The battle between Iran and Iraq has heated up to the degree that many Midlanders are watching it detail by detail.

Syria fears escalation

By ALY MAHMOUD
Associated Press Writer

MANAMA, Bahrain — Syria on Saturday accused Iraq of trying to draw other Persian Gulf nations into its 3½-year-old war with Iran. Iran has promised it would not attack commercial ships in gulf waters if Iraq would also refrain.

Iraq said Friday that it destroyed eight more ships near Iran's main Kharg Island oil terminal, but more than 24 hours later there was no confirmation of the reported strikes.

The Syrian government of President Hafez Assad issued a statement Saturday accusing Iraq of hitting commercial vessels in hopes of drawing other gulf nations into the conflict. It also said Iraq was "sabotaging Syrian efforts to ensure free navigation for all countries" in the gulf.

Iran's U.N. ambassador, Said Rajaie-Khorassani, said Friday his country's air force would not hit gulf ships if Iraq abides by an expected Security Council resolution calling for a halt to such attacks.

"If they abide, we will abide," said Rajaie-Khorassani. He boycotted Friday's opening of a Security Council debate on the latest gulf crisis. The session, which resumes Tuesday, was requested by six Arab gulf nations after air strikes earlier this month damaged Saudi and Kuwaiti tankers.

"Either there is security for all, or there is no security for anyone," Rajaie-Khorassani told reporters at the United Nations. He refused to participate in the Security Council debate because the six-nation Gulf Cooperation Council was seeking condemnation of Iran while making no mention of Iraqi attacks on shipping.

In Bahrain, Foreign Minister Sheik Mohamed Bin Mubarak al Khalifa told reporters Saturday "What we want from the U.N. is (to note) that we are not in a state of war and we do not want to be part of it. ... Iran is attacking our ships and affecting our imports and exports. We want the U.N. to produce a resolution to stop any aggression (and) try to accommodate parties for an agreement for peace."

Syria and Libya are the only Arab nations that support non-Arab Iran in its war with Iraq, which is a member of the Arab League.

Syrian Vice President Abdul-Halim Khaddam and Foreign Minister Farouk al-Shara went to Tehran last week to try to persuade Iran to negotiate an end to the gulf conflict. The Syrian officials conferred with Saudi King Fahd Saturday to convey the results of their talks in Iran.

A spokesman for Lloyd's of London insurers on Friday estimated that 30 to 40 ships have been attacked this year in the gulf during Iraq's blockade of Kharg.

Prolonged Gulf cutoff could double oil prices

The Associated Press

If the escalating Iran-Iraq war cuts off the shipment of Persian Gulf oil, a serious shortage would be unlikely in the short run, but a prolonged cutoff could cause prices to double, analysts say.

The analysts estimate the consuming nations could easily replace two-thirds of the oil that leaves the gulf by ship. Prices still would jump, but not seriously, they say.

A prolonged shutoff would mean much higher prices, with some analysts predicting prices could jump from the current level of $29 a barrel to around $60. But once shipments resumed, prices would fall back, the analysts add.

About 9 million barrels of oil pass daily through the 26-mile Strait of Hormuz, which links the Persian Gulf with the Gulf of Oman and the Arabian Sea. That is about 20 percent of the non-communist world's daily supply.

Wallace: Gulf war shows need for oilfield action

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

As the Iran-Iraq war heats up by degrees, the economic climate in the Permian Basin has warmed by a similar amount. However, the odds are that unless the Saudi Arabian oilfields are hit, the mercury in Midland shouldn't top out as it did in 1979-81.

But Railroad Commissioner Mack Wallace has been gluing together the pieces of the Middle East and its oil supply, and he's nervous about the whole picture that is beginning to take shape. The jigsaw puzzle is showing that unless the United States turns back to the road of energy independence, the Middle East will be back in the driver's seat by the end of the decade.

Reports of Iran and Iraq hitting oil tankers going through the Strait of Hormuz with their crude oil escalated last week. The New York Times also reported that Iran was planning to hit oilfields in Saudi Arabia, and President Reagan suggested the United States sell or lease 1,200 Stinger anti-aircraft missiles to Saudi Arabia.

"The main thing is we're watching it more closely," said Ed Thompson, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Associaton. "Everybody is keeping an eye on it."

He and Ed Runyan, president of AIME, have watched the oil prices go up slightly and the Permian Basin step up its drilling activity. "People are paying a lot more attention to the Middle East. As it worsens, it will have an impact on the U.S.," said Runyan. While the price of crude oil has risen slightly, he doesn't think there will be a significant impact on local drilling unless the prices goes up by about $5 a barrel.

BUT, IF THE Iranians attack the Saudi oilfields, "that's a whole new world," he said.

Midland is the center of the Permian Basin's petroleum industry and its commodity is a product in demand by the world. Out of the Permian Basin flows 20 percent of this country's crude oil supply. From the Middle East the U.S. gets at least 12 percent of its supply, according to Mack Wallace of the Railroad Commission.

Thompson said just the fact that Iran and Iraq keep fighting each other has helped local oilmen "gear up a little. They don't want to be caught unprepared like we were last time."

Rig count shot up to 333 this past week, according to Thompson. And that is higher than what business consultant Jim Williams of Odessa had expected. This is the time of year when the rig count begins to drop. The high point usually is reported in the fall and winter, he said.

"Another thing that causes the rig count to be higher than one would expect is all the equipment prices are considerably lower. There's more incentive to drill even though crude prices have remained flat," said Williams. Equipment can be purchased at one-half or one-third of what it was priced at two years ago, and the cost of labor has dropped.

ONE INDICATION of the sharpened interest in drilling was noticed Thursday at an auction of nine drilling rigs by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. About 500 persons showed up for the auction in Odessa, according to Thomas R. Procopio, FDIC liquidator in charge in Midland. "It appears there's a lot more interest out there than we anticipated."

However, while the FDIC had hoped to get about $3 million on the equipment, only $1.75 million was received. "It was disappointing," said Procopio. "But it met our reserve requirements." The equipment went for 20 cents on the dollar.

Another auction is planned for the Fall, said Procopio, noting that FDIC's advisers had said it should be a better time.

Another indicator of an economy heating up is the rising employment rate, according to Williams. "There's more job orders. People are confident crude prices will retain their current levels."

If Saudi Arabian oilfields are hit, then the price of crude could go back up to $35 a barrel, he added.

Midland County Jail inmate Chuck Harris pitches litter into a county dump truck in the sheriff's working-inmate program.

County prisoners work off jail time

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The jail work "gang" is doing the trash and wash details.

And the prisoners, free of shackles, are — by relative standards — enjoying their volunteer work outside the confines of jail.

"It really does boost morale," said Midland County Sheriff's Lt. Bill Decker. "It gives them a chance to get outside and something to do and work off some of their time."

The program, devised by Sheriff Dallas Smith, is getting the county roads cleared of litter, the county vehicles washed of grease and grime and "will help lessen the burden of taxpayers," the sheriff said.

"Some of them (the roads) really are trashed out," said Decker. "It seems people just litter everywhere."

Non-violent misdemeanor prisoners are attracted to the program because it gets them out of the gloom of jail and into sunshine. Meanwhile, their jail time is cut in half.

"I HAD RATHER be doing this than sitting up in jail," said moustached Chuck Harris, 30. He's serving a 30-day term for his second driving while intoxicated (DWI) conviction.

Harris and fellow inmate Joe Granado, 24, who is serving a one-year term for his third DWI offense, were picking up debris and litter collected along county roads and were pitching the trash into a dump truck driven by Pat Dumont, a county employee. He viewed the work program as "excellent..., very constructive. I think it's real instrumental in rehabilitation."

Granado, who obviously works at enjoying himself on the job, had printed "Flower Power," "Groovy" and "Peace" on the back of truck.

He was spirited.

"We need some women trusties to help us," he smiled. "This is torment."

"No, no," insisted Harris. "That's why they call it jail."

THE INMATES are unguarded. Should they "run," they would be charged with the felony offense of escape and likely would be sentenced up to 10 years in the penitentiary. Working inmates are treated fairly, which, said Decker, contributes to their not wanting to escape.

"I wouldn't ask them to do anything I wouldn't do," he said. "I treat them the way I would want to be treated."

That's not to say they always get what they want.

"I want some overtime," Granado joked but probably wouldn't object to being paid for picking up litter. "I want to work for money instead of for free...I want three for one," he said in referring to his wishing he'd get three days' credit for each day he works.

The sheriff gives the misdemeanor prisoners a choice; they can work and get their sentences halved or they can lay around in the jail and serve out their court-ordered time in full. However, the Texas Code of Criminal Procedure does provide that a misdemeanor offender "shall be required to do manual labor" and "shall be put to labor upon public works."

"It's a law that they can be put to work," Decker said. "But we had rather do it on a voluntary basis." Volunteers are carefully screened before they are allowed to participate in a work detail.

There is no pay, but there are rewards and interesting findings.

Granado said he once found a $1 bill along a road. That wasn't enough.

"I'd like to find a suitcase of $100 bills," he said.

Instead, he stumbled onto dead rabbits, sheep, dogs, horses but no skunks.

THEY PICK UP beer cans and bottles, household trash, car parts, fast-food paper products and "junked" items from people's garages and closets. They also cut weeds and clear culverts of dirt and debris.

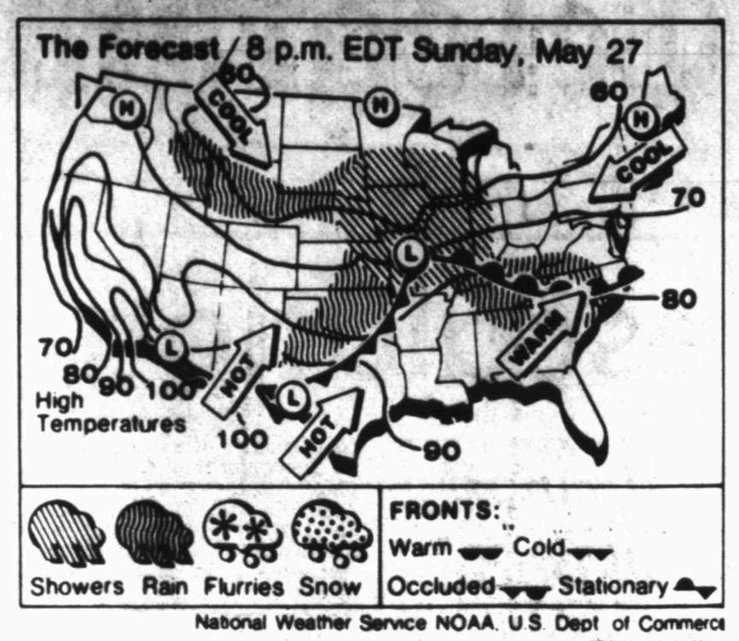
WEATHER SUMMARY



National Weather Service NOAA. U.S. Dept of Commerce
AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service predicts showers today for parts of the northern and central Plains and rain for parts of the Rockies, Southwest and Atlantic Coast states.

Cooler Memorial Day in store for Basin

From Staff and Wire Reports

Memorial Day will probably be slightly cooler than first predicted by the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

While today is expected to be fair and warm with highs in the low 90s, Monday should be partly cloudy and cooler with highs near 80. Southerly winds of 10 to 15 mph are predicted.

Tonight Midland can expect partly cloudy skies and warm temperatures, with lows in the low 60s forecast. Monday holds a slight chance of thunderstorms.

Saturday's high reached 94 degrees, six short of the record 100 set in 1945. The overnight low of 67 was 19 degrees warmer than the 48 recorded in 1947.

STATE

A weak cold front briefly stalled across North Texas near the Red River Saturday and then stretched West near Midland, producing some heavy thunderstorms and showers in the region.

Widely scattered showers and thunderstorms were also reported in southeast Texas and in Beaumont, Port Arthur and Orange. Isolated showers and thunderstorms also dropped much needed rain in the Rio Grande Plains, the southwest and Big Bend National Park.

NATION

The mercury climbed into the triple digits in the Southwest again Saturday and the snowmelt in the Rockies continued to take its toll with some rivers in western Colorado flooding at their highest levels in 27 years.

The Memorial Day weekend also got off to a hot start in southern New England, where temperatures were in the 80s. But, by contrast, it was frosty in the northern Plains with several records set near the turn of the century broken in North Dakota.

Harris reasoned that if people who are prone to drink excessively were in his and Granado's place on the trash detail, "they might think about it" and not drive while they're drunk.

At the Midland County barn, two other inmates, jailed for DWI offenses, were washing down county cars and trucks. Prisoners are not allowed to operate vehicles or equipment.

"Anything beats being up there (in jail); that's for sure," said a 35-year-old inmate. "We do a little bit of everything."

"You get to smoke out here, too," he said.

The sheriff forbids smoking in jail; that rule also applies to his deputies and jailers.

"You don't have a bunch of people messing with you, too," he said.

Another inmate, Mike Guerrero, 26, is serving a 90-day jail term for DWI. By working, he'll only be required to serve 45 days in jail.

"I'd rather be here," he said. "It's something to do. Beats staying in there (jail). Time passes slow when you're sitting in there. I like it here. It cuts your time in half."

Sheriff's Lt. Bill Decker, left, oversees Midland County's working-inmate work program. In the background are Pat Dumont, county dump truck driver, and work-detail prisoners Chuck Harris and Joe Granado.

THE WORK program is an old concept; it's not restricted to Midland. Decker said that one Texas county instituted the outdoor work program but shut it down.

"People (the taxpayers) got to griping because of the extra money they had to pay the deputy (guards)," Decker said. "And, too, I think it was public opinion. If a guy's in jail, they felt he ought to stay there.

"But in Midland County," said Decker, "the response (from the public) I've got on the work program has been very favorable. Instead of just sitting up in jail costing us money, they're out working, saving us money."

Midland County's outdoor work program, which is limited to misdemeanor offenders, was launched in mid-spring. Last year, though, the sheriff was using his skilled felony inmates in county construction work. The workers, either bound for the penitentiary, awaiting trial or in Midland on a bench warrant, were watched by armed guards and were locked inside their work area. Last year, several of the 100 or so inmates in jail remodeled part of the courthouse basement, put in offices and a law library and built cabinets under supervision of Decker and the sheriff.

The remodeling work, estimated by contractors as a $100,000 job, cost the taxpayers about $8,000 in materials and tools. The work was done in far less time than a contractor would have required.

"The prisoners were glad to get out of jail and to do something constructive with their time beside sitting in the jail cells," Decker said.

Other inmates are assigned to in-jail work details, such as doing the laundry, scrubbing, sweeping and mopping and helping out in the kitchen.

"We don't call them trusties," Decker said. "We call them 'working inmates.' "

THE SHERIFF views the work program as "a worthwhile project."

"This will help recoup some of the cost of keeping prisoners," Smith said, and will effect a "substantial savings" to the taxpayers. "As a taxpayer, I get some kind of return on the expenditures we are having to make. These types of projects will help lessen the tax burden."

The Midland County Commissioners' Court has been supportive of the sheriff's work program.

"I give the credit to Dallas," said Commissioner Win Brown. "He's been very innovative."

"It's been very effective," said Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis.

"We are not forcing people to work," the sheriff noted, "but most (misdemeanor offenders) want to work. It's crowded up in the jail, and it gives relief to the system and to the individuals who are working." Smith said he would "assume" the work benefits the inmates' mental health.

"It's been a worthwhile project," he said. "I don't know what kind of money (value) to put on it."

OILFIELD

Spot oil prices have risen about $1 a barrel, said Thompson, adding that he hasn't seen what he termed a "significant" change in prices.

The Associated Press reported Friday that a British news magazine estimated world oil prices are 15 to 25 percent higher than if Iran and Iraq weren't locked in battle. Adding to those rising prices is the increased rates being charged by Lloyd's of London, which underwrites those oil tankers. A typical large tanker now will pay more than $4 million for a one-week trip in the Gulf to the Iranian oil terminal at Kharg Island, compared with $500,000 six months ago.

Thirty to 40 ships have been hit in the Persian Gulf this year and Lloyd's already has paid out $140 million in damages, not counting the ships hit in recent weeks, according to AP.

WALLACE AS a railroad commissioner has been studying news reports on the Middle East for the past year. He's found that the more the United States drives away from its original road of energy independence, the more Saudi Arabia intends to put up a roadblock by 1987.

"The Saudis have told us they're going to use crude as a political weapon in 1987," said Wallace, citing from an Associated Press story published in April. "They used it against us in 1973," he said, recalling the Arab oil embargo during a telephone interview with the Reporter-Telegram.

In an October 1983 newspaper article, Wallace related that the White House said it would abandon its energy self-sufficiency. This philosophy deviates from that established by former President Nixon to become an energy independent country, according to Wallace.

In the meantime, an American company — Bechtel Corporation — will be building a pipeline in Saudi Arabia. And the United States killed a pipeline from Long Beach, Calif., to Midland. "We're building pipelines over there and paying for them ourselves," said Wallace. "We're losing the domestic ability to produce because of government regulations."

Wallace doesn't agree with government officials who say the U.S. has a backup reserve of 90 days in the Strategic Petroleum Reserve. He laughed and explained that while the country has "hundreds of thousands" of producing oil wells, there are only "two or three holes" for pumping out these reserves.

Once pumped out, the crude must be shipped to refineries and then shipped again.

"IT'S LIKE BUYING an ambulance and putting it in the garage for four years and then one day you have an emergency and expect it to run. This Strategic Reserve plan has never been tested. You see my frustrations," he said.

"It is strategically foolish to be dependent on Middle East oil."

The cost of importing that oil has risen over the years, he pointed out, with the price going $4.3 billion in 1972 to $50 billion in 1983. This year the cost should be $60 billion, he said.

If there is a major cutoff of Middle East oil, the United States has an obligation to help other countries which have signed the International Energy Agency Treaty. Those countries are Austria, Belgium, Canada, West Germany, Denmark, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Sweden, Spain, Turkey and Great Britain.

"We're on an Arab yo-yo," Wallace said. "We ought to be building up oil reserves in this country."

Oil, Soviet involvement major U.S. concerns

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — Oil and the Soviet Union are the two overriding concerns as the Reagan administration seeks to keep the Persian Gulf war between Iran and Iraq from taking dangerous new turns.

An oil cutoff could boost prices, perhaps bringing back the long lines at gas pumps that Americans experienced briefly during the 1973 Mideast war.

A wider and decisive war could present new opportunities for the Soviets to line up with the winner or help the loser recoup and plan revenge.

Faced with those awesome but thus far academic concerns, the administration is keeping its cool. President Reagan has all but ruled out sending American forces into the conflict.

Aboard the carrier Kitty Hawk is enough U.S. air power to destroy the Iranian air force and probably prevent the all-out ground assault many experts predict Iran will launch once the roads near Basra, a key Iraqi city, dry out.

It is not being used.

Leveling the air force would set back the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and the tide of fundamentalism his regime in Tehran represents and that much of the Arab world fears.

But, as analyst Robert E. Hunter, director of Middle East affairs at the National Security Council under President Carter, pointed out in an interview, "that would open Iran to Soviet penetration."

Reagan has adopted a policy of restraint, even while tilting slightly in Iraq's direction and letting the Saudis know U.S. power is available as a last resort to keep the shipping lanes open.

He made clear in his letter last week to King Fahd that diplomacy is the course preferred by the United States, with collective action by the Saudis and their Gulf partners a wiser option than using American force.

At the same time, Reagan has warned since October — without being explicit — that he would not stand idly by and see the Strait of Hormuz, the key point of passage in the Gulf, closed to shipping.

There are two goals in the U.S. strategy. The first is to keep Saudi oil flowing. The kingdom produces 4.8 million barrels of the 10.9 million a day that originate in the Gulf. The second is help the Saudis offset any ambitions Khomeini may have to dominate the region.

GULF

Dependence on the shipping lane varies greatly, with Japan getting 55 percent of its oil from the area and Western Europe 33 percent, the Central Intelligence Agency says. But the United States gets only 3 percent of its oil from the Persian Gulf.

Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates, Qatar, Kuwait, Bahrain and Iran use the strait. Iraq, which used to ship oil from the gulf, has relied on its 650,000-barrel-a-day pipeline to the Mediterranean Sea via Turkey since September 1980, when its war with Iran began.

Saudi Arabia also has a pipeline that carries about 600,000 barrels a day to Yanbu on the Red Sea. Analysts say they believe that could be increased in an emergency to 1 million barrels.

In addition, analysts say, oil-producing nations outside the Persian Gulf could increase their production to add 3 million to 4 million barrels a day and natural gas and other fuels could replace a million barrels daily.

Many nations also have stockpiled oil.

Oil reserve could be transported on as little as two days notice

The Associated Press

HOUSTON — The U.S. Strategic Petroleum Reserve stored in underground salt caverns along the Gulf Coast could be ready for transport in two days if the nation's supply be cut because of the Persian Gulf conflict, an official says.

But the paper work needed to start the flow would take three weeks, another official has said.

"If were were ordered to begin movement of crude, we could have the oil at the docks ready to go in 48 hours," said Guy King of the Petroleum Operations and Support Services Inc., a subsidiary of Houston-based Kaneb Energy Services Inc.

About 400 million barrels of crude has been stored in five underground salt caverns in Louisiana and Texas for use in the event U.S. oil imports are interrupted.

King told the Houston Chronicle in a story published Saturday that the reserve crude could be quickly pumped from the caverns in case of an emergency.

During an exercise in February at the West Hackberry in Cameron Parish, La., King said, more than 1 million barrels of crude was pumped in 24 hours.

Partial eclipse of sun visible Wednesday

WASHINGTON (AP) — The dragon the ancient Chinese believed ate the sun during an eclipse won't finish his meal on Wednesday, but he'll take a whopping bite.

The partial, or annular, eclipse of the sun at noon will be visible across most of the nation, with more than 99 percent of the solar surface covered for viewers in the Southeastern states.

Residents of every state except Alaska will be able to see at least part of the sun eclipsed, according to astronomers at the Naval Observatory in Washington. But the experts warn against looking directly at the eclipse.

They report there is a good chance that viewers will see a "diamond necklace in the sky" when the eclipse occurs, a display known as Baily's Beads.

Because of their positions in the sky, the moon appears to be a tiny bit smaller than the sun when it moves in front. If the moon's surface were smooth, a simple ring of light would then form at the height of the eclipse.

But instead, the moon has mountains and valleys. And in the seconds just before the maximum eclipse, light shining between the peaks gives the appearance of bright beads around the moon, a "diamond necklace in the sky," as some have described it.

Baily's Beads were named for their discoverer, 19th century astronomer Francis Baily.

Naval Observatory spokeswoman Gail Cleere said another rare phenomenon is possible during the eclipse — the shadow band effect.

That effect resembles the wavy sunlight bands that can be seen at the bottom of a swimming pool. It is caused by the distortion of light as it passes through the earth's atmosphere.

The best place to view the eclipse is in the Southeast, along a path from just north of New Orleans to just south of Richmond, Va.

Along that line the eclipse will be nearly total, with 99.8 percent of the sun covered by the moon. Across the rest of the United States and Mexico a partial eclipse will also be visible — with less of the sun blocked out farther from the line.

Reagan's Salvadoran policy gains support

By GEORGE GEDDA

An Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — After 3½ years of what often seemed like a lost cause, the Reagan administration last week could claim its policy toward El Salvador finally was making headway.

Just about everything went right for the administration — the visit of President-elect Jose Napoleon Duarte, the guilty verdict in the case of the slain American churchwomen and the unusual display of House support for a military aid request for El Salvador.

President Reagan has long sought bipartisan support for his policy and that goal seems, for the time being, to be within reach. As for the policy toward Nicaragua, there also were signs last week of bipartisanship — against the administration.

Its request for $21 million in aid to the anti-government rebels in Nicaragua went down to a resounding 241-177 defeat, with 24 Republicans deserting the president and joining the Democratic majority.

The House vote reflects the view that American support for the Nicaraguan "contras" has not, as the administration had hoped, induced the Sandinista government to be more moderate and has, instead, contributed to the loss of innocent life and tarnished the U.S. image in the region.

U.S. officials insist that the assistance to the contras has served a useful purpose but they also are confident the armed rebellion in Nicaragua will survive irrespective of whether U.S. aid to the rebels continues. They believe unidentified third parties will fill the void if CIA support dries up.

Meanwhile, the cloud which had hung over U.S. policy toward El Salvador for so long seemed to lift last Tuesday during Duarte's 10-hour visit to Capitol Hill.

With Duarte's election, he became a rallying point for both the administration and its liberal critics in Congress.

"He's our kind of man," said Rep. Clarence Long, chairman of a key appropriations subcommittee. "His case is a strong one and he makes it well," said Rep. Michael Barnes, another influential subcommittee chairman who, with Long, a fellow Maryland Democrat, has been among the administration's most vocal critics on El Salvador.

Duarte told the lawmakers he planned to remove Col. Nicolas Carranza, head of the Treasury Police, which has the reputation of being the most ruthless of the Salvadoran security services. The day after Duarte's Capitol Hill visit, the Salvadoran high command confirmed that Carranza was being reassigned to a post in West Germany.

The favorable trend for the administration continued on Thursday when a Salvadoran jury found five former National Guardsmen guilty in the slaying of the four American churchwomen.

That verdict, coupled with what one official called Duarte's "virtuoso" performance on Capitol Hill, set the stage for the impressive display of House support later that day for the administration's $61.7 million request in emergency military aid for El Salvador.

Republicans were almost unanimous in their support and were joined by 115 Democrats.

A final source of gratification for the administration was the report released Thursday on the churchwomen's case which was prepared by former U.S. District Judge Harold R. Tyler.

Disputing those who had accused the administration of indifference to rightist terror in El Salvador, Tyler said that, without the constant prodding of American diplomats and other officials, the killers of the churchwomen never would have been brought to trial.

But, as officials here note, the situation for the administration — and for El Salvador — could sour for Duarte if, after his inauguration next Friday, he fails in his effort to persuade extremists of the right and the left to join the democratic process.

The officials also wonder whether Duarte will be able to eliminate the death squads and the network in the military that supports them, and whether he can reorganize the military so that it can become a more effective fighting force than it has been.

The first major challenge for the military could come in the fall when officials anticipate the guerrillas will embark on a major offensive aimed at ensuring that Duarte's experiment in democracy will not survive its infancy.

CIA, 'contras' have resources to continue war

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nicaraguan rebels and the CIA have enough military resources until Oct. 1 when a congressional cap on U.S. aid to the "contras" expires, The Washington Post reported.

The U.S.-backed "contras" fighting the Marxist government of Nicaragua have enough stockpiled munitions to continue the covert war, the newspaper reported in today's editions, quoting unnamed intelligence sources.

The CIA has little money left to underwrite "contra" operations but there are funds to pay for the agency's own personnel and equipment in Central America, the sources told the Post.

The House voted this week against appropriating additional money for covert aid to the Nicaraguan rebels during the fiscal year that ends Oct. 1. The Senate has voted to give the rebels $21 million worth of emergency aid. A House-Senate conference committee must resolve the issue when Congress convenes after its Memorial Day recess.

Travelers report soldiers sent to quell riots in Haiti

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Two travelers arriving here from the northwest end of the island say two truckloads of soldiers were dispatched to the town of Gonaives to stop riots.

The travelers, in separate accounts, said the soldiers arrived Thursday in Gonaives, which they said was under a dusk-to-dawn curfew. The sources refused to be identified.

Gonaives, a town of nearly 40,000 people, is 100 miles northwest of the capital.

The government information office said it had no word on the reports.

Were guards acting on their own?

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Americans close to the four churchwomen slain here 3½ years ago say they want further investigations into whether high officials were involved in the murders, despite last week's conviction of five former national guardsmen.

"I don't think these guardsmen were acting on their own," said Sister Helene O'Sullivan, head of the Maryknoll Order's Office of Social Concern, after Thursday's verdict. "It's quite clear there were higher orders."

She and other representatives of the women's families and religious orders say evidence suggests the involvement of higher authorities or efforts to conceal their participation.

"We intend to follow up this case," Sister O'Sullivan said. "I just can't believe (the killings) were a sudden decision by a bunch of soldiers."

A report prepared by retired U.S. District Judge Harold Tyler and released by the U.S. State Department after the trial said circumstances indicated the guardsmen convicted of the murders had acted alone.

But it said there was "some evidence" that senior guard officers ordered the killings. Tyler found it was "quite possible" that current Defense Minister Carlos Eugenio Vides Casanova, then director of the Salvadoran National Guard, was aware of a coverup or participated in it.

LT. COL. Ricardo Cienfuegos, spokesman for the armed forces, said there were no indications that higher authorities were involved. He said Vides Casanova has made "the greatest efforts" to help clarify the case.

The convicted men are Sgt. Luis Antonio Colindres Aleman, 28, and privates Joaquin Contreras Palacios, 27; Francisco Orlando Contreras, 36; Jose Roberto Moreno Canjura, 28, and Daniel Canales, 27.

Judge Bernardo Rauda Murcia, who presided over the case in the 1st Penal Court in Zacatecoluca, 35 miles southeast of San Salvador, also indicated he did not think higher-level authorities were involved.

"If it was that way, the defense would have made use of it," he said Saturday. "The only thing we know is what was in the case and that indicates they acted alone."

Sister O'Sullivan noted that two of the nuns, Maryknoll sisters Ita Ford, 40, and Maura Clarke, 49, both of New York, were on a death list distributed by rightist death squads before the killings.

Their relief work in northern Chalatenango province brought them into frequent contact with leftist workers and peasant groups flourishing there at the time.

The other slain women, Ursuline nun Dorothy Kazel, 41, and layworker Jean Donovan, 27, both of Cleveland, lived in the largely peaceful province of La Libertad, where they worked with refugees.

THE FOUR women were detained while traveling from the International Airport to the capital on Dec. 2, 1980.

Contreras Palacios, who confessed to the crime, said guardsmen drove the van to an isolated dirt road 15 miles east of the airport, where some of the nuns were raped and all were shot to death.

The day of the trial, Contreras Palacios told reporters he confessed under duress after being offered payment.

Attacks on religious workers are not uncommon in El Salvador, where many rightists consider work with the poor to be subversive.

Shortly before Sister Clarke and Sister Ford arrived in El Salvador early in 1980, Monsignor Oscar Arnulfo Romero, archbishop of El Salvador, was assassinated. At least 10 other priests and nuns also had been slain, apparently by rightist death squads or government security forces.

In October 1980, army troops killed two women and stole the sacraments at the parish office in San Antonio Los Ranchos, a small Chalatenango town where the Maryknoll nuns sometimes worked, a news release from the archbishop's office said at the time.

IN EARLY November, a sign was tacked on the door of the parish house in Chalatenango city, where Sisters Ford and Clarke lived, warning, "Anyone who enters this house will die." It was signed by a rightist death squad.

On the day of the slayings, a local priest received a letter urging the parish staff to "put an end to your wicked activities...or you will find you will no longer be allowed to remain," according to the Lawyers Committee for International Human Rights.

The same day, a member of the parish was given a death list that included the names of the two Maryknoll nuns. The list was not presented to the court here.

No evidence was presented linking the threats to the killings, which occurred some 80 miles away in an entirely different military zone, Sister O'Sullivan said.

"I think the Salvadoran and U.S. authorities should look for that evidence," she said.

U.S. officials would not comment on whether they would press further probes into the murders.

Sandinistas building deepwater port

EL BLUFF, Nicaragua (AP) — This Caribbean fishing village is the key to the leftist Sandinista government's plans to open its doors to Europe and reduce Nicaragua's reliance on the U.S.-monitored Panama Canal.

Here, where old wooden structures on stilts are the norm, a $200 million project is under way with the help of Communist Bulgaria to build the first deepwater port on what has been the country's isolated Caribbean coast.

El Bluff sits at the tip of the peninsula that shapes three-mile-wide Bluefields Bay. The deep, wide Escondido River empties into the bay after snaking 30 miles to the sea from the city of Rama.

From Rama, a paved road runs 180 miles to Managua, the capital, and the country's Pacific coast, where most Nicaraguans live.

It is an old Nicaraguan dream — a seaport-to-river-to-land route from the Caribbean and Atlantic to the Pacific as an alternative to the Panama Canal about 350 miles to the south.

Foreign diplomats, who asked to remain anonymous for protocol reasons, said they believe the port is already being used to bring in military equipment and other gear for the Nicaraguan armed forces from the Soviet Union and other Communist-bloc countries.

Circumventing the canal means no investigation or disclosure of the type of cargo a ship is carrying. Corinto, Nicaragua's main port, is on the Pacific coast and heavy cargo coming from Europe in the past has had to pass through the canal.

AP Laserphoto

American, Soviet and Japanese heavy-duty construction equipment is being used for expanding this port, on Bluefields Bay, at the village of El Bluff, located 340 kilometers east of Managua City, Nicaragua.

Foreign reporters are not allowed to go to El Bluff by boat on the Escondido River. Those who arrive by airplane at nearby Bluefields with the necessary permit can see large barges and small ships making the hairpin turns on the river to and from El Bluff.

When finished, the deepwater port will include facilities to handle two 25,000-ton ships at a time, said civil engineer Felix Sandoval, who is in charge of the project.

Most of El Bluff's several hundred residents are blacks who speak English, a holdover from 19th century British settlement of the area.

Hammocks on porches are one of the few reliefs from the hot sun here. Coolness is a block of ice from the local ice house that supplies the shrimp and lobster packing company, whose products are sent directly to Miami, Fla.

The port at El Bluff was planned by Bulgarian engineers following the signing of an economic assistance treaty last year for $250 million. Officials decline to disclose how much of that amount will be used for the $200 million port project.

East German, Soviet, Brazilian, Japanese and even some old American-made machinery is being used by the more than 250 workers under Sandoval, the project engineer. More than half of the workers are brought in from outside the area.

Two of the three small hills on El Bluff have been leveled to fill nearly 15 acres of swamp and lay the foundations for the permanent buildings that will use Bulgarian steel beams and other supplies already in place.

"Our people do the work. The Bulgarians come in once in a while when there are questions," Sandoval said, walking along a gravel pathway that stretches almost the length of the narrow strip of land.

Sandoval said the project is expected to be finished by 1987.

On the mainland side of the peninsula where most of the 60 or so shrimpers and other fishing boats dock, a transit wharf is being enlarged to enable barges to move loads up the Escondido River.

Relations with the United States have deteriorated since the Sandinistas came to power in July 1979, ousting the rightist pro-American government of the Anastasio Somoza.

The Reagan administration charges the Sandinistas are helping Cuba and the Soviet Union spread revolution elsewhere in Central America. They also are accused of engaging in a massive military buildup, which could be helped by reduced reliance on the Panama Canal.

The U.S. Central Intelligence Agency helped mine Nicaraguan ports in a program that touched off a firestorm of controversy in the U.S. Congress and abroad earlier this spring before it ended.

Two fishing boats sank at El Bluff after hitting mines.

"That was on March 24, the day after a speedboat fired a rocket at the installations at El Bluff," said Lamberto Campbell, commander of the military garrison at Bluefields.

Dominican Republic rebuffs IMF

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — The government has broken off negotiations with the International Monetary Fund after refusing to comply with the IMF's request that gasoline prices be raised. Riots erupted last month over food price increases requested by the fund.

President Salvador Jorge Blanco said the decision, announced Thursday, could mean a final break with international creditors at a time when the country badly needs to renegotiate its $2.4 billion foreign debt.

Blanco rejected the IMF's condition that gasoline and other petroleum products be shifted to what is called the "parallel" rate of exchange of nearly three Dominican pesos to one U.S. dollar, compared to the "official" rate of one peso to one dollar.

While negotiating with the monetary fund in April, Jorge Blanco shifted most other imports to the higher parallel rate and increased prices of basic foods by as much as 200 percent. The food riots claimed 54 lives.

Vatican City

Population: About 1,000
Area: 108.7 acres; includes St. Peter's, Vatican Palace, Museum and neighboring buildings
Location: Rome
Currency: Italian lira
Languages: Italian, Latin
Religion: Roman Catholic
Ethnic groups: Italian, Swiss
Modern history: The Vatican is headquarters of the Roman Catholic Church and official residence of the Pope. It is all that remains of the Papal States, that part of mid-Italy ruled for centuries by popes. They were incorporated into the Kingdom of Italy in 1871, and in 1929 a Concordat signed with Italian dictator Benito Mussolini established the independent state of Vatican City.

Vatican Bank agrees to pay creditors

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The Vatican Bank has agreed to pay $250 million to creditors of Banco Ambrosiano, whose collapse was one of Italy's biggest financial scandals since World War II.

Rome and London banking sources said the payment, along with sales of Banco Ambrosiano's assets, add up to $406 million, or two-thirds of the total owed to creditor banks.

Banco Ambrosiano collapsed in 1982, leaving obligations of more than $1.2 billion. It had made loans to Panamanian companies in which the Vatican had a financial interest.

Vatican officials have denied any wrongdoing, saying they were victims of an unspecified "hidden project" by Banco Ambrosiano's late president, Roberto Calvi.

A communique issued by the Vatican today said the agreement "confirms" that the Vatican Bank "had no responsibility for the ruin of Banco Ambrosiano, in which it found itself involuntarily involved."

Vatican Bank representatives who signed the accord on Friday said in their statement: "The parties are pleased to announce that final agreement has been reached in connection with the Ambrosiano settlement, and the documentation has been exchanged and signed."

Secrecy surrounded the signing. Bankers here for the ceremony met first at Geneva's plush Hotel des Bergues, then moved at midday to the European Free Trade Association building, a plain office building.

British banking sources in London, where Midlands Bank and National Westminster bank share leadership of a steering committee formed by the creditors, said the accord stipulates that creditors will receive at least two-thirds of the money owed.

Shiite leader expects vote of confidence

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Shiite Moslem leader Nabih Berri told a news conference Saturday that he expects the nation's new coalition government to win a vote of confidence from Parliament, possibly this week.

"They have a habit of saying 'yes,'" Berri said when asked about the impending vote. Berri, who holds several offices in the Cabinet, said the vote could come Thursday.

Prime Minister Rashid Karami selected a half-Moslem, half-Christian "national unity" Cabinet last April 30. The ministers have met several times with President Amin Gemayel to develop their policy paper.

Under the Lebanese constitution, the document must win parliamentary approval before the government is formally in place.

On Saturday, Beirut newspapers quoted Karami as saying U.S. Ambassador Reginald Bartholomew had offered to have the United States act as a mediator between Lebanon and Israel.

Berri also met with Bartholomew on Friday and received a different impression. "What I heard from him was something like he wants a direct discussion between the Lebanese and the Israelis."

Berri said that he, like Karami, rejected direct negotiations with Israel, which has kept forces in the southern third of Lebanon since its 1982 invasion. Syria, which backs Karami and Berri, occupies much of eastern and northern Lebanon.

Berri also said Bartholomew told him that some of the American Embassy staff would be moved to Christian east Beirut from the mostly Moslem west side.

Berri said the ambassador had assured him that the move was temporary and that the U.S. Embassy would remain on the west side of the capital.

U.S. Embassy spokesman John Stewart confirmed that the Americans plan to open "an annex" in east Beirut.

Lebanese economy shattered

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Sales at Walid Noshie's two glassware and silver shops in west Beirut's Hamra district have fallen to one-fifth of what they were a year ago. Several nearby stores are draped with banners for "liquidation" sales.

Across town, in the oft-bombarded Christian neighborhood of Ashrafiyeh, half the boutiques are always shuttered.

"Many of the owners have fled the country," says a long-time resident of the area. "Anyway, there are no customers."

Nine years of civil war has shattered the economy of what once was the shopping center and financial hub of the Middle East.

So sorry is the state of the economy — with unemployment in excess of half the work force, industry at a stand-still and the retail and commercial sector in trouble — that it has become a force for peace.

"They must do something," Noshie said of the newly appointed unity Cabinet. "If the first thing they try doesn't work, they will have to find something else. It can't go on this way."

Noshie is not alone in his appeal for help. Business and industry leaders were among the first to pay "courtesy calls" on the newly appointed prime minister, Rashid Karami, to discuss their plight. The outgoing economic affairs minister, Ibrahim Halawi, warned Karami's new Cabinet that the Lebanese economy was nearing collapse.

"It needs to be rescued, and for that we need security and political stability," Halawi said.

One of Karami's first actions was to ask the nation's Central Bank for a report on the economy. The report said that "the economy today is in a very disturbing state."

Most ominous, it added, was a rapidly growing balance of payments deficit that could weaken the nation's currency to the detriment of both domestic consumption and merchandise trade.

The economy had been muddling along until last fall, when the war drove a stake into the heart of the nation's business.

Moslem-Christian fighting in September damaged or closed most factories, and incoming orders stopped. Investment funds for construction dried up. Severe electricity rationing followed, curtailing production further.

Renewed sectarian fighting in February shut down the facilities that made Beirut a regional trading center: its international airport and commercial port.

As joblessness soared, consumer spending plummeted. Unemployment became a further impetus for the emigration of skilled workers.

Even the country's agricultural sector has been crippled, as Israeli occupation in the south and Syrian presence in the north and east have curtailed harvests and hampered the overland transport of produce to traditional Lebanese and Arab markets.

The few statistics available indicate an economy in deep trouble.

The government is spending at a rate of about $180 million a month. With little coming in from taxes, most is being financed through the sale of treasury bills, rapidly increasing the federal debt.

Because of the sharp decline in private business, the government spending "probably constitutes over two-thirds of the country's gross national product, compared with less than one-third in recent years," a government official estimated.

Trade and banking — the mainstays of the economy — also are in trouble.

Marwan Iskandar, one of Lebanon's leading economists, recently estimated that Lebanese exports have fallen to $10.0 million in value a month, less than one-quarter of their historic average.

Mohammed Atallah, an economist and chairman of Lebanon's Council for Development and Reconstruction, likens the nation's economic plight to a person wounded over and over again.

Just repairing the nation's public facilities — roads, water systems, schools, telecommunications — could take at least a decade and cost the equivalent in Lebanese pounds of about $18 billion, Atallah estimated.

Bombay reported calm after 10 days of religious rioting

BOMBAY, India (AP) — Two people were stabbed to death in Bombay early Saturday but the city and outlying areas were later reported calm after 10 days of Hindu-Moslem rioting that claimed at least 221 lives.

"It's certainly the quietest day in 10 days," police spokesman P.M. Sawant said. "It's peaceful everywhere. The tension seems to be less."

Two people were knifed to death and another seriously injured in a street fight early Saturday in northern Bombay, police said.

Scattered incidents of arson and stone-throwing were reported overnight, but no attacks were reported during the day.

Nine areas of the city remained under night curfew and army troops continued patrolling Bombay, Thane, Bhiwandi and seven nearby towns.

Sawant said gradual withrawal of the 6,000 troops dispatched to the area by the government could begin as early as Sunday.

"Deployment of the army in many areas has helped to contain the violence," said Vasantrao Patil, chief minister of Maharashtra state. "We now have to provide help to people rendered homeless in the riots."

Sawant said 105 people had been killed in Bhiwandi, 57 in Bombay and the rest in outlying areas since the rioting began May 17. More than 5,000 people have been arrested and 500 injured, he said.

The violence began after Moslems hoisted green Islamic flags on a Hindu temple and at the office of a militant Hindu group in Bhiwandi, about 35 miles northeast of Bombay.

The Moslems accused the leader of the Hindu group of making disparaging remarks about the Moslem Prophet Mohammed. Bal Thackeray, president of the militant Hindu organization Shiv Sena denied making the comment.

The rioting quickly spread to Bombay, India's major commercial and port city of 8.5 million people.

In the troubled northern state of Punjab, communal violence between Hindus and Sikhs continued. Curfew was imposed Saturday in Ferozepur city, 200 miles northwest of New Delhi, as tension mounted over the assassination of a Hindu official.

Dev Rattan Tuli, president of Ferozepur's Hindu Self-Protection Committee and head of the district's trade commission, was gunned down by two assailants Friday night.

The two gunmen were captured after a chase, police said.

Two police guards were wounded Friday night when gunmen fired at a passenger train outside of Ferozepur. They were hospitalized but reported out of danger.

A one-room railway station near the city was set on fire early Friday. The extent of damage was not immediately known.

In March, terrorists torched 37 rural wayside stations in one night. The attacks were blamed on the Sikh extremists.

Moslems, Hindus can't live together

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The Hindu-Moslem rioting in western India that has claimed more than 220 lives is the latest chapter in a religious conflict at least 900 years old.

Hindus and Moslems have lived side by side in India for centuries, but rarely in peace. Their mutual fear, suspicion and mistrust has plagued India's first 37 years of independence.

As the recent outburst of violence in the Bombay area shows, a single insult can quickly set off a wave of killing and destruction.

The spark was struck by newspaper reports of a rally held by the militant Hindu organization Shiv Sena in Bhiwandi, a textile center outside Bombay, to celebrate Shivaji Day. Shivaji was a Hindu king who defied the Moslem Aurangazeb, a Mogul emperor, in the 17th century.

Shiv Sena leader, Bal Thackery, was quoted in newspapers as making comments derogatory of the venerated Prophet Mohammed. The papers also said he warned against the "green danger," referring to the color used in Islam.

He denied making the comments, but the damage was done.

Moslems draped Thackery's portrait with old sandals — a major insult in India — then pulled down a yellow Hindu flag and hoisted the green Moslem flag.

Hindus retaliated. Violence engulfed the town and quickly spread to Bombay and its suburbs. Hindus and Moslems attacked each other with knives, swords, bottles and clubs.

IN THE most gruesome incident, a Hindu mob cornered 27 Moslem laborers in a farmhouse, stabbed them, doused them with kerosene and set them on fire. The Times of India newspaper called it "the materialization of hell on earth."

Other major riots in recent years have been triggered when Hindu processions played music before a mosque, an action Moslems regard as irreverent. Fighting has broken out over pigs, which are considered unclean by Moslems, and cows, which are sacred to Hindus.

The enmity between Hindus and Moslems goes back at least 900 years, to the arrival of Moslem conquerors from Afghanistan and central Asia who forcibly converted native peoples to their faith.

Starting in the 13th century, India was ruled by the Moguls, a succession of Moslem emperors, before the British took over in the 19th century and governed until independence in 1947.

With independence came the creation of predominantly Moslem Pakistan at the insistence of Moslem leaders who said they could never hope for fair treatment in mostly-Hindu India. Millions of Moslems preferred to remain, however, in officially secular India.

The partition of the subcontinent led to a holocaust of killing in which hundreds of thousands of people on each side were slain.

TODAY, HINDUS comprise about 83 percent and Moslems 11 percent of India's 730 million people. There are also Christians, Sikhs and Buddhists in much smaller numbers.

Most worrisome to Indian leaders is the steady rise this past year in violence linked to religion.

A recent government report said the upsurge suggests "growing militancy in the ethos of the people against our cultural heritage of tolerance." It found that most urban areas where the population is closely divided between Hindus and Moslems are becoming "combustible material for a communal flareup."

Kuldip Nayar, a prominent Indian columnist, said the increase is partly the result of a new Moslem attitude.

"For many years, the charge that they were responsible for the subcontinent's partition was a cross they bore patiently," he said. "Now they, particularly the younger among them who do not have that guilt complex, are asserting themselves."

Much of the tension is blamed on economic competition between Moslem artisans or craftsmen and Hindu traders.

Fierce riots in Bhiwandi in 1970 were triggered by tension between Moslem weavers and Hindu merchants. Moradabad in northern India was afflicted by violence when Moslem manufacturers began crowding out Hindu exporters.

YOGUNDRA Singh, a sociology professor at New Delhi's Jawaharlal Nehru University, said the Hindu-Moslem conflict boils down to a class struggle.

"Even today in the villages, the Hindu and Moslem peasants coexist," he said, "but it is the middle classes, the literate, the elite and social climbers who have been very conscious of power. It is this class that foments communalism."

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi has called communalism, the tendency to identify with one's religious community rather than country, as "an Indian version of fascism."

"I do not know whether all of us have a communal streak," she told Parliament recently. "Sometimes it seems secularism is only skin deep with some of us...

"This is the most divisible factor in our country. And if the country is divided, then the country cannot be strong, and if the country is not strong we cannot guard our freedom or anything else."

Marcos to resist attempts to trim special powers

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos said today he will resist attempts by a stronger opposition in the National Assembly to trim his law-making powers, saying he needs them to combat Communist subversion.

"Either we go to bed with the Communist Party or we fight them; we are fighting them," Marcos said. He spoke at his first locally televised news conference since the May 14 elections that gave his opponents a significant minority in an assembly he had overwhelmingly controlled since 1978.

Latest official results showed that of the 183 seats at stake in the election, Marcos' party has won 89. Another 54 went to the opposition, which held only 13 seats in the outgoing body.

Opposition parties and independent candidates were leading in many of the undecided races although Marcos is already assured of a majority. He has the power to appoint 17 members to the assembly.

He acknowledged the opposition gains indicate a possible vote of protest against his government.

"We must consider this seriously..." Marcos said. "There's a message there and we intend to find out (what it is)."

He said that although the Aug. 21 assassination of former Sen. Benigno Aquino, who had been his strongest political rival, helped the opposition, he did not think it was the main reason for what he called his opponents' "impressive gains."

Marcos' critics claim Aquino was shot by the military. Marcos has blamed the assassination on a man he says was an agent for Communists seeking to destabilize his government.

Marcos said one reason was "the gut issues which we were unable to answer effectively" because the government's information campaign failed to publicize its claimed achievements.

He apparently was referring to issues such as increasing prices and scarcity of consumer goods like sugar, cooking oil and soap from supermarkets. The government blames the problem on hoarding by price manipulators.

He reiterated his intention to seek re-election in 1987 "if the quality of those aspiring for the presidency of our country does not improve."

Two leftist guerrilla groups agree to truce in Colombia

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Two leftist guerrilla groups, the April 19 Movement and the People's Liberation Army, have agreed to sign a one-year truce with government security forces, a spokesman for one of the groups says.

A third guerrilla organization, the Colombian Revolutionary Armed Forces, signed a truce two months ago. That one-year truce is to start Monday.

A spokesman for the April 19 Movement, known as M-19, told the Associated Press in a telephone interview on Friday that his group and the People's Liberation Army now also are ready to sign agreements to stop war activity.

John Agudelo, president of a special government peace commission, said Friday that talks with the M-19 and People's Liberation Army "are well advanced."

He said he had not been in recent contact with comission members talking with the guerrillas — talks presumably held in a remote part of Colombia.

Counterfeit dollars seized

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — Police seized $260 million in counterfeit U.S. currency during a raid on underworld hideouts near this port city Saturday, the Italian news agency ANSA reported.

It said the forged currency, all $100 bills, was discovered in an apartment in Castellammare di Stabia, just south of Naples.

Two men, presumed to be members of the Camorra crime gang, were arrested and charged with counterfeiting foreign currency, it said.

Dioxin dumped carelessly

TOKYO (AP) — Government forestry offices across Japan carelessly disposed of herbicide containing dioxin in 1971 and some of the extremely poisonous chemical may have seeped into the earth, an official said Saturday.

Masaki Sugihara, an official for technical development in the Forestry Agency, told The Associated Press that the agency was investigating whether dioxin had contaminated reservoirs.

Sugihara said the agency's 29 local offices "failed to comply with the agency's guidelines" for proper disposal.

Danube Canal opened

AGIGEA, Romania (AP) — President Nicolae Ceausescu on Saturday opened the new 40-mile Danube Canal, which shortens the shipping route to the Black Sea by 237 miles, reducing a two-day voyage to a five-hour trip, the state-run Agerpres news agency reported.

The agency said 120,000 people watched Ceausescu cut the ribbon at the Danube port of Cernavoda, site of Romania's first nuclear atomic plant. The canal terminates at Agi-

Couples happiest if both work, share household chores

NEW YORK (AP) — Husbands and wives seem happiest if both have full-time jobs and they equally split up the routine chores of housework and child care, a study shows.

Depression is most common, on the other hand, when the wife has to work to make ends meet, but she and her husband wish she could stay home and she still does all the housework. The man in these relationships is even more likely to be depressed than his wife, the study indicates.

"In adapting to the wife's employment, the central problem for husbands seems to be one of self-esteem — of getting over embarrassment, guilt or apprehension associated with the wife's employment. For wives, the central problem is getting the husbands to share the housework," said John Mirowsky, one of the authors.

The study, based on a nationwide survey of 680 married couples, was conducted by Mirowsky and Catherine E. Ross, both of the University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana. It was presented Friday at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

In marriages in which both partners work and do housework, Mirowsky said, it has eventually become clear that the traditional division of household tasks no longer makes sense.

At first, the wife may shift some of her duties onto older children or avoid work by using frozen foods, throwing fewer dinner parties or simply cleaning the house less often. But once it becomes obvious that she is in the working world for good, she is apt to urge her husband to pitch in with the housework.

"Although the husband may initially resist," he said, "once he has become accustomed to the economic benefits of two paychecks, he is likely to be open to negotiation. If his wife presses the issue, he is likely to make concessions rather than lose her earnings."

Dispatchers listen to man being stabbed by attacker

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. (AP) — Police dispatchers answering a 911 call listened as a supermarket manager struggled with an attacker who stabbed him repeatedly with a hunting knife before the phone cord was cut.

David Schwandt, 27, manager of the Driskill's Super Valu store, was able to dial for help as he fought off the assailant early Friday and dispatchers heard his screams.

"It sounded like, 'Hurry up, hurry up, God help me,' then we could hear the noises of the man stabbing him," said Eden Prairie police Lt. Les Bridger. "He really, really stabbed him wildly."

Schwandt, stabbed several times in the torso and legs, was in critical condition Saturday at Methodist Hospital in St. Louis Park.

Bridger said Schwandt and a young janitor were the only employees in the store in the Eden Prairie Village Mall when a man armed with a hunting knife entered the supermarket apparently intending to rob it.

Napping juror cited

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — A retired Army colonel who caused a mistrial in a civil lawsuit because he napped and read while serving on the jury has been cited for contempt of court.

Chief El Paso County District Judge Donald Campbell on Friday issued the citation to Lyndon Kramer, 69, who retired from the Army in 1970. Campbell said he cautioned Kramer about falling asleep while witnesses were testifying. But he said Kramer dozed again during testimony Thursday, was seen reading a book and admitted to a fellow juror he had violated jury instructions by reading a newspaper story on the trial.

Kramer, who faces a contempt hearing June 15, declined to comment.

Woman killed in chase

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — A 70-year-old woman was killed and her husband was critically injured when their auto collided with the get-away car of suspects being chased by police, authorities said.

Two other people were injured when they were shot during a spree of robberies that led to the chase.

Three men were arrested after a brief foot chase following the crash Friday at an intersection. A fourth suspect was being sought, said Patrolman Nathan Gray, a police spokesman.

Kate L. Wallace, 70, died and her husband, Willard, 79, was in critical condition at Bethany Medical Center, a spokeswoman said. Police refused to identify the suspects, who weren't immediately charged.

ACS approves budget

BOSTON (AP) — The American Cancer Society has approved a record research budget of $31 million and the expenditure of an additional $1.5 million on new interferon research.

"We're interested in using interferon in people," said Frank Rauscher, cancer society research director, after Friday's budget session that followed a week-long meeting of the society's board.

This year's total cancer society budget exceeded $200 million.

The organization already has done interferon research for 4½ years.

Illness' source still mystery

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Doctors still don't know where four University of Utah Medical Center patients contracted Legionnaires' disease, but have increased chlorine levels of the hospital's water system.

The chlorine level, normally very low, was to be increased to 15 parts per million, spokesman John Dwan said Friday.

Three of the four patients infected by Legionella bacteria in the past three weeks responded well to treatment. The fourth, a kidney transplant patient, died, but it is uncertain whether her death resulted from the disease or complications from the operation.

Jury convicts captain

LAKE CHARLES, La. (AP) — A ship's captain has been convicted by a federal jury of stealing 2,636 barrels of oil from a Venezuelan shipment at the Cities Service Oil Co. refinery here.

Spirodon Magoulas, 42, of New York City, was allowed to remain free Friday on personal recognizance bond until U.S. District Judge Earl Veron receives a presentencing investigation.

No sentencing date was set, but Magoulas faces up to 10 years' imprisonment and a $5,000 fine for conviction of stealing the oil from a $9.7 million shipment of 270,000 barrels aboard the tanker Octonia Sun in July, 1982.

Unknown soldiers find final resting place

ARLINGTON NATIONAL CEMETERY, Va. (AP) — This is the final resting place of 189,000 Americans — some famous, some known only to their families, and now, after this weekend's solemn ceremony, four eternally unknown soldiers of America's past four wars.

Arlington National Cemetery, 612 quiet, green acres of row upon row of white marble grave markers, holds the remains of Continental soldiers who fought under Gen. George Washington in the Army of the Revolution; of 14 soldiers and sailors who died in the War of 1812; of men who perished in every other war in which America committed its blood.

One single grave holds 2,111 unidentified dead from the Civil War Battle of Bull Run and the roads to the Rappahannock.

The graves of two presidents — the 27th, William Howard Taft, and the 35th, the assassinated John F. Kennedy — are here, too. A foot-high eternal flame stands guard by Kennedy's plot.

Nearby are the burial places of two Kennedy children, dead in infancy, a daughter and a son. And nearby, too, the grave of Kennedy's brother, Robert Francis Kennedy, killed in 1968 as he sought his party's nomination for president.

But it is to the Tomb of the Unknowns that America's attention comes this weekend, for the burial of a fourth unknown, from the Vietnam War, one of 58,012 who perished in America's last and longest war.

He joins unknown servicemen from the two world wars and the Korean War.

Following the custom of other allied countries of World War I which had designated for honor a single soldier whose remains could not be identified, the first unknown was buried here on Armistice Day, Nov. 11, 1921.

On Aug. 3, 1956, President Dwight D. Eisenhower signed a bill providing for the burial of unknowns from World War II and Korea.

Their bodies lay in state in the Capitol, and then were carried on a caisson to Arlington on Memorial Day, 1958. Eisenhower awarded each the medal of honor.

The tomb has become a shrine, visited by thousands of Americans each year.

On a surrounding plaza are engraved the words, "Here Rests in Honored Glory An American Soldier Known But To God."

This place is guarded, at all times, by a solitary sentry.

The guard is changed in a ceremony with an obscure origin. According to the army's Military District of Washington, the ceremony is believed to have evolved over four decades, changing over the years at the discretion of various sergeants of the guard until it was finally standardized.

The sentry crosses the 63-foot walkway at a quick pace in exactly 21 steps. He faces the tomb for 21 seconds — symbolic of the 21-gun salute accorded honored dignitaries — and turns, pauses an additional 21 seconds, then retraces his steps.

Other military memorials at Arlington are the Confederate Monument and the mast of the battleship Maine, which was sunk in Havana harbor in 1898, leading to the Spanish-American War that freed Cuba of Spanish rule.

Also buried here are Abner Doubleday, who fired the first Union gun in defense of Fort Sumter, S.C., on April 12, 1861 and was later erroneously credited with having invented baseball; Joe Louis, the legendary boxer; Gens. John Pershing of World War I and George Marshall and Omar Bradley of World War II; Chief Justice Earl Warren and Justice William O. Douglas; astronauts Gus Grissom and Roger Chaffee.

Until 1967, all honorably discharged veterans could be buried in the cemetery. Then, because of a shortage of space, restrictions were imposed.

Space is available for honorably discharged winners of the Air Force Cross, Distinguished Service Cross, Distinguished Service Medal, Medal of Honor, Navy Cross, Purple Heart or Silver Star; members of the armed services who died on active duty or service long enough to be officially retired; certain disabled veterans; and certain honorably discharged veterans who have served in Congress or as president or vice president, in the Cabinet or on the Supreme Court. Their wives or husbands and their minor children are also eligible.

Number of war dead changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The unidentified serviceman who lies in state in the U.S. Capitol rotunda is one of 58,012 Americans killed in the Vietnam War — a number that is constantly changing as records are brought up to date.

The total as of Friday included 47,318 who died in battle and 10,694 whose deaths were not in combat — victms of traffic accidents and other causes.

Unknown soldier designated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three times previously, America has enshrined a fallen serviceman in the Tomb of the Unknowns at Arlington National Cemetery and each time there was a selection process to ensure he was truly unidentifiable.

That's not the case with the remains of an unidentified Vietnam serviceman to be interred on Memorial Day. His selection was by designation.

Maj. Robert Shields, a Pentagon spokesman, said the remains were the only ones of the 58,012 known dead in the war to meet the legal criteria for interment in the Tomb.

"In 1982, one of the assistant secretaries of the Army made the comment that there were only four remains in the identification laboratory in Hawaii who could be considered," Shields said.

Burial ceremonies date from era of Napolean

WASHINGTON (AP) — As wars turn more impersonal with each new advance in weaponry, America continues to honor her heroes killed in battle with ceremonies representing the chivalry of a bygone era.

The newest Unknown Serviceman, an unidentified victim of the Vietnam War, will be laid to rest Monday in Arlington National Cemetery in a military funeral with customs dating back to the Napoleonic Wars.

The solemn black caisson that will carry the Unknown's flag-draped casket from the Capitol down Delaware and Constitution avenues to the cemetery is a remnant of the horse-drawn Army made obsolete by the internal combustion engine.

The custom of draping the coffins of servicemen and veterans with a flag began during the Napoleonic Wars of the 18th century, when the dead carried from the field of battle on a caisson were covered with a flag.

Six matched horses, hitched in three pairs, will pull the casket along the procession route. Although all six horses are saddled, only those on the left have riders, representing a tradition that began in the days of horse-drawn artillery when one horse of a pair was mounted while the other carried provisions.

Except for the absence of a riderless horse behind the caisson, the procession and ceremony is the same as those used in full state funerals for presidents.

Courtney Weldon, a spokesman for the Army Military District of Washington, said a riderless, caparisoned horse with the reversed boots in its stirrups represents a fallen officer.

Since no one knows whether the Unknown was an officer or an enlisted man, the riderless horse will not be a part of the procession Monday, he said.

After Jewish, Orthodox, Roman Catholic and Protestant prayers of committal, President Reagan will lay a wreath at the tomb. That will be followed by a 21-gun salute and a benediction.

Cannon salutes date back to the early British Navy when cannons were slowly reloaded. Because firing a cannon partially, temporarily disarmed a ship it became a symbol for respect and trust with the saluter placing himself in an unarmed position. The more cannons fired, the greater the degree of honor.

The British eventually made a 21-gun salute its highest national honor. The United States used one gun for each state as its highest national salute from the Revolutionary War until 1841, when it adopted the British model of 21 guns.

After the benediction Monday, a team of seven infantrymen will fire three rifle volleys over the grave, a practice that originated with an old custom of temporarily halting the fighting to remove the dead from the battlefield.

Once an army had removed the bodies from the battlefield, it would fire three volleys to indicate that the dead had been cared for and that they were ready to resume the fighting.

A bugler will then blow "Taps," an American call composed by Union Army Gen. Daniel Butterfield while camped at Harrison's Landing in Virginia in 1862 during the Civil War.

Police plan Democratic convention security

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An army of 5,000 police is gearing up for the Democratic National Convention in July, preparing for the worst, hoping for the best and determined to make the city safe for its visitors.

No one expects trouble, but law enforcement chiefs get paid to worry. They worry about demonstrators, terrorist attacks, assassination attempts, traffic tie-ups and accidents.

The convention, expected to attract about 15,000 Democrats and 15,000 reporters and technicians, presents special problems for officers charged with two main tasks: keeping the peace and guarding the candidates.

The event, scheduled for July 16-19, will be a festive, sometimes chaotic affair, with Democrats using the downtown Moscone Center as their headquarters. Visitors will be at hotels and restaurants around the hilly city overlooking the bay.

"We're hoping that nothing happens, but we have to plan for the worst," said Robert S. Gast, the special agent directing the FBI's convention operation. He described the "worst case scenario" as the "kidnapping of a protectee or the assassination of somebody."

The city police, with a $1.8 million convention budget and about 3,000 officers and civilian aides, have the principal responsibility for controlling demonstrations, patrolling the streets and handling traffic. They'll be joined by the highway patrol, police from neighboring cities, hotel security officers and others. The National Guard is on call if needed.

The Secret Service ensures the safety of presidential candidates Walter Mondale, Gary Hart and Jesse Jackson, and the FBI steps in if there's an attack on a candidate or federal official.

Lawrence T. Oden, a Secret Service special agent, said his agency's problems are "mainly logistical," checking and securing every place the candidates go.

Representatives from the three services have been meeting frequently with their staffs, each other, leaders of protest groups and New York police who handled the Democratic conventions in 1976 and 1980.

"We want to work out with the (demonstrators) what they're doing," said Kevin J. Mullen, deputy chief of the San Francisco police department. "We want to know who we're talking to, so when we meet out there, there'll be no possibility of misunderstanding or conflict."

Mullen is convinced the best way to prevent problems is to have a "large number of well-trained people dealing intelligently with other people." But his officers and the FBI have specialists in their ranks — bodyguards, explosive experts, hostage squads, sharpshooters and riot units.

An abandoned fire station near the Moscone Center will serve as police command center for officers working round-the-clock during the convention. A city-owned parking lot across from the center has been designated as a protest zone, although marches and demonstrations are expected elsewhere as well.

Several groups have announced plans for demonstrations, and all are expected to be peaceful.

Mullen said he expected between 50,000 and 100,000 at a march planned by a coalition of anti-nuclear, anti-war and environmental groups. The AFL-CIO and homosexual rights groups also intend to march.

Mondale to Hart: What about Watt?

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

Walter F. Mondale is back on the attack, while Sen. Gary Hart is reviving his emphasis on the future as the chief Democratic contenders follow different roads into the climactic 10 days of their battle for the presidential nomination.

Standing on California's coastline in Pacifica, the former vice president charged that Hart should have led the fight against Senate confirmation of fellow Westerner James Watt as interior secretary.

"He knew of Watt's philosophy that natural resources should be sold, chopped and bulldozed as soon as possible," Mondale said. "Gary Hart should have led the fight against James Watt instead of voting for his confirmation."

For both Mondale and Hart, their differing styles represent a return to approaches that proved successful in earlier phases of the campaign.

Meanwhile, the Rev. Jesse Jackson is stepping up his criticism of party rules and attacking the recent election in El Salvador as a "sham."

Jackson plans to fly to Mexico City on Monday to discuss the international debt crisis with Mexican Foreign Minister Bernardo Sepulveda, a leader of the Contadora group of Latin American nations seeking a diplomatic solution to the Central American conflict.

SATURDAY in New Jersey, Jackson called on the Reagan administration to rely more on diplomatic talks with leftist governments in an effort to resolve festering problems in Central America.

"Key to that would be our leadership being aggressive enough to talk to Cuba," he said. "I get the impression our leadership has such a heavy emotional investment and so much ego invested in Castro's failing...that we have not yet overcome the trauma.

"Our not talking to Cuba is very impractical. They are just 90 miles away from Miami. It's not ideology. We do talk to communists," Jackson added.

The Democratic race is down to five primaries on June 5 — California, New Jersey, New Mexico, South Dakota and West Virginia — and Mondale is sitting on a lead of more than 650 delegates over Hart.

More importantly, the former vice president now is within about 300 delegates of the 1,967 that would constitute a convention majority.

"For Hart to win the nomination, he has to pull an inside straight," said Peter Hart, the Mondale campaign pollster. The Mondale aide noted that when Hart was riding high just before the big block of primaries on March 13 "we needed a split to stay alive. On June 5, Hart needs a sweep to stay alive."

JUNE 5 is the ultimate test of candidate strategies, the closing minutes of regulation time in a long struggle.

Hart and Mondale are concentrating on where the delegates are — California and New Jersey. A strong victory in either one or narrow winning margins in both probably would make Mondale unstoppable at the Democratic convention in San Francisco in July.

But if Hart can claim victory in both big states plus New Mexico and South Dakota, the Colorado senator could jar loose some of the delegate support Mondale now is claiming.

Mondale changed his schedule last week to add more days in New Jersey, a move pollster Hart said is designed to "make it as difficult as possible" for the Coloradan to draw the inside straight he needs to block a Mondale nomination.

THE FORMER vice president was campaigning in California Saturday before flying to New Jersey Saturday night for two days of campaigning to include an appearance Sunday night on a televised call-in show. Jackson was making a similar appearance Saturday night and Hart Monday night.

During his Pacific coast appearance, Mondale said Hart "was in a unique position to understand the threat that Watt posed. Mr. Hart was familiar with Mr. Watt's activities in the Mountain States."

When previously questioned about his vote to confirm Watt, Hart said any president is entitled to choose his Cabinet advisers unless they are clearly unqualified. Before joining the Reagan administration, Watt headed the Mountain States Legal Devense Fund, which opposed environmentalists' efforts to limit development of Western lands.

Caring for 'oldest old' will cost $85 billion

NEW YORK (AP) — Caring for the nation's oldest old — those in their 80s, 90s and beyond — will cost the United States at least $85 billion in federal benefits by the turn of the century, more than veterans, the poor or any other group, a federal economist predicted Saturday.

The ranks of the very old, most of them women, are growing so fast that the cost of their care will increase 67 percent in the next 15 years old alone, according to this estimate.

"That's a lot of money. Their benefits are very expensive," said Barbara B. Torrey of the U.S. Census Bureau. "I'm not sure what we'll be spending on veterans in the year 2000, but it won't be this much."

Ms. Torrey presented her study at a symposium at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. The session was intended to sort out some of the differences between the oldest old, generally those over 85, and the so-called "young old," the healthier and more independent people in their 60s and 70s.

Most of the costs of those over 80 computed by Ms. Torrey were for Medicare and Social Security. Her figures were based on 1984 dollars and did not take into account an expected rapid increase in the cost of medical care.

Few studies have been conducted on these aged people, she said. "They are statistical ghosts leaving only a trail of costs and a few clues to their economic resources."

The nation now spends $51.2 billion on federal benefits for the 6 million Americans over 80, she said. By the year 2000, there will be 10.1 million of these people, and their benefits will total $85.5 billion.

"By the year 2000," she said, "more benefits will be provided to octogenarians than any other subgroup of the aged or, for that matter, the general population."

In the decades between 1960 and 1980, the number of people over 85 increased by 141 percent, and they are the fastest growing age group in the United States.

Ira Rosenwaike of the University of Pennsylvania said the most important reason for their declining mortality has been a sharp drop in deaths from heart disease.

Very old women far outnumber men, he said. In fact, there are now only 44 men for every 100 women over age 85.

And many are in poor health. One study showed that 40 percent of them, for instance, need help walking.

A survey of elderly people in Cleveland found the few very old men who survive that long are generally in better health than their female counterparts. Only about half of the old women surveyed were in full command of their mental faculties, compared with nearly two-thirds of the men.

"Is it that only the toughest men survive to the oldest ages and thus become more distinct from the average women?" asked Marie R. Haug of Case Western Reserve University. "Or do women, even if they live longer, deteriorate more rapidly?"

Most of the analyses of the growing numbers of elderly stop before the mid-21st century when the baby boom generation becomes the oldest old.

Californians to decide on propositions

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Gary Hart's presidential hopes will not be the only issue facing California voters June 5. They will also choose candidates for state and local offices and decide on nine ballot propositions — including a plan to remove a politician from office for lying in his campaign.

Another measure, aimed at cutting into the power of the state's Democrats, would reduce the Legislature's $106 million budget by 30 percent and limit the influence of the Assembly speaker.

Among the political races is state Assemblyman Tom Hayden's bid for a second term, a comeback attempt by arch-conservative John Schmitz and a primary in which San Diego Mayor Roger Hedgecock has come under fire for personal financial dealings.

Most attention is on the Democratic presidential primary and the biggest number of delegates at stake on the last day of the season. The outcome in California may well decide whether Walter Mondale goes to the convention with the nomination in his pocket or has to continue fighting it out with Hart.

PAUL GANN, co-author of the property-tax-slashing Proposition 13 in 1978 with Howard Jarvis, has led the drive for Proposition 24, aimed at changing the rules of the Legislature and cutting $30 million from its budget.

Currently, Assembly Speaker Willie Brown, the state's most powerful Democrat, appoints all members of committees, including the chairmen, and, through his appointments to the Rules Committee, routes legislation to committees and can determine which bills live or die.

Under Gann's plan the five-member Rules Commmittee would be selected by the party caucuses and would strictly reflect the ratio of Democrats to Republicans in the Assembly.

Art Agnos, a San Francisco Democratic Assemblyman, wrote the truth-in-campaigning proposal, which he describes as a "political death penalty" for candidates who libel opponents. Ironically, Agnos has long been considered one of the Legislature's most adept writers of "hit pieces" — last-minute campaign fliers that target a political opponent.

His Proposition 20 would amend the state constitution to disqualify from federal, state or local office any person who defeated an opponent by libel or slander.

UNDER THE proposal, a court would have to rule that the libelous or slanderous statement in question was a "major contributing cause" of the defeat. Also, an official would not be removed from office until the court's decision was final and all appeals had been exhausted.

As usual in California, the ballot has a smattering of celebrities. Hayden, the former anti-Vietnam war activist who is now a Democratic assemblyman, faces a relatively easy contest in his Santa Monica district.

In 1982, Hayden spent about $1.8 million on his primary and general elections, with his wife, actress Jane Fonda, contributing about half. Hayden's campaign was the most expensive legislative race in state history.

Doris Tate, the mother of slain actress Sharon Tate, is running as a Democrat for the state Assembly in a San Pedro district where the incumbent is a Republican.

In San Francisco, Democratic challenger Lea Belli, the wife of famed trial lawyer Melvin Belli, is attempting to win the seat of Republican Sen. Milton Marks, a former judge and the Legislature's most liberal Republican.

IN SAN Diego, Hedgecock is seeking a full term after winning the job last May in a runoff to determine a successor to Pete Wilson, now a U.S. senator. He is a heavy favorite in the June 5 non-partisan primary but must win a majority to avoid a November runoff.

Hedgecock, opposed by millionaire businessman Dick Carlson and seven others, has weathered a barrage of news stories detailing his financial transactions with executives of the La Jolla-based J. David & Co., an international money trading firm forced into bankruptcy.

The race to be Los Angeles County's top prosecutor — an office historically handling some of the nation's most notorious criminal cases — has become a rhetorical slugfest.

Robert Philibosian, 43, appointed by the county Board of Supervisors in January 1983, is challenged by City Attorney Ira Reiner, 48, and a long-shot candidate, Deputy District Attorney Hyatt Seligman, 35.

Sixth shrapnel bomb found in Wisconsin

LA CROSSE, Wis. (AP) — A sixth trip-wire shrapnel bomb intended to "inflict harm to people" was found Saturday in this western Wisconsin city, and police warned parents to watch their children closely over the holiday weekend.

No injuries were reported, although one of the homemade pipe bombs exploded outside a church Friday and showered a utility company worker with debris. Another of the explosives was found in a children's playground.

The latest device was found Saturday in a grassy area between a motel and a state driver's license examination station on the city's south side. The explosive already had been detonated.

The bombs were lengths of pipe about 6 inches long filled with gunpowder, screws, nails, nuts and bolts and triggered by a trip-wire, said Police Sgt. Ronald Kuehl.

"They are meant to inflict harm to people," said Police Chief William Reynolds. "They propel shrapnel and metal objects out of one end."

"Don't take any chances; someone is sick," Mayor Patrick Zielke warned parents after visiting a park on the city's south side where a bomb was found at the base of a sliding board.

Carol Valdez, the mother of twin 6-year-old boys, said she was "stupefied" by the discovery of one bomb about six blocks from where she lives. She said she was checking on her sons' whereabouts every half hour.

"This is a school district. If kids find it (a bomb), they wouldn't know about it. They'd think it was a toy," she said.

Notes found with three of the bombs claimed they were the work of the "North Central Gay Strike Force Against Public Oppression."

But Reynolds said he believed one "spineless" person who "operates in the dark" was to blame, not an organization.

The sloppy, handwritten notes also mentioned at least six states — Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana and Michigan, police said.

Reynolds said the notes "could be a nice ruse. It could be someone against gays...There's a million possibilities."

The chief said all of the bombs have been found "right out in the open."

"One was in a playgound where several small children were playing all day, but it didn't go off," he said. "Another was strung across a sidewalk."

The unexploded devices were safely detonated by an Army bomb squad from Fort McCoy in nearby Sparta.

While the bombs were believed to be the work of an individual, Reynolds said police were seeking information about the possible existence of the "North Central Gay Strike Force Against Public Oppression" from state and federal law enforcement officials.

Reynolds said his department also was investigating a possible connection with reports of similar devices found earlier this month in Eau Claire and Chippewa Falls.

"There is something oddball about ours that is also oddball about theirs," he said.

Reynolds said the bombs appeared to have been set Thursday night or early Friday morning.

He said residents of the community of 48,000 about 150 miles southeast of Minneapolis were concerned about the discoveries, but said "no one's running scared yet."

In the initial incident, an employee of Northern States Power Co. escaped injury when he tripped a string that exploded the first device outside the St. Joseph the Workman Cathedral about 10 a.m. Friday.

The employee, John DeGeorge of La Crosse, said it felt like he was shot when the bomb went off, hurling debris about 20 feet across a courtyard.

