DISSENTION HAS SPLIT CITY OF OBERAMMERGAU

Passion Players Under Suspicion As Result Of U. S. Trip

SEEK ACCOUNTING

Fountain Pen Manufacturer, Their Sponsors, Will Investigate

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Seeds of dissension and suspicion have been sown in the soil of ancient Oberammergau, Bavaria, because of dissatisfaction with the financial results of the visit made to the United States last winter by twelve of the principal actors in the passion play, it became known today.

Benedict Stuckl as chairman of the Heimatkunst, the association into which the 1,700 inhabitants of the village have been organized, has visited Frank D. Waterman, fountain pen manufacturer to complain against the treatment accorded the passion players by their American sponsors. He told Waterman, who was one of the first to underwrite the proposal to bring the players here, and who went to the village to invite the actors to America, that although $275,000 had been collected by the American committee, only $10,000 had been turned over to the villagers.

Citizens Dissatisfied.

The citizens of Oberammergau, Stuckl said, were dissatisfied with this amount and demanded a detailed financial statement from the players. This the actors were unable to furnish, as none had been given them, he related. As a result, William Lechner was deposed as chairman of the Heimatkunst and, even the venerable Anton Lang, for thirty years the village's leading citizen, the portrayer of the roll of Jesus Christ in the play, found himself under suspicion.

Herr Stuckl was finally sent to America to obtain a detailed financial statement as he said the statement sent to the players by Michael Francis Doyle, a Philadelphia lawyer, was not explicit enough.

Waterman said he intends to find out "whether there is any justice to the complaints," and that he will call a meeting of the underwriters so that Herr Stuckl may tell them his story. He added that if "I am in any way responsible, I am willing to bear my part."

Promises Accounting.

Waterman explained that the players were brought here by a committee of about thirty men, each of whom put up $1,000 or more as a guarantee, and that George Gordon Battle, the lawyer, was chairman. Mr. Battle, he said, had appointed an executive committee of three eminent men headed by Ludwig Nissen who died recently. Some of those on the American committee were John D. Rockefeller, Jr., W. A. Harriman, Arthur Curtiss James, and Hanley Fiske, president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.

Mr. Battle denied Herr Stuckl's assertions and pointed out that although a $10,000 check was all the cash the passion players took back with them, they in reality derived $100,000 out of their American trip.

At the request of Mr. Battle, Elmore Leffingwel, who acted as secretary of the committee, made public the financial report of the venture, this indicated that the players received $26,000 before coming to America; $21,000 while in America; $16,000 in deposits for future orders for the carvings they were displaying; $3,000 for outstanding indebtedness; $1,000 just before they sailed for home and that, in addition they will receive $14,000 on delivery of uncompleted orders and about $10,000 from goods to be placed on sale here December 1.

"Velvet Murder" Clues In Rich Banker Death Include Gas Poisoning

SAN BERNARDINO, Nov. 27.—(INS)—Gas poisoning, the authorities said today, may have played a part in the mysterious "velvet murder" of Willam R. Fee, wealthy banker, whose body was found with a cigarette between the lips, a sprig of laurel in one hand and a pruning knife in the other, near the mountain cabin of his sweetheart, Miss Mary F. Watkins, pretty Alhambra girl.

Gas Theory a New One

The gas theory was a new one to which the murder investigators turned today, after considering testimony of surgeons at the inquest, which ended with a verdict that Fee was murdered in a combination of strangulation and fracture of the skull, caused by a heavy blow.

That soft, heavy velvet may have been used to strangle the banker or, according to the latest theory, that he was gased to death after being hit on the head, were declared highly probable by physicians. No marks of fingers were found on Fee's throat and there was no evidence of a struggle, indicating that he was smothered in the suffocating folds of velvet or killed with a gas poison, mysteriously administered.

One Lung Collapsed

Only one of the banker's lungs had collapsed, it was revealed in the testimony of the surgeons, bearing out their contention that Fee was first struck on the head and then suffocated. According to the officers, it would be plausible that both lungs should have collapsed.

On the other hand, they pointed out, Fee might have been rendered unconscious, taken to a vacant cabin and placed in a gas filled room to make the cause of his death more misleading.

Price of Cigars For Year To 500 Men Will Put Chest Drive Over, Declares Smith Pleading For Ultimate Success

Community Welfare Fund Lagging More Than $7,000 Behind, Workers Are Told Yesterday; Determined Effort Is In Store For Today.

Do you care the price of a cigar per day for the unfortunate and the needy?

That is the question that is put squarely up to the generous-hearted men of Wichita Falls by Chairman Marvin Smith, as the great effort to raise $52,000 for welfare and charity is lagging more than $7,000 behind the quota.

"Five hundred men giving the price of a cigar per day for 1924 will put this campaign over. How little to ask! The homes that are blessed with the good things of this life, celebrated Thanksgiving day yesterday, but there must have been men and women who asked themselves if they had done anything for others," said Smith. "Surely Thanksgiving must have been sweeter to those thousands of men and women who have done their bit in this great campaign. I don't know how others may have felt about it.

"I have faith in my city and its people. I believe absolutely that there are enough public spirited and generous people here to put this over today. With a quota smaller than most cities of our size we cannot afford to have it go out that Wichita Falls failed when its heart was appealed to by charity.

"I want to thank every captain, every team worker, every speaker, member of the general committee and every contributor for their fine cooperation, but I do want to see the campaign go over the top tonight. Will you help us?"

Members of the United Welfare Campaign committee and all team captains will meet at 9 o'clock this morning at the chamber of commerce to make a final effort to reach their goal of $52,000 for nine charitable and welfare organizations for their work during 1925.

Counting the $650 received in the offering at the union Thanksgiving service yesterday the total is still more than $7,000 short of the required amount.

While thousands of men and women in all walks of life have done their bit, there are some who have shown a very disappointing attitude in the matter, it is declared by some of the business men who have given their time as solicitors. An effort will be made to report the campaign over the top at the luncheon meeting of the chamber of commerce business council at noon today at the Kemp hotel.

Last night as the committee was canvassing the situation a member of the city fire department called up the campaign headquarters and said he would like to give $2 to help Wichita Falls reach its quota and do its duty. Some of the contributions by loyal and generous citizens of modest means have greatly touched the workers and have put to shame some men of means who apparently have tried to see just how much money they could save by cutting their quotas, members of the committee stated.

TROTZKY FACES ATTACKS FROM SOVIET HEADS

Kameneff And Stalin Issue Reports About His Communism

NAMED "MENSHEVIK"

Heresy To Bolshevik Principles Crediated To Lenine's Companion

MOSCOW, Nov. 27.—(AP)—The full text of the reports of Leo Kameneff and M. Stalin attacking War Minister Trotzky have just been published. These reports heretofore have been confined to the inner circle of the communist party.

Trotzky's career, prior to the 1917 revolution and during and after the bolsheviki coup d'etat is carefully surveyed.

Both Kameneff and Stalin, the soviet leaders strive toshow that Trotzky always has acted as a "menshevik" and now has departed from pure bolshevism and party idealism.

He Issued a Book

Kameneff explains that the central committee of the party was compelled to inaugurate a campaign against Trotzky because his recent book, "Lessons of the 1917 Revolution" was being published under the ostensible protection of the communist party and, coming from a member of the party's political bureau, which directs the work of the communist international, the book creates a danger for the party.

It cannot, therefore, Kameneff says, be allowed to pass unchallenged. If no exception is taken to the book, he added, it might be accepted as a manual for young communists and members of the communist international.

Stalin Is Vitrolic

While Kameneff confined his general criticism of Trotzky to his own self-defense, Stalin, who is a member of the executive committee of the communist party, dwells unsparingly upon the war minister's "heresy" and his alleged abandonment of orthodox bolshevik principles. He accuses Trotzky of attempting to take Lenine's mantel for himself. He also urges members of the party to wage a relentless war against the military leader as "otherwise Trotzky's ideas may become the concentration point for all non-proletarian elements who strive to disintegrate the proletarian dictatorship."

No Reprisals Coming

Although Trotzky's friends believe that the present movement is intended to render him politically innocuous, Stalin says he does not favor reprisals or harsh treatment of party opponents. He declares there is no danger in the present controversy of splitting the party, adding "we have only to struggle against Trotzky and eliminate his menshevik ideas."

Normal President Comes To Defense Of School Survey

Birdwell Of Nacogdoches Says Work's Criticisms Correct

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Nov. 27.—The Texas Educational Survey's criticisms of the state education system were defended by A. W. Birdwell, president of the State Normal school at Nacogdoches in the principal address before the meeting of the Texas State Teachers' association here tonight. The report was filed this week with Governor Pat Neff. It suggested closer co-ordination of the state's educational units, the abolishment of at least one institution and generally has been regarded as an extremely frank document.

Declares Criticism Just.

"The criticism of the survey commission is just," President Birdwell said, "and should have serious consideration from the authorities and from the legislature. Texas should follow the advice of the survey staff and seriously attack the whole country school problem. The teachers' colleges should not wait in their efforts to prepare teachers for these schools nor should serious effort to remedy existing conditions in the country schools wait on a supply of trained teachers. The attack should be made all along the line simultaneously."

At another point in his address was summarized teachers' college conditions and needs in Texas, the speaker digressing for a moment to assert: "I desire to state with all the emphasis I command, that so long as the rural schools are cheap schools with short terms, poor equipment and poor teaching, equality of educational opportunity for the children of Texas is a dream.

Declares System Unequal.

"The present condition operates to commit one group of our citizenship to a condition of permanent inferiority, than which no greater evil can exist in a democratic republic."

Of teachers generally, Professor Birdwell declared, "we have too long assumed that a knowledge of history carries with it the ability to teach history, that a knowledge of mathematics implies the ability to teach it. We cannot depend wholly upon academic training; we dare not rely wholly upon experience, but the utmost confidence is justified when we have a sound academic training plus a thorough knowledge of the science and the art of teaching plus experience based on fundamentally correct theory and the most approved practice."

Sad Thanksgiving Holds Sway at Pastor's Home Scene of Furnace Death

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 27.—Sadness prevailed this Thanksgiving in the Sheatsley home.

It is the first Thanksgiving since the family group was formed over 20 years ago that the mother was absent from her accustomed place around the fireside and table.

In keeping with the spirit, county prosecutor King, and other officials, who are seeking to clear up the death mystery, suspended their investigations for the day.

The Rev. C. V. Sheatsley and his two sons and two daughters arrived at the parsonage late Wednesday from Paris, Ohio, where they had been visiting since the burial there of Mrs. Sheatsley last week.

"I am willing to discard the theory that my wife committed suicide whenever the evidence warrants" said the Rev. Mr. Sheatsley, "but until definite evidence is obtained proving she was murdered I will continue to think she took her life. I would rather believe that she was murdered."

Close students of the activities of the authorities today are disposed to believe that these officials are reverting to their early theory that Mrs. Sheatsley met death either through suffocation or strangulation.

The officials seemingly place no credence in the theory that Mrs. Sheatsley may have been murdered by some man or boy who had a grudge against the Rev. Mr. Sheatsley.

This so-called "vengeance theory" was built up on rumors that Mr. Sheatsley punished an orphan some years ago while the pastor was with a Pittsburgh orphanage and that the disciplined youngster had threatened to "get" the pastor; also that a Hindu became angered because of an address delivered by the Rev. Mr. Sheatsley a number of years ago at Detroit after the pastor had returned from Indiana.

To newspapermen Rev. Sheatsley stated the willingness of himself and of all his children to co-operate with the prosecutor and other investigating authorities in an effort to solve the death mystery. They would confer with the prosecutor any time if he desires to question them again, he said.

PROMPT MEASURES TAKEN

LONDON, Nov. 27.—(AP)—The British authorities in Cairo have taken into their own hands drastic measures to suppress possible nationalistic plottings by the arrest of four prominent members of the party organization headed by former Premier Zagloul Pasha. Those arrested were Nekrashy Bey, a secretary in the ministry of the interior in Zaglouf's cabinet; Abdul Rahm Fahmy, one of Zaglouf's closest political assistants, Makram Obied, a prominent member of the national delegation and Barakat Pasha, who was Zaglouf's minister of the interior.

According to statements in official quarters, in London tonight the men were arrested as leaders in an underground conspiracy against British interests which probably was partly responsible for the murder of Sirdar Stack and which, if left unhampered in its activities might result in further unfortunate incidents.

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 27.—Dedication of Texas new memorial stadium here today was accomplished successfully with the aid of Baptismal ceremonies not on the officail program. And tonight, the Austin city jail, like the Austin cafes and hotels, had more patronage than it could comfortably handle.

Threats of peace officers here that liquified Thanksgiving cheer would be strictly taboo were made good, apparently. By actual count 43 men were locked up for carrying excessive stimulation on their breath or on the hip, and 16 of them gave the whole crowd a kick during the third quarter of the game when they were lined up and marched out in full view of the vast stands.

A dozen Texas rangers formed an escort for the inebriates.

Rhinelander Girl Will Fight Suit Brought By "Kip"

Colored Man's Daughter Refuses To Give Her Heir Up, She Says

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—(INS)—Alice Jones Rhinelander, bride of Leonard Kip Rhinelander of the "Rhinelanders of New York," will "fight to a finish," the annulment suit started in White Plains by her husband, counsel and family of young Mrs. Rhinelander declared today.

Attorneys for Leonard Kip Rhinelander said the action begun on the ground that his wife "falsely represented herself to be white and denied she was of colored blood," was instituted by young Rhinelander on his own initiative.

The papers in the suit were filed by Leon D. Jacobs as lawyer for Rhinelander. The bride, reported by friends to have gone west with her husband, returned to the New Rochelle home of her father, George Jones, jitney driver, who admitted to "colored blood" on his naturalization papers.

SAYS KIP "CAME TO"

Young Rhinelander Acted Entirely On His Own Initiative.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 27.—Alice R. Jones Rhinelander today is defendant in a suit brought by her husband, Leonard Kip Rhinelander, a member of one of New York's oldest and wealthiest families, for the annulment of their marriage.

The action is based on the contention that the wife fraudulently represented herself to be white and denied she had any negro blood.

Shortly after being served with papers in New Rochelle yesterday, Mrs. Rhinelander engaged counsel. Her family announced she would fight to retain her status as Rhinelander's wife.

