Reagan commends nation's progress

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — President Reagan, urged in Colombia to halt the diplomatic boycott of communist Cuba, met here Friday night with the president of El Salvador and said that troubled Central American country was making "great progress" in improving its record on human rights.

Reagan arrived in San Jose after a half-day visit in Bogota, Colombia, where he was jeered and cheered by separate crowds and encouraged by President Belisario Betancur to drop U.S. objections to Cuba's membership in the Organization of American States.

As Reagan flew here, he was quoted as saying he agreed with Betancur's proposal in principle but "only if Cuba ceases being a satellite of the Soviet Union."

Reagan was welcomed in San Jose by Costa Rican President Luis Alberto Monge, who hugged Reagan in the traditional Latin greeting. Reagan then met with the provisional president of war-torn El Salvador, Alvaro Alfredo Magana.

After his hour-long meeting with Magana, Reagan was asked about El Salvador's controversial human rights record. "I think they're trying very hard and making great progress against great odds," Reagan said.

Asked if the Magana government was showing enough improvement to warrant continued U.S. aid, Reagan said, "On the basis of everything we know now, yes, of course."

In Costa Rica, there was no 21-gun salute for Reagan because the country does not own a cannon. Its constitution forbids the formation of an army.

By contrast, heavily armed troops were out in force in Bogota to keep civilians far away from the presidential party.

In Colombia, Reagan told Betancur, whose country supplies most of the marijuana and cocaine used in the United States, that illegal drugs were "a threat to the social fabric" of both nations and that he was determined to cut their consumption in the United States.

Reagan said he realized the United States and Colombia "do not agree on every issue" but said his trip was intended to find ways of overcoming differences.

Briefing reporters later on Air Force One, Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Reagan and Betancur "hit it off very well on a personal level" even though they were at odds on some policy issues. He said they agreed fully on the need to curb drug smuggling.

The downtown section of government office buildings was virtually cleared of people and lined with armed Colombian guards as Reagan flew from the airport by helicopter to lay a wreath of red roses at a statue of the nation's liberator, Simon Bolivar.

Armored personnel carriers with .50-caliber machine guns were stationed at major intersections.

Although his Marine helicopter alighted just 25 yards from the statue, security concerns were so great that Reagan rode in an armored limousine to the ceremony. Troops cordoned off the area and kept crowds at a distance.

At three intersections about 200 yards from the ceremony, crowds totaling about 500 people whistled, jeered and chanted in Spanish "go home" and "assassin." Three miles away, students at the National University hurled rocks at policemen surrounding the campus, and reporters saw three officers knocked down. Police fired tear-gas grenades into the campus and some threw rocks back at the students.

Earlier, arriving at the military terminal of El Dorado airport, Reagan was cheered by perhaps 100 Americans who live in Bogota. They shouted, "Reagan, Reagan," and the president made a detour to walk over and tell them how happy he was to be in Colombia.

Betancur met Reagan at the airport and accompanied him to the wreath-laying ceremony. Later, the two leaders went to the presidential palace for a reception, luncheon and conferences.

In a toast, Betancur said hemispheric peace "is not achieved by pressures or isolation," referring to Cuba's exclusion from the Organization of American States. The United States sponsored the move to oust Cuba from the OAS in 1964.

Though Betancur did not mention Cuba by name, his meaning was clear. White House spokesman David R. Gergen interpreted the remark as suggesting inclusion of Cuba in discussions about the hemisphere's problems.

"Why shouldn't we do away with the exclusion in the inter-American system, on the example of the United Nations, so that all people of this hemisphere have an open forum that represents the reality of the continent," Betancur asked.

Since taking office in August, Betancur has said Colombia is willing to restore relations with Cuba if it stops training Colombian leftist guerrillas.

He said Central America had been "turned into battle sites between the local population and foreign intruders.

"Our responsibility as heads of state does not allow us to remain unmoved by the daily opening of grave sites in the ground of our common geography: 30,000 graves in El Salvador, to mention only one nation, shock the drowsy conscience of leaders," Betancur said.

He painted a dark picture of the Latin American economic situation, and called for more U.S. aid and elimination of trade barriers to its exports.

In his toast, Reagan adopted a conciliatory tone, saying he came "to listen and to learn" and not with "any preconceived plan that we wished to impose."

Midlanders gathered Friday night in Downtown Plaza Park, at the corner of Wall Avenue and Loraine Street, to spark some holiday cheer and light the 15th annual city Christmas tree. Texas' no-tax streak to end, according to Hobby forecast

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas' 12-year streak of no new taxes must come to a billion-dollar end next year, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby told legislators Friday.

In a pre-session speech to lawmakers, Hobby said it will take up to $1.5 billion in new taxes to pay for building new prisons, repairing the state's crumbling highways and paying for education.

But Gov.-elect Mark White, setting up a possible confrontation with the 1983 Legislature, said Friday he is "committed to see that state government continues to live within its revenues without increasing the tax burden on the people of Texas."

"I will cooperate with (the Legislature) in trying to make certain in these difficult times that we do not complicate the challenges before us by adding to the tax burden on our people," White said in a release.

Hobby said the Legislative Budget Board, of which he is chairman, has seen "well-documented budget requests" asking for $3.25 billion more than the state will have available for the 1984-85 biennium.

"They're not irresponsible requests. They all ought to be done but they won't be," he said.

The $3.25 billion is above the $5 billion increase in revenues forecast for the state during the biennium.

"Obviously, all of it is not going to happen," said Hobby. "But the figures do document a need for a substantial, as the Republicans call it, revenue enhancement."

"Obviously, these requests have to be shaved by a couple of billion. A tax increase of a billion and a quarter, a billion and a half, is really needed to adequately address these needs, brought on primarily by growth," he said.

Hobby offered no suggestions on what tax should be raised or initiated to meet the growing needs.

Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene and chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said after the Hobby speech that lawmakers should consider raising the gasoline tax or increasing vehicle registration fees.

"A tax bill is necessary or we are going to have to ignore some very serious problems," said Jones.

Jones favors a gas tax based on percentage, rather than the current five cents per gallon — the nation's lowest.

Democrats pushing own jobs program

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democrats are drafting a $10 billion program including highway repair and increased jobless benefits to combat the "national disgrace" of 10.8 percent unemployment, Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd said Friday.

Byrd said Democrats intend to press for enactment of the plan during the current lame-duck session of Congress, despite anticipated strong opposition from both Senate Republicans and the White House.

"We've got nearly 12 million people unemployed in this country," Byrd told reporters a few hours after the Labor Department announced that unemployment had spurted to a new post-Depression record in November from the previous month's level of 10.4 percent. "It's a national disgrace."

The West Virginia senator suggested the plan could be paid for by reducing next July's scheduled 10 percent income tax cut for individuals making over $46,500 and eliminating it for those making $78,600 or more.

Byrd's disclosure came shortly before House Democrats unveiled limited details of a $5 billion jobs plan of their own, a package that House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass, has predicted the full House will probably approve next week.

The outline provided by leadership officials calls for a combination of funding for programs such as highways, bridges, rehabilitation of federal buildings, Park Service projects, water system improvements, weatherization for low-income housing and job training. Aides said no breakdown of the amounts to be spent on each type of program would be available until next week.

In Bogota, Columbia, Reagan was asked if he would support an emergency jobs program in light of the increase in unemployment. His response: "No."

The package envisioned by O'Neill and House Democrats would be in addition to a bipartisan program of highway, bridge and mass transit repair that would be financed by a nickel increase in the 4-cent federal gasoline tax. The approach advocated by Senate Democrats would incorporate the $5.5 billion gas tax boost.

"I am hopeful that we can achieve a compromise with the Senate and take action before Christmas in creating jobs and inspiring consumer confidence," O'Neill said. "I urge President Reagan to join this spirit of compromise."

O'Neill said the House plan would be paid for with general tax funds, not a tax boost. He said it would also include a directive to the Federal Reserve Board, the nation's central bank, to keep interest rates down.

Senate GOP Whip Ted Stevens of Alaska said Republicans would reject such "worn out, tired attempts to put Band-Aids on the economy."

'Level II' care recommended

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A director of an Austin neonatal center recommended medical facilities in Midland offer "level II" care — which would provide for the majority of high-risk deliveries — at a joint hearing on two proposed Midland hospital projects concluded Friday at the Texas Health Facilities Commission.

Dr. Jacob Kay, director of the neonatal center at Seton Medical Center, testified on delivery needs for Midland Memorial Hospital, which plans to construct a 77-bed addition.

Kay was also cross-examined by attorneys for Doctors Hospital of the Permian Basin Inc., which seeks to build a new 110-bed hospital which would compete with MMH in Midland.

"I would recommend one level II unit...and coordinate efforts with a level III facility," Kay said, noting level II care is suggested for areas with at least 1,500 births per year.

Level III care is typically developed when births are between 8,000 and 12,000 annually, he said. Midland averages about 2,500 births per year.

Level III care is not necessarily more expensive to develop, Kay said, since facilities with level II care must have the equipment required to provide care until level III help is available.

"The only difference is the quantity of nurses, equipment and space," he said, adding quality is not necessarily provided with duplication of services in the same area.

MMH's proposed addition would include a new nursery with a capacity of 32 basinets and six level II beds, along with six labor rooms, two birthing rooms, four delivery rooms and a recovery suite for four beds.

The nearest level III facilities to Midland are located in Lubbock, El Paso, San Antonio and Austin, Kay said.

Before a second level II facility should be built in Midland, the need within the region needs to be analyzed carefully, according to Kay, who said "no medical facility within an area should be considered without a great deal of information."

Hearings officer Gordon W. Hardin said the matter would be considered during open meeting at the health commission on or before March 4.

'Legally dead' man surrenders

CHICAGO (AP) — A former bank executive accused of embezzling $615,000 has surrendered to authorities, more than seven years after the FBI began hunting him and a month after his ex-wife had him declared legally dead.

Lois Johnson had divorced the missing Carl Johnson in 1975 when the National Bank of Albany Park, in Chicago, threatened to sue her for the embezzled money. Last month, she had him declared legally dead so she could get a $22,500 insurance policy to supplement her small income from three jobs.

Thursday, after seven years on the lam — and three new identities — the former assistant bank comptroller turned himself in, telling an FBI agent, "I've had enough."

"These are very excited days," said Mrs. Johnson, who moved to Florida with her three teen-age sons after her husband disappeared.

She said she was shocked when her attorney called Thursday with the news.

"He said, 'Your husband has turned himself in,'" she said in a telephone interview. "I said, 'What?'"

Johnson is accused of embezzling $614,851 from the bank, now known as Albany Bank & Trust Co. He had disappeared in August 1975, a day before the money was discovered missing.

Attorney Louis Garippo said he planned to meet with his 46-year-old client and representatives of the U.S. attorney's office early next week to discuss the case. No arraignment date has been set.

Garippo said Johnson "hopes to make substantial restitution" and appeared "relieved and remorseful" when the two met Thursday.

Johnson was being held in the Metropolitan Correctional Center in lieu of $500,000 bond on a charge of bank fraud and embezzlement.

WEATHER SUMMARY

A band of showers from the Gulf coast up the middle of the nation into the Great Lakes is forecast for today by the National Weather Service. Warm and mild weather is expected to be moving up from the South.

Midlanders may see rain-snow mix

A hint of rain mixed with snow this morning should yield to warmer temperatures later today and Sunday, according to the National Weather Service forecast.

An NWS spokesman said there's a slight chance that snow could roll in from the north and mix with rain this morning. But no significant accumulations of the white stuff were expected.

Later today should be partly cloudy and warmer with a high in the low 50s and northwest winds at 5-15 mph. Prepare for clear skies and cold temperatures tonight, when the low should dip near 30. Sunday should dawn sunny and warm with the high expected to reach the upper 60s.

Friday's high of 49 never threatened the record high 83 set in 1974.

With .03 of an inch of precipitation in the last 24 hours, monthly and yearly amounts now sit at .05 of an inch and 13.30 inches, respectively.

Sunset tonight is at 5:44 p.m.; sunrise Sunday is at 7:34 a.m.

Regents board OKs UTPB program offering master's degree in geology

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Approval was given Friday by the UT System Board of Regents for the University of Texas of the Permian Basin to offer a master's degree in geology, pending the final go ahead from the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System.

Acting UTPB President Donald Rippey said the degree's purpose is to provide advanced training in pertinent specializations of geology, such as petrology, geophysics, paleontology and mineral resources, among others.

Demand for master's degree holders in geology is great, Rippey said, and is expected to remain so for the foreseeable future.

According to statistics from the West Texas Geological Society, more than 1,000 practicing geologists — the third largest concentration in the U.S. — work in the Midland-Odessa area. Only Houston and Denver have larger numbers of geologists, Rippey said.

Current library resources, facilities and funding are available to implement the program, Rippey added.

First-grader hit by truck near school

A Washington Elementary School first-grader was listed in satisfactory condition in Midland Memorial Hospital Friday night with a fractured skull after being struck by a pickup truck near Washington Elementary School about 3 p.m. Friday.

Although no police reports were available, Michael Worley, school principal, said Quan Searuggs, 6, was struck on Tilden St., which runs along the campus' west side.

Worley said police and an ambulance were summoned and paramedics ministered to the boy at the scene. Sharon Searuggs, 500 S. Lee St., arrived shortly afterward and transported her son to MMH.

A hospital spokeswoman said he was admitted at 4:30 p.m. for observation.

Odessa couple injured in accident

ODESSA — An Odessa couple was listed in satisfactory condition in Medical Center Hospital Friday night with injuries they sustained in a two-car accident at the intersection of U.S. 80 and County Road 122 West near Odessa Country Club.

The Department of Public Safety reported Lloyd Sexton, 34, and Royce Sexton, 33, were traveling west on U.S. 80 when their car was involved in a collision with a car driven by another Odessan, Jose Alvarado, who was heading south on County Road 122.

Mrs. Sexton suffered a broken right kneecap while her husband suffered contusions. Alvarado was not injured in the mishap.

Sitter pleads guilty

PERRY, Fla. (AP) — Baby sitter Christine Falling pleaded guilty Friday to murdering three children entrusted to her care and was sentenced to life in prison with eligibility for parole in 25 years.

Had the 19-year-old defendant gone to trial and been found guilty, she could have been sentenced to death in the electric chair.

Miss Falling, a heavyset young woman who dropped out of junior high school, was given three concurrent life sentences for strangling and/or suffocating 2-year-old Cassidy "Muffin" Johnson of Blountstown in February 1980, 8-month-old Jennifer Daniels in July 1981 in Perry and 2-month-old Travis Coleman of Blountstown in July 1982.

In exchange for the guilty pleas, the state agreed not to prosecute Miss Falling in the 1981 deaths of two Lakeland boys she had been hired to look after or in the January 1982 death of an elderly Perry man.

"The bottom line is, the state made us an offer that we could not refuse," said Baya Harrison III, one of Miss Falling's lawyers. "Christine was facing six potential death sentences."

Miss Falling pleaded guilty in Blountstown on Friday morning to two murder counts, then was driven about 100 miles southeast to Perry, another rural North Florida county seat, where she made the final admission.

In Perry, Miss Falling and her three attorneys stood before Circuit Judge Royce Agner, who asked her if she understood the agreement.

"Do you wish me to understand that you do acknowledge your guilt?" Agner asked before sentencing.

"Yes sir," Miss Falling replied.

In the Taylor County Courthouse here was Miss Falling's sister, Carol Phillips. "I don't have anything to say," Mrs. Phillips said afterward, fighting back tears.

Miss Falling earlier had pleaded innocent to all three charges.

At the Blountstown hearing, Miss Falling appeared calm as she stood before Circuit Judge Larry A. Bodiford, who questioned her about her intention to change her plea.

"Are you pleading guilty freely and voluntarily?" Bodiford asked Miss Falling.

"Yes sir," said Miss Falling, whose long hair had been cut and curled.

"Do you have anything further to say?" the judge asked just before he imposed the two life sentences.

"No, sir," she responded.

Afterward, Miss Falling was fingerprinted and led away by Calhoun County Sheriff W.G "Buddy" Smith.

"I have no comment," Miss Falling said when reporters asked why she decided to plead guilty.

At a news conference later, prosecutors played a recording of a confession in which Miss Falling admitted strangling all three children, plus two from Lakeland who died in February 1981.

Miss Falling said in the confession, obtained in July while she was a patient at a Tallahassee mental hospital, that she killed three of the children because they made her mad. She said she "just got the urge" to kill the Spring boy and didn't know what compelled her to kill the Coleman infant.

"I just picked him up off his pallet and choked him," she said in the confession to Calhoun County Sheriff's Deputy Ronnie Stone.

She had faced trial in Blountstown Dec. 27. Her Perry trial had been set for Jan. 10.

Bodiford, of Panama City, took over the Blountstown case Tuesday after Circuit Judge W.L. Bailey stepped down. Defense lawyers asked Bailey last week to disqualify himself after he moved the trial up from Jan. 24. The defense contended Bailey was trying to help the state prosecute the stronger Blountstown case first.

Miss Falling was arrested July 22 in Blountstown and charged with killing the Johnson girl and Coleman baby. Prosecutors said she "strangled and/or suffocated" the youngsters.

Three weeks before Miss Falling's arrest, Travis Coleman had been found dead in the ramshackle trailer Miss Falling shared with her boyfriend, Robert Johnson. He had become the fifth child in 2½ years to die in Miss Falling's care or after being baby sat by her.

His death sparked a new round of publicity about Miss Falling and renewed speculation about a link to the first four deaths, which had been attributed to natural causes.

Miss Falling had told reporters she was the confused victim of a grim coincidence. Medical experts were stumped.

On July 13, she voluntarily entered a psychiatric unit in Tallahassee after a psychiatrist found she was suicidal.

Jury to investigate Chicago voting fraud allegations

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal grand jury will investigate allegations of vote fraud in Chicago in the Nov. 2 election, U.S. Attorney Dan K. Webb announced Friday.

Webb said at a news conference that he has received numerous allegations of irregularities such as ghost voting and ballot tampering.

He said the number of allegations that his office, the state's attorney's office and the attorney general's office has received exceeds 100. He said investigators are trying to determine which allegations are serious enough to warrant prosecution.

The FBI will assist the U.S. attorney's staff in the investigation, Webb said.

Webb said his office will compare computer lists of registered voters with lists of people who died to determine "if there was massive voting of people who were deceased.

"I am particularly interested in people who ghost-voted under the direction of a precinct captain," Webb said. He urged such people to come forward and said his office would be "lenient" in dealing with them.

Although he declined to specify the allegations, Webb said the punch-card ballot apparently creates potential problems since votes may not be counted for several hours after they are cast and "there are opportunities for improprieties."

Earlier Friday, federal and county investigators had said their probe of vote fraud allegations had extended into several Chicago wards, but they wouldn't say how many of the city's wards were the focus of their inquiry.

Lawyers from the U.S. attorney's office and the Cook County state's attorney's office said they are looking into several charges, including ghost voting, forgery, absentee vote violations, and improper instructions to voters in the hotly contested Nov. 2 guberational race.

Gov. James R. Thompson defeated challenger Adlai Stevenson by 5,074 votes in the election.

The probe comes in the wake of charges by a Democratic precinct worker in a Northwest Side ward who said he was involved in a scheme to use absentee ballots and ghost balloting to pad the Democratic vote.

Webb announced Thursday he would investigate that charge.

Tom Leach, spokesman for the Chicago Board of Elections, said the FBI has subpoenaed voting records from the 44th precinct of the 39th Ward.

Leach said he anticipated "there may be some other precincts they may want to look into."

Despite these new charges, Leach said, "We felt it was a comparatively clean election. No election is completely free of irregularities."

Leach also said that the city has finished discovery recounts in 22 of 348 city precincts. Thompson asked for a recount in 334 of those precincts and Stevenson sought the discovery in 14 city precincts.

Stevenson filed for recounts of 1,880 precincts in 70 of Illinois' 102 counties and in eight cities with separate election jurisdictions.

The former U.S. senator is hoping to compile evidence of error, irregularities or other problems in the Nov. 2 balloting that he could use to convince a court to order a statewide recount.

He has until Tuesday to ask the state Supreme Court to name a three-judge panel that would review the evidence and decide whether to order the recount, which would be the first in Illinois history.

Attorneys for Stevenson say irregularities uncovered in several counties already provide justification for a full statewide recount, but Anton Valukas, Thompson's chief lawyer, says that's not true.

"It wouldn't come as a surprise to me that there were some such problems here and there across the state," he said. But he added that he doesn't think fraud, whether widespread or not, is any reason to justify a statewide vote recount.

"This process can be an endless, expensive, excrutiating process. Are voters entitled to a clean election? Yes. You get a clean election by prosecuting wrongdoers, not be holding another election or recounting the one we just had."

Reaganites gather Monday to talk re-election possibilities

WASHINGTON (AP) — Key figures in the 1980 Reagan campaign are getting together Monday to discuss "what if" he runs for re-election. They didn't ask the president's permission, but he hasn't discouraged them, either.

The meeting of regional directors of the 1980 Reagan organization was organized by Lyn Nofziger, the former White House political director, who resigned last January to form a private campaign consulting firm.

"I assume Lyn will get everybody's feedback and go back and tell the president," said one invitee who asked not to be identified.

Nofziger was quoted by the San Diego Union as saying, "The president is aware of the meeting. But he didn't tell me to do it. He didn't tell me not to do it. He didn't tell me he was running; he didn't tell me he was not running."

Republican Party chairman Richard Richards, who was Reagan's director for western states two years ago, said the Monday meeting would be "an opportunity for those who worked in the Reagan campaign in 1980 to get together again to talk generally about what if the president runs and how we all can help in that campaign effort when it comes."

Richards is being eased out as GOP chairman. When his term expires in January, he will be replaced under a two-tier scheme in which Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada will become general chairman while Frank Fahrenkopf, leader of the Nevada party organization, will assume the official job of national chairman.

Laxalt's position will give him responsibility for trying to coordinate all Republican campaign activities, including any Reagan re-election effort.

The naming of Laxalt, a close personal friend of the president, was widely interpreted as a hint that he is leaning toward running for a second term.

Laxalt, who was chairman of the 1980 Reagan campaign, was invited to the political directors' meeting but an aide said he would be out of town and unable to attend.

Reagan arrival date could 'bomb'

SAN PEDRO SULA, Honduras (AP) — President Reagan arrives in Honduras today, and Dec. 4 is a date watched with some wariness here because leftist guerrillas have been setting off bombs on the fourth of every month since July.

Reagan is to land at San Pedro Sula's airport for three hours of meetings with Honduran President Roberto Suazo Cordova and Guatemalan President Gen. Efrain Rios Montt before taking off for Washington at the end of his Latin American tour.

