director Elizabeth Gilliam Beckett to review records. It turned out that the rifle and a Colt .45 revolver didn't have authenticity documents.

CLEVELAND — Layzie Bone of the rap group Bone Thugs-N-Harmony was arrested on marijuana possession charges dating to 1997.

The 24-year-old rapper, whose real name is Steven Howse, was arrested Monday. He had failed to appear in court on Detroit, so a judge issued a warrant for his arrest, federal marshals said.

Howse was released on bond. He has an unlisted telephone number and could not be reached for comment.

In January, a jury in Columbus acquitted another of the group's members, Bryan McCane (Bizzy Bone), on charges of assault and disorderly conduct.

'Hounds get timely hitting, assist from Mother Nature

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The Midland RockHounds defeated the Arkansas Travelers — and the rain — at Christensen Stadium Wednesday night.

The RockHounds scored three runs in the bottom of the fifth inning to take a 6-3 lead over the reeling Travs, just in time to make this an official game before a thunderstorm rolled through Midland.

The Travelers, who came into Midland after having lost five in a row to the El Paso Diablos, continued to sink in the Texas League East standings and are already probably wishing that they never have to play another game in Texas. This was the first of a six-game series between the two teams, but the Travelers have already lost six in a row to fall to third place in the East after taking three of four games from Midland in Little Rock before making the swing west while in second place behind Shreveport.

'Hound catcher David Skeels singled home Mario Encarnacion to break a 3-3 tie in the fifth and Midland added two more runs on singles by Dionys Cesar and Tim Garland. The RockHounds were then glad to let the rain come. They sure didn't need to have this game wiped out since the two teams already have a Friday doubleheader set for 6 p.m.

Arkansas grabbed a 1-0 lead in the second inning when Luis Saturria scored on a double play grounder by Jose Leon. Midland tied the score in the third when Josue Espada scored on a bases loaded walk to Encarnacion.

Arkansas starter Chad Hutchinson walked four batters in a row in the third in what was a strange game for the tall righty. Hutchinson walked six batters in all, but he also struck out nine 'Hounds. He lasted only four innings, however, after throwing 92 pitches, 44 for balls in a game that seemed to go on forever with minor rain delays before the major break after the fifth.

Hutchinson is the former Stanford Cardinal quarterback who was the MVP of the 1996 Sun Bowl after throwing for 226 yards in a 38-0 win over Michigan State.

Arkansas took a second lead in the fourth when Chris Richards and Saturria had back-to-back home runs, but Midland tied the game at 3-3 in the bottom of the inning when Espada doubled in two runs against Hutchinson.

It didn't take Midland's newest 'Hound long to get a win. Mike Bertotti was placed on the roster Wednesday to replace Midland's closer Chad Harville, who was promoted to AAA Vancouver.

Bertotti, who posted a 3-1 record with a 7.63 ERA with the Chicago White Sox in parts of three seasons, went two innings without giving up a run in relief of Chris Enochs, who had to leave the game in the fourth with an injury that was not disclosed.

Officials waited an hour before calling the game near 11 p.m. But five innings makes a complete game, so it goes in the books.

Advantage Dallas: Stars shut out Avs, take 2-1 series lead

By John Mossman
AP Sports Writer

DENVER — The first goal was lucky. But then came two more, which left the Colorado Avalanche seeing Stars.

Ed Belfour posted his sixth career playoff shutout and Joe Nieuwendyk had a goal and two assists as the Dallas Stars beat Colorado 3-0 Wednesday night to take a 2-1 series lead.

"We got the home-ice advantage back," said Dallas forward Jamie Langenbrunner, who scored the Stars' second goal. "That was important to us."

Game 4 of the best-of-7 Western Conference final series is scheduled for Friday night in Denver.

Nieuwendyk scored his eighth goal of the playoffs at 2:22 of the second period on a shot that deflected off a defenseman's skate.

Nieuwendyk, who chased the puck behind the net, flicked a shot from behind and just left of the goal. But the puck hit the right skate of Colorado defenseman Aaron Miller, who was stationed in front of the net, and ricocheted between Patrick Roy's legs.

It was Nieuwendyk's fifth game-winning goal of the playoffs, a figure that leads the NHL.

On a 2-on-1 break after a Colorado turnover at mid-ice in the third period, Langenbrunner took a pass from Nieuwendyk and beat Roy from the slot at 10:44.

Dave Reid made it 3-0, scoring from the left circle at 16:05 on assists by Craig Ludwig and Nieuwendyk.

Belfour had 34 saves and Roy 23.

"If you're going to win in the playoffs, your goaltender has to be your best player," Stars coach Ken Hitchcock said. "Eddie was our

Raptors' Carter wins NBA honor

■ Toronto swingman runs away with the league's Rookie of the Year award.

TORONTO (AP) — Vince Carter, who nearly took the Toronto Raptors into the playoffs this season, was the overwhelming choice for the NBA's rookie of the year on Wednesday.

Carter, who averaged 18.3 points, 5.7 rebounds and 3.0 assists a game, received 113 of the 118 first-place votes. Sacramento's Jason Williams received three and Boston's Paul Pierce got the other two.

Only Shaquille O'Neal and Tim Duncan received a higher percentage of the vote this decade.

"I can't say I'm surprised," Carter said. "But I'm overjoyed."

Carter, the fifth selection in last year's draft, led all rookies in scoring and also was a key factor in the Raptors' improvement.

Playoff Coverage/2D

Toronto went from a 16-66 record in 1997-98 to a 23-27 mark in the abbreviated season this year.

"He has brought respect back to a franchise that people thought was on the brink of no return," Toronto coach Butch Carter said. "He has been outstanding as an individual, and has shown great character under a very stressful situation."

Midland Lee's Josh Haney, left, and Michael Burlison have contributed more than one would expect out of hitters in the Nos. 7 and 8 slots. Their production couldn't have come at a better time as Lee heads into the region semifinals.

Lee's 7 & 8 hitters — Burlison, Haney — give Rebs postseason production

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

They're the guys who carry labels like good-field-no-hit, banjo hitter or "possesses warning track power."

Usually the guys in the bottom third of the lineup are there to fill a spot, and any offensive production they provide is a bonus. So opponents could be forgiven if they took Midland Lee's duo of catcher Michael Burlison and second baseman Josh Haney, the Nos. 7 and 8 hitters for the Rebels respectively, a little lightly.

However, if Duncanville, Lee's opponent in the Region I-5A semifinals starting Friday at 4 p.m. at Abilene's McMurry University, regards Burlison and Haney as offensive lightweights, it would be a serious mistake. El Paso Coronado and El Paso Socorro discovered that painfully during playoff visits to Midland.

While the top six hitters in Lee's lineup have been productive, it has been Burlison and Haney who have most consistently delivered. In two postseason series, they have combined to hit .556 with five home runs and 20 RBIs following a regular season in which they put up relatively ordinary numbers.

"I don't think it's that much of a surprise," said Lee coach Jesse Benavidez. "I'd been waiting for it to happen every game but it never did. If it was going to happen, the playoffs is the right time."

