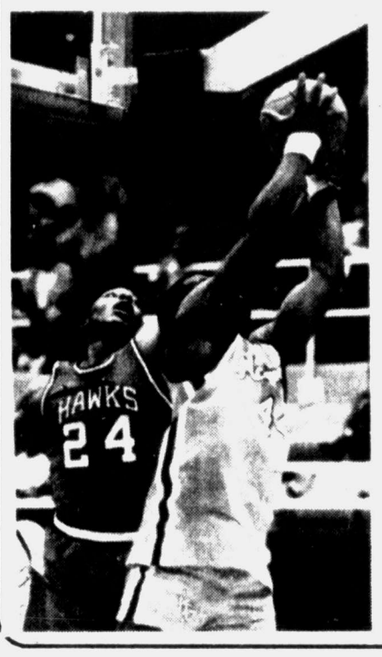
Odessa, McLennan square off in final

Defending champion Odessa College found its way back to the men's Region V Tournament championship game here Friday night as the Wranglers outlasted South Plains College 72-67 in one of two exciting semifinal basketball tilts at Scurry County Coliseum.



The Wranglers were to square off with McLennan Community College of Waco at 7 p.m. Saturday for the regional crown and a trip to the men's national tourney in Hutchinson, Kan.

McLennan clipped Howard College on Friday, 89-88, in the other semifinal game.

Earlier in the week, South Plains College defeated Howard 48-45 to win the women's Region V championship. The women's nationals are held in Tyler.

Tickets for Saturday's title match were $5 each at the gate.

863 cast absentee ballots for Tuesday's primaries

Over 850 county residents chose the absentee method to vote in the Tuesday, March 13, statewide primary elections, the county clerk's office reported Friday evening.

Friday was the deadline to cast ballots by the absentee method.

According to the clerk's office, 713 voters cast Democratic ballots while 150 voted Republican.

Tuesday, polls open from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m. There will be only one polling location — the West Fire Station on El Paso Ave. — for those voting in the Republican primary.

Privileges okayed for physician here

Cogdell Memorial Hospital board members Friday approved medical staff privileges for the new obstetrician-gynecologist who is arriving here this week and laid plans to meet a prospective new family practitioner Saturday morning.

Administrator Thomas R. Hochwalt said Dr. Mario Ochoa, formerly of El Paso, has bought a home in Snyder and his wife has been here in recent days to prepare his office, in Dr. Carl Dillaha's former office area in the Medical Arts Building.

Hochwalt said Ochoa will be here Monday and will probably open his practice within a week after that. The administrator said there have been numerous inquiries from prospective patients about Dr. Ochoa since the hospital announced recently that he had agreed to join its staff.

A general practitioner from East Texas was scheduled to visit Snyder Saturday, and Hochwalt said the possibility of his coming here appears to be good, although there will be some competition with other hospitals who want his services.

Hochwalt said the GP's references "have been excellent" and that he is completing his residency in July.

Other business in the 1½-hour noon meeting included a brief

Rain nears 1½ inches

Snyder picked up almost an inch and a half of rainfall through 11:30 a.m. Saturday, and more was forecast for the remainder of the weekend.

Reports from the Snyder Water Pump and Filter Plant indicated 1.38 inches locally, for the rain, which began early Saturday morning. Reports from the surrounding area varied from .80 of an inch near Fluvanna to 1.4 inches west of town at mid-morning.

Forecasts called for a 60 percent chance of precipitation Saturday, with a few severe thunderstorms possible. Winds were expected to be from 10 to 20 miles per hour.

Sunday, winds are expected to

Snyder district to celebrate Texas Public Schools Week

Snyder Independent School District will be celebrating Texas Public Schools Week through Friday, beginning with open house at all six elementaries from 7 p.m. until 8 p.m. Monday.

The statewide theme for the observance this year is "Texas Schools: Building Brighter Futures." Many districts celebrated Public Schools Week last week. The Snyder district is holding activities this week because students were involved in achievement tests last week.

At open house Monday, parents are invited to their child's elementary campus to view examples of their work and visit with their child's teacher.

Again this year, citizenship and academic achievement awards will be presented by Snyder Masonic Lodge. These will be given out all week to elementary and junior high-age students.

Throughout the week, parents are invited to join their child for lunch. For elementary-age youngsters, parents of first and fourth graders are invited to each elementary campus on Monday. On Tuesday, parents of second and fifth graders are invited. Parents of third and sixth graders are welcome Wednesday and parents of pre-kindergarten and kindergarten students are invited on Thursday.

Adults are requested to call their child's school if they are planning to eat lunch.

Parents of junior high students are invited to attend classes Tuesday and are asked to register in the office upon arrival to the building. On Wednesday, a short assembly will be held on the patio at 8:25 a.m. for the Masonic Lodge presentation.

Also Wednesday, junior high parents are invited to eat lunch with their student. They are also asked to call the school office first.

Parents of high school students are encouraged to visit the SHS campus and to eat in the cafeteria Monday, Tuesday or

Wheels swap meet to begin Thursday

Snyder Wheels Car Club is sponsoring its fifth annual swap meet Friday through Sunday, March 16, 17 and 18, at the county coliseum annex.

The club hopes to draw from 300 to 400 people to the meet, which will feature cars and car parts for sale.

Anyone may set up a flea market-style booth at the event and sell cars, car parts or household items. The club requests that no clothing be sold, however.

Booths will be available inside and outside of the annex. Booths rent for $10 outside, $12 under the cover and $15 inside.

Anyone desiring to rent a booth should go to the motor home which will be located at the annex entrance prior to and during the event. They may also contact Art Feinsod, swap meet director, at 573-4203 after 7 p.m.

Feinsod said over 50 booths have already been reserved for the three-day event which will begin at 8 a.m. Friday and 7 a.m. Saturday and Sunday. Admission is free.

Open house to commemorate Snyder National's 85th year

An all-day open house to commemorate the 85th anniversary of Snyder National Bank is scheduled Tuesday in the bank's lobby.

Joe Jackson, the bank's 10th president, said the public is invited to join the bank's officers, directors and staff in celebrating this milestone. The reception will be held from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Founded in 1905, Snyder National Bank was the outgrowth of The Snyder Bank, the first bank in Scurry County. The Snyder Bank was a private institution founded in 1890 by F.J. Grayum and associates.

Purchasers of the private bank and nationalizers of Snyder National Bank were W.A. Fuller and associates. Fuller became the first president of Snyder National and was later succeeded by his son, Marshall A. Fuller.

F.J. Grayum was the first cashier of Snyder National and O.P. Thrane was assistant cashier, The bank, originally on the south side of the square, was moved to the west side in 1905. In 1916, the bank moved to a new building on the northwest corner of the square.

On April 15, 1957, Snyder National moved to its present location at 1712 25th. The banking facility was expanded in 1980, and additional remodeling was accomplished i. 1989.

On March 13, 1905, opening day deposits totaled $30,889.30. Snyder National currently has deposits of $67.7 million and assets of $79 million.

Those who have served as president of Snyder National include W.A. Fuller (1905-16), P.L. Fuller (1916-24), M.A. Fuller (1924-39), A.D. Erwin (1939-49), W.M. Fuller (1949-53), A.C. Alexander (1953-57).

Roger B. Mize served two terms as president, 1957-70 and from 1974 until his death in January, 1987. E.W. Schrader served from 1970-74.

Rex Robinson served as president from 1987-89 and Joe Jackson has served as president

The SDN Column

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "The best time for a man's ship to come in is before he's too old to navigate."

Snyder National Bank, established in 1905, is one of the oldest businesses in Scurry County. There's a lot of history behind SNB which has seen the area evolve from a range where buffalo hunters roamed, to cattle, to farming, to petroleum production.

Banking has also evolved from the days when all records were handwritten in big ledger books. Today, banks are part of the computer age, highly regulated and security conscious.

Looking back into some old files pertaining to Snyder National for its 85th anniversary, one incident may have been forgotten. Because of security, only a handful knew about it in 1916.

It was that year that the bank moved from its original location near the southwest corner of the square to its second location on the northwest of the square.

A worker for the transfer company, hired to move the bank's furniture and fixtures, said the bank vault was loaded onto a dray wagon to be hauled up the dirt street to the new building.

Because of a hard downpour, the vault did not arrive in time to be unloaded before dark. The vault was covered with a wagon-sheet and left on the wagon overnight--without even being guarded.

The next morning, bank cashier O.P. Thrane, opened the safe and took out enough money to open the bank for business in its new location while workers continued to work in the mud to get the vault inside its new quarters.

Ask Us

Q—Is the new Ivie Reservoir bigger than Lake J.B. Thomas or smaller?

A—Officials expect it to take 4½ years to fill, but O.H. Ivie Reservoir is well over twice as big, capable of 554,340 acre feet of water as compared to 204,00 for Thomas.

In Brief

Site to move

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union will cut back on underground nuclear testing and move the site for the explosions from Asia to an island inside the Arctic Circle, says a report published today.

The move to the Arctic location will force the Soviets to conduct fewer tests and will hamper development of weapons that could be used against the United States.

Local

Commissioners

County commissioners Monday will consider bids to lease and operate Towle Park Pool this summer.

Other business in the 10 a.m. meeting will include consideration of a contract between the Snyder-Scurry Health Unit and Big Spring State Hospital.

An appointment to the Child Welfare Board that had been overlooked in the annual January board appointments will be discussed, and a proposal will be made for the county to advertise for bids for seal-coating rock for all four precincts.

College board

Western Texas College board of trustees will hold its March meeting at 5:45 p.m. Monday in the college board room.

Consideration of expenses for a Golf/Landscape Technology trip to Fort Collins, Colo., for the Association of Landscape Contractors of America Field Days competition will be on the agenda, as well as approval of board minutes and a financial information report.

Monthly shoot

Snyder Bowhunters Association will hold its monthly club shoot Sunday at 2 p.m. at the club's outdoor range.

Reef workers

Workers are needed for the Canyon Reef Relays high school track and field meet, to be held March 17 at Tiger Stadium.

Anyone interested in helping is asked to contact Joe Granato at 573-8528 or 573-3129.

Weather

Snyder Temperatures: High Friday, 76 degrees; low, 57 degrees; reading at 7 a.m. Saturday, 57 degrees; .58 of an inch precipitation; total precipitation for 1990 to date, 3.63 inches.

Snyder Area Forecast: Saturday night, a 60 percent chance of thunderstorms with locally heavy rain. A few thunderstorms possibly severe. Low in the upper 50s. South to southeast wind 10 to 20 mph and gusty. Sunday — Windy with a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms. High in the mid 70s. South to southwest wind increasing to 20 to 30 mph and gusty by midday. A lake wind advisory will be required.

Appeals court candidate addresses WTC audience

State judge candidate Pat Barber spoke to Western Texas College political science students Thursday night on the WTC campus.

Barber is running in Place Three on the Democratic ticket for a seat on the state Court of Criminal Appeals. Along with the Texas Supreme Court, these two make up the highest courts in the state.

A Colorado City native, Barber spoke to the group about the state judicial process and his campaign.

Barber told the audience that he,"believes in the freedom and dignity of every individual." He also believes that the government should protect citizens while at the same time balance the over reaching power of the same government. "It's a difficult balance," the Democrat said.

The Court of Criminal Appeals hears criminal cases whereas the Supreme Court hears only civil cases. However, this is not the only thing that separates these courts according to Barber.

"The difference is money," he said. He explained that while he will only spend approximatly $10,000 on his campaign, a candidate for the Supreme Court may spend as much as $1,000,000.

Barber said that because the Supreme Court deals in civil law, often with big settlements involved, these candidates have an easier time raising money.

At the conclusion of his speech, he answered questions from the audience. The appearance was arranged by WTC political science instructor Jimmie McGee.

State wants to keep home open

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Department of Human Services plans to ask the federal government for a higher Medicaid rate that could keep the state's only nursing home for disabled children open.

The Truman W. Smith Children's Care Center, an East Texas nursing home that cares for 103 mentally retarded and physically disabled children, is scheduled to close April 1 because of financial troubles.

The home in Gladewater, near Tyler, is believed to be the only one of the 1,092 nursing homes in Texas that is run exclusively for children.

It operates on Medicaid payments, but is losing $50,000 a month, according to Truco Properties, which owns 10 nursing homes in Texas.

At present, nursing homes in Texas that care for Medicaid-eligible children receive federal payments designed to cover the care of geriatric residents, officials said. There is no additional Medicaid payment for children with special medical needs, officials said.

Stormie released

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh has released transplant patient Stormie Jones almost three weeks after she received her second liver.

Stormie, the world's first and longest surviving heart-liver transplant recipient, was discharged Friday. The 12-year-old Texas girl will remain in Pittsburgh for about two weeks to receive out-patient treatment, spokeswoman Lynn McMahon said.

Stormie received her second liver transplant Feb. 20 in a 10-hour operation, Ms. McMahon said. The girl first underwent transplant surgery in 1984 when she was given a liver and heart.

In a meeting Thursday with reporters, the sixth-grader said she would like to return home to the Fort Worth suburb of White Settlement within a month.

County Judge

A good leader is willing to listen, understand the issues, then take Action...! The recent audit found Scurry County's budget planning to be lacking in Focus and Leadership.... A county budget should represent the foundation for Future Operations... Our Focus should be placed on the Principles of Planning, Control, Documentation and Accountability.

I haven't made Any Campaign Promises, because I don't plan to make Any Decisions until I have Listened to your Ideas and concerns... The Budgetary needs of the County can only be determined by the necessity for Priority Spending in the future... Instead of our Current "Find the Money"...Mentality!

Vince and Ninette Arena announce the birth of their daughter, Melissa Blake, born March 9, at St. Mary of the Plains Hospital in Lubbock.

Grandparents are John and Carolyn Green of Snyder, Judy Davis of Arandville, La. and Vincent Arena of Beaumont, Tx.

Mailboxes vandalized

Sheriff's deputies are investigating the destruction of more than a dozen mailboxes between Round Top Acres and Ira.

Bubba Dennis notified the sheriff's office at 7:15 a.m. Friday that numerous mailboxes were down along Round Top Rd., south of Snyder, and two deputies went to the area and reported that they had found 13 damaged mailboxes.

Peggy Dodds of Rt. 3, in the same area, reported at 7:50 a.m. Friday that a mailbox had been vandalized near her home.

In another case being investigated by the sheriff's office, Bobby Haddox of Nettles Electric at Ira reported at 8:48 a.m. Friday that some service disconnection wires had been stolen.

Leon Torres of Rt. 3 told deputies at 1 p.m. Friday that some juveniles had broken his car windows with BB guns and had stolen a pair of handcuffs from his vehicle where it was parked in Winston Park, off 37th St.

Torres said he saw four boys running from the scene, and he estimated his total loss at $400.

A county sheriff's deputy arrested a 27-year-old woman for the issuance of two bad checks at her Rt. 1 home, near Union, at 9 a.m. Friday.

Two arrested

City police arrested two men Friday, both on outstanding warrants.

An 18-year-old man was taken into custody at 5:20 p.m. in the 400 Block of 20th St. on four outstanding Department of Public Safety warrants, and a 28-year-old man was arrested at 7:03 p.m. in the 1700 Block of 13th St. on a warrant for failure to appear in court.

Assault cases

Police Friday and early Saturday investigated two assault reports from women who said they had been assaulted by men.

Cynthia Courtney of 2008 26th St. reported at 8:55 p.m. Friday that a Snyder man had assaulted her at her home, and LaDonna Teaff told officers at 12:11 a.m. that a man had beaten her in the 200 Block of 23rd St.

An officer said both cases would be investigated as misdemeanor assaults.