Suazo Cordova, elected in November 1981, heads the first civilian government in Honduras after 17 consecutive years of military regimes. The conservative government has been receiving increasing aid from the United States in its attempt to halt the spread of anti-government violence. Honduras is surrounded by nations fighting civil wars.

Police and Honduran officials say maximum security would be in effect anyway for Reagan's visit. But, laughed one: "What a coincidence" of timing.

Some of the main attacks by anti-government leftists:

July 4: Guerrillas raided electrical power plants in Tegucigalpa, the capital and largest city in Honduras, and dynamited installations, blacking out the city and a huge area around it for three days.

Aug. 4: Bombs damaged the offices of Air Florida, IBM and the Salvadoran Airline TACA in the capital.

Nov. 4: Bombs exploded at two subsidiaries of United Brands, at a government building and at a Japanese computer firm in Tegucigalpa.

Newspapers have taken note of the pattern to the bombings, but there has been no explanation so far of the leftists' preference for the fourth.

Reagan comes to San Pedro Sula, a steaming industrial center near the northern Caribbean coast and the country's second-largest city, instead of Tegucigalpa for two reasons. Officials say security will be easier than in Tegucigalpa. But the runways at the capital's airport are not long enough to handle the presidential jet.

The local La Prensa newspaper called it "a shame for the past Honduran governments, none of which worried about providing Tegucigalpa with a modern airport, following the advancements of aeronautical science."

Officials follow leads in jail break

McKINNEY (AP) — Authorities were pursuing several leads Friday in the early morning escape of five prisoners from the new Collin County Jail.

The five escaped through a window sometime after midnight and were discovered missing about 6 a.m. Friday, said Chief Deputy Terry Box.

"They came out of the second floor of the jail by sawing through some bolts, apparently, swinging the bars out and prying open a window," he said.

The jail's alarm system was being inspected Friday to determine why recently installed heat sensor alarms failed to go off, Box said. The alarm system "appeared to be operating" at the jail, which was built two years ago, he added.

Officers were searching for a black Ford van that was stolen from a relative of one of the escapees early Friday morning, Box said.

"We're working on several leads, but they're going in all different directions," he said. "...We're going to friends, kinfolks, and so on."

Escaped were Joe Nathan Thompston, 25, Dallas, charged with aggravated robbery; Brett Channing Malone, 21, Dallas, accused of theft over $200; Mitchell Ray Triche, 22, Dallas, accused of two counts of probation revocation on a conviction for burglary and theft over $200; Johnny Ayala Bazan, 24, McKinney, charged with murder, and Nicholas Joseph Rahaley, 39, Texarkana, charged with two counts of theft over $10,000.

LBB adopts teacher pay hike

AUSTIN (AP) — Teacher salaries would increase an average of 9 percent annually under a Texas Education Agency budget adopted Friday by the state Legislative Budget Board.

The teacher raise recommended by the State Board of Education was only slightly higher in total, but would have "compressed" the pay scale so teachers would have gotten bigger immediate increases but waited longer for the next raise.

The budget board accepted its staff recommendation of maintaining the current yearly experience scale, with raises ranging from 7.6 percent annually to 10.4 annually, depending on experience level.

Under the proposal accepted by the budget board, a teacher with a bachelor's degree and eight years experience would see a monthly increase in salary from $1,523 to $1,855 per month. That works out to a 10.4 percent annual increase, since teachers are not paid year-round.

The smallest increase would go to teachers with the most experience. A teacher with a B.A. degree but no experience would get $1,322 per month instead of the current $1,111 per month starting salary, a 9.1 percent annual increase.

Budget board Assistant Director Homer Scace was sympathetic to the Education Board's attempt to cut down on the number of teacher pay steps to make the starting salary more attractive.

"This is designed to draw talented young people into the profession," said Scace. "We have the prospect of an increase in students and the pipeline of new teachers is simply running dry."

Under the Board of Education's proposal, teachers, as a whole, would get $6.6 million more in 1984-1985. Under the budget board proposal, they get $6.5 million more for the biennium.

But, with the compressed pay scale under the Education Board proposal, a teacher could get as much as a 39.9 percent salary jump in 1984. That teacher would wait longer before getting get another raise, however

Proposed pipeline surprises oil companies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The announcement of a Long Beach, Calif.-Midland pipeline came as a surprise to large oil companies that move oil on the West Coast.

The Pacific Texas Pipeline Co. said Thursday it was planning a 1,026-mile pipeline between Long Beach and Midland that could carry as much as 900,000 barrels of Alaskan and California oil a day.

Company President Cecil Owens said construction could begin in early 1984, however, he would not reveal the private backers of the project or say which oil companies might use the pipeline.

But the plan was news to several large oil companies that ship Alaskan and California crude.

"We don't know these people and we haven't been appoached by them," Atlantic Richfield spokesman R.E. Parr said on Friday.

Parr said he assumed ARCO would be a candidate for using a pipeline because it brings crude oil down from Alaska. But ARCO already ships 38,000 barrels a day on its own pipeline to Texas and is also committed to using a new pipeline on the Isthmus of Panama, he said.

ARCO also uses much of the oil at two West Coast refineries.

"We don't know anything about this company," said Dale Bayse, spokesman for Chevron USA, which recently announced a large oil find in the Santa Barbara Channel near Point Arguello, about 125 miles north of Los Angeles.

Exxon spokesman D.I. Bolding said Pacific Texas had not contacted his company.

Both Chevron and Exxon indicated they were still trying to determine how large the channel field really is.

Owens said the pipeline would carry Alaskan and California oil that currently must be shipped through the Panama Canal. In Midland, the oil would be processed or shipped farther east through an existing pipeline network.

Standard Oil Co. of Ohio shelved a similar plan more than three years ago because of regulatory problems.

Howard Glassroth, associate director of public affairs for Standard of Ohio said, "We know nothing about it. We have not been contacted by the company."

Glassroth said it would only be speculation for him to comment on whether Sohio might make use of such a pipeline.

"Certainly, people would come to talk with us, since we're a major producer. We look at everything that would be available to us in our business," he said. But he emphasized that Sohio has not been involved in such a pipeline effort since it dropped its plan.

House votes to prohibit Watt from granting oil, gas leases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted 275-73 Friday to prohibit Interior Secretary James G. Watt from granting oil and gas leases in federal wilderness areas and off most of the California coast.

The action sent to the Senate a $7.4 billion appropriations bill for the Interior Department and related agencies.

Most notably, the measure prohibits offshore oil and gas leasing on the outer continental shelf, off the northern two-thirds of California. Watt had planned to auction drilling rights to the area next September.

The bill also continues an existing ban on approving oil and gas leases in federally designated wilderness areas and parts of the national forests being studied for wilderness protection. The current ban expires Dec. 17.

The prohibitions, to be effective through next September, face an uncertain future in the Republican-controlled Senate, which looks with more favor on Watt's policies.

But in the House, they were unchallenged by Republicans. Watt's name was mentioned only in passing during the debate.

Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Texas, a member of the appropriations subcommittee that wrote the bill, said a GOP fight would have been futile.

"We had to look out for the big items," Loeffler said. "We went after those things that were achievable. Basically, we got as good a bill as could be worked."

But Rep. Leon E. Panetta, D-Calif., who pushed the California provision, said later that the bill's passage "sends a clear message to Secretary Watt that the people of this country want a balance between energy development and the protection of our vital natural resources."

The Interior Department said it would have no immediate comment.

The California provision affects the coastline from about Pismo Beach to the Oregon border. It does not affect a large oil field recently discovered in the Santa Maria Basin.

"The thread to one of the most beautiful coastliand fishing industries and to one of the most beautiful coastlines in the world would be unacceptable, given the very small amount of oil and gas in that area," said Panetta.

Another restriction, added in floor debate, would ban offshore oil and gas leasing in some mid-Atlantic areas that are rich fish-breeding grounds.

The restriction is limited to specific tracts in 10 undersea canyons, including the Baltimore Canyon off the New Jersey coast. Drilling rights in the area are scheduled to be sold next April.

The wilderness provision is part of a long-standing dispute between Watt and Congress.

Marty Feldman, the British actor best known for his bulging eyes, finished shooting "Yellow Beard," a spoof of pirate movies, in Mexico City just hours before he died of a massive heart attack, according to his agent, Michael Maslansky. The 49-year-old actor died in his Mexico City hotel room at 9:30 p.m. CST Thursday, according to Maslansky.

Heart attack kills Marty Feldman

MEXICO CITY (AP) — British comedian Marty Feldman, whose bulging blue eyes and wacky style brought laughter to millions of moviegoers, has died of a massive heart attack, his agent said Friday.

Michael Maslansky, manager and agent of the 49-year-old comedian, said in Los Angeles that Feldman died Thursday night at about 9:30 p.m. CST in his Mexico City hotel room hours after completing his role in a new movie.

"Paramedics were called to the hotel room, but they were unable to revive him," Maslansky said.

Feldman had just finished work on "Yellow Beard," a spoof of pirate movies in which he starred with James Mason, Madeline Kahn and John Cleese.

ALTHOUGH A BRITISH citizen, the comedian had lived in Hollywood for several years with his wife, Lauretta, who survives him. They had no children.

A spokesman for a local funeral home said arrangements were being made to send Feldman's body to Los Angeles. Maslansky said funeral plans were pending.

The combination of Feldman's wild hair, popping eyes, broken nose and splayed feet was called everything from freakish to ugly. But the face that launched a thousand gags brought fame and fortune to the zany comedian from London's cockney East End.

In the "special peculiarities" section of his first passport, Feldman is said to have written one word: "Face."

The star of Mel Brooks' 1973 movie "Young Frankenstein" and "The Last Remake of Beau Geste," which he directed in 1976, Feldman once earned this description from the London Daily Express:

"He looked like something that had fallen off the roof of Notre Dame Cathedral in a thunderstorm."

FELDMAN MOVED to Hollywood in the mid-1970s to be "where the movie mountains are." He once said that if he had gone there a generation ago, "they would have changed my nose, given me a new name and had my eyes operated on."

The bulge in those eyes was caused by a hyperthyroid condition that developed suddenly. He had a thyroid operation in 1962 but the pop-eyes remained.

Brooks, a long-time associate, said Friday he was stunned by Feldman's death at such an early age and called it "a great loss to me personally, as well as to audiences all over the world."

In a statement released in Los Angeles, Brooks said the comedian was "a talented writer, a marvelous actor and a great mime...He was a joy to work with, and I was looking forward with great anticipation to working with him again." It is difficult "if not impossible, to express this kind of loss in words," Brooks said. "I'll miss him."

Fellow comedian Dudley Moore said, "I'm totally staggered at his death. I don't really understand how he could have died at such an early age.

"HE WAS ALWAYS a very jolly man, very full of fun as you can imagine, and yet there was a very serious side to him, as is the case with every comedian."

Feldman left school at 15 and started working days as a messenger for an advertising agency and nights playing the trumpet in London jazz clubs.

"He was always a very jolly man, very full of fun as you can imagine, and yet there was a very serious side to him, as is the case with every comedian."

A year later, he formed his own jazz group but Sunday Times critic Ian Christie called him the "world's worst trumpet player" and he switched to the stage.

His first performance was in an American Indian sideshow at the English seaside resort of Margate — playing what one agent called "the only Jewish Red Indian." He then launched his first solo comedy act in working men's clubs in the the city of Leicester. But he was fired.

After a succession of odd jobs in London, then Paris, he returned to the British capital and formed an act called "Saucy Girls of 1952 and 1953" which also flopped. After another round of odd jobs, he formed a comedy trio — Morris, Marty and Mitch — and toured France and Germany but ended up stranded in both countries.

Once back in London, he broke into television with Morris, Marty and Mitch. When the act split up, he began playing character parts on TV with the late Peter Sellers.

FELDMAN MADE HIS mark in TV comedy, appearing in "At Last the 1948 Show" and his own award-winning series, "Marty." He helped write British TV comedy shows in the 1960s.

But it was his movie career in the United States, as a regular in Mel Brooks films, that made the comedian a Hollywood success.

Feldman's other movies include "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes' Smarter Brother," (1975), "In God We Trust," (1981) and Brooks' "Silent Movie" (1976).

Navy technician fasts to avoid working aboard nuclear sub

HOLY LOCH, Scotland (AP) — A Navy technician began a hunger strike at the U.S. Navy submarine base here Friday, saying he opposed the use of nuclear weapons and wanted to be reassigned to clerical work.

A short time after the fast began, a Navy spokesman said orders had come through transferring the technician to new, non-nuclear duties aboard the aircraft carrier Eisenhower.

There was no word whether Petty Officer 2nd Class David Bender would end his fast.

Navy officials said Bender, 22, of Brown City, Mich., was originally assigned as a fire control officer working with nuclear weapons aboard the Will Rogers, a Poseidon submarine.

"Obviously, he could not be kept on board the submarine," said Navy spokesman Lt. Cmdr. Tom Randall. "Our policy for people who we can no longer consider reliable is to transfer them to new duty."

Dreyfuss contends innocence

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Actor Richard Dreyfuss pleaded innocent in municipal court Friday to two felony counts of possessing cocaine and a pain-killer drug.

Dreyfuss, who could face sentences ranging from a drug diversion program to years in prison if convicted, would not comment on the proceedings.

But he said, "I'm very glad that no one was hurt."

Court Commissioner John Murphy set a Dec. 16 date for a preliminary hearing for the Academy Award-winner.

Dreyfuss was charged in October with possessing cocaine and oxycodone, a pain-killer commonly known as Percodan. Authorities allegedly found the drugs in his clothing while Dreyfuss was being examined after an auto accident.

Dreyfuss' attorney, Howard Lowe, would say only that police had tested the actor's blood for alcohol and drugs after the accident and all tests were negative.

The 34-year-old actor is free on $2,500 bond. He was required to appear in court because the charges are felonies.

Dreyfuss was booked Oct. 11 while hospitalized for treatment of injuries sustained when his car flipped over and hit a palm tree on Benedict Canyon Road in Beverly Hills.

Personnel at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center found 0.7 of a gram of cocaine and 31 Percodan tablets in Dreyfuss' clothes, said Al Albergate, spokesman for the Los Angeles County district attorney's office.

Twins can't be parted

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Tests performed on Siamese twins Friday ruled out any hopes to successfully separate the twins and indicated their chances of survival on a shared heart are "negligible," a hospital official said.

The twins were born Wednesday in Bossier City, La., weighing a combined 10 pounds, 4 ounces and joined at the heart, chest and abdomen. They were airlifted here Thursday.

"There has been no change. They are still in critical condition," said Sgt. David June, night administrative supervisor at the Wilford Hall Medical Center at Lackland Air Force Base.

"Medical tests run on the Siamese twins...indicate that surgery to separate them is not possible," June said. "Neo-natologists here indicate their chances for survival are negligible."

June said the heart the pair shares suffers from cyanotic congenital heart disease, a lack of oxygen-pumping capability.

June said he could not release the names of the twins or the parents. Officials said earlier the father was in the military.

Distortion claimed

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Nearly a third of the news originating at the White House is unintentionally "distorted" by the media, mainly as a result of time pressures on reporters, according to an aide to President Reagan.

"About 30 percent of what you read that comes from the White House is distorted," Jann Mahan, Reagan's media coordinator, said Thursday during a speech at the University of Arizona.

Ms. Mahan said the distortions were not intentional and resulted from deadlines reporters must meet.

A tornado struck New Baden, Ill., Thursday night and did some heavy damage, destroying half of the 120 mobile homes in the town.

Storms wreak havoc in Midwest

By The Associated Press

Three more tornadoes slammed into Arkansas Friday and a child drowned in swirling floodwaters on the second day of storms that have killed at least 10 people in the Mississippi River Valley.

As many as four people were reported missing in Illinois.

Temperature records toppled in Michigan and Florida as a heat wave reached from the Gulf of Mexico to Canadian border states that are more used to snow this time of year. The weather set wetness records, too — Michigan got more than 3 inches of rain in a 24-hour period, breaking a record for December.

There were blizzard conditions in Montana: Winds howled at 90 mph Friday, one day after three people died in accidents on icy roads.

Oregon and Washington were soaked by a Pacific Ocean storm that carried 70 mph gusts and knocked out power lines.

High winds knocked an 80-foot hole in the wall of a company in Lowell, Ind., that makes storm doors and windows and a tornado tore the roofs from several houses Friday morning in Eunice, La.

"Get to the high ground," Arkansas Gov. Frank White exhorted state residents Friday as parts of 15 towns in the state were evacuated because of flooding. Torrential rains submerged the downtown section of Clinton, Ark., under 7 feet of water, the governor said. Damage was severe, but no monetary estimates had been made.

"I don't know of any time we've seen so much devastation so fast," White said.

One child drowned Friday as a family was flooded out near the Arkansas town of Deberry. Perry County sheriff's dispatcher Stan Wallace said four other members of the unidentified family had hung onto trees while rescuers in three boats tried to reach them. The family was rescued later in the day, officials said.

Gov. James Thompson of Illinois declared a disaster area in a county where a tornado making a freak late-autumn appearance killed two people and injured scores more Thursday night.

A 3-day-old heat wave broke new records Friday — the city of Buffalo, N.Y., often buried under snow in December, had a temperature of 72 degrees Friday, breaking a 61-degree record for the date set in 1951. The temperature reached 67 degrees Friday at Jackson, Mich., breaking the record for the date of 62 degrees, set in 1973. It was 87 degrees Friday in Orlando, Fla., breaking an 85-degree mark set for the date in 1968.

More than 3 inches of rain fell on Muskegon, Mich., in the 24-hour period ending at 5 a.m. Friday, breaking the old 24-hour record for December of 1.82 inches set Dec. 10, 1971.

High winds in Oregon knocked out power to about 350 homes in Clatsop County, and felled trees blocked some roads.

Winds in Washington gusted up to 55 mph, and a log ship broke loose from a dock in Aberdeen, drifted across a channel on the Chehalis River and smashed into another ship, officials said.

Tornadoes swept up the Mississippi Valley on Thursday night, killing five people, splintering more than 100 mobile homes and damaging other buildings in Illinois, Arkansas and Missouri.

"I hit the floor and curled up," said Air Force Sgt. Steve Tordson of New Baden, Ill., who had just checked to see if rain was coming in the windows on his mobile home when the glass was shattered by a tornado Thursday night. "I didn't move until the pulling and tugging and everything else was over.

"From what I could see by the lightning flashes, there were only two walls left standing." Tordson spoke as he huddled in a blanket at a school gym where a dozen homeless people spent the night.

Here's a breakdown of the storm effects in the Midwest:

—Arkansas: The state was hit by 20 tornadoes Thursday and three Friday, and up to 6 inches of rain caused widespread flooding. Two people died in tornadoes Thursday and one child drowned Friday. More than 40 people were hurt and scores were left homeless. The Buffalo River in northern Arkansas was 25 feet above flood stage.

Tornadoes reported in Louisiana towns

EUNICE, La. (AP) — A small tornado touched down here Friday morning but nobody was hurt, police said.

The twister tore the roofs from a couple of houses and knocked a tree into another house when it touched down about 10:30 a.m., said dispatcher Janet Ned.

She said police did not have a dollar estimate on damages.

The National Weather Service reported a twister spotted at Mer Rouge, about eight miles east of Bastrop in Morehouse Parish.

But Mer Rouge Mayor T.J. Parker said there was no indication that a tornado touched down or caused any damage.

Device could be harmful

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — It took the federal government 12 years to fulfill a congressional order that all underground coal mines be equipped with emergency breathing devices called self-contained self-rescuers. Now, two months later, an in-house study has turned up a potentially dangerous problem with some of the equipment.

More than a month after the report was issued, however, neither the Mine Safety and Health Administration nor the manufacturers of the respirators have notified mine safety directors of the problem, which could cause loss of consciousness.

An MSHA spokesman said the agency believed there "was only a remote possibility" that the problem could occur.

Researchers for the Interior Department's Bureau of Mines warned that some of the respirators do not have an automatic purge to rid the breathing circuit of nitrogen. If a miner exhales into the device before drawing his first breath, the report said, the bag will inflate with nitrogen and the oxygen demand valve will not be triggered.

The resulting drop in oxygen concentration could cause loss of consciousness "within a matter of minutes," according to the report. It urged that instruction manuals for two of the respirators be changed to emphasize the need to exhale before using the device.

Most of the mines have selected a device manufactured by Ocenco Inc. of Northbrook, Ill., which does not have an automatic nitrogen purge. Ocenco instruction manuals, the study said, "make no explicit demands" that the miner exhale before using the breathing device.

Mrs. Norma Morrison holds a photograph of her son, David Gregory and grandson, David Gregory Jr. The Christmas season is a bitter reminder to Mrs. Morrison that her son was kidnapped from a Fort Worth used-car lot and shot to death on Dec, 14, 1976. Charlie Brooks Jr., 42, one of two men convicted of murder in Gregory's death, is scheduled to be executed Tuesday by lethal injection.

Killer's scheduled execution brings back memories to victim's mother

DALLAS (AP) — The memories that have haunted Norma Morrison every Christmas since 1976 have returned more strongly than ever this season.

One of the two men convicted of murdering her son is scheduled for execution on Tuesday.

Unless an appeals court orders a stay before then, 42-year-old Charlie Brooks Jr. will be injected with lethal drugs, an execution Mrs. Morrison has anticipated since he was assessed the death sentence in 1977.

Her son, 26-year-old David Gregory, was kidnapped from the used-car lot where he worked and shot to death Dec. 14, 1976.

Eleven days later, Mrs. Morrison recalled, her young grandson, David Jr., came to her house to be with his relatives on Christmas.

"He was only 5 and he started looking around and I realized he was looking for his father. He looked in the bathroom and in all the closets. It broke my heart," she told the Dallas Times Herald. "He kept thinking, 'This is where he must be.'"

By this Christmas, Mrs. Morrison hopes, some of those memories will be exorcised through Brooks' death.

Brooks, scheduled to become the first person executed in Texas since 1964, has asked the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to reconsider its decision to deny a stay of execution. He also has asked the U.S. Supreme Court for a stay.

Brooks and Woody Loudres were convicted of killing Gregory after he took them on a "test-drive" of a car from the used-car lot.

Testimony at the trial showed Gregory was bound with wire and shot in the face as he lay on the floor of a motel room. The murder weapon never was recovered and prosecutors could not determine which man shot Gregory.

Loudres was convicted of capital murder, but the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals reversed his conviction and he received a 40-year sentence after pleading guilty to murder in a plea-bargain.

Mrs. Morrison said that while she wants Brooks to be executed, the matter tests her Christian beliefs.

"I was always raised that 'Thou shalt not kill,' and I raised David that way, too. But I am very prejudiced in this case. I can't forgive him for killing my son," she said, crying.

"I was raised on the Ten Commandments, but if I saw Charlie Brooks and had the opportunity, I might kill him myself," she said. "I'm glad I never had the opportunity."

