At least 6 of 164 survive jet crash

Associated Press

BUGA, Colombia — Miraculously, at least six people were alive Thursday after an American Airlines jet with 164 aboard smashed into an Andean mountain crest and burst into flames. It was the world's worst plane crash this year.

Human remains and bits of mangled machinery covered the one-mile area where the plane from Miami went down Wednesday night in Buga, 40 miles and four minutes from Cali, its destination.

The cause of the crash was not immediately known.

The Boeing 757 lost radio contact at about 8:45 p.m. CST Wednesday, and the first reports by the airline and Colombian officials said there were no survivors.

But after rescuers made their way to the site early Thursday, braving darkness, rocky terrain and the threat of leftist guerrillas, news of the living came through. One survivor spoke to a television crew as rescue workers attended him.

"Really, I don't remember any problem with the plane, but when I woke up ... and saw everything

Shutdown effect spreads; millions of vets fall victim

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Millions of veterans fell victim to the budget impasse Thursday as Congress failed to act quickly enough to get their benefit checks in the mail on time. Families on welfare also faced a New Year without a check coming.

"They're flat-out scared out there," said Dave Gorman of Disabled American Veterans. "They're being told their service to the country isn't really worth very much right now."

■ Budget talks resume/8A

For the first time, Congress is finding that their battle over a seven-year budget, and the related shutdown of government offices, is threatening a valued and vocal constituency.

A Massachusetts veteran with a 100 percent service-related disability and three children told the American Legion he would commit suicide if he couldn't get his check on time.

Another veteran in a similar situation told Rep. Joseph Kennedy, D-Mass., that he might lose his home if the check is delayed.

"For veterans who rely on disability and pensions, this is not an inside-the-Beltway squabble," said American Legion spokesman Phil Budahn. "This is hitting them where they really feel it."

The reaction has been swift. President Clinton warned Wednesday that 3.3 million veterans wouldn't get their benefits and pension checks on time if Congress didn't act by early Thursday morning. Late Wednesday night, the House passed, 411-1, a measure that would

Winter slips, slides in on a little white

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Winter is here today.

Quite officially, the year's fourth season begins on Dec. 22 this year. For winter's rightful due, it ought to be a bit cold. And it is.

And with winter, there ought to be, rather just might be, a sheen of snow — perhaps a layer —for measuring boot prints if the weatherman's forecast for early-morning snow, possibly mixed with rain, holds true.

While the weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport had called for a winter-weather advisory for last night's and today's predawn hours, the overcast is predicted to break up and form mostly cloudy skies today.

The Midland Police Department reported no weather-related traffic problems by late Friday. But the Texas Department of Public Safety in Midland did predict patches of ice on highways way to the west in El Paso, which got sufficient moisture to turn into ice.

But the eve of the onset of winter did register a low of 29 degrees this morning, when light and slight sleet, a precursor to a really snowy and white Christmas, fell over Midland but quickly became patches of damp-

Charles places duty over love; Di furious at queen's pressure

LONDON (AP) — Putting duty before love of a longtime flame, Prince Charles said Thursday he has no plans to remarry after the divorce his mother is urging.

But Princess Diana, furious that Queen Elizabeth II is publicly pressing for divorce, indicated she was in no hurry to end her fairytale-gone-wrong marriage to the heir to the British throne.

And if she does agree, it is likely to be costly. She wants not just money, status and unlimited access to her two sons, but a role as a roving envoy for Britain. There was media speculation Thursday of a multimillion dollar settlement.

Buckingham Palace confirmed that the queen, fed up with their public bickering, wrote separately to Charles and Diana this week "and gave them her view ... that an early divorce is desirable."

The statement said Charles

Malkiewicz tearfully pleads guilty to federal murder-for-hire charge

By Gary Shanks and Michael Kashgarian

Nancy Malkiewicz, 40, has pleaded guilty to federal charges in connection with the August murder-for-hire scheme that left her husband, Stanley Malkiewicz, severely injured.

On Thursday, Ms. Malkiewicz pleaded guilty before U.S. Magistrate Louis Guirola in a Midland federal court to one charge of using interstate commerce facilities in connection with a murder-for-hire plan.

She originally had been charged with two counts of the same offense — each carrying a maximum sentence of 20 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

Jerald D. "Bo" Underwood, 19, already has pleaded guilty to similar federal charges.

In a later, tearful appearance in the 238th District Court in Midland, Ms. Malkiewicz also pleaded guilty to state charges of attempted capital murder,

Palestinians take control of Bethlehem before Christmas

BETHLEHEM, West Bank (AP) — Four days before Christmas, the PLO took over the town where Jesus was born and hung Palestinian flags on the square where tradition says his manger sat. From one onlooker came a triumphant cry: "This town is Arab!"

But a Palestinian commander leading the Bethlehem transition made a promise Thursday to Jews and Christians alike: All visitors will be welcome.

Church bells pealed in Manger Square as the PLO began preparing for the city's first Palestinian-run Christmas celebrations. Bethlehem is the sixth West Bank town — in addition to the Gaza Strip — to come under Palestinian control as part of the Israel-PLO autonomy accords.

Fireworks burst and gunfire crackled as an Israeli convoy of 11 jeeps pulled out of the square at nightfall. Palestinians mobbed the last jeep and an Israeli soldier standing on the back bumper waved goodbye, ending 28 years of occupation.

"The Zionists are leaving us! This town is Arab!" chanted Mohammed Assad, 73, dancing beneath a huge Palestinian flag.

As women trilled in celebration, the crowd of 10,000 tore down the 32-foot-high chain-link fence around the square's police station, a long-time symbol of Israeli control in the town of 50,000.

Ten busloads of Palestinian police arrived around midnight. Some policemen clambered onto the roofs of the buses as they pulled into Manger Square, waving automatic rifles to the cheers of the crowd. About 850 Palestinian police were to take up positions in the town during the night.

Annegret Kistel, a 19-year-old drama student from east Berlin, likened the spectacle to the 1989 fall of the Berlin Wall: "I can see tonight what I felt then.... You can see the freedom on the people's faces."

Although Muslims outnumber Christians in the town by 35,000 to 15,000, the Christmas celebrations this year are expected to be a manifestation of all Palestinians' national aspirations.

"This is a historical night," said Bethlehem mayor Elias Freij. "At long last, the Israeli occupation has left this town. It's time for us to prove that we are capable of running our affairs by ourselves."

Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat, a Muslim, was to visit Bethlehem for the first time on Sunday, Christmas Eve, and deliver a speech from the roof of the Church of the Nativity before a crowd expected to number in the tens of thousands.

The revelry contrasted with the sorrow of some religious Jews over the loss of a town linked to their history as King David's birthplace and the reputed burial site of biblical matriarch Rachel. A former chief rabbi of Israel, Mordechai Eliyahu, reportedly said Jews should tear their clothes in mourning.

Still, many Israelis seemed indifferent to the handover of Bethlehem. Ramallah and much of Hebron also are to be turned over before Palestinian elections Jan. 20.

Jewish settlers in West Bank communities near Bethlehem, as well as residents of southern neighborhoods of Jerusalem, have worried that the neighboring Palestinian autonomy will threaten their safety. A road enabling settlers to bypass Bethlehem was completed Wednesday.

A lone Israeli right-wing lawmaker, Hanan Porath, held a protest vigil outside the former Israeli headquarters in Bethlehem. "I'm shouting out in pain because they are going to hand over Bethlehem, the city of David, the city of Rachel," he said.

But Palestinian commander Haj Ismail pledged Thursday that Israelis would always be welcome back as visitors. "Everyone can enter Bethlehem," he said. "I hope it will be a happy Christmas, a festival of peace for everyone."

Train accident in Egypt leaves at least 75 dead

BADRSHEIN, Egypt (AP) — Ambulances cruised this Cairo suburb seeking blood donors Thursday after a train carrying laborers plowed into an express coach slowed by heavy fog. The collision sent cars hurtling into dozens of track-side shops and killed at least 75 people.

"There was screaming, people jumping from the train's windows ... and lots of blood," said Samia Mohammed, 13. She witnessed the wreck.

Hours after the crash in Badrshein, 15 miles south of Cairo, dead bodies remained stuck in the tangled wreckage and the sound of wailing relatives pierced the air. Four dead bodies could be seen trapped inside one overturned car.

At least 76 people were injured. Three cars of one train were thrown atop the others and several more careened into wooden shops lining the tracks, destroying or damaging 40 of them. Five train cars were destroyed, said Lt. Gen. Mustafa Sabri, a civil defense official.

Mahmoud Abdel-Shafi, who heard the crash and ran to the scene, said it occurred about 8 a.m. before the track-side shops opened. "Thank God ... not that many people were around," he said.

After the crash, ambulances drove through the streets asking over loudspeakers for volunteer blood donors, and civil defense workers picked through the wreckage in search of more bodies. A blood-spattered child's school bag lay beside the tangled metal.

Police Brig. Mohammed el-Mahdi put the toll at 75 dead and 76 injured. He expected the death toll to rise as rescuers find more bodies in the wreckage.

NATO officially assumes Bosnian peacekeeping mission from U.N.

■ Organization also reports first casualties with German soldier killed during an exercise, Croat civilian who died in collision with NATO vehicle.

Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — American commanders Thursday had good news from the front: Local troops welcomed NATO troops who demolished road blocks, command posts and other symbols of the war.

NATO reported the first casualties of its Bosnian peace mission — a German soldier killed during an exercise and a Croat civilian who died in a collision with a NATO vehicle.

Otherwise, the first day was roundly hailed as a success.

"This is a good-news story," said U.S. Navy Adm. Leighton Smith, commander of the 60,000-strong NATO-led force. Smith said he was "tickled pink" that the soldiers have already moved into Serb-held areas and removed some of the most infamous checkpoints.

However, the commander of American forces in Bosnia cautioned the situation could change.

"The burden of peace is on the signers of the peace accord," Maj. Gen. William Nash told reporters in Tuzla, the northern city that will be the hub for the 20,000 U.S. troops. "If they want peace there will be peace."

NATO formally assumed the peacekeeping mission on Wednesday from the ill-starred U.N. operation that preceded it, with French Lt. Gen. Bernard Janvier, commander of the U.N. mission, handing over command to Smith.

U.N. forces in Bosnia, numbering 24,000 at their peak, were at best able to help deliver humanitarian aid to the besieged and needy. At worst, they were harassed, shot at, taken hostage and accused of failing to protect Bosnian civilians from nearly four years of war that left 200,000 dead and 2 million homeless.

But unlike the lightly armed U.N. peacekeepers, NATO soldiers now setting up in Bosnia have a clear mandate, heavy weapons and a peace plan signed by all sides.

Their goal is to enforce the U.S.-brokered peace accord signed in Paris on Dec. 14 that essentially splits the country into a Serb republic and a Muslim-Croat federation. The mission aims to keep the combatants separated by heavily patrolled zones, while the country tries to rebuild.

In many cases U.N. peacekeepers from NATO countries simply exchanged their U.N. insignia for NATO gear. A U.N. spokesman in New York said 80 percent of the U.N. peacekeepers — about 15,000 troops — had been transferred to NATO command by Thursday.

The troops quickly bulldozed checkpoints of the hostile parties, frequently setting up well-fortified NATO posts in their stead.

"No More Sierra," exulted Sarajevo's daily Vecernje Novine. The frontpage headline celebrated the demolition by French forces Wednesday of Sierra Four, a Serb checkpoint that blocked access to the airport. It was there that a deputy Bosnian prime minister, Hakija Turaljic, was shot and killed by Serb gunmen in full view of U.N. peacekeepers in January 1993.

The road between Sarajevo and Kiseljak, 20 miles to the west, also was cleared of the Muslim, Croat and Serb checkpoints that made free passage impossible for much of the war. NATO control posts replaced them.

British forces moved deep into Bosnian Serb territory, demolishing Bosnian Croat and Serb checkpoints. And Nash ventured into the Brcko corridor, the northeastern strip of land connecting Bosnian Serb holdings with Serbia proper that was fiercely fought over during the war.

Smith was upbeat after meeting with Prime Minister Haris Silajdzic.

"It's obviously just a start but we are very, very pleased by the way things are going," he told reporters.

In Tuzla, Nash was more cautious but also positive after meeting with generals of all sides — the Muslim-led government army, the rebel Serbs and the Bosnian Croats.

PLEADS: Malkiewicz appears in federal court before 238th District Judge John Hyde.

(From 1A)

The state sentence will not be determined until Ms. Malkiewicz is sentenced on federal charges, which usually takes about 60 days. In state court, Ms. Malkiewicz agreed to a sentence of twice as many years as the federal court sentence, minus two years.

Once determined, this sentence will run concurrently with the federal sentence, according to Assistant District Attorney Teresa Clingman.

What this complicated sentence means is that Ms. Malkiewicz will be a convicted state felon, but probably will serve only federal time, Ms. Clingman said.

A jury could have sentenced Ms. Malkiewicz to as much as 99 years or life in prison.

Ms. Malkiewicz first pleaded guilty in federal court to using Western Union to transfer money to Underwood across state lines for the murder of her husband. While the funds were transferred from Midland to Conroe, the transfer was routed electronically through South Carolina.

Malkiewicz was shot about 9 p.m. Aug. 24 while standing in his driveway at 6008 Farm-to-Market Road 307 in Greenwood. Malkiewicz, a geologist, was transferred to Midland from Houston a few months before the shooting.

Ms. Malkiewicz stood to gain as much as $1,000,000 in life insurance, according to court documents.

Ms. Malkiewicz was arrested in Houston the day after the shooting; Underwood was arrested there a few days later. Ms. Malkiewicz remains in the Midland Detention Center awaiting sentencing.

Malkiewicz has largely recovered from his wounds and has filed for divorce. The Malkiewiczes have been married for 18 years and have two daughters, ages 15 and 17.

CRASH: Miraculously, at least 6 passengers survive scattered around me, I realized we were in an accident," Gonzalo Dussan, one of the survivors, told Noticiero 24 Horas as rescue workers attended to him.

By late Thursday afternoon, the Red Cross in Cali said eight people had been taken from the wreckage alive; one, a man, died at a hospital five hours later. But RCN radio later reported only seven people had been taken from the crash, six of whom have survived.

Mauricio Reyes, a 19-year-old Colombian business student at the University of Michigan-Dearborn, was recovering at a Cali hospital Thursday, covered with cuts and bruises, breathing through an oxygen mask.

His brother, Andres Reyes, hugged relatives when they learned Mauricio was alive.

"After all I've cried, what incredible joy," he said.

The others, identified by RCN radio, were Dussan's son and daughter Gonzalo and Michelle, and two women named Nancy Delgado and Mercedes Ramirez.

Ramirez, 21, is a student at Northwest Missouri State University. She was traveling with her parents, of Kansas City, Mo., who are presumed dead, said Stacy Dowling, Ramirez's roommate.

American Airlines said the plane carried 156 passengers, four of them infants, and eight crew members. It was not immediately clear how many Americans were aboard.

The crew included Capt. Nicholas Tafuri, 57, of Marco Island, Fla., and First Officer Don Williams, 39, of New Smyrna Beach, Fla.

Among the passengers were Paris Kanellakis, a Brown University computer science professor, and his wife and two children. Also believed aboard were the son, daughter-in-law and grandchild of former Miami Mayor Maurice Ferre.

The airline said it would not release a full passenger list until relatives were notified. It did not say how long that would take.

So the families waited.

At the Cali airport, relatives clung to each other and cried. Some reportedly fainted. About a dozen relatives waited at a military base in Buga, where rescuers had brought some survivors.

"I'll stay here as long as it takes," said Jaime Bonilla, whose sister was on the flight. "I'm going to wait to see the body for myself."

Alvaro Cala, director of Colombian civil aviation, told RCN radio the plane was 13 miles east of its flight plan. He said the plane would have landed in Cali in four minutes had it not crashed.

Bob Crandall, American Airlines' chief executive officer, said there were no reports of bad weather and that the flight crew knew the terrain.

Initial reports from civil defense authorities indicate the plane hit one side of the crest and slid over, suggesting the pilot was descending with the plane's nose up, as if reacting to imminent danger.

"I saw only pieces where the plane crashed and clothing hanging from the trees. There were no bodies left at all," farmer Pedro Rosana told RCN Radio. Rosana, who walked three hours to the site Wednesday night, said the largest chunk of plane he saw was six feet long.

The crash was perhaps the deadliest involving a U.S. airliner since a Pan Am flight went down over Lockerbie, Scotland, in 1988 — seven years ago Thursday. That crash, blamed on terrorists, killed 259 people aboard and 11 on the ground.

Rescue officials' arrival at the crash site was delayed by darkness and the mountainous terrain — and by the danger of rebels. A police spokesman in Buga, Ricardo Canizales, described the region as a "hot zone," or headquarters for leftist guerrillas.

Most of the passengers were reportedly Colombians traveling to see their families for the holidays in Cali, home to 2 million people.

In Miami, the FBI said an unsigned letter was faxed Monday to The Miami Herald and The New York Times warning of bomb attacks against flights from Venezuela and Colombia.

FBI spokesman Paul Miller said there was no reason to believe the letter was linked to Wednesday's crash, which originated in Miami. Still, the National Transportation Safety Board sent an investigative team that included an expert on explosions and fires.

The Boeing 757-200 is a twin-engine, medium- to long-range jetliner that can carry up to 239 passengers. First flown in 1982, it has a range of 3,200 miles.

Crandall said the airplane, which had Rolls-Royce engines, was delivered new in August 1991. It had an extensive maintenance check in January, and a less complete one last month.

In Seattle, Boeing spokesman Bill Curry said this was the first crash involving a 757. "All of our thoughts are with families and friends of the passengers now," he said.

Curry said the company was sending a team — including an investigator, a pilot and an aircraft structure expert — from Seattle.

Investigators from the FBI, the NTSB and the Federal Aviation Administration also were headed to the scene.

Editor's note: People seeking information about passengers on Flight 965 can call an American Airlines help number at 1-800-245-0999.

WINTER: Cool to cold weekend's on tap

(From 1A)

ness. The sleet plus rain added up to a mere .02 inch of moisture — barely enough to wet blocks of Christmas postage stamps.

Today and the Christmas holiday weekend promise to be cool to cold and dry, which pleases some and frustrates others.

While Midland farmer-rancher Alvey Bryant reported that he was "doing good" while enjoying the evening with his family, Bryant said he was "just hoping it will rain.

"It is just misting rain a little bit," he lsaid late Friday night. "It is not doing much good, but it sure will beat a sandstorm."

And this morning's mid-20s temperatures may cause the mist to turn into films of ice.

"I hoped it would snow and then come a good rain," Bryant said in his optimism. "If it snowed, the snow would loosen the soil up, and the soil will absorb the rain."

The Midland farm-and-ranch country has been without a good underground seasoning — moisture — at wintertime in the last two years, he recalled.

"We have got to get some good underground seasoning this winter in order to get through next July and August," which is a peak growing season for cotton.

Alvey said he recently dug a posthole a foot deep, "and it was dry."

And the lack of good range grasses in West Texas and in Mexico have caused ranchers to sell off their cattle early because of the dry country and the dearth of grasses for forage. The influx of cattle resulted in a drop in market prices.

"There's too many cattle on the market," Bryant said. "The northern half of Old Mexico has been dry for three years.

"We are still in trouble. We didn't have no underground seasoning to grow grass. I've been selling cattle every two months, and every time, they get cheaper."

In addition to rain and snow, the old farm land needs some cold weather, well below freezing day and night for about a week, "to kill off the boll weevil, bollworm and cabbage looper," which otherwise will make severe inroads into the 1996 cotton crop, Bryant said.

So far in December at the National Weather Service in Midland, the rainfall-moisture count totals .17 inch, which is far below the month's average of slightly more than half an inch: .56.

Midland's 30-year average annual rainfall is 14.96 inches.

And as 1995 is just more than a week from its end, the year's rainfall so far totals only 10.63 inches.

