Spec. ed director selected

A new special education director has been hired for the Snyder school system, Richard Robert Morley, 42, now of Los Fresnos.

He will oversee special education programs here — centralized at the Humble-Smith campus located adjacent to West Elementary.

Morley currently serves in a similar position with the Los Fresnos-Port Isabel Coop. He has held that post for more than six years.

He joined the Los Fresnos system as an assistant principal in 1978.

His other public school assignments have included positions with the Mercedes ISD from 1974-76; La Feria ISD from 1969-1974; Cold Springs ISD from 1968-1969; and Edinburg ISD from 1967-68.

He holds a master of education degree from Pan American University in Edinburg.

His wife is a school teacher also. They have four children, three school-age and one preschooler.

Morley replaces M.P. Bateman, who resigned at the end of the school year.

Two S&Ls 'square off' over permit

The protest being raised against a new savings and loan moving into Snyder was initiated by a second S&L already here and with plans of its own to expand its current operation.

The protest heard Tuesday in Austin opposed the branch office application of First Western Savings and Loan of Colorado City, which formerly operated as Colorado City Savings and Loan.

And the effort to oppose them was initiated by City Savings Investment Corp. based out of San Angelo, the parent company for Homestate Savings of Snyder.

Backing this effort was a united front of the financial institutions in Snyder, which have agreed to assist with the costs incurred with the protest. This includes the Homestate division of City Savings, First Federal Savings and Loan, Snyder Savings and Loan and the three banks, West Texas State, Snyder National and American State.

First Western seeks to open a branch office here at 4251 College Ave. And while the land transaction for this was being finalized, almost simultaneously land was being purchased by City Savings Homestate Branch for a new office site they now propose to build.

The City Saving's land purchase entails a tract adjacent to 37th St. due east from the current location of American State Bank.

While the five remaining financial institutions in Snyder have sided with City Savings in the protest, it was the San Angelo based corporation and First Western of C-City which squared off Tuesday at the Austin hearing.

City Savings officials employed an Austin-based attorney, George Berry, to argue their case before the Texas Savings and Loan Department in Austin. Part of this opposition included an economic profile prepared to bolster their case.

To support their request, First Federal was represented by the Houston law firm of Bracewell and Patterson in addition to an economist they employed to testify.

Also representing City Savings at the hearing was its president, Wayman Thurman. For First Western, staffers testifying were

Problems with plants prompts tour

The Scurry County extension office will sponsor a plant disease tour Thursday. County Agent Marvin Enser and Dr. Robert Berry, a plant pathologist, will assist homeowners with any plant disease problems.

Berry is stationed with the Texas A&M Extension and Research Center in Lubbock.

County residents who would like to be included on the tour should call the extension agent's office. The first 16 residents contacting the office will be included on the schedule.

Homeowners with disease problems related to ornamental plants, garden plants and turf grasses are encouraged to participate.

To be included on the tour, locals should contact Enser at 573-5422.

By Roy McQueen

The folier on Deep Creek says, "A good lesson in inflation is when the offspring gets a starting job at a salary you once dreamed of."

In the early 1960s, West Texas athletes dominated the state track competition. In Class AAA there were such powerhouses as Snyder, Andrews and Graham.

In 1960, two Andrews relay teams set national records. About that same time a senior from Lamesa, Gene Westmoreland, set the state record for the half mile which still stands. Westmoreland later coached in the Snyder school system.

The Snyder High cinder coach during that era was James (Dutch) Stahley, now junior high principal. John Cooley, who just last week resigned as Texas Tech athletic director, was head football coach.

Snyder had one of the best track meets in the state, and fans would literally pack the stands to watch the high school talent.

Track coach at Andrews during these years was Max Goldsmith. Both Goldsmith and Stahley should have retired their athletic muscles back when Allan Shivers was governor.

Stahley, as junior high principal, is still said to swing a pretty mean paddle which helps keep his golf swing in tune.

Goldsmith is no longer coaching track–he's running and entered the Texas Masters meet last weekend in Andrews. Can you imagine some of those guys–who can remember those laps around the walls of Jericho–running 1,500 meters?

Goldsmith, now 62 and living in Lewisville, won the 100 meters in a time of 13.26 and the 200 meters with a clocking of 27.4.

Although we certainly see and understand the board's concern, we hope the chamber will continue with plans for Snyder's traditional Fourth of July.

The chamber has been seeking liability coverage for the event–and there seems to be a nationwide trend among underwriters not to write such coverage.

Because of exposure, the chamber will make a decision Wednesday regarding the chamber's continued sponsorship of July 4th activities.

Still we would urge the chamber to forge ahead, and we urge city and county officials to join in the sponsorship. Even though the exposure is real–we can't let fear keep us from moving forward.

Confiscated vehicle use due proposal

A request will be considered Monday for use of a vehicle recently confiscated by district court officials in connection with drug-related charges here.

Scurry County commissioners will hear Juvenile Probation Officer Larry Thompson's request for use of the vehicle in connection with his office.

The request will come during the court's regular session Monday, due to begin at 10 a.m.

To date, 132nd District Court officials have claimed two such vehicles, part of provisions under the Controlled Substances Act which allows the state to confiscate "any and all properties used in or acquired through the proceeds from drug use or sale."

At Monday's meeting, Coltrain Manager Phil Bagland is scheduled to appear also.

Q. — Why all the big hoopla in Abilene over the arrival of the B-1B bomber?

A. — From an economic standpoint, the addition of the B-1B at Dyess AFB is projected to add an additional $121.1 million into the Abilene economy over the next three years. This includes an additional 670 military and 44 civilian employees at the base.

In Brief

Shortage

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gasoline may be in short supply in some areas of the country during peak driving periods this summer and next, the American Petroleum Institute predicts.

Spot shortages may arise as refiners adjust to new Environmental Protection Agency rules requiring a 45 percent cut in the lead concentration of leaded gasoline beginning July 1 and a 91 percent cut effective Jan. 1, the institute said Friday.

Temporary shortages may occur in areas removed from major pipeline transportation routes and refineries.

Local

2 fire runs

Units of the Snyder fire department answered two alarms Friday afternoon — neither resulting in serious property damage or injury.

At 2:55 p.m., firemen were called to the G&G Grocery Store at the intersection of College and Hullman Ave.

Upon arrival, it was discovered the smoke was coming from a freezer unit in the store.

Firemen extinguished also a grass fire 13 miles north of town on the Polar Rd. at 4:55 p.m.

Mlcak 'Day'

Ed Mlcak, the area production superintendent for SACROC who has been associated with the Scurry County oilpatch since the boom of the late 1940s, will be honored with a reception Tuesday at Snyder City Hall.

Tuesday has been declared "Ed Mlcak Day" here in honor of his retirement. The reception will be from 4 until 5 p.m.

He was honored also at the Snyder Chamber of Commerce banquet March 21 as he was chosen this year's recipient of the McLaughlin Award, which recognizes contributions to the county's oil industry.

Display's end

Tuesday will be the final day for viewing the Texas watercolor Society's traveling exhibit in the Scurry County Museum.

The 31 paintings were winners in the Watercolor Society's 36th annual exhibition and have been on display in the museum since June 9.

The museum is open each weekday and Sunday.

Teen charged in Ft. Worth slaying

FORT WORTH (AP) — A 19-year-old man has been charged in the Jan. 9 slaying of Lisa Griffin, 20, one of nine women killed in or missing from Fort Worth over the past nine months.

Michael Wayne Goodin, 19, of Fort Worth was in jail Friday night in lieu of $100,000 bond, Tarrant County Sheriff Don Carpenter said.

Carpenter said Goodin was arrested Wednesday. Goodin led investigators to the site of the killing and made a statement to investigators, the sheriff said.

Goodin is not considered a suspect in any of the other slayings, authorities said.

Miss Griffin was last seen by her mother, Lavonne Griffin, asleep in her bedroom Jan. 9. Her body was found that evening, clad in a violet-colored jogging suit and wearing an ivory ring, near railroad tracks in far southwest Tarrant County.

She had been shot once in the head with a .22-caliber weapon.

Goodin lives in a 148-unit apartment complex near where the victim's car was found the day after she was slain, officials said. But the sheriff would not say what first led investigators to Goodin.

"He knew her. That's all I can say right now," Carpenter said

By Tuesday, authorities expect to have the weapon believed used in the slaying, Carpenter said.

A .22-caliber derringer was tracked to six different owners before it was traced to the present owner, an elderly Houston woman who got it from her daughter for protection, authorities said.

Goodin is the second person who has been charged with killing Miss Griffin. The first was a 25-year-old Fort Worth man whom authorities arrested after matching a fingerprint from the victim's car. However, charges against the other man were dismissed after a further check showed that the fingerprints were not his.

The first person charged has filed a $25 million federal lawsuit against Carpenter, his investigators, two probation officers and the county.

The United States, the Soviet Union and 60 other countries in 1967 signed a treaty limiting military activity in outer space.

SUE SMYLIE

Sue Smylie earns scholarship

Sue Smylie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Smylie, of Snyder, is the recipient of a $1,250 Houston Endowment Scholarship awarded through the Texas Interscholastic League Foundation.

Smylie received the scholarship because of her participation in UIL competition, SAT scores, grades and high school activities.

The 1985 graduate of Snyder High School was active in choir, drama, state winning one-act play, French Club, and the National Honor Society.

Smylie will attend the University of Texas at Arlington this fall.

Aerobics classes are offered here

Additional sessions of aquarobics and high and low level aerobics will get underway at Western Texas College on July 8. All classes are open to men and women.

The new aquarobics classes will meet from 5-6 p.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from July 8-August 16. Fees will be $30 per person.

High level aerobics classes will meet from 6-7:30 p.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from July 8-August 16. Fees for this course are $40 per person.

Low level aerobics classes are scheduled from 7:30-8:30 p.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, also from July 8-August 16. Fees are $30 per person.

Patrice McKinney, physical education instructor at WTC, will direct all the classes.

To enroll in any of the courses call 573-8511, ext. 240.

Experts, Nazi hunters accept Mengele report

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Nazi hunters and other experts on Josef Mengele said they accept the conclusion of an international group of specialists that a body unearthed in Brazil is that of the Nazi death camp doctor.

On Friday, a team of American, West German and Brazilian scientists unanimously declared that the body dug up June 6 was that of Mengele, the "Angel of Death" who was blamed for the deaths of 400,000 people and for cruel medical experiments conducted at Auschwitz concentration camp in Poland.

"It's him. There's no way it's not him," Dr. Lowell Levine, a dental expert from the New York State Police Department, said at a news conference.

Levine read a report prepared by forensic experts representing the U.S. Justice Department and the Los Angeles-based Simon Wiesenthal Center for Holocaust Studies.

Romeu Tuma, the federal police chief in Sao Paulo, said the final report on the case would be finished by next week and "we're going to release the results of the police investigation and also the results of the findings of the medical experts. Anybody who wants to keep on investigating can go ahead — no problem."

Dr. Daniel Munoz, a Brazilian member of the team, said it found many similarities between the remains and known traits of Mengele. He cited height, age, race, hair, dental work, an abnormality on the pelvic bone and a perfect match between the body's skull and photographs of Mengele.

"With the experts of the caliber we have here, you have to accept the conclusion," said Menachem Russek, the top Nazi expert on the Israeli police force, who helped in the investigation. "Maybe I'm a little disappointed that he was not brought to trial."

Nazi hunter Simon Weisenthal in Vienna, Austria, told a San Francisco radio station: "We have no choice but to accept the findings of the experts."

A Wiesenthal Center official in Los Angeles, Rabbi Marvin Hier, said the center was "99 percent" satisfied the body is Mengele's.

"The world missed an opportunity to get that man in a courtroom ... But he did have a punishment," Hier added. "He was forced to live a lonely existence, nearly suicidal, on the sideline of history and witness the renaissance and rejuvenation of the Jewish people around the world."

The Israeli Embassy in Brasilia said its government would make its own examination and issue a separate report.

U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese III said in Washington that American law enforcement officials "concur in the conclusion" of the report.

The Frankfurt prosecutor's office in West Germany issued a statement saying the forensic report increases "the probability that Josef Mengele lived in Brazil and died there on Feb. 7, 1979."

It said a conclusive evaluation will be possible only after the prosecutor receives the full report in about two weeks.

Police believe Mengele died while swimming at Bertioga beach, about 47 miles from Sao Paulo.

Witnesses say Mengele was buried the next day under the name Wolfgang Gerhard in the town of Embu, 17 miles from Sao Paulo.

Wolfram and Liselotte Bossert, an Austrian couple, and Hungarian immigrant Gitta Stammer told police they harbored Mengele in Brazil from 1981 until his death.

Parents win okay to seek abortion

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — The parents of a brain-diseased woman they say was raped while strapped in a hospital bed are seeking a doctor for an abortion after a judge ruled that the pregnancy "could probably result in death."

Tom and Helen Stegmoyer of Fountain Valley on Friday won the right to seek the abortion for their 35-year-old daughter, a woman doctors say is incapable of speaking or knowing what is happening to her.

"If the condition is left untreated, it could probably result in death," County Superior Court Judge Henry T. Moore said of the pregnancy.

Mrs. Stegmoyer said Friday that she would seek the abortion "as soon as possible" and her attorney, Fred De Lisio, added, "Hopefully, it will be done sometime over the weekend."

Most doctors and clinics do not perform abortions when fetuses are older than 20 weeks. The pregnancy, nearly 20 weeks old, was discovered Monday.

The woman had been confined at Mirada Hills Convalescent and Rehabilitation Hospital in La Mirada, about 20 miles southeast of downtown Los Angeles.

Los Angeles County sheriff's Sgt. Douglas Dickinson and state Health Department spokesman Marvin Brandon said the incident is under investigation. They declined to elaborate.

Robert Gerst, an attorney representing the La Mirada facility, said the woman could have become pregnant elsewhere.

"She had left the facility occasionally for medical treatment, but there's no way of knowing at this time whether the act took place outside the facility," Gerst said.

De Lisio said, "It's more likely than not she was at that facility. If she was taken out for some reason, we're unaware of that."

The pregnancy was discovered Monday night when the woman was moved to Norwalk Community Hospital, where she remains, for X-rays.

The woman, once married, healthy and active, has an 11-year-old son.

She is now "weak and weighs less than 80 pounds," according to an affidavit filed Thursday by her attending physician, Dr. Teodora Bonnam.

Her stepfather, Tom Stegmoyer, said he opposes abortion but that his stepdaughter's case is an agonizing exception.

"When it comes to rape — this is one time I'll say yes," he said.

"My daughter is pregnant, but it's the wrong kind of pregnant," Mrs. Stegmoyer said.

There are at least three North Poles besides the real one — in Alaska, Colorado, and New York.

Golden K donates sewing machine

The Golden K Kiwanis Club presented the Senior Citizens Center a new Bernina sewing machine Tuesday during the regular club meeting in the center's conference room.

Blanche Chisum, owner of Blanche's Bernina Sewing Center, told club members about some of the machine's capabilities. The machine will be used to piece quilt tops for the center's May Day auction and also for other crafts activities in the center. Persons who will be using the machine will receive 12 hours of individual instruction at the Sewing Center.

With the purchase of the sewing machine, the Gold K organization has now spent in excess of $6,000 in gifts for the Senior Center. Previous gifts have included two freezers, trees for the area west of the center, table cloths for special occasions, a pool table and a van.

The club, which currently has 24 members, raises money by various activities for support of the center and other local projects. Men 60 years of age and older are invited to join the club.

"This new sewing machine will be a big help for our volunteers here in the Center," Mrs. Shaw said. "We thank the Golden K for their generous gift and for all their help in the past. We know that without the support of the community we could not operate the kind of center we have."

First freshman seminar slated

The first of three Freshman Success Seminars scheduled by Western Texas College this summer will be held on Thursday in the Student Center.

All students entering WTC as full-time freshmen for the first time in the 1985 fall semester are urged to attend either the program on Thursday or subsequent seminars on July 18 and August 8.

During the seminars, placement tests will be administered for those who do not have ACT or SAT scores on file at WTC. There will be a $5 charge for this test, the only cost of the seminar.

Students attending can preregister for the fall semester and will be able to talk to advisers about the selection of classes and scheduling.

Thursday's program will begin at 9 a.m. in the Student Center and will conclude about 4 p.m.

Final Noah game slated

The United Girls Softball Association Tournament for Division I, 7-9 year-olds, continues in Snyder at the Girls Softball Field.

The championship game will be played at 8 p.m. Saturday night.

There is no admission charge but proceeds from the concession stand and donations will be given to the Noah Project, a shelter for battered spouses and their children.

Valerie Lowrance...

Texan wins Junior Miss title

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Valerie Lowrance, a 17-year-old Texan who plans to become a lawyer, has won a $25,000 college scholarship and the 1985 America's Junior Miss title.

"I felt a shock all over my body," the tearful blond, blue-eyed Miss Lowrance, of Seguin, said after being crowned Friday night.

"All I could think about was my best friend getting to watch me on TV and calling her friends to tell them I won," she said.

The nationally televised program ended with Amber Kvanli of Willmar, Minn., crowning her successor.

Miss Lowrance performed a song and dance routine to the tune of "New York, New York" as she and four other finalists competed one last time in the creative and performing arts category.

During the question and answer segment, Miss Lowrance was asked how the United States should handle the illegal alien problem along her state's border with Mexico.

"Though it is a problem, we shouldn't make the rules stricter. To change the policy would be to change the ideals of our forefathers who founded this country," she said.

Earlier Friday night, the 5-foot-7 Miss Lowrance also placed first in the final competition for the physical fitnesss award.

Lona Williams, 17, of Rosemount, Minn., received a $10,000 scholarship as the pageant's first runner-up. Anna Whitesides, 17, of Newberry, S.C., was second runner-up and received a $7,000 scholarship.

Two other finalists, who each received $5,000 scholarships, were Deidra Patterson, 17, of Biloxi Miss., and Terri Ivens, 18, of Reno, Nevada.

Miss Ivens, who sang a song she composed called "Her Tribute to America," won the final creative and performing arts competition Friday night.

Three girls won $5,000 scholarships Thursday night for earlier preliminary victories. They were Alabama's Christa Carns, 17, of Mountain Brook; Susan Wade, 17, of Kinston, N. C., and Utah's Mei Lin Kwan-Gett, 18, of Salt Lake City.

Contestants from every state, the District of Columbia, and Puerto Rico took part in the pageant.