Rhinelander, according to his counsel and legal representatives of his father, Phillip Rhinelander, acted entirely on his own initiative in bringing suit. His family, the spokesmen said, had no fore knowledge of the legal step, but would be delighted to hear he had "come to his senses."

TEXAS DEFEATS A. & M. IN LAST QUARTER 7-0

Longhorns' Playing For Surpasses Previous Season Performance

AGGIES PASS POORLY

Tendency Of Farmers To Bat Ball Into Air Accounts For Loss

Play by play story of the game on sports page.

MEMORIAL STADIUM, AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 27.—(AP)—The shades of Louis Jordan and Pete Edmond, immortal Longhorn football players of other days who fell on the battle field in France, must have been with the Orange and White eleven Thursday, as battling superbly it turned back a great Texas Aggie team and won 7 to 0. Coach Stewart's men played inspired football, far surpassing their performances in other games of the season.

Tendency of Coach Bible's backs to bat forward passes into the air, rather than to the earth cost them the game. Once Captain Marley of Texas gathered in the ball on such a play and carried the pigskin to the Aggie 8-yard line. And in the final quarter, Allen, Texas right end, clutched the ball after it had been batted into the air by two Farmer backs, and raced 30 yards for the only touchdown of the strife.

Score Came Suddenly

Texas' score came with breath taking suddenness. With the ball on his own 45-yard line, Stallter, substitute Longhorn, shot a pass down the field. Allen, coming in at top speed, gathered in the oval that had been touched by two Farmer backs and sped 30 yards to the touchdown. Fred Thompson kicked goal.

A great back to the wall stand in the first quarter infused the Orange Jersey players with a confidence that played a big part in their ultimate victory. The Texas center passed poorly on his own 20-yard line and the ball was recovered by Irvin, Aggie tackle. Berry made a yard through tackle; Dansby passed for a 7-yard gain to "Mule" Wilson; Wilson and Berry then alternated in ramming the ball to the Aggie 2-yard line. On fourth down and goal to make Wilson was stopped in a thrust at left tackle.

Those Who Starred

For the Longhorns, Captain Marley, "Red" Sprague, K. L. Berry, Allen, Wright, T. Thompson, F. Thompson and Stallter were outstanding. For the Aggies, "Mule" Wilson, Berry, Waugh and Allison played the best football.

Talk of Horseshoes

More than 35,000 thoroughly thrilled and surprised grid enthusiasts slowly jammed their way out of the stadium excitedly talking about Texas U. horseshoes after the greatest victory scored over A. & M. by the Longhorns in many years.

In the stadium those begrimed men of the Orange and White fought for possession of the balls that Allen raced across the goal line with after a 40-yard dash, bitterly battled their way to victory in the face of formidable odds and did not think of horseshoes. To have won the greatest game of games was enough for them.

And those Longhorns, rated as the underdogs, clearly outfought the fighting farmers from College Station in three quarters of the contest. The Longhorns were not fortunate—they deserved to win.

On three different occasions a varsity wingman or a varsity back was loose on the receiving end of forward passes, merely to fumble the elusive pigskin when there was a clear field and touchdown to go. They had to complete one of those passes sooner or later. The Longhorns were due. Those who talked of Longhorn horseshoes and Longhorn luck failed to remember the great punting of Stud Wright and Fred Thompson. All they thought of was the final break of the game which gave the Longhorns victory when on numerous occasions victory seemed ever so near merely to be dashed from their outstretched hands by fate.

Those who talked about the horseshoes of fortune could only remember seeing Allen snare the oval when it slipped from the grasp of Aggie players, leap into a race horse stride and sprint 40 yards faster than he has ever run before, faster than he will ever run again. Those who talked of horseshoes could only remember the feeling image of Dansby running a race of defeat to catch Allen. They saw Dansby throw himself through thin air at the body of Allen, but fall to the sod of varsity's stadium, christened in great victory, only a yard or two from the goal line. Across the last white line was Allen. A touchdown had been scored. Fred Thompson place kicked the extra point, making it 7 to 0.

And Thousands Roared.

Across the mighty stadium surged the roar of the thousands, as men and women leaped high for sheer joy at the shattering of all precedent in the gridiron relations of Texas and A. & M., for not since 1918 had Texas defeater the Aggies two years running straight.

The Longhorn band's notes pierced the air of approaching dusk as never before, while in the kahki rows of the Aggie side only grim taciturnity awaited the few remaining minutes of the game. They were hoping against hope for a touchdown, but the maroon had been snapped into defeat and the brawn of the big Orange line tore on down the field before the deadly

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—The gangland strife that came to the fore with the killing two weeks ago of Dion O'Banion, florist-gunman, and resulted in the present concerted drive against gunmen and crime, today reckoned its third victim.

ABILENE WOMAN DEAD OF BURNS FROM GAS STOVE.

ABILENE, Texas, Nov. 27.—Mrs. Grady Cole, 19, died here last night as a result of burns received when her dress caught fire from a gas reflector.

BLOOD BESPATTERED DECK TELLS STORY OF STRUGGLE.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 27.—The liquor-laden gasoline boat Beryl G. found abandoned off the San Juan Island, 60 miles north of Seattle, with blood spattered decks and sides, has led to the arrest of five men in connection with bootlegging operations and the killing of Captain W. G. Gillis, master of the vessel, and his son, William, 17.

The case assumed an international aspect today when the attorney general at Vancouver, B. C., retained special counsel to prosecute those under arrest and Canadian police officials offered a reward of $2,000 each for the arrest of Owen "Cannon Ball" Baker, said to be an ex-convict, and Harry F. Sowash, reputed liquor dealer, said by police to be an ex-Chicago gunman. They are sought to stand trial with the five now under arrest, four here and one in Vancouver.

CAUSE OF EXPLOSION NEVER TO BE KNOWN.

DIX RIVER DAM, Ky., Nov. 27.—The cause of an explosion which killed four men and seriously injured another in the Dix River construction camp last night probably never will be known, an official of the construction company said today. WACO, Nov. 27.—Louis Mashburn, farmer, living nine miles from Waco, was the victim of a Thanksgiving tragedy at 10:30 this morning when his head was practically blown off by four charges from a 30-30 rifle.

The verdice of Justice Padgett, who held the inquest, was that Mashburn came to his death from gunshot wounds inflicted by Walter Johnson, 24 years old. Johnson is also a farmer living near the scene of the tragedy. He refused to make a statement when seen at the county jail.

Mashburn is said to have a wife and two children residing in East Texas.

FIND OYSTERS IN ANDES

Other Fossils of Interest Discovered 12,000 Feet Above Sea Level

BALTIMORE.—Oysters have been found 12,000 feet above sea level. Moreover, they were in wholesome natural condition and were quite mature—something like a few million years old.

Dr. J. T. Singewald, Jr., professor of economic geology at Johns Hopkins university, today unpacked nine hundred pounds of fossils discovered while on the expedition to the Andes mountains, the expedition being financed by Lincoln Ellsworth of Hudson, Ohio, and New York City, who now is backing an airplane flight to the North Pole for the famous explorer, Amundsen.

A Wide Variety of Fossils

The fossils included the ancient oysters and numerous other sea creatures that lived and crawled about while the Andes section of the world was sea bottom.

Some of these creatures look somewhat like tapering pieces of corrugated pipe for vacuum cleaner attachments, others like spiral shells, still others like prehistoric marbles that the children of cavemen have played with.

E. W. Berry, professor of paleontology, stood by while the fossils were being unwrapped and identified the age old animals and plants as their outlines were discerned from the hard rock in which many of them were imbedded. Some, he said, were sea urchins, prehistoric predecessors of the animals like starfish now seen in waters near Maryland.

The spiral-shaped kind, he said, were "twisters — fellows who had stayed out all night and become so mixed up they began chasing their tails in a circle."

Only One of a Group Survives

Large black fossils—those of tapering vacuum cleaner attachment shape, Professor Berry said, were ammonites, "the ancestors of most of the arguments about evolution." These creatures, he said, were at one time members of a family numbering several thousands. Of this wide group, however, only one, the chambered nautilus of poetic lore, has survived to modern times.

The plants shown in the fossils included leaves of ferns and evergreens, their ribs and stems outlined in dull silver or gold against the dark stone. Whereas the animals were found in large numbers at 12,000 feet above sea level, Dr. Singewald said that he found the plant fossils considerably lower, about 6,000 feet. Geologically, they date from the Cretaceous age, the age of the formation of coal in western United States and Peru. Coal formation elsewhere is identified with the Carboniferous age.

Sea Ran Around World

The creatures that Dr. Singewald found in the Andes mountains at one time lived, Professor Barry said, in a sea that ran around the world following the line of the equator, and was the earliest Mediterranean. The types of animals which Dr. Singewald's specimens show to have lived in this sea long ago in South America correspond, Professor Berry asserted, to the fossils found in Northern Africa and in regions of the modern Mediterranean. Similar types, he said, have been discovered in Texas.

COPENHAGEN ITSELF AGAIN.

American Club and Rum Running Methods Restore Night Life.

COPENHAGEN, Nov.—American night club and rum running methods have restored the wild, gay night life which won Copenhagen the reputation of "Paris of the north."

The authorities are losing a hard fight to stop night life by police raids and staggering amusement taxes. All night dancing and drinking resorts are flourishing in order to provide entertainment for the throngs from Sweden, Norway and Finland as well. The police require these clubs to furnish "membership lists," but this is a most flimsy formality. Some lists reveal the names of the chief of police and other leading officials, which were given by jokers.

Rum running in American style has become a profitable business. Denmark produces much liquor, but it is taxed heavily when consumed in the country. Some liquor is put aboard ship as if for export and then is landed at another point on the coast. Caravans of motor trucks run the booze into Copenhagen, although the police watch the roads.

TO STUDY EARLY BRITAIN.

Rare Collection of Documents Goes to Chicago University.

CHICAGO, Nov.—New light on social, economic and industrial conditions in England, in a period of more than five centuries, is expected to be obtained when careful study is made of nearly two thousand documents, once the property of the famous Bacon family. This collection, which has been in England, has been purchased for the University of Chicago by Martin A. Ryerson of this city.

In the middle of the sixteenth century Sir Nicholas Bacon, afterwards lord keeper of the great seal under Queen Elizabeth, acquired a large estate surrounding the hunting lodge of the Abbot of Bury St. Edmunds, which had been in the possession of the monastery since before the conquest. He received the deeds, charters, manor rolls and other documents connected with the property. His eldest son, Nicholas, who was a half-brother of Lord Francis Bacon, acquired by marriage additional landed property and the documents relating to it. The collection was further increased until the end of the seventeenth century, when the properties passed into the hands of Sir Thomas Holt, father of Lord Chief Justice Holt.

Few of the libraries of England possess a collection of equal extent and continuity, it is said at the university. There are more than 1,050 deeds, of which 400 are on vellum. There also are 741 court and compotus rolls of nineteen manors in Norfolk and Suffolk, from the thirteenth to the sixteenth centuries, and also 143 family letters of the Bacon family. Among historical personages who either signed or both wrote and signed some of these letters are Sir Edward Coke, the great lawyer; Lord Chief Justice Holt, Francis Russell, Thomas Sackville and Sir Francis Walsingham, secretary of state to Queen Elizabeth. There is a letter of the privy council dated at Windsor, September 17, 1604, and signed by the Lords Lennox, Suffolk, Northumberland, Cranborne, Balmerino, Stanhope and Sir William Knolles. It is addressed to Sir Nicholas Bacon as high sheriff of Suffolk.

Bad Blood Comes In Yeats Case As Father Gets Angry

He Attempts To Attack Defense Counsel When Georgia Questioned

NOWATA, Okla., Nov. 27.—(INS)—With the state's case ended and the "confession" letter of pretty 14-year-old Georgia Fields before the jury, interest in the trial of the Rev. Jos. E. Yeats of Alluwe, charged with the girl's abduction, centered today in what the defense would be when court reconvened tomorrow morning.

Introduction of the "confession" letter by the state and the story of its contents told on the stand by the girl herself was a surprise to spectators and followers of the case. The "confession" letter, which the girl says was written by the minister on a blank sheet of paper she had signed thinking it an Epworth league order, charged A. W. Fields, the girl's father with having ruined her. It was this charge which had been expected to be the backbone of the defense's case.

Georgia, calm, collected and scornful, denied her father had ever abused her and told of the "marriage" by the church well one night when Yeats told her he had the power to marry her, asked her certain questions which she answered in the affirmative and then told her they were husband and wife. The girl testified a girl friend was a witness. Georgia said she considered herself Yeats' wife, that she did not love him but that when he told her they were going to Texas she considered it her duty to go with her "husband."

Some bad blood developed when the girl's father attempted to attack Attorney Gowdy of defense counsel angered over the type of questions the lawyer was asking Georgia. Attorneys separated them.

Rogers spent a comparatively restful night, physicians said, and they now believe he will recover from the blows administered by a crazed drug addict.

'Keep Stepping' Is One Headliner On Wichita Program

Quintette Of Beauties Offered On Tonight's Vaudeville Card Here

"Keep Stepping" proves an invitation irresistible, when presented in the form of a snappy vaudeville act of that name, by a quintette of beauties in Ed Jains' headlining feature on the Friday and Saturday bill at the Wichita theatre this week. Singing, dancing and clever comedy in the hands of this famous funmaker sparkle quite as brilliantly in the vaudeville field as in other lines.

Carmen Rooker continues to be the featured one of the troupe.

Gay Musical Farce.

Billy Dale places a gay musical farce, "The Merry Widower," on an interesting Parisian boulevard, mixes a pretty ballet dancer, the merry widower and his goodlooking son in with a bit of humor, a splash of sentiment, a bit of a moral and a whale of a loe of entertainment and calls it a "revolsical musical playlet." Whatever the classification, the show they present, and the good company that presents it, succeed in making a merry time of it for everyone.

Dunbar and Turner, an attractive pair, present "Eccentric Conglomerations" and prove themselves artists in novelty song and dance, a widely crowded field that demands distinctive innovations such as these entertainers so evidently possess.

Unique Setting.

Le Hoen Dupreece, famed as expert marksman and established vaudevillians present their act in in a versatile seting of singing dancing and chatter that takes place in a lovely garden spot, "Romona Acres," which titles their number. The novel method of leading up to their marksmanship affords a pleasing and entertaining bit of the evening.

Pressler and Klaiss call themselves "A Lively Duo" and they haven't missed it far. Music, dance, and a good line of patter are their offering. Another man and girl team, each proves himself a finished entertainer and the honors rest equally.

