Yule Tree Awaits Return Of Little Boy

ALEXANDRIA, Ky. (AP) — The Christmas tree that 5-year-old Keith Holliday decorated is still up — and will stay up until his parents find out what happened to him.

"I'll leave it until next Christmas if I have to," said a grim-faced Judy Holliday, Keith's mother.

"Keith was so excited about that tree. He decorated all of it and it looked like it. It's a mess. But we don't have the heart to take it down."

Wearing a ski mask and boots on the wrong feet, the strawberry blond boy walked out of the house four days before Christmas — and never returned.

State police and hundreds of volunteers spent days scouring this wooded northern Kentucky subdivision, from the air, by horseback and on foot, but turned up nothing.

"I'm trying not to give up faith," said Mrs. Holliday, "but it isn't easy. There are times when I think he is dead."

His father has offered a $10,000 reward for the boy's safe return. "Hustler" magazine owner Larry Flynt added $20,000 to the reward total Thursday and announced that a full page advertisement on the boy will be run in the April issue of the magazine. Flynt says such an ad would normally cost $50,000.

Spending Christmas without Keith was Mrs. Holliday's latest ordeal in a tragic year. In May, she escaped the fire that killed 164 persons at the Beverly Hills Supper Club, where she was a waitress. A short time later, her brother was killed in a car crash. Her father died at Thanksgiving.

"I fall apart a lot," she said, her face creased with fatigue and worry.

When the holidays passed, she stored Keith's Christmas presents at a neighbor's home. Then she suggested to her husband and 11-year-old son, Kevin, that the still-alive tree be taken down.

"We had a family discussion. My husband Michael thought it might be best if we got rid of it. He knew so many little things Keith hung on the tree were upsetting me. But Kevin wanted to leave it up since his little brother hadn't had Christmas yet.

"And it's going to stay up. We still got all of Keith's Christmas toys.

"The only thing I'm hoping is that if somebody has got him, they are taking good care of him. He's got a bad tooth and I had to give him penicillin. It's bound to be hurting him. I just hope it is somebody who loves him.

"But, naturally, I'm scared to death."

Busing Hit By School Attorney

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward today heard summary arguments in the Lubbock Independent School District's desegregation suit — a case school attorneys say may well "affect more people than any other finding this court ever makes."

Woodward gave no indication when he may announce a ruling on the matter. The U.S. Justice Department wants Woodward to stop planned construction of schools in white areas south of Loop 289 and require the district to implement a "systemwide" desegregation program by this fall.

School attorney Tom Johnson said such a desegregation plan would involve a "massive busing order." He urged Woodward to consider the city's "innocent children and parents" in deciding the case.

"The consequences of what the court does here are extremely important," Johnson said, noting the "good and honest people who will be affected by the decision."

He said there has been a "significant shift" in the legal principles of desegregation in recent years, with "new standards" set by the U.S. Supreme Court in cases involving such cities as Dayton, Ohio, and Pasadena, Calif.

Johnson said a comprehensive, systemwide remedy as sought by the Justice Department cannot be warranted unless there is proof that school officials here had both the "intent and success" of seg-

Leaks In Arson Probes Feared

AUSTIN (UPI) — An arson investigator said today local fire departments are refusing to cooperate with the state fire marshal's office in arson cases because of concern information on the cases will be leaked from the state office to suspects.

Don Hicks, who has resigned effective Jan. 15, said he is quitting the state job "because my effectiveness as an investigator for the state fire marshal's office has been totally destroyed.

"In one case I was asked not to participate in an investigation because they (local fire officials) felt if their files were brought back to Austin, the files would make their way into the suspect's hands and the the case would be destroyed," Hicks told a Senate Subcommittee on Consumer Affairs.

(Lubbock Fire Marshal A.C. Black, surprised at learning of the state office's problem, said, "We have 100 percent cooperation with the state fire marshal's office. We work real closely with that office and we have investigators in quite often to help us with cases."

(Black said he had not heard of any instances where information had been leaked to arson suspects by the state office.)

Hicks blamed much of the turmoil in the fire marshal's office on State Fire Marshal Charles Meadows, and said Meadows delayed for five weeks before assigning an investigator to a West Columbia fire which involved a death.

He said Meadows said the fire sounded like it was an accident. Hicks was eventually assigned to investigate the fire, and said a suspect orally admitted setting the fire which caused the death, but refused to sign a written confession.

"My main problem in this case is that my entire file, including testimony of witnesses, is missing," Hicks said.

He said he had been angrily questioned by Meadows about how the Senate subcommittee learned of the West Columbia investigation.

Norvall Terry, head of the arson division, also has submitted his resignation effective Jan. 15.

In the West Columbia case, Hicks told the Senate subcommittee a suspect in the case blurted out that he didn't know his roommate was asleep in a rent house that burned. The furnishings in the house were insured for $3,000.

Hicks said the suspect failed two polygraph tests prior to making the statement.

But the case could not be prosecuted, Hicks said, because a state arson inspector was not sent to the scene for a month. The local district attorney said the evidence of the fire had been out in the weather all that time and would not stand up in court. Oral confessions made while a suspect is in custody cannot be used in court.

Hicks said Meadows persisted in contending the fire probably was accidental, even though the house had no gas and no electricity. Meadows said it was not uncommon for a man to return home drunk and accidentally set fire to his own house, Hicks said.

Hicks said Meadows has recently indicated he still thinks it is a "figment of the imagination" that the fire was deliberately started.

Nine Named In Murders

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Keeping pace with a recent rash of homicides, a Lubbock County grand jury today returned murder indictments against nine persons.

They were among 80 indictments authorized by the panel, which reported to Judge John R. McFall's 237th District Court.

McFall assumed the newly created court last year, and this was the first grand jury to convene under his direction.

Five men were indicted for murder as the result of the Nov. 20 stabbing death of Steven Lee Cook, 22.

They are Robert Jimenez, 18, and Robert Luitt Carrasco, 19, both of 4303 19th St.; Rafael Andrews, 19, of 1817 E. 2nd St.; Ruben Nunez Romo, 21, of 3015 1st Place, and Gilbert Flores Garcia, 21, of 207 Redbud Drive.

Cook was found lying at the intersection of 20th Street and Memphis Avenue a few minutes after police found another young man, Mike C. Cummings of 2207 7th St., No. 108, also lying wounded, in the area of the 2900-block of 20th Street.

Police were told that Cook and Cummings, who were traveling together, apparently noticed several men involved in a disturbance.

Reports indicated the two men attempted to halt the disturbance, then were stabbed when a fight broke out.

Police arrested the five defendants at the intersection of 34th Street and Memphis Avenue within minutes of talking to witnesses who had been assisting Cummings.

In another case, an 18-year-old Lubbock Independent School District employee was indicted for murder in connection with the Christmas Day slaying of Clifton Ray Casbeer, 21, of 3214 23rd St.

Accused of Casbeer's gunshot death is John G. Morin, 18, of 316 Ave. R.

Casbeer's death also apparently climaxed a fight in which several persons were involved.

The fight reportedly began when several men allegedly pursued Casbeer's car to the 2500-block of 4th Street.

One witness said he drove by the scene just in time to see the fight. He said he

Dow Jones Off Again

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices dipped sharply during the first hour on the New York Stock Exchange today but recovered somewhat by the noon hour in fairly active trading.

The major reason for the decline was Citibank's announcement of a boost in the prime rate but other developments, including the dollar's decline abroad, helped contribute to it.

Citibank boosted its prime rate a quarter point to 8 percent, the first change in the rate in almost three months.

Against this background the Dow Jones industrial average was off 6.23 to 798.69 shortly before noon, an improvement from its reading earlier in the session.

Bergland, Farmers Air Price Demands

A-J News Services

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland said on arrival in Omaha today that "it's possible" that striking farmers' goal of 100 percent of parity can be achieved.

The secretary commented at Eppley Airfield as he began a 5½-hour visit to Omaha in which he was to participate in a roundtable discussion with leaders of American Agriculture, the group spearheading the national farm strike that began Dec. 14.

At the airport, Bergland said, "I'm going to listen to them. This is designed to try to discuss ways and means. I hope it will be very productive."

Asked if 100 percent of parity is possible, Bergland said, "It's possible, and we want to discuss the various alternatives that could lead to that."

Bergland was greeted at the airport by Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., and Nebraska Democratic Gov. J.J. Exon, a senatorial candidate.

Bergland departed immediately from the airport for the Ak-Sar-Ben sports complex, where a "sea of tractors" and about 500 farmers from 41 states were on hand to greet him.

He attended a noon luncheon before the roundtable discussion with farm strike leaders from nine states.

Exon said 36 states are being represented at the meeting by persons appointed by the governors of those states.

The roundtable discussion will involve Bergland, Cliff Ouse of the U.S.D.A. and American Agriculture representatives Gene Schroder of Colorado, Bill Struckmeyer of California, Gerald McCathern of Texas, Stan DeBoer of Nebraska, Wayne Peterson of South Dakota, Jim Kramer of Kansas, Bobby Hawkins of Florida, Tom Kersey of Georgia and Wayne Eaken of Delaware.

Meanwhile at El Paso, a group of striking farmers were in the border city today, planning possible ways to prevent trucks carrying Mexican cattle from entering the United States.

"Our main object for coming to El Paso is to try to stop importation of live cattle from Mexico," said Mike McCathern, a spokesman for the American Agricul-

Figures Reveal Parity Decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's farm parity ratio, an economic indicator used as a battle cry by protesting farmers who called a strike last month, sank to a 44-year low in 1977, according to preliminary figures by the Agriculture Department.

Over the 12 months of last year, the parity ratio averaged 67 percent, compared with 72 percent in 1976, 76 percent in 1975, 87 percent in 1974 and 94 percent in 1973, when prices for many commodities rose to record levels.

According to department records going back to 1910, last year's parity ratio average of 67 percent was the lowest since it averaged 64 percent in 1933 during the nation's worst economic depression. The all-time low was 58 percent in 1932. Thus, the 1977 average was the third-lowest on record.

As used by the department, at 100 percent of parity farmers receive enough for their commodities to give them the same buying power their forebears had in 1910-1914.

For example, full parity price of wheat last month was $5.05 a bushel. However, farmers actually got $2.47 a bushel for wheat nationally last month, or 49 percent of parity.

The Colorado-based group known as American Agriculture called for a nationwide strike of farmers on Dec. 14 as a movement to get commodity prices raised to 100 percent of parity.

Although protests by participating farmers have been scattered among many states, most activity has been in the major wheat area of Colorado, Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas, and along the Eastern seaboard, particularly in Georgia.

On a monthly basis, last year's low-mark for the parity indicator was in July and August, when it averaged 64 percent in each month. Other readings in 1977 included: January 68 percent; February 69; March 69; April 69; May 70; June 67; July 65; October 64; November 65; and December 66.

The department also said Thursday that the strike so far has not interrupted the flow of grain and livestock to market as the farm protestors have urged.

In a statement, the department's Agricultural Marketing Service said the strike "has had very little impact to date on the supply" of grain and livestock.

"Some instances of livestock market and grain elevator closures in sympathy with the striking farmers were noted," the agency said.

"While picketing of packing plants, grocery stores, livestock markets and grain elevators has occurred, the overall volume of livestock slaughter and grain movement has apparently not been altered by the strike," it said.

Area's Rain Hopes Fade

A-J News Services

The chance of rain predicted for this weekend has vanished from the forecast, but not surprisingly, a good possibility of blowing dust remains.

The extended forecast, which earlier called for a possibility of rain over most of West Texas early this weekend, now merely reads "partly cloudy with no precipitation expected" through Tuesday.

Winds were expected to kick up to 20 to 30 mph this afternoon, possibly stirring some dust. Northwesterly winds of 10 to 15 mph are expected Saturday.

Under partly cloudy skies, temperatures in Lubbock may rise today into the upper 60s, dip tonight to near freezing reach the low 60s again Saturday.

Predawn temperatures across the state were mild for the season. Lubbock's low this morning was 32 degrees.

City Police Restrictions On CB Use Stir Dispute

By PAT CARLSON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A storm of protest seems to be brewing over a terse statement recently issued by the Lubbock Police Department severely restricting the use of personal CB radios by its officers.

The strongly worded memo, issued by Maj. C.G. Bartley, head of the uniformed services division, was read to officers at each briefing Thursday. The to-the-point statement reads as follows:

"CB radios have proven to be a useful tool for police when used properly.

"The broadcasting of information about persons arrested, the calling of wives and other females, and the calling of other officers on where to meet for coffee or other social activities has caused considerable embarrassment to the department.

"You are instructed that you will not transmit on CB radios unless the matter is clearly a police problem. You may keep the CB radios in police cars, for the present time, for information-gathering purposes, 'listening' and exigent circumstances. All other transmissions will cease."

Several months ago, LPD introduced the "fleet plan" by which uniformed officers use their marked patrol cars 24-hours a day — for personal as well as professional use. With the inception of the plan, officers were allowed to install — at their expense — personal CB radios in the vehicles.

Bartley said that although the exact number of cars having the personal equipment is not known, there are "several" officers who make use of the option.

One policeman estimated that six months ago, 90 percent of the uniformed officers had personal radios in their cars. However, he said that number has declined recently.

The order does not pertain just to on-duty hours, but to all times the officer uses his marked car.

"It specifies only that they are in the police car," Bartley explained. "I don't care if they are on duty or not — if they're using police cars, they'll use them properly."

According to Bartley, the initial furor which resulted in the memo began when high-ranking LPD officials were made

Flynt Buys Plains Newspaper

FLYNT

Flynt, who was convicted in Cincinnati on charges of pandering obscenity and faces charges of distributing pornography in Atlanta, purchased the Plains, Ga., Monitor Thursday.

Flynt says he has a new religious commitment which he found with the help of President Carter's sister, Ruth Carter Stapleton.

The price paid for The Monitor was not disclosed by Howard Spies, vice president and general counsel for Larry Flynt Publications, who said he signed the purchase papers on behalf of Flynt, who is vacationing in the Bahamas.

Sam Simpson, former publisher of The Monitor, said he contacted Flynt's organization because the paper had been in financial trouble since he founded it last Feb. 17.

Flynt plans to continue the paper's format of local stories, said Simpson. He said he will continue temporarily as editor.

The paper has a weekly circulation of about 5,000, more than half over-the-counter sales to tourists, but has sold as many as 17,000 copies in one week, Simpson said.

Important Political Figures Named

NEW YORK (AP) — Henry Kissinger, Hubert H. Humphrey and Sam Rayburn are the "most effective or important political figures of our age," according to a poll of 1,000 Washington legislative aides and political reporters.

RAYBURN

The poll asked the aides and reporters to name the most important and effective nationally elected or appointed officials, senators and congressmen.

In the elected or appointed field Kissinger was named most important by a wide margin over the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt. Dwight D. Eisenhower was the only president since Roosevelt who was not mentioned by any voter.

Humphrey was voted the most effective senator, followed by the late President Lyndon B. Johnson. Louisiana Democrat Russell Long placed a distant third.

Rayburn, the Texas representative who was speaker of the House, was considered the most effective congressman. The current House speaker, Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, was runnerup.

Nikki Van Hightower May Lose Job

HOUSTON (AP) — Nikki Van Hightower, the women's advocate for the city who has been fired and rehired because of her promotion of the proposed Equal Rights Amendment, is apparently on her way out of government again.

On his third day in office, new Mayor Jim McConn said Thursday Mrs. Van Hightower will not be part of his administration.

Former Mayor Fred Hofheinz and the city council battled over the women's advocate job after citizens complained that Mrs. Van Hightower, as a representative of the city, had helped organize and appeared at a rally supporting the Equal Rights Amendment.

The council eliminated her job, but Hofheinz created the special job with essentially the same duties and appointed Mrs. Van Hightower, at an annual salary of about $20,000.

Mrs. Van Hightower and McConn met last week, and both indicated she might stay on the new mayor's staff as a liaison with women's groups.

Thursday the mayor said, "I just figured this administration could do well without Nikki Van Hightower."

Punctuated Pledge

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A state senator wants Americans to recite the Pledge of Allegiance with more understanding and fewer stops, but he can't seem to decide where the stops go.

The Lighter Side Of Today's News

In a five-paragraph memo to legislative leaders and Lt. Gov. Richard F. Celeste, Sen. Harry Meshel said, "Historically, and almost unanimously, the Pledge of Allegiance has been recited in a monotone without proper inflection, and all too frequently with inappropriate cadence and improper grouping or phrasing of thought."

He said the pledge is "a one-sentence proposition with only two commas," which he said belonged after the words "stands" and "indivisible."

However, a copy of the pledge provided by Meshel's office included a period after "stands," a misplaced comma after "God" and three dots after "indivisible."

Three Show Interest In FBI Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three of the leading possibilities to succeed Clarence M. Kelley as FBI director have told Attorney General Griffin B. Bell they are interested in the job, a Justice Department official said Thursday.

The official, who asked not to be identified because selection of a nominee is an internal departmental matter, confirmed that Bell has talked with four of the Carter administration's leading choices for the post and that all but one have expressed interest.

The department declined to identify the individuals.

The Los Angeles Times reported that three of the four men who talked with Bell are Judge William H. Webster of the 8th Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis, U.S. District Court Judge Frank J. McGarr of Chicago and James F. Neal of Nashville, Tenn., the main prosecutor in the Watergate cover-up conspiracy trial.

McGarr could not be reached for comment. However, Neal and Webster confirmed Thursday night that they had conferred with Bell.

"I can say that I've had several discussions with the attorney general and there will probably be some more," said Webster from his home in St. Louis.

Asked if he would accept the FBI post, Webster answered: "I think it would be premature to comment on that. I will say, however, that anyone who loves his country would certainly have to give such an offer a great deal of consideration."

Interviewed at the airport in Nashville, Neal said he met with Bell in Washington on Wednesday. "He's not offered anything, and I didn't reject anything," Neal said.

The Los Angeles Times did not identify the fourth individual on the list or specify which three expressed interest in being FBI director.

Bell's office logs showed that he talked by telephone with two of the potential nominees on Tuesday, one on Wednesday and had a meeting with one of the individuals on Wednesday.

Bell discussed a list of 10 possible nominees with Carter before the president left on his current overseas trip and they agreed on four leading choices for Bell to contact to determine if they were interested.

The Justice Department said Bell would report back to Carter soon after the president's return from abroad on Friday.

Neal, 48, now in private law practice, had been a special assistant to former Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy.

Webster, 53, was appointed a federal judge in 1971 by President Nixon and was promoted to the appeals court in 1973.

McGarr, 56, former first assistant attorney general in Illinois, was named to the bench by Nixon in 1970.

Kelley is due to step down as FBI director next month.

Many Crystal City Citizens Still Face Winter Months Minus Fuel

CRYSTAL CITY (AP) — More than a third of Crystal City's 8,000 residents still are facing the winter months without fuel for heating or cooking, city officials say.

Part of the problem is blamed on slow progress on a federal emergency program to install propane tanks at many residences. Only one firm is doing the work.

Also, many people who have received the tanks and propane under the program already have used up their initial free supply of the fuel and say they have no money to buy more.

So far, about 300 tanks have been installed under the emergency assistance program, City Manager Raul Flores said Thursday.

Nearly 500 other families are awaiting installation of tanks and equipment.

The city was granted the $310,000 in emergency aid by the federal Community Services Administration, through the Crisis Intervention Program.

Crystal City, about 120 miles southwest of San Antonio, is a predominantly Mexican-American community with many migrant workers. City officials say most of the town's population receives at least some government welfare aid.

The town's natural gas supplier, Lo-Vaca Gathering Co., terminted natural gas service in September after the town refused to pay more than $800,000 in disputed fuel charges.

The cutoff was approved by the Texas Railroad Commission.

Carter Says Saudis Need New Fighters

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration says Saudi Arabia's aging British Lightning fighter planes should be replaced, but it has not decided whether to sell the Saudis 60 F-15 supersonic aircraft, the State Department says.

State Department spokesman Thomas Reston said, "We will proceed on this matter at the appropriate time in close consultations with Congress." The Saudis have a long-standing request for the F-15s.

Convicts Release Hostages Unharmed

COWANSVILLE, Quebec (UPI) — Two convicts gave up dreams of a $100,000 ransom and a flight to Cuba and released unharmed two hostages they had held in a prison school.

The hostages seized Thursday at the federal medium security penitentiary 50 miles southeast of Montreal were identified as Jacques Lalancette, 30-year-old father of a newborn infant, and his secretary, Ghislaine Campbell, 32.

"Both hostages have been examined and found physically sound but emotionally drained. They were naturally very traumatized because of their strain," said prison director Jean-Paul Lupien.

"Throughout the incident their lives were in danger," Lupien said. "The two inmates now are on their way to Millhaven where they will be incarcerated with other dangerous offenders."

The convicts, Michel Talbot, 24, serving 10 years for armed robbery, and Denis Duguay, 29, serving 10 years for violent rape and armed robbery, seized the employees of the prison school at knifepoint shortly after morning classes began.

The inmates first asked negotiator Guy Messier, a prison officer, for $100,000 and a plane to Cuba but finally settled for transfer to another prison, Lupien said.

Lupien said Mrs. Campbell was seized first and was used as a shield to grab Lalancette.

"He was the main hostage," Lupien said. "And apart from holding him at knifepoint they put a metal wire around his neck. Throughout the day they kept putting on the wire and taking it off — on and off, all day long.

"One of the inmates also claimed to have nitroglycerine in his possession," he said. "We are now testing it to find out if it was nitro or another yellow liquid."

Lupien praised Mrs. Campbell for "exceptionally fine behavior. She kept trying to talk to them and you could see that the inmates developed respect for her."

But he said they began to feel grave concern for her safety at about 2 p.m. when they discovered the violent nature of Duguay's sexual offense.

She was freed an hour later after Lupien demanded proof the inmates were bargaining in good faith. Lalancette was released at about 5 p.m.

Labels Desired On Hair Dryers

WASHINGTON (AP) — A member of the Consumer Product Safety Commission says she would like much stronger warnings on hand-held hair dryers about possible shock hazards.

"The thing that concerns me is that sales of this product are going up very rapidly, some people use them every day, and people tend to get careless," said Barbara Franklin. "People seem to store hair dryers near the tub."

The commission on Thursday denied petitions to set a federal standard for the hand-held hair dryers, designed to eliminate the potential hazards of flaming and overheating.

The commissioners said Underwriters Laboratories, a testing center, had made significant steps to reduce the hazards. But they asked UL to develop stronger labeling about correct use to prevent the smoking, flaming and overheating problems.

Miss Franklin said she would go further, to strengthen the warning about shock hazards. She said she is writing UL, urging them to put stronger and more conspicuous labels on the hair dryers dealing with the possibility of shocks.

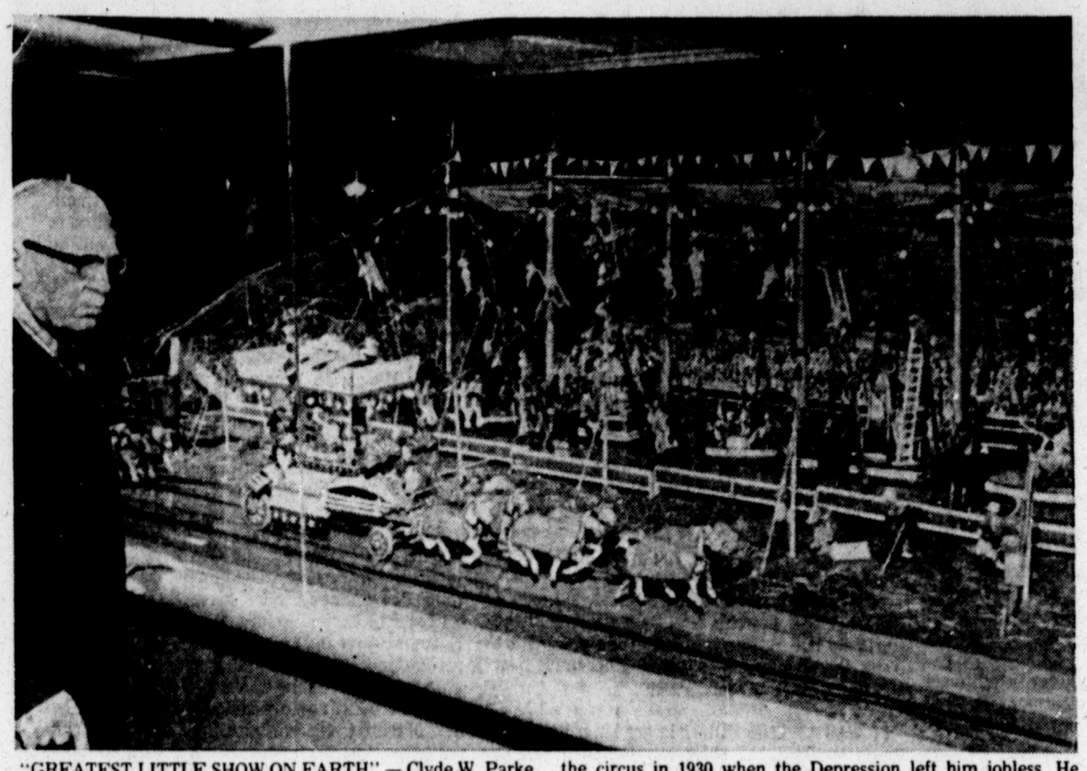
Lifelong Ambition Produces Hand-Carved Model Of Circus



"GREATEST LITTLE SHOW ON EARTH" — Clyde W. Parke, 94, stands beside the Big Top of his 95 percent animated, hand-carved circus as the intricate Queen of Sheba float in the street parade passes. Parke, a retired office manager, began carving the circus in 1930 when the Depression left him jobless. He worked seven years and 60,000 hours on the major portion and has spent most of the rest of his life refining his creation. The circus' home is the Pink Palace Museum. (AP Laserphoto)

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — When Clyde W. Parke lost his job in 1930, he didn't fret that much. He picked up a pocket knife, a block of white pine and began whittling away on his life's dream — a circus.

"All my life I wanted to learn how to carve," Parke, 94, said in an interview. "With so much time on my hands, I had to do something to keep from going crazy. It seemed a good time to give my secret ambition a try."

When Parke climbed upstairs to his attic to begin carving, he didn't realize he would devote seven years and 60,000 hours to what he calls the "Greatest Little Show on Earth."

"I had in mind a one-ring circus and I thought I could do it in three years," the small, white-haired man said. "But I got interested in it and I just couldn't quit. I'd work 18 hours a day and never stopped before 1 or 2 a.m."

The result: Circus Minimus, a one-inch to one-foot scale, five ring extravaganza, 95 percent animated by a single one-half horsepower motor turning a line shaft and a system of pulleys and gears.

The circus' permanent home is a 25 by 12 1/2-foot, glass-enclosed platform at the Pink Palace Museum where it is animated two hours each Saturday.

The major work on the circus was finished by 1937 when Parke found a job with a wood products firm, but he continued adding pieces, replacing broken parts, repainting. He estimates he spent more than 30 years on his creation. He had to give up carving two years ago after a stroke.

Although he displayed it occasionally at schools, department stores, and fairs, the circus remained in Parke's attic until 1970. He operated it for his children and neighbors.

The detail of Parke's circus is its delight. There are more than 100 horses, 45 wagons, 65 wild animals, 500 performers in various poses, and 1,500 spectators cramming the Big Top bleachers.

The trapeze artists swing, the snakes weave, the camel's head turns, the baby elephant takes steps and the juggler tosses bottles in the air.

"The pride of the sideshow is a fan dancer. She has five mirrors behind her so that it looks like a whole stageful of dancers," Parke said.

DR. LAMB

Diseases Enlarge Heart

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have been informed that I have a large heart. Is this dangerous, and can it be reduced? If not, what are the do's and don't in a case like this? I am old (Medicare) and refuse to say anything more. I do all my own housework and some gardening. Some puffing occurs, especially when I face up to those high winds, which I dearly love. My blood pressure is 140 over 76) sometimes higher — and 190 when I really get angry. I have heart poundings and palpitations. Any suggestions will be greatly appreciated.

DEAR READER — Usually a heart is thought to be large on the basis of a X ray picture of it or changes in the electrocardiogram. The latter is often unreliable as a guide to heart enlargement.

A heart may enlarge because the muscle that makes up the heart chamber walls is thickened or because the chamber cavity is increased is size to hold more blood. Often both features are present, a thickened muscular wall and an enlarged cavity.

An endurance athlete develops an enlargement to be able to hold more blood in the heart between beats and to increase the pumping capacity of the heart. That makes him a better endurance athlete. In those instances, the changes are a sign of health.

A variety of disease may cause the heart to enlarge. A damaged valve inside the heart may require the heart to increase it muscular wall thickness. If you have high blood pressure, the first accommodation the heart makes is to increase its muscular size. That is because the heart muscle has to be stronger to pump blood at a higher pressure than it normally does. This is very much like the effect of weightlifting on an arm muscle.

In older people, the most common cause of heart enlargement is disease in the arteries to the heart muscle. The build up of fatty-cholesterol particles in the arteries is the cause. The heart muscle weakens because of the damage from poor circulation and then enlarges to work more efficiently. I would guess that is your problem. Your usual pressure when you are not angry is too normal to cause much cardial enlargement, and I doubt from the tone of your letter that you are the kind of person who stay angry all the time.

What can you do? If the heart has adjusted by increasing its size and you are doing well otherwise, there is little that needs to be done. Keep your weight down and eat a proper low-fat low-cholesterol diet. I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-3, Diet, Preventing Atherosclerosis, to give you some general guide lines you can follow. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Light gardening and walking will be good for you if it doesn't tire you or cause you to get short of breath or develop chest pain. If you start having chest pains, I think you should also sharply limit your salt intake. When the heart enlarges as in your case, strict salt restriction sometimes helps and it will help keep the blood pressure lower. The lower the blood pressure the less work your heart has to do — which should help some in the long run.

Solon Makes Humorous Predictions For 1978

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Frank Thompson, D-N.J., the chairman of the House Administration Committee who makes humorous predictions as a sideline, says 1978 will see an out-of-work Henry Kissinger start his own country so he will have something to do.

Thompson also said this week that 1978 would see Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin go into business together, opening a "soul food restaurant" in Newark, N.J.

Here are some of Thompson's other 197 predictions:

"January — Newsmen overhear President Carter whispering to Secretary (of State Cyrus) Vance that in his heart he has known lust for polish sausage; O.J. Simpson arrested in an airport for loitering.

"April — Charles Colson and Larry Flynt publish two-volume work entitled 'How We Found Spiritual Peace and Game-Planning the Parole Process.'

OUR PLEDGE

We pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America and to the Republic for which it stands, one Nation, under God, indivisible, with Liberty and Justice for all.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Lubbock: Your City, Too

WHILE MUCH of the rhetoric that comes from certain Chamber of Commerce publications across the nation can be put down as "cheerleading," now and then there are words of wisdom which all citizens can heed.

Such was the case in the December issue of Greater Lubbock, the Lubbock C-C publication.

In what might be tabbed an editorial of sorts, "Pete Progress" had something to say about what makes a city tick, who helps make it go and who benefits.

THE ITEM posed a question which applies to every businessman, large, small and in-between in this or any other city. It was:

"How often have you heard one businessman refer to the others in town with 'they,' 'their,' or 'them'? Naturally, he's usually correct," Pete noted, "but sometimes he can be dead wrong!

"For instance, it's we—not they—who are the 'business community,' it's our prosperity—not theirs—that depends on forward-looking community action and planning; it's to us—not to them—the later benefits will fall."

THE COMMENTS were headed by "Watch Your Language!" and also featured a mouth from which sprang these thoughts...

"Why doesn't somebody...Wish I had the time, but...Not my affair...Let George do it...If I had anything to say about it...What's that got to do with me?" Perhaps the rest of the questions can be answered by answering the last one.

What happens in Lubbock, Texas, or any other community for that matter, has Everything to do with all of us. But, the Chamber of Commerce in each city is uniquely attuned to the needs and fitted to help meet the problems of the business community.

IN SO DOING, helping out on freight rates, helping get a Port of Entry, encouraging other and more diversified business to come into the city and area, helping area farmers, boosting education and health care...

All these things, and many more, come under the attention of the professional staff of the Chamber of Commerce.

In effect, from the officers, unpaid and elected by their fellow business members of the Chamber, to the paid professional staff, the goal is to help bring about a better, healthier and more prosperous climate in which business—and that means everything from electronics to agri-business—can operate.

If "they" are successful, then "we"—all of us, whether dues-paying members or not—will benefit.

Old Warnings For A New Year

WASHINGTON—Of the more than a million letters that President Carter has received since taking office last January, the one that particularly intrigues the President and his closest advisers came recently from Jeanne Dixon, the internationally known soothsayer.

Dealing with the President's controversial decision to return the 1,000 year old holy Crown of St. Stephen to the Communist government of Hungary, Mrs. Dixon's four page letter contains an unusual blunt warning to the President.

The soothsayer forecasts that it will cause a "nightmare" both for the country and the President and "haunt" him throughout his presidency.

Instead of returning the Crown to the Hungarian government, the President is urged by Mrs. Dixon to put it on public display here in Washington in order to make it a center of pilgrimage for freedom supporters all over the world.

MRS. DIXON, WHO accurately predicted tragedy in the life of the late President John F. Kennedy shortly after he took office, wrote her proposed solution and dire warning to the President in these words:

"Let the Crown be brought from its place of confinement into the light of day. And to emphasize its unique background and meaning, both for Hungarians and for all free people, let it be watched over day and night by a triple honor guard.

"Let one be a member of the Pope's Swiss Guards from the Vatican, because the Crown originally came from the Papacy to King Stephen one thousand years ago.

"And let one guard be a volunteer from among the brave Hungarian freedom fighters who fled their country after Soviet tanks crushed their revolution in 1956.

"In this way, Mr. President, the U.S. would show all the world that we mean what we promised: that the Crown will indeed be returned to Hungary when—and only when—that country is restored to the control of its own people.

"THE MILLIONS OF people who would come to see the Crown could contribute to a St. Stephen Scholarship Fund, to provide for the education of young Hungarians who escape their Communist government to study abroad and to learn in freedom.

"That would demonstrate anew the power of St. Stephen's Crown. Without losing a single one of its jewels, it would amass a treasure far more precious than gold.

"It would be the means by which a future generation of Hungarian leaders would be trained so that, one day, after the last Soviet soldier has left their country, they can take the Crown with them in glory back to Budapest and again proclaim St. Stephen the spiritual king of Hungary.

"That day can come, Mr. President, but only if the friends of the Hungarian people around the world do not forsake the dream for which Imre Nagy, Pal Maleter, and so many other brave men and women died in 1956."

IT WAS AT THIS POINT in her letter that Mrs. Dixon included her blunt warning to President Carter, writing:

"If their dream is now betrayed by the American government, it will become our nightmare—your nightmare. And your presidency will be haunted by it until your last day in the White House, and beyond...

"Mr. President, I want to assure you of my prayers as you struggle with this difficult decision, which may well determine, not only the fate of the Hungarian people but also the future of your presidency."

WHILE WHITE HOUSE aides have notified Mrs. Dixon that her letter has been received and turned over to the President, there has been no formal reply from Carter to the soothsayer.

For more than thirty years, both Democratic and Republican Administrations have refused to turn the Crown over to the Soviet backed Communist governments in Hungary.

President Carter decided to send the Crown to Budapest early in December but protests by Hungarian-American groups and members of Congress have delayed the transfer.

The Crown is now scheduled to be returned by Sec. of State Cyrus Vance during a visit today and Saturday—that is, if Mrs. Dixon's warning is ignored.

Holmes Alexander:

Dear Diary: It's About JC...

WASHINGTON—Top tipsheet in Washington, "Congressional Insight," reports that another slum clearance of obsolete military bases is being readied for this election year, and a good test of Jimmy Carter's manhood it would be.

Defense Sec. Harold Brown will be sitting front and center, like Madame Defarge as she knitted her vengeance list for the guillotine, but the decision will be the President's, and we'll find out what stuff he's made of.

What with three day holiday weekends and Congress gone, I have been using idle hours to bone up on the diagnosis of my letters as President Carter's first year and his chances of going down in infamy as a one-termer.

The landslide opinion, although slowed momentarily by the absent traveling hecklers, is that Carter needn't unpack the luggage he totes around, because he could conveniently have it ready for the first constitution vamoose.

THE REASON I LED off with the subject of base-closing is to make this point—no President has got what it takes unless he dare to be unpopular in a worthy cause.

For decades we've had bases as out-of-date as the calvary hitching post and battleship row.

Brown will show the proof, if he already hasn't, to the Armed Services committee chairmen and other stately Congressional seniors.

Their rage is predictable as soon as he makes the announcement because it always happens that way.

The most revered of the Capitol Hill sainthood will blaspheme the loudest and perjure themselves talking about the military indispensibility of old camp grounds.

Not a jot of patriotism, not a dab of statesmanship, is an ingredient of this outcry.

It is the squealing of political greed, the shriek of panic by national office-holders who know what the yokels back home expect of them—to keep both hands in the pork barrel.

SIMILAR TANTRUMS were flung last year when Jimmy showed a "hit list" of yacht basins and swimming holes which were cherished as federal freebies in well-to-do Congressional districts.

The President didn't get much for his effort except a warning shot across the White House prow.

Now we'll see if he dares to do what's right for the national economy even if it pinches the county boss and the beer parlor where the personnel hang out.

Short memories pollute the tea leaves which are being examined for Carter's future. No quality is more admired in a President than conscientious courage.

When Nixon was at his nadir in scandals at home and betrayal on the warfront, he ordered the mining of Haiphong harbor and the carpet-bombing of Hanoi.

He defied world opinion and the censure of his few remaining loyalists, but he did right by the American POWs and their families.

When President Ford ordered the recapture of the Mayaquez, he must have felt his heart in his mouth, for it could have triggered a wider war.

Carter will have chances to prove his mettle, and it would be a powerful factor in his tenure at the White House.

While it's true that some Carter inspirations have fizzled, he was lucky that they did. Who wants an election day registration to botch the voting?

Walter Johnson, the great American League pitcher, used to console his less talented teammates by pointing out that luck is a good right arm in any game.

So if Carter stays lucky, he needn't be skillful, and if he's gutsy on big and small decisions, he'll stay around.

Don't Let Sour Credit Spoil Future Finances

(Fourth Of Nine Columns)

HOW DO YOU ESTABLISH a good credit rating and maintain it, in the face of ever-mounting temptations to buy-buy-buy?

Or how do you restore a rating if it has gone bad?

On what specific points can your credit rating be altered?

What are the six potential "black marks" that could undermine your credit rating and bar you from the credit markets?

(1) How do you establish and maintain a credit rating?

• Avoid overloading yourself with installment debt. Refer to the guidelines on how much debt is too much debt for you.

• Aim for a rainy day fund in cash or its equivalent equal to two to three months' pay.

• Tell the truth when you apply for credit and repay all your debts as agreed.

But if you find you are unable to meet one or more payments on time, go to the creditors involved, explain your circumstances, and try to work out a more practical repayment schedule.

• PREVENT, IF AT all possible, such extreme measures as repossession, litigation, the turning over of your account to a collection agency.

Should any of these measures be threatened, in more cases than you might think, your creditors will be willing to assist you so you can meet your obligations.

Or they may refer you to a reliable credit counseling service near you for guidance. Or you may go on your own to that counseling service for initial help.

(2) How do you restore a rating that has gone bad?

• When you borrow in the future, start slowly with small amounts and if you can, borrow against a passbook savings account in your name.

• Try to borrow from several different reputable creditors. Different lenders have different policies and some may turn out easier to borrow from than others.

• WHENEVER YOU BORROW this time around, make a strong effort to pay back faster than the loan terms require. Fast repayments look good on your credit record.

• Weigh carefully the possible advantages of borrowing through a credit union if one exists at the company where you work.