The competed in poise and appearance, talent, spirit, scholastic achievement and physical fitness for a share of $100,000 in scholarships and prizes.

Other scholarships and prizes in preliminary events were awarded to 17 contestants.

Judges were attorney Corlis Chang, Hawaii's Junior Miss in 1975; Dr. Carol Williams Lyons of Rochester, Minn., Junior Miss Pennsylvania 1972; Belva Wilson, Kansas' Junior Miss in 1980, now teaching at Stanford University; Barbara Condon, Illinois' Junior Miss in 1972, a teacher at the University of Illinois in Chicago; and engineer Linda Rutledge, the national Junior Miss in 1973 from Kansas.

State department to evaluate security

WASHINGTON (AP) — Questions are being raised about how a young man toting a collapsible rifle and a knife was able to evade State Department security and kill his mother and himself in a flurry of gunfire near the heavily guarded offices of Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

The gunman, dressed in a yellow T-shirt and military-style camouflage trousers, apparently breached the department's strict security measures, including metal detectors at public entrances to the building, and went to the same floor where Shultz's suite is.

The bizarre shooting took place about noon Friday while Shultz worked in his offices 100 feet down the hall.

The gunman entered the C Street entrance carrying a canvas gym bag, took the elevator to the seventh floor and assembled the rifle in a bathroom, police sources said. Witnesses called security when they saw him leave the bathroom and walk towards his mother's office, gun in hand. Shultz's office was sealed off immediately.

Police sources said he fired several shots at his mother, hitting her in the head and body, before turning the weapon on himself. Listed dead at the scene were Edward Steven Doster, 20, of Alexandria, Va., and Carole Doster, 44, also of Alexandria. No one else was injured.

Ironically, Mrs. Doster, who was a secretary in the office of counselor Edward Derwinski, thought she was safe from her son, who had been arrested previously after she claimed he beat her.

Mrs. Doster apparently had asked authorities to revoke a pass that identified her son as her dependent and allowed him to enter the State Department without being searched or having to walk through a metal detecor, as is required of most visitors.

State Department spokesman Sondra McCarty said that on June 19 the office responsible for building passes received a request dated May 30 from Mrs. Doster, asking the department to revoke her son's pass.

"Unfortunately the incident occurred before instructions could be forwarded to the Federal Protective Service guards," Ms. McCarty said, adding that an investigation of that procedure was underway.

Although no one would confirm that Doster entered the building with a dependents' pass, officials acknowledged that was the most likely possibility.

Mrs. Doster recently spent two weeks in a women's shelter home because of his abuse, according to Ellen Gilchrist, the shelter's program coordinator. But Mrs. Doster left the shelter because she felt her apartment building had been secured enough so that she would be "relatively safe" from her son.

"My understanding is that she had contacted security, had given them a picture of her son, had the locks changed on her apartment, gotten an unlisted telephone number and been reassured that he would not be able to get into the building," Ms. Gilchrist said.

EARN AWARDS–Bradley Hart, son of Patsy Hart, has earned several first place awards with his fire prevention poster. He placed first locally last October. He placed first at the Mid-West Texas District Firemen's and Fire Marshals Association meeting in April. He also placed first at the 109th annual State Firemen and Fire Marshals Convention held in Waco in April. He placed first out of approximately 10 finalists and his poster will be on display at the state Firemen and Fire Marshal's office in Austin. Cindy Wood, daughter of Kenny and Althea Wood, served as state sweetheart of the state Ladies Auxiliary this year at the Waco convention. (Family Photo)

Astronauts hoping to retrieve satellite

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — After an all-night 17,400-mph chase, Discovery's astronauts today tracked down and captured a science satellite that has been studying mysterious black holes and star clusters.

"We've got Spartan on the hook," commander Dan Brandenstein reported after astronaut Shannon Lucid snared the Spartan satellite with the shuttle's 50-foot mechanical arm and swung it into the cargo bay. She operated the arm from inside the cabin.

Mrs. Lucid had released the one-ton package into its own orbit on Thursday so it could make observations free of interference from the motion of the spaceship, its radio signals and magnetic field. It will be returned to Earth so scientists can analyze its findings.

After Spartan was launched, it drifted as intended more than 100 miles away from the astronauts. On Friday, Brandenstein and pilot John Creighton began a series of gap-closing maneuvers intended to bring the two craft back together.

"We spotted Spartan at 36 nautical miles," Brandenstein reported early today, about 4½ hours before the retrieval.

Spartan has been aiming X-ray cameras at a suspected black hole at the core of our Milky Way galaxy and at a cluster of galaxies in the constellation Perseus.

Astronomers believe black holes are formed when a massive star or galaxy exhausts its nuclear fuel and suddenly collapses. The resulting gravitational field is so strong that it sucks in nearby stars and cosmic dust and gas, and not even light can escape.

For several years, researchers have seen evidence of a possible black hole at the Milky Way center and some believe there may be one at the core of every galaxy.

The Perseus study was expected to shed some light on how galaxy clusters are formed.

In 1938, the Honeymoon Bridge over the Niagara River crashed into the gorge after being damaged by an ice jam.

Group takes credit for cafe massacre

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — An urban guerrilla group has claimed responsibility for attacking two cafes and killing 13 people, including six Americans. The rebels said they assaulted "places where there were American advisers and their allies."

The Mardoqueo Cruz Urban Guerrilla Commandos, one of several groups fighting the U.S.-supported government of President Jose Napoleon Duarte, issued a statement Friday saying it was responsible for the shooting deaths two days earlier.

"The fire of our revolutionary rifles was concentrated only on the places where there were American advisers and their allies," the statement said.

It was written on the letterhead of the Central American Revolutionary Workers' Party, to which guerrilla leader Mardoqueo Cruz belonged before being killed in a 1983 air raid.

The party is one of five rebel organizations in the umbrella Farabundo Marti Liberation Front.

The Front's official voice, Radio Venceremos, read the Mardoqueo Cruz statement on the air Friday and sent "revolutionary greetings" to the urban group. The gesture appeared to lend general rebel sanction to the attack.

Radio Venceremos warned in a broadcast that "there will not be a place where the invading Yankees ... can eat peacefully" as long as the civil war continues.

"The imperialists should understand very clearly that the greater their intervention in El Salvador, the greater will be the number of North American Marines killed in our territory," Radio Venceremos said.

Flag-draped caskets with the bodies of the four Marines were put on a U.S. Air Force plane Friday for the trip back to the United States.

"You have served your country well. We are proud of you," Robert E. Lamb, an assistant secretary of state, said at an airport ceremony. He said the war in El Salvador was "a war we cannot lose."

The Marines, who were assigned to help guard the embassy here, were identified at the Pentagon as Sgt. Thomas T. Handwork, 24, of Beavercreek, Ohio; Sgt. Bobby J. Dickson, 27, of Tuscaloosa, Ala.; Cpl. Gregory H. Webber, 22, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and Cpl. Patrick R. Kwiatkowski, 20, of Wausau, Wis.

Two employees of Wang Laboratories, a Massachusetts-based computer company, also were killed. They were identified as 48-year-old George Viney of Miami and 47-year-old Robert Alvidrez of Lexington, Mass.

Two Guatemalans, a Chilean and four Salvadorans also were killed. At least 15 people were wounded.

Motorcycle safety sessions offered

Motorcycle safety will be the subject of a Continuing Education course scheduled at Western Texas College in classes meeting on July 13 and July 20.

Classes will meet from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. both Saturdays with N. J. Lucas as instructor.

Students in this course must be 15 years of age or older and must have completed the 32-hour driver education course or currently be enrolled in a DE class. The course is required for 15-17 year olds prior to licensing as motorcycle operators.

Mototcycles and safety helments will be provided for students attending the class, which is approved by the Texas Department of Public Safety. There will be both classroom and on-cycle instruction.

Fees for the course are $50 per person.

To pre-register call 573-8511, ext. 240.

Drama workshop scheduled here

A drama workshop for girls from 9-12 years of age has been scheduled by the Continuing Education department of Western Texas College from July 22-25.

Classes are to meet from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. each day. Fees will be $30 per person and each student is to bring a sack lunch for the noon meal.

Instructor for the course will be Kathy Norris, a 1984 graduate of Snyder High School now attending Tarleton State University. She is majoring in drama at TSU and during the past school year appeared in "The Matchmaker," "My Three Angels," and "Carnival."

As a student at Snyder High School, she was a recipient of a Rockefeller Arts and Education Award and was named to the All State one act play roster for her role in "The Crucible."

She worked in a drama workshop offered at WTC last summer.

Students in the workshop will be learning improvisation, short scene work, body movement, voice control, and overcoming inhibitions.

Girls planning to attend the workshop are to pre-register by calling the Continuing Education office at 573-8511, ext. 240. The office is open Monday through Friday.

Family plans triple weddings

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — As city clerk of the honeymoon capital, Elsie Paradise is no stranger to issuing marriage licenses.

And this summer, she's no stranger to many of the people getting them — she's their mom.

Daughter Lorraine, 32, married June 8. Joan, 28, weds in July. And Ann, 24, walks down the aisle in August.

"It's triple the happiness and you get it all over at once," said Mrs. Paradise.

Even after all those weddings, there's no rest for the family.

Son John, 31, made his announcement this week: He's getting married in the fall.

Muse merger eyed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Southwest Airlines may decide next week whether it will withdraw from its proposed merger with financially troubled Muse Air, a Southwest Airlines spokesman said.

Earlier this week, Southwest's Washington attorney Paul Seligson said the airline might consider withdrawing from the merger if the Department of Transportation did not approve the deal by the end of business Friday. Southwest told DOT of the unofficial deadline a week ago, he said.

At 4:55 p.m. EDT, five minutes before closing, DOT spokesman Ted Lopatkiewicz said there would be no action on the merger.

Seligson said earlier this week that an objection filed by Continental Airlines regarding the effect of the merger on competition had delayed DOT's approval. Continental has since withdrawn its objection.

"We are going to wait and see what happens at the close of business today and then consider what to do," Seligson said. "Nothing has changed from what we told DOT last week."

Seligson said he did not expect any action by Southwest executives before Monday.

Earlier this week, he had said that Southwest would consider a number of possibilities if the merger were not approved by DOT this week, including withdrawing from the merger, filing a lawsuit against DOT, or simply adopting a wait-and-see attitude for a few more days.

Southwest is getting nervous about the delay because Muse must pay $7.1 million to creditors by the end of the month. Seligson said Southwest's officers decided not to put any more money into the ailing Muse in the meantime.

Southwest has operated profitably out of Dallas Love Field and had a virtual lock on use of the in-town airport until Muse began trying to compete regionally four years ago.

By governor...

New prison chief hand-picked

HOUSTON (AP) — The Texas prison board was apparently on the verge of appointing attorney Steve Martin as the new prison director before Gov. Mark White intervened to ensure that Lane McCotter got the job, the Houston Post reported.

After learning last week that Raymond Procunier was resigning as Texas Department of Corrections director, most board members wanted to promote Martin, the general counsel for the Texas Department of Corrections, the Post said Friday, quoting unnamed sources.

White said he expressed his opinion to members of the Texas Board of Corrections but did not know if he changed anyone's mind. "I didn't take any polls or anything," White said.

But sources told the Post that the governor had a much stronger role.

Martin received a firm offer and "had his speech ready" when the board voted 8-0 Monday afternoon for McCotter, the sources told the newspaper.

Over the weekend, McCotter had only two votes, Deralyn Davis and Tom McDade, the sources said.

White met Monday morning in Austin with four board members he appointed in February — Al Hughes, James Parsons, Dennis Hendrix and Robert Lane. A few hours later in a closed session in Huntsville, Martin had only two strong supporters, Hughes and board Chairman Bob Gunn.

Then in open session, the board voted unanimously for McCotter, TDC deputy director for operations.

Martin, Gunn and Procunier refused to comment on the matter.

Parsons, a Palestine attorney appointed by White to the prison board in March, told The Dallas Morning News that the governor "expressed his support" for McCotter. "But he never told us who to vote for."

Parsons declined to say if he initially supported Martin.

"He said he would trust us to make the right decision and go along with whomever we chose," Parsons added.

Hughes said he asked for the meeting with White to get his views and that the governor's opinion. "He's a McCotter man," said Hughes, adding that the governor did not tell board members how to vote.

McCotter, a much-decorated U.S. Army colonel, headed the U.S. Army Disciplinary Barracks for three years before coming to Texas as the TDC's No. 2 man in May 1984.

The governor had wanted McCotter to be director when the prison board hired Procunier last year to clean up the troubled TDC, the nation's second largest prison system.

"Security has been McCotter's strong suit. That fits in with what we feel needs to be addressed," Parsons said.

McCotter said he asked Martin to leave the TDC by Friday evening.

Lucas joins 209 on death row

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Henry Lee Lucas, a widely traveled convict who visited a dozen states and scores of crime scenes in the past two years to confess to hundreds of murders, has made what could be his last trip.

The one-eyed drifter was taken from his Williamson County jail cell in Georgetown shortly after 9:30 a.m. Friday and driven over about 150 miles of Texas back roads to Huntsville, where he will await execution for the 1979 slaying of an unidentified woman hitchhiker.

The woman's nude body was found beside Interstate 35 near Georgetown.

Lucas arrived at the state prison's diagnostic unit at 12:30 p.m. and was moved later in the day to the Ellis unit, where Death Row is located.

"He's just another Death Row convict. He's No. 210 right now," Texas Department of Corrections spokesman Phil Guthrie said.

The authenticity of Lucas' confessions to hundreds of crimes across the nation have come under question lately.

Most of Lucas' confessions came from the Williamson County Jail. Lucas was taken last April 12 to Waco to testify before a McLennan County grand jury that was looking into his confessions to two slayings there.

Once he was out of Georgetown, Lucas recanted his confessions and said investigators "fed" him the details he knew about the killings.

Lucas was returned to Georgetown from Waco in mid-June, and members of a special Henry Lee Lucas task force expressed an interest in questioning him further.

Lucas' attorney, however, cut off further examinations, rendering the task force impotent.

The Dallas Times Herald said it obtained an official report in which the officer who conducted most of the preliminary interrogations for out-of-state police agencies acknowledged that he occasionally told Lucas the race and sex of his supposed victims "to refresh Lucas' memory."

In the report, the officer said he often showed him photographs of crime scenes before he was invited to convess to murders across the country, the newspaper said.

The U.S. Marines fought their first battle March 2, 1776, and captured a British fort in the Bahamas during the Revolutionary War.

TWA hijacking...

Shiites refuse to free two ailing Americans

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A Shiite Moslem official said today that two ailing American hostages from a hijacked TWA plane would not be released because they were in good condition.

Meanwhile, a Christian-run radio made several runs over Beirut today, and that a U.S. aircraft carrier moved closer to the Lebanese coast.

Forty Americans, passengers and crew of a hijacked TWA Boeing 727, are being held hostage in Beirut by Shiite Moslems who want to exchange them for about 750 prisoners being held in Israeli jails.

U.S. officials in the Lebanese capital could not confirm the plane and ship movements. In Washington, Lt. Cmdr. Charles Smith, a Pentagon spokesman, said he had no information on the report. But Israel Radio, in Tel Aviv, also said that planes flying over Beirut today were jets from the U.S. carrier.

Akef Haidar, a political chief of the Shiite Moslem militia, Amal, insisted that it was ready "to send them (the sick men) home if we feel they're in danger. But now they're quite all right."

He identified the men as Jimmy Dell Palmer, 48, of Little Rock, Ark., and Simon Grossmayer, 57, of Algonquin, Ill.

Amal officials had identified the sick men as Palmer and Claude Whitmoyer of Severn, Md, when they said Friday they were negotiating to release the pair. Haidar said there was confusion over the name, but that it "is definitely Grossmayer."

Haidar said: "Palmer has heart trouble. He was taken to the American University of Beirut for checkups yesterday and returned back to the hijackers. He is well, quite well."

Haidar said that Palmer had received medicine from his family in the United States and was taking it.

Palmer suffers from high blood pressure and a heart condition, according to his family.

Grossmayer's family had reported he only had one lung and could be in danger.

"He has been living with one lung for a long time," said Haidar. "A doctor examined him. He did not need a hospital. He is fine."

The hijacked Boeing 727, with the three hostage crew members still inside, moved a few yards this morning for refueling after a hijacker said the plane needed fuel for the air conditioning system.

The Voice of Lebanon radio reported that a "squadron" of U.S. F-14 Tomcats criss-crossed the sky over Beirut on reconnaissance flights just before daybreak. It said the air activity came after a U.S. aircraft carrier moved to within five miles of the Lebanese coast.

A military source who spoke on condition he not be identified confirmed planes had flown over Beirut but would not say if they were American or Israeli. Israeli jets frequently fly over Lebanon on surveillance missions, but Israel denied any connection with the planes that flew over Beirut today.

The military source said an aircraft carrier moved closer to Beirut on Friday night, but added, "It still is outside territorial waters."

Mark Foulon, a spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Beirut, said he could not provide information on the radio report because it was a Defense Department matter.

Neither the radio nor the military sources named the carrier that reportedly approached Lebanese shores, but Pentagon sources in Washington have said the USS Nimitz and several other vessels have sailed for the eastern Mediterranean.

Hijackers commandeered the TWA Athens-to-Rome flight June 14 with 153 passengers and crew, mostly Americans. They released most of the hostages in Algiers and Beirut, but killed U.S. Navy Petty Officer Robert Dean Stethem of Waldorf, Md.

Thirty-seven of the Americans have been spread out throughout Shiite neighborhoods of Beirut to frustrate any rescue attempt.

U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz assured Israel on Friday that the Reagan administration will not ask it to yield to the hijackers' demands.

In Jerusalem, Peres praised U.S. leaders for their "determined stand." U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar told a news conference in New York he had given the United States "a series of ideas" for solving the hostage crisis, adding that American officials were considering the ideas. He did not elaborate.

Hijackers get 'room service'

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The hijackers of a TWA jet that has been parked on the tarmac at Beirut airport for almost a week call the control tower every morning for food and newspapers, just like hotel guests ordering room service, airport officials say.

Their demands, like those of hotel guests, often are unusual. So is the food sent in for the gunmen and the three American crewmen aboard the Boeing 727.

"What's for lunch?" one of the hijackers of TWA Flight 847 radioed the tower one day.

"Cheese and jam sandwiches," the tower replied in a conversation monitored by reporters.

