Midland records nation's fastest growth

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midland is the fastest-growing city in the nation on a percentage basis, according to new reports released Tuesday by the U.S. Census Bureau. Based on statistics compiled from 1980 to 1984, Midland experienced a growth rate of 38 percent, recording a population of 113,000 for the Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area (SMSA), which includes all of Midland County.

City officials, however say the percentages were influenced greatly by the "boom period" from mid-1980 to mid-1982.

"Those figures include the boom period," said Mayor Thane Akins. "But we're still growing at a rate of three percent a year."

Richard Hennessy, director of development and planning for the City of Midland, agreed.

"Currently, we have a growth rate of three to four percent," he said. "From Jan. 1 1984 to Jan. 1, 1985, we had a growth rate of 4.9 percent, exclusive of any annexations."

"The first part of 1985 is slower than all of 1984," he said. "But I think we'll see a sustained rate of growth over the next year."

According to Hennessy, the growth rate could increase over the beginning of the year, simply because "a bottoming out may have occurred" earlier.

"It may be a little higher at the end of this year," he said.

Growth of three to four percent, however, is a healthy growth rate, according to the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

"It's a significant growth rate," said Grant Billingsly, executive vice president.

The Census Bureau reported that two other Texas cities have topped the list in growth rates.

Houston and Dallas have grown the fastest since 1980 among U.S. urban areas with more than 1 million people, while Salt Lake City joined that select million-plus population club for the first time, said the reports.

The new Census study of metropolitan areas reflected a continuing Western and Southern population shift, with the Houston-Galveston-Brazoria region becoming the nation's fastest-growing major metropolitan area with a 15 percent population spurt between 1980 and 1984.

That growth, to 3,565,700, pushed the Houston area past Washington, D.C., and its suburbs on the list of large metro areas. The nation's capital dropped from eighth to ninth place despite a 5.5 percent growth to 3,429,400 residents.

The study also reported that the number of metropolitan areas with more than a million people has climbed to 37, with the addition of Salt Lake City-Ogden. Charlotte-Gastonia-Rock Hill, N.C.-S.C. joined that list last year to add to the 35 such places counted in the 1980 census.

In general, metropolitan statistical areas are defined as regions of common economic interest with a city of at least 50,000 people at the center.

Nationally, there are 277 such areas designated by the Office of Management and Budget, ranging from massive New York City down to Enid, Okla., with a population estimated at 65,400.

Tornado hits one house in Big Spring; None hurt

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Kathy and Jim Woolverton and their 7-year-old daughter, Shauna, were watching television in the living room of their Big Spring home about 9:15 p.m. Tuesday when they felt a strange tingling up their spines. Then the hair on the back of their necks stood up. It was then the tornado came crashing into the back of their home, tearing into the kitchen and sending the back patio into the backyard of the neighbors across the street.

Their home apparently was the only one hit by a tornado in a heavily populated area of Big Spring Tuesday night as a thunderstorm system moved through Midland and other West Texas cities, dropping rain and hail and lightning setting two tank batteries on fire.

Through midnight, the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport had recorded 0.33 of an inch of rain with another 0.11 coming this morning in a thunderstorm that hit about 5 o'clock.

Although skies were clearing by late morning, the weatherman said the NWS is calling for a 20 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms tonight. "The residual moisture on the ground combined with the heating of the afternoon should produce some thundershowers," said the weatherman. The temperature should drop to the mid-60s with the winds blowing out of the north at 10-15 mph. Thursday is expected to be even calmer with no chance of rain in the forecast and a high in the middle 80s. Winds should be northwesterly at 10-20 mph.

Midland and some other cities reported only lightning, thunder and rain while Big Spring was the only city to report a funnel cloud sighting. According to Mrs. Woolverton, this is the first time she can remember a tornado hitting in that town in the 20-plus years she has lived there.

"I never want to go through this again," she told the Reporter-Telegram this morning in a telephone interview.

There had been no time for the Woolvertons to take cover before the tornado hit. "When I felt this tingling on my neck, I jumped out of the chair and started running with my girl. It sounded just like a freight train," she said of the tornado. The Woolvertons made it to the bathroom and stayed there for a time.

"The first thing I did was turn on the radio station and a man was saying there were no tornadoes in the area. We called and told them there was," she said with a quick laugh.

Ruling shows no change in court's church-state stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court's latest ruling on school prayer provides some hints on the yardstick the justices will use to measure other major church-state cases still confronting them.

The court on Tuesday ruled, 6-3, that an Alabama law allowing daily moments of silence for "meditation or voluntary prayer" by public school students is unconstitutional.

The decision, while touching off a new round of emotional debate over school prayer, also indicated the justices intend to analyze government's relationship to religion the same way they have since 1971.

In 1971, the high court created a three-part test to determine whether laws unlawfully favored the "establishment" of religion.

The court said then that to pass constitutional muster a law must have a secular or non-religious purpose, must neither have a primary effect that advances nor inhibits religion, and must not foster "excessive governmental entanglement" with religion.

It appeared in 1983 that the court might be willing to discard the test when it approved daily prayers in Congress and state legislatures led by paid chaplains.

And then last year, the court ruled that a community's display of a Christmas Nativity scene did not violate the Constitution's establishment clause.

Those decisions left unclear whether the three-part 1971 test still applied.

But on Tuesday, at least five justices adhered strictly to the 14-year-old method for settling church-state controversies in striking down Alabama's moment-of-silence law.

"The First Amendment requires that a statute must be invalidated if it is entirely motivated by a purpose to advance religion," said Justice John Paul Stevens for the court.

Charles Sims, an American Civil Liberties Union lawyer in New York City, said the reaffirmation of the 1971 test could have far-reaching consequences.

He noted that there has been "a movement by the fundamentalists" to create a new yardstick for examining church-state disputes. That test would "allow government generally to favor religion as long as it does not discriminate against (particular) sects or religions," Sims said.

That argument was rejected decisively in the Alabama case, Sims added.

New leader to continue Parkview plans

RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Plans for the construction of a new facility for Midland's only private hospital will continue as scheduled, according to the newlyn-amed administrator of Parkview Hospital, Gerry Tipsword.

Tipsword

"We're very much in favor of continuing with current plans for the construction of the new Doctor's Hospital," said Tipsword.

Tipsword, 47, replaced former administrator Dick Liley who resigned from the hospital last week. Liley's resignation came shortly after Parkview was acquired by Summit Hospital Corporation.

The purchase marked the third ownership for the hospital in less than one year. Summit bought Parkview from Hospital Corporation of America in recent months. The acquisition followed HCA's purchase of the facility from Forum Inc., the parent company of American Medical Centers, which previously owned Parkview.

Tipsword stated that "he had no immediate plans" for the hospital.

"I don't see any changes right away," he said.

The new administrator also did not have any plans for how to dispose of the current facility when the new Doctor's Hospital is completed.

"As of right now, I don't know," he said. "I have no set plans."

"But we will be coming out with an agenda for construction deadlines in the future," he added.

The Certificate of Need for the $15.4 million project, to be built on 9.5 acres of land near Loop 250 and Preston Drive, called for "a 75-bed replacement facility within two years after the final purchase (Summit's) is completed."

Liley expected the project to be completed "in late 1985."

Tipsword, who graduated from Arizona State University, has been working with hospitals since 1963. He was a health care consultant in Atlanta, before accepting the position in Midland. He is married and has five children.

Although Tipsword was scheduled for an interview for the position last week, Summit officials were stating at the time that Liley's resignation was not official and talks were still going on.

"Liley's resignation is not finalized, said Richard McClarney on Wednesday. McClarney is the regional vice president for Summit. "We're still talking." Tipsword was already being considered for the position at the time, according to McClarney.

Liley contended that his resignation had nothing to do with the change in ownership.

"I've been in Midland four years and we've turned Parkview into a successful, profitable operation and we've won a certificate of need to build the new hospital," he said Wednesday. "I feel that I've done about as much as I can here."

Liley indicated that he was looking at some job possibilities in Los Angeles, Chicago, Missouri and Atlanta. He came to Parkview in July 1981 and said at the time that he was hired as a "troubleshooter" and expected to be at the hospital for "about two years."

Texas man has little to show for his honesty

MARSHALL (AP) — A plaque and auto repairs bought with reward money are about all Donald Yeager, an unemployed father, has to show for turning in a cash register drawer he found stuffed with stolen bills on a roadside.

Yeager, a 19-year-old high school dropout, said his friends call him crazy for not pocketing the $950. But police call him a good citizen, and family members say they are proud of him.

For his part, Yeager said that calling police about the money, stolen from a lumber company May 21, was the only choice he had.

"I figured it was stolen so I didn't want anything to do with it," he said in an interview.

Yeager found the cash May 23 along a dirt road near his home as he searched for empty cans to return for the deposits.

Two years ago, Yeager dropped out of high school and began working at odd jobs to take care of his family.

"I've been mowing some yards and picking up cans to sell," he said. "I get about $20 for a good-size yards. In a good week, I might make $15 from cans," Yeager said.

He, his wife, Kathy, and their 3-month-old daughter, Bertha Rose, live with her parents, Mae and James Humphries.

The future is looking up for the couple somewhat since Yeager became a local hero.

Several companies have called with job offers, and police say people have sent them more than $100 in contributions for the family.

He is building a frame for a plaque police gave him, proclaiming him a good citizen.

And he has spent the $100 reward from Pyle Lumber Co., which had been robbed of the $950, on car repairs and a first anniversary dinner for his wife.

New security limits recommended in wake of Navy-linked spy case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government officials are concerned that too many people are being given access to secret documents, and a recent security report to President Reagan warned that "far greater efforts are needed to limit national security clearances."

Some 4.3 million Americans have the right to read classified information, government officials say.

Concern over the proliferation of security clearances has been heightened by the unfolding Navy espionage case in which four men — including John A. Walker Jr. his son and brother — are charged with selling secrets to the Soviets.

"We have an absurd number of people who are being cleared," Georgia Sen. Sam Nunn, ranking Democrat on the Senate Armed Services Committee, said Tuesday.

Prisoner says he killed female guard because he loved her

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A Texas prison inmate told investigators he stabbed a female guard to death because he loved her and "couldn't live without her," an officer investigating the case says.

Minnie Houston, 41, was found dead about 9:30 p.m. Monday in a bathroom adjoining an employee dining room near the Texas Department of Corrections Ellis I Unit outside Huntsville.

Billy Linville, who investigates TDC matters for the Walker County sheriff's office, said Ellis inmate Ramon Mata Jr. admitted to the slaying Tuesday in a six-page confession.

Mata, 36, serving 30 years for a Pecos County murder, was transferred to Walker County Jail, where he was being held on a capital murder charge in the guard's death.

According to his confession, Mata claimed he killed Ms. Houston because he loved her and he "couldn't live without her," Linville said. "I guess he had some kind of intimate feeling toward her...He's living in a fantasy world. That's my opinion."

Ms. Houston, a TDC employee since October 1979, was assigned to supervise the seven-member crew of inmate trusties — which included Mata — at the dining area, TDC spokesman Charles Brown said.

Mata was spotted leaving the building at the time of the stabbing, Brown said. He then drove Ms. Houston's automobile to the main prison unit where he turned himself in to prison officials, Brown said.

Investigators said the guard had been stabbed about 10 times from behind with a 15-inch butcher knife. The weapon was found in Ms. Houston's car, and Mata's clothes were bloody, officials said.

Ms. Houston's late husband, Robert Houston, also worked as a guard at the Ellis I Unit until he died in an August 1975 traffic accident, Brown said.

Minnie Houston

Ramon Mata Jr.

One of her three sons, 21-year-old Robert Houston, also is a TDC guard. Another son, Terrell Houston, 18, said he, too, plans to become a guard.

"It's the only thing around here with a good income," Terrell Houston said.

Ms. Houston was the first prison system employee killed since April 4, 1981, when Ellis I Unit Warden Wallace Pack and farm manager Billy Max Moore were killed during a struggle with inmate Eroy Brown. The prisoner was acquitted on grounds he killed the two in self-defense.

The woman officer was the second prison system guard stabbed during a 10-hour period Monday, Brown said.

Guard George Billups, 42, was stabbed about noon Monday as prisoners at the Coffield Unit in Palestine lined up outside their cells to go to lunch, TDC spokesman Jay Byrd said. He was treated for minor injuries.

Prison officials were questioning a 20-year-old prisoner serving two years for a burglary conviction, Byrd said.

There have been at least 116 stabbings and 12 homicides at Texas prisons this year, Brown said.

Former state lawmaker serving as prison trusty

EL PASO (AP) — Bob Valles served four terms in the Texas Legislature before being convicted of official misconduct.

Now, Valles passes time awaiting a bail denial appeal in the El Paso County Jail, doing laundry and doing administrative work as a "trusty."

"He's a trusty at his own request," Sheriff Leo Samaniego said Tuesday, "And he's been a good one. I have no complaints. He's a hard-working guy — no trouble whatsoever."

Samaniego said Valles works in the jail laundry, and he also is assigned to booking, releasing and property divisions.

"He just wants to be working," Samaniego told The El Paso Times. "It makes the time go by faster."

Valles, who has served four terms in the Texas House of Representatives, was arrested March 7 on a drunken driving charge. The former state representative was on probation for four counts of official misconduct when he was arrested.

On March 29, State District Judge Brunson Moore revoked Valles' probation and sentenced him to two to four years in state prison. The judge later denied him bail while he appealed his case.

Valles was defeated in his bid for another term last year after he was indicted on charges that he placed his bookmaker's wife on the state payroll to pay off gambling debts.

Samaniego said Valles' status as a trusty does not afford him any privileges not granted to other trustees.

"I couldn't afford to give him any special privileges if I wanted to. Everyone would know about it," he said.

Agency hopes funds can be used to aid farmers

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Department of Agriculture hopes some federal job training money the state receives can be used to help thousands of farmers and ranchers driven off the land by the agricultural recession.

The department is proposing that a share of the $7.5 million in federal funds Texas should get this fall for dislocated workers can be used for training, career counseling and job placement for farmers.

"Texas continues to lose more than 100 family farmers and ranchers a week," Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said Tuesday. "Many of the producers we're losing are age 35 or younger."

Gary Keith, an agriculture department official, said officials aren't certain how many farmers might need the help, but said, "Certainly it has to be in the thousands."

At the department's request, the state's Job Training Coordinating Council has agreed that retraining services are needed by the displaced farmers and ranchers, Hightower said.

Seven states already offer such assistance to farmers, he said. They are Iowa, Illinois, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, North Dakota and South Dakota.

Andy Welch, a spokesman for the agriculture department, said TDA officials will make a formal proposal to the Job Training Coordinating Council in August for extending job training services to displaced farmers and ranchers. A request for funding also will be made at that time, Welch said.

Hightower said he hoped some of the state's federal job training money then will be made available so programs for farmers and ranchers could begin on Oct. 1.

Job training, counseling and placement would be coordinated by the Texas Department of Community Affairs and provided by local agencies statewide.

The agencies currently provide similar services for displaced homemakers, unemployed farmworkers, workers laid off in the auto, steel and refinery industries, among others.

Hightower noted that the nation's farmers have continued to face rough times even while many other sectors of the economy have improved.

"Call them bankruptcies, foreclosures, voluntary liquidations or early retirements. The truth is, it's still costing farmers more than they receive to produce every major commodity grown in Texas — cotton, grain sorghum, wheat, corn or rice," Hightower said.

"When current government farm policies keep the prices paid to farmers artificially low, displaced farmers deserve the opportunity to receive training and counseling for another kind of work," he said.

Methodist church panel adopts new moral standards

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Lay committee members in the Southwest Texas Conference of the United Methodist Church have adopted new moral standards on marital fidelity and celibacy.

The new guidelines, condemned by one delegate as anti-gay, were approved Monday by 1,000 delegates attending the conference convention.

The new rules call for lay committee members to abide by the same rules of marital fidelity and celibacy when single that apply to the clergy.

The rules was endorsed despite protests from Austin layman Troy Stokes, who said the church is trying to exclude homosexuals from serving on committees and in the clergy.

Stokes said he plans to inform the superintendent of the conference's Austin district that two pastors are guilty of marital infidelity.

Stokes said the rule is intended "just to be there to soothe those who hate homosexuals, who in the minds of the authors are so meek and wimpy that they would never protest.

"But I will protest to correct a distorted, stereotyped perception of gay people. Another motivation is to deter the Southwest Conference from is theft of reputation of gay people," he said.

RULING

But Tuesday's ruling falls short of providing unambiguous clues on the likely outcome of those cases still awaiting the court's decision.

Before the justices recess in a few weeks for the summer, they are expected to decide whether it violates the Constitution to allow public school teachers to conduct classes in parochial schools.

The court is weighing that issue in two cases: one in which the Grand Rapids, Mich., school system used state aid to pay public school teachers to conduct classes in private schools, and in another in which New York City used federal aid to the needy to do the same.

Also, the court is expected by July to announce whether states may prevent businesses from penalizing employees who refuse to work on their religious sabbaths.

Some label ruling 'act of war'

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some members of the religious right are so outraged over the newest Supreme Court ruling on prayer in the schools that they are calling it "an act of war against this nation's religious heritage."

But to civil libertarians, Tuesday's decision is "a major victory to keep religious activity out of the nation's public schools."

The court fueled the controversy anew with a ruling that forbids daily moments of silence if students are told they may pray during that time. The decision, 6-3, strongly reaffirmed the court's 1962 ban on organized prayer in public schools.

Among conservative members of Congress, the immediate reaction was a vow to renew the push for a constitutional amendment to allow group prayers in public schools.

"We must hold hearings as soon as we can...on the silent prayer amendment," Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said. "The real issue isn't the form of the prayer. It's ending the governmental ban on school prayer...which is what is offensive to most people."

At the Justice Department, spokesman Terry Eastland said, "We regret that the court did not agree with our position in the moment-of-silence case. We are pleased, however, that the court did not hold that the moment-of-silence laws now existing in some two dozen states offend the Constitution."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said only: "We haven't had the opportunity to review it. We don't generally comment on Supreme Court decisions unless they're outrageous."

Beverly LaHaye of Concerned Women for America, in a statement endorsed by such groups as Moral Majority and American Coalition for Traditional Values, said that the decision is unconstitutional and an act of war against America's religious traditions.

"Although we deplore this decision, we see great reason to hope," she said. "This decision is so outrageous that we confidently predict that the United States Congress will pass some form of a prayer in schools amendment by the end of the year."

Tim LaHaye of the American Coalition for Traditional Values called it a tragic day and said "Poland has more religious values in public schools than we do."

The Moral Majority's Roy Jones, calling the ruling deplorable, said it will be the spark toward a school prayer amendment.

And to Peter Waldron of Contact America, a radio ministry, the ruling "turns its back on a God who has provided such privileges."

Robert Grant of Alexandria, Va., chairman of an evangelical and fundamentalist group called The Christian Voice, labeled the decision "stupid, sad and shameful."

Dan Alexander, former president of the Mobile County (Ala.) School Board and now the head of a pro-prayer group called Save Our Schools, said "Six members of the court are going to be tough and hard on the matter of vocal and voluntary prayer in the classroom."

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., and Rep. Thomas Kindness, R-Ohio, called for passage of a constitutional amendment to overcome the Supreme Court's ruling.

Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala., said the ruling "represents a continuation of a distorted rationale that equates the opportunity to pray with the establishment of a state religion."

But there were enthusiastic supporters, too, on Capitol Hill and elsewhere.

To Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., "The court's decision reaffirms that, uniquely in the United States, religion is a matter personal to each of us and not the business of government."

Charles Sims, an American Civil Liberties Union lawyer in New York City, said the decision's importance will transcend the school prayer controversy.

"There has been a movement by the fundamentalists to get the court to allow government generally to favor religion as long as it does not discriminate against sects or religions," Sims said. "Only one justice bought that argument, and that's the end of that ball game."

Joe Conn, a spokesman for Americans United for Separation of Church and State, said his group's "position always has been that there's nothing wrong with a moment of silence, but that most such laws were passed to get government back into the prayer business."

A statement released by the American Jewish Congress said: "Today's decision is a major victory to keep religious activity out of the nation's public schools. Students continue to enjoy a constitutionally protected right to pray silently whenever they choose, but the Supreme Court decision recognizes that it is not the business of government, through its public schools, to encourage or promote such religious activity."

Ishmael Jaffree, the Mobile lawyer and self-described agnostic whose lawsuit led to the high court's ruling, was "ecstatic."

STORMS

ABOUT 10 MINUTES after the tornado hit the Woolverton house, a funnel cloud was sighted five miles east of Big Spring by a trooper with the Department of Public Safety and it was then the NWS issued a tornado warning.

The Woolvertons remained in their home overnight despite offers of help from neighbors and the Red Cross. This morning, they woke up to find the living room, hall and kitchen soaked from the rain.

The funnel cloud did a "pick-and-choose" routine with the Woolvertons. Most of the back yard and patio wound up across the street. The patio furniture disappeared. "None of our neighbors have seen it," she said. An air vent from the roof went through the picture window of a man's home two or three blocks away.

He heard on the radio about the Woolverton's home being hit by the tornado and returned their air vent, she said. A large trampoline and a swing set weren't touched by the funnel cloud.

"This is a very populated residential area," said Mrs. Woolverton, with "nice brick homes. The tornado could have really done some damage.

"I'm just thankful none of us were hurt."

A FIRE AT a tank battery owned by OGR Operations and located four miles south of Air Terminal was reported at 7:55 p.m. to the Midland Fire Department. A second such fire was reported at 10:09 p.m. at a tank battery owned by Unified ONG Corp. on County Road 300 one mile east of the Rankin Highway. Lightning was listed as the cause of both fires, and no injuries were reported.

Midland Police Department reported no more accidents than usual Tuesday night or this morning during the rains. "Most of the Midland drivers know what to avoid when there's water," said a spokesman.

Stan Garrison with Texas Electric Service Co. said there were several reports of residential and oilfield feeders tripping due to lightning. "But I don't know of any long extended outages." On Monday night, he said, TESCO had 11 poles down near Orla in far West Texas. "The water was so high we couldn't get to them," Garrison said.

The NWS weatherman said more rain could have fallen in other areas than what was recorded at the office at Midland Regional Air Terminal. At his home five miles from the Weather Service Office, he received 0.9 of an inch, he said.

This gives Midland an official total of 0.67 of an inch for June and 3.93 inches for the year to date. This is about an inch below normal, said the weatherman.

One report had Andrews receiving an unofficial 2 to 3 inches of rain; Lamesa reported about 1½ inches. But Rankin to the south stayed dry.

"We had a lot of thunder and lightning and all the good stuff, but no rain," said a spokesman with the sheriff's department.

Midland's high Tuesday was 89 degrees compared to the record high of 103 set on that date in 1933. This morning's low reading of 61 degrees approached the record low of 54 set in 1970.

Amateur discovers his second comet

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Not many backyard stargazers ever find much of interest to anyone but themselves. But scientists say Donald Machholz, using a cardboard telescope, discovered a new comet, the second such find for the assembly line worker.

Actually, two comets he discovered have been named after the amateur astronomer. The latest, Machholz 1985-e, was formally recognized last week by the Central Bureau for Astronomical Telegrams in Massachusetts.

In both sightings, Machholz, 32, used a homemade cardboard telescope. He says it has a wider aperture, 10 inches across, which affords a broader field of view than most commercial telescopes.

Through his lens, comets, composed of water, ice, dust, dirt, gases and chemicals, look like "dirty snowballs," he said.

In the growth sweepstakes, close behind Houston was Dallas-Fort Worth, with 14.2 percent growth to bring its population to 3,348,000. It ranked 10th in both 1980 and 1984.

The New York City metro area, including portions of New Jersey and Connecticut, remained firmly atop the list with a 1984 population of 17,807,100 people.

That was an increase of 1.5 percent from 1980, reversing a decline that had occurred during the 1970s, Census officials said.

Of the 37 largest metropolitan areas, besides Houston and Dallas, eight others grew by 10 percent or more between 1980 and 1984, all in the South or West.

They were Atlanta, San Diego, Tampa-St. Petersburg-Clearwater, Fla.; Denver-Boulder; Phoenix, Ariz.; Sacramento, Calif.; San Antonio, Texas, and Salt Lake City-Ogden.

Five large metropopolitan areas continued losing population, as they did during the 1970s. These were Detroit-Ann Arbor; Cleveland-Akron-Lorain; Pittsburgh-Beaver Valley; Milwaukee-Racine, and Buffalo-Niagara Falls, N.Y.

In addition to New York City, major metropolitan areas that lost people in the 1970s but reversed that trend since 1980 included Philadelphia-Wilmington-Trenton and St. Louis.

Some of the smaller metropolitan areas, with less of a population base to start with, showed even greater percentages of growth than the large areas, the Census Bureau added. And Florida and Texas accounted for 10 of the 11 fastest-growing metro areas, the bureau said.

On a percentage basis, the bureau listed the fastest growing metro areas as: Midland, Texas, 113,600, up 38 percent; Anchorage, Alaska, 226,700, up 30 percent; Naples, Fla., 110,800, up 29 percent; Ocala, Fla., 155,600, up 27 percent; Fort Pierce, Fla., 190,200, up 26 percent;

Also Bryan-College Station, Texas, 117,400, up 25 percent; Odessa, Texas, 144,500, up 25 percent; Fort Myers-Cape Coral, Fla., 252,900, up 23 percent; Melbourne-Titusville-Palm Bay, Fla., 329,500, up 21 percent; Austin, Texas, 645,400, up 20 percent; West Palm Beach-Boca Raton-Delray Beach, Fla., 692,200, up 20 percent.

SECRETS

Michael I. Burch, the Pentagon's chief spokesman, said the Defense Department has been studying ways of tightening its procedures for awarding security clearances for three years, but has yet to make any specific changes.

The number holding clearances has sparked concern by the Information Security Oversight Office, a 2-year-old agency which operates at the direction of the National Security Council.

"There's been a recognition that there's a lot of reform to be done in the personal security area," says director Steven Garfinkel.

In an annual report submitted to the president six weeks ago, the oversight office expressed concern "that far too many individuals receive clearances for access to national security information."

"All too often, agencies grant clearances by habit, or as a badge of prestige, rather than as a requisite of job responsibilities," the report said. "Far greater efforts are needed to limit national security clearances to persons whose work necessitates access to national security information."

Of the 4.3 million with clearance for classified information, the vast majority are eligible to see documents labeled no higher than "secret."

George Woloshyn, associate director of the Office of Personnel Management's compliance and investigations group, which monitors clearances, said 800,000 people have "top secret" clearances.

Of that number, 135,000 have the highest clearance, for what is called special compartmentalized information.

More than 3.1 million hold "secret" clearance and the lowest clearance, "confidential," is held by about 350,000 people.

Eighty-five percent of the clearances are granted by the Defense Department, Woloshyn said. The remainder are granted by a variety of agencies such as the CIA, National Security Agency, State Department, Energy Department and others.

The Defense Department said Tuesday that of the clearance it has granted, nearly 1.1 million are held by civilians working in private industry. And it said all clearances have increased from 3 million in 1979.

Adm. Bobby Inman, former deputy director of the CIA, said the numbers with clearances mean the system of investigating and reviewing those seeking or holding clearances is swamped.

"I think we really have to relook our priorities," Inman said. "You're never going to be able to surveil the 4.3 million Americans with security clearances...."

Investigators say Walker had a top secret clearance while serving in the Navy. His brother Arthur and son Michael also had security clearances.

In its report, the Information Security Oversight Office said the spread of security clearances poses obvious security threats. Moreover, it said, it contributes to a laxity in the system and a "widespread indifference to the 'need-to-know' principle," in which only those with a need for certain information have access to it.

"All too often holders of classified information distribute it to others based solely on their clearances."

STATE IN BRIEF

Police officers pay last respects to Sgt. Rocky

LUFKIN (AP) — As a trumpeter played Taps, about 10 police officers in this East Texas town paid their last respects to Rocky, the department's narcotics dog.

Rocky died of a ruptured spleen Friday, and he was buried Monday in full parade uniform, including his harness and badge, the Lufkin News reported.