For today, the weatherman is calling for mostly cloudy skies, high temperatures in the upper 30s and easterly to northeasterly winds at 5 to 15 mph.

The low temperature tonight is to be near 20 degrees.

Saturday should offer mostly cloudy skies and a peak temperature near 40 degrees.

For the remainder of the Christmas holiday weekend and Christmas Day on Monday, the weatherman is calling for nighttime low temperatures from the low 20s to 30 degrees and daytime high temperatures from the upper 40s to the low 50s.

Thursday's high temperature was 43 degrees, and the overnight low temperature was 29.

The record low temperature for Dec. 21 is 8 degrees in 1989, and the record high temperature for the date is 81 degrees in 1981.

NATION

Snow fell across the Northeast, Southwest and Midwest on Thursday, while temperatures plunged in the South.

A snowstorm took Utah by surprise Thursday morning, causing a string of accidents along freeways. Cars rolled off an icy Interstate 15 into ditches and poles in central Utah. No fatalities were reported.

At least 2 inches of new snow fell in Springville, Utah, while North Salt Lake received 1 1/2 inches.

In northeastern Ohio, lake-effect snow squalls dumped nearly 8 inches of snow in Burton.

In Indiana, nearly 7,000 customers remained without power Thursday, two days after an ice storm, heavy snowfall and strong winds brought down lines.

With the exception of several inches of snow and blowing snow in Maine, accumulations across the Northeast were light Thursday following a big storm that moved into southeastern Canada.

Pick 3 Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — The Pick 3 winning numbers drawn Thursday by the Texas Lottery, in order:

1-7-2

VETS: Funding delay places ADC checks at risk provide funding for those veterans checks through 1996.

(From 1A)

But by midafternoon Thursday, the Senate still hadn't gotten the bill to the floor for debate. Action there was delayed by a dispute over whether Democrats could offer an amendment that would extend the stopgap spending measure to all government services.

Even if the veterans' issue is dodged, a lack of funding today could force the Health and Human Services Department to delay sending out Aid to Families with Dependent Children, or welfare, checks to 4.7 million families comprising more than 13 million people. HHS says those quarterly payments total $3.6 billion.

The typical mother and two children receive $377 a month in welfare, said Deborah Weinstein of the Children's Defense Fund. "It would be a disaster for families to miss their checks, frankly, by as much as a day," she said.

Also at risk are quarterly payments of $23.5 billion to states to help finance their Medicaid programs.

Veterans Affairs Department spokesman Jim Holley said the veterans' checks were processed and ready to go but would be delayed a day for every day that Congress procrastinates.

Normally the checks, worth about $1.4 billion a month, are in veterans' mailboxes by the first of the month, and even a few days delay "could be devastating" to the large number of veterans who are elderly, disabled or in lower income levels, Holley said. The VA has had minor delays in mailing checks in the past, but this was the first time that the entire benefits program could be halted.

A six-day government shutdown last month idled 800,000 federal workers. On Dec. 15, there still was no agreement between Congress and the White House on a seven-year balanced-budget plan. Congress refused to pass temporary spending legislation for those agencies whose fiscal 1996 budgets have yet to be approved, leading to furloughs of 260,000 federal employees.

Congressional Republicans say President Clinton is to blame for the latest shutdown because he has vetoed 1996 budgets they have passed covering veterans, education, health and housing programs.

Democrats accuse Republicans of using federal workers as pawns to pressure the White House into accepting their version of a seven-year balanced-budget plan.

The White House, which is urging Congress to reopen the government without conditions, on Thursday issued new figures on the impact of the shutdown. Among the findings:

■ On an average December day, 383,000 people visit national parks, and businesses adjacent to parks are losing $14 million a day due to their closures.

■ The nation is losing $60 million a day because the State Department cannot issue what would normally be 20,000 visas to visitors who spend an average $3,000 on trips to the United States.

ROYALS: Charles, Diana, monarchy in quagmire agreed with his mother's view and said so to Diana.

(From 1A)

The prince's press secretary moved quickly Thursday to stifle speculation that Charles' intends to marry his longtime love, Camilla Parker Bowles.

"The Prince of Wales has no intention of remarrying," press secretary Allan Percival said. "This has been the subject of great speculation and we are now making clear the prince's position."

The statement was greeted with relief by the hierarchy of the Church of England. "It was enormously helpful," said church spokesman Bishop Nigel McCulloch.

The British monarch is temporal head of the Anglican Church, which still frowns on divorce. The coronation is a religious ceremony, and Anglican leaders said Thursday there would be grave problems with Charles becoming king if he married Mrs. Parker Bowles, a recent divorcee whom Diana blames for her own marriage break-up.

"It's yet another example of the prince putting his duty to the country and to the throne before his own personal desires," said Lord St. John of Fawsley, a constitutional expert.

Diana, among the most popular members of the royal family, said in a television interview last month that she does not want a divorce.

She was reportedly furious that news of the queen's letters was leaked to the press. Ignoring a throng of photographers Thursday, Diana sped away from her Kensington Palace home in a car with darkened windows, taking her sons Prince William, 13, and Prince Harry, 11, to play tennis at her gym.

Richard Kay, a reporter at the Daily Mail who has had off-the-record interviews with Diana, said she was particularly upset that the story broke before she told her sons about the queen's letters and a letter from Charles to Diana telling her he agrees with his mother's wishes.

William and Harry, on holiday from boarding school, are staying with their mother before joining Charles for a family Christmas at the queen's Sandringham estate. Diana has refused to go.

The queen's patience with the couple's public bickering apparently snapped after Diana questioned Charles' suitability to be king in her television interview last month.

Both Charles, 47, and Diana, 34, have admitted committing adultery during their marriage. In her TV interview, Diana said she had an affair with riding instructor James Hewitt. Journalist Jonathan Dimbleby identified the other woman in Charles' life as Mrs. Parker Bowles.

Diana's personal popularity and her status as mother of a future king makes it hard for the queen and the rest of the royal family to freeze her out.

Palace officials are negotiating a public role with her. It now appears that the divorce terms would be part of the deal. The couple separated in 1992 after 11 years of marriage.

The palace statement said there was no indication how soon a divorce could take place. But under British law, it could happen within weeks. If there are grounds for divorce and both spouses agree, all the couple must do is fill out the legal papers and pay a $60 fee.

A judge usually grants a provisional decree, allowing the parties a breathing period. Six weeks later, unless the couple changes their minds, the marriage is terminated.

Mrs. Parker Bowles, 48, continued Thursday to maintain the public silence she has kept through years of newspaper gossip about her relationship with Charles.

She and Charles met 25 years ago at a society ball. He was a young naval officer, one year her junior. His authorized biography said he loved her straight away, but she married while he was posted abroad.

Convicted felons to serve as Mississippi sheriffs

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Two decades ago, Gary W. Mauney was convicted of selling drugs. Next month, he will become one of three convicted felons serving as sheriffs in Mississippi.

A quirk in state law allows people convicted of federal crimes or certain state crimes before November 1992 to get elected to office.

Even if the sheriffs have the support of loyal, forgiving or uninformed voters, some state officials can't bear having felons in charge of upholding the law.

"This really makes us look kind of dumb. I can only believe that many voters did not know the situation," Public Safety Commissioner Jim Ingram said.

Moore won a state Supreme Court ruling this week to force a fourth sheriff, Paul Barrett, out of the job he held since 1968. Barrett was convicted Oct. 12 of lying under oath about the value of a motorcycle he received, but Warren County voters re-elected him in November.

Moore argued that Barrett was subject to removal because he was convicted since November 1992. Barrett had contended that he technically is not a felon until he is sentenced on Jan. 26.

The attorney general pointed out that it is generally illegal for a convicted felon to carry firearms, and he said two of the sheriffs taking office the same day as Mauney would be subject to arrest if they strapped on a gun.

State law requires that all new law enforcement officers complete a training program in their first year of office to get paid. Officers cannot carry a weapon until they complete the course, which includes firearms training.

Mauney said he finished the course and is "legal and ready to go" when he is sworn in Jan. 2 because he got a judge to order that he was covered by a 1993 law designed primarily to allow rehabilitated felons to hunt.

Budget talks resume but fight over six-day government shutdown threatens progress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bipartisan budget talks sprang back to life Thursday, but Democrats threatened to cut them off again if Republicans don't swiftly send President Clinton a bill ending the six-day government shutdown.

Behind the scenes, top White House officials and congressional budget writers huddled in a Capitol meeting room and studied rival schemes for balancing the budget by 2002. When the session ended, there were hints of progress.

The bargainers tentatively agreed to some cuts in civil service benefits, banking, veterans, energy and transportation programs, said a participant who spoke on condition of anonymity. And they issued a statement calling their meeting "constructive."

Asked about areas where negotiators reached tentative agreements, White House chief of staff Leon Panetta said, "That's going to be presented to the president tomorrow."

Clinton, House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., and other top lawmakers planned a White House meeting for today.

But both sides also traded threats over a more immediate issue: Whether to reopen temporarily the nine Cabinet departments and other agencies partially shuttered since last Saturday because their budget bills are unfinished. The stalemate has resulted in 260,000 federal workers missing work — and has prompted a contest by both sides over the political high ground.

"The petulance we saw the last couple of days is unacceptable," said Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., referring to the GOP's refusal to approve a stopgap bill reopening agencies until a budget deal is completed.

He told reporters that unless Congress sent such legislation to Clinton in the next day or two, "I don't foresee any continued negotiations on the budget, at least in the foreseeable future."

The Clinton administration backed up Daschle.

"I think he's saying some very obvious and practical things," said White House spokesman Mike McCurry.

There was a glint of hope. Lead-

Clinton to release Whitewater notes under agreement with Republicans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Threatened with a certain court challenge, the White House on Thursday agreed to surrender disputed Whitewater notes to investigators and halt a dramatic confrontation between Congress and President Clinton.

After days of negotiation, presidential lawyers reached a previously elusive agreement with House Republicans that cleared the way for releasing the notes voluntarily to both lawmakers and prosecutors investigating Whitewater.

"We have reached a very satisfactory conclusion ... that was much to the liking of both sides," White House counsel Jack Quinn said after emerging from a meeting with Republicans.

Quinn said he still needed to discuss logistics with senators who sought the notes, but added that the documents would be turned over "in the next day or so."

Under the agreement, the president preserves the right to claim in the future he is entitled to attorney-client privilege in Whitewater. But Congress would not have to decide now whether to accept that claim.

"Whatever merits Whitewater might have in general, it is thoroughly unwarranted to have a constitutional confrontation" over the documents, said House Banking Committee Chairman Jim Leach, who negotiated the deal.

The White House's lengthy resistance to releasing the notes had propelled the Whitewater affair back to front-page news and prompted an extraordinary Senate vote Wednesday to take Clinton to court. Senate lawyers were working Thursday to get the court challenge ready for next week when the deal was struck.

There appeared to be no further roadblocks. Senate Whitewater Committee chairman Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., who waged the successful battle to force the notes' release, expressed pleasure at the agreement but chided the White House for the delay. "They should have done it long ago," he said.

Clinton ignited the dispute earlier this month when he cited attorney-client privilege and refused to comply with a Senate subpoena demanding an aide's notes from a 1993 meeting on Whitewater. Criminal prosecutors investigating Whitewater also demanded the documents.

Woman's efforts worthy of honor

For decades, the influence of women has been exerted steadily on the Republican Party in Texas. The results of that influence have been felt at all levels of government — literally from the courthouse to the White House, as Republicans have found increasing approval from voters at the polls.

One of the women who has worked tirelessly for the Republican Party is Lou Brown, who in November was named by the Texas Federation of Republican Women as one of Texas' Ten Outstanding Republican Women of the Year. It was an honor anyone familiar with Mrs. Brown and her work for the Republican Party agrees she richly deserves.

She has remained in the forefront of political involvement, working for GOP candidates and helping to make the Republican Party a significant political force throughout the state and nation.

Mrs. Brown is the fifth Midland woman to receive the prestigious honor during the 30-year history of the Texas Federation of Republican Women. The others were Margaret Rhea, Juandelle Lacy, the late Joan Paxton and Barbara (Culver) Clack. That fact also underscores another one — that Republican women in Midland County have been among those shaping the future of the Republican Party in Texas for more than three decades.

While Lou Brown was helping the Republican Party cause statewide, her husband, Win Brown, was elected a county commissioner in Midland County and served for 24 years with distinction.

Lou Brown's impact on the Republican Party in Texas has been outstanding. She fully deserves the honor bestowed on her by the Texas Federation of Republican Women.

'Miracle' of Galileo makes list of astounding feats

The Galileo spacecraft's apparently successful probe in Jupiter's atmosphere adds yet another item to the list of remarkable feats of the U.S. space program. Even a society as accustomed as ours is to technological miracles should be amazed by this one.

Of course, technological miracles don't happen on their own. They come from a combination of vision, technical inventiveness, adaptability and luck. Galileo's successful arrival at Jupiter after a 6-year, 2 billion-plus mile journey had all those ingredients.

Space scientists received confirmation last week that Galileo's probe, which had been traveling separately and quietly toward a fiery collision with the largest planet, had awakened, plunged on course into Jupiter's atmosphere, and transmitted data on that atmosphere back to the parent spacecraft before disintegrating in pressure and temperatures rivaling the sun's. Meanwhile, Galileo itself fired its rockets perfectly to attain an orbit around Jupiter.

It will take days for Galileo, using jury-rigged backup systems after its main antenna broke, to retransmit the sensor's data to Earth and months for scientists to reform and refine their theories to fit the probe's discoveries and other insights gained while Galileo orbits Jupiter for the next couple of years and transmits, painfully slowly, its Jovian discoveries back to Earth.

Where that data will lead in an increased understanding of the solar system and its formation can hardly be anticipated now. But if the impact of the Hubble space telescope is any guide, the results could bring revolutionary adjustments in thinking.

This endeavor, 20 years in the planning and executing and space traveling, will be in the astounding science category if it comes close to that mark.

Could the human Galileo, who discovered four moons of Jupiter nearly 400 years ago, ever have imagined that a vessel named for him would someday be arriving there?

Hard to say.

Can we imagine where human devices will be going 400 years from now?

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Dec. 22, the 356th day of 1995. There are nine days left in the year. Winter arrives at 3:17 a.m. EST.

Today's highlight in history:

On Dec. 22, 1944, during the World War II Battle of the Bulge, the Germans demanded the surrender of encircled American troops at Bastogne, Belgium. Brigadier General Anthony C. McAuliffe reportedly replied: "Nuts!" Additional U.S. forces ended the siege four days later.

On this date:

In 1775, a Continental naval fleet was organized in the rebellious American colonies under the command of Ezek Hopkins.

In 1864, during the Civil War, Union Gen. William T. Sherman sent a message to President Lincoln from Georgia, saying, "I beg to present you as a Christmas gift the city of Savannah."

In 1894, French army officer Alfred Dreyfus was convicted of treason in a court-martial that triggered worldwide charges of anti-Semitism. Dreyfus was eventually vindicated.

In 1941, British Prime Minister Winston Churchill arrived in Washington for a wartime conference with President Roosevelt.

In 1963, an official 30-day mourning period following the assassination of President Kennedy came to an end.

In 1971, the United Nations General Assembly voted to ratify the election of Kurt Waldheim to be Secretary-General.

In 1989, Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu, the last of Eastern Europe's hard-line Communist rulers, was toppled from power in a popular uprising.

In 1989, playwright Samuel Beckett died in Paris at age 83.

Ten years ago: Eighteen miners were killed in a gas explosion that tore through a coal mine in southwestern Poland.

Diary offers glimpse of conservative JFK

WASHINGTON — The president who's become an icon of American liberalism might have felt right at home in House Speaker Newt Gingrich's Republican Revolution.

A recently published diary written in 1945 by John F. Kennedy suggests the future president was far more conservative — at least by today's standards — than many of his current admirers choose to believe. From his criticisms of President Franklin D. Roosevelt to his views on the formative stages of the United Nations, the young Kennedy seems a far cry from the raving liberal that his detractors have portrayed him to be. The diary covers two months that Kennedy spent touring post-war Europe as a correspondent for Hearst Newspapers.

Anderson

Called "Prelude to Leadership: The European Diary of John F. Kennedy," the book has prompted a legal challenge from Kennedy's children, whose lawyer argues that it's being published in violation of copyright laws. The rights to the diary were purchased by Regnery Publishing from Dierdre Henderson, who says Kennedy gave her the diary while she was working as a research assistant in his senate office in 1959-60. Kennedy's lawyer says any profits from the book should go directly to the JFK Library Foundation.

The diary describes vividly the devastation he saw in post-war Europe, and chronicles his encounters with high officials and aristocrats in England, Ireland and Germany. At the time, Kennedy was a 28-year-old veteran of the war, whose family connections helped him gain access to a world of decision-makers and diplomacy usually the province of men twice his age. During much of his European travels, Kennedy was in the company of Navy Secretary James Forrestal, who was a close family friend and confidant.

Although most Kennedy biographers tend to glaze over his brief foray into journalism, the diary makes clear that the young Kennedy was already thinking hard about America's future in the post-war world.

The most notable entries are not about Europe but about the domestic situation in America. His sharpest criticism, for example, was reserved for the most popular Democratic president this century, Franklin D. Roosevelt. It's a critique that could just as easily have come from the mouths of today's GOP revolutionaries:

"Mr. Roosevelt has contributed greatly to the end of Capitalism in our own country, although he would probably argue the point at some length," Kennedy wrote in one notation. "He has done this, not through the laws which he sponsored or were passed during his presidency, but rather through the emphasis he put on rights rather than responsibilities."

At the same time, he was quite complimentary of the military hero he would later succeed as president. Of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Kennedy wrote, "He never lost that humble way and therefore easily won the hearts of those with whom he worked."

The diary begins with Kennedy's take on the United Nations conference in San Francisco, which the young reporter viewed with as much suspicion as many of today's conservatives.

"The conference at San Francisco suffered from inadequate preparation and lack of fundamental agreement among the Big Three; from an unfortunate press which praised it beyond all limit at its commencement, which paid the way for subsequent disillusionment both in England and in this country (United States)," Kennedy wrote. "The finished Charter is a product of these weaknesses."

Later in the same entry, Kennedy unwittingly forecasts the bureaucratic mess that has become the modern-day United Nations: "The Social and Economic Body of the General Assembly will merely issue significant pamphlets on world conditions — significant in their content but not in their effect."

But for all his foresight, Kennedy was also spectacularly wrong about other matters. In one entry, for example, he comes close to apologizing for Adolf Hitler after visiting his bombed-out mountain home and the Berlin bunker where he died.

Like a true Kennedy, however, not every moment of his European foray was occupied with war and diplomacy. "I am quite surprised to see with what zest the German girls, who can be quite attractive, throw themselves at the Americans," Kennedy writes. "I cannot believe it would be this way in England or America if the situation were reversed. They argue that there haven't been any men around for four years and it is merely biological."

WILLIAM MURCHISION

'The Sudanese' know true meaning of Christmas

As usual on Christmas Eve, churches will be swamped, partly by people who don't patronize churches any other time of year. These, as usual, will ooh and ahh over carols, candles, banked poinsettias and the congregation's upward surge on the first note of Handel's "Hallelujah Chorus."

Murchison

Bless these folk, you have to say. Better to be in church once a year than never. On the other hand, there are profounder reasons for observing the birth of God's Son. These reasons shine out from the faces of a group of worshipers at a Dallas Episcopal parish with which I am acquainted. These particular faces are not white — they are ebony, like a Victorian cameo. The frames to which the faces are attached are long, lithe and lean — the frames of Sudanese refugees.

From what have these refugees taken refuge in North Texas? From oppression? Yes. There is a lot of that going around. But, in the case of the Sudanese, the oppression is of a character we rarely envision today. The Sudanese are refugees for the sake of the Gospel — victims of frank persecution by their country's Islamic fundamentalist regime.