"Oh no," the hijacker groaned. "No more cheese and jam sandwiches. We want meat, something with meat."

In went 80 portions of chicken and rice, with 80 salads on the side and 80 coconut cakes.

Everyone knows there aren't 80 people aboard the plane — just the three-man cockpit crew and a half-dozen gunmen. But, as in all hostage dramas, everyone plays a bizarre game of bluff and double-bluff.

Despite the hijackers' grumbles, cheese and jam sandwiches still are their staple diet, with the occasional chicken or other meat thrown in to keep them happy.

The only development is the hijackers now have to make the sandwiches themselves. On Friday, Middle East Airlines sent in 80 small jars of jam, 80 small butter packs and the same number of bread rolls.

Of the original 153 passengers held hostage, all but about 40 of them have been freed, and they are being held captive in Shiite Moslem hideouts. But even after the plane was virtually empty, the hijackers kept up their orders for large quantities of food.

President Reagan meets with families of hostages

WASHINGTON (AP) - For the second time this week, President Reagan is expressing the sadness of a nation mourning its dead from a wave of terrorism abroad.

The president, who met in Dallas on Friday with the families of three of the 40 American hostages being held in Beirut, was to speak at a ceremony at Andrews Air Force Base, Md., today to honor four slain Marines whose bodies were being brought home from El Salvador.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan would interrupt his weekend at the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md., to fly to the Air Force base by helicopter for the ceremony for Marine Sgt. Thomas T. Handwork, 24, of Boardman, Ohio; Cpl. Gregory H. Webber, 22, of Cincinnati; Sgt. Bobby J. Dickson, 27, of Tuscaloosa, Ala.; and Cpl. Patrick R. Kwiatkowski, 20, of Wausau, Wis.

International terrorism also cut into the president's stay at Camp David last weekend. He flew home early after Moslem extremists who had seized a Trans World Airlines plane returned unexpectedly to Beirut, where they had already killed one of the passengers.

The body of that victim, Robert Dean Stethem, a 23-year-old Navy underwater steelworker from Waldorf, Md., was flown home to Andrews on Tuesday. Reagan telephoned his condolences to Stethem's family and declared in his news conference that night that the young sailor's death underscored that the United States is "a nation being attacked by international terrorists.'

The next night, gunmen killed 13 people outside a row of restaurants in San Salvador, including the four off-duty Marines and two American businessmen George Viney, 48, of Miami, and Robert Alvidrez, 47, of Lexington, Mass.

Reagan's meeting with hostage families in Dallas was held at Reunion Arena, where the president addressed the annual convention of Lions Club International.

"He just reassured us that he was doing all he could do at his end of it," said Roger Little, a brother-in-law of hostage Allen Conwell.

Conwell's mother, Lois, said Reagan spoke reassuringly but seemed frustrated. "Naturally, he's been working very, very hard on this problem, and he seemed a little tired," she said.

"The families were very supportive of the way the president is approaching the matter," Speakes told reporters later.

In his speech, Reagan lumped the Mideast hijacking and the El Salvador shootings with Wednesday's airport bombing in Frankfurt, West Germany, and declared: "We consider these murders, hijackings and abductions an attack on all Western civilization by uncivilized barbarians."

"We will continue to act with appropriate restraint," he said. "But let no one doubt our resolve."

Secretary of State George P. Shultz, meanwhile, assured Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres that the United States will make no concessions to the Shiite Muslims holding the U.S. hostages in Beirut — and the Reagan administration would not ask other countries to yield to the terrorists' demands either.

The hijackers are demanding the release of some 760 Shiites the Israelis detained in southern Lebanon during the Israeli occupation of that country. More than 1,000 others had been set free before the June 14 hijacking of the TWA airliner.

A&M gets $8 million

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — About $8 million in stocks and securities have been given to Texas A&M Development Foundation — the largest such gift the university has received, the school president said Friday.

The donations come from the dissolution of the Ella C. McFadden Charitable Trust in Fort Worth, said President Frank E. Vandiver.

Vandiver said McFadden trustees have indicated that portions of the fund are to be used to continue support for scholarships and other programs previously initiated by the trust with the remainder being unrestricted.

During the past decade, the trust has provided financial support totaling about $4 million. That amount coupled with the gift announced Friday makes the McFadden charitable trust the source of the largest donation in the university's 109-year history.

Texas, Michigan top contenders for plant

WASHINGTON (AP) — General Motors plans to announce the site of its Saturn Corp. plant within a month, with Michigan and Texas appearing to be the top contenders, according to company officials quoted in Saturday editions of The Washington Post.

GM and the United Auto Workers also are weighing a system under which Saturn workers would be paid salaries rather than hourly wages, the Post reported in a story based on interviews with unnamed company executives.

The newspaper quoted executives as saying that the company still has not selected the site but that the Midwest and Southwest in general and Michigan and Texas in particular appear to be the top contenders.

"We are 99 percent finished with all of the computer runs and other analyses" used to select the site, an official was quoted as saying.

Some officials said there could be a delay of several weeks in announcing the site selection, but other sources said that was unlikely.

In the 13-month site-selection process, numerous sites were surveyed by Argonaut Realty, the auto maker's real estate arm.

Governors from across the nation flocked to Detroit to lure Saturn Corp., a company that is separate from GM but wholly owned by the giant automaker.

Landauer Associates, a consulting firm, filed reports on 54 potential sites, the Post quoted GM sources as saying. Argonaut officials reportedly visited 30 potential locations for the much-balleyhooed auto making company.

The Post quoted GM sources as saying intense jockeying for position is now occurring on the company's site selection committee, particularly between Michigan and Texas advocates.

Best man is a woman

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Groom-to-be Bill Sheldon says it's a "natural thing" that his best man is a woman, Julie Beranek.

"I consider Julie my best or second-best friend," said Sheldon, 23, who planned to marry Janene Redmon of Kearney Saturday at the First United Methodist Church in Kearney. "I'm marrying the other best friend. I just thought it was the natural thing to do."

Miss Beranek, 21, whose boyfriend is Sheldon's roommate and will be a groomsman, said, "I have no problem with the title 'best man.' I don't think 'best woman' is appropriate. He's marrying the best woman."

Suicide is now termed murder

HOUSTON (AP) — A Louisiana woman who authorities believed had committed suicide apparently was fed an overdose of barbiturates by three people who wanted to sell her baby, the Harris County medical examiner said after reviewing new evidence in the case.

Dr. Joseph Jachimczyk on Friday changed the cause of Cheryl Ann Jones' death from suicide to homicide.

"This case had all the earmarks of a textbook suicide," Jachimczyk said. "But after reviewing the new evidence it is apparent that it was a homicide."

Mrs. Jones, 23, of New Orleans, came to Houston with three people on March 7, 1980, believing she had won a two-hour shopping spree, said police Detective Paul Motard.

The following day, she was found dead in an expensive southwest Houston hotel. One of her wrists had been slashed, and a three-page, unsigned suicide note was found in the room.

Medical examiners ruled Mrs. Jones killed herself with a drug overdose. But Motard and Detective Gil Schultz were skeptical.

"It didn't make sense. A young woman leaves her home with three strangers to go on what she believes is a shopping spree. She winds up dead in a hotel and her baby is mysteriously taken back to the father in a cab the same day," Motard said.

Motard would not discuss in detail the investigation but said the district attorney probably will be asked to take the case to a grand jury.

In January, Harold Lee Schut, a 40-year-old man arrested in Reno, Nev., on an unrelated charge, told authorities that he, his 30-year-old wife, Jackie, and a woman identified only as Cindy tricked Mrs. Jones into coming to Houston because they planned to sell her infant daughter, Amanda, for $2,000, police said.

"They spotted her one day in a Navy PX. They approached Mrs. Jones and said they wanted her baby's picture for a contest. If she won she would get a two-hour shopping spree and buy all the baby things she needed," Motard said. "They had approached another woman but she ignored them. Mrs. Jones just happened to be there and she was gullible."

The three went to Mrs. Jones' house early March 7, 1980, and told her she had won and had to leave immediately for Houston, Motard said.

They checked into a hotel, where Mrs. Jones was fed coffee and soft drinks spiked with barbiturates, Motard said. She was found about 24 hours later by a hotel maid, and the others and the baby were gone, the detective said.

Detectives found the suicide note, which said she had left her husband for another man but they had broken off their relationship. "My life is ruined. I left my husband for another man and now I have nothing," the note said.

The FBI determined that the note was written by Mrs. Jones but "they felt it was done under some kind of stress situation," Motard said.

The three suspects allegedly received $2,000 in advance to deliver Amanda to another person believed to live in Houston. But after Mrs. Jones died, the woman identified as Cindy took the baby back to New Orleans and had her delivered to her father in a cab, Motard said. The father was never a suspect in the case, police said.

"They apparently thought that if they took the baby back that they could cover their tracks," the detective said.

Hance is mistaken for Gov. White

DALLAS (AP) — An advance man for President Reagan mistook former Rep. Kent Hance for Gov. Mark White Friday morning as they waited with other dignitaries at the U.S. Naval Station in suburban Grand Prairie to greet the president upon his arrival to Dallas.

"As the advance man walked up to me, I stuck out my hand. He looked me straight in the eye and said, 'Governor, you'll be over here,'" Hance recalled later.

Hance, who recently switched parties and said several days ago he is "95 to 98 percent sure" he will seek the Republican nomination for governor in 1986, said White didn't find the exchange as amusing as he did.

"He wants to be, but I am," White interrupted, according to Hance.

Hance said he retorted, "I may well wind up being (governor), even though Mark's hung up a no-vacancy sign."

When Reagan arrived, he shook White's hand, but slapped Hance on the back, and the two raised their hands into the air in a victory-type salute.

Hance, as a member of the "Boll Weevil" conservative Democrat faction in Washington, was the Democratic sponsor for Reagan's bipartisan tax legislation in 1981.

He ran for the U.S. Senate last year instead of seeking reelection to Congress, but was defeated by Lloyd Doggett in a runoff for the Democratic nomination. Hance switched parties several weeks ago at the urging of U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, a former Democratic colleague of Hance in the House.

"Talks doomed..."

Budget work to square one

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional negotiators, still unable to find common ground on competing House and Senate budget proposals, will go at it again next week — even as one prominent official said the talks may be doomed.

House negotiators on Friday proposed a budget compromise that would protect 1986 Social Security benefit increases, and Senate bargainers immediately rejected it. That was just the opposite of events Thursday, when the House bargainers turned down a Senate-offered plan retaining the Senate's controversial one-year-freeze on Social Security benefits.

"We're still on square one," Sen. Lawton Chiles of Florida, senior Senate Democrat on the House-Senate conference committee on the budget, declared following Friday's session.

As the impasse headed into a third week, House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, raised the possibility that the budget talks might collapse entirely.

He said the Democratic-led House would begin to work next month on spending bills with or without a budget agreement. "Failure of the conferees to agree is not going to delay us any further," Wright told reporters.

Rep. William H. Gray III, D-Pa., chairman of the House negotiators, said it was now time to "get down to brass tacks."

"We're prepared to give some more on domestic spending. But we want to see some movement on defense and on Social Security," Gray said. "We'll give you defense if you give us COLAs (cost-of-living adjustments). What do you think of that?"

College National Finals Rodeo...

Western takes two to finals

BOZEMAN, Mont. – Western Texas College will be represented by two individuals in two events at the finals of the College National Finals Rodeo here Saturday evening, but it is hard to shake the feeling that there could have been more.

"It's sort of frustrating just being 'close but no cigar' for some of the kids. I feel like everybody tried as hard as they could and that's all you can ask. Some of it wasn't their fault," said Western Texas College Coach Bob Doty.

Van Hale and Bliss Mayhan made it back to the finals in the bull riding and bareback, respectively. Hale, from Snyder, is tied for fifth place in the average of the bull riding with a 141 total. Mayhan is tied for eighth in the bareback with a 137.

They represent WTC's only chances to move up from its current 12th place team standing. Western almost had five in the finals, however.

The top 10 finishers in each event advance to the finals and Western had three cowboys who narrowly missed qualifying. Mayhan was 11th in the saddle bronc with a 131 while Tony Hecksher was 15th in the bareback, also with a 131. In both cases, totals of 133 were good enough to qualify.

"Old 133 sure was a whole lot better number than 131," mused Coach Doty. "It hurts to get that close and not make it."

Gary Rowe missed competing in Saturday night's finals by one-tenth of a second in the calf roping. He clocked a total 26 seconds on two head and finished 11th overall. A 25.9 took 10th.

In outcomes Friday, Hale bucked off the in saddle bronc event, Rowe turned a 4.6 in steer wrestling and Glenn Jordan an 8.8. Jordan's first and second go times were a total 16.0. Tenth place in the event was an 11.6.

Doty said he was pleased with the stock Mayhan and Hale have drawn for the finals.

"Bliss' horse is pretty good. He was an 18-19 point horse in the first round (out of a possible 25). Usually a 20 point horse is super. "Van's bull is a good bull. You can get a lot of points on him but you can't make any mistakes, either. He's a good, honest bucking bull. I feel like he'll ride him," said Doty.

In results involving other competitors from the Southwest Region here:

Jeff Medlin and Tami Noble, Sul Ross State University, are still second in the average in team roping.

JoJo Koening, SRSU, is winning the average in breakaway roping. Jinita Williams, also of SRSU, is third.

Jana Mayhan, Panhandle State and the sister of WTC's Bliss Mayhan, is winning second in average in breakaway roping.

Jacque Jenkins, SRSU, is winning first in the average in goat tying. Noble is winning fifth.

Noble, current women's all-around leader, is also 10th in the average in the barrel racing.

Todd Watkins, SRSU, is eighth in the average in saddle bronc.

'Death penalty' provisions okayed by NCAA delegates

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - Cracking down on the battle against recruiting and academic scandals in college athletics, the delegates to the NCAA's special "Integrity Convention" approved almost unanimously measures that could force a school to suspend its football or basketball program as long as two years.

The so-called "Death Penalty" provisions, which are effective immediately, were the most extraordinary measures ever taken regarding these violations. College presidents at the convention had said they wanted a new NCAA penalty structure.

The tough penalties, decided upon at the conclusion of the "Integrity Convention," will be meted out in cases that used to draw only private reprimands. Suspending programs for as long as two years is a step that could be equivalent to the death penalty for a program. Coaches and players who knowingly take part in rule-breaking also will be subject to more severe punishment.

Delegates approved all 12 agenda items. In addition, many of the approximately 200 presidents in attendance said there would be rules put to a vote in January's NCAA convention here dealing with such things as commercialism, freshmen eligibility and academics.

"I do not believe I can overstate the level of concern that presidents and chancellors feel regarding the integrity crisis in college athletics," John Ryan, chairman of the Presidents Commission, told more than 1,000 delegates at the opening of Friday's session. "Presidents are heartsick about the serious violations of rules which are occuring by coaches, alumni and other boosters and are determined to stop them."

Ryan emphasized that the proposals were only a first step and promised his committee would continue working "to eliminate corruption in intercollegiate athletics."

The new structure's key section, proposal No. 3 on the convention agenda, was approved without a dissenting vote in the lower divisions and passed 284-3 in Division I. Voting against the measure were three members of the Southwest Conference - Texas, Texas Tech and Southern Methodist University.

Proposal No. 3 starts by drawing a distinction between secondary violations and major ones, those that indicate a pattern or result in a clear competitive advantage.

Secondary violations now will bring the kind of penalties that major cases once brought - ineligibility of players; forfeiture of games; one-year bans on recruiting by coaches, and as much as a 20 percent reduction in scholarships.

A school convicted of two major violations within a five-year period will be put in the "repeat major violation" class and could be forced to suspend the last program penalized for as long as two years.

After much debate, the schools agreed to make the "Death Penalty" rule retroactive to Sept. 1, 1980. Thus, if a school's football program had been put on a one-year probation with sanctions against either postseason or television appearances in September 1983, its football or basketball program would be subject to suspension if found guilty of a major infraction before September 1988.

SMU's Shields votes against proposed NCAA enforcement

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - Southern Methodist University's president said he agrees it appears self-serving for him to speak out against a proposed stiffer NCAA enforcement policy since SMU was notified only weeks ago of an impending probation - believed to be one of the strongest in NCAA history.

SMU and only five other schools - including Texas, Texas A&M and Southwest Texas State - voted Friday in New Orleans against a so-called "gas chamber" measure that would ban competition for one or two years in a sport for repeat offenders.

The final vote was 427-6, as an NCAA special convention on integrity overwhelmingly passed legislation that could cost a coach his job and an athlete his eligibility if they violate the rules.

The new enforcement policy could have serious ramifications on SMU, which was on probation from June 1981 to June 1983 and now is appealing to the NCAA Council the latest findings and recommendations of the NCAA Committee on Infractions concerning alleged recruiting violations by the Mustangs.

However, Shields said he would feel just as strongly against the NCAA enforcement policies if he were president of another university and not involved in an investigation.

Shields issued a written statement - the only president to do so - calling for a "broad-based review and revision of the current enforcement system before there is consideration of the single subject of increased penalties."

The SMU president told the Dallas Times Herald he would be supportive of a more severe penalty structure for major infractions if his ideas on due process were involved.

The present process "has been built up in pieces, like building a camel, over the years," Shields said, and "just is not adequate to treat contemporary issues in athletics."

In his first remarks about the investigation since early in the NCAA's 26-month probe of the SMU football program, Shields said the school has taken "substantive" action to work out the problems in its football program, which faces NCAA sanctions for the fourth time in 11 years.

He would not elaborate on the action, the Times Herald said.

"We cannot talk about the details of our current situation because we are in the appeals process," Shields said. "Substantive actions have been taken by the university, which will be announced at the conclusion of the appeals process in August in Boston."

Shields also confirmed reports that the university is considering a lawsuit against the NCAA on grounds that the NCAA enforcement system is unfair and SMU has been discriminated against.

AUTO RACING

DETROIT (AP) - Ayrton Senna of Brazil drove a Renault-powered Lotus through downtown streets to the provisional pole for the Detroit Grand Prix. Senna, 24, in only his second full season in Formula One racing, toured the 2.5-mile circuit in 1 minute, 42.051 seconds for an average speed of 88.191 mph.

BASEBALL

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) - The Minnesota Twins, who had lost 19 of their last 25 games, dismissed Billy Gardner as manager and named Baltimore pitching coach Ray Miller to succeed him. Miller, 40, has been the Orioles' pitching coach for the past seven years. Gardner, 57, had managed the Twins since 1981, and was offered another job within the organization.