"It scared me...I'm lucky I have heavy shoes on," he said.

Boston to get Tall Ship Spirit of Massachusetts

BOSTON (AP) — On the first two visits the Tall Ships made to Boston, more than a million people turned out by land and by sea to cheer them into the harbor. But something was missing.

This time Boston Harbor has its own Tall Ship: the Spirit of Massachusetts, a graceful return of the old Fredonia two-masted schooners of a century ago.

Launched April 28 at Charlestown Navy Yard, the Spirit of Massachusetts will lead a majestic parade of sail scheduled for June 2.

"A sea of well-wishers will gather in Boston to welcome the Spirit of Massachusetts and honor Donald McKay during the festival," said Henry Dormitzer, board chairman of New England Historic Seaport.

The festival plan began as a tribute to McKay, the shrewd, courtly immigrant from Canada who used his East Boston yard to develop the clipper ship into the fastest, fairest vessel under sail, anywhere.

"Donald McKay gave us more than ships," said Dormitzer. "He created for us a means of communication that extended our cultural horizons throughout the world."

Spirit is Dormitzer's dream for the historic harbor. She is 125 feet from bowsprit to stern, 100 feet on the waterline with a beam of 24 feet and draft of 10, displacing about 140 tons. The schooner will carry 30 cadets in addition to her regular crew.

"The Spirit of Massachusetts will be a worthy goodwill ambassador for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and her sponsors," said Evelyn Murphy, Secretary of Economic Affairs. "She will be a symbol of our proud maritime heritage."

On June 2, a cloud of sail will assemble off the entrance to Boston Harbor for the parade of windjammers past the official review of the USS Constitution, the most durable U.S. Navy ship ever.

The Navy is sending the mammoth aircraft carrier John F. Kennedy, the amphibious command ship Mount Whitney, the destroyer John Hancock and the ocean tug Papago, standing in review.

The parade begins five days of festival events, including vessels open to the public at the Boston Army Base Pier.

On June 7, the sailing ships assemble outside Boston Harbor for start of the Donald McKay Race to Halifax, N.S.

The Tall Ships visited the Port of Boston for the nation's Bicentennial in 1976 and for the city's birthday party in 1980.

East meets West in NBA finals

NBA Finals

BOSTON (AP) — It's the grand finale of the National Basketball Association season, the Boston Celtics and the Los Angeles Lakers.

It's the board-banging, blue-collar workers of the Eastern establishment against the glittery, gold-clad greyhounds of the West. It's the Magic Show and the Birdman. It's the team with the top regular-season record and the team with the second best mark.

It's the war the world wanted.

It all begins today when the ball is tossed for the opening tip toward the 14 green-and-white championship flags that flutter from the Boston Garden rafters.

It's the final best-of-seven series of the playoffs from which a new NBA champion will emerge.

"Everybody in the world, I think, wanted this matchup," says Boston Coach K.C. Jones. "L.A. and Boston, East against West."

"This is the dream series," said Boston forward Cedric Maxwell. "Everybody's watching us. We have the headlines in professional basketball and, really, all of sports for the next couple of weeks.

"Boston has always been classified as the bourgeois, sophisticated crowd, and L.A. has always been classified as the jet-setters," he added. "If there's an America's basketball team, I think we are it, kind of the working class guys. And if there is a glamour team, it's been L.A., most of the time, being out there in Hollywood."

Boston, the 1981 champion in its last appearance in the Final Two, rolled to a 62-20 record this season. In the playoffs, it downed Washington, New York and Milwaukee to capture the Eastern crown.

Los Angeles, the 1980 and 1982 champion before losing to Philadelphia in last year's finals, is making its fourth appearance in the title round in five years. It was 54-28 in the regular season, then eliminated Kansas City and Dallas before advancing Friday night with a 99-97 victory over Phoenix that gave the Lakers the Western title, 4-2.

The last time Boston and Los Angeles met in the playoffs, the Celtics beat the Lakers, 4-3, for the 1969 title. The Lakers want to even the score.

"Everybody's looking forward to it," said Earvin "Magic" Johnson, the director of Los Angeles' up-tempo offense. "We're two knowledgeable basketball teams. It's going to be a great running series."

It will provide a rare opportunity to gauge the talents of Johnson and Boston's Larry Bird on the same court. In their two regular-season meetings, the Lakers won 111-109 in Boston and 116-108 in Los Angeles.

"I don't even try to get involved in that. It's media hype," said Bird, who led Boston in scoring in the last 11 games and 14 of the Celtics' 16 playoff contests. "He handles the ball better, and I shoot a little better...You can get down to all these details that you want to get down to, but I compare Magic Johnson to me in the respect that he's a winner, just like I am."

Maxwell, the most valuable player when Boston beat Houston in the 1981 finals, said the Bird-Johnson comparison is emphasized "because they're the two greatest all-around players right now in the game."

But, he added, "probably the biggest story is going to be the supporting cast. It's going to be the difference in who wins it and who loses it."

Nicklaus angry over TV decision

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, annoyed that his Memorial tournament faced the possibility of an early-hour finish to accommodate television, took a broad swipe at the networks and charged: "The true fact of the matter is that TV controls the game of golf, period."

"It's a case of the tail wagging the dog," said Nicklaus, founder, sponsor and host of the tournament, and designer of the Muirfield Village Golf Club on which the event is played.

Nicklaus was concerned Friday that the tournament faced the possibility of a 2:30 p.m. finish Sunday in order to accommodate TV coverage of a seventh Los Angeles-Phoenix NBA playoff game. That possibility was removed when Los Angeles won the series in six games Friday night. The Memorial now is scheduled for a 6 p.m. Sunday finish.

Nicklaus, the tournament sponsor, had no say in the matter, however, and that appeared to be his central complaint.

"Sure, we like to have the Memorial on television. We like to have the national exposure. But our main concern is with the people on the premises, the people who come to see the tournament.

"With an early finish, they're cheated out of half a day of the final round. We're looking at using two tees — and that's terrible — and a 7 or 7:30 start.

"I'd like to be able to say we're going to play at such and such a time, have a 6 o'clock finish and if the networks want to televise it, fine. If not, that's fine, too.

"The networks have too much say. The fact is, television controls the game of golf, period.

"And Deane agrees with me."

PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman, however, was not in full agreement.

"Today, he is a sponsor and talking as a sponsor," Beman said Saturday from his headquarters in Ponte Vedra, Fla. "When he was just a player, it was somebody else's problem. Now he faces the compromises the sponsors always have faced."

And the accommodation of television is a compromise, Beman said.

"We have accepted their money which supports our tournaments' prize money and to support golf. In accepting their money, we also have to accept certain conditions; we have to accommodate TV in the time they want to put it on the air.

"It is not perfect. It is a compromise."

Mark Carlson, a spokesman for CBS which will televise the Memorial and has rights to broadcast the NBA playoffs, said Nicklaus "has known for several weeks that (the) possibility existed" for the tournament being played earlier Sunday.

Carlson also said CBS would have been in a "can't win situation" if the Los Angeles-Phoenix series went to a seventh game.

"We'd have somebody mad at us," he said. "The network couldn't ask L.A. to start at 10 a.m. If we asked L.A. to play at 10 a.m. in the last game of their series, we'd have (NBA) people upset and if we had golf start at 1 p.m. those folks would be upset. Actually, the entire situation is moot (now)."

Softball: A big hit

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

When the Midland Softball Association first organized itself in the mid-1960's, few could foresee where the tiny group of enthusiasts would be in 1984.

But 20 years after seven teams and approximately 150 players formed the inaugural season of Midland city league softball, the sport is thriving. Just ask MSA director Chuck Swallow.

"I've had softball-related calls at all hours of the day and night. Once I got a call at a quarter to seven in the morning," said Swallow.

Swallow could arbitrarily be called "Mr. Softball" as far as the sport in Midland goes. Although the MSA as a whole runs the city's only adultsoftball program, it is Swallow who troubleshoots the day-to-day operations.

BY 1964's standards, Swallow's job might not be so challenging. However, with a current 21-game season in progress, the MSA enlisted around 200 teams to play in the first '84 season. A shorter season runs in the fall. By year's end, the MSA's ranks will have served just under 300 teams and about 4,500 Midlanders.

"On top of that," said Swallow, "through families, friends, sponsors and other people that come to Hogan Park to see friends play, softball in Midland will probably touch about 10,000 peoples' lives this year."

It isn't exactly cheap to play softball. Team entry fees alone run $400. In addition, each player must cough up an additional $20 in player fees. Since a softball team utilizes ten players (an extra outfielder, or "rover", plays), a basic amount of $600 before strike one is called represents an apparent obstacle. Yet, the MSA is currently busier than ever, and Swallow has an overworn answering machine as testamony. Money has proven no object. "The economy has a little effect," Swallow says of the costs involved. "With fewer sponsors, there's less money to give. But even in that case, a lot of players will chip in and come up with the money just to have the opportunity to play."

With nearly 300 teams expected to compete in MSA organized leagues this year, and at a minimum of $600 per team, disgruntled players may feel the prices are inflated. Not so, however. Overhead alone will consume most of the MSA funds this year. Swallow places the estimates of co-ordinating two seasons per year at approximately $200,000. On entry fees alone, the MSA would not stay as stable without a board of softball believers and intense local interest.

As 1984 has gone, MSA may stretch the budget. Two and a half days of games have already been postponed due to uncharacteristic rains, and another full evening's slate was "blown out" by a more common West Texas dust blast. All games will be resceduled and played.

OBVIOUSLY, THE game has tremendous appeal to West Texans, and people in general around the United States. Why?

"It's very ego fulfilling," posited Swallow. "The ball is larger, you can hit it. Anybody can play. People go up to the plate and think, 'Alright, Mickey Mantle, there's two on in the bottom of the ninth with the score tied, there's two outs, here's the pitch...'

"Midland is a hotbed for softball in Texas. We've had several state champions in the past ten years."

Indeed, four Midland squads have been crowned Texas' best. Smith Brothers Pipe ('73), Goodrich ('77, '81) and Fluid Engineering ('80) have nabbed championships.

For hard-core players, the MSA seeds its' divisions so that the competitive oriented teams can play with intensity, while the other divisions filter down to what Swallow says was the prime directive anyway: "We emphasize it is a recreational league. We're not out to set up a world championship softball league. We just want to give people a chance to play and have a form of recreation."

And as any softball player will likely relate, the joys of playing softball can be many. Friendships are made, businessmen fraternize under non-business settings, people unwind. It is this special comraderie that is part of softball's intangible charm.

"It's rewarding," Swallow said. "A lot of people show their appreciation, which keeps me around softball. The opportunity to bring some relaxation and fun into somebody's life is one of the big things I enjoy about it."

Fastest field chases 68th Indy 500

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Speed. Sheer, sizzling speed.

Thirty-three of the fastest vehicles built to stay on the ground will take the green flag today for the start of the 68th Indianapolis 500.

It's the fastest field in the history of auto racing, a battery of missiles capable of straightaway speeds in excess of 215 mph. Coincidentally, it is probably the most competitive field ever at Indy.

Raw speed and competitive balance. It adds up to danger.

"It's up to us how safe this race is," said defending champion Tom Sneva, who helped break all the qualifying records for this year's race by winning the pole with an average speed of 210.029 mph.

"There are more guys in this field with a chance to win than I can ever remember. It's going to take more concentration and more good driving to win this year, and it's going to take concentration and a little luck to stay out of trouble."

Practice and qualifying for this year's race were marked by a handful of spectacular crashes, the most serious involving Michael Chandler.

The son of the Times-Mirror editor in chief Otis Chandler was in a coma for 2½ days after a piece of his car's suspension broke in the wreck and shattered his helmet's face shield. He has regained consciousness but remains hospitalized with his condition reported to be improving.

Many of the drivers in the 33-car field — including 32 who qualified at more than 200 mph — say they will have to be able to run laps averaging as much as 204-205 around the Indianapolis Motor Speedway's 2½-mile oval.

The single fastest race lap in the 67 previous Indy 500s was 200.525 by Rick Mears in 1982. The all-time race record is 162.962 by the late Mark Donohue in 1972.

"If you don't have the ability to run laps that high comfortably, then you're probably not going to have a chance to win," said Mears, the 1979 winner who will start from the outside of the front row. "We may not have to go that quick, depending on track conditions and the weather, but if we do it's going to tell the story."

"Sometime during the race, I'm not sure when, we're going to have to be able to go that fast," said Mario Andretti, who will be starting right behind Mears in the second row. "This track has a way of really deteriorating about halfway (through the race), then it gets better.

"Somehow, it's always like that. All the leakers are out of the way and all the cars that are running good are in there. And the track is taking different shape and gets good again. I think to be in contention, you're going to have to run that kind of a speed at the end if you need to. And you might very well need to."

Andretti was slowed in qualifications by an electrical malfunction on his Lola-Cosworth, one of only four non-Marches in this field spiced with foreign flavor and seven former winners. But Andretti actually was the fastest in practice this month, the 1969 Indy winner hitting several laps over 212.

The 44-year-old Andretti heads into the race as the co-favorite with Sneva, 35, and Mears, 32.

Sneva, whose victory last May was his first here after three second-place finishes, has the opportunity to become the first winner of consecutive Indys since Al Unser won the 1970 and 1971 races.

Sixteen drivers have won this race from the pole, Bobby Unser doing it last in 1981. But three of them have been since 1979, indicating the importance of front-running speed.

"Right now, the way I look at it, the main guys I'm going to have to beat are Sneva and Mears," Andretti said. "It's their consistency and performance, though I wouldn't be at all shocked if another surprise came along.

"When it comes to oval racing, Tom's as aggressive as they come," Andretti said. "If his equipment is up to snuff, you've got a job on your hands because he knows how to get everything out of a car. Today, he's as tough a competitor as you're going to have on an oval.

"And Mears is the same way. He's very calculated and he's very consistent and strong. Both of them are capable of getting ten-tenths out of the car for 500 miles. You know you're not gonna break 'em physically or mentally. That's what you're up against. And they're not the only two capable of getting ten-tenths out of their car and not breaking down in competition."

Andretti said the race is "going to a barnburner.

"I don't think it's going to be any tougher to win. I think it's going to be tougher than hell to finish fifth. I think as far as winning, it's always been tough. I've come through the pack here from the back many times, and zipped right to the front. But I'll tell you what: As soon as you get close, come to the top three, you come to a screeching halt. Then you start working.

"The way it's going to be (Sunday), you're going to have to start working hard right from 20th on. Looking at the speeds and quality of cars, you're not going to whiz by anybody. It's going to be tough even lapping cars.

Longhorns rip Rebels in NCAA

AUSTIN (AP) — The University of Texas used a balanced performance — strong pitching from Wade Phillips and timely hitting from Dennis Cook — to humble the University of Nevada-Las Vegas 12-3 in the NCAA Central Regional Baseball Tournament.

The Longhorns, defending NCAA champs, advanced in the winner's bracket and now await the winner of Sunday's Nevada-Las Vegas-Lamar elimination game. Lamar stayed alive Saturday by edging Oklahoma 4-3.

Phillips had a shutout going until the sixth inning, when Matt Williams doubled in Steve Moser. Until that inning, Phillips had allowed just four base runners.

Moser added an RBI and scored himself in the two-run eighth.

While Phillips held the Rebels at bay, Longhorn batters pounded four UNLV pitchers. Todd Stottlemyre — son of former New York Yankees pitcher Mel Stottlemyre and brother of the Rebel's winning pitcher on Friday, Mel Jr. — was the first victim.

After retiring Texas in order in the first inning, Stottlemyre gave up a double, a single, an RBI single and walked in two runs — all in the second inning.

In the third, Stottlemyre gave up a lead-off double before coach Fred Dallimore pulled him for Ken Bray.

But Bray fared little better. He walked the next batter, which brought Cook to the plate. Cook slammed a three-run homer over the centerfield fence to put the Longhorns up 6-0.

Texas third baseman Jamie Doughty broke the school single season RBI record in the fifth when his double off Bray knocked in David Wrzesinski.

Steve Labay led off the Longhorn fifth with a solo homer. Bill Bates added an RBI single and scored on an error, and Doug Hodo singled and scored on a fly to right field.

That was all for Bray. Relievers John Stein and Ken Henning held the Longhorns to just one hit in the final three innings.

In the earlier match Saturday, Lamar designated hitter Neil Reynolds knocked in three runs to defeated Oklahoma 4-3 in the elimination game.

Lamar, 44-21, clinched the win with a three-run fifth inning keyed by Reynolds' bases-loaded single that sent two runs across. The Cardinals picked up the third run on third baseman Chris Zink's sacrifice fly.

The three-run inning against Oklahoma starter Keith Hamilton broke up a 1-1 tie. Both teams scored in the first, the Sooners breaking on top on designated hitter John Toal's homer into the left-field parking lot at Disch-Falk Field.

Lamar tied it in the bottom of the first when Reynolds singled in Eddie Donohoe, who walked and went to second on a botched pick-off try.

Oklahoma added a run in the seventh when center fielder Scott Ferguson doubled in Jay Searcy, who walked. The Sooners pulled to within one when Ferguson doubled and Curtis Parham singled him in with two out in the ninth.

Lamar starter David Poss yielded eight hits and went all the way to raise his record to 10-5. Hamilton was the loser, picking up his first loss against six wins.

Oklahoma was a 2-1 loser to Las Vegas in a first-round game Friday. The Sooners end the season at 42-15.

Lamar was beaten 6-0 by defending national champ Texas on Friday.

Aggies fall to OSU

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma State's John Farrell stifled Texas A&M on six hits, and the third-ranked Cowboys stopped the Aggies, 5-0, to advance to the championship game of the NCAA Midwest Regional baseball tournament.

Oklahoma State, 56-13, advanced to a Saturday evening game against Oklahoma City. The Cowboys lost to Oklahoma City 5-2 Friday night, and would have to beat the Chiefs twice to win the regional title and advance to the College World Series.

Texas A&M, the Southwest Conference runner-up, was eliminated from the playoff and finished its season 41-21. It was the final game for head coach Tom Chandler, who earlier this season announced his retirement after 26 years as the Aggies' top man.

Farrell, 11-2, walked three and struck out 10 batters, and allowed only one A&M runner to reach third base. The 6-4 senior from Monmouth Beach, N.J., was never in danger of giving up a run.

His teammates boosted his confidence by scoring all five runs in the first three innings, including a four-run third frame off losing pitcher Sherman Corbett, 6-5.

Farrell's performance overshadowed a spectacular effort by Texas A&M reliever Chris Huchingson, who came in for Corbett with one out in the bottom of the third. Huchingson, a junior from Bryan, Texas, set down every Oklahoma State batter he faced — 17 straight.

Los Angeles downs Wranglers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kevin Nelson's 2-yard touchdown run with 32 seconds left gave the Los Angeles Express a 24-17 victory over the Arizona Wranglers in a United States Football League game before a crowd of 11,702 at the Coliseum.

The scoring play was set up by a 58-yard interception return by Troy West.

The win gave Los Angeles sole possession of second place in the Pacific Division at 7-7. Arizona, which went into game tied with the Express, fell to 6-8.

The Express entered the fourth quarter trailing 17-14, but tied the game with 2:18 left in the game on Tony Zendejas' 43-yard field goal.

Arizona took over and, in six plays, moved the ball from their 27 to the 47. The drive ended when Arizona quarterback Greg Landry's pass, thrown into a crowd at the Express 40, was picked off by West, who returned it down the left sideline to the Wrangler 2.

Arizona took a 7-0 lead on the first of two Tim Spencer touchdowns.

The Express tied it on their next possession, an 11-play drive, capped by quarterback Steve Young's 6-yard touchdown run.

Arizona took a 10-7 halftime lead when Frank Corral kicked a 34-yard field goal with 20 seconds remaining in the half.

Brett returns in grand style with six RBI in triumph

BOSTON (AP) — As he stepped to the plate in the first inning, George Brett of the Kansas City Royals looked at the scoreboard and read his season figures: .292 average, 0 homers, 1 RBI.

Brett took care of that in a hurry, driving in six runs with a single, triple and home run in sparking the Kansas City Royals to an 11-7 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Sox reliever Bob Stanley, roughed up for the second time in a row, took out his anger by smashing his chair in the clubhouse. The chair was given him by right-hander Dennis Eckersley — after Eckersley was traded to the Chicago Cubs on Friday.

Birds bedevil Angels

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Two-run homers by John Lowenstein and Rick Dempsey powered the Baltimore Orioles to a 9-5 victory over the California Angels.

Baltimore wasted no time in getting to former New York Met right-hander Craig Swan in his American League debut, scoring twice in the first inning on an RBI triple by Cal Ripken and Eddie Murray's run-scoring single.

After scoring a run in the bottom of the first on Rod Carew's sacrifice fly, the Angels grabbed a 3-2 lead on Fred Lynn's first of two home runs, a two-run blow in the third.

Winner Mike Boddicker, 5-4, scattered eight hits and left the game in the ninth after giving up a leadoff homer to Juan Beniquez, his third, and a one-out single to Mike Brown. Tippy Martinez finished up for the Orioles. Lynn slammed his second homer of the game and his sixth of the season in the eighth, after the Orioles had scored a run in the top of the inning.

Twins win on error

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Shortstop Robin Yount's throwing error in the bottom of the ninth inning allowed Tim Teufel to score from second base and give the Minnesota Twins a 7-6 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Winning pitcher Pete Filson, 4-1, pitched 5 1-3 innings of three-hit relief, to get the victory. Filson retired the last 11 batters he faced.

Indians stumble, 2-1

TORONTO (AP) — The Cleveland Indians, who have lost more than their share of baseball games the last few years, discovered a new way to blow a tight game.

Shoddy baserunning in the fourth inning and shoddy fielding in the seventh kept the Indians to one run and allowed the Toronto Blue Jays to score two and turn a few more of Cleveland Manager Pat Corrales' hairs gray.

In the fourth inning, the Indians had runners on first and third with one out when a fly ball to left resulted in an unusual double play after Julio Franco held at third and Andre Thornton was thrown out trying to advance to second.

In the seventh, Cleveland second baseman Tony Bernazard couldn't come up with a Willie Upshaw grounder and made a wild, hurried throw to the plate to allow the Blue Jays to tie the game 1-1.

Kittle snaps drought

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Ron Kittle drilled two homers and Vance Law hit another as the Chicago White Sox snapped a 24-inning scoring drought with a 5-1 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Kittle, who had struck out seven times in his last nine at-bats, homered with two out in the fourth inning to tie the game 1-1. It was Chicago's first run in three games. Harold Baines then drew a walk and Law hit his fifth homer of the season deep into the left-field seats off Mike Mason, 2-3.

Yankees crumble A's

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Don Mattingly and Tim Foli had three hits and two RBI apiece and Ray Fontenot gained his first victory of the season as the New York Yankees downed the Oakland A's 8-4.

Horner plucks Cards

ATLANTA (AP) — Bob Horner keyed a four-run fifth inning with a two-run single and also singled home another run in the seventh to lead the Atlanta Braves to a 7-3 triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Jerry Royster, pinch-hitting for starter Rich Mahler, 2-1, led off the fifth with a single. Royster advanced to second on an error by Cardinal second baseman Tommy Herr on Albert Hall's grounder. One out later, Dale Murphy doubled in a run and Chris Chambliss was walked intentionally to load the bases prior to Horner's two-run single.

Gerald Perry, who had doubled in the Braves' first run in the second inning, giving him six straight hits over three games, then singled home Chambliss and chased Neil Allen, 2-1. Allen had relieved Cardinal starter John Stuper after a rain delay of two hours and one minute in the second inning.

Brooks' streak fuels Met victory

NEW YORK (AP) — Hubie Brooks extended the major league's longest hitting streak to 20 games Saturday with a home run to help the New York Mets beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 2-1 Saturday, but still isn't thinking about any records.

"I'm at 20 now," said Hubie. "That's a long way from one, but it's still a longer way to 56 (the major league record set by Yankee Joe Dimaggio in 1941) or 57."

Brooks blasted his homer in the seventh inning and Wally Backman delivered the game-winning run with a single later in the inning.

Tim Leary, 2-2, pitched three innings of scoreless relief for the victory, while Jesse Orosco recorded his eighth save.

Leary relieved starter Ed Lynch, who was forced to leave the game after breaking a blood vessel in his right thumb while striking out in the third inning.

Tom Niedenfuer, 1-4, who relieved Orel Hershiser in the seventh inning, absorbed the loss.

Cubs fall to Reds on pinch single

CHICAGO (AP) — Pinch-hitter Tony Perez delivered a two-run single with two out in the ninth inning, leading the Cincinnati Reds to a 7-6 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

One-out errors by second baseman Ryne Sandberg and shortstop Larry Bowa on consecutive ground balls by Eric Davis and Cesar Cedeno opened the door for the Reds' rally.

A ground ball by Dave Parker moved the runners to second and third, setting the stage for Perez' game-winning hit to right off Steve Trout, 5-3.

Bill Scherrer, 1-0, was the winner with relief help from Ted Power, who gained his second save.

Astros' Ryan wins fifth straight

HOUSTON (AP) — Nolan Ryan pitched a five-hitter for his fifth consecutive victory and second shutout of the season and passed Philadelphia's Steve Carlton for the all-time major-league strikeout lead as the Houston Astros defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates 2-0.

Ryan, 6-2, struck out nine and walked one. The nine strikeouts gave him 3,758 for his career, one ahead of Carlton in the continuing race between the top two strikeout pitchers in baseball history.

The Astros scored both their runs in the fifth inning against Jose Deleon, 2-2. Bill Doran led off with a triple and scored on a double by Terry Puhl, who came home on Craig Reynolds' single.

The Pirates threatened twice in the game. Jason Thompson singled in the second inning and took second on Johnny Ray's single but was thrown out at the plate by Jerry Mumphrey after Lee Mazzilli singled to center.

Phillies drench San Diego, 7-2

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Sixto Lezcano hit a three-run homer and Len Matuszek doubled home two runs as the Philadelphia Phillies defeated the San Diego Padres 7-2 in a game delayed 59 minutes by rain.

Marty Bystrom, 2-1, pitched five innings and allowed all four San Diego hits before the rains came. Bill Campbell and Al Holland each pitched two hitless innings.

Although starter Mark Thurmond, 3-3, was the loser, the Phillies broke the game open in the seventh inning against Dave Dravecky.

Gullickson ends slide for Expos

MONTREAL (AP) — Gary Carter broke a 2-2 tie with a two-run homer in the fifth inning and Bill Gullickson scattered six hits over seven innings for his first victory of the season as the Montreal Expos defeated the San Francisco Giants 4-2.

Tim Raines opened the fifth by drawing a walk from Bill Laskey, 1-5, making his first start in 10 days after suffering back spasms.

Soff, Carpio combine for shutout over Travs

From Staff Reports

LITTLE ROCK — Ray Soff and Jorge Carpio combined for a three-hit shutout over the Arkansas Travelers here Saturday night as the Midland Cubs took a 4-0 victory to win the series between the two teams by a 3-2 margin.

Soff, who picked up his first win of the year, pitched six innings of three-hit ball before being lifted for a pinch hitter in the bottom of the sixth.

Carpio picked up the save with three innings of hitless relief to save the shutout. Soff walked three batters and struckout four while Carpio walked two and KOed four Travelers.

While Soff and Carpio were untouchable on the mound, the Cub offense generated four runs in four different innings. Rick Baker scored on Shawon Dunston's single to open the first inning and that was all the Cubs needed. Jeff Jones connected for his fifth homer of the year in the Cub third.

Midland, now winners of five of their last eight games, travel to Tulsa today for the beginning of a seven-game series with the Drillers. Midland is 2-1 this year against Tulsa.

NBA

In the last game against Phoenix, Los Angeles' starting lineup included Kurt Rambis, James Worthy, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Michael Cooper and Johnson. Mike McGee, Byron Scott, Bob McAdoo, Jamaal Wilkes and Swen Nater are the key men off the bench.

Bird is joined in Boston's starting five by Maxwell, Robert Parish, Dennis Johnson and Gerald Henderson. Kevin McHale, Danny Ainge, Quinn Buckner, Scott Wedman and M.L. Carr give the Celtics a strong bench.

"On paper, it's a very even contest," Maxwell said. "They are a better running team than we are. I think they get up and down the floor more but, at the same time, I think that we're a better defensive club than they are and we're a better rebounding club...I think the advantages and disadvantages kind of balance out in the end."

Bird said the only slight advantage Boston, which ended its series with Milwaukee Wednesday night, might have is that the Lakers had to play Friday night, then fly cross-country Saturday for Sunday's noon tipoff.

"They can be much more physical than Phoenix," Worthy said. "But playing Phoenix probably helped us. They'll probably try to wear us down, thinking that we'll be tired."

"We're not worried about the cross-country flight and not getting enough rest this time," said McAdoo. "Last year (in the playoffs) we were hurting, with me out and James out with a broken leg. Now it's different. We're in good shape."

So is Boston, which has won all nine home playoff games and has a 15-game winning streak on its own court, where the second game will be Thursday night.

Soviet sets record

BRATISLAVA, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Sergei Bubka of the Soviet Union set a world record in the pole vault with a height of 19 feet, 2¼ inches (585 centimeters) at an international track meet Saturday night.

The Soviet vaulter beat the old mark of France's Thierry Vigneron, 19-1½ (583 centimeters), set Sept. 1, 1983 in Rome.

Key matchups for NBA finals

A closer look at the Lakers-Celtics series

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Key players in the Los Angeles Lakers-Boston Celtics National Basketball Association Championship Series, which starts today in Boston:

BOSTON CELTICS

Larry Bird — 6-foot-9 forward. Has followed brilliant regular season with brilliant playoff performances. Leading Celtics scorer in 14 of 16 playoff games, including last 11 in a row. Averaging 27.5 points in the playoffs, even better than his 24.2 of regular season. Second-leading rebounder and top assist man on the team. Always seems to be in the right place at the right time.

Robert Parish — 7-0 center. Has not performed up to All-Star standard during playoffs, although still has been team's top rebounder. May be key to victory for Boston since Lakers figure to be less physical than Eastern Conference opponents. Averaged 19 points per game in regular season, but only 14.6 in playoffs and only 12 in Eastern finals against Milwaukee.

Dennis Johnson — 6-4 guard. Defensive stalwart who has played well offensively in playoffs. Was team's fourth-leading scorer during season, has been No. 2 in playoffs with 16-point norm. Championship Series MVP for Seattle in 1979.

Cedric Maxwell — 6-8 forward. Guards opponent's most offensive-minded forward. Another defensive standout whose offense picked up after slow start in playoffs. Averaging 11.4 points for entire playoffs, but was 15.8 against Milwaukee. MVP in Championship Series when Celtics won in 1981.

Gerald Henderson — 6-2 guard. Averaging 12.6 points for playoffs, but is erratic. Had 19 points in the second half of third game against Milwaukee, zero in first half.

Kevin McHale — 6-10 center-forward. As NBA's Sixth Man Award winner, gets more playing time than many starters. In playoffs, has been unstoppable at home, miserable on the road. Shooting 64.6 percent from the field at Boston Garden, 36.8 percent elsewhere. He and Parish are outstanding shot-blockers.

Danny Ainge — 6-4 guard. Probably will be top shooting guard substitute against Lakers because of speed advantage over Scott Wedman. After heralded college career, has been a disappointment. Averaging 4.1 points in playoffs.

Quinn Buckner — 6-3 guard. Former football player at Indiana, tough defender. Scores little, but makes few mistakes and has playoff experience.

LOS ANGELES LAKERS

Earvin "Magic" Johnson — 6-9 guard. Voted NBA's "Pivotal Player" as top all-around performer, and only Bird rivals him for that distinction. Averaging 15 assists in last nine games, including NBA playoff record of 24 in Game 2 against Phoenix. Had 16 points, 11 rebounds and 13 assists in Friday night's Western Conference clincher against Phoenix. Championship Series MVP when Lakers won in 1980 and 1982.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar — 7-2 center. When the Lakers' fast break isn't there, look for them to go inside to the NBA's all-time leading scorer. Leading scorer and rebounder for Lakers in playoffs. Shooting better than 60 percent from the field.

Michael Cooper — 6-5 guard-forward. Has started every playoff game after serving as team's No. 1 man off the bench during the season. One of seven Lakers averaging in double figures for the playoffs, and is speedy wing man on the break, but is relied on mainly for defense. Runs the offense as point guard when Johnson rests.

James Worthy — 6-9 forward. Got rare start against Phoenix Friday night and scored 22 points after hitting 23 in previous outing. Scored in double figures in every postseason game. Very quick for size.

Kurt Rambis — 6-8 forward. Most physical Laker who will get the tough rebound. Will get nearly as many rebounds as points, but will look for a pass if left free near the basket.

Bob McAdoo — 6-9 center-forward. Much-maligned for defense, but can ignite any slumbering offense with his shooting. Had off-night in Friday's game against the Suns, but still averaging nearly 15 points in playoffs, including three games with 20 or more.

Mike McGee — 6-5 guard. Started every playoff game until Friday, when he played only five minutes and scored two points. Before then, had averaged 14.6 points and had 20 or more three times in playoffs after averaging less than 10 points during season. Can be superb in a run-and-gun game.

Byron Scott — 6-3 guard. Rookie who started slowly in regular season and finished strong. Averaging nearly 16 points during playoffs following 10.6 norm in regular season.

Jamaal Wilkes — 6-6 forward. Parasitic infection severely limited his playing time in last two months, but encouraged team by hitting two long shots in second half of Game 6 against Phoenix. Status still doubtful, but has been valuable player for years.

Kremlin says boycott not political

Olympics

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin's chief spokesman on Saturday said the West was wrong to view Soviet withdrawal from the Los Angeles Olympics as revenge for the U.S.-led boycott of the 1980 Moscow Games or as a calculated political move.

Meanwhile, in Geneva, Switzerland, an International Olympics Committee official said IOC president Juan Antonio Samaranch will travel to Moscow next week in another apparent attempt to get Soviet officials to reverse their boycott decision.

And the official Soviet news agency Tass said South Yemen has decided to join 10 other communist countries in withdrawing from the Games. However, there was no official announcement from South Yemen, an ally of the Soviet Union in the Middle East.

In the first public comment here from a senior political official about the Olympic boycott, Kremlin spokesman Leonid Zamyatin said on Soviet television that the decision not to go to Los Angeles was determined solely by concern for athletes' safety.

"Our sportsmen were getting ready to participate in Los Angeles but they were preparing for honest competition to defend the national merits of Soviet sportsmen," Zamyatin said.

"They were definitely not preparing to fight all kinds of outcasts, politicians and criminal elements which had and still do have intentions to use the Olympics to carry out their anti-Soviet provocative plans," he said.

However, under a plan being explored by Olympic organizers, athletes from boycotting countries may still be invited to compete.

Peter V. Ueberroth, president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, said the possibility will be raised during a meeting next week with the IOC in Lausanne, Switzerland.

He said Friday the LAOOC has communicated with a dozen Eastern bloc athletes who were interested in competing.

Zamyatin blamed "U.S. propaganda" for arguments that the decision not to go to Los Angeles resulted from a tough Kremlin foreign policy or a desire to avenge the U.S. boycott of the Moscow Games and said, "This is a wrong evaluation."

"To consider that a political decision was made or that the decsion comes from a concept of 'eye for eye, tooth for tooth' is an incorrect description of our policy," he said.

"We support competitions in sports arenas, but not competitions with some kind of groups, politicians or provocateurs. That is what determined the position of the Soviet National Olympic Committee about the non-participation of Soviet sportsmen.

"We highly prize these Soviet people and we know how to protect them," he said.

Zamyatin, who heads the international information department of the Communist Party's influential Central Committee, was speaking on the television program "Studio Nine," a regular foreign affairs program in which he answers letters sent by Soviet viewers.

Zamyatin's proffered reasons for not going to Los Angeles did not differ from comments made in a well-run media campaign against the Olympics and statements by Soviet NOC chief Marat Gramov since the boycott was announced on May 8.

But his comments did represent a departure from the Soviet policy so far of keeping political officials out of the Olympics furor. No Politburo member or other top official has publicly commented on the withdrawal from Los Angeles, which has been presented as a matter purely for sports officials on the NOC.

Gramov is, however, a member of the Central Committee and Western diplomats in Moscow have speculated that the decision to pull out of the Olympics was approved by the ruling Politburo.

Zamyatin's comments appeared aimed at reinforcing domestic support for the Soviet boycott, which has been justified by an increasingly shrill anti-American campaign in Soviet media.

In Geneva, the IOC official, who spoke on condition he would not be identified, said Samaranch would not be able to leave for Moscow until at least Thursday because of a three-day meeting of the IOC executive board.

On May 10 Samaranch wrote to Gramov requesting a meeting with Soviet leader Konstantin Chernenko to try to reverse the boycott decision.

The official said he did not know if Gramov had replied to the letter or whether Samaranch would be able to see Chernenko.

Samaranch told West German television Friday he will be accompanied on his trip by Mario Vazquez Rana of Mexico, president of the Association of National Olympic Committees, and Primo Nebiolo of Italy, chairman of the Association of Olympic Summer Sports Federations.

In Prague last week Samaranch had attended a meeting of Communist sports officials from nations boycotting the Games, but was unable to convince them to reverse their decision.

Pfitzinger wins marathon trials

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Pete Pfitzinger, given little chance to earn a spot on the U.S. Olympic team, dramatically spurted past Alberto Salazar in the final 100 yards and won the Men's Marathon Trials Saturday.

The lightly regarded, 26-year-old Pfitzinger, of West Newton, Mass., finished in a career-best time of 2 hours, 11 minutes, 43 seconds, beating Salazar, owner of the fastest marathon time in history, by one second.

It was a gutty, surprising performance by Pfitzinger, whose previous best time was 2:12:34 in last year's Montreal International Marathon.

Pfitzinger, along with Salazar, runner-up in 2:11:44, and John Tuttle, third in 2:11:50, will comprise the U.S. team that will compete in the Olympic Marathon Aug. 12 at Los Angeles.

The alternates for the U.S. team will be Dave Gordon, fourth in 2:11:59; Deam Matthews, fifth in 2:12:26, and Tony Sandoval, sixth in 2:12:42. Sandoval had won the 1980 Trials and was fourth in the 1976 event.

His two teammates on the 1980 squad that did not compete in the Moscow Olympics because of the U.S. boycott — Benji Durden and Kyle Heffner — were not factors in Saturday's race. Durden dropped after about 12 miles because of a foot injury, and Heffner, slowed by injuries for about 2½ years starting in April 1981, finished 22nd in 2:18:45.

Greg Meyer, the 1983 Boston Marathon winner and one of the favorites Saturday, wound up seventh in 2:13:30, edging 36-year-old Bill Rodgers, a 1976 Olympian and a four-time winner of the Boston Marathon and New York City Marathon. Rodgers was eighth in the same time as Meyer.

While some of the big-name runners failed to live up to expectations, the unheralded Pfitzinger far exceeded his expectations.

"Who expected Pfitzinger to win?" said the surprised Salazar, whose time was 3½ minutes slower than his world-best of 2:08:13 set in the 1981 New York City Marathon.

"But this is a race where some people can come out of the woodwork, because there's not as much pressure on them," added Salazar, who ran a courageous race after having suffered emotional and physical problems, most recently a metatarsal injury on the top of his left foot less than four weeks ago.

Pfitzinger's effort not only was surprising in view of the fact that he won, but the way in which he won, with his closing charge past Salazar and Tuttle, after the two had passed him with less than a mile remaining.

In that situation, and with third place and a berth on the team virtually assured, a runner often does not come back.

INDY

"There's only couple, three cars that are a year old. They're all sort of state-of-the-art in one way or another. Sure, not everybody's got the hot setup, but they're not that far away. And they're just fast enough they can really give you a lot of trouble and make the traffic situation very, very tough and very unpredictable."

The 33 fastest qualifiers averaged a mind-boggling 203.692 mph.

Later, Canadian Indy-car rookie Jacques Villeneuve was ruled medically unfit to drive due to the effects of a concussion suffered in a crash during practice last week in his backup car. His car, the slowest of the original qualifiers at 200.013, was withdrawn from the lineup and replaced by the car of Chris Kneifel, who originally qualified 34th at 199.831.

That dropped the starting field's average to 203.686, still more than 5 mph faster than last year's record of 198.406, when 10 cars were over 200.

Kneifel had been bumped by three-time winner Johnny Rutherford, the final driver to qualify, but will start 33rd by virtue of Villeneuve's team withdrawing the car Thursday. Rutherford starts 30th, qualifying at 202.062.

Joining Sneva and Mears in the front row is Sneva's teammate Howdy Holmes, who never has started better than 12th before and who finished sixth last May.

Michael Andretti's, Mario's 21-year-old son and the fastest of five first-year starters at Indianapolis, is on the outside of the second row, next to two-time Indy winner Gordon Johncock.

That means that the field will include two father-son combinations, with three-time Indy winner Al Unser and Al Unser Jr. in the race again after breaking that family barrier in the 1983 race.

Al Sr. will start from the outside of the fourth row, while his 22-year-old son will go from the outside of the fifth row.

The only other former champion in the race, four-time winner A.J. Foyt, will start his record 27th consecutive Indy 500 on the outside of the fourth row.

Even without Villeneuve, the foreign flavor remains. Rookies Roberto Guerrero of Colombia and Emerson Fittipaldi of Brazil — a two-time Formula One world champion — join veterans Teo Fabi of Italy, Geoff Brabham of Australia, Josele Garza of Mexico and Derek Daly of Ireland. That's the most foreign drivers in the race since eight started here in 1923.

"I can't even imagine what it's going to be like at the start of the race here," said Guerrero, a 25-year-old who has been a Formula One regular the past two seasons. "In qualifying (the first day), they say there were 200,000 people here. I couldn't believe what it was like driving around the track out there and seeing all those people. It is so narrow, you feel like you are right on top of them.

"I will try to be very conservative at the start and let the race itself help me find a pace. I don't think you can afford to make a mistake, especially early in the race."

The other element of foreign influence here this year is the cars. Both the dominant Marches and the Lolas are built in England. Twenty-nine of the Marches will be in the starting field, with two Lolas. The American-build starters are one Eagle, driven by Kevin Cogan, and one Primus, driven by Kneifel.

The English-built Cosworth turbocharged V8 engines are in 30 of the cars, with two of the Marches powered by experimental Buick V6 turbocharged power plants and the Eagle driven by a Pontiac V8 engine, the only non-turbocharged motor in the race.

The only other rookies in the race are sports car road racing champion Al Holbert and veteran road racer Tom Gloy.

"There really isn't anyone in this race that doesn't know how to drive," said Bobby Rahal, another road racer and a two-time Indy starter. "The first-year guys are really veterans. That's different than it's been the last couple of years, and it's probably a very good thing, considering the speeds we're likely to be racing at."

A crowd of more than 350,000 people is expected Sunday, with the National Weather Service forecasting cool, overcast weather and a chance of showers.

Danger a constant Indy presence

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The bullet-like racer whistles down the backstretch at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway at more than 210 mph, heading for the tight third turn.

Suddenly, a puff of smoke explodes from the right rear, and the car veers toward the white concrete wall surrounding the 2½-mile track.

It does a three-quarter spin and smashes the wall with a gut-wrenching thud. Pieces of the 1,600-pound racer spew from the carcass as the car grinds along.

It finally stops near the entrance to the fourth turn, more than 1,000 feet from the spot where the wall now is marked with a dirty swirl from the impact of a tire and a splotch of color from the side of the demolished car.

The smoke drifts away and there is an eerie silence before the track safety crews arrive. The driver, stunned by the impact, sits in the steaming remains, semiconscious, his head lolling to the side.

That scene involving Jacques Villeneuve, and several similar ones, occurred this month as drivers qualified at record speeds for Sunday's Indianapolis 500.

All of the drivers survived. Villeneuve suffered a concussion, which kept him in nearby Methodist Hospital for two days. Steve Chassey also suffered a concussion and Steve Krisiloff had a badly broken leg.

Michael Chandler, in an accident almost identical to Villeneuve's, suffered a cerebral contusion, a broken nose and cuts on his face. He has had to undergo minor plastic surgery and is making steady improvement after being in a coma for 2½ days, doctors said.

Danger and death are part of racing's world, and — as speeds climbed this May to a record average of 203.692 mph — talk of tragedy on the track has grown louder. Those involved, however, say the cars are safer than ever.

"The cars look fragile, but they're not," said Robin Herd, the chief designer of March race cars. All of the injured drivers except Chandler, in a Dan Gurney Eagle, were in Marches.

"All the new cars are made with space age materials," Herd continued, "like carbon fibers, and they are made with honeycomb construction — not because it's lighter, but because it's stronger.

"When these cars impact, they appear to just fall apart, to go to piece. But, what they do is absorb the impact and fling its energy away from the cockpit, away from the driver."

The key, Herd said, is making sure the "tub" — the central part of the car holding the cockpit — remains intact.

"The driver is protected in that coccoon as much as possible," he said.

Herd noted that both Villeneuve and Chandler were injured by flying debris, not the impact. Villeneuve was hit by a tire and Chandler by a piece of suspension that broke through the face shield of his helmet.

"We've got to do something about that, especially here at Indianapolis where the walls and fences are so close to the track. The debris is often flung back at the driver.

"Putting a protective shield behind and at the sides of the driver's head — maybe some sort of carbon fiber — would help. That could well be in next year's design."

Gordon Johncock, a veteran of 19 Indy races, reflects the view of most of the drivers about the integrity and safety of the race cars.

"We're going faster than we ever have before," said Johncock, a two-time Indy winner who will start from the middle of the second row in a March. "But I feel like these cars are safer at 210 than older cars were at 195.

"They are very stable and they're forgiving. You make a mistake and it's not the end. Most of the time you can correct. In the past, if you made a mistake, let the car get away even for a second, you were in trouble. This way, there are less guys crashing, so less injuries."

Most of the crashes at Indianapolis this month have been due to the suspension failure or flat tires.

An Indianapolis youngster greets the Olympic Torch Relay as it makes an appearance at the Indy 500.

Olympic Torch laps Indy field

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — With more than 200,000 looking on, the Olympic Torch was relayed through downtown Indianapolis as a prelude to the traditional Indianapolis 500 Festival parade.

The torch, which arrived in northern Indiana on Thursday after moving through Chicago, continued its trip toward Los Angeles after being passed from runner to runner several times along the parade route before moving south on U.S. 31. It was scheduled to leave Indiana early Thursday when a runner takes it across the John F. Kennedy Bridge into Louisville, Ky.

Saturday's trip took place under sunny skies, far different than the heavy rain, thunder and lightning that plagued the relay runners Friday as they carried the flame.

Saturday's leg of the trip began off Indiana 47 near Elizaville and continued past the plowed fields and farm homes to Sheridan.

"It was something to see," said David Johnson, 28, of Sheridan, who raced along the relay route to take some pictures.

Noise, crowds part of scene

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The first thing you notice is the noise — unrelenting, almost terrifying, absolutely ear-splitting noise.

It starts as a low rumble, gradually building in intensity as the low-slung racing machines roar toward you.

When they hurtle past, the sound is beyond description. Think of the loudest noise you ever heard and then magnify it tenfold. Maybe a hundredfold. Maybe a thousandfold.

That is the Indianapolis 500.

Some 400,000 people, a positive crush of humanity, will jam the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Sunday when 33 drivers once again challenge fate, tearing around the track at breakneck speed.

Baseball has its World Series, football its Super Bowl. Auto racing has the Indy 500.

That is the lure for the drivers, to compete at the very highest level.

"Every driver thinks about it, from the time he starts in Go-Karts," said Jerry Grant, a veteran of 10 Indy races, the last in 1976. "Hot rodders, stock car racers ... everyone's dream is Indy."

Some of them chase the dream endlessly. This will be 50-year-old Dick Simon's 13th race here. He has never won it. He does not expect to win Sunday — not against A.J. Foyt, Mario Andretti, Tom Sneva, Rick Mears and the other heavyweights. But still, the bald grandfather races on.

"This is probably the most challenging thing I've done in my life," he said. "Business is challenging, trying to get a board of directors to agree on something. But it's not like getting a car, a crew and sponsors together to create a winner. It's the hardest thing I've done in my life."

Their egos bring drivers here, determined to challenge the track, to beat it.

"They come here to prove they are the best," Grant said. "Money has nothing to do with it. Foyt buys and sells whatever he wants. But he still comes back here, every year."

This will be Foyt's 27th Indy 500. He is its only four-time winner.

But winning, according to Grant, is not the toughest part. Qualifying is.

"It's tougher than the race," he said. "No other system has so much pressure. Four laps, by yourself, with everything at stake. You're tempted to try and do something you've never done before."

That can mean trouble, and trouble is what the fans think about. The spectre of fiery crashes, perhaps even fatal ones, hangs ominously over the Speedway. Racers, crew members — even fans — have died here. You can never forget that.

Yet, it's not the crashes that are the fascination of Indy. It's the anticipation of them. It's like watching a high-wire act at the circus. You don't want to see someone fall, but you are spellbound by the knowledge that he might.

"The crashes are an element that draws the general public," Grant said. "Not to see anybody hurt, not for blood, but it's part of the formula of racing. That's part of the appeal, I guess. It's a good show with the element of danger."

Most drivers won't talk of the danger. It is a part of racing they say they don't think about. It will never keep them away.

"Once you feel that control of the car, there's something beautiful about that," Simon said. "It's almost alive. It responds to the slightest touch. It fulfills a lot of what I've tried to find in other sports."

Simon was a ski jumper, a parachutist, a football player, a basketball player. "I've suffered worse injuries in all of those activities than I ever had racing," he said.

Still, to some, danger and death are just part of Indy.

Oldtimers recall that when the popular Eddie Sachs was killed in a flaming crash in 1964, one fan watching the accident simply drew a line through his name in her program, as if he had merely blown an engine.

Sachs once sadly recalled that some drivers won Indy and then died trying to win it again. That would never happen to him, he vowed; if he ever won it, he would retire on the spot.

He died trying.

That is the Indianapolis 500.

Indy Drivers: 'protect yourselves'

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The 33 drivers in the fastest field in auto racing history were admonished Saturday to "protect yourselves" during the volatile start of Sunday's Indianapolis 500.

The warning came from chief steward Tom Binford at a drivers' meeting held before about 15,000 people next to the start-finish line at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

"When we start the race," Binford said, "maintain your 100-foot intervals (between rows). Tom Sneva will at the front of the field and will be gradually accelerating. By the time you get to the starting line, you should be going about 120 to 130 mph.

"Maintain your positions until you get to the starting line itself. ... You're not to race until you get past the starting line. ... Protect yourselves. My advice is not to race in the first two turns.

"Be aware this is a 500-mile race and a that a few little seconds (at the start) are not going to mean anything at all," he concluded.

Several awards were handed out prior to Binford's remarks, with pole-sitter and defending champion Sneva collecting the bulk of them.

That included a replica of the Borg-Warner Trophy, symbolizing his first victory here, as well as the Budweiser Pole Award, which includes $17,500 in cash, a van and a trophy. Sneva and each of the other front-row starters — Howdy Holmes and Rick Mears — also received a check for $5,000 from GTE Mobilnet.

Hicks, Huckabee on 'Stampede'

From Staff Reports

D.R. Hicks and Dub Huckabee combined for a round of 68 Saturday to take a one-stroke lead in the second round of the annual Ranchland Hills Country Club Stampede golf tournament.

Hicks and Huckabee went into Saturday's round in third place, but zoomed to the front of the pack with a two-day total of 138 and only today's final 18 holes left to play.

However, the leading duo is hoping that grabbing the lead is not tantamount to being snake bit. Craig Winborn and Sid Bergoon found out that fact during Saturday's play.

Winborn and Bergoon fired a 67 Friday to take the first round lead, but balooned to a 78 Saturday for a two-day total of 145, six strokes off the pace.

Two teams are just a shot behind the leaders. Jamie Winkel and Mike Walling teamed for a blazing 66 Saturday, the tournament's best 18-hole round, to move to a two-day 139 after a 73 Friday.

The team of Craig Adams and Bill Baker also own a 139 after a 70 Saturday. They had a 69 on Friday. All other teams in the championship flight are at 142 or over.

There is a heated race in the first flight with the teams of Gene McDaniel-John Carey, Dan Bailey-Mike Locker and Barry Welton-Charles Ray all tied at 143. Jack Hunnicutt and Bill Russell lead the second flight with a 142.

Fritz Brandes and Buddy Redden's 142 also leads the third flight while Ralph Viney and Bill Gilluly's 148 heads the fourth flight. Fifth flight leaders are the teams of Gene Howard-Jim Underwood and Jim Agnew-Bill Smith, both with 151.

A two-way tie exists in the sixth flight also with the teams of Bill Beard-Bill Ed Beard and Bill Owens-Larry Foster both owning 153 totals. Beck Adkins and Davey Cruzan's 151 heads the seventh flight.

Johnny Williams and Sam Williams have a 161 to head the eighth flight while Pete Henderson and Ken Evers lead the final flight with a 160.

Some people don't know their electric bills can be about the same all year round.

Some do.

The Average Payment Plan will put you in the know; and just in time to take the heat off your hot weather bills.

You'll still pay for all the electricity you use. But under the Average Payment Plan, your bills will be more even all year round.

The plan is based on a 12-month average that's refigured each month. So you can pay less during the months you use the most electricity, by paying more during the months you use less.

The Average Payment Plan is available to Texas Electric residential customers. So look into it today. It's definitely worth knowing about.

MEMORIAL DAY CELEBRATION SALE!

GREAT MONEY-SAVERS FOR MAY

HOW MUCH HAVE YOU GOT RIDING ON YOUR TIRES?

Chances are the cargo is valuable. It includes you, your family, your friends, and a car that's worth a ransom in replacement value.

So you want a tire that won't let you down. That delivers low cost per mile. And ride. And stopping traction. And maybe you want snow capability too.

Whitewalls might be nice. And the belts could be steel, or maybe fiberglass. Or for an older car, maybe no belts at all.

Now if you could use a little help in figuring which tire to buy, come see us. We know how to help. And we have lots of choices.

Maybe we can match you up with one of the tires now on sale. But if we can't, we'll lay it on the line.

And the final choice will be up to you. What could be fairer than that?

Beck shoots for first PGA Tour title in Memorial

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Chip Beck, who has yet to win his first PGA Tour title, faces one of golf's more formidable challenges today in the final round of the $500,000 Memorial Tournament.

From a one-stroke lead, Beck must turn back the challenge of the man who designed and built the golf course, the host and founder of the tournament, and the holder of a record 17 major professional titles, the Golden Bear himself, Jack Nicklaus.

Can he beat Nicklaus on the Bear's home grounds?

"You're asking me that?" Beck said, and gave a nervous little giggle.

"I'm in such awe of the man ...," he said, left the sentence unfinished, then took a different tact.

"To be perfectly honest, you have to believe you can win a tournament. I've been growing to that point," said Beck, who had two runner-up finishes last year. "You have to believe you can win."

He'll be paired with Nicklaus in the final threesome, and welcomes the matchup.

"That's good," he said. "You know if you beat Jack, you usually win the tournament."

Beck, now in his sixth year of Tour activity, salvaged a 68 when he got up and down from bunkers on the last two holes, and completed three trips over the subtle terrors of the Muirfield Village Golf Club course in 209, 7-under-par.

Nicklaus, seeking a second victory in his own tournament and attempting to end a two-year non-winning string, had a chance to tie for the lead but missed a 12-foot birdie putt on the 18th holes.

He rallied for a 71—after a lapse of three bogeys in a 4-hole stretch—and was at 210 for 54 holes.

"Obviously, I'm in very good position," Nicklaus said.

"I'm playing better than I have at any time this year. I'm hitting the ball well and have a lot of confidence."

Gary Koch, a two-time winner this season, and Andy Bean were next at 213. Bean closed up with a 67. Koch had a wildly erratic 73 that included five birdies and six bogeys.

They were followed by Payne Stewart, a playoff loser last week, and Dr. Gil Morgan at 214, five shots back. Stewart matched par 72 over the course that Jack built, and Morgan had a 74.

Masters champion Ben Crenshaw, who had a one-shot lead at the end of two rounds, retained the top spot through the first nine holes — then took a visit into golf's twilight zone.

Crenshaw, playing with Nicklaus in the final threesome on the course, drove into a fairway bunker on the par-4 10th hole. He hit his second shot deep into the woods, came out into another bunker, blew then next one into deep rough behind the green, chipped lone and 2-putted for a staggering 7 that sent him, shaken and reeling, to a dismal 44 on the back nine. He bogeyed five more times before he finally reached the shelter of the clubhouse with a 79 for the day and a 217 total.

"You hate to see a guy, who is playing well, shoot himself out of the tournament on one hole and, basically, that's what happened to Ben," Nicklaus said.

While Crenshaw's agonies from the lead may have been more prominent, he was not alone in the golfing miseries.

Consider Seve Ballesteros, the dashing Spaniard who has won two Masters and a British Open crown. He hit only seven fairways, reached seven greens in regulation and required 81 strokes.

Curtis Strange also was nine over for the day's play.

And Fuzzy Zoeller spared himself the trouble. He had a bad back and withdrew.

With Crenshaw collapsing and Nicklaus unable to make a significant charge — he had to rally from a string of three bogeys in a four-hole stretch coming home — the gates were opened for a number of potential challenges.

Tom Watson shot a 71 and was within six strokes of the top spot at 215. He was tied with Peter Oosterhuis of England, Mike Sullivan and Peter Jacobsen, the winner of the Colonial Invitation last week. Oosterhuis and Sullivan had 72s, Jacobsen 73.

U.S. Open champion Larry Nelson took a 75 that left him at 216. PGA champion Hal Sutton was tied with Crenshaw at 217 after a 73.

Texas Tech loses Pryor to bad English grades

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Chris Pryor, who led his high school team to the state 5A football championship, has ended his chances of getting a four-year Texas Tech scholarship by flunking senior English, school officials said Saturday.

Pryor, 17, didn't graduate Friday because he failed an English final exam, according to Judson High School athletic director Frank Arnold.

That failure cancels his full scholarship and jeopardizes the youth's collegiate football career, Arnold told the San Antonio Express News.

Pryor, who could not be reached for comment, was the all-time leading 5A schoolboy rusher last season with 2,800 yards. At 5-feet-8 and 185 pounds, he played as a running back.

Arnold said that without the English course, Pryor's other grades would have been high enough to carry him to Texas Tech. But now, Arnold said, "we need to make sure he goes to summer school."

Yet even if Pryor graduates after attending summer school, he still can't rejuvenate his scholarship because his scholarship was contingent upon him graduating on schedule. And NCAA rules wouldn't allow him to play football his freshman year there, according to Texas Tech head football coach Jerry Moore.

Moore said he'd worried that Pryor couldn't earn the 2.0 grade point average required to play college football. But he said he was still surprised to learn Pryor didn't graduate.

Moore said Pryor told him he still wants to come to Texas Tech as a regular student even if he didn't make the team. Moore added that the teen-ager ruled out the option of a junior college.

"NCAA rules state that he would have to graduate from that junior college," Moore said. "Even if he gets a junior college scholarship, that would only leave him two years' eligibility for a scholarship at Texas Tech.

"We still need to give Chris time to think things out. I'm sure he's really disappointed," Moore said. "But he has no one to blame but himself."

Petty seeks 200th career victory

HARRISBURG, N.C. (AP) — Richard Petty may be the sentimental favorite in Sunday's running of the World 600 NASCAR Grand National stock car race, but Neil Bonnett has a powerful motive to win as well.

Both, however, will have to overcome pole-sitter Harry Gant and six other drivers whose qualifying speeds afforded them better starting positions.

Petty will be seeking his 200th career victory from the eighth spot, followed by Bonnett, who still is bitter over the controversy of the Coors 420 NASCAR Grand National race he thought he won two weeks ago.

"It would be a great day to win No. 200 here," said Petty. "But you can't look at things that way. You just have to do the best you can and let everything else take its course. This is the longest race on the schedule, and a whole lot more things can go wrong than right."

Bonnett has won the last two World 600s on the 1.5-mile tri-oval speedway, and if he wants to extend that streak to an unprecedented level, he will have to overcome his ninth-place position.

"I'm worried about getting No. 1 for the 12 car," the Hueytown, Ala., driver said. "It would be nice for it to be No. 3 here also."

That first victory might have come at Nashville, Tenn. Indeed, Bonnett thought he had overcome Darrell Waltrip, whom he passed on the final lap, which was run under a caution flag.

"My crew came running up and said we had won, but I said let's be sure before we go to Victory Lane," Bonnett said. "(NASCAR officials) told me I had won several times and I finally went to victory circle."

The celebration ended two days later when NASCAR cited a relatively obscure rule and awarded the victory to Waltrip.

"NASCAR handled it so badly," Bonnett said. "That's the thing. Not only did they handle it badly at first, but they did it all the way down the line."

Bonnett has been driving with a cast on his right arm since he suffered a broken wrist at a race in Martinsville, Va. It does not hamper his driving, he said.

"It doesn't have any effect," Bonnett said. "I never pay any attention to it. I have the same grip (on the steering wheel) as I did before."

After Gant, the starting lineup includes Benny Parsons, Jody Ridley and Waltrip.

In the fifth position is David Pearson.

Invaders make field goal stand up, 17-14

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Kevin Shea booted a 32-yard field goal on the last play of the third quarter and the Oakland Invaders made it stand up for a 17-14 win over the skidding Oklahoma Outlaws in the United States Football League.

It was the fifth straight victory for the 5-9 Invaders while Oklahoma, hampered by three fumbles and an interception, dropped its sixth straight to fall to 6-8.

Oakland quarterback Fred Besana completed 18 of 25 passes for 225 yards and a touchdown in the game, which ended with a fourth-quarter downpour.

In the first half, Besana hit wide receiver Gordon Banks for a 19-yard touchdown, capitalizing on an Outlaws fumble at their own 34.

The Outlaws, who had two fumbles in their first five plays, finally got untracked with a second-quarter, 77-yard drive culminating in quarterback Doug Williams' 9-yard touchdown pass to a wide-open George Ragsdale.

MEMORIAL

Nicklaus said the money received from television for his tournament amounts to 43 percent of the total purse, about $230,000 which, he said was "a lot of money but not significant" in the total operation of the tournament.

Nicklaus also said that if he could negotiate his own television contract — instead of being part of the total PGA Tour TV package — his tournament could "play for the same money Beman does at the TPC."

The Memorial has a total purse of about $570,000. The Tournament Players Championship, which Beman founded and which had an $800,000 purse this year, has "a very strange formula" in its treatment of television revenues, Nicklaus said.

It was this point which drew a sharp retort from Beman.

"He's factually incorrect," Beman said. "If he doesn't understand, he should."

Beman also said Nicklaus, as a sponsor, accepted the dates for his tournament "with full knowledge of the basketball playoffs" and offered a switch of tournament dates in future years.

"I can tell you there are three or four tournament sponsors that would be happy to switch dates with him," Beman said.

Beman defended the special formula the TPC has in the treatment of television revenues. He cited the tour's 1983 annual report which showed that the special formula used for the TPC makes "no substantial difference in net dollars."

With the hot weather fast approaching your thoughts may have been on putting a regrigerated air conditioner on your RV. If you have a coach 17 ft. to 23 ft. use the 11,000 BTU model ... if your coach is 24 ft. on up thru 35 ft. use the 13,500 BTU model. There are two styles of units: piston and Rotary. Dometic air conditioners come in both styles in both the 11,000 and 13,500 BTU models. When using a refrigerated air conditioner, be sure your supply of 110v. is adequate ... use a 10/3 heavy cord like the cord built into your coach. It is best to have a maximum of 50 ft. of cord INCLUDING the cord that is on the coach. Using the proper cord and plugging into an ample supply will protect the most expensive part of your air conditioner ... the compressor.

BILLY SIMS TRAILER TOWN, 520 E. 2nd, Odessa, has in stock the Dometic air cond. in both sizes and both models. 11,000 Piston for ex. is $540.00. (installed price if your coach is prepared for air). Call 337-6635 for more information on the Dometic airs.

Heat strips (Chill-Chasers) are avaiable for both styles of the Dometic air conditioners ... at $40.00. This unit will raise the temperature inside the coach approximately 10 degrees.

Hance is choice

Prior to the May election, the Reporter-Telegram urged voters in the Democratic Primary to cast their ballots for Kent Hance for U.S. Senator. At that time we said, "Hance's style of leadership makes him the obvious choice among the Democratic candidates ...."

Our opinion hasn't changed. Only now the urgency of voter support for Hance is heightened. Next Saturday he and State Sen. Lloyd Doggett will be facing each other for the right to represent the Democratic Party in the November general election, opposing Republican nominee Phil Gramm of College Station.

Those who know Texas politics also know that Hance needs a hefty turnout of rural voters — those individuals who call places like Midland and Odessa and Lubbock and a hundred other places home — to beat Doggett, who is expected to draw a big vote from the metropolitan areas. Hance obviously has recognized that fact, too, because his campaign ads already are appropriately pointing out that any Texans who didn't vote in the first primary in May still can vote in next Saturday's election. And anyone who does can still vote for the candidate of their choice in November. In fact, the only ones who can't vote in the runoff are those who voted Republican in the first primary.

As a state senator, Hance represented well the people of Texas and as a U.S. Congressman he has carried on the fine tradition established in the 19th Congressional District by elder statesman George Mahon. Now Hance desperately needs the active support of the people he has represented in admirable fashion for years.

As a congressman Hance has strongly supported both the state's oil and agriculture industries and on the economic front he has been a clear voice for fiscal sanity. What has his opponent had to say about the economic recovery program Hance has helped institute? Back in April of 1983, one of Doggett's campaign press releases referred to Reaganomics as "... a misguided theory that works on television but nowhere else."

We hope every Texan eligible to vote in this runoff election and who has an interest in the economic future of this state and nation, the energy future of the country and conservative leadership overall will vote for Kent Hance either absentee Tuesday or at the polls Saturday to represent the Democrats in November for U.S. Senator.

Cheers galore

Significant accomplishments in life are all too frequently ignored.

They may not rate as world-changing to a majority of people, but they still are noteworthy to a number of individuals and, as such, deserving of a smile of recognition from each of us.

During recent days, a number of Midlanders have been singled out for such accolades by their peers. We take pride is saying to them "Thank you for your contribution to our society. Congratulations on your honor. It was deserved." They are:

— Trudy Lewis of Lee High School and Harry Dodd of Midland High School who recently were named outstanding teachers for the 1983-84 year by their fellow educators.

— Foy Proctor, prominent Midland rancher, cattle buyer and civic leader, who was recently honored as recipient of this year's National Golden Spur Award.

— Mark Moore, 15, who recently was presented the Eagle Scout badge.

— Daniel Subia who earlier this month was recognized as "Boy of the Year" by the Boy's Club of Midland.

— Rocky Sanchez who was awarded the Sportsmanship Award by the Boy's Club of Midland.

Another View:
A clear message

The U.S. Supreme Court has sent a strong message on employment discrimination: Federal civil-rights law applies to partnerships — a common business method among lawyers, doctors, architects and accountants.

The case involved Elizabeth Anderson Hishon, a lawyer who charged the historic Atlanta firm of King & Spaulding with sex discrimination after she did not make partner despite good ratings as an associate. Lawyers for her former employer argued that partner-admission decisions are excluded from federal job-discrimination law because they are private voluntary arrangements such as marriages and because partners are owners and therefore employers rather than employees.

But as Justice Sandra Day O'Connor asked during arguments: "If Congress had wanted to have an exemption (for partnerships), wouldn't it have said so?" After all, Congress exempted itself and employers who have fewer than 15 workers.

The ruling guarantees Hishon her day in court, a chance to prove her allegations. It also mandates that for the first time all attorneys — regardless of their sex, race, ethnicity or religion — will be judged by the same objective standards on whether they should be admitted to partnership. That is significant, because, although the numbers of women and minority members graduating from law schools have increased substantially in the past 10 years, a look at the statistics gives the impression that the coveted partnerships at large law firms are overwhelmingly reserved for white men, usually from the same cultural and scholastic background.

The court's 9-0 ruling is not unusual. Historically, the court has been unanimous on major civil-rights issues. The Reagan administration, mindful of its low standing with women, gave late support to the Hishon position. The message is clear.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On May 27, 1937, the Golden Gate Bridge spanning San Francisco Bay was opened.

On this date:

In 1929, aviator Charles Lindbergh married Anne Spencer Morrow in Englewood, N.J.

In 1935, the U.S. Supreme Court declared the National Industrial Recovery Act unconstitutional.

In 1941, the German battleship Bismarck was sunk by the British navy off France, with a loss of 2,300 lives.

In 1949, Robert Ripley died.

Ten years ago: British soldiers guarded strategic gas stations and oil depots in Northern Ireland in the wake of a general strike called by Protestant extremists.

JACK ANDERSON
Mubarak on Mideast tightrope

WASHINGTON — The United States pours more aid money into Egypt than into any other nation. Last year's bailout bill for the shaky Egyptian economy came to $1,019,300,000. Sometimes it seems as futile as pouring water on the desert sands.

Jack Anderson

President Hosni Mubarak is a masterly leader and an important U.S. ally. His predecessor, Anwar Sadat, engendered the wrath of the Arab world by signing the Camp David agreement with Israel. Under Mubarak, the bright Camp David hopes of five years ago now flicker desultorily.

But Mubarak is trying to keep his balance on a difficult and dangerous tightrope. Somehow he must appease the increasingly rabid anti-Israel elements in both Egypt and the Arab world at large — yet still placate Israel's friends in Washington in order to keep the aid money flowing.

Mubarak is also under pressure from both the United States and international bankers to introduce austerity measures to keep Egypt from falling into an economic abyss. He cannot prudently ignore these demands if Egypt is to remain solvent. The saving grace of greed is the willingness to give a little to get much.

But to Mubarak, Egypt's economic sickness is not as pressing as his own security problems. He lives in constant dread of assassination by extremist elements in Egypt. Frankly, he is more afraid of Arab assassins than Western bankers.

Intelligence sources told my associate Lucette Lagnado there have been several assassination plots and attempted coups against Mubarak. The Egyptian leader has good reason to fear he'll be gunned down like Sadat.

As a result, security around Mubarak is tight even by Middle East standards. During the recent election campaign, he made few public appearances and did his electioneering on television instead.

On the rare occasions when Mubarak does venture in public, his appearances are carefully controlled. A presidential visit to any location, intelligence sources say, causes considerable grumbling among residents because of the intensive security measures. Whole streets are cleared of people. Individuals who live or work in the area are subjected to close scrutiny by Mubarak's bodyguards.

In the tradition of Middle East politics, Mubarak is subject not only to assassination but to insurgency. His detractors are constantly plotting some coup to overthrow him.

The deterioration of the economy, meanwhile, is threat enough to Mubarak's political power. There is no real guide to how much misery the impoverished Egyptian masses will tolerate. If the economy breaks down, riots and revolution could doom Mubarak.

To prevent this, Mubarak, like Sadat, depends on U.S. aid. Since the Camp David accords, the United States has poured billions into the Egyptian economy to keep it afloat. Yet State Department insiders privately concede that the economic situation is worse than it was before Camp David. And there are no shafts of hope penetrating the gloom.

The Catch-22 situation Mubarak finds himself in is best illustrated by his dilemma over the price of bread. Both the State Department and the International Monetary Fund have repeatedly pointed out to the Egyptians that the huge government subsidies on bread and other basic foodstuffs are ruining the economy.

Mubarak knows that sooner or later he must increase the government-fixed prices of food. But his political opponents have recklessly pre-empted such remedial action. During the recent campaign, they planted in the electorate the suspicion that Mubarak was delaying price increases only until his party had been safely returned to power.

"In recent weeks," said a State Department cable on the eve of the election, "the opposition press has been hammering at government-induced price increases to be expected following the elections."

Mubarak reportedly was planning to do just what the opposition accused him of, but now he may not dare to make their charges come true. Added to the hardship that price increases would bring would be the charge of betrayal. He would appear to have lied to the Egyptian people to stay in power.

The president is cautious by nature, and he remembers all too well the riots that erupted in 1977 when Sadat raised the price of bread by just a penny a loaf. "The examples of the 1977 riots at home and, most recently, by the civil disturbances in Tunisia and Morocco, have ... not gone unheeded by Egyptian leaders," the State Department cable said.

So Mubarak is damned if he does raise the price of bread, and damned if he doesn't. The bread subsidies remain a drastic drain on the faltering economy, yet many Egyptians depend on them for their survival.

GEORGE F. WILL
Law firm loses, but lawyers win

WASHINGTON — In this lawyer's Republic, no idea is more prevalent than that the species shall be elevated by the practice of law. Certainly lawyers believe they are leading the van of human progress. But recently, in the Supreme Court of all places, progress — at least progress as lawyers have helped define it — tromped on the toes of the legal profession. However, weep not for the profession. Even when it loses it wins.

George F. Will

In 1972, Elizabeth A. Hishon became an associate with the Atlanta law firm of King & Spalding, a general partnership which by 1980 had more than 50 partners and approximately 50 associates. Up to 1980 no woman had been made a partner. Hishon says she accepted a job as an associate because she was told that advancement to partner "on a fair and equal basis" was routine for associates who receive satisfactory evaluations.

In 1979, the partnership refused to make her a partner and notified her that she should seek employment elsewhere. She said (in effect, and perhaps in Latin — you know lawyers): In a pig's eye! She filed a suit charging sex discrimination in violation of Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act as amended.

But a U.S. district court dismissed her case on the ground that Title VII was inapplicable to the selection of partners by a partnership. An appeals court agreed. Lawyers, it seemed, were exempt from the law forbidding "employers" from discriminating on the basis of sex regarding "terms, conditions or privileges of employment." But now the Supreme Court has said that Hishon's suit can proceed.

King & Spalding, from which a sophist could take a correspondence course in sophistry, argued that Title VII never applies to decisions about admission to partnership because such admission involves a change of status from employee to employer. Speaking for a unanimous Court, Chief Justice Burger said, in effect: "Give me a break."

He gave even shorter shrift to a second argument, which was that Title VII categorically exempts partnership decisions from scrutiny. Burger said: If so, it is odd that nothing in the law or its legislative history says so.

King & Spalding's third argument deserved a brass medal for its brassiness. It was that application of Title VII to law partnerships violates — you guessed it — the First Amendment. Specifically, it infringes the partner's rights of expression and association.

It is nice to imagine that the frosty Burger, hearing that argument, smiled the faint smile of one of Henry James's Bostonians, a smile like a thin ray of moonlight falling upon a prison wall. What Burger said was, in effect, this:

We lawyers are really neat-o. Why, even the lawyers who comprise this Court have said so. Making a deep bow toward itself and other lawyers, the Court has said that lawyers make "a distinctive contribution ... to the ideas and beliefs of our society." But compliance with Title VII will not interfere with that function.

Besides, Burger said, it always has been possible to describe invidious private discrimination as an exercise of freedom of association. But such discrimination has never been accorded constitutional protection.

What Burger might have said is: Hey, lawyers, when Lester Maddox picked up an ax handle to resist integration of his Pickrick restaurant, he was asserting, with more concision than you are, the right you are asserting. But in the last quarter-century Congress has, wisely, and to the general applause of the legal profession, rearranged the rights of Americans. For example, it has decided that the right of black Americans to have access to public accommodations is more important than the right of owners of such accommodations to associate only with white Americans.

Now, granted, a law partnership involves different "equal access" considerations. Furthermore, Hishon's case can turn on the voluntary oral promise made to her by King & Spalding in 1972. Still, lawyers have particiated in and prospered from the multiplication of laws designed to fine-tune society in accordance with evolving standards of equity. Reasonable people can disagree about the reasonableness of particular laws. But it is jolly fun to see lawyers entangled in the coils they have helped to produce.

And what shall come of Hishon's famous victory? Why, litigation, of course. There can be zillions of cases as women who have been denied partnerships struggle to rise from beneath the iron heel of man. Think of this ruling as yet another jobs program for lawyers.

There is an old rabbinic saying: If the stone falls on the pitcher, woe to the pitcher; if the pitcher falls on the stone, woe to the pitcher. The legal profession is the stone.

ART BUCHWALD
Building smiles in the clouds

The new trend in commercial real estate is to construct tall buildings as close to airports as one possibly can. Washington's National Airport is a perfect example of this imaginative way of using what were once vast wastelands of air space.

Art Buchwald

Just across the Potomac River, in the small town of Rosslyn, is a silver tower reaching up to the sky; a beacon of welcome to all pilots attempting to land and take off from one of the busiest terminals in the country. A twin building is now going up next to it, so that soon there will be two towers instead of one to greet passengers arriving in Washington.

The father of airport skyscrapers is Alf Klagstrom, a developer who started out with $50 and a dream.

I sat with Alf in his Cloud Suite on the 30th floor of the Klagstrom Tower, and he told me how he came up with the idea for his unique real estate development plan.

"I was selling mobile homes door to door in the early '60s," he said, "and did a lot of flying. I noticed most major airports were out in the sticks, surrounded by farmland and ugly one-story buildings. There was no decent architecture within miles of the terminals, and no one seemed to care that all this good land was going to waste. 'Why,' I said, 'can't I develop a city close to air terminals so business people would not have to buck the traffic to catch their flights?'