(3) On what specific points can your credit rating be altered—favorably or unfavorably?

• Your employment record. How long have you worked for the same company? A prime consideration is the stability of your employment.

• Your previous loans. Have you ever paid off a loan before?

The theory is that if you have repaid a loan on time before this one, you will repay this loan too.

If you have defaulted on any previous loan, you're prone to defaulting again.

• YOUR HOME. DO YOU own your own home? Or have you lived in the same apartment in which you now live for some time?

• Your charge accounts. Have you a record of regular payments on your charge accounts?

• Your checking or savings accounts. Do you have either?

If you do—and particularly if they are at the institution to which you may be applying for a loan—it will be a crucial "plus."

(4) What are the potential "black marks" that could undermine your credit rating and, quite probably, bar you from the credit markets? There are six.

• If you can't identify yourself. What about a driver's license, birth certificate, Social Security card, draft card, union card, voter registration card, employe identification?

• IF YOU HAVE A "floating" address. This might be a furnished room in a rooming house or in a transient hotel, a post office box number, a mail address in care of a friend.

• If your employment is in an exceedingly unstable industry or profession and if your own job is also basically volatile.

• If you are under 21 or under 18 years of age and have no adult to co-sign for you.

• If you apply for a loan at a bank or consumer finance company or other financial institution located far from your residence.

• If you are planning to go into the armed services before your loan is repaid.

Under these circumstances, the lender almost surely will demand that a co-signer guarantee your loan repayment.

James J. Kilpatrick:

Folks, You Ain't Seen Nuffin Yet

WASHINGTON—Al Jolson had a memorable line. Halfway through a show, after the juggler, the seal act and the harmonica king had brought down the house, he would spur his audience to new peaks of anticipation.

Folks, he would say, you ain't seen nuffin yet.

For the past several years, college presidents, high school principals and school board members have been fretting against the arrogance of federal bureaucrats in the enforcement of civil rights decrees.

Folks, it must be said to the educators, you ain't seen nuffin yet. Joe Califano is about to double his bureaucratic army. And he is newly pledged to what he describes as "aggressive" enforcement.

The secretary of Health, Education and Welfare last week entered into a consent agreement with plaintiffs in two long-pending lawsuits.

The agreement, formally imposed by Federal Judge John H. Pratt, runs to 55 pages.

IT IS COMPREHENSIVE. It covers the landscape. It leaves no conceivable area of civil rights untouched.

Its purpose is to assure equal educational opportunities for women, blacks, the handicapped and other minorities wherever the federal dollar is involved.

That is just about everywhere. The order applies to HEW's activities in grade schools, high schools, colleges and universities both public and private.

And unlike HEW's recent assault upon higher education in six formerly segregated Southern states, this attack will apply across the nation.

The agreement requires the secretary to hire an additional 898 enforcers in the Office for Civil Rights. Their first job will be to clear a logjam of long-pending complaints.

Then they can make life miserable in academic groves.

For an inkling of what lies ahead, educators may want to look back at just one part of the litigation covered by the current agreement, dealing with the narrow issue of public higher education only in Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, Oklahoma and Virginia.

BACK IN JULY, under court order, the secretary promulgated a set of criteria for desegregation. The defendant states have been struggling to keep their sanity ever since.

Califano's purpose, boiled down, is to control every substantive aspect of public higher education in the six states.

This control would be achieved through his asserted power to review every decision made by a college administrator that might "directly or indirectly" affect the meeting of racial quotas.

To be sure, the secretary denies that he is fixing quotas, but this is a Humpty-Dumpty kind of thing.

Califano wants specific numbers of black bodies and white bodies, and he wants them according to specific timetables.

Such goals are not quotas in the same way that canines are not dogs.

WHETHER HE CALLS them goals, guidelines, benchmarks, criteria or minimal standards, he is demanding specific proportions of black and white on every campus and on every faculty.

He is demanding quotas.

At the same time—and it demands a superlative juggling act on Califano's part—Califano is demanding that the traditionally black institutions be beefed up.

The TBI's, in the bureaucratic abbreviation, are to remain TBI.

However, and this is the tricker, while the white institutions must have proportionate quotas of blacks, the black institutionns may not have proportionate quotas of whites; otherwise, they would cease to be TBI's.

The idea is for the black colleges to violate the civil rights laws without actually breaking them.

THE CHIEF ENFORCER for this particular farrago of contradictions, compulsions and racist impositions is David S. Tatel, director of HEW's Office for Civil Rights.

This will give you an idea of his approach.

The Commonwealth of Virginia made a formal commitment to provide "equal educational opportunity for all persons." This was not enough.

Tatel's zealous underlings demanded that Virginia's Governor Mills Godwin grovel before the federal heel: He would have to commit Virginia to "the achievement of desegregation."

To this insulting demand, Godwin replied cooly that Virginia does not operate a segregated system of higher education and therefore has nothing to desegregate. This was an act of intolerable lese majeste, and Tatel blew up.

Last week he threatened to cut off $40 million in federal aid in Virginia. Tatel said Godwin was impossible. Godwin said Tatel was unprintable.

This is the kind of thing educators everywhere may now look forward to. Happy New Year, and all that there.

President In Family Financial Boon To Carters

By ANN BLACKMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — It used to be when folks thought of the Carter family, they thought of peanuts. Not any more.

In the 11 months Jimmy Carter has been president, members of his family have parlayed his position into almost a million-dollar windfall.

The president's kinfolk have come a long way since that hot summer in Plains, Ga., a year and a half ago when Amy was selling lemonade for a dime and tuna fish sandwiches for a dollar.

Now there are books — one about Carter's mother's Peace Corps days in India, two about faith healing and one in preparation about brother Billy.

And there are personal appearances by Billy Carter — at the World Champion Belly-flop and Cannonball Diving contest in Canada and the World Champion Pole-climbing contest in Kentucky, to name only two.

Billy's agent says he makes four such appearances a month at $5,000 each. That would be $240,000 a year. The agent says he has appearances booked through March; Carter says through July.

And that's not all. The president's younger brother has put his picture and signature on a new beer called "Billy." It was first marketed last fall by the Falls City Brewing Co. of Louisville, Ky., which owns the rights. Since then, three other breweries have agreed to market the beer under licenses from Falls City. By February they say they expect to sell it in 48 states.

Jim Tate, president of Falls City, said he sold 672,000 cases of "Billy" during the first two months it was on the market. He expects to sell at least 5 million cases this year at $4 to $6 each.

Billy Carter was unable to say how much he makes per can.

"It's a complicated formula that would take an accountant to work out," he said.

No one who knows will say how much money Billy Carter is making from his new celebrity status. Tandy Rice, Carter's agent in Nashville, Tenn., said Carter gets royalties from the beer sales. He added that there are also Billy posters, Billy t-shirts, Billy belt buckles and even a toy "Redneck-powered pick-up truck."

Lloyd Kolmer, a New York agent whose clients include entertainers Milton Berle and Victor Borge, estimated that Carter could demand $100,000 for endorsing a product.

Billy's gasoline station in Plains has nearly doubled its business since his brother became president, according to petroleum industry sources who asked not to be identified.

The sources said Carter's station now is pumping about 700,000 gallons of gasoline a year, which with sales of accessories, would give him an income on between $20,000 and $30,000.

A telephone interview from Cabel, Wis., where Billy was appearing at a cross-country ski race, brought this exchange:

Q. A lot of members of your family are making a lot of money now, and I wonder how you feel about this?

A. Personally, it doesn't bother me at all. I'm one of them who is making part of it.

Q. Does your brother ever say anything about it?

A. No. He has not.

Billy isn't the only Carter who has done well in the last year.

Cousin Hugh Carter, who owns a worm farm in Plains, said his business has increased 25 percent since Jimmy Carter went to the White House. He said he sells 15 million worms a year — about $104,250 gross.

"Half of what you make is profit," Carter said, adding that his costs include two secretaries, advertising and postage.

Any investments needed?

"Worms are raised in cow and horse manure mixed with peat moss," Carter said. "Then you burn a light over them at night so they don't crawl out."

President Carter's sisters also have had a good financial year.

Gloria Carter Spann compiled the letters her mother wrote while she was in the Peace Corps. The book, "Away From Home: Letters to My Family," has sold 35,000 hardoack copies, according to Emily Boxer of Simon and Schuster, the publisher.

Other publishing sources said Mrs. Spann received a $50,000 advance to write the book. It became an alternate Literary Guild selection, which sources say is worth a minimum of $3,000 to $5,000 a year.

Howard Kaminsky, president of Warner Books, Inc., which bought the paperback rights, said he understands Mrs. Spann's share was $35,000.

Asked if she will make $100,000 from the book, which publishing sources say is possible, Mrs.Spann said: "Oh God, I haven't heard that. I think a considerable amount of that would go for taxes."

Has the president ever discussed the family's money-making ventures with her?

"Jimmy has never said a word to me ...," she replied.

The president's other sister, Ruth Carter Stapleton, has been a faith-healing evangelist for 20 years. She, too, is doing well as an author. And she recently purchased a 30-acre ranch outside Dallas, which she plans to turn into a spiritual retreat.

"If it works, then maybe I'll have another on the West Coast and one on the East Coast and some others," Mrs. Stapleton said.

She added that the money she makes from the center, as well as her speaking fees, are turned over to her non-profit religious corporation, Behold, Inc.

Mrs. Stapleton's first book, "The Gift of Inner Healing," has sold 125,000 hardback copies since its publication in 1976, according to Laura Kendell, of the Word, Inc., publishing firm in Waco.

Her latest work, "The Experience of Inner Healing," sold 60,000 hardback copies since its release last June, Miss Kendell said.

Other publishing sources, who declined to be identified because some consider it unethical to discuss financial arrangements, said Mrs. Stapleton earned at least $50,000 for paperback rights to her first book. One source said she got $160,000 from sales of both books.

She is working on a third book, about Billy Carter, that will be published by Harper and Row next fall, she said.

Asked if she feels Billy Carter is profiting from the presidency, Mrs. Stapleton said: "Oh, no. I think he is making the best of a situation that has arisen beyond his control."

She said she was the one who talked him into getting an agent.

"When I saw what the public was doing to Billy, I saw there was no way he could carry on a legitimate business," she explained.

"People were always wanting him to speak. Tourists would walk right into his office ... If Billy walked into his filling station, within 10 minutes there would be 100 tourists taking pictures of him.

"... I'm happy he's been able to turn it into a profit since he could (no longer) make money in the peanut business ... I think it's tremendous he's been able to make a living."

President Carter's children are also attuned to the times.

Son Jeff, 25, and his wife, Annette, who are interested in photography, recently sold 10 pictures to the annual edition of Life magazine for $10,000. The first lady's press secretary said they plan to give the money to charity.

Judy Carter, who is married to the president's 30-year-old son, Jack, has become a contributing editor to Redbook magazine, following in the journalistic tradition of presidential daughters. Lynda Bird Johnson worked for McCall's magazine, Julie Nixon Eisenhower for the Saturday Evening Post and Susan Ford for The Associated Press and Seventeen magazine.

Sources at Redbook said Judy Carter makes at least $7,200 a year, probably a good deal more.

Carter's middle son, Chip, 27, worked part-time for the Democratic National Committee. He was paid $8,000 for the seven months' work before moving back to Plains with his wife last September.

His cousin, Hugh Carter Jr., has a $51,000-a-year job at the White House in charge of administrative matters and cutting costs.

PRESIDENT IN THE FAMILY HELPS — President Carter's brother Billy, top, sips one of the first cans of "Billy Beer" from which he receives royalties. Ruth Carter Stapleton, the President's sister, displays her book "The Gift Of Inner Healing," and the president's cousin, Hugh Carter shows off some of the earth worms he raises. All have found it profitable to be related to a president. (AP Laserphoto)

ART AUCTION SLATED

PARIS (AP) — Works donated by Joan Miro, Leonor Fini and other contemporary artists will be auctioned Feb. 25 to help finish a church designed by Le Corbusier. The architect died in 1965, and work stopped soon after his death on the church at Firminy, in central France, with two-thirds of the building unfinished. Construction resumed in September, but about $500,000 is needed to finish the work.

Mrs. Crosby Stars In Play

NEW YORK (UPI) — Kathy Crosby, a 23-year-old starlet when she married Bing Crosby in 1957, is resuming her acting career in a road show production of "Same Time, Next Year."

The play will open Jan. 13 in Greensboro, N.C., and "from there go most every where in the South," Mrs. Crosby said in an interview.

She said the decision to take the part in the play was made "long before" her husband died on a golf course in Spain last Oct. 18.

She has no other immediate plans for other stage performances because right now "there is not another play as good as 'Same Time, Next Year.'" she said.

"It's so super," she said. "I saw it in the first two weeks (on Broadway) and thought to myself, 'I want to do that play.'"

"Same Time, Next Year' is a comedy about a man and a woman who have an adulterous relationship over several years, meeting at the same time each year.

It is not Mrs. Crosby's first stage appearance since marrying Crosby 20 years ago.

"Starting in 1963, I did a play almost every year until 1970," she said, adding that she later limited her outside activities to concentrate on raising her family.

In recent years she hosted a morning television show on the West Coast.

Burns, Hope To Join In Vaudeville Show

By JAY SHARBUTT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — This Sunday, George Burns, 80, continues his show biz career doing gags and a soft-shoe number with a young comic — Bob Hope, 74 — as a guest on Hope's vaudeville show on NBC.

But next April, Burns may go back to school, which he left in the fourth grade to start his career singing with the Peewee Quartet in his native New York.

He says he's considering an offer to lecture at Harvard.

"Can you imagine that?" he inquired. "I can't even spell Harvard."

(An aide said it's part of a course of chats by heavyweights in film, dance, theater, music and visual arts.)

What might you lecture on, Mr. Burns?

"Call me George," the teacher said. "Well, it'd be the only thing I know: Show business. I don't get mixed up in politics. I don't talk to anybody who can't sing harmony."

Will the visiting professor, if he visits, do a routine or two?

"I might," he said. "Might also tell 'em how you build up a routine, how you start with one joke, you top it and top it again, and first thing you know, you've got a routine."

To student jokesmiths, he offered this:

"I've been mixed up with writers all my life and the most important thing for a writer is to find the first thought, the first idea. You get a good thought, the thing writes itself."

He paused briefly. "That's the kind of great stuff I'm going to tell 'em," he warned, kidding the act he may put on at one of the nation's top hatcheries of thought and study.

Burns, who turns 81 on Jan. 20, has been busy with other acts of late, including the touting of his new hit movie, "Oh, God."

The veteran trouper was asked why, at his age, he works so much.

"Because it gets me out of bed," he replied. "At my age, it's a great thing to get out of bed. I can't make any money in bed. In fact, I can't do anything in bed."

Back to education. Burns' doctorate came from the school of vaudeville where, as Fred Allen once observed, the students were so low that ticket-taking midgets were hired to make them feel at home.

What happens if Harvard asks Dr. Burns to work full-time teaching what he's learned to a potentially higher grade of scholars?

"Well, if they got a nice theater I'll stay on," he promised. "Particularly if they got about 15 or 20 musicians and they play in my key.

"I go any place where it's in my key."

Former Football Player To Star In TV Drama

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The young man has just about everything going for him.

His blonde and beautiful mother was a star. His father ranks among the most celebrated gridiron stars of the century. He was reared in luxury, surrounded by celebrities and he became a college football hero himself.

Now at 26 he is starring in his own dramatic network television show.

He is Mark Harmon, son of Elyse Knox and Tom Harmon. The show, "Sam," makes its debut on CBS Jan. 31.

Mark, an inordinately handsome fellow, attained national attention as a UCLA quarterback in the early 1970s and is now pursuing an acting career.

He is poised, self-effacing and confidently laid back.

Young Harmon appreciates the values of his background. He also is aware that his future as an actor is unrelated to the achievements of his parents and his own exploits on the football field.

Unlike many another athlete-turned-actor — say, Mark Spitz — Mark has attended acting classes for five years. He attends movies with a zealot's dedication, studying the techniques of Montgomery Clift, Paul Newman and Gary Cooper.

He began modestly enough appearing in small roles in episodic television and last year won an Emmy nomination for best supporting actor in "Eleanor and Franklin."

Earlier this year he played a key role in his first movie, "Comes A Horseman," which will be released next spring. The cast is filled with heavyweights — Jane Fonda, Jason Robards and James Caan.

Jack Webb, impressed with Mark's cool screen presence, chose him to play a young policeman who works the bomb and narcotics squads with a yellow Labrador retriever named "Sam."

Mark prepared more carefully for his role than he did for UCLA game plans. He spent weeks riding in Los Angeles Police Department squad cars. He studied the records of current K-9 units in large cities.

"Our series is based on a real Los Angeles police dog who nosed out the alphabet bomber and got the medal of valor for it," Mark said.

"I spent a lot of time with the policeman, Duane Shube, and Hans, who broke that case.

"Duane has become a good friend and adviser. Hans is a fantastic dog. Duane took a tiny bit of plastic explosive and rubbed it on the side of a box and then hid it in the police academy lot.

"It is the size of about four football fields, filled with automobiles and crates and junk. It took Hans 30 seconds to sniff it out."

Two months prior to Mark was introduced to Sam. He took the 4-year-old Labrador to his San Fernando Valley home for six weeks and worked with Sam and his trainer, Carl Spitz Jr., almost every day.

Instead of explosives and drugs, Sam was trained to sniff out anise. It was necessary for Sam to obey Mark's commands on camera as well as Spitz's directions off camera.

Sam, unlike Lassie, doesn't open doors or save endangered young children. The dog is used solely for search missions, detecting drugs and explosives.

Mark, who lost some 20 pounds from his football playing weight, realizes it is he, not Sam, who must carry the show, abetted by Paul Burke who plays his captain on the new series.

He believes his years as UCLA's gridiron leader have helped prepare him for his new career on the screen.

"There's some kind of parallel between athlete and actor but I'm not quite sure what it is," he said. "You have to put a lot of dedication and desire into both. I worked hard at perfecting football techniques and the same applies to acting if you want to do it well.

"I've always looked on the camera as a friend. It doesn't frighten me because somebody was always taking pictures of my parents or the family.

"I guess I got accustomed to movie cameras when I was in junior high school and the family was doing cereal commercials in our back yard."

Mark got his first taste of professional acting when he was still at UCLA. He played a small role in "Ozzie's Girls." The late Ozzie Nelson produced and starred in the show. Rick Nelson is married to Mark's sister, Kris.

"Acting was always in the back of my mind," Mark said. "But it was only two years ago that I admitted it to myself.

"Until then I was merchandising director for Media Central. It got me on my feet financially and I bought a home. I realized I wasn't happy on a plane trip one day. I looked at all the other businessmen in suits and ties and told myself it wasn't for me.

"Now I really enjoy what I'm doing. I know I have a long way to go, but I want to become a great actor. It's not an ego thing either, just a goal I think is worth pursuing."

CBS Ends Year On High Note

NEW YORK (UPI) — "Laverne & Shirley" was in first place in the Nielsen ratings for the last week of 1977, and Sir Laurence Olivier in "Come Back, Little Sheba" ranked 58th in a list of 58.

Before leaping to forgone conclusions about the base tastes and low mentality of the television audience, give the schedule for the week a long look and blame NBC for putting the drama on New Year's Eve.

In the same time period CBS and ABC settled for reruns of regular programing — "The Jeffersons," "Tony Randall" and "Kojak" on CBS and "Starsky and Hutch" and "Love Boat" on ABC. NBC chose this night of alcoholic merriment to schedule a tragic play about an aging alcoholic. The show had an 8.3 rating and a 17 per cent share of the audience.

As the year ended, the race for second place in the Nielsen ratings continued hot — there is no race for first because ABC has it all sewed up. In what promises to be a seesaw, CBS was in second place so far this season, with NBC at the bottom.

In the ratings for the week, ABC in a rare event this season lost to CBS, again with NBC in the cellar. That's without Nielsen including the CBS' high scoring National Football Conference NFL championship game program on New Year's Day in its list of top shows.

Nielsen did not rank the Dallas-Minnesota game, which ran from 6-8:40 p.m. Eastern time, because it began 6 p.m., which is not prime time. CBS is mad because it claims Nielsen should have ranked the portion of the game that ran from 7-8:40 p.m., (prime time on Sunday nights begins at 7 p.m., Eastern time) which would have upped CBS' total for the week.

How CBS put together its high score for the week is easy to see — five of the top ten shows, 10 of the top 20, bore the CBS brand.

CBS has reason, too, to feel good about Carol Burnett, which has been scoring poorly on Saturday nights opposite ABC's succes ful "Love Boat."

Burnett has been switched to Sunday night, where it did very nicely in its time period, and ended up in a tie with the ABC Sunday movie, "Serpico," for 9th place in the listings. This may have been an atypical week, but that's still a good showing.

The good news for ABC was the 33 share of the auience that its television movie "The Macahans" received, since that served as a pilot for its upcoming series, "How the West Was Won."

Once-Poor Tribe Now One Of Nation's Richest

By STEVE LAWRENCE

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Ray Patencio is a young Indian who drives a Cadillac, wears modish glasses and tells Indian students to "learn the white man's ways and beat him at his own game.

That's a game Patencio's tribe — the Agua Caliente band of Mission Indians — has been playing pretty well lately.

Once described as "wretchedly poor," the Agua Caliente own much of the land in this desert resort town and have become one of the richest tribes in the nation.

"We are unique," said Patencio, the 31-year-old chairman of the tribe, as he ate lunch at the posh Spa Hotel, which sits on land leased from the tribe in downtown Palm Springs.

As tribal chairman, Patencio's duties are more comparable to that of mayor than to an Indian chief.

The Agua Calientes were the beneficiary last summer of a Department of Interior decision that could be worth a bundle in golf courses, hotels and condominiums.

Interior's action gave the tribe control over zoning on reservation property in Palm Springs, in effect, creating two governments as far as land use is concerned.

It marked a milestone in a long zoning dispute between the city and the tribe and could lead to denser zoning on Indian land and higher incomes for Indian land owners.

According to one account, the Agua Caliente earn $4 million to $5 million annually from leases and rentals. Patencio is hesitant to discuss financial details.

The dispute and the decision stem from a quirk of history that developed in part because of the federal government's desire to promote railroad building in the late 19th century.

It gave the Southern Pacific Railroad alternate square-mile sections along a rail route through the Southern California desert. Part of the rest of the checkerboard was used to create a 32,000-acre reservation for the Agua Caliente.

When Palm Springs grew up around the hot springs from which the band gets its name — agua caliente is Spanish for hot water — the reservation's checkerboard layout guaranteed Indian land owners would benefit from some of the development.

About 6,700 acres of the Indian land eventually became part of the city. Today most of the resort's undeveloped land is owned by tribal members and held in trust by the federal government.

Before 1959 there was little development on Indian land because of federal limits on the length of leases.

And in 1965 the Interior Department announced it would adopt city zoning on Indian property, in effect giving the city zoning power on the reservation.

That policy was dropped by the federal government in June. Since then, the Agua Caliente tribal council has adopted city zoning codes for undeveloped Indian property and is studying whether any zoning should be changed.

Both sides say they hope they can avoid future battles.

"I think you would truthfully have to say that we are trying to work with the city to the betterment of the city, because if the city goes down the tubes so do we," says Patencio.

"If we feel they are wrong (on a zoning), we will approach them and ask them why they imposed such a zoning ordinance on that particular piece of property, Patencio said.

"If they can give us a good and accurate answer, we may just say, 'Fine, we'll approve it.' If they can't support it, we will change it."

Much of the Indians' ire is aimed at a 1973 downzoning, which the city says was necessary to bring zoning in line with its master plan and to put a reasonable limit on population.

"We said the maximum population should be about 100,000," said planning director John Mangione. "When we ran out the maximum potential of our zoning we were looking at something like 250,000."

Richard McDermott, dirctor of the Bureau of Indian Affairs office in Palm Springs, describes the downzoning as "substantial."

"In 1959 when all these lands were allotted (to individual tribal members) they were based on appraisals based on the zoning at that time," he said.

"When you slice that zoning in half you have cut the value in half. So through no fault of their own, the city has taken part of their allotment."

Only about half of the band's 172 members live in Palm Springs and not all are wealthy, McDermott and Patencio say. But McDermott says land income averages about $30,000 a year tax free, with top individual earnings ranging from $125,000 to $150,000.

"When I first came here in 1968 we had some members on welfare," he said. "Since that time, either through additional leases or land sales, everyone has some assets.'

Most of the reservation land has been allotted to individual members, although the tribe as a whole still owns some property, including the site of the Spa Hotel in downtown Palm Springs.

Some of the reservation which includes developed land as well as barren desert, was allotted to members before 1959. But in that year most of the rest of the land was split up to give members at that time at least $335,000 in land.

"That figure would give people a picture of quite a bit of wealth," says Patencio.

"But that's the value of the property. If they can't sell it or do anything with it, it's useless."

Gasoline Prices Up Less Than 1977 CPI

NEW YORK (AP) — The price of gasoline rose more slowly in 1977 than the general cost of living, according to a survey.

The combined U.S. gasoline price — including regular, unleaded and premium gasoline sold at full-service and self-service pumps — was 61.8 cents per gallon last month, according to the Lundberg Letter.

The Los Angeles-based newsletter, which surveys 20,000 service stations each month, said the average price was up 2.46 cents, or 4.14 percent, from the 59.4 cents per gallon in January 1977.

The U.S. consumer price index rose about 6.7 percent last year.

GAO Reports Adequate Competition In Nation's Coal Industry

By STAN BENJAMIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — There is adequate competition in the nation's coal industry, the General Accounting Office says, except in the relatively small Southwestern market.

But the GAO, an investigative agency of Congress, said federal ownership of coal reserves in the Southwest and Central Western market areas could be used to increase competition in the future in either or both areas.

In a report released this week, the agency said petroleum companies have increased their control of coal production and reserves in recent years, but still control a relatively small share.

The GAO also said their entry into the field, mainly in the Central Western area, may even mean increased competition.

In the third and largest coal market, the Eastern Appalachian region, the GAO said, "There is little potential for domination ... by any group of firms."

The report was prepared at the request of Sens. James O. Eastland, D-Miss., and James Abourezk, D-S.D.

The GAO examined competition in the three broad coal markets of the United States: Eastern Appalachian, consisting of all eastern coal-producing states, including Ohio; Central Western, from Indiana to Washington state, and Southwestern, including Arizona, New Mexico and Nevada.

The agency concluded:

— Nationwide, the top four companies produce about 25 percent of the total coal, and control only about 13 percent of the coal reserves now under lease. The top 20 companies control about half the production and about 25 percent of the leased reserves.

— The fact that leased reserves are more scattered than present production points to the possibility of even greater productive competition in the future, which may be enhanced by federal coal leasing policies.

— "The likelihood that any firm or group of firms can exercise market power is greatest in the southwestern market," where Utah International and Peabody Coal Co. control about 88 percent of production. But the federal government and Indian tribes control 90 percent of coal reserves and may encourage newcomers to enter the market, the agency said.

— The potential for coal market domination by petroleum companies is greatest in the Central-Western market, but the effect of their participation would be to broaden the number of competing sellers. Petroleum companies are expanding here rapidly and could control as much as 40 percent of the production by 1985, but this refers to a group of more than 24 companies.

— The situation in those Southwestern and Central-Western markets "requires the continued vigilance by the Federal Trade Commission and the Department of Justice, as well as the Interior Department through its coal leasing program."

— The concentration of coal production and reserves in Eastern Appalachia is similar to the nationwide average; the top four companies control about 22 percent of production and 15 percent of reserves. Petroleum companies here control about 16 percent of production and 11 percent of reserves.

Compound Interest Intriguing

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — The eighth wonder of the world, Baron de Rothschild is reputed to have said. Magic, say the savings banks. Through it, says a financial adviser, almost anyone can become rich.

Compound interest continues to intrigue and frustrate dreamers and realists. Though relatively few people do become rich because of it, the cold hard figures make it seem almost easy.

That's the tug. On paper, if a person saved $1,000 a year for 20 years at an 8 percent annual return he or she would have close to $49,500, only $20,000 of which was desposited.

If they continued it for 40 years their total would reach nearly $280,000. And if by some stroke of financial and medical luck they maintained the pace for 50 years their fortune would reach $620,000.

Suppose they earned just 2 percent more, a total of 10 percent. After 50 years their fortune would be more than double the amount achieved with an 8 percent return.

Millionaires. Hypothtically. On paper. Before taxes.

In reality, not only would deductions have to be made for taxes, but emergencies, necessities and even the desire for luxuries almost inevitably would further cut the return.

Still, the fascination is there. Savings banks sometimes hold out the prospect of wealth through small, regular deposits. And brokers, intoxicated by the possibilities, outdo them.

John Winthrop Wright, a conservative, highly regarded investment adviser to individuals and large bank-administered trusts, believes that a competent stock investor can earn as much as 15 per cent a year.

"With an investment of as little as $100 a month and immediate reinvestment of all dividends and capital gains, a 25-year-old person can be worth just about $1 million by retirement at age 65.

"His total investment from personal savings will be only $48,000; the $1 million will be net, after payment of all income taxes!"

Even if such an investor chooses not to wait that long, a sizable portfolio can be built up — if everything works as it does on paper.

An investment of $100 a month averaging 15 percent would have a pretax value of $144,000 after 20 years, on an original investment of $24,000. After 30 years it would reach a pre-tax value of $655,000.

Many advisers doubt that a 15 per cent return can be achieved in stocks, and Wright concedes that a "competent" investor might average a total return — capital and dividends — of only 8-10 percent.

He adds, however, that the higher return is within reach by following "sound, proven, professional investment methods." Such success, he maintains, "requires no magic or daring risks." Quite the oopposite.

"It is based on common sense; a willingness to pay attention to principles already proven profitable, and to readily available facts; and the avoidance of speculation."

The principles: Buy only stocks of successful companies. Buy only at undervalued market pricing. Buy only when such shares no longer are declining in price. Sell before they stop rising.

"Very few people really understand the investment growth-earning potential of money accumulated through their own savings," he states. 'Fantastic," he says of the power of compounding.

Local GOP Head Doubts Support For Robbins

By PAT PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

County Republican chairman Mike Stevens today said he would be "surprised" to see any rescission of a four-month-old GOP executive committee disavowal vote of state Rep. Joe Robbins prior to the upcoming May primary.

And Stevens also indicated he is unsure what official support, if any, the county party will give Robbins should he win the primary and be a GOP candidate in the November general eleciton.

Robbins Thursday confirmed to The Avalanche-Journal what had been speculated about for some time — that he will seek re-election to his westside Dist. 75-A House seat.

The 43-year-old freshman legislator said he will solicit official GOP support despite the unanimous September thumbs-down vote by small executive committee turnout.

Robbins said he thinks things would be different if a new vote were taken with more of the 57 precinct chairmen present.

"Some of those who voted have indicated to me that they've changed their minds. And other precinct chairmen who were not there would possibly vote differently if it came up again," he said.

It is true that several Republican leaders have expressed misgivings over their handling of the vote on a resolution to "encourage Robbins not to run as a Republican in the next election." But what they have regretted most was the fact that the hands-washing was released to news media before Robbins was told of it.

"Back when they voted to ask him not to run, that was very clearly the temperament at the time," Stevens said. "As to whether individuals have changed their minds since then, I can't speak for them.

"I would be surprised, however, to see any new action on the resolution before the primary because there have been several chances for such a thing since it was passed, and nothing has been done."

The executive committee has had four regular meetings since September, and though relations between the group and Robbins definitely are better now than they were during the summer, no rescission action has been taken.

In fact, as late as this past Tuesday's meeting, one precinct chairman suggested the possibility of a new vote and the mattter died with no further discussion.

Several of Robbins' GOP critics have actively been seeking opponents for him in the May primary.

And it happens that the chairman of the party's candidate recruitment committee, Joe Greenlee, is not a fan of Robbins.

Greenlee acknowledged today that he has been contacted by possible opponents for Robbins, although he declined to name them.

He continued, however, that he intends for his committee to function as it is named — for it to be a "recruitment" group, not a "screening" committee.

When the September disavowal vote was taken, Stevens said then he interpreted it to mean that even if Robbins won the primary, the local party would not back him with money.

"I really don't know what the feeling on that would be now," he said today.

Robbins is the first Republican Lubbock County has ever sent to the Texas House.

His troubles with party leadership began before he ever won the November 1976 election.

He criticized GOP heads then for their handling of a visit here by vice presidential candidate Bob Dole.

Less than a month after his victory, he was arrested in Austin and charged with public intoxication. But the charge was dropped two months ago for lack of evidence and he proclaimed that proved the innocence he'd always maintained.

Meanwhile, he caught flak at home for several stands he took during the 1977 House session — chief among them, his refusal to fight for rescission of Texas' ratification of the Equal Rights Admendment.

His studying of a possible state income tax was the thing that spawned the September resolution.

Robbins has repeatedly said the GOP committee misundersood that issue — he says he is only looking at an income tax as a replacement for other taxes, not an additional revenue-raising method.

The KLBK Channel 13 television newsman said he is going to wait as long as possible before the Feb. 6 deadline to file. "Once I become an official candidate, Federal Communications Commission fairness rules will mean I have to go off the air."

He said there "was never any doubt in my mind whether I would run again or not, other than personal considerations' — the possibility of other jobs, the FCC rules and his wife's dislike of politics.

The job possibilities — among them, TV station changes that could be contingent upon a proposed Channel 13 sale — are still open, Robbins said.

"But they could be over a year away and I have to make a decision now."

Any developments on those lines would have no bearing on his serving out a second term, he declared.

"If I run and am elected, I would serve out the full two years, no matter what the personal job opportunities were. I would feel a commitment to the people of the district."

He said that his wife asked him during the session not to run again "and I promised her not to. But I always wanted to run.

"But I think their attack (the September GOP vote) on me changed her mind, and it made my own feelings that much stronger," he said.

How does he feel the Austin arrest incident will affect his chances of winning?

It's a dead issue, he thinks.

"No one mentions it to me any more.

"Obviously, there were some people who made up their minds I was guilty immediately, and who probably still think so, despite the charges being dropped, and there's nothing I can do about that. It's up to each individual to have his own unbiased opinion.

"But if there is a majority of the people who feel I have been cleared, then any opponent who brings it up in the campaign could be doing themselves harm," Robbins said.

FOUNDED HOSPITAL — Dr. Whitier Atkinson began building his Clement Atkinson Memorial Hospital 40 years ago in this Chester County mill town. A changing society and financial woes have placed the hospital's future in jeopardy. (AP Laserphoto)

Integration Puts Pennsylvania Hospital Into Economic Skid

COATESVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Pennsylvania's last completely black operated hospital is on the critical list after 40 years of service, and integration helped put it there.

Clement Atkinson Memorial Hospital released its last patients before Christmas and has laid off all but five employees after being unable to meet the payroll for the first time in its history.

Dr. Whittier Atkinson, who built the hospital in 1937 in a cabbage patch beside his home and named it after his father, is downcast about the hospital's decline.

"I feel I am partially a failure," said Atkinson, 84.

Atkinson said that over the past three years, he has poured his life savings of $200,000 into the hospital to try to keep it afloat.

But that was not enough to sustain the facility after the hospital lost its Blue Cross-Blue Shield accreditation in 1975 and a county drug program withdrew its patients and dollars three weeks ago.

Four patients from the drug program were the hospital's last. About 20 other patients were released last August and layoffs of the hospital's 40 nurses and aides began when funds started running out, Atkinson said.

Henry Mims, director of the drug project, said the program was ended because Atkinson Memorial was unable to provide necessary in-patient care.

Bruce Taylor, president of Blue Cross of Greater Philadelphia, said Blue Cross withdrew its support after it determined the hospital no longer was needed.

"There was a time when separate minority hospitals were the only way the minorities were able to receive care. Fortunately, with integration, that's no longer a problem," said Taylor.

Atkinson, a graduate of Howard University, moved from Washington, D.C., to this Chester County mill town in 1927 "because they needed a colored doctor."

"I had trouble getting some of my patients into the Coatesville Hospital. They only had 50 beds at the time," he recalled.

So Atkinson began a hospital building next to his house and developed it over the years into a 61-bed facility with an operating room, X-ray department and laboratory.

All but the newest addtion, a 28-bed wing built in 1971, was reired in March 1975, Atkinson said.

Atkinson said he is keeping three nurses and two aides on the staff in hopes $100,000 can be raised and Atkinson Memorial once again can resume operation.

Before the dispute with Blue Cross, the hospital's annual budget averaged about $500,000, with the new wing rarely less than 70 percent occupied, Atkinson said.

Most of the hospital's board members are black clergymen, and Atkinson said Thursday night he hoped money can be raised by church groups to put the facility back on its feet.

"The hospital always has been very close to the church," Atkinson said.

Businesses Help School Meet Payroll

CLEVELAND (AP) — Voluntary early tax payments deposited today by several Cleveland-based corporations should be enough to enable the city's public school system to meet its payroll today, Cuyahoga County Auditor Vincent C. Campanella said.

Campanella said he received $10.8 million in early payments of real estate taxes from the corporations. About $4.2 million of this will go to Cleveland schools, plus about $1 million from previous tax collections from the general public.

The $5.2 million should be enough to cover the school payroll, the auditor said.

Campanella said the early payments came from the Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co., Ohio Bell Telephone Co., East Ohio Gas Co., Republic Steel Corp., Standard Oil Co. of Ohio, Higbee's department store and the May Co.

Today was to have been a payless payday for 11,000 public school employees after U.S. District Judge Frank Battisti, criticizing the school board for failing to do anything about long-standing financial problems, said Thursday he would not permit funds to be switched from special accounts to meet the $5 million payroll.

Word of the business community's bailout came at Thursday night's school board meeting.

Arnold Pinkney, board president, said because of the business commitment, it was "very possible that ... we will be able to meet our obligations."

More than half the 5,400 public school teachers boycotted classes for four days last fall, protesting a similar financial crisis in which they were late getting paid. Pupils were sent home from more than 100 of the system's 176 schools.

One Killed, Four Hurt In Blast

RADFORD, Va. (AP) — An explosion early today in a nitroglycerine-manufacturing section of an ammunition plant killed at least one worker, injured four and left one missing, official said. Three buildings in the complex were destroyed.

W.H. Coughlin, public affairs spokesman for the Hercules, Inc., ammunition plant, said the explosion took place about 6:10 a.m., when eight persons were at work in the nitroglycerine section.

The dead worker was not immediately identified. The injured were taken to a hospital here, but none was believed seriously hurt.

Coughlin said the cause of the explosion had not been determined and no estimate of damage was available.

The arsenal near this southwestern Virginia city of 11,500 employs about 2,600 persons.

Other sections of the arsenal continued to operate after the explosion, Coughlin said.

Details were sketchy, but Coughlin said the three buildings involved in the explosion were the structure in which the nitroglycerine nitrator was in operation, a nitroglycerine storehouse and a spent acid storehouse.

On May 31, 1974, a major explosion in the section of the arsenal that manufactures trinitrotoluene (TNT) caused $10 million damage and injured 100 persons, five seriously.

The arsenal makes explosives for both military and civilian uses.

Saudi Businessman Buys Bank Shares

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saudi businessman Ghaith R. Pharaon today holds a large interest in the National Bank of Georgia after buying 120,906 shares of the bank's stock from former federal budget director Bert Lance.

Terms of the sale were announced two weeks ago, but the transaction was not concluded until Thursday. Robert A. Altman, an attorney for Lance, said Lance received $2.4 million, or $20 a share. Lance bought the shares for about $17 apiece.

As part of the sales agreement Pharaon eventually will purchase a total of 60 percent of the banks shares including those bought from Lance.

Mishap Fatal For Area Man

By A-J Correspondent

LEVELLAND — Orlando Garza, 23, of Levelland became Hockley County's first traffic fatality of 1978 in an accident early this morning.

Garza was pronounced dead on arrival at Levelland's Cook Memorial Hospital after the accident at 12:48 a.m. on State Highway 116.