"A Classy Treat," by Ryan, Weber, and Ryan, closes the bill, and the musical comedy artists who present it utilize the best of their brilliant experience in that field, and shoot over the footlights a real combination of sparkling novelty songs and clever dance numbers.

Higher Standard Superintendent Is a School Need

Texas Educational Survey Declares Their Terms Too Short

ONLY 4.2 YEARS

Such Practice Not Allowed For Doctors Or Lawyers, Is Claim

DALLAS, Nov. 27.—Standards for county school superintendents in Texas are too low and their terms too short, the Texas educational survey concludes, according to the fourth part of of the survey's chapter on county school administration. The average length of service by persons in county superintendents' positions is only 4.2 years. No community would follow such a practice with its successful lawyers or physicians, the report said.

This phase of the report is in part as follows:

Urge Higher Standards.

"Distinctly higher professional standards should be required for the office of county superintendent. A commonly suggested standard of training for the county superintendent is college graduation with a year of graduate professional study. This is not too high a standard, but, in the judgment of the survey staff, Texas could not come to it at once.

"If the office is put on a selective basis and adequate salary provided, the state could come to a standard of college graduation with an even higher minimum of professional training. This would be possible as persons would leave the superintendencies of independent districts in sufficient numbers to meet the demand. Persons to be eligible to the office should also have had at least five years of teaching or teaching and supervisory experience combined. A special certificate is recommended. These standards are recommended to become effective when the office of county superintendent is removed from popular election.

"At present the education law empowers the county school trustees to make an allowance for office and traveling expenses of the county superintendent. This must not, however, exceed $300 annually.

"An allowance of $300 annually is not adequate for the office and traveling expenses of a county superintendent who is to do an effective piece of work. It is a short sighted policy to limit the usefulness of the office through failure to make adequate allowance for expenses. Some extremely loyal persons are evidently bearing some of the office and travel expenses from their own resources. The state has no right to expect this. The survey staff recommends that under the proposed plan for the office of county superintendent the county board be given power to determine the budget for expenses of the county superintendent without legislative restriction.

Present System Wrong.

"The present system is designed to remove him from office just at the time when he is coming into his largest usefulness. No community would follow such a practice with its successful physicians or lawyers.

"It is unfair to the educational interests of the country children that the highest educational officer serving them directly should be chosen by popular vote, when experience has shown that, as a rule, the deliberations of a representative board such as the county trustees, result in the election of individuals better prepared to carry the responsibilities of the office. Texas, in common with many other states, needs such provisions as will make for the choice of competent men and women for the administration and supervision of the rural schools. Popular election sometimes results in the selection of such persons, but it is not a system that is especially well designed to secure the result."

Irrigation

WATER.

The Amount of Water Available for the Use of District No. 2.

Paragraph No. 11 of the contract between the two districts reads as follows:

"District No. 2 shall have and be entitled to the prior use of all water available to said system to supply its needs, as a prior right over and above the rights of any and all persons, districts or owners of lands who may acquire a right to the use of water from district No. 1 hereafter, in excess of the amount of water required for the irrigation of 100,000 acres of irrigable land including all irrigable land in district No. 1 and district No. 2."

You will notice that at the present time district No. 2 is entitled to all available water, except of course the 50,000 acre feet reserved to the use of the city of Wichita Falls,

Later on if district No. 1 decides to sell water to other lands up to a total of 100,000 acres it may do so and then district No. 2 would only be entitled to the proportion of water that would eb due them out of a total of 100,000 acres.

No one knows when additional water will be sold. It may never be sold, or it may be years hence. Up to the time such additional water is sold it would seem that district No. 2 is entitled to use the whole amount of water that may be available except the 50,000 acre feet held by the city.

The capacity of the two reservoirs is probably about 600,000 acre feet, subtracting 50,000 acre feet for the city leaves a total available capacity for district No. 2 at present of 550,000 acre feet. There is approximately 43,000 acres of land to be irrigated now. If it was all in cultivation and the reservoirs full there would be available enough water to cover every acre with water about 13 feet depe, or enough water to waterlog the project in one year if it was all put on in one irrigation season.

In effect this paragraph says that there is no practicable limit to the amount of water the farmers on district No. 2 may use.

POULTRY SHOW IS OPENED

Wichita Valley Exhibitors Bring Prize Birds to Iowa Park

IOWA PARK, Nov. 27.—The third annual Wichita valley poultry show is to be held in Iowa Park from Nov. 27 to 29. Final details were discussed and worked out at a meeting of the various show committees Wednesday. Much enthusiasm was shown at the meeting and indications are that this will be a bigger show by far than any yet held by the Iowa Park Poultry association. The secretary reported that he had received more requests for catalogs and entry blanks than ever and inquiries are still coming in.

Greatly Improved

Last year's show was a great improvement, especially in quality of birds shown, over the first show held by the local association, and this year a still greater improvement, both in quality and quantity seems to be assured. This year's show will be held in the old Christian church tabernacle which will afford more room and will make an ideal show room in every respect. The two previous shows held here were both handicapped on account of the small floor space. This year there will be plenty of room and the building is well lighted so that the birds may be seen at their best. The cash money premiums offered this year have been increased and money is also offered for special prizes. Two beautiful loving cups, one for the best solid-colored male bird in the show and the other for the best part-colored male bird will be an attraction for many breeders. These cups were offered last year for the first time and must be won twice in succession by the same breeder before they become his permanent property. One cup last year was won by S. D. Doyle of Wichita Falls, and the other by C. L. Reaves of Iowa Park.

Secure Good Judge

Members of the local association are very proud of the fact that they have secured the services of a well known licensed A. P. A. judge for this show, Mr. Walter Burton, who needs no introduction to the breeders of this section of the country. Mr. Burton will be able to spend a day and a half with the show which will enable him to meet many of the breeders and he will be glad to answer questions about the finer points of breeding. Mr. Burton has agreed to give a lecture for the benefit of the local association while he is here.

Mystery Girl Was Getting Dinner When "Found"

"Can't Be Me," Declares Dallas Woman, Identified By Mother

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—The mystery girl, who has been unidentified in the county hospital since she was found in a faint in the Chicago union station last week, today was said by Mrs. A. J. Cooper, Chicago, to be her daughter, Annie Laurie, married three years ago to Joseph Rice of Dallas.

The girl, however, insisted Mrs. Cooper was not her mother and said her own mother had gray hair. A picture of her daughter, given by Mrs. Cooper to hospital authorities, bore no resemblance to the girl.

Physicians, told yesterday by Dr. Clarence Neyman, psychiatrist, that the girl is shamming, planned complete isolation as the next effort to stir her memory.

Woman Thought to Be Mystery Girl Says Her Mother Is Mistaken.

DALLAS, Nov. 27.—Mrs. Joseph A. Rice, daughter of Mrs. A. J. Cooper, who was quoted as having said the "mystery girl" in Chicago was her daughter, stated at her home here today that she was the daughter referred to.

"I am the girl my mother thinks is the unidentified woman in Chicago," Mrs. Rice said as she prepared Thanksgiving dinner for her husband and two-year-old baby. "Mother is old and is mistaken."

MR. AND MRS. CHAPLIN HOME

Comedian Says They Are "Thankful, Happy, Etc.," On His Return.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 27.—Charles Chaplin sped through Hollywood by automobile today bringing to his Beverly Hills forty-room "castle" a new bride who until Tuesday morning was Lita Grey, his leading lady in films. The Chaplins left the special car in which they came from Empalme, Mexico, the wedding place, at Shorb, in order to avoid a public reception at the station here.

"Just tell everybody we are happy and thankful and glad to be home,' the comedian said.

HE PREDICTED "COOLIDGE"

As Far Back As 1899 This Publisher Said "Lawyer Cal" Would Get it.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Election of Calvin Coolidge as president was first predicted, White House officials believe, by the late T. G. Spaulding of Northampton, Mass.

A clipping from the Hampshire County Gazette of November 20, 1899, quoted Mr. Spaulding as believing "Lawyer Coolidge" some day would be elected president.

The Gazette clipping reads:

"Clark and Parsons Drug store is the chief headquarters for most of the republican politicians these days. It is said that many nominations are started there. Among these is Lawyer Coolidge, who is planning on running for the common council. T. G. Spaulding says of him that he will one day be president."

TONGS NOT READY TO QUIT.

Prophesied Peace Pact Will Come to Naught, Leaders Believe.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Chinatown waited uneasily today for the verdict of tong leaders on the parmanent peace pact between the warring On Leongs and the Hip Sings which was scheduled to be signed.

Whispers heard last night predicted the long continued negotiations for peace would come to naught.

Spokesmen for the tongs said this whispering was caused by the shooting of a Chinese by one of his race in Chicago Tuesday. Another cause was the murder last night of two Chinese laundrymen in Hartford, Conn. Police reserves are being held today in readiness to check any outburst that may develop.

WOMAN AND MAN ARE FREED

Evidence Insufficient, Holds Judge, In Case of Quarrel With Husband.

MUSKOGEE, Okla., Nov. 27—Mrs. Thelma Millsaps and George Manwarring, held on charges of murder growing out of the drowning of Theodore Millsaps, husband of the woman, were discharged late yesterday by District Judge Enloe Vernor, who held the evidence insufficient.

Millsaps was drowned while on a swimming party with his wife and Manwarring. Prosecution witnesses at the preliminary hearing testified the men had quarreled over Mrs. Millsaps.

COOLIDGES TO SEE GAME.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—President and Mrs. Coolidge plan to leave here Saturday morning by automobile for Baltimore where they will attend the annual Army-Navy football game.

ESCAPES, BUT RECAPTURED.

Youth Got Away from Guard He They Went to Buy Newspaper.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 27.—Price Skipwith, 15 years old, one of two boys who escaped from a department of justice agent last night while on their way from Muskogee, Okla., to the District of Columbia house of correction, was recaptured today. The other fugitive, Robert Sanders, 14, is still at liberty.

The boys jumped out of a window of the car when their guard left the train to buy a newspaper. They were under five years sentence each for automobile theft.

FORBES TRIAL GOES OVER.

Former Vet Bureau Head Will Continue Defense Outline Today.

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—Counsel for Colonel Charles R. Forbes, former head of the veterans bureau, and John W. Thompson, contractor, will continue tomorrow the outline of the defense to be offered in their trial on charges of defrauding the government in awarding contracts for veterans bureau hospitals in 1922.

Colonel James S. Easby-Smith, Forbes' attorney, was only half through his opening statement when court recessed yesterday for Thanksgiving day.

The attorney declared that only three of the alleged 32 overt acts in the indictment could possibly be considered suspicious. Contracts in one of these were awarded at the direction of high military officers, he said testimony would establish; another charging the furnishing of advance information to Thompson involved the information widely printed previous to the time it was supposed to be given, and the third, an alleged $5,000 payment to Forbes "was a physical impossibility."

The prosecution has asserted that Forbes, Thompson and three others planned to divide over $1,000,000 of the $17,000,000 authorized by congress for hospital construction.

COTTON.

By Hugh Nugent Fitzgerald.

Cotton is the new money crop of the south. It is estimated that Texas will produce this year 4,650,000 equivalent 500-pound bales. Texas cotton is almost ginned and a very large amount of cotton has been sold. Texas maintains its lead as the banner cotton state of America or the world.

There is an American crop of 12,902,000 bales this year, and more than a third of this crop was grown under Texas skies. Texas produced more than four million bales of cotton in 1923 and the prices paid for the lint and the seed placed almost a billion dollars in the pockets of the growers. There is no reason why Texas should not be as prosperous this year as it was last.

All the war ridden countries of Europe are coming back. Germany was a large buyer of cotton last year and the demand from that country promises to be heavier this year. Russia, outlaw among the civilized nations of the earth, is a large buyer of American cotton and the Russians are paying cash for their purchases through one of the great banks of New York.

There is an economic battle on between the cotton mills of the south and the cotton mills of the north. New England spinners are face to face with a real crisis. Southern competition is growing stronger all the time. Southern mill operatives work long hours and are paid low wages. Now the spinners of New England for self protection they say, are demanding that their operatives shall work 58 instead of 48 hours and shall accept a cut of ten per cent in wage schedules.

All the Maine mills and many of the mills in Massachusetts and New Hampshire and Rhode Island have ordered the ten per cent reduction in the wages of all employes and another cut of five per cent is threatened the coming spring.

New England for seventy years controlled the textile industry in the United States. Last year the southern mills consumed more cotton than the New England mills and the outlook is not encouraging for the gigantic manufacturing concerns which have been in the saddle for more than two-thirds of a century.

All the cotton and the wool of America are produced in the south and the west. Many New England manufacturers and capitalists long ago recognized the handwriting on the wall and identified themselves with the textile industry of the Carolinas, Old Virginia, Georgia, and others of the old slave states.

It was a lucky day for the mill workers of New England when the congress of the United States enacted a drastic immigration act. This has closed the ports to millions of aliens from other countries who were very crazy to reach these shores to better their economic fortunes.

For seventy years the manufacturers of New England and the iron and coal kings of Pennsylvania imported and employed foreign pauper labor under contract.

Now this sweeping tide of aliens has been turned elsewhere, notably to South American countries. All the economists of the world insist that there is a readjustment to take place and that lower wage levels are certain to come in the industrial centers of America.

Cotton has not been dethroned. Cotton remains the king of southern staples or products. Cotton is the gold crop of America and a daily stream of gold will pour into Texas until the crop of 1924 has been transferred to foreign owners. There should be peace and plenty in Texas the coming year.

What Today Means to You

SAGITTARIUS.

Today's planetary aspects until noon conduce to activity and progressive efforts, both of a social and commercial character. Nothing, however, that savors of haste or that is based on impulse should be essayed. The balance of the day is most auspicious, and the signs clearly indicate ultimate success for any new enterprise that may be started, or for any fresh campaign that may be launched. They particularly favor matters connected with mines, property, land and produce.

A child born today will not have a very robust appearance, but it will possess great latent strength, and have more power of endurance than the average child. It will be volatile and tempestuous, and carry a point by sheer force of will. Its mind will be both keen and brilliant, but it will neither be very patient nor very persevering. If it does not meet with immediate success, it will be inclined to quit in disgust. It will be a true friend and a relentless enemy. It will make many friends, but just as many enemies. Its friends will be loyal, sincere and devoted—its enemies will be implacable.