"There was no godly reason for airports to be so isolated from passengers they served. So I took an option on all the land at the end of the National Airport runway and hired an architect to develop a plan to make use of the air space. I told him I wanted something that would not only be utilitarian, but also beautiful to the eye, so that people flying in and out of National would be awe-struck by what they saw."

"It's amazing you were the first to think of it," I said. "Very few people would have the imagination to build a skyscraper in the flight path of a commercial airport."

Alf said modestly, "I'm sure other people thought of it before I did, but no one had the persistence to follow through. Everyone was against me at the start. The banks laughed at me and said no one would want to rent space in a building at the end of a runway. When I told them all the footage had already been spoken for before I even broke ground, they were flabbergasted.

"Then I had to deal with the bureaucratic airport officials who complained that the skyscrapers could present a safety hazard to their flights. I told them people once said the same thing about the Empire State Building when it was proposed. I also argued the skyscrapers would make pilots more alert when they were landing at National. To calm their fears I offered to put a red light on the top of all the buildings at my own expense."

"That was a very decent thing to do," I said. "Did you have any trouble with the Arlington County officials in getting a permit?"

"They were the only people on my side from the start. They saw the enormous tax revenues that commercial buildings would bring to the county, not to mention the jobs it would provide for people in the community. Compared to the federal government officials, who tried to stop me at every turn, the supervisors gave me encouragement during some of my darkest hours. Their faith in me has been rewarded. Arlington, which was formerly a bedroom community, now has one of the most beautiful skylines in the country."

"It must be a great feeling to see what you have accomplished in such a short period of time."

Alf said, "It's only the beginning. I've heard from counties all over the United States who want me to build skyscrapers next to their airports. I can see the day when every runway will be surrounded by glass and concrete towers, and high-rise hotels and apartment houses, creating an environment that will enrich the life of every American."

As we were talking, a DC-8 flew by Alf's window, its wing almost touching a large azalea plant out on the balcony. Alf waved at the passengers who could clearly be seen through the windows. He said, "I'm making money on the deal, but the real thrill for me is to see the delighted expressions on the travelers' faces every time they fly by my building."

World isn't divided neatly into black, white issues

Bill Modisett

"You can't be serious," the voice on the telephone bristled. "That column of yours the other day was about the most asinine thing I've ever read! Don't you realize there is another side to that issue?"

I guess I do. Now, anyway.

The caller was correct in a way. I had completely failed to address the "other side" of the issue. That's not smart in any situation. The world, you see, isn't black and white with distinct lines sharply defining the differences. Thus it's always a risk to view an issue — just about any issue — that way.

I do it anyway, but more often than not I do incorporate information from the "other side" simply to let readers know that I am aware that the other argument exists and, on occasion, to more effectively discount that argument.

So do other columnists — Charley Reese, George Will, William Buckley and the like. Their use of the other side's argument may differ stylistically — and the effect may vary accordingly — but the fact that they do utilize it stresses the point: Journalists are not unthinking, uncaring, haughty individuals who sit in their ivory towers and survey the world below with frosty aloofness. When we assume that attitude we're ripe for a public come-uppance.

The world is a blending of grays. Every issue has two sides and their colors are not black and white. But, I think, columnists tend to push aside the other side abruptly or to deal with it in cursory fashion as a means of emphasizing their side of the issue.

For example, the issue of abortion is multi-faceted. First and foremost it's a human issue and as such should not be addressed in a flippant manner. When one adopts that attitude, that individual is telling others that he or she doesn't care, is not part of the human world. That's stupid.

The abortion issue is a deep gray because it is multi-faceted and there is no clear-cut, simple, solution to it. When one considers it one must think not only of the woman bearing the unborn child inside her but of the unborn child, the father, of the potential social and religious consequences of aborting or not. Even that brief description doesn't address all concerns of the abortion issue.

All of a sudden an issue that before appeared simple is ultracomplex. Why? Because it's not a matter of blacks and whites but grays.

As I noted previously, abortion isn't the only issue that's that way. Pick a subject, take a position either pro or con in regard to it and if you look long and hard enough you'll find someone who not only believes exactly the opposite but who is emphatic as yourself in supporting that position.

So why do journalists, particularly those who write columns and editorials, take their positions with seemingly unbudgetable conviction? Well, that's not quite as easy to answer.

Perhaps it's because they hope to bowl the reader over with the "oomphh" of their conviction. That's the old "if you can't impress them with your intelligence, baffle them with your bull" syndrome.

More likely than not, though, I suspect it's simply a matter of journalists devoting the bulk of their effort to swaying readers to the journalist's position rather than swaying readers away from their own convictions.

It's a matter of priorities — studying a situation as fully as possible from all aspects available at the time and making a determination that would, presumably, best serve society at large.

No. Only in rare circumstances do journalists ever fail to consider both sides of any issue. Sometimes we cannot be as close to a subject as readers who are individually involved with that particular subject.

But if we seem to live in a world of blacks and whites, it's only because we want readers to see our side as vividly as we do.

LETTERS

Thanks for finally acknowledging event

I want to thank this paper for finally reporting the accomplishment of Odessa College's Track and Field team winning their fourth straight NJCAA title in San Angelo last weekend. But more important, that this was their eighth straight title including indoor titles which you forgot to include.

It's about time that the neighboring town's newspaper reports it, but it took eight straight national championships for it to happen. But what puzzles me is that including me there have been three former Midland athletes on some of those championship teams, Damon Polk and Roosevelt Fort being the other two. Damon is a three-time All-American this spring and I am also an All-American from OC.

I was on four of the championship teams and weight coach for three of the eight times. I never saw any news of the results in the Reporter-Telegram. I thought Midland and Odessa were working together and I can't think of a worse relationship of the newspaper's reporting the other town's athletic accomplishments than this. I wonder how big an article would have appeared if they had lost. Just like the bad news that came when that girl was struck with the javelin. Bad news is big news?

I do compliment this paper for at least not printing the pictures that were in the San Angelo paper — one of the girl that was struck with the javelin and one of the girl that struck her with the javelin. I was there and the girl that threw the javelin is worse off than the girl who got struck. The reporters could not wait to close in and snap pictures. They did not give them a chance. It looked like lions going in for a kill of the Christians. If it was not for a few decent coaches they would have had their kill.

Memorial Day not just time to have fun

By JIM SILVERS

Jim Silvers of Midland is commander of Disabled American Veterans, Tall City Chapter No. 58. A former Marine who served in Korea and Vietnam, Silvers moved to Midland in March 1976 from California. His article concerns the Memorial Day observance, which is Monday.

Memorial Day is not just a holiday on the calendar.

Memorial Day is a day of sadness — a day given over to the memory of those who gave their lives in the cause of peace, freedom and justice in order that we may enjoy living our lives as we see fit.

It's a day when our nation is called upon to honor those who died in our wars and other armed conflicts and, in our Memorial Day observances, visions haunt our minds.

We, who have served, will recall memories of friends or relatives who gave their lives in World War I, World War II, Korea, Vietnam, Lebanon and Grenada to try and help restore freedom and give the people the right to live their lives as they feel they should.

I have tried to put myself in the place of the families of the brave Americans who died for our country during the past years. But can anyone really imagine the shattering grief the mothers and fathers have felt on this day of remembrance? What about the young widows and children of those who gave their lives in the cause of freedom?

For these families, Memorial Day is not the three-day holiday weekend that it has become for too many Americans. For these families, Memorial Day has taken on a meaning of deep and personal heartache.

It's only appropriate that we who remember the price of freedom from past wars and campaigns share the grief these families feel today. It would be wrong to deny the feelings of sorrow that are a necessary part of observing Memorial Day. Yet it would be wrong, as well, to deny the pride we feel in the great sacrifices so many have made to maintain our nation's greatness.

Allowing ourselves that pride is not the same as glorifying war and armed conflict. I don't think any veterans' organization would want to do that. Veterans have seen the ugly face of war up close. They know what war is. This is particularly true of the organization I represent — the Disabled American Veterans (DAV). The members of the DAV carry the scars of war on their bodies and minds for life. They're all too personally familiar with the human cost of armed conflict.

Americans as a whole are peace-loving people, reluctant to take up arms against other nations. But when Americans have found that they must go to war, they've met the challenge with uncommon nobility. Their lives paid the price of our freedom. Their sacrifice has allowed our nation to pursue the ideals of justice and equality in a singularly democratic society.

The blood of the men and women we honor today has purchased America's peace. We owe these brave citizens a debt too great to ever be repaid. That's why people throughout our nation are gathering on Memorial Day to honor those who died in our wars and armed conflicts. They have come to be reminded that we are a free people because so many others stood the supreme test of their convictions. Their unselfish acts of heroism stand as monuments to the idealism that has kept America free. They have made our country the world's strong bastion of democracy. Because of them, our heritage thrives after two centuries of testing.

Ours is a great nation because of the many who have made the greatest sacrifice — their lives. There is immense purpose in what these men and women have done for each and all of us. That purpose is America's destiny.

"Speaking Out" columnists are invited to submit articles on subjects of their choice. They should be limited to 850 words or less.

Celebration of Arts tribute to Midland

"Art is long and time is fleeting," or so wrote Henry Longfellow. With his high appraisal of art itself, he would undoubtedly have been impressed with celebrations of art and all that they mean to the preservation and growth of the culture of a people.

With the initiation of Celebration of the Arts last week, Midlanders have once again shown their attendance to culture by extolling the talented among us.

But Celebration was (and will be again next year) more than an assembly of the talented and those who appreciate talent. It was yet another manifestation of the strong sense of community purpose and responsibility for which Midland is so exceptional.

To each who played a part, you are to be applauded at great length for what must have been a monumental undertaking.

Even 'animal lovers' can be cruel to pets

At least once each day I hear someone say, "I'm an animal lover, and I just can't understand how some people can be so cruel to them." I'm sure the persons saying they are animal lovers truly care for animals, and would never knowingly be cruel to them. But being cruel to animals can take many forms.

This same "I love animals" person can be cruel to animals when they allow their pet to breed when there is little chance of finding homes for the offspring. The "I love animals" person is unknowingly cruel when they leave their pet in their car, thinking they will just run in and out in no time short, while in just a short time their pet is on the verge of heat stroke or is having one.

Dogs do not tolerate high temperatures as well as humans do. The "I love animals" person is unknowingly cruel when they drop their unwanted pet across town or out in the country, thinking it may find a new home with some kind person, thinking that if they take it to the animal shelter it will be put to sleep. How wrong they are. The fact is, only about 9 percent of the animals abandoned survive. Animals abandoned may be killed when hit by a car, starve to death, killed by predators or killed by a farmer or rancher.

If the "I love animals" person had taken their unwanted pet to the animal shelter it would have had a 28 percent chance of finding a good home. It's not hard to see that 28 percent is better than 9 percent. The "I love animals" person may be unknowingly cruel when they give their pet away to someone they don't know, never knowing just how responsible the new owner is.

I could go on and on about how cruel we "animal lovers" could unknowingly be to our pets. Hopefully, the point has been made.

Midlander proud of heritage, home

"I shall pass through this world but once. Any good, therefore, that I can do, or any kindness that I can show to any human being, let me do it now. Let me not defer it or neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again."

As an American citizen America is my country, Midland is my home. I am a proud Midlander and an especially proud black Midlander.

Having grown up under the influence of the American way of life, I have to thank America. Where else except in America with such a diverse society could we come and go, vote, and protest as we please? Sure, there are many ills within our society and we as a people have suffered the blunt of them. We cannot correct any of them by "taking over" but rather by sitting at the table and finding possible solutions intelligently. There is one thing I have never been able to understand and probably never will. That is why is it we, who helped to build this country and make it what it is, we who have remained loyal to our No. 1 foe are treated worse than any other nationality?

Our society (black) has always been a matriarchic one because the woman could open doors where the man dared not tread. So, it would seem only logical that when a great God-fearing, humanitarian such as the Rev. Jesse Jackson emerges the rational thinking people would take pride and support him.

True followers of the Jackson philosophy know that you first must have a strong belief in God and mankind to be able to successfully administer cures for these ills. They do not have such strong needs for acceptance and recognition that they have no insight as to the struggle to "lift the boats stuck at the bottom." It's frightening to think of takeovers in America. One associates these acts with countries such as Iran, Iraq, Lebanon and others. Never in America!

Followers of Rev. Jackson think as he does. Here is a man blacks, Hispanics, women, young, old, poor and other minorities can identify with, for our plights are the same.

Perhaps America has now begun to listen to the cries of these people. It takes a knowledgeable person such as Rev. Jackson to cause a "sick, confused society" to address issues that too long have been swept under the "carpet."

I believe our viewpoint can best be expressed with the following lyrics from "America the Beautiful":

"American, America, God shed his grace on thee. And crown thy good with brotherhood from sea to shining sea."

Hospital's swing shift not necessarily slower

As a registered nurse employed at Midland Memorial Hospital, I was distressed to read your article entitled "Nurse enjoys slower pace of swing shift," May 9.

I also work the 11 p.m.-7 a.m. shift in the Intensive Care Unit, and I feel your article was misleading and inaccurate. In the ICU, as well as in other areas throughout the hospital, the pace and the workload are hardly slower. True, there are much fewer of the concillary personnel at this hour, but this only increases the responsibilities upon the staff at night. Critical care means 24 hour care, and we are responsible for continuous assessment of each patient's condition. This includes physical and emotional comfort, continuous monitoring of vital signs, electrocardiagram monitoring and diagnosing. Careful consideration is given to each patient's respiratory status, as well as instituting prompt and precise intervention to maintain correct or improve the patient's condition.

The majority of medications are given around the clock, requiring observation of drug reactions, interactions and effectiveness.

In addition, we as nurses are responsible for emergency care of patients throughout the entire hospital in life-threatening "Code 4" situations.

In this age when nurses as professionals are working hard to change the public's awareness of nursing from "doctor's handmaidens" to active professionals in their own right, I feel the media has a responsibility to accurately reflect the nursing role around the clock.

Cooperation depends on sewage treatment

Currently there is a big push to engender a cooperation between the cities of Odessa and Midland. Not a bad idea.

It does seem as if it would get off to a better start if Odessa would quit dumping their sewage water into Midland County drainage systems. After all, the pollution of Midland aquifers and the endangering of the lives of children and adult citizens is inexcusable.

This is where the effort should start. Until some accommodation is made on this issue, I foresee little gain to be made in the program.

Duarte makes good impression on Washington visit

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

NEW YORK — Jose Napoleon Duarte, president-elect of embattled El Salvador, just completed a visit to Washington where he made a deep impression on all congressmen who met and heard him. The U.S.-educated engineer — he went to Notre Dame — vows to maintain democracy in his little Central American republic as the first freely-elected president in over 50 years. El Salvador's army, once a stumbling block to previous democratic aspirations, is now apparently prepared to accept Duarte, who will be sworn into office next month as its unquestioned commander-in-chief.

That's the way it should be, as noted by our own president who hailed Duarte's visit. The Sandinista Communist regime in Nicaragua, next door, supplies Communist guerrillas in El Salvador but their terror couldn't halt the free elections that gave the president-elect nearly 55 percent of the vote.

President Reagan noted that if the Communists succeeded, as the Kissinger bipartisan commission report emphasized, 100 million people from Panama to our open border with Mexico would sooner or later come under the grip of pro-Soviet regimes. We would, therefore, be confronted by a tidal wave of refugees. That alone requires stationing a couple of million of our own armed service people to stem the tide. It's a prospect, I'm sure, few in this country accept. The Soviet Union with its Cuban surrogates would turn the area into a vast gulag.

President-elect Duarte has impressed supporters in El Salvador and our people here with his total frankness. Our president, hardly a slouch when it comes to communicating with people, admired his guest for being fair and open-minded. Duarte thanked President Reagan for a televised speech to the people, saying what is at stake for all of us if we don't assist El Salvador in particular and Central America in general. It wasn't done abjectly but as president-to-president, both of whom know the hard issues.

The Duarte visit made so much of an impact that even House Speaker Tip O'Neill, longtime critic of President Reagan and his policies for Central America, had a temporary change of mind. Where he opposed President Reagan all the way on aid to El Salvador, Speaker O'Neill said: "I think that he (Duarte) has sold enough people in the House. The votes are there now." House Majority Leader Jim Wright, of Texas, said he had no doubts about the outcome. It was Wright, a veteran Democrat, who put aside partisanship and helped President Reagan gain the needed votes for a military-aid package. The present upcoming vote is for $62 million in emergency military aid, peanuts for a life-or-death matter. Both Duarte and President Reagan reiterated that there is no need for U.S. combat forces for El Salvador.

Reinforcing congressional support for aid was the verdict by a court in El Salvador which found five former national guardsmen guilty of murdering four U.S. churchwomen. It was a unanimous decision by a three-man, two-woman jury after media reports suggested the trial was too tough for locals to face. Duarte's incoming administration obviously shows that it won't tolerate coverups. The House swiftly approved assistance to El Salvador but held back on covert aid for Freedom Fighters in Nicaragua.

Besides being generally upbeat about the state of the economy, the president shrugged off the Soviet threat of their submarines off our coasts. "I wouldn't be sleeping in this house (The White House) if I was concerned about them," observed President Reagan, eliciting gales of laughter.

• • •

While we might argue about an appropriate time to celebrate Memorial Day most everyone agrees about the meaning of the observance. It's the time the people of this nation are as one in remembering the millions of brave Americans who have given their lives for our country. Because of their sacrifice, this nation survives. We began setting aside a day to respect our fallen soldiers in 1868, to honor those who died in the Civil War. Since that date, for a long time called Decoration Day, the list has been expanded to battles where the U.S. became embroiled, usually in faraway places.

Memorial Day for years was commemorated on May 30. Congress decided that there are lots of other three-day weekends so it decided Memorial Day should be the last Monday in May. Traditionalists can still, of course, observe the day on May 30.

Most of us will take those three days off for a long weekend. So watch your sunburn and drive carefully.

Hance is choice

Prior to the May election, the Reporter-Telegram urged voters in the Democratic Primary to cast their ballots for Kent Hance for U.S. Senator. At that time we said, "Hance's style of leadership makes him the obvious choice among the Democratic candidates ...."

Our opinion hasn't changed. Only now the urgency of voter support for Hance is heightened. Next Saturday he and State Sen. Lloyd Doggett will be facing each other for the right to represent the Democratic Party in the November general election, opposing Republican nominee Phil Gramm of College Station.

Those who know Texas politics also know that Hance needs a hefty turnout of rural voters — those individuals who call places like Midland and Odessa and Lubbock and a hundred other places home — to beat Doggett, who is expected to draw a big vote from the metropolitan areas. Hance obviously has recognized that fact, too, because his campaign ads already are appropriately pointing out that any Texans who didn't vote in the first primary in May still can vote in next Saturday's election. And anyone who does can still vote for the candidate of their choice in November. In fact, the only ones who can't vote in the runoff are those who voted Republican in the first primary.

As a state senator, Hance represented well the people of Texas and as a U.S. Congressman he has carried on the fine tradition established in the 19th Congressional District by elder statesman George Mahon. Now Hance desperately needs the active support of the people he has represented in admirable fashion for years.

As a congressman Hance has strongly supported both the state's oil and agriculture industries and on the economic front he has been a clear voice for fiscal sanity. What has his opponent had to say about the economic recovery program Hance has helped institute? Back in April of 1983, one of Doggett's campaign press releases referred to Reaganomics as "... a misguided theory that works on television but nowhere else."

We hope every Texan eligible to vote in this runoff election and who has an interest in the economic future of this state and nation, the energy future of the country and conservative leadership overall will vote for Kent Hance either absentee Tuesday or at the polls Saturday to represent the Democrats in November for U.S. Senator.

Cheers galore

Significant accomplishments in life are all too frequently ignored.

They may not rate as world-changing to a majority of people, but they still are noteworthy to a number of individuals and, as such, deserving of a smile of recognition from each of us.

During recent days, a number of Midlanders have been singled out for such accolades by their peers. We take pride is saying to them "Thank you for your contribution to our society. Congratulations on your honor. It was deserved." They are:

— Trudy Lewis of Lee High School and Harry Dodd of Midland High School who recently were named outstanding teachers for the 1983-84 year by their fellow educators.

— Foy Proctor, prominent Midland rancher, cattle buyer and civic leader, who was recently honored as recipient of this year's National Golden Spur Award.

— Mark Moore, 15, who recently was presented the Eagle Scout badge.

— Daniel Subia who earlier this month was recognized as "Boy of the Year" by the Boy's Club of Midland.

— Rocky Sanchez who was awarded the Sportsmanship Award by the Boy's Club of Midland.

A clear message

The U.S. Supreme Court has sent a strong message on employment discrimination: Federal civil-rights law applies to partnerships — a common business method among lawyers, doctors, architects and accountants.

The case involved Elizabeth Anderson Hishon, a lawyer who charged the historic Atlanta firm of King & Spaulding with sex discrimination after she did not make partner despite good ratings as an associate. Lawyers for her former employer argued that partner-admission decisions are excluded from federal job-discrimination law because they are private voluntary arrangements such as marriages and because partners are owners and therefore employers rather than employees.

But as Justice Sandra Day O'Connor asked during arguments: "If Congress had wanted to have an exemption (for partnerships), wouldn't it have said so?" After all, Congress exempted itself and employers who have fewer than 15 workers.

The ruling guarantees Hishon her day in court, a chance to prove her allegations. It also mandates that for the first time all attorneys — regardless of their sex, race, ethnicity or religion — will be judged by the same objective standards on whether they should be admitted to partnership. That is significant, because, although the numbers of women and minority members graduating from law schools have increased substantially in the past 10 years, a look at the statistics gives the impression that the coveted partnerships at large law firms are overwhelmingly reserved for white men, usually from the same cultural and scholastic background.

The court's 9-0 ruling is not unusual. Historically, the court has been unanimous on major civil-rights issues. The Reagan administration, mindful of its low standing with women, gave late support to the Hishon position. The message is clear.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On May 27, 1937, the Golden Gate Bridge spanning San Francisco Bay was opened.

On this date:

In 1929, aviator Charles Lindbergh married Anne Spencer Morrow in Englewood, N.J.

In 1935, the U.S. Supreme Court declared the National Industrial Recovery Act unconstitutional.

In 1941, the German battleship Bismarck was sunk by the British navy off France, with a loss of 2,300 lives.

In 1949, Robert Ripley died.

Ten years ago: British soldiers guarded strategic gas stations and oil depots in Northern Ireland in the wake of a general strike called by Protestant extremists.

JACK ANDERSON

Mubarak on Mideast tightrope

WASHINGTON — The United States pours more aid money into Egypt than into any other nation. Last year's bailout bill for the shaky Egyptian economy came to $1,019,300,000. Sometimes it seems as futile as pouring water on the desert sands.

Jack Anderson

President Hosni Mubarak is a masterly leader and an important U.S. ally. His predecessor, Anwar Sadat, engendered the wrath of the Arab world by signing the Camp David agreement with Israel. Under Mubarak, the bright Camp David hopes of five years ago now flicker desultorily.

But Mubarak is trying to keep his balance on a difficult and dangerous tightrope. Somehow he must appease the increasingly rabid anti-Israel elements in both Egypt and the Arab world at large — yet still placate Israel's friends in Washington in order to keep the aid money flowing.

Mubarak is also under pressure from both the United States and international bankers to introduce austerity measures to keep Egypt from falling into an economic abyss. He cannot prudently ignore these demands if Egypt is to remain solvent. The saving grace of greed is the willingness to give a little to get much.

But to Mubarak, Egypt's economic sickness is not as pressing as his own security problems. He lives in constant dread of assassination by extremist elements in Egypt. Frankly, he is more afraid of Arab assassins than Western bankers.

Intelligence sources told my associate Lucette Lagnado there have been several assassination plots and attempted coups against Mubarak. The Egyptian leader has good reason to fear he'll be gunned down like Sadat.

As a result, security around Mubarak is tight even by Middle East standards. During the recent election campaign, he made few public appearances and did his electioneering on television instead.

On the rare occasions when Mubarak does venture in public, his appearances are carefully controlled. A presidential visit to any location, intelligence sources say, causes considerable grumbling among residents because of the intensive security measures. Whole streets are cleared of people. Individuals who live or work in the area are subjected to close scrutiny by Mubarak's bodyguards.

In the tradition of Middle East politics, Mubarak is subject not only to assassination but to insurgency. His detractors are constantly plotting some coup to overthrow him.

The deterioration of the economy, meanwhile, is threat enough to Mubarak's political power. There is no real guide to how much misery the impoverished Egyptian masses will tolerate. If the economy breaks down, riots and revolution could doom Mubarak.

To prevent this, Mubarak, like Sadat, depends on U.S. aid. Since the Camp David accords, the United States has poured billions into the Egyptian economy to keep it afloat. Yet State Department insiders privately concede that the economic situation is worse than it was before Camp David. And there are no shafts of hope penetrating the gloom.

The Catch-22 situation Mubarak finds himself in is best illustrated by his dilemma over the price of bread. Both the State Department and the International Monetary Fund have repeatedly pointed out to the Egyptians that the huge government subsidies on bread and other basic foodstuffs are ruining the economy.

Mubarak knows that sooner or later he must increase the government-fixed prices of food. But his political opponents have recklessly pre-empted such remedial action. During the recent campaign, they planted in the electorate the suspicion that Mubarak was delaying price increases only until his party had been safely returned to power.

"In recent weeks," said a State Department cable on the eve of the election, "the opposition press has been hammering at government-induced price increases to be expected following the elections."

Mubarak reportedly was planning to do just what the opposition accused him of, but now he may not dare to make their charges come true. Added to the hardship that price increases would bring would be the charge of betrayal. He would appear to have lied to the Egyptian people to stay in power.

The president is cautious by nature, and he remembers all too well the riots that erupted in 1977 when Sadat raised the price of bread by just a penny a loaf. "The examples of the 1977 riots at home and, most recently, by the civil disturbances in Tunisia and Morocco, have ... not gone unheeded by Egyptian leaders," the State Department cable said.

So Mubarak is damned if he does raise the price of bread, and damned if he doesn't. The bread subsidies remain a drastic drain on the faltering economy, yet many Egyptians depend on them for their survival.

GEORGE F. WILL

Law firm loses, but lawyers win

WASHINGTON — In this lawyer's Republic, no idea is more prevalent than that the species shall be elevated by the practice of law. Certainly lawyers believe they are leading the van of human progress. But recently, in the Supreme Court of all places, progress — at least progress as lawyers have helped define it — tromped on the toes of the legal profession. However, weep not for the profession. Even when it loses it wins.

George F. Will

In 1972, Elizabeth A. Hishon became an associate with the Atlanta law firm of King & Spalding, a general partnership which by 1980 had more than 50 partners and approximately 50 associates. Up to 1980 no woman had been made a partner. Hishon says she accepted a job as an associate because she was told that advancement to partner "on a fair and equal basis" was routine for associates who receive satisfactory evaluations.

In 1979, the partnership refused to make her a partner and notified her that she should seek employment elsewhere. She said (in effect, and perhaps in Latin — you know lawyers): In a pig's eye! She filed a suit charging sex discrimination in violation of Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act as amended.

But a U.S. district court dismissed her case on the ground that Title VII was inapplicable to the selection of partners by a partnership. An appeals court agreed. Lawyers, it seemed, were exempt from the law forbidding "employers" from discriminating on the basis of sex regarding "terms, conditions or privileges of employment." But now the Supreme Court has said that Hishon's suit can proceed.

King & Spalding, from which a sophist could take a correspondence course in sophistry, argued that Title VII never applies to decisions about admission to partnership because such admission involves a change of status from employee to employer. Speaking for a unanimous Court, Chief Justice Burger said, in effect: "Give me a break."

He gave even shorter shrift to a second argument, which was that Title VII categorically exempts partnership decisions from scrutiny. Burger said: If so, it is odd that nothing in the law or its legislative history says so.

King & Spalding's third argument deserved a brass medal for its brassiness. It was that application of Title VII to law partnerships violates — you guessed it — the First Amendment. Specifically, it infringes the partner's rights of expression and association.

It is nice to imagine that the frosty Burger, hearing that argument, smiled the faint smile of one of Henry James's Bostonians, a smile like a thin ray of moonlight falling upon a prison wall. What Burger said was, in effect, this:

We lawyers are really neat-o. Why, even the lawyers who comprise this Court have said so. Making a deep bow toward itself and other lawyers, the Court has said that lawyers make "a distinctive contribution ... to the ideas and beliefs of our society." But compliance with Title VII will not interfere with that function.

Besides, Burger said, it always has been possible to describe invidious private discrimination as an exercise of freedom of association. But such discrimination has never been accorded constitutional protection.

What Burger might have said is: Hey, lawyers, when Lester Maddox picked up an ax handle to resist integration of his Pickrick restaurant, he was asserting, with more concision than you are, the right you are asserting. But in the last quarter-century Congress has, wisely, and to the general applause of the legal profession, rearranged the rights of Americans. For example, it has decided that the right of black Americans to have access to public accommodations is more important than the right of owners of such accommodations to associate only with white Americans.

Now, granted, a law partnership involves different "equal access" considerations. Furthermore, Hishon's case can turn on the voluntary oral promise made to her by King & Spalding in 1972. Still, lawyers have particiated in and prospered from the multiplication of laws designed to fine-tune society in accordance with evolving standards of equity. Reasonable people can disagree about the reasonableness of particular laws. But it is jolly fun to see lawyers entangled in the coils they have helped to produce.

And what shall come of Hishon's famous victory? Why, litigation, of course. There can be zillions of cases as women who have been denied partnerships struggle to rise from beneath the iron heel of man. Think of this ruling as yet another jobs program for lawyers.

There is an old rabbinic saying: If the stone falls on the pitcher, woe to the pitcher; if the pitcher falls on the stone, woe to the pitcher. The legal profession is the stone.

ART BUCHWALD

Building smiles in the clouds

The new trend in commercial real estate is to construct tall buildings as close to airports as one possibly can. Washington's National Airport is a perfect example of this imaginative way of using what were once vast wastelands of air space.

Art Buchwald

Just across the Potomac River, in the small town of Rosslyn, is a silver tower reaching up to the sky; a beacon of welcome to all pilots attempting to land and take off from one of the busiest terminals in the country. A twin building is now going up next to it, so that soon there will be two towers instead of one to greet passengers arriving in Washington.

The father of airport skyscrapers is Alf Klagstrom, a developer who started out with $50 and a dream.

I sat with Alf in his Cloud Suite on the 30th floor of the Klagstrom Tower, and he told me how he came up with the idea for his unique real estate development plan.

"I was selling mobile homes door to door in the early '60s," he said, "and did a lot of flying. I noticed most major airports were out in the sticks, surrounded by farmland and ugly one-story buildings. There was no decent architecture within miles of the terminals, and no one seemed to care that all this good land was going to waste. 'Why,' I said, 'can't I develop a city close to air terminals so business people would not have to buck the traffic to catch their flights?'

"There was no godly reason for airports to be so isolated from passengers they served. So I took an option on all the land at the end of the National Airport runway and hired an architect to develop a plan to make use of the air space. I told him I wanted something that would not only be utilitarian, but also beautiful to the eye, so that people flying in and out of National would be awestruck by what they saw."

"It's amazing you were the first to think of it," I said. "Very few people would have the imagination to build a skyscraper in the flight path of a commercial airport."

Alf said modestly, "I'm sure other people thought of it before I did, but no one had the persistence to follow through. Everyone was against me at the start. The banks laughed at me and said no one would want to rent space in a building at the end of a runway. When I told them all the footage had already been spoken for before I even broke ground, they were flabbergasted.

"Then I had to deal with the bureaucratic airport officials who complained that the skyscrapers could present a safety hazard to their flights. I told them people once said the same thing about the Empire State Building when it was proposed. I also argued the skyscrapers would make pilots more alert when they were landing at National. To calm their fears I offered to put a red light on the top of all the buildings at my own expense."

"That was a very decent thing to do," I said. "Did you have any trouble with the Arlington County officials in getting a permit?"

"They were the only people on my side from the start. They saw the enormous tax revenues that commercial buildings would bring to the county, not to mention the jobs it would provide for people in the community. Compared to the federal government officials, who tried to stop me at every turn, the supervisors gave me encouragement during some of my darkest hours. Their faith in me has been rewarded. Arlington, which was formerly a bedroom community, now has one of the most beautiful skylines in the country."

"It must be a great feeling to see what you have accomplished in such a short period of time."

Alf said, "It's only the beginning. I've heard from counties all over the United States who want me to build skyscrapers next to their airports. I can see the day when every runway will be surrounded by glass and concrete towers, and high-rise hotels and apartment houses, creating an environment that will enrich the life of every American."

As we were talking, a DC-8 flew by Alf's window, its wing almost touching a large azalea plant out on the balcony. Alf waved at the passengers who could clearly be seen through the windows. He said, "I'm making money on the deal, but the real thrill for me is to see the delighted expressions on the travelers' faces every time they fly by my building."

World isn't divided neatly into black, white issues

Bill Modisett

"You can't be serious," the voice on the telephone bristled. "That column of yours the other day was about the most asinine thing I've ever read! Don't you realize there is another side to that issue?"

I guess I do. Now, anyway.

The caller was correct in a way. I had completely failed to address the "other side" of the issue. That's not smart in any situation. The world, you see, isn't black and white with distinct lines sharply defining the differences. Thus it's always a risk to view an issue — just about any issue — that way.

I do it anyway, but more often than not I do incorporate information from the "other side" simply to let readers know that I am aware that the other argument exists and, on occasion, to more effectively discount that argument.

So do other columnists — Charley Reese, George Will, William Buckley and the like. Their use of the other side's argument may differ stylistically — and the effect may vary accordingly — but the fact that they do utilize it stresses the point: Journalists are not unthinking, uncaring, haughty individuals who sit in their ivory towers and survey the world below with frosty aloofness. When we assume that attitude we're ripe for a public come-uppance.

The world is a blending of grays. Every issue has two sides and their colors are not black and white. But, I think, columnists tend to push aside the other side abruptly or to deal with it in cursory fashion as a means of emphasizing their side of the issue.

For example, the issue of abortion is multi-faceted. First and foremost it's a human issue and as such should not be addressed in a flippant manner. When one adopts that attitude, that individual is telling others that he or she doesn't care, is not part of the human world. That's stupid.

The abortion issue is a deep gray because it is multi-faceted and there is no clear-cut, simple, solution to it. When one considers it one must think not only of the woman bearing the unborn child inside her but of the unborn child, the father, of the potential social and religious consequences of aborting or not. Even that brief description doesn't address all concerns of the abortion issue.

All of a sudden an issue that before appeared simple is ultracomplex. Why? Because it's not a matter of blacks and whites but grays.

As I noted previously, abortion isn't the only issue that's that way. Pick a subject, take a position either pro or con in regard to it and if you look long and hard enough you'll find someone who not only believes exactly the opposite but who is emphatic as yourself in supporting that position.

So why do journalists, particularly those who write columns and editorials, take their positions with seemingly unbudgetable conviction? Well, that's not quite as easy to answer.

Perhaps it's because they hope to bowl the reader over with the "oomphh" of their conviction. That's the old "if you can't impress them with your intelligence, baffle them with your bull" syndrome.

More likely than not, though, I suspect it's simply a matter of journalists devoting the bulk of their effort to swaying readers to the journalist's position rather than swaying readers away from their own convictions.

It's a matter of priorities — studying a situation as fully as possible from all aspects available at the time and making a determination that would, presumably, best serve society at large.

No. Only in rare circumstances do journalists ever fail to consider both sides of any issue. Sometimes we cannot be as close to a subject as readers who are individually involved with that particular subject.

But if we seem to live in a world of blacks and whites, it's only because we want readers to see our side as vividly as we do.

LETTERS

Thanks for finally acknowledging event

I want to thank this paper for finally reporting the accomplishment of Odessa College's Track and Field team winning their fourth straight NJCAA title in San Angelo last weekend. But more important, that this was their eighth straight title including indoor titles which you forgot to include.

It's about time that the neighboring town's newspaper reports it, but it took eight straight national championships for it to happen. But what puzzles me is that including me there have been three former Midland athletes on some of those championship teams, Damon Polk and Roosevelt Fort being the other two. Damon is a three-time All-American this spring and I am also an All-American from OC.

I was on four of the championship teams and weight coach for three of the eight times. I never saw any news of the results in the Reporter-Telegram. I thought Midland and Odessa were working together and I can't think of a worse relationship of the newspaper's reporting the other town's athletic accomplishments than this. I wonder how big an article would have appeared if they had lost. Just like the bad news that came when that girl was struck with the javelin. Bad news is big news?

I do compliment this paper for at least not printing the pictures that were in the San Angelo paper — one of the girl that was struck with the javelin and one of the girl that struck her with the javelin. I was there and the girl that threw the javelin is worse off than the girl who got struck. The reporters could not wait to close in and snap pictures. They did not give them a chance. It looked like lions going in for a kill of the Christians. If it was not for a few decent coaches they would have had their kill.

Memorial Day not just time to have fun

By JIM SILVERS

Jim Silvers of Midland is commander of Disabled American Veterans, Tall City Chapter No. 58. A former Marine who served in Korea and Vietnam, Silvers moved to Midland in March 1976 from California. His article concerns the Memorial Day observance, which is Monday.

Memorial Day is not just a holiday on the calendar.

Memorial Day is a day of sadness — a day given over to the memory of those who gave their lives in the cause of peace, freedom and justice in order that we may enjoy living our lives as we see fit.

It's a day when our nation is called upon to honor those who died in our wars and other armed conflicts and, in our Memorial Day observances, visions haunt our minds.

We, who have served, will recall memories of friends or relatives who gave their lives in World War I, World War II, Korea, Vietnam, Lebanon and Grenada to try and help restore freedom and give the people the right to live their lives as they feel they should.

I have tried to put myself in the place of the families of the brave Americans who died for our country during the past years. But can anyone really imagine the shattering grief the mothers and fathers have felt on this day of remembrance? What about the young widows and children of those who gave their lives in the cause of freedom?

For these families, Memorial Day is not the three-day holiday weekend that it has become for too many Americans. For these families, Memorial Day has taken on a meaning of deep and personal heartache.

It's only appropriate that we who remember the price of freedom from past wars and campaigns share the grief these families feel today. It would be wrong to deny the feelings of sorrow that are a necessary part of observing Memorial Day. Yet it would be wrong, as well, to deny the pride we feel in the great sacrifices so many have made to maintain our nation's greatness.

Allowing ourselves that pride is not the same as glorifying war and armed conflict. I don't think any veterans' organization would want to do that. Veterans have seen the ugly face of war up close. They know what war is. This is particularly true of the organization I represent — the Disabled American Veterans (DAV). The members of the DAV carry the scars of war on their bodies and minds for life. They're all too personally familiar with the human cost of armed conflict.

Americans as a whole are peace-loving people, reluctant to take up arms against other nations. But when Americans have found that they must go to war, they've met the challenge with uncommon nobility. Their lives paid the price of our freedom. Their sacrifice has allowed our nation to pursue the ideals of justice and equality in a singularly democratic society.

The blood of the men and women we honor today has purchased America's peace. We owe these brave citizens a debt too great to ever be repaid. That's why people throughout our nation are gathering on Memorial Day to honor those who died in our wars and armed conflicts. They have come to be reminded that we are a free people because so many others stood the supreme test of their convictions. Their unselfish acts of heroism stand as monuments to the idealism that has kept America free. They have made our country the world's strong bastion of democracy. Because of them, our heritage thrives after two centuries of testing.

Ours is a great nation because of the many who have made the greatest sacrifice — their lives. There is immense purpose in what these men and women have done for each and all of us. That purpose is America's destiny.

"Speaking Out" columnists are invited to submit articles on subjects of their choice. They should be limited to 850 words or less.

Celebration of Arts tribute to Midland

"Art is long and time is fleeting," or so wrote Henry Longfellow. With his high appraisal of art itself, he would undoubtedly have been impressed with celebrations of art and all that they mean to the preservation and growth of the culture of a people.

With the initiation of Celebration of the Arts last week, Midlanders have once again shown their attendance to culture by extolling the talented among us.

But Celebration was (and will be again next year) more than an assembly of the talented and those who appreciate talent. It was yet another manifestation of the strong sense of community purpose and responsibility for which Midland is so exceptional.

To each who played a part, you are to be applauded at great length for what must have been a monumental undertaking.

Even 'animal lovers' can be cruel to pets

At least once each day I hear someone say, "I'm an animal lover, and I just can't understand how some people can be so cruel to them." I'm sure the persons saying they are animal lovers truly care for animals, and would never knowingly be cruel to them. But being cruel to animals can take many forms.

This same "I love animals" person can be cruel to animals when they allow their pet to breed when there is little chance of finding homes for the offspring. The "I love animals" person is unknowingly cruel when they leave their pet in their car, thinking they will just run in and out in no time short, while in just a short time their pet is on the verge of heat stroke or is having one.

Dogs do not tolerate high temperatures as well as humans do. The "I love animals" person is unknowingly cruel when they drop their unwanted pet across town or out in the country, thinking it may find a new home with some kind person, thinking that if they take it to the animal shelter it will be put to sleep. How wrong they are. The fact is, only about 9 percent of the animals abandoned survive. Animals abandoned may be killed when hit by a car, starve to death, killed by predators or killed by a farmer or rancher.

If the "I love animals" person had taken their unwanted pet to the animal shelter it would have had a 28 percent chance of finding a good home. It's not hard to see that 28 percent is better than 9 percent. The "I love animals" person may be unknowingly cruel when they give their pet away to someone they don't know, never knowing just how responsible the new owner is.

I could go on and on about how cruel we "animal lovers" could unknowingly be to our pets. Hopefully, the point has been made.

Midlander proud of heritage, home

"I shall pass through this world but once. Any good, therefore, that I can do, or any kindness that I can show to any human being, let me do it now. Let me not defer it or neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again."

As an American citizen America is my country, Midland is my home. I am a proud Midlander and an especially proud black Midlander.

Having grown up under the influence of the American way of life, I have to thank America. Where else except in America with such a diverse society could we come and go, vote, and protest as we please? Sure, there are many ills within our society and we as a people have suffered the blunt of them. We cannot correct any of them by "taking over" but rather by sitting at the table and finding possible solutions intelligently. There is one thing I have never been able to understand and probably never will. That is why is it we, who helped to build this country and make it what it is, we who have remained loyal to our No. 1 foe are treated worse than any other nationality?

Our society (black) has always been a matriarchic one because the woman could open doors where the man dared not tread. So, it would seem only logical that when a great God-fearing, humanitarian such as the Rev. Jesse Jackson emerges the rational thinking people would take pride and support him.

True followers of the Jackson philosophy know that you first must have a strong belief in God and mankind to be able to successfully administer cures for these ills. They do not have such strong needs for acceptance and recognition that they have no insight as to the struggle to "lift the boats stuck at the bottom." It's frightening to think of takeovers in America. One associates these acts with countries such as Iran, Iraq, Lebanon and others. Never in America!

Followers of Rev. Jackson think as he does. Here is a man blacks, Hispanics, women, young, old, poor and other minorities can identify with, for our plights are the same.

Perhaps America has now begun to listen to the cries of these people. It takes a knowledgeable person such as Rev. Jackson to cause a "sick, confused society" to address issues that too long have been swept under the "carpet."

I believe our viewpoint can best be expressed with the following lyrics from "America the Beautiful":

"American, America, God shed his grace on thee. And crown thy good with brotherhood from sea to shining sea."

Hospital's swing shift not necessarily slower

As a registered nurse employed at Midland Memorial Hospital, I was distressed to read your article entitled "Nurse enjoys slower pace of swing shift," May 9.

I also work the 11 p.m.-7 a.m. shift in the Intensive Care Unit, and I feel your article was misleading and inaccurate. In the ICU, as well as in other areas throughout the hospital, the pace and the workload are hardly slower. True, there are much fewer of the concillary personnel at this hour, but this only increases the responsibilities upon the staff at night. Critical care means 24 hour care, and we are responsible for continuous assessment of each patient's condition. This includes physical and emotional comfort, continuous monitoring of vital signs, electrocardiagram monitoring and diagnosing. Careful consideration is given to each patient's respiratory status, as well as instituting prompt and precise intervention to maintain correct or improve the patient's condition.

The majority of medications are given around the clock, requiring observation of drug reactions, interactions and effectiveness.

In addition, we as nurses are responsible for emergency care of patients throughout the entire hospital in life-threatening "Code 4" situations.

In this age when nurses as professionals are working hard to change the public's awareness of nursing from "doctor's handmaidens" to active professionals in their own right, I feel the media has a responsibility to accurately reflect the nursing role around the clock.

Cooperation depends on sewage treatment

Currently there is a big push to engender a cooperation between the cities of Odessa and Midland. Not a bad idea.

It does seem as if it would get off to a better start if Odessa would quit dumping their sewage water into Midland County drainage systems. After all, the pollution of Midland aquifers and the endangering of the lives of children and adult citizens is inexcusable.

This is where the effort should start. Until some accommodation is made on this issue, I foresee little gain to be made in the program.

Duarte makes good impression on Washington visit

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

NEW YORK — Jose Napoleon Duarte, president-elect of embattled El Salvador, just completed a visit to Washington where he made a deep impression on all congressmen who met and heard him. The U.S.-educated engineer — he went to Notre Dame — vows to maintain democracy in his little Central American republic as the first freely-elected president in over 50 years. El Salvador's army, once a stumbling block to previous democratic aspirations, is now apparently prepared to accept Duarte, who will be sworn into office next month as its unquestioned commander-in-chief.

That's the way it should be, as noted by our own president who hailed Duarte's visit. The Sandinista Communist regime in Nicaragua, next door, supplies Communist guerrillas in El Salvador but their terror couldn't halt the free elections that gave the president-elect nearly 55 percent of the vote.

President Reagan noted that if the Communists succeeded, as the Kissinger bipartisan commission report emphasized, 100 million people from Panama to our open border with Mexico would sooner or later come under the grip of pro-Soviet regimes. We would, therefore, be confronted by a tidal wave of refugees. That alone requires stationing a couple of million of our own armed service people to stem the tide. It's a prospect, I'm sure, few in this country accept. The Soviet Union with its Cuban surrogates would turn the area into a vast gulag.

President-elect Duarte has impressed supporters in El Salvador and our people here with his total frankness. Our president, hardly a slouch when it comes to communicating with people, admired his guest for being fair and open-minded. Duarte thanked President Reagan for a televised speech to the people, saying what is at stake for all of us if we don't assist El Salvador in particular and Central America in general. It wasn't done abjectly but as president-to-president, both of whom know the hard issues.

The Duarte visit made so much of an impact that even House Speaker Tip O'Neill, longtime critic of President Reagan and his policies for Central America, had a temporary change of mind. Where he opposed President Reagan all the way on aid to El Salvador, Speaker O'Neill said: "I think that he (Duarte) has sold enough people in the House. The votes are there now." House Majority Leader Jim Wright, of Texas, said he had no doubts about the outcome. It was Wright, a veteran Democrat, who put aside partisanship and helped President Reagan gain the needed votes for a military-aid package. The present upcoming vote is for $62 million in emergency military aid, peanuts for a life-or-death matter. Both Duarte and President Reagan reiterated that there is no need for U.S. combat forces for El Salvador.

Reinforcing congressional support for aid was the verdict by a court in El Salvador which found five former national guardsmen guilty of murdering four U.S. churchwomen. It was a unanimous decision by a three-man, two-woman jury after media reports suggested the trial was too tough for locals to face. Duarte's incoming administration obviously shows that it won't tolerate coverups. The House swiftly approved assistance to El Salvador but held back on covert aid for Freedom Fighters in Nicaragua.

Besides being generally upbeat about the state of the economy, the president shrugged off the Soviet threat of their submarines off our coasts. "I wouldn't be sleeping in this house (The White House) if I was concerned about them," observed President Reagan, eliciting gales of laughter.

While we might argue about an appropriate time to celebrate Memorial Day most everyone agrees about the meaning of the observance. It's the time the people of this nation are as one in remembering the millions of brave Americans who have given their lives for our country. Because of their sacrifice, this nation survives. We began setting aside a day to respect our fallen soldiers in 1868, to honor those who died in the Civil War. Since that date, for a long time called Decoration Day, the list has been expanded to battles where the U.S. became embroiled, usually in faraway places.

Memorial Day for years was commemorated on May 30. Congress decided that there are lots of other three-day weekends so it decided Memorial Day should be the last Monday in May. Traditionalists can still, of course, observe the day on May 30.

Most of us will take those three days off for a long weekend. So watch your sunburn and drive carefully.

Robbery probe leads to arrest of modern-day 'Bonnie and Clyde'

HALTOM CITY (AP) — An investigation into a 13-year spree of small-town bank robberies led to the arrests of a couple that fit the description of a modern-day "Bonnie and Clyde" team of bandits, authorities said.

Lawrence Edward Byrom, 55, and his wife, Alice Hart Byrom, 36, were arrested about 6 p.m. Friday on sealed indictments charging them on a federal count of conspiracy to commit armed robbery and on state counts of auto theft, senior FBI agent Jim Adams said.

The pair apeared at a bond hearing Saturday afternoon. U.S. Magistrate Alex McGlinchy set bond on Byrom at $250,000 and at $50,000 for his wife. Byrom asked the court to appoint them attorneys and McGlinchy said that would be arranged on Monday. The couple is being held at the Tarrant County Jail. An arraignment hearing was set for June 4.

U.S. Attorney R.H. Wallace had requested bond be set at $100,000 on Mrs. Byrom, but her husband asked it to be lowered, saying "$100,000 for my wife is a little harsh. I was the ramrod of the whole show."

Byrom told the court he had $20 in his wallet and $200 in savings.

Officers who executed search warrants at the man's home and a rural Wise County residence found vehicles that had been reported stolen and confiscated guns and clothing believed used in bank robberies, Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman David Wells said.

Documents used to obtain the warrants from a magistrate implicated the pair in bank robberies beginning in March 1970 and extending through November 1983, he said.

Wells said the arrests culminated a lengthy investigation by the FBI, DPS troopers, Texas Rangers and three other state law enforcement agencies.

"The estimated take in the robberies altogether will be about $500,000, with most of this taken in small towns," Wells said.

The man and woman were both armed when arrested, but they did not resist and no shots were fired, Wells said.

Federal authorities have said the so-called "Bonnie and Clyde" team is suspected of committing at least 14 bank robberies in North Central Texas.

Authorities have said the same man robbed four banks in Justin, Milford, Tom Bean and Prosper by himself between 1970 and 1974. The woman made her first appearance as a visible partner in a second robbery of the Justin State Bank in 1975. But it was not until 1980 that law enforcement authorities linked the string of robberies to the pair.

The pair is believed responsible for two robberies each of banks in Justin, Tom Bean, Milford and Rhome, authorities said recently.

Military panel's chairman confident springs will be installed on helicopters

FORT WORTH (AP) — The chairman of a military panel investigating mast-bumping accidents involving Fort Worth-made Bell helicopters says that he is sure that the Army will modify the aircraft to cut down on crashes.

Dr. Richard J. Trainer said Friday in Washington that he is confident, based on conversations with top Army officials, that the springs will be ordered installed on the helicopters, despite their cost.

"There is no doubt in my mind that the Army intends not only to develop a hub spring but to procure them and deploy them," he told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "There's no doubt in my mind that's the case."

Mast bumping has been cited as a cause in the crashes of 67 Bell helicopters since 1967 that have killed 231 servicemen.

The Army estimates that the hub springs could cut mast-bumping deaths by 60 percent. Although Army officials said earlier this week that the service would design and test a hub spring to see if it might help curb mast bumping, they refrained from saying that the service actually would install the costly devices.

The Army has roughly estimated that installing the springs on the 5,000 Bell Huey and Cobra aircraft at between $25 million and $75 million.

Mast bumping occurs when blades on a helicopter with a teeter rotor flap too far up and down as they spin, forcing the underside of the rotor to bump against the mast connecting the rotor system to the engine. The physics of flight require this flapping, although in most non-Bell systems it occurs through hinges away from the mast.

Bell officials contend that mast bumping cannot occur unless the pilot exceeds preset flight limits or unless a critical part breaks. Critics, however, disagree.

White to seek support for raising taxes to fund school reforms

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White says the votes are there for "meaningful, substantial changes" in Texas' public schools, but some lawmakers are not convinced.

And, despite his own view that the votes already are there, the governor soon will show up on Texans' televisions, looking for public support for education reform funded by higher taxes.

The 30-day special session that opens June 4 could be a test of White's lobbying talent. The Legislature has not raised state taxes since 1971, and White is looking for a $4.8 billion tax increase package to pay for a revamped school system.

"I believe we have the votes to pass meaningful and substantial changes. I am persuaded the Legislature will fund the reform package," White said Friday in announcing the session.

In recent months, the governor has put together a team of former House members to help push his package. Former Reps. Gerald Hill of Austin and Jim Turner of Crockett were effective legislators who have moved to White's staff.

But some current House members are quick to remind that a tax hike — even for such a noble purpose — is difficult for lawmakers to swallow.

"I think (legislators) are saying, 'We'll vote for a tax bill but only if there's reform.'"
— House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Stan Schlueter

Rep. Bill Haley, D-Center, and chairman of the House Public Education Committee, said, "We are not talking about an education or a highway session but we are talking about a tax session."

Here are some of White's proposed reforms — starting teacher pay of $15,200 (up from the current $11,100); more school time for classroom work; some form of competency testing for teachers and students; an appointed, instead of elected, State Board of Education.

Here's how White wants to pay for the changes — add a penny to the 4-cent state sales tax; double the gasoline tax to 10 cents a gallon; increase beer, wine and liquor taxes; raise the motor vehicle sales and rental tax from 4 percent to 5 percent; and add 5-cents per pack to the cigarette tax.

House members have not slammed the door on a tax bill, but they want to see the product before they tap constituents' wallets.

"I think they are saying, 'We'll vote for a tax bill but only if there's reform,'" House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen, said of lawmakers' feelings.

Rep. Kae Patrick, R-San Antonio, said he would come to Austin "trying to find a way to support a tax bill."

On the Senate side, Finance Committee Chairman Grant Jones, D-Abilene, said, "Any tax bill will have a difficult time in the Senate unless we show that we have improvements. Very definitely, we will have to have the improvements first."

White's TV ad campaign will run in the state's larger cities. He will be joined by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Idea of annual legislative sessions not popular in Lone Star State

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — According to an old joke about the Texas Legislature, the reason lawmakers meet in regular session once every two years for 140 days is a result of an error in drafting the Texas Constitution. What the writers meant to say, the joke asserts, is that the Legislature should meet once every 140 years for two days.

The theme of that joke points to the feeling of many Texans that activating the Legislature isn't something that should be undertaken lightly or unadvisedly, or too often. Which is surely one reason annual sessions has proven to be an idea whose time has not come for Texas.

Comptroller Bob Bullock recently said that the current financial situation proves Texas needs to hold regular sessions every year to avoid "government by crisis."

Bullock says he's chan .d his mind about annual sessions "because the times have changed."

"After 25 years in state government," Bullock announced, "I believe we could do a better job of managing our money with annual sessions, at least so we could write one-year budgets."

What Texas has now, Bullock feels, is "catch-as-catch-can, part-time government run by people who only come to town every two years or when they're called, and who realistically don't even get paid enough to cover their exepnses in Austin while they're here."

And under the current system, the comptroller comments, his office is charged with setting the size of the state budget every two years by looking ahead 32 months and estimating how much money will be available. And while the current estimate has been "99.6 percent on the money," he says, there remain a lot of uncertainties.

"We can't predict things like another peso devaluation, or what OPEC is liable to do, and these things could wreck a two-year budget," he said.

Bullock also raises the familiar argument that the two-year budget process results in poor handling of financial resources — and that annual budgets would "let us use our resources more effectively."

But Texans haven't shown much interest in annual sessions, rejecting the idea when it has been brought to them as a constitutional amendment. Opponents of annual sessions have argued that the problem with the idea is that the sessions would not long remain limited to budgetary matters only and that very shortly Texas would have a full-time, on-going, year-round legislature, which isn't a very popular prospect.

And, they say, if there is a real crisis, the governor has the power to call the Legislature into session at any time, on any topic, including budget matters.

That's what's happend, it seems.

Bullock notes that in the past 19 years, there have been 10 regular sessions and 15 special sessions, with 13 of those 15 dealing with finance matters.

Some legislators, recognizing the unpopularity of annual session, along with the problems of juggling budgets for two and half years in advance, have proposed giving financial management powers to state government.

The last major attempt came from the 1981 Legislature, which passed HJR 38, a proposed constitutional amendment by Rep. Bob Simpson, D-Amarillo, to establish a state finance-management committee.

Under that proposal, a committee made up of the governor, lieutenant governor, speaker of the House of Representatives and chairmen and vice chairmen of the House Appropriations and Senate Finance committees would have been allowed to manage expenditure of appropriated funds, except constitutionally dedicated funds.

That proposal, which drew support from a number of groups such as the Texas Association of Business and League of Women Voters, went down to defeat in November 1981.

And since voters had rejected, a year earlier, another proposal to give the governor budget execution powers (with approval by a committee), there wasnt' a great deal of interest in the 1983 Legislature of reviving a budget execution/finance management plan.

So its likely that state government will continue in the same manner as in the past on budget matters, at least for the foreseeable future.

It's probably correct that the system needs to be changed. It's surely correct to say that Texans aren't going to change the system — until they're convinced that any change will work to their advantage, and so far, they haven't been convinced.

Houston judge dismisses lawsuit by Italian relatives of oil tycoon

HOUSTON (AP) — A probate judge has dismissed one of the largest estate claims in U.S. history, rejecting a lawsuit by two wealthy Italian brothers who sought $2 billion more of their oil tycoon grandfather's vast fortune.

Baron Enrico di Portanova, 50, and his brother, Ugo, 47, claimed they were cheated by their aunts and cousins of their rightful share to the estate of the late Hugh Roy Cullen.

But Harris County Probate Judge Bill Bear ruled Friday that the case was without merit and there would be no trial.

"Attorneys have indicated a trial would probably take eight months with a million pieces of evidence or more. It seems like such a waste to spend millions of dollars to try this case," Bear said.

The di Portanova brothers sued the Cullens, one of the nation's wealthiest families, for $2 billion in a bid to wrest control of 25 percent of the stock in Quintana Petroleum Corp., a holding company set up to oversee some 40 oil and gas firms.

"The Cullens split up some half a billion dollars a year amongst themselves and, of course, I'm not getting anything like that. I'm just as much a member of this family as they are," Enrico di Portanova said in a court deposition.

Brad Wright, an attorney appointed by the court to represent Ugo, who was declared mentally incompetent in 1966 by an Italian court, said Bear's ruling "absolutely will be appealed."

Attorney Joe Jamail, who represented the Cullens, said he was "ecstatic" about the decision. "The Cullens have won. They've been vindicated because they've done nothing wrong," he said.

Enrico di Portanova, reportedly worth an estimated $50 million, and his brother each earn about $1.1 million a month from trusts set up by his grandfather, known as the "King of the Wildcatters" because he dared to drill deeper than other oilmen and brought in gusher after gusher.

Before his death at age 76 in 1957, Cullen estimated he had given away 93 percent of his wealth. He donated hundreds of millions of dollars to local charities and gave away several thousand acres of oil-rich land worth about $160 million. The University of Houston and Texas Medical Center benefitted most from the gifts.

The remaining 7 percent of the estate went to his children.

Cullen and his wife, Lillie, had one son and four daughters. Their oldest daughter, Lillie, went to California and married Paolo di Portanova, an Italian movie star. But the union, which produced two sons, ended in divorce.

After Cullen's death, the di Portanova brothers, neither of whom was in court Friday, began receiving monthly payments of $5,000.

'Legal maneuvers' delay oil lease's sale

AUSTIN (AP) — The resale of a Duval County oil and gas lease recovered by the state in a settlement with Mobil Oil has been delayed by "legal maneuvers" by a Dallas-based firm, according to Land Commissioner Garry Mauro.

The 78,000-acre lease on the Duval County Ranch was to have been sold by the state to American Resources Inc. on Friday. The company had posted a $1 million letter of credit for the right to have first shot at the lease.

Mauro said, "The state was ready to close Friday in Dallas, but American Resources Inc. did not tender the purchase price. I understand they have now started legal maneuvers to avoid paying us the earnest money."

Mauro has not disclosed the total purchase price.

Mobil surrendered the leases to the state and South Texas rancher Clinton Manges in a January settlement of a lawsuit.

Tom McElroy, American Resources' lawyer, said Saturday that his client decided to delay the closing because "it was plain that (a Manges company involved in the transaction) could not deliver good title to the leasehold estates."

McElroy said American would go to court to try to clear up the matter.

"We want the deal. We want the properties," he said.

American was to put up $50 million on Friday, according to McElroy.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Idea of annual legislative sessions not popular in Lone Star State

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — According to an old joke about the Texas Legislature, the reason lawmakers meet in regular session once every two years for 140 days is a result of an error in drafting the Texas Constitution. What the writers meant to say, the joke asserts, is that the Legislature should meet once every 140 years for two days.

The theme of that joke points to the feeling of many Texans that activating the Legislature isn't something that should be undertaken lightly or unadvisedly, or too often. Which is surely one reason annual sessions has proven to be an idea whose time has not come for Texas.

Comptroller Bob Bullock recently said that the current financial situation proves Texas needs to hold regular sessions every year to avoid "government by crisis."

Bullock says he's chan d his mind about annual sessions "because the times have changed."

"After 25 years in state government," Bullock announced, "I believe we could do a better job of managing our money with annual sessions, at least so we could write one-year budgets."

What Texas has now, Bullock feels, is "catch-as-catch-can, part-time government run by people who only come to town every two years or when they're called, and who realistically don't even get paid enough to cover their exepnses in Austin while they're here."

And under the current system, the comptroller comments, his office is charged with setting the size of the state budget every two years by looking ahead 32 months and estimating how much money will be available. And while the current estimate has been "99.6 percent on the money," he says, there remain a lot of uncertainties.

"We can't predict things like another peso devaluation, or what OPEC is liable to do, and these things could wreck a two-year budget," he said.

Bullock also raises the familiar argument that the two-year budget process results in poor handling of financial resources — and that annual budgets would "let us use our resources more effectively."

But Texans haven't shown much interest in annual sessions, rejecting the idea when it has been brought to them as a constitutional amendment. Opponents of annual sessions have argued that the problem with the idea is that the sessions would not long remain limited to budgetary matters only and that very shortly Texas would have a full-time, on-going, year-round legislature, which isn't a very popular prospect.

And, they say, if there is a real crisis, the governor has the power to call the Legislature into session at any time, on any topic, including budget matters.

That's what's happend, it seems.

Bullock notes that in the past 19 years, there have been 10 regular sessions and 15 special sessions, with 13 of those 15 dealing with finance matters.

Some legislators, recognizing the unpopularity of annual session, along with the problems of juggling budgets for two and half years in advance, have proposed giving financial management powers to state government.

The last major attempt came from the 1981 Legislature, which passed HJR 38, a proposed constitutional amendment by Rep. Bob Simpson, D-Amarillo, to establish a state finance-management committee.

Under that proposal, a committee made up of the governor, lieutenant governor, speaker of the House of Representatives and chairmen and vice chairmen of the House Appropriations and Senate Finance committees would have been allowed to manage expenditure of appropriated funds, except constitutionally dedicated funds.

That proposal, which drew support from a number of groups such as the Texas Association of Business and League of Women Voters, went down to defeat in November 1981.

And since voters had rejected, a year earlier, another proposal to give the governor budget execution powers (with approval by a committee), there wasnt' a great deal of interest in the 1983 Legislature of reviving a budget execution/finance management plan.

So its likely that state government will continue in the same manner as in the past on budget matters, at least for the foreseeable future.

It's probably correct that the system needs to be changed. It's surely correct to say that Texans aren't going to change the system — until they're convinced that any change will work to their advantage, and so far, they haven't been convinced.

Houston judge dismisses lawsuit by Italian relatives of oil tycoon

HOUSTON (AP) — A probate judge has dismissed one of the largest estate claims in U.S. history, rejecting a lawsuit by two wealthy Italian brothers who sought $2 billion more of their oil tycoon grandfather's vast fortune.

Baron Enrico di Portanova, 50, and his brother, Ugo, 47, claimed they were cheated by their aunts and cousins of their rightful share to the estate of the late Hugh Roy Cullen.

But Harris County Probate Judge Bill Bear ruled Friday that the case was without merit and there would be no trial.

"Attorneys have indicated a trial would probably take eight months with a million pieces of evidence or more. It seems like such a waste to spend millions of dollars to try this case," Bear said.

The di Portanova brothers sued the Cullens, one of the nation's wealthiest families, for $2 billion in a bid to wrest control of 25 percent of the stock in Quintana Petroleum Corp., a holding company set up to oversee some 40 oil and gas firms.

"The Cullens split up some half a billion dollars a year amongst themselves and, of course, I'm not getting anything like that. I'm just as much a member of this family as they are," Enrico di Portanova said in a court deposition.

Brad Wright, an attorney appointed by the court to represent Ugo, who was declared mentally incompetent in 1966 by an Italian court, said Bear's ruling "absolutely will be appealed."

Attorney Joe Jamail, who represented the Cullens, said he was "ecstatic" about the decision. "The Cullens have won. They've been vindicated because they've done nothing wrong," he said.

Enrico di Portanova, reportedly worth an estimated $50 million, and his brother each earn about $1.1 million a month from trusts set up by his grandfather, known as the "King of the Wildcatters" because he dared to drill deeper than other oilmen and brought in gusher after gusher.

Before his death at age 76 in 1957, Cullen estimated he had given away 93 percent of his wealth. He donated hundreds of millions of dollars to local charities and gave away several thousand acres of oil-rich land worth about $160 million. The University of Houston and Texas Medical Center benefitted most from the gifts.

The remaining 7 percent of the estate went to his children.

Cullen and his wife, Lillie, had one son and four daughters. Their oldest daughter, Lillie, went to California and married Paolo di Portanova, an Italian movie star. But the union, which produced two sons, ended in divorce.

After Cullen's death, the di Portanova brothers, neither of whom was in court Friday, began receiving monthly payments of $5,000.

'Legal maneuvers' delay oil lease's sale

AUSTIN (AP) — The resale of a Duval County oil and gas lease recovered by the state in a settlement with Mobil Oil has been delayed by "legal maneuvers" by a Dallas-based firm, according to Land Commissioner Garry Mauro.

The 78,000-acre lease on the Duval County Ranch was to have been sold by the state to American Resources Inc. on Friday. The company had posted a $1 million letter of credit for the right to have first shot at the lease.

Mauro said, "The state was ready to close Friday in Dallas, but American Resources Inc. did not tender the purchase price. I understand they have now started legal maneuvers to avoid paying us the earnest money."

Mauro has not disclosed the total purchase price.

Mobil surrendered the leases to the state and South Texas rancher Clinton Manges in a January settlement of a lawsuit.

Tom McElroy, American Resources' lawyer, said Saturday that his client decided to delay the closing because "it was plain that (a Manges company involved in the transaction) could not deliver good title to the leasehold estates."

McElroy said American would go to court to try to clear up the matter.

"We want the deal. We want the properties," he said.

American was to put up $50 million on Friday, according to McElroy.

Max's debut in Dallas fortunately not real blast

DALLAS (AP) — Max will be a welcome guest to this year's Republican National Convention — provided that he doesn't get blown up in the interim.

Max, olive green, 5 feet tall and able to move around at about 3 mph, is the city's new bomb disposal robot. He made his debut to the public Friday.

Dallas police officers gave Max his name after City Councilman Max Goldblatt, chairman of the city's Public Safety Committee and the first to recommend Max's purchase.

"You're risking a machine instead of a human being," Goldblatt said in reference to Max's less-than-popular job.

Besides X-raying and defusing bombs, Max also can fire shotguns, blow out a locked door and provide two-way communication, said Sgt. Ron McCracken, supervisor of the police bomb squad.

Litter can carry parasite

HOUSTON (AP) — Pregnant women who empty kitty litter boxes run the risk of coming in contact with a parasite which can cause birth defects in their children, an infectious disease specialist says.

Dr. Ralph Feigin of Baylor College of Medicine said a parasite released from cat excrement carries toxoplasmosis. That substance can cause enlarged brain, mental retardation, blindness or other problems if transmitted to fetuses in the first three months of development.

Feigin said 10 percent of all children admitted to hospitals have diseases or injuries transmitted or caused by animals.

Allergy specialist Dr. William Shearer, also of Baylor, said animals also aggravate allergic reactions and respiratory problems.

The best way to avoid most of the ailments, the doctors say, is for pet owners to wash their hands after handling their pets. In addition, animals should be given regular examinations and vaccinations and be kept outdoors.

Drug courier sentenced

FORT WORTH (AP) — Federal prison terms have been ordered for a Fort Worth man described by prosecutors as a Florida-to-Texas cocaine courier and three of his dealers.

Jack Wade Warren, 34, was sentenced Friday to 12 years in prison by U.S. District Judge Eldon Mahon.

Warren, who prosecutors said flew back and forth between Florida and Texas to pick up cocaine and sell it in Fort Worth, also was ordered to serve eight years on probation after completion of his prison term.

He was arrested Aug. 2 by Arlington and Fort Worth police and FBI agents after a search of his east Fort Worth apartment netted them $100,000 worth of high-grade cocaine, authorities said.

Judge dismisses charge

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge dismissed an assault charge against a man who had been accused of threatening a mail carrier with a shotgun because she sprayed repellent on his pet wolves.

U.S. District Judge Gabrielle McDonald said the indictment against Billy Aaron Greywolf, 62, provided an insufficient description of the alleged crime.

Greywolf had been charged with deadly assault on a postal employee.

The defendant had been accused of chasing mail carrier Sylvia Fisher, 22, down a street with a shotgun, then chaining her postal vehicle to his pickup.

Greywolf explained he mistook the woman for an angry customer of a nearby automobile repossession business.

Opera company saluted

HOUSTON (AP) — An honor guard from the British navy's HMS Bristol greeted opera fans attending the first performance of the English National Opera in the United States.

Crew members stood in formation outside downtown Houston's Jones Hall for 30 minutes before the opera Rigoletto opened inside Thursday. The performance was the first for a major English opera company in the United States.

Bristol crewman Pete Williams said it's good for the company to tour this country. "They're getting to spread their wings a bit," he said.

The English National Opera's trip to America aroused the jealousy of a rival opera troupe, one crewman said.

"I understand the London opera (company) is upset that they got here before them," said crewman Michael Paine.

Two killed on highway

The Associated Press

At least two people died on Texas highways during the early hours of the long Memorial Day weekend as holiday travelers began their journeys.

Two Southeast Texas men died about 11:30 p.m. Friday in a two-vehicle wreck southeast of Conroe. The accident took place at the intersection of Farm to Market Road 1485 and Farm to Market Road 2090 in the community of Grangerland, authorities said.

The victims were identified as Michael McCollough, 17, of Conroe, and Robert Davis, 21, of Splendora. Three other people were injured in the wreck, investigators said.

Don Richards

Candidates face name recognition problem

By SCOTT McCARTNEY
Associated Press Writer

Tom Richards faces a name recognition problem in his run-off election Saturday for the Democratic Congressional nomination in District 19, which stretches from Lubbock to Odessa.

It's not that people don't know Richards is running, he says, it's that they don't know which Richards he is.

Richards' opponent is also a Richards, unrelated Don Richards. The two were the top vote-getters in a May 5 field of five trying to fill the vacated seat of Rep. Kent Hance, D-Lubbock, who is in the run-off for U.S. Senate.

"I have been introduced at various service clubs as Don Richards," Tom Richards said. "Some of my strongest supporters talk to large groups for about 30 minutes or so and maybe their last comment is, 'We've got to get up and give Don everything we can.'

"It's very easy to fall into the Don and Tom situation," he said.

Electronics distributor Larry Combest and accountant Ron Fleming, who face each other in the Republican run-off in the same district, don't have nearly the problems the two Richards have.

In District 6, Joe Barton and Max Hoyt are in a run-off in the Republican race to fill the seat left by Rep. Phil Gramm, R-College Station, who is running on the GOP side of the Senate race to replace Republican John Tower, who is retiring after 23 years.

In District 22, Houston political consultant Doug Williams, a former aide to Congresswoman Barbara Jordan, is in a run-off with Jim Mooney for the Democratic nomination. Rep. Ron Paul, R-Lake Jackson, ran unsuccessfully for the GOP Senate nomination, leaving the District 22 seat open.

And in District 14, Mac Sweeney of Victoria, who recently resigned as a White House aide, is in a Republican run-off with Georgetown attorney Chris Mealey.

Don Richards, 36, a former aide to Hance, led the May 5 race with about 31 percent of the vote while Tom Richards, who now refers to himself as Thomas M. Richards to further distinguish his name from his opponent's, won about 29 percent of the votes.

Both Richards believe some of their supporters strayed into the other man's camp on primary day.

"I'm sure there was voter confusion and some of my people mistakenly voted for him," Don Richards said. "Now everybody knows there are two Richards in the race, but there's still confusion about who is who."

Don Richards said his association with Hance, a conservative who is popular with West Texas voters, should help him. Tom Richards, 43, says he is trying to convince voters that he is the conservative in the race and that Don Richards is a liberal.

Both men have legal backgrounds. Tom Richards is a Lubbock attorney and Don Richards is a recent law school graduate and candidate for the state bar. He took the examination in February.

Tom Richards has outspent Don Richards by a wide margin, about 5-to-1 before the May 5 primary. Yet he laments that many of his ads may have boosted the recognition of his opponent.

And Don Richards, who believes he would have won the nomination if not for the apparent voter confusion, laments his bad luck of drawing an opponent with the same last name.

"It would be much easier running against a Smith," he said. "There would be one less thing to explain."

Democratic contenders square off in run-off

AUSTIN (AP) — After finishing just 273 votes apart in the primary, the top two Texas Democratic U.S. Senate candidates are engaged in a tough run-off campaign marked by charges of mudslinging, distortion, hypocrisy and racism.

Conservative U.S. Rep. Kent Hance, whose opposition to amnesty for illegal aliens helped propel him to victory in the May 5 primary, faces state Sen. Lloyd Doggett in the June 2 run-off.

Doggett prefers the "progressive" label and says Hance is a one-issue candidate, but Hance contends Doggett is too liberal for Texas.

Doggett says Hance is too much like the Republican nominee, one-time "boll weevil" congressman Phil Gramm, a Democrat turned Republican. The winner in November will succeed Republican Sen. John Tower, who is retiring after 23 years.

The primary was one of the closest elections in Texas history. Out of 1.46 million votes cast, fewer than 1,600 separated Hance from the third-place finisher, former congressman Bob Krueger. Now, Hance and Doggett are scrapping for support from Krueger backers.

Hance, 41, is a West Texas lawyer from Lubbock who has served in the House since 1979 and co-authored President Reagan's 1981 tax cut bill. He says his fiscal conservatism will have a broader appeal in the fall than would Doggett's liberal philosophy.

Most opinion polls, including his own, showed Hance running third in the primary race behind Doggett and moderate Krueger.

But in the final weeks, Hance launched an extensive, expensive television blitz focusing on his opposition to amnesty. He spent $300,000 in one week on ads that said Doggett and Krueger favored amnesty.

Doggett, 37, of Austin, is a former president of the Texas Consumer Association. He spent 10 years in the Texas Senate, championing bills dealing with consumer protection, labor issues, utility regulation and civil rights.

Doggett says he favors limited amnesty for aliens in this country for a long period of time, but that immigration is a bigger problem requiring a much broader solution.

He calls Hance a one-issue candidate who seized the issue only after a pollster told him it "would play" among voters. He has accused Hance of favoring the rich at the expense of Social Security recipients and others.

Both campaigns have spared the niceties.

"Quite simply, Kent Hance has chosen to run a single-issue campaign as a single-issue candidate on an issue that he's never done a single thing about. He's not even so much as given a speech during the five years he's been in Congress...much less authored a bill or an amendment to do anything about immigration," Doggett said.

"Lloyd Doggett says he could support (pending legislation) that would grant amnesty to illegal aliens who have been here no longer than two years. I think he is out of touch with the people of Texas on this issue," Hance said.

With Texas' sizable Hispanic population, others have gotten involved. Several Mexican-American groups criticized Hance for his statements.

"His inflammatory rhetoric about the 'flood of illegal aliens' borders on an outright racist appeal," said Willie Velasquez, director the Southwest Voter Registration Education Project.

"No, I don't think Hance is a racist," Velasquez said. But he said Hance "has shamefully distorted the facts in this case and has achieved his intended goal. He has polarized the Texas electorate and has gotten the citizens of Texas to go at each other's throats over the issues."

Hance takes strong exception when accused of having a racial motive.

"The issue is jobs," he says, adding that minority youths often are the first to suffer when undocumented workers take American jobs.

"These jobs are taken from the people that are the least fortunate among us," he said. "We're not talking about bankers and doctors and lawyers. We're talking about people trying to get a foothold on the lowest rung of the economic ladders."