In the playoffs, it's often players in the lower end of the order like Haney and Burlison who make the biggest impact, simply because other teams focus so much on how to neutralize the top of the batting order. That opens the door for some unlikely heroes to step to the forefront in the playoffs.

The postseason is also a second chance for players, who

No. 1 Kafelnikov exits early

By Jocelyn Noveck
Associated Press Writer

PARIS — Yevgeny Kafelnikov was ousted from the French Open today, doing little to show he is worthy of the No. 1 ranking he gained just three weeks ago.

No doubts, however, about Martina Hingis. She showed she clearly deserves her top ranking with a 6-3, 6-3 victory over Amelie Mauresmo.

The match recalled the Australian Open final in which Hingis said the muscular Frenchwoman was "half a man." Mauresmo acknowledges being gay.

The fans at Roland Garros remembered. Some booed when the Swiss star questioned a call, and even when she walked off court. Hingis smiled through much of the match as she often does, seemingly unaffected.

Hingis made fewer errors and hitting sharper, smarter shots. She was broken only once, in the first set, and broke Mauresmo five times in the match.

Kafelnikov was whistled off the court by the fans after losing 6-4, 6-1, 6-4 to Dominik Hrbaty of Slovakia in the second round.

Belfour said he had plenty of help.

"I felt strong tonight," he said. "I saw the puck really well, and the people in front of me cleared the rebounds.

"They came out real strong with chances right off the bat. Once we got through that and I made some stops, our guys got the puck out of our zone. We were in control the rest of the night."

Colorado hit the goal post three times with scoring chances.

"Eddie made the big saves when he had to," Nieuwendyk said. "We built a cushion for him, and then he really closed the door."

The loss dropped the Avalanche to 2-5 at home in the playoffs. The Stars, meanwhile, are 4-2 in road playoff games.

Colorado committed 23 giveaways, compared to Dallas' four.

Avalanche captain Joe Sakic said Belfour "is playing great. He's seeing everything. Their defensemen are blocking a lot of shots for him."

Colorado had two prime scoring chances in the second period. Early in the period, Kamensky hit the cross bar. Later, Sandis Ozolinsh's shot from the slot, on a feed from Fleury, clanged off the post.

Manchester United defeats Bayern Munich

BARCELONA, Spain — Two rapid-fire goals with the clock officially run out gave Manchester United the most prized title in European club soccer and a unique place in the sport's long history.

In an amazing finish, substitutes Teddy Sheringham and Ole Gunnar Solksjaer scored during injury time as United beat Bayern Munich 2-1 Wednesday for the Champions League title.

It was the first top European championship for the storied Reds from England since 1968, and left them the first team from soccer's birthplace to win the league, FA Cup and continental champions titles in one season.

Only three other clubs — Celtic Glasgow in 1967, Ajax Amsterdam in 1972 and PSV Eindhoven in 1988 — have swept the triple crown.

Strawberry is on leave from the Yankees and faces possible suspension as a multiple offender of baseball's drug aftercare program.

FRENCH: Hingis, Agassi advance

(From 1C)

best, Agassi held on after losing two sets to beat Arnaud Clement 6-2, 4-6, 2-6, 7-5, 6-0.

Agassi, seeded 13th, won an exhausting fourth set that included two games in which he failed to convert multiple break points. He then surged through the final set against a spent opponent.

Usually a crowd favorite in Paris, Agassi had to defer this time to a player ranked 82nd in the world. The fans chanted "Arnaud! Arnaud!" through much of the match.

The men's field lost another prominent player when No. 5 Richard Krajicek was routed 6-1, 6-2, 6-2 by Vince Spadea.

Also, defending champion Carlos Moya of Spain, seeded fourth, defeated Petr Korda, 6-7 (7-5), 6-4, 6-3, 6-1.

Kafelnikov, a former French Open champion, will lose his top ranking if Pete Sampras or Patrick Rafter reaches the quarterfinals. This was the second straight year he lost in the second round in Paris.

"When I'm not 100 percent, it's pretty obvious that I'm going to have a tough day at the office," he said.

"Ask any No. 1 how hard it is to be on the top of the world," he added.

Krajicek had a chance of reaching the No. 1 ranking in this tournament. Tim Henman also can move into the top spot but, like Krajicek, he is not at his best on clay.

Hrbaty, unseeded and ranked 31st in the world, has beaten Kafelnikov three times this year.

Kafelninkov has played poorly since January, when he won the Australian Open, capturing only one title since. He gained the No. 1 ranking on May 3 despite losing six consecutive matches.

"It's not psychological," Kafelnikov said. "It's that I'm No. 1 in the world, and anytime I step on the court, it seems they are playing with a lot of desire."

Among the women, sisters Venus and Serena Williams enjoyed a good family day.

No. 5 Venus went to a tiebreaker in the first set against Natasha Zvereva of Belarus, then shut her out in the second, winning 7-6 (7-3), 6-0. She is delighted that some expect her to win.

No. 10 Serena, had an easy time as well, beating Mariana Diaz Oliva of Argentina 6-3, 6-4.

No. 4 Jana Novotna downed Adriana Gersi of the Czech Republic 6-3, 6-2.

Other men to advance were No. 7 Henman, No. 9 Marcelo Rios and unseeded Russian Marat Safin, who always seems to do well at Roland Garros.

Britain's 12th-seeded Greg Rusedski did, too, even though he says he has no chance of doing well on clay. But Jim Courier, a two-time French champion, lost to Hicham Arazi 2-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-1.

Kafelnikov committed a string of unforced errors in the final game, typical of the match.

In all, Kafelnikov committed 46 errors, including eight double faults.

"This just goes to show that anyone can beat anyone," Kafelnikov said. But he added: "I'm sure I can win here again."

LEE: Rebels play Duncanville Friday

(From 1C)

haven't had the best of regular seasons, to distinguish themselves.

"I get a lot more excited going into the games than I did in district," said Haney, a junior. "Everybody's stepped it up a level. Most of the people who start are seniors and this is their last chance, and I don't want to let them down."

In winning the District 4-5A championship, Lee didn't receive much of an offensive contribution from Haney, who hit only .200 in district. In staying at the dreaded Mendoza Line (hitting no higher than .200), Haney found himself on the bench for a couple of district games, and wasn't sure he would get off it.

"The first game I sat out I was kind of worried," said Haney. "I was never confident when I was sitting on the bench."

It was because of his defensive ability that Haney didn't find a permanent seat. He has probably been Lee's steadiest gloveman in the infield all season.

While his hitting numbers might not have been impressive, that hardly meant that Haney lacked toughness.

"I don't think there's anybody better at turning the double play," said Benavidez of Haney.

With the top of Lee's lineup set since Eric Neatherlin took over the leadoff spot, Haney remained in the No. 8 slot for the playoffs. Starting with the second game of the area round series with Coronado, he has batted like anything but a No. 8 hitter.

In that game, Haney hit a pair of homers (he hit none during district), which eventually were wasted in an 11-9 Lee loss that forced a third game. In the first game of the regional quarterfinals against Socorro, Haney showed that power display was no fluke by hitting a two-run homer which gave the Rebels a 10-run margin on the way to a 12-0 five-inning run rule win.