If today is your birthday, you are trustworthy, kind, loving and true, but, with all of your gentler traits, you are at times very domineering. This attitude, shown altogether too frequently, often destroys the amenable effects produced by your affectionate characteristics, and it often looks as though what you build up so carefully with your hands, you kick away with your feet. No one appreciates being domineered, although many — in fact, most—are willing to be dominated. If you could learn more to persuade, and acquire the habit of suggestion, you could accomplish your ends much more swiftly and surely, and, in the doing of it, not offend others' susceptibilities, or tread on their toes.

You are independent and uncommunicative, and have a great deal of confidence in your own ability. You are a strong, impetuous lover, and demand love and devotion in return.

To one of your disposition, the best curb is a mate, that will not be awed by your impressiveness, and who will refuse to stay put just because you wish it.

More Truth Than Poetry

THE YOUNG SCIENTIST

Nerve specialists have built a chair which can be jerked from under patients about to sit down in it, so their sensations of fright can be measured by pulsometers afterward attached to their wrists.

When Bill pulled his papa's big armchair away,
And let the old gentleman down on the floor,
A meeting was held in the woodshed next day
And Bill for a week was repententnat—and sore.
But people are given the same sort of drop,
Today, by a highly ingenious appliance,
And nobody says that the practice must stop
For it's all in the interest of science.

When Bill placed a tack where the teacher sat down,
Looking on with a semblance of calmn unconcern,
And the teacher arose with an oath and a frown,
To take measures exceedingly drastic and stern,
The neighborhood said he was wayward and wild,
With more bent for mischief than fondness for fractions;
It never occurred to a soul that the child
Was testing the teacher's reactions.

When Bill laid a snake on a little girl's book—
A harmless green snake he had found in the street,
And the little girl gave it one horrified look
And fell crumpled up in a faint in her seat.
Her hot-tempered dad made reprisals until
He wearied himself with his rough ministrations—
Dull fellow, he never imagined that Bill
Was trying the maiden's sensations.

Now Bill is surrounded by many machines,
Equipped with sharp spikes and with pincers of steel,
And, day after day, he finds out by their means
How people in all forms of agony feel.
By twisting and tortures their fright is increased
Till their howling for mercy is something terrific,
But Bill is not troubled by that in the least,
For his purpose is quite scientific.

CONSOLATION

Now that the election is over, the only thing to guess about is a word of eighteen letters that will prove the key to the latest cross-word puzzle.

By Dr. Frank Crane

THE MINUTE SWALLOWS THE YEAR

A minute's carelessness may wreck a life of carefulness. A minute's failure sometimes overthrows years of success.

In the same way a minute's crisis may bring the opportunity for success and a man may labor for a long while only to find his labors banked up suddenly at a critical moment.

Genius is a matter of fifteen minutes, said a French philosopher, but behind that fifteen minutes there is often accrued the toil of a life-time.

No man knows what a day may bring forth, but it is safe to say that the day contains no other things than the accumulated results of a man's own efforts.

We may go along for years and seem to be accomplishing nothing, but we are storing up energy against some critical hour, some hour when all our facilities shall be put to the test.

It is wrong to say that this critical time is merely a matter of luck. Opportunity may have much to do with success, but not everything, for opportunity is constantly coming to men who are not prepared for it. There are too many men in the condition of the Irishman who said that when opportunity knocked at his door he was out.

In fact opportunity is nothing but another way of saying that the chance comes to the proper man. It is nothing but the break in the dam of one who has succeeded in piling up all his resources behind him. If the dam breaks and there is no water to go over it will not make much difference, but, if behind it there is the accumulated resources of the years, something is going to happen.

One actor worked faithfully for fifteen years and then he stamped eighteen minutes upon the stage and was called a genius.

It is wrong to think that the hours of preparation, although they may be quiet and uneventful, have nothing to do with the hour of success. They have everything to do with it. But the question is that of being prepared when the time comes, and of not being called and found wanting.

CURING THE MARTYR COMPLEX

I'll wager that nine-tenths of the women who are over thirty, when gazing into their mirrors and noting the numerous wrinkles that line their once youthful faces, are thinking something like this:

"How terrible I look—my beauty is gone—my mouth is gone—this is what life has done to me—these lines—these heavy marks—this expression I give forth to the world—this age—this ugliness—life, life has devastated my body.

"I must accept my fate—this is what marriage (or singlehood) has done to me."

Right here I am going to uncover the lying serpent that is whispering into the thoughts of all these women.

No matter what a person's life has been she need not have lines in her face. Trouble does not make wrinkles.

Here is the truth of the matter. Wrinkles are caused from muscle and tissue starvation. To feed them, one must bring the blood to the face.

Any woman who will follow the four exercises I am giving below, twice a day, can, in a month, erase every line from her face.

The first exercise is to loosen the face—you will find it hard and set. Relax the jaw. Take both hands and move all the muscles of the face until it fairly tingles. (This is feeding the muscles and tissues.)

Next lie flat on your back, lift the legs as high in the air as high as possible, push them up and down. The blood will rush to the head.

Stand erect, swing the arms around in a large circle toward your back. Then lift them up and down vigorously.

Drink lots of milk and heaps of water. In one month your face will be smooth and unlined.

Everyone knows how to make the body look youthful.

The First Good Laugh They've Had in Years

SMOULDERING FIRES

BY LAIN C LANE

CHAPTER XV.

Despite her anger, Grace was conscious of a sickening sensation gnawing at her heart. With it was the pain of feeling injured without cause. As she stood there, glowering at Mabel, she wanted to cry. She had wanted to be friends and buddies with these girls. She had laughed with them. Perhaps they thought she had been cold and distant, but that was only her way and her nature; for she had really liked them. She had loaned them money, and let them borrow cosmetics and finery. Now she was feeding them. What had she done to deserve Mabel's attack, Margie's indifference. So she asked herself in her troubled mind.

"You know very well, Mabel Winslow, that what you are saying is untrue," she said. Her lips quivered. She wanted to say, "Liar," but her tongue failed her.

Margie looked from one to the other. Mabel, cornered, hesitated, then mumbled: "If it wasn't true, I don't suppose it would hurt so much."

The words stung Grace. She had not expected Mabel to defend herself. She did not know Mabel. It took greater effort for her to keep from crying. Fire gleamed in her moist eyes. Her tongue did not fail her this time.

"Liar."

It was the first time in her life Grace had ever used the expression. It seemed to her as if she had uttered some horrible, blasphemous, damning oath.

Mabel jumped up. "I'll not allow any one to call me a liar."

Grace stepped back involuntarily. Mabel moved a step nearer her. Margie jumped toward them, exclaiming, "Aw, Mabel."

Grace slumped down into a chair, sobbing.

Mabel went into the back room, slamming the door behind her.

After gazing at the crying girl for a moment, Margie tried to comfort her. "Don't mind her—she's just that way—she didn't mean it—she'll be all right in a little while." When Margie placed her hand on Grace's shoulder, it was pushed away.

"Please!" It seemed to her distorted mind that Margie was a partisan of Mabel and looked upon Mabel as the injured person.

She was still sobbing when Stella returned from the delicatessen laden with sacks and packages. She had bought all she could for two dollars.

"What's the matter?" she exclaimed, looking from Grace to Margie.

"Oh, she and Mabel had a spat."

"What about?"

"Oh——" Margie began fingering the sacks, without completing her answer. From one of the packages she extracted a raw wiener and began to eat it.

Stella bent over Grace, but did not receive the same rebuff given to Margie. "Mabel is always saying mean things," she consoled. "Don't mind her. She has a perfectly horrible nature."

Her eyes red from weeping, Grace looked up at her gratefully, then arose and walked quickly into the front room. For a moment she sat, turbulently undecided, on the edge of the bed; then, with decision, she took a traveling bag, a suit-case, and a hat box from a clothes-closet, and quickly began emptying two drawers of the dresser and many coat-hangers in the closet.

Stella appeared at the door. "Why, Betty, are you going?"

"Yes," was the steady answer. "Will you please ask Mabel for my electric curling-iron, my book of Edna Millay's poems and my belt?"

"Why, where are you going?" Stella persisted.

"I don't know."

(To be continued.)

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE

OUTGO TAXES

Few developments of modern life have shown how prevalent is idle curiosity, than the recent publication in America of the income tax returns.

For weeks people pored over the papers seeking not only to learn the incomes of important business men, but never skipping a name until they knew exactly what each of their neighbors had paid.

Although it was not possible to tell at all accurately the relation of the income to the tax, the fact that something was to be learned about other people's business kept eyes glued to the long columns of names and figures, till each of them had been read, marked and inwardly digested.

This interest in things which do no not at all concern people is one of the real reasons why comparatively few of the curious ever rise above the common level.

When one is so interested in what his neighbor is making that he neglects his own business to satisfy morbid curiosity about it, he can hardly expect to be very far ahead of the game at the end of the year.

The man who keeps an eye on his outgo tax, and lets his own and the other fellow's income tax take care of itself, is the man who will have something laid aside when the time comes to quit, and who will not go through life looking apprehensively over his shoulder to see just how much the pursuing wolf has gained on him in the last two or three years.

This is not an editorial in dispraise of spending money intelligently, or living as well as one's circumstances will permit, or getting as much out of life as one can.

But life must be considered as a whole, not as a few years of prosperity.

Perhaps the mining and cow gentlemen of the west, who come to New York with fifty or sixty thousand dollars and spend it all in a day, feel that they have had at least 24 hours of life.

But for that 24 hours they must pay many years of poverty and disappointment and hardship.

There is nothing much more wearing than keeping constant account of income and expenditures, and keeping down as much as possible the tax which is imposed on health and happiness by an extravagant outgo.

But on the other hand there is nothing so necessary to solvency, both financial and spiritual.

Business concerns keep big staffs of accountants, just for the purpose of finding out exactly where the leaks are, and just what the tax is on unnecessary outgo.

They could not survive competition if they did not do this.

Nor can the individual survive competition if he does not keep the outgo inside his income, and get far enough ahead each year so that he will not have to lose sleep worrying about the future.

What one's neighbor is spending or earning is of absolutely no importance to the average human being.

What he wants to know is what he is spending and earning, and if there is a balance of profit at the end of the season. If he watches the outgo tax, he will bring it down to a reasonable sum, and the wolf will soon fall behind in the race.

Pantomime —By J. H. Striebel

Dorothy Dix

Do You Want Your Home to Be a Haven of Peace Instead of a Perpetual Debating Society? Put a Ban on All Arguments, and Keep Away From All Taboo Subjects.

A young woman said to me the other day:

"I have been married four years, and in that time have had about four million spats with my husband. We love each other, but we can't seem to get along together in peace and harmony. At first I did not take these quarrels seriously, because I thought that it was natural for young married couples to disagree and that it took time for them to adjust themselves to each other.

"But now I am beginning to realize what a terrible thing it is for a husband and wife to live together in strife and to see that love can't live long in a home where there are perpetual black frowns, and hard speeches, and silent meals."

"Right-o," said I. "The theory that quarreling is an innocent and innocuous indoor sport for husbands and wives has done more than any other one thing to make marriage a failure, and furnish grist for the divorce mill.

"Because every domestic row does not end in the man rushing out and buying a ticket to Reno, or the woman jamming on her hat and going back to mother, and because when they have cooled off, they have kissed and made up, even the fighting couple often think that no harm has been done.

"But it has. Every wound leaves a scar. In every domestic spat things are said that stab to the heart like a dagger thrust. Weaknesses and faults that each believe hidden from the other are dragged ruthlessly into the light. Reproaches are uttered that humiliate almost beyond endurance.

"And long after the one who, in the madness of rage, said things that he or she never intended to say, and that he or she has forgotten, the other one still remembers. The cruel word, the harsh criticism, the rattling of the bones of the skeleton dragged from a secret closet, rankles in the mind, an unforgivable insult, for in anger, as in wine, the truth will out.

"Every disagreement between a husband and wife leaves them a little bit more disillusioned with each other, a little hurt and sore. It leaves them caring a little less for each other, and wondering a great deal more if marriage is worth while. For a sparring partner is not what they married for, and what they looked for in a home was a haven of peace, and not the storm center they have.

"Now, it is, of course, impossible that any two human beings of different sexes, with a different heredity, brought up in a different environment, should always think alike, or want to do the same things. But because they differ they need not quarrel. Nor need they give up their point of view. There are other ways of killing a cat besides choking it with butter.

"The first move toward coaxing the dove of peace to roost on your fireside is to put a cast iron ban on all arguments. Give every one the right of free speech. Let every husband and wife concede to each other the right to believe in any God they prefer, to belong to any political school they fancy, to have high brow or low brow tastes in literature, the theatre, and the movies.

"You do not have to believe a single thing your husband or wife believes. You can retain your own personal opinion, and you can save yourself not only from an unpleasant scene, but from unutterable boredom, because an argument falls very flat, and peters out into silence, if no one tries to refute it.

"Nine-tenths of the family quarrels start in an argument. Cut that out and the domestic millennium would dawn. And after all, what an unnecessary source of discord the argument is. Nobody was ever convinced by one. Its only result is to make a woman think that she married a bigheaded mule, and to prove to a man that his wife is a stubborn fool.

"The second way to keep the peace in the family is for husbands and wives to take the trouble to use a little diplomacy in dealing with each other. There are certain subjects that in every household are as good for a free-for-all fight as a nickel is for a ginger cake. Why not put the taboo on them, instead of dragging them out into the arena?

"If the husband cannot abide his wife's mother, or the wife and her husband's mother claw each other like the Kilkenny cats, why not visit the old ladies in their own homes, instead of precipitating civil war by bringing them into yours?

"Why not settle the money question before marriage instead of afterward? Why not jolly husband or wife into doing what you want them to do instead of browbeating them into it?

"And, finally, remember that a soft answer turns away wrath, and that you can stop any quarrel by merely saying, 'I am sorry, I did not intend to hurt or displease you.' Any husband or wife who will do that has signed a perpetual peace treaty with his or her storm and strife."