Investigating officer Billy Weaver of the Levelland police department said Garza's westbound vehicle was in collision with an eastbound vehicle driven by Martin Marcado of Floydada.

Marcado was issued citations for failure to yield right-of-way and for no signal of intent, Weaver said.

Levelland police are still investigating the accident.

French Pilots Report Sighting Of SAMs

By United Press International

DAKAR, Senegal — Pilots of French Jaguar fighterbombers on "protective" strikes against Marxist Polisario Front guerrillas in the Sahara on behalf of Mauritanian forces say they have run into Soviet-built surface-to-air missiles (SAMs) in recent raids.

The first column of some 150 Polisario desert vehicles attacked by the French warplanes Dec. 12-13 was nearly wiped out without any anti-aircraft fire, according to French military sources.

But in a second raid a few days later, the planes had to dodge SAMswhich French military experts say must have been supplied by Algeria, which got them from the Soviet Union.

KHARTOUM, Sudan — The recent improvement in relations between Sudan and Ethiopia will have little effect on Khartoum's tacit support for Eritrean rebels fighting in northern Ethiopia.

Khartoum is the major external logistic point for the Eritreans, who have been fighting for nearly 16 years for independnce from Addis Ababa.

Sudan and Ethiopia recently agreed to improve relations, end all hostile propaganda and resume air links. But diplomats said the Sudanese will not clamp down on Eritrean activities as long as the guerrillas continue to maintain a low profile and do not advertise their activites too loudly.

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast, — Widespread disturbances have been taking place for several months in neighboring Guinea, where the population reportedly is increasingly restive under the harsh rule of President Sekou Toure.

Diplomatic sources said the trouble began last fall when women in the capital of Conakry went on a rampage against the country's so-called "economic police."

The unrest quickly spread around the country to such an extent that police stations have been sacked and scores of persons killed, including three town governors.

Even the president himself was abused by a crowd that hurled stones at him.

BLANTYRE, Malawi — President Hastings Banda's quiet but unashamed trade with South Africa at a time when the world is trying to boycott the white regime is paying off handsomely for the landlocked black state.

Imports from Europe and elsewhere by such neighbors as Tanzania and Zambia often cost two or three times what Malawi pays for them in South Africa. Most of the cargo is flown from Johannesburg's Jan Smuts airport.

In turn, South Africa buys much of Malawi's tea and tobacco crop. In the past two years, Malawi-South Africa trade has increased by about 300 percent, officials say. Malawi also trades busily with Rhodesia.

SALISBURY, Rhodesia — The future of Rhodesia's armed forces — the issue that helped spell the downfall of the Anglo-American majority rule plan — could be solved during the current "internal" settlement talk.

The Rhodesian government wants the force kept largly intact. The Rhodesia-based black leaders involved in the talks lack guerrilla support and are likely to agree.

Black nationalist sources say, however, that disbanding the controversial Rhodesian Selous Scouts and Grey Scouts is almost certain to be demanded.

Observers do not see that posing an insurmountable problem, especially in the case of the horse-mounted Grey Scouts, whose effectiveness has been in doubt.

GABERONE, Botswana — The Botswana government has tired of about 400 black South African student exiles from Johannesburg's Soweto township. It plans to round them up and place them in a camp on the edge of the Kahalari desert.

Many students fled during the Soweto riots and hoped to further their education in America and Europe. But few were offered those opportunities. Instead, they were resented by local residents.

Unwilling to work and subsisting on monthly $35 handouts from the Botswana Christian Council, the students lounge on street corners angering locals who have no access to charity, officials say.

Lobby Asks Ban On Self-Serve

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Pay toilets and coin-operated air pumps will become common at self-service gasoline stations if lawmakers don't ban them or tighten restrictions, say operators of traditional service stations in Massachusetts.

The operators' association disagreed sharply with an oil industry spokesman who said prohibiting the new self-service stations would cause higher gas prices and ignore the wishes of the public.

Both sides in the debate claimed this week that increased gas prices would result unless the state legislature and local governments heed their arguments.

In most locations, the proliferating pump-your-own stations offer lower gasoline prices than traditional stations.

As traditional service stations are forced out of business by cut-rate gas prices at self-service outlets, drivers will be forced to pay "mechanics' rates" for services such as having engine oil checked, which they now receive free, said Maurice G. Langelier, president of the the Baystate Gasoline Retailers Association.

"If the consumer needs air in a tire, he will deposit 25 cents in the air gauge. If he needs his windshield cleaned, he will deposit 10 cents for towel and cleaning fluid," Langelier said.

Even use of bathrooms someday may cost money at self-service stations, he predicted.

Langelier's organization, representing more than 1,000 Massachusetts service station operators, has been lobbying for state and local legislation outlawing self-service stations.

Gerald S. Johnson, district manager for Shell Oil Co., said so-called "split-island" service stations provide a solution to the conflict.

Massachusetts this week legalized such service stations, where some pumps are self-service and others are handled by attendants.

"More stations will stay open and motorists will not lose a large number of repair outlets," Johnson said.

"The fact is, people often like to serve themselves, so prohibition of self-service of most products is counter to most consumer desires," he said.

Luxuries Of Job Called Essential

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — It requires no great insight to discern why many people are dissatisfied with business.

Some executives of large corporations are seen, even by investors, as part of a management ripoff mentality, enjoying a lifestyle in which the company pays for everthing from free lunches to luxurious retirementm

Courtney Brown, a corporate director and business educator, claims that many emoluments are "utterly essential." Executives, he said, are the hardest working group he knows and sometimes need cars and company jets.

But, he adds, the extremely large salaries and bonuses, sometimes paid even though anticipated dividend increases are skipped, "create an extremely bad impression and are quite uncalled for."

A low opinion of corporate ethics, especially following revelations of foreign bribery and illegal domestic political payoffs, has added to the belief of some people that anything that works is acceptable to business.

Not enough jobs is a perennial criticism, more serious in that it is seen as a general condition rather than the weakness of specific businesses. Seven percent unemployment is unacceptabe to all.

It does little good to point out that in the 12 months through November some 3.9 million jobs were created, that there were more people at work than ever before, both numerically and as a percentage of populatuon.

Defective products and insensitivity and unresponsiveness to consumer complaints plays a large role in the anger of many.

Last In A Series

Industrial pollution, and often a reluctance to clean it up, thus endangering not just the quality of life but life itself, has badly tarnished the image of business, even though the corrective process is well under way.

But exploitation of consumers or investors, corruption, poor products, indifference and pollution, say students of business, are often inevitable consequenes of human frailty and the disorder, disruption and discordance of change.

Something should, can and will be done about them, they say, but what can be done about the millions of people who feel they have no stake in the system, a condition that underlies much industrial unrest and lowers productivity?

The Advertising Council and the Business Roundtable, the latter made up of chairmen and president of the nation's giant corporations, have sought to ameliorate these feelings through education and advertising.

Louis O. Kelso, a San Francisco attorney, a practical man with a vision of people's capitalism, has had notable success with his origination, the Employee Stock Ownership Plan, and similar financing techniques.

Under an ESOP, a company creates an employe stock-ownership trust, borrows capital from a bank to buy company stock for it, uses the money to modernize and grow, repays the loan, and leaves the stock in the hands of employees.

Since tax benefits are attached, the company obtains low-cost growth capital and remains technologically competitive, and the employees accumulate large amounts of stock, especially for their retirements.

John H. Perry Jr., an inventor, businessman and former publisher, also feels we must reduce estrangement. He claims his plan would also eliminate much welfare, shrink federal deficits, promote economic understanding, improve voter participation and lessen inflation.

Under his National Dividend Plan, funds earned by corporations and paid by them in federal income taxes would be designated for distribution through local banks to each registered voter on a per capita basis.

The dividends, coming probably to $750 a year per voter, would be tax-free. Corporate income taxes would be capped at 50 percent. A moratorium would be declared on any major new federal spending during a five-year phase-in. And any federal deficit would be deducted from the annual dividend.

Others too are working on alternatives, for specific companies and for the system in general.

The Exploratory Project for Economic Alternatives, set up by a consortium of foundations, is currently working to establish community ownership of a closed steel mill in Youngstown, Ohio.

The Work in America Institute, another non-profit orgaization, seeks to convey information on the various experiments toward raising productivity, mainly through worker participation in decisions.

In all instances, a feeling exists that if more people understood and felt a part of the system, then job creation and capital raising and a host of other challenges would be more effectively met.

Electricity Demand Continues Climb

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's demand for electricity in 1977 rose almost as fast as before the Arab oil embargo, according to industry researchers.

The Edison Electric Institute, a utility-industry research group, said in its year-end report that electricity output for all of the United States except the Northwest and Southeast grew by 6 percent, about the same as the rate of growth before the embargo.

In the Northwest and Southeast, areas largely dependent on hydroelectric power that was hurt this year by droughts, had a growth rate of about 1 percent, the institute said.

Credit Cards Distributed To Farmers In Spain

CLEVELAND (AP) — The credit card is making its way to rural Spanish communities as part of a government program to encourage farmers to use tractors to cultivate their land, the Addressograph-Multigraph Corp. says.

An Addressograph-Multigraph spokesman said that the firm has sold 500,000 credit cards to Spain's ministry of agriculture for distribution to farmers.

By using the cards, the Spanish farmers would be eligible for a discount, or subsidy, on tractor fuel.

Data recorders, also sold to the government agency, will enable bureaucrats to keep track of individual tractor fuel use, the company said Wednesday.

Addressograph-Multigraph said the sale was part of an order for 10,000 data recorders and credit cards valued at more than $1 million.

It said a Canadian bank and a Canadian oil company received some of the data recorders, which are used to imprint credit card sales slips.

The Canadian customers were not identified.

Parent Movement Takes Aim At Nation's Schools

By PATRICIA MCCORMACK
United Press International Writer

The parents' rights movement takes aim at schools across the nation.

A little more tough-minded than the PTA, the movement gets help from the National Committee for Citizens in Education.

Its network consists of more than 300 groups nationwide. Thumb through the directory and the names give you a clue to the main business. Some typical names:

— The Citizen Information Service, Chicago, Ill.

— The Colorado Institute for Parent Involvement, Denver.

— The California Institute for Child Advocacy, Los Angeles.

— Concerned Parents for Public Education in Quincy, Fla.

"Network," the committee's parents, guides those in the parnts rights movement.

The current issue is a good index to some of the things going on in the movement — an education crusade some authorities link to a conservative mood.

One article calls for more citizen participation in education at the federal level. Another talks about Chicago parents and their advocates who are suing both the Chicago School District and the State Board of Education for not giving parents free access to children's school records — a right provided by federal law.

The first annual "Network" awards also are announced in the December-January issue. One sample:

— "Antiestablishmentism award to Dan Sanfran of the Center for the Study of Parent Involvement, Berkeley, Calif. "Everytime I create a group I think about starting two. That way if the first one becomes a part of the establishment, the second one can come in and kill it off."

Dr. Carl Marburger, senior associate of the National Committee, in an interview listed issues on the minds of parents these days.

They included tenure and unions, special laws for handicapped children, the possibility of the energy crisis causing school closings, the teaching of values, unfair dismissals of teachers or administrators who express unpopular views.

Marburger is one of three "senior associates" on the leadership team of the committee.

Before coming to the committee in 1973 he was commissioner of education for New Jersey. Earlier he was Detroit's superintendent of schools.

The other associates are Stan Salett, former director of education in the Office of Economic Opportunity's War on Poverty; Dr. William Riou, former president of Merril Palter Institute in Detroit — prestigious child-development institutes.

There is some evidence it is working. Marburger said citizens are becoming involved in education budgets, in curriculum development, in helping to decide what their kids learn in school.

The committee offers a free Parent Rights Card to anyone who calls their toll free number — 800-NETWORK. Or sends a self-addressed envelope and request to Parents' Network, 410 Wilde Lake, Village Green, Columbia, Md. 21044. On the card are listed parents' legal rights in education.

The National Committee for Citizens in Education first was called the National Committee for Support of the Public Schools.

It was founded in 1963 by Mrs. Agnes Meyer, publisher-owner of The Washington Post.

Colder Winters Lie In World's Future

By ROBERT C. MILLER

MCMURDO, Antarctica (UPI) — If you think it was cold last winfer, stick around a few hundred years: Antarctica's scientists say it's could get even colder.

Dr. George Denton of the University of Maine said glacial studies in the Antarctic show things were lots warmer down there 120,000 years ago, got progressively colder and then warmed up for a spell.

The New England geologist said that warm period is just about over, and the entire world could be entering another cold cycle.

Dutch-born Dr. Minze Stuiver of the University of Washington explained that new techniques of measuring the moisture content of the Antarctic snow and ice pack now gives man a more accurate picture of the weather cycles on the continent.

The Navy's chief meteorologist at McMurdo, Lt. Ronald Fauquet, of Granada Hills, Calif., is even more specific. "It would seem from our records that during the last 10 to 15 years Antarctica has been geting colder."

The New Zealanders at Scott base, just two miles from McMurdo, claim last year was the coldest ever experienced by their wintering-over party since records were started 20 years ago.

The cold of which they spoke was a daily average of about 50 degrees Fahrenheit. Several times the mercury dropped to around -100 during the long Antarctic winter, and those figures did not include the chill factor.

The lowest official temperature ever reported in the Antarctic — or anywhere else in the world — was at the Russian base of Vostok near the south geomagnetic pole where it dropped to -126.9 on Aug. 24, 1960.

Not only has it been getting colder in the Antarctic, but scientists here said more moisture seems to be falling over the continent, but they cautioned that this could be a result of the more sensitive instruments now being used in antarctic meteorology.

Amrican temperatures have dropped an average of .7 degree over the past 20 years, Fauquet said, while the average in the Antarctic has been down more than a full degree.

Denton explained that such a temperature change in such a relatively short period of time could indicate that the world had reached another "of the mountains and valleys in its climatology where changes are taking place. This one would seem to be another cooling off period."

The meteorologists are convinced that any change in the temperature of the Antarctic air mass will affect climatic conditions in the Southern Hemisphere, particularly Australia, New Zealand and Africa.

"We have traced storms and cold fronts from the Antarctic all the way through Australia," Fauquet said, "and whenever New Zealand gets snow it comes from here, not the Equator."

Cambodians Claim Victory

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Cambodia today claimed a stunning battlefield victory in its border war with Vietnam, saying it had killed or wounded nearly 30,000 Vietnamese troops and knocked out 100 tanks in three months of fighting.

A detailed battle report broadcast by Radio Phnom Penh and monitored in Bangkok said: "We have smashed two divisions of the enemy, including the 9th Division. We have wiped out the enemy in the region completely from (our) territory."

If true, the claims would mean an incredible reverse for Vietnamese forces considered vastly superior in numbers, modern weapons and battlefield experience.

But diplomatic observers in Bangkok expressed skepticism about the reports, noting they came only a few hours after the radio gave the first details of the border war between the two Communist neighbors.

Some observers suggested the Vietnamese might actually be overwhelming the Cambodians, and the claims of victory might rflect growing desperation in Phnom Penh.

On Thursday, intelligence reports received in Bangkok indicated the Vietnamese were in control of a large area of Cambodian territory along the border.

Vietnam, which has never admitted its troops were in Cambodian territory, said today it was fighting to defend its border areas after two years of raids from Cambodia, and mentioned in particular an "encroachment" 10 months ago.

Observers in Bangkok speculated that the Vietnamese were engaged in a defensive operation similar to the so-called "incursion" by American and South Vietnamese troops into Cambodia during the Vietnam War.

"They seem to be setting up a buffer zone on the Cambodian side of the border to prevent further Cambodian attacks against their citizens," said one knowledgeable diplomat.

The Cambodians now claim to have smashed that zone occupied by Vietnamese troops.

Phnom Penh Radio said: "On January 6 we launched attacks on the enemy from all directions. The enemy was smashed, routed and fled in disorder. Their front line is now fleeing down the road."

It broadcast casualty lists from all fighting zones, including:

— Along Route 7, leading from the border to the major Cambodian city of Kampong Cahm, 18,000 Vietnamese killed and wounded, against only 909 Cambodian casualties, and 63 Vietnamese tanks knocked out.

— At Svay Rieng in the Parrot's Beak, 6,000 Vietnamese casualties and 18 tanks destroyed.

— At Kampot near the Gulf of Thailand, 2,100 Vietnamese casualties.

All together, it announced 29,200 Vietnamese casualties, against less than 22,000 cambodians killed and wounded.

Earlier, the radio said Hanci troops coccupied six district capitals and were within 35 miles of Phnom Penh, but promised Cambodians fighting along a 170-mile front against an estimated 60,000 Vietnamese would "exterminate the aggressor to the last man."

Cambodia said the invasion began in November, but the official Vietnam News Agency described a raid that took place last March and traced hostilities to the massacre of thousands of Vietnamese nearly three years ago.

"Cambodian armed forces encroached on the border by moving into the two Vietnamese provinces of Kien Giang and An Giang" last March 15, the agency said.

The agency quoted Vietnamese Prime Minister Phan Van Dong as saying the Communist rulers of Cambodia began slaughtering Vietnamese inhabitants almost as soon as they seized power from U.S.-backed forces 21 months ago.

"Immediately after the April 17, 1975, victory, the Cambodian authorities subjected Vietnamese nationals to ill-treatment, killing thousands of them, routing tens of thousands of others and driving them back to Vietnam," Dong said.

Vietnam claimed the two countries held negotiations on the border issue last year, but Cambodia broke them off in midsummer.

Local Grand Jury Indicts Nine Persons For Murder

honked his horn in an attempt to chase Casbeer's assailants away, but returned moments later when the noise failed to deter them.

Before arriving, however, the witness said he saw the men get back into their automobile and drive away. Casbeer reportedly also got back into his own vehicle before the witness arrived and turned west on 4th Street where it intersects with University Avenue.

Summoned by the witness' waving, police found Casbeer's body slumped across the steering wheel of his car.

A vehicle matching that of the witness' description was stopped by police minutes later at the intersection of 4th Street and Avenue Q.

While several persons were detained, Morin was the only person charged in connection with the incident.

Police reports indicated Casbeer had been severely beaten with beer bottles, but Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalack attributed death to a single gunshot wound below the victim's left armpit. Police recovered a .38-caliber pistol from the stopped vehicle.

Percy D. Perkins, 27, of 2422 E. 7th St. was indicted for murder as the result of the Nov. 23 shooting death of Lee Smith Jr.

Smith, 29, of 1812 E. 1st Place was killed about 3:45 a.m. in a club at the intersection of E. 23rd Street and Fir Avenue.

Perkins was wounded during the altercation and was treated at a local hospital before being jailed.

The defendant last month was assessed a three-year prison term after being convicted of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle. Perkins also had received a three-year probated sentence in 1972 in connection with a burglary.

Murder indictments also were returned against John Torrez Champion Jr. and Albino Berlanga.

Champion, 29, who lists Petersburg as his address, is accused of murdering Virginia Vielma Meza Dec. 22.

The 22-year-old woman was shot at her home at 2100 Duke St., No. 28. She was found lying on a bed about 7:50 p.m. after Champion allegedly directed police to the residence.

Berlanga, 45, of 210 Ave. K is accused of murder in connection with a Dec. 18 pool hall slaying.

Baldomero Garcia, 52, of 308 39th St. was killed at the pool hall at 1217 Ave. F about 4:50 p.m. He was shot several times. Witnesses indicated an argument preceded the shooting, and said Garcia was seen with a gun before the shooting.

Three persons were no-billed by jurors, thereby clearing them of any implication of guilt in connection with their cases.

Absolved of a murder charge by a no-bill was Ira Hancel Hollingsworth, 62, of 6119 Ave. R. Hollingsworth had been charged as the result of the Dec. 30 shooting death of his son-in-law, Oral Holland Barnes Jr. Barnes, 29, of 3606 32nd St. was killed at his residence.

Police were told that Barnes had been separated from his wife, Hollingsworth's daughter. Witnesses said Barnes had been locked out of the residence and broken a door glass in order to get back in.

Witnesses told officers Barnes had been brandishing a tire tool before he was shot.

Steve Thompson, 19, of 1918 E. Brown St. was no-billed in connection with an aggravated robbery charge. Joe Joseph Stone, 18, of 1713 Cornell St. was no-billed in connection with a burglary charge.

Four Renamed To Hospital Board Posts

J.C. Rickman, chairman of the Lubbock County Hospital District board of managers, has been named by Lubbock County commissioners to another two-year term on that panel.

The commissioners court approved Rickman's reappointment recently in filling several vacancies and expiring terms on various county boards.

Also reappointed to the hospital district board were Ben Robinson, Joe Stanley and Preston Johnston.

Their new terms will expire Jan. 14, 1980.

Appointments to other county boards were for three-year periods, expiring Jan. 1, 1981.

Bill Parker and Sidney Kothmann were reappointed to the Lubbock County Children's Protective Services Board. Named to fill a vacancy on that panel was Gloria Galey.

Swain Rodgers was reappointed to the Lubbock City-County Library Board.

Elton Smith was reappointed to the Lubbock County Welfare Board. Selected as a new member of that advisory panel was Permilla Woods.

Rule On CB Use Brings Protest aware of "citizen complaints" of CB use by policemen.

"Specifically, it involved officers talking to three women, who apparently are police buffs," Bartley said. "Not discussing police business or 'ratchet-jawing' with women will not be tolerated.

"It (the memo) was brought about by the abuse by a few officers, but the other officers know it has been going on for some time."

The major said this morning that if the situation is not corrected, stronger actions will be taken.

"If officers can't police themselves, I'll do it for them," he warned. "I don't want to have to use a 'cloak-and-dagger' approach and get out my own CB to listen and find out who's doing it — I hate to do it, but will if I have to."

He termed the situation "regrettable," but said some of the transmissions by such officers, such as "making dates," were "in very poor taste," and could be "quite embarrassing."

One officer, who said he did not use his CB very often, responded to the memo by removing the equipment from his police car. He explained that he took the statement as an "accusation," and that the actions of a few officers reflected badly on all.

There have been reports by some policemen that the order was issued because of complaints by citizen CB radio groups; however, members of the groups contacted this morning and police officials all disavow any connection.

At least one organized effort is being mounted by citizens in protest of the police memo.

Bob Glasscock, a CBer, said he learned of the order at 11 p.m. Thursday and stayed up all night organizing an effective protest.

"We are drafting letters of opinion to be sent to the police department," he said today. "What it amounts to is officers not being able to use their own equipment, because it doesn't specify that they be on duty — it's anytime. And it has to do with an officer being able to talk to friends he has made."

Another officer commented that there is "nothing wrong" with the CB use by police, and emphasized his point by referring to a "sub-standard" radio system used by LPD.

According to Bartley, no disciplinary action yet has been taken against officers who allegedly have been responsible for the abuses, but indicated further actions would be forthcoming if the actions do not cease.

NATO Gets Assurances

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — President Carter, speaking at NATO headquarters in Belgium today on the last stop on his foreign tour, assured the Atlantic allies they are partners with the United States "in every sense of the word."

After meeting for more than an hour with representatives of the 15-member North Atlantic Treaty Organization, Carter said, "I think any concerns have been alleviated."

Speaking to reporters after the meeting, Carter said he told NATO leaders they should "contact me personally" if they had any questions on American policy ranging from U.S. support for the Alliance to the strength of the dollar.

Before the meeting, White House press secretary Jody Powell had said Carter's visit with NATO Secretary-General Joseph Luns and the permanent members of the NATO Council would focus on the SALT negotiations, which the U.S. president hopes will bear fruit this year.

Powell said Carter was prepared to tell the representatives of the other allies, as he told French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing during their talks, that any accord would take account of their security interests and would provide for adequate verification of compliance with its terms.

Before the NATO conference, Carter told Belgian officials he is optimistic about chances for settling the three-decade-old Arab-Israeli dispute in light of the new peace dialogue between Israel and Egypt, and said he believes there is still a possibility of a multilateral solution "supported by several states."

Prime Minister Leo Tindemans and Foreign Minister Henri Simonet relayed Carter's remarks to reporters after the Belgian officials met with the president.

Simonet said Carter's comment on a multilateral Mideast solution indicated some other Arab states may be willing to join the Israeli-Egyptian peace dialogue at a later stage

Arab militants, including Syria, Libya and Iraq, have bitterly criticized the peace moves initiated by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, but Jordan has indicated it might join the talks at a later date. Carter met Jordan's King Hussein during the president's stopover last weekend in Iran.

Tindemans said his talks with Carter also touched on U.S. relations with the European Common Market, particularly trade relations and monetary problems caused by the decline of the dollar in Europe.

Soon after Carter arrived about 20 demonstrators staged a protest against the neutron bomb, a nuclear weapon that kills without causing extensive damage to structures outside the immediate blast area. The demonstrators gathered a few blocks from the U.S. Embassy carrying banners reading: "No to the Neutron Bomb."

ture group coordinating the strike. "Right now we don't have any definite plans. We're just playing it by ear."

No tractors were in El Paso, McCathern said, and no pickets had been established. McCathern said some of the bulldozer-like tractors might be brought in, however.

Imported beef hurts the domestic cattlemen, say farmers who are striking for higher prices.

Farmers in the Fort Worth suburb of Saginaw used their tractors Wednesday and Thursday to block shipments from the Burrus Mills flour mill for 30 hours before agreeing to a compromise with Burrus officials.

A statement read by William Fielding, mill general manager, said no flour trucks would be loaded and sent on their way before 7 a.m. today.

The farmers, angered when Burrus officials refused to close the mill for 24 hours in support of the nationwide farm strike against low crop prices, blocked the gates of the mill Wednesday morning.

Burrus officials obtained a temporary restraining order Thursday morning from State District Court Judge James Wright. The order, however, only named two persons, thus the remaining farmers stayed with their tractors blocking the entrances and exits of the mill.

A person's name has to be included in any court order before he is prohibited from picketing.

PLANE COLLIDES

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — An Allegheny jet collided with a snow removal machine on an airport runway where the plane had been cleared for landing Thursday, authorities said. None of the 109 persons aboard the DC-9 — including 100 passengers — was injured.

regating students by race.

He does not deny that Lubbock has several predominantly one-race schools. But racial compositions of those schools have been the result of de facto segregation — "something that just happens," over which the school district has had no control, Johnson said.

The mere existence of such schools, which reflect their residential neighborhood compositions, "is not enough" to prove illegal segregation, he said.

With the exception of the elementary schools found by Woodward in 1970 to be vestiges of a dual school system — Iles, Wheatley, Sanders, Guadalupe and Martin — "we believe that there is no de jure (official and illegal) segregation with regard to racial balances in any other part of the district," Johnson said.

Lubbock operates a "unitary school system above the elementary level" by virtue of Woodward's order seven years ago enlarging the attendance zones of then all-black Dunbar High and Struggs Junior High, he said.

Even though many whites have left the expanded zones, the district "has abided by the spirit and letter of the court's order" and should not be forced to adopt a new plan for desegregation, Johnson said.

Woodward's 1970 order left the five cited elementary schools intact as neighborcisions. The district, he said, has failed to present such proof.

"Violations having a systemwide impact must have a systemwide remedy," Gurwin said.

He said the proposed new schools south of Loop 289 should be blocked because the district has not considered other alternatives to relieve southside overcrowding but at the same time promote desegregation. Gurwin has suggested using under-enrolled inner-city schools to take the overflow from the southwest.

Gurwin also said the district has not abided by Woodward's 1970 ruling because as many as 50 white students have been allowed to transfer out of Dunbar some years to take courses offered only at other high schools.

School attorney Charles Cobb insisted that the district did indeed consider alternatives to the proposed new construction, but that those alternatives were unacceptable in light of the booming population increases in the city's southwest.

"The school district has met its burden in deciding that population growth justified the building of new schools," Cobb said.

He said busing would be only a "stopgap measure" and that transporting students from the southwest to the inner city and east side would cost $1 million to implement.

Parent participation would be lost under such a plan, Cobb said.

hood schools, and Johnson said the district continues to operate those facilities — as well as the rest in the city — on a non-discriminatory basis.

The district "educates children on both sides of the city in a comparable way," he said.

If Woodward must apply a remedy to the five elementary schools in question, such an order should not be imposed systemwide, because there is no evidence of systemwide discrimination, Johnson said.

However, Justice Department attorny Steve Gurwin argued that Lubbock has used "virtually every technique of segregation which the Supreme Court condemns" — manipulating attendance lines, using optional attendance zones, building schools in one-race areas, closing intgrated schools and manipulating bus routes and faculty assignments.

Gurwin said the district's contention that segregation here resulted from shifting populations and other residential patterns "begs the question." It was the school district itself that has promoted such population movement, he said.

"There is nothing in the record to support a finding that they (school officials) did not contribute" to changing residential patterns.

Gurwin said the burden was on the school district to prove that school racial imbalances here have "in no way" been caused or promoted by school district de-

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

Q: I hear Jacqueline Bisset is one of the frankest of the movie glamor girls. What are some of the candid things she says? — C. Lewis, Philadelphia.

A: Talking with feature writer Bob Lardine, for years a judge on the Miss United States beauty panel with us, Jackie saucily said, "I was so heavy in the hips and rear end that I used to walk around with a long cardigan to cover up my figure. My father used to tell me: 'You're just wasting your time' (being a model). 'You'll never lose those hips. They were made for child-bearing.'"

Her comments on aging: "It's sad and undignified to see a lovely woman grow old. Quite pathetic, too. It shouldn't be, but that's part of the unfairness of being a woman. The physical thing I mean... But there are those great broads who get ugly and somehow remain terrific. They are the ones who prepared themselves for the eventuality of old age."

Footnote: Portraying the original Jackie O. in "The Greek Tycoon," a story about a woman widowed when her husband, the President, is shot, Miss Bisset said, when she signed to do the film: "I've never met Jackie Onassis ... nor do I intend to study her lifestyle or behavior pattern. People say we look alike, but so far as I'm concerned, any similarity that shows up on the screen will be purely coincidental."

Q: I remember way way back when a 10-year-old boy appeared on the "$64,000 Question," won it and went on the "$64,000 Challenge," eventually winning a total of around $164,000. My question is where is he now and is any of that money left? — Mrs. Angie D., St. Louis.

A: Plenty! Leonard Ross's parents put the minor's money in trust until he turned 21. Only recently celebrity hunter Richard Lamparski traced Ross to San Francisco and reports the bachelor is now commissioner of public utilities for the state of California at a salary of $37,212 a year. When Ross was editor of the Yale Law Review (he graduated rom Yale Law School a year later) one of his classmates was Jerry Brown, son of the governor of California. Years later he worked for Jerry Brown's own election as governor in 1974.

Q: I've got a bet with my dad that there are more homes in the U.S. with TV sets than telephones. He says I'm nuts. Who's right? — K.O.T., Indianapolis.

A: You are. In 1974, 94 percent of American homes had at least one telephone, but an estimated 99.9 percent had at least one black-and-white TV set. Each TV was in use on an average of five hours a day, far more than your phone at home.

Q: I have been told only four words in the English language end in the letters "gry." Can you tell me what they are? — Ruth Keltz, Lubbock.

JACQUELINE BISSET — The actress is one of today's most candid "glamor girls."

A: The first two that come to mind, "hungry" and "angry." Four more are given in the "Librarian's Quarterly." They are: "aggry" (a glass-like bead mined in Ghana), "puggry" (a scarf on a helmet used in India), "gry" (the full word — a pig's grunt), "meagry" — (having a meager appearance). We were further advised these seldom-used words also can be found in Webster's (Second Unabridged) Dictionary.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Secrets relating to your personal business should not be bantered about tomorrow. A nosy acquaintance will be eager to use such information against you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Just be one of the crowd tomorrow instead of trying to run the show. Your peer group won't be appreciative of you appointing yourself head honcho.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Tomorrow likely will be only a partially productive day for you because your full weight will not be put behind your more ambitious projects.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It would be poor judgment on your behalf tomorrow to make light of a situation a friend views seriously. Keep your cute remarks to yourself.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) An arrangement that you have with an associate where each is supposed to share equally could tilt out of balance tomorrow. The light end may be yours.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Free advice is something that you're apt to dispense quite generously tomorrow. Unfortunately your well-intended suggestions might do more harm than good.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Problems will result tomorrow if you feel the services others render for you shouldn't cost you a penny, but that which you do for them is worthy of compensation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't be the one who injects weighty topics into a friendly conversation tomorrow. It will divide old buddies into debating teams.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Unless you gauge conditions realistically tomorrow, goals that you set for yourself won't materialize. Things won't be as easy as they first appear.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) A friend of yours who promises little will be the one who will deliver tomorrow. Another pal who talks a lot will be all show and no go.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Even if the arrangement is with a person you know quite well, don't loan money tomorrow without getting collateral. The transaction could later sour.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It will be best tomorrow to rely on what you've learned from experience, rather than heed the advice of someone who has never had a similar problem.

Super-Icebreaker To Leave Shipyard

SEATTLE (AP) — The Polar Sea, super-icebreaking twin of the once-troubled Polar Star, is expected to leave Todd Shipyards Jan. 23 after a delay caused by propeller problems.

It was the same type of snag that crippled the Polar Star for over a year. Both ships are billed as the largest, most sophisticated icebreakers in America's fleet.

The Polar Star finally sailed for Antarctica in mid-November and performed ice duties "excellently," said Coast Guard spokesman Mike Kelley.

Federal Jury Trying To Decide Status Of Cape Cod Indians

BOSTON (AP) — An all-white, 12-member federal jury is trying to decide whether a band of Indians living on Cape Cod is a tribe.

The verdict could be worth $30 million in land holdings in the small town of Mashpee, Mass.

U.S. District Judge Walter Jay Skinner, who conducted the 10-week civil trial, told the jury when it started deliberations it would be trying to define a word — tribe — that already has many definitions.

"We are dealing with a word so elastic in its use that you cannot rely on any statute or official documents as conclusive," he said.

Appeals of the jury's eventual decision are expected to delay a final decision in the claim by Indians in Mashpee that they are descendants of the Wampanoag tribe and still own 13,000 undeveloped acres in the town.

During his three-hour charge, Skinner said jurors must determine whether the Indians were continuously a tribe through Aug. 26, 1976, when they started their suit.

The Indian claim has clouded land titles in Mashpee, freezing the town's economy at a time when a growing population on Cape Cod and a low Mashpee tax rate have made its property desirable.

The Mashpee Indians claim they are descendants of Wampanoags who lived on Cape Cod before the arrival of the Pilgrims in 1620. The town claims the Wampanoag tribe was wiped out by war and disease before the end of the 17th century.

The judge said the burden of proof was on the Indians, advising jurors to reject the Indians as a tribe if they had any doubt.

Radio City Music Hall To Be Closed

NEW YORK (AP) — Radio City Music Hall, faced with declining attendance and financial losses, will close in April, ending 45 years of high-kicking Rockettes, lavish stage productions and family movies, sources said today.

The theater, with a seating capacity of 6,200, is the largest movie house in the world. The stage curtain stands 78 feet high and 112 feet wide and weighs 3,000 pounds.

The source, close to the Music Hall, asked not to be identified. Music Hall officials had no official comment, but Alton G. Marshall, president of the parent Rockefeller Center Inc., was to make an official announcement to workers Thursday.

The New York Daily News reported that Mayor Edward Koch planned to speak to Music Hall officials to see if the city could do anything to keep it open.

Attendance at the tourist attraction in Rockefeller Center has been dropping for about five years, and it reportedly lost $1 million a year during the past two years despite a 10 percent pay cut by its 300 workers and despite the booking of late-night rock concerts.

Management blamed the drop in attendance on television and the lack of quality family movies.

Despite the drop-off in overall attendance, thousands of persons braved the cold to stand in lines for hours for the popular Christmas and Easter shows. More than 230 million patrons have attended the Music Hall since it opened on Dec. 17, 1932.

There has been speculation that a shopping center or indoor tennis courts would replace the Music Hall.

Director Of Home Arrested

ODESSA (UPI) — An administrator of a nursing home under investigation by a special grand jury has been been charged with taking a $326 Veterans Administration check from a patient.

Floyd Joynor, who was administrator of Western Hills Manor Nursing Home, was arrested Thursday on third degree felony theft charges, according District Attorney John Green.

Green also said the Ector County grand jury had uncovered new evidence involving payment for medical services never performed. Green said the allegations were of a "serious nature."

Ralph Harmon, the regional state health administrator, and four other state health officials were questioned by prosecutors Thursday afternoon. Harmon turned over to the district attorney's office state records on the home.

Western Hills lost its certification from state health officials, but the decertification is pending the outcome of an inspection after a recent ownership change. The home reportedly was purchased by the Heritage Health Care Center of Dallas.

Since the nursing home opened last June it has been under four administrators and has had 60 of its employees resign or be fired.

The Veterans Administration recently ordered several persons receiving VA funds to move from the facility until the investigation is completed.

Floyd Cox, the first administrator of Western Hills, told officials he and his wife, Lois Jean Cox, administrator of Westview Manor, a sister facility in Odessa, were fired when they refused to go along with the "warehousing philosophy" of the ownership.

Green has said he expects the grand jury investigation to last several days.

Briscoe Sets Date For Special Vote

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe has designated Feb. 18 as the date for a special election to fill the unexpired term of Rep. Walt Parker, D-Denton.

Parker resigned, effective Jan. 5.

Persons wanting to run in the special election must file with the secretary of state by 5 p.m. Jan. 18.

Briscoe Plans GOMA Audit

By The Associated Press

Two top officials of the Governor's Office of Migrant Affairs, who earlier refused to testify at a Brownsville court of inquiry probing a possible misuse of federal Manpower funds, have been temporarily suspended by Gov. Dolph Briscoe.

Rogelio Perez, appointed by Briscoe as GOMA director, and Joaquin Rodriguez, chief of programs at GOMA, took the Fifth Amendment Wednesday after being asked to testify concerning records subpoenaed by the court of inquiry.

The suspension, Briscoe said Thursday, was effective until the completion of a Briscoe-ordered audit into GOMA, which grants contracts for programs funded by the federal money.

Meanwhile, GOMA Deputy Director Sergio Martinez planned to testify today in State District Judge Darrell Hester's court of inquiry.

Ben McDonald, appointed by Briscoe as director of the Texas Department of Community Affairs, admitted in testimony Thursday that he verified an "invalid" $248,000 contract between the TDCA and a Harlingen-based union.

The money, testimony showed, was funneled into a non-union contract controlled exclusively by Don and Clarence Gray, Harlingen brothers who have become the focus of the investigation.

McDonald admitted to Hester that he veritied the contract after only a personal visit at his Austin office from the Grays, who told him they represented Plumbers and Pipefitters Local 823.

Hester said the contract was invalid since it was not approved by a resolution from the union's board of directors. He noted that the Grays simply signed the document themselves.

Don Gray is business manager of the union, but Clarence Gray is not a union officer.

Tom Laramey Jr., general counsel for the TDCA, also admitted that he had not reviewed the contract.

Hester, brandishing a copy of the contract, asked Laramey to show him where Clarence Gray had signed for anyone other than himself.

"Don't you know a second-year law student knows not to let his client sign a contract without at least a certified copy of the resolution from the board of directors," Hester said.

The Grays, Hester noted, were simulta-

Food Stamps, Jobs Sought By Farmers

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

About 100 striking Curry County farmers signed up Thursday in Clovis, N.M., for food stamps and applied for employment as a protest against the low agricultural prices.

American Agriculture strikers converged on the eastern New Mexico town about 8 a.m., coming from all directions. The group parked their tractors and other farm vehicles in the parking lot of the Bruce King State Office Building complex and spent about two hours in the Welfare Agency Food Stamp office filling out forms for food stamps.

Clovis police then escorted the convoy to the New Mexico Employment Service office where the farmers remained until noon, discussing their problems and filling out employment forms.

Norma Redus, food stamp office manager, said about 100 farmers made appointments with the agency and said they would return with income statements and valuation assessments so the process could be completed.