Along with Neatherlin, Haney is leading the team in postseason batting average at .571. His three home runs lead Lee in the playoffs and he has driven in eight runs.

"In my old stance I was pulling out so far that I was swinging too soon," said Haney, who says that a change in his stance has been the key to his postseason surge. "I went back to what I had been doing in the summer I'm definitely seeing the ball a lot better."

The same could be said for Burlison, who leads the Rebels in postseason RBIs with 12.

"I'm seeing the ball a little bit better (than in the regular season)," said Burlison. "It really looks huge right now and I'm just fortunate to get out there with people on base."

When people were on base in the Socorro series, Burlison brought them home. In the first game he was 3-for-3 and drove in five runs, including a two-run homer which capped Lee's scoring. In the much tighter second game, a 13-10 Lee win, Burlison tied the game with a bloop single in the third inning, then had a two-run single the next inning which helped give the Rebels a cushion.

As a senior, Burlison has plenty to prove in the postseason, given that he missed a chunk of district with a pulled left hip muscle which kept him from hitting higher than .273. Even less auspiciously, he sat out the first game of the postseason against Coronado for disciplinary reasons. When he came back for the second day of the series, he made up for lost time, hitting a three-run homer and driving in four runs in the decisive third game, a 19-3 Lee rout.

"It just put baseball a little bit more in perspective," said Burlison of his one-game hiatus, of which he wouldn't discuss specifics. "You want to be there for your teammates."

The teammates have gotten plenty of support from Burlison, who is hitting .538 in the playoffs. Like Haney, Burlison has stayed in the lineup because of his defense. Benavidez said Burlison is perhaps the best throwing catcher he has ever coached.

But now, Burlison is doing damage with his bat, which isn't as surprising as it may seem.

"You see a lot better pitches than what you do at the top of the order," Burlison said. "It's good to go out with a bang. You always want to finish up strong."

Even if you're at the bottom of the order.

NBA: High-flyer Carter takes top rookie honor

(From 1C)

tion."

Carter was best known for his athleticism and has already been compared to another former North Carolina player, Michael Jordan.

Rookie Award

NEW YORK (AP) — Voting results for the NBA Rookie of the Year:

Vince Carter, Toronto	113
Jason Williams, Sacramento	3
Paul Pierce, Boston	2

"He's the best dunker I've ever seen," said former North Carolina coach Dean Smith, who also coached Jordan.

Carter left the Tar Heels early, was drafted by Golden State and then swapped almost immediately to Toronto in exchange for cash and his college teammate, Antawn Jamison — who was the No. 4 pick.

Carter averaged 12.3 points over his three years at North Carolina. But like Jordan, his athleticism flourished in the NBA.

While many rookies were hurt by the NBA lockout and the shortened training camp, Carter took advantage of the situation.

"The lockout was good for me because it gave me extra time to work on my game," Carter said.

Carter is the second Raptor to win the award. Damon Stoudamire, who was traded to the Portland Trail Blazers last year after demanding a trade, was rookie of the year in 1996.

"This is a great honor," Carter said. "I looked at all the great players who have won the award and it's going to be tough to live up to the things they have brought to their organizations and basketball cities.

"But I'm going to try my hardest . . . to have a great career and do a lot of great things for the Toronto Raptors."

Carter hopes the award will get him a spot on the Olympic team.

"That's my ultimate goal," Carter said. "That's the highest honor you could ever achieve. I hope they consider me, but if not, I'll just work for the next one."

Chevron layoffs

Chevron has announced that 15 field jobs out of 161 are being eliminated, nine in Crane, four in Wickett and one each in Goldsmith and Packingham in Terrell County. Chevron spokesman Neal Miller said employees will receive a severance package, stay on the payroll until July 7 and placed in a redeployment pool for jobs elsewhere in Chevron. An outplacement program is also being established to help the employees find jobs outside the company.

Stocks rebound

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks rebounded from a four-day slump Wednesday as the banking and Internet shares that faltered earlier this week roared back.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 171.07 points, a rise of 1.6 percent, to close at 10,702.16. At one point late in the session, the Dow was up 190.

In a single, volatile session, the index of blue-chip stocks wiped out more than half its losses since Friday. Four straight losses had pushed the Dow 5 percent below its May 13 record of 11,107.19. After Wednesday's rally, the Dow is 3.6 percent off the all-time high.

Broader indicators rose, recovering early losses. The Standard & Poor's 500 gained 20.36 to 1,304.76, and the technology-heavy Nasdaq composite index rose 46.28 to 2,427.18.

Analysts said the market was ready for a bounce, as the U.S. economy remains strong and the outlook for corporate profits remains rosy, at least for the next quarter.

Oil prices up

NEW YORK (AP) — Gasoline prices rose sharply Wednesday in futures trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange amid news of a brief shutdown at an Exxon refinery in Texas.

The news of a temporary power outage at the Exxon facility helped overshadow a report that U.S. gas supplies rose by 771,000 barrels last week to 220 million, while refineries were operating at 96.7 percent capacity, up from 96.6 percent the prior week.

The American Petroleum Institute also reported late Tuesday that U.S. crude oil stocks fell 3.3 million barrels to 332.1 million barrels, helping push oil prices up.

Light sweet crude oil for delivery in July rose 21 cents per barrel to $17.35, and home heating oil for delivery in June rose 0.05 cent per gallon to 40.37 cents.

Natural gas prices also rose Wednesday, with contracts for delivery in June settling at $2.226 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 2.6 cents.

In London, North Sea Brent Blend crude oil for delivery in July rose 4 cents per barrel to $15.47 at the International Petroleum Exchange.

Euro falls

NEW YORK (AP) — The euro fell to its lowest level yet against the dollar Wednesday amid speculation over the economic soundness of the European Union after the EU allowed Italy to miss an important budget-deficit target.

In late New York trading, the euro was quoted at $1.0455, falling from $1.0601 Tuesday, a 10.4 percent decrease since the euro started trading in January in place of 11 currencies making up most of the European Union. The euro hit an intraday low in New York of $1.0445, a 10.5 percent decrease.

Texas insurance numbers drop

■ New programs, legislation hope to give small employers access to health insurance.

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

An estimated 25 percent of Texans are uninsured, and a recent survey by the Henry J. Kaiser Family Foundation found that for the first time in at least 10 years, less than half of all small business employees receive health coverage through employers.

The survey also found that the coverage level for 1998 had fallen 5 percentage points in two years.

"This has been a consistent problem for a long time," said Clark Jobe, executive director of the Texas Insurance Purchasing Alliance in Austin.

He said that small employers are having a harder time getting coverage for their employees because costs are rising an average 32 percent a year to small employers and because fewer companies are willing to provide coverage for small businesses.

Robert Rendall, vice president of Tomcat USA in Midland, said his company has no problem obtaining health insurance for its employees.

"But it's getting more and more expensive and less affordable for our employees," he said, noting that the company pays for coverage for its employees, but they have to pay for coverage for family members. As a result, he said, more employees have dropped coverage for family members.