Green Thumb workers recognized in Snyder

Recognizing the importance of meaningful employment for senior Texans, Texas Department on Aging Executive Director, O. P. (Bob) Bobbitt, proclaimed March 11-17 as Employ The Older Worker in Texas.

Bobbitt further urged "all employers and co-workers of older Texans to acknowledge the value of their accomplishments and achievements in the workplace."

On Friday, Scurry County Judge Bobby Goodwin attended a special luncheon for Green Thumb workers at the Scurry County Senior Center during which he signed a proclamation naming next week as Employ the Older Worker Week in Snyder.

Green Thumb employees in Scurry County include Paul Haynes, Ira Public Schools; Frances Thomason, Ruth Davis and Rella Young, Hermleigh Public Schools; Lula Magness, Snyder Child Day Care Center; Pablo Matos, City of Snyder; Opal Terrell, Texas Department of Human Services; Doris Bennett, Kelly Lewis, and Clara Lewis, Scurry County Senior Center.

The annual event focuses special attention to the growing and valuable resource of seniors as a source of experience and dependability for both public and private sector employers.

Green Thumb, Inc., a Senior Community Service Employment Program, funded by the Department of Labor, and sponsored by Texas Farmers Union, assists older workers with training and part-time employment through assignment to local non-profit organizations.

Operating in 117 rural Texas counties, Green Thumb enrolls more than 1,000 seniors to provide needed manpower services in such areas as senior centers, day care and headstart programs, schools, public works, weatherization, libraries and municipalities.

Texas Farmers Union President, Joe Rankin, invites employers "to utilize an abundance of talent, resourcefulness, and experience by hiring senior Texans. During Employ the Older Worker Week, and every other week, employers should hire the reliability and dedication of an older Texas and see firsthand that ability is ageless," Rankin concluded.

Georgia calling for independence talks

MOSCOW (AP) — Georgia has become the fourth Soviet republic condemning its annexation to the Soviet Union, calling the move "an international crime" and demanding talks to secure independence, a local news agency reported.

The decision Friday by Georgia's lawmakers came on the eve of a Lithuanian parliamentary session expected to consider secession.

Lithuania would be the first of the Soviet Union's 15 republics to declare independence and would confront President Mikhail S. Gorbachev in one of his gravest crises during his 5-year-old rule. The Soviet Parliament is to vote Monday on his proposal to increase presidential power over unruly republics.

All three Baltic republics — Latvia and Estonia as well as Lithuania — have condemned Soviet annexation of their lands a half century ago and have strong pro-independence movements.

It calls the entrance of troops "a military interference."

North says lying to Congress his idea

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oliver North says he lied repeatedly to Congress after national security adviser John Poindexter told him to "take care of" inquiries into whether he was secretly assisting the Nicaraguan rebels.

But "nobody ever told me to lie to Congress," North testified Friday at Poindexter's trial, insisting that he decided on his own to make the false statements after his boss sent him to meet with House Intelligence Committee members on Aug. 6, 1986.

Poindexter watched intently while North spent the day on the witness stand in U.S. District Court, reluctantly testifying against his former boss on the National Security Council staff. North, the government's first witness, returns Monday to face questioning about the Iran initiative.

Iran-Contra prosecutor Dan Webb led North through his recollections of a conversation with Poindexter, in which North said he didn't think it would be a "very good idea" to meet with the congressmen.

North testified at his own trial last year about the conversation in some detail, but he said Friday he was unable to remember much of his earlier testimony.

Under prodding by Webb, North said he had "a general recollection" of telling Poindexter that there were things that could not be revealed to the congressmen and that meeting with them would create "vulnerability."

"I didn't want to be in that predicament," said North.

He recalled that Poindexter told him something like "you can handle it or you can take care of it. I do not remember the specific preambular language on either side."

Asserting that neither Poindexter nor anyone else had ordered him to tell falsehoods, North said, "I didn't walk into the meeting intending to lie."

He said he made false statements when he told the congressmen he wasn't providing military advice to the Contra rebels, hadn't been in frequent contact with Contra liaison Robert Owen and hadn't been in touch with rebel supporter John Singlaub in 20 months.

"I recall deceiving them about the full measure of my involvement," North testified.

North balked when Webb showed him a computer message from Poindexter sent several days after the meeting in which the national security official told North, "Well done."

North suggested that the message sent on the computer may not have been a reference to his false statements to the congressmen.

At that point, Webb pulled out North's testimony to the congressional Iran-Contra committees on July 8, 1987. North told that hearing that he informed Poindexter what he had told the congressmen, and that in response his boss said, "Well done."

Toughest anti-abortion bill approved by Idaho's House

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — The state House approved a bill that would outlaw abortion as a method of birth control and provide the nation's strongest challenge to a 1973 Supreme Court ruling legalizing abortion.

"We're really excited," Nancy Myers, a spokeswoman for National Right to Life Committee in Washington, D.C., said after Friday's 47-36 vote. "We consider it to be extremely significant."

The measure was forwarded to the Senate after more than three hours of debate before a gallery packed with activists from both sides of the issue.

The bill could come to a final Senate floor vote as early as Friday, and opponents said it stood a good chance of passing. The GOP controls both houses of the Legislature.

The bill, like legislation rejected recently in Minnesota and Utah, would outlaw abortion as a method of birth control. It would allow abortions only in cases of rape, incest, "profound and irremediable" fetal disabilities, or to save the life or prevent "severe and long-lasting physical health damage" to the mother.

Sponsors contend that would prevent more than 90 percent of some 1,600 abortions performed each year in Idaho.

Penalties of up to $10,000 for a first offense, $30,000 for a second and $50,000 for each additional violation could be assessed against any physician performing or attempting to perform an abortion. Women undergoing the procedure would not be legally responsible.

Gov. Cecil Andrus has yet to comment on the bill, but he has come out strongly against abortion in most cases.

Along with a 1989 Pennsylvania law, which has been partially blocked by a federal court injunction, the Idaho bill would be the most restrictive in the nation, according to its sponsors and the National Right to Life Committee.

"I'm just so proud that Idahoans are taking the lead in returning protection to our unborn children," said Kerry Uhlenkott, legislative coordinator for Right to Life of Idaho Inc. "The Supreme Court is inviting us to send up legislation, and that's what we're doing."

Advocates of legalized abortion were disappointed that legislators ignored arguments the measure would fail to pass constitutional muster, and that most Idaho residents want the Legislature to stay out of the issue.

Housewife challenges Santiesteban

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Texas' best-known housewife has mounted the first serious challenge to state Sen. Tati Santiesteban since he won the District 29 seat in 1972.

Peggy Rosson, campaigning as the consumer's candidate, is taking advantage of the "anti-Tati" atmosphere, said local pollster Bill Kaigh.

Santiesteban, known as much for his outlandish remarks and for his large and loyal following, has come under fire recently concerning his financial dealings.

Santiesteban accepted a $10,000 check from chicken magnate Lonnie "Bo" Pilgrim last year before public pressure forced him to return it. He's also been scrutinized for a delinquent tax bill and a $28,500 monthly fee he gets as a utility consultant.

Ms. Rosson, 54, was the first woman appointed to the Texas Public Utilities Commission. Her appointment in 1983 fulfilled then-Gov. Mark White's campaign pledge to put a "housewife" on the PUC.

Some of El Paso's more pressing problems — such as environmental concerns and lack of water and sewage supply to its colonias — have taken a back seat to questions about Santiesteban's finances and ethics as Tuesday's primary election approaches.

Santiesteban, 55, once defended using dues from a political fund-raising group for personal reasons because, "I have a very expensive Anglo wife and I enjoy the good life."

He was among several senators who accepted $10,000 checks from Pilgrim before a key vote on a worker's compensation reform bill in a special session last year. Santiesteban gave back the check under public pressure.

During this campaign Santiesteban has had to answer questions about a $35,000 delinquent tax bill, acceptance of monthly $28,500 consulting fees from El Paso Electric Co. and his son's arrests for allegedly driving while intoxicated.

Still, Santiesteban was endorsed by the El Paso chapter of the Texas State Teachers Association and the Mexican-American Bar Association. State Comptroller Bob Bullock, a candidate for lieutenant governor, has shown up at the senator's fund raisers and appeared in television ads for him.

Meanwhile, Ms. Rosson has used her reputation as a self-taught utility regulator and her record for voting on behalf of ratepayers to entice voters who are weary of a local utility that is asking for a $33.9 million rate increase.

Santiesteban has accused Ms. Rosson of approving rate increases for financially-troubled El Paso Electric Co. while she served on the PUC.

Ms. Rosson has responded by calling Santiesteban a "hired gun" for El Paso Electric. Her television and newspaper ads urge: "Vote against government of the highest bidder, by the highest bidder and for the highest bidder."

"I think there's a clear choice for the voter," said Ms. Rosson. "There are too many direct connections between his contributors, most of whom are from outside of El Paso, and the legislation he carries. I believe control of that senate seat belongs here."

Santiesteban has attacked Ms. Rosson's lack of experience and warned El Paso voters they could lose a valuable senior senate seat if they vote him out of office. Santiesteban is chairman of the senate Natural Resources Committee.

A recent poll showed the race between Santiesteban and Ms. Rosson a virtual dead heat.

Stenholm again sponsors high school art contest

Congressman Charles Stenholm announced plans recently for the ninth annual art contest for high school students in the 17th District of Texas. The winning entry will be displayed in the U. S. Capitol in Washington, D.C. this summer.

Students in grades 9-12 in Fisher, Mitchell, Nolan and Scurry Counties should enter a preliminary contest to be held in Colorado City on Monday, April 9. Entries must be brought to the lobby of the First National Bank in Colorado City by noon that day. The art work will remain on display in the bank for one week.

Other regional shows will be held in Abilene, Big Spring, Gainesville, Graham, Post, Stephenville and Weatherford. Winners from the entire 35 counties of the 17th District will be announced at an awards brunch in Abilene on April 28.

Artwork must be no longer than 30 inches by 30 inches (unframed) and two-dimensional. Lamdscapes shall portray Texas scenes. Eligible categories are paintings, prints, drawings, and collages.

For more information and entry forms, contact Stenholm's office in Stamford at 915/773-3623, his office in Abilene 915/673-7221 or Leola Anderson in Colorado City at 915/728-2557.

Highlanders upend Howard

Hawks blow eight-point advantage in final three minutes

The Howard College Hawks were defeated by McLennan Community College in NJCAA Region V tournament basketball competition Friday night, 89-88.

The loss in the semi-finals stopped the No. 5 Hawks' bid to regain the country's top spot, a position they held for a short time in the regular season.

McLennan's game plan was simple, especially at the end of the contest.

Keep Johnny McDowell from shooting from the field. Foul him and make him shoot free-throws.

"We tried to keep him from shooting," said MCC coach Ken DeWeese.

"We wanted to put him on the line."

The Highlanders' strategy worked to perfection as they climbed out of an eight point hole with less than four minutes remaining to claim the win.

In the process McDowell was fouled three times, each time missing the front end of the one-and-one and allowing McLennan the rebound.

On the night the Tuscaloosa, Ala. freshman was a dismal 1-8 from the charity stripe with a total of just nine points before fouling out with 44 seconds left in the game.

When McDowell left the court, Howard was clinging to an 86-82 lead.

That lead was quickly reduced to 86-84 on a drive to the basket by McLennan's Don Hutto of Waco.

Hutto was fouled by Howard forward Harvey Petty with just :42 on the clock and the MCC sophomore was good on both shots to knot the score.

Javier Ayala of the Highlanders slid a shot off the glass and through the iron to put the NJCAC champions in front 88-86.

Howard's Terrence Lewis, who had missed several minutes in the second half after a collision with teammate Greg Christian with what appeared to be a slight rib injury, scored a quick basket to tie the score at 88 with only 23 seconds to go.

Hawks' freshman Mike Williams put Hulon Loudde of the Highlanders on the line with the clock at Scurry County Coliseum reading :05.

The first of two shots was wide but the second snapped the cords and put the McLennan squad in the tournament championship against Odessa, another upset winner Friday night.

Billy Carlock and Hutto scored 19 points to lead McLennan trailed by Gandy's 14 and Ayala and Loudde with 13 apiece.

Howard's Lewis poured in 28 points including five three-point hoops.

Carlos Thumn hit for 13 for the Hawks followed by Christian and Jeffery with 11 each.

The MCC-Odessa championship game was to have been played at 7 p.m. Saturday night.

No further talks set to save 1990 season

NEW YORK (AP) — On the day baseball owners and players said they needed a settlement to save opening day, there wasn't even a meeting. No agreement was in sight Friday, and no more talks were planned.

Instead, the spring-training lockout reached 23 days and the start of the regular season moved closer, 24 days away. Both sides say the April 2 opening date now seems farther and farther away.

"If it is not gone, it is the next thing to it," union chief Donald Fehr said.

"To be honest, I didn't think it would go this late. I thought it would be over between March 4 and March 7," Keith Hernandez said at the union office. "If they think they can start in April, they're crazy."

Recently, the two sides set Friday as the deadline for getting a deal done for the season to start on time. But, still stalemated on the issue of salary arbitration eligibility, they have softened that stance.

"We're going to evaluate it day-by-day," American League President Dr. Bobby Brown said. "As next week unfolds, we'll be making some kind of decision."

Commissioner Fay Vincent was not in the office Friday, a day after his effort to end the dispute failed. He was tired, as are many of the principals in the negotiations.

WTC rodeo team hot

ODESSA — Western Texas College, which won all three fall rodeos in the Southwest Region, is back spurring again.

The Westerners had four men in first place in their respective events at the first of seven spring rodeos — the Odessa College NIRA Rodeo — heading into Saturday's wrapup of the long-go. Finals are scheduled for 2 p.m. Sunday.

Saturday's performance was to begin at 7:30 p.m. The rodeo is being held at Ector County Coliseum.

After Friday's performance, Denny McClanahan was leading the bareback with an 81, Shane Gubransen was leading the saddle bronc with a 71, Darrin Cook headed up the bull riding with a 72 and Keith Webster clocked a 6.4 with the fastest steer wrestling time.

Also, Brian Peterson scored a 63 to hold down second place in the saddle bronc while Shawn Tibbs was third with a 61; Kyle Ham was tied for third in the bull riding with a 70 and Scot Berger was fourth in the steer wrestling with a 7.1.

In other results, Lesa Meloy was tied for second in the women's breakaway roping with a 3.7; Terry Graf was fourth in the steer wrestling with a 7.3 time; Jennifer Lee was sixth in the goat tying with a 9.5 and Buddy Reed was sixth in the bull riding with a 67.

Rodeos began in the United States just after the Civil War when Western cowboys competed for the fun of it.

The Roller Derby came into being in the Depression year of 1935 in Chicago.

Top seeded Texans dumped by Wrangler's three-pointers

By PHIL RIDDLE
SDN Sports Editor

The Odessa Wranglers used a long-distance aerial attack to edge top Western Junior College Athletic Associaton seed South Plains College, 72-67, in semi-final action Friday in the Region V juco tournament here.

Trailing by ten with the buzzer about to go off marking the end of first half play, Odessa's Lynn Collins nailed a three-point effort that went almost the entire length of the gym floor.

What was the key to the second half comeback by the Wranglers?

"We relaxed," said coach Dennis Helms.

"We showed more patience in the second half and got the ball in the right people's hands."

"We stopped stepping back and began playing a more aggressive game," he concluded.

Odessa took their first lead of the game with eight-and-a-half minutes left on a three-pointer from Ft. Worth freshman Tony Martin to put OC up by one at 52-51.

The Wranglers kept the pressure on and stretched the advantage to seven points at the 3:31 mark in the second half on a Clavin Sinkfield free-throw that set the score at 61-54 in favor of the Odessa crew.