The criminal justice system is too concerned about convicted criminals' rights, Mrs. Morrison added.

"Charlie Brooks has had all the chances he should have. What kind of appeal did he give David? He didn't give David the time of day," she said. "This man took all the rights to a life David had, and all the rights of his children to a father, and all the rights of mine to a son."

Gregory left behind his wife Shirley and two children, David Jr., now 10, and Rebecca, 7.

Mrs. Morrison said she fears Loudres will be paroled and will commit another murder. The death penalty is the only way to ensure Brooks won't kill again, she said.

Because of the scheduled execution, Mrs. Morrison said her son's death has been foremost in her mind. Her grief, she said, is "sort of like drowning."

"I cried all night last night. My friends are all calling; they are all concerned," she said.

Former prosecutor says execution not fair

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Defense lawyer Jack Strickland, a former prosecutor who won a death sentence against Charlie Brooks Jr. in 1979, asked state officials on Friday to delay the convicted killer's scheduled execution on grounds it is not fair.

The case has been appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court after the 5th U.S. Court of Appeals in New Orleans rejected Brooks' plea for a new trial. The 5th Circuit also was considering a plea by Brooks' lawyers to reconsider its ruling.

Brooks is scheduled to die by lethal injection in Huntsville after midnight but before sunrise Tuesday.

Strickland, a former Tarrant County assistant district attorney, admitted his role put him in a "difficult position" and said he had decided to side with Brooks' attorneys only after a weekend of "soul searching."

He appeared as a witness in the case — not a paid lawyer — as attorneys for Brooks asked the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles for a 60-day reprieve.

Strickland, who left the DA's office 2½ years ago to enter private practice, said it was not fair to execute Brooks when a co-defendant in the case, Woody Loudres, convicted on the same evidence ended up with only a 40-year prison sentence.

"To this day, the state of Texas does not know which defendant fired" the shot that killed used-car lot employee David Gregory Dec. 14, 1976, Strickland said. Gregory was shot in the face as he lay on the floor of a Fort Worth motel, his hands bound. Prosecutors said the motive was robbery.

Loudres won a reversal in his death sentence case and then plea-bargained for the reduced sentence to avoid another trial.

"I'm in a difficult position, in that when I prosecuted both these men I thought the sentences (death) were approprate, and indeed, if the sentences were equal sentences I would continue to think it's appropriate," said Strickland.

But he said after he learned recently that Loudres had plea-bargained for a reduced sentence, "I spent a lot of time talking with people and doing some soul-searching over this past weekend, trying to determine for myself whether this disparity was in some way justifiable.

"I came to the conclusion that it was not," he said.

Police seek man who defrauded Amarillo bank

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — A warrant was issued Friday for the arrest of a Dallas man, one of two people indicted on charges they defrauded an Amarillo bank that later collapsed.

Attorneys for William S. Solesbee, 32, told authorities he planned to surrender for arraignment Thursday afternoon but the man did not show up, district attorney's investigator Harold Hooks said Friday.

The second suspect, former Amarillo policeman Charles Christopher Allen, 32, was arraigned Thursday before State District Judge H. Bryan Poff. Allen, who was fired from the police force earlier this year, was released after posting $15,000 bond.

Allen and Solesbee, a video game operator, were named in three indictments returned Wednesday by a Randall County grand jury. The indictments charged the men with felony theft of property by fraud by making sales through false representations to video game investors.

The indictments came after more than five months of investigation into local video game businesses, said District Attorney Randall Sherrod.

Solesbee operated three Amarillo video game-related businesses that declared bankruptcy after defaulting on loans of more than $500,000 to Texas Bank, which collapsed in early November partly because of those loans.

After the bank closed Nov. 5, First Amarillo Bancorporation Inc. assumed the bank's liabilities and the bank reopened under a new name.

Sherrod said some bank officials also were being investigated by the grand jury.

Volcano lays waste to land, strains resources of Indonesia

By WILLIAM BRANIGIN
The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

KEDUNG, Indonesia — Every day, Endang and his wife, Elas, trek to their two-room, wood-and-bamboo home near this village in western Java. They spend the day cleaning the grit off the house and trying to grow what they can in their ash-covered fields. At dusk, they trudge back along the gray paths to a refugee camp on higher ground away from the slopes of nearby Mount Galunggung.

Their task is an essentially hopeless one, for their land has been laid waste by the accumulation of tons of debris from the volcano. And their home — already uninhabitable — is among the thousands likely to be swept away when the monsoon rains finally come and wash the ash down the slopes in a devastating mass.

Yet they and nearly 30,000 other refugees refuse to abandon their homes and land, once among the most fertile on Java. Moreover, they have become a source of worry for local government officials and volcanologists who want residents to stay away from areas they evacuated when Mount Galunggung began erupting in April.

"IT'S VERY dangerous," said Iranto, assistant geologist at a volcano observation post in the nearby village of Cikasasah. "The government is trying to prevent them from coming back. But some people now think an eruption is nothing. They are used to it."

Since April, Mount Galunggung has erupted more than 350 times; 36 of the eruptions have been considered major. According to volcanologists, falling rocks have killed three people and destroyed more than 1,000 homes. About 70 million cubic meters of volcanic ash have been deposited over a wide area, turning valuable rice fields and fish ponds into a gritty wasteland. About 420,000 people face food shortages as a result.

In addition, two jetliners nearly crashed after their engines clogged while flying through plumes of ash. Air traffic subsequently was diverted around Java.

BUT THE EXPERTS fear that the worst is yet to come. For them, Mount Galunggung is a disaster waiting to happen. Far more devastating and potentially deadly, they say, will be the almost inevitable floods of cold lahar — volcanic ash mixed with rain — that threaten to wipe out at least 210 villages still inhabited by 300,000 people.

Moving with great speed and weight (scientists estimate it can flow at 70 mph down a 60-degree slope) the lahar can carry along boulders the size of houses and obliterate everything in its path.

Among the places threatened is the town of Tasikmalaya about 12 miles southeast of Galunggung.

According to Adjat Audradjat, director of the Volcanological Survey Institute in Bandung, the greatest danger from lahar floods is in an area extending six miles from the volcano's summit.

BUT A MUCH larger area could suffer severe flooding when the lahar clogs up rivers and streams, he said. In all, it is estimated that 1 million people might be affected.

Galunggung, the only dangerous volcano of 120 active ones in Indonesia, "is similar in many respects to Mount St. Helens," said Jack Lockwood, a visiting American volcanologist advising the Indonesians. Although the Washington state volcano was more powerful, "the number of people affected by these eruptions here is far greater than at Mount St. Helens," he said.

Given the high potential for catastrophe, some volcanologists and relief workers believe the government is not doing enough to move people out of the danger zone. They complain that there is no effective evacuation plan and that measures to cope with the predicted lahar flow are inadequate.

"They're building pitifully small dams against the lahar," said one foreign expert. "And for the most part they're building them in the wrong places. If we get heavy rains, the dams will be futile." Relief officials note that the Indonesian authorities are depending on a warning system of beating on wooden drums.

HARUN RASHID, a director of the National Disaster Relief Organization in Jakarta, disagrees that there has been inadequate preparation to evacuate thousands of people from the areas threatened by lahar.

"They know how to save themselves," he said. "They know when to go, where to go and how to go." He said the government has spent $15 million in its relief effort and given villagers 2.5 million sandbags.

For many inhabitants of Java, the home island of 63 percent of Indonesia's 150 million people, Mount Galunggung's long series of eruptions after lying dormant for 64 years carries far wider implications than the physical damage to the landscape. It thus helps to explain an important factor in Indonesian life.

Although predominantly Moslem, the population of Java is heavily imbued with mystical beliefs, and many see political portents in the disaster. Government opponents especially are taking heart in the belief of some Javanese mystics that the eruptions signify that President Suharto is losing the wahyu, a divine source of power comparable to the "mandate of heaven" of Chinese tradition. According to legend, natural disasters are a major indicator that a leader's wahyu is fading.

"PEOPLE IN WEST Java believe the eruption of Galunggung is a warning and a sign of the coming end of Suharto's power," said one dissident in Jakarta. He and other Indonesian political observers recalled that when Mount Agung erupted on the island of Bali in 1963, Balinese mystics interpreted it as foretelling the political demise of the late President Sukarno. He was displaced following an unsuccessful Communist coup attempt in 1965.

The significance of the beliefs — as far-fetched as they may seem — has not been lost on Suharto, who is known to have mystical leanings himself and to keep soothsayers called dukuns in his entourage. While Suharto's dukuns may interpret the eruptions differently, one fear reportedly is that if enough people believe he is losing his grip, it could lead to unrest and become a self-fulfilling prophecy.

While rival soothsayers play the politics of the volcano, farmers like Endang cling to fading hopes that they can keep their homes and land. The alternative is to join the government's "transmigration" program to resettle residents of overpopulated Java on the sparsely inhabited outer islands of the far-flung archipelago.

ACCORDING TO Harun Rashid, more than 14,000 evacuees from the volcano's danger zone have agreed to transmigrate, and thousands of others will eventually have to.

"Even from the danger zone, most of them refuse to be transmigrated," he said. "Now we have to apply a kind of law enforcement. We have to force them to choose transmigration."

Accordingly, he said, government food aid to evacuees still in the area's refugee camps was being cut off, and the inhabitants were being told to leave the barracks built for them if they refused to transmigrate.

So far, the measures have failed to sway Endang. Squatting on the bamboo floor under the damaged clay tile roof of his house, he said he still hoped to eke out a living from his small plot.

"As long as I'm strong enough to cultivate the fields, I prefer to stay here," the 50-year-old farmer said. "But because the soil is getting worse and worse, I may decide to transmigrate."

Charles Manson denied parole date

VACAVILLE, Calif. (AP) — Calling the murders of actress Sharon Tate and six other people "cruel, callous and heinous," the state parole board denied Charles Manson a parole date and forbade him from seeking one for at least three years.

Manson, 47, the mastermind of the 1969 killings, refused to attend the Board of Prison Terms hearing Wednesday.

He has had 35 disciplinary actions in his 11 years of prison, many for assaulting and threatening guards, the panel said. He has spent about half his prison time in maximum security.

Cancer victim's dream of seeing Dallas Cowboys play football will soon come true

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Timmy DeCeuster had just about given up his battle against the cancer that had taken his leg and invaded his lungs. But things changed when the 11-year-old learned he would soon see his dream team, the Dallas Cowboys.

Timmy, his sister and parents will travel Sunday to Washington, D.C., where they'll stay at the same hotel as the National Football League team and watch them play the Washington Redskins.

The boy has a rare bone cancer that cost him his right leg a year ago. The disease has spread to his lungs, from which 12 tumors have been removed.

Every few weeks, Timmy travels from his parents' home in Stark County's Perry Township to Bethesda, Md., where he receives painful chemotherapy treatments at the National Institutes of Health.

But the treatments must be stopped by next summer to prevent damage from side effects, "and then we'll have to wait to see if he's OK," said his mother, Shirley Davis.

Timmy suffered a setback in August and had to be rushed to the Maryland facility. His grandfather, Ralph DeCeuster, worried the boy would give up before he could fulfill his dream of seeing the Cowboys.

"He got so deathly sick," his grandfather said. "He lost hope of anything and didn't care if he lived or died. He was not eating or drinking.

"We always try to hold an ace in the bag to try to encourage him, and the game was the last hope I had."

He said he called Timmy at the hospital and asked him if he would start eating if his grandfather "told him a secret."

The secret was that Timmy was going to a Cowboys game with the help of "Wishes Can Happen," a Stark County group formed in July by Linda Lippert and Cindy Morrow to grant wishes of terminally ill children.

"That news turned his life around," his grandfather said. "Within a short time, they called us from the hospital and told us he was eating a pizza."

Wishes Can Happen will pay the $1,000 cost of sending the family to Washington.

"When we first heard about his wish, it literally blew our minds," Miss Lippert said. "We expected a child to maybe want to visit the local fire station. We can't send them to the moon, but if it's reasonable, we try to grant the request."

The volunteer group, organized by the Xi Beta Gamma chapter of Beta Sigma Phi sorority, has raised $3,000 so far for their project.

Timmy, a fifth-grader at Perry's Genoa Elementary School, is having trouble sleeping because of the excitement, said his stepfather, Wayne Davis, a laid-off welder.

Davis said Timmy recently teased his doctor at the Maryland institute, which is in the Redskins' area, telling him, "You're in Deadskins territory."

"Boy, did he get it then," Davis said. "We'll probably need a police escort from the motel to the game!"

Doctor angered about public's lack of knowledge about radiation

LOS ALAMOS (AP) — Dr. John "Jake" Spalding shakes his head in sadness when he talks about the general public's view on the effects of radiation because the retired scientist believes the perception is "wrong."

"I feel sorry for them," he said, shrugging his shoulders. "But I don't know what I can do about it."

The public's fear of radiation and its effects worries Spalding, who contends fear of the controversial subject is "worse than any dose less than lethal ever could be."

Spalding, 62, has studied the effects of ionizing radiation for more than 25 years at Los Alamos National Laboratory and has conducted numerous studies on its effects.

His final study, completed in late November, looks at the effect of varying degrees of radiation on the life span of mice.

Spalding's conclusion: "Until you inject lethal doses, the radiation didn't affect their (the mice) life span. In fact, it significantly increased the life span of some groups of mice."

The findings might surprise the average individual, but Spalding, who received his doctorate from Texas A&M University, said he's known for a long time that "ionizing radiation is no more dangerous than radiation from the sun.

"There are lethal doses and harmful doses — just as you can get too much sun and it will be lethal."

Although he's disappointed about what he calls "the public's lack of knowledge" about radiation, Spalding also is angry.

"I think if the government had spent as much money educating the people on radiation as they spent researching it, we wouldn't have the fear," he said, his voice rising with anger.

But, he said, "I think maybe it's too late." He said the public "isn't likely to change its mind."

Spalding does not condone overexposure to radiation, but what he has spent almost a lifetime trying to prove is that "exposure to it in limited amounts won't kill you."

In his latest research, Spalding gave a group of mice five different doses of radiation, ranging from 20 rad to 1,620 rad.

He said the average person in a lifetime never would be exposed to more than 50 rad. A rad is a dosage of absorbed radiation, defined as equal to the absorption of 100 ergs of energy per gram of material. An erg is the unit of energy in the metric system.

Spalding's experiment also included a control group of mice — animals that were not subjected to radiation doses.

Most of the exposed mice lived longer than did the controlled mice, the study showed.

The report said, "...the conclusions seem clear. The mice in our study were certainly not adversely affected by radiation doses of up to 180 rad...and it may be that their life spans increased as a result of the treatments."

Some of the irradiated mice developed tumors, but Spalding's report said, "The relatively few benign and malignant tumors that we observed in our study did not appear to be influenced by (radiation) dose."

"Our data and earlier studies suggest that life shortening from exposure to ionizing radiation is not a feasible endpoint on which to base any harmful biological effects," the study said.

Spalding said although he's pleased with the results of his research, he doesn't think the study will make the general public's view toward radiation more favorable.

He blames much of the problem on "the scare tactics of all the do-gooders," people he said who have access to the media and "bad-mouth" radiation "without having researched it."

"These people seem to think ionizing radiation is something completely different than all our other contaminants, such as carbon monoxide," he said. "These people have never done a radiation experiment in their life.

"And the general public, knowing nothing about it, believe everything they read," he said. "Of course, the facts, the studies conducted by people like myself never get to the public. They just go to scientific journals so other scientists can read about it."

Another reason the general public fears the effects of radiation, Spalding said, is because nuclear radiation first was used in the form of a lethal weapon.

"If the government had pointed out the positive effects of its first, maybe there would be less anxiety," he said.

Spalding said he's heard all the arguments "tearing down scientific studies" similar to his.

"People say you can't compare mice to humans," he said. "That's completely ridiculous."

"If you can't use animals to test radiation, then you can't use them to test the effects of drugs," he said.

"As far as I'm concerned it's very reliable," he said, adding emphatically, "You can't use humans."

Spalding recently retired from the lab nestled in the Jemez Mountains of northern New Mexico, an area Spalding said receives, on a daily basis, a higher level of radiation than did people living around Three Mile Island did in 1979 during an accident at the nuclear reactor in Pennsylvania.

He said that although he's frustrated, he hasn't given up on trying to convince people radiation can be used carefully and effectively.

Concern expressed for baby born in outhouse

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — Offers of adoption have been received by the state Human Services Department for a baby girl who was born in an outhouse and found in the toilet pit.

"There has been a tremendous amount of concern about the way this baby found her way into this old world," said John Perkins, social work supervisor for the department's Child Welfare Division. "We've had offers of adoption, clothing and cash."

Some people just want more information about the child and others have expressed outrage at her treatment, Perkins said.

The baby was rescued the night of Nov. 26 from the outhouse in Brazito in southern Dona Ana County, authorities said.

The baby's mother, Alejandra Gonzalez, 31, is being held in the Dona Ana County Jail in lieu of a $10,000 bond.

Ms. Gonzalez was arraigned Monday before District Judge Garnett Burks on one count of child abuse. A preliminary hearing has been set for Dec. 10.

Dona Ana County sheriff's investigator Ray Storment said Tuesday Ms. Gonzalez is an illegal alien who was visiting her aunt and uncle, Francisco and Mercedes Martinez of Brazito.

The night of Nov. 26, rescue workers received a call from the Martinez home. The Martinez couple reported hearing a baby crying from beneath their outhouse.

An ambulance technician descended 10 to 12 feet into the toilet pit and rescued the baby girl, who was covered with maggots and human feces, authorities said.

The baby is in the custody of the Human Services Department. The child was released in good condition Thursday after a five-day stay at Memorial General Hospital in Las Cruces and now is in a foster home.

Perkins said his office has received "a great many" calls from people asking about the girl. He said most of the calls have been from Las Cruces-area residents, although some have called from other parts of New Mexico and from El Paso.

Perkins said many of the calls are from people who want to adopt the child, and most have expressed anger about the treatment of the baby and how unwanted she was.

The department cannot accept cash gifts for the child, Perkins said. But if people want to donate money for the child's future, a trust fund could be established for the baby, he said.

District court has awarded temporary custody of the child to the state. Perkins said the department will be filing a request for permanent custody.

Perkins said there are many things his division does not know about the mother and the situation regarding the child's birth.

Mother indicted in child's death

MARSHALL, Texas (AP) — A 24-year-old woman remained jailed under $100,000 bond Friday after a grand jury indicted her in the death of her 3-month-old daughter.

Sherry Ellen Allman was indicted Thursday on two counts of murder and two counts of injury to a child in the Nov. 10 death of the baby. Sherry Lynn Allman died from fractures to her skull, neck, arms and ribs, an autopsy showed.

District Attorney Sam Baxter said Friday the four charges were filed because the exact means used to kill the baby remained unclear.

Texas law requires indictments to specify the means by which a person died, he explained.

"In this case, we have more injuries to the child than we have information about from the defendant," Baxter said.

Man sought in Tylenol case in New York City

NEW YORK (AP) — Two people wanted for questioning in connection with the killing of seven people by cyanide-poisoned Tylenol capsules have been photographed by a store surveillance camera in Manhattan, the FBI announced Friday.

James and Leann Lewis were phototgraphed Nov. 21, indicating they are still in New York City, said Ken Walton, deputy assistant director in charge of the FBI's New York office.

He said the Lewises were spotted in a systematic review of surveillance cameras in "hundreds" of businesses in the city.

Walton refused to identify the business where the blurry television images were taken, saying the FBI hoped the Lewises would return.

The photos were released "to indicate to the Lewises the extent of the search. It's just a matter of time before we find them," he said.

Seven people died between Sept. 29 and Oct. 2 in Chicago after swallowing Extra Strength Tylenol capsules that had been filled with cyanide.

Lewis is wanted on a federal warrant accusing him of trying to extort $1 million from McNeil Consumer Products Co., the maker of Tylenol, and his wife is wanted for alleged felonious misuse of a Social Security card.

Police have learned that the Lewises, both 36, had stayed at a New York hotel from Sept. 6 until Oct. 16.

Although the FBI stresses that Lewis is not a suspect in the Tylenol deaths, agents have said they want to talk to him about the case.

Lewis has written to the Chicago Tribune and the Kansas City Star asserting his innocence in the Tylenol case and in a 1978 murder in which charges against him were dropped.

Walton said the FBI identified the Lewises on the basis of the photos and the transaction that took place in the business. The man and woman were together and she used identification in the name of Leann Lewis, he said.

"We're concerned now, on the basis of what we've found, that they're without funds, anxious," Walton said. "Their letters to newspapers indicate they're under a substantial amount of stress."

He urged the Lewises to "stop running," saying "there is no evidence directly linking them" to the Tylenol murders.

Another man who had been sought in connection with the Tylenol deaths was questioned for two hours Thursday by police in the Chicago suburb of Wheaton, Ill., and was released on $1,000 bond in an unrelated case.

Democrats prepare in earnest for nation's first primary

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — With midterm elections and Sen. Edward Kennedy behind them, Democrats with a yen for the White House are preparing in earnest for their march on New Hampshire and the nation's first primary.

Led this week by Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado, the non-candidates — none has yet announced officially — are returning to the towns and villages that some began visiting a year ago to buttonhole potential backers and learn the lay of the land.

"I expect to see people camping out on front lawns," says Dudley Dudley, an elected adviser to the governor and longtime primary activist. "It'll be impossible to get a hotel room in New Hampshire."

Ms. Dudley said Kennedy's statement Wednesday bowing out of the 1984 race will lengthen the queue of Democratic hopefuls and boost New Hampshire's "kingmaker" clout.

"All previous bets are off," said Ms. Dudley, whose position as executive councilor makes her the top Democrat in state office. "It means New Hampshire is a far more important primary even than it was before" because a Kennedy win could have been written off to regional favoritism.

New Hampshire's primary is set by state law one week before any other. Because it's the first, New Hampshire has gained political preeminence out of all proportion to its size.

State voters can make contenders out of underdogs and knock the wind from the sails of frontrunners. In fact, no Democratic hopeful has rebounded from a New Hampshire loss.

Hart, here for the first time to check his 1984 prospects, visited Dover and Portsmouth on Thursday. Today he was due in Manchester and Nashua, the largest cities in this state of 920,000 residents and 133,368 registered Democrats.

Though the primary is still 15 months off, Hart follows a worn path.

Sen. John Glenn of Ohio showed up in November 1981 to help Gov. Hugh Gallen's unsuccessful re-election bid and to do a little primary groundwork on the side. He's been back once.

Sen. Alan Cranston of California made his first visit in January and has been back seven times. Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina, former Vice President Walter Mondale and former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew each has been here three times.

Ms. Dudley says that kind of effort is required of presidential hopefuls in New Hampshire — where, as primary lore goes, a resident asked if he would vote for a particular candidate replied, "I don't know. I've only met him five times."