Over the last three years, he said, "we've cut benefits as our deductibles have increased. We've gone to an HMO-type plan to contain costs, and the benefits aren't as good."

Like Tomcat, Hanley Petroleum Inc. has no trouble obtaining health coverage for its employees, said Steve Castle, company president, but rates have increased.

"We've used several companies over the years and each year we shop around," Castle said. "The last few years we've gone with Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Texas; they're good with their claims and they're efficient. And if there's a small rate increase of 2 to 3 percent, we take it in stride. But if it's more, we'll talk with them and make sure there's no busts on our record. If it's in the 5-to-10-to-15 percent range, we negotiate with the company. That has prompted us to change companies before."

He noted that his company belongs to the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, which offers a pool program for members. A pool program, NFIB Health Benefits, was recently launched in Texas by the National Federation of Independent Business, the 10th state where the program is available.

Jamie Amaral, national director of health for NFIB, said there are three versions of the plan — one for sole proprietorships, a second that Ms. Amaral likened to a cafeteria plan and includes dental, life and vision options, and a third that gives tax relief to employees who pay part of their coverage by paying their share pre-tax.

With insurance agents comprising 4 percent of the association's Texas membership, she said the plan would also give them business opportunities.

Her organization supports legislation introduced by U.S. Reps. Jim Talent (R-Missouri) and Cal Dooley (D-California) to allow small businesses to band together across state lines and form association health plans to purchase insurance. The bill was referred earlier this week to the House Subcommittee on Employer-Employee Relations of the Committee on Education and Workforce.

Jobe said such pooling programs are needed but cautioned that "various approaches have been tried and the test of their success is in the rising number of uninsured people."

The problem, he said, is that plans treat the uninsured alike when actually they have a variety of wants and needs.

"Some want access to primary physicians they can go to if they have the flu or with their kids. Others say they'll pay for the sniffles and sneezes but they fear catastrophic illnesses. That's why you have to attack the problem with a variety of different programs," he said.

Passengers walk away from the baggage claim area after picking up their luggage without showing a receipt at Ronald Reagan Airport Friday in Arlington, Va. At some airports, such as Los Angeles International, most airlines will not let passengers leave baggage claim areas without showing a claim stub for their luggage. But at others, including Reagan National and Dulles International near Washington, no one checks. Anyone can grab anything or, perhaps more worrisome for security, can leave a bag or package behind. The only safeguards are signs or public address warnings noting that many bags look alike so passengers should check their luggage tags.

Chamber video to get update to attract business

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

To assist in attracting new industry to Midland, the Chamber of Commerce is updating its promotional video.

Dennis Clayton, economic development director at the chamber, said at Wednesday's chamber board meeting that 12 to 14 existing businesses have been asked to provide for the video testimonials on doing business in Midland.

He explained that the video is updated every couple of years and the new video "will focus on our diversification into manufacturing and other areas."

Retention and expansion of existing businesses is a key to economic development, he said, and volunteers and staff members on the retention and expansion committee have a primary purpose of visiting existing businesses at least once every 18 months.

In talking with businesses, a top concern — one that is shared by businesses around the country — is a sufficiently trained work force. That concern was a driving force behind the proposed advanced technology center that is to be housed in the former Sears building on Cuthbert Avenue, Clayton said.

Clayton and his staff have also fielded numerous proposals and inquiries. Proposals from local businesses include a vending machine business and auto parts business and a proposal to relocate a waste disposal equipment manufacturing business from elsewhere in Texas.

Other proposals from out of state include three in-bound call centers, one needing between 300 and 400 operators, a blue chip center that could create 500 jobs at the beginning and a 20,000- to 40,000-square-foot call center.

Vic Hardy, vice chairman of the Convention and Visitors Bureau, reported that a phone bank has been set up manned by local hotels and volunteers. The effort generated more than 30 leads for conventions and events that could be held in Midland, he said.

Two chamber committees are also undergoing reorganization.

A new education committee is being organized, with a meeting set for June 16. The committee will replace the Education Combination committee.

A reorganization meeting of the transportation committee is planned for 4 p.m. today in the chamber boardroom.

Officials hope expo attracts new business to Big Spring

By T.E. Jenkins
Big Spring Correspondent

BIG SPRING — Moore Development for Big Spring Inc.'s executive director hopes that the 1999 Vendors Expo helps stimulate the local economy and open new doors for some of the city's local businesses.

"Every time a bid from one of our major industries in Big Spring goes to an out-of-town provider, that money leaves Big Spring," said Kent Sharp Wednesday at Dora Roberts Community Center, site of the expo.

"I believe it is essential for us to look at new and better ways to provide the goods and services that these businesses and institutes need right here in Big Spring.

"They say that every dollar spent in Big Spring circulates at least seven times through the city's economy before it finds its way outside of the community ...

"We hope to show local business owners that no matter how small they are, they can compete with out-of-town suppliers if they know how to go about the bidding process."

Many of Big Spring's larger industries, including the city of Big Spring, Big Spring State Hospital, Department of Veterans Affairs Medical Center and Howard College, were on hand for the expo and luncheon.

Each group had their own display and shared information on the bid process that they use to reach suppliers and service-oriented businesses.

"A lot of local business owners don't bid for these jobs because they are convinced they don't have a chance from the start, and that's not always the case," Sharp said. "There will always be larger companies located out of town that will have the upper hand in these bids, but a large part of winning these bids is understanding the process that these companies use to make their final decisions."

Sharp said the expo is a visible sign of a growing and strengthening economy.

"We've had some discouraging things happen over the last couple of months, but overall, I think we are still doing very well economically.

"Western Container decided to move their corporate offices to Midland, and we lost a little over 30 jobs in that instance, but you have to look at the larger picture, which is their manufacturing facilities, which will remain here.

"We have to look at every possible way we can improve Big Spring's business and economic climate to be successful. That's what this expo is all about," he said.

Financial difficulties present threat to global economy

By M. Ray Perryman

This is the time of the year when I take a look at the long-term future of the U.S. and Texas economies. I take into account many factors when preparing a forecast through 2025. One dominant consideration is the increasingly important role of the global economy.

Perryman

The international capital markets are becoming more stabilized, but dangers still persist as we observe the ripples of financial difficulties within one country washing over the economies of others. I anticipate future national economies to see increasing involvement by worldwide financial lending institutions such as the International Monetary Fund (IMF); this global financial organization recently came to the rescue of Brazil and Japan, and it is central to the economic survival of the former Russian states.

The IMF could move in several directions in the coming years, including requiring stricter conditions for obtaining loans (such as releasing financial data faster and more frequently), enforcing higher standards to quality for emergency funds, and offering incentives to pursue sounder financial policies to help avoid future problems.

Because of the importance of international trade to our domestic economy, any changes in the economic performances of our major trading partners must be factored into our U.S. and state forecasts. Therefore, I'm briefly commenting on selected foreign markets that are or are likely to become major U.S. trading partners.

The monetary union appears to be a reality the euro-zone can live with, and the member nations are, on the whole, poised for long-term economic growth (despite persistent high unemployment rates). The economic performances from the EU countries should prove to be stimulative to U.S. economic growth over the long term.

