Drainage tug-of-war again draws in cities

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A drainage channel which carries Odessa's treated waste water out of that city's environs and toward Midland could unite the Midland City Council and Midland County commissioners.

But it may further widen the gap between Midland and Odessa.

"It certainly will have an effect on the relationship between the two communities," Odessa City Manager Chester Nolan said Wednesday. His comment came after the Midland governing bodies voted to block Odessa getting renewed permits to drain its treated effluent into Monahans Draw. They held a joint meeting in Midland City Hall.

"I'm sorry to see Midland has taken this particular tack," he said. Nolan termed the Midland City Council's decision to join Midland County's six-year tug-of-war with Odessa as "very disappointing."

With yes votes by Mayor G. Thane Akins and Councilmen Tom Sloan, Steve Davidson and Gordon Marcum II, Midland City Council decided to intervene in Odessa's unscheduled hearing on applications before the Texas Water Commission (TWC). Odessa is asking to increase its waste-water outflow from two sewage treatment plants into Monahans Draws from 18.06 million to 22.5 million gallons per day.

Midland County commissioners' continuing argument is that Odessa's discharging into the draw poses threats to health and safety of Midland county residents by polluting underground water along the draw and providing breeding grounds for mosquitoes.

THE DRAW meanders easterly out of Odessa into Midland County, flows south of Midland but within the city's extra-territorial jurisdiction (ETJ), and links with Midland and Mustang Draws near Greenwood east of Midland.

Those series of channels ultimately lead to the Colorado River, which feeds E.V. Spence Reservoir. That lake supplies some of the municipal waters used by Midland, Odessa, Big Spring, Stanton and other cities belonging to the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

Midland lawyer Ted Kerr, who is the county commissioners' counsel on Monahans Draw, noted the commissioners' court "has become very concerned" over Odessa's intent to increase its discharge of twice-treated effluent.

"The ground has become so saturated that each passing day it (waste water flow) extends farther down Monahans Draw than it did the day before."

Kerr referred to the free ammonia and "high nitrate" levels in water wells along the draw. Concentration of more than 45 milligrams per liter of nitrates "can cause some (health) problems...particularly in small children."

Once exposed to oxygen, free ammonia converts to nitrates, he said.

"THE MOUND (of water from the draw) goes out farther and farther and will continue to be an expanding problem," Kerr said.

Before 1977, when Odessa was given permission by the old Texas Water Quality Board to increase its waste-water flow into Monahans Draw, the draw was dry except from an occasional rain or snow storm, Kerr said.

Prayer and supplication

Today is National Day of Prayer as proclaimed by President Reagan.

Shultz awaits Israel's decision on withdrawal

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli negotiators today examined a draft of a Lebanon troop-withdrawal accord as Secretary of State George P. Shultz awaited the Cabinet's verdict on the documents he brought from Beirut.

Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Defense Minister Moshe Arens joined top aides in the Foreign Ministry for a review of the proposal, and ministry sources said they would call Shultz in if necessary.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin's Cabinet is to meet Friday to decide whether to endorse the draft. Shamir said the Cabinet probably would be asked to take a yes-or-no vote, so there would be no opportunity for last-minute revisions.

U.S. officials said Shultz might not remain in Jerusalem for the Cabinet meeting, but instead had tentative plans to visit Jordan's King Hussein on Friday, travel to Syria on Saturday to encourage President Hasez Assad to withdraw Syrian troops from Lebanon, and then go to Saudi Arabia to confer with King Fahd.

In Jordan and Saudi Arabia, Shultz is expected to seek support for President Reagan's faltering Middle East peace plan. The administration hopes Jordan will join the peace process once there is an agreement for Israeli troops to leave Lebanon.

Begin summoned four ministers, including Ariel Sharon, home from overseas. Sharon, who as defense minister directed Israel's war in Lebanon, has criticized the direction of U.S.-mediated negotiations since he was demoted to minister without portfolio.

Female drill sergeant a cut above corp

FORT DIX, N.J. (AP) — Although new soldiers sometimes tower over Kathey Atchley, the 5-foot-3 drill sergeant — named one of the best in the nation — says she has little trouble commanding her mostly male recruits.

She just does everything better than they do.

"Most men are motivated when they see me doing the exact same things they have to do. There is nothing more intimidating than having a female drill sergeant out there running circles around you," said the seven-year Army veteran.

"We've had female drill sergeants here since 1978, and it's been a long hard road to prove ourselves," said Ms. Atchley, a staff sergeant who finished third in last week's national competition at Fort Monroe in Virginia and was named Fort Dix's drill sergeant of the year.

Ms. Atchley, who served in West Germany before coming to New Jersey, made the nationals after receiving high grades for her ability to mold young recruits into disciplined soldiers during basic training.

"It's sort of like taking children and raising them up in eight weeks," said Ms. Atchley, who is single. "You have to be very tough and still have the flexibility to be not so tough depending on the individual cases."

The 31-year-old from New Hope, Ala., said Wednesday she gave little thought to being selected post drill sergeant for 1983, an honor that had always gone to a man. And she didn't dream of finishing well in the national competition.

"I had sort of been told it was impossible and I started to believe it. I didn't expect to win at the post level," said Ms. Atchley, who was one of two women among the nine finalists. The other woman, Sgt. Galen Grant of Fort Jackson in South Carolina, was not among the top three finishers.

Ms. Atchley, who has been a drill sergeant at Fort Dix for almost two years, is used to fighting off first impressions.

"The majority of my troops have been male," she said. "I'm only 5-3 and very slender and they look and say 'Wow, a female drill sergeant. This is going to be easy.' After about three days, they realize I'm in charge. I'm very stern and I tell them you need me to graduate."

Her reward for being selected the top Fort Dix drill sergeant is that she is no longer a drill sergeant.

With the honor come desk duties as the liaison between the post commander and other drill sergeants. Next year, when the 1984 drill sergeant of the year is selected, Ms. Atchley expects to return to the line of work for which she was trained — repairing communications teletype machines.

Yet, Ms. Atchley already is yearning for the time when she will return to the gruelling 16-hour days of a boot camp leader.

"I'm sure I'll be a drill sergeant again some day," she said. "I can't wait. At first, it took a little getting used to, but it's one of the most challenging jobs I've ever had. It's like a natural high."

'Everybody's winner' on freeze vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — Both sides claimed victory after the House passed by a hefty 129-vote margin a long-debated resolution calling for a "mutual and verifiable freeze" on U.S. and Soviet nuclear arsenals.

Republicans allied with President Reagan in opposing the measure said they won crucial language linking a freeze with weapons reductions. Freeze advocates, however, asserted that the basic aim of halting the superpower arms race had emerged unscathed.

"This is a unique instance in the history of arms control," declared House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., just before Wednesday's 278-149 final vote on the resolution, which had grown out of a grassroots freeze movement spreading nationwide from a handful of town meetings.

The vote — culminating more than 40 hours of debate over six days — came after GOP leaders seized on the announcement of a new Soviet arms reduction proposal, saying Moscow's offer showed the need for giving Reagan more negotiating flexibility.

The freeze resolution, which is non-binding and largely symbolic, now goes to the Republican-controlled Senate, where its fate is uncertain.

Freeze proponent Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., conceded that winning approval of similar legislation would involve "an uphill battle in the Senate."

"We may not win on the first vote. But this is an issue which we will bring back again and again and on which ultimately we will prevail," Kennedy said.

Rep. William Carney, R-N.Y., flatly predicted the measure would never make it through the Republican Senate. "It will never reach the president's desk. If it does, it would be vetoed," Carney told reporters.

At the White House, spokesman Anson Franklin said Wednesday night the administration planned to comment today on the House vote.

Final passage came shortly after freeze advocates suffered a major setback with the House's 221-203 approval of an administration-supported amendment stipulating that arms reductions should be achieved within "a reasonable, specified period of time" after a freeze went into effect.

Minority Leader Robert H. Michel, R-Ill., said adoption of this and earlier amendments made the resolution "infinitely better" than when it went to the House floor in March. "Make no mistake about it — the pure freeze has lost," he said.

Reagan 'encouraged' by Soviet proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is welcoming a Soviet proposal to negotiate ceilings on nuclear warheads in Europe, promising that the offer by Yuri V. Andropov will be given "serious consideration" when arms talks resume.

Reagan told reporters Wednesday he was encouraged that the Soviets "have made a proposal of their own." He had already offered a compromise in late March to break the deadlock, but it was turned down by Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko in a move that administration officials did not consider final.

Andropov's proposal, at a dinner Tuesday night in Moscow honoring East German leader Erich Honecker, and Reagan's compromise appear to represent a softening of the U.S. and Soviet negotiating positions.

Except for a brief period last summer when U.S. negotiator Paul H. Nitze and Yuli Kvitsinsky, his Soviet counterpart, informally discussed a 75-missile ceiling, the talks have been deadlocked since they opened in November 1981.

Reagan intends to review Andropov's complex proposal with Nitze before the negotiations reopen in Geneva, Switzerland, on May 17.

The president said whether Andropov was serious or engaging in propaganda "will be determined, I think, when the negotiators get back there."

But, he said, "the very fact that they have moved toward discussing warheads instead of missiles, we feel that way and have felt that way for some time — that this is what we should be negotiating."

Hance still considering race for Senate seat

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Rep. Kent Hance, D-Lubbock, says he will make up his mind by July whether he is going to seek the U.S. Senate seat now held by Republican John G. Tower.

Hance's office spokesman tried to qualify this date Wednesday by saying Hance told a group of West Texas independent oil men that he may not decide until August or September.

A spokesman in Sen. Tower's office declined comment on the possible pairing, saying "Tower has not as yet taken into consideration or made any comment about anyone running against him."

Hance, now a member of the House Ways and Means Committee, was first approached about the Senate race after his re-election last November with 82 percent of the vote. He ran against both a Republican and a Libertarian.

Hance, who wanted to delay his decision on the race until after the Social Security recovery bill was safely through the Ways and Means committee, has hired professional pollster Tubby Harrison of Boston "to make some tests." The question Hance asked of the pollster was "Can a Conservative Democrat from West Texas run a successful statewide race?"

Hance has been active in the Conservative Democratic Forum (the Boll Weevils) since it started. He has at times voted with Republicans in favor of President Reagan's proposals, at times against Reagan. Hance co-authored with Rep. B.B. Conable, R-N.Y., the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981, largest tax cutting bill in history.

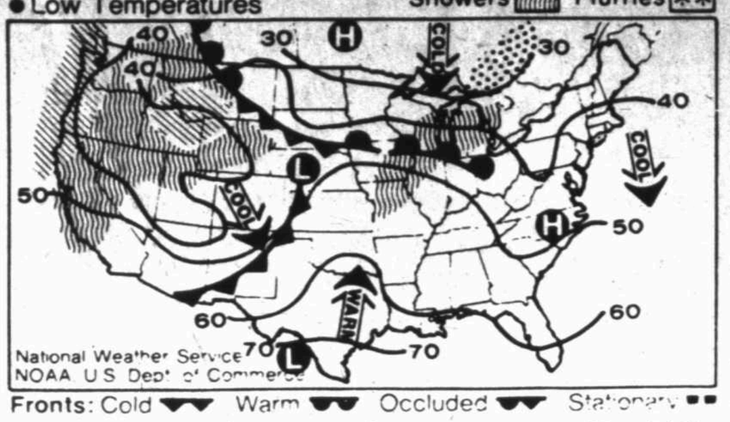
WEATHER SUMMARY

The Forecast For 8 a.m. EDT Friday, May 6
● Low Temperatures
Rain Snow Showers Flurries



Fronts: Cold Warm Occluded Stationary

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service predicts precipitation for the northern quarter of the nation and most of California through Friday. A band of showers stretching from Missouri through Michigan also is forecast.

Warm, windy weather continues

While spring weather is notorious for being "wet and wild" in many parts of the nation, Midland's spring continues to follow its traditional "warm and windy" pattern.

According to the forecast from the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, tonight will be fair and mild with the low in the low 60s and southerly winds at 15-20 mph. Friday's weather should be windy and warm with the high reaching the upper 80s and winds from the southwest at 20-30 mph and gusty.

Wednesday's high of 88 was comfortable compared with the record high 103 set in 1947. The overnight temperature limit of 55 compares with a record low 39 set in 1933.

No rainfall thus far in May leaves the yearly rainfall total at 1.67 inches.

Drainage policies debated

"You (now) have concentrated effluent going down Monahans Draw," he said.

Six years ago, after the old Water Quality Board — now the Texas Water Commission — approved Odessa's unrestricted flow of treated waste-water into the draw, Commissioner Win Brown said, "We just got the hell kicked out of us." In Austin for the hearing, Brown had argued that Odessa did not have the authority to dump waste-water in the draw. He was concerned about mosquito problems, foul odors, spoiled underground water table and private acreage lost to the effluent.

"I don't think we've seen the end of this," Commissioner Durward Wright said after the 1977 ruling.

Since then, the Commissioners' Court repeatedly has threatened to bring suit against the city of Odessa to force that city to dispose of its effluent in other ways.

The threat still exists. Meanwhile, Midland County farmer Lee Bell earlier this year filed a $1.957 million lawsuit against the city of Odessa. He is alleging the draw's effluent has ruined 80 acres of his farm land southeast of Midland, damaged the value of adjoining land and polluted his water wells.

IN THE UPCOMING TWC hearing, Midland County's stance toward Odessa will be: "They're polluting the 'world' — stop and desist," Wright said. "I'll guarantee you the mosquito situation is bound to take off one of these days."

Midland County representatives, possibly including County Attorney J. Scott Henderson, Mark Dettman and the commissioners, and "various and sundry landowners who are affected" by the draw's waters are to appear before the Texas Water Commission, Kerr said.

"I move that we join the county in the request for a public hearing (before the TWC)," Sloan said prior to Wednesday's unanimous vote to challege Odessa's right to discharge effluent in Monahans Draw.

"You may or may not be admitted as a party," said City Attorney Joe Nuessle. If not, the City Council would give commissioners "all the backing" it could, proposed Sloan.

The city-county apparent bond of harmony may "shock the water commission," said the mayor in a reference to the December 1981 duel between the two local bodies in a TWC hearing at Austin.

Back then, Midland County and private landowners objected to the city using Midland Draw an outlet for its one-stage treated waste water. TWC ordered the city to develop other means to dispose of its waste water. As a result, Midland is constructing a $20 million system to pipe the water from Midland and onto agricultural lands about 15 miles southeast of the city.

In Midland's application to join in the hearing, the city is citing its "interest in the quality of waters within its extra-territorial jurisdiction," which by state law extends five miles beyond the city limits.

IN THE HEARING, Odessa is seeking permission to increase its discharge from its older South Dixie Water Reclamation plant from 11.8 million to 14.7 million gallons per day. That plant is within Ector County and south of that city's industrial complex. In addition, Odessa is requesting to increase its discharge from the 1982-completed East Water Reclamation Plant in Midland County from 6.26 mgd to 7.8 mgd per day.

Odessa's permits to discharge expired Aug. 31.

Henderson, who said he was "happy" that the city of Midland joined the county in its quest to block Odessa's use of Monahans Draw, said Odessa "should not be held to different standards (by the TWC) than the city of Midland."

Sloan likened the Midland city-county stance against Odessa to a "severe internal national problem" which can be resolved by a crisis, such as war, which unites a nation. He cited "Pearl Harbor and the Alamo."

"They (Midland city-county) are going to pull together."

Burglaries reported

In burglary complaints to city police during the past 24 hours, carpeting, appliances and a hot water heater were among the items taken in a break-in at an unoccupied home at 1717 E. Pine Ave. Entry to the new house, which is owned by Plainsmen Corp., was gained by breaking a window. Total loss was placed at $4,530.

House plants, a television set and a gold wedding ring worth a total of $2,710 were reported stolen in a burglary of the Terry Davis residence at 4500 Crenshaw. Entry was gained by forcing a rear door.

Minor injuries were reported in the collision of these two cars about 12:40 p.m. Wednesday in the 2900 block of West Illinois Avenue. The cars were driven by 60-year-old Nancy Gill of 3521 W. Michigan and James T. Byrnes of 3513 W. Michigan.

Coalinga merchants get first look at city's crumbled business district

Hearst Feature Service

COALINGA, Calif. — Merchants whose buildings were crumbled by the devastating earthquake here Monday were given their first close-hand look at the ruined business district today as state and federal damage assessment teams continued to prowl through the rubble.

Another aftershock measuring 4.4 on the Richter scale rumbled through this San Joaquin Valley oil town shortly after midnight, but caused no apparent damage. As if the earthquakes weren't enough, weather forecasters were predicting a 20 percent chance of rain.

"I know what the problem is going to be: I'm going to have a bare lot," said Albert Bordagaray, 77, as he waited for the first busload of merchants to pull out. Bordagaray owns one of the nine commercial blocks ravaged by the earthquake which registered 6.5.

Merchants — 20 at a time — were to be driven through the devastated area this afternoon in large brown-and-white Coalinga Transit buses. However, they were not going to be allowed to enter their buildings until the damage assessment teams have decided which ones are safe, said city information officer Bob Semple.

Jim Poe, owner of Poe Automative, knows what to expect from the tour — he was inside his shop when the quake hit Monday afternoon.