HOCKEY

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) - The Minnesota North Stars, after failing to get Herb Brooks, have settled on Lorne Henning as "the person who would do the best job" coaching their National Hockey League team.

The announcement of Henning's appointment seemed anticlimactic after months of on-again, off-again negotiations with Herb Brooks, who coach the U.S. Olympic team to its 1980 gold medal and then became coach of the New York Rangers. Henning, former NHL player, coached the Springfield club, a farm team shared by the North Stars and Islanders, to a 36-40-4 record last season.

SOCCER

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) - The Cosmos have canceled their 10-game summer exhibition schedule after only three games because of financial difficulty.

Minority owner Joseph Berardo said he did not know when or if the team would play again.

Pate handling PGA pressure with calm

ATLANTA (AP) - Steve Pate, a rookie who has never finished better than 53rd on the Professional Golfers Association tour, doesn't appear to be too concerned about the pressure of having the lead.

"I've never played in front of the cameras before," Pate said Friday after shooting a 6-under-par 66 to take a one-shot lead halfway through the $500,000 Georgia-Pacific Atlanta Golf Classic. "I usually am out there playing before the camera crews are awake."

He was also to be in the final group playing before a national televison audience between 3 p.m. and 5 p.m. CDT today.

Pate's two-day total of 133 was 11 under par over the hilly 7,008-yard Atlanta Country Club course, giving him a one-shot edge over four-time tour winner Danny Edwards, who had a 65.

This is only the seventh cut in 14 appearances this year for the 24-year-old Californian, an All-American his senior season at UCLA when he won four collegiate events.

No one in the field of 70 that survived the halfway cut is more than nine shots out of the lead, with two other tour rookies in contention - Andrew Magee and Brad Fabel.

Magee was alone in third place at 135 after shooting 65 and Fabel also had a 65 to join three others at 136 - Houston Open winner Raymond Floyd, who shot 68; Loren Roberts, 67, and Byron Nelson Classic champion Bob Eastwood, 66.

Prominent players who missed the 2-under-par 142 cut included South Africans Gary Player and Denis Watson, Australian David Graham, Corey Pavin, J. C. Snead and Payne Stewart.

Fuzzy Zoeller, who has claimed two major titles in his career, was only one shot off the pace after Thursday's round, but he knocked two shots in the water on No. 18, taking a double bogey 7, and stood at 73-139.

Tony Sills, the first round leader, had an even par 72 and was tied with five others at 137, four shots off the pace.

Soccer camp slated here

The Texas Soccer Academy has scheduled a soccer camp for boys and girls at Western Texas College from July 21-26.

Students age 6 through 19 are eligible to attend.

Fees are $235 per person for resident campers or $175 for commuters. Resident students will stay in the college dormitories and have meals in the college cafeteria. A $75 non-refundable deposit is required with registration, with the balance to be paid in full two weeks before the camp session. A $10 discount will be allowed for a second child from the same family and those attending more than one session.

Brochures about the camp and camps at other locations are available in the Continuing Education office at WTC. Application forms are included in the brochure and are to be returned to Dr. Leonard Lucenko, director of the Soccer Adademy's camp sessions, at 15918 Echo Hill in Houston.

Tennis meet set July 4-6

Entry deadline for the Snyder Highway 80 Tennis Tournament is July 1, it is reminded.

The tournament will be held July 4-6 at the Snyder Junior High tennis courts.

Events include boys and girls age 12, 14, 16 and 18 singles and doubles, mens and womens singles and doubles, mens 35 singles and doubles and mixed doubles. Trophies will be awarded to finalists in all events.

Entry fee is $8 per person, per event.

Entries should be sent to Charlie Chrane at 4106 Jacksboro in Snyder (79549) or to Bud Birks at 1802 39th in Snyder. Further information can be obtained by calling Chrane at (915) 573-8602 or Birks at 573-1566.

Scramble nears at college here

Western Texas College will hold a two-man scramble June 29 and 30.

The tournament will be limited to 60 teams. Entry fee is $100 per team. Deadline to enter is June 26.

The tournament will be held with shotgun starts at 9 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Prizes include 1985 Diawa SRX irons for first place; Daiwa SRX woods for second; a carrybag for third and two dozen golf balls for fourth.

For reservations, write Dave Foster at the Western Texas College Pro Shop on South College Ave., Snyder, Tex., 79549, or call (915) 573-9291.

LGA plans to 'play the pro'

Snyder Country Club Ladies Golf Association will "Play the Pro" during their playday this Tuesday.

Tee time is 8:30 a.m.

Winners of Queen of the Hill were Betty Hildreth, low gross, and Norma Thompson, low net.

Low putters were, A flight, Betty Hildreth; B flight, Suzy Reed; C flight, Chris Jordan; and D flight, Marie Dollins.

Winners of the Friday Swingers were Don and Marie Dollins. Second were John and Evelyn Thomas and third were Jackie Watkins and Gina Courter. Play was target points.

Babe Ruth League action...

Snyder bags win at Andrews

It's only one game into the season and already Snyder's Babe Ruth League squad is boasting a 2-0 record.

Snyder defeated Andrews' No. 2 team in Andrews 11-8 Friday night, then took a forfeit from Spur in the first game of a scheduled double header Saturday.

The second game of the twinbill was to take place at 8 o'clock Saturday evening at Moffett Field in Snyder.

Justin Webb anchored Snyder offensively and defensively. He went three-for-four from the plate and took winning pitcher honors with four innings of work.

"He did a fine job," said one of the squad's coaches, Albert Lewis.

Webb gave up three runs on three hits before giving way to Ricky Hunter, who went for two innings. William Foree pitched the final inning.

Snyder hurlers allowed the eight runs on five hits and two errors, but it was nine walks that kept Andrews alive. Snyder walked the home team aboard in the seventh, gave up a passed ball to make it an 11-5 game, then allowed an in-the-park grand slam homer to give the contest a close finish.

"We just couldn't find the strike zone there for a while," said Lewis. "But I was real pleased, considering we hadn't really worked out together or anything. I was really impressed with our defense. We turned two double plays in the game. We hit the ball well, too."

George Ramirez, a freshman from Sul Ross State University, was the losing pitcher. Andrews hurlers gave up 13 hits.

In addition to Webb's prowess at the plate, Steve Parker was three-for-four, Earl Ware two-for-two and Chris Fryar two-for-five. Mike McWilliams, Ricky Hunter and Michael Long also got one hit apiece for Snyder.

Lewis said the only disappointing news was the staff has learned of a rule allowing just 18 players on a roster in the league. Twenty-three players have signed up but the team will have to drop five of them.

Lewis said Don Osborn was to pitch for Snyder in Saturday's 8 p.m. game with Spur.

Giants blank Jim Ned, 10-0

MERKEL – The Snyder Giants in general - and Gilbert Hernandez in particular - blasted the Jim Ned Texans here Friday evening.

Snyder's championship team will play a second game in the Merkel Little League Tournament again Monday night at 6, against an as yet unknown opponent.

Hernandez pitched a one-hitter from the mound and went four-for-four from the plate as he helped to blank the Texans, 10-0.

Snyder jumped out to a 3-0 advantage and, yes, it was Hernandez who provided the first score. It began when Raymond House was awarded first base after being hit by a pitch. He stole second, then came home on a single from Hermandez. Blair Williams followed with a walk and one out later Michael Torres hit into a fielder's choice that put Hernandez across home plate. Williams later came in on a passed ball.

The Giants set up a three-run third inning as Hernandez led off with a triple and Williams walked again. David Hinojos hit into an error which brought Hernandez home for a 4-0 lead. Justin House then singled to score both Williams and Hinojos.

The fourth inning provided three more runs. Hernandez started the rally off with a two-out single. Williams then slugged a bounce-over double to bring his teammate around. A Michael Torres triple scored Williams. Torres later came home on a passed ball.

Snyder's final run came in the fifth when Hernandez doubled home Kevin McMillan, who had reached on a two-bagger.

Raul Ochoa was the losing pitcher. He gave up 10 hits and struck out 10 batters. He also allowed three walks.

Hernandez gave up one hit, a single in the fourth to Richard Cumbie, struck out 13 batters and walked five.

Raymond House also hit a single in the game.

UIL rules allow Lewis to coach

High school baseball coaches may instruct a summer league team, providing players are not coerced to play by the coach, according to rules set forth by the University Interscholastic League.

UIL rules concerning the issue state that coaches "do not require, coerce or suggest that players from their school teams be on any summer baseball team."

The rules also state that a high school coach cannot coach a summer team "in an effort to extend the school team into the summer months."

Snyder High School Coach Albert Lewis, who is helping with the local Babe Ruth League team this summer noted, "A lot of people think a high school coach can't coach during the summer but that's not true. There are rules you have to follow, but in fact, a lot of high school (baseball) coaches do coach teams in the summer. Almost all of the really strong high school teams, particularly the ones from down south, are coached by their high school coaches during the summer."

UIL rules governing the issue are below. It should be reminded that these rules are for baseball only. Rules governing other sports, such as basketball, differ.

UIL rules governing summer baseball

Students may play on both school and nonschool teams during the spring semester if so allowed by local school authorities and coaches providing:

1. A school does not sponsor or pay a coach for coaching a baseball team during the summer.

2. No school equipment is used. A summer-spring team may not wear school uniforms or use school equipment.

3. Nonschool teams should not use school team names or nicknames.

4. School coaches do not require, coerce, or suggest that players from their school teams be on any summer baseball team. Participation must be voluntary and open.

5. No high school coach coaches a team during the summer in an effort to extend the school team into the summer months.

6. Players do not receive items of valuable consideration.

All levels (varsity, junior varsity) players may attend summer baseball camp if all costs are paid by parents and-or students.

Players may participate in professional tryout camps as long as the player and-or his parents pay all expenses, and the professional tryout is not construed as a college tryout.

Briefs

COLLEGE

ST. LOUIS (AP) - North Carolina's B.J. Surhoff, the No. 1 pick in the summer major league baseball draft, has been named college baseball's National Player of the Year by The Sporting News, officials at the university announced.

Surhoff, a 6-foot-1, 185-pound junior from Rye, N.Y., was taken by the Milwaukee Brewers after compiling a career batting average of .392 - highest in the school's history.

BOXING

STATELINE, Nev. (AP) - Loren Ross' flurry of combinations on Laszlo Virag in a 178-pound bout forced Hungary's coach Laszlo Papp to throw in the towel at 1:23 of the first round and sealed the USA's victory in the 1985 USA-Hungary Amateur Boxing Dual. The USA won the dual competition, 8-4. Hungary is currently ranked fourth in Europe.

GOLF

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - Heather Drew, helped by an eagle, shot a 5-under-par 67 to take a two-stroke lead after two rounds of the $250,000 Mayflower Classic.

Drew, who is winless with only $23,254 in official earnings since joining the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour in 1983, was at 139, two better than Mary Beth Zimmerman.

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) - Severiano Ballesteros of Spain took a triple-bogey-seven on the 18th hole and fell into a second-place tie with Glenn Ralph of Britain, one stroke behind the 138 of Sweden's Ove Sellberg after two rounds of the Irish Open golf championship.

HORSE RACING

BOWIE, Md. (AP) - Duxun Limited, $20.20, pulled away from Lord Carlos through the stretch to win the $11,500 Palace Jester Purse by a length at Bowie Race Course.

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) - Till You, $4, steadily pulled ahead of Baroness Direct to win the $38,000 feature race at Hollywood Park.

GIRL'S SOFTBALL

BLUEBONNETS 10, FASTBACKS 8

Tiffany Jones smashed a home run, a triple and a single and Jamie Franks added a home run and a single as the Bluebonnets shaded the Fastbacks in Division I tournament play Friday.

Also hitting for the 'Bonnets were Lisa Duncan, a double; and Stephanie Davis, a single. Eva Hernandez was the winning pitcher.

The Fastbacks got a home run from Hayley Patterson, a double and a single from Kayla Walker and a single from Karla Walker.

CRUSHERS 15, ROYALS 10

The Crushers came up with three home runs - one each from Becky McCravey, Carma Brandon and Monica Rivera - to defeat the Royals. McCravey also added a single.

Monica Garcia was the winning pitcher.

The Royals were led by Amy Herrera's home run. Amanda Davis plugged a double and a single.

8-9 AND FARM LEAGUE ALL-STARS

Little League All-Stars to be named

Two all-star games were scheduled Saturday evening at Logan Field. The 8-9 Year Old League All-Stars were to vie at 6 o'clock. The Farm League All-Star game was to follow at 7:30.

Little League All-Stars were to be named following the Farm League All-Star contest.

WOMEN'S SOFTBALL LEAGUE

The local women's softball league is in need of players. Anyone interested in participating should contact Albert Lewis at 573-3813.

SAFE AT HOME – Michael Torres slides safely in at home plate to score Snyder's ninth run in a 10-0 victory over Jim Ned at the Merkel Tournament Friday. Snyder's Giants came up with 10 hits, including a triple by Torres. Pictured for Jim Ned are pitcher Raul Ochoa and catcher John Rodgers. The Giants will play again Monday night at 6 in the tournament. (SDN Staff Photo)

AT&T wants 1.8 percent hike

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utility Commission staff has recommended that AT&T Communications get a $13.6 million increase in basic rates for long-distance calls within Texas. This would be a 1.8 percent average increase.

The staff on Thursday, however, sharply reduced its emergency rate hike recommendation.

Instead of the $32.3 million increase recommended two weeks ago, the staff said AT&T needs only $12.8 million in added revenue to tide it over until the commission makes its final ruling in the rate case, which began June 10. That money would come from directory assistance charges and minor adjustments in certain rates for private line service.

AT&T has requested emergency rate relief totaling $123.9 million as part of a total $139 million rate increase proposal, which is approximately $58 million more than the PUC staff recommended.

Some 300 cities opposing AT&T's request contend the company needs only $15.9 million in rate increases, and their top economic expert says rates for ordinary long-distance calls should be reduced.

Besides the increase in ordinary long-distance rates, the staff recommended:

— A 40-cent charge for long-distance directory assistance calls. Customers would get two free calls a month. AT&T had requested a 50-cent charge.

— A 14.9 percent increase — the same as AT&T requested — in surcharges for operator assistance and credit card calls.

— A 42.2 percent increase in charges for outgoing WATS service. WATS-800, however, would be reduced by 5.3 percent.

— Increases averaging 27.4 percent in rates for private line service.

Dancers give shirt, etc. for benefit of charity

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — "Johnny Passion" and four other male strippers certainly showed they had hearts of gold.

They're going to be taking it off for the local American Diabetes Association chapter on Sunday.

"I just had my fingers crossed hoping these young men would accept us," Suzanne Strain said of a decision by the five to dance to raise money for the association.

"They think we are doing them a favor," said Strain, fundraiser for the association's West Michigan branch, "but they're doing the Diabetes Association the favor."

The five — David "Daring Dave" Shelton, Sam "Champaign King" Hill, brothers Steve "Steve Midnight" Schwander and Nick "Italian Heartthrob" Schwander, and a dancer who calls himself just "Johnny Passion" — complained last week that their offer to strip for charity was getting no takers.

"I was getting to the point where we didn't think anybody would take our money," Nick Schwander said.

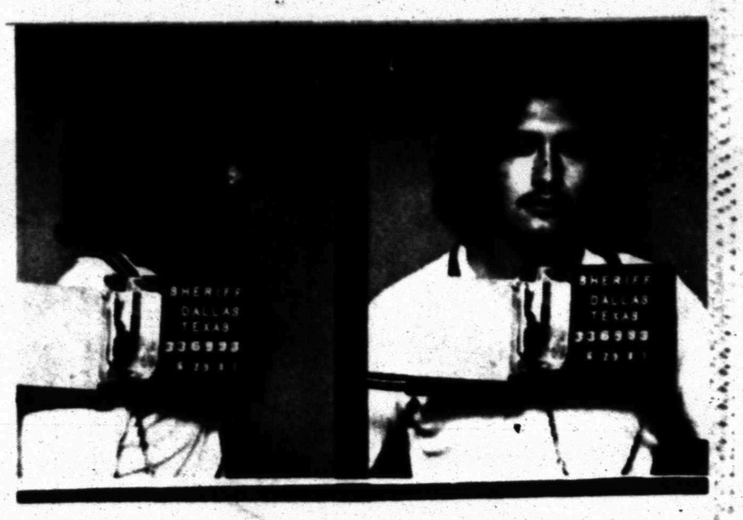
Milton Berle in good condition

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Milton Berle was in such good condition after a four-hour quadruple bypass heart operation that doctors decided to let him go home early, hospital officials said.

"He's done extremely well right from the start," said Ron Wise, spokesman for Cedars-Sinai Medical Center. "It was really a textbook recovery."

Berle, 76, left the hospital Thursday accompanied by his wife, Ruth. He was operated on June 10.

"They had planned to release him (Friday), but he was in such good condition, that his physician said it wasn't necessary to keep him another day," Wise said.



MARCELLO SANTOYA, JR.

Murder suspect on most wanted list

IRVING--A dying man's declaration has resulted in Marcello Santoya, Jr. being placed on the Texas Most Wanted list.

Investigators say Alan Carner, 19, was fatally shot in broad daylight as he was walking down a street on January 13, 1982.

While paramedics tried vainly to save Carner's life as he was being rushed to a nearby hospital in an ambulance, the young man told a police officer that Santoya was the person responsible for the shooting.

Detectives say Carner had been dating an acquaintenance of Santoya's and that this had created bad blood between the two young men. There were several altercations involving the pair.

Carner told investigators just before he died that around 4 p.m. on January 13, Santoya drove up next to him as he was walking down the street and shot him one time in the back.

On February 15, 1982 a Dallas Grand Jury indicted Santoya for Carner's murder.

This week a reward of up to $1,000 is being offered for information leading to the capture of Santoya, who has eluded police for more than three years.

Anyone with information on the location of Santoya is asked to call the Texas Crime Stoppers Advisory Council toll-free at 1-800-252-8477 or their local Crime Stoppers program. Callers do not have to reveal their identies.

Santoya is 5-6, 130 pounds with black hair and brown eyes. He will turn 24 on July 4.

Detectives say Santoya has a string of arrests and his criminal record includes a conviction for obstructing police. However, since Carner's shooting, Santoya has avoided any contact with the law. He is believed to be still hiding out in Texas.