Woodrow Wilson and Mary Peck

"Now Mrs. Mary Hulbert Peck appears in this narrative for two reasons; first, because for seven years she afforded Woodrow Wilson one of the many outlets for the play of his mind. And, second, she appears because, by some utterly inexplicable cruel chance, her name was linked with Woodrow Wilson's in baseless slanders whispered about during two presidential campaigns; slanders as foul and unfounded as were ever peddled about in any campaign. To ignore such a wicked injustice to a man is no part of a biographer's duty unless the biographer wishes to countenance slanders, by ignoring them. During the seven years in which Mrs. Peck and the Wilsons were friends, many letters and other evidences of cordial regard passed between them. It was Mrs. Peck's habit, when a letter came to her in the official envelope of the president of Princeton, or with the seal of the governor of New Jersey, or with the plain blue line of the white house on the envelope, to open it immediately and read it to whatever friends might be near when it came. For the letters, which ran into the hundreds, were not particularly intimate. In reading them as a whole one has no sense of any emotional climax or rise and fall in the emotional attitude of the writer. These letters have been seen and read by many people. They reveal a man orienting himself by expressing himself. . . .

"A gracious and bewitching creature was Mary Hulbert Peck, with a light and lovely sympathy in her voice, with noble eyes that looked not too seriously out of an understanding heart, and lips that smiled easily and never spoke malice nor even harbored ungenerous thoughts. She moved in the insular society a lovely butterfly playing in utter unconsciousness of the realities of a world that did not touch her . . . Wives know that Mary Peck was safe. She was one of a dozen or a score of her kind that made the insular society of the island lovely. Woodrow Wilson's letters home told of the exquisite spiritual prowess and facile charm of Mary Peck . . . The Wilson daughters visited her, had gifts from her, wrote to her; and Mrs. Wilson, who had always realized how much the Irish play boy needed a job of exuberance of contact that she could not give, was glad when younger women could supply it. So once or twice a week Woodrow Wilson sat him down at his typewriter and hammered out the things that were pressing upon his life, the problems, the pleasures, the puns, the plays, the prayers, the puzzles of his soul to Mary Peck.

The Whispers and the Aftermath

"His letters to her are set upon a monotone, without being exactly monotonous. Her letters to him must have been major intellectual calisthenics done to rhythm of some cadence of her heart. She was exotic, European, something quite outside the Calvin circle. And how fearfully the Scotchman must have backed off scandalized and scared; but how eagerly the Irishman must have run to meet the blessed apparition; But the Peck letters furnished salacious gossip for two campaigns and did a cruel injustice to a good woman and a blameless man. Dean Andrew F. West of Princeton, who was Wilson's most scornful enemy, testifies to his certainty that there was no dust to the primrose path upon Wilson's feet. Instinctively Roosevelt touched the Wilson defense in his characterization of Wilson as the apothecary's clerk in an affair of the heart. When the campaign slanders were carried to Roosevelt, he indignantly demanded that so far as his friends and partisans were concerned the whispering stop. Roosevelt proclaimed his fundamental belief in the integrity of his adversary, and then, bursting into premonitory wrinkles until his face looked like a ruddy baked apple, the Colonel said: 'You can't cast a man as a Romeo who looks and acts so much like the apothecary's clerk.'"

There is an aftermath to the episode, told in a few brief and poignant words. In that last swing across the country, when he was carrying his message to the people, while the fate of the treaty hung in the senatorial balances, he found in Los Angeles a note from Mary Hulbert Peck, and he and Mrs. Wilson went to see her. She told him about the whispering campaign and the thousand annoyances and scandals it had occasioned her—that yellow newspapers had haunted and hounded her, and that she was troubled and needed his help. "The butterfly of Bermuda, gay and beautiful," the finale runs, "with the quick and lovely mind, the agile, sprite-like soul, the gracious and charming heart was all chilled, saddened, beset with fear—the butterfly in autumn. Her plight would have smitten a harder heart than his. So he left Los Angeles puzzled and worried, with no resilience in his mind or spirit, and no reserve in his body to reinforce his tired nerves" . . . One wishes there were more to record.

With a sympathetic pen—but not an uncritical one—the story of Wilson's life is told in these pages—his struggles at Princeton, where he fought for democratic ideals and failed in the end—his career as governor of New Jersey—the strange accidents of fate and destiny that landed him in the White House—his reactions to the war spirit—the peace that failed—the many friendships of his life that were made and broken—the tragic end of his career, when he stood among the ruins of his hopes uncompromising to the last. In the final analysis, Mr. White says: "Whether or not Wilson will live as a world figure depends not so much upon what work he has done as upon what the chance of time and circumstance will do with his work. He must live or die in world fame bound up in the league of nations. If that stands he may tower beside it as the Washington of a world federation. If the league crumbles, if in the inscrutable ways of Providence some other method is devised by men to institutionalize their yearnings for peace, then Wilson will became one of the host of good men who spent their zeal striving for futile things. On the other hand, if his vision becomes reality, then all the petty faults which men saw and fumed about will fall way from him."

POEMS THAT LIVE.

When earth's last picture is painted and the tubes are twisted and dried,
When the oldest colors have faded, and the youngest critic has died,
We shall rest, and, faith, we shall need it—lie down for an aeon or two,
Till the Master of All Good Workmen shall set us to work new.

And those that are good will be happy:
they shall sit in a golden chair;
They shall splash at a ten-league canvas with brushes of comet's hair.
They shall find real saints to draw from—Magdalene, Peter and Paul:
They shall work for an age at sitting and never be tired at all.

And only the Master shall praise them,
and only the Master shall blame;
And no one shall work for money, and no one shall work for fame,
But each for the joy of working, and each in his separate star,
Shall draw the Thing as he sees it for God of Things as They are!

—Rudyard Kipling.

HOW IT STARTED

THE OVERSKIRT

A popular sartorial style which every few seasons comes again into favor is the overskirt on milady's gown, and a search for its origin reveals a story.

The overskirt, by the way, should not be confused with the straight and simple tunic which goes back all the way to antiquity. It is the draped arrangement which is literaly an overskirt and which in Paris, its original home, is called the "tablier."

It had its origin with the house of Worth, courturiers to royalty and supreme arbiters of dress, where dress is made not only an art but a cult. The creator was the grandfather of the present M. Worth, who produced the mode after observing, in the words of his grandson, the "the graceful figure of a washerwoman who had tucked up her humble frock over her petticoat!"

CAMP FIRE GIRLS APPEAR IN PLAY.

Clever novelty entre-acts, an orchestra, and a good play presented by a well trained cast of girls are the features offered by the Ayuzanta group of Camp Fire Girls who present "The Call of Wo-he-lo," a three-act comedy-drama, at the church hall tonight, Ninth and Holliday streets.

Miss Mable Gwinn appears in the role of "Sylvia," the idle, irresponsible, "misfit" in a Camp Fire Girls summer camp, who is turned into a lovable all-round sort of person by the association of a peppy group of girls who know how to handle her. Her interpretation of the role is humorous and altogether attractive.

The play promises to go over with a swing, and special attention has been paid, on the part of the director, Miss Mary Marguerite White, to the details of costuming, properties and effects that make or mar a home talent effort.

The prologue is presented by Masters James White and Jack Newson. Leonard Ratican gives a monologue "The Peddler," and Miss Juanita Bankston presents a musical reading "Jolly Gypsies," supported by Misses Margaret Ossenbeck and Margaret Cook and Masters Paul Robertson and Herman Willen in a song number, between the first and second acts.

"Such Nonsense," a novelty act, is presented at the end of the second act by John Warmuth and Robert Riddle. The epilogue is given by Mary Genevieve Ossembeck and Joe Guy. Orchestra music will be given during the evening.

The cast includes Mesdames M. E. Ratican, Ayers, Misses Mary Marguerite White, Mabel Gwinn, Viola Chewning, Jean Fisk, Dora Janet Nix, Mary Ruddy, Catherine Ruddy, and Mary Genevieve Ossenbeck.

"FREEDOM" TAKES TOLL.

Young Women of Today Are Shortening Their Lives, Fisk Warns.

NEW YORK, Nov.—Enjoyment of the freedom so vigorously demanded by modern young women probably is shortening their lives, Dr. Eugene Lyman Fisk, director of the Life Extension Institute, intimated last night in an address before the American Educational conference and exposition.

Mortality and health statistics proved, he said, that women between 17 and 32 years old are retarding extension of the span of life.

"These young women," he said, "do not show as good a health record as their brothers. The death rate at this age period is substantially higher among young women.

"Whatever may be the real cause, the suggestion of weakness in a group in the population, where we can least afford to have it, calls for active and rational measures to remedy the situation.

"Young women must study more carefully their habits of living and must avoid such injurious indulgences as cigarette smoking, late hours and loss of sleep; must give attention to exercise, fresh air and properly balanced diet.

"The over-confident, self-sufficient young person who thinks she can set up her own ideals and standards and disregard the fundamental ethics of living, should have this situation plainly laid before her—a warning that the price of this freedom may be higher than she cares to pay.

"The proof of the pudding is the eating, and according to the mortality statistics this 'freedom pudding' does not eat well."

NOT ENOUGH PASTORS NOW.

Protestants Face Problem of Getting Trained Leaders, Report Says.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov.—Shortage in adequately trained ministerial leadership is one of the most serious problems facing Protestantism, the Rev. D. D. Forsyth, corresponding secretary of the board of home missions and church extension of the Methodist Episcopal church, said in a report today to the annual meeting of the board.

Quoting from a statement by the commission on religious and social surveys, Dr. Forsyth said that of the 101,000 Protestant churches in America, 15 per cent had full time resident ministers; 18 per cent resident ministers giving only part time service; 54 per cent absentee pastors, and that 13 per cent were without pastors.

"This same commission," the report continued, "makes the further statement that on any given Sunday of the year virtually one-half of these churches are not open for religious worship. Another conclusion that very readily might be drawn from such a study is the fact that the Protestant churches in this country, which are decaying and breaking down, are almost invariably churches served by absentee ministers."

WOMAN FREED OF CHARGE

Mrs. Minnie Dickey Not Guilty of Killing Her Part Indian Husband.

CANON CITY, Colo., Nov. 27.—Thankful for acquittal on a charge of murdering her husband, Mrs. Minnie Dickey, widow of a wealthy part Osage Indian, who was shot to death during a struggle with his wife over possession of a revolver while riding in their automobile near here on April 15, returned to her home today a free woman.

Mrs. Dickey was found not guilty of murder late last night when the jury hearing the case reported a verdict after three hours and forty minutes deliberation.

Mrs. Dickey's version of the death of her husband was that after she had instituted divorce proceedings her husband, while they were riding, whipped out a revolver and said:

"Well, if you won't live with me, I'll make sure you won't live with anybody else."

They struggled over the gun which ended in the fatal wounding of Dickey, she contended. Dickey formerly was a resident of Pawhuska, Okla.

Golden Sandstorm Held to Lone Touch Down By Wichita Falls

Lengthy Affair Is Finally Ended In 2 Hours, 45 Mins.

Coyotes Make Five First Downs To The Sandies Nine

DEEMS INJURED

Taken From Field In Final Quarter But Forgot To Stay

AMARILLO, Tex., Nov. 27.—The Wichita Falls Coyotes were defeated by the Golden Sandstorm at Bivens stadium this afternoon, 6 to 0. The Sandies' lone score came in the third quarter.

The game was a long drawnout affair, lasting more than two hours and 45 minutes. A great deal of squabbling, arguing about rules and time that caused fans to lose interest in the game before it was half over.

The Coyotes fought hard all the way and tried desperately to score in the quarter by the aerial route but the Sandies would intercept the passes or hold the Coyotes for downs when they threatened the local goal line.

A 20-yard pass, Nicklaus to Sellars, put the ball on the Coyote four-yard line early in the third quarter and Jacobson carried the ball over. A few minutes later, Herrington snagged a Coyote punt and raced 40 yards to put the ball on the visitors' 6-inch line. Jacobson took the ball across but fumbled and the referee ruled it a touchback.

The Coyotes made five first downs to the Sandies nine. Twenty forward passes were attempted by the Coyotes and seven completed, for a total gain of 60 yards, the Sandies completed three out of eleven for 50 yards. The Coyotes were penalized 13 yards and the locals 45 yards. Deems, game little quarter for the visitors, was carried from the field in the final quarter but fought to stay. He was unconscious for some time.

Fumbles received by the Sandies put the Coyotes in danger several times. Martin, Deems, Pierce and Lawson starred for the visitors with Goodwin, Akins and Niclaus and Herrington playing stellar for the locals.

Mustangs Drop A Conference Title By Tieing 13-13

S. M. U.'S Fourth Tie Game Results With Oklahoma Aggies

SUPERB PASSING

Weissnger, Aggie Tackle, Makes The First Touchdown

DALLAS, Nov. 27.—(AP)—The S. M. U. Mustangs virtually relinquished all claims to the 1924 southwestern conference championship today when the tie jinx again roosted itself upon the score board and helped the Oklahoma Aggies knot the count at 13 all. The game was the fourth tie game that the Mustangs have been a party to this year.

However the fans saw the team again open up with its superb forward passing game, and pass its way over and around the heavier Aggies for two touchdowns after the second period was nearly over. The Mustangs completed thirteen out of 31 passes attempted, with Bedford, end, being on the receiving end of the majority. The Aggies completed two out of five, but one of them placed the team in position to run over the tying score.

Weissinger, Aggie tackle, made the first touchdown within two minutes after the game started, when Cortemeglia fumbled and Weissinger scooped up the ball and ran 55 yards through an open field.

The Mustangs touchdowns were made on two marches down the field. In the second period, in four completed passes to Bedford, the first score was made. Reisor failed to kick goal.

The second march started immediately from the Mustang 24-yard line, Welling going over for the second touchdown and Reisor kicking goal.

In the fourth perior, Higgins substituting for Walker, went over for the second Aggie touchdown. Lookabaugh failed to kick an extra point.

The line up:

Oklahoma Aggies (13)		S. M. U. (13)
Mitchell	Left End.	Bedford

Courageous Rice Outplayed; Bears Take Title 17-9

Owls Hold The Lead Until Last Period Of Game At Houston

COATES SPECTACULAR

Bears Near Trouble When Fumble By Wood Comes Near Goal

HOUSTON, Texas, Nov. 27.—(AP)—Crashing plunges by Sam Coates and spectacular dashes in the open field by Bill Coffey proved too much for Rice here today and the institute team was defeated 17 to 9 despite one of the most courageous fights ever staged on a Texas field. The Owls held the lead until the last period, but the great Baylor machine, superior in speed and well drilled in bridges system, smashed through for a touchdown and a field goal in the final period. Ping Collier's placement kick gave the Baptists the necessary points to win.

