Suspect wants to talk

NEW YORK (AP) — David R. Berkowitz, found mentally competent to stand trial in the "Son of Sam" case, says he's anxious to tell the world about the howling demons that he claims drove him to kill six persons for blood.

At the two-day competency hearing that concluded Friday, the 24-year-old postal worker from Yonkers laughed at courtroom jokes, chatted with his attorneys and was described by one psychiatrist as attending to the proceedings "with ears and eyes."

Although the neatly-clad defendant interrupted the proceedings about eight times, he did so politely, addressing the judge as "Your honor" and the district attorney as "Sir."

State Supreme Court Justice John Starkey ruled the defendant competent to stand trial for the murder of Stacy Moskowitz, 20, the last of the Son of Sam victims.

"He knows what's happening, that's for sure," the judge said later.

No trial date was set, but Starkey scheduled a hearing on possible motions for Nov. 2. Berkowitz faces similar competency hearings in Queens and The Bronx for murder charges there, but officials said they would postpone further proceedings pending outcome of the Brooklyn case.

Berkowitz kept insisting at the hearing, conducted in the sixth-floor recreation room in Kings County Hospital's psychiatric building, where he has stayed since his arrest Aug. 11 after the biggest manhunt in New York history, that he wanted the opportunity to warn the world about the demons.

That's why he wants to go to trial, he said on a tape recording played during the hearing. He also ruled out pleading innocent by reason of insanity for fear that his message would not be taken seriously.

Berkowitz said he was willing to die for his crimes, but not before telling his story. Looking merely for "peace of mind," he said he was not insane.

Described by his attorney as "quite satisfied" with the competency ruling, Berkowitz had told Dr. Daniel W. Schwartz, head of forensic psychiatry at Kings County Hospital, about demons and angels.

TWO UTILITY poles were damaged and two persons were injured to an unknown extent in a collision at 3:19 p.m. Saturday. Police said Mary Estela Galindo, 19, of 1102 S. Baird St. was eastbound on Front Avenue, crossing the intersection of Front and Marienfield Street, and that Carroll Andrew Stroud of Odessa was northbound on Marienfield. The cars collided at the intersection, reports indicated, causing Mrs. Galindo's car to jump the curb and strike a utility pole, shearing it off at the base. Police said the Galindo vehicle continued east, striking a second utility pole. Mrs. Galindo and her 4-year-old daughter, Melissa Madrid, were taken to Midland Memorial Hospital. Carter goes underground to see post

By RICHARD E. MEYER

DENVER (AP) — President Carter inspected the cavernous, top-secret command post Saturday where the Air Force would launch missiles and bombers in a nuclear war. He said he was "reassured about America's military might."

After touring the underground facility beneath the Nebraska plains, he flew to Denver to meet with critics of his irrigation and reclamation policies and to seek support from western governors for the proposed Panama Canal treaty.

The President's itinerary included a Los Angeles fundraising dinner for the Democratic National Committee on Saturday night. Tickets were $1,000 a plate.

Carter said his tour, a 2½-hour review of Strategic Air Command procedures and facilities, did not change his mind about the B1 bomber. The Air Force wanted the superplane, but Carter decided earlier this year not to build it.

"I think we have an adequate force capability (without it) and that we'll have a good improvement with the cruise missiles when they are deployed," the President said.

When Carter announced his B1 decision on June 30, he listed the capability of the drone missile as a reason the bomber is not needed.

Carter emerged from the auxiliary entrance to the SAC command headquarters where flashing lights, doomsday buttons and telephones are hidden 46 feet below the prairie, then declared:

"I've really been assured about our capability and our training programs around the world. I've been able to talk to all our strategic forces around the world a few minutes ago, and I am really favorably impressed by them."

Standing on the second-floor balcony of the command post, the President spoke to SAC forces on the "red phone," or what is known as SAC's Primary Alerting System, used to give orders to the command's alert forces.

Judge's 'marriage' to court still budding

By LINDA SCHAFFRINA

"So often the people come into the courtroom mad. The bloom is off the rose," and that's what makes divorce cases "less appealing" to hear, 318th District Judge Joseph H. Mims said Friday.

Mims' court Sept. 1 was transformed from a domestic relations court to a district court specializing in family matters. But the operation of the court has changed "none whatever," he said.

Since the Domestic Relations Court was created in 1965, Mims has heard literally thousands of divorces. The court also handles adoptions, terminations of parental rights and name changes.

When Mims became judge of that court in 1965, a friend who was a district judge said to Mims, "Joe, I don't think you'll last long," Mims remembered.

But, 12 years later, Mims believes the judge presiding over a divorce case serves an important function.

"They need someone to listen and help them work this out. Nobody else can or they wouldn't be here," Mims said. "I feel that somebody has to do this. . . . There is a reward in going ahead and hearing it as a disinterested party."

Most persons seeking a divorce list insupportability of the marriage as the grounds, but the older grounds still are on the books, Mims said.

Among the possible ways to get a divorce in Texas are proving adultery or abandonment, living apart three years or one party having been convicted of a felony and serving a year in the penitentiary.

However, Mims said, if the spouse seeking the divorce testified against the felon, other grounds must be found. "It's a safeguard," Mims said.

A contested divorce may be heard before the judge alone or before a jury.

"I don't see how anyone could ever hope to win a jury trial on insupportability," Mims said, if the one seeking the divorce is willing to take the stand and testify that there is a "conflict of personalities" which prevents any reasonable expectation of reconciliation.

If the other party testifies that everything is wonderful in the marriage, "that's a conflict of personality right before the jury. They can't agree on anything," Mims said.

But, he said, there have been two such cases before Midland County juries in recent months, he said. Both divorces were granted.

Most contested divorce hearings, Mims said, involve custody of the children. In every case, the court is to determine what's best for the child, although children 14 or older have a right to state a preference, he said.

Recently written laws have made the father's right to ask for custody clearer, Mims said. But, "I know that it hasn't affected me because I've always felt the father had a right to custody" if it was in the best interest of the child, he said.

A large part of the court's time is taken with termination of parental rights and adoption. Mims said in almost every case, there must be a termination of parental rights before there can be an adoption.

The exception is that a stepfather or stepmother may adopt a child without his or her spouse relinquishing parental rights.

Drizzle chance likely to fizzle today, Monday

The chance of rain which failed to materialize Saturday is hanging on today but will diminish tonight and Monday.

Temperatures should be cooler today, with a high in the mid 60s and a low tonight in the mid 50s. Monday's high should be in the upper 60s.

Winds are expected to be from the east to northeast at 10 to 15 mph, the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal said.

There is a 50 percent chance of rain today, and a 40 percent chance tonight.

Friday's high was 75 degrees and the low was 53 degrees.

Cool temperatures and overcast skies were reported Saturday night in Andrews, Lamesa, Crane, Stanton, Rankin, Big Lake and Big Spring.

Torrential rains, hail and winds up to 62 miles per hour lashed parts of South Texas Saturday morning while a new cold front nudged into northern sections and dropped temperatures into the 40s.

More than nine inches of rain fell on Vanderpool in South Central Texas as flash flood watches went up along the Sabinal and Frio Rivers.

Forecasters expected the Frio to crest at 20 feet at Sabinal, where flood stage is 12 feet. Extensive overbank flooding was expected along the Frio.

At the Victoria airport, wind gusts to 62 mph were reported amid heavy thunderstorms.

ROUSTIN' ABOUT with Ed Todd

ANDREWS — Free enterprise is taking over the government in Andrews.

That's the outward sign, anyway.

For eight years now, four 100-foot long signs along the four major roadways leading into this city of 12,000 folks have declared in red, white and blue colors that "Andrews Loves God, Country and Supports our Government."

That is being changed somewhat.

Support for the government is being nixed, glossed over, painted out.

Support for free enterprise is being painted in.

Why?

"This is really just to try to get America back to free enterprise," said Andrews resident Guy Wood, one of the promoters of changing signs.

Besides, Wood said, free enterprise supports the government, but the government doesn't always reciprocate. There's too much bureaucratic meddling in business, too many controls and regulations.

The revised signs will read: "Andrews Loves God, Country and Supports Free Enterprise."

Wood, a 29-year-old schoolteacher here, caught the free-enterprise fever last summer when he took a course on free enterprise at Sul Ross State University at Alpine.

"I . . . really got enthused," he said.

Therein was planted the movement to alter the "Andrews Loves" signs that went up in 1969 to counteract antigovernment protesting and White House demonstrations during that period of nationwide discontent. Many college-type youths were

Only your graphoanalyst really knows for sure

By KAY HORD

Who knows what evil lurks in the hearts of men?

Along with The Shadow and Dear Abby, any competent graphoanalyst should be able to find out.

Writing is a mental process. Therefore, mental patterns transmit themselves into a person's handwriting, according to Midland graphoanalyst Dolores Gaines.

"It doesn't make you a judge, but it gives you an insight into people," she said.

"If you have a mental habit of anger, even if you are not angry at the time, the anger shows up in your handwriting. If you like to be active, even if you are in a wheelchair, that desire shows," Mrs. Gaines said.

The terrible thing about this is that you have to analyze your own handwriting. When you analyze someone else you can say 'in you it's stubbornness but in me it's determination.' But in graphoanalysis you cannot do that because the marks for stubbornness and determination are entirely different.

"I usually just do thumbnail sketches. I've given several programs to the genealogical society. I have the person tell everything they know about an ancestor, and then I tell what I know from analyzing some of the ancestor's handwriting.

"I've also been asked to analyze handwriting on a credit slip and a will," Mrs. Gaines said.

Graphoanalysis has nothing to do with the occult, according to Mrs. Gaines.

"It's not a plaything. It's used in counseling, job placement and prospective employment. We have an insurance company in Midland that requires handwriting analyses for job applicants. There's a firm in Houston that analyzes handwriting for firms."

Graphoanalysis is 98 percent accurate, she said.

Mrs. Gaines received certification as a graphoanalyst from the International Graphoanalysis Society in Chicago, Ill., in the early 1950s.

"This is a real good course. I thought it was going to be fun. It was, but it was hard, too. We learned each stroke and the various influences. It's all a type of psychology," she said.

"I have people ask me to do more in-depth studies, but I just don't want to spend that much time on it. However, anyone can send handwriting to the graphoanalysis society in Chicago. They have people on the staff who analyze handwriting.

"During the last presidential elections, the staff analyzed the handwriting of some of the political candidates," Mrs. Gaines said.

According to the analyses, a 1973 sample of Jimmy Carter's handwriting showed that he had no presidential ambitions at that time.

Gerald Ford's handwriting showed that he loves authority, the analysis said.

"All graphoanalysts try to say is that this is the way this person thinks. These are his fears and his thoughts. We admit that we have our limits, but we also want it to be known that we can do a great many things," Mrs. Gaines said.

Drug counselor changes uniforms

By JIM STEINBERG

Believing that the military is an extension of civilian society, Albert Jones is looking forward to putting his skills as a drug counselor to work in Midland.

Employed by the Midland Community Action Agency, Jones said he would like to see the agency's future center reach the needs of Midland's total population.

But realization of that goal will have to wait for a while. Currently, MCAA officials are searching for an affordable, large enough house to rent for use as a walk-in drug counseling center. Jones said he hopes one will be found and opened by the first of next year.

A soft-spoken U.S. Air Force retiree, Jones said he will be pleased if the the new walk-in center acquires the reputation of being a place where anyone in Midland can come and talk about his or her drug problem without fear of being identified.

Jones plans to counsel persons using drugs and to conduct seminars to prevent people from using drugs.

During the last five of his 20 years with the U.S. Air Force, Jones counseled in human relations, alcoholism and drugs. He was awarded the Meritory Service Award, two commendations and one Oak Leaf Cluster for work in the same fields.

With no drug users to work with now, Jones said he has been occupying his time administering a $48,432 weatherization program for Midland, Ward, Winkler, Reeves and Loving counties.

The project allows up to $250 for labor and materials to cut heating costs of a house belonging to the elderly or handicapped.

During his career with the Air Force, Jones served in Korea, France, England and Canada. He lives in Midland with his wife, Joan, and three daughters, Mathilda, 17, Nathalie, 12, and Jacqueline, 5.

Case may rid schools of IQ tests

By ANGELA NOEL

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Culturally biased IQ tests unfairly trapped young James Lannigan in classes for the mentally retarded and may be doing the same thing to black youngsters across the nation, say attorneys in a landmark trial here.

Lannigan and five other black students are suing the city and state boards of education for alleged deliberate discrimination against them. Attorneys say it is the first direct legal challenge to the IQ tests, which are supposed to measure a person's intelligence quotient — ability to learn — rather than how much a person knows.

If the plaintiffs win, their attorneys say the suit could be the first step in sweeping the time-honored exams from American schools because use of discriminatory assessment tools violates federal law.

All six plaintiffs had been placed in classes for the "educable mentally retarded" (EMR) because of low scores on the standardized tests. All but one are now back in normal classes.

Figures from the San Francisco schools show that in the academic year 1976-77, blacks were 29 per cent of total student enrollment and were 53.8 per cent of the students in the EMR classes.

The suit seeks an order forcing California schools to stop using the tests to assign pupils to EMR classes and to bring the percentage of blacks in those classes "into close proximity" with their percentage in the school population.

Trial of the suit, filed in 1971, opened Oct. 11 before U.S. District Court Judge Robert Peckham. He had issued a statewide moratorium in 1974 on the use of IQ tests to place black children in the special classes, pending resolution of the case.

"James (now 16) will never go to college. Education-wise he's hurt. I hold the school system responsible," Lannigan's mother, Selena Coleman, said in an interview. "If I have to do it publicly in order to let the other black parents know what's happening to their kids, it's worth the effort."

Lannigan, a wiry 95 pounds, said his biggest current worry is whether he makes the Balboa High School sophomore football team.

But when he recalled his experience in the EMR classes, he said, "I only learned just a little." And now, even in regular classes, "they ain't giving me the work I'm supposed to be doing," he said.

Attorney Bill Harris, who joins the NAACP on the legal team for the children, says, "It's our opinion that there's no such thing as culture-free IQ tests." Banning the tests in California would "have a tremendous ripple effect," he said. "What you will tend to get is voluntary withdrawal of IQ tests nationally."

Wilson Riles, the state's first black superintendent of schools and a defendant in the case, says IQ tests are culturally biased. But as one of several tools in the hands of skilled personnel, he said, the tests can provide useful information and need not discriminate.

Carter hears black gripes; no easy solutions predicted

By JONATHAN WOLMAN

DETROIT (AP) — For the first time in his 20-year-old life, Courtney Matthews got a chance to talk to the President of the United States.

What, he asked Jimmy Carter, should a person do when he is "out of work and wants to help his family and there's no job?"

The President conceded he didn't have the answer.

Karen Halderson also had a question for Jimmy Carter, but she didn't get the chance to speak with him. What did she want?

"We want it so you can get a little money so if your kids need a pair of shoes you can go out and buy them a pair," she said.

For 90 minutes Friday night the President sat in a downtown Detroit auditorium listening to people unfold their tales of poverty.

Mrs. Halderson, from Beloit, Wis., had wanted to ask the President why he didn't increase the amount of money a person could make and still get help from the government.

Lawrence Hall, a 56-year-old steelworker who recently was laid off, told Carter he is desperate for a job. Carter's reply dealt with other countries dumping cheap steel on the American market and how the demand for steel will increase once his energy program is passed.

"I am 56 years old and I am an unemployed steelworker...I am in a desperate situation now," Hall told the president. "I need a job. I am at the age now where I can't seek other employment. I have one daughter at home. She is just 10. I have 37 years' service in the steel mill...I feel I am being ripped off by the company I have dedicated my life to..."

And so it went. Carter said he learned a lot from his conversations but he conceded that it didn't change much.

"I don't want you to think I believe that all the questions have been answered," he said. "When we leave here today, Courtney Matthews will still be unemployed."

The poverty roundtable was sponsored by the Community Services Administration. Graciela Olivarez, head of the organization, said after the session ended that Carter "learned very little that he didn't already know."

And, she added, "Nothing will change, not immediately."

Detroit Mayor Coleman Young also said he expects no changes stemming specifically from the session. "I think he knows our problems," said Young. "I'm not sure how well he knows them."

But Rep. John Conyers, a member of the Congressional Black Caucus whose district includes part of Detroit, criticized the roundtable, saying:

"The most I got out of this was how to pronounce the name of the director of the Community Services Administration."

Industrial tax credit rewriting could hurt plan

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Senate Majority leader Robert Byrd (D-W.Va.) Saturday said the Senate could endanger passage of a national energy program if it gets bogged down attempting to rewrite $40 million in industrial tax credits approved by its Finance Committee.

The tax credits, designed to promote conservation and energy production, are part of an energy tax bill expected to reach the Senate floor Tuesday.

The bill, the last of five parts of President Carter's energy program, contains none of the President's three proposed energy saving taxes, which have been approved by the House. The measure may face strong opposition from liberal senators who consider it a handout to the oil and gas industry.

Byrd said he agreed with a plan by Finance Committee chairman Russell B. Long (D-La.) to whip a bill through the Senate this week and then bargain about energy taxes and production incentives in conference with the House. The House approved all three Carter taxes, on domestic crude oil, industrial use of oil and natural gas and low-mileage cars.

"I would hope that we would not add amendments to the bill that would make it more difficult for the conferees to reach agreement," Byrd said at a news conference.

Undue delay in the Senate will unduly delay final action on the energy package that emerges from Congress this fall may not be exactly what the President wants.

Byrd said he told Carter, "It was better to get half, or three-quarters a loaf and next year come back for more" than to endanger the whole package.

Double-deck reservoir eyed

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The future energy needs of central Ohio could be met with the construction of a giant doubledeck reservoir to produce hydro-electric power, some believe.

Delta rocket gets off ground finally

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — After two previous failures, a Delta rocket blasted perfectly into space at 8:53 a.m. CST today carrying two satellites designed to study the sun and its effect on Earth's weather.

"Very smooth — we report a very smooth flight," a space agency spokesman said as the rocket disappeared from sight into a hazy sky.

Just 1½ minutes after liftoff, the rocket jettisoned its solid propellant — a sign that scientists had overcome the problems that caused a Delta rocket to explode six weeks ago.

The Delta rocket carrying two International Sun Earth Explorer satellites went off exactly on time as scientists on two continents watched closely.

Iran tells of pressure during Kennedy years

By DUSKO DODER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — In an unusual move, Iran distributed a news report Saturday alleging that President Kennedy once used $35 million in U.S. aid to pressure Iran to appoint a prime minister he liked personally.

A former American ambassador to Iran, Armin Meyer, who was quoted by the report as having disclosed the U.S. action, said in an interview here that "there was a linkage between our extension of assistance and what we hoped to see done in Iran and it did not necessarily involve the naming of the prime minister."

Mayer, who was deputy assistant secretary of state for Near East in 1961, when the alleged incident took place, said he was not directly involved in it. He served as ambassador to Iran from 1965-69 and during his tenure in Tehran he "did hear from the Iranians that there was some unhappiness about the linkage in the early years."

The Iranian report by the government-controlled Pars agency comes a month prior to the scheduled visit to Washington by the shah of Iran, Mohammed Reza Pahlavi.

Analysts here suggested that Iran, stung by President Carter's human rights advocacy, released the report as a way of reminding Washington of its past actions toward Iran and to indicate the hope that the human rights issues in Iran would not be raised during the shah's visit.

The man the Iranian agency identified as Kennedy's favorite was Dr. Ali Amin, who was appointed prime minister in 1961 but who resigned after a year in office. He enjoyed the reputation of being an able administrator.

Mayer, who has retired from the Foreign Service, said Saturday that he had discussed the 1961 incident during a symposium on Iran held last month in Washington.

He said that there was a considerabely degree of interest in Iran during the Kennedy administration and that "there was the linkage between what we considered should be done there and U.S. aid. We wanted to see progress in that country."

But, he said, he had raised the issue to illustrate the inadequacy of such approaches which were "not well received in Iran." And he said that the United States should treat Iran as an equal partner and not as a junior partner as was the case in the 1950s and 1960s.

During the sympesium, he said, "I never said anything about imposing a prime minister."

The question of human rights was complicated the otherwise close U.S.-Iranian relations after a State Department report to Congress cited Iran among countries violating human rights.

The report said there were about 2,800 to 3,500 "political prisoners" in Iranian jails and that about 100 to 150 of them neither advocated nor practiced violence. It also cited reports of torture of prisoners, despite the shah's assertion that it is no longer used.

At the same time, there were reports in the U.S. press alleging that U.S. officials have been quietly helping the shah's secret policy SAVAK crack down on Iranian dissidents and assisting Iranian agents who spied on Iranian students in the United States who oppose the shah's authoritarian rule.

U.S. involvement in Iranian affairs dates to the immediate post-World War II period. Relations have been very close ever since the United States helped overthrow the Mossadegh regime in 1953 and restore the shah to his throne.

In recent years and especially since the world oil crisis, the oil-rich Iran has demonstrated an increasing independence from Washington.

Carter cites progress toward SALT agreement

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — President Carter and Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev both say the United States and the Soviet Union are nearing agreement on a new strategic arms limitations pact.

Carter, in a speech at a Democratic fund-raiser Friday night, said the United States and Soviet Union are making "great progress" in negotiations on a SALT agreement.

"I can tell you in a few weeks my prediction is that we will have a SALT agreement that will be a pride of our country," he said, "and following that, we will proceed to my ultimate goal of reducing nuclear weapons throughout the world to zero."

He declined to say exactly when he expects an agreement.

In Moscow, Brezhnev was quoted by the official Soviet news agency Tass as saying there has been "a definite turn for the better" in the arms talks.

"We would like to bring these negotiations to a successful conclusion without any undue delays," Brezhnev said. "With a realistic and businesslike approach by the American side, this is quite attainable."

Carter spoke of the SALT agreement as a small group in the auditorium's balcony demonstrated against the neutron bomb.

Asked after the speech to elaborate about his comments on the SALT talks, Carter declined to say whether a breakthrough had been made. Asked specifically when he would expect an agreement, he said: "I don't know how many weeks. ... I think we have a good prospect, but it's not firmed up."

In Washington, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance on Friday briefed members of the Senate Armed Services Committee on the SALT talks.

Afterward Sen. Thomas J. McIntyre, D-N.H., a member of the committee, said he was "very encouraged" with the terms of the prospective agreement. He said the proposed package would impose equal limits on both the United States and Soviet Union.

Owen raises rights issue

Agence France Presse

LONDON — Foreign secretary David Owen Saturday warned that South Africa's moves against human rights movement could have "very grave consequences."

He advised the South African government to think "very hard" about the course of action on which it appeared to be embarking.

Speaking to Labor Party supporters in Newcastle, Dr. Owen said that the crackdown against anti-apartheid organizations and militants in South Africa last Wednesday "must raise questions in the whole of the world."

"Has South Africa decided it wants to cut itself off from world opinion?" he asked. "Has it decided it wants to take on the international community? Has it decided it will not make changes in South Africa which will allow greater expression of freedom for the black majority?"

The restrictions on press freedom represented a "body blow" and the restrictions on the liberty of certain individuals "must be a cause of great concern to us all."

If the recent moves were followed by further restrictions South Africa would be embarking on a conflict with the International community, he added.

Judge orders Cleveland schools to remain open

The Los Angeles Times

CLEVELAND — Officials of the 112,000-pupil Cleveland School District announced Friday that schools here would remain open all of next week.

But Dr. James R. Tanner, assistant superintendent of the system, said that unless new sources of revenue were found, he could not tell how long they would remain open after that.

Friday's decision came at a critical moment, with the school system out of cash and caught between the conflicting demands of state law, which forbids deficit spending, and a federal judge's ruling that the schools must remain open in order not to interfere with a desegregation program.

Tanner said that the paychecks teachers receive next week would come from "previously encumbered funds," or money that had already been set aside. Next Friday's paychecks for Cleveland teachers will pay them for services through Oct. 14, Tanner said.

"We have money to pay any obligations or bills up to Oct. 17, but I haven't the slightest idea how we will pay bills incurred beyond that date," Tanner said.

State Auditor Thomas E. Ferguson has certified that the Cleveland schools have incurred a deficit of $19.1 million. The State Legislature refused to pass an emergency borrowing bill this week, without which school officials here had said Cleveland schools would close immediately.

However, on Friday, U.S. District Judge Frank J. Battisti, citing the desegregation program, ordered that schools remain open.

In his order Friday, Battisti clarified the position implicit in a ruling he made Wednesday, when he denied a school board request to modify his order of April 1 against closing any schools without his permission. His denial was widely — and correctly — interpreted to mean that he was forbidding the closing of schools, though he did not formally put that in writing until Friday.

"This order is necessary to protect the court's authority to further the desegregation of the Cleveland city school district," said the judge in Friday's brief 1½ page order.

The order also absolved school officials from any personal liability for obeying it.

School officials had argued they would become liable for bills incurred to operate the schools.

Tass accuses recent remarks

Agence France Presse

MOSCOW — The Soviet news agency "Tass" Saturday accused China of intending "to provoke a new world war."

It said that recent remarks by the deputy chairman of the Chinese Communist party Ten Hsiao-ping confirmed this and revealed the "arch-reactionary character" of the Chinese leadership.

Teng remarks were made in an interview with Agence France-Presse chairman and director general Claude Roussel.

The Soviet agency commented that the interview "showed once again that Peking's hostile policies are not limited to Sino-Soviet relations and that they represent a variant of the fiercest anti-communism."

The agency particularaly noted Teng's statement that China did not wish to see the Italian, French and Spanish Communist parties in power.

The Tass world war charge was a reference to Teng's statement on the need to "create the largest possible front" against the USSR, with American participation.

The agency reported Teng's reference to China's slow scientific and technical development in the last ten eyars, but made no mention of his statements on wage increases for the lowest paid and on changes to the constitution.

Carter supports stand on Geneva, Panama

By DON IRWIN and RICHARD BERGHOLZ
The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — President Carter sought to mollify American Jews upset over his Middle East policy Saturday when he told them his drive for a Geneva peace conference will not depreciate his concern for Israel's survival.

The setting for the President's remarks was a $1,000-per-person fund raising dinner for the Democratic National committee at the Century Plaza Hotel. Some local Jewish contributors said they had been disinclined to support the dinner because Carter appeared to them to be shifting toward a position of recognition for the "legitimate rights of the Palestinian people."

To them, this means recognition of the terrorist Palestine Liberation Organization — something Israel has resolutely resisted.

The black-tie dinner, featuring an extensive French menu, capped a busy day for the President which began with a simple rolls, juice and coffee breakfast with eight Iowa farmers and their wives before dawn.

Next came a tour of the secrecy-shrouded underground control center for the Strategic Air Command near Omaha, Neb., and a brief talk over a special network to SAC crews around the continent.

Then the President discussed water policy with western governors and water officials in Denver, and later sought to defend his treaty on the Panama Canal at another meeting.

By the time he flew into Los Angeles International Airport to be met by Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., Mayor Tom Bradley and a host of California Democratic officials, Carter was ready to tackle the ticklish job of explaining his handling of the Israel-Arab controversy to some who earlier had said they thought he had gone too far to get the Geneva conference going.

Carter's press secretary, Jody Powell, said the President would stress that the United States has a dual role in the Middle East.

Powell said Carter would contend that "first the U.S. is Israel's staunchest friend and perhaps its only faithful friend in the world.

"Second, the U.S. is acting as a mediator and peacemaker (and) that demands the confidence of other parties who must believe we are acting in good faith."

Three escapees still at large

ODESSA — Three of four Ector County Jail inmates who escaped Thursday morning are still at large, a spokesman for the Ector County Sheriff's Office said Saturday night.

According to the spokesman, the sheriff's office has no leads as to the whereabouts of the three, who have been free now for three days.

One of the four, Roy Leon Day, 22, was taken back into custody in Abilene at approximately 1 a.m. Friday.

The four were noticed missing Thursday morning when a sheet was reported hanging from a second-story window of the jail.

wedlock, the mother and father both must have their rights terminated before the child may be adopted, he said.

When the father is unknow, the legal notice of termination is published in a newspaper.

"There's a very nice thing in the statute," Mims said, that makes it possible for an "illegitimate father" to acknowledge parenthood of a child. The father then gets all the legal rights and responsibilities of parenthood, he said.

The judge said adoption does not always follow ternination of parental rights, however. For example, a divorced mother might seek to have a father's parental rights terminated if the father was able to but had not supported the child for a specified period of time, he said.

Another time-consumimg portion of the court's work is handling matters related to collecting or modifying child support and modifying visitation rights, Mims said.

Again, he said, often these hearings can be emotion-charged. In one hearing on child support, a check from the father to the mother was one of the pieces of evidence. Before cashing the check, the mother had written on it: "Eor 10 years of hell."

As a district judge, Mims now has the same legal jurisdiction as the judges in the 142nd and 238th District Court.

Judge Joseph H. Mims

But, he said, the law specifies that the 318th District Court give priority to family matters. And, he said, "It's simply a matter of it being more convenient to let this court handle domestic matters."

He said he does hope to organize the court's time so that time to hear some other matters, particularly guilty pleas and the like, can be arranged. "I'm sure we'll all cooperate with one another," he said.

Commissioners schedule discussion of funding

Whether to seek an additional $230,000 in federal Community Development funds is scheduled to be one of the topics considered when Midland County commissioners meet at 1:30 p.m. Monday in the courthouse.

The $230,000 would be in addition to $20,000 the county already is seeking from 1977 Community Development funding.

U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development representatives have told county officials the money is available to the county because the city of Midland chose not to comply with HUD guidelines in its application for $946,000 in Community Development funds.

Also Monday, the commissioners are scheduled to accept or reject a $107,700 bid from Rose and Sons for construction of a rehabilitation center. The center would be funded by 1976 and 1977 Community Development funds and private donations.

In other action, the commissioners are slated to consider increasing the cleanup deposit for use of the County Exhibit Building from $50 to $100.

Also scheduled for consideration is a request for additional room in the Courthouse Annex for the Manpower office.

Michael E. Butler, Civil Defense coordinator, is to present a Civil Defense preparedness plan to the commissioners at Monday's meeting.

Council slates second of required hearings

The Midland City Council will hold the second required public hearing on changes to the Revenue Sharing budget at 5 p.m. Tuesday in the Council Chambers of City Hall.

During action at their Oct. 11 meeting, council members voted to transfer $75,000 originally allocated to golf course roadways and $32,000 originally allocated to softball park improvements to a fund designated for penetration paving.

The council also will consider an ordinance on second reading that pares down a 23.6 percent rate hike asked by the Texas Electric Service Company to 8.33 percent. That ordinance was passed on first reading during the Oct. 11 council meeting.

In choosing the 8.33 percent increase figure, the council relied on the recommendation of an independent consultant retained by Midland and 23 other Texas cities.

At the time of the vote, Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. noted that because of the rate-setting behavior of the Public Utilities Commission, it was beneficial to a utility to prepare an inflated rate-hike requestion the basis that the utility likely would only get a portion of it approved.

The council also will consider on second reading granting a franchise for The Chauffeur to operate a limousine service between Midland and Midland Regional Air Terminal.

During its last meeting, the council approved a 10-year franchise with The Chauffeur that would provide the city with up to 5 percent of the gross revenue received for operation of the service.

The agreement is subject to cancellation or renegotiation after five years and stipulates that The Chauffeur begin a limousine service between Odessa and the Terminal within six months.

Other items the city council is expected to consider include:

— Consideration of a resolution authorizing an agreement with architects Chakos, Zentner and Marcum of San Angelo for the firm to design two new fire stations.

— Consideration of a motion approving the city's participation in a "Crises Relocation Plan" by the Department of Public Safety.

— Consideration of a resolution authorizing proceeding with certain assessment paving units without liens against the homesteads involved.

The regular council meeting will begin at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday.

City Council will hear tax appeals

The Midland City Council will hear appeals from the Board of Equalization in the council chambers at City Hall starting at 9 a.m. Monday.

The council is expected to hear from 38 persons who believe they are faced with an inequitable tax burden as a result of the 1977 city wide tax evaluation.

The appeals follow the first city wide tax evaluation since 1972.

The property re-evaluation upped the assessed valuation for residential and commercial property in Midland to $677,316,470, compared to $399,235,070 for 1976, representing an increase of 69 percent.

City officials have said that about 50 percent of all Midland taxpayers will pay the same or less in taxes because of the valuation, while the other 50 percent will pay more.

Property owners unhappy with the council's decisions may appeal to state district court.

On April 2, Midland voters turned down a charter amendment that would have precluded the council from hearing appeals on assessments by the board of equalization and would have referred the appeals directly to the district court.

Enterprising signs tout God, country

criticizing the U.S. government's policy toward Vietnam and the war over there.

It was then that a movement got under way in Andrews to stand up for the government that was being treaded upon by its own people.

In the movement's forefront were businessmen Dave Foreman, service station operator Booty Tompkins and building contractor T. W. "Pete" Hooper.

Virtually the entire town supported the message in the billboard-like signs. The town's position hasn't changed . . . essentially. And opposition to the revised message seems nil.

"To me," Foreman said, "our country is next to the Bible. That's how strongly I feel about the country."

His cause is preserving the Republic and the free-enterprise system.

"We can't just take it (the country) for granted," Foreman said. "We've got to do something everyday (just) to maintain the status quo."

Foreman tries to live up to the message on those four signs at the gateways to the city.

"I'm civic-minded, and I try to be patriotic," he said. ". . . I do believe in chamber-of-commerce type of loyalty."

Foreman said he stands up for loyalty to the city, the county, the state and to the nation.

" I think it (patriotism) is something we should treasure highly."

Foreman's slant on the country is expressed on the flipside of the "Andrews Loves" sign just off of the Eunice (N.M.) Highway.

It reads: "America Is Great. Let's Make it Even Greater." That sign was put up last year to commemorate America's Bicentennial.

The revised "Andrews Loves" signs have the endorsement of Andrews County Judge Roy Bennett and county commissioners.

"They believe in free enterprise. They believe in America," Foreman said. Like the rest of Andrews, the commissioners' court supported the 1969 signs.

Andrews painting contractor Mac Snipes has been hired to paint over the "our Government" on the signs and to letter in "Free Enterprise." The work has just begun.

Andrews, which bills itself as "Oil Capitol of the World," has devised other means of promoting free enterprise and the right to make a fair profit in an honest business. (Petroleum is the mainstay of Andrews' economy.

Oct. 9-19, noted Guy Wood, was "Free Enterprise Week" in Andrews.

Too, Wood is helping promote a citywide contest for the "best slogan" conveying Andrews' support of free enterprise. The slogan will be printed on 10,000 buttons for all to wear.

Winner of the slogan will be presented with a $100 U.S. Savings Bond in a free enterprise oriented Fashion Show here on Nov. 15.

Later on, Wood is planning to bring in a noted speaker to talk on the free enterprise system in an assembly program at the high school.

"I wish we could have gotten Ronald Reagan and tied that in. That Reagan is fantastic. He's conservative, but he really stands up for the people and for free enterprise."

Wood has other projects planned in his campaign to promote free enterprise.

It's a campaign, too, that will benefit the 45 students in the Andrews' Distributive Education Club of America (DECA).

Too, the students work part-time after school in learning firsthand about free enterprise.

"Anything that's sold for profit to the public — that's what's it's all about," Wood said.

The pumping jack in the background may explain why the sign in the foreground has more than passing meaning to the people of Andrews: "America Is Great. Let's Make It Even Greater." (Staff Photo)

Next Korea inquiry: who got the money?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Contending that three days of public hearings prove South Korea tried to buy off U.S. congressmen, investigators want the House to demand Korea's cooperation on answering the next question: who got the money?

Deputy counsel Peter White closed the House ethics committee hearings Friday with a suggestion that the committee draft a House resolution condemning South Korea for its refusal to cooperate with U.S. investigators.

White said the hearings showed South Korea conducted "a sophisticated, well-financed plan to exert influence on U.S. officials. ...The question of whether such a plan was implemented is dead."

Several committee members said later they would support such a resolution.

Investigators from the Justice Department and the Congress have said the lack of Korean cooperation has stymied their efforts to interview key Korean citizens about the schemes.

On Friday, Assistant Atty. Gen. Benjamin Civiletti said Justice Department officials were unable to persuade the South Korean government to allow them to question Tongsun Park, a central figure in the affair, under acceptable conditions.

Civiletti said South Korea offered to allow the United States to submit written questions to a Korean prosecutor, who would decide what questions actually could be asked.

"We said that wasn't satisfactory," Civiletti said.

During the three days of testimony, former South Korean officials and House witnesses testified that the Korean Central Intelligence Agency ran at least two separate operations to buy off congressmen.

There also was hearsay testimony that Koreans running the operations claimed to have gained influence with aides to former Presidents Richard M. Nixon and Gerald R. Ford.

The closest the committee came to indicating how many congressmen got money was a staff investigator's testimony that it has "40 to 50" canceled checks made out to congressmen.

Cheryl Holmes, a staff analyst, testified she did not know how many congressmen got the 40 to 50 checks because some got more than one.

She said the checks came from Korean rice dealer Park and were part of $1.6 million he converted to cash from $9 million in rice commissions. Other witnesses said that was the source of cash for the congressional influence-buying.

Former KCIA director Kim Hyung Wook testified Friday he agreed in 1968 to help Park become Korea's exclusive purchaser of U.S. rice. That appeared from testimony to be the initial influence-buying scheme.

Kim said Park and former Rep. Richard T. Hanna, D-Calif., promised him then that they would distribute the commission money to other congressmen "and help Korea's cause."

Hanna was indicted by a federal grand jury last week on charges of bribery and failure to register as a foreign agent.

Mother draws death sentence

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — A mother of five children has been sentenced to death by hanging for the ax murder of her alcoholic husband, it was reported Saturday.

Pauline Tolken, 40, was convicted of killing her 39-year-old husband Drik last year. Her mother testified at the trial that he often beat Mrs. Tolken with a whip and spent most of his money drinking.

However, Judge P.W.E. Baker said in imposing the sentence Friday that there were no extenuating circumstances. He cited evidence that Mrs. Tolken had planned to do away with her husband for a long time.

Mrs. Tolken is the seventh white woman sentenced to death in South Africa. Five of the others were hanged and the sixth had her sentence commuted to 20 years in prison.

Mrs. Tolken is appealing the sentence.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $5,000 oil portrait of Earl L. Butz is still waiting to be ceremoniously hung in one of the dim corridors of the Agriculture Department.

The portrait of the former secretary of agriculture, who served almost five years in the Nixon and Ford Cabinets, was delivered last month, but is waiting until Butz notifies Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland when he can attend a hanging ceremony.

"Butz said he would let us know when he could attend but said he wasn't going to make a special trip just to see his picture hung," an aide to Bergland said Friday. "So far we haven't heard when he is coming."

The portrait was painted by New York artist Everett Raymond Kinstler, who also was commissioned for $5,000 to portray Butz' successor, John A. Knebel, the last secretary of agriculture in the Ford administration.

Butz resigned Oct. 4, 1976, in the wake of protests over racial remarks made public at the height of Gerald Ford's unsuccessful presidential campaign a year ago. The remarks included Butz describing the bathroom and sexual preferences of black people.

Some of the Carter farm people wanted to hang Butz' portrait without fanfare, but Bergland overruled them and said, "Let's get Earl in here," the aide said.