The story of Christ's birth is not to them, shall we say, a seasonal tale — a happy story to read when garlands festoon the mantle and chill winds blow outside. The story is transformational. You hear it, and if, with all your heart, you believe its truth, why, everything thereafter is different. The story is more than story. It is Gospel — Good News. Unto us is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord ...

This is a business much more serious than poinsettias, more serious even than Handel! The kind of business that can drive men, women and children out of their ancient homeland and into a world unfamiliar to them — it is that sort. It reconciles them to the loss of jobs, possessions and culture. Because, when all's said, the Gospel is meat and drink to those who embrace it. The rest is pumpkin pie: sweet but dispensable.

Out of nowhere, seemingly, the Sudanese turned up one Sunday recently at the Episcopal Church of the Holy Cross in Dallas' Oak Lawn section. Their refugee housing was relatively near. Anglicans all, they sought and found the sacramental, prayer-book worship to which they were habituated in the Sudan.

The Sudanese came with hands outstretched — to receive not a wad of dollar bills but the Body of Christ in the sacrament. "Not one came here asking for help," says Father Henry Pendergrass, Holy Cross' rector. "They asked for a church."

A church they found. Holy Cross' congregation, with one heart and mind, took them in: objecting only, as one member put it, that "I don't like to think of them as 'the Sudanese.' I think of them as Peter and Philip and so on ..."

The objection proved definitive. Into the Body of Christ, 4052 Herschel St. branch, each refugee has been tenderly incorporated. The three or four dozen Sudanese who attend Holy Cross have been joined by a handful of Ghanans and Liberians.

Will the Sudan ever see its lost sons and daughters again? Much depends on whether the free world rouses itself against the bigots who, in Allah's name, forbid the building of churches and flog priests rash enough to administer communion wine. So far, the outside world has hardly noticed the war against Sudanese Christianity.

Meanwhile, on Christmas Eve, at least one altar rail I know of, the hands of African Christians will reach out reverently for the sacrament as if there were no more important gift on Earth — better than 24-karat jewelry, better than a new Lexus.

Actually, as these particular Christians see it, there isn't anything better than the Bread of Life. They shame the esthetic Christians, the social Christians, so comfortable and cultivated and decorous.

"The Sudanese" — as Holy Cross Church refuses proudly to call them — know much more than the name of the child for whom angels sang at Bethlehem. They know his love; they know his power.

CHARLEY REESE

Ludwig von Mises Institute revives ideas of liberty

When somebody says he believes in free enterprise or the free market, it pays to ask him what he means.

Reese

Even more so than when that smart Greek, Aristotle, walked the earth, it is important these days to define the terms before the discussion starts. Not only do some people not know what they are talking about, many these days use language to disguise the truth rather than communicate it.

Free enterprise, for example, to some means doing whatever the big business that funds their operation wants to do — including accepting government favors, federal subsidies and regulations that will put their competitors out of business or, better yet, make sure they never start.

To neoconservatives, like Jack Kemp, free enterprise means free-market policies for the elite and a welfare state, financed by the middle class, for the lower economic classes. In other words, slightly modified socialism.

The old song says that engineers from Georgia Tech drink their whiskey straight. Well, if you like your free-market philosophy straight, undiluted by political correctness, Fabian socialism and plain old corporate-socialist dissembling, then the place for you is the Ludwig von Mises Institute at Auburn University.

The institute is the heart and soul of the Austrian School of Economics in the United States. This school of economic thought is named for the country where, in the 19th century, philosophical thought and scholarly research were placed in the service of true free-market economics. People knew free-market economics worked; the Austrian scholars told them why it works.

The principles are simple and, as you will see, quite at odds with the political establishment in Washington and with many who masquerade as conservatives. Unhampered markets, competition, entrepreneurship and private property. Essential corollaries are true laissez-faire government and sound money.

The late Murray Rothbard and Llewellyn Rockwell Jr. were the dynamic duo who put the institute in the public arena. Rockwell continues to carry the banner as president. If you aren't already familiar with the institute, here's your chance to get ahead of the crowd.

A few years from now, after the ground has fallen out from under their feet, the liberal elite media will be talking about the Ludwig von Mises Institute as if it had suddenly appeared from Mars. The elite media never recognize trends that conflict with their prejudices, which is why they are so often surprised by such things as Ronald Reagan's election and the collapse of the Soviet Union.

Logic, principle, sound scholarship and straight talk are what you will find at the Ludwig von Mises Institute. I'm greatly amused at how shocked parlor conservatives are sometimes. The idea that liberty is not politically correct worries the heck out of these dilettantes.

Just to give you the flavor, when the subject of a monument to Franklin Roosevelt came up, Lew Rockwell didn't just say, "No, there are enough granite heads in Washington already." Instead, he said, "No, his memorial is Washington, D.C., a bloated parasite sucking the wealth and health out of the rest of the country. Isn't it enough that his likeness is on the dime, which thanks to him is worth about two cents?"

The address is Ludwig von Mises Institute, Auburn, AL 36849-5301. You can call at (334) 844-2500 or fax at (334) 844-2583. The e-mail address is lvmises(AT)mail.auburn.edu. The Web page is at http://www.auburn.edu/(TILDE)lvmises. Ask them to send you a brochure.

In all seriousness, ideas and knowledge are the foundation on which political movements, policies and institutions are built. Our forefathers developed the ideas of liberty first, then fought the revolution and constructed the institutions to support liberty.

Those institutions are now largely occupied by people who view liberty as a threat to government. To restore the institutions of liberty will require reviving the ideas of liberty. That's what they are doing at the institute.

House approves legislation on welfare reform

■ Clinton says he will veto bill; Dole hopes for Senate vote on it today.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Republicans overcame their own differences on Thursday and finally won House approval for a welfare bill that would shift much of the responsibility for poor people from the federal government to the states. But President Clinton said explicitly for the first time that he would veto it.

Thursday's vote in the House, 245 to 178, suggested that Republicans did not have the two-thirds majority needed to override a veto. The Senate is expected to approve the measure, but the margin there is likely to be even smaller. So the bill is not likely to become law in its current form.

The Senate took up the legislation on Thursday night, and Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, the Republican majority leader, said he hoped for a final vote today. Moderate Republican senators object to parts of the bill, but did not block its consideration.

The bill, a central element of the Republican Contract With America, would, among other things, eliminate the 60-year-old federal guarantee of cash assistance for poor children. It would instead provide each state with a fixed amount of federal money that could be used to assist the poor.

After sending mixed signals on the bill, and allowing his lieutenants to issue veto threats in his name, Clinton declared on Thursday that he would reject the legislation, forged by a conference committee of Republican negotiators from the House and the Senate.

"If Congress sends me this conference report, I will veto it and insist that they try again," said Clinton, who attacked the measure's provisions on welfare grants, Medicaid coverage and tax credits for low-income workers.

"This welfare bill includes deep cuts that are tough on children and at odds with my central goal of moving people from welfare to work," he said. "The Republican budget cuts in Medicaid and the Earned Income Tax Credit would undermine real reform and penalize people who choose work over welfare."

With Clinton's veto threat, welfare becomes another of the issues in the budget dispute between the president and Congress that has shut down much of the government. If there is to be a major overhaul of welfare programs, it will probably come as part of a grand bipartisan deal on the budget, but the prospects for such a deal are highly uncertain.

In debating the welfare bill on Thursday, Republicans and Democrats repeated arguments made last spring, but the political context and tone of the debate were immensely different. The House approved the original version of the welfare bill in the first 100 days of the new Congress, when Republicans were full of elan, enthusiasm and confidence. Their victory seemed to be foreordained, especially since Clinton had promised to "end welfare as we know it."

But when the House voted on Thursday, the Republicans had lost much of their momentum and the Democrats were now bolstered by the assurance of a presidential veto. Over and over the Democrats said Speaker Newt Gingrich and the Republicans were violating the spirit of Christmas.

"Republicans are giving American children an early Christmas surprise," said Rep. John Lewis, D-Ga. "It is an extreme, mean-spirited, radical proposal devoid of compassion."

Republicans said that the bill would not cut welfare spending, just slow its growth, and that welfare programs had condemned millions of families to lives of dependence.

The compromise bill was written almost entirely by Republicans. "This is not the way great social political issues are addressed successfully," said Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y.

The last outstanding issue in the bill was resolved on Wednesday when the conference committee ended a bitter dispute over the future of the school lunch program.

House Republicans wanted to give each state a lump sum of money, or block grant, to run its own school lunch program. Senate Republicans insisted that the lunch program remain an entitlement for schoolchildren.

The compromise would allow up to seven states to experiment with block grants for school lunch. These states would have to follow current federal nutrition standards and provide free meals for children from families with incomes up to 30 percent above the official poverty level.

Clinton has not defended the entitlement to welfare, which guarantees cash assistance for people who meet eligibility criteria set by federal and state laws. But in the last few weeks he has staunchly defended the federal guarantee of health insurance for poor people, and on Thursday administration officials said they objected to the welfare bill because it would undermine that guarantee.

Senate report faults FBI, other agencies at Ruby Ridge

WASHINGTON (NYT) — A Senate subcommittee issued a report Thursday harshly criticizing the conduct of several federal law-enforcement agencies, accusing them of a "chain of mistakes" that led to the deaths of three people during a 1992 confrontation between government agents and a white separatist in Idaho.

The report by the Senate Judiciary subcommittee on terrorism, technology and government information said that the law-enforcement blunders had weakened the trust between ordinary citizens and federal police agencies.

Specifically, the panel found fault with the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, the FBI, the U.S. Marshals Service and the office of the U.S. attorney in Idaho.

The subcommittee, led by Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., chastised FBI Director Louis Freeh for "questionable judgment" in promoting Larry A. Potts, a close associate, to the No. 2 job at the agency even though Potts was deeply involved in the incident at Ruby Ridge in Idaho.

But the panel also praised Freeh, who took over as director a year after the incident, for admitting FBI mistakes. Freeh has since suspended Potts and ordered a host of changes in how the FBI responds to crises.

City reallocates funds for paving

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Some unused federal Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) funds from past years are being targeted to pave more streets in south and east Midland.

"With curb and gutters included, it would pave about 12 blocks," Assistant City Manager Glen Hackler said.

More than $287,400 will be reallocated.

"We had an accumulation of three years of funds for the housing rehabilitation program because that program was put on hold," Hackler said.

The rehabilitation program — put on hold because the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development modified program guidelines — was revived in February after being redesigned.

Rather than using the surplus money from years past for the rehabilitation program, the City Council decided to use it for more pressing needs. Paving has been expressed as a priority among residents who have provided input into the use of CDBG dollars, officials said.

The accumulated dollars likely may be used to pave roads where new homes are built as part of the New Housing Construction Program created in October, officials said. Between 24 and 40 homes are expected to be built through the affordable housing program in the next year, officials said.

That program is also funded through CDBG dollars and leveraged with private dollars and state HOME grants. Part of the surplus dollars targeted for paving may possibly be used for the housing program, officials said.

In addition to the CDBG dollars being reallocated for paving, the City Council is transferring $50,000 originally targeted for a mobile police substation toward development of the eastside Reyes-Mashburn-Nelms Park. That doesn't mean the substation is being scrapped; it will be funded through the city's general fund, officials said.

The city expects to finalize the reallocations with HUD, as required, within 60 days, officials said.

CDBG allocations are required to meet one of three objectives: benefit low to moderate income people, prevention and elimination of slum and blight, or address urgent community development needs.

In August, the City Council finalized $1.4 million in allocations for various programs for the 1995-96 fiscal year. Of those allocations, $350,000 went to street paving.

Other allocations included housing renovation and repair programs, weedy lot clearance and dilapidated structure removal, a community swimming pool and various social service programs. The allocations generally follow historical uses of the federal dollars in Midland.

FRIDAY DAY WATCH

No mail delivery

The Midland Post Office will be closed on Monday, Christmas Day. According to Postmaster Stan Sartain, there will be delivery of Express Mail only. No other residential delivery or post office box delievery will be made. No collection of mail will be made and all retail windows will be closed. Sartain also said that Christmas parcels will be delivered on Sunday, Dec. 24, in order to get as many Christmas gifts delivered before Christmas as possible.

Child-support pay

AUSTIN — The threat of suspending a driver's or professional license for failing to make court-ordered child support has prompted payments of $6.85 million since the program began, Texas prosecutors say.

License suspension is just one of the weapons in Texas' child support collection efforts, according to state Attorney General Dan Morales.

"That means more than 15,000 Texas children will have a better Christmas than they had last year or, for some, ever," said Morales.

Beginning on Sept. 1, the program has brought in $514 million this fiscal year through withholding of wages, Internal Revenue Service intercepts and standard collection methods.

Wage withholding alone brought in $297 million in fiscal 1995, the attorney general's office said in a prepared statement.

Through the court-ordered procedure, an employer deducts a child support payment from an employee's wages and forwards the payment to prosecutors' office for distribution to the custodial parent.

Medics mobilized

NORTH LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — The U.S. Army Reserve Command in Atlanta announced Thursday that more than 140 reserve medical personnel from Texas have been selected for mobilization in support of Operation Joint Endeavor.

The doctors and medics will be from the 4005th U.S. Army Hospital, which has one section in Lubbock and one in Houston.

"The personnel selected will be taken from the sections ... in two separate groups and will join with the 5502d U.S. Army Hospital from Aurora, Colo., to backfill medical requirements in Germany," said Ernie Confer, staff training officer for the 90th Regional Support Command in North Little Rock, the major Army Reserve headquarters to which the 4005th is assigned.

"They'll fill in for medical personnel who have left Germany to support the peacekeeping operation in Bosnia-Herzegovina."

Veterinarians warn dog owners about contagious virus

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The contagious parvovirus that is attacking and killing young dogs in Midland by destroying their blood-rich intestinal lining may be prevented if puppies are vaccinated against the virus and if their immature immune systems are sufficiently robust.

The No. 1 preventive measure is "to vaccinate your dog at six to eight weeks" after birth, said Midland veterinarian Dr. Robert Boyd.

"You are trying to vaccinate the puppy when he will respond to the vaccine," he said, "but the mother's immune system isn't interfering with the vaccination. There is a real gray area," a window, that is ideal for vaccination when the pup's developing immune system is gaining momentum, as the mother's antibodies from her milk wear off.

Booster inoculations follow the initial shots.

Though there is "not a dramatic increase (in the virus) from last year," Boyd said "the reason why there is a lot of parvo in the spring is because there are lot of puppies" born in that season.

Signs of the illness in puppies are lethargy, vomiting and diarrhea accompanied by profuse blood.

The progression of the disease is rapid once the symptoms appear.

"People will leave for work in the morning," Boyd said. "The puppy doesn't feel good. By the time they get home, it will sometimes be semi-comatose. It has a real rapid onset."

The primary treatment is infusing the puppy's body with fluids intravenously to stop the rapid dehydration through vomiting and diarrhea, and the addition of medicines to fight diarrhea and vomiting to allow the ulcerated intestinal lining to regenerate, to permit the bone marrow to reactivate and drugs to control blood clots.

"You can't give them anything orally because they just throw it right back up," Boyd said.

"The key (to recovery) is aggressive treatment," Boyd said. "At times, you will save a lot of dogs with it. Certain times of the year it seems to be harder to get rid of."

Lawyers argue over new trial for Selena killer

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Attorneys for the convicted killer of Tejano star Selena accused prosecutors Thursday of failing to reveal during trial that a key witness had a criminal record.

That suggests the witness may not have been credible and therefore Yolanda Saldivar should get a new trial, lawyer Patrick J. McGuire argued in court.

State District Judge Mike Westergren said after a 2 1/2-hour hearing he would take the matter under advisement and rule by the second week of January.

Ms. Saldivar, who ran the singer's clothing boutiques, maintains that the shooting March 31 was an accident. She was found guilty of murder in October.

Prosecutor Mark Skurka said he was unaware of Maria Norma Martinez's theft conviction at the time of the trial. He said prosecutors had run her criminal background check under the name Norma Marie Martinez because that was the name they had been given.

"The fact that he (Skurka) doesn't know about it is irrelevant," McGuire said. "They didn't do an adequate search as was their obligation under the law. The defense was entitled to rely on their good faith."

Ms. Martinez, a housekeeper at the Days Inn motel in Corpus Christi where the singer was gunned down, testified during the trial that Ms. Saldivar chased Selena with a gun.

"She was running back of Selena and pointing the gun at her," Ms. Martinez testified. "She just yelled and called her 'Bitch!'"

Her use of that word could have influenced the jury's decision, McGuire said. Jurors may not have trusted her had they known of her conviction, he said.

But Skurka contended that knowledge would not have made a difference since two other motel employees testified they saw Ms. Saldivar pursue Selena with a gun.

"Basically all they would have been able to do is impeach her credibility," he said.

Another point the defense raised during the hearing had to do with embezzlement allegations. Defense attorneys claimed key financial documents were kept from the trial at which prosecutors

Christmas in April to have new warehouse because of cooperative community effort

■ Much of the materials and labor to build the structure are being donated to the non-profit agency.

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

A new Christmas in April warehouse is being constructed, thanks to a cooperative effort between many community agencies, organizations and businesses.

Local Christmas in April officials gathered early Thursday for a groundbreaking ceremony at 402 S. Lee St. where the new 50-foot, by 100-foot warehouse will be built.

The new structure will be a great benefit, not only for the local Christmas in April effort, but for several area cities including Big Spring and San Angelo, said Bobby Trimble, a founder of the Christmas in April program.

The bulk of manual labor for the warehouse will be provided by Teresa Howery and her cadre of adult probationers.

Part of the Midland Community Supervision and Corrections Department, Ms. Howery coordinates the efforts of those probationers who perform hours of community services as part of their reparations to the community.

The community service program already has had great success and Ms. Howery is undaunted at the prospect of providing manpower for the warehouse.

Local contractor Eddy Elliot, a member of the Christmas in April board of directors, is heading up the building project, performing such specialty services as drawing up construction

Innocence of children embodies the joy of Christmas

The joy of Christmas is in the innocence of childhood and the sweet excitement of giving and receiving gifts of love that often are in the guise of material things.

Todd

The remembrance of Christmases past at the old home place is not one of who got what or got not, although piercing disappointment may sting a bit longer than realized expectations last.

For if love does not imbue the gifts, they are empty despite the glitter.

Glitter fades.

Children somehow intuitively know the depth of meaning behind "things." They have an acute sense of what's what even if they, in their naivete, are so blessedly unsophisticated and unaware of the deceitfulness that tempts the souls of grown-ups.

I do remember some gifts, such as a silvery cast-aluminum six-shooter and a mechanical spinning top delivered by agents of Santa Claus, the Anglicized Saint Nicholas. The expectations of what's coming, ordered or not, gave rise to the thrill. The discovery was climactic, even if the gift was something as mundane, ordinary, and practical as a corduroy jacket, handkerchiefs, pairs of socks, gloves or an ear-warming cap.

From those early years, mostly the World War II and immediate post-war years, what I recall mostly and most lingeringly are these things:

■ Drawing names by lot from Granddaddy's Sunday hat, a suede version of his straw farm hat, at Thanksgiving. One name, one gift. No one was burdened. A $5 gift to a relative would be borderline-high dollar. Anything Santa Claus snuck into the home place a month later was extra for the children.

■ Going out into the woods to cut an evergreen tree, dragging it back to the house, setting it up and draping it with shiny and showy stuff and fragile balls of color.

■ Hanging around the grown-ups while they played dominoes, mostly forty-two (42), and laughed and talked about who-knows-what.

■ Being fascinated by Granddaddy's smoking and savoring his King Edward's cigars and Daddy and Uncle Bill smoking those Lucky Strike cigarettes and drinking coffee.

■ Eating Grandmother's wonderful cooking. Mother and my aunts always helped out.

■ Playing guessing games with my brothers: Who's getting what and just when will Santa Claus and his sleigh-towing reindeer fly over and drop goods down the chimney. Though we all did wonder how a portly Santa Claus could slide down that narrow chimney with his

Boy's rescuer was 'instrument used by God,' he says

By Brian Bethel
Abilene Reporter-News

ABILENE — Paul White and Cynthia Stephens believe in miracles, and if you ask them why, both will point to 4-year-old Demondrick King and smile.