Sharing a common border with the U.S., Mexico is already one of our country's top export markets. Over the long term, I anticipate continuing improvement in the Mexican economy as well as further progress towards liberalizing trade. Look for increasing amounts of cross-border trade between the U.S. and Mexico over time — something that should benefit both nations.

As our neighbor to the north, Canada plays a disproportionate role in terms of trade relative to its population. Over the long term, expect continued progress toward eliminating a fiscal deficit and a healthy dose of economic growth to contribute to rising levels of trade.

Despite recent events which have chilled US-Sino relations, I foresee the long-term prospects for US firms entering Chinese markets to be optimistic. Current rhetoric between Beijing and Washington indicate a reasonable probability of Chinese acceptance into the World Trade Organization (WTO) structure, an event which may serve to increase the penetration of U.S. firms into what is one of the largest, untapped consumer markets in history. The eventual extension of economic freedom to the citizens of China — an event which has a strong probability of occurrence in the long term — increases this country's importance to U.S. economic performance.

Although Russia has encountered hurdles on the road toward becoming a country with a market-oriented economy, it may yet become fertile ground for U.S. business development activities. Even though substantial short-term and structural troubles loom, expect a modicum of economic growth and price stability over the long term.

The long-term economic prospects for Chile are quite encouraging. As one of the fastest movers toward an open economy — and adoption of economic freedom for its citizens — Chile has outstanding long-term potential as a trading partner. Despite the recent failure of the U.S. to grant fast-track authority to expand NAFTA to include Chile, the country is the most likely candidate to join the free-trade club in the future. Anticipating additional trade liberalization and more privatization-oriented government reforms, Chile is expected to exhibit above-average economic growth over the next 25 years, a course which should benefit U.S. economic growth levels as well.

No one knows what the future holds — especially 25 years out into the next millennium. I do believe, however, we can say with confidence that the world grows more interdependent with each good or service that crosses national boundaries. Both the U.S. and Texas are well positioned to prosper.

Dr. M. Ray Perryman is President and Chief Executive Officer of The Perryman Group and Business Economist-in-Residence at the Edwin L. Cox School of Business at Southern Methodist University.

A morning walk

Williams

It is a joy to go walking. A walk is a meditation, an adventure, and mighty fine relaxation. Morning walks, as the sun is just peeking into the night shadows, are fresh and cool. Let's go on a hypothetical walk, filled with observations by our staff and volunteers and by the kids that visit Sibley.

Bleary-eyed and coffee in hand, stand in the cool air, and inhale. Close your eyes and listen. Yep, there is that mockingbird. When does he sleep? He was singing at midnight and at 4 a.m. Where is he? There he is, on the electric line. What a silly little hop and flutter: he is so full of song he bounces! Who else is singing? Oh, the house finches are burbling, full of expectations of oil seed sunflower kernels. Over there is the red-mantled male; the sparrow-streaked female must be on her nest, the second one of the year.

Mourning doves are calling like owls. One comes whiffling by, its wings noisily ruffling the air. And, yes, there is the "Who cooks for you? Que lastima" call of the white winged doves. White wings have become quite common since moving to Midland in the late 1980s. And, there, another bird song ... a rising trill followed by descending melody ... Cassin's sparrows are singing. The Cassin's sparrow is a symbol of the southern Llano Estacado. Its haunting melody sends shivers down the spine of long— time Llaneros. Oh yes! It is a beautiful day!

The day will be hot. By afternoon, everything wild will be hiding in whatever shade it can find. The wildflowers of spring have gone to seed, and the dried stalks crunch underfoot as we head into the pasture. Ah-ha: a box turtle. This one is an old friend. It knows us. It cranes its neck to peer up — have we got a tidbit for it? Red eyes male or female? (Everyone should know!) At what age do the males get their red eyes and bright spots on their legs? If you know, tell us! For the first two hours of the morning the turtle will

This picturesque field of bluebonnets and Indian paintbrush, typical of the Hill Country, can seen at Aubrey and Jean Reid's country place south of Midland.

A patch of Blue

Some gardeners may dismiss the prickly poppy as a weed, but you can't discount the beauty of the blossoms.

The blue beauty is a wild rose among flowers. It is a mustang among prairie bloomers, wild and desirable. And, like the fragile beauty of a romantic's yearning, the spring-blooming beauty flowers at springtime when prairie life is renewed. And all too soon, it is gone until another season comes around.

The bright blue blossoms, of course, are those of the Texas bluebonnet, Lupinus Texensis, the Texas state flower. The flower's thoroughly blue hue suddenly appears in patches across the Lone Star State from the East Texas common blacklands to the Big Bend National Park stately wonders to the west and the Hill Country and Midland in between.

"It's gorgeous," Midlander Jean Reid, a wildflower aficionado, said of the bluebonnet.

On the plains, it is the blue in the rainbow of wildflowers.

After its glorious bloom is spent, the bluebonnet, like a firing cannon, shoots out a volley of hard-shell seeds seemingly in random trajectories. In due season, next year or a decade later, the tough seeds sprout and seek the Texas sunshine and rain. And the blooms speak of tender loveliness.

The bluebonnet in an array of number is its own hall of honor.

In Delta County, on a steep hill at a place called Hilltop on the road from Commerce and Cooper to Paris, there in springtime bloomed a resplendent sea of bluebonnets. And the display sure has its seasonal encores when the rain and weather properly court the flower.

Its springtime appearance causes the heart to sing and invariably brings joy both to children at the threshold of life's journey and to life's old veterans ready for another journey.

Year after year, Aubrey and Jean Reid, at their country place south of Midland, await the glorious show of wildflowers, such as the gaillardia called the Indian blanket, the primrose, the Tahoka daisy called the tansy aster and its lavender petals, and, especially, the bluebonnet.

Despite the drought, the bluebonnet returned in 1999 to its natural splendor.

The flower, which supports tiers of bonnet-like petals, is a pea family flower variously called buffalo clover, wolf flower, and el conejo (as in rabbit).

Pretty much at the peak of their splendor, the Reid patch of wildflowers and the surrealistic effect of their pattern were whisked away by Midland's 1999 spring tornado.

Their beauty, cut short not given a chance to fade, wilt, and die in nature's marvelous cycle, will reign in another season after the rains fall again and one season blends into the other.

And the bluebonnet — and their wild companions — again will make hearts glad if only for a while.

Even alone, a patch of blue wildflowers, above, adds appeal to any landscape — although some nature lovers prefer the random spot of color offered by the addition of other wildflowers, below.

MORNING: Wildlife observed on walk

roam about its home range of about five acres, searching for caterpillars inching along the ground or a chilled grasshopper clinging to a seedstalk.

The loose grains of sand along the trail have tracks. Who visited last night? Hmmm... the blundering old possum came along not long before daybreak— its track is crisp-edged. Possums moved onto the Llano Estacado as the mesquite brush land spread and thickened with age. In the early 1990s their numbers seemed to quadruple (or so it seems since so many people are starting to report meeting them).