Traditionally, the portraits of agriculture secretaries and other Cabinet officers have been paid for at taxpayer expense. Carter, however, passed the word to stop the practice. Lower-cost likenesses of his Cabinet officers will be used.

In addition to the $5,000 artist fee, it cost another $750 for framing and lighting of Butz' portrait.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Therapy, drugs help

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have this awful thing about being in crowds—in subways, elevators, trains, or even trying to get out of a crowded theater. Although I manage to get around, one way or another, there are a lot ot times I'm very uncomfortable and I find it a big drain on my nerves and energy. I've asked doctors about it from time to time, but they haven't been able to help much. Now, though, a friend of mine who is in med school tells me that there are so many new drugs coming out, he is sure one of these might be able to lick my problem. Do you think there is anything in what he says?—D.

Dear D.: There is a great deal being done to help people like yourself get the better of these phobias, even if they can't be entirely cleared up. One recent study, done by Dr. James Ballenger at Massachusetts General Hospital, suggests that behavior therapy combined with drugs is especially effective for agoraphobia, one form of which is what appears to be troubling you.

Dr. Ballenger studied 78 patients for three months. Their average age was 37, they were in good physical health and they had all suffered from the phobia for years.

All of the patients took part in group therapy sessions every other week, during which time they would discuss plans for facing up to their phobias in a practical manner and report on any progress they had made since the previous meeting.

Half the volunteers received, in addition, an anti-depressant drug—either imparmine or phenelzine. The other half got a placebo—an empty pill—so that at the time, nobody knew who was getting the drug and who wasn't.

At the end of the three-month period, psychological tests showed that although most of the palceable patients had improved, only 20 to 30 percent did so markedly. The figures for the drug group were two or three times better.

Dr. Ballenger says that no serious side effects occurred with either drug, although phenelzine was more easily tolerated. Adding a drug to the therapy, he feels is a real help—and of the two drugs, phenelzine may be more of an aid. He estimates that the drug might be given to a patient for six to nine months.

Of course, I am not saying that this is the treatment best suited to you. There are a number of other ways of going about it—with different kinds of psychotherapy or different drugs or both. You should discuss your problem with your family doctor, even if he is one of the doctors you had talked to in the past.

In the light of what is being done today, he may be better able to propose a treatment. And if not, he can refer you to a specialist. If you do not have a regular doctor, you might try to find out the name of a good mental health clinic near you—perhaps your friend who is in med school would be able to suggest one.

Butane bottles to replace Crystal City's open fires

CRYSTAL CITY, Texas (AP) — The open cooking fires in this gasless South Texas town will soon be replaced by butane bottles.

Conrad Cruz, director of the Laredo-Webb County Community Action Agency, said Friday that the first part of the Community Services Administration's $310,000 grant will soon be used for butane bottles and a hot meals program for those cooking outdoors.

The rest of the money, he said, will go for a long-term search for energy sources for the town, which had its natural gas supply shut off Sept. 23 by Lo-Vaca Gathering Co. last month because of overdue bills totaling more than $750,000.

"One thing I want to make very clear," said Cruz. "This money will not be used to negotiate a contract with Lo-Vaca. It will not be spent for deficits."

Last week, the CSA approved the CAA-Crystal City council plan for spending the grant.

Cruz said $130,000 of the grant had initially been set aside to buy propane gas and pump an air-propane mixture through existing gas lines. That was vetoed by the council, however, he said.

"We have contracted through the Zavala school district for the hot meals," he said. "All of this will only be for people below the national poverty level."

Cruz said an estimated 500 to 600 families in the town of 8,000 will fall in the poverty catagory.

He said officials supervising the butane installations are planning to install at least one, and possibly two 50 gallon butane bottles per home at an estimated cost of $50 per bottle.

Research on trace elements finally turns to zinc

By C.C. MINICLIER

DENVER (AP) — Americans have been counting their vitamins since the early days of World War II, when Army doctors complained of puny and poorly developed draftees.

"For so many years we concentrated on vitamins," says Dr. Michael K. Hambidge of the University of Colorado Medical School. "But now we are in the trace element era for nutrients."

Illustrative of the new emphasis on trace elements, named for their underepresentation in the body, is the research conducted on zinc.

Researchers say zinc may speed the healing of wounds, aid in fighting some diseases and even prevent the "blahs."

Human requirements have also been established for iron, iodine, copper, chromium, manganese and cobalt, Dr. Hambidge says.

"The fact that you can hardly see them has nothing to do with their biological effectiveness," says Dr. Bert Vallee of the Harvard Medical School.

For instance, the average 154-pound adult contains only two to three grams of zinc. There are 28.5 grams in an ounce.

All the evidence isn't in yet. "An enormous amount of benefits have been claimed," says Dr. Vallee, one of the nation's leading zinc experts. "Not all are equally valid."

This past spring, Dr. Hambidge finished a study for Kelloggs on the effects of adding zinc to breakfast cereals. He concluded that it produces no ill effects.

Kelloggs has started adding zinc to some products, and it and General Mills list the zinc content of most of their cereals on the package.

The makers of two infant formulas, Similac and Enfamil, also began adding zinc after some of Dr. Hambidge's early findings.

Among the chief sources of zinc for humans are oysters, beef, liver, peanuts and lima beans.

But its level is borderline in many prepared foods, says Nancy Glick, a spokeswoman for the Food and Drug Administration, which includes zinc among its nutritional guidelines. She says that processing robs food of its natural zinc content.

Researchers at the University of Detroit School of Dentistry have found in tests on animals that zinc supplements speed the healing of surgical wounds and mending of fractures.

Speakers at a Fort Lauderdale, Fla., conference on zinc in health and disease agreed that there is accumulating evidence of some relationship between zinc and the body's ability to fight disease.

Britain's Prince Charles starts Texas visit today

ARMSTRONG, Tex. (AP) — The Armstrong Ranch, already part of the folklore of the Old West, adds another chapter to its 125-year history today with a visit from Britain's Prince Charles.

The heir to the British throne begins a three-day, three-city Texas tour here today as a guest of Tobin Armstrong and his wife, Anne, the former U. S. Ambassador to the Court of St. James.

The 28-year-old prince will arrive at the Naval Air Station in nearby Kingsville at 1:15 p.m. Where he will be met by the Armstrongs and local officials. He will then be driven the 50 miles to the ranch were a Texas-style barbeque and a polo match will be staged in his honor. Both will be closed to the media and the public.

"The prince wanted very much to see a working ranch," said Mrs. Armstrong during Thursday's press conference at the ranch.

"We have waxed the floors and had the paint brushes out but in general we want him to see it the way it naturally would be and that's the way he likes it. He doesn't like a lot of protocol. He's a very unpretentious-type person. Just the opposite of stuffy. And a man whom I think the world of."

The prince and his nine-person entourage will stay overnight at the ranch before travelling to Houston Monday where he will visit NASA.

On Tuesday, he ends his Texas tour with a stop in San Antonio and a trip to the Alamo.

"We kept the polo game private because Sunday is the prince's day off," Mrs. Armstrong explained politely. "We wanted him to feel relaxed."

U.S. Sens. Lloyd Bentsen and John Tower plus U.S. Rep. Kika de la Garza and Texas Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby are among the 250 invited guests who will be served barbecued beef and ribs, camp bread, guacamole salad, tamales, jalapenos and other South Texas treats. The guests will dine underneath a yellow-and-white striped carnival-like tent adorned with British, American and Texas flags. "The place settings on the tables will be small pots with prickly pear plants in them and three small flags," noted Mrs. Armstrong.

Joining the prince and Tobin Armstrong will be some of Texas' top polo players. "He indicated he would like to have a competitive game instead of a pasture-polo match," said Tobin, the third generation of Armstrongs to live on the 50,000-acre ranch.

"This is one of the oldest family-owned ranches in the state," said Mrs. Armstrong. "Tobin's grandfather bought the land in 1852. Maj. John Armstrong bought the ranch for his bride with the $5,000 reward he got for capturing John Wesley Hardin."

Prince Charles should have no such outlaws to contend with.

"He is under the protecion of the U.S. State Department and has a security officer travelling with him," said the former ambassador when asked about the problems associated with entertaining royalty. "And Sunday, we will have the county officials helping us, mainly with traffic along the highway."

Balanced budget first

President Carter is about to divulge his tax reform package, and it would seem that most of his grand words about equity and simplicity are going to die a fast death.

Mr. Carter still will ask for a hefty cutback on business deductions for the "martini lunch," and we suppose he can point to this as evidence of how he's making the tax code fairer.

But in fact, as reports out of the Treasury Department indicate, Mr. Carter's reform package is going to leave virtually unchanged the basic structure of the tax rate system.

And as to simplicity, reports also from the Treasury suggest that while some parts of the system will be rid of complication, others will be complicated further.

No doubt some will complain that Mr. Carter is defaulting on his promises, and indeed we will say that he has defaulted on one of them, if, as has been reported, Mr. Carter does renege on his promise to eliminate completely the double taxation of dividends.

But considering that most of the other promises cloaked behind the rhetoric of equity and simplicity would have put the U.S. economy on the sickbed, it is possible that the economy won't do badly by this package.

Admittedly, it would be a better package if, at the last moment, Mr. Carter should quit his campaign against martinis, get rid of double taxation, and strike out his proposal to treat capital gains as ordinary income. But the one thing which Mr. Carter is going to propose that makes this package popular is permanent tax reduction.

The $22 billion that Mr. Carter wants to leave yearly in the economy is going to gladden just about everyone. Individual tax cuts, amounting to 515 billion, are going to be in order for all groups save those in the $100,000-a-year and up income brackets. The other $7 billion is going to go to business via reductions in the corporate tax rate and increases in the 10 per cent investment tax credit. Both measures represent progress in Mr. Carter's econonic thinking.

Whereas Mr. Carter was ready to stimulate the economy by passing out $50 to everyone last spring, Mr. Carter now is ready to stimulate the econony by slashing tax rates permanently.

One-time rebates are here today, spent tomorrow; the increase in income that results from permanent tax reduction, by contrast, enables consumers to expand their purchases over time.

This expansion invites an increase in the supply of goods produced, which in turn expands employment and real incomes. Similarly, with permanently lowered business taxes, businessmen can expand their plants and add to their equipment over time, thus increasing production and creating jobs.

In fairness, of course, it should be noted that for four years Rep. Jack Kemp, a New York Republican, has been advocating permanent tax cuts on both individual and corporate income.

And right now on Capitol Hill there's an admirable tax reduction package, co-authored by Mr. Kemp and his fellow Republican in the Senate, William Roth.

Whichever tax reform bill is successful — the Roth-Kemp or the Carter bill — it is nice to know that the Democrats are following the Republican suit. For a change, however, there seems to be bipartisan recognition of at least one point, the desire to reduce taxes permanently.

But, as Congressman George Mahon, chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations says, any permanent reduction in taxes should come only after steps have been taken to balance the budget. Rep. Al Ullman, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, is of like opinion.

A tax cut would be appreciated — but a balanced budget has first priority.

PENNSYLVANIA AVENUE:

Question of ethics: it's simply politics

By BENJAMIN SHORE
Copley News Service

Benjamin Shore

WASHINGTON — In an election year, the pace in many House and Senate offices picks up noticeably.

More speeches are given and legislation introduced to help shape incumbents' positions. Often there are more visits back home, more newsletters to constituents, more attention to answering mail from potential voters.

One senator's legislative assistant, a veteran of two reelection campaigns, says he can count on a 25 per cent increase in his working hours every election year.

A secretary to a representative, who has to stand for election every two years, says she will be much busier with personal correspondence and telephone calls to constituents in the months just before Election Day.

Although these examples are common to Capitol Hill life, it is a violation of federal law for a congressional employe to work in the boss' campaign.

These examples, however, are not considered illegal acts. The legislative assistant and the secretary are doing their normal jobs. If the legislator just happens to get more interested in issues and constituents on the eve of an election — well, that's just politics.

Violations of federal law do occur when congressional aides get directly involved in campaigning, often shifting temporarily from the Washington office to the campaign office back home to augment (and sometimes direct) the campaign staff.

The Senate is wrestling with possible guidelines, but nothing significant is expected. The Justice Department and the Federal Elections Commission have sufficient legal power already to clip the wings of legislators who abuse clear-cut rules.

Whenever Congress is faced with questions of ethical behavior in the large gray area, it tends to avoid hard-and-fast rules and leave standards up to each member.

While this may avoid burdening a political job with an extensive catalog of rules presumably intended to remove politics from the job, it also permits many different standards to be set.

Those members of Congress who are closely covered by the press tend to be more ethical than those who are not wary of public scrutiny.

Also, politicians with personal wealth or easy access to campaign funds can afford to hire election-year staffs to do the work that other legislators feel they must assign to congressional staff members.

The gray area is real. Why shouldn't a politician act like one? Yet there's a law against using taxpayer-supported congressional employes in "clear-cut" and "blatant" political functions.

Although most members of Congress can recognize obvious abuse when they see it, they legitimately have a difficult time agreeing on how much gray is too much.

The solution would seem to lie with the voters, who should take the trouble to find out whether their representatives and senators are using staff workers in obvious but legal reelection efforts, and then decide for themselves whether this offends their sense of what's fair and right.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

U.S., Soviets in reassessments

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Relations between the old Kremlin and the new Carter crew have smoothed out after a rocky start. Jimmy Carter and Leonid Brezhnev have been exchanging private letters. Prospects of a summit meeting between the two adversaries by the end of this year have been revived, as obstacles one by one are being removed.

In the policy councils of both governments, meanwhile, new assessments are being made, as the Democrats move into the seats of power in Washington and old age creeps up on those who occupy the seats in the politburo.

For decades, Soviet policy has been based upon certain inflexible projections: that capitalist democracy was in decline and was everywhere afflicted with a growing paralysis of will; that Marxist socialism was the wave of the future, with Moscow the Mecca of all revolutionaries; and that the leaders of the West knew their sun was setting and were resigned to retreat on the slowest and easiest terms they could get.

Indisputably, several important trends have gone against us: the shrinkage of an overwhelming military superiority of yesteryear down to mere rough equality; the new strategic capacity of the Russians which enables them to compete for remote areas formerly foreclosed to them; the loss of U.S. prestige and resolve associated with the Vietnam defeat; our shocking dependence upon costly foreign oil and on sea routes now subject to Russian challenge; the inability of most of the West to confront inflation; the dimunition of the foreign policy powers of a presidency that is increasingly hog-tied by congressional restriction; the hardening of the arties of key U.S. industries such as steel that cannot keep up with international competition.

Yet in one area after another, the march of events has favored the United States. Despite their early lead in space technology, the Russians lost the race to the moon and all it symbolized. The heralded Soviet plan of 1961 to overtake the United States by 1970 in per capita income ended in pathetic failure. In 1977, Russia's per capita gross national product is still on the abysmal level of Greece or Spain.

The cumbersome Soviet bureaucracy is so incredibly pervasive that, despite intensive efforts, the Kremlin cannot get the many-headed monster synchronized. One ministry builds a plant in Siberia, but the ministries responsible for surrounding it with the necessary roads and housing are not clued in, and the new plant stands idle in the midst of desolation.

The Soviets have fallen far behind in the newest industrial technology and haven't even proved equal to such old-fashioned challenges as producing enough consumer goods and food. Instead of burying us, they suffered the humiliation of dependence upon us for vital technologies end, periodically, for enough to eat. The only thing Marxist socialism can export competitively is what Mother Nature made and left in the ground for them.

It is also the Communist bloc, not the West, that has been rent asunder by division. Up until the death of Mao Tse-tung and its aftermath, the Kremlin could hope that its fateful break with China was due to the aberration of one man and could be healed when he died. Now the Russians must accept the schism of world communism as a permanent fact of history.

Whether or not Marxist socialism is the wave of the future, the Soviets no longer are riding it. Revolutionaries around the world do not look for inspiration to the Kremlin. In the words of a White House analyst: "Today there is probably not one revolutionary in the world who wants to create a Soviet society."

On top of all this, the economic cost of failed adventures around the world has become, to steal a metaphor from the late Nikita Khrushchev, a bone in the Russian throat. Some $16 billion worth of aid to Egypt went down the drain when President Anwar Sadat threw the Russians out and threw in with us.

Billions more have been dribbled away over the years to keep the satellite Cuban economy from collapsing. The Soviets have proved unable to sustain such ventures on a large scale and are now selling or bartering instead of giving away vast quantities of arms and goods to targets of opportunity.

President Carter is not unmindful of Soviet difficulties. In effect, he has issued this challenge to the Soviet Union: "Our resources, technology, strategic position, prestige and moral stature enable to us to compete with you successfully all across the international board. In the one area of armaments, we hope to eliminate competition by arms control agreements. But if you do not agree, we will outdo you there, too."

It remains to be seen how much of our recent progress with the Russians is founded not upon resourceful challenge but upon concessions.

NICK THIMMESCH

Nick Thimmesch

WASHINGTON — The death of Bing Crosby is more than the passing of an eminently likable man, easygoing and free, whose voice was heard by more people than anyone else's in the world.

Bing Crosby is missed not just for the happiness he brought us but because we sense that, as a people, we are no longer capable of being held together by the warmth and familiarity of a Crosby singing. A younger Bing Crosby today couldn't gather us into American clusters the way he did for an entire generation and more.

American life has been dispersed, sent to a million frantic corners, put into a well-fed, well-supplied purgatory, and all the kindness, jauntiness and sentiment of Crosby's smooth baritone voice couldn't again make it the way it was when we were together.

The obituaries all said that Crosby's career spanned 50 years, and that would put him back into the Twenties. But Crosby was just coming up then, as a member of Paul Whiteman's Rhythm Boys. In those days, Crosby was a carouser, and not the wholesome, welcome friend the American public came to know him as years later.

But then, we were a carousing nation in the Twenties, lurching toward the crash and the depression. When that great assault on our confidence struck, Crosby was right there with a song, "Brother, Can You Spare a Dime?" Crosby's drinking and the reckless driving for which he had been convicted (he served 40 days in jail) were behind him. We were in the depressed Thirties, and Crosby was needed to cheer us up.

He did it on the radio, the medium that knitted the nation in the Thirties. The Kraft Music Hall, with Crosby's singing and kidding in such calming fashion, sort of told us not to worry, better days are ahead. He was not alone on the radio, of course, and other popular personalities of the time joked about American life, but never in the sick mode that a rich, sleek, even obese, America could afford 25 years later.

For Americans, World War II couldn't have been conducted without Bing Crosby and Bob Hope. They were surely as indispensable as President Roosevelt and Gens. Marshall and Eisenhower. What could bring us all home, no matter where we were, like Crosby singing "Silent Night" and "White Christmas" when headlines told of setbacks, breakthroughs and advances by American forces?

Oh, the familiarity of it all! "When the Blue of the Night Meets the Gold of the Day," "Give Me Land, Lots of Land Under Starry Skies Above, Don't Fence Me In," "Wait Till the Sun Shines, Nellie," "When You Wish Upon a Star," "Gone Fishin'."

"You could warm your hands on the sound of his voice" is how Tom Shales aptly described American feeling about Crosby in the years when we struggled through the depression and World War II. In retrospect, all that might seem naive, but it was earnest and there was a surge of goodwill in it.

Crosby continued, naturally, through the Fifties, the time of Pax Americana, when our powerful nation could seemingly do no wrong in the world. Up to then, he had been blessed with the luck of having his style happily in tandem with the mood of the American people. One cynic called him "the ultimate pop icon," but that label bore jealousy and meanness. There was more to Crosby than that because there was more to contemporary American spirit than that.

We lost much of that spirit in the soul-searching Sixties. Crosby, now rich, contented with his second family and diversions, drifted from sight but never out of earshot. His musical contemporaries, all greats — the Dorsey brothers, Benny Goodman, Glenn Miller — left our consciousness. But Crosby's voice lingered on, because it could not be put away any more than Christmas could.

In our TV age, talent is consumed like so much pulp wood stuffed into a blast furnace. In the furious competition among groups to have their voices heard, political leadership atrophies, and popular figures are soon diminished.

Pop figures are far more transient now than in Crosby's best days. Sure, Reggie Jackson hit five home runs in the World Series, but Babe Ruth will be remembered longer. Muhammad Ali's face has been broadcast a million more times than the less expressive one belonging to Joe Louis, but Joe Louis had a far greater hold on "my people," as he called them, than the current champ ever did.

Nowadays, we can't help looking to find something wrong with celebrities. Bing Crosby had difficulties with the sons from his first marriage and suffered other tribulations. But we were not inclined to make trouble for him about all this. These days we demand all the dirt on Jackie Kennedy-Onassis, and Teddy Kennedy, and Lyndon Johnson, and the assassinated President, and Spiro Agnew, and Richard Nixon, and all the others who occupied center stage, full limelight. We like to make them naked and ashamed.

We live in a time of the put-down hero, of the shattered myth, of the evisceration of anything which embodies sentiment or hope. Crosby could have been consumed in this fire, but in his casual yet intelligent way he stayed clear of it.

How interesting that in the past 25 years, only one President, Eisenhower, the war hero, had an authentic hold on the American people. His successors were shot or run out of office. Now Jimmy Carter is posed as a possible one-term President. Many Americans couldn't care less.

We used to worry about having enough to eat or getting home from war, alive and with limbs intact. Now people worry about lifestyle, the IRS, inflation and cholesterol. Heroes and omnipresent popular figures like Crosby apparently can't survive these days.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

National Women's Political Conference to begin in November

By BILLY KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN—Less than a month from now, the National Women's Political Conference convenes in Houston, with getting more women into political office one of the topics to be discussed.

By that date (Nov. 18 is when the meeting begins) those attending should have some idea as to who will replace two of the 10 women who served in the 1977 House of Representatives.

Both Reps. Sarah Weddington, Austin, and Eddie Bernice Johnson, Dallas, were tapped by the Carter administration—Weddington to take over the top legal post at the U. S. Department of Agriculture and Johnson to head the Dallas office of Health, Education and Welfare.

Both of those representatives have women anxious to succeed them—Mary Jane Bode in Weddington's district and Lanell Cofer in Johnson's district.

But Texas—once described as great country for men and dogs but rough on women and horses—is still very much a man's domain as far as politics is concerned.

There are, of course, such majestic exceptions to that rule as U. S. Rep. Barbara Jordan of Houston.

Miss Jordan has been mentioned for statewide office a number of times—but most political analysts doubt that she could muster the money or support needed to succeed in any race where her opponent would most likely be white, conservative, well-financed and male.

Texans obviously do elect women—the fact that there were 10 in the House (and one in the Senate) in 1977 shows that.

In 1975, there were seven in the House and one in the Senate.

In 1973, there were five in the House and, again, one in the Senate.

While that may not be a revolutionary change, it is progress.

But many women feel that progress has been a bit too slow, and that view is likely to be heard at the Houston gathering.

There are no women holding any of the top elective offices in Texas.

There are some women members of boards and commissions—including regents of universities—but hardly in overwhelming numbers.

And a check of the state agencies listed in the Capitol telephone directory shows that women in top positions in the state bureaucratic hierarchy are rare.

The only ones indicated, in fact, are for the State Law Library, Board of Physical Therapy Examiners, Board for Registration of Public Surveyors, Board of Basic Science Examiners, Board of Landscape Architects, Texas Optometry Board and Commission for the Deaf.

Some of those also happen to be the only listings under those agencies.

But let it be said that there are a number of women who are listed at the top of a number of divisions within various agencies — including the comptroller's, secretary of state, Texas Education Agency, Public Utilities Commission and coordinating Board, Texas College and University System.

Let it be noted also that legislators are becoming more interested in matters seen as "women's issues," even though lawmakers balked at legislation to create a State Commission on the Status of Women.

Sen. Betty Andujar's bill died in committee; Rep. John Wilson's measure came out but never got to a vote.

Still, lawmakers did approve creation of a program for displaced homemakers—most of whom are women—and quietly sent legislation for rescission of the Equal Rights Amendment to die without a vote (an action seen as a victory for more activist women's groups).

And Gov. Dolph Briscoe showed he's aware of women and their votes by creating a Commission on the Status of Women by executive order.

So, as the ads say, women have "come a long way, baby"—even though it appears there's still a long, long way to go.

ART BUCHWALD

The gentle sport of football

WASHINGTON — If there is anything that really bugs me it is watching a pro football game with a foreigner. I had the experience last week. My friend was visiting from London with his wife, and they both seemed very excited about seeing their first American football game on television.

It happened to be the Redskin-Dallas game, and for a Redskin fan I knew it wasn't going to be much fun. The game started out all right, but before long it got rather bloody. This is when they both started asking questions.

"Is the object of the game to injure as many players on the other team as possible?" the husband asked.

"No, that is not the object of the game," I said.

The wife said, "Do you get more points for breaking a man's leg or his neck?"

"You don't get points for breaking either his leg or his neck. You get penalized for it."

"Oh," said the husband. "What is the penalty?"

"Your team is penalized 15 yards."

"Do you mean to say that if you break an opponent's leg you only get 15 yards against you?"

"What do you think he should get?" I said trying to hold my temper.

"In England I believe it's three years in prison," the wife replied.

"It's a game!" I said. "The men who play expect to have their legs broken. That's what makes it so exciting."

"Of course," said the husband. "One must expect injuries."

"I didn't see anyone get hurt," the wife said. "Why is there a penalty?"

"Because one of our men was holding one of their men."

"What is the penalty for that?"

"Ten yards."

"Do you mean to say, if you hold a man the team loses 10 yards, but if you break his leg you are penalized only 15 yards?" the wife asked.

I was beginning to lose my patience. "That is correct. In football, holding is almost as serious as breaking someone's leg."

"Of course," the husband said. "It does make sense when you explain it."

"That's not permitted," I said.

"Then why doesn't someone do something about it?"

"No one saw it," I replied.

"Everyone on television must have seen it," she said.

"The referee didn't see it. If he had, he would have called a personal foul."

"Which means the player would be thrown out of the game?" the husband asked.

"Of course not. You don't get thrown out of the game for slugging another player. If that happened you wouldn't be able to have a pro football game. The thrill of football for a player is to hit an opponent and not get caught doing it."

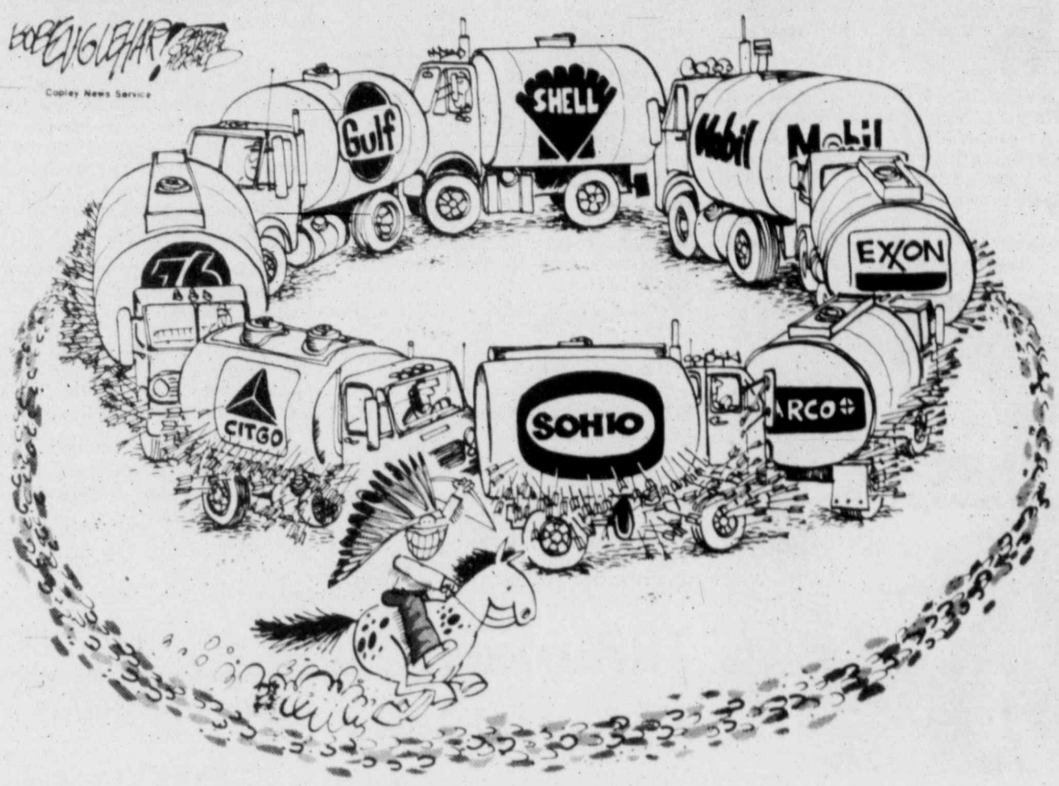
"How long is he permitted to lie on the field," the husband asked, "without being penalized?"

"As long as he wants to. When a man is seriously injured, we even permit a doctor to treat him."

"How civilized," the wife said.

I couldn't keep my temper in any longer. "What do you think we are — barbarians?"

"Quite," the husband said.



LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To The Editor:

Although St. Ann's School and Trinity School were not mentioned in last Sunday's article on private school enrollment, we may have been thought to be included by implication. If so, we are not happy with the suggestion that we might be in some sense "profiteering" from people's unhappiness with the integration program in the public schools.

As private schools accredited by the Texas Education Agency, we believe firmly in quality education. We would like to suggest that people send their children to us because they feel we have something extra to offer: excellent academic programs, more individual attention, special programs, religious emphasis, and the like.

St. Ann's Board of Education deliberately chose not to expand class enrollment this year. Trinity School's enrollment increase this year (6 percent) is part of a long range policy of gradual expansion which began before Judge Suttle's decree of August 1976. The experience of other communities involved in busing controversies has been that private school enrollment increases caused by the controversy disappear after two or three years.

We believe the public schools are doing a good job in a very difficult situation, but we believe that there are and ought to be first-rate alternative schools available to the people of Midland. With that conviction, we will continue striving to provide the very best education we can for the children of Midland.

Apology in order

To The Editor:

(The following letter was sent Oct. 18 to President Carter:)

I think it speaks little of your knowledge of one of the major industries in our country when you speak of oil companies as a "rip-off." I am employed in the heart of the oil country in Texas in a profession not directly related to the oil industry.

While you are on one of your many personal appearance jaunts to raise your popularity survey, just why don't you come to Texas and climb up on one of the oil or gas rigs and let someone tell you how we get this black gold out of the ground?

Perhaps then you can understand how one oil company can lose as much as $3 million in a period of only four months when one of these wells does not produce any of this "black gold."

Personally, I think it would be to your advantage to issue a public apology to the entire oil industry.

Two questions

To The Editor:

I was interested in the brief article in Sunday's paper about the seven proposed constitutional amendments.

I have two questions. First, where may a citizen find a copy of the amendments themselves? Why are voters not sent a copy of propositions such as this? It is done in some other states, I know.

At the very least, sufficient copies should be easily and readily available to any and all citizens who wish to have a copy to read and study before voting.

Much is made of a citizen's duty to vote, but an uninformed or misinformed citizen is a hazard to good government, a much greater hazard. Better no vote than a casual, unthinking vote.

Thank you for your interest and help.

M. A. Bonnar
Midland

EDITOR'S NOTE: A summary of the seven proposed constitutional amendments which will be before the voters in the Nov. 8 general election, was published as a public notice, as required by state law, in the Sept. 13, 1977, issue of The Reporter-Telegram. Additional information on the amendment election will be published from time to time between now and the election date.

POSITIVE THINKING

A fundamental principle of success

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

A friend of mine who lives in Rhode Island told me recently about one of her neighbors who had just bought a jeep. The salesman who sold this particular woman her jeep assured her that it could go anywhere. She wasted no time in testing out his statement.

On that hard-packed sand at Daytona Beach in Florida you can drive for miles. Unfortunately, this is not true of Rhode Island's beaches and, before too long, this woman had her jeep up to its hubcaps in sand. There she was, quite annoyed and blaming the salesman for having misrepresented the jeep's powers. Then a farmer happened by, noticed that she had not shifted into low range, told her how to get into this more powerful gear, and very soon she was able to pull out of the sand easily.

As she sped down the beach and on to the high ground, the farmer turned to my friend, who had been standing nearby, and commented, "It's strange, but she's just like all the rest of us — she had more power than she knew, but she wasn't using it."

It's easy to smile about a foolish person with a jeep stuck in the sand, but perhaps we ought to smile at ourselves also, because each of us has more powerful gears within us that we do not use.

As Louise M. Grafe writes in his fascinating little book, "Get Rich In Spite Of Yourself": "Many rich and successful men and women have no more brains or energy than anyone else. They are usually driven to success. Frequently they are so helpless they can't stop moving ahead even when they want to. Their money is made in spite of themselves!" Guess they just got into the right gear and kept on going — always pulling out of the sand.

We can truly state as a proposition that everyone has greater potential power within him than he has ever realized or been able to measure. For many of us, this power lies dormant — it never helps to get us out of the rut — because we have never learned that it exists or discovered how to use it. For others, this vast potential is activated and, once set in motion, drives on to success in every undertaking.

Consequently, the fundamental principle of success is the activation of the stronger and more confident personality that lies within each of us. But it is important that the thoughts that activate you be right, for wrong thoughts strongly held can be very destructive. The father of psychoanalysis, Sigmund Freud, wrote, "We are what we are because of what we have been." And the Bible, in its ancient wisdom, says, "For as he thinketh in his heart, so is he."

So, if you want to be sure that you are going to release all your powers, that you are going to develop the drive to success, never think a false thought, never think a failure thought, never think a negative thought.

You may ask, "How can I prevent such thoughts from coming into my mind?" You can't, but it is up to you whether or not they stay there. Remember the old parable, "You can't prevent the birds from flying over your head but you can keep them from building nests in your hair." You can practice emptying your mind of such thoughts and replacing them with true thoughts, success thoughts, positive thoughts. These fresh, creative thoughts will powerfully activate your real potential.

No one has to stumble or whine his or her way through life. Fill your mind with great thoughts, for you will never go any higher than your thoughts. They will help release your full potential. This is one of the fundamental principles of success.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

There's a shortage

To The Editor:

(The following letter was sent Oct. 14 to President Carter:)

I am a lifelong, registered, voting Democrat, a law-abiding citizen and, as such, have the utmost respect for the high and esteemed office of the president of the United States.

However, I am also an independent in the oil business and, as such, I greatly resent your reference to the people in the oil industry as "potential war profiteers" about to commit the biggest "rip-off" in history.

It is my opinion that there are not nearly as many dishonest people in the oil industry or any other industry for that matter as there are in government offices, both elective and appointive.

Notwithstanding the popular "obscene profits" phrase, a review of the oil companies will reveal that profits are not excessive. On the contrary they have historically been somewhat less than profits of most other major industries.

The totally unnecessary intervention of the federal government into the oil and gas business under the guise of "protecting" the consumer, its unrealistic pricing of natural gas below replacement costs and its grossly unfair two-tier pricing of new and old oil, while doing absolutely nothing about rapid increases in the costs of labor, drilling rigs, pipe, services and supplies, is the sole cause of the present energy crisis.

The United States has no more need for an energy policy promulgated by the federal government than for a grocery store policy, a real estate policy or a shoe shine stand policy.

What the United States does need is for the federal government to repeal all punitive, restrictive laws on the oil and gas industry and let free enterprise solve the energy problem.

The United States has no energy shortage. What it does have is a shortage of statesmen who recognize that with a free marketplace — where the law of supply and demand, profit and loss potential for risks taken is the only control needed and that such natural forces are able to work freely and without artificial restrictions imposed by government — the crisis will be resolved.

Job well done

To The Editor:

Recently the school where I am principal was burglarized and a small amount of money, an old watch, and a tape recorder and tape were stolen plus a great deal of vandalism was done to the school

Thanks to the alertness of officer F. W. Bartlett and other members of the Midland Police Department the robbers were arrested in less than five hours after the theft was reported.

This work is so typical of the day-to-day work of the Midland Police Department that I would like to take this means to commend them for the fine job they do for all the citizens of Midland each and every day.

I have lived in Midland for 23 years and appreciate all of the services which we receive from the Midland Police Department such as house watches when we are out of town, the Helping Hand safety program, the fine school programs on bicycle safety and drug education given by officer Ron Tate, and the close patrol of our schools and businesses.

We are fortunate to have these dedicated men and women to protect us and they have my deepest respect. Thanks to them for a job well done.

BROADSIDES

Films available

To The Editor:

Friday, Oct. 28, 9:30 a.m., at the West Texas Education Agency Service Center, Air Terminal, I have reserved eight controversial films that are shown to students in the public schools. The concerned Taxpayer's organization, in Odessa, has also arranged to show these films at night, Oct. 27, 7:30 at Furr's Banquet Room, 3120 Andrews Hwy., Odessa.

Parents, I urge you to talk with your children and then see these films for yourself. Many students find films like "The Lottery" very disturbing. "The Lottery" has been banned in the Fort Worth school district, yet it is shown throughout the Permian Basin.

Following are the films I have reserved. Comments are by a Parents Evaluation Committee, in Fort Worth, after they reviewed these films.

1. The Lottery—vivid scenes of a mother being stoned as a sacrifice for the crops. Her bloody death is at the hands of her children, husband and friends.

2. The Lottery, Part 2—Biblical references to the stoning of Naboth. Re-runs of last grim moments of victim's death.

3. Future Shock—features communal marriages, orgies in sleeping bags, and a wedding performed by a minister with a homosexual "bride and groom".

4. Witches of Salem — vivid scenes reminiscent of "The Exorcist" in which girls slobber, shake violently and scream. A hanging with background music of "Holy, Holy, Holy." A narration which tears down traditional American heritage and religion.

5. Guidance for the 70s', Self Esteem—teenagers are given "play dough" and told to make images of who they are.

6. Guidance for the 70s', Kids, Parents, and Pressure — the therapist ask questions: "Why can't you talk to your father?"

7. Guidance for the 70s', Who's Responsible—teenagers are asked. "Who do you blame when things go wrong?" Most common answer is, "My parents".

An additional film:

8. The Hat, Is This War Necessary?—serves as a classic example of propagonda for one-world government our children are exposed to in the classroom.

Citizens may view these films anytime from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Mon.-Fri., but Oct. 27, 28, are the only dates films are guaranteed to be available to the public. Some parents may feel uncomfortable about attending the classroom to see these films, and this is a more convenient way to see them. Please try to attend. Churchs leaders may be especially interested in some of the films. Allow approximately 2½ hours for viewing films.

A clear danger

To The Editor:

Your editorial Thursday reacting to Senator Tower's remarks re the nationalization of the oil industry gives rise to some sobering thoughts. He further commented that should that happen the steel and financial industries "could fall to a similar fate."

This country has been steadily marching down the road toward national socialism under the aegis of a democracy ever since FDR became president and the iron boots of Hilter's legions were trampling across the cobblestones of Europe.

Short days ago the U. S. House of Representatives passed a bill favoring labor union organizers and making it more difficult for business to oppose domination by union bosses. Labor leaders and their bought and paid for members of the Congress will not be content unitl they have a strong Labor Party in this country—or, if you please, a Worker's Party.

Now you add a Worker's Party to a National Socialist Party and translate it into German and you have Nationalsozialistiche Deutsche Arbeiterpartei, the acronym of which is NAZI!

Hunt family requests soybean case review

CHICAGO (AP) — The wealthy Hunt family of Texas has asked a federal appeals court to review the case in which the family was found guilty of violating government speculative limits on soybean trading.