Spokesmen for the Democrats all said they plan to return soon; Askew later this month, the rest after the New Year. But it's the lesser-known hopefuls, such as Askew, who have to run the hardest.

NASA officials now understand why space suits failed on flight

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Space agency engineers now understand why two space suits failed on the fifth space shuttle flight, which could clear the way for a space walk on the sixth flight next month, a NASA official says.

Richard A. Colonna, head of a National Aeronautics and Space Administration team that investigated problems with the $2 million suits, said the failures were caused by a few cents worth of plastic and a few drops of moisture.

Now that the problems are understood, he said, his committee will recommend a space walk on the next mission.

"We will be able to recover and perform the walk on (space shuttle flight) six," Colonna said.

A space walk for the sixth mission has not received final approval, but space agency officials are eager to test the suits in space because they are essential for some activities planned on future shuttle missions.

Astronauts Joe Allen and Bill Lenoir were to have tested the suits during a 3½-hour spacewalk on the fifth mission of the shuttle last month, but the walk was scrubbed when a pressure regulator failed on Lenoir's suit and a fan motor on Allen's.

Colonna blamed the regulator failure on a reassembly error by workers at the East Aurora, N.Y., plant of Carleton Controls Inc., the company that built the components.

When the regulator was reassembled after modification last summer at the plant, said Colonna, two pinhead-sized pieces of plastic that lock a retaining ring in place were left out. When the ring was loosened, it lowered the pressure level controlled by the regulator, he said.

He said a quality control engineer at Carleton had been taken off the suit project and will not be permitted to work on any government contract. Company officials declined to identify the inspector.

Carleton is a subcontractor to Hamilton Standard of Windsor Locks, Conn., which holds a space suit contract valued at $236.4 million.

Colonna said the fan motor failed in Allen's suit when moisture seeped into a magnetic sensor that controls the flow of electrical current to a fan motor.

The sensor is similar to an electronic chip and about the size of "two pinheads side by side," he said.

Colonna said his team is trying to determine how moisture entered the sensor and will devise procedures to prevent it in the future and to test the sensors for deterioration.

If the walk is scheduled, mission six, the first by new shuttler orbiter Challenger, would be extended two days.

Tentative plans call for a launch from the Kennedy Space Center on the morning of Jan. 24 and a landing exactly five days later at Edwards Air Force Base in California.

Former secretary thinks dense pack needs work

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Former Defense Secretary Harold Brown doesn't like the dense pack basing scheme for the MX missile, but says he knows how to improve it.

Meeting with reporters Wednesday, President Carter's Pentagon chief urged that, if deployment of the 10-warhead weapon were approved by Congress, 1,000 shelters for the 100 missile-force be built instead of the 100 currently planned.

"The value of more shelters is that it would force the other side to use more warheads in any attack," Brown said.

He reminded that under the Carter plan for basing 200 MX weapons in and among 4,600 protective shelters, the Soviets would have had to expend 10,000 nuclear warheads to wipe them out, which is more than they have in their entire strategic force today.

While he opposes defending MX with an anti-ballistic missile (ABM) system, Brown said the 100 interceptors permitted by the treaty with the USSR "could help." But, he added, "Not by much."

He said the Reagan dense pack plan could be defeated "by a mere slice" of the Soviet's strategic force.

He asserted that "fratricide," which theorizes that after incoming enemy warheads land, their blast, radiation and "ejecta" (dirt and debris) would destroy or deflect follow-on enemy weapons, could be foiled by Soviet "tactics," which he did not explain, and by "simultaneous explosions" by the attacking force.

Brown, who favors production of the MX, said the United States has another choice: Put the new missiles in current Minuteman ICBM silos and "live with the vulnerability" problem and the Pentagon's force of strategic bombers, cruise missiles and submarine-launched ballistic missiles.

The former Pentagon chief criticized the Reagan administration for its "maritime strategy" and its "excessive" concentration on naval power.

He said "I disagree" with the idea "you can achieve most of your goals by being able to dominate the seas" and suggested that the heavy emphasis on sea power could lead the United States to concede the Eurasian land mass to the Soviets.

He said that the plan for 15 aircraft carrier battle groups was "out of balance," but that 13 might be "sensible." The Carter administration supported 12.

Democrats vote to strike section of bill

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Unemployed Americans could lose job opportunities if Congress approves a provision in the pending immigration control bill that would make it easier for growers to import foreign farmworkers, a House committee said earlier this week.

Voting on a straight party line, the Democratic majority of the House Education and Labor Committee urged the House to strike the farmworker section from the Simpson-Mazzoli bill when it reaches the floor for final action, possibly late next week.

The committee, on a 20-12 vote, called for retention of the present system, which is favored by organized labor but opposed by agriculture.

Under the current law, before a grower can obtain visas for foreign workers the U.S. Labor Department must certify that no Americans are available to do the work.

But growers complain that the bureaucratic process does not respond fully to their needs, often forcing them to hire undocumented aliens when crops are ready to be harvested before government approval is granted.

Most growers, who need short-term, low-paid, experienced workers, have come to rely on the readily available pool of undocumented aliens instead of applying for workers through the government visa program.

The Simpson-Mazzoli bill, designed to cut sharply into the flow of undocumented workers, would streamline the program to assure growers of a legal labor supply.

The bill still would require a government determination that Americans are not available, but it adds the requirement that available workers also be "able, willing and qualified." It also would shift the certification process to the Agriculture Department, which growers believe is more sensitive to their needs.

But Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., a member of the House Education and Labor Committee which had insisted on reviewing the labor portions of the Judiciary Committee's bill, said the stricter current controls should be retained to protect job opportunities for unemployed Americans.

"In these tough economic times," Miller said, "it's possible people will take those (farm) jobs. They should have the opportunity."

By deleting the "able, willing and qualified" language in the Simpson-Mazzoli bill, Miller said, job-hungry Americans would have a chance to learn farm skills.

"Many laid-off auto workers, for example, whose jobs never will be restored, will have to learn different and lower-paying jobs simply for survival," Miller said.

His amendment also would keep the certification process in the Labor Department.

House and Senate studies estimate that between 300,000 and 400,000 foreign farmworkers would enter the United States for temporary work each year if the streamlined process were adopted.

These same studies have also documented the reluctance of most Americans to take manual-labor farm jobs, especially short-term migratory jobs.

The House Education and Labor Committee also adopted without debate or vote a series of amendments designed to make it easier for the government to prove whether an employer, under the Simpson-Mazzoli bill, has refused to hire a person out of fear that he or she might be an undocumented alien.

While the bill would make such hiring illegal, it also seeks to avoid that kind of discrimination from being inflicted on foreign-looking or foreign-sounding citizens or legal residents.

The bill says an employer cannot be prosecuted for hiring an undocumented alien if he asks for and is shown two common identifiers, if the job applicant signs an affidavit claiming legal status, and if the employer signs an affidavit asserting he had no reason to suspect the worker did not have legal status.

Capt. Anatoli Pavlovich Zotov, Soviet naval attache in Britain, shown in this undated file photo with his wife, has until Dec. 8 to leave Britain, the Soviet embassy was told by the British government Friday. The British government also warned Moscow against retaliating against the move.

Soviets warned against retaliation

LONDON (AP) — Britain has warned Moscow not to retaliate its expulsion of the Soviet naval attache in London for alleged espionage activities.

The action brought a new chill to relations between the Conservative government of British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and the Soviet Union.

Capt. Anatoli Pavlovich Zotov, who according to British press reports was an undercover officer of the Soviet Military Intelligence Service, was given until Dec. 8 to leave the country with his wife.

The Standard, London's evening newspaper, said the Soviet official "was attempting to build up a network of agents, but he was caught before he could do any direct harm to British security." Zotov had arrived in London Jan. 12.

At his home in Campden Hill Gardens, Kensington, Zotov walked past reporters and said: "I have no comment to make."

Zotov is the third Soviet Embassy official expelled by Mrs. Thatcher's government in the past 15 months, and his ouster coincides with an outbreak of espionage revelations in Britain that has led to three spy trials in the past month.

A Foreign Office spokesman said Zotov's expulsion "does not have any connection with recent or current prosecutions under the Official Secrets Act."

The Soviet charge d'affaires was summoned to the Foreign Office on Wednesday and asked to send Zotov home, officials said. In the usual diplomatic parlance for spying, the Foreign Office said in a statement: "There was clear evidence that he had engaged in activities incompatible with his status."

The Foreign Office spokesman warned that retaliation against British diplomats in Moscow was unjustified and could further damage relations between the two countries.

"There would be absolutely no grounds for Soviet retaliation," he said. "We would take a very serious view if the Russians were to retaliate."

Zotov's ouster was first reported Thursday night by Britain's Press Association news agency, which quoted Soviet sources as saying he was expelled and that British security services were "simply trying to prove their worth" following exposure of "information leaks from the Cheltenham Communications Headquarters."

A former employee at Britain's top-secret intelligence gathering center in Cheltenham, Geoffrey Prime, was given 35 years in jail Nov. 10 for spying for the Soviets. Officials said the Prime case was perhaps the most damaging penetration of Western intelligence since World War II.

Conservative legislator Harry Greenway, referring to the Press Association's report Thursday, said he would ask Foreign Secretary Francis Pym why the Soviets were one jump ahead with the news about Zotov.

"It is astonishing that we should have to hear about this second-hand from the Soviets," said Greenway. "This raises doubts as to whether the expulsion would have been disclosed at all by the Foreign Office if the Russians had not got in first."

Last month, after new Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov succeeded Leonid I. Brezhnev as head of the Soviet Communist Party, Mrs. Thatcher said she would not relax her "Iron Lady" attitude to Moscow until the new leadership displayed what she described as a genuine commitment to disarmament and human rights.

"We shall need more than paper declarations. It's performance that counts," she said.

In a speech Nov. 15, she said Poland's martial law was "inspired" by Moscow and denounced the "remorseless increase" in Soviet military might. In another speech during a visit to the Berlin Wall, she described the wall as a "grim monument to a cruel and desolate creed."

Zotov's departure cuts to 44 the number of Soviet diplomats permitted in this country — the same number Britain has in the Soviet Union — and means he cannot be replaced.

The rules were laid down in 1971 when Britain expelled 105 Soviet officials, including 45 diplomats, accusing them of engaging in espionage.

U.S. astronauts tell Chinese of space

PEKING (AP) — American astronauts Cols. Jack Lousma and Charles G. Fullerton briefed 600 Chinese space technology specialists Friday on the U.S. space program, and said they were glad to see China from the ground, according to the official Xinhua news agency.

Lousma, commander of the Columbia space shuttle test series No. 3, said he had seen China hundreds of times from space, the agency said. Both astronauts presented photos of China taken from the space shuttle, it said.

"It would take only 24 minutes to reach China from the United States by a space shuttle," Lousma was quoted as telling the Chinese scientists.

Jaruzelski talks of easing military rule

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, Poland's martial-law chief, said Friday he has urged Parliament to relax military rule, but he also lashed out at the United States and threatened to restrict Polish-American contacts.

He spoke at a miners' day celebration in southern Poland and did not attend a meeting of the Sejm — parliament — that convened to review the crippled economy in preparation for the Dec. 13 session. Dec. 13 will be the first anniversary of martial law, and officials have hinted the government will announce plans then to ease military rule before Christmas if there is no more public unrest.

Poland's 80 Roman Catholic bishops issued a statement in Warsaw that "deplored" the outlawing of the Solidarity union and endorsed workers' rights to form unions free of political control. The communique was prepared before Jaruzelski's speech was made public, and did not comment on the reports that the government planned to restore some civil rights.

THE COMMUNIST Party daily Trybuna Ludu warned that "the worst possible results of lifting the state of war (martial law) would be the necessity of its reimposition."

Jaruzelski said the "clearly improving situation" convinced the ruling 21-man military council, which he heads, to urge parliament to "consider the totality of matters relating to martial law."

"A big, and at the same time considered, step is envisaged along the road to complete normalization," Jaruzelski said, indicating one measure would be ending the militarization of national enterprises during a "transitional period." Many industrial firms were militarized to block work stoppages called for by Solidarity activists.

Jaruzelski made a bitter attack on the United States, accusing it of waging "an aggressive campaign,"including trade and economic sanctions, against Poland.

"If the U.S. administration does not adapt itself to the norms of international law generally in force, to the elementary requirements of good mores, then the Polish government will be compelled to take appropriate steps," Jaruzelski said.

HE SAID SUCH measures could include breaking all links with the U.S. Information Agency and "appropriate regulation of contacts of Polish citizens with American establishments and departments."

He did not elaborate, but it was believed he was referring, in part, to diplomatic and cultural services offered at the U.S. Embassy in Warsaw and consulates in Poznan and Krakow.

In their firm communique released after a two-day meeting, the bishops called Solidarity and its companion Rural Solidarity "popular" movements and said "it is to be deplored that other roads were not chosen when the nation was tending toward peace and harmony."

Martial law authorities suspended Solidarity when military rule was declared and outlawed the independent union Oct. 8 despite restoration of relative calm.

The bishops spoke against the cancellation of government agreements legalizing Solidarity and Rural Solidarity, saying that "construction of lasting social peace demands respect for the true tendencies of society, organized in social groups, on the grounds of agreements forged and contracts gained as the result of dialogue."

The bishops also cited a statement by a Vatican conference calling for re-establishment of unions free of party control.

"AMONG THE BASIC rights of human beings, we should count the right of workers to free formation of trade unions which would truly represent them and could cause the formation of economic life according to true order, and above that the right of each worker to free participation in the activity of these unions without fear of injury or revenge," the communique said.

The statement reflected demands made by Solidarity during the 16-month labor upheaval which began with the union's creation in August 1980 and its suspension with imposition of martial law last Dec. 13.

Reagan holds sanction-lifting carrot before Polish horse

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is preparing to tell authorities in Poland the United States will relax economic sanctions against the country if restrictions are eased on Polish workers and political dissidents.

Administration officials said Friday they expect some improvements in political conditions to be announced in Warsaw before Dec. 13, the date martial law was imposed a year ago.

To encourage the development, they said, President Reagan is getting ready to issue a statement holding out the promise of U.S. help for Poland's distressed economy.

The administration's strategy is to match Poland's actions with a proportional easing of the sanctions. "What he says will be affected by what happens before then," said one U.S. official. "I don't think he will go overboard."

"To the extent there is real progress one might expect a favorable reaction," said another official.

Both asked that their names not be used.

Possible gestures include a rescheduling of Polish debts, an extension of commodity credit loans for food shipments and restoration of Poland's fishing and air rights.

Poles sustained by release of Walesa

By EDWARD NICHOLS
Copley News Service

The emotional uplift of the Polish people after labor leader Lech Walesa was released from jail may have to sustain them until Pope John Paul II visits his homeland in June, if he does.

In the meantime, the evident passion among Polish people for greater political and social liberalization that was visible in the emotional outpouring of affection for Walesa cannot be a comfort to Premier Wojciech Jaruzelski or the Soviet Union. Jaruzelski and his predecessors have tried both suppression and, for a communist bloc nation, unprecedented liberalization. Neither seems to appease the Poles' appetite for greater freedom.

In the current cycle of events, the Polish government yielded after 60 days of massive strikes beginning in July 1980 and permitted the Solidarity Union to organize on Aug. 31 of that year. The crux of the 21-point agreement signed at Gdansk in 1980 was in its first two articles, providing for "free trade unions, independent from parties and employers" and "guaranteeing the right to strike and the security of the strikers and the persons who help them." Other articles guaranteed rights such as "the respect of the freedom of expression and of publications...the liberation of political prisoners."

IT WAS A landmark event; never before had such freedom been allowed in a communist bloc country.

But that dream for Poland was shattered on Dec. 13, 1981, when Jaruzelski imposed martial law on Poland and arrested Walesa.

Subsequently, Solidarity was outlawed, its leaders were arrested, went underground or emigrated. While it exists in spirit, as a practical organization it is moribund. From where he stands, Jaruzelski has been successful in suppressing the numerous uprisings that protest his stern application of communist power and in keeping the factories running, after a fashion.

Back in 1976, during another crisis in Poland, Gen. Jaruzelski, then head of the army, promised that "Polish soldiers will not fire on Polish workers." In one sense, he has kept the promise. The Polish army has been kept in the background during the Solidarity era, but a special militia has, nevertheless, dispensed authority with truncheons and water hoses. Consequently, the question now is why the Polish government, which has the situation in control, suddenly made two significant gestures of conciliation to the people it is suppressing: Jaruzelski has invited Pope John Paul II to return to Poland in June and he has released Walesa. Both are high-risk gambles. The pope could probably start a revolution in Poland with a few words. And, if he is indiscreet — or brave — Walesa could become a martyr.

"THEY HAD to let him go sometime," said a senior officer at the State Department who specializes in East European affairs.

"They probably felt that the Nov. 10 strikes and demonstrations were a standoff and this was a good time to see if they can get the people to sit down and talk. The question is whether the regime really wants to consult, or just have Walesa keep quiet. Maybe they felt that this was a good time to try to calm the waters in Poland," he continued.

"It didn't have anything to do with the death of (Soviet President Leonid) Brezhnev; rumors were flying before Brezhnev died that Walesa would be released. I don't think Jaruzelski gets much in the way of instructions from Moscow these days. In the long run, he's probably got more elbow room, more independence than he normally would have," he said. "That's just my guess," he added.

Another State Department official who monitors Polish affairs in Poland did not think that the release of Walesa or extending an invitation to the pope was part of the larger fabric of detente with the Soviet Union. "It's an internal Polish situation, driven by Polish dynamics. I don't think Brezhnev's death or non-death, or lifting sanctions or not lifting sanctions (against the Soviet Union), had anything to do with it. It's a totally separate item," he said.

CONTINUING, he said, "You can't get economic stability in Poland until you give the people some reason for believing they have a stake in their homeland. Jaruzelski's big problem is to give the Polish people the feeling that it's their ball of wax and that it makes sense for them to get the economic situation turned around," he added.

Otherwise, the official said, "there's more that we don't know about the situation than we know. You make up the option that led Jaruzelski to make his decision and I'll make a logical argument for it. Did Jaruzelski agree that Walesa could have some role? Did Walesa agree to go along? Was the church involved in his release? Was the Vatican involved? How much freedom is Walesa going to have? Was a deal struck?

"There are still some 700 internees in prison, in addition to those arrested for martial law violations. Are they going to be released?" he asked.

Still another State Department economic specialist said the release of Walesa and inviting the pope are positive steps by the Jaruzelski regime. "But it has two facets. One is what they are going to do and the other is are they doing it or just claiming that they are doing it? We can't assess how significant this is until we see the conditions of Walesa's release and how he is allowed to function. Jaruzelski has promised to lift martial law, but it's hard to see what he means. Many of the conditions existing today could continue under another name," he said.

THE OFFICIAL is certain that the Catholic Church had a role in Walesa's release and the pope's potential visit. "The main role of the church is to preserve the Polish identity and a sense of nationalism. The church takes a longer view of things."

The official does not believe that Poland will be able to make an economic recovery under the present circumstances. Its resources from the West have been cut off. "Poland is getting some money from East Europe, but not enough to stimulate a strong recovery," he said. And, he added, the Soviet Union's bankroll is depleted because of the economic problems in the entire Eastern bloc. It can't help Poland much more.

Poland itself already is in de facto default on its loans. The most optimistic estimate is that Poland's debt will stabilize at about $37.5 billion in 1990 if interest rates remain at about 12 percent. Some 500 creditor banks are concentrating on the $2.5 billion in capital and $900 million in interest repayments that are due this year.

Opinion among academicians studying Poland and East Europe varied. To Kenneth T. Jowitt, a professor of political science at the University of California, Berkeley, the ability of Jaruzelski to fend off the Soviet Union and the Soviet brand of communism is "remarkable." And the release of Walesa and the upcoming visit of the pope are signs of the Jaruzelski regime's weakness.

MC beats Ranger by 15

Tournament unbeatens won't meet

Midland College, and Howard College take 2-0 records into today's final round of the Chaparral Classic at Langford Chaparral Center, but won't play one another.

Midland could have problems against Barton County Community College of Great Bend, Kan., in the 8 p.m. game. The Chaparrals won by three when the teams met in the Barton County Classic a couple of weeks ago.

Howard meets Ranger in the 6 p.m. game, following the 4 p.m. opener between Odessa College and St. Philip's (cq) of San Antonio.

IN FRIDAY'S action, Howard defeated St. Philip's, 99-89, in the opener while MC defeated Ranger, 84-69, and Barton County squared its record at 1-1 with a 94-85 victory over OC, now 1-1 in the tournament.

While the unbeatens will not meet, tonight's game offers a sneak preview of a couple of the Western Junior College Conference contenders. Howard and Midland both own 10-1 record and could be among those battling for the league title.

"There are six or seven strong teams in the league this year," says Howard Coach Harold Wilder. "And it should be an exciting race."

As it turns out, Howard's lone loss came to Amarillo College Monday night in a WJCC game. "We just didn't play well and didn't convert our free throws"

THE MC team that has won its first two games in the Chap Classic bears little resemblance to the misfiring offensive club that was last seen in Midland three weeks ago.

"Our timing is coming around offensively," says Coach Jerry Stone. "But I'm still not satisfied with our defense. Of course, we play so many defenses, it's usually Janaury before we have it all down."

Midland jumped to an early 6-2 lead and outside of one burst that carried Ranger to within one, 13-14, MC led all the way. By halftime it was 50-37 and the Chaps extended their lead to 62-45, 75-58 and 82-63 at various stages of the final half.

SPUD WEBB led MC in scoring with 25 points, hitting 10 of 19 from the field. Six-six Chester Smith was deadly from around the lane, sinking 10 of 14 shots for a 20-point night. Chester hit eight of his last nine attempts.

Also in double figures were Irvin Williams, 14, and Nate Bufford with 11.

However, Mike Bell took game high honors with 30 points, sinking 11 of 22 field attempts. Bell scored 19 points in the first half.

Closest game of the night was the finale between Barton and Odessa. Dennis Schumacher led the Kansas Cougars with 24 points. Dale Bryant went on a 25-point binge for OC, which is now 4-7 for the season.

Barton opened up a 61-55 lead, but the Wranglers narrowed it to 61-60. Barton finally pushed out in front 78-70 and OC never could get closer than four in the final 10 minutes.

Nathan Givens pumped in 26 points as Howard's Hawks won easily. HC lead 55-38 at half as St. Philip's slid to 1-6 for the season. Blaine Blount had 27 for St. Philip's.

Hearns takes decision to win welterweight title from Benitez

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Thomas Hearns hurt his right hand on Wilfred Benitez's head, so he stuck his left hand into Benitez's face and won the World Boxing Council super welterweight championship Friday night at the Superdome.

"In the seventh or eighth round, my right hand started hurting," said Hearns, the former World Boxing Association welterweight champion. "I started to ignore the right hand and worked on the left jab."