The wiggling boy watching Jurassic Park on a hospital television looks as normal as any other. Surrounded by favorite toys, he watches the film with intense interest as velociraptors roar and T-Rex parades across the screen.

By all rights, White and Stephens say, Demondrick — known as "Dee" to most of his family and friends — should be dead.

But he lives because of White, who maintains he was "an instrument used by God," rather than a hero, and because of a series of events Stephens says are in no way coincidental.

And therein lies a tale, both agree, perhaps as miraculous as any.

When the heavy lid of a metal dumpster fell on Dee Saturday, catching him just below the neck and pinning the hands of his brother, 5-year-old Gary King, some thought it was already too late for the boy.

The two customarily have chores to do, and had been sent out to the dumpster, located on North Sixth Street behind a shopping center, to empty some trash, said Stephens, the boys' legal guardian and grandmother.

In his zeal to do his part, Dee had climbed on the dumpster to see whether his trash had successfully hit its target.

Neighbors later described the sound of the lid falling as being like a car crash. And somehow, when Stephens heard frantic voices outside, she feared for "her boys."

"All I knew was that my two little ones were out there," she said. "It felt like I flew from the bedroom to the front to the outside in single steps. I knew it was them."

Stephens, who works with terminally ill patients through Hospice of Abilene, said she knows how to help others deal with the pain of loss. But the sudden torrent of emotion was unlike anything she'd ever known.

"I couldn't do anything but pray and call out to God," she said. "I've never felt a fear like that. I've never felt so incredibly helpless."

Paul White was one of the first on the scene. No one knows exactly how long the boys were held by the dumpster. In the rush of activity, that was the least of their worries.

AP Laserphoto

Dee was not breathing and had no pulse when White, owner of White's Color Photography, saw an image he later said would have haunted him forever had the boy not recovered.

White heard something, but he wasn't sure what. In fact, he almost walked back into his nearby shop but sensed "something was wrong." The sound was Gary crying.

"I looked over and could see Gary," he said. "I asked him if he was hurt and he said, 'Yes.' "

At first White didn't see Demondrick, concentrating instead on his brother. The dumpster lid had slammed shut, closing completely.

A woman frantically ran up to try to help with the other side of the dumpster. When the two managed to open it, she started screaming, "He's dead," White said.

White, confused, looked over and saw Dee King's face — pale, eyes fixed and without breath. The dumpster had caught him just below the neck.

The boy fell lifeless to the ground.

White began to administer CPR, though he had never had training.

"I searched my mind trying to remember what little I could remember," he said. "... Fortunately, it worked."

Dee's chest began to rise and fall after about five compressions, but his eyes were still fixed and dilated.

White had a cellular phone handy and called 911, summoning help as Stephens continued to weep in the background.

"At the time, I really didn't know that he was going to make it," White said. "I just didn't know."

Stephens said the boy's doctors eventually admitted the amount of damage he suffered was phenomenally minimal. Dee, who ended up with little more than a scratch on the back of his neck, is not expected to suffer any long-term effects from the lack of oxygen or the blow.

His brother suffered even fewer injuries, going home that night.

"It really is a miracle," Stephens said. "It has to be. God knew what he was doing even when I didn't know what to do. All I wanted was for them to come home and be safe."

White said that with the force the dumpster must have come down, it could have easily snapped a heavy piece of wood.

Those who were at the scene said they'll never know why it didn't do the same to the boy's neck. White admitted he's had nightmares about what might have been.

The dumpster has since been removed.

White has visited Dee at the hospital almost every day since the accident, even giving him a stuffed Santa to help deal with the hospital stay.

He claims no heroic stature for his actions, simply saying he "did what anyone would try to do under the circumstances."

"When you look at a piece of furniture, you don't praise the saw or the planes that were used to make it, you praise its creator," he said. "That's all I was in this situation — a tool in the hands of God."

The simple fact Dee survived a blow that could have severed his head is a miracle, Stephens and White agree.

The fact he survived with no permanent damage is nothing short of biblical, they said.

Stephens said she feared for the boys' lives at the time of the accident but now feels they were "cradled by the hands of God."

"God doesn't take half-steps," she said. "I should have known that. He was there and had things under control. He was there with them all along."

She said that with White's quick actions, plus the help of emergency workers, the boys lived. All were there at the right time, she said.

In a letter to the Reporter-News, Stephens offered special praise for White: "God truly sent an angel down to walk this earth, and he was Mr. Paul White. ... We thank God that Dee's body and soul were touched by an Angel."

White, an elder at the 11th and Willis Church of Christ, maintains he's no angel, but was happy to help — and make a new little friend in the bargain.

"I've never witnessed a miracle firsthand until that Saturday."

he said. "The fact that Dee is alive and that his brother was unhurt — that's what it is. That's what it has to be."

TODD: Most memorable Christmas would always be the next year's

(From 1B)

Christmas freight and then scale the walls back up to the waiting reindeer, we just accepted that as another Christmas miracle that defied understanding. Still, we wondered.

■ Awakening on Christmas morning and rushing from the old, cold north room to the warm living room and to loving greetings and surprises.

■ Withstanding the dismay, though not totally unexpected, that the concept of a literal Santa Claus was rich in imagination. I recall the moment.

Of all Christmases past from those childhood years, the most memorable was next year's — the one to come. It would always be the best. The long journey toward the radiant horizon is the joy of life and living.

plans free of charge.

"Even the sign behind us was donated by A-1 Sign Co.," Trimble said, indicating a permanent sign that will designate the new building as a Christmas in April facility.

There are a lot of organizations throughout the country that donate materials in bulk that Christmas in April has not been able to use as a resource due to lack of storage, Ms. Howery explained.

"With this new warehouse, they can take advantage of resources that they have had to turn away in the past," Ms. Howery said.

With the new warehouse, however, Midland stands ready to make use of much of these materials and can even assist neighboring Christmas in April programs, Trimble said.

Ms. Howery hopes to have the building completed in two months. "It's going to go pretty fast, with all the manpower we have on it," she said.

This will greatly enhance the efforts of Midland's Christmas in April volunteers, Trimble said.

"We started out in 1973 working out of a parking lot," Trimble said.

Christmas in April is a non-profit organization that performs home repairs for the elderly, disabled and economically disadvantaged members of the community.

Christmas in April projects have helped hundreds of Midlanders maintain decent housing with projects ranging in scope from painting to total refurbishing.

South Texas police search for Grinch who stole toys for city's foster children

KINGSVILLE (AP) — Police in this South Texas city are trying to find the Grinch who stole toys that had been donated for some 40 foster children.

They didn't have to go too far to investigate the case. The toys were taken from a box just inside the Kingsville Police Department's front door.

Police Chief Felipe Garza said a receptionist sits behind a glass window in the lobby on weekdays, but the lobby is unattended at night and on weekends.

"We get a couple hundred people in and out of here every day," Garza said. "We don't have many officers going in there. It's not something you notice right away."

Officers had secured the toys in an evidence room at the end of each weekday, but they did not secure the weekend donations, Garza said.

The toys were meant for children served by the Upper Valley Foster Parents Association.

"It's kind of sad to think that someone would walk in and steal them," said Viola Perez, secretary of the foster parents association. "They had notices up there that they were for foster children and someone still took them. That's pretty sad."

The chief said he had received some calls from local citizens who complained about the toy drive, saying that the foster parents association serves children outside Kingsville. But he said that all but about four of the children live in the city.

SALDIVAR: Attorneys argue for new trial of Selena's convicted murderer hinted that Ms. Saldivar was suspected of stealing from Selena's business.

The defense dropped one part of the motion it filed last month: the argument that one of the jurors knew a member of the singer's family. The juror, Jose Estimbo, testified Thursday that it was actually his brother who was acquainted with Selena's uncle.

Ms. Saldivar, 35, was given a life sentence and must serve at least 30 years before becoming eligible for parole.

STILL LOOKING FOR THE RIGHT GIFT?
We have kept the story of jolly ole Santa alive and well, knowing that kids eventually learn better. But it's still nice to anticipate that wish that might be fulfilled in a gift. Maybe you're still looking for that present for someone special, a bit different. A five year old, listening to all the talk about what the family was buying, decided to do his own thing. Searching the closet of every family member, he found Mom's old comfortable house shoes, Dad's ragged coveralls, Sister's precious doll, and Brother's favorite car. Quietly he slipped into his room, wrapped each in a paper sack, and put them under the tree. Surprise! They asked him why and he replied, "I just wanted to get you something you really wanted, so I just got you something you already had!"
Think about God, and His gifts to us. He saw man in sin and confusion, and knew the only gift that would matter. It was Jesus. And he gave his only Son. John 3:16. What a gift! Every year at this time we are reminded. "Every good and perfect gift is from above, coming down from the Father of the heavenly lights, who does not change like shifting shadows." James 1:17. Thanks, God, for the gift!

Longtime friends Pacino, DeNiro meet up in 'Heat'

By Ric Leyva
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Al Pacino is absorbing, always absorbing.

"Acting comes out of chaos," he says, talking with his hands. "You have to always be open for new stuff to happen, always keeping the antennae out, so it's not so much this (he holds his hands up like blinders) as it's that (swinging his arms wide) so you can then select and make the right choice."

Becoming a thirsty sponge is only half the battle, though. Then you have to know when to squeeze it, Pacino says, using his lone Academy Award-winning performance as an example.

He recalled how in "Scent of a Woman," a lieutenant colonel taught him how to assemble and disassemble a .45-caliber gun blind.

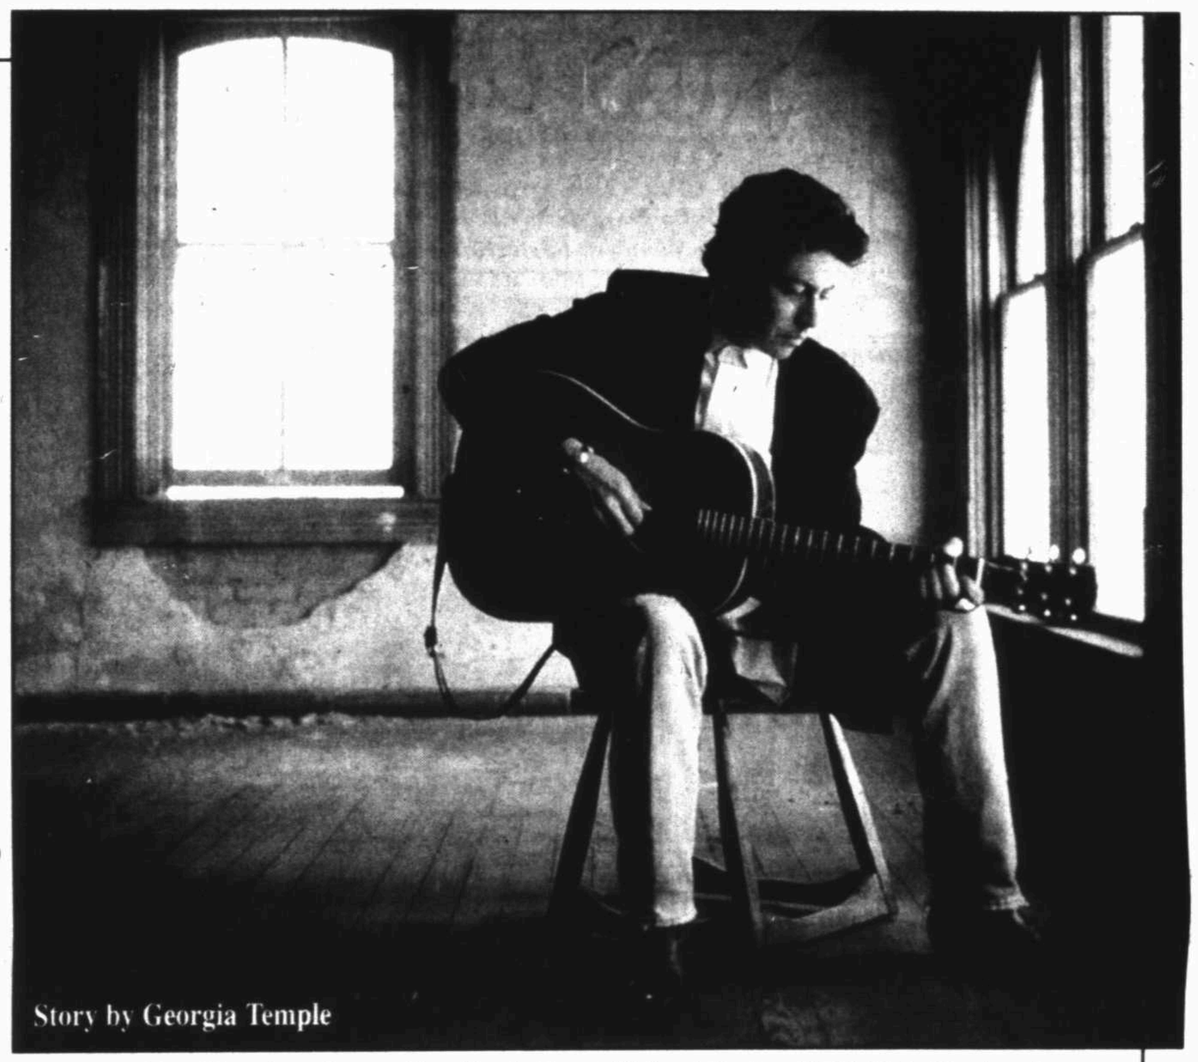
Ring in the New Year with Joe Ely



Story by Georgia Temple

Singer Joe Ely will perform live on New Year's Eve at Midland Center, 105 N. Main St., downtown.

"Well, I left my home out on the great high plains headed for some new terrain. Standing on the highway with my coffee cup, I wondered who was going to pick me up. I had my hopes up high. I never thought that I would ever wonder why I ever said goodbye."

—Lyrics by Joe Ely

The son and grandson of railroad men, rocker Joe Ely left Lubbock by rail when he was a teenager. "My whole family is railroad people," said Ely, who plays New Year's Eve at Midland Center. "I kind of grew up on trains. When I was carrying a guitar around, wondering where songs came from, I went and rode box cars around the country - jumped freight and went to the West Coast and the East Coast and down South."

Ely, who's been playing a musical instrument since he was 8 years old, drifted across the United States several times before returning to Lubbock in the mid-70s.

His song, "I Had My Hopes Up High," MCA Records, Inc. 1981, describes riding with a reckless driver hauling dynamite, a man on the run from the law, a preacher offering redemption and a carnival.

During his travels, Ely did spend a summer working ring stock for the Ringling Brothers Circus. "I probably would have traveled with them a little longer but I kind of fell in love with a Hungarian bareback rider." Ely laughed. "I was watching her do a flip off her four brothers' shoulders onto the back of a horse instead of watching what I was doing, which was leading horses out of the ring.

"That's what I should have been doing. My horses got a little too close to each other. One of them kicked me in the ribs and broke about four ribs. She packed up and went to the next town the next day, and I was in the hospital.

"I was totally fascinated with her, but unfortunately I couldn't speak Hungarian, and she couldn't speak English. It would never have worked out anyway, so it was just as well I guess. It got me back to my music, and her back on the road."

About three years ago, Ely wrote a song about his circus days which was recorded by Guy Clark. "It's a hard life," Ely said. "The people who do the real specialty acts, a lot of them come from Eastern Europe,

Depp jumps off scandal sheets, into serious role

By Bob Thomas
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Johnny Depp seemed surprisingly normal for a guy whose shenanigans once sold millions of scandal sheets at the checkout counter.

He was candid, almost revealing in an interview. He smoked, but it was an innocuous brand; he is trying to kick the habit by lowering the nicotine level of his cigarettes. He said he had cut out the drugs and allows himself a couple of beers or two glasses of wine — "no hard stuff because I'd be inclined to finish the bottle."

His attire was Hollywood casual: corduroy pants, white T-shirt, denim jacket. His lower face displayed a fashionable stubble. The only evidence of his earlier years were the tiny gold wire loops in his lobes — three on the left, one on the right.

If they hurry, Depp fans can see a different Johnny on the silver screen.

Following a series of eccentric and offbeat characters in his films, he plays a gentle accountant with glasses in Paramount Picture's "Nick of Time." He gets sucked into an assassination plot and has 90 minutes to kill the California governor or lose his small daughter.

It's a better than average thriller that is drowning in the flood of big-ticket fall and holiday movies. Johnny Depp fans may have to catch it on video.

"I was excited to play a fairly normal guy," he said. "Most people have thought of me as playing these weird roles, you know. So I figured I'd try to do something a little different.

"It's much more difficult to play a straight character. Because it's hard to keep it interesting, keep it fresh, keep the stuff going on underneath. There's a real danger because you can get very one-note and stay on the same level, whereas you try to instigate peaks and valleys for the audience."

Most of his earlier films presented far different characters. He made his first big impression in the title role of "Edward Scissorhands," as the young man with the built-in cutlery.

He drew more acclaim as the retarded youth who adored Buster Keaton in "Benny and Joon" and as the cross-dressing maker of trash movies in "Ed Wood." All three films won him Golden Globe nominations.

Depp was interviewed at the Chateau Marmont, that sturdy monument to Hollywood's lusty past. Many a shadow affair has taken place there, as well as wild parties and occasional tragedies such as the drug-related death of John Belushi. Depp evidenced a reverence for the town's traditions that is lacking in his generation of actors.

On "Edward Scissorhands" he became friends with the late Vincent Price — "he was incredible, I really miss him.

"I've been real lucky with the people I've worked with. Starting out with Vincent Price. Going to Jerry Lewis and Faye Dunaway in 'Arizona Dream.' Martin Landau ('Ed Wood') ... Faye Dunaway again and Marlon Brando ('Don Juan De Marco') ... Robert Mitchum (the forthcoming 'Dead Man').

'A Current Affair' cleans up: Tabloid TV show dares to be neither rude nor dumb

By Frazier Moore
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — Today on the new "A Current Affair:" An old dog learns new tricks! It's even housebroken!

This is the story of "A Current Affair," which went and made some highfalutin promises to clean up its act, then — glorioski! — kept them. The result is an informative, entertaining daily half-hour (check local listings).

At a time when "tabloid TV" is a term critics brandish like a scarlet A, "Affair" proudly wears the "tabloid" label, and in so doing reminds the viewer what tabloid, at its best, can be: a tip sheet on the human condition.

The awkwardly titled but highly watchable "The New A Current Affair" has held true to the tabloid formula (human interest, celebrity and sin), then to that added investigative journalism.

The tone is slick but not glib, arch but not ugly. The show dares to be neither rude nor dumb.

In short, this is a far cry from past "Affairs," where the experience was less like watching something as stepping in it.

It was last spring that John Tomlin and Bob Young returned to save the show they had worked for at its inception eight years earlier. The nation's original syndicated tabloid show and long the ratings leader, "Affair" by then was in dire straits.

Audience-wise, the Fox-produced series ranked far below newer rivals "Hard Copy" (Paramount) and front runner "Inside Edition" (King World).

As for the content? Well, in its latest, perhaps saddest incarnation, "Affair" vowed to cover the O.J. Simpson mess and nothing but.

Then at a breakfast last June, Tomlin and Young told wary reporters that, come September, a new "Current Affair" would roar back to life. Goodbye, squalor. Hello, newsmaking exposes — about one every two days.

There would be lots of new hires and new bureaus. And as the most telling symbol of its born-again virtue, "Affair" would no longer pay for interviews, at least without full disclosure to viewers. The show that claimed to have invented checkbook journalism had now stopped payment.

NEW: TV tabloid show fulfills promise

On Sept. 11, "The New A Current Affair" premiered, with former "Dateline NBC" correspondent Jon Scott as its anchor. It has never looked back.