The family also asked the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to be reimbursed for the market losses it suffered as a result of publicity on a suit filed by the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

Family member Herbert Hunt issued a statement in Dallas on Friday saying the appeal "basically asks the court to hear the facts in our case not yet presented and consider proper restitution for losses in the market that resulted from the carnival atmosphere in which the CFTC brought charges."

The commission charged in an April 28 suit that the six Hunt family members and a family corporation held 22.7 million bushels in soybeans futures, far exceeding the 3-million limit for an individual or persons acting in concert.

Judge Frank J. McGarr of U.S. District Court ruled on Sept. 28 that the family members acted in concert to violate the speculative limits.

However, the judge refused to stop the family actions or to collect unlawfully obtained profits. McGarr also dismissed counterclaims by the family, including charges that the commission improperly brought the complaint and wrongfully released records of family holdings. He also dismissed a request for the ouster of commission Chairman William T. Bagley.

McGarr admitted that his ruling was "incongruous" in that it confirmed the commission's position and upheld its authority to act but refused to punish the family.

McGarr said it might have been appropriate to order the Hunts to sell some of their holdings when the commission complaint was filed, but that evidence at that time was insufficient. The judge also suggested that the commission should have filed civil rather than criminal charges.

The commission appealed the latter part of McGarr's ruling in early October and Hunt criticized that action as a "vast additional and unwarranted waste of the taxpayers' money merely to harass me and other members of the Hunt family."

By KRISTIN GOFF

NEW YORK (AP) — "Fed watching" has long been a favorite sport among investors and economists who try to discern directions of interest rates and inflation by second-guessing Federal Reserve Board actions to implement monetary policies.

But the pastime has become particularly popular in recent months as the pace of growth in the nation's money supply continues to far exceed the announced goals of the Federal Reserve's policy committee.

While a rapid growth in supplies of money may seem like a good thing, too large an increase is considered worrisome because it may ultimately cheapen the value of the dollar, leading to a burst of inflation.

But the process of keeping growth of money supply in check also leads to pressure on interest rates and raises fears that if the two get too far out of balance, that could hurt the general pace of economic activity.

The White House, in an unusual move this past week, took the Fed to task for what it considered too conservative a view on money supply goals and warned against dangers of letting short-term interest rates rise.

The statement noted that the stock market already has been "unsettled" by rapid increases in short-term interest rates, but that, so far, the economic recovery has not been seriously damaged.

But it went on to warn: "If short-term interest rates were to increase substantially further ...a diversion of flows from mortgage lending institutions could begin to occur, and this would reduce the supply of funds for housing. Longterm interest rates might also be driven up."

Although the statement did not mention the Fed by name, it added that "rapid growth of the money supply is a matter of concern when it occurs in the context of a very rapid economic expansion, high employment and a worsening outlook for inflation. Those are not the circumstances we face presently."

The White House statement was issued shortly before the Federal Reserve issued its weekly statement on money supplies for the previous week. The measurement used for the nation's basic money supply, known as M1, showed no change from the prior week.

But because Fed watchers had expected a decline of more than $1 billion from the previous week, the results were still seen as indications that the Fed's efforts have not been successful at bringing growth under control and that it would soon move to further tighten its credit stance.

The measurement M1 represents the total of checking account deposits plus currency in circulation. In each of the past two reporting weeks it has averaged $334.1 billion on a seasonally adjusted basis.

Texas gets DOE grant

DALLAS — The State of Texas has been awarded a grant of $423,000 to implement a home weatherization program throughout the state, reports Curtis E. Carlson Jr., acting regional representative of the Department of Energy in Dallas.

Texas is one of the first states in the nation to qualify for such a grant under Title IV, Part A, of the Energy Conservation and Production Act.

DOE's weatherization program, which was authorized by Congress and became law Aug. 4, has a three-year authorized budget of $200 million of which $27.5 million was appropriated for fiscal 1977.

The Texas grant of $423,000 for fiscal 1977 will allow the state to weatherize approximately 2,000 homes of low-income persons under a plan developed by the Office of the Governor.

Under the program, 90 percent of the funds will be allocated for materials, tools and equipment while only 10 per cent will be allocated for labor and administration.

BUSINESS NOTEBOOK

Commission officials look afar for markets

By BILL KIDD

AUSTIN — Texas Industrial Commission officials are looking farther afield for markets for Texas business — including to the Far East and Down Under.

Jim Harwell, TIC executive director, says his agency is finishing an evaluation of the prospects of markets in Southeast Asia — including Malaysia, Singapore and the Phillipines — and Australia for the state's manufactured goods and agricultural products.

A recent gathering of the Texas-Japan Association, meeting in Tokyo, voted to urge federal authorities to inaugurate direct air service between Japan and Texas, because of the increasing trade, and travel, between the trading partners.

That meeting also saw Japanese officials briefing Texans on Japan's trade and joint oil exploration ventures with the People's Republic of China — an effort Japan hopes will decrease its dependence on imported oil.

TIC also hopes to continue efforts to develop more markets in the Mideast, planning a trade mission to that area this spring. Plans for a visit this fall were scrubbed after some companies which earlier indicated interest in taking part decided not to make the trip.

Closer to home, the TIC will be working with the Industrial Development Research Council, which holds its annual meeting in San Antonio Oct. 30-Nov. 2. IDRC is composed of 150 of the top corporate real estate departments representatives, Harwell says.

Speaker Bill Clayton will be among the speakers for that affair.

TIC also will be working with the West Texas Industrial Tour to Chicago Nov. 7, 8 and 9, Harwell reports.

•

New State Board of Insurance Chairman Hugh Yantis has disagreed with his agency's legal section on the propriety of a staff member being paid his expenses to speak at an industry organization meeting.

In a memorandum to other board members, Yantis said he feels the practice is improper, adding that if the Legislature had intended for such activities to be carried out, funds to do so would have been provided.

The question arose over an agency employee being invited to speak to an association meeting, with the association offering to pay his travel expenses after it was found there wasn't enough money in the department budget to pay for the trip.

•

Speaker Bill Clayton has announced a Select House Committee on Minority Business Enterprises, headed by Rep. Leonard Briscoe, Fort Worth.

Other House members are Reps. Milton Fox, Houston, vice chairman; Ernestine Glossbrenner, Alice; Al Price, Beaumont; Froy Salinas, Lubbock; Tom Schieffer, Fort Worth, and Frank Tejeda, San Antonio.

Citizen members are Mrs. Pat Eisenbauer, Corpus Christi businesswoman; Henry C. Harrison Jr., Houston banker; Norcell Haywood, San Antonio architect; Richard Najera, El Paso alderman; and Rev. Glen Godsey, Plainview minister.

Clayton said he is asking local government entities and state agencies to assist the special committee in working up recommendations aimed at providing equal business opportunities for all Texans.

The Industrial Commission has a minority business enterprise division, which now has been enacted statutorily by the Legislature.

That agency, as well as various chambers of commerce and local groups, are expected to be involved in the study.

The study authorized by Clayton is only the second special committee approved by the speaker for the interim; several joint committee studies and studies by standing committees have been approved.

business beattitudes™

We have to learn to master fear, or we will be like the man riding the tiger — we can't steer and we can't get off. One way is for us to profit from the mistakes of the past and then forget them. Then we can press on to the greater achievements of the future by living right now the best way we know how. Fear comes when our thoughts are in the past or the future and can best be faced with a calm, quiet mind that will master fear by living one day at a time.

By our discovering that living in the present is the antidote for fear, we will be holding the power of faith to work miracles, as expressed in these inspiring words: "Fear knocked at the door. Faith opened the door. And lo, there was no one there."

If we harbor any sort of fear, it will dominate all our thinking, damage our character, and make us believe that life isn't worth living. We can master fear by facing it boldly and practicing the idea of Ralph Waldo Emerson: "Do the thing you fear and the death of fear is certain."

Nobel Prize winner William Faulkner said in a speech, "The tragedy of living in a nuclear age is that we are living in fear. We are raising our children in fear. We are making concessions to the enemies of freedom because we're afraid. We've got to stop doing this!!! We have to start teaching ourselves not to be afraid. We have to get rid of fear because fear is the most damnable, damaging thing to human personality in the whole world."

If peace is to come, it must be peace within our own minds and hearts. If fear is to die, we must destroy it within ourselves. There is no other way.

Perhaps the most important lesson that we have learned this century is that it is not true that "human nature is unchangeable". Human nature, on the contrary, can be changed with the greatest ease and to the greatest possible extent, and in this lies some of the brightest hopes we have for the future of mankind.

He who FEARS being conquered is sure of defeat.

Panel says S. Korea had a plan

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct ended the first phase of its hearings on the Korean influence buying scandal Friday with the flat assertion that testimony had proven beyond doubt that the government of South Korea directed illegal efforts to influence members of Congress and other U.S. officials.

"There was an official plan and it was executed," said Peter White, the committee's deputy special counsel in a summation of the testimony of 14 witnesses during the three days of hearings.

"The question of whether these things took place is, very simply, a dead issue," White said as the committee chairman John J. Flynt (D-Ga.) nodded in agreement.

As a result, White suggested that the committee propose a House resolution condemning South Korea for its failure to cooperate with American investigations of the influence-buying scheme. Several members of the committee said later that they would support such a resolution.

Congressional and Justice Department investigators have been frustrated in efforts to gather evidence from several South Koreans, including Tongsun Park, the businessman and socialite who was allegedly a central agent in Korean efforts to buy friends and influence in Washington.

In Seoul Friday, negotiations over American interrogation of Park ended in failure as a Justice Department team reported that the Korean government had failed to offer acceptable conditions for the questioning.

The Korean embassy here has regularly said that Park and other individuals involved in the influence-buying program were private citizens whose actions had no connection to the Seoul government or its officials.

At Friday's hearing eight witnesses — including a former director of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency — reiterated what had been said before: that Park acted as an agent of the Korean government, reporting regularly to government officials and indirectly receiving funds from the government to support his efforts in Washington.

Friday's testimony also showed that Park used contacts with members of Congress and their aides to further his work on Capitol Hill.

Kim Hyung Wook, who was director of the KCIA from 1963 to 1969, told the committee that former Rep. Richard T. Hanna (D-Calif.) proposed a rice brokerage position for Park that provided funds he used to win favor with members of Congress.

The testimony showed that Park was able to place a young Korean associate briefly in the offices of two different members of Congress to gain "training on the Hill."

The former Park associate, Jay Shin Ryu, who testified under a grant of immunity from criminal prosecution, said that when he arrived in the United States in 1970 Park set up a meeting with Robert Reveles, a staff aide to Rep. Frank Thompson Jr. (D-N.J.), during which Reveles offered Ryu a job as an intern in Thompson's office. Ryu said he was on the job within a week after his arrival in the United States. He said he was paid $400 monthly in the job. The payments were made in cash and came, as Ryu later learned, from Tongsun Park.

'Black beret' unit said working out of El Paso

By BOB DUDNEY
Dallas Times Herald

WASHINGTON — An elite American "black beret" military unit reportedly has staged at least two Entebbe-style commando raids in remote areas of Texas as part of its training to combat terrorism in the United States and abroad.

One of the simulated anti-terror operations involved the storming of a desert compound where three U.S. diplomats had been taken prisoner by heavily armed terrorists who had ringed the area with explosives and barbed wire, according to a former Army colonel.

Retired Lt. Col. Tom Hamrick said that, in the second staged exercise, members of the special military team conducted a night paratroop assault on an oil refinery installation where 30 Americans were held hostage by extremists of unknown strength and firepower. The mock "oil refinery" was specially built, Hamrick said.

Both training exercises were conducted in west Texas near Ft. Bliss months before the now-famous Israeli raid at Uganda's Entebbe airport — which rescued more than 100 hostages on July 4, 1976, said the former officer, who spent several days with the unit last year.

After the spectacular rescue this week of 86 hostages aboard a hijacked Lufthansa airliner by a West German commando team, the Carter administration acknowledged the United States also could deploy special U.S. troops in the event American lives were threatened.

The Pentagon said it had prepared "trained forces and equipment to cope with terrorist activities" from all four of the military services, but declined to give specifics because it would "reveal units, individuals and procedures used to counter terrorism."

Apparently due to his military background, Hamrick, who now lives in Mt. Pleasant, S.C., was authorized to interview a number of soldiers in the "black beret" Ranger batallion stationed at Ft. Stewart, Ga., in connection with a prospective article for an armed forces magazine.

Hamrick said the anti-terrorist strike force is made up of Rangers stationed at Ft. Stewart and another battalion at Ft. Lewis in Washington. Each unit consists of about 590 volunteers who are airborne qualified.

Hamrick said the units undergo constant training in a wide variety of climates and terrain, in the United States and in foreign nations, and that the maneuvers in Texas were designed to give the force training for possible action in desert areas such as the Middle East.

Ranger commanders explained that the group has also gone on exercises in a number of other areas in the continental United States as well as Alaska, Panama and West Germany, Hamrick said. This prepares them for operations, jungles, deserts or mountains that might be needed.

According to Hamrick, the Ranger units place the highest priority on being able to move quickly to any part of the world. He said the Georgia battalion commander, Lt. Col. Edward Yaugo, told him 85 per cent of the force is ready for transport on short notice and that the advance elements could be in action within five hours.

The rest of the military team will have become operational within 24 hours, Yaugo said.

CIA media influence comes to public light

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — On Feb. 27, 1975, William E. Colby, then director of the Central Intelligence Agency, had an unusual telephone conversation with Parade magazine editor Lloyd Shearer. The subject was photographs Parade had obtained of a mystery ship off the coast of Hawaii, which belonged; apparently to billionaire Howard Hughes.

"We have some pictures — Summa Corp. pictures," Shearer, the editor of the weekly magazine, said, alluding to the holding company Hughes owned. The location of the ship was said to be 600 to 800 miles off Oahu.

"You are onto something very, very delicate," the director of central intelligence responded. "This one I really would like you to sit on."

Shearer was worried about his competitors in the press. "Can you turn off all the sources who have it?" he asked the CIA director. "Do you think you can sit on this?"

Colby promised: "I will try like hell."

The transcript of that telephone conversation, preserved by the CIA since it took place, concerned the Glomar Explorer, the huge salvage ship that had secretly plucked portions of a sunken Soviet submarine from the Pacific Ocean floor a few months earlier.

It was a secret that the CIA was determined to keep through an intensive campaign of persuasion by Colby with some of the nation's most influential publishers, editors and broadcasters.

Details of that effort have now become public in hundreds of pages of CIA documents forced to light under the Freedom of Information Act. After contending in court for several years that Colby's efforts to suppress the Glomar explorer story could not be disclosed without compromising national security, the CIA finally relented.

The Glomar papers obtained through the Freedom of Information suit, tell very little about the salvage operation code-named Project Jennifer. But they provide some new insight into relationships between the government, the press, the public interest and the issue of national security.

The documents also show the CIA effort amounted to a comprehensive domestic operation. The agency initially defended it against formal disclosure on the ground that it was carried out under the law giving the CIA authority to protect "intelligence sources and methods from unauthorized disclosure," or, in short, to keep Project Jennifer a secret.

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Atty. Gen. John Hill returns to Probate Judge Pat Gregory's court Monday to wrap up preparations for a trial on the Howard Hughes estate.

Issues to be settled in the trial, which starts Nov. 14, are the validity of the purported Hughes will commonly referred to as the Mormon will, and whether the late billionaire was a resident of Texas at the time of his death on April 5, 1976.

If Hill can prove Hughes was a legal Texas resident, it could mean more than $100 million in inheritance taxes for the state.

Administrators of Hughes' estate claim Hughes was a resident of Nevada, which has no inheritance taxes.

The Mormon will is a threepage handwritten document discovered April 26, 1976 in the headquarters of the Mormon church in Salt Lake City. It designates former top Hughes assistant Noah Dietrich of Palm Springs, Calif., as executor.

Potential heirs and estate administrators have labeled it as a fraud, but it is scheduled for trial in Las Vegas beginning Nov. 7.

Because of the Las Vegas trial, Dietrich's attorney, Harold Rhoden of Los Angeles, says he can't get ready for the Houston trial on Nov. 14.

Dietrich's Houston attorney, Jack Withem, is expected to file a motion for continuance some time before the start of the Houston trial.

The most unusual bequest in the Mormon will is the bequest of one-sixteenth of the estate to Melvin Dummar of Ogden, Utah. Dummar, a former gas station attendent, says he once picked up a man in the Nevada dessert who identified himself as Howard Hughes.

The will also leave money to Rice University, University of Texas, the University of California and the University of Nevada.

Rice, Texas and California have agreed to help finance some of the expenses of the Las Vegal trial.

Japan oil supply tied to imports

Agence France-Presse

TOKYO — Foreign companies dominate the Japanese oil industry from pumping to refining, and the future looks none too bright for local companies.

Oil extracted in Japan — only 595,000 tons in 1976 — covers a mere 0.3 per cent of demand. Japan had to import 228 million tons of crude last year, and relied on imports for 80 per cent of its energy supplies, against 20 per cent in 1955.

The strengthening of the yen on foreign exchange markets this year at one point seemed to have eased the situation for Japanese oil concerns. They were even accused of having made large profits.

The oil company association denies this. The association's president, Masami Ishida, said in an interview with the daily Mainichi that foreign exchange profits did not even cover the losses incurred through rises in crude prices since January.

The biggest share of imports comes from the Middle East, mainly Saudi Arabia with 30 per cent, Iran with 20.2 per cent and the United Arab Emirates with 11.4 per cent.

Japan also buys oil from Iraq, Qatar, Algeria, Libya, Nigeria, Indonesia, the Soviet Union, Venezuela and China.

Last year China sold 5.9 million tons of crude to its neighbor. Japan is not happy with the high concentration of impurities such as nitrogen oxides and paraffin which call for special refining equipment for Chinese crude. Last month, however, the two countries drew up a five-year agreement, to be signed soon, whereby Japan will buy up to 15 million tons from China by 1982. Japan's complete dependence on imports has forced it to go into oil prospecting in a big way.

Seventy Japanese companies are working around the world but they can fill only 9 per cent of the demand. This low figure is due to Japan's delay in securing prospecting rights and in constructing drilling equipment.

The situation is aggravated by the size of the companies which are usually small and short of capital. They are so numerous that assistance from the Japan petroleum development corporation is spread too thinly to be effective as it should. This aid totalled $275 million in 1975.

The Japanese oil industry is characterized by a lack of companies carrying out the entire range of operations from pumping to distribution.

Refineries belong either to foreign corporations or local groups. Last year foreign capital companies refined 2,997,500 barrels per day or 50.5 per cent of the total. Japanese companies refined the remaining 49.5 per cent or 2,942,860 barrels. In spite of this almost equal share, foreign companies accounted for 53.4 per cent of total turnover, including 60 per cent of the petrol sales.

To try to close this gap the 1962 oil industry law was passed to govern the setting up and expansion of refineries. However, foreign concerns have kept their advantage thanks to better distribution networks.

The oil industry's problems have grown since 1974. As well as crude price increases and a slackening of demand for refined products the industry has had to face stiff competition from liquefied natural gas and nuclear energy. Both 1974 and 1975 were disastrous for the oil companies in spite of the yen's appreciation against other currencies.

On top of everything else the oil industry has been obliged since last year to build up its emergency reserves so they will last the country 90 days instead of 80 by 1979.

Japanese oil companies will need to invest $5 billion to reach this target.

They also will be obliged to modernize their plants in the near future to conform to the extremely strict new anti-pollution laws, which demand use of lighter fuels.

Japanese specialists estimate the country's oil needs in 1985 at 500 million tons to supply 70 per cent of energy requirements. By 1990 it is expected to supply only 57 per cent with 452 million tons. However specialists emnphasize that if the government does not collaborate closely with private concerns in developing alternative energy sources, Japan will have to import almost 600 million tons of crude in 1990.

Panamanians to express treaty thoughts at polls

By LEONARD GREENWOOD
The Los Angeles Times

PANAMA CITY — Panamanians will vote today on whether to accept or reject two proposed treaties that provide for the United States to give up the Panama Canal at the end of this century.

The proposed treaties, already signed by President Carter and the Panamanian leader, Gen. Omar Torrijos, are expected to be approved, but the size of the winning margin is thought to be significant.

According to observers here, if fewer than two-thirds of the 788,000 eligible voters vote for acceptance, the results will be regarded here as a vote of no-confidence for Torrijos. On the other hand, if 80 percent vote for acceptance, it will be seen as a major victory.

In a country where election fraud is common, where the military dictatorship has banned political parties, many observers feel that the people who count the votes will count them in whatever way is necessary for the government to obtain the results it wants.

But in six weeks of intensive campaigning, the strength and quality of the opposition has surprised many observers. What has surprised them even more is the degree of freedom with which Torrijos has permitted his opponents to express their views.

Up to the last minute, Torrijos continued to give at least a free page a day in each of the government's two newspapers to left-wing students who oppose him bitterly. The students attack the treaty as a sell-out and they call Torrijos a criminal who will not escape punishment for his part in it.

But in the past 10 days Torrijos has denied radio and television time to his most effective opposition, a group of lawyers described by some observers as the cream of Panama's politically aware intelligentisia.

Voting booths will close at 7 p.m. today. The ballots will be counted, then sealed in the balot boxes and taken to a district office where they will be counted a second time. Again the boxes will be sealed and taken to a provincial center, where they will be counted a third time. Final, official results will not be announced until Thursday.

Even the people in the most remote areas have had a chance to hear the government's case. The government campaign has been led by Vice President Gerardo Gonzalez and the chief Panamanian treaty negotiator Romulo Escobar Bethacourt, along with other negotiators.

These men led seminars at which they trained dozens of other government supporters to conduct public discussions. There have been hundreds of speeches and meetings throughout the country.

Basically, the treaties are unpopular here, political observers say. They will be supported only because Panamanians understand that they are the best their negotiating team could get.

Pilot federation postpones strike

The Los Angeles Times

UNITED NATIONS — International Airline pilots Friday postponed a 48-hour worldwide strike scheduled for Tuesday following assurances that the United Nations will act urgently to combat hijacking.

Captain Derry Pearce, president of the International Federation of Airline Pilots Associations, made the announcement after an interview with Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim and General Assembly President Lazar Mojsov of Yugoslavia.

Pearce, a pilot with Cahay Pacific Airlines based in Hong Kong, was accompanied by nine other national association heads, including captain John O'Donnell, president of the U.S. Airline Pilots Association. O'Donnell and Arieh Oz, an El Al Israel Airlines representative, later said they opposed calling off the strike but went along with the majority.

"I am prepared to announce that the planned cessation of operations next Tuesday has been postponed," Derry said. He said the group made its decision after receibing assurances from Waldheim and Mojsov that "urgent action" has been scheduled for the General Assembly.

He cautioned that the strike has only been postponed and that his organization would closely monitor subsequent U.N. action.

The International Pilots chief said he had been promised an opportunity to address the Assembly or one of its committees. An Austrian-sponsored resolution is expected to be presented to the Assembly's steering committee Monday and debated during the week. Answering questions after a one-hour session with the U.N. officials, Derry said he was uncertain about the exact nature of the resolution to be placed before the Assembly. Asked what the pilots want, he replied:

"The final answer is no haven for hijackers — not for planes, but no haven for hijackers."

Derry said the original decision last week by the international federation, although it coincided with a Lufthansa 737 hijacking in which the pilot was killed, was not related to that incident.

"It was the general escalation of violence," he said.

Investigators claim information sketchy on Skynyrd band crash

McCOMB, Miss. (AP) — Investigators say they have "sketchy information" on what happened before the crash of a chartered plane in which six persons, including three members of the Lynyrd Skynyrd rock band, were killed.

Twenty persons were injured when the propeller-driven Convair 240 aircraft crashed Thursday about 50 miles before the end of its trip from Greenville, S.C., to Baton Rouge, La.

Rudolf Kapustin, head of the National Transportation Safety Board team investigating the crash, said recordings of the last words between pilot Walter McCreary and an airplane tracking station in Houston show "there was talk about fuel."

Kapustin, whose team began its work Friday, said the investigation had not progressed enough to permit elaboration.

"I'll say this. There usually is a lot of fuel spilled around, and this time there isn't. It's strange," said NTSB inspector T.R. O'Brien.

Air traffic control diverted the plane to McComb, investigators say, after its pilot reported the plane was low on fuel. Moments later the plane lost altitude and mowed a path through a densely wooded area before crumpling on the forest floor — pointed directly at the air strip it did not reach.

The plane had passed south of the McComb airport minutes before its emergency call without talking to the McComb tower. Everette Fairley, air traffic controller here, said the regional tracking station in Houston, suddenly called.

"They first said the plane was low on fuel and was diverted my way," Fairley said. "Then they said it was out of fuel, and then they called back not two minutes later to say it was down."

Some survivors said that before the crash, the engines sputtered and one went out. Witnesses on the ground also said the motors coughed, and there was widespread suspicion that the plane may have run out of fuel.

Poverty shackles poor into illicit drug life

By TOM FENTON

CULICAN, Mexico (AP) — Santana Gomez Valenzuela hung his head, stared at his dirty, calloused feet and said softly: "Yes, I planted opium poppy and marijuana fields. You do what you must to eat.

"We're poor in my village. We grow drugs to buy food, maybe a few things for the house."

Gomez, 28, an illiterate and nearly penniless peasant, is one of about 1,300 persons arrested in this area over the last year in Mexico's massive anti-narcotics drive.

Officials say many of those arrested are like Gomez, dirt poor, isolated from the mainstream of Mexican society and with few other ways to make a living.

"My village, Chuchupira, is a small rancho about 100 miles east of here," Gomez said. "I came down to Culican once looking for work but couldn't find anything. I thought about going to Los Mochis (about 120 miles northwest of Culican), but had no way to get there."

Gomez, his pants and shirt in tatters, said he began raising drugs several years ago "when a man with a big car came down from up north somewhere, Nogales maybe."

Gomez said he never learned the man's name, but thought he was Mexican.

"He talked to a lot of people in my village. That's how I got involved," Gomez said.

Officials say narcotics traffickers search out peasants in isolated areas, offering them money, goods and sometimes guns, to plant, cultivate and harvest opium poppies and marijuana.

Santana Gomez Valenzuela

The popppies grow best in the spring and fall, the periods of maximum rainfall, and marijuana is grown the rest of the year, officials said. In the last two years the drug fields have been moving away from the lush tropical coast, higher and higher into the Sierra Madre mountains, where there are few roads. Officials say the drugs are flown out from clandestine air strips, or smuggled out in vehicles or on foot.

Heroin is derived from the poppy opium. Officials say that Mexico has become the largest supplier of heroin to the United States.

State nearly finished with Davis

By MIKE COCHRAN

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — The state move to the threshold of resting its capital murder case against Fort Worth millionaire Cullen Davis Saturday amid mild excitement but little concern over a death threat.

The defense completed its seventh and final day of cross examination of Fort Worth crime lab director Frank Shiller, believed to be the final witness for the prosecution.

Shiller, who has been on the stand nine days, was back on re-direct examination when the trial was recessed for the weekend.

The Amarillo Globe-News recived a telephone call from an unidentified man Friday night who said he had a statement concerning the Davis affair.

"If he is not released in 72 hours, 20 people are going to die," the man told a reporter.

Chief defense lawyer Richard "Racehorse" Haynes was busily drawing up a list of 20 names Saturday for submission to the would-be killer, most of them newsmen.

The state was putting the finishing stroke Saturday on its case after precisely two months of testimony ranging from dramatic to lurid to excruciatingly technical.

Among the spectators Saturday were the defendant's first wife, Sandra, and the couple's two young sons.

Gus Gavrel, 22, was crippled in the gunfire, but his girlfriend Beverly Bass, 19, escaped unharmed after a frantic midnight flight across the 181-acre estate.

The three survivors, Priscilla, Beverly and Gavrel, provided the jury eyewitness accounts of the shootings and each identified Davis as the gunman.

Prosecutors sought to corroborate those accounts through mounds of physical evidence and testimony from policemen and others who came in contact that night with the survivors.

It was Shiller who provided the single most important testimony in the case.

He told the jury he positivley identified four of nine bullets recovered after the shootings and that the same .38 caliber pistol was used to kill both Farr and the young girl.

FBI sensed hijacking conclusion

ATLANTA (AP) — FBI agents said they became increasingly confident that they would be able to free the hostages aboard a hijacked Frontier Airlines jet. But they said only one person appeared to be beyond the reach of their protection: the hijacker himself.

"His mood was not such that he would — unless something went wrong — cause harm to the hostages," FBI agent Don Cochran said Friday. "As time went on, we became more confident we would be able to retrieve them without injury."

Thomas Michael Hannan hijacked the plane Thursday at the airport in his hometown, Grand island, Neb. He released 18 women and children at a first stop, Kansas City. He released the last 15 of his hostages 14 hours later before fatally shooting himself with a shotgun.

Cochran said suspicion that Hannan might kill himself came shortly after the jet arrived in Atlanta. He said the FBI's behavioral sciences section in Washington had analyzed Hannan's conversation as well as information gathered from his relatives and friends.

Hannan, 29, had demanded a $3 million ransom and freedom for George David Stewart, whom police identified as a fellow homosexual.

Hannan and Stewart were arrested in Mobile, Ala., last month on charges of robbing a bank in Atlanta Sept. 2. Stewart was jailed but Hannan had been freed on $25,000 bond.

Thai situation hasn't changed

The Los Angeles Times

BANGKOK — Without accepting any of the blame, the military men who have ruled Thailand for the past year have admitted that the country was in a mess and that the appointed civilian government they kicked out Thursday was a dismal failure.

The tacit admissions came at a press conference that the freshly labeled Revolutionary Committee called to explain the unusual happenings of the past 24 hours.

The press conference was virtually a rerun of the one a year ago after the generals, admirals and air marshals, then calling themselves the Reform Council, ousted an elected democratic government.

To the surprise of no one, the Revolutionary Committee was virtually identical to the old Reform Council, though it included five retired officers who are now called civilians.

The spokesman for the group, retired Adm. Sangad Chaloryu, shed little light on Thursday's strange coup in which appointed Prime Minister Thanin Kraivichien, a former Supreme Court judge of limited vision, was unceremoniously dumped.

It was necessary, Sangad said, because the economy was not improving, the security of the country was threatened, the morale of government workers was falling and the Cabinet was ineffective because of internal bickering. During the past year, the government has persistently denied all those things and closed local newspapers for printing such stories.

Sangad did not say that the mini-coup had been made necessary because one year ago the generals had failed to provide any machinery for removing a prime minister. When Thanin refused to resign — believing he was backed by the king and hoping the generals would be too embarrassed at messily firing their own hand-picked man — he forced the military to act.

Now, the armed forces are back where they were a year ago with problems made worse by neglect. Sangad promised that the new government would move speedily to deal with unemployment and disappointing economic growth but he was long on generalities and short on details.

Indians in claim dispute will discuss offer, but...

WASHINGTON (AP) — A lawyer for the Wampanoag Indians says they are willing to discuss a federal government offer of $4 million to settle a claim on residential land in Mashpee, Mass., but he says the amount is low.

Attorney Tom Tureen told the Senate Indian Affairs Committee on Friday that he would consider any conditions at all to settle the dispute, but the idea of accepting $4 million for claims on land valued at more than $100 million was "strange."

On Friday, the federal government offered to settle the tribe's claim on residential land in the Cape Cod town but added that the Commonwealth of Massachusetts would have to pay about $1 million of the claim.

Barbara Berger, a staff lawyer for the Senate committee, said the offer was conditional on the Indians proving they are an official tribe, that they have title to the land and that the land was taken from them illegally. Also, she said the offer applies only to the land which has houses built on it and not the undeveloped land.

Elliott Cutler, assistant director of the Office of Management and Budget, outlined the proposal after Massachusetts' two senators told the Senate Indian Affairs Committee the claim is causing hardship to homeowners.

Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, a Democrat, and Edward W. Brooke, a Republican, said the dispute has depressed the real estate market, making it impossible for people who must move to sell their houses.

The Indians' claim, involving undeveloped land as well as the land on which houses have been built, is being tried in U.S. District Court in Boston. The trial began Monday and is expected to take four to six weeks.

Tax simplification like case of Catch 22

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Whenever anyone talks about tax reform these days, one of the first items to come up almost always is "tax simplification."

The notion of streamlining the nation's complex tax system — and simplifying the returns that taxpayers have to fill out every April — has long been a dream of economists and public officials alike.

Robert C. Messersmith

Congressmen make speeches about it. And President Carter has listed it as a major goal of his coming tax revision package — right along with greater equity and lower tax rates.

There's no doubt the tax system is complex. The latest version of the tax code takes up 2,176 pages — most of it involving definitions and exceptions. Every month it grows a little more.

And anyone who has faced a form 1040 on a long spring weekend knows how complicated life can be. Polls show fewer than a quarter of American taxpayers make out their own returns. About 54 per cent go to outside preparers.

But despite all this weighty evidence, some analysts question whether the tax system can, or even should, be simplified. Maybe we need all those loopholes and exceptions, they say. The complex returns are merely the price.

The argument comes in human terms: The tax code is complex because we need to treat people differently in order to be fair, to take account of their individual circumstances. Reshuffle those shares if you like, but the complexity remains.

People also like the code's complexity because it offers them a chance to wrangle an extra dollar out of Uncle Sam. It's a national game. There's more money in complexity — for those who can find the breaks.

Finally, many of the present exceptions and exclusions were put there to influence social behavior or promote national goals. The deduction for charitable contributions is one example. Take that away, and many worthy organizations would be left in a lurch.

As a result, some tax experts believe there's an inherent conflict between trying to simplify the tax system and making it more fair and equitable. The rub is in the present code: The tax volume begins simply, with the flat-out concept that all income, from whatever source, is taxable. The next 2,175 pages are spent outlining exceptions to that rule.

These same difficulties are evident in President Carter's new tax package. Carter pledged last autumn that tax simplification would be a key element in his new program. And Laurence N. Woodworth, the President's chief tax writer, spent most of a press conference last spring emphasizing that commitment.

But tax experts say the package the President is planning — at least, the version that has been recommended by his Treasury advisers — falls far short of that goal.

To be sure, the Carter proposal makes some significant moves toward simplification. In a major step, the President is seeking to end the speical tax treatment for capital gains — a change tax experts say would in itself abolish almost a third of the present tax code.

He's also proposing to eliminate a spate of deductions and exclusions and to merge the present $750 personal exemption and $35-a-person credit. There's little real doubt that will simplify returns a bit.

But this streamlining is more than offset by other steps the President is considering that, ironically, are designed to make the tax system more equitable.

Rescue men cut through to wreckage

MANILA, The Philippines (AP) — Rescue workers today pulled the last of 24 American servicemen's bodies from the wreckage of a Marine helicopter in the dense jungle of Mindoro island, the Navy reported.

Officials said 14 injured servicemen, including one Navy medical corpsman hurt in the rescue operation, were being treated at U.S. military hospitals on Luzon, the Philippines' main island.

The names of the victims have not been released.

The CH53-D Sea Stallion helicopter, carrying a crew of four and 33 passengers, slammed into a hillside on the central Philippines island as it was airlifting troops during a training exercise Friday.

A Navy spokesman said the thick jungle prevented rescue helicopters from landing at the crash site, about 3½ miles inland from the Mindoro island coast and 80 miles southwest of Manila. Rescue craft set down in clearings below the site and rescuers had to chop their way through the heavy underbrush up the hill to the downed helicopter.

The cause of the crash is being investigated.

The victims were among an estimated 6,500 Marine and 13,000 sailors involved in a training exercise named "Fortress Lightning." Marines participating in the exercise were from Hawaii, Okinawa and Camp Pendleton, Calif.

About 1,200 Marines had been designated as enemy troops, and the others rode landing craft and helicopters to establish beachheads and move inland against blank gunfire.

Exhausted Robinson hits sack

By ROB WOOD

HOUSTON (AP)—Ash Robinson tapped his cane repeatedly on the floor and said, "I am going home and get in bed and not get up until tomorrow night."

Robinson, a Houston millionaire who made his forture during the early days of the Texas oil boom, had been cleared a few minutes earlier by a civil jury of any involvement in the kill-for-hire death of his former son-in-law, prominent Houston plastic surgeon Dr. John Hill.

Robinson, a salty-talking 79-year-old oilman, said, "I hope to God that we can be reconciled with our grandson."

Robert Hill, 17, was one of the plaintiffs in the $7.6 million wrongful death suit against Robinson. Joining him the legal action was his adopted mother Connie Hill, 37, and his grandmother, Myra Hill, 75.

During the seven weeks of testimony, Robinson had testified, using the nickname he had given his only grandson, "Boot, I had no more to do with your father's death than you did. Death, murder, does not solve any problem on the face of the earth."

Robinson was accused in the civil suit of conspiring in the slaying of Hill to avenge the death of Joan Robinson Hill, the millionaire's daughter and the doctor's first wife.

Mrs. Hill died under mysterious circumstances in 1969.

Her husband was indicted on charges he killed his wife through medical neglect. The first trial ended in a mistrial.

Hill was awaiting a second trial when he was shot to death by a masked gunman as he entered the front door of his expensive Houston home on a late September night in 1972.

Mike Shepler, a member of the jury, said, "When we took the first vote it was 9-3 for the Hills and against Robinson. After we discussed every possible part of the case, it ended with a unanimous verdict for Mr. Robinson.

"It all boiled down to one major thing—there just wasn't enough evidence presented to link Mr. Robinson to the slaying of Dr. Hill."

Connie Hill, the surgeon's third wife, left the courtroom immediatly after the verdict was read, but said, "With the emotion of the trial it is too early to day if we will file an appeal."

Midland residents busted

Two Midland residents Saturday were released from the county jail on $7,500 bond each following their arrest late Friday for felony possession of marijuana, a Midland County Sheriff's office spokesman said Saturday.

Otis James Johnson Jr. and Melissa Johnson were arrested at 1604 W. Tennessee Ave. by narcotics officers from the Midland County Sheriff's office and the Ector County Sheriff's office, the spokesman said.

Officers said they seized 36 pounds of a substance believed to be marijuana.

Campbell runs wild to pace Texas victory

DALLAS (AP) — Texas tailback Earl Campbell rambled for a career-high 213 yards in the rain Satauurday, splattering tackles and using six tear-away jerseys and the No. 2 ranked Longhorns crushed spirited Southern Methodist 30-14 in a Southwest Conference game of national impact.

TEXAS' VICTORY, coupled with No. I ranked Michigan's 16-0 loss to Minnesota sent Longhorns partisans dancing on the bleachers of the rain-soaked Cotton Bowl.

Texas, now 6-0 and 3-0 in SWC play, was stunned early in the first period on an 11-yard touchdown pass from freshman quarterback Mike Ford to Emanuel Tolbert then unleashed a 20-point avalanche in the last six minutes of the half.

Campbell, a 6-1, 220-pound senior, carried 32 times against the outmanned Mustangs with the majority of the 36,151 fans giving him encouragement.

His previous best rushing day was 208 yards on 32 carries.

Bayuk's game-clinching one-yard touchdown run was set up when Steve Barnes blocked a punt to give TCU the ball at the Miami 36-yard line. A pass interference call gave the Frogs, now 2-4, the ball at the Miami one.

It was the second straight win for victory-starved TCU, which broke a 15-game losing streak by defeating Rice in its last outing.