Here, the possum tracks cross over the Bobwhite Quail tracks. The quail must have walked along near sundown, finding one last seed before hiding under a lotebush. Two sets of quail tracks indicate the quail have paired up. Maybe they have found enough sprouting weeds to provide the calcium needed for egg production.

A hundred tiny squiggly tracks indicate the amazing number of nocturnal invertebrates that scamper in the dark. Over by the rotten mesquite log, one track looks like a zipper. A 6-inch centipede lives there. And look at the mouth of that hole! Hey, there's a scorpion still waiting for supper to walk by!

Be still! Here comes the resident skunk. She likes to use the tail, too. My gosh! Look in her mouth! She is carrying a ground squirrel! Skunks are omnivorous, so they must eat meat sometimes... but, to be carrying a whole ground squirrel? Wow! Hurry home, little mama.

What in the world? Hey jackrabbit! Why aren't you scared? Are you crazy? The silly thing is walking right past us, ignoring us. Where is it going? To a sett (a shallow hole under a wolf berry bush) where it kneels down, wriggles around and lowers its ears along its back. When we first walked up it must have bolted, but when we tipped our hat at the skunk, it probably figured we were harmless. Yeah, I know, anthropomorphistic thinking is not very scientific. Is that where it will give birth? It did not look pregnant! (But who has ever seen a fat jackrabbit?)

Another box turtle, or at least its track. There it is — headed to that old badger hole. And will have company (we see a big snake track). The 6-1/2-foot bullsnake is seen most often near here. Hey! The snake track is coming out, not going in! Dirt is pushed up on the back side of each loopy curve as the snake pushes itself along. Bullsnakes are diurnal. He must be out cruising for quail eggs, or baby mice or pack rats.

The brown ground spider nearly blends into his environment, but can be spied on close inspection.

What is that beautiful song? It is the song of the Painted Bunting. Red, blue, yellow and green make it the most colorful bird of the Llano Estacado. Five bucks says we don't see it though! It hides in the canopies of the mesquite and keeps at least two mesquite between us and it. It will sing at least three times a minute, for hours, while its chartreuse mate raises the young.

Another turtle! this time, a small one, but not a baby. The very little ones are almost never seen. Do they come out in the earliest crepuscular hours? (or latest?) To find the age are ridges running counter to the black and yellow lines.

WHOA! THERE GOES the first lizard of the morning! It was brown, so it was the Southern Prairie Lizard. It lives on trees, walls and fences. Watch him. He is doing push-ups, flashing his blue throat and blue sides. Is he directing his efforts at us? Look for another male somewhere near. Hmmm... maybe he is signaling us, telling us we are in his territory.

Oh, my! Oh, my! Kingsnake! Eating a hognose snake! The hognose is almost as long as the kingsnake — good grief! How long will it take him to choke it down? (Four hours, we found out, after catching both snakes. The kingsnake never let go of the hognose.)

Alright! Tarantula hole! Let's take this long grass stem and put it down on the hole, then thump it like this and wait. Aaah, the grass is moving! We'll grab it gently and pull slowly. Come on... Come on... gently... gently... aaah, there it is! It is almost out... see, it is holding on... it is out! Quick, plug the hole with a tissue! Okay... put your hand in front of her. See, its eyes are on top of its head, it can't see what it walks on. If it bites, it will feel like a thorn prick. You won't get sick. They aren't dangerous! They are cute and fuzzy just like a little kitten. Oh, too many legs to be cute? It tickles, doesn't it? It isn't scary at all, is it?

It is getting hot. Let's go back.

KUDOS TO TXDOT!

Driving on Loop 250 is spectacular! The A Street overpass (with dozens of Red Yucca, Flameleaf Sumac, Texas Sage, Turk's Cap) and the northeast junction with Midland Drive (with Desert Willow, Autumn Salvia, Gold Mound Lantana and Mealy Blue Salvia) are wonderfully colorful with perfectly appropriate landscaping. The landscaping reflects a loving familiarity of the beautiful plants of the American Southwest. The Texas Department of Highways is the best in the nation!

DEAR ABBY

More merrier when in-laws came along

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'd like to comment on the letter from the couple who didn't want to honeymoon with their in-laws on a cruise. My husband and I were married in 1958. I lived in Louisiana. His parents were from Pennsylvania and came to our wedding. We were delighted to have them come that distance to attend. Their other son, Mike, was stationed in Biloxi, Miss., so a couple of days after the wedding my husband, his parents and I went to visit Mike in Biloxi. En route, we stopped in New Orleans and had the time of our lives. My in-laws paid all the expenses, as we were living on a shoestring. We had many laughs later about my in-laws coming along on our honeymoon.

Van Buren

My husband and I have since taken many trips. We've been to Europe three times, to Canada, and have traveled all over the United States. I dare say NONE of these trips was more fun than the honeymoon trip with my husband's mom and dad. By the way, Dad died in 1987. My mother-in-law died April 6. I say: Let your in-laws go with you. You won't regret it. — MRS. BOB (LAURA) LAUER, POWELL, TENN.

DEAR LAURA: Your letter is a standout, particularly from the batch of mail "Honeymooning With the In-Laws" generated. Most contained dire warnings that the young woman should "run for the hills" while she still could — or that the couple should stand together and lay down the law to his mother. Read on for the reaction of a reader who simply empathized:

DEAR ABBY: I feel for that bride. She has a mother-in-law who wants to share EVERY DETAIL of their life — every special moment. That "mature woman" had better get a life of her own.

My mother-in-law didn't go on our honeymoon with us, but she finished unwrapping our wedding gifts "for us" and left them nicely displayed. She picked up our wedding album from the photographer and saw the pictures before we did. She wanted to tell us when to have our family (when I had morning sickness, she said, "Don't you wish you had waited?"). My in-laws also went on most vacations with us.

I hope that young woman loves her fiance a great deal, so their marriage lasts, as ours has. Good luck, honey, you have my sympathy. Sign me — BEEN THERE

DEAR BEEN THERE: You deserve kudos for your ability to tolerate the frailties of others. I hope your mother-in-law realizes what a prize her son snagged when he married you. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: When our son told us he was going to get married in Rome, my wife and I discussed our options. We informed Steve that we would not just fly to Italy for the wedding; we would vacation in Sicily afterward. A few days later, Steve phoned to ask if he and his bride could go with us. Consequently, the bride, the groom and nine of their friends joined us.

The bride selected "bed and breakfast" accommodations and places to visit. We stayed in a castle at the foot of Mount Etna and at homes on farms. We saw all the highlights of Sicily. It was the best honeymoon I have ever been on, and gave my wife and me a chance to know and love our daughter-in-law even more. Honeymooning with the in-laws can be a great happening. — RONALD L. SECORD, GLENDALE, ARIZ.

DEAR RONALD: Thank you for a thought-provoking letter. A honeymoon with the in-laws is like skinny-dipping. If all parties are willing, it can be terrific. If one party has reservations about it, it probably won't be much fun.

DEAR ABBY: We don't own a computer, but the Internet has had an effect on us. Our daughter lives 300 miles from us, and until our last visit, we always enjoyed the time we spent with her and her family. This time, however, they spent more time on the chat lines than they did with us. We were deeply hurt that the chat lines were more important than we were.