A carnation wreath that said "Sgt. Rocky" was at his graveside along with two other flower arrangements.

The 9-year-old dog was a frequent visitor to school and was credited with numerous drug busts, the paper said.

Although Rocky was the city's only offical narcotics dog, his mate, Shadow, had worked with him in recent months while their offspring, Cocaine, was being trained.

Teen dies after dog shot

DUBLIN (AP) — A 16-year-old girl died after seeing her family's dog shot, a doctor in this West Texas town says.

Dr. Pipadh Eksaengsri said Dianna Cortez died Monday night of respiratory failure after seeing her family's dog shot. The girl died while enroute to Stephenville General Hospital of apnea, or respiratory failure, the doctor said.

The girl might have had an undiagnosed heart murmur that could have led to her death, Eksaengsri said. He said family members told him the girl had fainted on two previous occasions.

Family members said they believe the dog is dead because he could not be found after a neighbor fired two shots from a pistol. The neighbor may have been shooting at chickens, they said.

Manges may still face sales

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Despite his last-minute scramble that halted two foreclosure sales, oilman-rancher Clinton Manges could still face foreclosure on his 3,000-acre Starr County ranch, an attorney says.

Manges halted an auction of the ranch Tuesday when he came up with a $200,000 payment on a $1.6 million lien on the ranch, attorney William Jeffers said. The lien was put on the property by Travelers Insurance Inc.

Jeffers said the payment was a money order drawn on an account at a bank in La Vernia. Bank officials assured Jeffers' law firm of Groce Locke & Hebdon the money order is good.

Manges also avoided Tuesday's scheduled foreclosure on two lots and a condominium at Lake LBJ by sending a bank money order for $325,000 to Frost National Bank, Jeffers said.

The Frost National Bank debt was incurred when Manges wrote his attorney Marynell Maloney a check for $280,000 for legal fees, Jeffers said.

Babbitt refuses UT post

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt says he has turned down a chance to become president of the University of Texas at Austin.

Babbitt was nominated last week to head the nation's third largest single-campus university, with 47,973 undergraduates and graduates enrolled last fall. The current president for eight years, Peter Flawn, announced he will retire Aug. 31.

Press secretary Jim West said Tuesday that Babbitt was "flattered that he would be considered for that really prestigious post" at the university, but remains committed to fulfilling his remaining 18 months as Arizona's governor.

Babbitt has been reputed to have future plans to run for the U.S. presidency. On March 18, he publicly announced he would not run for U.S. Senate in 1986, fueling speculation he would seek the presidency in 1988.

Burglars steal 19 snakes from zoo

ABILENE (AP) — Burglars who stole 19 snakes from the herpetorium at Abilene Zoological Gardens were familiar with the snakes they swiped, Zoo Director Jack Joy says.

Joy said the snakes, among the most valuable at the zoo, were worth more than $20,000 although police reports valued them at $5,040.

Saying the snakes may have been stolen for breeding purposes, Joy said the burglars "obviously knew what they were doing."

"They were very selective and took very valuable snakes," Joy said.

Joy said the burglars took three Madagascan tree boas and killed a fourth one; three San Francisco garter snakes, a Greer's king snake; a gray-banded king snake; two Utah milk snakes; a California Mountain king snake; a desert rosy boa; three albino garter snakes; two normally marked garters who carried the necessary gene for albino breeding; and two dusty hognose snakes.

Joy said he believed that whoever took the snakes was probably working in a team, in order to avoid night security officers.

Burglars did an estimated $1,100 in damage to the herpetorium, police reports showed, and also stole a tropical lizard cage.

The dead snake was valued at $1,000.

No way to test

We're in complete agreement with the San Antonio man who demanded an apology from El Paso airport officials because one of their security guards slipped a hand grenade into the purse of the San Antonio man's wife.

Regardless of the fact that the security guard supposedly told airport officials he planted the grenade to test the airport security system, there are other acceptable methods of performing such a check.

In this day when the average American cannot be secure of avoiding the violence of terrorists, such an improptu security check with unknowing air travelers is highly risky, not to mention traumatic for the human "guinea pigs."

El Paso airport officials already have launched an investigation to determine the facts behind the incident. An airport official did say testing of airport security systems takes place regularly and that usually airport personnel coordinate the testing with everyone involved. The official added, "We did have some irregularity or deviance from procedures. We are on top of it and we will get to the bottom."

After numerous airplane hijackings and the growing incident of terroristic violence in the past few years, there are a couple of events that can take place at an airport that aren't the material for either joking or light treatment. One is the regrettable type of act witnessed in El Paso Sunday; the other is pretending to stage a hijacking. Airport officials treat both types of "fun" deadly serious, which is entirely appropriate.

While this most recent incident ended without anyone being hurt, it could well have not. Any number of deadly scenarios can be imagined. We hope El Paso airport officials do get to the bottom of this incident — and make it clear, once and for all, that this type of conduct won't be tolerated.

55-mph ambivalence

People like laws they can break easily. Exceeding the speed limit is one of them. In a recent Field Poll of driving habits, 57 percent of the California drivers said they like the 55 mile-per-hour speed limit, but also like to break the limit.

If the same poll were to be taken in Texas, the results probably would be much the same, judging from the number of speeders on highways through the state.

A lively melody on the car stereo or an engaging conversation can make the foot rest heavier on the accelerator. A red light in the rear-view mirror means the jig is up.

If we're honest, most of us will admit to speeding — at least from time-to-time. But admitting to exceeding the speed limit doesn't tell anyone the reason why.

The people who drive faster than the speed limit are probably the same ones who order a hot fudge sundae and a diet drink to wash it down. Or subscribe to a cultural magazine and never read it.

Obviously, they feel better just knowing they tried.

Another View:

Defusing immigration

Amnesty for the millions of illegal immigrants residing in the United States was one of the sticking points in last year's effort in Congress to deal with the problem of illegal immigration. Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., has wisely sought to defuse the amnesty issue in this year's attempt.

Simpson's new bill would delay any amnesty program until illegal immigration has been substantially reduced. That would be putting the priorities where they should be.

More than 1.2 million illegal immigrants were caught in the United States last year. Millions more remain in the country. The exploding population in Latin America continues to increase the pressure on U.S. borders. A failure by the United States to get control of the situation could lead to social, economic and political problems.

In the Simpson-Mazzoli bill, which died in Congress last year, part of the burden for enforcing immigration laws was placed on employers. The bill included fines for employers convicted of hiring illegal immigrants. Some business groups oppose the provision. So did some Hispanic groups. Such opposition was part of the reason the bill died.

Simpson has continued to make employer sanctions the keystone of his new bill. But this year there may be room for compromise.

"There seems to be a willingness on all sides to begin to give," said Daniel Stein of the Federation for American Immigration Reform, a lobbying group seeking to stem illegal immigration.

With the amnesty issue temporarily put aside, Congress should be able to address the problem of how to reduce illegal immigration either by making it harder for illegal immigrants to find work or some other way. The issue is among the most important facing Congress. It should not be put off.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, June 5, the 156th day of 1985. There are 209 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 5, 1968, Sen. Robert F. Kennedy was shot and mortally wounded in Los Angeles after claiming victory in California's Democratic presidential primary. He died the following day.

On this date:

In 1783, Joseph and Jacques Montgolfier publicly demonstrated their hot air balloon in a 10-minute flight over Annonay, France.

In 1917, about 10 million American men began registering for the draft in World War I.

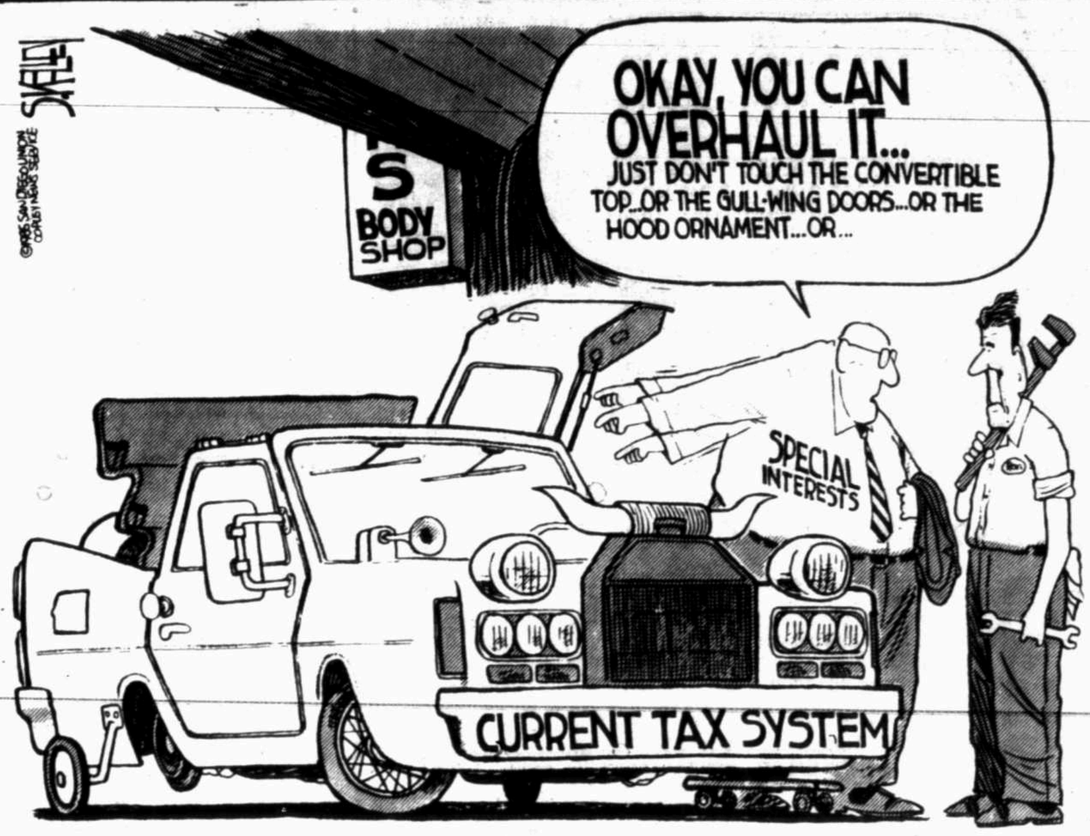
In 1933, the United States went off the gold standard.

In 1940, the Battle of France began during World War II.

In 1947, Secretary of State George C. Marshall gave a speech at Harvard University outlining a program of aid for Europe that would become known as The Marshall Plan.

In 1967, the Six-Day War between Israel and its Arab neighbors began.

Ten years ago: Egypt reopened the Suez Canal to international shipping, exactly eight years after it was closed because of the Six-Day War with Israel.



JACK ANDERSON

FBI split on Biaggi evidence

WASHINGTON — Some FBI officials thought they had a prosecutable bribery case against Rep. Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y., as a result of wiretapped conversations, according to internal FBI documents.

Jack Anderson

But at least four FBI and Justice Department officials thought the G-men were "hyping" the evidence against Biaggi drawn from the recorded conversations.

No official charges were ever brought against Biaggi.

Biaggi, now serving his ninth term in Congress, told our associate Tony Capaccio he had been unaware of the allegations until a few weeks ago, and had never been interviewed by either the FBI or the Justice Department on the matter.

A review of the tapes in the FBI's controversial "TUMCON" investigation turned up Biaggi's name. He was mentioned on a TUMCON tape made on April 14, 1979, of a conversation between alleged mob figure William Masselli and a friend. Masselli's phone was one of those tapped in the anti-racketeering investigation.

According to an FBI narrative taken from the tape, Masselli's friend was describing how he allegedly got Biaggi's help on a dumping contract. "Biaggi wanted $5,000 to secure the contract," the friend told Masselli.

The friend told Masselli he handed the congressman a check for $5,000 "on the steps of the (federal) administration building," and that "on the face of the check he wrote 'annual retainer,'" according to the FBI narrative. It noted that "Masselli was told that this incident with Biaggi occurred several years ago."

Biaggi scoffed at the whole idea. A much-decorated former New York City police lieutenant who was wounded 10 times in the line of duty, the 67-year-old congressman said: "I'm an old cop. If I'm going to do something wrong, do you think I'd do it with a check? That's ridiculous."

It is not uncommon for mobsters to boast of political payoffs and connections.

The information on Biaggi was presented during a briefing for more than two dozen FBI officials on the TUMCON investigation six days after the conversation in which Biaggi was mentioned.

"Among the conclusions reached" by the briefing agent was "that they had sufficient information regarding Congressman Biaggi to be able to conclude prosecutable cases within a short amount of time and minimal amount of effort," according to a report made to FBI inspectors last October.

And in an earlier TUMCON review made in late 1980, FBI official Kenneth Walton "commented to the effect that if the bureau did not go after Masselli ... he believed there was a shot at Biaggi," according to an FBI internal document.

Walton also lamented a decision by a Justice Department attorney "which thwarted investigative efforts," according to the document, which explained: "He stated that a decision was made to issue a subpoena" against the man who claimed to have given Biaggi the $5,000 check, "rather than execute a search warrant to produce the check he had given to Biaggi, and not surprisingly the check disappeared."

However, the two federal prosecutors closest to the TUMCON case thought the evidence of political corruption was exaggerated by the FBI.

U.S. Attorney Michael Ross "advised he feels the TUMCON case was hyped by the FBI in that the FBI considered every case to be a good one ... (and) all the high-level cases the FBI talks about are just hype," according to an internal report. The other U.S. attorney, Patricia Hynes, told FBI inspectors "there were no political corruption cases."

According to an internal agency review, two FBI officials also agreed that some of the TUMCON cases were being overblown.

Footnote: At our request, Walton reviewed the documents. Through a spokesman he said: "At the time, that was what I thought, based on the information available to me. But time and additional information can change opinions."

HUSH-HUSH: President Reagan's most controversial action to date was probably the invasion of Grenada. He said military force was necessary to stabilize the Caribbean. Has it worked?

According to a highly sensitive report, prepared by the Agency for International Development, the answer is yes. "The Grenada crisis ushered in a new era in U.S. relations with the Commonwealth Caribbean," states the report.

Reagan drops SALT compliance

WASHINGTON — President Reagan has privately decided to disregard the never-ratified SALT II treaty's requirement that the U.S. dismantle strategic missiles on a nuclear submarine, a clear but not yet total victory for Caspar Weinberger and Senate conservatives in their campaign to end U.S. adherence to the arms control agreement routinely violated by the Soviet Union.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

SALT II compliance has reached a red-hot climax because the treaty requires physical dismantling of 14 older strategic missiles to keep the U.S. total under the ceiling when the newest Trident submarine begins sea trials in early fall. The announcement that these requirements will be bypassed is scheduled for next week after Secretary of State George Shultz softens up U.S. allies in Europe on the new policy.

In the blunt vernacular of one high official, the new policy means the U.S. may comply with SALT II "when it's in our interest." Dismantling strategic missiles on a Poseidon submarine will not be "in our interest."

This represents a triumph for the beleaguered secretary of defense, Senate conservatives of both parties and a new player in the game, Attorney General Edwin Meese (named a full-time member of the National Security Council — NSC — by Reagan). But it is only the start. At Monday's top-secret NSC meeting, the president for the first time heard serious proposals that the time may have come for the U.S. to break off its SALT undertakings with the Soviet Union.

That also is the next target of the Senate conservatives, led by Republicans Jesse Helms and Steve Symms and Democrat Ernest Hollings. They want to change the Anti-Ballistic Missile (ABM) Treaty so that it would not prevent the U.S. from moving ahead with Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI).

Although a recent target of rough criticism from powerful members of Congress and anonymous State Department officials, Weinberger showed that he retains considerable influence with the president. He also showed he knows how to use it, vocally and strongly supported by Meese.

As a result, barring last-minute changes, Reagan will argue when he presents his new policy to Congress next week that any onus of SALT II non-compliance does not lie with the U.S. To the contrary, the world will be informed that Washington cannot safely comply any longer with a treaty that its Soviet co-signer is systematically violating.

That might leave the door open for a return to full compliance if Moscow ends the 11 violations publicly identified by the Reagan White House. Even without reversion to full compliance, however, the new policy might specify continued American adherence to some of SALT II's limits.

But Weinberger, Meese and the Senate conservatives oppose any such fallback. They are pressing Reagan for a clear statement that no treaty so heavily violated by one signer can remain a treaty. They view the decision not to dismantle an old submarine's missiles as only the first step away from a deeply-flawed SALT policy that has permitted systematic growth of Soviet nuclear power despite all the apparent treaty restrictions.

In the Senate, this determination faces a bipartisan move by pro-SALT senators to compel the administration to follow the letter of SALT II by dismantling existing strategic missile launchers. At the same time, they want to extend this total SALT II compliance until the end of 1986 (though the treaty, ratified by neither the U.S. nor the Soviets, expires Dec. 31, 1985). An amendment committing the Senate to this course is being pushed by Democrats Dale Bumpers and Patrick Leahy and Republicans John Heinz and John Chafee.

But when it is proposed as an amendment to the defense authorization bill, Helms, Symms and Hollings will prevent a vote at least until Reagan has outflanked it by announcing the new administration policy next week.

The conservatives, therefore, are prepared to filibuster defense spending to stave off adherence to SALT II. What they see at long last, well into the fifth year of the Reagan Revolution, is an unraveling of a treaty that, far from controlling nuclear arms, has in truth fueled the Soviet drive to superiority.

Reform fighting takes skill

Louie, the lobbyist, was dressed in battle gear. As soon as President Reagan declared war on the "special interest" groups, Louie loaded his Xerox machine and marched forth toward Capitol Hill to wage combat.

Art Buchwald

"It must be a bad time for you," I said, as he paused on Pennsylvania Avenue to drink from his canteen of Pouilly Fuisse.

"It's the best of times," said Louie, slapping me on the back. "Every lobbyist dreams of someday going up on the Hill to fight against tax reform. We were trained all our lives for this moment."

"Aren't you afraid your loopholes will be killed?"

"My boy, for every loophole that falls, we'll find another to take its place. When push comes to shove we'll get what we want out of tax reform, and the President will get what he wants."

"Then you're not going to attack the Reagan plan head-on?"

"That would be suicidal. He's raised the hopes of every taxpayer. Our strategy is to publicly support the President on his reforms and cheer him on, whilst we quietly infiltrate the offices of congressmen and senators whom our people have been nice to over the years."

"You mean you're going to start calling in your notes on the money you contributed to our legislators' campaigns?"

"What is so unreasonable about that? They came to us when they were in trouble — now we're coming to them when we're in trouble. That's what fairness in tax reform is all about."

"This could be a tough one because the people have their expectations raised and it's quite possible the congressmen and senators will have to vote for the bill, whether they want to or not."

"Of course they're going to vote for the bill," Louie shouted. "We would never ask them not to vote for it. That's like telling them not to vote for mother or the American flag. All we want them to do is fine tune the law so that our industry will still be entitled to the tax breaks that have made it one of the highest generators of capital in the country."

"What you're asking then is that you continue to pay no taxes at all?"

Louie was outraged. "There has been too much made of the fact we don't pay any taxes. We pay payroll and Social Security taxes, as well as taxes on all our soft drink machines. Just because an industry doesn't pay income taxes is no reason for our companies to be singled out as tax dodgers."

"The people may not see it that way," I said. "Reagan has thrown down the gauntlet and the Democrats are scrambling to pick it up. It looks like tax reform could be an idea whose time has come. It sure is a lot easier to deal with than a $200 million deficit."

"We've been through tax reform battles before," Louie said. "The trick is not to fire your ammunition too early. Wait until everybody is tired and their nerves are frayed. Then sneak in and plant your loophole while no one is watching. That's the way the smart lobbyists work."

"You believe you can still pull it off?"

Louie put on his Stetson. "It's a trade-off, my boy. The Northeast wants something from our people, so we're ready to deal. We'll give 'em their loophole if they give us ours."

"How can you be so sure of victory?"

He opened up his pants pocket. "Look in here."

I couldn't believe it. He had 12 congressmen and five senators in his pocket.

"Where did you get them?" I asked him.

"Through my political action committee. Got more in this other pocket if I need them."

Most Americans think tax plan fair, poll says

NEW YORK (AP) — Three out of five Americans believe President Reagan's proposed tax revision plan would treat most people fairly, although two out of five also believe it will cost them more in taxes, according to a New York Times-CBS News poll released today.

The poll also found that the president's popularity has increased, with 59 percent of those surveyed approving of his job performance, up from 56 percent in May.

The latest New York Times-CBS poll, conducted in telephone interviews with 1,509 adults in the continental United States between May 29 and June 2, showed 60 percent thought the Reagan tax plan fair, with 29 percent opposed.

Support for the Reagan plan increased with income: 38 percent of those families with annual income under $12,500 thought it would be fair; 60 percent of those between $12,500-$24,999; 61 percent of those between $25,000-$34,999; 69 percent of those between $35,000-$50,000; and 73 percent of those over $50,000.

Among whites, 64 percent thought it would be fair and 25 percent unfair; among blacks, 34 percent found it fair and 52 percent unfair.

The poll said 34 percent of those surveyed believed those making more money than themselves would pay a fair share under the Reagan tax plan.

Nixon, Muskie head panel

CHICAGO (AP) — Former President Richard Nixon and former Secretary of State Edmund Muskie have spent months heading a secret, private group trying to work out a bipartisan arms-control plan that the United States can present to the Soviet Union, the Chicago Tribune reported today.

The newspaper said that, according to one source, Nixon and Muskie have been encouraged in their endeavor by President Reagan. Reagan was briefed by the group last year, the Tribune said.

Besides Nixon and Muskie, a former U.S. senator from Maine who sought the 1972 Democratic presidential nomination to oppose Nixon, the group includes former Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., and Alton Frye, who heads the Washington office of the Council on Foreign Relations, the Tribune said.

Man's deportation delayed

CINCINNATI (AP) — Turning over a man accused of being a Nazi death-camp guard to Israel for trial while appeals of an extradition order were pending would constitute a denial of due process, his lawyers told a federal panel.

A three-judge panel of the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ordered Tuesday that John Demjanjuk's deportation be delayed.

Demjanjuk, from the Cleveland suburb of Seven Hills, is being held in a federal prison medical facility in Springfield, Mo. He is accused of being a guard at the Treblinka death camp in Poland during World War II, where he allegedly herded Jews to their deaths in gas chambers.

Alleged spy's ex-wife says 'I did what I believed in'

WEST DENNIS, Mass. (AP) — The former wife of a retired Navy communications specialist charged with running a spy ring involving his son and brother said in an interview published today, "I did what I believed in" by tipping off the FBI about the operation.

As John A. Walker Jr. and his son, Michael, pleaded innocent Tuesday in Baltimore to espionage charges, Barbara Joy Crowley Walker said that she and her daughter Laura Walker Snyder went to authorities in Boston several months ago.

John Walker, 47, is charged with masterminding a spy ring the FBI says sold secrets to the Soviet Union for at least 20 years. The FBI alleges Walker tried to recruit Ms. Snyder, an Army communications specialist from 1978 to 1979.

Ms. Snyder has not been charged and her whereabouts have not been publicly disclosed.

"Why in the name of all that's holy did I wait so long?" Mrs. Walker said in an interview with The Cape Cod Times. "You have the answer. It is because of what's happening to my family and my children."

In an interview Tuesday at the home of her daughter, Cynthia, Mrs. Walker, divorced in 1976, said, "I did what I believed in."

At times fighting back tears, she said her son "is very important to me," adding that reporters should now "allow them (the Justice Department) to do what has to be done in order to bring this thing to an end."

John Walker was arrested May 20; Michael, 22, on May 22; John Walker's brother, Arthur, 50, on May 29; and Jerry A. Whitworth of Davis, Calif., on Monday. Arthur Walker faces a preliminary hearing June 12 in Norfolk, Va. Whitworth was arraigned Monday and faces another hearing Friday.

John Walker, a Norfolk private detective, and Arthur, an engineer with a defense contractor near Norfolk, are retired Navy officers. Michael is a seaman aboard the aircraft carrier USS Nimitz. Whitworth is a retired Navy radioman.

The New York Times reported today that the FBI has turned its attention to Jacksonville, Fla., after agents found a recent navigator's map of the city in John Walker's plane and a city phone book in his office.

Reagan 'preaching one thing, practicing another'

By W. DALE NELSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — As President Reagan embarks today on another trip to promote his tax simplification plan, a Democratic leader is accusing him of "preaching one thing and practicing another" by making partisan speeches on the tax issue.

Reagan was to speak today and Thursday at fund-raising events for Republican senators seeking re-election in Oklahoma, Georgia and Alabama. That, according to Sen. George Mitchell of Maine, chairman of the Senate Democratic Campaign Committee, smacks of partisanship.

"The president is preaching one thing and practicing another," Mitchell said Tuesday. "In Washington, he is asking Democratic leaders for bipartisan support on his tax program. At the same time, his trips, which are billed as selling the tax program to the American people, are highly partisan. How can he ask for bipartisanship on the one hand and lead political pep rallies on the other?"

Mitchell, a member of the Finance Committee that considers tax legislation, said Republican incumbents in all three states, where Reagan's appearances are expected to reap an estimated $850,000, are regarded as vulnerable. So, he said, are GOP senators who appeared with Reagan at tax simplification rallies in Wisconsin, Pennsylvania and Florida last week.

Reagan's remarks at a fund-raising dinner for Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., in Miami last week were sharply partisan, accusing Democrats of "pitting white against black, women against men, young against old." He avoided partisanship, however, in Williamsburg, Va., and in Oshkosh, Wis., where Sen. Robert Kasten, R-Wis., introduced him, and in Malvern, Pa., where he shared the platform with Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa.

Edward J. Rollins, assistant to the president for political and governmental affairs, has said the president, in his public appearances, is seeking bipartisan support for his tax plan.

Georgians may back moderate SBC candidate

ATLANTA (AP) — Church moderates believe Southern Baptist Convention President Charles Stanley's home state of Georgia is poised to vote against his re-election at next week's showdown between moderates and conservatives in Dallas.

The moderates won the state convention presidency last fall and have actively recruited delegates to oppose the conservative Stanley's bid for a second one-year term as president of the the nation's largest Protestant denomination.

Moderates charge that Stanley has presided over a conservative effort to force its ideology over all church agencies and seminaries. The conservative ideology hinges on the belief that every word in the Bible must be interpreted literally.

The moderates "definitely" have surpassed conservatives in organizing delegates in Georgia and appear to lead nationwide, said Walker Knight, editor of SBC Today, an independent monthly newspaper based in Decatur which covers the denomination.

The moderates bought a full page advertisement in The Atlanta Journal and The Atlanta Constitution Sunday, listing 2,000 Georgia Baptists backing Stanley's opponent, the Rev. Winfred Moore of Amarillo.

Georgia conservatives appear to be trying to rally. A group of prominent pastors has produced a brochure backing Stanley. The Rev. Jimmy Draper of Texas, Stanley's predecessor as convention president, will bolster the conservative cause with a speech tonight at Rehoboth Baptist Church in Tucker, an Atlanta suburb.

The Rev. Evan A. Abbott of First Baptist Church of Smyrna, one of those who sponsored the pro-Stanley brochure, said conservatives have been "much more quiet."

"It may not be as open and as verbal (as the moderate campaign), but there is organization," Abbott said Tuesday night.

Mild with low near 60. Wind north 5 to 15 mph. Thursday partly cloudy and a little warmer with high near 80. Wind northwest 10 to 15 mph.

Flooding hits parts of region

Heavy thunderstorms dumped as much as nine inches of rainfall in portions of West Texas, causing flash flooding across a wide area.

The heaviest rainfall was at Sudan, where nine inches fell between 7 p.m. Tuesday and dawn today. Elsewhere rainfall amounts included about two inches at Wichita Falls and about one-half inch at Lubbock, Amarillo and Abilene.

Flash flood warnings were issued during the night for several counties in the South Plains, including Lubbock County. A flash flood watch was in effect today for much of West Texas and western portions of North Texas.

The showers and thunderstorms were being triggered by an upper level low pressure system over New Mexico that was slowly moving eastward towards Texas.

Thunderstorms were widespread from the Panhandle southward through the South Plains and Permian Basin to the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas. The thunderstorms extended eastward into western portions of North Central Texas. Scattered showers are being reported early today along the middle Texas coast and in South Central Texas.

Forecasts called for showers and thunderstorms across most of the state today, more numerous in West Texas. Highs were to be mostly in the 70s and 80s, ranging from the 60s in the Panhandle to near 103 in the Big Bend area.

Lows tonight will be mostly 60s and 70s and highs Thursday should be mostly in the 70s and 80s and lower 90s.

NATION

A record-breaking heat wave pushed temperatures upward in the South for the fifth day today while it was fair and cool across the North.

Showers and thunderstorms spread through the mid-Atlantic states and the upper Ohio Valley. Elsewhere, showers were scattered across Oregon and northern Idaho.

It was fair across the northern Plains, upper Mississippi Valley and New England, with early-morning temperatures in the 40s to 50s.

Flash flood watches were issued for northwest and east-central New Mexico, much of the west Texas Plains, Oklahoma and southern Missouri. In Sudan, Texas, up to 9 inches of rain fell in the past 24 hours, the National Weather Service said.

The heat wave pushed the mercury above 100 degrees across Dixie Tuesday and tied or snapped high-temperature records in at least 25 cities.

Kup's elbow sore point for Celts

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

But seriously, folks, all kidding aside. The first three games of the Laker-Celtic series have been fun, but now we're about to get down to some basketball.

No more Baryshnikov and Emily Post.

This was the scene Tuesday at noon, at the Forum, as the teams were warming up for Wednesday night's Game 4:

Just outside the Celtics' locker room, in a quiet corner, Sugar Ray Williams, the Boston guard who lost a TKO last Sunday, was shadow-boxing.

He looked sharp. The footwork was nice and the left jab was popping.

"I ain't got nothin' to say," Williams said to an approaching reporter.

Inside the locker room, Kevin McHale did.

"We've just been too nice," McHale said. "People have been saying we're the bad boys, and we've been saying we're not. We've been trying to be real nice. It's time to be bad boys."

Real nice? Even last Sunday?

"We were way too nice."

Cedric Maxwell put it another way.

Maxwell said, of his team's passivity thus far: "We're trying to eat meat with no choppers."

Over in the other locker room sat the real thug of the series, Mr. Goon Cheapshot himself, according to one noted authority. The Lakers' Mitch Kupchak was quietly filing the points on his elbows.

Mitch Kupchak, who wasn't much more than the hood ornament on the Lakermobile all season, had suddenly become a star.

Minutes before, Celtic coach K.C. Jones had nominated Kupchak and Larry Spriggs as the two dirty players in this series. The bad guys. The bullies.

The news was relayed to Kupchak.

"I don't really care to comment on that," Kupchak said, politely.

But Kupchak, who has been a significant contributor to the Lakers' comeback from 0-1 to 2-1 in this series, did comment on other matters.

He commented, for instance, on whether it's possible for the Celtics to get more aggressive than they have been.

"They can be more aggressive," Kupchak said. "And if I were in their shoes, I would. No doubt about it. I would come out tougher."

Is Kupchak a dirty player?

"A lot of players, a lot of the Celtics, haven't seen me play the last couple years," said Kupchak, who has made a remarkable comeback from possibly the worst knee injury in NBA history.

"When I was in Washington (he spent five seasons with the Bullets), I played the game the way I'm playing it now. I was an aggressive rebounder. I'd go after loose balls. I haven't changed at all."

He's right. People have forgotten Mitch Kupchak. He came to the Lakers in 1981, the answer to prayers, the team's first real power forward since Rudy LaRusso back in the '60s.

Then Kupchak turned his knee into a noodle casserole one night and everyone wrote him off. Everyone but Kupchak.

Through the first three rounds of the playoffs the Lakers didn't need him. You don't need muscles if you can outrun the neighborhood bullies.

But after the first game of this series, it was obvious that the Lakers needed muscle. Coach Pat Riley figured it would happen, and for weeks had been warning Kupchak to stay ready.

In Game 2, Riley called on Kupchak early. Kupchak really shook 'em down. He put his body on some Celtics.

His series stats aren't spectacular, but what Kupchak has done is set a tone, a tempo. He has lifted the Lakers to a slightly higher level of intensity.

K.C. Jones obviously wishes Kupchak hadn't done that, and Jones is fighting back with psychology.

But Kupchak won't be psyched into niceness. He has his own quiet motto: "There are no layups in the championship series."

Kupchak said that quietly, matter-of-factly. He said it while defending the aggression of Celtic Greg Kite, who neck-tackled Kupchak late in Game 3 when Mitch drove across the lane.

"Kite didn't try to take my head off," Kupchak said. "He didn't fall on top of me. I had him beat to the hoop and he just knocked me down. It was clean. There are no layups in the championship series."

There were in Game 1. Celtic layups. Which is why Mitch Kupchak was in Game 2. In this series, nice guys will finish last.

The hot topic of debate from here on will be what's clean and what's dirty.

"It's whether or not there is an intent to hurt somebody," Kupchak said. "If you get knocked to the ground, throw an elbow, it's very physical, but there's no intent to hurt.

"Blind-side elbows to the face, undercutting (low-bridging), punching someone in the stomach — that's dirty. But I don't think there's been any of that in this series. It's been a physical series, but it hasn't crossed over the line."

Kupchak enjoys contact. After sitting for most of the season, he enjoys merely standing up. Had the Lakers breezed through this series, needing only their pretty running game, Kupchak would have been a million-dollar cheerleader.

Gee claims another title

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

For Bobby Gee, the suspense is over.

Of course, for the 16-year-old junior-to-be at Midland Lee next season, there never was much question that sooner or later Gee would qualify for the West Texas Junior Championship tournament.

On Tuesday at windy Hogan Park Municipal Golf Course, Gee dispensed with the suspense by firing an even par 71 to take the 16-18 division and win an automatic berth for the West Texas tournament to be held Aug. 13-14 at Ranchland Hills.

It was the second win in two days for Gee, who Monday took the Optimist's state qualifying tournament at Mission Country Club in his first tournament since school let out last week.

"The wind was messing me up a little, but the course was playing real well," Gee said. "The greens were holding and the fairways were nice. I only had one bad lie all day."

Right behind Gee for the 16-18 title was Jamey Dixon of Plainview with a one-over par 72. Mark Burgen of Andrews was third with a 74.

In the 14-15 age group, it was a 77 by Greg Avery of Stanton that topped the list, while Odessa's Mike Thomas was second with 78, and Ozona's Bret Hood was third with 81.

In the 12-13 bracket, Lazar Kirven of Odessa qualified with an 83 by winning a playoff with Kris Doan of the Tall City. Third was Frankie Baldazo of Odessa with 84.

First and second place finishers Tuesday automatically qualify for the West Texas Junior tournament, while third-place finishers are the alternates. Many other qualifying tournaments will be held this summer, including ones at Mission and Midland Country Club.

GEE, WHO was All-District 4-5A as a sophomore, fired his 71 despite a triple-bogey on the ninth hole. An eagle-three on the par-5 second hole helped Gee keep his score in contention.

Two tournament wins would make an entire summer for most golfers, but for Gee, it may just be the beginning of a summer that could have him criss-crossing the continent before it is through.

Gee is setting his golfing sights high, for national tournaments like the National PGA Junior tournament, the U.S. Junior Nationals and the Big Insurance Youth Classic. All these tournaments have local, state and national qualifiers, but Gee is no stranger to those.

Last season as a 15-year-old, Gee won his division in the Texas PGA Junior touranment earning him an expense-free trip to the national tournament.

Dodgers defeat Midland

From Staff Reports

SAN ANTONIO—The Dodgers did it with mirrors, beating the Midland Angels, 4-3, in this Texas League series here Tuesday night. And after the win, the six-game series was tied at two.

Midland out hit San Antonio, but the Dodgers made the most of what they got, leaving only two runners on base.

Balvino Galvez pitched San Antonio to victory, lasting just 5 1/3 innings while Doug McKenzie, 0-6, went the route in pitching a four-hitter, but three errors and 13 men left on base did him in.

Tito Nanni hit a two-run homer in the second and also knocked in Midland's other run in the fifth, the only Angelo to come through in the clutch.

Mike Cherry, 0-1, goes in tonight's game while the Angels will try Brian Price, 2-2.

English teams made 'scapegoats'

Associated Press

Though the coach of Poland's national team said English teams have been made "scapegoats" for recent troubles, soccer continues to be associated with violence in varied incidents.

Antoni Piechniczek, in an interview Tuesday with a Polish newspaper, said English teams were unfairly blamed for the rioting by Liverpool fans at the European Cup final last week in Brussels.

"It is not soccer or sport that should stand accused in the Brussels case, but people who have nothing in common with sport and its ideology," Piechniczek said.

Thirty-eight people died and scores were injured at Heysel Stadium in Brussels last Wednesday when English fans charged into a section filled with supporters of an Italian team from Turin, causing a stadium wall to collapse.

Midland meets new ACU coach

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

At first glance, Abilene Christian University and new head football coach John Payne seem like strange bedfellows, but the near future of ACU football is linked to the marriage.

ACU introduced Payne to its Midland backers at the Golf Course Road Church of Christ Tuesday night during the annual ACU Appreciation Dinner and Payne declares that "it's the job I've wanted for a long time. ACU believes in the things I believe in."

Still, it seems like a strange link. Payne has 14 years of coaching experience in the professional ranks, including leading Saskatchewan's Roughriders (twice) and the Hamilton Tigercats to the Grey Cup finals in the Canadian Football League.

Payne also has been an assistant for two years under George Allen in the USFL with the Chicago Blitz and Arizona Wranglers. He still wears the USFL championship ring that is bigger than Abilene. Not many West Texans would readily admit to having worked for Allen. This is Cowboy country where a George Allen isn't admired by the average sports fan.

Payne has also coached at both Brigham Young and TCU, two schools with different religious backgrounds from ACU. Payne isn't a graduate of ACU and that is another departure from the past.

None of this seems to bother Payne, who hopes he has found a home in Abilene.

"My wife and I have made 17 coaching moves over the years and this better be home or I'm facing a divorce," says Payne with tongue in cheek.

He adds, "People think its strange that I could coach at BYU and TCU and then come to Abilene Christian. The religious aspect is different at all three schools. The Morman religion is different than the Church of Christ, but the lifestyles are much the same. All of us on the ACU coaching staff are abstainers, just like the Mormans. The Mormans are good people. You very seldom see anyone smoking on either campus."

Payne faces the task of improving on a 3-7 season from a year ago and says, "I would be greatly disappointed if we don't improve on that mark."

The new coach, who has already put his Wildcats through spring training, says that he will employ a pro-style offensive attack, but will center his team with good defense.

"Every place you coach, you pick up ideas and I'll be using ideas from every job I've had. We'll do a lot of the things we did in pro ball, but we did a lot of the things we had done at TCU while I was with the Blitz and Wranglers under George Allen.

"I learned a lot from Allen. He's a different kind of man. He's like a Patton or McArthur because he's going to buck the system to get what he wants. You have to admire that to a point. Everything you hear about George is true, but he understands dedication and consistency. That is his strength."

Payne has also retained former ACU head coach Ted Sitton as a special assistant to coach backs and receivers. He says that poses no problem.

"That seems strange to a lot of people that Coach Sitton and I could work together under this type situation, but it doesn't bother me. I'm not sure Ted was all that excited about being the head coach anyway from my observations. I don't know how accurate that statement is, but that's the feeling I get. He's a great coach."

Payne has hired two new coaches for the coming season. Bob Keys, the former head coach at Cisco Junior College and former ACU player, and Jim Pyburn, an assistant coach from Georgia.

"Coach Pyburn was instrumental in creating the famous Junkyard defense at Georgia 16 years ago and it will be his task to raise ACU to that kind of defensive effort," noted Payne.

Keys was at the dinner and said, "Coach Payne came to Cisco to recruit some of my players and ended up with me. I think he would have been better off if he had taken some of my players. Of course, I'm thrilled to be back with the Wildcats."

Jerry Wilson will be back as defensive line coach and will serve as recruiting coordinator. Jim Wood, the son of Brownwood's Gordon Wood, will be a graduate assistant.

According to Payne, ACU signed 17 players to full or partial scholarships this year. "Fourteen of them are Church of Christ members," said Payne. "I'm proud of that and that will be a major priority for us. If we have two players of equal ability, the member of the church will get the scholarship."

ACU athletic director Wally Bullington announced that the school has received and endowment of $350,000, "mostly from the Dallas area," for golf in the name of Byron Nelson.

To take advantage of that situation, ACU has hired Vince Jarrett, a former golfing star at the University of Houston, as the new head coach. Jarrett will be ACU's first full time golf coach, and the new boss was not shy in his debut.

"We won the Lone Star Conference in golf this year and I promise we will win it again and go to the national tournament this year," said Jarrett in a brief comment.

Bullington pointed out that ACU won seven of a possible 11 LSC sports championships during the school year, including its fourth straight national Division II track title. ACU also won the women's national track championship.

On hand at the dinner was former Midland High state discus champion David Simmons, who led the national charge with 23 points in the discus, shot put and hammer events. Emil Hale, an ACU golfer who helped the Wildcats win the LSC golf championship was also present.

Simmons and Hale have both completed eligibility at ACU. Hale is to enter the Army in September while Simmons plans to move to San Angelo.

Life with Gunslingers chaotic, claims ex-coach

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Resigned San Antonio Gunslingers Coach Jim Bates says he still thinks the United States Football League team could have had a successful year this season if there had been no financial troubles.

Bates resigned May 18, hours before the Gunslingers were to play a home game against Oakland.

Gil Steinke, director of football operations and last year's coach, has taken over until a new coach can be hired.

"It's a crying shame. With a few players and a good organization, it could have been a good season," he said.

While he was head coach, Bates said, "every day was a chaotic day. Day after day nothing happened positive."

The former coach said he would like to tell all about his experiences with the Gunslingers, but the team's owner Clinton Manges still owes him paychecks through Nov. 29.

"I'd like to tell you what I really think," Bates said. "But until then (Nov. 29) for me to blast them, I'd be out of bounds. I'd hate to say anything. I've got a wife and kids to support. I'm sort of in a hard spot."

Bates, who led the team to 3-9 (they are 3-12 now) has remained unemployed since quitting.

But he says he is pursuing another coaching job at a major college or as a National Football League assistant.

"I probably will get back in football," he told the San Antonio Light. "But it's hard this time of year. This is as tough a time as there is for employment. Everybody's set."

Bates said he is puzzled about why Steinke is staying with the team.

Steinke finished a successful career as coach at Texas A&I before taking the head coaching job in the Gunslingers' inaugural season last year. He stepped down last summer and Bates became coach.

"Any man in a good state of mind would be gone from there. He had to have something that binds him there. He wanted out last year," Bates said.

Meanwhile, Manges has until Saturday to make good on the May 14 payroll.

Lewis-Clark wins NAIA baseball

LEWISTON, Idaho (AP) — The Lewis-Clark State College Warriors are the NAIA baseball World Series champions for the second straight year, thanks in large part to relief pitcher Tony Dineen.

Dineen threw 7 1-3 innings of relief and was backed by three solo home runs as the host Warriors came from behind Tuesday night to beat Dallas Baptist College 10-6.

Dineen, 12-2 and the Series Most Valuable Player, entered the game in the second inning with LCSC trailing 5-0, then gave up just one run the rest of the way to win his third Series game. He scattered seven hits, walked one and struck out eight en route to a spot on the all-tournament team.

LCSC knotted the score at 6-6 in the fifth on back-to-back home runs by Jamie Archibald and Kyle Brock, then Brian Thomas hit a two-run triple to give the Warriors the lead for good.

Frey makes his point

CHICAGO (AP) — Manager Jim Frey of the Chicago Cubs sent a letter Tuesday to the National League, enclosing a small piece of sandpaper to make a point.

The letter was sent to Chub Feeney, president of the National League, about Houston pitcher Mike Scott.

"I'm not protesting any game," Frey said. "I just want him (Feeney) to know what the circumstances were and what happened."

Frey was not complaining about Sunday's 4-3 loss at Houston when Scott was the winning pitcher. Frey's complaint concerned a 10-8 victory over Houston and Scott on May 26 in a game in which Frey had umpire John Kibler check Scott on the pitching mound.

"When I had Kibler check Scott, the players saw something drop from his glove," Frey said. "After the inning was over, Bull (first baseman Leon Durham) went over and found this piece of sandpaper."

Frey saved the sandpaper and over the weekend at Houston he discussed the matter with umpire Doug Harvey.

"In the letter I wrote to Feeney I explained I had a conversation with Harvey and he advised me to send this (sandpaper) to you," Frey said. "I also explained what the circumstances were.

"The umpires don't feel they have the authority to enforce things," said Frey. "They can't do much about things like scuffing the ball. I understand their problems in enforcing things like that.

"Usually, they don't have the necessary evidence," Frey said, "but in this case, we found what we suspected."

Frey said he didn't think it was a big problem.

"I don't think it's such a big deal but if he did it again against us, it would be," he said.

Frey also said he didn't think Scott was scuffing the ball against the Cubs in Sunday's loss.

As for the letter to Feeney, Frey said: "I don't expect anything to happen. We won the game. He pitched against us in Houston and didn't appear to be doing anything. I just want Feeney to be aware of what happened."

500 has no business in 20th Century

Nothing is more American than the automobile. Not apple pie, homemade fudge, moonlight on the Wabash, the straw hat, baseball, basketball or the Yale-Harvard game.

And nothing is more heartland America than the Indianapolis 500. It's the last stand of 1910 USA in this century. It's like stepping into a time warp. It seems to have no business in the 20th century. That's precisely its charm.

But it's come to have a melancholy effect on those of us who remember when the good old U.S. of A. was the automobile center of the universe, the 100 percent dyed-in-the-wool flag wavers who not only believe that this is the greatest country in the world but also the most inventive, resourceful, imaginative; those who believe that an American with a screwdriver and an oil can is the greatest natural-born engineer the world has ever known.

I mean, did we invent the electric light, or didn't we? Who thought up the telephone? The steamboat? Cotton gin? Telegraph? Did we get to the moon first, or didn't we?

That's why it's painful to watch the Indy 500.

How can you see it through the mist that comes over your eyes when you watch these sleek racing machines and know that not one of them is a good old All-American product? I mean, Henry Ford would have a fit. General Motors should. Barney Oldfield would be ashamed. Walter Chrysler would be insulted. Lee Iacocca should do something about it.

How can every car but three in an Indy race have imported engines? How can 31 out of the 33 have foreign chassis? How can it be that not one car is American from wheel to wheel? I thought American kids grew up with lug wrenches for rattles, screwdrivers to teethe on?

Better yet, how can it be that, in the late running of the race, among the cars still in the hunt and on the same lap, only one of the drivers was a native American?

Consider it: A Kentucky kid driving an English car with an English power plant was the only one who could save the day for the U.S. Danny Sullivan was holding off guys born in Italy (Mario Andretti), Brazil (Emerson Fittipaldi) and Colombia (Roberto Guerrero).

More than that, 7 of the 33 drivers were foreign-born. The rookie of the year, Arie Luyendyk, was born in Holland, and I don't mean Michigan.

The cars, drivers, power plants, even the best ideas come from abroad. In 1961, it took Australian Jack Brabham, the world Formula One champion, to bring the rear engine to Indy. Brabham, now Sir John, showed up in a little, underpowered Cooper Climax and the Indy Establishment almost fell down laughing.

But by 1965, every car in the field was a rear-engine model. In fact, no front-engine car has won since 1964.

The British designer, Colin Chapman, added insult to injury when he took a Ford engine, stuck it in the rear of an English Lotus and ran away from the flower of American roadster racing. You had the feeling he could have taken a London cab and rubbed their noses in it. He even painted his cars green, long considered as unlucky as a hat on the bed in American racing, and blew off the loutish, overpowered U.S. cars like the 700-horsepower Novi, and went through corners fatigue-free.

Not only the imported cars but the drivers gave the Establishment fits Sunday. The Brazilian, Fittipaldi, had actually given up international racing as too dangerous but came out of retirement because Indy looked like a piece of cake to him. He was actually leading the race after 121 laps and only an injudicious pit stop under green-flag racing conditions took him out of the hunt. He was running second at the time.

The American engines fared worse then the American chauffeurs. One of them went six whole laps before spasming out, another coughed out after 13, and the third went 19.

Still, an American driver won. Well, ahem, er, ah, don't look now but Danny Sullivan became a race driver at an English school for drivers and learned his way around a track at Zandvoort and Brand's Hatch and the Costa Brava.

There was a time when we threw English tea overboard. Now, anything's liable to happen. I mean, what's next — the World Series will be cricket?

It's almost as if Manchester United showed up for the Super Bowl — and beat the Raiders.

Spinks to defend ring title against unknown

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — He owns one of only two undisputed titles in boxing, but Michael Spinks is finding it hard to make money fighting in the light heavyweight division.

Spinks, who takes on little-known Diamond Jim MacDonald in his tenth title defense Thursday night, will earn $150,000 for his 10th title defense. That beats washing dishes for a living, but hardly compares to purses offered other fighters his stature — and Spinks thinks he knows why.

"They want to see me in death matches, but there's nobody in the division good enough to give me that kind of fight," said Spinks. "I've overshadowed the competition; I'm the class of the class. They won't pay me to fight anybody any more."

Spinks has fought only three times since unifying the title with a 15-round decision over Dwight Braxton in March 1983, earning two knockouts and one lopsided, but lackluster, decision.

Outside of his title unification match with Braxton, there just haven't been any quality opponents for the undefeated Spinks, a former Olympic gold medalist.

"I should be receiving a million dollars fighting MacDonald and these guys," Spinks said. "Maybe if I was a white fighter, I'd be getting paid."

Spinks had a chance to earn a million-dollar purse when he was offered the May 20 fight against Larry Holmes, which was eventually taken by Carl Williams. He declined the bout, saying the three weeks he would have had to train wouldn't have been long enough to beef himself up from the 175-pound class.

"A million dollars sounds nice, but if I had to take that fight it wasn't worth it," said Spinks. "That would have been a suicide mission."

Instead, he will make a defense of the title he won in July 1981 against MacDonald, an unheralded ex-Marine who has won all 16 of his professional fights.

"I hope he's easy prey," said Spinks, who is 26-0. "I would like them all to be easy, just like Holmes has them."

MacDonald, an ex-Marine who is 16-0, will have the support of 2,000 Marines being bussed in from bases in Southern California for the fight, which promoter Don King labels as "D-Day Dynamite" in commemoration of the invasion of Europe 41 years ago.

Some feel MacDonald would be better off with the Marines in the ring with him.

"It's God's will but I did come here to win," said MacDonald, who likes to sing and write lyrics to religious music.

In another title fight on the card, Carlos DeLeon defends his World Boxing Council cruiserweight championship in a 12-round bout against Alfonzo Ratliff, the No. 1-ranked contender.

Ratliff, whose only two losses were to top heavyweights Pinklon Thomas and Tim Witherspoon, will bring a nine-inch reach advantage

Gooden fans 12 to beat Dodgers

National League

For once, the hype was right, the advanced billing was accurate.

Dwight Gooden and Fernando Valenzuela, two of baseball's master pitchers, hooked up for the second time in 11 days Tuesday night. This time, Gooden avenged a loss to Valenzuela by hurling an eight-hitter, striking out 12 and contributing three hits to New York's 4-1 victory.

After the Mets broke a 1-1 tie in the ninth on Danny Heep's sacrifice fly and RBI singles by Rafael Santana and Gooden, Mets Manager Davey Johnson praised his 20-year-old fireballer.

"Dwight is my security blanket," said Johnson. "I used to get goosebumps watching him pitch ... at least I'm over that now.

"When I saw him at 17, I said he was the best I'd seen. I guess that turned out right."

He was better than Valenzuela Tuesday, earning redemption for a 6-2 loss in New York to Fernando on May 25. Gooden was at his best in the eighth, when he pitched out of a bases-jammed, no-out hole.

"I knew in the eighth, when they had the bases loaded, I had to go for strikeouts," said Gooden, who extended his National League-leading strikeout total to 101. "In those situations, that's when you become a pitcher. I tried to put more on my fastball and get it up."

Los Angeles filled the bases when Steve Sax and Ken Landreaux singled and Mookie Wilson's relay from center was wild, allowing Sax to take third and Landreaux to move to second. Pedro Guerrero, who homered for the Dodger run, was walked intentionally.

But Gooden struck out Greg Brock, got Mike Scioscia on a pop foul and struck out Terry Whitfield. And the Mets won it in the ninth.

Valenzuela went 8 2-3 innings, allowing nine hits and all four runs.

"I was not tired in the ninth," he said. "I was feeling OK. They just hit me."

Ray Knight's two-out homer in the second gave New York its other run.

Padres 6, Phillies 5

Kevin McReynolds's two-out, two-run triple in the ninth lifted the host Padres past Philadelphia in a game marred by a bench-clearing brawl. With one out, Tony Gwynn beat out an infield hit but Kent Tekulve struck out Steve Garvey, who earlier had homered. After Graig Nettles walked, McReynolds lined a 1-2 pitch to the center-field fence to score Gwynn and pinch-runner Jerry Royster.

Pinch-hitter John Wockenfuss lined a one-out single in the ninth to give the Phillies a 5-4 lead.

Padres starter Andy Hawkins carried a 4-3 lead into the eighth inning but lost a bid for his 11th consecutive victory when the Phillies tied it with a run on Juan Samuel's double, a groundout and Mike Schmidt's triple off reliever Rich "Goose" Gossage.

The Padres took a 4-3 lead in the sixth. Terry Kennedy and Carmelo Martinez singled. Garry Templeton was safe on a fielder's choice with Kennedy moving to third. After Templeton stole second and Hawkins struck out, Tim Flannery lined a single to left field to score both runners. Flannery went to third when the ball got by left fielder Jeff Stone for a two-base error.

At that point, Phillies starter John Denny and Flannery scuffled as both benches emptied and the game was delayed for several minutes. Denny and fellow Phillies pitcher Kevin Gross were ejected from the game.

After sliding into third, Flannery said he told Denny, "That one's for you." Denny hit him with a pitch earlier in the game.

"He asked what I said and I told him again," Flannery said. "And I knew we were going to fight."

Cardinals 6, Astros 1

Rookie Vince Coleman sparked the offense with four hits, four runs scored and three stolen bases and Joaquin Andujar earned his 10th victory of the year. Tommy Herr, the leading hitter in the majors, doubled and singled to drive in three runs and Willie McGee added a double and two singles, knocking in a pair of runs.

Reds 9, Pirates 3

Cincinnati's bats continued to sizzle, piling up 15 more hits, including two by player-manager Pete Rose, who is 52 hits shy of breaking Ty Cobb's all-time mark of 4,191. Gary Redus belted a home run and an RBI double as the Reds upped their run production to 26 in three games.

"Hitting is contagious," said Redus. "I don't know why we're hitting like this, but I hope it continues."

Giants 5, Expos 1

Jim Gott threw a six-hitter for his first complete game of the season, striking out seven and walking two. Jose Uribe paced the offense with a pair of doubles and three RBIs.

Montreal's Dan Schatzeder struck out Gott with two out in the fifth inning but the third strike was a wild pitch, allowing Alex Trevino to score from third base to break a 1-1 tie.

Cubs 5, Braves 3

Jody Davis had three hits, including a tie-breaking single in the sixth inning, and Ron Cey and Keith Moreland homered for Chicago.

Rick Mahler, 8-5, lost his third straight decision and fifth in six games as Atlanta fell into the NL West cellar.

Bradley will remember

...Hernandez wants to forget

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

American League

It was a night Seattle's Phil Bradley will always remember and one Detroit's Willie Hernandez would just as soon forget.

With relatives and friends totaling 30 in the ballpark, Bradley wanted to do something unforgettable. And that he did, hitting a 12th-inning home run Tuesday night off Tiger relief ace Hernandez to lift the Mariners to a 7-6 victory.

"I've had some thrills, but I'd have to say this was one of the biggest," Bradley said.

Hernandez, 4-2, won't soon forget Bradley's homer — the first the American League Cy Young Award winner has allowed in a regular-season game since July 24, 1984 — or what followed.

After the homer, Bradley's ninth, Hernandez hit Alvin Davis with a pitch and then engaged the Seattle dugout in an exchange of obscenities that resulted in his ejection.

"The first base umpire (Jim Evans) said he had to throw me out because 35 guys in their dugout wanted to whip my behind," Hernandez explained. "I said, 'Well, they're going to have to come across the line because I'm not going over there.'

"I think he was wrong. I didn't mean to hit that batter. It was a mistake."

As was the pitch to Bradley.

"It was like a batting practice pitch," Hernandez said.

Hernandez had worked four perfect innings and had one out when Bradley jumped on the 1-0 pitch and hit it into the upper deck in left field. One out later, Hernandez hit Davis.

Roy Thomas, 1-0, got the victory and Matt Young, the seventh Seattle pitcher, retired the final batter for a save in his first relief appearance of the year.

Seattle took a 3-0 lead in the second on an RBI single by Bob Kearney and a two-run error by Tom Brookens.

The Tigers, who have lost six of their last eight games, got two back in their half of the second on a double by Chet Lemon, who had four RBIs.

The Mariners made it 6-2 in the fifth on a run-scoring single by Steve Henderson, a sacrifice fly by Davis and an RBI single by Barry Bonnell.

Lemon tripled in two runs in the sixth and scored on Lou Whitaker's grounder.

Blue Jays 9, Twins 2

Willie Upshaw hit a two-run homer to highlight Toronto's three-run fourth inning, and Jim Clancy scattered four hits over eight innings.

George Bell added a three-run homer for Toronto and Buck Martinez, who had three hits, hit a solo shot for the Blue Jays, who extended their lead in the AL East to five games over Detroit.

Clancy, 2-2, said he went most of the way with one pitch.

"I just tried to keep the fastball in, take away their power," said Clancy.

Minnesota has lost 11 of its last 12 games.

Angels 6, Orioles 5

Batimore also lost ground to Toronto when California's Ruppert Jones walked on a 3-2 pitch with two outs in the 15th inning, stole second base and scored on Mike Brown's single.

The walk was issued by rookie Ken Dixon, 4-3, the fifth Baltimore pitcher.

But Brown was in no mood to celebrate. He became ill soon after arriving in the clubhouse.

"I had a stomach ache all day," he said. "I don't feel too good, really."

The game lasted five hours, four minutes, the longest of the season in the AL.

Stu Cliburn, 2-1, allowed three hits in the final 5 2-3 innings to get the victory.

Reggie Jackson had two RBIs, giving him 1,537 for his career, tying him with Joe DiMaggio for 23rd on the all-time list.

Red Sox 5, Indians 0

Bob Ojeda, making his second start since being recalled from the bullpen, scattered six hits, struck out three and didn't walk a batter in seven innings.

"This really is no big deal, but there is a big difference in starting and relieving," Ojeda said.

Boston's Dwight Evans, with just two hits in his previous 19 at-bats, homered and Rich Gedman extended his hitting streak to 14 games.

Evans, who was "rested" for two games, led off the third inning with his fifth homer, a line shot into the screen in left-center off Keith Creel, 0-4.

The Red Sox made it easy for Ojeda with by adding three runs in the seventh.

The loss was the 11th for Cleveland in 13 games.

A's 2, Yankees 0

Two of the players New York traded in the Rickey Henderson deal made them regret it for the moment.

"I looked forward to this game more than any other." rookie Tim Birtsas said after limiting the Yankees to three hits in six innings.

Ironically, another of the acquisitions, reliever Jay Howell, retired Henderson on a fly ball with the bases loaded to end the game and collect his 12th save.

Dave Kingman hit his 13th homer of the year and 390th of his career, off Joe Cowley, 4-3, to pass Johnny Bench for 22nd on the all-time list.

Rangers 7, White Sox 3

This is June, and that means Charlie Hough is nearly unhittable.

"When it gets good and hot I feel like I've got a pretty good shot to win, especially in my ballpark," Hough said.

Since becoming a regular starter in 1972, Hough is 12-3 with a 1.85 ERA in 18 June starts.

"Tonight his knuckler was dancing everywhere," Chicago's Oscar Gamble said.

Hough, 5-4, limited the White Sox to four hits and Tom Seaver, 5-4, was victimized by four unearned runs in the first inning.

Gary Ward had two hits and drove in two runs for Texas.

Royals 4, Brewers 3

Lonnie Smith, acquired last month in a deal with St. Louis, may be struggling with a .160 average, but he hasn't forgotten how to run the bases.

"It's something I learned in high school that I've used ever since," he said of a second-base slide that proved the pivotal play. "You just slide right into their feet and they usually jump and don't throw the ball, unless they're an acrobat like Ozzie Smith."

With Onix Concepcion at third and the game tied 1-1 with one out in the second inning, Smith upended shortstop Ed Romero to break up a potential double play and allow Concepcion to score the go-ahead run.

Change still in future

Tennis has same old look

By GREG MacARTHUR

French Open

PARIS (AP) — With many of the top players talking about retirement and a young Swedish contingent coming on strong, the international tennis picture may change dramatically in the next few years.

However, two of the old guard keep plugging away — the United States' John McEnroe and Czechoslovak Ivan Lendl. The No. 1 and No. 2 seeds so far have lived up to their billing in the $2.2 million French Open.

McEnroe took a tough, five-set victory over Sweden's Joakim Nystrom 6-7, 6-2, 6-2, 3-6, 7-5, Tuesday to advance to the semifinals against another Swede, Mats Wilander, who eliminated upstart Henri Leconte of France 6-4, 7-6, 6-7, 7-5.

"I'm just glad I won it," a relieved McEnroe said. "There were a lot of ups and downs, and I feel good that I hung in there and won a tough fifth set."

LENDL, meanwhile, was in today's quarterfinals against Martin Jaite of Argentina following his 6-2, 6-2, 6-0 win Monday over Aaron Krickstein of Grosse Pointe, Mich. Jimmy Connors, one of those talking about retirement, will also play in the quarterfinal round, against 14th-seeded Stefan Edberg, one of three Swedish players who made the final eight of this tournament.

The 30-year-old Connors, who still hopes to become the first American man to win here in 30 years — since Tony Trabert in 1955 — hints broadly that this may be his last time on French clay, even though it's the only Grand Slam event to escape his clutches.

Connors is the second "name" male player in this tournament to hint at retirement. Earlier, Argentina's Guillermo Vilas, winner here in 1977 but ousted in the second round this year, said he would "think seriously" about retirement this time next year unless he significantly improves his world ranking — currently 57th.

MARTINA Navratilova and Chris Evert Lloyd, who have shared the top of the heap in women's tennis for the past 10 years, are talking about retiring in two years.

Navratilova and Lloyd still dominate the women's game, and both say their bodies could keep them in the thick of high-level competition for the next several years. They are expected to meet again in this year's finals.

"Physically, I could still be a better athlete if I worked harder," Lloyd said after beating fellow American Terry Phelps 6-4, 6-0 on Tuesday and earning a semifinal berth against Gabriela Sabatini of Italy, who ousted No. 4 Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria 6-3, 1-6, 6-3.

Navratilova, at 28 two years younger than Lloyd, will meet West Germany's Claudia Khode-Kilsch in their semifinal confrontation.

"I thought that age would catch up with me physically," Navratilova said. "But I now think I can still go on playing for five or six years. Mentally, I'm not so sure."

"Five or six years ago, my concentration never wavered," said the 30-year-old Lloyd. "Now I find there are distractions."

AT TIMES Tuesday, McEnroe displayed the brilliance that brought him the singles titles at Wimbledon and the U.S. Open last year. And the left-hander, who reached the final here in 1984 only to lose to Lendl, needed that level of play to down the steady, unspectacular Swede, who was content to feed on the American's frequent errors.

Nystrom took the fourth set and broke McEnroe's serve to grab a 3-1 lead in the decisive fifth set. But McEnroe, seemingly able to shift into a higher gear whenever he needs to, abandoned all caution and unleashed a series of shots, ripping off four straight games to take a 5-3 lead.

)Nystrom managed to save a match point with a spectacular service return, broke back, then held his serve to level the set at 5-5.

It was the Swede's final shot as McEnroe advanced into the semifinals when Nystrom hit a backhand wide.

WILANDER, the 1982 French Open champion, dampened the enthusiastic French crowd with his patient baseline game, beating Leconte in the first two sets and then breaking his service to begin the third.

The 22-year-old left-handed Frenchman, who had upset his countryman and former French champion Yannick Noah, powered his way to the third set on his powerful serve. But Wilander captured the fourth set to close out the match and set up his semifinal clash with McEnroe, their ninth career meeting.

KUPCHAK

There were in Game 1. Celtic layups. Which is why Mitch Kupchak was in Game 2. In this series, nice guys will finish last.

The hot topic of debate from here on will be what's clean and what's dirty.

"It's whether or not there is an intent to hurt somebody," Kupchak said. "If you get knocked to the ground, throw an elbow, it's very physical, but there's no intent to hurt.

"Blind-side elbows to the face, undercutting (low-bridging), punching someone in the stomach — that's dirty. But I don't think there's been any of that in this series. It's been a physical series, but it hasn't crossed over the line."

Kupchak enjoys contact. After sitting for most of the season, he enjoys merely standing up. Had the Lakers breezed through this series, needing only their pretty running game, Kupchak would have been a million-dollar cheerleader.

He hasn't said much about all the bench-sitting this season, but he hasn't enjoyed it. For a long time, he has been ready to play hard for 15 to 25 minutes a game.

"A lot of players would accept it and be thankful for being in that position," Kupchak said. "I didn't do all this (rehabilitation) to sit on the bench and be a cheerleader. I want to play.

"I'm not really satisfied being the 11th or 12th man on the Lakers."

Someone asked Kupchak if now, finally, he feels like an important part of the team.

He thought about it for perhaps 15 seconds.

Dollar gains

LONDON (AP) — The dollar gained against all major currencies in early European trading today. Gold bullion prices eased.

Currency dealers said a lack of fresh news had kept the market quiet and prices in a narrow range.

"No one really has anything new to trade on right now," one Frankfurt dealer said. "New York tried to test the lower levels and that didn't work so they brought it a little higher. But you can't really talk about a significant shift of opinion."

In Tokyo, where trading ends as Europe's business day begins, the dollar fell slightly to 248.95 Japanese yen compared with 249.10 yen late Tuesday. Later, in London, it was back at 249.10.

Other mid-morning dollar rates compared with late Tuesday's:

—3.0600 West German marks, up from 3.0470.

—2.5720 Swiss francs, up from 2.5590.

—9.3275 French francs, up from 9.2850.

—3.4485 Dutch guilders, up from 3.4360.

—1,952.75 Italian lire, up from 1,944.50.

—1.3690 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3665.

In London, the dollar also gained against the pound sterling. It cost $1.2705 to buy one pound, cheaper than late Tuesday's price of $1.2762.

Gold prices fell in light trading without any factors moving the market, traders said.

In London, gold opened at a bid price of $315.00 an ounce and the city's five major bullion dealers later fixed an indicative price of $314.75. Both were below late Tuesday's closing bid of $315.50.

In Zurich, Europe's biggest bullion market, gold was selling at a bid of $314.85, down from $315.75 the previous day.

Earlier in Hong Kong, gold dropped the equivalent of $1.15 to close at $315.82, compared to Tuesday's $316.97.

Silver bullion prices also lost ground on the London market where the metal was selling at a bid $6.07 an ounce compared with $6.12 late Tuesday.

Clements: Oil technology may save billions

AUSTIN (AP) — Advanced technology in recovering oil from known reservoirs could bring Texas oil producers and the state billions of dollars in the future, according to former Gov. Bill Clements.

"It will have enormous implications for the economy of the state as well as our national security," Clements told the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association on Tuesday.

"We're talking about in the future producing from the known reservoirs of the state the equivalent amount of oil that we have produced to date," Clements said.

Clements founded SEDCO Inc., an international oil drilling firm in 1947. SEDCO was merged with Schlumberger Limited in 1984. Clements was the final speaker at the annual TIPRO meeting.

Clements, Texas' only Republican governor this century, served from 1978 to 1982. He said he was making a non-partisan effort to stress the importance of the oil and gas industry to the state and nation.

"I'm not running for anything," Clements told reporters after his speech, adding that he thought Democratic Gov. Mark White was "very vulnerable."

Clements has been considered a possible candidate for governor in 1986 and instrumental in getting a strong GOP candidate to run against White.

"We have had no national energy policy from the end of World War II to this date," said Clements, a former deputy U.S. secretary of defense. "This includes four Democratic and four Republican presidents. I don't think we can afford the luxury of not having an energy policy."

Clements said the nation's $63 billion trade deficit, of which about half was caused by imported oil, is a "serious problem."

"It not only affects our national security from a logistical standpoint, but it affects our relationship with both Canada and Mexico.

"If Mexico is to recover from the doldrums it is now in, it will be through its relationship through energy with the United States. That is their salvation," Clements said. "It is very important to Mexico and only slightly less with Canada."

He predicted that crude oil prices will remain "relatively stable" at about the current levels "and then gradually increase by about 50 percent by the year 2000."

The hope for the oil and gas industry in Texas and the nation lies in future technology, Clements said.

"Think of all the billions and billions of barrels of oil we have produced," he said. "They are only 40 percent of what we know is there.

U.S. said to have signed export pacts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration says it has signed steel export agreements with three more countries as part of its program to curb the flow of foreign steel into the United States.

The latest five-year agreements, retroactive to last Oct. 1, were reached with Romania, Czechoslovakia and Hungary, Deputy U.S. Trade Representative Robert Lighthizer said Tuesday.

Romania agreed to limit its exports to the United States to 150,000 tons per year, Czechoslovakia to 40,000 tons per year and Hungary to 34,000 tons per year, Lighthizer said. Last year, American imports from the three countries totaled 376,0000 tons.

The agreements bring to 11 the number of steel pacts negotiated so far.

Following a directive by President Reagan last September, the United States sought deals with major steel exporters to reduce the foreign share of the U.S. market from about 25 percent to around 18.5 percent.

Previous agreements were reached with Australia, Brazil, Finland, Japan, Mexico, South Africa, South Korea and Spain.

Lighthizer also said Tuesday that two domestic steel firms, Lone Star and CF&I, had agreed to drop unfair trade complaints filed over steel shipments from Brazil and Mexico. The complaints focused on oil country tubular goods, steel products commonly used in the production of oil drilling equipment.

The Reagan administration had urged the firms to drop their complaints.

"Our trading partners signed voluntary restraint agreements in good faith with us, and our companies have an obligation to keep their end of the bargain by agreeing to withdraw their unfair trade complaints, or face elimination of these products from the program," Lighthizer said.

Last week, Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., who is chairman of the Senate Steel Caucus, said loopholes in the administration's steel import program were enabling the influx of foreign steel to continue.

Without naming offenders, Heinz said countries are disguising their shipments of steel by first sending them to nations not subject to steel shipment restrictions. Those countries then pass the steel on to the United States, he said.

The Reagan administration has said the program is "watertight" but that it is too early to assess its success.

Consultants to speak to WTGS

Sal Mazzulo and Al Reid, consultants in Midland, will be the speakers at the luncheon meeting of the West Texas Geological Society at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday at the Midland Center.

The title of their talk will be "A Comparison of Recent Carbonate Depositional Systems: Belize to Ancient Carbonate Depositional Systems of the Permian Basin."

Cost is $7 and reservations should be made by calling the society at 683-1573 before 4 p.m. Friday.

United weighs whether to resume strike talks

CHICAGO (AP) — United Airlines is weighing a call by the National Mediation Board to resume negotiations with its striking pilots, an invitation the Air Line Pilots Association already has accepted.

The board on Tuesday asked for the talks to resume Thursday at its Washington headquarters in an effort to end the nearly three-week strike. The pilots said they would attend the talks, but United's participation was left in doubt.

Company spokesman Joe Hopkins said United had received the board's telegram and planned to respond today.

Mediation Board Chairwoman Helen M. Witt notified the pilots union and the airline to meet at board headquarters at 1 p.m. Thursday in an effort to resolve back-to-work issues, the only obstacles blocking an agreement.

Board mediator Ralph Colliander, who has participated in the bargaining since Aug. 1, will sit in on the new round of negotiations, said Meredith Buel, a board spokesman.

Negotiations broke off May 25. A notice to resume bargaining is, under the federal law involving the National Mediation Board, a request rather than an order.

"The United Pilots Strike Committee is pleased to heed the call of Mrs. Witt to resume negotiations with the company," said David A. Jewell, a spokesman for the committee.

"We have always said that we would meet with the other side any time and any place to seriously negotiate the issues in this dispute," Jewell said. "We look forward to a round of serious good-faith bargaining that will result in a fair and equitable settlment on behalf of the more than 5,000 United pilots now walking the picket line."

General Motors reveals purchase of Hughes Aircraft

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. will buy aerospace giant Hughes Aircraft Co. from the Howard Hughes Medical Institute in a multibillion-dollar deal, GM sources said today.

General Motors, the nation's largest automaker, along with Ford Motor Co. and Boeing Co., had been considered the leading bidders in the competition which began Monday. Only Ford had announced making a bid.

Directors of the Hughes Medical Institute met into the evening in New York City on Tuesday to consider the bids and the GM sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said the automaker had submitted the winning bid.

No prices were disclosed, but Hughes had been expected to bring between $4.5 billion and $6 billion, making it one of the costliest acquisitions ever outside the oil industry.

GM has more than $8 billion in cash and marketable securities on hand.

GM spokesman Donald Postma would not comment, but said that GM Chairman Roger B. Smith had scheduled a news conference today in New York City to discuss a "major development."

The merger would be the largest in GM history, eclipsing the $2.5 billion acquisition last fall of Electronic Data Systems Corp. of Dallas, a giant computer services company.

Trading in Ford stock was heavy Tuesday on the New York Stock Exchange amid speculation that it might be the winner of the bidding. Nearly 4.1 million shares changed hands Tuesday, bringing the two-day total to 5.5 million.

Trading was light in GM and Boeing stock, and none of the three experienced a wide swing in value.

The Bethesda, Md.-based medical institute has been sole owner of Hughes Aircraft since industrialist Howard Hughes donated the company to the nonprofit foundation in 1953. It put the company on the auction block in January.

Hughes Aircraft is the nation's foremost defense electronics concern and one of the world's biggest satellite builders.

Automobile sales could stay brisk until autumn

DETROIT (AP) — Domestic and foreign carmakers are beginning the summer with brisk sales and analysts say showrooms may stay busy until fall.

The seven major domestic automakers reported Tuesday that sales in May rose 0.5 percent above the strong rate of a year ago.

Importers had an even better month. Sales of European cars rose 11 percent and dealers of Japanese-made cars, having begun to replenish their stocks under substantially higher import quotas, enjoyed a 9.8 percent gain.

The seven domestic automakers saw sales slip 4.9 percent in the final 10-day industry selling period, tempering the enthusiasm that might be expected from the strong monthly numbers.

Arthur Davis, an auto industry analyst at Prescott, Ball & Turben Inc. in Cleveland, said the dip was caused by low inventories and Detroit "will have a barnburner of a summer."

An indication of the market's strength is the brisk sales of cars that haven't been discounted or sold with cut-rate financing, Davis said.

Joseph Phillippi, an auto industry analyst at E.F. Hutton in New York, said, however, that the market could become saturated, with many buyers having satisfied their demand for new cars over the past two years of good sales.

Among the Big Three in May, Ford Motor Co. posted a 9.3 percent gain compared with a year earlier. General Motors Corp. sales were down 2.9 percent and Chrysler Corp. was up 3.3 percent.

Giant GM began to stem the severe losses in market share it had suffered since last fall. GM had 59.4 percent of the domestic market in May, which is close to normal, as were Ford's 24.1 percent and Chrysler's 12.1 percent.

The import companies had a combined 24.9 percent of the U.S. market in May — 19.3 percent for the Japanese and 5.6 percent for the Europeans.

"The imports should widen it to 30 percent by the end of the year," said an internal analyst at a major domestic auto company who spoke on condition that he not be identified.

Among the small U.S. producers, American Honda Motor Co. Inc. sales of Ohio-made cars were up 22.1 percent over the comparable month a year earlier. Honda has solidified its hold on the title of No. 4 U.S. automaker.

American Motors Corp. sales continued to slip, ending the month 33.5 percent below a year ago. AMC has threatened to close its U.S. assembly plant unless it gets labor cost concessions from the United Auto Workers. The company and union began early contract negotiations this week.

Dawn Feola, manager and leasing agent, said the center has reached 87 percent capacity with the new stores.

AMERICAN FAVORITES TAKE TO THE OUTDOORS

Summer is a season long celebration filled with plenty of outdoor fun and fare. To keep active summer appetites satisfied, Americans traditionally turn to easy-to-make, take-along foods, such as hearty sandwiches and energy-packed snacks. Whether you choose to picnic in the park or stay in the backyard, these All American favorite foods will draw raves.

Sandwiches can be special, delicious and convenient when creativity is combined with fixings from the deli. Fill pita bread pockets with tasty marinated roast beef, vegetables and Swiss cheese, then top with a creamy dressing for Zesty Beef Sandwiches. With a few simple preparations, they are a snap to put together at the picnic table.

Deli Rounder is a great portable sandwich that is prepared in advance and chilled. Hollow out a round loaf of your favorite bread, and layer in cheese, turkey, ham and cole slaw. Or let your imagination and your family's favorite tastes be your guide. What looks like an ordinary loaf of bread turns into the hero of the day when sliced.

Bean Salad Supreme gives a new twist to traditional three bean salad with crispy zucchini slices and a hint of basil. The appeal of this perfect make-ahead salad lies in its wonderfully sweet and tangy flavor.

Plenty of snacks will help keep the activities going. Rocky Road Brownie Bars are based on a favorite flavor combination of chocolate, nuts and marshmallows. These moist, chewy, homemade brownies come alive with "M&M's" Chocolate Candies, raisins, nuts and marshmallows.

"GORP" Bars bring a new dimension to the popular trail mix. Pretzels, raisins, banana chips and peanut milk chocolate candies become energy-packed bars when combined with a peanut butter-marshmallow mixture. These easy, no-bake bars are the perfect portable — pack a few for a solo outing, or bring a panful for a larger gathering and cut them on the spot.

Homemade cookies are on everyone's list of snacking favorites. Deliciously crunchy Oatmeal Chippers combine wholesome oats, nutritious wheat germ or sesame seeds and colorful plain milk chocolate candies. They are also easy to pack—that is, if they don't get gobbled up right out of the oven.

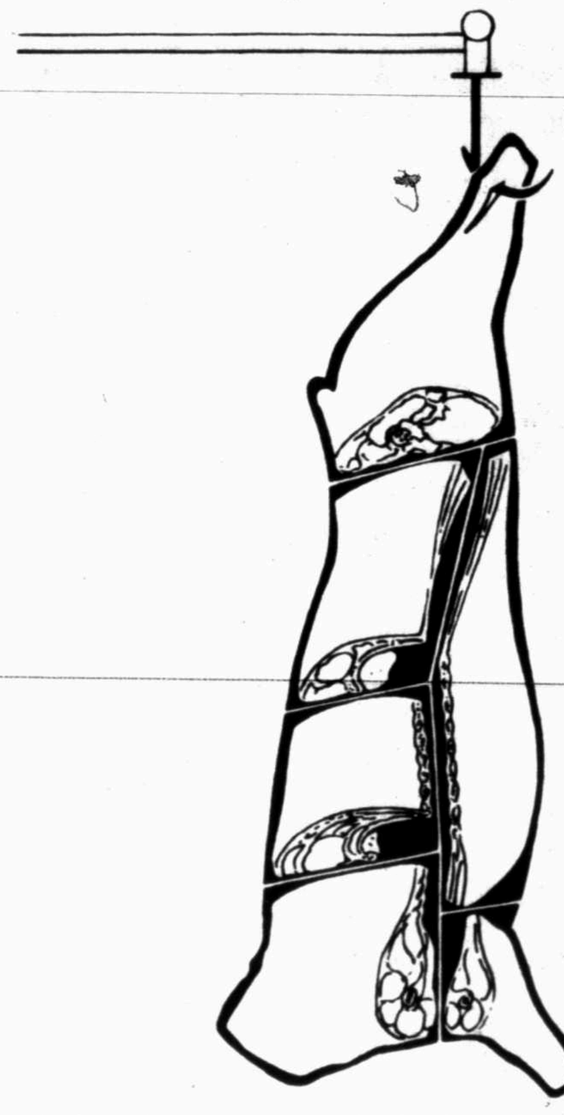
THE BUTCHER

'Flatiron' useful piece of chuck

By MERLE ELLIS



If you want to save money on meat and eat a whole lot better for a whole lot less, get to know chuck.

The chuck is the shoulder of the beef animal. It has been thought of as a tough cut, suited only for pot roast or stew, and generally speaking that was true — once. It's not the case for some parts of the chuck the way it is merchandised today, however.

Beef chuck used to be marketed with the bone in. It was simply cut up in hunks. Each hunk contained several different muscles, some of which were tough, some of which were not so tough and a couple of which were quite tender.

Yet, they all were labeled "less tender" because the chuck hunks had to be cooked to accomodate the toughest muscle in each one, which meant long slow stewing or braising.

Many, if not most, chucks today are sold boneless. The bones are removed at the packing plant, and in the process certain muscles and muscle groups are separated and ultimately sold at retail as individual cuts.

The flatiron is one of those muscles. The flatiron is the most tender muscle of the chuck and may be used for lots of things besides pot roasts or stews.

The flatiron is a triangular-shaped muscle that lies on top of the shoulder blade bone and extends from the point where the arm bone is connected to the blade bone all the way down to where the rib is separated from the chuck.

Actually, it's not called a flatiron anymore. That name resulted from the fact that the triangular shape of the muscle resembled the shape of Grandma's old flatiron, but that's a little obsolete. Who remembers those?

Today the cut has a more anatomically accurate, if somewhat duller, name — Beef Chuck Top Blade Roast/Steak Boneless.

That name tells you everything you need to know about the flatiron. It may, indeed, be more than you want to know. It tells you that it's BEEF. It comes from the beef animal, rather than pork or lamb.

It tells you that it comes from the shoulder of the animal, the CHUCK, not the loin or the rib. It tells you that it comes from a particular part of the chuck — on top of the blade bone, TOP BLADE.

It gives you a pretty good idea of how to cook it, either ROAST or STEAK, depending upon how it's cut. And, finally, it confirms the obvious, the cut is BONELESS.

Top blade steaks are tender enough to broil or pan-fry. The connective tissue that runs through the center of the cut turns to gelatin in the cooking process and, therefore, need not be removed.

Another way with the cut that has become a favorite around our house is based on the winning recipe from the 1978 National Beef Cook-Off.

FLATIRON STEAK IN BRANDY MUSHROOM SAUCE

1 Beef Chuck Top Blade Roast, Boneless, cut into ¾-inch thick steaks
¼ pound butter
1 medium onion, sliced thin
3 cloves garlic, minced
1½ pounds fresh mushrooms, sliced
2 tablespoons flour
¼ cup brandy
2 tablespoons Madeira wine
2 tablespoons dry sherry
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
Salt, pepper

Melt half the butter in a heavy skillet and brown the steaks in it a few at a time for about 2 minutes on each side, or until the desired degree of doneness.

As the steaks are cooked, remove them to a warm serving platter. Add remaining butter and saute onion and garlic in it over medium heat until soft. Add mushrooms and continue cooking until the mushrooms are just soft, 5 or 6 minutes. Pour over steaks; keep warm.

Stir flour into pan drippings and cook, stirring, to brown lightly. Add brandy, ignite and shake pan gently until flame is extinguished. Add Madeira, sherry and mustard. Stir in salt and pepper to taste, pour over steaks and mushrooms. Serves 6 to 8.

Pot pies popular for centuries

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

That old American standby, the meat pot pie, has a long history.

During the reign of Elizabeth I, English cooks made pot pies using "chicken peepers," which consisted of tiny chicks stuffed with gooseberries. In fact, Britons during that era consumed meat pies of all sorts, including pork, lamb and game.

Around the middle of the 16th century, one cookbook included a sort of telescopic pie in which five birds were stuffed one inside the other, then wrapped in dough.

This trend toward the grotesque reached its peak when an English food writer took a page from the ancient Romans and featured a recipe that began "to make pies that the birds may be alive and fly out when it is cut up..."

This fondness for meat pies soon spread to the New World. In the 19th century, Americans became enamored of a pie that featured robins.

The settlers who came to America took their pot pie recipes with them when they moved westward. By the present century, chicken pot pies and meat variations have become as American as corn on the cob.

The recipes usually called for inexpensive ingredients or leftovers and the pies were popular not only in the family dining room, but in moderate-priced restaurants. Today, they also appear on the menus of fashionable inns.

Here's a recipe using leftover chicken.

CHICKEN POTPIE

2 pounds potatoes, peeled and diced
1 cup heavy cream
6 tablespoons butter or margarine
Freshly ground pepper
Salt to taste
Pinch ground nutmeg
1 cup chopped scallions, tender parts only
½ cup chopped celery
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup chicken broth
3 cups cooked, chopped chicken
¼ teaspoon thyme
4 eggs

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Grease 9-inch pie plate. In saucepan heat potatoes to boiling in enough salted water to cover. Reduce heat to low and cook until tender, about 15 minutes. Drain and mash, adding ¼ cup cream, 2 tablespoons butter, ¼ teaspoon pepper, and nutmeg and salt to taste. Cover and set aside.

In large skillet over medium heat, melt remaining butter. Saute scallions and celery 3 minutes. Whisk in flour and cook 3 minutes. Add broth and rest of cream, and heat. Stir in chicken, thyme, salt and pepper to taste.

Spread chicken mixture on bottom of pie plate. Pipe 4 potato rings on top of pie mixture. Bake 15 minutes. Remove from oven and carefully break eggs into the rings. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, if desired, and return to oven another 15 minutes, or until eggs are set to desired doneness. Serves 4.

Americans eat less chocolate

NEW YORK (AP) — An expert on chocolate consumption believes he knows why less chocolate is eaten by Americans than by European.

"While per capita consumption has risen to about 10 pounds annually in the U.S., it still is below the chocolate eating patterns in Europe because Americans were taught to believe chocolate is just for children. That is not the case in Europe," says Gustaav Seewer, president of Huwyler Chocolatier of Switzerland.

Armenian recipes yield exotic appetizers

Hearst News Service

As the days grow longer, it's fun to give sundown parties. The idea is to serve something light, so that guests can then go on to dinner if they choose. For hors d'oeuvres, try Armenian appetizers.

Armenia is an ancient, fertile land of majestic mountain plateaus, lovely rivers, abundant game and wildflowers and people who live to a very old age. Excavations reveal that since Biblical times it has been peopled by skilled wine-makers and farmers who raised cattle and sheep, grains and fruits and vegetables.

"Dairy products such as butter, cheese, milk and yogurt were an important part of the diet, and the ancient peoples made extensive use of herbs and spices," says Sonia Uvezian in "The Cuisine of Armenia," which has just been reissued by Harper and Row. "Through the centuries, Armenian historians have described many dishes that are still eaten today."

FROM THESE centuries of culinary tradition has evolved a cusine totally at ease with today's health ideas: lots of fibers, vegetables and lean meat.

My introduction came some years ago from Dr. Carol Mason, the New York neurophysiologist who is at Stanford University this year with her husband, Yale sociologist Paul DiMaggio. Mason occasionally would whip up dishes she learned from her grandmother and the results were always a treat.

In 1980, Mason gave my wife and me "The Armenian Cookbook" by Rachel Hogrogian, one of the finest cookbooks it's ever been my pleasure to use. Published by Atheneum, it's out of print now, but you might find a copy at a good used book store or be able to borrow one from an Armenian cooking fan who was lucky enough to grab a copy when it came out in the 1970s.

WHAT WONDERFUL party hors d'oeuvres Armenian mezas (appetizers) make! Easy to prepare, inexpensive and delicious, they are attractively different from what is usually served. One of the nicest features of Armenian dishes for today's busy cook is their simplicity.

Recipes are short and usually don't take much time, depending for their effect on artful combinations of herbs and spices, rather than elaborate cooking techniques.

The recipe for Boerags is the only one that's compicated at all, and if you follow the directions you shouldn't have any trouble.

Frozen Filo's (sometimes spelled phyllo or phylo) is widely available in supermarkets. You should buy it at least 24 hours before you plan to use it so it can be fully thawed in the refrigerator. If the sheets are not fully thawed, they'll stick in spots, tearing as you lift them off, and you'll end up with an awful mess. Don't try to make the filo yourself unless you have an Armenian grandmother to stand beside you each step of the way.

THE FILLING for the Boerag recipe is particularly valuable for cooks who are busy. If you use a food processor, you can make the recipe in less than 2 minutes. Then, instead of making filo triangles, which is easy but does take time, use lavash crackers, which can be bought in almost any supermarket.

Spread the mixture on one side of the lavash and place in a 450 degrees F oven for about 3 minutes. The cheese mixture, which will be green from the parsley, should be melted until smooth.

Here are some meza recipes from "The Armenian Cookbook." With a couple of jugs of good table wine, they're all you'll need for the best kind of party — one at which the cook has fun too.

THIS BOERAG is a delicious, simple-to-prepare, cheese-filled pastry. It is made with strudel-like pastry sheets, which are sold in 1-pound packages. One package will make about 75 cocktail-sized Boerags. They can be made in advance and frozen. Brush the surface with melted butter before freezing. They can be baked as needed by placing the frozen Boerags in the oven a half-hour before serving.

BOERAG

Cheese Filling:
2 pounds Muenster cheese, grated
4 eggs
½ cup parsley, finely chopped
Pastry:
1 pound filo
1 pound sweet butter, melted

Filling: Combine the ingredients in a mixing bowl. Mix well and set aside while you prepare the pastry.

Pastry: Place the sheets of pastry on the table and cover them with a towel to prevent the sheets from drying out. Take one sheet of dough at a time and cover the rest.

Place the sheet of dough on the table. Brush the entire surface with melted butter, using a pastry brush. Place another sheet of dough directly over the first sheet. Cut the double sheet into four strips lengthwise with a knife. Each strip will be about 2-by-10 inches.

Place a teaspoonful of the filling on one end of the strip. Fold a corner of the sheet over the filling into a triangle. Continue folding to the end of the strip, and you will have a triangular-shaped Boerag.

Make the rest of the Boerags and arrange them on a baking sheet. Brush the top of each Boerag with melted butter. Bake in a 375 degrees F for 25 to 30 minutes. Serve them while still warm.

HUMMUS OR CHICKPEA DIP

1 can chickpeas (17-ounce can)
1 clove garlic
1½ teaspoons
1½ cups lemon juice
1 cup taheeni
Olive oil
Paprika
Chopped parsley

Pour the contents of the can of chickpeas with its liquid into blender. Turn the blender on until the chickpeas are mashed. Add the garlic, salt and lemon juice and blend again.

Finally, add the taheeni and turn the blender on again for a couple of seconds.

Turn out the Hummus into a wide shallow bowl. Sprinkle the top of the Hummus lightly with olive oil, paprika and chopped parsley. Serve with lavash for dipping. Serves about 10.

KIMIONOV KUFTA or SAUTEED CUMIN-FLAVORED MEATBALLS

1 pound ground lamb
½ cup bread crumbs
½ cup milk
1 tablespoon salt
½ tablespoon cumin
3 tablespoons butter

Combine the lamb, bread crumbs, milk, salt and cumin in a bowl and mix thoroughly by hand. Knead the mixture like dough for 2 or 3 minutes. Form the meat into small balls about 1¼ inches in diameter. Saute the meatballs in the butter until they are well browned on all sides. Serve hot. The meat balls can be prepared in advance, frozen, and reheated before serving.

Makes about 35 meatballs.

KHOROVADZ BIBERR or ROASTED GREEN PEPPERS

6 large green peppers
1 clove garlic, sliced
⅛ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons olive oil
1 tablespoon vinegar

Wash and dry the green peppers. Broil them over a charcoal fire or in your broiler until the skins are lightly charred.

Peel the skins, remove the stem ends and discard them with the seeds. Cut the peppers into quarters lengthwise and arrange them in a shallow bowl alternately with the sliced garlic. Sprinkle with salt, add the vinegar and oil and serve cold.

California's Armenian first lady shares recipes

Hearst News Service

In his award-winning "Passage to Ararat," writer Michael Arlen tells how he felt irritated by his wife making a list of famous Armenians.

"It was like making a list of graduates of small, out-of-the-way colleges," he wrote.

But the list was a distinguished one. It included Aram Khatchaturian, Mike Connors, Arlene Francis, Kirk Kerkorian and Charles Aznavour.

Not included, because they were not then so famous, were California's best-known Armenian couple, George and Gloria Deukmejian, California's governor and first lady. Mrs. Deukmejian has a reputation as a good cook and has contributed the following two recipes:

SPINACH CHEESE ROLL

Filling:
1 small onion, finely chopped
1 clove garlic crushed
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons oil
1 pound spinach, fresh or frozen, cleaned, cooked, drained well and chopped
1 cup feta cheese crumbled
3 eggs beaten
Garlic salt, salt, white pepper to taste
5 sheets filo

Saute the onion and garlic in the butter mixed with oil. Add the spinach, cheese and two of the eggs. Simmer the mixture, stirring it constantly, until it is blended and thick. Season to taste with garlic salt, salt and white pepper, and set it aside to cool.

Butter five filo pastry leaves, stacking one upon the other. Place the spinach filling over the top. Roll the pastry, jelly-roll fashion, and brush the pastry with the remaining egg. Bake it in a preheated 350-degree F oven for about 30 minutes. Cut into thin slices and serve hot.

ARMENIAN SALAD

4 cups tomatoes
⅔ to 1 cup green (bell) pepper
½ cup parsley
½ cup scallions
2 sliced cucumbers
¼ cup lemon juice
2 teaspoons salt

Dice the tomatoes and bell pepper, mince the parsley and thinly slice the scallions. Place all the ingredients in a salad bowl, toss lightly to mix and serve immediately. Serves 6.

What do you have in common with a Swedish* exchange student?

You both speak the same language.

One of the most exciting things about opening your home to a European high school student from Educational Foundation for Foreign Study is sharing each other's world — in English. With EFFS there is no language barrier, because every one of our students speaks English in addition to his native language. And EFFS removes other barriers as well: all students are thoroughly screened, have full insurance coverage and their own spending money — and you don't have to have children to host a student. So there's nothing standing between you and this very special friendship.

Call us before June 21st and discover how you can host a European student.

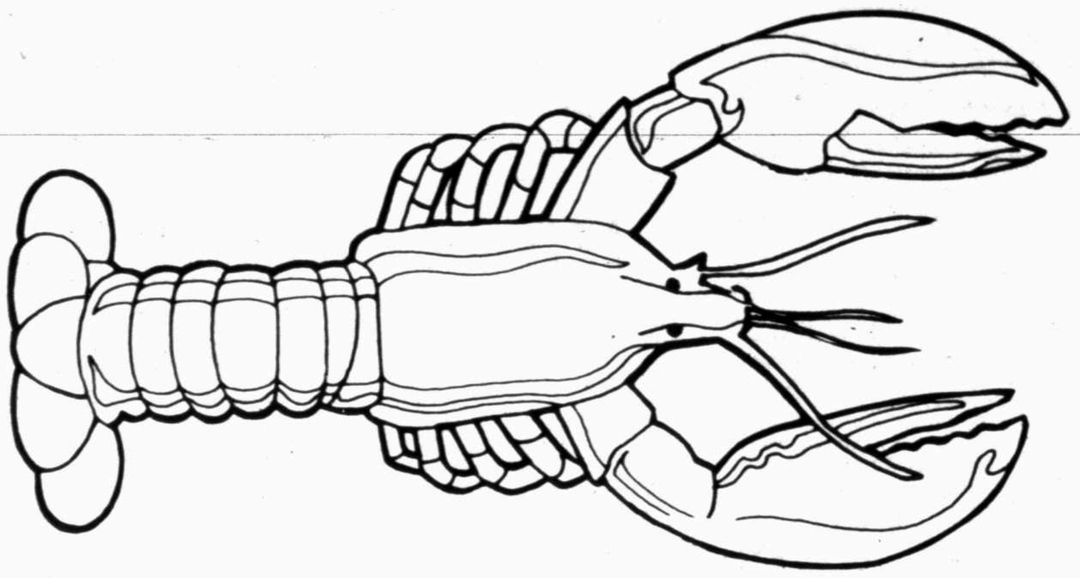
Maine lobsterman offers crustacean recipes

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service



Maine lobsterman Gary Parsons and his family don't eat lobsters too often because "we've had so many over the years. The only thing is," he says, "we can have them when we want them."

The exception is 9-year-old Mark, who "eats quite a few because he's so young" and hasn't had his fill. That doesn't mean Parsons, his wife Mary and his other children (Brenda, 24; Debbie 23; Donnie, 21) don't enjoy lobster.

When they do have the fruits of his labor, Parsons says they "boil them; actually it's a combination of boiling and steaming. I've had them in a restaurant baked-stuffed but baking seems to dry them out too much."

The Parsons put a couple of inches of water in a pot ("doesn't matter how big the pot is, always a couple of inches of water," he says), add enough salt (they don't bother with sea water, "that's too much trouble") so "you can tell it's salty" and bring the water to a boil before putting the lobsters in head first.

"For pound, pound-and-a-half lobsters, we go 15-18 minutes after the water starts to boil again," he says, "and after nine minutes you take the ones on the bottom and put them on the top (tongs are obviously advised), and the ones on the top and put them on the bottom, so they'll cook evenly. Otherwise the ones on the bottom will overcook and the ones on top won't cook enough."

That's all there is to preparing the basic lobster. Serving them simple Maine style is no more difficult. Standard picnic-table presentation includes melted butter for dipping the meat, cold beer and potato chips. Fancier fare calls for baked potato or a garden salad. In either case, have plenty of napkins, or paper towels, handy.

Leftovers, if there are any, are also simple to deal with: make either lobster salad or lobster rolls.

SERVING LOBSTER

Put a large pot in the middle of the table for the expended shells and spread nut crackers and picks around the table. Serve with the claws and arms removed and excess water drained from the lobster.

The diner separates the tail from the body by bending the lobster backward with a slight twist into a V so that it breaks on top where the body and tail meet. Break the claws at all of the joints either by twisting or with a nutcracker, twist the fins off the end of the tail and break the tiny legs off the body.

Squeeze the meat out of the tiny legs with your teeth. The meat in the other pieces is recovered by using the pick or breaking the shells with the nutcracker.

The tail meat is recovered either by pushing it out from the end where the fins were removed, or by splitting the tail. In the latter method, the tail shell is broken by placing it top down across the palm of the hand and squeezing. The underside of the tail will split, and the tail can then be pulled open and the meat lifted out. The alimentary canal along the underside of the tail can then be removed much like pulling up a piece of string. when eating tail meat, be sure to cut it into small pieces, as it is tougher than the rest of the lobster and overeager eaters can choke on oversized pieces.

The body is what separates the pros from the dilettantes. There's a lot of delicious eating there, yet many inexperienced lobster eaters merely toss the intact body into the refuse pot. The green tomalley (liver), for instance, can be spooned up, or saved for use on crackers or in lobster salad. The red roe is another unusual taste treat, or can be saved as a garnish. The soft white along the sides of the body can be scooped out in a spoon. There are little bits of meat where the legs attach to the body and there is even a little piece of meat in the front behind the eyes.

LOBSTER SALAD

If there are leftovers, either because you planned ahead and tossed an extra lobster in the pot or because some of you didn't eat the bodies or all of the claw and tail meat, the obvious use is a lobster salad on a bed of lettuce the next day. It's also a way to present the tomalley in a more innocuous form for the squeamish.

Pick the bodies and leftover claws and such for all the little bits of remaining meat. Cut larger pieces down to bite size. Finely dice celery and mix the meat, celery and tomalley with just enough homemade mayonnaise to hold the salad together and provide a complementary taste to the meat. Chill before serving. Leftover mayonnaise, for other uses, will keep in the refrigerator for at least a week.

Homemade Mayonnaise:

1 clove garlic
3 egg yolks
¼ teaspoon prepared mustard
⅓ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1½ to 2 cups olive oil or half olive oil and half vegetable oil

Mince garlic in blender or food processor. Add egg yolks, mustard and salt. Process until mixture is thick and foamy. Add lemon juice and process 10 seconds. With the motor running, add the oil a few drops at a time until mixture thickens, then continue adding remaining oil a little more quickly until all the oil has been incorporated. If the mixture is too thick add a few drops of lemon juice.

Makes about a cup.

LOBSTER ROLLS

Lobster rolls are always made with hotdog rolls, and always the kind with soft sides, because the roll is simply a vehicle for the lobster salad and should have no role in the taste sensation.

The roll should be slightly toasted, just enough to give it slight rigidity. The lobster salad should be made with commercial mayonnaise (some people prefer Miracle Whip) rather than homemade for the same reason a hot-dog roll is used: it does nothing to detract from the lobster flavor.

Beef Council shares serving suggestion

Here is a pot roast recipe from the California Beef Council:

ALL-AMERICAN POT ROAST

4 pound bone-in beef chuck 7-bone roast
3 tablespoons oil
2 cups red wine vinegar
1 onion, chopped
3 cloves garlic, chopped
¼ cup Dijon-style mustard
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1½ teaspoons dried thyme leaves
8 new potatoes, halved
4 carrots, sliced
¾ pound green beans, cut up

¼ cup water

Trim excess fat from pot roast. Brown the pot roast in hot oil in a Dutch oven. Mix the beef broth, vinegar, onion, garlic, mustard, Worcestershire sauce and thyme; pour it over the pot roast. Simmer, covered, 1¼ hours.

Add potatoes, then cover. Simmer 15 minutes. Add carrots and beans; cover again. Simmer until the beef and vegetables are tender — about 15 minutes longer.

Remove the vegetables and beef; keep them warm. Strain the cooking liquid and skim the excess fat. Mix flour and water. Heat the liquid to boiling, stirring in the flour mixture. Cook and stir until it's thickened.

Cut the pot roast into slices and serve with vegetables and gravy. Serves eight.

Braker writes on baking

Hearst News Service

Flo Braker's "The Simple Art of Perfect Baking" has been hailed as one of the best baking volumes in years by Paula Wolfert, Pierre Franey, Bernard Clayton, Alice Waters and other famous food writers.

But Braker doesn't seem to have let the extensive praise go to her head. She says a big reason she wrote the book was that she's made so many baking mistakes in her years of teaching that it seemed a shame to waste them.

With her son Jeff, 24, and daughter Julie, 21, grown, Braker faced the rather common decision of what to do now that the children were on their own. She'd intended as a student at the University of Michigan, where she met her husband Richard, to go on to law school, but instead the couple moved West.

AS NEWLYWEDS, they didn't have enough money to give frequent dinner parties, so instead Flo would invite people over for dessert. As she baked, she grew more interested in the chemistry of what she was doing, and she grew to love what she was doing.

"If you want to sell a house," she says, "bake a loaf of bread just before the potential buyers arrive; it's the homiest smell there is."

She moved into baking for charities for several years, and from that it seemed a logical progression to try catering and then teaching. The more she baked and the more she learned, the more she realized she shouldn't waste the special knowledge she was acquiring.

She was talking, meanwhile, with famous cook Marion Cunningham, a housewife who made it big in food publishing with a a revision of "The Fannie Farmer Cookbook."

"She's one of the most generous, wonderful teachers in the world," Braker says of Cunningham. "She's just as wonderful and encouraging as possible."

FINALLY, BRAKER sat down and thought very carefully about what should go into a book, wrote a 25-page proposal and sent it to her agent.

One of the attractions about "The Simple Art of Perfect Baking" is how detailed the recipes are. It's like having Flo beside you every step of the way.

HERE'S HER recipe for a crystal almond pound cake:

If you enjoy almond paste, then you'll love the pairing of this moist, rich pound cake, with its sparkling citrus glaze. This delightful cake, which does melt in your mouth, is welcome at brunch as well as after dinner.

Baking Equipment: One 8-1/2-inch tube pan or other 7- to 8-cup decorative baking pan.

Braker's notes:

— "This recipe demonstrates the most effective way to incorporate almond paste into a cake batter.

— "As in other pound cakes, the eggs are the only source of liquid. But the combination of the almond paste and the amount of eggs and other ingredients produces a very moist cake.

— "Make the glaze just before you are ready to brush it over the warm cake. I love applying this glaze to other cakes as a special decorative addition. After the cake has cooled, a thin, sparkling finish appears.

— "If your brand of almond paste is not malleable at room temperature, you can process it for a few seconds in your food processor bowl, fitted with the plastic blade."

CRYSTAL ALMOND POUND CAKE

Batter:
¾ cup (75 grams) sifted cake flour
⅓ teaspoon baking powder
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon lemon zest
1 teaspoon orange zest
5 large eggs, room temperature
1 teaspoon vanilla
7 ounces (¾ cup) almond paste, room temperature
1 cup (200 grams) granulated sugar
8 ounces (2 sticks) unsalted butter, room temperature
Citrus Glaze:
3 tablespoons lemon juice
3 tablespoons orange juice
¾ cup (150 grams) granulated sugar

Oven preparation: Position the rack in the lower third of the oven and preheat to 350 degrees F.

Pan preparation: Using a paper towel, generously grease the bottom and sides of the pan with solid shortening. Dust generously with all-purpose flour, tilt to coat evenly and tap out the excess.

Preparing dry ingredients and flavoring: Pour the flour, baking powder and salt, in that order, into a triple sifter. Sift onto a sheet of waxed paper to distribute the ingredients evenly; set aside.

Grate only the colored portion of the lemon and orange rind for their zests; set aside.

Preparing liquid ingredients: Crack eggs into a small bowl. Add the vanilla, and whisk together briefly just to combine yolks and whites.

Creaming almond paste, sugar and butter: Place the room temperature almond paste in the bowl of a heavy-duty mixer. With the flat beater (paddle) and using low speed (2), break up the almond paste (about 30 seconds). Maintaining the same speed, slowly add the 1 cup of sugar in a steady stream, and beat until it's incorporated. (If you add the sugar too quickly, the almond paste jumps out of the mixing bowl.)

Continue on low speed while adding the butter, tablespoon by tablespoon at a time, taking about 1 minute. Stop the machine after all the butter has been added, and scrape the mixture clinging to the sides into the center of the bowl. Increase the speed to medium (5), and cream until the mixture is lighter in color and fluffy in appearance (about 3 to 4 minutes).

Adding prepared eggs: With the mixer still on medium speed, pour in the eggs, cautiously at first, tablespoon by tablespoon. After each portion of the eggs has been absorbed into the mixture, add more. If at any time the mixture appears watery or shiny, stop the flow of eggs and increase the speed until a smooth, silken appearance returns. Then decrease the speed to medium and resume adding the eggs.

Continue to cream, stopping the mixer and scraping the sides of the bowl at least once. When the mixture appears fluffy, velvety and white, and has increased in volume (including the time to add the eggs, about 2 to 3 minutes), detach the beater and bowl. Tap the beater against the edge of the bowl with enough force to free the excess.

Adding dry ingredients and flavoring: Using a rubber spatula, stir in the lemon and orange zests. Then stir in the flour mixture, about one-half at a time, scraping the sides of the bowl often and mixing until it's smooth after each addition.

Filling prepared pan and baking: Spoon the batter into the pan, and spread it level. Bake for about 45 to 50 minutes, or until the sides begin to contract from the pan, the cake springs back when lightly touched and a wooden toothpick inserted comes out free of cake.

Removing cake and applying glaze: Place the cake on a rack to cool for 5 to 7 minutes while preparing the glaze.

Pour the lemon juice, orange juice and ¾ cup of sugar into a small bowl; stir with a pastry brush to blend.

With mitts, tilt and rotate the pan, and gently tap it to see if the cake is releasing from the metal sides. If not, or if in doubt, run a small metal spatula or the thin blade of a table knife between the outer cake edge and the metal rim, freeing the sides and allowing air to get under the cake as it is rotated.

Turn the cake out onto a cooling rack, and position it over a sheet of foil or waxed paper (it will catch any drippings when the glaze is applied). Brush the entire surface of the warm cake with all of the glaze.

Cooling and storing the dessert: Allow the glazed cake to stand for at least 4 hours or until it is completely cool and the glaze has set like a sheet of crystals before you remove it from the rack to a serving dish. Lift it by crisscrossing two large metal icing spatulas under the cake.

Serve at room temperature. This dessert can't be frozen because the glaze breaks down and becomes watery when it's defrosted. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Picnic fare gives Italian flavor to summertime fun

By JAMES R. GRAY
Hearst News Service

Picnic time is here, and with it picnic foods — edibles that can be simply prepared and served cold or at room temperature. But what if you can't face another potato salad or fried chicken? How about some Italian food?

Italian food? We're not talking spaghetti and meatballs or pizza. We're talking "Cucina Fresca," a terrific cuisine from the new cookbook of the same name.

The cookbook is the result of an odd marriage of ideas — Italian in inspiration, American in outlook — developed by Los Angeles chef and food writer Viana La Place and cafe-pizzeria owner Even Kleiman. Together, the two have blended the earthy simplicity of Italy's culinary tradition with America's new emphasis on light, healthy food, and have come up with a winner.

The resulting fare is astounding in its depth and yet amazingly simple and straightforward. Fresh ingredients abound, as does pasta and the ever-present olive oil (buy the best; extra-virgin, if available). And this food travels well, making it ideal for serving on a blanket or picnic table, where hot temperatures are difficult to maintain.

Here's a sample of cucina fresca:

PAPPA AL POMODORO
(Serves four to six)

2 garlic cloves, peeled and chopped
¾ cup fruity (dark green) olive oil
1 bunch fresh sage leaves, stems removed, or 1 to 2 tablespoons dried sage 1½ pounds day-old bread, cut into small, thin slices
1½ pounds ripe tomatoes, peeled, seeded and pureed, or a large can (28 ounces) tomatoes, pureed with their liquid
Coarse salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
Grated Parmesan cheese for garnish

Saute the garlic briefly in the oil in a saucepan on a high flame. Add the sage and bread to the pan. Mix with a wooden spoon until the bread turns golden to medium brown. Add the tomato puree, salt and pepper. Bring to a boil and boil for five minutes, stirring constantly. Add just enough cold water to cover the bread-tomato mixture. Bring to a simmer. Cover and cook over a low flame, stirring often for at least 30 minutes or until it achieves a consistency between thick and runny; it should "grab" the spoon. Serve the soup tepid and garnish with Parmesan cheese.

GARLIC SOUP
(Serves four)

½ small onion, peeled and minced
6 garlic cloves, peeled and coarsely chopped
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 medium baking potato, peeled and sliced.
4 cups chicken broth
1 cup light cream
2 tablespoons sour cream
Coarse salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

Briefly saute the onion and garlic in the oil in a medium saucepan. Add the potato and chicken broth. Bring to a boil. Lower the heat and simmer until the potato and garlic are soft. Puree the mixture in a blender or food processor. Pour the soup into a bowl. Place in the refrigerator to cool. To serve, stir in the light cream and sour cream. Season with salt and pepper.

PENNE SALAD
(Serves four to six)

1 pound cooked bay shrimp
5 tablespoons olive oil
1 pound penne pasta
1 can (28 ounces) peeled Italian tomatoes, or eight large tomatoes, peeled and seeded
1 cup fresh mint leaves, minced, or 1 tablespoon dried mint leaves, crumbled
Coarse salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

Saute the shrimp in two tablespoons of oil in a skillet until pink. Set aside. Cook the pasta according to package directions. Drain.

To make the sauce, puree the canned or fresh tomatoes with their juice in a food processor or blender. Heat the remaining olive oil in a medium skillet. Add the tomato puree and cook over medium heat, stirring occasionally, for 10 minutes. Add the shrimp, mint, salt and pepper and continue cooking until the sauce reduces slightly, about five minutes. Let sauce cool. Toss with the pasta in a large bowl. Serve cool.

INSALATA DI RISO SELVATICO
(Wild rice salad: serves four to six)

2 boxes (four ounces) wild rice
¼ cup pine nuts (pignolis)
8 to 10 sun-dried tomatoes (optional)
½ cup black oil-cured olives, pitted
1 tablespoon minced fresh parsley leaves
½ cup olive oil
¼ cup red wine vinegar
Coarse salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

Cook the wild rice in an abundant amount of boiling salted water in a large pot for 35 to 40 minutes, or until the grains have almost doubled in size and are tender but still chewy. Drain the rice in a sieve and run cold water over to cool. Drain thorougly. Toast the pine nuts lightly in a skillet over low heat until golden brown. Let cool. Combine the drained wild rice in a bowl with the pine nuts, sun-dried tomatoes, olives, parsley, olive oil, vinegar, salt and pepper. Toss gently to mix. Serve tepid.

POLLO TONNATO
(Chicken with tuna sauce: serves four to six)

1 carrot, peeled and thinly sliced
1 celery stalk, thinly sliced
½ medium onion, peeled and thinly sliced
3 tablespoons olive oil
½ cup dry white wine
3 whole chicken breasts, split, skinned, boned and excess fat trimmed
SAUCE:
1 can (7 ounces) chunk light tuna in oil, drained
½ cup olive oil
4 tablespoons lemon juice
6 canned flat anchovies
1 tablespoon capers
Coarse salt (optional)
Capers and thin lemon slices for garnish

Use a skillet just large enough to hold the chicken breasts in one layer. Saute the sliced vegetables in the oil in the skillet, covered, over low heat until the vegetables are wilted, about 10 minutes. Add the wine and cook another 2 minutes. Add the chicken breats, cover and cook for 10 to 15 minutes, depending on thickness of chicken breasts. Let cool in the broth.

Combine the tuna, olive oil, lemon juice and anchovies in a blender. Blend until smooth and light-colored. Stir in the capers. Add salt if necessary.

Cut the chicken breasts into ¼-inch thick scallops. Spread a little of the tuna sauce on a platter. Place the chicken scallops on top of the sauce. Cover with the remaining sauce. Wrap tightly in plastic wrap. Refrigerate. To serve, garnish with capers and thin lemon slices.

CARAMELIZED ORANGES
(Serves eight)

8 seedless navel and/or blood oranges
3 cups sugar
1 cup plus 2 tablespoons water
Pinch cream of tartar

Make long, thin strips of peel from 2 oranges. Peel the oranges with a sharp knife, removing all the white pith. Cut a small slice from the bottom of each, to make the oranges stand upright. Blanch the strips of orange peel in boiling water for 5 minutes. Drain in a sieve and refresh under cold running water.

Combine the sugar, water and cream of tartar in a small, heavy saucepan. Bring to a boil over medium heat. Cover and boil 5 minutes, or until the sugar syrup is transparent. Uncover and continue cooking until the syrup registers 250 degrees F. on a candy thermometer or until a spoonful poured into a glass of cold water turns into a hard ball. Lower the heat. Using a long meat fork, dip each orange into the syrup, so that it is covered. Lift out and into a serving dish.

After the oranges are candied, cook the strips of orange peel in the remaining syrup for about 5 minutes. Remove the peel, separating the strands and place on oiled wax paper. When the strips of peel are hard and cool, use them to decorate the oranges. Oranges can be sliced or quartered before dipping, but first let them drain on paper towels for at least 1 hour.

'Composition of Foods' book being expanded

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — For the last 35 years, one of the best-selling books printed by the government has been "Composition of Foods," a large handbook that gives the nutritional values of thousands of items.

Now, as more information becomes available and with the increased interest in nutrition and health, that book is being expanded into a series of 23. Twelve volumes, each dealing with a different category of food, have already been published. A 13th, dealing solely with the nutritional value of beef, is scheduled for publication in September.

Preliminary data made available by the Department of Agriculture reinforce what home economists have been telling students for years: that the more expensive cuts of beef are not necessarily the most nutritious. For example, of the 10 cuts tested, braised lean bottom round has the highest protein content, 31.8 grams. Braised chuck has the highest calcium content, 19 milligrams.

AMONG THE MORE expensive cuts, lean rib roast has the highest niacin content, 4.82 milligrams, and broiled lean sirloin steak the highest levels of thiamin (0.13 milligrams) and riboflavin (0.28). As for calories, beef cuts vary enormously. A broiled lean sirloin steak, for example, has 219 calories per serving, while an eye of round beef rib roast has 183; by comparison, braised beef chuck (lean and fat) has 409 calories a serving.

The most surprising finding, according to Linda Posati, a Department of Agriculture nutritionist, is that beef has a lower level of iron than had previously been thought.

"This was probably caused by the method used in the old way of analyzing for iron," she said. "The older data were based on a chemical method that gave erroneously high values. The new data are based on atomic absorption methods that are far more reliable."

In the old valuation, a 100-gram serving of braised chuck, lean and fat, was listed as having 3.3 milligrams of iron. The new listing will be 2.7 milligrams for that cut. The nutritional values of liver, which is high in iron, have not yet been fully evaluated; they will be included in the handbook, however.

A SPOKESMAN FOR the National Live Stock and Meat Board, Thomas McDermott, said that the industry was aware that the new evaluation would lower the iron statistics for beef, but he added that beef "still has a very substantial amount, especially of the type that is most readily usable by the body."

McDermott said that most of the reduction in iron value, perhaps 80 percent, could be attributable to the change in the method of analysis. The rest, he said, could result from animals being marketed at a younger age. Older animals have a higher iron content.

They are being brought to market younger, McDermott said, because of a switch in cattle breeds to those that produce more tender and lower-calorie meat when slaughtered at a younger age. They do not age long enough to develop the marbling that increases fattiness.

"In the early days, the animals were selected for their ability to survive, animals like the longhorn," he said. "In the mid-1880s, British breeds such as the Angus, Hereford and shorthorn were added to the genetic pool."

IN RECENT YEARS, he said, there has been a move toward introducing exotic breeds into the pool from Continental Europe — the Charolais from France, the Chianina from Italy and the Simmental from Switzerland — two-way cattle that are used for dairy products as well as meat. "They are larger and able to develop into an animal with more meat on the skeletal frame," he said, "and they are being cross-bred with the British cattle to produce an animal for more meat per unit and less fat. It reduces the fat and, therefore, the calories."

THE CENTER for Science in the Public Interest, a consumer organization based here, disagrees with that assessment. Bonnie Liebman, the center's director of nutrition, said, "Red meat is the largest source of fat and saturated fat in the diet, according to the federal data. Meat comes first, dairy products are second. We've been advised to consume less fat to not only reduce the risk of heart disease but of certain cancers as well."

Miss Liebman added, "Even the leanest meats get a third of their calories from fat."

Miss Liebman also contended that both the government and the meat industry understate the calories in meat by using "imaginary" serving sizes. In advertisements, she said, the meat industry uses three-ounce servings, and the government data are based on servings of 100 grams, which is about 3.5 ounces.

Writing in the May issue of Nutrition Action, the center's magazine, Miss Liebman says, "The Department of Agriculture says that the average American consumes 4.7 ounces of beef at one sitting. The 'average' beefsteak weighs in at 5.7 ounces." According to a spokesman for the Department of Agriculture, the round figure of a 100-gram serving size is used to facilitate calculations when quantities are multiplied.

Unusual pie is teens' favorite

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

The following recipe for Chocolate Chip Pecan Pie entranced a group of teen-age cooks who labeled it "The Best." It has a smooth and creamy bottom layer with chocolate and pecan halves on top. Along with a glass of milk it makes an extra-special offering at snacktime.

CHOCOLATE CHIP PECAN PIE

3 large eggs
1¼ cups light corn syrup
½ cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
6-ounce package semisweet chocolate pieces (1 cup)
1 cup pecan halves
Unbaked 9-inch pastry shell

In a medium bowl, with a fork, beat eggs slightly. Stir in corn syrup, sugar and vanilla just until blended. Stir in chocolate pieces and pecans. Pour into pastry shell. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven 45 to 50 minutes or until a knife inserted half way between the outside and the center comes out clean. Cool on a wire rack.

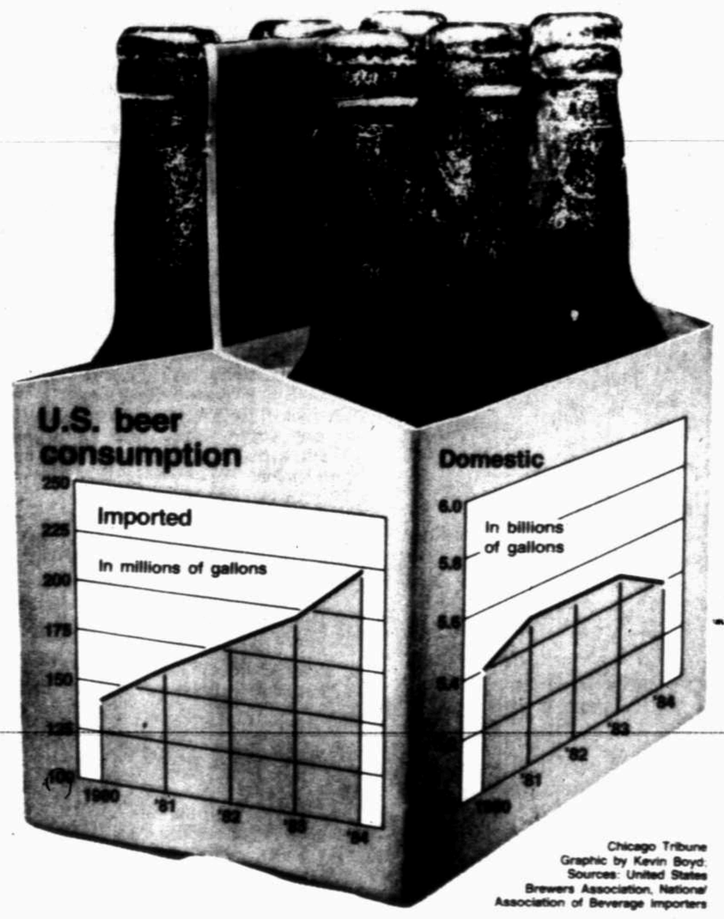
Expert gives stout defense of beer

By MICHAEL JACKSON
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

DENVER — This is going to sound crazy, but it's true. I'm British, and I live in London, but around this time every year I come to Colorado for a beer or two. In London I earn my living by eating in haute cuisine restaurants, writing about food and wine — and I have a special place in my palate for beer. That's why I come to Colorado.

Sometimes it seems to me that one has to live in Europe, or at least on the East coast, to get a fix on what is happening in Colorado. Perhaps it's a question of distance lending perspective. Or maybe it's just that people in places like London and New York talk so much about the lifestyles of the sunrise states. Here, one doesn't talk about it, one is meant to be living it.

That still doesn't explain, though, why more people in Washington, D.C., seem to know about Boulder Beer — to take just one example — than do people in Colorado. I'm not just talking about Boulder Beer, of course, I'm talking about the whole phenomenon.



Chicago Tribune
Graphic by Kevin Boyd.
Sources: United States Brewers Association, National Association of Beverage Importers

IT'S A phenomenon that people still can't quite grasp, perhaps because it has crept up on them. It's been six or seven years since some of the younger, trendier restaurants started augmenting their wine list with a similar card of beers. Even then, most of them did it badly. They started from the premise of quantity, not quality. They competed as to who had the biggest beer list, but they didn't tell their customers the difference between a Pilsener and a Munchener, an ale, a stout or a porter.

Now that is changing. Restaurants are beginning to explain that wheat beers are most refreshing, Pilseners the best aperitis; that porters and stouts go well with shellfish, ales with red meat, dark lagers with spicy foods. Such notions sound decidedly European but I have seen them best executed in the United States. True, imports from Europe have helped broaden the gastronomic perception of beers in the United States, but that is only one aspect of a much deeper change.

The New American Cuisine helped. New American restaurants have, from the beginning, tended to take a serious attitude toward beer, but recently a number have started to stock beers exclusively from the United States. The best example I have seen is the American Festival Cafe, in Rockefeller Center in New York City.

THIS RAISES an interesting question: How many American beers are there? Archie Bunker could probably name only two, or perhaps three. Archie Bunker, though, is not the New American Beer Drinker. The NABD could probably name six or seven worthwhile domestic brews. How about you? How many breweries do you suppose there are?

I hear a tone of doubt here. Aren't breweries places that close down? Haven't they been going down like ninepins (the British version of tenpins) for years? Well, yes and no. Breweries have been closing down for years, but in the past decade they have also been opening. The closures have been outpaced, greatly, by the openings.

There are still old-fashioned, family companies in the East and Midwest that are sleepily waiting to be washed away, but there are other tiny independents who realize there is now a new market for craft brews. So do the giants. A few years ago, Anheuser-Busch was phasing out its dark beer; now Michelob Classic Dark is featuring full-page color ads. Miller may be better known for light beer, but its latest product is an unpasteurized super-premium called, quaintly, Plank Road (that's the address of the brewery).

A FEW YEARS ago, the giants were so committed to processed beers that they would snappily deny that pasteurization flattens the palate of a brew with any complexity. Now Miller is actually advertising the fact that Plank Road is not pasteurized. Coors, of course, never was pasteurized, but the company nonetheless settled some years ago on a one-beer policy. Today, it has a whole portfolio of products, including such offbeat specialities as the copper-colored fruity George Killian's.

There are about 30 old, established brewing companies in the United States, but you can almost double that number if you had the new generation represented by people like Boulder Beer. Across the United States and Canada, there are more than 35 new small breweries, all established within the last decade. Each has won attention in its own locality but the nationwide extent of the renaissance has not come into public focus.

BOULDER BEER has grown so quickly that it already has had to move to new premises. Its impressive brewery and public tasting room in that city already is producing although it doesn't open officially for a couple of weeks. Boulder is very much a regional brewery, set for sales statewide and beyond. Other boutique breweries (a good description for them, though they prefer to be called micro-breweries) are considerably smaller. Some serve only their own brewery-tap pub. Nothing wrong with that — it's how the brewing industry began.

Still, I don't come to Colorado each year (and bring a bunch of Britons and assorted Europeans) purely to drink George Killian's Red and Boulder Extra Pale Ale. I come because here, under one roof, I can sample the widest range of American beers anywhere in the United States. Just about every worthwhile American beer, in fact.

The Great American Beer Festival, which will be held this weekend in Denver, is a unique occasion because nowhere else in America is there a comparable side-by-side open-to-the-public tasting of the nation's native beers.

WHEN NOSING, tasting and enjoying the beer, I will be looking for the floweriness of aroma and dryness of finish imparted by the hops. I will be investigating the balance of that dryness with the sweetness of the malt and fruitiness of the yeast.

I shall be looking out for a tart, dry, dark wheat beer called Dunkleweizen from the Hibernia Brewery of Eau Claire, Wis. I have heard good things, too, about recent brewings of Pilsener beer from August Schell, in New Ulm, Minn. When it comes to the extra-dark, roasty-tasting porters and stouts, I'm wondering what the Columbia River and Yakima, Wash., brewing companies have to offer. As a lover of classically fruity ales, I have always enjoyed Sierra Nevada, but last year received a splendid surprise from Riley Lyons of Little Rock, Ark. What will this year hold?

German brewery moves to U.S.

New York Times News Service

RALEIGH, N.C. — Unlike his German forebears, H. Reid Hoke could never develop much of a taste for beer — especially for the American variety.

He found the flavor unappealing — too much the same from brand to brand — and the brew itself too highly carbonated. Besides, he says, it gave him headaches.

But like a sinner who has found a new path to salvation, Hoke became an instant convert to the joys of beer drinking during a 1980 trip to West Germany, the land of his fathers — so much so that he is now starting his own brewery, Deutsch-style.

Hoke found that German lager provided a taste totally unrelated to American brews. It also left him free of headaches and hangovers, he says.

Hoke, 28-year-old president of the Raleigh Brewing Co. and an entrepreneur with vision, doesn't simply intend to imitate German beer. He means to make the real thing.

HOKE HAS imported the entire workings of a 350-year-old German brewery, which he hopes will be producing beer before the end of the year. For the moment his brewery sits dismantled in a Raleigh warehouse — two huge copper drums and a complex array of pipes and fittings, which, when finally assembled, will enable him to create a brew far more full-bodied and flavorsome, he says, than the standard American product.

"We have a brewery capable of making anything from a doppelbock (a heavy and very potent dark brew) to alcohol-free beer."

As soon as he finds a new home for his brewery — he hopes for a site not far from Raleigh's handsomely landscaped governmental plaza — Hoke will bring over an Austrian engineer to assemble the complex and a German brewmaster to supervise production.

"The only thing that will not come from Germany," he says, "is the water and the glass for bottling."

And the water, he says, might as well come from the purest mountain stream that ever fed the Rhine. "We will filter out the chlorine, the fluoride and any other minerals in there until there is nothing left but pure H2O."

BUT WATER is only a small part of the secret. The real test of the beer-making process, he says, is in the rate of fermentation. "It is a real specialized process," he says. "The slower you ferment the beer, the better it is.

Hoke's "microbrewery" will be one of more than 20 that have sprung up throughout the country in recent years. It is the first in North Carolina and the second in the Southeast — the other is in Virginia Beach, Va. — and the only one to be imported wholesale from Germany, down to the last pipe and drum.

Many of the nation's microbreweries have been fashioned from reconstituted dairy equipment. Others have come from England — modular breweries which Hoke says are designed primarily for the production of ales. "A completely different process," he says, and one in which he has little interest.

Not only does he hope to produce a "flagship" lager that will be available on a continuous basis; he also hopes to produce a variety of seasonal beers, everything from a spring Marzen (from the German for March) to an Oktoberfest brew.

Few American brewers, if any, adhere to a 1516 Bavarian law, the Reinheitsgebot, which defines beer as a product made entirely from barley, yeast, water and hops. Any other element is strictly verboten. All German brewers now subscribe to the Bavarian formula.

"IT'S A time-proven method," he says. "We aren't going to add any corn and rice the way American breweries do. You can read on their cases how they use the best corn and rice and barley and all this stuff. But that's not the German way. That's just a way to cheapen the product."

But beer drinkers who look upon their brew merely as a hopped-up Coke or Pepsi may not find Hoke's concoction to their liking — not at first, anyway. For one thing, a true beer fancier will be able to drink it warm as well as cold. "If it has a good taste there's no need to hide it by serving it too cold."

What kills the taste of American beer, as he sees it, is pasteurization — another "evil" he plans to avoid. The heating of beer to kill bacteria changes the taste "amazingly," he says.

Hoke has developed a quality control program and marketing process — "It will always be kept cold, and there will be an early expiration date" -which he says will satisfy the North Carolina Department of Agriculture that pasteurization is unnecessary. The process will also be complicated — and expensive, though he eventually hopes to sell his product at a price comparable to or slightly below most of the German imports.

Brews vary for what 'ales' you

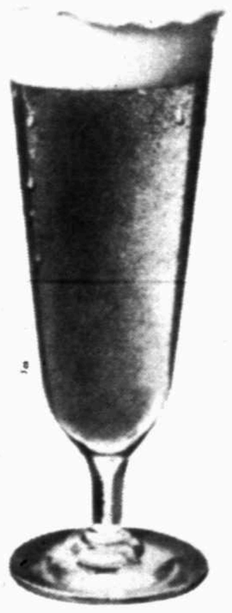
DENVER — Here is a brief rundown of various kinds of beer available:

PILSENER — This is the type the American beer drinker has in mind when he thinks of beer. All everyday American beers are, however loosely, based on this style: they are golden in color, dry and have a definite flowery hop aroma. The style takes its name from the town of Pilsen, in the state of Bohemia, Czechoslovakia. It was in Bohemia that brewing emerged as a trade in modern times. There are, however, many other types of beer and several are available at the festival.

MUNICH DARK — When an American brewery produces something it simply calls a "dark" beer, it usually turns out to be the type first made in Munich, West Germany. This type of beer should have a solid dark-brown color, be slightly sweet without being in any way cloying, and have a malty aroma.

BOCK — This is the bigger brother of the Munich type. "Bock" is the term used in Germany for a strong beer, and these brews are usually produced for a seasonal celebration, especially in springtime. Some are tawny in color, others are dark brown. Again, there is a sweet malt accent. Although a bock should have the kick of a billy goat, most American examples are only slightly stronger than regular beers. If, for example, an American brewery's regular beer has 3.75 percent alcohol by weight, its bock might have 4.25 percent.



The two types described above are classically made by a process involving a slow, cold maturation. There is a separate group of beer types produced by an older technique that classically involves a warmer fermentation and a shorter period of maturation.

PALE ALE — This is the British type of beer. Colonial settlers introduced to the Eastern seaboard, where it still retains its greatest popularity. After a period of great decline, ales are enjoying something of a revival in several parts of the United States. British ales usually have a copper color and so do the best of the American examples. There are, however, a number of Canadian and American ales with a golden color. The defining characteristic of an ale is its fruity palate, ideally with a depth of hop bitterness. Most American examples have an alcohol content of over 4 percent, but an ale can be brewed to any strength.

PORTER — Classically made by the ale process, but with the use of highly roasted malt to produce an almost espresso-like palate. Yet this brew is less assertive than its cousin, stout. Several of the ale breweries also produce porters and stouts, both of which are almost black in color.

STOUT — Similar to porter, but with a fuller body and a distinct roasted-barley flavor. The word "espresso" on the label intimates "chocolate." Often, as in the case of the famous Guinness stout, it has a bitter, burnt-chocolate character.

ALT — The German word for old refers to a traditional beer brewed in the Dusseldorf region of Germany before the introduction of lager brewing. It is a copper-colored ale with an alcoholic strength greater than 4 percent by volume. It is less vinous in nature than its cousin, English ale.

WEIZENBIER (wheat beer) — Weizenbier contains a 40 percent to 75 percent proportion of wheat malt to barley malt, much more than its north German cousin weiss (white) beer whose sour fermentation is best expressed by the world rekowned Berliner Weisse. Weizenbier is usually medium to full in body and possesses an alcoholic content of 5 percent by volume or higher.

American Rieslings trail German ones

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

As a wine producer, the United States competes favorably with the products of every other nation.

Our Cabernet Sauvignons are stern competition for Bordeaux. As French Burgundy declines in quality, California Pinot Noir becomes a superb contender. And the Chardonnays of today are good matches for anyone's White Burgundy.

Only in Riesling is America trailing. Germany remains predominant in this field. Yet in the last year or two, American producers have made considerable progress, accomplishing more with the Riesling grape than ever before.

In the recent past a problem with Riesling in California has been the wine makers' insistence on gaining full ripeness, which has led to wines of uncommonly high (by German standards) alcohol. Riesling made in Germany is rarely above 9 percent alcohol, and it is not unusual to have 7 percent and 8 percent alcohol Rieslings. (In many areas of Germany, the grapes can't fully ripen, and the lower sugars in them result in lower alcohol in the wine.)

Because California gets an overabundance of sun, the Riesling grape ripens fairly fully, and in the past we have seen Rieslings with 12.5 percent and 13.5 percent alcohol. These have the delicacy of a mace and chain.

Fresh foods, seasoned properly, are never out of style

By NANCY JENKINS
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Mesquite-grilled chili peppers and goat cheese over buckwheat pasta may be all the rage in some circles, but more and more New Yorkers seem to be combing through cookbooks, markets and restaurant menus in search of something called, with a wonderful indifference to precision, good-tasting food.

Good fresh food — chicken, fish, vegetables, fruit or meat — is an extraordinary thing. It should be the best quality that money can buy or that time and effort can produce. And it should be seasoned with authority to bring out the flavor of the ingredients without masking or muddying them.

More extraordinary still is the discovery that finding such foods, or creating them, requires so much on the part of the cook.

"Properly seasoned food is the hardest thing in the world to get right," says the cooking expert Paula Wolfert. With that in mind, it seems worthwhile to figure out what people mean today when they talk about tasty, well-seasoned food, and to determine some of the principles and techniques for making food taste good and good food taste better.

AMERICANS ARE NOT known as adepts at seasoning. Too much of what we eat is bland and indifferent in taste, often the result of the cook's cowardice. Or it is overseasoned to the point that it burns the mouth and threatens to dissolve the taste buds.

The revolution brought about by nouvelle cuisine, hackneyed as some of its concepts have become, has forced us to reconsider seasonings: once classic preparations had been stripped of their thick sauces, it became possible to use seasonings more subtly to emphasize the flavor of the primary ingredients. At the same time, the more recent focus on regional American cuisine has introduced new ways of seasoning. Think of the enormous variety of chili peppers from Mexico and the Southwest; used judiciously to spark a dish without extinguishing it, they too have their place in cuisine.

The traditional combinations are often still the best: tomatoes and fresh basil, fish poached in a dill-flavored court-bouillon and served with dill mayonnaise, chicken with tarragon or rosemary, lamb roasted with plenty of garlic and served with savory beans, to mention just a few. Paula Wolfert believes that we should learn to recognize these "natural affinities," combinations that taste better in concert than any single ingredient on its own.

Why they work is difficult to analyze. Certainly, chemistry plays a role. For the cook, however, it is important to understand only that it is the balance of flavors that makes these combinations seem so right: bland with sharp, fatty tastes with more acid ones, warm-flavored foods with cool ones. So it is that the warm, spicy aroma of basil and the cool acidity of tomatoes seem a perfect marriage.

ALL TOO OFTEN, however, our store cupboards contain nothing but ancient jars of dried thyme, basil, tarragon and red pepper flakes, so old that they add little more than the flavor of dust to a dish. It is a notable lapse, considering that fresh herbs are more available than they used to be.

Even on supermarket produce shelves, fresh basil, dill and coriander (known in Spanish as cilantro) have almost become staples. (If dried herbs are the only things at hand, however, remember that their flavor is highly concentrated; roughly, a teaspoon of dried equals two tablespoons of fresh. Crumble the dried herbs in your hand before using them, and they will release more of their aromatic oils.)

Herbs are not the only seasonings to consider. There are spices, too: cinnamon and cloves, much neglected in American cooking except to season sweets, but used to lend warmth and body to Middle Eastern and Mediterranean dishes.

Sugar should not be discounted as a seasoning either. A teaspoonful, especially with acidic ingredients such as tomatoes, as cooks from Italy to China know well, can blend and mellow a sauce without lending it more than a gentle hint of sweetness.

Similarly, a small amount of bitter chocolate can pull together certain strong-flavored sauces, like the red-wine sauces that accompany game or rabbit, giving them a deeper and more rounded flavor than they might otherwise have. And the juice of a fresh lemon, squeezed over grilled steak, seems to bring out the taste in a way that no amount of salt will do.

BOTH HOME TRUTHS and new ideas can be applied to the task of producing these well-seasoned foods. The Louisiana chef Paul Prudhomme, for instance, says the key is to season each ingredient separately, before combining them. "Season the fish, season the egg wash, season the flour and season the oil in the pan," he says.

Steven Picker, a young chef at Woods Gramercy in New York, says the best cooks understand the individual characteristics of each item in a recipe, in terms of what it can and cannot do. "If you understand what each specific food item is, how it tastes, how it works in cooking, then you can intelligently put it together with other things," he says.

The fresher the better is still the basic rule, however, for producing good-tasting food. For vegetables and fruits, that means seasonal produce, even if the season is in New Zealand and the freshness relies on the speed of jet transport.

Those of us who cook and eat in the Northeast should not have to go that far. This is the start of the season for local fruits and vegetables. In New York City, the Greenmarkets are opening with bright flowers, fragrant herbs and crisp, fresh produce; in particular, asparagus and strawberries from South Jersey, along with sweet sugar snap peas. It is a good time to take advantage of this bounty, putting foods together to enhance and clarify their natural flavors.

THIS ALL BRINGS us to questions of taste. There is no accounting for it, people say, and they may be right — "one man's meat ... " and all that. But while tasteless factory-raised chickens, bland frozen vegetables and canned fruits in sugary syrups may have their place in our culture, no one can seriously argue that they really taste good.

By contrast, almost everyone will agree that a fresh, free-range chicken, raised on a farm where it scratched for food, roasted and basted with butter or virgin olive oil, perfumed with sprigs of rosemary and perhaps a hint of garlic, asserts its flavor in a very special way; it tastes meaty and mouth-filling, the way chicken is supposed to taste.

Producing such combinations is not a matter of throwing ingredients together and hoping for the best.

Wise cooks understand that if a little seasoning tastes good, a lot will not necessarily taste better. A little dill in the court-bouillon used to poach salmon sharpens an otherwise bland liquid, while its acidity balances the fattiness of the fish. But a whole bunch of dill thrown into the water will mask the fish's flavor entirely. The ideal is to taste the sweet, nutty flavor of the salmon with an almost indefinable aftertaste of dill.

Similarly, a tablespoon of Grand Marnier will enhance a macedoine of seasonal fruits by sharpening the taste of each fruit and making it more authoritative. A half-cup of Grand Marnier will make the whole thing hopelessly alcoholic.

Sometimes the finest seasonings are the most basic: butter, salt and pepper. Fresh spring and summer vegetables, like the sugar snap peas from New Jersey in the Greenmarkets now, benefit most from a light steaming and a swirl in a buttery pan. Sea salt and ground aromatic pepper (try a mixture of black pepper, white pepper and allspice in equal quantities) finish the dish.

FOR SOME PEOPLE, food tastes better cooked low and slow, simmered for hours in a covered pot so that all the flavors blend imperceptibly and the whole becomes richer than any of its parts. Others prefer food cooked fast and hot and served immediately, so that each ingredient can be savored as a unique part of a balanced whole.

But whether fast or slow, good-tasting food will result if cooks combine the best ingredients with the wisdom to ignore fashion when fashion conflicts with quality, and the patience to season appropriately and then to taste, test, think — and then taste again.

Wise cooks taste the food others have prepared and what good chefs make in good restaurants. They taste each ingredient in a dish, the raw and the cooked. They taste, above all, while cooking.

What are we looking for in our tasting? In a sense, good cooks create a mental construct of what they think the dish should be like, tart or sweet, pungent or rich, with subtle undertones of one seasoning or another.

The following recipes have been selected and developed to illustrate these points.

The first recipe is an example of a well-seasoned sauce to be served as a garnish, cooked apart from the main item and intended to complement it, not flavor it directly. It can be served with red snapper fillets or with other fish, or might nicely balance a plain grilled chicken.

EGGPLANT, TOMATO AND RAMPS SAUCE
(Woods Gramercy)

1 medium eggplant (about 10 inches long)
8 ripe plum tomatoes
3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
1 bunch ramps, thinly sliced, about ½ cup (see note)
1 tablespoon fresh thyme, roughly chopped
2 tablespoons fresh basil, roughly chopped
3 tablespoons white wine
Salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste.

Preheat oven to 500 degrees. With fork, prick eggplant in several places to keep it from bursting; place it on a baking sheet and put in the oven. Let roast until it is thoroughly soft and skin is brown and shriveled, about 20 minutes. (Roasting the eggplant over a charcoal fire will lend a very pleasant smoky aroma to the finished sauce.) When cool enough to handle, peel eggplant, discard skin and chop flesh into rough chunks about ½ inch square.

While eggplant is roasting, bring a pan of water to a rolling boil. Dip each tomato in boiling water for 15 seconds to loosen skin. Peel tomatoes, cut in half and squeeze out seeds. Finely chop tomato flesh and set aside.

Add olive oil to skillet. Over medium heat, saute chopped ramps in the oil until softened. Remove with a slotted spoon and set aside. In remaining oil, over medium-high heat, saute chopped eggplant, stirring constantly, for about three minutes, until it starts to brown.

Add reserved ramps, chopped tomatoes, thyme and basil. Toss to mix well. Add white wine. Saute over medium-high heat five to seven minutes, until the sauce has amalgamated. Season with salt and pepper.

When sauce is done, set aside but do not refrigerate. Just before serving, it may be reheated very briefly. Serve with grilled swordfish or halibut steaks or with fillets of snapper or tilefish. Garnish the sauce, if desired, with more fresh herbs, finely minced.

Yield: Six servings.

Note: Ramps are wild onions or leeks, available only in the spring and much more pungently flavored than their domesticated cousins. If ramps are not available, use two fat leeks. Before slicing, clean and blanch briefly in boiling water. Split in half lengthwise and run briefly under a very hot broiler to brown them a little — this will bring out the flavor.

Except at the height of summer, it is difficult to get very tasty fresh tomatoes. If the tomatoes taste bland, a half-teaspoon of sugar and a teaspoon of vinegar added to the sauce will give it a more balanced flavor.

ROMAN STUFFED TOMATOES
(From "From Nika Hazelton's Kitchen")

6 medium to large fresh tomatoes
1 tablespoon, approximately, salad oil
½ cup olive oil
½ cup chopped parsley
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 cup rice
2 cups hot chicken bouillon
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
⅛ teaspoon ground cinnamon.

Preheat oven to moderate (350 degrees). Cut a slice from the top of each tomato, then scoop out seeds and juice; take care not to break the walls. Strain juice and, if necessary, add water to make six tablespoons of liquid. Lightly oil a shallow baking dish with the salad oil. Put tomato shells in the dish and sprinkle two to three tablespoons of olive oil over the shells.

Heat remaining olive oil in a heavy saucepan. Add parsley and garlic and saute over medium heat three minutes. Add rice and cook 3 minutes longer, stirring constantly. Add chicken bouillon. Cover and cook 10 minutes, or until rice is almost done.

Remove rice from heat. Add salt and pepper to taste, and cinnamon. Fill tomato shells with rice mixture. Over each, pour about a tablespoon of reserved tomato juice-water mixture. Bake 30 to 40 minutes, until rice is tender and liquid is absorbed. If rice shows signs of drying out during baking, baste with a little hot water. May be eaten hot, at room temperature or cold.

Yield: Six servings.

ROAST LAMB WITH GARLIC

1 leg of lamb, 4 or 5 pounds, bone in
5 cloves garlic
1 tablespoon sea salt
1 tablespoon freshly ground black pepper
1 tablespoon sugar
4 ounces slab bacon
1 tablespoon olive oil
1½ cups thinly sliced yellow onions
1 cup red wine
2 bay leaves
1 tablespoon chopped fresh thyme, or ½ teaspoon dried.

Preheat oven to 450 degrees. Trim lamb of any visible fat or skin. Peel garlic cloves and slice. Then, using the point of a sharp knife, prick the flesh of the lamb and insert a slice of garlic in each incision, using all garlic. Rub lamb with salt, pepper and sugar (the sugar helps give it a caramel-brown color) and place on a rack in a pan and put in the hot oven. Let brown 15 minutes; turn over and brown 15 minutes more. Remove from oven.

While lamb is cooking, cut rind from bacon and slice into small lardons, about ½ inch long. Bring small pot of water to boil. Add bacon pieces, return to boil and drain immediately.

Heat olive oil in a braising pot large enough to hold the lamb leg. Saute bacon lardons in the oil until brown. Remove and set aside. In the bacon fat, saute sliced onions over medium-low heat until soft and a golden color; this will take 15 to 20 minutes. When onions are done, remove, draining well, and set aside. Discard remaining fat. Wipe pot with paper towel to remove all traces of grease.

Place lamb in braising pot. Deglaze pan in which lamb was cooked by adding wine and, over high heat, scraping the brown bits from the bottom. Add resulting wine gravy to the braising pot. Decrease oven heat to 300 degrees.

Add onions, bacon, bay leaves and thyme to lamb. Add water if necessary — the liquid should barely cover the onions and bacon. Bring to a simmer over medium-low heat, cover and place in 300-degree oven. Cook 2 to 2½ hours. If you wish to add sage-flavored beans (see recipe), do so after 1½ hours of cooking time. When done, the lamb may be served immediately or set aside, Mediterranean fashion, to cool to just above room temperature before serving. Serve with onions, bacon and, if used, sage-flavored beans.

Yield: Six servings.

SAGE-FLAVORED BEANS

1 pound small white beans
4 cloves garlic
2 large sprigs fresh sage
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
Salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste.

The night before cooking, soak beans in abundant water. (If there is not time, cover beans with water, bring to a boil, let boil 2 minutes and then soak for an hour.) Drain beans and discard soaking water. Cover beans with fresh boiling water.

Place beans over medium-low heat and add three cloves of peeled garlic, the sage and the olive oil. Cover beans and leave to cook over gentle heat until beans are soft and tender, but not mushy, about 50 minutes. Check pan from time to time, and add a very little boiling water if it seems necessary.

If you are serving beans with roast lamb with garlic (see recipe), add them now, with their liquid, to the pot containing the onions, bacon and lamb. If you are not serving them with the lamb, continue cooking in their own liquid. Either way, add fourth clove of garlic, chopped, and salt and pepper. Simmer gently about 30 minutes. This should make a thick "sauce" to go with the lamb. If it is too watery, raise heat to further reduce the liquid before serving.

Yield: Six servings.

Note: Beans can be served on their own or as an accompaniment to lamb, another meat or chicken. They can also be served as a room-temperature salad, with extra oil, a sprinkle of balsamic vinegar and chips of raw red onion to garnish.

Dead soldier's papers trouble man

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Before his death some 15 years ago, a friend of mine showed me some identification papers he took from the body of a German soldier he had killed shortly before the end of the war. He said that for years he had felt guilty for having consigned another soldier — even an enemy — to an unknown grave. He asked me to translate the papers and forward the information to the German authorities so the soldier's family would have definite information about his death. With my meager high school knowledge of German, I translated the information and promised to forward it to the proper authorities.

I delayed doing the task, stored the papers away and forget about them. I came across them recently, and I'm wondering if, at this late date, I should do something about the matter. I feel strange to be the only person in the world to know the final saga of a dead soldier whose family must still be wondering about his fate.

I decided to ask your advice. After all these years, would it be better to withhold this information and let the survivors alone in the resignation they have probably achieved by now? Would I open old wounds by forwarding the papers? Or if I should reveal the information, whom shall I contact?

I will be grateful for your advice and abide by it. — V.H., SANTA FE, N.M.

DEAR V.H.: The families of soldiers missing in action never forget. I assure you they would be thrilled to have this information. Enemy or ally, that soldier was somebody's son, brother, husband, lover or father. Please write to: Bundesarchiv-Zentralnachweisstelle, 5000100 Aachen, Kornelimuenster, Abteistr 6, West Germany.

DEAR ABBY: "No Names, Please" complained because her parents and her husband's never offered to keep the grandchildren so they (the parents) could get a little rest.

Well, we are grandparents who have been denied the pleasure of having our grandchildren overnight.

Why? The parents say we "spoil" the children because we let them eat, drink and do whatever they want. We also let them stay up late to watch TV. We're told: "It takes a lot of hard work on our part to undo all the harm you do when you keep the kids overnight."

Abby, isn't it a grandparent's right to spoil a little one? — DOTING GRANDMA

DEAR DOTING: In a word, Grandma, no.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding your letter about unwanted summer guests: My husband and I resolved a similar situation when we built our swimming pool.

We put in a flagpole and sent beautiful announcements to inform our friends and relatives that we had built a swimming pool. We added that when the flag was flying, they were welcome, but when the flag was down, they were not. The flag was placed where it could be seen by those approaching our home.

This system has worked perfectly for 21 years.

Board: Prunes not the pits

Hearst News Service

Say prunes, and people snicker. The dried, wrinkled plum is more frequently considered a laxative than a treat.

Susan Mesick of Ketchum Communications, a public relations agency in San Francisco, is trying to change that. For two years, Mesick, 31, has been known as the "prune lady" — the official spokeswoman of the California Prune Board.

The job, Mesick admits, is not easy. She battles the stigma by urging people to taste a prune. She supervises tastings in shopping malls and train stations and on TV and radio talk shows. She also spreads the word by sending recipes to newspaper and magazine food writers. There are prune buttons and prune trivia, and there is a three-minute prune video.

Last fall the prune board received 303,000 entries in its nationwide sweepstakes. The prize was a 12-day gourmet dining trip for two to France. The contest helped bring attention to prunes in gourmet meals.

Mesick is an easy target for prune jokes. She has heard them all, including:

"I'm sure prunes keep you going at the office."

"Do you keep regular hours?"

And, "That's really the pits."

Mesick always tries to get in a serious word about prunes. When one disc jockey said, "I thought prunes were plums that stayed in the bathtub too long," Mesick explained that prunes are dried plums, containing an average 25 calories each. They're an excellent source of fiber, vitamin A, iron and potassium, she said.

Prunes are a $100 million business for California. They're grown in the Sacramento, San Joaquin, Santa Clara and Napa-Sonoma valleys. But no California town has yet had the guts to proclaim itself the prune capital.

The state last year shipped 146,837 tons of prunes, a 1.4 percent increase over 1983. California produces 98 percent of the nation's prunes and about 70 percent of the world's. Nonetheless, U.S. per capita sales are far below the peak in the 1950s, when dried fruits were a winter staple.

The prune board, which represents 1,700 growers and 16 packers, annually spends a modest $500,000 on public relations and $4 million on ads.

French fries create crisis in Belgium

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — French fries — which are eaten in Belgium around the clock in huge quantities, with or without meals — are in the midst of a credibility crisis.

Test Achats, a respected consumer magazine, found last fall over a third of the greasy potato sticks served here were "unfit for consumption." The headline read appropriately "National Honor At Stake."

Gilbert Van Houtte, a retired army officer and lifelong lover of french fries, saw the crisis looming well before the consumer report made front-page news.

Last year he founded the National League of "Frituristes," which now includes 12 percent of the operators of the 8,000 or so french fries stands that dot — some might say "mar" — Belgian land and cityscapes.

Whoever thought up the name french fries, clearly never traveled to Belgium: they are the ultimate Belgian food.

"When a Belgian goes abroad, he is always confronted with jokes about french fries," said Van Houtte in an interview.

To improve the image of Belgium and its tradition of french fries, known as "frieten" in Dutch or "frites" in French, he created a spritely cartoon character of a two-legged, pointed paper bag chockfull of fries.

Known as "Fred Friet" to Dutch speakers or "Fred Frite" in French-speaking Belgium, its aim is to restore Belgium's name in french fries.

Van Houtte blames the economic crisis for the deterioration of french fries which are so popular here the government includes them in its consumer price index.

As unemployment rose in recent years to 14 percent, vending french fries was a cheap way to start your own business.

"Anyone can open a fries stand ... just like that, no experience required."

Since 1978, he said, the number of french fries stands has doubled in Belgium to about 8,000.

They sell fries in bulging quantities with a sprinkling of salt and more often than not smothered in a variety of dressings from simple mayonnaise to spicy sauces.

In its survey of 55 french fries stands and 10 restaurants, Test Achats found in many cases fries had twice the normal fat content and over half of the vendors used "inadequate" frying oil.

"A total of more than one-third of the samples were in fact unfit for consumption, which can hardly be termed a reassuring result," it concluded. It called for strict quality norms for french fries vendors.

Enter "Fred Frite" who made his promotional debut at the Belgian pavilion at the current high-technology world fair in Tsukuba, Japan.

Van Houtte said his group hopes Fred can become a national symbol as well as a mark of quality as a sticker on fries stands.

Frying potatoes is an art, he added.

"You don't learn it in a day. You have to hear and feel when fries are done. You must hear them ... rustle."

To restore confidence in french fries, Van Houtte wants the government to control the proliferation of french fries stands.

Often converted, rickety campers, these grease emporiums cater to the hungry in urban areas and along just about every highway. They are often open at all hours and sell 7-ounce orders of french fries for an average price of 65 cents.

"The public health ministry now only controls the hygiene of the establishments and some of our members haven't seen a public health officer for 15 years," said Van Houtte.

He sees the crisis in french fries as undermining "a 100-year-old Belgian tradition."

He is not the only one wanting to boost Belgium's name in french fries. Since 1963, Belgium has had a traveling show of french fries art.

It includes paintings and arty photographs of french fries stands, an oversized bag of fries entirely made of lard and the world's largest collection of wooden or plastic forks served with each order of fries.

Most bridge players complain that they don't hold enough good cards. On this deal, East could rightfully complain that he had too many!

If East intended to bid four hearts on his own, it is logical to argue that he should have made that bid in the first place. However, that would not have kept South out of the auction—he had too much in this case.

Against four spades West led the top of his partner's suit. Since there was no point to holding up, declarer won the ace and cashed the king of spades, only to learn that a seemingly simple contract had become difficult because of the unexpected trump loser. It seemed that the contract might hinge on a diamond finesse, but declarer opted for another line.

Because of his bidding at his vulnerability, East was almost certain to have every missing high card, so declarer elected to try for an end play instead. At trick three, he simply exited with a heart.

TOO MANY RICHES

East won the jack of hearts but he did not enjoy the prospect of having the lead. He tried the best he could by playing the king of clubs, but declarer had an effective counter ready—he ducked and allowed the king to hold. Now East had no safe card to play. A heart would give declarer a ruff sluff, and either minor suit would present declarer with an extra trick in that suit, thereby permitting him to avoid losing a diamond trick.

Declarer's simple maneuver meant that he had limited his losers to one trump trick, one heart and one club. East could complain with some justification that too many high cards cost him the chance to set an opposing contract.

Elton John fights for rights to songs

Elton John

LONDON (AP) — Elton John's former manager took advantage of the rock star's youth and inexperience when he gained rights to 169 songs eventually made into records that sold for a total of $260 million, John's lawyer said.

John, 38, went to court Tuesday demanding that his former manager, Dick James, give him profits and rights to all the songs the singer made between 1967 and 1975, including "Rocket Man," "Crocodile Rock," "Daniel," "Goodbye Yellow Brick Road" and "Candle in the Wind."

Attorney Mark Littman told the court that John and his songwriter friend Bernie Taupin signed the first of the three agreements in 1967 after being caught making unauthorized use of James' recording studio to record their own demonstration tapes.

James gave them 100 pounds — then $280 — as an advance on royalties, and the two were so elated they did not read the agreement and would have signed anything, Littman told the court.

John, who was then Reginald Dwight, was 20 and Taupin 17. Littman said that because they were under 21, they had to get their parents to sign the agreements.

The full amounts of James' profits and of John's and Taupin's royalties have not been disclosed. British lawsuits do not specify the amount of money being sought.

James has said he had nothing to do with the agreements in a personal capacity.

NEW YORK (AP) — Yoko Ono wants to keep the name of her late husband, John Lennon, off products of "unsatisfactory quality," says a licensing agent who will sell the rights to use the name of the famous ex-Beatle.

"For example, if you wanted to make 'the John Lennon piano,' you'd come to us," said Marilyn Goldberg, president of Marigold Enterprises, which has acquired worldwide rights to Lennon's estate.

Proceeds — expected to reach an estimated $20 million over seven years — will help set up a John Lennon museum in New York that will include facilities for young musicians, exhibitions and a store, said Ms. Goldberg.

Ms. Ono, 50, signed the licensing deal because "there have been illegal items produced in the marketplace that are of unsatisfactory quality," Ms. Goldberg said.

Marigold also will publish selections from drawings done by Lennon and will sell the rights to photos, posters, greeting cards and clothing.

Elizabeth Taylor

NEW YORK (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor has been discharged from a California hospital following tests for injuries she sustained after wearing a 50-pound skirt for a television film, her publicist said.

Miss Taylor was admitted to Santa Monica Hospital on May 24 and discharged Friday following tests for what her physician, Dr. William Skinner, described as "severe neck and back problems of degenerative cervical and lumbar sacral spine disease and secondary muscle spasm," Chen Sam, Miss Taylor's spokeswoman, said Tuesday.

Skinner advised the actress to cancel her schedulefor two weeks and to continue "intense physiotherapy," Miss Sam said. He felt surgery was unnecessary, she said.

Miss Taylor injured her back after donning a 50-pound period skirt during filming of "North and South," an ABC miniseries set in South Carolina.

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — While Arlo Guthrie was on stage here, a thief was busy in the folk singer's dressing room, stealing a bag containing airline tickets and other items, police said.

Guthrie told police Sunday that his bag was taken at the Temple of Music and Art either Saturday or Sunday while he performed, police said.

The bag contained two airline tickets valued at $1,070, a crystal pendant, a synthesizer operator's manual, a telephone book, an appointment book and a shirt, police were told.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Fans of actress Mary Tyler Moore with $329,000 to spare can acquire — and live in — a nostalgic memento of the 1970s television comedy that carried Minneapolis into America's living rooms.

The "Mary Tyler Moore house" where Mary and her gang "lived" is for sale again, 6,000 square feet of old wood and beauty in Minneapolis' Kenwood section.

Real estate broker Bob Glancy, one of two agents listing the house, slips as he describes the house, making it sound as though Mary Tyler Moore is a Minneapolitan and still lives in the city.

"The main part of the house has three full baths and three half baths, and then the apartment that Mary lives in has two more full baths," Glancy said.

Ms. Moore's appeal to Minnesotans — a 1976 Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce survey showed that Ms. Moore, a Californian, was the third-best-known Minnesotan behind Hubert Humphrey and professional baseball player Harmon Killebrew — has perhaps increased the appeal, if not the value of the house, Glancy said.

Pancake fans may face maple syrup shortage

New York Times News Service

ALBANY, N.Y. — Pancake eaters will face a shortage of maple syrup by the end of the year, according to farmers in the Northeast who produce most of the nation's supply.

"We will not have enough maple syrup," said David Marvin, a major producer in Johnson, Vt.

"I think it's going to be scarce," said Roger Sage, a farmer in Warsaw, N.Y., who is president of the State Maple Syrup Producers Association.

The anticipated shortage is the result of a 3 percent drop in production in New York and New England this year combined with the exhaustion of carryover supplies and an increase in demand, they said.

Those factors have already led to a 40 percent increase in the wholesale price of maple syrup sold in bulk to packagers — from $1 a pound last year to $1.40 a pound this year, Marvin said.

"I think that the price is still going up, and that means the retail price will go up too," said Lloyd Sipple, a farmer in Bainbridge, N.Y.

So far, however, retail prices at farm stands have remained steady or gone up only slightly, according to the farmers.

Although Marvin said he had raised the price of a gallon of syrup at his retail outlet to $22, up $3 from last year, Sage and Sipple both said they were maintaining their retail price at $22 a gallon, the same as last year.

The farmers made their comments after the release of 1985 production figures by the State Crop Reporting Service in Albany. The figures show that total production in New England and New York fell to 966,000 gallons this year from a million gallons last year.

Together, New York and Vermont produce more than two-thirds of the nation's maple syrup. In the 1985 season, which ended in April, Vermont produced 525,000 gallons, down from 530,000 last year, and New York produced 315,000 gallons, down from 332,000 last year.

Smaller amounts are produced in New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Maine. In addition, small amounts are produced in Wisconsin, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Michigan, and some maple syrup is imported from Canada.

The Crop Reporting Service estimated that the total income to maple syrup farmers in New York and New England for 1985 would be $18.1 million, up from $17.8 million last year.

In Vermont, the total value of production was put at $9.5 million; in New York, $5.7 million; New Hampshire, $2.2 million; Massachusetts, $509,000, and Maine, $239,000.

Maple syrup is the first crop of the year for New York and New England farmers. They tap maple trees from late February to early April.

The syrup is made by boiling down the sap, with 40 to 50 gallons of sap required to produce one gallon of syrup. This year, it took, on the average, 46 gallons of sap to produce one gallon of syrup, according to the Crop Reporting Service.

Results indicate test scores up for MISD students

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland public schools students' test scores are up.

This is according to a summary of the California Achievement Test and the Texas Assessment of Basic Skills Test results for 1984-85.

The results, presented to the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees Tuesday, showed that at every grade level (1-10), the mean percentile score for the total test battery (combined reading, language and mathematics) increased from last year.

In addition, MISD scores are well above the national average at each grade level and above what experts predicted given students' group cognitive skills index scores.

The CSI, according to MISD Superintendent Dr. Joseph Baressi, is similar to an IQ score in that it serves as a predicter of student performance. Achievement test scores are predicted using the CSI results. The comparison of the predicted score with the actual score indicates whether a student or a group of students is underachieving or overachieving.

The California Achievement Test is administered annually to all students in grades 1-9 and to the bottom half of the 10th-grade class. Individual scores are reported to parents while group scores are used by teachers and principals to analyze campus programs and to set goals.

Information presented to trustees indicates this year's classes range in reading from four months above the national norm at both the first- and third-grade levels to one year and four months above the norm at the eighth-grade level. Math ranges from six months at the the first- and second-grade levels to two years and two months at the ninth-grade level. Language shows a range from three months above at the first-grade level to two years and five months above at the fifth-grade level.

Only fourth grade reading showed a decline; dropping below the 1984 scores by .2 of a percentage point.

Results of the Texas Assessment of Basic Skills test for 1984-85, a state-mandated exam, were similar to past results, according to Baressi.

The test, administered annually to all students in grades 3, 5 and 9 and to students in grades 10, 11 and 12 who previously failed to master the elements of the test, is a minimum competency test. Results are reported in terms of the percentage of students who master each item. State-wide scores will provide additional data for comparison later this summer.

Trustees also took final action in approving revisions of board policy concerning the evaluation of school personnel.

The revisions specify that the personnel appraisal shall be a cooperative continuing process which rates an employee's performance as clearly outstanding, exceeds expectations, satisfactory, below expectations or unsatisfactory. Such an appraisal shall be considered by trustees prior to any Board decision to not renew any employee's term contract.

With the approval of the superintendent or his designee, a principal or unit administrator may place an employee who is under his/her supervision on a district-level mandatory improvement plan, the revisions specify. The mandatory improvement plan may be administered only when the employee's supervisor assesses that his/her performance is deficient to the extent that such a plan is warranted.

Trustees also shall not renew the contract of an employee who is on a district-level mandatory improvement plan for more than 175 consecutive instuctional days or has been placed on more than two district-level mandatory improvement plans during the same 175-instructional day period.

In other business, trustees:

— Appointed Main Hurdman Certified Public Accountants to audit the financial transactions of the 1984-85 school year.

— Authorized the district to apply for federal funds for the Chapter I, II and migrant programs.

The district requests it receive $705,256 Chapter I monies, $513,043 migrant funds and $116,676 for the Chapter II block grant.

— Heard reports of the district's special education and foreign language programs.

— Accepted 16 artificial Christmas trees, a drinking fountain, thermofax printer and furniture for the teacher's lounge as gifts from the Sam Houston Elementary School Parent-Teacher Association.

Preliminary budget shows district will operate 7.7 percent over '84-85

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A preliminary budget for 1985-86 shows the Midland Independent School District will operate at 7.7 percent over 1984-85. The reason being an increase in teacher salaries, equipment, travel and other costs.

Donald R. Furgeson, MISD business manager, told trustees Tuesday that the term "operating budget" is defined, for purposes of this preliminary analysis and comparison, to mean proposed costs for 1985-86 less expenditures for bonded indebtedness, food service, print shop and the federally funded programs.

The total dollar increase in the operating budget for 1985-86, as compared to 1984-85, is $3,357,757, or 7.3 percent above the previous year's level. When adjusted for pupil average daily attendance, an increase of 4.5 percent is visualized, he said.

Proposed increases in salaries and benefits in 1985-86 amount to $2,515,068, or an increase of 6.7 percent over 1984-85. The increase includes 38 new teaching positions, seven new support staff, the additional career ladder allocation and the local contribution to teacher retirement.

The total amount budgeted for salaries and other payroll costs is $40,071,593, or 81.3 percent of the operating budget, Furgeson noted.

The 1985-86 budget for purchased and contracted services is increased by $134,122 or 4 percent resulting in the addition of computer maintenance and the increase of $98,000 in utility costs.

Increases in the 1985-86 operating budget for supplies and materials total $173,804, or 7.7 percent over 1984-85.