Second Spectacular.

The second was the big period in the Rice offensive efforts. Harvey Smith, grand Pawood and Dutchy Wilford kniffling through the supposedly impregnable center of the Baylor line, and cutting inside Reed and Connolly, marched for seven first downs and succeeded in scoring all of the Owl's nine points.

The Bears scored early in the second quarter. The break came as the result of a magnificent return of a punt by Coffey, and Coates lunged over for the touchdown.

A favored strategy which Bridges delights to use, almost was disastrous in this active second quarter. After Hale had blocked one of Pittman's punts and Rice had recovered deep in Bear territory, a fumble by Wood on the Baylor three-yard line after he had received a pass from Wilford gave the Bears the ball just under their goal. Pittman intentionally grounded the pass from center and a safety was scored.

Later in the period a series of well executed passes placed the ball near the Baylor line and Smith plunged for a touchdown.

In the last period a splendid drive down the field with Pittman, Coffey, and Coates running in great fashion, brought the ball near the Owl goal and Ping Collier, substitute for Strickland, kicked a placement goal which gave Baylor the lead by the margin of a single point.

35 Yards On Trick.

An intercepted pass by Jack Sisco later in the period paved the way for Coffey's 25-yard run on a hidden ball trick for the final tally.

Missouri Wins Over Kansas By Two Touchdowns

Annual Clash Gives Mythical Valley Title To The Winner

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 27.—(AP)—The University of Missouri today emerged from its annual clash with Kansas with the laurels of the Missouri valley conference—the mythical valley championship.

Pounding the Jayhawker line for two touchdowns in the third period, the Tigers gathered the only scores of the game that meant for them the leadership of the conference, or a place behind Nebraska, the only team that defeated them this season.

With today's 14 to 0 victory Missouri stands with five games won and one lost. Nebraska is second with three won and one lost and Drake third with three victories, one defeat and one time.

Grinnell, Ames, Oklahoma, Kansas Aggies and Washington follow in the order named.

Howard Payne Is Winner 23 to 6

BROWNWOOD, Nov. 27.—Captain Joe Dailey Cheaney led his Howard Payne Yellow Jackets to a brilliant victory over Simmons college here, 23 to 6, in the annual turkey day grudge battle. It gave Howard Payne undisputed championship of the T. I. A. A. Cheaney's 100-yard run for a touchdown was a thriller of the afternoon, while the work of McAllister in the back field, the functioning of the line and the interference were big parts in the Yellow Jackets' victory. Walker was the only outstanding man for Simmons, making the lone touchdown.

Play By Play At Austin

MEMORIAL STADIUM, AUSTIN, Nov. 27.—At 2:30 the Aggies came on the field led by Captain Miller on crutches. A few seconds later the Longhorn team came in from the opposite entrance. Both teams warmed up.

The rooting of the rival sections was very lively. Approximately 35,000 persons were in the stadium.

"Mule" Wilson practiced punting for the Aggies with Quarter Back Berry handling the punt, while Wright practiced kicking for Texas with Smith, Foster and Smalley handling the punts.

The coaches conferred with the officials. The green turf of the field was in excellent condition and made a pretty picture, mingling its colors with those of the opposing schools.

M. Dansby practiced kicking field goals for the Aggies. Both Wilson and Wright, the men who will do the kicking for the two teams seemed to be in great form, sending their boots high and far. There was a slight breeze from the north.

Both teams indulged in practicing forward passes as the vast stadium resounded with the battle cries of the students.

The Aggie cheer leaders arrived and the cadets went wild. Each team had its quota of former football heroes on the sidelines.

The coaches called their men around them for the final conference. Just before the teams went into play, the Longhorn band brought the audience to its feet with the "Eyes of Texas Are Upon You."

For the first time in its history the Texas team will take the gridiron sockless as Coach Stewart believes bare legs are hardest to tackle.

Crippled Captain Miller of the Aggies begged his mates to win the game for him. Captain Miller received a broken leg in the first game of the season.

Captain Marley of the Longhorns and Acting Captain Waugh met in mid field and tossed the coin. The Aggies won the toss and elected to defend the north goal.

Fight Fans Given Good Legion Card

Duke Trammell of Wichita Falls and Roughhouse Smith of Muskogee gave a clever exhibition of what happens when two prize flighters, equally matched, get together, as feature of the American Legion card Thanksgiving night. The draw decision came after ten rounds of good fighting.

Second only to the headliner was the knockout administered by Sid Young of McAlester to Jimmy Guest of Houston in the fifth round of a scheduled 10-round go.

The preliminaries included a battle royal by three negroes and a four-round swatfest between Cop Bentley of Electra and Earl Griffin of Wichita Falls to a draw.

The evening's entertainment opened with a four-round encounter between Casey Chandler and Joe Turner, both of Wichita Falls, in which another draw was announced.

Apparent Stage Fright By Juniors At Spudder Field Lets McMurry Obtain Lead In The First Quarter of Game

First Of What Is Planned As Annual Contest Here Goes To Visitors Thursday By Score Of 14 to 13; Fans Got Their Money's Worth.

In the best game of football played in Wichita Falls this year, McMurry college of Abilene defeated Wichita Falls Junior college in the inaugural of what it is hoped to make an annual Thanksgiving affair, by the narrowest possible margin, the final count being 14 to 13.

But even the closeness of the score fails to tell the story of the furious fight of the two elevens. After McMurry had scored fourteen points in the first two minutes of play, the Wichita line became almost impenetrable, and not once in the remaining 58 minutes of play did the Abilene warriors threaten the home goal.

Had Stage Fright.

Junior college seemed to have an attack of stage fright as the contest started, and, taking advantage of this, McMurry, in the shortest possible time, piled up a lead that seemed perfectly safe. Hill took the opening kick-off of the game on his own 10-yard line, and never stopped running until he had crossed the Red and White goal line. He added the extra point with a drop kick. Score McMurry 7; Junior college 0.

McMurry kicked off, and on the first play from scrimmage, West, McMurry right end, scooped up a Wichita fumble and trotted thirty yards for a touchdown. Hill again drop-kicked goal. Score, McMurry 14; Junior 0.

Here the seeming McMurry cyclone subsided to a tame breeze, and for the rest of the game the Abilene team was on the defensive most of the time. Caskey booted the oval over the visitors' goal on the kick-off, giving McMurry the ball on her own 20. On the first play Weeth broke through the line and threw Ledbetter for a five-yard loss. Two more plunges gained 7 yards, and forced McMurry to kick to Thurman who was downed in midfield. A plunge gained three yards, and a pass 7 and first down. Another plunge and a 5-yard offside penalty against the visitors gave Wichita a second first down. Four plunges fell one short of the necessary ten yards, and the ball again went to McMurry on her 20-yard marker. After two plunges had failed to gain an inch, the visitors punted 55 yards. A punting duel, that gained some ground for McMurry, finished out the quarter, which ended with the ball in the center of the field, with the score, McMurry 14; Junior 0.

Second Quarter.

The second quarter started with another battle of toes, but when a visitor insisted on roughing it, McMurry was penalized half the distance to her own goal, and it was Junior's ball with 32 yards to go. Quick to take advantage of the scoring opportunity this offered, Wichita went at it with a vim. Beatty and Keevil made it first down in four rams at the line, and after the same pair had added 7 yards in two more plunges, Thurman heaved the pigskin 10 yards to Keevil, who ran the remaining distance for a touchdown. The try for goal was blocked.

Junior college then executed perfectly, the most difficult play in football—the on-side kick. Caskey faked a stumble on the kicked off and Clary lifted the ball 15 yards to Beatty who continued 10 yards further before he was downed, 25 yards from the visitors' goal. On a fake at goal from placement, Thurman passed 15 yards to Keevil, who ran the remaining 10 for touchdown. Another fake worked, and Thurman passed to Timmons over the goal for the extra point. Score, McMurry 14; Junior 13.

The half ended a minute later, McMurry carrying the ball on her own 30.

The teams battled the remainder of the game on even terms, although McMurry's line was threatened on several occasions, while the visitors never came within real striking distance of the home marker.

The second half started with McMurry kicking off. Keevil took the visitors' boot 5 yards from his own goal, and raced 55 yards before the McMurry safety man succeeded in downing him. Beatty lost 5, then a pass, Thurman to Keevil, gained 12, but the ball went over when Junior could not push it across for first down. McMurry could not gain on bucks, and when they attempted a pass, Keevil snared it in midfield.

Three Wichita passes were grounded and Keevil booted 50 yards over the visitors' goal. Plunges gained a first down for Abilene, and Hill broke loose for 20 yards, only to lose the ball on a fumble when tackled.

Caskey Recovers Fumble.

Caskey recovering for Junior on his 45-yard line. Ramming the line failed to gain for the home team, but when McMurry blocked Keevil's kick, Wichita recovered the ball for a 12-yard gain, making its first down 42 yards from McMurry's goal. From here Caskey, Keevil and Beattty smashed the line for 22 yards, then attempted three times to circle Abilene's end with no success. An attempt at goal from placement failed and McMurry returned the ball to her own 35 where the third quarter ended.

Wichita gained possession of the ball in midfield on downs soon after the opening of the final quarter. An exchange of punts again brought the ball to the home team in midfield. Beatty rammed the line for 9 yards in three tries, but lost the ball on downs, when he momentarily fumbled on a fourth attempt. McMurry gained 13 and a first down on a pass, but her next three attempts failed. Thurman interrupted the four try at the aerial game on his own 5-yard line. Keevil kicked 40 yards from behind his goal line.

Both teams resorted to the passing game for the remainder of the quarter, with little success, and the fray ended with McMurry in possession of the ball, on her own 45-yard line.

Weeth was the defense star of the game for Junior college, several times breaking through the visitors' line to throw the ball for a loss, while the work of the entire Red and White backfield was brilliant. Hill was McMurry's best bet.

...ups Strut Their Stuff 14 To 6 At Archer City, Rounding Out Season Of Remarkably Good Football Quality

ARCHER CITY, Nov. 27.—Wichita Junior High Coyote Pups lost a ...ky scrap to the Archer City high school heavies yesterday afternoon to the tune of 14 to 6, and closed one of the most successful seasons in the history of Junior high school from the standpoint of development of man power.

Outweighed by the regulars, the ...ly little team crippled by recent ...unters was not up to form, and a steady consistent game by the opponents served to outplay the home squad.

...od runs and off tackle plays ...ed the order of the day, and Archer City showed some fine work in the fourth quarter when they blocked a swift pass shot by the Coyote Pups a few yards from the Wichita goal line, in an attempt on a through-play for a touch back.

Wilson and Black Star

Good runs, from 20 to 25 yards ... made by Black, quarter back, Morrison, captain and full back of Archer City; and by G. Taylor of the Pups.

...r only a one season team, the ...l has rounded into fine working ..., according to T. V. Montgomery, ..., and will be the best group of football material ever sent into high school training quarters at any one time. Making the high school class B ...ation, for the first time the team climbed to the district semi-finals, has received some valuable training which undoubtedly produce first team men for the high school grid next season.

Francis Complimented

Francis, full back, is mentioned as a near certainty for his span-shot passes, and his prowess as a formidable defense man. Dependable and accurate, he has proven a valuable man this season.

Tollett, tackle, has played every quarter in every game thi sseason, and his brilliant game predicts that he will be hard to keep off the first team next year. Other good possibilities are Herndon, end, and Horton and Walker, half backs.

BILLY WHISKERS

By Frances Trego Montgomery

Billy had just had word of his family yesterday, you remember and thought he would go straight home.

"Won't you stay and let us eat some fresh meadow mint together?" asked the cow. "If you do and then take a drink of water it will make your mouth feel nice and fresh and cool. We love it after eating dusty dry grass."

"Thank you, but I had some just before I spoke to you. And I find it, as you say, most refreshing. Ta-ta to you!" and with a frisk of his tail Billy was gone.

"My what a fine, good looking goat he is, to be sure," said one old cow.

"Yes! But not to be trusted," replied the other. "He would just as soon jump a fence and run away from his master as he would to chew his cud. There is no knowing what those good-looking lovely people and goats will do when things get monotonous for them."

And the old cows went on eating their meadow mint and walking to the stream to let the water run through their mouths to cool them, while Billy made straight lines toward the Northwest, turning neither to the right nor left for roads to follow, but jumping fences (now his leg was all right), swimming rivers and creeks, climbing hills, penetrating thick woods, cutting across people's gardens and farmyards, letting absolutely nothing stand in his way but a house or a barn. These he would run around and come back to his straight line, keeping to it as before.

He had started for home and he was going to get there in a jiffy if fast traveling would do it.

The next day was Sunday, though Billy did not know it until he heard the church bells ringing. Then he noted that all the autos, trucks and grocery wagons that passed him were filled with picnic parties, which was a sure sign that it was Sunday. Everybody that could get out into the country was going for a picnic. But Billy paid little attention to them as he was in a hurry to get home. Along towards noon, however, he began to grow hungry, and a merry twinkle came to his eye. Now wouldn't you like to know what caused that twinkle? You will never guess, so I will tell you. It was this:

Billy knew all these picnic people had good luncheons with them, so he decided to watch for a party that looked as if they had a big one. He also wanted a party which had selected a nice place in some woods where he would have a chance to hide and sneak up when they were not looking and rummage in their lunch baskets.

Billy kept on trotting down the road and passed several parties, but either they looked as if their lunch was made up principally of pickles and cake, as the party was composed of young ladies, or else they had selected a spot too near the road and in too open a spot for Billy to have a chance to steal their luncheon without being seen. At last, however, he spied an ideal spot for a picnic on a little knoll, covered with tall trees, back of which were some thick hazel bushes, and at one side there gurgled a little stream of clear water, where the picnickers could get clear, cool water to drink.

(I am afraid the picnickers would not think Billy a very welcome guest at their picnic. What do you think about it?)

Color Cut-Outs

It was the day after Thanksgiving, and soon Betty Cut-out and Billy be leaving their grandmother's house in the country.

"I must run over to see Sarah before I go," declared Betty. "She's so funny and dear. I just hate to leave her."

So Betty bundled up in her warm wraps and ran down the road to the next farm, where her new-found friend, Sarah, lived.

Sarah came to the door herself—wearing a bathrobe!

