Hance predicts oil surge

OPEC members 'shift price strategy'

■ Former congressman foresees $25- to $28-a-barrel levels by February 1993.

By Mella McEwen
Staff writer

Kent Hance Wednesday predicted higher oil prices — possibly as high as $28 — for U.S. producers by next February.

The former U.S. congressman and Texas Railroad commissioner gave members of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association his third "OPEC Update" Wednesday at the Petroleum Club.

He predicted oil prices will continue to hover between $21 and $22 until late November. "Then, by February we'll see prices at $25 — maybe as high as $26-$28, which would be positive for producers in the Permian Basin area."

He said the main reason he believes prices will rise to those levels is that members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries are developing a new policy of higher prices. He added that the last OPEC meeting he attended, on June 4, "was positive as far as American producers are concerned."

Hance said OPEC members are shifting their strategy from market share to higher prices because, when OPEC cuts prices, individual countries — including the United States and a number of U.S. states — increase gasoline taxes to offset any potential increase in demand.

"In the past, OPEC would cut prices to try

U.N. experts end Iraq vigil; tension rises

■ Pullback increases prospects for limited allied air strike.

Associated Press

NICOSIA, Cyprus — U.N. weapons experts retreated from a 17-day watch outside an Iraqi government building on Wednesday after Iraqi police stood by while an assailant tried to stab an inspector, a U.N. official said.

The pullback from the Agriculture Ministry, suspected of housing materials for Iraq's weapons programs, was sure to raise tensions between Iraq and the U.N. Security Council. It also increased the prospects for a limited allied air strike in the latest impasse over U.N. monitoring of Iraq since the Gulf War.

President Bush's spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, accused Iraq of not abiding by U.N. resolutions ending the war.

"It is stonewalling U.N. inspectors who are trying to identify and destroy Iraq's weapons of mass destruction," Fitzwater said.

"We are not ruling out any option, including the use of military force," he

Members' group moves to 'rein in' Cap Rock's chief

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

STANTON — Cap Rock Electric Cooperative may be serving its 8,000 members in a "commendable manner."

And co-op workers may be providing "prompt, courteous and efficient services" to its members across 8,000 miles of power lines in 17 West Texas counties.

But, Lenorah cotton farmer-ginner Myrl Mitchell and 14 other critics — who have organized a group called Cap Rock's Concerned Members — say the Stanton-based power company is radically changing under the management of chief executive officer David Pruitt, who has "almost unlimited control."

In its beginning, the co-op, established under the Rural Electrification Administration (REA) in 1939, primarily served farmers and ranchers in rural areas.

Times have changed.

And now, Mitchell and the Cap Rock's Con-

Drug cartel boss Pablo Escobar and 14 of his associates had been detained at this Colombian ranch.

Drug lord Escobar escapes after gunbattle

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Drug kingpin Pablo Escobar and his lieutenants overpowered guards seeking to transfer them to a military jail and escaped Wednesday after a gunbattle that left at least two dead, officials said.

The escape of Escobar, one of the world's richest and most notorious businessmen, with hundreds of murders to his name, was a major blow to the government, which has been unable to counter the strength of the cocaine cartels.

It was in response to reports that Escobar was operating his drug business from the luxurious ranch-house prison that officials entered the jail Tuesday night to transfer Escobar and his 14 lieutenants.

But the cartel leader instead seized three of the officials — the head of the jail, the national prison director, and an assistant justice minister.

About 400 army commandos raided the prison at dawn Wednesday, freed the captives and captured five cartel members. But Escobar fled with nine other cartel members, President Cesar Gaviria said.

Gaviria, in a nationally broadcast speech late Wednesday, appealed to Escobar to

'Dump Quayle' rumors rife; Bush says no

By R.W. Apple Jr.
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — With pressures mounting within his own party for further measures to revitalize his re-election campaign, President Bush denied Wednesday he was even considering the possibility of replacing Vice President Dan Quayle.

Deeply concerned about Bush's dismal standing in the polls, two groups of Republican senators met for lunch, and held what Sen. Alan K. Simpson of Wyoming, the majority whip, described as "spirited discussions of what should be done" to get the flagging campaign moving again.

One participant in the meeting of the Wednesday Club, to which mostly moderate Republicans belong, said at least half the 15 or so senators there either explicitly or implicitly said Quayle should be dropped from the Republican ticket.

The replacement of the vice president was also Topic A on Wednesday among Republican campaign workers, state party officials and strategists, with opinion sharply divided as to whether a change would help to reverse the precipitious slide in popularity that has imperiled Bush's re-election.

The president appeared to leave open not the slightest possibility of a change in the ticket. Asked at a White House photo session whether the vice president's status was shaky, Bush replied, "No, it's very certain." He dismissed the talk about replacing

School bus recall

CHICAGO — The company that makes more than a third of the nation's school buses said Wednesday it has agreed to recall at least 24,000 after tests showed they could leak large amounts of fuel during a crash and cause a fire. Officials of Navistar International Corp. said the problem could affect all 185,000 International buses made since Sept. 1, 1978. That number would represent half the nation's school bus fleet.

Deadly test drive

LIVE OAK — Police were searching for two men Wednesday after a car salesman for a suburban San Antonio dealership was shot and killed during a test drive. The body of Steven Lochner was discovered late Wednesday morning shortly after he and two men got into a 1992 Nissan Pathfinder vehicle and drove away from Performance Nissan. Live Oak police Lt. Dan Pue said the salesman apparently was getting out of the vehicle to let one of the men drive when he was shot in the head with a 9 mm pistol.

Price of treatment for AIDS on the rise in U.S.

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — The price of caring for one person with AIDS in the United States has soared to $38,000 year, while developing countries harder hit by the disease struggle to spend a few hundred dollars per patient.

Researchers said costs have risen substantially in the last year alone, in part because of the high price of drugs.

The figures were disclosed in studies presented at the eighth International Conference on AIDS. While the week-long meeting has focused largely on the medical and personal tragedy of the disease, the latest research shows that AIDS is a financial disaster as well.

"Other types of costs can't be expressed in dollars — the cost of fear, the cost of grief, the cost in inequity and discrimination and the long-term cost of a pandemic that does not receive the attention it deserves," said Dr. Daniel Tarantola of the Harvard School of Public Health.

His research showed the financial inequities in the pandemic — or worldwide epidemic — of AIDS between wealthy nations and poor ones.

He found that 94 percent of all money spent treating the disease is in the United States, Western Europe and other industrialized regions. About 80 percent of the new cases of acquired immune deficiency syndrome are in poor countries.

While one year of treatment for an AIDS patient in the United States costs $38,000, only $400 is spent a year for a patient in Africa.

In developed countries, people with AIDS are routinely treated with AZT, which costs about $2,500 a year. This is five times more than the per capita gross national product in sub-Saharan Africa.

Tarantola estimates that AIDS spending worldwide this year will total $3.5 billion for treatment, $1.4 billion for prevention and $1.7 billion for research.

Fred Hellinger of the U.S. Agency for Health Policy and Research said the cost of treating an American AIDS patient between the time the disease is diagnosed and death has nearly doubled in four years.

In 1989, the lifetime cost of treatment was $57,000. That rose to $75,000 in 1990, $85,000 last year and $102,000 this year.

In comparison, Americans spend $20,000 for treatment of lung cancer, $52,000 for breast cancer and $175,000 for kidney failure.

In the United States, caring for someone who is infected with the HIV virus that causes AIDS but not yet sick costs $6,000 annually, largely for medicines to ward off AIDS symptoms.

The rising U.S. costs also result from the increasing availability of drugs to treat the disease's symptoms. Some patients are on as many as 10 different AIDS drugs.

"Drug costs account for 15 percent of the total cost and will get higher as time goes by," Hellinger said.

For instance, Foscavir, a drug that prevents AIDS-related blindness, costs about $440 a week. AIDS activists demonstrated against Astra Pharmaceuticals, Foscavir's maker, during this week's meeting to protest the high cost.

Other AIDS medicines are also expensive. For instance, giving epoetin to stimulate the body to make more red blood cells costs $200 a week, while a medicine called GCSF that promotes white cell production costs $1,000 a week.

Today to bring sun, low 90s

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies with a high in the lower 90s and south winds at 10 to 20 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low in the upper 60s and a less than 20 percent chance of rain, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Friday should be fair with a high in the lower 90s.

After an overnight low of 65, Wednesday's high reached 86 compared with the record high for that date of 103 set in 1981. The record low for that date is 53 set in 1978.

STATE

Residents living along the Nueces River and the Rio Grande have been warned of the likelihood of flooding because of heavy rains this week.

The Rio Grande crested early Wednesday at Eagle Pass and is forecast to crest at Laredo at around 14 feet today.

Minor lowland flooding is expected in some stretches of the Nueces River near Turkey Creek and below Crystal City, about 100 miles southwest of San Antonio.

Thunderstorms with heavy rain were reported Wednesday across South Texas and Southeast Texas. Afternoon temperatures were mostly in the 80s, with lower 90s along the middle and lower coast. Winds were from the south and southeast at 5 to 15 mph.

NATION

Thunderstorms were scattered from the central Plains to the East Coast on Wednesday, causing low-land flooding in parts of Texas and Kansas. Record low temperatures stretched from the Great Lakes into New England.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms extended over eastern sections of South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas and Oklahoma, eastern and southern Texas, the Mississippi Valley, the eastern Gulf of Mexico states, the Tennessee Valley, and the southern and central Atlantic Coast states.

Showers and occasional thunderstorms were widely scattered over the Ohio Valley.

PRICES: OPEC shifts its strategy, Hance says

(From 1A)

to increase consumption — lower oil prices equal lower gasoline prices, so people drive more and consume more."

If gasoline taxes are raised to keep the price for consumers at the same level, there is no incentive to increase consumption, Hance said. That resulted in an overall reduction of revenues for OPEC members and greater income for the governments levying higher taxes.

"I think that's one reason they made the change in policy — they realized lower oil prices mean higher gasoline taxes," he said.

A second reason OPEC is likely to push prices higher, Hance said, is a looming battle of wills between the cartel's members and members of the consolidated European Community.

"The European market has proposed a $3-a-barrel tax on oil beginning next year and designed it to increase by increments to $10 by the year 2000," he said. "OPEC is totally opposed to this type of action, and it would hurt oil producers worldwide. In Europe, in the price of gasoline, the taxes are three times the raw price. If the raw price is $1 a gallon, by the time taxes are added its $4 a gallon.

"OPEC has sent a clear and concise signal that if the EC implements that tax, OPEC will match it with price increases. I think that's just to make sure the Europeans don't do it."

Another concern to Hance, in addition to the level of oil prices, is the number of jobs in the oil and gas industry. He said that between 1982 and 1992, the industry has lost 450,000 jobs. In 1982, there were 920,000 people working in the industry; by 1992, that had fallen to 470,000.

By comparison, in 1982, the automobile industry employed 700,000; by 1992, that number had grown to 828,000 jobs, a gain of 128,000 jobs. "Yet all the publicity has been on the tough times the automobile industry is having," he said.

He said, "I think this is information that has been known just inside the family of oil and gas people, not the outside. I think we're seeing some improvement. Fortune magazine had an article on the subject; at least we're making people stop and see that this is happening."

Hance also discussed the effect the high percentage of crude the U.S. imports from OPEC members and other foreign countries is having on the nation's trade deficit.

According to Hance, the trade deficit in oil and gas is $55 billion, while it is around $40 billion in automobiles.

He added that, "We've gone through a big shake-out in the industry over the last 10 years. I do not see an immediate turnaround in the number of employees; many majors are laying off people and moving exploration overseas because they're geting the welcome mat from overseas governments. With all the regulations and tax policies in the U.S., I can't blame them for cutting back and moving overseas."

CO-OP: Group fights power company's 'changes'

cerned Members say, the co-op management is taking on big-city ways: expanding through mergers, buying a downtown Midland office building and allegedly giving "false testimony" in court.

"Changes in management procedures which have transpired over the past years causes concern for the survival of our Cooperative," Mitchell said in a July 21 letter to Cap Rock's 11 directors and 8,000 members.

The letter was signed by the officers of the Concerned Members group, Mitchell as president; D.V. Cook of Lomax, vice president; Julie Hull of Courtney, secretary; Cap Rock members, Sammy Yates and Morgan Cox, both of Tarzan; and Roy Crim and Danny Peugh, both of Stanton.

Since David Pruitt took over as Cap Rock's CEO and general manager in 1987, the co-op merged with the Lone Wolf Electric Cooperative in Colorado City in 1991; took court action to sever its power-buying contract with TU Electric and to buy power from Southwestern Public Service Co. in Amarillo; bought the four-story, 55,000-square-foot First Bankers Trust & Savings Association Building in Midland for $5 a square foot; moved its annual meeting from Stanton High School's Buffalo Football Stadium to Midland College's Chaparral Center; and is pursuing a merger with the Hunt-Collin Electric Cooperative in Celeste in Northeast Texas.

Cap Rock officials contend the co-op must expand if it is to survive and better serve its members, and that the co-op should not move its headquarters to Midland from Stanton.

The Cap Rock's Midland office would be more convenient to 60 percent of Cap Rock's members who live in the Midland area, including Greenwood, said Ulen North Jr., Cap Rock's director of administrative services and operations. Cap Rock has an office in Big Spring, too, North said.

"We have no plans to move to Midland," said Peggy Luxton, Cap Rock spokesperson.

Pruitt, who lives in Midland, was out of town and unavailable for comment Wednesday.

North said Pruitt reports to a board of 11 directors, "who still know what is going on." And he "has no more control or freedom than the previous manager (Rodger Burch) did."

"Mr. Pruitt is a very aggressive individual who really does have the customer-members' business at heart," North said. "He is a very customer-oriented person. His No. 1 goal is to provide electric service, service in all aspects, at the lowest possible price."

While Cap Rock serves farm and ranch residential customers and a variety of rural businesses, its biggest "load" is in the oil field.

"Our biggest customer is Parker & Parsley," a Midland-based petroleum company, Ms. Luxton said.

Only 13 percent of the co-op's members work in agriculture, Ms. Luxton said.

"The splendid service that Cap Rock provides comes directly from the leadership (of David Pruitt)," she said. "He believes in the customers first."

The Concerned Members are seeking to rein in Pruitt by asking the Cap Rock board of directors to:

■ Relieve the present management and secure a competent manager with direct responsibility to the members through the board of directors elected by the board.

■ Revoke all delegated formation of corporations for the benefit of individuals — the CEO and board chairman, Russell "Rusty" Jones of Midland.

■ Revoke a request for the Hunt-Collin merger, which is being examined by the Public Utility Commission in Austin.

■ Dispose of real estate acquisitions in Midland and planned expansion into an energy corporation.

■ Securing an independent audit of Cap Rock's financial status.

Ms. Luxton noted that Cap Rock is audited each year by the Rural Utilities Cooperative Finance Corp. in Washington, D.C.

While Cap Rock officials say a survey suggests that 99 percent of Cap Rock's members "approved of management's" progressive goals for the co-op, Mitchell and the Concern Members said in their letter that Cap Rock's members and directors have not been given "sufficient information to perceive the problems that are being created by management's proposed projects."

IRAQ: Crisis deepens as U.N. inspectors retreat

said.

President Saddam Hussein's government has denied military documents are inside the ministry. It says that the building is a civilian agency not covered by the U.N. resolutions and that the attempt to search it was an insult to Iraq's sovereignty.

But Rolf Ekeus, head of the U.N. inspection program, said the U.N. experts believe the building contains documents and possibly equipment related to prohibited ballistic, chemical, biological and nuclear weapons programs.

At a news conference in New York, Ekeus said the team ended its round-the-clock vigil outside "the alleged Ministry of Agriculture" because of "the threat of violence and totally inadequate Iraqi government security."

Ekeus said an Iraqi tried to kill a U.N. inspector with a skewer outside the ministry about 5:30 a.m. Wednesday.

He said Iraqi police allowed the man to approach the inspector's vehicle and did nothing during the attack. Police intervened only after the inspector defended himself successfully and Iraqi officers then let the attacker "walk freely away," he said.

Chanting Iraqis had pelted the inspectors' cars with eggs and vegetables and slashed their tires in escalating demonstrations since July 5, when the Iraqis refused to allow U.N. access to the ministry.

More demonstrations took place in Baghdad and other cities Wednesday, the Iraqi News Agency said. Protesters shouted slogans describing the inspectors as "stray dogs and scoundrels," it said.

In New York, Iraqi U.N. Ambassador Abdul Amir al-Anbari met with Ekeus, and said he thought there could be a diplomatic solution.

"I believe with good will, if people stop making lousy threats, it is possible to work out a solution. After all, this is what diplomats are supposed to do," Anbari said.

But he gave no indication of progress to end the standoff.

Some diplomats deemed the situation far more serious than the standoff last September when U.N. inspectors were surrounded in a Baghdad parking lot for four days before being allowed to take away documents on Iraq's attempt to produce nuclear warheads.

The diplomats said they were alarmed by recent attacks on U.N. guards in northern Iraq, Iraq's refusal to accept a U.N. plan for selling its oil to obtain food and medicine, and Baghdad's rejection of a U.N. commission's demarcation of the Iraq-Kuwait border.