After the proper affidavits are filed, she said, the agency will verify the income sources and within 30 days farmers eligible for the program will be notified.

Robert Dunn, manager of the state employment service, said the farmers reported to his office because federal law demands that each person who applies for food stamps and is able to work also must apply for a job.

Only about 70 strikers actually filled out the employment forms, Dunn said, in what he thought was a token protest.

"My personal opinion is that it was all a joke," he said, "but we will process applications and if there are any openings the jobs definitely will be offered (to the registered farmers).

Despite official skepticism, farmers in Clovis maintained they were serious about receiving the food stamps and seeking other jobs.

"They (government officials) kind of made light of it," said John McIntosh, a farmer from the Black Power Community. "But we're absolutely serious about it. Crime doesn't pay and neither does farming.

"There will be lots of farmers following through with the food stamps and jobs," McIntosh said. "We have to."

McIntosh said the farmers decided to apply for the federal program because the bulk of the 1977 Farm Bill helps support the food stamp program.

"There are plenty of people in the group that come under the requirements," he said, "and we feel farmers are just as entitled to food stamps as people on welfare."

McIntosh also said the striking farmers were serious about finding other jobs.

"If they offer me a job that pays more than what I make farming then I'll take it," he said.

McIntosh, however, said he would keep his farm even if the employment agency finds him another job.

"I'll keep my farm and go right ahead and make payments on it with the money from the other job," he said. "I've farmed for 40 years and farming's my life, but they won't pay us for what we're producing.

"We have to do something and we mean business," McIntosh said. "We're in it too far. We can't turn back now."

Striking South Plains farmers, however, have not followed the example of their neighbors to the east.

Lynne Williams, a food stamp supervisor for the Lubbock office, said she has not registered or heard of any farmers in the area applying for the program. Bert Darden, director of the Texas Employment Commission here, said he has received no word of farmers in the commission's area seeking other jobs.

The Lubbock office, he said, has branches in Muleshoe, Levelland, Littlefield and Brownfield.

Also Thursday, the New Mexico Farmers' Union began its annual state convention in Clovis. The convention will continue through Saturday and the farm

Idalou Official Seeks Election To New Term

Early Yarbrough, justice of the peace for Lubbock County's Pct. 3 (Idalou), filed for re-election Thursday.

Yarbrough, 66, a retired service station owner and operator, said he will seek the Democratic Party's nomination for the post.

He was appointed by the Lubbock County Commissioners Court to fill a vacancy in the Idalou-based justice of the peace office on Jan. 12, 1976. Later that year, Yarbrough ran unopposed as a Democrat to hold on to the seat until the end of the current term — through 1978.

This time, he will be seeking election to a full four-year term, 1979-82. In papers filed with the Lubbock County clerk, Yarbrough designated himself campaign treasurer.

"I got tired of sitting around and wanted to do something for the community," Yarbrough said of his accepting the job two years ago and wanting to hold on to it.

He said he handles about 200 cases a month. The Idalou post is considered a part-time position by the county and pays $2,768 a year.

Yarbrough lives in Idalou.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

It's been a long time since I worked on my status. Oh, a couple of summers ago I rolled up the car windows and pretended it was air-conditioned. And I used to sit in a public place and trace words across the pages of a book as fast as I could turn the pages and make believe I was an Evelyn Wood graduate, but nothing big.

You can imagine my surprise when I picked up the paper the other day to learn that status symbols have changed considerably. Large homes are considered tasteless. Big cars are out. Degrees and titles are tacky. Having a live-in orthodontist is unimpressive. Fat no longer means affluency and jolliness. And marrying a doctor is no longer the great American dream of maidens everywhere.

The last one was a real kick in the head. Not marry a doctor! Bite your tongue!

I asked my daughter, "Is this true? Have doctors really fallen out of favor as the nation's NO. 1 most desirable mate?"

"Assuming a girl wants to get married these days," she said, "she'd be smart to go after the big money — a game show contestant. Do you have any idea how much the Secret Square is worth or what a bundle you get if you solve the $10,000 Pyramid?"

"But how do get introduced to these people? Formally, I mean?"

"Formality is out. My friend, Jan, is marrying a guy she met last week in a 'Star Wars' line."

"But does she really know him?"

"Mom! They saw the movie three times! You see, your values aren't the same as ours. Old is in. Youth is out. Poverty is beautiful. Affluency is obscene. Causes are right on. Employment is boring. Take care of your feet. Teased hair is the pits. Owning a home is time-consuming. Records last forever."

"Let me get this straight. Status to you is marrying an old game show contestant with an overbite who drives a compact and picks up candy wrappers."

"Right. By the way, do you have $10 until Saturday?"

The Slim Gourmet

You don't need a big family, or a big leftover turkey, to make meal-size Turkey Soup. Three of our favorites are easily made with economical turkey legs, now sold frozen in most supermarkets. Two medium turkey legs make a hearty meal for four, or four hearty meals for one (refrigerate or freeze the leftovers!)

More good news: these economical easy-do main courses are short on calories, despite their appetite-appeasing appeal!

MEAL-SIZE TURKEY LEG SOUP

2 turkey legs, fresh or frozen
4 cups water
2 onions, thinly sliced
1 bay leaf
½ tsp. sage or poultry seasoning (optional)
1 tsp. MSG (optional)
2 cups ice cubes and water
2 cups sliced carrots (fresh or frozen)
2 cups thinly sliced celery
Salt, pepper, minced parsley to taste (optional)

(Not necessary to defrost turkey, if frozen.) Put turkey legs in the bottom of a pot large enough to let them lay flat.

Add water, onions and seasonings. Heat to boiling, then cover and simmer until meat is tender. Remove from heat.

Fill a two-cup measure with ice cubes, then fill to the top with cold water. Pour into the pot to hasten cooling. When turkey is cool enough to handle, remove from broth. Separate meat and cut into bite-size chunks; discard skin and bones. Skim fat from broth with bulb-type baster.

Add remaining vegetables to broth. Cover and simmer until vegetables are tender. Add turkey meat and heat through. Add salt, pepper and minced parsley to taste. Serves four, about 245 calories each.

TURKEY-VEGETABLE SOUP ITALIANO WITH ZUCCHINI AND PEPPERS

2 turkey legs, fresh or frozen
4 cups tomato juice
2 onions, thinly sliced
1 clove garlic, minced (or ⅛ tsp. instant)
1 tsp. dried oregano or mixed Italian seasonings
2 cups ice cubes and water
2 cups sliced zucchini (fresh or frozen)
2 small bell peppers, seeded and diced salt and pepper to taste (optional)
minced Italian parsley
4 tsp. grated Romano or Parmesan cheese

Though the flavor and ingrdients are different, the directions are the same. Follow the previous recipe, substituting tomato juice for the water. Omit MSG and add no salt unless needed. Sprinkle with parsley and grated cheese just before serving, if desired. Serves four, about 295 calories each.

'CREAMED' TURKEY CHOWDER WITH MUSHROOMS

2 turkey legs, fresh or frozen
½ cup dry sherry wine
3½ cups water
2 onions, thinly sliced
1 bay leaf
¼ tsp. nutmeg
1 tsp. MSG (optional)
2 cups sliced carrots (fresh or frozen)
1 cup sliced celery
¼ lb. sliced fresh mushrooms (or 4 oz. can, drained)
2 cups skim milk
3 tbsp. instant-blending flour season to taste with the following optional seasonings, as you wish:

salt and pepper
dash of red pepper minced parsely
paprika

Combine turkey, wine, water, onions, bay leaf, nutmeg and MSG. Cover and simmer until tender. Remove from heat and cool. Remove turkey from broth. Cut meat into bite-size chunks. Discard skin and bones. Simmer carrots and celery in broth until tender. Add mushrooms. Stir milk and flour together and stir into simmering broth until thick. Add turkey meat and heat through. Season to taste. Ladle into bowls and sprinkle with parsley and paprika. Serves four, about 325 calories each.

The rewards of charity are sometimes found here on earth. South did not divine the nature of East's donation, and as a result East was repaid twofold.

This hand is from the American Contract Bridge League's Continentwide Charity Game, played Nov. 21. The analysis sheet given out after the game says that South will have a rebid problem after North raises hearts, and that the choice will be split between four hearts and three no trump. That was indeed the case.

The analysis goes on to say that, after West leads king, ace and another spade, the routine overruff by East will hold declarer to ten tricks. That is true as far as it goes. But watch what happens when the defense is not routine, as was the case when the East cards were held by Mrs. Pauline Zirin of Jackson Heights, N.Y.

Instead of "routinely" overruffing the third spade, Mrs. Zirin made the fine discard of her singleton club. This exposed her queen of trumps to a finesse, and the declarer could have made the rest of the tricks had he decided on the finesse.

But declarer had an entirely wrong picture of the trump situation. He could not believe that East would refuse to overruff if she held the queen, so he placed the lady with West. Rather than take a finesse which was bound to fail, declarer tried to drop the queen by cashing the ace and king.

When West discarded on the second trump, declarer began to have an inkling of what might be in store. Declarer continued with a low trump to the jack and queen, and East put him back in dummy with a diamond.

The defenders had completed their book, and declarer had to get back to his hand to draw the last trump. Clubs offered the only opportunity, but when declarer led a club from dummy, East ruffed with her remaining trump for a one-trick set!

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Food Editor Suggests Best 1977 Cookbooks

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: Our cook-and-eat club, as a joint venture, wants to buy some of the food books published in 1977. At the end of 1978, we'll draw for them. We have some idea of what to choose, but we'd be interested in your recommendations. — GOURMET.

DEAR GOURMET: For the French scene, and I imagine your cooking club is at least partly involved with it, I propose two entries. One is "Paul Bocuse's French Cooking," by Paul Bocuse, France's famous chef and restaurateur (Panthon, $20). It includes some recipes within the scope of a group of cooks willing to take the time to duplicate them. Ther are also elaborate creations that call for epicurean ingredients. I tasted Bocuse's most famous dish, Sea Bass in Pastry, at a dinner he gave in New York, and believe me, your club would enjoy it. Besides a generous offering of recipes and culinary advice, "French Cooking" has a stunning format. The other entry in the French category is "Lenotr's Desserts and Pastries" by Gaston Lenotre (Barron's, $15.95). The author, France's famous pastry chef, has a school for professional chefs and operates baking shops and a catering service as well as an elegant French restaurant. If the members of your club can master the basic recipes in Lenotre's book, they can go on to creating all the marvelous desserts whose recipes follow. The book's handsome color photographs and clear type are appropriate encouragement. By the way, at a recent tasting in New York, I had a chance to compare Lenotre's fruit tarts and chocolate eclairs with those of some French bakeries in New York. In my opinion Lenotre's pastries were the most outstanding because the tarts had the best fruit flavor and the flakiest shells, and the eclairs had the best filling. However, it's only fair to say that the other bakers cater to American tastes.

Closer to home but still wide-ranging is "Craig Claiborne's Favorits from The New York Times, Volume 3," a compilation of the fabulous food journalist's 1976 columns (Times Books, $12.50). This combination of delectable recipes, interviews with chefs and cooks and comments on techniques and tools is lorth having in one convenient volume.

Your club will want to consider acquiring "The Encyclopedia of Fish Cookery" by A. J. McClane with photography by Arie de Zanger (Holt, Rinehart and Winston, $35). It covers all worldwide fish and seafood varieties and methods of preparing and preserving them and has 350 recipes and almost 700 color photographs. I find it the best reference book on its subject, one that has become of increasing interest to American cooks.

Because cooks need good tools, I must recommend "The International Cooks' Catalogue" (Random House, $19.95). Burton Wolf, Milton Glaser and James Beard, the men behind the original "Cooks' Catalogue," have now taken the whole world's cooking utensils for their province. Each entry is pictured and there's a scattering of illustrations from other times and some recipe throughout the book to egg on cooks to acquire and use some of the cooking equipment described.

Indispensable is what I call "The Complete Food Catalogue" by Jose Wilson and Arthur Leaman (Holt, Rinehart and Winston, $6.95 paper). Here are the mail-order sources a cook may need for certain foods of prime quality and for others that are not locally available. Some of the mail-order purveyors whose catalogs are listed supply cooking equipment, gadgets, books, and seeds and plants for growing vegetables and herbs, so there's also help here. This much-needed compilation is interestinglh written and its format makes it easy to read. As a lagniappe, recipes, serving suggestions and tips are included. — C. B.

VANILLA CRUMBS

You can crush vanilla wafers several ways when you want to use the crumbs for a pie crust or in some other dessert. Use an electric blender; or drop the wafers into a plastic bag and crush with a rolling pin; or crumb the wafers in an electric food processor or in an electric or hand-operated food grinder.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to Too Thin really got to me. She said she'd tried everything, and you advised her to see a doctor. If she tried everything, I'm sure she's already seen a doctor.

I was a size 3 for years and I know exactly how this woman feels. Fat people are jealous of thin people. That's why they always comment on how thin they are.

Following surgery, my doctor told me to drink beer to relieve the pain. It worked, but I went from 105 to 176 in two years!

I am down to a size 8 now. I eat what I want, but I never eat on Mondays. That works for me.

My advice to people who are tried of hearing how thin they are is to reply, "Yes, I know I'm thin. Don't you wish you were."

Thin, Thank Heavens

Dear Thin: Granted there are more people who would rather lose weight than gain it, but if I had a physican who prescribed beer to relieve pain, I would lose him.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: Is there anything wrong with a girl making out just a little to keep a fellow interested in dating her? I don't mean a great big love scene or anything like that, just a little light necking and a couple of kisses during the evening and maybe one extra special good-night kiss? I'm keeping my virtue as a matter of principle.

Dating Now

Dear Dating: That's a dangerous game. The kind of "interest" you could arouse might cost you your principle.

DEAR ABBY: I read in your column, "There's nothing wrong with keeping a Christmas tree up all year."

There's nothing wrong with it except that you may lose your life in a fire. A new pine tree can burn from bottom to top in about eight seconds! A tree that is months old will ignite the ceiling before you can reach for a fire extinguisher.

We wouldn't keep a tiger in our house, and a tiger can't go through closed doors. Fire can! The dry resinous pine needles are highly inflammable, yet people store them in their basements year after year.

In Providence, R.I., fire fighters found 600 trees stored in local basements last year!

Abby, please warn your readers that pine Christmas trees should be put out of the house by Jan. 6.

Anne W. Phillips, M.D.

Dear Dr. Phillips: Thank you for a timely warning. Readers should know that you are also the executive director of the National Smoke, Fire and Burn Institute, and as such you are well informed on the subject.

Pork Expert Gives New Farm Recipes

By RONALD E. COHEN

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Betty Talmadge breezed into town the other day to sell her cookbook and talk of her new life as businesswoman and divorcee.

Mrs. Talmadge, former wife of Democratic Sen. Herman Talmadge of Georgia, has expanded her ham business into meat sales representatives trying to break into the food exporting business.

She says she is trying to restructure her life to become "one small voice for those of us who are left like a dangling participle, trying to decide what to do with the rest of our life."

Her book is "How to Cook a Pig and Other Back-to-the Farm Recipes" (Simon and Schuster $9.95).

Indeed, it does contain a recipe on how to cook a whole pig, written by a woman whose ham factory employes once gave her a plaque engraved "Betty Shingler Talmadge — America's Greatest Pig Woman."

She now sells more than half a million hams each year. She started by selling a few hundred hams a year to Atlanta restaurants from the trunk of her car. She was age 24 at the time and the youngest first lady in Georgia history. Now she is trying to sell chicken hot dogs in Japan amid other foreign ventures. She said experts told her the business would be in the red at least three years.

"But within four months we were making a profit!" she said with a laugh. "I might add that all those experts were men ... and I was glad to prove them wrong."

Mrs. Talmadge is not strident, but she leaves no doubt she is a feminist. "Marriage is no longer a permanent partnership," she says. "One out of three ends in divorce, and three out of four divorces are initiated by the husband. To my surprise, I am one of those."

She is pleased that the women's movement is "demanding that lawmakers face up to needs and sweep away the cobwebs of old, archaic laws left over from the past," laws she says discriminate by recognizing the husband as the only "breadwinner" and leave the wife an "unpaid servant."

Combining her "women's lib" feelings with the softness and gentility of a southern woman may sound incongruous to some. But Mrs. Tulmadge declares that if her sex ever gets full equality under the law, "the 'best man' may turn out to be the 'best woman.'"

Here is Betty Talmadge's recipe for roast pork with apple brandy,

Use a good, fresh lean pork, such as a 12-pound shoulder, a fresh ham or a huge backbone. Sprinkle generously with salt and freshly ground black pepper. Place in roasting pan, adding 1 cup of apple brandy and 1 cup of of water, or 2 cups of apple juice. There should be at least one-half inch of liquid in the bottom of the pan.

Cover with heavy-duty aluminum foil, seal around the edges and roast in preheated 450 degree oven for 20 minutes, then reduce heat to 250.

Continue to roast for 3 to 4 hours, until well done. Remove foil. Increase heat to 325-350 and roast, uncovered, for an additional half hour or more, basting occasionally with pan juices. Allow to rest 10 minutes before slicing. If gravy is desired, remove excess fat, add apple juice, stock or water to drippings and serve as is or thickened with 1 to 2 tablespoons of flour.

The rest of her good luck buffet is "pot likker:" the juices of cooked turnip greens; black-eyed peas with hog jowl; candied tomato sauce; turnip greens with hambone; rutabagas; artichoke relish; cracklin' corn bread muffins; and ambrosia with white fruit cake.

Needlepoint Aids In Giving Plants Fresh New Look

Terra cotta gets a brand new face with a little help from the colorful Sunspot Pot Cover pictured at right. You can make needlepoint cylinders simply by cutting out squares from your canvas and whip stitching them together in brown yarn. Plastic-meshed canvas (10 meshes to the inch) is just the thing for this project, because the mesh won't unravel when cut. Your favorite needlpoint designs can come to life when they're used to display household plants. And with that extra touch, your decorating eye will discover what in-door gardening is all about.

For a flower pot that's 7" in diameter, you will need 20 large squares (12 by 12 meshes to the square) and 20 small squares (6 by 6 meshes). To get off to a fast start, simply cut out your small squares, whip stitch them together (20 in a row) and embroider them all around in a running stitch, with a new color of yarn for each row. For your larger squares, you'll find it easier to embroider first, before cutting them out. You can mark off the canvas into squares with a basting stitch in colored yarn to keep track or your stitching.

The stitching patterns are up to you, but you may like to try a few flower motifs that are something special. A woven straight stitch center with straight stitch petals and loop stitch petal with a cross stitch center make two lovely blooms that you may not have run across before.

The Sunspot Pot Cover is available in a complete needlepoint kit containing plastic canvas, acrylic yarn, a needle, and full instructions and diagrams. The cover finishes to 6" high and 7½" in diameter.

Order Sunspot Pot Cover No. 00398 for $5.99 plus $1.35 postage and handling.

Photography Journal Gives Tips On Freelancing

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

Many amateur photographers dream of selling their photographs to help support their hobby. It's a dream that can be realized — with study, with effort and with help. It usually takes more than luck to make pictures pay off. It takes a critical analysis of your own photography to find your strong points, coupled with expert guidance to the proper markets for the type of work you do best.

Arvel Ahlers has been an expert guide in this area for 25 years and now the eighth revised and enlarged edition of his classic manual is at hand. "Where & How to Sell Your Photographs," by Arvel W. Ahlers, is published in soft-cover edition by Amphoto, Garden City, N.Y. ($8.95). It offers, in one handy reference book, the best complete survey now available on how to be a successful freelance photographer.

Another helpful assist for freelancers is provided by trade newsletters which pinpoint up-to-date markets for photographs. Like other segments of business, photo markets are in a continual state of change. New markets come into existence; old markets cease to exist; and existing markets shift their publishing policy as conditions change. The information must generally come from knowledgeable sources in the industry, often on a month-to-month basis.

One of the current such sources is 'The Photoletter," published by long-time successful freelance photographer, Rohn Engh, Osceola, Wis. 54020. You may obtain a free sample issue by writing to him and enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ahler's book has a comprehensive listing of potential photo buyers grouped by subject matter. Among them are: Agriculture, Animals & Pets, Art, Calendars, Children, Fraternal Organizations, Ecology, Home & Gardening, Hobbies & Crafts, Medical, Marine, Sports, Travel, Religious and Trade publications.

There is information on what kind and size of pictures are wanted to satisfy their needs and how prints ought to be prepared, captioned and packaged for safe arrival. The business aspects of selling photos are also stressed with sections on bookkeeping, publication rights and copyrights.

In addition, a group of well-known professional photographers give advice and information in their own areas of expertise. Rus Arnold offers travel tips for lensmen. Walter Chandoha covers photography of animals. Lou Jacobs Jr. provides tips on producing children's books. Victor Keppler emphasizes that pros never stop learning. Peter Gowland believes it is advantageous for a photographer to specialize, but points out there are disadvantages, too. And Arthur Goldsmith tackles the ticklish problem of how to arrive at a profitable price for photos.

Many amateurs start by getting requests to take pictures for a friend at a wedding or bar mitzvah. Pretty soon, it seems like a good idea to earn extra money doing something you like to do and, before you know it, you're on the road to freelance photography.

Freelancing is more profitable to some photographers than to others because of photo ability, in some cases, and of marketing ability in other cases. In all cases, a freelancer can be more successful if he has a better knowledge of marketing or where to sell pictures.

There are often a great many local and community opportunities for a photographer to make money if he is alert, imaginative and makes an effort. Good photographs are needed by hobbyists of all types, craftsmen, athletes, amateur dramatic groups, and civic and educational organizations. An affiliation with one group generally leads to association with other groups because of their local ties.

As an example, take athletes. A freelancer could frequent tennis courts, swimming pools, bowling alleys, little league games and sports events, taking pictures of participants. Good action pictures should easily prove saleable to the athletes and possibly to the local newspapers. When you've accumilated a variety, an exhibition might be arranged in a bank, library or sporting goods store. Such a display can build a reputation and a following, and could become highly profitable.

When you tackle the publications market, you must study the most recent issues of those magazines that fall in your area of ability. Study the type of pictures used and analyze whether they're action shots or people pictures, and whether formal or candid poses are preferred. Make sure your efforts are comparable in quality or better before you approach a particular prospect.

Always submit prints, not negatives, until they are asked for. Normally, prints are 8 x 10 in size, glossy, single weight and unmounted for easiest handling. Your name and address should be on the back side of each print with a rubber stamp or written with a felt-tip pen, making sure there's no excess ink to mar the surface of the next print. Prepare neat, typewritten captions and keep copies for future reference. Captions must contain all pertinent information in the fewest possible words.

Protect your prints between two stout cardboards, a bit larger than the prints, secured with rubber bands from corner to corner. Do not tape the boards together — that makes it troublesome to get at the prints. Use first class mail and enclose a stamped, self-addressed label or envelope.

Don't expect to hit the bull's-eye with each mailing, but don't feel rejected if prints are returned. Try the next prospect on the list. You're bound to score a hit if you're supplied with ammunition and keep on firing! It's practice and persistence that makes snapshooting marksmen.

Filler Hides Flaws In Wood Finish

By ANDY LANG

Q. — I just refinished a bedroom bureau with the kind of finish that penetrates, seals and colors the wood at the same time. It came out all right, but in a few places where there were imperfections in the wood, they seem to be more conspicuous than they were after the old varnish had been removed. Can these damaged places (two of them are nail holes) be disguised in some way without redoing the entire bureau?

A. — The company that manufactures the finishing material you mentioned also makes a filling material in pencil form. It is for exactly the purpose you mentioned. Since it comes in eight colors, there is a good chance that you can disguise the imperfections without much trouble.

Q. — Recently I read about paint pads and how popular they were becoming. While I don't intend to paint our house until the spring, I thought I might learn something about them now. Can they be used on the outside of a house? Our exterior is made of shakes. Also, how long do paint pads last?

A. — Yes, paint pads can be used anywhere. Shakes are difficult to paint, so be sure to get a pad made specifically for shakes. Like any other tool, a pad's life is determined to a large degree on how well it is treated. If the pad is washed quickly in the proper solvent (water and detergent for latex paint), it can be used over and over again. But you can buy replacement pads that can be thrown away after a certain period of time, as with roller covers.

Q. — When you buy a product and a warranty is given, is this different from a guarantee?

A. — No. Both mean that the manufacturer or seller stands behind the product. However, there are warranties and warranties. A full warranty (and the word "full" must be written) means that a defective product will be fixed or replaced free, including removal and installation if necessary; that it will be fixed within a reasonable time after you complain; that you will not have to do anything unreasonable to get warranty service; that the warranty is good for anyone who owns the product during the specified period; and that, if the product can't be fixed or hasn't been after a reasonable number of efforts, you get the choice of a new one or your money back.

But if the warranty says that it is limited (rather than full), be on the alert, since something is missing. It may be that the warranty covers only parts, not labor; it may allow only a pro-rata refund or credit; it may require you to return a product (no matter how heavy it is) to the store for service; it may cover only the original purchaser; and there may be a charge for handling. As you can see, there is quite a difference between a full and limited warranty.

1978 Commemorative Stamps Offer Variety For Collectors

By SYD KRONISH
Associated Press Writer

1978 promises to be another banner year for collectors of U.S. stamps.

The list of honorees runs the gamut from explorers to entertainers, and from doctors to dancers, plus conservation adhesives promoting owls and trees. We further hail the Civil War's underground railroad and the Revolutionary War's French connection. And the full list is not complete.

The first stamp on the agenda in January will pay tribute to Carl Sandburg to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the beloved poet's birth. Also in January will be a pair of standard-sized commemoratives marking the 200th anniversary of British Capt. James Cook's discovery of Hawaii and his charting portions of the Alaska coast. The two stamps will be issued simultaneously in Hawaii and Alaska.

In February a single stamp will honor Harriet Tubman who was instrumental in the operation of the "underground railroad" by which many blacks escaped slavery in the years leading to the Civil War. This is the first issue in the new Black Heritage Series, says the U.S. Postal Service.

During the same month, a block of four square stamps (48 per panel) will feature American quilt designs. When the block of four is rotated 45 degrees, a diamond-shape is achieved. The layout is identical to that of the Mineral Heritage stamps of 1974.

This will be followed by a single stamp marking the successful conclusion of the Viking space program. The Viking spacecraft made two landings on the planet Mars during 1976.

Sometime in May there will be a semi-jumbo-size stamp in the Bicentennial Series to honor the 200th anniversary of the ratification in 1778 by the Continental Congress of the Treaty of Alliance with France signed earlier that year in Paris. A single stamp is scheduled in May to hail the efforts of Dr. George Papanicolaou for his development of the "Pap smear" cancer detection procedure.

Entertainers are in the spotlight for stamps in June and July. The first (previously announced in this column) will honor Jimmie Rodgers, famed country and western singing star of the 1920s. This stamp will launch a Performing Arts Series. The second stamp, probably on the calendar for July 4, will commemorate the 100th birthday of that "Yankee Doodle Dandy," George M. Cohan. This will also be in the Performing Arts and Artists Series.

Two stamps dedicated to conservation are next on the list. A block of four in the Wildlife Conservation Series will depict owls native to North America. Another block of four will feature trees common to different geographic areas of the United States.

Just as a gentle reminder for all of us, the Postal Service expects an increase in rates in '78 — which means new postal stationery items and new denominations on the stamps.

And since everything is increasing, there is a possibility of four Christmas stamps next year instead of the usual two.

The new U.S. commemorative honoring 50 years of talking pictures went on sale in Hollywood, Calif., on Oct. 6, 1977 — the anniversary date of the opening (on New York City's Broadway) of "The Jazz Singer" starring Al Jolson in 1927.

The talking picture stamp is a companion to the centennial of sound recording stamp issued earlier this year. The design features a stylized version of the Vitaphone projector and sound equipment used to film and record "The Jazz Singer." In a banner format simulating a strip of film appears "50th Anniversary Year of Talking Pictures."

In addition to the first day covers for the talking picture anniversary stamp obtained via the Postal Service, the International Stamp Collectors Society is releasing two first-day covers of unusual design for the occasion.

A mint coin cachet on a 6 3/4 standard-size envelope has a sculptured bronze commemorative medallion featuring a view of the movie capital. The cachet of the companion cover is a full-color reproduction of three simulate filmstrip slides from the Al Jolson picture "The Jazz Singer." The reverse side carries a reproduction of and data on the first U.S. stamp honoring motion pictures — the 3-center issued in 1944 on the 5th anniversary of the first public showing of Thomas A. Edison's "Kinetoscope."

Each of the covers has the new 13-cent talking pictures stamp canceled Oct. 6, 1977, at Hollywood, Calif.

AUSTIN (AP) — Communications Properties, Inc., had a net income of $2,-656,000 for the year ending Oct. 31, an increase of $1,067,000 from the previous year, president Robert Hughes reported Thursday.

Hughes said gross revenues were $27,-578,000, an increase of $4,785,000 from the previous year.

CPI's share per earnings for 1977, he said, were 56 cents, compared to 33 cents in 1976.

Hughes said CPI is the eighth largest operator of cable television systems in the United States, serving 291,000 subscribers in 11 states.

No Foul Play Found In Death Of Inmate

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has closed its investigation into the recent death of Lubbock County Jail inmate Stewart Hawkins Jr., finding no evidence of foul play in the matter.

A number of NAACP members still suspect physical abuse may have been involved, however. For that reason, the Rev. Roy Jones, who headed the probe, says he will wait "a little longer in case something else comes up" before writing a final report.

But for official purposes, the case has been closed and allegations of wrongdoing by the Lubbock County Sheriff's Department have gone unsubstantiated, Jones said. The executive committee of the local NAACP has voted to discontinue the investigation, he said.

Hawkins, 41, of 2605-B Weber Drive, died Nov. 2 at St. Mary of the Plains Hospital, according to records released by Sheriff C. H. "Choc" Blanchard.

An autopsy attributed the death to "severe bronchopneumonia" associated with "brain stem infarction due to cerebral vascular thrombosis." In layman's terms, Hawkins' condition was described as a "blood clot on the brain."

Hawkins was booked into the county jail Sept. 28, charged with the fatal shooting a week earlier of Henry Robinson, 24, at an eastside club. Hawkins was being held in lieu of $15,000 bond.

From the time he was booked, Hawkins had complained of headaches and dizziness, Blanchard said. The prisoner was watched "very closely" during that first day in jail for signs of illness, Blanchard added.

Hawkins was visited regularly by guards and the jail's nurse during the day, at one point was moved to an isolated cell for closer observation, and was provided medication — which he refused — ordered by the jail's physician, Blanchard's medical reports indicate.

By 5 p.m. on Sept. 28, Hawkins' condition seemed to have improved and he began sitting up. But two hours later, the reports state, his "condition changed (as) pupils pin-pointed, muscles flaccid — no reaction to light or touch stimuli, no responses."

A doctor was summoned, jail reports indicate, and after an examination, Hawkins was taken on a stretcher to St. Mary's Hospital, shortly after 8 p.m.

He died there more than a month later. Hawkins' family asked the local NAACP branch to look into the matter. The exact nature of the family's request and other details of the probe have not been released pending a final report by Jones.

Gene Gaines, president of the Lubbock NAACP chapter, said, "Our sources for making this investigation were somewhat limited," but that persons close to the matter were interviewed.

Jones said the autopsy on Hawkins found no sign of physical abuse as a cause of death.

Blanchard said he had not been aware of the NAACP's investigation.

He said he has been assured by physicians and the jail staff that Hawkins was not involved in any fights or incurred any physical injuries while in jail. Hawkins' hospitalization and death were apparently the result of "some medical problems he had had for quite some time," Blanchard said.

Medical expenses for Hawkins cost the county about $30,000, Blanchard said.

According to Blanchard's reports, Hawkins told jail officials he had been experiencing "general weakness and dizziness" a week before he was incarcerated.

Also, a physician who examined Hawkins at 7:15 p.m. on Sept. 28 found "no evidence of any physical injury" but cited other medical conditions in recommending immediate hospitalization.

The autopsy on Hawkins also said, "There is no evidence of recent trauma."

Mitchell In Need Of Hip Operation

WASHINGTON (AP) — John N. Mitchell's doctor says the former attorney general should have his right hip totally replaced if it is determined that his health will permit the operation.

Mitchell, 64, has been undergoing tests at Georgetown University Hospital here because of an arthritic hip. He is on furlough from his Watergate related prison term. Mitchell is scheduled to return to prison Jan. 15, but will request that his furlough be extended if an operation is necessary, his lawyer says.

County Workers Request 10 Percent Pay Raise

Lubbock County Judge Rod Shaw said today he has received petitions signed by 189 county employees asking for a 10 percent pay raise.

The workers want Shaw to convene the county's salary grievance committee to hear the request. They say Lubbock County salaries are so low many employees must hold moonlighting jobs to support their families.

Shaw, who serves as non-voting chairman of the committee, said he will study the petitions in light of state law on the matter to determine whether the grievance panel can be convened. In that regard, he said he may check with Criminal Dist. Atty. Alton Griffin, the county's legal adviser.

"I have a great deal of respect for our employees. They are a very dedicated group...A number of them undoubtedly are underpaid," Shaw said.

But there may be a problem in getting the matter before the salary grievance committee, which is composed of various elected officials (excluding commissioners) and three citizens at large. The citizen members are to be selected by the commissioners court Monday, to serve for 1978.

"As I understand the law, the grievance committee can meet only to hear an appeal from an elected official," Shaw said.

Of the 189 county employees who signed the petitions, only two — L. J. Blalack, justice of the peace for Lubbock County's Pct. 1, Place 1, and Allen Meurer, constable for Pct. 2, the county's southeast quadrant — are elected, participants in the petition drive said.

They said Meurer's support was more a token gesture than anything else, in hopes of giving additional weight to the petitions and getting the issue before the grievance committee. Lubbock County constables are paid $1 a year.

Shaw and some other top county officials note that state law provides a grievance procedure for "any elected county or precinct officer" but does not mention access by non-elected employees.

They say it is unlikely that an appeal by a JP and a constable could be expanded to include all county employees as a class.

Leaders of the petition drive said they are checking that law in hopes of finding a way to get the grievance committee to hear their case.

"All we want is a chance to present the problem," said one participant. "Collecting 189 signatures shows how big a concern the salaries around here are."

Signers of the petitions represent nearly every county department, including the offices of county and district clerk, the tax office and sheriff's department, and road-and-bridge crews.

The petitions state: "Due to the low pay scale for Lubbock County employees, a large number of these employees find it necessary to engage in two jobs to support themselves and their families.

"This is not to say they do this for luxury, only out of necessity.

"We the undersigned respectfully request this hearing in hopes of receiving the support of the grievance committee in our efforts to obtain a reasonable increase in salaries — an additional 10 percent of base pay over the cost-of-living raise set for January, 1978, for all personnel."

County employees got a 5 percent pay hike at the beginning of the year, but they say their salaries are still far below the pay levels of comparable positions in other local governmental entities and the private employment sector.

The requested 10 percent hike would cost the county an estimated $280,000 this year. Employees said the county has ample cash reserves of $2 million or so in its general fund to raise salaries.

They want to appear before the grievance committee to show a comparison of Lubbock County pay with that of other counties and other local governments.

One item of concern is the Lubbock County Hospital District, which the Lubbock County Commissioners Court oversees. County employees contend they are paid much less than hospital district workers.

For example, a secretary in the county courthouse starts at a $6,700 annual salary. Secretaries for the hospital district are starting at $7,272 and can go as high as $9,456.

(Those figures can be deceiving, however. A courthouse secretary may be classified as a clerk or clerk-typist, receiving lower wages, under the hospital district's job descriptions).

Shaw and other county officials, who concede their pay scales are somewhat low, say the county's fiscal future is too uncertain to award additional pay hikes now. They say their reserves may be needed for building a new jail and for other projects.

The 189 signatures on the petitions represent more than half of the county's 370 employees. Some of those employees, however, are part-time and semi-retired workers and reportedly were not asked to sign the petitions.

GULF REDUCES PRICE

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Gulf Oil Corp. has cut a penny from the wholesale price of all its gasoline grades. A Gulf spokesman said Thursday that the price rollback, effective immediately, was a response to market conditions. The move affects most service station sales east of the Mississippi River.

CROWN RETURNED — One of the unidentified experts who examined the Hungarian Holy Crown of St. Stephen is pictured as he held the crown today, after it was returned by the United States government to Hungarian government. Hungary Receives Crown From Vance

By STEPHEN H. MILLER

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance today formally returned the 1,000-year-old Holy Crown of St. Stephen to its Hungarian homeland, ending a long dispute between the United States and Hungary that in many ways typified the enmities of the Cold War.

Parliament Speaker Antal Aprok, delivering the main acceptance speech, said return of the golden, bejeweled crown, Hungary's most revered symbol of nationhood, "illustrates well the favorable development in the world situation and, within this, in Hungarian-American relations in recent years."

"We welcome this," he said, "but we are also conscious of the fact that there are still a number of hostilities" to be dealt with.

Vance, who flew here from Paris for the official ceremonies, is to meet with Foreign Minister Frigyes Puza to discuss one unresolved issue, Hungary's request for most-favored-nation trading status with the United States.

Hundreds of officials and guests were invited to the parliament building beside the Danube River to welcome home the crown and its associated regalia, which were spirited out of Hungary and ended up in U.S. hands in 1945 to keep the Russians from getting them.

The event, like the airport arrival ceremony for the crown Thursday night, was an invitation-only affair. Ordinary Hungarians were promised a 45-minute television special this evening.

The official media still were not saying today when Hungarians would get a chance to see the crown or where it was to be displayed. But the Budapest newspaper Magyar Nemzet carried a small classified ad Friday urgently seeking room custodians for the national museum.

The Communist government planned to celebrate the return with special lighting of the Buda Heights overlooking the Danube, including the castle where the crown was kept until 1944.

Five hundred officials and other notables were invited to the airport Thursday night for the arrival of a U.S. Air Force transport with a delegation of 25 Americans bringing back the crown of Hungary's first king, the orb, the royal scepter and St. Stephen's robe.

As a military band played the Rakoczi March, Hungary's most famous martial tune, the crate containing the relics was placed inside a flag-flying blue van. The band played "God Bless the Hungarians" and "The Star Spangled Banner" as an honor guard escorted the van from the airport.

There was no advance publicity, and only scattered groups saw the motorcade as it passed through the streets of downtown Budapest. The public first learned that the crown had been returned from a late night news program more than an hour later.

"I think it's wonderful," said a Hungarian journalist who carries a snapshot of the crown he made when it was displayed in public in 1933. "It brings back my childhood."

The crown was displayed in public only twice after World War I. The second time was in 1938.

It was given to Stephen I, Hungary's first king, by Pope Sylvester II, and legend says the coronation took place on Christmas Day in the year 1000.

The treasures fell into American hands in 1945 when U.S. troops in Austria captured Hungarian honor guards who were fleeing their homeland to keep the relics from the advancing Russian army. Since then the relics have been locked in the U.S. gold vaults at Fort Knox, Ky.

For years, during the Cold War and in the aftermath of the failure of the 1956 Hungarian Revolution, successive U.S. administrations refused to return the crown. But relations between the U.S. and Hungarian governments have improved in recent years, and President Carter announced in December that the crown would be sent home.

Carter's decision touched off vehement protests from anti-Communist Hungarian-Americans and others, but the U.S. Supreme Court rejected two attempts to block the return.

Panel Gives Approval To New Zone District

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A new district may be incorporated in the zoning ordinance if the City Council adopts a proposal approved Thursday by the Planning and Zoning commission.

Commissioners unanimously voted to recommend that an industrial park zoning district be created.

Commissioners and city staffers, citing rapid and large scale commercial development along major thoroughfares, said such standards are needed to insure aesthetically pleasing development.