Texas Most Wanted is a cooperative effort between Texas Crime Stoppers and the Department of Public Safety.

As of June 17, the Department of Public Safety reported that Marcello Santoya Jr., is wanted on the following warrant: murder: issued by Dallas County Sheriff's Office.

Comedians plan benefit concert

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Comedians Bill Cosby and David Brenner will headline a benefit concert for the 270 people left homeless by the fire that engulfed a neighborhood when police tried to evict the MOVE radical group.

Rockers Robert Hazzard and the Heroes also will perform at the show July 2 at the 13,500-seat Robin Hood Dell East amphitheater, promoter Toni Nash said Wednesday. The event's chairmen are basketball star Julius Erving of the Philadelphia 76ers and tenor saxophonist Grover Washington Jr.

Washington and his band, Pieces of a Dream, will be unable to perform because of a previous engagement, Nash said.

Simmering feud has cooled down

WESTPORT, Conn. (AP) — A simmering feud between cookbook author Martha Stewart and town fathers has cooled.

Mrs. Stewart, who was accused of running a catering operation from her home in violation of zoning ordinances, signed an out-of-court agreement with the town this week. She agreed to remodel her home to meet the objections.

Mrs. Stewart was not available to comment on the settlement, but her husband, Andrew, said Thursday, "I'm perfectly happy with the agreement. It solves the problem without hurting anybody."

Mrs. Stewart is the author of the best-selling book "Entertaining."

In 1937, Franklin Roosevelt became the first president of the United States to be sworn in on Jan. 20. Until then, inauguration day had been in March.

Many popular foods on "new worst" list

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bacon cheeseburgers, ham biscuits, fried chicken and stuffed potatoes — products sold by some of America's most popular restaurant chains — are cited by a consumer group as the "new worst" fast foods on the market because of high fat and salt content.

The Center for Science in the Public Interest, a private, non-profit, consumer-oriented health research group, listed its choices as the nutritionally best and worst of the latest fast foods in the June edition of its newsletter, "Nutrition Action."

The center said seafood and salads are adding healthy choices to the American diet, but that while many new items on fast-food menus may appear nutritious, many are not.

When it compiled its original best and worst list two years ago, the center hailed baked potatoes as a welcome addition to fast foods. Today, one brand of stuffed potato is on the list of the five worst fast foods, thanks to toppings that add more salt and fat than many popular cheeseburgers.

"For every new truly 'light' entree introduced, two other fatty, fried or salt-laden companions seemed to appear," said the new report by Bonnie Liebman, a center nutritionist.

Nonetheless, her top choices for "best new" fast foods were Long John Silver's baked fish, Jack in the Box's shrimp salad and Wendy's low-calorie salad dressings.

Honorable mentions went to Arby's roasted chicken breast and Wendy's multi-grain bun.

Cited as the five "worst" fast foods of 1985 were McDonald's Chicken McNuggets and breakfast sausage biscuit, Wendy's cheese-stuffed potato, Hardee's bacon cheeseburger and Roy Rogers' crescent sandwich with ham.

Mary Maguire, a spokeswoman for Marriott Corp., which operates the Roy Rogers chain, said, "Roy Rogers offers one of the most varied and healthful menus in the industry." She said salad bars with low-calorie dressing are popular at the chain's restaurants.

Hardee's spokesman John Merritt, commenting on criticism of his firm's bacon cheeseburger for high fat and sodium content, said Hardee's simply tries to provide the foods that consumers want.

"The bacon cheeseburger is one of our biggest sellers because it is responding to our customers' desire for quick, hot food," he said. "If they tell us they want baked chicken and celery sticks, we'll have baked chicken and celery sticks."

Hardees also offers light, low-calorie items such as shrimp and pasta salads, he said, and these seem to be chosen primarily by parents who are taking youngsters out for hamburgers.

McDonald's spokesman Bob Kayser had no comment on the center's criticism of Chicken McNuggets and breakfast sausage biscuit.

Three telephone calls to Wendy's spokesman Denny Lynch in Columbus, Ohio, were not returned.

The new listing covers fast foods that have been added to menus in recent years and is in addition to the consumer group's original 1983 designations of best and worst fast foods, spokesman Greg Moyer said.

In its original 1983 report on fast food nutrition, the center said the best generally were salad bars, baked potatoes, corn on the cob and fruit juices.

Listed as worst that year were Wendy's Triple Cheeseburger, the Extra Crispy Dark Kentucky Fried Chicken Dinner, Burger King's Whopper, Pizza Hut's Super Supreme Pizza and McDonald's Filet-O-Fish.

S&L decision pending

Neva Turner, office manager and the wife of local Lone Star Gas Company Manager Wedge Turner, Jack Hollis, a vice president in charge of public relations, and B.B. Hardy, secretary treasurer for the First Western board of directors.

Briefly stated, arguments "against" said Snyder was already being adequately served by existing institutions and arguments "for" said Great Western customers are already here.

John Davis, division manager for City Savings in San Angelo, said, "Our main argument was that Snyder now has three banks and three S&Ls and that these are serving a community of its size very well."

But the argument from the C-City based group was "We have enough business already in Snyder to justify our moving in," said Hardy.

He noted First Western now has some $13 million in loans in Scurry County.

"Our contention is we want to be able to serve our existing customers," Hardy said, adding, "Of course, we're not going to discourage any new ones either."

The final decision from Tuesday's hearing rests with the state commissioner for the Texas Savings and Loan Department. He is Linton Bawman III.

The facts before him will include legal briefs to be filed by attorneys for both sides; a transcript of testimony offered Tuesday; plus an opinion to be rendered by the hearing officer, Luke Robinson.

State officials note such decisions normally take six weeks to be finalized. The commissioner must act within 90 days of the hearing.

If granted, the indication from First Western officials is they would move ahead quickly with their plans to locate an office here.

City Savings officials say their building project is still likely one year away, noting they are currently building a new facility in Big Spring and that the Snyder project would follow its completion.

Minor injuries noted after 3 wrecks Friday

Three persons sustained what were called minor injuries in traffic mishaps in Snyder Friday afternoon.

Rebecca Sanchez of 1211 29th St. was the only driver requiring medical treatment for injuries.

Sanchez was the driver of a 1979 AMC which collided with a 1983 Ford driven by Tommy Valentine of 3011 41st St. The mishap occurred in the 2700 Block of Towle Park Rd. at 3:20 p.m.

She was taken from the scene to Cogdell Memorial Hospital where she was treated and released.

Daniel Morin of Rt. 3 reportedly suffered minor injuries which did not require medical treatment at 4:22 p.m. when the 1984 Honda motorcycle he was riding was involved in a collision with a 1976 Dodge driven by Therese Sternadel of Snyder.

That mishap occurred in the 4200 Block of College Ave.

Also listed as injured but not requiring medical treatment was Virginia Perez of 2011 Ave. K — a passenger in a 1979 Lincoln driven by Mary Hernandez of 3730 Austin Ave.

The Hernandez vehicle was involved in a collision with a 1983 Mercury driven by Alejo Ynguanzo of Fluvanna in the 1800 Block of 25th St. at 2:54 p.m.

Snyder police were also called to investigate a fourth accident Friday evening with no injuries involved.

According to reports, a parked 1983 Ford owned by Jack West of Las Cruces, N.M. was struck by a 1974 Chevrolet driven by Jennie Garcia of Snyder.

That accident occurred at 6:01 p.m. on the parking lot of the Phillips 66 Truck Stop at the intersection of East Highway and Ave. A.

Missing bicycle reported Friday

Police are investigating a single misdemeanor theft report filed Friday morning involving a missing bicycle.

Bobby Nolan of 906 27th St. reported the incident at 8:49 a.m. The BMX brand bike, valued at $200, is thought to have been taken from outside the Nolan residence sometime between 10:30 p.m. Thursday and 8 a.m. Friday.

In other action, city officers jailed two suspects for misdeamenor possession of marijuana following a routine traffic stop Friday night.

One local man was also jailed for public intoxication and a fourth suspect was jailed for unpaid traffic tickets.

Politician's role said easy to play

BOSTON (AP) — Playing a politician is easier than being one, says actor Robert Guillaume.

Guillaume, who portrays a state lieutenant governor in the television show "Benson," found it wasn't easy dealing with a group of protesters at the Massachusetts Statehouse where he was honorary lieutenant governor for the day Thursday.

Father charged with cutting off fingertips

EL PASO (AP) — A 29-year-old man has been accused of chopping off two of his 5-year-old daughter's fingertips with a meat cleaver in what he called an attempt to frighten her, police reported.

Lt. Richard Cuellar of the Youth Services Division said Friday that William Adams Cottingim of El Paso, a father of two, had been released on $15,000 bond charged with injury to a child.

Cottingim was arrested Thursday for allegedly chopping the tips off the index and middle finger on his daughter's left hand. The girl, Leslie, was expected to remain at Sierra Medical Center through the weekend.

In an affidavit from Caesir Saucado, a protective service specialist with the state Department of Human Resources, Cottingim told Saucado that he "was only trying to scare his daughter with the meat cleaver when he accidentally chopped of his daughter's fingers."

According to the affidavit, Saucado said the father was angry because the girl and her 7-year-old brother, Christopher, were playing with a waterhose. The brother said Cottingim had threatened both children with discipline with the cleaver before.

By Linda Baylor

On May 26 the ground breaking ceremony was held for the Dusty Moore Vocational Building at the Cherokee Home for Children in honor of Doyce "Dusty" Moore who died in September 1981.

Moore was a Snyder native and a 1953 Snyder High School graduate. He attended Texas Tech for one year prior to his transfer to Okmulgee Vocational School in Oklahoma where he graduated after two years.

He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Moore, and, following his college graduation, he returned home where he spent the next 10 years working in Moore's Garage with his father.

Dusty Moore elected to teach auto mechanics and accepted a job with the Brownwood Independent School District.

He spent the next two summers at the University of Texas studying to get his teaching certificate.

"He got his nickname, Dusty, when he was in grade school," explained his mother. "The teacher had the names of all the girls in the class on one side of the room and the names of the boys in the class on the other side of the room. Doyce's name was listed with the girls and he never liked his name after that." However, according to Mrs. Moore, it wasn't long until the children started calling him Dusty and the nickname just stuck.

The Moores also have a second son, Frank, who lives in Graham with his wife, Judy, and their children, Michael, Ann and Dustin.

"When the boys would go off to school, I'd say, 'There go my chocolate and vanilla kids'," laughed Mrs. Moore. "Frank is blond and blue eyed whereas Dusty was dark with brown hair and eyes," she continued.

Dusty was a member of the Austin Street Church of Christ in Brownwood and, as a result, he was appointed to serve on the board of directors for the Cherokee Home for Children.

His dream, according to J. Fred Perry of Brownwood, president of the board of directors of the children's home, had been to have a vocational building at the home. "He had seen the importance of young people at the home learning a trade, however, he died before he could see this dream come true," said Perry according to a story in the Brownwood Bulletin.

Money for the building was donated by Churches of Christ across the state. The building will be a 50 by 75 metal one and will house the trade program at the home. Total cost will be $85,000 leaving a $10,000 balance which will be applied to equipment and other necessary items for the shop.

Cities represented at the ground breaking ceremony included Brownwood, Wichita Falls, Waco, College Station, Mason, Llano, Whitney, Dallas, Fort Worth, Lometa, Abilene, San Angelo, Snyder, Graham, Austin and others.

Special guests at the ceremony included Mr. and Mrs. Moore, Dusty's parents; his wife, Glenda, and their children, Melody, Monique, and Mitchell; and his brother Frank and his family.

On Feb. 9, 1941, Winston Churchill, then British prime minister, made one of his most dramatic speeches in appealing to the United States to provide arms for Britain. The speech contained the now famous phrase: "Give us the tools and we will finish the job." And Churchill promised, "We shall not fail or falter; we shall not weaken or tire ..."

MEMORIES—Mrs. Clarence Moore is holding a picture of her son, the late Dusty Moore of Brownwood, and his family. Other family pictures grace the room.

MANY MEMORIES — As the two boys, Dusty and Frank, grew up pictures kept a steady record of their progress. From high school to adulthood, this memory wall preserves hopes, dreams, successes, failures, and a time of life that brought both joy and sorrow as the people grew together and separately.

VEGETABLE CASSEROLE

4 medium potatoes (1 ¼ pounds), peeled and thinly sliced
2 medium (each 4 ounces) onions, peeled and thinly sliced
4 small yellow straight neck squash (1 ¼ pounds), unpeeled and thinly sliced
¼-pound stick butter, cut in thin pats
Salt and pepper to taste
1 cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 cup sour cream

In a buttered shallow 2 ½-quart oven-broiler-server layer half the potatoes, onions and squash, dotting each layer with butter and sprinkling with salt and pepper. Repeat layers. Cover tightly and bake in a preheated 350 degree oven until potatoes are tender about 1 hour and 45 minutes. Mix Parmesan and sour cream and spread over top. Broil 6 to 8 inches from high heat until partly browned about 3 to 5 minutes. When serving, spoon butter at bottom of dish over each portion. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Too much help for opponents

By James Jacoby

The standard lead from a plain suit lacking a sequence has from time immemorial been fourth-best. There is a strong argument that this lead should not be used against a slam contract. Not using a fourth-best lead should make it more difficult for declarer to count the hand. Of course the same difficulty would exist for the leader's partner.

Declarer succeeded on today's deal because the defenders were using fourth-best leads. South won the ace of diamonds and drew two rounds of trump ending in his hand. He ruffed a diamond in dummy, played a low spade back to his ace, cashed the spade jack, and overtook the spade 10 with dummy's queen. East followed to all three spades. If the opening lead of the diamond three was from four or five diamonds, then East could not have more than two clubs. Suiting his action to his thinking, declarer played the ace and king of clubs, and then exited with a trump which East had to win. Stripped of all black cards and of trump, hapless East now had to play a diamond, enabling declarer to trump in his hand while discarding dummy's lone remaining club.

If defenders' leads against slams were random rather than fourth-best, declarer might think that West could have had six or even seven diamonds originally. Before cashing the high clubs, declarer might then play to place East on lead for a possible end play in clubs. Declarer did well on the actual deal, but he was helped by knowing that the opponents' leads were traditional and therefore predictable.

Gwendolen Scrivner, Eddie Thompson exchange vows in double ring ceremony

Gwendolen Sue Scrivner became the bride of Eddie Glenn Thompson at 7 p.m. June 1 in the Colonial Hill Baptist Church. The Rev. Miller Robinson, minister of the church, officiated the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Barbara Scrivner and Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Scrivner. She is the granddaughter of Lowell Thornburg of Roby and Mr. and Mrs. T.B. Scrivner of Dermott. Her great-grandmother is Mrs. Henry Hobbs of Roscoe.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Thompson. He is the grandson of Mrs. Clarence Thompson of Snyder and Mr. and Mrs. Coyt Hix of Haskell.

The church was centered with a brass archway entwined with greenery and flowers topped with a seven light halo of volive candles. Two 15 light rainbow candlebrums flanked the arch. They were accented with greenery and bows of pink and dusty rose.

Two nine light candletrees adorned with greenery served as a background for the wedding party. The pews were marked with bows and streamers of pink satin.

Carla Thompson, cousin of the groom, and Barbara Perkins played as the guests were seated.

As the great-grandmother and grandparents were being seated, they played "Love Story". The mothers were ushered in as "Sunrise, Sunset" was being played.

The candlelighters were De Ann Parks, cousin of the groom and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D.M. Parks of Fluvanna, and James Alan Carter, cousin of the bride and son of Mr. and Mrs. Marion Carter of Hereford.

De Ann wore a moire taffeta dress of tea length. A standing collar accented the front and back yoke as the long fitted sleeves centered interest around the bodice. The flared pleated skirt completed the ensemble.

James Alan wore a champagne colored tuxedo complimented with an ivory shirt and accented with a pink bow tie and matching cummerbund. As the young couple lit the candles, "The Theme from Ice Castles" was played.

Julie Kimmel, friend of the bride, sang "The Wedding Song" before the bride entered the church. Patti Cloe and Darrell Collins sang "You and I" during the ceremony. After the vows, Julie sang "The Lord's Prayer".

Barbara Perkins played the "Wedding March" as the bride was escorted to the altar by her grandfather, Lowell Thornburg of Roby. She was presented to the groom by her mother.

The bride's gown was fashioned by Mori Lee and was exquisitely accented by a stand-up neckline trimmed with Alencon lace and pearls. The illusion front and back net yoke trimmed with Schiffi embroidery and pearls added enchanted dimensions.

The fitted bodice was made of ivory taffeta and is accented with motifs and the dropped basque waistline were delightfully balanced by sleeves that came to a scallop on the hand. The full ball skirt with a cathedral train is made to a lamp shade ruffle with a flounce at the bottom. This unique train is tacked with Alencon lace at the drapes.

Completing her ensemble, she wore a bridal hat with lace motifs. The shoulder length veil was fashioned of bridal illusion.

She carried a cascading bouquet of silk candlelight and dusty pink roses, dusty rose honeysuckle with touches of rose tipped silk baby's breath and fresh baby's breath with silk foliage. Streamers of pecot bridal satin gently secured the bouquet.

In keeping with tradition, the bride placed pennies minted in the year of the bride and groom's birth in her shoe for luck. She carried two lace handkerchiefs belonging to her great-grandmothers, the late Mrs. Mrytle Bassinger of Roscoe and Mrs. Henry Hobbs of Roscoe. The bride's gown served as something new and she wore a blue garter. She borrowed a pearl necklace belonging to her grandmother, Mrs. Lowell Thornburg of Roby.

Stacie Sellers, cousin of the bride, served as maid of honor. Teresa Hagins, friend of the bride, was the bridesmaid. They wore matching gowns fashioned of moire taffeta. Standing collars accented the front and back yolks complimenting the fitted bodice. Long fitted sleeves enhanced the look. The flared skirt was pleated.

Stacie's gown was rose colored and Teresa's was pink.

They each carried a colonial nosegay fashioned of dusty pink silk roses and pink Frenched carnations and rose colored baby's breath with accents of fresh baby's breath. Streamers of pink, dusty rose, and candlelight adorned the nosegays.

Linda Gayle Carter, cousin of the bride and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marion Carter of Hereford, served as flower girl. She carried a small natural basket trimmed with rose and pink colored petals and ribbon bows. She wore a rose tea length dress similar to the maid of honor's.