Seeking to widen the debate, Doggett accused Hance of advertising his whole-hearted support for Social Security while voting in the House to cut benefits.

"Although Kent Hance's TV commercials claim a commitment to Social Security, the record shows that Kent voted against Social Security on three separate occasions. While he voted in favor of Social Security cuts, totalling $40 billion, he was giving away $30 billion to his friends in the giant utilities in the form of special unfair tax breaks," Doggett charged.

"His record does not bear out the claims that are made in his television commercials," Doggett said. "In an election year, it is better to look at the record than the rhetoric."

Controversial surgery may correct vision

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

The eye.

For some, it is almost useless without corrective glasses or contact lenses. But some controversial advances in eye surgery may allow those with less-than-perfect vision to see 20/20, or close to it, without glasses or contacts.

"Whether it's purely a cosmetic-type of operation to get rid of a heavy, unsightly pair of glasses or whether it's for occupational reasons — for the young man who wants to go into aviation, police work or work for the fire department — this would allow them to pursue their careers," said Dr. Joseph Frank Ruda, Midland ophthalmologist.

As the only ophthalmologist in the Permian Basin to perform the new keratorefractive surgeries, Ruda said he, too, was skeptical at first.

The keratomileusis (KM) surgery was introduced in the U.S. about five years ago, he said.

"At that time, I was very conservative and felt one should wait and see the results," Ruda said.

He saw the results when a nearsighted patient who had the surgery done in San Diego without Ruda's knowledge or approval returned to his office two months later for a refill of eye medication.

"He sat down in my examining chair and covered his unoperated eye and proceeded to read the 20/20 line without any contact lenses or without any glasses — just with his unoperated eye."

THE MAN HAD a MKM, or myopic keratomileusis. In that surgery, the cornea is marked with small scratches made by a needle. A metal ring is placed over the eye and suction is applied to provide a good cutting surface.

A thin layer of the cornea is then sliced off "with a fancy shaving apparatus," a microkeratome. The corneal "button" is measured for thickness and, with the help of a computer that takes into account the refraction and corneal curvature, the measure on which to set the cryolathe, used to pare the corneal "button" to the correct thickness, is determined.

After a few more steps, the corneal "button" is then pared to the desired thickness on the lathe and, lining up the scratches to make sure it is in its proper position, the reshaped flatter button is sewn back on the cornea. A special stitch is used employing 45-degree angles so the "button" is not rotated while replacing it on the cornea.

"I swung the lamp in front of him and asked him to place his chin in the chin rack and looked at his eye," Ruda said. "Everything looked perfectly fine, quiet and wonderful."

Impressed, Ruda began asking his patient questions, called the San Diego ophthalmologist and flew up to watch the surgery.

AFTER MANY classes and courses, apprenticeships and advice, Ruda was ready.

Since last October, some 40 patients have had the surgery done by Ruda in either Houston or Midland.

"The controversy, I believe, exists among people who are not well-informed about the surgery," Ruda said. "It is a surgery in which the eye is not opened. The eye remains closed. In that sense, it's a much safer surgery than when one opens the eye, as in cataract surgery, vitreous surgery or glaucoma surgery."

He compared the eye to a baseball: "This type of surgery, you take the baseball and make some incisions or some sections off of the surface of the pigskin which covers it, but the eyeball, or baseball, is not being opened. So the stuffing stays where the stuffing is supposed to be."

The MKM can correct nearsightedness (myopia) or astigmatism, a condition in which light rays cannot meet in a single focal point. Another keratomileusis surgery, the HKM, is for those suffering from farsightedness (hyperopia).

Although the cornea is thicker on the edges than it is at the center, the button sliced off must be of the same thickness throughout. The even slices are important, according to Ruda, "so you always have at this type of surgery backup eyes available in case, inadvertently, something like this occurs."

Ruda said he keeps two donor eyes on hand during the procedure.

BUT THE MOST common of the keratorefractive surgeries, and the oldest, is the radial keratotomies (RKs), which are for the nearsighted, preferably those with a dioptic range of between -1 and -6.

RKs were first and unsatisfactorily attempted in Japan in the early 1930s. They were developed and improved by the Russians almost 15 years ago and brought to the U.S. in 1978.

With an RK, a ring is placed over the cornea and the patient's optical zone is determined. The eye is stabilized and with a diamond knife incisions are made in a spokewheeled shape, beginning at the edge of the optical zone in a straight line to the white of the eye. The incisions relax the cornea's shape, flattening it so that the light rays meet closer to the eye's retina, eliminating nearsightedness.

There's something magic about Midland convention

By LINDA ANDERSON
Staff Writer

"It takes 20 years of practice before you can perform (the art of) sleight of hand. It's 100 times harder to make a coin disappear than to make an elephant disappear."
— Roger Klause
Magician

Sleight of hand...it never loses its fascination. Generations of followers of prestidigitation (defined in Webster's New World Dictionary as "the doing of tricks by quick, skillful use of the hands") have asked each other "How did he do that?"

About 100 members of an elite group who know the answer to that question met at the Executel in Midland this weekend when McFarland/Fields Productions sponsored "Close-up for Connoisseurs," a convention of close-up magicians, or those who specialize in sleight of hand.

The convention brochure defined connoisseur as "1. Expert; esp. one who understands the details, technique or principles of an art and is competent to act as a critical judge. 2. One who enjoys with discrimination and appreciation of subtleties."

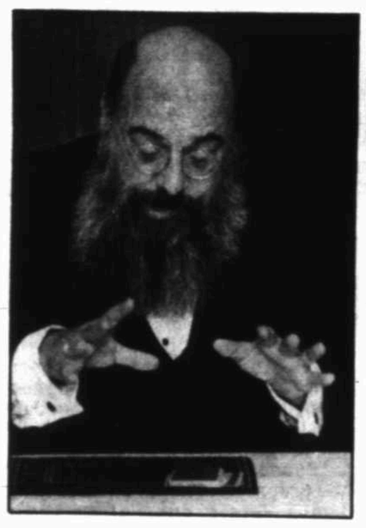
By the first definition, the six experts who spoke and performed at the convention were Michael Ammar, Eugene Burger, John Carney, Roger Klause, Martin Nash and Phil Willmarth.

Charles McFarland and David Fields, co-sponsors of the event and close-up magicians themselves, said they decided to form a production company to sponsor the convention in Midland because they "had been to conventions and never got to see everyone we wanted to see. We decided to hold our own and invite who we wanted. And these are six of the best in the world."

Eugene Burger, professional close-up magician and author of several books on magic, said he became interested in magic as a child because "I hated the accordian lessons my parents made me take. I got into magic as a way to get out of that. I was always a weird kid."

HE BECAME more interested in magic in college in 1957, but after graduation pursued a career as teacher of philosophy and history of religion at the University of Illinois at Urbana. He also served as director of welfare at Evanston, Ill., for four years.

Burger never lost his interest in magic and after several years decided to enter the field as a professional. "At the time I was living with some people who were very supportive of my job change. Eventually I just did it (changed careers). I would never go back to work again — this is too much fun!"



Eugene Burger

John Carney

Roger Klause described himself as a "magician's magician" because he teaches magicians and does not perform professionally himself.

A sales manager by trade, he said, "I travel all over the world teaching and giving lectures to professional magicians interested in the fine art of sleight of hand." He also has done consulting work for various movies and television shows when magic in part of the plot.

Close-up magic requires patience, skill and ability, he said. "Out of 30,000 people interested in magical enthusiasm around the world, less than 1 percent are professional accomplished magicians that make a living from magic. That's less than 300 in the world."

KLAUSE SAID his interest in magic began when "I was about 20 years old, I witnessed a performance of an amateur magician and he fooled me badly. And like all good magicians he wouldn't tell me how he did it. It took me about six months to figure it out. In about a year's time I was able to go back and fool him with the same trick.

"My reputation came early from fooling magicians with their own tricks."

Klause said professional magicians, "to be really good, must care only about the art."

Close-up magic is "not something everybody can do," he said. While many stage performers do impressive magic using large objects, such as elephants and automobiles, Klause said, "It's no secret the apparatus does the trick. The pride comes in being able to do that with just your hands and ordinary objects.

"Close-up is unique in that you can walk into anyone's home and do some of the classics — you can borrow props and create miracles. The real thrill and real test of a magician is the ability to work without apparatus."

Charles Greene III of Houston, a conventioner, has been a professional magician four years. Originally from New Jersey, he said he became interested in magic at age 7, when one Saturday he entered Tannen's Magic Shop in New York City and saw several magicians trying new tricks. "It was like walking into fantasyland. I was hooked."

DESCRIBED BY other conventioners as one of the best close-up magicians, Greene said he spends "a lot of time practicing. I enjoy having a job I love. Close-up is the closest to real magic because it happens right before your very eyes. Even I don't know how it works (but)...it works every time."

Greene said he hopes to "eventually go to either New York City or Los Angeles and do shows or work on a cruise ship."

Although most magicians are men, some women are also professionals in the field. Kathryn Bales is both a professional magician and manager of a magic shop in Fort Worth. She became interested in magic about 10 years ago when "I saw a magician on TV and said I would do that."

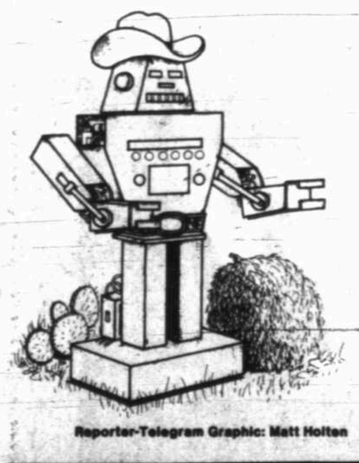
She began attending magicians' conventions to learn about the field. Although she has performed as a stage magician, she said she enjoys close-up more.

Becoming a professional magician is "difficult for a woman because of the outlook people have of the woman as assistant, not the magician," Ms. Bales said. "My family was very supportive and encouraged me to stay in it (magic)."

She said now, between teaching, selling and doing shows, she is involved in magic "24 hours a day."

And she has mastered all the tricks in her store.

UTPB's 'Hero' programmed for West Texas-style success



Reporter-Telegram Graphic: Matt Holten

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — There's a new kind of West Texas hero!

Fearless, armed and possessing an uncanny sense of sight, this new breed of West Texan is ready for action.

All this modern-day hero lacks is direction.

A bit squat and speaking in a strange variation of the traditional Texas drawl, Hero I is a two-foot tall robot.

"Howdy y'all, I'm the UTPB robot" is the programmed introduction of this addition to the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Built from a kit by UTPB technician Harvey Holland, this little robot can sense a difference in 256 levels of Texas sunlight with its light sensor.

Hero I is lacking in strength, the gripper hand unable to withstand more than one pound. But its single pivoting arm boasts two pivoting wrists and can extend and retract at the will of its programmer.

Likewise, HERO I can stand watch over the herd, and call out to rustlers "Stop, or I'll drop you where you stand," provided it's properly programmed.

A motion detector senses differences in movement and distance, and a sound detector is capable of hearing the approach of the stealthiest bad man.

HERO I also is capable of more current applications.

Using the voice synthesizer and its other features, this robot could be programmed to babysit. When the children turn the television up too loud, it could order them to "Turn it down, partners." And when bedtime comes, HERO I could announce "time to turn in" using its clock/calendar.

Students in the Spring Robotics class who had the first opportunity to program HERO I even gave it humility. One program promises "My wish is your command, HA, HA, HA!"

All these attributes in a short metal container with one arm might unnerve the average red-blooded Texan. But Dr. David Eggleston suggests that increased use of robots will not mean fewer jobs for humans.

"It seems to work out that way, that you need the same number of people in total," said the chairman of UTPB's control engineering department. "It turns out to be a lot less of a problem than you realize."

Rather than using humans to do repetitive tasks, he said human workers will be needed for programming, planning and maintenance. But people not making the switch will be out of luck.

"The world changes. Whether you change with it or not is up to you," said Eggleston.

Get your sassy behind underground

One thing I must constantly remind myself of is that people in Midland don't know the first thing about tornadoes.

This is not a criticism, mind you, just an observation. And it's understandable. After all, Midland has been lucky. Twisters (as knowledgeable people like myself refer to them) historically have remained a safe distance from the city. This is as it should be.

Unfortunately, that is not the case everywhere. Take "Tornado Alley," for example. Please take "Tornado Alley." It is a stretch of land in the northern part of the state that for whatever reason seems conducive to tornadoes. During the springtime it is not unusual for people there to spend an inordinate amount of their time huddled together in storm shelters.

Indeed, storm shelters have become a home away from home for many. It is not unusual for wealthy people to spend a small fortune choosing the precise decor to be used in their particular basement. In some cases interior designers are even hired. Bars are stocked, bookselves filled and, on occasion, cable laid for late night TV viewing. As they say in Hollywood, the show must go on.

There has been a great deal of speculation as to why that particular region is so suspectible to foul weather, but most experts say it has something to do with the geographical design of the area as well as prevailing weather conditions. Others, more cynical perhaps, suggest that God is merely answering the prayers of snooty Coloradans who contend those Texans are the most obnoxious when visiting their sacred ski slopes and, as a result, are simply getting what they deserve.

But for whatever reason tornadoes hit northwest Texas (primarily the Panhandle and South Plains) with alarming regularity. Most communities there have been devastated at least once, and in many cases more often. And as you might expect, those residents have become quite adept at dealing with the dreaded twister.

As a native of "Tornado Alley," I feel it is my civic duty to offer the following tips for your use. Please take notes.

1) When a dark funnel cloud approaches your house, be leery of the overweight beer drinker who insists on catching the final inning of an Atlanta Braves baseball game on the tube before heading to the shelter. NOTE: It is quite possible he will say something really stupid like, "Hey, if it hits it hits. What do you want me to do about it?" You should then reply, "Try getting your sassy behind underground, for starters."

2) Do not panic when the weatherman says your particular town is under a tornado watch. That simply means conditions are favorable for bad weather. However, if he updates his forecast to "tornado warning," panicking is considered acceptable. Indeed, it is encouraged. Get your sassy behind underground.

3) Ignore anything you might have learned from watching "The Wizard of Oz." I hate to be the one who breaks this dreadful bit of news to you, but Dorothy and the Emerald City do not exist in real life. Neither does the Cowardly Lion, but I don't want to overwhelm you with negative news at this point.

4) Do not try and be a hero by chasing the tornado in your car. In fact, if you insist on being involved in a chase scene it is highly recommended that you let the tornado do the chasing. And if you are fortunate enough to win that race? Get your sassy behind underground.

Gary Ott is city editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

Dr. Joseph F. Ruda demonstrates the sonometrics ultra-sound instrument on ophthalmic assistant Joe L. DeLeon. The machine measures the axial length of the eye through sound waves.

EYE

The number of incisions, according to Ruda, are determined by the patient's age, the amount of nearsightedness and the intraocular pressure (pressure within the eye).

An ultrasound device is used to measure the depth of the central cornea, the thinnest part. "You want to make the incisions through 95 percent of the thickness," Ruda said. Depth can be added to the knife as the incisions are made toward the edges of the cornea. If a surgeon "plunges" too deeply in the center, "you back off," Ruda said.

The optical zone is important because the smaller the zone, the less nearsightedness for the patient. But if the optical zone is too small, the chance for a starburst effect when looking at lights at night increases. The starburst effect, however, can be eliminated with medication, Ruda said.

The patient is kept awake until right before the surgery so that he or she can focus on the light and the optical zone can be marked. Valium is then slowly administered intravenously to relax the patient and a local anesthetic is administered immediately before the actual surgery begins, Ruda said.

"You want the patient relaxed, but you want the patient to be cooperative," he said.

A SIMILAR SURGERY using T-shaped incisions is used to correct astigmatism.

Besides the risks of the starburst effect, other complications with the surgeries include an unstable astigmatism, in which the front curvature of the eye fluctuates. While Ruda said his patients can expect some fluctuation for up to three months after the surgery, some ophthalmologists and optometrists say the astigmatism can last for six months and longer, causing constant changes in prescriptions and extensive eye wear expenses.

And although the surgery may not have severe complications afterwards, the patient may still need some form of correction through either glasses or contact lenses.

Some critics maintain the risks outweigh the benefits, citing permanent cornea weakness following the surgeries.

"This type of surgery is not for everybody," Ruda said. "It is for people who have trouble wearing glasses, have trouble with contact lenses or have infections with contact lenses. I don't think we can really realize what people are living with having to wear heavy glasses and put them on first thing in the morning and take them off the last thing at night."

The cost, too, is a factor, with critics claiming many ophthalmologists who otherwise are unqualified to do the surgery will be enticed into the big-money procedure in order to stay competitive with those surgeons who offer it.

RKs, which take about 15-20 minutes in an operating room and can be done on an outpatient basis, cost about $1,500 per eye. The MKMs, which take anywhere from 40 minutes to 1½ hours, cost about $3,500 per eye, Ruda said.

"NO ONE IS trying to create a new procedure just to make money," Ruda contended. "There are expenses (for the equipment and training) which must be met and paid for.

"Every ophthalmologist wants training in everything (to do with) ophthalmology, but we all don't do retinal detachments, we all don't do glaucoma surgery, we all don't do strabismus surgery. I think those gentlemen that feel this is a valid approach to nearsightedness will seek the training and provide the surgical technique.

DEATHS

Services will be at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday at Open Bible Church, 720 N. Pilden, with burial in Fairview Cemetery. Prayer service will be at 7 p.m. Monday at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel.

Marroquin was born Jan. 1, 1959, in Midland to Gomecindo and Manuela Marroquin. He was employed by Coca Cola Bottling Co. prior to moving to Huntsville three years ago.

Survivors include a daughter, Amanda Marroquin of El Paso; five brothers, Candalario, Danny, Robert and Gomacindo Marroquin Jr., all of Midland, and Paul Marroquin of Houston; and four sisters, Allicia Reyes, Elva and Margie LaSoya and Mary Yharte, all of Midland.

Man held on variety of charges following motorcyle-car mishap

From Staff Reports

A 20-year-old Midland man remains in Midland County Jail after being charged with driving while intoxicated, failure to yield right of way and failure to maintain insurance. Felony charges of failure to stop and render aid also are pending against Joe Angelo Martinez, no address available, according to a county officer.

Two Midlanders critically injured when their motorcycle collided with Martinez' car remain in Midland Memorial Hospital. Twelve-year-old Adolpho Venegas, 1708½ S. Rankin Highway, was listed as stable and Carlos Galindo, 24, of 1706 S. Colorado in serious condition Saturday night.

The accident occured shortly before 11 p.m. Friday at the intersection of Rankin Highway and County Road 114, according to a Department of Public Safety spokeswoman. Martinez reportedly was northbound on Rankin Highway when he attempted to make a left turn. His car collided with the northbound motorcycle driven by Galindo. Martinez left the scene, according to the DPS, but was apprehended a short time later.

Bond for Martinez has been set at $500 for the DWI charge. He was also fined $25 for failure to yield and $95 for lack of insurance.

Police investigate burglary, auto theft

From Staff Reports

Police Saturday were investigating an auto theft and burglary which were alleged to have taken place over the weekend.

Mary Lopez, 4709 W. Storey, reported her car stolen from 3501 Thomas sometime late Friday or early Saturday. The 1979 maroon AMC Spirit was valued at $3,000. Officers believe she may have left the keys in the unlocked vehicle.

Rafel Morgan, 1911 S. Colorado, reported his home burglarized between noon and 1:15 p.m. Saturday. He said he returned to find the front door open. Missing were a radio alarm clock valued at $160, a 19-inch black-and-white television worth $70 and an AM/FM cassette, turntable and speakers worth $490.

Texans see Redford film to benefit his Sundance Foundation

By KATHRYN BAKER
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — About 300 Dallasites donned tuxedos and evening gowns and shelled out $200 apiece to see Robert Redford's new movie, "The Natural."

They could have waited until the next day and gone to the neighborhood movie theater, but for $200 they got to shake hands and gush at the usually reclusive actor at a reception after the screening.

The Dallas premiere of the film was a benefit for Redford's Sundance Institute, a unique organization he founded in 1981 to help regional filmmakers produce quality work and get it to the public.

A similar benefit was held in Chicago during "The Natural's" nationwide premiere tour.

At the reception, Redford told the crowd he created the organization after meeting some gifted filmmakers who didn't want to go to Hollywood but couldn't stay in their regions and still get their films to audiences. He said he wanted to "give something back" to the film industry by helping independents.

Because films are becoming so expensive, said institute executive director Sterling Van Wagenen, "that tends to foreclose the opportunity for new talent, because so much money goes into a film, people who are financing films can't afford to take risks on new and adventuresome materials often, certainly on new filmmakers, first-time directors."

That's where one of the most important aspects of the institute comes in. Of the annual budget of $1.7 million — from studios, endowments and private donations — $1 million is dedicated to "completion guarantees."

Backed by a "major insurance company," Van Wagenen said, Sundance guarantees that investors will get their money back if a film sponsored by the institute never is finished for some reason or goes over budget.

Such backing gives filmmakers "credibility" and a big leg-up on obtaining financing for their independent features. But it isn't easy to qualify.

"We get about 500 scripts a year and we've taken anywhere between six and 10. The competition is stiff," said Van Wagenen. The institute's board, of which Redford is a yearly member, decides which projects are accepted.

Van Wagenen said major talents in acting, directing and writing have flocked to Utah, where the institute is based, to tutor novice filmmakers.

They do it for expenses and "for the excitement of working with independent filmmakers," he said.

The "resource" people participate in the other major phase of the institute program, a "laboratory" program where they work with inexperienced writers and directors.

A screenwriter might be paired with Sundance board member Bill Witliff of Austin, who wrote "The Black Stallion" and "Raggedy Man," among others. Novice directors get to work with the likes of Sidney Pollack, director of "Tootsie." And they might learn about the actor's craft from Robert Duvall.

During the lab phase, the filmmakers have access to videotape equipment and can work out the rough spots in their scripts before they actually start shooting.

The filmmakers also get tips on movie financing and learn about the complicated process of distributing the final product to theaters.

Sundance also provides short-term, no-interest loans for emergencies, like when a filmmaker is about the lose the option on the material the proposed film is based on.

"Sundance in no way owns any of the properties. The filmmakers at all times retain control of their project," Van Wagenen said. "We're not a film production company, we're not a school. The best way to say it is we're a collection of resources."

Van Wagenen said six projects spawned at Sundance are now in production, most by independent regional filmmakers getting a shot at a wide audience for the first time, others by established screenwriters directing their first films.

The Dallas benefit was held under the aegis of the USA Film Festival, which in the past few years has become an important source of exposure for independent as well as major studio productions.

USAFF director Sam Grogg said he and Van Wagenen first met 10 years ago when Grogg was with the American Film Institute and Van Wagenen was with the state arts council in Utah. Now that the two are heading their respective film organizations, they hope to work together, Grogg said.

"Sterling's institution is more on the creative-production side, the making side. The USA Film Festival is more on the other end of the spectrum, the exhibition side. What I hope we can do is provide some kind of cooperative outlet for the Sundance Institute, an exhibition forum," said Grogg.

Grogg also covets the talent that the Sundance Institute has access to, since he has been trying to develop a film seminar program at the USAFF.

"While we can bring in every now and then directors and writers and actors and actresses, we need more access. We need to strengthen our native talent by getting them in contact with more established creative resources, and I think Sundance can help us," he said.

Grogg said he and Van Wagenen share a sort of "young turk" desire to take some of the power away from the film establishment and spread it out among the masses.

"Neither one of us had given up that almost boyish hope of making it happen between the Rockies and the Appalachians," he said.

Children drown in Lake Buchanan

AUSTIN (AP) — A 10-year-old Texas City boy and his 6-year-old cousin drowned when the boy tried to save the little girl who slipped and fell into Lake Buchanan while fishing, their grandfather said Saturday.

"This is one of the greatest tragedies that has ever happened in my life," said Roger Yost of Texas City, whose grandson Larry Wayne Harris and granddaughter Ruby Ann Littlejohn drowned Friday

People of our community who make a difference.

Barbara Allen

Midland has always been fortunate enough to have actively involved citizens. One of Midland's more involved citizens is Barbara Allen.

Mrs. Allen is extremely dedicated to Midland. This is evident through her involvement in a variety of organizatons. She is currently serving on the Midland Odessa Symphony and Chorale Joint Board. She is also involved at this time with the Membership Relations Committee of the Midland Chamber of Commerce besides being a charter member of the Act IX Midland Community Theatre.

Mrs. Allen's past history shows that her dedication is not something new. She is the immmediate past president of the Midland Symphony and Chorale Association. Mrs. Allen has also served as president of the Midland Symphony Guild, Midland High P.T.A. and the M.C.C. Ladies Association.

Serving on the Boards of organizations has taken a considerable amount of Mrs. Allen's time. She has been on the Boards of the Junior League of Midland, Inc., Museum of the Southwest, Metropolitan YMCA, Salvation Army, Opportunity Center Auxiliary, Midland Memorial Hospital Auxiliary, Volunteer to Big Spring Hospital, Girl Scout Council, Auditorium in Midland and Texas Women's Association for Symphony Orchestra.

"This Country has been more than good to me and my family and by living in Midland we have been amply rewarded. Giving some share of time is the very least we can do. Being involved gives us pleasure in many ways. Each new person we meet adds something to our lives. People are what makes Midland so very special. They band together and give cheerfully of their resources and energy – making Midland one of the finest places in the world to live. No other city of this size can boast of such public support and private patronage," Mrs. Allen was quoted as saying when asked her views of Midland and why she bacame as involved as she did. She continued by saying, "By vitrue of Midland's small size, we are often needed for more than one job, that is why we sometimes spread ourseles a bit thin."

Dedication, action and involvement in the community are why Barbara Allen makes a difference in Midland.

ARMED FORCES NEWS

Changes in service status noted for military personnel from area

Colonel Hugh G. White III, USAF Reserve, 3213 W. Kansas Ave., Midland, retired from the Air Force on April 1, after over 31 years of service. White is a graduate of the Air Command and Staff College, the Air War College and the Industrial College of the Armed Forces. He was most recently attached as disaster preparedness officer with the San Angelo-Tom Green County Department of Emergency Management.

Cadet James C. Skidmore, son of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Skidmore of 714 W. Nobles, Midland, was commissioned as a second lieutenant in the Army May 11 at New Mexico Military Institute. May 12 he received an Associate of Arts degree from New Mexico Military Institute, the nation's largest military junior college. Cadet Skidmore will continue his studies at Texas Tech majoring in Agriculture. While working on his baccalaureate degree, Cadet Skidmore will be affiliated with the 49th Armoured division. Upon completion of his baccalaureate degree requirements, Cadet Skidmore will go on active duty for a minimum of four years.

Marine Pfc. Edward A. Flores, son of Salvador D. and Jeannie Flores of Big Spring, has reported for duty with 1st Marine Division Camp Pendleton, Calif.

Marine Pvt. Ronnie L. Woods, son of Lawyer L. Woods of Odessa, completed the Basic Aviation Machinist's Mate Jet Engine Course with honors.

During the five-week course at the Naval Air Technical Training Center, Willington, Tenn., students received introductory instruction on the characteristics and operating principles of jet engines. Their studies included engine lubrication, ignition and fuel systems. Additionally, they studied the procedures for refueling and defueling aircraft; for removal and installation of aircraft engines and for the operation of aircraft ground handling equipment.

Navy Airman Gregory D. Foster, son of Thomas E. and Barbar A. Foster of 4415 Northcrest Drive, Midland, has completed the Basic Avionics ("aviation electronics") Technician Course.

During the self-paced course at the Naval Air Technical Training Center, Millington, Tenn., the students received instruction on the fundamentals of electronic circuitry and were introduced to the wide variety of electronic equipment items currently installed aboard Navy and Marine Corps Aircraft. They studied airborne radar, communication and computer equipment, plus the technical manuals, safety precautions and troubleshooting procedures used for maintaining each.

Navy Airman Recruit Paul J. Maes, son of Darlene A. March of 2615 Maxwell, Midland, has completed recruit training at the Naval Recruit Training Command, San Diego.

During the eight-week training cycle, trainees studied general military subjects designed to prepare them for further academic and on-the-job training in one of the Navy's 85 basic occupational fields.

Included in their studies were seamanship, close order drill, Naval history and first aid. Personnel who complete this course of instruction are eligible for three hours of college credit in Physical Education and Hygiene.

Marine Lance Cpl. Jacob J. Eckert, son of Lyn M. and Jacob J. Eckert Jr. of 4601 Tammy Cove, and 29 Union Jack, respectively, Midland, has been awarded a Meritorious Mast while serving at Marine Corps Base Camp Pendleton, Calif.

A Meritorious Mast is official recognition from a Marine's commanding officer for superior individual performance. It is issued in the form of a bulletin published throughout the command, and a copy is entered in the Marine's permanent service records.

Marine Cpl. William D. Stout, son of Don L. and Barbara Stout of Odessa, has been awarded a Meritorious Mast while serving with 1st Marine Aircraft Wing Marine Corps Air Station, Futenma, on Okinawa.

A Meritorious Mast is official recognition from a Marine's commanding officer for superior individual performance. It is issued in the form of a bulletin published throughout the command, and a copy is entered in the Marine's permanent service records.

Rep. Craddick receives honor

AUSTIN — State Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, recently received the Outstanding Distinguished Service Award of the Texas Water Conservation Association.

Association President Sam Collins said in his presentation of the award that Craddick "has an outstanding record" in the legislature, "particularly in the water interests of the state."

Craddick won his first legislative race in 1968 and chairs the Committee on Natural Resources. He's also a member of the Energy Resources Committee.

Legion to place flags

American Legion Woods Lynch Post 19 will be observing Memorial Day Monday by placing flags on all veterans' graves that can be found, according to a spokesman with the group.

At 6:30 p.m., the group will hold services in Fairview Cemetery.

Memorial Day originated during the Civil War when people placed flowers over the graves of their relatives. After the Civil War, it expanded nationwide.

DOES FURNACE NEED REPLACING?

How can you tell whether a furnace should be replaced? In gas units, the answer can usually be found in the heat exchanger. It is the furnace's most important component, and its quality pretty much determines the life of the heating plant.

In most modern gas forced-air furnaces, the heat exchanger is a metal chamber enclosing the burners. In time, the exchanger's walls may corrode, crack or perforate, allowing smoke, dirt and cabron monoxide to escape. Heat exchangers usually can't be replaced; you'll probably need a new furnace if yours is defective. Motors, burners and blowers, however, can generally be replaced or repaired.

Tiny cracks or holes can be hard to see, but there are tests that can spot them. if you have any doubts, have your heating contractor check out your system. The furnace should be replaced if openings are discovered. It's illegal to weld openings in most states.

Battle cattle grubs now

AGRICULTURE

Cattle grubs are undercover workers: all their damage is unseen, yet they cause greater economic losses to the U.S. beef cattle industry than any other insect pest.

Grubs are the larvae or worm stage of heel flies, and adult heel flies are currently active over most of the state.

While grubs are usually found on the backs of infested animals during the winter months, that's not the time for control measures. The time to control grubs is during the period of May through August when they are small and before infested animals suffer stress, weight loss and decreased feed efficiency.

Heel flies cannot sting, have no mouth parts and cause no pain to cattle. Yet, they frighten animals, making them difficult to manage.

Heel flies lay their eggs on an animal's hairs in the stomach and leg region, glued in position. Tiny larvae hatch in a few days, crawl down to the base of the hair and burrow into the animal's skin. Then they begin a migratory course through the animal's body, congregating in the throat after a few months, and after six to eight months, appear in the grub stage in the animal's back.

If a producer has a history of grubs in his cattle herd, it is recommended he treat each animal over three months of age with one application of an approved systemic insecticide during the May through August period.

Sysgemic insecticides come in various forms — dips, pour-ons, injections and spot-on treatments. A list of approved insecticides and methods for controlling cattle grubs is available at the county Extension office.

Though sleeping sickness is no longer a major problem in the horse industry, it still exists and all equines should receive protective vaccine each year.

A highly effective combination vaccine is available for horses. It protects against Eastern, Western Venezuelan types of sleeping sickness as well as tetanus.

Losing horses to sleeping sickness is unnecessary. In recent years cases of the disease have been reported in Florida, Georgia, South Carolina and Alabama, probably due to high mosquito populations during the summer months.

Equine encephalitis (sleeping sickness) is carried naturally by several species of birds. When mosquitoes bite an infected bird, the disease can then be transmitted by the mosquitoes to other animals.

Early signs of the disease include fever, loss of appetite and depression. The animal is usually restless, may walk aimlessly in circles and be sensitive to sound and touch.

One common symptom is a horse that stands with his head hung low like he's sleeping. He doesn't fully chew hay or forage, and as the disease progresses, the tongue may actually hang out of the mouth.

Once a horse is infected, treatment is generally unsuccessful. That's why proper immunization each year is so important.

The disease can also be transmitted to humans and some other animals. The virus has been found in dogs, goats, pigs and domestic birds.

All equines should be vaccinated each spring before mosquitoes become prevalent. This should give them the protection that is needed for another year.

Consult your veterinarian regarding available vaccines to combat sleeping sickness.

Farmland values decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — The value of U.S. farmland is down for the third year in a row, with the largest declines in Iowa and Nebraska, says the Agriculture Department.

As of April 1, the average price was down about 1 percent from a year earlier, the department's Economic Research Service said Wednesday. That compared with value declines of 6 percent in 1983 and a 1 percent drop in 1982, which was the first downturn in U.S. farmland prices since 1954.

One spokesman said that according to department records, it was the first time since 1933 — in the depths of the Great Depression — that farm real estate values had decline three consecutive years.

The reasons cited for the recent declines include the poor showing in net farm earnings the past few years, high interest rates and tight credit. As land values weaken, so do farmers' assets. And with less collateral, they are not able to borrow as much to stay in business.

Last year's 1 percent decline in farmland values, coupled with a 4.8 percent rise in the government's cost-of-living index, "implies a 5.8 percent drop in the real value" of land, the report said.

As of April 1, the value of farm real estate — which includes buildings as well as land — averaged $739 an acre, compared to $743 in 1983, $789 in 1982, and the record of $795 in 1981. As recently as 1976, the average value was less than $400 an acre.

The average values ranged from a low of $165 an acre in Wyoming to $3,148 in New Jersey. Increases from last year were reported the greatest in Pennsylvania, up 8 percent, and in Texas, 9 percent.

Iowa farmland values dropped 11 percent, on the average, and Nebraska's were down 12 percent.

A total of 16 local businesses and community organizations have sponsored Clean Midland receptacles as part of a campaign to improve the appearance of the downtown area.

Clean Midland places receptacles

As of this weekend, a total of 16 local businesses and organizations have demonstrated their support in improving the appearance of downtown Midland by sponsoring the purchase of 20 litter receptacles, which have been permanently placed in the downtown district.

"Downtown businesses and community organizations have been very receptive to the idea of making our downtown area a more attractive place in which to work, especially the areas around their own buildings. We're very happy with the number of sponsors who are showing their support for Clean Midland's ongoing program to encourage a cleaner environment by purchasing the litter receptacles," said Richard Wigzell, Business and Industry chairman for Clean Midland.

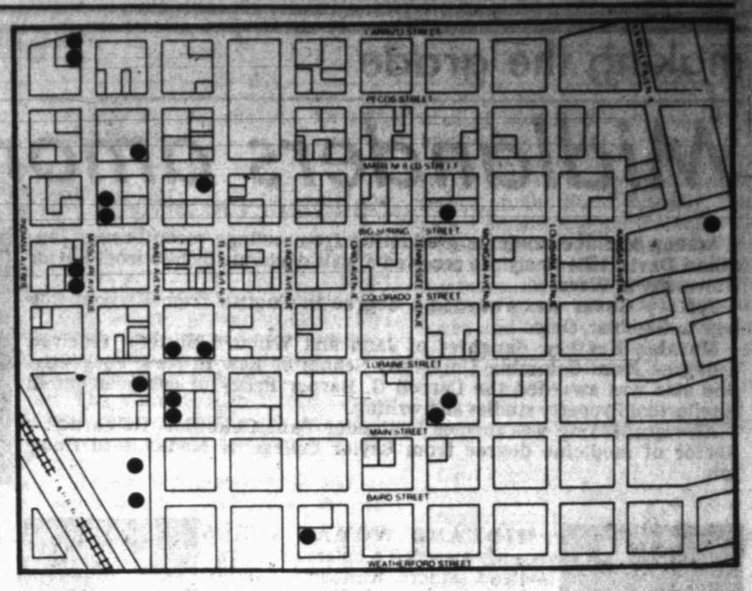
Businesses participating in the program are Exxon, USA, The Midland Hilton, Permian Basin Disposal, Midland Jaycees, Midland County, Wilkinson Realty, Southwestern Bell, Petroplex Savings, Midland Insurance Agency, Texaco, Inc., Gulf Oil Corporation, The Western Company, The Midland Reporter-Telegram, The Petroleum Club, Cities Services Company and Charley Harris Insurance Agency.

Sponsors are being recognized with an engraved plaque affixed to the containers they purchase.

More information about the receptacles is available by calling Wigzell at 686-8627 or Jane Leslie, Clean Midland executive director, at 68C-LEAN.

The cost per receptacle is $275 and has a capacity of 58 gallons. Each weighs 710 pounds and is 36 inches high (40 with a top) and 26 inches in diameter. Potential sponsors can contact Clean Midland at P.O. Box 1890, Midland, Tex., 79702.

Businesses accepting receptacles are responsible for the daily discarding of trash from the container. They can be placed at any location on or near the business' property, but must be in compliance with all applicable city codes and ordinances. It is a tax deductible contribution.



Clean Midland receptacles have been placed at many locations.

Spring campaign nets 1,234 tons of trash, debris

Midland is 1,234 tons cleaner than it was a month ago.

Broken appliances, tree trimmings, lumber, old pieces of furniture and even a half barrel of oil piled up to make the 1983 Spring Clean-Up Campaign, held April 30 to May 18, a success. Sponsored by Clean Midland, Inc., the Midland Chamber of Commerce and City of Midland, the campaign was responsible for clearing away debris requested by 821 residents.

Although the weight of the trash totaled two million pounds more than last year's, the Street and Sanitation departments were able to pick it all up in a shorter amount of time, with a total cost to the city of $12,500 which reflects a $4,000 decrease from the '83 Clean-Up campaign.

"The entire campaign went very smoothly this year," said Jane Leslie, Clean Midland executive coordinator. "The sharp increase in total weight collected exhibits the fact that people were more serious about cleaning up around their homes and alleyways this year."

In addition to the support and enthusiasm of residents this year, Ms. Leslie said that volunteers played a major role in the campaign's success. Businesses who donated the time of their employees included Adia Temporary Services, Amerind Oil, Exxon USA, Kelly Services, Midland Insurance, Republic-Bank First National and Temp Time. The volunteers assisted in answering phones during the two-week call-in period.

Clean Midland's next project will involve the distribution of litterbags through local businesses.

AGRICULTURE

Cattle grubs are undercover workers: all their damage is unseen, yet they cause greater economic losses to the U.S. beef cattle industry than any other insect pest.

Grubs are the larvae or worm stage of heel flies, and adult heel flies are currently active over most of the state.

While grubs are usually found on the backs of infested animals during the winter months, that's not the time for control measures. The time to control grubs is during the period of May through August when they are small and before infested animals suffer stress, weight loss and decreased feed efficiency.

Heel flies cannot sting, have no mouth parts and cause no pain to cattle. Yet, they frighten animals, making them difficult to manage.

Heel flies lay their eggs on an animal's hairs in the stomach and leg region, glued in position. Tiny larvae hatch in a few days, crawl down to the base of the hair and burrow into the animal's skin. Then they begin a migratory course through the animal's body, congregating in the throat after a few months, and after six to eight months, appear in the grub stage in the animal's back.

If a producer has a history of grubs in his cattle herd, it is recommended he treat each animal over three months of age with one application of an approved systemic insecticide during the May through August period.

Sysgemic insecticides come in various forms — dips, pour-ons, injections and spot-on treatments. A list of approved insecticides and methods for controlling cattle grubs is available at the county Extension office.

Though sleeping sickness is no longer a major problem in the horse industry, it still exists and all equines should receive protective vaccine each year.

A highly effective combination vaccine is available for horses. It protects against Eastern, Western Venezuelan types of sleeping sickness as well as tetanus.

Losing horses to sleeping sickness is unnecessary. In recent years cases of the disease have been reported in Florida, Georgia, South Carolina and Alabama, probably due to high mosquito populations during the summer months.

Equine encephalitis (sleeping sickness) is carried naturally by several species of birds. When mosquitoes bite an infected bird, the disease can then be transmitted by the mosquitoes to other animals.

Early signs of the disease include fever, loss of appetite and depression. The animal is usually restless, may walk aimlessly in circles and be sensitive to sound and touch.

One common symptom is a horse that stands with his head hung low like he's sleeping. He doesn't fully chew hay or forage, and as the disease progresses, the tongue may actually hang out of the mouth.

Once a horse is infected, treatment is generally unsuccessful. That's why proper immunization each year is so important.

The disease can also be transmitted to humans and some other animals. The virus has been found in dogs, goats, pigs and domestic birds.

All equines should be vaccinated each spring before mosquitoes become prevalent. This should give them the protection that is needed for another year.

Consult your veterinarian regarding available vaccines to combat sleeping sickness.

Farmland values decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — The value of U.S. farmland is down for the third year in a row, with the largest declines in Iowa and Nebraska, says the Agriculture Department.

As of April 1, the average price was down about 1 percent from a year earlier, the department's Economic Research Service said Wednesday. That compared with value declines of 6 percent in 1983 and a 1 percent drop in 1982, which was the first downturn in U.S. farmland prices since 1954.

One spokesman said that according to department records, it was the first time since 1933 — in the depths of the Great Depression — that farm real estate values had decline three consecutive years.

The reasons cited for the recent declines include the poor showing in net farm earnings the past few years, high interest rates and tight credit. As land values weaken, so do farmers' assets. And with less collateral, they are not able to borrow as much to stay in business.

Last year's 1 percent decline in farmland values, coupled with a 4.8 percent rise in the government's cost-of-living index, "implies a 5.8 percent drop in the real value" of land, the report said.

As of April 1, the value of farm real estate — which includes buildings as well as land — averaged $739 an acre, compared to $743 in 1983, $789 in 1982, and the record of $795 in 1981. As recently as 1976, the average value was less than $400 an acre.

The average values ranged from a low of $165 an acre in Wyoming to $3,148 in New Jersey. Increases from last year were reported the greatest in Pennsylvania, up 8 percent, and in Texas, 9 percent.

Iowa farmland values dropped 11 percent, on the average, and Nebraska's were down 12 percent.

A total of 16 local businesses and community organizations have sponsored Clean Midland receptacles as part of a campaign to improve the appearance of the downtown area.

Clean Midland places receptacles

As of this weekend, a total of 16 local businesses and organizations have demonstrated their support in improving the appearance of downtown Midland by sponsoring the purchase of 20 litter receptacles, which have been permanently placed in the downtown district.

"Downtown businesses and community organizations have been very receptive to the idea of making our downtown area a more attractive place in which to work, especially the areas around their own buildings. We're very happy with the number of sponsors who are showing their support for Clean Midland's ongoing program to encourage a cleaner environment by purchasing the litter receptacles," said Richard Wigzell, Business and Industry chairman for Clean Midland.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Summer session starts Tuesday

By H.A. TUCK

Classes begin Tuesday as Midland College's first summer term gets underway for both daytime and evening students.

Late registration also starts Tuesday and students who desire to enroll in summer courses can do so from 7 a.m.-8 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday or on June 4, which is the last day to register.

• • •

All MC offices and facilities are closed Monday in observance of Memorial Day.

• • •

There was rejoicing by members of the MC slowpitch softball team last week when they managed their first victory of the season, a 14-3 win. This matches their victory total for the entire 1983 season and with two months remaining on the schedule, players now have a goal of winning twice as many as they did last year.

The victory was especially sweet for manager Will Morris, who had been kidded unmercifully last year for being out of town on vacation when the MC squad took its only win. Now his winning total equals that of assistant manager Jack Schneider, who directed last year's win.

• • •

When the Community Services Department announced plans for "Kids' College at MC" this summer, it had no idea it would be innundated with enrollments. All the classes for 9- to 12-year-olds filled in less than a week, additional sections were created, and still great numbers had to be turned away.

Kids' College coordinator Sue Alford and members of the Community Services staff already are looking at ways the program can be expanded next year.

And a group of computer classes for elementary, junior high and high school students also filled up almost as soon as they were announced.

• • •

By the time we add in those who will attend a summer basketball camp on campus, MC is apt to be knee-deep in youngsters. But that's fine, since MC is a comprehensive community college with a goal of serving the educational needs of the entire community.

• • •

Another part of that community service is through the Adult Basic Education programs which provide assistance for residents who don't have a high school education or who don't function in the English language.

Classes for the summer start Tuesday. Adult Basic Education instruction, which is for those seeking a GED diploma, is being held from 9 a.m.-12 noon and 6-9 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

Instruction for ESL (English as a Second Language) is on an individualized basis this summer, with instruction available at the college's Adult Learning Center, Occupational-Technical Building, from 9 a.m.-12 noon and 6-9 p.m. Monday through Thursday. ESL classes also are taught at Casa de Amigos from 7-9 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

H.A. Tuck is public relations director for Midland College.

EDUCATION

Sinatra, Updike among commencement speakers

The Associated Press

Singer Frank Sinatra, the widow of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and author John Updike were among people given honorary degrees Saturday at college commencements across the country.

In Los Angeles, graduates of Loyola Marymount University honored Sinatra for his charitable contributions in medicine, education and other fields.

"Frank Sinatra has brought such pleasure to many people, lifted so many hearts and brightened so many lives with his talents through the years," said Loyola Marymount President Donald P. Merrifield.

Loyola Marymount, which gave Sinatra an honorary doctor of fine arts degree, was originally planned by Louis B. Mayer and other leaders of the film industry.

In Massachusetts, Jihan Sadat appealed to the all-female graduates of Wheaton College to help their less fortunate sisters in the world deal with hunger, poor housing and deprivation.

Retiring librarian Blanche Plunkett doesn't intend to let mandatory retirement take her away from education. She plans to return as a volunteer next fall.

Retirement won't stop Midland school librarian

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

Midlander in Profile

You can take the librarian out of the schools...or can you?

Blanche Plunkett, who has been in the education field since 1937, says they can make her retire, but they can't make her quit.

After 32 years with Midland Independent School District, Ms. Plunkett, who just turned 70, must retire at the end of the school year. But she vows she'll be back in the fall as a Volunteer In Public Schools. And she'll be doing much the same thing she's doing now — she just won't be paid for it.

The petite Ms. Plunkett, who drives a Volkswagon with license plates "LERN-UM," lives in a rent house with four dogs. She is active in her church and still so young at heart she spends much of her free time doing volunteer work for "the elderly."

She hadn't always planned a career in education. "I really wanted to be a nurse," she recalled in a voice grown soft from years of whispering, "but my dad told me, 'You're too small, and you have to lift patients when you're a nurse.' I liked books and I liked children and that's why I went the education route."

She has been a librarian for the past 12 years. She divides her time between Pease, Henderson and Emerson elementary schools. Her job is one of ordering and processing library books, helping children locate information and obtaining special materials for teachers.

"There's a certain magic about books," she said. "But sometimes they have big, ugly words and we can't put them on the shelf," she added primly.

Her main goals have been "to help children build a good self image and to encourage them in whatever they're trying to do."

She has a stack of going-away letters from her students. "Thank you for the book marker you gave me," wrote Kimberly Jones. "I use it a lot. Now I'll use it every day because it will remind me of you."

"We hate to see you go and we will miss you and remember you," Jenny Kreiger said. "You treated me just like I was your dauter (sic)," Michelle Helms wrote.

Co-workers have established a scholarship in her name for education majors attending Midland College. "It is our wish not to celebrate the end of her career, but the beginning of another," the flyer reads. "The Blanche Orand Plunkett Scholarship is a tribute to a dedicated teacher, but more importantly, a bridge for continuance of excellence in education."

"I think teas and parties are fine," Ms. Plunkett said, "but it's much more rewarding if you do something for a kid."

She has furthered her own education through the years — having obtained 80 hours beyond her master's degree — and still takes courses at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin. "If you're going to work with kids you need to keep up with new things that are coming out."

education in brief

Graduations slated

Graduation ceremonies for city high school students will take place Wednesday evening at Midland College's Chapparal Center. Commencement for Midland High begins at 6 p.m. Speakers will be valedictorian Deirdre Bell and salutatorian Karen Eggleston.

Ceremonies for Lee High students begin at 9 p.m. Speaking will be valedictorian Celeste Elig and salutatorian Barry Friemel.

Nearly 1,200 seniors in Ector County will also graduate this week.

Commencement exercises will be Tuesday and Wednesday in the Ector County Coliseum. Graduation ceremonies are scheduled at 8 p.m. Tuesday for Permian High School and at 8 p.m. Wednesday for Odessa High School.

1959 plans reunion

Midland High School's Class of 1959 is holding its 25-year reunion June 29-30. Interested teachers, classmates and friends of other classes should contact Jackie Garett Cunningham, 697-5232, or Martha Phillips McTeer, 682-7563, for more information.

PTA officers installed

Midland City Council PTA met recently to install 1984-85 officers: Mrs. Curtis Bedrich, president; Mrs. Ken Green, president-elect; Mrs. Barry Beck, second vice president; Mrs. Gary Askins, secretary; and Mrs. Don Cox, treasurer.

The Volunteers in Public Schools program was given a grant from the Davidson Family Charitable Foundation.

Regina Wilson, senior at Midland High School, and Josha Powers, senior at Lee High School, were presented $1,400 scholarships by the council. Each plans to pursue a degree in education.

Teacher honored

Lee High School VOE teacher Margaret Saunders was named Teacher of the Year by Permian Basin Counselors Association at its final meeting of the school year. Each year the association, comprised of counselors in a 19-county area of West Texas, recognizes an outstanding teacher.

Ms. Saunders has been teaching for 17 years, four in Midland. She serves on the State Teacher Inservice Education Committee for the Texas Education Agency and has been regional president of the Texas Business Education Association, member of the local VOE advisory board and instructor for local inservice programs for business, industrial arts and vocational teachers.

Summer term begins

Late registration and first day of classes for Midland College's first summer term begin Tuesday.

College offices will be closed until Tuesday for the Memorial Day weekend. Students who weren't able to come to registration Thursday should do so at the Office of Student Services in the Administration Building.

Hours for late registration are 7 a.m.-8 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday and June 4, the final day to late register.

First summer session ends July 2, with registration for the second summer session set for July 9.

AND FAMILY MEDICAL CARE
3301 MOGFORD AT 2400 W. WADLEY, MIDLAND, TEXAS 79705

Opening June 4th

MINOR INJURIES AND ILLNESSES:

LOW COSTS.
NO WAITING.
QUALITY CARE.

We're your alternative to hospital emergency rooms and regular doctor's offices. All types of minor illnesses and injuries are treated, on an extended hours basis. That means you can come see us before you go to work, or on the weekends. The major conveniences are you don't have to wait to see the doctor, and you'll pay substantially lower charges.

Treatment
We offer treatment of a wide range of ailments, including minor lacerations, fractures, sprains, headaches, back pain, allergies, cold, flue, abdominal pain. Regular physical examinations are also conducted as well as a full range of laboratory tests and x-ray procedures. In other words, you can come to us for almost any problem you would go to your family doctor for. However, life-threatening emergencies are encouraged to go directly to a hospital emergency room.

Convenience
You don't need an appointment. You may walk in any time during open hours and you'll see a doctor almost immediately. There's no waiting for long periods of time in a crowded waiting area. And your visit will usually be over in less than one hour.

Low Cost
Our costs are substantially below those of area hospital emergency rooms. And all charges are due upon completion of the visit so you won't get any unexpected bills later.

Staff
We're staffed at all times by a licenced physician and other qualified ancillary personnel who are ready to respond immediately to your medical needs.

Personal Care
Personal, quality care is our goal. Our doctor will take the time to see that you receive the attention you need. Any follow-up care or referrals to area physician will be prescribed on the spot.

Facilities
We're equipped with modern medical equipment including laboratory and x-ray materials. You'll get your test results back immediately.

Location
We're located just minutes away. And you don't have to worry about finding a place to park. In fact you can park right by the front door.

Tracy Becker pats a finishing touch to a Cabbage Patch doll before it disappears. The dolls are still in demand and are selling before they even arrive at the stores.

Local toy sellers say business still booming in Cabbage Patch

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Last Christmas, the little girls of America imposed an almost impossible burden on their doting parents.

Mom and Dad had to secure for their little darlings a Cabbage Patch Kid, or risk being branded parental failures. Unfortunately, there were far fewer Cabbage Patch dolls available than there were little girls, many of whom woke up Christmas morning to discover that while their stockings were hung by the chimney with care, the cabbage patch, alas, was quite bare.

For awhile the Cabbage Patch Kid shortage was up there with Central America and the federal deficit on the list of national emergencies. But not much has been heard about it since the passing of the holiday season.

But if the Cabbage Patch phenomenon has disappeared from the evening news, the dolls haven't yet reappeared on the shelves of Midland toy stores. Five months after Christmas, the dolls are still being snapped up as soon as they come in.

"We get calls, calls and more calls — you just can't believe it," said Kaylynn Lujan of J.C. Penney. "People stop here constantly and ask about them."

At Peyton's Toys there's a long waiting list for Cabbage Patch dolls, and each shipment is already consigned before it even arrives.

"The demand is still there," said Peyton's General Manager Gordon Young. "They're very strong in the marketplace."

The media may have forgotten about the dolls, but apparently the kids haven't.

"When some kids get them, all the kids want them," said Ms. Lujan. "Kids aren't like adults — they don't shut up."

Young agrees, and he speaks with the experience of a man who's raised five daughters.

"If that's the item they want for Christmas, Daddy has to get it for them," he said. "It got rather ridiculous" last Christmas, but "I think that part's over with."

But if roving bands of parents are no longer ransacking toy stores, they obviously haven't given up the quest entirely. The hysteria has died down, but the demand for the dolls isn't about to disappear, Young said.

"They're going to be here for a long time. I think they've replaced the old Raggedy Ann and Raggedy Andy dolls — I really think these are the modern version of that."

There are many imitation Cabbage Patch dolls on the market, said Young ("Even Broccoli Patch dolls, if you can believe that"), though they only sell when the original is unavailable.

But supplies of the bona fide Cabbage Patch doll are finally beginning to catch up with demand, and Young can see the day coming when he might actually have a few dolls to put out on his shelves for anybody to just walk in and buy.

But that day isn't here yet, according to Kathy Wurster, owner of the Kids Only Toy Store.

"My customers are still frantically looking for them," Ms. Wurster said. "If you walk into a store and see a Cabbage Patch kid, you better grab it."

County Commissioners Court to meet

Midland County Commissioners will meet at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Commissioners' Courtroom at the Midland County Courthouse.

Gary Harris will explain the Texas Community Development Program and a grant application for a windowpane area. The county already has applied federal CDBG funds to one windowpane area.

Commissioners will appoint a committee to select a computer system for Midland County.

Stubbeman, McRae, Sealy, Laughlin & Browder, Inc. will make a presentation concerning availability as bond counsel.

The group also will consider a a plat for Windmill Estates Phase II and an appointment to the MHMR board of trustees.

Ticket rate change boosts fair

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Reduced ticket prices and the Memorial Day weekend attracted "mob scene" crowds to the world's fair Saturday, a turnout that hadn't been seen since opening day of the $350 million extravaganza.

Michael Stackpole, whose five sons range from 2 to 10 years of age, said she was delighted that the fair had cut its ticket price for children ages 2 to 12 from $14 to $9.95.

"I think it is just fantastic," said Mrs. Stackpole.

Announcing the new ticket prices Friday, Petr Spurney, chief executive of the fair, said they would make the fair more of a family event. The revised ticket rates will not jeopardize net revenues because visitors already are spending more than expected, Spurney said.

"We would have come anyway. We love it. This is like our fifth time coming," said Mrs. Stackpole. "I don't like the lines, though."

No attendance figures were available Saturday, but the ticket lines at the gate near the French Quarter were packed 80 deep at 1:30 p.m., 3½ hours after the fair opened.

"We've never had lines like this since opening day," said fair spokeswoman Jeanne Nathan. "It's a mob scene. It's so heavy we're really having trouble handling the volume."

People waiting in the sticky heat heartily agreed.

"I've been in this line two hours and 25 minutes," said Theresa McIntosh of New Orleans. "It's the last time I'm going to come. They say they need more people to succeed, but they can't handle the ones they've got."

Terry Jones, a 26-year-old attorney, definitely planned to come back again.

He was in the shortest line — the one selling season passes at $99 each for adults and $79 for children and senior citizens, instead of $150 and $120 a day earlier.

Fifty of the passes had sold by 1:30 p.m., said the booth's attendant.

Jones said he and his wife, Patricia, had thought about buying the season passes for $90 when they first went on sale in November.

"Then we weighed and figured it up, that we'd have to go more than seven times to make it worth it. We figured we wouldn't. But when it opened up, we decided it would be great to come down after for work for one and a half or two hours," he said.

He said at least seven of their friends also planned to get the season tickets before June 26, when the price goes back up to $150.

Many people said they had planned to come to the fair even before the reduced ticket prices were announced.

The fair, which opened May 12, is scheduled to close Nov. 11.

Texas among states probing counterfeiter linked to killings

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Authorities in Louisiana, Texas and six other states say they are sifting through evidence that they think may link a former Fort Worth, Texas, man to at least 40 slayings of young women.

One investigator in Louisiana said Friday that the suspect, James M. Debardeleben, 44, who at one time identified himself as being from Midland, Texas, may be a "serial" killer in the Henry Lee Lucas mold.

"It's similar in that it's a serial-type murder, but he's not a Henry Lee Lucas. His crimes are a lot more planned and calculated than Lucas'," Lt. Scotty Henderson, chief of detectives of the Bossier City Police Department, told The Dallas Morning News.

The Shreveport Journal reported many of the same findings in a copyright story.

Henderson said Debardeleben is under investigation in Louisiana, Texas, Massachusetts, Tennessee, Arkansas, Maryland, Virginia and Missouri.

Lucas, 47, a drifter born in West Virginia, claims to have killed at least 360 women since 1970. He recently was sentenced to die for the 1979 murder of an unidentified woman hitchhiker near Georgetown, Texas.

DEBARDELEBEN is in jail in Charlotte, N.C., where he faces counterfeiting charges, Mike Tarr, a Secret Service spokesman in Washington, told the News.

Authorities said that when Secret Service agents searched Debardeleben's home in Alexandria, Va., they found a "treasure trove" of diaries, pornographic photographs and tape recordings that made Debardeleben a suspect in rapes, abductions and murders of young women throughout the South and up the Eastern Seaboard.

Authorities said they found tape-recorded screams of terrified women and a detailed travel log that placed him in cities where dozens of unsolved murders are still on the books.

Tarr said Debardeleben has been convicted of counterfeiting in Tennessee and has been sentenced to 35 years in prison, but hasn't started serving the sentence.

Henderson said Debardeleben is the primary suspect in the 1982 strangulation and stabbing death of real estate agent Jean McPhaul.

ARKANSAS AUTHORITIES say they plan to talk to Debardeleben about the 1978 disappearance and presumed slaying of part-time real estate agent Mary Jimmy "Bo Bo" Shinn, 25.

Both women went to meet a man who called and identified himself as a prospective buyer.

Henderson said Ms. McPhaul got a call from someone who identified himself as "Dr. Zack" and said he had just moved from Midland, Texas.

"He told her he needed a home right away, in the $100,000 to $150,000 range — money didn't matter — and they met in front of a motel," Henderson told the Dallas newspaper.

"She picked him up and showed him a few houses, and she was killed in one of the houses," Henderson said.

David M. Humphrey, agent-in-charge of the Secret Service office in Dallas, said Texas officials also are investigating the McPhaul case.

"There are some indications he might have committed some other crimes that would interest the local authorities here, and we've been working with them. I know the Texas Rangers have done some work on it, too," Humphrey told the News.

HENDERSON SAID his office got information from the U.S. Secret Service linking Debardeleben to the McPhaul killing.

"How it all started was the Secret Service was circulating a composite (drawing) of a man that had passed counterfeit $20 bills throughout the South and Eastern Seaboard, and we had a composite of a McPhaul suspect.

"They were very similar, and we had put them together even before the (counterfeiting) arrest was made."

Debardeleben was arrested by Secret Service agents outside a shopping mall in Maryville, Tenn., in May 1983.

"When he was arrested just outside the mall, the agents searched him and found a North Carolina driver's license bearing a name that later turned out to be phony, 13 more counterfeit $20 bills and a loaded .22-caliber pistol." said Charles Fels, the Assistant U.S. Attorney who successfully prosecuted Debardeleben in Knoxville, Tenn.

"The suspect refused to answer when agents asked him whether he had a car, so they went out later that evening and found a car that looked like it would fit the keys," Fels said.

AGENTS OBTAINED a search warrant to search the car and, Fels said, recovered "several thousand dollars worth of counterfeit bills, 10 different driver's licenses with eight different identities — some bearing Debardeleben's photograph — and license plates from 18 different states with magnets on the back and a semi-automatic handgun."

"They eventually identified him from FBI fingerprint files," Fels said, "but they had a hard time because of a very intriguing reason.

"Debardeleben had previously served time for counterfeiting at the federal penitentiary at Danbury, Conn.

"The FBI records showed that he had died while serving time there."

Included in the material found by the agents was a travel log detailing the places and times of Debardeleben's wanderings, Fels said.

"There is a correlation between the logbook dates, showing when Debardeleben was in an area and unsolved homicides," Fels said.

Fels said the vehicle number on the automobile was eventually traced to Virginia to a man named "Jones" who fitted Debardeleben's description.

AGENTS SEARCHED an apartment and several "mini-warehouses" rented by the man along the East Coast and found more counterfeit bills, counterfeit plates and paraphernalia and a cache of "pornographic photographs" of women, Fels said.

Fels said at least one of the women in the photographs — the victim of an Ocean City, Md., abduction and sexual assault — identified herself in one of the photographs.

The Maryland victim also identified her voice and screams on an audio tape the kidnapper had made during the sexual assault.

Sgt. Terry Schnossnagle of the Howard County, Md., Police Department described Debardeleben as a "career criminal" who drifted around the country living a "high-class" lifestyle off his counterfeiting.

Schnossnagle was the chief investigator in the June, 1979, kidnapping of the Ocean City woman.

Debardeleben was subsequently indicted on federal kidnapping charges in connection with the Ocean City case.

Plymouth County, Mass., District Attorney William C. O'Malley said Thursday that police in Brockton, Mass., are reviewing information provided by the Secret Service to see whether a suspect might be involved in "four or five" homicides in the Brockton area.

Though O'Malley refused to reveal the identity of the suspect, sources in four states have confirmed the suspect is Debardeleben — who now is awaiting trial on additional federal counterfeiting charges in Asheville, N.C.

DEBARDELEBEN has not been charged in any cases in the Brockton area, O' Malley said.

"The Secret Service searched the man's home looking for evidence in a counterfeiting case. What they found was a treasure trove of material — diaries and photographs and photographic evidence (undeveloped film) — placing the man in different areas of the country and making him a suspect in the rape, abduction and murders of young women in many areas of the country," O'Malley said.

Some of the photographs are believed to be of crime victims, O'Malley said.

Brockton Detective Capt. Richard Sproules said the man had taken some 6,000 pictures of women.

Want a railroad car?

BALTIMORE (AP) — If you can figure out how to get it home, you can have your very own 70-ton railroad passenger car, courtesy of the state of Maryland.

The state has offered to give away five 70-year-old self-propelled electrical passenger cars to anyone who is willing — and able — to move them, said Kathleen Kujawa, a spokeswoman for the Maryland Railroad Administration.

"If we don't hear of any interest by July 1, we're going to start the paperwork to scrap them," Ms. Kujawa said.

Built in 1912 and 1913 by the Pennsylvania Railroad, the 54-foot cars were first used on short commuter runs in the Philadelphia area, said Tony Kopecni, a railroad buff who works as a rules examiner for Amtrak in Baltimore.

The state railroad administration bought seven of the cars for $645 each in 1976, and used them on the Amtrak line between Baltimore and Washington for two years. They have not been used since.

"They've basically just been sitting there since 1978," said Ms. Kujawa.

The cars were among the first used in the railroad's experiments with self-propelled electrical cars, Kopecni said.

Two of the seven cars have already been claimed by museums — one by the B&O Railroad Museum in Baltimore, and the other by the Altoona Railroaders Museum in Altoona, Pa.

Debbie Reynolds, developer marry

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Actress Debbie Reynolds married Virginia real estate developer Richard R. Hamlett in a private religious ceremony at the home of a close friend here, an aide announced Saturday.

The ceremony, at the residence of an unidentified friend, was held Friday night, said Cynthia Cutler, a spokeswoman for Miss Reynolds.

Miss Reynolds, 52, wore a pale green chiffon short dress and was given away by her son, Todd. Also attending were the bride's brother, Bill Reynolds, and their mother Maxine Reynolds, Ms. Cutler said.

The best man was Patsy Correlli, said a statement released by Ms. Cutler.

The entertainer, whose list of film credits includes "The Unsinkable Molly Brown," "Singing in the Rain" and "How the West Was Won," was performing Saturday on the SS Norway, the largest cruise liner in the world. The ship had been docked at the Port of Miami.

W. Polovchak

CHICAGO (AP) — Walter Polovchak, the 16-year-old who has been the focus of a lengthy Cold War-style custody battle, says he would like to see his family in the Soviet Union but fears he would be exiled if he returned to his homeland.

Walter, who ran away from his parents and has waged a four-year court battle to remain in the United States, said Friday he believes Soviet authorities "would probably send me to some camp (in exile)" if he returned for a visit.

Walter said he wasn't close to his family, but he'd still "like to see my mother and father and my younger brother again," as well as a baby sister whom he's never seen. The youth lives with another sister, Natalie, 21, and their cousin.

He said he enjoys living in the United States because "I've got the freedom of religion (here). I'm free to speak out...to express my mind." He decided to stay here while visiting Chicago with his parents, who returned to the Soviet Union and subsequently lost custody. He said Friday he has no regrets about his decision.

Henry Aaron

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Baseball Hall of Famer Henry Aaron, who broke Babe Ruth's career home run record 10 years ago when he hit his 715th, received a Silver Buffalo award from the Boy Scouts of America.

Aaron, now vice president for player development with the Atlanta Braves, was one of 11 men honored for service to youth. A Silver Buffalo is the highest national Scouting award.

Sanford McDonnell, chairman and chief executive officer of McDonnell Douglas Corp., was elected president of the national Scouting organization Friday.

Both Aaron and McDonnell were scouts in their youth.

Russell Means

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP) — Russell Means, a leader of the American Indian Movement who participated in the 1973 occupation and siege of Wounded Knee, S.D., now calls himself a "born-again primitive."

He says he lives in a canvas tepee, grows his own food and avoids reading newspapers and watching television.

"You look after the small things and the larger things take care of themselves," Means, 44, said Friday at a "Memorial Day Peace Program" at Valley College.

The key to world peace is respecting and protecting "our grandmother, Mother Earth," he said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael L. Ainslie, president of the National Trust for Historic Preservation in Washington, will become president and chief executive officer of Sotheby's Holdings Inc., the parent company of the international art-auction house, in July.

The appointment of Ainslie, a native of Tennessee, was announced on Friday by the London-based art auction house, the world's largest and oldest.

Texas among states probing counterfeiter linked to killings

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Authorities in Louisiana, Texas and six other states say they are sifting through evidence that they think may link a former Fort Worth, Texas, man to at least 40 slayings of young women.

One investigator in Louisiana said Friday that the suspect, James M. Debardeleben, 44, who at one time identified himself as being from Midland, Texas, may be a "serial" killer in the Henry Lee Lucas mold.

"It's similar in that it's a serial-type murder, but he's not a Henry Lee Lucas. His crimes are a lot more planned and calculated than Lucas'," Lt. Scotty Henderson, chief of detectives of the Bossier City Police Department, told The Dallas Morning News.

The Shreveport Journal reported many of the same findings in a copyright story.

Henderson said Debardeleben is under investigation in Louisiana, Texas, Massachusetts, Tennessee, Arkansas, Maryland, Virginia and Missouri.

Lucas, 47, a drifter born in West Virginia, claims to have killed at least 360 women since 1970. He recently was sentenced to die for the 1979 murder of an unidentified woman hitchhiker near Georgetown, Texas.

DEBARDELEBEN is in jail in Charlotte, N.C., where he faces counterfeiting charges, Mike Tarr, a Secret Service spokesman in Washington, told the News.

Authorities said that when Secret Service agents searched Debardeleben's home in Alexandria, Va., they found a "treasure trove" of diaries, pornographic photographs and tape recordings that made Debardeleben a suspect in rapes, abductions and murders of young women throughout the South and up the Eastern Seaboard.

Authorities said they found tape-recorded screams of terrified women and a detailed travel log that placed him in cities where dozens of unsolved murders are still on the books.

Tarr said Debardeleben has been convicted of counterfeiting in Tennessee and has been sentenced to 35 years in prison, but hasn't started serving the sentence.

Henderson said Debardeleben is the primary suspect in the 1982 strangulation and stabbing death of real estate agent Jean McPhaul.

ARKANSAS AUTHORITIES say they plan to talk to Debardeleben about the 1978 disappearance and presumed slaying of part-time real estate agent Mary Jimmy "Bo Bo" Shinn, 25.

Both women went to meet a man who called and identified himself as a prospective buyer.

Henderson said Ms. McPhaul got a call from someone who identified himself as "Dr. Zack" and said he had just moved from Midland, Texas.

"He told her he needed a home right away, in the $100,000 to $150,000 range — money didn't matter — and they met in front of a motel," Henderson told the Dallas newspaper.

"She picked him up and showed him a few houses, and she was killed in one of the houses," Henderson said.

David M. Humphrey, agent-in-charge of the Secret Service office in Dallas, said Texas officials also are investigating the McPhaul case.

"There are some indications he might have committed some other crimes that would interest the local authorities here, and we've been working with them. I know the Texas Rangers have done some work on it, too," Humphrey told the News.

HENDERSON SAID his office got information from the U.S. Secret Service linking Debardeleben to the McPhaul killing.

"How it all started was the Secret Service was circulating a composite (drawing) of a man that had passed counterfeit $20 bills throughout the South and Eastern Seaboard, and we had a composite of a McPhaul suspect.

"They were very similar, and we had put them together even before the (counterfeiting) arrest was made."

Debardeleben was arrested by Secret Service agents outside a shopping mall in Maryville, Tenn., in May 1983.

"When he was arrested just outside the mall, the agents searched him and found a North Carolina driver's license bearing a name that later turned out to be phony, 13 more counterfeit $20 bills and a loaded .22-caliber pistol." said Charles Fels, the Assistant U.S. Attorney who successfully prosecuted Debardeleben in Knoxville, Tenn.

"The suspect refused to answer when agents asked him whether he had a car, so they went out later that evening and found a car that looked like it would fit the keys," Fels said.

AGENTS OBTAINED a search warrant to search the car and, Fels said, recovered "several thousand dollars worth of counterfeit bills, 10 different driver's licenses with eight different identities — some bearing Debardeleben's photograph — and license plates from 18 different states with magnets on the back and a semi-automatic handgun."

"They eventually identified him from FBI fingerprint files," Fels said, "but they had a hard time because of a very intriguing reason.

"Debardeleben had previously served time for counterfeiting at the federal penitentiary at Danbury, Conn.

"The FBI records showed that he had died while serving time there."

Included in the material found by the agents was a travel log detailing the places and times of Debardeleben's wanderings, Fels said.

"There is a correlation between the logbook dates, showing when Debardeleben was in an area and unsolved homicides," Fels said.

Fels said the vehicle number on the automobile was eventually traced to Virginia to a man named "Jones" who fitted Debardeleben's description.

AGENTS SEARCHED an apartment and several "mini-warehouses" rented by the man along the East Coast and found more counterfeit bills, counterfeit plates and paraphernalia and a cache of "pornographic photographs" of women, Fels said.

Fels said at least one of the women in the photographs — the victim of an Ocean City, Md., abduction and sexual assault — identified herself in one of the photographs.

The Maryland victim also identified her voice and screams on an audio tape the kidnapper had made during the sexual assault.

Sgt. Terry Schnossnagle of the Howard County, Md., Police Department described Debardeleben as a "career criminal" who drifted around the country living a "high-class" lifestyle off his counterfeiting.

Schnossnagle was the chief investigator in the June, 1979, kidnapping of the Ocean City woman.

Debardeleben was subsequently indicted on federal kidnapping charges in connection with the Ocean City case.

Plymouth County, Mass., District Attorney William C. O'Malley said Thursday that police in Brockton, Mass., are reviewing information provided by the Secret Service to see whether a suspect might be involved in "four or five" homicides in the Brockton area.

Though O'Malley refused to reveal the identity of the suspect, sources in four states have confirmed the suspect is Debardeleben — who now is awaiting trial on additional federal counterfeiting charges in Asheville, N.C.

DEBARDELEBEN has not been charged in any cases in the Brockton area, O' Malley said.

"The Secret Service searched the man's home looking for evidence in a counterfeiting case. What they found was a treasure trove of material — diaries and photographs and photographic evidence (undeveloped film) — placing the man in different areas of the country and making him a suspect in the rape, abduction and murders of young women in many areas of the country," O'Malley said.

Some of the photographs are believed to be of crime victims, O'Malley said.

Brockton Detective Capt. Richard Sproules said the man had taken some 6,000 pictures of women.

Want a railroad car?

BALTIMORE (AP) — If you can figure out how to get it home, you can have your very own 70-ton railroad passenger car, courtesy of the state of Maryland.

The state has offered to give away five 70-year-old self-propelled electrical passenger cars to anyone who is willing — and able — to move them, said Kathleen Kujawa, a spokeswoman for the Maryland Railroad Administration.

"If we don't hear of any interest by July 1, we're going to start the paperwork to scrap them," Ms. Kujawa said.

Built in 1912 and 1913 by the Pennsylvania Railroad, the 54-foot cars were first used on short commuter runs in the Philadelphia area, said Tony Kopecni, a railroad buff who works as a rules examiner for Amtrak in Baltimore.

The state railroad administration bought seven of the cars for $645 each in 1976, and used them on the Amtrak line between Baltimore and Washington for two years. They have not been used since.

"They've basically just been sitting there since 1978," said Ms. Kujawa.

The cars were among the first used in the railroad's experiments with self-propelled electrical cars, Kopecni said.

Two of the seven cars have already been claimed by museums — one by the B&O Railroad Museum in Baltimore, and the other by the Altoona Railroaders Museum in Altoona, Pa.

Debbie Reynolds, developer marry

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Actress Debbie Reynolds married Virginia real estate developer Richard R. Hamlett in a private religious ceremony at the home of a close friend here, an aide announced Saturday.

The ceremony, at the residence of an unidentified friend, was held Friday night, said Cynthia Cutler, a spokeswoman for Miss Reynolds.

Miss Reynolds, 52, wore a pale green chiffon short dress and was given away by her son, Todd. Also attending were the bride's brother, Bill Reynolds, and their mother Maxine Reynolds, Ms. Cutler said.

The best man was Patsy Correlli, said a statement released by Ms. Cutler.

The entertainer, whose list of film credits includes "The Unsinkable Molly Brown," "Singing in the Rain" and "How the West Was Won," was performing Saturday on the SS Norway, the largest cruise liner in the world. The ship had been docked at the Port of Miami.

W. Polovchak

CHICAGO (AP) — Walter Polovchak, the 16-year-old who has been the focus of a lengthy Cold War-style custody battle, says he would like to see his family in the Soviet Union but fears he would be exiled if he returned to his homeland.

Walter, who ran away from his parents and has waged a four-year court battle to remain in the United States, said Friday he believes Soviet authorities "would probably send me to some camp (in exile)" if he returned for a visit.

Walter said he wasn't close to his family, but he'd still "like to see my mother and father and my younger brother again," as well as a baby sister whom he's never seen. The youth lives with another sister, Natalie, 21, and their cousin.

He said he enjoys living in the United States because "I've got the freedom of religion (here). I'm free to speak out...to express my mind." He decided to stay here while visiting Chicago with his parents, who returned to the Soviet Union and subsequently lost custody. He said Friday he has no regrets about his decision.

Henry Aaron

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Baseball Hall of Famer Henry Aaron, who broke Babe Ruth's career home run record 10 years ago when he hit his 715th, received a Silver Buffalo award from the Boy Scouts of America.

Aaron, now vice president for player development with the Atlanta Braves, was one of 11 men honored for service to youth. A Silver Buffalo is the highest national Scouting award.

Sanford McDonnell, chairman and chief executive officer of McDonnell Douglas Corp., was elected president of the national Scouting organization Friday.

Both Aaron and McDonnell were scouts in their youth.

• • •

Russell Means

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP) — Russell Means, a leader of the American Indian Movement who participated in the 1973 occupation and siege of Wounded Knee, S.D., now calls himself a "born-again primitive."