Jeff Stern, the Texans' 6-10 center, hit a nifty bank shot to get South Plains back to within five with about three minutes remaining.

The contest became a three-point affair with 1:16 left on the clock as Charles Outlaw of SPC drew the foul from Rodney Dent of the Wranglers and hit both ends of the one-and-one to narrow the gap to 65-62.

The back breaker for SPC came on an intentional foul called against David Diaz that put Collins on the line for two and gave Odessa the ball.

Diaz was good on both attempts from the stripe and Odessa had moved out to a nine-point lead.

Collins scored 21 points to lead the Wrangler effort, including four three-pointers.

Patric Nash bombed for six three-point buckets on the night for 18 points followed by Martin with 13 points.

Diaz paced the Texans with 14 points.

Tyrone Maxey added 12 before fouling out late in the contest and John Goodwin and Richard Medina each chipped in 11 points.

Taylor places in swim meet

ABILENE — Kevin Taylor of Snyder's Tiger Shark Swim Club placed in all events entered in the West Texas Short Course Championship here March 2-4.

Taylor competed in the eight and under division winning eighth in the 50 meter breaststroke, seventh in the 50 meter freestyle, fourth in the 50 meter fly, eighth in the 50 meter backstroke and fifth in the 100 meter individual medley.

Taylor qualified as a "B" swimmer in the meet.

"Kevin is to be congratulated for this performance," said Tiger Shark coach Mike Harrison.

Membership in the club is open year-round and information may be obtained by contacting Harrison at Western Texas College.

Local archers set shoot date

The Snyder Bowhunters Association will hold its monthly club shoot today at 2 p.m.

New members will be able to shoot free after paying $20 annual membership dues.

Other members will pay a $3 entry fee per person or $5 per family.

Archers will shoot two rounds of 10 at 3-D animal targets at unmarked distances.

Bowhunters in attendance will also have a chance to register for a guided wild turkey hunt to be given away at the club's April 8 shoot.

Winners from February's event include Gaylen Marth in the overdraw division, Eddie Rollins in sighted compounds, Ricky Kruger in non-sighted compounds, Brent Smith in the traditional division and Marshall Early in cubs.

For more information or to join the club call Brent Smith at 573-1453 or Dale Byrd at 573-0227.

Group giving scholarships

PLANO — The Northern Texas PGA Junior Golf Association announced recently that it will award four more $8,000 scholarships to junior golfers in May.

Graduating high school seniors and current college students are eligible.

Applications are available from Doug Hoffmann by calling (214) 422-0762 and must be returned to the NTPGA Junior Golf Foundation by April 23.

Baylor, Hogs to meet

by The Associated Press

There were no surprises in the quarterfinals of the Southwest Conference postseason basketball tournament.

Defending champion Arkansas rolled to an 84-61 victory over Southern Methodist behind Todd Day's 25 points and a career-high 22 for Oliver Miller.

The victory gave the Hogs a chance for revenge on Saturday in the semifinals agaist Baylor, which upset Arkansas earlier in the year.

Baylor downed Texas Christian 72-62.

Day said he was happy to get another shot at Baylor.

"I'd prefer to play Baylor because they embarrassed us there (in Waco) and I want to drive it to them and send them home," he said.

Baylor's Julius Denton, who scored 25 points against Texas Christian, said, "It's going to be a dogfight. I'm sure Arkansas has a score to settle. That's fine with us."

Texas and Houston did the expected Friday night in advancing to their 8 p.m. semifinal showdown Saturday in Reunion Arena.

The Longhorns (21-7) bounced the Texas Aggies 92-84 and Houston (24-6) outlasted the Rice Owls 90-81 with both games going as expected.

Texas finished third and Houston was second in the SWC regular season. The Cougars won both games against the Longhorns.

Lance Blanks scored 27 points and Texas dominated the offensive boards in beating the Aggies for the third time this year. Tony Milton was high for Texas A&M with 26 points.

Texas coach Tom Penders said, "We had a lot of put back baskets. We only shot 37 percent from the field but won by eight points. That should tell you something."

A&M coach John Thornton agreed lack of rebounding killed the Aggies, saying, "It was the key to the game."

"Texas gets a lot of credit for its offense but they play great defense and don't get credit for it," Thornton said.

Voters to 'speak' on Tuesday

AUSTIN (AP) — After a barrage of drug questions, death penalty claims and million-dollar television blitzes, Texas voters on Tuesday will cast their primary election ballots for governor.

The Democratic primary — pitting Ann Richards, Jim Mattox and former Gov. Mark White — is especially bitter, while Republican hopefuls are scrambling to hold oilman Clayton Williams under the 50 percent mark he needs to avoid an April runoff election.

The races appeared headed toward an all-time spending record. The top three Democrats and top four Republicans spent a combined total of $25 million through March 5.

The Democratic race was so heated that Attorney General Mattox, whose own slogan was "Texas Tough," decried what he called the "cannibalism" of his party's infighting.

Ms. Richards, a rising Democratic star after keynoting the party's 1988 national convention, found herself under siege from opponents and the news media after repeatedly refusing to answer "yes" or "no" to the question of whether she ever used illegal drugs.

"This question was never raised in the eight years that I was managing a portfolio of $4 billion a day. It was only when I got in the way of these two boys who want to be governor that it came up," she said.

A recovering alcoholic, the state treasurer said she hadn't used a "mood-altering chemical" in 10 years, and she accused both White and Mattox of profiteering from public service.

"They've got the best resumes money can buy," Ms. Richards said, suggesting that besides a drug test, the candidates should take lie-detector tests as well.

SHL CANDIDATE–Ruth West will be talking about her candidacy for the Texas Silver Haired Legislature (SHL) in a program planned for 11:30 a.m. Wednesday in the Scurry County Senior Citizens Center. All registered Texas voters 60 and older can vote for representatives to the SHL in May. Everyone is invited to attend. (Private Photo)

Home buyers shopping for a good value should consider a foreclosed home, according to PaceLine National Management. The company reports most lenders maintain lists of local foreclosed properties.

Senior center activities listed

St. Patrick's Day will be celebrated in the Senior Citizens Center Friday with a party starting at 11 a.m. Senior citizens are asked to wear something green in honor of the day and the Sunshine Choir will be providing special music.

A 42 tournament starting at 9 a.m. Monday will get activities underway in the center for the week. Other special activities underway for the week will include a country/western dance starting at 7 p.m. Tuesday with music by Robert Allen and the Country Boys and a program on the Noah Project by Linda Scalf at 11:15 a.m. Thursday.

Activities on the regular schedule for the week in the center include the textile painting class at 9 a.m. Thursday, blood pressure checks from 9:45-11:15 a.m. Friday, the exercise class at 11 a.m. each day, the weigh-in for the weight control group at 10 a.m. Wednesday, the Golden Kiwanis Club meeting at noon on Tuesday and aerobics for women at 3 p.m. on Monday and Wednesday.

Senior citizens who give volunteer time to the center and the community will be recognized on April 20 and are to turn in their hours before the end March so they can be totaled.

Thanks, Snyder

Financial Focus

Investing in mutual finds is an excellent way to accumulate a nest egg. Mutual funds enable you to invest when you have money available. They also allow you to reinvest capital gains and dividends to your money compounds. All these things, of course, occur at different times, and your shares are bought at different prices.

On the other hand, when you need money, the fund simply sells enough shares at the current net asset value (NAV) and mails you a check. (Net asset value is the current market value of a fund's shares minus any liabilities divided by the total number of shares outstanding.) But which shares you sell could make a big difference in the taxes you pay.

Suppose you own 5,000 shares of ABC Fund. In 1978 you bought 3,000 shares at $10 a share. You added another 1,000 shares in 1988 at $20 a share, and in 1989 you bought the last 1,000 shares at $25 a share. Today the NAV of the fund shares is $20, and you ask the fund to send you $20,000. The fund sells 1,000 shares at $20, mails you a check for $20,000 and reports the transaction to the Internal Revenue Service.

Because you did not specify which shares to sell, the IRS's FIFO (first in, first out) rule would apply. In this case, 1,000 of your January 1978 shares were sold, and your cost basis was $10,000. That gives you a profit of $10,000, which, in the 28 percent tax bracket, means a tax bill of $2,800.

Had you instructed the fund to sell the 1,000 shares you purchased for $25 a share at a cost basis of $25,000, you would, instead, show a loss of $5,000, which could save you about $1,400 in taxes.

To control taxes, the IRA and the courts say shares must be identified by the date of purchase and price when the sell order is placed. The fund, on the other hand, shows on your confirmation statement only that shares were sold on a specific date at a specific price.

A spokesperson for the Capital Guardian Group, one of the nation's largest mutual-fund managers, says it would be very difficult for them to identify specific shares sold. This seems to be a general practice in the industry.

Kathryn Morrison with the Investment Company Institute says, however, that some fund groups might confirm in some way that your instructions were received. The burden of proof, however, is with you if you are questioned by the IRS.

Morrison offered some sound advice. Keep good records. This includes the fund's confirmation of your sell, the confirmation of the original buy, and your letter of instruction to the fund or your broker identifying the specific shares you wanted sold.

Will the IRS accept this? No one will say for sure, but most agree this method should work. Remember, once you begin identifying shares, you must keep accurate records so that the shares are not specified again for future sale.

Accurately determining the cost basis of your mutual fund shares requires some detail, but it may save you some money in taxes.

ORDINANCE NO. 754

AN ORDINANCE AMENDING CERTAIN SECTIONS OF ORDINANCE NUMBER 643, THE ZONING ORDINANCE, MODIFYING SIGN REGULATIONS IN A C-1 COMMERCIAL DISTRICT, UPDATING FEES, AND UPDATING THE PENALTIES FOR VIOLATION.

The fees to be charged for building permits from and after the passage of this Ordinance shall be as follows:

$0.03 per square foot of building
($15.00 minimum - $1500.00 maximum)

THAT paragraph "2" Section XVIII " AMENDMENTS " from and after passage of this Ordinance, shall be amended to read:

2. Applications for variances or district changes shall be filed in writing with the City Secretary, who shall place the application before the City Council after determining that it is in proper form as provided herein. All applications, except those proposed by the City Council or the Planning and Zoning Commission, shall be accompanied by an application fee of sixty dollars ($60) to be returned to the applicant only if publication is not made. A copy of the application shall remain on file with the City Secretary for public inspection until final action thereon.

THAT, all of Section XIX "VIOLATION AND PENALTY" from and after the passage of this Ordinance, shall be amended to read:

The owner or agent of a building or premises in or upon which a violation of any provision of this ordinance has been committed or shall exist; or the lessee or tenant of an entire building or entire premises in or upon which a violation has been committed or shall exist; or the agent, architect, building contractor or any other person who commits, takes part in, or assists in any violation, or who maintains any building or premises in or upon which such violation shall exist, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be punishable by a fine not to exceed two thousand dollars ($2,000.00) or an amount not exceeding the maximum fine allowed by the constitution and laws of the State of Texas as now or hereafter amended for each and every day that such violation continues. Any such person, having been served with an order to remove any such violation, failing to comply with said order within ten days after such notice or continuing to violate any provision of the regulation made under authority of this Ordinance in the respect named in such order, shall be subject to a civil penalty of two thousand dollars ($2,000.00) or an amount not exceeding the maximum fine allowed by the constitution and laws of the State of Texas as now or hereafter amended.

ORDINANCE NO. 755

AN ORDINANCE AMENDING SECTION 1-5, GENERAL PENALTY, CONTINUING VIOLATIONS PART II CODE OF ORDINANCES, CHAPTER 1 AND THE PENALTY SECTION OF ORDINANCE NUMBERS; 489, 504, 505, 528, 529, 576, 598, 599, 604, 608, 614, 636, 637, 643, 661, 683, 698, 708, 712, 713, 727, 729, 731, 737, 742, 744, AND 748.

THAT, Section 1-5 General penalty; Continuing violations, of PART II Code of Ordinances, Chapter 1 shall be amended to read:

"Whenever in this Code or in any ordinance of the city an act is prohibited or is made or declared to be unlawful or an offense or a misdemeanor, or wherever in such Code or ordinance the doing of any act is required or the failure to do any act is declared to be unlawful, and no specific penalty is provided therefor, the violation of any such provision of this Code or any ordinance in all cases arising under this Code or any ordinance of the city that govern fire, safety, zoning, or public health and sanitation, including dumping of refuse, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding Two Thousand Dollars ($2,000.00) and by a fine not exceeding Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00) in all other cases arising under this Code or any ordinance of the city, or by an amount not exceeding the maximum amount allowed by the constitution and laws of the State of Texas as now or hereafter amended. Each day any violation of this Code or any ordinance shall continue shall constitute a separate offense.

THAT, the penalty section of Ordinance numbers; 489, 504, 505 528, 529, 576, 598, 599, 604, 608, 614, 636, 637, 643, 661, 683, 698, 708, 712, 713, 727, 729, 731, 737, 742, 744, AND 748 shall be amended to read:

Any person, either by himself or his agent, and/or any firm, corporation or their entity who violates the provisions of this Ordinance shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction of any such violation, in all cases arising under this Code or any ordinance of the city that govern fire, safety, zoning, or public health and sanitation, including dumping of refuse, shall be fined in a sum not to exceed Two Thousand Dollars ($2,000.00) and by a fine not exceeding Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00) in all other cases arising under this Code or any ordinance of the city, or by an amount not exceeding the maximum amount allowed by the constitution and laws of the State of Texas as now or hereafter amended. Each day during which such violation continues shall constitute a separate and distinct offense. In any case of violation of any of the the terms of provisions of this Ordinance by any corporation, the officers and agents actively in charge of the business of such corporation shall be subject to the penalty herein provided. Any offense defined herein which has been defined by laws of the State of Texas as an offense and for which penalty has been prescribed shall be punished as provided in said State Law, and nothing herein shall be held as fixing any penalty contrary to a penalty provided by the laws of the State of Texas.

Listed in the caption above are delinquent tax suits in which Judgments of Foreclosure have been rendered and Orders of Sale have been issued. The listing for each suit sets out: (1) the Cause Number; (2) the Plaintiff Tax Unit; (3) the Defendants; (4) the Date of the Judgment; (5) the Date of Levy; and (6) the Property Description.

Under the Order of Sale issued pursuant to each Judgment above listed, I did at the time specified for each suit levy upon each property in such suit as described above as the property of the Defendants named or designated in such suit. On the sale date specified above, which is the first Tuesday of said month, I will offer and sell at public auction, for cash, each property described above, and all the right, title, interest and estate in and to each such property owned or claimed by the Defendants named in connection with each such property; PROVIDED, however, that no property shall be sold directly or indirectly to anyone other than a Tax Unit which is a party to that specific suit for less than the total amount of taxes, penalties, interest and costs due against that particular property or any adjudged value decreed, whichever is lower.

The Foreclosure Sales under this Notice will be held on the first Tuesday of said month, at the Courthouse door of said County, at the time set out above, by and through the LAW OFFICES OF GATES STEEN, 3001 N. Lamar Blvd., Suite 306, Austin, Texas 78705 (Area Code 512) 476-4688, my authorized representative.

The sale of each property shall be subject to the rights of the Defendants named in connection with each particular property, and any successors in title, to redeem such specified property in the time and manner provided by law; and subject also to the rights of any defendants to have each particular property owned or claimed by such defendants divided and sold in less divisions than the whole as provided by law. The sale as to each property is to be made to satisfy the Judgment rendered against that particular property and the Defendants named in connection with that particular property. The proceeds of the sale of each property are to be applied to the satisfaction of the Judgment against that particular property, and the remainder of the sale proceeds, if any, are to be applied as the law directs.

Scurry County Folks...

By Shirley A. Gorman

It could be said of Dianne Price that she is a career mother, well sort of anyway.