"Oh dear," groaned Sarah. "Why was such a pig? I think I must have eaten a whole turkey myself—I was so sick last night. I'm feeling a lot better now, though. If you want me to, and there's room, I'll get dressed and ride to the station with you."

"That's fine!" cried Betty. Hurry up!

(Betty bids farewell to the country tomorrow.)

Color Sarah's bathrobe a dull red with gray figures.

PROBE COUNCILMAN SHOW.

Chicago Political Rally Featured Obscene Dances, It Is Charged.

CHICAGO, Nov.—Spectacles at which women danced unclothed featured a political rally October 30, attended by 1,500 men and youths, under the direction of Joseh Mendel, city councilman, it was charged yesterday by Frank Peska, assistant state's attorney.

Criminal action against Mendel would be taken in the morals court, Peska said. Warrants would be asked, charging him with conspiracy to corrutp the public morals and promoting an indecent exhibition, the prosecutor declared.

The comlpainant in the charges will be the Rev. Phillip Yarrow, superintendent of the Illinois Vigilance association, who instituted the investigation. A dozen men and youths who attended the "circus" were questioned at the state's attorney's office and described "disgusting obscenities," according to Mr. Peska.

Well Al only 3 more days and we will be getting off of the Paris and the rest of the trip aint going to be as tiresome like the 1st. part as I got aquainted today with a couple of Americans that want me to play cards with them tonight and tomorrow. They are from Boston and seen me pitch vs. the Boston club and was crazy to meet me and one of them says he wished the Boston club would trade Ehmke for myself so it looks like they are pretty clean cut high class boys and not dum bells like the most of the people on the ship.

Casing-Head Gas Production Shows Huge Increase During 1923

Total Amount Is 11 Per Cent Of Gas From Crude

Five Year Increase Much Larger Than 1918 Production

100 PLANTS, TEXAS

States Rank, Oklahoma Texas, California, And West Virginia

By BASCOM N. TIMMONS
Record News Staff

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 27—According to a statement issued by the department of the interior through the geological survey, 816,226,000 gallons of raw (unblended) natural-gas gasoline, having a value at the plants of $77,268,000, was produced in the United States in 1923. This output, an increase of 61 per cent over that of 1922, is more than the total production of the country in 1918. Notwithstanding an increase of 22 per cent in the quantity of gasoline produced from petroleum in 1923, the quality of natural-gas gasoline produced in 1923 was equivalent to approximately 11 per cent of the quantity of gasoline produced from petroleum, as contrasted with 8 per cent in 1922.

Texas Second.

The rank of the four leading states—Oklahoma, Texas, California, and West Virginia—in 1923 remained the same as in the last few years, although Oklahoma's output increased 46 per cent and that of West Virginia only 16 per cent, whereas the output of Texas increased 130 per cent and that of California 198 per cent. The increased production of natural-gas gasoline in California followed the development of the new fields, in the Los Angeles Basin, in which great qualities of natural gas were produced with the petroleum but only a fraction of the gas available was utilized and large quantities, both before and after extraction of gasoline, were not consumed.

There were a total of 279 plants in Oklahoma producing natural-gas gasoline and their product totaled 270,249,000 gallons, valued at $23,012,000, or 8.5 cents per gallon.

100 Plants in Texas.

In Texas there were 100 plants which produced 177,764,000 gallons, valued at $12,752,000 or 8.3 per gallon.

During 1923 the number of compression plants and the number using the oil-absorption process, both singly and in combination with the compression process, increased; the new charcoal process, by which natural gas is brought into intimate contact with activated charcoal, in the capillaries of which the vapors are condensed, was reported in use by ten plants. The increased average capacity of the plants now in operation, contrasted with those of five years ago, is emphasized by the fact that although the total number of plants operated in 1918 and 1923 was about the same, 1,067 in 1923 and 1,004 in 1918, the output in 1923 was almost three times that in 1918.

The quality of natural gas treated in the recovery of the natural-gas gasoline produced in 1923 was equivalent to 87 per cent of the total quantity of natural gas consumed in the United States, as contrasted with 72 per cent in 1922, 62 per cent in 1918, and 2 per cent in 1913. These figures not only show the growth of the industry from another view point and the increasing conservation of natural gas but they indicate the near approach of the time when the available annual supply, which, therefore has been much in excess of demand, will be a controlling factor in the growth of the industry.

Standard Idea.

The Lamp, official organ of the Standard of New Jersey, says:

"The American petroleum industry has stored petroleum in costly steel tanks as though it feared that each month might see the last barrel taken from the ground. Credit or blame for this situation belongs equally to the producer and purchaser. The purchasing companies have had to take surplus oil whether they wanted it or not, or see waste and bankruptcy in the producing fields. On the other hand they have been guilty of inducing men to sink wells when they were not needed by paying prices that proved attractive to the drillers. Whatever the apportionment of responsibility, the industry today finds itself in the position of being overinsured against the near future. Its reserves of oil above ground awaiting consumption are much larger than is either economic or comfortable."

Empire Buys Gas.

BLACKWELL, Nov. 28.—One of the largest gas deals made in northern Oklahoma this year was consummated here when the Otstot Development company entered into a contract with the Empire Pipeline company to furnish an open flow of 50,000,000 feet of gas a day from its wells in 16-28-1w, Otstot pool. The contract price is 7½ cents for 1,000 cubic feet at the well.

The Empire company has bought the Blackwell Oil and Gas company's 12-inch line, 12 miles long, running from Blackwell to the old Blackwell field where a connection is made with the Empire's 15-inch trunk line.

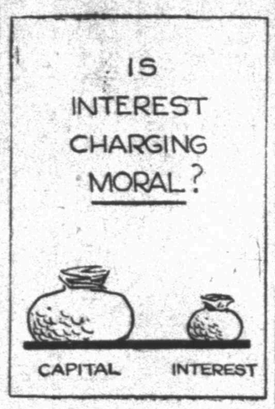
MONEY AT WORK

Brief but Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.



What is to be said for or against the ownership of large corporations by users of the corporation's service or by its employes?

Such ownership has been tried out extensively in the United States and Canada during the past few years and its has been a distinct success. Many large industrial corporations and some railroads have adopted the policy of employe and consumer ownership, but the leaders in this new field of ownership have been the public utilities corporations.

There are several distinct advantages to a nation in such ownership. One of these advantages is the fact that consumer and employe ownership diversifies securities greatly and instills the habit of thrift in large numbers of people. Many men and women get a start toward financial independence through purchasing one or more of the "baby securities" in different corporations.

Another advantage is that such purchases give the individual the pride of ownership and make him a better and more substantial citizen. A man owning stocks or bonds takes an interest in the business affairs of the day and is more keenly alive than the man who is not an investor.

FOOTBALL

smashing of "Gentleman" Jim Marley, headed for another touchdown. But much, the ignominy of a two touchdown defeat was saved the visitors.

Thursday morning the A. & M. companies had marched up Congress avenue one after another determined to win. The standard of infantry, cavalry, artillery and air service fluttered, for this was A. & M.'s day of days. Then came the band, 80 strong, and the thousands packed over the pavement and bricks of Congress avenue were awed. Late this afternoon the A. & M. band came marching down the Avenue again, defeated. They had entered the valley of defeat, coming out not even with the scoreless tie that had seemed theirs as a certainty for so long.

"Goodbye to Texas university, came the tune over and over again," "Goodbye to Texas university," it was, bravely enough, but with the sad tinge of defeat forced upon them by "Horseshoes" goodbye to Texas university, for 7 to 0 Thursday meant a successful season to the Longhorns, disaster to the Aggies.

First Quarter to Aggies.

Counting off the contest by rounds, as it were the first quarter belonged to the Aggies. A fumble by Marley on a bad pass from center gave the Aggies the opportunity to sweep the ball to a first down inside the Longhorn 10-yard line but the line held. The line held and the ball went over on the two-yard line, it was the tackle group rated as good as anything in the conference that saved the university goal line. But thereafter the ball remained for the most part in A. & M. territory. Fay Wilson was outpunted decisively. Twice in the second quarter long Texas passes placed the Longhorns within the Aggies' 10-yard line and twice A. & M. held. Once in the third quarter A. & M. momentarily had a chance but an intercepted pass spoiled the last chance of Bible-men.

Hold Like Gibraltar.

When you grow old and begin to think of dying well, gather your grand children around you and tell them how that Longhorn forward wall held like the rock of Gibraltar. Tell them how Red Sprague played that tackle. Tell them how "Cap. K. L. Berry" 32 years old, out of college football for nine years, back again to win his degree for army promotion played that guard position. Tell them Berry vowed vengeance the afternoon before for the 13 to 0 defeat of the Longhorn in 1914. Tell them how the whipping Rip Collins gave Texas "U" nine years ago was avenged. Tell them that it happened at the formal dedication of the stadium, that great pile of concrete and brick buried in the white hill beyond Waller creek.

In the face of that defeat given A. & M. remember the part played by Quarterback Berry for the Aggies. Just a youngster, weighing not more than 135 pounds, he was the star in defeat for A. & M. His stiff black pompadoured hair bobbed up and down over the stadium field, here, there and everywhere. He was the life of the game, the soul of the conflict, for the Aggies. Everywhere it was Berry. On the first kickoff, he returned through the Orange team more than 30 yards.

First Down Four Times.

Again he made a first down in four plays lone handed. Time and time he threw himself against the Longhorn line, now and then picking a hole to slide through, but more often he found no opening in the massive wall of bone and muscle. Barry's was not the line played by Marley. His was the graceful, picking of holes, when they were there. Not the least enthused of thousands who saw the Aggie hopes fade as Allen fled across the chalk marks for those momentous seven points were a dozen Texas-exes from Wichita Falls who had come back for a brief few hours. And not the least charged of those same thousand were another dozen Wichitans who wear the Red and White of Argieland. At least a score, and probably more were here from Wichita Falls. Most of them came in on the early morning trains Thursday and plan to return tonight, arriving back Friday afternoon.

VELVET MURDER

he would call most of the witnesses at the inquest for additional questioning.

2.—Deputy Sheriff Battoff, finger print expert, and other officers found a blood stained handkerchief containing several hairs from the head of a woman and a man, and a clot of dried blood. The handkerchief was found in a vacant cabin near the Watkins camp. They also found two pairs of rubber gloves, one pair partially buried in the ground near the Watkins cabin.

Intercept Calls.

3.—It was announced by the Alhambra police that they had recorded telephone messages between Miss Watkins and her friend, Joe Walker, which they intercepted. Once, about the time the body was discovered on Tuesday, Walker telephoned Miss Watkins, they said.

CONVERSATION REPEATED

"Not So Good" Said Woman, When Man Asked How Things Stood

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif., Nov. 27.—(AP)—Whisps of hair, blood stains and the fragments of intercepted telephone conversations today marked the trial which authorities hoped might lead to a solution of the slaying of William R. Fee, Alhambra and San Gabriel bank president, whose body was found in Lytle Creek canyon Tuesday one-half mile from his mountain cabin.

A coroner's jury last night found that Mr. Fee met violent death at the hands of unknown persons who caused a fracture of the skull.

Miss Mary F. Watkins, 26, of Alhambra, secretary of the San Gabriel water district, whose cabin is located 60 feet from the spot where Mr. Fee's body was found, was the principal witness at the inquest yesterday.

His Widow Faints

Mrs. Fee, widow of the banker, testified also, saying that she had gone to the mountain cabin with her husband last Saturday; that he left to repair a radio aerial and did not return. Mrs. Fee before leaving the witness stand said she had quarreled with her husband often because of the affectionate position Miss Watkins held in his life.

As she left the stand facing Miss Watkins she fell in a faint.

While the inquest was in progress deputy sheriffs discovered in a third cabin unoccupied, not far from where the body was found, a blood stained handkerchief.

Though the owners of the cabin have not been in Lytle Creek canyon for several weeks, the blood stains were pronounced comparatively fresh. What made them more interesting was the presence in the blood clots of three hairs, apparently from a man's head, and another of different color, apparently belonging to a woman.

To Compare the Hair

Comparison of the hair with that of the slain man was expected soon.

Sheriff W. A. Shay questioned Joseph Walker, who with Miss Polly Bell and Paul Kennedy motored to Lytle Creek canyon last Saturday with Miss Watkins to her mountain cabin. Walker was asked if he had been in the unoccupied cabin near the Watkins cabin and said he had not.

He was not shown the blood stained handkerchief.

Miss Watkins testified she had no knowledge of the tragic turn of events in the life of Fee until he was reported missing. She pleaded with the district attorney not to read an affectionate letter which she addressed to him Saturday and which was found on the body.

Referring to the finding of a suit of Mr. Fee's clothing in her cabin, Miss Watkins said it had been presented to her by the banker for the use of gentlemen guests entertained at the cabin by herself and her sister.

Repeat Conversation

Police announced today that they had intercepted two telephone conversations between Walker and Miss Watkins, one at just about the hour at which the body was found and the other after the finding of the body must have been known to both of them.

The first intercepted message from Walker to Miss Watkins was "just sit tight." The second, police said, consisted of Walker's question "how do things look?" and Miss Watkins' answer "not so good. The district attorney is on his way here now.

Razorbacks Beat Christians 20-0

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Nov. 27.—The University of Arkansas Razorbacks closed their season here today with a 20 to 0 victory over Texas Christian university of Fort Worth, Texas, scoring a touchdown in the first quarter and two in the fourth.

Fulbright's forward passing and punting, Bagby's running and Smith's line plunging kept the ball in T. C. U. territory throughout the first half. In the second half, the Frogs came back strong and for several minutes had the Razorbacks on the run with an aerial attack that carried the oval to the Arkansas 13 yard line. Two plays, Fulbright intercepted a Frog pass and the big drive was over.

The last two touchdowns were brought about by the work of Derry, substituting for Smith. At the start of the last period he slipped through for a 50 yard run for a touchdown. In the second half, he plunged over after a poor T. C. U. punt had given the Razorbacks the ball on the 12-yard line.

Bagby was the best ground gainer, making 141 yards the 25 times he carried the ball. Coleman, starred on offense and defense for the Razorbacks.

Clark was the outstanding star for the Frogs, both offensively and defensively. He was outpunted by Fulbright, however.

A NEW KIND OF A BOUT

Fred Fulton Must Now Spar in the Superior Court Ring

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 27.—Fred Fulton, Minneapolis plasterer, and Tony Fuente, the Mexican heavy weight, who "knocked him out" in the opening half minute of a recent bount at Culver City, near here, were preparing today with their managers, J. M. Reddy and Fred Winsor, for a superior court bout with the law, having been held to answer in justice court yesterday on charges of violating the state boxing law.