Miami's Ottis Anderson erased a 14-6 TCU halftime lead when he took a screen pass, broke three tackles and rumbled 74 yards for a touchdown.

Chris Dennis booted three field goals for Miami, now 3-3, including a 33-yarder in the third quarter.

TCU defensive end Daron Mosley pounced on two rain-soaked Miami fumbles in the second quarter to set up the Horned Frogs' two touchdowns.

The first recovery blunted a Miami scoring threat and led to a 56-yard drive capped by Steve Bayuk's one-yard touchdown run.

Less than two minutes later, Miami punter Rob Rajsich fumbled the slick balland Mosley fell on it at the Miami 25-yard line. Bayuk then tossed a

No. 1 Michigan falls to Minnesota, 16-0

ROGIND KICKED field goals of 41 and 37 yards in the first half, and Marion Barber scored on a three-yard run to give Minnesota a 13-0 halftime lead.

Rogind added a 31-yard field goal with just over four minutes remaining in the game to complete the scoring.

Michigan fumbled four times, losing possession three times, while the unranked Gophers played mistake-free football and harassed Wolverine quarterback Rick Leach all afternoon, intercepting two passes in the final quarter.

Leach did set an all-time Michigan total offense record while gaining 122 yards. It gave him 3,727 career yards to break Don Moorhead's 1968-1970 record by 86 yards.

MICHIGAN HAD not been held scoreless in 13 games. The last time the Wolverines were blanked was in 1967, when they lost to 34-0 to Michigan State. It was coach Bo Schembechler's first shutout at Michigan.

Minnesota is now 5-2 over-all, 2-2 in the Big Ten.

Minnesota took a quick 3-0 lead at 4:28 of the first quarter. After holding Michigan on its first series of plays, the Gophers went 34 yards in five plays to the Wolverine 24, where Rogind booted a 41-yard field goal.

Key plays in the drive were a 23-yard pass from Carlson to Jeff Anhorn and a 10-yard completion to running back Steve Breault.

AN ERRANT pitchout by Michigan's Leach on the Wolverines' next play from scrimmage was recovered by Minnesota safety Keith Brown at the Michigan 12 and led to Minnesota's next score.

Carlson ran six yards to the four and one play later, on fourth-and-one, freshman Marion Barber went into the end zone standing up from the three.

Rogind's conversion at 8:35 made it 10-0.

THE GOPHERS moved 54 yards near the end of the first half and took a 13-0 lead on a 37-yard field goal by Rogind. Garry White rushed for 24 yards and Kent Kitzmann gained 21 yards in the 11-play drive.

Operating from the shotgun formation, Carlson connected on a key third-down pass for a first down to the Michigan 24 to keep the Gopher drive going.

AN INTERCEPTION by Michigan's Dwight Hicks, which he returned to the Minnesota eight, was nullified by a defensive interference call and also aided the Gophers' 61-yard drive.

Minnesota's Ken Foxworth intercepted a pass by Leach and returned the ball to the Gopher 49 with 10 minutes to play, effectively sealing Michigan's fate.

Minnesota and Michigan have been battling for the Little Brown Jug since 1909. Michigan has won 43 and Minnesota 22, with three ties.

OU's Kenny King picks up 11 yards

King paces OU over Cyclones

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Fullback Kenny King returned to action Saturday and led Oklahoma to a 35-16 victory over Iowa State as the Sooners took over sole possession of the lead in the Big Eight Conference.

King sat out last week's game against Missouri with a bruised shoulder but was healthy Saturday, and his presence made the difference in the Oklahoma Wishbone attack. He rushed for 141 yards on 22 carries and continually got the Sooners out of deep holes with his slashing runs.

The Sooners elected to kick off to open the game, figuring they could stop the Cyclones and get good field position. That's exactly what happened, but the Sooners were unable to move, and on the next possession, Iowa State scored on a 44-yard run by Dexter Green.

On the next possession with King leading the way, the Sooners went 71 yards in seven plays for the tying touchdown. King gained 65 of those yards, but the score came on a sixyard run by David Overstreet.

From then until the middle of the third quarter, it was a close game as the teams traded touchdowns, a five-yard run by Oklahoma quarterback Thomas Lott and a 12-yard pass by Cyclones quarterback Terry Rubley to Guy Preston. The Cyclones also had a safety when Oklahoma kicker Uwe von Schamann was tackled in the end zone while trying to punt.

But Oklahoma broke the Cyclones' back in the third quarter when free safety Zac Henderson intercepted a Rubley pass in the end zone, then halfback Freddie Nixon went 85 yards with a punt return, making it 28-16.

Oklahoma added its last touchdown on a nine-yard run by Lott late in the fourth quarter.

Notre Dame crushes USC, 49-19

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Holder Ted Burgmeier turned a bad center snap into a two-point conversion pass and scampered 20 yards on a fake field goal as 11th-ranked Notre Dame scored two quick touchdowns late in the second period and crushed fifth-ranked Southern California 49-19 Saturday.

A capacity crowd of 59,075 in Notre Dame Stadium, plus a national television audience, saw the underdog Irish overcome a pair of heart-breaking fumbles and hand Southern Cal its worst defeat since a 51-0 drubbing by Notre Dame in 1966.

NOTRE DAME scored on Joe Montana's one-yard sneak with 2:37 left in the half to snap a 7-7 tie and boosted its lead to 22-7 with 20 seconds left when Montana passed 13 yards to Ken MacAfee.

The Irish put the game away at 35-7 with two more touchdowns in the third quarter, one on a 30-yard run by defensive tackle on Jay Case after Bob Golic blocked Marty King's punt and the other on a oneyard, fourth-down flip from Montana to tight end MacAfee, capping a 70-yard drive.

The tie-breaking touchdown followed Leroy Leopold's recovery of a fumble by Charles White, USC's star tailback, at the losers' 14 with 4½ minutes left in the first half and the score knotted at 7-7. White's bobble came on the first play after Notre Dame's David Mitchell fumbled at the five and Southern Cal's Ed Gutierrez recovered at the eight.

THE TRIUMPH was Notre Dame's fifth in six games and ended a string of three consecutive setbacks and six in seven years to Southern Cal in the 49th meeting between college football's foremost intersectional rivals.

USC lost for the second time in seven starts and dropped the Trojans' record in South Bend to 6-14-1.

It was undoubtedly the biggest triumph in Dan Devine's hectic and controversial three-year coaching career at Notre Dame. The victory may finally have erased his image as a conservative coach, in addition to stilling demands for his ouster from zealous supporters, upset because the Irish lost three games in each of Devine's first two seasons.

Notre Dame stormed 80 yards in 11 plays on its first possession with Mitchell scoring on a four-yard run. The Irish defense, led by linebacker Golic and end Ross Browner, kept the Trojans bottled up despite some fine running by White. And USC's only score in the first three periods came when linebacker Mario Celotto grabbed a mid-air fumble by Notre Dame's Terry Eurick for an easy five-yard run.

Baylor shoots down Air Force in 38-7 romp

WACO, Tex. (AP) — Quarterback Scott Smith of Baylor pierced Air Force's defense with rollout passes, including a 13-yard touchdown throw to Tommy Davidson and a 17-yarder to Tommy Lee, as Baylor took a 38-7 intersectional victory Saturday.

The freshman signal caller also guided a crisp Baylor running attack behind an offensive line that averaged 252 pounds a man to touchdown runs of three and five yards by David Seaborn.

THE VICTORY gave Baylor a 3-4 season record. The Bears are 2- 2 in the Southwest Conference.

Air Force, an independent, fell to 1-5-1.

Baylor led 17-0 at halftime and survived a relentless passing attack by quarterback Dave Ziebart in the second half, with Baylor defensive back Howard Fields intercepting Ziebart three passes.

Fields returned his third interception for 53 yards and Baylor's final touchdown. His other two thefts came in the Baylor end zone and at the Baylor 12.

Linebacker Jerry Harrison of Baylor, who intercepted a Ziebart pass to set up Baylor's second touchdown, threw the Air Force quarterback for a seven-yard loss to stall another Air Force second half drive at the Baylor 10.

AIR FORCE scored its only touchdown with only 2:03 elapsed in the third quarter on a 34-yard pass and run play from Ziebart to Paul Williams.

Thomas Young, a sub in the Baylor secondary, which ranks fifth in the nation in pass defense, pilfered a Ziebart toss at the Baylor 16 for the Bears' fifth interception of the game.

Baylor got an added boost from the great punting of Luke Prestridge who kicked three over 50 yards. It was a Prestridge punt that carried 51 yards on the bounce to the Air Force two-yard-line that set up Baylor's first touchdown.

SEABORN SLIPPED two tackles and sprinted 22 yards to the Air Force four. He scored two plays later from the three.

Seaborn later had a non-scoring 50-yard dash.

Penalties held up both teams offensively and were particularly critical to Air Force which was unable to overcome them.

One 15-yard penalty rubbed out a 30-yard pass completion to the Baylor 11 and another, for pass interference when it appeared the Baylor receiver had merely slipped down, gave Baylor a first down at the Air Force 21.

Baylor then raised the score to 31-7 on Smith's pass to the 252-pound Lee who lines up at tight end.

The artificial turf, slippery after a hard morning rain, also bothered Air Force. Its runners slipped down on several plays and once Shelby Ball had an apparent touchdown on a screen pass but he slipped at the Baylor 11 for a three-yard loss.

Irish roll

to green shirts for the first time in 19 years. And the wearing of the green was simply too much for Southern Cal, whose offense couldn't score until Lynn Cain's three-yard run on the first play of the final period.

Even that score was a tainted one, coming three plays after another fumble by Mitchell, this time at his own 21. And the first 18 yards of the scoring strike came on a pass interfernce penalty.

Beside the blocked punt which Notre Dame turned into a touchdown, Southern Cal coughed the ball up five times, as did the winners. Also adding to the Trojans' frustration were a missed 26-yard, chip-shot field goal by Frank Jordan and a fumble by Cain at the Notre Dame three which rolled through the end zone for a touchback.

SOUTHERN CAL got a hint of what was in store for it following Montana's tie-breaking quarterback sneak when Burgmeier, a onetime high school quarterback, was unable to hold Dave Huffman's conversion snap. But he picked up the loose ball, rolled out and lofted a left-handed pass to Tom Domin for a 15-7 lead.

Three plays into Southern Cal's next possession, Luther Bradley tied a Notre Dame record with his 15th career interception and the Irish were in business at the Trojans' 38.

Three plays later, Dave Reeve lined up for a 50-field goal, but instead Burgmeier circled right end to the 13. On the next play, MacAfee made a diving catch of a TD pass from Montana with All-American defensive back Dennis Thurman climbing all over him.

Maryland rips Duke, 31-13

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP)—Steve Atkins rushed for 116 yards and scored on three short touchdown runs at the end of drives set in motion by Larry Dick's passing as Maryxland trounced Duke 31-13 in an Atlantic Coast Conference homecoming game Saturday.

The surprisingly easy victory gave the Terps a 3-1 ACC record and left them in contention for a possible fourth consecutive league championship. First-place North Carolina, 2-0, plays at Maryland next Saturday.

Atkins, hampered by a knee injury most of the season, has rushed for 350 yards while leading Maryland through three consecutive triumphs for a 4-3 over-all mark.

The 225-pound junior, tailback scored on runs of one and two yards in the 24-7 first half, and added another two-yard TD in the third period.

Southern Miss in upset win

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — Defensive back Mike Crenshaw sprinted 36 yards with an interception to give Southern Mississippi's Golden Eagles a 14-7 victory over Mississippi State in college football Saturday.

It was Southern Mississippi's third victory of the season over a Southeastern Conference team. Earlier the Eagles beat Auburn and Mississippi.

Southern, which had capitalized on a third quarter break for its first score against State, had muffed two other scoring chances and seemed destined for a tie until Crenshaw speared the pass from reserve quarterback Dwayne Brown of State.

field goals of 35, 44, and 24 yards and Campbell thundered 58 yards for a touchdown running over two tacklers in the process.

Redshirt Junior quarterback Randy McEachern ran one yard for a a touchdown and flipped a 32-yard touchdown pass to Albert Jackson against the aerial-minded Mustangs who are now 3-4 and 2-2 in SWC play.

Texas led 20-7 at halftime and pulled away to a 27-7 lead at the end of the third period.

But the Mustangs refused to quit and Ford connected a second time with Tolbert from 10 yards out for a fourth-period touchdown.

SMU'S TOUCHDOWNS were the first of the year against the Longhorn first team defense which ranked No. 1 in the nation against scoring.

Campbell, the all-time leading Southwest Conference rusher, averaged some 35 yards per jersey as he constantly went to the sidelines to replace his shirt because of the swarming SMU defense.

FORD WAS impressive in defeat as the Mustang quarterback completed 22 of 44 passes for 253 yards.

After SMU jumped to the 7-0 lead, Erxleben kicked a 35-yard field goal and the enraged Longhorns went to work.

James Hunt fumbled the ensuing kickoff and Jim Farmer recovered at the Mustang 17. McEachern sneaked across from a yard out and Texas had scored 10 points in 79 seconds.

Erxleben kicked a 45-yard field goal as time ran out in the half.

McEachern, a third string quarterback until three weeks ago, showed the Mustangs he could pass by faking a handoff to Campbell and winging a perfect 32-yard strike to Jackson to up the lead to 27-7.

SMU MADE it 27-17 in the driving rain before Erxleben kicked a meaningless 24-yard field goal in the fourth quarter.

Texas entered the game as the second high scoring team in the country with an average of 42 points per game. But SMU surprised the Longhorns with its tenacious defense early in the game before the muscular Honrs wore down the Mustangs.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas quarterback Ron Calcagni tossed two touchdown passes to tight end Charles Clay within a 95-second span as the ninth-ranked Razorbacks ripped Houston 34-0 here Saturday night.

Calcagni's scoring passes of 7 and 15 yards came in the second quarter as the Razorbacks impressed representatives from four bowls by building a 21-0 halftime lead.

For the game, Calcagni completed 10 of 15 passes for 105 yards and rushed for 127 yards on 18 carries.

Each of Arkansas' first three touchdowns followed Houston fumbles. The three drives covered a total of 68 yards — 16, 31, and 21 yards.

Defensive tackle Jimmy Walker caused a fumble that Dan Hampton recovered at the Houston 16 to set up the first Arkansas TD, and then recovered one at the Houston 31 that led to the second Razorback touchdown.

The Arkansas defense did not allow Houston past midfield until quarterback Delrick Brown scrambled 31 yards to the Arkansas 39 with six seconds left in the half.

Arkansas improved its season record to 5-1 and its Southwest Conference mark to 2-1 as representatives from the Sun, Liberty, Peach and newly created Hall of Fame bowls watched. Houston, the defending Southwest Conference co-champions last year, dropped to 3-3 for the season and 1-2 in the league.

Houston, with Brown and Darrell Shepard sharing time at quarterback, had little success against the Arkansas defense, which ranked No. 6 nationally in points allowed with an average of 7.6 per game.

In fact, the Cougars die not complete a pass until Brown tossed 6 yards to Don Bass late in the third period. The appearance of Shepard was significant because it was the first barsity appearance of the highly regarded freshman. it was alleged violations in the recruiting of Shepard that landed Houston on NCAA probation a couple of weeks ago.

Houston lost five of eight fumbles and had one pass intercepted. Arkansas lost four of eight fumbles, and also had a pass intercepted.

Ben Cowins ended Arkansas' first touchdown drive on a 4-yard burst off tackle four plays after Hampton's fumble recovery, and also scored the Razorback's fourth TD on a 3-yard run early in the final period.

Calcagni's first scoring toss to Clay came on third and five on the Houston 7. Calcagni rolled right and then lobbed to Clay who had run a crossing pattern from the right side and was all alone in the end zone. Two plays after the kickoff Brad Shoup recovered a Houston fumble at the Cougar 21. On third down Calcagni rolled right and threw down the middle to Clay for the touchdown.

Washington dams Beavers

SEATTLE (AP) — Quarterback Warren Moon hit Spider Gaines with a 38-yard scoring pass with 6:40 left in the game and Cliff Bethea's interception killed a last-ditch Oregon State drive as Washington defeated the Beavers 14-6 Saturday to remain unbeaten in Pacific-8 Conference play.

Moon's pass to Gaines in the corner of the end zone on third down and 11 capped a 66-yard, 10-play drive that gave the Huskies some breathing room. But the Beavers, who dropped to 2-5 over-all and 0-3 in conference games, battled back in the final five minutes.

Oregon State moved from its own 26 to a first down at the Washington 27 with 4:45 left. But on fourth down and 12 from the 29, quarterback John Norman's desperation pass was intercepted by Bethea, who returned it five yards to the Washington 36.

Texas A&I nabs 30-14 victory

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — Junior quarterback Elvis Hartsfield, starting his first game for Texas A&I in place of regular Martin Stroman, ran for two touchdowns and passed for a third Saturday to lead the unbeaten Javalinas to a 30-14 Lone Star Conference victory over Sam Houston State.

Hartsfield ran for one and 18 yards and tossed an eight-yarder to tight end Clem Franks.

Larry Collins scored for A&I on a 62-yard run and fullback Hughie Shaw added a score on a 59-yard romp as A&I rolled 464 yards in total offense to make its record 5-0-1 for the season and 2-0-1 in league play.

It was the 46th game without a loss for the defending NAIA Division I national champions.

Sam Houston led 3-0 in the first period and 10-7 in the second before the Javalinas went to work with four straight touchdowns.

TCU wins

The Hurricanes converted an interception and a block punt in the first quarter into field goals of 30 and 34 yards.

The first half was played in a steady rain that contributed to a total of eight fumbles and two intercepted passes. Miami could managed only 68 total yards on the slick turf, while TCU could only compile 105.

TCU's stingy defense protected the Horned Frogs' lead by stopping two Hurricane scoring threats in the third quarter. Perry Colston thwarted one drive with a leaping interception at the TCU one. And Barnes blunted another with a fumble recovery at the TCU four.

Anderson, Miami's offensive catalyst for the last two seasons, galloped for 86 yards on 20 carries and snared three passes for 89 yards.

Renfro, who set the Southwest Conference career receiving yardage record in his last game, grabbed three passes for 56 yards. He now is 19 shy of Jerry Levias' SWC career reception mark of 155.

Nebraska breezes past Colorado in 33-15 romp

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Running back I.M. Hipp scored key touchdowns in the second and fourth quarters Saturday to lead 20th-ranked Nebraska to a 33-15 Big Eight Conference football victory over seventh-ranked Colorado.

Nebraska turned key Buff turnovers into scores to earn a 16-15 game-from-behind halftime lead.

Billy Todd's 42-yard field goal gave Nebraska a 1-0 lead but Stewart Ballage returned the ensuing kickoff 98 yards and Colorado led 7-3.

The Buffs led 15-1 after fullback James Mayberry tallied from the one in the second quarter. The drive began when the Buffs recovered a Blatner fumble on Nebraska's 20.

Todd's 46-yard field goal was the only third-quarter score.

Colorado had rolled up five touchdowns before settling for a 17-17 tie with Kansas last week.

The victory, which marked the Huskers' rebound from a 24-21 loss to Iowa State last week, gave Nebraska a 3-2 mark and a 3-1 conference record.

Aggies struggle past Rice Owls

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas A&M finally cracked a surprisingly stiff Rice defense in the second half with touchdowns by George Woodard and Russell Wikeska Saturday to beat the Owls 28-04 and remained tied with No. 3-ranked Texas for the Southwest Conference lead.

The 12th-ranked Aggies and the Longhorns, who earlier beat SWC 30-16, share the SWC lead with 3-0 records.

The heavily favored Aggies raked the Owls' flanks in the first quarter when they rushed 186 yards and took an 10-0 lead on a four-yard run by David Brothers and a 34-yard field goal by Tony Franklin, his longest kick of the year.

Franklin added a 36-yard field goal for a 13-0 lead early in the second quarter but that's when the Rice defense stiffened, holding A&M to 29 yards rushing in the second quarter.

The Aggies, now 3-1 for the season, pulled away to a 28-7 lead in the third quarter on Woodard's three-yard run and a 25-yard pass from David Walker to Mikeska.

Rice, now 1-4 for the year and 0-4 in SWC action, countered with a three-yard pass from Randy Hertel to David Houser in the third quarter.

Two pass interference calls against the Aggies, both by A&M cornerback Jimmy Hamilton, almost allowed the struggling Owls to get back into the game.

Hamilton's first penalty was a 32-yard call that gave Rice a first down at the Aggie three. Hertel hit Houser on fourth down for the score to complete the drive.

An 11-yard pass interference call against Hamilton gave Rice a first down at A&M's one to set up a one-yard dive by Calvin Fance with 14:14 left in the game.

The Aggies opened the game in predictable fashion driving 67 yards on five plays keyed by runs of 35 yards by Brothers and 34 yards by Curtis Dickey.

On the touchdown play, Woodard was gang tackled at the line of scrimmage while Brothers took a pitchout and trouted untouched into the end zone.

The Aggies moved ahead 21-0 early in the third quarter on Woodard's three-yard run set up when A&M's Kevin Munk intercepted a Hertel pass at the Rice 20. Walker passed to Mikeska for the two-point conversion.

Each time missed scoring chances late in the game. A&M's Walker fumbled at the Rice 11-yard line with 10:13 to play. Rice then drove to the Aggie 12-yard line, aided by a 67-yard by Rice's Earl Cooper. But Rice lost the ball on downs.

Cooper's long run made him the game's leading rusher with 128 yards on 17 carries. Dickey finished with 106 yards on 15 carries to move into eighthplace among all-time Aggie rushers.

U-K blasts Bulldogs

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Derrick Ramsey fired three touchdown passes, Joe Bryant boomed two 51-yard field goals and Art Still led a vicious defense that carried 8th-ranked Kentucky to a 33-0 Southeastern Conference football victory over Georgia Saturday.

It marked the first time in 58 games that Georgia had been blanked, dating back to a 14-0 Tennessee victory in 1972. It also was only the third time Georgia was shut out in its 14 seasons under Coach Vince Dooley.

Ramsey hurled touchdown passes of one yard to Freddie Williams, 17 yards to Dave Trosper and 12 yards to Felix Wilson.

Still, who was in on five tackles for losses, spearheaded an awesome Wildcat defense that held Georgia to only 64 yards through three periods

Pugh, Wright keep bonuses

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboy linemen Jethro Pugh and Rayfield Wright may keep the $75,000 bonuses they received in 1974 from the now-defunct World Football League, a Dallas federal judge has ruled.

U.S. District Court Judge Robert M. Hill ruled Friday that the bonuses paid to Pugh and Wright to jump from the National Football League Cowboys to the WFL's Birmingham Americans were paid simply in return for signing a contract, not for actually playing.

Pugh and Wright agreed in 1974 to leave the Cowboys at the end of the 1976 season and signed lucrative three-year contracts with the Americans for the 1977, 1978 and 1979 seasons.

Under the terms of the contracts, Pugh, a defensive tackle, and Wright, a star offensive tackle, were paid $75,000 each for signing the pacts and were to receive another $25,000 upon reporting.

When the WFL folding in 1975, Alabama Football Inc., which owned the Birmingham team, sought to recover the bonuses, claiming both players had failed to meet the terms of their contracts, resulting in "unjust enrichment."

"The bonus was not paid merely in anticipation of Pugh'sWright's future services as a football player, but in exchange for a fully performed act, Pugh'sWright's signing of the contract," Hill wrote in two identical decisions.

Florida State downs Auburn

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Larry Key scored two touchdowns and rushed for a school record 170 yards as Florida State defeated Auburn 24-3 Saturday night.

Key, a senior from Inverness, Fla., scored second-half touchdowns on runs of 15 and 25 yards. He broke Florida State's single-game record of 161 yards set by Buddy Strauss in 1949, on the 25-year sweep in the final period.

Florida tops Vols, 27-17

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Florida scored 10 points in the final 1:32 on Berj Yepremian's 28-yard field goal and Tony Green's six-yard touchdown run to pull out a 27-17 Southeastern Conference victory over Tennessee Saturday.

The 19th-ranked Gators, 3-1-1, appeared to have the game in hand with a 17-3 halftime lead built on scoring runs of one yard by Wes Chandler and 10 yards by David Johnson, plus a 48-yard Yepremian field goal.

But in the second half Tennessee, 2-5, fought back with an 18-yard scoring pass from sophomore quarterback Jimmy Streater to Reggie Harper.

Brigham Young escapes with lifes

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — High flying Brigham Young barely escaped with a 10-7 victory over Western Athletic Conference rival Wyoming Saturday, using a shaky, but successful passing attack engineered by sophomore quarterback Marc Wilson to survive a final-quarter charge by the aroused Cowboys.

Wyoming was trailing in the fourth quarter when a disputed holding penalty gave BYU possession on the Cowboy 38.

Princeton pulls upset

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Senior tailback Bobby Isom carried a school record 44 times for 209 yards and a touchdown Saturday and Princeton's underdog defense shut out Harvard for three periods as the Tigers upset the Ivy League leader 20-7.

Isom capped his afternoon with a seven-yard touchdown run in the fourth period after surpassing Princeton's onegame record of 37 carries. Harvard, now 3-1 in the Ivy League, was stymied until the fourth period when quarterback Larry Brown hit tight end Paul Sablock with a 20-yard touchdown pass.

Colgate brushes Lions

NEW YORK (AP) — Halfback Henry White rushed for 204 yards and three touchdowns in only 11 carries and Colgate piled up 667 yards total offense, a school record, as the unbeaten Red Raiders outlasted Columbia 48-36 Saturday for their seventh victory of the season.

Virginia takes win

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Punter Russ Henderson added placekicking to his list of specialties Saturday, booting a school-record four field goals that lifted Virginia's Cavaliers to a 12-10 Atlantic Coast Conference football victory over Wake Forest's Deacons.

Henderson, who had never previously attempted a field goal, rallied the Cavaliers to their first victory of the season and first in their last nine starts, with a 34-yard shot with five seconds left in the game.

Earlier, the junior from Amherst, Va., had connected from 31, 19 and 27 yards to give Virginia, now 1-3 in the ACC and 15-1 overall, a 9-0 lead with 10:50 left.

Dartmouth wins, 17-13

HANOVER, N.H. (AP) — Quarterback Steve Ferraris ran for one touchdown and Buddy Teevens threw for another to lead Dartmouth College to a 17-13 Ivy League football win over Cornell Saturday.

Neither team was able to mount a sustained attack on the slippery field and all of the touchdowns were set up by long pass plays.

Dartmouth scored first, on a four-yard field goal by Nick Lowery. The kick came three plays after Dartmouth recovered a fumbled punt on the Cornell 7-yard line.

Dartmouth is now 4-1 on the season, Cornell is 0-5.

Wichita St. takes win

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Jim Andrus passed for 301 yards and three touchdowns to lead Wichita State to an easy 47-17 victory over Drake in a Missouri Valley Conference football game Saturday.

Andrus' favorite Shocker targets were split end Bryan Hanning, who caught four passes for 122 yards and a touchdown, and reserve fullback Steve Hall, who snared two scoring passes.

McMurry posts win

ALPINE (AP) — Jack Welch scored from four yards out following a blocked punt as McMurry defeated Sul Ross 2-17 Saturday in a Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Assocation game.

Welch's score came after Jimmy Ramos blocked a punt by Randy Moldenhauer in the third quarter following a scoreless first half.

Colorado State nips UNM

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — Senior linebacker Mark Nichols returned an interception 48 yards for a touchdown as Colorado State overcame costly turnovers and penalties to defeat New Mexico 14-9 Saturday in Western Athletic Conference football.

Nichols, who led CSU with 14 tackles, picked off a Noel Mazzone pass midway through the third quarter and, behind a wall of blockers, ran down the sideline for the score that put the Rams ahead 14-3.

New Mexico bounced back to score just two minutes later. Hard running by fullback Mike Williams set up a 24-yard TD pass from reserve quarterback C.J. Jones to tight end Walt Arnold, but the Lobos failed on a two-point conversion attempt and trailed 14-9 — the final margin.

CSU, which boosted its conference record to 3-1 and overall mark to 6-1, dominated the first half by generating 228 total yards to the Lobos' 66. But the Rams fumbled the ball away four times during the half, including three times in New Mexico territory at 47, 32 and 1-yard lines.

Late in the first quarter, however, Ram quarterback Dan Graham hit wide receiver Mark R. Bell wide open at the 30, and Bell outraced the Lobo secondary for a 50-yard scoring play.

New Mexico, 0-3 in WAC play and 2-5 overall, was held without a first down in the opening period but took advantage of a Ram turnover to mount its first offensive drive early in the second quarter.

Pitt eases past Syracuse

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Quarterback Matt Cavannaugh's one-yard touchdown run with 1:04 to play, set up by a last-ditch 45-yard pass from Cavanaugh to Gordon Jones, rallied the 14th-ranked University of Pittsburgh to a 28-21 football victory over Syracuse Saturday.

However, Pitt halfback Fred "Fast Freddie" Jacobs took a short pass from Cavanaugh and turned it into a 58-yard touchdown play with 9:52 left, and Mark Schubert's extra point kick tied the score 21-21.

Each side had a 50-yard-plus field goal try blocked in the ensuing minutes.

Cardinals fly by Washington State

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Guy Benjamin of Stanford outdueled Washington State's Jack Thompson in their passing battle Saturday, connecting for 330 yards and three touchdowns to lead the Cardinals to a 31-29 Pacific-8 victory.

Cincinnati blanks Tulsa by 28-0 count

CINCINNATI (AP) — Sophomore fullback Gus Tucker ran for three first half touchdowns and the University of Cincinnati shutout Tulsa 28-0 in a non-conference college football game Saturday night.

Tucker ran for 141 yards on 18 carries and caught to passes from freshman quarterback Tony Kapetanis for 18 yards.

Tulsa was overwhelmed by Cincinnati's defense in the first half and three fumbles led to touchdowns.

North Carolina in 17-0 victory

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina quarterback Matt Kupec threw a 19-yard pass to Delbert Powell for a touchdown Saturday and freshman Amos Lawrence scampered for another as the Tar Heels shut out South Carolina, 17-0.

North Carolina turned two Gamecock fumbles into scores, including a 43-yard field goal by Tom Biddle, in what was duel of defenses and punters.

The Tar Heels got their first touchdown when after South Carolina freshman running back George Rogers fumbled at his own 42 early in the third quarter.

Spiders give defeat to Virginia Tech

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Demitri Cornegay's one-yard touchdow dive in the fourth period, Richmond's first second-half score this season, proved to be the margin of victory Saturday as the Spiders defeated Virginia Tech, 17-14, in college football.

Bama thunders past Louisville

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Quarterback Jeff Rutledge hit Ozzie Newsome on two scoring passes Saturday, one for 67 yards, as third-ranked Alabama toyed with Louisville 55-6 for the Crimson Tide's 40th consecutive football victory on its home field.

The long strike came on the fourth play of the game, with the swift Newsome well behind all defenders when the ball got to him. Rutledge hit Newsome on a 32-yard pass in the third period.

Meanwhile, halfback Tony Nathan set up Alabama's second touchdown with a 51-yard punt return and scored the third one on a 71-yard run off right tackle.

Kevin Jones passed to Keith Pugh for a 32-yard touchdown, and Alabama added four other touchdowns against the outmanned Cardinals.

Alabama was leading 41-0 before Louisville got its touchdown on the running of Calvin Prince and the passing of Randy Butler, who scored from the one.

Louisville's deepest penetration in the first half was to the Tide's 49, but a fumble on the next play put the Cardinals back into their own territory.

Alabama, now 6-1, plays Mississippi State in Jackson, Miss., next week, while Louisville, 3-31, plays at Marshall.

Baylor running game ruins Air Force team

WACO, Tex. (AP) — Most teams are happy to have one or two good runnings backs — freshman Baylor quarterback Scott Smith says he has five great ones.

Gary Blair missed Baylor's 38-7 trouncing of Air Force with an injury Saturday, but four other running backs and Smith totaled 325 yards rushing behind Baylor's mammoth offensive line.

David Seaborn was the leader, carrying 15 times for 145 yards and two touchdowns. Greg Hawthorne had 81 yards, Steve Howell 33 and Frank Pollard 28.

Smith ran for 38 yards and completed 12 of 20 passes for 141 yards and two touchdowns.

"We knew that we could move the ball all day. It just took us a while to get going. The line did an excellent job blocking and I think we have five great running backs," Smith said.

Baylor's 6-6, 252-pound tackle John Kramer said of Air Force: "They were definitely a small team. They weren't anything like Texas A&M or Nebraska."

Air Force Coach Ben Martin said: "Baylor compares favorably with California, one of the best teams in the PAC 8."

Baylor Coach Grant Teaff said: "We came out of a very hard played game without any serious injuries. We are grateful. I was impressed with the character of Air Force. There was no question they were outmanned, but they kept putting the pressure on. They didn't quit."

Mississippi downs Vandy

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — Leon Perry barged nine yards for one touchdown and James Storey dived two yards for another in a fourth-quarter explosion that lifted the Mississippi Rebels to a 26-14 victory over Vanderbilt Saturday in a Southeastern Conference football game.

The last-period uprising nullified back-to-back Vanderbuilt thunderbolts in the first quarter — sophomore Preston Brown's 100-yard kickoff return and a 74-yard pass-run play between quarterback Mike Wright and split end Martin Cox.

Yale's Pagliaro records record

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Running back John Pagliaro set a Yale career record with two touchdowns Saturday and defenders George Rapp and Dave Humphreville gave the Elis sorely needed second chances as Yale managed a 27-21 come from-behind Ivy League football victory over Pennsylvania.

The victory moved Yale into a first place Ivy tie with previously undefeated Harvard which lost 20-7 to Princeton.

Pagliaro, a senior from Derby, scampered 18 yards down the right side at 6:10 of the fourth period for his second score of the day, giving him 29 touchdowns in his career, one more than Dick Jauron collected early this decade.

Oklahoma St. blanks Kansas behind Miller

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Terry Miller, Oklahoma State halfback, became the all-time rushing champion of the Big Eight and scored a touchdown on a 34-yard romp as the Cowboys blanked Kansas 21-0 on a wet, slippery field Saturday.

Miller, a senior All-American from Colorado Springs, Colo., skirted right end in 10:12 of the fourth period for six yards, pushing his four-year total to 4,075, eclipsing the record of 4,071 set by Joe Washington of Oklahoma in 1972-75. Miller, who also became the first Big Eight back to record three straight 1,000-yard seasons on the same play, finished with 149 yards for the day and a career total of 4,110 yards with four games remaining.

The wet turf and prodigious punting by Oklahoma State's David Hanna and Mike Hubach of Kansas kept both teams at bay throughout most of the day. The game began under a heavy downpour but skies cleared midway through the first period leaving the artificial turf wet and treacherous.

Arizona State golf winners

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — Arizona State University, led by sophomore Mark Mattingly, captured the 13th annual New Mexico State University Intercollegiate Golf Tournament Saturday.

Mattingly won the individual competition with a four-underpar 68 over the final 18 holes of the 54-hold event for a threeday total of 212. Mattingly is a product of San Angelo, Tex.

Host New Mexico State finished a distant 2nd to the Sun Devils. The Aggies finished with an 886 team score compared to ASU's pace setting 869.

The University of New Mexcio finished third, with a 900. Last year's champion New Mexico Junior College, was fourth with 907 in the 12-team field that played on the 7,100yard NMSU course.

NMSU's Doug Good and ASU's Alex Petric tied for second place in the medalist play as both shot a 217, which was one-over-par. Scott Watkins, also of ASU, was next at 219.

ASU and NMSU were tied for the lead after Thursday's first round but the Sun Devil golfers opened up a five-stroke advantage on Friday and continued to improve as the top four ASU scorers were 68, 72, 73 and 74 over Saturday's last 18 holes.

The Lobos top finisher was Las Cruces product John Fields, who shot a 71 Saturday for a 54-hole total of 221, which was good for a tie for sixth place with NMSU's Ron Vlosich and ASU's Tom Gray.

Here's the way the rest of the field finished: Odessa College 917, West Texas State, 926, U.S. International University 927, University of Wyoming 928, Eastern New Mexico 932, NMI B Team 934 Midland College 943 and New Mexico Military Institute 986.

Andretti nearing title in Japan

GOTEMBA, Japan (AP) — Mario Andretti took a step toward winning his second Japanese Grand Prix today, capturing the pole position after two days of trial runs.

The Nazareth, Pa., racer who has won four Grand Prix events this year, set a record time of 1 minute, 12.23 seconds in a John Player special Lotus 76 Friday. The time was the fastest over the 2½-mile Fuji International Speedway circuit.

Britain's 1976 world driving champion, James Hunt, who will finish second to Austria's Niki Lauda in Grand Prix overall competition, finished second at 1:12.39.

"I have a good feeling about placing in the pole position for the seventh time this season," Andretti said, "but engine trouble prevented me from accumulating enough points for the top ranking."

TED BATTLES
BATTLE SCENE

Back in the days of SMU's Matty Bell and TCU's Dutch Meyer, the Southwest Conference was famed nationwide for its "Aerial Circus".

While coach at Boston College, Frank Leahy was a frequent summer visitor in Texas, attending clinics to study the aerial antics of the pass-happy Texans.

So now the SWC is becoming fabled for its fancy footwork. Did you realize that in the past two years, the SWC has accounted for the five longest field goals on the NCAA books.

Going into Saturday's game, Russell Erxleben of Texas, and Steve Little of Arkansas had each toed record 67-yerders this season and Erxleben had a 64-yarder. Last year, Texas A&M's Tony Franklin booted 65 and 64 yarders.

IN ALL, there have been 15 field goals carrying 60 yards or more in NCAA history and nine of them have been by SWC kickers.

Franklin has an NCAA record of 11 of 50 yards or more while Erxleben has nine of more than 50 yards and 23 of more than 40 yards.

How long will the current record of 67 last? Both Erxleben and Little agree it may be a long time.

"It might be tops for ever unless Tony Franklin decides to go for a record," says Little.

"Tony Franklin is about the only one around with the leg to do it, and he's got a year and a half to shoot for it," says Erxleben.

Everybody is making a big thing over whether Preston Pearson or Tony Dorsett starts at running back for the Dallas Cowboys, but the rookie from Pittsburgh is making hay even on short playing rations. He's fourth in the NFC with 337 yards and tops with a 6.2 average per carry. That compares with O.J. Simpson who has gained 426 yards and has a 4.3 average for Buffalo while ranking fourth in the AFC. What's more Tony has done his damage in 54 carries while Simpson has carried 98 times.

Pearson isn't exactly a slouch with 231 yards and a 4.1 average per carry. And he's also averaging 10.4 yards on 17 receptions.

"Considering that we haven't tackled Earl Campbell in two years and that Texas' first-team defense hadn't given up a touchdown going into the SMU game, I'd say we're going to have our hands full," predicts Tech Coach Steve Sloan of this Saturday's climactic showdown with the Steers at Ausin.

"I think so much of Campbell," says Sloan, "That I went out and got me a truck just like him—with four-wheel drive."

Quarterback Rodney Allison was expected to be back on the practice field Monday, but the question remains how close to maximum efficiency will the Odessa senior be against the Longhorns.

Cliff Harris, Dallas defensive back, has a big chore today in trying to cover Eagles receiver Harold Carmichale, who stands 6-8 to his 6-1, but he thinks he has the solution. "Hit him as hard as you can because he'll fall a long way."