He says he lives in a canvas tepee, grows his own food and avoids reading newspapers and watching television.

"You look after the small things and the larger things take care of themselves," Means, 44, said Friday at a "Memorial Day Peace Program" at Valley College.

The key to world peace is respecting and protecting "our grandmother, Mother Earth," he said.

SAAB HAS MORE CARGO SPACE THAN BMW, AUDI, AND VOLVO. COMBINED.

Four of Europe's most desirable sports sedans have the following amounts of cargo space: Saab 3-door, 56.5 cubic feet; Audi 5000, 16.0 cubic feet; Volvo GLT Turbo, 13.9 cubic feet; BMW 733i, 22.5 cubic feet.

As you can see, Saab has more cargo space than all three of the others. As you can imagine, Saab is a lot more useful than any of the others when you pack up the summer house, provision your boat, load up sporting gear for a long weekend, or make an impulsive purchase at a tag sale.

Of course, only the Saab has a rear seat that folds down, so the others may claim that it has an unfair advantage.

That's right. It does have.

Europe's "Car of the Year." Your car for the future.

Audi 5000S Sedan

Audi When Audi created the new 5000S, they did more than design the most aerodynamically efficient sedan ever. They did it with style. Elegant, luxurious style.

That's why 53 journalists from 16 countries voted the Audi 5000S Europe's "Car of the Year." Drive it. You'll call it #1, too.

GM QUALITY SERVICE/PARTS GM
GENERAL MOTORS PARTS DIVISION

KEEP THAT GREAT GM FEELING WITH GENUINE GM PARTS.

Practicality makes perfect.

Practically speaking, the new Honda Civic DX Hatchback is a perfectionist's dream. Because its modest price is perfectly balanced by loads of helpful features.

Its rear seats not only fold down to expand the rear cargo space, but do so independently of each other. The steering column adjusts obligingly. There's also a 5-speed manual transmission, power-assisted ventilated front disc brakes, remote hatch release, rear wiper/washer and remote-control outside rearview mirror. And automatic transmission with lock-up torque converter is available.

Its best feature, though, is the engineering quality that makes Honda the highest in owner loyalty of all leading import cars.*

Come see the 1984 Honda Civic DX Hatchback. Your next step will become perfectly clear.

"COMPROMISE HAS NEVER BEEN MY STYLE..."

"...So when I moved to Midland, Oakridge Apartments was the only logical choice. As far as I'm concerned, there's not a better community around. Oakridge is brand-new. It's in an ideal location. It's very well-managed. Plus, it has the extras other communities don't. I love the indoor spa and sauna, and the community clubhouse and pool. And the custom kitchens with built-in microwaves, woodburning fireplaces and great storage are features I simply don't want to be without. The quality, of course, is uncompromising. Like me!"

1- and 2- bedroom and 2-bedroom studio apartment homes are available now. Take Loop 250 to N. Holiday Hill Road and look for the giant American flag.

THE SOLUTION

S&W Homes Inc. of Midland Presents

We at S&W Homes Inc. of Midland are constantly trying to find new ways to help you qualify for home ownership and make living there, physically and financially comfortable.

As a matter of fact, you can choose from 15 to 30 year fixed rate financing, all the way to graduated payment plans. You can choose a financing plan with a low down payment, or if you prefer, you can put more money down and lower your payments. And of course, we offer VA financing with no down payments whatsoever.

To get a better idea of the alternatives, take a few moments and compare some of our most popular plans in the chart. And if you want to discuss which plan best fits your needs, or want us to tailor a plan to fit you, visit us at our sales office at 4725 Country Club or call 689-8031.

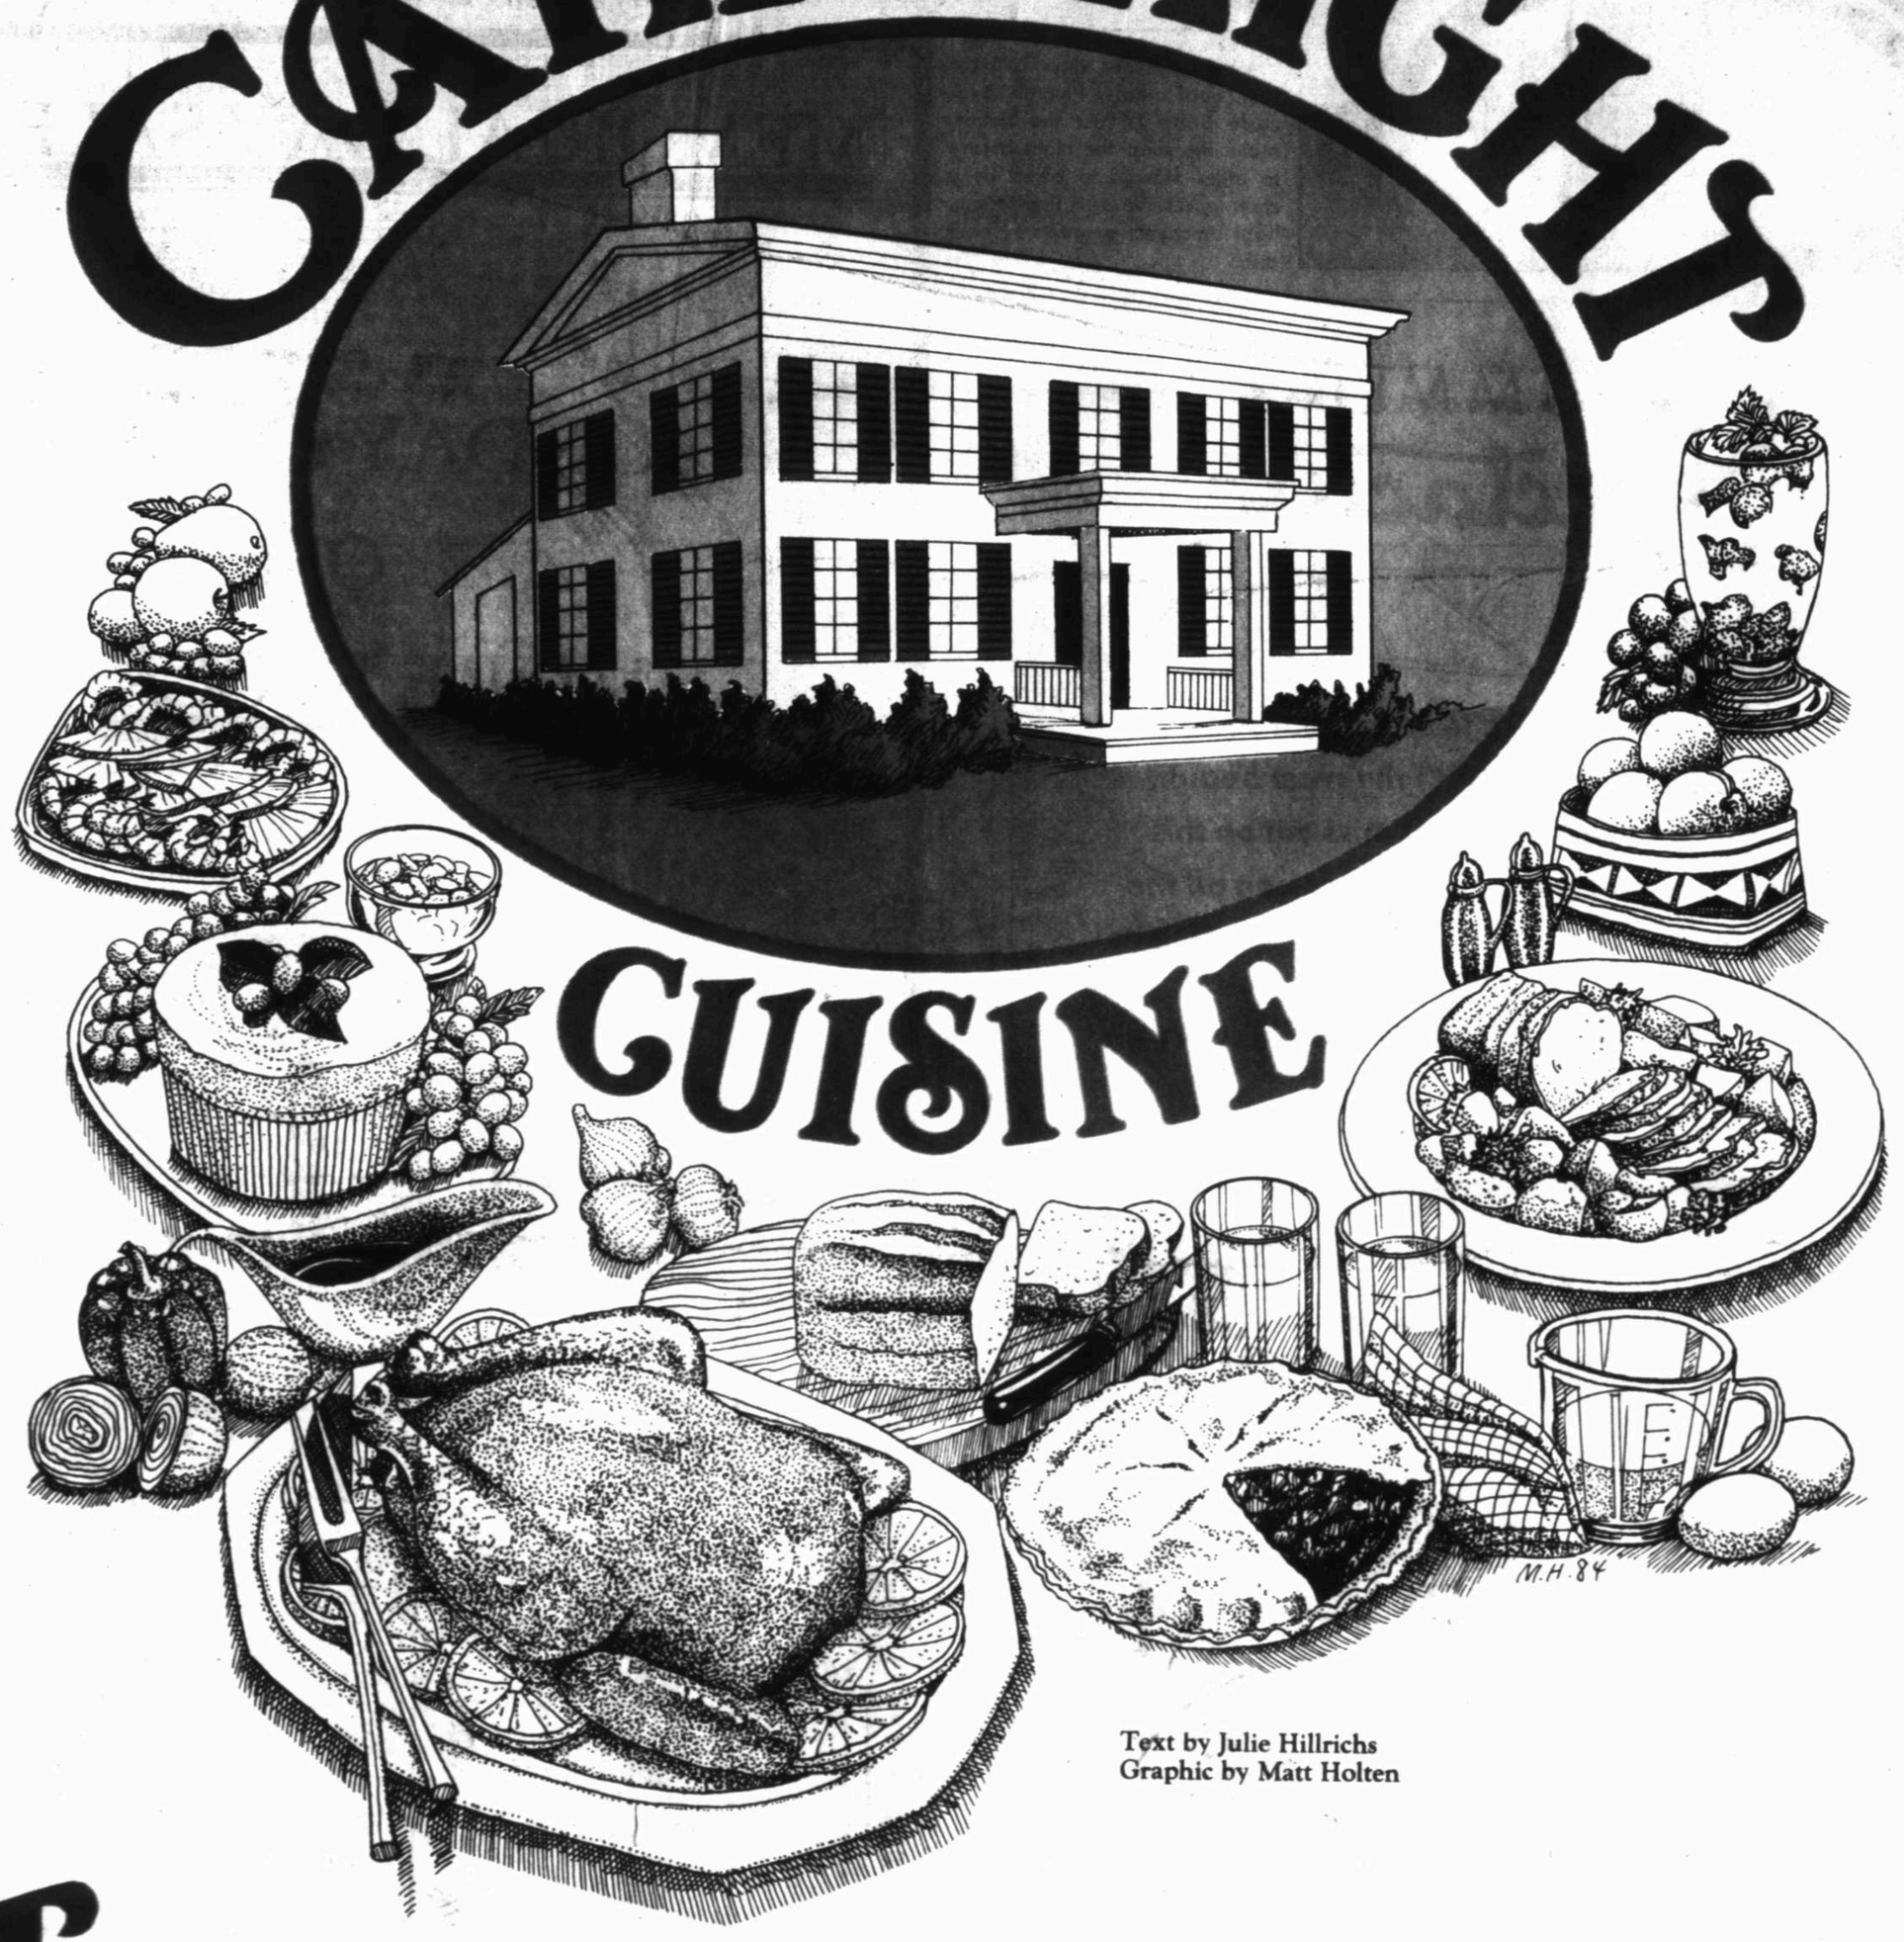
CARTWRIGHT'S CUISINE



Text by Julie Hillrichs
Graphic by Matt Holten

The Cartwright family — whose origin traces back to one of the earliest settlements in Texas — claims to have inherited two unique characteristics from its patriarch, John Cartwright.

The traits: A sense of family loyalty and camaraderie; and an obvious love of good food, respectively.

The Cartwrights say these traits have been established for more than eight generations.

And the most recent example to substantiate the family's claim resulted in a cookbook published by three Fort Worth cousins.

"Cartwright Cuisine: Recipes From Eight Generations of a Texas Family," is a collaborative effort of more than 400 members of the Cartwright clan.

Orginally designed as a recipe pamphlet, the book was compiled in 1983 for the purpose of passing along family heirlooms to guests at future reunions, said Jack Cartwright of Midland.

But when Patty Cartwright Harvey, Mollie Lupe Lasater and Marilyn Mays Bloemendal, all of Fort Worth, wrote to fellow relatives asking for contributions, their letters produced more than 400 recipes and a larger book.

What makes Cartwright Cuisine different from other cookbooks is its first chapter called "Heirloom," a collection of favorite family recipes handed down from generation to generation, some of which predate the Civil War.

[illegible] such family secrets as curing [illegible] sausage, breads, desserts and [illegible] which calls for 25-[illegible]

[illegible] Cuisine are brief [illegible] and his [illegible] tales.

[illegible] was a successful merchant in Tennessee when sent to San Augustine by the United States government to establish the boundary between the Texas and Louisiana Purchase land in 1819," Cartwright said.

He also built the first cotton gin in Texas and helped build the state's first Methodist church.

John's son, Matthew, was a friend of Sam Houston and signed the first oil and gas lease in Texas in 1866. He later became one of the state's largest land owners, he added.

Recipes published in Cartwright Cuisine tell a lot about the history of the Cartwright family, then and now, Cartwright said. "The recipes tell a story of growing up in the Southwest."

For instance, the bottom of the recipe for Ross and Jerry's eggnog notes: "Mother served this eggnog every Christmas morning to Dad's family (male only, most of the time.) I can remember the cutglass punch bowl in the center of the dining room table surrounded by fruit cake, homemade candies and salted pecans; all the men laughing, talking teasing and bragging about their pecan trees, even bringing the pecans out of their pockets to compare. It brings back memories of excitement, happiness and peace."

Written at the end of another recipe for Chocolate Angel Food Cake: "Mother made the best chocolate angel food cake in the world as anyone in Terrell could tell you. This was her first recipe and the only one I know. She worked it out herself. For several years in the thirties she won first prize at the State Fair in Dallas with this recipe. The last year she took the cake to the fair she lost due to an unfortunate occurence. Nellie Mae Cate, who was going with Mother for the ride, sat on the cake as she got out of the car. This seemed to take the air out of things."

The remaining recipes in Cartwright Cuisine, supplied by the recent generation of family members, feature everything from appetizers to low-calorie entrees. The latter proved to be the best idea of all.

Because John and Matthew Cartwright weighed 400 and 300 pounds respectively when they died, one family member said, "With these gentlemen as ancestors, it behooves us to watch our calories."

HOMEMADE SAUSAGE
Cleveland Cartwright

10 lbs. meat (pork)
10 tbls. salt
2 1/2 tbls. red pepper
5 tbls. black pepper
5 tbls. sage

Mix together well with hands.

CHICKEN AND DUMPLINGS
Mrs. Cleveland Cartwright

1 large hen
Water
Salt
Pepper
Small onion

Simmer hen for several hous in water seasoned with salt, pepper, onion and celery. When tender, remove hen from stock and keep stock simmering.

Dumplings:

2 cups flour
1 tsp. salt
4 tsp. baking powder
2 tbls. chicken fat or shortening
1 cup milk

For dumplings, mix flour, salt and baking powder with fat or shortening. Add 1 cup milk. This should be of rather thick consistency. Drop dough into simmering stock by spoonfuls, cover tightly with a heavy lid and steam 15 minutes. Remove bones from chicken and add to dumplings.

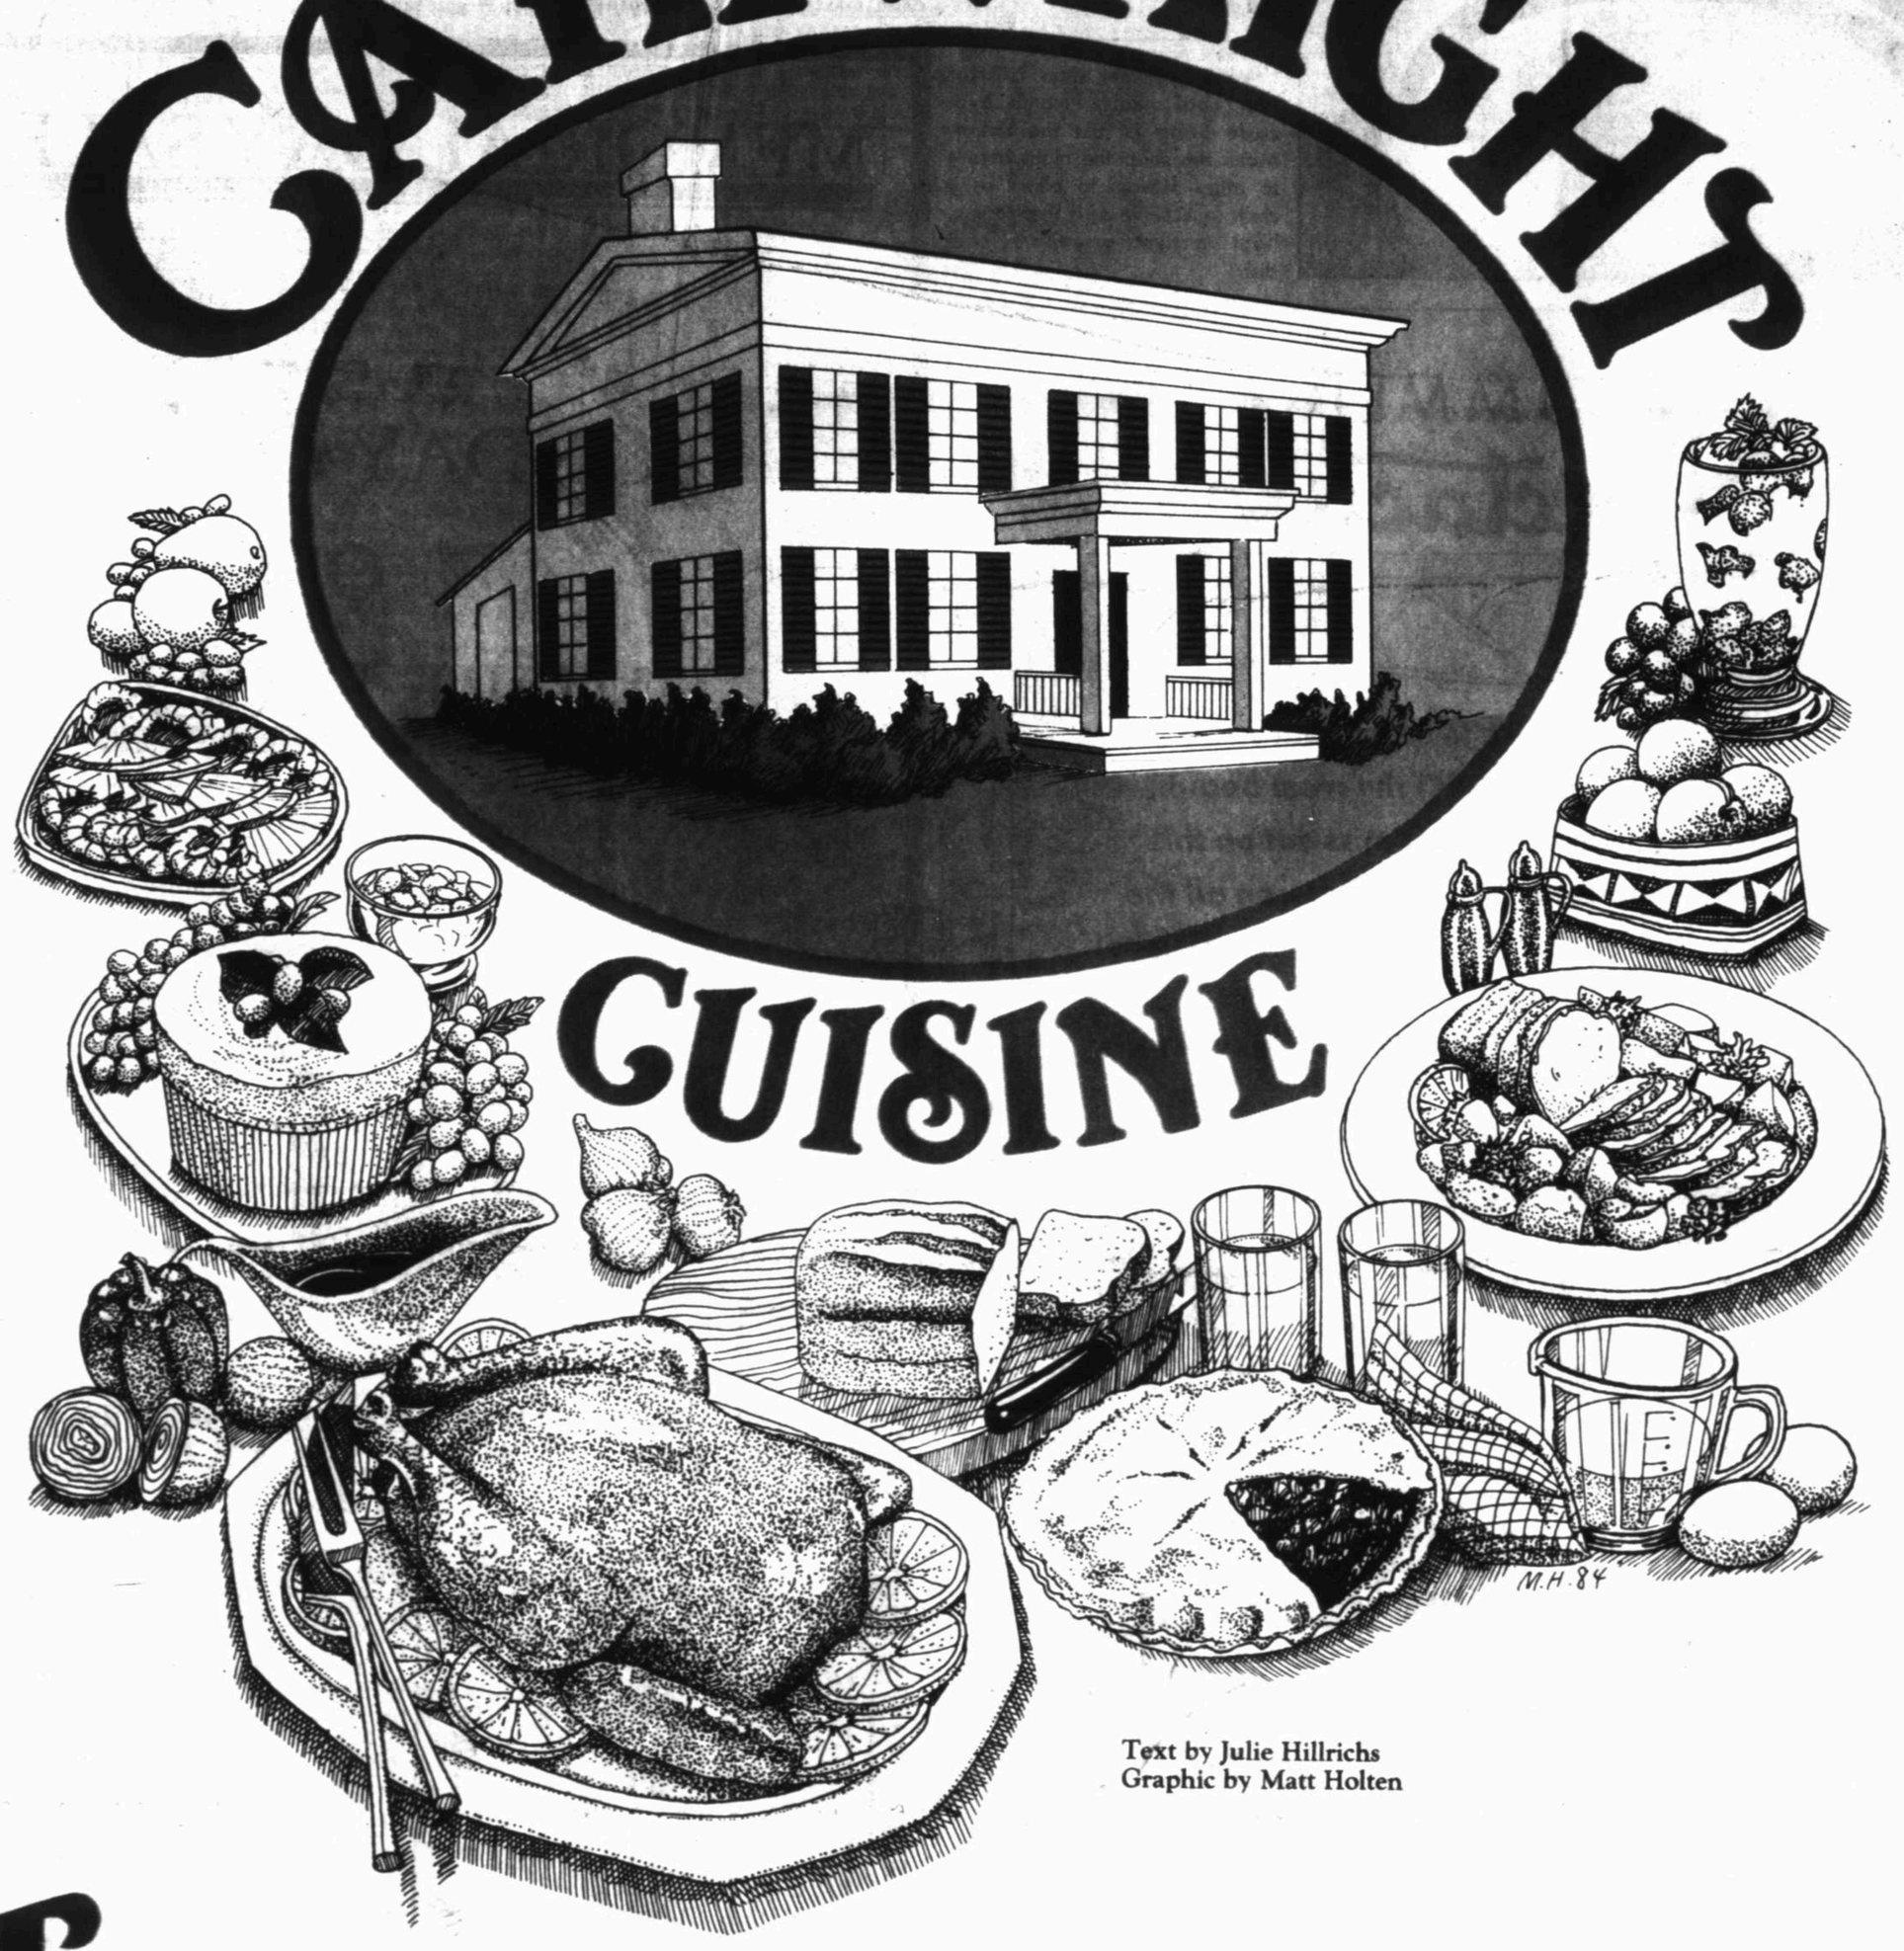
CARTWRIGHT'S CUISINE



Text by Julie Hillrichs
Graphic by Matt Holten

The Cartwright family — whose origin traces back to one of the earliest settlements in Texas — claims to have inherited two unique characteristics from its patriarch, John Cartwright.

The traits: A sense of family loyalty and camaraderie; and an obvious love of good food, respectively.

The Cartwrights say these traits have been established for more than eight generations.

And the most recent example to substantiate the family's claim resulted in a cookbook published by three Fort Worth cousins.

"Cartwright Cuisine: Recipes From Eight Generations of a Texas Family," is a collaborative effort of more than 400 members of the Cartwright clan.

Orginally designed as a recipe pamphlet, the book was compiled in 1983 for the purpose of passing along family heirlooms to guests at future reunions, said Jack Cartwright of Midland.

But when Patty Cartwright Harvey, Mollie Lupe Lasater and Marilyn Mays Bloemendal, all of Fort Worth, wrote to fellow relatives asking for contributions, their letters produced more than 400 recipes and a larger book.

What makes Cartwright Cuisine different from other cookbooks is its first chapter called "Heirloom," a collection of favorite family recipes handed down from generation to generation, some of which predate the Civil War.

Heirloom recipes feature such family secrets as curing meat, making homemade sausage, breads, desserts and a recipe for Hamburg Steak, which calls for 25 cents worth of beef.

Also included in Cartwright Cuisine are brief accounts of the journeys of John Cartwright and his son Matthew — and a few favorite legendary tales.

For example, "family legends claim John was a successful merchant in Tennessee when sent to San Augustine by the United States government to establish the boundary between the Texas and Louisiana Purchase land in 1819," Cartwright said.

He also built the first cotton gin in Texas and helped build the state's first Methodist church.

John's son, Matthew, was a friend of Sam Houston and signed the first oil and gas lease in Texas in 1866. He later became one of the state's largest land owners, he added.

Recipes published in Cartwright Cuisine tell a lot about the history of the Cartwright family, then and now, Cartwright said. "The recipes tell a story of growing up in the Southwest."

For instance, the bottom of the recipe for Ross and Jerry's eggnog notes: "Mother served this eggnog every Christmas morning to Dad's family (male only, most of the time.) I can remember the cutglass punch bowl in the center of the dining room table surrounded by fruit cake, homemade candies and salted pecans; all the men laughing, talking teasing and bragging about their pecan trees, even bringing the pecans out of their pockets to compare. It brings back memories of excitement, happiness and peace."

Written at the end of another recipe for Chocolate Angel Food Cake: "Mother made the best chocolate angel food cake in the world as anyone in Terrell could tell you. This was her first recipe and the only one I know. She worked it out herself. For several years in the thirties she won first prize at the State Fair in Dallas with this recipe. The last year she took the cake to the fair she lost due to an unfortunate occurence. Nellie Mae Cate, who was going with Mother for the ride, sat on the cake as she got out of the car. This seemed to take the air out of things."

The remaining recipes in Cartwright Cuisine, supplied by the recent generation of family members, feature everything from appetizers to low-calorie entrees. The latter proved to be the best idea of all.

Because John and Matthew Cartwright weighed 400 and 300 pounds respectively when they died, one family member said, "With these gentlemen as ancestors, it behooves us to watch our calories."

HOMEMADE SAUSAGE

Cold soup breaks away from summer recipe ruts

Light, refreshing and full of the season's best flavors, icy cold soups are just about perfect for warm weather meals. Easy to prepare without sophisticated equipment, these cooling soups can be made the day before and tucked into the refrigerator until time to serve. A change of taste from summer's standard barbecues and last-minute sandwiches, these soups are also easy on the cook.

PICANTE AVOCADO SOUP

2 large ripe avocados, peeled, seeded and cut
2 cups chicken broth
2 teaspoons lime juice
1 cucumber, peeled, seeded and cut
1/4 cup Picante sauce
1 cup half-and-half
1/2 teaspoon salt
Green onion tops, thinly sliced

Combine avocados, one cup chicken broth and lime juice in food processor or blender; process until smooth. Transfer to large bowl. Combine cucumber and Picante sauce in food processor or blender; process until smooth. Stir into avocado mixture with remaining chicken broth, half-and-half and salt. Cover and chill. Top with green onions. Makes four to six servings, about six cups soup.

Warm summer days call for fast, cool meals. Picante Avocado Soup is just the ticket. Make the soup the night before to allow flavors to blend as it chills, and serve as a first course, light luncheon or supper main dish.

SAN ANTONIO STYLE GAZPACHO

2 cups beef broth
1 medium onion, quartered
1/3 cup lemon juice
1/4 cup olive oil
2 teaspoons salt
1 can (46 oz.) tomato juice
2 cups finely chopped celery
2 tomatoes, diced
1/3 cup Picante sauce
1/4 teaspoon pepper
2 medium green peppers, chopp
2 small cucumbers, diced
Croutons

Combine one cup broth, on lemon juice, oil and salt in food cessor or blender; process u smooth. Transfer to large bowl. tomato juice, remaining beef br celery, tomatoes, Picante sauce pepper; mix well. Chill at least th hours. Top each serving with gr pepper, cucumber and croutoı Makes eight servings, about 12 c soup.

Have you-heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

The Minuet Club's executive board entertained with a tea Wednesday afternoon in the home of Spooks (Mrs. J.W.) Starr to introduce this year's 12 debutantes to the women members of the club.

The 1984 debs, who will be presented at the 28th annual debutante ball Nov. 24 in Midland Country Club are:

Jennifer Bales, daughter of Peggy and Bill Bales; Julie Crain, daughter of Carol and Peter Crain; Molly Franklin, daughter of Kaye and Bill Franklin; Nell Fullinwider, daughter of Wally and Jerry Fullinwider; Christa Garlitz, daughter of Jane and Gary Garlitz; Jennifer Jackson, daughter of Judy and Bill Jackson; Shelley Jowell, daughter of Barbara and Bill Jowell; Susan Lamphere, daughter of Jane and Dick Lamphere; Sally Seal, daughter of Leila and Bill Seal; Sara Sumner, daughter of Nancy and Bill Sumner; Kathryn Way, daughter of Barbara and Ralph Way, and Kamee Young, daughter of Myna and Jack Young.

It was not completely an afternoon of socializing. The young women met earlier at the Audrey Walker School of Dance to take care of a little bit of "business" — their first bow practice — before they scatter for the summer.

Miss Crain was honored at the first of many deb parties of the season Tuesday evening at LaBodega Restaurant. Hosting the Mexican buffet were Ann and Ronnie Williams, Charlotte and Newnie Ellis and Myra and George Glass. Guests included the debs, their dates, the Minuet Club board and close friends of the Crain family.

Organized in 1933, the Minuet Club is Midland's oldest dance club. Originally the dances were held in the old Hotel Scharbauer, but now they alternate among the city's many lovely clubs. It was not until 1956 that the first group of debs was presented. Eileen (Mrs. M.T.) Stallter was serving as president at that time.

The 1984-85 board is composed of Mrs. Williams, president; Patti (Mrs. Watson Jr.) LaForce, vice-president; Mrs. Stallter, secretary-treasurer; and directors Nancy (Mrs. Buddy) Anguish, Suzy (Mrs. Jim) Boldrick, Norma Jean (Mrs. Bud) Boles, Mrs. Crain, Mrs. Way and Terry (Mrs. Jack) Wilkinson.

WHEN PALMER KELLEY became the bride of Kevin McCarter of Midland Saturday evening in Natchez, Miss., she was wearing the gown worn by her grandmother in her wedding in 1927 and also a ruby and pearl lavaliere belonging to the groom's great-grandmother and worn by all the brides in his mother's family.

Palmer is the granddaughter of Mrs. Frank Palmer Stubbs of Natchez, and Kevin is the son of Hallie and Dale McCarter of Midland. Following a short honeymoon, they will return to Fort Worth to make their home. Both TCU graduates, Palmer is with Texas Title Co., and Kevin is with Dun & Bradstreet.

Amidst all the longstanding traditions, something new was introduced. At the reception at Magnolia Hall the newlyweds took part in an old French custom as they drank from a sterling silver "coupe de marriage" engraved with their names and wedding date. The marriage cup will be saved for the groom's younger brothers Shawn and Jamie, and future generations of the family.

A longtime friend of the McCarter family and Kevin's former piano teacher, Harriet (Mrs. Gene) Motter was the organist for the ceremony.

A round of parties in Midland, Fort Worth and Natchez preceded the couple's trip to the altar.

Locally they were entertained at a dinner and paper shower given by Priscilla and Dave Schaefer and children, Angela and DA Harral, Dianne and Jeff; a buffet supper and "Honey-Do" shower given by Patricia and Martin Allday and son Marty, who was one of the groomsmen; a bridal display shower and sherry party given in Mrs. Motter's home with J'Nell (Mrs. Harvey) Carr, Rosemary (Mrs. Donald) Cox and Hermine (Mrs. Gene) Erwin as co-hostesses, and a supper and game shower at the home of Carol (Mrs. Gary) Hall, co-hosted by Maggie Artley and Eleanor Josting.

Among the Fort Worth festivities was a wine and cheese party and linen shower, whose hostesses included Mrs. Thomas Armstrong, the former Kathy St. Germain of Midland. Her son was the ring bearer.

The groom's parents hosted the rehearsal dinner at Stanton Hall on Friday evening. They also gave an engagement party in Midland in early spring.

JULIE AND PAT BROWER entertained with a Mexican Fiesta party last weekend to announce the engagement of their daughter Suzanne to Doug Laufer. He is the son of Sylvia and Walt Laufer.

The fiesta theme was carried out with pinatas and paper flowers throughout the home and a sombrero with a nosegay of silk flowers as door decoration. A tempting array of Mexican hors d'oeuvres and margueritas were served.

Serving in the house party were Julie's sisters Betty (Mrs. Houston) Hodges of Manchester, Tenn., and Pauline Nutz of St. Louis, Mo.; Dottie and Norman Barker, Lucinda and Dee Windsor, Hermine and Gene Erwin and Pat and Charlie Pendleton.

The couple will be married on July 23 in St. Thomas, the Virgin Islands. Approximately 20 family members and friends will be present for the ceremony in the Dutch Reformed Church.

ALUMNI OF KANSAS STATE University at Manhattan gathered at LaBodega Restaurant last Sunday evening for a dinner party.

Although now deeply entrenched in Texas, the alums enjoyed sharing memories of their home state and alma mater, while renewing old friendships and making new friends. The school colors of purple and white and the mascot, the Wildcat, were used in decorations.

The gathering also was a farewell for Joanne Franz, who leaves soon for Dallas to join her husband Leland. He has already assumed his duties there as general manager of Pyro Energy Corp. Among the 45 others attending were Lou and John Scherer, Nancy and Bill White, Kathleen and Harold Stewart, Jeanette and Bob Pratt, Ramona and Don Huxman, Diane and Dick Mendenhall, Anelle and Jim Mack, Leann and Harold Brenner and yours truly.

Plans were discussed to attend the Kansas State-TCU football game in Fort Worth on Sept. 22.

THE CAYMAN ISLANDS was the fun vacation spot recently for Flo Hughes, Dee and Bill Wilson, Brenda and Ron Hughes and Allen Hitchcock, all of Midland, and Odessan Randy Wise.

Staying at the Royal Palms Hotel at Seven Mile Beach, on Grand Cayman Island, the group enjoyed snorkeling, scuba diving, collecting sea shells and the marvelous sea food. They were particularly impressed with the breathtakingly, beautiful transparent blue of the ocean and the extraordinary depths to which they could see.

BARBARA AND WINDELL THOMASON recently honored the members of the fourth graduating class of Midland Christian High School with a backyard picnic. A gift was presented to each senior.

The seniors, juniors and their dates attended, along with special guests MCS Superintendent Dr. Harley Tefertiller, Principal Eddie Lee and his wife Carol.

Winery's chefs create meals to match wine

By NATHAN CHROMAN
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Today, wineries are eager to characterize a wine as one that goes well with food and, indeed, pre-select the appropriate food course.

This is a display of sophistication not likely to be found anywhere else in the wine world, including Europe. Imagine back labels on Lafite, Latour or Mouton suggesting consumption only with sauteed duck breast with liver, accompanied by garlic sauce and shiitake mushrooms. Far fetched? Yes, but not in California where a number of such wine and food programs are currently in place.

First and foremost to break new ground in mating food with its wine is Napa Valley's Beringer Winery, which for the past four years has evolved an interesting program in association with the California Culinary Academy in San Francisco. The program calls for a student-chef to be assigned to the winery's kitchen, where he or she is encouraged to develop dishes that are matched specifically to the winery's products.

To punctuate the point, Tor Kenward, a Beringer executive, composed a wine and food compatibility chart for impressions on how a wine complements a dish. Each dining guest is given a sample evaluation chart that ultimately serves as an effective guide for aspiring chefs interested in matching the foods to wine. It is most efficient after first isolating food and wine nuances of a specific course.

The initial chart question is, "Did you find the food and wine combination: contrasting, compatible and appealing?" To respond, one assigns a set number of points for whatever grand total desired. Kenward suggest three categories with a point range of from one to 10; 10 for euphoric, and one for discordant. The chart makes evaluating appropriate flavor association an interesting exercise.

The current student-chef at Beringer is David Hanke, who created several fascinating meals which I enjoyed while tinkering with the chart and tasting a variety of Beringer bottles. A duck breast mated nicely with the winery's 1937 Cabernet Sauvignon, which featured mellowing enveloping flavors without any suggestion of tannin astringency. The garlic sauce and mushrooms did not conflict, although a noisette of lamb (an alternate choice) with tamarind and kumquat sauce and toasted almonds made an even better choice. That is the way student-chefs are operating these days, offering fascinating multi-courses with asingle wine, thus facilitating the search for an ultra refined choice.

A '74 Beringer (Yountville Vineyard) Centennial Chardonnay with an older attractive maderise taste and lovely toasty nose was an especially fine companion with oysters, flying fish roe and ginger sauce.

DEAR ABBY

Bridesmaid's broken arm casts shadow on plans

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'm in college, and one of my closest friends here has asked me to be a bridesmaid in her upcoming wedding in June.

It will be held in a distant state, and I've already purchased my plane tickets, which cost $700. The bridesmaid's gown set me back $300. Abby, this is all my own money I'm spending.

Two weeks ago I fell down the dorm stairs and fractured my right arm. Right now my entire arm is in a plaster cast, which I will have to wear for four months!

Yesterday I heard through the grapevine that my friend is hoping I will drop out as a bridesmaid because she's afraid I'll spoil the looks of her wedding!

I think that's not only petty and mean, it's outrageous considering the money I've spent.

I'm upset enough at the prospect of having my arm in a cast all summer without being made to feel unwanted. What do you think? — CAST ASIDE (NO JOKE)

DEAR CAST: Does this "grapevine" through which you've been getting your messages happen to bear sour grapes?

Have a talk with the bride. Tell her what you've heard and how you feel about it.

You've already had one break; maybe she'll give you another.

DEAR ABBY: I met a girl while in school two years ago and we've become close friends.

We usually meet for dinner twice a month.

We live in different counties, so when we do get together it's special. It gives me a chance to get out of the house, away from my husband and children.

Lately, every time we get together she brings her husband along. It wouldn't be so bad if he weren't so insulting to me.

He belittles me, and his put-downs are becoming too much to bear.

Our meetings before had always been just the two of us, and we used to sit and talk, but since her husband has been joining us, it seems she would rather talk to him.

I don't see why she doesn't just stay home and save me the time and gasoline it takes to drive there.

Our friendship is wearing thin. Is there a tactful way to tell her I wish her husband wouldn't join us? How can I do this without hurting her feelings? — THREE'S A CROWD

DEAR THREE'S: Be honest. Tell her you don't particularly enjoy the threesome because her husband belittles you and puts you down.

And if it means the end of your friendship, what have you lost? A "friend" who permits her husband to insult you.

DEAR ABBY: In response to the letter regarding human artificial insemination, how could Pope Pius XII, or anyone, condemn such an act!

I, for one, know what artificial insemination has done for my life. And I'm not speaking of your usual form of the procedure — husband and wife.

After 10 years of marriage and eight long and unsuccessful years of trying to conceive, I am now the proud mother of a beautiful, healthy 2-year-old son.

I was fortunate enough to have a sensitive and caring sister who understood the pain I felt from wanting a child and being unable to conceive.

My sister consented to be artificially inseminated with my husband's sperm, and after one attempt, I was on my way to motherhood.

I participated as much as possible throughout her pregnancy, and I was the coach at her delivery.

Three days later, she left the hospital and my husband and I had a son.

As you can imagine, my story could go on for pages, but the point is this: How could anyone deny me the happiness that this child has brought to my husband and me?

He was baptized by our minister, and in the eyes of God he is therefore accepted.

And, oh yes, our son looks exactly like ME! — DEBBIE IN ROCHESTER, N.Y.

Greeks prefer church rites to civil ceremony

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Two years after the Socialist government introduced civil marriage, most Greek couples prefer an elaborate ritual in an incense-filled Orthodox church to a simple three-minute ceremony in the local town hall.

Only one in 10 Greek couples has opted for a civil wedding since the civil ceremony was introduced by law in March 1982. Official statistics show most of the 5,000-odd civil marriages so far celebrated took place in cities.

In the small mountain town of Florina in northern Greece, for example, only five civil ceremonies have been held so far.

"Ending the centuries-old religious monopoly on marriage was a vital social reform that was long overdue, but Greeks, even if they are not religious, find it hard to escape from the customs of an old-fashioned society dominated by the church," Thanassis Tsouras, secretary general of the Interior Ministry, said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Tsouras said civil marriages did not appeal to most Greeks' taste for "the ceremony and fuss" of an hour-long Orthodox service that includes a wedding dance around the altar as guests shower the newlyweds with rose-petals and rice.

By contrast, civil weddings are conducted in quick succession once or twice a week by local officials in bare rooms in town halls.

The ceremony costs only 100 drachmas (one dollar) while ornate church weddings can soar to 50,000 drachmas ($500).

"People are still suspicious of civil ceremonies. They think there must be something wrong if they're so cheap and simple," said Christos Lorenzattos, who runs inner Athens' Civil Marriage Office.

The inner Athens area, which holds an average of 20 civil ceremonies a week, has the highest proportion of civil to church weddings in Greece, with 1,087 civil marriages to 7,750 religious ceremonies in 1983.

"The majority of newlyweds (opting for civil marriage) are young people whose parents probably disapprove and people over 50 who are embarrassed to go to church," Lorenzattos said.

The Socialist government is now pressing for more enticing civil marriages by advising local mayors to dress up their town halls with flowers and accompany ceremonies with taped music.

Lifestyle policies

The following are policies for publication of stories and announcements in the Lifestyle Department of The Midland Reporter-Telegram:

Information for our Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the story is to run. For example, an item to appear in Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least four weeks before the wedding date. Wedding stories must be submitted within five days of the event.

Engagements, weddings, anniversaries and club notices must be submitted in writing. All materials should include the name and telephone number of the person submitting them. These items appear in the Sunday paper only.

The Reporter-Telegram has forms for announcements of engagements, weddings and anniversaries.

We cannot mail pictures or forms to persons living within Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication.

Portraits of the future bride and bridegroom in one photograph may be submitted with engagement announcements. Wedding photographs should be of the bride only.

Pictures should be black and white, preferably glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but they may reproduce poorly. Good reproduction cannot be assured when color prints are used. In general, snapshots are not acceptable.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and stories.

Home repairs require right tools

Copley News Service

Preparing your first home before moving in as husband and wife is both exciting and hectic. Simple household repairs and improvements, such as hanging pictures, applying insulating materials and lining shelves with contact paper, can be made easier if you have the right tools.

Selecting tools may seem overwhelming and somewhat confusing but the following are basic tools that newlyweds setting up house should own:

— SCREWDRIVERS. Flat tip and Phillips screwdrivers in two sizes each will help with repairs and improvements such as tightening screws in wood trims, door locks and hinges.

— CLAW HAMMER. A 10-ounce. or 16-ounce. claw hammer is a vital tool for any home. This hammer allows you to hang pictures, remove nails and secure loose carpet tacking and floorboards with ease.

— MEASURING TOOLS. Two good investments are an adjustable folding rule and a push-pull tape rule with hook.

— WRENCHES. Purchase at least one adjustable wrench or several different sizes of open-end wrenches to handle a variety of jobs.

THE DIAMOND ANNIVERSARY RING

You can start a tradition with your next wedding anniversary that will solve your anniversary gift problems for years to come. If you're celebrating your fifth anniversary, for instance, you can have a ring made up with row of five diamonds. Then each year you can add a diamond to signify how your love grows with time. This is just one of the ways you can give a diamond anniversary ring. These rings come in many styles. The size and number of diamonds is entirely up to you. The basic requirement is one row of diamonds that goes around at least half the ring. You can make a full circle with diamonds if you like or add another row or two. Diamond anniversary rings owe their popularity to the fact that when most men decide to get married, their budget limits the amount of money they can spend on engagement and wedding rings. After several years, however, these same men are often in a better position financially and can afford to spend a bit more for an important piece of jewelry. The diamond anniversary ring is an excellent choice because it can be harmoniously worn with most wedding sets and bands. Even an unusually shaped set or band can be custom-fitted with a row of diamonds.

When you give your wife a diamond annivesary ring, you are choosing a special gift whose significance is known the world over. You may add your own personal meaning such as "Thanks for putting up with me" or You deserve beautiful things," but the essential meaning is "I love you more than ever."

Study: Females lighter drinkers

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The results of a recent market research study have turned up some interesting information about contemporary drinking habits and preferences among American women relative to American men.

The study, conducted by Brown-Forman Distillers Corp., revealed that females in the U.S. apparently drink in greater moderation than men. They tend to consume only one-third to one-half the amount, by volume, of alcoholic beverages that men do.

Child-bride weds sword

The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

NEW DELHI, India — The bridegroom could not come to the wedding, so the parents of a young girl had her married to the bridegroom's sword instead.

The incident happened in a tribal village in Bhilwara district of the central indian state of Rajasthan, the United News of India reported.

The groom, an army recruit, could not get leave from his regiment for the occasion. When he failed to turn up on the wedding day, the parents of both the bride and the groom decided that the young man's scimitar was good enough to represent the groom at the sacred ceremony.

The agency described the girl as a minor, but did not give her name. Child marriages are common in this state despite a law banning them.

AT WIT'S END

Drunk driving takes high teen-age toll

By ERMA BOMBECK

For the sake of this story, we'll call the high school Central. We'll place it somewhere in the Midwest, say Minneapolis. Central has a football team, a band, a Latin club and until this moment, it had a senior class of about 200.

To make a point, we're going to let Central High School assume the burden of all the teenagers who will die IN ONE YEAR in drunk-driving-related deaths.

There will be no senior class at Central this year. There will be no senior class for the next 45 years! By that time, 9,000 young people will have never lived to see their diploma.

Half of them may never have taken a drink or have driven the car. They will be the victims of drunk drivers.

Amanda will be one of them. She always believed you had to come home with the same boy who took you to a dance. She didn't stop to think that the young boy who showed up at her door sober was not the same boy five hours later who couldn't get the car key in the ignition by himself.

The junior class prophecy said Pam was going to be the next woman Supreme Court justice. She didn't like her image. She was tired of being considered "out of it," so she accepted a ride home from a picnic with a boy who fell asleep at the wheel of a car with a beer can in his hand. Pam's head went through the windshield.

Had Andy been born, he would have been in the class of 2017, but his mother, who died in the 1994 class, never had the chance to marry or give birth to him. She was riding a bicycle at dusk when a motorist who drank too much at his retirement party ran her down.

Central High School closed its doors in 2029 as its enrollment steadily decreased.

The halls echoed with school songs that were never sung, valedictorians who never spoke and cheers that were never heard. But more than that were the promises of 9,000 destinies that were never to be fulfilled.

The people of this country champion the lives of helpless seals, unborn babies, abandoned dogs and cats, abused children, alcoholics, the elderly and the disease- ridden. When will we weep for the phantom classes at Central High? The would-have-beens, the should-have-beens who thought death was a companion to old age.

To be factual I would have to point out that in the 45 years that the senior classes of Central were wiped out, 405,000 young people between the ages of 15 and 24 would also have died, eliminating the need for 44 more Central High Schools.

When you add to that the number of parents, brothers, sisters, grandparents, friends and lovers who died with them, the toll of human misery is staggering.

That's not a pun. It's a reminder.

Study: Math ability may be sex-related

BALTIMORE (AP) — The fact that men are more mathematically inclined than women may be due to genetic factors.

In a nationwide study of 65,000 exceptionally gifted school children aged 13 and under, Johns Hopkins researchers found that 13 times as many boys as girls scored 700 or higher on mathematical reasoning sections of the Scholastic Aptitude Tests (SAT).

Doctor: Some spouses 'cheat' to save marriage

Hearst Feature Service

Some men — and women — have extra-marital affairs because they want to preserve their marriages, according to Dr. Helen Singer Kaplan, director of the Human Sexuality Teaching Program at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center.

Husbands and wives are unfaithful for two reasons, Dr. Kaplan revealed in her column, "Sexuality," in the June issue of Redbook. "Either they want to preserve their marriages or they want to end them.

"Men who are having affairs for the first reason are trying to compensate for the defects of their marriages. They may be frustrated and unhappy, but they do not want to leave. On the contrary, they look for pleasure elsewhere to keep their marriages from falling apart."

Such men, she added, usually pick unsuitable or unavailable partners.

Dr. Kaplan said men who want to end their marriages keep having affairs until they find a woman who can help them separate from their wives.

The two kinds of affairs spring from different causes, she said, but both stem from a man or woman not being willing to face what is really wrong with his or her marriage. "All affairs are decoys — something to divert you from realizing that your marriage is flawed or failing — and in that sense they're all potentially destructive."

She said most marriages do not break up because of an affair and, after the initial crisis, "most marriages improve and become more honest."

Dr. Kaplan concludes her column with the statement that adultery "is an enormously risky way to test a relationship. Some spouses can never forgive that kind of disloyalty. They never get over it, and it may really destroy their relationship."

Jerry Yoder, choreographer for "Bells are Ringing," kicks up his heels.

In step with stage life

Text by Georgia Temple

Jerry Yoder's decision to join a jazz dance class changed his life. Then, he was working as an accountant for United Air Lines.

Now, he works as a dancer and a choreographer — the former grew from a lifetime love, the latter evolved from the dance.

"I've always loved dancing," Yoder says in an interview at Theatre Midland. "I started dancing when I was about 7 or 8 years old.

"Choreography — that's one of those things like a lot of jobs that you just sort of fall into. You don't even think about it afterwards."

He was dancing in New York and doing shows. Someone was putting together a show in which he had been in the original company.

"They said, 'Jerry, why don't you choreograph it?' I never even thought about doing something like that. They said, 'Sure you can do that. You know all the steps.'

"So, I did. And it turned out that I really enjoyed doing it."

The transition from thinking as a dancer to thinking as a designer and teacher, Yoder says, "Wasn't that difficult mentally...when the first show that I actually staged was a show I was familiar with. If it had been a show that I was totally unfamiliar with, it would have been real frightening.

"That's really the best way of approaching it. By slowly realizing that you do have the capabilities of doing something like that, then you're willing to do a show that you're not familiar with."

Yoder is in Midland choreographing a special production for ACT IX. "Bells Are Ringing," performed for the benefit of Midland Community Theatre, opened Thursday in Theatre One at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave. The production closes June 2.

However, it's not his initial working trip to Midland. Last summer, Yoder choreographed the local production of "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas."

"I was involved with the original production in New York City and one of the writers is Larry King, who is a native of Midland. Midland Community Theatre had approached Larry if they could do it and if he could be in it. Then my name came up to help put the show together because I put together about six different productions that had traveled around the country."

It was not his first experience in working with community theater as opposed to professional theater; it was his third. Yoder enjoys the enthusiasm in community theater.

"Sometimes the people may not have quite the talent that you may have in professional situations. The level will be different because they're not concentrating on really improving their dance or really improving their singing.

"But what's really wonderful is that they overcompensate that with the enthusiasm, and it's much more fun putting together a production at a community theater. They really want to do the show and are willing to go 120 percent in order to do it because they're having fun. It's a choice of theirs to do that show.

> "As a dancer, it's so exciting to be before the audience each night. I want to be there with all the right movement at the right time. It's such a thrill to experience it."
>
> — Jerry Yoder, choreographer

"A lot of times in professional theater, it gets to the point where they are doing a show because they have no other choice. I mean, you have to pay the rent. So the heart really isn't into it."

Dancers have to dance when they can because the longevity of theater dancers' careers is not much different than ballet dancers.

"By the time you get around 35 to 40, it's very difficult competing with people who are going to be in their early 20s who are at the auditions trying to get the same jobs. And by the time you're 35, your body isn't quite as flexible. The only thing that can help someone in theater is that a lot of times they will be going for types, and there could be an age difference in what they're looking for. It could possibly be longer than ballet, but it's within the same age range."

This dancer and choreographer finds it difficult to compare the two careers.

"It's like people in California saying which city do you like, Los Angeles or San Francisco. Those two cities are so different you can't compare them.

"As a dancer, it's so exciting to be before the audience each night. I want to be there with all the right movement at the right time. It's such a thrill to experience it.

"Choreographing and putting a show together is such a different feeling, but very satisfying when you finally get it together and it works. It's a feeling. It's a sense. It's trying to create the reality of whatever the author has written. And it's always different every time you do a show."

Yoder has no favorites. From choreographing "Pippin" to "Bells are Ringing," Yoder says, "Everytime I get involved with a show, I just get so totally involved that there's always moments in each show that are really terrific."

Pausing to contemplate for a moment, he added, "Overall, ... it would be 'Pippin' as a dancer because that's such a dancer's show. And when I put that together, I just thoroughly enjoyed every moment."

Literacy drive changes inmates' lives

CAMP HILL, Pa. (AP) — It was two years ago that Ethel Marie Wadlinger, 62, of Crestwood, first entered the State Correctional Institution at Camp Hill to teach others a lesson.

And she has gone back to the maximum security facility near Harrisburg several times since then to instruct inmates on how to conduct a literacy program.

"It's an awesome feeling the first time," Ms. Wadlinger said. "I really didn't know what to expect. You walk into a room with 20 fellas there, and three of them are lifers (serving life terms)."

Charlotte Thompson, a 74-year-old instructor from Bowmansdale, Cumberland County, whom the inmates affectionately call "Grandma," usually accompanies Ms. Wadlinger to the prison. Ms. Thompson had been teaching the inmates on her own before asking Ms. Wadlinger to join her in 1981.

The duo's efforts were quickly rewarded.

The first five inmates they taught formed a literacy council of their own called the Camp Hill Correctional Literacy Council, the first one in the country in a prison. The group has instructed 40 prisoners so far, according to Ms. Wadlinger.

Ms. Wadlinger said she remembered detecting mixed feelings among the men, some of whom expressed a smug attitude of "What are you going to teach me, lady?"

But after a few hours of instruction, the inmates realized that she really wanted to help them, not just show them the basics, Ms. Wadlinger said.

Even so, she was reluctant about teaching in that atmosphere.

"When I went home, I wasn't sure I wanted to go back again," she said. "I wasn't afraid. I was just apprehensive ... I had no idea what they would do or how they would do it."

Ms. Wadlinger, noting that most of the prisoners are illiterate and only a handful can read at the third- or fourth-grade level, said they had shown an eagerness to learn.

"They're very, very appreciative of what you've done," she said. "They always write you a letter and thank you for coming."

Ms. Wadlinger's official title is supervising tutor trainer for Laubach Literacy Action, an international organization that teaches people how to read, write and speak English.

The program is based on a teaching method devised in the 1920s by Frank Laubach, a minister and missionary from Pennsylvania.

A member of the Berks Literacy Council, Ms. Wadlinger in her volunteer position trains people how to teach others who are, in turn, tutoring persons learning the English language.

Ms. Wadlinger said the success of the prison's literacy council had prompted state officials to make the Laubach program the core of all state prison educational programs.

She emphasized that this differed from other programs in the past, which required inmates to first be able to read before they participated in any educational courses.

Criticism results in communications breakdown

By ADELE SCHEELE, Ph.D.

Q. After five years of operating an award-winning university publicity service, I recently discovered that the current heir to our presidency has openly criticized my office, me, and has even questioned why our office is part of the university. Would you say that this is a breakdown in internal communications?

A. Even more than that. It could be that the new president has a friend in the publicity business and would like to give that friend the university's account. If that is true, you must convince him that it is cost effective, at least, to have an in-house office.

But before you jump to that conclusion, invite the president to lunch. State that your current task is to find out how to publicize his new role. If he is hesitant, ask if he has any concerns about you. Explain that you have enjoyed a good reputation and were taken aback by the criticism. You would therefore welcome a chance to talk about the issues that must have bothered him.

At the same time, mention your own successful projects and awards. You have no guarantees, of course, that he will keep you. And, even though it is of little comfort, most new leaders bring in their own people so that those already employed are often at a real disadvantage. Your hope is that you can talk him out of his opinion or, failing that, that you can get another job equal or better, because you are so well-known. Sometimes, life is just really tough.

Adele Scheele is a columnist for King Features Syndicate.

Study shows baby deaths soared after cutbacks

BOSTON (AP) — Infant deaths among poor, predominantly black families in Boston's inner city "skyrocketed" in 1982 because of a recession and federal spending cuts in primary health care, says a Harvard researcher.

"The combination of a severe recession and the cuts in funding for primary care services along with an 18 percent decline in the Aid for Families with Dependent Children caseload in Boston all contributed to this increase in infant mortality," Professor Penny Feldman of the Harvard School of Public Health said Wednesday.

Five neighborhood health centers in the area she surveyed reported 86 infant deaths, a rate of 21 deaths per 1,000, in 1982, compared to 57 deaths and a rate of about 14.7 per 1,000 the year before, she said.

She said until 1982, infant mortality in the neighborhoods had declined, with 62 deaths in 1980.

"In 1981, there was an improvement, then things skyrocketed in 1982," she said.

She said the health centers were in Roxbury, Dorchester, and Jamaica Plain among a population ranging from 60 percent to 80 percent black, with unemployment rates from 7 percent to 20 percent and an average median family annual income of $11,500.

"We're talking about poor blacks with high unemployment," she said.

The data for Boston are the most complete figures yet available from a larger study, financed by the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, which the Public Health school is conducting in six large U.S. cities.

Ms. Feldman said the rise in infant mortality was linked to a sharp drop in the number of pediatric and obstetric visits recorded at the five health centers. Those reductions were in turn linked to reductions in federal spending for Maternal and Child Health programs.

Those programs were begun in 1912 and were responsible for steady declines in infant mortality during the following decades through comprehensive services for pregnant women and their newborn children up to school age, Ms. Feldman said

But between fiscal 1981 and 1982, she said, federal financing measured in constant dollars declined 30 percent at the five centers studied. Increased state financing made up some of the shortfall, but not all of it.

Miss Teen selected

Marcia Logsdon

Miss Marcia Logsdon, 14, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack R. Logsdon of Midland, has been chosen to compete in the West Texas Miss T.E.E.N. Pageant June 2-3 at Midland College. This pageant is the official city-wide preliminary for the Texas Miss T.E.E.N. Pageant in September in Dallas.

Contestants are residents of the West Texas area, 14-18 years of age, have at least a "B" average in school and participate in the volunteer program of the Miss T.E.E.N. Pageant by contributing at least 12 hours to some worthwhile charity or civic work.

Winner will receive a $500 cash scholarship and an expense-paid trip to compete in the Texas Miss T.E.E.N. Pageant. Judging will be based on scholastic and volunteer service achievement, appearance, poise, personality, speech or talent and formal presentation. No swimsuit competition is required. Contestants have the choice of presenting a speech or performing a talent on stage.

Miss Logsdon is sponsored by T-Bob Amthor Co. Her hobbies include skating, animals, modeling, reading and working with children.

Hotel accomodations chosen via television

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A new sales technique allows vacationers to choose resort and hotel accommodations in advance by watching a television preview in the travel agent's office.

Replace the elastic in a casing by first making an inch-long cut into the stitching that holds the casing in place. Use a new elastic that is the width of the old elastic and the length that you wish the band to be plus one inch. Pin a small safety pin to one end of the elastic and use it to thread the elastic through the casing. Hold or pin the other end of the elastic to keep it from slipping into the casing. When the elastic is threaded through the casing, overlap the ends ½ inch and securely sew them together by hand or by sewing machine. Let the elastic go into the casing and sew the opening closed.

'Organic garden of 1984' named

Hearst Feature Service

PLEASANT HILL, Calif. — Spring came early here this year, making champion gardener Russell Wold smile his warm smile, pick up his custom-made Japanese crescent spade and start digging.

Wold's entire suburban lot is one-third of an acre, including space for his home, a small front yard and a garden in back. From that terraced plot, Wold routinely takes carrots that weigh a pound and a half each, 235 tomatoes from one plant, and enough fruit and vegetables to supply his family for a year, with plenty left over to give to friends and sell to organic food stores.

He grows Kentucky wonder beans, fava beans (staple of the Roman army), beets, cauliflower, artichokes, spinach, broccoli, cabbage, onions, rhubarb, strawberries, raspberries, loganberries, pecans, walnuts, figs, persimmons, apricots, plums, nectarines, tangelos, cherries, and oranges bigger than softballs. He takes 268 pounds of kiwis off one vine, and his three beehives last year produced 41 pounds of honey.

"His garden is a very attractive, very soft, magical and unusual place to be," says Jack Ruttle, one of the judges who selected Wold from 650 entries as Organic Gardening Magazine's garden of the year for 1984.

WHEN RUTTLE came to check the garden first-hand, he was impressed by the green beauty of the baby tears that spill over the concrete terraces Wold built from scraps of torn-up sidewalk. He also was impressed by Wold's quiet generosity. Wold has learned many secrets over the years that he's glad to share.

Wold, 69, grew up on a farm in Minnesota. When his father took his three older brothers to help with the heavy work on the farm, Russell was left as a sort of crew chief for the garden, along with his two sisters and younger brother. After majoring in soils at the University of Minnesota, and taking a minor in chemistry, he became an agriculturalist, starting hundreds of victory gardens during World War II. Then he began his career by growing bananas in Hawaii. Even then, Wold was practicing his startling ways with produce: Many of his bananas weighed a pound apiece.

When he left Hawaii in 1960, Wold settled in Pleasant Hill, living in a rented house for six months, then moving to the property that was to become his masterpeice.

What they found in the back yard shook Wold and his wife: the soil was solid clay, good for adobe bricks and little else.

"When the clay was wet, it would suck your shoes off," Wold recalls. "It was so bad that my wife wanted to dig it up and haul it out of there, and I said 'wait a minute, I'm supposed to be a soils man.' "

WOLD'S SOLUTION was to go slow and easy and build the soil by not throwing anything away. And he composed a system that enriches soil nutrients while lightening the earth's texture through composting and organic gardening. Wold's system required far less labor than most compost heaps and produced compost in far less time. The secret was air.

Wold built two adjoining bins, four feet square with two slots in the front and back of each bin. He then began layering his compost: the first layer six to eight inches of ground-up tree prunings, dry leaves or vegetables; the second layer one half to one third the thickness of the first, of steer manure, green grass clipping and kitchen garbage; the third layer about two inches of soil.

The soil keeps the odor down — his neighbor's patio is close by and Wold hasn't had a complaint in 20 years. Standing immediately beside the bin, which Wold keeps covered, you can smell the scents of the garden, but nothing from the bin. The compost inside is covered by a discarded rug.

"If you can smell the compost, you're doing a stinking job," Wold says.

The revolutionary part of Wold's compost system is the slots in the bin. Using a half-inch drill bit, he drills holes six inches apart along a five foot 1-1/4 black polyethelene tube. The holes go all the way through the pipe. Then he turns the tube 90 degrees and, staggering the holes, repeats the process, so that the holes end up about three inches apart. Using the slots in the bin, he pushes the tubes through the trash level of the compost so that the tube protrudes a few inches from the rear of the bin.

THE EFFECT is that air is brought to all parts of the pile. The system prevents heat loss when the compost is turned over, as is normally done, and spares the gardner a good deal of labor. As the compost begins to "cook" in its own heat, the pile settles, but so do the ventilating pipes, dropping down the slots instead of breaking, as often happens with other pipe systems.

The compost will be ready in 45 to 60 days, its temperature dropping from 140 to 150 degree at its high point to around 100. An added bonus of the high temperature is that it sterilizes the compost, killing off bugs, fly, larvae or weed seeds that might cause problems.

Wold uses a system of trenches two feet wide and two feet deep to grow his summer vegetables. As he digs, he puts aside the top soil, saving the subsoil of the compost pile.

Weeds killed

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Spring is the best time of the year to apply weed killers.

Spectrum, a maker of lawn weed killer, says that early in the year weeds are visible and susceptible to weed killers because they are not yet well established with deep roots.

Hawaii abounds with unique styles, experiences

Copley News Service

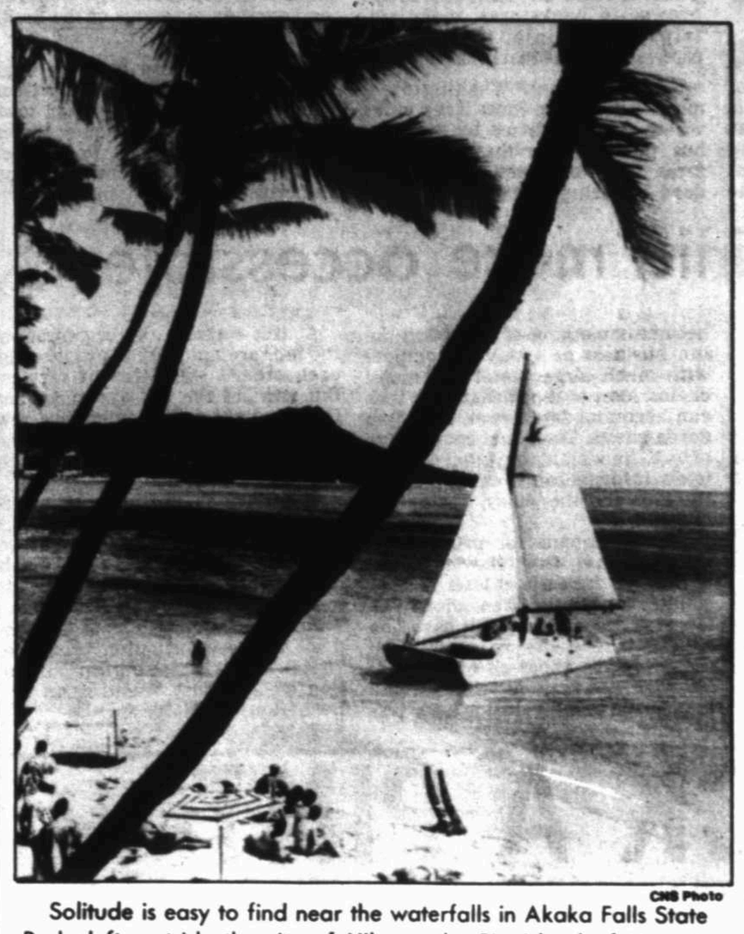
On mule-back down a steep mountain trail in Molokai. Riding 25-foot surf at Banzai Pipeline in Oahu. A day on your very own stretch of quiet Kauai shore accessible only by chopper. Hunting wild boar and other trophy animals around the mighty volcanoes of Hawaii. Driving on Maui's incredibly scenic and twisting little road to peaceful Hana for a peek at the gentle Hawaii of yore.

In short, Hawaii abounds with unique sights and experiences.

It also offers visitors a wealth of options. Among others: posh hotel suites and Spartan bungalows. Condos and tents. Rental cars and mopeds. Bikes and cruise liners. Jeeps and foot power. Hot Portuguese sausage and Maui onion salad. Japanese sushi and Korean kalbi ribs.

Following are highlights of the six major isles.

CNS Photo



CNS Photo

Solitude is easy to find near the waterfalls in Akaka Falls State Park, left, outside the city of Hilo on the Big Island of Hawaii. Swimming and sailing are enjoyed year-round at Waikiki Beach, right. Diamond Head is in the background.

LANAI

Definitely off the beaten path and, granted, not for everybody. Only 140 square miles in size and home to the world's largest pineapple plantation, some 15,000 acres of its land are planted with the fruit and, hence, its "Pineapple Island" nickname.

The nearly semicircular island lies a scant 60 miles southeast of Honolulu. Within a few minutes' drive of Lanai City, the island's hub, the bays of Holupoe and Manele have white-sand beaches perfect for picnics, swimming or boating.

MOLOKAI

Also rural and low key — but with at least a toehold on tourism; the "Friendly Isle" boasts the luxurious though low-rise Sheraton Molokai resort on quiet Kepuhi Beach. It also has several smaller hotels, inns and condos in and around Kaunakakai, the largest town of this island. Here you'll find the legendary Kanemitsu Bakery, whose bread and chocolate chip cookies rank as the best in the state.

KAUAI

A couple of impeccable little churches built in the 1800s and several picnic groves dot the coastal road leading to the island's lush eastern end and the Halawa Valley's magnificent Hipuapua Falls.

Lush emerald valleys and sparkling white beaches keynote this island which has served as the setting for "South Pacific" and other film classics. Extraordinarily scenic, the "Garden Isle" abounds in geologic surprises.

Among them, the massive 5,523-foot-high Mount Waialeale volcano around which enough rain falls every year to make it the wettest spot on Earth, and the 3-mile-deep and mile-wide Waimea Canyon whose features and changing colors prompted Mark Twain to dub it "The Little Grand Canyon of the Pacific."

MAUI

Most visitors, myself included, claim that the "Valley Isle" offers the best in scenery, accommodations, beaches, sports and just about anything else a vacationer may wish. The Hyatt Regency and Kaanapali Beach and the InterContinental on the shore at Wailea are but two of Maui's several world-class hotels.

HAWAII

They call it the "Big Island" and it is, about the size of Connecticut. Capt. Cook met his demise on these shores where orchid fields, coffee plantations, sandy beaches, lava wastelands and live volcanoes now draw golfers, hikers, hunters and even skiers — the latter usually heading for the slopes of 13,796-foot Mauna Kea during the winter months.

OAHU

Since Honolulu, Waikiki Beach and landmark Diamond Head are located here, this isle, aptly nicknamed "The Gathering Place," is better known than the others.

But there's a lot more to it just beyond the capital and its famous strip of shore. The mountainous interior is uncrowded, as are most of the 50 golden beaches that dot Oahu's 112-mile shoreline. Some of the world's finest surfing sites are located on the so-called North Shore.