Well, maybe there's been an occasional over-the-shoulder glance, such as on a November edition that included a report on a child-sex ring, surveillance tape of a shooting in a pool hall and Anna Nicole Smith.

"We did say at the beginning, this will never be 'MacNeil-Lehrer,' " Young notes.

On the other hand, yet another matter taken up on that same edition, a "date-rape drug" that frees inhibitions and is thus being used to seduce women, found its way last Saturday onto the pages of The New York Times — more than a month after "Affair's" report.

"Our competition," says Tomlin, "is everyone who does news."

Through late November, "Affair" remains third-ranked among tabloid shows, but since its relaunch has shown the greatest ratings growth.

Meanwhile, if not necessarily rivaling "Frontline," the investigative pieces on "Affair" have made waves.

When the show produced a story showing minors getting free cigarettes from R.J. Reynolds representatives, the tobacco company announced new steps to control its sampling promotions.

For another report, an "Affair" correspondent roamed, unchallenged, through the nuclear facility on the Georgia Tech campus. The hidden-camera footage exposed what appeared to be scandalously lax security measures, particularly with Atlanta the site of next summer's Olympics, where terrorism is always a threat.

This expose, too, touched a nerve. A statement issued by Georgia Tech denied that "Affair" had gained access to any area that presented a security risk, while announcing the facility would be shut down through the conclusion of the Games ("our plan for months"), then conceded: "We intend to accelerate our security plans."

Other stories have focused on an emergency room for pets; a young man keeping vigil on his fiancee, put in a coma by a car crash only hours after they were engaged; and bodyguards for businessmen in strife-torn Moscow — young, attractive, female bodyguards, that is.

"Don't leave home without them," Scott quipped after that last report.

and they work their entire life for one chance to come to America to be with Ringling Brothers."

Someday, he may write again about his circus days. "I have fond memories of them. I may write about other things that happened in the circus. For me, it was just a passing thing. No ties. Pretty much free wheeling around the country, and it was a great summer."

Ely's current album, "Letter to Laredo," captures the stories he's heard closer to his home turf. "It sprang 100 percent out of West Texas, all the stories, the songs and everything came from that part of the country - maybe a triangle from Lubbock to Laredo to El Paso," said Ely, who lives in Austin. "I didn't give myself those boundaries. As it turned out, when I started working with a flamenco guitar player from Spain on that album, I started thinking about how music has come into America from different places.

"It's come across the Atlantic from Ireland into the Appalachia and down into Texas kind of in the form of blues that later turned more into country. And then the second part is how it came in from Africa into New Orleans then came into East Texas in the form of blues. Then the third part came across from Spain into Mexico and up into Texas across the Rio Grande."

Ely credits the guitar player from Spain with influencing the album. "The stories on it are closer to the border than any other album I've ever done.

"When I was putting it together, I was not sure exactly how I was going to do that and still capture the spirit of Texas, but as I got more into it, I realized it was almost like the same character was in every song. It was just that he was portrayed a little differently and based in a different situation, even though he was always running to something or from something.

"He was always on the run. In one song's he's running from the law. In another song, he's running form his past. In another, he's trying to get back to his roots, back home again. In every song, he's looking for a way back after finding himself in a situation beyond his control."

Ely said he'd been asked if "Letter to Laredo" is a concept album and if he is the character in every song. "I have to say no, it's not a concept album. Each song is not related to every other song. It's not the same person in every song, but every song has a lot of my life in it."

Ely is drawn to writing songs about people who find themselves in situations beyond their control. Active people who "get out into the world," find themselves in situations where "they have to find out the truth.

"And the truth is always pretty elusive. And it's not always apparent. What might look to be real and true is not really, as we know very well from television. Everything on TV looks bright and shiny and everybody's always smiling. But we know it's not really like that. I try to peel away the facade of what things appear to be, and paint them as they really are."

Ely, who'd just returned home from a 65-city tour, had a quick response to what he most enjoys about touring. "I guess mostly eating bad food and hard travel."

He divides his time annually between performing and writing songs. "I have to have a balance. I'm not the kind of singer that has someone else write their songs for them. I go out and really dig for them. I have to. Songwriting's not an easy thing to do. I don't try to just write Top 40 hit love songs. I try to write songs about real situations and people's troubles and their pleasures, too.

"It is difficult. You have to say a lot in a little bit of space."

His songs focus on situations or characters he knows. "The things that I would not write about are things I know nothing about. I wouldn't try to. That's out of bounds. I think there's a lot of writers who do write Top 40 songs that have no idea what they are about — people writing love songs and they have no idea what love is about. I hear that on the radio all the time, and it really pisses me off.

"They will build something around a good line and hang onto that line. And the line rings false. It might sound good the first time you sing it, but the next time it sounds like a lie."

He's selective about the songs he writes. "Since I have to perform all my songs, I make sure I can sing that song 10 years from now and still feel good about it."

Ely's performances are characterized by high energy. "It actually comes from off stage. Nothing can happen on stage that you don't already have inside you before you walk on that stage. You can't rely on the lights coming up and the music getting loud to inspire you.

"I've been playing on stage for all my life. I know very well that if you're not ready to walk on stage and give everybody there every single thing you have inside you, then you might as well not be on stage. Each night I try to give everything, no matter how tired I am, no matter how bad the food was at the last truck stop."

In 1994, Ely applied his songwriting abilities to a different kind of project. He was part of a team play-writing effort. "Joe Sears, the guy with 'Greater Tuna,' ran across a college professor in Wichita falls that had been given a set of diaries from a prostitute that lived during the Great Depression and the oil boom named Chippy."

The musical that resulted from the collaboration played Lincoln Center, New York City, and in Philadelphia. Ely was in the cast. "I was a wild-catter out looking for oil wells. It was nice to step out of my normal role on stage."

From this role, Ely was offered the lead in a New York play.

"I had to turn that down. I just couldn't imagine turning myself into an actor at this point in my life because I enjoy music too much."

FILM: Pacino to co-star with longtime friend DeNiro in 'Heat'

(From 3B)

"I would do it in the dark," he says, absentmindedly running his fingers through spiky black hair. "You had to be able to take the gun apart and put it back together again in 45 seconds, and once I got it right he went, 'Hoo-ah!'

"So that's where that thing came from," he says of his signature exclamation in the film. "You're always open, to whatever. The antennae are out."

Dressed completely in black, Pacino, 55, looks every bit the downtown artist, except for the glittering pile of gold chains dangling from his neck in tribute to his Bronx roots. He slurps weak room service cappuccino and fidgets all over the couch discussing his life, his work and "Heat," an explosive crime drama co-starring Robert De Niro.

"It's big," he says, talking with his hands again, shooting them out wide. "I was very impressed. I didn't expect the kind of elegance it got."

In "Heat," Pacino's elite police team tracks De Niro's elite armed robbery crew. There's no shortage of electricity, no shortage of fireworks. His highly anticipated work with De Niro, although limited to three scenes, was worth the wait for Pacino.

"I've known him a long time. Over the years I've grown very fond of him, of his work and as a person, too," Pacino says, speaking carefully, like only the perfect combination of words will do. "Your relationship with other actors has a real effect on the way you perform because you have to have a trust there, or you build one. That's part of what the deal is.

"With Bobby I felt as though I was playing with a relative because I've known him so long. We've had intimate talks. Not that we tend to socialize — hardly at all. But there's a thing there, a mutual like. So that helped things. We didn't rehearse. I'd never worked with him before but it felt like I'd been working with him for a long, long time. It must be trust."

The two actors co-starred in "The Godfather Part II," but had no scenes together since De Niro appeared only as a young Vito Corleone (Marlon Brando) in flashback footage, while Pacino played Corleone's grown son.

Pacino also can be seen in theaters over the holidays playing a wizened grandfather in "Two Bits" opposite Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio, and he's the mayor of New York in "City Hall," due out in February. His next film shoot is "Donnie Brasco" with Johnny Depp.

"Busy, busy, busy," Pacino says with a big grin, happily rubbing his hands together. Obviously, he's having a great day. He bubbles over when asked about his early Bohemian days in Greenwich Village.

"We had the theater," he says, emphasizing the word like he's saying eternal life. "There was this energy. It was a very fruitful time, a very rich time and I've never quite felt that again. Even with all the success that came."

Pacino's greatness wasn't self-taught. Before winning acceptance to the Actor's Studio to work with the legendary Lee Strasberg, he studied with Charles Laughton at the Herbert Berghof Studio.

He calls the British acting giant, "Charlie, my dear friend and mentor."

"I think mainly what Charlie did was he introduced me to different worlds, primarily the world of books I didn't have access to growing up in the South Bronx," he says. "A kind of education was happening, a formal one, where before it was informal. He exposed me to all kinds of different ways of seeing things — great writing, music, all the great stuff. And I spent years with him, absorbing that kind of stuff."

Absorbing, always absorbing.

Laughton died in 1962. Four years later Pacino's entrance to the all-scholarship Actor's Studio brought more than peer acceptance, it brought another deep friendship.

"Lee and I became very close — later, because we worked together," Pacino says of the famed drama teacher who died in 1982 and who appeared in "The Godfather Part II."

"You know, he was this icon, and it was wonderful to go the Actor's Studio but I was kind of afraid for him to even see me at first. I used to stand in the back.

"And then I got to know him as a fellow actor and that changed everything because we were in the trenches together. We became tremendously close."

DEPP: Fans can see different Johnny in film 'Nick of Time'

(From 3B)

"Working with Marlon has been probably the most important experience of my life. He's a great actor to work with, very supportive, very generous. He is also a good teacher and a good friend. He's been there for me, always."

Last summer, Depp and Brando were working in Ireland on "Divine Rapture," with Debra Winger and John Hurt. Financing ran out after two weeks, and the project was abandoned.

Born in 1964 in Kentucky, Depp grew up in Miramar, Fla., where he started his own rock group at 13. He landed in Hollywood in his late teens. When his band broke up, he fell into acting "by complete accident."

"Nicolas Cage was a friend of mine, and he sent me to meet his agent," he recalled. "I would have done anything at that point. The agent sent me to meet Wes Craven, who cast me in the first 'Nightmare on Elm Street.' "

Then came the big break: as the undercover cop in high school on the TV series "21 Jump Street." That attracted a teen following, and after four seasons he moved on to features.

IT'S YOUR LIFE

For some, Christmas is joyful, for others, it brings sadness, loneliness

May

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR READERS: Christmas is here again! For some it is a time of great joy and excitement. For others it is a time of sadness, loneliness, disappointment, agitation, stress and often depression. The source of these "season induced" undesired feelings are many and varied. However, a very common source is the Christmas' experienced growing up in the family of origin.

During this season, I have found it very helpful to write about my feelings whatever they are. The conscious mind will typically try to protect us from past pain. However, it is rarely able to completely block feelings of "Christmas' past." In Charles Dickens', "A Christmas Carol," Scrooge is confronted with the visions of Christmas' Past, Present and Future. Happily this powerful one-night experience changed his life. He became the person that God had intended for him to be.

The "Ghosts of Christmas' Past" often present themselves in the form of "feelings" this time of the year. We may not get as a direct a visual intervention as Scrooge, but many of us will get direct unwanted emotional interventions.

Rather than denying the feeling, I have found it to be very helpful to accept and embrace the reality of the feeling. Rather than "hiding under the covers" like Scrooge, going directly to the pain often helps identify long-standing issues.

I am very partial to writing about feelings as a direct path to the pain. Through such writing (or journaling) we can often become aware of where our feelings are grounded. And grounded they are — in disappointment, loss, grief, fear and so on.

Why would we try to "bring up" the pain rather than avoid it? Because avoiding it hasn't worked has it? Scrooge could only change when he acknowledged his feelings and the consequences of his past — his mother's death, abandonment by his father, a love lost to his work addiction, loneliness, pain to others, failing to help the less fortunate, etc.

If you are experiencing unexplained feelings that seem inconsistent with the season, I encourage you to consider writing about your feelings. Give your inner feelings a vehicle for expression — a safe voice.

One of the feelings that often presents itself is a sadness or hurt associated with gift giving and/or receiving. I will share a story about Christmas that speaks about gift giving and what it can mean. In the beautiful short story, "The Gift of the Magi," O. Henry captures the essence of the spirit of giving.

O. Henry tells of a young married couple, Jim and Della Young, who had little money but each had two possessions that they were very proud of — Jim's gold watch that had been his father's and grandfather's, and Della's beautiful brown hair that fell below her knees.

On this special Christmas, Della cut off her beautiful hair in order to sell it and buy a watch fob chain for her husband's prized watch. Unknown to Della, Jim had sold his watch in order to buy Della a set of beautiful combs for her hair.

O. Henry writes: "The magi, as you know were wise men — wonderfully wise men — who brought gifts to the Babe in the manger. They invented the art of giving Christmas presents. Being wise their gifts were no doubt wise ones, possibly bearing the privilege of exchange in case of duplication. And here I have lamely related to you the uneventful chronicle of two foolish children in a flat who most unwisely sacrificed for each other the greatest treasures of their house. But in a last word to the wise of these days let it be said that of all who give and receive gifts, such as they are the wisest. Everywhere they are wisest. They are magi."

Have a Merry Christmas!

THE FOLLOWING CHRISTMAS TIPS ARE OFFERED BY THE CENTER FOR CHILDREN AND FAMILIES IF YOUR CHILDREN ARE SAD:

- Sometimes it is appropriate to ask them what they can do for themselves to make a sad situation better.
- If they want to be held while they cry that is fine.
- Help them to understand that crying is a normal reaction to sadness.
- Help your child to use his or her energy in positive ways.
- Anger and sadness do not have to be feared.
- You can encourage your child to write in a journal or diary too.
- If you decide to use a journaling technique, assure your child that your will not read his or her journal.
- Encourage your child to express her or his sadness, anger, etc., in writing.
- You may want to suggest that after he or she writes that you are available to discuss ways to address the sources of the emotion.

DEAR ABBY

At-home mom's days filled doing 'nothing'

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Can you stand another letter from a stay-at-home mom? I hope so. I'm a single mother of four children (13, 9, 7 and 4) and primarily a stay-at-home mom. I have a part-time job, but I don't consider it a "break" from my children.

Van Buren

I know that the "suffocated, overworked" mom who wrote to you is working hard because I have the same job — and I'm also ridiculed for "doing nothing" all day. Everyone wants to know when I am going to get a "real" job. Hello?

I DO have a real job, yet society feels that I do nothing because I don't receive a paycheck. My children are my No. 1 priority. The media are always preaching to "put your children first" — but if you do (as I have), people think there must be something wrong with you.

I have even been told that I must have low self-esteem to allow myself to be the primary caretaker of my children.

Oh, well, I give up. Thanks for listening. Excuse me, I have to go do "nothing" — laundry, dishes, drive to swimming lessons, flute lessons, the dentist, CPR class, shop for groceries, make dinner, help with homework, etc. —SAN FRANCISCO MOM

DEAR MOM: Other mothers who fill their days doing the same kind of "nothing" you described will greatly appreciate your letter, which reminds me of the following: "Never ask someone who stays home with children if they work." (Author unknown)

DEAR ABBY: With the Christmas holidays fast approaching, I have a gift-giving dilemma.

This year my sister, her husband and I decided to pool our money and buy our parents a single gift.

How exactly would we split the cost? Should we divide the cost three ways, or should I pay half and have my sister and her husband pay the other half? (For the record, all three of us are employed and have nearly the same incomes.) — WILLIAM FROM GENEVA, ILL.

DEAR WILLIAM: Since all three family members are employed and have nearly identical incomes, the cost of the gift should be split three ways.

DEAR ABBY: I read the letter in your column about stripping and had to write. We have a monthly birthday party at our senior center. This year we combined October's party with Halloween. About a month before, I decided to do a striptease number, but I kept it a secret in case I chickened out at the last minuteAbout 60 people were present. After we finished eating lunch, I announced, "Let me entertain you." (My granddaughter was a stripper in Las Vegas; she's now married to a rancher.)

Well, to the tune of "If You Knew Susie Like I Knew Susie" (my real name is Susan), I put on

ABBY: 81-year-old 'takes it off' at senior center

(From 8B)

a dance. I'm not a professional dancer, but I have seen strippers perform, and I know all the "moves."

I wore a long housecoat with a zipper down the front. Under that I wore a striped knit, footed pajama with a front zipper — and underneath that a pretty bathing suit. (Not a bikini.)

Everyone loved it — they hooted and hollered, "Take it off, take it off!"

By the way, I am 81. — SUSIE FROM BLOOMINGTON, ILL.

DEAR SUSIE: Your letter is a first. Hooray for you!

CONFIDENTIAL TO EDWARD JAY PHILLIPS: Happy birthday, son. Your father and I are very proud of you.

DEAR ABBY: This time of year, people are sending Christmas letters, so this is a reminder to please be discreet. How would you like to have your dirty laundry aired without your consent?

Last year, my mother's Christmas letter contained all the uncensored details about our family's personal business, which included our married children. There was a bankruptcy, a car accident, a divorce, an unplanned pregnancy and a shotgun wedding.

When I politely commented that I would have appreciated having a look at it before it was mailed, I was informed that it was HER family, and she didn't need to clear any information with anyone! I call that pure gall. What are your thoughts on this? -- FRUSTRATED IN INDIANA

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Your mother violated your right to privacy -- and that of every family member whose "news" she included in the newsletter. You may be "her" family, but you have a right to decide what information you want shared.

If it's any comfort, yours is a common complaint, and I'm printing your letter as a reminder to those who send holiday newsletters to check with family members before composing them.

ACTIVE TIMES

Mrs. Wallace is a lot like Mrs. Claus

By Lana Cunningham

She has the white hair, twinkling eyes and ready laugh that would make people think she's Mrs. Claus. In reality, she's played Santa, complete with beard and bag of gifts.

But if Santa is known for sharing and gift-giving, then Noma Wallace can fill his red-and-white suit. She shares not only her joy of life and her talents, but also her collection of Christmas decorations with the Kingsway Mall Senior Center.

As she goes from room to room at the Center, Mrs. Wallace points out various decorations she had used in her home and the memories they evoke, from stories of the early days of her marriage to Bill to Christmases when her three sons were young.

There's one small village that is at least 65 years old which came from her mother-in-law; another village is set up on a field of snow to greet members and visitors to the Center. Garlands adorning different rooms once hung over her fireplace during different phases in her life.

"Why should the (Center's Advisory) Board pay for what I already have?" she said. "It gives me a good feeling to see them here. I started with bringing just a few decoration, and I've finally brought most of them here and I'm going to leave them here.

"I can enjoy them here. I'm here more, anyway. And I have people here to help me put them up and take them down."

It's common knowledge that without Mrs. Wallace, the Center wouldn't exude its holiday charm nor its spirit of fun and good cheer.

"I just like to have a party; it's fun," she said with a laugh. It was not unusual for her and her husband to host parties at their home for 60 to 70 people. She's transferred her talent to the Senior Center.

When she was second vice president of the Advisory Board, Mrs. Wallace was in charge of planning the monthly parties. One month she carried out the luau theme, making large palm trees, coconuts, parrots, a crocodile and even a pirate's chest. "We had about 200 people, all dressed in muumuus and flowers."

Told she looked like Mrs. Claus, Mrs. Wallace giggled and recalled the year she played Jolly St. Nick himself at the Center. "No one else wanted to play it and I was asked to do it. My beard kept falling off and it was great."

But she carried out the theme, compete with a bag filled with sticks for those "who had been naughty. One man had commented about my costume the time I played a witch, so he got a bag of sticks.

"I'm pretty game to do most near anything," she added with a laugh, the eyes sparkling. "What better thing to do than to give these people a laugh or to let the people know someone cares about them?"

Caring about others is part of what makes up Mrs. Wallace. She has seen seniors who come to the Center for the first time and are timid and quiet. "You give them a task and before you know it you can see the pride they have in the Center. They feel like they're needed."

Her life today revolves around the Center, the 75-year-old acknowledged. "It's almost as if I had a job. I get up in the morning and leave things go at home so I can be here."