That left jab was tremendously effective in the last five rounds, keeping Benitez off balance and fouling up his counter-punching tactics after Benitez built momentum in the middle rounds.

That was the difference, although Hearns' victory was not unanimous.

Judge Tony Castellano of New York scored it 144-139 and Judge Dick Young of Los Angeles had it 146-136, both for Hearns. Judge Lou Filippo of Los Angeles scored it 142-142, calling it a draw.

The AP favored Hearns 143-139.

"From round one I thought I was ahead," said the new champion. "The scorekeeper who had us even had to be asleep."

"I think I had won the fight, but the judges decided the fight," said Benitez, one of six men to win three world titles.

Hearns said he would give Benitez a rematch if he wanted one.

"I feel like a champ," said Hearns, who built a reputation as an awesome puncher but got that championship feeling again on boxing ability.

BEFORE HEARNS won his second world title, Wilfredo Gomez knocked down Lupe Pintor twice and stopped him in the 14th round to retain the WBC super bantamweight championship.

That fight was a war, with both men dishing out tremendous punishment. Gomez hit Pintor with jarring right hands for much of the fight until the 14th, when he floored him with a right to the left side of the head.

Pintor, the WBC bantamweight champion, barely beat the count and then went down again with a right-left to the head. Referee Arthur Mercante immediately stopped the fight.

The Hearns-Benitez bout was one of tactics and often was lacking in action.

Each man scored a knockdown, but neither was seriously hurt. Hearns landed a right to the jaw that sent Benitez backwards in the fifth round.

The champion's glove and one knee touched the canvas and it was ruled a knockdown.

Then in the ninth round, Benitez landed a short left hook that sent Hearns backwards and the challenger ended up on the seat of his pants. He got up immediately and the bell rang a few seconds later.

"I'll be moving, sticking from all angles, using the left," Hearns said before the fight. And he did move, and the left hand was the big one for him, although he did land some hard rights.

The 6-foot-1 Hearns of Detroit, who had an eight-inch reach advantage over the 5-10 Benitez of Purerto Rico, kept Benitez from counter-punching, which is what he does best.

Hearns, 153¾, had a real good round in the sixth when he cornered Benitez, 152, and landed some good body shots. He also landed two short hard rights to the jaw just before the bell that almost dropped Benitez, one of six boxers to win three world titles.

The 24-year-old Hearns had scored 29 knockouts in winning his first 31 fights. Then, in his only loss, when he was stopped in the 14th round by Sugar Ray Leonard for the undisputed welterweight title, Hearns showed he could box. It was boxing that kept him in that fight.

And it was boxing that made Hearns a champion again Friday night.

"People who are experts in boxing will imagine I am the bible of boxing when I beat Hearns and (undisputed middleweight champion Marvelous Marvin) Hagler," Benitez had said.

Walker hoping practice makes perfect

NEW YORK (AP) — Herschel Walker, No.1 Georgia's record-breaking running back, is hoping that practice makes perfect when the 1982 Heisman Trophy is awarded Saturday night.

Two years ago, as a freshman, Walker finished third in the Heisman Trophy voting. Last season, he was second.

Walker — along with Stanford quarterback John Elway and Southern Methodist running back Eric Dickerson — will be on hand when the 1982 Heisman Trophy is awarded at the Downtown Athletic Club at 8 p.m., EST.

Joining Walker at the presentation will be Georgia Coach Vince Dooley, whose 11-0 Bulldogs will start practicing next week for a Sugar Bowl showdown with second-ranked Penn State on New Year's night.

Walker said Friday it would be "a disappointment" if he doesn't win, "but nothing I'll cry about or anything like that because I've lost it two times before."

"People around here are cautiously optimistic this year, more than in the previous two years," Georgia sports information director Claude Felton said Friday. "There really isn't much more he could have done."

Walker rushed for 1,616 yards as a freshman, leading Georgia to the national championship. He finished behind Heisman winner George Rogers of South Carolina and runner-up Hugh Green of Pitt in the balloting by a nationwide panel of sportswriters and sportscasters.

Last season, he gained 1,891 yards — third-best in NCAA history — but finished second in the Heisman voting to Marcus Allen of Southern California, who set an NCAA single-season record by rushing for 2,342 yards.

This year, Walker ran for 1,752 yards and 17 touchdowns in leading Georgia to its No.1 ranking.

Walker currently holds 11 NCAA, 15 Southeastern Conference and 29 school records.

Elway, a senior, had a superb season, throwing for 3,242 yards and 24 touchdowns, yet Stanford finished only 5-6.

If selected, he would be the first quarterback to win the award since Auburn's Pat Sullivan in 1971, and also would be the first player from a losing team to win the Heisman since Notre Dame's Paul Hornung in 1956.

Elway, who played minor league baseball in the New York Yankees' farm system last year, finished his career by throwing for 9,349 yards and 71 touchdowns.

Dickerson helped 10-0-1 SMU earn a Cotton Bowl date with Pitt by rushing for 1,617 yards, an average of 7 yards per carry.

Others players likely to be considered are quarterbacks Todd Blackledge of Penn State and Dan Marino of Pitt, Michigan flanker Anthony Carter and Nebraska center Dave Rimington, named for the second year in a row as the winner of the Outland Trophy as the nation's best lineman.

Only two linemen have ever won the Heisman — ends Larry Kelley of Yale in 1936 and Leon Hart of Notre Dame in 1949.

Sometimes money can't buy everything networks hope for

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Sometimes, money just can't buy what a TV network desires. And so it is that Saturday's clash in Austin, Texas, between sixth-ranked Arkansas and No. 12 Texas will not be for the Southwest Conference championship.

The annual showdown between the Razorbacks and Longhorns was switched from Oct. 16 to Dec. 4 last spring so ABC, which kicked in an incentive fee of $250,000, could televise it nationally (3:50 p.m., EST kickoff).

It is rare when the Arkansas-Texas game does not affect the SWC race, but Southern Methodist took care of that by clinching the title two weeks ago — on ABC, ironically — leaving these two longtime rivals (the series began in 1894) to shoot it out for second place.

Three other games also are on tap as college football's regular season comes to an end — third-ranked Nebraska at Hawaii for a night game, Florida at No. 15 Florida State under the lights and the annual Army-Navy war in Philadelphia (CBS-TV, 12:35 p.m., EST, kickoff).

Five of Saturday's eight participants are bowl-bound — Nebraska in the Orange against LSU, Arkansas and Florida in the Bluebonnet, Texas in the Sun against North Carolina and Florida State in the Gator against West Virginia.

ARKANSAS COACH Lou Holtz, unhappy with the Razorbacks' 17-17 tie with SMU two weeks ago, snapped out of the doldrums long enough to quip: "Texas is really on a roll; they ought to go to Las Vegas."

Then Holtz reverted to coaches' jargon.

"They're awfully good," he said. "Texas and SMU are legitimate Top Ten teams. Texas is a complete team. They're strong and physical. They have the same defense as always. They're breathing down your neck.

"The date switch doesn't really mean anything. It didn't matter when we played. We knew Texas would be charged up for us. They ought to be penalized the way they move the line of scrimmage with their linemen. They just dominate the line of scrimmage.

"I don't know how our squad will react to this game. We're still down after the tie with SMU. Hopefully, we'll be able to bounce back and play well. It will take a terrific effort for us to have a chance to win down there (the only SWC stadium where Holtz has never won)."

LAST YEAR, Arkansas took advantage of seven Texas turnovers and crushed the Longhorns 42-11. It was Arkansas' most convincing triumph over the Longhorns since 1938 and knocked them from the No. 1 ranking in The Associated Press poll.

"You can say it's not a factor, but you don't forget when somebody wallops you like that," says Texas Coach Fred Akers, an Arkansas grad. "That was all Arkansas' day. We don't play on revenge as a motivating factor, but it would be impossible for the players not to be thinking about it.

"We knew Arkansas would be a good team this year. They had almost everybody back from the team that beat us so soundly last year. They are improved from last year, and more experienced, and we had better be aware of that. It's the best Arkansas team I have seen in 15 years.

"Arkansas is a top-flight program and ours is a top-flight program. For about 20 years, we were the only two teams really competing for the conference championship, and that added to the rivalry. It's a game that has a lot of national appeal. It's rare when it isn't a great game."

ARMY—NAVY is one of those games where the old cliche is true and the records really don't mean anything (Navy is 5-5, Army 4-6). Brig. Gen. Bill Carpenter, Army's "Lonesome End" of the late 1950s, calls it "the one game in the country where so many emotions are involved that a man would be a fool to bet on it."

Carpenter also says the game "represents football in its purest amateur form, and I don't think it will ever change. The rivalry is intense, but always fair, and it gives something to the game that no other teams can match. The players on the field are all winners."

Army-Navy emotions won't have a thing on Florida-Florida State, though.

"It will be a good character test for us," says Florida State Coach Bobby Bowden. "If we were to beat Florida, I think we'd have to be considered an elite team, one that belongs in the Top Ten. If we lose, I know we've still got a way to go."

"FSU is coming off a game (a 55-21 loss to LSU) which was very much like our Georgia game (a 44-0 setback)," notes Florida's Charley Pell. "They made some key turnovers early, had to get out of their game plan, and it got away from them. That can happen against a good opponent, and it doesn't decrease our respect for them in the least. FSU has an outstanding team, one of the best in the nation. No team has better skill position players."

Pell should know; he tried to recruit most of them.

Spurs breeze past Rockets, 88-78

Houston now holds 2-14 record

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Mike Mitchell scored 28 points and George Gervin added 13 as San Antonio breezed to an 88-78 win over the Houston Rockets Friday night in a National Basketball Association game.

The Rockets, who fell to 2-14 for the year, trailed 20-16 after one quarter, despite 12 points from Joe Bryant.

In the second quarter, Houston hit only four of 17 field goal attempts — 23 percent — and only two of seven free throws, for a total of 10 points.

The Spurs held Houston to just 26 points in the first half, leading 43-26 at intermission.

Houston narrowed the score to within 12 points at 59-47 with 3:58 left in the third quarter, but the Spurs raised the lead to as many as 20 points before Houston again closed the gap in the final minutes.

Johnny Moore and Bill Willoughby each tallied 12 points for the Spurs, and rookie Terry Teagle led the Rockets with 24 points.

NBA ROUNDUP

Bryant finished with 16 for Houston.

San Antonio improved its record to 12-8, second place in the NBA's Midwest Division.

Warriors 123, Kings 107

Purvis Short scored 24 points and Larry Smith had 22 Friday night as the Golden State Warriors snapped an eight-game road losing streak by beating the Kansas City Kings 123-107.

The Warriors, 6-12, playing without injured regulars Joe Barry Carroll and World Free, had not won a road game since their season opener.

The Warriors shot better than 55 percent in the first half and took advantage of some sloppy ball handling by the Kings to post a 58-53 halftime advantage.

The Warriors' kept their hot hand after intermission and built their lead to 15 points, 107-92, with five minutes remaining.

The loss dropped Kansas City to 9-6.

Eddie Johnson led the Kings with 26 points. Mike Woodson had 21 and Larry Drew added 16.

Lorenzo Romar pumped in 18 points and Rickey Brown had 15 for the Warriors.

Indiana 111, Cleveland 103

Billy Knight scored a season-high 41 points, including 13 during the fourth quarter when the Indiana Pacers turned back a Cleveland rally and beat the Cavaliers 111-103.

Knight, a 6-foot-6 veteran swingman who hit 10 straight field goals during one stretch in the first half, helped the Pacers to a 17-point lead before Coach Jack McKinney rested his starters in the third period.

The Cavaliers closed within six points starting the fourth quarter, then after Indiana rebuilt a 14-point lead, Cleveland ran off 10 straight to get back into contention.

A pair of free throws by Geoff Huston cut the lead to three points, 106-103, with under two minutes to go, but Indiana's Herb Williams hit a basket, Knight scored on a rebound shot and Jerry Sichting added a free throw in the closing seconds to clinch the victory.

Clark Kellogg added 23 points and Sichting finished with 14 for the Pacers, who snapped a four-game losing string. Cliff Robinson led Cleveland with 24 points. Huston added 16 points and rookie John Bagley 15 for the Cavaliers.

Bullets 105, Knicks 98

Jeff Ruland scored 23 points and had 12 rebounds to lead Washington to a 105-98 victory over the New York Knicks.

Ruland got help from Greg Ballard, who scored 22, and Don Collins, who tallied 21, including eight points in the decisive third quarter.

The Bullets expanded a four-point halftime lead to 80-64 after the third period.The Knicks cut the lead to 101-98 with 30 seconds left, but Collins made two free throws eight seconds later to give Washington an insurmountable five-point lead.

New York was led by Marvin Webster, who scored a season-high 22 points and blocked eight shots.

Despite Webster's best game this year, the Knicks fell to 5-12, and had a two-game winning streak broken.

The Bullets raised their record to 8-9.

Washington took a 52-48 lead at halftime while making 20 of 28 free throws. Ruland, who made nine of 11 from the line, had 13 points by intermission.

Nets 107, Hawks 99

ATLANTA (AP) — Buck Williams scored 22 points and pulled down 17 rebounds to lead the New Jersey Nets to their third straight victory, a come-from-behind 107-99 decision over the Atlanta Hawks.

The Hawks' loss was their second in a row and they fell to 7-9 on the season. New Jersey improved its record to 10-9.

Atlanta led from the early moments until midway through the fourth quarter, when the Nets caught the Hawks and tied them at 91-91 with 4:30 remaining. Over the last 1:53 of the game, the Hawks attempted and missed six three-point field goals.

Down 65-56 early in the third quarter, the Nets outscored the Hawks 8-0 in one stretch, drawing to within one point at 65-64 left on a pair of Darryl Dawkins free throws with 6:33 left.

The Hawks, however, regained their composure and a seven-point lead when Rory Sparrow sank a layup with 2:25 left in the third to put the Hawks up 79-72. But the Nets scored the final five points of the quarter and were down only two points, 79-77, at the quarter's end.

Denver 132, Chicago 124

DENVER — The Nuggets, led by Alex English's 29 points and Billy McKinney with 22, posted a 132-124 victory over the Chicago Bulls.

The setback was the 10th straight road loss of the season for the struggling Bulls, who are 6-12 overall.

English, who has averaged 35 points per game in the past two weeks, was aided by Kiki Vandeweghe with 26 points and Dan Issel with 20.

Denver, in raising its record to 8-10, led 112-99 with 8:40 to play in the game before rookie Quintin Dailey led an 8-0 run by the Bulls that narrowed the Nuggets' advantage to 112-107 only 90 seconds later.

After another two minutes, reserve center Rich Kelley — who had 10 points in his first double-figures game for Denver — scored on two consecutive rebound baskets as the Nuggets increased their lead to 10 points and were never seriously challenged the rest of the way.

Rookie forward Orlando Woolridge and guard Reggie Theus both had 26 points to lead the Bulls. Dave Corzine tallied 18 and Dailey had 15 for Chicago.

Bucks 115, Celtics 112

MILWAUKEE — Marques Johnson scored 10 of his 28 points in the final period, including a 15-foot jumper for the go-ahead points with 1:04 left, to lead the Milwaukee Bucks to a 115-112 victory over the Boston Celtics.

Sidney Moncrief added 25 points for Milwaukee, as the Bucks offset a season-high 30 points by the Celtics' Kevin McHale.

Moncrief sank two free throws with five seconds to go to give the Bucks a 115-112 lead.

The score was tied nine times in the second half until Johnson scored six points in a row to put the Bucks ahead 106-100.

Boston fought back behind two baskets by ex-Buck Quinn Buckner, a free throw by Larry Bird and a basket by Robert Parish to go ahead 112-110 with 1:41 left.

But Milwaukee's Alton Lister made one of two free throws with 1:29 left, and Johnson followed with his turn-around jumper for the go-ahead bucket.

Lister then rebounded a missed shot by McHale with 36 seconds left and was fouled. Lister missed both free throws and Parish grabbed the rebound on the second miss, but Parish missed a 12-footer with 12 seconds to play.

Johnson rebounded to clinch the victory for Milwaukee.

James wins punting job with Oilers; Linebacker Corker placed on waivers

HOUSTON (AP) - The Houston Oilers signed punter John James, an 11-year veteran, and waived three-year veteran linebacker John Corker Friday.

James won a three-man punt off after Coach Ed Biles cut Cliff Parsley, the team's punter for the past six seasons, earlier this week. Bob Grupp and Case DeBruijn also tried out for the vacant punting job.

James punted for the Falcons for 10 years and had signed on with Detroit before the NFL players strike when the Lions' regular punter, Tom Skladany, walked out in a contract dispute. Skladany returned after the strike and James was waived.

James participated in the 1975 and 1977 pro bowls and set a league record of 109 punts in a season in 1978. James led the NFL in punting in 1977 and 1978 and has a career average of 40.8 yards.

Corker a three-year veteran from Oklahoma State, had been used primarily on special teams.

Fambrough goes from 8-3 to 2-7-2 to unemployed

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Don Fambrough, one year after being named Big Eight Coach of the Year, has been fired as head football coach at the University of Kansas.

Fambrough's ousting from his second term as Kansas coach had been rumored for weeks. Monte C. Johnson, who was appointed athletic director a week ago, confirmed Friday that he had dismissed the 60-year-old coach, whose association with Kansas football dates to his playing days in the 1940s, and all his assistants.

"I made the decision to relieve Don of his head coaching responsibilities after careful deliberation," Johnson said in a prepared statement. "It was my feeling that in order to re-establish confidence in our football program that a change was necessary. This was a very tough decision to reach and one that I thought long and hard about."

A YEAR ago this week, on the heels of an 8-3 season that had Kansas heading for the Hall of Fame Bowl in Birmingham, Ala., Fambrough was voted Big Eight coach of the year.

Fans wore buttons proclaiming, "Goin' with Fam to Birmingham," and the entire program seemed in better health than it had been in more than a decade. Fambrough, who had resigned under pressure as head coach in 1974 only to be given a rare second chance, vowed to make Lawrence the football capital of the Midwest.

Some observers felt at the time the Jayhawks had been over-achievers and did not possess the talent their record indicated. It was a theory that would be borne out in 1982 when the team, wracked by rumors of an NCAA probe, limped to a 2-7-2 mark.

The downfall actually began in the spring when the rumors surfaced. Officials at two Big Eight schools, Missouri and Kansas State, were so miffed over what they termed gross recruiting violations that they publicly admitted to asking for an NCAA probe.

NEWSPAPER STORIES over the summer further stirred the troubled waters and the school admitted it had received notice of preliminary investigation. The Kansas City Times charged that Kerwin Bell, the prize running back who rushed for more than 1,000 yards as a freshman, had not met NCAA minimum grade point requirements coming out of high school. The NCAA Eligibility Committee looked into the charges, confirmed them, and the day Big Eight Skywriters hit Lawrence in late August, Kansas announced that Bell had been stripped of one year and three games of eligibility.

Still, with most of their starters returning, the Jayhawks were predicted to finish as high as third place. But an opening day upset loss to Wichita State set the tone for what became one of the most disappointing seasons in Jayhawk history.

For most of the year they were 96th among 97 Division I-A teams in defending against the rush. Loss piled upon loss. Bell, after sitting out the first three games, was ineffectual. There were rumors of squad disunity and strife.

The Kansas picture was complicated even further when Jim Lessig, who had become athletic director in January, resigned to become commissioner of the Mid-American Conference. Johnson, a businessman and former KU basketball player, made it obvious at his introductory news conference last week that he was not happy with Fambrough. In dismissing Fambrough, Johnson also released his entire staff.

John Cooper, a former Kansas assistant under Fambrough who piloted Tulsa to a 10-1 record this year, including a victory over Kansas, has been most prominently mentioned as a successor.

Fambrough's record in eight seasons was 36-49-5. He had two years remaining on a contract that paid $49,680 a year. He may remain with the university in some capacity.

"We would welcome Don Fambrough to continue his involvement with the KU program in a meaningful role," Johnson said. "I have suggested that possibility to Don and we will continue to discuss his future."

AFTER ALMOST 20 years as an assistant at Kansas, Fambrough became head coach in 1971. He resigned after the 1974 season under fire from Clyde Walker, the athletic director at the time and was given a position as a university fund-raiser.

But when his successor, Bud Moore, was fired after the 1978 season, then-athletic director Bob Marcum surprised everybody by restoring Fambrough to the position.

Marcum, who resigned last year to become athletic director at South Carolina, said at the time:

"Don didn't say a whole lot when I offered him the job. But he accepted right away. And it seemed to me his footsteps walking away from my office that morning were a lot quicker than they had been walking to my office."

On Friday, Fambrough issued this statement: "My love for the University of Kansas is long-standing and will continue to be strong. I regret ending my association with the university at this time. I also regret not being allowed to work with the fine group of young players whom I helped to recruit and coach, and I wish them the greatest success."

TCU's 'Dutch' Meyer dies Friday at 84

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Coach Leo Robert "Dutch" Meyer, who built a football powerhouse at Texas Christian University nearly a half century ago, died Friday after a lengthy illness. He was 84.

Meyer's teams won the mythical national championship in 1938 and three Southwest Conference titles — 1938, 1944 and 1951.

Meyer was head coach for 19 years after taking over in 1934.

He graduated from TCU in 1922, winning 11 letters in athletics.

He started his coaching career in Fort Worth, heading a high school girls basketball team.

But in 1923, Texas Christian joined the Southwest Conference and football Coach Matty Bell picked Meyer as freshman coach.

There were 19 freshmen football players — all backs — Meyer recalled once.

"There wasn't a lineman in sight," he said. "Well, I turned a quarterback into a center, made guards out of halfbacks, put fullbacks at tackle. I put another halfback at one end, and a boy who had never played football was at the other.

"You should have seen our scrimmages!" Meyer would later say. "We'd take our left side and put it on offense, then put the right side on defense and run all plays to that side."

His strategy worked because in 11 years as freshman coach, Meyer's teams won 29 of 35 games.

As head coach, his tactics from the wingback and spread formations became widely known, especially with players like Davey O'Brian, who quarterbacked the team to the 1938 championship, and Sammy Baugh, one of the great collegiate passers.

Meyer brought discipline to the passing game that made it a deadly weapon.

At a coaching school in 1937, the students were told by one coach the forward pass was used by him as a threat to loosen up the defense so the run can function.

Meyer was the next speaker.

"Gentlemen," he said, "we use the forward pass to gain ground."

Meyer retired in 1963, winning major honors in athletics. He was elected to the National Football Hall of Fame, Helms Foundation and Texas Sports Hall of Fame.

He is survived by his wife, Ester Grubbs Meyer. Funeral services will be at 11 a.m. Saturday at University Christian Church with burial in the Mansfield Cemetery.