"I lost half of it," he said. "Auto parts were all over the floor."

The threat of rain frightened some residents.

"Oh God, don't do that to us too," said lifelong resident Helen Cowan whose house was thrown off its foundation and sat at a decided hilt, its contents strewn everywhere. Cowan did not think the house would be salvagable.

"It's hell to have to start over at 62," said the white-haired, athletic-looking woman.

However, most residents seemed unperturbed by last night and today's strong aftershocks.

"We're not scared anymore. We're just ridin' em out," said 29- year-old Colleen Crofts, who was thrown to her knees in the Thrifty drugstore as glass popped out of mirrors everywhere when the big quake hit.

Miraculously, no fatalities have been discovered. As a result of the quake 47 people were injured, the most serious an elderly former Coalinga city councilman who suffered what was classified as a "severe" head wound.

But property damage was estimated at more than $31 million. And some residents packed up to leave as more aftershocks rumbled through the city yesterday.

"I don't think I can stay here," said Marina Pena, as her husband and two children piled their belongings into a large pickup truck. The quake split the home where the family has lived for the past year and, "it scares me to be here," Pena said.

Others were determined to stick it out, earthquake or not.

"I was born here, I'm not about to leave," declared 68-year-old Donald Richard Ellis, as he sat in front of his wood-shingle home one block from the disaster area, and surveyed the damage. "I was in Long Beach (for the disastrous 1933 earthquake there) — that was a beauty, too."

Gov. George Deukmejian yesterday declared a state of emergency for Fresno County, which set the stage for large-scale state and federal assistance.

"It looks to me that very few will be left standing," said Bob Semple, the city's public information officer, referring to the downtown structures. "There are buildings that will have to be knocked down — we can't kid anybody about that."

Three-person teams from the state Office of Emergency Services, Federal Emergency Management Agency, and U.S. Army Corps of engineers were going through the business center building by building, Semple said.

Quick action 'essential'

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON — During the terrifying moments of an earthquake, people don't just stand around waiting for the walls to cave in.

According to study results released Wednesday, most earthquake victims move about trying to restrict damage to themselves and their property during tremors.

If this responsiveness can be directed through advanced training, say researchers, people can do more to help themselves and reduce damage during earthquakes.

The National Science Foundation, which financed the study and released preliminary findings of the joint U.S.-Japanese study, said the data indicates that people can be more than passive victims if they are trained properly.

The study suggests that the behavior of building occupants may be a more critical factor in survival and injury than generally believed.

Two held in heroin investigation

An eastside man and an unemployed West Tennessee Avenue data processor have been jailed in connection with a heroin investigation stemming from the arrest last week of another man, 28-year-old Raymond Pinion Gavia of 308 E. Cowden Ave.

The latest suspects in the case, ages 37 and 35, were arrested Wednesday by city police and narcotics agents. One man was booked for possession of heroin, while the other was charged with possession of heroin with intent to deliver.

A narcotics agent said this morning that their arrests were related to Gavia's arrest last Friday. He was charged with possession of heroin with intent to deliver and jailed in lieu of $20,000 bond set Monday by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

Bond on the other two suspects was to be set sometime today.

Reagan helps San Antonians celebrate Cinco de Mayo

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, courting Hispanics in preparation for a possible re-election bid in 1984, is taking part in festivities in San Antonio, Texas, celebrating Cinco de Mayo, a national Mexican holiday.

The president was departing for Texas at midday on the first leg of a five-day trip that also will take him to Phoenix, Ariz., his ranch near Santa Barbara, Calif., and Ashland, Ohio.

It was Reagan's second trip to Texas in a week. He attended a fund-raiser for Sen.LJohn Tower, R-Texas, in Houston last Friday.

Republican prospects for winning the vote-rich state in 1984 dimmed considerably last November when the Republican governor, William Clements, was ousted by a Democrat, Mark White.

In the process, White's campaign signed up an estimated 100,000 Hispanic voters, a key minority group, for the Democrats.

Reagan will be on the ground in San Antonio for 2 hours and 15 minutes to attend the Cinco de Mayo — fifth of May — festivities in Plaza Neuva.

Cinco de Mayo commemorates the 1862 victory at the Battle of Puebla, in which Gen. Ignacio Zaragoza led 2,000 Mexicans against 6,000 French troops who were heading for the Mexican capital.

Tickets for the outdoor event have been distributed by local city organizations and the Mexican consul-general's office. Reagan was expected to mention that he has appointed 130 Hispanics to positions in his administration.

Ed Rollins, the president's political adviser, said in a telephone interview that "there's no question the Hispanic vote is a very important vote. It's a growing population in this country."

Rollins said Reagan received 35 percent to 40 percent of the Hispanic vote in 1980.

A White House aide, who spoke only on the condition that he not be identified by name, said that Cinco de Mayo was an important day for Hispanics "and from that point of view we wanted to go somewhere we could celebrate. There's no question it has some political fallout."

After the festival, the president was flying to Phoenix, where he will spend the night. On Friday, he addresses the National Rifle Association and meets with a group of elderly citizens of Sun City, Ariz., a retirement community.

Instead of traveling with her husband on Air Force One, Nancy Reagan is taking a separate U.S. government airplane to Phoenix alone to join up with him Friday.

The Jetstar the first lady planned to use costs taxpayers $1,868 an hour to fly. The eight-hour round trip will cost nearly $15,000. Air Force One costs $5,566 an hour.

Hance to testify at hearings

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Rep. Kent Hance, D.—Lubbock said Wednesday that he will testify on May 16 when the Department of Energy holds hearings at Hereford on the possible selection of a nuclear waste disposal site in Deaf Smith county near Amarillo.

Hance's office said West Texans are concerned that their water supply which comes from underground reservoirs may get contaminated.

Another nuclear project, a nuclear plant in which utility companies and public commissions from Austin, San Antonio, Corpus Christi and Houston are collaborating, is also causing concern. While many citizens object to the plant, many other citizens now unemployed in the state are eagerly looking to it to provide jobs, said a spokesman for Rep. Bill Patman, D., Ganado.

Mrs. Bush: Reagan'll run again

HOUSTON (AP) — Barbara Bush says she's willing to bet President Reagan will seek a second term.

"If you asked me if I had $50 and would I bet $49 that he'd run, I really would," the vice president's wife said Wednesday after a luncheon of the Federation of Houston Professional Women.

Mrs. Bush said she was pleased about recent reports that Reagan again wants her husband as his running mate if he decides to seek re-election in 1984.

Orthopedic surgeon convicted

DALLAS (AP) — A 74-year-old orthopedic surgeon faces sentencing May 26 following his conviction in federal court on 11 charges of illegally prescribing drugs to two Dallas women.

The two women, ages 29 and 31, testified that Dr. Howard Young Sigler gave them the prescriptions in exchange for sexual favors. Both women said they were addicted to the painkiller Dilaudid, one of five drugs Sigler prescribed.

Sigler testified he thought he was treating the women for neck and back injuries they said were suffered in automobile accidents.

Abductor faces life in prison

DALLAS (AP) — A Fort Worth man faces possible life sentences on charges of aggravated robbery and aggravated kidnapping in a scheme to extort $400,000 from a bank by holding a banker's family hostage.

Alexander Davis, 31, who police said is on probation for robbery, was charged Wednesday and was being held in the Dallas city jail on $200,000 bond.

Assistant District Attorney Jim Burnham said the state charges carry a possible sentence of five years to life in prison.

Police also were checking to see if Davis was involved in two similar incidents earlier this year.

Davis surrendered to police Tuesday afternoon 25 minutes after the banker's wife ran screaming from her car where she had been held captive.

Joe Goyne, president of the Grand Avenue Bank, his wife, Jo, and daughters, Erin, 10, and Shaun, 7, were abducted Monday night and held hostage overnight in their home, police said.

About 6 a.m. Tuesday, the gunman forced them to drive around the East Texas countryside for two hours before the bank opened, police said.

He then forced Goyne to fill a satchel full of money from the bank and held the woman and girls in a bank-owned 1983 Oldsmobile while police negotiated their freedom.

The children were released about 1 p.m. and Mrs. Goyne was freed about 3:35 p.m., police said.

The two earlier extortion attempts were carried out in similar fashion, according to police.

On Jan. 21, a man confronted InterFirst Bank Assistant Vice President Shirley Youts in the driveway of her home, demanding $300,000 cash and holding the woman's boyfriend hostage for three hours while she went to get the money, police said.

The man escaped before getting the money, investigators said.

In March, a gunman held a Parkway Bank and Trust vice president and his family hostage for 10 hours, releasing them only after the executive took him to the bank and gave him about $15,000, police said.

Killers hunted nationwide

DALLAS (AP) — A nationwide alert has been issued for a car and three "heavily armed" suspects wanted for questioning in the shooting death of a Dallas police officer, authorities said.

The suspects, two men and a women, were traveling in a van before abandoning it in a wooded area of a ranch near Cayuga in Anderson County, police said.

Police issued the alert Wednesday for a red Pontiac Trans Am.

The van, the land where it was abandoned and the car belong to an acquaintance of one of the suspects, police said.

Court prevents graduation without passing literacy test

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A state education official says students around the nation will be "the real winners" in a landmark court ruling that allows Florida to prevent high school students from graduating unless they pass a functional literacy test.

The decision Wednesday by U.S. District Judge George C. Carr means about 3,000 Florida seniors will be barred from receiving diplomas this year.

Black students challenged the basic skills test five years ago as being racially and culturally biased. Their attorneys said an appeal was planned.

Students get five chances to take the exam beginning in 10th grade, and those who fail their last attempt will receive certificates of completion instead of diplomas. Two-thirds of those who failed the test are black.

Education experts said the ruling would have far-reaching implications, particularly in about 15 states attempting to use standardized tests as diploma requirements.

"The students in Florida and the nation are the real winners through this court decision," said Florida Education Commissioner Ralph Turlington.

"The case commands national attention because of its effect on denial of diplomas," said Chris Pipho, an analyst at the Denver-based Education Commission of the States.

The multiple-choice Florida test covers math, reading and writing. Teachers say it isn't difficult but requires concentration.

Students are asked to figure discounts, compute sales tax, use graphs, tables and maps, do comparison shopping, separate fact from opinion, balance checks, complete forms, find references and pick out details.

Four years ago, Carr rejected claims that the test was biased. But in that ruling, ge said Florida couldn't use the exam as a diploma requirement until this year.

That way, he said, students would have had an opportunity to attend 12 years of integrated classes before the requirement took effect. A federal court ordered Florida to integrate schools in 1971.

A U.S. appeals court upheld Carr on the bias issue, but sent the case back for proof that material tested on the exam was indeed taught in classrooms. The court also ordered a review and clarification of whether any vestiges of segregation remained in Florida schools.

Russ Vlaanderen of Denver, who retired last week from the Education Commission of the States, said 38 states have some type of high school competency testing with about 15 seeking to deny diplomas, but he didn't expect a testing fervor to result from Carr's ruling.

The Florida Legislature mandated the test in 1976; it was first administered the next year. Eleven black Hillsborough County high school students went to court to challenge the test in 1978.

Inhaling smoke hazardous

BOSTON (AP) — Researchers who thought non-smokers would be harmed by "passive smoking" during long plane flights say they were surprised to learn that eight hours in the smoking section was the equivalent of just one cigarette.

Doctors monitored blood levels of carbon monoxide and nicotine, but did not check for lung irritation, another potential hazard of inhaling smokers' fumes.

The research reported today was conducted on non-smoking flight attendants who worked in the smoking section of an eight-hour flight from Tokyo to San Francisco.

Dr. Neil L. Benowitz said the results "surprised us, because we thought that people would have much more exposure than this over eight hours. In the sense that they're not heavily exposed, it is reassuring."

The researchers chose the overseas trip for their experiment because they thought that such a long flight would be the most likely place to find effects of "passive smoking."

Benowitz conducted the study with Drs. Donna Foliart and Charles E. Becker, all of San Francisco General Hospital Medical Center. Their research was published in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

"Our study does not address other possible health risks, such as impairment of pulmonary function or kinds of lung cancer that have been attributed to passive smoking but which are unrelated to nicotine or carbon monoxide exposure," Benowitz said.

The study examined five female flight attendants who worked in the smoking section and one who was in the non-smoking compartment. Blood nicotine levels of the five in the smoking section doubled during the long flight, but they were still extremely low compared with those found in typical smokers.

The other woman's nicotine levels were unchanged, as were all the women's carbon monoxide levels.

The Civil Aeronautics Board requires airlines to provide separate sections for non-smokers, but recently a federal court ruled that the federal regulations do not pay enough attention to drifting smoke. As a result, the board proposed rules last month that would require airlines to ban smoking if their planes lack adequate ventilation.

Kent State protest remembered

KENT, Ohio (AP) — Some of those wounded 13 years ago in an anti-war protest at Kent State University joined about 300 others in seeking a memorial to the four people killed and nine injured in the demonstration.

Alan Canfora, one of the wounded, urged a gathering at the campus on Wednesday to push for the memorial. "Kent State has a new president, and Ohio has a new governor," he said. "That might make the difference."

On May 4, 1970, Kent State students rallied on the school commons to protest the U.S. incursion into Cambodia during the Vietnam War. National Guard troops opened fire during the demonstration, causing the death and injuries.

Man gives $125 million to LSU

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — A millionaire's dream of helping the world's poor children prompted the largest gift ever made to a U.S. educational institution — a $125 million donation to Louisiana State University.

The amount of the gift from oilman C.B. Pennington, 83, which was earmarked to operate a center for nutrition and preventive medicine, surprised LSU officials, who expected a much smaller donation.

"When we were originally contacted three years ago, nobody thought in terms of that figure," Dr. Stanley H. Abadie, dean of LSU's School of Allied Health Professions, said Wednesday.

Afghans on hunger strike

NEW YORK (AP) — A group of Afghans who claim they have been detained without proper food or exercise say they began a hunger strike to protest treatment by the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

The 40 men and two women were held after they arrived in the United States without proper papers, officials said Wednesday. All have been held in the INS processing center in Brooklyn, some for as long as 16 months.

Humidullah Mutahidy, 22, one of the detainees, said the fast began at 7 a.m. Tuesday and would continue until the Afghans are released.

An INS official said the detainees may be moved in a few months to a new facility where more exercise will be possible.

Rabbi wanted for questioning

VINELAND, N.J. (AP) — Police want to question a rabbi about a warehouse filled with 10,000 religious books believed to be stolen from synagogues, schools and libraries in four states.

The warehouse rented by Rabbi Saul Wisemon in this south New Jersey community was filled with books from congregations and schools in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York and Massachusetts, officials said Wednesday.

No charges have been filed against Wisemon, whose whereabouts are not known. He is wanted for questioning about the disappearance of a hand-written Torah scroll from a Bridgeton temple.

Legislator admits mistake

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — A state legislator charged with carrying a concealed weapon said he made an "honest mistake" by failing to remove a .38-caliber pistol from his briefcase before boarding a plane.

Sen. Clarence Mitchell III, 43, a Baltimore Democrat, said Tuesday he was hurrying to catch a plane and forgot to remove the gun from his briefcase last Saturday.

Anne Arundel County State's Attorney Warren Duckett said he filed a misdemeanor concealed weapons charge against Mitchell on Wednesday.

Troops complain about aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Afghan guerrillas have received "no effective weapons" from the United States in their fight against Soviet troops in their country, an Afghan rebel leader says.

"Until now, the major weapons we have are those we have captured," Abdul Ramin told a news conference Wednesday at the Heritage Foundation, a conservative think tank here.

Ramin, who described himself as a political officer for the resistance unit Jamiat Islami Afghanistan, was asked about published reports that the United States has increased the quality and quantity of covert military asistance to the Afghan rebels.

"We haven't seen any change yet. We are not getting any effective weapons right now," he said.

Corruption rises in Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of local officials who were indicted on corruption charges rose in 1982 but federal indictments of public officials for corruption in office declined, the Justice Department says.

In a report to Congress on Wednesday, the department said 158 federal officials were indicted for corruption in 1982 compared with 198 in 1981.

Federal indictments of state officials fell from 87 in 1981 to 49 in 1982, but indictments of local officials rose from 244 to 257, the report said.

Poles leave country for U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — As many as 400 Polish citizens interned after the crackdown on the independent Solidarity labor movement have left Poland and been resettled in the United States, the State Department says.

Alan Romberg, the department's deputy spokesman, said Wednesday that the United States has made no formal or informal agreement with the Polish government to accept former internees as refugees.

When family members are added to the 400 or so former internees who have entered the United States, the total amounts to about 1,100 people, he said.

Systems may reduce damage

WASHINGTON (AP) — A relatively small investment in improved warning systems might reduce by $200 million or more annually the cost of flood damage in the United States, a federal advisory committee says.

Each year floods cause an estimated $2 billion in damage in the United States and claim an average of 185 lives, the National Advisory Committee on Oceans and Atmosphere said in a study prepared for President Reagan and Congress.

Doctor files complaint with FCC

WASHINGTON (AP) — A physician who is suing CBS for slander has filed a complaint with the Federal Communications Commission alleging that the network "distorted, slanted, falsified and staged" a news report about him.