She first started going to the Senior Center when it was located on Delano Street and only went to the exercise classes. But when the Center relocated to Kingsway Mall several years ago, Mrs. Wallace increased her participation. She has taught crafts classes and sewing. And she has served two years as president of the Advisory Board.

Music plays another role in her life. Often, she will play the Center's organ. "You should be here for some of our singing sessions. We end up laughing and it raises our spirits." She also plays with the Kitchenette Symphony, her primary instrument being a rolling pin filled with metal beads. But she can tap out the rhythm with castanets, tambourine or bells.

Outside the Center, she is involved with Cuthbert and Austin Streets Church of Christ, sews many of her clothes and goes camping every summer with her three sons and 10 grandchildren. "The year before last I slept in a teepee. It was wonderful. We had old carpeting down and I slept on a cot. Last year, we took canoes and camped by a gorgeous lake.

"My life is so full, I don't have time to be gloomy or down. My kids think I have more fun than they do," she said.

With a laugh and a twinkle in her eyes, she popped back into the sewing room to finish a Christmas gift.

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Although she often plays the organ at the Senior Center, here, Noma Wallace "plays" a rolling pin filled with metal beads in the Center's Kitchenette Symphony.

DR. PAGE

Christmas comes once a year

By Dr. Henry F. Page

It seems that Christmas is coming. I first suspected this on Columbus Day when a sleigh appeared at the shopping center. Perhaps in the next few years the commercial announcement date will move up to St. Patrick's Day — thus giving our business exploiters an appropriate nine months working time.

Page

How nice it is to be a Senior Citizen so you can smirk at and yet enjoy all Christmas clap-trap without having to become involved. It is indeed a time for rejoicing no matter what comprises one's religious tenets. Unfortunately brash, rampant commercialism beclouds the wonderful message. Since age begets wisdom, the elderly can clearly perceive the pure picture.

As for yourself, pay no attention to the tintinnabulation and focus on the pleasant memories of many, many Christmas' past. Enjoy watching your kith and kin create their own memories albeit they live perhaps hundreds or thousands of miles away. What a joy to no longer be compelled to slosh through rain and ice purchasing expensive junk so as to impress acquaintances and business associates. Gone are the days when one became totally exhausted erecting decorations late Christmas Eve.

So you think that an Elder's Christmas must be sad? Bash and balderdash — the answer lies in elevating yourself out of your self-dug well of loneliness by contacting and visiting friends; join in church and community activities; and resonate with Carols to the vibes of life surrounding you.

Christmas comes but once a year and when it comes it brings good cheer,

Just kick 'the Grinch' hard in the rear!

Y'all hear.

Barbie Museum has reprieve, no longer faces eviction

Associated Press

PALO ALTO, Calif. — Barbie won't have to move out of her Dream House after all.

An eviction lawsuit against the Barbie Doll Hall of Fame has been dropped, much to the delight of museum owner Evelyn Burkhalter.

"We are so happy," she said Wednesday.

Burkhalter's landlord, San Francisco restaurateur Rowena Wu, had sued to have the museum evicted in early November, claiming it breached its lease by not providing adequate insurance.

Burkhalter argued that a waiver releasing the building owner of liability was part of the lease with the previous landlord, and Wu assumed that lease.

Wu did not return a phone call seeking comment Wednesday.

Burkhalter said Wu did not give a reason for dropping the lawsuit. She intends, however, to pursue her lawsuit against Wu seeking damages for the attempted eviction.

Burkhalter, a longtime doll collector, started the museum 11 years ago. It boasts 20,000 items, and is believed to be the world's largest Barbie collection.

Although Burkhalter charges $4 admission, the museum doesn't make money — and she feared she could not afford to relocate. But, she said, she got calls of support from as far away as South Africa and England.

"We had total strangers send us $10, $20, $30-dollar checks," she said. "Every call was, 'What can we do to help?'"

She claims to have every Barbie doll and accessory ever made, with the exception of a furry black dog, part of a 1972 outfit. Despite the recent publicity, she still hasn't found it.

"The dog still eludes me," she sighed.

DISEASE: Puppies are vulnerable, veterinarians say

(From 1B)

dler said that the virus, which is similar to feline distemper in cats, although "the cat does not give it to the dog," can be "can be quite fatal.

"They dehydrate, go into shock and die," she said. "It can kill them real suddenly." But once the young dogs "fully recover, they are fine."

The disease, which began to spread in the United States in the late 1970s, is "kind of an on-going problem" even though it is "probably one of the most prevalent and preventable diseases ... through vaccinations."

Once infested dogs are undergoing IVs to prevent further dehydration, the challenge is to keep them alive until they can regrow that lining and bone marrow."

Parvovirus is a "very hardy" virus.

Veterinarian Dr. Tom Green cited the pathology of the disease. "You get the ulceration, lose white-blood cells, you're losing fluids, and you're losing electrolytes (particularly potassium) through the vomiting and diarrhea.

"The primary treatment is replacing those fluids," Green said, "You've got to keep fluids flowing in that body and to control the vomiting and diarrhea. If you don't, the blood gets so thick, so viscous, that it won't flow.

Green noted that the dog's "lines of defense" in countering the pervasive virus are the lining of the small intestines and the infection-fighting white-blood cells which "just keep going right on out the intestinal tract" unless diarrhea is stopped.

VIRUS: Large dogs are often victims

(From 11B)

Green said the intensive treatment necessary to help the puppy recover and to rebuild its immune system may cost $100 to $150 a day "to do it right. The success ratio in treating parvo is very high if you do it right."

Veterinarian Dr. Brian Erxleben said the airborne disease may be spread to young dogs by the feces of infested dogs through sniffing or licking.

Of parvovirus in dogs and feline distemper in cats, Dr. Erxleben said, "They are alike in some ways, but they are different in others." Both affect the lining of the intestinal tract, but the disease is more severe in dogs than in cats.

For reasons not yet discernible, puppies of larger breeds of dogs, such as the rottweiler and Doberman pinscher, are particularly susceptible to parvovirus, Erxleben said. "Their immune system as a little bit suspect just as a breed."

Pitt bull terriers and black Labrador retrievers also are susceptible to the virus.

"Usually the bigger the dog, the slower the immune system matures," said Erxleben, who observed that "the biggest, toughest-looking dogs" may be victims of the virus. "We expect the worst," especially in rottweiler pups. "They have a hard time fighting it off."

Erxleben said symptoms of parvovirus may appear five days or a week from exposure to the virus.

Because most puppies are "really bouncy and active," Erxleben said that for puppies to be "lying around," running a fever and even vomiting and experiencing diarrhea may be symptoms for many diseases.

However, an additional indicator of parvovirus infection is blood along with the diarrhea, as the intestinal lining deteriorates.

"It's awful," he said. "The virus destroys the inside lining of the intestinal tract."

In addition to losing bodily fluids, the infested dog is "not getting its nutrients."

And with the lining gone, "nothing can be absorbed fluid-wise," Erxleben said. "It just runs on through. You get this profuse diarrhea. With the lining being destroyed, the intestine is bleeding. There is a lot of blood supplied to the intestines. You have blood and fluid coming out in diarrhea." Dehydration sets in.

Meanwhile, bacteria and toxins are absorbed into the bloodstream because the protective intestinal lining is deteriorating.

"You get all these things heaped on the dog. Dehydration, loss of electrolytes, bacteria and toxins all hit at the same time. The dog's immune system is down. This virus also affects the bone marrow and the immune system. The dog's immune system is suppressed, and it can't fight back very well against this disease," Erxleben said. "It's pretty devastating."

Erxleben said common household bleach will kill off the virus, particularly within the house. Killing it off outdoors is problematic.

For puppies fighting all sorts of diseases, including parvovirus, "between six weeks and four months is the real critical time," Erxleben said. "The dog's immune system is not mature. They've gotten by up to six weeks OK because they've got antibodies from their mother that protects them from these diseases. After about six or seven weeks, these start to wear off. And their immune system is still pretty immature, and it's not very powerful yet. To counter that, we try to start out vaccinations right about that time."

In a sense, parvovirus is "like the flu. Once you've got it, you've got it, and you've got to get over it," Erxleben said. "We don't have any drugs that will kill the virus and not kill the dog. So, we have to rely on the dog's immune system to eventually become strong enough to defeat the virus."

Commission acts on speed limits

AUSTIN (AP) — The speed limit on about 1,400 miles of undivided, multilane Texas highways, primarily in East Texas, soon will rise to 70 mph following action by the Texas Transportation Commission.

The commission authorized a speed limit lower than 70 mph on 850 miles of rural undivided highway, meaning the remaining 1,400 miles considered Thursday will be subject to higher speeds.

Motorists should observe whatever speed is posted on highway signs, said Bill Burnett, executive director of the Texas Department of Transportation. The agency is in the process of replacing the old speed limit signs with new ones.

Giants unveil plans

SAN FRANCISCO — San Francisco Giants owner Peter Magowan on Thursday unveiled the team's plans for a new $255 million ballpark to be built by the same firm that designed Camden Yards, Jacobs Field and other parks.

The 42,000-seat stadium, which would replace windy Candlestick Park, would be the first privately financed major league ballpark in more than 30 years, Magowan said. The most recent was Dodger Stadium, which was built for $15 million in 1962 on land that Los Angeles gave to the team.

The Giants are vowing to come up with $140 million in financing from investors, and the rest will be raised through concession rights and advertising. Sixty suites and 15,000 stadium seats also will be sold for a total of $45 million to $60 million.

Sox sign Gordon

BOSTON — Free agent right-hander Tom Gordon and the Boston Red Sox agreed Thursday to a $5.8 million, two-year contract.

Gordon was 12-12 with a 4.43 ERA last season for Kansas City. He has been used as both a starter and reliever over his seven-year career, all of it with the Royals.

The deal calls for two years at $2.9 million apiece, with a club option for a third at $3.1 million. Gordon, 28, could make $200,000 more in incentives each year.

The 5-foot-9 Gordon has a career record of 79-71 with an ERA above 4.00. In 1989 he went 17-9 with a 3.46 ERA.

MIDLAND HIGH VS. MIDLAND LEE

Lady Dawgs bite Rebs, lead 4-5A

By Sean Wallace
Sports Writer

Ogonna Merritt spent most of the second and third quarters sitting on the bench, but came through in the clutch.

The Midland High guard got in foul trouble early but returned to hit four key free throws in the final minute Thursday as the Lady Dawgs won a hard-fought, 57-52 District 4-5A game over Midland Lee at Chaparral Center.

"Anytime you have a game like this with two unbeaten teams (in district) its great to get the win," Midland High coach Jim Raughton said. "They did some good things out there against us. Lee's got a real good team."

Merritt scored a game-high 20 points and the win keeps the Lady Dawgs (13-2 overall, 3-0 in district 4-5A play) alone atop the district heading into the Christmas break. Marci Swinney, who started her 46th straight game for Midland High, scored seven while Toya Zachery and Kim Paschall each had six.

"This was something we talked about all week, going into it with a 3-0 mark in district," Zachery said. "We just kept fighting in there and just wanted to win. We were going to do what we needed to do to win."

Junior wing Jamie Rhoads led the Lady Rebels with 18 points, who fell to 8-7 and 1-1 with the loss. Forward Angie Seibold also had 13 points for Lee.

It was the second win by the Lady Dawgs over the Lady Rebels this season. Midland High won 54-48 in the championship game of Tall City Tournament. Their only other meeting this season, barring a post-season date, is Jan. 23.

Lee matched Midland High point for point through three quarters and led in the fourth when Merritt took control of the game, scoring the Lady Dawgs' final eight points.

"I spent most of the game on the bench, and I felt like I let my teammates down," said Merritt, who had her third 20-point game in her last four outings. "I got back in the game in the fourth and I was able to hit a couple of good shots."

Lee's Tamika Thurman hit a tough jumper in the lane and Claire Wright added a free throw to draw Lee within 53-52 with 1:02 remaining, but could never regain the advantage.

"We played a good game out there and certainly had the chance to win it," Lee coach Elise Kail said. "We made some mental mistakes at crucial times and just didn't make the shots."

Midland High made the shots and got the big plays when they needed to. Merritt went to the free throw line with 43.8 seconds left with a chance to ice the game, but missed her free throw attempt. Swinney grabbed the rebound which allowed Midland High to retain possession, kill more time off the clock

NFL hands out large fines to Gardner, Cox

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — If the $17,500 fine Bryan Cox received for his latest antics wasn't enough, the Miami Dolphins linebacker will also have to answer to coach Don Shula.

Cox was fined $17,500 Thursday for fighting with Buffalo fullback Carwell Gardner and spitting toward fans as he was escorted off the field during the Bills' 23-20 victory over the Dolphins on Sunday. Gardner was fined $15,000 for fighting and trying to bait Cox from the locker room and team bus.

"I have spoken to Bryan about his behavior, and I regret that it happened," Shula said in a statement. "The league has fined him substantially for fighting and for his conduct leaving the field. Regarding any additional action the club might take, I will address that issue following the conclusion of the season."

Both players were fined $10,000 each by Gene Washington, the NFL's director of football development, for the fight with two minutes remaining in the game. Both were ejected.

Cox received an additional $7,500 fine by NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue for conduct detrimental to the league for the spitting incident. Cox had no comment.

Gardner was penalized an extra $5,000 by Tagliabue after being pushed away by security guards. He also attempted to draw Cox off the bus before it left Rich Stadium. Gardner has denied both incidents despite witness accounts. He will appeal the fine.

"I didn't try to get into the locker room, and I didn't try to get on the bus," Gardner said. "I didn't do none of that."

The fight started after Cox tackled Thurman Thomas on a crucial third-and-2 play. Cox and Gardner came away from the pile shoving each other before the altercation escalated.

Baltimore signs all-star Alomar to three-year deal

■ Alomar gets huge deal that could turn the Orioles into an American League contender and should turn the second baseman into a rich man.

By David Ginsburg
AP Sports Writer

BALTIMORE — Roberto Alomar, eager to get that winning feeling again after spending a frustrating 1995 season with Toronto, agreed Thursday to an $18 million, three-year contract with the Baltimore Orioles.

The six-time All-Star second baseman is the fifth new player to join the Orioles since Pat Gillick took over as general manager late last month. And Baltimore was one of the two finalists in the competition for free agent pitcher David Cone.

But Baltimore lost out on landing free agent pitcher David Cone, who decided late Thursday to stay with the New York Yankees for a $19.5 million, three-year deal.

"We were obviously very interested in having David join the Orioles team," Orioles owner Peter Angelos said. "He has decided he wants to remain with the Yankees and we respect that decision and wish him well — except in 1996 when he pitches against the Orioles."

Alomar gets a $2 million signing bonus, $4 million in 1996 and $6 million in each of the following two seasons. The Orioles will defer $1.7 million in each of the first two years and $1.6 million in 1998. The deferred money will be paid in 1999, 2000 and 2001 without interest.

When Gillick took the job, he announced his intention of keeping the payroll in the $40 million to $45 million range. But Angelos gave him the go-ahead to find the best talent that money could buy, and Gillick cheerfully followed orders.

By far, his best signing to date is Alomar, who joined Toronto in 1991 after starting his career in San

One-car rollover kills Lamesa's Kevin Mosley, injures four others

LAMESA (AP) — Lamesa senior basketball player Kevin Mosley was killed and four friends were injured late Wednesday when their 1985 Pontiac swerved to avoid hitting a deer.

Coach Gary Yoder said the one-car rollover happened as the five boys headed home from a Christmas shopping trip to Midland.

Starting point guard Mosely, 17, died at the scene on state highway 349 in Martin County, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Courtney Edwards, 16, was listed in satisfactory condition after surgery Thursday at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Three others — Kevin Larry, 17; Julius Hill, 14; and Demont Edwards, 17 — were treated and released.

A spokeswoman for DPS said the accident happened at 11:56 p.m. when the car, trying to miss a deer, began to skid and flipped twice. Mosely and Edwards were ejected, she said.

Yoder said basketball games scheduled for Thursday and Friday have been canceled. Thursday was a teachers' work day at the school about 50 miles north of Midland, he said.

and 2000 with $1.5 million buyouts, but if Cone pitches regularly the options will be at his choice instead of the team's.

Cone was being wooed by the Baltimore Orioles, who earlier in the day agreed to an $18 million, three-year contract with Roberto Alomar. The Yankees didn't immediately comment on the signing, other than to confirm it and announce that Cone will hold a news conference Friday at Yankee Stadium.

Cone was the centerpiece of New York's offseason efforts. In anticipation of keeping Cone, the Yankees decided not to re-sign Jack McDowell, who then agreed to a contract with the Cleveland Indians.

"We were obviously very interested in having David join the Orioles team," Orioles owner Peter Angelos said. "He has decided he wants to remain with the Yankees and we respect that decision and wish him well — except in 1996 when he pitches against the Orioles."

Cone was 18-8 with a 3.57 ERA last season, including 9-2 with a 3.82 ERA with the Yankees. He signed an $18 million, three-year contract with Kansas City in December 1992, then was dealt from the Royals to Toronto following the 232-day strike.

With the Blue Jays out of contention, Toronto traded him to the Yankees on July 28.

Previously, the highest average salary for a pitcher was Cone's under the deal he signed with the Royals. Greg Maddux, who has won four consecutive Cy Young Award, is second at $5.6 million. He has a $28 million, five-year contract with the Braves.

Diego. He played on two World Series winners with the Blue Jays, but Toronto dropped to 56-88 last season and finished last in the AL East.

The frustrated Alomar was eager to head in another direction. Baltimore, in turn, was looking for a top notch player who could help get the Orioles into the postseason for the first time since 1983.

"Toronto was great to me. Everybody treated me real well," Alomar said during a conference call from his home in Puerto Rico. "But I think it was time to move on. Toronto wants to be a rebuilding team, and I wanted to be part of a winning team."

While with the Blue Jays, Alomar averaged 11 homers, 90 runs scored, 68 RBIs and 41 stolen bases. He has hit .300 or better in each of the last four seasons and earned his fifth consecutive Gold Glove in 1995.

"He adds more than one dimension to this team," Gillick said. "He can hit, he's a fine fielder and knows how to steal a base. He's a colorful player, a hard worker who's pretty to watch."

Gillick had barely settled into his new office when he began his pursuit of Alomar. The negotiations heated up Wednesday, shortly after the Orioles announced the acquisition of free agent utility player B.J. Surhoff.

"This was kind of unexpected. ... At times, (the negotiations) were like a roller coaster," Gillick said. "I didn't think it was going to get done."

Alomar, who turns 28 on Feb. 5, has started in the last four All-Star games aside new teammate Cal Ripken.

"It's going to be great playing alongside one of the legends of baseball," Alomar said. "It's like a dream come true."

Most of all, though, Alomar wanted to play on a team that could help him earned a third World Series ring.

"Baltimore has a great ballclub," he said. "We have a chance to go all the way."

Haselrig facing battery charges involving wife, awaiting extradition

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — Carlton Haselrig, the suspended New York Jets lineman arrested after his wife accused him of beating her during a domestic dispute, remained in jail today awaiting extradition to Pennsylvania.

The football player who had been missing without explanation from the Jets faces charges for missing a court appearance in Pittsburgh.

Haselrig appeared before a magistrate Wednesday and posted $2,000 bond on a simple battery charge. He was being held in the Cobb County jail under a fugitive warrant from Allegheny County, Pa.

Since Thanksgiving, the 29-year-old lineman has been involved in a traffic accident, fined for reckless driving, suspended by the NFL for a year for violating its substance-abuse policy and missed the court appearance.

Haselrig's wife, Sara, filed a handwritten affidavit Tuesday in Cobb County, claiming her husband "was verbally and physically abusing me, with threats to kill me."

Sara Haselrig, who is separated from the former NCAA heavyweight wrestling champion, lives with their two children in an apartment in this Atlanta suburb. Haselrig showed up at the apartment even though she was granted an order of protection from him earlier this year in Pittsburgh.