The new district's standards specifically are aimed at areas such as those around the Lubbock International Airport, south Loop 289 and Clovis Road near west Loop 289.

The new district, if adopted, would be an intermediate step between commercial (C-4) and light manufacturing (M-1) zoning provisions. All uses in the district would be of a light industrial type, wholesale sales, services or industrial sales.

Businesses with frontage on major thoroughfares or expressways, will be more limited and have more stringent requirements than those not fronting on major streets.

Some permitted uses would include welding shops, wholesale bakeries, feed stores, lumber yards and mini-warehouses.

The commission also okayed requests by:

—S.H.E. Corp. to change zoning on a block south of 33rd Street and about 82 feet east of University Avenue from family apartment (A-1) to apartment-medical (A-M).

—Mike Weiss for a specific use permit zone change to allow professional and medical offices on several lots north of 22nd Place and west of Indiana Avenue.

—Ken Flagg for two-family residential (R-2) zoning on a tract of land currently zoned single-family residential (R-1). The land is south of Loop 289 and about 1,621 feet east of University Avenue.

—Flagg for several changes on land recently annexed in south Lubbock. If approved by the council and the U.S. Justice Department, the property, which lies south of 98th Street and west of Indiana Avenue would be zoned R-1, R-2, A-1 and local retail (C-2).

—Bryce Campbell for general retail (C-3) instead of A-1 and C-2 zoning of land north of 4th Street and east of Loop 289.

Water activities at Lake Meredith's National Recreation Area include boating, water skiing, sailing, swimming, and scuba diving.

Truck Driver Reports Assault

An Amarillo truck driver became Lubbock's latest robbery victim when he was confronted — and subsequently assaulted — by two bandits early today.

Gerald Hill said he was putting air in the tires of his tractor-trailer rig near 8th Street and Avenue A about 5:45 a.m. when two black men dressed in shabby brown clothing approached.

"They surrounded me," he recounted at the scene. "I had this tire tool in my hand and I raised it, and one of them said, 'We've got a gun.'"

The victim stated he could see one of the robbers holding something in his hand, but never actually saw a weapon.

The bandits then directed Hill to a nearby unpaved area and ordered him to lie down. After taking his wallet, containing about $4, and a set of keys, one of the men kicked Hill on the side of the face; however, the victim later said he was not seriously hurt.

Police at noon still had not found the two suspects, who ran north from the scene.

There was no letup Thursday, as burglars criss-crossed the city in their relentless pursuit of illicitly attained goods.

Leroy Gass of 116 81st St. said someone Wednesday ransacked his house, destroyed a coffee table and made off with his large television set. Gass estimated his loss at $1,500.

Burglars damaged a section of fence at Jesse Vega's 5634 Ave. A residence Wednesday or Thursday, then broke inside and stole a purse and television set, inflicting an $800 loss, Vega said.

Apparent opportunists made the most of it early Thursday when they tossed a wine bottle through a jewelry store window at 1101 13th St., then gathered up several necklaces and bracelets valued together at $350.

Other business burglars who struck a musical instrument outlet at 1722 Broadway early Thursday apparently decided it wasn't worth the effort. C. A. Rogers said the intruders packed away two accordians — together valued at $800 — before leaving. However, Lubbock police recovered the two instruments outside the store, leaving Rogers with a $200 repair bill.

Both Roland Montgomery of 4906 40th St. and Robert Stevens of 3409 22nd Place were victimized by shotgun thieves Thursday. Montgomery said his weapon — worth about $225 — was taken from a rack in his pickup truck, while Stevens told police his gun was stolen from his bedroom closet. Stevens said burglars also took about $20 to $30 in change from a nearby box.

Billy M. Phillips of 3409 28th St. said tools, a tape deck and a ring, items worth $250, were stolen from his vehicle Wednesday or Thursday.

A wedding ring and an engagement ring, together worth about $1,200, were reported stolen from Estel Shade of 1612 28th St. Mrs. Shade said she had left her house to work in the yard when someone apparently entered it and took the rings and some keys from her purse. The theft occurred Christmas Eve, Mrs. Shade told police.

Bill Welch said someone entered a supermarket at 58th Street and South Avenue Q Drive Wednesday and stole three bottles of valium, valued at $150.

Eat, drink and make money while doing it apparently was the burglars' theme at an apartment complex at 5401 4th St. Joan Bloom told officers someone stole soft drinks, candy and money from the apartment complex Thursday. She estimated the total loss at $150.

Charles Sumner of 2916 2nd St. said it could cost as much as $250, if a section of concrete — marred by a vandal's obscene phrase — had to be re-poured at a house under construction in the 5700-block of 72nd Street. Sumner said the vandals used a nail or sharp object on his wet concrete either Wednesday or Thursday.

Burglars who entered an office in Briercroft Park Wednesday or Thursday broke into a safe and left the scene with $440 cash, $35 in postage stamps and $213 in money and checks taken from two bank bags, according to Michael Thompson of 6801 19th St.

Another business burglary — this one at 5632 Brownfield Highway — netted intruders about $135 in currency Thursday after they rifled a metal box. Dean Breedlove of 2513 41st St. said the thieves also stole official papers and change from a nearby coin machine.

Thieves took hubcaps from two 1977 Cadillacs at a car lot at 1210 19th St. Wednesday, and their colleagues swiped a pair from Paul Oswalt's vehicle while it was parked at a motel in the 3900-block of 19th Street. Oswalt, of Lamesa, said his wheelcovers were worth about $600, while manager Jack Alderson estimated his loss at $800.

Woman Fears Hazard Of Low Planes

BOSTON (AP) — Lillian Fagone is moving the house she has lived in for the past 46 years because the planes fly so low over the roof that neighbors say she could "serve the pilots a cup of coffee."

Mrs. Fagone's lifelong address at 285 Frankfort St. in East Boston is just a few thousand feet from a runway at Logan International Airport.

A crew of workers today planned to hoist Mrs. Fagone's wooden triple decker home onto a trailer and transport it to an empty lot about a mile away from her neighborhood in East Boston.

"People think I'm crazy because it's not the noise that bothered me, it was the hazard," Mrs. Fagone said.

"We'll be able to hear the noise of the planes, but they won't be so close."

Planes fly as low as 260 feet over the rooftops of the three family houses in Mrs. Fagone's old neighborhood although residents complain the noise is so loud it feels like 25 feet. Mrs. Fagone always was fearful of a crash.

When Mrs. Fagone first thought about moving several years ago residents say planes were flying every 1½ minutes, eight to 14 hours per day on five to seven days a week.

Protests have prompted changes in flight patterns so that planes now fly over the community four or five hours a day on two to four days out of the week.

Congratulations

Critic Says Film 'Choirboys' Strips Characters Of Depth

"The Choirboys." Screenplay by Christopher Knopf; based on the novel of the same name by Joseph Wambaugh. Music by Frank De Vol. Edited by Maury Winetrobe, William Martin and Irving Rosenblum. Directed by Robert Aldrich. Stars Charles Durning, Tim McIntire, Perry King and Don Stroud. Rated R. At the South Plains Cinema.

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Fine Arts Editor

Former Los Angeles policeman turned novelist Joseph Wambaugh has not been making too many friends in Hollywood these past few months. Not only has he taken Lorimar Productions to court in an attempt to completely disassociate himself with its film version of his best seller "The Choirboys," he's also more than willing to give up his present rights to 10 per cent of the picture's profits.

Wambaugh has gone on such a rampage over director Robert Aldrich's radical storyline shifts that he's gone so far as to swear he will never sell another book to the wide screen unless he, the author, is granted all power over script changes. And the producer hasn't been born who's going to agree to that.

Nevertheless, it's easy enough to empathize with Wambaugh's passion. For in an age when policemen are painted as supermen on TV and, worse, brainless macho shells on the bigger screens, Lorimar Productions and Aldrich have combined forces to give us probably the trashiest cop story yet. Almost akin to Michael Ritchie's treatment of "Semi-Tough," Aldrich has taken the characters out of Wambaugh's novel and stripped them of their depth, background and sincerity.

The changes run much deeper than turning the Los Angeles police force into the standard mythical division known as Metro Squad, or taking a thought-provoking ending and transforming it into a "let's hear it for the good guys" farce. Rather Aldrich has gone all out to alter the entire concept of the book. There is no cohesiveness, no tying force in character or purpose, apparent in the film.

Instead, Aldrich offers us a series of vignettes resembling little more than two hours of an R-rated "Laugh In" format.

It is obvious from the beginning that Aldrich, a once prestigious filmmaker who now seems to be following Peter Bogdanovich down the tubes after helming this and "Twilight's Last Gleaming," has opted for irreverent fun. The opening music possesses tones from "Jaws" and "Rollerball" before the cops start singing "We Are Members Of The Police Force" to the tune of "I've Been Working On The Railroad." Then we're taken to a Hollywood backlot labeled 1969 Vietnam for a scene which will be sloppily brought back to mind 90 minutes later.

Just as abruptly, we're back at Metro Squad — which is where our story really begins. It is here we're introduced to the choirboys in blue. But again, even their disturbed psyches are played for laughs. Charles Durning is Sperm-whale Whalen, the overweight patrolman willing to risk his pension on a day to day basis by insulting the brass. But what initially set him on this hateful rampage? Why does he take these risks? We never know.

The same goes for Perry King as Baxter Slate, a man subjecting himself to sado-masochistic relationships, as well as Don Stroud as Sam Lyles, a cop with an unpredictable, hair-trigger fear. We want to know these men better. We want to feel for them, not laugh at them. But there are no mirrors to the soul in this picture.

Instead, Aldrich just throws out the tasteless jokes and expects us to still weep when tragedy strikes. We're shown Randy Quaid, once again typecast as the country boy so dumb he still asks for beer after vomiting all over himself. There's Louis Gossett Jr., last seen being eaten by an eel in "The Deep"; here, he has a great laugh and virtually no part.

Francis Tanaguchi is a Japanese-American cop with a Dracula fetish in the locker room. Chuck Sacci is the drunk resigned to kissing naked women from under a glass table. And "choir practice," those attempts to forget the depressions of the day, involve little more than group sex and siccing a duck on a friend who has passed out with bread crumbs in his pants.

Which brings us to Tim McIntire as Roscoe Rules, the pea-brained sadist who perhaps epitomizes Aldrich's view of the choirboys. He's a moron, mean and vindictive. With no conception of police tactics, he causes suicides, provokes riots, attacks "faggots" and laughs out loud at accidental murder. In a real slam to the police intellect, it is McIntire who is awarded medals by a superior who himself almost instigates unlawful vendettas.

It is just too much to handle in a film which never knows whether it's reaching for black humor, straight farce or sensitivity. A film lacking thought and direction.

Mind you, there are some laughs. Burt Young, brilliant in "Rocky," is delightful as the ever-laughing vice cop who stirs his scotch-laced coffee with a cigar butt. He shows us more character, more feeling, in five minutes than anyone else manages in the entire picture. And then there is the contemporary addition of an aging homosexual naming his poodle Anita, no doubt a reference to Anita Bryant, which earns a chuckle.

But the fact remains "The Choirboys" is an uneven and uncaring ruination of a serio-comic novel. Even the concept of choir practice is downgraded. Wambaugh gave us choir practice as an off-duty gathering of good cops to forget the dismal street truths they live with eight hours a day. But choir practice in this film is a gathering of perverts, drunks and morons who have no conception of the truth.

The characters are one and all skin deep, as is the film itself. Let us thank our lucky stars we can still look back to compassionate films like Sidney Lumet's "Serpico," films which are not afraid to take the scalpel to the police and reveal at least a bit of heart and humanity.

SHORT TAKES: The Academy Awards are already on everyone's minds and, believe me, the active recruiting of nominations is well underway. Take, for example, the George Burns film called "Oh, God." A new advertising campaign has Burns reminding audiences he may be up for an Oscar. And to keep the film in everyone's mind, a TV situation comedy episode last week saw a waitress convinced Burns was the deity because of the movie.

That's what's known as a hard sell.

On the other end of the spectrum, if "Annie Hall" earns Woody Allen and Diane Keaton nominations it won't be because the two have been asking favors. Both parties have refused to campaign for nominations, saying it's just not their style. Now that's what I call style.

California Firm Gets Local Inn

A California hotel company has acquired Western Associates, Inc., of Lubbock which owns the South Park Inn at 3201 S. Loop 289.

Dr. Donald Andress of Lubbock and John D. Hall Jr. of Dallas sold their interest in Western Associates, effective Dec. 30, to Westbrooke Corporation of Tarzana, Calif.

Phillip Brooks is the new president of the corporation and Albert Stevens is the vice president. Both men are of Los Angeles, Calif., and are the officers of a hotel company there.

Westbrooke Corporation operates 13 hotels in eight states, including Ramada Inns, Best Western Inns and other independent hotels.

Stevens expressed pleasure at the new association with Lubbock and with the "prestigious South Park Inn" and said he had assigned a professional management team to "assure the South Park Inn its prominence in West Texas."

Although the name will remain the same, Stevens said quality and service would be upgraded at the motel.

"I believe the inn is the convention center of West Texas," Stevens said, adding he would "like to improve its recognition in that area.

"I feel we can bring a lot of people to Lubbock, and that's not only good for the city but good for South Park Inn," he said.

Stevens said no decision had been made regarding management of the motel, but said most South Park Inn employees would keep their jobs.

The motel, constructed in 1973 for $3 million, boasts 206 rooms, convention facilities for more than 1,000 persons, two luxury suites, five dining areas, a club and a swimming pool.

The inn's enclosed courtyard, which houses the swimming pool, is said to be between three and four football fields in area.

Stevens declined to discuss how much Western Associates sold for.

Laughing gas was first used during a tooth extraction in 1844.

Computer Failure Causes Near Collisions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two light Air Force jets nearly collided in midair on Dec. 14 during a 2½-hour computer failure at a federal traffic control facility in Leesburg, Va., an air controller said Thursday.

The Federal Aviation Administration recorded eight incidents in which aircraft came uncomfortably close during the Dec. 14 failure, said the controller, Michael Krause. The most serious involved two Air Force T-39 jets, which flew within 75 feet of each other at an altitude of 28,000 feet over Richmond, Va., he said.

Dennis Feldman, a public spokesman for the FAA, was unable to confirm the near collision when contacted Thursday night.

Krause said controllers are not adequately familiar with a backup radar system to safely monitor air traffic when the 4-year-old computerized system breaks down.

Krause, a representative of the safety council of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, said that during the past six months the computer had been out of action between 12 and 15 hours for periods ranging from a few seconds to a few hours.

Components of the computer control system also failed for four hours on Dec. 16 and again on Dec. 19, when "for several hours the computer was up and down," Krause said.

PATCO has been "complaining about the failures for some time," Krause said, although he described the computer system as a "great tool."

However, because of the tremendous work load FAA controllers face, Krause said, "there is absolutely no training provided on the backup system for new controllers — and little chance for the old controllers to practice.

"After you revert to the broad-band (backup radar) system, even if you're an experienced controller, it will take you two, three, perhaps 10 minutes to bring the air traffic situation under control," Krause said.

Youths Sentenced On Arson Charges

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — A juvenile court judge has recommended a year in a youth development center for a 16-year-old who was one of three youths charged with burning four rural churches last month.

Judge Paul Plunkett turned the unidentified Augusta youth over to the state Department of Human Resources on Wednesday.

The three were charged with starting fires Dec. 18 in Wilkes and Lincoln Counties in east Georgia. Another 16-year-old was sentenced earlier to up to two years in a detention home. The third youth, 17-year-old Roy Keith Palmer of Lincoln County, is free on $40,000 bond after being bound over to grand juries in Lincoln and Wilkes counties on arson charges.

U.S. Troops Set To Be Deactivated

WASHINGTON (UPI) — One-third of the fighting units of the 2nd Infantry Division stationed in South Korea will be deactivated as it is withdrawn over the next four years, an Army spokesman said today.

The move will involve one of the division's three combat brigades, or about 3,900 men.

The first of the brigades is scheduled to return to the United States at the end of 1978 as part of President Carter's troop withdrawal plan. The second brigade is scheduled for withdrawal in 1980 and the final brigade in either 1981 or 1982.

Air Force units and a few non-combat troops will be left in South Korea, but about 33,000 of the 39,000 troops now there will be withdrawn. A spokesmen said several support units that will be pulled out with the 14,000-man 2nd Division will probably be deactivated.

The structure of the 2nd Division will remain in the active Army, but the spokesman said commanders made a final decision in recent weeks to put one its brigades into the Army reserve. Which of the three in the withdrawal timetable will be affected is not yet known, he said.

The unit would be manned by civilian reservists who will attend weekend drills and be subject to mobilization to "round out" the two active brigades if the division is again sent overseas in a crisis.

Senior Army commanders conceded the move would have some affect on overall Army readiness. Three of the Army's 16 active divisions are already organized on a similar "roundout" basis and would take about a month to get their full fighting strength mobilized.

The Army had previously said it was considering such a move, as well as a plan to "mechanize" the division with additional tanks and armored troop carriers at a cost of $500 million or more. A spokesman said no final decision has yet been made on mechanization, which involves budgetary questions.

The division's future equipment and shape also depends to some degree on where it is stationed in the United States, a question that has become embroiled in regional politics.

The spokesman said recommendations on the bases to be used would not be ready for Defense Secretary Harold Brown at least until April, instead of this month as originally planned. Other sources said the process would likely take even longer.

The Army leadership had favored Fort Bliss as a base for the division with Camp Drum, N.Y., as a second choice.

Fort Benning, Ga., is also under consideration and the Army has started studies on another plan that would divide the remaining active duty units of the 2nd Division among Fort Dix, N.J.; Fort Devens, Mass., and Camp Drum.

The three-base plan — which sources said was opposed by the Army — arose largely as a result of the Northeast-Midwest Economic Advancement Coalition, an alliance of congressmen and governors who have pressured the administration for more military spending in their areas.

Elizabeth Ray 'Sorry' For Hays

By STEVEN R. HURST

WASHINGTON (AP) — Elizabeth Ray says she exposed her affair with former Rep. Wayne L. Hays to get publicity and now feels sorry for the deposed congressman, whom she calls "an honest, good man."

"It was just a front to get attention, to get people to notice me," Miss Ray said in a telephone interview Thursday.

Miss Ray spurred a congressional scandal in 1976 when she announced that Hays, then the powerful chairman of the House Administration Committee, paid her $14,000 a year in public funds to be his mistress.

Within months, Hays was forced to resign his seat in Congress and retire to his Ohio farm.

Meanwhile, Hays announced on Thursday that he will "run for something" in this year's election. His political reappearance could come in a run for the Ohio legislature, where he served as a senator in 1941 and 1942.

Miss Ray said she wishes Hays well as he resumes his political career.

"I haven't talked to him," she said. "But I really do wish him well. I'm sincere in that. The other thing is passed.

"I'm sorry about it," she added. "I feel he's an honest, good man."

Miss Ray said she revealed the relationship because it was a period in her life when she felt the need for attention.

At the time, she told a markedly different story. She said she was afraid of Hays.

The affair occurred about the same time as the scandal between former Rep. Wilbur Mills and stripper Fanne Foxe, and Miss Ray at the time quoted Hays as saying: "If a broad did that to me, she wouldn't be around writing books...She'd be six feet under." Miss Ray was writing a book at the time, without Hays' knowledge.

She also said then that she made the affair public because of "the things he pressed me to do," but she refused to elaborate.

Throughout the scandal, Hays admitted he had had a "personal relationship" with Miss Ray, but insisted it was not related to her job and existed prior to his marriage.

In the interview Thursday, Miss Ray also said she wants to become a member of the Roman Catholic Church.

"I feel good when I'm in church. I've made a lot of friends in the parish," she explained.

She also said she's studying acting and voice in New York City in preparation of a night club act — "singing and dancing" — to open this spring in Los Angeles.

"I definitely hope some day to be a superstar, so people will say, 'She can really act. She really can do that right,'" she said.

Miss Ray moved from Washington to New York three months ago to be closer to the theatrical world.

WINE OUTPUT DROPS

PARIS (AP) — France's wine production for 1977 was the lowest in eight years, dropping 28 percent from the abundant year of 1976, the Finance Ministry said. French vintners made about 135 million gallons of wine in 1977, the ministry reported.

French Treat Carter Royally

VERSAILLES, France (UPI) — Peanut farmer Jimmy Carter may have abolished the imperial presidency at home, but overseas it is alive and well and living in splendor.

For instance, there was the New Year's Eve caviar banquet in the Shah of Iran's palace. There was the Saudi Arabian feast in Riyadh. And even the Communists put on a gala in Warsaw.

But all those bashes were outdone by the state dinner and reception that President Valery Giscard d'Estaing put on at Versailles, the palace which French kings and Napoleon called home. n

Palace custodians said it was one of the biggest parties Versailles has seen since France abolished the monarchy for good a century ago.

In deference to Carter's down-home ways, the men wore dark suits instead of dinner jackets or tail coats. But the women were plendorous in long dresses.

Carter's wife Rosalynn was stunning in a long-sleeved black blouse with huge rhinestone buttons, emerald green sash and gathered, pale beige skirt.

Giscard's wife Anne-Aymone looked like a Spanish princess in black bodice and full skirt with sunbirst of gold luce.

The dinner itself was held at the Grand Trianon Palace, a pink marble annex which Louis XIV built for one of his mistresses, Madame de Maintenon.

The menu: foie gras glazed with essence of truffles to begin. As the main course, aiguillette de Charolais en croute a-l'ancienne, meaning a slice of beef in paper-thin layers of crust with a sauce and potato and mushroom pudding. Then came a lettuce salad with fresh herbs, assorted French cheeses and framboises glacees Trianon, or a raspberry parfait.

The wines included a sweet white Chateau d'Yquem 1973, a red Chateau Lafite bordeaux, 1962 and Dom Ruynart champagne.

Tables for 130 guests including French cabinet ministers, intellectuals and entertainers were laid with white voile tablecloths embroidered with stars in gold thread.

Dinner was served on 19th century Sevres porcelain plates.

Meanwhile, over in the main palace, a troop of Republican Guardsmen on bay horses stood guard with drawn sabers in the vast lantern-lighted cobblestone courtyard.

Inside, 4,000 guests for the after-dinner reception strolled through halls and salons equipped with long tables laden with champagne. Half a dozen string and woodwind orchestras played military airs or Bach and Mozart. After dinner, Carter drove around the vast palace, all its windows alight in the wintry darkness.

Union Sets Protest Against Submarine

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP) — The Auckland Trades Union Council will meet next Thursday to decide what protest to make when the American nuclear submarine Pintado docks here two days later, the TUC president said.

Maritime unions staged port strikes to protest the previous arrivals of U.S. atomic-powered vessels in August 1976 and September 1977. But TUC President G.H. Andersen said other unions would join in the protest this time.

North Parkway Residents Seek Traffic Signal

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

It's difficult for the Rev. Roy Jones to ignore the intersection of Parkway Drive and Zenith Avenue.

He can see it from his front porch and usually has to cross the northeast Lubbock intersection when leaving his house.

And Jones, the Community Development sector leader for the North Parkway area, says a traffic signal is urgently needed to permit traffic on Zenith Avenue to cross bustling Parkway Drive.

However, Jones' feelings and observations about the intersection don't match those of the state highway department. And, because Parkway is a state-maintained highway (U.S. 82), no light can be installed.

And Jones is fed up. As sector leader he's scheduled a public meeting at 8 p.m., Jan. 18, at the Parkway Church of the Nazarene to "formalize a plan to make people know we're serious about getting a light here."

If Jones' friends and neighbors concur, that plan of action may take the form of a blockade of the intersection, and Jones has told city officials so.

"We didn't get results so we have to resort to something else," Jones said.

The sector residents already determined the traffic light was a priority item for the North Parkway area, he said.

"We've had our share of wrecks here," Jones said, adding "it's almost impossible to get out on Parkway from Zenith" because of the volume of traffic.

The U.S. highway traffic is aggravated by the presence of three schools in the area — Alderson Junior High and Bozeman and Parkway Elementary Schools — causing students to have to dodge speeding cars on the road.

The effort to get a signal at Parkway and Zenith is nearly seven years old, beginning with a 1971 petition asking the city for a light.

The city Traffic Engineering Department made a study of the intersection in February 1971 and again in October of the same year. The conclusion: "There were not sufficient traffic volumes or other warrants to justify the installation of a traffic signal at this location."

In March 1975 the city again was asked to install a light. Traffic Engineering conducted a traffic count and pedestrian count and determined "some of the requests are warranted for a traffic signal."

The city then passed the request on to the highway department and asked that the intersection be studied for the "installation of a semi-actuated traffic signal with pedestrian actuations."

The highway department studied the traffic volume, the interruption of continuous traffic, the number of pedestrians and the number of accidents occurring at the intersection during a year.

Engineers conducting the survey found 21 collisions occurred at the intersection during the preceding 12 months, 10 of which were caused by failure to yield right of way, and four by disregarding stop signs.

A speed check of vehicles on Parkway Drive revealed drivers exceeding the posted 45 mph speed limit by as much as 25 mph.

However, the department concluded no signal was warranted.

Early last year the same scenario was replayed with identical results. In fact, department engineers determined conditions were getting better, not worse, at the intersection.

W. C. "Mickey" Powell, senior traffic engineer with the highway department, said the May 1977 study showed a drop in traffic volume on Zenith and a reduction in the number of accidents at the intersection.

A July 1977 letter from the highway department noted that "a spot check of the speeds approaching this intersection still indicates that additional enforcement is required" and recommended "strict enforcement" of traffic laws at the intersection.

"It is the opinion of this office that until enforcement of existing controls for traffic begins, traffic signals or flashing beacons will not alleviate problems encountered by the motorists at this intersection," the letter continued.

Responding in a letter, City Mgr. Larry Cunningham said the Lubbock Police Department would be asked to step up enforcement in the area, but Cunningham said he did not believe additional enforcement was the complete solution.

"Although we agree that additional enforcement will be helpful, we believe that additional traffic control measures should be taken," the letter said. Cunningham asked the highway department to "continue to monitor this situation to assist us with a flashing beacon or some other traffic control device."

Since that time the highway department has "channelized" the intersection which included painting left turn lanes on Parkway and installing islands on Zenith. In addition, more stop signs were installed.

Powell said the channelization was preferable to a traffic light because a signal is "maximum control."

"We try to use a lower means of control without the inconvenience," he said.

However, since those modifications were completed in mid-August, the intersection has been the scene of at least five accidents.

The North Parkway residents certainly will find sympathetic ears within the highway department and city hall.

"I don't feel we're fully opposed to it at this point," Powell said, adding he had been hopeful the intersection would meet the required conditions when it was last studied.

Assistant City Mgr. Jim Blagg said the city has "been in support of the situation all along, but the problem is one of getting the state to go along with us in view of the requirements."

Blagg said the city would not let the neighborhood down and would "continue its efforts to get a sign out there."

However, it seems unlikely a traffic light will be forthcoming although Community Development funds to pay for the $18,000 to $20,000 project become available June 1.

But Rev. Jones isn't satisfied with sympathy and said he "doesn't think they (the city officials) are making any effort."

"The city feels like it is needed, but they say 'There's nothing we can do,'" Jones said. "I don't know about their effort; I think they've gone to sleep on this.

"I've even asked for a timed light, or just a flashing signal light — something to slow the traffic down," he said.

Jones said if the intersection were in any other part of town, a traffic light already would be in place.

"You drive around other parts of town and they have a traffic light at every trail.

"They're just not concerned about his part of town. They don't really care if the place deteriorates."

But Jones said the residents of his sector won't give up. "They're willing to do whatever is necessary to get a light," he said.

UH Regents To Get Report On Probe

HOUSTON (UPI) — University of Houston regents today are expected to receive an interim report on an investigation into the short-term investment practices of a former financial analyst with the school, according to regents chairman Aaron J. Farfel.

Although the former analyst Samuel A. Harwell has not been accused of any wrongdoing, the investments have drawn the attention of state and federal regulatory agencies.

Investigators reported late last year that Harwell, 34, invested in government securities, which are specifically approved by Texas law, but in a manner that involved substantial risks.

Part of the investigation involves efforts by independent auditors to determine the extent of the investments and whether the university has realized a gain or a loss.

As a result of current financial troubles Furfel said measures are being developed to improve the university's accounting system.

Periodic reports on short-term investments were not considered necessary by the school's regents, although such reports are required at other state universities to avoid financial embarrassment.

"There was a policy that short-term investments did not require that (periodic reports) because there were so few things one could do prudently," Farfel said.

Farfel said the UH regents learned only in November that Harwell had invested short-term funds in what are usually considered long-term government securities. These are government guuranteed bonds issued by the Government National Mortgage Association and are called Ginnie Maes.

Regents also learned that Harwell had built "pyramids" of Ginnie Maes by borrowing on one bond to reinvest in another. Theoretically this method of investment could multiply the university's return on its investment, but it also increased the chance of loss. Farfel said if the regents had known the nature of Hurwell's investments, they would have quickly stopped the practice.

Prison Sentences Handed Down In Murder Convictions Here

Two Lubbock men received prison terms Thursday after pleading guilty to murder charges before 72nd Dist. Judge Denzil Bevers.

One of the defendants, Adam Montoya, had been freed on parole after being convicted of armed robbery in 1971.

Montoya, 24, who formerly resided at 821 Vanda Ave., was assessed a 15-year penitentiary stint after pleading guilty to the June 26, 1977, murder of Frank Zavala, 33.

The victim was found dead by police after gunfire erupted inside a residence at 301 Hazelwood Ave.

According to stipulated testimony from one witness, a fight began after Zavala became angry at Montoya for addressing a woman present as "babe."

In another case, Jesse Garza, 38, was assessed a 10-year prison term after pleading guilty to the June 19, 1971, murder of Pat Garcia, 24.

Garza admitted stabbing Garcia to death after they had argued about some beer.

The fatal incident took place inside Garza's former residence at 2937 E. Baylor St.

Police arrived to find the victim sprawled dead across a chair. Garza was found asleep in a bedroom. Officers said blood was found on pants and shoes inside the bedroom, and also at other locations at the residence.

In a statement introduced into evidence by Asst. Dist. Atty. Sam Oatman, Garza admitted stabbing Garcia "15 or 20 times" and then breaking "a quart of beer over his head."

"The only reason I killed the boy was because I got mad when we had the argument over the beer," the statement reads.

According to the document, Garza stabbed the victim three or four times and then unsuccessfully tried to get him to leave.

"...he wouldn't leave and then he kept running his head off and I told him that I was going to have to do something about it and then I finished him off," the statement says.

Harold Ellis Jackson, 28, who lived at 1722 E. Bates St. at the time of the offense, was handed an eight-year prison term after pleading guilty to burglary of a building.

Jackson admitted participating in the Oct. 11, 1977, break-in of The Country Inn motel at 4105 19th St.

Jackie Dennis North, 30, formerly of 6001 34th St., Space 235, was assessed a four-year term after pleading guilty to possession of heroin.

North admitted possessing heroin May 13, 1977. According to stipulated testimony, a narcotics agent observed North drop an object which allegedly contained packets of heroin.

The incident occurred in the 4600 block of Avenue H.

According to the agent, North apparently was trying to get rid of the packets after noticing he was being observed.

Also Thursday, Rodger Keith Welch was assessed a four-year prison term after pleading guilty to burglary of a building.

Welch, 22, admitted burglarizing a building in the 3500 block of Avenue Q Feb. 7, 1977.

In another case, Paul Rodriquez Sepeda, 18, who listed his address as Rt. 10, Box 91-E, was assessed a 10-year probated sentence after pleading guilty to an escape charge.

Sepeda escaped from a sheriff's deputy June 14, 1977, by leaping from a patrol car. He was apprehended six days later.

Water Agency Conflicts Cited

HOUSTON (UPI) — An official of the Texas Department of Water Resources has said some built-in conflicts could plague the new super water agency.

John B. Latchford, assistant director of enforcement and field operations, told a meeting of chemical engineers Thursday the executive chief and the commission are independent of each other.

"I don't know who you would appeal to in a case like that," he told the group.

Latchford said no conflicts have yet occurred in the department which merges the functions of the now-defunct Texas Water Quality Board, the Texas Water Development Board and the Water Rights Commission.

The new agency is designed to allocate water, clean water, build dams and other water-related projects.

Latchford said he was unsure what would happen if the Texas Water Commission rejects a water quality or water rights permit approved by the agency's executive director.

Latchford said the new agency has some disadvantages.

"One is that you can pass the buck to a lot more people, now," he said.

Arabian Financiers Purchasing Prestigious London Real Estate

LONDON (AP) — A funny thing happened to Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin when he was in town recently for a chat with British Prime Minister Jim Callaghan.

While he was asleep in his trundle bed at the Carlton Towers, long a favorite with Jewish tourists, Arab interests bought the hotel out from under him.

"But breakfast arrived on the dot as usual," confided one of his aides. "We thought they might cut off our room service with the explanation that the new owners were taking inventory."

The Arab investors, oddly enough, had purchased a hotel in posh Belgravia where on a Sunday morning not too long ago P.L.O. gunmen shot up the coffee shop, injuring a number of Jewish patrons who gathered there regularly for brunch. The grill at the Carlton Towers was also a popular choice for Bar Mitzvah celebrations.

Begin's experience with London's changing real estate scene is another example of what the British tabloids call "the Arabization of London.'

In the last few years Arab financiers have bought up the prestigious Dorchester in Park Lane, the Park Tower overlooking Hyde Park and the Chelsea Hotel in Knightsbridge. Some of London's most expensive town houses and apartments and a number of stately homes in the surrounding countryside have passed into Arab hands at prices that have rocked the real estate market. Long-term leases have doubled in price in the last few years, largely due to the easy availability of well-heeled Middle East customers.

Each summer more than 150,000 Arab visitors descend on London, fleeing the intense heat of the sheikhdoms in the Persian Gulf where petrodollars accumulate with each departing tanker. Some maintain year-round homes in London, send their children to the elite prep schools, buy an extra Rolls-Royce or Bentley for holiday use about town and arrange to have a medical check-up or a major operation at the exclusive Wellington Hospital. The fighting in Beirut has brought thousands more gilt-edged refugees here.

Last Christmas a Saudi prince paid a princely sum in staff wages to keep Harrod's open an extra hour just for him so he could do his shopping in unhurried privacy.

Every hotel in town has a tale of an oil sheik giving away his Bentley or his Mercedes as a tip to the doorman at the end of his visit or bribing the banquet manager to slaughter a goat in his suite.

One story making the rounds tells of two petroleum princes from Kuwait who dropped into Jack Barclay's auto dealership in Mayfair and bought identical Silver Jubilee Rolls Royces. Each whipped out a checkbook, but one waved the other off:

"No, Akmid," he tut-tutted. "You got the lunch. I'll get this one."

Then there was the impoverished student who passed himself off as a crown prince from one of the emirates, had calling cards printed that got him a suite at Claridge's, unlimited credit at Ladbroke's and Croikford's gaming houses, bows and the best tables from condescending maitre d's at all the in-places until the Bobbies closed in. It turned out he was a Nigerian who didn't know Abu Dhabi from Addis Ababa.

Like Kennedy Airport in New York, London's Heathrow has gone bilingual on all its signs, only here the combination is English and Arabic, instead of English and Spanish. Most shops along Oxford and Regent streets price their wares in Arabic numbers, and Middle East banks, nightclubs and restaurants have proliferated throughout the city. The handsome old Kensington Town Hall is now a branch of the Iranian bank Melli.

Swarthy gentlemen fingering worry beads, mysterious ladies in dark flowing robes and black leather burka face masks, jangling with gold jewelry, and Bedouin sheiks in hooded burnooses tassled in silk and gold are a common sight at Fortnum & Mason's, the fashionable Piccadilly general store for the landed gentry.

Away from the strict religious codes of their desert homelands, the visitors from the east have gained a reputation as the playboys of the Western world, the high rollers at the Soho casinos, the last of the big spenders on girls, jewelry and gourmet meals among Britain's rapidly vanishing ancient and nouveau riche.

A Mayfair hostess who ordered gallons of orange juice to oblige the Koranic scruples of her guests from Araby was surprised to find them knocking back the Scotch neat and quick, just like the natives.

"It cuts the desert dust," explained a son of the sand and brother to the wind who had just hobbled his Porsche outside. He not only wished them all Happy New Year in the most charming Eton accent but promised not to raise oil prices more than 20 per cent at the next OPEC frolic.

U.S. Home Firm Sets Merger

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Hallcraft Homes Inc. will become a subsidiary of the largest home-building firm in Canada, officials of the financially ailing Phoenix company said.

Hallcraft is being merged into a new wholly owned Colorado-based subsidiary of Nu-West Development Corp., which in turn is owned by Nu-West Development Corp. Ltd., of Calgary, Canada, officials said Wednesday.

Hallcraft will continue to operate under its own name with Phoenix headquarters and its present management team will remain for at least two years under terms of the Hallcraft "plan of reorganization" signed Dec. 30 and made public Wednesday.

Under the agreement, Hallcraft shareholders would own 20 percent of the new Nu-West subsidiary, and Nu-West of Colorado would own 80 percent.

Nu-West of Colorado also will make a tender offer, at a price to be determined, to buy for cash Hallcraft's outstanding 5¾ percent convertible, subordinate debentures. The price has not been determined. At least 85 percent of the $15 million in debentures outstanding must be tendered for the deal to go through, officials said.

Other conditions for the reorganization merger include clearance with the Securities and Exchange Commission, gaining approval by Hallcraft stockholders and obtaining a favorable tax ruling on the transaction from the Internal Revenue Service.

The process is expected to be completed by June 30.

HANDICAP IS A MINOR PROBLEM — Even though he has to wear a leg brace and use a crutch while recovering from Legg-Calva Perthis, which causes the hip sockets to deteriorate and crumble away, 11-year-old Tony Carter of Sacramento doesn't let his handicap slow down his mobility. He simply mounts his skateboard and glides away. (AP Laserphoto)

Search On For Better Detector

By LEROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — The increase in counterfeit money in circulation has spurred a search for reasonably priced superior detector machines.

Former Secret Service agent Carmine Motto thinks the Unimark Currency Validator made by Fenco-Unimark, Cinnaminson, N.J., is a step in that direction.

Motto, who spent years tracking down counterfeiters for the Secret Service, said he had tested a number of counterfeit detecting machines and the new Unimark appeared to work nearly all the time while most others were only 60 to 70 percent effective.

The Unimark comes in two models, one to be used on a counter top, the other small enough to fit into the drawer of a standard cash register. Selling for $105 and $125, they are within reach of virtually any size business.

They appear to do a lot more than the little fluorescent light counterfeit detectors presently in wide use.

These devices do very well at detecting obviously inferior inking color and obvious paper defects but the counterfeiters have so many new photographic and printing aids that much of their product can fool the more simple light-color detectors.

The Unimark, according to Jack R. Lyons, Fenco-Unimark president, contains a minicomputer that enables it to count lines in the fancy engraving, count and check on the sawtooth points and do several other sophisticated measurements.

He said Secret Service and banking officials had asked him not to make public all the things his machine can do.

He said years of experience have proved that counterfeiters are sophisticated. "If they find out too quickly what Unimark can do, they are quite capable of taking effentive countermeasures."

Motto said counterfeiters don't really expect their phony green goods to fool Secret Service agents. "Their goal is the quick deal," he said. "If their phony bills can fool only the first one or two persons they are passed to, that gives the counterfeiter and his money passers time to make their killing and move on."

Over most of the nation's history, nine of every 10 bogus bills have been detected and taken out of circulation rather quickly. Moreover, until very recently, counterfeiting was a difficult art and passing the money very risky. The Secret Service says it is reasonably sure that only about $9.3 million worth of counterfeit money was produced in the United States in the five years ended in 1962 and 90 percent of that was soon detected.

But the fast development of excellent photocopying machines, improved automatic photoengraving methods and high speed presses that will turn out 5,000 sheets of high fidelity work in an hour have changed all that. The amount of counterfeit money printed in the five yars ended in 1972 was estimated at $101 million and since then the figure has exceeded $50 million a year.