The complaint Wednesday by Dr. Carl A. Galloway of Los Angeles involves a report on "60 Minutes" in December 1979 about automobile insurance fraud.

Mondale's criticism challenged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is taking the offensive against Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale's repeated criticism of current trade policies as threatening America's industrial base.

William Brock, the U.S. trade representative, on Wednesday blasted protectionist measures that he said wouldn't help the United States restore its competitive strength.

"If we have to choose protectionism, that says something pretty dangerous about us and our self-confidence," he said in a response to a question at the National Press Club about Mondale's trade remarks.

Protectionism refers to trade barriers countries set up to shield their weak industries from foreign competition. Recent moves toward protectionism, likened to the trend in the 1930s, have been blamed on the worldwide recession that has battered industrialized economies and sent unemployment levels soaring.

"Protectionism is an indictment of us and it will do more damage to us than to anybody else," Brock said.

Speaking at about the same time as Brock, Mondale told a conference of industrial unions that he believed in the free-market approach, which the administration advocates. "But," he added, "there are times when you have to intervene. That's why we have a federal government."

Without the government playing an activist role in extending loan guarantees to Chrysler Corp., the company "would have gone down the drain" in 1979, he said. Now, he said, the No. 3 automaker is "one of America's success stories."

"What's wrong with using the American government when it helps the American people," the former vice president asked.

He said the administration's approach threatens "the disappearance of America's industrial base."

But Brock suggested that it would be better to support measures that would help the United States compete more in foreign markets. He cited efforts to reduce the large federal budget deficits that some fear will soak up investment that might otherwise go into manufacturing or other areas.

"Protectionism doesn't do anything about it except to hide the problem," Brock said. "It pulls down the shades so we don't know there's a world out there."

Satellite spots comet

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — An infrared telescope launched in January to search for undiscovered astronomical bodies has spotted a fast-moving comet that will pass near Earth early next week, scientists say.

The discovery marks the first time a comet has been found by an instrument that measures temperatures, rather than visible light, Jet Propulsion Laboratory spokesman Allen Wood said Wednesday.

It also is the first time a comet has been seen at far-infared wave lengths, where very cold objects emit most of their radiation.

Senators praise Ruckelshaus

WASHINGTON (AP) — William D. Ruckelshaus is coming through his Senate confirmation hearings with flying colors, but his future boss — President Reagan — has had a far rougher time.

In his first day of testimony Wednesday, Ruckelshaus won plaudits for his honesty and his integrity, but several senators questioned how much independence he would have to change what they termed Reagan's misguided environmental policies.

Ruckelshaus sent out a clear signal that he intended to run the agency by strict ethical guidelines. But he was less clear on whether his appointment signaled any change in Reagan policies.

The Senate Environment Committee's questioning of Ruckelshaus was to continue today.

Ruckelshaus pledged Wednesday that under his leadership "there will be no hit lists or political decisions or sweetheart deals."

It was such charges that drove his predecessor, Anne M. Burford, and more than a dozen of her aides from office earlier this year and sent the Reagan administration scurrying for a "Mr. Clean" to salvage the agency's image.

Ruckelshaus was pressed repeatedly Wednesday for what assurances he had received from the president and others at the White House that he would have a free hand in running the agency.

Senators from both parties made a point of saying their questioning was aimed not so much at Ruckelshaus but at the president.

"What we hope to confirm at this hearing is that you will be the administrator of the agency, not the White House staff, not the officials at the Office of Management and Budget," said Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn.

"I believe I have all the independence I need to function as the administrator at the EPA," Ruckelshaus said. But he said, "I am a part of this administration. Every time I don't succeed in getting everything I want, I won't resign."

Ruckelshaus gained a reputation for integrity when he resigned as deputy attorney general in 1973 rather than carry out President Nixon's orders to fire Watergate special prosecutor Archibald Cox.

Ruckelshaus said he had been given veto power over the selection of other presidential appointees at the EPA and will report directly to Reagan, not to the Cabinet Council on Natural Resources, headed by Interior Secretary James Watt.

Ruckelshaus was less specific on what changes he might seek in administration environmental policies. Asked about subjects ranging from acid rain to the EPA's reduced budget, Ruckelshaus refused to make any firm commitments.

The budget has been marked as a litmus test of whether Ruckelshaus will be heeded by the president. Environmentalists contend the administration should ask Congress for a 30 percent increase in its 1984 budget request.

On the Clean Air Act, Ruckelshaus pledged to carry out requirements in the law, but he said he may seek changes to make the law work better.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, May 6, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Psychiatry pioneer Sigmund Freud, Confederate President Jefferson Davis, film star Rudolph Valentino and explorer Admiral Robert Peary were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: Hall of Fame centerfielder Willie Mays, Orson Welles, author Teddy White and moviemaker Ross Hunter. You are now able to form a team that will bring you lasting career and financial rewards. If romance has you on a treadmill, think about making some changes. You take pride in doing things that other people call impossible. Be sure family members understand the need for any sacrifices they are asked to make. Domestic harmony is essential.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Prospects improve for those seeking employment. Be upfront about goals, minimum salary requirements. Those involved in sales, merchandising enjoy good luck.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Spend money in ways that will bring you peace of mind as well as business success. You get important news from someone who has been away from home. Investments pay special dividends.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A very busy day for business people. You get the support of influential investors. Do not confide your worries to people you do not know well. Exercise greater patience in family matters.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Show others that you believe in yourself and the projects you undertake. Check a lease very carefully before moving in. Risky transactions are best avoided.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may be surprised by something that happens today. The final results will favor your interests. A secret wish moves closer to becoming reality.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Home life improves. Give credit where it is due. A money matter cannot be postponed. Decisions made today will save you money next week. Patch things up with partner or co-worker.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Take a firm stand about your work. Others will respect you more. Ingenuity will help you solve a tricky problem. Follow up new job leads—you could get lucky.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Listen to a sibling's propositions. The last-minute news regarding a college acceptance is favorable. A recent friendship could blossom into something more permanent.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Financial pressures begin to ease. Push ahead with your ideas. Plan to hold a family council this evening. A loved one could make valuable suggestions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A younger person who seems rebellious needs your loving concern. Beware of a stranger who comes into your life making big promises. Your heart or money could be in danger.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You need to reduce everyday expenses. Enlist family members' cooperation. Your sparring with romantic partner could lead to hurt feelings. Avoid doing anything on impulse.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your intuition is right on target today. A financial situation looks shaky. Steer clear of friends' business schemes. Keep original ideas under wraps.

Program features ad clips

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — The late James Dean once was a rebel with a cause.

Early in his career, the cult actor did a Pepsi-Cola commercial, but you won't see it Sunday night on NBC's "Bigger & Better: Television's Greatest Commercials 3."

That's because any plug on this commercial-scrapbook show must get approval from the sponsor, ad agency, actors, or their heirs. After an exhaustive search, the producers of "Greatest Commercials" found Dean's aunt, who said Dean's father wouldn't release the clip.

Some thespians are embarrassed that their careers began in deodorant, or something less fragrant. Producer Joie Albrecht wouldn't finger the recalcitrants "because we're hoping they'll change their minds," she said.

For anyone who remembers the toddler and teenage years of television, "Greatest Commercials" is a delightful piece of nostalgia.

The segment on commercial starts for the stars is particularly involving. See if you recognize Sylvester Stallone in a Rapid Shave commercial, John Travolta singing in the shower for Safeguard, Loni Anderson, as a brunette, hawking Secret deodorant, and Lily Tomlin jumping into the rinse cycle to get her blouse clean with All.

"Lily's agent turned us down, but when we talked to her, she said we could do it," said Ms. Albrecht, who produced the program with her husband, Scott Garen.

There's a young Kermit the Frog from puppeteer Jim Henson's college days, and a young Frank Sinatra singing "Halo everybody Halo." "Ed McMahon asked him," said Ms. Albrecht. (McMahon, a friend of Sinatra's, and Mariette Hartley are the show's hosts.)

There's also an appearance from ol' Tootsie himself, Dustin Hoffman, not as a tomato but as a pitchman for Volkswagen in the early 1960s.

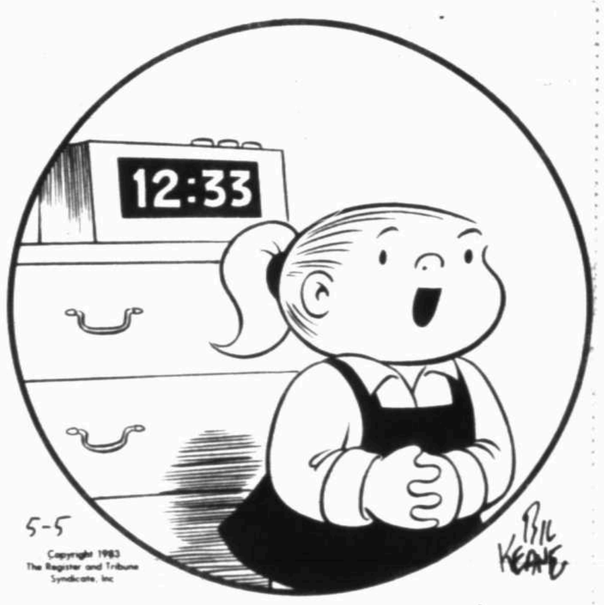
A lot of the fun here is seeing commercials that are far more ingenious than the programs they sponsored. For example, the famous commercial for Alka-Seltzer involving the newlyweds' first home-cooked meal. Meteorite-sized dumplings put the husband down for the count, and tomorrow's menu of "stuffed oysters" has him scurrying back to the bathroom for more fizzy relief.

One segment salutes ad legend Stan Freberg, whose witty, irreverent commercials managed to break every rule on Madison Avenue. He once sold pitted prunes with the line: "Today the pits. Tomorrow the wrinkles."

DENNIS THE MENACE

"BUT, MOM...IF YOU TAKE MY TURTLE OUT, MY FROG WILL GET LONESOME!"

FAMILY CIRCUS



"I can tell time now. It's one, two, three, three o'clock."

Opening lead: Seven of ◇.

So much stress is laid on an eight-card fit that the power of the trump suit is frequently overlooked on hands with a lesser fit. This hand is from last year's Scandinavian championships and occurred in the match between the women's teams of Denmark and Sweden.

In one room the Danish women reached three no trump. That contract was hopeless after a heart lead, for declarer had only one entry to dummy, and the defenders held up the king of clubs. At the other table, the Swedes reached four spades on the auction shown. South's response to Stayman showed both major suits and North's jump to four hearts was a transfer to spades.

West led a diamond, declarer won the king and led a trump to the queen and ace. East shifted to a club and declarer wisely elected to rise with the ace. Declarer continued with the queen of clubs, and it was West's turn to shine—she ducked and East ruffed with the six.

East attacked dummy's entry by shifting to a heart. West took the ace and returned the suit to dummy's king. Declarer led a club from the table. East ruffed with the ten and declarer overruffed.

With dummy's clubs now established, declarer tried to sneak the seven of trumps through, but West was awake. She covered with the nine and declarer was in dummy, faced with a Hobson's choice. If she drew the last trump, there would be no way back to dummy and she would be stranded with a diamond loser. Yet if she did not draw the trump, there was no way to stop it from taking the setting trick.

House praises Brooklyn Bridge

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The House of Representatives took time out recently from the nation's pressing business to debate and approve a resolution praising "that marvelous structure," the Brooklyn Bridge.

"It really is a symbol of what New York is all about. It is a great bridge," said Rep. Robert Garcia, D-N.Y., sponsor of the resolution to designate May 24 as "Brooklyn Bridge Day." It will be 100 years old that day.

"The Brooklyn Bridge is probably one of the few structures that we have that at least 1,000 people have purchased over the last 100 years," he added.

Rep. James A. Courter, R-N.J., wondered aloud if the purpose of the resolution was for the benefit of those hapless purchasers. And Rep. Harold L. Volkmer, D-Mo., asked: "Is the Brooklyn Bridge still for sale?"

"You will have to ask the last person who purchased it. I do not know whether he or she wants to sell it," Garcia said.

Rep. Elliot H. Levitas, D-Ga., waxed eloquent on the subject, giving a short history of the bridge and telling colleages: "It says something good and important about this nation 100 years ago to conceive of and construct that marvelous structure."

"How comes it that a gentleman from Georgia knows so much about the Brooklyn Bridge?" Courter asked.

Levitas said his interest stemmed from being on the Public Works Committee, reading a book about the bridge and "walking across it" with his children. "It is such an impressive experience."

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker, R-Tenn., wondered on the Senate floor whether President Reagan's Cabinet secretaries received their just rewards during the recently concluded "National Secretaries Week."

For instance, he said he was considering sending a gift to Interior Secretary James Watt. "Maybe (he) would like a new digital recording of 'Surfin' Safari' by the Beach Boys as his gift," Baker told the Senate.

Interrupted Senate Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va.: "Or a matching foot."

It was a clear reference to the model of a foot — with a hole in it — that Watt had displayed after President Reagan reversed his decision to ban the Beach Boys from a Fourth of July concert at the Washington Monument.

"A matching foot with matched toes," Baker responded.

Meanwhile, another Reagan Cabinet secretary — Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler — told a luncheon honoring women members of Congress that she felt right at home being honored as a secretary.

Red schoolhouse really a barn

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Ark. (AP) — An old red barn with uneven stone floors and a mixture of bare light bulbs and spotlights is a part-time schoolhouse — the Ozarks "campus" for the University of Central Arkansas.

Musician Jimmy Driftwood and his wife, Cleda, gave the barn to the University of Central Arkansas Foundation Corp. about a year ago. UCA plans to use it for activities connected to courses offered at the college's Conway campus, about 70 miles south of this north Arkansas town.

Normally, Driftwood and members of the Rackensack Society gather in the barn on Friday nights to play music handed down through generations. Driftwood, who's also a teacher from Timbo, is the author of the song, "The Battle of New Orleans," which he wrote to help students learn history.

UCA history professor Waddy W. Moore said in a recent telephone interview that the biology department plans to take some students to Mountain View to study Ozark flora and fauna. The classes are to operate from the barn. It's to be the headquarters for geography students studying the region's geologic and geographic features.

History and English classes also are to study the regions, Moore says. He is coordinating the project, which he hopes eventually will include other parts of the state for a complete study of Arkansas heritage.

"This was a natural way for them to preserve something they devoted their lives to," said Bill Patterson, UCA vice president for public affairs, referring to the Driftwoods, who are UCA alumni. "We think the opportunity will be better for the preservation of some of the things they've been working to preserve — music and folklore. The Ozark region was the most natural starting point for us with Jimmy Driftwood's interest in the university."

Moore said UCA wants someday to offer courses at the barn, primarily dealing with folklore and literature. "We hope to eventually be able to draw from all over the Midwest," Moore said.

The building doesn't resemble most lecture rooms. Worn church pews rest unsteadily on the stony floor. Across the aisle are rows of auditorium seats. In the rear are four white chairs.

"I think with its location it would be very inappropriate for it to be any other way," Patterson said. Of the performances, he said, "We want that to be continued ... everything just as it was before."

The foundation to which the barn was donated is a private corporation that is an educational and charitable organization with a tax-exempt status.

"Our approach to this is that it is a tremendous academic opportunity," Patterson said. "It's an academic undertaking for the people of Arkansas. We want to preserve the wonderful heritage we think Arkansans have."

In addition to Driftwood's barn, UCA has been presented a collection of tapes the Rackensack Society gathered during a two- to three-year period.

"It's just going to snowball," he said of the project.

Moore said UCA also would like to study the Mississippi River Delta, the Ouachitas, South Arkansas and the Arkansas River Valley.

House praises Brooklyn Bridge

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The House of Representatives took time out recently from the nation's pressing business to debate and approve a resolution praising "that marvelous structure," the Brooklyn Bridge.

"It really is a symbol of what New York is all about. It is a great bridge," said Rep. Robert Garcia, D-N.Y., sponsor of the resolution to designate May 24 as "Brooklyn Bridge Day." It will be 100 years old that day.

"The Brooklyn Bridge is probably one of the few structures that we have that at least 1,000 people have purchased over the last 100 years," he added.

Rep. James A. Courter, R-N.J., wondered aloud if the purpose of the resolution was for the benefit of those hapless purchasers. And Rep. Harold L. Volkmer, D-Mo., asked: "Is the Brooklyn Bridge still for sale?"

"You will have to ask the last person who purchased it. I do not know whether he or she wants to sell it," Garcia said.

Rep. Elliot H. Levitas, D-Ga., waxed eloquent on the subject, giving a short history of the bridge and telling colleages: "It says something good and important about this nation 100 years ago to conceive of and construct that marvelous structure."

"How comes it that a gentleman from Georgia knows so much about the Brooklyn Bridge?" Courter asked.

Levitas said his interest stemmed from being on the Public Works Committee, reading a book about the bridge and "walking across it" with his children. "It is such an impressive experience."

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker, R-Tenn., wondered on the Senate floor whether President Reagan's Cabinet secretaries received their just rewards during the recently concluded "National Secretaries Week."

For instance, he said he was considering sending a gift to Interior Secretary James Watt. "Maybe (he) would like a new digital recording of 'Surfin' Safari' by the Beach Boys as his gift," Baker told the Senate.