Thad Isaacs, cousin of the groom and son of Mr. and Mrs. Tony Isaacs of Fluvanna, was ring bearer. He carried an ivory heart shaped lace pillow accented with a small group of flowers. Satin streamers tied in love knots complimented the arrangement.

The groom wore a formal ivory colored tuxedo with a matching shirt. An ivory bow tie and cummerbund completed his ensemble. His boutonniere was fashioned after the bride's bouquet.

Rickey Thompson, brother of the groom, served as best man. Brent McFarland, friend of the groom, was groomsman. They wore champagne tuxedos with ivory shirts. Rickey was wearing rose colored bow tie and cummerbund and Brent was wearing pink.

Mark Staton, Chad Sellars, both cousins of the bride, and Larry Thompson, cousin of the groom, served as ushers. They wore matching tuxdeos with ivory shirts and vests.

The mother of the bride chose a rose colored street length dress and the groom's mother selected a pink street length dress. Both mothers wore corsages fashioned of pink roses.

Tobi Stephens registered the guests in front of the church. The table was decorated with a bride and groom made by Mrs. Elida Garza. A crystal bowl held rose matches with the honored couple's names and date of marriage in gold ink. The feather pen, bride's book and her throw-away bouquet completed the setting.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the Fellowship Hall of the church building.

The bride's table was covered with a floor length white lace cloth over pink. Crystal candle holders gracefully supporting white tapers accented with rose and pink satin streamers centered the table.

The three tiered cake, baked by Mrs. Roger Lyons, was topped with a gazebo complete with a ceramic bride and groom. Dusty rose and light pink silk flowers decorated the gazebo and between the tiers. Punch was served from a crystal bowl. Mints in shades of rose and pink, and nuts completed the table.

Ms. Sally Herrington of Clyde and Mrs. Gayle Carter of Hereford, both aunts of the bride, presided at her table.

The groom's table was covered with a dark brown over tan lace cloth. A bronze belonging to his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Parks of Fluvanna, was used as the centerpiece. A chocolate cake featuring the bride and groom's brand was served by Mrs. Sharon Groves and Candy Carven. A brass coffee service completed the setting.

Members of the house party included Ms. Patsy Hart, Mrs. Clinton Sellars and Mrs. Bobby Stanton, cousins of the bride, Mrs. Bill Kimmel, Mrs. Roy Staton, aunt of the bride, and Mrs. Tommy LaRoux.

Rose rice bags were given to the guests by Dayna Parks and Meg Parks, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. D.M. Parks of Fluvanna and cousins of the groom.

Dayna wore a pink tea length dress fashioned like the maid of honor and Meg wore a rose tea length dress fashioned like the bridesmaid's dress.

The groom's parents hosted the rehersal dinner on May 31 at The Shack.

The bride is a graduate of Snyder High School and Western Texas College. She is employed by American State Bank.

The groom graduated from Snyder High School and attended Western Texas College. He is employed by Ezell-Key Feed and Seed.

Following a wedding trip to San Antonio, the couple is making their home at 3802 Noble Drive, Snyder.

The bride and groom were honored with a shower on May 18. They were also honored with a "Kitchen and Food" shower at Circle Bar Ranch on May 26 in Fluvanna. The bride was given a lingerie shower in the home of Mrs. Caron Perkins on May 23.

Out of town guests were from Hereford, Roby, Haskell, Fluvanna, Ira, Roscoe, Westbrook and Clyde.

Calling All Homemakers Brought To You By Interiors

THE IMPORTANCE OF SOFAS

Although all the furniture pieces and accessories you use are obviously important to the overall look of any room, the sofa usually serves as the one key piece because of its dominance, its use, and the way the rest of the furniture is planned around it.

Therefore, it's important that you take into account all the many different considerations in selecting a sofa because it is such major piece.

We can give you help in these considerations. For instance, in choosing a sofa, aside from these two basics - its beauty and its comfort - be sure it has the right size and shape for the rest of your room. And be sure to consider the color of the sofa in relation to your overall color scheme. Another thing to think about is the fabric. There are so many wonderful choices in fabrics today that can do so much for both the looks of your sofa and its wearability.

Also remember in today's decorating, sofas don't have to be confined to just the living room. Perhaps the right sofa could also be beautiful, and useful, in another room too.

In any case, feel free to drop by and let us help you choose from the many furniture lines available to you. Century, Henredon, Pearson, Lane, Leathercraft and Bassett are just a few. We are here to assist you, and help you get furniture that you will be happy with.

Rebecca Musick, Randy Wiseman wed in double ring ceremony

MR. AND MRS. RANDY JOE WISEMAN
(Photo by Ted Bigham)

Rebecca Ann Musick became the bride of Randy Joe Wiseman of Sudan in a double ring ceremony at 6 p.m. May 25 in the 37th Street Church of Christ. Gordon Musick, father of the bride, officiated at the ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Musick of Snyder and Mr. and Mrs. Pudd Wiseman of Sudan.

Accenting the altar was one 15 light rainbow candelabrum entwined with greenery and flanked by two nine light candelabrums enhanced with greenery and pink and dusty rose silk flowers.

Penny Wolfe of Snyder, friend of the bride, and Sue Menzer of Slaton, friend of the bride, served as candlelighters. They wore matching ensembles of dusty rose with matching lace overlay. Matching silk ribbons tied at the waist to enhance the natural waistline. Corsages fashioned of white carnations highlighted the dresses.

Musical selections were preformed by an acappella choral group composed of members of the 37th Street Church of Christ and Eastside Church of Christ. Steve Fisher served as director.

Members of the group included Kelly Starnes, Aleta Long, Jennifer Goodwin, Barbara Eicke, Donna Pemberton, Janna Tate, Charlie McCormick, Jason West, Van Branson, Don Osborn, and Kevin Tate.

The selections included "A Common Love", "Father Hear the Prayer We Offer", "Be With Us Lord", "Psalm 19", "For Baby (For Bobbie)" and "More".

As the choir sang "The Twelfth of Never", the candles were lit. The wedding party entered as they sang "Follow Me" and the newly wedded couple left the church as the the choir sang "The Lord Bless You and Keep You".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a formal length gown of taffeta overlaid with sheer netting. The bodice was encrusted with Venice lace accented with pearls and featured a scoop neckline. Tiny self-covered buttons adorned the back of the gown.

Long sheer sleeves fastened with matching buttons ended in cuffs fashioned of the same type lace with accents of pearls.

The softly gathered skirt swirled into a chapel length train with the hem of the gown and train adorned with Venice lace.

The fingertip length veil of bridal illusion was softly gathered to a Juliet Capulet fashioned of Venice lace and accented with pearls.

To complete her ensemble, the bride carried a cascading bouquet fashioned of white and dusty rose silk roses nestled in a bed of white satin ribbon. Baby's breath in dusty rose and white complimented the arrangement which was gently secured with dusty rose silk streamers.

Sherry Nixon of Midland, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. Bridesmaids included Linda Wiseman of Sudan, sister of the groom, and Tracey Westmoreland of Snyder, friend of the bride.

The bride's attendants wore matching floor length gowns fashioned of dusty rose taffeta. The bodice featured a sweetheart neckline outlined in self-ruffles. Puffed sleeves added interest to the bodice.

The natural waistline was highlighted with a self-tie which fastened in a bow at the back.

They carried matching bouquets fashioned of dusty rose silk roses accented with pink carnations and baby's breath. Streamers of silk ribbon secured the bouquets.

The groom was attired in a silver colored tuxedo accented with a silver cummerbund in darker silver and a matching bow tie. His boutonniere was designed with a dusty rose colored silk rose nestled in a bed of white carnations and highlighted with baby's breath.

Kevin Fisher of Lubbock, friend of the groom, served as best man. The groomsmens included Kenneth Dixon of Texline, friend of the groom, and Dale Johnson of Sudan, friend of the groom.

They wore matching silver tuxedos accented with cummerbunds of dusty rose and matching bow ties. The boutonnieres were fashioned of mixed flowers done in dusty rose and pink.

The bride's mother selected a floor length gown of dusty rose. The bodice featured spaghetti straps. A sheer, short sleeved lace jacket of dusty rose completed the ensemble.

The groom's mother chose a floor length dress of cranberry colored chiffon over crepe. Matching lace highlighted the bodice and natural waistline.

Both mothers wore matching corsages of fresh flowers done in mixed colors surrounding pink carnations. Accents of baby's breath added interest to the corsages.

As the couple was leaving the altar, they paused and kissed their mothers.

The registry table was covered with a white eyelet cloth gathered softly around the table top and secured with pink satin ribbon which was woven through the lace at the edge of the table. A bouquet of small silk flowers in dusty rose and pink nestled in a silver vase flanked the bride's book.

Sue Menzer and Penny Wolfe, candlelighters, registered the guests.

Special guests included Mr. and Mrs. James Burkett of Dora, N.M.; Mrs. Willie Musick of Clovis, N.M., grandparents of the bride; Mrs. Nell Gentry of Sudan, grandmother of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Wiseman of Sudan; Mr. and Mrs. Dale Young of Lubbock, aunt and uncle of the groom; and Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Gates of Melrose, N.M., aunt and uncle of the bride.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the Family Center of the building.

The bride and groom and their parents formed a receiving line as they greeted the guests for the reception.

The bride's table was covered with a white eyelet cloth accented with lace. Silk ribbons of dusty rose and pink adorned the corners and center along the edges of the table.

The centerpiece was an arrangement of dusty rose and pink colored silk flowers nestled in a silver bowl. Two silver candlebrums accented with pink candles flanked the arrangement. A crystal punch bowl and appointments completed the setting. Mr. and Mrs. Dale Young, aunt and uncle of the groom, made the punch.

The three tiered wedding cake was done in solid white and was designed by Marsha Carpenter, friend of the bride. The top tier was gracefully supported by columns with miniature white swans nestled between. The top tier was adorned with a wedding arch supporting silver wedding bells suspended from the center. Lace adorned the arch.

Sue Menger and Penny Wolfe assisted the guests at the bride's table.

The groom's table was covered with an ecru colored cloth over burgandy. A chocolate cake, heart shaped mints and glazed nuts were served. A brass coffee urn and appointments added interest to the table. A hurricane lamp complete with a lighted pink candle nestled in a bed of dusty rose colored carnations served as the centerpiece.

Judy Wiseman of Sudan, cousin of the groom and Marie Withrow of Sudan, friend of the groom, assisted the guests.

Other members of the houseparty included Mrs. Chuck Wolfe, Mrs. I.E. Martin, Mrs. Charles Anderson, Mrs. George Clark, Mrs. Don Osborn, and Mr. and Mrs. Dale Young.

Sherry Nixon, sister of the bride, designed the rice bags. They were fashioned of dusty rose and pink silk in the shape of miniature rosebuds and placed in a wicker basket to provide a floral look-alike arrangement.

The couple is currently making their home in Lubbock where they are both accounting majors at Lubbock Christian College.

The groom's parents hosted the rehearsal dinner at The Shack. Special guests included members of the wedding party, the choral group and the grandparents.

A bride's luncheon was hosted by Mrs. Chuck Wolfe and her daugter, Penny, in their home on the day of the wedding. Special guests for that function included the bride, her matron of honor, the bridesmaids, both mothers, grandmothers, sisters and sisters-in-law.

On May 11 a shower was held for the honored couple in Sudan in the home of Betty Withrow.

Song in Composer's Head Is Hard to Get on Paper

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a composer of music—but I don't know the first thing about writing down what I have in my head. I compose the most beautiful sonatas in my head, but they are lost to the world because I can't get them down on paper.

I am not a kook. I am a talented musician who never learned how to write music.

Do you know a composer I could call on the telephone and sing these songs to? I am not a great singer, but I whistle very well. Thank you for any help you can offer.

MUSIC IN MY HEAD

DEAR MUSIC: Sorry. I don't know any composer, but if there's a school of music in your area, perhaps you could enroll in a course and learn how to translate what's in your head onto paper. Or perhaps someone there could write it down while you whistle. Good luck.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My career is in jeopardy, and I need advice fast. I am a sales representative for a giftware distributor, and I attend many trade shows. Lots of hanky-panky goes on among my colleagues, but I don't express my outrage because it's so accepted.

Recently, Mr. X, my company's biggest account, made a pass at me, and when I refused, he threatened to stop buying from my company. He has not carried out his threat as yet, but I'm sure he will. I feel terrible for my boss, but I can't quit and go to another company because I'll be up against Mr. X again.

If I report Mr. X to his boss, whom I know, he will laugh me right out of his office. What can I do?

LIKES MY JOB

DEAR LIKES: Tell Mr. X to go to H, then file a complaint against him for sexual harassment with your local Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. Don't worry about losing your job. Firing a person who files a complaint is against the law, and a company that does so can be charged for retaliation.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: In reading your column in the Pawtucket Evening Times, I see where a man in Portland, Ore., wants to know where he can purchase spruce gum. He said when he played softball about 20 years ago he used to chew spruce gum to keep his mouth from getting dry. He said it came in little round balls and was sold in boxes and was a lot cleaner than chewing tobacco.

Well, there's a store in Freeport, Maine, that sells it. It's open 365 days a year, 24 hours a day. It's L.L. Bean Inc., Freeport, Maine 04033; phone (207) 865-3111.

I hope this helps.

RICHARD COIA,
PAWTUCKET, R.I.

DEAR RICHARD: Finally! For months I've been on a wild (spruce) goose chase trying to locate the elusive spruce gum. I just phoned L.L. Bean in Maine, and I was assured that it was available; so interested parties may phone and put it on their credit cards.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Ashamed in Amherst," who left her husband and children for a married man. She soon realized she had made a terrible mistake and wanted to die.

Please, please don't despair. I, too, discarded a fine husband and two beautiful children for a man I thought I loved. When life with him became unbearable, I divorced him. I knew I couldn't gain the trust and respect of others until I could respect myself, so I started on that long and lonely road back to self-respect.

I had to change, and change I did, from a selfish, egotistical brat to a mature, responsible woman.

When I did this, I realized that love was not all moonlight, excitement and romance. True love was the forgiveness, understanding and caring my husband showed me when he took me back.

Man designs golf courses

MONTCLAIR, N.J. (AP) — Robert Trent Jones is a golf course architect, the most famous or infamous in the world, depending on how you view this amiable, avuncular-looking man.

If your view of him on a country club veranda, say Oakland Hills, Mich., for instance, is across a lush, verdant green, rolling true towards an inviting cup, Jones might be mistaken for anyone's favorite uncle.

If your view is from the depths of one of his diabolical sand traps, which look like something left over from a B-52 strike, then he comes across as the devil incarnate.

Contrary to the opinions of many — if not most — golf pros (the exceptions perhaps being those also in the business of designing golf courses), this dean of golf course architects does not kick his dog, heap abuse on his caddy or light candles and don symbolic thumb screws on Torquemada's birthday.

His recipe for rejuvenating an aging links like Oakland Hills, where the U.S. Open will be played June 13 to 16, is not taken directly from the Lucrezia Borgia cookbook or Ambrose Bierce's "Devil's Dictionary," although some bogie befuddled journeyman who fails to make the cut will surely entertain such suspicions.

It never will be forgotten among practitioners of this royal and ancient sport that when Jones modernized Oakland Hills for the 1951 U.S. Open, by strategically dumping 400 tons of sand about the premises in 120 agonizing heaps and hollows, only two of the world's igreatest players managed to break par in any of the four days of the tournament. The rest were calling for Jones' head, preferably on a tee.

Ben Hogan, who won by finally breaking par, with a then course record of 67, called the place "a monster," while others complained the bunkerflanked fairways were so narrow "foursomes had to walk Indian file to get to the greens."

Jones, who has designed 450 golf courses in 34 countries around the world, can and does at age 77 smile through the tears and lamentations and score-cad shreddings of professional golfers who come to grief in the sand traps and water hazards that have become his architectural signature. Once a scratch or par golfer himself, he does, however, confess to a bit of chagrin and some guilt feelings when one of his own shots lies buried in one of his own traps on a course he created.

"Why shouldn't I or they be punished for making a poor shot?" he says with a righteous smile, while looking up from the drawing board in his Montclair, N.J., office and defending the Scottish Calvinist view of golf as part of the divine purpose to punish human frailty and mold character through suffering. After all, golf held up to nature's mirror spells flog.

Pride goeth before a fall on your typical Robert Trent Jones hole, which can be played a number of ways: heroically by the pro going all out for birdie, daringly by the low-handicap amateur trying to beat or match par, safely by your average golfer for whom bogie golf is good golf. And, oh yes, the pilgrimage from tee to green should be satisfying or at least scenic enough to keep the daily duffer from kicking in the door of his locker or savoring his most safisfying shots back-to-back at the clubhouse bar.

To Jones' left on his office wall hangs a portrait of the treacherous No.3 Hole at Mauna Kea on the big island of Hawaii, which Jones carved out of volcanic rock and perched on a verdant precipice above the pounding Pacific.

"Water is the ultimate penalty," says Jones, admiring the tropical vista from his swivel chair. "Today's top pros have no trouble blasting out of sand. The immortal Bobby Jones (no relation, but a lifelong friend) said 'Landing in a bunker is like being in an automobile accident; plunking into water is like a plane crash.'"

Hong Kong was ceded to the British as a crown colony in 1841.

The Gentle Breeze of Jesus

"Jesus Christ is the same yesterday and today and forever. Do not be led away by diverse and strange teachings; for it is well that the heart be strengthened by grace..."

Hebrews 13:8-9a (RSV)

The greatest need for everyone in Snyder and Scurry County is to feel the touch of Jesus Christ. Each of us needs to be strengthened by the grace and mercy of Jesus Christ. We do not need strange and diverse teachings. We hunger for the very presence of Jesus Christ. He is the same today as the word of God says He is. He can be touched.

Each reader is encouraged to find that special place of Praise and Worship where you touch Jesus Christ. Being in His presence satisfies! Nothing else does!

Right now, whatever problem you are in the midst of...don't be discouraged. Don't give up! Know in your most inner being...Jesus is the same today! He can touch me! He wants to fellowship with me! He wants to walk with me through my problem! He loves me! Oh, how He loves me!

Queen has good eye for performer

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Britain's Queen Elizabeth II has a good eye for a performer.

When she toured horse farms in Kentucky last fall, she spotted the stallion Alydar as a likely stud and sent five horses across the Atlantic for him to do his duty.

Three of the royal mares are pregnant, British Embassy spokesman Charles Anson said here Thursday.