Drillers' GM looking for investors to buy team

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Merrill Eckstein, general manager of the Tulsa Drillers baseball team, said today he wants to organize a group of investors to buy the franchise from the Texas Rangers.

The Rangers earlier this week canceled the team's franchise lease agreement with Sports of Tulsa, Inc., which owns the Class AA Texas League team.

Eckstein said at a news conference today he plans to organize up to 35 investors to come up with about $350,000 in the next two weeks.

The Rangers also are expected to receive bids for the franchise from buyers who would like to move the club to Amarillo, Texas, or to Mobile, Ala.

The Rangers have had the AA farm club in Tulsa since 1976, when the Class AAA Oilers left Tulsa.

Eckstein said Rangers General Manager Joe Klein appeared to be willing to keep the team in Tulsa if a new organization can find adequate funding and secure a lease on the stadium where the Drillers played last season.

"He says, 'You have the best stadium. If you could obtain that lease and your money offer was comparable with the others I would sell you the franchise," Eckstein said.

Eckstein said he has lined up six investors. He has until about Dec. 15 to make Klein an offer. On Dec. 13, he plans to appear before the Tulsa County Fairgrounds Trust Authority to propose a lease agreement on the stadium.

Eckstein said he believes the Rangers might settle for $150,000 to $200,000 for the franchise. He said the rest of the investment he seeks would be to buy equipment and offices, pay rental and try to pay the team's bills.

An agreement with the Rangers would give assurance of professional baseball in Tulsa for many years, Eckstein said.

Lewis wins two prestigious T&F awards

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Carl Lewis, the world's top-ranked sprinter and long jumper, won two of the most prestigious awards in track and field Friday.

Lewis, the first athlete to win consecutive national outdoor titles in the long jump and the 100-meter dash — capturing both events in the 1981 USA Mobil Outdoor Championships at Sacramento, Calif., and in the 1982 meet at Knoxville, Tenn. — was honored during an awards luncheon at The Athletics Congress convention.

His long jump of 28 feet, 9 inches July 24 in the National Sports Festival at Indianapolis earned him the Best Performance of the Year Award in 1982 and his overall accomplishments gained him the Track and Field News Award as the outstanding male athlete of the year.

It was the second year in a row that Lewis was chosen the No. 1 male athlete. The other two-time winner since the award was inaugurated in 1978 was 400-meter intermediate hurdler Edwin Moses. He won in 1978 and 1980.

In addition to his second straight double in the outdoor nationals and his 28-9 jump — the longest at sea level and second all-time, behind Bob Beamon's world record 29-2½ during the 1968 Olympic Games in the rarified air of Mexico City — Lewis raised his world indoor best in the long jump to 28-1, won the national indoor long jump title and equalled his world record at sea level for the 100 with a clocking of 10.00 seconds.

During the awards ceremony, Lewis, 21, posed for pictures with the 36-year-old Beamon — the first time the two have been photographed together.

"It's hard to say how I feel about Bob and how I feel about the 29-2½," Lewis said afterward. "Bob's done it and I want it."

Lewis said that he and Beamon have talked in the past, "mostly about general things."

"He's given me some tips about the way he jumped and I've told him how I jump," added Lewis, a student at the University of Houston but who does not compete for the school.

Lewis, unbeaten in the long jump since finishing second to Larry Myricks in the National Indoor Championships in February 1981, never has jumped at altitude and said he prefers not jumping under those conditions.

"I don't think I need altitude or wind to aid me," noted the confident Lewis, who has said in the past he believes he can reach 30 feet. "I feel the world record is in my body. I really don't want to jump at altitude, but will probably do it next year for the first time in the National Sports Festival (at Colorado Springs).

Among the other award winners cited during the luncheon were: middle-distance runner Mary Decker Tabb, winner of the C.C. Jackson Award for the outstanding woman in running events; high jumper Coleen Sommer, C.C. Jackson Award, for the outstanding woman in field events; heptathlete Jane Frederick, Multi-Event Outstanding Woman Award; Dick Beardsley, Robert E. DeCelle II Memorial Award, for outstanding male long distance runner; four-time Olympic discus gold medalist Al Oerter, Masters Administrator of the Year Award, and Jim Heiring, Capt. Ron Zinn Memorial Award, for outstanding race walker.

Tabb, who was not present, was the most prolific record breaker in the world this year. She shattered three world outdoor records, six American outdoor marks, four world indoor bests, and four American records in distances ranging from one mile to 10,000 meters.

Ballesteros takes one-stroke lead in golf's Million Dollar Challenge

SUN CITY, Bophuthatswana (AP) — Spain's Seve Ballesteros dropped a 30-foot birdie putt on the 17th hole Friday to cling to a 1-stroke lead midway through golf's richest tournament, the four-day Million Dollar Challenge.

Ballesteros' 1-under-par 71 put him at 138, a stroke ahead of Craig Stadler, who fired eight birdies for a 5-under-par 67 and 139 total after two rounds.

Lanny Wadkins was in a three-way tie for third place with Jerry Pate and defending champion Johnny Miller at 140. Wadkins shot a 2-under 70 in the second round, while Jerry Pate, who shared the lead with Ballesteros Thursday, finished Friday's round with 73. Miller shot a 68.

Top prize in the 72-hole tournament is $300,000, with second place worth $150,000 and third worth $105,000. Even last place in the 10-player event pays $50,000.

Gary Player of South Africa, who is competing, along with a local hotel chain invited the other nine players. Prize money is being put by the Southern Sun hotels, plus other corporations.

The tournament, however, is not sanctioned by any professional golf associations — other than ones here in South Africa — because they object to the country's racial segregation policies.

Ray Floyd and Jack Nicklaus were 3-under-par for the two rounds. Nicklaus was the steadiest golfier in the drizzly round, shooting par except for two birdies and a lone bogey.

Australian Greg Norman shot par for the day and was 1-under for the tournament. The two elders on the course, Lee Trevino and Gary Player, were at the rear. Trevino, 43, was even for the tournament after a second-round 73 while the 47-year-old Player failed to get a birdie, had three bogeys and will start Saturday's round at 2-over.

Ballesteros, 25, had two birdies and two bogeys on the front nine. He made the return trip at par except for his spectacular putt on 17.

After trailing at par on Thursday, Stadler and Floyd paired together Friday and appeared headed toward the lead.

Miller won the $500,000 first prize in the tournament's inaugural event last January, outputting Ballesteros in a nine-hole sudden-death playoff.

Runyan to Sanders four times gives Artesia New Mexico title

ARTESIA (AP) — Quarterback Scott Runyan and tailback Jeff Sanders — Artesia's big-man, little-man combination — combined for four touchdowns to lead the Bulldogs to the Class AAA state prep football championship Friday night with a 31-28 victory over Silver City.

Runyan, closing out a brilliant three-year career, threw two touchdown passes while the diminutive Sanders scored two more on the ground as the Bulldogs, ranked No. 2 in the final Associated Press Class AAA poll of the season, captured a state football title for a 12th time.

It was another bridesmaid finish for Silver City. The Fighting Colts have made it to the championship game three of the last four years and each time have been defeated in their quest for the school's first football championship.

In a game that featured explosive offenses, Artesia scored the game-winner with a 69-yard, 10-play drive early in the fourth quarter that culminated with Sanders scoring the decisive touchdown from 11 yards out with 1:35 left.

Silver City, which finished the regular season ranked No. 1 in the Class AAA poll, had repeatedly answered the running of Runyan and Sanders behind its big-play passing attack.

Senior quarterback Danny Bowman, who finished with 234 yards in the air, threw a trio of touchdown strikes. He hit flanker Joe Vasquez with TD passes of 25 and 9 yards and wide receiver Paul Osuna with a 30-yarder.

Halfback Jim Vasquez gave Silver City its final lead of the night with a 13-yard touchdown run in the third quarter.

But Artesia came right back and behind the running of the 207-pound Runyan and 135-pound Sanders moved down field for the winning score.

Artesia, moving almost at will against Silver City on the ground, took a 19-14 halftime lead as Runyan first hit Jimmy Munoz with an 8-yard scoring pass and Kevin Graham with a 44-yard scoring strike. The two TD's were sandwiched around a Bowman to Joe Vasquez scoring pass.

Artesia's Eric McCaleb scored on a 1-yard run, but Silver City came back just before halftime on another Bowman to Joe Vasquez TD connection.

Silver City took its first lead at 21-19 on the Bowman to Osuna bomb but Artesia retaliated with a 2-yard plunge by Sanders.

McCaleb came up with the defensive play of the night when he recovered a Bowman fumble at the Artesia 45-yard line as the Fighting Colts threatened to retake the lead.

With Artesia grinding out 315 yards on the ground, the Bulldogs finished with 402 total yards. Sanders got 184 of them on 33 carries.

Silver City finished with 357 yards. Artesia, in winning its eighth straight game, finished with a 9-4 mark, while Silver City wrapped up the season with a 12-2 record.

Georgetown rips St. Francis, 74-40

Hawkeyes sink stubborn Navy, 76-65

Georgetown 74, St. Francis 40

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. — Bill Martin scored 20 points to lead second-ranked Georgetown to a 74-40 college basketball victory over St. Francis (Pa.) in the opening game of the Wendy's Classic Tournament Friday.

Northern Iowa was scheduled to play host Western Kentucky in the second game with the consolation and championship games Saturday night.

Georgetown held St. Francis to just 14 points in the first half.

Georgetown, a 63-62 loser to North Carolina in last year's NCAA final, raised its record to 4-0. St. Francis dropped to 1-2.

Anthony Jones added 12 points for Georgetown, while Pat Ewing and David Wingate added 10 points each for the Hoyas.

Jeff Hamilton scored 17 points to lead St. Francis, which scored only four points in the last 9½ minutes of the first half, while Georgetown raced away to an insurmountable 34-14 lead.

Iowa 76, Navy 65

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Bob Hansen scored 22 points, one short of his career high, to steer 10th-ranked Iowa to a 76-65 victory over stubborn Navy Friday night in the opening round of the Amana Hawkeye Classic college basketball tournament.

Iowa cruised to a 14-point lead early in the second half, then had to hold off a Navy rally to send its record to 3-0. The Hawkeyes will meet Hawaii in the championship game of the tournament Saturday night.

Dan Hale hit a basket and two free throws in the final minute to lift Hawaii to a 70-67 victory over Pittsburgh in the tournament opener.

Hansen teamed with Mark Gannon to stake Iowa to a 37-25 halftime lead and the Hawkeyes increased the margin to 43-29 when Gannon sank a pair of free throws two minutes into the second half.

Navy then began chipping away at the lead behind the long-range shooting of David Brooks and trailed only 58-55 after Vernon Butler converted a three-point play with 6:04 left.

However, Greg Stokes sank four straight free throws and Steve Carfino hit two to put Iowa back into control at 64-55 with 4:35 remaining. Navy didn't get closer than seven points after that.

Stokes finished with 16 points and Gannon scored 14. Brooks had 18 points to lead Navy, 2-1, which shot 67 percent from the field in the second half.

Arizona State 79, Connecticut 64

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Byron Scott scored 18 points and Paul Williams added 17 as Arizona State held off Connecticut 79-64 in the opening round of the Fiesta Classic college basketball tournament here Friday night.

The Sun Devils led 36-34 at halftime and had a 49-37 lead early in the second half before Connecticut rallied to get within three points at 65-62 on Karl Hobbs' free throws with 2:08 remaining.

Scott and Williams, however, keyed an 8-0 scoring spree as Arizona State sealed the victory. The Huskies got 15 points from Bruce Kuczenski while Hobbs had 12.

Utah (2-0) was to play South Carolina (2-0) in the other semifinal later Friday night. The winner would advance to meet Arizona State (2-1) in the championship game Saturday night with the loser facing Connecticut (1-1) in the consolation round.

The Sun Devils are shooting for their third straight Fiesta Bowl title and 12th in the 16-year history of the tourney.

UNLV 67, Duquesne 54

PITTSBURGH — Larry Anderson scored 21 points to lead 20th-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas to a 67-54 college basketball victory over Duquesne Friday night.

Anderson scored 17 of his points in the second half as the Rebels took command of the game after Duquesne had tied the score. He broke a 24-24 tie with a three-point play that put UNLV ahead to stay three minutes into the second half.

Duquesne forward Bill Searles scored a game-high 24 points to pace the Dukes. Sidney Green scored 12 points in the first half for the Rebels, but played sparingly in the second half because of an injury and finished with 14 points.

Searles was 10-for-14 from the floor and 4-for-4 from the free throw line. Duquesne got nine points from Dwayne Rawls and eight from Terry Teachout.

Nevada-Las Vegas is 3-0. Duquesne fell to 1-2.

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Center Wayne Gretzky of the Edmonton Oilers shattered nine National Hockey League scoring records last season, collecting 92 goals and 212 points in a sensational offensive performance.

Tonight, the 21-year-old forward will attempt to tie Guy Lafleur's NHL record of scoring a point in 28 consecutive games. If he succeeds at home against the Calgary Flames, Gretzky will be out to break the record held by the Montreal Canadiens' player when the Los Angeles Kings visit Sunday night.

"It's one record I haven't talked much about," Gretzky said in an interview Friday. "But I've thought about it since game eight or nine."

The reason he has thought about it is simple. His critics, decreasing in numbers each year, say he hasn't been consistent as a professional; he scores in bunches, doesn't play well every game.

"So, for that reason, to prove those people wrong, it would be nice to get the record."

Records are nothing new to Gretzky. The NHL record guide is studded with his name.

But the fact Gretzky has scored at least one point in every Oiler game this season, keeping him near the record points pace he set last season, conjures up a question: Is an 80-game scoring streak possible?

Few people, other than Gretzky, believed 200 points in a season was possible. Certainly no one other than Gretzky would even think of 100 goals in a season.

"Someday, somebody might get it," Gretzky said of the season-long streak. "Whether it's me or someone else, I don't know.

"But 80 games, with the travel we do, with as many good players as there are in the game, with the chances of nagging injuries, cold, the flu, little things that can throw you off for four or five games over an 80-game schedule might make it tough — but stranger things have happened."

Gretzky, with his blond hair growing longer and traces of a moustache appearing, admits there are maximum levels to everyone's talents.

"It has to end somewhere, I'm the first one to realize that, but ..." he says, pausing as he silently debates the value of completing the sentence. "I hope to duplicate what I did last year.

"But I know we have a good hockey team here and before the year's over we're going to be in a position to have a shot at the Stanley Cup. Hopefully, as the team gets better, we'll do better as individuals and hopefully I can duplicate the stats of last year."

Through 27 games, Gretzky has 20 goals — one fewer than league leader Mike Bossy of the New York Islanders — and league-high totals of 45 assists and 65 points.

After 27 games last season, he had 31 goals and 67 points but had failed to pick up a point in four of the games.

Lendl vs. Wilander, McEnroe meets Borg

ANTWERP, Belgium (AP) — Czechoslovakia's Ivan Lendl crushed Jan Gunnarson of Sweden 6-2, 6-2 and top-seeded John McEnroe of the United States ousted Czech Tomas Smid 6-[illegible], 0-6, 6-3 Friday to advance into the semifinals of the $700,000 European Tennis Champions' Championship.

Lendl will play another Swede, Mats Wilander, while McEnroe will take on Bjorn Borg of Sweden. Wilander stopped Yannick Noah of France 7-6, 6-4, while Borg defeated American Brian Gottfried 6-7, 6-3, 6-4.

Lendl needed only 55 minutes to oust Gunnarson. The Czech star used his devastating ground strokes from the baseline, rarely going to the net but running Gunnarson all over the court.

Borg started weakly, losing his service in the second game. After a double fault, however, he got going and broke Gottfried's serve in the third game.

The two traded service breaks in the seventh and eighth games, then held serve to go into a tiebreaker, which Gottfried won 8-6.

Borg then found his tempo and took the second set 6-3 in 40 minutes after breaking Gottfried's serve.

British unemployment rises

LONDON (AP) — Unemployment inched up another notch in Britain last month, promising a bleak Christmas for the 3,063,026 now on the jobless rolls.

The rolls swelled by 14,018 in November, raising the jobless rate to 13.2 percent and increase of one-tenth of a percentage point over the October rate, the government announced earlier this week. The figure was one of the highest in the industrialized world.

Artist captures bygone China

By LIU HEUNG SHING

PEKING (AP) — The U.S. Marines drill in the old legation quarter. Beggars seek alms in broken rice bowls. Chinese aristocrats strut in Western clothes with blonde wives on their arms. Rickshaw boys argue with traffic cops and portraits of Chairman Mao Tse-tung are nowhere in sight.

This was Peking of 50 years ago, its riches, poverty and bygone diversity captured in minute detail by painter Wang Daguan in a 164-foot scroll.

"I wanted to give people today a glimpse of life in the 1930s in what was China's most fascinating city, Peking," the 57-year-old Wang told the Associated Press in an interview.

In the scroll of history he depicts the majestic city walls razed by the Communists, the graceful arches replaced by massive socialist architecture, the religious processions that no longer take place, and the frenetic capitalism that has been banned.

The artist peeps into the streets and courtyards of Peking's "Hutong," where ordinary families squabble and laugh, where old men lovingly tend their birds, where matriarchs rule and daughters-in-law cringe.

HE PEEPS INTO the bedchamber of a concubine with bound feet as she primps and awaits her patron.

"I was so poor in those days," said Wang, the son of a coolie. "I used to wander around the streets of Peking. I saw rickshaw men drop dead in their tracks and I saw the extravagance and squanderings of high society. I wanted to capture it all, but I am not really talented."

Wang, who usually earns a living as a railroad trade union employee, is a collector not only of images but of sounds of the pre-Communist past. He has acted as a consultant to moviemakers who want to capture the sounds and costumes of the ancient city of swallows.

Aided by a remarkable memory and powers of mimicry, Wang has tape recorded the jingles, slogans and calls of more than 100 hawkers, acrobats, knife sharpeners, diamond merchants of the old days.

His most ambitious achievement, however, is the monumental scroll in 12 sections 16 inches wide. It is being financed by the state while Wang, a self-taught artist, is on extended leave from his job.

WANG WAS INSPIRED to paint his scroll at the start of the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution, which called for abolishing all things old. As a Communist party union leader, he was pushed aside by Red Guards and left without a job. That gave him time to walk and remember and sketch.

He produced a draft in secret, but in those days of smashing the old, he would never have been permitted to display such useless images of the decadent past.

In 1978, however, Wang's dusty draft was discovered by the newly established Chinese Painters' Workshop, which was organized by leading artists to uncover talent. With a resurrected respect for the past, the association was delighted by Wang's vision and decided to fund it.

Mark White won race despite being outspent

AUSTIN (AP) — Democrat Mark White wrested the governor's post from incumbent Bill Clements despite being outspent nearly 2-1, according to campaign reports filed here.

White's report, filed earlier this week, showed the attorney general spent $7.1 million and relied heavily on loans to beat Republican Clements, who spent $13.1 million.

The totals showed White spent a relatively miserly $4.20 for each of the approximately 1.7 million votes he pulled. Clements' tab for each of his 1.5 million votes was $8.94.

White reported total expenditures of $7,129,778 for the campaign and $7,923,628 raised, including $4.9 million in loans. The Democratic challenger actually outspent Clements during the final reporting period — Oct. 24 through Nov. 27. White showed $1.9 million spent during that period, compared to Clements' $1.7 million.

Chicago's Republicans stymied by lack of public payroll jobs

CHICAGO (AP) — Timothy P. Sheehan sums it up in four words. "I have nine jobs," the gray-haired, genial Irishman and former congressman says glumly.

"Nine jobs in 77 precincts..." Sheehan's voice trails off. He gestures in futility.

In this city of hard-nosed patronage politics, few more pitiable remarks could be heard from a man whose task is to deliver votes. Public payroll jobs — collecting garbage, prosecuting winos and turning keys in the county jail — are what make Chicago's Democratic machine run.

In the Northwest Side's 41st Ward, Democrats command an estimated 500 jobs. City Hall hands them down to Committeeman Roman C. Pucinski, who passes them on to the precinct captains, who spread them among their helpers.

By election day, almost everybody seems to owe somebody something. But not Tim Sheehan. He's not a Democrat — he is the 41st Ward's Republican committeeman.

"You just can't do it," he says. "...Nine jobs. The only story is that it's better than no jobs."

REPUBLICANS OFFER the spoils as the main reason for the low estate of their party in Chicago. Consider:

When party leaders met Tuesday to pick a mayoral candidate, they were presented not with a list of distinguished civic leaders but four unknowns, one an unemployed philosopher, another a former professional clown whose friends call him Spanky. Retiring state Rep. Bernard Epton finally was induced to run in the April 12 election.

"The worst thing that could happen to me is if I win," Epton chortled.

The Democratic candidates for mayor are incumbent Jane M. Byrne, Cook County State's Attorney Richard M. Daley and Rep. Harold Washington, D-Ill. Epton's opponent will be decided Feb. 22.

Republicans haven't elected a mayor in 57 years. Democrats hold every seat on the 50-member City Council. The GOP lost its last U.S. House seat here in 1958 when Pucinski beat Sheehan.

And Republicans are loathe to mention the last time they came close to electing a congressman. That was 1978, in the South Side's overwhelmingly black 1st District, when an affable undertaker and left-wing activist, A.A. "Sammy" Rayner, got 44 percent of the vote. Had he won, he would have been one of the most liberal men in the House by any yardstick.

"FRANKLY, I JUST used it (the Republican Party) as a label to get on the ballot," Rayner confesses.

There is reason to suspect that a poverty of patronage is not the only reason for the travails of Republicans here.

For one thing, Chicago is a labor town and 40 percent of the populace is black. With brief interruptions, blue-collar workers usually have tended to be Democrats, and blacks here converted in large numbers from the party of Abraham Lincoln to the party of Franklin D. Roosevelt starting in 1933.

That year, Democrats smashed the Republican machine of Mayor William Hale "Big Bill" Thompson and replaced it with one of their own. That merely made Chicago like other industrial cities in the North — Democratic.

Members of the editorial staff of the Boston Herald American cheer Friday as they watch a live broadcast of publisher Rupert Murdoch announcing that he had reached an agreement with all the unions and would purchase the newspaper from Hearst Corp. The announcement came right at the 5 p.m. deadline set by Hearst that if an agreement was not reached, the paper would cease to publish.

'People-managed system' saves hall of fame money

ALAMOGORDO (AP) — On a normal fall day last year, the mechanical room of the International Space Hall of Fame, the heart and guts of the museum's heating and cooling system, would be humming, whirring and shuddering as pumps and fans circulated boiler-heater water through the four-story concrete and glass structure.

But this year, maintenance specialist Rick Dukes stands amid the shiny metal pipes, the big compressors and the gauges and dials on the automated control board and hears — nothing.

The silence means money for Space Hall officials.

Dukes figured out a way to keep the museum at a comfortable temperature by bypassing the energy-hungry heating and cooling system. Because of the conservation program, the hall's electricity bills have plummeted.