Interrupted Senate Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va.: "Or a matching foot."

It was a clear reference to the model of a foot — with a hole in it — that Watt had displayed after President Reagan reversed his decision to ban the Beach Boys from a Fourth of July concert at the Washington Monument.

"A matching foot with matched toes," Baker responded.

Meanwhile, another Reagan Cabinet secretary — Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler — told a luncheon honoring women members of Congress that she felt right at home being honored as a secretary.

Saving some bucks

Government efficiency studies come and go. Most of the work of those who strive to save the taxpayers' money gathers dust on Washington's endless shelves. Some of the studies are worthless in themselves. But, fortunately, now and then there's a compelling exception such as the recommendations from President Reagan's private commission on government waste.

Officially known as the president's Private Sector Survey of Cost Control, the commission consists of 163 private-sector executives who have been chartered by Mr. Reagan to find ways to reduce government waste and improve government efficiency. The privately-financed commission has drawn on the services of 1,200 other executives assigned to task forces that have been studying various segments of the federal bureaucracy.

Although the final report from the commission is not due until late June, we already know it will be worthwhile. Interim suggestions from some of the task forces could save billions of dollars in public expenditures.

Not to be too optimistic. Irrespective of their intrinsic merit, some of the recommendations are ordained for rejection because of political realities. Proposals to restructure the food stamp program and revamp the farm price support system, for example, are similar to measures that Congress previously has defeated.

Other recommendations, such as increasing fees for various government services, will be sharply debated because they would adversely affect politically influential special interest groups.

On the other hand, there should be a sporting chance for those savings that call for modernizing inefficient government management systems, and have nothing whatsoever to do with ideology, policy, or politics.

Indeed, one task force found that the government could accelerate its annual cash collection by $54 billion with such rudimentary management improvements as speeding the collection and deposit of receipts and using electronic fund transfers.

Other task forces have found that the government uses 130 totally different accounting systems that ought to be reconciled, and that many of the 16,300 government computers are outmoded. Fewer but higher quality computers could provide the administration with the information required to manage the complex federal bureaucracy.

Fortunately, the commission has weathered several minor crises and the merit of its work should not be obscured by irrelevant controversies. J. Peter Grace, the commission chairman, has apologized for describing food stamps as "basically a Puerto Rican program." And, complaints that commission members should not be making suggestions about agencies that regulate their businesses appear unjustified.

The commission and task force members were not appointed to pass judgment on government policies but to apply business and managerial skills to the runaway bureaucracy. This they appear to have accomplished well, and the country is in their debt.

Taste for tuna

The federal government's plan to purchase canned tuna and other surplus foods to feed the nation's unemployed and destitute comes as good news to the tuna fleet.

The U.S. Agriculture Department says it will buy millions of dollars worth of tuna from the lowest bidders. Specifications on the government's needs will be mailed within the next two weeks to tuna suppliers, and purchases are expected to start as early as June.

Funds for the program — a total of $75 million — are included in the $4.6 billion jobs bill adopted recently by Congress. The funds will be used to purchase canned goods — tuna, salmon, fruit, vegetables, meat and poultry. The Agriculture Department says the amount for tuna purchases will depend on what kind of deal the government can get — but it will be in the millions of dollars.

The canned food will not be distributed to individuals, as in the case of government-surplus cheese last year. The government found itself overwhelmed with warehouses filled with cheese it purchased in an effort to support sagging milk prices. More than 100 million pounds of cheese were passed out to the nation's needy.

Unlike the cheese program, the canned food will be distributed to charitable institutions and on-site feeding programs, such as soup kitchens in high unemployment areas. These institutions will prepare and serve the tuna as part of a meal.

Thus the government will be taking care of two birds with one stone — helping the destitute and out of work and giving a boost to the tuna industry. There are those who rue any government interference with commodity prices, but we say if the nation's farmers can be helped in this way, so can our tuna fishermen.

There are other indications that tuna sales are on the upswing. If the government can help, that's good. But we would not favor a permanent program of government price support for the tuna industry.

Another View:

Fizzled franchise

The franchise boom has grown by leaps and bounds — with some exceptions, of course.

A 21-year-old entrepreneur in California is in the losing category. He promised investors that his pot farm franchises could earn $150,000 or more a year.

It was a classy sales pitch with a fancy prospectus in full color, etc. Under the proposition, franchisees would grow a highly potent marijauna indoors and the promoter would buy it back at $2,000 a pound.

After a franchisee expended about $30,000 for equipment for the indoor farming enterprise, the helpful entrepreneur would gladly assist in setting up the operation.

It had been a profitable enterprise. Police raided the young man's two luxury homes, where marijuana was growing in a maze of rooms, and they uncovered assorted drugs worth nearly $1 million.

The entrepreneur made one big mistake: He tried to persuade an undercover agent to get into the home-grown marijuana business.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Mobsters' names cut from movie

WASHINGTON — The names of mobsters Santo Trafficante and Carlos Marcello were deleted from the television movie "Blood Feud" after Trafficante's lawyer threatened 20th Century-Fox with legal action.

Trafficante's attorney, Frank Ragano, got hold of a bootleg script and complained about references suggesting his client might have joined in a conspiracy to murder John and Robert Kennedy.

Ragano wrote the president of 20th Century-Fox, Marvin Davis, threatening a libel suit unless all references to Trafficante were removed. The film's producer, Daniel Selznick, confirmed that the names of both Trafficante and Marcello were deleted. Any similarities between them and characters in the movie, said Selznick, are now "purely in the eye of the beholder."

Trafficante and Marcello are identified in court records and law enforcement documents as two of the Mafia's most sinister godfathers. They were summoned for questioning by a special house committee investigating the John F. Kennedy assassination. The committee, however, stopped short of accepting the conclusion of its investigators that Trafficante and Marcello were behind a conspiracy to murder the president.

"Blood Feud" is a dramatization of the explosive confrontation between the late Teamsters leader Jimmy Hoffa and Robert Kennedy. The characterization of these two antagonists displeased the survivors of both men.

The senator's widow, Ethel Kennedy, objected in a letter of her own that the docudrama "distorts history and is so lacking in integrity."

Attorney Ragano, who also represented Hoffa and owns the rights to his life story, tried to stop 20th Century-Fox from distributing the film. He is preparing a movie of his own, he said, which will "portray Hoffa through the eyes of the people who knew and loved him." Ragano told my associate Charles Bermant that he has asked Al Pacino to play the title role.

I had a ringside seat to the real life Kennedy-Hoffa drama. "Blood Feud" takes dramatic license but gives essentially accurate portraits of Hoffa and Kennedy.

My former associate, Clark Mollenhoff, is portrayed in the movie as the reporter who started Kennedy on the Hoffa investigation. Mollenhoff agrees that the final script was reasonably close to what happened, although the producers "took a little liberty with the sequence of events."

BLIND WATCHDOG: The recent scandals at the Environmental Protection Agency made headlines largely because of the prominence of the EPA officials involved. But there's a scandalous weakness in an important branch of the EPA that has made no headlines. It involves the evisceration of the Pesticide Incident Monitoring System (PIMS) through budget cuts.

PIMS was one of the voluntary reporting programs through which cases of contamination in humans, animals and the environment were reported to the EPA. It used to produce anywhere from 800 to 1,200 reports per month of damage caused by pesticides. Now that PIMS has been phased out, only about 100 of these reports come into the agency each month during the busiest agricultural spraying season. And the money for processing the reports on computers is gone, so the data is simply put into storage.

The reports used to come in from farm workers, doctors, pest-control workers and individuals who had been exposed to harmful pesticides at work or at home. But now, an EPA official told my reporter Kelley Griffin, the agency gets no details of the circumstances, or even the identity of the chemicals involved. In short, the agency is effectively blindfolded in its job of pinpointing the pesticides that may be poisoning the environment.

— Cuts in Pentagon budget requests haven't deterred the brass at Patrick Air Force Base in Florida from enlarging the 18-hole golf course to 27 holes. They're taking nearly $500,000 from the base recreation fund, which consists of greens fees, concession sales and other recreation dues, and borrowing the rest from the Air Force's "Major Command Welfare Fund." Rep. Doug Walgren, D-Pa., questions whether this is a proper expenditure, and has asked the Pentagon for an explanation.

— Jordanian King Hussein's rejection of the administration's Middle East peace plan was blamed by one Reagan insider on the State Department's feeling that Hussein could be won over by smooth diplomacy. GEORGE F. WILL

Indexing: Better because it lasts

WASHINGTON — Before Congress enacted indexation of the income tax system, to take effect in 1985, Barber Conable (R-N.Y.) visited Canada to see how indexation was viewed there. Politicians told him: "Don't do it — you only get credit for it once." But taxpayers thought indexing was, in Conable's words, "the greatest thing since pearl-button spats."

George F. Will

Many Democrats (and a few liberal Republicans) seem determined to make repeal of indexation their principal contribution to social thought in 1983, thereby establishing the contrast between the parties that the president wants for 1984. He has the votes to sustain a veto of any repeal, but Democrats seem duty bound to try. Their budget proposal calls for $265 billion in new revenues through 1988, but the only revenue-raising measures Democrats are eager to discuss are repeal of the third year of the tax cut, and of indexation. Repeal of indexation would raise $90 billion, one-third of the Democrats' total new revenues. And that is assuring what can not be assured: an inflation rate of less than 5 percent.

Indexation adjusts brackets to compensate for inflation. It prevents "bracket creep," whereby inflation floats taxpayers into higher brackets so that their real tax burdens increase faster than their real incomes. It denies government a revenue windfall from the inflation government causes. Indexation determines the mode, not the level, of taxation. It means tax increases must be voted, not left to inflation. It means Congress can not get credit every few years for tax cuts that merely reduce taxes to what they were before the last few years of inflation.

Indexation, although Reagan's most consequential domestic policy change, was not part of his original proposals. It bubbled up from the Republican fermentation in the 1970s, from line soldiers like Rep. Bill Gradison of Ohio. But by making it his idea, Reagan guarantees fundamental change in congressional behavior.

Conable says that in 18 years in Congress he has seen five major income-tax cuts and only one temporary surtax increase. The result of all this "reducing"? Federal revenues have risen from about $100 billion to $620 billion. Some of that has been due to real economic growth, and social-insurance taxes. But, Conable says, the growth of government has been financed substantially by inflation — by "bracket creep."

By favoring repeal indexation and cancellation of the third installment of the tax cut (due in July), Democrats forfeit their pose as the party of "fairness." If you earn $200,000, the third-year cut is just five percent of your benefit from the entire Reagan cut. But if you earn $25,000, the third year is 40 percent of your total cut. In fact, because of Social Security tax increases and bracket creep, if the third year of the cut were eliminated, only the wealthy would have received, on balance, a tax reduction. Furthermore, indexation is, Conable says, the populist issue where the populists are right: Indexation offers nothing for the wealthy, who already are in the top bracket.

Many legislators rejected the president's proposal for a "standby" tax that would be automatically triggered a few years hence if budgetary conditions are bad. Opponents said, reasonably, that such a tax would be an abdication of legislative control. Those legislators should not vote to repeal indexation and leave the blind force of inflation as the nation's principal taxing power. Opponents of indexation say repeal is needed to shrink the deficit. But repeal can not substantially reduce the deficit unless inflation is re-ignited. Is re-ignition an implied Democratic proposal?

Some conservatives supporting indexation are interested less in equity for taxpayers or governmental due process than in putting sand in the gears of government. They still believe what Reagan's experience refutes — the idea that you can suppress spending by suppressing revenues. But what really shrinks when revenues fall is support for the most important item on the conservative agenda — rearmament.

There is cynicism all around this issue. Many businessmen want indexation repealed because they are afraid their taxes will be raised if we adopt the novel practice of having taxes raised by the legislature, consciously, rather than by inflation, surreptitiously. Liberals who want government to grow and conservatives who say they do not (they do not count the Defense Department as part of government) share a cynicism: They assume Congress will not have the courage to raise taxes by candid action.

Those of us who believe the nation is undertaxed, given the bills it must pay, but who also support indexation as a step toward more honest and intelligent government, thereby acquire a duty. It is the duty to help create a constituency for a kind of courage Congress has not had to show when counting on inflation to generate revenues. Certainly a new era of legislative life begins in 1985: Indexing, unlike pearl-button spats, will be permanent.

Barbaric acts defy reasons

To The Editor:

The ghastly sight of the U.S. Embassy in Beirut looks like pictures of a similar hideous terrorist bombing years ago when Begin's Irgun blew up British headquarters in the King David Hotel. As yet these casualties have not equaled those, but the intent was just as vicious.

We may never really know who committed the cowardly act because several groups have claimed credit, if you could call such murder creditworthy. Then too there are parties capable of such vile deeds who would vehemently deny it if they were guilty. For example, when the U.S. seemed friendly toward Nasser's Egypt a lot of American property was destroyed (supposedly by Moslem fundamentalists). Diplomatic relations took a dive, the U.S. finance for the Asswan High Dam was withdrawn and the Russians moved in.

The Egyptians caught some young Jews, tried and hanged them. Naturally, Israel denied guilt until there was a cabinet fight to fix blame and what was known as the Lavon Affair was last mentioned when peace with Sadat resulted in the bodies being sent to Israel for a military heroes' burial. Zionists are the masters of deceit and would certainly like Americans out of Lebanon. If Arab fanatics get blame, so much more to Israeli liking.

The "Israel firsters" among us will point to the tragedy and say, "We said all along that the Arabs are our enemies." They never convinced me but they could have convinced some Arab radicals. If so, then Arab terrorists have sunk to the low level of Begin, Shamir and Sharon.

It matters not at all how it is explained, such barbaric acts against innocents can never be justified.

Bad example

To The Editor

I am a sixth grade student at Washington Elementary. For the two years I've been living in Midland I've seen the policemen driving their cars while they are off duty. As I understand, they are allowed to do this.

My mother has taught me to respect policemen, but what I have seen has made it difficult. Should the Midland police be allowed to let their children and babies sit on their laps or wander back and forth on the front seat of the patrol car? This is very dangerous and a poor example to the young people of our community.

There is a bill in the Texas Legislature to make it a law to have young children in car seats. I don't think we should have to have a law to tell us something that should be done out of love.

So, please everybody, including off-duty policemen, buckle up for safety.

Much pride

To The Editor:

The city of Midland has a great deal to be proud of after Friday night. Midland Lee took District 4AAAAA varsity honors while Midland High won the junior varsity title in track and field at Ratliff Stadium in Odessa.

Since I have two sons in the Lee track program, I was especially proud, but this letter is not about them. This letter is a thank you to the coaches and kids involved in track in Midland. Special thanks to Sam Volpe and Eddie Wolski who helped my two boys participate in something special that will last the rest of their lives. Not only have the coaches and the kids been a part of winning, so have the parents and city as a whole.

The young athletes today are setting shining examples for us all to pattern our lives from. Thanks again coaches and a job well done.

Kiss music

To The Editor:

I'm writing this letter to express my concern about the controversy with the rock group Kiss and all rock groups and religion.

I have two teenage children — a girl and boy. They like different kinds of music just as I do and I like some rock and roll. I personally do not like Kiss. I don't like the sex and devil worship as a lot of songs imply. When you tell a rebellious teenager not to like something, then they're going to rebel.

Thanks for letting me get this off my chest.

A submarine and two Swedish Navy patrol boats block the strait south of Alno Island, near Stockholm, and search the sea near mined area in the ongoing search for suspected Soviet submarines.

Swedish navy drops charges in effort to rout submarine

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Navy helicopters dropped two depth charges today off the north coast after an intensive hunt by Sweden turned up fresh signs of a suspected Soviet mini-submarine, military officials said.

"We had new indications of a submarine and dropped the charges — that's all I can say at this stage," artillery Maj. Karl-Erik Lundstrom told the national news agency.

One of the depth charges was dropped northeast of the Alno Island in the Sundsvall archipelago, 250 miles north of Stockholm. The second depth charge was dropped south of the island where military observers believe a mother submarine may be lurking.

A naval vessel anchored a mile south of that area early this morning but Defense Ministry officials refused to say if divers had been sent down. No other action was reported from the area.

During the night, helicopters shined spotlights on the waters and two seabottom mines were detonated in an attempt to force the suspected sub to the surface.

"It may be that the submarine is not able to come up to the surface," navy spokesman Cmdr. Bertil Daggfeldt said late Wednesday, suggesting the submarine may be crippled at the bottom of Sundsvall Bay.

He said the search, which began a week ago when periscopes were sighted by civilians, would continue today. More submarines were believed to be still in the area, he said.

Local residents gathered in the darkness on the shores of the bay to observe the naval operation.

Search command leaders told a late night news conference that mine station operators detonated two seabottom mines at 8:20 p.m. in the bay to the northeast of Alno Island but that the submarine could have eacaped.

"You cannot be completely sure until you get up the submarine," Daggfeldt said.

Hakan Nilsson, a Swedish television reporter who witnessed the explosions from his living room window on Alno, said "the whole building was shaking" and that he saw water shooting up into the air.

Nilsson said he may have seen an oil slick on the surface of the water, but the navy said nothing had been found so far by the helicopters combing the area.

The navy refused to give the force of the mines. During a futile hunt for Soviet submarines off a naval base in Stockholm's inner archipelago last October, four half-ton mines were set off.