In addition to rearing three sons, she was also a foster mother for 14 years before starting a new job last month which will keep her in direct contact with children in foster care.

Even though Price is the subject of this week's Scurry County Folks, she has not had to go it alone these past years as her husband, Jesse, who is the foreman at UNOCAL, has been at her side to share all the joy, pain, hard work and rewards of rearing their own as well as foster children.

Price loves children and it shows. And she wouldn't think of backing away from a challenge. Why else would she give up a part-time job, relinquish her foster parent duties and agree to become the first full time Community Service Aide II for the Child Protective Services Division of the Texas Department of Human Services?

Price assumed her new duties on Feb. 1 and since her position is a newly created one she does not as yet have a permanent office.

Right now she is working out of TDHS offices in the Scurry County Senior Center, but she will have a permanent office in her department's new quarters which are expected to be ready soon.

The state is currently in the process of remodeling the building which formerly housed Shakey's Pizza Parlor.

Price will be doing a lot of job-related traveling because her primary duty will be to provide transportation for foster children. This could cover several areas from doctors' appointments to therapy sessions, and family and parental visits. And adult clients will also be eligible for transportation.

Price is responsible for all the counties in Region 4 but she said she will mainly work with foster children in the counties which border Scurry County.

However, since Region 4 does not have enough foster homes some foster children have to be housed in other cities, so conceiveably she may have some distance to travel, but mainly she said the bulk of her trips will probably be to Abilene.

Price is the first full time Community Service Aide II to be employed in Region 4. Previously, a part-time worker from Sweetwater had been handling the job.

In some respects Price won't be doing anything she and other foster parents haven't already done before. Since during her 14 years as a foster parent she often transported her foster children to appointments and once spent several weeks in Lubbock while a foster child was in the hospital.

Price said she did not want to give up being a foster parent, but with two sons in college she felt it was time and besides she said it is "nice to get paid for doing something you like to do."

The Prices were transferred to Snyder from Jal, N.M. some 10 years ago. While living in Jal Price said her then youngest son was in the first grade but since she "wasn't through being a mother yet" she and her husband applied to become foster parents. One of her friends was already in the program and she said they were accepted as soon as they applied.

"Foster parenting is really the easiest way to have kids," she explained. "They come right to your door, there are no labor pains and they are all colors," she said.

NEW JOB--Dianne Price, the first full-time Community Service Aide II for the Child Protective Services Division of the Texas Department of Human Services, began her new duties last month. She and her husband, Jesse, have also served as foster parents for a number of years, both in Snyder and New Mexico. Previously she had also worked at Anthony's. (SDN Staff Photo)

They have fostered children from four days old to 17. They have even brought them home direct from the hospital. She said Snyder has an abundance of infant foster children but she said she prefers pre-schoolers because "they are ready to learn and usually don't have as many problems as older ones."

Teenagers can cause problems of their own, because in the first place it is natural for teenagers to start breaking away from their home at that age, and teenagers from dysfunctional families have added burdens to cope with.

Price is proud of their work as foster parents. "It's just the neatest thing to help get infants ready for adoption. Some times the new parents of their foster children send them pictures of the children who often refer to the Prices as their aunt and uncle.

Price said they sometimes kept foster children for as little as few hours or for as long as nine months. Foster parents sometimes keep foster children longer than that too, but usually she said the state tries to return children to their natural homes as soon as possible if that is the appropriate solution to the situation. Or else a different type of permanent home may be arranged.

"A permanent home for foster children is our goal," she continued. "It is very important for them to be with responsible people, Price said."

She told the story of three children who had been in foster care for five years. "We considered adopting the girls but were not financially able to do so at the time. They are seniors in high school now and we still keep in touch."

The four-day-old baby--their first foster child--is now a straight A high school student.

Sometimes Price said they would just keep a foster child for just a few hours. For instance, if a child is picked up while roaming the streets and the parent or guardian can't be located then a temporary foster home is necessary until the matter can be straightened out. Sometimes the parent or guardian may be in jail or in the hospital and a foster home will become that child's temporary home while other arrangements are made with relatives.

Sometimes children are placed in foster homes because their parents are getting divorced and they need time to work out the details.

When possible foster children are returned to their own home or else they will go with a relative or end up being adopted.

Older foster children are often eligible for adoption, but people generally want to adopt babies. However, she said there are an abundance of pre-school children in foster care now.

'One of Price's favorite foster children is an "adorable" girl who was very ill as a child and

Lots of ways to do it

By James Jacoby

Only an inexperienced player would fail to make six diamonds. Such a player would stake the success of the contract on a spade finesse. With the king held by West, he would be set. Better chances abound, and anything else would work. One approach is to win dummy's king of clubs, draw trumps ending in the South hand, and lead the nine of hearts. If West plays low, play low from dummy. East wins the queen and returns a spade. Rise with the ace of spades and take another heart finesse. This line succeeds whenever West holds at least one heart honor — a 75 percent chance.

A second approach is to win dummy's king of clubs, cash A-Q of diamonds and ace of clubs, and then play nine of hearts, intending to play A-K and a heart. When East plays low on the third heart, declarer discards a spade. West will have to win the jack of hearts and either lead into the A-Q of spades or give a sluff and a ruff for the contract. If on the third heart East were to play an honor, declarer would ruff and get back to dummy with a diamond to play another heart. If West held the fourth heart, he could be endplayed. If East held four hearts, declarer could still fall back on the spade finesse.

In actuality West would probably cover the nine of hearts with the jack. Because of the heart spots in the combined hands, that solves all declarer's problems. He comes back to hand and leads the eight of hearts, putting in the 10. Although East wins the queen, declarer can return to dummy with a diamond to shed both losing spades on the A-7 of hearts.

Sun exposure culprit in wrinkles

ESSEX, Conn. (AP) — As we get older, our faces may start to sag and wrinkle but these changes need not be permanent.

Most of what we attribute to aging, such as changes in the skin pigment, freckles and even wrinkling, are due to the ravages of the sun, says The E.E. Dickinson Witch Hazel Co. It says the effects of sun damage can be reversed. To do this, stay out of the sun as much as possible and wear a sun screen at all times with a protection factor (SPF) of at least 15 to protect the skin from both UVA AND UVB rays. A good sunscreen also should prevent more damage from occuring.

Insiders disturbed by trend...

Japanese are on art buying binge

EDITOR'S NOTE — These days, it seems, if you've got something to sell there's a buyer in Japan, no matter how big the price tag. So it's hardly surprising that Japanese collectors of Western art are on a spending spree. But many insiders in the art world, both at home and abroad, are disturbed by the trend.

TOKYO (AP) — Japanese speculators are scouring the art world for the best money can buy, catapulting prices upward with a series of audacious bids at auction houses in New York and London.

Many museums and smaller galleries are dismayed, saying they can't compete.

This new buying spree is being led by real estate speculators and bootstrap entrepreneurs such as Yasumichi Morishita, a Japanese moneylender who made his fortune with high-interest loans and has a reputation as an aggressive and indiscriminate buyer of art.

Morishita has been the biggest Japanese buyer in recent months, dealers say, as he fortifies his stock of Impressionist and post-Impressionist paintings at his gallery, Aska International.

Morishita and other Japanese investors spent $230 million in a series of auctions in November alone.

Along with individuals enriched by the appreciation of the yen and ballooning stock and land prices, these new Japanese buyers have become a strong force in many collectors' markets, from antique musical instruments to vintage wines.

Nowhere is this as evident as in the market for Impressionist and modern paintings, where Japanese dealers and collectors are snapping up about 40 percent to 50 percent of total sales at London-based Christie's and Sotheby's auction houses, in some cases, dealers say, with little regard for quality and price.

The renewed Japanese appetite for Western art became evident in 1987 when Yasuda Marine and Fire Insurance Co. paid $39.9 million for Vincent van Gogh's "Sunflowers" — at the time the world's most expensive painting.

Western collectors still are able to set art-market benchmarks, such as the $53.9 million sale of Vincent van Gogh's 1889 "Irises" in 1987 to Australian tycoon Alan Bond — now the world record. (Sotheby's announced on Jan. 10 that "Irises" is now back on the auction block.) Also, a Picasso self-portrait "Yo Picasso," sold last May for $47.85 million to Kentucky executive Wendell Cherry.

But in a satellite-linked Tokyo-Paris auction on Nov. 30, a Japanese resort and auto-racing firm called Nippon Autopolis nudged aside Cherry as owner of the world's second most costly painting, with its $48.9 million knockdown of Picasso's "Les Noces de Pierrette."

Nippon Autopolis is far from the only Japanese winner of recent art prizes. Shigeki Kameyama, wealthy owner of Mountain Tortoise Gallery in Tokyo, set a new record for a living artist with his $20.68 million purchase of Dutch artist Willem de Kooning's "Interchange" in November.

Morishita made the following buys at auctions in New York and London:

— $10 million for one of Picasso's most important early works, "La Maternite," or "Motherhood," on Nov. 27 in London.

— $6.8 million for Paul Gauguin's 1889 painting of a Breton boy in a landscape at a Sotheby's auction on Nov. 28.

— $25 million out of total sales of $131.29 million from the estate of the late Campbell Soup heir John T. Dorrance in October, including $7.15 million for van Gogh's "Man at Sea."

The new Japanese corporate buyers "are entirely different players from the owners of small and medium-sized firms who used to just collect privately," says Kazuko Shiomi, president of Sotheby's in Tokyo.

"Corporations that have made their money in real estate or financing have become professionals, part of the art industry."

Traditional dealers haven't exactly welcomed gruff, no-nonsense Morishita. Police have investigated his Aichi corporate finance firm several times, and he received a one-year suspended sentence in 1986 for falsifying documents used in stock transactions.

Kiyotaka Kori, Aska's gallery manager and a former secretary to the tycoon, says Morishita wouldn't mind having a better image.

"In some reports, we've got a bad reputation, and Mr. Morishita doesn't like that," Kori said as he relaxed on the Italian silk couch in Aska's gallery, a bright spot of pastels and chrome beside a grimy freeway in central Tokyo.

Morishita, who lives in a brick mansion in one of Tokyo's toniest neighborhoods, wasn't available for an interview. "He really doesn't like having his picture taken," said the gallery manager.

Kori says Morishita makes a practice of bidding under the house estimate at auctions, but when he really wants something, "there's no limit. Our purpose is to get the painting.

"We hope that in the future, if you want to see a Monet or Renoir, you will go to Aska International."

Experts say such do-or-die purchases are underpinning a worldwide surge in the art market, which has continued unabated despite shocks in other financial markets, thus inviting still more investment.

Sotheby's composite art market index, which set prices at 100 in 1975, had inflated to 911 by late November, up from 732 in the fall of 1988 and 476 in 1987.

spent a lot of time in and out of hospitals. She required a lot of medical attention but was ultimately adopted and so far it is successful Price said.

Another foster child that Price said is special to them is now a student at Western Texas College. She was able to receive financial aid from a state scholarship fund.

But all foster children's stories do not end happily. One such child had some mental retardation and was very hard to manage. He always tried running away and was transferred from foster home to foster home. When they are too unruly and hard to manage Price said they had no qualms about saying they could not handle the child.

Eventually the child was tested in Abilene but he lacked two points of being able to stay in the state school.

Price is the first to say that there are no guarantees in raising children, either your own or foster children. "All you can do is give them the best love and care you can while you have them. We were not responsible for their past or their future. All we had to work with was the present and we just tried to do the best we could one day at a time."

Price said it was also hard for some foster children to leave because they were just learning to love and trust for the first time in their lives.

She also said she thought being with foster children was good for her three sons because they learned how to care for babies and younger children. Some children have no idea of what to do for a baby and they "don't come with manuals."

But, as it is in life, her boys didn't always like all of the foster children they had in their family. Some they enjoyed and some they were glad to see leave. But in general she said that even though she can't really speak for her sons, she thought it was a good learning experience for them.

Price's years as a foster parent taught her that one bad foster home can make all foster homes look bad but when that happens she said all you can do is "cut away the bad part," so to speak, and go on.

Price said foster parents were allowed $3.19 per child per day by the state when she first became a foster parent.

"I have no regrets about being a foster parent and in my new job I'm still involved with children, but not on a 24-hour basis. Life is full of excitement when you look for it," she said.

Price said when they moved to Snyder they had no idea that they would once again become involved with a foster parent program.

"We had just barely closed the deal on our home and had gone to get a bite to eat when we bumped into some people and during the course of the conversation we mentioned that we had been foster parents. It just took off from there," she said.

In addition to foster parent duties, Price also started teaching foster parent training classes in 1981. Later she studied in order to be able to train the people who train the foster parents.

At one time new foster parents went through the NOVA training program, but now that training is arranged through MAPP training or Model Approach to Partnerships in Parenting. All prospective foster parents and adoptive parents have to take the 10 week course which involves one three hour session per night per week.

She said she usually conducts about two MAPP training sessions each year, or as demand dictates.

Price has also just completed training in how to redirect children's misbehavior. The course lasted five weeks and she attended one three-hour session each week.

All state and national conventions are beginning to push this new approach to dealing with problem children she explained. Classes are currently being organized and the ultimate goal is to have these classes become as well known as the Lamaze classes.

Price said education classes for parents are so important. She emphasized that these new techniques do work. They don't always provide all the answers but they do give parents a place to start and different options to choose from.

"I personally would like to see violence on television decline. The cycle needs to be broken and it should begin at home. Parents need to learn how to give children a chance to be all they can be. Children need more positive things in their life. Little things in a home can turn children either way and you may not even be aware of it," she said.

Price added that she wished this type of training had been available when her children were still at home.

Husband and wife teams can work together and then the children can be brought in she said.

Parents should share in the training of their children. Children can be pulled in opposite directions by their parents she said.

These techniques can also work on adults, but first you have to get rid of the old behavior you want to change.

"I still have more to learn and I am anxious to do it because I want to share it with other people," she said.

Price underwent this training in Austin and she said it was exciting to be there with people from all over the U. S. Pediatricians looking for a better way were also there she said.

She said children's behavior patterns have usually been set by an early age and that foster children usually have been through more hard times than other children.

When Price first became a foster parent she said the state of New Mexico did not offer a training program. In Texas they had to have pets vaccinated, their home inspected and they needed a TB test.

"As a foster parent I saw a need for foster parents to be trained and I like being able to work with and teach foster parents," she said.

Price's three sons are Derwin, Reggie and Galen. Derwin helped found Price and Davis Company. His wife's name is Kim and she works for Anthony's. Reggie and his wife, Rachel, attend Western Texas College. He is employed by Patterson Drilling and she works for West Texas State Bank. Galen also attends WTC and works for Tri-State Construction Co.

Ruling applauded by state officials

AUSTIN (AP) — U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice signed an order to end a special master's monitoring of the state prison system, but he said the action does not end the lawsuit.

State officials Thursday, however, applauded Justice's order to close the special master's office in Houston on March 31.

"Three years ago, I said that I would do what it took to bring this lengthy and expensive lawsuit to an end," Gov. Bill Clements said.

"Today I can say that, with the assistance of the Legislature and the support of the speaker and the lieutenant governor, we have nearly accomplished that goal," he said.

Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox said Justice's order was a momentous development.

"After 18 years of litigation, we have crossed a major hurdle to getting our prison system out of federal court," Mattox said.

The special master was appointed nine years ago when the state's penal system was ruled unconstitutional.

In the order, Justice said progress has been made in complying with the court's orders of reforms and the Houston office of special master Vincent Nathan and his staff are no longer needed.

Monitoring of the Texas prison system will shift to plaintiffs' counsel, William Bennett Turner of San Francisco, Justice said.

The order "represents a significant step toward the conclusion of this litigation," but does not close the lawsuit, Justice said.