As we returned home, we discussed staying home in the future, rather than driving all that distance only to be put in front of a television set while they sat in front of their computer.

Unfortunately, many people ignore their guests in favor of Internet friends; they see nothing wrong with it.

We hope they recognize themselves in your column and take the message to heart. — STAYING HOME

DEAR STAYING HOME: Don't count on it. The guilty rarely recognize themselves in my column and change their ways. I understand that some people get "hooked" on chat lines, but that's no excuse for ignoring guests.

If it's not inconvenient, consider inviting your daughter and her family to spend the holidays at YOUR home occasionally, where no computer can interfere with the celebration or conversation.

DEAR ABBY: My wife's 46-year-old son will soon be marrying for the third time. She is a nice, pretty lady who is his age. This will be her first marriage. She is from a large and wealthy family.

My wife informed me I will be buying dinner for all those attending the wedding rehearsal. Is this my responsibility?

Shouldn't he, at his ripe old age, pay for this event himself? What about asking his five-times-married biological father to help share expenses? The father has provided very little to this "boy," who moved in with his mother and me when his first two marriages failed. — FEELING BADLY USED IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR FEELING BADLY USED: I see no compelling reason to open your checkbook. After the first marriage, your stepson should be footing the bill himself.

DEAR ABBY: Why are some people offended when you ask them their age?

This question has been puzzling me for years. I am 66. I know it is none of my business how old someone is, and that there are some legal restrictions about asking, but when I meet someone new, I'm tired of asking where they work, live, or if they are married. Perhaps your readers can tell me why some people are so sensitive about the age issue. — GORDON REOME, CANANDAIGUA, N.Y.

DEAR GORDON: We live in a youth-oriented society, and some older individuals feel less valued because of their age and are sensitive about revealing it. In other societies, age is respected and revered. We could learn from them.

Lint build-up will slow down dryer

Associated Press

If your dryer seems to take forever to dry a load of clothes, it doesn't necessarily mean it's time to buy a new machine. Chances are, ol' faithful simply needs some attention. In many cases, a dryer that's not doing its job as quickly as it used to is suffering from an affliction that's quite easy to fix: lint buildup.

To work effectively, a dryer must move a large quantity of air over the clothes in the drum. The air is heated by a gas burner or electric element and is pulled through the drum as it turns. Inside, the dry, warm air picks up moisture from the clothes and carries the moisture through a venting system to the outdoor air. However, moisture isn't the only thing that the air picks up along the way. It also accumulates lint particles from the clothes. That's why you need to clean the lint filter after each use.

Unfortunately, simply cleaning the filter may not be enough over the long haul. A small amount of lint can get by the filter and, over time, accumulate around the moving parts of the dryer and inside the ductwork and venting system. Not only does this accumulation restrict the flow of air, it can also pose a fire hazard.

Use only approved venting material such as rigid or flexible metal duct to provide a minimal restriction to air flow. Avoid flexible plastic duct that can be easily crushed or kinked. The ribbed surface of this type of duct is also more prone to lint accumulation. To maintain good performance, all dryers should be cleaned at least once a year. To do the job, you'll need a good vacuum, a flashlight, a 1-1/2 to 2-inch soft bristle paint brush, a broom or mop handle, an old towel, some duct tape and a few simple hand tools.

Begin by unplugging the dryer from its power source. If yours is a gas unit, shut off the gas supply to the dryer. Pull the machine away from the wall and thoroughly vacuum up whatever dust and lint you may find behind it. Then, disconnect the duct from the back of the dryer. It may be secured to the exhaust port of the dryer with clamps, screws or duct tape. Use your vacuum and brush to clean away all the lint you see at the end of the duct. Then move to the dryer exhaust port and clean the area with the vacuum.

Next, disassemble each section of ductwork. Using the end of the broom handle, push the towel through each piece to remove any buildup of lint. Vacuum up as much of the lint as possible and then inspect the inside of each length with the flashlight.

When the duct sections are clean, move to the exhaust hood that's mounted to an exterior wall of your house. The exhaust hood has a pivoting flap that's designed to open when the dryer is working and close when the dryer stops. The hood should be at least 12 inches from the ground. Sometimes lint can accumulate under the hinge of the pivoting flap, inhibiting operation. To clean the hood, reach inside and use a screwdriver to loosen any lint. Avoid using sheet metal screws to connect the duct sections. The sharp points can trap lint.

Grant, Trail Blazers lick wounds before important 6th game

By Landon Hall
Associated Press Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. — Brian Grant pondered the gash over his right eye — opened up by one of Karl Malone's notorious elbows — and decided he isn't angry about it.

In fact, the six-stitch cut represents what Grant wants to learn from Malone and the Utah Jazz: how to play with the intensity needed to win the biggest of games.

Grant and the rest of the Portland Trail Blazers face such a game Thursday night in Game 6 of the Western Conference finals at the Rose Garden. The Jazz won Game 5 on Tuesday night, pulling within 3-2 and avoiding elimination for the third time in the playoffs.

Malone cut Grant while going for a rebound in the first quarter. Grant lay on the floor in pain, and came back after being stitched up. He was ineffective, however, scoring eight points on 1-of-7 shooting in the Blazers' 88-71 loss.

"I'm sure he wasn't planning on elbowing me in the eye," Grant said before practice Wednesday. "Even if it was intentional, that's part of the game."

In the fourth quarter, with the outcome decided, Grant was frustrated after Malone made a swipe at the ball Grant had rebounded. Grant faked a throw at the back of Malone's head, drawing a technical foul. That sent Blazers coach Mike Dunleavy into an uncharacteristic rage.

He stomped onto the court toward an official and, after being ejected, had to be restrained by assistant coaches and players.

Meanwhile, Grant was in Malone's face, exchanging words with the future Hall of Famer.

"You're going to have to guess what I said to him, because it's between me and Karl," Grant said. "This isn't about Brian Grant playing Karl Malone. It's about the Trail Blazers trying to win a championship this year. I know we're not going to be able to do it with me bickering with one player.

"I don't have any ill feelings toward any of the Jazz. If anything, I can take a page from their book someday as far as how to win."

After Game 5, Blazers teammate Isaiah Rider hinted that the team might bring a role player off the bench to take out Malone, a suggestion quickly shot down by Dunleavy and Grant.

Malone was fined $10,000 by the NBA for elbowing Grant in the mouth in Game 1. As in Tuesday night's game, Malone was not whistled for a foul in that incident.

"He does have a problem with his elbows," Dunleavy said. "I don't want to make excuses. But if a guy continually hits people with elbows and they get cut, what does that tell you?"

The rough play in Game 5 overshadowed an otherwise impressive performance by the Jazz, who say the pressure is now on the Blazers to win on their homecourt to avoid going back to Salt Lake City for Game 7.

The Jazz are trying to become the seventh team in NBA history to come back from a 3-1 deficit. The last to do it was the Miami Heat in 1997, against the New York Knicks in the Eastern Conference semifinals.

The Jazz have trailed 3-1 five times in the Malone-John Stockton era, and have yet to win the series.