Advanced planning ensures relaxing family trips

Copley News Service

Noted author and humorist Robert Benchley once remarked that there were two ways to travel: first class and with children. Benchley wrote during the '30s, of course, prior to the baby boom and long before the sight of tots in backpacks everywhere from supermarkets to ski slopes was commonplace.

Today's more casual lifestyle means lots of family travel, and a little advance planning can ensure a happy, relaxed experience for every member of the group. Call ahead to find out if specific assistance is available for parents traveling with children. Some airports have strollers, and many airlines allow for advance seating assignments, usually at the time of reservation. By advance arrangement some airlines even will provide infant formula, warm bottles and baby food. Check to see if trains or buses will provide infant seats.

It's also a good idea to find out what special accommodations are available at hotels or motels where you'll be staying. Some can provide baby-sitting and diaper services in addition to a crib.

Since children have short attention spans, variety is the name of the game when traveling. Try not to stay in the same position too long. If you're traveling by car, make occasional stops to give children a change of pace and a chance to exercise. Car bingo, license games and sing-alongs are favorite pastimes.

If traveling by plane, bus or train, take an occasional walk down the aisle.

A variety of activities also should be planned for the entire vacation to keep children interested.

Andy Daly, chief operating officer of Colorado's Copper Mountain Resort, which offers a wide range of outdoor activities to meet varied family interests, offers the following suggestions for planning a trip interesting and enjoyable for the entire family:

— Encourage youngsters to play an active role in shaping vacation plans. Look over brochures together and talk about some of the things you will do during the vacation.

— In addition to reading brochures about specific resorts, consult an area guidebook to learn about nearby attractions. For instance, you might spend a day rafting down a local river.

— Consider your child's special interest. If, for instance, you have a budding or would-be Andrea Jaeger or John McEnroe, select an area that offers plenty of courts as well as tennis instruction. Some resorts even have weeklong sports camps for juniors, as well as for adults.

— Take lots of snapshots and, if your child is old enough, provide him or her with a camera. Going back to school with photos of a special trip gives youngsters a great start for the year when it's time to "show and tell."

— Travel as lightly as you can. This benefits every member of the family since no one is faced with the job of toting heavy gear. Soft-sided luggage is lightweight and expands to accept clothes or gifts you buy along the way.

If your traveling companion is quite young, don't forget to pack that special teddy bear or blanket. A little security while away from home can make bedtime easier for you and your child.

Pre-trip planning prevents money worries

Copley News Service

Part of the adventure of foreign travel is having unexpected experiences, overcoming language barriers and figuring out local customs. But when it comes to managing your money on a foreign trip, you won't want any surprises or hassles.

A few simple precautions and some pre-trip planning, however, can save you from bad experiences and allow you more carefree sightseeing and shopping time.

Getting the best use of your money and protecting it will be your greatest concern. Leslie Deak, president of Deak-Perera, U.S., Inc., a foreign currency exchange and precious metals investment organization, says traveler's checks are a must. They are the safest form of currency for the traveler and can be exchanged as needed. However, getting traveler's checks in denominations of the currencies of the countries you plan to visit eliminates the fee that might be charged for cashing dollar-denominated traveler's checks.

If you take dollar-denominated traveler's checks, do not exchange them at hotels, restaurants and shops. Banks give the best exchange rates. Airports and railway stations also exchange currency at a good rate, but the lines usually are long and the office may be closed if you arrive at an off-hour, Deak says.

To avoid the inconvenience of having to exchange money as soon as you arrive in a new country, convert at least $200 into the foreign currency prior to your trip. Having money in advance also gives you time to become accustomed to a different currency.

Once you have exchanged your currency and finally are abroad, it's important to protect your funds, Deak warns.

"Americans traveling abroad are easily identifiable. Speech and dress are different, and tourists often have a less-self-confident look about them. For criminals, the American tourist is a 'mark.' While traveling, you should try to make yourself look as inconspicuous as possible. And that means not wearing expensive jewelry and flashing money around," Deak says.

Deak also gives these security tips:

— For traveler's check replacement in case of theft or loss, keep a list of the serial numbers in a separate location from the checks.

— When shopping, carry your purse or briefcase in the same hand as your parcels, with your purse or case and most valuable purchase close to your body.

— Don't keep all of your funds and important papers in one place. That way, if you are robbed, only a portion may be taken.

— Keep a record of your passport number in a separate and safe place, and, for further proof of nationality, bring along a copy of your birth certificate.

Ticket outlets promote camping

The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

Campsite reservations can be made through Ticketron outlets for eight national parks, including Virginia's Shenandoah National Park. The reservation fee is $3, and overnight charges are from $6 to $8 per campsite.

Other parks are Acadia in Maine; Cape Hatteras National Seashore in North Carolina; Great Smoky Mountains in North Carolina and Tennessee; Rocky Mountain in Colorado; and Sequoia, Kings Canyon and Yosemite in California.

Reservations will be accepted no earlier than eight weeks in advance. They must be made in person (not by phone) at Ticketron outlets or by writing the Ticketron Reservation Office, P.O. Box 2715, San Francisco, Calif. 94126.

Delightful D.C.: Capitol offers more than museums

By ANITA ISSEN MIZNER
Copley News Service

Arrive in Washington, D.C., during the week and instantly you're caught up in the frenetic goings-on of the government beehive. But visit on the weekend and you find yourself in a totally different environment.

Suddenly, there's serenity in the streets. Most of the district's working population has left the city for green-belt suburbia and Virginia exurbia. And Washington has reverted to the gracious, spacious metropolis Pierre-Charles L'Enfant envisioned when he drew up the Capitol's plans.

Living in New York as our family does, it's a pleasure to drive down to Washington for ad-lib weekends several times a year. It's a good way to unwind from a hectic routine. We visit and revisit the museums; stroll around different neighborhoods and poke around in unusual shops; browse in bookstores; make side trips to Virginia; try out new eateries; visit the markets.

Getting around Washington is much easier than most large cities, whether you sightsee by car, tour bus, public bus or the metro. Taxi fares, based on zones and not standard metering, are less expensive than elsewhere.

The capital is mind-boggling in the diversity of sight-seeing attractions highlighted by the White House, the Capitol, the National Cathedral, the Kennedy Center, the Library of Congress, presidential monuments, government buildings and the tree-lined Mall flanked by the wondrous and exciting museums of the Smithsonian Institute.

But Washington is more than museums and monuments: It's Georgetown with charming period town houses and trendy boutiques; Watergate with stylish shops; Rock Creek Park with a nature center and zoo, and cruises on the Potomac River.

Hotel weekend rates and packages costing about half of midweek rates make the capital even more attractive for seasonal weekend trips. It means we can stay in a choice hotel for about the same price as a just-plain-folk establishment.

A hotel that consistently fills the bill for us is the Vista International Hotel at 1400 M St. N.W. The Vista is built around an atrium which soars to a glass-covered roof. Architectural details and large, potted trees convey the look of an outdoor plaza. On the open mezzanine are a high circular bar and the hotel's two restaurants.

The luxurious guest rooms are equipped with refrigerator bars. Fitness-minded guests can enjoy the health club facilities.

Following are additional Washington attractions as well as where-to-eat suggestions:

— The Phillips Collection: a private art collection with many Impressionist works.

— Dumbarton Oaks: outstanding Byzantine through Pre-Columbian art, as well as later European and American works. Extensive formal gardens.

— Hillwood Museum: fabulous, 40-room former residence of Marjorie Meriweather Post near Rock Creek Park. Guided tours of the dazzling art and furnishings and the exotic gardens within the estate are a must. Make tour reservations at least a month in advance. Children under 12 are not admitted.

— Adams-Morgan, Washington's ethnic neighborhood: a Saturday market with non-pricey ethnic foods.

—The Pavilion: indoor shopping, browsing and snacking in the old post office on Pennsylvania Avenue.

You may obtain information about Washington from the Washington Convention and Visitors Bureau, 1575 Eye St. N.W., Suite 250, Washington, D.C. 20005. The AAA Mid-Atlantic Tourbook has detailed information, too.

Rural Virginia more accessible

The Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

The attractions of rural Virginia should become more accessible to travelers with the recent formation of an informal organization called Inns of the Shenandoah Valley.

Twelve independent inns, stretching from Middletown at the valley's northern end to Lexington in the south, have banded together to promote their establishments and the historic, scenic and recreational qualities of the valley and bordering mountains.

Such lodging associations have become something of a trend in the inn business as a way to compete with much larger hotel and motel chains. Most of the Shenandoah inns can accommodate fewer than two dozen guests. Their first cooperative effort, in which they share costs, is an information brochure about the inns and the valley, due out by mid-June.

What it means for prospective guests is that, first, they may discover that there are at least 12 good country inns in the Shenandoah Valley. And second, they will have one source where they can write to obtain details about all of them — although reservations will continue to be made at individual inns.

At this stage in the organization, the inns are not planning to monitor each other's standards of service. But none of the 12, says innkeeper Don Fredenburg of Lexington's new McCampbell Inn, "has any reservations about recommending each other."

The attraction of staying at inns is that they are small, so the service is attentive and personal. And the ambiance tends to be cozier, much more romantic for weekend getaways than a streamlined motel.

For a copy of the Inns of Shenandoah Valley information brochure, write: Historic Lexington Visitor Center, 107 East Washington St., Lexington, Va. 24450.

Diabetic drugs controversial

NEW YORK (AP) — After years of debate and delay, two controversial drugs for adult diabetics that have been sold in Europe for many years are becoming available in the United States.

The makers of the drugs are hailing them as an important advance. But some doctors disagree, and the U.S. Food and Drug Administration requires a warning that the drugs could cause heart attacks or strokes.

At issue is the health of some 10 million Americans with what's called Type II, or adult-onset, diabetes.

They make up what is now a $200 million market for diabetes drugs in the United States. Drug industry analysts say that market could double with the arrival of the new drugs and the marketing push behind them.

The drugs are called oral hypoglycemics, meaning they control blood sugar and can be taken by mouth, unlike insulin which must be injected.

The newest are referred to as second-generation drugs, to distinguish them from existing oral hypoglycemics.

The principal first-generation drugs are Tolinase and Orinase, made by Upjohn, and Diabinese, made by Pfizer. The new drugs are glipizide, marketed by Pfizer as Glucotrol, and glyburide, sold by Upjohn as Micronase and by Hoechst-Roussel as DiaBeta.

The strongest critic of the oral diabetes drugs has been the U.S. Food and Drug Administration which approved them at the beginning of May. The approval was delayed for years while the FDA wrangled with the drug companies over the wording of a warning label.

The link between the drugs and an increased likelihood of heart attack or stroke comes from a single large-scale study of the first generation diabetes drugs — the University Group Diabetes Program, or UGDP, study.

In that study, certain patients taking the drugs experienced heart problems. That was in the late 1960s, and the study has since been sharply criticized as badly designed, with no way to be sure the heart troubles were related to the drugs.

In addition, other studies failed to find the same risk.

When the possibility of a problem became apparent, the FDA moved to take the responsible drug off the market but was stopped by a court action initiated by doctors who wanted it for their patients, according to Dr. Robert Silverman, a diabetes expert at the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md.

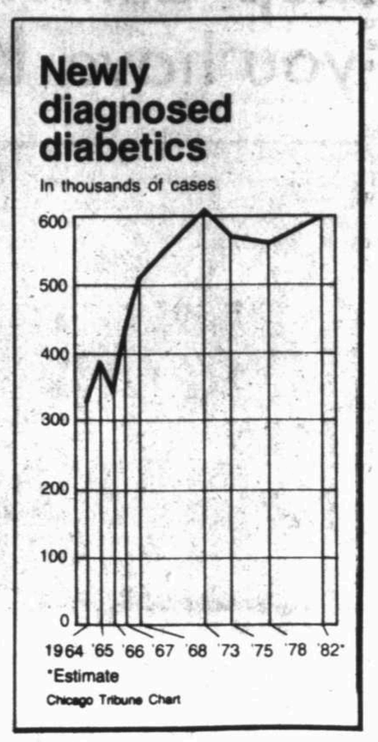
Nevertheless, the FDA is still concerned enough to require the new drugs to be sold with a warning saying they have been "associated with increased cardiovascular mortality as compared to treatment with diet alone or diet plus insulin," the standard alternative therapies.

Dr. Allan Drash, president of the American Diabetes Association, was quick to point out in a statement released May 10 that "a regimen of diet and exercise, with the goal of weight loss for obese patients, remains the treatment of choice for those with Type II diabetes."

As many as 70 percent of Type II diabetics are obese, Drash said in a subsequent interview.

Does he think drugs are being overused?

"There are probably a lot of people with diabetes in the United States who are on oral agents, who might be effectively treated with diet and exercise alone," he said. But the drugs do have their place, he added. If the patient is not going to adhere to a diet and exercise program "then the physician's got to go somewhere else."



Type II diabetes occurs most often in adults. Their production of insulin, which regulates blood sugar levels, drops.

The drugs seem to revive insulin production, at least temporarily, and to somehow make the rest of the body more responsive to insulin, doctors say. In some cases of Type II diabetes, insulin injections are prescribed.

Type I diabetes, which most often appears in children and is much less common, is caused by a complete loss of insulin production. Sufferers require insulin injections.

Nurses keep parents informed

BOSTON (AP) — Anxious parents waiting in the lobby of The Children's Hospital here are kept posted about the progress of their child's surgery through the Surgical Liaison Program.

"We deal with about 25 to 35 families a day," says Judie Surveyer, a registered nurse who has been the coordinator of the program since November. "Of those, a handful are at home, so we're talking to them over the phone. The rest are here in the hospital."

When the operation is over, the nurses accompany the parents to the recovery room, where they can also learn how long the recovery is expected to take and about post-operative care.

DEAR DOCTOR

Pregnancy can cause varicose veins

By JEANNE A. PETREK, M.D.

Q. What causes varicose veins and what are the chances I will get them during pregnancy?

A. All veins in the legs, as well as in the rest of the body, have valves that keep the blood flowing in one direction. They open to let blood through and then close to keep the blood from flowing back.

In order to force blood against gravity from the legs back into the heart, the muscles surrounding the veins squeeze it as the leg moves. This forces the blood upward from one valved area to the next.

Even standing still, the arteries continue to pump blood, causing the veins to stretch in response. In the absence of leg movement, blood returns to the heart, though not as easily as if it were being helped.

If for some reason the valve is damaged, it will not act as a one-way direction-keeper. The blood then moves upward to the heart, as well as downward with leg movement. Gravity tends to make it collect in the lower leg. The increased pressure causes stretched and bulging veins — varicose veins.

There are several reasons why a valve could fail to work as it should. Approximately 15 percent of varicose veins, particularly those that occur in young people, result from a congenital (present at birth) weakness. Direct damage to a leg valve from bumps, bruises or fractures may also result in varicosities.

During pregnancy, increased female hormones act upon blood vessels and weaken the vein walls. (For the same reason, many nonpregnant women with varicose veins feel increased leg discomfort premenstrually.)

In addition, the heavy uterus presses upon the veins in the pelvis and the increased pressure is transmitted down the leg. Phlebitis, or inflammation of a vein, usually due to a clot, will damage valve function. There are also unknown causes of varicose veins.

The varicose veins that appear in pregnancy often disappear afterward. If you have had previous symptoms of varicose veins or if they run in your family, several of these suggestions may help:

— Wear support stockings as soon as you know you are pregnant.

— Walk as much as possible to keep the leg muscles pumping blood through the valves.

— Avoid standing or kneeling in the same position for long periods.

— Avoid sitting for long periods unless feet and calves are propped up.

— Every hour, and even every 15 minutes if sitting, flex and extend your ankles several times.

Q. Is there a test that can be performed on human waste material to determine whether one has cancer of the large bowel? Where can I get one?

A. The test you are describing shows whether there is any unseen and/or unknown blood in the bowel movement. I specify "unseen" blood because, were the blood visible, one would not need a test to know it existed.

As little as one or two drops of blood distributed through the bowel movement will be detected by this test. In fact, the procedure is so sensitive that, before and during stool sample collection, patients are advised to avoid meat.

In addition, a high-roughage diet with added raw fruit and lightly cooked vegetables is recommended. Peanuts, popcorn, bran cereal and the like are also sources of undigestible roughage. The extra roughage should irritate any possible growth in the large bowel, while further stimulating any bleeding and making it easily visible on the test. Avoid horseradish and turnips, for the natural chemicals they contain interfere with the test.

The test has been made so convenient and private that no one should have serious objections to it. After following the simple dietary intructions for a single day, one merely gathers and applies a thin smear of the passed stool with a wooden stick to the inside of a cardboard container which looks much like a matchbook.

From another area of the stool, the same is repeated. The two applications are repeated from the next two bowel movements, which results in a total of six specimens. The closed containers are mailed back to the physician or the lab. A chemical developing agent is applied which reacts predictably with blood.

Blood can be present in the bowel movement for any number of reasons. In a few large studies, when unseen blood is found, it is due to cancer only 10 percent of the time. Blood can be due to duodenal ulcer disease, nosebleeding or rare meat, as well as growths in the large bowel.

Remember also that benign growths in the form of polyps are much more common than malignant growths or cancers for causing blood in the stool.

Small touches make the big difference in decorating. A room grows dull if it has no subtleties to be discovered as you live in it. Accessories-that just right lamp, the little table and, of course, the pictures on the walls - bring life into the big furnishings in the room. So do "intimate" objects that reveal the personalities of people who live amoung them. The little things that turn a room into a success are not always tangible objects. The way the plants are arranged, the pictures hung, the braid trim used. etc. In the weeks to follow, we hope to make you aware of the little subtleties that will enhance your home.

The staff at WINDOW DECOR welcomes you to our new weekly column. We believe that beautiful surroundings add so much to our enjoyment of life. Diet Pill Sweeping U.S.

New Grapefruit 'Super Pill' Gives Fast Weight Loss

No Dieting - Eat All You Want Pill Does All the Work

BEVERLY HILLS, CA. (Special) An amazing new "super" grapefruit pill has recently been developed and perfected that reportedly "guarantees" that you will easily lose at least 10 pounds in 10 days. Best of all, it allows you to "eat as much as you want of your favorite foods and still lose a pound a day or more starting from the very first day until you achieve the ideal weight and figure you desire."

This "super" grapefruit pill is a dramatically improved version of the world famous grapefruit diet. It is far more effective than the original and eliminates "the mess, fuss, and high cost of eating half a fresh grapefruit at every meal."

"Pill Does All the Work"

According to the manufacturer, "the pill itself does all the work while you quickly lose weight with NO starvation "diet menus" to follow, NO calorie counting, NO exercise, and NO hunger pangs." It is 100% safe. You simply take the pill with a glass of water before each meal and the amazing combination of powerful ingredients are so effective they take over and you start losing weight immediately.

Pill Has ALL Daily Vitamins

The powerful and unique combination of ingredients are what make this a "super-pill". It contains highly potent grapefruit concentrate and a diuretic to help eliminate bloat and puffiness. No need to take any vitamins to maintain your good health and energy. The pill is fortified with ALL (100%) of the U.S. Government daily vitamin requirements.

Contains Japanese 'Glucomannan'

Each pill also contains an amazingly effective amount of "glucomannan", the remarkable natural dietary fiber discovery from Japan (used successfully for over 1500 years) that expands in your stomach and gives you a full and satisfied feeling all day long.

The super-pill is already sweeping the country with glowing reports of easy and fast weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

Now Available to Public

You can order your supply of these highly successful "super" grapefruit pills (now available directly from the manufacturer by mail order only) by sending $12 for a 14-day supply (or $20 for a 30-day supply, or $35 for a 60-day supply) cash, check, or money order to: Citrus Industries, 9903 Santa Monica Bl., Dept. 841, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. (Unconditional money-back guarantee if not satisfied.) Visa, MasterCard, and Amer. E. J. Stevenson & Assoc. can save you money

E. J. Stevenson & Associates, Inc. is a highly specialized Midland-owned professional engineering firm providing consulting, design and constrution management services to the Permian Basin through one of its two diversified branches: the Urban Division and the Oil & Gas Division.

The recent recession in the oil and gas industry has openned a new window for our Oil and Gas Division.

Thus, E. J. Stevenson & Associates, Inc., Oil and Gas Division, was born of the obvious necessity to fill a void created in the vortex of the recent recession in those specific areas relating to oil and gas operations where civil and mechanical designs and construction management of oil and gas facilities are required. Our firm's goal is to provide professional engineering services which are efficient, economical and professionally competent to a broad range of Permian Basin clients that run the full course of the oil and gas industry.

Most major companies and large regional independents have found it more cost effective and efficient to bring in qualified consultants on an as needed basis. This is a trend that is significant and will not change in the future since the cost savings generally have been invested in greater exploration and development programs thus generating a greater return on their capital dollar spent. Similarly, the small local independent oil and gas companies have found the need to become effectively competetive, they must incorporate engineering and design technologies that until recently, were only available to larger companies who could afford to maintain a sizable "in-house" engineering department.

As a consulting engineering firm, we are an extension in the staff capabilities of our clients. We have become resident experts in the design and installation of secondary and enhanced oil recovery systems specifically oriented toward the requirements of the Permian Basin. We represent the conceptual designers and developers of some of the most revolutionary tools and systems to efficiently produce, process, and transmit our clients' oil and gas products.

Additionally, our "in-house" computer capabilities allow our engineers and managers to write programs to fit our clients unique requirements in design and analysis through our terminal packaged programs. In keeping abreast of the latest technology, we use an in-house CAD/CAE system based on the Hewlet-Packard 9836 computer with a full capability for producing 24" x 36" drawings and plots.

E. J. STEVENSON & ASSOCIATES, INC., IS NOT AN ENGINEERING AND CONSTRUCTION CORPORATION, NOR ARE WE A DESIGN—BUILD COMPANY..., WE ARE A PRIMARY CONSULTING AND ENGINEERING FIRM WHICH HAS THE CAPABILITY TO REPRESENT OUR CLIENT AS DESIGN ENGINEERS AND CONSTRUCTION MANAGERS DURING THE CONSTRUCTION—INSTALLATION PHASE OF ANY PROJECT.

Our designs follow applicable codes and specifications, such as ASME, ASCE, API, ANSI, AWS, ASTM, OSHA, NACE, and MSS. Disciplines include specifically, but not limited to:

- Civil (Construction & Installation)
- Mechanical (Equipment & Facilities)

The services of our firm are in accordance with the professional ethics and standards of the American Consulting Engineers Council. Normal and special engineering services, as required, are based on a per diem basis.

Major engineering design projects fees are based on a percentage of the actual construction and installation cost.

Troy Davis has one day disk developing

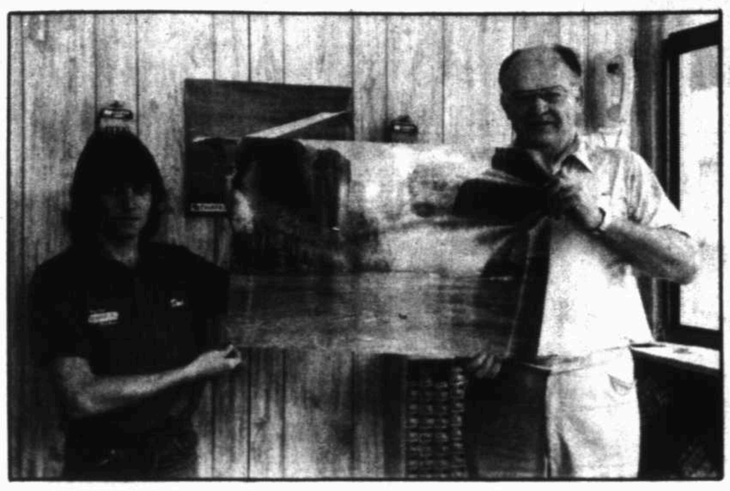
Troy Davis, owner of Troy Davis' Photo Service is pleased to announce the addition of a disk film developer to his business. Now instead of having to ship off your disk film, you will be able to take it to Mr. Davis and have it back the same day in some instances. If you have your disk in by 3 p.m. you can pick it up at 5 p.m. the same day. If you turn it in after 3 p.m. or drop it in the night drop box you can pick up your prints at 10 a.m. the next morning. NO more waiting to see those wonderful smiling faces from a birthday party or a gorgeous sunset, just take your disk to Davis. Davis' is the only developer in town that has the disk processor.

All other film can be processed in one hour. Troy has the most mini lab experience in town. Besides having the most modern equipment in Midland, Troy also uses only Kodak chemicals for the best picture possible.

Davis has also started a new photo contest. Once a month a winner will be chosen from the prints and negatives that have been entered. The prize will be a Kodak 20" x 30" poster print of your picture. The first winner was selected this month and was Ernest Showalter.

Stop by today and drop off that film that you have been meaning to have developed, especially if it is disk film. Troy David' Photo Service is a little hard to find but well worth the effort. He is located directly across the street from Gibson's. He shop is set back from the street beside the Vacuum Cleaner Shop. His phone number is 689-0761.

Remember, Davis' is open 6 days a week from 7:00 to 6:00.



David Vincent (L) and Troy Davis, owner of Troy Davis' Photo Service, are holding this month's winning photo. A photo contest will be held monthly. To enter just take in your best picture and negative. You could win a Kodak poster print.

John, owner of John's Hobby Shop, is ready to show you all of the unique hobby ideas his shop has to offer. John's has just recently opened so drop by the Dellwood Mall and say hi to John.

John's Hobby Shop is for kids of all ages

Next time you walk in to Dellwood Mall don't be suprised if you see a rather large "kid" playing with either a balsam wood airplane or a remote control car. More than likely that "kid" will be the owner of John's Hobby Shop. John likes to try out what he sells. You see the best way to familiarize yourself with something new in a hobby shop is to play with it.

Besides playing in the hallway, John runs a complete hobby shop. He carries almost any type of model that you could possibly be looking for. He has airplanes of all sizes, shapes and materials; as well as ships, trains, cars, motorcycles, model rocketry, model guns and much much more. He even has a Return of the Jedi Millennium Falcon.

John says that the best thing about his shop is that he has a considerable amount of expertise. He has worked everything that he has in the store. This expertise is helpful to many of John's customers. You see John would like to get children involved in modeling as a hobby because besides being fun it also teaches them patience, how to read and follow instructions, as well as the pride that comes from accomplishing a completed project.

For the airplane enthusiest, John carries a complete line of Squadron/Signal publications. These publicationa actually take you inside the plane they are discussing.

Most of the models that John carries are in kit form so that you would only need to purchase the kit and possibly a tube of glue. John would like you to be abl to walk out with everything that you need in one trip.

So next time you are looking for a model to build, remember John's Hobby Shop in Dellwood Mall. Also remember to look before entering the mall so as not to be ran over by a runaway car or plane.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Smoking lowers birthweights

Dear Dr. Solomon: You have written and I have also heard from other sources that women who smoke have smaller babies. But how do you know what kinds of babies these women would have had if they had not smoked? It seems to me that this would be the only basis for comparison. — Francine, Salt Lake City, Utah

Dear Francine: Your argument appears to have been answered by the results of a study reported by Robert L. Wainright, of the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor. The study compared birthweights of babies born to mothers who smoked during their first pregnancy but stopped before their second one, and another group of mothers who smoked during both of their pregnancies. The women who stopped smoking had larger babies the second time than did the women who continued to smoke.

It is possible, of course, that women who stopped smoking may have made other changes in their life-styles that may have accounted for some of the change in their babies' weights; however, it does seem that those who claim that smoking does not affect their babies are simply deluding themselves.

Dear Dr. Solomon: At 49 years of age I have gotten diabetes. I must say I was not too surprised because my mother and and older sister also have diabetes. My doctor has told me that I might not have to take insulin if only I can lose some weight. Does anyone have any idea what causes this type of diabetes? — Mr. R.L., Philadelphia, Pa.

Dear Mr. L.: Not too much is known about the specific cause of non-insulin-dependent diabetes. What is known is that women are affected more than men, the disease is frequently associated with obesity, and it generally occurs after age 40. There is also some evidence of a hereditary factor that plays a role in its development.

As you indicate in your letter and as I have seen in many of my own patients, adherence to an appropriate diet and maintaining an ideal weight may preclude the need for insulin.

Dear Dr. Solomon: With all the emphasis on conservation and the cost of fuel, I've been thinking of getting my house insulated. Is asbestos absolutely ruled out for health reasons, or is some asbestos still considered to be harmless? — Marvin, New London, Conn.

Dear Marvin: Asbestos poses the greatest risk of all insulating materials, and no level of exposure should be assumed to be completely without risk.

Mineral wools, which are manufactured from natural rock or mineral products, are considered the best materials to use from the standpoint of health hazards.

For Joan, Norfolk, Va.: When a physician asks you about drugs, he or she is not only referring to illicit drugs. I want to know everything a patient of mine is taking and that includes such products as vitamins, oral contraceptives, aspirin, nose drops and suppositories.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write Dr. Solomon at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208.

Repeating grade not always best

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Each year thousands of American children are kept back in school, usually for one of two reasons, says Dr. Ronald Schworm, assistant professor of pediatrics at the University of Rochester Medical Center: "Some do poorly in basic skills, and repeating may be good for them as well."

Schworm urges parents to have the school clarify why the child is being kept back. "If the child has a learning problem or difference, the repeated year will not accomplish anything," he says. "Parents must encourage the school to address the issue of a learning disability so that the right program is designed."

Assistance from local professionals and organizations is essential to bringing conventions to a city. Conventions: Midland's growing industry

Delegates bring $5 million per year into economy

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business-Oil Editor

If someone had told you that conventions were big business in Midland, you might have suggested that they had been meditating too long in the hot West Texas sun. And, you would have been wrong,of course.

It may not seem logical that isolated, hot, dry Midland could be going after major conventions–competing with cities like New Orleans, Dallas, San Antonio, Austin, Reno and Albuquerque for the highly lucrative meetings-- and getting them, but that is exactly what is happening.

One is not inclined to think of Midland as a convention town. It has no romantic, picturesque river walk, like San Antonio. Neither does it have a rowdy, colorful French Quarter (or World's Fair) as New Orleans. Nor does it have big town, downtown shopping like Dallas, Houston and other traditional convention cities. And, face it, we're not nestled by a blue lake in green rolling hills.

BUT ACCORDING to Nanci Mann, director of the Midland Convention & Visitors Bureau, conventions are expected to bring in well over $5 million in revenue this year.

Last year Midland was host to 62 conventions which brought 24,850 delegates who each spent approximately $80 per day, and stayed an average of 2.6 days. That resulted in revenues of $5,168,000 which was spent on transportation, food, lodging, entertainment and shopping in the tall city.

It happened without very much fanfare, but Midland really took off as a convention city in 1978, for that is the year Midland made its first jump in convention trade. It went from a mere 15 conventions, with 3,080 delegates and a revenue of $385,000 to 25 conventions, 5,135 delegates and $564.850 in revenue. The next year, 1979, convention business got into the big time as Midland took in its first million dollars in convention trade, Midland hosted 44 conventions with 10,488 delegates, each spending about $60 per day for a gross revenue of $1,522,497.

MIDLAND WAS on the climb, and in 1980 it hosted 60 conventions with 10,488 delegates, who stayed an average of 2.28 days and brought a revenue of $2,076,282 to the city.

Convention business took a decline in 1981 and 1982. Only 52 conventions were hosted in 1981, but revenues increased to $2,988,228 as the 16,455 delegates spent $80 per day. With eight less conventions, revenues still increased almost $1 million. The following year only two more conventions came to town, but they brought $3,388,440 in fresh dollars with them, which is normally turned over eight more times in the community before it passes on.

A good year is also expected this year.

WHAT IS the attraction that Midland offers to conventioneers?

Those who "hunt" conventions attribute excellent transportation, fine shopping centers, fine restaurants, a vibrant nightlife, top accomodations and great convention facilities as the Midland attributes

Please see CONVENTION, Page 5H

Rig counts continue upward trend

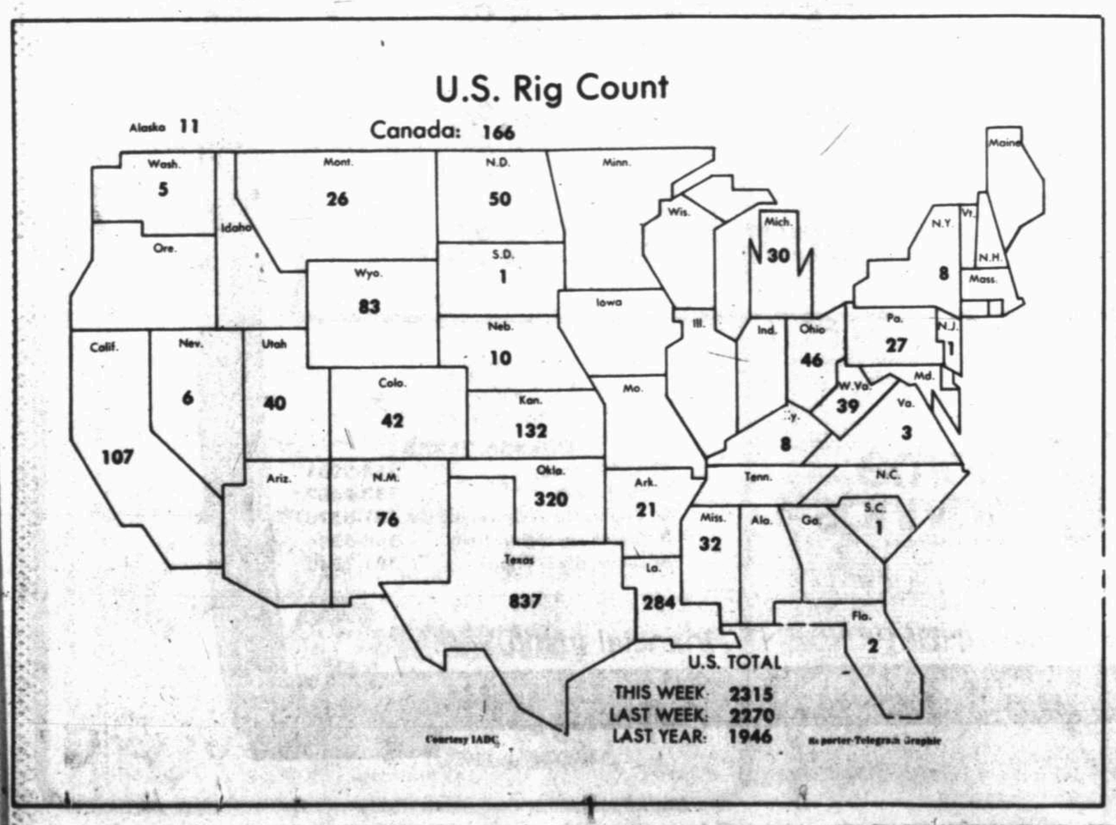
The Permian Basin rig count continued on an upward trend this week, as did the national.

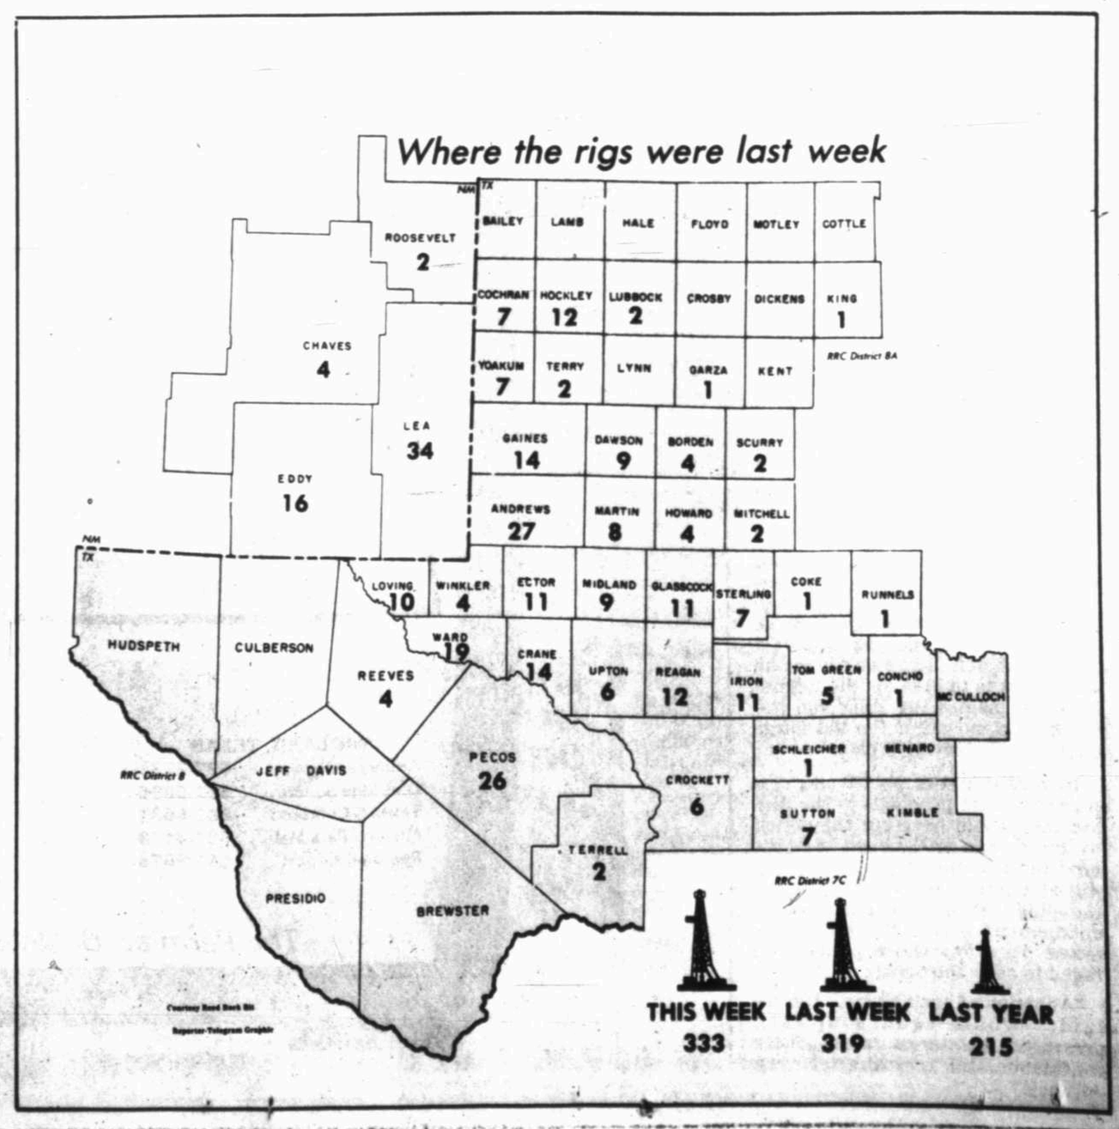
The Permian Basin count this week was 333, up from 319 last week, and 311 the week before that. Last year's dismal showing was only 215 rigs running in the Permian Basin.

Glasscock was a big loser this week dropping six rigs from last weeks count of 17. Andrews, Pecos, Gaines, Dawson, Martin, Midland, Ward, Crane, Reagan and Irion gained in the count. The big gainer was Ward County, picking up 9 rigs, possibly as a result of extensive drilling in the North Ward Estes field.

On the national count, Texas showed a slight increase as did most other producing regions. Wyoming picked up 10 and Kansas 15 to lead the domestic pack, while the Canadian count showed a substantial increase of 25.

The Alaskan rig count dropped four this week from last week's count of 15, as did Oklahoma who also dropped four.





OIL & GAS DIGEST

HNG Fossil Fuels reports completion

HOUSTON — HNG Fossil Fuels Co., a subsidiary of HNG Oil Co., has anounced the successful completion of a significant natural gas discovery offshore Nueces County, Texas.

The S.T. 773, Well No. 1 was completed flowing 5.31 million cubic feet of gas per day with 60 barrels of condensate on a 12/64 inch choke at 6475 psi. The producing interval is in the Upper Frio Formation from 9,508 feet to 9,526 feet, after reaching a total depth of 9,960 feet. The open flow potential of the well was calculated at approximately 76 million cubic feet of gas per day.

HNG Fossil Fuels is the operator of the well with a 24.3 percent working interest. The non-operating partners are Texaco U.S.A. with a 37.5 working interest, Prudential Drilling Co. of Houston with a 27.8 percent working interest and Reynolds Metals Co. of Richmond, Va., with a 10.4 percent working interest.

HNG Fossil Fuels holds a 1440 acre tract in the adjoining area.

Houston Natural Gas Corp. is an energy-related company involved primarily in the exploration and production of oil and natural gas and the transmission and sale of natural gas.

Firm acquires offshore royalty interest

FORT WORTH — International Royalty & Oil Co., of Cisco, Tex., has announced that it has acquired a royalty interest in the Sangomar offshore oil concession in Senegal, West Africa. Active seismic studies have been recently conducted on his concession and on the adjacent concession held by Marathon Oil (U.S. Steel subsidiary). Further seismic studies are planned in Senegal on the oil concessions to determine future drilling locations.

International Royalty & Oil Co. is holding royalty interests in approximately 75 million gross acres in Queensland, Australia where Esso (Exxon subsidiary) and Tenneco Oil of Australia are some of the large prospect holders.

Conoco announces wildcat completion

HOUSTON — Conoco Inc. has anounced its Louis Cook No. 2 exploratory well two miles south of Crockett, Tex., tested natural gas at 14.5 million cubic feet a day.

The discovery came from perforatons between 18,469 and 18,477 feet. Total depth of the well is 19,011 feet.

The discovery had a flowing tubing pressure of 8,300 psi through an 18/64 inch choke.

Further tests and additional drilling are planned to determine commercial significance of the discovery.

Conoco is operator with 39.06 percent. Partners are Placid Oil Co., 37.50 percent; Westland Oil Development Corp., 11.51 percent, Texaco Inc., 10.52 percent; Venture Resources 1982 L.P., .94 percent; and American Cometra, Inc., .47 percent.

The group controls some 12,000 acres on this feature.

Bovaird awaits cue for future service role

DALLAS — The full-service oilfield supply industry is awaiting its cue from the exploration-production segment for its service role of the future, W.J. Bovaird told a meeting of petroleum industry equipment buyers recently.

Bovaird, fourth generation head of The Bovaird Supply Co., based in Tulsa, said his company is spending over one million dollars monthly on supply stores serving the oil and natural gas industry.

"Our company, to be 113 years old this summer, is dedicated to the health of the oil industry through serving its specialized needs," Bovaird said. "How much are you willing to pay for this service in the future."

Bovaird referred to the oilfield supply industry as one of companies "awash in red ink," and that Bovaird Supply, experienced at surviving, has begun to break even which is unique among the firm's peers.

He stated that the worst of the current economic crisis is past and it is time for rational thinking by the survivors and for reconciliation and communication for a better tomorrow.

Bovaird Supply is the oldest and largest independent oilfield supply firm in th United States, with 50 stores, sales offices and equipment storage centers in ten states.

Judge denies motion for injunction

NEW ORLEANS — The U.S. District Court for the Northern District of California has denied a motion for preliminary injunction in the case styled William M. Brinton, et al vs Hilliard Oil & Gas, Inc. et al. The suit, which was filed on April 30 and described in Hilliard's supplement to the Offer to Purchase, alleged, among other things, that Hilliard had given offerees inadequate time in which to consider the offer, misrepresented hilliard's rights, duties and powers, and that Hilliard had provided insufficient information and otherwise violated federal securities and state laws.

Although Hilliard does not concur with the Court's interpretation, the court found, for purposes of te hearing on preliminary injunction only and without prejudice, that the provisions of the Partnership Agreement for the 1970 Partnership do not give Hilliard the right to withdraw as General Partner.

High interest may send economy on rollercoaster

WASHINGTON — Rising interest rates, pushed up by record high federal deficits and a more restrictive monetary policy, treaten to send the economy on another rollercoaster ride, slowing housing construction in the second half of 1984 as well as the pace of the overall recovery, the National Association of Home Builders warned recently.

NAHB President Pete Herder blamed the most recent round of increases in interest rates on a "mismatch of economic policies" being pursued by Congress, the Administration and the Federal Reserve Board. In the past two months, the prime rate has risen from 11 percent to 12-1/2 percent and fixed rate mortgage loans have moved up a full percentage point to around 14 percent.

"On one hand we are running up deficits at a rate of $200 billion year after year," Herder said. "On the other, the Federal Reserve is committed to a more restrictive monetary policy that is bound to slow the pace of the recovery. Caught in between these two diametrically opposed policies are investors, businessmen and consumers who invest or borrow capital to compete in the marketplace and who, in the final analysis, represent the heartbeat of the economic recovery."

To avoid further increases in interest rates, Herder said, Congress should enact and send to the President within the next 30 days its budget plan for fiscal 1985 that would cut the deficit in the $150 billion to $200 billion range over the next three years. In addition, Herder cautioned the Federal Reserve Board against overreacting, noting that the FED has slowed the economy too abruptly in the past, sending the economy into a tailspin that, once started, is extremely difficult to reverse.

The business community and financial markets are looking desperately for leadership in Washington, Herder said. "But what we're getting is a lot of inaction. The FED blames the deficit and says it has no choice but to tighten up; the Administration blames the FED; and the Congress is moving in fits and spurts on its deficit reduction plan."

In recent weeks NAHB has supported several proposals in the Senate that would have cut the deficit by more than $200 billion over the next three years by freezing spending at current levels, delaying or reducing cost of living increases for entitlement programs and raising taxes. Thus far these plans have failed to clear the Senate.

"Adoption of such a plan," Herder said, "would reduce upward pressures on interest rates, bolster confidence and keep the recovery on track."

Required coverage blamed for high rates

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

Rising costs of health insurance are causing businesses — particularly small ones — to self-insure, increase deductibles, or reduce or eliminate coverages, insurance industry officials report.

Those officials also blame mandated coverages as contributing to the problem, and say they'd like to see the state eliminate such required provisions.

Austin attorney Will Davis, representing the Texas Legal Reserve Officials Association, told the House Insurance Committee Subcommittee on Madated Coverages he'd like to see the Legislature abolish mandated coverages.

Allow the question of what sould be covered to be settled in the marketplace, in negotiations between the buyer and seller, Davis argued.

"The Legislature," Davis said, "should not write insurance contracts."

Davis repoted many businesses, faced with the increasing cost of insurance, have decided to self-insure, if they're large enough.

State Board of Insurance officials report no figures are available on Texas businesses which have moved to self-insurance for health care, but a spokesman reports that "our perception is that the number is growing."

Davis and other industry officials see mandated coverages as a factor in the increased cost of health insurance, and for the move by employers away from group insurance plans.

Woodrow Eno, Chicago, representing the Health Insurance Association of America, said the increased cost in health insurance in recent years has raised fears that "small employers will abandon health insurane."

As a result, he said, many employees will "go naked" — without any insurance — and end up as charity cases, bad debts and an "aggravation to the system."

A number of groups attempted during the 1983 Legislature to have specific services (such as coverage for speech disorders) made mandatory coverages.

Supporters of some coverages have argued that treatment is being provided but that the disease or disordered covered are being treated at hospitals, or described as something else, to assure payment.

The House subcommittee will report back its conclusions to the full panel, with any recommendations to go to the 1985 Legislature for consideration. The subcommittee may meet again this summer.

Department of Water Resources and Texas Department of Health are working to obtain final authorization from the Environmental Protection Agency for Texas to administer a hazardous waste management program under the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act.

Texas received interim delegation from EPA but that authority is to expire Jan. 26, 1985.

A public hearing on the request for final authorities, Ken Kramer, Austin legislative director for the Lone Star Chapter, Sierra Club, called for citizen participation in State agency policy-making, as well as in the permitting and enforcement process.

Kramer called for establishing an advisory committee to consult with the State agencies on a regular basis.

"Not all (our) concerns are necessarily negative," Kramer commented.

He urged that the program take into account division of jurisdiction between the agencies, along with recycling and reuse of wastes, assessing hazardous waste management needs, sitting of facilities, transportation and related matters.

DWR reports some 600 existing industrial hazardous waste facilities are expected to be permitted under the program once it is operational.

Texas Credit Union Commissioner John (Pete) Parsons reports the Texas Credit Union Department has received two applications from credit unions chartered by other states to establish branch offices in Texas.

Motorola Employees Credit Union West, Scottsdale, Ariz., is seeking a branch at its Austin plant — while Anheuser-Busch Employees Credit Union, St. Louis, is seeking a branch in Dallas for employees of its subsidiary, Campbell-Taggert, Inc.

Parsons reports eight credit unions in seven states have inquired regarding branch offices, and some may be operating by the end of the year.

He notes that some Federal credit unions have branches operating in Texas, but the new applications (if approved) would be first involving credit unions charteed by other states.

The Texas Credit Union Commission is looking at the issue of providing share guaranty insurance under the State-sponsored program for such out-of-state branches.

Texaco shareholders approve two changes in bylaws

DALLAS (AP) — Shareholders of Texaco Inc., responding to the recent flurry of major takeovers in the oil industry, today approved two changes in the company's bylaws designed to make it a less desirable takeover target, Chairman John K. McKinley said.

The shareholders approved a provision to stagger terms of directors and to implement a "fair price amendment" that requires any suitor to pay the same price to all shareholders.

The changes follow Texaco's takeover of Getty Oil and the company's $1.3 billion buyout of the Bass family of Fort Worth, which accumulated holdings of 25.6 million shares, or 9.9 percent, and was rumored to be mounting a takeover effort.

McKinley also told shareholders that his company's acquisition of Getty Oil will have a "minimal" effect on Texaco's earnings this year, and said Texaco will step up its exploration in foreign countries.

McKinley, addressing what company officials say is the largest shareholders' annual meeting in Texaco history, also said the company has $1.6 billion in agreements to sell Getty properties, including ESPN, a cable television sports network, Employers Reinsurance Corp. and shares in a Japanese refining and marketing company.

Federal Trade Commission approval of the Getty merger, the largest in U.S. history at the time, should be granted this summer.

Without reducing its U.S. efforts, McKinley said Texaco is accelerating exploration in China.

BOTTOM LINES

McCORMICK OIL & GAS PARTNERSHIP

McCormick Oil & Gas Partnership has reported its unaudited results for the two months ended March 31, 1984, the initial financial reporting period for the Partnership. Effective January 31, 1984, substantially all of the assets and liabilities of McCormick Oil & Gas Co. were transferred to the Partnership.

Revenues during the two months were $6,148,000. For the two months ended March 31, 1984, net income was $1,626,000 or approximately 17 cents per unit, and funds provided by operations for the Partnership were $3,456,000 or 36 cents per unit.

NATURA ENERGY

Natura Energy Corp. has announced a substantial increase in revenues and a net profit for its first quarter ended March 31, 1984.

Larry A. Stapp, president, said that the company reported first-quarter net income of $379,000, or $.01 per share, an operating revenue of $553,000, compared with a net loss of $94,000, or a negligible per share figure, on operating revenues of $122,000 last year He said that the large increase in revenues was the result of a $442,000 gain on the sale of the company's East Texas propoect in March. The sale of the prospect was also the primary reason for an increase of $467,000 in working capital during the first quarter.

In addition, Stapp reported that during the first quarter the company purchased an additional 17 percent working interest in the company-operated State of Texas No. 1 well in Fayette County, Texas. The additional interrest is anticipated to add 6,800 barrels of oil and 115 million cubic feet of gas to the company's oil and gas reserve.

CALVIN EXPLORATION INC.

Calvin Exploration, Inc. has reported anet loss of $603,000, or $.11 per share, on revenues of $245,000 for the six months ended March 31, 1984. This compares with a net loss of $596,000, or $.11 per share, on revenues of $309,000 for the comparable priod of the prior year.

For the second quarter ended March 31, 1984, the company reported a net loss of $450,000, or $.08 per share, on revenues of $141,000. In the second quarter of the prior year, the company reported a net loss of $308,500, or $.06 per share, on revenues of $144,000.

TACO VILLA

Taco Villa, Inc., the Midland-Odessa based Mexican style family restaurant chain has announced results for the 16 weeks ended April 18, 1984.

Revenues for the 16 weeks were $8,143,224, up 11 percent from the $7,334,629 registered last year. Historical net income for the period was $384,539, or $.10 per share, up 15 percent from the $334,983 earned over the same period last year.

The company attributes the significant increase in sales to a strong growth in customer traffic within existing stores as well as the addition of two stores over the same period a year ago.

The company currently operates 43 company-owned restaurants with four others oprating as franchisees. The company's recently announced franchising program is progressing on schedule and plans for an additional 10 company stores to be opened during the remainder of the year are progressing as planned.

WAINOCO OIL CORP.

Wainoco Oil Corp. reported net income of $769,000 or $.07 per share for the quarter ended March 31, 1984. During the same period in 1983 the company had net income of $1.1 million or $.10 per share. The variance in net income between the periods was due substantially to a $618,000 increase in the provision for income taxes. Pretax income of $1.8 million was 23 percent higher than that of the same period of 1983. Revenues were $12.9 million for the quarter, and were approximately equal to revenues reported during the same period of 1983.

Funds provided by operations were $6.0 million, or 4 percent below the $6.3 million reported during the same period in 1983. Funds provided by operations per share were $.55 compared to $.59 per share in the first quarter of 1983.

The company also reported that at March 31, 1984 it had a current ratio of 1.5 to 1 and that long-term debt had declined by an additional $6.4 million since year end.

REPUBLICBANK CORP.

RepublicBank Corp. has declared regular quarterly dividends of 41 cents per common share and 53.125 cents per share of convertible preferred stock.

Dividends on the common and convertible preferred stock are payable July 2, 1984, to shareholders of record at the close of business on June 11, 1984.

As of March 31, 1984, RPT reported total assets of $19.4 billion and deposits of $13.8 billion.

UNITED ENERGY RESOURCES

The board of directors of United Energy Resources Inc. declared a quarterly dividend of 62 cents per share payable July 2, 1984 to holders of common stock of record on June 8, 1984.

"I really feel safe with this bond trust. It's insured, "AAA" rated, and tax-free."
Announcing Paine Webber's Municipal Bond Trust, Insured Series 6.
If you want a high degree of safety, this is the municipal bond trust fund for you. It's rated "AAA" by Standard & Poor's Corporation and the bonds are insured until maturity against default. This insurance, provided by an independent company, Financial Guaranty Insurance Company, provides ongoing protection of your money from credit risk by guaranteeing timely payment of principal and interest on the bonds.
10.04%*
And don't forget this is a tax-free investment. If you're in a high tax bracket, that means a lot. It only takes about $1,000 to buy a unit in the Trust, and when you decide to cash in your units, you'll get prompt payment without a fee or interest penalty at the prevailing market value, which may be more or less than you originally paid. And Paine Webber's Municipal Bond Trust, Insured Series 6 offers you a choice of monthly or semi-annual payments.
If this insured, tax-free investment appeals to you, call us or send the coupon to get more details. We believe it is the perfect opportunity for you to discover why so many investors are saying, "Thank you, Paine Webber."
*This current return represents the net annual interest income payable semiannually, after estimated annual expenses, divided by the public offering price on May 22, 1984, the day prior to the date of deposit. It varies with changes in either amount.

House, Senate have different ideas on how to liberalize IRA accounts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House and Senate agree on the need to liberalize Individual Retirement Accounts, but their ideas for doing it are far apart.

The catchall tax-increase bill passed by the Senate in an effort to reduce the federal deficit includes President Reagan's plan that, where IRAs are concerned, would put a one-earner couple on the same footing as a two-earner couple. The House-passed bill would permit a person to contribute an extra $1,750 a year to an IRA — but that deposit would not be tax-deferred.

Present law permits a worker to set aside up to $2,000 a year in an IRA; neither the deposit nor the interest is taxed until withdrawn after age 59½. If the spouse has no job outside the home, the couple may split $2,250 a year in separate IRAs, as long as neither exceeds $2,000.

Nearly 12 million couples and individuals claimed IRA contributions exceeding $28 billion on tax returns they filed last year.

The Senate reasoned that an unemployed spouse with no earnings has the same need to save for retirement as does one that has a job. It agreed to permit a two-earner couple to deduct up to $2,750 a year starting in 1985, rising gradually to $4,000 in 1991. All the contributions would be tax-deferred.

The House bill would let a single person or couple deposit an additional $1,750 a year in an IRA, starting in 1984, although that would be money on which taxes already have been paid. As under present law, interest from the addition would not be taxed until withdrawn. The extra $1,750 could be claimed entirely by either spouse or divided in whatever way they choose.

The House bill, written by Rep. Henson Moore, R-La., would produce considerably more complexity, because of the need to segregate taxed and untaxed contributions. On the other hand, the Senate bill is more expensive, costing $2.3 billion through 1989 compared with $1.2 billion for the House plan.

Michael P. Pavlic of Pennsylvania, an ordained Roman Catholic priest who has never had a congregation, failed to file a tax return for the years 1975 through 1979 on grounds that federal money was being used to pay for abortions. To avoid withholding, he filed false W-4 forms claiming excessive withholding allowances.

The Tax Court did not doubt his sincerity but refused to ignore the false W-4 forms, a federal crime. The IRS' assessment of $18,613 in back taxes and addition of a 50 percent penalty for fraud were upheld.

Judge Meade Whitaker, who decided the case, refused to disclose Pavlic's hometown. His secretary said the judge feared Pavlic might be harassed.

Kermit Jones of Florence, Miss., was a loading supervisor for Magna Corp. when he was fired in 1978 on charges of trying to steal $525 worth of steel rods from the firm. According to Tax Court records, the company agreed not to file a civil suit against him if he would plead guilty to a larceny charge and forfeit the $12,260 that he had accrued in Magna's profit-sharing plan.

Jones was fined $100 and put on probation for five years. His troubles weren't over though; the IRS said he would have to count the money as income. The Tax Court held the IRS was correct because Jones had a clear right to the money and bargained it away to avoid being sued.

If you claim deductions for expenses of running a business, the IRS will try to decide whether you were motivated by profit potential or simply writing off a hobby.

A.E. Boddy of Woodstock, Ga., a physician, bred Arabian horses on the side but failed to make a profit in any year from 1963 through 1980. Why, he was asked, did he want a farm?

Boddy replied, "Well, you get the boy out of the city, but you can't get the farm out of the boy, and I always wanted to be a country doctor and own my own farm, and I've been fortunate enough to be able to do both."

Domestic new car quality increases

A dramatic increase in domestic car quality has been detected by a leading indicator of new-car buyer satisfaction.

The Owners Reprots, published by Popular Mechanics, regularly survey 1000 owners of a new car. In it the new-car buyers are asked to rank the workmanship of their cars as excellent, good, average or poor.

Of the 11 domestic cars surveyed in 1979, 19.7 percent of the respondents rated workmanship excellent, while 7.8 percent rated it poor. For the 11 cars rated in 1983, responses of excellent were up to 39.7 prcent, while only 4.5 percent of buyers rated the workmanship of their cars as poor.

Two domestic products underline the improvement. In 1979, the Ford Pinto drew the worst responses of all cars surveyed, with only 11.7 percent of respondents rating their cars excellent, and an equal number checking poor. But for 1983, the Ford Thunderbird drew the best response of all domestic cars rated that year. A total of 61.2 percent of the Thunderbird owners rated the workmanship in their cars as excellent, and only 0.6 percent chose poor.

Enstar major shareholder refuses buy offer

HOUSTON (AP) — Enstar Corp.'s second-largest shareholder says a tender offer to buy half of the company's stock is too low and contains too many unexplained terms.

Unimar Co., a general partnership of subsidiaries of Allied Corp. and Ultramar P.L.C., on Wednesday made an $18 a share tender offer for 14.3 million share of Enstar stock, just over half of the common and common equavalent shares.

Enstar also has convertible perferred stock and convertible debentures that, if exercised, bring to 26.3 million the total number of common and common equivalent shares outstanding.

But Thomas C. Thompson, who holds about 1.2 million shares or 6.5 percent of Enstar common stock, said in a prepared statement Thursday that there are "a number of problems" with the offer.

"It is complicated, difficult to understand and gives several options regarding payment to Unimar, but few if any to the Enstar stockholders. The only thing that is certain about this offer, in our opinion, is that it is too low," Thompson said.

He is chairman of Thomas C. Thompson International, a Houston-based company with interests in oil and gas exploration, oil refining and marketing and aviation.

Thompson's investment banker, Ed Wells of Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. in New York, said Thursday that Thompson's statements did not mean he supports Houston oilman and Enstar director Roy M. Huffington, who is trying to gain control of Enstar through a proxy fight.

Huffington is the largest shareholder in Enstar, owning 6.9 percent of common stock and 10.7 percent of the convertible preferred stock. His company, Roy Huffington Inc., is the operator of a liquified natural gas venture in Indonesia in which Enstar and the Allied and Ultramar subsidiaries are partners.

On Wednesday, Huffington rejected the Unimar offer as a "bargain basement sale."

However, Wells said, Huffington and Thompson share the same opinion about the value of the offer.

Wells described as nonsense recent remarks by Enstar Chairman O. Charles Honig that the tender offer was an opportunity for shareholders to maximize the value of their stock.

At a meeting in March, Honig placed the company's value at $22 to $24 a share, Wells said.

Thompson has not decided how he will vote his shares, Wells said.

"We will make a decision before the annual meeting on June 21 and when we do we will make it public," he said.

In addition to the value of the offer, Wells said, Thompson questions the timing.

"What troubles us about this whole thing is that we find it very strange that magically at the last minute a tender offer appears from those buyers that happen to be joint venture partners of Huffington, an offer that will expire the day before the annual meeting.

Enstar is traded on the New York Stock Exchange and closed unchanged Thursday at 17¼.

$60 million in FHA loans sold

NEW YORK — Richard T. Pratt, president of Merrill Lynch Mortgage Capital Inc., announced the sale of a total $60 million package of Federal Housing Authority Title I loans. The sale was made by Briercroft Savings Association headquartered in Lubbock, to Goldome, based in Buffalo, N.Y.

"We believe that this is one of the largest sales of FHA Title I loans in the history of the thrift industry," said Pratt. He also stated that Merrill Lynch Capital Markets, of which MLMCI is a unit, was responsible for arranging the sale.

Goldome, with assets of $11.5 billion, is the largest mutual savings bank in the U.S. It operates 125 bank branches throughout New York State and Florida. More than 30 subsidiaries conduct business coast to coast.

Briercroft Savings a $700 million savings institution with 16 offices throughout the West Texas region, generated the loan package through its wholly-owned subsidiary, Briercroft Service Corp. with offices in Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana, Tennessee and an upcoming branch in South Caroline.

CONVENTIONS

that impress conventioneers. Other things that impress them are extraordinary museums, four golf courses, tennis and the Midland Cubs.

"But probably the best thing we have to sell is no hassle,"explained Wesley Miller, director of marketing for the Midland Hilton, who pointed out that Midland was only 10 minutes from the airport, with good transportation to and from the airport, and no traffic jams to contend with. He also pointed out that getting into Midland by air was easier than many of the major cities.

According to Texas Business magazine that assessment is no exaggeration. Midland is ranked by the publication as the sixth busiest airport in the state, outranked only by the combined airports DFW-Love field in Dallas, the combined airports of Houston, followed by San Antonio, Austin and El Paso.

Midland has direct flights to Denver, Dallas, Houston, Austin, El Paso and Albuquerque, and connecting flights to everywhere.

APPARENTLY ONE of the things conventioneers dislike most is the nightmare of getting into and out of some airports, and the accompanying dread of getting from the airport to a hotel, according to Hilton Sales Represenative, Deborah Maroney.

"They also don't like competing with other conventions and the inconvenience of getting across a busy city from a hotel to a convention facility," said Ms Maroney.

She stated that some hotels will accept a number of conventions at the same time, making it sometimes a nerve rattling experience to do such simple things as make a phone call, get a taxi, and be able to eat without standing in a line.

"At the Midland Hilton, we will only take one convention at a time," she affirmed.

THE HILTON, the Holiday Inns, and the Convention & Visitors Bureau of the Midland Chamber of Commerce are the heavyweights in attracting conventions to Midland.

Of the 36 conventions scheduled so far this year, Holiday Inn hosted 20, and the Hilton 13. Ramada Inn, Executel, and Midland Center were host for one each.

The Midland Holiday Inn Villa will be host this year for the Women's Softball League, an event that will bring 45 teams and thousands from all across America into Midland over the Labor Day weekend. The Hilton on the other hand is out to nab the Future Farmers of America, which will bring another 5,000 delegates to the community in 1987.

The recent construction of newer motels has been a plus to attracting conventions, and to keep pace the Hilton has announced a $1.2 rennovation to give its facilities a contemporary look.

DELEGATIONS BOTH large and small are eagerly sought by the convention hunters because even a small convention brings new revenue into the community. A small delegation of only 175 will spend approximately $2,000 per day on food, $6,000 per day on room revenues and $1,500 for hospitalities.

Groups already coming or thinking about coming to Midland for convention include, to name a few: Republican Women of Texas, 1,000 members; Daughters of the Republic of Texas, 300; Texas Society of Medical Technicians, 1,500; Texas Fire Chiefs Association, 300, and even a meeting of magicians, which recently met at the Executel.

If credit is due in the growth of this new industry, it is probably due to the aggressive sales staff of the Midland hotels and motels and the Chamber of Commerce, Convention & Visitors Bureau, who are reported to "haunt" those voting on a convention site in a technique they refer to as "intensive solicitation." It calls for enduring such chores as early morning breakfast meetings, attendance at every technical and business meeting of the group, long luncheon speeches, more meetings and greetings, longer banquet speeches, and helping close hospitality bars.

"Everytime they turn around Nanci Mann and I are there, and we're telling them to come to Midland," said Deborah Maroney.

Every day in this country 60 kids disappear.

Some run away. But others are kidnapped by strangers, or even by people they know.

Don't let your child be one of them. Teach your children:
- Not to accept rides or money from anyone without your permission.
- To tell a policeman if someone makes them feel scared.
- To walk with friends to school, parks, and home.

And teach 'em today. Because for a child who doesn't know the rules, no neighborhood is safe. Not even yours. To find out more, write me, McGruff the Crime Dog, at Crime Prevention Coalition, Dept. A, Box 6600, Rockville, Md. 20850. And find out how you can...

Pipeline company wants to sell Canadian gas to eastern states

LOMBARD, Ill. — MidCon Corp. has announced that its largest interstate gas transmission subsidiary, Natural Gas Pipeline Co. of America has filed an application with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) to move major volumes of gas produced in the Canadian province of Alberta to markets in the eastern United States. The project, knows as the "MIDCONtinental Transportaion System", is a competitive alternative to a proposed west-to-east pipeline recently announced and filed with the FERC by Northern Natural Gas Co. and ANR Pipeline Co.

In making the anouncement, William C. Terpstra, president of Natural said, "The system we are proposing will move gas at a lower cost and it will make more efficient use of pipelines already in service. In addition, anticipating an end to the uniform border pricing policy of the Canadian government, the MIDCONtinental Transportaion System will be very cost-effective."

Under Natural's plan, gas would move from Canada through the Northern Border Pipeline which runs from Monchy, Saskatchewan, to Ventura, Iowa. Natural would build a new 146-mile line from Ventura to its existing pipeline at Harper, Iowa.

Canadian gas owned by pipelines serving the U.S. East Coast would flow from Northern Border into Natural's system eastward to Natural's markets. Gas supplies originating at the southern end of Natural's line would be diverted to pipelines serving Eastern markets. The transfer would be made in the Gulf Coast area, where these transmission firms have facilities adjacent to Natural.

This application includes facilities in Oklahoma and Texas that will connect Natural's two existing pipeline systems.

Republic Steel gets big first quarter loss

CLEVELAND (AP) — Severe weather and lack of tax credits dealt a first-quarter 1984 loss of $36.7 million, or $2.15 a share, to Republic Steel Corp., officials say.

"Naturally, we are not happy about the continued losses," said E.B. Jones, chairman and chief executive of the Cleveland-based Republic Steel, which plans to merge with LTV Corp.

The company's reported first-quarter loss in 1983 was $34.4 million, or $2.24 a share. Republic Steel had a 1983 net loss of $211 million, $11.98 a share.

"There are several factors in this year's picture that are worthy of note. First, unlike 1983, significant tax credits were not available in the 1984 quarter to temper our losses," Jones said Tuesday.

He said unusually severe weather conditions also hampered company operations in January.

New non-union airline planned

By the Los Angeles Times, Washington Post News Service

Transamerica Corp. said Monday that it is forming a new non-union charter airline that may compete for business against the company's existing unionized unit, Oakland, Calif.-based Transamerica Airlines.

Separately, Transamerica reported that it earned $61.7 million on revenues of $1.2 billion in the quarter ended March 31, up 14 percent from profits of $54.2 million on revenues of $1.1 billion last year. The diversified company's largest businesses are insurance and financial services.

Unless Transamerica Airlines can drastically reduce its labor costs the company may eventually have to be liquidated, said James R. Harvey, chief executive of the airline's parent, San Francisco-based Transamerica Corp.

"We have lost a substantial amount of our business, both freight and passenger, to low-cost carriers," Harvey said Monday.

Although several other unionized airlines have set up non-union subsidiaries in recent years, Transamerica's move appears to be the first time a corporation is setting up a non-union carrier that would directly compete for business against its existing airline.

Transamerica is currently acquiring an air carrier license by buying Central American International, a small Louisville, Ky.-based company that owns a license but is not using it.

The new airline, which will be named Trans International Airlines, will require a "very, very small investment" to start up, Harvey said. The carrier will probably operate aircraft owned by freight forwarders, he said.

Success is a stock that doubles in a year.

SHEARSON AMERICAN EXPRESS

In this market, which stock is more likely to give you a gain of 100 percent? One selling for $150 a share? Or $15 a share?

If you picked the $15 stock, you'll be interested in our new publication, "Opportunities in Low Priced Stocks." It lists 10 stocks we believe have the potential to outperform the standard averages by a wide margin. The typical stock in the group sells for less than $20. So a round lot wouldn't cost you a fortune.

History suggests the time has come to buy low-priced stocks. In the early stages of a bull market, investors typically trade down in price, sacrificing some solidity in return for the promise of rapid gain. The growing demand for low priced stocks then becomes one more factor tending to raise their price. Of course, not all low priced stocks necessarily will appreciate.

Our stock selections and market timing are based on experience derived from handling $45 billion a year in equity transactions—a volume that flows naturally from our position as the second largest investment and financial services firm.

The stocks in our list include several computer-related companies, transportation companies, and a large conglomerate that we think is poised for a turnaround. To get our booklet, with the full story on each stock, simply mail the coupon or call this number:

TI's 'Dare to Compare' campaign supported by TV, print advertising

NEW YORK — A major merchandising program that highlights the superior features of the TI Professional Computer was announced recently by Texas Instruments. The "Dare to Compare" campaign is supported by national television and print advertising. The ads invite buyers to visit participating TI Authorized Dealers where a special demonstration area is set up to help customers compare the features of the TI Professional Computer against the popular industry-standard IBM PC.

"We have designed this campaign in response to dealers, customers and our own market surveys that have suggested that we provide a better opportunity for people to see and compare our computer, feature for feature," said Tom Ellis, vice president of marketing for TI's Data Systems Group. "The 'Dare to Compare' campaign is key in our over-all objective to secure TI's place in the upper-end of the microcomputer market."

"TI is not just issuing unsubstantiated claims with 'Dare to Compare,'" he continued. "We're challenging people to prove TI's superiority for themselves by making a side-by-side comparison. We've chosen the IBM PC-XT as a comparison because it is representative of the high standards that the TI Professional Computer is up against."

"We believe the TI Professional Computer is a superior machine, and it has been recognized as far superior by many industry trade publications that have had the opportunity to review it in depth," said Ellis. "TI is now taking that message of superiority to the public and asking potential buyers to decide for themselves before making a purchase."

Customers can visit any participating TI Authorized Dealer location, including many ComputerLand stores, to run a comparison. A special "Dare to Compare" demonstration area will be set up in each store. Customers simply insert a diskette into the TI Professional Computer to begin a self-running demonstration. They then insert the same diskette and perform the same deomonstration on the IBM PC and compare the results.

The "Dare to Compare" demo allows comparison of the following applications on the two machines: color graphics and spreadsheet from Lotus (TM), graphics from BPS (TM) Business Graphics and Multimate (TM) word processing on both the IBM PC and the TI Professional Computer. "The diskette demonstrates TI's easy-to-use keyboard, which is based on the familiar IBM Selectric (R) design," said Ellis.

Television advertising began April 30 in major U.S. markets. In addition, advertising will run on national cable networks ESPN, Cable News Network and super station WTBS.

Campaign challenges Coke, Pepsi

CLAYTON, Mo. (AP) — The Seven-Up Co. has joined the fray in the soft-drink advertising sweepstakes, launching a campaign that proclaims people prefer its diet drink over its major cola rivals in a blind taste test.

The campaign, announced today, marks a new strategy by comparing Diet 7-Up directly with Diet Coke and Diet Pepsi.

"When you consider that Coke is spending millions — outspending us many, many times — we have to break through the clutter," said Edward W. Frantel, president of the nation's third-largest soft drink manufacturer. "And no one is going to be interested in a generic type of advertising."

In its ads, Seven-Up will proclaim that Diet 7-Up was preferred over Diet Coke by a 63-to-37 percent margin, and over Diet Pepsi by a 62-38 percent margin.

The testing was done by U.S. Testing Co., an independent organization, in 11 metropolitan areas across the country between March 30 and April 17. Each test consisted of 1,000 persons, split equally by sex and broken into four separate age catagories.

Frantel said Seven-Up tested "a litany of the major beverages" and found none which beat Diet 7-Up in the taste test. But he said the company decided merely to go after the industry leaders.

"Diet Coke and Diet Pepsi are making the most noise in the market," he said, "and that certainly is where the challenge is."

Frantel said the campaign follows 7-Up's current theme of "No caffeine. Never had it. Never will." by attempting to show that caffeine isn't necessary for good taste.

Italy signs pact for Siberian natural gas

MOSCOW (AP) — Italy has signed a long-postponed contract to buy Soviet natural gas carried by pipeline from Siberia. Italian officials said the terms were favorable to them.

Italy had suspended talks on buying the Soviet gas to protest the martial law crackdown in Poland, but the negotiations were reopened this spring.

France, West Germany and Austria earlier signed agreements to buy the gas from the Urengoi field in western Siberia, despite President Reagan's campaign against the gas contracts.

To retaliate for the December 1981 crackdown in Poland, Reagan imposed a ban on exports of U.S. technology for use on the pipeline. He urged U.S. allies to go along with the ban, arguing it would help finance Soviet arms purchases.

But the campaign had limited success, punished the companies of American allies and was bitterly criticized by Western European leaders. Reagan lifted the sanctions in November 1982.

The new agreement is between a subsidiary of the Italian state energy company and the Soviet agency Soyuzgazeksport.

Italian officials in Moscow would not release precise terms of the agreement, but they said it provides for Italy to buy a minimum of 4.4 billion cubic meters a year at a price that will be "very competitive" with world energy prices.

The agreement provides for increased Soviet purchases of Italian goods.

PBGC offering three courses

The Permian Basin Graduate Center will offer three courses in the PBGC building, 105 W. Illinois.

"Applied Petrophysics in the Permian Basin," Mondays and Wednesdays, June 4-18, from 7-10 p.m. This course is intended to take the student with some exposure to well logging through a series of lectures - work sessions and increase his or her working knowledge of well logs. Minimum theory will be discussed with emphasis placed on the working of actual problems from the Permian Basin. Tiom McGinley, senior petrophysical engineer, Superior Oil, will instruct the course. Fee is $150. Limited registration.

"Seismic Data Processing for Stratigraphic Objectives," Tuesday, June 5, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. This course is for the experienced explorationist, as well as less experienced geologist and geophysicists. From traditional procedures such as filtering, velocity analysis, and deconvolutions, more recent problem-solving steps will be discussed, such as treatment of surface-induced, residual static time delays, section time and depth migrations, and amplitude processing. Also wavelet processing, quantitive use of amplitudes for this bed delineation and development of seismic acoustic impedance and velocity logs will be discussed. Norman S. Neidell, Phd., executive vice president, Zenith Exploration Co. Inc., Houston, will instruct. Fee is $150.

"Part II: Application of Geological Data," has been rescheduled for June 19-20, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and June 21, from 9 a.m. to 12 noon. This course is designed for people with a basic working knowledge of a geological technician's rsponsibilities. It explains what is dome with the materials once they are located. Brenda Machost Carpenter will instruct. Fee is $225.

For registration or further information, call 683-2832.

FNMA to buy notes in Alaska

WASHINGTON — Fannie Mae (Federal National Mortgage Association) has agreed to buy up to $300 million in collateralized notes from the Alaska Housing Finance Corp. (AHFC), which will use the funds to finance residential mortgages in Alaska.

"The agreement is an extension of a previous contract with AHFC," Stuart A. McFarland, Fannie Mae's executive vice president and chief financian officer. "Under the provisions of the agreement Fannie Mae will buy the collateralized notes, which then could be held in Fannie Mae's mortgage portfolio or resold later," he said. In February, AHFC sold $100 million in bonds that were collateralized by Fannie Mae mortgage-backed securities. These bonds were sold on the Eurobond market.