An arrest warrant was issued for Haselrig earlier this month in Pittsburgh after he missed a court appearance on a misdemeanor charge involving a drunken rampage last year. On Wednesday, he waived extradition.

Kimbrough expects Haselrig to go to Pennsylvania within 10 days.

A one-time Pro Bowl selection for the Pittsburgh Steelers, Haselrig has had four stays in substance abuse rehabilitation centers and has been arrested several times for incidents in which alcohol was involved. He did not play last season and signed with the Jets a free agent this summer.

La Marque proof of what talent can do

DALLAS (AP) — Teams don't reach three straight Class 4A championships without an amazing depth of talent. Witness the La Marque Cougars.

La Marque placed five players on The Associated Press Sports Editors' all-state team released Thursday, including one at each defensive layer.

Big Spring's Daniel Franks makes the honorable mention list for his play as a tight end.

Four of those guys — offensive lineman Greg Robinson, kicker Russell Bynum, linebacker James Burnett and defensive back Jamarcus Powers — started for La Marque last season yet were bypassed for all-state honors as other Cougars were in the spotlight.

Further proof of the Cougars' power comes in this fact: the lone non-returning starter among La Marque's five all-state choices, defensive lineman Roylin Bradley, was voted defensive player of the year. And he's only a junior.

La Marque (15-0), which lost to Stephenville in the last two title games, tries to cap its season in style Saturday when it faces Denison (15-0) in the last consolidated 4A championship game. The class will split its postseason into a 5A-like Division I and II format in 1996.

Corpus Christi Calallen landed first-teamers in offensive lineman Gabe Garza and running back Wes Danaher.

Danaher, 4A's all-time leading rusher and the second-most productive runner in Texas history, was a runaway choice for offensive player of the year.

Danaher led 4A with a record 3,572 yards and 46 touchdowns this season. He ended his career with 8,837 yards, another 4A best and second only to Kenneth Hall on Texas' all-time list.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 22, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Loved ones show greater support for your efforts. A special legacy and new monetary rewards will reduce financial worries. Wonderful career or business accomplishments are featured in late spring of '96. Lucky you! Romance will shine brighter than ever by midsummer. Learn more about marketing techniques and sales pitches. Business gets a welcome shot in the arm when you travel to promote your ideas. Check the credentials of new employees.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: journalist Diane Sawyer, actress Barbara Billingsley, TV host Gene Rayburn, composer Giacomo Puccini.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Experience counts big with influential people. Suddenly your talents are in greater demand. Do not sell yourself short. Keep your nose to the grindstone during work hours, but avoid acting like Scrooge with loved ones.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Update your hairstyle and wardrobe while keeping your ears open for new job leads. When revamping your resume, emphasize your versatility. Once hired, you will be asked to take on new responsibilities.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A long-sought agreement and greater domestic harmony combine to put you in the holiday spirit. Be willing to share unique concepts with those who have real vision. A new business partnership is possible.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Not a good day to take on additional projects. Focus on the most important tasks. Delegating responsibility to qualified personnel shows you are an effective manager.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The emphasis now is on devoting quality time to children. Plan fun but quiet projects that will keep them from getting too wound up with holiday excitement. Give yourself a breather from time to time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Gift items may be hard to find or on the expensive side. Utilize the services of people who can help you solve this problem. Although your romantic intentions are fine, slow down.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You make new friends wherever you go now. Avoid publicizing an idea you have developed until you find backers. Take steps to patent or copyright your work.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Family members may be tired and overly sensitive today. Avoid making unnecessary demands on their time. Pampering those you love will boost domestic harmony.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Someone who lives far away is uppermost in your thoughts. Call or send a gift by express mail. Inexpensive or homemade stocking stuffers can be a big hit.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): This can be a terrific day if you do not run out of energy. Pace yourself. Influential people like your ideas and may be willing to arrange financial backing.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Friendship plays a key role in business today. A partner could keep you guessing. Plan to enroll in classes that will sharpen your skills. Postpone a career move until after Jan. 1.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A part-time job could be the answer to a temporary cash shortage. Follow up ads in the newspaper or network with friends. You need to be discreet when dealing with a jealous member of opposite sex.

The bidding:

Opening lead: King of ♠

After the opening lead of the king of spades, how would you play four hearts at duplicate? Would you adopt the same line at rubber bridge?

There is little to the auction. Once partner can make a sound of any sort, South will insist on game.

West leads the king of spades. At a pair contest, where overtricks count, correct technique is to hold up the ace of spades for one round, and win the continuation. When a heart to the king reveals the bad break, there is only one chance — West must hold a doubleton diamond and the ace of clubs. Cash the ace-king of diamonds, then exit with a club. If East has to return a black card, your diamond loser vanishes on a high club and you will be on the board to finesse East for the queen of hearts. As the cards lie, though, you must go down a trick.

Would you play the same way at rubber bridge? Only if you have no regard for your wallet. If you are prepared to give up an overtrick, you can guarantee the contract on virtually any distribution of the cards.

Win the second spade and lead a trump, inserting the jack. When the finesse wins, all is well. But even if it loses, the contract is safe. Suppose West has the queen and shifts to a diamond. Win in hand, draw the outstanding trump and lead a club to the queen. The defenders can take the ace and play another diamond, but you can overtake the four of trumps with the five and discard the diamond loser on the king of clubs.

Adaptation of Jane Austen novel makes sense in Golden Globes

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif.— "Sense and Sensibility" made sense to Golden Globe voters, while Oliver Stone's "Nixon" and Martin Scorsese's "Casino" did not.

The adaptation of the Jane Austen novel captured a leading six nominations Thursday, including two for Emma Thompson — best dramatic actress and best screenplay. The two other movies were snubbed in the best picture category.

The 53rd annual Golden Globes, which will be presented Jan. 21, are not as prestigious as the Academy Awards but can influence and foretell Oscar nominations, announced Feb. 13. Some 90 members of the Hollywood Foreign Press Association select the Golden Globe winners.

"Sense and Sensibility" was nominated for best dramatic movie, as were "Apollo 13," "Braveheart," "The Bridges of Madison County" and "Leaving Las Vegas."

Nominated for best musical or comic motion picture were "The American President," "Babe," "Get Shorty," "Sabrina" and "Toy Story."

Anthony Hopkins was nominated for his Nixon portrayal. Scorsese was nominated for "Casino," but Stone, as Nixon might say, was (expletive deleted).

NEW YORK — After getting the kiss-off in Hollywood, Howard Stern's quest to show a same-sex smooch on television has succeeded on "Late Show with David Letterman."

Shock Jock brings same-sex kiss to Letterman show.

The radio personality known for outrageous antics on his morning radio program tried last month to introduce two bikini-clad women kissing on "The Tonight Show with Jay Leno." But NBC censors cut away and also refused to show Stern spanking one of the women.

The self-described "King of All Media" had no such problem Wednesday on CBS' Letterman show.

After waltzing onto the stage at the Ed Sullivan Theater in a gold-sequined evening gown, complete with flowing blond hair and makeup, Stern brought out two men in bikinis who then gave each other a televised peck on the lips.

LOS ANGELES — He's only 4-foot-11 and 14 years old, but when Jonathan Taylor Thomas talks about the ways of Hollywood, he speaks from experience.

For five years, he has starred as Randy, the middle son on the hit series "Home Improvement."

He was the voice of young Simba in Disney's 1994 "The Lion King," co-starred in March in Disney's "Man of the House" with Chevy Chase and Farrah Fawcett, and stars in Disney's new live-action movie "Tom and Huck."

"It's kind of odd," Thomas said in a recent interview. "Once you have a movie and it opens well, people automatically become interested, and that's the shallow aspect of this business, and you just have to accept it."

NEW YORK — The talk-show host who had his nose broken in an on-air melee with skinheads says he wants to quit the daytime TV dodge and become a network news anchor.

Geraldo says he wants to quit daytime television.

Geraldo Rivera, host of the often racy "Geraldo," said he is not going to renew his contract, which expires in 1998.

"At this stage, as my hair grays, I'd like to have the center chair of a news vehicle and be one of the wise men of the end of the century," Rivera said in the Dec. 30 issue of TV Guide. Rivera, 52, is also taking the high road with his prime-time show on cable's CNBC.

"You can't compete with Richard Bey, Jerry Springer and Jenny Jones," he said. "You can't lowball them ... can't go any lower and still survive, looking in the mirror every day. So I just stopped."

WISCONSIN RAPIDS, Wis. — Even dirty dancers have to follow doctor's orders.

Patrick Swayze spent a quiet evening resting after minor knee surgery Wednesday, Dr. Wayne Christie said. The star arrived by private jet to have the surgery done by Christie, his long-time orthopedist who moved to Wisconsin in June from Santa Monica, Calif.

Although best known for his roles in the movies "Dirty Dancing" and "Ghost," Swayze is a dancer by profession.

"He's also chosen to do his own stunts in a lot of movies, so he's been tossed around quite a bit," Christie said.

Duncan leads Wake Forest over Utah

The Associated Press

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. — Tim Duncan overcame a slow start by making his last five shots and No. 12 Wake Forest used some strong defense in a 60-56 victory over 13th-ranked Utah on Thursday night.

Duncan, a 60 percent shooter coming in, struggled to 24 points on 10-of-19 shooting as Wake Forest (6-1) won for the 15th time in its last 17 non-conference games.

The Demon Deacons, who last year led the Atlantic Coast Conference in field-goal percentage defense, held the Utes (6-2) to a season-low 35 percent shooting and their lowest point total in three years.

Duncan, who missed seven of his nine shots, led all players with 12 rebounds and four blocks.

Van Horn had 20 points for Utah and Jessie had 17.

No. 5 Memphis 74, Sam Houston State 51

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Mingo Johnson had 16 points, 13 in the first half, and six assists night to lead No. 5 Memphis to a victory over Sam Houston State.

The Tigers (6-0) substituted freely in the second half after building leads of 20-plus points.

Cedric Henderson added 11 for the Tigers.

Reserve guard Jason Yarbrough came off the Bearkat bench to score 14 points, all in the second half. Mike Dillard contributed 12 for Sam Houston State (2-6).

Memphis led 37-19 at the break behind the outside shooting of Johnson, who was 5-of-8 from the field, including 3-of-5 3-pointers.

The Bearkats shot 26 percent for the game, hitting 19 of 73 shots. Sam Houston's leading scorer, Frank Mata, was held to seven points, hitting only two of the 10 shots he attempted.

No. 18 Georgia 95, Mercer 68

ATHENS, Ga. — Terrell Bell scored 16 points to lead five double-figure scorers and No. 18 Georgia beat Mercer.

Katu Davis scored all 14 of his points in the first half as Georgia (8-1) jumped to a 19-point lead at intermission. Bell, a 6-foot-10 center, scored all but two of his points in the second half and had a career-high 14 rebounds.

It was the fifth straight victory for Georgia since an 85-74 loss at No. 11 North Carolina.

Pertha Robinson added 12 points for the Bulldogs, who also got 11 from Shandon Anderson and 10 from Carlos Strong, Georgia's other starters. Reserve Jon Nordin added 10 points.

Reggie Elliott led Mercer with 25 points and Farley had 16 points, 12 in the first half, and 13 rebounds.

No. 23 Virginia 80, Va. Commonwealth 65

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Norman Nolan scored a career-high 21 points and No. 23 Virginia held Virginia Commonwealth without a field goal for almost nine minutes of the second half in rallying for a victory.

Virginia (4-2), playing for the first time in 12 days, trailed 57-56 with 11:15 remaining. The Cavaliers then held the Rams without a field goal for the next 8:53 and opened a 74-61 lead. The Rams missed eight of 13 free throws in the run.

Harold Deane, held out of the starting lineup for the first time in 45 games, scored 13 of his 16 points in the second half and had eight assists for Virginia. Curtis Staples added 13 points.

Arkansas 73, SMU 46

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Pat Bradley stepped up to take the place of suspended top scorer Jesse Pate and scored 16 points to lead Arkansas to a victory over Southern Methodist.

Eight of Bradley's 10 field-goal attempts were from 3-point range, and he hit four of them.

Arkansas (5-3) scored the first seven points and never trailed, achieving a 42-17 edge at halftime. Southern Methodist (3-4) hit just 26.3 percent of its field-goal attempts for the night, while Arkansas scored on 45.2 percent of its shots from the field.

Sunday Adebayo added 11 for Arkansas against the Mustangs.

Jay Poerner, with 11 points, topped Southern Methodist's scoring, while Jemeil Rich had 10.

Texas 92, Providence 83

AUSTIN — Reggie Freeman scored a career-high 37 points and Sonny Alvarado added 11 points and 10 rebounds in leading Texas to a win over Providence.

Freeman had seven 3-pointers, including one that gave the Longhorns (5-2) a 84-75 lead with 2:45 remaining.

Jamel Thomas led the Friars (4-3) with 19 points, while Croshere, Michael Brown, and Derek Brown all had 12 points, and Ruben Garces added 10 and 14 rebounds.

and force Lee to foul and send them to the line again.

"We had a number of people step it up tonight," Raughton said. "When Ogonna got in foul trouble, everyone on the bench played great."

Merritt hit two big free throws with 18.4 seconds remaining which put Midland High ahead 55-52. Lee came down the floor with a chance to hit a three-pointer and send the game to overtime, but Rhoads missed on a drive to the basket, ending Lee's bid to win. Merritt tacked on two more foul shots with 2.7 seconds left for the final margin.

"Jamie's a good player and she hurt us," Raughton said. "She can make it tough for anyone."

Rhoads scored eight of her 18 in the second quarter when the Lady Rebels came back to tie the game at 25 at the half, hitting on all four of her shots from the field in the period.

Lee did a good job of handling Midland High's press in the first half but the Lady Dawgs still managed to jump out to a 16-11 lead. Rhoads led a 14-6 run which gave the Lady Rebels the lead back 25-22 with a 12-footer from the baseline. Zachery followed with an 18-footer that tied the game at 25 at the break.

The third quarter was just as tight as neither team could forge any kind of offensive dominance. Both teams played solid defense and neither team had more than a three-point lead.

Seibold's layup with 3:47 left in the third gave Lee a 32-29 lead, but Midland High scored seven of the next 11 points to draw even at 36 heading into the final period.

In the junior varsity game, Ritha Belizaire scored 26 points and led three players in double figures as Lee beat Midland High 66-49. LaSaundra Christian had 16 for the Lady Rebels and Saran Luehring added 12 as Lee improved to 14-4 overall and 2-0 in district play. Casey Fore led Midland High with 14 points.

Toya Clayter scored 10 points to lead Lee to a 37-35 win over MHS in the sophomore game. Gabbi Corbell turned in a solid defensive game as Lee improved to 6-8 overall and 2-0 in district play.

Michigan starts practice for Alamo Bowl

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The Michigan football team hit an unusually cold practice field at Trinity University on Thursday in its first Texas warmup for the Alamo Bowl.

The 14th-ranked Wolverines (9-3) take on No. 18 Texas A&M (8-3) in next Thursday's game. The team arrived in San Antonio on Wednesday.

A cold snap pushed temperatures down to the mid-40s through most of Texas. Those temperatures were expected to remain through the weekend.

Michigan coach Lloyd Carr said he had expected a more pleasant climate in the Lone Star State, but added that cold weather won't make a difference inside the Alamodome.

"It's a little bit nippy, but that's great football weather," Carr told reporters just after the team's first Texas practice got started.

Michigan planned a nearly three-hour workout, but closed most of the practice to the media.

Carr said the team would have to practice hard and be ready for a fast A&M team.

"There is no way in this practice situation that we can simulate A&M's speed," Carr said. "And we certainly don't have a back who can simulate (Leeland) McElroy's speed."

McElroy, who led the Aggies with an average of 171 all-purpose yards this season, was listed as questionable for the bowl game after a teammate rolled over his sore left ankle Monday during a workout.

Carr said he expects the junior running back to play and will prepare his team to take on McElroy.

"I think all great defenses begin with being good against the run," said Carr, who took over the head coaching job after Gary Moeller resigned earlier this year under fire. "If you're good against the run, you force teams into a passing situation and any time you do that you make them a one-dimensional team."

Besides an offensive threat from McElroy, the Wolverines would have to prepare for a nationally rated A&M defense, Carr said.

"I expect a defense that will be the best defense we played this year and an offense that has great potential," he said. "They are going to play with great pride. Texas A&M is a great team."

The Aggie defense, known as the Wrecking Crew, led the Southwest Conference in total defense, giving up an average of 257.7 yards and 13.5 points. That netted the No. 3 spot in college football ratings.

On the Michigan side, the Wolverines average 402 yards of offense and 26.5 points.

"The Alamo Bowl brought in a team that arguably is the best football team in the country," A&M coach R.C. Slocum said. "(Michigan has) a rich, rich football tradition. It's a great challénge to us and a great honor" to play the Wolverines.

Along with its 95 players, Michigan brought 170 more people, including coaches, trainers and some family members.

But team spokesman Bruce Madej said there would be little time for fun in the River City.

"They are taking this game very seriously," Madej said. "This is business."

A&M arrives in San Antonio later this week. The Aggies begin practice at Trinity University on Saturday.

This year's Alamo Bowl is the teams' third meeting. Michigan won in 1970 and 1977.

Spike Dykes suspends two players charged with felonies

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Texas Tech defensive back Corey Turner and wide receiver Ronnie Burns were charged with felony assault Thursday and suspended from the Copper Bowl-bound team.

Coach Spike Dykes said he reprimanded four other players charged Thursday with misdemeanors stemming from a Dec. 3 party.

Turner, a 20-year-old freshman from DeSoto, and Burns, a 20-year-old sophomore from Dallas Carter, were charged with two counts each of assault on a police officer, a third-degree felony punishable by up to 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Neither will accompany the team Friday to Tucson to play Air Force in the Copper Bowl on Wednesday, Tech said in a statement.

Neither Turner nor Burns played much this season.

Dykes said he reprimanded sophomore split end Sheldon Bass, freshman tailback Phillip Hayes, junior cornerback Kenny Haywood and sophomore flanker Stacy Mitchell. Their misdemeanor charges:

—Hayes, 19, hindering apprehension and resisting arrest.

—Haywood, 22, criminal trespass and disorderly conduct for loud and profane language.

—Mitchell, 20, hindering apprehension.

—Bass, 20, criminal trespass.

Two other players and former All-American Lloyd Hill also were arrested in the disturbance but were not charged Thursday.

Athletic Director Bob Bockrath said the situation is not necessarily a black eye for Red Raiders football.

Bockrath said he supports the discipline Dykes meted out.

Two other men and two women also were charged Thursday with misdemeanors related to the party at Turner's apartment.

Lubbock County District Attorney Bill Sowder said the investigation was complicated, but the involvement of Texas Tech football players did not prompt any special handling of the case.

Police reports said more than 40 officers were sent to the party after fights in the crowd got out of hand.

U.S. women put it together, move to 16-0

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The U.S. national team finally put together two good halves of basketball and it was scary.

Jennifer Azzi had 18 points and seven other players reached double figures for the unbeaten national team during a 118-49 victory Thursday night over Ohio State.

Team USA, 16-0 on its national tour, got its second-most lopsided victory. Two weeks ago, the national team defeated Old Dominion 109-37.

The big difference in the game came behind the 3-point line. Team USA hit 13-of-19 3-point tries while Ohio State made 2-of-11.

Team USA, which is on a 20-game exhibition tour, dominated throughout the game and never trailed.

Lisa Leslie added 16 points for the national team. Teresa Edwards had 15 points while Rebecca Lobo and Katrina McClain had 11 apiece.

The Buckeyes were 17-for-51 from the field for 33 percent. Team USA was 43-for-73 for 59 percent.

Ohio State was led by Katie Smith's 12 points. She was the only Buckeye in double figures.

Rookie scores twice, Stars skate to 3-3 tie

DALLAS (AP) — Rookie Grant Marshall scored twice, including the tying goal with 13:26 to play, to lift the Dallas Stars into a 3-3 tie with the New York Islanders on Thursday night.