The counterfeiters sell their product to passers at 20 to 30 cents on the dollar of face denomination. The $20 and $10 bills have been most profitable for them but recently they have been printing $50s and $100s in the hopes of making faster killings.

It is estimated that $35,000 worth of counterfeit money is passed weekly in New York City alone and substantial additional amounts all over the country.

A clerk using the Unimark Validator simply passes the bill under it. If the bill is genuine, a green light shows. If the green light doesn't show, the clerk refuses the bill.

Pharmacist Buys Car With Pennies

PAWTUCKET, R.I. (UPI) — A penny here and a penny there adds up.

Pharmacist Norman Rondeau bought a new car Wednesday with 433,000 pennies. The 1 1/2 tons of coins in 86 cloth sacks were taken to the auto dealer in a pickup truck.

Rondeau said he saved pennies paid to him by his customers for four years. He said it's easier than saving dollars.

"When you have a dollar, you're going to spend it, but you're not going to put together a roll of pennies just to take to the store," he said.

GROWING OLDER

Senior Citizens Have Individual Interests

By LOU COTTIN

We're all aging. We started aging the minute the obstetrician slapped our little red behinds. The doctor — or midwife — took a look and said the magic words: "a boy" or "a girl."

We lived a number of weeks as infants, a number of months as babies. We went on to several years of childhood.

Then we went through our preteens, teens, youth, early manhood and womanhood, middle-age. Each period of life meant new aspirations, associations and our contemporaries.

During all those years, we lived by the standards — and for the approval — of our contemporaries. Each successive age level set the nature, often the style, or our activities. We also knew that we would, as the years went by, partake of the activities of the age group ahead of ours. Our ways, our actions, our dreams had new perspectives over 5-to 10-year period.

So it was through our young lives as we moved in stages toward maturity. That was the real process of aging.

Then, through some strange magic, the process stopped. At age 60 or upon retirement from some gainful occupation, we stopped aging altogether.

We became the "aged."

Between retirement and death, however old we are, we are now classed as a single group with identical interests. By whatever name we are called "senior citizens" or "older Americans," we are "the aged." (We were once called "golden agers." But these days the name no longer fits. The gold turned out to be brass.)

All of us now are placed in one big box. All of us are lumped together, judged as a single age group. No differences among us are considered. We are all equal receivers of "services for the aging."

Think of this as a problem in simple arithmetic. We have senior agers now 85 years old. They were born in the year 1892. Their experiences during the first 20 years of their lives (to 1912) were considerably different from those of people now age 65.

So, too, were their ideas of right or wrong. Also, their behavior patterns and eductional attainments. This conditioning molded the kinds of eldery people they've become.

But the Administration on Aging, in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, designs its programs for the "aging." Senior club directors serve the "aging." City, county and state offices plan for the "aging." The word has no practical meaning. When everybody talks "aging" the word "aging" ceases to talk.

The differences among older people deserve consideration. The computerized projects like Medicare or Medicaid are for all of us. But only about 15 percent of us participate in noncomputerized social projects fro seniors The reason is plain: Those programs are not designed for the separate age groups among us.

It is time for institutions that seek to serve those of us over 65 to redesign their programs. The style and content of those projects must be related to our different ages and varied backgrounds.

That way, we may finally receive that practical assistance we need. That way, we may also contribute one to another — and to our communities.

RESOLUTIONS AND REMINDERS — Signs at Lubbock churches are sprinkled with good advice for the memberships and the public for a New Year, and reminders, too, like this one at Faith Assembly of God Church, located at 5426 50th St.: "Some Resolutions Go In One Year And Out The Other." Another good one is on Broadway Church of Christ's sign. It reads: "If you turn your back on God, any direction you go is wrong." Broadway Church of Christ is located at 1924 Broadway. Two clever messages are on the sign of Calvary Baptist Church at 1921 18th St. On one side it reads: "Happiness Comes From The Health of The Soul" and on the other: "Flattery Is Like Perfume, Smell It, Don't Swallow It." The first message can be read by motorists going south on Avenue T; and the second message can be read by northbound motorists on Avenue T and East-West motorists on 19th Street. Church Panel Studies Trends

"Trends of Both the Church and the World" will be studied in depth by the Committee on Research and Planning for the Northwest Texas Conference of the United Methodist Church, at a meeting scheduled today through Sunday at Camp Butman near Merkel, between Abilene and Sweetwater.

The committee will meet as a program-developing group, leaders said, and will seek to develop relevant to the needs of both the church and the world.

Members of the committee the Rev. William H. Wright, chairman, pastor of the Idalou First United Methodist Church; Peter Reynolds of Midland; Mrs. Helen Releford of Lubbock; Mrs. Betty Anderson of Lubbock; Mrs. Jan Greenwalt Curry of Lubbock; Dr. Walter Cartwright, professor of sociology at Texas Tech University; the Rev. Bruce Parks of Tulia; the Rev. Al Jennings of Abernathy; the Rev. Melvin Roark of Dimmitt; and James Boyett of Abilene. The Rev. Jarrell Sharp is official Cabinet representative; and the Rev. Tom Nagle is official Conference staff representative.

Volunteer consultants from various sectors of the Northwest Texas Conference include: Dr. James Osborn, associate dean of agricultural sciences and chairman of agricultural economics at Texas Tech University; Dr. Thomas K. Kim, president of McMurry College at Abilene, and a well known student of higher education and economics; Dr. Carl Andersen, Chairman of the department of home and family Life at Texas Tech University; Dr. Ivan Barber, Lubbock physician in private practice; Dr. Carolyn Ater, associate professor of home economics at Texas Tech University, with a specialty in geriatrics and problems of the aging; and Dr. H.G. Andrews, practicing in Stamford.

In addition to the consultants, the following persons are related to the church, per se, and also will serve as consultants to the committee: Rev. Ivan Allen, conference ds statistician; Rev. Hector Gonzales, Rio Grande Conference representative; Dr. Sam Auslam of the Northwest Texas Conference staff; Rev. C.B. Melton, conference treasurer; Rita Crowell and Dr. Darris Egger, NWTC representatives; Bishop Alsie Carleton and his Cabinet of Albuquerque; Dr. W.A. Aplling of Pampa; the Rev. Carlton Thomson of Plainview; Dr. J. Walter Browers of Amarillo; the Rev. Jim Pickens of Abilene; the Rev. William M. Wilkinson of Lubbock; Dr. Lloyd Hughes of Big Spring; and the Rev. Jarrell Sharp of Seymour.

The Committee on Research and Planning was organized in May 1977. The committee was then divided into two groups for more study. One group (internal fact base group) was assigned to gather data from within the church itself. The other group (external fact base group) was assigned to gather data from the society in which the church exists. Findings of the two groups will furnish data for major study at the Camp Butman parley, leaders said.

The committee will channel information and interpretations in a report to the Annual Conference Council On Ministries in February of this year.

Chairman Wright said, "It is our hope to do our work well enough to enable the church in our conference to lead the world instead of reacting to the world's whims and 'contrary winds.'"

Pastors, Chaplains Answer Call In Galveston Tragedy

GALVESTON (Special)-When a series of explosions ripped through a grain elevator here, leaving 10 or more dead and at least 23 injured, a call was issued for ministers and chaplains of the city to help.

Rev. Grayson Glass, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Galveston, relates that 20 or more pastors and chaplains waited to minister in the emergency rooms of hospitals.

A nurse quipped to a medical doctor: "It is good to have the God Squad on call!"

Rev. Glass reports that the residents of Galveston were "shocked and stunned" by the tragedy.

Denton Bassett, chaplain at the University of Texas medical branch located here, was among the chaplains and ministers who helped the injured and their families.

Sisters Plan 50th Year Celebration

Our Lady of Victory Missionary Sisters Frances Meyer, Catherine Marie Ganse, Regina Foppe and Miriam Doyle, stationed at St. Joseph's Convent here, are preparing to celebrate the 50th year of the Victory Noll Sisters in the Diocese of Amarillo in 1978.

The convent here is located at 1602 1st St.

The first convent was opened in Lubbock, Sept. 8, 1928, before St. Joseph's was established as a parish and before the city's Catholics even had a resident pastor.

A new religious society emerged, dedicated to religious education, social work and home nursing. On Aug. 5, 1922, the first two members of the Society of Missionary Catechists of Our Blessed Lady of Victory arrived at Santa Fe, N.M. They made their pledge of stability before the late Archbishop Albert Daeger and soon began their work in the area of Wagon Mound and Watrous, N.M.

On Oct. 22, 1927, Bishop Rudolph A. Gerken of Amarillo invited the small new community to his diocese. Arriving in Lubbock, Sept. 8, 1928, the pioneer Sisters found much to do for the poor families and scattered Catholic population.

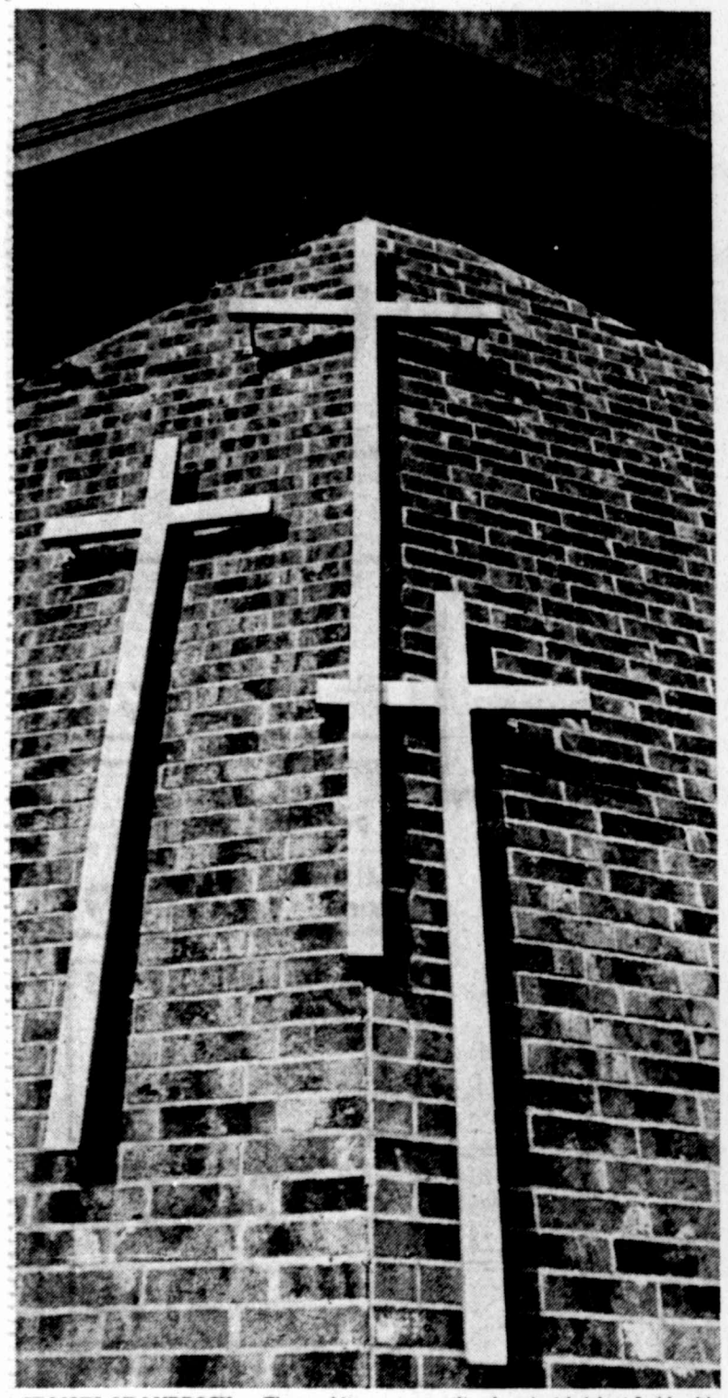
In addition to the classes for children and adults, there were home visits, mostly for health services, sewing and homemaking classes for mothers. Also, there was work and classes for Girl Scouts and Brownies, choir and altarboy training and general parish work. Cooperation with public school personnel and professional persons was sought and obtained as Lubbock grew.

Not only Lubbock, but surrounding communities knew the services of the Victory Noll Sisters, who traveled many miles every week to reach places such as Morton, Pep, Slaton, Tahoka, Plainview, Littlefield, Levelland, Brownfield, and others.

As other parishes were established and parochial schools opened, the field of work also changed, with new emphasis on training of the laity to teach Confraternity of Christian Doctrine classes.

Today, 50 years later, they are carrying on the same work, with adaptations to the times, but the same simple spirit which marked their founding continues "to live on."

The work of the Congregation, now known as Our Lady of Victory Missionary Sisters, radiates from the Motherhouse at Huntington, Ind.



CROSSES OF LUBBOCK — Three white crosses outlined against brick at Lubbock's Faith Assembly of God Church at 5426 50th St., are reminders of the Holy Trinity: God, the Father; God the Son, and God the Holy Spirit. The three crosses are on the front of the sanctuary, which faces busy 50th Street. (Staff Photo by Norm Tindell)

Epiphany Recalls Visit Of Magi

The Christmas season traditionally concludes with the Feast of the Epiphany Jan. 6 (today), which recalls the visit of the Magi to the Christ Child, as told in the Gospel of St. Matthew.

Although the Feast of the Epiphany is interpreted in different ways in different countries, and in spite of the fact it has become largely neglected in 20th Century America, it still stands as an annual reminder of the relevance of Christian faith for all people in all situations in all times and in all places, according to the Clergy Column in The Episele, publication of Lubbock's St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

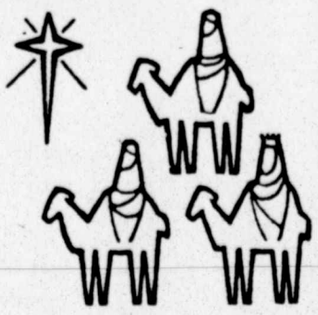
The Christian feast celebrated Jan. 6 originated and still is observed in the Eastern Church. It commemorated the baptism of Christ and secondary the marriage feast at Cana. But since the 5th Century, in the Western Church, Epiphany commemorates the coming of the Magi as the occasion of the first manifestation of Christ to the Gentiles.

The Feast of Epiphany also was called by the Greek fathers of the 14th Century the "Day of Light", pertaining to the illumination of Jesus.

In the Teutonic East, Epiphany has become the Festival of The Three Kings (the Magi), or simply "Twelfth Day."

A PRAYER FOR EPIPHANY

O God, who by the leading of a star showed to the visitors from the East the glory of your only-begotten Son: Grant us that, being led by the light of your Holy Spirit, we may, in adoring love and lowliest reverence, yield ourselves to your service; that your kingdom of righteousness and peace may be advanced among all nations, to the glory of your name; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.



Paper Lists Questions For 1978

The Texas Methodist newspaper listed several questions it said could be used to reveal the criteria of what kind of year 1977 was in churches, and also what kind of year 1978 will be.

It explained: "When Jan. 1, 1979, rolls around, we hope each church can answer the following questions with resounding affirmation:"

—Did persons in the church develop a deeper spirtuality?

—Did the church make strides in efforts to influence society toward a lifestyle that better reflects the Christian gospel?

—Did the church work diligently to "preach the Good News to the poor, proclaim liberty to the captives, recover the sight of the blind and set free the oppressed?

—Did the church help people find happiness, justice and dignity?

—Did Christians reach out with the gospel to those who never have heard the Word and to those to whom the Good News has been heard as "bad news?"

Methodist Women Set Observance

United Methodist Women of the Lubbock District will celebrate Epiphany with a time of worship, including prayer and meditation, from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. Sunday at Agape United Methodist Church in Lubbock.

The church is located at 1215 Slide Road.

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM The Newspaper Bible

Rev. 16: 20-21, 17:1-11 The Living Bible

20 And islands vanished, and mountains flattened out,
21 And there was an incredible hailstorm from heaven; hailstones weighing a hundred pounds fell from the sky onto the people below, and they cursed God because of the terrible hail.

CHAPTER 17

1 One of the seven angels who had poured out the plagues came over and talked with me. "Come with me," he said, "and I will show you what is going to happen to the Notorious Prostitute, who sits upon the many waters of the world.
2 The kings of the world have had immoral relations with her, and the people of the earth have been made drunk by the wine of her immorality."
3 So the angel took me in spirit into the wilderness. There I saw a woman sitting on a scarlet animal that had seven heads and ten horns,[1] written all over with blasphemies against God.
4 The woman wore purple and scarlet clothing and beautiful jewelry made of gold and precious gems and pearls, and held in her hand a golden goblet full of obscenities.
5 A mysterious caption was written on her forehead: "Babylon the Great, Mother of Prostitutes and of Idol Worship Everywhere around the World."
6 I could see that she was drunk—drunk with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus she had killed. I stared at her in horror.
7 "Why are you so surprised?" the angel asked. "I'll tell you who she is and what the animal she is riding represents.
8 He was alive but isn't now. And yet, soon he will come up out of the bottomless pit and go to eternal destruction;[2] and the people of earth, whose names have not been written in the Book of Life before the world began, will be dumbfounded at his reappearance after being dead.[3]
9 And now think hard: his seven heads represent a certain city[4] built on seven hills where this woman has her residence.
10 They also represent seven kings. Five have already fallen, the sixth now reigns, and the seventh is yet to come, but his reign will be brief.
11 The scarlet animal that died is the eighth king, having reigned before as one of the seven; after his second reign, he, too, will go to his doom.[5]

PLANNING HIS FUTURE...

. . . what a responsibility!

That is the crux of parenthood. We not only rear our children, providing for their needs and development, but we make important decisions that can have lasting impact on their lives.

One vital decision concerns their opportunity for spiritual growth. It is a blessing to grow up in a land where faith and freedom are revered. But it is a fact of family life that parents decide whether or not to cultivate their children's moral and religious development.

The churches of our community are eager to help you mold the convictions and character of your children. Welcome their help.

Regional Health Systems Panel May Oppose New City Hospital

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Regional health planners hinted strongly Thursday they will oppose creation of the proposed new Surgical Hospital of Lubbock.

They said the project, formulated by an Alabama-based management firm, appears unnecessary because the Lubbock area already has enough hospital beds. They also said the project may further dilute the supply of nurses in the area and fuel inflation in local medical costs.

The South Plains Health Systems executive committee did not officially come out against Brookwood Health Services, Inc.'s, plan t convert the now-vacant Lubbock Medical Center building, 4000 22nd Place, into a new hospital primarily for our-patient surgery by 1979.

But several individual committee members and visitors at the panel's Thursday meeting spoke against the project. And the group voted unanimously to break with past policy and undertake a review of the Brookwood proposal.

That review will serve as a recommendation to the Texas Health Facilities Commission when Brookwood goes before the state agency with a request to reopen the now-unused Medical Center beds for surgical care.

A number of SPHS committee members left no doubt how they want that recommendation to go.

Dr. John Selby, committee chairman, said the Brookwood project would have a "tremendous impact on this community. Already, there is a shortage of professional (hospital) personnel," and creation of another hospital here would further spread out that work force.

Selby also said the Brookwood hospital, which would cater to out-patient surgery, would be a "luxury hospital...only those who can afford it would be admitted."

A visitor at the SPHS session, Sister Maureen Van Der Zee, executive vice president and administrator of St. Mary of the Plains Hospital, noted that the Brookwood facility would be located adjacent to hers.

"If a good share of paying patients go across the street (to proposed Surgical Hospital), where's that going to leave the rest of us?" Sister Maureen asked.

She said she doesn't know where Brookwood would be able to find a staff for the new hospital — then quickly added, "I do too know where they're going to get it. They're going to get it from me."

Other officials said they don't feel Lubbock, with its "critical" nursing shortage, could stand the opening of another hospital — without further hiking nurses' salaries and hospital rates over the city.

The Medical Center building currently is authorized by the state for 200 chronic care beds, even though they aren't in use. Brookwood, which recently bought the building, has asked for a declaratory ruling from the Texas Health Facilities Commission to immediately reactivate those beds, SPHS staff members said.

After the beds are reactivated, the staff suspects, Brookwood will approach the commission again for approval to convert the beds for "acute care" — the designation necessary to accommodate out-patient surgical operations.

The SPHS won't have any say-so on Brookwood's request for a declaratory ruling. However, the local agency will be asked for input when Brookwood seeks to change the designation of the beds.

George Brewer, Methodist Hospital administrator, agreed with the other concerns about the project and said Brookwood's "subtlely (in simply converting beds from one designation to another) is a shell game, I'm afraid...

"It will have the same effect as building a new 200-bed general hospital" in Lubbock.

Brookwood officials say their Surgical Hospital would not hurt the business of other local hospitals because, they say, the Lubbock area's population is growing and the Brookwood facility would offer services presently unavailable here.

Doctor Warns Of Federal Controls

By FRANK COATS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

"When they (the government) control the hospital, they control the patient and control the doctor."

Dr. Louis Gibson, the president of Statewide Health Coordinating Council, came to Lubbock with that warning Thursday and to talk of his organization's recent victory against federally proposed guildelines for health care.

Last September, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare issued a booklet of national guidelines for health planning. When Gov. Dolph Briscoe read the guidelines he called Gibson to get an opinion.

Gisbson thought the plan "disastrous."

The plan would take the control out of local hands and put hospitals and medical care in the firm grip of the government, he said.

The guidelines also would make medical care inaccesible to large areas of the state, he said.

One of the guidelines called for four hospital beds for every 1,000 people in the area. Under this plan, many areas of West Texas would not have hospitals because they would not meet the population requirements, he said.

As many as 27 percent of the hospital beds in Texas would have been reduced, Gibson said.

Gibson and the Statewide Health Coordinating Council spearheaded a movement to get the guidelines modified, since they did not leave room for deviation.

The council presented a position paper, and Briscoe had a letter hand-delivered to President Carter denouncing the guidelines.

The guidelines would be effective, Gibson said, in cities such as Chicago or Houston — places of dense popluation. "But you cannot equate Chicago...with the plains of Texas," he said.

The council is an organization trying to get health care under local control. It has 12 regional councils across the state, and an overseeing board, of which Gibson is president.

The council tried to rally opposition to the guidelines, and Briscoe met with 36 governors to get their help

Mother Of Jailed Texas Woman Says Daughter 'In Good Spirits'

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — The mother of a young Texas woman accused of unspecified violations of security regulations says she feels much better after talking with her jailed daughter.

"Yesterday I was ready to throw myself out of my sixth floor window, but I'm feeling much better today," Mary Boetcher told UPI Thursday after meeting for 45 minutes with her daughter, 22-year-old Terry Fleener.

The meeting took place in a women's penitentiary halfway between Tel Aviv and Jerusalem.

Miss Fleener of San Antonio went on trial before a three-judge bench at the Tel Aviv district court Tuesday on undisclosed espionage-related charges.

Mrs. Boetcher and Dr. Cathreen Edwards,a former teacher of the jailed woman, testified as character witnesses. Neither was permitted to sit through the entire court session or given an indication of the charges against Miss Fleener.

Mrs. Boetcher said her daughter "seemed nervous but in good spirits" during their meeting Thursday."

Both Mrs. Boetcher and Dr. Edwards met with Miss Fleener Monday on the eve of the trial.

Felicia Langer, Miss Fleener's attorney, said the Texas woman is likely to be found guilty when the court meets to hand down sentence Monday.

Miss Fleener's 23rd birthday falls on Sunday.

"The atmosphere was much more relaxed" than at the Monday meeting, Mrs. Boetcher said.

Mrs. Boetcher and Dr. Edwards flew in on New Year's Day at their own expense.

Mrs. Boetcher said she brought several items of clothing and toiletries for her daughter, but authorities permitted her to receive only some of them.

Thursday, Mrs. Boetcher brought her daughter a deck of cards, but authorities refused to allow the prisoner to receive the gift.

Mrs. Boetcher and Dr. Edwards said they would go to Jerusalem today and to Christian holy sites in Nazareth and Tiberias Saturday "to take their minds off things."

Miss Fleener was arrested on arrival at Ben-Gurion airport Oct. 25. She reportedly had been working as a secretary in oil-rich Kuwait and visited Israel in 1976.

"Altogether we were paying $50,000 a year for two Dodge vans that the court-appointed auditors say were bought for $11,000," Hestor said.

Earlier Thursday, testimony as the court of inquiry showed that the Grays received state and federal contracts although they had been given unfavorable evaluations by certain state agencies.

Bruce Watson of the TDCA told Hester that his first evaluation of the Manpower program in Brownsville in May 1977 found the program did not meet compliances in 17 areas.

Hester told Watson, "What I am particularly interested in, frankly, is stealing."

Farm Strike

strike is the main topic of discussion.

Bruce King, former New Mexico governor, speaking to union members Thursday night, said it was time for the government to come to the rescue of the family farmers. Today, Lt. Gov. Robert Ferguson, U.S. Sen. Harrison Schmitt and Texas Farmers' Union President Jay Naman will speak. U.S. Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Alex Mercure will address the group Saturday.

Miami Football Coach To Promote Florida Living

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The Florida Homebuilders Association has revealed plans for a major campaign to promote Florida living that will be fashioned along the lines on the Florida citrus marketing program.

But instead of Anita Bryant, who sings the praises of Florida's oranges, the homebuilders plan to use Miami Dolphins Coach Don Shula.

Shula will be a national spokesman for the state homebuilding industry, officials of the state organization told a meeting of more than 100 members of the Greater Tampa Homebuilders Association here this week.

"This is not some quick, flashy move, but a steady drive by the homebuilding industry to further promote the housing industry in the state," the football coach said in a film presentation to the Tampa group outlining the state promotional plans.

Initially, however, the promotion will be a $250,000 effort starting late this month or early in February aimed at nine northern cities without an appearance from Shula, said Paul Thompson, spokesman for the FHBA.

The FHBA will take out full-page advertisements in Sunday newspapers for five consecutive weeks in those northern cities explaining some of the benefits of moving to Florida, Thompson said. The ads will run in New York City, Chicago, Washington, D.C., Philadelphia, Detroit, Boston, Cleveland, Montreal and Toronto.

While Shula will not appear in those newspaper ads, he will be featured in the additional and long-range promotional efforts of the FHBA, Thompson said.

Future promotional efforts, which would include national television advertising, movie shorts for northern theaters, additional newspaper ads and trade journal advertising, will depend on reaction to the initial effort, Thompson said.

Thompson denied that the FHBA was dissatisifed with the state's promotional effort, but said their campaign was designed to compliment the state advertising, which has received criticism from some business officials who say it should be more aggressive and better-financed.

"This is not a slur on the state or the state chamber of commerce," Thompson said. "The homebuilding industry in this state is big enough and important enough to enhance the state's efforts."

The state Division of Economic Development currently spends about $3 million a year on promotional efforts — primarily aimed at tourists.

The name of the homebuilders' promotional program has been tagged "The Future Is Florida."

House Calls For Campaign To Fight Cocaine Flow

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House committee, saying it's "impossible" for the government to dam the international flow of cocaine into this country, is calling for an education campaign to curb the estimated $8 billion-a-year business.

But a White House official and a Drug Enforcement Administration spokesman disagree with the panel's finding, arguing instead that recent efforts to reduce cocaine trafficking have been successful.

In the last few months, said DEA spokesman Robert Feldkamp, authorities have made some of the largest cocaine seizures ever. A record 130 pounds of pure cocaine, worth approximately $33 million, was seized in Colombia in October, he said.

But Feldkamp and Peter G. Bourne, President Carter's special assistant for health issues, acknowledged that recent seizures represent only a tiny fraction of the estimated 15 to 20 tons of cocaine — all of it from Latin America — distributed annually in this country.

"I strongly differ with the committee in terms of the effectiveness of law enforcement. I think we've made a good deal of progress in the year in reducing the flow of cocaine," said Bourne.

He said the government's program aims at making the drug expensive, thus discouraging casual use, and should not be judged solely on the amount seized.

"Personally, I am not very optimistic about an education program, although I'm not saying we shouldn't use one," he said in a telephone interview Thursday.

Bourne, who estimated that one million Americans may have tried cocaine, said it is difficult to convince people that cocaine poses a health hazard. "As a result, it is very hard to have (education) programs that are very effective."

Earlier Thursday, the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse, in issuing a report on its six-nation South American tour last August, said, "It is impossible to control the distribution of cocaine after it enters international trafficking networks."

The report described cocaine-selling networks as highly sophisticated organizations with structures and discipline resembling multinational oil or grain companies. It said widespread bribery and other corruption undermine investigative efforts.

Noting that Americans are the principal users of the illegal drug, the report said, "We must ... develop new methods of public education which will discourage potential new users and provide current users with the type of information that will encourage them to discontinue their use."

Bourne defended the government's policy, which he said is designed to "keep the pressure on the traffickers, which keeps the price high" because of the increased risk involved in dealing in the drug.

"In this way we keep it as a luxury drug that people, primarily the more affluent people, use only in relatively small quantities," said Bourne. "High prices restrict its use and keeps the health problem at a minimum.

"Overall, our strategy has been highly successful," he said.

Feldkamp said his agency "would not dispute the fact that a public education program would help." But he said the agency would "take exception" to the committee's use of the word "impossible."

The DEA estimates the current street price for a gram, or one-28th of an ounce, of cocaine at between $60 and $100 for a blend that is about 10 percent pure.

Cocaine is not physically addictive and produces no tolerance level or withdrawal problems but, because it is a powerful stimulant, regular users develop "strong cravings" and a psychological habit, the committee report said.

Frequent use over a long period of time can lead to breathing problems from "snorting" it through the nostrils, as well as mental illness, the report said. A 1977 government report cited 111 cocaine-related deaths in the previous five years, 26 of them involving the drug alone.

Bourne added that cocaine poses much less of a health threat than heroin. Some 2,000 people die each year from heroin, compared to 20 from cocaine, he said.

As a result, 70 percent of the DEA's 2,100 agents worldwide are involved solely in heroin investigations, with the remaining agents assigned to amphetamines, barbiturates, cocaine and hashish, said Feldkamp.

Peru and Bolivia produce a crop with an annual potential yield of more than 75 tons of cocaine, most of which is funneled through other South American nations for ultimate sale in the United States and Europe, the House report said.

About 70 percent of the drug enters the United States from Colombia, where the estimated annual income of the traffickers is pegged at $8 billion, equaling its street value in the United States and exceeding Colombia's income from coffee.

Alaska Asks Feds To Clean Up Junk

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) — The state wants Washington to clean up its act in Alaska, by disposing of mountains of federal junk that have piled up over the years.

"Alaska's great size and wilderness character seems to lead to a 'use-it-and-leave-it' attitude on the part of those who work in its many remote locations," the state said.

In an 86-page report sent to President Carter and Congress, the state's Department of Environmental Conservation said it had identified 90 federal waste sites in Alaska.

"The total waste on all sites ... consists of 40 structures, 890 uprights, 11,302 square feet of surface construction, 49 abandoned vehicles, 90,000 barrels or storage tanks, and 21,843 cubic yards of associated debris," the report said.

But it said that was only the tip of the iceberg. It estimated that its junk list represents less than 20 percent of all the federal debris scattered over the state.

The state agency said cleanup costs would run into the millions of dollars.

Included in the study were 31 dumps in the Arctic National Wildlife Range, a beached tank at Demarcation Bay on the Arctic Ocean and a pile of 7,500 fuel drums on Barter Island.

It said there were more than 80,000 abandoned fuel drums on National Petroleum Reserve-Alaska alone. At Skull Cliff on the reserve, a huge pile of debris includes a collapsed airplane hangar.

The state said cleanup operations which started on the reserve in 1976 will be completed in late 1979 at a total cost of some $5 million.

The department said the "enormous accumulation of solid waste over the past 54 years" on the reserve had resulted from oil exploration activity, and from military construction.

At the Coast Guard long range navigation station at Port Clarence on the Bering Sea, the state found 13 buildings in "various states of disrepair." Four buildings at the station are still in use.

Scattered around the station, the report said, are 10 abandoned vehicles, 3,500 fuel drums, an abandoned landing mat which weighs about 1,875 tons and miscellaneous debris covering an area of more than two square miles.

It estimated the cleanup cost at Port Clarence at $329,000.

The state agency recommended that high-value scrap such as copper, brass and aluminum from all waste sites be shipped south, and that as much as possible from the remaining debris be salvaged for reuse or recycling.

As for the rest, the state suggested: burn or bury it.

Washington Questions Chilean Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department, departing from its usual policy of not commenting on foreign elections, says restrictions on free debate raise questions about the validity of Chile's recent national plebiscite.

"We felt that we had to say something in this particular case," said one official, alluding to Wednesday's controversial election in which Chilean President Ausgusto Pinochet received a lopsided show of support from Chile's voters.

State Department press officer Thomas Reston read the department's statement Thursday when asked for comment on the U.S. position.

"We believe as a matter of principle that any election should offer all parties sufficient guarantees to present their case and give the voters a full and fair opportunity to present their views," Reston said. "This situation did not obtain in the plebiscite in Chile."

Officials acknowleged that the administration's reasons for criticizing the plebiscite go beyond the question of whether democratic standards were observed.

From the outset, the Carter administration has felt that the evolution of its policy toward Chile will be viewed elsewhere as a symbol of U.S. sincerity in promoting human rights overseas.

Human rights militants in the administration feel the repressive measures adopted by Pinochet in his four years in power have been far out of proportion to the security threat against his regime.

The plebiscite was designed as Chile's reply to the latest in a series of United Nations resolutions condemning Chile for human rights violations.

Voters were asked to mark "yes" or "no" on a ballot which read:

"In the face of international aggression against the government of our homeland, I support President Pinochet in his defense of the dignity of Chile and reaffirm the legitimacy of the government of the republic to conduct, in a sovereign way, the process of institutionalization of the country."

More than 75 percent of Chile's voters marked their ballots "yes." But Reston suggested this result was deceptive.

Chile is a country, he said, "where normal political activities are banned, where freedom of the press and assembly are sharply restricted and where the question was unfairly posed as a choice between 'the dignity of Chile' and 'international aggression.'"

Officials said the administration refrained from speaking out before the plebiscite because this would have lent credence to Pinochet's allegations of "international aggression against Chile."

The officials, who requested anonymity, added that Reston's statement represented a compromise between competing State Department factions.

According to the informants, one faction recommended no statement at all, or a very mild condemnation, while the other campaigned for a much more vigorous denunciation of the way the plebiscite was conducted.

Police Hoping Drawings Help Killer Search

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The search for the "Hillside Strangler" is focusing on two men, with police hoping composite drawings will help lead them to the pair.

The drawings were released Thursday. One shows a white or Hispanic male with a mustache. A description of a mustachioed man surfaced after the strangling of a young prostitute in December.

"We cannot say with any degree of certainty that these composites depict the person or persons responsible for the homicides under investigation," Assistant Police Chief Daryl Gates said.

But he added that the task force feels the two men "need to be identified and located in furtherance of our investigation."

Investigators were asking for citizens' help in matching the composites to anyone seen "frequenting or loitering in the Hollywood-Glendale-Eagle Rock or Highland Park areas," he said.

Eleven young women have been killed, all strangled and stripped of clothing, most sexually molested and tossed on hillsides or under bushes.

Drawing No. 1 showed a white male, 28-30 years old, 5-foot-9, 155 pounds, with medium brown shoulder-length hair.

Drawing No. 2 showed a white or Latin male with a light olive complexion, about 35 years old, 5-foot-7, 130 to 140 pounds, dark hair, a mustache and high cheek bones.

Both men reportedly were seen after one of the stranglings, but police declined to say which one. However, the fact that the drawings were dated Dec. 15 and Dec. 17 suggests they relate to the killing of Kimberly Diane Martin, whose body was found Dec. 14 after she was lured to a vacant apartment by a man who telephoned a prostitution service.

Police say they have more clues in the Martin case than in any of the others, and they know the telephone call was made from the Hollywood Library, where the caller may have been seen.

The murder itself likely took place at the Tamarind Apartment in Hollywood, where Miss Martin was sent by the outcall service. Screams were heard there, and police have indicated some residents may have seen the killer.

Gates said a $27,000 award offered by the City Council will be in effect indefinitely.

Billionaire John D. MacArthur Dies At 80

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Billionaire John D. MacArthur, the crusty insurance and real estate baron who lived in a modest apartment and conducted business from a coffee shop, died today of cancer. He was 80.

MacArthur died at Good Samaritan Hospital. His physician had told a news conference three days ago that MacArthur was dying of cancer of the pancreas.

MacArthur, who parlayed ownership of a $2,500 mail order insurance firm into one of the largest fortunes in America, always refused to estimate his worth. Other sources put it as high as $5 billion, but "billionaire" was as close a description as he would accept.

MacArthur drew plaudits when he ransomed the famed Delong Ruby from the underworld in 1965.

Although fabulously wealthy, MacArthur never cluttered his life with the usual accouterments of fortune. He had no limousine, no mansion, few hangers-on and not even a secretary.

In his later years, he spent most of his time in the coffee shop of his Colonnades Hotel where he lived in a modest two-bedroom apartment.

He spurned the jet-set life of nearby Palm Beach, where he said people "have a party every night someplace ... They're yakkity-yakking about nothing, boring the —out of each other, I'm sure. They certainly bore the —out of me."

Dressed in clothes that suggested a handyman rather than a billionaire, MacArthur — holding an ever-present cup of coffee and smoking a cigarette — would greet hotel guests, good-naturedly criticize employees and, through his telephone, stay in touch with assistants who ran his empire.

His lifestyle gave scarce hint of his huge wealth. "Certainly if I wanted a yacht, I could get one," MacArthur said during a 1976 intervew with The Associated Press. "But I don't. If I wanted to build a mansion, I could.

"But when I began making money, I didn't want to change my lifestyle because I was afraid something might happen. I was on thin ice for the first 15 years."

MacArthur was born in Pittson, Pa., March 6, 1897, the seventh and last child of the Rev. William and Georgia MacArthur. At the age of 18, John MacArthur began working for a Chicago insurance firm owned by his brother, Alfred.

He worked on the Chicago Herald Examiner with his brother, Charles, who later collaborated with Ben Hecht on several plays, the most famous being "The Front Page," about life on a newspaper. But John MacArthur didn't like newspaper work and joined the Royal Canadian Flying Corps at the outset of World War I.

After returning to the states, he went back to the insurance business and eventually borrowed $2,500 to buy Bankers Life Insurance Co. But the Depression and his inability to attract good salesmen forced him to take the plunge into mail-order sales — a technique still used by Bankers.

The formula proved successful and soon MacArthur was absorbing other companies.

After the Delong Ruby and other jewels were stolen from the American Museum of Natural History in New York City, three men were convicted of the theft. But the ruby was missing for nearly a year.

A writer learned of the jewel's whereabouts and persuaded MacArthur to ransom it and prevent the lovely stone from being cut up and sold piecemeal by underworld fences.

MacArthur paid $25,000 and found the jewel in a West Palm Beach telephone booth. He deprecated his own part in the caper, but quietly delighted in the cloak-and-dagger role.

He is survived by his wife, Catherine, and a daughter, Virginia.

Funeral arrangements were pending.

U.S. Cuts Back Free Milk For Needy Children

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government is cutting back on the amount of free milk needy children will get at school because studies have shown that some of the milk has been wasted, the Agriculture Department says.

The department's Food and Nutrition Service estimated that about 250 million half pints of free milk will be eliminated annually.

Assistant Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman said Thursday that needy children who receive free meals under the government program will continue to get one half pint of milk, but a second half pint will be discontinued.

Ms. Foreman said the change was made to comply with new child nutrition legislation passed by Congress last year "which expressed the concern of the Congress that some of the free milk has been wasted."

The change also covers the extra free milk served in school breakfast and supper programs, Ms. Foreman said.