The decline has been so great, Dukes said, that technicians from New Mexico-Texas Electric Co. started visiting the Space Hall three times a month to make sure the power meters and transformers were working properly.

Compared with last year's usage, the Space Hall is saving as much electricity every month as a three-bedroom, all-electric house uses in a year, Dukes estimated.

In a day of computerized "climate-controlled" systems, Dukes' innovation is ironic — he shut off the building's automated system and started running it manually.

Space Center Director Bob Content supplied a fancier name for Dukes' operation: a "people-managed system."

Figures kept by Space Hall officials show a decline in power usage of about 29 percent from last year, Associate Director Dick Bradner said. Electric rate increases have decreased the actual dollar savings to about 14 percent over last year, he said.

The large golden windows that line the building's face enable many of the conservation ideas to work, Dukes said.

The building is allowed to work like a passive solar heating heater, which the automatic system would not let it do, Bradner said.

On a sunny fall day, for instance, the windows soak up enough heat to put the inside temperature at slightly above the normal range by mid-afternoon. With the automated system, the coolers would have turned on and driven the temperature down — and jacked up electric use.

When the sun goes down, enough heat is left over to "carry the building through the night," Space Hall officials said.

Murdoch reaches agreement with Hearst Corp., buys Herald American

BOSTON (AP) — Newspaper tycoon Rupert Murdoch reached agreements with the Boston Herald American's unions Friday, clearing the way for him to buy the tabloid just 10 minutes before the Hearst Corp. intended to shut it down.

Rupert Murdoch

Murdoch won the concessions with the last of the newspaper's 11 unions at 4:50 p.m. The Hearst group, owner of the morning daily for 78 years, had said it would cease publication at 5 p.m.

Hearst said the Herald American was losing $1 million a month.

Murdoch had offered to buy the paper on the condition that the newspaper's unions agree to layoffs and other cost-cutting changes.

"It is with great pleasure that I can announce we have reached an agreement with the unions that will allow us to save the Record American...I mean the Herald American," said a beaming Murdoch, momentarily calling the newspaper by the name it carried before a merger 10 years ago.

"It's been a very successful day," Murdoch said as his negotiating team headed for a round of champagne toasts in a hotel suite.

Charles Jennings, head of the unions' unity council, said between 180 and 185 of the Herald's 800 workers will lose their jobs under the agreement.

"I'm never satisfied, but there is always three years down the road," Jennings said, referring to the end of the new contracts. "We made the best of the worst."

Murdoch said the deals will trim $7 million from the Herald's annual operating budget.

Jubilant staffers hugged each other and shouted with joy when news of the agreement reached the newspaper's city room. "It feels good. It feels good," exclaimed one editor.

Murdoch, owner of the New York Post, said the Herald American would publish a Saturday edition.

"We're going to have a paper that is satisfying to readers, that is informative and provocative," the publisher vowed.

William O. Taylor, publisher of the Globe, said he welcomed the Herald's new management.

"The Globe has always enjoyed vigorous competition, believing that in the newspaper business, as elsewhere, it serves the best interest of the community," he said.

The agreement was worked out after two days of virtually non-stop talks with the 11 unions.

"We have had the most difficult negotiations I have ever been involved in," Murdoch said.

The last of the holdouts was the 51-member mailers union, whose leaders talked through the day with Murdoch's representatives and leaders of the other unions.

Newspaper workers gathered at the negotiating room hugged each other, applauded and wept. Then they rushed away from the waterfront hotel and headed for their newspaper to go to work.

Paul Corsetti, a Herald American reporter jailed earlier this year for refusing to testify in a murder case, said he wouldn't waste time celebrating.

"I have to get back to work now," he said. "We have a paper to put out."

"I'm very happy," added Herald truck driver Tony Luongo. "I think it's going to be an exciting place to work."

Earlier in the day, Hearst laid off the newspaper's reporters and closed its doors. The company has published the morning paper and its predecessors in Boston since 1904.

Failure of the money-losing newspaper would have left the city where American journalism was born with just one daily newspaper, The Boston Globe. Forty years ago, Boston had eight daily newspapers.

Under an agreement announced Nov. 17, Murdoch would have purchased the 250,000 daily circulation paper for $1 million and assumed the Herald's liabilities. He would pay an additional $7 million to Hearst if the paper showed a profit.

Gov. Edward J. King telephoned Murdoch earlier Friday to check on the talks and said afterward: "We don't want to see that paper close. The diversity of opinion is good. He (Murdoch) is a good competitor. We'll help him any way we can."

The Herald American was born of the 1972 merger of the staid Herald Traveler and Hearst's tabloid Record American. Hearst has published a newspaper in the city since 1904, when William Randolph Hearst founded the Boston American.

Marines maneuver in Oman

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Marines were to land in oil-rich Oman on Friday for the start of a five-day exercise Oman's leaders wanted kept secret, U.S. government sources said.

The exercise, called Jade Tiger, also involves two B-52 bombers and six U.S. F-15 jet fighters in simulated attacks on an Omani airfield defended by Oman's small air force, they said.

The Defense Department refused to comment, but other government sources provided details on the condition they not be identified further.

As it did a year ago, the sources said, Oman's government insisted on no publicity.

The sources gave these other details:

—Like last year's maneuvers, the new Marine landing involves about 1,000 troops coming ashore from U.S. Navy amphibious ships. The landing was to be covered by the nuclear-powered aircraft carrier Enterprise.

Chronicle puts out joke paper

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) – Local Man Dies In Nuclear Blast? An odd-even peace plan for the West Bank? Pac Man is dead?

At first glance, it looked like the San Francisco Chronicle. But the new paper in town one day last week was actually the San Francisco Comicle: "The Largest Joke In Northern California."

The parody paper printed its first edition a year ago under the direction of "Barely Managing Editor" Jack Caragol. It returned this year in a 24-page special edition replete with alleged news, sports, obituaries, ads, comics and columns.

The Chronicle-like typography was the work of High Meadow Publishing, the Manchester, N.H., company that produced "Not The Boston Globe" and four other newspaper parodies this year.

ASSOCIATE Publisher Dennis R. Jolicoeur said Caragol's crew put together the local news and the High Meadow staff supplied the rest.

A local story began this way:

"A San Francisco man visiting relatives in Los Angeles died late Monday evening following a nuclear explosion that destroyed the building in which he was staying as well as most of the city of Los Angeles."

And then there was the "Disassociated Press" dispatch from Bismarck, N.D., which said Canada had annexed North Dakota. "All of the sudden, everyone had Canadian coins," it quoted a confused city councilman. "Now, none of the damn vending machines work."

The sports section announced that Petaluma — a poultry center north of San Francisco — had been awarded the 1992 Olympics.

THEN THERE were columns by Art Floppe, Andy Looney and Dear Crabby.

Every morning, the real Chronicle runs Herb Caen's column beside an ad for Macy's. The take-off featured Herb Corn and an ad from Mercys, touting its "White Baby Days" sale. A wide selection of babies was available at 50 percent off, it said.

The Comicle had at least one careful reader — William German, the real-life executive editor of the Chronicle.

"I've looked all the way through it and I can't see there's anybody I'd want to hire for us," he concluded. "I just think we're deserving of a sharper, cleverer treatment."

Bailey's theory: Be careful of drunken driving busts

Hearst Feature Service

BOSTON — F. Lee Bailey knew he had a problem when he noticed the shark tattoo on the arm of the arresting officer.

"I mean, really, what man wants to present himself to the world as a shark, the most mindless and vicious of all living creatures?" asks the famous trial lawyer in his new book, "How to Protect Yourself Against Cops in California and Other Strange Places."

It was a valid insight, since Peter Canaan, who arrested Bailey for drunken driving in San Francisco last Feb. 28, had been known to drink on the job and had, according to Bailey, used excess force on allegedy intoxicated persons and traffic violators. And although Bailey was unable to use Canaan's background in court, he was able to prove that he (Bailey) had not been drunk when arrested.

So justice was served, but Bailey is still mad at the false arrest — mad enough to consider federal suit and mad enough to write an 89-page book about the case and about drunken driving laws in the 50 states. Contrary to the book's title, it's not about how to protect yourself against cops in any situation other than false arrest for drunken driving.

"And if you drive drunk, I hope you're thrown in jail," said Bailey, who believes that tough drunken driving laws work. "Detererence works best with non-criminals, and most drunken drivers are not criminals. When you get to capital punishment, of the last five guys to be executed, four of them demanded it. That's not a deterrent."

Bailey's argument is with unfair police practices. "The boys were pulled aside and told to get someone influential. No one of national prominence was arrested for drunk driving in 1981. In the last year, we've had Johny Carson (and they stalked him) myself, Susan Anton, Joe Namath, Dean Martin, Charles Kuralt and Congressman Phil Crane — all but one in California. Joe was arrested in Florida and let go."

Kennedy exit from presidential race shakes things up a bit

By MARIANNE MEANS
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Sen. Edward Kennedy's abrupt exit from the 1984 Democratic presidential contest dramatically transforms the political landscape and creates both new opportunities and problems for the other contenders.

At the same time, Kennedy has made it perfectly plain that this is no last hurrah; there are, in fact, signs that the move could ultimately improve his own chances for the White House in some future race.

Kennedy, 50, who polarized voters in his losing 1980 primary challenge to President Carter, now has a chance to change both his role and his image. Most political experts believe that despite his position high in the polls he would as a candidate have the same difficulty overcoming questions of character and credibility in 1984 which proved fatal in his campaign two years ago. But he has given himself, and the country, a breather, a respite from the Kennedy myth and its permutations.

HE CAN RESOLVE his marital difficulties and his knotty, tumultuous private life in a diminished public glare. Furthermore, if he remains neutral and above the battle in the coming contest, he may be in a position to serve later as a senior statesman, working to heal the wounds of the primary struggle and bring together the party's quarrelsome factions. Instead of being a divisive figure, he could evolve into a unifying one.

He said he intends to remain "extremely active" in politics and his influence on national affairs from his base in the Senate is likely to remain strong. He pointedly did not rule out a presidential race in 1988 or beyond.

Significantly, eight years from now, he will still be younger than Sen. John Glenn is today.

THE IMMEDIATE beneficiary of Kennedy's withdrawal appears to be former

An Analysis

Vice President Walter Mondale, but it also considerably complicates Mondale's situation. Mondale had been running a close second to Kennedy in the popularity polls, but overnight he now becomes the frontrunner. This is not an easy position to sustain for two years, particularly as a candidate who holds no office and thus has no natural forum. Public expectations for him will now be higher, public scrutiny harsher and political pressures more intense.

With Kennedy out of the race, Mondale becomes the instant favorite to win the AFL-CIO endorsement in December, which could bring a candidate formidible money and manpower for a campaign. But it is too early to predict the reaction of Kennedy loyalists among the union leaders, and a delay in the endorsement until the early primaries have provided a popular indication of the competitors' relative standing is possible.

Glenn, who had become comfortably accustomed to running a respectable third in the public opinion polls, is likely now to become Mondale's chief rival. As he himself candidly observed, this has its pluses and minuses. He said, quite correctly, that "being able to watch the fray ahead of you is not to bad a position to be in." Unlike Mondale, Glenn has never before been involved in a national presidential campaign and more time for observation from the sidelines might have been useful. He is now thrust front and center in this one, whether he is ready or not.

Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado also moves forward with Kennedy's departure. As a young, articulate anti-Vietnam liberal, he should be able to attract some of Kennedy's former support, which would promote him from a mere blip in the polls into the major leagues. Hart is likely to make an aggressive pitch for former Kennedy workers and contributors and try to take up the old Kennedy beachhead to the left of Mondale. While liberal, however, his basic political philsophy is quite different in approach and tone from Kennedy's and how successful he will be in this maneuver is open to question.

SEN. ALAN CRANSTON of California is more of a liberal in the Kennedy mold than Hart, and he may pick up some former Kennedy support. Cranston's problem, however, is that he is not regarded as a serious candidate with a realistic chance of winning the nomination. At 68, he is younger than President Reagan, but he does not radiate the aura of youthful vigor and health that Reagan does.

The remaining also-rans, former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew and South Carolina Sen. Ernest Hollings, are helped by Kennedy's withdrawal simply because party workers and voters will have one less other candidate to look at.

Waldensians choose North Carolina because it's like their native land

VALDESE, N.C. (AP) — A small band of Waldensians looking for a place to settle in America a century ago selected the Burke County village of Valdese because of its likeness to their native land in the French-Italian Alps.

In 1893, a group of 15 to 12 Waldensian families fled to America, bringing their religion and culture to the North Carolina mountains. Their influence on the town remains obvious.

Its neat, tree-lined streets have names like St. Germaine, Jaubert and Martinat. Some of the most common names in the telephone book are Garrou, Perrou and Pons — all names of some of the area's first settlers. Grocery stores advertise fresh sautisa, or Italian sausage. The area's only outdoor drama, "From This Day Forward," tells of the story of the Waldensians' struggles.

The roads around the village of Valdese are steep and winding like the trails in the French-Italian Alps. Towering mountains ring the small town in the foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains.

The French-speaking Waldensians, who left Italy to escape religious persecution, used their farming skills to tame the land, constructed sturdy, stone houses for their families and founded the town.

Waldensians were farmers in Europe, but the North Carolina settlers were forced to make their living in industry because the soil around Valdese proved to be poor and rocky. The Garrou family founded the first Waldensian textile mill in 1901. Another Waldensian family started Waldensian Baking Co. in 1915.

Today there are about a dozen Waldensian mills with outlets in Valdese and the bakery is one of the largest in the Southeast.

Valdese has grown into a thriving industrial community of about 3,000 residents. But the several hundred descendants of the Waldensian settlers say they haven't forgotten their heritage.

Valdese celebrated its founding recently with a Waldensian festival, complete with downtown booths offering authentic Italian food and a day-long bocci, or lawn bowling, tournament on the town-square lawn.

"My father and mother were some of the first Waldensians here, and I've lived here all my life. I was born here," said Oscar Pascal, 64, the town's police chief. "All my ties are here. I feel like this area is a part of me and my life."

The Waldensian Presbyterian Church, a gray stucco Romanesque structure built in 1896, dominates one end of Main Street. The Waldensian Museum, with its rare collection of handmade 19th-century clothes, furniture and china, is across the street from the church. The museum is the only one of its kind outside Italy and is a source of pride for the Historic Valdese Foundation.

"We feel very proud of the museum because of its collection of so many rare and beautiful artifacts," said foundation member Catherine Dalmas, 73, whose mother and father came from Italy to Valdese in 1915. "It gives us an opportunity to look back into our past and see how our parents and grandparents lived.

"We have a unique community here, something you will find nowhere else in America," Ms. Dalmas said. "We have a proud heritage and we Waldensians want to keep that heritage alive."

Police have heard it all from speeders

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (AP) — Rotten potatoes or an urgent need to get to a bathroom probably won't make it as excuses for speeding through Cedar Rapids, but a chicken costume just might work.

Police, reminiscing about their favorite tall tales, say they've heard just about every reason that drivers can dream up for speeding.

For example, one woman said she had been holding a cup of tea between her legs. The tea spilled, making her accelerate.

In another case, a man claimed his wooden leg had fallen off, jamming the accelerator.

"The most common, is 'I was speeding because I have to go to the bathroom,'" said Capt. Louis Stepanek of the Cedar Rapids Police Department traffic division.

A few other cases described Tuesday by Stepanek:

—An auxiliary firefighter from a nearby town said he was speeding to Mercy Hospital to see how long it would take, just in case he ever had to drive a patient there.

—Another man said he had just bought a bag of potatoes. He was hurrying to get them home because some were rotten and he wanted to get the rotten ones out so the others wouldn't spoil.

None of those stories worked, Stepanek said. All ended with tickets.

But then there was the "chicken."

One Halloween night, officers pursued a speeding car that failed to pull over. Suddenly, the lights and motor died and the car rolled to the shoulder of the road. Stepanek said the officers found a man in a chicken costume sitting behind the wheel.

"He was on his way to a Halloween party and told the officers he'd gotten his chicken foot wedged in between the brake and accelerator. The only way he could stop the car was to turn off the key and let it roll to a stop," Stepanek explained. "It took both officers pulling to get the chicken foot unwedged."

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, Dec. 4, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Happy Birthday to you, actress Deanna Durbin, tennis pro Marty Riessen, TV host Wink Martindale and actor Jeff Bridges. Love and marriage finally settle down after some pretty rocky times. A power struggle tests your loyalty, but you pass with flying colors. Mate or partner strongly endorses your travel plan. Do not let financial worries slow you down. The business outlook is greatly improved. A partnership makes faster progress than you anticipated. Count your blessings! Extra funds become available to develop a profitable idea. Success swiftly follows. Independent and intellectual, you often see things that others have overlooked. Forge ahead.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Family pressures lead you to alter your plans. Move slowly on a rehabilitation project until you know what funds are available.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Flattery will not do the trick. Your actions are what count with the one you are wooing. A happy rumor turns out to be true.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A romantic scenario becomes complicated. Do not hesitate to accept a last minute invitation. Family disagreements should be brought into the open and settled.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Investigate what is being said about a family member before things get out of hand. A surprise turns out to be a real godsend. Bring distant relatives into the fold.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Mate's absence leaves you a bit sad today. Older relatives understand and try to help. Socialize, but avoid depressing people with a tale of woe.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Some financial planning is advised this weekend. Let all members of the family know exactly where things stand. They need to know how they can improve the situation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Skill proves to be more important than seniority now. And commitment counts big, too. You enjoy spending a weekend surrounded by your loved ones.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Control your temper or you and everyone else will be in for a rough weekend. You have a lot to offer but sometimes get too emotional. Don't spoil things.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A hobby not only is fun but could provide handsome Christmas gifts for special family members. A sports event leaves many of you in a happy mood.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Romance pops up when you least expect it. You reap benefits from your past endeavors. Be clear about what you want from someone. Analyze problems before reaching out for solutions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The next move is up to you where romance is concerned. Affection has been the missing ingredient. Show mate the tenderness you feel.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Praise from the head of the family makes a child feel like a million dollars. Be generous! A family gathering in the kitchen produces some favorite Christmas treats.

"I'll Be Glad To"

When they want an angel food cake for the church bazaar, Mrs. Turner is apt to be asked to bake it. She almost always responds to such requests with a simple, "I'll be glad to."

If you ask people about Mrs. Turner, they will tell you that she is one of the happiest women in town. Yet not so long ago she was feeling pretty sorry for herself. Life seemed such a humdrum affair. As an accomplished musician, she had dreams of the concert stage, but marriage and children had changed all that. Somehow it didn't seem fair!

Then one day, a friend persuaded her to go to church. The sermon happened to be about the ingredients that make a full and happy life. The things the minister said struck home and, the next week, she found herself back in church again. Then several weeks later Mr. Turner went along, and next, the youngsters.

Now Mrs. Turner is still "just a housewife," but is she dissatisfied with her role? Look at her face and see for yourself! It took the Church to show her that she already possessed all the tools needed for fulfillment and happiness, if she would but use them. Now, she does!

Rehearsing for First Christian Church's two-act Christmas play, "Behold the Messiah," are Dan Kerr as Senator Marcus, left, and Jerry Green as Caesar Augustus. The production, written by First Christian's minister, the Rev. Steve Edwards, will begin at 7 p.m. in the sanctuary of First Christian Church, 1301 W. Louisiana Ave. The public is invited to attend.

Play deals with Christmas

"Behold the Messiah" will be presented at First Christian Church, 1301 W. Louisiana Ave., Sunday at 7 p.m.

This two-act play, written by First Christian's minister, the Rev. Steve Edwards, presents some of the major events which shaped the first Christmas. Through Biblical research, the scenes present some of the lesser known, but nonetheless very important facts dealing with the birth of Jesus of Nazareth.

The non-denominational production is staged with the help of members of area churches.

The public is invited to attend.

St. Luke's to be adorned

St. Luke's United Methodist Church will hold its annual "Hanging of the Greens" beginning at 4 p.m. Sunday. The entire church will be decorated by individuals and classes, following the theme, "The Arrival of the Long Expected Birth of Jesus and the Nativity Scene."

A Chrismon (or religious ornament) tree will be placed outside the sanctuary, while a second tree will adorn the fellowship hall. Individuals and families are encouraged to bring a chrismon or a homemade ornament for either tree.

Following the hanging of the Greens, a covered dish dinner will be held in the Fellowship Hall at 5:30 p.m. The dinner will feature a special program and a youth-sponsored "Men's Bake-Off." Everyone is encouraged to bring his favorite covered dish to the dinner.

Proceeds from the "Men's Bake-Off Auction," which is sponsored by the United Methodist Youth of St. Luke's, will go to the Youth Service Fund. All men are eligible, for a $2 registration fee, to enter their cake, which must be made from scratch, in the Bake-Off. Prizes will be awarded for the best-decorated cake and for the cake which auctions for the greatest amount.

The public is invited to attend.

'Living Tree' to perform in Big Spring

BIG SPRING — Due to popular demand, this year's "Living Christmas Tree" performance at First United Methodist Church in Big Spring has been expanded to three nights, Dec. 18-20. Last year people were turned away both nights.

This year's performances are free; however tickets will be issued in an effort to control the crowd size. The church can seat only 1,000 persons each night.

The Living Tree, now in its fourth year, features 85 singers who are stacked on a 35-foot-high tree, which is completely decorated with all the trimmings, including lights. The choir is accompanied by a 35-piece orchestra, 21 of whom are members of the Midland-Odessa Symphony.

Director for the production is Charles Parham, minister of music at the church. This is a community event and singers and behind-the-scenes workers from all denominations participate in the Living Tree.

Performance time is 7:30 p.m. To obtain free tickets, send a self-addressed stamped envelope with a note saying how many tickets are desired and on which date to Living Christmas Tree, First United Methodist Church, P.O. Box 1229, Big Spring, Texas 79720.

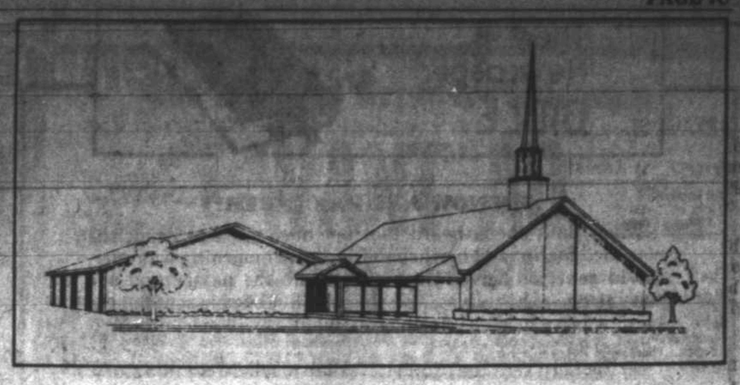
Church changes policy

In 1979, the Church of England said homosexual relationships might be justified and recommended that homosexuals not be barred from the priesthood.