Saddam has backed down before after being threatened with force. But Western and Arab diplomats speculated he might be willing to risk limited attacks because Iraq has made no progress in ending a trade embargo imposed after the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

ESCOBAR: Drug kingpin escapes special prison surrender and said there was an outside chance that soldiers combing the property for hidden passages might find him.

At 10:40 a.m, Escobar had phoned reporters, saying he was in a prison tunnel and would fight to the death. That call appears to have been a bluff.

When the army regained control over the prison 200 miles northwest of the capital, Escobar was gone, according to the Senate president, Joe Blackburn.

Gaviria said at a news conference that the army found no tunnel under the jail. He offered no explanation for how Escobar could have escaped when surrounded by 400 soldiers.

Escobar and his lieutenants surrendered in April 1991 on condition that they be held at the ranch — previously owned by drug dealers — and not extradited to the United States, which seeks Escobar for masterminding the big cocaine enterprises of the 1980s.

Gaviria said that despite the escape he still opposes sending drug trafficking suspects to the United States for trial. Several major smugglers were tried in U.S. courts before Colombia suspended the extraditions last year.

Gaviria ordered Escobar moved this week amid reports the drug lord had bought off his guards and involved them in a scheme to lure Medellin cartel rivals to the jail. Several of the rivals were "tried" at the prison and later were found dead, Blackburn said.

Two weeks ago an airplane flew over Medellin and dropped leaflets claiming that Escobar was ordering the murder of his rivals.

When the army entered the prison Tuesday night, Escobar and other prisoners grabbed guns from guards and took hostages, said one of the freed hostages, assistant justice minister Eduardo Mendoza.

Mendoza, trembling and with his clothes dirty and tattered, appeared at a news conference at the presidential palace in Bogota after being freed. He said that when he told Escobar he was being transferred, Escobar "told us were were hostages and that we were going to leave there dead."

At dawn Wednesday the hostages were being held on a balcony when the army attacked. The other hostages were the national prisons director, Col. Hernando Navas, and the jail's warden, Col. Omar Rodriguez.

BUSH: President vigorously denies reports that he'll dump Quayle

(From 1A)

Quayle as "a lot of crazy rumors."

David Beckwith, Quayle's spokesman, said the vice president would not step down voluntarily, adding: "If he seriously thought it would help the president, he would do it. But he doesn't think that and neither does the president."

"I'd just soon not have the stories but it goes with the territory," Quayle said in an hourlong appearance tonight on CNN's "Larry King Live." "Believe me, if I thought that I was hurting the ticket, I'd be gone. I want George Bush re-elected, so my decision is predicated on what is best for the president."

The statements of denial did little to quiet the fever of speculation in Washington. Instead, in the often perverse logic of the capital, they fed the storm, with political professionals sensing that something must be afoot.

There also were widespread calls on Capitol Hill for the dismissal of Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady and the budget director, Richard G. Darman, participants in the meetings said. Some nervous incumbents said that as things now stood, the Republicans might lose four to six Senate seats.

One indication of the disarray in the party, said Sen. Richard G. Lugar of Indiana, was that most Republican senators had little interest in attending the party's convention in Houston next month, preferring to keep their distance.

An Associated Press poll indicated that 4 in 10 Republicans nationwide thought Quayle should be dropped from the ticket. Few Republican senators suggested that he deserved, on the merits of the case, to be replaced; indeed, most said he had done a good job.

Yet some, like Lugar, said Bush needed to "send a signal that by its very drama tells people that this is a whole new ball game, a new campaign with a new game plan and a new vigor."

Lugar said he thought "a dramatic statement about growth and jobs" would produce the best results, but conceded that other lawmakers, "stunned by what they have heard at home in their states the last two weeks," thought Quayle should go.

Others, like Sen. Warren B. Rudman of New Hampshire, said many voters were concerned about Bush's health, "whether there's any ground for it or not," and that made them worry about Quayle, whom many would not trust with the presidency.

It was not fair, Rudman added, "but it exists, and people have gone to the president to tell him about this."

The discussion about a new vice presidential candidate centered on Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, who is believed to be as acceptable to conservatives as Quayle. Most Republican politicians believe that Housing Secretary Jack F. Kemp, another popular conservative, would find it hard to work closely with Bush.

Until the Los Angeles riots in late April and early May, Kemp was all but ostracized by the White House, and his often innovative ideas were usually given short shrift.

But Cheney might present problems, too. He has had a history of heart problems and has undergone bypass surgery, although he appears to be in robust health now. Putting him on the ticket would also give him a head start on the 1996 campaign, which might alienate a large number of other Republican hopefuls.

Even the chance that Quayle, a former colleague, might be sacrificed clearly pained most of the Republican senators. Rudman said, for example, "he's a lot better than most people seem to think, and he's a very good friend of most of us, but the public perception is just not very good."

Sen. Alfonse M. D'Amato of New York also mentioned concerns about the president's health as an element hurting Quayle, and said the White House "is going to have to come to grips with this, sooner or later."

The president and his physician have both denied that he has any serious health problems.

"There is no Bush campaign now," D'Amato said. "We have to make changes, get rid of Darman and Brady, and get bold, decisive leadership."

Many Republican insiders have come to believe in the days since the Democratic convention that Bush would be obliged to consider dropping Quayle by the very perilousness of his situation.

But most, like Sen. John McCain of Arizona, said they thought Bush would refuse to do so because of his strong belief in loyalty to subordinates and because of political reality.

"He should have fired Brady and Darman a long time ago, but that isn't his way," McCain said. "The only way Quayle will go is if he concludes that this battering is bad for him and the party, which is certainly possible."

By replacing Quayle, Bush would be tacitly admitting he had erred in choosing Quayle in the first place, and he would be breaking his repeated pledges to keep him on the ticket. Moreover, it might not solve the problem.

As the vice president's aides and backers argued feverishly Wednesday, Bush has had both good ratings and bad with Quayle at his side.

Shining Path rebels increase terrorist attacks in capital

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Leftist rebels burned buses and bombed a school for the children of military officers Wednesday in a campaign to shut down the capital for two days.

Rebel threats kept buses and taxis off the streets, but tens of thousands of city employees defied the Maoist Shining Path movement and struggled to work on foot or in private cars and trucks.

In some cases, soldiers requisitioned vehicles to take workers into the city center.

A government spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity, said 85 percent of state workers were on the job, though many arrived late. Many schools closed, according to radio reports.

During previous rebel-ordered strikes, the Shining Path killed bus drivers to discourage Lima's 7 million residents from going to work.

On Wednesday, the rebels set fire to at least four buses and shot to death a taxi driver. They also dynamited two police stations, but caused only minor damage.

Police captured five rebels who were trying to bomb gas stations around the capital.

The so-called "armed strike" was intended to cap a week of violence that began last Thursday when the rebels set off two powerful car bombs on a residential street, killing at least 24 people and wounding 140.

The timing and placement of the recent bombs indicate the rebels are seeking to create a climate of terror in Lima. A 12-year guerrilla war in Peru has claimed more than 25,000 lives.

"Terrorism seeks to destroy our reality," said Hernando de Soto, a former adviser to President Alberto Fujimori. De Soto's research center was bombed Monday, with three people killed.

Rebels set off a bomb attached to a vendor's cart in front of a school for the children of military officers in the seaside district of Chorrillos. Six students were hurt in the blast.

Baker denies he will quit to help Bush

LATAKIA, Syria (AP) — Denying he has decided to step down to map President George Bush's reelection campaign, Secretary of State James A. Baker III said Wednesday he would be working in the days and weeks ahead to promote an Arab-Israeli agreement.

But Baker declined at a news conference in Cairo to say he would still be on the job months from now. His response to mounting reports he would leave to plot Bush's strategy against Democratic candidate Bill Clinton was less than Shermanesque.

"Let's leave it where it is right now," Baker said, "and at least accept the fact there has been no decision here with respect to this matter."

His reply is unlikely to still the reports swirling around him on his swing through the Middle East, trying to convert Israel's "new approach" in West Bank settlements into progress at the peace table.

"You see me actively involved here now in the peace process," Baker said. "I hope and believe I will be actively involved in the peace process days and weeks ahead."

Baker came to the Middle East on Sunday and has met with Israeli, Palestinian, Egyptian and Syrian leaders. He completes his mission on Thursday in Saudi Arabia and then he flies to Manila for a meeting of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations.

In August, Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin is due to go to Maine to see Bush. There, he is expected to finally get U.S. guarantees for $10 billion in commercial bank loans to be used in absorbing tens of thousands of immigrants, most of them from the former Soviet Union.

Israel under Rabin has suspended the issuance of contracts for new housing units. Baker said the decision was "one that pleases the United States because we think settlements are an obstacle to peace."

Peacekeepers lose popularity within Sarajevo

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — When the white U.N. armored personnel carriers roll through the streets escorting food shipments to the people of this surrounded city, there are no cheers or thanks.

Often there is an obscene gesture, or a gunshot plinking off the vehicles' steel plating.

In the fog of war, many Sarajevo residents believe the U.N. peacekeepers have tilted in favor of the Serbian nationalists firing at them from the surrounding hills.

Even though his troops are bringing in 200 tons of food and medicine each day, "Nobody's saying 'Thank you,'" said Maj. Gen. Lewis MacKenzie, the Canadian commander of the 1,200 Canadian and French troops in Sarajevo.

"When people give you the finger going down the street, I guess you could say relations are not exactly ideal," he said.

"It's true. Nobody loves them," said student Maglen Alioehajic, huddling in his building's doorway shortly after a bullet ricocheted by him.

"They could do much, much more. They could stop this war if they would send peacemakers instead of peacekeepers."

The U.N. forces arrived with a limited mandate, mainly to reopen Sarajevo's airport so food and medicine could be delivered to the besieged city. The airport was back in operation on June 29, ending a two-month blockade.

"People have incredible expectations of us to do things for them that we are not here for," said Mik Magnusson, the spokesman for the U.N. forces in Sarajevo. "Instead of being grateful, they're frustrated."

Edison Project may change schools

Can a new network of private schools serve as a model to improve American public education? That's the goal of the Edison Project, brainchild of Christopher Whittle, a Tennessee entrepreneur. He hopes to build 1,000 private schools educating 2 million students by the year 2010.

The goal is ambitious, and Whittle is a welcome recruit to educational reform. His plan could provide a shot of adrenaline to lackluster schools. But the scale of this profit-oriented project raises concerns that it might drain strength from the public schools.

The Edison Project won new credibility with the appointment as chief executive officer of Benno Schmidt, formerly president of Yale. Whittle and Schmidt don't just want to reform public schools; they want "a revolution in education." But they are unclear so far about how much of a revolution they have in mind. It will take teams of experts two years to work out their blueprint.

The project will rely heavily on technology, both software and hardware, to let students explore a variety of electronic learning experiences, perhaps reducing the need for teachers or freeing them for individualized attention. It will also explore using students to tutor or perform support services. Parents will be enlisted as well.

The money saved on payroll is expected to help finance technology and other improvements while holding costs to levels now incurred in the public schools. The Edison schools are meant to be open to all, with students selected at random and scholarships available for one student in five.

Many of the proposals represent welcome if not exactly revolutionary ideas, like lengthening the school day and year, starting education at age 1 or 2 and increasing parental involvement. The advantage of the Edison approach is scale and the ability to move resources around a national network without worrying about political boundaries. Still, those are factors that have to be considered even in the dilemma the public school system faces.

The proposed two-year Edison blueprint is expected to cost $60 million, and opening the first 200 campuses could cost $2.5 billion. Whittle is unsure where the money will come from, but insists the undertaking is "doable."

In principle, it is surely worthy. But important questions reverberate. How well can technology, long touted as a wondrous educational reform, really provide such triumphant benefits? How will the desire of investors to recover profits affect the ability of the schools to pour resources into excellence?

How will the schools resist the inevitable cream-skimming pressures to accept and retain only the best and easiest students, leaving the hard cases to the public schools?

Multibillion-dollar investments in education are welcome. The competition should force the public schools toward much-needed improvement.

Texans must be willing to pay for good schools

Texas Employment Commissioner May Scott Nabers, speaking to a group of business leaders in Dallas, provided a useful warning to Texas as she described the changing nature of the state's labor force.

During the 1980s, she said, although 1.2 million new jobs were created in Texas, the demand for skilled workers declined while that for unskilled and semi-skilled workers expanded rapidly. As a result, real income in the state declined.

To change this, as Ms. Nabers and other commission spokesmen said, Texas must begin with its youth — providing them with better education and technical training so that the state can attract businesses that offer the higher-paying jobs that go to a well-trained labor force. They're right.

Thanks to previous reforms and the recent thorough shaking up of the Texas Education Commission, the state is making real strides toward improving its education system. But the Legislature and the public at large must do more than simply demand good schools — they must be willing to pay for them. So far, they have been good at the former and not so hot at the latter.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, July 23, the 205th day of 1992. There are 161 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

One hundred years ago, on July 23, 1892, Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia was born. Haile Selassie was emperor of Ethiopia from 1930 to 1974; during his reign, he sought to modernize and unify the country under his autocratic rule. He died in 1975, a year after being overthrown in a military coup.

On this date:

In 1829, William Austin Burt of Mount Vernon, Mich., received a patent for his typographer, a forerunner of the typewriter.

In 1886, New York saloonkeeper Steve Brodie supposedly made a daredevil plunge from the Brooklyn Bridge into the East River.

In 1952, 40 years ago, Egyptian military officers led by Gamal Abdel Nasser launched a coup against King Farouk I.

In 1958, Britain's Queen Elizabeth named the first four women to peerage in the House of Lords.

In 1967, 25 years ago, rioting that claimed some 43 lives erupted in Detroit after police raided a black-owned nightspot.

In 1986, Britain's Prince Andrew married Sarah Ferguson at Westminster Abbey in London.

GEORGE WILL

Bush underestimates Clinton's following

WASHINGTON — Like the farmers who tilled fields at the foot of Mount Vesuvius, Bush campaigners are confident that natural forces favor them. Rich Bond, GOP chairman, interviewed on television with a beach behind him, yawned about Clinton's surge. Noting that four years ago Dukakis led Bush 51 to 34, Bond said: "You see behind me high tide. Time passes, gravity occurs, the tide goes out and low tide is on the way for Bill Clinton."

Will

But Clinton is not Dukakis, who was passive when attacked. And as Paul Tsongas can attest, Clinton can "go negative." Furthermore, Bush in 1992 is not Bush in 1988. Back then he won because he was seen as an extension of Reagan. No more.

Bush's plan is less to attract voters than to portray Clinton in a way that repels voters, principally by associating him with the Democratic Congress. But the muddiness of Bush's message is apparent in Bond's response to the fact that domestic spending has exploded under Bush, growing twice as fast as under Carter, faster even than under Lyndon Johnson.

Bond: "The world is changing and that is what the American people want. As defense spending comes down, domestic spending increases... And I don't see that there's anything wrong with that as long as you can control government spending overall..."

Interviewer: "So you're in favor of this explosion of domestic spending?"

Bond: "I'm in favor of cutting defense spending in appropriate ways... but then not seeing an explosion in spending that would go beyond what revenues are available. I think you've got to do a very strong control of government spending, but I don't care if it goes heavily into domestic spending as defense comes down. There's nothing wrong with that. Let's just pay for it with the right revenues, and let's not raise taxes."

Making an anti-Congress campaign out of such slush is like making a sword out of applesauce. Reagan's last budget director, James Miller, notes that the Federal Register, which publishes regulations, grew to more than 67,000 pages in 1991, the highest number since Carter, and real (inflation-adjusted) spending on regulatory agencies was 22 percent higher than in Carter's last year. So what is Bush's campaign slogan? "Clinton would be even worse"?

What can Bush do? Almost anything would help, just to show he has a pulse. But five things would be especially reviving:

Sign an executive order indexing capital gains. This is equitable (people should not be taxed on inflation gains) and would trigger a surge of economic activity.

Fire bumbling Treasury Secretary Brady, replace him with Jack Kemp, and instruct Kemp to end the credit crunch that is the primary reason for the economy's continuing sluggishness. Republicans run the regulatory apparatus that is keeping liquidity out of the banking system. If Bush cannot lead the country he should at least manage the bureaucracy.

Start a constructive war with Congress by vetoing the legislative appropriation bill — the money, expected to be $2.3 billion, Congress will spend on itself. This spending has soared in the last four years. The current bill had 143 votes against it in the House, just three short of the number needed to sustain a veto. Bush could get 30 more.

Replace Richard Darman, head of the Office of Management and Budget, with Minnesota Rep. Vin Weber, who is not running for re-election. Darman's fingerprints are all over the 1990 budget deal that involved Bush's breaking of his no-new-taxes promise. Weber, who turns 40 this week, deserves his reputation as one of conservatism's brightest lights.

Replace Quayle. Yes, he is the darling of the very conservatives who most despise Bush; and Bush has said he would keep Quayle; and this change might present a picture of an administration in turmoil, as did Carter's personnel changes in the summer of 1979. Therefore Quayle's replacement must be so exciting that he becomes the topic of conversation. The choice is obvious: Colin Powell would be good for the country and would scramble the political equation, perhaps for a generation. (I know I am repeating myself: I urged Powell for vice president four years ago.)