Wednesday's explosions took place two hours after navy units spotted the periscope of a mini-submarine moving north through the Alno Strait. Naval charts list the depth in the area as only 15 to 25 yards, too shallow for a conventional submarine to navigate safely while submerged.

Daggfeldt said no divers were being sent down overnight because it would prohibit further bombing.

"We don't want to hurt our divers," he said.

The Swedish supreme commander, army Gen. Lennart Ljung, ordered the mine station operators to detonate the mines, Daggfeldt said. He said the search command, headquartered at Harnosand coast artillery base 37 miles north of Sundsvall, had concluded the mini-sub was trying to sneak away to connect with a conventional mother submarine apparently waiting outside the bay.

The action came one week after Prime Minister Olof Palme, in an unprecedented dressing-down of the Soviet Union, temporarily recalled his ambassador to Moscow and warned that the next intruder may be destroyed.

A Swedish parlimentary study last week charged that Soviet submarines were systematically violating Swedish inner waters "for military operative planning purposes and testing of new equipment."

The parliamentary commission, appointed by the government to probe the foreign submarine incident last October, charged that as many as six Soviet submarines, including three mini-subs, may have operated in Stockholm's inner archipelago simultaneously last fall.

'Sea hunt' becomes way of life

By ROLF SODERLIND
Associated Press Writer

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — Foreign submarines widely suspected to be from the Soviet Union continue to snoop in strategic Scandanavian waters despite tough military and diplomatic measures by Norway and Sweden.

"Apparently those responsible for the violations deem the advantages of continuing them to be greater than the risks involved," says a study by a Swedish government-appointed commission.

The study released last week said there were 40 submarine violations of Swedish waters in the first nine months of last year, compared with 19 in all of 1980-81. It said almost all the violations took place on the east coast facing the Soviet Union and that "to an overwhelming degree" the intrusions during the 1980s have been by the East bloc.

The Swedish government has authorized the navy to skip peacetime restrictions and bomb intruders without advance warning.

Just a few days after Sweden gave the Soviet Union an unprecedented dressing-down because of the study's findings, the Swedish Navy began yet another sub hunt. This one was to find intruders in the bay of Sundsvall, a coastal city 253 miles north of here.

At about the same time, Norwegian warships and aircraft scrambled for intruding submarines in a system of fiords on the west coast. The seven-day hunt was called off Tuesday after the hunters blasted 24 anti-submarine missiles and six depth charges into the Hardanger fiord and nearby estuaries in futile attempts to force up the intruders.

The Norwegians would not speculate on the nationality of the intruders but said neither Norway nor any of its North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies had submarines in the area.

The parliamentary study said the Soviets may be trying to wear down the Swedes, hoping Stockholm eventually will stop reacting to underwater violations. One day intruders could operate in Swedish waters routinely and relatively unchallenged, according to this theory.

However, in a country where public opinion against snooping submarines is becoming more hawkish, even the Swedish Communist party condemned the violations. The government warned that the navy will seek to destroy the next intruder, rather than try and force it to the surface as in the past, and the anti-submarine defense is being increased.

Continued violations of Sweden's inner waters indicate that the Soviets were unimpressed with a Swedish protest over the grounding of a Soviet submarine off a naval base in South Sweden in October 1981.

Discussing possible motives, the parliamentary commission said the strategic importance of the Baltic Sea and Europe's northern flank has increased because of a Soviet military buildup in the past few decades on the Kola Peninsula in extreme northwest Russia.

The study said it is natural for the superpowers, especially the Soviet Union, to regard the Baltic as part of a larger strategic area. It charged that Soviet submarines enter waters "for military and operative planning purposes and testing of new equipment."

Tass, the Soviet news agency, denied the charges and said Sweden "failed to produce any direct evidence" of Soviet submarine intrusions.

Tass said the report was an attempt to divert public attention from the planned deployment of new U.S. nuclear missiles in Europe and blamed militarists and anti-Soviets for straining Swedish-Soviet relations.

The Soviets keep 45 submarines in the Baltic, including six Golf-class vessels armed with three intermediate-range nuclear missiles each. Swedish experts also said the Soviet Whiskey-class submarine that ran aground off Karlskrona in 1981 may have carried nuclear-tipped torpedoes.

Fee may be 'just the ticket'

VENICE, Italy (AP) — The best things in life may not be free after all, at least not in Venice if the Socialist mayor pushes through his plan to make tourists buy tickets before they can enter the historic city.

Many of Italy's famous cities are hard-pressed for money, but Mayor Mario Rigo's plan may be the most drastic yet for squeezing more cash out of the throngs of tourists.

"It is now time that we start talking about it (the plan)," the mayor told the Rome daily newspaper La Repubblica. "Today Venice is seen for free, and that is no longer possible."

Rigo's plan calls for a $3.45 or $6.90 ticket that would permit a tourist to enter the city. The ticket also would let a tourist use the city's public transit system and enter its museums.

Before the plan could be instituted, it would need the approval of the city council and possibly the regional government.

La Repubblica, in an article Wednesday, said the plan is still being developed.

An estimated 15 million tourists visited Venice last year to view its famous canals, plazas and buildings.

If each of them had bought a ticket for $3.45, the visitors would have brought in $52 million. At the higher price, the extra revenue would be doubled.

Venice is built on a series of islands that once made the graceful gondolas the major mode of travel.

The same island configuration would make it practical to limit tourist entry to those who pay for a ticket.

Italian Cabinet moves up elections

ROME (AP) — The outgoing Italian Cabinet today set general elections for June 26-27, a year ahead of schedule, after the Socialist Party withdrew support from the coalition government and forced the dissolution of Parliament.

The elections will coincide with previously scheduled local elections, and the new Parliament will convene July 12.

The Socialist Party, which demanded early elections in hopes of increasing its representation in Parliament, heralded President Sandro Pertini's decision to dissolve Parliament Wednesday night.

"We did not want to wait for a dragged-out process. It's better to have a short election campaign than a dragged-out campaign of six months," said Bettino Craxi, the Socialist Party secretary, in a television interview.

Craxi, who hopes to become the first post-war Socialist premier, said Pertini's decision "corresponds exactly to the interests of the country and of the Italian democracy."

It was the fourth Parliament in a row to be dissolved before the end of its five-year term.

Political leaders were scheduled to meet today to set a precise date for the elections, expected to be either June 19 or June 26.

The Socialists withdrew their support from Christian Democrat Premier Amintore Fanfani's four-party coalition, in office only five months, and forced the resignation of his Cabinet last Friday.

Senate President Tommaso Morlino, acting at Pertini's request, had tried for two days to find a government to replace Fanfani's coalition, but his efforts failed.

The Socialists, the third-largest party in Italy, won 10 percent of the vote in the 1979 elections.

Their support is essential to any government because neither the Christian Democrats with 38 percent of the vote nor the Communists, the second-largest party with 30 percent, can form a majority government alone.

James Best yearns for summer

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Actor James Best, who plays Sheriff Rosco P. Coltrane on "The Dukes of Hazzard," is looking forward to summer fishing on Lake Murray, where he has bought a house.

Real estate agent Arnold Hollingsworth said the actor has closed a $200,000 deal for the three-bedroom house, adding that Best is "going to make this his permanent home" and hopes to stay in the state about six months out of the year.

Billy Mungo, who owned the house, said the 56-year-old actor stayed with him and his family for a few days before returning to Hollywood on Tuesday.

"We fished a good bit while he was here," said Mungo, and Best won a bass fishing tournament on Sunday.

"He said he looked the world over. He fell in love with this house from the beginning and that had to be it," said Hollingsworth. He said Best will be moving in later this month.

TORONTO (AP) — Broadcaster Jessica Savitch, whose contract with NBC-TV expires this summer, hints that she is looking at offers from other networks in view of NBC's decision to hire newscaster Connie Chung from a CBS-owned station.

Miss Chung, 36, the local news anchor at KNXT in Los Angeles, will anchor the Weekend Nightly News on Saturdays, a post now held by Miss Savitch.

Miss Savitch, visiting Toronto to address the annual meeting of the American Women in Radio and Television, issued a statement Wednesday saying "it has never been my practice to carry out negotiations in public" but adding that "recent events have caused a barrage of questions about my future."

"When I have explored the several opportunities I have been presented with in this industry, I will make an announcement," Miss Savitch said.

The 35-year-old broadcaster has been with NBC since 1977.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor John Carradine, honored this week at the Los Angeles International Film Exposition with a review of his 470 films, recalls making a comment in 1936 that didn't please a young Katharine Hepburn.

During filming of John Ford's "Mary of Scotland," in which Miss Hepburn played Mary, Queen of Scots, the actress kept saying she would like to play both Mary and Queen Elizabeth, played by Florence Eldridge, Carradine said.

"We all got tired of hearing it," said the 76-year-old Carradine. "So one day I told Kate, 'If you played both parts, how would you know which queen to upstage?' She walked off the set and didn't speak to me for 20 years."

Twenty-two years later, Carradine co-starred with Spencer Tracy in "The Last Hurrah." Miss Hepburn visited the set one day. "She threw her arms around me and bussed me on both cheeks," Carradine recalled.

Had Miss Hepburn forgotten the earlier incident?

"Not Kate. What had happened was . . . Kate grew up," Carradine said.

Immigrant wins $400,000 suit

CHICAGO (AP) — Attorneys for a Chinese immigrant who endured 31 years in state mental hospitals without treatment by anyone who spoke his language hope he can rebuild a shattered life with a $400,000 award from a federal jury.

David Tom, 53, a resident of the Elgin Mental Health Center, was awarded the money Wednesday by a federal jury, which deliberated 2½ hours before returning the judgment against three current or former officials of the state Department of Mental Health.

The judgment was $100,000 more than sought by the lawsuit.

"I'm indescribably happy and I think it is extremely fair," said Cindy Farenga, one of Tom's attorneys in Cook County's public guardian office. "They (state officials) had 18,000 chances to do something and they turned up their noses."

"I thought it only happened in the movies," said Patrick Murphy, Cook County public guardian, another of Tom's attorneys.

Murphy contended that Tom became insane because of the institutions where he lived.

"David Tom is crazy today," Murphy said. "There's no question ... David Tom has been driven crazy. That's what happened in this case."

Repeated telephone calls to officials of the Illinois attorney general's office, representing the mental health department, were not returned Wednesday. Murphy said the state "told the judge they are going to appeal."

Murphy said he hopes to use the award to get an apartment for Tom or send him to another city with a large Chinese population.

"We'll put David in a foster home with Chinese people and get a Chinese therapist to take him out once a week, and try to integrate him back into the Chinese community," Murphy said. "There's a Chinese nursing home in New York that's very good."

The judgment caps a four-year legal battle by Murphy, who alleged in the lawsuit that Tom's rights were violated because he was locked in institutions for decades without having anyone assigned to care for him who could speak his native Chinese dialect. Murphy said he offered to settle out of court on numerous occasions.

Lee runners seek to justify 'best ever' tab

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

LUBBOCK — Midland Lee track coach Sam Volpe will bring his most successful track squad to the Region I meet here Friday and Saturday with a good shot at winning Lee's first Region I team title.

Volpe spans all 22 years of Lee track history since he is the only head track coach the school has ever had. That's a lot of track teams, but this may be the best ever.

First of all, this squad has won nine meets in a row, including the District 4-5A title. Lee had won only two district titles prior to that and no Lee team has ever gone through regular season action by winning every meet it entered.

"I'VE NEVER had as many as 10 individuals and two relays to qualify for the region meet until now, but that does not mean we will win the title this weekend," Volpe said. "At least, it should give us the opportunity to win it."

Region I team titles come from very fragmented points since teams do not qualify, but only individuals. Still, points earned by individuals count for team totals.

The competition here at the Texas Tech track has only the cream of West Texas and there are very few fluke victories. In short, every point is earned the hard way.

"Everything had to go just right (at district) to get the qualifiers we have and we were pleased with the way the kids performed at district. But the region meet will be another day and another story," Volpe said.

BUT THE very fact that Lee showed its top competitive style in the biggest meet of the year at district, gives Lee a big ray of hope heading into the weekend.

The biggest problem the Lee team has faced has come off the track this week. Luther Johnson, who is entered in three events, was arrested last weekend on a robbery charge. Johnson will run, but no one knows how this incident will effect Johnson and his teammates.

Johnson is the 4-5A record holder in the 300 hurdles with a 38.32. He is also on Lee's record setting sprint relay team, which owns a 41.67. He also runs a leg on the 1600 relay team that is not quite as flashy. Johnson is thought to have a good shot at winning a state berth in the 300 hurdles and on the sprint relay with teammates Carlton Johnson, Walter Jones and Damon Polk. The 1600 relay is not a favorite to capture a state berth, which consists of the top two places in each event.

Polk is another Rebel with eyes on Austin, the site of the state meet. Polk is thought to have a strong chance in the high hurdles where his 13.73 is also a 4-5A record and a personal best. Polk is also in the 300 hurdles where he is not quite as strong over that distance, but strong enough to be a major factor and possible state candidate.

LEE'S other major threat at a state berth will come from Isaac Garnett in the shot put. Garnett has a 58-11 this year, which is one of the best throws in West Texas. Eric Cooper will also be in the shot put, but his best of 54-10 may not be good enough. Cooper, however, showed intensity just to get a region berth by getting his season best throw on his last district chance to edge out Permian's Britt Hager.

It was efforts like Cooper's that helped Lee win the 4-5A title and the other region qualifiers from Lee are in the same mold.

Michael Barton produced his best of 6-8 in the high jump at district in a jumpoff with San Angelo's John Johnson for second. He will have to equal that in another pressure meet. Carlton Johnson was a surprise in the 200 meters at district with a second place 21.58. Most think that won't get him in the front door this weekend, but he improves nearly every time out.

Wayne Brandt owns a 13-6 in the pole vault, but again is not considered a state threat. However, the pole vault is an unpredictable event for the most part and there are no great vaulters this year. Sophomore Marc Brackens, with his future still in front of him, will be in the 400 meters, an event that is loaded this year with muscle. Brackens got into the region meet with a second place 49.46, beating Permian's Thurman Hines for the first time this year.

Lee's other entry will be Walter Jones in the 100. Jones is only a sophomore and will be making his first Region I appearance. He set a district record with a 10.52 two weeks ago. Although he is expected to be a near super star as time passes, Jones will have a tough time earning a state berth in a strong field.

MIDLAND High's Chuck St. Germain is the only Bulldog entered in this year's meet, but he is a return performer. St. Germain became the 4-5A 800-meter champion with a season best of 1:56.18, beating out defending district champion Bruce Bennett of Permian. Only two weeks prior to that race St. Germain was a fifth place finisher due to illness.

St. Germain, Polk, Johnson and Garnett all have Region I experience from last year. None won state berths. Garnett is still a junior. For the other three, it's the final shot. Cooper, Barton, Brandt and Carlton Johnson are also seniors.

Qualifications will be held Friday afternoon with finals set for Saturday afternoon at 1:30 p.m.

Wilhelmi in perfect hill effort

By Associated Press

Don Wilhelmi pitched a perfect game to lead Shreveport to a 7-0 victory over Arkansas in Texas League play.

In other TL games Wednesday night, San Antonio beat error-plagued Beaumont 9-4, Tulsa trounced Jackson 14-7 and Midland blitzed El Paso 14-5.

Wilhelmi's spotless pitching performance was saved in the ninth, when left fielder Don Mazzilli made a diving catch of a sinking line drive by Arkansas pinch hitter Greg Guin.

Mazzilli walked in the second and scored on a single by Bob O'Connor. The Captains scored four runs in the fourth — three on a homer by Mazzilli, his first of the year.

Shreveport added a run in the sixth and another in the eighth.

With the win, Wilhelmi raises his record to 1-1. Bill Thomas, 1-1, took the loss for the Travelers.

San Antonio scored five runs in the first on RBI singles by R.J. Reynolds, Robbie Allen and Gilberto Reyes and two errors.

Reyes added a two-run single in the seventh.

The Golden Gators, hampered by five errors, were led offensively by Mark Gillapsie's four hits and four RBIs.

Ken Howell, 3-3, nabbed the win. Reliever Ernesto Borbon picked up a save.

Jamey Oberbruner, 2-2, was the losing pitcher.

Tulsa exploded for eight runs in the fourth inning and Mike Rubel added a two-run homer in a five-run third inning for the Drillers.

George Gomez smacked a solo homer in the eighth to seal the victory.

Jackson right fielder Terry Blocker homered twice and added two doubles.

Brad Mengwasser, 1-0, was the winning pitcher. The Mets' DeWayne Vaughn, 2-3, was the loser.

They start 'em young in Port Arthur. Pee Wee Leaguer Kevin Sims keeps his eye on ball, which is what batting tees are for.

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Going into the bottom of the fifth inning Wednesday night, someone in the press box at Cubs Stadium turned to P.A. announcer Jeff Grimes and asked him how Midland catcher Don Hyman had been hitting this season.

"Fine," replied Grimes. He looked at a stat sheet he keeps near his corner of the box and added, "He's hitting .279, but he hasn't really connected with one yet."