Alydar ran second in all three Triple Crown races in 1978 and has become a leading sire since leaving the race track.

The other two of the queen's horses were bred to Secreto, winner of the 1984 English Derby, and Northern Baby, both sons of the great Northern Dancer, the world's top thoroughbred sire. There's no impending pitter-patter of little hooves there yet, Anson said.

Jaguar Cars says it produced a record number of automobiles in 1984. It says the 33,437 cars built last year exceeded by 19 percent the 28,041 units built in 1983. Of the 1984 output, 54 percent went to the United States.

Writer began at age five

NEW YORK (AP) — Mary Monroe's mother came up with a stock answer long ago for the relatives, friends, and fellow cotton pickers in Alabama who wanted to know why her little girl was so strange.

She said somebody'd dropped Mary on the head when she was a baby. How else could she account for Mary's "writing madness," a bizarre malady that drove her under the family's shanty to scribble "stories" on the backs of hymn books. She was 5 years old, already a veteran field hand in Choctaw County, in the rural Black Belt of western Alabama.

At 7, Mary spent the summer writing a 400-page biography. The bump on the head story no longer held water with the neighbors, who told Mary's mother she ought to have the girl's head looked into.

Mary's family gave serious thought to sending her to an asylum. Little black girls don't write books, they told her.

Mary Monroe kept on writing.

Through 12 summers and autumns picking cotton, potatoes, stringbeans and apples; through the births of two daughters by the time she was 18; through marriage to a man who tore her neatly typed pages into tiny pieces; through jobs at a car wash, a hot dog stand, and no jobs at all, she kept writing.

She kept writing through years of secretarial work and ridicule from relatives and friends, through rejections from every literary agency listed in Writer's Digest, through so many rejections from publishers that the letters spilled out of her mailbox and into the street in front of her Oakland, Calif., apartment.

This year, 33 years after she was born and almost three decades after the onset of her "madness," Mary Monroe's first novel, "The Upper Room," is for sale at the very same bookstores as the works of her idol, William Faulkner.

And if her mother put it down after a few pages because it had "too many cuss words," and if her sister's only comment concerned the purchase price of the blouse she is wearing in the jacket photo, so be it.

"The main thing is, I feel validated," she says, removing her sunglasses to reveal shining brown eyes. "I feel like a real writer. It's been a nightmare that has ended in a good dream."

"The Upper Room," set in a migrant labor camp near Miami, is the story of Mama Ruby, a huge black woman of superhuman strength and voracious appetite who lays healing hands on friends and wields a switchblade against enemies, a "Godzilla in a half-slip" who considers herself both "in the Lord's fold and the devil's walking stick."

Into her life comes Maureen, a best friend's stillborn baby whose life Mama Ruby appears to save with her healing powers. Mama Ruby absconds with Maureen, whom she considers a gift from God, and installs her in the sanctified upper room of a house far away from her natural mother, where Ruby hopes to keep her forever safe, both from the devil and from would-be male suitors.

"Magnificant, coarse, funny and terrifying," wrote the San Francisco Chronicle. "It marks the debut of a remarkable talent — possibly a great one," said the Chicago Sun-Times.

Ms. Monroe remembers scribbling on scrap paper at 4, before she knew how to read or write. A school teacher who belonged to her church saw Mary trying to write and taught her how to print the alphabet and sound out simple words.

She kept writing into adulthood largely out of anger. "I had to succeed. I could not be defeated. I could not succumb to madness, lest I have to listen to my family say, 'We always said the girl was crazy...'"

To keep herself in writing paper and to finance an occasional candy binge, she wrote for confession magazines, making her first sale at 15. The story was called "I Married a Hairy Old Beast," and it earned her $25.

The family moved to Ohio, where Ms. Monroe graduated from high school, an event accompanied by escalating pressure for her to find a husband. She found one without ever leaving her front porch.

"He used to pass by my house on his way to and from work at the steel mill, and I sat out on the porch reading. One day he asked me if I wanted to go out for some pop and that's how it started. In January of '69, we got married. I was almost ready to deliver.

"My mama knew his grandmother and said she made real good cakes, so she thought I'd done well for myself. The marriage lasted less than a year. He couldn't understand why I wanted to write. He'd come home, get drunk, and tear up my manuscripts."

In 1972, already separated for more than two years but still getting threats from her husband, Ms. Monroe decided to leave Ohio. She remains legally married, having never had the money to buy a divorce.

Mobsters killed during meals

NEW YORK (AP) — These days in New York's Little Italy it is hard to tell the YUPPIES, the young urban professionals with the U.S. Attorney's office, from the YUMMIES, the young upwardly mobile mob mouthpieces.

Both dress in dark business suits set off by regimental ties and linger long over their linguini and lambrusco, savoring tasty points of criminal law in the big government crackdown on organized crime that is on the menu at the federal court house in Foley Square just a few blocks away.

Crime and punishment, like the ever present aroma of garlic and olive oil, mingle so tantalizingly in the pasta palaces along Mulberry Street that it is even difficult to determine at the moment whether Umberto's Clam House, the most storied of them all, is being run by U.S. Attorney for Manhattan Rudolph Giuliani or by Matthew "Matty the Horse" Ianiello.

Matty was at the cash register the night Joey "Crazy Joe" Gallo was snuffed midway through his second order of Umberto's famous shrimp and scungilli salad. The proprietor dove into the kitchen and lay on the tile floor with his hands over his eyes as soon as Sonny Pinto and two out-of-town torpedoes known only as Cisco and Benny came in the side door blasting. The next thing he knew, Pete "The Greek" Diopoulis, a Gallo bodyguard, was pushing a gun in his face and pulling the trigger, but only clicks came out because it had been emptied trying to save Joey.

As far as Umberto's future was concerned, it was touch and go there for a minute. Joey, with two slugs in his spine and another in the main artery leading to his brain, staggered out the Hester Street door and almost died in front of a rival restaurant that might have caught on with tourists who have this strange compulsion to dine at the scene of underworld mayhem.

In the narrow streets of Little Italy, where the outsized limousines of gangsters, politicians and lawyers alike meet in democratic gridlock, nothing succeeds like excess.

And Matty, who is under indictment on charges of skimming millions of dollars in profits from his restaurant holdings, went into U.S. District Court the other day with a battery of 14 lawyers, some of them his best customers, to complain about excessive government control of Umberto's Clam House. The feds, working under provisions of RICO, the 1970 Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, had tied up the assets of Umberto's and other alleged mob holdings so tightly that, as Matty's lawyers told Judge Edward Weinfeld, the banks would not honor checks to pay the sales tax and even the salaries of the help.

An agreement was reached in Weinfeld's court unfreezing enough funds to pay essential bills and keep Umberto's going.

A reputed underboss in the crime family of Vito Genovese, which was listed in the recent mass indictments accusing a "commissione" or commission of ruling New York crime, Matty has lent a tourist aura to a number of restaurants.

He owned the Broadway Pub when Bobby Darrow, a Gallo hitman, wasted the night manager, mistaking him for Matty. Ianiello also had a piece of the Peppermint Lounge, the birthplace of "the Twist," a dance craze that was not inspired by Abe "Kid Twist" Reles, who fell or was pushed to his death from a sixth floor room in the Half Moon Hotel in Coney Island while under police protection as a key witness against Murder Incorporated.

The Half Moon never caught on with the tourist trade the way nearby Scarpato's did when Giuseppe "Joe the Boss" Masseria was invited to a last supper that was also attended by Charles "Lucky" Luciano and Vito Genovese, who repaired to the men's room just before the shooting started.

Joe and Mary's in Brooklyn had a vogue among voyeurs of violence after Carmine Galante, a rising don with a terminal case of the twofers — too far, too fast — was separated from his insalata mista and his head (with teeth still clenching a cigar) by a shotgun blast while lunching on the back patio. Then the neighborhood deteriorated and became unsafe after dark, unlike Lower Manhattan's Godfather country, which is a quiet, low crime area save for occasional gangland percussion sounds.

The action moved over to Monte's on Carroll Street, much frequented by the flower and power of Brooklyn's judiciary and political bosses, as well as by Carmine "The Snake" Persico, the Brooklyn racketeer convicted after informer Joe Valachi testified before a U.S. Senate investigating subcommittee.

LaStella, on Queens Boulevard, became the "in" eatery, and so remains, after 13 lunching businessmen, among them Joe Colombo, Carlo Gambino, Tommy Eboli and Carlos Marcello, looked up from their linguini with white clam sauce to behold uninvited guests from the D.A.'s office, who charged them with the unsociable sin of consorting with known criminals, namely each other. The diners were hustled out the door so fast nobody paid the check.

In recent years Chinatown has been overflowing into Mulberry Street, and the King Wah restaurant for a time was heavily patronized by dudes in wide lapels and alligator shoes seeking a change of menu if not venue. This is where Sonny Pinto and Phil "Fat Funghi" Gambino were squeezing chopsticks with the two out-of-town hit men when word came that Joey Gallo had just entered Umberto's up the street. After Crazy Joe was blown away, the King Wah suddenly closed because owner Domenici Pallatto and his Chinese wife, Mona, mysteriously disappeared, allegedly in the bottoms of those two-tiered coffins that Joe "Bananas" Bonanno, a steady customer and former Brooklyn funeral director, is credited with inventing for the disposal of unwanted bodies.

Actually Joe Gallo had planned to celebrate his 43rd and last, as it turned out, birthday at the Luna, the hangout of Westside waterfront boss Anthony Stroll, alias Tony Bender, but it was closed so he opted for the just opened Umberto's.

The sensitive nature of business discussed in some of Little Italy's quaint cafes, trattorias and social clubs is evident from the handwriting found on the wall in the phone booth at the Mayfair Club: "DON'T SAY NOTHING TO NOBODY...THIS PHONE IS TAPPED."

Sightseeing buses to Greenwich Village, Chinatown and the Bowery now include Mulberry Street in their agenda, pointing out the headline hot spots as well as the Shrine of San Gennaro, whose feast day, Sept. 19, is the occasion for a gala 10-day festa and a nightly procession under street arches adorned with decorative lights, flowers and bunting.

Singer visits stricken land

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — Singer Harry Belafonte drove nearly five hours over rough roads to see self-help projects run by this food-short African country and found no one home.

Belafonte, envoy to Africa from the artists who made the "We Are The World" record in aid of famine relief, visited the drought-stricken Shinyanga region 600 miles north of the capital Tuesday.

However, he said Wednesday before meeting with President Julius Nyerere, no Tanzanian official or even curious villager was present to show him around.

An embarrassed Tanzanian government spokesman attributed the mixup to a breakdown in communications.

Above the Fold

By Donny Brown

Nothing gives us the heebie-jeebies like plants run amuck.

Like now, for instance, when continuing rains have swelled our squash plants to an intimidating height.

Their stalks have taken on the thickness of a shotgun barrel, grainy, fibrous and thorny as a reptile's hide.

The wildness of their growth has covered up the neighboring cantaloupe vines and lettuce shoots and are threatening to drown out the blackeyed peas two rows down.

This plus the fact that squash bugs have now taken up residence — thousands of tiny to medium-sized citizens riding the gently swaying stems and leaves like alien beings living in a space colony world.

Our squash plant leaves are beginning to look like hands held open, waving on green arms, searching for something to grasp.

It's enough to make you squirm every time you have to pick produce from the things...something you must do daily when you've got squash producing like the monsters growing in our backyard.

The garden vegetables aren't the only things, of course.

In a side corner of the house — an area too small for any activity other than growing weeds and stashing the lawn mower — we discovered dandelion stems taller than our five-year-old.

They weren't there two weeks ago, at least we didn't notice them, so the durn things must be up to something.

Years ago, we spent 24 months in Central Texas, literally relocating from country where you might expect 18 inches of rainfall in a year to one where some 34 inches was all too common.

You could feel the St. Augustine grass growing under your feet — a country where the excess of rain speeded up to double-time the botantic clock on plants and bugs.

We left for the weekend one Friday, and on returning Sunday night discovered the front screen door had been encased in tiny cocoons — soft gobs of silk made by thousands of souped up caterpillars.

Suffice to say, we left with relief.

In West Texas, we're used to plants taking their own sweet time. Imagine our reaction if milk cows turned into race horses everytime it rained?

The word for all this stuff is "fecund," meaning fertile or prolific, and fecund is what this country is right now.

But we've lived in West Texas too long to trust any type of greenstuff — garden vegetable to alleyway weed — that is growing at this rate of speed.

And as for our squash plants, we're fixing to go buy some garden dust for those bugs. And if those overgrown chlorophyll-filled cell walls attempt to give us any stuff, we're going to take a garden hoe and decimate the whoopee out of them.

Price of protection

By Don Graff

After cars, textiles, steel — and we're just getting started — it comes as no surprise that protection from foreign competition is being prescribed for what ails yet another American industry.

This time the patient is shoes. The U.S. International Trade Commission is recommending restrictive quotas on most imports for five years to give domestic producers time to modernize, cut costs, save jobs and become competitive again. The very lowest-cost footwear, retailing at $5 or less, would be exempt.

In an unusual twist, the proposed quotas would be administered under a licensing system with import rights being auctioned off to the highest-bidding foreign producers. Proceeds would go to the U.S. Treasury.

There is no question but that American shoe manufacturers, like other traditionally labor-intensive industries, are in a bad way. The more than 1,000 plants that existed as recently as 1970 have declined to barely 500. Something like 100 closed last year alone. Imports have reached 71 percent of the American market, with the overseas competition coming primarily from Taiwan, South Korea, Spain and Italy.

But there is some question as to how much help quotas may turn out to be. And no question at all that, succeed or fail, they will be expensive.

Susan W. Liebeler, the only one of the five ITC commissioners to oppose the quota recommendation, says American consumers may be paying as much as 18.8 percent more for imported shoes and 11.4 percent for the domestic product as a consequence. She sees the total additional cost for footwear reaching $1.28 billion a year. Even if 26,000 jobs should be saved, as the industry argues, it would be at an annual cost to the public of $50,000 for each job, which pays only $14,000 to the worker holding it.

As a good deal, that has the ring of Pentagon-style cost-management.

Doreen Brown says the Liebeler figures are right on target. The president of Consumers for World Trade, a Washington-based consumer lobby, Ms. Brown says experience amply demonstrates that when quotas or other restrictions are applied to imports, the domestic price of a product shoots up.

In this case, she foresees the virtual disappearance of low-cost footwear. And she is not talking about the under-$5 shoe that would be exempt from the quotas but those costing $10 or so that many Americans on limited budgets can afford.

She is also concerned about the proposed license auction, a rarely used device that other industries seeking protection may be encouraged to press for. It appears to minimize costs by producing revenue for the government — an estimated $1 billion or more in the case of shoes. But it is actually the perfect "hidden tax," according to Brown.

"The consumer still pays, as he always does, but roundabout, without really knowing what it's all about," she says.

The quota recommendation has gone to the president for acceptance, rejection or modification by Sept. 1.

Ms. Brown says she is usually wary of making predictions, but admits to being pessimistic in this case because it is the second time around for shoes. The president may feel he has to act.

The ITC rejected an industry request for protection a year ago, but reconsidered it at the urging of the Senate Finance Committee. It may be only coincidental that much of the industry is concentrated in a few large-vote states.

In any case, Doreen Brown points out the arguments for protection advanced by the shoe industry — as by the auto and others before it — are inherently contradictory. Modernizing to meet the competition means high-tech retooling which means fewer jobs.

"You either have to make it a job argument or a competing argument," she says. "You can't have it both ways."

SDN Week in Review

SUNDAY
June 16

It was reported Sunday local law enforcement agencies last week secured a judgment allowing the seizure of property — in this case, an automobile — "owned or used" by individuals convicted of the sale or delivery of drugs.

And District Attorney Ernie Armstrong said he expects it to be the first of a number of civil judgments filed here to allow such seizures.

With completion of the senior citizen housing project approximately one month away, seven housing units remain unfilled of the 24-unit complex comprising Golden Terrace Village.

It was reported Sunday that project sponsors have gone through the initial list of 33 applicants for residency and other individuals interested in applying are now urged to do so.

MONDAY
June 17

In response to water conservation measures asked by city officials during the weekend, Snyder residents held back their water use to approximately 3 million gallons per day during the weekend, it was reported Monday.

As of 10 a.m. Monday, some 10 million gallons had been run through the water treatment plant since Saturday just before dawn — approximately 4 million gallons of this directed toward storage facilities here.

Joann Shaw, Snyder's record-holding glider pilot enthusiast, is currently featured in the June issue of Texas Monthly magazine, it was reported Monday.

Titled "On The Wings of The Wind," its author — Stephen Harrigan — also has a Snyder connection as the son-in-law of Bill and Margie Line.

TUESDAY
June 18

Snyder chamber directors approved Tuesday setting an annual meeting date for the 400-plus members of the organization, a gathering now tentatively set for the latter part of September.

It will be structured along the lines of a corporate annual meeting and was described Tuesday as another "communication tool" between the chamber board and the members they represent.

WEDNESDAY
June 19

Chamber directors are now seeking an "umbrella" liability insurance policy specifically related to the upcoming July 4th events here.

As of Wednesday, however, chamber inquiries had not produced bids from insurance companies providing such policies — generally considered "riders" above basic insurance coverage.

A called executive session of directors is now planned next Wednesday and the indication is the board will be updated regarding liability coverage at that time.

Wednesday marked the 46th anniversary of the most devastating flood ever to strike Scurry County — the June 19, 1939 deluge that caused the loss of one human life plus the destruction of some 50 to 75 homes here.

A nine-member budget committee was announced Wednesday for Scurry County United Way — a group which will now consider fund requests totaling in excess of $110,000 submitted to the local volunteer effort.

THURSDAY
June 20

Repairs were completed around 3 a.m. Thursday to a leaking clamp connection at the city's newly installed section of 21-inch water main line.

The work entailed shutting off the flow of water from Lake J.B. Thomas — the second time within a one-week period the city was mainly dependent on its stored reserve of water.

A new Snyder High School band director was hired Thursday — Walter Reneau of Pecos, who will assume his duties here effective August 1.

The 37-year-old Reneau is an Odessa native and has served as head band director at Pecos High School for the past five years.

Directives passed in Austin last summer guided teacher salary decisions reached Thursday night in Snyder. And for local teachers, the net result will be a one "step" pay raise next school year which will equal $1,390 for those with bachelor degrees and $1,420 for those with masters.

The decision followed guidelines of House Bill 72, which directs that this coming school year a "one step" teacher pay raise be granted.