Probably none of these actions will be taken by the man who said he would do whatever it takes to get re-elected. Bush really is, as Clinton said in his acceptance speech, like George McClellan, the Civil War general who would not use the army. Bush won't use his office because he is one of those people who seek office in order to be something, not to do something.

Besides, Bush and his minions, like Rich Bond waiting for the tide, seem as complacent as the residents of Johnstown, Pa., who scoffed at warnings about the earthen dam in the mountains northeast of town.

George Will's column is distributed by Washington Post Writers Group.

ART BUCHWALD

Children can sue their parents for divorce

A judge in Florida has ruled that an 11-year-old boy, Gregory K., can sue his parents for "divorce."

The decision has been greeted with enthusiasm by child rights' advocates and, of course, by lawyers who stand to gain the most from the ruling.

Buchwald

It was not a frivolous case because the boy in question claimed to be unwanted by his parents, and said that he wished to be divorced from them so that he could be adopted by his foster parents.

I am happy for Gregory K., but what worries me is how other lawyers will cash in on the decision. What's to prevent them from advertising on the Saturday-morning kids' TV shows, as well as MTV, that they will represent any children whose constitutional rights are being violated at home? It is an entirely new business for the legal profession.

If a young person finds out that he has rights and can get a divorce, the stakes for parenting will get higher. A situation that could have been settled with a simple, "Go to your room," will now require, "Raise your right hand, junior, and repeat after me."

I give you a worst-case scenario:

"Your honor, my client, 13-year-old Sophie Roundabout, wishes to obtain a divorce from her parents and younger sister because of irreconcilable differences. We are asking for 50 percent of all community property and custody of the family dog, Spot."

"What does the lawyer for the defense have to say?" the judge asks.

"There are no grounds for divorce, your honor. Mr. and Mrs. Roundabout have raised Sophie with love and devotion. The issue is not irreconcilable differences but whether making a 13-year-old girl come home by 9 o'clock at night violates the Constitution of the United States."

Sophie's lawyer says, "Objection, your honor. These parents not only insisted that my client be home by 9, they also demanded that she keep her room neat and clean. My client should be treated the same as any divorcing adult. If she doesn't want to make up her bed, it's her legal right to refuse."

"Your honor, the parents of this child have done everything to provide her with food and shelter. They car-pooled her day and night, they have been driven crazy by the Grateful Dead and have deprived themselves of every luxury in order to pay the tuition for Sophie's school. They estimate that raising their child has cost them $359,908. If she wants a divorce they feel that Sophie should repay them for their sacrifices, as well as $600-a-month support for her younger sister."

"Your honor, this is ridiculous. Where is my client going to get that kind of money, not to mention my legal fees, which don't come cheap?"

"As judge of the Fifth Circuit Court I am afraid that at the moment I do not have enough evidence to grant the plaintiff a divorce from her parents. I suggest that Sophie wait until she gets all the braces on her teeth removed at the end of the school year. This will provide a sufficient cooling-off period for both sides, and will give Sophie an opportunity to work out some of her thousands of irreconcilable differences."

LEWIS GRIZZARD

There must be some kind of conspiracy

I've always enjoyed a good conspiracy, even if it is merely a theoretical one. I'm not sure why I'm that way, but it could have been my mother was frightened by somebody from the Trilateral Commission or the John Birch Society or the Moose Club when she was carrying me.

Grizzard

Give me a juicy news item and I usually can offer conjecture there might have been a conspiracy behind it.

Take the Lindbergh baby kidnapping. Was it simply the work of one person or was it connected to the Monroe Doctrine, the Spanish American War or the assassination of President McKinley, somehow.

When I was a kid, I hated the New York Yankees. The Yankees were always able to make some key trade for a player in September who would then lead them to another pennant.

Guys like Bob Cerv, for instance, which starts with "c," and that stands for communism. You decide what was really going on there.

There was a recent television show that pondered the question, "Were the assassination of Robert and John Kennedy connected?"

Might Sirhan Sirhan have known Jack Ruby? Were Lee Harvey Oswald and Marilyn Monroe ever lovers?

And don't forget the great Yankee Clipper, Joe DiMaggio, was once married to Marilyn Monroe and he used to do those commercials for Mr. Coffee coffeemakers, and all that starts with "c," too.

Ah ha!

Now, H. Ross Perot mysteriously drops out of the 1992 presidential race only a few hours before Bill Clinton makes his acceptance speech at the Democratic National Convention.

Perot's announcement also came just a day after the baseball All-Star game in which Ken Griffey, Jr., was the most valuable player.

Ken Griffey, Jr., plays for the Seattle Mariners. Before the Japanese bought the Seattle Mariners, were they planning a surprise attack on the Kingdome?

"Come on, Lewis," you might be saying. "you're stretching things a bit here."

Oh yeah.

What does Bill Clinton's last name begin with? "C," that's what.

On the other hand, when Perot made his announcement, why did President Bush make certain he was out in the wilderness of Wyoming, allegedly fishing?

Sources now indicate to me that the president didn't even bother to bait his hook.

So what was he hiding from?

Republicans are famous for dirty tricks.

Did they find out Perot is a secret admirer of Jane Fonda and likes cats and threatened to blow the whistle on the president if he didn't get out?

And who amongst us really believes that DiMaggio is above any sort of monkey business?

Did the Republicans learn that Perot also thinks there is an "e" on the end of potato and threatened to ask him to spell chrysanthemum (another word beginning with a "c") in a debate among the candidates.

And notice also how quiet Ted Kennedy has been about this whole thing, not to mention Anita Hill.

Furthermore, does Dan Rather really know who the guys were who mugged him but is afraid to say? Dan Rather works for CBS, by the way.

And Perot and paranoia begin with "p" and that rhymes with "c" and that stands for conspiracy.

And do not read the following:

Deep throat. Call home.

And quit staring at me like that.

Fed chairman sees Americans deeply concerned about future

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's not just the surge in unemployment that has shaken Americans' confidence and kept them from borrowing and spending their way out of the economic slowdown, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan said Wednesday.

Greenspan

It's also is a deep-seated foreboding about their children and grandchildren's future, he said.

Greenspan, appearing for the second consecutive day before a congressional panel, said Americans' pessimism is deeper than current economic conditions warrant.

As consumers work off the debt load accumulated during the long economic expansion of the 1980s, "a goodly part of the fear and concern that a lot of people have... will disappear and confidence... will re-emerge," Greenspan told the House Banking subcommittee on domestic monetary policy.

But, something more is behind the sense of unease many Americans feel, he said.

"It's not the short term...(It is) to a large extent a concern about whether or not their children and grandchildren will have standards of living comparable to our own. It's an extremely deep-seated type of concern... (It's a) sense that there's something foreboding out in the longer term," he said.

"That, I think, is what I find most disturbing about the nature of confidence at this stage," he said.

Greenspan's worry for the economy's long-term course stands in contrast with the mildly upbeat near-term forecast he delivered to the Senate Banking Committee on Tuesday.

In it's midyear report to Congress, the central bank predicted the economy, as measured by the gross domestic product, will grow by around 2.5 percent this year and by almost 3 percent in 1993.

That should gradually bring down the unemployment rate from an eight-year high of 7.8 percent last month to around 6.5 percent at the end of next year.

Greenspan's reception during the 90-minute session of the House panel, chaired by Rep. Stephen Neal, D-N.C., was decidedly more friendly than the five-hour grilling he endured a day before.

Senators berated Greenspan for moving too timidly to reduce interest rates last year, when the recession was in full bloom. But Neal, a frequent defender of the central bank, said it has done as much as it can to stimulate economic growth.

He said the Fed should "ignore misguided carping for monetary ease" and "remain doggedly on a course that will wring inflation out of the economy."

Further cuts in short-term rates could cause inflation fears in financial markets and that, in turn, would send long-term interest rates, such as mortgage rates, higher, and would squelch growth, he said.

Rep. Toby Roth, R-Wis., agreed, saying, "Quite frankly I don't know how interest rates can go any lower than they are today. They're at rock bottom."

Greenspan refused as usual to explicitly lay out the Fed's future policy on interest rates but conceded short-term "rates, by historical standards, are obviously low."

"Long rates have a good way to go down if inflation expectations could be purged from the system."

Clinton speaks to thousands on final stop of 6 day bus tour

ST. LOUIS — More than 25,000 office workers, labor unionists and curious onlookers jammed the streets for blocks around the city's main public library on Wednesday to give the Democratic ticket of Gov. Bill Clinton and Sen. Al Gore an ecstatic salute at the final stop of their six-day bus tour.

The 1,240-mile trip, which took the campaign on a trek through eight states at rallies both well-planned and off-the-cuff along superhighways and two-lane rural roads, at times eclipsed its planners' efforts to make it exciting. While the results were occasionally chaotic, they provided the Democrats with continuing media coverage after the intensity of the New York convention.

Stripped to his shirtsleeves and drenched in sweat at a humid lunchtime rally, Clinton gave a rostrum-pounding speech, rising to near-eloquence as he promised to rescue the American people from a government that he says cares and does too little for average people.

"If you're sick and tired of the way it's been going," he said, "if you want the American people in control again, if you believe your country is still the greatest country in the world, if you think we can compete and win again, if you're tired of being heartbroken when you go home at night and you want a spring in your step and a song in your heart, you give Al Gore and I a chance to bring America back."

"We'll lift the country up," he said, as the sound of applause rolled down the streets and bounced off downtown office buildings. "It's time for them to go. It's time for us to rescue America."

Recognizing that pictures often leave a more lasting impression than words, the Clinton-Gore ticket tried this week to take from the Bush administration its claim to be the party of family values. Standing on platforms with their wives, Hillary and Tipper, the candidates waved, applauded and whipped up the crowd into chants as film crews hired by the campaign shot the events for campaign commercials.

The Arkansas governor was greeted by a cheerful crowd of several hundred campaign workers and supporters when he returned to Little Rock on Wednesday evening for a welcome rally outside his national headquarters.

"We have just a little over 100 days in this campaign," Clinton said, before signing dozens of autographs and greeting his hometown well-wishers. "One hundred days of struggle and effort; 100 days of spirit and hope."

Frank Greer, one of the campaign's media strategists, said that the Democrats do not plan to televise commercials before next month's Republican National Convention unless they are attacked first.

Judge refuses timber sales in owl habitat

SEATTLE (AP) — A federal judge refused to lift an injunction that blocks federal timber sales in northern spotted owl habitat while the government and a loggers' association appeal an earlier order.

U.S. District Judge William Dwyer also said Tuesday that there is no excuse for the U.S. Forest Service not to get to work on a new environmental impact statement on protecting the threatened owl.

On July 2, Dwyer issued a permanent injunction prohibiting government timber sales on owl habitat in Washington, Oregon and Northern California. Earlier this year, the judge had ruled the Forest Service's impact statement was inadequate because it failed to consider new scientific information.

City wants to change foreign-trade zone

■ FTZ boundary modifications depend on Dallas, Washington, D.C., approval.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

Foreign-trade zone boundaries in Midland are expected to be modified within the next two months, and hopefully before the year's end a manufacturing business will be operating within the zone.

The Permian Basin Airport Board was updated on the FTZ — a tax-free sanctuary for foreign products — at Wednesday's quarterly meeting.

An FTZ allows importers to bring foreign components into the zone to manufacture products and then ship out the goods duty-free.

"They (FTZs) are an essential ingredient in a comprehensive economic development program," said Carroll Thomas, business development director for Midland International Airport.

In June 1990, the U.S. Department of Commerce approved creating a FTZ in Midland.

No companies have set up in the zone.

"Hopefully by the end of the year (that will change). There's one business that's expressed interest," said Thomas, who added that he has talked to about 20 manufacturers about using the zone.

"It's an educational process (contacting businesses). Not a lot of people are aware of it (the zone) and the advantages of it," he said.

In addition, interested companies may have new zone boundaries in which to operate pending approval by the U.S. Customs' district director in Dallas and the executive director of FTZs in Washington, D.C., Thomas said.

The zone covers two tracts of land — totaling 166 acres — within the airport's 300 acre industrial park.

The city wants to change the boundaries because 70 acres of the zone at Midland International Airport fall on Confederate Air Force soil. That area, which CAF has no plans to utilize as a FTZ, would be deleted.

The proposed modification would include an area within the FTZ located in the Midland Industrial Park on the east side of Loop 250 between Highway 80 and Interstate 20.

Federal approval to change boundaries is expected within 60 days, Thomas said.

In other discussions at the Permian Basin Airport Board meeting:

■ A presentation on airport marketing programs included plans to better serve airport parking customers by advertising parking rates, erecting signs listing rates

Summer school ends

The advanced summer school program at South Elementary School wrapped up Wednesday. The program is an outgrowth of the school's extended day, designed to provide challenges for average and above-average students, as well as remediation for those who need it. Above, Janet Madrid, 7, is eager to answer teacher Sarah Arrambide's question. At left, Marisa Lujan, 8, also was among those who completed the program.

New York City sludge arrives in Texas town

SIERRA BLANCA (AP) — New York City sludge, which the city had to quit dumping in the ocean this month because of environmental hazards, arrived in Texas Wednesday where it will be spread across desert rangeland.

A train carrying 24 red boxcars of the treated sewage backed into a $4.5 million ranch at about 10:30 a.m. Officials with MERCO Joint Venture, the sludge-handling company, should begin spreading the sludge later this week.

While MERCO hailed the arrival of the sludge as "a new era in rangeland revitalization," opponents denounced it as "a sad day in Sierra Blanca."

About 30 people attended an open house at the ranch where the sludge will be spread. A simulation of the spreading was done using cow manure.

"In this effort both New York and Texas will go down this road together and we will all benefit in the end," said Ralph Macchio, owner of RGM Liquid Waste Removal Corp., which will supervise the sludge spreading.

A federal judge this month refused to stop the sludge's arrival in West Texas by denying Attorney General Dan Morales' request for a temporary court in junction.

Environmentalists fear heavy metals and organic material in the sludge will destroy the rangeland and possibly contaminate groundwater. But MERCO officials have said the sludge meets all federal standards.

Morales has sued MERCO, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and two EPA officials in Dallas alleging MERCO's $168 million contract to take about 125 tons a day of sludge from New York City is a danger to the environment.

"MERCO is spreading New York City sludge on West Texas soil today because the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency is not taking seriously its responsibility to the citizens of this country," Morales said in a news release.

"My office will aggressively pursue the lawsuit against the EPA for failing to study the environmental risks before approving the spreading of sewage sludge and for failing to consider the archaeological and historical sites in the area as required by law," he said.

Hudspeth County Judge Bill Love said he believes the project means progress for his county of about 2,900.

"I'm seeing a lot of jobs and a lot of people working who have not been working before," he said.

Bentsen works to gain votes for super collider

WASHINGTON (AP) — A month ago, supporters of the superconducting super collider were reeling from the House's stunning decision to halt federal spending on the giant atom smasher. This week, they have a few reasons to smile.

A Senate appropriations subcommittee Tuesday resuscitated the project, earmarking $550 million of its $22 billion allocation for the super collider, which is being built south of Dallas.

And Wednesday, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen revealed he has been able to convince Sen. Robert Byrd, the powerful chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, to support the $8.25 billion super collider.

"He's had some concerns about the super collider and the other night I got him to agree that he would not oppose it — and would vote for it," said Bentsen, D-Texas.

Opposition by Byrd to the super collider "would really give us extremely serious problems," said Bentsen, who as chairman of the Senate Finance Committee wields considerable power of his own.

Byrd's isn't the only vote Bentsen has lined up in weeks of buttonholing fellow senators and urging support for the collider.

Instead of using the traditional arguments — that the super collider is the world's most important research project and failure to build it would set the United States back scientifically — Bentsen took a different tack with retiring California Sen. Alan Cranston.

"I told Cranston: 'I want a going-away present from you,'" Bentsen said Wednesday. "'You voted against the super collider. I want you to vote for it this time.'"

Bentsen said Cranston "seemed a bit surprised at the request."

"The next night, he walked up to me (on the Senate floor) and said: 'Here it is, wrapped up, with a ribbon around it, it's my present, a vote.'"

The success with Byrd and Cranston aside, Bentsen said the battle to save the super collider is far from over. He and others have predicted a tough fight on the Senate floor and possibly an even tougher battle when House and Senate conferees meet to reconcile funding differences.

Teen reaches out to touch children home alone

■ Midland College student answers Phone-a-Friend hotline calls.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

"Phone a Friend, this is Sonya. Oh, Hi, Julie. You go to Crockett, right? And you're in the fifth grade? What are you doing today? Nothing! How come? What's going on?"

So begins another conversation when 18-year-old Sonya Cantu picks up the Phone-a-Friend hotline at the Midland Camp Fire Office.

The perky teen-ager talks to between 20 and 60 youngsters in the span of three hours each weekday. Some of the callers are lonely, frightened, depressed or just plain bored. Not to worry, Sonya keeps joke and riddle books handy.

"Where do fortune tellers dance? Give Up? At the crystal ball. Ha. Ha."