Grimes' timing couldn't have been worse. Three pitches later Hyman ended El Paso pitcher Bryan Clutterbuck's one-hit shutout with a solo home run over the left field fence. It was also the beginning of the end for the Diablo right-hander and his teammates as Midland went on to post a 14-5 Texas League victory.

That squares the series at 1-1 going into tonight's 7 p.m. third game.

"It was a fastball about waist high," said Hyman whose home run started a five-run inning for the Cubs that eliminated a 4-0 El Paso lead. "In the last three or four games I've been hitting the ball pretty well, getting my one hit a game. The others are going to somebody but as long as I keep hitting it good, the hits will start coming. Sooner or later they're going to stop catching them."

THOUGH HYMAN was the first to spark the Cubs at the plate, a touch of inspiration can probably be attributed to right fielder Randy LaVigne. With one out in the top of the fourth, two runs already added to the scoreboard and Diablo Ernest Riles on second, LaVigne chased down a Joe Henderson fly ball and made a tremendous over-the-shoulder catch.

Riles, thinking the ball was going to fall, had rounded third and there was no chance of returning to second. He stood near third base and watched LaVigne's throw complete Midland's second double play of the game.

"It was the turning point of the game," said Midland manager Tommy Harmon. "If he doesn't make the catch, two more runs score and there are men on second and third. As it was, he made it and we were out of the inning."

THE DIABLOS tied the game in the top of the seventh, 5-5, but lost control in the bottom half. Ray Gallo, who had replaced Clutterbuck in the sixth, got one out, gave up two walks, two hits and four runs before being relieved by Miguel Alicea.

Alicea got one more out before a routine fly ball was dropped by first baseman Carlos Ponce that would have ended the inning. Four extra runs scored (he'd given up one prior to the error) before Steve Parrott was sent in to end the inning. He did, but the score was 14-5.

What was El Paso's problem? "No bullpen," said Muser. "Nobody came out to do the job."

Except Parrott?

"He's mainly a starter or a middle man," said Muser. "We're going to make a short reliever out of him."

DESPITE A sub-par outing, Cub pitcher Darrell Banks picked up his fifth victory of the season against only one loss. He went seven innings, giving up eight hits and five runs. Reliever Jim Gerlach finished the game, allowing only one hit and one walk in two innings of duty.

"Darrell Banks went out and won his fifth game and didn't have his best stuff," said Harmon. "But, he kept us close. It's a good sign when a pitcher goes out and gets the win without his best stuff.

"Another bright spot was Jim Gerlach. He pitched two good innings in relief. It's a plus to have another pitcher in the bullpen."

Especially with two pitchers on the disabled list: Ken Pryce and Ray Soff.

Chaparral athletic teams honored

After the basketball season, Midland College Jerry Stone had his heart set on the North Texas State coaching job.

When he didn't get it, "the disappointment lasted for about two days," Stone admitted. "Now, I may want to stay at MC forever, or as long as we keep winning 30 a season, guys."

Stone had a couple of disappointments last season. The job and the failure to rpeat as National Junior College Athletic Association champion. Everybody should have such letdowns.

Stone's team did post win a third straight Western Junior College Conference title and a won Region V for the second year in a row on the way to a 32-4 record. And it took the team that eventually won the NJCAA, San Jacinto, to keep the Chaparrals from repeating their Hutchinson, Kan., triumph of a year before.

But that was only one phase of a successful Chaparral program applauded Wednesday night at the annual All-Sports Banquet in the Chaparral Center.

Coach Dr. Leon Dulin's women's tennis team, bound for the national JC championships at Ocala, Fla., next week and the men's team were honored.

Kym Somerville took the academic award for women athletes while Chuck Robinson and Jeff Cranford shared honors for highest academic average by male athletes.

Tennis player Linda Bryant and basketballer Nate Bufford recieved the Student Senate Award.

Trainers honored were Arnaldo "Bear" Carrasco, Mike Hudson, Doug Nall, and Pat Scribner, who will be attending Abilene Christian University on a scholarship next year.

Five-six North Carolina State Anthony "Spud" Webb and 6-6 Chester Smith, headed for the University of Alabama at Birmingham, were voted co-MVP's on the basketball team while Nate Bufford, headed for Southern Illinois, was the Fighting Chaparral winner. Jerome Crowe got the best defensive player award and Jackie Phinnessee, who returns next season, was voted Most Improved.

Three members of Coach Delnor Poss' all-freshmen golf team gained trips to regionals with Jeff Cranford gaining all-WJCC honors.

Kevin Rodgers was picked as Fighting Chaparral winner for Jenny Allison's No. 1 ranked cheerleading squad.

Midland High trainer James "Doc" Dodson received a belated NJCAA championship plaque award for his work with MC's training corps and the players.

H.A. Tuck served as MC for the evening while Dave Gentry gave the Invocation and Debbie Fairly the Benediction.

A return to Texas League sanity

TED BATTLES
BATTLE SCENE

El Paso Manager Tony Muser welcomed the return to sanity Tuesday at Cubs Stadium where batters were relegated to a background, spear-carrying role, a sensible 10-7 West Texas pitchers' battle.

After all that fence rattling in El Paso over the weekend, 10-7 did seem like a pitchers' battle.

Against Beaumont, El Paso won 35-21 Saturday night and then lost 20-13 Sunday night.

"Never saw anything like it," Muser admitted. "The wind was blowing out 35 to 40 mph from the left field corner to the right field corner. Balls were going out that wouldn't have gone out normally. And, to make matters worse, the infield was hard."

Jon Teicher, who does the play-by-play of Diablo games for KTSM-AM, had to translate the avalanche of hits and runs so that it didn't sound like something like Bob and Ray might dream up. Probably next to keeping official score, his was the most undesirable task in such a game.

"Our first four hitters batted in eight of the nine innings," Jon reviewed, "We batted around five times.

"It took three hours, 39 minutes to play and that was surprising with all those runs. It wasn't even our longest game of the year."

BUT THE suspicion remains that the horror of it all was worth it in national publicity. Teicher declares that requests for information poured in from all over the country....ABC, NBC, CBS, ESPN, CNN....the USFL, wanting how two teams could score that many points in one game.

Midland fans who sat through the 34-8 game with San Antonio two years ago at Cubs Stadium, the one in which a third baseman named Carmello Martinez made five errors, were envious that it didn't happen here. After all, Midland also missed out when that sunset to dawn game played between Charleston-Pawtucket in the International League. But some people get all the breaks.

The big city papers reveled in it as sort of a Believe It or Not situation. Fans gathered over coffee and talked the next Monday and gasped about the outlandishness of it.

"Hey, did you year about that game in the Texas League? Did you ever hear of anything like...?"

"No, that's the wildest thing since, well, you remember the time the game was called because of grasshoppers. Where was that, Midland, Texas, wasn't it?"

Rebs open playoffs at Lubbock Monterey Tuesday

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

After a one-year hiatus from the state baseball playoffs, Midland Lee has returned. However, unlike the 1981 District 5-5A (now 4-5A) championship team, the Rebels are going as runners-up to the San Angelo Bobcats.

It's the first time, in any sport since the adoption of the two-team per-district playoff rule, that the Rebels have taken advantage of the runnerup berth.

"We got beat in bi-district," said Lee coach Ernie Johnson. "It was the first time we've been beaten that early." Louisville won the three-game series in two games.

The Rebels face Lubbock Monterey at Lubbock's Lowery Field 4 p.m. Tuesday and the second and third, if necessary games, are scheduled for Lee 2 p.m. May 13.

IN TWO earlier games, the Plainsmen won two games to one.

The Rebels weren't connecting with the ball back then the way they did in 4-5A. In 14 league games, Lee hit .337 as a team for a 9-5 record (16-11 overall).

However, the Plainsmen didn't win District 3-5A with the help of four-leaf clovers or rabbits' feet.

"They're good, real good," said Johnson. "They've got a real good hitting ball club. Their pitching is good but not overpowering. They've given up some runs but they usually score more. They're also a good fielding team. When a team goes 25-5 (14-2 in 3-5A play) it's pretty sound everywhere."

The pitching the Rebels were supposed to have to start the season never really came through. It wasn't uncommon for Lee to have a strong outing on the mound one day only to pull a Charlie Brown the next.

"I don't know if anything we're doing right now can be called strong," said Johnson. "Our pitching is so inconsistant and our fielding hasn't been what it could be. The closest thing to strong is our hitting but even that isn't consistant."

Even though Johnson sees his Rebels as "probably going into the series as underdogs," he doesn't want to use that as "an alibi. I prefer to be the underdog," he said. "But, not this decided an underdog."

DISTRICT 4-5A champion San Angelo faces Lubbock Coronado at the Texas Tech Field Tuesday and hosts Friday game. San Angelo finished with an 11-3 district and 17-10 overall record while Coronado was 12-4 and 19-7.

Strawberry to get chance with NY Mets

NEW YORK (AP) — Darryl Strawberry, the New York Mets' top minor-league prospect, could see action in a major-league game for the first time Friday night at Shea Stadium against the Cincinnati Reds.

General Manager Frank Cashen announced Wednesday night that Strawberry was being called up from the Mets' Tidewater farm club in an effort to get some offense into their lineup. New York has a 6-15 record and is hitting .227 as a team.

"We couldn't let things go the way they were," said Cashen, who previously resisted the temptation to let Strawberry start the season in New York. "We had to get some thump into the lineup. Under ideal conditions, I would've preferred to keep him in the minors for a while. But we just couldn't wait anymore. If we were 15-6, we would've never brought him up."

The Mets also purchased the contract of infielder Tucker Ashford from Tidewater and said Ashford also will be in uniform for Friday night's game at Shea Stadium.

To make room for the two players, infielder Ron Gardenhire was optioned to Tidewater and catcher-infielder Mike Bishop was designated for assignment.

Strawberry, 21, who hit 34 home runs, knocked in 97 runs and stole 45 bases in 129 games with Jackson of the Texas League last season, was the No. 1 pick in the 1980 amateur free agent draft.

Cashen said the decision to bring up the 6-foot-6, 190-pound Strawberry was made in a meeting at 1 a.m. Wednesday between him, Manager George Bamberger and Lou Gorman, vice president in charge of baseball operations.

Cashen said Strawberry "could be any kind of ballplayer he wants. He's got that kind of potential."

"We had to strengthen our bench and give us more power," Bamberger said. "Strawberry will do both. In my mind, he's Reggie Jackson. You never know what to expect from him. When he gets his feet wet, he'll do the job for us."

Spur fans scream for, get Lakers next

NBA

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The crowd started yelling it during the Spurs NBA playoff semifinal clincher with Denver and even San Antonio guard George Gervin, known as "Ice" for his cool demeanor, admitted he was thinking it.

"We want LA," the fans said. "We want LA."

The Spurs got Los Angeles — by blowing out the Nuggets 145-105 Wednesday night to clinch their best-of-seven Western Conference semifinal series 4-1.

"I knew we had this game won after three quarters," said Gervin, who was the game's high scorer with 26 points.

San Antonio meets the Lakers in another best-of-seven series that begins Sunday in Los Angeles. The winner goes on to the NBA championship series.

"We feel very confident we can play with the Lakers," Spurs Coach Stan Albeck said. "Even in Los Angeles."

Johnny Moore, who scored 20 points Wednesday and wound up with an NBA playoff series record 71 assists, said the Spurs won by helping each other out.

"They had to score their points on the Spurs, not just individuals," Moore said. "It was a team effort."

That team effort added up to four playoff records for an NBA playoff five-game series — 181 total assists, 274 field goals made, 51.6 field goal percentage and 664 total points scored.

San Antonio set another playoff record, this one for a single game, with 51 assists Wednesday night.

Five other Spurs were in double figures besides Gervin and Moore and San Antonio outrebounded Denver 75-46.

"There was nothing we could do," Denver Coach Doug Moe said. "We really didn't want to get blown out as badly as we did."

"We got things going in the first quarter, but it wasn't enough," said Denver forward Kiki Vandeweghe."

In NL, it's one for the money and two for Show

By Associated Press

For the second straight night, it was the Mike and Bo Show in Philadelphia...while in San Diego, it was strictly Show's show.

Mike Schmidt and Bo Diaz accounted for seven runs between them for the second straight game to lead the Philadelphia Phillies to a 9-4 victory over the Cincinnati Reds Wednesday night.

Eric Show, meanwhile, blanked St. Louis on seven hits to pitch the San Diego Padres to a 10-0 decision over the Cardinals.

Show, 4-1, struck out seven and walked three in his strong performance against the defending world champions. And he did it without one of his key pitches.

"I still don't have command of my slider," said Show. "I'm pleased with my won-lost record, but not with the way I am pitching."

Phillies 9, Reds 4

Diaz's three-run homer keyed a five-run, first inning while Schmidt had an RBI single in the first, a sacrifice fly in the second and a two-run single in the fourth.

Winner Steve Carlton, 4-2, also hit two doubles and scored two runs in his eight innings of work.

The only solace for Cincinnati was Johnny Bench's 2,000th career hit.

Padres 10, Cardinals 0

Mario Ramirez backed Show's fine performance by driving in four runs with a single and bases-loaded double.

The game was marred by two incidents. St. Louis right-hander Joaquin Andujar, 2-4, was ejected from the game by home plate umpire Bruce Froemming when the two exchanged words as Andujar walked from the mound at the end of the fourth inning. Andujar then became incensed and charged toward Froemming, but was restrained by several teammates and coaches as he tried to reach the umpire.

In the seventh, Cardinal catcher Darrell Porter went after the Padres' Steve Garvey after Garvey slid hard into Porter.

Expos 4, Braves 1

Steve Rogers continued his mastery over Atlanta with a five-hitter and Brian Little hit a two-run triple to lead Montreal over the Braves.

Rogers, 4-1, has a 9-1 record against Atlanta since 1978 with 10 complete games in 12 starts. The Expos' right-hander completed his third game of the season, tops on the team.

Astros 4, Mets 3

Mike LaCoss pitched a six-hitter and Tony Scott drove in three runs with a homer and double, pacing Houston over New York. LaCoss, 1-2, struck out three and walked one in his route-going performance.

Met starter Rick Ownbey, 0-2, gave up a run in the first inning when Scott hit his second homer of the season.

Giants 7, Cubs 4

Jack Clark's two-run single keyed the San Francisco attack as the Giants defeated Chicago behind left-hander Atlee Hammaker.

Hammaker, 3-1, lost his bid for a third shutout in the seventh inning when the Cubs scored all of their runs, two of them on a single by Jerry Morales. Only one of the runs was earned, though, and Hammaker kept his National League earned run average lead at 1.24.

Dodgers 3, Pirates 2

Pedro Guerrero blasted his seventh home run of the season in the bottom of the ninth inning, leading Los Angeles over Pittsburgh. Guerrero picked on a 2-0 pitch from Pirate reliever Manny Sarmiento, 0-1, with one out and lofted it into the left field seats.

Battered Birds seek safe refuge

By Associated Press

Doug DeCinces didn't have his own number — but he sure had Baltimore's. And so did the rest of the California Angels.

They battered the Birds 16-8 Wednesday night, two of the big shots homers by ex-Oriole DeCinces, wearing a numberless, nameless unform for the second night in a row. "My jerseys were either stolen or weren't packed," he said. "It doesn't make any difference."

It also didn't make any difference who was pitching for the Orioles or batting against them. The Angels pounded out 18 hits against Scott McGregor and three relievers. Rod Carew had four of them to raise his batting average to .489. Juan Beniquez also had four hits, and Tim Foli three. Carew, Bob Boone, Brian Downing and Bobby Clark each drove in two runs.

DeCinces' homers, his seventh and eighth of the season, tops in the majors, were a solo shot off McGregor in the first inning and a two-run blast off Sammy Stewart in the sixth.

Red Sox 7, A's 1

Southpaw Bruce Hurst, who underwent surgery on his left elbow last winter and had to battle his way back onto Boston's pitching staff, stymied Oakland with a five-hitter, the first complete game for the Red Sox this season and his first in 36 starts since he first joined the team in 1980.

"I just wanted to go nine in the big leagues," he said. "It's been over a year, with Pawtucket in Triple-A, since my last complete game."

The Red Sox put the game away early, scoring four runs against Rick Langford in the second inning, two of them on Dwight Evans' single. Tony Armas homered for Boston in the seventh inning, his first hit in 21 at-bats in Fenway Park this year. Rick Miller had three hits for the Red Sox.

Blue Jays 7, Rangers 1

Like Hurst, Luis Leal of the Blue Jays pitched a five-hitter. And like Miller, Alfredo Griffin had three hits for Toronto in the romp against the Rangers. But unlike Hurst, who lost his shutout bid in the eighth inning, Leal took his string of goose-eggs into the ninth before being tagged for a run.

Indians 11, Twins 7

Mike Fischlin drove in three runs for Cleveland and Chris Bando hit a tie-breaking grounder to spark a four-run ninth inning that beat the Twins. Fischlin had a sacrifice fly and two RBI-singles and Pat Tabler added a two-run homer for the Indians.

White Sox 3, Brewers 2

Rookie Lorenzo Gray's first two major-league RBI capped Chicago's three-run burst in the second inning that sent winless Bob McClure down to his fifth loss of the season.