Wendel Clark scored his 16th and 17th goals for the Islanders, but missed a penalty shot with 5:31 to play that would have given New York the lead. Zigmund Palffy added a goal and two assists for the Islanders, winless in their last five games (0-3-2).

The Stars had the best scoring chance in overtime but Islanders goaltender Tommy Soderstrom stopped a Dallas defenseman from inside 10 feet with 1.9 seconds left.

Travis Green scored an apparent goal with 6:42 that would have given the Islanders the lead. But Green piled into Stars goalie Darcy Wakaluk and the goal was disallowed by the replay official.

CITYLINE — The Talk of the Town

Weather key factor of Aloha Bowl

The Associated Press

HONOLULU — Heat and humidity may be the key factors in which team wins the Aloha Bowl on Christmas morning.

After one day of full workouts, the opposing coaches — UCLA's Terry Donahue and Glen Mason of Kansas — commented on the weather conditions and what it will be like to play at mid-morning on artificial turf.

"It very hot and humid here," Donahue said Thursday.

"I think the players will testify to the fact that the Astroturf and heat is going to take a little getting used to. We don't play on artificial turf very much, and we're used to this kind of heat only in the early part of our season.

It was no different for the Jayhawks.

"I was pleased with the way we practiced," Mason said of the initial workout at Aloha Stadium. "They handled the heat pretty good when you take into account we hadn't done a lot of heavy work in Kansas before we left."

The teams were given the afternoon off Wednesday after morning workouts, and both coaches said their players scattered for sightseeing tours on mopeds and ocean activities.

On the injury front, Donahue said leading rusher Karim Abdul-Jabbar practiced Wednesday and is expected to see action against the Jayhawks.

As for the Jayhawks, Mason said, "We're about as healthy as can be expected."

Sun Bowl

EL PASO — Why are they calling it the Sun Bowl?

When the University of Iowa football team arrived in El Paso Thursday, it was 35 degrees and rainy — not exactly what the Hawkeyes expected.

Iowa (7-4) and Washington (7-3-1) square off Dec. 29 for the Sun Bowl.

Longtime Hawkeye coach Hayden Fry wasn't as surprised.

"I lived over 20 years down here in this area so I'm used to it, but it doesn't rain very often," said Fry, who is originally from West Texas. "We know that the weather is supposed to clear and have a great day for the game next week."

It also rained Monday when the Huskies got off their plane. Fry knew where to place the blame.

Fry, who will be involved in his 12th bowl game at Iowa and 15th in his 34 years as a head coach, is just happy to be in El Paso for the holidays.

The Hawkeyes won't be holding practices on the artificial turf at the Sun Bowl but rather at the natural grass field at the Socorro Activities Complex in El Paso.

Gas prices climb

NEW YORK — Natural gas prices continued to climb sharply in futures trading Thursday, spurred by cold temperatures and new data that showed supplies were growing tighter.

The January contract for natural gas prices rose 27.9 cents to $3.35 per 1,000 cubic feet. It was the third-consecutive record high price for natural gas.

After trading closed Wednesday, the American Gas Association reported gas supplies fell by 178 billion cubic feet last week to 2.4 trillion, leaving underground gas storage at 75 percent of capacity. That was 12 percent below the year-ago level, the AGA said.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in February settled at $18.96 per barrel, down 1 cent at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Film fight

LOS ANGELES — Hardly anybody went to see the Samuel Goldwyn Co.'s movies. Now several people are interested in buying the independent film company's assets.

Hours after PolyGram agreed to buy the Goldwyn film and TV library for $62 million, billionaire John Kluge's Metromedia International offered to buy the entire independent film company and its theaters in a $115 million deal.

The $5 a share offer was made to Goldwyn late Wednesday and confirmed Thursday. The film and TV library includes "The Madness of King George" and "Much Ado About Nothing."

Dollar steady

New York — The dollar was little changed against major currencies as investors waited for signs of progress in budget negotiations in Washington.

The dollar was last quoted at 1.4380 marks, up from 1.4365 marks in New York. It was last quoted at 101.85 yen, compared with 101.71 yen in late New York trading Wednesday.

The dollar was mixed against other major currencies, falling to 4.9306 French francs from 4.9354 francs and rising to 1.1571 Swiss francs from 1.1547 francs. It slipped to 1,585.5 Italian lira from 1,589.5 lira. The Canadian dollar rose to 73.34 U.S. cents from 73.13 U.S. cents. The British pound slipped to $1.5423 from $1.5426. The Mexican peso weakened to 7.580 pesos to the dollar from 7.645 pesos.

Markets surge

NEW YORK — Stocks rose Thursday, rebounding from a sharp selloff the day before, amid signs that federal budget talks in Washington may be back on track.

The Dow Jones industrial average climbed 37.21 points to 5,096.53, recovering most of a 50-point drop Wednesday after the budget negotiations broke down for the second time.

Meanwhile, however, advancing issues led decliners by 3 to 2 on the New York Stock Exchange. Big Board trading volume was moderately heavy at 415.78 million shares but below Wednesday's pace.

Broad-market indexes rose, helped by a strong comeback in technology issues. The NYSE's composite index rose 2.00 to 325.61. The Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 4.55 to 610.49.

The Nasdaq composite index added 15.37 to 1,040.64, while the American Stock Exchange's market value index advanced 2.99 to 537.49

GOP threatens telecommunications bill

By Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — A wide-ranging bill that would deregulate the communications industry could be derailed by House Republicans who complained Thursday that the measure doesn't give media and phone companies enough freedom.

The opposition comes one day after key congressional negotiators and the White House agreed on a media ownership plan, the last big hurdle to reconciling separate telecommunications bills passed by each chamber.

House GOP leaders said the proposed changes failed to give media and other companies enough freedom from existing laws and regulations.

"I think they are putting together a conference report that does not have good standing among House Republicans right now," House Majority Leader Richard Armey, R-Texas, said Thursday.

"We've got too many people who don't like too many provisions," he said.

"I just think the bill has become too regulatory," said John Boehner, R-Ohio, chairman of the House GOP caucus.

It was unclear whether the agreement will hold.

"If they want to blow up the deal, they will blow up the bill," said a Clinton administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The bill would allow cable TV and local and long-distance companies to get into each others' businesses, lift price regulations on millions of cable customers and restrict smut on television and computers.

The agreement between the key congressional negotiators and the White House on Wednesday would give media companies more freedom to increase their holdings, but would still retain many restrictions. The House bill would lift most restrictions on media companies.

The agreement also toughens provisions on what local Bell companies must do before providing long-distance service and gets rid of a provision in both bills that would have permitted foreign companies to take more than a 25 percent state in a U.S. telephone company as long as that company's country would allow the same investment for U.S. companies.

The White House had threatened a veto, but finally was won over by the compromise on media ownership and additional restrictions on Bell company entry into long-distance.

Rep. Thomas Bliley, R-Va., and Larry Pressler, R-S.D., among the four key negotiators who endorsed the agreement with the White House began selling it to members as well as to Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, Kan., and House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., on Thursday.

"I believe this bill is in good shape in the Senate," Pressler said. "We have a clear majority of Senate conferees. ... I'm working on everybody."

And Bliley is also optimistic, an aide said. "He thinks it (the bill) will sell itself," said the aide on condition of anonymity. As to the agreement, the aide said, "it is not falling apart."

Gingrich and Dole had no immediate comment on the bill, though there were reports from congressional aides that both lawmakers have problems with the bill.

Meanwhile, some lawmakers insisted that there wasn't an agreement. "There's no deal yet," said Rep. Jack Fields, R-Texas, in a statement. Fields is one of the primary authors of the House's original bill.

Cruise lines interested in Houston port

HOUSTON (AP) — At least six major cruise lines are interested in sailing out of the Port of Houston by 1997, according to a study by Port Authority officials.

Ned Holmes, chairman of the Port Authority, said Wednesday that Carnival, Celebrity, Costa, Princess, Royal Caribbean and Royal Lines all have expressed serious interest.

One of the lines, Carnival, said it wants to do test cruises in Houston by 1997 with a ship, Tropicale, now docked in New Orleans, Holmes said.

Other cruise lines, including Commodore and Sun Lines, have said they may sail to Houston by next year, but have not put it in writing.

A large number of new big oceanliners are coming on stream, bumping older ships — six or seven years old — out of their ports of call, Holmes said. That means about 40,000 additional berths are needed to accommodate all the ships.

Miami is full. It doesn't have enough capacity to service the ships, and Miami accounts for half of the world market, he said.

The cruise lines have to find a home for those older ships, Holmes said, noting that cruise lines have up to $300 million invested in each of their ships and have to keep them productive.

"They're going to go someplace," Holmes said. "There are 160,000 people a year out of Texas that cruise, and they know there is a market."

Holmes said the Port of Houston Authority and the city of Houston are in an optimal position to benefit from the cruise industry's need to reposition its vessels and interest in new and profitable home ports.

The city could have as many as three cruise lines sailing by the end of 1997, said commissioner John Q.A. Webb, a strong proponent of bringing cruise lines to Houston.

Early projections show that as many as 200,000 cruise passengers could be sailing from Houston by the year 2000, bringing in $3.7 million a year in revenues for the Port, creating more than 800 jobs and pumping $60 million into the local economy, said Webb, who spearheaded the study.

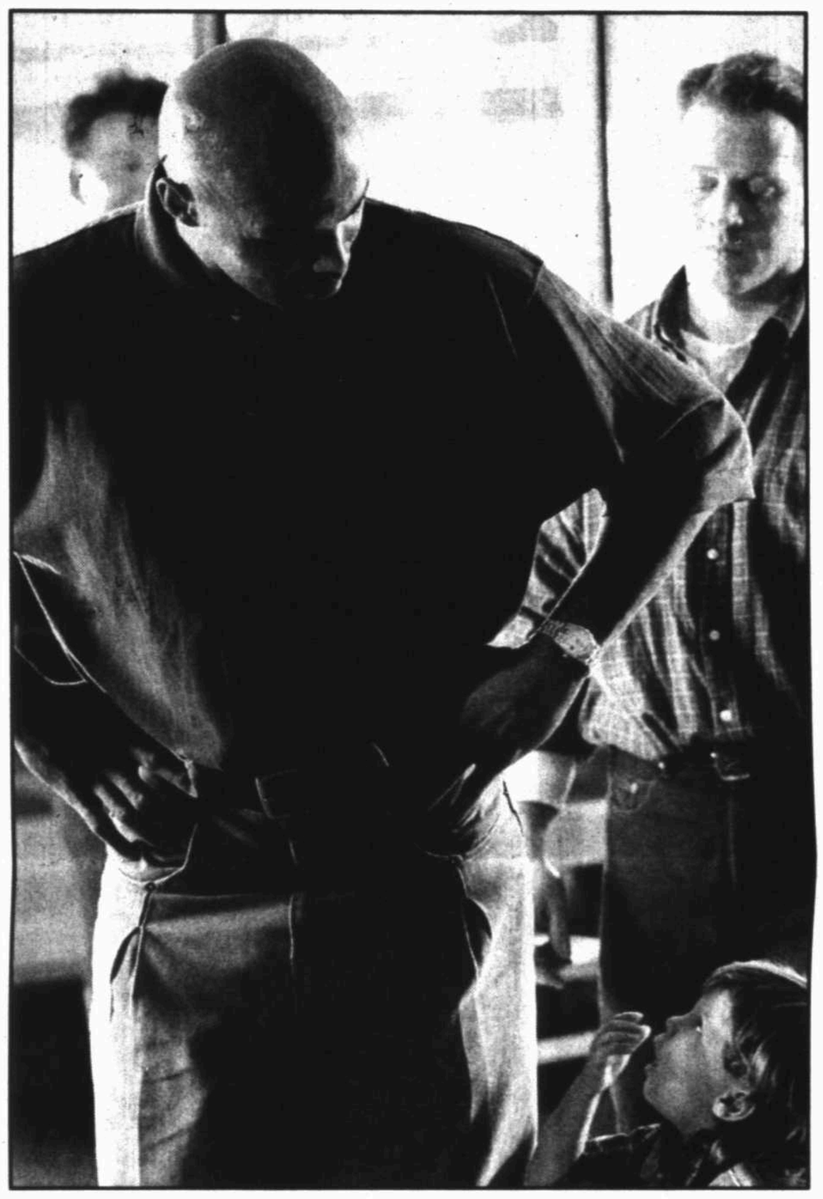
The Port Authority began looking into the cruise business a year ago.

In addition to Miami and New Orleans, Galveston also would be a rival for the cruise business.

But Holmes said Houston's air connections and the Port's proximity to Houston's airports give it a good chance.

"We have positive letters and a pretty strong level from Carnival," said Holmes. "Is it really going to work? I don't know yet."

Plans call for Barbours Cut Terminal, about 2 1/2 hours sailing from the Gulf of Mexico, to be used for the cruise liners.



'McJingle' is back

In one of a series of new commercials highlighting the return of the 1975 Big Mac jingle at McDonalds, NBA superstar Charles Barkley gets some "coaching" from a young customer who demonstrates how to say "twoallbeefpattiesspecialsauceletttucecheesepicklesonionsonasesameseedbun." The return of the 20-year-old jingle on December 26 coincides with the Big Mac value breaks promotion from December 29 to January 18 and kicks off a series of Big Mac initiatives.

Accounting board stuck on derivatives rules

By N.Y. Times News Service

Norwalk, Connecticut — An attempt by the Financial Accounting Standards Board to set accounting standards for the use of derivatives made little progress today as board members disagreed over the scope of the project.

The FASB, which is under pressure from the Securities & Exchange Commission to quickly establish rules for derivatives, agreed in October on a tentative accounting approach. This would require that gains or losses from derivatives trading be reported in financial statements in the period they occurred. Those values would be "marked-to-market," or reported at the price they would fetch if sold on the open market.

That agreement appeared in jeopardy Thursday as FASB members argued over what sorts of derivatives use would be exempt from the rules. One concern is that the value of some financial instruments is so difficult to establish that trying to do so would unnecessarily delay the project's completion.

"If we're saying that we can't make tough measurement decisions because we don't have enough time would be like saying we're trying to deal with certain audiences — like banks — and not with others — like insurance companies," said James Leisenring, the FASB vice-chairman. "We're either going to deal with those tough issues or we aren't."

Leisenring was objecting to proposals that some financial instruments like leases, insurance contracts and the core deposits of banks would be exempt from mark-to-market rules. On the other hand, as FASB chairman Dennis Beresford pointed out, the FASB has been unwilling in the past to force some companies, especially financial institutions, to use mark-to-market accounting for all the securities they own.

Under current rules, companies often have to account for derivatives at current market values when it's unclear how much they stand to gain or lose at the end of the contract. At today's meeting, FASB staff member Jane Adams proposed that companies which have gains or losses from derivatives trading "that are unlikely to be reversed" should be reported in the period when they occur.

"We can't write a document like that," Leisenring said. "If people know when the price of something will change they should bet the ranch on it. If people want to play roulette, the results should be in earnings."

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

'Bad News Bears' stock market terror stories refuted

By Bill Doyle

Q: I subscribe to a number of financial newsletters, all of which turned quite pessimistic in recent months. All of them predict the present bull market will turn into a bear market very soon. And they put the blame on mutual funds.

Doyle

Their theory is that any decline in stock prices, even a small "correction," will become a massive fall because mutual funds will have to sell stocks from their investment portfolios to pay off investors who panic and redeem mutual fund shares.

These doomsayers contend the portfolio selling caused by the initial redemptions will send stock prices and fund share prices lower, bringing on wave after wave of redemptions, sending stock and fund share prices down, down, down.

One of the newsletters calls the scenario a "mutual fund meltdown."

Is it possible this will happen?

A: Virtually anything is possible, but count that dire scenario as most unlikely.

The Bad News Bears — newsletter writers who frighten readers and thrive on subscription fees — have been predicting a plunge in stock prices during the entire bull market.

Their predictions have not panned out yet, and there is no good reason to believe they will in the near future. The bull market of rising stock, bond and mutual fund share prices seems alive and well.

A study by the Investment Company Institute pretty much refutes the terror story of a mutual fund meltdown. ICI statistics show mutual fund investors did not rush to redeem shares in the spring of 1994, when stock prices fell 7 percent — a sizable correction.

Newsletters forecasting bear markets cross my desk frequently. I liken them to the ghost stories my grandmother remembered from her childhood in County Wexford, Ireland. Grandma could scare the bejabbers out of the assembled kids, but we knew it was all in fun.

Q: You told a reader it would be hard to find a brokerage firm that would buy shares of true no-load mutual funds for customers' individual retirement accounts.

The September edition of the American Association of Individual Investors Journal lists six discount brokerages offering shares of anywhere from 218 to 569 no-load and low-load mutual funds.

Doesn't this solve the problem for cost-conscious investors who go shopping for mutual funds that do no have excessive fees?

A: Not really, because shares of mutual funds available through so-called "supermarkets" at discount brokerages carry other charges.

By investing that way, you are hit with either a 12b-1 fee by the fund or a separate charge by the brokerage — in some cases, both. Worse yet, they are annual charges and, over the long run, can add up to more money than an old-fashioned "load."

When a fund has a 12b-1 fee, its management company collects a small percentage of the fund's assets — typically 0.25 to 1.25 percent — for "distribution" costs, such as payments to brokers.

A true no-load mutual fund has no 12b-1 fee, no commission load when shares are purchased and no redemption fee or contingent deferred sales charge when shares are cashed in.

The way to be a cost-conscious investor is to purchase shares directly from one of the many true no-load mutual funds.

Q: How can I learn if the mutual fund a broker is recommending has a 12b-1 fee?

A: You can find that and other information summarizing the fund's fees and expenses in the fund's prospectus — usually on Page 2 or 3. The U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission requires the broker or other sales type to give you the prospectus at or before the time of the first sales pitch.

BUDGET: Sides trade threats on shutdown

(From 8A)

ers of both chambers spoke of sending Clinton legislation that would allow payments to continue flowing to veterans and other people who rely on federal benefits. And with many lawmakers chafing to leave town for a Christmas break, Dole made it clear he wanted to give them next week off and ease the shutdown, at least in part, if budget progress was being made.

"I'm not an advocate of shutting down the government. Never have been," he said.

House Republicans, however, took a hard line against a broad lifting of the shutdown. House Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas, said lawmakers would not send Clinton a bill reopening agencies — even temporarily — until there is "a bill for him to sign" that balances the budget in seven years.

The GOP alleged that the shutdown is Clinton's fault because he failed to bargain seriously at the intermittent talks over the past month. The two sides are separated by differences over how deeply to cut taxes and how much savings to extract from Medicare, Medicaid and other domestic programs.

"Now it's time for the president to understand that dillying and dallying, rather than getting serious about the work, has consequences," Armey said at a news conference.

NOTES: President reaches agreement with House Republicans backpedaled from the privilege claim in the face of politically damaging comparisons to the Watergate scandal two decades earlier and unyielding Republican senators insisting they had a legal right to see the notes.

(From 9A)

Clinton said Wedneday he was "dying to give up these notes," insisting there was nothing damaging in them.

In the end, Clinton insisted on a single condition: that all entities investigating Whitewater agree that he still retains a right to claim that other conversations with his lawyers could be kept confidential.

By early this week, the Senate panel and prosecutors had agreed to those terms.

But Leach, R-Iowa, and Rep. William Clinger, R-Pa., chairman of the House Government Reform and Oversight Committee, refused to accept the terms. Leach and Clinger are conducting separate House investigations on Whitewater.

They expressed fears that entering such an agreement might establish a precedent that could hinder their investigations in the future. They said only Congress, not the president, should decide whether a legal claim of privilege existed.

But the two sides continued to negotiate, and on Thursday they agreed on technical, legal language of an agreement that both sides said satisfies their concerns.

The final agreement came just 24 hours after the Senate voted, for the first time since Watergate, to challenge a president in court for refusing to turn over documents.