"Sometimes my boss walks by my desk and I am laughing real hard. My boss says: You really get down to their level. I have to. If I don't, they won't talk about what really matters," the teen-ager said.

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Sonya Cantu listens to a caller on Camp Fire's Phone-a-Friend hotline Wednesday.

And sometimes, finding out how they really feel about things, takes a hypothetical question.

"If you could marry anyone in the world, would you marry a happy person, a rich person, or a famous person? Tell me why you chose a famous person."

Sonya, a Midland College student, works part-time afternoons manning three Phone-a-Friend lines. The child psychology major, a resident of Lamesa, lives with relatives in Midland and commutes home to Lamesa on the weekends.

She took over hotline duties in mid-May and has been consoling callers ever since.

"Some girls have called who think they are pregnant, some want to run away, but most (of the callers) are children — especially fourth-graders — who have parents in the workforce and they are home alone.

"Many of the callers have single parents and some have lost a parent. I can relate to that. My father passed away when I was at a young age," she said.

When the going gets rough Sonya refers her callers to experts at local agencies. She keeps a manual of procedures and a file of referral numbers

ED TODD

It's sad when lifespan of any of God's creatures is shortened

Have you ever wondered what it would be like to be a jack rabbit?

More precisely, have you ever considered the adventures your mind would experience in the body of a jack rabbit, running here and yon, stopping to graze, breed and raise young, watching for traffic and foes, and weeping over all of those road kills?

Todd

What about a turtle?

Would you like to be a turtle?

How about a rattlesnake?

Skunk? Coyote? Prairie dog? Guinea fowl? Goat? Frog? Hummingbird? Eagle? Ladybug? Praying mantis? Cockroach? Ant? Horsefly? Spider? Butterfly? Cicada? Bumble bee? Turkey vulture? Rat? Dove? Dog? Cat? Horse? Mule?

Yourself?

How about yourself? Not a bad deal, since that's what each of us is — whether we recognize it or not. We are what we are and probably could be a lot better at it, too. We could amaze ourselves.

The more I become conscious of life about me, the more I am overjoyed with life.

Amazing wonders.

It's fun just watching creatures romp and work, though I would hardly enjoy watching termites eat up the house or parts therein.

There is just about as much suspense in watching a box turtle slowly crawl across the road as there is drama in watching a chicken sprint and fly to avoid a speeding heap of metal on the same road.

No chicken, you would think, would want to end up in a frying pan or in somebody's bowl of soup.

Can you imagine a bunch of jack rabbits reveling over jokes about road kills the way lawyers make jokes about lawyers or Aggies about Aggies?

No.

They've got too much class — too little time to squander — to sit idly by to ridicule one another the way humans do.

As far as I know, I have never been in the body or in the mind of a jack rabbit. But, I suspect I would enjoy it.

I cannot imagine a blue jay not enjoying being a blue jay or a hummingbird not happy with life. The cats I have known never, to my knowledge, wished they were a dog or bird or human being.

Can you imagine the frustration a howling coyote would have wishing it were a soaring eagle, hawk or vulture or a diving falcon?

The jack rabbit is a good, ol' West Texas critter.

I can't say that I would mind being one for a while. Jack rabbits don't seem to mind being what they are.

I ran across one the other night. Beautiful fellow.

I was heading down a country road in the pickup truck as if I were in a hurry to go somewhere. I was and I wasn't.

And right in front of me, the big, ol' jack rabbit appeared.

I swerved slightly. Didn't want to roll over and bloody everybody up.

No thud.

Just a brushing, it seemed.

I slowed down, turned around, and up within the beams of the headlights was the jack rabbit, dead as a doornail, as we used to say in the country.

The jack rabbit was pretty well skinned up, eyes wide open, pupils dilated.

It was really kind of sad. It wasn't as if I had gone out rabbit hunting and killed a few for sport and supper. That takes a different attitude, perhaps something to do with proving something and, maybe, survival.

The "road kill" was a fine specimen, gorgeous, stately, handsome, long ears, long legs, and all.

The jack rabbit, once a baby bunny, had survived the elements, and perhaps gunfire, the snouts of coyotes, wild dogs and pigs, the stomping hooves of cattle, horses, mules and whatever plagues jack rabbits. And I suspect that the jackrabbit had hopes and aspirations not unlike the rest of us.

Could be.

It's good to enjoy life and to know that other creatures, not just humans, seek fulfillment in their own way. And it is just sad when the life span of any of God's creatures is shortened.

Even so, it is good to appreciate life, any life.

at airport entrance roads, and creating a frequent parking club.

■ An update on enplanement activity showed a June increase due to recent low-price ticket sales and summer travel.

■ Board members were advised that the water tower project is half-way completed. Work on the inside of the tower has been finished and the painting of the outside will begin in October or November.

■ Airport telephone numbers have been changed because of extra lines installed.

During the City of Midland Airport Board meeting, which preceded the regional board meeting, the update of the water tower project was given.

In addition:

■ The board disagreed with a recent complaint by Premier Parking (a private airport parking company) about airport access fees charged. Because of the frequency of shuttles to and from the terminal, the board expressed that the $300 per month and 10 percent of parking revenue charges to Premier were fair.

■ The board was informed that an advertisement has been posted to accept bids for modification of the signage system and purchase of a new aircraft rescue and fire-fighting vehicle.

CALL: Teen answers children's hotline calls next to the phone. The hotline, initially set up in 1988 to offer a kind voice to latchkey children home alone after school, was expanded to the summer for the first time this June.

"I may get calls about anything from someone who is alone at home hearing noises to a spider bite. Some kids call me when they are sick, or have headaches or stomachaches. Nothing real traumatic has happened yet. I'm grateful for that," she said.

Callers are identified by their first name, grade in school and school they attend. Sonya dutifully logs each caller into a book. She said the only drawback of her job is not meeting the callers in person.

"Even just dealing on a first name basis, it's hard not to get attached," she said.

"Oh, you are at your grandmother's house. Do you like spending time with her? I don't have a grandmother. She died a couple of years ago. I know. I have a grandfather though."

Sonya banters with her young callers and tries to keep conversation light.

"When I come in here, I leave my worries outside," she said.

She also tries to give all callers their fair share of time, keeping conversations going no longer than 10 minutes.

Winning the confidence of youngsters calling in also depends on "the way I answer the phone. I don't want to intimidate them. All they know of me is my voice.

"Some kids just need some guidance, others just need someone to listen to them. I have one caller who is 14, and he has been calling since the fifth grade. He said: I feel pathetic calling at 14. And I said: Don't feel that way. We all need someone to talk to."

"Are you ready for school to start back again? You're not. Why not? Tell me about it."

Sonya has accidently hung up on callers on occasion when all the lines are lit up. But her dutiful callers usually just dial her number again.

Although the phone lines are open from 2:30-5:30 p.m. weekdays, Sonya arrives early to listen to messages on the recorder that is left on in her absence. "There may be 40 calls during the night and about 100 messages left on the answering machine over the weekend," she said. When not working, Sonya checks joke books out from the library or hunts down riddles.

"One boy will call and say: I'm going swimming, so I can't talk now, but I have a joke for you."

Aside from the regulars who check in with her every weekday, Sonya said one of the best perks of the job is when youngsters call back and thank her for advice. "That is worth a million dollars," she said.

The teen-ager said she never gets phone weary, even though she answered about 2,050 calls last month. "My ears get sore. But when I get home to Lamesa on weekends, guess what the first thing is that I say after I walk in the door: Has anyone called for me?"

Petro-Plains Council of Camp Fire offers "Phone a Friend" 2:30-5:30 pm. Monday through Friday year-round for children who are home alone. The service is free and is available to any child in Midland or Odessa. In Midland call 697-KIDS, in Odessa, 563-KIDS.

Judge Nowlin withdraws from state legislative redistricting case

AUSTIN (AP) — U.S. District Judge James Nowlin on Wednesday withdrew from further participation in the controversial state legislative redistricting case.

Nowlin, of Austin, was replaced on the three-judge panel by District Judge Harry Lee Hudspeth of El Paso.

The move was applauded by Texas Attorney General Dan Morales, who had been urging the judge to step down.

"We are pleased with the judge's decision to recuse himself from the redistricting litigation. We have been urging this action by the judge . . . for many months. We are now able to proceed with this case without this cloud hanging over it," Morales said.

State GOP Chairman Fred Meyer voiced regret, saying Nowlin had handled the case properly.

"Judge Nowlin was the victim of shameful and unwarranted partisan persecution from Texas Democrats, and especially from Dan Morales," Meyer said. "It is a shame that a fine and fair judge whose redistricting plan was upheld by the United States Supreme Court . . . feels it necessary to withdraw."

In withdrawing, Nowlin, who had been reprimanded for his handling of the case, denied having had any partisan motives in the issue.

"The actions this judge has taken in these cases in an effort to apply the law to the facts presented leave him with a clear conscience," Nowlin wrote in a four-page order.

Democrats have accused the Republican-appointed judge of favoring the GOP as the judicial panel drew state Senate and House redistricting plans for the 1992 elections. Analysts have suggested that the Senate plan gives Republicans a chance to control the Legislature's upper chamber for the first time in a century.

In his written statement, Nowlin rejected such arguments.

"Although various allegations made by several parties in these cases have been widely publicized due to the highly partisan nature of the controversies and issues in said cases, this judge has found no legitimate reason to recuse himself" Nowlin wrote.

He noted that the U.S. Supreme Court had upheld the rulings of the three-judge panel.

However, he wrote, he was concerned that "because of the publicized negative personal comments made by several parties or their attorneys related to (Nowlin's) participation in these matters, a reasonable person might well conclude that the targeted judge would maintain such bias and prejudice toward those parties."

The three-judge panel had voted 2-1 to reject the Democratic-controlled Senate's redistricting plan.

Allison better

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Davey Allison, hospitalized after a frightening crash at Pocono last weekend, was feeling much better Wednesday and may even attempt to race until the first caution flag in Sunday's Diehard 500, his team spokesman said.

Allison is recovering in Allentown, Pa., from two broken bones in his right hand, a broken and dislocated wrist and a fractured collarbone.

Originally, the plan was for Allison to run one lap in the Diehard 500, then turn his Ford over to substitute driver Bobby Hillin. That would enable Allison to get the points for Hillin's finish, vital at this stage of the season with Allison running only nine points behind Bill Elliott in the overall standings.

But Hillin would be well off the pace if he has to switch with Allison under a green flag. If the switch occurs under a yellow flag, they would save valuable time in the pits.

"I'm happy and excited about getting in probably the best car on the race track," Hillin said, adding that he's not concerned about the possibility of getting in the car down by one or two laps.

"I definitely think the car is capable of making up laps," he said.

Hillin won the only Winston Cup race of his career at the 1986 DieHard 500. Allison has won eight races at Talladega, but never the July event.

NASCAR rules require that Allison be able to get in and out of his car on his own. Also, he will have to run at least one lap during Saturday's practice session.

Cubs ruling

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal judge is expected to rule today on the Chicago Cubs' request to block realignment that would move the team to the National League West next season.

U.S. District Judge Suzanne B. Conlon, who last week received briefs from both sides, on Wednesday told lawyers in the case that she would rule Thursday on the Cubs' request for a preliminary injunction.

Commissioner Fay Vincent on July 6 overruled the Cubs' veto of realignment and ordered Chicago and the St. Louis Cardinals to the NL West next season, sending the Atlanta Braves and the Cincinnati Reds to the NL East.

Holdout ends

AUSTIN — Cornerback Garry Lewis of Alcorn State ended his holdout Wednesday by signing a contract with the Dallas Cowboys.

LPGA defies 'the Monster'

■ With rain forecast throughout the U.S. Women's Open, players face one of golf's most demanding courses.

By Bob Green
AP Golf Writer

OAKMONT, Pa. — Is Nancy Lopez praying for rain to slow and soften the hard, fast greens of Oakmont for the U.S. Women's Open?

"You bet," she said Wednesday. "Rain will make it play longer, but it'll make it play easier."

The weatherman says her prayers will be answered.

Showers and thundershowers are in the forecast for all four days of the tournament that begins Thursday on what may be the most difficult course the women have ever encountered.

Ben Hogan called it "the Monster" after he won the 1953 U.S. Open, one of the six times Oakmont has served as the site of men's championship.

Until now, conventional wisdom was that it was simply too long and too difficult for the stars of the LPGA Tour.

An exhibition by five leading women players last year did little to dispell the theory. Pat Bradley won with a 2-over-par 73. Beth Daniel shot 74. Judy Dickinson and Missie Berteotti had 76's and two-time U.S. Open winner Betsy King shot 77.

"This is going to be an incredible test," Bradley said. "Oakmont not only is demanding off the tee, but your iron game has to be in top notch shape, too. You have to position your ball on the greens because the breaks are very subtle.

"Quite a few girls will be talking to themselves," she said.

They've been talking to each other, too, after two

Raiders suffer injuries in Austin

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The Los Angeles Raiders found out the price of working against another team Wednesday when medical reports came back on a pair of injured players.

Inside linebacker Kyle Freeman, a candidate for a backup role and a special teams player, underwent surgery at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in Beverly Hills, Calif., for a ruptured Achilles tendon.

Freeman, originally a seventh-round draft choice of the Houston Oilers, was injured while covering a punt in Tuesday's drills against the Dallas Cowboys. He is lost for the season.

Former Utah Jazz draft choice Walter Watts broke two fingers on one hand, apparently ending his longshot bid to make the Raiders as a defensive end.

Watts played in the Continental Basketball Association last year and was ready to give up basketball for football if he had a chance with the Raiders this summer.

"We've been getting some nicks here and there, other than Freeman," coach Art Shell said. "Guys have been getting strains and things like that. It's just part of the preseason process."

The Raiders went through two additional practices with the Cowboys on Wednesday. Wide receiver Willie Gault (strained hamstring) kept himself out of action.

Shell defended the idea of working against another team.

"We've been getting a lot of good work," he said. "This is good for us because the tempo is close to game conditions."

The Raiders planned to work twice against the Cowboys on Thursday before returning to their training camp in Oxnard, Calif.

There was no news on the seven players still remaining away from camp in contract disputes.

Tulsa has Angels' number

■ The Drillers have beaten Midland five times in six games over the last two weeks, winning again Wednesday.

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

The Midland Angels can't seem to beat the Tulsa Drillers — even with help.

Tulsa has beaten Midland five times in six outings over the last two weeks, including Wednesday night's 6-4 victory. That leaves the Angels with a 4-7 mark over the last 11 games — and still in first place in the Texas League West.

The Angels did have a three-game winning streak coming into the Tulsa tussle which opens a 10-game homestand at Angels Stadium, but this has not been a stellar time for the Haloed Ones.

However, second place El Paso doesn't seem to want the lead. The Diablos are 3-8 over the last 11 games, losing to Shreveport 11-5 Wednesday as Midland picked up ground in the race, despite the losing record, over that span.

But Tulsa is the real problem and the thorn Wednesday was Kevin Belcher, who drilled two home runs, knocked in four runs, had three hits and scored twice. Belcher now has 17 homers for the year and moved to within two of catching Midland's Jeff

Jack Kent Cooke 'billionaire bully', says D.C. mayor

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Mayor Sharon Pratt Kelly on Wednesday called Washington Redskins owner Jack Kent Cooke "a billionaire bully," yet said she would "go anywhere, meet anywhere at any time" to prevent the Super Bowl champions from leaving.

The mayor also derided Virginia Gov. L. Douglas Wilder Jr. as "Governor Giveaway" for trying to entice the Redskins to move to the suburbs in his state. Cooke recently announced plans to build a 78,000-seat stadium in Alexandria, Va.

Neither Cooke nor Wilder could be reached for immediate comment.

The mayor noted environmental problems with the Virginia site and predicted the Redskins would ultimately remain in the nation's capital.

"You have to respect and admire the masterful skill of someone like Mr. Cooke," she said. "For what he has going on now ... here we are, two impoverished jurisdictions and the issue becomes who among us can give up the most at the expense of our communities to this billionaire."

Cooke and Wilder signed an agreement earlier this month to build a new stadium at an unused railroad yard in

Make right investment with your dollar

Tanisha Mills, the Midland Lee 400-meter ace who is the only Midland girl to ever win an individual state track championship, isn't sitting still this summer.

Williamson

As she prepares to enter her senior year, Mills has qualified for the National Junior Olympics, which will be held next week at Mt. San Antonio College in Walnut, Calif.

She earned the right by placing second with a 57.6 seconds in the Region 12 Junior Olympics in Houston a couple of weeks ago.

She isn't without company, however. Lee senior Tekeira Strambler, who won a state berth last spring for the Rebels, also won a national qualifying berth with a third place 34-7 in the triple jump. These two have eyes on another big year at Lee next spring.

In addition, Michael Acrey and Roderick Mayfield, who will both be sophomores this fall, also landed national berths in a younger age division. Acrey tied for second in the high jump with a 6-feet while Mayfield was second in the 400 hurdles with a 1:00.28.

All of these youngsters did this while running under the flag of the Tall City Track Club, which is coached by Farris Strambler.

"There is no question that the club holds the key to the track future at both high schools," Strambler said. "We've got the kids running and working hard in the summer and it's going to pay dividends."