Nottingham wins

LONDON (AP) — Nottingham Forest increased its lead in the English Soccer League's first division Saturday with a 2-0 triumph over the Queens Park Rangers.

Defending champion Liverpool played a scoreless tie with Everton. Nottingham ranks first with 20 points, followed by Liverpool with 18. West Bromich Albion, a 4-0 winner over Manchester United, is third with 17 points.

PWD to issue permits for anterless season

Anterless deer permits are to be issued to Texas landowners in specific areas during the last week of October and early November.

Permits will be issued as a result of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department censuses of the state's deer herd, and will be on a compartment basis. Midland College builds around returnees

The National Basketball Association season opened last week, so the 1977-78 Midland College basketball season can't be too far behind. As a matter of fact, the Chaparrals will open their third season of play Nov. 7 against the Wayland JV at the MC gym.

The Chaparrals posted a 23-9 record last season, finishing 12-6 good for second place in the Western Junior College Conference race.

MC bowed to Western Texas College, the WJCC champions, in the finals of the Region V Tournament.

STONE, 35, succeeds Delnor Poss as basketball coach. Poss, who took over in mid-season last year, remains as athletic director and is coaching the men's golf team.

A native of Arkansas City, Kansas, Stone played at McMurry College and was head basketball coach at Mexia, Amarillo Caprock and Richardson high schools before becoming head coach at Tarleton State University for three years.

As head coach at Richardson from 1968-73, Stone compiled an overall record of 130-43 and had a district mark of 66-4. In 1969-1971-1973 he earned Coach-of-the-Year honors.

GONE ARE Tommy Parks, Jeff Jackson, Jackson Pace and Sim Nickerson from last year's club, but returning to form the nucleus of this year's Chaps will be 6-4 Ron Jones, 6-2 Alvin Mayes, 6-7 Clifford Taylor and 6-6 Ricky Hudgins, all of whom made valuable contributions to last year's success.

The Chaps roster will be bolstered by the addition of 6-5 Eddie Davis, Fort Worth Wyatt; 6-1 Kelly Newsom, Richardson; 5-9 Cullen Mayfield, Dallas South Oak Cliff; 6-6 Mike Denny, Midland Lee; 6-7 Luis Alvarado, El Paso High; 6-5 Michael Battle, Dallas Roosevelt; and 6-3 Ricky Murdock, Lubbock Coronsdo.

The Chaps will play 25 games, plus two tournaments. The 18-game WJCC schedule opens Nov. 28 against Frank Phillips College at the MC gym.

The Chaps have two more preseason scrimmages on tap, meeting Sul Ross University at MC Oct. 29 and then traveling to Abilene for scrimmages with Midwestern and McMurry Nov. 4.

Unbeaten, underdog Colts in 'must' game

By The Associated Press

"Must-win" games don't usually come along this early in the season, and when they do, it's usually the coach of the underdog team labeling the game that way.

Not surprisingly, that's what the coach of the underdog is saying this time — but quite surprisingly, its Ted Marchibroda's undefeated Baltimore Colts who have been listed as the underdog for today's game against the New England Patriots.

"It is a big game for us. It's a must game ... a crucial game," Marchibroda proclaims. His Colts sit atop the National Football League's American Conference East while the Patriots, staggering along most of this year season, are 3-2, trailing not only Baltimore but the surprising Miami Dolphins, too.

DESPITE the disparity in records, the Patriots are rated favorites by about a field goal, probably because the Colts have failed to really steamroller anybody this season (in their last game they beat winless Kansas City 17-6) while the Patriots have begun to put themselves together, upsetting San Diego 24-20 last weekend.

New England Coach Chuck Fairbanks isn't concerned only about the Colts. He's got some long-distance worries. The Patriots play five straight games against division opponents.

The biggest matchup will be between the AFC's top pair of runners. Lydell Mitchell of the Colts has amassed 511 yards, just 29 ahead of the Pats' Sam "Bam" Cunningham.

Marchibroda is "very happy with the way the team has played so far. The teams we played have improved tremendously defensively from last year."

LAST YEAR the Colts and Patriots battled neck and neck all season, split their two games (Baltimore winning 27-13, New England rebounding 21-14) and wound up tied for first place with 11-3 records. The division title went to Baltimore by virtue of its better record against AFC foes — and both teams went out of the playoffs in the first round, the Colts clobbered by Pittsburgh 40-14 and the Pats edged by Oakland 24-21. The two teams were expected to slug it out for first place again this season but so far it's been no contest.

The Colts have a sort of passing interest (no pun intended) in the Seattle-Miami game. It's a sort of Baltimore alumni meeting between two former Colts assistants, now head coaches, Jack Patera of the Seahawks and Don Shula of the Dolphins.

THE SEAHAWKS are coming off their second straight Expansion Bowl victory. They beat Tampa Bay 30-23 on Steve Myer's team-record four touchdown passes, two to Steve Largent and one apiece to Sherman Smith and Duke Fergerson. Smith also rushed for 94 yards. Miami, which has had problems holding onto early leads all season (the Dolphins led Baltimore 28-10 but lost 45-28 a few weeks back), scored three first-half touchdowns against the Jets, then struggled to a 21-17 victory.

Like the Colts, the Cowboys are unbeaten in five games, the only club with a perfect record in the National Conference. Dallas has the No.1 offense in the league ... and the No.1 defense, too.

Penn State rips West Virginia

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Tenth-ranked Penn State scored three touchdowns in the first four minutes and 46 seconds with the help of a blocked punt and fumble recovery and went on to blow out West Virginia 49-28 Saturday for its sixth win in seven games.

The Mountaineers, however, turned in the game's most spectacular play, a third period 100-yard return of an intercepted pass by senior defensive halfback Tom Pridemore.

But seven turnovers betrayed West Virginia in a futile effort to beat the Nittany Lions for the first time in 22 years, and sent the Mountaineers down to a third loss against four victories.

Almost before a crowd of 62,108 had settled in their seats, Penn State middle guard Randy Sidler blocked a punt and teammate Matt Millen ran the loose ball three yards into the end zone.

On the next series, West Virginia punted, and on first down, quarterback Chuck Fusina threw the first of two touchdown passes, a 41-yarder to Mickey Shuler.

After the Penn State kickoff, West Virginia's Dave Riley fumbled the ball away on second down at his 17. Matt Suhey ran 10 yards and Steve Geise the final seven to make it 21-0 with 10:14 left in the first quarter.

West Virginia managed a 61-yard drive for a second quarter touchdown on a one-yard smash by Walt Easley, but it was just a spit in the wind as Penn State btosted its lead to 42-7 at halftime.

State scored three times in the second quarter, on a 12-yard touchdown pass from Fusina to Scott Fitzkee, Geise's one-yard run, and on a 57-yard punt return by Jimmy Cefalo.

And after Pridemore had shaken oft at least seven tacklers in his 100-yard touchdown run to make it 42-14, Fusina sneaked one yard for another Penn State score. Riley's oneyard run provided the Mountaineers' third TD.

ACU topples East Texas St.

COMMERCE, Tex. (AP) — Kelly Kent bulled for two touchdowns while Alex Davis ran for a score and caught a 66-yard scoring strike to lead Abilene Christian to a 28-13 Lone Star Conference victory over East Texas Saturday.

Davis also picked up 76 yards on the ground as the Wildcats upped their season record to 51-1 as East Texas dropped to 5-2. ACU is 1-1-1 in LSC play while East Texas is 2-1.

David Hanson started his first game at quarterback for Abilene Christian and completed 13 of 19 passes for 195 yards, including the touchdown to Davis.

The Lions' Brian Jackson broke away to score in the third quarter on a 91-yard kickoff return. East Texas other scoring came on field goals of 22 and 28 yards by Tom Hay.

Abilene Christian, which led 14-3 at halftime, held East Texas to minus three yards on 28 rushing attempts.

Fred Akers disappointed in play of Longhorns

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Coach Fred Akers was disappointed at times in the play of his No. 2 ranked Longhorns, but considering the upset lightning that struck No. 1 ranked Michigan, he felt like a fortunate man.

"It took us a quarter to figure out who we were playing," said Akers after Texas' hardearned 30-14 Southwest Conference victory Saturday over Southern Methodist.

"SMU played hard and they laid it on the line," said Akers. "I was very disappointed in some of our sloppy play, but then I happened to look at the scoreboard to check the time when they flashed the Michigan score. I was happy to see it ...those things happen ...and about that time we got into gear."

Texas defensive back Johnnie Johnson, assuming the Longhorns would move up a notch in the rankings, said: "Now that we are No. 1, we are going to have to work to stay there. We didn't know about the Michigan game until the second half.

Michigan lost 16-0 to Minnesota in a Big Ten struggle.

Akers praised Campbell saying, "They were stacked in to stop him ... The yards weren't free ... He had to earn them, but that is part of what makes him the great player he is."

Campbell said, "one thing about being number one, you've got to fight to stay there. SMU came out to play us and they did."

SMU coach Ron Meyer said, "I don't think anyone is ever going to stop Earl Campbell. Not with the offensive line and offensive package they have. They've got the best kicking game and the best defensive team in the nation too. Campbell is just the best running back in the nation. My hat is off to him."

SMU linebacker Putt Schoate said of Campbell: "You just have to have a lot of people around him and you have to tackle him. That's the problem. We had people there, but we just didn't tackle him. An arm tackle won't do on Campbell. We hit him harder than anybody has hit him, ebcept for maybe Oklahoma. He knows he played us."

Texas quarterback Randy McEachern, who came off the bench to defeat Oklahoma in the Cotton Bowl three weeks ago, said, "I like playing here. So far there are some happy memories."

McEachern ran for one touchdown and passed for another.

Texas' first team defensive unit surrendered its first two touchdowns of the year on passes by freshman quarterback Mike Ford.

Akers said of Ford: "He showed tremendous poise and maturity for a young football player. He is going to be a good one."

Ohio State in easy win

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Ohio State's fourth-ranked Buckeyes needed big plays from Ron Springs, Rod Gerald and Jeff Logan to overcome six turnovers Saturday and defeat winless Northwestern 35-15 to take sole possession of first place in the Big Ten.

While the Buckeyes were fumbling their way past Northwestern, Minnesota upset topranked Michigan 16-0 to drop the number one Wolverines out of a first-place tie in the Big Ten.

Springs ripped off a 72-yard run from scrimmage to set up Ohio State's first touchdown after Northwestern had taken a surprising 3-0 lead. Gerald went 24 yards for a touchdown on a keeper and Logan's 63-yard run from scrimmage set up Ohio State's final touchdown in the fourth quarter.

Ohio State is now 4-0 in the Big Ten and y-1 for the season while Northwestern suffered its eighth straight loss, seventh this season and 23rd in the last 24 games.

Northwestern turned an Ohio State fumble by Logan on the second play from scrimmage into a 44-yard field goal by Sam Poulos for its 3-0 lead.

Ohio State struck for two quick touchdowns late in the period for a 14-3 lead. Springs went 72 yards to the Northwestern eight-yard line and Joel Payton needed two rushes to take it over from the four. Tom Cousineau then recovered a Northwestern fumble and the Buckeyes drove 45 yards in eight plays with Logan scoring from the five.

Northwestern scored in the second period on a 33-yard touchdown pass from freshman quarterback Dana Hemphill to Mike Taylor following a fumble recovery, but the Buckeyes got it back when Kelton Dansler recovered a fumble and Payton scored from the one-yard line for his tenth touchdown of the season and a 21-9 halftime lead.

Ohio State controlled play in the second half and boosted its lead to 35-9 before Northwestern scored on a 14-yard run by Harold Gilmore late in the game.

Boston College rolls past Villanova, 17-0

NEWTON, Mass. (AP) — Ken Smith, one of the nation's leading passers, surprised Villanova's stubborn defense with two long bombs in the first half Saturday as Boston College rolled to a 17-0 football victory over the Wildcats.

Smith put the Boston College Eagles in front to stay by directing a 91-yard march with the opening kickoff. His quick pass into the flat to Mike Godbolt ate up 58 yards and set up a 15-yard touchdown run by Joe O'brien, a converted senior quarterback.

Benedictine downs Austin College

ATCHISON, Kan. (AP) — Quarterback Paul Durkin hit wide receiver Pat George with an 84-yard pass play to pace Benedictine College to a 31-13 victory over the Austin College Kangeroos Saturday afternoon on a field made muddy by all-day rains.

Ravens' kicker Cary Shaw connected on a 32-yard field goal in the first period for the game's first score. Austin responded in the second period with a touchdown on a one-yard run by Glen Locklin.

After a slim 9-7 halftime lead, Benedictine outscored Austin 22-6 in the second half.

Allison hurt while riding wild burros

Only Bennny Parsons escaped unscathed.

The good news is all of them will be mended in time to race in today's American 500 Grand National Stock Car race.

But when did this catastrophe take place? Why wasn't page one across the country? Why is no one anxious to talk about it?

The incident in question didn't happen on any race track. And the stars of Grand National racing weren't in their familiar race cars at the time. They were riding wild burros in a special racer Friday night at a rodeo in Winston-Salem, N.C.

They were lucky it was only a rodeo. If it had been in their familiar arenas, they might not ever have lived down their performances.

The idea was to ride from one end of the Winston-Salem Coliseum to the other, pick up a teammate and ride back to the startaing line. The process would then be repeated with another set of teammates. That was it.

Sounded simple enough.

That was until the drivers, who were more thsan a little skeptical about the whole thing anyway discovered the burros really were wild. (No one told them the burros had nearly wiped out the area's disc jockeys the night before.)

He led the field for about 30 feet until one of the devious rodeo clowns waved his red hat in front of the burro to get it bucking. Allison gamely held on for a moment, then went flying off. He landed square on his nose — but came up laughing as a trickle of blood ran down his face.

Waltrip and his teammate had just mounted up when their diminutive beast suddenly wheeled, reared up and fell over on top of both of them. The crowd screamed in horror. So did Waltrip.

Pearson was just aboard when a clown slapped the seat of his burro, sending it off at a gallop. Pearson remained motionless for a moment like a man being hanged, then somersaulted completely and landed perfectly on his derriere (Degree of difficulty 2.9).

Meanwhile, the rest of the coliseum floor was in total chaos. The burros were going berserk, egged on by the clowns. Grand National's finest were in various stages of free flight and the crowd was limp with laughter.

No winner was announced, although Bobby Allison made a gracious victory statwment Saturday. Officials ruled it a tie, or at least a Mexican standoff. Parsons was recognized for beinn4 the only one not to have been thrown off.

Craig Morton

By KENNETH DENLINGER
The Washington Post

Nearly seven years ago, in his book " ... And Every Day You Take Another Bite," Larry Merchant selected an all-funny pro football team. Bert Lahr and Jerry Lewis were the wide receivers; W.C. Fields was the tight end; the tackles were Bob Hope and Godfrey Cambridge; the quarterback was Craig Morton.

That was one man's opinion. For years, with the Dallas Cowboys and New York Giants, Morton was the one quarterback the Washington Redskins — and others — wanted most to play against in an important game, the passer mostlikely to pass away victory.

Now Morton seems to be getting the last laugh. There are only three unbeaten teams in the National Football League at the moment — and Morton's Denver Broncos are one of them. His passing numbers are third best in the American Conference, ahead of such as Terry Bradshaw's, Ken Anderson's and Ken Stabler's.

JUST LAST Sunday, Morton was matched against the allegedly immortal Oakland Raiders and Wonderfully Wicket Wanda's close friend, Stabler, who if not the best quarterback in the NFL is no worse than 1A. Surely, veteran Morton Watchers said, their hero would return to Denver a mile-high bust.

Instead, Morton threw as many completions as Stabler threw interceptions — seven — and the Broncos kicked the Raiders in Oakland by 23 points. What in the name of Al Davis is going on here?

"I heard all those stories about how poorly he played with the Giants," said Bronco coach Red Miller. "But if you don't surround your quarterback with talent. Of course he's going to look bad. Our offense is improving. It's not the best in the league, but we're getting better.

"Morton has given us the leadership and experience the offense needed. Here's a guy who comes to a new team and in his first year is the overwhelming choice as team captain. Craig has been just super."

MORTON HAD been acquired by the Broncos from the Giants, in exchange for their regular quarterback, Steve Ramsey, in one of those off-season swaps that figured to benefit neither team. And Ramsey managed to disappear rather quickly.

COMMENT

"But Craig in a structured situation should do well," said the Cowboys' Tex Schram, who chose Morton in the first round of the 1965 draft and watched him endure all manner of adversity, including two shoulder operations, before trading him to the Giants 10 years later for a first-round choice who became Randy White.

Until this season, Morton was not one of life's winners. The Redskins always insisted he would botch some especially significant play — and that proved true more often than not.

Once Morton had uncluttered running room for a first down late in a game at RFK Stadium, but instead threw an incompletion on third down and the Redskins rallied for victory behind Sonny Jurgensen.

IN A Monday night game in 1973, Morton relieved Roger Staubach and, with the score tied late in the final quarter, threw a pass that Brig Owens intercepted and returned 26 years for the winning touchdown for the Redskins.

"Oh, no, Craig," Don Meredith was heard to mutter from the television booth just as the play was developing, "Son, I thought I taught you better."

And who can possibly forget Morton last season with the Giants in RFK? With time to execute a believable throwaway, he allowed himself to be tackled for a safety by Ron McDole — and the Redskins eventually won by two points.

Also, Morton threw the interception to Mike Curtis in the final minute of Super Bowl V that enabled the Colts to beat the Cowboys with a field goal with five seconds left in the game, 16-13.

BUT ENOUGH. Morton is having a splendid season so far, or it appears that way on first glance at least — and several reasons are named Lyle Alzado, Joe Rizzo, Bill Thompson and Otis Armstrong.

In truth, Mortin is more successful by passing less. The Bronco defense has been spectacular, the runners more than adequate. And Rick Upchurch also provides good field position with his kick returns.

Eagles make ready for biggest test

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The powerful Dallas Cowboys, the only unbeaten team in the National Football Conference, loom as the season's biggest challenged when they visit the improved Philadelphia Eagles today.

"They're a physical team, a fine team, a mature team," said Eagles Coach Dick Vermeil, realizing his chances of an upset depend on an all-out sacrifice.

"It's going to take a major effort. We're going to have to play like hell," he added.

The 5-0 Cowboys, who hold a commanding two-game lead in the Central Division, are one victory away from equaling the finest start in their history. And their bruising defense and varied offense make them heavy favorities to match the 6-0 marks of the 1967-1968 teams.

BUT DALLAS Coach Tom Landry hasn't gotten carried away with his team's performance.

"We are not a solid team at this point," Landry insists. "We just do good things at the right time. I am surprised we are unbeaten."

Last week against Washington, defensive end Harvey Martin led a defensive line charge that produced eight quarterback sacks and limited the Redskins to one net yard passing.

Quarterback Roger Staubach completed 15 of 28 passes for 250 yards and a pair of touchdowns. And heralded rookie Tony Dorsett rushed for 51 yards, boosting his season total to 337 yards with a 6.2 yard average.

For the 2-3 Eagles, quarterback Ron Jaworski leads a revamped offense. Jaworski, who had a pair of scoring passes in a 21-17 loss to St. Louis last week, has thrown for eight touchdowns but he also has 10 interceptions.

Wide receiver Harold Carmichael, a 6-foot-8 target, leads the team in receptions with 17 and Mike Hogan is the leading rusher with 243 yards.

"We've got our work cut out for us," said Ermal Allen, Landry's special assistant, in assessing the Eagles.

A crowd of over 62,000 is expected for the 1 p.m., EDT, kickoff. Dallas holds a 21-12 lead in the series, including victories in the last five meetings.

Philadelphia's last triumph was a 13-10 decision in 1974.

Walzer takes Texas Open

HORSESHOE BAY, Texas (AP) — Dallas and Fort Worth golfers dominated this year's Texas State Open golf tournament but Houston's Bobby Walzer walked away with the top money.

Walzer said he entered the tournament to "get some confidence back." Today his confidence was well on the way to recovery along with his bank account, which was $7,000 fatter.

By ROBERT HEARD

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Willie Nelson's popularity, like a concentric ring of water, is cresting on the East and West coasts at the same time it has fallen off slightly where the pebble dropped.

Make no mistake — it's still standing-room-only when Willie performs in Austin. But the incendiary craze of his outlaw or progressive country movement has cooled to an egg-frying July sidewalk.

And there are those for whom it has dropped further than that.

"The people who have lived with it since it started have an attitude that it sounds akin to sharping saws," says Eddie Wilson, former manager of Armadillo World Headquarters, where Willie's music really took off.

Progressive country, sometimes called redneck rock, was born at Armadillo. Other places contributed, but Armadillo was the flagship.

"The jazz guys here in town are the real local outlaws," Wilson says. "The outlaws in this town are the people with enough money for gray flannel suits.

"So that whole noxious kind of outlaw, crudy hype, really bothers the hell out of a lot of musicians in town who are real musicians and have very low opinions of the quality of music that all these people that are making so much money — have a low opinion of the quality of music they are putting out," Wilson says.

Wilson and Nelson had a falling out years ago over what Wilson calls Willie's lack of control over his entourage.

"I love and admire him. It's just that he refuses to be responsible for the people he allows to hang around him," says Wilson. The Nelson hangers-on clashed with Wilson's employes in a show-biz "backstage scene."

Although Willie has avoided the kind of institutionalization that made him an outsider at Nashville, he cannot control what his own popularity has done to create an image that audiences now demand.

"It's the same old thing in reverse," says Wilson, meaning insiders and outsiders, with Willie being the establishment here.

"There's just a lot of people in town who resent being so broke when they're such better musicians. And most of'em like to talk about it because they know it sounds bad, you know, to resent it.

"But there's a core of maybe 50 to 100 people in Austin who are really super fine musicians who are absolutely uninterested in the genre that the national media has hyped here. And they are afraid of the same kind of image freeze-up that's happened in Nashville," says Wilson.

Pat Taggart, music editor of the Austin American-Statesman, agrees progressive country has crested. "I wouldn't say it's dead, really, but it has peaked, and its contributions are going to be here forever. You know, that blend of rock, pop, country."

"The proof of it is in the demise of KOKE-FM's progressive country format," says Taggart. "Just this last year (1976) on July 4th they celebrated their going to 24 hours progressive country, and of course about a year later they've changed to traditional or Nashville country, I guess you'd call it."

Three years ago, a lot of the people who loved Willie first began to camp out on weekends at the isolated hill country hamlet of Luckenbach, listening to his kind of music and drinking longneck beer.

But then word got around, and a lot of other people began to show up, spoiling it for the original fans, and they quit going. It's the old story of commercialization that follows any successful venture.

Yet, Willie's fans, including his best-known booster, Darrell Royal, argue Willie's personal popularity has not leveled off at all.

"I don't see how it could go any higher," says Royal, longtime Texas Longhorn football coach.

Several things set Willie apart. A self-described nonconformist, he withstood enormous pressure to become a rhinestone cowboy on the Nashville stage, with banks of syrupy violins behind him.

He made good money as a songwriter. People think he came to Austin poor in 1972 after a dozen years in Nashville. He brought a six-figure income with him from his writing.

It's just that his success here has been so spectacular. The fusion of country music and rock, later more blues than rock, brought together rednecks and longhairs.

The "Austin Scene" really was about half accident. Willie's Nashville home burned and he visited his sister, Bobbie, who lived in Austin. The lettuce and tomatoes of progressive country were already here. Willie made the salad.

The real magnet of his music is the pained but stoic treatment of serious subjects with nothing of the Hee Haw flavor frequently found in hillbilly music.

There is an almost Oriental acceptance of hard knocks life deals out. There is no self-pity, no blame.

He stands on stage looking older than 44, with a craggy face that somehow remains sad even when he smiles. But that famous smile adds sparkle to his intense eyes.

The nasal voice tells it straight. There are no trills or tricks.

In August, he toured 20 states in 30 days, appearing before huge audiences in many distant cities where his sound just now is reaching its high note.

Elvis Presley died the day of Willie's scheduled appearance in Memphis. Nine thousand turned out anyway. Willie dedicated the first song to Elvis, and it went on from there.

The attempt to categorize his music is similar to the development of language. People change language by the way they speak, and grammarians come along later and dissect it and compartmentalize it.

Willie has said, "I don't like labels. What I do is Willie Nelson music; what Leon does is Leon Russell music; what Waylon does is Waylon Jennings music.

"My definition of music is what my grandmother taught me, and that's whatever is pleasing to the ear. If rolling a peanut across the floor with your nose is pleasing to you, that's good music."

Willie needs no elaborate warmup, as many performers do. He simply walks up to the microphone and starts strumming and singing.

BY DAVID N. ROSENTHAL

"We like to call ours 'Southern Raunchy Roll,'" Ronnie Van Zant once said of his musical group Lynyrd Skynyrd. "The other bands are just as bad, but we go to jail more."

Van Zant and his fightin' Southern band prided themselves on that battling image and a hard-driving blaring sound which they rode to sold out concert tours and million-selling albums.

They had just begun a tour on the heels of a new album when a charted plane they were on went down near McComb, Miss., Thursday night en route to Baton Rouge, La., from Greenville, S.C.

Van Zant, the group's lead vocalist and one of its founders, died along with guitarist Steve Gaines and his sister Cassie in the crash. All three were 28.

Two other members, Gary Rossington — another who helped form the group — and Leon Wilkeson were reported in critical condition after the crash. The other four members of the group were in stable condition.

The band came from Jacksonville, Fla., in the early '70s with Van Zant, Rossington and Allen Collins playing together in high school and adding other members later.

That school, Robert E. Lee, also allegedly produced their strangely spelled group name.

It seems a physical education teacher named Leonard Skinner didn't cotton to long hair and loud music. A run-in with him helped get the boys suspended.

Vowing to get even, they named their group after him, changing the vowels to avoid a lawsuit and becoming famous enough to make the story a rock legend.

Lynyrd Skynyrd first hit national prominence in 1974 with a single called "Sweet Home Alabama," which extolled the virtues of the South in general and Alabama in particular. A huge Confederate flag became one of the band's symbols.

The raucus group went on to have two gold and three platinum albums and numerous run ins with the law on tour.

"We're kind of like an old dog that ain't housebroke," Van Zant said in a 1976 interview. "I don't know...born under a bad sign, I guess."

The band's most recent hometown performance ended in an uproar with 16 persons getting arrested. Police later estimated that 15,000 persons took part in the disturbance at the Jacksonville Coliseum and caused $14,000 in damage.

The band included Van Zant; Gaines, Rossington and Allen Collins, guitarists; Leon Wilkeson, bass; Billy Powell, keyboardist, and Artimus Pyle, drummer.

The band's million-sellers were: "Pronounced Leh-nerd Skin-erd," "Helping," and "One More From the Road."

The band's latest album, "Street Survivors," was released Oct. 17.

By CHARLES CHAMPLIN
The Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — Watching it again in the sad and disbelieving hours after his death, Bing Crosby's last television interview, done earlier this year with Barbara Walters on ABC, was unusually affecting.

It was as if the two of them had been arguing, politely enough, over the proper wording for his epitaph — she wanting to claim more, he insisting, characteristically, on understatement.

Was he a good actor? No, Bing said firmly. Even in "The Country Girl"? No, no, no. What about "Going My Way," then, for which he won an Oscar? Lucky timing, Bing said; the good actors were all away at war.

All right, how did he evaluate himself? We-l-l, he could carry a tune fairly well most of the time, Bing Crosby said, and he had a good sense of comedy timing and really quite a decent vocabulary. And that was about it.

That was not about it by a country mile, but it was obvious that Crosby ment what he was saying; he wasn't playing at modesty. He was laid-back 50 years before anybody thought to invent the phrase, and his refusal to make himself out to be more than he was or to take himself too seriously was an important part of his particular and durable charm.

It was also the part of him that made Crosby such a perfect partner for Bob Hope, whose public comic personality was exactly opposite — the man who extravagantly overrates himslef as a lover, schemer, charmer and performer and who is always being cut back to size — often, in their Road pictures, by the unassertive Bing.

Opera singers are prized for the rarity of their voices. The basis of Crosby's whole career was a voice that sounded (deceptively) like Everyman's. He sounded the way a lot of us hoped we sounded in the shower when the resonances were working just right.

He made singing romantic songs in a light and easy baritone seem like something you could aspire to do, and several generations discovered in turn that once you got beyound "bubbubaboo" his was not so easy an act to copy as you thought.

The range and the dynamics of his voice were limited, and he respected rather than interpreted the lyrics he sand. It was the tone that made all the difference. It was big, warm, solid, mellow, inviting. He sounded to men and women alike as if he would be a relaxed and pleasant fellow to know.

He had come out of the marvelous excitements of '20s jazz. The immortal Bix Beiderbecks tootled magically on the cornet behind the vocals, and a feeling for the jazz beat beat and phrasing stayed with Crosby even after.

But the singing was only the start of it. Crosby was actor-handsome (despite the early concern over the wingspan of his ears) and he was inevitable material for the movies. He greatly undervalued himself as an actor, and the naturalness he projected on the screen is not only not the easiest thing in the world to do, it is the hardest. There is no such thing as naturalness after 10 takes and a half-day waiting for the set to be restructured. In the acting as in the vocalizing, the artless ease was very artful indeed.

Midland Community Theatre Inc., this week launches its final drive to raise funds for its new Theatre Centre.

The $2 million center for the performing arts is presently under construction at 2000 W. Wadley Ave. To date, approximately $1,420,000 in cash and pledges has been raised, and MCT is seeking an additional $500,000 to bring the project to completion.

Chairman of MCT's building fund campaign is Jim Allison Jr., with Charles Priddy and Martin Allday as co-chairmen for the project. Other committee members include Fred Wright Jr., Ray Herndon, Charles Henderson, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Wisenbaker, Mrs. Frank Cahoon, Art Cole, Arthur Dinsmoor, Mrs. Jesse Heath, Bill Ortloff, Ed Vogler and Arlen Edgar.

Angelo State will present story program

SAN ANGELO — "A Southern Harvest," a readers' theater program featuring short stories by three prominent "Southern" writers, will be presented at Angelo State University this week.

The readers' theater will be presented Monday Saturday nights in University Theater on campus, under sponsorship of the ASU fine arts department.

Featured on the programs will be the late Flannery O'Connor's "Everything That Rises Must Converge;" Eudora Welty's "Why I Live At the P.O.," and Truman Capote's "A Tree of Night." Each story will have a separate cast of reader-actors.

Helen Schaffer, a member of the ASU speech-drama faculty, has adapted the stories for the stage and directed the production.

Tickets for the series of 8 p.m. performances may be reserved in advance by telephoning 942-2000 between 2 and 5 p.m. daily. Tickets will also be available at the box office before curtain time each night.

Artist collapses at Phoenix show

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Southwest artist John Clymer collapsed Friday shortly after two of his paintings brought the most money in an auction as part of the 12th annual Cowboy Artists of America Exhibition here.

Clymer, 69, of Jackson Hole, Wyo., was listed in good condition at a Phoenix hospital. He was treated by fire department rescue personnel at the Phoenix Art Museum before he was taken to the hospital. Nature of his illness was not available, but hospital officials said only he was held overnight for observation.

His painting "Season of Flowers," was sold to Anna Nymeyer, South Holland, Ill., for $20,000. Another Clymer work, "Red Dust," was purchased by Bob Duke of Midland, Tex., for $18,000.

Overlapping productions provide playgoers' 'buffet'

It's been quite a "theater weekend" in Midland-Odessa, with theaters in both cities opening, or closing, current productions.

You could pay your money and take your choice, as the saying goes, of drama, comedy or pure farce.

Midland Community Theatre closed its October attraction, "The Bat," a classic mystery thriller by Mary Roberts Rinehart, Saturday night, following eight performances.

The Globe of the Great Southwest last night concluded a six-performance run of John Van Druten's 1950s comedy, "Bell, Book and Candle," and farce, "How the Other Half Loves," with a matinee this afternoon.

The Mansion, the Basin's new dinner theater, will close its current attraction, the Alan Ayckbourn

Meanwhile, though, Odessa's community theater, Permian Playhouse, opened its second production of the 1977-78 season Friday night. It is Peter Shaffer's farcical "Black Comedy."

"Bell, Book and Candle," one of the lightest comedies I've seen on the Globe stage, is an engaging and entertaining piece about a beautiful 20th Century witch who uses her magic powers to ensnare a mortal man, then loses him but ultimately gets him back when he finds that love has transformed her into a normal woman.

Linda Graves played Gillian Holroyd, the college-educated young witch, and Sid Williams had the role of Shepherd Henderson, with whom she falls in love. A capable supporting cast consisted of Mary Skinner as Aunt Queenee, an inept older witch; Bob Gibson as Nicky, Gillian's brother, and Garry Johnston as Sidney Redlich, an authority on the occult who is determined to expose the whole bunch. Finally, there was Pyewacket, Gillian's "bewitching" cat.

The production was staged and directed by Durward Jacobs, interim director at the Globe, who also will stage "Romeo and Juliet" as the theater's December production.

Permian Playhouse's "Black Comedy" is a wild-and-wacky romp, full of sight gags and hokey stage business, but quite entertaining. Thankfully, PPH director C. L. Holloway spared us the curtain-raiser, "White Lies" (or is it "White Liars"?), a silly bit of nonsense that usually accompanies a production of "Black Comedy."

The play is not "black" comedy in the sense of being sick comedy, but so titled because the action, supposedly, takes place in the dark. (Except it isn't really played in darkness — the audience can see what's going on. And when the lights "come on" in the play, then the audience is plunged into darkness. How's that for confusion?)

The comedy centers around a young sculptor, Brindsley Miller, and his troubles as he attempts to furnish his apartment with antiques and furniture "borrowed" from a neighboring apartment, in order to make a suitable impression on the starchy father of his fiancee and on a prospective purchaser of one of his art works. Assorted types converge on the apartment when the lights go out in the apartment building, including the neighbor whose apartment Brindsley has raided, and a tippling spinster. And finally, Brindsley's former girlfriend arrives on the scene to complicate matters considerably.

The cast of "Black Comedy" seems to have fun groping and grappling in the "darkness," and they all give pretty fair imitations of being in total blackness. There are a number of extremely funny interludes in the play, and many others that are at least mildly amusing.

Billy Cook of Midland is in the role of the harried host, Brindsley, and Jan Berry is seen as his current girlfriend, Carol, with Charlie Guy in the role of her father, Col. Melkett. Vivian Gillaspia of Midland has the part of the tippling spinster, Miss Furnival, and Oza Whitten, also of Midland, plays Gorringe, the outraged neighbor whose fine antiques have been transferred to Brinsdley's flat.

Gas decontrol major topic at IPAA meeting

Three congressmen active in the fight for decontrol will speak before the natural gas committee of the 5,000-member Independent Petroleum Association of America.

The natural gas price controls dispute is now being considered by a Senate-House conference committee. The House backed President Carter's recommendation to continue controls and extend them to intrastdate markets. The Senate oted to decontrol new natural gas production entering interstate markets.

Scheduled to speak at the Sunday session are Reps. Clarence J. Brown, R-Ohio, ranking minority member of the House energy and power subcommittee, Robert C. Krueger, D-Tex., co-author of deregulation bills that were defeated by close votes, and Trent Lott, R-Miss.

"We are at a major crossroads in the construction of a national policy toward natural gas," said A.V. Jones Jr., the trade group's president from Albany, Tex.

"Our industry is under the greatest challenge in its 128-year history, both from economic forces and political attacks."

Jones, completing his second year as head of the association, is to give his presidential report at a Tuesday general session.

Other Tuesday speakers include Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., and John Post, executive director of the Busines Roundtable, through which 150 major companies study national economic issues.

Oil museum opens membership campaign

Beginning Oct. 24, the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame will launch its 1977-78 membership drive.

Russell J. Ramsland, president, said the museum depends heavily on tax-ductible memberships for help in meeting its yearly operating expenses. Currently they provide more than a third of the annual budget, he said.

The museum will make special appeals for renewals and new members through a letter and publicity campaign.

During the first membership year, which began Sept. 14, 1975, those joining were given numbered charter memberships. These will be reassigned if renewals are taken.

Memberships are in four classes, Ramsland said, $50, $100, $500 and $1,000. Each carries an option for premiums.

Ramsland said companies and foundations can take out memberships as well as individuals.

"We have folders describing each of the membership categories, and would be delighted to send one to any person requesting it," Ramsland said. "The museum office can be contacted by dialing 683-4403 or by postal card to 1500 Interstate 30 West."

The museum president said membership mainly involves helping the museum become better and even more of an asset for West Texas. He added thatat the museumooks constantly for ways in which to show its appreciation to members.

Among plans for member privileges are: a preview of A. Thomas Schomberg's sculpture show scheduled for the first quarter of 1978; special seating at the next Hall of Fame Dinner, amd priority reservations for the museum's next "Rock 'N Ruin Tour," which will include Carlsbad Caverns' new cave.

Members' names are placed on individual plates in the museum's foyer. Other privileges include a 10 per cent discount at the museum's gift shop and, this year, a free copy of the sourvenir booklet that will be sold to visitors beginning Nov. 1.

Ramslamd said the response to the museum's appeal last year "made us think we could again avoid havimg an organized personal solicitation effort."

"We are depending on people taking our letters seriously and responding to what they see and hear in the media," he said.

Platform scheduled

HOUSTON — Houston Oil & Minerals Corp. has announced that the installation of a platform and production equipment will begin this month in Vermilion Block 50 offshore Louisiana.

The block is in federal waters 15 miles from the coast. The 4,600-acre lease block was acquired by the company in the federal lease sale in November 1976.

The company's No. 2 OCS-3392 well has been completed as a dual gas and oil well, with both completions below 10,000 feet.

On production test, the gas completion flowed at a rate of 10.4 million cubic feet of gas and 110 barrels of condensate per day.

The oil potential is 473 barrels of oil per day, plus 2 million cubic feet of gas per day.

Houston Oil & Minerals No. 4 OCS-3392 has been completed as a gas well below 10,000 feet. On production test, this well flowed at a rate of 3.1 million cubic feet of gas per day, plus 37 barrels of condensate per day.

WASHINGTON OIL

Carter's media attack has no obvious effect

By CLYDE LA MOTTE
Reporter-Telegram
Washington Oil Correspondent

WASHINGTON — President Carter's recent press conference attack on oil and gas companies may well have had two motives: (1) sway some support to his endangered energy plan and (2) provide a political escape hatch by pointing a finger of blame at someone else.

There was little indication last week as Senate and House conferees began the monumental task of trying to patch together some plan out of the widely differing legislation passed by the Senate and the house that President Carter's attack would have much impact.

The conferees know that if there is to be any legislation at all there will have to be some acceptable compromises by each side. Since the President offered no suggestions at the press conference of any compromises he would accept, the conferees will have to work out their own.

Futhermore, experienced conferees realize that rhetoric is better left for floor debates because name-calling and blame-placing are not conducive to getting a meeting of minds at a conference aimed at producing some results.

Instead of rhetoric, conferees are forced to consider where they will yield ground on one point in order to win their case on another point. A conference, in effect, becomes a gargaining session.

Perhaps the President felt he could generate a wave of public opinion that would, in turn, be felt by the conferees. But any such gain could well be offset by irritated Senate conferees, some of whom resented the President's implication that the Senate wreaked havoc with his energy bill only because oil lobbyists had them in their pocket.