"Needy children who receive free meals will continue to receive one free half pint of milk as a component of the meal," she said. "What we are discontinuing is the practice of making a second half pint of milk available free to needy children during meals."

Free milk will continue to be provided during meal periods to needy children who do not take the free meal.

"This assures that needy children who bring their lunch from home will receive a free half pint of milk to drink with their lunch," Ms. Foreman said.

According to the most recent figures, 26.7 million children ate lunches at school cafeterias. Of those 10.3 million get free meals, including the milk.

New Hotel Planned For San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Developers say they will break ground here May 5 for construction downtown of a $45 million, 700-room Stouffer Hotel.

The 18-story structure should be completed by early 1980, a press conference was told Wednesday. The structure will be called Stouffer's San Antonio Plaza Hotel.

The project means at least two new downtown hotels are planned for Texas' third largest city. Construction also is slated to begin soon on a Marriott Hotel.

The last major hotel built in San Antonio was the Hilton Palacio Del Rio, erected for the 1968 HemisFair. Convention and Visitors Bureau officials have said the city needs at least 2,500 more hotel rooms to meet demand for conventions.

COLORADO SENTIMENTS — Denver Bronco coach Red Miller signs an autograph on an enthusiastic fan's car outside the practice field in Denver Thursday. The Orange car was emblazoned with "Red Miller for President" slogans and Bronco bumper stickers. Miller was named as AP coach of the year today. (AP Laserphoto)

Miller Top AP Coach

NEW YORK (AP) — Red Miller, who guided the defense-minded Denver Broncos into the playoffs for the first time in their history — and into the Super Bowl as well — was named National Football League Coach of the Year today by The Associated Press.

Miller's team had the best American Conference record (12-2) in the regular season, then knocked off the Pittsburgh Steelers 34-21 and defending NFL champion Oakland 20-17 in the AFC title game. He received 58 of the 84 votes cast by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters, three from each league city.

Don Shula of the Miami Dolphins received 25 votes. The remaining vote went to Leeman Bennett of the Atlanta Falcons.

By the close of the 1976 season, some of Denver's players were sufficiently unhappy to openly demand a coaching change. So Robert Miller, who had spent 17 years as an assistant coach in the pros, the last four developing New England's explosive offense, was hired.

He succeeded John Ralston as head coach of the discontented Broncos, also-rans from the day they were born in the American Football League in 1960 until last year, a team which didn't even post a winning season until 1973. It was also Miller's second term with the Broncos. He was their offensive line coach from 1963-65.

"He's one in a million," said Lyle Alzado, Denver's All-Pro defensive end. "I'd go out and die for that man."

Miller's first major move was to acquire Craig Morton, a discontented back-up quarterback to Roger Staubach at Dallas and an ineffective starter with the New York Giants for a dozen years.

It was a one-for-one deal. The Broncos got Morton, the Giants got quarterback Steve Ramsey. Morton became the AFC's No.2 passer. Ramsey was cut before the season began.

"Red is a most unusual man," said Morton. "When I first met him, I felt something special was about to happen. At our first meeting he said we were coming into a unique situation, a new quarterback and a new coach coming to a team that was 9-5. He said, 'We can do an awful lot with this team. Let's get together and do it.' I said I was excited, too."

The Broncos' season began with victories over St. Louis, Buffalo, Seattle and Kansas City. But wait, the experts said. Let's see what happens when they have to play Oakland, the defending Super Bowl champions, five-time division champions and winners in 26 of 34 games against Denver.

What happened was that Denver demolished the Raiders 30-7. The Broncos' winning streak reached six games, then Oakland beat them 24-14 — but they followed that with six more victories in a row, deposing the Raiders as AFC West champs. Denver finished the season with a 14-6 loss to the Dallas Cowboys, the team it meets in the Super Bowl Jan. 15.

Carter Cromwell

Bits And Pieces

JOHN CROPP, WHO has already left for Mississippi, will be Sloan's offensive coordinator. He was receiver coach at Tech for three seasons. Others who hve gone from Tech to Ole Miss with Sloan were Mike Pope, Romeo Crennell and Tommy Limbaugh. Pope will coach the offensive line; Crennell with handle either the offensive tackles or defensive ends and Limbaugh will be a recruiter . .

At Tech, Limbaugh was the freshman coach until being caught by the coaching limit rule and being made a recruiter. Crennell, too, was caught in the squeeze and became director of the off-season program and the athletic dining hall after coaching the noseguards one year. Pope was recruiting coordinator, a post he had held since 1971, the first four years at Florida State . . .

INSIDERS SAY THAT there is a possibility that the coaching staff limit of eight full-time assistants that was passed at the NCAA's convention in January 1976 might be increased to nine at the body's meeting this winter . . .

R.C. Slocum, a member of Emory Bellard's staff at Texas A&M for the past six seasons, has joined Sloan's Ole Miss staff as linebacker coach. He handled the defensive ends at A&M . . .

Tech head coach Rex Dockery was a graduate assistant at his alma mater, Tennessee, in 1964. That year, he coached a freshman linebacker named Jim Bates, whom Dockery hired this week to coach the Raider secondary . . .

A&M rushed for 486 net yards against Southern Cal in the Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl but still was massacred 47-28. One reason was USC's outstanding offensive output against an Aggie defense that wasn't nearly as tough in 1977 as it had been the two previous seasons. Another factor was the five fumbles A &M lost. Now that's more typical of the Aggies . . .

The crowd of 52,842 was the third-largest since the A-B bowl moved from Rice Stadium to the Astrodome. Tech and Nebraska drew 48,618 in 1976 . . .

DALLAS CARTER HIGH School lost a lot when Vernon Smith and DeWayne Scales graduated after the 1976-77 season. The two very highly recruited players are now starting for A&M and LSU, respectively. Smith leads the Aggies in scoring with a 17.6 average and in rebounding with a 9.0 norm per contest. He's also played the most minutes of any Aggie, 297 . . .

In A&M's most recent outing, against Oklahoma City, Karl Godine and Jarvis Williams began to show what they can do after a slow start coming off their year's suspensions. Godine had 21 points against the Chiefs, while Williams scored 14 points and pulled down 13 rebounds . . .

Nothing like a new facility to help attract top opponents. The Aggie baseball team will play 1977 NCAA runner-up Southern Cal, almost always a national power, and an exhibition with the Houston Astros this coming season in its new 5000-seat stadium . . .

INDIANA FOOTBALL COACH Lee Corso has recruited some unusual players while trying to rebuild Indiana's fortunes. One is soccer-style place-kicking specialist David Freud, 26, a native of Jerusalem who came to live in his wife's homeland after serving three years in the Israeli army. The 5-5½ Freud told how being short was not a deterrent to being accepted into Israel's army: "You have to be short so you can run under the bullets." . . .

Corso, noted as a quick-witted individual, had this to say when someone asked if free safety Dale Keneipp, at 5-9, wasn't too short for his position: "What the hell? We're not looking for a rebounder." . . . Hoosier back Mark Harkrader, a 5-7¾ pounder who rushed for 1003 yards as a freshman, said, "The holes have always been there in Indiana football. They just had to find a back that was the right size to fit them." . . .

Morton No. 1—On IRS List

DALLAS (AP) — Denver Broncos quarterback Craig Morton has been accused of failing to pay income taxes for the past three years in a tax lien filed by the Internal Revenue Service.

The IRS filed the $34,636 lien here Dec. 27, claiming Morton failed to pay income taxes in 1974, 1975 and 1976.

Morton, who will meet the Dallas Cowboys in the Super Bowl Jan. 15, also faces the possibility of having his playoff earnings garnished to pay off a $38,000 debt he allegedly owes in New York.

In an action pending in state district court in Brighton, Colo., the 34-year-old Morton is accused of owing the money to Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. of New York.

Morton joined the Dallas Cowboys in 1965 and was traded to the New York Giants in 1974. He became the starting quarterback for the Broncos this season —his first with the team—and guided them to the playoffs for the first time in their 18-year history.

Dunbar, Estacado Vie For Top Spot

By TOM HALLIBURTON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Moments after an early-season Estacado basketball victory, coach J.J. Wood shifted his interests to a future date on the schedule, a meeting with arch-rival Dunbar.

"That would probably be a great night for someone to rob a grocery store," Wood chuckled. It was nearly a month ago but the anticipation had filtered through Lubbock's eastside already. EHS (17-2) and DHS (16-4) established themselves early as the city's prep powers.

Finally, the night has arrived. The two teams meet tonight in the first of their two Hub City basketball Super Bowls. Tipoff in the DHS gym is 8 p.m. p.m.

In other games tonight, Monterey (10-10) hopes to leap above the .500 mark against Amarillo High (13-5) in the MHS gym; Amarillo-power Tascosa (11-5) hosts Lubbock High (3-14); and Coronado (4-12) entertains Palo Duro (4-14) in the Mustang gym.

Only the size of Dunbar's gym may keep spectators away. The Panther den has a 1,200 seating capacity compared to 2,000 at the EHS gym. Should the fans enjoy tonight's game, a bigger crowd will arrive in Estacado's gym for the rematch Jan. 31.

"We expect it will be full since we're playing in a small gym," said DHS coach Joe McWilliams. "I know we're in for a hard time. It seems like Estacado has been ready for us for a couple of weeks."

Meanwhile, the Dunbar mentor's counterpart hopes his Matadors prepare for all phases of the Panther attack. Senior Billy Don Hardaway leads Dunbar's scorers with a 21.8 average followed by Greg Whitfield's 13.6.

"Dunbar has a real good rebounding team. We're going to try and see if we can keep them off the boards a little bit," Wood said.

"Hardaway is just a real good athlete and you're not going to shut down Billy. But he's not a one-man show. A lot of people overlook the fact that they've got four other good players," he continued. "Whitfield is their leading rebounder and (guard Wayne) Williams is going to score if you sink off him too much."

To defend this Dunbar offense, Wood figures to start Dewey Turner (6-5) at center, Freddy Ivory (6-4) and Willie Powell (6-4) at forwards and Alvin Harris (6-0) at one guard. Either Mike Chatham (5-11) or Winston Gipson (6-1) will start at the other guard.

Countering the Matador alignment, Dunbar's McWilliams probably will start Hardaway (6-6), Whitfield (6-3), Charles Brown (5-9), Dwight Brown (6-3) and Williams (5-8).

"Estacado has a very sound team. They play good defense, and they have a lot of spring and depth. They probably have a little more depth and probably have had a little longer to get ready to play," said the Dunbar coach.

VILAS BEATS CONNORS — Jimmy Connors, left, fell to Guillermo Vilas in the Grand Prix Masters Tennis Tournament Thursday 6-4, 2-6, 7-5. (AP Laserphoto)

Vilas Topples Connors

NEW YORK (AP) — The man who was saying just last week that he didn't like Christmas was reaping his goodies late.

"I'm happy because it's a Christmas gift," a tired Guillermo Vilas said Thursday night after downing Jimmy Connors 6-4, 3-6, 7-5 in the second round of the $400,000 Grand Prix Masters Tennis tournament.

It was their first meeting since the U.S. Open at Forest Hills last summer, when Vilas beat the Belleville, Ill., lefthander in four sets on a disputed line call. For the record crowd of 18,590 at Madison Square Garden Thursday night, it was a tumultuous event.

But Vilas wasn't overjoyed about the late present, either. He was subdued and limping slightly, he said, because he had hurt his left ankle and would have to see a doctor. After 2 hours and 58 minutes of tennis against Connors, much of it running from side to side at the baseline, the Argentine top seed was sagging because his legs were tired, too.

And besides that, he had not prepared for the Masters as he had for Forest Hills, emotionally or physically. Vilas has made it clear since before the tournament started that he was playing chiefly so he could collect the $300,000 bonus he earned by winning the most points on the 1977 Grand Prix circuit.

"Forest Hills was kind of very special for me," he said of the clay-court classic. "It was to be my second big tournament (he had already won the 1977 French Open, a Grand Slam event). It was, I think, going to be the key to my success.

"I was training for two months for Forest Hills."

After a long season in which he played nearly all the men's ciruit tournaments, Vilas had wanted to rest in January. He had taken off only a few weeks before the Masters. He will rest for two months starting in about two weeks.

In the meantime, people wanted him to be more enthusiastic about Thursday night.

"It was very special because this surface is very different than clay," the 25-year-old Argentina clay-court master said of the rubber-like Supreme Court surface here. "I was very glad to see that I can

The meet is sponsored by the Dolphins Swim Club at Texas Tech. Competition will be held in the Tech pool, located in the men's gym.

On hand to bid for individual honors will be Sidney Glenn of Midland High. Glenn was second in the state last year in the 500 freestyle and will be competing in that event today.

Barry's Average Slips To 23.8

OAKLAND (AP) — Rick Barry has made one field goal in each of the Golden State Warriors' last two games, and there are fears that this is more than a slump for the 33-year-old basketball star.

"Who knows? We may face this the rest of the way down the road," says Coach Al Attles, "though I don't think so."

The veteran forward who was at his best three years ago when he led the Warriors to the National Basketball Association championship, had a 51-point night early this season and ranked as the league's leading scorer.

Barry has dropped to 10th place now, with a 23.8-point average, after averaging 12.8 over the last six games. His shooting mark from the floor in the six games is 34 per cent, and he's gone 1-for-7 in the last two games.

Poor shooting by Charles Johnson, another starter on the 1975 championship team, cost the guard a job Thursday. Attles placed the seven-year NBA veteran on waivers.

"The two most difficult things I've had to do as coach were trading Nate Thurmond and now letting C.J. (Johnson) go," said Attles after making the cut which created a vacancy for newly acquired forward Nate Williams, scheduled to join the team for tonight's game against Detroit.

Johnson lost his starting job last year, got seven starting assignments recently but left with a shooting average of 40 per cent.

"There's a lot to be said for defense. But you need someone to put the ball in the basket, too," Attles said after Wednesday night's victory over Chicago in which Sonny Parker, Robert Parish, E.C. Coleman and a few others made up for Barry's shooting problems.

Barry had an excellent game otherwise, playing stout defense against Scott May who totaled five points, and getting a game-high eight assists.

"We always seem to bring Rick out of his slumps," said Chicago Coach Ed Badger, who saw Barry score 44 points against the Bulls earlier in the season.

Williams, with a shooting average over 45 per cent through eight NBA seasons, is considered insurance against a prolonged slump — or worse — by Barry.

IN A SLUMP — Rick Brry of Golden State dribbles down the court against Scott May of Chicago. Barry has made only one field goal in each of Warriors' last two games and there are fears that this is more than a slump for the 33-year-old cage star. (AP Laserphoto)

Archibald Begins Rehabilitation

BUFFALO (AP) — Nate "Tiny" Archibald, probably the key to the Buffalo Braves' playoff hopes, has begun his rehabilitation.

The 6-foot playmaking guard, who suffered a torn Achilles tendon in the Braves' final preseason game, said he hopes to return to the struggling Braves by next month.

"I have to put some weight on the foot and do some toe raises.

Cavs Halt Skid; Celts Bow Again

By The Associated Press

Bill Fitch was happy to see a losing streak end, but will be happier to see a winning streak start.

"We've still got a few steps to go," the coach of the Cleveland Cavaliers said after Thursday night's 110-94 National Basketball Association victory over the New Jersey Nets halted a five-game losing streak.

"The rebounding was better and we got a little bit out of a lot of people. That's more like us, but we need two or three days (off) to work and get ourselves back on track again."

Admitting he was relieved by the victory, Fitch noted, "I think this was the worst losing string we've ever been through . . . even worse than the 15 in a row the first year (1969-70). Of course, in those days, any time we won it was an upset.

"But this was the roughest because the players got down on themselves. We'd have one or two guys play bad in one game, then they'd get themselves turned around and somebody else would go down the tubes."

Fitch added with a weak laugh:

"It was just like when we're going good . . . Everybody contributed to the five-game streak."

In other NBA games, the New Orleans Jazz defeated the Milwaukee Bucks 116-109 and the Phoenix Suns stopped the Boston Celtics 121-111.

Walt Frazier led eight Cleveland players in double figures with 15 points. The Cavaliers put the game out of reach with a 30-22 surge in the third quarter, holding the largest lead of the game at 88-55 late in the period.

Jazz 116, Bucks 109

Pete Maravich scored 38 points and Truck Robinson 32 to lead New Orleans over Milwaukee. The Jazz neutralized the Bucks with a zone defense that shut off Milwaukee's Marques Johnson inside.

"There just wasn't much room underneath for Marques to drive," Bucks Coach Don Nelson said. "They were giving him the 15-foot jumper, but evidently he didn't feel comfortable taking it because he was hesitating."

New Orleans Coach Elgin Baylor confirmed the game plan.

"We didn't want to let them go to Johnson inside," said Baylor. "He's a hell of a good, young player, and they like to post him up inside and he gets a lot of offensive rebounds. If they beat us, we were going to make them beat us from outside."

Suns 121, Celtics 111

It was vintage Boston Celtics' style of play — find the open man or offense, solid team defense, full-time hustle.

Unfortunately for new Boston coach Tom "Satch" Sanders, it was the Phoenix Suns who took a page out of Boston's past and defeated the Celtics 121-111 in a National Basketball Association game at the Hartford Civic Center Thursday night.

The loss dropped the Celts to 11-24 and spoiled Sanders' debut. He took over as coach only Tuesday when Tom Heinsohn was fired.

"This is a team with a lot of unselfish players and the result is that we work for the good shots," said former Celtic Paul Westphal who led the Suns with 43 points. "It can be a fun game when a team is moving the basketball well."

Rookie forward Walter Davis also was a major force for Phoenix, scoring 40 points.

Westphal chose to be diplomatic when asked about the current problem the Celtics are having. "They have some fine talent and I'm sure that Satch and K.C. (Jones) will get things together once they've had a chance," Westphal said.

Jones, the assistant coach, came to terms with the Celtics Thursday and immediately joined the team's brain trust. Asked before game time what Boston has to do to turn things around, Jones said, "You better ask Satch, he is the head coach. I have only been in town since 1 o'clock."

What will his role be?

"I'm to be here when Satch needs me. To grab someone off the bench when somebody gets tired," Jones added.

"It is nice to be home," he said. "By home, I mean the Celtics.

Sanders and Jones were teammates on numerous championship teams, and Westphal believes that the new coaching combo will be able to bring the winning habit back to Boston.

Sanders said he didn't know what would happen. "It is too early to judge what will happen to this team over the rest of the season. I saw some flashes of positive things but we have to extend it over 48 minutes."

But despite the Celtics' poor start, the Boston mentor isn't counting his team out of the playoff picture. "We can get back in the race if we get five guys playing well at the same time. It takes more than having just two or three guys playing well at once," Sanders said.

Veteran John Havlicek led Boston in scoring with 24 points, while guard Jo Jo White was next with 22. Center Dave Cowens added 17, reserve guard Kevin Stacom had 16, and rookie forward Cedric Maxwell had 12. Havlicek was held scoreless in the third period.

Cowens, who scored only two points in the final quarter, sat after the game on a chair in the locker room, his head bowed.

play well on all surfaces."

But those words — special and glad — did not light up his face. Fifteen minutes after leaving the post-match interview, his head wrapped in a shirt and a heavy coat buttoned up tightly against the cold, Vilas trundled into a Garden elevator with coach Ion Tiriac and friends.

He looked anything but happy as his companions planned where they should go for something to eat. "I want to go back to the hotel first," he mumbled.

Meanwhile, Connors behaved as though he hadn't played tennis in days and was chipper about his chances in the round-robin tournament.

"I'm still in there. Don't count me out," he told reporters.

It wasn't the same Connors that had, a short while before, raged at a linesman that called his shot out, allowing Vilas to go up 40-30 in the ninth game. He pounded his racket on the net and screamed at the official, and the second round of the Masters looked as though it might end the same way the finals had at the Open — on a sour note.

But Connors went on to win that game, breaking Vilas' service to pull to 4-5. It was his big step back into the set.

Asked later about his behavior over line calls in the match, Connors twinkled and said sweetly, "What calls?"

Connors held service in the next game to tie the match, but Vilas held in the 11th game after fighting through two deuces, finishing with a backhand that passed Connors at the net.

With Connors serving in the final game, the American took the first two points. But Vilas came back with four in a row, taking match point when Connors' forehand, erratic for much of the evening, careened into the net.

This time the pair made it to the net to shake hands, and they did so cordially, in sharp contrast to the Open where appreciative fans mobbed Vilas and Connors stormed off court.

Connors does indeed still have a chance in the eight-player Masters, which offers a $100,000 prize to the winner. After today's concluding regular round-robin matches, each man will have played the other three in his group.

On Saturday, the man with the best match record in each of the two groups will play the runner-up in the other group in the semifinals. The finals are set for Sunday. Semifinals and finals will be nationally televised by CBS.

Vilas is 2-0 after his first-round triumph over Spaniard Manuel Orantes and is assured of a semifinal berth. Connors, seeded eighth, was 1-1 going into today's match with Orantes, last year's winner who is seeded fourth. Connors beat Eddie Dibbs of Miami Beach, Fla., in the first round.

Orantes defeated No. 5 Dibbs 7-6, 7-5 Thursday and is 1-1. So Orantes and Connors have a crack at the remaining semifinal berth.

No. 3 Bjorn Borg of Sweden has a perfect record, having beaten No. 6 Roscoe Tanner of Kiawah Island, S.C., 6-4, 6-7, 6-3 in 2 hours and 27 minutes Thursday. Borg defeated Mexico's Raul Ramirez in the first round, so he will be a semifinalist.

No. 2 Brian Gottfried of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., 2-0, is assured of a semifinal berth, too, after downing his doubles partner, No. 7 Ramirez 6-7, 6-2, 6-4. Gottfried beat Tanner Wednesday. Ramirez is 0-2, as are Tanner and Dibbs.

In first-round doubles action that didn't end until nearly 3 a.m. today, the third-seeded team of Bob Lutz and Stan Smith beat Gottfired and Ramirez 4-5, 6-3, 7-6.

In today's other matches, Vilas was to meet Dibbs in the afternoon, while Ramirez plays Tanner and Borg plays Gottfried tonight.

Grid Predictions Just Kid's Stuff

CLARKSTON, Wash. (AP) — Peter Hanowell has shown that picking football winners is kid stuff.

Peter, the 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Hanowell, is the grand champion of more than 600 contestants who entered a season-long football forecast contest in the Lewiston (Idaho) Morning Tribune.

Peter finished two games ahead of his 11 grown-up competitors for the season crown. He picked 11 of 14 winners and scored a perfect 10 of 10 in college bowl games.

What's his secret?

"I don't know," he said. "I just pick 'em."

Hanowell said his son didn't benefit from adult coaching. He swore the youngster made his own choices.

"I tried it and I missed eight. I really chuckled to myself as he was picking this time. I figured he was going to bomb out," the father said.

Peter, a pre-schoooler at the Clarkston branch of Walla Walla Community College, earned $30 from the newspaper for his bowl choices, bringing his season total to $60.

Hanowell said he or his wife usually read the weekly list of games and helped Peter with the scores through an unusual system.

"He was reluctant to call out numbers, so we drew up a list of numbers from three to 50," he said.

Once Peter had picked the winner of each game, he would point to a number on the list for the winner's score, his father said.

Hanowell said he then would cover all higher numbers on the list and Peter would point to the loser's score.

The system brought some strange predictions, such as a 33-6 guess for underdog Notre Dame over top-ranked Texas in the Cotton Bowl. Notre Dame won 38-10.

Peter also picked Washington's seven-point edge over Michigan.

His luck didn't hold out on professional football in the last weekend of December, however. Of four games, he chose only Minnesota's upset over Los Angeles.

UPI Selects Tony NFC's Top Rookie

NEW YORK (UPI) — The feeling finally came upon Tom Landry after the Dallas Cowboys lost their first game.

All season long the Cowboys' coach kept saying he would start Tony Dorsett when the time was right.

"It's just a feeling I'll have," Landry said.

But, in spite of not winning a starting job until the ninth game of the season, Dorsett became the first rookie in Cowboy history to rush for more than 1,000 yards and only the eighth first-year player in NFL history to reach that mark.

Dorsett was honored Thursday as a unanimous choice in balloting for United Press International's NFC Rookie of the Year Award for 1977. The only other member of the Dallas Cowboys to win the award was fullback Calvin Hill in 1969.

The Heisman Trophy winner from the University of Pittsburgh gained 1,007 yards this season to help Dallas gain a berth in Super Bowl XII against the Denver Broncos. He received all 56 votes from a nationwide panel of sports writers, four from each of the conference's 14 cities.

Dorsett's 84-yard touchdown sprint against Philadelphia was the longest run from scrimmage in the NFL this season. The 206 yards he gained that day made him the first Cowboy and only the third rookie in league history to rush for more than 200 yards in a game. He also had a 77-yard TD run against St. Louis.

"Tony has been everything we expected him to be," Landry said. "He's a guy who's capable of breaking at any time. He just has such tremendous acceleration. He'll see a narrow alley and suddenly be gone right through before you know it."

Finley Ready To Run?

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Charles O. Finley seems ready to take his $12.5 million and run, if he can finally get the approval of the baseball establishment.

A few knotty details have to be worked out on the proposed sale of the floundering Oakland A's franchise to oil millionaire Marvin Davis for removal to mile-high Denver.

A lot of people will be greasing the skids.

Good-bye, Charlie O, it's been nice a-knowin' yuh. Baseball can never be the same.

Were you shoved, Charlie O, or do you go willingly?

"Shoved? Naw, naw, naw," bellowed the booming voice on the telephone from the Chicago headquarters of the $20 million-a-year Charles O. Finley Insurance Co.

"Nothing like that. Nobody forcing me out. Just another business deal."

Finley originally had a date in New York Thursday with Commissioner Bowie Kuhn to discuss details of his proposed sale of pitcher Vida Blue to the Cincinnati Reds for $1.5 million in cash and a minor league player named Dave Revering. The meeting was postponed until Jan. 17.

The commissioner is expected to void the transaction just as he turned thumbs down on the sale of Joe Rudi and Rollie Fingers to Boston for $1 million each and Blue to the New York Yankees for $1.5 million.

Kuhn's position has been upheld in the federal courts on the ground that he has virtual dictatorial powers to preserve competitive balance in the game and prevent the liquidation of a franchise.

Even without this added windfall, Finley, never accused of lacking business acumen, should leave baseball unscathed. He paid $1,975,000 for the original franchise, then at Kansas City, in the 1960s. The new $12.5 million price tag should turn him a neat profit.

That's not bad for man who grew up feeding hogs on an Alabama farm, peddled newspapers and rejected eggs and then slaved in the steel mills for five years before, while recovering from tuberculosis, he hit on a novel insurance idea that made him a fortune.

Most observers agree Finley is not being railroaded out of the game because of his maverick ideas and policies down through the years. As a smart business man, he sees the game, with the emergence of free agent power, as a losing enterprise. So he's getting out while the getting's good. So goes the gossip in the Hot Stove League.

However, baseball. won't remember Charles O. Finley as a shrewd baseball man. His legacy is that of an innovator, a revolutionary, a burr in the neck of the barons of the game.

He introduced orange baseballs, gold and green uniforms, gave a sexy facade to a drab municipal stadium in Kansas City, painting it a glowing yellow and ringing it with amber lights.

He put fluorescent lights in the dugouts, planted maple trees and set up picnic grounds adjacent to the outfield, kept the grass mowed by bringing in two munching goats.

"I may be outsmarted," he said, "but nobody can outhustle me."

It was at Kansas City that he installed a mechanical rabbit at home plate, named it Harvey and had it pop up with a basket of new balls for the umpire. To save the ump from using a whisk broom, he installed a compressed-air device which, when triggered, would blow the dirt off home plate. Enter: Little Blowhard.

He signed players such as Bert Campaneris, Catfish Hunter, Reggie Jackson, Vida Blue, Sal Bando, Gene Tenace, Joe Rudi and Rollie Fingers for peanuts (the latter three in a $37,000 bonus package), inveigled them to grow 1890 beards and mustaches and won three world championships with them at Oakland.

No Line On Fem Events

HERSKOWITZ

By MICKEY HERSKOWITZ
And STEVE PERKINS

Q. When a friend of mine wanted to place a bet on a woman's golf tournament, he was told that there was no such thing. That is, no betting line on women in sports and no bookmakers who would handle the action if there was. Is there a logical reason for this? What about the women who ride race horses? Don't people bet on them?

— Elizabeth Landa, Ridgefield, Conn.

A. Except for an occasional tennis match — and, of course, Wimbledon — there just isn't enough money or exposure yet to make the distaff sporting events attractive to gamblers. A source at the Reno Turf Book in Nevada, which claims to quote odds on anything except cockroach races and student council elections, says, "Women's sports are rising, but they're not here yet."

Around the race track, an old saw says, "Never bet on fillies, they're too unpredictable." But some trainers are taking advantage of this prejudice by putting women jockeys on horses that should be big favorites, thereby driving up the odds.

Q. What team in the NFL had the longest winning streak, and who beat that team to end the streak?

— Stan Frederickson, L'Anse, Mich.

A. The record for consecutive wins is 18, set by the Chicago Bears twice — ended in 1934 by the Giants and in 1942 by the Redskins, both in championship games — and by the Miami Dolphins.

The 1972 Dolphins swept the board — winning all 17 games including the Super Bowl — then won their opener the next season over the 49ers. On Sept. 23, 1973, the Dolphins lost to the Oakland Raiders 12-7, then proceeded to win their next 10. Miami fell a touchdown short of winning 28 in a row.

Q. I see where Bear Bryant has said he will retired after he wins his 315th game, breaking Amos Alonzo Stagg's mark for a college coach. Has this always been the Bear's goal, or did he think of it because he just doesn't want to quit coaching?

— Myron Friedkin, San Antonio

A. The truth is that Bryant, now 63, decided to go after Stagg when he realized how good he felt after he stopped drinking. The Bear gave up the booze in January and also kicked the sleeping pill habit. "I had forgotten what it was like," he told friends, "to wake up in the morning and not be mad." He will need about four seasons to pass Stagg, and says, "As long as somebody has to be the winningest coach, it might as well be me."

Q. Could you please tell me the years Frank Gifford played professional football?

— Mrs. R. Claycomb, Lowman, Idaho

A. Faultless Frank, now in the middle of the Monday Night Trio, was a star runningback and receiver for the New York Giants from 1952 to 1964 — although he laid out the '61 season, courtesy of Chuck Bednarik of the Eagles.

Gifford's injury was the result of one of pro football's most famous tackles, a clean but vicious hit by Bednarik that left him unconscious and sent him to the hospital. Bednarik said later: "Gifford owes me a lot. I made him a rich sportscaster."

Q. I have a son who has been offered a football scholarship to (school deleted) in the Big Ten. A friend of mine tells me that the IRS is now looking at the exemption given athletic scholarships and may begin to tax them. Can you tell me if this is true and why the IRS is doing it?

— Name withheld, Eau Claire, Wis.

A. Only the IRS knows why, but we can tell you that the condition governing college scholarships have been redefined. And it includes a kind of Catch-22 clause that needs to be noted by parents of athletes. The value of the scholarship is not taxable even if a student decides not to compete simply because he doesn't feel like it.

However, if the school requires the student to engage in some other activity — say, as a student manager — the scholarship may be considered as taxabled income.

LCC Tackles Bison, Phillips On Road

SHAWNEE, Okla. (Special) — Darrell Price is the first to admit Lubbock Christian's basketballers haven't exactly set the world on fire this year, as the Chaparrals' 1-12 record would indicate.

However, LCC launches the new year with a two-day trek into Oklahoma this weekend for battles against Texoma Conference foes Oklahoma Baptist here tonight and Phillips University at Enid Saturday and Price feels the Chaps can bounce back.

"I reckon anything can be salvaged," Price said Thursday, speaking of the remaining 16 games, nine of which will be played at home.

"We're certainly going to try to turn things around. Right now, we've got the best attitude we've had all year. But it's going to be tough going on the road. . .that's where we've been most of the year and we really haven't played that well.

"We've got to play a little defense and take care of the basketball. It's hard to work in practice on taking care of the ball. You either can or can't. We're trying to slow the tempo down and that should help some in that regard.

"A lot of playing defense is being made aware of it. We're going to sag and help each other. I don't think we'll be able to put much pressure on the wings."

The Chaparrals are down to nine healthy bodies. Mike Wrinkle, a 6-7 junior, strained an achilles tendon on the first day of a four-day road trip last month and is still unable to cut or jump on the ankle. And freshman Gary Norris of Lubbock High is currently taking two courses in an attempt to keep his eligibility and will not be available this weekend.

That means Price will probably start four freshmen and a senior tonight against OBU, which is 3-9. Senior Mike Kahler (6-5) will be joined on the front line by 6-3 Lamar Sampy and 6-4 Brian Fortner, with 6-1 Edwin Miles and 6-4 Jack Bell starting at guards.

Price will call on 6-0 junior Les Lierman and 6-0 soph Steve Doudney as guard replacements and 6-7 junior Lowell Walker and 66 frosh Mike Buckner the front-line reserves.

"We don't start (South) Zone play for two weeks," Price explained. "That will give us time to get settled in. We need Gary and Mike pretty bad. We should be a pretty solid team when they get back," Price said, then quickly added, " . . . when and if."

LCC is averaging 75.6 points a game and shooting 45.6 from the floor, but Chap opponents are averaging 90.1 points and hitting 50.8.

OBU, which lost 103-59 to Texas Tech back in November, is led by 6-3 Buck Alexander, who is averaging 20.8 points. Other probable starters for the Bison will be 6-3 freshman Skip Masters, 6-6 Corky Shelby, 6-5 Bob Hoffman and either 6-7 Sam Steffel or 5-9 Luiz Pollard.

The Bison, whose opponents are hitting 51 per cent from the field, are down to eight players.

Phillips, which faces Wayland Baptist tonight, is 9-4 and fresh from a 60-59 road victory over University of Nebraska-Omaha Tuesday.

The Hustlin Haymakers are led by 6-6 foward Alex Neely, who is averaging 14.8. Other starters will be 6-7 post Ricky Graham, 6-6 forward Myron Simms and 6-0 guards Lenny Roehrkasse and Chris Beaudin.

Phillips is hitting 49 per cent from the floor as a team, second best in the TAC.

Woody Hayes Due To Be 'Roasted'

MIAMI (AP) — Woody Hayes, the head football coach at Ohio State, will be "roasted" here next month by celebrities from the entertainment and sports world.

Former Presdent Gerald Ford will present the Feet of Clay Award to Hayes at the benefit for the University of Miami athletic scholarship program, UM athletic director Pete Elliott announced Thursday.

Among the celebrities expected at the $150 per ticket event are Telly Savalas, Paul Anka, Cloris Leachman, Gabe Kaplan, Ann-Margret, Joe Louis, Jackie Gleason, Jimmy Connors and Muhammad Ali.

ABC-TV sportcaster Frank Gifford will be roastmaster.

Jayton Seeks Revenge Against Bulldogs

By WALT McALEXANDER
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Seven South Plains loops are involved in district play and there are important games on tap in each league, but perhaps the highlight game of the evening tonight will be at Spur where Jayton will seek revenge against the Bulldogs.

It was Spur who upended Jayton's boys seven days ago in the semifinals of the Jayton Tournament. And that loss led to the Jaybirds falling from the No. 1 spot among area Class B teams.

Thus tonight, the 'Birds will attempt to improve on their fourth place standings aginst Spur. Spur is 9-6 on the season; Jayton 9-4.

Abilene Cooper, the No. 1 ranked unit in AAAA, treks to Midland to face Lee in a 5-AAAA contest, hoping to improve on its 19-2, 2-0 mark. At the same time, Abilene, ranked No. 2 and boasting 20-3, 2-0 ledgers, will host Midland.

Pampa, ranked No. 4, hosts Dumas while Tascosa and Amarillo, listed No. 2 and 5 respectively, challenge Lubbock High and Monterey.

The top two AAA teams — Estacado and Dunbar — square off against each other. No. 3 Monahans is at Eunice, No. 4 Lamesa entertains Pecos and No. 5 Borger is in the Oklahoma City Tournament.

The top two AA teams, Dimmitt and Morton, take on AAA foes with the Bobcats hosting Perryton and the Indians in Odessa to face Ector. No. 3 Friona is at Floydada, No. 4 Roosevelt hosts Idalou and No. 5 Tulia entertains Littlefield.

The No. 1 Class A team, Lubbock Christian, takes the night off. No. 2 Shallowater hosts AA Olton, Paducah puts its No. 3 mark on the line in a 7-A contest against Munday and Nos. 4 and 5 Lorenzo and Crosbyton, respectively, face 4-A tilts. Lorenzo (10-3, 3-0) hosts Ralls (5-13, 0-2) and Crosbyton (11-4, 2-0) is at Petersburg (3-5, 3-0) with the winner getting at least a share of the lead.

Sands, No. 1 in Class B with 19-1 mark, puts its 1-0 9-B ledger on the line against Loop. No. 2 Southland risks its perfect season (15-0, 2-0) against Smyer on the road in an 8-B outing, No. 3 Whitharral (13-5) hosts surprising Cotton Center (12-7) and No. 5 Motley County (14-5) is at Valley (9-9).

Four of the top five area AA girls teams will be squaring off tonight. No. 1 Slaton (15-4) opens 5-AA play against Cooper (8-10), but No. 2 Lockney (16-4) entertains No. 5 Muleshoe (12-7) and No. 3 Roosevelt (14-3) hosts No. 4 Idalou (11-5).

In Class A, No. 1 Stanton faces Reagan County on the road. One key district matchup finds No. 2 New Deal (16-2, 3-0) at No. 4 Hale Center (12-4, 2-0).

No. 3 Springlake-Earth (15-4) tackles defending Class B State Champion Nazareth (17-3), which is No. 2 in Class B. No. 5 Ralls (12-6, 2-0) faces Lorenzo (1-12, 0-3) on the road.

Jayton's (21-1) girls are listed No. 1 in B and also face Spur. No. 3 Sands (19-2) faces Loop (2-10, 0-1) in its first district game, No. 4 Klondike (14-3, 1-0) entertains Borden County (13-4, 1-0) in a key 9-B outing and No. 5 Silverton (17-3) is at Class A Kress (5-8).

Ropesville, the defending 8-B champ, will attempt to keep up with Southland tonight when the Eagles (10-5, 2-0) face Whiteface (0-2). The Whiteface girls (12-4, 2-0) are defending champs but Ropes, Sundown and Smyer are also 2-0 at this point.

Denver City (11-5, 2-0) and Slaton (10-5, 2-0) will attempt to keep their 5-AA marks unblemished when they go against Frenship (10-8, 0-1) and Cooper (4-13, 0-2).

Watson Calms Nerves With 63

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Tom Watson was faced with the problem encountered only by those who achieve unmatched superiority in their chosen field of endeavor.

What do you do for an encore?

"Every golfer who's had a good season wonders and worries about it," said Watson, twice a winner in major head-to-head duels with Jack Nicklaus and the 1977 PGA Tour Player of the Year.

"Over the time you took off at the end of the year, has your game gone completely?

"I was really very nervous starting off."

He answered those questions and calmed his nerves with a spectacular 9-under-par 63 that staked him to a 3-shot lead Thursday in the first round of the first tournament of the 1978 tour, the $200,000 Joe Garagiola-Tucson Open. It matched the best subpar effort of his pro career and, with stunning immediacy, re-established him as the game's premier performer.

Watson, now 28, scaled golf's heights with his 1977 successes. The triumphs over Nicklaus in the Masters and British Open were the most publicized. But he also won three other American title, was fifth or better in another dozen tournaments, led the money-winners with $310,000 and won the Vardon Trophy for the best stroke average.

But he tailed off just a little at the end of the year.

"I was mentally tired," Watson said. "It's the first time I've gotten that way playing golf. When you're like that, it's hard to stay gutsy."

He took off for 2½ months, went home to Missouri and contented himself with acquiring a pilot's license just before coming to Tucson for the opening of the season.