This is a drawing of the proposed first building of Northwestern Baptist Church, which is currently meeting at Goddard Junior High School. Groundbreaking for the structure will be held Sunday at 2:30 p.m. at the proposed site, Mockingbird Lane between Midkiff Road and Midland Drive.

Northwestern Baptist breaks ground for future church site

Groundbreaking for the first building of Northwestern Baptist Church will be at 2:30 p.m. Sunday at the church's future site, Mockingbird Lane between Midkiff Road and Midland Drive.

The first building, designed to accommodate 250 people, will ultimately be a part of a church complex designed to accommodate 800 people.

Featured speaker for the ground breaking is Dr. Presnall Wood, editor of the Baptist Standard.

Northwestern Baptist Church is a mission of Crestview Baptist Church. The church began meeting in May 1981. Church membership at that time was 29 with a Sunday School enrollment of 37. Current membership is 116 with a Sunday School enrollment of 128.

The church, which is presently meeting at Goddard Junior High School, has services each Sunday at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. with Bible study for all ages at 9:45 a.m. Northwestern holds a weekly prayer meeting Wednesday at 7 p.m.

Mormons reorganize council

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Mormon Church President Spencer W. Kimball has announced a reorganization of the church's policy-making council because of the death of N. Eldon Tanner, a counselor to four church presidents.

Kimball, 87, named Marion G. Romney as his first counselor and Gordon B. Hinckley second counselor in the ruling body, called the First Presidency, church spokesman Don LeFevre said Thursday.

Tanner died Saturday of cardiac arrest at age 84. At his death he was first counselor to Kimball and Romney was second counselor. Hinckley was added as a counselor in July 1981.

The First Presidency of the 5 million-member Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has had three members — the president and two counselors — for most of the Mormons' 152-year history.

The church president determines how many counselors he wants on the policy-making body, which church members believe has authority in spiritual and wordly affairs.

Evangelist for the services will be the church's minister, the Rev. L.L. Martin. The public is invited to attend.

Baptist deplores 'religious ghetto'

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A Southern Baptist professor says some pastors use "religious ghetto" language which "ignores the existence of millions of people for whom words like 'grace,' 'born again' and 'faith' have no meaning."

Urging preachers to find new ways of communicating the Gospel to persons outside the faith, the Rev. Raymond Bailey of Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, says:

"Ninety-five percent of what the high-powered TV preachers say can only be understood by people reared in the church. And that's tragic."

For The Children...

The Bible tells us that as Jesus grew into young manhood, he "increased in wisdom stature, and in favor with God and man." At Fannin Terrace Baptist Church we're dedicated to giving children, from infancy through teen years, a firm spiritual foundation on which they too can grow "in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man".

That dedication is evident each Sunday morning in children's classrooms buzzing with activity or in the peaceful infant nursery, where the newest additions to Fannin Terrace are already learning about God's love.

We invite you to bring your family to worship and grow with us.

SIN NOW AND PAY LATER!

When Bath-sheba heard that her husband was dead, she mourned for him; then, when the period of mourning was over, David sent for her and brought her to the palace and she became one of his wives; and she gave birth to his son. But the Lord was very displeased with what David had done. (II Samuel 11:26-27)

So the Lord sent the prophet Nathan to tell David this story: "There were two men in a certain city, one very rich, owning many flocks of sheep and herds of goats; and the other very poor, owning nothing but a little lamb he had managed to buy. It was his children's pet and he fed it from his own plate and let it drink from his own cup; he cuddled it in his arms like a baby daughter. Recently a guest arrived at the home of the rich man. But instead of killing a lamb from his own flocks for food for the traveler, he took the poor man's lamb and roasted it and served it."

David was furious. "I swear by the living God," he vowed, "any man who would do a thing like that should be put to death; he shall repay four lambs to the poor man for the one he stole, and for having no pity."

Then Nathan said to David, "You are that rich man! The Lord God of Israel says, You have murdered Uriah and stolen his wife. Therefore murder shall be a constant threat in your family from this time on, because you have insulted me by taking Uriah's wife." (II Samuel 12:1-7, 10)

Tower bridge reopens after 72 years

LONDON (AP) — Tower Bridge, the sturdy landmark over the Thames, has reopened for the first time in 72 years in a celebration of Victorian durability and eccentricity.

"It's London's Eiffel Tower," said John Fielding, tourist manager for the famous drawbridge built in 1894.

"There's nothing quite like it in the world. Certainly there are bigger and more splendid bridges, but this is unique, the most instantly recognizable," he said.

The public has not been allowed to climb the twin five-story, fairy-castle towers of the bridge, or to cross the pedestrian walkway suspended between them 140 feet above the River Thames, since the towers were closed in 1910.

"Pedestrians soon found it was too much effort to climb up those stairs when the drawbridge was open, especially since the bridge mechanism can open and close in under six minutes," said Fielding, explaining that long-ago decision.

"The walkways became a haven for derelicts, so they were closed to the public and only reopened with the renovation completed last June 30."

Now the walkways and the floor below in both towers are thronged by tourists who come for the view, and to see exhibits about the bridge's history, including its still operational original lifting mechanism.

Fielding said 2,000 to 3,000 people a day are visiting the reopened towers. A visit costs 1.60 pounds ($2.70) for adults and 80 pence ($1.30) for children.

The bridge had a mixed reception when it first opened on June 30, 1894. The London Times called it "one of the structural triumphs of this age of steel," but a trade journal, The Builder, dismissed the ornately carved and turreted German High Gothic towers as "elaborate and costly make-believe."

Tower Bridge, structurally unaltered since the days when its users trotted over by horse-and-carriage, remains a vital part of the capital's traffic system, carrying more than 20,000 Londoners to work every day.

However, river traffic has fallen considerably since commercial ships are now too big to use the up-river London docks. An average of three ships a week pass under the gateway to the Thames, compared with more than 100 in the 1920s, Fielding said.

Until 1976, the old hydraulic engines, provided with pressurized water by steam-powered compressors, tilted the bridge's twin 1,200-pound bascules, the counterbalanced road sections hinged to the towers 40 feet above the water.

Then economic necessity dictated the replacement of steam by electric power and the installation of new hydraulic engines next to the old machinery, which still works, said Fielding.

Arizona university sets up math hotline

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — For people with math problems, Arizona State University has their number.

The Tempe school's math department, frequently asked to help students and others with questions about math, has set up a hotline to handle the inquiries.

The hotline went into operation Monday and didn't get any calls for the first three days, but administrative assistant Cindy Ryan said she expects questions to pick up soon.

The department has been asked a wide variety of questions over the years, she said.

Religious fundamentalists tired of being ridiculed

By JOHN DART
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

A recurring theme in the drive of religious conservatives for ascendancy in America is their resentment of ridicule.

The Rev. Jerry Falwell and a host of lesser-known fundamentalists say that they are tired of being mocked as narrow-minded, self-righteous or intellectually dull.

Conservative Christians, including those who do not call themselves fundamentalists, say that their views on abortion, school prayer, creationism and pornography are not given due respect — and in fact tend to be laughed at in the media and academia.

Now such ridicule has been called the "real issue" for conservatives in the embattled Southern Baptist Convention by the denomination's president, the Rev. Jimmy T. Draper, himself a conservative.

"Biblical inerrancy" is usually said to be the chief concern of Southern Baptist conservatives — whether seminary teachers and Southern Baptist administrators profess loyalty to an error-free Bible.

But Draper said in a recent interview that the real "nitty-gritty" issue of the ongoing dispute is the treatment that the ardently conservative views receive in denominational schools, literature and programs.

"THEY ALWAYS ACCEPT our money," Draper said, "but how can we who are faithful supporters of the mission program have our views not ridiculed or ignored but expressed fairly?"

Draper, pastor of a church in Euless, Texas, which gave $200,000 to the Southern Baptist cooperative programs this year, has tried to be a peacemaker among warring factions of "moderates" and "ultraconservatives." He presided over what he called a cordial, though inconclusive, meeting of the factions Nov. 12 near Dallas before going to Riverside, Calif., recently for the pastors' conference preceding the California Southern Baptist General Convention.

Though he has vowed to make committee appointments of apolitical conservatives in an effort to defuse the infighting, Draper nevertheless is a theological conservative who identifies with the resentment felt by like-minded pastors and lay people.

Asked what he means by ridicule, Draper said, "Conservative people are often characterized as being stupid when in reality the conservative viewpoint is well represented with some excellent scholars...

"THAT IS A THORN in our flesh. I don't want my view forced on anybody; I just don't want it ridiculed. I think it's intellectually feasible as any other view. As a matter of fact, I think it's more so," Draper said.

A leading moderate Southern Baptist, the Rev. Kenneth Chafin of Houston, disagreed with Draper's description of the conservatives' situation.

"They want their ideas to be respected, but the problem is they've got a bunch of ideas that are not respect able," the pastor said.

Chafin specifically mentioned fundamentalist ideas about "creation science" and "last days" apocalyptic scenarios.

Chafin said that at the Nov. 12 meeting of Southern Baptist factions, the Rev. Paige Patterson, a leading ultraconservative strategist, complained that during all the years he spent in seminary his ideas were spoofed.

Many prominent Southern Baptist conservatives, Chafin claimed, suffer from "a deep-rooted personal insecurity." When they are exposed to a new idea, he said, "it does not just challenge their minds, it challenges their persons." He said they favor indoctrination more than education.

Does ridicule have any place in church circles?

TASTELESS OR QUESTIONABLE evangelistic ploys have been satirized for more than 10 years by the evangelical magazine Wittenburg Door published in El Cajon, Calif. Editor Mike Yaconelli said that "good satire hits home," and the magazine has outraged its share of Christians.

When non-believers scoff, they are sometimes seen by fundamentalists as scoffing at God's laws. The fundamentalists respond by quoting the Apostle Paul: "Be not deceived, God is not mocked."

Few non-believers today are as scornful as philosopher Friederich Nietzsche was in the late 19th century, when he said "resentment" by Christians toward the external world ran so deep as to be "submerged hatred, the vengefulness of the impotent."

Slurs and unfair characterization of ardently conservative Protestants are not being handled by any evangelical-fundamentalist equivalent of the Jewish Anti-Defamation League or the Catholic League for Civil and Religious Rights. No such agency exists to combat bias and, in the process, provide a steam valve for angered Protestants.

Draper and other Southern Baptist conservatives frequently contend that they want only balance and fair representation of their views at seminary and denominational administrative levels.

CHAFIN, HOWEVER, contended that the conservatives will not settle for balance. "When they're strong they will eliminate every other voice," he said.

The minister said he is taking himself out of the fray, however. He startled some Southern Baptists last week when he said that he will end his organized efforts to oppose "the fundamentalist takeover" unless seminary and administrative leaders "recognize the real problem and begin to defend themselves."

Chafin predicted that if the inerrancy faction gains operational control of the denomination, they will make the seminaries "so unattractive that any kid with a brain would have to consider going somewhere else to get a theological education."

A former evangelism professor at two Southern Baptist seminaries, Chafin said that he has decided to tend strictly to his own ministry in 1983 and not to attend the June convention in Pittsburgh.

Another moderate leader, the Rev. Cecil Sherman of North Carolina, has also said that he may "sit out" the 1983 convention.

Japanese have highest intelligence

LONDON (AP) — The Japanese, who are credited with having the most productive economy in the world, have the highest intelligence quotient to match, according to International Management magazine.

Japanese born up to 1950 have average IQ test scores of about 104 compared with the average American and European score of 100, according to an article in the December issue by Professor Richard Lynn, chairman of the psychology department at the New University of Ulster in Northern Ireland.

Generations born after 1950 have scored successively higher, averaging 111, he said.

No cause for Japan's high intelligence was specifically identified by Lynn, but he suggested cultural emphasis on hard work and education and the high academic standards of Japan's system were important contributing factors.

Nations asked to aid Lebanese

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanon on Friday asked Brazil, Portugal and Colombia to contribute troops to the multinational peacekeeping force following an "urgent appeal" for U.S. intervention to ensure an Israeli pullback from Lebanon's central mountains.

U.S. Marines brought six 155mm howitzers ashore from 6th Fleet ships anchored off Beirut, and there were unconfirmed reports the Americans might train special Lebanese units who could be deployed in the embattled mountains.

"We are bringing the guns ashore so we can practice and maintain our proficiency," Marine spokesman Capt. Dale Dye said. "You can't train artillerymen when weapons are aboard ship. In no way does this represent any change or escalation."

LEBANON'S STATE radio said Foreign Minister Elie Salem called in the Brazilian, Portuguese and Colombian ambassadors and requested up to 2,000 troops from each of the three countries.

The Brazilian Foreign Ministry in Brasilia said later Friday, however, that its Beirut embassy received no requests for troops to join the peacekeeping force. Ministry spokesman Bernardo Pericas said such a request was made "some time ago" but it had not been renewed recently.

"There is no possibility that Brazil will send troops to help the international peacekeeping force in Lebanon," Pericas said.

President Amin Gemayel already has asked the United States, France and Italy, original contributors to the 4,000-member peace force in Beirut, to enlarge their contingents.

President Reagan declared during his visit to Brazil that he was considering the Lebanese request. Italy also has said it was studying the request.

Pericas denied Friday that Reagan and Brazil President Joao Figueiredo discussed the possibility of sending Brazilian troops to Lebanon.

FRANCE SENT Defense Minister Charles Hernu to Beirut to discuss Lebanon's needs, and he said after a meeting Friday with Defense Minister Issam Khoury, "For the moment, only those (French peacekeepers) who are here will be here. We are not going to talk about it."

The drive to enlarge the peacekeeping force was designed to spread state authority over more Lebanese territory, stop five weeks of sectarian fighting in the Israeli-occupied central mountains and help ensure a withdrawal of Israeli, Syrian and Palestinian forces from Lebanon, the state radio said.

Israel invaded Lebanon June 6 to smash the Palestine Liberation Organization, and thousands of guerrillas were evacuated from west Beirut in August. But thousands more remain behind Syrian lines in northern and eastern Lebanon.

Syria has had up to 30,000 troops in Lebanon for six years, ostensibly to police the armistice that ended the 1975-76 Moslem-Christian civil war. Israel says it will discuss a simultaneous pullout of the Syrians and Israelis only after the remaining PLO guerrillas leave.

Gemayel's appeal for U.S. intervention on Thursday was prompted by a fresh outbreak of sectarian fighting between rightist Christian militiamen and leftist Druse Moslem warriors in the Chouf mountains southeast of Beirut.

THE RIGHTIST "VOICE of Lebanon" radio station reported six people were killed Friday in Druse-Christian fighting in the mountain village of Brih and adjacent hamlets, 12 miles southeast of Beirut. Police had no immediate comment on the report.

Political leaders and military commanders from both factions met with Gemayel Thursday night and pledged support for his appeal to Reagan to put more pressure on Israel to pull out of the troubled areas.

Lebanon's radio stations said the conferees also backed Gemayel's contention that an Israeli pullback was the only way to bring an end to the five-week-old sectarian strife that has claimed nearly 90 lives so far.

Gemayel then ordered the immediate formation of a special Lebanese "deterrent force" made up of three battalions of police backed by army commandos for a possible entry to the central mountains, the radios said.

The broadcasts said units from the multinational force might be attached to the deterrent force. But the broadcasts did not elaborate, and government spokesmen declined comment.

Diplomatic sources who refused to be identified said the deterrent force might receive training from the U.S. Marines serving with the peace force.

Charges against gynecologist dismissed by Dade County judge

MIAMI (AP) — A judge has dismissed manslaughter and battery charges against a gynecologist who performed an abortion on a 12-year-old girl after 28 weeks of pregnancy.

But Dade Circuit Judge Joseph P. Farina, in his ruling Thursday, let stand a charge of unlawful termination of pregnancy against Dr. Egar Gonzalez.

"The fetus involved in this case was not born alive," Farina wrote in his opinion. In Florida, he said, the death of a fetus is not homicide unless the child is born alive and then dies as a result of prior injuries.

Prosecutors David Waksman and Tony Musto had accused Gonzalez in August of manslaughter for killing the fetus, of aggravated battery for touching the would-be mother with a "dangerous weapon" — a surgical instrument — without her consent and with violating state law by performing the abortion so late in the pregnancy.

Two other physicians had refused to perform the 1981 abortion before the girl and her mother went to Gonzalez, according to court files. He was paid $1,000.

Prosecutors said the girl almost died during the operation. She lost consciousness, her blood pressure dropped and she had no pulse.

Gonzalez called the Miami Fire Department, and doctors at South Miami Hospital removed her uterus and part of her large intestine. They also removed a fetus weighing more than two pounds.

Farina deliberated for nearly six weeks before issuing a seven-page opinion. In upholding the state's abortion statute, he rejected Gonzalez's argument that state law conflicts with U.S. Supreme Court decisions on abortions.

Gonzalez had argued that the high court has made the viability of the fetus the key to whether an abortion is legal, but that state law simply outlaws abortions in the final trimester of pregnancy.

Farina, however, ruled that "trimester is a term of convenience," and said state law is consistent with federal court findings.

In dismissing the aggravated battery charges, the judge noted that both the girl and her mother signed consent forms that warned of possible injury, perforation of the uterus and internal injuries.

Defense attorney Seymour Gaer said the ruling is "good and bad. I thought all the charges would be dismissed."

Waksman said that "at first impression, the ruling is somewhat disappointing. We think a viable fetus in Florida is a human being."

If prosecutors do not appeal dismissal of the two charges, Gonzalez will go to trial Jan. 31 on the illegal abortion charge, facing a maximum sentence of five years. The miniumum sentence for manslaughter is 15 years.

Barney Clark off respirator

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Doctors on Friday removed the respirator from Barney Clark, the world's first recipient of a permanent artificial heart, and the retired dentist immediately asked in a hoarse voice for a glass of water.

"Dr. Clark's endotrachial tube is out. He is now able to speak," Dr. Chase Peterson said at a news conference Friday at the University of Utah.

He said Clark's first request was for a drink and "he is sipping a little bit of water."

Clark, from Federal Way, Wash., became the first recipient of the University of Utah's permanent Jarvik-7 artificial heart in a seven-hour operation that began late Wednesday night.

THE TUBE CONNECTED to the respirator was taken out of Clark's throat at 1:40 p.m., CST. He was given no anesthetic for the procedure, Peterson said. He said Clark was hoarse and continued to wear an oxygen mask which contained a humidifying device.

Earlier Friday, Peterson said Clark's heart was pulsating at 85 beats per minute, a rate set by his doctors.

"Dr. Clark is continuing to do very well," said Peterson, vice president for health services at the university. "He's critical with no complications."

Before the tube was removed, Clark indicated to nurses, by tracing with his fingers, that he was thirsty. But since he was being fed intravenously, he was not allowed to have any water when he traced out the letters HO, meaning H-2-0 for water, Peterson said.

Fluid in Clark's body, caused by the cardiomyopathy from which he suffered before his diseased heart was removed, was continuing to drain and he had lost about 2.3 pounds, Peterson said.

"HE'S GONE FROM a man who was blue prior to surgery to pink," Peterson said. "He's alert...He's moving all extremities."

Clark's blood pressure Friday was 129 over 64, Peterson said. Before surgery it was a very weak 85 over 40.

Peterson said doctors chose a pulse rate of 85 beats per minute. "It was a result of moving it up and down and seeing what it does to the blood pressure," he said.

Clark's temperature, at 98.2, was considered within the normal range, Peterson said.

His heart was pumping seven liters per minute, a normal amount for a man his size — more than 6 feet tall and weighing 225 pounds. Before surgery his heart was pumping a single liter per minute.

He has experienced no blood-clotting, bleeding or complications which doctors had feared would occur because of the cardiomyopathy, Peterson said.

"We worried about the clotting process, but apparently there was no damage to the red blood cells," he said. "All the things we worried about have not happened. There's nothing that we need to look for new, beyond just regaining strength. All he needs to do is heal."

AMONG POSSIBLE complications are infection, which could occur until healing of the incisions made during surgery.

Gorsuch threatened with second citation

WASHINGTON (AP) — A second House panel trying to wrest documents from Environmental Protection Agency chief Anne Gorsuch complained Friday that the Reagan administration is invoking "sweeping and unjustified assertions" of executive privilege.

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce investigations subcommittee, threatened to slap Mrs. Gorsuch with another contempt of Congress citation if the documents, relating to EPA's toxic waste cleanup program, are not turned over.

Mrs. Gorsuch was hit with a contempt citation just a day earlier by a House Public Works subcommittee also seeking documents relating to administration of the agency's $1.6 million "Superfund."

"The full extent of the contempt process will be carried to its final conclusion," Dingell told EPA chief counsel Robert Perry, "and I have advised people under subpoena that I will have the pleasure of visiting the individual involved in the appropriate jailhouse."

Ms. Gorsuch told that panel she was acting under direct instructions of President Reagan and that the documents were "enforcement sensitive," meaning that to release them would harm the government's legal position in pending cleanup cases.

Perry reiterated that the "enforcement sensitive" category would be invoked only "in a very narrow range" of cases where disclosure would, for example, give away the government's bottom-line settlement figure in a case, or reveal names of confidential witnesses.

But subcommittee members attacked that defense, saying it amounted to a new scheme for the executive branch to hide embarrassing or incriminating evidence.

"I think this new doctrine is just ridiculous," said Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore. "It will probably go down in the voodoo hall of fame as another mistake of this administration."

Rep. Bob Whittaker, R-Kan., also was skeptical. "I will defend a legitimate assertion of executive privilege," he said, but added, "I am not convinced that all truth rests solely in the executive branch of this government."

The papers sought by Dingell's subcommittee include at least 51 documents — possibly more — regarding EPA activities at the toxic Stringfellow acid pits near Riverside, Calif., the huge underground deposit of acidic water in mines near Tar Creek in northeastern Oklahoma, and where pesticide byproducts are contaminating water at the Berlin and Farro site in Michigan.

It was disclosed at Friday's hearing that the subcommittee is investigating an allegation of wrongdoing by an EPA official, which sources confirmed involves the Stringfellow site in California. The sources, speaking on condition they not be identified, said the allegation was "serious" and involved activity which could have jeopardized public health.

The documents have been subpoenaed, and Mrs. Gorsuch is scheduled to appear before the subcommittee Dec. 14. If, as expected, she invokes executive privilege, the subcommittee could follow with a contempt of Congress citation.

The 1st year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 8 3/8% loan to value interest will be charged at a rate of 12 3/8% for the 1st 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be charged at the most recent 6 months Treasury Bill rate plus 4.50%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payment 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period the graduation in payment will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.50%. The 7 1/2% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principle exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE APPROXIMATELY 12.879%. *Principle and Interest only is calculated in monthly payments.