The lawsuit was filed in 1978 by Texas Department of Corrections inmate David Ruiz against the state. Justice found the Texas prison system unconstitutional in 1981 and appointed Nathan as special master July 24, 1981, to oversee the state's progress and implementation of the court-mandated reforms.

The judge's ruling was largely upheld by the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals June 23, 1982.

Hightower said juice industry helped lessen the citrus damage

DALLAS (AP) — Despite a hard freeze that damaged more than one half of the citrus crop in Texas, the industry was aided by a company that makes fresh-squeezed juice, Agricultural Commissioner Jim Hightower said today.

"They always say when life gives you lemons, you make lemonade. Here, we have grapefruit and oranges, but the principle is the same," Hightower said during a news conference here Friday, during which he discussed a cooperative effort by Rio Grande Valley growers, the Sqweekins Corp. and a grocery store chain.

The juice company was able to salvage much of the juice from the badly-frozen fruit.

"We have been able to squeeze a real gain out of disaster," he said. "We have in Texas the sweetest grapefruit in the world and the juiciest oranges in the world."

Hightower, who is seeking a third term as agricultural commissioner, estimated damage to this year's citrus crop from the Dec. 22 freeze at almost $47 million. That's more than one-half the crop's total estimated value of $80 million.

Temperatures fell to 18 degrees for a 24-hour period in the subtropical Valley area, but growers worked feverishly to harvest as much frozen fruit from trees as they could for juice, said Joel Whilsher, of the Texas Citrus Exchange, a cooperative of 300 Valley citrus producers.

"There was severe damage, and it appears we will not have a citrus crop for the next year or two," he said. "But growers were able to salvage a small amount of tonnage until about Jan. 5."

Assisted by Italian architects, military engineers and hydraulic experts, the 15th-century rebuilding of the Kremlin under Ivan III (the Great) took 30 years, says National Geographic.

LESS TV - MORE ACTIVITY

Pediatricians now consider excessive TV watching a genuine disease of children, causing obesity and other ills. Hours spent watching TV are hours not spent burning up calories and developing muscle coordination and social excitement in play activity. TV watchers usually snack on junk food (many children see on TV over 11,000 low-nutrition, high-calorie junk food ads a year). For healthy kids - less TV, more social, active play.

Home Hospice Visitors Must Learn to Give Proper Comfort

DEAR ABBY: My family and I have recently undergone nine weeks of home hospice care for my terminally ill mother. Words cannot describe the marvelous care she received from this wonderful kind of service, as well as the emotional support and direction we, her caregivers, received.

My sister and I, and my mother's sister, were the primary caregivers and, as such, we learned a great deal about home hospice care behavior for visitors and relatives alike. You would do your readers a big favor if you print the following information for the benefit of patients under home hospice care:

1. Remember, the patient is terminally ill and will not recover, so do not say, "I hope you get well soon," or, "Are you feeling better today?" Say instead, "I am so glad that you are able to visit with us for a while."

2. Do not overstay your visit. Five or 10 minutes is all that most weakened patients can tolerate.

3. Do not expect coffee, refreshments or entertainment. Remember that the caregivers are already exhausted from giving 24-hour-a-day care.

4. Do not bring unsolicited food or plants. The patient may feel guilty for not joyfully responding to either. Instead, send appropriate greeting cards and short notes, which can be leisurely read to the patient.

5. If possible, use a restroom before coming to visit. The patient's bathroom is usually loaded with wet laundry and/or necessary medical supplies, and may be an embarrassment to the household.

6. Do not telephone for daily reports — there is no secretary available for phone answering service. Once or twice a week is sufficient.

Home hospice care is a wonderful arrangement for those patients (and families) who fit the criteria and who wish for death to occur at home. But, it is still a "hospital situation," and visitors should respect the wishes of the patient and caregivers.

Thanks for lending an ear.

EUGENIA B. MURRAY, R.N.,
STATEN ISLAND, N.Y.

DEAR EUGENIA: Please accept my sympathy on the loss of your mother. She was blessed to have had such a caring and capable sister and daughters. I am publishing your letter because it sends a very important message that has not been given the publicity it deserves.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: In reference to the letter from "Happy But Distressed Bride," you advised, " ... it's your wedding, and if you and your fiance choose to exclude certain members of your family, it's your right."

I agree, but what do you think of an uninvited family member who comes to the wedding anyway?

BEEN THERE

DEAR BEEN THERE: A wedding is no place to create a scene, so unless the presence of an uninvited family member is a threat to the peace and quiet of the occasion, better suffer his or her presence in silence.

* * *

Wedding bells? Wedding bills! Who pays for what and everything else you need to know if you're planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend, "Rose," whose hobby is corresponding with guys who are away at college or in the service. She writes duplicate love letters and encloses locks of her hair. You could make a mattress of all the locks she's mailed out. If these guys ever get together on their duplicate love letters, I smell trouble.

Rose says it "amuses" her to receive their responses filled with passion and declarations of undying love. She also has several guys on the string right here in the Bronx.

I think this is a sick way for a girl to get her jollies. Some of those guys could be taking her seriously and get hurt. She's nice-looking and popular and doesn't need to do this. Telling her to stop this childish hobby falls on deaf ears.

What do you think of this "harmless" hobby? And what do you think of Rose?

EDDIE IN THE BRONX

DEAR EDDIE: Young men who are in the service or away at college are lonely and vulnerable. They are hungry for mail, but duplicate "love letters" are far from harmless — they are misleading and therefore cruel.

What do I think of Rose? I think she has a few petals missing.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I am sure you would not have titled a recent column "Indian-giving is OK" if you knew the unfortunate history of this phrase.

In colonial times, European settlers and Native Americans had misunderstandings because of different customs and language. Sometimes a settler would think a Native American had given him something, when, in fact, it had only been loaned to him. When the owner asked for the return of the "gift," it caused resentment.

As you know, children sometimes "give away" their possessions, then change their minds. When I was young, we would angrily call a child who did this an "Indian giver." I didn't know any better then, but now I am sorry that I helped perpetuate this insulting stereotype. It is tragic that this stereotype should exist about people who generously shared their lands with others and were repaid so cruelly.

I hope you will print my letter so that other readers can learn not to make this mistake.

MOLLEEN MATSUMURA,
BERKELEY, CALIF.

DEAR MOLLEEN: Whoa ... hold it! I plead "not guilty" as charged. I do not write the "heads" for my column. The editor of your newspaper deserves all the credit or blame — whichever the case may be.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Since my son got married, do I have to give up my five-year friendship with his former girlfriend? My son's wife says it's like a slap in the face to her.

LIZZIE IN MALIBU

DEAR LIZZIE: Your friendship with your son's former girlfriend has nothing to do with his present wife. You do not need her approval to continue a valued friendship.

New transportation plans criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration's blueprint for the nation's transportation network will take the country back to the "horse and buggy years" instead of guiding it into the next century, a former transportation secretary contends.

"By forcing states to come up with more money, the administration's national transportation plan only hurts those states that can least afford it," Sen. Brock Adams, D-Wash., said Thursday night on the Senate floor.

Adams and other Democratic critics said the plan bears the thumb prints of White House chief of staff John Sununu, who is bent on seeing that President Bush keeps his pledge of "no new taxes."

"Everyone seems to be paying except the federal government," said Adams. "This plan isn't a road map into the '90s. It's a road map back into the horse and buggy years" when toll roads and turnpikes were the rule, not the exception.

The criticism by Adams, who served as transportation secretary under President Carter from 1977 to 1979, was far from the only one to greet the proposal developed by Transportation Secretary Samuel K. Skinner.

Skinner unveiled the 129-page plan with Bush on Thursday morning and defended it later before the House surface transportation subcommittee, which must formulate a five-year highway and mass transit spending plan.

Many of the proposals in Skinner's plan, "Moving America Into the 21st Century," are contained in the administration's 1991 budget proposal.

The plan calls for more toll roads, local gas taxes, user fees, private investments, competition, deregulation, research into futuristic systems and openness to foreign air carriers as well as increased attention to safety and protection of the environment.

Skinner said that with the higher responsibility comes greater local flexibility and room for innovation. Although rural states should end up with a greater share of federal dollars as urban areas find other financing arrangements, it is up to Congress to fight out the balance between urban and rural interests, he said.

Malcolm Forbes makes gift from the grave

NEW YORK (AP) — The late Malcolm Forbes left orders to give all Forbes Inc. employees an extra week's pay, a break on personal loans and some free advice on what to do with the money: "enjoy it!"

Steve Forbes, Forbes' son and successor as editor in chief of Forbes magazine and chief executive officer of the corporation, told staffers Thursday that "in accordance with my father's wishes" the company was giving each of them an extra week's pay and forgiving all debts up to $10,000.

"As Pop put it, 'Like a lottery, it's pure chance as to who benefits,'" his son wrote in a letter to employees, referring to the loan amnesty.

"As for the extra pay," Forbes added, "his advice should be no surprise: enjoy it!"

Don Garson, a magazine spokesman, said the bequest surprised staffers at the Forbes Building on Fifth Avenue in Manhattan.

"I didn't find out about it until you called me, and I'm the P.R. man here," he said in a telephone interview. "But it was something he (Malcolm) had made clear to the kids."

Garson said the debt amnesty was particularly generous because Forbes employees of more than a year's experience are able to borrow money from the company at relatively low interest rates. He said that many of the magazine's 750 employees had taken such loans.

Asked about those thrifty souls who had not, Garson laughed and said: "I'm sure many of us here are saying, 'Damn it, why didn't I borrow something?'"

Garson said he was told the Forbes family would have no comment on Malcolm Forbes' bequest. "The letter speaks for itself," he said.

He said the gift was in character for Forbes, who "always had the attitude that the employees were giving to him, rather than the other way around."

Forbes was 70 when he died Feb. 24 of a heart attack at his estate in New Jersey. Estimates of his wealth ranged into the hundreds of millions of dollars.

Loans released

AUSTIN (AP) — Small businesses and agricultural cooperatives in 17 South Texas counties could be eligible for low-interest loans if they suffered economic losses during December's freeze, officials said.

The federal Small Business Administration has declared Aransas, Bexar and Kleberg counties disaster areas because of the freeze from Dec. 21 through Dec. 24, Gov. Bill Clements said Friday.

Men and Women at Work

Work patterns of men and women, 1985

Almost one-third of America's working men in the mid 1980s worked less than 35 hours per week. Meanwhile, only 14 percent of working women worked less than 35 hours. Nearly one-fifth of working men and women worked at home.

New Johnson book criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — The people who worked for Lyndon Johnson in this town are buzzing — and often furious — about a new biography of their old boss that says he stole his election to the Senate in 1948.

"Why, why, why would a man want to spend this much of his life writing about a fellow that he can't stand and whose reputation he is so passionately bent on destroying?" demands an injured Jack Valenti, an aide in Johnson's White House.

"I think it is a dishonest biography," says Bob Hardesty, who used to write Johnson's speeches and helped him write his memoirs. "I don't think it pretends to be fair. I think it is the work of a man with a burning, unnatural hatred for his subject. It only presents a dark, evil, negative side of Lyndon Johnson."

The book, "Means of Ascent," by Robert Caro pictures a youthful Johnson who is willing to do almost anything to appease an all-consuming political appetite.

It is the second of Caro's projected four-volume LBJ biography. Caro already has devoted 14 years to the task. The first volume met with equal hostility from some Johnson fans. One book critic said it demonstrated "enraged animus against Lyndon Johnson."

The new volume is just out, but excerpts ran in the New Yorker magazine and they were the talk of Washington's Texas community.

Ex-Texas newspaperman Bob Mann, now teaching at Emory & Henry College in southwestern Virginia, says this week's mail brought three sets of Xeroxed copies of the excerpts from friends who were afraid he might miss them.

Caro, in the book's introduction, acknowledges that he paints a portrait of a despicable person.

While "bright and dark" threads run through most of Johnson's life, Caro writes, no bright thread is visible in a period when Johnson "was all but totally consumed by his need for power and by his efforts to obtain it."

The book covers the years from Johnson's 1941 defeat for a Senate seat in a rigged election to his 1948 victory — by 87 votes — in a 1948 Democratic runoff over an enormously popular former governor, Coke Stevenson.

The theft by Johnson of that primary election has been fixed in Texas lore for years, but Caro provides new evidence.

The book also says Johnson pulled strings in Washington to enhance the power and value of a Texas radio station that made him a millionaire.

And it says Johnson made shamelessly political capital from his war career — which amounted to flying under enemy fire for only a few minutes, then accepting a Silver Star from Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

"He didn't seize the Silver Star," says Horace Busby, a Johnson associate for 20 years. "MacArthur, who was a political general, gave it to him to curry favor with Franklin Roosevelt, who liked Johnson. What was Johnson to do — throw it back?"

As for LBJ's stolen election, Busby says: "Johnson went before a statewide electorate seven times after that and it was never a factor."

Caro's critics say his legwork is meticulous and his writing thrilling, but his viewpoint warped. They say he finds little good — or balanced — to say about Johnson and nothing bad in Stevenson's record, despite his touch of racism.

History buff Jeff Patterson, an aide to Rep. Mike Andrews, D-Texas, says Stevenson comes across as "Saint Coke."

"Caro sets out to make Johnson look like a real jerk," says Patterson. "Give me warts-and-all, but don't try to overdo it."

Political reporter David Broder, reviewing the book in The Washington Post, said Caro's Johnson is "a complete scoundrel" and "a lying, cunning, utterly unprincipled operator."

Candidate threatened over ads

AUSTIN (AP) — Democrat Clint Hackney, a candidate for Texas Railroad Commission, said he will not back down from his proposal to have random drug tests for truck drivers despite threats from anonymous callers who say they are truck drivers.

"I'm not going to be intimidated to stop this random drug-testing program," Hackney said Thursday. "We're going to have safe transportation in Texas," the former Houston legislator said.

Hackney said some of the callers threatened to organize politically for his opponent, former U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger, in Tuesday's primary.

Asked if he felt physically threatened, Hackney said, "When you receive a call by a truck driver asking specifically where you live, then that driver hangs up, you're going to be concerned."

Krueger's campaign spokesman Jon Massey said Hackney has latched onto the issue for political reasons and that there are constitutional questions about whether random drug testing can be done.

But Hackney said most truckers agree with his proposal to randomly test truck drivers at weigh stations and entry points.

Hampton Rogers, a spokesman for the Texas Motor Transportation Association, a trucking company trade group, said Hackney's ads unfairly portray truck drivers.

"There are drivers who are under the influence, but the vast majority are professionals who don't drink or use drugs," Rogers said.

Rogers said the association supports drug testing programs, but that random testing is being legally challenged in California.

Under current state law, interstate trucking companies are required to have a drug testing program, and that requirement will take effect later in the year for intrastate trucking lines, Rogers said.

Another law that takes effect in 1992 would suspend for one year commercial licenses for truckers who are discovered under the influence of alcohol or drugs, he said.

"Drug testing hasn't taken the industry by surprise," Rogers said.

A National Transportation Safety Board study of eight states in 1988 showed that one in three truck drivers killed in traffic accidents were under the influence of alcohol or drugs.

Military announces plan to expand role in drug war

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon today announced it will significantly expand its role in the administration's war on drugs by deploying an array of warships, aircraft and communications equipments in the Atlantic, Pacific and Caribbean.

"We will act swiftly, methodically and in accordance with our nation's laws and traditions," Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said in a prepared statement.

Cheney's statement said the commander of the U.S. Atlantic Command would use four or five Naval ships daily to track and stop the flow of drugs in international waters. The use of Air Force Airborne Warning and Control Systems, or AWACS, aircraft will be increased in international airspace.