According to Furgeson, the per student allocation for classroom materials is "increased 5 percent" while the enrollment for the allocations shows and "increase of 709 (students) or 4 percent."

Special material for new programs are included in this expense category, he added.

Increases for other operating costs (travel, fees, awards, insurance) amount to $80,127, or 8.1 percent over the 1984-85 budget. Furgeson said the most "significant increases occur in the areas of building and vehicle insurance and athletic travel."

Finally, increases in capital outlay for equipment, furniture, library books, vehicles, land improvements and building renovations for 1985-86 amount to $454,636, or an increase of 25.7 percent from 1984-85. Major areas of increases are in roofing paving, asbestos removal, purchase of school buses and additional computers, Furgeson said.

Bishop: Church must return to 'balance' of early Methodism

From Staff Reports

The United Methodist Church is doing more than any other protestant church to help relieve hunger and suffering around the world but is often missing the mark in its own local parishes in the United States, Bishop Louis W. Schowengerdt told United Methodist lay persons and ministers from across Northwest Texas Tuesday.

Schowengerdt opened the 76th session of the Northwest Texas Annual Conference of the United Methodist Church, meeting this week at First United Methodist Church here. He said the United Methodist Church needs to return to the balance of early Wesleyan Methodism.

He said the church must continue to express itself to the needs of those in hunger, pain and suffering around the world; however, the UMC has placed so much emphasis on social action that some of its local churches have lost members because of this emphasis.

"In the early Methodist societies, the emphasis was first on a relationship with God," Schowengerdt said. "Second was the sharing of that faith with others and then, third, was expressing that faith in political action so that the social order would be more Christ-like. The roots of the faith are our relationship with God, and the branches of the faith are the changes in the social order.

"In our time we have centered on the branches and neglected the roots. We are doing a much better job of expressing God's love globally than we are in helping persons in our parishes experience God's love personally."

He said local churches need to help teen-agers who are trying to deal with drugs or struggling for acceptance, to help parents whose children reject them, to encourage persons who have lost their jobs and are struggling financially, to assist those who have achieved material success but find their lives empty or persons struggling with moral issues.

Convicted killer's pre-trial hearing starts

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

A pre-trial hearing on charges of capital solicitation of murder got under way in 70th District Court at 11 a.m. today for convicted murderer John C. Skelton.

The 55-year-old Skelton, under death sentence for the April 1982 bomb killing of 46-year-old Joe Lee Neal, is accused of trying to hire his stepson and another man to kill two former business associates.

The Ector County grand jury indictments, naming Skelton on four counts of capital solicitation of murder, were handed down the same day 161st District Court Judge R.L. McKim sentenced Skelton to death in July 1983.

70th District Court Judge Gene Ater, according to a stack of some 116 pre-trial motions and a nearly one-inch thick transcript of Skelton's 1983 trial, said late Tuesday afternoon he planned to spend the rest of the day, and probably much of the night, reading the documents to familiarize himself with the case.

Ater said he expected the pre-trial hearing to last until late this afternoon.

Skelton's trial on the murder-for-hire charges will still be held in Fort Worth, on a date Ater will set today, but the judge decided holding the pre-trial hearing in Odessa would save taxpayers money. He granted a change of venue motion submitted by Skelton's then-attorney, Jim Vollers of Austin, and transferred the trial to Fort Worth because of the amount of publicity in Skelton's first trial.

VIEWPOINT

Most Midlanders not worried about possibility of tornado

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Midland is in the midst of another tornado season, but it seems the severe weather which regularly pummels the Panhandle and South Plains rarely strikes the Tall City. Despite several tornado warnings in the area in recent weeks, nary a funnel cloud has touched down near the city limits.

But one did touch down in Big Spring Tuesday night. And in the past two weeks, National Weather Service radar has spotted possible tornadoes in West Odessa and in southeast Midland County, and the luck Midland has enjoyed in recent years could end with the next storm. Most Midlanders aren't too worried about that possibility, judging from the 13 people polled Tuesday afternoon by the Reporter-Telegram, but the recent twister devastation in Pennsylvania and Ohio has some people concerned. Especially people who live in mobile homes.

"We went ahead and went to a friend's house" during Saturday night's tornado warning, said Linda Carroll, a homemaker who lives in Airline Mobile Home Park. Ms. Carroll's husband is from the Panhandle, so tornado warnings are taken very seriously in the Carroll household. But Lavonda Norman grew up in Lubbock, and she only admits to worrying "a little" about tornadoes.

"I've been in a couple," said Ms. Norman, 705 Dellwood, a production supervisor. But the relative calm of Midland's weather has made her almost as complacent as she feels the average Midlander is about severe weather. That could end suddenly, however.

L. Carroll

N. Mullins-Rice

P. Hallmark

J. Rubac

"All we need is just one good one," she said.

Nancy Mullins-Rice, 504 W. Storey, is already prepared for the big one.

"I panic" when warnings are given, the geotech said. "I'm always prepared to get in the safest part of the house."

Ms. Mullins-Rice feels Midlanders are too complacent about tornadoes, and John. F. Campbell, 1909 E. Pecan, agrees.

"I think most people probably feel they'll continue to go around us," said Campbell, a minister. This attitude, which he described as "very illogical," may not last much longer: "We'll probably have one before too long."

Paul Hallmark is of two minds about tornadoes: he doesn't worry when he's at work, because as a dispatcher for the Midland County Sheriff's Office, he has the whole courthouse to hide under. But at home, "I usually stay up until the storm's over, because I live in a mobile home."

But Jana Rubac, an accountant who lives at 3100 Caldera, doesn't worry about tornadoes "because I grew up with them," and Jack Payne, 1407 S. Moran, thinks most Midlanders "just flat ignore" the radio and television warnings.

"I don't think they're that much of a threat," said the operations manager, noting that relatively few people, as a percentage of the population, are actually killed by tornadoes.

On the other hand, Blythe Thomas, 3814 Holiday Hill, is "scared to death of them." But the secretary admits that like many other Midlanders, she doesn't take cover during tornado warnings.

"People should take more precautions," she said. "In this tornado season, you've got to watch the weather."

But A.J. McCright, 101 W. Pennsylvania, refuses to worry.

"I'm an optimist," said the upholsterer. "It may hit someone else, but it's not going to hit me."

He paused. Then laughed.

"It'll probably hit me tonight," he said.

Doctor: Soviets starving Afghan people

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — A Texas doctor who just returned from a trip inside Afghanistan, said Tuesday that the Soviets are systematically starving the Afghan people to death by bombing irrigation canals and croplands.

Dr. Press Darby, of San Angelo, entered Afghanistan in March for a week to help establish two medical clinics for the sick and wounded. One of the clinics situated in the Kunar province was destroyed Monday by Soviet bombing.

Darby, who returned for a month in April with a band of mujaheedin, or freedom fighters, said, "If these folks don't get some aid today, like soon, they're starving as I stand here." He appeared at a press conference organized by the Committee for a Free Afghanistan.

"Unless they get help, their situation will parallel Ethiopia" Darby added. "Children are dying of trivial disorders, measles, there is a dyphtheria epidemic...20-year-old women look like they've been made up by Hollywood to look 70."

The Soviet Union invaded Afghanistan 5½ years ago, and has since been struggling to defeat Afghan guerrilla fighters. It has been reported that the Soviets have resorted to bombing entire villages and destroying crops, but Darby is one of the few foreigners who has witnessed the devastation.

Darby walked through the mountains with the mujaheedin for a month and ate their rations — bread and tea. He lost 35 pounds in 30 days, and was so exhausted he could no longer carry his camera.

"But they're in there doing the same thing for months, and carrying guns," Darby said of the mujaheddin.

Darby said he could not comment on reports that Pakistani officials along the border are siphoning off much of the money and aid earmarked for Afghanistan, but explained that he had seen no evidence of western assistance in Afghanistan.

The Panshir valley, which was once the agricultural basis of the country, is now "deserted," he said, adding: "I walked for miles, there wasn't anybody there."

Darby paid his own way to Pakistan, and left his solo medical practice untended for three months.

CHURCH

Schowengerdt called on local churches to spread Scriptural holiness to every person in the bounds of their parishes and to design worship services so that the personal religious needs of all living in a two-mile radius of the local church are met, not just the religious needs of those presently attending.

"Today our UMC is more like the Church of England in Wesley's day and less like the movement he founded," said Schowengerdt.

In a statement which drew applause from the crowd, Schowengerdt asked for the realignment of financial and staff resources of the United Methodist general boards and agencies, "so that as much money and staff time is spent in revitalizing the local church as is presently spent in drafting and adopting political action statements."

He asked that general boards lead a movement that would help organize 200 new churches a year and the formation of 2,000 new Sunday school classes of small spiritual-formation groups.

"It is time for us to have a major emphasis on local church revitalization," he said. "It has been said by many of our foreign bishops that the United States is one of the greatest mission fields in the world."

During the opening day, around 1500 delegates and visitors paid tribute to five veteran ministers who are retiring and stood in silent tribute to 10 ministers who have died since the annual conference of a year ago.

The five ministers who are retiring have a total of 204 years of service in the UMC, most of it in the Northwest Annual Conference. Those retiring are:

—the Rev. J. Walter Browers of Lubbock, who has served as treasurer of the Northwest Texas-New Mexico Episcopal Area for the past four years;

—the Rev. S. Duane Bruce, who has served as the executive director of the South Central Jurisdiction for the past 12 years;

—the Rev. J. Lennol Hester of Stanton, pastor of the UMC there for four years;

—the Rev. Roy Havens, pastor of the UMC in Anton for two years; —and the Rev. Royce Womack, pastor of the church at Follett for the past year.

Browers, former pastor of Polk Street UMC, Amarillo, of Central UMC, Albuquerque, N.M., and Travis Park UMC, San Antonio, has almost 49 years in the ministry. Bruce, who has been in Dallas, has 43 years, Hester has 40, Havens has 31 and Womack has 41.

Early Tuesday, a communion service paid tribute to those who have died since the 1984 annual conference. Two ministers were among those memorialized, the Rev. Andrew Neely Motes of Seymour and the Rev. Elra H. Phillips of Big Spring.

Wives or widows of ministers who were memoralized include: Mrs. J.B. McReynolds, Levelland; Mrs. Philip Gates, Cossoday, Kan.; Mrs. Joseph Michael, Wellington; Mrs. S.M. Bean, Slaton; Mrs. W.G. Anderson, Abilene; Mrs. E.A. Reed, Erath, La.; Mrs. Harold Second, El Paso; and Mrs. R.H. Campbell, Amherst.

The first full day of business and worship at the conference was concluded Tuesday evening as Schowengerdt read ministerial appointments to the 244 churches of the conference.

Deputies arrest three men on drug charges

From Staff Reports

Acting on a tip from the Ector County Sheriff's Office Narcotics Division, Midland Sheriff's deputies arrested three men Tuesday afternoon as their car entered Midland County on Interstate 20, and confiscated about a pound of suspected marijuana and a loaded pistol.

"We had some officers set up to intercept them," Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said Tuesday.

Held in Midland County this morning on charges of felony possession of marijuana were Michael Lee Pinick of Odessa, William Clark Baker of California and James Bruce Russell of Colorado. Pinick was being held on a $25,000 bond; Baker and Russell were both being held on $100,000 bonds, according to a Sheriff's Office spokesman.

An unlawful-weapons charge was expected to be filed today against Baker, the spokesman said.

In other reports from law-enforcement agencies Tuesday, Midland police took two teen-age sisters into custody for alleged shoplifting at Sears.

A 15-year-old girl and her 13-year-old sister were arrested about 2:20 p.m. with about $494 worth of clothes in their possession at the store in Midland Park Mall, 4511 M. Midkiff, according to reports. A 17-year-old girl was being questioned as a possible accessory.

Russell Bennett, 1615 Pueblo, reported the loss of a $900 automatic rifle, a $500 videotape recorder and a $500 camera in a Tuesday burglary of his home.

The burglary occurred sometime between 7 a.m. and 6 p.m., and entry was apparently gained by prying open a sliding-glass door, reports said.

Frank Villa, 1400 E. Nobles, reported a burglary which occurred sometime between 8 p.m. Monday and 9:30 p.m. Tuesday. Taken were a $350 air compressor and a $260 saw, according to reports. Entry was apparently gained through a newly constructed room in the rear of the house.

A $400 pistol was reported stolen from a room in the Lexington Hotel, 1003 S. Midkiff.

Richard Vilfer told police the pistol was taken from his briefcase sometime between 8 a.m. and 3 p.m. Tuesday. There was no sign of forced entry, reports said.

Richard Angel, 4900 Polo Parkway, reported the loss of a $250 leather jacket and other items worth a total of $500 from his apartment sometime between 9 p.m. Monday and 10 p.m. Tuesday.

About $530 worth of jewelry was reported stolen by Brenda Hancock, 302 W. Cowden. The burglary occurred sometime between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. May 29, and entry was apparently gained through a west-side window, reports said.

Andy Mancha Sr., 805 N. Baird, reported the loss of a $380 refrigerator, an $85 stove, a $60 dining-room table and $25 curtains were taken by a couple who moved out of their rented apartment without notifying him.

The man and woman left sometime between 6 p.m. Monday and 10 a.m. Tuesday, according to reports.

The condition of 13-year-old Matthew Dawson was upgraded from serious to satisfactory condition and he is expected to be transferred today from the intensive-care unit, a Midland Memorial Hospital spokeswoman said today.

The Dawson boy was injured Monday while riding his bicycle when he collided with a van at the intersection of Wadley Avenue and Whitney Drive.

Man won't leave burned-out home

FARMERS BRANCH (AP) — Every night, after he's chewed a cigar and fed his three dogs, Joe Thompson lies down on a cot in his front yard, covers himself with a blanket and goes to sleep.

He's been sleeping outside since May 18, when the one-bedroom frame house he'd lived in since 1938 burned down and destroyed most of his belongings.

Despite offers from his family and a relief agency for a place to stay, Thompson has refused to leave his house in west Farmers Branch or accept any assistance.

"I hate to depend on anybody," Thompson, 78, said. "I've been taking care of myself since 1922. I've never asked anybody for anything. This is the only house I've ever owned. I like it. I've raised a family here. I just don't want to leave."

The land where Thompson's house sits was rezoned three years ago, and city officials say the rubble must be leveled by June 18 — a month after the fire — and another house can't be built there.

Thompson said that, because of the cost, he wouldn't rebuild even if the city would let him, and he's not sure where he will live now.

Lani Kay Douglas, 22, jokes with some of her classmates after graduation ceremonies at Texas A&M medical school. She is one of the youngest medical students to graduate this year.

A&M medical school graduates 22-year-old

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — For years, Lani Kay Douglas said she wanted to graduate from medical school, begin her career and start a family by the time she was 24.

It looks like she's right on schedule — the 22-year-old woman has become what Texas A&M University officials say is the nation's youngest medical school graduate of 1985.

"I don't think my age made a big difference," Ms. Douglas said after receiving her diploma last week from Texas A&M.

The Texas A&M program, which allows a student to apply after two years of college, emphasizes "the level of maturity and the development of a person as a student" rather than age, she said.

Dr. Joyce Davis, head of the admissions committee for the program, agreed, saying that officials didn't pay special attention to Ms. Douglas' age — 18 — when deciding to accept her.

"Her record and work performance while a pre-med student indicated a very high level of responsibility, reliability and capability," said Ms. Davis.

"Our committee makes performance and not age the major factor," she said. "Some of Douglas' classmates are in their late 30s. Her record, plus what the committee saw as a very mature, capable individual, were what counted."

Ms. Douglas was 16 when she graduated third in her class from a private high school in North Carolina.

She said one of the most difficult adjustments to graduate-level medical school was that she wasn't making straight A's anymore. But she finished the A&M program as one of five honor students in the class of 30 new physicians.

But she said her young age gave her one advantage over some of her fellow classmates — she did not have the additional responsibilities of being a wife and parent.

"It made it a little easier for me not having those family commitments as a student, too. Although those women in my class with families did great, that would have been much harder for me," she said.

Ms. Douglas said she plans to join a residency program in family practice at John Peter Smith Hospital in Fort Worth.

Ultimately, she said, she wants to practice family medicine as an overseas missionary or in a rural community.

"I was interested in helping people even before I decided to work toward medical school," she said. "As a doctor, I thought I would be able to reach out and benefit people."

Washington hopes to woo Ghandi

WORLD

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi departed today for a four-nation trip that includes a visit to Washington, where U.S. officials plan to woo him with high technology and try to offset Soviet influence in India.

The two-week tour is Gandhi's first official trip to the West. The 40-year-old former airline pilot, who returned May 27 from the Soviet Union, will go to Egypt, France, and Algeria before reaching the United States on June 11.

Gandhi told reporters at the airport that India would benefit from U.S.-Soviet nuclear arms reductions and said the U.S. space defense weapons program would increase tensions.

He said he would discuss with President Reagan disarmament, stability in the Indian Ocean region, the transfer of technology, and trade. The agenda does not include discussions on defense, he said. U.S. officials hope to interest Gandhi in American high technology.

The FBI announced last month that it foiled a plot by Sikh terrorists, India's religious minority,to assassinate Gandhi in the United States and sabotage key Indian installations. Gandhi said Tuesday he was not afraid to go to the United States.

Gandhi complained the FBI had not told India about Sikh terrorist plans to sabotage a nuclear power plant in India. "They should have told us," he said, but added that the two governments now were in touch about the plot.

American officials hope Gandhi will be more receptive to close U.S. ties than his late mother and predecessor Indira Gandhi, who leaned heavily on the Soviets for military aid. Gandhi last visited the United States in 1982 with Mrs. Gandhi.

Foreign Secretary Romesh Bhandari told reporters Monday: "Our relations with Moscow and with Washington are based on their own logic and their own merit...Relations with one superpower are not at the expense or detriment of the other."

Relations with the Soviet Union will not be affected by Gandhi's U.S. visit, he said, but he stressed that the visit "is extremely important at this juncture following the visit to the Soviet Union."

The emphasis, he said, would be on "getting to understand and know each other better."

No breakthrough in relations, or move away from Moscow, India's closest friend, are expected.

"Still, if the United States is really determined to improve relations, values India as a democracy and takes appropriate steps, there could certainly be a balancing of Soviet influence," said a senior Indian foreign policy maker who asked not to be identified.

U.S. arms sales to India's rival, Pakistan, are a major irritant, as well as what India considers U.S. inaction to stop Pakistan's reported nuclear program.

Navarro speaks for Pope, while courting the press

VATICAN CITY (AP) — In a world of men wearing black cassocks and Roman collars, the plaid-jacketed Joaquin Navarro stands out.

Some of his views, such as making as much Vatican information available as quickly as possible to the world's news media, also make him unusual.

He has made history of sorts by answering his telephone at 2 a.m. and keeping his office open an extra hour until 3 p.m., the height of the Roman lunch hour.

The 48-year-old, chain-smoking Spaniard, a member of the conservative Roman Catholic group Opus Dei, was appointed by Pope John Paul II last December as head of the press office of the Holy See.

In effect, he's Pope John Paul II's spokesman for the world.

Other laymen work at the Vatican as experts in the Vatican museums, at the Vatican bank or on the security force. But none holds such a visible and sensitive job as Navarro.

"I think the view here is 'let's see how he does,'" Navarro said of himself over lunch at a favorite trattoria, a 5-minute drive in his small Fiat from his office at the Vatican.

He said it with a smile, a few days after having been rebuked in public by one of the pope's aides for a perceived "breach of protocol" during the visit to the Vatican by Prince Charles and Princess Diana of Britain this spring.

Navarro succeeded an Italian priest, the Rev. Romeo Panciroli, the Vatican spokesman since 1976 who was known to the press corps as "Padre Non Mi Risulta," which is roughly translated as "Father I Don't Have Anything on That."

One of his conditions for taking the job, Navarro said, was that he would never issue a "non mi risulta" reply.

Navarro, who holds a degree in medicine and switched to journalism while doing medical research in Italy in the early 1970s, was tapped for the Vatican post while serving as correspondent in Rome of the conservative Madrid newspaper, ABC.

"The pope was looking for a layman, presumably a Catholic, who was a professional journalist in Italy," Navarro said.

He said he didn't seek the job "but as a Catholic I felt it was a service I should accept."

Panciroli's predecessor was a layman who had simply moved over from the Vatican's daily newspaper, L'Osservatore Romano.

Navarro bristles at suggestions that his membership in Opus Dei, in which the pope has taken an interest, played a role in his appointment. He is quick to point out that he was twice elected by his fellow journalists as president of the Foreign Press Association.

With Navarro's appointment, the pope completed a major reshuffle of the Vatican media hierarchy with an emphasis on professional qualifications.

Upon taking the post, Navarro told journalists "I will always try to be on your side." Since then he has had several conflicts with his former colleagues.

Joaquin Navarro, left, receives the keys of the Vatican Press office from Archbishop Romeo Panciroli last December after being named by Pope John Paul II as head of the press office of the Holy See.

The most serious occurred in January when the Vatican took the unprecedented step of bumping a reporter from the papal plane to South America after the reporter had written articles that questioned the merit of the pope's far-flung pilgrimages.

Navarro found himself in a particularly uncomfortable position because the Italian reporter was a friend.

Navarro made clear that he disagreed with the sanction but added "of course, I will defend it."

Schultz tests Allies' ideas on ending SALT II

ESTORIL, Portugal (AP) — U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz begins sounding out NATO allies today on how strongly they oppose the United States ending compliance with the unratified SALT II arms treaty with the Soviet Union.

President Reagan is scheduled to notify Congress next Monday whether he will continue abiding by terms of the 1979 treaty, which never has been approved by Congress. Shultz scheduled meetings with European allies today to discuss that subject and others.

A day in advance of a formal two-day foreign ministers' meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, Shultz arranged separate sessions with NATO Secretary-General Lord Carrington, Foreign Minister Sir Geoffrey Howe of Britain, Spanish Foreign Minister Fernando Moran and Foreign Minister Hans Dietrich Genscher of West Germany.

The administration already knows the allies want the United States to continue abiding by the treaty, but part of Shultz's mission was understood to be gauging the intensity of that feeling.

After today's meetings, Shultz will discuss the matter again Thursday at a closed session of the 16 NATO foreign ministers gathered in Estoril, on the Portugal coast near Lisbon.

Shultz said he will send Reagan a cable Thursday night outlining the allies' views. He is likely to telephone the president as well.

Reagan was expected to make his decision Friday or Saturday, and a U.S. official who spoke on condition he not be identified said the allies would be informed over the weekend.

Shultz on Tuesday refused to confirm reports that he has urged Reagan to comply with the spirit of the treaty instead of outright violating its terms. Reagan has said the treaty is fatally flawed, but that he would abide by its terms as long as the Soviets did so.

Others in the administration are pressing Reagan to stop abiding by the treaty. They contend the Soviets have violated it by developing and testing two new ICBMs instead of the one allowed by the treaty, and by encoding data that would be used to verify information about missile tests.

The treaty would require the United States to scrap an older Poseidon missile-carrying submarine to make way for a new Trident submarine, the USS Alaska, when it begins sea trials in a few months. Deployment of the submarine would put the United States above the 1,200 limit for missiles with multiple warheads.

Shultz reportedly is urging Reagan to put the Poseidon in mothballs rather than dismantle it. Under that course of action, the United States would be in technical violation of the treaty and could reactivate it.

But European allies, who reacted nervously during Reagan's first term to any harsh anti-Soviet moves, fear that if the United States stops abiding by the treaty it will have the effect of undermining nuclear arms talks now under way in Geneva.

However, some U.S. officials say if the United States stops abiding by the treaty, it could actually spur the negotiators to action.

One of the Europeans' main arguments is that if the United States decides to violate the treaty, it could give the Soviet Union a propaganda victory in Europe.

Forces clash at Nicaragua-Costa Rica border

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Heavy fighting between rebels and Sandinista troops erupted Tuesday along the Nicaragua-Costa Rican border.

Meanwhile, Nicaragua proposed a demilitarized zone along the border. Costa Rica's foreign minister, Carlos Jose Gutierrez, said he had not received a formal proposal from Nicaragua but if he did, "it would be duly studied."

Public Security Minister Benjamin Piza, referring to border clashes between Costa Rican and Nicaraguan forces during the past week, said in reaction to the proposal: "After seeing the things that have happened in the past days, I would very much doubt the word of our neighbors to the north."

A statement issued by President Daniel Ortega's office late Monday said the demilitarized zone should be backed by the Contadora Group — Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia and Panama, with French collaboration.

The Contadora nations have been trying to resolve the various Central American conflicts.

Ortega, during a meeting with workers at a Managua textile factory Tuesday, said Costa Rica-based Nicaraguan rebels were crossing again into Nicaraguan territory and there was fierce fighting.

He said Nicaraguan warplanes were bombing the rebels, who he claimed were "acting with the complicity of some members" of Costa Rica's security forces.

Miguel Caracas, a spokesman for the rebels' Revolutionary Democratic Alliance, confirmed that a stiff battle was under way near the border village of La Penca, 150 miles southeast of Managua.

Caracas, in a telephone interview in San Jose, the Costa Rican capital, said Nicaragua's Sandinista governmnent had sent three planes to bomb the rebel positions and strafe a jungle airstrip they had built.

Ortega, told the textile workers, "Mercenary forces, based in Costa Rican territory...with the complicity of some members of the Costa Rican (security forces) are trying to penetrate our territory and they are being bombed at this time by the air force."

"At this moment, our fighters are operating against the mercenary forces in the southern border zone with Costa Rica and our air force is also operating with helicopters and airplanes."

He made no mention of casualties.

In his proposal for a demilitarized zone along the Costa Rican border, Ortega described it as "an urgent measure designed to find an adequate and definite solution" to the fighting there.

Earlier Tuesday, Costa Rica accused Nicaraguan forces of firing mortars and automatic weapons at a civil guard patrol searching for fellow guardsmen missing after an attack last week.

Piza, Costa Rica's public security minister, said Nicaraguan troops shelled the patrol for 15 minutes Monday and also fired at a helicopter carrying Oscar Vidal, director of the civil guard.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Greece swears in Socialists

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Premier Andreas Papandreou pledged today that his new, smaller Cabinet would fight bureaucracy and build an efficient welfare state in Greece during the Socialists' second term as head of the government.

"We have to work day and night to win the battle against bureaucracy, improve state-citizen relationships and fight for the welfare state that must be achieved," Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou told reporters after a 20-minute meeting of the new Cabinet.

Earlier, the head of the Greek Orthodox Church swore Papandreou, 66, and the 17 other members of the Cabinet into office following Sunday's decisive victory over the conservative New Democracy Party.

The 18-member provisional Cabinet, reduced drastically from the Socialists' previous 52-member Cabinet, met immediately afterward. Papandreou retained the defense portfolio and also took on the ministry for northern Greece.

Papandreou touted the country's economic improvement during his first term, saying inflation had decreased and "the real wages of the working people" were improved.

Greece is burdened with 18 percent inflation, 10 percent unemployment and a foreign debt of about $12.5 billion. Papandreou blamed Greece's economic problems on "the international crisis and our bad infrastructure."

Counterfeiter gangs arrested

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — Police have arrested 13 people in connection with two gangs that allegedly distributed more than $100,000 worth of counterfeit dollars and West German marks, authorities said.

Officials at the Federal Criminal Office said Tuesday the gangs, in separate operations, distributed counterfeit bills in both West Germany and the Netherlands.

The authorities described those arrested as Dutch, Italian, West German and Yugoslav nationals. They said the arrests were made on May 31 during raids on homes in several villages in the West German state of North Rhine-Westphalia.

Soviets trapped in Antarctica

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet research ship has been trapped since March in an mass of floating ice off Antarctica, and helicopters have lifted 77 people off the blocked vessel, the official news agency Tass reported.

Fifty-three crew members and researchers remain aboard the Mikhail Somov, Tass said Tuesday, adding that an icebreaker is preparing to depart this weekend to aid the trapped vessel.

Tass said researchers still aboard the ship are continuing scientific observations and are in no immediate danger, although the temperature has dipped as low as 22 below zero.