Tom Paciorek doubled, Carlton Fisk singled and Rusty Kuntz singled for the first run by the White Sox. An infield hit by Mike Squires loaded the bases before Gray singled up the middle.

Mariners 5, Tigers 1

Todd Cruz' two-run homer and Pat Putnam's solo shot boosted the Mariners past Detroit, which got a solo homer from Alan Trammell.

Yankees 8, Royals 1

Dave Winfield and Don Baylor slugged solo homers, Shane Rawley scattered nine hits and Kansas City catcher Don Slaught gave the Yanks three runs with a wild throw.

Label Marfa hazard

By BILL CHRISTINE
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Wayne Lukas politely dismissed a suggestion from Fred Hooper that Marfa not be allowed to run in Saturday's Kentucky Derby, then accused the media of "mushrooming" the gray colt's roughneck reputation.

Monday, Hooper was forced to scratch his horse Copelan from the Derby because of an injury he sustained in last Thursday's Blue Grass Stakes at Keeneland. Then he cited Marfa as a potential Derby hazard.

"I think Marfa should be barred until the trainer (Lukas) gets him straightened out," Hooper said. "With a 20-horse field in the Derby, Marfa might get a jockey killed or hurt some of the other horses."

Said Lukas of Hooper's remarks: "I respect Mr. Hooper. He's a grand gentleman. He voiced his opinion and he's entitled to do that."

Lukas continued: "By August or September you're going to find out that this is a damn, damn good horse. What you're writing now about this horse isn't true."

Marfa is the Derby favorite, even though he finished second in the Blue Grass and was disqualified to fourth for cutting over and interfering with Copelan and Desert Wine. Play Fellow won the race by a nose over Marfa, which moved up Desert Wine to second and Copelan to third.

Copelan, who has earned $569,090 this year, more than any 3-year-old in the country, was cut across his right front leg when his jockey, Jerry Bailey, was forced to rein him in the upper stretch. Bailey came dangerously close to being unseated and Chris McCarron, on Desert Wine, was forced to pull up his horse when Marfa lugged in on both of them.

"It was ridiculous what Marfa did," said Hooper, who won the Derby with Hoop Jr., the first horse he ever owned, in 1945. Since then he has thirsted for a return trip to the winner's circle. "I don't see how our jock even stayed on our horse," he said.

Hooper is not the first Derby principal to complain about Marfa, who survived a foul claim to win the Jim Beam Spiral Stakes at Latonia March 26 and lugged in slightly but still won the Santa Anita Derby by a solid three lengths April 16.

Last Saturday, Billy Taylor, part owner of Derby starter Slew o' Gold, said that if Marfa were entered in New York, "they (the stewards) probably wouldn't let him run."

Keene Daingerfield, Kentucky state steward at Churchill Downs, said Tuesday that he had received no complaints from owners or trainers about Marfa's presence in the 109th Derby.

Lukas was asked if he objected to his horse being called "Marfa the Mugger," which has become a popular nickname for the colt.

"Tom Gentry calls him "Marfa the Marvelous," Lukas said. Gentry bred Marfa before he was sold at a Keeneland yearling auction for $300,000 to Lukas and Bob French and Barry Beal of Midland, Texas.

Yankees deny bid for Elway

WASHINGTON (AP) — The owner of the New York Yankees denies that the baseball team ever made a firm offer to Stanford's All-American quarterback John Elway, who opted to play professional football with the Denver Broncos.

"Never did the New York Yankees nor myself make a firm offer to John Elway," George Steinbrenner said in an interview with the newspaper USA Today. "Their people suggested one thing to Bill Bergesch (Yankees vice president for baseball operations) and I said, 'Hey, that might be worth looking into,' but we never made an offer."

The lowdown on rent-a-car rates in Texas.

Every time you rent from Hertz, you get great rates and a great gift.

Whether you're traveling deep in the heart of Texas, or riding along its coastline, one of the most economical ways to get around the wide open spaces is in a Hertz rent-a-car.

With Hertz's Low-Down™ rates, you can rent any subcompact or compact for $19.99 a day on the weekends. Or a fuel efficient standard shift subcompact for $119 a week. Or pay more, and get a larger car. And at Hertz, there's never a charge for mileage.

And from now through June 30, 1983, you get your choice of a top quality gift every time you rent a compact or larger car from Hertz. Select anything from Cartier leather accessories to an RCA 19" color TV or a Texas Instruments home computer depending on the number of times you rent. And this offer is good whether you rent on a weekday or on a weekend at participating Hertz locations. Contact Hertz for details.

You don't need advanced reservations to take advantage of Low-Down rates, but all cars are subject to availability. Low-Down rates and no charge for mileage are available at all corporate locations in Texas. Gas is not included. And these rates are non-discountable. There may be a drop-off charge on some one-way rentals.

For more information and complete details call your travel consultant. Or Hertz at 1-800-654-3131. Because when it comes to renting a car in Texas, there's only one lone star. Hertz.

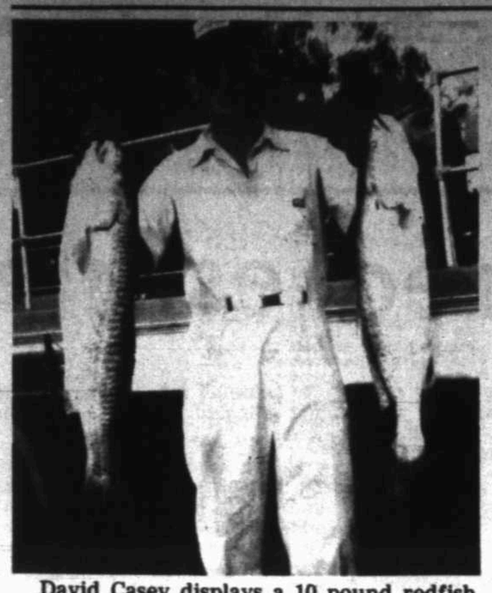
Raley lands skinny 'whopper'



David Casey displays a 10 pound redfish and an 8 1/4 pound trout, right, taken during a recent trip to Port Mansfield.

San Antonio's Roger Raley made off with the big bass of the tourney, a relatively skinny 5.38 pounder, during the High Sky Bass Club's two-day invitational at Lake Amistad.

The tournament lured 412 contestants, who caught 1,073 fish weighing 1,500 pounds. Trophies, merchandise plus cash prizes of $3,500 were awarded.

Outdoors

Raley caught the first day's big bass while the second day's big bass catch went to Joe Henderson, San Angelo, 4.20. The big striper was a 7.90 catch by Alton Voight, San Antonio. Brian York, Midland, took the teen trophy with 10.53 pounds of bass.

One of the highlights of the weekend was a talk by Jimmy Houston and his wife, Chris, who gave tips on fishing.

Tournament winners were: Men's division—1.Britton Gambrel, Del Rio, 22.70 pounds. 2. Don Hanselman, Del Rio, 21.19. 3. Ty Martin, Abilene, 20.23. Women's Division—1.Penn Black, Del Rio, 14.98. 2. Guadalupe Robles, Del Rio, 9.27. 3. Linda Voight, San Antonio, 8.96.

Loud lure proves popular

BY RODNEY RIEHLE

The noise making surface lure known as buzzbait did not become nationally popular until the last six to seven years, but it has been catching trophy bass for the last 20 years.

The original buzzbait, currently marketed under the trade name of Lunker Lure, was patented in 1962 by Haskall Jackson, Marion, Ill. Jackson was bass-fishing coal-miner who, with the help of his wife and son, hand-fashioned lures on the kitching table and sold them out the door to an impressive line of anglers, who took the lures even before the paint dried.

By 1965 the Lunker Lure sold for $12.50, an outlandish price for a single lure at the time. But Jackson suffered no shortage of buyers. Today this lucky lure sells for about $4.15...

WHEN DON Evans cast a lure near a stump recently at Lake Conroe, he expected a strike from a big bass. Instead, a great horned owl swooped down and grabbed the lure just as it hit the water. Evans reeled the flopping owl in, but was unable to untangle it from the treble hooks and the landing net. He returned to the dock for help.

Charles Menn, Houston Texas Park and Wildlife Dept. biologist, happend to be handy and helped extricate Evans from the mess, as a, by now, appreciative crowd gathered at the boat dock applauded. When it was over, the soggy owl flewer but wiser.

FISHING AT Lake Thomas came alive last weekend with excellent crappie and black bass catches. Meanwhile, Lake Spence reported a good variety of stripers, crappie and white bass catches.

Joe Froman, Big Spring, landed 11 and 14 yellow catfish on a trotline at Thomas while Lynn and Dean Carpenter of Big Spring took 16 blacks from two to 17 pounds.

Steve Moreland, Midland, landed a 21-pound, 10 ounce striped bass while fishing out of Paint Creek Marina at Lake Spence. Dennis Gardner, Midland took two bass to four pounds while fishing out of Hillside Gas and Grub No. 2. W.T. Eglin and Robert Payne of Midland hauled in 32 crappie to one pound and 22 bass to four pounds...

Full freezers for Montana

By STEVE MOORE

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — Montana's growing deer and antelope herds will mean full freezers for many hunters this year.

The hunbt is limited to persons holding special tags, who in some areas may bag up to three deer and two antelope apiece.

But Montana Department of Fish, Wildlife and Parks biologists say even a massive deer harvest won't reduce the herd by much.

Neil Martin, a state biologist, said deer and antelope "have the ability to reproduce at such a capacity as to destroy themselves" by eating all available food.

"This fall we have to take as many anterless (primarily female) deer as we can and we won't even scratch the surface," Martin said.

THE WILDLIFE agency has found that the most obvious way to increase the deer harvest — increasing the number of hunters — was unpopular with landowners.Thus, higher deer limits for fewer hunters.

"Now we're very cautious about increasing the number of hunters. We would rather have one hunter shoot three or four animals than to have three or four hunters shoot one each," Martin said.

In 1982, almost 200,000 deer tags were sold, and in some areas 90 percent of the hunters bagged their deer.

SOME RANCHERS who posted their land against hunting when deer and antelope populations plunged in the 1970s now welcome hunters. The ranchers say they want deer killed so their crops and haystacks aren't eaten.

Harold Majors, a long-time southeastern Montana rancher and chairman of the Carter County Livestock Producers Association, said he has never seen larger deer populations — not even in the early 1950s when populations also mushroomed.

"Where you used to see 15 or so on the flats, now you see 30 or 40," he said.

Majors said the reason for the huge herd is three successive mild winters — which allowed greater winter survival and larger fawn crops.

"We're going to have to harvest them down or they'll starve themselves down if we get a heavy snow," he added.

'Window of opportunity' seen in real estate

By JANE HADLEY
Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Real estate investors should be active during the next 18 months while the economic recovery lasts, a real estate expert said yesterday.

Dr. Kenneth Rosen, chairman of the real estate and urban economics program at the University of California at Berkeley, described the next 18 months as "a window of opportunity" for those involved in real estate to "restructure" their holdings.

Addressing a national conference on real estate lending of the American Bankers Association, Rosen said he thinks President Reagan will make sure the economy is performing well during the 1984 election season.

The main reason for the recovery, he indicated, is a liberalized monetary policy plus the demand for durable goods (such as housing and autos) which has built up during the past three recessionary years.

If Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker had not eased up on the money supply, his policies would have been disastrous for the world economy, he said.

HOWEVER, INTEREST rates still are at historic highs relative to inflation, running 3 to 6 percent above the rate of inflation.

Rosen predicted that short- and long-term interest rates would decline by one-half to 1 percent in the next six months, mainly because of the weakness of the economic recovery and the resultant continued liberal monetary policy.

Rosen said that today's leading growth industry is mortgage creation. Total mortgage originations will grow to $170 billion this year, up from $94 market

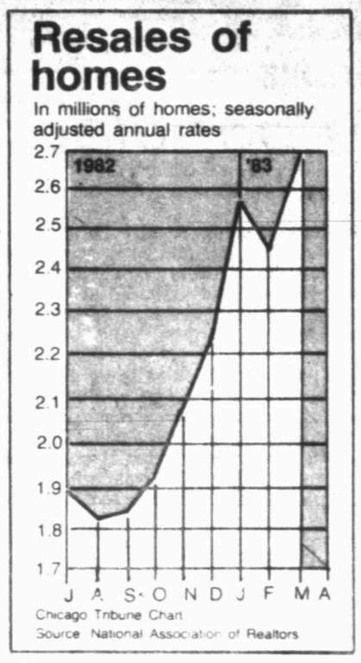
That's due mainly to the dramatic comeback in the single-family housing market.

The really strong real estate market now is in inexpensive, single-family homes for first time home buyers, he said. Developers and investors trying to peddle luxury condominium units will have to slash their prices substantially in order to move the units.

THE RESURGENCE of the start-up single-family home buyer is due to baby boom demographics, pent-up demand and a changing lifestyle toward marriage and children and away from divorce.

The divorce rate has declined in the past three years, he noted.

People are buying houses for shelter, not for investment as they did during the booming mid-1970s. He predicted that homes, which have declined in value over the last three years, will appreciate about even with the rate of inflation, or less, for the next few years.



But multi-family rental housing is a good bet for investors these days, mainly because of changes in the tax laws that allow investors to write off depreciation over 15 years. Rents are rising faster than inflation in real terms. A great deal of syndication money is going to rental housing right now, he said.

But Rosen cautioned that because the baby boom generation is maturing, investors should get out of rental housing no later than 1987. To anticipate the crash in rental housing, they should get out by 1985.

ALL IN ALL, Rosen said the resurgence of housing is accounting for half of all Gross National Product growth. Among Rosen's other opinions:

— There is a sharp slowdown in the demand for office space in major metropolitan areas, because the recession has caused companies to make big cutbacks in middle management. At the same time, huge amounts of office space are coming on line. This is "the least attractive" investment market now, Rosen said, adding that many joint venture investors may rue the day they decided to invest in office buildings.

— There will be a strong resurgence in the demand for retail space.

— Hotels are a bad bet. "Everyone and his mother is building a hotel, and there just is not that sort of demand for $200-a-night hotel rooms."

— Investors should take a look at the overall economic prospects of an area, not just the pro forma for a particular building. "Basic demand drives the market. It isn't the supply of money or the attractiveness of the project." If the economy of a city is weak, it doesn't matter how beautiful the building.

— Economic growth is beginning to shift to different areas of the economy and the country. Areas that prospered because they were engaged in mineral extraction and energy exploration are giving way to the areas which specialize in defense, electronics and retirement.

— Rosen's five-star loser city is Houston. Houston has 40 million square feet of office space being added to an existing stock of 30 million square feet. The current office vacancy rate there is over 10 percent and he predicted it is headed for 25 percent.

Meanwhile, multi-family developers are putting up apartments and condominiums by the thousands "to house all those people who are not going to be filling the office space."

Rosen said Houston has lost 100,000 jobs in the past six months and there is no reversal in sight. He added that even if the office space is filled, "the traffic could not move." They've forgotten the relationship between housing, jobs and transportation.

— Other loser cities for investors to avoid: Dallas, the state of West Virginia (an economy dependent on coal with unemployment at 25 percent), Midland and Odessa, Texas; Peoria, Ill., and Pittsburgh.

— Rosen's winners include Atlanta, top of his list; Boston; the state of Connecticut (defense); the state of Virginia; Phoenix; Rochester, N.Y.; Orlando and Tampa, Fla.; Austin, Texas; Elkhart, Ind. (center of mobile home production); Baltimore, and the state of California (defense, housing, electronics).

— Best investment of all is the Japanese yen. High interest rates have caused the American dollar to be over-valued in relation to both the yen and the German mark. Strength of the dollar is hurting this country's export market, he said. And there will be strong pressure to intervene.

Timber plan being whittled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, criticized last month as insensitive to Western timber problems, should have a plan next month to help the industry head off economic disaster, says Assistant Agriculture Secretary John Crowell.

Crowell, who oversees operations of the National Forest Service, said in an interview Wednesday he's pushing for administration adoption of a "buy-out" plan he began working on weeks ago as the solution for lumber companies now holding billions of dollars in federal timber contracts.

"We hope to have something within four weeks because there are people out there who have to know before the beginning of the operating season," Crowell said.

In February, Agriculture Secretary John Block said a plan would be ready within several weeks. But when a Senate Natural Resources subcommittee took up the issue less than two weeks ago, Crowell did not appear because no decision had been reached.

That prompted Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., and others to blast President Reagan for insensitivity to the economic plight of a region he visited only weeks earlier and pledged to help.

At issue is an economic crisis in Washington, Oregon, California and northern Idaho resulting from the large number of unprofitable contracts for national forest timber. Those states provide more than half the softwood lumber used in American home construction every year.

When the bottom dropped out of the housing market three years ago, lumber companies in the region, having bid premium prices for the right to federal timber during the frenzied days of the late 1970s building boom, were left holding contracts they could no longer afford to fulfill.