(Some senators pointed out there was a great deal of opposition to one aspect or another of the Administration's energy approach from economists, consumer groups, large users and others, even including governmental agencies that had analyzed the plan.)

If it turns out, as it likely is, that the President's plan will emerge from conference greatly altered, then the President's press conference remarks will have set the stage for him to save face by blaming the outcome on the greedy oil industry.

After all, the President has attached a great deal of importance to passage of his energy plan and if he suffers a severe setback on this one he obviously will lose ground with Congress and the public in general.

Blaming someone else is not a new political technique. One dramatic example of its use was by President Truman in 1948. In deep political trouble, Truman campaigned against the "do-nothing" Congress and won the election. He was able to convince enough voters that the nation's troubles weren't his fault but stemmed from congressional rejection of his proposals.

There is little doubt that the energy issue will play an important role in many congressional races next year, especially if Congress is still fighting over an energy plan.

And it's not unlikely that the issue will also be a big one in the Presidential election year of 1980.

Barring the unforeseen, the nation's energy problems will be worse rather than being better by 1980. If so, the voters can be expected to punish someone for it.

President Carter apparently wants to be ready to see that the punishment is meted out to the industry and to members of Congress who did not go along with his energy plan. Naturally he does not want the blame placed on his Administration.

The alternative would be for all those who believe that the energy problem is a very important one to try to find a workable solution.

Obviously, there are honest differences of opinion on what approach will obtain the best results. But it sould be evident that failure to take any positive action will only let the nation drift toward an energy calamity.

Blaming the oil industry will not make the energy problem disappear.

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON (AP)—The number of producing oil wells in the United States has declined 18.4 per cent since reaching an alltime high in 1961.

Domestic producers totaled 503,249 at the end of 1976 compared with a record 616,057 set 15 years earlier.

Each well last year produced an average of 16.2 barrels of oil a day. The 1961 average was 11.7 barrels daily.

The new figures on producing wells are in the new editon of "The Oil Producing Industry in Your State," as published annually by the Independent Petroleum Association of America. The 108-page booklet includes a statistical history of oil and gas operations for the nation as a whole as well as for each of the 32 states that have production.

The 1977 edition was released preliminary to Monday's opening in Dallas of the 48th meeting of the trade group that represents more than 5,000 independent operators across the country.

Oilmen blame the decline in producing wells on a prolonged drilling slump that began in 1957. A record 58,160 wells were completed in 1956 but the number dropped to 27,300 before the slump bottomed out in 1971.

Well completions have increased, however, in four of the past five years with last year's operations recording a total of 41,455 wells, the highest level since 1964.

Among the individual states, Alaska had the highest per well producing average last year while Pennsylvania had the lowest.

Alaska's per well average was 921.6 barrels a day. The average involved only 190 wells, however, in that operations were not yet under way in the prolific Prudhoe Bay region that now is feeding oil into the Trans-Alaska pipeline.

Pennsylvania, where the nation's first oil well was completed in 1859, had 32,065 producing wells at the end of 1976 but the average output from each was only three-tenths of a barrel a day.

Placing second behind Alaska was Florida, with an 843.8 barrel per day average for 144 wells.

Among other major producing states, Louisiana, with 26,400 wells, had a daily output average of 64.4 barrels. Texas, with 160,675 wells, had a 20.2barrel average. California had a 19.9-barrel average for 44,783 wells. Oklahoma's average for 6.1 barrels covered 72,388 wells.

Since the Drake discovery well in 1859 in Pennsylvania, the industry has drilled 1,428,698 oil wells, 225,802 gas wells, and 730,393 dry holes for a completions total of 2,384,893.

At the end of 1959, the industry had a record 424.2 million productive and non-productive acres under lease. Before the cutback trend was reversed in 1968, the total had dropped to 324.9 million acres.

The lease total moved back to 404 million acres in 1974 only to drop to 396 million in 1975. The 398.9 million acre total at the end of 1976 included 43.3 million proved productive oil or gas acres and 355.6 million non-productive acres.

The 398.9 million acre figure accounts for 17.6 per cent of the total land area of the United States.

Texas leads in lease holdings with more than 45.3 million acres under lease at the end of 1976.

Wyoming followed at 38.9 million acres, Colorado 36.3 million, Montana 32.6 million, New Mexico, 29 million, Utah 26.2 million, and North Dakota 21.7 million.

West Virginia runs well behind the leaders but its 11.8 million acres under lease account for 76.8 per cent of the state's totl area of 15.4 million acres.

By contrast, the 7.6 million acres under lease in Alaska account for only 2.1 per cent that state's total area of 362.5 million acres.

Oil operators working 284 Basin rotaries

Last week the weekly survey conducted by Reed Drilling Equipment showed 284 rotaries in the Permian Basin Empire of West Texas and Southeast New Mexico. This is a decline of 20 rotaries from the 304 units of two weeks ago.

Eddy County, N.M., tallied 24 units making hole followed by Pecos County with 23 and Ward County with 20 units.

U.S. considers whether to appeal whaling order

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department is considering whether to appeal an order by a federal judge that clears the way for Alaskan eskimos to continue hunting bowhead whales despite an international agreement against such hunting.

U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica on Friday ordered Secretary of State Cyrus Vance to register a formal objection which would keep the United States out of an international whaling agreement that bans the hunting of the bowhead species.

Last June, the International Whaling Commission voted 16-0 to stop the killing of bowhead whales, of which there are an estimated 600 to 2,000 in the world. But the United States abstained from the vote and has until Oct. 24 to file an objection.

Sirica's order, an unusual one which makes the U.S. objection mandatory, was issued after the judge heard arguments in a suit filed by some Alaskan natives and the Alaska Eskimo Whaling Commission.

The issue involves on the one hand the Eskimo's subsistence hunting and on the other hand international cooperation to protect whales.

The State Department has been trying to walk a thin line between the two sides.

Tenant loses appeal on banning children

CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) — Saying that "not every class or person is protected" against discrimination, a Municipal Court judge has ruled that a couple with a child cannot stay in an apartment building that is off limits to children.

"I'm resolved to fight by legal means to remain in my apartment. I believe the courts, on appeal, will give us a remedy," said Steve Wolfson after Friday's court decision. Wolfson's lawyer said the case could go all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Wolfson, a lawyer, and his wife, Lois, are fighting to remain in their $390-a-month, two-bedroom apartment overlooking the Marina del Rey yacht harbor, where they moved in February 1974. Among the rules of the exclusive housing complex was that children were forbidden.

At the time they rented the apartment, the couple was childless, but they had a son in September 1975. When the housing management learned of the child, they told the couple their lease would not be renewed in February 1977.

That's when the Wolfsons went to court.

In his ruling, Judge Harold I. Cherness said laws forbidding discrimination on the basis of race, religion, sex and marital status do not extend to couples with children.

"Not every class or person is protected," Cherness said. "The court finds that there is no case law or statute placing defendants in any protected class as parents of children."

Cherness ordered the Wolfsons to pay $1,903.50 in damages for past-due rent and $3,000 in attorneys' fees and court costs.

The Wolfsons will be allowed to remain in their apartment pending the outcome of their appeals.

"It's about what I expected," Richard F. Hamlin, representing Marina Point Ltd. which owns the apartment building, said of the decision.

Wallenda tumbles

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — High-wire aerialist Karl Wallenda, 72, has been hospitalized after falling 20 feet while rehearsing a stunt for a television movie about his daredevil life.

"It was my fault," said Wallenda after the accident Thursday night. "I'll be more careful next time."

Sarasota Memorial Hospital refused to release any information.

Smuggled lories create problems

SAN DIEGO (AP) — One federal agency wants to save 10 rare birds allegedly smuggled into the United States, but another wants the evidence killed and frozen. While the agencies haggle, the Tahiti blue lories chirp merrily in a guarded cage.

The rare birds are valued by collectors at $5,000 each.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture says they were smuggled into the country and by law must be killed or returned to their South Pacific home to prevent any chances of spreading disease.

The U.S. Department of Justice wants them as evidence in prosecuting two unidentified smuggling suspects. The Justice Department got a federal court order after the arrests Oct. 7 and sent the lories to the San Diego Wild Animal Park under quarantine.

Under federal law, the birds are to remain in quarantine for 120 days at a cost of more than $120,000, officials say. But the value and rarity of the lories mean an effort may be made to "qualify them for admittance" to the United States, Dr. Norman Schulz, an Agriculture Department veterinarian, said in Sacramento Friday.

The birds have some friends outside the Justice Department. Some of the people arguing to keep the birds alive claim that the lories are nearly extinct.

Curator James Dolan of the Wild Animal Park says he wants "very much" to start a breeding preserve of lories. He says "there is a very real threat they will be extinct in a few years."

ARCO buys solar firm

LOS ANGELES, Calif.— Atlantic Richfield Co. Saturday announced it has acquired the assets of Solar Technology International Inc. of Chatsworth, Calif., a developer and producer of photovoltaic cells which convert solar energy into electricty.

The unit will be operated as a wholly-owned subsidiary, Arco Solar, Inc. Cost of the acquisition was not disclosed.

Photovoltaic cells are used to provide electrical power at remote locations. Examples of applications include microwave repeater stations, corrosion preventive systems in pipelines, navigational aids, and trickle chargers for batteries on boats and recreational vehicles.

The acquisition is part of an Atlantic Richfield program for developing solar and other sources of energy, said Dr. Robert R. Chaobers, vice president in charge of new business ventures.

DOE awards contract for coal gasification

PITTSBURGH, Pa. — A $14.25 million cost-sharing contract for development of a process for underground gasification of otherwise inaccessible coal has been awarded to a Gulf Oil Corp. subsidiary by the Department of Energy.

Gulf Research & Development Co. will direct a five-year study at a site either in Colorado or Wyoming in which steeply-dipping coal seams will be partially burned in-situ to produce a gas which could be used in certain commercial fuel applications.

It is estimated that 100 billion tons of coal in the United States occurs in seams which decline so steeply that they are not minable under present technology. Roughly 25 per cent of this coal would be suitable for underground gasification methods of recovery, according to Gulf.

Gulf said that the Energy Systems Planning Division of TRW, Inc., will be a major subcontractor on the project.

The Department of Energy will provide $12.75 million for development of the study, according to Gulf, which already has spend approximately $750,000 in development of in-situ goal gasification technology. An additional three quarters of a million dollars is to be spent by Gulf during the term of the contract.

The first phase of the project, site selection and preliminary environmental assessment, will be started immediately according to GR&DC, with site characterization and field development work scheduled to begin next summer.

Plans call for the research project to progress through field operation and testing in 1980 and large-scale testing of the process the following year.

The final stage of the project will be the preparation of preliminary design and cost estimates for a pilot-scale project, which would include surface facilities to process the gas for commercial applications.

The two sites under consideration for the study were identified as the North Park area, located near Walden, Colo., and the North Knobs area, located near Rawlins, Wyo.

Successful development of an economically-viable method of utilizing this country's steeply-dipping coal deposits would open up a tremendous new energy source, according to Gulf, and will have an ameliorating effect on U.S. natural gas supply problems. It also provides for conversion of high-sulfur coal into more environmentally-acceptable forms of energy.

GR&DC said that an underground combustion system has been used in the Soviet Union which has produced commercially-usable fuel. But the published costs of the fuel produced there is difficult to correlate with U.S. operations.

A major part of the DOE-Gulf project will be an analysis of the economics of fuel produced by the underground gasification method.

The Gulf research team says that the underground gasification of coal should have even less of an effect on the environment than ordinary coal mining techniques. However, another major aspect of the study will be an evaluation of its environmental impact, particularly as it would relate to future commercial-scale projects.

The procedure to be utilized by the Gulf researchers will involve drilling two holes into a coal seam. A fire is started in the coal and air to support the combustion is pumped in through the "injection well" while the gas is collected through a "production well." Gulf said the coal seams that will be utilized in the project are about 10 to 30 feet thick.

API reports increase in U.S. rig activity

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The American Petroleum Institute reports an increase in U.S. drilling during the second quarter of 1977.

API's quarterly drilling review shows 10,680 oil and natural gas wells and dry holes drilled from April through June this year, an increase of 12.3 per cent over the 9,514 completions in the same period last year.

The review reported a 6.3 per cent increase in activity during the first half of 1977, when 20,993 wells and dry holes were drilled, compared with 19,741 in the first six months of 1976.

Ikard noted that while the number of wells completed this year are expected to be well above the post-World War II low of 25,851 of 1971, they are not likely to equal the 57,111 wells drilled during the peak year of 1956.

"Drilling activity still is not at the levels needed to sustain significant economic growth and reduce the nation's dependence upon imported fuel," Ikard said.

"It is a disturbing situation but an understandable one. The current political and economic uncertainties have made it difficult for producers to raise the capital they need to expand drilling. If these uncertainties are eliminated, I am sure we will see an increase in both available capital and drilling activity."

There were 2,661 gas wells drilled this year, an increase of 29.7 per cent over the 2,052 completed during the comparable period of 1976.

Oil well completions were up 6.2 per cent, the review shows, rising from 4,254 last year to 4,516 during 1977.

The number of dry holes increased by 9.2 per cent, the review said, citing the 3,208 drilled in 1976 as compared to 3,503 this year.

The review also reveals that producers are drilling deeper for oil and gas. The average well depth increased 6.3 per cent — from 4,504 feet last year to 4,787 feet this year.

Garbage again crops up in energy news

HOUSTON (AP) — According to a California recycling consultant the energy equivilant of 8.2 million barrels of oil a year could be reclaimed by 1980 from Texas household garbage.

Such an energy savings also would supply enough electrical power for a year's supply for more than 2 million homes, said Ronald Kinsey of San Jose, Calif., president of Resource Technology Corp.

Speaking at a recycling seminar sponsored by the American Iron and Steel Institute Thursday, Kinsey said "these energy recovery figures are technologically and economically possible."

He said the recovery of resources and energy from household refuse already is operational in many cities across the country.

Some 40 municipalities, including Houston and Odessa, Tex., he said, are reclaiming steel from their household garbage for recycling. And he said many of the cities already are recovering energy from the remaining refuse.

He said considerable resource recovery planning is underway in the Southwest.

"In the larger Texas counties alone the garbage will contain more than 475,000 tons of recoverable steel each year by 1980," Kinsey said. "There's simply no good reason not to use garbage wisely. Garbage-to-energy systems not only conserve fossil fuels but they reclaim a variety of other valuable resources from trash for recycling."

The American Iron and Steel Institute respresents firms responsible for more than 95 per cent of the nation's steel production.

Douglas Melville, chairman of the institute's committee of tin mill products producers, said garbage should be viewed as a product that must be processed and marketed at the best possible price.

Melville, a Jones & Laughlin Steel Co. officials said "markets for most parts of household waste exist."

"Garbage can no longer be considered a municipal liability that must be disposed of at the least possible cost," he said.

Rice University to honor Stanley Moore

Stanley C. Moore, a Rice University alumnus and Midland oilman, will receive his alma mater's 1977 Outstanding Engineer, Award during homecoming ceremonies on the Rice Campus in Houston Friday.

Moore, chairman emeritus of Smith International, Inc., graduated from Rice with a B.S. degree in Mechanical Engineering in 1937, is a longtime supporter of the school and a former chairman of the Rice University Fund Council.

In 1973, he became a term-member of Rice'e board of governors and serves currently as a governor-advisor. He also is a member of the Rice Associates.

Moore will receive the award from Joseph F. Reilly Jr., president of the Rice Engineering Alumni Board of Directors. Reilly said Moore is being honored "for his outstanding and pioneering contributions to oil tool engineering, and his long years of devoted service to the ideals and goals of Rice's engineering education and tradition."

Moore started his business career in 1937 with Hughes Tool Co. in Houston, advancing to assistant to the vice president of engineering by 1949. That year, he founded and became president of his own firm — Drill Collar Service Co. of Midland.

In 1953, he established and became president of Midland's Drilco Oil Tools, Inc., with a total of 46 employees.

In 1967, that firm merged with what is now Smith International of Newport Beach, Calif., a concern with more than 5,000 employees and listing on the New York Stock Exchange.

Moore became chairman of the board of Smith International in 1974 and served in that capacity until January 1976. He continues to serve on the Smith International board of directors.

Moore's wide-ranging business and civic directorships include service on the boards of Commercial Bank & Trust Co. of Midland; National Association of Manufactures, and the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

He also has served as a director and president of the Texas Association of Business; the Industrial Foundation of the Permian Basin; Advisory Council of the College of Business Administration of The University of Texas. He is a director of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

Among his most recent honors, Moore was recognized for the National Achievement Award by the Junior Achievement Organization on whose board he has served and by Optimist International with its Award for Outstanding Community Service.

He also was awarded the 1964 Citation for Service by the American Petroleum Institute and the 1960 Meritorious Service Award by the International Association of Oilwell Drilling Contractors.

That organization also paid special tribute to Moore during its annual meeting in Houston last month for his work and major initial gift to provide a training center in Houston for a drilling school conducted by the Petroleum Extension Service of The University of Texas.

The school, known in industry circles as "The Little Red School House," is to be located on the North Harris County Junior College campus for advanced technical education of oil well drilling personnel from all over the world.

Moore belongs to numerous oil industry organizations. He is a member of the First Methodist Church of Midland.

Discovery announced

CASPER, Wyo. — Bronco Oil & Gas Co. of Casper has reported completion of an oil discovery in Northeast Wyoming.

The well, No. 14-21 Echo-Federal in Campbell County. It was completed for an initial rate of 264 barrels of oil per day, through perforations from 8,533 to 8,548 feet in the Minnelusa sandstone formation.

The new field opened by the well has been named Bronco (Minnelusa).

H. Hansen in new post

HOUSTON — Hans R. Hansen has been appointed manager of administration for the Oil and Gas Division of Cabot Corporation.

He joined Cabot in 1972 as manager of contracts and titles, Oil and Gas Division. He transferred to Houston in the recent Oil and Gas Division relocation.

He has served as chairman of the division's Pricing Committee and will continue in that role.

Fewer stripper wells abandoned during '76

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. — Abandonments of stripper oil wells dropped significantly in 1976 compared to 1975, the National Stripper Well Survey compiled by the Interstate Oil Compact Commission shows.

In the recently released survey, figures concerning production, reserves and number of stripper wells also are listed for 28 states. Stripper wells, which account for approximately 14 percent of the nation's total oil production, are those capable of producing 10 barrels of oil per day or less during the year.

Charles Bowlin, IOCC director of technical services, said he believes there is a direct correlation between a free market price for stripper oil and the reduction in abandonments last year. Currently all domestic oil production, with the exception of stripper wells, is under federal price controls.

"The decision to remove stripper production from price controls beginning the last quarter of 1976 indicates producers were economically able to delay plugging and abandonment procedures," Bowlin said. "I have no doubt that more wells would have been abandoned if price controls had remained."

He said the fact abandonments fell from 13,478 in 1975 to 9,916 in 1976 indicates "operators rather than plug the wells are producing them down to a lesser per day average."

Both the number of stripper wells and their production decreased in 1976 by less than one percent compared to 1975 figures, the survey shows. Last year 365,733 stripper wells were operating compared to 367,872 in 1975.

Although average daily production at 2.93 barrels per well per day remained constant in 1976 compared to 1975, total stripper production dropped from 394,941 barrels in 1975 to 392,190,526 barrels last year.

Bowlin said the slight decline in stripper oil production "parallels" the gradual decline in total domestic oil production.

"Fortunately that decline has not been as rapid as it has been in prior years," Bowlin added.

Although stripper oil production experienced a decline last year, total dtripper oil reserves increased slightly in 1976 over 1975. The 1976 reserves figure of 4,876,315,000 barrels is 30,595,000 barrels above 1975 totals.

Six of the states reporting accounted for 85 percent of the total stripper oil production last year. Led by Texas in stripper oil production, other key producing states include Oklahoma, California, Kansas, Illinois and New Mexico.

Dr. Glenn A. Welsch

Dr. Welsch on program

Dr. Glenn A. Welsch of Austin, the John Arch White Professor of Accounting for the University of Texas Graduate School of Business, will speak at a joing meeting in Midland Thursday.

Cullen Davis trial judge says justice will be done

Editor's Note — Born in Canyon, Texas, and reared on a farm at nearby Ralph Switch, George Dowlen is a tall, drawling product of the gentle high plains of Northwest Texas. He is also a "cowboy judge with a Boston brain," and he's presiding over an epic Texas murder trial. The defendant is among the richest men in the world.

By MIKE COCHRAN

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — The hour was late, the lights low, the music loud, the mugs frothy and the conversation, as it invariably does, turned to Cullen and Priscilla.

"The fact of the matter is, if the defendant is guilty, he will be found guilty," said one of four men huddled around the table.

"If he's not guilty, he will be found not guilty. That's the way it should be That's the way it's gotta be. And that's the way it will be."

It's as simple as that, suggested Judge George Dowlen, who is presiding over the longest and perhaps most expensive murder trial in Texas history.

And Thomas Cullen Davis, 44, a man of immense financial power and influence, is believed to be the richest person ever to stand trial for murder in this country.

The State of Texas contends the Fort Worth industrialist should die for the Aug. 2, 1976, slaying of his 12-year-old stepdaughter, Andrea Wilborn.

And it has spent nine weeks and hundreds of thousands of dollars preparing and presenting the case against him.

Davis is accused also of wounding his estranged wife, Priscilla, 36, killing her live-in lover, Stan Farr, 30, and firing a crippling shot into young Gus Gavrel Jr.

Gavrel, 22, a midnight visitor to Davis' hilltop Fort Worth mansion, has a $13 million civil suit pending against Davis.

"The reason this case is deemed so important is obviously because of the wealth of the defendant," Dowlen said. "If he were penniless and had a court-appointed attorney it would be a different ball game."

"The Associated Press wouldn't be here and you two guys wouldn't be in Amarillo writing books," he told his three companions.

"This case," said Dowlen, summoning a comely waitress who calls him "George," "has dominated my entire personal and professional life since the middle of June.

"Absolute strangers call me by name and ask me, or tell me, what has happened in this case. I thought from time to time I could separate myself from this case, but I can't."

Dowlen, 43, a bachelor with a keen eye for Amarillo's beauties and bright lights, is reminiscent in style, humor and looks to actor Alan Alda as he portrays "Hawkeye" in the television series "M.A.S.H."

"I've had several girls who I was really interested in, who might have been the deal for the long haul, who have been alienated and run off by my preoccupation with this trial," he grumbled.

"But," he grinned, "I'd do it again. I'm conceited enough and confident enough to believe I can try this case as well as anyone in the State of Texas.

"I've convinced myself I can handle the whole deal and do it right, regardless of what the verdict is I'm convinced in my own mind that justice will be done."

Dowlen's stories range across the Texas Panhandle, many dating back to his days as the "singing district attorney" of neighboring Randall County.

"Aw, I never did sing," Dowlen smiled. "I'd just kinda recite for the jury. And I'd throw 'em a lot of Shakespeare and a little Aristotle and Plato.

"I used to be well-read," he quipped.

A fellow judge recalls the time Dowlen was prosecuting a man nicknamed "Wheels" for bigamy, and told the jury in his closing statement:

"Folks, I stopped there at Betty's Cafe the other day and some kids came in and played the juke box. A song called 'Spinning Wheel.' It goes like this:

"Old Wheels has been up there too long and it's time for you folks to bring him down."

Sure enough, the jury convicted old Wheels.

Another time, while prosecuting a drug case, Dowlen provided the jury a rhythmic version of a song that began: "The pusher don't care if you live or die."

The jury nailed him, too.

"George is tremendously fair," said Jerry Shackleford, an Amarillo judge. "He had such a kinship and following with the citizens, he could have sent people to the pen for more years than the crime justified.

"But he would look at the crime and agree to a fair punishment under the circumstances."

Sheriff's Deputy Wiley Alexander recalls the time Dowlen encountered a lawyer and the lawyer's client he was about to prosecute. He chatted a few moments, then entered his office.

Unimpressed with Dowlen, the defendant told his lawyer: "He sure talks country, doesn't he?"

"Yeah," the lawyer replied, "and he's going to country talk you right into the penitentiary."

Shackleford said, "The thing that makes George so deadly is that on initial contact he appears so country and easygoing that it camouflages his real legal ability.

"And then he just comes on and whips you. He's got a tremendous legal mind. He thinks fast and best in pressure situations and is quick to analyze things."

A gradute of the University of Texas Law School, the judge was at his persuasive best one recent Saturday when he convinvced the jury it was dutybound to break for the TexasArkansas football game.

"It's a matter of state pride," he explained. "We ought to be home rooting for the 'Horns."

Stirring his scotch with an ever-present celery stick, Dowlen observed:

"You know, being a sequestered juror on a case that lasts this long has just got to be the toughest deal in the world. They may resent it, but they've come together as one unit, one group, and I'm convinced they think they're going to ride right on through it."

Dowlen, who presides over the state's 181st Judicial District, got the case last summer after an earlier mistrial in Fort Worth, and jury selection began June 27.

The first juror has been locked away from family and friends for nearly four months.

"This an unusual situation," Dowlen said. "Both the state and the defense came here prepared to spend whatever it takes to try the case.

"No side can outspend the other side.

"It's not a situation where a big, expensive defense lawyer comes into town and shoots down a young prosecutor. The prosecutors in this case are capable, experienced people.

"With 'Racehorse' Haynes and Phil Burleson for the defense, you're looking at pretty equal representation for both sides, and this is what the system is all about.

"I feel like the system works, especially in a case like this with equal representation on both sides."

It is Dowlen's quick wit, continuing good humor and unofficious courtroom demeanor that have kept both those sides from staging open warfare. To characterize most of the trial attorneys as volatile would be an understatement.

"Whatever, happens, happens," Dowlen philosophized.

"You just have to see the funny side of things, even if it's a capital murder case. And you can't get more serious than a capital murder case.

"If you keep it loose, where the lawyers and the jury and the judge don't get so uptight they lose perspective, then you have a fighting chance of completing the trial, whichever way it may go."

Dowlen recalled the tense 13 days that Priscilla was on the stand, seated within feet of the man she is suing for divorce and who she said shot her and killed her lover.

"They both know the truth," Dowlen said. "They're the only ones who know the truth. And one of them is lying. Every once in a while, their eyes had to make contact," Dowlen said.

"And they knew. Nobody but the two of them. God, it's a strange deal."

"If the verdict's guilty, so be it. If it's not guilty, so be it.

"I am firmly convinced that if Cullen Davis is guilty he will be convicted. If he is innocent, he'll be acquitted. That's not very dramatic.

"But I really believe it."

Ringing the bell

With BOB TIEUEL

A New Look at the Black Experience: "You show me a people who have no knowledge of their history, no sense of connection with their culture; you show me people who have not been deeply and permanently affected by all the rivers of blood that have been shed for them—and I will show you a people who have no right to be free! I show you a people who have no right to call themselves followers of the Lord Jesus Chirst! He said, 'I am that you might have life and that you might have it more abundantly.'

"Let me tell you what I found out after working for seven years with the opportunity of dealing with millions of dollars of a major city—Atlanta. If those seven years have taught me anything it taught me this: Being black is not enough! There is a corollary to that: blackness has run out! We have milked every dollar out of blackness we are going to ger! I also found out that black folk will lie; black folk will steal; black folk will stabe you in the back for 35 cents! So we know who we are.

"Yet when I look at the world today it fills me with sorrow. Little children today are going to suffer tomorrow, and nobody cares! You don't care—it you cared about it you would do something about it.

"Black people today, right now, this minute are not just poor, unemployed and underemployed. They are disillusioned, disappointed, disgusted and desperate. And desperate men do desperate things. They take desperate position. They do not respond to your condemnation because they have never been praised. They do not respond in incarceration because they have never been free. They do not respond to death because they have never lived. They kept dreaming that one day they would be a star like you and me. But they found out in the summer of 1977 that their dreams are not coming true. So they are leaving—Gladys Knight says on the midnight train! They are fed up.

"No one responds to kindness more than a desperate man! Open your mouth and heart sometimes, to a thug and say hello to him...Jesus said 'When you have done it for the least of these you have done it unto me! We must make desicisons now about what we are going to do about desperate men". From E.I. Darnell in "Trying to Love Two".

Barbara Jordan Speaks: More new voters than ever before are officially labeling themselves as independents because the believe the Democrat and Republican parties are "just some kind of shell game and they don't want any part of it...The two parties are also viewed by new voters as groups of grubby politicans who are trying to sweep up the last crumbs of patronage from the political system", delcared U.S. Rep. Barbara Jordan, D-Tex., at a recent fund-raising dinner for U.S. Rep. Harold Runnels, D-N.M.

Speaking in the same forecful manner in Roswell, N.M., which has made her one of the most sought-after and honored speakers in Congress, the Texas congresswoman stressed that parties have lost their effectiveness on both ends of the political spectrum—with presidents as well as voters—because of image. Miss Jordan said the true role of political parties is as an avenue of communication between government decisionmakers and the people, and as a collection point for discussion and decision making.

Quotable quotes: "Not only have U.S. Congressman Harold Runnels of New Mexico and Congresswoman Barbara Jordan been next-foor neighbors in the Longworth building in Washington many years, but they belong to the same party and on some questions vote together, while he is generally cast as a conservative and she falls into the liberal camp. The political "love affair" goes a long way back. It was Harold who appeared before the New Mexico Democratic delegation in New York in 1976 and revealed that his choice for vice president was none other than highly literate and intelligent Barbara Jordan; and as he made his statement he exhibited (much to the astonishment of many) a campaign button with Jordan's name already printed on it. It was not a joke, although Barbara would have had some distinct disadvantages with some voters, being black and a woman at the same time" Leaward Lines in Hobbs Daily News Sun.

And from the same source: A Man Called 'Bing.' "Awhile back, when Elvis Presley died, his mourners cried, 'The King is dead!' To an older generation, however, the real king died when the golden voice of Bing Crosby was stilled forever".

Until the next experience, Peace and be a good neighbor. Remember they come in all colors 30 for now.

Some residents unhappy after Utah village moved

HELPER, Utah (AP) — Two years ago, the 61 families of Castle Gate pulled up roots and moved, making way for expanding coal production. Now, some of them are bitter, saying they are having problems sinking new roots in a community four miles away.

All of the houses in Castle Gate, a coal-mining town in eastern Utah, were moved by the landowner, McCulloch Oil Corp. The company, saying it needed the land for its growing coal interests, paid for the moves and gave each family a plot of land.

To some, like Pete Tabone, Castle Gate's last mayor, the move has meant problems. To others, like veteran miner Willard Craig, it has been a boom.

Tabone complains that his taxes have risen and, "here, the wind never stops. It howls and gets colder than hell in the winter.

"I've had lots of bills since we moved here. I mean we wanted to fight it, but found we didn't really have a chance," Tabone adds.

Craig, though, says the new subdivision, carved out of a canyon, with squared off streets, a new coat of paint on the houses and yards lined with fences and flowers, pleases him.

"I'm happy — greatly so," says Craig, a machinist for 35 years. "We've got a pretty town. It's clean and I think we'll be happy here."

Like Tabone, most of the residents of Castle Gate Subdivision of Helper are on fixed incomes. Some, Tabone says, made the move only to find their savings depleted and debts increasing.

"If we wanted a basement, we had to pay for that," Tabone says. "If we wanted a car port we had to pay for it. Since we made the move, some of us are finding it was something we couldn't afford, no matter what McCulloch said."

Although Vanda Hreinson's wooden-frame house suffered cracks from ceiling to floor during the move, she says she is delighted with the way things have worked out.

"Look at what we did to the house," she says, pointing to re-paneled walls trimmed with flowered designs, a modern kitchen and a western-style garden in the back yard. "We never could have had anything like this at the old place."

Simple pointers on greenhouses

By CHARLES GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent

The U.S. farm population new stands at 8.3 million people, about 15 percent below the 1970 level and 600,000 fewer than a year ago. The number of farm residents leveled off somewhat in the early 1970's with only an annual decline of 1.2 percent. But, since 1974, the average annual rate of loss has accelerated to 5.8 percent. Even with this recent acceleration, however, the rate of decline over the past seven years has been only 2.7 per cent annually, much lower than the 4.8 percent annual rate from 1960 to 1970.

While the farm population continues to drop, there has been a recent resurgence in the entire rural population. The population in non-metro areas, now growing faster than the metro population, climbed 6.6 per cent from 1970 to 1975 compared to the metro growth of 4.1 percent.

The South lost more farm residents than any other region in 1976 and has lost almost a fourth of its farm residents since 1970. With 2.9 million farm people, the South ranks second in farm population to the North Central region's 3.8 million. The West bucked the trend, showing an increase of 50,000 farm residents since 1970.

About one person out of every 26 or 3.9 percent of the U.S. total population had a farm residence in 1976. When the number of U.S. farm residents reached its peak in 1916, about one person in three lived on a farm.

It doesn't take a green thumb to run a good greenhouse. A few simple pointers and common sense will do. Light, water and humidity are the three main items to keep under control. And of these, light is the easiest to work with. Proper shading can be obtained by using materials such as cheesecloth or saran. Plants needing direct sunlight can be placed at top of shelves or directly in front of clear glass. Placing plants that require less sunlight under shelves or branches of other plants is another simple solution.

Water green house plants only when the soil becomes moderately dry. When watering, remember to let the water run through the bottom of the container. Try to keep daytime temperatures between 70-90 degrees F. and night temperatures in the 50-80 degree F. range.

Maintain humidity in the range of 50 to 70 percent. Simple methods such as hosing down the floor or elaborate humidifiers can be used. Keeping the humidity below 100 per cent at night helps control diseases.

Greenhouse plants also benefit from time-release fertilizers in dry, liquid or newer pellet forms.

Check plants regularly for disease and insect damage and use control measures as soon as a problem arises. Some common greenhouse problems to keep an eye out for are drooping lower leaves, yellowing of leaves, weak or rubbery stems and leaves with blackened tips. These problems result from common mistakes such as too much light and overwatering as well as more complicated root diseases.

About this time of year we frequently get questions from home gardeners concerning the harvesting and storing of sweet potatoes. Sweet potatoes should be dug when the vines turn yellow but before frost has killed the vines. If frost should kill vines before potatoes are dug, get them out immediately. Even slight frost will damage sweet potatoes, although it may not become evident until after several weeks of storage.

Sweet potatoes are a special case when it comes to handling and storage. Immediately after harvest, the sweet potaotes must be cured. The curing process simply allows a thick, secondary skin known as the periderm to form beneath the thin, outer skin. The most rapid curing takes place at 85 degrees and 85 per cent humidity. This curing process should last about one week. The curing process is completed when the skin no longer slips under finger pressure to expose the wet, raw interior of the potato.

After the curing period is finished the sweet potatoes should be stored at 60 degrees F. with a relative humidity of 75 ot 80 percent. There is danger in letting the sweet potatoes stay in the soil when temperature drops below 55 degrees. The sweet potato roots will be chilled and the surface skin will begin to break down and be more susceptible to rot.

DAWNA PARROTT's Navajo Charley was the winner of a deluxe winter blanket and hood for bringing in the highest points in West Texas Appaloosa Horse Club competition in 1977.

Speeding blamed

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The head of the Texas Department of Public Safety said Friday that traffic deaths are increasing each week and urged motorists to obey the 55 mph speed limit.

Col. Wilson Speir said traffic deaths this year total 2,675, compared with 2,467 at this time in 1976.

"What's more, the percentage of increase in deaths is becoming greater with each passing week," he said.

Meanwhile, Speir said, an estimated 74 per cent of motorists exceed the speed limit, compared with 69 per cent at the end of last year.

Although the highway patrol's enforcement effort has doubled since the new law took effect, the low number of troopers provided by the legislature "makes the job extremely difficult when some three-fourths of the driving public is violating the speed law," he said.

Trapping of predators involves skill, long hours working alone

Midland County trapper Bill Powers digs a hole for a steel trap. (Staff Photos by Brian Hendershot)

By LINDA SCHAFFRINA

"I guess I was just born that way. . . . I just liked the life, the freedom of it."

That's why James Poteet, who was a U.S. Fish and Wildlife trapper 38 years, stuck to his work.

Poteet retired in 1973, having spent 35 years working in Midland County.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has two men, Bill Powers and Leland Murphy, assigned to trap predatory animals in Midland County. The service is a cooperative venture among federal, state and county governnents.

Saidere "Hoppy" Turman is a "troubleshooter" for an area ranging from Coleman County to El Paso and a large part of South Texas. Midland County is in his area.

Turman was working in Midland County last week.

Although he is only 24, he has lots of experience working as a trapper. "I've been doing it all my life but I've been with this outfit four years," he said.

He learned by helping his father, who trapped animals for their pelts.

Within the past year, Fish and Wildlife Service trappers in Midland County have trapped about 250 coyotes, 25 bobcats and a few gray foxes and skunks, said Keith Carpenter, supervisor for the area which includes Midland County.

What makes a good trapper?

Most job applicants say they want to trap "because they like to hunt and fish," Carpenter said, adding that that's about the worst reason there is. "We probably get to hunt and fish less than anybody."

Carpenter said a trapper doesn't have to be a loner, "but you have to be able to work by yourself."

"It just takes something inside a person to trap. Some people won't ever make good trappers," Turman said.

Poteet simply said "it takes a person who likes that kind of life. It isn't all glamorous."

In the old days, Poteet said, trappers usually were people with little education, but that has changed since he started.

Other things have changed, also.

"About the time I started out, they usually lived in a little camp out on the land," Poteet said. Now, many live in town.

In the 1920s and '30s, most of the work was done on horseback, but now the pickup truck has displaced the horse, he said.

The tools have changed slightly, also, and Poteet invented one of the major changes.

The M-44 trap, for which Poteet received a patent about 1967, is a spring-loaded trap which injects cyanide directly into the mouth of a coyote.

"It's a real selective device in that a lot of animals won't mess with it," Carpenter said. He said it is the "quickest, most humane tool we have available."

Poteet said he invented the M-44 as a safer replacement for the formerly used "coyote getter" which used a .38-caliber six-shooter shell with a primer and powder instead of the cyanide.

Other methods used in predator control, Carpenter said, are the steel trap and the wire snare.

The steel trap closes around an animal's legs when the pan is stepped on. The kind of trap used here does not have teeth on it, the trappers said.

Carpenter said the trappers also hunt from helicopters.

Which method is used depends on the individual situation — the terrain, the animal being sought and other factors, Carpenter said. He said there are 26 restrictions limiting use of the M-44.

Midge Erskine of Midland, licensed to rehabilitate injured wild animals and birds, said she thinks the wire snare is the best method for trapping "even though it is a horrible death. You won't get your child or your pet killed."

Mrs. Erskine said she believes too many predatory animals are being trapped.

"The trapped ranches have a huge rabbit problem and no grass," she said. Also, she said, there aren't enough predatory animals in some areas to eat the carcasses of other dead animals.

Carpenter said warning signs are posted on gates and fences around land where traps are being used. Another warning sign is posted six feet from each M-44 trap.

The trappers do their work only after being asked to by the landowner, Carpenter said. Although "maintenance work" is done on some land where there is a constant problem, usually the call comes after a predator has killed livestock, he said.

In addition to trapping predators that are a danger to livestock, the trappers work with public health authorities to rid areas of skunks which might carry rabies, Carpenter said.

Most of the trapping in Midland County is done in the southern part of the county on sheep ranches. Carpenter said, because predatory animals are not much of a threat to cattle except during calving season.

It's legal for the landowner to trap any of the animals sought by the Fish and Wildlife Service trappers if he prefers to do it himself.

The coyote is the most difficult animal to catch, the trappers agree, and the skunk the easiest

Looking for signs of the animal and figuring out where it is likely to go are among the things Turman enjoys most about his job.

Terrain makes little difference, Turman said, except that it is difficult to bury steel traps in rocky terrain. "The area isn't so difficult. It's the coyote you're chasing," he said.

In 1977, Midland County will spend $10,350 for the trapping service, according to county records. Carpenter said the state will contribute about $12,000 for the service in Midland County, and the federal government pays for items such as costs of using a helicopter for aerial hunting.

Powers has hidden the steel trap so it's not visible to the animal.

The nozzle-like device in the lower portion of the picture is the exposed part of an M-44 trap which kills with cyanide. Saidere "Hoppy" Turman displays a warning sign ordinarily posted six feet from the trap.

Liquid protein warning aired

WASHINGTON (AP) — Doctors specializing in weight control say the unsupervised use of liquid protein in a crash diet is dangerous and may even cause death.

The doctors, meeting at a conference on obesity, said Friday there have been reports of deaths involving persons engaged in so-called starvation diets using liquid protein as a supplement.

"Unsupervised use of liquid protein without proper supplements such as potassium is dangerous and potentially lifethreatening," said Dr. Saul M. Genuth of Mount Sinai Hospital in Cleveland.

A spokeswoman for the Food and Drug Administration said the agency has recieved one report of a death involving starvation diets and has heard informally of possibly several others.

"We don't think anyone would die as a direct cause of taking liquid protein, but the diet is essentaily a starvation diet. So any deaths would be like what comes from starvation," the FDA spokeswoman said.

Searching Your Family Tree

By Dick Pence

(This is the fifth of a six-part series on tracing the roots of your family.)

The records maintained by each county or other local jurisdiction are valuable sources of family information. Land records, wills and probates, other court records and vital statistics are just some of the materials available to the genealogist.

Unfortunately, many of these records have been lost by fire, or, perhaps, carelessness. And in most states, birth and death records weren't kept until this century. Marriage bonds are often available for much earlier years.

In general, early records for New England — especially Massachusetts — are fairly complete, and many have been published. In the South, though, many early records have been the victim of fire, particularly during the Civil War.

COUNTY RECORDS

You can find out what records are available in a county by writing the county clerk. If you can provide a specific name and an appropriate date for a document (deed, birth, death, . . . marriage, will, etc.), the clerk can find and copy the record for you at a nominal fee (a dollar or two).

Wills are valuable because they help establish dates of death and often name specific heirs. Remember, though, that a particular son or daughter may have been provided for earlier or preceded the parent in death so he or she might not be mentioned. Even if no will exists or was recorded, there sometimes is a probate or other listing of an estate in county records.

Witnesses to a will should be noted, for they sometimes are relatives and can provide clues for further research.

DEEDS

Deeds often do not contain genealogical records, but they do help you establish where your ancestors lived and when they lived there.

Most states did not require death certificates until sometime after 1900. The available ones, however, are usually in the counties and often at a state repository, such as the Department of Vital Statistics. Remember that the person providing the information for the death certificate may not hava had accurate knowledge of the facts listed on the certificate, or he may have been confused about what he was answering.

Examine personal property tax or estate lists carefully. Sometimes you can identify succeeding generations through the handing down of a particular item.

VARYING SPELLINGS

Remember that in the early years of our country many people could not read or write, so watch for variant spellings of your family name. Also watch for misspellings of place names.

Another thing to note is translation of names. The German Zimmerman often became the English Carpenter, for example.

In earlier times, the boundaries of countries were constantly changing. Thus, in order for you to be able to concentrate your research in the proper place, you need to find out something about the geographic history of the areas you are interested in.

STATE LIBRARIES

Many state libraries will have information on the origin of their counties and, in some cases, this is available in pamphlet form (see the next section for additional details on where to find out more about county origins).

If you think you are going to be doing a lot of researching in courthouses, or writing to them frequently for information, there's a guidebook that is particularly helpful. "The Handy Book for Genealogists" contains much information on local record sources (available from the Everton Publishers, P. O. Box 368, Logan, UT 84321).

Included is information about published state and county histories, lists of libraries and historical societies with addresses, county maps of each state, a listing of counties with records available in each and whom and where to write for them, date the county was formed and its parent counties, and a rundown of available census records and indexes to them.

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT LEAFLETS

The Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, DC 20402, can supply these leaflets: "Where to Write for Birth and Death Records" (15 cents), "Where to Write for Marriage Records" (10 cents) and "Where to Write for Divorce Records" (10 cents).

Church records can be a fruitful source of information on your ancestors. However, these records are more scattered than public records and, hence, much more difficult to locate. If you know which local church your ancestors belonged to and can find out if that church still exists, you may be able to get some help from a present-day official of the church.

A letter to a local historical society or library might help you find out where to write. If records are no longer in the custody of the local church, they may be kept in the archives of the denomination. "Survey of American Church Records" (two volumes, available from Everton Publishers, address above) might provide you with information on where to look or write.

FAMILY BIBLES

Family Bibles or information given on tombstones are excellent records — but there are some things you have to be careful about.

For instance, Bibles usually are accurate family records. However, always check the date the Bible was printed. Suppose it was printed in 1850 and contains family birth, death and marriage records back to the 1700s.

Obviously, then, someone wrote these records long after the fact and may not have remembered accurately or could have been told the wrong information.

CHECK HANDWRITING

Also, you should examine the handwriting carefully. If several entries are in the same shade of ink and almost identical handwriting, it's a good sign that these entries were made at the same time and probably were not made concurrent with the event they describe. The date of the last nearly identical record is probably the closest to the recording date.

Tombstones, too, are sometimes erected many years after a person dies and therefore might contain erroneous dates. Be careful, too, of printed compilations of cemetery records, because errors can be made in copying or publication.

Many cemeteries will not be well cared for and will be badly overgrown with bushes or weeds. The best time to search is in the early spring or late fall when the foliage is thin and the weeds are short.

HELPFUL EQUIPMENT

Helpful equipment for tombstone hunting includes carpenter's chalk (for rubbing over letters to make them easier to read), a putty knife to scrape debris off fallen stones, a scrub brush to clean stones, a crowbar to turn heavy stones, perhaps an axe to clear away underbrush, and a camera to record unusual stones.

Be sure to record or note surrounding stones, for they can provide clues to family relationships. Look for markers outlining family plots and note the names of all those buried within the plot. A woman who was a widow for a number of years, for instance, might be buried with her parents or brothers and sisters, thus providing a clue to her maiden name.

Even if your ancestor is buried in an unmarked grave, if you know the cemetery he is buried in you can sometimes get information about him from cemetery records. Write a library or historical society near the cemetery to learn if such records are available.

DEATH NOTICES

Obituaries and death notices can provide genealogical information, but it is well to keep in mind that inaccuracies often exist in these. Sometimes the person providing the information for the obituary doesn't know all of the facts.

If you know the date of your ancestor's death, you can usually get a copy of an obituary notice (at least for more recent years) by writing newspapers in the area where he or she died. Your library probably has a directory of newspapers in the United States.

State libraries often have extensive collections of newspapers from early years, but these usually are not indexed and require personal searching. The Library of Congress also has an excellent collection of early American newspapers, if your research brings you to Washington.

'Bubble Boy' reaches 6, shows normal psychological progress

HOUSTON (AP) — Six-year-old David, who has lived his entire life in a germ-free plastic bubble away from the loving hands of his parents, is beginning to ask questions his doctors can't answer.

"He asked when he was about five 'Why does God make some little boys live in plastic bubbles and others don't have to?'" Dr. David A. Freedman said. "But since then he's not talked about being confined very much."

Freedman discussed David's progress and showed a 13-minute videotape of the boy's activites since birth during a session of the 24th annual American Academy of Child Psychiatry at the Shamrock Hilton Hotel.

Freedman said David, known around the world as the "Bubble Boy," continues to enjoy very normal psychological development, despite his confinement.

David, who celebrated his birthday last month, suffers from a rare immunological disorder which has robbed his body of its germ-fighting ability. Exposure to even ordinary air could make him sick and a common cold might kill him, specialists say.

But Freedman, a psychiatry professor at Baylor College of Medicine, says the dark-haired, brown-eyed child amazes even him.

"Today, at six years, he is a bright, verbal, responsive, outgoing youngster who shows no evidence of significant psychological disturbance," Freedman said.

Based on David's experiences, the psychiatrist said the traditional notions about the typical mother-infant relationship apparently are not necessary for healthy psychological development. "That is, up to age six," Freedman stressed. "What later manifestations of missed infantile experience may emerge, only time will tell."

If David should remain in his protected environment until perhaps puberty, Freedman said, then the confinement might place increasing strain on his adaptive capacities.

"As for the present," Freedman said, "we can only say that never to have been touched directly by another person, never to have smelt another's breath, never to have been able to mold and cuddle against another's body, never to have been able to cling and grasp another person, never to have been able to explore beyond the confines of a world limited by plastic walls are all modes of deprivation which do not carry with them the inevitable consequence of deviant emotional development up to age six."

Charismatic Catholics holding three-day rally

By PETER MATTIACE

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The word on the Boardwalk is "Praise the Lord." More than 35,000 cheering and chanting Catholics are holding a giant pep rally for Jesus here this weekend.

The three-day Eastern Genral Conference on the Charismatic Renewal in the Catholic Church opened Friday night and overflowed Convention Hall and resort hotels with Catholicism's new "holy rollers."

The singing, swaying, waving and praying is part of the Church's growing evangelistic movement emphasizing a more personal contact with God.

"I've never been so happy to be with so many kooks in all my life," shouted the Rev. James Ferry of Newark as he hopped from one foot to another between several chants of "Praise the Lord Jesus Christ" and "We Praise You Jesus."

The Rev. Ferry led about 25,000 charismatic Catholics, 527 priests and 12 bishops in one of two simultaneous prayer sessions Friday night. Afterwards, the Catholics danced and sang on the Boardwalk.

Ruth Carter Stapleton, President Carter's sister, is scheduled to speak tonight.

"Thank you, Jesus. Thank you, lord," whispered Sister Miriam Heaton, a social worker from Scranton, Pa., as she stood with her face up, eyes closed and hands outstretched.

Like thousands of others, Sister Miriam came to hear the "testimony" of Bobbie Cavnar, 53, a retired Air Force colonel whose life "was just chaos" before he turned to charismatic Catholicism.

"Just a few short years ago, i was a hard-driving, heavydrinking, very successful businessman," Cavnar said.

Cavnar told a story of "dedicating my life to rapid advancement" — an Air Force fighter pilot and husband at 19, a full colonel at 33, a bomber commander with orders to blow up the Kremlin, father of six children and then a career as a businessman in Dallas, Tex.

"My life was just chaos, but then God touched my life," he said to deafening cheers and "Hallelujahs."

His 40-minute talk included plenty of down-home preaching.

"For the most part, the world is sick, seething with resentment," he told the thousands. "It is on the verge of destruction."

Many dozed through Cavnar's message only to be awakened by an echoing "Praise the Lord" as the Catholics took to song with their hands high, whole sections swaying back and forth.

"Who says nothing's happening in the Catholic Church these days?" said the Most Rev. Peter L. Gerety, archbishop of Newark.

"I hate like the dickens to talk about what the Holy Spirit is going to do because you never know," he said. "But I know it's going to be good."

Jolson stamp poster removed

NEW YORK (AP) — A poster depicting Al Jolson in blackface has been removed from post offices around the country following complaints that it was insulting to blacks.

The poster, distributed to 5,000 major post offices, including eight in New York City, was designed to publicize a commemorative stamp marking the 50 years of talking pictures since Jolson's "The Jazz Singer" first appeared in 1927.

"It wasn't the kind of thing you try to defend or argue with," said Ronald McDowell, manager of stamp development for the U.S. Postal Service. "We found that we had offended people and we responded just that way."

The agency refused to say how many complaints it had received.

Vision was real culprit

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Until she was 16 years old, Luci Johnson Nugent said Friday in Wichita, "stupid" was the word she used most to describe the way she felt about herself.

"Stupid was the most attractive label I could find," the daughter of the late President Lyndon B. Johnson said in an address to the Kansas Association for Children With Learning Disabilities. "By labeling myself as stupid and incompetent, I no longer had to try to succeed. I could give up and find some peace."

The self-disdain and poor self-concept were products of a vision problem that became a learning problem when she started school and grew into a behavior problem when her work brought repeated failure, Mrs. Nugent said.

The Austin, Tex., native told about 190 Kansas professionals and parents of learning-disabled children that her problems ended when a doctor discovered she had a vision problem.

"There is a very big difference between sight and vision," she said. "Sight is a mechanical function of healthy eyeballs. Vision is the ability to interpret that mechanical function."

O'Neil, Wright honored

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — House Speaker Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill and U.S. House Majority Leader Jim Wright alternately heaped praise on each other and on the Democrat-controlled Congress at a meeting of the Wright Congressional Club here Friday night.

The $10 a person dinner at Green Oaks Inn drew more than 750 persons, the largest number to attend a meeting of the Fort Worth congressman's club since President Lyndon Johnson was here in the mid 60s.

It was billed as a tribute to O'Neill, the Massachusetts Democrat who was hailed by Wright as being "one of the greatest leaders of men that I have ever known in my life...One of the three greatest speakers ever to serve in the House."

But from the reaction of the crowd and the applause given him, auny came to honor Wright, who O'Neill said is his "strong right arm...

"I am delighted to be on the (leadership) team of Tip O'Neill and Jim Wright. For the next three years, at least, the team of Tip O'Neill and Jim Wright will be working for the best of your interests."

Sitting at the head table with the two House leaders were six other members of the Texas delegation, Democrats Olin Teague of College Station, Dale Milford of Grand Prairie, Omar Burleson of Anson, Sam Hall of Marshall, Jim Mattox of Dallas and Ray Roberts of McKinney.

Both Wright and O'Neill cited the accomplishments of the 95th Congress in their speeches to the overflow crowd.

Carter in profile: exclusive interview

By SAUL PETT
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the Senate, his energy bill was fast disappearing like a fat fish caught by piranha. After all the trumpets, passage of his Panama Canal treaties, he had admitted that morning, was now "in doubt." He could still hear scattered thunder over the Soviet-American communique on the Mideast. Bert Lance was two weeks gone but not the pain. He, himself, was down in the polls, below 50 percent for the first time.

"Are there bad days when you wonder why you ever wanted the job in the first place?"

"No," said Jimmy Carter, quickly. "That may comeut I don't respond that way. I am at ease. When we have difficulties, I don't withdraw. I am not paranoid.

"I recognize that some of the controversy and difficulties and failures are because of the ambitious nature of some of our undertakings ... There has never been an evening when I went to bed that I didn't look forward to the next day."

"YOU GENERALLY appear so confident. Do you have your moments of self doubt?"

"Oh, sure. As long as I feel there is something I can do about a question, it preys on my mind and causes me some concern. If I do the best I can with something and then fail, I don't have any second thoughts of post-regrets...Some of the limitations I have found in the job are frustrating but I have accepted them.

"I have a substantial lack of experience and knowledge about the history of government here in Washington, the inter-relationship among the agencies, the proper division of authority and responsibility between the Congress and the President that everyone has who hasn't served in Washington longer, who hasn't actually been President. That is a handicap for me and a limitation.

"... So the limitations are human — time and lack of experience in federal government service. They are the ones that I constantly have to be sure that I compensate for."

Eight months in the job, the President made these observations in the sunlit Oval Office during an interview marked by apparent candor, charm and confidence. He discussed his satisfactions and frustrations, the shocks and bruises of the Washington Establishment he once opposed and now heads, "the enigma of Jimmy Carter," the pleasant and unpleasant surprises he found in the White House. People may be surprised by what surprised him. Among other things, he was surprised to find Congress so strongly asserting itself in foreign and defense matters. At any rate, as far as a visitor could detect, Jimmy Carter remains tranquil at the core.

"IF I GET DISTRESSED by things I read — that Jimmy doesn't know what he's doing, that things aren't working right — we sit down and we talk," said Rosalynn Carter. "He just calms all my anxieties because he knows what he is doing, knows what he wants to do and doesn't let day to day criticism frustrate him."

"Does he ever let go, after a particularly rough day, in the privacy of his home?"

"Every once in a while he'll make a remark that's not very nice about something that happened. But most of the time he can put it completely out of his mind. Occasionally, he'll have a drink, but not often. Or he'll say let's see a movie tonight, to forget his problems."

Jimmy Carter, it can now be told, does cuss, not frequently or in depth. Almost never in writing. In one angry memo, he asked what the "h--" happened to a given project. The dashes were his.

Clearly, his most painful time in office came with the resignation of Bert Lance. He fought tears making the announcement at a news conference. Immediately after, he and Mrs. Carter walked alone behind the White House in the gathering dusk.

"It was a sad time for us," she recalled.

"Did he kind of spill over then?"

"If you mean, did he cry, no. No. I've read stories about Jimmy crying when he had a religious conversion or crying like a baby when he lost the governor's race. I've seen him with tears in his eyes but I've never seen him just cry."

LIKE THE CORNER of a closed museum, the Oval Office radiated a particular quiet this day as if none but serene men ever used it. One side is dominated by a big wooden desk, which Jack Kennedy used and under which his little son once materialized magically.

Now it is antiseptically neat. One notices a small glass donkey prancing on a pedestal, the President's schedule for the day, a plaque echoing Harry Truman's feeling about where the buck stops, and a Bible on a clean, white pad. The office is used now for ceremony or visitors.

Jimmy Carter does his real work down the hall in a smaller, more intimate office, where frequently in the darkness before dawn or in the evening after dinner he likes to turn up the stereo real loud — country rock or classics — and plunge into his paper work. He has another stereo back in the residence, but Mrs. Carter does not like for the leader of the Western world to turn it up loud.

On this day he sat in the tall chair near the Oval Office fireplace and the Peale portrait of George Washington. He unbuttoned his dark blue suit jacket and draped one arm over the back of the chair. Up close and in repose, those big blue eyes, which in anger or impatience burn like laser beams, now appeared as contagiously friendly as those of a young minister on a house call.

"WHAT HAS BEEN your greatest single satisfaction in the job so far?"

The President said, after a pause, that on the domestic side it was putting together a "harmonious and highly efficient team" at the Cabinet and sub-cabinet levels. He did not mention any other domestic satisfactions.

On the international side, it is "the burgeoning friendship that presently exists between our country and many nations who were formerly either unfriendly or even enemies.

"I just came back from the United Nations and the Secretary General said that he had never seen such a transformation, that formerly when the General Assembly convened, he knew there was going to be a series of sometimes vicious resolutions ... passed overwhelmingly against the United States. And many of the developing nations in Asia, even in Latin America, almost always in Africa, if the United States took one position, they would take just the opposite."

He mentioned India, which once had "a strong alignment with the Soviet Union" and now "the situation has reversed." He noted that he has communicated "secretly and voluminously" with Morarji Desai, the new prime minister of India.

"CONVERSELY, what has been your greatest disappointment or frustration so far?"

"Well, those frustrations almost always derive from impatience."

"Yours?"

"Mine, yes. When you try to evolve a comprehensive energy policy, when there has been a total absence of even the effort in the past, the conflict in interest groups, some benevolent, some otherwise, have to be reconciled. And then you suffer disappointment because they are not reconciled immediately.

"But I think I won the presidency ... because I was methodical and tenacious. There were many times during the campaign when I was disappointed and impatient, but I am very stubborn and my general method of pursuing a difficult question is different from some others.

"I study it thoroughly, I analyze the options, I set an ultimate goal, which may transcend immediate, practical achievement, and then begin to work as rapidly as I can to reach that ultimate goal, sometimes in stages.

"But I think it helps me ... all my staff .. the rest of the world to know what we want to achieve as a final objective, recognizing that it can't be an instant achievement. Sometimes people say, 'Well, he sets ideals and he compromises them away.' But the compromises are inevitable, they are predictable, and, in my opinion, they are transient."

EDITOR'S NOTE

The man, the smalltown Southerner, the President — how do they come together after eight months in the White House, near the end of the first period of testing?

Jimmy Carter speaks reflectively about himself and his office in an exclusive interview by Saul Pett, who draws on other sources as well for a rare portrait.

".. YOU HAVE FOUND the powers of this office more limited than you expected?"

Jimmy Carter nodded his head instantly, almost like an "amen," and he said, softly:

"Yes. I think I underestimated the inertia or the momentum of the federal bureaucracy, which works both ways. Although it is difficult to change, it has a stability about it and a continuity that probably is advantageous to our country ...

"The authority of the Congress in helping to shape foreign decisions is greater than I had anticipated ... My dealing with the Georgia legislature, although it taught me a great deal about the personal interrelationships with members of Congress, didn't prepare me well for the profound influence that Congress both warrants and asserts in defense and foreign matters.

"I have been surprised at the unexpected influence that we can have on foreign affairs, and I have realized sometimes in an unexpected way that actions or statements that make here do affect the attitude of leaders in places like Malaysia, Singapore, as well as those countries that we think about daily, like Israel or Great Britain and the Soviet Union.

"So, in some ways I have more influence than I thought. In some ways, I have to share more authority than I had anticipated."

THAT LAST SENTENCE puzzles people in Washington. They wonder why he was surprised to find Congress throwing its weight around in foreign affairs.

Congress has been doing that for at least five years, since the disillusion of Vietnam, the war it funded but never declared.

In 1973, over Nixon's veto, it passed the War Powers Act, to limit the power of the President to commit troops abroad. It has been increasingly suspicious of Presidents acting independently in foreign affairs. It dogged Ford and Kissinger almost everywhere they tried to commit us to something abroad, from Angola to Helsinki to the fall of Saigon.

BACK IN THE Oval Office.

"Is doing the job harder than getting it?"

"No," Jimmy Carter said emphatically. "The campaign is backbreaking. Oh, it is just an almost unbelievable trial and ordealand physical strain. You are so alone. You are always exposed and you are always vulnerable and you are always alone.

"Here, you can be private when you choose and you have got a superb support capability and you have got an aura and the prestige of the presidency to protect you when you make small mistakes or sometimes say the wrong word.

"When you are a candidate, it is a catastrophe. When you are President, it is an aberration and you are still President ... It's all the difference in the world."

Had he known what he knows now, Carter said, he could have been "more substantive" in his campaign and "more accurate" in his projections. He recognizes he could not have won without "the people who had to give me their support almost in blind faith."

IS IT POSSIBLE to be President and not worry about the next election or the slim majority by which you won the last one?"

"Oh, I don't think it is possible to avoid it completely. It is very important to me what the American people think of me as President ... very important to the success of my administration ...

"That is inseparable from political realities, either the election of the Congress in 1978 or the presidential election in 1980. But that doesn't prey on my mind. I don't worry about it. We never mention it around here. But I can't deny that it is a factor ..."

HAS THE JOB changed the man? Most of the people around Jimmy Carter, from his wife to his staff, think not. There's one exception, a man who went from Atlanta to Washington with him and now appears to be on the outer edge of his inner circle.

"I think he has become overly cautious," said this member of the President's staff. "There is now a tendency to gravitate toward the politically safe thing. I had thought he had such promise of dramatic initiatives, especially in social legislation. Perhaps the magnitude of the job is such that you're so busy with urgent things you don't get to important things.

"I think he thinks about the next election and the one he almost lost. Certainly, the men closest to him do. They are so certain a balanced budget will be so important politically that other ideas become subservient to that.

It's all disappointing because I know he's a man who likes exciting ideas. A lot of good things get started here but are eaten up by the bureaucracy he brought with him. If no one had ever thought of the Peace Corps before, it might have come up in this White House. But, in being staffed out, it would run into so many cautious, negative comments it would never get off the ground."

ANOTHER MAN thinks the President suffers particularly from a lack of independent advice from people with broader experience than his own, particularly in the White House. This man is not in the White House but holds impeccable credentials as an expert on how it and Washington work.

He admires Carter, he says, for his sharp intelligence, fresh style, honesty, objective and analytical mind and a discipline rare among politicians, including presidents. He can't understand why such a man does not seek the counsel of men wiser than he about the levers of power. He points out that, with the exception of Eisenhower, the previous six Presidents came up the Washington ladder. They knew Congress and much about the Executive Branch.

"Now here is Carter, a smart man who had never even seen the inside of the White House before he was elected. He has been in office long enough now to know what he needs. A President needs to develop an intimate relationship with a small group of informed men who are not working for or beholden to him. Even Johnson, with all his experience here, had his 'wise men.'

"A PRESIDENTS staff spends 80 percent of its time trying to divine the President's mind so they can agree with him. I don't think Carter has anybody who can tell him how previous Presidents handled a problem confronting him. This is not in the history books.

"Maybe it's a case of over confidence or pride or a fear of appearing inadequate, but Carter seems reluctant to call in such people. His cabinet can't help. Cabinet members are busy running big departments. Anyway, a postmaster general can't help on the intricacies of the Mideast."

With better advice, this man said, the President would not have sent his secretary of state off on his first mission to Moscow with two tough proposals that ended in "disaster."

With better advice, he said, the President would have handled the human rights issue with more delicacy.

"You can't beat anybody over the head with it, especially the Soviets. You can talk about human rights, but you should also show some understanding of the complexities involved in other countries and not leave them completely on the defensive."

"MR. PRESIDENT, it has been suggested that you could use more advice from people with past White House experience who do not work for you. How do you react to that?"

"I can't deny it," Jimmy Carter said.

But then he went on to indicate clearly that he is content with the advice he now gets. He said he uses his Cabinet officers "in lieu of White House advisers" more than his immediate predecessors. He mentioned Joseph Califano, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, who served in Johnson's White House, and Defense Secretary Harold Brown and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, who held high positions in those departments in other administrations.

He said he spends "several hours" everyday with Vice President Walter Mondale "and when I have a difficult political decision to make he is the one I always consult." He said he consults freely with Energy Secretary James Schlesinger and Charles Schultze, chairman of the Committee of Economic Advisers, on matters beyond their current responsibilities. Both men served in previous administrations.

"So I think that in this administration, probably as much as any previous (one) that I remember, that we have a diversity of points of view."

That diversity, judging by the men the President mentioned, does not include the opinions of anybody outside his administration. All those he cited are people he could fire or, in the case of the vice president, lose in Outer Mongolia

THE PRESIDENT'S most intimate advisers, it is said in the White House, are Hamilton Jordan, Jody Powell, Frank Moore and, until recently, Bert Lance. Charles Kirbo, an old friend and counselor, comes up from his Atlanta law firm occasionally for informal talks. All these men are Georgians.

Candidate Jimmy Carter, puzzled by people who found him puzzling, said last year, "those who understand the South would understand a major portion of me."

Nearly every new President brings to Washington with him a tight band of loyalists who are nervous about their foes (anybody who opposed them in the campaign) and suspicious of strangers (anybody not for them). Tend to think, Wisper and act inside a circle of wagons.

This is especially true of underdogs who win. It was true of John Kennedy and his Irish Mafia, but Kennedy went on to use men far beyond the city limits of Boston. It is true, too, of the Carter White House with a special addendum. They are the first southerners to occupy the place in more than 100 years.

SOUTHERNERS, southerners will tell you, tend to be especially conscious of the place they came from in traveling north. They tend to think, consciously and unconsciously, that for more than a century, the rest of the country treated them as poor, not too bright relatives.

Earlier this year, Carter was making an appearance in Yazoo City, Miss.

"The public TV operation in Mississippi is incredibly good," remarked an aide, who happens to be a New Yorker.

"Why do you find that incredible?" asked the President.

"I guess you caught me with my southern prejudice showing."

"I guess I did," Carter said with a smile.

One day last summer one of candidate Carter's lieutenants traveled north to solicit the public support of a Washington lawyer who was a power in Democratic politics. The aide returned to Atlanta to announce he had gotten the lawyer's support. The Carter inner circle was not impressed.

"Who needs that has-been?" said one man. "He's part of the Establishment we're against."

The lawyer's name is Clark McAdams Clifford. He is remembered by TV audiences as the pillar of elegance and Washington know-how who was asked by a good ol' boy from Georgia named Bert Lance to represent him before his Senate inquisitors.

"HAVE YOU, in the job, found it more difficult than you might have expected to hold to your pledge never to lie to the American people?"

"No," he said, evenly and without pause. "I don't believe that I or Jody Powell (his press secretary) have ever been tempted to dissemble or tovlead or to lie to the American people. I think it is a tremendous achievement that Jody, who has to have an hour or hour and a half every day, sometimes answering unanticipated questions, has had his statements and my positions confirmed.

"There is always a fear ... that we might inadvertently say something based on ignorance that later proves untrue. But if I ever thought that Jody would make a misleading statement to the press, I would discharge him instantly. And I have not found that to be a problem."

"Are there public misconceptions about you that you would like to see corrected if you could?"

The President paused.

"Well, I have never understood, even during the first days of the campaign, how anyone could look on me as a person of mystery ... My own character and position on issues have been presented to the public as best we can without distortion, without any effort to mislead ... Had I been in Congress for ... years, there would be a much clearer understanding of what I am, what I stand for. But I don't know what I can do about it.

"... I don't understand how anyone could claim I am enigmatic."

Education grows more law-related

By SUE SHELLENBARGER
Associated Press Writer

High school students in St. Paul, Minn., wanted to eliminate the stench from nearby factories.

Students at Woodrow Wilson High School in Washington, D.C., wanted a shopkeeper to remove a sign barring young people from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

"We want to teach kids how to deal in a society that's increasingly bureaucratic. Whether we like it or not, that's the way it is," says high school teacher Joe Nathan of St. Paul.

Nathan and his students at the St. Paul Open School filed complaints against local companies and achieved installation of hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of pollution control equipment, although Nathan says the air "still doesn't smell terrific."

The students in Washington, D.C., knew they could sue the shopkeeper for violating age discrimination provisions of a human rights ordinance. The sign came down after a brief talk on the law.

Some $15 million has been spent on law-related education in the past 20 years, according to the American Bar Association. Most of the money has come through grants from the federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

"Being a director of law-related education is like selling motherhood and apple pie," says a state project director. "The conservatives love you because you're teaching law and order, and the liberals love you because you're teaching constitutional rights."

Police in Fort Worth attend teacher training seminars; judges in Rockford open their courtrooms early to talk to students; legislators in New Jersey spend hours talking with students, and officials in Des Plaines, Ill., grant three-week jobs in village government to a summer class of "clinical government" students.

Dusting field with pesticide results in lawsuit

CHICAGO (AP) — A suit filed in federal court contends that spraying a dangerous pesticide on fields filled with migrant workers is just as much battery as a punch in the nose.

The Illinois Migrant Council filed suit in U.S. District Court last week against Stokely-Van Camp, as well as a crop-dusting airline and Union Carbide, which manufactured the pesticide.

Details of the suit were released Thursday. It alleges that about 100 workers were in Stokely's Western Illinois asparagus fields last May when a crop dusting plane sprayed the pesticide Sevin without warning. An attorney for the Migrant Council says Sevin is suspected of possibly promoting cancer in those exposed to it.

The plane "flew directly overhead," said an affidavit by one of the workers in the field. "We thought it would hit the crew leader's truck if it went lower. We could see the pilot...It (the spray) fell on our faces like a mist."

Attorney Thomas Hecht said that outside of isolated California cases settled out of court, the suit may be the first of its kind.

"This practice must affect thousands of migrant farm workers in Illinois alone," Hecht said in an interview. "We started to dig into this and found incident after incident going through the camps. It is a surprisingly common phenomenon. People standing in the fields while planes fly over and drop Sevin."

The suit was filed as a classaction but only four plaintiffs were willing to use their names as plaintiffs, Hecht said, "because there has been a history of retaliation in migrant farm worker communities.

"People would rather live with certain indignities than forcefully insure their rights and possibly lose their jobs," he said.

The identified plaintiffs are Jose Cipriano and Jerry Y. Contreras, both permanent residents of San Antonio, Tex., and Ofelia Vegas and Frank Leyva of Rochelle, Ill. All are United States citizens, the suit said.

Specifically, the suit said the spraying of the fields on May 10 and 11 in Rochelle violated federal laws and regulations of the Environmental Protection Agency for the use of pesticides.

The suit said a label on Sevin warns handlers: "Harmful if inhaled or swallowed. Avoid breathing of dust or spray. Do not take internally. Avoid contact with skin and eyes. Wear regular long-sleeved work clothing. Change to clean clothing daily. Wash hands and face before eating. Wash thoroughly after handling."

Somalian blasts Russia

By ROGER MANN
Special to the Washington Post

MOGADISHU, Somalia — Somali President Siad Barre Friday made his most scathing attack to date on his former Russian allies, intensifying speculation that he is anxious to turn to the West for friendship, cooperation and military hardware to help Somalia win the Ogaden war with Ethiopia.

Smiling, kissing schoolgirls and looking relaxed and confident at the Revolution Day celebrations which marked the 8th anniversary of the military coup which brought him to power, the Somali president showed no signs of strain from this week's hijack drama in which he played a crucial role in savings the lives of 86 hostages.

After accusing neighboring Ethiopia of opportunistically "utilizing socialist and revolutionary slogans" to perpetuate a black colonial empire, Siad Barre said, "it is indeed sad to witness the U.S.S.R., Cuba and some other socialist states being taken in by such intrigues."

However, he did not deny that Somalia itself is directly involved in the Ogaden war, a hollow untruth which is still the official government line. Instead, Siad Barre said merely that the people of the Somali republic and Western Somalia — the name now given to the Ogaden — constitute the same nation, but that the war is "essentially between the liberation front and the Addis Ababa regime."

He lashed out at the Soviets for pouring huge quantities of sophisticated tanks, jets and rockets into Ethiopia and castigated Cuba for "playing a dangerously adventurist role in the Horn of Africa today," by sending soldiers to fight "on the side of the oppressor."

Man says Biko died in beating

By DAVID NOBLE
The Manchester Guardian

STOCKHOLM — The Stockholm evening newspaper Expressen says it has clear evidence that black South African leader Steve Biko was murdered by white security police.

An Expressen journalist, Eric Sjoqvist, wrote in an article published by the paper that during a recent visit to South Africa he was shown parts of the still unpublished autopsy report on the 30-year-old black leader. He declined to reveal who showed him the report.

However, Sjoqvist told The Guardian that after reading the autopsy report "my conclusions were that Biko was beaten to death. There is no way in which he could have inflected the wounds he suffered on himself."

In his article, the Swedish journalist described the type of wounds the doctors carrying out the autopsy found on Biko's body. He said that Biko had a severe wound on the temple above his right eye, two broken ribs and numerous bruises, abrasions, cuts or sores across his body.

The wounds were situated on parts of the body that ruled out any chance of them having been self-imposed or caused by a fall, Sjoquist reported.

Biko, who was picked up by South African security police in King Williamstown after traveling to Capetown in defiance of a travel ban, was taken to Pretoria Central Prison on Sept. 12. According to the Swedish journalist, he was most probably dead on arrival or died shortly afterwards.

OPEN HOUSE

Right now, people are moving into homes they once thought they couldn't afford. And this special kind of open house will show you how you can too. Come see one of our custom homes before it's all finished. Examine a unique, money-saving concept called the Finish-It-Yourself House!™

Finishing a custom-built Capp home yourself enables you to save thousands, compared to the cost of having a general contractor build the same house on your lot. You'll see how a homebuyer can custom design his dream home . . . and work step-by-step with Capp in making his dream come true.

Because the house you'll see is unfinished and ready for its owner to complete, you'll get a chance to see Capp custom-built quality close up. At this open house, nothing is hidden. And you'll learn how you can finish your home with materials and instructions we provide. Please come. You owe it to yourself.

DATE: Saturday and Sunday, October 22 and 23
TIME: Noon to 6:00 p.m.
DIRECTIONS: From Big Spring-Lamesa Highway No. 349 go east on 868 to County Road No. 60E about 2 miles to Irvin Street and turn south. Watch for Capp Homes Open House signs.

Midland wood carver Dean Flatt finds release of tensions and artistic expression in his carving. He said wood carvers in the U.S. range in age from 5 to 102.

Flatt started carving about seven years ago, when he was in college.

"One of my professors at school did carving. He noticed I was a little tense all the tine and recommended this," Flatt said.

So Flatt bought himself an inexpensive box of knives and started carving. "A couple of boxes of Band-Aids later, I came out with something that closely resembled a penguin."

Carving and whittling are different techniques, Flatt said. Whittling involves using a straight knife and carving involves using curved tools.

The most time-consuming part of most carvings is the design, Flatt said. "I guess I'll spend a month's time putting together a design," Flatt enjoys doing caricatures most, and prefers to put charcters in a setting. For instrance, when Flatt's brother bought an appaloosa horse, he designed a scene with a man from "Honest Sam's Used Horses" painting spots on a horse. Before he actually starts carving; Flatt will sharpen his knife. It takes from 30 minutes to 8 hours to sharpen an "edge a little sharper than a razor." He said one of the biggest problems beginners face is trying to use knives without a sharp enough edge.

Flatt said it isn't difficult to carve. "I have no talent whatsoever," he said, although he has a workshop full of carvings to belie his words.

Applying a finish is the last step in the process. There are several "old tricks" which make beautiful finishes, Flatt said.

Flatt found that soaking a plug of chewing tobacco in water for about a week yields a lovely light brown stain which he uses for some of his bird carvings.

Flatt doesn't sell his carvings, but rather gives them to family and friends. But the price of the woods he likes to use has increased so much that he thinks he may have to start asking for the price of the wood.

Finding wood sometimes is difficult, he said.

The best kind of wood for most purposes is basswood. "That's what the master carvers use" he said. However, the wood is sold primarily by lumber yards in Wisconsin and Michigan.

Flatt is organizing a club for area wood carvers, to be called the Oil Patch Carvers. The group's first meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 1 in the Texas Electric Company Reddy Room.

Flatt hopes the group will give area carvers a chance to exchange ideas, carving patterns and sources of woods. He also wants the group to help beginning carvers.

The most time-consuming part of most carvings is the design, Flatt said. He said one of the biggest problems beginners face is trying to use knives without a sharp enough edge.

Flatt said it isn't difficult to carve. "I have no talent whatsoever," he said, although he has a workshop full of carvings to belie his words.

Applying a finish is the last step in the process. There are several "old tricks" which make beautiful finishes, Flatt said.

Flatt hopes the group will give area carvers a chance to exchange ideas, carving patterns and sources of woods. He also wants the group to help beginning carvers.

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Your recent answer to the 17-year-old girl who wanted to know what was wrong with premarital sex was good, but incomplete. Here is how I would have answered:

Dear Speaking For Teens:

There are several reasons other than fear of V.D. and pregnancy for saying no, even if your moral code or religious beliefs provide you with insufficient guidance. Among them:

1. If you ever marry, and most people still do, remaining "pure" beforehand will give your spouse less reason to be distrustful of you. This is bound to lead to a healthier and happier relationship.

2. Sex between unmarried people usually results in guilt feelings and loss of self-esteem.

3. If you're really in love, sex isn't needed to have a fulfilling relationship. And if you should discover that you aren't really in love, having had sex will make breaking up all the more painful.

4. Most people who seek premarital sex are concerned more with their own gratification than with the needs of the other person. (If that's the case, it's not love.) Why let someone use you?

Like many other good things in life, sex is too often misused.—SINGLE SEATTLE FELLOW

DEAR FELLOW: If you practice what you preach, you'll make a wonderful catch for a girl who's saving herself for marriage and expects the same of her husband.

DEAR ABBY: This may sound trivial to you, but it has caused quite a few arguments at our house.

I have been raised to clean up after myself, but my husband hasn't. His mother did everything for him, including washing his hair. The big fight is over his leaving the bathtub dirty for me to clean. Abby, I find this revolting, but if he refuses to do it, then I have to, which is the way it's been lately. I agreed to wash out the tub after him until we hear from you.

He said he would go by your decision. He says if I loved him, I'd do it. I say if he loved ME, he wouldn't ask me to. Who is right?—HIS WIFE

DEAR WIFE: The word from here is that every man, woman and child able to bathe without assistance should clean the tub after himself.

DEAR ABBY: Someone told me that girls who wear glasses look more intelligent than girls who don't wear glasses. Do you think this is true?—QUESTIONING

DEAR QUESTIONING: Possibly. But it's only an optical illusion.

Women play games standing in stadium

By ERMA BOMBECK

I wouldn't have put it in quite that way. In fact, I have experienced greater "emotional highs" getting a piece of dental floss caught in my teeth.

Psychologically speaking, men have a lot of reasons for enjoying a football game. They act out their repressions, live vicariously through their heroes, experience renewal and feel like "one of the gang."

To me, it's a two-and-a-half hour sedative. The way I see it, a football stadium is the one spot left in the world where a fan can enjoy diplomatic immunity from (a) being arrested for being drunk and disorderly (b) charged for making obscene calls to the players and coaches and (c) committed to a home for standing on a seat in the driving rain, waving a thermos in the air and shouting, "You're getting on my nerves, Ricky!"

Happily, I have learned to busy myself at games and try to have a good time in spite of all the noise and those little knee-grabbers running up and down the field. Among some of my more provocative games are:

The Fashion Alphabet: Two women alternate with naming a style worn by another woman in the stands from Accordian pleats and Blouses to Yokes and Zippers. The first woman who can't come up with a style for the letter has to be penalized by watching the game until a first down is made.

The Hot Dog, Cola Caper: Disguising your voice, you yell down an order of a hot dog and cola to the vender at the end of the row. Without an eye leaving the game, people will pass it down an entire row of 138 people. When it gets to the end, pass it back to the next row and see how many rows that hot dog and cola will cover.

Restroom Touchdown: Using strategy, experience, and perseverance, see if you can effectively get a play to work that actually gets you into the restroom before the game is over.

Stump The Fans In The Stands: Establish a pool of what it is the band is trying to spell out on the playing field. (I once correctly identified a tuba player as an anchovy on a field of pizza and won $8.)

Woman's intolerance to football is not going to kill the game. Football . . . like head colds and Doris Day will be with us forever.

But an emotional high? As I told my husband when he announced the game was going into overtime and I began to cry, "This is as emotional as I get!"

THE VISIBLE WOMAN

Halloween rekindles memories of witchcraft

By JANET LOWE
Copley News Service

Halloween is here again...time for goblins, ghouls and witches. It's time to don sheets and masks and pretend that scary things walk the night, and that witches fly on broomsticks across a full moon.

The witch idea for most of us is a joking matter. We laugh and watch a nose-twitching, mischievous television witch, and love to be frightened by tales of transfigurations and exorcisms. But it hasn't always been that way, and even for some religious sects today, witches and witchcraft are nothing to laugh about.

If witchcraft hasn't been particularly funny, the accusation of being a witch was even less hilarious.

In Salem, Mass., six men and 13 women died for witchcrafting, and though that was a dark blot on American history, it was a mere episode compared to the carnage in medieval Europe. On a single day in 1641, in Molna, Sweden, 23 adults and 15 children were burned at the stake. Nine hundred perished at Bamburg between 1609 and 1633. For 10 years, the Duchy of Brunswick witnessed an average of 10 executions a day. The French Judge Nicholas Remy personally sentenced 900 witches to be burned at the stake. Some city gates became charred forests and other towns turned witch burning into a carnival-like event.

Confessions were wrung out by the cruelest imaginable tortures. One inquisitor boasted that he could make the Pope himself confess to witchcraft if he could only reach him.

In England, where torture was illegal, the legal tests were enough to cause some despairing women to destroy themselves when they heard they had been accused.

While witch hunts did include men and children as well as women, by far the most frequent victims were female.

Thomas Szasz, who has written extensively about the social interactions of oppressors and the oppressed, suggests that many explanations of the witch theory make "the terrifyingly simple but all important fact of man's inhumanity to man (and I add, to women)...the image of the knight in armor, the symbol of mobility, and of the black witch as a symbol of depravity embodies the sexocidal hatred of women...(for the) knight is always male (and the) witch is always female in all the fairy tales and mythologies of (medieval and modern) times."

It seems incredible that a deepseated, religiously based hatred of women could reach such extreme proportions, yet the information available seems to lend strength to the proposition.

Not only were the supposed Salem witches predominately female, but most were women who did not conform to the accepted standards of femininity.

The Christian church didn't easily stamp out the practices and superstitions of pagan times. Though demon lore and religious Fanatics describe the devil as the Prince of Evil and Consort with witches, the Bible doesn't describe his sins clearly, except that he was guilty of pride and a desire to be an equal with God.

He changed her mind

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)—Fourteen years ago, Mrs. Kaye Keiser got a job as a part-time secretary in Russell, Ky. Today she is a top woman stunt driver, co-owner of an all-woman thrill-driving team and recognized across the country as a performer in tire commercials.

It all happened because the man with whom she got the secretarial job owned the all-woman stunt driving show and persuaded her to exchange typing for driving.

"He really talked me into it," she said while here on a promotional tour.

The show travels to country fairs in many states. The crowds usually are large, she said, "because people want to see if a girl really can do these things."

By JOHN HART
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — "Sometimes I come home from work convinced I am the most hated person in the world," says Mary Brown, a meter maid.

"I have to ask my daughter to tell me she loves me — then everything is all right again."

But she is convinced that serving as a meter maid is the best job in the world.

"It's a super job and a great department," she says of the Harbor Division, Los Angeles Police Department. "Every day is different, and I love the town.

"It is true that on some days I haven't had enough sleep and everyone gets to me. But that's probably my own fault. I may get depressed, but I am naturally a happy person and I have too many things going for me for it to last.

"I shake it off, and pretty soon I am my old, ornery self again."

When she first started the job three years ago, she admits she probably wrote too many tickets, but her new boss said to her, "A new broom sweeps clean..."

"Once I got to know the merchants and the people, I think I moderated," she said.

It seems she experienced most of the irate people early. "I didn't know how to handle it. I would go home, call my father and talk to him.

"At first I tried to explain my position to people, to tell them why I gave them the ticket, but that only made them madder. Finally I realized that if no amount of explanation is going to do any good, I should just leave.

"Once a ticket has been started, it has to be completed, and it almost takes an act of God to cancel it.

"It is actually not our job to write tickets. We just try to keep traffic moving. I try to help without infringing on other people's rights. People actually write themselves a ticket when they are in violation.

"Contrary to popular opinion, it is not true that we start writing tickets before our feet hit the ground. We look at the meter, check for notes or evidence of a disabled vehicle.

"I think it's true that when anybody starts a new job, they tend to be more exacting. After awhile, you learn.

"Once I almost wrote up a woman who was parked in the alley. I found out she was helping a disabled lady get to the car to do her shopping.

"The worst problem I have — and it's sort of funny — is having dogs chase me. I either speed up or grab my chalk stick or else stop."

Inspecting meat turns expensive

By ROBERT ESTILL
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — The meat and poultry business is not a "chicken-feed" operation — and neither is the program to police it to insure that customers get a wholesome product.

A leaner inspection program which could save the federal government an estimated $210 milion through 1985 has been recommended to the U.S. Department of Agriculture by Booz, Allen and Hamilton, Inc., a management-consulting firm.

In 1976, the average person in this country ate 52.5 pounds of chicken and turkey, and 193.7 pounds of red meats (128.8 pounds of beef, four pounds of veal, 58 pounds of pork and 1.9 pounds of lamb and mutton!) Attempting to insure those products leave slaughterhouses and processing plants in a wholesome condition is a large and expensive proposition. Last year, 3.5 billion birds, 119 million meat animals and 73 billion pounds of processed meat and poulty products were inspected. Nearly 39 million birds, 406,000 meat animals and 68 million pounds of processed products were condemned. That inspection program cost nearly $258 million, an expense shared by the federal and state governments and private industry.

The federal share amounts to nearly 80 per cent, a proportion that has increased almost 4 per cent over the last five years. This is due largely to the influx of smaller plants into the federal system as several states have discontinued funding their own programs, according to the consultants.

Industry reimbursed the federal government about $26 million, or about 10 per cent of the total cost.

With the exception of state grants, almost 90 per cent of the meat and poultry inspection costs were for salaries and benefits.

The Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service has about 9,000 inspectors and veterinarians assigned to approximately 6,800 meat and poultry slaughtering and processing plants in the nation.

In a three-volume, 700-page study done at a cost of $371,848, the management consulting firm recommended a number of steps intended to shift more of the burden to industry and reduce federal costs.

These include:

— Requiring all meat and poultry processing plants to install a quality-control system through which USDA inspectors could better monitor production; the system would be coupled with frequent testing of samples and progressively severe economic penalties for violations.

— Using a "bi-level" system for inspecting dead poultry; USDA inspectors would continue bird-by-bird inspections of "bad" lots (those with high incidence of disease), but would spot-check "good" lots which would be examined by plant employes.

— Providing a more flexible inspection system for live animals; healthy animals would go directly to slaughter, but the USDA would inspect questionable animals.

Smock pattern hard to locate

By ERICA WILSON

DEAR ERICA: I read your article on smocking and have been searching for a formula for cutting a smocked dress. I know those shepherds didn't use Vogue patterns! How are the sleeves put in? There must be some simple patterns that can be used for both children and adults—a kimono sleeve or perhaps a raglan.—Jean Block, Elkhorn, Wis.

DEAR JEAN: The traditional smock is practically the simplest shape there is—each piece is square or rectangular, with no curves whatsoever. The sleeves are joined with a seam at the underarm, and where it meets the seam of the garment, you can let in a square of fabric, setting it in diamond-fashion at the underarm. This makes for easy movement and won't pull or strain. The complete scale of measurements for smocking will be discussed at length in my smocking book, due out in the next couple of months. But if you're resourceful, there's no reason why you can't take scissors in hand and get started right away.

DEAR MS. WILSON: About three years ago I spent two months in Budapest, Hungary, and in some of the private homes I saw beautiful needlework on tablecloths, drapes and doilies. The stitches and patterns were very distinctive and different from any I'd ever seen. I couldn't speak the difficult language so was unable to locate patterns or instructions.

One girl later sent me a pillow cover in exquisite stitches, but as an amateur needleworker, I don't dare attempt to copy the involved embroidery. My question is: Do you know of any source of supply for instructions and stitches?—Mrs. Myrna Morones, White Salmon, Wis.

DEAR MYRNA: There are a whole series of books put out by DMC on traditional needlework of various countries—Hungarian stitchery among them. There are lovely colored illustrations and great geometric patterns to get you going.

We can't seem to keep enough of these ethnic stitchery books in stock in our Southhamptom, N.Y., store—for some reason this form is the absolute rage. I can't decide if its for clothes or tablecloths, but the two seem interchangeable. As I've mentioned before, everyone's going about wearing dresses made from hand embroidered table linen so why not show off your lovely "Budapest" embroidery on a magnificent blouse right away!?

DEAR ERICA: Enjoyed your recent article on "Stamp Collecting with a Needle," suggesting different stamps as inspiration for needlework. Thought you and your readers might be interested in knowing that the post office beat you to it—the official Christmas Stamp for 1973 was a needlepoint design of a Christmas tree.—Florence Woodworth, Syracuse, N.Y.

STITCHING WITCHERY

Plaid pointers add eye appeal

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

A prize should go to Hazel E. Robertson, Libby, Mont., for being our most loyal fan. Hazel hangs in there even when she doesn't know why.

Dear Betty: Recently you had an article about plaids. You stated that a hem should not be set on a solid line of the plaid, but should fall partially between solid color lines. I was all set to hem a jacket. I had it pinned—as you might know—along a nice solid plaid line. When I read your article, I immediately redid the hem without knowing why it should be done this way. But I have never stopped being curious. I'll never be satisfied until I know why!

Talk about loyal! Hazel, you are a gem. To look their greatest, plaids must be treated with a certain amount of respect. They must be matched properly, located in the right places, and used with the right pattern. Also, hemlines of pants, jackets, coats and dresses must fall at an eye-appealing level.

And that's the "why," Hazel. Eye appeal. When you turn up a hem on a solid, dominant line, the eye is drawn to that line, causing the garment to appear "cut off." This line will exaggerate hip line, ankles and knees! Also — what if your hemline has a slight curve to it? Hemming on a solid line causes the eye to jump up and down as it tries to follow the curve. If the hem falls somewhere (not exactly halfway!) between two dominant lines, the eye travels over the entire garment for a much more pleasing effect.

As you have guessed by now, this does require a bit of preplanning when laying out your pattern.

Other plaid points: Do not place a dominant, horizontal plaid line directly over the bustline. Do not place a dominant, horizontal line along the hip line. Place center front and center back of garment along a plaid design, not a plaid line.

QUICK STITCH: From Patty Stanford, Alamo, Tex.: "I use colorful empty egg cartons for holding my bobbins. That way, I can store the matching thread with the bobbin. Also, the different shades of a color may be placed together so, in a glance, I can pick the shade I need."

Company builds log cabins to your order

NORTH FORK, Calif. (AP) — Using old tools and methods, a small company here offers to build you the log cabin of your dreams.

With long-handled bark spuds, trimming adzes and axes, and bowing to modern technology long enough to accept the chainsaw, employes of the company, an offshoot of a wilderness survival school, will furnish a prospective homeowner with a log cabin of any size and shape.

John Somverville, an ex-Marine and head of both the company and school, said the work is done predominantly by hand because to date they have found no better way.

Selected trees are cut and the logs hauled to the location where they are peeled, dried and then hand-notched.

Hairstylist reports views

Koch reports that longer hair reminiscent of the 1930s and 1940s predominated the hair look for fall and winter. The meeting was attended by some 50,000 hairstylists from throughout the world. He also said the natural, well-groomed look is popular, and that crimping of the hair is "in" again. He said permaments are used for a fuller appearance, and hair coloring trends are for natural shades.

Walls enliven color scheme

By ADELE FAULKNER
Copley News Service

A design based on a single color scheme can do much to create a feeling of spaciousness in a small apartment.

The idea is a good one, but the trick comes in trying to pull it off effectively without having the apartment interior be monotonous or boring.

Once one predominant color is selected, there is no need to have both the carpeting and walls be the same. The use of the same colored carpeting throughout the entire apartment ties it together.

The wall coverings then provide the variety and interest to make the apartment come alive.

The use of a different treatment on one or two key walls provides the contrast needed to provide visual interest.

For example, let's take an apartment with plain white walls and white carpeting throughout. For the entry leading into a study or second bedroom, you might consider a wallpaper with a charcoal, brown and gray pattern on a white background.

In the study, the same colors as featured in the wall covering can be repeated in the upholstery of a sofa or chairs. At the windows, consider a black mesh cafe curtain with draw draperies of black, orange and red on a white background.

In the living room, the same principle applies. The upholstery could feature a yellow-and-white check. For visual interest, the charcoal gray from the entryway wallpaper could be repeated on one of the walls of the living room, and mirror treatment used on another.

The window treatment for such a room could pick up the yellow again in the draperies in a pattern with shades of yellow-green on a white background with a small amount of yellow-orange for accent.

Since yellow and gold colors dominate in the living room, the bedroom might incorporate them as a secondary color featuring blue as the primary color. The blue and yellow can be picked up again in the draperies and patterned bedspread.

Sonoma Vineyard increases sales

By TOM GABLE
Copley News Service

Sonoma Vineyards, which started out marketing wine with customized labels through the mails under the Windsor label, has grown up.

After surviving near financial disaster from the purchase and development of too many acres of vineyards at a time when the economy was turning sour, Sonoma has not only broadened its distribution into major markets throughout the country, it is turning out wines of sound dollar value, plus an occasional star.

Sonoma and its wine maker, Rodney Strong, started gaining attention last year with Chardonnay aged in French oak barrels and selling for just over $3 a fifth.

"We decided it was worthy of a special bottling, rather than blending in with Cabernet Sauvignon fron other vineyards."

The grapes were harvested Nov. 3, with good sugar and acid content. After crushing and fermentation, it ended up at 13.7 per cent alcohol. Strong then put it into 50-gallon French oak barrels for about two years of aging. The wine was bottled earlier this year and is only now starting to reach major markets with a retail price of about $6.50, one of the best bargains in good Cabernet in years.

The wine is deep in color with a very rich, herbaceous aroma and bouquet that is undeniably Cabernet Sauvignon from California. The wine is so fat with fruit it is almost soft on the palate, despite its youth, and the there is long, lingering aftertaste reminiscent of black currants, berries and a touch of oak.

Women prefer giving to receiving

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

After spending so many years giving of themselves to family and friends, one would think it was time for them to sit back and be on the receiving end.

But, the women in a local nursing home are busy working on things to give to others. This time, it is Halloween baskets that will go to the children at La Florecita Day Nursery.

The women said they were sitting around talking and came up with the idea for the baskets. "You have Christmas baskets and Easter baskets, why not Halloween baskets?" one woman reasoned.

Volunteers at the home put the idea into action by collecting empty soft butter containers of all shapes, sizes and colors. Holes were punched into the sides and residents went to work on decorating them.

Each woman decorated the baskets in her own special style. Some have orange and black pipe cleaners twisted to form handles, others use yarn. They drew and cut out ghosts, pumpkins, black cats, witches and bats for the sides of the baskets.

The 30 baskets will be delivered tomorrow. "Those li'l ol' kids will be so proud of them," Irene Ford said.

The projects, the women said, helps them to keep in touch with the community. Earlier this year they made Indian dolls and canoes which were taken to Midland Cerebral Palsy Center.

"I always have liked to make things like that," one woman said. "I really do like making these for other kids."

But, most of all, the women enjoy giving, a feeling voiced by Alice Yates. "I would rather give anytime than to receive."

Bush expresses views of China to gardeners

He related his experiences and observations made during a six-week visit in Peking, China in 1975 while his father, Geroge H. W. Bush, was head of the U.S. Liaison Office there.

He discussed customs and attitudes of the Chinese people, and said he felt their interest in him was more a result of curiosity than hostility. He described the dress and housing, and added that, even with a lack of luxury items, the people appear to be well-fed because agricultural production is plentiful.

During a discussion of China's economic situation, Bush explained that people are told what and how much to produce and that wages are frozen. The most common means of transportation is the bicycle even though an occasional automobile is seen.

Co-hostesses were Mrs. M. R. Stipp and Mrs. R. F. Mathews.

Attending as guests were Sharon Goodwin, Mrs. Louis Beique, Mrs. J. C. Carter and Mrs. Robert Southerland.

Alter darts in patterns

COLLEGE STATION —Dress and shirt patterns without bust darts can cause fitting problems. For full busts, alter patterns by adding darts or other fullness, says Margret Ann Vanderpoorten, clothing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Adding a dart or other allowance for bust fullness will make the pattern fit better. The added dart may extend from either the side seam or the shoulder seam toward the tip of the bust, the specialist says.

For a guide in placing darts and gathers, use a pattern that fits. Be sure the pattern is still perfectly flat after any changes are made so it will be accurate.

First ladies created

KENMORE, N.Y. (AP)—Mrs. Dudley Field Jr., the mother of four, has created 42 dolls. Each of the 8-to-10-inch figures represents one of the nation's first ladies, and each is attired in an authentic-as-possible copy of the finery worn to the inaugural ball.

Mrs. Field Jr., a member of a local doll club, explained that the number of the ladies was bigger than the number of the presidents because some of the bachelor or widowed presidents asked two, not one, female members of the family to do the inaugural ball honors.

Club sponsors fourth festival

Midland Garden Club held its fourth annual food and plant festival in the home of Mrs. John Grimland, 1605 Country Club Drive.

Mrs. Harold Holt presided at the coffee table. Guests, including Mrs. Sam Griffin of Chickasha, Okla., were welcomed by Mrs. Robert German.

On the patio, hanging baskets, house plants and handmade pottery containers were sold by Mrs. L. H. Humphrey.

The Midland Garden Club supports District I, Texas Garden Clubs, Inc., by contributing to the scholarship fund for an horticulture student at Texas Tech University. The club also contributes a money tree at Christmas for patients in the Big Spring State Hospital. They also furnish flower arrangements in October and May for Trinity Towers.

On Arbor Day, the club will plant 10 Indian hawthorn trees at the greenhouse of Lancaster Garden Center-Museum of the Southwest, and a red oak at the Alamo YMCA's new building.

A workshop on plant terrariums will be held at 9:30 a.m. Nov. 3 in the Children's Room of Theatre Centre. Willie Bateman, horticulturist, will present the program.

Women needed for class

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP)—The University of Texas at Arlington is sponsoring a tuition-paid update for female "dropouts" in science who want to re-enter the profession.

Under a $100,000 National Science Foundation grant, Dr. Dorothy Chestnut and Ann Benham now are working on the Women in Science Facilitation Project, seeking women with bachelor's or master's degrees who have been professionally inactive from two to 15 years.

Dr. Chestnut, assistant dean of UT-A's College of Science, is a mathematician who's never been out of the field for more than a year. She didn't have the re-entry problem faced by Mrs. Benham, who took a 12-year "leave of absence to have four children."

New England egg man, despite 41 years at same job, unchanged

EDITOR'S NOTE — He comes from the days when kids were needed on the farm. From the days when a man didn't need much to get by. The world's changed, what with credit cards, fast cars and fancy gadgets. His world is the same. But he's hardly had time to notice.

By GEORGE ESPER

NORTHFIELD, N.H. (AP) — Since he was 14, Bert Southwick has delivered eggs and vegetables from his family's farm to his neighbors in the villages of Northfield and Tilton, first by bicycle and later by horse-drawn wagon.

"When school closed last spring, I finished 41 years," Bert says.

It's all there. The green and yellow milk wagon with red wheels and black roof, pulled by Misty, the 8-year-old pinto mare. At Misty's side is her colt, nursing.

Bert was born a farmer. His father, Carmen Southwick — he died nine years ago — bought the 300-acre farm on Zion Hill Road in Northfield in 1916. Bert still lives there in the 10-room house with his mother Vida, 83, who cooks on a wood-burning stove, and his sister Edna, 54.

He's a shy man. He never went beyond eighth grade. "He was more interested in getting home on the farm," his mother says.

"It all has to be done to keep it rolling, so there ain't much to dislike about it," Bert says. "You just have to do it to make it go."

Bert Southwick is one of the last of the old-time peddlers, a simple, hard-working man. He's a living portrait from the turn of the century. Children flocking around his wagon. Dogs barking at Misty and the colt. The tree-lined country lanes. The river that divides Northfield and Tilton.

Bert recalls the days when he started.

"Of course, a lot of people raised little gardens and had a few chickens and took stuff around some. Because the stuff got so expensive, grain and things got so expensive, why they just gradually kept dropping out."

And moving on, making money to buy things they need instead of growing their own. Things like cars, something Bert has never owned. Never driven, either.

"Cars are all right if they fit your job but they don't fit this job. There's stopping and starting. If we run a motor vehicle we'd have to have a special one. We wouldn't use it enough to have it work good. The license and insurance would cost more than we'd get out of it, so there'd be no point in us doing it if we had to do it with a car."

"There's only two or three of the first customers that I had that I still take eggs to. I'm selling eggs to the grandchildren of people I sold to when I started. And they're grown up now. There's children that weren't born when I started that have children old enough to leave school now."

Bert usually is up by dawn.

"It varies a little. Schooltime, sometimes we have some school kids helping and we work late at night so we don't get started so early in the morning like some people. We're most always going before six. By six. We finish when we get done so we can quit."

He has only one fulltime hand working for him.

"My sister works outside in an office. My mother, she does a little something most of the time, tending the eggs, the garden, the housework."

Bert has 500 hens right now. He lost 500 in a fire in his barn last June. He has 30 horses — some of them boarders, others he rents to an amusement park in summer — 25 cattle, three pigs.

He raises almost all of his hay on 100 acres. His biggest crop is potatoes, grown on two acres.

"We sell most anything we raise more than enough to eat — beets, carrots, tomatoes. We also sell wood that we cut ourselves."

Has Bert Southwick ever dreamed of bigger things?

"I guess I growed up that way. And we haven't — we've been busy enough so there hasn't been time off to go to anything else anyhow without giving it up. So we just haven't given it up. So we're still at it.

"It's part of our income. We have to have money to pay our bills with so it's just part of our job. We started with a bicycle to get stuff, and in order to get something for it, we have to sell part of it."

Bert is clearly one of a vanishing breed. Have modern technology and the modern temper passed him by?

"I guess so. They always got to have something. The majority of people are in such a hurry they can't wait to get back. They got to go fast."

By NORMAN GOLDSTEIN

NEW YORK (AP) — States from Georgia to Montana, Texas to Virginia have discovered the treasure of the Hollywood Hills and set out to entice movie and television producers to their backyards.

The picture-poaching has reached the point where California, long the undisputed center, has set up a commission to beat back the raiders, as have several cities in the state.

"We realized we were losing $100 million in annual revenue going from our state to theirs," says Liz Brady, executive director of California's Film Development Council. And that figure, she says, is conservative, involving only direct revenue.

Considering the money spent by film companies for car rentals, hotels, restaurants, lumber, services and the like, the loss to the state's economy could be as high as $375 million a year, quite a kick in the coffer to the state where movies grew up.

The California film council started work 1½ years ago to counter the activities of some 30 film commissions in other states that are busily luring film business away from the Hollywood precincts.

Miss Brady says her agency has managed to wrest some of the business back through devices ranging from issuing permits for filmmakers to shoot in state parks to frequent soul sessions with film executives.

California has set aside $120,000 this year for its bring 'em back alive project.

Other states have already been spending millions of dollars collectively to lure film budgets from Hollywood's backlots.

The Motion Picture Association of America says that more than 20 states have fullfledged film commissions. Most of the others have at least one official, usually within the department of commerce or tourism, to handle film development within their borders.

"They're all trying to get our business," says Lou Rachmil, vice president and production manager at Metro-GoldwynMayer. "They come out here. Sometimes the governor comes out with them, and they do a very good sell. They turn loose their best people. They open doors. It's a very helpful situation."

The scramble began in the late 1960s, when the industry began to look for sites outside Hollywood because of audience demand for greater realism, high overhead at the studios and other reasons, says Bill McCallum of the Arizona Motion Picture Development Office.

Arizona grossed $5 million business in fiscal 1976-77. Its film office has a budget of $109,000 this year.

In terms of revenue, the Texas Film Commission, a division of the governor's office, is a giant. Director Pat Wolfe says it's drawn $60 million in film production in the past two years.

Eighteen major films were shot, partly or wholly, in Texas last year and 13 more through the summer of 1977. They include "Semi-Tough" and "The Bad News Bears Breaking Training." Both made use of Texas sports stadiums.

The states compete briskly among themselves. New Jersey hired the public relations firm of Rogers and Cowan, which specializes in entertainment industry accounts, to tout its wares.

Primarily, says Henry Rogers, they try to persuade producers that it can be done cheaper in Jersey.

New York is working hard to accommodate filmmakers and recently allowed a company to burn down a derelict building in Brooklyn for the movie "Nunzio." It meant money for a far from affluent neighborhood and jobs for kids as extras. In addition, the company shelled out part of the replacement costs of the building.

Ohio made $1 million last year from filmmakers attracted by the state film bureau's promotion. That includes use of a northeastern Ohio community, Chagrin Falls, for a New England setting sought by a television film crew.

Ed Spivia of the Georgia Film Office, one of the more active in the country, says the Peach State has drawn more than 100 television and feature films in the past five years. It's meant about $100 million.

Georgia made a maximum security prison available for Paramount's "The Longest Yard," starring Burt Reynolds. For the filming of another Reynolds movie, "Deliverance," the Georgia Power Co. cut off the flow of the Chattooga River so the crews could pull boaters into positions required.

The sequel to it all?

Arizona's Bill MacCallum looks forward to increasing state raids on the movie business for years to come. California's Liz Brady says the state, never one to share top billing for its prime industry — much less with 49 other stars — will continue to fight off the rustlers and fence off its grazing land once again.

Alumni awards slated

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Four prominent ex-students of the University of Texas will be honored Oct. 28-29 during the annual homecoming weekend.

Being honored as distinguished alumni for 1977 are Rex G. Baker, Sugarland; Dr. H. Frank Connally Jr., Waco; L.L. "Tex" Colbert, Detroit, Mich., and Mrs. Eugene McDermott, Dallas.

The awards will be presented by UT President Lorene Rogers and Gordon Rountree, Waco, president of the Ex-Students' Association.

A special feature of this year's reunion will be the rededication of the Texas Union, which has undergone a two year remodeling and renovation. The major sports event of the weekend will be the football battle between the UT Longhorns and the Texas Tech Red Raiders.

Secretaries' association to host annual convention

The Midland Educational Secretaries Association will host the state association's 28th annual convention on Nov. 4 through Nov. 6 in the Midland Hilton.

About 450 secretaries from 135 affiliates throughout the state are planning to attend. Registration will begin at 3 p.m. the first day of the convention.

On the following day, the association will hold two general assemblies to discuss business matters. The members will tour the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum and Library in keeping with the "Oil Patch" theme of this year's convention. That night, a "Rags to Riches" party is scheduled in the ballroom.

Senator to speak at Odessa

ODESSA — State Sen. Kent Hance will speak to members of the Texas Professional Educators, district 18, at their annual meeting on Nov. 4 at Odessa College.

At 9 a.m. registration will be held in the college's Fine Arts Building followed by a business meeting and program. Day's activities will conclude with a tour of the new facilities of the West Texas Education Center at the Midland Regional Air Terminal at 2 p.m.

Graham opposes censors

What is needed, he said Thursday, is a "moral and spiritual awakening" so the people who produce pornography will change voluntarily.

He said he opposes "all forms of censorship" and thinks things have gone too far in that direction already.

Graham opened a 10-day crusade Saturday in Cincinnati where pornography remains a big issue after the conviction of Hustler magazine publisher Larry Flynt.

He denied that the church has ignored the pornography issue.

Woman's military experience leads to lawsuit

By LINDA PAVDIK
Dallas Times Herald

FORT WORTH, Tex. — In April 1976 U.S. Air Force Capt. Phoebe S. Spinrad filed an official discrimination complaint against the "rent-a-girl" activities at Clark Air Force Base in the Philippines.

Three months later, she was accused of causing an "international incident" by her commanding officers after a group of Filipino women filed a slander suit against her.

Then, after her commanding officers promised her a superior efficiency rating and a comparable military assignment back in the United States, Captain Spinrad said she received only an average rating and a post at Carswell Air Force Base in Fort Worth, three levels below where she should have been placed.

Now she is claiming that because of her official efforts to obtain equal treatment for women in the Air Force, she has been subject to continual harassment and embarrassment, all of which has effectively damaged her career opportunities and will probably keep her from being promoted to the rank of major when she comes up for review soon.

But Captain Spinard's experience is not an unusual situation for women in the Air Force, according to the American Civil Liberties Union. The ACLU in Fort Worth, on behalf of all women in the service branch, has filed a class action suit against the Air Force, claiming that women officers and enlisted personnel are subjected to verbal harassment and other discriminatory practices by male officers.

The basis for the complaint are Spinrad's accusations and the charges of another woman, First Lt. Barbara Pawlawski. Lieutenant Pawlawski, also stationed at Carswell, said her supervising officer stamped an obsenity on her formal request for a duty change when she was pregnant about a year ago. She said she asked for the change because her physician said she should be taken off the rotation shift she was working.

When she complained through Air Force channels that the officer put an expletive on her request form, she said she became the object of harassment and was subsequently transferred from that squadron, and was given less responsible jobs as well as damaging effectiveness reports.

Spinrad and Pawlawski said they went to the ACLU and filed suit in federal court after exhausting all Air Force channels in seeking solutions to their complaints.

Air Force officers have declined to comment on the suit. A public information officer at Carswell said the Air Force is not certain what the specific charges are because no officer in Fort Worth has received a copy of the complaint yet. "The matter will be in the hands of the Justice Department, however," the officer said.

The suit asks U.S. District Judge Eldon Mahon to grant injunctive relief, to halt all sex discrimination in the Air Force, and to award the women damages, the amount to be determined after the court sees whether the women have any future at all in the military service.

Both Spinrad and Pawlawski said they still want to pursue their Air Force careers despite past experiences.

Spinrad said when she filed complaint about the situation in the Philippines, she was acting in her official capacity as wing equal opportunity and treatment officer.

"I had received complaints about the situation and was concerned that it had created a very unsavory atmosphere for the enlisted women on base," the 35-year-old woman said. She said there were about 500 enlisted women out of the 4,000 Air Force personnel on the base at that time.

"I was concerned that the enlisted women were being discriminated against since this contract was designed specifically for the male and not the female segment of the military," she said. Spinrad complained that she understood the base procurement office authorized the contract with a Filipino man to provide 70 to 100 women nightly for "dancing, conversation and companionship" by airmen.

After her complaint was filed, stopped but a group of disgruntled Filipino women filed suit against her because they had lost their jobs. She said in the Philippines the suit against her was considered a criminal charge and that she could have been jailed if convicted.

After two months of being ordered to stay in her quarters, the matter was solved when a staff judge advocate ruled that her complaint had been her responsibility as the equal opportunity officer there.

She said she asked for an official investigation into why her complaint about the "rent-a girl" activity was "leaked" to the Philippines press and local authorities, but was told this was impossible because she has already created an "international incident."

When she was transferred to Fort Worth, she said she was given the assignment of a first lieutenant rather than what would be the responsibilities of a captain, and received her first average efficiency rating.

Since that time, she said, she has been passed over when better positions have been available on base.

Defense layoffs delayed

By MIKE CAUSEY
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — More than 100 Defense Department workers scheduled for pre-Christmas layoffs have been given an extra month to find new jobs.

The introduction-to-unemployment is only the first step in a Pentagon slimdown ordered by Defense Secretary Harold Brown. About 400 employes will be affected by the RIF (reduction-in-force) which involves 105 people actually going out the door, and 113 grade demotions.

Because of the "bumping" procedures involved in any federal RIF, many employes will be moved around as more senior workers exercise their retention rights by moving laterally, or down, to other jobs.

Army, Navy and Air Force headquarters units in Washington are also under orders to cut back their staffs by anywhere from 21 per cent to 25 per cent.

In some cases the reductions can be made on paper. That involves transferring the jobs of units and offices from "headquarters" functions — which are under the gun to cutback — to field operations which are not. In those paper changes, employes will wind up working in the same offices, at the same jobs and same pay but will no longer be part of the headquarters. Their removal from the headquarters charts, however will count toward the reduction.

For many defense department workers, however, the cuts are very real. Defense is making efforts to find new jobs for employees. But the job market in government is tight and turnover — through quits and retirement — is down.

Diabetics face illness if advice followed

By LEW SCARR
Copley News Service

Dr. Jeffrey A. Sandler is concerned that there may be thousands who face serious illness if they follow the advice laid down recently by a Tucson nutritionist.

Dr. Jon N. Leonard, director of the Tucson Institute of Health, had said in an interview that it is a low-fat diet, not insulin therapy, which is the best workable means of preventing and treating diabetes.

Further, he said that persons who are taking 30 or fewer units of insulin a day for diabetes probably can be maintained on a low-fat, high-carbohydrate diet.

Sandler, who heads University Hospitals' Metabolic Clinic in San Diego, Calif., said it can be dangerous to take insulin away from diabetics, using 30 units a day as a cut-off level.

"I think the vast majority of children who have juvenile onset diabetes are taking less than 30 units," he said.

He estimated that 5 per cent of the diabetic population have juvenile onset diabetes, that is, they developed diabetes of the full-blown form in childhood and have no insulin secretion from their pancreas and need injected insulin to survive.

He said, too, that there are many thin adults taking 12 units of insulin daily who would become ill if they were taken off insulin.

In response to Sandler's comments, Leonard said he knows that not everyone taking 30 or fewer daily units can control their conditions by diet alone.

"But some can," he said, "and it is up to the individual and his physician. If the physician feels that extra insulin is not required, then, by all means, it should not be required.

"Not everyone is the same," Leonard said. "There are people on 25 units of insulin who are going to have to stay on insulin even though, perhaps, a lot less.

"The hope is that there are people taking less than 30 units who actually will be able to get off of the insulin entirely, and we have found this to be the case.

"In many cases, that is possible, and especially we have found that the lower the insulin levels the more likely it is that the person will be able to get off of it entirely."

Sandler said, however, that the 5 per cent of the diabetics who have the juvenile onset type and the 10 to 15 per cent of adults who are not as severely affected as juvenile diabetics yet have insulin deficiency can only be treated with insulin therapy.

"What we are left with," he said, "is 80 per cent of diabetics who are obese and have abnormal blood sugars. It is these patients whose primary metabolic defect is obesity, and only secondarily do they have elevated blood sugars."

But he said Leonard did not make that point. Leonard said he thinks diabetes can be prevented and treated by a low-fat diet to reduce lipid levels in the blood.

"If you are overweight," Sandler said, "and we put you on a diet alone your blood sugars will improve, and that is how we treat the majority of our diabetics.

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Joseph Turow, assistant professor of communications at Purdue University, sees something in common between television programs and the paint-by-number sets. And it's not just color.

Turow, a researcher in the Department of Communication, is interested in the reasons for social and physical stereotyping by the television industry. He recently spent two months in California interviewing writers, directors, agents, casting directors and producers to learn how they select actors for "bit" or small parts.

Turow calls the constant flow of characters seen on the tube a "landscape of people." It is a fairly predictable landscape, he says, one in which some groups — notably women and minorities. Actors are chosen on the basis of "credibility," which he explains as the professionals' "perception of what Middle America thinks a person in a particular occupation normally looks like."

For example, casting directors believe an actor would readily be accepted as a judge if the part were played by a white-haired, middle-aged man. They are hesitant to select an untypical-looking person for a part since they contend it distracts viewers from the story, Turow says.

The second guideline is visual balance, or "how characters look next to one another." The physical make-up of a person — short, heavy, bald, etc. — can affect whether he or she will be cast next to another actor. For example, in "Starsky and Hutch," a man who is better-looking than the two policemen would probably not be selected for a guest part since he would detract attention from the two stars.

Shows also have certain "looks" which those in charge of casting try to maintain. For example, "Charlie's Angels" is a "beautiful people" show while "Baretta" is a "street people, grungy-type" show, says Turow.

"Agents, casting directors and other persons involved tend to settle into certain comfortable casting 'cliches' — unless they're influenced by outside pressures," says Turow.

Many of those interviewed said they were responding to pressures to increase the number of women, old persons, Mexican-Americans and Orientals seen on television, he says. (Blacks, they contend, are doing fine.) However, he adds, it was stressed that selection of such persons must still be done according to "credibility."

Turow believes it may give young persons incorrect ideas about what the world is like and what possibilities they have in life. He doesn't believe TV stereotyping will ever be eliminated, though.