The U.S. Atlantic and Pacific commands each plan to use more than eight classes of aircraft and six classes of ships for the drug-interdiction strategy, Cheney said.

The aircraft will include E-2 Hawkeyes, P-3 Orions, F-4 Phantoms and F-14 Tomcats. Ships include destroyers, frigates, guided missile frigates, guided missile destroyers, aircraft carriers, patrol hydrofoils and various amphibious and logistic support ships, he said.

The museum in Mao Zedong's birthplace in Shaoshan, China, omits any mention of the Cultural Revolution or the Red Guards, and a recent visitor was unable to buy a picture of the late dictator or any of his writings, says National Geographic.

Cyclists stop over in Snyder recently

By Howard Bigham

Duane and Elizabeth Nieman are completing another bicycling tour. With a total of 16,000 miles logged, they stopped briefly in Snyder recently on their return home to Michigan.

The Niemans left Romeo, Mich. in April of 1988. They spent six months touring the northwestern section of the United States, including Alaska and Canada, before flying to Hawaii. There they spent four months touring by both boat and bike.

In November the two flew to Australia where they spent nine months.

"It's easy to get in trouble there. The towns are sometimes very far apart... a couple of them are 250 miles apart," Elizabeth said.

Elizabeth carries 80 to 100 pounds of gear on her bike. Duane carries one 100 to 150 pounds. However, while in Australia, they had to carry an extra 50 pounds of water on each bike. "There was no place to stop to get water between towns," Duane explained.

"I couldn't lift my bike over a little curb," Elizabeth said.

From Australia, the Niemans flew to New Zealand.

"New Zealand was great, you could be snow skiing in the morning and that afternoon be at the beach. You are never more than 60 miles from the coast," Elizabeth said.

After spending four months in New Zealand, they flew back to Los Angeles and cycled south to San Diego for Christmas with relatives.

Cyclists have an opportunity to watch the same scenery for long periods of time. The Niemans break the monotony by watching for things to pick up along the roadways. Their finds have included money, Bungi cords in New Zealand, various tools and aluminum cans. "If we had the means to carry the cans and knew where to sell them, we could have made a fortune," Duane said.

BICYCLISTS–Duane and Elizabeth Nieman recently passed through Snyder en route to their home in Michigan. The couple has taken many bicycle trips together including Australia and New Zealand. (SDN Staff Photo)

Greenspan won't be reappointed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Bush is unlikely to reappoint Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan when his term expires in August 1991 because of Greenspan's refusal to push interest rates down further, a newspaper reported Friday.

Bush is "mad as hell" about Greenspan's position on interest rates and will seek a new Fed chief, the Los Angeles Times reported, quoting an unidentified longtime Bush adviser.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater acknowledged that Bush differs with Greenspan's tight monetary policy, but denied that Bush was so upset that he was determined not to reappoint Greenspan.

Republican sources told the Times that some economists see Greenspan's monetary policy as too tight considering recent weaknesses in the economy.

Enrollment in primary and secondary schools in all Latin American countries has increased dramatically since 1950, says the Inter-American Development Bank. Combined enrollment jumped 6.8 times between 1950 and 1985, from 13 million to 89 million. This, while the population aged 6 to 18 increased from 46 to 117 million.

Angleton resident may have lived under different names

ANGLETON, Texas (AP) — An Angleton man located in Kansas last month after suffering amnesia also may have lived under different identities in California and Washington, D.C., authorities say.

Melvin Wolf, an Angleton appliance repairman, had been known as John Doe since he was found Oct. 19 wandering the streets of Topeka, Kan., without identification. He told authorities he didn't know his name or what he was doing there.

His identity surfaced last month after two relatives saw a television report on his plight in Milwaukee, Wis., where he grew up. Wolf had left Angleton in August, telling relatives he was going to Washington to take care of personal business.

Authorities said since then, a television viewer reported Wolf also may be Jim King, an insurance salesman who disappeared from Burbank, Calif., in 1978. Another report said he may be a short-order cook named Robert J. Hart, who vanished from Washington at least three years ago.

"You can call it interesting. I'd call it bizarre," said Rick Selig, the Topeka clinical therapist who worked with Wolf to help him regain his memory before he returned to Angleton this week.

Selig, who has been using hypnosis to treat Wolf's amnesia, said he believes Wolf's personality could accommodate changes that would have allowed him to live under other identities.

"From what I know of Melvin, he is a man who gets fed up easily," Selig said. "When he does, he distances himself."

Authorities said Jim King left behind a wife and two children when he disappeared from Burbank in 1978 under suspicious circumstances. Burbank police investigator Kathy Speirs said King is suspected of embezzling an undetermined about of money from his employer, an insurance company.

Ms. Speirs said King has been listed as legally dead for several years, but the case was reopened after an insurance company employee identified the Topeka amnesia victim as King. Authorities now are seeking Wolf's fingerprints and personal records to prove or disprove the allegation.

Wolf arrived in Angleton from California three years ago, but relatives said he did not recognize the green van he drove here when he saw it Tuesday.

A Washington restaurant worker told Topeka police investigator Bill Huffnier he saw a similar television report and the amnesia victim was Robert J. Hart, a former short-order cook at the restaurant. But Washington police have no missing persons report filed on Hart.

Wolf's family, who are shielding him from the press while he recovers, said they doubt Wolf and King are the same person.

"When we saw the pictures, it didn't even look like him. We don't know what happened. Nobody does," said Charlie Caskey, Wolf's brother-in-law.

Selig suspects Wolf is suffering from psychogenic amnesia brought on by great pain or stress. He said he did not believe Wolf is faking the amnesia to hide his past.

"From day one, part of our task was to assess whether he was faking it," Selig said.

Make recommendation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Treasury Department is asking President Bush to appoint a former senior Labor Department official with scant experience in banking as the nation's chief savings and loan regulator, an administration source says.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady is recommending that T. Timothy Ryan Jr. be named to replace M. Danny Wall as head of the department's Office of Thrift Supervision, said the source, who spoke Thursday on condition of anonymity.

Diabetes discovery important

DALLAS (AP) — A new clue that could lead to earlier detection and treatment of juvenile-onset diabetes has been uncovered by Dallas researchers, according to a report published Thursday.

Findings by doctors at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center and the Dallas Veterans Administration Medical Center show that a molecule on special cells in the pancreas begin development of the disease.

After three years of research, scientists reported in the New England Journal of Medicine that killer antibodies appear to interfere with the ability of insulin-producing cells to absorb glucose.

"The whole point of this study is — the hope is — there will be a predictive test," Dr. Roger Unger, director of Southwestern's Center for Diabetes Research and the journal article's co-author, said.

"In order to prevent it, you have to have good predictive tests."

Doctors estimate that juvenile-onset diabetes affects one in 10 of the country's 6.5 million diagnosed diabetics. The ailment is also called insulin-dependent diabetes since victims require daily insulin injections.

Diabetes and its complications, which include heart disease and strokes, will claim an estimated 200,000 lives in the United States this year.

Cut your own taxes and save

Rules on dependents change often

By George W. Smith, CPA

(Fifth of 14 parts)

The Tax Reform Act has increased the amount allowed for each personal exemption since 1986.

The act made other changes involving exemptions: Children who can be claimed as dependents on their parents' returns may not claim themselves on their own returns, and exemptions for age and blindness have been replaced by a higher standard deduction. In addition, dependents at least 2 years old need a Social Security number that must be listed on Form 1040 or 1040A.

For higher-income taxpayers, the exemption amount phases out. The phaseout (or reduction) starts at the taxable income level for each filing status at which the benefit of the 15 percent tax rate is totally phased out.

There are two kinds of exemptions: those for you and your spouse (personal exemptions) and those for children and relatives (dependent exemptions). For 1989, you are allowed a $2,000 deduction for each exemption to which you are entitled.

You can always take an exemption for yourself, unless you are a dependent on another taxpayer's return. Prior to the Tax Reform Act, everyone was allowed his or her own personal exemption. Not anymore. Congress changed the rules. Now, a personal exemption may not be claimed by a person who can be claimed as a dependent on another taxpayer's return.

If you are married and file jointly, you may claim an exemption for yourself and one for your spouse. If you file separately, you may take your spouse's exemption only if he or she had no gross income and was not a dependent of another taxpayer. If your spouse files separately and has any gross income, you may not claim his or her exemption.

A child born any time during the year entitles either parent to claim a full exemption for the tax year. An exemption may not be claimed for a stillborn child.

Extra exemptions for age and blindness are no longer allowed. Instead, additional standard deductions are provided.

There are five tests that must be met to claim an exemption for a dependent:

• Gross Income Test: The claimed dependent must have had less than $2,000 in gross income for 1989. The exceptions to this rule are a child who is under the age of 19 or who is a full-time student during some part of five calendar months in the calendar year and for whose support the taxpayer continues to provide more than half. However, starting in 1989, no exemption amount is allowed for a child who is a student and has attained the age of 24 unless his or her gross income is less than the exemption amount.

You can always take an exemption for yourself, unless you are a dependent on another taxpayer's return.

• Household or Relationship Test: A member of your household who lives with you for the entire year need not be related in order for you to claim that individual as a dependent — as long as that person qualifies as your dependent and the relationship between you and that person does not violate any local law.

Temporary absences from your home for such reasons as vacations, attending school, or sickness do not disqualify a person as your dependent.

• Citizenship or Resident Test: Your dependent must be a U.S. citizen, resident or national or must be a resident of Canada or Mexico for some part of the calendar year.

• Joint Return Test: You are not allowed an exemption for a dependent if he or she filed a joint income tax return. However, the dependent may file a joint return if there was no tax liability and it was only to get a refund for all taxes withheld.

• Support Test: In general, you must have provided more than half of the dependent's support in 1989.

Often, several children will provide collectively more than half the support of one or both parents. While no one member of the group furnishes the chief support (more than half), there is a special rule that permits one of them to claim the dependency exemption.

Here is the way to do it: If each of the children who furnished more than 10 percent of total support completes and signs a Multiple Support Declaration (Form 2120), the exemption can be claimed by any one of the group who furnishes more than 10 percent. The one making the claim simply attaches to his return all the signed Form 2120s from the other members of the family.

A divorce or separation involving children often brings problems when it comes to claiming exemptions. Both parents may try to claim them.

The custodial parent is entitled to claim the exemption, regardless of the amount of support furnished by the non-custodial parent. This can be waived if the custodial parent signs Form 8332, Release of Claim to Exemption for Child of Divorced or Separated Parents, and attaches it to the return of the non-custodial parent. The waiver may be made on an annual or permanent basis.

Illness can follow heart surgery

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 60-year-old father underwent a seven-artery bypass a year ago. Instead of feeling better on his release from the hospital, he began having headaches, a constant low-grade fever, weakness, pains and chest heaviness.

His doctor subsequently diagnosed Dressler's syndrome and prescribed prednisone for 45 days. Now he experiences occasional chest pain, and his memory seems to fail him frequently. What is Dressler's syndrome, and what are the long-term effects?

DEAR READER: Dressler's syndrome (post-myocardial or post-pericardiotomy syndrome) is an uncommon and poorly understood complication of heart attacks or heart surgery. The condition, which is believed due to an autoimmunity (self-allergy) to cardiac tissue, causes lassitude, fever, chest pain, fluid around the heart and the lungs, difficulty breathing and joint aches. It usually appears several days or weeks following a heart attack or heart surgery.

Sometimes, Dressler's syndrome is difficult to differentiate from a repeat heart attack, heart failure or cardiac infection. However, blood tests, cardiograms and ultrasound examinations will usually indicate the presence of the syndrome which, although harmless, is quite uncomfortable.

Most patients respond to therapy with aspirin or aspirin-like medications. In the more serious and rare cases, prednisone (purified cortisone) may be necessary to reduce inflammation and relieve pain. There are no long-term consequences of the condition.

Medical textbooks describe the syndrome as lasting only a few weeks. Then it disappears and will not return.

However, early in my practice, I took care of a retired firefighter with Dressler's syndrome and, try as I might, I could not get him off prednisone. Every time I attempted to discontinue the medicine, his pain and fever would return.

Eventually, he recovered completely — but it took almost five years of therapy until he was free of symptoms without medicine. This experience taught me that not all medical cases follow the standard textbook descriptions. Fortunately, my patient has remained healthy for more than 15 years and has had no further chest pain or heart damage.

Incidentally, memory loss is not a part of Dressler's syndrome; such a mental change is more likely due to your father's state of health and the effects of the prednisone, which can produce mental changes in some people. Tell your father to be patient; his prognosis is good.

Sex is a no-no in American nursing homes.

By the time you are infirm enough to need institutional care, you're expected to have outgrown such improper activity, which popular wisdom and nursing-home administrators have judged unbecoming to elderly ladies and gentlemen who are not cemented by marriage vows — or, often, even those who are.

In most nursing homes, lack of privacy impedes intimacy. Lights out means no stealthy nocturnal visitations leading to funny business. Actually, in some nursing homes, sexy behavior can be grounds for dismissal.

As a resident, you can raise Cain at night (until the nurse shuts down your after-burner with a tranquilizer), scream bloody murder about the steam-wilted food, complain vociferously that your family visits only once a year, bite the nurse that feeds you, and engage in a splendid variety of anti-social acts: Refuse bingo, play hooky from Bible-study classes, nod off during the sing-along, put your britches on backward or hide a bottle of Seagram's 7 in your dirty laundry. All this is as predictable as a falling rock. Nursing homes are geared for it. They expect it; it's built into the system for which you're paying megabucks.

However, the moment your aging (but operational) hormones begin to race your engine, you're in trouble. The elderly, like preadolescent children, are expected to be asexual. All the groping and panting belongs to a past generation, to a time when your nursing caretakers were transferring spoonfuls of Pablum from their heated plates to the linoleum kitchen floor. Nursing-home residents are supposed to have given up the touchy-feely stuff — except for old Mr. Hartley who can't resist pinching a starched bottom. ("He's just senile, Betsy, but you've really got to watch those hands, especially at bath time.")

Nursing-home authorities usually resemble traditional prep-school masters, and they insist on equally prudish regulations. However, the adolescent rules (no unchaperoned visitation, doors open at all times, both feet on the floor) have been pre-empted by a more invidious attitude: the priggish assumption that the elderly are uninterested in and incapable of sexual expression.

Fortunately, this view is not universal. According to an article in the Oct. 24, 1989, issue of Connecticut's Hartford Courant, elderly male residents of nursing homes in the Netherlands are being urged to use condoms.

What's going on?

Apparently, this is part of a 10-year national program to promote sexual freedom among the 200,000 elderly Dutch in nursing homes. Many such homes now allow residents to bring in prostitutes. "I can only guess why they've got that grin on their face afterward," said an administrator, "but it's none of my business as a director what happens in there."

The over-65 set is being encouraged to use condoms to prevent AIDS. Government spokesmen believe the practice is of dubious value because of the improbability that older patients will contract the disease; the prostitutes themselves are very "AIDS-conscious."

The message of this provocative newspaper report could well be that your love life doesn't come to a grinding halt at 65. If retirement-age people require a bit of imaginative sex play from a pro, so be it.

While we may disagree with the morality of this of this promiscuity, the elderly should, perhaps, be allowed the same freedom of choice afforded younger members of society. If we're going to be consistent, let's prosecute the clients of singles bars and make an issue of coeducational college dormitories.

It seems to me that consenting adults of any age ought to be left alone to make their own decisions about intimacy. Problems may arise from the general misperception that sex after middle age is "dirty" and somehow unnatural. We need to take a more realistic view of such a myth. If we did, American nursing homes might become far more responsive to the wishes of their residents, who should be entitled to the same privileges enjoyed by younger, non-institutionalized adults.

Clayton Williams said to be 'hot' property

AUSTIN (AP) — When you're hot, you're hot.

With network television crews now following his campaign, Clayton Williams has suddenly found himself receiving national exposure and answering questions about subjects far removed from such state issues as budgets and taxes.

"This hero worship of John Wayne. Why John Wayne?" one out-of-state reporter asked Williams on Thursday.

The candidate beamed.

"Why John Wayne is John Wayne," he replied. "John Wayne was a dream of what we all wished we were rather than what any of us mortals are ... the good guy who whipped the bad guy, who was on the side of right, law and order."

With even his opponents' private polls now reportedly showing him near or above the 50 percent support needed to avoid an April runoff, the colorful West Texas candidate is basking in his momentum as the campaign rolls toward Tuesday's primary.

"As a Republican, it would be much better for our party if I were able to make it without a runoff," Williams said.

"We are asking all our supporters to please walk that extra block, please call on that extra house, please make that extra phone call. Because one vote could very well make the difference," Williams said.

Then, flashing a grin and demonstrating the self-deprecating humor that marks many of his public appearances, the oilman-rancher added, "I must be sounding like a politician. I circled that question pretty good."

Front-runner in the seven-man field for Tuesday's GOP primary, Williams apparently is so confident that he skipped a televised League of Women Voters' debate in Dallas Wednesday night.

The cowboy-hatted candidate, who says he owns no shoes — just boots — has crisscrossed the state at a furious pace in the closing days. He has spent $5.6 million of his own in an $8 million campaign, and in recent days has found himself repeatedly surrounded by fans.

In Galveston, a police officer asked him to sign a Williams' "rock buster" campaign brochure, a reference to his promise to see drug dealers "busting rocks."

At the Capitol, after kissing three small children and signing an autograph for a tourist, he explained his rising popularity by talking about his wife, Modesta.

"Take a good look at me, look at my profile. Now look at Modesta," he challenged. "You think I'm not the sellingest son-of-a-gun you've ever seen?"

In other gubernatorial developments Thursday:

— Republican gubernatorial hopeful Jack Rains, campaigning in Fort Worth, said Texas should set an example for the rest of the country and the world" by showing that economic growth doesn't have to harm the environment.

He said his environmental program would encourage recycling, vigorously enforce environmental protection laws and reduce and treat waste with financial incentives for technological innovations.

Eastern bloc countries will get to sample TV programs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In television ratings talk, the numbers are down — way down — for communism in the East bloc, and liberated audiences are ready for their first glimpse of "Santa Barbara" and other bourgeois decadence.

Expatriate Soviets, American television executives — including "Garfield's" animator — and a cable company headed by a Polish concentration camp escapee are among those trying to grab a piece of the new marketplace.

Others aren't sure Eastern European and Soviet audiences are worth the stretch for commercial television.

"They have no money, so it will be quite some time before it approaches a meaningful market," warned Colin Davis, the head of MCA Television International. "Some have taken the approach of giving them a show and then sharing in advertising revenue. But there isn't much advertising because there isn't much in the way of consumer goods."

Conduit Internationale Films has offered "The Wonder Years" and the soap opera "Santa Barbara" to newly established Polish commercial television Channel 2.

The shows will begin airing this month, while Conduit tries to drum up international advertising. One prime-time minute on Polish television sells for $6,500, with the revenue to be split between Conduit, the program supplier and the Polish television firm. Conduit claims 10,000 television households in Poland.

Robert Spinner, head of Conduit's advertising push, said he believes the television and consumer markets will grow simultaneously in Poland.

"I don't see it as a great market for BMWs, but for low-cost items such as cosmetics, soap, cold remedies and soft drinks, its a good market," Spinner said.

While Conduit will seek to program standard airwave channels, another American company, Chase Enterprises of Hartford, Conn., is installing television cable lines in Poland and Hungary.

Headed by Polish-born David Chase, who survived four World War II concentration camps including Auschwitz before escaping, the media company recently signed a deal giving it 70 percent of the Polish cable franchise, with 30 percent under control by a government consortium.

"In all likelihood, there will not be an immediate gold mine," conceded Arnold Chase, David's son. "There are still problems to be overcome, and there are still changes going on, but the changes are for the positive."

The son estimated the cost for cabling Poland at $900 million. The company last week also entered into a similar cable agreement with Hungary roughly estimated to cost $250 million.

Soviet television has had a few experimental broadcasts of American programming, and Russian media experts in the United States predict there will someday be a market for commercial American shows in their country.

But the current effort to establish Western television in the Soviet Union involves co-productions bringing American and West European cash in exchange for low-cost Soviet talent and studios.

Film Roman, the Burbank, Calif.-based animation studio that turns out the "Garfield" cartoon series and specials, has signed an agreement with the Soviets establishing a 10,000-square foot studio outside Moscow.

The move is the latest quest by American animation studios to find cheaper labor outside the country. In recent years, said Film Roman chief executive officer Phil Roman, film animation contracting has traveled from Japan to Korea to Taiwan.

The Soviet animation artists will do backgrounds, ink, paint and camera work, with post-production, such as adding character voices and sound effects, handled back in the United States.

"They offer very high animation at a very reasonable price. They get paid two or three times what they are normally making and the cost is still below what it is for us in the Far East," said Roman.

WTC's spring concert due on stage Tuesday

The spring concert of the Western Texas College music department has been scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Fine Arts Theatre on campus.

Admission is free and the public is invited to attend. A reception in the theatre lobby will follow the concert, which will last about 45 minutes.

Appearing on the program will be the WTC Concert Choir, the Collegiate Singers and the WTC Women's Ensemble. Directing the groups will be Brent Hardegree and Jane Womack.

Opening the concert will be the Women's Ensemble performing "Jubilate Deo," "Love Brings a Little Sadness" and "The Lark Ascending."

They will be followed by the Concert Choir with "Deposuit potentes," "Ave verum corpus" and "Der gang zum Liebchen."

The Collegiate Singers will present three English madrigals from the Renaissance period, "April is in my Mistress' Face," "O eyes of my beloved," and "My heart doth beg you'll not forget."

The Concert Choir will close the program with an Irish tune, "Sing, Sing," and "Festival Sanctus."

Members of the Concert Choir are Barbara Ashby, Shanna Byrd, Barbara Chapman, Stacey Hardegree, Dawn Weller, Royce Hataway, Blaine Irons, Todd Perry, Shelley Gibson, Ann Marie Guerrero, Gina Vaughn, John Howard, Robert Lane, Roddy Oaks, Francois Pointeau, David Stewart and Jimmy Sturdivant of Snyder; Gena Grammer of Grapevine, Robin Jones of Aspermont, Charemon Peery and Rozlyn Peery of Abilene; Konnie Adams of Dallas; Sandra Elias of Stamford; Shelly Lofton, Alisa Powell and Joe Gloria of Sweetwater; Lesa Miller of Abernathy; James Pope of Post and Lance Rasch of Brownwood.

Also in the Collegiate Singers are Shanna Byrd, Gena Grammer, Stacey Hardegree, sopranos; Barbara Chapman and Sandra Elias, altos; Blaine Irons and Todd Perry, tenors, and John Howard and David Stewart, basses.

Members of the Women's Ensemble are Nell Allen, Sherry Jenkins, Judy McLarty and Chiva Pitner, soprano I; Kim Fritz, Linda Mize, Sue Sewell and Charlotte Smith, soprano II, and Anita Brown, Barbara Burney, Elaine Githens, Doris Spikes and Brenda Rowe, altos.

Went to visit Uncle Elber the other day. After we got the preliminaries over, it was a real restful experience.

AFTER the preliminaries, that is. Elber sees about 10 times as many chickens as he does people during any given week, so you've got to be prepared for some conversation when you get to his place.

Not that he doesn't talk to the chickens, understand. He does. It's just that they don't answer back so well.

Sure enough, I drove up the back way and he got to the car and got started before I could get the seatbelt loose.

"Say, how come they're upping the price of a meal two bits at the center?" he said, referring to the senior citizen center here.

I explained to him as how that was part of the budget cuts the county was being forced to make after the rollback election.

"Them ads you ran in your paper said that talk about cuts was just to scare people. Said they wouldn't make no cuts."

In this business, you can tell right away when somebody's upset. They refer to YOUR newspaper. I guess it's the same with other businesses. Then, it's probably YOUR store or YOUR bank.

Well, I said to Elber — ignoring the fact that neither the ads nor the newspaper were mine — the county is asking all its departments to make cuts. Hopefully, enough small cuts will make up the difference, and no single department or its services will be seriously jeopardized.

Besides, I said, it's more of a request than a demand. The senior center asks for a donation of $1.50 a meal ($1.75 with the budget cut). It doesn't actually charge or demand payment.

"Think I'm gonna go in there and tell 'em I won't pay the extra quarter and look like a fool?" Elber said, eyebrows raised.

"Elber," I said, "Have you eaten at the senior center, EVER?"

"That ain't the point. I might want to someday and when that someday comes I might not have the extra two bits."

"Trade 'em a chicken," I said.

"Humph," he said. "Gettin' a little smart-alecky in our old age, ain't we?"

I guess I was, but Elber almost never leaves his place and so as far as I was concerned, the topic of discussion didn't make too much sense. Oh, two or three times a year he cranks up the old pickup and gets into town, but usually relatives and friends handle what little business needs tending to — chicken feed, flour, salt, bread and the Dallas Cowboys football schedule.

Elber has always paid his way, and others too. Never had much money, but always had a dollar if folks around were in bad shape. Me included, as I recall.

In fact, Elber gave me lunch money more than once when I lost it, and has never let on to the rest of the family that I got licks the first day of class in the first grade. How he found out, I don't know, but it's still a source of amusement for him.

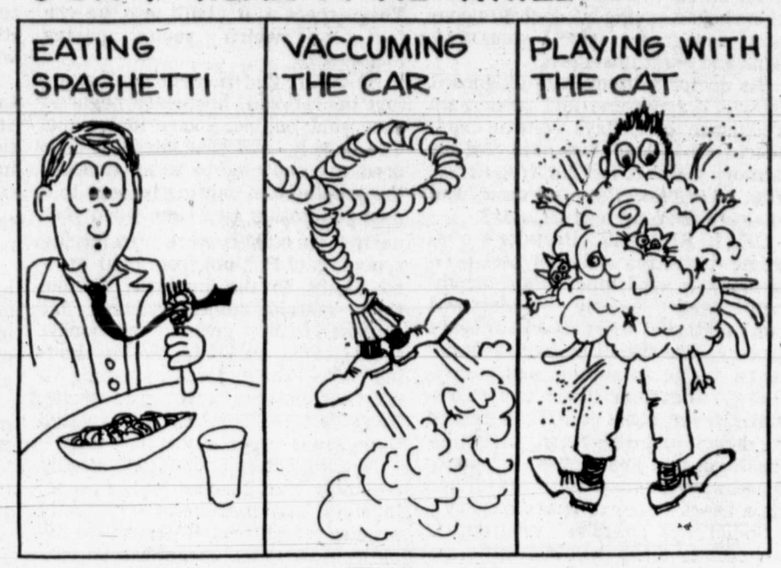
"You still aren't too old for me to tan your hide, boy," he says. "Even if you are out of the first grade now."

Elber's place is small and when I visit I usually sleep out on the front porch. This occasion was no different. I appreciated the opportunity it gave me to slow down, look up at the bright West Texas night sky, and not be able to hear another car or truck or train. An occasional song from a coyote was welcome.

Morning came. We shook off the chickens, got up, fed them and collected eggs. Elber fixed a breakfast of "home grown" eggs, bacon, potatoes, syrup and biscuits while I patched up a spot in the back of the chicken house that was getting raggedy.

There's no real ending to this story. We sat around and talked for a while, then I headed back to civilization as it were. But I'm thinking, that if the meals at the senior center taste anything like the breakfast at Elber's, they could charge $5 and nobody would complain.

But I wouldn't tell Elber that.



Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

One of my heros died a few days ago and I greatly shall miss his presence on this earth.

Malcolm Forbes certainly never heard of me, but I've been following his life through the media for some years now. He made his greatest public relations coup last year by throwing a two million dollar seventieth birthday party for himself and a few hundred friends and business associates in Morocco. His date was Elizabeth Taylor.

Malcolm Forbes was rich in ways you and I cannot even begin to imagine. His collection of bejeweled Faberge eggs alone was priceless, outnumbering even those on display at the Soviet Heritage Museum. He founded "Forbes" magazine and built it into a definite business publication, making the famous Forbes Five Hundred list of the richest Americans an issue which was to wealthy what the Sports Illustated swimsuit issue is to the middle class.

But it wasn't Forbes' wealth which impressed me. I've never been much impressed with wealth and its trappings, deeming matters of the heart to be of far more value. What made Forbes my hero was his attitude toward life, an irrepressible zest for living and for flaunting convention that made us all stop and think. For example, while in his sixties, he discovered the thrill of motorcycling. He eventually amassed a fleet of Harley Davidsons. He loved nothing better than donning a black leather jacket and taking off with a gang of pals for a ride on the wild side.

And hot air balloons. Glory those hot air ballons of his. He owned 15 in every imaginable shape and size. He was the first person to cross the continental United States in a hot air balloon. Later he crossed Egypt in a magnificent balloon shaped like a camel. For his trip across India, he had one made into the shape of an elephant.

Granted we can't all afford such luxurious toys, and some of you may be tsk-tsking about the homeless and so forth. Forbes actually gave away a small fortune to charities. However he kept that aspect of his wealth quiet and on the side, which is how it should be.

I look beyond the wealth which made those balloons possible ...to the spirit of them. "When I was a little boy," he once said, "I knew that you could never let go of the string of a balloon, or it would forever be lost to you. With a hot air balloon, you are the string, and you can fly away wherever it takes you."

There were those of his generation, and of his class as well, who felt ole Malcolm should act his age. "Why should I?" he would scoff. "Who says we ever have to behave a certain way just because we are a certain age? We've only got so many years alloted to us after all, and we should live them to the fullest."

And when others called him eccentric, he laughed. "When you are rich he explained, "They call it eccentric. When you are poor, they call it nuts."

So full, in fact, was Forbes life, so rich in ways beyond money; so active and zestful; that he caught the whole world by suprise when he died quietly in his sleep of a heart attack at the age of 71.

His five sons made a statement to the press. The eldest, choking back a tear, said simply, "We just never thought it would happen to him."

Imagine living your life in such a way that it never occurs to those around you that you will actually die someday. That, my friends, is a life.

Forbes, characteristically, has the last word. He fashioned his own tombstone epitaph. It will say simply:

While alive, I lived.

SDN Week In Review

MONDAY
March 5

County commissioners authorized Winston Field airport manager Darrell Mize to advertise for bids to sell three 6,000 gallon underground fuel storage tanks.

An estimated 300 people attended the 65th anniversary celebration of the Snyder Lions Club here Saturday, including 21 past presidents and representatives from 19 chapters.

Former longtime Ector County sheriff's officer Jerry L. Davis has joined the Snyder Police Department and Sgt. Dale Burns has resigned to become a sheriff's deputy in Midland.

City councilmen voted to close and advertise for bids to sell the east and west fire stations, and they moved forward with the projected new $3 million-plus sewage treatment plant.

TUESDAY
March 7

A 37-year old Snyder man was indicted for murder Monday in the alleged Feb. 10 beating and kicking death of his wife.

Frank Phillips' Lady Plainsmen took the floor against the Lady Rebels of Hill County College in the tipoff game today as the first of two post-season junior college basketball tournaments got underway at Scurry County Coliseum.

Scurry County Appraisal District directors approved two equipment purchases and heard chief appraiser Ray Peveler discuss new state record keeping requirements that have put additional paperwork burden on the district.

WEDNESDAY
March 8

An 18-year old Snyder girl's heavyweight Hereford steer won the breed championship of the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo last Friday and brought $25,000 in the show sale.

THURSDAY
March 9

Ruth West has filed as a candidate for the Texas Silver Haired Legislature as a District 3 representative, which includes Scurry and 11 other counties.

South Plains College wrapped up one basketball crown here and made progress towards a possible sweep as Region V tournament action continued Thursday at Scurry County Coliseum.

FRIDAY
March 10

Snyder public schools board of trustees approved contracts for almost 200 instructors, okayed coaching supplement guidelines and accepted a bid for $14,800 to resurface eight tennis courts.

An inpassioned plea from a parent, numerous telephone calls and a 12-year guarantee helped trustees to unanimously accept a $47,700 bid for new high school band uniforms.

Letters To The Editor

Letters policy

Following a long-standing policy and practice, the Snyder Daily News will not publish letters pertaining to a candidate or issue when an election has been called.

Opinions for or against an issue or candidate may be published in paid political advertisements.

All letters to the editors must be signed and must give the address of the writer. Letters should be of reasonable length, and the newspaper does reserve the right to refuse letters if they contain libelous material or information deemed in poor taste.

Even the best lock isn't perfect

By the Editors of Consumer Reports

Every 10 seconds an American home is burglarized, and, in 25 percent of those cases, the thief enters through an unlocked window or door. But even if you do lock your doors, your home may not be secure. The average lock doesn't stand a chance against a determined burglar.

That's what Consumer Reports' experts found recently when they put dozens of door locks through a battery of assaults. The testers used a heavy, bullet-shaped pendulum to "kick" locked doors open; they pryed, pulled, hammered and wrenched lock cylinders with hand tools; and they hired a lock expert to evaluate pick resistance.

None of the locks — which ranged in price from $12 to more than $200 — could stand up to a well-placed kick without added reinforcement to the door or door jamb. Most locks were easily defeated when attacked by a drill, hammer, crowbar or other tool. And the security consultant found that many of the locks were a cinch to pick.

What can you do to make your home more burglar-resistant? It's best if you have metal-clad or solid hardwood doors and framing. To check the wood, try to stick a pushpin into the door and jamb. If it goes in easily, the wood is soft.

To beef up a softwood door, use a door-reinforcer — a metal shield that surrounds the door's lock area. A good one is the MAG Install-A-Lock ($11 to $18, depending on size and finish). For locks that use a common strike plate on the edge of a softwood frame, substitute a reinforced strike plate such as the Dexter Guardex, about $5.

Next, consider new locks. If your door has a key-in-knob lock, you could replace it with a high-security version, but that still doesn't give you the best protection. You'd be better off to augment the primary lock with an auxiliary dead-bolt lock.

On the front door, you might prefer a cylinder dead-bolt auxiliary lock — rather than a surface-mounted one — because of its unobtrusive appearance. Top-rated models are the Medeco D-11W0100-S1 ($93, single cylinder), the Medeco D-11-0100-00 ($93, single cylinder), the Medeco D-11-0100 ($167, double cylinder) and the Securitech 1derbolt DT13 ($80, double cylinder). The Medeco models should be used with a reinforced strike plate, such as the Dexter Guardex ($5). For added protection, the Securitech needs a reinforced strike plate as well as a door reinforcer.

Top-rated surface-mounted dead-bolt models are two from Medeco: the D-10-3444-00 ($227) and the D-10-3446-00 ($191). With surface-mounted dead-bolt locks, it's important to use 3-inch long screws in their strike plate rather than the shorter screws that come standard.

Be sure to improve the security of your windows, too. Here's an inexpensive but effective solution for double-hung windows: Drill a hole most of the way through the sashes where they overlap and insert a sturdy eyebolt to pin the sashes together.

To protect patio doors, you can buy a special steel or wood bar at hardware stores for about $10. It will keep the sliding panel in place. To prevent the stationary half from being pried out or slid along the track, you can use an eyebolt to pin the two doors together, much as you would a double-hung window.

In the year ahead in situations where you are strongly motivated, your possibilities for fulfilling your expectations will be extremely good. Dare to be hopeful and optimistic.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your influence over others is very strong today, yet you might not even be aware of this fact. Be careful what you say, because friends will take your words to heart. Pisces, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your instincts for survival and self-preservation are rather astute today. You should be able to move with certainty in matters where you feel your intuition is leading you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Today you are likely to be more receptive than usual to thoughts, ideas or messages of an inspirational nature. More importantly, you will know how to use that which you hear.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Achieving your objectives might not be easy today, yet much to the amazement of others, you'll find ways to do so. It's because you'll use your ingenuity.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It's important today that you share time with friends who are both active and optimistic. They'll satisfy your desires for companionship and inspire you as well.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You might have to draw upon the support and resources of others in order to attain your objectives today. This won't be a bad arrangement, because, if you profit, they'll also gain.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your best attributes today are your sense of humor and your philosophical attitude. You'll introduce harmony into your involvements and put those around you at ease.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You might possess a gift today that others lack. It will be your ability to transform that which appears to be useless into something worthwhile and functional.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Without really trying, you'll have the wherewithal today to charm the birds out of the trees. A word of caution, however, don't use this quality to try to manipulate others.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Good things of a material nature might develop for you today, but it could be due more to the efforts of others than your own. Do not be reluctant to share whatever you gain.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Regardless of what transpires early in the day, don't lose you sense of humor and take life or people too seriously. Things get better and better as the clock ticks on.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You won't be out of line today if you remind one who is obligated to you that this person's account is overdue. You might not get all that is owed you, but something is better than nothing.

Your Birthday

March 12, 1990

In the year ahead your prestige may ascend and you could have more influence over your peers than you have had previously. Several advantageous joint ventures are likely.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't be reluctant to change things today that are changeable, but, by the same token, don't make yourself nervous trying to change something you don't have the power to alter. Major changes are ahead for Pisces in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 444101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If someone comes to you for advice today, listen carefully and take ample time to deliberate before giving counsel. Snap judgments you render might be of little or no value.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be imaginative and resourceful today where your work is concerned, but don't skate off the boards. If your ideas are impractical instead of inventive, you'll just spin your wheels.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) The artist in you could emerge today and give you the ability to see beauty in all things, especially people. Others will be drawn to you, perhaps even people you don't want to attract.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Shifting conditions could present an unusual opportunity for you today, but if you do not study it carefully, you're not likely to appreciate all of its merits.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't hold back today in your dealings with people who have treated you generously in the past. If you do, you'll be embarrassed about it later when you've had time to review your actions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Financial trends could be a mixed bag for you today. The balance between your profitable possibilities and your extravagant inclinations could tilt either way.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You must be extremely careful not to say things without thinking. Your possibilities for making comments you'd like to retract are rather high today.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It looks like you should fare rather well today in situations where you're willing to share things with others. However, this won't be true in areas where you are selfishly motivated.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) This is one of those days when commercial involvements with friends might not work out as well as everyone anticipates. You may be better off doing business with strangers.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) In order to achieve important objectives today, you must be methodical and proceed from a strong base. If you try to build Rome in just one day, you'll not succeed.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) There is not apt to be an in-between with you today where your personal relationships are concerned. You'll either get along remarkably well or not at all.

2 heart attack drugs work equally well

NEW YORK (AP) — A study of more than 20,000 heart attack patients has found that one drug saved lives as well as another that costs about 10 times as much.

But officials at Genentech Inc., maker of the more expensive tissue plasminogen activator, or TPA, said Thursday that the treatment procedure in the study hampered that drug's effectiveness.

Genentech is consulting U.S. cardiologists about the need for another study that follows procedures generally used in the United States, said G. Kirk Raab, the company's president and chief executive officer.

The research released Thursday at a medical conference in Florence, Italy, was conducted in Italy and elsewhere in Europe.

It found that a patient's risk of dying before leaving the hospital was the same whether he was treated TPA or with streptokinase, made by Hoechst AG of Germany.

An editorial in the New England Journal of Medicine last year said one treatment with streptokinase costs $78 at a San Francisco hospital, while TPA costs $2,268. A separate report has cited a 10-fold difference.

The Italian researchers found an overall death rate of 8.9 percent after treatment with TPA and an 8.5 percent rate after treatment with streptokinase. Statistically, those rates are the same.

TPA and streptokinase are designed to destroy blood clots that have caused heart attacks by blocking a crucial blood vessel.

The newly announced study "bears out what a number of cardiologists have been really ... saying for the last four or five years, that there has been absolutely no scientific evidence that TPA was superior to streptokinase," said an American investigator familiar with the results, William O'Neill of William Beaumont Hospital in Royal Oak, Mich.

"Streptokinase would now appear to be the drug of choice based on factors of cost," said Dr. Claude J. Lenfant, director of the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute in Bethesda, Md.

But, he said, the price of TPA might fall as technological improvements reduce production costs.

The Italian study involved 20,749 patients with acute heart attack from 13 nations. They were randomly assigned to receive either streptokinase or TPA.

Honesty campaign did not make everyone be honest

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A 14-month campaign to make honesty a city policy ended Friday, and its leader and police say they cannot tell a lie: It hasn't rid the city of liars, cheats or scoundrels.

"We haven't wiped out crime or made everybody honest, but we have made people think about it. That's what we intended to do," said Jeb Stuart Magruder, the former Watergate conspirator who led the "Take an Honest Look" campaign.

The privately financed $35,000 campaign in this Midwestern city of 566,000 closed Friday with a speech by Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young and an awards ceremony honoring those whose honesty was exemplary.

The guest list excludes those responsible for an increase in crime in Columbus last year. Homicides rose by 29 percent from 1988, car thefts by 22 percent and aggravated assault by 5 percent.

Bank robberies dropped 50 percent last year, but already this year robbers have held up 33 banks, compared with 54 all of last year.

Deputy Chief Robert Kern said neither he nor the street patrol officers he oversees have noticed an outbreak of honesty.

"Crime is up, that's for sure," he said. "But I haven't noticed any more people than normal being honest. A lot of people call us with information or turn people in, but they've always done that."

The idea for the campaign surfaced when the honesty — or lack of it — of Columbus residents was questioned in 1988 after the rear doors of an armored car flew open, spewing bags of cash on an interstate.

Many motorists who stopped to scoop up the flying cash never returned it, although one man who returned $57,000 became a local celebrity.

The all-volunteer campaign initiated by the Columbus Commission on Ethics and Values targeted city schools, churches, government and city groups.

Drug-free students to get scholarships

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A graduating senior from each of the five Corpus Christi high schools will receive a college scholarship if they can pass a drug test, a South Texas Education Fund official says.

The scholarship, established by the Corpus Christi Principals' and Supervisors' Association in partnership with the South Texas Education Fund, will be offered to five graduating seniors who are continuing their education at the university level, Walt Applegate, executive director of the education fund, said.

Applegate said a senior from each of the five schools will receive $400 this year. He said he hopes to expand the program in coming years.

"We think people who stay off drugs should get some attention rather than all the attention going to people who are on drugs," said Applegate, a retired business and military man who serves as business administrator at First Christian Church.

"We want them to set the path for the people coming behind them. . . . to say, 'See all the good things that can happen to you if you stay off drugs?'" Applegate said.

Bill Hamrick, president of the Principals' and Supervisors' Association and principal at Ray High School, said Applegate approached him with the idea of the drug-free scholarships. In this first year, the school administrators' group and South Texas Education Fund each supplied $1,000 to the scholarship fund.

"We'll probably select the outstanding senior and if he's willing to submit to a drug test, he'll get the scholarship," Hamrick said. "You can't get this scholarship if you can't pass a drug test."

"Now, if every other scholarship was given with that stipulation, then I think you might have something," Hamrick added.

A staff member at the Coastal Bend Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse said tying a scholarship to a one-time drug test won't guarantee a drug-free student.

"There's a lot more to being clean than a drug test," said Carla Beck, education specialist. "Leading a life that's clean and sober is an inside job . . . People who get clean and sober have to do it for themselves, not for their parents or their teachers or a scholarship."

Della Berlanga, coordinator of the Corpus Christi school district's office of counseling and guidance services, called the scholarship a positive move, but added that students' reactions to it likely would be mixed.

Bush statement complicates peace issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — A strong statement by President Bush disapproving an influx of Soviet Jews into Jerusalem is complicating an already difficult debate in Israel over U.S. proposals for Mideast negotiations.

The twice-postponed showdown is now set for Sunday when the Israeli Cabinet will take up a formula by Secretary of State James A. Baker III that has split the conservative Likud and the dovish Labor parties.

Baker's goal is to have Israelis meet with Palestinians in Cairo as the first step toward an eventual settlement. "Without a dialogue between Israelis and Palestinians we can never move forward to peace," he said on Tuesday.

Baker's formula is an attempt to bridge differences between Israel, on the one hand, and Egypt and the Palestine Liberation Organization, on the other. It would permit a Palestinian resident of East Jerusalem and one or two Palestinians deported by Israel from the West Bank to participate in the talks.

This is a tough proposition for Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and other leaders of the Likud coalition to accept. They are worried it might clear a way for the PLO to direct the discussions.

Labor, on the other hand, is impatient to proceed with negotiations.

Amid this delicate political debate, first Baker and then Bush made statements that stirred controversy in Israel and may have hardened Likud's resistance to the U.S. formula.

Baker told a House subcommittee last week that the administration wanted assurances a U.S. $400 million housing loan guarantee would not be used to settle Soviet Jewish refugees on the West Bank.

AP analysis

Only about 100 of the thousands of Jews who have poured into Israel have been settled there. But their presence is taken by the Arabs as evidence that Israel does not intend to relinquish the territory.

Baker's thrust at Shamir's settlement program irritated the prime minister. And members of both Likud and Labor were upset by Baker's statement at the same hearing that there is no evidence PLO chairman Yasser Arafat is violating his December 1988 renunciation of terrorism.

Then, at a news conference Saturday in Palm Springs, Calif., the President weighed in with a statement opposing new settlements on the West Bank or in East Jerusalem.

His intention may have been to discourage Israel from expanding East Jerusalem to its suburbs and to settle Soviet Jews there.

That would have been consistent with longstanding U.S. policy against further Jewish settlements on the West Bank as an obstacle to Mideast negotiations.

But Bush, by coupling East Jerusalem with the West Bank, may have had something else in mind: that he considers East Jerusalem occupied territory and Jews living there as settlers, as well.

The President had not been asked about East Jerusalem, and his statement upset Israelis who see the predominantly Arab part of their capital and the West Bank as completely different.

Many Israelis would surrender most of the West Bank as part of a peace agreement with the Arabs. But very few would be willing to relinquish any part of their capital.

In more than two decades of U.S. diplomacy, Jerusalem and the West Bank have been approached as separate issues. Jerusalem is touchier, and American presidents and secretaries of state have tried to keep their distance, usually by saying ambiguously that the city should never be divided again — and not saying whether Israel ought to retain exclusive control over Jerusalem.

Bush's statement is a problem, then.

$6 million bond set for offense

BOWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — The owner of a Brownsville import business has been accused of helping a Pennsylvania-based organization launder profits from tons of heroin allegedly smuggled from Thailand.

Jose Manuel Negrete Jr., 28, owner of the Sucasa Inc. import business in Brownsville, is accused of helping launder $1.2 million in drug profits for an organization based in Pennsylvania's Pocono Mountains. He was jailed in lieu of $6 million bail.

In 1939, President Franklin D. Roosevelt declared a "limited national emergency" in response to the outbreak of war in Europe.

BUSTER BROWN
FOR ATTORNEY GENERAL

"Senator Brown has established himself as an outstanding leader in the battle against crime in Texas. Since his election in 1980, he has written and passed more crime fighting legislation than any other legislator in Texas. It is not surprising that he won every major award offered by the statewide anti-crime coalition."