Strambler, however, notes that raising funds to get these kids to California hasn't been an easy task.

"To tell you the truth, I've lost all my pride. We're short and I think it would be a great injustice if we can't come up with the $3,000 needed to compete. These kids need this kind of exposure. This is where you learn what it's all about and it would be a shame if these kids couldn't benefit from this kind of competition."

It's a story that is not uncommon these days. There was a time when funds like this could easily be raised if you knew the right people. Times are tougher — and the need is greater.

There seems to be more sports than ever in the community, begging for well deserved sponsorship. We hear the plea all the time.

There is still the feeling here that an investment in kids can never go wrong.

There is no arm twisting here, but help when you can. Many of you may be approached for help in the coming year for all kinds of activities. This is just an example of one organization which needs help.

We also fear that schools will come under ever increasing pressures to shorten the purse strings for athletics in the coming years. The investment is ultimately for kids and we must guard against letting that investment go to the streets.

There is no shortage of people in the streets who are willing to make an investment in our kids. Which dividend are you willing to receive?

LPGA: Rain will make Oakmont play longer days of practice in the rain.

(From 1D)

"A lot of the scuttlebutt I've heard goes that you'll take even par (for the four rounds) and sit on it," Patty Sheehan said.

But that may be optimistic, she said.

"It might be whoever is the last one standing," Sheehan said.

The course has been altered for the women's play, trimmed from its standard 6,989 yards to 6,312.

New, temporary tees were built on the 15th and 18th, cutting the length of the latter from 456 yards to 390. The par-3 6th and 8th have been trimmed from 201 and 255, respectively, to 168 and 185.

Still, it remains one of the longest courses the women play. With the rain during practice and the showers predicted for the tournament itself, the course will play even longer.

At the same time, the moisture has slowed and softened the rock-hard, all-but-impossible-to-hold greens that are Oakmont's trademark.

"Once you get on the greens, that's where the challenge starts," defending champion Meg Mallon said.

The combination of wet rough, length, narrow fairways, treacherous greens and 170 bunkers greatly restrict the list of possible winners in the field of 156.

"It severely limits the number of players who can win," Lopez said. "It takes out a lot of them very quickly."

She does not include herself in that list, however.

"I think my game is ready for a golf course like this," Lopez said. "I'd have to say I'm playing better than I ever have coming into an Open.

"I'm hitting it long and straight. The putting, I'm stroking the ball well and my confidence is high. I'm expecting to make putts, not hoping to make them.

"Yes, I'd say this is my best chance to win the Open."

It is the one big victory that has eluded her in a 16-year Hall of Fame career on the LPGA Tour.

She comes into this one with runner-up finishes in four of her last seven starts, including last week. Lopez hasn't been out of the top 10 in two months.

Other major contenders include Mallon, Bradley and Danielle Ammaccapane, the only three-time winner on the LPGA Tour this year and the leader in earnings.

Two-time tour winners this season are Sheehan, Dinah Shore champ Dottie Mochrie and LPGA title-holder Daniel. Sheehan has finished second three times in this event.

The tournament offers $700,000 in total prize money with $130,000 to the winner.

ESPN will provide national television coverage of portions of the first two rounds Thursday and Friday. ABC will televise the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

Yugoslav team agrees to eliminate half its athletes

Associated Press

BARCELONA, Spain — The Yugoslav Olympic team approved a deal Wednesday which would eliminate about half of its 118 athletes from participating in the Summer Games.

The International Olympic Committee is likely to go along with the decision, IOC President Juan Antonio Samaranch said.

"I would say it's a victory. I thank many people around the world, important politicians who helped to have these athletes from Yugoslavia in Barcelona. Now, we will say we will have universal Games," Samaranch said.

Asked specifically if the IOC would approve the deal, he replied, "Yes, I think so."

The Yugoslav team, in a vote in Belgrade, accepted a United Nations proposal to allow only individuals to compete at Barcelona. No Yugoslav team — including the 1988 gold medal-winning men's water polo team — can compete.

The plan still needs the approval of the International Olympic Committee, which will meet today, and from the Spanish goverment. Any Yugoslav winning a medal would accept it without the national flag or national anthem.

The controversy upstaged the arrival of more than 1,200 athletes, from Ghana to Great Britain, throughout the day.

The U.S. basketball Dream Team, which warmed up Tuesday with a 111-71 beating of the French in Monte Carlo, opens its gold-medal run Sunday against the powerhouse Angola five. Stiff-backed Larry Bird played 16 minutes in the blowout, while Charles Barkley and Michael Jordan led the scoring with 21 points apiece.

Jordan & Co. now have four days off, but many of the gold-medal hopefuls wouldn't mind getting things under way right now. Opening ceremonies for the Games, the first to come off without a boycott since 1972, are set for Saturday at Olympic Stadium.

For the first time in 32 years, South Africa is at the Games. Its delegation of 97 athletes and 33 officials arrived Tuesday. Not on its roster was American-born javelin thrower Tom Petranoff.

Oilers' kicker seeks abuse on golf course

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Al Del Greco has a great excuse for getting out of the house to play golf.

He tells his wife it helps maintain his professional edge as the incumbent place-kicker with the Houston Oilers.

Okay, how so?

It takes concentration to hit a golf ball down a fairway or kick a football through goal posts, although the genteel sport of golf lacks the sound effects Del Greco experiences in NFL stadiums.

He has a solution for that too.

"Sometimes, in the charity tournaments I play, I ask the gallery to scream and tell me I stink while I'm hitting, and that helps me out," Del Greco said. "Sometimes it's real silent on the golf course and that's worse than 75,000 people screaming at you."

It's all a matter of conditioning and Del Greco figures he's experienced it all.

"There's not much that can happen that I haven't already experienced before," Del Greco said. "It's a matter of concentration and aiming something and trying to kick it or hit it in the direction you want it to go."

Del Greco first noticed the benefits of being an NFL place-kicker on the golf course when playing in best-ball tournaments.

"When they needed a drive down the fairway, it was easy for me to step up and hit my best driver," Del Greco said. "It's just like when I go on the field, it's time to go hit something between the uprights when they need you to do it."

Del Greco came to the Oilers' rescue last season one day after Ian Howfield's missed field goal enabled the Washington Redskins to beat Houston in overtime.

Howfield was waived Nov. 4 and Del Greco won a kickoff and signed on Nov. 5. He finished the season hitting 10 of 13 field goals and all 16 of his extra points.

The Oilers also rescued Del Greco, who had been waived by Phoenix and was about to begin work as a cardboard box salesman in Birmingham, Ala.

He missed a 33-yard attempt in the waning moments of a 26-24 playoff loss to Denver but he's accustomed to being reminded of the kicks he misses instead of the ones he makes.

"People tend to think we should never miss and as kickers we don't expect to ever miss," Del Greco said. "But the human element comes into it."

'SKINS: Cooke threatens to take NFL champions to Virginia

(From 1D)

Alexandria, Va., across the Potomac River from Washington.

Under the deal, the governor pledged $130 million in state funds for public improvements at the site. Cooke would put up the $160 million needed to build the stadium.

"We can't match this open check from Virginia and Governor Giveaway to Mr. Cooke," Kelly said. "We can't do that, we can't try to do that and I don't think that Virginia is going to let him do that."

Kelly said she thought the city had reached agreement with Cooke in March for a privately-financed 78,500-seat stadium at a site near RFK Stadium. Cooke's only expressed concern was the length of time it would take to complete mandatory federal environmental impact studies on the site north of RFK where the new stadium would be built, she said.

"Strangely enough on April 1, I got a call from Mr. Cooke," the mayor said. "He ultimately said 'I'm going to have to abruptly back out.' Essentially what he was suggesting was that the environmental issues were such a hurdle for him, he could never get it done as fast as he thought."

Kelly said even though no deal was signed, the city has spent $500,000.

TULSA: Drillers impressive

(From 1D)

Kipila for the Texas League dinger lead.

Belcher, who is nine for 19 against Midland in the six games with two homers and six RBI, blasted a two-run shot to left in the first inning to give Tulsa a nice 3-0 start to the game. He then hit a two-run blast to left center in the seventh to break open a tight 4-2 contest.

"I've changed my hitting stance and opened up a little," Belcher said of his recent hitting surge. "I'm getting to the inside pitches now and using my lower legs more."

But Belcher wasn't a happy man after the win. "I struck out in that final at-bat. I swung at a really bad pitch and that's something I've trying to get away from."

As far as the Angels were concerned, he didn't swing at enough bad pitches. He connected on both homers off Midland loser Phil Leftwich (5-6).

Midland got back into the game in the eighth inning, scoring two runs to narrow the Tulsa gap to 6-4, but it took some help to even do that.

Rod Correia led off the inning with a punch single to center. Edgar Alfonzo then hit a ball down the first base line and the first base umpire called it foul and then changed the call to fair as Correia raced all the way to score. After a lengthy delay, Correia was sent back to third, instead of first, and scored on a double by Kipila one out later.

The Angels got a run in the second inning when Garret Anderson scored from third base on a wild pitch and in the fifth on Bobby Jones' third homer of the year. Jones and Fausto Tejero added a little excitement in the ninth with leadoff singles and moved to second and third on a sacrifice bunt by Marcus Lawton. Tulsa relief ace Jeff Bronkey got out of the jam by retiring Correia on a liner to second and striking out Alfonzo to end the game for his 11th save.

Tulsa starter Kurt Miller (5-2) got the victory with seven sterling innings, walking only one and striking out five while giving up five hits.

Midland has virtually been in every game with Tulsa during the horrid series, but end up losing. Belcher says it's just a matter of things falling right for the Drillers.

"We've had a good team all along, but errors kept us from winning close games," Belcher said. "Now we're playing sound, fundamental baseball and we have eliminated a lot of mistakes.

"As far as Midland goes, maybe it's just that some of their key people aren't coming through at just the right time. It can be a funny game."

Indurain holds on to tour lead

Associated Press

MONTLUCON, France — Jean-Claude Colotti of France won the 17th stage of the Tour de France Wednesday, and defending champion Miguel Indurain of Spain held on to his overall lead.

Colotti's victory was his first in the Tour, and he finished 3 minutes and 31 seconds ahead of Frans Maassen of the Netherlands and Marc Sergeant of Belgium.

Philippe Louviot of France was fourth, more than eight minutes back after the 118-mile run from La Bourboule and Montlucon in central France.

Indurain finished with the pack some 16 minutes behind the 31-year-old Colotti, but he maintained a comfortable lead that is unlikely to be challenged in the four remaining days.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, JULY 23, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Try to be more tactful when dealing with those closest to your heart. Acting unsure of your mate's abilities could jeopardize your relationship. By September, family members will play a larger role in the decisions you make. Welcome their help but insist on maintaining a certain degree of independence. The business outlook appears most promising in December. Your careful attention to detail will pay big dividends early in 1993. Romance will be heady next spring.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Justice Anthony Kennedy, actress Gloria DeHaven, pitcher Don Drysdale, actress Belinda Montgomery.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Although the business outlook is good, you must be cautious. Adopting a conservative approach to investments will impress higher-ups.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A fresh idea appears from out of the blue. Extra cash comes your way. Peace of mind comes when you mend a recent quarrel. The key to greater career success is decisiveness.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your intuition reveals the best way to handle a job problem. Seek advice from an older person. Only stubbornness is standing between you and an exciting romance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Magical moments could turn this into a memorable day. By surrounding yourself with positive people and welcoming their ideas, you will turn a loss into a win!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Artistic, musical or literary talent wins you new recognition. Be creative — rearrange your furniture or decorate with an unlikely mix of colors. An authority figure seeks your help.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Emotions run high today. You are in the right place at the right time. Be gentle with those near and dear to your heart. Accent physical fitness and watch what you eat.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your business skills are in demand. You could make an enterprising move, involving real estate. Settling down could become a top priority. Be careful not to take your loved ones for granted.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Financial speculation, risk-taking and games of chance are featured. You feel lucky and ready for romance. An optimistic mood is bound to attract friends and potential lovers.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Learn the real story before investing money in a financial scheme. Do not expect something for nothing! A romantic partner may not live up to your expectations. Let a relative play Cupid.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Swallow your pride and turn to a parent or authority figure for answers, especially where your profession or career is concerned. A more creative pattern is needed.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A special relationship begins to intensify. You are eager to expand your horizons with someone you love. A search for truth could take you far from home.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A spiritual experience helps you choose more meaningful goals. How you feel about yourself is more important than what a critic says. Only the best is good enough for those you love.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are optimistic, energetic and highly original. They learn how to handle responsibility at an early age and bounce back quickly from disappointment. Like all Leos, these children want beautiful things and will work hard to afford them. Count on these Leos to be both passionate and generous in romance. They want the gifts they give to reflect the richness of their emotions. Multitalented and persistent, they can find success in any field that truly interests them.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Two of ♠

This hand is a nightmare for an avid finesser, but a joy for the technician. How would you play three no trump after the lead of a low spade?

There is nothing to the auction. South has a classic one-no-trump opening bid and, with a balanced 10 points and no interest in the majors, North's raise to game is above reproach.

After a spade lead, declarer can count eight tricks once the ace of clubs is knocked out. The fulfilling trick can come from either red suit—a simple finesse in diamonds, or guessing which way to take the heart finesse.

Those declarers who are content with the surface possibilities would win the first spade, force out the ace of clubs, win the spade continuation and take the heart finesse into East. That protects against West having started with five spades and the queen of hearts. When East gathers in the queen, declarer can still fall back on the diamond finesse. A reasonable line, but as the cards lie, the contract falls short a trick.

The technician wins the first spade and forces out the ace of clubs. After winning the spade return, declarer cashes just enough clubs to exhaust the enemy's cards in the suit. Then declarer simply exits with a spade.

As expected, West must win and can cash one or two spades—it makes no difference. But then West must lead a red suit and, no matter which the defender chooses, South scores an extra trick in that suit.

Matriarch Rose Kennedy celebrates 102nd birthday

HYANNISPORT, Mass. — Rose Fitzgerald Kennedy, matriarch of one of America's most politically prominent families, celebrated her 102nd birthday quietly at home on Wednesday.

Among the gifts she received was a bouquet of 102 roses from her son, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and his new bride, Victoria Reggie Kennedy.

Family spokeswoman Melody Miller said a party was planned for this weekend at the Kennedy compound.

On Friday, the senator will dedicate a plaque at the corner of Wells and Harley streets in Boston's Dorchester section. Mrs. Kennedy, daughter of a former Boston mayor, lived in the neighborhood as a teenager and graduated from Dorchester High School in 1907.

Mrs. Kennedy, who is in frail health since a series of strokes, has rarely appeared in public in recent years. But, Miller said, "she's still a very dynamic presence in the family and an inspiration to her children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren."

CICERO, Ind. — Rock star Elton John has offered to help pay for the college education of Ryan White's sister.

John

Andrea White, whose brother became close friends with the British rocker during a five-year battle with AIDS, graduated last month from high school and plans to attend Indiana University this fall.

Ryan White died in 1990 at age 18 of complications from AIDS, which he contracted from a blood-clotting agent used to treat his hemophilia.

White's mother, AIDS activist Jeanne White, said this week John had offered to pay half the cost of educating Andrea, 18, who hopes to become a physician.

"Andrea wants to be in emergency room medicine or in infectious disease work," Mrs. White said. "She was influenced by Ryan and definitely by Elton, since he's helping pay for it."

Mrs. White also said she had loaned another rock star, Michael Jackson, home movies of her son.

The footage will be used in a rock video of Jackson's song "Gone Too Soon," which is included on Jackson's new album, scheduled for release this fall.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — With Tom Cruise lined up to star and Sydney Pollack to direct, city officials were thrilled to learn Memphis will be the location for the movie version of John Grisham's best-selling novel, "The Firm."

"Shooting will begin toward the end of the year, probably in November," the film's executive producer Michael Hausman said Tuesday. The novel is about a sinister Memphis law firm. Grisham is a Mississippi attorney.

"This is the first definite word. We've been waiting and hoping for a confirmation," said Linn Sitler, executive director of the Memphis and Shelby County Film, Tape and Music Commission.

Cruise said during a May broadcast of NBC's "Today" that he would play the lead in the movie, which will be released by Paramount.

Jackson's Danish concert organizer, Flemming Smith, declined to comment.

LONDON — Queen Elizabeth II on Wednesday presented actor Michael Caine with the badge of a Commander of the British Empire for his service to the entertainment industry.

Caine

The 59-year-old actor left the filming of The Muppet Christmas Carol, in which he plays the part of Scrooge, to go to Buckingham Palace.

He said afterwards that the queen had asked him about his current role.

"When I told her that I was filming in Britain, she asked if the movie industry is coming back here and I said 'Definitely!'

"She smiled when she heard that and then said 'Good.' "

Caine, who has been filming for 14 hours a day for four weeks, said he planned to celebrate the honor at a lunch with friends and was then off on vacation with his wife, Shakira.

COPENHAGEN, Denmark — A police officer's foot was crushed when a car from Michael Jackson's motorcade ran over it as Danish crowds pressed for a glimpse of the super star, police said Wednesday.