"I think the layoff did more for my heart than it did for my golf swing," he said. "I really wasn't sure how I was going to play. I guess I ought to do this more often."

He didn't make a bogey, missed only one green, missed one fairway and called it "an exciting round."

Charles Coody, a 40-year-old veteran whose last American victory came in the 1971 Masters, was second with a 66 that included two eagles. Frank Beard, who has played so poorly for four years he said he's considering leaving the game, and young Bill Rogers were next with 67s, 5-under-par on the sprawling, 7,305 yard Tucson National Golf Club course.

J.C. Snead and Keith Fergus shot 68s in the mild, sunny weather that graced this desert valley.

Lee Trevino shot a 70. Defending champion Bruce Lietzke and PGA titleholder Lanny Wadkins has 71s. Johnny Miller, who won this title three consecutive years before hitting the golfing doldrums last season, was well back with a struggling 74.

Watson used a delicate chipping technique he said he learned only Wednesday from Phil Rodgers to set up two of his birdies, running the ball to within 6 feet of the flag on par 5 holes.

He also dropped a pair of downhill 20-footers, scored from 10 and 12 feet on consecutive holes coming home and had three more birdies after lofting mid-irons to within 4 feet of the flag.

Homer King Aaron Still Hospitalized

ATLANTA (AP) — Major league baseball's home run king, Henry Aaron, remained hospitalized today for more tests after suffering chest pains earlier in the week, according to an Atlanta Braves spokesman.

Randy Donaldson said Aaron, a vice president of the National League club, has had several tests since being hospitalized Tuesday. None of the results have been released.

Donaldson said the 43-year-old Aaron was doing "very well" but would have further tests today.

Aaron was stricken with the pains Tuesday while driving his son to a bus station and called his doctor, who had him checked into Piedmont Hospital.

Aaron's physician, Dr. David Watson, did not say when Aaron would be released from the hospital.

Tulsa Spanks Buffs 70-56 In MVC Tilt

AMARILLO (AP) — Terry Sims hit 15 of his total 21 points in a torrid second half Thursday night to spark Tulsa to a 70-56 victory over West Texas State in the Missouri Valley Conference opener for both teams.

The Hurricane held a 33-30 lead at halftime, but exploded to a lead of as many as 15 points in the second half. The Buffs, now 3-7, trailed the entire game.

Lester Johnson and Steve McDowell added 10 points each for Tulsa, which won its second straight game to raise its season mark to 2-7.

Reed Addison hit 14 points and pulled down 10 rebounds for West Texas. Maurice Cheeks had 11 points for the Buffs, while Carl Johnson and Dan Elmer added 10 each.

MUDHOLE MAN — Mac McLendon ponders a bad lie on the eighth hole of Tucson Open Thusday. The lie of the ball on the edge of near-dry lake was just one of the problems McLendon faced. He bogied the hole and finished with a 73, far behind Tom Waston's leading 63. (AP Laserphoto)

Bear Ace Top NFL Performer

CHICAGO (AP) — Now that the Chicago Bears' season is over, star runner and offensive-line booster Walter Payton can take a break from patting others on the back.

But that just isn't the unselfish, never-say-die character of the strong, compactly built man who lunges for extra yards and helps up tacklers when they finally bring him down.

So after a panel of 84 sports writers and broadcasters had picked him on Thursday as the Associated Press' Most Valuable Player in the National Football League, his reaction was predictable.

"I can't believe it. There's so many other guys in the league that I admire and I think are super players, and for me to get it is something that seems to be unreal. I can't believe it," he said by telephone from Hattiesburg, Miss., where he was quail hunting.

Well, then, who would the NFL's rushing king and NFC's top scorer vote for? He slithered past the question as deftly as he leaves potential tacklers hugging air.

"It's just like a list of who's who. There's guys that play defense that play well and others on offense who play well. To name one personally would be an injustice," he said.

Payton got 57 MVP votes. Two quarterbacks, Miami's Bob Griese and Denver's Craig Morton, were tied for second with 10 apiece.

Payton's value to the Bears is beyond question. For the first time in 14 years, they reached post-season play. Their 9-5 record was their best since 1965.

Payton, only 23 years old and in his third season out of Jackson State, led the league in rushing with 1,852 yards, third best in NFL history. The rest of the team ran for just 962 yards. His 27 pass receptions were second most on the Bears. And his combined rushing-receiving yardage of 2,121 was a whopping 46 percent of the Bears' total net offense.

He also set two NFL records. His 275 yards rushing on Nov. 20 against Minnesota beat O.J. Simpson's one-game record of 273. His 339 carries for the season were seven more than Simpson's mark.

And in 1976, he led the NFC in rushing with 1,390 yards.

How has he done it all?

"I guess the only thing you could say is hard work and being with a club like Chicago where guys care about each other," he said. Guys like center Dan Peiffer, guards Revie Sorey and Noah Jackson and tackles Dennis Lick and Ted Albrecht, the men in front of Payton.

"Those guys are still young and they have a lot more to learn and they've come so far in just a short time," he added.

"People say I've accomplished so much in such a short time. Nobody could tell you who was the NFL's most valuable player five years ago unless you had a book to look it up in and in two years, maybe next year, it'll be the same way," Payton said.

"I never look back on the past. I never retrogress. I always progress. I feel good about it (the MVP award), but that's it. Next year I'll try to do the same or better."

Hoosiers Win By 18, But Knight On Rampage

By The Associated Press

The Indiana basketball won, but didn't win artistically enough to please Bobby Knight.

The Indiana crowd yelled, but didn't yell enthusiastically enough to please Bobby Knight.

In fact, nothing pleased Bobby Knight, especially after an off night in shooting by the Hoosiers.

"I thought our play offensively in this game was the worst I've seen since I've been here," said Knight after his 11th-ranked Hoosiers routed Iowa 69-51 Thursday night despite a poor 33 percent shooting performance from the field.

The Hawkeyes didn't do much better with 36 percent, and contributed a basketful of turnovers, and therein was the story of their Big Ten opener.

"I don't think we were thinking about playing basketball tonight," said the sometimes irascible Indiana coach.

Knight spared nobody after the Hoosier's lackluster performance, even finding fault with the behavior of the Indiana fans.

"If our crowd can't generate any more enthusiasm than they did tonight, then I don't know what they are doing here," snapped the Indiana coach. "I thought our play was disgraceful and I thought the crowd was just as bad. We need help when we play teams other than Notre Dame."

Mike Woodson and Wayne Radford combined for 31 points and led a game-breaking, eight-point streak late in the second half for Indiana.

"Any time you turn the ball over 20 times in the first half, you can pack your bags and go elsewhere," said Iowa Coach Lute Olsen. "We had an immeasurable lack of poise. It was their defense for certain. But I think, their reputation was, for us, the biggest hassle. We were our own worst enemy."

Elsewhere among Top 20 teams, ninth-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas whipped Cal State Northridge 83-72; No. 17 Providence defeated Brown 68-52; No. 18 Michigan State beat Minnesota 87-83 and Nevada-Reno upset No. 19 San Francisco 82-80.

Willard Govain scored 20 points, leading five players in double figures as unbeaten Nevada-Las Vegas whipped Cal State Northridge for its 14th victory in a row this season and 72nd consecutive home-court triumph.

A 25-point performance by Dwight Williams led Providence over Brown. The Friars broke the game open with a 12-4 streak midway through the second half.

Earvin Johnson scored 31 points and paced a furious comeback late in the second half to help Michigan State beat Minnesota. Mychal Thompson, who recently returned from NCAA suspension, was the Gophers' top scorer with 27 points.

Johnny High and Michael Gray ignited a second-half rally to pull Nevada-Reno back from a 17-point deficit and give the Wolf Pack its stunning West Coast Athletic Association victory over San Francisco.

Trailing 68-51 with 10:32 remaining, Reno outscored USF 21-2 to take the lead 72-70 on a basket by Gray with six minutes left.

After USF's Winford Boynes scored on a jump shot to tie the game, Reno center Edgard Jones scored two free throws and a field goal to give the Wolf Pack a 76-72 lead with 1:48 to go.

The Dons pulled to within two points three times, but High made four free throws and Steve Hunter added two more to clinch the victory.

"When we were 17 down, I just told the guys to do some gambling," said Nevada-Reno Coach Jim Carey. "It's a great victory for us because they are on top and we're just coming."

"It's very frustrating," said San Francisco Coach Bob Gaillard, "but no way do I want to detract from what Reno did out there tonight. They're so quick they make it look like they have seven guys out there on that press. Our guys have to learn tha it's never easy. They've been accustomed to blowing people out when they are up by 17. Tonight, we ran into somebody we couldn't do that to."

Elsewhere, Joel Thompson and Alan Hardy each scored 18 points to lead Michigan to an 80-65 victory over Northwestern; Ohio State whipped Wisconsin 77-61 behind Ken Page's 18 points and Walter Jordan's 21 points led Purdue over Illinois 95-85.

Also, Jack Zimmerman led a 14-4 second-half tear as Dayton defeated North Carolina-Charlotte 61-55; Tulsa whipped West Texas State 70-56 behind Terry Sims' 21 points; Andrew Parker pumped in 31 points for Iowa State and then pulled down the clinching rebound in a 74-71 victory over Drake; Jeff Judkins scored 24 points in Utah's 83-76 overtime victory over Utah State and Clint Richardson poured in 27 points to lead Seattle to a 95-83 decision over Pepperdine.

Texas' 90-41 slaughter of a young Texas Christian team was not a pretty sight. TCU Coach Tim Somerville thinks — or make that, hopes — it doesn't get any worse.

"I don't think it can get any worse than tonight," said Somerville after Thursday night's game. The rookie coach has four freshmen in his starting lineup. "But the kids try. When you make 15 turnovers in the first half and shoot 15 per cent or whatever it was, there's not much you can do.

"We're a freshman team and we played like it tonight," he added.

The Horned Frogs actually shot a dismal 23 percent in the first half as the Longhorns, now 9-2, seized a 32-12 halftime margin in the Southwest Conference opener for both teams.

TCU ended the game shooting 26 per cent and trailed by 50 points at one point.

In other SWC action Thursday nght, Houston demolished Houston Baptist 103-51.

Steve Scales, the Horned Frogs' leading scorer at 17.6 points per game before Thursday night, missed all nine of his shots from the field and finished with two points.

"When Steve Scales has a bad night, we get blown out," said Somerville. Aurdie Evans had 10 points to pace the Frogs.

Meanwhile, Jim Krivacs hit 20 points and reserve guard Dave Shepard added 16 for the Longhorns, who last played on Dec. 27.

"We hadn't played in a while and we were a little rusty," said Texas Coach Abe Lemons. "At least we're 1-0 for conference play. Houston must be 22-2 by now, they've played so many games."

The Cougars are actually 10-2 after their easy conquest of Houston Baptist. Mike Schultz hit 21 and Cecile Rose added 19 as the Cougars tuned up for their SWC opener Sunday against undefeated Arkansas.

In Saturday's action, Baylor travels to Rice, TCU hosts Southern Methodist and Texas entertains Texas Tech.

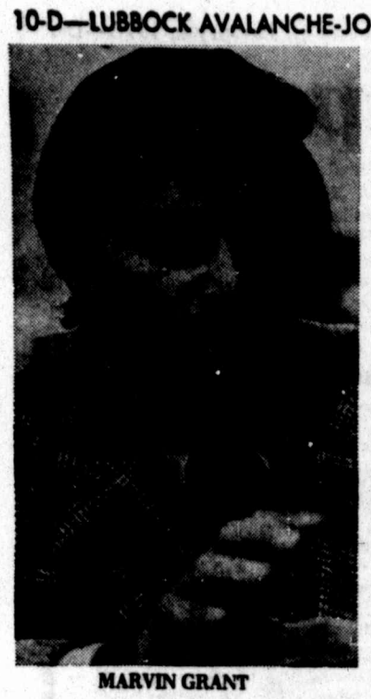
Marketing Progress Cited By Cotton Inc.



MARVIN GRANT

By KETH HENLEY
Avalanche-Journal Farm Writer

The consumer is the key to the prosperity of America's cotton producers, and Cotton Inc. is in the forefront in developing new marketing strategies to boost sales of cotton products.

These points are receiving major emphasis during a series of "annual report" meetings by Cotton Inc., the fiber research and market promotion company owned by U. S. cotton farmers.

Activities are funded each year by a voluntary $1 per bale checkoff, plus an additional assessment of four-tenths of 1 percent of the gross value of the raw fiber.

"Consumers are asking for more cotton in their products," Marvin Grant, CI director of marketing research, said in an interview. "That is what will support cotton in the long run."

However, the only method in which the effectiveness of the company's programs can be judged is to determine whether more or less cotton is sold in apparel and home furnishings during a particular year, compared with the year before, he noted.

Although Cotton Inc. is seven years old, Grant pointed out that marketing programs for cotton began only three to four years ago "in a meaningful way."

"Beginning in 1974 there was a turnaround," he said. "Until then, synthetics were constantly taking a greater share of the fabric market.

"In 1974, from independent information, we can show that cotton began to increase its share of the home furnishings and apparel markets," said the marketing executive.

Cotton's share has continued to grow in terms of sales of consumer goods, Grant added, which is the most important thing to the basic strategy of increasing the markets and consumption of cotton in the United States.

He said Cotton Inc. has been a leader in the development of new market strategies for textiles. Until recently, a tendency to make a product and "push it through on the consumer" was a distinctive difference between the textile industry and other industries, noted Grant.

However, drug and household product manufacturers, he said, always have concentrated on the consumer, making products she wanted, thus continuing to grow.

"Every product Cotton Inc. supports can be justified through consumer research (which has determined) that it is a good product that outperforms its competition," said Grant. "The Natural Blend shirt is more comfortable — throught consumer evidence — than other shirts on the market, and 100 percent cotton jeans are consumer preferred over blended jeans."

In textile research, the official said a "vapor phase process" has been developed by Cotton Inc. in which shrink control and durable press characteristics can be provided for 100 percent cotton fabrics.

A patented process, Grant said money that comes back to CI is used within the company for additional research.

Cotton Inc. has estimated that through the efforts of its research and marketing divisions, more than 300,000 additional garments a year are being treated.

Grant said U. S. cotton growers saved an estimated $7 million in transportation and handling charges through the use of module builders during the 1976 crop. Savings on 1977 cotton production are projected at $14 million.

The cotton compacting machinery was developed under contract with Texas A &M University and patented by Cotton Inc.

Headquartered in New York City with research offices in Raleigh, N. C., Cotton Inc. is controlled by a board composed of cotton producers. The number of directors from each state is determined in proportion to the number of bales the state produces.

On the High Plains and Rolling Plains of Texas, directors are W. B. Criswell of Idalou, Donnell Echols of Lamesa, J. D. Smith of Sudan, L. C. Unfred of Tahoka and R. H. Whorton of Roscoe.

Following is a schedule for the remaining CI annual meetings across the area:

Slaton — 9:30 a.m. Jan. 16 at the American Legion Hall. J. Dukes Wooters, CI president, is scheduled to attend.

Seminole — 9:30 a.m. Jan. 17 at the Civic Center.

Levelland — 9:30 a.m. Jan. 23 at the Levelland State Bank.

Brownfield — 9:30 a.m. Jan. 24 in the Pioneer Natural Gas Building.

Officials Threaten To Close Elevator

HOUSTON (UPI) — City officials Thursday promised to close a public grain elevator if necessary to prevent an explosion like the one that killed 18 persons in Galveston, however, port authority officials said a shutdown was not required.

Fire Chief V.E. Rogers, who took office with Mayor Jim McConn Tuesday, warned of court action aimed at a shutdown if he is not satisfied with an ongoing $3 million safety improvements program at the Houston Port Authority Grain Elevator.

Rogers said city lawyers ultimately will decide "whether the facility can continue to operate during the new construction phase or whether court relief should be sought in the interest of protecting life, safety and property.

"The port authority's proposals ... as to interim preventive maintenance, temporary repairs, appropriate housekeeping and limited operation during periods of low humidity will impact upon this decision," Rogers said.

He released a a port, based on three years of fire marshal's inspections, citing explosive grain dust buildup "heightened by inadequate housekeeping ... open light sockets, exposed electrical plugs and uncovered wiring."

"This situation becomes particularly alarming during periods of low humidity when the threat of ignition from static electriity increases, the report said.

Dry weather, highly volatile grain dust and sparks from yet undetermined sources have been blamed for a recent Westwego, La., explosion that killed 35 and the Galveston blast which killed 18.

General Manager Richard P. Leach said the port authority will fight any effort to close the elevator because its income is needed to pay off revenue bonds.

"We would do voluntarily anything the authorities want us to do short of closing it," said Leach, who called the elevator "clean as an elevator can be."

F. William Colburn, port lawyer, said city and port officials have worked on safety ever since a Goodpasture Inc. explosion killed nine persons in the Port of Houston in February 1976. He promised continued cooperation.

"The fire marshal's office has been working with us and we've been working with them," Colburn said. "They've made suggestions for corrective measures and we've taken them.

"We're meeting with them to discuss corrective measures. We're more interested than anybody in having our elevator a safe one and I think we want to take whatever steps are necessary to insure that it is safe.

"Of course, we believe its safe and people who work out there believe it's safe."

Colburn said that after several consultations with the fire marshal's office, the port authority hired R.S. Fling & Partners Inc. of Columbus, Ohio, to design, build and install $2.9 miliion worth of dust-control equipment.

The 6 million-bushel public elevator is one of several in the Port of Houston. Colburn said it handles only export grain. He said about 50 persons work there.

The port elevator is owned by the port authority and available to the public.

THREE CENT BREAD — Three cents was all Mrs. Frances Jones, wife of a Darlington (S.C.) County farmer, was asking for a loaf of bread as she and others sold the bread from the back of pickups to demonstrate farmers' calls for 100 per cent of parity. The farm folk bought up 600 loaves of bread from regular retail outlets at the day's price of 58 cents per loaf, then resold it for three cents per loaf, an amount equal to the portion of the total price that the farmer gets for the wheat that is in the bread. The bread sold out in about two hours. (AP Laserphoto)

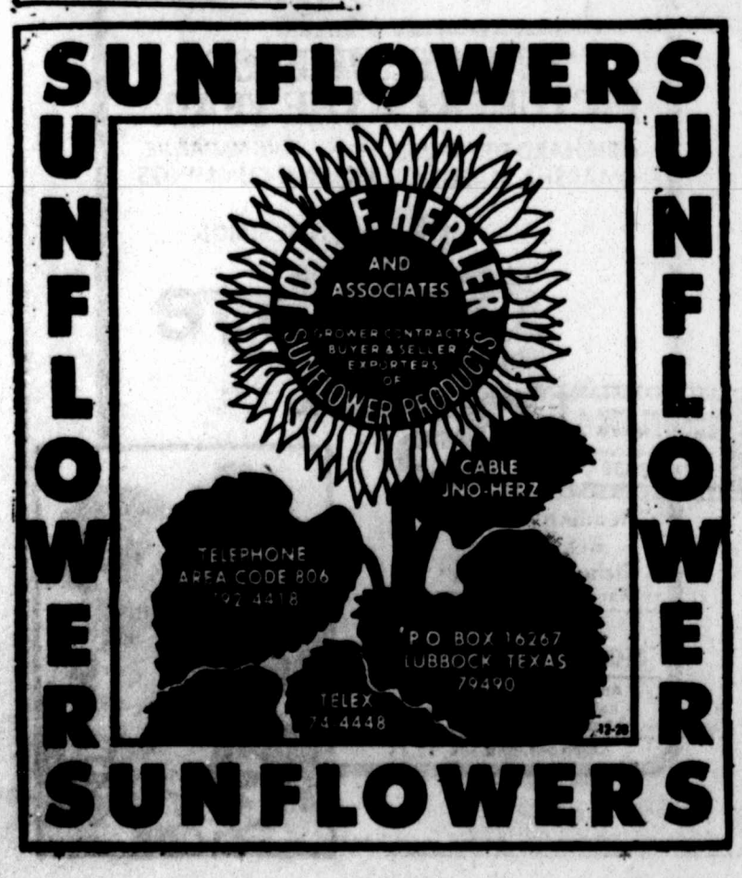
Veterinarians Monitor Use Of Antibiotics

SCHAUMBURG, Ill. (Special)—The nation's veterinarians are prepared to assume the responsibility for overseeing the use of tetracycline antibiotics as feed additives, according to Dr. W.L. Anderson, president of the American Veterinary Medical Association (AVMA).

Speaking for the association in a letter to Dr. Donald Kennedy of the Food and Drug Administration, Anderson said that while the AVMA did not encourage or "wholeheartedly endorse" Kennedy's announced proposal, the group "will do all that it can to assure the coopertation and effective action of veterinarians in the matter." (if adopted the FDA plan would place the responsibility for the use of tetracycline antibitants as feed additiives on veterinarians.

"We believe," said Anderson, "that there are adequate numbers of veterinarians distributed throughout the country to carry out the proposed program relating to subtherapeutic uses of tetracycline antibiotics as feed additives."

Anderson also advised Kennedy of the recent recommendation by the AVMA's Council on Biologic and Therapeutic Agents that some type of educational program be implemented to assist veterinarians in understanding the responsibilities associated with the proposed regulations.



Wheat Meet Readied In Wichita

WASHINGTON (Special) — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland will head the list of world agricultural leaders participating in the National Association of Wheat Growers' 1978 convention in Wichita, Kan., according to Jerry Rees, the association's executive vice president.

Bergland will appear Jan. 17 at "Kansas Nite" activities in the Broadview Hotel. His comments will follow an afternoon address by U.S. Rep. Dan Glickman, representative of Kansas's Fourth Congressional District and a member of the House Agriculture Committee.

Sir Leslie Price, chairman of the Australian Wheat Board, will speak at the annual banquet Jan. 18. Price has been associated with administration of the Australian wheat industry for more than 20 years, and he is the former head of the Queensland Graingrowers' Association and the Australian Wheatgrowers' Federation.

His topic is "Will Wheat Policies Boomerang? A View From Down Under."

World trade negotiations and a new international wheat pact will be discussed by Alan Wolff, President Carter's deputy special trade representative, at an international luncheon on Jan. 17. Both agreements will set rules governing farm export and import trade in the years ahead and have a direct bearing on producer interests.

Producer delegations from France and Canada and trade officials from Europe and the Middle East will attend the sessions.

A focus on the overseas marketing efforts of wheat producers will be Jan. 17 and 18, according to Rees.

"Producers have programs operating in over 69 primary markets for U.S. wheat", he said. Our program will showcase the activities of Great Plains Wheat Inc. in the European and Middle Eastern markets where good growth potential exists."

The domestic wheat scene also will be developed at the Wichita meeting. The convention's keynote address will be given by Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., on Jan. 17. Energy policy will be discussed that morning by Ivan Maple with the U.S. Department of Energy, and William Douce, president of Phillips Petroleum Co.

Brown Airs Candidacy

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown said Thursday he will announce his candidacy for agriculture commissioner next Tuesday.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe named Brown as agriculture commissioner March 21, 1977, to fill the vacancy created by the appointment of John White as U.S. Deputy Secretary of Agriculture.

Brown, 56, was Briscoe's special assistant.

Administration Expresses Global Farm Trade Views

WASHINGTON (AP) — Last week's meeting between Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland and a European Common Market leader produced no important decisions but helped underscore the administration's view of how global farm trade should work.

The meeting, held in Brussels with Finn-Olav Gundelach, commissioner of agriculture for the European community, was not a negotiating session, the two leaders said.

But it helped clear the air regarding international wheat negotiations and for the forthcoming final phase of multilateral trade talks in Geneva, Switzerland, next month.

Thirty years ago the United States and 22 other nations set up the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade which was intended to bring more order to world business and gradually result in liberalized trade.

Today, about 110 countries are involved in the agreement. One important subject, when the final phase of current talks begin Jan. 15 in Geneva, will be the place of agriculture in the negotiations.

In the previous "Kennedy round" of talks in the mid-1960s, most concentration was placed on reducing protective tariffs among industrialized nations. However, agriculture was not included in the across-the-board tariff cuts.

Now, however, Gundelach and Bergland appear to agree that agriculture should be given a higher priority in final negotiations on the agreement.

"These negotiations are more ambitious," Gundelach told a news conference after his talks with Bergland. "They must be. They must deal with our agriculture in a more fundamental manner."

One complaint of U.S. farm officials is that the Common Market countries have persisted in a "common agricultural policy" in which variable levies are frequently used to restrict imports of U.S. agricultural products.

Bergland has said he does not think the Common Market will alter this policy and added that it might be a waste of time to focus on it and other issues which presumably cannot be changed.

Gundelach acknowledged that while "we might have difficulties and even severe difficulties to overcome in the agricultural field, we would both do our utmost to prevent the trench warfare which was taking place between the U.S. and the community on agriculture for God knows how many years."

The European Common Market countries, despite barriers which limit the entry of som commodities, imported more than $6.8 billion worth of U.S. farm products in the fiscal year which ended Sept. 30. That amounted to more than 28 percent of the year's total of $24 billion exported by American farmers.

One of Bergland's prime objectives since he joined Jimmy Carter's Cabinet last January has been to seek policies aimed at leveling what he calls the peaks and valleys of farm commodity prices.

Bergland believes that international commodity agreements can help stabilize U.S. farm prices and generally create a better world food supply and price situation for everyone, including poor countries.

Bergland, in his Brussels news conference with Gundelach, said current talks in London are aimed at reaching a new international wheat agreement.

He added that one of the U.S. objectives is a price system to eliminate some of the wild swings in grain markets which have occurred in recent years.

There also has been suggestions that corn and other feed grains — called coarse grains — ought to be included in the London discussions at the same time wheat is being debated.

Bergland said that "it's possible" that the wheat talks will result in a general type of grain agreement but that discussions on coarse grains should be conducted separately from wheat.

"It may be more practical to conclude one or two separate agreements," Bergland said. "That is a matter which will be negotiated, but the important fact is that we are prepared to entertain such negotiations and receive all legitimate proposals from countries who've a stake in the coarse grain issue ..."

But Bergland was adamant that "we think any grain arrangement, including wheat, must contain some discussion and some discipline in the area of price. So it's not a matter of principle involved in that regard. It's a matter of detail. We are not so far apart in that regard."

Toward the end of their joint news conference Bergland referred again to the wheat agreement negotiations in London:

"We will not sign a wheat agreement that can't work. We have been through that. If a wheat agreement makes no sense economically, then why go through the exercise.'

U.S. Seen In Continuing Role As Supplier Of World's Grain

WASHINGTON (AP) — An executive of one of the world's largest grain export companies said Friday he believes the United States, with its huge capacity to produce wheat and corn, will continue as the main supplier of grain for other countries.

Clarence D. Palmby, vice president of Continental Grain Co., said he disagreed with a currently popular saying that the United States cannot remain as "the granary for the world."

Palmby's remarks were in a speech prepared for a meeting in Baltimore sponsored by the Cooperative Extension Service of the University of Maryland. A text of his speech was distributed here.

"It is my opinion that the United States will continue to be the granary," Palmby said. "The United States will produce and store grain to capitalize on market opportunities as they develop. The alternative, in my opinion, will simply not be acceptable public policy."

Wheat and corn reserves are the largest since the early 1960s because of record harvests the past three years. The Carter administration has announced acreage curbs for 1978 wheat production and a tentative acreage set-aside to help stem the buildup in corn.

The administration, at the urging of Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, also has set up a long-term program in which farmers can keep grain under government price support loan for as long as three years, thus removing it from the free market.

Palmby, an assistant secretary of agriculture in the early years of the Nixon administration, said he favored grain stocks being held by producers, which is the case in the long-term reserve program.

"In order to be in a position to supply an uncertain global market, it will be almost automatic that the United States will in some years accumulate inventories," Palmby said. "Reserves will become large in some years.

"In reality, there is very little the Congress or your government can do to prevent this," he said. "The alternative would be tight production control programs without regard to unusual or unpredictable demand in the world."

CHAMIZAL SETTLEMENT

In recognition of the 1963 Chamizal Settlement, Congress set aside a portion of the land acquired from Mexico to commemorate the harmonious resolution of a long-standing boundadry dispute. Here the National Park Service set up the Chamizal National Memorial.

Commodities

By Mike Stevens

IF YOU ARE ENGAGED IN LIVESTOCK production, you assume price risk the moment you place cattle or hogs on feed, and in a real sense you speculate that at the time of marketing that the cash price for your animals will be profitable. Many feeders, ranging from the largest commercial operators to family feeders, consider the commodity futures market an effective tool for managing this price risk. It has been their experience that a well-planned futures market hedge can provide not only price insurance but also a number of other economic benefits to a livestock operation.

The "Livestock Hedger's Workbood", published by the Chicago Mercantile (CME), is designed to give you a beter understanding of hedging fundamentals, including the all-important matter of timing. There are times when it is wise to hedge and times when it is unwise. Vital elements of the workbook are the cost worksheet and the hedging worksheet, which, if properly used, will greatly enhance your chances of making a prudent hedging decision.

Without knowing the costs of feeding your livestock to market weight, you won't know your bread-even selling price, which is vital in determining whether (and when) to hedge. Without this price figure, you will be unable to determine with any accuracy whether the futures price at a particular time will (or will not) lock in a profit. Naturally, if you don't own your feed and have not locked in a fixed cost through forward contracting or hedging your feed needs, your break-even costs will be more uncertain and it will be more difficult to hedge effectively.

The cost worksheet is included in the workbook to better help you determine all costs of production prior to making any hedging decision.

Similarly, the hedging worksheet will help you determine profit loss from hedging and the best time to hedge part or all of a single inventory of livestok coming to market at the same time.

Copies of the CME "Livestock Hedger's Workbook" are available free of charge from any brokerage house.

THE LIVESTOCK HEDGING CHECKLIST on page one of the workbook is worth passing on:

1. Know your costs.
2. Estimate future cash market price moves –for or against you, and by how much.
3. Know the CME contract specifications.
4. Know your cost-of-delivery basis.
5. Know your historical basis.
6. Lock in your feed costs by forward contracting or hedging.
7. Use a knowledgeable banker who is willing to meet all your margin calls.
8. Use a good commodityu futures broker who can help you with your basis, with fundamentals, prices, and provide sound advice.
9. Develop your hedging plan in advance with your broker and your banker to avoid having to make emotional decisions later under pressure.
10. Don't plan to hedge your entire deliverable herd at one time except when windfall profits may be locked in.
11. Remember, your position in futures must be opposite your position in the cash market. Otherwise you wil be speculating in both markets.
12. When you sell your livestock, lift (offset) your hedge.
13. Keep in mind that it is easier to predict basis changes than price movements.
14. Bear in mind that your hedge is an insurance policy to be cashed when your livestock are sold. Your broker can advise you if a rare opportunity exists to profit by making delivery.

Food For Peace Allocation Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department announced Tuesday a revised Food for Peace allocation in which qualified foreign countries will get $741.4 million worth of U.S. farm commodities this year, an increase of $87.9 millionn from an initial allocation made last fall.

Five countries among 21 with per capital incomes at or below the poverty line of $550 a year will get most of the increase. They include:

Egypt, $170 million, up $14.5 million from the initial allocation; Indonesia $118.2 million, up $18.9 million and Sri Lanka $31.4 million, up $17.4 million.

In addition, two new countries were added to the food aid list-Bolivia, which will be eligible for $8.8 million in commodities during the fiscal year which will end next Sept. 30, and Guyana, $2.1 million.

Among a second group of nine countries which have per capita incomes of more than $550 a year, Peru was allocated $20 million, an increase of $15 million, and Tunisia $11.2 million, up $6 million.

THe commodities can be bought by the countries under Title I of the Food for Peace law which provides for low interest credit for up to 40 years, including a 10-year grace period of no payments.

Assistant Secretary Dale E. Hathaway, who oversees international affairs and commodity programs for the department, said that "situations may develop which would cause a change" among the countries and allocations announced Tuesday.

Congress specified that at least 75 percent of the food aid must go to poor countries at or below the poverty line set by the International Development Association. The poverty line currently, on a per capita basis, is $550 a year.

The total level for the program remains at $800 million for the 1977-78 fiscal year, including $58.5 million initially was announced, $146.5 million remained unallocated.

Other countries in the poverty group and their new aLlocations compared with the initial sums included:

Afghanistan $5.4 million and $6.2 million previously; Banglandesh $47.4 million and 55.9 million; Guinea $5.5 million and unchanged; Haiti $10.5 million and $9.9 million; HOnduras $1.6 million and $1.5 million; India $27.8 million and unchanged; Morocco $11 million and $10.3 million; Pakistan $57.6 million and unchanged; Philippines $13.3 million and unchanged; Senegal $8.1 million and $6.7 million; Sierra Leone $1.4 million and unchanged; Somalia $7 million and $2 million; Sudan $11 million and $10.3 million; Tanzania $6.5 million and $2.7 million; Zaire $18 million and $17.9 million; and Zambia $4.4 million and $.6 million.

Allocations for other countries above the poverty line included: unchanged; Jordan $5.5 million and $5.2 million; SOuth Korea $58.8 million and $57.8 million; Lebanon $7.7 million and unchanged; POrtugal $40 million and unchanged and Syria $14 million and unchanged.

INDIAN CONCENTRATION

Around CItadel Ruin, near Wupatki National Monument, was a concentration of prehistoric Indians. Within one square mile, there are more than 100 sites, from small earth lodges to large pueblos. The unexcavated Citadel was a fortified apartment house–probably one or two stories high with about 50 rooms.

Return To Prices Of 1973-75 Found To Be More Reasonable

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — One reason today's farm prices seem so dismal is that they follow "the most profitable years American agriculture ever had," a University of Illinois agricultural economist says.

Farmers interested in parity for their products should seek a return to prices received from 1973-75, not a return to the much-celebrated "Golden Days of Agriculture" from 1910-1914, according to Harold D. Guither, public policy specialist with the university's Cooperative Extension Service.

By the early 1970s, income had risen sharply in developing nations. This, coupled with poor harvests in several countries, caused a spurt in farm exports from $6.95 billion in 1970 to $21.8 billion by 1975.

The price of corn shot from an average of $1.08 a bushel in 1971 to $3.03 in 1974. Soybeans went from $3.03 a bushel to $6.64, according to USDA statistics.

It was a time of often frantic spending by farmers with unexpected extra cash. Implement dealers were backlogged six months. Fierce bidding for land to expand farm operations tripled the average value of Illinois farmland. Thousands of land owners became millionaires, on paper at least, as prime Midwest ground rose in value to as much as $4,500 an acre.

Complaints by farmers seem understandable now that corn has plummeted to $1.91 a bushel and the value of a bushel of soybeans has shrunk to $5.68.

Guither noted that the value of all farm products has only fallen 6½ percent since 1974.

"But the real key to all the unrest (among farmers) is the prices they're paying. Since 1974, prices have risen by 23 percent ... Assuming a farmer had the same production, his actual income fell by nearly 30 percent."

The American Agriculture movement, a loosely organized group that recently supported demonstrations around the nation and called on farmers to stop production, wants federal action to guarantee farm prices at 100 percent of parity.

At full parity, farmers theoretically have the same purchasing power for the items they sell as their forebears had early in this century when prices and costs were said to be in step.

By comparison, farm prices as of Nov. 15 averaged 66 percent of parity, one of the lowest marks for the indicator in 44 years.

The concept of parity is outdated, Guither said, and does not take into account things like technological advances.

"By all records, 1973-75 were the most profitable years American agriculture ever had," he said. "And even those years don't show 100 percent of parity. At the very peak it was about 95 percent."

Still, farmers look back with longing to the economy prior to World War I. Until 1967, the 1910-1914 period was used by statisticians to calculate the real value of farm products. Many of the large, comfortable homes gracing rural America were built during that time of agricultural affluence.

"But it is really ironic for farmers to say they want a return to parity with those days," Guither said. "What they really want is to work for the most favorable prices for their crops ... And they could base that on their immediate past."

Live Cattle Futures Suffer Sharp Losses

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Suffering the sharpest one-day losses since July, live cattle futures fell 30 to 115 points Thursday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

February led the decline. Volume climbed to 16,261 contracts as prices skidded to their lowest levels in three weeks on aggressive selling pressure.

This was traced to profit-taking after Wednesday's rise to season's highs in the back months. There also was fear that continued heavy slaughter could lead to pressure on beef, although demand is holding up well thus far.

Wholesale beef was mostly unchanged at 69 1/4 cents per pound for all weights, highest since January 1976. Cash cattle were steady to firm, with the top at $45 per hundredweight.

Slaughter was estimated at 151,000 head. The six markets expect 5,200 head to arrive today.

Live hog futures also faced a sharp drop of from 30 to 102 points led by June. Only the distant February option showed a gain of 30 points on a total turnover of 5,764 contracts.

Pressure came after prices were lifted to new highs since September 1976. There also was spillover from selling in the cattle pit and traders noted some reaction to uncertainty over the weakness of the U. S. dollar.

Early buying followed light hog runs and higher prices coupled with firmer tones to pork products.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to up one cent at 75 1/2 to 79 cents per pound, f.o.b. river points, a one-week high. Cash hogs were steady to up $1, with the top at $46 per hundredweight.

The six major terminals expect receipts of 22,500 head today. Thursday's kill was set at 303,000 head.

Pork bellies (bacon) followed the other meat futures and finished with losses of 70 to 152 points led by May, which was off 162 for a time. Volume was estimated at 4,741 turnovers in a mosly local trade.

The market reacted after an early gain of 35 points in the August contract.

Much of the selling was profit-taking after the previous session's advance to highs since May — more than 12 cents per pound above recent lows.

Traders also were wary of a possible increase in hog marketings as roads improve and cash hogs continue on the strong side.

Wholesale bacon was unchanged to up one cent at 56 1/2 to 62 1/2 cents per pound, f.o.b. river, highest since August.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain futures prices declined Thursday on the Chicago Board of Trade, as market participants expressed uncertainty over the ultimate impact of the government's move to bolster the dollar.

Analysts noted that a reversal of the dollar's downward spiral would mean that foreign countries would have to pay more for grains imported from the United States.

On the other hand, a rising dollar could initially stimulate more grain export business from countries that had been waiting to buy in the expectation that the dollar would continue its decline.

But as the dollar scored gains in foreign exchange markets, the price of soybeans declined in Europe. In Chicago, soybean futures dropped an average of 6 cents a bushel despite some good-sized commission house purchases.

Dow Jones Declines To 797.82

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was broadly lower again today, with the continued slide attributed to pessimism over the U.S. dollar's foreign exchange problems and a new boost in the prime lending rate.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which had fallen 26.25 points already this week, was off another 7.10 to 797.82 today.

It was the first time it had fallen below the psychological 800-point barrier since last Oct. 25.

Losers took a 4-1 edge over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts had been expecting a continuation of Thursday's broad decline, which was attributed to doubts over the sufficiency of federal moves to bolster the U.S. dollar in foreign exchange trading.

The dollar has lost considerable value against other currencies recently, mainly due to international concern over the multibillion dollar U.S. balance of payments deficit.

The NYSE composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks was off .35 to 50.90. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index slipped .84 to 124.07.

Big Board volume came to 11.87 million shares over the first hour, up from 9.93 million in the comparable period Thursday.

Also depressing the market was news at the opening that Citibank, the nation's second-largest commercial bank and the usual pacesetter in prime lending rate trends, had raised its prime rate by ¼-point to 8 percent.

The rate, a bank's charge on loans to its best corporate customers, had been at 7¾ per cent virtually industrywide since last November.

Analysts also were watching to see if the so-called January early warning market theory would be triggered. According to the theory, the direction of prices in the first five trading sessions of any January provides a clue to the trend for the rest of the year.

The market has been down in each of the first four trading days of this year.

Amerada Hess, the most-active NYSE stock at noon, was unchanged at 26¼. American Medicorp, the object of a fierce merger battle, was unchanged at 23.