McFarland said that Fannie Mae was able to offer a competitive price for the collateralized notes because the agreement allows both parties to bypass typical transaction costs, such as underwriting and other fees.

Fannie Mae is a federally chartered, shareholder-owned corporation that is listed on the New York Stock Exchange. It is the nation's largest supplier of home mortgage funds. Fannie Mae purchases mortgage loans from local lenders, thereby eplenishing those institution's supply of mortgage money.

King Features Syndicate

Actress Lindsay Crouse poses with the newest member of the Crouse-David Mamet household.

Ready for stardom

By JACK CARROLL
King Features Syndicate

You have seen Lindsay Crouse before, honestly. She was there in the pivotal scene of "The Verdict," as Paul Newman's star witness. She was there in the pivotal scene in "All the President's Men" as the reporter who gives Carl Bernstein (Dustin Hoffman) his first real lead. She was there in the pivotal scene in "Prince of the City" as the wife who demands her cop/husband (Treat Williams) come clean with the authorities.

So you have seen Lindsay Crouse. But despite all that pivoting, she may have escaped notice. Now the pivoting has begun to pay off.

For years critics have recognized Ms. Crouse as one of film's most reliable supporting players. Still, to the general public, the 35-year-old blonde remains largely unknown. But that should change.

The release of "Daniel" in the fall gave Ms. Crouse her first real leading role. This spring she followed that breakthrough performance with another lead, co-starring with Oscar-winning actor Timothy Hutton in "Iceman," the story of an anthropologist who encounters the body of a Neanderthal man — frozen but still alive. Together, this pair of movies could do for Ms. Crouse what all those pivotal roles never quite managed to do: make her a star.

AND SHE'S READY for stardom, if for no other reason than she's been surrounded by it all her life. Her father, William Crouse, was better known as half of Lindsay/Crouse, a playwrighting team that gave the actress her name. Lindsay/Crouse won a Pulitzer Prize in Drama for "State of the Union," but the team is probably best known for its script for "Sound of Music."

Her brother, Timothy Crouse, is a noted political writer whose irreverent look at campaign coverage, "The Boys on the Bus," made the best-seller list several years ago.

And her husband, David Mamet, is one of America's best known playwrights. He penned "American Buffalo," a play which Al Pacino brought to Broadway, and also wrote the Oscar-nominated script for "The Verdict" as well as the Pulitzer-Prize-winning play, "Glengarry, Glen Ross," now playing on Broadway.

Coincidentally, Mamet was notified about winning the Pulitzer Prize as he sat in a theater watching his wife's performance in "Iceman."

Now, it's Ms. Crouse's turn. She's waited a long time for stardom and the clout that comes with it. Still, some of the bitterness of that waiting shows.

"I WOULD GO out to Hollywood," she says sitting in her West Village apartment in Manhattan, her baby on her knee. "And people would say, 'Oh yes, we like you very much,' but nobody would have any work for me. Nobody was listening to me, and at times I felt like getting out of the game totally."

During this period of self-doubt, Crouse continued to hone her skills working extensively in New York theatrical companies doing everything from Shakespeare to her husband's plays.

But she hankered for the movies, and now says her frustration over not getting film work had a feminist edge. Ms. Crouse does not fit the mold of the conventional starlet, and she says tradition-bound Hollywood men couldn't accept her on acting ability alone.

"The power structure in the film business is male dominated. And there are definitions of beauty, of what is good, that I find ludicrous and they're set by males. So if you're like me and want to be as truthful in your work as possible, you can get stymied."

So stymied, in fact, that you consider becoming a history teacher or an acupuncturist, two options Ms. Crouse seriously considered during her struggle to break into movies.

EVENTUALLY, SHE started getting roles, but despite her eagerness to make it on screen, she didn't compromise the quality of what she'd do. What a role said was as important as what it paid.

"I never ever received a film script in which I didn't have to cry, 'never,' she says of the singleminded stereotyping of women's parts she sees in film. "When film perpetrates that view of women, women don't get into politics or into positions of authority because there is suspicion about how they would react under pressure."

Ms. Crouse has no difficulties with the political message that was delivered by "Daniel," although it was a message at once challenging and discomforting.

Based on a novel by E.L. Doctorow (who also wrote "Ragtime"), "Daniel" amounts to a fictionalized version of the Rosenberg spy case from the early '50s in which a husband and wife were executed for turning over secrets about the atomic bomb to the Russians. Ms. Crouse, who played the Ethel Rosenberg equivalent, insists "the movie took no position." But she's quite unequivocal about her own interpretation of the film and the original case.

"The Rosenbergs have tremendous relevancy now. The American people are far less informed than they think about what's going on in politics. Our system of justice operates on a very thin line. I think it's probably the best system, but it's full of flaws. We just have to be a little watchful, a little cynical," she states.

IF THAT makes Ms. Crouse sound like a hippie radical all grown up, that's because that's what she is. An anti-war activist while attending Harvard during the late 1960s, Ms. Crouse still occasionally slips into an anti-establishment tirade.

But, she's mellowed out since the days when she stormed the Student Union, and her political fervor has been eclipsed by domestic concerns. Continually, she brings up her baby and how much it has affected her thinking about her career and the world in general.

Not uncharacteristically, she says "Daniel" was first and foremost "about the ruination of a family." When she was about to do her execution scene, she continually thought about the difficulty of an already completed scene, the one in which her character said good-bye to her children.

"The execution scene was so surreal, I might as well have been on another planet," she says. "But the other scene, it's so horrendous, the body literally rebels against it. The times in my life when I've been near things so horrendous, people have always reacted in a way that if it were in a book, no one would believe. I had the thought during filming of that scene that something probably went on during Rosenberg's goodbye that was so bizarre we can't even imagine it."

She had less trouble finding inspiration for the character she played, the witness who turned the entire court on its ear in "The Verdict." The whole movie involved a malpractice suit arising out of a bungled delivery of a baby. And Ms. Crouse now recalls that she was pregnant during the filming of the scene.

BETWEEN THE LINES

Q. I really admire Phoebe Cates and I think she's a fine actress but I haven't read much about her. Can you tell me about her background, age, future plans?

Jeff Gilton
Gainesville, Ga.

A. She's 20, New York-born and raised, one of three daughters of TV producer Joseph Cates, who gave her her first role in the TV movie "Marriage Is Better" when she was 10. She didn't want to be an actress, though. She wanted to be a ballerina and was in training on scholarship at the American School of Ballet when, at 14, she seriously hurt her knee and had to bow out. She switched her attention to modeling and did well, so well that school — New York's Professional Children's School — ceased to be a top priority and she never graduated.

By that point, though, modeling had led to acting: a short-lived TV series, "Mr. and Mrs. Dracula"; the movie "Paradise," an unabashed knock-off of "The Blue Lagoon" that Ms. Cates is still pretty embarrassed about; the better-received "Fast Times At Ridgemont High"; "Private School" and the TV film "Baby Sister."

Her recent TV movie, "Lace," was such a blockbuster that there is talk of doing a sequel, but nothing yet has been set.

Phoebe Cates

She has a film, "Gremlins," due out next month, and has been working with her boyfriend, Billy Branigan (singer Laura Branigan's brother), on a long-simmering musical career. When she's not working, she likes to read and follow boxing matches.

Q. I hope you can help me. I've written to several columnists over the years trying to find out what happened to actor Bob Crane. Where was he murdered, when, who was the murderer and did Crane leave a family?

Howard Kistler
South Hadley, Mass.

A. Crane, 49, was murdered on June 29, 1978, in a motel room in Scottsdale, Ariz., where he'd gone to appear in a play. His death as caused by a savage beating, mostly to his head.

There was, reportedly, no sign of forced entry and the door was unlocked when he was found, leading to a police conclusion that the prime suspect was an acquaintance of Crane's.

A suspect has been singled out, but the evidence is not yet accumulated, a task for the detective due to review the case this year. "We'll be looking at some new information," he explains, "but at this point, we do have a suspect."

Crane left a daughter, Karen, by his first marriage and a son, Scotty, by his second to actress Patricia Olson, who appeared with him on "Hogan's Heroes" under the name Sigrid Valdis.

Q. Is David Keith the same person who was with "The Monkees" and was called Mickey?

Else Henderson
Rochester, Minn.

A. No, he's not old enough to have been in that 1960s show. That "Mickey" in question was Mickey Dolenz, a onetime child actor who now goes by the more grown-up name of Michael Dolenz. At last report, Dolenz had moved to England in search of anonymity and had become a director, primarily in TV. One of a number of series he developed for children, interestingly called "Metal Mickey," was an award-winner in Europe.

Regarding Keith: You can see him in a new movie called "Firestarter," the adaptation of Stephen King's novel.

David Keith

Q. Please! I would like to know Bob Barker's real name.

Edna S. Nuse
Ontario, Ore.

A. Robert William Barker. He was born in Darrington, Wash., and raised on the Rosebud Indian reservation in Mission, S.D., where his mother was a teacher. Another question we've received lately is whether he remarried after the death of his wife, Dorothy, from cancer. He hasn't.

And what he seems to do with his time, besides playing golf, is work: hosting "The Price is Right," the recent "Miss U.S.A. Pageant," the upcoming "Miss Universe Pageant" and his live version of "The Price is Right" called "The Bob Barker Fun N' Games Show" that he takes around the country every few weeks. Next stop: Minneapolis, Minn.

Q. Our office has a lunch bet riding on this question: Was the song "Memory" that Barbra Streisand recorded ever used in a Broadway play before or after she recorded it?

Nancy Kohler
Kansas City, Kan.

A. Yes, indeed. "Memory" is the key ballad in the smash musical "Cats" which opened first in London in 1981, then on Broadway the following year. Ms. Streisand saw the show in London, decided to record the song and had her version out before the Broadway production opened.

Easy for actors who work together to fall in love

By JAN CHERUBIN
Hearst Feature Service

Hasn't everyone wondered if those actors on the big screen are really kissing — or just acting? Are their clothes off or are they wearing body stockings, and how could he have touched her or looked at her like that and not meant it? And if they really were and they really did and he really did, then if either one of them were married or involved, wouldn't the spouse be jealous?

The answer to all of the above is that actors and actresses are professionals, and when they make movies they're only acting. But why do so many actors and actresses get romantically involved right there on the set in front of everyone?

The latest incidence of this shocking breach of professionalism occurred on the set of "Racing With the Moon," a movie in which Sean Penn and Elizabeth McGovern play opposite each other.

"One day, just before we started shooting, I saw them jogging together," Richard Benjamin, the film's director, said in a recent interview, "and I crossed my fingers. I thought, well, they seem to be getting along."

Indeed. Penn and McGovern recently announced that they were getting married — McGovern briefly wore an engagement ring and kept a picture of Penn by her bed — and the notion invited much publicity for two talented young stars who had always successfully dodged the limelight. Suddenly, the whole world could watch them fall in love 20 times larger than life, if it wanted to.

"I fought it," McGovern said of her attraction to Penn in a New York Times interview. "I thought, I mustn't, because making a movie is so difficult, real life becomes so distorted, you get confused between what's in your imagination and what you're doing for the movie. I thought I was making a huge mistake. I thought, 'This isn't going to last past the movie.' So I really tried for it not to happen. But I just couldn't fight those blue eyes."

Probably the biggest mistake McGovern made was talking about her plans. Her first instinct apparently was right, for the romance didn't last much past the movie. The word is that the two, who also were featured in Life magazine this month — Liz, with all her strength, picking up Sean — have called off the engagement and stopped production on what was to be their next film, "Moonwatcher," leaving a concerned public to wonder: Was it live or was it Memorex?

Certainly, it must be difficult for actors and actresses to distinguish the character from the real human being during filming. There they are, sequestered for weeks, all the while trying to stay inside their own characters.

"The scene where Michael Douglas and I fall in love (in "Romancing The Stone") was wonderful," says actress Kathleen Turner. "It was one of those times where you just let yourself be in love. The temptation is to fall in love with the actor, but the characters absolutely fall in love."

In Hollywood, there are those who have not resisted the temptation. Kurt Russell and Goldie Hawn live together now after "Swing Shift," though Russell has said, "When Goldie and I were playing the romantic scenes, we were acting." Tom Cruise and Rebecca DeMournay got together after "Risky Business," as did Rachel Ward and Bryan Brown after "Thornbirds," Jessica Lange and Sam Shepard after "Frances" and Mary Steenburgen and Malcolm McDowell after "Time After Time." And don't forget Gable and Lombard and Tracy and Hepburn and Burton and Taylor.

According to Dr. Tessa Albert Warschaw, author of "Winning By Negotiation" and a psychiatrist who treats many of people who work in the film industry, McGovern should have been a bit more cautious.

"I think if actors fall in love on the set, they need to buy some time before they make a legal commitment or even live together. If they fall in love, and it's wonderful and magical and all those juicy things, and there's harmony, then good luck. But there are so many hidden agendas. For example, they may think they need to be in love to enhance their character or to enhance their career, and then there's the problem of instant intimacy. So many of these things don't last in a place like Hollywood, which is full of fantasy."

Just look at these other on-set romances that didn't last: Burt Reynolds and Sally Field, Susan Sarandon and Christopher Walken, McGovern and Timothy Hutton, Diane Keaton and Jack Nicholson.

Still, it must have been fun while it lasted.

CROUSE

"SOMETIMES A role comes along when there are a lot of personal things at stake. And in this one there was. I'm sure there was a strong identification. I mean, for me during my pregnancy I was unhappy to see people cutting grass. It just puts you in touch with every living thing." With "The Verdict" fresh in her mind, Ms. Crouse set out to assure for her own delivery the most scrupulously hazard-free situation possible.

"I had a natural childbirth and I went to a small hospital in Vermont to do it," she says. "I put myself in a situation where I had all the support I might need."

Now, just as Ms. Crouse stands the chance of making it into the echelon of major film performers, she grapples with the career/family conflict. "Iceman," filmed in northern Canada, took her away from her home for several months.

Luckily, although she and her husband are both in theater and film, she says there is no rivalry to make her current situation even more complicated.

"Our marriage is good, because we both have equal desire, we both know exactly what we want to do." She says working together, though, as they have occasionally done, can place a strain on their relationship. "It requires tremendous courage for a husband and wife to work together anyway because of the nature of artistic work. You make yourself very vulnerable. And if your husband is standing there saying 'I see through you, honey,' that can be terrifying."

AND ALSO invigorating, as was a production in New York of "Twelfth Night" a couple of years ago in which Mamet directed Ms. Crouse as the leading lady. The critics went nuts, and the collaboration left Ms. Crouse with a particular lesson.

"That play has a great lesson for actresses," says the woman who's waited for stardom long enough. "The character I played, by a simple gesture for the man she loves, arrives where she belongs. And that's the lesson, for every little role you do, in every little play, you make that little gesture of love over and over again. And ultimately you arrive."

Reservations are being accepted for annual Jazz Classic

Reservations for Midland's eighth annual Jazz Classic to be held at the Holiday Inn Country Villa beginning Oct. 9 and lasting through Oct. 14 can be made at this time. Some 20 nationally well-known jazz musicians will provide the nightly entertainment.

Only 240 seats are available to the general public. Each seat costs $125 and is good for all six performances. Many people who are interested in going to some, but not all of the performances, get together with friends and share tickets. This reduces the price considerably for a couple attending one performance.

Tickets are available only from the Midland Jazz Association, 400 W. Wall Ave., Suite 209. Reservations may be made by calling 682-5334. Tickets are not available at the door.

Many of the musicians who performed in 1983 have accepted invitations to return in 1984. Two of the returning musicians, Trummy Young on trombone, and Jack Sheldon on trumpet, received many standing ovations for their music, vocals and humor in 1983.

Young, whose musical career spans 54 years, has been featured with such giants as Earl Hines, Jimmy Lunceford, Billie Holiday, Charley Barnet and Louis Armstrong. He has also been heard on many hit records since 1933.

Sheldon has appeared with Benny Goodman, Count Basie, Stan Kenton, Harry James and Woody Herman. He has also been on many television shows including The Mike Douglas Show, The Joey Bishop Show, The Tonight Show and The Merv Griffin Show.

Other musicians who have been invited to the 1984 Classic are Derek Smith, Ralph Sutton and Dick Hyman, piano; Jack Lesberg (who is also the musical director for the event), Milt Hinton and Michael Moore, bass; Butch Miles, Gus Johnson and Mousey Alexander, drums; Warren Vache and Clark Terry, trumpet; Urbie Green and Carl Fontana, Trombone; Zoot Sims and Flip Phillips, tenor sax; Bud Shanks and Jim Galloway, soprano sax, alto sax and flute; Johnny Mince and Phil Bodner, clarinet; and Cal Collins, guitar.

Community Theatre, ACT IX presenting 'Bells Are Ringing'

Midland Community Theatre and ACT IX are presenting the romantic musical comedy "Bells Are Ringing" through Saturday in Theatre One at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

"Bells Are Ringing" originally opened on Broadway in 1957 and ran for almost two and a half years, placing it among the top 20 musicals in Broadway history. It features a musical score by Jule Styne with book and lyrics by Betty Comden and Adolph Green.

Styne's score contains 15 songs including such popular hits as "Just in Time," "Long Before I Knew You" and "The Party's Over." Among Styne's other credits are "Gypsy," "Funny Girl" and "Sugar," as well as the Oscar winning score for "Three Coins in a Fountain."

Comden and Green, induced into the Songwriters Hall of Fame in 1979, are also responsible for such hits as "Peter Pan," "Wonderful Town" and the Tony Award winning "On the 20th Century."

"Bells Are Ringing" is a special fundraising production and is not included in the regular membership season. The box office is accepting mail orders which are accompanied by a check.

Director creates film industry

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Roger Donaldson, director of "The Bounty," had never been on a movie set in his life when he directed his first movie in New Zealand.

He learned quite literally to make movies by instinct, and by himself created a film industry in New Zealand.

"I'd never been on a film set because there were no film sets there to go on," he said.

His first movies were "Sleeping Dogs" and "Smash Palace," which put New Zealand on the cinema map.

Hall of fame honors musicians

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS Records and the Harlem YMCA has established the first annual Harlem YMCA Jazz Hall of Fame to honor the giants of jazz.

'Temple' one long gasp

By BEULAH CASEY

Beulah Casey

While you are settling into your seat, waiting for Steven Spielberg's "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom" to begin, remember to take a few deep breaths. They may be your last for several hours.

That's because the follow-up to "Raiders of the Lost Ark" defies human physiology, turning the involuntary function of breathing into a matter of conscious choice — it's up to you to decide when.

With one gasp-producing moment after another, "Temple of Doom" is the kind of movie many will glimpse only through slightly spread fingers.

From the opening scene in a 1930's Shanghai night spot (Club Obi Wan — get it?) where an oriental bad guy gets skewered with a flaming shishkabob to the tune of Cole Porter's "Anything Goes," to the climactic roller coaster ride through the tunnels of the Temple of Doom, director Spielberg holds nothing back.

Adventure, intrigue, and minimal romance (not to forget your favorite scenes from "Raiders" rehashed and served up as delicious left-overs), complete the picture when Archeology Professor Indiana Jones goes a-digging — this time in search of a sacred stone stolen from a Hindu village.

But he's not alone. For comic relief there is Indy's ward, a pint-sized Chinese pickpocket named Short Round (Ke Huy Quan), and Willie Scott (Kaye Capshaw), a whining cast-off nightclub entertainer, sorely in need of a manicure and a character cure.

Short Round wisecracks his way through life as a survival technique and young Ke Huy Quan plays him with a natural flare, a bit puckish and yet fiercely loyal. Too bad, Spielberg doesn't take advantage of the relationship set up with Short Round and Indy. The times they pause long enough to exchange a glance or word are memorable and hint at something more meaningful. But there just isn't any time for such things in "Temple of Doom".

Even the quasi-romantic scenes between Indy and Willie (would this woman appeal to any man?), fall short of adding any depth to the characters, and Miss Capshaw's could sure use some. After the spit-tobacco kind of woman Karen Allen showed us in "Raiders," Willie Scott is a dismal disappointment and no match for our hero.

As for Harrison Ford — he finds his stride in "Temple of Doom," outpacing everyone. Forceful and assured as never before, Ford makes all the folderol believable, providing an impetus to the movie as certain as the editing (Michael Kahn), music (John Williams) and direction. Even more, he looks like he's having a ball doing it!

Why not? It's great fun just watching Indy, dressed in grease-stained fedora and khakis, finese a bull whip, fend off vampire bats and a swarm of bugs, swing from ropes and survive a sure-death fall from a plane in a water raft — just to mention a few fearless feats.

Rated PG, there are, nevertheless, some gruesome cruelties that leave the audience groaning in empathetic pain — take the scene of the human sacrifice, where the high priest performs his version of a heart transplant, single-handedly ripping a man's still-beating heart from his chest. Special effects genius aside, this and the scene where Short Round gets flogged may bear some parental quidance.

But "Temple of Doom" is, like "Raiders," pure escapist entertainment — not as well written (screenplay by William Huyck and Gloria Katz) as "Raiders" (Lawrence Kasdan), or as imaginatively conceived, but as action-packed and thrill-a-minute as its predecessor.

Actually a "prequel" to "Raiders" (meaning that it happened in time before "Raiders"), this movie begs your indulgence in overlooking the obvious — like when does Willie have time to shimmy out of her skin-tight evening dress into trousers as she plummets down from a cliff into a flood-stage river?

But if you can make the stretch, the only thing you have to worry about then is — remembering to breathe.

'Whenever It Rains' returns for fourth year

ODESSA — "Whenever it Rains," the musical about the early days of Odessa and the Permian Basin, returns to the Globe for its fourth production June 29 and 30 and July 6—8. Written by Rick Smith with music and lyrics by Timothy M. Ryan, the play presents a look at the settlers who pioneered Odessa.

"Whenever it Rains" was originally produced by the Globe in conjunction with the Ector County Historical Commission in 1981 for the centennial of the arrival of the railroad in Odessa. The Globe has made the production a summer tradition because of the strong support the play continues to receive from throughout the area.

Since its introduction in 1981, the play has been revised and updated to include Ryan's music and lyrics as well as more of the area's history. The original script traced the development of the area up to the discovery of oil in the 1920s. The current script looks at the effects and changes oil brought with it.

Through a series of vignettes, the play explores the adventures and challenges faced by Odessa's first families. Although the characters in the play are fictional, their lives are based on the lives and experiences of many of Odessa's settlers as they faced both physical and psychological hardship while building their community.

Once Odessa was established as a farming and ranching community, the town had to face the changes brought by the discovery of oil and the influx of oil people. While oil brought wealth to the community, not all the old families liked the changes.

The production staff includes David Weaver Jr., director; Karla Wright, musical director; and Jan Collerd, choreographer. The cast includes members who have been in each production as well as newcomers.

"Whenever it Rains" will play at 8 p.m. June 29-30 and July 6-7, and at 2:30 p.m. July 8. Admission to the production is $7 for adults and $4 for students and senior citizens. For reservations and information call the Globe, 1-332-1586.

Agatha's character adds 'dash of salt' to 'Magnum'

HONOLULU (AP) — Early on, actress Gillian Dobb inquired about Agatha Chumley. "Is Agatha a spinster? Is she a wealthy widow?"

The director replied, "I just want you to look at Mr. Hillerman as if you were a teen-ager looking at Tom Selleck."

Agatha Chumley, as it happens, is the newest continuing character on TV's "Magnum P.I." and Ms. Dobb is playing her. Agatha is a dash of salt in the show — a somewhat crusty British woman obviously aflutter over Jonathan Higgins, the also somewhat crusty British gentleman who often finds Magnum the bane of his existence.

For Ms. Dobb, the whole business is an actress-style Cinderella story. For the last 10 years, she's been in Honolulu, juggling a job as a legal secretary by day and sometimes acting at night, mostly at the Honolulu Community Theater and with the Hawaii Performing Arts Company.

During "Hawaii Five-O" days, she landed parts twice on that program, but one of them ended up on the cutting room floor. In the fall of 1982, the Cinderella story began. The "Magnum" people called and said they wanted her to "read" for a continuing role.

In the previous season, Ms. Dobb had played three small roles on three episodes. Folks hadn't forgotten her.

Ms. Dobb took a look at the first script with Agatha in it.

"I said to the casting director, 'This is a combination of all the parts I've been playing over the last 30 years,'" she said.

She was told that Agatha might appear in a couple of "Magnum" episodes. To date, she has acted in some dozen.

Ms. Dobb comes to the British business by birth. The rest of Agatha comes from her resources as an actress.

She used to consider herself "a dyed-in-the-wool civil servant," a circumstance that began in her native London in 1950 and set her gadding about the world. A couple of years later, in Australia, she made her debut on stage with the Canberra Repertory Company.

In Australia, Ms. Dobb started out as a prompter.

"We had a vague, eccentric character played by an actor deaf in one ear," she recalled. "The audience could hear me better than him."

So an actress was born.

And the gadding continued. Back to London, to The Hague, to two spots in Canada, then to Washington, D.C.

Ms. Dobb abandoned Washington because of the high prices and for the chance to go to Labrador, where she figured there would be lots of eligible men and few women. She apparently figured right, because she married an American military man there.

Ten years ago, he was stationed in Hawaii and Ms. Dobb has been here ever since. The marriage ended in divorce in 1977.

Playing Agatha for the millions who watch "Magnum" has brought fan mail, but a surprisingly low level of public recognition. The actress moves through downtown every day and nobody runs up to call her Agatha or ask her about Tom Selleck.

Museum of Southwest to offer workshops

Summer workshops for children at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., begin June 4.

This summer the museum is offering, during its first session, fiber art June 4-8; sculpture June 11-15; Native American arts and crafts June 18-22; watercolors June 25-29; drawing July 9-13; folk dancing June 16-20; masks July 23-27; and making musical instruments July 30-August 3.

Fiber art offers children an opportunity to learn the basics of weaving and applique. Using natural fibers participants will learn how to use stones and tree branches as the basis of their fiber art as well as how to incorporate found objects into their art work.

In sculpture participants will learn to experiment. Projects will include making plaster of Paris and paper mache sculptures as well as mobiles and origami.

Native American arts and crafts uses selections from the museum's permanent collection, films and community resources to help children explore the art world of Indians. Each day the art of a different tribe will be examined.

The watercolor class also uses selections from the museum's permanent collection. In this class, participants will learn step by step how to use watercolors as a means of self expression.

The drawing class offers an opportunity for children to improve their drawing skills as they learn new techniques for creating depth, perspective and volume.

In the folk dancing class, children will improve their coordination while learning popular folk dances. This course is being offered again this summer because of its popularity last summer.

The class in masks deals with some of our best loved masks and costumes. Children will make different types of masks from a variety of materials. They will even get a taste of the theater when they use their masks in different dramatic or comic settings.

The last session, making musical instruments, encourages children to explore the international language of music. Children will make several different kinds of instruments out of a variety of common materials.

Classes will be offered in all of these subjects for grades 1-3 and 4-6. For more information on times and cost call the museum, 683-2882.

Woman ages with acting

Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK — "A Woman of Independent Means" is a one-woman show starring Barbara Rush that began as a workshop production in Los Angeles. When it opened on Broadway recently it was a brilliant lesson in polished acting.

Ms. Rush begins as a young woman and ends as an aged woman. She spans 78 years without a change of makeup, without the aid of increasingly matronly costumes; without getting rheumatism; without canes, crutches or, probably, support hose. Her voice doesn't shake, rattle or roll, quake, quiver or crack. She does it the old-fashioned way, by the art of acting.

Perhaps she does take a little too long to die. Perhaps a tiny touch of tedium creeps in as Ms. Rush reads aloud from letter after letter she wrote to various relatives, friends, husbands, in-laws and strangers.

During the intermission, a passing member of the audience was overheard making this comment: "Sure it's boring. But it's interesting." That is, the script is often mundane gossip but she tells it so well.

The play by Elizabeth Forsythe Hailey is based on her grandmother's life, and is adapted from her novel. Grandma, a Texan, clearly had an opinion on everything and unhesitatingly expressed them to everyone. But what Bess Steed Gardner, the character, said was less important than how Barbara Rush, the actress, said it.

No plot exists, except the haphazard one fate bestows as it deals out births and deaths, marriages, affairs, divorces, good and bad fortune, with infuriating indifference. What Bess Steed Gardner endures and enjoys is what we all share. You do not leave the theater laughing.

What's amazing is that for two and a half hours Barbara Rush talks on, shifting emotional gears as though she were an automatic transmission. Her poise is immense, her command of the stage imperious. She transfixes with limpid eyes a member of the audience here, another there, talking directly to each.

The playwright's grandmother must have been a wonderful person; she'd have probably enjoyed a long chat with Barbara Rush.

Most one-character productions are about the famous: Mark Twain and Harry Truman are recent examples.

Pets, cleaning lady, children train mom

By MARY ANNE B. COX
King Features Syndicate

We have a new dog. I swore I would never do it again after our last dog was killed by a car, but a sad-eyed mutt turned up in the arms of an even sadder-eyed child and the combination was irresistible. We are now in the process of trying to train this new family member, to integrate him into our way of life. I use the term "we" loosely since the primary responsibility for encouraging acceptable behavior in the house has fallen to me. (What a surprise.)

In the course of my new activities, all directed at civilizing this beast, it has occurred to me that this dog is not trained; I am trained.

In fact, when you come to think about it, that seems to be the way most things seem to operate around my house.

There has never been any question of who is in charge with our cat. Rumor has it that cats are untrainable but that's simply a misinterpretation of the roles of trainer and trainee. This cat has me perfectly trained. He meows sharply at my bedside at 2 a.m. and I jump up immediately to let him out. After an hour, he rattles the screen door in the hallway and I jump up again in let him in.

This routine is repeated perhaps two or three times a night. No matter how deeply asleep I may be, my responses to his commands are automatic. When he started to demand to be fed at 4 a.m., I put my foot down. There is a limit to the training I am willing to accept. Now, before I go to bed, I put out a bowl of dry food for him to nibble between excursions.

I've been trying to train my four children to pick up after themselves for nearly 14 years. Again, my training isn't working out in quite the way I intended. Now, however, it has happened. I am trained to follow them around to pick up the clothes that they drop as they dress and undress, or the beach towels, toys and soggy sneakers that they leave behind after a day at the beach.

After 14 years, I have become proficient at my work. I can spot one red-and-white Nike sneaker at a distance of 50 feet across the sand and I've refined the task of clothing retrieval to an art. I automatically paw through the lost-and-found barrels at schools, pools and tennis clubs.

One other area of training that my children have been responsible for, indirectly, concerns baby sitters.

This is an area where I feel I have had some measure of success as a trainer. I have methodically trained my baby sitters to be familiar with our household routine: bedtimes, bathtimes, rules and regulations, emergency phone numbers and pediatrician's prescriptions. They, in turn, have trained me to be familiar with their requirements: soda, snacks, cable television and total phone.

One particular girl has me so well trained that I prepare for her scheduled visits by stocking up on nacho cheese-flavored chips and black raspberry soda, a gastronomic combination found repulsive by our entire family.

Some of my earliest training along these lines came from "training" cleaning women. I felt that efficient domestic engineering required an accurate job description and patient explanations of reasonable expectations.

This was the sort of training that I envisioned would produce a dependable and valuable assistant. I didn't realize in those early days that a great deal more was involved on my part.

One cleaning woman in particular taught me a great deal. She didn't drive and since no bus runs in our small town, I had to pick her up and drive her home. Since she was my captive for the day, I had to feed her lunch. She was on a low-salt diet so I became a low-salt gourmet cook. She didn't do windows and she wouldn't pick up a messy room to "clean" it. I found myself cleaning the house before getting dressed to pick her up for the day.

It was as if my mother were coming for a visit. Beds were made and toys were picked up.

Food shopping puts us all in shock

By DOREEN T. HANSBURY
King Features Syndicate

Most of us don't have to wait for future shock. We get zapped every time we push a grocery cart down a supermarket aisle. Weekly, our carefully planned budgets are wiped out somewhere between the applesauce and the canned peaches.

Oh, I've followed all the tips. "Don't shop when you're hungry." I devour a banana split 20 minutes before entering a supermarket door.

"Plan menus around the specials." Smothered chicken wings and braised lamb ribs sent my kids scurrying to the neighbors hinting for dinner invitations.

"Moist-cook the less expensive cuts of meat." Boiled liver sent my husband to the neighbors begging for a dinner invitation.

I've used the psychological approach to a balanced budget. I tried dropping hints to the family that they were looking a little dumpy, hoping this would cut food intake. They countered by saying they were going on this protein diet — you eat only steak — three times a day.

One day I went to my well-organized friend, Agnes, for an answer to the food-budget dilemma. Of course she had one — she always does. She just buys the biggest roast available. From her description, anything you can pick up without endangering your sacroiliac, and still fit in the oven will fill the bill. I shrank from her suggestion with a guess at the price of such a piece of meat.

"Oh, no, it's not expensive — only in initial outlay," she assured me.

"You see, it's served on Sunday as a roast; Monday we have sliced meat in gravy; Tuesday it appears in chow mein; Wednesday it's accompanied by lots of potatoes in hash; Thursday it's cubed and added to vegetables in meat pie; on Friday we have fish, while the roast bones simmer; and on Saturday it makes one last glorious appearance in a pot of homemade soup."

It all sounded too economical, so French! I could just picture that lovely big pot of soup simmering on a back burner for Saturday's dinner.

I trotted right over to the meat counter and bought a 17-pound standing rib roast. As I drove home, I planned the week's menus. When I unbagged the roast and put it on the table, the kids were so impressed they proceeded to invite all their friends for Sunday dinner. Monday at noon, I took the scraps of meat remaining on the bones and made a sandwich for lunch.

We've gone Oriental. When I received the electric wok for Christmas, all I could think of was where to store it among all my other appliances. But, after reading the recipe book I plugged it right in.

Oriental cooking was the answer to feeding a family of five on three pounds of meat a week. Meat and vegetables were sliced, slivered and quick cooked in the wok. Then we had rice — mounds of rice.

It was working so well, I did it for two weeks straight. We had Beef Sukiyaki, Chicken Malaysia, Mandarin Pork and Shrimp Foo Yung with reruns on rice. I found a place to store the wok when I discovered the family giving me scowls and pooling their piggy-bank resources to buy me a one-way ticket on a slow boat to China.

Another scheme I've tried is camouflage. I usually wait until my husband is at Rotary and the kids are asleep. Then I sneak out to the kitchen and add skim milk to regular and blend margarine with the butter.

Naturally, I save store coupons. I grab the paper on Wednesday and snip out the little squares that encourage me to buy a brand I wouldn't use, by offering a seven-cents saving. I did learn not to clip until after my husband has read the paper, on the day I cut a coupon backing the article that named him Man of the Year.

I find the coupon game fascinating. It gives you such a sense of organization. I've set up my own filing system, so coupons are at-the-ready as I roll round the aisles.

But I'm forced to make an instant decision. Is it worth saving 6 cents on "Munchies" when I know the kids like "Crunchoes" better, at only a 3-cents saving?

This strain on my physical and mental agility brings on a depressed state only relieved by nibbling on macadamia nuts from the gourmet shelf — at $1.98 an ounce.

Under pressure, the other day I turned to devious tactics. My friend Myrtle came rolling by in the supermarket aisle, but stopped when she saw me on my knees, pulling cans of apricots off the shelves, and piling them on the floor.

"What on earth are you doing?"

When I triumphantly pulled a can from the back of the shelf marked a full 14 cents below the latest price, she started unstacking the grapefruit sections.

With age you learn things you should never do

By DOREEN T. HANSBURY
King Features' Syndicate

Looking for advantages to reaching the age of 39 is like searching for bargains at the supermarket — there aren't very many.

Still, little nuggets of knowledge can be accumulated that are almost as valuable as gold-edged certificates.

For instance, I've learned certain things must be avoided, no matter how strong the temptation to indulge, so I made some resolutions.

Never:

—Cut your own hair. Not even to simply trim a straggling wisp. Once that first snip is made, no force on earth can forestall the second, the third, then that bit on the left side and...

—Raise your hand when they ask for volunteers — not even to squelch a yawn or hide a cough. I once lifted a hand to adjust an earring and found myself in a station wagon with nine Cub Scouts for the next 12 Thursday afternoons.

—Have a third martini, no matter how easily the first two went down. I refuse to describe all possible consequences, but each one is a disaster. For instance, telling your best friends what you really think of them (at the moment) or telling the bosses what you think of them.

— Take that interesting unknown road, no matter how peaceful and vernal it looks upon entry. Pulling into one of these "obvious" shortcuts, I discovered that just as I was out of touch with any form of civilization, the road rapidly deteriorated, from broken macadam to packed sand, to tractor tracks with backdrop of high weeds, ending with an obstacle course of trees and overhanging branches.

Experience also has taught the importance of curbing any tendency to buy a book which guarantees you can:

— Make $100,000 in three months with your mail-order business.

— Develop a beautiful face, hair and figure within 30 days.

— Lose 10 pounds.

I've also learned how foolhardy it is to say airily:

— "Why don't you borrow my car?"

— "Let's have the party at our house."

— "Sure, I'll take care of Fido when you're on vacation."

— "Heck, what harm can another clove of garlic do?"

— "Let's not stop yet — this gas gauge always reads low."

My well-heeled friend, Mona. She vows she will never:

— Trust her lawyers.

— Co-sign for anyone other than God.

— Order shrimp, lobster, three kinds of wine and chocolate mousse, all at the same meal.

— Decide "I look the same without makeup."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By JEAN DIXON

Monday, May 28, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: The late, great Olympic athlete Jim Thorpe was born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: singer Gladys Knight, Houston Astros second baseman Bill Doran, actressesBeth Howland, Carroll Baker and Sondra Locke, football's Tom Blanchard and Los Angeles Lakers general manager Jerry West. The coming months bring fresh business success. Your problem-solving skills help you gain a job or promotion. Romance looks glorious. Be open about your feelings. A spiritual quest leads to new happiness. You feel like a completely different person! Count on a partnership producing wonderful results. A long-sought career goal moves within reach.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Do not allow someone to undermine your confidence. Your intuition is right on target. Curb an urge to spend too much money on visiting kin. Protect your reputation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Some surprising career of financial news spurs you to work harder. Domestic conditions are somewhat sensitive. Use all of your tact to avoid a confrontation. Time will prove who is right.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your domestic and business responsibilities could come into conflict today. Try to strike a better balance. You receive an unexpected reward for your efforts. A bonus or promotion is involved.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are operating at peak level now. Romance begins to sparkle. A lucky day for forming alliances. Just avoid becoming involved in speculative ventures promoted by friends or relatives.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Someone's questions are becoming too personal. You may have to end a relationship that makes you feel uncomfortable. Talk things over with someone you trust. Your rapport with a parent is excellent.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A great day for making new contacts and strengthening existing relationships. A close friend offers some well-intentioned advice. Listen politely but follow your heart. A "hot" tip could be wrong.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An artistic venture could bring in extra income. Be careful not to make too many demands on others. Romance will be kind to you if you make the first move.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Look forward to a profitable day. A real estate deal could be very lucrative. Others seek your advice. Spend your free time reading, studying or working on a favorite hobby.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22—Dec. 21): If crowds make you nervous seek solitude. Use your artistic talents to relocate a room. A good friend offers valuable advice; follow it and you gain financially. Move forward with confidence.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You are right to share your happiness with members of opposite sex. A Scorpio plays a major role in a business or romanctic triumph. Indulge his or her whims!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Keep your high ideals but do not believe everything you hear. Postpone making a major purchase or financial decision until you have more information. A great day to broaden your social horizons.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Come to grips with practical matters. Conventional methods work best now. Those who object to taking orders should think about the consequences of going off on this own.

Not too many politicians have made the ranks of the expert bridge player. While President Eisenhower was a competent player, he was not in the top rank. In Britain, Iain MacLeod was one of the country's foremost stars who rose to the rank of Cabinet Minister, and Sophocles Venizelos represented France in international play before becoming Prime Minister of Greece. Could it be that the politician's habit of promising the world but barely delivering makes for poor partnership trust?

Certainly, Venizelos held back nothing in the bidding. Not only did he make a jump bid with only one ace and two kings, he then calmly went on to Blackwood even though his partner had shown no more than a minimum opening bid.

West led the fourth-best of his partner's suit. East won the ace and shifted to a heart. Declarer did not like his chances. East quite likely had the king of diamonds, so it seemed that the slam would fail. However, when all else seems impossible, a politician falls back on his weapon of last resort — guile.

Declarer won the trump in hand, led the jack of diamonds to tempt a cover in case West held the king but, when the monarch did not appear, he rose with dummy's ace. Now he led a low diamond from dummy, looking for all the world as if he were trying to ruff out the king.

Not suprisingly, East followed low. Declarer won in hand with the ten, ruffed a spade on the table and then proceeded to run his trumps and the king of spades, reducing all hands to two cards. On the table he kept the ace — queen of clubs, while in hand he retained the nine of diamonds and a club. Poor East was in an uncomfortable predicament. He had to keep the king of diamonds to protect against declarer's nine, and the guarded king of clubs to prevent dummy's queen from becoming a trick. That was one card too many.

East decided to bare his king of clubs, in the hope that declarer would take the club finesse. But Venizelos made no mistake — he played a club to the ace and claimed his slam. After all, any good politician should know that he would get no publicity for making a slam via a mere finesse!

CHECKING OUT THE LIBRARY

Library gets books on canine training, health

By JOHN DEATS

Well, the word is out. The library's collection is going to the dogs. Or so it seems, since the Permian Basin Kennel Club generously donated $1,000.00 to the library to update our collection on various canine breeds, training manuals, care of health guides, and assorted dog lore.

If you have any of the following breeds, or are thinking of taking one as a pet, we now have books on Afghan hounds, Airedales, Akitas, Alaskan malamutes, basset hounds, beagles, bloodhounds, Berzois, Brittany spaniels, bull terriers, Cairn terriers, Chesapeake Bay retrievers, collies, dachsunds, dalmatians, English setters, English springers, fox terriers, German shephards, German shorthaired pointers, boxers, golden retrievers, Gordon setters, great Danes, great Pyrenees, Irish wolfhounds, Keeshounds, Labrador retrievers, Lhasa Apsos, miniature Schnauzers, Newfoundlands, Old English sheepdogs, Pekingese, Pembroke Welsh corgis, Rottweilers, Samoyeds, Shetland sheepdogs, Shih Tzus, Siberian huskies, and whippets.

A typical book on any of the above breeds starts out with a history of the dog and its original breeders. Then, many photographs and detailed information cover the bests of breed and other championship winners, including their lineage. Chapters address the finer points of breeding, the care of puppies, and training for field or show purposes.

There are books exclusively about training, such as William Koehler's THE KOEHLER METHOD OF DOG TRAINING, a basic text in hundreds of dog obedience schools. Another excellent approach is offered by veterinarian Leon Whitney in his DOG PSYCHOLOGY: THE BASIS OF TRAINING. He ably discusses the dog's nervous system, senses, mental states, early life, reflexes, drive, and learning ability. Another fine book is Curt Morsell's TRAINING YOUR DOG TO WIN OBEDIENCE TITLES, an expansion of an award winning series which first appeared in "Front and Finish — The Dog Trainers News." The author focuses on the true experiences of his son, Fred, and his dog, Thunder, as they proceed from Novice to the Utility degree.

An excellent book for any dog lover is Roger Caras' A CELEBRATION OF DOGS. The reader will be fascinated by the evolution of "Canis familiares" over roughly 14,000 years of man's history, into an ideal companion for work and leisure. Caras writes from first hand experience as owner of many pets, with the disclaimer, "I am not dispassionate about dogs, nor do I intend to try to be." He is a columnist on pets for newspapers and "The Ladies Home Journal," and is a regular commentator on the ABC radio network on the same subject. His chapter on bonding between pets and their owners is insightful and full of warm anecdotes.

For the reader who wants a good story, ANIMALS: FAMOUS AND CURIOUS STORIES is especially recommended. The collection includes classic tales by authors as diverse as Tolstoy, Melville, Kipling, Swift, Doyle, and Woolf. Comic masterpieces such as James Thurber's "The Dog That Bit People," Saki's "Tobermory," Wodehouse's "Pig-Hoo-o-o-ey!", and Twain's "The Stolen White elephant" are not to be missed.

Greeley's 'Ascent into Hell' traces priest's life

"Ascent into Hell." By Andrew M. Greeley. Warner Books 371 Pages. $16.50.

A Review

By CAROL DEEGAN
The Associated Press

Andrew Greeley's latest novel, "Ascent into Hell," traces the life of Hugh Donlon, destined, almost from the moment of his birth, to become a Catholic priest. But is it fate? Or a religious calling? Or a sense of family obligation?

While Hugh is still in the seminary, a teen-age friend, Maria Manfredy, warns him that he will never be a priest because he likes women too much.

But Hugh does not listen. He resists Maria's physical charms and becomes a priest, but not a very happy one, while Maria goes on to live her own life.

Years later, Hugh becomes involved with a nun, Sister Elizabeth Ann, and leaves the active priesthood to marry her against the advice of friends and family.

"Ascent into Hell," however, is not merely the story of one priest's unsuccessful struggle to keep his vows of celibacy. It is also the story of a man who is almost overwhelmed by a sense of family responsibility. Donlon's father is a superior court judge in Chicago, and the family is highly respected. However, Hugh's younger brother, Tim, is a troublemaker, and his sister, Marge, seems to have no serious goals in life. It is Hugh who must take responsibility for his family.

The novel is set against the turmoil of the 1960s, as political, social and religious institutions are being challenged. Yet what makes "Ascent into Hell" most interesting are the characters, from Hugh's scheming and cheating brother, Tim, to Hugh's frustrated and unhappy wife, Liz, the former nun. Donlon himself is a man driven by his own harsh view of himself and the way he conducts himself in the world.

Leon Uris' newest book 'uneven story'

"The Haj" by Leon Uris; Doubleday & Co.; 576 pages; $17.95.

A Review

By ED HUTSHING
Copley News Service

When he wrote "Exodus" more than 20 years ago, Leon Uris told a powerful story that swept the reader along on events that were almost as current as the day's headlines. In "The Haj," Uris delves back into history, some good some bad, to present a new view of the founding of Israel and what happened up to the time of the Suez Canal War in 1956.

It is an uneven story, because Uris has presented it partly from the point of view of an Arab youth as well as from a straight narrative standpoint. The two styles never blend properly. It is difficult to move from one perspective to the other and maintain sympathy for the characters. It also seems unbelievable that Uris can get inside an Arab's mind.

The Haj (an Arabic title for one who has made the pilgrimage to Mecca) is the father of the youth. He is a powerful man, head of his tribe and, generally, a wise leader.

His opposite number is a guerrilla-trained Israeli leader, wise in the ways of the world and warfare. It is the love, friendship and ultimate clash of these two that serves as the hinge for the story and the tragic relating of the two cultures.

Driven from their lands in Palestine, the Haj's tribe and others constantly seek a way to return. They have lived as peaceful neighbors with the Israelis, but Arab leaders keep calling for a Jihad or holy war against the Jews, and it is this that leads to all the suffering on both sides.

The real tragedy, however, lies in the unfolding of history. In this, Uris excels, because he makes the headlines of the past and the statements in the history books come to life. He clarifies much that has needed clarification these past few years. Why are the Palestinians behaving the way they do? Why have they been driven from the land? Why has their fate been so pathetic and what has provoked their intense bitterness?

All this is explained early on in the book. But Uris goes on and on with his story, which becomes more melodramatic and has less credence as it continues. The British waffling on the Balfour Agreement becomes as much of a villainous action as anything stirred up by the Grand Mufti. And the partitioning of the Middle East after World War I sows the seeds of disaffection and misery that are still taking their toll.

With the overthrow of King Farouk and the rise of Nasser, Egypt seizes upon the opportunity to oust Britain and France and their suzerainty over the Suez Canal. This starts the Israelis on a preemptive strike and the British and French on the march to regain the canal.

How all this affects the Haj and his family and their sad fate brings the story to a climax. The conclusion should have been powerful, but it only seems long overdue, at least to this reader.

All in all, "The Haj" is a mixed bag that should intrigue some readers and put off others. It is a polemic that, as fiction, leaves much to be desired.

Putting parent in nursing home may be best for all concerned

By VIOLET RUDD
King Features Syndicate

She slammed the checkbook down on the table. Tears glistened in her eyes and she dropped her head onto her folded arms. "I'm losing my mind. I can't think anymore. I keep making mistakes."

This was my mom — my strong, independent, self-sufficient mom. It was happening to her just as it happens to thousands of elderly persons who live to what we call "a ripe old age."

At first we don't recognize it. It comes slowly, silently, like a thief in the night, robbing the unsuspecting victims of their ability to cope with small frustrations.

Confusion sets in, memory dulls a bit. It becomes a hazardous proposition for our loved ones to continue to live alone when their confusion and failing memory leads to overdoses of medication or missed dosages which may be vital to both their physical and mental health.

You struggle with the inner conflict, reluctant to admit that your elderly parent needs more than you are physically and mentally capable of giving. A nursing home is the last place you want to consider.

YOU TOY WITH the idea of moving your parent into your home where you can provide the companionship and loving atmosphere which is so vital to his or her well being.

That's a commendable spirit but doesn't grapple with the reality of the situation. It's one thing when the trouble is failing memory, forgetfulness, and quite another when deteriorating discs, a fractured pelvis or a broken hip necessitate 24-hour, round-the-clock skilled care.

It's then you are faced with what will undoubtedly be the most undesirable and traumatic decision you will ever be called upon to make. For a nursing home, no matter how glamorous the name, is still an institution.

Although nursing homes can offer more care, greater protection, fewer daily chores and provide more social contacts, most elderly people desperately prefer to remain in their own homes, fighting the loneliness and foregoing the advantages.

Recently, Sen. John Heinz from Pennsylvania appeared on a nationally televised PBS broadcast. According to him, there are 1.2 million elderly persons living in nursing homes. Is your parent about to become one of these statistics? If so, you will be deeply concerned with the quality of care doled out by these facilities.

In the latter part of 1982, the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) made an effort to deregulate the nursing home industry and substantially diminish the federal government's role in monitoring the quality of nursing home care.

THIS BECAME bogged down in Congress and an amendment in the HHS appropriation bill exended the nursing home regulations moratorium for an additional 120 days, giving Congress more time to iron out compromises on the proposed regulations.

The changes in regulations would mean:

— Annual inspections would no longer be required. Instead, inspections would usually occur only once every two years.

— Return visits by an inspector to assure compliance with necessary changes in the nursing home would no longer be required.

— Nursing homes could be accredited (i.e., authorized to operate) by private organizations instead of a state government agency.

These are but a few of the suggested changes which could downgrade the services offered by nursing homes. As the Association of American Retired Persons points out, it is not appropriate for the federal government to delegate these responsibilities to private organizations which are not accountable to the public.

The purpose of nursing home inspections and certification should be to make sure residents are receiving the quality and type of care needed.

The search for a good nursing home that meets your requirements involves many considerations. The ideal situation is to find one in the town in which you live. If, as in my case, your parent lives in one state and you and other family members live in various states, you are presented with a dilemma: Which location do you choose?

In preliminary discussions with my brother, I had expressed a wish to have Mom come stay with me until such time as she needed nursing care. This sounded ideal, because I lived in her home town. There would be friends and relatives who would be able to visit her.

HOWEVER, FATE plays tricks on us. Mom became ill while visiting my brother in Kansas. After a lengthy hospital stay, the doctor told us Mom would never again be able to live alone and she was going to need the kind of care obtainable only in a nursing home. She was too ill to move here, so my brother started a search for a good nursing home.

I was devastated. All kinds of thoughts raced through my head. Although I knew eventually nursing care was inevitable, I was never quite ready to accept that the time was now.

The very words "nursing home" conjure up pictures of old, old people with blank expressions, seemingly disinterested in everything going on around them. I couldn't stifle the feeling that Mom was not that bad, and how could she keep her sanity when all around her was, for lack of a better word, "insanity"?

From conversations I've had with other families facing the same kinds of decisions, I discovered they, too, have misgivings.

IT'S IMPORTANT to realize that adjustments to this new situation is a two-way street requiring acceptance, not only by your parent, but by you as well. Be prepared for bitterness, resentment and questions like — "What am I doing here? Whose idea was it? Can't I go home? I can take care of myself."

As you look around at the blank stares of the residents in the home and hear the cries of, "Help me, help me, girlie," you can't keep from thinking, "What have I done?" Emotion runs high and it will take patience and understanding as you try to cope with guilt feelings.

What you have done, you must tell yourself, is to try to give your mom or dad the best medical attention in the most comfortable surroundings you can provide.

To locate the ideal facility, you will need to visit numerous homes, talk with the staff, especially the social worker, and inquire into the activities available. Make certain that there is adequate help to properly and efficiently handle the number of residents housed in the institution.

Avoid setting up appointments with the homes during the screening process as this gives them advance notice that you are coming and affords them the opportunity to put their best foot forward. For a real down-to-earth insight into their daily routine and treatment of patients, make impromptu visits.

There are good homes and bad ones, so be diligent in your search. We are very satisfied with the home we found and have discovered that a church-affiliated nursing home looks after your spiritual nourishment as well as mental and physical needs.

NURSES AND nurses' aides with a caring touch are vital to the health and happiness of the resident. Backing all the efforts of the nursing staff should be frequent visits by family. Love can do wonders.

We saw Mom transform from an unhappy, uncooperative, non-accepting patient to one who feels at home. She has regained her sense of wit and humor, kidding with the nurses and devouring the attention they shower on her.

All this tender loving care doesn't come cheap. Cost has become a crushing burden for millions of Americans. The average fee for room and board is approximately $1,400 to $1,500 a month. Medicines and therapy are additional. Therefore, your first consideration in locating the proper facility is to ascertain whether it has been approved by Medicare and Medicaid, for if it hasn't, your parent will not have insurance coverage under either of these programs.

Medicare hospital insurance (Part A) is available at age 65 for those individuals meeting certain requirements. Those not meeting the requirements may still be covered by paying a premium. Medicare medical insurance (Part B) is optional and requires the payment of a premium if coverage is desired.

A pamphlet entitled "Your Medicare Handbook" is available at your local Social Security office. It outlines very thoroughly which expenses are covered and which are not.

Usually, it is advisable to carry supplemental insurance (Medigap policy) to cut down on the out-of-pocket expenses. However, exert extreme caution is subscribing to any Medigap policies, because many inappropriate coverages are often sold to the unsuspecting senior citizen by deceptive or fraudulent insurance representatives.

LOW-INCOME elderly (those considered to be extremely poor or living in poverty) are covered by Medicaid and do not need additional insurance because Medicaid pays almost all costs, including long-term nursing care. Applications for Medicaid are made through the Welfare Department.

Once you have established which institutions are approved by Medicare and Medicaid, you will want to focus on some other important considerations.

—Remember failing eyes need good lighting. If reading, writing or any hand work is to be encouraged at all, the resident must have good natural and artificial lighting.

—Diet. Is there a dietitian on the staff so that good food and proper diet is available to meet the specific needs of each individual — as needed in the case of a diabetic or heart patient?

—Medication vs. senility. Be aware of what medications are being prescribed and what they are supposed to do. You have a right to know. Many times the doctors and nurses fail to recognize that a given drug or medication causes a person to act in a peculiar way. They brand the patient senile when what is really needed is to change or stop the medication.

—Accurate inventory records. A good system is to label every item a resident possesses with his or her name, listing it in the official record book. This system worked very effectively one day when Mom's new shoes disappeared. One of the more mobile residents had been eyeing them daily, and when they turned up in her room, we were able to reclaim them.

—Doctors. Is there one or more house doctors available for routine visits and emergencies?

—Ambulance service. Is there access to emergency units and/or fast ambulance service in a nearby location?

—Fire protection — is it adequate? During a recent electrical storm a transformer was struck by lightning setting off a fire. In minutes firemen were on the scene and all 150 patients in beds and wheelchairs were evacuated safely to the parking lot.

—Social activities. Many homes offer musical and slide programs, bingo, crafts and non-denominational church or devotional services.

—Hairdresser or beauty salon. Many institutions have this service available. Clean, attractive, stylish coiffure can do wonders for a resident's morale.

—Cleanliness. Observe how frequently floors are scrubbed, bed linen changed and bathrooms cleaned. Note the residents' appearance. Is their attire neat and clean or spotted and neglected? This assumes, of course, you have provided sufficient changes of clothing to allow for spills and accidents.

Searching for and choosing a nursing home that meets your needs sounds like a big undertaking. It is, but if you take the time to do a thorough investigation before committing a loved one into a stranger's hands, you will be rewarded with a tranquility and peace of mind that will justify all the effort.

U.S. coal tonnage drops

U.S. coal miners worked 343.1 million employee-hours in 1983, compared with 410.9 million in 1982. Employment was down from 240,155 in 1982 to 198,039. Tonnage mined decreased from 792.6 million in 1982 to 747.6 million in 1983.

U.S. sends millions abroad

Since 1914, U.S. passports have required a photograph of the bearer. They assumed their present format in 1926. Of the 16 million valid American passports, 4 million were used in international travel in 1983.

Exercise, proper diet can alleviate cabin fever

King Feautures Syndicate

The words "cabin fever" conjure up images of mountain men and trappers snowed into the same room and the same underwear for six months. The cliche finds peaceable partners carving each other up with an ax from the woodpile or screaming into the wilderness.

Such wintry scenes are identified with cabin fever, a form of claustrophobia that can strike anybody at any time. Cabin fever is so named because it occurs when a person is isolated from others and forced into inactivity. As one psychologist, John B. Schoonmaker, commented, "Why do you think solitary confinement is such a horrible punishment? Man is a social animal."

Cabin fever devastates Phoenix dwellers in the middle of July as much as it does Minnesotans during the dark days of January. According to Dr. Lucian T. Jones, a clinical psychologist practicing in Houston, Texas, alcoholism, child abuse, divorce and even murder can accompany cabin fever.

Most psychiatrists and general practitioners who treat cabin fever agree that the disorder occurs when people fail to eat and exercise properly, let monotony take over and turn inward. Women are most at risk, especially women with young children and few support systems.

JONES EMPHASIZED, "There's nothing more isolating and deadly to personality than being a newcomer without friends in a large city like Houston."

Symptoms are progressive. At first the sufferer feels nervous and restless, distracted and disoriented. Gradually these symptoms intensify. Depression sets in, then the sufferer slips into a boring routine, neglects hygiene and diet, and becomes paralyzed enough to get in bed and stay there.

If the afflicted person doesn't recognize the onset of cabin fever and take steps to alleviate it, the result can be self-destructive and violent.

Alicia Moores (all names are fictitious, but the situations are real) worked as a clerk typist in an insurance company near the Pensacola, Florida, Naval Air Station. Because Alicia's husband was on a six-month sea-duty tour, her babysitter was her only adult contact. Most of her job consisted of typing dictation recorded by various agents. On weekends, Alicia never saw anyone except her 2- and 6-year-olds.

By the time her husband had been gone two months, Alicia was listless, depressed and lonely. Her body ached and the ache made her irritable. Normal 2-year-old spills and messes provoked Alicia into frequent spankings. Sometimes the spankings left bruises.

THE SITUATION could have deteriorated until Alicia's spankings became beatings. Luckily, an acquaintance recognized Alicia's depression and the symptoms of cabin fever.

The acquaintance, Dana, had recently moved from Anchorage, Alaska. She had worked there at The Cabin Fever Clinic, a mental-health facility, so named because the psychiatrists specialized in treatment of depression and anxiety brought on by geographical isolation and bad weather. Dana helped Alicia turn her life around before serious damage occurred.

Alicia had to revamp her eating and exercise habits. Most convenience and snack foods are high in sugar, salt and fats, all of which have an adverse affect on a body dealing with stress.

Dr. Jane Burns, a director of the Alaskan Cabin Fever Clinic, recommends restricting these taste-good, but not-good-for-you ingredients and focusing on five or six protein-rich meals a day. The protein should then be balanced with complex carbohydrates, vitamins and minerals derived from whole grains, fruits and vegetables.

In addition, Dr. Jones recommends that his patients stop smoking and curtail or eliminate alcohol consumption. Alcohol masks the body's need for nourishment by loading it with empty calories.

A BODY STRESSED and depressed by cabin fever needs completely balanced meals at frequent intervals to replenish depleted stores. The body also needs controlled exercise that boosts heart and lung rates.

All experts interviewed recommended a combination of diet and exercise. Research has been conducted on the effect of exercise in treating various types of depression (such as that brought on by cabin fever).

Dorothy Harris, professor of sport psychology at Penn State University, conducted experiments with two groups of people who reported feeling depressed. Her findings after eight weeks are discussed in Julia Klein's article, "Running Away from Depression" ("Ms," May 1983).

Group A was treated for depression through counseling alone. Group B combined counseling with running and other exercises that increased heart and respiration rates. Group B conquered the depression and came back to normal much more quickly than Group A.

Michael Sacks, a professor at the University of Quebec, also conducted experiments on the beneficial effects of exercise and is quoted in the same article. Sacks found that exercise increases the level of endorphines (brain secretions similar to morphine) and thus helps the body endure physical and mental discomfort.

EXERCISE NOT only lowers anxiety levels and lifts the spirits, but makes a body more fit. When Alicia supplemented her improved diet with 15 minutes of calisthenics, her mood improved and she was able to cope with the stress of single parenting. Alicia gained the added benefit of lost inches and a trimmer figure.

Besides an exercise and diet routine, classic cabin-fever treatment includes getting out of ruts. A schedule is great for organization, but the same old thing day after day wears down the spirit and clogs the mind.

Dr. Jones advises, "Find fulfillment — and this doesn't necessarily mean going back to school. Use your creativity and talents; play the piano again, explore literature."

Janine Westerfield of Houston found herself ready to throttle her 3-year-old daughter, Maria, a dozen times a day. She'd quit a medical-technician job she liked because she wanted to be a full-time mother. But her preschooler's level of conversation was less than stimulating, and Janine's days became routine.

Instead of returning to work, Janine decided to volunteer her skills at the local children's medical center a few hours a week. Time spent at nursery school delighted Maria; she became much less demanding and more capable of entertaining herself.

AS MARIA GOT older, Janine planned field trips and excursions or creative time at home that fostered her relationship with her daughter and brought variety to her days. Janine and Maria toured a bakery, visited an ambulance-assembly plant, petted baby animals at the zoo and fed the pigs at a small farm on the outskirts of town.

Myron Swenson, a 70-year-old retired man described the first year after his wife died: "I wanted to put my head in the oven or take too many pills. I'd lie in bed willing my heart to stop."

Myron quit seeing friends, stopped taking baths and lived for weeks on peanut butter and coffee. Myron isn't sure what single thing started him back to living, but credits his involvement in the Foster Grandparent program as a major step. Reaching out to unhappy kids took his mind off himself.

Natalie Bates, who almost succumbed to depression after being widowed at the age of 59, conquered her cabin fever by picnicking in the park for dinner several times a week and making puppets for the neighborhood children.

Stephanie Martin joined a theater group and rekindled a 30-year love of drama. After her divorce, Jenni Foster lifted her depression and supplemented her income by doing custom sewing for a sporting-goods boutique.

ANYTHING THAT broke the routine was each person's cabin-fever cure.

People who scream at their children, snap at co-workers and stifle urges to kick in the walls should suspect cabin fever and embark on a cure. Psychologists and family doctors from Alaska to Florida unanimously recommend that sufferers examine diet and exercise habits and make necessary changes.

Then they should vary daily routines, break down physical and emotional barriers and reach out to others. Once recognized, cabin fever, a potentially dangerous disorder, can be treated and eliminated.

Tips for coping

— Take cabin fever seriously, but don't take yourself too seriously.

— Eat five or six high-protein meals a day; balance those meals with complex carbohydrates, vitamins and minerals.

— Embark on a mild exercise program; check with your doctor if you are over 40 or have a chronic health problem.

— Think about somebody outside yourself; volunteer your talents.

— Start a hobby or revitalize an old interest.

— Take a different route to work or school every day for a week.

— Paint your bedroom.

— Babysit free for a friend (only if you don't have children of your own at home, unless you can trade off).

— Plan and invite your mate on a weekend "mini-honeymoon."

Single parents face challenge

King Features Syndicate

The single-parent family is the fastest-growing family form in North America. About one out of five children under the age of 18 now lives in a one-parent home.

That's almost 12 million children, and each year over one million new children are added to the roster because of divorce. Thousands more become members of single-parent homes through desertion, births out of wedlock or the death of one parent.

Some single people are now being allowed to adopt children. The increase of single-parent families has almost doubled during the last decade.

Single parents face all the same challenges that couples face, plus the added struggles brought about by their single status. Most single parents are mothers, but the number of families maintained by fathers alone has been growing rapidly. Between 1970 and 1979, according to the U.S. Bureau of Census, single-parent homes headed by fathers rose 65 percent.

To both mothers and fathers, providing 24-hour care and supervision for children, learning and doing all the household tasks, and devoting the necessary time to a full-time career or job can be an overwhelming challenge.

Here are some helpful suggestions gleaned from family-life specialists to help you with the challenge of being the best parent you can be to a child who is facing many of the same emotional struggles that you are.

Get a handle on your own problems and feelings

You are facing some of the most traumatic personal problems that you will ever face in your life, but you can't provide effective parenting for your children until you are in control of yourself. As an adult, you must work hard to handle your own problems in order to help your children understand and handle theirs.

Get some help, if you feel it will speed up your adjustment to the situation. But for the sake of the kids, really work at getting your act together again and providing them with a stable home environment to nurture their feelings of insecurity.

Tell your children the truth

Of course, you have to face the reality of the situation first of all, in order to rise above the self-pity and hostility that are often present. Only then can you present a fair picture of reality to the children involved.

Single parents have the best intentions in their parental responsibilities, but unconsciously or unknowingly they may add to the confusion and hurt for the children. Where divorce is concerned, it is easy to give children a biased, bitter or distorted account of what brought about the divorce, and what is still happening in the adjustment period.

A parent who degrades, belittles or criticizes a former spouse may cause the child to question how truthful the parent is in other matters. This is an easy way to lose the trust of your child.

How much you tell them should depend on the age and emotional maturity of the child involved. Whatever you tell them, be sure that it is true.

Become aware of children's emotional stress

Children in single-parent families generally are normal children facing the usual problems of growing up. But they also are the innocent victims of the circumstances they find themselves in, and they sometimes suffer more than the adults involved.

Added to the challenge of helping children deal with the situation is the knowledge that each child is a unique individual, and facts devastating to some will go almost unnoticed by others. In addition, behavior of children is not always a true reflection of their feelings.

As a single parent, you must improve your skills of listening and communicating accurately and effectively in order to deal successfully with your children. Often the busy schedule required to provide for the physical needs of the family leaves little time for important emotional considerations, but the effort it takes is well worth the understanding that is gained.

Children who suddenly find themselves in a one-parent home often suffer a loss of self-esteem. At first they may feel abandoned, unloved and unlovable, or unwanted. Or they may feel guilty, as in the case of divorce, that they were somehow responsible for the breakup.

They may also feel very insecure. If one parent can die or leave home as a result of divorce or separation, a child may reason that the remaining parent could do the same. And then who would take care of them, they wonder.

Emotional stress in your children may show up in many ways. If they are in school, grades may change and behavior problems may increase. They may be constantly angry and pugnacious. Or they may withdraw from former friends and avoid new relationships.

Provide missing sex role models

Through their association with parents, children learn many valuable lessons relating to other people. When either parent is missing in the family, a substitute needs to be provided. This person would be able to interact frequently and in a meaningful way with each child.

Relatives, friends, church counselors, teachers and coaches could all be considered for role models for your children. Just being around grown-ups of both sexes helps children become more aware of the norms of female and male sexuality.

Of course, if the missing parent is available to establish a relationship with the child, all the better. An increasing number of divorced individuals are being granted joint custody, and even in cases where joint custody is not awarded, the upbringing of the child is shared by both parents. This gives each the opportunity to contribute the uniqueness of his or her sex.

Don't use children as emotional crutch

As a single parent, you need to realize the dangers of using children for your own emotional release either as a source to vent your anger or to seek comfort and emotional support.

If you have lost a spouse through death, it is only natural that you initially seek consolation and support from your children. But remember that they will be going through the mourning process, just as you must do, and that placing adult expectations and responsibilities on them may complicate their own process of dealing with the death.

A woman who tells her young son that he will now be the "man" of the house may scare him by placing a vision of all the things his dad had done before his eyes. A man may expect his children to take over household duties that his wife had handled, but are too much responsibility for the young children.

In addition to the emotional adjustment to the loss of a partner, divorced persons most often continue in some kind of relationship with their former spouse, especially when children are involved. Recent studies show that regardless of their intentions, divorced parents often use their children to vent their anger against the former spouse.

Learn how to use loneliness

Being alone when you've been part of a couple for so long can be really scary. But painful as the experience may be, disappointments, crises and hurt often provide the opportunity for valuable growth and development.

Although loneliness is not a condition to strive for, it is part of most single parents' experience. It need not be feared. It can be a time for profitable meditation, self-examination and goal setting. Evaluation and goal setting are techniques that help people get control of their lives.

Loneliness may be part of your life for a while, but use the experience to work for a happier, more meaningful and more healthy future. The end of a relationship can offer a new beginning for you and your children.

Find out where to get help

Family life specialists are becoming increasingly aware of the needs of single parents, therefore the resources for support are growing. Churches, volunteer organizations, places of work and community and private social service agencies are all places single parents can explore for support, both for yourself and your children.

Friends also can provide support and assistance with your challenge of being a single parent. Old friends can be called on for emotional support, or help with family tasks that may be new to you. The can be confidants and sounding boards for finding solutions to situations that are confusing and difficult.

Old friends are important, but reach out to make new friends, too. Others who are in situations similar to yours will understand your needs better than anyone else. And you can return the favor by becoming part of their support system. That's what friends are for.

But don't forget a resource that is yours alone — your extended family. Reach out to brothers and sisters and other relatives. Re-establish relationships with aunts, cousins, grandparents. Help your children to see that your small family group is very much a part of a larger family.

Chicken used in recipes from around world

King Features Syndicate

OLD-FASHIONED DUTCH CHICKEN PIE

You'll find recipes for chicken potpie in many parts of the world. This hearty one — moist chunks of chicken, mushrooms, onions, carrots, tucked under a sour-cream pastry crust — comes from South Africa, to which the Dutch brought it over 100 years ago.

All-purpose flour
Salt
4 tablespoons butter
¼ cup sour cream
2 tablespoons salad oil
1 2½-pound broiler-fryer, cut up
½ pound small white onions, peeled and halved
½ pound medium mushrooms, quartered
2 large carrots, thinly sliced
¼ teaspoon pepper
1½ cups water
1 egg, slightly beaten

Into medium bowl, measure ¾ cup flour and ¼ teaspoon salt. With pastry blender or two knives used scissor-fashion, cut butter or margarine and sour cream into flour mixture until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. With hands, shape pastry into a ball; wrap with plastic wrap and refrigerate.

Meanwhile, in 12-inch skillet over medium-high heat, in hot salad oil, cook chicken pieces, a few at a time, until well browned on all sides, removing chicken pieces to deep 2-quart casserole as they brown.

In drippings remaining in skillet, cook onions, mushrooms, carrots, pepper and 1½ teaspoons salt until browned, stirring frequently. With slotted spoon, remove vegetables to casserole with chicken.

Into drippings remaining in skillet over medium heat, stir 3 tablespoons flour until blended; cook 1 minute. Gradually stir in water; cook, stirring constantly, until mixture is slightly thickened and brown bits are loosened from bottom of skillet. Pour mixture into casserole.

Preheat oven to 350 F. On lightly floured surface with floured rolling pin, roll pastry ball about 1 inch larger all around than casserole. Cut decorative design in pastry. Place pastry loosely over chicken mixture. Fold overhang under and press pastry gently all around rim of baking dish so it will not shrink.

Brush pastry with beaten egg. Bake pie 1 hour or until crust is golden and chicken is tender. Makes 6 servings. 420 calories per serving.

CHICKEN CREOLE

In southern Louisiana where it originated, Creole cooking starts, as this recipe does, with a delicious dark "roux" made of oil and flour flavored with green pepper, celery and onion.

2 tablespoons salad oil
1 2½-pound broiler-fryer, cut up
3 tablespoons all-purpose flour
2 medium celery stalks, sliced
1 large green pepper, cut into strips
1 medium onion, sliced
1 16-ounce can tomatoes
½ cup water
1 teaspoon salt
¼ to ½ teaspoon hot pepper sauce
1 10-ounce package frozen whole okra
1 cup regular long-grain rice

In 12-inch skillet over medium-high heat, in hot salad oil, cook chicken, a few pieces at a time, until well browned on all sides, removing chicken pieces to plate as they brown; set aside.

Into drippings remaining in skillet, stir flour; cook, stirring constantly, until flour is dark brown (mixture will be thick). Add celery, green pepper and onion; cook over medium heat until vegetables are tender, stirring occasionally.

Return chicken to skillet; stir in tomatoes with their liquid, water, salt and hot pepper sauce; over high heat, heat to boiling. Reduce heat to low; cover and simmer 20 minutes.

Add frozen okra; over high heat, heat to boiling. Reduce heat to low; cover and simmer 15 minutes longer or until chicken and okra are tender, stirring mixture occasionally.

Meanwhile, prepare rice as label directs, keep warm.

To serve, skim off fat from liquid in skillet. Serve chicken mixture with rice. Makes 4 servings.

TANDOORI-STYLE CHICKEN

In India this traditional chicken with its spicy marinade is cooked over hot coals in a clay-lined oven called a tandoor.

For this version, using the same blend of spices — cumin, coriander, turmeric and more — you'll get great results cooking the dish in the broiler. In fact, you"ll find the broiled chicken much tastier, juicier.

3 medium onions
Salad oil
1 garlic clove
¼ cup plain yogurt
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 tablespoon minced, peeled gingerroot or ¾ teaspoon ground ginger
2 teaspoons salt
1½ teaspoons ground coriander
1 teaspoon sugar
½ teaspoon ground cumin
½ teaspoon turmeric
¼ teaspoon ground red pepper
2 2½-pound broiler-fryers, quartered

Dice 1 onion; slice remaining onions; set aside. In blender or in food processor with knife blade attached, place diced onion, 3 tablespoons salad oil and remaining ingredients except chicken. Cover; blend at high speed until mixture is pureed. Pour mixture into 13-inch by 9-inch baking dish.

Add chicken to marinade, turning pieces to coat well. Cover and refrigerate at least 4 hours, turning chicken occasionally.

Preheat broiler if manufacturer directs. Place chicken quarters, skin-side down, on rack in broiling pan; baste with some marinade. About 7 to 9 inches from source of heat (or at 450 F.), broil chicken 25 minutes or until browned. Turn chicken skin-side up; baste with marinade; broil 15 to 20 minutes longer until fork-tender.

Meanwhile, in 3-quart saucepan over medium-high heat, in 2 tablespoons hot salad oil, cook sliced onions until golden and tender, about 15 minutes, stirring occasionally.

To serve, arrange chicken on warm large platter; top chicken with onion slices. Makes 8 servings.

CHICKEN-VEGETABLE STIR FRY

Here's chicken cooked the popular (quick, easy) Chinese way, cut into small pieces and briefly stir-fried with mushrooms, green onions, carrots, whole baby corn, sprinkled last minute with golden threads of crisp and pungent gingerroot, classic garnish in real Chinese cooking.

2 whole large chicken breasts
¼ cup soy sauce
1 tablespoon sherry
2 teaspoons cornstarch
½ teaspoon sugar
2 2-inch-long pieces gingerroot, each about ¾ inch in diameter
¼ cup salad oil
½ pound mushrooms, sliced or 1 15-ounce can straw mushrooms, drained
4 medium green onions, cut into 2-inch pieces
2 medium carrots, thinly sliced
1 medium zucchini, thinly sliced
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup water
1 15½-ounce can whole baby corn in water, drained (optional)

On cutting board, cut each chicken breast in half. Working with one half at a time, place it skin-side up. With tip of sharp knife, starting parallel and close to large end of rib bone, cut and scrape meat away from bone and rib cage, gently pulling back meat in one piece as you cut.

Discard bones and skin and cut off white tendon. Then, with knife held in slanting position, almost parallel to the cutting surface, slice across width of each half into ½-inch-thick slices.

In medium bowl, combine chicken, soy sauce, sherry, cornstarch and sugar; set aside.

Peel gingerroot; cut lengthwise into very thin slices; cut slices into hair-thin strips. In 12-inch skillet over medium-high heat, in hot salad oil, cook ginger 1 to 2 minutes until lightly browned, gently stirring. With slotted spoon, remove ginger to paper towels to drain.

In oil remaining in skillet over medium-high heat, cook fresh mushrooms, green onions, carrots, zucchini and salt until vegetables are tender-crisp, stirring quickly and frequently. With slotted spoon, remove vegetables to another medium bowl.

In oil remaining in skillet over high heat, cook chicken mixture just until chicken is tender, stirring quickly and frequently and adding more oil if needed. Return vegetables to skillet; add water, stirring to loosen brown bits from bottom of skillet.