Jackson, who gave a concert here Monday, was visiting Tivoli Gardens amusement park Tuesday night before heading to Brussels, Belgium, to continue his world tour.

About 300 fans were standing outside Jackson's hotel when he left for the short drive to the gardens.

Police Officer Anne-Margrethe Skov's foot got stuck under the car when she was "pressed toward the slowly driving motorcade by a crowd of hysterical young people," said Police Inspector Kurt Hansen.

Hansen said Skov, 29, would wear a cast for about six weeks.

Prices climb

NEW YORK — Crude oil and other energy prices rose Wednesday, boosted by a report showing a decline in oil supplies and talk of possible military intervention against Iraq.

Traders said crude oil prices rose at the start of the day and maintained their gains.

The September delivery price of West Texas Intermediate rose 29 cents a barrel from Tuesday to close at $21.84.

Natural gas for August delivery settled at $1.809 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 3.9 cents.

Lower-grade sour crude for September delivery settled at $19.84 a barrel, up 29 cents.

Talk in the United Nations on possible military action against Iraq helped push energy prices higher, since such action could curtail supply. Similarly strong statements have come from the White House recently.

Compaq earnings

HOUSTON — Compaq Computer Corp., citing success with its new low-cost strategy, said Tuesday its second quarter earnings jumped 43 percent from the same period a year ago.

Second quarter income totaled $29 million, or 35 cents per share, compared to $20 million, or 23 cents per share for the same period in 1991.

Sales for the quarter ending June 30 were $827 million, a 15 percent increase from sales of $718 million posted a year ago.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar was mixed in sluggish trading Wednesday, with money traders apparently worried the central banks might bludgeon them again in favor of supporting the U.S. currency.

The dollar fell Wednesday against the German mark in New York trading to 1.4850, compared with late Tuesday's 1.4870.

The dollar closed in New York at 126.625 yen, up from 125.25 yen Tuesday.

Stocks retreat

NEW YORK — Stock prices fell on Wall Street Wednesday, following the lead of unsettled markets in other financial centers around the world.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 30.80 points to 3,277.61, stretching its net loss over the last four sessions to 84.02 points.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 8 to 5 on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Tokyo stock market tumbled overnight to a six-year low as measured by the Nikkei index of 225 issues, which fell 2.9 percent.

East Coast personal income lags

■ East Coast and California residents' personal income didn't post the gains the rest of the nation experienced.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — People living along the East Coast and in California trailed the rest of the nation in personal income growth as the economy tried to shake off the recession, a government study said Wednesday.

"The 15 states with the slowest growth in personal income since the first quarter of 1991 are on or near the East Coast, except for California, and tend to be densely populated," according to the report by the Commerce Department's Bureau of Economic Analysis.

All states posted income gains in the 12 months ending in March, ranging from an anemic 1.0 percent in Rhode Island to a robust 7.3 percent in Idaho. Nationally, incomes grew 4.1 percent.

But personal income growth in 10 East Coast states failed to keep up with a 3.0 percent increase in the inflation index used by the bureau. Californians' incomes, which grew 3.2 percent, barely outpaced rising prices.

"Most of the states with the fastest growth in personal income since the first quarter of 1991 — the last quarter in which real gross domestic product declined — are in the western half of the United States," the report said.

These states, it added, "have few large urban areas and have had fast growth in payrolls in construction and private service-type industries."

A recession generally is defined as two consecutive quarters of decline in the GDP, the total of goods and services produced in the United States and the broadest measure of the nation's economic health.

The economy declined 3.9 percent in the final quarter of 1990 and 2.5 percent in the first three months of 1991. It has grown sluggishly since then, including a 2.7 percent advance from last January through March.

New England was one of the first areas hit by the recession, which then spread down the East Coast. California's decline came later; many analysts say its recession continues.

Rudolph E. DePass, a bureau analyst, said the coastal areas suffered, in part, from military cutbacks, the effects of overbuilding and industry restructuring that began as the economy weakened.

"Many of the interior states restructured earlier in the 1980s and didn't get into the overbuilding," he added. "Many, in fact, didn't even participate in the expansion of the '80s and tend to be less dependent on defense-related production."

The 15 states with the slowest income growth account for nearly 50 percent of the nation's personal income, the report said.

All had declines in construction payrolls and below-average growth in private service-type industry. Most had payroll declines at companies making usually durable goods, such as cars and computers.

On the other hand, the 15 states with the fastest growth account for less than 20 percent of personal income.

The department defines personal income as income received from all sources, including wages and salaries, dividends and interest, less contributions to Social Security and other social insurance programs. It is measured before deduction of income and other personal taxes and is not adjusted for inflation.

House measure would reduce cable TV rates

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The House is expected to pass a bill today aimed at reducing cable television rates.

The bill gives the Federal Communications Commission authority to regulate cable rates, which have nearly doubled since the industry was deregulated five years ago.

Nationwide, cable television service now costs an average of $20 per month, the industry says, up from $11 per month in 1986.

"Consumers are getting price-gouged," said Gene Kimmelman, legislative director for the Consumer Federation of America, which represents 240 consumer advocacy groups around the country. "This bill could bring down cable rates significantly."

The bill, which must be reconciled with a Senate-passed version, is bitterly opposed by the country's 11,096 cable companies, which took in $20 billion in subscriber fees last year and another $3 billion in advertising revenues, according to the National Cable Television Association (NCTA).

Cable rates have been rising, the association acknowledges, but cable customers are getting more choices and higher quality programming than was offered five years ago.

"Even though people are paying more money, they're getting good value for the money," asserted NCTA spokeswoman Peggy Laramie.

Consumer advocates argue, however, that cable operators are essentially monopolies that should be regulated. Most communities are served by only one cable operator.

In the 40 or so communities where there is competition among two or more cable operators, rates per channel are 30 percent lower than the national average, said Kimmelman.

"If you don't have a competitive environment, which you don't in cable, you've got to regulate," said Rep. Christopher Shays, R-Conn., a supporter of the bill.

The bill before the House would require federal regulators to review rates, with an eye toward trimming back those that exceed the levels charged where operators compete.

Prosecutors try to show Milken offered bribes

N.Y. Times News Service

Federal prosecutors got tough with Michael R. Milken Wednesday as they sought to show a federal jury in Manhattan that an investment partnership he created at Drexel Burnham Lambert in 1985 was nothing more than an illegal front through which Milken enriched the best customers of his dismantled junk bond empire.

Kenneth Vianale, an assistant U.S. attorney, pressed Milken, seeking to get him to admit that those who profited from the partnership were actually bribed.

Again and again, Vianale asked Milken if the ones who were offered shares "were the people you had lined up for your biggest deals?"

"No," Milken replied.

In sharp contrast to his testimony Tuesday, when he smiled and seemed at ease, Milken became a little testy Wednesday in response to Vianale's cross-examination.

Subpoenaed by the defense, Milken testified in behalf of Patricia Ostrander, a major purchaser of high-yield bonds as a fund manager at Fidelity Investments in Boston. Ms. Ostrander is being tried on charges that she received a bribe from Milken in the form of her windfall investment in the partnership.

Vianale tried to show that Mrs. Ostrander and other important customers of Milken's were offered inside deals while lesser customers received nothing.

The tough handling of Milken was in sharp contrast to the polite, almost deferential, treatment he received two months ago when he was a government witness against Alan E. Rosenthal, his former protege at Drexel Burnham Lambert who was convicted of embezzlement in a deal involving David Solomon, one of Milken's biggest customers.

For his testimony against Rosenthal, the office of the U.S. Attorney praised Milken in a memorandum to Federal Judge Kimba Wood. Wood is deciding whether to reduce the 10-year sentence she imposed on Milken for his guilty plea to six counts of securities violations. The office said Milken's "cooperation substantially aided the government."

Milken, who is serving his sentence at a federal prison in California, will be eligible for parole in 22 months.

Sears reports 15.5 percent earnings jump

N.Y. Times News Service

Sears, Roebuck & Co., on Tuesday reported a robust 15.5 percent increase in earnings in the second quarter, despite a 50 percent plunge in income from its retail operations.

Overall earnings climbed to $345.8 million, or 90 cents a share, from $299.4 million, or 87 cents a share, during the comparable quarter last year. Total sales rose slightly to $14.27 billion from $14.09 billion.

But the company's retail business has failed to regain its footing, in spite of strenuous cost-cutting efforts that have eliminated about 45,000 jobs and are expected to save $840 million this year and $940 million in 1993.

The company said earnings in the merchandising group were $78.5 million, compared with $156.9 million a year earlier. Sales for the group continued to slip, dropping 1.1 percent in the second quarter to $7.57 billion from $7.65 billion during the similar period last year.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Gift stock basis depends on stock's sale

By Bill Doyle

Q: I am planning to transfer stocks worth less than $10,000 to each of my children, as gifts. They will sell the stocks to pay off their college loans. I view this as a tax savings, since they are in the 15 percent federal income tax bracket.

What will be their cost basis and what will be their acquisition date for tax purposes?

Doyle

A: That depends on whether your children sell those stocks at profits or at losses.

When stock or other capital asset received as a gift is later sold at a profit, the recipient's basis — cost for tax purposes — is the donor's basis plus any gift tax paid.

Because each gift you plan to make will be under $10,000, no gift tax will be due. Assuming your kids sell the gift stock at a profit, your basis will be their basis.

When gift stock is sold at a loss, the recipient's basis is either the donor's basis or the stock's market value on the date of the gift, whichever is lower.

The acquisition date, to determine if the profit or loss is long-term or short-term, is the donor's acquisition date if the stock is sold at profit and the date of the gift if the stock is sold at a loss.

If you are in the 28 or 31 percent federal income tax bracket, you're correct about your plan resulting in overall tax savings for your family,

Q. In 1991, I used a certified public accounting firm to prepare my 1990 income tax return. This year, with a less complicated return, I did it myself.

About a week after the April 15 tax deadline, I received a letter from the CPA firm, stating the people there had filed an extension for my 1991 return and had scheduled an appointment for me to meet with them to have my '91 return prepared. They made no effort to contact me before taking this action.

Needless to say, I cancelled that appointment and told them I had filed my own return. But I wonder. Will the extension request they filed with the Internal Revenue Service have any negative consequences, such as the risk of being audited?

A: The IRS uses many measurements — most of which it keeps secret — to decide which returns should be audited. Although it is impossible to say for sure, it is most unlikely the filing of an unnecessary extension request for a return that was filed on time will cause the revenooers' computers to go "tilt."

Don't fret about negative consequences on that score. As long as you file absolutely honest income tax returns — as I'm sure all readers of this column do — there's no reason for you to have the slightest worry about the IRS.

Q: I have read or heard somewhere that the IRS has a special office intended to help people who have tax problems and who cannot resolve those problems with IRS staffers. Do you know the title of that office? I might need it at some future date.

A: You're thinking of the IRS Problems Resolution Program, which is for people who have been unable to resolve their tax problems through normal channels. You'll find the number in the phone book.

That office can help clear up problems resulting from previous contacts at the IRS. But it cannot change tax law, regulations and technical decisions.

Q: When writing about 401(k) retirement plans, why don't you inform your readers about the exorbitant taxes some states charge when withdrawals are made from 401(k)s?

A: Because this column appears in many states, it can't concentrate on the tax laws of particular states. Besides federal income tax, 401(k) withdrawals are subject to state income tax in states with such levies. That bite is worse in some states than in others.

Jewelry, including such items as, from top left, Swatch Watch with spring florals, wide bracelet of matte gold links from Monet, textured sand dollar and starfish necklace from Trifari, 'Venetian Florals' from Liz Claiborne, scallop shell and sand dollar earrings from Avon, and flower-shaped brooch with rhinestones from Christian Dior, help add pizzazz to summer wardrobes.

Accessories sparkle for summer

By Francine Parnes
Associated Press

Be they bags, belts, bangles or other baubles, well-chosen accessories can punch up your summer wardrobe without KO'ing your wallet. And this season, accessories offer witty takes on Americana, ethnic prints and animal magnetism.

Besides fitting your budget, they never fail to fit the body and the times. And they tally in among the biggest sellers season after season: Accessories magazine estimates consumers spent about $17 billion for them in 1991.

"You can really update your wardrobe without putting a big dent in your pocketbook by introducing accessories like jewelry, a handbag, scarf or hat," says Steven Hedaya, New York-based president of Capezio handbags.

Take the handbag — literally. The trendiest ones are meant to be toted around by little top handles and are structured, geometrically shaped and no bigger than a school lunch box.

Many of these palm-sized purses are brightly colored, closely mirroring the palette of summer shoes in fuchsia, lemon, lime and orange. Capezio offers Kelly bags in seven vivid colors, $48 each.

STIR UP the ethnic mood with faux ivory wide bangles, copper bracelets, wooden beaded necklaces, turbans in colorful native prints and banded straw hats.

> 'You can really update your wardrobe without putting a big dent in your pocketbook by introducing accessories like jewelry, a handbag, scarf or hat.'

> — Steven Hedaya
> president of Capezio handbags

"The native-ethnic look in accessories is especially appealing with the season's madras shorts and printed bra tops," says Karlene Lukovitz, executive editor of Accessories magazine in New York.

Then take a walk on the wild side with animal prints.

You'll find them charging out in full force on everything from jewelry to scarves, hair accessories, belts and handbags, says Lukovitz. "You name it, there's an animal print on it — and just wait till the trend really explodes this fall," Lukovitz says.

Echo Design Group offers a collection of safari-inspired scarves, including bold zebra prints and a map pattern with African nation postage stamps. A 36x36 silk square is $55.

Norma Kamali, who introduced her first accessories collection in May, has zebra print sunglasses in black and white or multicolors. About $90, they're sold at the OMO Norma Kamali boutique in New York and Bloomingdale's.

For more animal magnetism, try Susan Cummings' sterling silver button covers. Choose a lion, lioness with cub, elephant, gorilla or giraffe, $25 each at Saks Fifth Avenue. Wear them individually, as cuff links or by the zooful.

CLOSER TO home, cowboy and American Indian influences are riding high. Paying tribute to home on the range are straw cowboy hats, gingham-covered earrings in fruity colors, silver and turquoise jewelry, fringed handbags, denim headbands and bandannas.

Kokin offers a straw cowboy hat in red, blue or black, studded with metallic stars, $64 at Saks Fifth Avenue. Red bandanna print nylon tights, $8 at Contempo, fairly shout cowgirl chic.

Those whose tastes run more to the classic might opt for the wisdom of pearls. Invest in a couple of ropefuls and wear them in multiples for the newest look, says Beth Miller, New York fashion coordinator for Napier jewelry. A 16-inch two-strand pearl necklace by Napier is $37.50; an 18-inch three-strand necklace runs $55.

Costume jewelry lends a ladylike touch to soften pinstriped suits, flannel vests and other tailored men's wear styles currently in vogue, says Miller.

Apropos the dandy theme, look for haberdashery-style print ties and suspenders, ascots, cuff links, pocket watches and straw fedoras.

"Why not wrap an oblong or square scarf around your neck as a tie?" says Lynn Roberts, vice president of advertising for Echo scarves in New York.

Among her best selling scarves: Palm Beach-inspired designs with gold chains or dangling anchor charms, and beachy conversational prints with sunglasses and espadrilles. Echo offers 36-by-36 squares for $55.

The scarf is one of the most versatile accessories you can own.

"You can wrap it around a ponytail, wear it at the neck, tie it as belt, or knot it as a skirt or pareo over a bathing suit."

DEAR ABBY

Children ask if there's any way to thwart mom's will

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I need your advice concerning wills. My mother passed away recently. Dad died three years ago and left everything to our mother. There are six of us children, and Mother left five of us everything she had, but she intentionally left one daughter nothing. Mother revised her will shortly before she passed away for the sole purpose of omitting one daughter. It's a long story, but Mother and this one daughter never saw eye to eye on anything, and this was Mother's way of punishing her.

Van Buren

Fortunately, none of us children (four daughters and two sons) would go hungry without the inheritance we are getting, but the daughter who was left out of the will could use the money more than any of the rest. She's had two failed marriages and four children to send to college.

My question: Should we five children who have benefited from our mother's estate give an equal share to the sister who was omitted? Or would doing so violate our mother's wishes? — CHICAGOAN

DEAR CHICAGOAN: No one can rule from the grave. The money you and your siblings inherited belongs to you — to do with whatever you choose.

I say, help the sister who could use the help, and don't worry too much about violating your deceased mother's wishes. When you all meet again in the hereafter, if your mother demands an apology for helping the sister who needed it, tell her you're sorry, but you did what you thought was appropriate at the time. Meanwhile, if you have any question about the legality of the will, consult a lawyer.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were blessed with triplets (all girls) who are now almost a year old. My problem is that strangers stop me on the street when I'm with my children, and they feel free to ask me very personal questions. For example: "Did you take fertility drugs?" which I did not. Or, they'll comment on how skinny I am, and how incredible it is that I carried triplets.

Abby, I am wondering why people feel that it is OK to make such insensitive comments and ask such personal questions. I had a difficult pregnancy, and I have a lot of work to do every day, as you can imagine. I'm not complaining; I love my children — but I resent the intrusion by strangers.

Can you advise me on how to deal with nosy questions? — JUST ANOTHER FAMILY

DEAR JUST: Sorry, but you are not "just another family" — you are a celebrity in your community, who will no doubt always be known as "the mother of triplets." As to the nosy questions, such as whether or not you took fertility drugs, they need not be answered. ("Why do you want to know?" would be an appropriate response.)

DEAR ABBY: Recently, I held a door open so the lady behind me could enter a public building. I have been doing this ever since I was taught that gentlemen behave that way.

As the lady entered, she turned to me and said sternly, "I am perfectly able to open doors for myself!" I was dumbfounded.

Abby, I've been opening doors for women for years and was always rewarded with a courteous "thank you," so this rude reaction startled me.

Are acts of common courtesy now regarded as "put-downs" or possibly harassment by today's women? — BAFFLED IN BEAVERTON, ORE.

DEAR BAFFLED: No. Please don't judge all women by the crusty female you encountered.

Keep your eyes open, and you will see women holding doors open for men whose arms are holding packages, or are otherwise occupied. Common courtesy is people helping people without regard for gender.

Buy 'the best' at bargain price

Slightly used designer clothing, accessories found in thrift stores

By Paula Monarez
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — When Janice Bates went to Europe last year, her suitcases were filled with designer clothes and shoes — Anne Klein, Bally, Liz Claiborne and I. Magnin.

The catch: Her fancy-schmancy wardrobe was culled from the racks of area thrift stores, saving her about one-third the price of new clothes from department stores.

Bates, 47, was trekking around London and other European cities in clothes purchased at the Council Thrift Shop in North Hollywood, a thrift shop run by the National Council of Jewish Women.

"Absolutely everything I buy for myself comes from here," said Bates, while purchasing a used computer at the thrift shop recently. "They've got great stuff in here. Why should I shop at some department store where it will cost three times what I pay here?"

THRIFT SHOPS are no longer just a place for old, out-of-style castoffs. Recession-weary shoppers are discovering that many shops now sell upscale, better-quality clothes.

Thrift shop organizers have lured buyers by redesigning their stores to give them more of a boutique look and by being more selective about the clothes they show on their racks.

"Thrift shops aren't what they used to be," said Renee Hilton, director of the thrift shops for the council. "People used to think of them as being for the poor. But they are now much more upscale. In our shops, we won't sell anything unless it is new or almost new. It has to be in good condition or it's not sold here."

'Thrift shops aren't what they used to be. People used to think of them as being for the poor. But they are now much more upscale. In our shops, we won't sell anything unless it is new or almost new. It has to be in good condition or it's not sold here.'

— Renee Hilton
director of thrift shops
for National Council of Jewish Women

Jill Angel, manager of the American Cancer Society's Discovery Shop in Northridge, said what's helped thrift shops is the downturn in the economy.

"People are on a budget and can't afford to spend hundreds of dollars on clothes," Angel said. "This is the ultimate answer to recycling."

Angel describes her store as upscale resale.

"We get everything," she said. "I just went through a bunch of handbags by Adrienne Vittadini. Those sell for over $200 at Bullocks. We sell them for $50 to $75. We also got some Gucci ties. And it's all in very good condition."

Most of the donations come from private individuals who live locally, Angel said.

"We get things from a lot of celebrities and other well-known people," she said.

LIKE OTHER thrift shops, Angel gives the clothes that she doesn't use to other charities, such as the Salvation Army and Goodwill.

About two years ago, the National Council of Jewish Women hired Hilton, who previously worked in sales merchandising for Nordstrom, to redo their six shops and make them more upscale.

Hilton has reorganized the clothes by sizes and gender and made the shops — which earn about $1 million annually — cleaner.

"People don't want to shop in a place that is disorganized or where things are thrown on a table or aren't in any order," she said. "We have to make the shopping experience as pleasant as possible."

Hilton also introduced flea markets at the NCJW headquarters on Fairfax Avenue. The markets, held three times a year, showcase designer clothes from anonymous wealthy and celebrity donors. The council's second flea market this year is being held from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday at 543 N. Fairfax Ave.

"We have one item in there by Ralph Lauren that had a price tag on it of $500," Hilton said. "We're going to sell it for $85."

Bella Feingold, manager of the North Hollywood thrift shop, said she sees donated clothes that are easily worth several hundred dollars, and some items have never been worn.

"We get clothes that are unbelievable," she said. "I get everything from Calvin Klein to Laura Ashley. After working here for three years, I would never shop at a department store. I've been spoiled."

FEINGOLD SAID low-income patrons are not the bulk of her customers. Walking through her doors are the wealthy and the educated. Also, many movie studios send people to her shop to buy clothes for use in various productions.

"I'd say about 200 people come into the store every day," Feingold said. "They all want the same thing: a good bargain."

Christina Drummer of Tarzana shops for her clothes at thrift shops throughout the San Fernando Valley.

"You can find really good clothes at a reasonable price," Drummer said. "I recently found a beautiful beige dress by St. John that retails for $500. I got it for $25. It's the perfect dress for my trip to Holland."

Drummer said shoppers won't find the perfect clothes every time they walk into a thrift shop.

"You really have to look," she said. "But if you take your time, you can really find some premium merchandise."

Carolyn Lombard, a North Hollywood caterer for television and movie studios, donates many of her and her daughter's clothes to thrift shops, but occasionally she finds something that interests her.

"See these shoes?" said Lombard, pointing to a pair of flats with a colorful flower pattern. "I've seen these for $175. I got them here for $12. I love thrift-store shopping. It's the best."

Catalogs from hell may follow you there

By Erma Bombeck

My dad received a letter from a Navy recruiting officer the other day inviting him to join the Navy.

Bombeck

I wouldn't mention it were it not for the fact that my dad has been dead two years this November. My mother says he gets more mail than she does.

I can predict with some accuracy what mail will follow me to the grave.

I know as sure as I'm sitting here that when I'm gone the book clubs will threaten to send me a $39.95 copy of "The History of String" if I don't mark the box with an X before the 15th.

Horchow and Lands' End catalogs will find me, along with a snobbish art gifts catalog that for the last year has warned, "We have not heard from you. If you do not place an order, we will remove you from our mailing list." Promises, promises.

Dan Quayle's mailings will catch up with me somewhere. The computer in his office can spell my name Bondeck and my address can have the first two digits missing. Doesn't matter. After death, I will still receive his offer to become a privileged member of the Republican Inner Circle and attend the Red, White and Boots Gala in Houston.

There isn't any doubt in my mind that I will receive a card from a hosiery saleswoman at Nordstrom in Los Angeles. It will alert me to the annual Round-the-Clock sale. Why wouldn't it follow me to the great beyond? It's followed me everywhere else.

Jury duty correspondence is another example of an organization that doesn't take death as an excuse for not showing up. If you write "deceased" on the card summoning you to serve, it will be returned with, "Please forward."

Every day in this country, names are being sold to political, religious and charity groups. We are computerized by age, sex and income and sold to organizations that marketing experts want to target. There are no guarantees that everyone on the list is alive.

For a while, I thought the only finality to a life was if you appeared on a U.S. postage stamp. It doesn't work for Elvis. He probably still gets mail c/o Walmart in Indiana.

Nueva Vista had the pleasure to interview Elvia Hernandez, president of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce.

The Hispanic Chamber of Commerce was founded with the purpose to help Hispanic businesses achieve better success.

"They did not have the kind of support on how to produce or multiply their business. We guide them on winning contracts from the government, state or county since many of them didn't have the experience to expose their foundations" said Ms. Hernandez. The chamber is made up of 15 board of directors, persons whom are all business people and will be 8 years old this October.

She added that classes are available to Hispanic businesses so that they can have a better understanding on how to obtain improvements for their business. They are also trained to make transactions with banks to obtain loans.

Ms Hernandez pointed out, that the chamber of commerce is supported by the city. It offers certain funds to operate in the area of economic development. The chamber has also been of great help to to parents, by giving scholarships in the amount of seventeen thousand dollars. They assist any organization in the planning of their functions to achieve better economic funds.

La Cámara de Comercio Hispana de Midland Continúa la Tradición con el Sabor del México Viejo

por Jeffrey McDonald

Una tradición de gozo y entretenimiento familiar, retiene el sabor (y en verdad digo el sabor) del Viejo México cuando el Quinto Anual Mex-Tex Menudo Chile, Fajitas, Brisket Cook-Off y Festival Familiar llega en Julio 24 al 26 en el Twin City Speedway.

Mientras continúa siendo un evento joven, el cook-off ha enseñado un crecimiento remarcado, los dos en el numero de actividades que son parte del cook-off, y el numero de estos que atienden, de acuerdo con Elvia Hernandez, Presidenta de la Cámara de Comercio Hispana de Midland.

"El primer menudo cook-off? Voy ha decir que tuvimos como 30, 35 puestos. Ahora tenemos mas de 68," dice Hernandez. Probablemente en el primero, debimos tener unos dos mil o mas atendiendo, luego creció, y creció, y creció. El año pasado, estimamos mas de 23,000, OK? Este año, estamos esperando, para el fin de semana, unos 40,000 personas tal vez hasta los 50,000."

Las raíces de el Menudo Cook-Off empiezan en el Midland Folk Festival, el cual empezó en 1985 con un limitado exito. Un numero de cambios propuestos fueron el cambio del Midland Center al Midland County Exhibit Building, mas variedad en las concesiones ofrecidas, y un cook-off, pero no el común chile cook-off.

"En El Paso, hemos patrocinado, a través de otra organización allá, un gran menudo cook-off, y fue muy popular," dice Hernandez. Y yo sugerí a la mesa directiva que tal vez nosotros necesitábamos hacerlo un festival familiar y cook-off. Y fue eso lo que hicimos."

Cada año desde el comienzo, el cook-off ha agregado mas participantes y una gran variedad. "El primer año nada mas tuvimos el menudo cook-off, y los puestos de comida, de artes y un desfile," recuerda Hernandez. "El siguiente año, agregamos el espectáculo, de la Señorita Hispana del Permian Basin Scholarship Pageant, y un carnaval. El tercer año, fuimos y agregamos el desfile de niñas, La Niña Hispana, y el concurso de comer jalapeños."

Al pasar los años, Chile y fajitas serían agregados a las categorías del cook-off, y este año hemos agregado el Brisket. Entretenimiento musical también ira creciendo, con 27 grupos listos para actuar en el evento de este año.

Tal vez la oportunidad mas grande del evento de este año es la ubicación al cual el cook-off se mueve a el Twin City Speedway, al Sur del Highway 80 entremedio de Midland y Odessa. Todos los eventos del cook-off, incluyendo el desfile del Sábado, será en

Midland Hispanic Chamber Continues the Tradition with a Flavor of Old Mexico

by Jeffrey McDonald

A tradition of family fun and entertainment retains the flavor (and we do mean flavor) of old Mexico when the 5th Annual Mex-Tex Menudo, Chile, Fajitas, Brisket Cookoff and Family Festival kicks off July 24-26 at Twin City Speedway.

While still a young event, the cookoff has shown remarkable growth, both in the number of activities that are part of the cookoff, and the number of those who attend, according to Elvia Hernandez, president of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce.

"The first Menudo Cookoff? I'm going to say we had about 30, 35 booths. Now we're up to 68," said Ms. Hernandez. "Probably the first one, we must have had a couple-thousand in attendance, and then it just grew and grew and grew. Last year, we estimate over 23,000, OK? This Year, we're looking at, for the weekend, a good 40,000 people, even 50."

The roots of the Menudo Cookoff lay in the Midland Folk Festival, which had begun in 1985 with limited success. Among the changes proposed were a move from Midland Center to Midland County Exhibit Building, more variety in the concessions offered, and a cookoff - but not the more common chile cookoff.

"In El Paso, we had sponsored, through another organization over there, a big menudo cookoff, and it was very popular," said Ms. Hernandez. "So I suggested to the board that maybe we need to make it into a family festival and cookoff. And so that's what they did."

Each year since it's inception, the Cookoff has added more participants and greater variety. "The first year we just had the menudo cookoff, and the food booths, the arts and crafts, and a parade," recalled Ms. Hernandez. "The next year, we added the pageant, the Senorita Hispana del Permian Basin Scholarship Pageant, and a carnival. The third year, we went and added the little girls' pageant, La Nina Hispana, and the jalapeno-eating contest."

Over the years, chile and fajitas would be added to the cookoff categories, and this year they are joined by brisket. Musical entertainment would also grow, with 27 groups scheduled to perform throughout this year's event.

Perhaps the biggest change for this year's event is location as the Cookoff moves to the Twin City Speedway, south of Highway 80 between Midland and Odessa. All cookoff events, including the Saturday parade, will be held on the Speedway grounds. "The reason we moved is because of the Johnny Canales Show. We expect tons of more people," said Ms. Hernandez.

He's no Johnny-come-lately to his countless Mexican-American fans.

Los Secretos de el "Almuerzo de Campeones"...Menudo

por Jeffrey McDonald

Como el Permian Basin se va preparando para el 5to. Anual Mex-Tex Menudo Chile, Fajitas, Brisket Cook-Off y Festival Familiar, alguna gente esta preguntándose, 'Porque menudo?', a lo cual otros contestan, 'Porque no?' otros están preguntando 'Como menudo?', a lo cual otros no responden mucho, por lo menos no son muy específicos.

Respecto a la primer pregunta, cocineros de chile con carne y carne de Brisket deshebrada pueden ser encontrados alrededor del país, y ellos son especialmente comunes a través del Estado de la Estrella Solitaria. Pero porque un menudo cook-off?

"Porque es un platillo tradicional Mexicaño," responde Elvia Hernandez, Presidenta de la Cámara de Comercio Hispana de Midland, y directora del cook-off de este año. Es una tradición que puedes contar. También es algo lindo. Menudo es como el "Almuerzo de Campeones', para curarse de una cruda, o lo que sea."

Tradición es algo al cual Juan Garza de Midland se puede relacionar. Juan, un Chofer/vendedor para Premium Beverage Company, fue un participante en el Menudo Cook-Off del año pasado, terminando después del campeón del menudo cook-off Sergio Rendon, también de Midland.

"Bueno, como una clase de tradición con mi mamá, tu sabes. Lo aprendí de ella, nada mas de mirarla y ayudarle de vez en cuando," dice Garza. Lo he estado haciendo por cinco, diez años, o mas de lo que me puedo acordar. Pero, en realidad, no para el publico sino hasta el año pasado, tu sabes, he tenido bastante experiencia haciéndolo, gozandolo. Una clase de pasatiempo para mi, el cocinar."

"En realidad, tenemos mucho problema para encontrar personas que quieran cocinarlo," dice Hernandez, refiriéndose a su esfuerzo para encontrar cocineros para que entren en el cook-off de Julio. "No es en realidad un platillo de Veraño. Es mas un platillo de Invierno o de mañanas."

Pero y si no es la correcta temporada para menudo, es siempre el tiempo correcto del día para menudo. "Oh, si. Absolutamente. Menudo se puede comer en almuerzo, comida o cena," dice Hernandez. "Y es algo que lo puedes comer otra vez, tu sabes, en Domingos, después de misa, cuando sea."

Y que es lo que hace al menudo el platillo correcto a cualquier hora del día? No sorprendentemente, cocineros de menudo especialmente estos preparándose para el cook-off, dudan en traer los detalles específicos de sus recetas ganadoras, en vez de esto, ellos proveén algunas partes esenciales.

"Bueno, yo nunca he usado chile de polvo en el mío. Este es el mejor modo," dice Garza, quien prefiere preparar su propio chile. "Siempre uso los mejores ingredientes que puedo encontrar. El orégaño? El mas fresco posible, el mas fresco que puedas encontrar. En el mas del tiempo, el orégaño, cuando esta muy viejo pierde su sabor. Y que tal la carne? Nada mas la panza.

Muchas personas les gusta patas de puerco en el, a muchas personas les gusta la carne de res," dice Garza. "Yo escojo los dos modos."

Y otros abren un bote, hacen sus propias cosas," dice Hernandez. Algunas le ponen patas de puerco, otros le ponen pozole amarillo en vez de pozole blanco. Algunos le ponen cebollas, y algunos hasta le ponen papas. Todos hacen diferentes cosas. Y yo pienso que esto es la hermosura de todo esto, tu sabes, las diferentes combinaciones que vienen sobre los años."

Y cuanto tiempo se lleva para hacer una buena olla de menudo? "Oh, cosiéndolo despacio de cuatro a seis horas," dice Garza. "Esto es tomando tu tiempo, no apurando las cosas. Una vez que lo empiezas, tu sabes, se lleva unas buenas cuatro horas por lo menos."

Practica, preparación, y paciencia. Todo viene en combinación el fin de semana del Julio 24, cuando Garza, Rendon, y otros competirán por el trofeo de la "Olla de Menudo" reconociendo al campeón en la acción de cocinar el "Almuerzo de Campeones"

The secret of the "Breakfast of Champions" ...Menudo

By Jeffrey McDonald

As the Permian Basin prepares for the 5th Annual Mex-Tex Menudo, Chile, Fajitas, Brisket Cook-Off & Family Festival, some people are asking, 'Why menudo?', to which others respond, 'Why not?' Some people are asking 'How menudo?', to which others don't respond very much at all, at least not with specifics.

As for the first question, chile and brisket cook-offs can be found across the country, and they are especially common across the Lone Star State. But why a menudo cook-off?

"Because it's a traditional Mexican dish," responds Elvia Hernandez, president of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, and a director of this year's cook-off. "It is a tradition that you can relate to. Also, it's something cute. Menudo is the 'Breakfast of Champions', or to cure your hangover, whatever."

Tradition is something to which Juan Garza of Midland can relate. Garza, a driver/salesman for Premium Beverage Company, was a runner-up in last year's Menudo Cook-off, finishing behind champion menudo cook Sergio Rendon, also of Midland.

"Well, it's kind of a tradition with my mom, you know. I picked it up from her "just by watching and helping her every once in a while," says Garza. "I've been doing it for five, 10 years, far as I can remember. But, really, not to the public till last year. I've had quite a bit of experience making it, enjoying it. Kind of a hobby for me to cook." "As a matter of fact, we have trouble getting people to want to cook it," says Ms. Hernandez, referring to her search for cooks to enter the late-July cook-off. "It's really not a summer dish. It's more of a winter or mornings type of thing."

But if it isn't always the right season for menudo, it's always the right time of day for menudo. "Oh, yes. Absolutely. Menudo can be eaten breakfast, lunch, or dinner," says Ms. Hernandez. "And it's something you can make and bring out again, you know, for Sunday, after Mass, whatever."

And just what is it that makes menudo the right dish any time of the day? Not surprisingly, menudo cooks, especially those preparing for the cook-off, hesitate to provide specific details of their winning recipes, though they did provide some fundamentals

"Well, I never use chili powder in mine. That's the easy way out," says Garza, who prefers to prepare his own chili pods. "I always use the best ingredients I can get. Your oregano? The freshest possible, the freshest you can get. A lot of the time, oregano when it's too old it loses it's flavor.

And how about meat? "Just your basic tripe. A lot of people like pig feet in it, a lot of people like beef," says Garza. "I use both." "Some people use the real chile. They toast it and they dry it, and the whole shebang. And others open a can, they do their own thing," says Ms. Hernandez. "Some people put pig feet in it. Some put in yellow hominy instead of white hominy. And some put in onions, and some even put potatoes in there. Everybody does different things. And I think that's the beauty of it, you know, the different combinations that come up through the years."

And how much time goes into making a good pot of menudo? "Oh, slow-cook it anywhere from four to six hours," says Garza. "That's taking your time, not rushing into things. Once you start it up, you know, it will take you a good four hours at least."

Practice, preparation, and patience. It all comes into play the weekend of July 24th, when Garza, Rendon, and others compete for the 'menudo pot' trophy, recognizing the champion at cooking the 'Breakfast of Champions'.

Entertainment related interests and non-profit charity appearances occupy most of Johnny's time.

"El Show de Johnny Canales", now an international show, has introduced and made Tejano music popular all over the world.

His late night entertainment/talk show emanates from the small town of McAllen, Texas, right in the heart of the Rio Grande Valley. But the show is strictly big time-attracting many of today's leading Mexican entertainers.

"El Show de Johnny Canales" covers the gamut of Mexican music - everything from Tex-Mex and norteño to tropical and ranchero. And his many fans in the studio and at home relish the brassy sounds, captivating rhythms and colorful, South of-the-Border outfits.

Most of all, they enjoy Johnny himself, and his down-to-earth, easy going manner.

Amarante Cordova, un escritor individual y competidor del Chile Cook-Off, ofrece esta receta para chile, la cual dice que es relativamente común y fácilmente similar a muchas recetas "básicas" para chile que irán ha cruzarse en tus viajes.

Chile BASICO

2 lbs. Carne de rez en trocitos o molida
1 tasas Salsa de tomate o tomate picado
1 tsp. Tabasco Sauce
3 tbl Chile de polvo
1 tsp Oregano
1 tsp Comino
1 tsp Sal
1 Tsp Chile Cayene
1 tbl Paprika
2 Cebolla picada
5 dientes de Ajo
10-12 Chile seco (Lo que escoja, New Mexico Habanero, o Japonés)

Guise la carne en sartén de freír, póngalo en una olla honda, al mismo tiempo con puré de tomate, (o tomates) y bastante agua hasta cubrirla. Agregue salsa picante tabasco, chile de polvo, orégano, cominos, sal, chile Cayene, cebollas y ajo. Agregue los chiles enteros. Remoje. Déjelo vaporarisarse por 1 1/2 hora, agitando ocasionalmente. Revuelva harina con agua hasta formar una pasta. Agregue la pasta a la olla y agite. Esto deberá engruezar el chile, y agregue la pasta gradualmente hasta que el chile alcancé la consistencia deseada.

Usted puede servir el chile inmediatamente, o removerlo del fuego y guardarlo (con olla y todo) por toda la noche, para ser recalentado y servido al día siguiente.

Jeff Mc Donald, un escritor independiente y ganador del Brisket Cook-off, ofrece esta receta para un marinado. La cual Jeff Clama ser la parte mas importante para preparar un brisket ganador. Jeff tomo la receta de sus Padres, pero dice que ha encontrado similares en sus viajes

Brisket Marinade

2 Tasas Vino Tinto
1/2 Cup Jugo de Limon
1 cup Aceite de Oliva
4 Dientes de Ajo, molidos
1 tsp Nuez Moscada
2 Tbl Azucar Blanca
2 or 3 ramitas de Perejil Fresco
2 or 3 ramitas de Romero Fresco
4 ojitas de Laurel
2 o 3 ramitas de Tomillo

Combine todos los ingredientes de arriba, póngalos en una olla abierta. Esto deberá ser bastante para cubrir el fondo de una olla grande para detener por menos 10 libras de carne.

En esta salsa se pone a marinar el Brisket por 24 horas, pongalo en el refrigerador, volteando la carne por lo menos cada 4 horas.

Guarde la salsa para usarlo para banar el brisket durante el proceso de cocinarlo.

Tradición

el lugar del Speedway. "La razón que nos cambiamos fue por el Show de Johnny Canales. Esperamos toneladas de personas," dice Hernandez.

Canales, quien tiene un programa de variedad semanal esta transmitiendo a 20 paises en los dos Continentes sobre las cadenas televisoras Univision e Imvision, grabara dos episodios del cook-off el Viernes por la noche, de Julio 24, a las 6 en Punto. Estos episodios serán puestos en el aire los fines de semana de Agosto 22, y Agosto 29.

Canales también será el encabezado del desfile del Sábado, el cual empezara a medio día, e ira ha presentar a las concursantes de La Señorita Hispana, y alegrara los programas musicales por la tarde, sin duda alguna, con esta señal de "Take it away, you Got it!"

Otra adicion al cook-off de este año, al interés especial a el gusto olímpico escondido en todos nosotros es el KG-100 Silver Bullet. "Yo pienso, que irán ha ser bonitos juegos," dice Hernandez. "Como las carreras de triciclos, y tratando de subir un poste de teléfono, tu sabes, con grasa, el tiro del huevo, y la guerra de tirar, y toda esta clase de cosas."

Algo nueva forma este año será un torneo de Volleyball, patrocinado por el M-Class de Midland College. Será un torneo de Volleyball de playa, jugado en arena por 4 equipos de hombres.

Todavía otras nuevas cosas del cook-off de este año serán la primera demostración anual de carros anfitrionado por el Mágico Minis, la demostración espera ofrecer una amplia variedad de carros y trocas antiguas, clásicos.

Por supuesto, el menudo cook-off ofrecerá bastante de los regresos de los favoritos. "Tenemos mas participantes en la Señorita y Niña Hispana de lo que hemos tenido antes," dice Hernandez. Tenemos 12 y 12, esto ira ha ser mas grande y mucho mejor."

El concurso de comer jalapeños también promete de ser mas grande y mejor, (y mas picoso) con semifinales el Sábado y finales el Domingo. Y una extensa línea de entretenimiento musical para todo el fin de semana, ira ha ofrecer una amplia variedad bandas y grupos de baile de toda la área de Odessa/Midland, y desde todo el Suroeste de América y México. Y la competición en las varias categorías de cocineros serán ciertamente tan serias como siempre como los cocineros buscan el codiciado trofeo de la "Olla Pintada" por los esfuerzos en cocinar o dirigir sus espectáculos.

"Lo que me gusta de la gente del Chile es que traen en ellos su propia cultura especial, sus exhibiciones son totalmente maravillosos," dice Hernandez. "Y nosotros queremos realmente agradecer a todos por su apoyo en todas las categorías de cocina, porque nosotros llevamos gente ahí de todas las nacionalidades, sean jueces, participantes, cocineros. La gente del Chile son maravillosos, las personas del Black Gold son los que nos han ayudado con la porción del chile." La porción del chile cook-off será conducido bajo la Dirección de CASI Y ganadores ganaran puntos para el campeonato mundial en Terlingua, Texas.

Estos asistiendo en las categorías en el cook-off son parte de un largo y dedicado grupo de voluntarios quienes se han hecho parte del crecimiento y suceso del tradicional cook-off. "Bueno, nuestros voluntarios solo han sido hasta 150, tal vez 200," dice Hernandez.

En adicion están los equipos del cook-off, y estos quienes ocupan las concesiones, puestos de comida, artes. "Muy bien estas hablando de unos 800 o 900 personas".

Otra tradición desarrollada sobre los años es el apoyo de la comunidad. En el pasado, grupos que sirven a la comunidad han recibido procedimientos de reciclar botes de aluminio de el cook-off, grupos como el San Juan Ranch, el Boys Club, y el Permian Basin Vietnam Veteran's Memorial.

Este año será el grupo de High Sky Children's Ranch. Otros grupos, tal como el Restitution Center ha recibido apoyo por preparar el lugar y mantenerlo limpio.

Todos en todo, promete ser un fin de semana lleno de entretenimiento, y las semanas siguen siendo ocupadisimas para Hernandez, su personal, y los muchos voluntarios. Pero ninguno esta mirando adelante por un poco de tiempo para descansar mas adelante. En efecto, planes y sugestiones para el cook-off del año siguiente están ya bajo camino.

Jeffrey McDonald, es un escritor por cuenta propia para NuevaVista.

Canales, whose weekly musical " variety program is broadcast to 20 countries in two continents over the Univision and Imvision Television Networks, will record two episodes at the Cookoff, Friday night, July 24 at 6 pm. Those episodes are scheduled to air the weekends of August 22nd and August 29th.

Canales will also serve as grand marshal of Saturday's parade, which begins at noon, and will then introduce the Senorita Hispana contestants, and kick off the afternoon's musical program, no doubt with his trademark "take it away, you got it!"

Another addition to this year's cookoff, of special interest to the 'Olympian' hidden in everyone, is the KG-100 Silver Bullet Games. "I think it will just be cute games," said Ms. Hernandez, "like the tricycle races, and trying to climb up the telephone pole, you know, with the grease, and the egg throw, and tug of war, and this kind of thing."

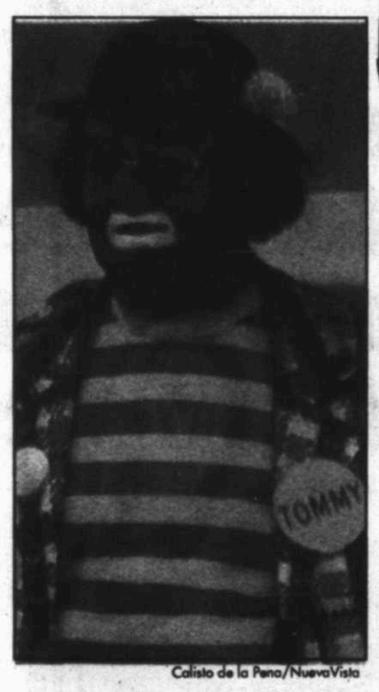
Another new feature this year will be a volleyball tournament, sponsored by the M-Class of Midland College. It will be a 'beach' volleyball tournament, played on sand by four-man teams.

Still another new feature of this year's cookoff will be the 1st Annual Car Show. Hosted by the Magical Minis, the show is expected to offer a wide variety of antique, classic, and customized cars and trucks.

Of course, the Cookoff will feature plenty of returning favorites. "We have more" participants in the Senorita and Nina Hispana than we've ever had," said Ms. Hernandez. "We have 12 and 12, I believe, so it will be bigger and better."

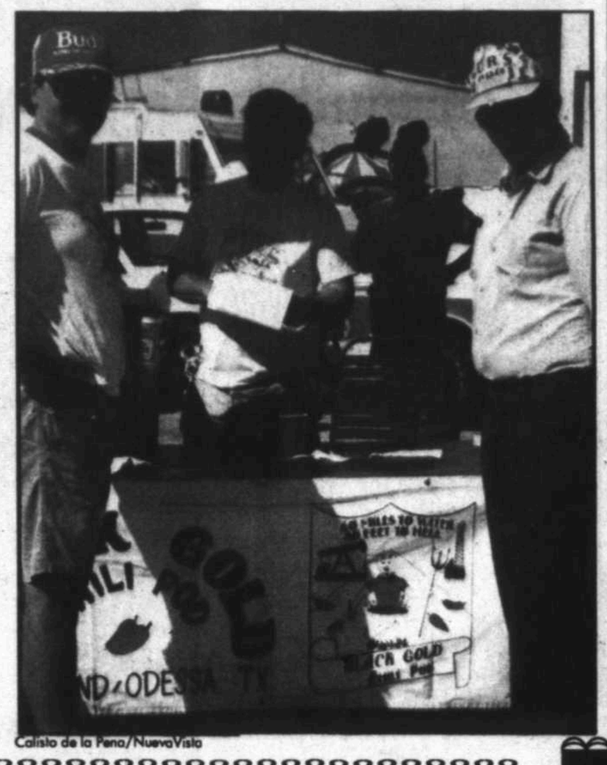
The jalapeno-eating contest also promises to be bigger and better (and hotter!) with semifinals on Saturday, and finals on Sunday. An expanded lineup of musical entertainment throughout the weekend will feature a wide variety of bands and dance groups from throughout the Odessa/Midland area, and from across the American southwest and Mexico. And the competition in the various cooking categories will certainly be as serious as ever as cooks seek the coveted 'painted-pot' trophy for best efforts in cooking or showmanship.

"What I like about the chile people is they bring in their own special culture, their exhibits are just beautiful," said Ms. Hernandez. "And we really want to thank everyone for their support in all the cooking categories, because we get people out there that are of all nationalities, whether they be judges, participants, cookers. The chile people are wonderful, the Black Gold people are the ones who have been helping with the chile portion." The chile portion of the cookoff will be conducted under CASI guidelines and winners will gain points towards the world championship cookoff in Terlingua.



Calisto de la Pena/NuevaVista

Those assisting in the cookoff categories are just part of a large and dedicated group of volunteers who have become part of the Cookoff's tradition of growth and success. "Well, our volunteers alone are going to be about 150, maybe 200," said Ms. Hernandez. In addition there are the cookoff teams, and those who staff the concession, food, arts and crafts booths. "You're talking a good 800 or 900 people."



Calisto de la Pena/NuevaVista

Another tradition developed over the years is community support. In the past, non-profit groups have received proceeds from recycling aluminum cans from the cookoff, groups like San Juan Ranch, the Boys Club, and the Permian Basin Vietnam Veterans' Memorial. This year's group will be the high Sky Children's Ranch. Other groups, such as the Restitution Center have earned support through grounds preparation and maintenance.

All in all, it promises to be a full weekend of entertainment, and the weeks leading up to it have been busy for Ms. Hernandez, her staff, and the many volunteers. But none are looking forward to relaxing anytime soon. In fact, plans and suggestions for next year's Cookoff are already underway.

Nuestra entrevistada de honor Elvia Hernandez nos informo que hace pocos kias fue invitada por el presidente de Mexico, representando La Camara de Comercio Hispana de Midland.

Nos dijo que esta camara de comercio es muy conocida y respetada en esa nacion, y disiendo que ya llevan dos años ganando el premio numero "uno" del estado de Texas, siendo de las camaras de comercio de las mas pequeñas, siendo sus socios de 300.

Subrayo diciendo que la camara de comercio esta compuesta de hispanos pero la menbrecia esta variada, teniendo companias y corporaciones y negocios grandes y pequeños.

Menciona que los logros mas importantes es el edificio donde estamos ubicados, y las becas que hemos logrado para nuestros hijos.

Para finalizar agradese a la comunidad y a la ciudad por el aplollo que han brindado a la camara de comercio ya que por ellos estamos en el lugar que corresponde.

Ms. Hernandez was invited by the president of Mexico to represent the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce. "This Chamber of Commerce is well known and respected in Mexico." For the last 2 years the chamber has been number one in Texas, and being one of the smallest chamber of commerce since they only have 300 members." she said.

Ms. Hernandez underlined that the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce is made up of Hispanics but the membership varies, having companies, corporations, small and big businesses.

She mentioned that the most important achievement is the building where they have their present offices and of course the scholarships to our children.

To finalize, she thanks the community and the city for the support that they have given to the chamber, since it is because of them that we are in the place where we belong.