Spurs wait, watch Utah vs. Portland

By Kelley Shannon
AP Sports Writer

SAN ANTONIO — The San Antonio Spurs know from experience you should never discount the Utah Jazz.

So as the Spurs watch from afar, insisting they have no preference in the Utah-Portland playoff battle, their tales of the resiliency of the Jazz suggest the Spurs believe that series is far from over.

"Until I see Portland (in the Western Conference finals) ... I won't think anything but Utah," said Spurs forward Sean Elliott. "They're not dead yet. They're just not. They've been through it too many times to count them out."

The Spurs, after sweeping the Los Angeles Lakers 4-0 in their semifinals series, face the winner of the Utah-Portland series in the conference finals.

The Jazz defeated the Trail Blazers on Tuesday, but Portland still leads the best-of-7 series 3-2.

The next game is Thursday in Portland.

San Antonio held its first full practice Wednesday since ousting the Lakers on Sunday. The 2 1/2 hour session at a local college centered on improving the Spurs' game, not combatting the still unknown opponent, said coach Gregg Popovich.

"We just prepare as well as we can to make sure we're doing our things correctly, doing them as best as possible. Then when we find out who we're going to play, we can prepare on the court for that team," he said.

After practice, talk quickly turned to Utah and Portland.

Spurs players said they watched Tuesday night's game with interest as well as empathy for the pounding the Trail Blazers suffered at the hands of Karl Malone and the Jazz.

Brian Grant of the Blazers was bloodied by an elbow from Malone in the first quarter, one of several confrontations in the wild, physical game.

"He let that take him out of his game," Spurs guard Mario Elie said of Grant. "That's Utah, man. Utah, that's how they beat you. They get into your head. And Portland, a young team, they're sort of rattled a little bit."

The longer the Utah-Portland series goes, the more the Spurs get to rest, which is fine with Elie.

The top-seeded Spurs have homecourt advantage throughout the playoffs. The Western Conference finals are scheduled to start either Saturday or Monday, depending on when the Portland-Utah series ends.

Because Utah has played so well in elimination games, some Spurs believe the Jazz — San Antonio's longtime nemesis — might be heading here.

Utah has ousted the Spurs from the postseason the last two times San Antonio has made the playoffs. The Jazz beat the Spurs 4-2 in the semifinals in 1996 and 4-1 in the semifinals in 1998.

NFL commits $200 million for stadiums

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

ATLANTA — Acting on a new policy aimed at keeping teams from moving, the NFL on Wednesday committed more than $200 million as collateral for stadiums in Philadelphia, Denver and Foxboro, Mass.

The decision comes in response to the departure of two teams from Los Angeles and one each from Cleveland and Houston in 1995-96.

"It's a crucial policy for the league to have strong footing in the largest media markets," said Philadelphia owner Jeffery Lurie.

The money is the first to be committed under a bylaw enacted in March. The policy allows backing of up to 50 percent of private financing used for stadiums in the top six markets and 34 percent in those below that level.

New England and Philadelphia are in the first group and Denver in the second.

Broncos owner Patrick Bowlen said he expects a commitment of $43 million to $44 million, and the Eagles expect close to $50 million to $55 million.

The Patriots, recommitted to Massachusetts after a withdrawing a plan to move to Hartford, Conn., could get more than $100 million.

All three already have various commitments for public financing.

In other action on the final day of the league's spring meeting:

—The owners rejected a proposal to move kickoffs from the 30- to the 25-yard line to encourage returns. That first came up in March and was tabled but proponents were still unable to get a consensus.

—The owners awarded the 2003 Super Bowl to San Diego, replacing San Francisco, which will not have a new stadium ready. South Florida was the only other contender.

—The league unveiled the technology for its new replay system, to be reinstated this fall after seven years.

—The owners extended NFL Europe for at least another season.

But the biggest impact may be the commitments toward stadiums.

For while the money is more collateral than loan, it will allow the teams involved to get a commitment for funds to build stadiums and to get them at lower interest rates than they might have.

In part, it's a continuation of a league policy. But never before has the NFL backed as much as half the building cost.

On replay, the owners were shown the technology in which coaches will get two challenges a game, plus an unlimited number in the last two minutes of each half. The calls will be made by a replay official from a stadium booth.

EASTERN CONFERENCE FINALS PREVIEW

A look at the matchups in the NBA Eastern Conference finals

No. 2 INDIANA (33-17, 6-0)
vs. No. 8 NEW YORK (27-23, 7-2)

Starters: Indiana — C Rik Smits (11.1 pts, 5.4 reb), F Dale Davis (8.7 pts, 10.3 reb), F Chris Mullin (10.6 pts), G Reggie Miller (23.7 pts, 4.3 reb), G Mark Jackson (10.6 pts, 10.3 ast). New York — C Patrick Ewing (13.1 pts, 9.2 reb), F Kurt Thomas (4.2 pts, 4.8 reb), F Larry Johnson (10.2 pts, 5.4 reb), G Allan Houston (16.4 pts), G Charlie Ward (5.7 pts, 4.6 ast).

Key reserves: Indiana — G Jalen Rose (28.4 mins, 13.4 pts), F Antonio Davis (23.0 mins, 6.6 pts, 7.6 reb), F Derrick McKey (20.7 mins, 4.3 pts, 4.1 reb). G Travis Best (13.6 mins, 7.1 pts, 3.4 ast), C Sam Perkins (12.1 mins, 4.7 pts, 2.6 reb). New York — G Latrell Sprewell (32.8 mins, 19.0 pts, 4.6 reb), F Marcus Camby (20.7 mins, 8.1 pts, 5.6 reb), G Chris Childs (23.9 mins, 4.1 pts, 3.0 ast), C Chris Dudley (17.0 mins, 3.6 pts, 5.7 reb).

Season series: Indiana won 2-1.

The Pacers handled the Knicks easily in the two games at Market Square Arena and lost by one point at Madison Square Garden when they missed three open shots in the final six seconds. Mullin was particularly effective, going 9-for-13 from 3-point range.

Pacers edge: Point guard, perimeter shooting, foul shooting, size.

Mark Jackson has given the Knicks fits because of his ability to score almost at will against Ward. The Pacers have four terrific 3-point shooters in Miller, Mullin, Jackson and Perkins, and Smits can draw big defenders away from the basket with his 20-foot range. The burly Davises will be going against power forwards Thomas and Camby, who are new to this rivalry. Indiana is the NBA's best free throw shooting team.

Knicks edge: Speed, athleticism, defense, confidence. The 1999 Knicks aren't like the Knicks of recent seasons who almost never pushed the ball upcourt. Sprewell, Camby, Johnson and Childs will try to create fast breaks and outrun the Pacers' second unit. Defensively, the Knicks are a much better team that Indiana's first two postseason opponents, Milwaukee and Philadelphia, who allowed too many open shots. In terms of confidence, the Knicks are playing with more than they've had all year. They've never been scared of the Pacers, and they aren't now.

Storyline: After losing Game 7s in the 1994, 1995 and 1998 conference finals, will this be the year the Pacers finally make it over the hump?

Prediction: Pacers in 7.