As now projected, the teacher salary portion of the 1985-86 school budget will total some $10.2 million. This compares to last year's total of some $9.7 million — an overall increase of approximately 5 percent.

Can sex become a real addiction?

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Please don't think this is a silly question. A friend showed me an article that claimed people can get addicted to sex. Is this true? I love sex — I even masturbate three times a day — and I'm worried. Any advice?

DEAR READER — "Addiction" is a poor term to use in explaining people's desire for sexual gratification. The word implies a physical dependency that, by and large, more properly describes a person's need for a chemical compound.

I think a better expression would be "compulsion." This refers to repetitive behavioral patterns that people engage in trying to meet inner needs.

Doctors have traditionally believed that only they and the church are valid determiners of what is "normal" sexual behavior. If the Kinsey Report and the work by Masters and Johnson had cultural value, it was surely the revelation that "normal" sexual activity encompasses an astounding variety of responses. I doubt that many practicing physicians today would have the nerve to define sexuality in narrow terms. However, some points are worth emphasizing.

Sex that exploits another person is not good sex, nor is sex that is dangerous or harmful to others. If people "use" sex, that attitude can be counterproductive. Sometimes people use orgasmic release as a way to cope with anxiety. Such anxiety is more appropriately handled by addressing its cause, rather than using sex as a temporary respite.

If I were you, I would stop worrying about sex. That worry itself may add to your level of apprehension. Masturbating three times a day won't physically harm you, unless your genitals become sore and irritated. However, I wonder if your time might be spent in more useful and productive activity.

You may have begun to suspect that your masturbation is taking on the qualities of a compulsion. If so, you might consider whether you want to be a victim of your behavior. I suspect that you would feel better about yourself if you expended more energy in growth-promoting activities at work, at school or with your friends. If that fails, try cold showers.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Is it always necessary to take a potassium supplement while taking diuretics to control blood pressure? Is it enough to eat foods that contain high potassium levels?

DEAR READER — Most, but not all, diuretics cause potassium depletion. Your doctor or pharmacist can advise you if the one you are taking is a potassium-waster.

Depending on the amount of diuretic you use, high-potassium foods may supply enough of the mineral to satisfy your needs. However, modern diuretics are powerful and you may be excreting more potassium than you are able to replace from your diet. Taking potassium pills (or liquid) is a good way to prevent potassium deficiency. A simple blood test will indicate if you are potassium-depleted; your doctor will probably want to order one at periodic intervals.

Premenstrual syndrome (PMS) has finally become widely accepted as a valid medical entity. But it certainly took a long time for male physicians to appreciate the profound hormonal changes that affect women, both before and during their menstrual periods.

During their reproductive years, almost all women will experience premenstrual emotional instability, fatigue, bloating and a craving for certain foods — sweets, in particular. As many as 30 percent of women will suffer concomitant increase in body water that is seen as edema (swelling of arms and legs) and diminished urinary volume.

As a result of water retention, some women will complain of difficulty breathing and an increase in the frequency and severity of asthma attacks. Occasionally, women may cough up blood before their periods; this phenomenon is thought to be due to increased capillary fragility and bronchial irritation caused by increased lung water.

A few women may be disabled by severe depression and powerful emotional swings that are associated with antisocial behavior. Rarely, premenstrual females may commit crimes or act irrationally.

PMS is often treatable. Mild cases usually respond to dietary salt restriction, with or without the use of diuretics — medicine to stimulate excretion of excess water. Women with resistant forms of PMS may require hormone therapy, which should always be administered under the supervision of qualified obstetrician-gynecologists.

Premenstrual syndrome is neither pleasant nor amusing for the women experiencing it, who seem to be under the uncontrollable influence of mysterious and invisible hormones manufactured by their own bodies. However, the medical aspects of PMS, as defined by a male-oriented profession, are often amusing.

For example, in the 1920s and 1930s, a Dr. Macht and his colleagues reported in several publications that menstruating women demonstrate a toxic substance (menotoxin) in their blood and tissues. The investigators claimed to have discovered that this undefined compound has a deleterious effect "on living plants, on germination of seeds, on the growth of flowers and on the respiration of leaves." They agree with the findings of a British physician in the 1800s who concluded that "there appears to be some physical basis for the legal or systematic regulation in various industries prohibiting women who are menstruating from engaging in the manufacture of perfumes, tending of silkworms and gathering mushrooms."

Now, I could go for that. It makes perfectly good sense to me. Menotoxin is obviously a univeral poison that men's so-called better halves (better than to have not!) are spreading around, toxifying and generally causing mischief among the menfolk. When my salad wilts, my daffodils wither, my mushrooms shrink, I know whom to blame.

No wonder so many perfume conglomerates are run by men. The concept of menotoxin (better, womenotoxin?) could explain all the unutterable divisions that separate the sexes. I, for one, am relieved to learn that it is not my fault. So in the glorious American tradition of evading responsibility, I am now freed to place the burden of all my male-female disagreements right where it belongs: on the internal workings of my mother, whose menotoxins affected me when I was just a young sprout. But that's an aspect I think I'll skip just now.

Equality for women is simply a cruel and unsubstantial fantasy. As long as women are contaminating everything around them, they have no hope of equal anything. And, guys, it's their problem. Right?

I wonder where my silkworms are. Why isn't my laundry done and my supper on the table? Could I have said something to offend?

Send your questions to Dr. Gott at P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101. Due to volume of mail, individual questions cannot be answered. Questions of general interest will be answered in future columns.

Game aims at peace

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Michelle Alexander, 9, has created a board game she calls "Give Peace a Chance" for a third-grade class project at her school for gifted children in Fresno.

The game is weighted toward compromise by superpowers, with 20 points going to the country that declares itself a nuclear-free zone.

Two players roll dice to move their pieces, carrying flags of the United States or Soviet Union, around the edge of a board divided into eight spaces. At the center is a world map to remind players of the fate they hold.

Players gain two points when they land on a space that says: "Welcome to Geneva, shake hands and smile."

They can add five points when they share an invention that benefits both countries or when they extend an invitation to children from the opponent's country.

The stakes go up to 10 points when players pull troops out of an "important area."

Computerized analysis has a benefited some sick children

NEWINGTON, Conn. (AP) — When 8-year-old Margeir Karlsson walked on crutches across the therapy room at Newington Children's Hospital, he didn't need to speak the strange tongue of his host country. His smile was universally understood.

The boy from Keflavik, Iceland, with tousled blond hair and a missing front tooth, understood some English, but could only say "Hi" and "McDonald's." He comprehended fully, however, that his visit to the United States meant the hope of a more conventional life.

Margeir, born 10 weeks prematurely, was crippled by cerebral palsy. But thanks to the magic of computers and a nine week stay here, surgeons were able to send him home with the promise of a straighter, less spastic walk.

In Iceland, surgeons had lengthened tendons and tightened muscles to achieve some improvement in the boy's gait.

Margeir faced the prospect of many more visits to the surgeon, however, because the traditional method of treating cerebral palsy relies on surgery for only a few muscles at a time. After a lengthy recovery and therapy, doctors typically evaluate their next surgical move. The process can take years and dozens of operations.

With a wealth of information from computerized analysis that was never available before, doctors can now get the same results — sometimes better — in just one or two operations.

"I want you to understand, my son's orthopedist in Iceland is very good," says Margeir's mother, Thordis Thormodsdottir. "It's just that he cannot only take care of cerebral palsy children. He cannot get as specialized as the doctors working here."

During a visit to the United States, Mrs. Thormodsdottir heard about Newington's reputation. She visited the hospital and learned of plans to install a computerized gait laboratory for tracking intricate movements of the body.

Buoyed by the Icelandic physician's approval of her son's treatment here, Mrs. Thormodsdottir contacted the Newington gait lab's director, Dr. James R. Gage, an orthopedic surgeon.

In early September, Margeir flew to Connecticut with his mother.

"We felt that until now, doctors had operated by instinct," Mrs. Thormodsdottir says.

Gage and his staff taped 26 small, reflective balls to various joints and muscles on Margeir's body. An infrared camera tracked the motions of every step the boy took and the data were entered into a computer that gave a detailed printout of each move — all within minutes.

Results obtained from the gait lab can be compared with clinical data used by other specialists to determine the best prescription for a problem.

"For instance, if you went into a hospital with chest pain, you wouldn't expect a doctor to hold a stethoscope to your chest and then perform triple bypass surgery," Gage says.

Margeir is walking better as a result of his treatment at Newington. A month and a half after surgery, his hip was not jerking upward, his feet were not curling under, and his legs, while still weak, were noticeably straighter.

The potential of crippled children walking improved in the 1950s with the invention of gait labs. Until the installation of Newington's computerized version, none was so scientifically advanced as to provide detailed information on a patient's balance, weight distribution and muscle action.

In 1981, Hartford based United Technologies Corp., trying to develop equipment with robotic vision, developed the gait lab equipment for the Newington hospital.

Lab specialists and surgeons now are able to analyze a patient's condition in much greater detail.

Replicas of antique dolls crafted for girls

APPLE VALLEY, Minn. (AP) — The dolls that Mary Lou and Tim Roman love don't come with birth certificates or adoption papers, nor turn into police cruisers with a few twists at the joints. Their translucent eyes, opened wide and haunting, don't cry real tears. And their carefully coiffed curls and braids don't take well to restyling by fidgety 5-year-old fingers.

"And that's the way it should be," says Tim Roman, 21, who with his mother crafts limited edition porcelain replicas of turn-of-the-century dolls. "We're not doll manufacturers. We're doll artisans. We make dolls for gorwnups girls..."

"Like me," chimes in Mary Lou Roman, 48, nudging one of her creation's stray curls into place.

"When you hit 40, you love babies but you're too tired to have your own," Mrs. Roman says. "So you buy the best doll available and hug it and hold it and then put it back on the shelf."

Making the best doll available has been the Romans' goal for the past eight years, since they turned their experience in the family ceramics shop into the specialized art of creating porcelain dolls. The mother and son — with help and encouragement from other members of the family — now work day and evening on dolls they sell to "grownup girls."

"Once you make one doll, you never want to quit," Mrs. Roman says. "We can do it 14 hours a day and just want to go back for more. It's like creating a new child every time you put a face on."

The Romans work on 15 to 20 dolls at a time, first pouring liquid porcelain into molds of antique dolls, then firing the molds in kilns, then putting the dolls through several stages of painting and finishing.

They hand-paint each doll's blushing cheeks, delicate eyelashes and fringe of eyebrows — eyebrows that require more than three hours of meticulous brush strokes per doll.

Sometimes, they add a melancholy tear or two.

The dolls' handblown glass eyes are imported from Germany, and the wigs are made in France from human hair. For some dolls the Romans hire a beautician for special styling such as French braids.

Roman, who also works as a stitcher in the Guthrie Theater costume department, designs and sews the dolls' French taffeta frocks, billowy satin-and-lace wedding dresses, floral silk Russian gowns and other intricate ethnic costumes from cottons, linens, satin, eyelets, velvets, and the "finest lace we can find."

And Roman fashions shoes or high-button boots for the dolls, which are given names such as Lisa Marie, Tatiana and Maria Lucilla.

"You're creating something, and even though it's the same basic face, every doll is a different person," Roman says. "You can improve it to the extent of being a masterwork. It's an art where you can always make the eyelashes better and finer, or the paints better blended."

The dolls, which range in size from 5 inches to 26 inches, are sold in gift shops in Minnesota, Texas, California, Illinois, Oklahoma and Florida, for prices from $180 to $775. Customers buy them both for themselves and as gifts — although sometimes a "gift" takes some time to reach its intended recipient.

"One neighbor supposedly bought one for her daughter, but then wouldn't turn loose of it," Mrs. Roman says. "We've had teen-agers go bonkers over them, as well as grandmothers and great-grandmothers."

Some customers grow so attached to the dolls that they wish they could make them themselves. So the Romans give them a chance with twice weekly classes in which they teach dollmaking neophytes the basics of transforming mud into delicate figurines.

And through both their own creations and their teaching, they try to revive an appreciation of artistic excellence that they feel has become buried in American society.

"We live in a world of fast food, and craft has given way to automation and plastic," Roman says. "Porcelain is a luxury medium, but the closest anyone comes to porcelain these days is their bathroom fixtures.

"We're trying to rejuvenate what was done at the turn of the century — and make it better."

SURGERY? DON'T SMOKE

If you smoke, and are scheduled for surgery, it is wise to abstain from smoking at least 12 hours before the operation. In that time the blood can rid itself of 'carboxyhemoglobin,' which is useless in carrying oxygen from lungs to body tissues, and its effect on the body is like that of anemia. Without smoking, the body can better tolerate the trauma of surgery and anesthesia.

Your Birthday

June 23, 1985

The urge to travel will be strong in the year ahead. You will find a new fun place that will turn out to be a home away from home. CANCER (June 21-July 22) This could be an exciting and rewarding day for you, especially if you're involved in a new venture. Your enthusiasm will get others aroused. Major changes are ahead for Cancers in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Finance is likely to be your most fortunate area today. If you have something on the burner that you think can earn you more money, this is the time to turn up the heat.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) It looks as if you will be luckier for yourself today than for others. Concentrate on advancing your personal objectives.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Follow your charitable instincts today if they urge you to make small sacrifices on behalf of someone who has tried to be kind to you in the past.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Any person who has a good friend can be considered fortunate. You're doubly blessed today because you have two pals you can count on if you need them.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Others may think of today as a day that should be devoted to rest and relaxation, but you can do yourself a lot of good by trying to further your ambitions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A situation may arise today that will put your faith and beliefs to the test. Fortunately, your ideals will prevail.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Today marks the beginning of some favorable changes that could lead to material benefits. What begins to stir will be initiated by an associate.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) This is a good day for you to sit down at the bargaining table. You'll be cagey enough to get a good deal, yet you'll be scrupulously fair in the process.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you see others in need of assistance today, don't wait to be asked to help. The gesture means more if it's of your own volition.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) One of your greatest assets today is your ability to communicate. Even people who usually have little to say will be bubbly in your presence.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You can finalize things to your satisfaction today. If you have a specific problem hanging overhead, press a little harder and eliminate it.

June 24, 1985

Enterprises you've already invested considerable effort in will produce returns in the times ahead. Skim the cream off the top of them before launching anything new.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Carefully screen all proposals presented to you today. It's highly possible they'll contain benefits for you, even though they may not for others. Major changes are ahead for Cancers in the coming year. Send for our Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your monetary aspects continue to look encouraging. You're in a position to add to your resources, but you'll have to work for what you hope to receive.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Companions will find you charming today. You'll fit in quite comfortably, whether you're with a young group or an older crowd.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't be discouraged today if your efforts are rewarded in small portions. Remember, the ladder of success is mounted one rung at a time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Today you may have the occasion to put to practical use something you've learned from a friend. What worked for him or her will work for you too.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) The trend continues to remain propitious for your career. Devote as much time as possible today toward making your mark in the world.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Make it a point today to honor your promises to the letter. This will gain you even greater respect from associates than you already have.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Even though you would probably be more gracious if the roles were reversed, a friend you'll do a favor for today will be as magnanimous as he or she can.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You may have to make a rather difficult decision today. If you're firmly convinced it's best for everyone involved, act in accordance with your judgment.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Get an early start today, but concentrate only on worthwhile endeavors. Rewarding things can be accomplished, provided you put your mind to it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Business and pleasure make a compatible mix today. If there is a commercial matter you want to discuss with another, do it over lunch or dinner.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Major achievements are possible today, but it's likely they'll require a second effort. When you see others beginning to let down, that's the time to push the hardest.

Road causes problems

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — There's a road here that wants to be a river.

So far the county of Los Angeles has spent over $1 million — some say millions of dollars — trying to change the road's mind.

But stubbornly the road goes on, behaving like the unruly child of the mountains above it and the sea below.

One might say, let the road have its way. Hey, let it slip into the sea.

But this is a very important road, old Malibu Road is. And democratic too. Movie stars and show business entrepreneurs jog here. Nurses and school teachers loll on the sunny beaches beneath it. Music headliners and harried businessmen quit the rattle of their lives for the serenity and splendor of the sunsets, the womblike solace of their hot tubs.

It gives one, they say, a sense of humility, having the strength of the mountains to your back and the soulful sea spread out before you.

But real humility comes from dealing daily with the road which is oblivious to such human values, and to the fact that its 2.5 miles carry the price tag of up to $12,000 a front foot, some $16 million.

Biker's shop has tattoos along with tuneups

TIFTON, Ga. (AP) — Leonard American Horse Penley pointed to the demon tattoo taking shape on his partner's back and reflected on the permanence of his artwork.

"A painter can make a mistake. He can rip off the paper and throw it away. But when I put it on, there ain't no picking up an eraser and rubbing it out," said Penley, 31, his arms covered with examples of his work.

Penley, who goes by the name "Horse," and Wayne St. John have opened a motorcycle shop in a ramshackle building on the western edge of this south Georgia agricultural community where bikers can get their bodies covered with skulls, dragons and other macho motifs while a mechanic tunes their Harley-Davidsons.

St. John, a soft-spoken man sporting a beard and pony tail, handles the mechanical end of the business, while his wife, Sandy, serves as a receptionist.

Penley, a Cherokee Indian from Signal Mountain, Tenn., practices his art in a small, sanitary room at the front of the building, away from the grease and grime of the repair shop. The cost of his tattoos starts at $10, depending on the intricacy of the design.

The Vietnam veteran said he had begun tattooing while stationed in Hawaii 12 years ago and found it a suitable outlet for his artistic skills.

"It's a whole lot different than painting," he observed with a chuckle. "I call it living color. You're alive and it's in color."

Penley says he's tattooed doctors, lawyers and women — "a lot of people you wouldn't think had a tattoo" — but most of his clientele are fellow bikers.

Men prefer skulls, dragons and eagles, and eight out of 10 will come back for another tattoo, he noted. Women, on the other hand, opt for butterflies or roses, usually in places that aren't readily seen, such as backs, legs, hips or breasts, said Penley.

Tattoo artists used to be limited to four colors, but with improved equipment and inks, they now can apply up to 35 colors, including some iridescent shades that show up in black light, according to Penley.

In applying an intricate tattoo, which will be entered in competition, to the back of St. John, Penley noted that he works with needles having from one to 14 points, depending on job requirements.

Single-point needles are used to make fine lines, while multipoint needles are used for shading and wider lines.