If using straw mushrooms, add to mixture in skillet with baby corn; heat through. Spoon chicken mixture into warm bowl. Garnish with fried ginger. Makes 4 servings.

CHICKEN HAVANA

Skillet cooking, Cuban style. For this mildly spiced dish with its tangy sauce, cut-up chicken is combined with bits of ham, hot green chilies, tomatoes, plump raisins and bananas. Use plantains instead of bananas, as the Cubans do, if you can find them in your market.

¼ cup golden raisins
¼ cup white wine vinegar

2 tablespoons salad oil
1 2½-pound broiler-fryer, cut up
¼ pound cooked ham, diced
1 16-ounce can tomatoes
1 4-ounce can green chilies, drained and cut into strips
1 tablespoon light brown sugar
2 firm small bananas

In small bowl, mix raisins with white wine vinegar; set aside.

In 12-inch skillet over medium-high heat, in hot salad oil, cook chicken pieces, a few at a time, until browned on all sides, removing pieces to bowl as they brown; set aside.

In drippings remaining in skillet over medium heat, cook diced ham until lightly browned. Add tomatoes with their liquid, green chilies, brown sugar and chicken; over high heat, heat to boiling. Reduce heat to low; cover and simmer 20 minutes.

Add raisin mixture; cover and simmer 15 minutes longer or until chicken is fork-tender. Skim off fat from liquid in skillet. Slice bananas diagonally into ½-inch pieces; gently stir into chicken mixture; heat through. Makes 6 servings.

Wedding customs get taste of high tech

By LISA GERLOCK
Lifestyle Editor

In the age of high tech, even one of the most traditional customs of our society has been computerized. Pre-ordered nuptial gifts now include not only the conventional china, towels and waffle irons, but everything from muffin pans to microwave oven bacon racks and cocktail forks.

With the "computerized registry," a Midland bride-to-be can register here — and Great Aunt Martha in San Angelo can walk into her hometown store and order the egg slicer the bride requested.

The registry is used in 87 stores throughout the five-state region of Dillard's department stores. Titled "Bride Ideas," the service offers brides and customers in the store's region to order and purchase items from a mutual computer printout.

It's quick, packages don't have to be mailed or returned — "and a gift card can't break," according to Linda Faulkner, bridal consultant at Dillard's in Midland Park Mall.

The department store chain introduced the computerized bridal registry two years ago and the Midland store has been using the service for "about 1½ years," Ms. Faulkner said.

The process begins with the bride-to-be's visit to the store, preferably two months before the wedding. She and the bridal consultant shop departments throughout the store, including electronics, lingerie, linens, appliances, cookware and towels. Together, they spend "about four or five days," to complete the list. The list is then fed into the computer, itemizing colors, sizes, quantities and other detailed information.

Gift-givers then visit the store — whatever town it may be in — to check the printout to see what item the bride needs, the quantity, brand name, color and sizes. They purchase the item, but the gift the bride receives may be in the form of a gift certificate designating the specific item the giver purchased. The printout is updated every morning, according to Ms. Faulkner, to prevent duplication of gifts, though the store doesn't guarantee the bride won't get two or more of one item. A disclaimer at the bottom of the printout also says the store cannot guarantee availablity of all items at all times.

Brides like the program, Mrs. Faulkner said, and gift-givers appreciate having a choice and knowing the item they purchase will be of use.

"They appreciate having a choice of prices, too."

This memorable Alfred Angelo taffeta ball gown, designed by Michele Piccione, is trimmed with satin ribbon. It has a sculptured imported silk floss Chantilly lace bodice and a circular skirt that sweeps to a semi-cathedral train which moves gracefully down the aisle as the bride apporaches her beloved.

Guide to planning, financing wedding

No matter how many family members and friends have been through the age-old rituals of marriage, questions still arise. For a quick refresher, the following is a brief rundown of who pays for what and when, taken from traditional tips from the Alfred Angelo "Bridal Guide for You," pamphlet may help in planning the age-old customs.

THE BRIDE

The bride or her family is responsible for paying:
— The engagement party
— Church expenses
— Printing of invitations, announcements and personal stationary
— Wedding gown, veil and accessories
— Reception
— Flowers and music — at the church and reception (including attendants' bouquets)
— Photography
— Personal trousseau
— Groom's wedding ring
— Gifts for bride attendants

THE GROOM

The groom or his family is responsible for paying:
— The bride's engagement and wedding ring
— The marriage license
— Clergy fee

— The bride's bouquet, boutonniers for the men, flowers for the mothers and grandmothers

— Gloves and ties for the groomsmen

— Gifts for the groomsmen
— Groom's tuxedo rental
— Rehearsal dinner
— Honeymoon

The list is no longer sacred and many weddings today are paid for by the two families together or even by the bride and groom themselves. It is important to sit down and talk openly and honestly about expenses, to avoid any uncomfortable questions about expenses later.

Many optional expenses may be paid for by the bride, the groom, their families or the attendants, such as the bachelor party (traditionally given by the groomsmen but may be given by the groom), the bridesmaids' party (traditionally given by the bride but may be given by the bridesmaids), the bridal party's attire (traditionally paid by each usher and bridesmaid, but may be paid for by the bride and groom) and the rehearsal dinner (traditionally paid for by the groom's family, but may be paid by another relative).

Only the bride and groom know best the matters of expenses. They should discuss them thoroughly — over an enjoyable dinner is a good way to start the plans.

The wedding chosen may be either formal, informal or semi-formal.

A formal wedding is in a church, synagogue or hotel and is usually very large, according to Alfred Angelo's guidelines. A guest list ranges from 50 to 500 and generally includes a reception with a full sit-down meal and traditional ceremonies, from cake-cutting to bouquet-throwing. The bridal gown and formal attire is opulent and the wedding party itself is usually quite large, since there should be one usher for every 50 guests. A formal wedding may be scheduled for morning, afternoon or evening.

A semi-formal wedding differs from a formal wedding by degree of fanciness and often includes fewer guests and a smaller wedding party. A bride may wear a long or short dress and the reception may be cocktails and hors d'oeuvres rather than a full sit-down meal.

An informal wedding is most flexible; it allows for the greatest choice in where and when the wedding will be and what type of bridal attire will be worn. An informal wedding may also be most appropriate for a bride who is marrying for the second time. According to the guidebook, an informal wedding dress may be white and floor length but the train and veil are omitted.

Home wedding plans sting nuptial atmosphere

By MARIE DOTY
Copley News Service

Let us consider the planning of a home wedding.

My advice is: Don't!

Offhand, I can't think of anything more fraught with work, confusion, anxiety, panic — not to mention expense — than a home wedding.

I'm convinced that only children with an innate desire to see their parents cry ever have weddings at home.

My youngest daughter's wedding was planned down to the last detail. However, we made some tactical errors.

I decided to give our two bathrooms a final cleaning rather than watch the rehearsal. Advice to the mother-of-the-bride: to heck with bathrooms. Go to the rehearsal.

As it turned out, I was not the only one missing. My husband was still milking, one of the bride's brothers (and usher) was running errands while the other brother-usher was waiting at a train station for a bridesmaid.

"I guess we're lucky you could be here," the minister told the bride and groom with a sigh.

Later, he asked my daughter, "What kind of flowers are you and your bridesmaids carrying?"

"None," she said.

"Oh! Well ... ah ... er ... a simple wedding is nice."

What she didn't tell him — because she wanted to surprise her husband-to-be — was she and the three attendants were carrying parasols. The ceremony was planned for a garden area where roughly 3,000 pink petunias were planted, so at the florist's suggestion she wore only a single camellia on her hat.

Advice to the bride: It's OK to surprise the groom but it's a mistake to surprise the minister.

Five minutes before the ceremony was scheduled, I sent our youngest son down to ring the ship's bell. I figured five minutes was just enough time for the guests, who were wandering around the farm, to be seated.

What neither my son nor I realized — because we had not been at the rehearsal — was that it had been decided to ring the bell just as the bride and her attendants arrived in the garden area. And the Arriving In The Garden was to have been preceded by:

— The vocalists's first song and,

— The entrance of the minister, groom, best man and groomsmen.

It's hard to say who was the most surprised when the bell rang: the wasps, who had built a nest inside the bell; our son, who had to run for his life when all those very cross wasps swarmed out; the groom and entourage, who thought the bride was on her way; the bride and bridesmaids, who thought they had somehow missed the entrance of the men, or the minister, who was just driving in as the bell sounded and thought the entire wedding had started without him.

I will say it certainly whipped everyone into shape without any dillydallying around. The girls and the bride's father lined up by the house while the groom's group quickly gathered around the shaken minister out behind the lilac bushes.

The ushers hustled the groom's parents and me down the aisle in nothing flat.

I sat smiling and nodding to all the guests who were still trotting up breathlessly. However, I was having a problem with the soloist who kept asking, "Shall I start now?"

Shaking her off, I waited for the minister and groom to show up at the sundial ... er, altar. They were still huddled out in the bushes.

Turning to the nearest guest, I hissed, "Tell the minister we're ready to start. Pass it along."

When the message reached the lilacs, the minister meekly trudged in, followed by four thoroughly confused young men.

The vocalist, deciding it was now or never, leaped to her feet and with a nod to the accompanist, launched into the first song. Up at the house, the bride, my husband and the bridesmaids, who couldn't hear a thing, saw the groom and minister waiting and came out to meet them.

As it turned out, all the guests thought is was a lovely innovation to have the wedding procession while the vocalist sang. We did not tell them the organist had to scrap his processional.

Then there was the matter of the parasols. The groom looked surprised, all right.

How gowns become heirlooms

This spring, thousands of brides will be going into bridal stores to purchase their wedding gowns. They may not be one-time purchases — many women pass their wedding gowns on from generation to generation.

If you want your gown to last for several generations to become an heirloom, you must choose the right fabric and take proper care of it. Bill Seitz, executive director of The Neighborhood Cleaners' Association, has some tips for brides-to-be.

According to Seitz, "Silk is extremely delicate and requires special care. Perspiration as well as anti-perspirants will stain and deteriorate the fabric.

"If you wear silk," advises Seitz, "use a quick-drying anti-perspirant and underarm dress shields. Do not put on your gown until your anti-perspirant has dried."

"Rayon," says Seitz, "also is used for wedding gowns. But rayon's sizing may be removed from liquid spillage or during the cleaning process. It is extremely difficult to replace because of the intricate tailoring of most wedding gowns."

So what materials are recommended for that all-important wedding gown? Cotton, nylon, polyester, acetate or blends of these fibers are easier to care for and preserve than either silk or rayon.

Seitz recommends a gown be taken to a cleaner as soon after the wedding as possible, so stains won't have a chance to set.

When it is time to store the gown, it shouldn't be put it in a plastic bag, because the gown will retain moisture and invite mildew and atmospheric fading. Many dry cleaners can prevent this by placing the garment in a special bridal gown box and sealing it. At home, keep the box in a cool, dry area.

With this, "in years to come, when marriage is again in the air, your heir may be putting on your well-preserved heirloom," Seitz says. —CNS

A floral wreath can be an especially flattering choice for brides with long hair.

Final touches enhance total wedding look

A tall bride looks best in a brimmed hat or close-fitting cap. One possibility is the picture hat, for a casual dress. Another is the Juliet cap, for a more formal style.

The headpiece a bride wears on her wedding day is more than an accessory: It's the finishing touch requiring almost as much planning as the dress. How can she be sure she's choosing one to suit the dress and her looks?

Mallory Samson, Bride's magazine fashion editor, suggests future brides ensure a match between the headpiece and dress by shopping for both at the same time and place. Try them on together and check the look from all angles in a full-length mirror.

Remember to match colors — a white headpiece with a white dress, ivory with ivory, maybe a blue satin ribbon woven through a cap if the dress will have a liner or sash of blue. To get the same fabric or lace, ask the bridal consultant to order a half-yard that matches the dress, then let her take care of having the cap or hat made.

A bride with short hair will look particularly nice in a face framer, an almost wreath-like cap. Lavished with pearls or simply banded in fabric, the face framer will do just that: Softly frame your face just as your hair does. Other styles to try are wreath, for curly hair; and the Juliet cap, which sits snugly on the back of the head.

If the bride's hair is shoulder length or longer, she has versatility. Two soft hairstyles to try are to loosely pin just the top and sides of hair together at the crown; let the hair in back flow freely; and circle the crown with a silky wreath or crescent of fresh flowers. Or, brush the hair into a ponytail at the nape; roll, twist, or braid it and pin securely; top it with a dazzling headband of feathers and pearls.

A tall bride looks best in a brimmed hat or close-fitting cap. One possibility is the picture hat, best with a dress that's casual and outdoorsy. Another is the Juliet cap, a more formal style that looks especially nice with hair curling around the face. A tall bride will look elegant wearing the classic mantilla, whereas a short bride can look lost in its draping folds.

If the matilla is elaborately designed with lace and pearls, keep your hair, dress bodice and neckline simple so there's some contrast.

For a short bride, the headpiece is an opportunity to draw the eye upward and present a taller image. The most flattering styles are small in scale and add height at the back of the head. Try a floral circlet, a jewel-encrusted tiara, or a crowned style (called a Camelot).

A less-flattering style, such as the Juliet cap, can work if it's set back on the head and "lifted" with veiling. If a hat is desired, the smaller the brim the better. Small, completely brimless, hats like the pillbox and toque are especially good.

The veil is chosen separately from the headpiece but should complement it. Choices include the 4-yard cathedral length; the 3-yard chapel length; the elbow-length bouffant or the three-tiered fingertip; and the cascade, an almost straight veil.

Caps — whether the half-hat, face framer, or Juliet cap — can take floor-length veils or longer. Wreaths look prettiest with elbow lengths. For hats, try a pouf of veil behind.

Whatever headpiece and veil you choose, they must feel comfortable and secure, so you're not afraid to turn your head or bend over. To help anchor your headpiece, use white hairpins on either side, or at the point where the veil is attached to the hat. If it's a mantilla or wreath, tuck pins through the lace or flowers. To keep a long veil from weighting the bride down, consider ordering one that can detaches from the headpiece when the bride dances at the reception festivities. — CNS

How to look your very best in photographs to last a lifetime

Wedding photographs — how often they are kept for years in wedding albums, displayed proudly on walls and shown to friends again and again by the bridal couple, parents and relatives. They are one of the most permanent keepsakes of this special day.

While it's important to select your photographer carefully, makeup and grooming are equally important.

Professionals agree it is vital to look natural.

"This is not the time to try a different hairstyle or makeup," says Alvin Moss of Michaels Studio in New York. If you wear glasses, he suggests you keep them on for the pictures. You want people to recognize you!

Remember to use a base makeup to hide tiny imperfections that, while not visible to the eye, may be visible to the camera when the photographer takes close-ups. Lip gloss or iridescent lipstick is not recommended because it accentuates imperfections that normally go unnoticed. Blusher should be used sparingly and blended to avoid obvious color lines.

Moss recommends applying a light coat of mascara on both upper and lower lashes. Again, avoid iridescent eye shadow, whites or blues under the eyebrow. These colors photograph almost too well, and you will appear as if you had been wearing sunglasses.

Hair should be styled to complement facial structure. If you want to change your style before your wedding, do it at least three months before so you are comfortable with the new look and people will recognize you in your photos.

Nails should be well manicured because they will be very noticeable in the formal and candid photographs the professional takes.

If the groom has a heavy beard, he may have a problem with "5 o'clock shadow." Professionals suggest using a touch of base makeup to hide any gray shadows that will be picked up by a camera lens.

To hide fatigue lines, parents and any other members of the wedding party should use white liner underneath the lower eyelid.

The entire wedding party is advised to avoid overexposure to the sun prior to the wedding day. The red in a sunburned face is especially overpowering in photographs.

When selecting bridesmaids' attire, it is important to know that darker, deeper hues reproduce with greater clarity than pastels.

Remember the best price for wedding photography does not always mean the best deal. If the professional you have selected comes highly recommended and you like his work but is a bit more expensive, spend $50 less on your cake, for example, but not on your photographs. After all is over and done, you won't miss the cake as much as you would top-quality professional photographs. —CNS

Children symbolize fruitful union

One of the most pleasant responsibilities of planning a wedding is selecting the members of the wedding party. Aside from choosing bridesmaids and ushers, the bride and groom also must decide whether to include children.

Traditionally, the flower girl and ring bearer have represented a fruitful union and making them a part of the wedding can add a special touch, says Millie Martini, Bride's magazine associate editor.

With the increase in second marriages, including any children from a previous marriage lets them know that they will be a part of Mommy's or Daddy's new life. Participating gives them a feeling of security in an awkward time.

As with all members of the wedding party, the smallest ones require special fashions. Today, wedding attire runs the gamut from traditional and formal to contemporary and informal.

The young girl's outfit should coordinate with the bridesmaids' dresses, yet they need not be identical. Formal weddings require long dresses, but either short or long dresses will work at an informal wedding.

Bette Adcock, vice president of design for Nannette, a leading children's wear manufacturer, notes "it is important for children to wear lighter, pastel shades, for sophisticated colors are not flattering to them."

For example, pale pink is a good choice for most young girls and blends well with mauve or dusty rose. A small wreath of delicate flowers, a pair of gloves or lace tights are some accessories to complete the outfit.

A suit or child-size tuxedo is perfect for any young boy participating in the festivities. The style and color depend on the type of wedding and the season in which it will be held. For a winter wedding, a velvet or wool suit is proper. In spring, linen is suitable. The color should match or coordinate with the ushers' tuxedos. For more sophisticated, formal attire, a tuxedo would be charming.

Keep in mind that having children take part in the wedding requires special care and planning. Certain steps can and should be followed to ensure that this joyous occasion is a pleasant experience. Remember, children have short attention spans and are easily bored. Make sure they are well rested the day of the wedding so they will be able to last through the ceremony.

In order to alleviate some of their fear and bewilderment as they walk down the aisle, explain to them the meaning of getting married. In addition, have them practice their roles with the other attendants the day before the wedding. If they understand the significance of the ceremony and the importance of their part, they are more likely to participate with enthusiasm and pride.

Make sure parents have made arrangements for the children after the ceremony is over. Once the service has been completed, the children will need someone to look after them. If the reception is in a hotel, parents may wish to take advantage of their in-house baby sitter. Or, if their home is nearby, they may wish to run the children home and hire their regular sitter.

A special gift will let the children know their hard work was appreciated. A portrait of the entire wedding party will serve as a lasting memento of the event. —CNS

Tradition: Modern couples opt for older ways

Interested in a romantic wedding laced with all the traditional trappings?

Following are some pertinent facts gathered from bridal shop owners and managers, tuxedo rental managers, a bridal registry, brides and bridegrooms:

THE BRIDAL GOWN

Bridal shop prices range from a low of slightly less than $200 to $1,500. Average expenditure is $500 to buy a wedding dress.

There is no one particular look, but popular features include a low waist, off-the-shoulder neckline, puff sleeves, long cathedral train, full skirt, lots of lace and beads. Taffeta and satin are particularly big.

"Most brides are in their mid- to late 20s and have careers," said the manager of one bridal shop. "They like a storybook look."

According to another shop manager, many brides are paying for their gowns themselves, so are budget conscious.

BRIDESMAIDS' DRESSES

Prices average from $80 to $100 to buy a full-length gown. Styles vary. A popular color is lavender.

Most weddings average five to eight attendants, in contrast to two to three in recent years.

THE BRIDEGROOM

Tuxedo rentals average slightly less than $50. Shoe rental for groomsmen is another $8. According to the owner of a tuxedo shop, about 75 percent of bridegrooms wear tails with their groomsmen in tuxedos.

"The bridegroom coordinates color with the bride's dress," the owner said. "A popular color for groomsmen's tuxedos has been a silver tone."

Modern etiquette authority Charlotte Ford in her "Book of Modern Manners" acknowledges the trend today for bridegrooms "to want to look as festive and dazzling as the bride."

"Cutaway coats and tails are being replaced by ruffled colored shirts and variously styled Edwardian jackets or tailcoats in a wide variety of colors," Ford notes.

According to a major department store manager, couples continue to register for practical gift items such as china and silver and traditional housewares. —CNS

Parents of the groom: More to it now

Every bride's family once considered a daughter property until marriage. And since the wedding festivities symbolized the last claim they could make on her, all the pleasures and responsibilities involved belonged to them.

With today's spirit of equality, this is no longer the case. Marriage now is seen as a joining of two people, with both families — the groom's and the bride's — free to share in sponsoring the celebration.

As with all new roles, this is bound to cause some confusion. If your son is getting married, you may not know how to get more involved. Barbara Tober, Bride's magazine editor in chief, says to "talk it over with the bride and groom and see what they'd like you to do." Following are some possibilities.

To begin with, don't neglect to carry out the one tradition that always has been the province of the groom's family — initiating a first meeting with the bride's family. This could be at your home or at a restaurant, over dinner or cocktails — whatever you like. Of course, you may be acquainted already. But if you're not, your graciousness can get things off to a good start.

A wedding planning task you might want to assume is assisting out-of-town guests. Many probably will be your relatives and friends anyway, since most weddings are held in the bride's hometown.

It would be helpful for you to send them a list of nearby hotels. Or, if possible, you might reserve a block of rooms. You also could mail ahead a packet including road directions and ideas on where to eat and what to see and do in the area, in case guests plan to make a long weekend of it.

Though customs vary in different parts of the country, it's becoming more and more common for the groom's family to give the traditional dinner following the ceremony rehearsal.

Don't let the name fool you — a rehearsal dinner doesn't have to be a "dinner." It can be any gathering that suits your style — a barbeque or picnic, cocktails or simple coffee and dessert. It's a good idea to check with the bride's family on whom to invite and what time is best.

Perhaps another contribution you could make is to assume some of the reception expenses. "There's a definite trend toward the groom's family sharing in the expenses," Tober says.

The trend is based in part on practical economic considerations. The average cost of a wedding runs about $4,500. "But," Tober says, "it's at least as much the result of a new attitude that asks why shouldn't the groom's family be more involved in the wedding of their son?"

Costs can be divided in several ways. You could split the whole cost down the middle or settle on specific expenses in advance. For instance, you might agree to cover the flowers, the music and the liquor.

Another idea is for one family to pay for the ceremony (flowers, church rental, limousines), the other to pick up the reception tab. Each of you then has complete jurisdiction over your part of the day.

Diamonds ring of tradition, trends

Time was when young brides-to-be were fortunate if they received an engagement ring before their wedding, the Jewelry Industry Council says.

But today, more than three out of four young women about to marry wear engagement rings. And while the number of women wearing diamonds has increased, the gift of a diamond has not become common. This special gift still is precious and if you've ever wondered why, the council thinks you'll be interested in this ancient Hindu legend.

It was believed that a diamond's magical powers, such as endowing its wearer with strength, courage and clear judgment (to name but three), were lost when the stone was acquired with money. Only when the diamond was received as a gift would its multiple powers manifest themselves.

Aptly chosen as the love stone, the diamond, one of the hardest substances known to man, endures forever. —CNS

'80s trends: Older brides, new invitations

Weddings have taken several forms throughout the years, running from the traditionally formal to whenever and wherever carefree ceremonies. But one factor remained consistent — generally, these weddings were first-time weddings for young couples.

But anyone who believes that all brides are young and blushing should consider these facts: Today, one-fifth of all women getting married for the first time are over 25. Of these, one-third are in their 30s or older.

Also, nearly one-half of today's marriages involve a previously married partner. These facts lead to marriages with special twists only possible today.

The woman who wants to avoid restaging her first wedding can change the day enough so it doesn't remind guests of the previous event. Rather than wear a traditional gown, for instance, she might decide to say her vows in a white or ecru wedding suit.

A shorter, sleek dress style also is popular for older first-time brides and informal weddings. This look places focus on the leg. With textured or sheer hosiery, the look is polished, refined and in tone with this special day.

Hosiery designers have been working with fiber experts at Du Pont to create exciting looks in leg wear for every member of the wedding party.

One of the more innovative styles this season is Gambi's satin ribbon thigh-high. These sheer, iridescent ribbed stockings have a soft band of elastic running around their tops. They hug the thigh and stay up without belts or old-fashioned garters.

Bride's magazine, however, encourages brides to wear a long, lacy white wedding dress if this is what they've always imagined. If this isn't appealing, consider off-white, ivory, cream or the palest pastels such as lavender or sea-green.

Another consideration for older couples or second weddings is the wording of invitations. Many older brides, rather than their parents, sponsor the wedding. Sometimes either one or both of the sponsoring parents will be remarried. At times, the groom's family may host the wedding. All these situations require special wording on invitations. For smaller weddings you may prefer to invite guests in person or by telephone.

Whatever the size of the ceremony, the reception may be as large and lavish as you wish. Invite friends, relatives and business associates. If certain reception customs such as throwing the bouquet or tossing rice seem a little "young" to older brides, leave them out.

Some older brides feel uncomfortable being "given away." This ritual can easily be omitted. But if you would like to be given away and your father is not alive or able to do so, feel free to ask any male relative or usher to perform the role. —CNS

Personalize thank you notes with photos

The wedding and honeymoon are over and the newlyweds are settled into their new home, enjoying their wedding gifts. But lurking behind that scene is the task of thanking the givers of those gifts.

An instant camera can be a big help in sending thank-you notes. Taking a picture of each wedding gift actually in use will personalize the thank you much more than a simple note. After all, there are only a certain number of ways to write, "Thank you for. ..." What's more, it can make the whole process more fun.

The special thank you of a photo doesn't have to wait until after the wedding, either. Instant photos of members of the bridal party are wonderful mementos of the happy occasion that they can take with them. And relatives who live far away can take back pictures of the wedding even before the professionally made photos are available.

Technology is making instant prints much easier to mail, handle and place in photo albums. With Kodak's Kodamatic Trimprint instant color film, the bulky backing of the print can be stripped away, leaving a picture that looks like a traditional photograph. Instant prints can be trimmed to any size without worrying about leakage from developing chemicals, and they're thin enough to slip inside a letter or note card.

Taking pictures is easy and fun. It's a good idea for the new husband and wife to take turns posing and shooting. Try to take pictures with the present actually being used — flowers being placed in a vase, a place setting at dinner, English muffins being placed in a toaster oven. For more static objects, like pictures on walls, try to show the role of the gift in the room's decor and have a person in the photo to add life and scale.

CNS Photo

Thank-you pictures will be better if you get in close to your subject. Try to eliminate extraneous objects from the frame and have the photo reflect only the gift and the person using it. Be careful, however, not to get closer than your camera will allow or your photos will be blurred. —CNS

Sparkling wine, served in a variety of ways, offers a bubbly yet relatively inexpensive alternative to champagne for wedding parties and showers.

Special times deserve bubbly ideas

Engagement parties, bridesmaid brunches and rehearsal dinners are festive occasions meant to be shared with family and friends. When planning these intimate parties, add an extra touch of elegance without taking a big bite out of your overall wedding budget — serve sparkling wine rather than expensive champagnes.

You can celebrate by popping the cork with this alternative at every kind of wedding celebration.

Sparkling wine is an ideal complement to formal and informal party menus. You can serve it with inexpensive hors d'oeuvres and entrees or turn your pre-wedding gatherings into dazzling dinner parties accompanied by sparkling wine served in a variety of ways. Its natural effervescence adds excitement to every occasion once the cork pops and the bubbles rise.

To maximize the pleasure of your wedding celebrations, experts at Viceroy Imports suggest these delicious variations using Champs D'ore, an imported blanc de blanc brut from France:

CHAMPS D'ORE PUNCH

Rind of 1 orange
Rind of 1 lemon
3 tsps. sugar
1 bottle Champs D'ore
2 ozs. cognac
2 ozs. Grand Marnier
2 cups carbonated water
Ice cubes

Place fruit rinds and sugar into two-quart pitcher. Pour in Champs D'oe and liqueurs. Stir and put in refrigerator for two to three hours. Before serving, add carbonated water and ice cubes. Stir gently.

Serves 7 (one cup each).

SHERBET FLOAT

Fill standard wine glass two-thirds full with Champs D'ore; add scoop of your favorite flavor of sherbet. This creamy delight will melt into a luscious foam. Serves 1.

KIR D'ORE

Fill champagne glass two-thirds full of Champs D'ore; add Cassis and twist of lemon. Serves 1.

Orange punch: Juicy idea

CELEBRATION PUNCH

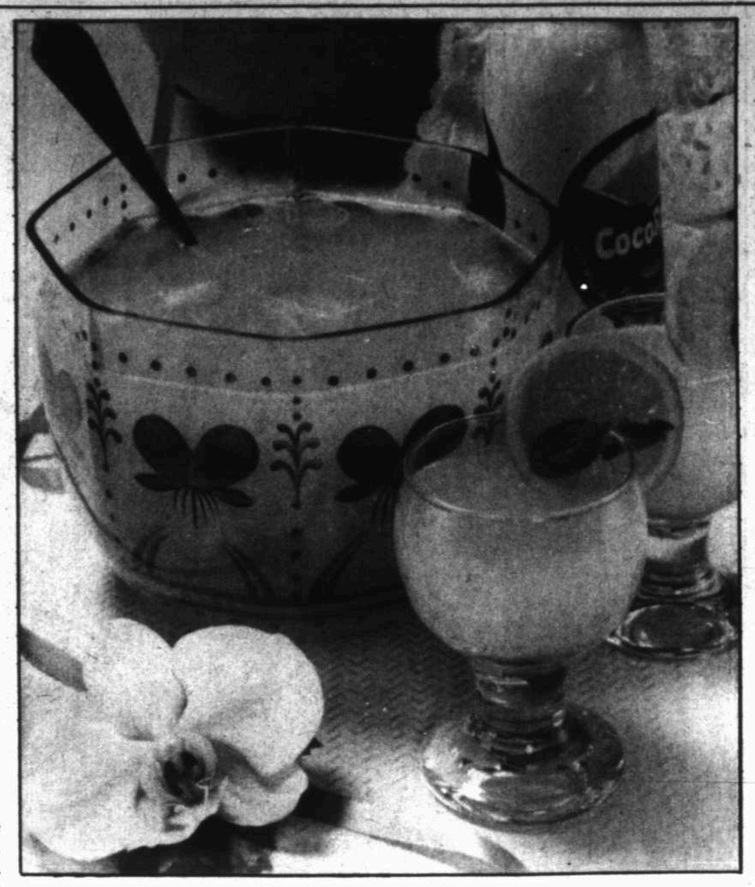
4 cups cranberry juice, chilled
2 cups club soda, chilled
2 cups CocoRibe coconut rum, chilled
Ice
Orange, lemon and lime slices (optional)

In a large punch bowl, stir together cranberry juice, seltzer and coconut rum; add ice and serve. Top with orange, lemon and lime slices, if desired. Makes 2 quarts; 16 servings.

COCO-ORANGE RUM PUNCH

1¾ cups orange juice, chilled
¾ cup CocoRibe cocnut rum
1½ cups ice cubes
1 bottle (750 ml.) extra dry champagne, chilled
Orange and lemon slices, optional
Fresh mint leaves, optional

In a large punch bowl, combine orange juice, cocnut rum and ice. Just before serving, add champagne. Garnish with orange and lemon slices and fresh mint, if desired. Makes 12 servings.



Orange punch with liqueur makes an elegant beverage.

Cake customs intended for good fortune

The wedding cake is an ancient feature of the marriage feast, symbolic of good fortune and fertility. Customs that originated years ago still are practiced today, and the "luck-bringing" attributes of the wedding cake are believed by many.

It's interesting to note that the first slice of cake always must be cut by the bride or "the marriage will be childless."

After the cake has been cut, everyone at the reception must eat a portion, thus ensuring good fortune. It is considered unlucky to refuse a slice, both for the newlywed couple and for the guest.

One notion that has been handed down through generations is that if a young girl sleeps with a piece of wedding cake under her pillow, she will dream that night of her future husband.

One of the more unusual customs can be traced back to Yorkshire and Lincolnshire, England. Traditionally, a plate of cake was flung over the bride's head as she returned from the church and omens were read from the way the plate shattered. The more fragments found, the happier and fuller the marriage would be. If the plate failed to break, it was considered a bad sign: a failure in the marriage. However, some quick-thinking person would usually rush in and immediately stomp on the plate to avert this evil omen!

Naturally, the wedding cake should be made of only the finest ingredients.

Sometimes the bride bakes the cake herself or with the assistance of a few close friends. It's a big undertaking, but the more effort put into all aspects of the wedding and reception, the more the event will be cherished for years to come.

Bacardi rum has some original wedding cake recipes which have been handed down for generations. The rum enhances the batter, adding a festive touch to these light and luscious cakes.

COCONUT RUM WEDDING CAKE

9 cups sifted cake flour
3½ tbsps. baking powder
1 tbsp. salt
2 cups egg whites
5¼ cups sugar
2 cups shortening
3¼ cups milk
¾ cup light rum
1½ tbsps. vanilla
3 cups shredded fresh coconut
5 cups crushed pineapple
1¾ cups sugar
cup lemon juice
cup cornstarch
¾ cup milk
¼ cup light rum
2 cups grated fresh coconut
Rum frosting (recipe below)

Make batter in thirds; each batch will fill one 12-inch and one 6-inch pan,or two 9-inch pans. Sift flour, baking powder and salt together; set aside. Beat egg whites until fluffy. Gradually beat in ¼ cup sugar to stiff peaks. Gradually beat one and one-half cups sugar into shortening until light and fluffy. Alternately blend in dry ingredients and milk, rum and vanilla. Fold into meringue and coconut.

Measure batter into greased and floured pans. Measure 5¼ cups for 12-inch, 3½ cups for 9-inch and 1½ cups for 6-inch pans. Bake at 350-F. for 30 minutes or until cake springs back when lightly touched in center.

Cool in pans on wire racks for 10 minutes. Remove from pans and cool completely.

For pineapple filling, combine pineapple, sugar and lemon juice in saucepan. Blend in cornstarch, milk and rum. Cook, stirring, until thickened and smooth. Stir in coconut. Chill. Use to fill layers. Frost with rum frosting.

Makes 20 servings.

RUM FROSTING

In mixer, blend 2 cups shortening and 1 cup unbeaten egg whites. Gradually add 4 pounds confectioners' sugar. Add 3 tablespoons vanilla and 1 to 2 tablespoons light rum. Beat to good spreading consistency. —CNS

For thousand of years, brides-to-be have filled cedar chests with treasures they will bring to their new homes.

Cedar chests: Romantic tradition

You can't keep a good man — or a cherished tradition — down. Even before TV brought Princess Di's fairy-tale wedding to Prince Charles of England into 400 million living rooms, the pendulum had begun to swing from barefoot-in-the-park nuptials to the ceremonial walk down the aisle with all the trimmings the budget could muster.

"The old-fashioned wedding is back," says Carolyn Davis, bridal consultant for The Lane Co., maker of cedar chests. "And it's back with all the time-honored traditions — engagement rings, organ music, lace veils and three-tiered cakes — and some modern adaptations like the cedar chest, a descendant of the hope chest."

For all its ups and downs, marriage has been a flourishing institution since the first caveman felt the pangs of loneliness and abducted a wife to fill the void. The bridegroom who captured his wife by force usually wrapped her up to carry her off and the bridal veil is said to be reminiscent of this elementary form of courtship.

Another school of thought ascribes the veil, which conceals the bride's beauty, to primitive man's superstitious fear that a jealous demon might steal her.

Many of the customs and rituals with which today's brides and grooms join in matrimony are rooted in antiquity. "The cedar chest, for instance, has roots that go all the way back to the ancient Egyptians," says Davis. Over the centuries it found its way to France, Germany, China, Italy, Russia, England and, finally, America as the heritage of young lovers of nearly every tongue.

When the Swiss and Germans migrated to America they brought their dower chests, as they also are called, with them. In these, young women would hoard the linens and laces, petticoats and embroidered sheets, towels and doilies they would take with them to their new homes when they married.

"Every time a couple exchanges wedding rings, shares the first piece of wedding cake or fills a cedar chest with their hopes and dreams, they give these old traditions new life and meaning. Each is a special way of expressing our feelings," Davis says. —CNS

Crafts of the past remain popular today

When this country was first settled, not a bride could be found lacking expertise in several forms of needlework. Embroidery, needlepoint, candlewicking, quilting, darning and smocking were at the fingertips of each young woman.

These women usually were taught by their mothers and began stitching on a sampler. Those samplers with name and birth date became an illustration of every type of stitch learned.

All this sewing stood that yesteryear bride in good stead. She began preparing her dowry long before an eligible male appeared. It took years to prepare sheets and pillowcases, tablecloths and napkins and even lingerie. After all, she could hardly go downtown to her favorite department store for a vast selection of domestics.

Even though needlework no longer is a necessity, a recent survey by Puddefoot, Bowers and Simonett Ltd., a supplier of needlework kits, showed that more than 50 percent of the women surveyed knew how to needlepoint. Of these, 60 percent learned from a relative, while 20 percent learned from store lessons.

Of the whole group, 50 percent thought needlepoint items are fun for a bride-to-be or young bride to make for a new home. Of those who did not know how to needlepoint, 12 percent would like to learn.

One of the simple teach-yourself methods is a sampler kit. Easy-to-follow directions show how to do every stitch and create a finished product suitable for framing. —CNS

Cutlery gift is primer for bride-to-be

A far cry from yesteryear's blushing maiden, today's bride owns her own credit cards and can run everything from a food processor to a business. Despite this, she still may not know how to use the most basic kitchen tool — the knife.

"Learning how to use a knife is like anything else. Once you know you wonder how you ever managed without that knowledge; but until you know it can seem confusing," says John A. Haley, vice president of sales and marketing for Regent Sheffield, a prominent producer of knives.

To make it easier, Haley recommends cutlery that never needs sharpening because "very few people know how to sharpen knives correctly, and a dull knife is a potentially dangerous knife."

Such knives will eliminate the need to know sharpening techniques, but not the need to know how to use the different pieces of cutlery. Haley lists the components of a basic set of cutlery and their uses as follows:

PARER. A paring knife is either 3 or 4 inches in length and is used to peel and cut small fruits and vegetables.

UTILITY. Generally from 5 to 6 inches, the utility knife is an all-around slicer and trimmer for meat, fruit and vegetables.

CNS Photo

Cutlery sets are practical and handsome gifts for today's bride-to-be.

FRUIT-VEGETABLE. Similar to the utility, but with a more narrow blade, this knife is used to slice perishable fruits and vegetables such as tomatoes and avocados.

BONER. Generally between 5 and 6 inches in length, the boning knife's narrow, flexible blade facilitates maneuvering around bones and joints.

FRENCH COOK'S. Also called a chef's knife, this is a must in every kitchen. It comes in lengths from 6 to 14 inches and is used for dicing, slicing, mincing and cutting. The shape of the blade, wide at the handle and gradually tapered to a point, allows the experienced cook to "rock" the knife when slicing fruits or vegetables. To do so, the point of the knife is put in a fixed position on the cutting board. The vegetable is pushed along and sliced as the knife is lifted up and down in a continuous rocking motion.

BUTCHER. The butcher knife, about 7 to 9 inches, is probably one of the largest and most useful kitchen knives. It is used for heavy-duty cutting of bone joints, for meat trimming and for cutting, cubing or dicing raw meats.

SLICER-CARVER. Used for carving and slicing meat, large fruits (i.e., pineapples, melons), boneless roasts and turkeys, carvers are generally 8 to 14 inches with a serrated or non-serrated edge. A wide, stiff-bladed carver is best for slicing hot meat while a more flexible blade is recommended for cold meat. The serrated-edged slicer is ideal for cutting soft- or hard-crusted bread.

To keep these knives their sharpest, Haley recommends storing them in hardwood knife blocks designed for that purpose. These blocks are attractive additions to the kitchen countertop or wall and eliminate the possibility of accidental cuts which can occur when rummaging through a drawerful of loose cutlery. —CNS

Wedding gifts require insurance

Each year, marrying couples spend about $1 billion on engagement and wedding rings and receive millions of dollars in gifts.

The Insurance Information Institute advises prospective marriage partners to protect themselves from financial loss by obtaining adequate insurance coverage for all those newly acquired and expensive possessions.

Most couples probably don't realize that a home owner's or tenant's policy limits the dollar amount of coverage for many personal belongings, including jewelry, china, silverware and antiques.

Although many insurance companies have raised the limit for the loss of jewelry to $1,000 to allow for inflation, some companies still pay only $500 for each loss. So if your diamond engagement ring, gold wedding band and several gold chains were stolen, your insurance company would pay only to its limit of $500 or $1,000 — minus any deductible — for the entire loss.

A similar limit would be applied if a burglar broke into your apartment and stole the antique sterling tea service your grandmother gave you for a wedding present. Policy limits for silver and silver-plated ware are usually set at $1,000 although some companies will pay up to $2,500.

But, the Institute notes, you can increase the scheduled limits your insurance company will pay for jewelry or silverware, or you can purchase a personal articles floater.

A personal articles floater allows you to insure only those pieces of jewelry or the wedding gifts you feel require extra protection.

Both the floater and increasing the limits of your policy are available for an annual premium of about $12 for each $1,000 of additional coverage.

The Institute also advises couples to keep the appraisal slips obtained when they purchase their engagement and wedding rings and obtain appraisals for other valuables, such as a set of crystal champagne glasses. — CNS

Silver treasures more practical than believed

The silver you receive for wedding gifts can be a beautiful reminder of the commitment you made together — why store it away? Using your silver on a daily basis also adds festivity and joy to simple meals.

Most couples don't know that the more silver is used the better it looks, developing a wonderful patina over time. But be sure to rotate place settings for even wear.

Cleaning silver needn't be the big chore imagined by most newlyweds. Veronica Williams, consumer consultant for Reed and Barton Silversmiths, says: "Hot water can't harm silver. In fact, the more you wash it, the less it will tarnish and the less you'll have to polish. Most silver flatware and casseroles can go in the dishwasher. Ask your silver salesperson to be sure."

When you wash silver be sure to have clean, dry towels on hand for immediate drying to avoid spotting.

To make sure you get the silver you really want, register at your favorite store. "To choose your brand," Williams advises, "compare prices, weight, balance and craftmanship. Hold pieces in your hand — are edges smooth, designs finely finished?

"Look for 'sterling' stamped on the back. This indicates the piece conforms to U.S. government standards," she says.

When it comes time to polish your silver wedding gifts, use liquid or creams from reputable companies. Avoid chemical dips. Williams recommends using gentle, lengthwise strokes.

"Polish the ornate and intricate pieces first," she suggests. "Don't worry about every curve and crevice of pattern. Polish the ornate pieces just as you do the simple ones, without rubbing. The dark shadowing left behind will define the sculptural beauty of the pattern."

To store silver not used or displayed every day, find a spot away from the open air like a closet, cabinet or chest. Place each piece in a tarnish-proof flannel bag or a specially coated fabric case. Don't use rubber bands to close storage bags. Rubber contains sulfur, which causes tarnish.

Williams suggests displaying your silver wedding gifts in a buffet with glass doors. "A buffet is the perfect place to spotlight your silver pieces while protecting them. When lighted from below, all the gleaming curves really show. — CNS

Cookbooks endearing gifts for brides

Giving a cookbook — or several — to a bride-to-be is both practical and endearing. There's a remarkable variety on the market, enabling you to satisfy a variety of tastes.

Naturally, some books are better than others. A major purchasing consideration should be the dependability of the author. Here's a selection of cookbooks from respected authors whose works are available:

THE COOKING OF SOUTHWEST FRANCE

—By Paula Wolfert; Doubleday — On maps of France, the southwest is variously designated as the Aquitaine or Gascony-and-Guyenne. Relatively few Americans visit this fascinating, ancient region — almost inconceivable in these days of culinary mania because it's a region producing some of the best food, wine and spirits in the country.

Wolfert, author of the definitive "Couscous and Other Good Food from Morocco," a journalist and cooking teacher much in demand, spent much time during the last five years traveling around the region. She gathered a treasury of insights, ideas and information for "The Cooking of Southwest France." It defines the southwest and its tastes: foie gras, truffles, cepes, confits, Jambon de Bayonne, cheese, walnuts, chestnuts, essences and seasonings, wines and Armagnac, the brandy that enhances many a Gascon specialty. As for the recipes, originality and authenticity are key words. Recipe instructions are spelled out in clear-cut detail. Everything is soul satisfying: soup-and-salad meals, unusual and easy side dishes, omelets, seafood delectables, ragouts, confits and tourtieres, relishes and preserves, desserts as well as potables.

OLD FASHIONED DESSERTS

— By Richard Sax; Great American Cooking Schools Series, Irena Chalmers Cookbooks — Sax is a chef trained in the United States and abroad, contributor to leading food publications, restaurant consultant and teacher. America's top professionals recognize his extraordinary expertise and lack of pretension. "Old Fashioned Desserts" exemplifies his philosophy. Its opening lines read: "If you're looking for elegant desserts and patisserie, you have opened the wrong book." I can assure you, however, it is the right book if you wax nostalgic about the mouth-watering treats that used to come out of family kitchens: homey, spice-scented cobblers and crumbles; rice and bread puddings; pies, cakes and other goodies made with berries, apples, sweet potatoes, dried fruit or nuts. A perfect gift for a bride-to-be — the start of her own handed-down, edible heirlooms!

BEAUTIFUL FOOD

— By Jim Fobel; Van Nostrand Reinhold Co. — Fobel, former test kitchen director for Food and Wine magazine, is a one-of-a-kind artist. A fine arts major became a foundation for a career in food. His kitchen became his lab and he started experimenting with food, as he had with color, shape and form in the past, working for 10 years to perfect his cookbook's recipes. — CNS

4 Convenient Locations

Pack right, light for honeymoon

The honeymoon of your dreams is rapidly approaching: a glamorous cruise to Mexico, sight-seeing in the city you've always wanted to visit, sharing fun and fitness skiing on Colorado slopes or hiking along an Appalachian trail. Now the question: what to pack?

"No one wants to be burdened with the wrong clothing or 'too much of a good thing' while traveling," says Elena Castaneda, fashion director of Castaneda women's designer fashion discount stores. "Careful planning can help you overcome 'what-to-wear' pitfalls so you and your spouse enjoy the time of your lives!"

GUIDELINES

"For successful honeymoon packing, the key words are comfort and convenience," says Castaneda. Here, the basics:

MIX AND MATCH

To double your honeymoon wardrobe capabilities, keep clothing colors in the same family. Choose blouses and shirts that coordinate with skirts and pants, in a variety of prints and solids in your favorite color tones.

CHOOSE EASY-CARE FABRICS

For good-looking, comfortable fashions that wear well, Castaneda recommends fabric blends of 70 percent cotton or wool and 30 percent polyester.

THINK "LAYERS"

Avoid bulky jackets and coats in favor of turtlenecks, cardigans and lightweight jackets. Sweaters and vests are easy to carry during the day and are perfect for added warmth on cooler evenings.

ACCESSORIZE FOR VERSATILITY

A simple wool, silk or cotton dress can be "dressed up" with fine jewelry for special occasions. A scarf can give an unexpected splash of color to a jersey dress, when sashed at the waist or bowed at the neck. Men can add pizzazz to a suit or shirt, pants and sports jacket with a cap, cravat or an unusual belt or tie.

PACK RIGHT; TRAVEL LIGHT

How you travel to your destination influences your clothing choices: Airplanes, buses, trains and cruise ships all have different weight and space requirements for luggage. Storage space also is limited if you drive, especially if you are taking sports equipment with you.

Now to specifics.

HONEYMOON CRUISES

"A versatile wardrobe is a must for cruising," says Brian De Haviland, cruise director for Holland America. "In the course of a day, women can wear everything from swimsuit to evening gown, and men's wardrobes run the gamut from jogging shorts to suit and tie." Daytime wear aboard a cruise ship is casual — the simpler the better. For evening wear, the byword is elegance: Women will need at least one "dressy" dress for dinner; men, a formal suit.

ISLAND HONEYMOONS

"A resort honeymoon calls for a fashion-right beach wardrobe," says Castaneda. For women, several swimsuits for swimming and sunning; for men, coordinating swimsuits and cabana tops; shorts and "tropical style" shirts. For both: sunglasses, sun hats, lots of suntan oil.

ACTIVE HONEYMOONS

Here, quality is of paramount importance. A low budget garment is no bargain if it falls apart or doesn't stand up to the stress and strain of active wear. Your packing guide: warmth without bulk.

PACKING TIPS

Once you've decided what you will wear on your honeymoon, follow Castaneda's suggestions for "putting it all together."

Make sure all clothes are in good repair.

Make a packing list including everything you are taking with you so you can refer to it before your return trip.

Pack in sections, with heavier items on the bottom and remaining clothing packed in groups: shirts and blouses in one section, undergarments in another and so on. Keep items you will need first on top of your suitcase.

Leave space for special buys and souvenirs. —CNS

First home can be furnished with flair

"Once you've found him, build your world around him" is the way the song goes. Now that you're getting married and decorating your first home, the lyrics have a new meaning.

If you're like most newlyweds, you're setting up housekeeping with a hodgepodge of possessions — his old studio couch, your teenage bedroom suite — supplemented by whatever was in the attic that nobody else wanted. Not exactly House Beautiful material.

Begin by getting rid of everything you loathe. There's no point in decorating around hand-me-down monstrosities, so donate the flamingo-pink formica dinette to the local thrift shop.

Then sit down together and look at decorating books and magazines. It's the best way to discover what both of you like and dislike — colors, furniture styles, window treatments. It's also a lot easier and less expensive to remove the cabbage rose wallpaper from your decorating plan than it is from the wall.

Tom Burak, fashion director of Pennsylvania House, advises planning the entire room at one time. "You should decide on the furniture, the color scheme, the carpeting and the fabrics even if you can't afford to do it all at once. You can begin with the basics and then add pieces as you go along. But the room will look pulled together from the start," Burak says.

He also recommends buying traditional, classic designs that never go out of style. "Buy from a company that makes a fine-quality collector's line. It will have continuity through the years and, as your income and living space grow, you can add new pieces," he says.

For your first living room, start with a sofa and two side chairs. Together they create a comfortable conversation grouping — and you can purchase the matching loveseat later. Select a coffee table in the style and wood you like best.

Chances are your dining area is an alcove or part of the living room. If so, a small round or oval table, a drop leaf or flip-top console are all good possibilities. Choose the chairs with a mind to using them in the living room when necessary. Chairs upholstered in a coordinate of your living room fabric make this transition gracefully.

In today's smaller bedroom you might consider a chest-on-chest, armoire, mule chest or highboy to provide more storage than a traditional dresser while taking up about the same amount of floor space.

There are a few other things to keep in mind. "Since you're just starting out, you're probably inhabiting less-spacious quarters than you hope to in the future," Burak notes. "To make sure you're buying furniture that will grow with you, evaluate each piece for flexibility."

If you're unsure about your decorating ability, don't be afraid to seek help. Most fine furniture stores offer free expert decorating advice.

The 240-page Pennsylvania House Collector's Book will give you even more decorating ideas as well as helpful hints on how to shop for furniture. It's free from your local Pennsylvania House dealer. Honeymoon can be budget travel

Charter-turned-scheduled airline flights are fast becoming your best bet for overseas travel. The price is right: $100 to $150 below commercial coach fares. You can book without land accommodations, agents can sell these charters to individuals and you no longer have to worry about canceled flights. You can book in advance or at the last minute and still fly at the same low price.

You must be flexible timewise, however, as charter flights usually have fixed days of travel. There are flight cancellation restrictions, but you can opt for inexpensive flight cancellation insurance to minimize this problem. It's best to confirm charter flights 72 hours before departure. Days and times of departure can change, even within a month.

Fares are guaranteed, however, often with no minimum stay requirement. You may be able to choose any combination of departure and return dates.

Booking a charter flight is simple. Visit a travel agent, bring a deposit and sign an application. The travel agent will make your reservation, bill you for payment and mail your tickets.

If a travel agent doesn't provide adequate information, call others and comparison shop. Often, travel agents on a university campus can be more helpful as budget travel is their specialty.

LTU International, a privately owned German charter out of Dusseldorf, was one of the first to fly regular scheduled flights. Its schedules are determined six months in advance and copies of the schedule are mailed to travel agents.

If you intend to travel widely in Germany or Europe, there are a couple of other money-saving tactics. Buy a German rail or Eurorail pass. Either offers an inexpensive, pleasant method of getting about. Another tactic: Stay in Romantik Inns.

Romantik Inns are a voluntary association of small, historic hotels and restaurants dotting the landscape in off-the-beaten-path towns and villages in Europe and the United States. Delightful to discover, they provide outstanding service and cuisine in a comfortable, cozy atmosphere.

Rates include service charges, taxes and a Romantik breakfast — no, not a kiss from the waiter — a choice of hearty breakfast fare.

For more information about Romantik Inns, write Ingrid Meyer, 12334 Northrup Way, Suite C, Bellevue, WA 98005. For a comprehensive list of current charters and the cities to which they fly, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope with a copy of this article to S&H Associates, P.O. Box 326, Garden Grove, CA 92644. — CNS

Swiss trip: A sweet beginning

If any place can be called romantic and picturesque, it's Bern, the heart of Switzerland. The inner city is a national landmark beautifully preserved to retain its centuries-old appearance.

But it's not just another pretty facade, as we discovered on a recent trip. Bern, after all, is Switzerland's capital and a university center, and very much involved in world affairs. It's also a capital, unlike many others — relaxed, hospitable and cozy. A captivating mix of yesterday and today. A perfect place to visit on a honeymoon — or any other time.

Arriving at the modern railway station complex, you step out into a city of medieval, flower-decorated buildings, of gray-green stone and red gabled roofs. The city abounds in wittily conceived fountains and clock towers, such as the ancient Zeitglockenturm with figures that go into action hourly.

The immaculate city is lined with arcades under which nestle cafes, pubs and tearooms, boutiques, art and antique galleries, watch and jewelry establishments and confectionary-cum-pastry emporiums.

Cross the Nydegg Bridge and you come to Parliament, Embassy Row and a group of unusual museums. The Bern Fine Arts museum, with its great Klee collection, is a must. The cathedral, with its 254-step lookout tower, should be high on your agenda.

Where to stay? Centrally located Hotel Schweitzerhof is our No. 1 splurge. Its engaging restaurant features world-class cuisine. The cocktail lounge is plush, intimate.

Near the Schweitzerhof is an irresistible chocolate heaven tearoom: Eichenberger's, one of the oldest and best chocolate houses. Don't leave Bern without samplings of Daniel Eichenberger's exquisite creations, handmade on the premises.

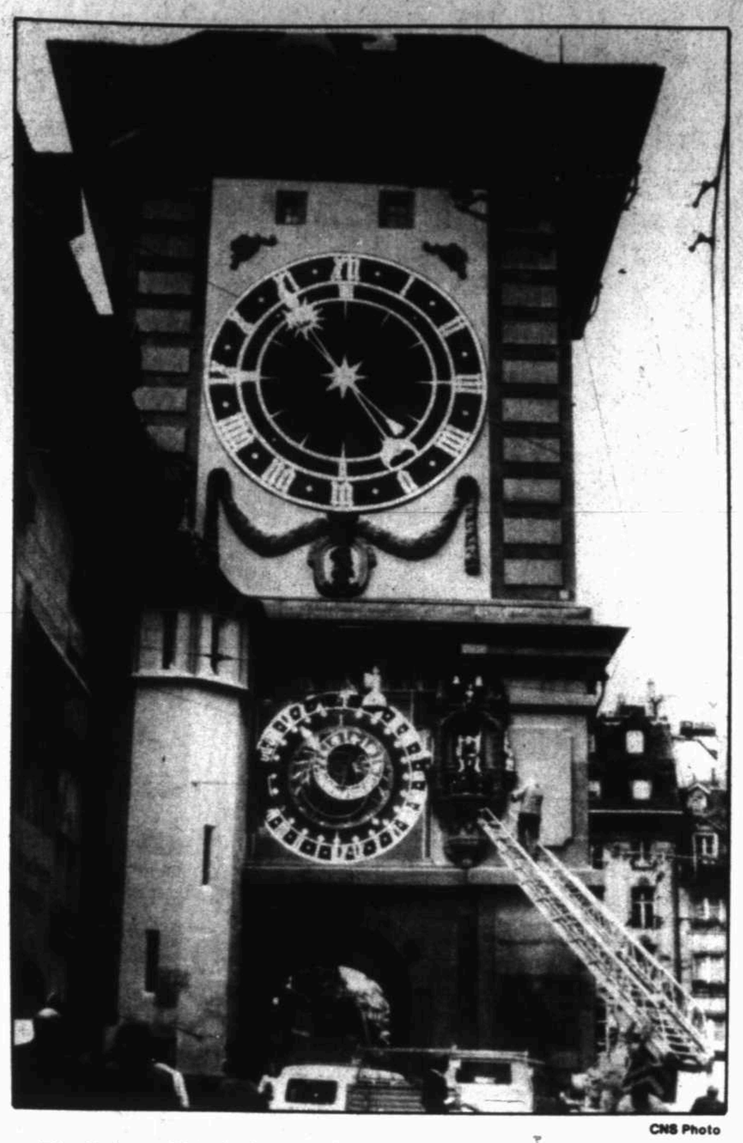
Also deluxe is the Bellevue Palace Hotel, viewfully sited above the Aare River, with superb accommodations and restaurant dining. First-class and less-expensive hotels are the Bristol, Baren, Berne, Stadthof and Metropole. Room rates cover service, taxes and, usually, full buffet breakfast!

The diversity of eateries here would do credit to a city many times Bern's size. Prices are very fair — and be prepared for seconds of the main course.

Most endearing is atmospheric Della Casa's upstairs dining room. Its patrons obviously know what good living and good eating is all about. The congenial Swiss Chalet combines dinner and lively top-Knotch Swiss folklore entertainment.

Visit the huge Kornhauskeller for hearty Swiss fare and music. Or Klotzlikeller for wine and snacks. Informal Harmonie is popular for simple, old-time farm dishes.

What else to do? The Bern Tourist Office in the railway station can help with guidance, maps and brochures, as well as bookings, side trips and city tours.



CNS Photo

The famous Zeitglockenturm in Bern, Switzerland, dating to the 12th century, has two clocks. A wondrous parade of animated figures goes into action hourly.

To be in Bern and not seek out the glories of the Berner Oberland, particularly the Jungfrau, would be to miss experiences of unimaginable beauty and joy.

Thanks to miracle-working Swiss engineers, we took the three-stage, cog railway trip to the 11,333-foot-high Jungfrau Lookout, the last part right through the granite mountain, to behold the world's highest glacier. Atop the mountain you'll find a hotel, restaurant, observatory, ice palace, summer skiing and dog sledding.

Thrilling, too, is the four-stage cable car to 9,750-foot-high Schilthorn and its circular Piz Gloria restaurant, which rotates imperceptibly to reveal dazzling vistas.

Other activities include dinner-dance cruises on Lake Thun, dotted with photogenic towns. Or Interlaken's casino, concerts, nightclubs and sports.

If you have the time — and the Swiss Holiday Card — you can take in lots more: picture-postcard Grindelwald, Gstaad, the Emmental, Zermatt and the Matterhorn.

The Swiss Holiday Card is good for four days to a month. Available only outside Switzerland, it's valid for unlimited transportation on the Swiss Federal Railway system, yellow postal buses and most lake steamers. Write the Swiss National Tourist Office, 608 Fifth Ave., New York, NY 10020, for details and travel literature. —CNS

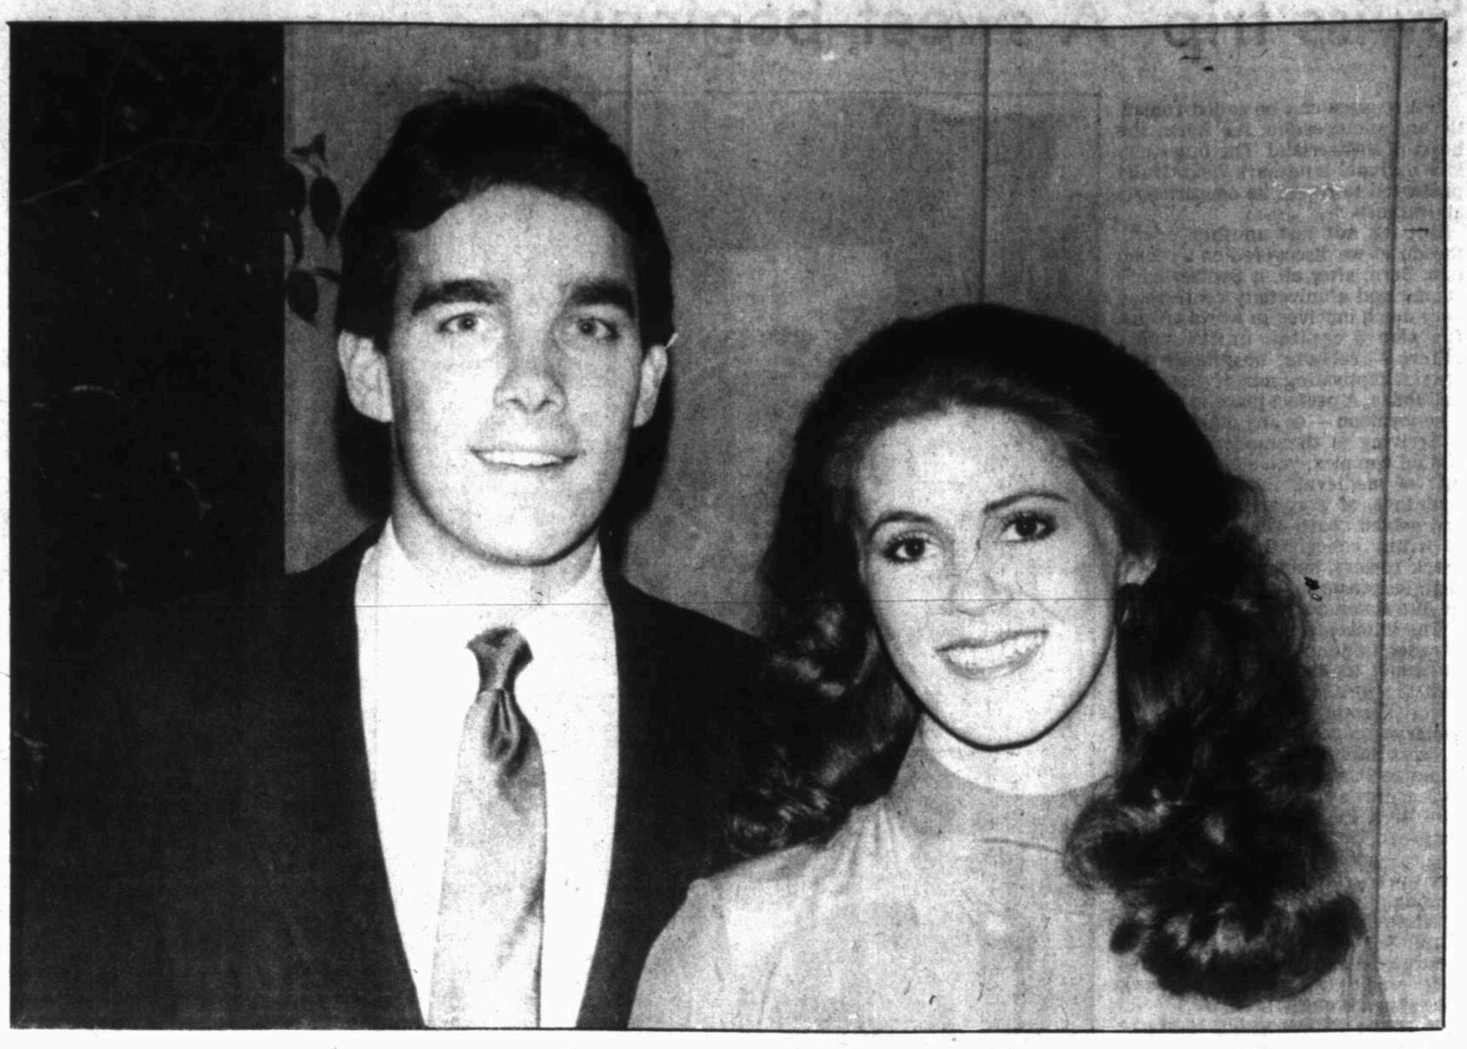
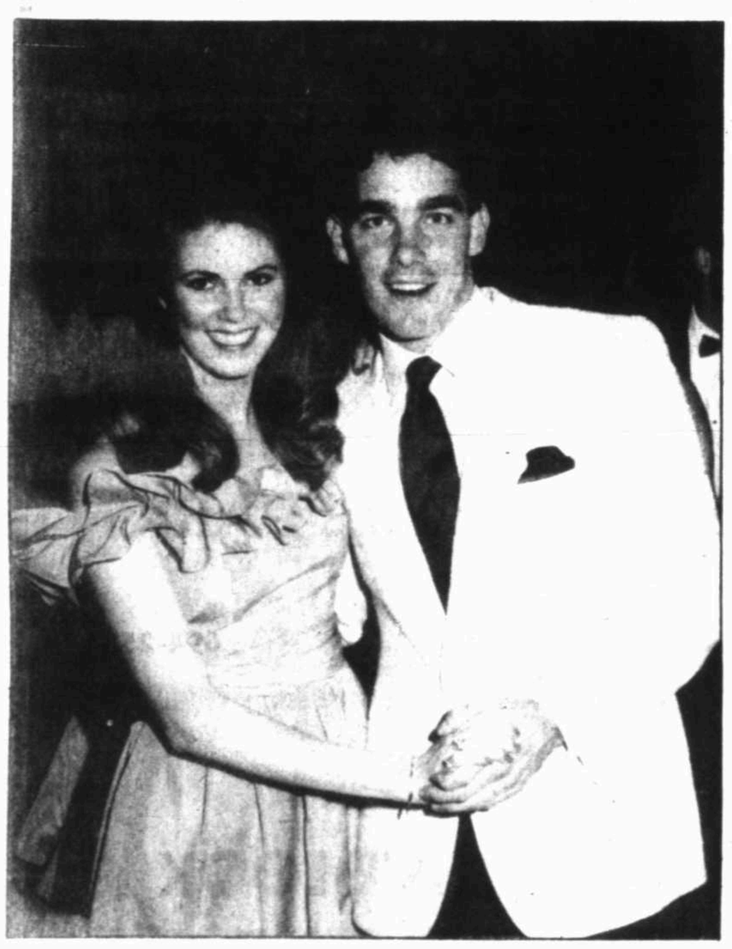
Meet Connie and Joe





Connie Richards and Joe Wagner, the bride and groom featured in today's special bridal section, will be united in marriage on August 4, 1984 in a candlelight ceremony. The wedding will take place at St. Ann Catholic Church in Midland.

Connie is the daughter on Mr. and Mrs. Reu Richards of Midland and Joe is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Wagner of Austin, Minnesota.

Ten of Connie and Joe's friends and relatives will make up the wedding party. Mary Ann Kleine of Midland will serve as Maid of Honor. The bridal attendents are Stacey Rodgers of Houston, Camie Timms of Midland, Elizabeth Wagner (Joe's sister) of Austin, Minnesota, and Meg Wagner (Joe's sister-in-law) of Waterloo, Iowa. Groomsmen will be Pete Wagner (Joe's brother) of Austin, Minnesota; Cory Richards (Connie's brother) of Austin, Texas; Bill Galante of Chicago, Illinois, and Brad Schammel of Rochester, Minnesota. Carter Wagner (Joe's brother) will Joe's Best Man. Ushers for the wedding are Walt Enright of Boston, Massachusetts; Mike Keane of Minneapolis, Minnesota, and Shawn McDonald from Midland.

The bridesmaids will be dressed in ivory off of the shoulder floor length dresses. The gowns will be accented by a light pink embroidered belt. The attendents will be carrying pink flowers.

The groom and groomsmen will be attired in black tuxedos complete with white shirt, black tie and black cumberbund.

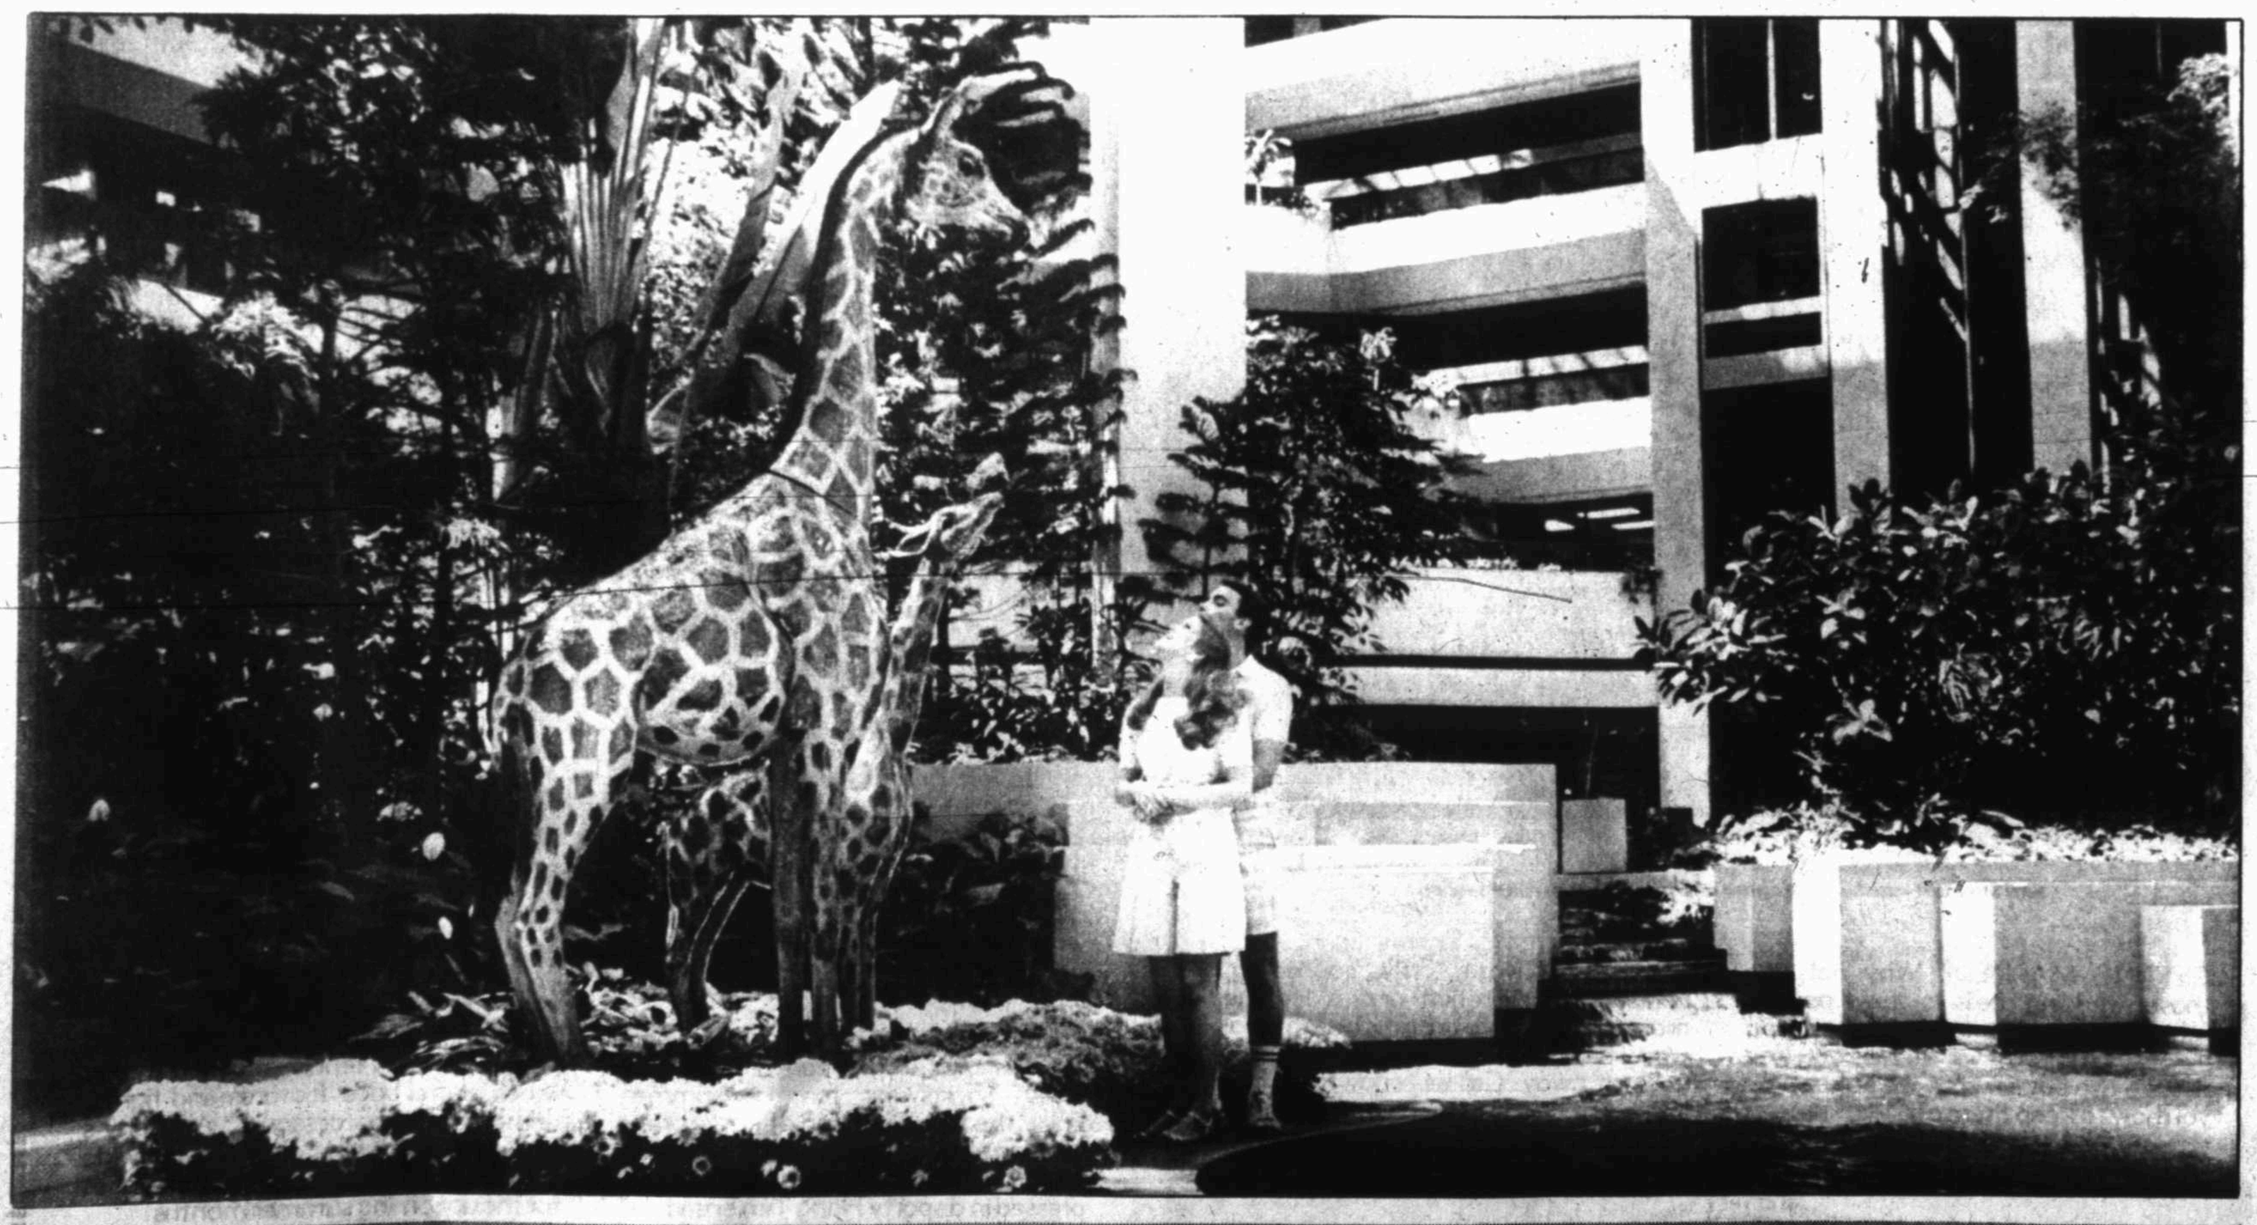
The wedding reception will be held at the Midland Country Club following the ceremony. For the enjoyment of those in attendence, Connie and Joe have hired s dance band for the evening.

The honeymoon will consist of a week in sunny St. Thomas and then on to Austin, Minnesota, where a second reception will be held for Connie and Joe by friends and relatives who will be unable to attend the wedding.

Following the honeymoon, the newlyweds will begin there life together in Midland. Connie will be graduating this summer from the University of Texas of the Permian Basin and will be entering the work force this fall. Joe is an Assistant Manager at Ranchland Hills Country Club.

Connie and Joe would like to thank the merchants who participated in this bridal section.

The Midland Reporter-Telegram would like to say "Best Wishes" to Connie and Joe.



From the front page, a special thanks to:
