Lubbockites' Attitudes 'Demeaning'

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A REESE Air Force Base officer charged with investigating complaints of discrimination, testified in federal court Wednesday the "demeaning" attitude of Lubbockites toward minorities is reminiscent of prevalent attitudes 20 years ago.

Maj. Vince Micucci, the Reese social actions officer, said in his opinion "racial discrimination is present in Lubbock."

"It appears to me to be a rather pervasive demeaning attitude towards minorities in town," he said."It's an attitude you would have expected more 15 to 20 years ago than you would now."

Five Witnesses Testify

Micucci was one of five witnesses testifying Wednesday in a trial to determine whether Lubbock City Council members should be elected from geographic districts (single-member districts) or from the city at-large as they currently are selected.

The Air Force officer said he investigated complaints of blacks and Mexican-Americans being denied entrance to city nightclubs and encouraged city officials to enact an ordinance to deal with such discrimination.

On September 7, 1977, Micucci said he made a speech to a meeting of the Base/Community Council in support of such an ordinance.

Strong Ordinance Proposed

"I indicated the (base) commander and myself were concerned some of the minority members of the Air Force were being treated unfairly and one way to deal with that was a strong city ordinance," he testified.

Micucci said he gave the committee, which included former Lubbock mayor Roy Bass, a copy of such an anti-discrimination ordinance passed in Fort Worth while he was stationed there.

Although the response to the suggestion was positive from those attending the meeting, Micucci said he didn't hear about what the city was doing regarding the discrimination in clubs until the news media reported that the city council had passed such an ordinance.

City attorney Travis Shelton asked Micucci if seven discrimination complaints in 18 months received by the social actions division "seemed like an inordinate number."

"Yes sir," replied Micucci. "Per population there's a larger number here than in Fort Worth."

Micucci acknowledged two of the club owners found to be discriminating against minorities had "signed an intent

No 'Crisis' Considered By Vance

JERUSALEM (AP) — New snags clouded the future of an Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty Wednesday. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, citing "urgent business," said he would finish his shuttle talks with Prime Minister Menachem Begin and return home earlier than scheduled.

Israel radio said proposals from Egyptian President Anwar Sadat carried by Vance to Begin were found to be unacceptable.

Vance said Wednesday night he "wouldn't call it a crisis" and he was returning to Washington because he has "important things" to discuss with President Carter.

Meets Begin Today

Deputy Prime Minister Yigael Yadin told reporters "we'll see what happens" after meetings this morning between Vance and Begin. Vance agreed, saying, "Let's see what happens tomorrow."

But Vance, asked if he might stay in the Mideast if developments warrant, replied emphatically: "I must go back to Washington."

In Washington, a Carter administration official said the fact Vance will meet again today with Begin was an indication Israel had not rejected the new proposals out-of-hand. Asked whether the administration had an Israeli answer, the official said, "So far as I know, we don't."

The official, who asked not to be identified by name, said Carter still had hopes that the proposals for breaking the deadlock would be accepted.

Other Problems Viewed

At the State Department, officials said they knew of no new crisis demanding Vance's attention. But they added there was an urgent need for him to formulate plans for dealing with troubles in Iran, strategic arms talks with the Russians, and other problems.

The secretary's change of plans was announced by a spokesman after Vance held two meetings with Israeli officials and talked with President Carter in Washington by telephone.

The U.S. spokesman, George Sherman, said Vance would fly to Egypt today and then to the United States on Friday after a last talk with Sadat. He had planned to stay in Israel at least until Friday morning.

Sherman said Vance "feels he will have achieved everything he could by the time he leaves the area and he has important business in Washington." Sherman would not say what business

Soviet Move Warned By Arms Chief

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency said Wednesday that the threat of a Soviet first strike is growing and that more arms spending is required to cope with it.

Retired Lt. Gen. George M. Seignious, the first military man to head the agency, indicated at a news conference that his views on this key strategic issue differ markedly from those of his predecessor, Paul C. Warnke.

Warnke tended to discount the possibility of a Soviet first strike against American missile silos, saying it was technically too difficult to achieve. And he advocated negotiating a ban on missiles such as the proposed MX rather than going ahead with its development. The MX, for "missile experimental," is the Pentagon's candidate to replace the current Minuteman missile.

But Seignious, at his first news conference since taking over from Warnke, said recent advances in the accuracy of Soviet missiles make it "axiomatic to me that in due course the threat to the survival of the Minuteman field will grow...

"Even if they conform to the limits set in SALT II (which will allow increases in the number of warheads per missile), if they go right up to the limit, it will produce such an inventory of strategic arms that it will doubtlessly propel the U.S. into seeking an alternative to the vulnerability of our ICBM field."

He added that until some future treaty, going beyond SALT II, leads to reductions in strategic arms, "The U.S. must insure it has the forces necessary to retain a strategic balance. It is going to require additional money to modernize the systems we have in our triad (of land-based missiles, submarine-based missiles, and bombers)," he said.

Seignious did acknowledge one of the difficulties with the MX that led Warnke to feel it could destabilize the arms balance and lead to a new and more dangerous competition with the Soviets.

Since the MX would be mobile, it might be impossible for reconnaissance

Lids On Wages Eased; Price Hikes Tightened

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The Carter administration, trying to win new support for its anti-inflation program, revised its voluntary guidelines Wednesday to ease the limit on wages slightly and toughen the restrictions on price increases.

The changes are a follow-up to the plan that President Carter announced Oct. 24 as inflation soared to an annual rate of 9½ percent.

In calling on labor and business to support the program, Carter's chief inflation adviser, Alfred Kahn, said Americans "are tired of running like hamsters in a cage on the inflation treadmill.

"I believe they stand ready to register their sense of injury against those who choose to go their own way at the expense of others," said Kahn, chairman of the Council on Wage and Price Stability.

In an interview with publishers and officials of Gannett Newspapers Tuesday, Kahn said it could take up to two years for the voluntary Carter program to have much effect on inflation. And, he said, he doesn't expect a significant decline in the inflation rate in the next "six to nine months."

The revised wage and price guidelines retain the 7 percent limit on wage increases. But the guidelines were liberalized to exempt increases in certain fringe benefits that only keep pace with inflation but do not represent actual gains for the worker.

"The cost of maintaining existing benefits has gone up so much more than 7 percent, there is less than 7 percent left for wages and fringe benefits," Kahn said.

The new rule, in effect, raises the wage guidelines to permit a maximum wage and benefit increase of about 7.1 percent or 7.2 percent, Kahn said. There had been speculation earlier that the new guidelines would allow wages to rise as high as 9 percent.

Limits on price increases were unchanged, but the administration took steps to close what it considered loopholes that could allow many companies to exceed the voluntary standard.

The earlier guidelines set a 9.5 percent price increase as the maximum allowed under any circumstances. The new guidelines also set a floor of 1.5 percent. That means a company that reduced its prices in past years or held them firm will not suffer, Kahn said.

In terms of profit margins, the old guidelines provided that a business had to hold price increases to 0.5 percentage points below its average increases in 1976 and 1977 — a formula that generally limited the hikes to 5.75 percent. And, under the original regulations, a company could raise prices more without violating the voluntary guidelines if it could prove hardship or show it hasn't increased profits.

Now, a firm using this test will only be able to increase profits 6.5 percent above the average dollar profits of the past three years — a guideline that could have

UFO, Cattle Mutilations Link Sought In Probe

DULCE, N.M. (UPI) — State police are investigating a possible link between evidence gathered at the site of unexplained cattle mutilations in northern New Mexico and at the site of a recently reported UFO sighting, the investigating officer said. State policeman Gabe Valdez of Dulce said he, the director of an Albuquerque laboratory and a retired scientist have been involved in the investigation.

The officer said he hoped ongoing scientific tests of the evidence would help solve the mutilations.

Lab analyses are being made of a substance found on five live cattle at a ranch where many mutilations occurred and on a residue found at a location near Taos where the UFO sighting was reported.

Bob Schoenfeld of Schoenfeld Clinical Laboratories in Albuquerque said tests have showed both materials have similar properties, especially significant amounts of potassium and magnesium.

Schoenfeld and retired scientist Howard Burgess said they could not speculate on whether there was a direct link between the ash-like residue and the material found on the cattle. Schoenfeld said it was unlikely the material would have occurred naturally in the locations where it was found.

Burgess said the potassium-magnesium combination was "not substantial enough right now to say the two (mutilations and UFO incidents) are definitely related, but it's intriguing."

The tests on the cattle and at the UFO site both occurred in early July, but the information was not released until this week.

There have been about 35 cattle mutilations reported so far this year. Valdez has speculated that evidence at the mutilation sites "point to (the possible involvement of) sophisticated aircraft."

The UFO sighting was reported by three neighbor families who said they heard a loud noise and saw "a very bright orange light" outside their homes shortly after midnight in July. One of the neighbors, Mrs. Elias Vargas, said she saw a "roundish" form about the size of two cars as the orange light dimmed.

Solar Project Ceremony Slated Today

CROSBYTON (Special) — Groundbreaking ceremonies for the Crosbyton Solar Energy Project — the largest solar project of its kind in the world — will be held here this morning.

U.S. House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Fort Worth will give the keynote address at the 11 a.m. ceremony for the federally-funded Analog Design Verification System (ADVS), located two miles south of Crosbyton, a town of 2,500.

The $2.5 million project is being designed by Texas Tech University engineers through a contract with the U.S. Department of Energy.

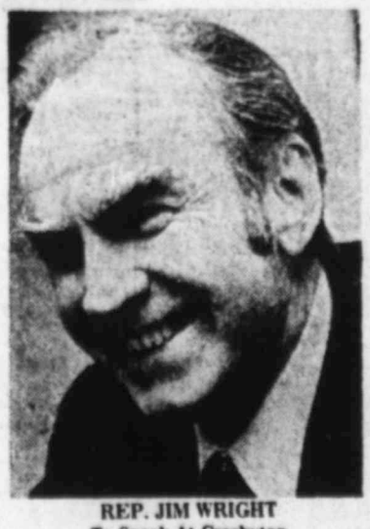
Wright, chairman of the House Democratic Task Force on Energy and the Economy, will be joined by other local and national dignitaries.

"The ADVS will include the largest single solar collector ever built," said John D. Reichert, project director and a Texas Tech University professor of electrical engineering.

Upon its completion in November 1979, the test solar project will have a 65-foot mirrored dish — a scaled-down model of ten 200-foot solar gridirons planned for Crosbyton.

The mirrored surface of the solar dish will help gather sunlight to heat water to 1,000-degree steam which then will drive a turbine. The turbine will turn a generator to produce electricity. The system is designed to eventually reduce the town's energy costs and dependence on fossil fuels.

One of the major purposes of the ADVS is to give engineers and scientists a chance to study the properties of the steam the system produces.



REP. JIM WRIGHT
To Speak At Crosbyton

A solar project in France is the only other one in the world similar to Crosbyton's, but the French project is on a much smaller scale.

Those scheduled to attend this morning's ceremony include representatives from Texas Tech University, which holds the Department of Energy (DOE) contract for designing the project; Crosbyton city officials; representatives from E-Systems in Garland, the primary subcontractor for the project; and DOE officials.

Other dignitaries will include Congressmen-elect Kent Hance of Lubbock and Charles Stenholm of Stamford, U.S Rep. Jack Hightower of Wichita Falls and Roy K. Furr Jr., vice chairman of the Texas Tech Board of Regents.

Davis Defense Quizzes Rufner On Knowledge Of 'Hit Man'

HOUSTON (AP) — A defense attorney implied but did not pin down Wednesday that W.T. Rufner knew last summer a "hit man" had been contacted to kill millionaire Cullen Davis.

Houston lawyer Richard "Racehorse" Haynes recalled the shaggy-haired Rufner and quizzed him about a conversation he has last June or July with his ex-wife's husband.

"Did you tell Bob Brown that someone is going to be in town this weekend to take care of Thomas Cullen Davis?" Haynes asked the sullen witness.

Prosecutors objected and the judge presiding over the murder conspiracy trial ot Davis agreed that the question was "leading."

The defense maintains that the defendant's estranged wife Priscilla schemed with FBI informant David McCrory and karate instructor Pat Burleson to first kill and then frame Davis.

Davis, 45, a Fort Worth oil heir, is accused of masterminding a murder-for-hire plot directed at his divorce judge and others.

He was arrested Aug. 20 and has been jailed since.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals in Austin Wednesday upheld the denial of bail in the case. The court said Davis was not entitled to bond until 60 days after Oct. 30, that being the date of a second defense request to delay the trial.

Defense lawyer Phil Burleson, asked if the trial were still under way Dec. 30, Davis would have to be granted bond, he replied, "Yes."

However, the appeals court said bond would not be automatic at that time.

After a series of rebukes and a judicial threat of jail, Rufner, 39, took the stand Wednesday morning and told the jury of his contacts this year with principles in the case.

He said he talked by telephone last May with Mrs. Davis but details of the night were hazy because he had been drinking beer and was intoxicated.

Rufner said he last crossed paths with Pat Burleson in June and it was sometime early this year that he saw McCrory, the state's key witness.

Prosecutors succeeded in restricting questions by Haynes about Rufner's rocky romance with Mrs. Davis in 1974 and 1975. Complaining that he wanted to get a "six pack of beer and get the hell out of town," Rufner left the stand but was summoned back by Haynes to answer "two questions."

It was then that Haynes asked Rufner about the conversation last summer with Brown. Despite rewording and asking the question repeatedly, Haynes got Rufner to admit only that he had mentioned the "general physical well being" of Davis.

"What did you say to Bob Brown in June or July about the general physical well being of Mr. Davis?" Haynes asked.

"Mr. Haynes, I'm not a doctor, " Rufner replied.

Haynes dropped that line of questioning after a hostile Rufner declared he did not discuss the defendant's "well being."

The teen-age son of David McCrory told of delivering $9,500 to his father at Burleson's karate studio two days prior to Davis' arrest.

"When you first saw your father and Pat Burleson, were they coming in the karate school together?

"I do not recall," Mike McCrory, 17, said repeatedly. "I was preoccupied with the amount of money I had and my mind was focusing on a lot of different things."

Although not fully developed before the jury, the defense would like to show that David McCrory and Burleson saw Mrs. Davis just prior to their arrival at the studio that day.

Amon Carter III, 23, the son of a prominent Fort Worth newspaper publisher, testified he saw Mrs. Davis outside the karate studio three days earlier.

He said Burleson was not there at the time but that he, Carter, had lunch with him the following day and told him "Priscilla Davis came by looking for you yesterday."

LEVELLAND (Special) — A vocational nursing aptitude exam will be given Monday at South Plains College.

The exam is one of several requirements for entrance into the spring vocational nursing program offered by SPC, according to Helen Brown, R.N., coordinator and assistant professor in vocational nursing.

Exam time is 9 a.m. in SPC's vocational counseling office, located on the first floor of the SPC Technical Arts Center. Fee is $2.50.

Appeals Court Rules Davis Not Due Bail

AUSTIN (AP) — Cullen Davis temporarily lost his right to bail on murder-for-hire charges when he asked to postpone his Houston trial, the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ruled Wednesday.

"While we agree that a defendant must be accorded a trial ... within 60 days (of being jailed), we conclude that when a defendant requests and receives a continuance ... he defeats his right to present bail," the court said in a 12-page opinion.

Davis can request bail after Dec. 30, provided his trial has not ended, the court added.

The Fort Worth millionaire is on trial for allegedly trying to hire a man to kill State District Judge Joe Eidson, who was presiding over Davis' stormy divorce case.

Davis, 45, was charged Aug. 20 and denied bail two days later in Fort Worth. The trial was moved to Houston, and Davis again was denied bond.

Defense lawyers twice asked for postponements, saying they needed more time to hire expert witnesses and test tape recorded evidence. After the second request for a delay, the trial was scheduled for Oct. 30.

During a November hearing, Davis' attorneys argued before the appeals court that their client had an absolute right to have bond set in the case. Prosecutors disagreed.

Davis was denied bail under a constitutional provision affecting persons on bail in a prior felony indictment. When arrested in August, the industrialist was free on bond in the 1976 shooting of his estranged wife Priscilla and the slaying of her lover, Stan Farr, in Fort Worth.

An Amarillo jury acquitted Davis of murder charges in the death of his stepdaughter Andrea Wilborn, who was killed in the same 1976 incident.

The appeals court cited the state constitutional provision in upholding the decision to deny bail.

Article I, Section 11a states that a person automatically is entitled to bail if his trial has not started within 60 days after arrest "unless a continuance is obtained upon the motion or request of the accused."

"Thus in the instant case, the appellant is not entitled to bail until 60 days from Oct. 30, 1978, the last day of the second continuance requested and obtained," the court wrote. "Whether the appellant will be actually entitled to bail on that date may well depend on other circumstances."

If Davis is acquitted before Dec. 30, the bail question will be moot, and other constitutional provisions would be involved if he is convicted, the court said.

Warmer Temperatures Expected

A low pressure system advancing from the southwest is expected to bring increasingly warmer temperatures to the Lubbock area through Friday.

Forecasters expect afternoon highs that only reached to a cool 43 Wednesday afternoon, to rise into the low 50s today and to near 60 Friday. Lows are expected to dip near the freezing mark.

Southwesterly winds blowing 5-10 mph and bringing mild weather conditions to West Texas today, should be accompanied by partly cloudy skies.

Slightly cooler temperatures are expected Saturday and Sunday, but warmer conditions should return to West Texas again Monday, according to the National Weather Service. Afternoon highs throughout the weekend should be in the 40s and 50s.

While Lubbock area residents experienced generally mild weather conditions Wednesday, except for nippy winds from the north blowing at 10-15 mph, residents in far south Texas were reporting light rain, overcast skies and fog which reduced visibility to near one-half mile.

Confession By Guyana Accused Slayer Reported

GEORGETOWN, Guyana (AP) — A Peoples Temple member charged with five counts of murder in the slayings of Rep. Leo J. Ryan and four others has told police he accepts full responsibility for the deaths and for injuries to others at the scene, informed sources said Wednesday.

"I, Larry Layton, take full responsibility for all the deaths and injuries that took place at the Port Kaituma airstrip," the statement begins. "I had begged Bishop Jim Jones that I be allowed to bring down" the plane that was to carry Ryan and his party back to Georgetown Nov. 18.

The content of Layton's statement, which the prosecution said would be introduced later in a preliminary hearing that began Wednesday, was reported by informed sources who declined to be named.

The hearing is to determine if there is enough evidence to bring Layton, 32, of San Francisco, to trial.

Another American, Charles Beikman, 43, of Indianapolis, is charged with four counts of murder in the throat-slashing deaths of a Temple member and her three children in Georgetown. His hearing is recessed until Friday.

Shortly after the airstrip shootings, more than 900 Temple members died in a massive suicide-murder.

The sources said the statement stated that Jones, the cult leader, turned down Layton's request.

The defendant borrowed a gun from a friend and proceeded with his plan on the belief that Ryan, a California Democrat, and others in his party worked for the CIA and were trying to discredit Guyana, it said.

Layton, who had boarded one of the Ryan party's two planes, began shooting while the plane was still on the ground, the statement said, because he heard gunfire at the airstrip and believed it was too late for his plans to wait until the plane was off the ground before opening fire. It concluded, "I don't know why I did it."

Layton's alleged involvement in the airstrip shootings also was described by Dale Parks, 27, one of the Peoples Temple members who tried to flee the Jonestown settlement with Ryan.

Parks told Magistrate Krishna Veni Chinta that Layton joined a truckload of defecting Peoples Temple members at the last moment after talking with Jones.

Layton insisted on going on the smaller of two planes that were to carry the Ryan party back to the Guyanese capital of Georgetown from the jungle airstrip 150 miles to the northwest, Parks said.

Layton boarded the plane without permission from Ryan's adminstrative assistant, who was assigning seats, Parks testified.

The witness said Layton was taken off the plane and searched but nothing was found, and he returned to the same seat, directly behind the pilot.

The small plane with its five passengers plus the pilot had taxied to the end of the runway when gunshots were heard near a larger plane that was to carry the rest of the group, Parks said.

Just before the shots rang out, he said, Layton was saying, "Hurry up, get off the ground, there's going to be trouble."

When the shots were heard, Layton produced a pistol from the front of his trousers and started firing, Parks said.

He first shot Monica Bagby, who was sitting in front next to the pilot, then shot Vern Gosley next to him, then pointed the gun at Parks's chest and pulled the trigger, Parks said.

Parks said he was sitting in the third row of seats, beside his sister Tracy and behind Layton. "There was an explosion but no bullet came out," Parks said. "I fell back thinking I had been shot.

"He (Layton) turned around and shot Monica one more time and Vern Gosley one more time. Realizing I was not shot, I jumped him and fought him for the gun," Parks said.

He wrested the gun from Layton and all those aboard the small plane jumped out and fled into the brush surrounding the small airstrip as gunfire continued near the larger plane at the other end of the runway, he said.

CAROL TELLS OF FIRE — Actress Carol Channing holds a press conference to tell about a fire in the Lord Baltimore Hotel that forced her and the rest of the cast from "Helly Dolly" to evacuate their rooms early Wednesday morning. Two fires of suspicious origin broke out seven hours apart in the downtown Baltimore, Md., hotel.(AP Laserphoto)

Actress, Others Flee Two Blazes In Hotel

BALTIMORE (AP) — Carol Channing and 200 other guests had fled the Lord Baltimore Hotel once early Wednesday because of a fire. When a second blaze erupted seven hours later and trapped her in her room, the actress said, she began to worry about dying.

"My husband and I were in the room because we couldn't get down the hallway from the smoke," said Miss Channing, best known for her role as the irrepressible matchmaker Dolly Levi in "Hello, Dolly!"

"I thought, 'It is a slow death,' and then that we'll have to hold hands and jump out the window. Things like that go through your mind."

Only two minor injuries — both smoke inhalation cases — were reported from the fires in the 17-story Lord Baltimore, which is across the street from the Morris A. Mechanic Theater where "Hello, Dolly!" is playing.

The first fire occurred about 1:30 a.m. in a storage closet on the 11th floor and the second seven hours later in an unoccupied apartment on the sixth floor, authorities said.

Arson investigators were trying to determine if the two fires were related or linked to another blaze on the 11th floor Sunday. No one was injured in that fire.

Miss Channing said she and her husband, Charles Lowe, were about to go to sleep in their ninth-floor room when stage manager Terry Boston warned them about the first fire.

"We put wet towels over our faces and ran down the corridor pounding on doors. We got out down the stairs," she said. "When we returned to the room, I was very tense and couldn't sleep."

When the second fire erupted and filled the corridor with thick smoke, Miss Channing said, she and her husband decided to wait in the room for help.

She said she called Hope Quackenbush, the theater manager, asking her to get Mayor William Donald Schaefer "to send the Fire Department with some gas masks."

"Of course, the firemen did that themselves," said Miss Channing, clad in her husband's wolf fur parka that she wore when firemen led them from the hotel.

Miss Channing said she felt fine after the ordeal and would appear for both the matinee and evening shows Wednesday.

Race Issue Has Two Edges

ANOTHER ATTEMPT to look deeper into the question of whether one man can be penalized because of his race in order to make certain that another man isn't so penalized will be made by the U.S. Supreme Court.

It has agreed to take a case in which a white worker in Louisiana claims to have been a victim of reverse discrimination.

The plaintiff, who has won his point in lower courts, was denied a chance for a higher-paying job because of an affirmative action program designed to help blacks.

A decision in the case could go a long way toward clarifying the Supreme Court's hazy ruling in the Allan Bakke reverse discrimination case last June.

THE BASIC FACTS in the Louisiana case are not in dispute.

Brian F. Weber, a white employe at Kaiser Aluminum Chemical Co.'s Gramercy, La., plant, was denied admission to a training program that prepared employes for higher-paying jobs.

Under an agreement between the company and the United Steelworkers union, whites and blacks were admitted to the program in equal numbers. As a result, fellow black employes with less seniority than Weber were admitted and he was excluded.

This, Weber alleges, violated his rights under the 1964 Civil Rights Act which guarantees that no one will be discriminated against because of race.

The employer, Kaiser Aluminum, has never been guilty of racial discrimination. Nevertheless, it felt an obligation under government pressure to adopt an affirmative action program designed to help members of minority races to overcome the effects of alleged societal discrimination that had worked against them in the job market.

WHATEVER THE good intentions behind affirmative action, Weber points out, he personally never was guilty of job discrimination against blacks. All he ever did was apply for, and get, a job and seek an opportunity for advancement.

To deny him equal job opportunity because he is white is as great a denial of his personal rights as any individual black person ever experienced, he argues in essence.

The logic of his appeal is overpowering.

In the Bakke case, the Supreme Court ruled that a white student could not be denied admission to medical school solely because of his race. However, it did not rule definitively on the validity of affirmative action programs although obviously sympathetic toward them.

Sooner or later, perhaps in the Weber case, it must get down to the heart of the question and look at whites and blacks alike as individuals and not as racial groups.

Books Judged By Cover-age

ONE COMPLAINT the public can never make against the American press is that it has not been kept informed of every horrifying nuance of the Guyana murder-suicide story.

It's probable that more words have been expended on the grisly details and motivating circumstances of the Jonestown atrocities than on any other single topic during a comparable period since World War II.

As a subject for blanket coverage, one might think it would be approaching exhaustion. But wait. There's more. Already on prominent newsstand display are two paperbacks, rushed into print almost before the body count was in.

One, "The Suicide Cult: The Inside Story of the Peoples Temple Sect and the Massacre in Guyana," is the product of a special team of San Francisco Chronicle reporters.

THE OTHER, "Guyana Massacre: The Eyewitness Account," is a similar effort on the part of The Washington Post, to which we are already indebted for the major chapters of the Watergate story.

Readers may be pardoned for having difficulty in distinguishing between the two publications.

Both have photo sections, familiar for the most part from media coverage and emphasizing for the most part the Jonestown scene. Both are rehashes of material which already has consumed untold newspaper column inches.

And both are prime examples of the current state of refinement of the "instant" book, those multiplying accounts of big news stories slapped between covers while public interest still runs high.

THIS HYBRID of journalism and publishing was once something of a British specialty—which migrated. The first on recent U.S. record was the 1964 Warren Report on the Kennedy assassination inquiry.

It was followed by offerings of some significance dealing with Vietnam, Watergate, the Entebbe hijacking and commando rescue. More recently we had the story of New York's Son of Sam killings, written in large part while the hunt for the killer was still on. Which shows what the trend is.

While the productions certainly are instant, there may be some question as to their nature beyond that. But none as to their purpose: It is to realize as many additional bucks as possible from a sensation-aroused public.

With most instant products, we are advised to add water and stir. With the latest in instant books, we might make that add water and then deep-six.

M. STANTON EVANS:

Internal Security lapse Leaves U.S. Vulnerable

WASHINGTON—Continuing revelations concerning the Rev. Jim Jones confirm once more the impotence of our government in handling problems of revolutionary violence.

The garish murder-suicides in Guyana and related disclosures about the Peoples Temple in San Francisco vividly underscore the fact that we have dismantled the official agencies that used to monitor and guard us from such excesses.

Despite massive evidence that we are confronted by forces committed to revolutionary terror, there is no congressional committee that keeps tab on such things, while executive agencies having jurisdiction in the matter have been subjected to crippling harassment.

A SUMMARY OF violent events in the Northern California area alone in recent years includes the following:

The killing of Oakland school official Marcus Foster by the Marxist-Leninist zealots of the "Symbionese Liberation Army"; the so-called "Zebra Killings" in which four Black Muslims were convicted on multiple counts of murder;

The kidnapping of Patty Hearst by the SLA, followed by a wave of robberies and a final bloody shoot-out; two attempts on the life of former President Gerald Ford, one by a follower of Charles Manson;

Bombings of numerous public buildings by the so-called New World Liberation Front; the shooting of San Francisco Mayor George Moscone and supervisor Harvey Milk, allegedly by a disgruntled former supervisor representing a blue collar area.

WITH THE EXCEPTION of the last-named episode, all these acts of violence were spun off from the perfervid brand of revolutionary politics for which the San Francisco-Oakland-Berkeley area is famous.

This was also the species of politics that was favored by Rev. Jim Jones, his Peoples Temple, and his commune in Guyana.

Yet despite all this, we have in recent months been busy abolishing the House and Senate committees in charge of looking into such things, liquidating police intelligence files on revolutionary and subversive groups, dragging the FBI into the dock for daring to go after violent Communist outfits such as the Weather Underground, and imposing severe restrictions on other executive agencies attempting to monitor and control outcroppings of terror and violence.

ALL OF WHICH suggests a deficient understanding of civil liberties and what is necessary to protect them.

It is said, for instance, that Federal agencies could not have looked into the doings of Rev. Jones' organization because to do so would have been an interference with religious freedom.

This ignores the fact that "religion" was a mere facade for Jones' political and revolutionary activities.

What he was running in Guyana, certainly, was a Communist operation outright, replete with Marxist literature, brainwashing, continuous revolutionary propaganda, caches of arms, dealings with the Soviet Union, and the like.

TO PAPER OVER the specifically Communist nature of this activity by referring to the religious facade created around it is to darken counsel and frustrate the hope of rational policy.

As pointed out by Accuracy in Media, Inc., Jones' commune in Guyana did not even bother with the formality of holding religious services.

The constant obsession of its inmates, as revealed in their pathetic letters to Jones, was how to build a better brand of Communism/Socialism.

The irony of the situation is symbolized by the fact that, as Congress moves to look into the bizarre events surrounding Jones, the inquiry is being undertaken by the House Committee on International Relations, which has no expertise at all in the crucial subject areas.

Seldom has there been a series of events that suggest more clearly the need for restoring the House and Senate committees on internal security.

Back Burner

George F. Will:

The Torch Is Passed

WASHINGTON—Journalism, it has been said, often involves reporting "Mr. Smith is dead" to people who never knew that Mr. Smith was alive. But that often is important. The end of exemplary lives should not go unremarked.

Many Americans do not even know the name of their own congressman, and few Americans knew of the congressman from Wisconsin's Sixth District.

But there are more than a few Republicans who, if asked why they are Republicans, would reply, briefly but sufficiently, "Bill Steiger."

They especially, but not they alone, know what the Republican Party, and the Republic, lost when William Steiger died in his sleep at age 40.

When Steiger came to Congress 12 years ago, he was the youngest member. When he died, he was the youngest looking member. But any tendency to think of him as "boyish" did not survive the bracing experience of matching wits and wills with him.

When, early this year, Steiger submitted his amendment to lower taxation on capital gains, the Carter administration was ardently, not to say hysterically, opposed.

But what Steiger began resulted, after compromises, in rate reduction. It was an example of what one exceptional man, aroused and patient and right, can do.

I first met Steiger early in this decade when the senator for whom I worked (Gordon Allott of Colorado) became interested in passing the military pay proposals that were a prerequisite for the transition from conscription to all-volunteer armed forces.

STEIGER HAD BEEN at work on the problem for several years, and no one in Washington was more ready for battle.

The issues of conscription and capital gains, one early and one late in his career, do not tell the full story of his career, but they summarize the theme of his Republicanism.

He was concerned with liberating the nation's productive energies, including energy in the form of capital, and, where possible, supplanting coercion with incentives.

Politics when done wrong, and when done right, can be a consuming profession. It is consuming for those whose eyes are always on higher office—who are consumed by ambition as by fire.

More admirably, and most rarely, politics is consuming for those, like Steiger, who do justice to their great work of making laws for a free people.

CONGRESS HAS ITS share of members who coast, content to derive their satisfactions from the perquisites of office.

But the minority side of the House Ways and Means Committee has recently been to Congress what Sugar Ray Robinson was to boxing: pound-for-pound, the best fighting force. And Steiger, an initiating spirit, was among its best members.

It would be doing less than justice to Steiger to say only that he was a superb legislative craftsman. He also resembled another bundle of useful energy from the upper Midwest.

It may seem like a contradiction in terms to speak of anyone as a "Republican Hubert Humphrey," but Steiger exemplified what Humphrey called "the politics of joy." Plainly put, he loved his profession, and it showed.

WHAT BURKE SAID of a nation is true, too, of a profession: To be loved it must be lovely.

Politics as Steiger practiced it—intelligent, passionate and amused—was lovely. People who remember him as a paperboy in Oshkosh remember that he always aimed to be a congressman.

A few years ago he was offered a job in the private sector at a substantial increase in salary, and he was tempted to take it for his family's sake. His nine-year-old son frequently went up to Capitol Hill, quietly drawing pictures and watching his father work.

Politics is a profession that often exacts a terrible price from families, but as a colleague said of Steiger: "We all admired the father in him."

THE CAPRICIOUSNESS of fate moved Yeats to write:

Some think of it a matter of course that chance
Should starve good men and bad advance.

It was not chance that advanced Steiger to the front rank of his party and his profession.

But chance has done what only chance could do: It has prevented him from completing what would have been one of the most distinguished careers Congress has known.

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

Life Full In Cairo

PRESIDENT ANWAR el-Sadat, in a country as large as Britain, France and West Germany combined, owes his power base to Cairo. Its six million souls make it Africa's largest city.

Cairo, now in the eighth year of its second millenium, is a fascinating city as colorful as the pages of the Arabian Nights.

Cairo is the most important in the Arab world, a city with a character, the measure of great cities.

Its teeming streets are a noisy mixture of Arabs, overfilled streetcars, bicycles, taxis, horse-drawn cabs, donkeys, newsboys and bootblacks.

Egyptians crowd the sidewalk cafes, play cards, dominos or backgammon, or just sit listening to the laughter and music.

THE STREETS ARE life itself, a maze of the poor and prosperous, busy and idle, Eastern and Western, craftmen and bureaucrats, animals, tradesmen, turbaned sheiks, bearded priests, laborers and women swathed in veils.

Egypt's population approaches 40 million, with a new citizen added every 41 seconds. Sadat told me that, despite his attempts at popularizing birth control, about one million are added to the population each year.

In the past five years, food production actually has declined. To make up the difference, Egypt gets in wheat under U.S. aid programs of $176.7 million.

Moreover, due to early picking, Egyptian agronomists estimate that 40 percent of the tomatoes, melons, etc., reaching Cairo are spoiled.

The government spends more than $700 million annually on subsidies. But subsidies lead to some abuses. Many Egyptians stopped baking bread, finding it more profitable to sell their grain to the state and buy subsidized bread.

MINISTER OF INDUSTRY Ahmed Ezeddin Hilal assured the 350-man, freely elected People's Council that the government will not increase the price of basic commodities.

Sadat, in turn, is featuring his own "green revolution." In southern Egypt, for the first time in Nubian history, Sadat handed over to farmers their land titles.

The capital's main downtown plaza is Tahrir Square. Above it is a pedestrian walk so that Cairenes can go back and forth. The impossible traffic jostles and honks, crosses the Nile bridges or pours like a migration to the railroad station.

It passes Al-Azher University, the oldest in the entire world, where eminent theologians instruct students from all over the Mideast.

Weavers are busy making the Noble Garment, carried every year from Cairo to Mecca.

IN CAIRO, ISLAM itself is everywhere. Five minutes before dawn you hear the muezzins say from the lofty minarets the first beautiful, soaring call to prayer, the azan: "Come love, come weep, come wonder." Finally, before sundown, the muezzins chant the evening prayer, the il'asr.

A mosque is the place where you prostrate yourself to Allah. It is the Arab world's heart and soul.

Inside, the Moslems kneel or touch the ground, chanting "Allah Akbar"—"Allah is great." The rugs overlap in such a way that the floor is unexposed, but, by Islamic law, there are no statues, pictures, etc.

Egypt is Islam and Islam is Egypt. President Sadat knows this—and so do the Moslems.

JAY HARRIS:

New Man In Town

CONG. KENT HANCE is wasting no time in getting acquainted with the ways of Washington.

And his new title. And new office space. And a place to live. Among other things...

The new representative from the 19th Congressional District was due back in Lubbock late last night after his second trip to the nation's capital in the past three weeks.

His first was to meet with other new congressmen, get himself named temporary chairman of the New Members' Caucus, and with wife, Carol, purchase a home in Falls Church, Va.

Kent's journey this week was to draw for office space, detour by Austin to clean out his desk there and head home to prepare for at least a two-year move to the madhouse on the Potomac.

IN BETWEEN, Kent has been busy putting a staff together, listening to people with problems and conferring with Mr. Mahon on occasion.

It's been hectic and still is. Despite the fact Kent and Carol are over the euphoria of winning a hard-fought election, the business of taking up a new life has each swinging between Cloud Nine and furrowed brows.

Rep. Hance wasted no time in getting a foot firmly in the stirrups on two counts in his first few days in Washington. In being chosen to head up the new members' caucus, he not only was honored by other freshmen Democrats from around the nation, but attracted some attention from party people and the press.

At a reception at the White House for the new members, Hance came in for some praise from none other than Bob Strauss, President Carter's general troubleshooter and ambassador of trade.

IN GETTING named to head the caucus, Kent had some heavy help from the six other new Texas House members.

Lending support, and lobbying with others from Florida to California, were Rep. Chas. Stenholm from the neighboring 17th District, Rep. Phil Gramm from down Aggieland way, and Rep. Mickey Leland from Houston, who took over Barbara Jordan's seat.

Kent says he also got support from newly-elected Rep. Ed Stack, a 68-year-old former sheriff from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Rep. Martin Sabo, a former speaker of the House in Minnesota.

In all, there are 41 new Democrat House members, including four from California, four from Florida, all of whom, along with four blacks, supported the West Texan. Over on the GOP side, there are 36 first-year representatives. A permanent chairman of the caucus will be named in January. Kent isn't seeking that job.

THE LUBBOCK solon tells us he has a good start on assembling a staff to help hold down the fort, although it isn't complete.

Heading up the office staff in Washington will be Mrs. Gay Hume, one of the mainstays in Cong. Mahon's office, Kent says.

Mrs. Patti Pyle of Lubbock will join the Capitol staff as an aide and chief receptionist. Donnie Richards, a Texas Tech grad and widely known area newsman, will handle Kent's public relations and press business. Donnie is the brother of Charles Richards, former UPI news bureau chief here and at last reports with the AP in Dallas.

Kent says Ricky Knox and Vicki Nixon, two mainstays of the Lubbock office and his campaign, will remain here to help keep him in touch with the district and vice versa.

IN THE MEANTIME, Carol and Ron, 13, and Susan, 9, are winding up their Christmas shopping and packing for the move to Falls Church.

Mrs. Hance says the family decided to buy a home in the Virginia suburb, "about 15 or 20 minutes from the capital," after looking over the market on leasing and older homes in Washington itself.

The new Hance house is a "four-bedroom, two-story, brick and wood home on a tiny lot with a big wooded park behind it," Carol says.

"It's a lovely setting in a nice, quiet neighborhood," Carol enthused. But when asked if real estate was still high in the Washington area, she gasped and exclaimed: "That was the biggest shock of my life. I couldn't believe what they are asking and getting for what we consider just ordinary to nice houses down here..."

Anyway, it's to Falls Church for the Hances and the family cat, Shadow, ere long.

BACK ON Capitol Hill, Kent was showing some independence on a crucial House showdown.

The Lubbockite voted to open to the public the House's deliberations on what to do about Rep. Charles Diggs, the black Michigan Democrat, convicted earlier this year on 29 counts of mail fraud and payroll padding on his congressional staff.

Diggs was relected but may be stripped of his chairmanship on the foreign affairs subcommittee. The House also considered two other members who were disciplined last year for their role in the Korean bribery scandal.

The closed session was brought about on a voice vote on a motion by House Majority Leader Jim Wright. Aides said the question of disciplining congressmen was a "family matter" that could be discussed with greater frankness in secret. Hance said: "I didn't vote to close it. I think that even though this is an internal matter, the public needs to know what we're doing."

If Cong. Kent Hance will remember that—even if he has to buck the entire Democratic leadership and the guy in the White House on some key issues—then he may not have to worry about selling that house in Falls Church two years hence.

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

Q. "ON WHICH type of turf is a football player more likely to get hurt, natural or artificial?"

A. Artificial, no doubt about it. Consider this: Injury data collected over three NFL seasons shows that 10 of the 12 stadiums with the highest injury rates have artificial turf, and 10 of the 11 stadiums with the lowest injury rates have natural turf.

Incredible as it may seem, the quality of aerial photography is now so good that the rank of a foot soldier can be seen from pictures taken at 100,000 feet. Or so the experts report.

You know that actor called Dirk Benedict on the TV series "Battlestar Galactica"? He found his stage name on a menu under "Eggs."

Would you agree that President Woodrow Wilson with his Ph.D. was the most scholarly of all our chief executives? It's noteworthy, I think, that he is said to have never missed an episode of the comic strip called "Krazy Kat."

Administration Set Revisions In Price, Wage Rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration Wednesday announced revisions in the wage and price guidelines it hopes will stem the nation's rate of inflation. Here is the Council on Wage and Price Stability's "fact sheet" account of the changes:

"The Council on Wage and Price Stability today issued modifications of the general wage and price standards. They included two significant modifications, as well as a number of minor changes. The two significant revisions tighten the profit margin test and modify the treatment of maintenance of benefits — where costs of the benefit program increase but there is no corresponding increase in benefit to the employee.

The Profit Margin Test

"Under the previous standard, firms that could not meet the price deceleration test for some compelling reason, such as uncontrollable costs, were allowed to go to the profit margin test. That test required that the firms could not exceed the average profit margin of the best two out of the last three fiscal years.

The new standard retains the old profit margin test but adds an additional test (designed to discourage firms from simply increasing prices at the same rate as costs) to limit actual dollar profit increase to 6.5 percent (the inflation expectation with full compliance with the program) plus any increase in dollar profits resulting from increased physical output.

Maintenance of Benefits

"The old standard counted all increased costs of health care and pension benefits against the 7 percent pay standard, even if they provided no increased benefit to the employee.

"The new standard would count only the first 7 percent of health care cost increases where there are no increases in benefits, although any cost increase resulting from increase in benefits would be counted in full. Similarly, there will be no cost increase in pension benefits counted against the pay standard as long as the increase is required by law or actuarial requirements and as long as there is no increase in benefit to the employee. As in health care, any pension cost increase attributed to increased benefits will be counted in full against the pay standard.

Other Changes

"The old standard set a 9.5 percent price increase as the maximum increase allowed under the deceleration standard, but set no floor. The new standard sets a floor of 1.5 percent, so that any firm with a price increase below this is in compliance regardless of its base period experience.

"The old standard used a deceleration rate for professional services. The new standard sets a 6.5 percent average limit on professional services charged by a firm or individual and a 9.5 percent cap on any single professional service creating a simpler standard that is easier to monitor than deceleration.

Wage, Price Guidelines Changes Explained

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are some questions and answers concerning changes in the Carter administration's voluntary wage and price guidelines announced Wednesday:

Q. How has the voluntary wage guideline proposed by President Carter been changed?

A. The original guideline proposed a limit in annual increases in wages AND all fringe benefits of 7 percent. Now, certain increased costs for some fringe benefits will not be counted in the 7 percent figure.

Q. Which costs and benefits won't be counted?

A. Only the increased costs due to inflation for maintaining health insurance and pension benefits at existing levels. In the case of health insurance, the first 7 percent of the increase in the employer-paid premium would be counted as part of the guideline. But the rest of the cost increase resulting from inflation would not. All cost increases necessary to maintain pensions at their existing levels would be excluded.

Q. How would this be calculated?

A. Suppose it is determined that the U.S. pension funding law requires an employer to contribute an additional 5 cents an hour per employee to its worker pension fund just to keep paying out the same pension benefits. That 5 cents would not be counted as part of the 7 percent limit when the increased cost of a new labor contract is negotiated.

Similarly, if employer-paid health insurance premimums go up $10 a month per employee for the same amount of coverage, only the first 7 percent of that $10, or 70 cents, would be figured into the total increased cost of a new contract. The remaining $9.30 would not.

Q. What about cost increases for improved pensions and better health care coverage negotiated in a new contract? Would they be counted as part of the 7 percent guideline?

A. Yes. The cost of providing any new benefits would be figured into the guideline.

Q. Do these changes make a big difference in the overall voluntary wage guideline President Carter announced on Oct. 24?

A. No, according to President Carter's chief inflation adviser, Alfred E. Kahn. Kahn contends the cost of fringe benefits is small compared to wages. He estimates that the exemptions effectively would boost the wage guideline from 7 percent to between 7.1 and 7.2 percent, on a nationwide average.

Q. Were these changes made to accommodate major unions and encourage their cooperation with the program?

A. Not according to Kahn, who says more businesses asked for these changes than labor groups.

Q. What other changes have been made in the wage guideline?

A. The 7 percent guideline will not include government-mandated cost increases for items such as Social Security, paid pregnancy leave or mandatory retirement.

Q. What changes have been made in the price guideline?

A. The basic price guideline is unchanged. It asks businesses to hold price increases to 0.5 percent less than their average increases during 1976 and 1977. For example, if a firm raised prices 5 percent in 1976 and 7 percent in 1977 — a two-year average of 6 percent, the new price rise should be held to 5.5 percent. The figure is an average that appplies to all of a company's products, not any one item.

Q. Are there any exceptions to that?

A. Yes. The guideline excludes firms that could not meet that test because of unusual circumstances, such as very large cost increases. As first proposed, companies could have exceeded the price guideline as long as their profits did not exceed their average rate of return during two of the previous three years.

Q. How has this been changed?

A. On reconsideration, the administration decided that too many companies would claim unusual circumstances, ignore the price guideline in favor of the profit test, which the administration viewed as too generous.

The new guideline for companies that use the profit test limits the firms to a 6.5 percent rise in profits resulting from price increases.

Q. What about higher profits that result from increased production and sales?

A. Profits from improved business — and not higher prices — could exceed 6.5 percent.

Q. Were there other changes in the price guidelines?

A. Yes, as they apply to doctors, lawyers and other professionals, who originally were covered by the overall guideline. Now, professional fee increases are limited to an average of 6.5 percent a year.

POPE ISSUES APPEAL

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II made a pressing appeal Wednesday for the liberation of kidnapping victims. The pope did not single out any country when he referred to "a form of violence which has become so frequent in recent years," but Vatican observers said he had in mind Italy, where kidnapping has become a common occurrence by criminals and terrorists.

U.S. Issues First Notes In Marks

BONN, West Germany (AP) — U.S. Treasury notes denominated in West German marks attracted "great attention" among dealers, financial sources said Wednesday, but it will be Thursday before officials know how well the notes are selling.

The West German central bank, agent for the sale, will announce Thursday which bids from potential buyers have been accepted. It marks the first time the U.S. Treasury has ever publicly offered foreign-denominated notes.

American citizens or West German-based branches of American companies are entitled to bid for the notes as long as they are willing to pay for them in German currency.

The respected financial newspaper Handelsblatt quoted sources as saying they expected demand for the notes, referred to in the German press as "Carter Notes," to exceed supply.

"The basic trend was not unfriendly," the paper reported.

The U.S. government began offering the notes, valued between 2.5 billion and 3 billion marks, on Tuesday as part of its program to shore up the dollar.

With the marks obtained through the sale, the government can buy surplus dollars on world money markets and stabilize the price of its currency.

Bidders for the notes, which mature in three to four years, are expected to include banks and other large financial institutions, since purchases must be in multiples of 500,000 marks, or about $250,000.

According to Handelsblatt, notes maturing in three years will bring 5.95 percent interest while those redeemable after four years will bring 6.20 percent interest.

The notes are available only to West German residents. Buyers will not be subject to U.S. withholding tax on interest from the notes, the Treasury Department said.

The department plans to begin offering notes denominated in Swiss francs next month. The department said it is considering issuing yen-denominated notes in Japan next year.

U.S. officials have been negotiating with their West German counterparts for several weeks over details of the issue.

Street Violence Continues Against Shah's Foes

ISFAHAN, Iran (AP) — Iranian troops firing automatic weapons killed three more persons Wednesday in assaults against opponents of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi in Isfahan, well-placed sources say. The death toll reported by various sources after three days of violence was 44, but the government confirmed only nine.

Soldiers sprayed volleys in the streets and military-led mobs of loyalists roamed this picturesque central Iranian city in search of shah opponents to beat up with clubs and wooden staves.

Isfahan hospitals, crammed with 700 gunshot casualties and victims of savage street beatings, reported the 44 dead since rioting began Monday night in connection with the Shiite Moslem holy period of Ashura.

As doctors in blood-spattered white coats tended the wounded, Dr. Fiarwoosh Sehhat, a U.S.-trained surgeon at Isfahan's Soraya Hospital, said: "This is unbelievable. The soldiers have been shooting at people who came to donate blood for the wounded."

Moments after he spoke, a man reported to have been shot Tuesday as he waited in the line outside Askarieh Hospital to give blood died in Soraya's operating theater.

A large force of soldiers with armored vehicles plastered with portraits of the 59-year-old shah controlled the streets while helicopters patrolled above the tense city of one million people.

Authorities so far have confirmed nine dead and 65 wounded since Monday night, when anti-shah protesters attacked with dynamite satchel bombs the local headquarters of SAVAK, the shah's secret police, and other government buildings.

At Askarieh Hospital, a gynecological center transformed into an emergency aid station for the casualties, doctors reported troops were dragging bodies away in an apparent effort to camouflage the size of the death toll.

The violence in Isfahan, a historic city of domes, mosques and tree-lined boulevards 250 miles south of Tehran, is among the worst that has torn this oil-rich nation since opposition to the shah erupted in January.

Ayatullah Khomaini, the self-exiled leader of the Shiite Moslem sect, has been encouraging his followers to rebel against the shah's Westernization campaign. He said Wednesday that oil supplies to countries supporting the shah would be cut off if his religious forces come to power and would remain in force "as long as these heads of state stay in power."

In a communique written in his home outside Paris, the 78-year-old Khomaimi singled out the United States, saying Congress "must take issue" with President Carter to stop backing the shah.

The Iranian unrest, including a 10-day-old oil industry strike, has forced the government to begin importing kerosene to meet the immediate needs for heating and lighting and to meet an increased demand for the refined product. Oil officials in London Wednesday were reported to be negotiating with major oil companies for more kerosene.

National crude oil production, normally 6 million barrels daily, Wednesday was reported at 1.7 million barrels.

In Isfahan, processions of thousands of pro-shah demonstrators, chanting "javid shah" — long live the shah — toured the city, honking horns. Many appeared to be peasants trucked in from the countryside.

Soldiers handed out portraits of the shah to motorists and any vehicle that did not have one on its windshield was stopped. Western correspondents saw several drivers dragged from their autos by troops and witnessed attacks on suspected shah opponents by squads of burly men, some of them wearing barely concealed pistols under their jackets.

Opposition sources said the same thing was happening all over the city. Correspondents saw victims carried groaning into hospitals, their heads bleeding from club wounds. One 12-year-old boy was carried in with a bullet wound in the arm.

Western diplomats reported the army had used tear gas and opened fire Monday night after demonstrators began their rampage, but denied reports that the army used helicopter gunships to attack anti-shah forces in the street battles.

One American executive, who asked not to be identified, commented: "Some Americans were attacked during the trouble, but none was badly injured. We're behind the army here. If the troops had not done what they did when they cracked down we'd all have been out of here."

The thousands of Americans living around Isfahan kept off the streets as the pro-shah forces took over.

New Charge Filed In Mass Slaying

BEAUMONT (AP) — Another murder charge was filed Wednesday against Linda May Burnett, 30, of Nederland, accused in the mass slaying last July of five members of a Winnie, Texas, family.

She was accused specifically of capital murder during the course of a robbery in the death of Elmer Phillips. It was the second time she has been charged in Phillips' death. She pleaded innocent to the additional charge.

Miss Burnett and Joe Dugas of Port Acres, Texas, were indicted in mid-July for the execution-style slayings of the Phillips family, whose bodies were found in a common grave near Fannett, Texas, last July 9.

The family had disappeared from a home in Winnie eight days earlier.

Mrs. Burnett, a housewife, was freed in July on a $100,000 bond after arraignment on five capital murder charges, and posted an additional $25,000 bond on the new charge. Dugas has been in jail since his arrest.

Prosecutors did not explain why she was charged a second time for Phillips' death, but District Attorney Jim McGrath said, "The investigation is continuing and we are constantly uncovering new evidence."

In a separate action, State District Judge Larry Gist set a hearing Friday on the prosecution's motion to obtain samples of Miss Burnett's handwriting and voice. McGrath said the state is entitled to receive the samples "for comparison purposes" but he declined comment on what samples may already exist.

Gist has imposed a gag order in the case, prohibiting principals from discussing details with reporters.

Prosecutors have not said what the motive was in the killings, but Dugas was once married to a daughter of Phillips who moved out of the state several years ago.

Exiled Khomaini Wields Power Over Iranians

TEHRAN (AP) — The Shah of Iran listens to his generals while the teeming masses take commands from the shah's main foe — a holy man — working 3,000 miles away in France to topple the pro-West monarchy.

Ayatullah Ruhollah Khomaini, 78, one of six living imams of Iran's dominant Shiite Moslem faith, holds the highest position one can aspire to as a Shiite clergyman.

The spiritual head of Iran's 32 million Shiite Moslems was sent into exile in 1963 by the shah following violent religious demonstrations against the shah's reforms — changes Khomaini argues conflict with Islamic precepts.

The reforms gave women the right to vote and took the farmlands of the mullahs, Moslem religious teachers and the country's second-largest landholders, and redistributed them to peasants.

Khomaini spent 15 years in Iraq, keeping alive his opposition to the shah. He recently moved his headquarters to an area outside Paris and continues to call for strikes and mass demonstrations.

Religious leaders, university professors and persons who have come in contact with Khomaini say he is an austere, deeply religious man who has dedicated his life to his faith — and to bringing down Iran's 59-year-old imperial ruler.

Born in the town of Khomeyn, near the capital, he was drawn to the priesthood at an early age. One of three sons, Khomaini taught at religious schools in the holy city of Qom and in Isfahan, the ancient Persian city of mosques.

When he was a young man, his father, Mustafa, was killed as a result of a personal dispute with the governor of Khomeyn.

The white bearded, black-turbaned Khomaini has had two wives, one who gave him a son in 1933, and a second, with whom he had a second son and three daughters.

Khomaini's directives reach his Shiite followers through a network of 180,000 mullahs. When he asked Iranians to shed their blood in a jihad, or holy war against the shah, they responded.

Since the Moharram religious mourning period began Dec.2, it is estimated that more than 100 of his supporters have heeded his call and died in a hail of army bullets in cities and towns throughout the country. More are expected to die before Moharram ends Dec.29.

Since the bloody unrest erupted in January, more than 1,800 are estimated to have died and Khomaini's poster has become the battle flag in almost every anti-shah demonstration.

The rank and file Moslems want formation of an Islamic republic, headed by Khomaini, but Khomaini, according to his followers here, does not aspire to heading a government but rather playing his usual influential background role.

Khomaini has said publicly he wants no part of active politics and has an unnamed politician ready to fill the void if his campaign to topple the shah succeeds.

Politicians who have aligned their campaign with Khomaini's are afraid to cross him for fear of losing their minimal influence among supporters.

Attempts by the shah to form a coalition government from old time politicians has so far failed because of the threat by Khomaini that he would not support such a compromise.

Government attempts to undermine Khomaini's influence among the nation's faithful has failed. One attempt to connect Khomaini with Communist elements earlper this year turned out to be a colossal government blunder that greatly enhanced his position.

The shah and his Western advisers, including U.S. Embassy diplomats who usually keep a finger on the nation's pulse, have clearly underestimated Khomaini's strength.

"May Allah help us," said a liberal intellectual Iranian, when asked what he would do if Khomaini succeeded in toppling the shah and installing an Islamic republic.

"I'm not a royalist, but turning back the clock of civilization after years of Westernization we've been subjected to, is pure suicide," he added.

But the possibility of the shah losing ground is clearly in many minds here these days. Apprehension among the business community and wealthy classes has heightened as the threat of Iran adopting strict Islamic principles looms.

Found Weapon Not Sniper's, Officials Say

IRVING (AP) — Police Wednesday said a deer rifle found in the trunk of a car carrying three teen-agers was not the gun used by a sniper who shot to death two strangers from a highway overpass during the weekend.

"We have ruled it out as the weapon used," said Police Capt. Joe Lowe. "We're back where we were before the weapon came in. We're continuing the investigation, but our leads are rather slim right now."

The .30-caliber rifle, equipped with a telescopic sight, was found by Dallas police in the trunk of a car Tuesday night and turned over to Irving authorities who applied ballistics tests.

Officers searched the youths' car after hearing several shots in an isolated area about five miles from where the sniper fire occurred. The youths reportedly had been shooting at signs in a small park just before they were stopped.

The sniper fired at random at cars on Texas 183 near the Dallas-Fort Worth Airport Saturday night, killing a 12-year-old boy in one car and a 43-year-old man in another vehicle. Rifle fire also shot out the tires of a pickup truck, but no one in the truck was hurt.

Since the shooting, rewards for the capture and conviction of the sniper offered by various sources have totaled $22,000, including $10,000 from an anonymous Dallas businessman.

The victims of the shooting Saturday night, Steven T. Gaulden, 12, of Plano, and Raymond Douglas Andrew, 43, of Arlington, were buried Tuesday.

American teen-agers spent $1.81 billion on gifts for family members and friends during the 1977 Christmas season.

Pakistani Crisis Feared Simmering

WASHINGTON (AP) — With leftists threatening the pro-American Shah of Iran and Afghanistan newly aligned with the Soviet bloc, some U.S. diplomats fear a violent crisis may be simmering in neighboring Pakistan, long an ally of the United States.

A poor country that is heavily in debt, importing twice as much as it exports, Pakistan is vulnerable enough without real or imagined threats from nearby countries — not only Iran and Afghanistan but the Soviet Union and archenemy India. There also is a major potential threat to Pakistan's stability from within.

American officials believe the Pakistanis themselves have planted a time bomb that could upset their nation's political balance by jailing former President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, who is facing execution for murder. Pakistan's supreme court will rule on his appeal in a few weeks.

The United States and other nations have asked Pakistan to show Bhutto mercy, but President Mohammad Zia ul-Haq, the country's military ruler, has said that if the court upholds the death sentence he will not commute it.

"The trouble may be coming up about New Year's," said one U.S. official, who asked not to be named. The ruling by the Pakistani supreme court is due in the next two or three weeks.

Whatever happens could trigger violence among Pakistan's 72 million citizens, U.S. officials fear. Bhutto's followers could rise up if he is executed, and his enemies could do the same if he is freed.

Apart from that bitter domestic controversy, Pakistan faces pressures on the international front.

Just to the east lies India, the traditional enemy with which Pakistan has fought three losing wars in the past 30 years. Relations have improved recently, but their prolonged quarrel over the province of Kashmir, squeezed between India and China at Pakistan's northern tip, is still unsettled.

Some Pakistanis still fear that India, despite claims to the contrary, has the ultimate goal of absorbing them. Pakistan is well aware that India has two plants for reprocessing nuclear fuel — while it has none — and has exploded a nuclear device.

To the north of Pakistan lies China, with which relations have been good, and Afghanistan, which has been within the Soviet orbit since a military coup last April.

Only a narrow strip of Afghan territory separates the Soviet Union from Pakistan. But more important, a pro-Soviet government in Kabul revives the centuries-old fear of a thrust toward the Mediterranean by the Russians — now motivated by an interest in oil and greater influence in the Middle East and Africa.

To the west of Pakistan is another big question mark, Iran.

The Pakistani government had hoped for Iran's help in buying planes that could match the new Jaguar fighter-bombers India has bought from Britain and France. But the shah demonstrated early in his country's violent unrest a strong inclination to cut back on arms dealings and spend more of Iran's vast oil income on programs that would help calm his people.

Pakistan had asked the United States for A-7 fighter-bombers, but was turned down. President Carter has decided not to raise the quality of weapons in the Indian subcontinent, nor to become its major arms supplier. Instead, the United States is offering F-5s, which are suitable mainly as defensive interceptors.

Pakistan could decide to go ahead with purchase of the Mirage F-1 from France, to be followed by a later model scheduled for service in the early 1980s.

Herod Orders Wise Men To Report On New King

Chapter 10
AN ORDER FROM HEROD
By LUISE PUTCAMP JR.

(WHAT HAS HAPPENED: After their rendezvous in the city of red rock, the travelers go to Herod's city. There, questions about a newborn king attract Herod's soldiers. Leaving behind the camel drivers and serving men, the three wise men and the boy are escorted by the soldiers to Herod's palace.)

"When you have found this child," said Herod, every word distinct, "bring me word."

Was Herod young? Was he old? How was he dressed? Afterward, I couldn't remember. I know only that he leaned forward with his elbows on his knees, and his fingers were heavy with jewels.

His dark eyes never left the faces of my three wise men.

"You have been a short time in my city," said Herod. His voice rasped. It must have carried to the farthest corner of that great room. "Yet even the lowliest water carrier knows why you have come."

Melchior, Caspar and Balthasar nodded their heads respectfully.

"You ask: 'Where is he that is born King of the Jews?'" continued Herod.

Melchior spoke. His voice was as deep and smooth as Herod's was rough. 'That is true," he said politely.

"I have the answer to your question!" said Herod. "My priests have shown me the answer."

"We will be in your debt for an answer," said Balthasar, careful and courtly.

I looked closely at his face. But we knew the answer. My wise men were play-acting now. It came to my mind that all of this — the meeting, the questions in the city, the visit to Herod — was some drama we played out. But why?

Herod leaned back in his golden chair. He folded his arms across his thick chest.

"Before I tell you what you want to know, he said, "I would hear about your star, this star you follow."

People stirred in the hall around us.

"We have seen this star," Herod went on. "There are as many stories about it as there are people to tell them."

My wise men were not quick to answer. Herod leaned forward, his big dark eyes scanning their faces.

"When did the star appear?" he asked, looking directly at Melchior.

"The star appeared in our countries at the same time it appeared in yours," Melchior said simply.

Melchior had not really answered the king's question!

Herod turned abruptly to Caspar. "And what country do you come from?"

"My land is the land of Sheba, the queen of a long time ago," said Gaspar, standing tall.

"My land is far to the south," said Balthasar, "past the red sea that parted long ago to let some travelers pass."

I thought Herod would turn next to Melchior. But he was looking at me. My heart thudded in my throat. His eyes went to Balthasar.

"Who told you to follow the star?" he said.

Balthasar's gaze was steady. "We did what our hearts told us to do," he said.

Like someone tiring of a game, Herod held up his hand.

"The king you seek," he said abruptly. "He is in Bethlehem of Judaea."

The people made the sound dry grass makes when a wind goes through it.

Melchior said calmly: "That is well to know." And my three wise men bowed.

Already I was tensing myself to move, to get out of this place. One of Herod's fingers suddenly stabbed the air.

"But there is one more thing," said Herod. His eyes narrowed. His voice dropped.

Melchior, Caspar and Balthasar stood motionless.

"When you have found this child," said Herod, every word distinct, "bring me word."

I looked in alarm at my wise men. Come back to this fortress?

Herod had one more thing to say. And my neck grew cold to hear it because these words did not mean what they said:

"Bring word," said Herod, "because I, too, want to worship him!"

Spock Leading Oklahoma N-Plant Foes

TULSA (AP) — Dr. Benjamin Spock led more than 60 placard-waving, anti-nuclear demonstrators to federal hearings on Oklahoma's first proposed nuclear power plant Wednesday.

Spock, widely read author and baby doctor, was in Tulsa to give a fund-raising speech Wednesday night for a group opposing Public Service Co. of Oklahoma's proposed Black Fox nuclear power plant.

The plant is the subject of hearings before the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's Atomic Safety and Licensing Board. The panel's permission is needed before construction can start at a site near Inola.

The protesters marched from the downtown pedestrian mall to the federal courthouse, where a hearing room was packed for a session on arguments over a secret General Electric report on its nuclear technology.

GE attorneys have filed a motion to quash a subpoena issued for the report, contending revelation of its contents could damage the company's competitive position in the nuclear field.

Opponents in the hearing maintain the report contains references to 27 safety-related issues that could affect the safety of the proposed Black Fox plant. GE is to provide reactors for the plant.

Site preparation for the $2 billion plant has been under way since the commission issued a limited work authorization during the summer.

Clinic Raps X-Rays During Pregnancy

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Routine chest X-rays of pregnant women are a waste of money and add no useful medical information if the women's medical histories are known, a Mayo Clinic study concludes.

Such X-rays are common at many clinics, especially those which treat indigent patients, the Mayo investigators said in an article scheduled for publication Friday in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Dr. George Malkasian, chairman of the division of obstetrics and medical gynecology, said Mayo examined case histories of 11,725 pregnant women X-rayed at the clinic from January 1966 through December 1975.

"Before the study, every pregnant woman got X-rayed," Malkasian said in an interview Wednesday. "But now we are more selective and X-rays are done only when the attending physician feels there are factors indicating a need for them."

X-ray examination turned up abnormalities in only 74 cases, or fewer than one percent of the cases studied, the investigators said.

In each case, they said, the patients either had a prior history of the problem, the abnormalities were associated with pregnancy and went away later, or physicians would have called for an X-ray anyway, based on physical exam.

"At $17.50 for each examination, the cost was not warranted because no roentgenographic finding led to any beneficial change in patient treatment," they said.

Justice Of Peace Applications Due

Today is the deadline for applications for the Precinct No. 5 justice of the peace position in Lubbock County.

D.J. Manis of Wolfforth ran unopposed for the office this year, but resigned recently. He said the $354 per month salary set by county commissioners was inadequate.

Property Crime Reports Accelerate Across City

Property crime complaints continued to mount Wednesday, with one construction worker telling police he lost about $1,000 worth of tools and materials to thieves.

Bob G. Neely, construction superintendent at a site at 19th Street and Frankford Avenue, said a $676 air compressor, $300 nail gun, an electric drill and 1,565 feet of wire were taken from that location between Dec. 4 and Wednesday.

I.L. Rose told officers Wednesday that a $350 rifle, $250 shotgun and a $125 .38-caliber pistol were missing from his 3814 54th St. residence.

Brad G. Gober said that $625 worth of furnishings, including a chest of drawers, sofa, chair, and refrigerator, were missing from a vacant rent house he owns at 2624-A Second Place.

Ollie Coleman of 3303 E. Bates St. said that a calculator, clock and food were missing from his home. He said the burglars entered the residence Wednesday morning by breaking a window in the dining room.

Isabel Castillo told police that car burglars Sunday made off with $310 worth of her property. She said a leather coat, camera and her purse were taken from her 1969 Oldsmobile while it was parked outside a club at 13th Street and Avenue F late Sunday.

Andrew Martinez said a $300 color television set was stolen from his 1514 32nd St. residence Wednesday morning. He said the burglars forced the back door of his home to get to the set.

Jerry Thomas Reynolds of 4709 45th St. told police that two motorcycle helmets, valued together at $180, were taken off his motorcycle while it was parked outside his home Tuesday night.

Jack B. Hart reported $60 in change was missing from the soft drink machine in the lobby of his apartment complex at 313 Ave. T. Hart told officers there was no sign of forced entry to the machine.

It may have been the biggest bust of the year Tuesday when police arrested a 26-year-old woman who allegedly stuffed 19 bras in her blouse and walked out of the Montgomery Ward & Co. department store at 5001 Boston Ave.

Store security guard Ed Barclay told police he watched the suspect attempt to sneak the undergarments under her blouse and walk out of the store about 3:30 p.m.

Reports show the suspect was detained by Barclay until police arrived and transported her to the county jail.

Lubbock recorded its 287th robbery of the year about 1 a.m. Wednesday when a knife-wielding man allegedly held up a 20-year-old Lubbock woman at Fifth Street and Avenue X.

Vickie Contreras said the man approached her from behind, placed a knife to her back and said, "Give me your money; keep on walking." She said when she asked again what the bandit wanted, he pressed the knife harder against her.

However, reports show the woman gave the man her purse, containing about $20, and fled without being injured. Police were looking for a tall, muscular black man in his late teens or early 20s.

Police about noon Tuesday arrested a 20-year-old man, his wife, 17, and a 14-year-old boy after they reportedly found stolen property in the suspects' car.

Reports show the three were stopped in the 400-block of Avenue R. Officers said they also found brass knuckles and a switchblade knife in the woman's purse.

In one of several reported house burglaries, David Mahan of 2512 Second St. said he lost $4,170 in stereo equipment and a television set when burglars struck his home between 4 p.m. Tuesday and 12:15 a.m. today.

Labor Government Loses Crucial Vote

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister James Callaghan's minority Labor government lost a crucial House of Commons vote Wednesday night on its anti-inflation pay policy and immediately staked its future on a vote of confidence.

Callaghan called the vote of confidence for Thursday. If the government is defeated, there could be a general election within weeks.

Political reporters at the Commons, after talking with party leaders, said they expected the government to survive the vote with a small majority.

The crisis came after the opposition Conservatives, led by Margaret Thatcher, introduced a motion attacking the government's use of economic sanctions against companies that exceed pay hikes of 5 percent this year. The 5 percent limit is designed to control inflation.

The motion attacked "arbitrary use" of sanctions not approved by Parliament. It passed 285-279.

A further vote, incorporating the censure in a more general motion on the government's counter-inflation policy, resulted in a second government defeat, this time 285-283.

At that point, with the Commons in uproar, Callaghan said a motion of confidence in his government would be introduced "forthwith" and voted upon Thursday.

He said: "The government will accept the verdict of the House and, if we are defeated, we shall ask the country to choose."

By this, he meant that a defeat for the government in Thursday's vote will force him to call a general election.

There was confusion as to how many of Labor's own members, particularly from the disgruntled left wing, abstained in the vote.

Many of the 635 members were absent. Only 564 voted on the first motion and 568 on the second.

Labor is in a minority in the Commons with 308 seats, against 280 Conservatives, 13 Liberals, 11 Scots Nationalists, 10 Ulster Unionists, 3 Welsh nationalists, 2 Scottish Labor, one Social Democratic Labor member from Northern Ireland, and one independent.

This makes 629 members. There are four non-voting officers and two vacancies, making a total of 635.

Labor depends upon support from the smaller factions to get its program through.

Callaghan must call an election by October 1979 when the government's five-year term expires. Defeat on Thursday's motion of confidence would bring an election within weeks.

The U.S.-owned Ford Motor Co. was the immediate cause of the crisis.

After a nine-week strike at its British plants, the company broke the government pay code by agreeing to a 17 percent pay increase.

The government responded with sanctions, including withdrawal of various subsidies and an order to state agencies not to buy Ford products.

This drew complaints from Ford and top business chiefs, labor union leaders, left-wing Laborites and the opposition Tories.

Soviet Threat Warned By Arms Chief

satellites to keep track of how many a nation had. Satellites are the main tool used by both sides in verifying compliance with arms limits.

"I would examine whether the deployment of the MX in a mode proven difficult to verify would be in the national interest of the United States," he said.

President Carter is believed to be considering whether to ask Congress for MX development funds in his fiscal 1980 budget.

No final price tag has been put on the weapon because of uncertainty about how it might be deployed. The Pentagon has considered putting the missile in cargo planes or in long, underground trenches. And it has considered a "shell game" strategy in which the missile would be moved from one silo to another to foil a first strike possibility.

Seignious would not discuss details of the most recent SALT II negotiations, which brought the two sides to the verge of an agreement.

But he said that if all goes well at the talks in Geneva next week, the treaty could be put in final draft form by late January and sent to the Senate in early February.

Seignious said he could promise to support the treaty because nearly all of its details have been settled.

He acknowledged that the proposed treaty would allow both sides to modernize their forces and increase their warheads per missile. But he said it should be considered as a phase in an evolutionary process that would first put outer limits on weapons arsenals and eventually lead to reductions.

Seignious has received a recess appointment, meaning that when Congress reconvenes next month, he will be subject to confirmation hearings by the Senate.

Meanwhile, two of the Senate's chief critics of the Panama Canal treaties said Wednesday Soviet leaders should have learned from the battle over that issue that President Carter will not easily win Senate approval of the SALT II arms limitation pact.

Senators Paul Laxalt, a Nevada Republican, and Dennis DeConcini, an Arizona Democrat, told a luncheon meeting of the conservative American Security Council that they tried to make this point while traveling as members of a recent 12-member Senate mission to the Soviet Union.

But both said they found among Soviet officials a "lack of understanding of how the United States operates" — and a general impression that if Carter really wants the SALT treaty he can simply force the Senate to ratify it.

"The canal treaties should have demonstrated to them that it is not a sure thing," said DeConcini, who voted for the Panama pacts only after a bitter struggle in which he forced Carter to add tough language on security guarantees.

PEACE TALKS SNAGGGED—U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance tells newsmen Wednesday in Jerusalem that differences remain between Israel and Egypt in the current round of peace negotiations. Vance's news conference came after he met with Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan, right, and Prime Minister Menchem Begin, not shown. A spokesman subsequently said that Vance was returning to Washington earlier than scheduled due to "urgent business." (AP Laserphoto)

Carter Seeks Ban On Press Search

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration proposed legislation Wednesday to prohibit police from conducting surprise searches of newspaper offices.

The legislation also would bar similar searches against anyone preparing information intended for release to the public.

"The heart of the administration's proposal is a 'no search' rule protecting the work product of any person preparing material for dissemination to the public," Attorney General Griffin Bell said in announcing the proposed legislation.

President Carter said, "I think this is a major step forward in protecting the integrity of the freedom of the press."

"Work Products" Cited

A reporter's notes, documents on which a story is based, photographs, film or recordings were cited by Bell as "work products" that are intended for protection against searches.

Bell said that the law, which would apply to state and local police as well as federal officials, would contain "two narrow exceptions" where search warrants could be issued.

Bell said a search could be permitted if there is "an imminent danger to life or serious bodily injury or if the individual is a suspect in the crime for which the evidence is sought."

Subpoena Required

A second feature of the proposed legislation would require authorities subpoena items if they were after what Bell called "non-work product documentary materials." He cited as examples in this category an extortion note or the film of a bank robbery taken by a hidden camera.

By requiring a subpoena, anyone possessing such material would have the opportunity to challenge police in court rather than submitting to a surprise search.

The legislation arises out of a Supreme Court decision last May 31 which upheld a police search of the Stanford Daily, a newspaper published at Stanford University.

Police Raid Paper

In that case, nine Palo Alto, Cal., policemen were injured in breaking up a group of demonstrators who occupied a hospital's administrative offices. Three days later the police raided the Stanford Daily looking for photo negatives in hopes of identifying the protesters.

In response to the Supreme Court decision there has been an outcry which led to introduction in Congress of numerous bills that would outlaw searches not only of newspaper offices but also those against anyone who is not a criminal suspect.

The Carter Administration on Wednesday took the position that the constitutional safeguard against such searches should not be extended to all non-criminal suspects, but rather should be limited to anyone who has the intention of publishing information.

Assistant Attorney General Philip Heymann, head of the criminal division, said that the administration's purpose was to protect the "lone scholar," the small-town newspaper as well as the major news media outlets.

Bell said, "We think what we're doing enhances the First Amendment right of freedom of the press and the public's right to know."

Application of the law to state and local police would hinge upon the Constitution's commerce clause, which would make the proposed legislation apply to more than federal officials. Bell said that any newspaper or other publication could be considered part of interstate commerce on a number of grounds, including the fact that production of paper involves interstate commerce.

Heymann noted that the proposal is designed to protect the so-called "whistleblower," the government official who seeks to expose government wrongdoing by disclosing sensitive information to the press.

Heymann also said that requiring police to get a subpoena would prevent the rummaging of news offices. To get a subpoena for evidence in a crime, police must specify exactly what they are after.

The bill was worked out in consultation with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who will take over in January as chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Jack C. Landau, director of the Committee for Freedom of the Press, applauded the proposed legislation.

"The decision ... is the most encouraging action this administration has taken in the First Amendment area since it took office. It will not, however, protect the average innocent citizen and that remains a serious concern," he said.

Legislators' Pay Raise Spurs Care Packages

ASHTABULA, Ohio (UPI) — A group of seniors at Ashtabula High School will drive a truck loaded with canned goods and old clothes to Columbus to help "our poor, needy Ohio legislators" who recently voted themselves a 28 percent pay hike.

American Government instructor Gerald Mapes said the students hope to embarrass the Ohio General Assembly members enough to get them to rescind the pay raise. And he says history shows the tactic has worked before.

Mapes said four Ashtabula high school seniors will make the trip in a pickup truck either today or Friday.

The teacher said about 60 of his 120 senior government students have been working on the project and are collecting food and other items.

"We feel the 28 percent pay hike is inappropriate, especially in view of President Carter's guidelines," Mapes said. "There is inflation for everyone and we expect the state legislature to live with it the same way we do."

Mapes said his class was just "copying history" in sending the Care packages to the Legislature.

Mapes said in the 1930s, during the depression, the U.S. Congress gave itself a pay boost and voters in Oregon were so incensed that they sent Congress bundles of food and clothes which embarrassed the congressmen enough so the pay raises never took effect.

Mapes said initially the school was going to send one box but now eight or 10 boxes are full and ready to go.

Items include canned goods, soup, dry food goods, old clothes, old shoes and even old golf clubs.

Witnesses Testify City Discriminates

not to discriminate against the military," while another club generating complaints went out of business.

"Inevitably you're going to have some isolated cases of discrimination, aren't you?" asked Shelton. "Lubbock's not unlike other cities you've been to, is it?"

"Yes, in that discrimination exists," Micucci replied.

Also testifying Wednesday was Jesse Reyes, the former community organizer of the Community Action Agency, who said it took four years for city council members to respond to a request for a park in the Chris Harwell neighborhood south of 34th Street between Avenues A and H.

The Chris Harwell Neighborhood Council, organized by Reyes, took its request for a park to the Parks and Recreation Department, then to council, he said. After being told the city owned no land in the area for a park, the nieghborhood council located a vacant lot as a possible site, Reyes testified.

Neighborhood council members were told they could use the lot as a park, provided they cleared the lot of trash and debris, he said.

Asked by attorney Tomas Garza if he knew of "any other instance when the City of Lubbock required citizens to clean off their own park," Reyes said "no."

But under questioning by attorney Shelton, Reyes acknowledged his testimony did not mean the city had never made such a request.

Two years after the neighborhood group made the first request for the park, playground equipment was installed on the lot, he said. Another two years passed before Copper-Rawlings Community Center was built, Reyes said.

Demands Claimed Ignored

A former Lubbock resident now living in San Antonio, Nephtali DeLeon, testified Wednesday concerning a 1971 peace march here.

DeLeon, an unsuccessful city council candidate about four years ago, said an extensive list of demands was presented to the city council, but no city action was taken on the demands.

The demands included the replacement of Police Chief J.T. Alley with a "more competent and compassionate individual" and the firing of nine Lubbock police officers for their inability to get along with blacks and Mexican-Americans.

Two witnesses testifying Wednesday morning, said segregation still exists in Lubbock, although it has assumed different forms.

Harold Chatman and T.J. Patterson said that segregation is now more subtle and involves more economic and social discrimination.

Chatman, a sixth-grade teacher, testified the city is using federal Community Development funds in a "crash program to bring up to par what they should have used tax money to keep up."

Asked if the expenditure of 80 percent of the city's share of the federal funds in minority areas did not show concern by city government, Chatman replied that federal guidelines require the city to spend the funds on lower income areas.

"It shows they're following guidelines," he said. "I can't connect that with concern — concern should have been there all along."

Council Race Query

Patterson, owner of the Lubbock Digest newspaper and assistant to the associate dean of Texas Tech's College of Business Administration, was asked why he had never run for city council.

"I just didn't want to run," Patterson said, referring to the lack of success by previous black candidates.

Patterson said he feels he could not win a city council election because of the lack of money to run a citywide race.

He also noted there are not enough blacks and Mexican-Americans in Lubbock to elect a minority city council member.

Patterson said he did not feel a city council member could understand minority needs without living in minority neighborhoods.

"Unless they live in the area, they can not totally understand the people. People have to have people representing them from that area to know how they feel," he said.

Vance Sets New Meet With Begin

called the secretary away.

Earlier, Vance indicated he had some hopes for his session in Israel. He told reporters on arrival from Cairo he believed he was in the "final stages" of his Mideast shuttle.

Sadat had also expressed optimism, saying in Cairo he was "quite ready" to sign a peace pact with Israel.

Vance shuttled to Jerusalem from Cairo carrying Egypt's conditional acceptance of a peace treaty — which the U.S. envoy and Sadat had worked out in several sessions in Cairo — suggesting the treaty be linked to a commitment for elections among the Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip.

Linked To Elections

Apparently with U.S. endorsement, Egypt proposed the treaty include "interpretive letters" linking it to elections among the 450,000 Palestinians in Gaza. Israel has refused to tie the peace treaty to steps toward self-government for the Palestinians.

The new proposals Vance and Sadat worked out also recognized Egypt's right to defend itself and act in defense of other Arab countries if they came under attack.

Evidently, these two proposals nettled Begin and other Israeli officials. Begin contends Palestinian autonomy is to be negotiated separately under the Camp David agreements. The Israelis also want a provision in the treaty giving Egypt's obligations to the treaty precedence over its obligations to other Arab states.

Israelis Cool

But the Israelis appeared cool to the proposal and Vance admitted that he was encountering difficulties. Vance told reporters after his second meeting with Israeli leaders that "there are differences of views between us" and that negotiations were at a "delicate stage."

Begin, referring to what he called Egyptian "proposals which we hear about for the first time," said Egypt and Israel had differences of opinion on a treaty.

There was no immediate explanation of proposed Egyptian revisions in the treaty with Israel, but Israeli radio reported Sadat wanted to withhold an immediate exchange of ambassadors when the accord was signed. ABC News, quoting a highly placed Israeli source, said the Egyptians now insist that full diplomatic relations with Israel not be established until self-governing bodies are in place and functioning in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, and the Israelis rejected this.

"Itinerary Evolved"

Sherman refused to directly link Vance's sudden change of plans to his talks with the Israeli team. "As negotiations continued here, the itinerary has evolved," said Sherman. He refused to say whether the business in Washington was related to the Middle East.

President Carter had pushed for completion of the treaty by the Sunday deadline suggested at the Camp David summit.

While Vance generally disapproves of shuttle diplomacy as a negotiating technique, he had said he was prepared to extend his stay in the area to try to break the "logjam."

Bank Swallows Coin Collection

HOUSTON (AP) — Mrs. X did what her husband asked her to do. She took his coin collection to their bank.

Allison Sanders, Houston Chronicle columnist, says the couple must remain anonymous. But the incident began when a friend suggested to Mr. X his coin collection of years was too valuable to keep around the house.

Mr. X became convinced the collection should be placed in his bank safety box. He asked Mrs. X to take the coins to their bank.

Mrs. X went to the bank, made out a deposit slip, and added the entire collection to their account.

Goodbye coin collection.

Changes Made In Voluntary Inflation Plan

the effect of limiting potential price increases in some cases.

Another change seeks to limit the increases in the fees charged by doctors, dentists and other professionals to 6.5 percent. Previously, these increases were subjected to the same proposed limitations as those for businesses.

Most of the revisions announced Wednesday followed objections by businesses and labor leaders who argued that some parts of the program were unfair.

AFL-CIO President George Meany remained critical of the wage-price program despite the announced changes.

"Aside from costs for existing pensions, the administration has done nothing to eliminate the inequities in its wage control program. It remains more unfair than even the Nixon control program and reflects no understanding of the realities of collective bargaining or labor-management relations.

Anti-inflation officials will begin turning their attention to the Teamsters negotiations, which begin today.

Under the revised program, the 7 percent wage standard will include pension benefits only if there are new benefits for the employees. Increased costs of old benefits will not count.

Also, only the first 7 percent of health care costs will be counted against the standard.

At his news conference, Kahn said he would not use the word "boycott" in asking consumers' cooperation.

Goodfellows

dy for each needy child.

But they need your help, Lubbock citizens, to deliver those packages to children waiting to see if they have been forgotten Christmas morning.

The volunteers early Christmas morning range from men, whole families, teenagers, college students and couples. And it's time well spent to see the joy in children's eyes when those Christmas packages are delivered on their doorsteps.

And Chief Goodfellow also needs your help in financing the 44th annual Goodfellow Christmas project. The project is financed entirely by contributions from throughout the area.

This year the estimated 10,000 packages for needy children will cost an estimated $15,000 and Christmas Day is fast approaching.

Contributions and volunteers' names may be mailed to: CHIEF GOODFELLOW, P.O. Box 491, Lubbock, Texas, 79408.

Cleveland Tax Plan Rebuffed By Council

CLEVELAND (AP) — A hostile City Council on Wednesday told Mayor Dennis J. Kucinich it was not inclined to support his plan to raise taxes as a way to save the city from defaulting on $15.5 million in notes.

After almost three hours of discussion, the council, in a non-binding straw vote, cast only 13 votes in favor of the mayor's proposal and 14 against, with six members absent.

Unless the city of 625,000 repays or refinances the notes which mature at 5 p.m. Friday, Cleveland will become the first major U.S. city to default since the Depression.

Council President George L. Forbes noted that the mayor needs 22 votes — two-thirds — to get his plan through before Friday and asked the administration to return this morning with a more detailed program.

Councilmen E.T. Caviness told Kucinich that he would not approve any plan that did not include the sale of Cleveland's long-neglected 46,000-customer Municipal Light system. There appeared to be widespread sentiment in the council for making the sale a condition for approving Kucinich's fiscal bailout plan.

"It's sort of like trying to run a race where you have to clear hurdles," Kucinich said earlier when a councilman expressed skepticism about all the pieces falling into place. "If you don't start to run, it is sure you are going to lose."

Kucinich said that unless the council takes action on his plan today, Cleveland will default Friday and would have to sell its assets, cut expenses or otherwise increase its revenues.

The council heard from John R. Carhuff, managing partner of the municipal division of the First Boston Corp., the city's financial adviser. Carhuff presented a timetable for action by the city, its banks, the public and the Ohio Legislature for resolving Cleveland's financial dilemma.

Carhuff said the plan could run into trouble in several areas, but that he felt it contained significant checks and balances to give comfort to all the parties involved.

City Council Majority Leader Basil M. Russo said the toughest hurdle would be legislative approval for a plan to sell bonds to replenish city coffers for money improperly spent in past years. He said such a practice is currently illegal and that the legislature may be reluctant to condone it.

The council's support for the income tax hike and bond measures is essential before the Friday default deadline.

Kucinich has said that layoffs loom in any case, but if the city defaults, there also will be cuts in health, recreation, sewer construction, road repairs and waste collection.

Three-quarters of the city's general fund is spent for salaries for its 10,000 employees. Two-thirds of the general fund supports the city's 1,900 police officers and 1,000 fire fighters.

Kucinich has already said he may have to lay off 250 police and 150 firemen in February, and 200 street workers in April.

Cleveland bankers, who hold $14 million of the $15.5 million in notes, have yet to say whether they will give the city more time to repay the debts.

Bankers are being asked to extend the city's debt for at least a few more months to see whether the public, which has defeated income tax hikes three times since 1968, will agree to a tax increase, and whether the Ohio Legislature will take action to place controls on Cleveland's finances.

In a televised speech Tuesday night, Kucinich outlined the complex proposal aimed at convincing bankers the city will repay it debts and is serious about living within its means.

Key parts to the plan are voter approval of a 50 percent increase in the city's 1 percent payroll tax in the special election. That would generate $38 million a year. Kucinich also wants the city to pledge income tax receipts as collateral for the loans.

Another proposal is the marketing of a $90 million bond issue in March, to convert $40 million in short-term debt to more managable long-term borrowing and make up for financial irregularities that cost the city $40 million over the past seven years.

The refinancing would provide $10 million for such badly needed city services as snow removal, street repairs and garbage collection, according to the mayor.

The city council has been at war with the mayor throughout the 13 stormy months of Kucinich's administration, with a majority of its members publicly supporting an attempt to recall Kucinich from office in August. The recall bid failed by a mere 236 votes.

The council has been trying to force the mayor to sell the city's 46,000-customer Municipal Light system to a private utility for $158 million, and has even gone to court to press its demands. The council contends the sale of the long-neglected city-owned utility would provide immediate cash to Cleveland.

Kucinich vowed again Tuesday night that he would not sell the utility to the Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co.

Trio Of Tison Gang Convicted On 20-Plus Charges Of Felony

FLORENCE, Ariz. (AP) — A Pinal County Superior Court jury has convicted Raymond and Ricky Tison and Randy Greenawalt of more than 20 charges in a July 30 prison break that led to a 12-day murder spree.

Eight women and four men deliberated six hours before returning the verdict, shortly after midnight Wednesday. Sentencing will be Jan. 8 before Judge E.D. McBryde, who presided over the 8-day trial.

The Tison brothers were accused of smuggling sawed-off shotguns into the Arizona State Prison to free their father, Gary Tison, 42, serving life for murdering a guard in a previous escape, and Greenawalt, convicted of shooting a truck driver to death as he slept at a Flagstaff, Ariz., rest stop.

Raymond and Ricky Tison and Greenawalt face murder trials later for the shotgun killings of four persons on the Arizona desert and two others in southern Colorado.

The murder spree came to an end Aug. 11, when the gang was captured in a gunbattle at a roadblock near the Tison hometown of Casa Grande.

Another Tison son, Donald, 20, was shot to death as he attempted to drive a stolen van through the roadblock. Gary Tison eluded a massive manhunt but was found 11 days later, dead of exposure, about a mile from the desert shootout scene.

Raymond Tison, 19, was found guilty of 17 counts of assault with a deadly weapon, and charges of aiding an escape, possession of a stolen vehicle and felony flight. Ricky Tison, 20, was convicted of the same charges plus carrying forbidden articles into the prison.

Greenawalt, 29, of Thornton, Colo., was convicted Wednesday of the 17 assault charges, and one count each of felony flight and possession of a stolen vehicle, escape and possession of a firearm by an inmate.

Testimony indicated that the gang herded eight guards and five visitors into a closet at gunpoint before fleeing a prison visitor center. The other four assault charges stemmed from an exchange of gunfire with deputies as the gang was captured.

Owners of the stolen van, James and Margene Judge of Amarillo, Texas, were found dead near Pagosa Springs, Colo., where they were honeymooning.

Earlier, the gang allegedly stole a car from Marine Sgt. John F. Lyons of Omaha, Neb. Lyons, his wife, infant son and a niece, Teresa Tyson, 15, of Las Vegas, Nev., were found shot to death on the southwest-Arizona desert near Quartzsite, about five days after the escape.

Ricky Tison also has been charged in an escape from the Pinal County Jail in Florence on Nov. 29. He and two jailmates were captured within 14 hours as more than 100 lawmen used helicopters and tracking dogs to comb a six-square-mile area around the jail.

Cotton Prices Up Sharply From 1977

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a smaller harvest and larger export demand, cotton prices have risen about 29 percent from a year ago, the Agriculture Department said Wednesday.

As of early December cotton prices were averaging about 66 cents a pound, up 15 cents from a year earlier, the department said in a report.

The U.S. harvest is estimated at 10.7 million bales, down from 14.4 million in 1977. Bad weather in key production areas has reduced yields sharply.

Cotton exports are expected to total about 5.8 million bales in the year that began Aug. 1, up from 5.5 million bales in 1977-78.

But "record cotton textile imports and reduced levels of denim production" are expected. That will mean a lower domestic use of U.S. cotton this season, around 6.3 million bales against 6.5 million bales last year, the report said.

Carter Unveils Anti-Fraud Campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter announced a government-wide campaign Wednesday to attack fraud and waste, and promised to cut down on complex federal paperwork that he said adds $3 billion a year to the cost of welfare.

Speaking to a conference of 1,300 local, state and federal prosecutors and program administrators, Carter vowed to cut losses he said may be small in terms of the federal budget but are "huge and demoralizing" in terms of the average American's tax bill.

Administration officials later conceded that Carter's announcement would not prompt the hiring of new auditors or anti-fraud investigators. Under the plan, individuals in some 90 agencies would be designated to look for ways to eliminate fraud.

In another speech, Gov. George Busbee, Carter's successor as chief executive of Georgia, blamed unreasonable, inflexible and often contradictory federal rules for many of the billions of dollars the government admittedly loses to fraud, abuse and error.

Mayor Richard Hatcher of Gary, Ind., was pessimistic about any efforts to fight fraud and abuse in government programs for the needy. "Little can really be done" to eliminate leakage in the welfare system without "systematic reform" to simplify the whole process, Hatcher said.

The Carter administration failed in the last Congress to win approval of its proposed major overhaul of the welfare system.

Hatcher also suggested that "the same people who have fits about welfare fraud have very few fits about equally illegal and much more egregious fraud in the Defense Department or in the professional, corporate and business side of American life."

He suggested that racism and the class system may be behind the politics of fighting welfare fraud.

Carter said his campaign against waste won't be restricted to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, which is sponsoring the national conference.

He said he is directing each agency and department to prepare a plan "for eliminating waste and fraud in its own activities and ... designate a single official to oversee the preparation and implementation of that plan."

Administration officials familiar with the president's program said he does not contemplate lots of "little inspectors general" operating independently throughout the government as they soon will in 12 federal departments and agencies designated by Congress.

The government-wide program to be overseen by the White House Office of Management and Budget will be more of a "consciousness-raising exercise" to emphasize the need for efficiencies, the officials said.

The president also said he is asking OMB Director James McIntyre and HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. "to head a major effort to simplify and streamline the hundreds of complex eligibility requirements, which contribute $3 billion each year to the cost of public assistance and other human services programs."

The president said the effort will be directed at procedures at the state and local level "where it really counts." However, there was no immediate indication how much could be done administratively and how much would require new legislation.

One of the primary arguments the administration gave for its ill-fated proposal to rewrite the welfare laws was the need to simplify procedures and eliminate forms that it said make it impossible for recipients and social workers in some states to understand thoroughly how the system works.

"Today the welfare system of one state eats up three billion pieces of paper each year and one thousand different forms," Carter said. "A woman seeking economic aid in another state had to spend 300 hours in one year just filling out paperwork documenting her need."

McIntyre said at a later White House briefing that he didn't know the name of the woman, but that hers was "an actual case" in Massachusetts, documented by a federal commission.

At the briefing, McIntyre said Carter's announcement would not involve hiring new auditors or internal investigators, and conceded that cutting much welfare red tape could require legislation similar to that rejected by the last Congress.

McIntyre said that except for the scandal-ridden Small Business Administration and General Services Administration, there may actually be reductions in staffs of auditors and investigators because of the government-wide hiring freeze Carter imposed as part of his anti-inflation program.

"It's in effect and they're subject to it unless I give them an exemption," McIntyre said.

He insisted, however, that Carter's announcement represented "very important and significant initiatives." He said one effect would be to get agency heads to focus more personal time and attention to rooting out fraud and waste.

Customer Got His Cent's Worth

DECATUR, Ga. (AP) — A Florida man accused of killing a service station attendant in an argument over a penny's worth of gasoline was acquitted Wednesday by a Superior Court judge.

Judge William T. Dean of DeKalb County said the prosecution had failed to prove that Roger L. Underwood, 28, of Ocala, Fla., voluntarily or involuntarily shot Clarence Smith, 36.

Underwood first was charged with murder in the Nov. 25, 1977 incident. As the state rested its case Wednesday, the judge said prosecutors failed to prove that a murder charge was warranted. He said he would consider only voluntary manslaughter, involuntary manslaughter or acquittal for Underwood.

Witness Charles Naile testified that Underwood stopped at the station to fill his car with gasoline and gave Smith $11 to pay for the gas.

Naile testified that when Smith told Underwood he still owed a penny, Underwood said, 'I'm not gonna pay you, boy. You're gonna have to fight me for it.'"

The defense produced testimony that Smith was the aggressor in the dispute and contended that Underwood shot Smith in self-defense.

American Ag Folk Proud Of Efforts

PRATT, Kan. (AP) — A howling wind, chilly harbinger of the approaching winter on the central plains, sweeps across U.S. Highway 54 as four farmers huddle in the warmth of the farm strike office to discuss plans for a tractor caravan to the state capital.

As they have for the past year, Don and Jean Bergner are busy behind the counter organizing upcoming activities of Pratt County's American Agriculture movement: a regional meeting the next night, a tractor parade in mid-December, a trip to Washington in late January.

A mile into town, Lisa Petrowsky is waiting on tables at Kinton's restaurant. Her husband, Ed, a nuclear engineer who left Chicago two years ago to farm with his father and brother, is attending an auction, eyeing equipment for the farm.

The Bergners and the Petrowskys are members of American Agriculture, a loosely knit group of farmers who organized to protest low farm prices and what they perceive as neglect by President Carter and Congress for the farmer's economic plight.

It was a year ago, Dec. 14, 1977, that the movement began a so-called "strike" to push its ideas. Its leaders say a recent survey of 10,000 farmers showed 50 percent were active supporters of the movement, but only 5 percent of those sent the survey form responded. The movement has no list of members, and skeptics say its leaders would be embarrassed to show how few farmers belong.

In the year since the movement was founded, the Petrowskys' and Bergners' involvement has differed greatly.

The Bergners, both 49, have spent hundreds of hours in the strike office, a converted drive-in restaurant on the heavily traveled route to Phoenix and other western points.

They dish out information on the movement to farmers who drop by, offer movement caps and T-shirts for a $5 donation and organize meetings.

Bergner, a wheat farmer, estimates he has spent more than $6,000 of his own on the movement, much of it to finance two trips to Washington. In the first statewide tractor parade to Topeka last December, he drove his Case tractor and Jean drove a grain truck.

Petrowsky drove a tractor in that parade but says he doubts he will have the time or money to take part in the trip this year that, for some, will eventually end in Washington.

Although harvests of wheat, corn and milo are over, the 28-year-old farmer has 320 head of cattle to care for. Petrowsky and his father, also Ed, and brother, Paul, farm 1,800 acres 12 miles from Pratt.

Petrowsky and his wife say the economic realities of starting out fresh have limited their involvement in movement activities.

Mrs. Petrowsky wrote letters to Congress last spring. But when she wasn't working part-time at Kinton's, she was putting in long hours during the harvests. "My job is to drive a truck and haul the grain to the elevator," she said, "and have meals ready at odd hours."

Petrowsky pondered a moment when asked what effect the agriculture movement had on his life. "I feel about the same toward farming, but it's made me aware of what's going on in Congress," he said.

Mrs. Petrowsky, 23, added, "When we were writing letters to senators, we found out how hard it is to get their attention."

Although Petrowsky does not have time for the movement that such more financially established couples as the Bergners do, he said he believes his involvement has been worthwhile.

"I think they need young people in it," he said. "Congress keeps talking about all the young farmers in trouble, but unless they see some, they'll never know we're out here."

When the movement began, members pledged not to grow or sell farm products nor buy "unnecessary" items until parity for farm products was reached. At full parity, farmers theoretically have the same purchasing power for the items they sell as their forebears had early in the century when prices and costs were said to be in step.

Wheat at Pratt elevators is selling for about $3 a bushel, while parity is more than $5 a bushel. But the pledge not to buy, sell or produce has long been forgotten by most movement members.

Bergner says that he has not made any equipment purchases since the movement began, although he badly needs a new pickup, and that he sold some of his 1977 wheat crop only to pay off a government loan.

His wife said she has not spent unnecessarily. "I bought no linens, no clothes of any kind and I try to stay away from packaged foods," she said. "You'd be surprised how little you can spend."

Mrs. Petrowsky said she has been frugal and her husband noted he has repaired a lot of equipment that normally would have been traded. But they said their actions stemmed as much from lack of money as from the movement goals.

What about Christmas presents? A year ago, both couples said they would give no presents as an affirmation of the no-buying pledge.

Bergner says he will give toys to two grandchildren. The Petrowskys aren't sure yet whether this Christmas will be a repeat of last, when they gave mostly homemade items.

The Bergners, whose three daughters now live in urban areas, say they are closer as a couple after being active in the movement. Adds Mrs. Bergner, "I'm finally doing something that has a purpose outside the home."

Both couples are active in the movement's new effort to call attention to its existence, which faded from public view during the harvest season. Their land is posted with signs declaring that no hunting or fishing will be allowed until parity is achieved.

"We're not doing it to be mean, we're doing it to make a point," Mrs. Bergner said. "When we get our parity, we'll let them back. By then, though, the birds will have eaten all our grain."

TOTAL COMMITMENT — Don and Jean Bergner of Pratt, Kan., say they have spent hundreds of hours in the Pratt County office of the American Agriculture Movement, which celebrates its first anniversary Thursday. Bergner, a wheat farmer, says he has spent more than $6,000 of savings on movement activities. The bumper stickers, books, caps and jackets they display help finance office activities. OUT THE HATCH AND DOWN THE CHUTE — The first demonstration of an unique fire escape chute was held Wednesday at the New York City Fire Academy on Randall's Island. The Super Ace-5 chute dangles from a 4th floor window at the Academy — ready for "lifesaving" action. The unit is designed to operate from 3rd through 20th story windows. In Japan, where the chutes are manufactured, approximately 12,000 buildings are equipped with over 60,000 escape units.(AP Laserphoto)

It said the album includes 500 photographs and assorted Chou manuscripts compiled by the Museum of Chinese History.

Demolition Sparks Secession

GRONINGEN, The Netherlands (UPI) — Meet the Independent State of Oosterpoort — whose 6,500 citizens Wednesday seceded from the Netherlands and the threat of wreckers' hammers.

It all started when the folks of Oosterpoort, an old district of the provincial capital of Groningen, were told the government planned to demolish 700 houses in a renovation project.

Oosterpooters were roused from their beds before dawn Wednesday by a torchlight procession and music. Anti-demolition leaders then proclaimed the Independent State of Oosterpoort to the cheers of the crowd.

The "provisional government" set up 40 "frontier posts" separating the new state from the rest of Groningen and its 153,000 or so remaining residents. People wanting to pass through first had to listen to an explanation of the district's grievances.

The declaration of independence banned the use of demolition hammers in Oosterpoort, closed the border to urban renewal authorities, but promised asylum to any "foreigners" supporting the new state.

Oosterpoort said it would elect its own parliament. But in the meantime, a delegation planned to visit The Hague for possible reconciliation talks with Housing Minister Pieter Beelaerts van Blokland.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: If you can help I will pray for you every night of my life. Please don't tell me that what I ask is hopeless.

Six months ago I had a vasectomy. It was the most foolish thing I have ever done. The girl I was going to marry insisted on it as one of the conditions of marriage. Last week she ran off with another guy and I'm so burned up at what she made me do it's driving me crazy.

Please give me the name of a doctor who can undo this operation. I'll go any place and pay any price. I'm not wealthy but I'll get the money no matter how much is required. Sign me — Stupid And Sorry

Dear Friend: Go back to the doctor who performed the vasectomy and ask him if he can reverse the operation. Sometimes it can be done — depending on the surgical procedure that was performed. But I must tell you that the chances for reversal are slim — unless the operation was performed with that possibility in mind.

I'm glad you wrote. Perhaps your letter will alert others to give serious thought to the consequences before they opt to take such a step.

Dear Ann Landers: My only son was married three weeks ago to a woman who is four years younger than I am. Lawrence is 20 years old and hardly dry behind the ears. I almost died by the phone when he told me the news.

Lawrence works for this woman (a divorcee) in a cafe. She bought him a car as a bonus after he was there three months. I didn't like the smell of it and told him so.

Now Lawrence wants to bring his wife to meet me. I told him in two different letters I don't want to be in the same country with that wench — and not to phone again so long as he is still married to her.

How can I let my son know he has broken his dear mother's heart? — Jackson

Dear Jackson: If your letter is accurate I think he must have the message.

Dear Ann: My husband's favorite sister was divorced. She wrote and asked if she and her young son could come stay with us until they found a place. She is a competent secretary and wanted to leave the city of her sadness and make a new life elsewhere.

Ann, it has been one solid year. My sister-in-law has found an excellent position and shows no signs of moving out of our home. Would you believe she has not given us a nickel? Whenever she returns from apartment hunting, it's the same story: "You wouldn't believe what they are asking for the crummiest places!"

We have three children of our own and I'm exhausted from MY work, not to mention hers. When I tell my husband that his sister and her son should move into one of these "crummy places" so we can live our own lives again, he just sits there like a dummy. What can I do? — Used

Dear Used: You sound like a couple of dummies to me. It's unbelievable that an employed woman would move herself and her child into a relative's home and pay nothing for room and board.

Your husband should tell his sister immediately that she has exactly two weeks to find another place — and don't let up on him until she does.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY THE LATE GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.
IN COLLABORATION WITH PAUL E. RUBLE, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a 38-year-old woman and in good health. I have suffered all my life with deep depression that often lasted months on end. I finally read about anti-depressant drugs and asked my doctor about them. He prescribed a drug (Elavil) which I take every evening. My depression is much better, and for the first time in my life I feel like a normal person. I have been taking it for a year. Can this harm me? — C.V.

Mood-elevating drugs like the one prescribed for you (amitriptyline) are useful for short-term treatment of depression, but I need hardly to add that your ultimate goal should be getting at the cause of your depression, whether some physical disorder, marital conflict or some other disturbing factor. Such drugs are most effective in relieving depression arising from such outside sources, but will only serve to mask real bodily ills.

These drugs can have side effects — on blood pressure, heart action, and the like. Thus, you should be checked carefully while you are taking them. I trust your physician is doing this for you. Generally, it has been my opinion that patients requiring anti-depressant drugs are sometimes the same ones who might benefit from psychological counseling. Now might be the time for you to consider that.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Several months ago I read in your column about patients complaining of burning feet, and how it could be associated with some disease; I can't remember which. I came up with burning feet and went to my doctor. He said the most common cause was sugar diabetes, so he had tests done. My sugar was OK. He dismissed me, telling me it was all in my head. Will you please comment? — Mrs. M.D.P.

Diabetes undoubtedly was the disease to which I referred, since that very often causes such problems. With that eliminated, you have to look to other factors. Faulty footwear may be an even more common cause of burning feet. The synthetic fabrics tend to be more airtight than natural fibers and can create poor ventilation. Also, some fabrics may be irritating to the skin of the feet. You might try wearing cotton socks or cotton foot inserts for your hose.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Should a person who has only one kidney be drinking much coffee? — B.

Caffeine in coffee or from any source can stimulate kidneys so it would be wise for a person with a single kidney to limit coffee or eliminate it. It is not an essential part of a diet and there are decaffeinated kinds available. As for liquid intake in general, a single kidney is adequate to take care of normal liquid needs so long as it is functioning normally. The amount you need to satisfy thirst is fine.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please tell me of any complications that might occur if a child has rubella. How should he be cared for? — M.T.

Rubella (German measles) is one of the commonest childhood diseases, and fortunately it requires very little if any specific care. There is no treatment for it except that in making the child comfortable. Rarely, complications may occur, such as middle ear infection or encephalitis (brain inflammation). So if there is obvious discomfort — head or muscle ache of an unusual nature — this should be reported. Mild pain killers will relieve it.

Tune In Tomorrow

By JON-MICHAEL REED

NEW YORK— Several former afternoon TV heartthrobs are paving Hollywood career roads. Chris Reeve, the original adult Ben Harper on "Love of Life," should be a household name before the end of the year after he plays the title role in the much-ballyhooed flick, "Superman." Chris went from a 188-pound weakling to a 220-pound "pumping iron" mass of muscles while undergoing a strenuous program of weightlifting and body-building exercises preparing to portray the Man of Steel.

In recent interviews, Chris soft-peddled his soaper days. Some viewers, however, remember that although he played a soap hearthrob, his emoting was "underweight." A much better serial actor was Armand Assante, who first appeared on "How to Survive a Marriage," then played one of the many Mike Powers on "The Doctors." Armand is rightly being proclaimed the newest star in the Hollywood firmament, following leading roles in Sylvester Stallone's "Paradise Alley," and the TV movies, "The Pirate" and "Lady of the House." Armand met his current lady love, actress Dyan Cannon, on the set of the latter flick. Another soap face from the past belongs to 22-year-old bachelor Eric Roberts, who briefly portrayed Ted Bancroft, Brian's snooty, tennis-playing jock son on "Another World." Eric is being hyped as the next Travolta for his upcoming starring role in "King of the Gypsies." But Roberts was king of the bobbysoxers on "AW" when the played one of Marianne Randolph's beaus.

Tune in tomorrow to see the next, future big-screen star while he's still on the small screen.

SHORT TAKES: One of the best ingenue actresses in serials, Christine Jones, has returned to the soap scene. Christine played Amy Cushing on the defunct "For Richer, For Poorer." She has joined "Another World" in the returning role of Janice Frame. Janice, you'll remember, had a thing for married man Robert Delaney a few years back. But she failed to win the guy and helped him reconcile with Lenore before Janice skipped town. This time around, Janice will have a new batch of males to choose from.

JOEL CROTHERS' nightclub debut in Manhattan a few weeks ago brought out a whole slew of his "Edge of Night" castmates. Joel is known as "EON's" Dr. Miles Cavanaugh, but he performed an operation of a different sort for his musical of a typical bungling supper-club entertainer, then had the folks in tears with his lovely interpretations of love ballads. One woman in the audience, however, was apparently feeling her oats when she screamed out, "Shake those hips again my way, honey. And take off that shirt so I can see you sweat."

(Send your questions about soap operas to "Tune In Tomorrow," 230 Park Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10017. Questions cannot be answered personally but those of general interest will be answered in future columns.)

Had West opened a low spade, South would have played low from dummy and eventually set up dummy's queen for a club or diamond discard. Had he opened a diamond, the lead would have been right into South's trap, while a club lead would have taken care of South's club loser. But West opened a trump, and South had to try to eliminate one loser some way or other.

West wasn't trying to help South, and it was up to South to see what he could do about making 10 tricks. So South played two rounds of trump and led his five of spades toward dummy. West played the nine, dummy the queen and East the ace. East led a diamond and South rose with his ace. If worse came to worst he could try the diamond finesse later.

South led his 10 of spades. West won and led a third spade, which South ruffed. Now South simply played three rounds of clubs. West was forced to win the third club and while that was the third trick for the defense, it was the last one. West had to give a ruff and discard or lead right up to the diamond ten ace.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:
I have enjoyed your books and hints for years. Keep up the good work. I think this hint is a goodie!

When we had carpet installed in the living room, the carpet man tacked a four-inch strip between the front door and the screen.

This serves a triple purpose: you can clean your shoes before walking on the new carpet, it keeps the crickets out during the summer and the cold wind can't sneak in during the winter.

It worked so well, I tacked an inch strip around my back door (between the door and screen). Now no more chilled air can enter the den. Nice and cozy, even if it is 15 degrees outside. — Mae Lee Perkins

Aren't people wonderful? Your carpet man sure gave you a good tip. — Heloise

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELOISE:
Could you please reprint the Christmas cookie recipe? It was printed two or three years ago. I seem to have misplaced mine and I need it for a pepper-upper during these hectic days. — Joanie S.

Sure thing, Joanie, hope you enjoy it!

CHRISTMAS COOKIES
Light oven, get bowl, spoons and ingredients, grease pan, crack nuts, remove 10 blocks, seven toy autos and one wad of chewing gum from kitchen table.

Measure two cups of flour, remove Johnny's hands from flour, wash flour off him, measure one more cup flour to replace flour on floor.

Put flour, baking powder, and salt in sifter. Answer doorbell. Return to kitchen. Remove Johnny's hands from bowl. Wash Johnny. Answer phone. Return. Remove quarter-inch salt from greased pans, grease more pans. Look for Johnny. Answer phone.

Return to kitchen and find Johnny. Remove his hands from bowl. Wash shortening, etc., etc., off him. Take up greased pan and find nut shells in it. Head for Johnny who flees, knocking bowl off table.

Wash kitchen floor. Wash table. Wash kitchen walls. Wash dishes. Wash Johnny. Call baker. Lie down!

Happy Holidays — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:
Those little plastic air freshener containers that we all have around the house (the one shaped like a boat), don't throw them away, they have so many good uses.

One good use is when you pull the top label off, keep it! It makes a handy slipper spoon (shoe horn — H.) to carry in your purse. — Janie Sampson

DEAR HELOISE:
Last year, after dragging out my Christmas decorations, getting the tree set up and decorated, I was just too tired and didn't have the energy to take all those empty boxes up to the attic.

Moreover, I really needed something for under the tree until the gifts were added. So I got a right bright idea!

I wrapped those boxes (they were various sizes and shapes), tied them with pretty bows and placed them under the tree.

After Christmas, all I had to do was open the boxes, put the decorations back into them and then tote the boxes back to the attic. — Mrs. Homer Vernon

What a clever idea! I always want to take my tree down immediately after Christmas day because it looks so bare. Now, thanks to you, I can leave it up until New Year's day and enjoy it a little longer. — Heloise

Council Holds CD Funds Hearing Today

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Lubbock City Council will hold a public hearing today on how $10.4 million in federal Community Development funds should be spent over the next three years.

The hearing, to begin at 10:30 a.m. in council chambers, will include discussion of proposed funding for a park in the Overton South neighborhood.

The Community Development Advisory Committee recommended that land acquisition begin for the park, to be located south of Thompson Junior High School, with $113,600 in funds which become available next year.

However, the total cost to acquire land for the park is expected to reach $1.4 million.

Of $3.8 million, which will become available next summer, $2.4 million is recommended for housing rehabiliation.

The Arnett-Benson and Phyllis Wheatley neighborhoods will be the largest beneficiaries of the funds if the recommendations are adopted.

Also today, council members are scheduled to discuss the Crime Stoppers program which would permit the city to pay informants rewards up to $1,000 from private donations.

Council members also will take up an ordinance proposed by Health Director Marjorie Orr which would permit more frequent inspections of food service and food processing establishments, expand the jurisdiction of the health department to other food establishments and raise health inspection fees.

The ordinance was recommended for approval by the city Health Board.

Also on the agenda is an ordinance to abandon and close North Elder Street between Parkway Drive access road and East First Street at the request of the Parkway Drive Church of Christ.

The street closure could create some problems for children who come down Elder Street to Bozeman School, city officials say.

The regular council meeting begins at 9:30 a.m.

Agency Seeks Gifts For Elderly

A Bible, a bird feeder and a book on France are among the items that would make special gifts for some 167 people from nine nursing homes who are in need of Christmas remembrance.

The Christmas Clearance Bureau is attempting to see that the lonely and neglected of Lubbock nursing homes receive such items as robes, houseshoes, dusting powder, hospital gowns and underwear.

Lists from the nursing homes also indicate special gifts that would be appreciated. One man who lost his Bible would like a replacement or a crucifix. A woman who enjoys feeding birds might like a bird feeder, and another woman of French origin would appreciate a book on France.

Kathryn Powell, head of the bureau, emphasizes, however, that any type of gift that indicates caring would be of benefit.

Those who wish to help these nursing home residents should call the United Way office or bring gifts by the office at 2201 19th St. where they will be wrapped and delivered to the homes.

"Last year, we were overwhelmed with the response from the public to provide gifts to nursing home patients who had no immediate family," said Mrs. Powell.

"This is one opportunity where just one small gift will provide much brightness to a lonely person."

Lubbock Man Appointed To Tech Regents Panel

Lee Stafford of Lubbock Wednesday was appointed by Gov. Dolph Briscoe to Texas Tech's Board of Regents.

Stafford, vice president of Stafford Construction Co., will fill the unexpired term of Charles G. Scruggs of Dallas, who resigned.

The term runs through Jan. 31, 1981.

Stafford's appointment brings to three the number of Tech regents who live in Lubbock. Roy K. Furr, board vice chairman, and Don Workman, both of Lubbock, also serve on the nine-member board.

Stafford is a member of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce and the board of directors of State Savings and Loan Association.

Scruggs, vice president and editor of Progressive Farmer magazine, said he wrote a letter of resignation to Briscoe recently "because I have a lot of other activities and I'm just not able to give the time to the position that it requires."

He noted that he was on the Coordinating Board of Texas Colleges and Universities when it gave Tech the authority to build a medical school in 1965. He was then appointed to the Board of Regents in 1970 and was involved in the development of the medical school.

A graduate of Texas A&M University, Scruggs observed that he was "one of the few Aggies that ever served on the Tech board."

Scruggs said he was also proud of being involved in the establishment of the Tech Ranching Heritage Center and Textile Research Center.

Briscoe also announced the appointment of Tully R. Currie of Amarillo to the board of West Texas State University for a term expiring Aug. 31, 1979.

Pedestrian Crossing At Loop Intersection Subject Of Lawsuit

A Lubbock resident has sued the City of Lubbock, the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation and other defendants, claiming in part that inadequate provisions were made for pedestrians on a portion of Loop 289.

Leon Wiley filed the 237th District Court suit on behalf of Paula Gail Wiley, who, according to the petition, suffered severe injuries in a January 25, 1977, mishap. The suit asks for $500,000 in damages.

The plaintiff indicates in the petition that Paula was 5 years old and enrolled in kindergarten at Bayless Elementary School when she was struck by a vehicle while attempting to cross Loop 289 at the Avenue U intersection.

Wiley claims the city and state failed to provide adequate crossing sites at the intersection. The plaintiff says the city and state knew or should have known that an elementary school was near the intersection and that small children would have to cross it to return to their homes.

The petition says a sign should have been posted to prohibit pedestrians from crossing the highway.

INDIA BIRTHS SOAR

Evidence Claimed Of Gravity Waves Predicted By Einstein

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists looking at the blinking radiation of a dying star say they have the first direct evidence supporting the existence of gravity waves, predicted by Albert Einstein.

A research team at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst says gravity waves themselves have not been observed, but changes in the orbit of a distant, invisible star appear to be caused by gravity wave emissions, the National Science Foundation announced Wednesday.

Gravity waves are a yet untested prediction of the general theory of relativity posed by Einstein, the late physics genius. The hypothesized waves are based upon the forces of gravity, rather than those of electricity and magnetism.

Gravity is the force that makes things fall to the ground and keeps people from drifting off into space. It also is the "glue" that holds our solar system, galaxy and universe together.

Dr. Joseph H. Taylor, who will present the research group's findings at a Munich, West Germany, symposium this week, said the results probably would not directly aid those scientists who for years have tried to build gravity wave detectors.

"But it is at least proof that the radiation they are looking for exists and that they are not on a wild goose chase," the astronomer said in a telephone interview.

The new data comes from using the powerful, 1,000-foot diameter radio telescope at Arecibo, Puerto Rico, to study radio waves from a pulsar 15,000 light years from earth. A light year is the distance light can travel in a year at 186,000 miles per second.

Pulsars are thought to be the remnants of dying stars that collapse into a super-dense, rapidly spinning object after exploding. Powerful radio waves of unknown origin beam out from it in pulses, like a lighthouse beacon.

Taylor said it is generally believed that the strong magnetic field associated with a dense object, and its spinning, somehow funnel the radio signals into a swinging beam. So far, scientists have detected only 320 pulsars and only two are visible with optical telescopes.

The researchers, also including Dr. Peter M. McCulloch and Lee A. Fowler, say the pulsar in question is orbiting another massive object, perhaps another pulsar.

Einstein predicted that such a system should emit gravity waves which remove energy from the orbit. This would cause both objects to move closer together and cut the time it takes the pulsar to complete an orbit.

Taylor said relativity theory predicts that the orbit time should decrease by one ten-thousandth of a second a year, precisely the amount his group measured for four years.

"Other factors could be responsible for orbital change, such as a kind of tidal effect from the other star — much like the earth-moon system," Taylor said. "But we went back and eliminated them one at a time. We calculated that the tidal effect, the largest other possibility, was 100 to 1,000 times smaller than the observed effect.

"And another thing in favor of gravity waves is that the measured value is so exactly the same as relativity predicted," he continued. "It would be a hell of a coincidence if other forces added up to the same number."

Fluorocarbon Propellants To Disappear

WASHINGTON (AP) — You'll be seeing fewer aerosol products with chlorofluorocarbon propellants on the shelves after a virtual ban on manufacturing these items takes effect Friday.

Some aerosols will still be available, either as pump sprays or with other propellants, such as carbon dioxide, but the once common fluorocarbon types will be disappearing.

Stocks already available still can be sold under the new rules, although there is an April 15 deadline for sale of many of the types, particularly foods, drugs and cosmetics.

Among the products affected are deodorants, antiperspirants, hair sprays, air fresheners, window cleaners, furniture polish, household cleansers and many pesticides.

Women's Feelings About Sea Duty Mixed

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Seaman recruit Leigh Ann Williams thought sea duty would be like being on a big cruise, with a swimming pool and everything.

But when she reported to the repair ship Vulcan last week, she found a 520-foot-long hulk of gray steel without even a bathtub.

She had volunteered for the duty during her second week of boot camp.

"When you're in the second week of boot camp, you don't even know what a ship is," the 18-year-old Grand Forks, N. D., native said.

She tried to get out of the assignment, but the Navy said no.

Miss Williams is one of about 32 enlisted women who have just finished their first week on the Vulcan.

The repair vessel is the only Navy ship so far to have received enlisted females. The Vulcan also has two women officers who reported aboard last month.

"I'm living with it," Miss Williams said of her assignment. "I don't know how I like it, but I can't get out of it."

"There are a lot of men who don't appreciate women on a ship. Most of them are macho men. We show them up every time. I ignore them."

Miss Williams admitted to being "scared to death, terrified" of leaving the safety of Norfolk Naval Station for the open sea, which will happen in February.

"I've never done it before," she said. "A lot of people say seasickness is in your head, so I'm just not going to think about it."

Radioman 2nd Class Patricia Aycock, 24, a native of Memphis, Tenn., said that shipboard duty for her "so far has been good. But it's different. It takes some getting used to."

For Operations Specialist 2nd Class Mary Elizabeth Kelly, 30, duty on the Vulcan is providing the first real opportunity she has had to work in her speciality.

Previous assignments have involved secretarial chores and drug and alcohol counseling.

Capt. Harry A. Spencer, the Vulcan's skipper, said Wednesday his ship will receive about 30 more enlisted women by the end of this month.

"I get a little perturbed with the comments from guys," said Miss Kelly. "Some don't think the women-at-sea idea will work. I just let them know that I was an honor graduate" in Navy technical training.

Not all comments have been negative. Some men have expressed pride that their ship was the first to receive women, Miss Kelly said.

The only complaint that Quartermaster 2nd Class Linda Michele Couffelt, 27, has about duty aboard the Vulcan is that it doesn't spend more time at sea.

A quartermaster's job is to plot navigational courses.

"I can't wait. I really can't a wait," she said. "I'd like to be out there, to see if I can make it as a quartermaster."

Population Curb Plan Working For Mexico

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mexico is experiencing a dramatic reversal in population growth, indicating that the government's huge family planning program is working, a new study said Wednesday.

The report, issued by the Washington-based Population Reference Bureau Inc., said Mexico's population growth rate in mid-1978 was 2.9 percent, a decline from 3.5 percent since the family planning program went into effect five years earlier.

Calling the lower figure "within sight" of the 2.5 percent target set by President Jose Lopez Portillo's government, the report also said the average rate of childbearing among Mexican women dropped from 7.09 per woman in 1967-69 to 6.15 per woman in 1973-75.

While that still is well above the rates for neighboring countries — 4.2 in Colombia and 1.8 in the United States, for example — it nevertheless also represents a "distinct drop," the study said.

It said the figures further show that 42 percent of all Mexican women of childbearing potential are practicing contraception and in urban areas the figure is about 61 percent.

The statistics are all unofficial, but in the absence of reliable birth registration figures, they represent "probably the first truly accurate information on Mexico's actual fertility," according to the report's author, John Nagel.

The figures indicate that the family planning program "is making inroads that promise eventual relief from the high fertility-low mortality gap that has seen Mexico's population balloon from 20 million in 1940 to an estimated 65-67 million" at the present time.

Mexico is the third-largest country in the Western Hemisphere, and other studies have shown that its total population probably will double by the end of the 20th century.

Nagel's report was drafted as part of a World Fertility Study, the full results of which are soon to be released by the Population Reference Bureau, an independent, non-governmental organization which conducts continuing research on demographic subjects.

CUBAN OBSTACLE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department welcomed on Wednesday Cuban President Fidel Castro's decision to release 3,000 political prisoners. But it said that Cuba's continuing military involvement in Africa remains a major obstacle to an improvement in relations between it and the United States.

Foreign Takeovers Of U.S. Corporations Climb

Excerpted from the book AMERICA FOR SALE
Copyright (c) 1978 by Kenneth C. Crowe
Published by Doubleday & Company, Inc.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Foreigners from all continents participate in the economic infiltration of America. Forecasts predict that direct foreign investments in the States will grow from $26.5 billion at the end of 1974 to about $40 billion in 1980. The reasons for, and results of this economic invasion are revealed by Pulitzer prize-winning reporter Kenneth C. Crowe, in the third of a four-part series from his new book America For Sale.)

By KENNETH C. CROWE

America is so vast a land of corporations, coal mines, wheat fields and oil fields, that it is rare to find a foreigner dominating any segment of our major industries.

According to 1974 figures developed by the Commerce Department, the traditional European investors held the largest corporate blocs in the United States with the United Kingdom leading the list with $6.1 billion in direct foreign invesment. Canada was next with $4.8 billion; then the Netherlands with $2.8 billion and Switzerland with $2.1 billion. The Commerce Department forecasts that just British investments in America will rise to $10 billion by 1980.

Takeovers of American companies by British firms reached an all-time high in 1973/early 1974, the Commerce Department reported in a 1976 comprehensive study of foreign investment. With the loss of business confidence in the United States and the accompanying downward stock market slide, British executives took advantage of the opportunity to edge into the American marketplace through acquisitions and mergers of established companies.

During that time, for example, Grand Union Company, the nation's ninth largest supermarket chain, passed into British hands. With Grand Union stock selling for $11 on the open market, Cavenham Ltd., the huge British food conglomerate, offered $19 a share, acquiring 51 percent for $64 million.

French direct investment in the United States (ownership of 10 percent or more of a company, with presumed control) grew from $300 million in 1971 to $1.4 billion by the end of 1976. In terms of book value, the French ranked in fifth place, behind the West Germans, the British, the Dutch, and the Swiss. But their products are pressing themselves into the American public's consciousness. Everyone uses Bic Pens. Societe Bic S.A., a French company, owns 57 per cent of the Bic Pen Corporation of Milford, Conn. The Michelin Tire Corporation, which already has heavy sales in the United States, was planning in 1977 to spend some $600 million on five new manufacturing plants in America.

The dramatic surge in German direct investment in the United States can be seen by looking at just a couple of key figures. In 1966 the total German direct investment in the United States was $131 million. By the end of 1974 the figure had climbed to $1.1 billion, and a scenario prepared by the consulting firm of Arthur D. Little, Inc., forecast that the numbers could reach $3.2 billion by 1980.

Most of the German push in the past has been concentrated in the chemical-pharmaceutical sector, although the most spectacular investment was in the decision of Volkswagenwerk A.G. to open its first U.S. assembly plant at New Stanton, Pa., about 30 miles from Pittsburgh.

VW, which is 40 per cent owned by the West German government, took over an unfinished Chrysler plant for its American production lines. Early estimates indicated it would cost $80 million to get the factory in shape. The West German organization said it was arranging to borrow $135 million to equip the assembly operation, which would eventually produce 200,000 Rabbits a year and employ 5,000 persons.

Pennsylvania officials were hopeful that another 15,000 jobs would be generated indirectly in the area because of the VW plant. To entice VW and its jobs to the state, Pennsylvania arranged for tax breaks, a $40-million low- interest industrial loan, and committed $30 million to improving rail and road services to the plant site.

The surge of foreign investment in America was spurred by a combination of the devaluations of the dollar in 1971 and 1973, continual labor unrest abroad, and the repressive policies toward capitalism among the European governments.

The rush to acquire American companies was such an innovation that, prior to 1972, the Securities and Exchange Commission didn't even bother to keep data on tender offers by foreigners. The first such figures show that there were two tender offers for publicly held firms in the last six months of 1972; followed by 20 in 1973; 24 in 1974; 26 in 1975; and 17 in 1976.

Everything that is attractive about foreign investment is present in the Japanese mini steel mill in Auburn, upstate New York; a new industry, new jobs, new capital, and new competition for American industry, involving techniques designed to multiply productivity.

Beside all of that, the Japanese were invited to Auburn by the local community, which is hungry for jobs and industry with their implied promise of prosperity. The new $36 million mill employs 240 persons.

A Commerce Department's 1976 bench-mark survey of foreign direct investment showed that foreign-owned and -controlled firms had provided jobs for 1,083,431 persons in the United States by the end of 1974.

Foreign investors bearing new jobs are frequently welcomed with a flourish to work-hungry American communities.

Representative Henry S. Reuss, the Wisconsin Democrat who now heads the House Banking Committee, told the Sixth Annual Institutional Investor Conference that attracting foreign direct investment is a rare opportunity for American manufacturing firms, American banks, and the American investment industry to make jobs, increase productivity, and boost our balance of payments. The congressman added: It is about time we got a reverse lend-lease from Europe and Japan."

Foreign investments in America result in additional employment opportunities and a higher standard of productivity. But profits which result from American-based, though foreign-owned, investments are funneled abroad, increasing the flow of consumer dollars out of the United States and reversing a once favorable balance of trade between America and many industrialized nations, particularly Japan.

America's trade deficit with Tokyo is now running at an annual rate of $12 billion — up from $8.7 billion last year — despite Japan's promise to reduce it, reports Newsweek.

Japan enjoyed a $2.4 billion trade surplus in 1976 and an amazing $2.3 billion surplus for the first half of 1977.

The Japanese had almost an embarrassment of riches from dedication to the pursuit of trade as the decade of the seventies opened. By early 1972, Japan's official foreign exchange reserves had reached $1 billion, and the government was encouraging foreign investment as a means of trimming this huge sum.

Japanese investors turned up in the soybean country of the Midwest, buying farmlands and setting up factories. Congressmen in Washington were getting bitter and alarmed reports fr their constituents on this situation. They would have been even more upset had they realized the extent to which the Japanese trading companies in the United States dominated the trade between the two countries. The Japanese affiliates accounted for 96 percent of the $10 billion, mostly in raw materials, exported from America to Japan in 1974, and for 86 per cent of finished products, amounting to another $10 billion, imported back from Japan to the United States.

In 1967, Japanese direct investment in the United States was only $343 million. This climbed to $917 million by the end of 1971. By early 1975, Japanese direct investment in America was $2.4 billion, and by 1980, the Commerce Department Projects, it could reach $6.5 billion.

America appears caught in an economic vice, at least with Japan. Japanese investments in this country might increase employment and the tax base, but they send more dollars abroad, upsetting the balance of trade and giving economic incentive for additional investing and corporate takeovers in the States.

Legal Aid Group Status Focal Point Of Lawsuit

By The Associated Press

Attorneys for 10 unions challenging the right of the National Right to Work Legal Defense Foundation Inc. to finance lawsuits by employees against their unions have appealed a recent court decision that denied the unions access to a list of foundation contributors.

The ruling was issued Nov. 17 by a three-member federal appeals panel; the unions are seeking a rehearing by the entire nine-member court.

The unions filed suit against the foundation in 1973, contending that the organization was violating a provision of the Landrum-Griffin Act which prohibits interested employers or employer groups from directly or indirectly financing and generally participating in such lawsuits.

Among the issues in the case is the question of whether the Legal Defense Foundation is an independent, legal-aid association or an employer group.

James B. Taylor, director of legal information for the group, said the appeals panel ruling was a victory for the foundation. He said that under the terms of the ruling, "There's no way that they can prove we're an employer organization."

Mary Levy, an attorney who was an associate in the case for the unions, disagreed. "We think we can prove that they (employers) control it (the foundation)," she said.

In an effort to prove that the foundation was an employer group, the unions sought a list of contributors to the organization. U.S. District Court Judge Charles R. Richey had ruled that the foundation had to turn over the list, but the appeals panel overturned the lower decision, saying the union should first try to obtain the information from other sources.

"The important part (of the ruling) ... was that we were vindicated by not having to turn over our list," said Taylor.

Mrs. Levy said one reason that the unions were appealing was that "the conditions set on the remand were restrictive."

The panel also overturned another portion of Richey's ruling which said that the prohibition on employer-financed lawsuits was unconstitutional. An earlier Associated Press story on the ruling may have caused some confusion because of phrasing which said that Richey's order upholding the right of an anti-union group to finance lawsuits against unions by their members had been set aside.

While it did set the verdict aside, the appeals panel also said that the fact that an employer contributes to an organization like the foundation does not necessarily mean the organization itself is an employer group.

"Our review of the legislative history convinces us that Congress did not intend (for the law) to apply to the legitimate litigation program of a bona fide, independent legal aid organization, even though the organization receives contributions from interested employers."

The court said an interested employer may contribute as long as the legal-aid organization serves as a buffer "between employers' money and employees' lawsuits" and as long as "legal aid activity is not controlled by interested employers."

The court ordered Richey to determine whether the foundation is a bona-fide, legal-aid organization.

The unions have appealed the ruling of the three-member panel to the full nine-member court.

Army Cracks Down On Headwear Fad

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army, never known for its tolerance of efforts by GIs to express themselves as individuals, is cracking down on a recent fad in which some troops don attention-getting headwear of their own choosing.

Gen. Bernard Rogers, the Army's chief of staff, sent enlisted soldiers a message recently in which he emphasized that the service means business in ordering a halt to "a seemingly ever-increasing number of unauthorized items ... being worn by Army personnel."

Rogers had initially sent out the order in August, and the directive was greeted by strong objections from unit leaders and others who claimed that special hats or other unique uniform decorations are valuable in boosting morale.

Appeals Court Ruling Adds Inmate To Death Row

AUSTIN (AP) — Death Row was assigned another inmate Wednesday as the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals upheld the capital murder conviction of Jesse Villarreal in the slaying of a Corpus Christi convenience store clerk.

A jury in Houston, where the case was transferred on a change of venue, assessed the death penalty.

Villarreal was accused of the March 24, 1975, shooting death of Norma Guevara. Another employee of the Maverick Market, Dora Garcia, also was slain. Both had been shot in the back.

Money had been taken from the store's safe.

Villarreal's 11-point appeal challenged the testimony of Lucy Gonzales, his girl friend, on the ground she was an accomplice.

"The record does not reflect when Lucy Gonzales learned of the murders. She is a deaf mute and could not have heard the shots while she waited in the car outside the Maverick Market," the court said.

Villarreal's lawyers also contended the trial judge erred in allowing a prosecutor to tell the jury Villarreal had been convicted of four previous felonies before the age of 34 and was "a one-man crime wave in Nueces County, Texas."

"The reference to a 'one-man crime wave' was a reasonable deduction from this evidence and, in the context of the punishment phase of the trial, a proper plea for law enforcement," the court said.

In other cases, the court:

— Reversed the Beaumont robbery conviction of Arthur Charles Franks because the judge allowed the prosecutor to ask the jury, "Why do you think he (Franks) did not want to testify?" In general, prosecutors are not supposed to comment on the failure of a defendant to testify.

— Overturned the El Paso robbery conviction of Jessie Frazier because the judge failed to explain circumstantial evidence to the jury. The court noted there was no direct evidence that Frazier was the same man who held up a drive-in grocery on March 29, 1976, and took $36.45.

— Reversed a Belton jury's verdict assessing Cleveland Bryant seven years for the alleged burglary of a pickup truck in Belton. The court said the state failed to prove that the truck belonged to the man who complained of the burglary.

— Overturned the cocaine possession conviction of John Luke Daniels by a Dallas jury because it was based on circumstantial evidence but the trial judge failed to charge the jury on the law of circumstantial evidence. The court noted expert testimony that the amount of cocaine found in Daniels' home was too small to measure.

— Reversed the involuntary manslaughter conviction of Del Moore by an Amarillo jury in the shooting death of Fred Drury. Moore, who received a 10-year prison sentence, said she thought the gun was unloaded. The high court said the judge should have charged the jury on the lesser offense of negligent homicide.

Bank Examiner's Memo Held Private

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court ruled Wednesday that courts cannot compel bank examiners to open their confidential examination reports.

It said State District Judge Tate McCain of Palestine abused his discretion in ordering state bank examiner Gary Pool to turn over to lawyers in a civil suit his complete 1975 report on American Bank of Waco.

A party to the suit had purchased stock in the bank.

Robert A. Mann, defendant in the suit, subpoenaed Pool's routine report, including a confidential memo.

McCain refused to quash the subpoena, and Pool refused to produce the report. Banking Commissioner Robert Stewart backed up Pool.

State law explicitly prohibits disclosure of information obtained by the State Banking Department on the financial condition of banks. It provides a fine of up to $200, plus loss of one's job, for revealing the information.

It makes an exception, however, when the commissioner feels it would be in the best interest of the public to divulge information to other branches of government.

The supreme court's opinion said a bank examiner's report includes an interoffice memorandum to the commissioner, based on an examiner's hunches, opinions and impressions. It said Mann specifically sought this memo and wanted Pool and Stewart held in contempt for not providing it.

While the formal part of the report has been provided to Mann, the court said, the confidential memo has not.

The court quoted Stewart as saying the confidential memo — based exclusively on the examiner's impressions — "often becomes the first line of defense in averting problems at a bank."

"It is obvious that this type of information would seldom, if ever, be competent or admissible evidence. This fully supports the legislative insistence that this type information remain confidential. The legislature could easily have provided an exception to make the information available for a civil trial had it desired," the court said.

AMIN CREDITS ISRAEL

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — President Idi Amin says weapons given to Uganda by Israel were the decisive factor which allowed his forces to briefly capture a large chunk of Tanzanian territory early last month. Once friendly with Israel, Amin since has aligned himself with Arab states.

Sex Bookstore Under Attack

GRAND HAVEN, Mich. (UPI) — An adult bookstore that stocks sex paraphernalia and arranges parties for swingers is under attack from area clergymen as "a threat to the morals of the community."

The store sells pornographic books and magazines, sex films and novelty items and its owner, Tom Wiseman, publishes a swingers magazine containing advertisements — often accompanied by nude photos — by people seeking sex partners and makes arrangements for exotic dancers to appear at stag parties.

The magazine also is used to organize parties for swinging couples. Wiseman said about 500 people attended last year's New Year's Eve party.

"Our goal is not just taking care of the dirty old men," Wiseman said, "but taking care of the couples too."

The Rev. James A. Pollard, pastor of the Lakeshore Baptist Church, said Tuesday he has summoned area ministers to attend a meeting Friday at the Grand Haven First Presbyterian Church to discuss their views about the store's activities.

"This goes beyond free speech," Pollard said. "It represents a threat to the morals of the community."

Energy Lack Worries Public; Fuel Problems Misunderstood

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans are seriously concerned about impending shortages of energy, but there are big gaps in their understanding of the problems, a federally funded survey of young adults has found.

Nine out of 10 of those questioned by the National Assessment of Educational Progress believe less energy will be available to the United States as world consumption increases, and 94 percent felt that energy-controlling countries may try to manipulate the United States. Nearly 81 percent agreed that wars may be fought over energy.

But the survey of 1,300 adults aged 26 to 35, which was released Wednesday, also turned up these findings:

—Less than half (46 percent) knew that crude oil provided the largest percentage of energy consumed in the United States.

—Only 14 percent knew that coal is the primary source for producing electrical energy.

—Less than half (49 percent) knew coal was the largest fossil fuel reserve, and only 16 percent knew that coal, as well as petroleum, can be converted into gasoline.

A majority, 54 percent, said they would be unwilling to have a nuclear power plant built within 25 miles of their home, 25 percent said maybe and 20 percent were willing. Some 48 percent said no to coal-burning plants nearby, 37 percent maybe and 14 percent no.

The most acceptable energy producers in the neighborhood were large windmills (66 percent) and large solar energy collectors (59 percent).

Some 83 percent said the health and safety problems of coal mining were serious; 65 percent felt that way about nuclear plants.

Nearly one-third of the young adults, who were questioned last year, mistakenly thought that 55 percent of the energy consumed in the United States was used at home. The correct figure is actually about 20 percent, while industry consumes two-fifths of the energy.

Only 23 percent knew that the hot-water heater in the average American home consumes more energy than the lights or major appliances such as the refrigerator, stove or clothes-drier.

On 50 key factual questions, the young adults answered only 49 percent correctly.

Only one-third realized that Americans, who make up 6 percent of the world's population, consumed 30 percent of its energy.

The National Assessment is funded by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Arab Oil Payments Spur Stockholders' Lawsuit

NEW YORK (AP) -Congressional testimony about Coastal States Gas Corp.'s payment of $8 million in commissions for oil shipments during the 1973-74 Arab embargo has triggered a stockholders lawsuit.

The suit charges the payments were actually bribes that never were disclosed as such to shareholders of the Houston-based oil and gas producer. The suit seeks restitution, plus punitive damages and removal of Coastal's board of directors.

The complaint in U.S. District Court, Manhattan, by Coastal shareholder Joan Weisberg of Elmhurst, Queens, claims the so-called commissions to Selman Holdings Ltd. of Coral Gables, Fla., were far above what standard commissions should have been. The shareholder contended they were bribes because Selman rendered no services to Coastal to merit them.

Besides restitution and punitive damages, the shareholder asked the court to void all Coastal directors' elections held since 1974 because stockholders received untrue proxy statements from those who were installed. She requested that the corporation be managed by a specially appointed receiver until a new election is held.

Named as defendants besides Coastal and the holding company were Leonard Moleiro and Julio Iglesias, who allegedly own 99.9 per cent of Selman Holding.

OPEC Hike Predicted By Minister

ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — The oil minister of the United Arab Emirates said Wednesday that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting countries will raise the price of oil at its conference beginning this Saturday.

"We have frozen the price of oil for the last two years, and I'm afraid we cannot avoid an increase," Mana Said al-Otaiba said in an interview with the British Broadcasting Corp.'s "Money Programme" show, to be aired in Britain Wednesday evening.

The size of the increase "is a question to be left to the conference," the minister said.

He added that the meeting "might decide to have one increase (in January) as part of the decision, and to have another gradual increase in the second half of the year."

Some OPEC members "have suggested a lump sum, others want a gradual rise, but this is not settled yet," he said.

Otaiba said OPEC countries have lost between 37 and 53 percent in the value of their oil revenues because of inflation and the decline in value of the dollar over the past two years.

OPEC's official oil price of $12.70 for a barrel of standard-grade crude oil hasn't been changed since a session in Doha, Qatar, in December 1976. Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates didn't go along with the 10 percent price hike at that meeting until the middle of 1977.

Instead, the two countries raised the price of their petroleum by only five percent for the first six months of 1977.

More than one million dogs and cats, along with hundreds of thousands of other pets such as hamsters, birds and fish will be purchased as gifts this Christmas, according to the American Pet Products Manufacturers Association.

THANKS FOR THE MEMORIES — It has been almost six years since police Sgt. Dalmer C. Parker and 5-year-old Gary Stephenson Jr. met. Gary, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Lee Stephenson of 512 E. 36th St., was delivered by Parker Dec. 17, 1972, when time became too precious to rush Gary's mother to the hospital. The youngster showed his appreciation this morning giving Parker a set of engraved pens. (Staff Photo by Paul Moseley)

Lubbock Policeman Receives Gift From Boy He Delivered In 1972

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Five-year-old Gary Lee Stephenson Jr. believes one good delivery deserves another. His part of the deal came about 7:15 a.m. Wednesday, when he entered Lubbock Police Department headquarters and and presented desk Sgt. Dalmer C. Parker with an engraved set of pens.

It was Dec. 17, 1972, when Parker presented the Stephensons with a gift. Thinking he was going to give a pregnant Janie Stephenson a police escort to the hospital, Parker instead found himself delivering the baby soon to be named Gary Jr.

The Stephenson family of 512 E. 36th St. never forgot.

"Daddy, should I give him his present now," said Gary Jr. before reaching over the counter and handing Parker his gift. The 21-year police veteran looked a little embarrassed, but, nevertheless, accepted graciously.

Also included in the thank you party in the relatively empty police station was Gary's 2-year-old sister, Kelly Lee Ann.

Thinking back almost six years ago, Stephenson said that after he realized his wife was going to have to give birth at their house "I was running up and down the street in my underwear trying to find someone."

Parker said he arrived at the Stephenson's old home on Avenue M to find the soon-to-be father running around in circles in the front yard yelling, "Help me! Help me!"

Parker not only delivered Gary, but might very well be responsible for saving the newborn's life. The umbilical cord was wrapped around Gary's neck and it was the policeman who managed to unwrap it.

Stephenson admitted he was a little nervous having his first child delivered by a policeman rather than a doctor in a hospital. Stephenson said that while Parker was delivering his child, "I asked him if he had had any experience and he said 'no.'"

"I wondered what I was doing there," Parker said of the incident.

It was last summer when Parker and the Stephensons were back in contact. Parker's daughter and Mrs. Stephenson met at West Texas Hospital where both worked.

Houston Jury Considers Fate Of Former Police Chief Lynn

HOUSTON (AP) — The bribery trial of former Houston Police Chief Carrol Lynn went to a jury Monday afternoon following four and one-half weeks of testimony.

The jury started deliberations immediately.

Defense attorney James Pape ended final arguments by saying Lynn may be guilty "of bad judgment and stupidity, but not of the crimes he is accused."

Chief Prosecutor Reid Weingarten told the federal court jurors that Lynn was only interested in "greed for money while at the same time obstructing justice."

Lynn, 45, who served 22 years on the Houston police force, including 15 months as chief, is charged with extortion, perjury and obstruction of justice. If convicted on all charges he could receive a maximum sentence of 35 years in prison.

A federal grand jury indicted Lynn last June 12 on charges he attempted to collect a $45,000 bribe from John Vincent Holden, a former Houston oilman.

Holden has been charged with mail fraud and violation of securities regulations.

Holden testified that Lynn offered to stop a federal investigation of the oilman's business activities through the influence of Leonel M. Castillo, chief of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service; John Castillo, executive director for Houston Mayor Jim McConn; and U.S. Attorney J.A. Canales.

The Castillos and Canales have testified they had no knowledge of a bribery scheme.

Lynn had earlier stepped down as police chief and taken a position as assistant chief because of unrest in the department. He was an assistant when arrested last April as he left the Holden home, allegedly with $25,000 in his coat pockets.

Weingarten said the Lynn defense was that of a "squid, when threatened, it emits a blue, murky ink to conceal its movements."

Pape told the jurors, "I do not like to compare human beings to animals, but since Mr. Weingarten calls my client a squid, I would say some of the prosecution witnesses are foxes, wolves and water moccasins.

"Each one of them had something personal to gain from their testimony for the prosecution," he said.

Lynn had testified earlier he had no interest in Holden's money and had talked to the former oilman only as part of an undercover operation.

Americans purchased $367.3 billion of new life insurance last year and total coverage reached $2583 billion — both record highs — says the American Council of Life Insurance.

Freshman U.S. Senators Receive Education On How To Get Along

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 20 incoming members of the Senate learned Wednesday that the easy method to etch their way into history is simply to carve their names on those hallowed mahogany desks.

"In the old days, most senators used a pen-knife," said James R. Ketchum, the chamber's curator of arts and antiquities. "But now, a ball-point works as well."

That was just one of the lessons of practical politics taught the Senate's freshman class of 1979 in the kickoff session of a three-day crash course on how to do the job for which they convinced the voters they were qualified.

In effect, they learned that all that campaign talk about inflation, taxes and keeping America safe might get them a cup of coffee in the basement carryout if they kick in 20 cents.

Notepads in hand, the new senators sat like schoolchildren in a hearing room of the Dirksen Office Building as lecturer after lecturer offered tips on filing expense vouchers, hiring staff, how to cash a check in a hurry, select the right health plan and keep their noses clean with the Ethics Committee.

Sen. Harrison Schmitt, R-N.M., the vice chairman of the Ethics Committee, explained, for example, that while federal law allows a senator to make up to $2,000 for giving an outside speech, the panel's code of conduct allows only half that. "And the maximum honorarium for a staff member is $300," he added. "Why we discriminate like that, I don't know."

Some may have had second thoughts over the glory of November's victories. Much of what they heard — such as 20 separate health benefit options — was confusing, and some, like Minority Leader Howard Baker's welcoming remarks, perhaps a little deflating.

Baker, R-Tenn., offered a time-worn definition of the work done in the Senate: "A man makes a speech that says nothing. Nobody listens, and then everybody disagrees."

"On my first day in the Senate, 12 years ago," Baker said, "the doorkeeper wouldn't let me in the chamber. He didn't recognize me, having no particular reason to, and he thought I looked too young to be a senator — a condition from which I have fully recovered."

Freshman Sen. Nancy Landon Kassebaum, R-Kan., said she especially enjoyed a briefing on the Senate's history, in which it was noted that the galleries once had signs declaring that "Visitors will refrain from putting their feet on the railing, as the dirt from them falls on the senators' heads."

But Kassebaum, the new Senate's only woman, acknowledged that the practical side of the session wasn't that simple. "I guess some of it is not totally perplexing," she said. "But then I worked up here three years ago for Sen. (James) Pearson, so I ought to know at least something about the place."

Schmitt warned that the Ethics Committee will begin enforcement next year of the Senate's new rule barring employment discrimination, and predicted that many members — new and old — could be in for trouble on that score.

The new senators, most of whom were accompanied by two to four staff members, nodded solemnly. Many of those staffers were women, but the only black face in the room belonged to a waiter.

Caution Advised For Any Approached By Yule Solicitors

WASHINGTON (AP) — The streetcorner and door-to-door charity solicitors become more common in the holiday season and the Council of Better Business Bureaus has some thoughts for persons considering a donation.

Persons soliciting door-to-door should have some identification with their name and that of the organization and should be willing to say whether they are volunteers or employees of the group or are working for a promoter.

If selling candy or merchandise, the solicitor should make clear how much money goes to the sponsoring organization.

The solicitor should be willing to accept a check made out to the organization, not an individual.

Finally, the solicitor should explain where further information can be obtained and whether the donation is tax deductible.

Civic groups often go to the streets at Christmastime with kettles, canisters and Santas.

If you plan to give to one of these groups, ask for a solicitation card or other identification and don't be afraid to ask questions to make sure your money will actually reach people who need help.

If you want to bring Christmas cheer to a needy family, check your church or a community welfare department.

Ray Seeks Release Of FBI's King Tapes

WASHINGTON (AP) — James Earl Ray, serving a 99-year-sentence for the murder of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., filed suit Tuesday seeking public release of tapes the FBI made in the five years it kept tabs on the civil rights leader.

He said the tapes and transcripts of their contents "will assist in the exoneration of plaintiff" in the King assassination in 1968. There was no elaboration.

"The purpose of the National Archives is to preserve records and make them available to scholars and the general public, not to cover up political murders and perpetuate the blackmailing of politicians," Ray said in a complaint filed in federal court in Washington. There was no elaboration

He apparently composed the complaint himself, without the aid of a lawyer, and asked the court to overlook technical errors "Plaintiff presently resides in the state of Tennessee wherein he is incarcerated in the state penitentiary at Petros, Tenn.," Ray said.

He also asked that the suit be approached "in the law and spirit that the court's judge's colleague, Hon. John Sirica, approached and adjudicated the Watergate affair." Ray's complaint was assigned to U.S. District Judge Harold Greene.

Ray's brother, Jerry, concluded his testimony before the House Assassinations Committee last month by saying:

"I think on behalf of James, if we get the FBI files out of the archives we'll find out who did kill Martin Luther King."

Jerry Ray paid the $10 filing fee for the complaint, which was signed by James Earl Ray and mailed to Washington.

On Jan. 31, 1977, U.S. District Judge John Lewis Smith Jr., ordered tapes and transcripts of the FBI's King surveillance between 1963 and 1968 turned over to the National Archives. The court ordered that the materials be sealed for 50 years.

Ray asked that the assassinations committee be invited to enter the suit "in order that all of the facts surrounding the murder of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., can be laid before the American people."

Ray spent a week testifying before the committee, which is expected to issue its final report early next year. Ray insisted that he thought he was involved in a gun-running operation run by a man he knew only as Raoul, that he delivered a rifle to Raoul and that he was at a gas station when the King murder took place.

Rude Surprise Planned For Tree Poachers

SOMERVILLE, N.J. (AP) — Park officials here have a surprise for poachers who cut down evergreen trees and put them up in their homes this Christmas. They've sprayed them with a chemical that, once indoors, gives off an odor "somewhere between rotten eggs and a skunk."

"Anti-Christmas? Good heavens, no," said Jack W. Moody, secretary-director of the Somerset County Parks Commission, of the spraying project. "We are in the business of motherhood and nature and preserving all God's creations.

"We are just don't want our trees to end up in someone's living room."

The commission spent more than $500 this year spraying 200 to 300 of its ornamental pine and spruce trees in the Colonial Park in East Millstone with a deer repellent.

The mixture is disgusting to deer at any temperature, but humans begin to notice it when it is exposed to room temperature, according to Rudolph van der Goot, senior horticulturist for the parks.

"When the tree gets in the house, it stinks," van der Goot said. "The odor is pretty sickening — not something you would want to celebrate the holiday season with. In fact, it's not something you would want to be near at all."

Van der Goot, formerly a horticulturist at Brooklyn Botanical Gardens, says he got the idea for the program over 10 years ago, when the parks lost 15 trees during one holiday season.

Deer and other small animals are a problem for the trees as well, because they feed on evergreen buds, stunting their growth.

"In any case, the repellant washes off after a few rains," Moody said. "By January, you wouldn't be able to detect a thing, even indoors. But in January, our trees will be safe."

Monterey Band Slates Annual Holiday Concert

Automaker Again Lowers Sales Forecast

DETROIT (AP) — For the second time since September, Ford Motor Co. on Wednesday lowered its sales forecast for cars and trucks in 1979.

Chairman Henry Ford II said Americans will buy 14.8 million vehicles, a 4 percent drop from the record 15.4 million cars and trucks expected to be sold this year.

"We certainly do not expect a recession, but do expect a gradual slowdown in economic growth through the year," Ford said in his annual year-end review of the economy.

The auto executive said White House efforts to shore up the dollar and fight inflation would be partly responsible for the sales dip.

"Such a decline would be a reasonable price for our industry to pay if it is the result of policies necessary to curb inflation," Ford said.

Originally, the No. 2 automaker predicted 1979 industry sales of 15.2 million, including 11.2 million cars and 4 million trucks. Earlier this month, President Philip Caldwell bumped the figures down to 15 million, with 11 million cars and 4 million trucks.

The latest prediction calls for U.S. sales of 10.8 million domestic and foreign cars, a 4.4 percent dip, and 4 million trucks.

Wednesday's prediction puts Ford sharply at odds with the General Motors Corp. forecast of a 1 percent increase in total vehicle sales to 15.5 million.

But the Ford chairman's outlook agrees with many industry analysts, who see an inevitable and even desirable dip in auto sales over the next 12 months.

Ford also reduced his prediction for real Gross National Product growth for 1979 from 3.5 percent in September to 2.9 percent. This year's GNP rate will be about 3.8 percent.

A year ago, Ford was also well below the forecast of GM Chairman Thomas Murphy. Murphy turned out to be the better fortune teller for 1978.

Ford said the government's success in fighting inflation will be the key to performance of the nation's economy in 1979. If inflation is slowed, several "encouraging" factors will play a role, he said.

Record employment of 97 million, strong business construction, record personal income and orders for consumer products all bode well for 1979, he said.

Inflation and a slow growth rate of productivity are "the two disturbing elements in the U.S. economic outlook," Ford said.

On Wall Street, there is a strong feeling that a slowdown in auto sales has been too long in coming and that the longer the wait, the harder the fall will be. Thus a modest decline, such as that seen by Ford, is considered desirable.

Ford and Murphy agree that the domestic automakers will take away still more of the imports' share of the market in 1979, providing Detroit with a cushion during a slowdown.

Worldwide vehicle sales will break this year's record high of 38.2 million cars and trucks, Ford said, but he did not predict the amount of the increase.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. After reading the column in which you advised a reader to redeem shares of a mutual fund which you said has been "a bomb" since it was organized in 1940, I wonder if I should cash in the shares of my mutual fund.

I am a widow, 57, working part time to make ends meet. But my health is not good and I don't know how much longer I can work. I put $10,000 into a so-called "growth" mutual fund 12 years ago and have reinvested all income dividends and capital gains distributions. To date, my investment is worth about $13,000. My agent, who got most of the 8 percent commission I paid, advises me to "stay in." Do you?

A. No. The mutual fund you named in your letter is part of the same organization as the one deservedly tabbed a bomb in the previous column.

The hard and unfortunate — for investors — fact is that the organization managing your fund hasn't come up with a real winner yet. This, despite the fact that it runs a fistful of mutual funds and is one of the largest organizatons of its kind.

Your fund did fairly well, when the stock market took off last spring. But good time on a wind sprint does not win long races. And your money should be put away for the long term. I have to question that agent's motives in putting a widow into the kind of mutual fund which is speculative.

Q. I recently inherited $10,000. I am contemplating using this money as a down payment for a $30,000 summer cottage. The rental for most of the summer will pay the mortgage, real estate taxes and upkeep. And it would give me a summer vacation. Would this be a wise way to invest this money? Or should I put it into a savings account?

A. Assuming that you already have some money tucked away in a savings account for emergency purposes — as everyone should have — buy the summer cottage. If you choose an area where rentals are in demand, you should do very nicely — with a cost-free vacation, growing equity in a piece of real estate and a nice tax shelter.

On the last point, sit down with and get some good advice on how to handle the bookkeeping from a good accountant.

Q. I am 26, single and live at home. I have $14,000 in savings account. My yearly income is about $12,500 in salary and a about $800 in dividends and interest. What are your thoughts about me opening a margin account and buying 300 shares of a stock I have been watching for four months? It's a very volatile stock which seems depressed now, with a chance for sudden advancement if the market turns around.

A. Go to it. If you can't take a chance now, you'll never be able to. A young person with spare cash can afford to take risks. And there's certainly no necessity for you to have all that $14,000 in a savings account.

The stock you named in your letter might become a high-flier or it might crash land. Buying on margin — putting up only part of the purchase price and borrowing the rest through a broker — increases your risk and your potential for profit.

As long as you know what you're getting into, I won't try to talk you out of rolling dice in the stock market.

Q. We put our U.S. Savings Bonds, stock certificates and other securities in our safe deposit box at the bank, after making photostatic copies for our records, which we keep at home. But, after reading articles about safe deposit boxes, we wonder if we should keep our bonds, stock certificates and such at home. What do you think?

A. I don't know what you have been reading. But it sounds like very bad advice. Your safe deposit box is the place to keep your bonds and stock certificates. Leave them there.

McGovern Hears Request For U.S.-Angola Ties

LUANDA, Angola (AP) — President Agostinho Neto met with Sen. George McGovern for an hour Wednesday, then told reporters he is ready to establish diplomatic relations with the United States.

McGovern, winding up an eight-day African fact-finding tour, was 20 minutes late for his appointment with the Angolan leader because he visited three Americans held by the Marxist government in Luanda's Sao Paulo prison.

Angola "is prepared and desires to establish relations" with the United States, Neto told American reporters traveling with McGovern.

The United States never had an embassy in Angola because it was a Portuguese colony and diplomatic relations were in Lisbon. The United States had a consulate here, but when Neto's Cuban-backed Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola took power after independence in 1975, the consulate was closed.

The South Dakota Democrat said Neto could not understand why the United States would not establish relation with Angola even though it has a Marxist government, especially since Washington's NATO allies have embassies here.

McGovern said he told Neto the thousands of Cuban troops here were a stumbling block. He said Neto told him the Cubans could go home once assurances were received South African troops were no longer a threat to Angola's security along its southern border with the South African-administered territory of South-West Africa.

"That is a correct diagnosis and I have no reason to doubt it," McGovern told the reporters.

McGovern told reporters — the first contingent of U.S. journalists allowed to visit here since 1976 — that he didn't want to speculate or comment on the Americans' chances for release from prison.

The prisoners were identified as convicted mercenaries Gary Acker, 24, of Sacramento, Calif. and, Gustavo Grillo, 32, of Toms River, N.J., and George Gause,50, of Tarpon Springs, Fla., held for an alleged weapons violation.

Acker and Grillo were captured in Angola and convicted in 1976. They reportedly fought for one of two other guerrilla fronts against Neto's government.

Acker was sentenced to 16 years in prison while Grillo received a 30-year term. A mercenary comrade, Daniel Gearhart of Kensington, Md., was executed.

Gause, a farmer, has been living in Angola since 1968, McGovern said. He was arrested 18 months ago for illegal possession of a revolver and a rifle and held without trial since. McGovern said Gause told him he used the weapons for hunting.

McGovern said the three appeared to be in good health although they complained about the food. "My staff and I emptied our briefcases of cigarettes, candy and pocket books to give to them" the senator said.

The conversation between Neto and McGovern took place in a heavily guarded government compound outside Luanda. Afterward, both men talked with reporters.

Neto complained his country "has an image abroad which doesn't correspond to the reality" and said the American media constantly distorted Angolan reports.

Foreign observers here said Neto acted to streamline the government.

Dr. Cooley and his team work intently under bright lights of operating room.

HEART SURGEON

The Texas Heart Institute, which has the renowned Dr. Denton A. Cooley as its surgeon-in-chief, rises out of the flat Texas earth beside the Astrodome in Houston. It's one of the 27 buildings of the Texas Medical Center, that mecca for those who seek healing—including the heart surgery which has contributed so much to the Center's international reputation.

Dr. Cooley and his team perform more than 4,000 operations a year, about 400 of them on children. The working day, which begins before 7 a.m., often includes a dozen operations, with Dr. Cooley moving between several theaters in use at the same time—getting through what would be a week's work for many a surgeon. Then, in early evening after the day in the operating theater is done, comes the other side of the heart surgeon's work: Dr. Cooley's rounds of visits to patients and relatives. This is a time for kindly explanations, reports on that day's operations and reassuring words about those to be faced tomorrow.

A personal word: Dr. Cooley visits patient.

After the day's surgery is over, Dr. Cooley makes his rounds—including child heart patients.

White Pleads Innocent In San Francisco Deaths

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Former Supervisor Dan White pleaded innocent Wednesday to the Nov. 27 City Hall murders of Mayor George Moscone and supervisor Harvey Milk.

White, 32, a former policeman, fireman and Army paratrooper, sat quietly next to his attorney, Douglas Schmidt, as Municipal Court Judge R.J. Reynolds set bail at $1 million. A preliminary hearing was set for Jan. 17.

White, clad in a bright orange jumpsuit, was calm during the hearing, glancing twice at his wife, Mary Ann, who sat nervously next to White's father and three family members in the small courtroom.

When the judge asked White if he understood the plea, he answered clearly, "I do, your Honor."

White is charged with two counts of first degree murder "with special circumstances" in the gunshot killings.

If White is convicted under a new "special circumstances" statute covering murder of public officials, the death penalty would be mandatory.

The judge granted Schmidt's request that his client be allowed to plead innocent by reason of insanity in trial court and challenge the "special circumstances."

White also is charged with using a firearm, a .38-caliber revolver, to kill his two colleagues.

Schmidt said his client has been in "a prolonged state of shock" since he surrendered to police within an hour after the shootings.

"He is continuing to be in a state of shock," Schmidt told reporters after the hearing. "He's certainly depressed."

Schmidt also said he was exploring the possibility of asking for a change of venue and complained that $1 million bail "is tantamount to no bail at all, it's the type of figure no usual defendant can cope with."

Under a recent state supreme court ruling on insanity pleas, a defendant must prove that he had a mental defect or disease that resulted in his lacking "the capacity ... to conform his conduct to the requirements of the law" or to "appreciate the criminality of his conduct."

According to published reports, White confessed to police shortly after his arrest, saying he shot Moscone because the mayor would not reappoint him to the board. White resigned Nov. 10, saying he could not support his family on the $9,600 annual salary paid to supervisors, then asked for the job back a few days later.

Milk was killed, according to the reported confession, because "he scoffed at me."

White changed his mind about the resignation after his 16 brothers and sisters offered him up to $10,000 in loans.

In White's purported statement to police, he said he crawled through a basement window to get into City Hall, deliberately avoiding metal detectors at both main entrances because he didn't want to "cause any embarrassment to the police" should it later be learned that he was carrying a gun.

Lubbock Firm Asks Branch In Idalou

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — First Texas Savings Association of Lubbock has amended its application for a branch office in Amarillo to a location in Idalou, the Texas Savings and Loan Department reports.

The amended application requests a branch office at Main Street and U.S. 82 in Idalou.

The request is set for hearing at 9:30 a.m. Dec. 28 before hearing examiner Luke Robinson.

Planes Seek Missing Boat

HONOLULU (AP) — Three military planes searched 19,000 square miles of gale-whipped ocean Wednesday for traces of a 94-foot boat with seven scientists and two others aboard.

The motor vessel Holo Holo, chartered by the University of Hawaii, was reported missing when it failed to pick up three scientists at Kawaihae harbor on Hawaii island Monday morning, the Coast Guard said.

The vessel has not been seen or heard from since it left Honolulu on Satruday to conduct oceanographic research in waters off the west coast of Hawaii island.

A search Tuesday failed to turn up any trace of the vessel. Wednesday's search by two Coast Guard planes and one Navy plane covered a triangle-shaped area south and west of the island chain.

The search was being hampered by gale-force winds and high seas, the Coast Guard said.

Among those aboard the vessel were the owner, John Laney of Honolulu, and three University of Hawaii researchers, Michael Allen, 29; Gary Niemeyer, 31; and Robert Harvey, 39.

Also aboard were Jim Sandusky and Mike Shannon of the University of California's Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory; two unidentified scientists from the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration; and a cook, who also was not identified.

Jewish Leaders Rap Billy

ATLANTA (AP) — It's time Billy Carter grew up and learned the difference between humor and insult, two Jewish leaders say.

They are upset about Carter's use of the term "bastardized Jew" in remarks at a banquet for Atlanta Braves pitcher Phil Niekro on Nov. 17.

The remark indicats a failure on Carter's part to distinguish "between ethnic humor and ethnic insult," Stuart Lewengrub of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith said in an open letter to Carter on the front page of the Dec. 8 issue of The Southern Israelite magazine.

In an editorial in the same edition, managing editor Vida Goldgar called the remarks "ill-conceived, grossly insensitive and (showing) an utter disregard for any semblance of responsibility."

The "latest outrage calls for a response beyond the figurative 'boys will be boys.' It's time Billy Carter grew up," the editorial said.

Carter could not be contacted for comment. His agent, Tandy Rice of Nashville, Tenn., said he had been unable to contact Carter for two days.

Man Walks 6,000 Miles

MOSCOW (AP) — Georgy Bushuev says he didn't want to wait for a second heart attack, so he took a walk — more than 6,000 miles across the Soviet Union.

The newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda said Wednesday that Bushuev, who is retired, took seven months and 25 days to walk from Riga, Latvia, on the Baltic Sea to Vladivostok on the Pacific coast.

"I didn't want to wait for the next attack and so I started out," Bushuev said. "I was walking not to set a record or for the sake of publicity. The only thing I wanted was to improve my health."

The newspaper quoted doctors as saying Bushuev looked younger after his trek. The report did not mention his age but indicated he was over 60.

$1,200 Stereo Destroyed

DETROIT (AP) — Margaret Achorn was suspicious about the 25-pound package that came in the mail. She didn't know the sender, and postal inspectors couldn't figure out what was in it because it wouldn't fit in the X-ray machine.

So, escorted by eight police cars, the package was taken to Belle Isle in the Detroit River and blown up. It turned out to be a $1,200 stereo set.

The return address on the package said it was sent by Edward Achorn, but Mrs. Achorn said she and her husband, Michael, had no relatives in the Chicago area and didn't known an Edward Achorn. "It sure wasn't intended for us," she said.

The post office said Wednesday it had not been able to find the sender. The stamp came from a Montgomery Ward's postage meter, but Ward's in Chicago had no order for it, did not send it and does not carry that brand, inspectors said.

"Someone was playing Santa Claus, is my guess," said Gene Potter, assistant chief postal inspector in Detroit.

The package wasn't insured.

NOT THE PIN-UP TYPE — Candice Bergen discusses her latest movie, "Oliver's Story," with reporters in Chicago Tuesday. Bergen said she is not the pin-up type; that only modern technology separates World War II pin-ups from the modern poster and T-shirt fad.(AP Laserphoto)

Not Pin-Up Type Says Star

CHICAGO (AP) — Though many might disagree, actress Candice Bergen says she isn't the pin-up type.

But she says she has nothing against the Farrah Fawcett-Majorses and John Travoltas whose pictures peer from millions of posters and adorn the T-shirts of throngs of fans. Posters "are not something to be politically against," she said.

Miss Bergen launched a three-city promotional tour Tuesday in Chicago for her new movie, "Oliver's Story," a sequel to "Love Story."

She said only modern technology separates the World War II pin-ups from the modern poster and T-shirt fad.

"You remember Betty Grable and Jane Russell," Miss Bergen said. "There were pin-ups of them on the wall of every barracks. This isn't original, this commercialization. The media is just more sophisticated."

However, she added, "I'm not the pin-up type."

Chief Fire Himself

CLAYTON, Calif. (AP) — After weeks of worrying about a growing budget deficit in this community of 1,500, chief administrator Pete Archuleta determined someone had to go. Finally, Archuleta fired himself last week.

Archuleta, 36, said "cold hard facts" showed his job, at $28,000 a year, was the most expendable job among the 13 on the staff.

"We accepted his resignation," said Carolyn Bovat, mayor of the community about 40 miles east of San Francisco. "He is a charming man and everyone likes him. But he gave us a recommendation and we're going to take it."

Money Woes Trim City's Horse Squad

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Newark is strapped for cash and city officials believe they need $5,000 more than 10 police horses and 88 years of tradition.

The mounted squad was disbanded several years ago, but 10 animals had been kept in the hope the unit could be reactivated some day. On Tuesday, the horses were auctioned off to the highest bidders.

Last month's announcement that $11 million in federal anti-recession funds had been lost — and with it 441 municipal jobs, including those of 200 police officers — dashed hopes the squad could be revived.

"I feel bad. He carried me a long way," said a sad-faced Officer Fred DiMartino, who bid unsuccessfully on his former mount, Rocky, now 19. "I wish I could have had him, if just for my kids."

DiMartino's bid was topped by Dorothy Lutz of Livingston, who bid $400.

The sale of the mounts and all the city's stable equipment will bring in about $5,000, the city's purchasing department said.

But Officer Louis Weisberg, who rode in the squad and has cared for the horses in the North Precinct Stable for 24 years, said the auction was a senseless gesture.

"I don't know very much about budgets, but I don't think the sale will amount to more than a drop in the bucket," Weisberg said. "Why get rid of them for that?

"The sale of the animals won't save a single job," he said.

"I'm sorry to see the young men on the force go and I'm sorry to see the horses go," Weisberg said. "We are all good friends and they are good cops. I just don't understand how it came to this, and all within a month's time."

Border Mailings Offer Post Savings

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — The local postmaster agrees there's a big savings to be had by mailing your Christmas cards from across the border because of the four-cent Mexican postal rate.

But Lawrence Flosi also warns that if you send too many, the post office here will ho-ho-hold them up.

A businessman's newsletter now being circulated suggests Christmas card senders take advantage of the cheap Mexican first class postage rate. Flossi said the Mexican post office simply ships the mail back north of the river to a U.S. post office for delivery.

However, there is a limit.

"If they mail over 200 pieces a year they must pay the U.S. rate and, believe me, we keep close track of that," Flosi said. "When we see people doing this habitually and we notice they are taking advantage we'll tell them how much they owe us and hold up the mail."

When the 200-piece limit is reached, the 15-cent U.S. rate must be paid in addition to the Mexican rate, the postmaster said.

Flosi said several Brownsville businesses have been caught exceeding the limit in recent years.

Advisor Proposes Boost In Water Agency Funds

By LARRY SPRINGER
A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A device to boost the effective value of the $176 million remaining in the Texas Water Development Fund to almost $2 billion was suggested Tuesday. Austin financial advisor Buck Tinsley, who said this may be the only way to secure funding for water importation projects to the High Plains and the Rio Grande Valley.

Tinsley, who outlined his financing device before the Governor's Water Task Force, said he has talked over his funding plan with House Speaker Bill Clayton and said the speaker is very interested.

Tinsley's proposal basically would involve legislation to allow the Texas Water Development Board to issue revenue bonds for districts wishing to use this financing scheme. Those bonds would be backed up by a double reserve fund, with the first reserve made up of a percentage of the proceeds received by the sale of the revenue bonds and the second reserve of development bond funds from the Texas Water Development Fund totalling 10 percent of the bonding commitment.

Tinsley maintains development fund monies could be used for this purpose without the passage of a constitutional amendment. Rather, he said, a "simple statute" could be passed to allow the use of the money. Elections also could be avoided, he said.

Tinsley said his plan would permit river authorities, municipal utility districts, etc. — but not cities — to use this type of funding, although cities could band together under a district to provide water for their area.

He suggested the statute could be called the "Regional Water Supply Act of 1979."

Under this funding device, a sponsoring district would go to the Texas Water Development Board for an initial water development planning loan to be funded with interim bonds, Tinsley said.

The sponsor would then do a project appraisal, put together a "deal," including financing, then bring it back to the TWDB which would issue the bonds.

Those bonds, Tinsley said, would be TWDB revenue bonds to be paid "solely from proceeds" realized from the water supply project.

The bonds would be backed up with the two reserve funds to enhance the bonds position in the marketplace, he said.

With the development bond fund "kitty" behind the revenue bonds and the first reserve — which Tinsley said would be enough alone to handle one year's debt service — "you can get a double 'A' bond rating and a good interest rate."

"This device multiplies the effectiveness of the remaining $176 million in the water development fund to $1.7 billion," he said.

Tinsley said the device "looks too good. I can't find anything wrong with it." Neither, he added, can any others, including Speaker Clayton's staff, who he said has reviewed the proposal.

Water through the projects financed under this device would have to be sold on a "take or pay" basis to customers, Tinsley said. The state will own the water under his "lease-purchase" scheme, with the sponsor gaining ownership of the project only after it is totally paid off.

He added that the Attorney General would have authority under the statute to enforce the bond agreements and other indentures.

The "exposure of the development fund is absolutely minimal," Tinsley maintained, saying the state money will be "insulated by a year's debt service" plus the Attorney General's authority to enforce agreements.

Tinsley dismissed the possibility of the state being held liable in the case of default, saying "it (any loss) can be recovered."

On questioning by task force members, Tinsley stressed the funding device would not require sponsoring districts or the state to take revenue bonds to the voters. Even those cities which require revenue bond issues to be considered by voters under their city charters likely would not have to take this kind of issue to the polls in accordance with recent court rulings.

Asked about possible constitutional problems in the use of development fund monies in this manner, Tinsley insisted that the TWDB has "broad discretion" in the way it offers loans under the program.

The primary criteria, it was suggested, is that it be a water supply project with a source of revenue to pay off the bonds and debt service.

One of the municipal members of the water task force said he is concerned that a major city such as Houston, which is a major water supplier, could be undercut by several smaller customer cities which might form a district under Tinsley's plan and compromise the larger city's position as a regional water supplier.

"You can enforce your contracts with them," Tinsley said.

"I wouldn't count on it," several individuals said in unison.

Tax Relief Goal Still Billion, Clements Says

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov.-elect Bill Clements Wednesday softened his earlier hardline insistence that the legislature grant $1 billion in tax relief in addition to the "Tax Relief Amendment."

"I mentioned the billion dollars as a round number, a good solid number that's easy to write in your press statements and easy to talk about," Clements told an impromptu Capitol news conference.

"I said at the time it wasn't definitive, but I'm optimistic," he said after meeting with Speaker Bill Clayton. "Certainly I'd say that a billion dollars is a goal. It's still a goal I'll work toward."

Clements and Clayton said a proposed state spending schedule from the Legislative Budget Board still has a few areas that could stand trimming in the lawmaking session that begins Jan. 9.

The board recommended more than $2.4 billion in new state spending for the 1980-1981 biennium, leaving only $80 million in new revenue from inflation, higher oil and gas prices and economic growth available for spending or tax cut programs.

"I think there will be, in due course, a meeting of the minds and we'll come out of this with a program that will be good for the people of Texas," said Clements.

The governor-elect told a pre-legislative conference of lawmakers Dec. 1 that the $1 billion tax cut was one of his major goals for the legislative session. The budget board adopted its final budget figures later that day.

Both Clements and Clayton said they needed state revenue estimates from Comptroller Bob Bullock before deciding what budget areas to cut.

"There will be some areas in the document that can be trimmed," Clayton said. "I don't know that it would be proper to say $1 billion or half a billion dollars."

Freak Accident Kills Painter In New York

NEW YORK (AP) — A painter was killed Wednesday when he was pulled into the path of an oncoming elevated train, the Transit Authority said.

According to authorities, the painter was standing on the platform trying to secure a dropcloth to prevent paint from dripping from the station when a rope end dropped to the street and was snagged by a passing car. The painter got tangled in the rope and was dragged into the path of the train, officials said.

Betty Ford Says Nixon Talks Hurt GOP

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former First Lady Betty Ford said Wednesday she thinks former President Richard M. Nixon's recent public appearances are not helping the Republican Party.

"It's too soon for him (to speak out)," she told members of the Washington Press Club at a luncheon. "He's getting too much publicity."

Nixon recently made widely reported appearances on French television and at Oxford University in England, and spoke to a gathering of former White House aides in Washington. He said he was finally emerging from the self-imposed seclusion he has sought since he resigned as president in August 1974.

Mrs. Ford also said she feels very defensive about her children, whose private lives at the White House are discussed in a recently published book by Mrs. Ford's former press secretary, Sheila Weidenfeld.

"I would like to think that anyone working with me in a close personal way and in a confidential way would consider that as confidential and not write about it afterwards," Mrs. Ford said. "But there was no arrangement for that when she (Mrs. Weidenfeld) was working for me.

"To write about any children living in the White House is very unfair, particularly if it's critical. To take things that have been confided and put them in print is very bad."

Mrs. Weidenfeld's book, "The First Lady's Lady," tells how the Fords' daughter, Susan, dated a married man while she was living in the White House and said her mother knew about it.

Mrs. Weidenfeld also wrote that Steve Ford, one of President Gerald R. Ford's sons, sneaked a date out of the Queen's Bedroom one morning as an ABC camera crew waited in the hallway to begin a televised tour of the White House.

She also wrote that Jack Ford, another presidential son, smoked marijuana.

Mrs. Ford, who was in Washington to promote her own new book, "The Times of My Life," said she never wanted her husband to run for public office in the 30 years they have been married, and that her feeling has not changed.

"In the past I've made the statement that whatever makes him happy makes me happy. If you believe that," Mrs. Ford her audience of about 100 journalists, "you are a discredit to your profession."

Mrs. Ford said jokingly that if her husband decides to run for president in 1980, "I'll think he'd be unanimously elected as he was before."

On a more serious note, Mrs. Ford said that "if circumstances convince me that he should run in another campaign, I would support him with all the conviction that he should do it. That statement is being made by a woman who is aware of the responsibilities and what would be involved in such a decision."

At one point, she was asked how her personal relationship with her husband has been affected by her mastectomy, arthritis and alcoholism.

"Many women feel after a mastectomy that they are less desirable to their husbands," she said. "It is a big barrier that a woman has to get over. My husband didn't feel it was a big barrier. We faced it together.

"Speaking of arthritis, it depends of course on the degree. But we don't have to think of marriage as something purely physical. There is something much deeper than that," Mrs. Ford said.

The former first lady said she learned while she was hospitalized at Long Beach, Calif., that people using drugs heavily suffer sexual withdrawals and must adjust.

"I never had that adjustment. But they do give lectures there and tell you not to worry if at first you're inadequate," she said.

AMIN WARNS ON MORALS

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — President Idi Amin has told government officials and Ugandan "fat cats" they face jail if they are discovered dating other men's wives. He also warned married women to "stop their double game" and said prostitutes who "cause fighting among men" face military tribunals if caught.

Famed Soprano To Direct N.Y. Opera

NEW YORK (AP) — Beverly Sills' leap from opera stage to opera administration will come 1½ years early, New York City Opera officials announced Wednesday.

Miss Sills, 49, will take over the reins of the City Opera next July 1. She will replace Julius Rudel, director of the company since 1957. Rudel, 57, resigned effective June 30, and will become principal conductor for the company on July 1.

Last year, it was announced that the Brooklyn-born Miss Sills would join Rudel as co-director at the end of 1980 and that the world-famous soprano would later take full charge of the company.

There were reports that Rudel was forced to resign because some recent productions did not meet with favor. Rudel's activities as an international conductor and his work as musical director for the Buffalo Symphony were reported to have interferred with his work at the City Opera.

At Wednesday's news conference, Rudel said the decision to resign was his own, although he admitted that he had had "differences" with the company's board of directors.

During his career, Rudel molded the company as a force in the world of opera, with a lengthened season, recording contracts and a company composed mainly of American singers, including Miss Sills.

But, he said, the "difficult, tedious and sometimes not so rewarding work got to me. ... And now, I want a chance to be just a musician."

He said he and Miss Sills had first discussed her eventual takeover of the company in 1973, and he would have left earlier, but for the financial crisis that the company has weathered in the past two years.

Now, Rudel said, "She feels ready and I begged her to do it alone."

"It shouldn't be construed as a farewell or a divorce," said Rudel, a native of Vienna, Austria. As the company's first principal conductor, he will conduct a minimum of 22 performances each year with the company in New York, in addition to performances in Washington and Los Angeles.

"I know that 'Good Queen Bev,'" as I call her, will have not only the company behind her, and the board, but also the country," he said.

Ailing Fiedler Inundated By Remembrances

BOSTON (AP) — Flowers and get-well cards from across the nation poured in Wednesday for Boston Pops conductor Arthur Fiedler, the spirited maestro who is recovering from brain surgery.

"We've received buckets of flowers and millions of cards," said Fiedler's wife, Ellen. "It's getting to the point where we don't know what to do with them."

"We've been getting cards from all over, even from little towns in the Midwest," said Peter Fiedler, son of the man who founded the Pops a half-centery ago and became one of the city's favorites with his summertime, outdoor concerts on the banks of the Charles River. He also charmed the city with his hobby of chasing fire trucks late into the night.

Al Waitkus, spokesman for the Tufts New England Medical Center, said more than half of the calls to the hospital had been queries about the silver-haired Fiedler, whose 84th birthday is Sunday.

"We've never had anything like it," Waitkus said. Five switchboard operators failed to keep up with the calls, he said.

Fiedler, who taught millions of Americans to enjoy classical music by mixing the classics with popular songs, was operated on Monday night. A thin tube was inserted into his skull, connecting his brain to his abdomen to relieve pressure from excess fluid.

Doctors said Fiedler's condition — known as normal pressure hydrocephalus — had impaired his walking.

They were cautious in predicting Fiedler's future, saying they would not know for a week whether he would be able to return to giving his peppy performances at the Boston Symphony.

At the symphony office, too, phones were jammed by callers worried about Fiedler's condition. It was listed as stable Wednesday, when he was removed from intensive care. Doctors and his family described him as doing well.

Wednesday afternoon, Fiedler received a brief visit from Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

Mrs. Fiedler recalled visiting her husband shortly after he emerged from surgery. "He opened his eyes and said, 'Hello.' It's remarkable how he came back."

Volumes On Hollywood Personalities Keep Holiday Bookshelf Well-Stocked

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The holiday bookshelf:

—"The Actor's Life" is a fascinating look into the mind and methods of a movie star. Charlton Heston kept a journal during the years 1956-1976, and it has been edited by Hollis Alpert as a disarming portrait of a decent man. Being a gentlemen, Heston steps on few toes.

Heston remarks that none of Gore Vidal's script efforts were incorporated into "Ben-Hur," adding: "I stress the point because Vidal has gone extravagantly and disdainfully (qualities, I fear, he cannot avoid) on record about his authorship of the 'Ben-Hur' screenplay."

About Sophia Loren: "She sometimes tends to carry her remarkable beauty through a scene as though it were a soufflé . . . very, very gently, lest it break."

—"Groucho" is the latest and perhaps the most valuable of the many books on Marxiana. The reason is that author Hector Arce worked intimately with the comedian on two previous books and was live-in official biographer of Groucho's late years. Arce witnessed a different Marx in the aging, sometimes victimized but always witty man. The biographer has done his homework on the early history, dating back to the family's arrival in the United States in the 1880s.

Arce tells the less flattering side of Groucho: the estrangement from his children, the emotional crackups of most of the women in his life. But Groucho gave him instructions during his final illness: "Tell it all."

—The ageless Anita Loos writes a chatty memoir, "The Talmadge Girls," about the beauties of the silent screen, Norma and Constance; also Natalie, who never made it in films but was noted for marrying Buster Keaton.

Miss Loos wrote scripts between 1916 and 1925 for the two famous sisters and knows their charms and foibles. Constance quit films before talkies. Norma tried three and was criticized for her enunciation.

Her sister called from London: "Quit pressing your luck, baby. The critics can't knock those trust funds Mom set up for us."

Like most female stars of that era, the Talmadges had a hard-driving mother. She saved money for her daughters, who also married well, and often.

—The brothers Mankiewicz are the subjects of two biographies, "Mank; The Wit, World and Life of Herman Mankiewicz" by Richard Meryman, and "Pictures Will Talk; The Life and Films of Joseph L. Mankiewicz" by Kenneth L. Geist. Both made enormous contributions to films as well as Hollywood lore.

Herman wrote 75 screenplays from 1926 to 1952, but his fame rests on "Citizen Kane," which he wrote with Orson Welles, and his rare and biting wit. On his deathbed he asked his nurse if he could get out of the oxygen tent for a smoke. When she advised him that smoking would be the worst thing for him, he snapped, "I'm dying, and she's trying to break me of the cigarette habit!"

Brother Joseph was equally talented but more disciplined. His career has extended from "The Dummy" (1929) to "Slueth" (1972), and it is well covered in Geist's book, but with a trace of bitterness. The book started as an official biography but Joe later disowned it.

—"The Moving Picture Boys" is a rollicking novel by Max Wilk, who seems to have a knack for predicting events.

Union People Hit Airline Takeover

MIAMI (AP) — A coalition of unions representing most of National Airlines' 8,500 employees, many of whom have been less than pleased with management in the past, said Wednesday it opposed any takeover of the embattled firm.

"Due to the many uncertainties connected with any airline merger and/or acquisition ... it is the position of organized labor at National Airlines to oppose any merger or acquisition of National Airlines at this time," the coalition said in a statement.

Three airlines — Pan American World Airways, Texas International Airlines and, most recently, Eastern Airlines — have been trying to gain control of or absorb National.

The Wednesday statement was signed by officials of eight unions representing pilots, flight engineers, flight attendants, communications workers, agents and clerical employees, mechanics, flight dispatchers and flight-simulator employees. About 90 percent of National's work force was represented by the people signing the statement.

Bob Pech, spokesman for the coalition and chairman of the Air Line Pilots Association local representing National pilots, said the union representatives agreed on the common position during two recent meetings.

"As long as National stays in its same fiscal position and is a profitable, viable organization, we don't see any need to go anyplace or to anybody else to get what we have now," he said.

In the recent past, many National employees — and their unions — have complained that the carrier was unresponsive to workers' needs and paid lower wages than most competitors.

Just last week, National and its 1,325 flight attendants ended a 15-month stalemate by agreeing on a new contract. Sources said the pact finally brought the employees' salaries to industry-wide standards.

And after Pan Am made clear its takeover intentions last August, many employees told reporters they felt they could get a better deal from Pan Am's management than from National's.

The three bidders for control of National have promised to retain all or most of the firm's work force as possible. But some National employees have expressed fears that they might lose seniority if they were meshed with another group of workers.

Pech said the unions now feel "the promises and good will expressed by the airlines involved in the merger proposals may not turn out to be realities once we're working on their property.

"We know where we are. We're sound financially. We know what our contracts will be the next year or two. We know where we will be living. Right now, we're not that unhappy here."

Pech said, however, that the group might reassess its position as events unfold in the takeover drama.

"We would look at it at that time," he said. "The way this thing has been going, no one can predict what will happen."

Mexico Fishing Craft Seized

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A Mexican fishing boat was seized by the Coast Guard near a Texas beach Wednesday when the crew was spotted harpooning dolphin — which U.S. law protects.

A spokesman at headquarters here identified the 60-foot fishing boat at the Pro Temex. No one was arrested, but the boat was seized and the matter turned over to the U.S. attorney in Brownsville.

The spokesman said the Mexisan fishermen were spearing dolphin within 50 yards of the jetty extending out from the Port Isabel Coast Guard station and were reported by the U.S. fishing boat Divine Command.

Guardsmen who boarded the Pro Temex said four dead dolphin were on the deck, two of them still warm.

Dolphin, which are mammals, are shielded in U.S. waters by the Mammal Protection Act, which makes it illegal to harm certain species of mammals, including whales and seals.

Houston Lawman's Wife Found Slain

HOUSTON (AP) — Police searched Wednesday for a woman reportedly seen leaving in a station wagon shortly after the wife of a sheriff's captain was shot to death on the front porch of her home.

A neighbor found the body of Mrs. Traver C. Jones, 47, just minutes after receiving a Tuesday night telephone call in which Mrs. Jones said a woman having a diabetic seizure was on her porch and she was afraid to open the door. The neighbor said she saw a woman driving away in a station wagon.

Investigators said it appeared Mrs. Jones had opened the door and accidentally locked herself outside when she stepped onto the porch. They said a telephone book and a pencil were beside the body.

Jones, a county employee 20 years, was on night patrol.

STORM KILLS FIVE

LONDON (AP) — Torrential rain and gales of up to 100 miles an hour killed five British motorists, uprooted trees, damaged property and endangered shipping Wednesday off the coasts of Britain and France. A search was under way in the Atlantic Ocean for a 37,000-ton West German barge carrier, the Munchen, out of Bremen with 22 crewmen aboard. The vessel radioed for help while being pounded by waves up to 50 feet high

Sanders Becomes First Chap Football Coach

Jerry Don Sanders, the diminutive kicker from Springlake-Earth, who booted his way into the hearts of Texas Tech fans during the late '60s, has been named Lubbock Christian College's first head football coach, College President Dr. Harvie M. Pruitt announced late Wednesday afternoon.

"We're extremely pleased, naturally," Dr. Pruitt said, "to be getting a coach who has had both the playing experiences and a wide background of coaching experience as has Jerry Don Sanders.

"He is well-known by sports fans in this area for his accomplishments in both high school and college. He became a college star despite not having the physical size so many coaches feel is a must to be a star and I think he'll be able to relate to other athletes who are in the same mold.

"We felt our first coach had to be a man who knew outour situation, could build a non-scholarship porgram as well as coach. We had a number of well qualified men apply for this postion. Jerry Don convinced us he would be able to accomplish the things we feel are important in the area of football and we're happy he's agreed to undertake this challenge," Dr. Pruitt concluded.

J T King, who coached Sanders during his collegiate career at Texas Tech, was elated when he heard the news.

"That's great," said the former Red Raider athletic director. "Jerry Don's an outstanding young man. He's very intelligent person in all aspects of the game. I think that this will be a great move for both parties involved."

Sanders, a 1966 graduate of Springlake-Earth High School, followed Kenny Vinyard as Tech's placement man in the latter years of that decade and in 1969 averaged 39 yards on 74 punts, hit 11 of 16 field goals and tallied 59 points.

An established kicker in high school where he had a 45-yard field goal, a 78-yard punt and a 70-yard field goal in practice (with a stiff breeze to his back), Sanders, who played on his high school's last district championship team, started making his presence known as a freshman at Tech.

He kicked a 53-yard field goal against Rice and a 57-yarder agains Texas A&M and a 59-yarder against the Tech redshirts in 1966.

Sanders grabbed SWC attention when with 16 seconds left in a 1968 game, booted a 27-yard field goal to beat SMU 27-24.

Upon graduating in 1970, Sanders spent four years coaching in the Class AA Burnet school system as an assistant in football and basketball and had the track program for one year.

After that, he served as Principal of Waco Christian Schools for two years and the last 2 1/2 years has been Education and Youth Director at the Thomas Street Church of Christ in Altus, Okla.

Sanders resigned his position at Thomas Street Wednesday night and will report to Lubbock with the dawning of the new year. In the meantime, he will be recruiting in the Altus area.

"I'm interested in the overall program at LCC as far as the Christian College and athletics are concerned," Sander s Said. "Athletics have been a part of my life since I was able to walk."

"I've got some notes from the conference meeting, but I haven't had time to sit down with (basketball-baseball coach) Larry Hays and talk to him about them.

"After I arrive in Lubbock, we'll make plans for spring training. I understand we have 36 days to get in 20 days of practice. The rest of the time can be spent on running and the weight programs."Naturally, I want to sea what type personnel we have and adapt the program to suit that personnel both offensively and defensively.

"Hopefully, we plan to make it interesting and not go the 'three yeards and a cloud of dust' route. We hope to make it interesting and exciting for the fans.

"I'm extremely excited about the opportunity of being in Lubbock and initiat-

Gary Bowe thinks it's about time Lubbock Christian High starts flexing its muscles a little bit, but don't look for the Eagles to star in "Pumping Basketball" or the such.

LCHS will attempt to show off its muscles, though, when it opens today's Reese Air Force Base basketball tournament in the President's Trophy Division (usually reserved for AAA and AAAA schools), instead of the Commander's Trophy Division, or small school category.

The three-day event, which continues through Saturday night, bounces into action at 11:30 a.m. today when El Paso Andress meets Roosevelt in the opener. In all, eight games are on tap today.

"We're just going to try and find out what kind of team we really have," explained Bowe. "It should really be a test for us. I think we've been playing very well and also give us chance to play some good competition."

LCHS opens its portion of the tournament at 7 p.m. against Lubbock High.

Although LCHS won the Texas Association of Private School's tournament last year for the second consecutive time, the Eagles didn't fare too well at Reese. Miserable might be a good word to use, since they ended up oh-for-3 at last season's event.

"We didn't play well at all last year," said Bowe. "But we're excited about playing this year, it should be fun."

Currently the Eagles own the finest record of any team entered, sporting a perfect 11-0 mark. Included in the mark are wins over Plainview and Estacado, a feat Bowe is proud of.

"Those wins gave us some confidence," continued the LCHS head coach. "Now if we can do well, we'll continue to gain more confidence and that should help us further along."

Billy McConnell, currently hitting 73 per cent of his shots from the floor while scoring 132 points for the year, is one of

Talent Search

AS HE TALKED to the press and supporters as new head football coach of the University of Iowa last Saturday, Hayden Fry, it is said, was wearing a black-and-gold Hawkeye tie. It was to cover up his green-and-white t-shirt.

Fry made a move which many considered both swift and surprising. The North Texas coach and athletic director had seen his name pop up in connection with the Oklahoma State coaching job, about the time Jim Stanley was fired. But, Iowa? There was a different story.

But the move left the Denton school looking for one man — or two — at a time when it is hoping to make an upward push in its athletic history.

Its problems — and its challenges — are not unique in college athletics, but some of them are different.

WHEN SMU FIRED Fry after the 1972 season — when the Mustangs tied for second in the league and had the third-best record (7-4) in the SWC — North Texas was coming off a 1-10 season.

Rod Rust had led the Eagles to a pair of very successful seasons (8-2 in '68, 7-3 in '69) before falling to 3-8, 3-8 and 1-10.

Thus NTSU was down when Fry arrived. NT teams were known generally as the Eagles and wore dark-green uniforms. Fry, with a touch of flamboyance, opted for a lighter shade of green, turned toward the Mean Green as a nickname, and went to a modernized caricature of an eagle on helmets and stationery.

All the changes were in an effort to alter the school's losing image. Something worked; his first season at Denton, the team went 5-5-1. It slipped to 2-7-2 in '74, but since then, the records have been 7-4 or better.

In 1975, the Eagles stepped up and smacked Tennessee right in the face — in Knoxville — 21-14, just two weeks after clubbing Houston 28-0.

Fry, well known from his playing days at Odessa High and at Baylor as well as his tenure at SMU, was able to recruit well, even though working in the shadow of the Southwest Conference.

At times, Fry worked the smaller schools and came up with athletes at times overlooked by the SWC. Example: Michael Jones came out of Class B Loraine, and Fry signed him. Last spring, he was drafted by the pros as a running-back.

Then, last winter, Fry pulled off probably his biggest coup in signing Blooming Grove's Milton Collins to a national letter, beating the Aggies down the stretch. Collins has been likened by some to Earl Campbell at the same stage of their high school and freshman careers.

BUT, IN ADDITION to his footballing, Fry led North Texas State out of the Missouri Valley, then announced publicly the intention to get into the Southwest Conference. He and other school officials stated that they realized it would not be an overnight quest; but that they were willing to bide their time, maintain a solid, overall program, and be at the door, should one school drop out, or should any change in thinking arise.

And that was the situation when Iowa announced the new head coach last Saturday.

NOW, IT'S NORTH Texas' time to be looking for a coach. Fry held both the coach and AD titles, but it is expected that the two positions will be separated; that is the trend these days.

The AD position will be interesting to watch, for its direction could be the key to the school's progress toward the SWC.

Fry, through SWC contacts cultivated over a decade at SMU, was able to land two football games with Texas in the past three years, and NT has played SWC teams in basketball more frequently — TCU, SMU and Baylor within the past week. Much of the credit for this belongs to Fry.

If the school does opt for a separate AD and does not hire from within its organization, it is not out of the realm of pprobability that school officials will look in the SWC's direction. A capable person from an SWC school, one with connections and knowledge of the league's inner workings,would be a most valuable asset in continuing pursuit of membership.

Simply, North Texas is on the outside looking in, and if it has a former SWC official as its AD, when if the time arrives that the league would look favorably on another team, then knowing the right people could be the key to it all.

Fry led the battle, and he brought up the school's football — and by his hiring, the basketball — program. He had a flair which kept the school's name in the public eye, and he was able to create some enthusiasm in the Dallas-Fort Worth Metroplex by lining up games in the Cowboys' stadium at Arlington.

These touches helped the school's program, as well as recruiting. The school's moves now in replacing him are worth watching.

McConnell Picked As Player Of Week

It's not the fact Billy McConnell has hit 73 percent of his shots from the field or manage to steal the ball away from his opponents 42 times, that makes him a favorite on Gary Bowe's list.

The thing the LCHS mentor likes about the Eagle guard is "he is a very unselfish player."

So on top of McConnell's individual statistics, he has also handed out 55 assists in the Eagles' 11 games, already this season.

"That's a lot of points to give up," said Bowe. "But that is the kind of player he is."

The 6-1 LCHS standout, who also ranks third on his team in total rebounds, has been named the Avalanche-Journal's city high school basketball player of the week.

"He has really done a fine job for us this year," said Bowe. "He may not lead the team in scoring (McConnell is third in that department), but he really adds a lot."

McConnell has been one of the key reasons the Eagles currently own an 11-0 won-loss record heading into today's start of the Reese AFB tournament, Bowe pointed out.

Also cited from the city's other schools were Wayne Williams of Dunbar, Coronado's Steve Ahlenius, Craig Ehlo of Monterey, Jeff Manley of Lubbock High, John Jones of Estacado and Jimmy Durham of Christ the King.

Ahlenius helped lead the Mustangs to the team title last week at the Amarillo Tournament, collecting 19 points in the finals. "He has really been playing well for us," said Coronado coach Barry Arnwine about Ahlenius.

Despite being held to only four points in Tuesday night's loss to Midland High, Ehlo is currently one of the city's top scorers, hitting at 20- plus points an outing.

Manley led Lubbock High's scoring surge against Borger, canning 15 points in the 78-40 loss to the Bulldogs.

Leading Dunbar's win over Coronado was Williams with 16 points. The 5-8 guard has been DHS' most consistent outside shooter this season, hitting 161 total points mostly from the 15-20 foot range.

Like Williams, Durham also carries much of the scoring load for CTK.

the reasons the Eagles are expected to challenge for the tourney title.

Not only has McConnell been hot from the field, he has also dealt out 55 assists and made 42 steals. But he isn't the only LCHSer averaging in double figures. Three others Eagles, including Tim Perrin (195 point), Shawn Williams (173 points) and Shawn Bowe (126), are too.

"That's one of o.. keys," commented Bowe about his team's abundance of scorers. "You really can't concentrate on one player, everybody is capable of scoring their points."

LCHS isn't the only small school challenging for honors in the division dominated by the big guys. There is also Dimmitt and Roosevelt.

Dimmitt, a finalist in the Class AA state tournament last year, takes on Abilene Cooper, the defending President's Trophy champ, in the night cap at 8:30 p.m.

Others playing the the President's Division are Abilene High and Dunbar. Because of a scheduling problem, Abilene was forced to forfeit its opening-day game with Dunbar, forcing the Eagles into the loser's bracket.

Hoosier Expresses Bitterness

Marijuana Allegedly Used By Suspended Players

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — "Right now I'm a little bitter, but on the other hand I'm sort of happy," said sophomore Don Cox, one of three Indiana University basketball players dismissed by coach Bobby Knight amid reports of marijuana use.

"I haven't been too happy here," the 6-foot-6 Cox said. "This is another stepping stone. I want to continue playing ball. I think the best thing for me to do is leave now."

Cox, sophomore guard Tommy Baker and senior forward Jim Roberson were thrown off the team. Five other players, including the top two scorers, were placed on indefinite probation, although Knight said that will not affect their playing status.

Knight has refused to comment on the reason for the suspensions and probations, announced Tuesday, except to say they pertained to rules violations. The Indiana University administration, backing Knight's action completely, would neither confirm nor deny the shakeup stemmed from marijuana use.

The Louisville Courier-Journal, however, reported Wednesday that one of the disciplined players said one of the reasons involved the use of marijuana by some team members. The newspaper said seven other sources close to the team also confirmed part of the disciplinary action involved marijuana.

"There was an incident of some players getting high in the summer," said one player who asked not to be identified. He said the problem again cropped up when Indiana went to Alaska to compete in the Sea Wolf Classic last month.

The Courier-Journal said it was told by other sources close to the team that the coaching staff was told of the marijuana use by junior guard Butch Carter after the Hoosiers' victory over Bradley last Saturday. Carter reportedly told assistant coach Tom Miller.

Carter later refused to comment.

"No comment. No comment, babe. No way, babe. You can ask all the questions you want and the answer will still be 'No.'"

The Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette reported that it learned fom "a high-ranking university official close to Knight" that Baker, Cox and Roberson were punished more severely than the other five because of their degree of involvment.

The others, Ray Tolbert, Mike Woodson, Eric Kirchner, Phil Isenbarger and Landon Turner, were "involved to a lesser degree and were perhaps victims of circumstance. But he (Knight) felt he should slap their hands," the Journal-Gazette reported.

The newspaper said another source said, "Baker and Cox took marijuana with them on the road trip to Alaska. Roberson was dismissed because he denied use of marijuana when quizzed by Knight. The five on probation admitted to having used marijuana but were not implicated during the Sea Wolf Classic."

The paper further quoted a university source as saying, "I really believe this whole thing was brought to a head by the players themselves. The lead was taken by the players who wanted it stopped. Other players tried to get them to stop and finally turned them in. It was a group of players who reported the offenders to Knight."

ing the football program for Lubbock Christian Collge," Sanders said.

During his days at Tech Sanders was asked if the size of his feet (he punted wearing a size 6 1/2 shoe and did placements with a 6D shoe) hampered him. "I don't know," Sanders quipped, "these are the only two feet I've ever had."

Steve McCleery, who along with John Copeland—the present basketball assistant—will act as grid aides next fall said 45 present LCC students have indicated they will try out in the spring.

"We've also had about 18 calls from thosa not presently in school and 12 of those have said they will enroll in the spring. We also have leads on 26 others who have expressed an interest in playing football," McCleery said. "It's just a slow process getting everyone contacted, but we hope to have that accomplished within a week."

Indications are that spring training drills will be held from 10:30 a.m. until 1 p.m., but that has not been finalized yet.

Hays, who will be the school's athletic director next year, has completed an eight-game schedule for next fall:

Sept. 1—McMurry; 8—at Sul Ross 15—open; 22—Tarleton State 29—at Austin College Oct. 6—at Trinity University; 13—Sul Ross; 20—Panhandle State; 27—at Tarleton State.

Where Have All The Coaches Gone???

Stanley's Contract Purchased By OSU

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Dr. L.L. Boger, Oklahoma State University president, said Wednesday he has reached agreement with former head football coach Jim Stanley to "buy up" the final two years of Stanley's contract.

Boger, who earlier had fired Stanley as football coach but attempted to reassign him to other duties for the remainder of his contract, said Oklahoma State will pay Stanley $36,500 a year for the next two years.

Stanley had threatened legal action to force Oklahoma State to either honor his contract as head football coach or pay his agreed-upon salary for the next two years.

Boger said the agreement was contingent upon approval of the school's board of regents. But Boger, in answer to a question at a news conference, said it is possible Oklahoma State alumni might assist in paying the balance of Stanley's salary.

Boger, president since June 1977, also went into detail for the first time about his reasons for firing Stanley as head football coach. He said he had been distrubed by the prolonged investigation of Oklahoma State by the National Collegiate Athletic Association and had been working to assure that Oklahoma State was operating in compliance with NCAA and Big Eight Conference recruiting rules.

Shortly after becoming Oklahoma State president, Boger said he helped negotiate a reduction of earlier penalties the school had received for recruiting violations.

But he said he was shocked in April of this year when Big Eight Commissioner Charles Neinas told him three specific new allegations of recruiting violations had been leveled against Oklahoma State.

Those allegations, presumably involving an alleged slush fund to make payments to student athletes, were discussed with Stanley, Boger said, but he said Stanley continued to maintain his innocence of any involvement.

Boger said, however, "as the investigation continued and rumors and media reports circulated, it became increasingly apparent to me that the cloud of the current investigation and the fact that the football program at OSU had been under investigation or under penalty . . . for almost five years were seriously impeding coach Stanley's ability to sustain a winning football program."

He said he also was concerned about "the high attrition rate" among assistant coaches and football players and the academic record of many of the football players. He said he also was disturbed by the "won-loss record of the football team in recent years, particularly in the Big Eight Conference.

"For these reasons and the importance of a competitive intercollegiate athletic program at OSU and particularly because of the importance of the revenue generated by a successful football program to all sports, I concluded it was in the best interest of the university" to change football coaches.

Asked if he and other Oklahoma State officials were attempting to soften possible Big Eight or NCAA penalties against Oklahoma State by firing Stanley, Boger said that was certainly not the case.

"I can assure you there were no deals with the Big Eight Conference in that regard," he said.

The Big Eight was expected to announce its decision on its investigation of Oklahoma State at its recent meeting in Kansas City. But Stanley got a temporary restraining order prohibiting the conference from considering the alleged slush fund that might pertain to him unless he had a chance to cross-examine witnesses. A hearing on a permanent injunction is scheduled today in federal court at Kansas City.

Teaff Gives Several Hints About Leaving

WACO (AP) — Baylor head football coach Grant Teaff met with school officials Wednesday then left for a speaking engagement without amplifying his postion in regard to Oklahoma State's search for a new football coach.

Teaff huddled with Baylor Executive Vice President Herb Reynolds and Athletic Director Jack Patterson and had no comment on reports that he is OSU's No. 1 candidate to replace Jiın Stanley, who was fired two weeks ago.

"We had a visit after lunch and I told Grant that for our good he needs to reach a final decision as soon as possible," said Patterson.

"I'm not a good mind reader. But I told Grant to try to put all things in the right spot to make a decision. I told him to make a balance sheet with all the goods and all the minuses. Put down what was best for him and his family and go from there."

Patterson and Teaff are close friends. Patterson was instrumental in bringing Teaff to Baylor from Angelo State University as the nation's youngest head coach seven years ago.

"I've had indigestion all day," said Patterson. "I hope I don't have my Christmas ruined."

Teaff's only public statement on the OSU matter was that he had met officials of the Big Eight school "strictly for the exchange of information."

He also said "I have not applied for the Oklahoma State job, nor have I ever applied for any job in my seven years at Baylor."

Baylor finished 3-8 in a frustrating year for Teaff but the Bears upset two state schools, Texas A&M and Texas.

Asked if Teaff's contract was a problem, Patterson said "In my mind he has a valid contract."

Teaff left for Houston to speak at a Wednesday night banquet at Cypress-Fairbanks High School.

Baylor Sports Information Director Sid Wilson said "There is no statement. We are still standing with yesterday's statement."

Teaff was the College Coach of the Year in 1974 when he led Baylor to its first Southwest Conference title in 50 years.

Colorado Rumored Discussing Chuck Fairbanks For Coach

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — The name of New England Patriots coach Chuck Fairbanks surfaced Wednesday as the University of Colorado continued its search for a new head football coach.

Colorado athletic director Eddie Crowder confirmed a week ago he had contacted Fairbanks to learn if the former Oklahoma coach had any recommendations to make for the job. Since then, however, Fairbanks himself has been mentioned as a candidate.

Although it is unclear whether Fairbanks has actually been offered the job, the Rocky Mountain News quoted undisclosed sources this week as saying that Fairbanks told Crowder he would make a decision on the school's inquiry, probably no later than Wednesday.

Crowder told Dan Creedon of the Boulder Camera that he hoped to "have some answers" by Wednesday night.

Crowder has missed on some deadlines in recent weeks.

Fairbanks was unavailable for comment Wednesday afternoon.

Fairbanks reportedly has been promoted for the job by Denver oilman Jack Vickers, former owner of the Colorado Rockies of the National Hockey League and a supporter of the University of Colorado athletic program. Vickers is a graduate of Oklahoma and an acquaintance of Fairbanks'.

If Fairbanks rejects CU's overtures, Southern Methodist Coach Ron Meyer and Navy Coach George Welsh are believed to be the top remaining candidates.

Persons close to Meyer insist he would be interested in the CU job if it is offered. And, contrary to reports that Meyer is bound by an ironclad contract at SMU, that apparently is not the case. SMU athletic director Russ Potts insisted Tuesday that Meyer does not have a contract which would bind him to the school.

Meyer maintained a low profile on the matter. "I don't want to hedge, but all I can say is that I can't see myself leaving SMU," Meyer told the Rocky Mountain News on Tuesday.

Welsh is an appealing candidate for several reasons. Like Crowder, he is a former collegiate quarterback who gained considerable national acclaim, and his intellect and personality are said to be similar to Crowder's.

Also in the running for the job are former California coach Mike White and Arkansas aide Monte Kiffin, both of whom have been interviewed by Crowder.

Phillips, Oilers Close To Signing

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oiler coach and general manager Bum Phillips said Wednesday he is near signing a contract to coach the Oilers next season despite a refusal by Oiler owner Bud Adams to discuss the matter publicly.

"Bud has typed up a contract, sent it to me, and I've put some things in it," Phillips said amid rumors he won't return next season despite leading the Oilers into the playoffs for the first time in nine years.

"We're still negotiating. But there's no way I'll be coaching anywhere but Houston, Texas. All of us out here want to win and when everybody wants the same thing you get together."

Adams, however, declined to answer any questions concerning Phillips' future with the Oilers, including "Will Phillips be back next season?" and "Do you want Phillips back next season?"

Adams accused the media of publicizing something that was none of its business.

"You guys (media) are making a big mountain out of nothing," Adams said. "We've got a game coming up and we're going into the playoffs and you're stirring all this up."

Phillips' two-year contract expires Jan. 31. Three weeks ago, Phillips said he had not been offered a new contract. Adams said then he was pleased with Phillips' performance but didn't intend to negotiate a new contract until the end of the season.

The question of Phillips' contract arose again when a nationally distributed football newspaper listed Phillips among NFL coaches who would lose their jobs at the end of the season.

Adams said the report was a "ludicrous, illogical statement," but then declined to discuss the matter further.

The Oilers go into Sunday's regular season finale against San Diego in the Astrodome with a 10-5 record and assured of their first playoff berth since 1969.

Houston needs a victory over the Chargers to clinch the home site advantage against the Miami Dolphins in the first round of the American Football Conference playoffs Dec. 24.

An Oiler loss, coupled with a Miami loss in its final game against New England still would bring the playoff game to the Astrodome. But an Oiler loss and Miami victory would send the game to Miami.

Likes Tempe More, Says Holtz

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Part of the American dream is being home for Christmas, but Lou Holtz says — in the best W.C. Fields fashion — that he'd rather be in Tempe.

"After going to church and opening up the gifts, let's face it, Christmas is a very boring day," the glib Arkansas football coach said. "I have to be honest, my family's always lived a thousand miles away...and even when we lived close, they didn't invite us over."

Holtz, whose Razorbacks meet UCLA in the Fiesta Bowl in Tempe, Ariz., on Christmas Day, was in town Wednesday to appear on the "Tonight" show with Johnny Carson. Earlier in the day, he and UCLA coach Terry Donahue appeared at a press conference at the NBC studios.

Holtz, gaining almost as much recognition for his quick quips as his football coaching these days, was in good form.

"My being on the 'Tonight' show is the biggest thing to hit Arkansas in a while," he commented. "But I said something to my children and they weren't real impressed — said they'd be impressed if I were on 'Saturday Night Live.'

"Somebody asked me how I was preparing for the show," Holtz continued. "I told him I'd been practicing staying up late.

"The same fellow asked if I was nervous about being on the show. I told him, 'Nope, but if I were the producer, I'd be really nervous.'"

Holtz, addressing himself to the matter of UCLA's football team, made the Bruins sound somewhat more awesome than the Pittsburgh Steelers.

"Boy, they're fast," he said. "That running back, Theotis Brown, can turn the light off and be in bed before it gets dark.

"They have a great defensive secondary. They had so many inteceptions against Cal, when Cal went back to throw the ball, UCLA automatically went into punt return.

"And I've never seen a defense that had three All-Americans on it. No, make that two, (Kenny) Easley and (Jerry) Robinson. I say two because I can't pronounce Mario..."

Donahue chimed in, "Tuiasosopo."

"Yeah," Holtz said, "Mario."

Donahue corrected again, "Manu Tuiasosopo."

"My boys have seen films of him," Holtz said, "and they're just going to call him 'Sir.'"

Donahue, grinning, said he could understand why Holtz was the one who'll be wearing the live mike during NBC's Fiesta Bowl telecast.

"Oh, I'm not really worried about that," Holtz said. "It didn't work last year and I have every confidence it won't again this year."

Donahue — like most people, quiet and reserved when compared to the constantly joking Holtz — showed a certain amount of show-biz savvy when he said, shaking his head:

"This is the first time I've been in a press conference with you, Lou, and next time, I'm going first."

Free Agent Stanley Desires New Team

DETROIT (AP) — Slick-fielding outfielder Mickey Stanley, given his unconditional release Wednesday after 15 seasons with the Detroit Tigers, hopes to sign on with another club now that he's a free agent.

"I hope to be in someone's uniform next season," said Stanley, 36, adding that the Baltimore Orioles have expressed some interest.

"(Baltimore manager) Earl Weaver sent someone over to talk to me after the last game this year," Stanley said. "I've always hit well against them because I hit well against lefthanders and they've had a lot of lefthanded pitchers."

Stanley, whose departure leaves pitcher John Hiller as the last remaining player from the Tigers' 1968 world champions, said his release was not unexpected.

"But it's a little bit disappointing. I wanted one more year. I thought I had it in the bag. I thought I'd at least go to spring training."

Despite 18 years in the Detroit organization, Stanley, a four-time Gold Glove award winner, said he would not hesitate to sign with another club "if the offer was attractive enough."

Never feared as a hitter, Stanley had been relegated to a late-inning substitute role in the outfield and an occasional start at first base for the past few years.

In opting to test the free agent waters, he turned down an offer to become a minor league coach in the Detroit system in 1979. Stanley has a sales job with a suburban firm.

"It's pretty hard to throw stones at the Tigers," Stanley said. "Jim Campbell (Tiger president and general manager) prepared me ... He's never been less than honest with me."

Stanley's top season at the plate was 1971, .292 in 130 games. His career average is .248, with 1,243 hits, including 117 home runs, in 1,516 games. In 1978, Stanley hit .265 in just 53 games.

The 1968 World Series, in which Detroit stormed from a 3-1 deficit to defeat St. Louis in seven games, was recalled by Stanley as his biggest career thrill.

In that classic, he was the center of much attention because of manager Mayo Smith's decision to switch him from centerfield to shortstop — a spot he had never played — to get Al Kaline's bat in the lineup. Stanley played well and Kaline hit well as Detroit took its only world title since 1945.

Patriots Resign Offensive Tackle

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — The New England Patriots have re-signed an offensive tackle and say an injured linebacker should be ready for the season's finale as the National Football League club prepares for the post-season playoffs.

The Patriots said Wednesday they have re-signed veteran offensive tackle Bob McKay, waiving linebacker Merv Krakau, signed last week, to make room on the roster for McKay.

Head Coach Chuck Fairbanks said it appeared that linebacker Steve Zabel, recovering from a knee injury, would be ready for the Patriots' regular season finish in Miami Monday night.

New England also, Wednesday, gave former New York Jets defensive lineman Billy Newsome a one-day tryout.

Arkansas Coed Files Charges

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — A University of Arkansas coed has filed a complaint alleging that she was sexually assaulted early Tuesday by two persons in the university's athletic dormitory, Kim Smith, Washington County deputy prosecutor, said Wednesday night.

The university confirmed that an investigation into the alleged incident was under way and that two students had been suspended from the school pending a hearing. The university declined to release their names.

"The girl reported to me that she had been sexually assaulted," Smith said. "She gave me names. I assume that they were players."

Smith said he recognized the name of one of the students in the woman's complaint as a member of the Arkansas football team.

Smith said he wouldn't release the names of those involved in the alleged incident until Friday or Monday.

University of Arkansas football coach Lou Holtz was in Los Angeles Wednesday night for an appearance on the Tonight Show and could not be reached for comment.

Trainer Barrera Collects Third Eclipse Award

NEW YORK (AP) — Laz Barrera won his third straight Eclipse Award Wednesday as the top thoroughbred racehorse trainer in North America while Harbor View Farm continued to add to its collection of the prestigious hardware.

In winning his unprecedented third Eclipse Award, Barrera trained Harbor View's Affirmed, the Horse of the Year and 3-year-old champion; Harbor View's It's In the Air, co-winner with Candy Eclair as best 2-year-old filly, and George A. Pope Jr.'s J.O. Tobin, who shared the sprint championship with Dr. Patches.

Barrera, who saddled several other stakes winners, became the first trainer ever to send out winners of $3 million in a year, breaking the mark of $2,976,196 set by Jack Van Berg in 1976.

Harbor View added to its three equine Eclipse Awards, which were announced Tuesday, by being honored as leading owner and breeder

Wolfson bred Affirmed, a chestnut son of Exclusivz Native out of the Crafty Admiral mare Won't Tell You. Affirmed won a single-year record of $901,541 in 1978 and will go into his 4-year-old campaign with earnings of $1,245,018.

Other winners announced Wednesday were Darrel McHargue, jockey, and Ron Franklin, apprentice jockey.

McHargue, a 24-year-old native of Oklahoma City who does most of his riding in California became the second jockey to ride winners of $6 million in a year. The first to hit the $6 million mark was Steve Cauthen, who notched $6,151,750 last year.

McHargue, who booted more than over 350 winners, rode such top horses in 1978 as the 2-year-old colt General Assembly, 2-year-old filly Terlingua, 3-year-old colt Radar Ahead, 3-year-old filly Grenzen and 4-year-old filly Drama Critic.

Franklin, a 20-year-old native of Baltimore competing on the Maryland circuit, rode more than 225 winners and his mounts earned more than $1.4 million. He rode Spectacular Bid in four of the 2-year-old champion colt's six victories. When he won the Laurel Futurity with Spectacular Bid, Franklin became the first apprentice to win that prestigious race since he began in 1921.

Evansville Coach Rebuilds Program

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — "Sure, we have a long way to go," admits University of Evansville basketball coach Dick Walters, "but things are falling into place. I'm happy with the way things have gone."

The Aces, built anew with freshmen and transfer students after the entire team and coach were killed in a plane crash exactly one year ago (Dec. 13), will go for their second victory under Walters on Saturday at Austin Peay.

"One of our goals," he said, "is to help people forget the tragedy. I don't think we can dwell on the past. Failure waits for those who stay with anything made yesterday, good or bad. Today is a new day and we have to make the best of it."

The Aces lost their first five games this season before beating Murray State by one point on Monday.

"We have talent," Walters said. "Indiana State has one of the finest teams in the country and we outplayed them most of the game, all but the last 1½ minutes. The last 1 1/2 minutes is where cohesiveness comes into play. that's where experience counts. Who would have guessed with Larry Bird and company in here we'd take them down to the wire?"

Walters, who compiled a 202-56 junior college record over nine seasons, said "on paper, our first five opponents figured to beat us." But he is confident the Aces will return to the prominence that earned them five NCAA Division II championships before joining the Division I ranks last year.

"People here are proud basketball people. They're knowledgeable people. After what happened to the program, they're hurt a little bit. But I feel an obligation and the players feel an obligation to give them a quality team."

"It's going to take time, I know that. I have to be patient. We all have to be patient and understand what we're up against. We're going to get it done. There's no doubt in my mind we'll get it done. Those who work hard always succeed. There's not a team or coaching staff in the country putting in more time or working harder than ours."

Walters continued, "The key thing is recruiting, and I'm very optimistic about recruiting. I love to recruit, to go into homes and meet people and find out what they're like. A lot of coaches think recruiting is the worst part of the job."

And the kind of player he's looking for is one that combines character with ability. "I won't be associated with a second-class program."

"If a magic man came up and told me he could make me anybody I wanted to be," he summed up, "I'd be Dick Walters at the University of Evansville."

"I can't think of anyone who will have a greater sense of feeling than to build this from the tragedy to what it will be — one of the best Division I programs in the country. I can't think of anyone who will have a greater sense of satisfaction than I will."

Houston, Charger Contest Sold Out

HOUSTON (AP) — The National Football League game between Houston and San Diego in the Astrodome Sunday is a sellout, Oiler ticket manager Rick Nichols said Wednesday, giving the Oilers their seventh sellout in eight home games this season.

Nichols said the game was a sellout at 51,053 and an additional 5,000 standing room only seats were being sold.

The Oilers set a home attendance record of 55,133 Dec. 3 against Pittsburgh.

Houston missed completely selling out its eight-game home schedule by 27 seats. A crowd of 51,024 viewed the Cleveland-Oiler game Nov. 5.

Brazier Interviewed

DENTON (AP) — The North Texas State University Athletic Council discussed the head football coaching job Wednesday with Bill Brashier, who was the defensive coordinator under Hayden Fry.

Fry left the school Saturday to take the head football coaching job at Iowa. Fry also was athletic director.

Brashier has been an assistant for 11 years at North Texas, where he was a football star. Brashier still holds the school career and season records for interceptions.

Brashier was Fry's recommended replacement. The football players submitted a petition to school President Jeeter Nolen asking that Brashier be appointed coach.

Should the athletic council decide on Brashier then it would make a recommendation to Nolen who would have to poll the Board of Regents.

North Texas is expected to name an athletic director separate from the head football coach.

McEnroe Wins

MONTEGO BAY, Jamaica (AP) — John McEnroe upset Ilie Nastase of Romania 6-5, 3-6, 6-1 Wednesday in the first round of a $300,000 World Championship Tennis challenge cup tournament in Jamaica.

McEnroe, 19, playing under a hot Caribbean sun, charged the net effectively to take advantage of Nastase's mistakes.

The tournament continues through Sunday.

Staubach May Play

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas quarterback Roger Staubach, suffering a stubbed toe and a sprained foot, showed up for team meetings Wednesday and said he can play Sunday in a National Football League finale against the New York Jets.

"I'll be capable of playing," said Staubach. "It all depends on what Coach (Tom) Landry wants. I'm sure I'll play. My foot should be fine by the end of the week."

Landry said Tuesday that reserve quarterback Danny White will see action and added, "I won't take a chance on Roger re-injuring the foot."

Staubach, the No. 1 passer in the NFL, injured the foot in Sunday's 31-13 victory over Philadelphia.

Playoff Game Set

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys will play their opening round National Football Conference playoff game Dec. 30 at 3 p.m. in Texas Stadium.

The defending world champions will meet either Atlanta, Minnesota or Green Bay in the first round game.

The Cowboys close their 1978 regular season schedule Sunday in New York against the Jets.

Miami Defense Emerges Strong

MIAMI (AP) — Amid the pratfalls of a maturing young defense, 8-year Miami Dolphins veterans Vern Den Herder and Tim Foley have had perhaps their best seasons.

The inexperienced defense was the major culprit in the Dolphins' erratic play most of this year, and the criticism levelled at the unit detracted from Den Herder's steady line play and Foley's knack for picking off or causing turnovers.

But coach Don Shula knows their importance in holding the emerging defense together.

"Den Herder has been the real constant. He had knee surgery last year, and we were a little apprehensive going into camp about what kind of shape he'd be in.

"But he took his time and in fact, wanted to get in there more at the beginning than we wanted him to. He hasn't missed a down for us," Shula said.

"Foley has had a lot of impact since we switched him to safety (from cornerback last year). He, too, has been in there every down for us.

"He's very competitive and has good leadership abilities. That was important for the defense," Shula said.

Foley, who has five interceptions and a fumble recovery, said, "It's been a strange kind of year, different than any we've had before.

"We had so many young players, who weren't used to playing together. The big thing the veterans can contribute is stability," Foley said.

"Since I've been around so long, my feelings don't fluctuate that much. I could always see that the potential was there.

"There was a lot of frustration. It was a year when we reached a focal point, a point where we were on the way downhill (after consecutive losses to Houston and the Jets).

"But we decided we weren't folding, we weren't going to quit. And seeing somebody like (third-year linebacker) Larry Gordon come along is exciting.

"I feel like a proud father. I think Vern feels the same way," Foley said.

Den Herder, close to bettering his career highs of 65 tackles and 11 quarterback sacks, felt his pride aching under the criticism this season. He admitted he was sometimes very frustrated with his younger teammates.

"We've had a tendency to let up and not be consistent. It took some of the younger players awhile to learn what's it all about," said Den Herder, who also scored his first career touchdown this season on a fake field goal pass reception.

"I've tried to help the younger players all I could. I knew the potential was there, but I don't know why it turned around so fast.

"I really can't explain what happened," he said. "I'm just very happy that it did."

Steelers, Cowboys Host First Round

NEW YORK (AP) — Pittsburgh and Dallas will be the hosts on Saturday and New England and Los Angeles will play at home Sunday when the National Football League's divisional playoffs are held Dec. 30-31.

The winners of the Dec. 24 opening round involving the wild-card teams of the American and National conferences advance to the next weekend, in which the six divisional winners will make their first playoff appearances. All AFC games will be televised by NBC with NFC games on CBS.

The Dec. 24 AFC wild-card game will be Miami vs. Houston at 4 p.m. EST (site to be determined). The NFC game will involve two of the following teams still in contention — Atlanta, Green Bay, Minnesota, Philadelphia or Washington. It will be at 12:30 p.m. EST unless Green Bay is the host, in which case it will start at 1 p.m.

Boston College Takes 'Loss' In Season Of Frustrations

NEWTON, Mass. (AP) — The competition was rugged, but after three months of a nip-and-tuck rivalry with Big Ten weakling Northwestern, the loser is Boston College.

The Eagles, 0-11, finished with the worst major colleges football record in the country this season and are hungering for a prompt return to respectability in 1979.

After an opening 0-0 tie with Illinois, Northwestern lost 10 games to emerge near, but not at, the bottom of the heap with a 0-10-1 record. Texas-El Paso was 1-11, Wake Forest 1-10.

Boston College needed a final 28-24 loss to Temple in Tokyo last weekend to complete the least blemished season—after a fashion—in the school's history.

"Boston College has a proud football tradition," says Athletic Director William Flynn. "The players and the coach think we can have a good football team next year."

The players and coach at the Jesuit school are separate stories. Flynn fired first-year mentor Ed Chlebek Tuesday at 3 p.m., then rehired him later in the day after Chlebek told his squad and the athletes made a plea to Flynn for the coach's job. Chlebek has two years left on a three-year contract.

"When you're 0-11 you have to be concerned about future (game) attendance and recruiting," says Flynn. "When I met with the coach, I didn't know he had a previously scheduled meeting with the players later. He told them and their representatives talked to me. There were no threats by anyone."

Chlebek turned around a losing program at Eastern Michigan and was hailed as an imaginative coach when he replaced Joe Yukica, who quit early this year.

Yukica promptly led underdog Dartmouth College to the Ivy League title —after piling up the best long-term record in history at Boston College.

Chlebek, who had pledged to play "Notre Dame-type" football, installed a "Veer" offense and watched as his quarterbacks and runners piled up a weekly quota of fumbles.

Flynn figures the Eagles could—and should—have won at least five games, but lost in the late stages to Army, Tulane, Villanova, Temple and to arch-rival Holy Cross The Eagles also were smeared by Air Force, Texas A&M, Navy, Pitt, Syracuse and even shut out by Massachusetts of the Division I-AA Yankee Conference.

Boston College was outscored 294-153 overall.

Chlebek spent much of Wednesday closeted with his aides. On Tuesday he said: "I've done a good job here and I thought everybody understood that. But I'm no miracle worker. Changes in programs take time...I never expected to get the word I was through. But it wasn't going to be the end of the world for me."

It will, however, be the end of his job if Boston College doesn't get off to a good start next year. The Eagles have now lost 12 in a row, dating back to an upset defeat by Holy Cross in the 1977 finale.

Martin Says Reggie Upset NY Pitchers

NEW YORK (AP) — Billy Martin said Wednesday that his split with slugger Reggie Jackson last season developed after New York Yankee pitchers refused to pitch if Martin used Jackson in right field.

Martin's relations with Jackson were strained throughout 1977 and broke down this year when the manager relegated the slugger to designated hitter status.

"One thing I don't think Reggie really understands," Martin said. "I don't like pitchers to come in my office every day and say 'I'm not going to pitch if he plays right field.' He never hears that side. He just worries about his side. But there are a lot of pitchers on the club who don't want to pitch with Reggie playing."

Asked which pitchers had complained about Jackson's fielding, Martin said "the whole staff. Of course, he won't believe that."

Martin said he considered Jackson a poor fielder and understood the feelings of the pitchers.

"It isn't because Reggie is a bad outfielder," he said. "It's just that he has trouble judging the ball and picking it up. And there's a lot of pitchers who feel they'd have won a game if another outfielder was out there. They just don't want to pitch if he's out there."

Martin, appearing at the opening of his newest venture, a Manhattan western wear store, said he sees no problem to sitting out the 1979 baseball season and then returning as manager of the Yankees in 1980. Martin resigned last July after an angry outburst at Jackson and Yankee owner George Steinbrenner. Five days later, the club announced that he would return to pilot the team in 1980.

"I don't see any problems to coming back," he said. "I've managed teams where a player or two didn't like me. I think every manager understands that. That doesn't mean I'm going to take it out on him. If he can do the job, play for the Yankees and make us a winner, that's all I care about."

Martin said Jackson's presence on the club would not interfere with the manager's return in 1980.

"Reggie doesn't have to go anywhere," he said. "He can stay right here and do his thing. I hope he has great years all the time. I have no malice in my heart toward Reggie and I never will. I understand Reggie like he is and I'll treat him exactly like he is. I won't change my rules for him. The rules will be the same for all 25. He'll have to adjust to them. I went out of my way last year to try to help Reggie in every way and I found out that's not the way either. If he just does his job, we'll never have a problem."

Fem Cagers Make Way To California

BERKELEY, Calif. (Special) — The Texas Tech women's basketball team will make its first appearance ever on the West Coast when it travels to the California Women's Basketball Invitational here this weekend.

Tech, 4-8, and seeded No. 2 in the tourney behind Long Beach State, will also see teams from the University of Pacific, San Diego State, the University of Washington and hostess school California.

Tech's two top scorers, Donette Marble (14.6) and Rosemary Scott (12.7), suffered sprained ankles recently, and it is doubtful that either will see much action.

Jill Owens of Littlefield will play the post position. The three-year letterperson came out for the squad five games ago.

The Raiders must wait until Friday night to play their first game against the winner of the California-San Diego State game. The tournament begins today.

Navy, Tar Heels Compete In 1982

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Navy and South Carolina will meet in a football game in 1982 for the first time in 27 years.

The two schools announced Wednesday that they have scheduled a four year football series extending through 1985.

The scheduling is part of a shift involving Georgia Tech and Wake Forest.

Ref's Ruling Aided Bengals

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Bengals linebacker Jim LeClair admits that an official's call played a part in his team's 20-19 victory over Los Angeles.

The official called Scott Perry for roughing field goal kicker Frank Correll in the third period of Monday night's nationally televised game. The controversial call came after the Bengals had stopped the Rams three times inside the four-yard-line.

"The penalty fired us up. We got robbed," LeClair said. "We stopped them and all of a sudden, the ref gives them the ball back."

The Bengals stopped the Rams again on their next series of downs, and the Rams were forced to settle for a 17-yard field goal by Correll.

It was LeClair, assisted by Reggie Williams, who stopped Rams running back Cullen Bryant for no gain on the six-inch line

"There's a certain amount of luck involved," LeClair said of stopping the 240-pound Bryant on the six-inch line. "With a half a foot to go, I just had to anticipate.

"That close (to the goal line) they are very limited in where they can go. He can go one way or the other. The fullback missed me. I don't think he saw me in time. I got up there pretty quick."

Glenn Cameron was in on the goal line stand and admits that "everybody did a super job ... and it was luck, too."

The Rams led after the field goal, 19-14, but Chris Bahr came back with field goals of his own from 24 and 42 yards to give the Bengals their third victory of the National Football League season against 12 defeats.

Cameron was asked about the performance of the Rams, who easily made the playoffs, but were unconvincing against the Bengals Monday night.

"They don't get the ball across the goal line," Cameron concluded. "(If this continues), then they're going to have troubles in the playoffs.

"I guess a lot of times offenses get into slumps, then they get mental blocks and can't punch it in."

QUARTERBACK SACK–Although Bengal quarterback Ken Anderson suffers a loss on this play, he led the Bengals to a 20-19 win over Los Angeles on Monday night. The win was one of few bright spots in Cincinnati's dismal season. (AP Laserphoto)

Witnesses Testify In Ron Lyle Trial

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) — In an apparent effort to wrap up the defense of heavyweight boxer Ron Lyle by the end of the week, defense attorney Walter Gerash called a long string of witnesses to the stand Wednesday in Golden District Court.

Lyle has been charged with second-degree murder in the shooting last New Year's Eve of Vernon "Rip" Clark, a former member of Lyle's road crew.

A charge of first-degree murder was dismissed on Tuesday by District Judge Joseph P. Lewis, who ruled that the prosecution had failed to establish premeditation or "reckless regard for human life."

Gerash, who has argued that Lyle shot Clark in self-defense after he was threatened during an argument, called five witnesses Wednesday morning and was expected to call 10 more witnesses Wednesday afternoon and today.

The defense contends that Clark was angry and excited when he went to Lyle's house last New Year's Eve in hopes of collecting money he felt Lyle owed him.

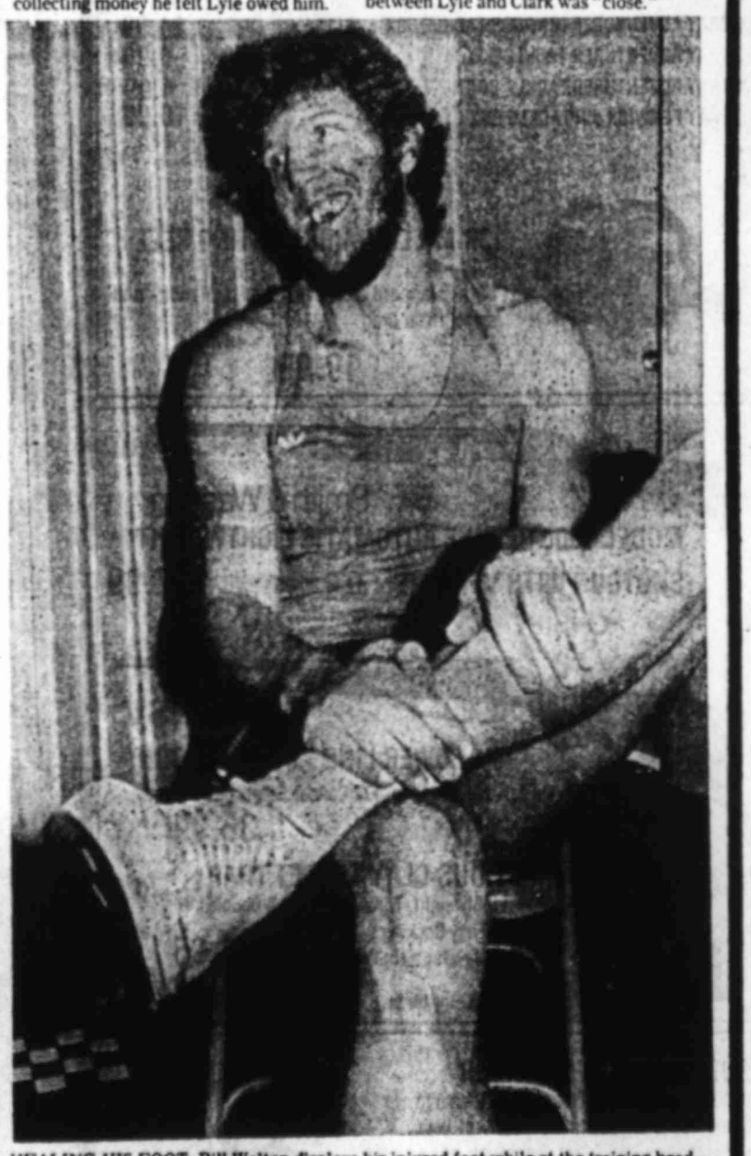
Phil Rose, who was Lyle's trainer during the summer of 1976, testified Wednesday that he knew Clark and, under questioning by Gerash, he recalled several incidents in which he said Clark became violently enraged over minor things.

Rose testified that he ultimately left the Lyle camp because he couldn't get along with Clark.

According to Rose, he and Clark met accidentally in a park in Denver October 1977, after Rose had resigned his job as Lyle's trainer.

Rose told Gerash that Clark said Lyle owed him some money and then asked Rose if he had "a piece," meaning a gun. Rose testified that he asked Clark why he wanted a gun and said Clark replied that "I'm going to get my money one way or the other."

Under cross-examination, Rose admitted that although he had often seen Clark become angry, he had never seen him strike anyone and that the relationship between Lyle and Clark was "close."



HEALING HIS FOOT–Bill Walton displays his injured foot while at the training headquarters of the Los Angeles Rams, where he is hoping to repair the injury. Walton plans to return to the NBA on Feb. 1 with either Golden State of San Diego. (AP Laserphoto)

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — It took 24 hours for the New England Patriots to sell all available tickets for their National Football League playoff game Dec. 30 or 31.

The Patriots clinched the AFC East title Sunday with a 26-24 victory over Buffalo and will play either Denver or Houston the last weekend of the year.

Day and starting time of the game are up to the NFL, but all 61,297 tickets for the first playoff game ever at Schaefer Stadium have been sold. About 24,000 tickets were available during a 24-hour period beginning Tuesday morning. The balance already had been reserved by season ticket holders.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat and soybean prices fell today on the Chicago Board of Trade and corn prices were mixed.

Analysts said rumors of a possible increase in Chicago wheat supplies triggered selling by commission houses. Wheat trading was uneventful until late in the trading session, when unconfirmed reports that an exporter was shipping a large amount of wheat to Chicago by rail started a wave of selling. Automatic commission house sell-order points were hit as prices dropped to finish 2 3/4 to 7 1/4 cents a bushel lower.

A reported compromise in Brussels between the United States and Common Market nations including a Common Market suspension of wheat sales to Central and South American nations had little effect on the market, although the U.S. has opposed the Common Market's subsidized wheat sales to Brazil, a tradition importer of U.S. grain.

Stiff international competition for U.S. wheat has weighed on wheat prices recently.

Soybean futures were higher for most of the session on reports of higher cash prices and technical factors leading to buying to offset short positions. Prices fell in the closing minutes of the session, partly in sympathy with wheat futures.

At the close, soybeans were 1 1/4 to 3 1/4 cents lower, with January contracts quoted at $6.79 1/4; wheat was 2 3/4 to 7 1/4 cents lower, December $3.52 1/2; corn was 1/2 cent higher to 3/4 cent lower, December $2.19; and oats were unchanged to 1 cent lower, December $1.30.

Cotton Futures

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures No. 2 closed $1.00 to $3.50 a bale higher Wednesday.

Some demand infiuenced by recent sharp declines helped prices to recover, brokers said.

The average price for strict low middling 11-16 inch spot cotton declined 22 points to 63.72 cents a pound Tuesday for the ten leading markets, according to the New York Cotton Exchange.

1978 Corn, Soybean Crops Exceed Record

By RODERICK TURNBULL
Kansas City Board of Trade

KANSAS CITY—The year 1978 has seen the greatest corn and soybean crops in history for the United States so it will go down as a big crop year.

But, when all crop production is put together, the total on 1978 isn't quite as large as for 1977.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has what it calls an "All Crops" index with the figures for 1967 currently setting "100" on the index.

The All Crop production index include all the feed grains, hay and forage, food grains, sugar crops, cotton, tobacco, the oil crops, hay pasture and cover crop seeds and several miscellaneous crops not included in the groups already mentioned.

It is entirely possible that most people would have been under the impression that 1978 was the best year ever because of the huge corn and soybean yields. Actually, the feed grains, hay and forage and oil crops did set new records, but among those which lagged were food grains, sugar crops, cotton, and tobacco.

The current index figure for 1978 is calculated on the last crop report of the year, based on conditions as of Nov. 1. The final crop report which will become the record book for 1978 will not be issued until in mid-January. Not many changes are likely although some observers suggest the possibility that the corn estimate, now placed at 6.89 billion bushels could be raised to an even 7 billion.

The 1978 wheat crop was smaller than that of 1977 partly because of a smaller seeded acreage in compliance with the government's set-aside program.

The All Crop index includes crops only, not livestock. The USDA computes livestock production separately with its own index. The possibility exists that when the livestock index is computed it may be at a figure just a little larger than in 1977 because of increased poultry production. If that should be the case, then 1978 farm output in total might equal that of 1977.

While crop production does not increase every year in the United States, the overall trend is upward. In other words, a chart on production definitely would be rising most of the time. It is easy to recall that once upon a time corn yields averaged 30 bushels an acre nationally, then 50, later 80, and this year they have passed the 100-bushel mark.

But, the All Crop index indicates production an all crops also has increased dramatically over the years.

For instance, back in 1910 the index (still using 1967 production as 100) stood at 54 on all crops, or just a little more than a third of the current level.

In 1934, one of the worst drought years in history, the index on crop production dropped to only 45. It was up to 67 in 1940, roughly half what it is today.

The increase was rather consistent, but gradual, from 1940 to 1967. The last 10 years have seen increases in seven of those years.

It is interesting that the production of livestock or from livestock, which includes meat animals, dairy products, poultry and eggs, has just about kept pace with crops.

Back in 1910, the index on livestock production (1967 as 100) was at 42. By 1940, it has risen to 60 and reached a peak of 107 in 1972. After dropping back for a few years, it rose to 106 in 1977 and could be close to that figure or even at 107 again when the final figures are in for 1978. Thus percentagwise, the increases in production since 1910 on both crops and livestock have not been far apart.

Obviously apparent, however, is the fact that the increases in production have come principally from greater output to the acre rather than increased acreages in crops.

Back in 1910, crops were harvested from 325 million acres. In 1977, the figure was only 343 million. The peak year was 1932 when the acreage harvested was put at 371 million. In contrast, much lower acreages were harvested in some of the years of the 1950's and the 1960's when government acreage controls were in effect. The low mark was 1969 when only 290 million acres were counted in the harvests.

The above figures were on harvested acreages. The figures on all acres used in crops, which includes fallow acres and those on which crops failed, was 330 million acres in 1910, reached a peak of 387 million in 1949 and stood at 377 million in 1977.

Cattle Futures Close With December Tops

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 115 points higher to 45 lower on 23,370 cars Wednesday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. Nearby December was up the most after gaining 137 with distant February at the day's low.

Early buying lifted all contracts except the two nearbys to new season's highs and the highest in almost one year. Demand was sparked by the prospect of a constructive cattle on feed report and firmness in cash cattle and beef.

There were 1,179 deliveries. Wholesale beef was unchanged at 84 cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash cattle were steady to up $1 with the best top $56.75 per hundredweight. Omaha's top was $56.25.

Slaughter was 141,000 head. The major markets are expecting today 13,300 head.

Feeder cattle futures closed 15 to 105 higher led by September on 2,564 contracts. The bulge ran to 115 early after November dipped 15.

All contracts except the nearby were carried to new highs for the season on indications of a constructive cattle on feed report with placements expected lower.

Cash feeder cattle were off $4 to up $2 with the best top $100.25 per hundredweight at Greeley. The major terminals are expecting 8,900 head.

Hog futures closed 22 to 75 higher led by December which gained 90 for a time. Volume was 6,734 cars. Prices were higher from the start.

Short covering and other buying was touched off by light hog runs and higher prices along with light kill. Packers were reducing slaughter due to poor cut-out recently.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to up 5 cents at 85 to 101 1/2 cents a pound, f.o.b. river, which is the lowest since September. Cash hogs were steady to up $1.75 with the best top $51 per hundredweight. Kill was 252,000 head. Receipts at the major markets are expected to be 29,000 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 77 higher to 12 lower on 7,988 contracts. May was up the most after gaining 157 with February off the most after March lost 40. Nearby contracts fell to the lowest since September, off nine cents.

Many traders called the upturn a rally in a bear market and mostly based on strength in cattle futures.

Wholesale bacon was unchanged to up 3 cents at 55 to 58 cents a pound, f.o.b. river, which is the lowest since August.

Drop Expected For Output Of Red Meat

WASHINGTON (Reuters) –Total U. S. red meat production next year is now expected to be 1 to 2 percent below this year's level, the U. S. Agriculture Department said.

The USDA said beef supplies are expected to be 4 to 6 percent below this year's level, offset by a similar increase in pork supplies. Veal supplies will be about half this year's level and the quantity of lamb and mutton is expected to be about the same.

However, the expected decline in total red meat output will be offset by a 10 percent increase in poultry production, the USDA said.

The mix in beef production will continue to shift to more fed and less nonfed or lean beef, the USDA said.

The cow inventory on Jan. 1, 1979 is expected to total about 47.5 million head and the total cattle and calf inventory about 111 million head, the USDA said.

Higher feeder cattle prices will cause cow-calf producers to send substantially fewer cows to slaughter in 1979.

The reduced non-fed cattle slaughter will more than offset a larger fed-cattle slaughter, and first-half 1979 production may be down to 3 to 4 percent –with larger declnes in prospect for the last six months of next year.

Larger supplies of fed-cattle will temper price increases early next year and choice steers are expected to average near $60 per hundredweight for the whole year, the USDA said.

Pork production is expected to increase only moderately during the first part of next year, with larger year-to-year increases anticipated for the last six months of 1979.

Even with the larger pork supplies, slaughter hog prices still are expected to be near the $50 per hundredweight level during the first half of next year because of the reduced beef supplies, the USDA said.

The USDA said retail beef prices may average 20 percent above the year-earlier average level in the first quarter of next year, leveling off to an increase of about half that size and, for the year, average 10 to 14 percent above this year's level.

WELFARE RUN WELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Welfare programs are run as well or better than other public programs, despite their heavily publicized error rates, Michigan's director of social services asserted Wednesday. "It's the only public program where we have found a way to measure the waste," John T. Dempsey told a welfare seminar at the Department of Health, Education and Welfare's conference on fraud and waste in government programs.

Report Views Federal Grain Standards

WASHINGTON (AP) — Existing federal standards that are used to help set prices of wheat and other grains for American consumers and overseas buyers are outdated and can be used to disguise contaminated shipments, a government report said.

The report was sent to the House and Senate agriculture committees by the Federal Grain Inspection Service, an agency of the Agriculture Department.

Changes need to be made, the agency said, but those will require time and study to determine rules that are acceptable to farmers, the grain trade and the ultimate users of the commodities.

Also, it said that the impact of changes on prices, exports and other factors must be weighed carefully in modifying existing regulations.

A number of "major problem areas" in the current federal grain standards were identified in the report.

The present standards "are not constructed so that all potentially adverse conditions are routinely identified" and made known to those who use federal inspection services.

For example, moldy kernels of grain are currently included in a category called "total damaged kernels" and are not separately identified.

Infestation by insects is another example. This is allowed a "tolerance" in grain before it is required to be reported.

"Infested grain could be blended with other grain, causing contamination of the entire mix without the handler being aware of the situation," the report said.

Another problem involves the numerical grade assigned grain and the practice of different prices existing for grain of the same grade.

"This occurs because grain markets use discount and premium (price) scales for the various inspection factors, and these vary by individual factors," the report said.

Under existing standards, it is possible to assign a high grade rating to a sample of grain that has poor or undesirable qualities for the use that will be made of it.

"For example, a lot (shipment) of wheat could grade U.S. No. 1, yet produce flours having long dough mixing times, low water absorption, and produce flour having small loaf volume and poor color and crumb texture," it said. "Such a situation is not desirable."

The study was ordered by Congress in the U.S. Grain Standards Act of 1976 which was aimed at reforming the federal inspection services after years of complaints by foreign buyers and others about the quality of American grain.

Investigations also led to scores of indictments and penalties for grain inspectors, graders and industry officials found guilty of shortweighting, fraud, bribery and other infractions of federal law.

The report, however, dealt only with the federal standards as they apply to grain and how they need to be changed.

Assisting Cline on the technical committee will be Samuel B. Hollis of Memphis. Chairing the public relations and promotion committee will be Clifton Meador, Dumas, Ark., and vice chairman R. E. Coleman, Greenville, S. C.

All program committees will meet together on Jan. 26 in San Diego in preparation for the council's annual meeting. In separate sessions the committees will develop recommendations for consideration by council delegates during the annual meeting Jan. 29-30.

Kevin, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Johnston, took the champion of breed, reserve champion of breed and first place hen honors, as well as first and second place cockrell and first and second place pullet awards.

Show birds from California, New York and Canada were entered in the show which was held from the first time in Texas. The competition was hosted by the Alamo Bantam Club.

Norris Sellers of Crosbyton, president of the South Plains Bantam Association, also attended the meet.

Electronics Find Receptive Christmas Market

By CHRIS ROBERT
Associated Press Writer

Santa's sack in 1978 is filled with electronic gifts, ranging from a robot called "Sir Galaxy" to home computers, powered space-age games, food processors and miniature calculators.

This year, America will unwrap it, then turn it on.

"Electronic items have really come into their own, particularly the electronic games for both adults and children," says Reeves Wetherill, a spokesman for John Wanamaker's department stores in Philadelphia. "The electrical time-saving things, like the processors and calculators, are especially big."

In some stores, the electronic games already are sold out. F.A.O. Schwarz in New York reports it can't keep a Mattel mini-computer game called "Simon" in stock, and a spokesman for Kiddie City in Philadelphia says, "We're getting electronic toys on a hand-to-mouth basis and we're not able to satisfy our customers."

In Chicago, Marshall Fields has hired eight women to demonstrate food processors in its downtown store.

"They're really selling well," said Carol Lasa, a publicist for the firm which has 37 retail outlets in the Midwest and on the West Coast. "And our electronic games are quite popular. The Bally TV game, which sells for $299.95, is one of our top items."

The home computers, which cost about $600 and can pay bills and do homework, are selling faster as Christmas approaches, according to a salesman for Radio Shack.

A lot of money is changing hands. The food processors, for instance, cost between $80 and $200, and figure on paying about $40 for one of the miniature calculators. You can take "Sir Galaxy" home for about $100.

One non-electric toy that appears to be making a comeback is the doll house. "It's a pleasant toy that has longevity," says Marvin Katz of Kiddie City. "I think people are looking for things with more of an extended play value."

Kiddie City's doll houses range from $12 to $35. At Schwarz, where a saleswoman reports "dollhouses are really doing well," the price range is $200 to $2,000 — and many are unfurnished. You pay extra for the wallpaper, tables and chairs and pewter napkins holders and bird cages.

As always, offbeat items pop up this time of the year.

In 1978 there's a silver-tipped jogging stick with "Run For Your Life" stamped on the end.

And misty green operating room smocks and pants.

"A lot of hospitals are complaining because people are stealing them," said Fred Bentelspacher, a spokesman for Hess' department store in Allentown, Pa. "We went right to one of the manufacturers and bought a hundred dozen and they're flying out of here.

"Girls are wearing them as pajamas or as tops with jeans.

"It's not a Pet Rock, but it's strange."

Yet despite all the electronic gadgets and fads, department store managers report brisk sales of old standbys like neckties, handkerchiefs — a phenomena they expect to continue as long as there are aunts and uncles with necks and noses.

Ford Cites Diminishing Presidential Influence

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Gerald R. Ford complained Wednesday that the power of the presidency is declining in both foreign and domestic affairs, largely because of unreasonable restrictions passed by Congress.

In recent years, Ford said, "Congress has gone too far in many areas in trying to assume powers that belong to the president and the executive branch."

The result "has been a series of ad hoc arbitrary restrictions on the exercise of legitimate executive powers and, in the process, a serious weakening of the presidency itself," Ford continued.

He addressed legal and political scholars attending a conference sponsored by the American Enterprise Institute for Public Policy Research.

Ford specifically complained that the War Powers Act, restricting a president's authority to send U.S. troops abroad and passed in response to the Vietnam war, is unworkable.

He said he tried to consult members of Congress before launching the evacuation of American citizens from Lebanon in June 1976, but found it difficult or impossible to find several key legislators.

"While the War Powers Act did not apply specifically, I thought it would be best to act in the spirit of the act and so I tried to consult with the appropriate members of Congress," he related.

"One member, we found, had an unlisted (home telephone) number and his press secretary refused to divulge it. Another couldn't be found and his aide told us not to worry about it," Ford said.

"Still a third had disappeared completely and the White House operators finally had local police leave a note on the congressman's beach house door, 'Please call the White House.'"

Ford said Congress was in session at the time but had adjourned for the day.

He claimed that experience shows that Congress "is just not prepared for crisis management of foreign policy."

Harvard Seeks Funds For Mid-Income Aid

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Harvard College says it plans a $250 million fund-raising drive — the largest in its history — so it can give more scholarships to attract middle-income students.

Noting that it now costs $7,500 a year to attend Harvard, Dean Henry Rosovsky said: "The standards for financial aid set by the federal government and the Ivy League don't recognize the needs of students from families with $25,000 to $50,000 earning power. We hope to raise the standards. It's in our interest to push up the limits."

Stock Prices Fade Again

NEW YORK (AP) — New uncertainty about prospects for a peace treaty between Egypt and Israel helped push stock prices into a broad decline Wednesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials gave up 5.11 to 809.86, coming off a 2.68-point drop Tuesday.

Losers outnumbered gainers by more than a 2-1 spread in the daily count on the New York Stock Exchange.

Much of the decline came late in the session following word of new snags in the Middle East peace talks.

Israel's state radio said proposals by President Anwar Sadat of Egypt which the U.S. secretary of state, Cyrus Vance, had brought to Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin were unacceptable.

And Vance shortened the schedule of his mission to the Middle East this week.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market closed at 118.13, off .37.

New York (AP) —Wednsday's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.

Housecleaner Machinist Heads All-Male Firm

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Radford Garbett, a machinist by trade, hates housework. But in someone else's home he will do just about anything except pick up dirty socks and recap the toothpaste.

So it's little wonder he gets frequent calls from the women of Rhode Island.

And his wife, Judith, doesn't mind at all. In fact she encourages it.

It's the money. When Garbett found he could make about $10 an hour cleaning houses, he quit his job as a machinist about 18 months ago and started running vacuum cleaners.

Today he has his own business in Cranston, called "Mr. Housemaid," and six employees, all males, who clean about 45 houses from top to bottom each week with industrial cleaners and buffers.

Garbett, 38, won't touch your dirty socks or toothpaste tubes and he won't do the dishes.

But he will wash walls, steam clean rugs and upholstery and get rid of the ring around the tub.

"I enjoy it," he said. "My reason for doing it is that I get paid."

But Garbett refuses to clean his own house. That's a job for his son, 16, and his two daughters, 13 and 11.

"When I try to do my house, I'li do exactly what the housewife does," he said."I'll clean the bathroom, have a beer, and watch the ball game.

"The first thing you know the day is gone."

Garbett claims his women customers sometimes tell him men make better housekeepers than women.

"We can move heavy furniture away from the walls, get in back of appliances and under the beds," he said. "And a lot of women don't want another woman in the house doing the work."

Besides, he said, a female housekeeper often is a lot of trouble.

"A lot of times a woman will have to get her, supply the cleaning materials, give her lunch and then drive her home." Garbett said. "We come in, bring everything we need with us, they forget us and then we're gone."