Justice Charles D. Ballard ordered the quartet held after Tommy Ryan, former middleweight and welterweight champion, testified Fulton told him before the bout he was to receive $4,000 for "laying down" and after Harry M. Lykke, Culver City newspaper man, had recited how Winsor threatened to call off the fight unless Fuente was assured a speedy victory.

Lykke quoted Fulton as explaining to him after the "knock out" that he had wanted to stay in the ring for four rounds, but that Winsor said "the eastern papers were looking for his boy to win in one round and it had to be that way or no fight."

Ryan testified that in addition to the $4,000 Fulton said he was to receive for "taking the tank" his manager, Reddy, was to get $2,000.

Wesley College In Win Over Burleson

GREENVILLE, Texas, Nov. 27.—Wesley college wrested a 3 to 0 victory from Burleson college here today during the last few minutes of play in their 12th annual grid clash. The Panthers carried the ball down the field on off-tackle smashes and forward passes to Burleson's 10-yard line where Boyd, full back, dropped back and kicked a field goal.

Company Offers Full Protection At Reduced Cost

Policy-holders in the Wichita Home Insurance company can depend upon the same adequate protection that is given them by the best old-line companies, but at a cost far less than they would have to pay for old-line protection.

The Wichita Home Insurance company is conducted under Texas insurance laws, and is subject to the strict requirements of those laws. In choosing policy-holders, it insists on medical examinations as rigid as those of old-line companies, and no one who cannot obtain old-line insurance need apply. The Wichita Home Insurance company settles its claims very promptly, usually within 24 hours. It is free of the red tape and delay, in such matters, that old-line policy-holders have to contend with.

Equal protection at a far less cost, is what the Wichita Home Insurance company offers. This insurance is given you at its actual cost, plus a nominal charge for operating expenses—and this money is spent at home.

The company is adding daily to its policy-holders in Wichita Falls. It wants every Wichitan who can get insurance at all, to have an opportunity to understand its special benefits and advantages. The company's home office is in the Morgan building, ground floor.—Adv.

THE TEXACO STAR

Published by The Texas Company, Port Arthur, "illustrating real conservation, we send a photograph showing the type of steel gunbarrel tank in use on some of our leases in the North Texas Division.

"The tank is so constructed that from one inch to three inches vacuum is maintained. Vacuums regulator is also shown. We have seven of these tanks in operation, from which we conserve 200,000 cubic feet of gas daily, not conserved previously, whic h is taken to our Electra gaholine plant.

"This tank and others of like construction pay us good dividends. On the present price of gasoline and residue gas sales, we figure that each three or four months these tanks have earned their investment. Also, they greatly reduce fire hazard on oub producing properties."

WILBUR COOPER

Wilbur Cooper, veteran left-hander, won 20 games and lost 14 for the Pirates last season, which isn't such a bad record. But he believes that in his new environment in Chicago next season he will hang up nearer 25 victories. Hence his broad smile these days as he waits to join the Cub squad next spring.

The "merit" that lifts some men consists in ability to soft-soap the boss.

56,000 See Penn Defeat Cornell At Franklin 20-0

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 27.—(AP)—A dazzling aerial attack gave Pennsylvania a 20 to 0 triumph today over Cornell. Fifty-six thousand spectators saw the Quakers conquer the Ithacans for the first time in four years, finish their first season without a defeat in sixteen years, and strengthen their claims to the mythical football championship of the east.

Out rushed by the powerful big Red Team, which registered seven first downs at straight football to one of the Quakers in a final fight to revive lost prestige, Pennsylvania achieved her victory solely through an overhead drive which was supplemented by all around alertness and brilliant generalship.

Prince's Lawyer Testifies Mr. A 'Advised to Wait

Declares He Told India Prince Not To Pay Blackmail

CASE TO THE JURY

One Defense Witness Held When He Fails To Answer Questions

By DAVIS M. CHURCH.
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—For the first time since trial of the suit of Charles Ernest Robinson against the Midland bank began, testimony came today from the camp of "Mr. A" unidentified prince whom Robinson admits having blackmailed for $750,000 became of the potentate's intimacy with Mrs. Robinson.

It was Mark Water, solicitor for the prince, whose name is kept out of the trial at the behest of the India office, who testified. He said he had advised the potentate and the latter's aide de camp, who the blackmailers have testified was one of their band, to do nothing about the discovery of Mrs. Maude Robinson and "Mr. A" in a Paris hotel room unless the prince were served with papers in a possible divorce action he thought Robinson might bring.

Other testimony in the morning session of the trial concerned itself with the movements of Mrs. Robinson and her beautiful companion, Mrs. Lillian Devan, who, Mrs. Robinson said, was the paramour of the prince's secretary, like "Mr. A," a gentleman of color."

Robinson's suit charges that the bank negligently permitted other to draw $625,000 of the $750,000 obtained by blackmail, which "Mr. A" had put on deposit for him in the bank.

William Cooper Hobbs, solicitor's clerk accused of being one of the conspirators, was one of the bank's last witnesses. He gave perfunctory testimony. He was unable to produce certain books, letters and documents, some of which he said were in Paris and the remainder of which he claimed had been stolen when the box containing them were rifled. He was requested to remain in court.

Sir John Simon, chief of counsel, then began summing up for the bank. The case is expected to go to the jury late today or tomorrow.

Texas Memorial Dedication Takes Place At Austin

Largest Crowd Ever Assembled At State Capital Witness Exercises

MEMORIAL STADIUM, AUSTIN, Nov. 27.—A field of peace inspired by valorous deeds on many a battlefield of war was dedicated here today as the University of Texas memorial stadium.

The soil of France where heroes sleep communed in spirit with the soil of Texas from which those heroes sprang and on which this lasting monument to their memory was built.

The dedication, witnessed by the largest crowd ever assembled in Austin, and painted with lavish colors, started with a parade around the vast amphitheater. The Texas service flag, bearing thousands of stars, was carried by twenty Texas university girls. Governor Pat M. Neff, Bishop Kingsolving of Austin and President Walter M. Splawn of the university led the procession.

Speakers Not Heard.

In the center of the field the speakers mounted an improvised stand, but their voices were lost in the great space.

"The dedication of this memorial stadium today in honor of those who were bathed in the red blood of battle, allustrates a priceless principle in the philosophy of human action as old and as honored as the patriotic impulses of man," said the governor. "A people who do not revere the achievements of the past will not accomplish anything worthy to be remembered by the future."

The governor pointed out that 10,000 Texas boys, "the flower of our civilization," enrolled in colleges were soldiers in the world war.

"It is, indeed, fitting that here on the campus of the University of Texas should be erected by loving, loyal and appreciative hands at this stadium as a memorial to the soldiery of Texas who so bravely fought the battles of freedom," he continued.

"Therefore in the name of our Texas soldiery, both living and dead, we now reverently dedicate, in service to the five million people of Texas, this splendid stadium as a living testimonial of our appreciation and gratitude of all those who went from Texas homes to fight that liberty, truth and justice might live around the world."

5,077 Lost in War.

The Texas soldiers, who lie sleeping beneath the sod and the sea, number 5,077.

When the governor had finished the thousands present turned their faces to the stadium flag pole while the Stars and Stripes, beneath which was the state flag of Texas, were slowly drawn aloft, the band of A. & M. college playing the national air.

The Orange Jacket Girls of the university then let loose hundreds of orange balloons which floated over the audience and across the field. The Longhorn band, brilliant in orange and white, struck up the college song, "The Eyes of Texas," while the throng again rose to its feet.

A thousand girls, dressed in white, did the snake dances about the field to the tune of a jubilant march.

The dedicatory services were a prologue to the gridiron battle which followed shortly.

The weather gods were kind as the stadium field was bathed in a flood of warming sun light, while there was just enough edge to the air to give zest to what was considered Texas university's greatest moment.

"Eczema broke out in pimples on my baby's feet, back and hands when she was a few weeks old. Later small blisters formed and when they broke caused sore eruptions. Her feet itched and burned badly. She cried most of the time; did not sleep any hardly.

"I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and it helped her. I purchased more and after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment she was healed." (Signed) Henry Lee, Concord, Tenn.

The boy or girl who has nothing to worry them about the way they look are so much more noticeable which compared to the shrinking and backwardness of the ones who are afraid to mingle in the fun because they know how unattractive they must look on account of their pimply, blotchy or rough, eczemic skin.

Their one friend is Black and White Ointment, if they will just use it faithfully, because it will get rid of all those ugly blmps and make their skin soft, smooth and lovely. Then, to keep it that way, be sure to use Black and White Soap when you wash. They are both economically priced in liberal packages. AT UNION SERVICES

Two Hundred Baskets Delivered To Poor By Salvation Army

Three hundred and fourth anniversary of Thanksgiving was observed in Wichita Falls Thursday with the union Thanksgiving service the outstanding feature of the day. Due to the illness of Dr. Walter J. Johnson of the First Methodist church, who was to deliver the address of the morning, Rev. Milo Atkinson, pastor of the First Christian church, gave the sermon, taking for his text the twelfth verse of Psalm 116, "What shall I render unto the Lord for the benefits toward me?" The speaker mentioned many things for which people should be thankful.

At Floral Heights

The auditorium of the Floral Heights Methodist church where the services were held, was filled to its capacity. The choir, composed of members of the various choirs of the city, under the direction of Mrs. Luella B. Thompson, sang the anthem, "Exalt His Name." President Coolidge's Thanksgiving proclamation was read by Rev. Leslie Miller. Responsive reading was given by Rev. J. W. Loving. The scripture reading of the morning was given by Dr. O. L. Powers, Rev. Nat F. Grafton presided at the meeting. The benediction was said by Rev. A. J. Holt.

Announcement was made following the sermon that the welfare budget was falling short of its goal, and S. A. L. Morgan made a plea for the community chest, $650 was added to the donations.

Early Morning Mass

Early morning masses were held by the Sacred Heart church and special Thanksgiving services at the Episcopal church. A Thanksgiving service was held by the First Church of Christ Scientist. Unusually large crowds were in attendance at all the religious services.

Observance of the day began early in the morning when services were held by members of the young people's societies of various churches. Baskets of food were distributed to the poor of the city by a number of organizations.

Two hundred baskets were given to the poor by the Salvation Army when the baskets were distributed from the citadel.

BEFORE TWINS WERE BORN

Was Very Miserable. Felt Lots Better After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Wyocena, Wis.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before my twins were born because my sister used it and recommended it to me. I was so I could scarcely go about my daily work. I was in such misery. But after I began taking the second bottle I was feeling lots better. I took three bottles and a half before I was confined and finished the bottle while I was in bed. I got up feeling fine and have taken care of the twins alone ever since. I recommend the Vegetable Compound highly and will sing its praises in the future."—Mrs. Ida Gerbitz, Wyocena, Wis.

It is remarkable how many cases have been reported similar to this one. Many mothers are left in a weakened and run-down condition after childbirth, and for such mothers the care of the baby is well-nigh impossible. Not only is it hard for the mother, but the child itself will indirectly suffer. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is an excellent tonic for the mother both before and after childbirth. It is prepared from medicinal roots and herbs, and can be taken in safety by nursing mothers.

The Old Home Town

A small fire caused from a defective flue called the fire department to the City Junk Yard, 311 Indiana, early Thursday morning. The blaze was extinguished without loss.

The revival services at the Yale Avenue Evangelical church which were to have closed following last night's meeting will be continued through Sunday, according to the pastor, Rev. W. D. Cook.

More than twenty cases were heard in corporation court Thursday morning before City Recorder E. S. Whitelaw. Vagrancy was the charge in most of the cases and seven alleged vagrants were fined.

Commandant and Mrs. O. T. Johnson of hte Salvation Army, were remembered yesterday with a fifteen pound turkey from Tulsa, Oklahoma, where they were stationed for four years.

The first big launch at Lake Kemp, "Elma," a boat from New Orleans, was launched Wednesday afternoon by Martin Rowe of Wichita Falls. The vessel is the length of two large motor trucks, has a gasoline motor, and the cabins and engine room are water tight.

Plans were perfected by the Pat Carrigan post of the American Legion to compile and record all activities of the local organization in the meeting at the Legion hall Wednesday night. It was voted to improve the club rooms at 812 1-2 Ohio, and plans were laid to install pool tables soon.

Thanksgiving day meant imprisonment and freedom for a man who was fined $25 on a charge of vagrancy and impersonating a Texas ranger. During the afternoon he worked quietly, removing the thin wooden ceiling, pushed a hole through the roof of the city hall, and made his escape by running across the roofs of several buildings, climbing to the street below.

A charge of desertion from the United States navy was placed against a young man who was arrested Wednesday evening by Constable Frank Morgan. A charge of robbery was filed against the man three months ago, but he was released ten days ago because sufficient evidence to bring him to trial could not be obtained. He is being held in the county jail.

Willie Lee, Jr., head porter, and Eddie Draughan, assistant porter, talked in behalf of the porter's duty to the hotel. Brufford Williams, lobby boy, furnished music for the evening. Invocation was said by Eddie Shaw.

University of Toronto Plays Detroit In Mixed Rules Game.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 27.—(AP)—The University of Toronto which lost the football championship of Canada to Queens university by a single point, was beaten 30 to 18 by the University of Detroit in a hybrid exhibition here today, played partly under American rules and partly as the Canadians do it.

The first half under Canadian rules introduced Detroit to the lateral pass, frequent punts and open field running without interference—all features of the Canadian game. The half ended 18 to 3 in favor of Toronto.

In the final periods, however, Detroit, playing the game it understood, overcame the Toronto lead, scoring four touchdowns on forward passes and line plunges that bewildered the Canadians.

BANDITS 'FRIENDLY FELLOWS'

But Cop Changes Mind When They Rob Garage a Half Block Away.

SAN ANTONIO, Nov. 27.(INS)—Three bandits, traveling in an expensive touring car, exchanged Thanksgiving greetings with a policeman early today and then drove to a garage only half a block away, robbing the night foreman of $15 at the point of a pistol.

The trio talked with the officer for several minutes. Just friendly fellows, returning from an all night party, they appeared to be, said the policeman.

Well, Mr. Coolidge had unsuspected strength. He survived in spite of these new silver dollars.