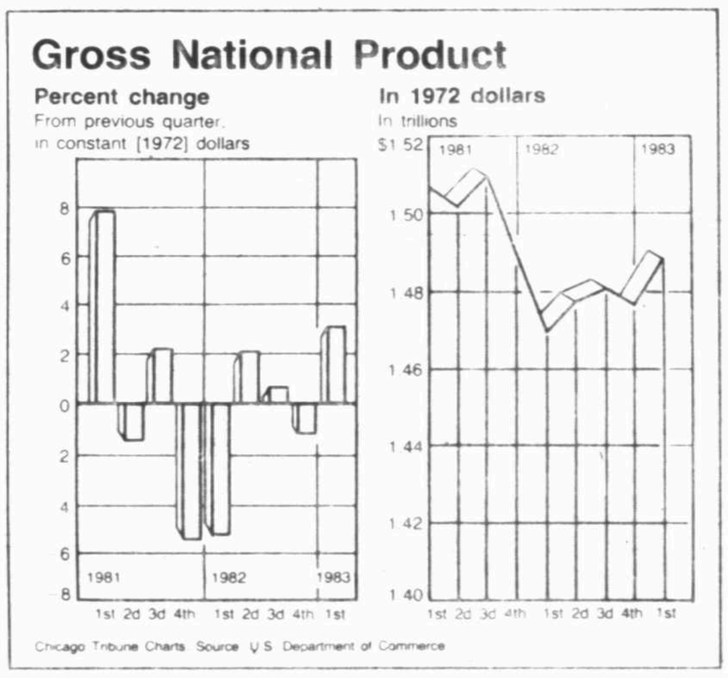
The situation has tied up as much as 16.6 billion board feet of federal timber worth more than $5 billion and is forcing many of the companies holding those high-priced contracts to the brink of bankruptcy.

Officials in and out of government acknowledge that if the companies are forced to live up to their contracts, they would be driven out of business and the government left with no revenue from the defaulted contracts.

Congress has been talking about the problem for more than a year now with legislation still pending that would simply terminate without penalty the contracts held by companies seeking that relief.

The only decision the administration has made so far is to oppose that bill, which Crowell says would relieve companies of their obligations at the expense of taxpayers.

Based on preliminary results from a massive analysis of the economic impact of the contract issue in the region, Crowell had suggested last month that the administration propose the "buy-out" plan under which companies could pay 18 percent of their original bid price to terminate their national forest contracts.



Domestic auto sales up 16 percent in April

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Sales of domestic-built cars surged nearly 16 percent in April, the industry reported Wednesday, providing the first strong evidence that auto sales may finally be picking up speed after a four-year stall.

The industry sold 576,000 cars in April, turning in the best sales performance for the month since 1979, when car buyers were temporarily rushing to buy small cars in the wake of the Iranian oil crisis. That jump in oil prices marked the beginning of what has been the worst sales slump for Detroit since the 1930s.

With the gradual economic recovery of the last few months, industry analysts have expected improvement in sales. So have the auto companies, which have begun recalling workers and increasing production. The figures released Wednesday gave the firmest evidence yet that sales are indeed expanding.

"April is the first sign of improvement," said Harvey Heinbach, an industry analyst with the Wall Street company Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc. "Sales were flat for four months, from December to March. April is really the first sign of spring, at least for the domestic manufacturers."

Sales of imported cars were up 10.3 percent in the month, with Nissan Motor Co. capturing the No.1 position among importers from the traditional leader, Toyota Motor Co. Nissan, maker of Datsun cars, sold 41,111 cars in April, compared to 39,530 for Toyota.

In a statement, Toyota blamed its 3.5 percent sales decline from a year ago on "low inventories caused by import restrictions." Nissan, however, was not hampered by the restrictions and was able to register a 44.5 percent sales gain.

For the first time, cars built by American Honda Motor Co. at its new Marysville, Ohio, plant were included in the domestic sales figures. Honda said it sold 3,227 Ohio-built cars.

The seasonally adjusted annual sales rate for domestic-made cars in April was 6.3 million, up sharply from 5.5 million in April 1982, one of the worst sales months of the prolonged slump. The rate during the first three months of 1982 hovered around 6 million.

Even though the rate reached 6.3 million in April this year, that is still well below some months during the slump when the industry used rebates, cut-rate financing and other promotions to move inventories of unsold cars.

However, analysts note that the current sales upturn comes at a time when consumer confidence and new-car buying plans are rising with the economic upturn. This should keep sales from collapsing as they have following earlier sales surges brought on by industry marketing efforts, analysts say.

Tiny engine valve may fuel U.S. methanol revolution

By Kingsbury Smith
National Editor
Hearst Newspapers

WASHINGTON — America may be on the threshold of a revolutionary breakthrough in the use of alcohol for engine fuel that could make the country independent of foreign oil supplies, reduce car pollution by 50 percent, and substantially increase mileage per gallon.

Tests are about to be conducted in California with the use of methanol, a form of alcohol, in a device originally developed for gasoline.

The device is a valve which causes gasoline to vaporize at low engine temperatures and to mix with incoming air. If it works with methanol, it could mean that alcohol would become the main source of energy for internal combusiton engines — not only for motor cars, but airplanes, industrial plants, home heating and air-conditioning.

The valve was invented by Sherwood Webster, a former broker for Merrill Lynch, and Richard Heise, a master mechanic, who control the Webster-Heise Corporation in Scottsdale, Arizona.

Transportation Department sponsored tests of the valve for use with gasoline have been underway for several months. Those tests have been postponed pending the outcome of the tests with alcohol.

HEISE IS NOW at a secret location near Los Angeles, California, installing the valve in a Chevrolet Chevette engine. It is expected it will take about ten days to determine whether the valve shows promise of working with methanol. If it does, intensive tests will be conducted over a period of two months on several cars to confirm the efficiency of the use of methanol.

Webster is confident the methanol tests with the "miracle" valve will prove positive. In a telephone interview with the Hearst Newspapers from Scottsdale, he said:

"I believe we are on a verge of total breakthrough which will enable alcohol to be used as the main source of energy fuel. Our valve will, I am confident, solve the problems that have been encountered in using methanol for engine fuel. That is the cold-start problem during the first five minutes of driving. Under 50 degrees, methanol just won't start the engine. Even over 50 degrees, the engine stalls and stumbles. For years, the big companies have been trying to figure out how to solve the problem. We just stumbled on it. We know how to vaporize the methanol to overcome the cold-start problem.

"It will be an historic breakthrough. Methanol is the cheapest, cleanest fuel there is. It will reduce pollution by 50 percent. It will increase mileage per gallon. It will make our country, and almost every other country in the world, fuel independent. It can be made out of natural gas, coal, grain, trees or garbage. It cuold revitalize our coal industry. Eventually, it could bring the price of oil down to $10 a barrel. It is the ultimate fuel for the world. Oil will become primarily a lubricant, not a source of energy."

Webster's Washington representative and methanol expert, James Olmsted, said he and Webster were contacted separately in February by two well-known California companies interested in methanol. Each company wanted methanol tested with the Webster-Heise valve. An agreement was reached to do it jointly with both companies. If the California test proves positive, additional tests will be conducted at the California Air Resources Board in Sacramento. If those tests are positive, the California companies will jointly announce the breakthrough.

AS AN INDICATION of the impact methanol could have on the cost of fuel, Olmsted pointed out that last week the wholesale price of regular gasoline was about 85 cents whereas the wholesale price of methanol was 45 cents.

"I have played around with methanol and it's very powerful stuff," he added. "It eats away several types of metal, including lead. However, both Ford and General Motors, which are experimenting with methanol-operated cars, have mastered that problem. They have found the right kind of metal,although they have not solved the cold-start problem. Dick Heise, in the tests he is conducting in California, will determine what parts of the car need to be replaced with another metal."

Olmsted said methanol that will be used in the tests with the Webster-Heise valve is made out of natural gas.

"There is a lot of excess natural gas in the world right now, including the U.S., and especially Alaska," he continued. "The next most massive source for methanol would be coal. Once mines were equipped with the proper plant and technology, coal would be cheaper for the production of methanol than natural gas."

The mild-mannerd, soft-spoken partner of the two inventors, who has experimented with methanol in his "backyard," finds it rather amusing that "3 amateurs who, up to 4 months ago, had no experience with the use of alcohol as energy fuel," appear to have solved the problem of how to use it efficiently.

TMI could restart soon

WHIPPANY, N.J. (AP) — The undamaged Three Mile Island nuclear reactor could restart this year, helping the plant's owner recover from the financial blow of the March 1979 accident, company officials say.

"We're probably looking at July if everything falls into place," William G. Kuhns, chairman of General Public Utilities Corp., told 550 stockholders Wednesday at the firm's annual meeting.

Kuhns said the planned restart of TMI Unit 1 is "the single most important step in our overall recovery."

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission must give its approval for the Middletown, Pa., plant to go back into operation. But the U.S. Supreme Court removed a major obstacle when it ruled last month that GPU won't have to ascertain the psychological effects of the restart for residents near TMI.

Great changes in job opportunities forecast

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — High technology innovations, including computers and industrial robots, and the emergence of an increasingly service-oriented economy promise to alter significantly the number and kind of employment opportunities available for the rest of this century, a federal report states.

"Work Revolution" contends that in developing new employment policies business and government leaders will have to consider a significant decline in labor force growth and the large-scale migration of people from the Northeast and Midwest toward the West and the South.

The annual report of the National Commission for Employment Policy, an independent federal agency created to advise the president and Congress on employment policies, says that some 125 million out of an estimated population of 224 million by 1990 will be in the labor force at the end of the decade.And the typical worker will be "older, better educated, and more likely to live in a rural area than today's employee."

"The problems faced by men and women working in traditional blue-collar occupations whose jobs are being eliminated or drastically altered because of automation, plant closures, or other unforeseen events will be serious," the study claimed. "For these workers, the short-term effects of change can be a personal tragedy."

Working women will continue the growth begun after World War II and youthful labor force entrants will have a larger number of blacks and Hispanics.

One theme emerging from the report is that the policies of the past will not do for an American economy responding to technological change, international competition and a remarkably different labor force.

Some of the panel's findings:

Workers 35 years and older will constitute a high proportion of the labor force of the future, and up to two-thirds of all new workers are likely to be women.

The numbers of young people entering the workplace will decrease substantially, but minority youth will constitute a larger share. By 1990 the number of 16 to 24 year-old workrs will have declined to around 24 million from a peak of 26 million in 1980.

Robots and related technologies may displace many workers in heavy industries, with the most severely affected in production activities, such as welding, painting and operating machine tools.

Ninety percent of all new jobs added to the economy in the 1970s were in service industries. White-collar jobs have increased while blue-collar have gone down. These trends are expected to continue, with 72 percent of the labor force by 1990 expected to be employed in service-producing industries.

The explosive growth of high tech industries, such as electronics, computers, and aerospace, will continue.

COMPETITIVE EDGE

The Conference Board, a global network of leaders who exchange information on management, economic and public policy issues, believes that if the U.S. is to regain its competitive edge in the world market business leaders must be prepared to make radical technological changes. Fully-automated manufacturing systems are already in use in Japan, where robots permit factories to function more efficiently. By comparison, U.S. manufacturing facilities are outmoded. A lengthy discussion about this "factory of the feature" will take place May 10 and 11 in New York City's Plaza Hotel.

INTERNATIONAL EFFORT

The United States "missed a great opportunity to show how its space programs operate for the benefit of all mankind" at last year's United Nations Conference on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space, Rep. Don Fuqua, D.-Fla., contends.

Citing a report of the Office of Technology Assessment, Fuqua claims the U.S. attended the conference with a "defensive attitude." Other difficulties which kept the U.S. from "taking maximum advantage of its excellent record of achievement and international cooperation in space", according to the study, included the absence of a long-term space policy, the lack of coordination among U.S. agencies and the lack of adequate U.S. preparation for the conference.

The OTA study said that private sector delegates and advisors who are experts could have been "better used at the conference." The primary product of the conference was a 430-page report that summarized th state of space science and technology and identified the principal needs of the developing countries for space technology.

BUSINESS MISSING OUT

How hard is it for a small business to do business with the government? It depends on whom you listen to. The Office of Procurement and Technology at the Small Business Administration contends all one must do is to contact the nearest procurement office of the Small Business Administration.

A recent report by the General Accounting Office, however, revelead that government agencies reserve $19.4 billion of the business — and jobs — for the government itself. Only about $13.2 billion is contracted out to private firms. Almost half a million government workers, most of them in the Defense Department, are employed in these in-house activities, consisting mostly of routine services and functions.

Why is so much of it put aside? James Rosa, general counsel of the American Federation of Government Employees, contends that private contractors "generally are less cost efficient. In case after case, the contractors bid lower than they will actually perform at, and this cost is passed on the government."

Rep. Andy Ireland, D-Fla., chairman of the House Subcommittee on Special Small Business Problems, argues that contracting out to private firms reaps the benefits of competitive bidding and lower prices.

Doing business with government is big business, about $32 billion a year.

ACID RAIN

Rudolph Husar, the head of the Center for Air Pollution Impact and Trend Analysis (CAPITA) at Washington University in St. Louis, thinks Congress is making a costly mistake in its current attempt to regulate acid rain. The House is currently considering a uniform cutback of sulfur dioxide emissions across a huge 30-state area in the eastern part of the country. Husar says scientists don't know enough yet about acid rain to justify drastic and costly new regulations. A study completed by Husar shows that acid rain causing pollutants do the greatest damage within a 300 to 600-mile radius of their sources. Instead, Husar would, among other things, wash coal to remove sulfur.

CENSUS ISN'T DULL

An average person may find census statistics dull reading. For businesses, however, census reasults are a treasure trove of demographic information which may translate into profit opportunity. The 1980 census, for example, showed the nation is changing in terms of family size, household formation, ethnic makeup and even social customs. Other information shows employment opportunities. If interested, you will find that many Americans are making a living in non-traditional careers these days. According to the Census, there are 23,600 male typists and 708 male dental hygienists; 2,098 women firefighters, 1,039 women pilots and navigators, and 2,751 female crane and tower operators.

WHAT'S NEW

Three separate events affecting the insurance industry are headline grabbers here these days. The House Ways and Means Committee plans to hold hearings May 10 and 11 on the taxation of life insurance. The Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee is looking into bills to end sex discrimination in insurance, with hearings set for May 19. Finally, a coalition of business, labor and women's groups wants a major investigation by the General Accounting Office (GAO), the investigative arm of Congress, into alleged insurance company "waste, mismanagement and inefficiency." Such a study was requested by Rep. James Florio, D.-N.J. The coalition, which includes the AFL-CIO, National Insurance Consumer Organization, Women's Equity Action League and others predicts savings of over $25 billion a year if waste and mismanagement is reduced.

AROUND AND ABOUT

The Consumer Product Safety Commission's ban on urea-formaldehyde insulation used in houses was based on insufficient evidence, according to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit...The Federal Trade Commission's bureaus of economics and consumer protection have recommended that the proposed rulemaking on consumer credit practices should be terminated and problems in the credit industry handled on a case-by-case basis...In October 1981 some 15,318 schools reported having microcomputers and a year later the number climbed to 24,696, a 61 percent hike...A new book, "The Human Resource Implications of Robotics" claims the coming of robots to the American workplace will not be as rapid as some have anticipated nor as devastating as others have feared. The authors feel the introduction is simply a stage in the long history of the automation of production...The U.S.Supreme Court has limited the right of the General Accounting Office to inspect cost records of private contractors operating under fixed-price, negotiated contracts with federal agencies...The Federal National Mortgage Association (FNMA) estimates home financing needs over the balance of the decade at about $1.6 trillion...The Pension Benefit Guaranty Corp. has published its semiannual list in the Federal Register of the regulations currently or soon to be under development...Civilian and military agencies in Washington purchased 17,000 rehabilitated pieces of office furniture at a cost of $1.3 million in the past year under a pilot furniture reclamation program of the General Service Administration. Similar, new furniture would have cost $2.3 million.

French actress fights 'eye of Chabrol' syndrome

ENTERTAINMENT

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

HOLLYWOOD — When French actress Stephane Audran, the star of most of her former husband Claude Chabrol's best films, made her first trip to Hollywood 11 years ago, she admitted that other directors seemed reluctant to offer her parts.

"Just because I'm Chabrol's wife they don't ask me," she said then. "I don't have time to think of the deep reasons. Perhaps they admire Claude as a director but are afraid that I'll be the eye of Chabrol on the set."

All that has changed. Audran will always be synonymous with the darkly satirical Chabrol as his ultimate bourgeoise, a symbol of cool efficiency in the face of the most intense of passions and grisliest of murders. But Audran recently has departed from this image drastically.

Probably more Americans saw her in "Brideshead Revisited" as the loyal, patrician mistress to a selfish, destructive Laurence Olivier than in all her films put together. On screen she has been hilarious yet somehow sympathetic as Philippe Noiret's flashy, unfaithful wife in Bertrand Tavernier's Oscar-nominated "Coup de Torchon" and as the late Patrick Dewaere's silly, age-conscious mother-in-law in Alain Jessua's eerie, allegorical "Paradise for All," to be released this fall.

"AND WITH MY new film, 'Scarlet Fever,' I can't go any further!" she said the other day while on a brief visit with friends. "It's a joke — I'm so ugly in that film!" She produced a snapshot taken on the set of the Claude Miller fantasy-thriller, in which she plays a blackmailer. She has been made virtually unrecognizable by fangy false teeth and drab hair that have turned her into an old hag.

"I adore extremes," said Audran. "I love it, but I have to stop it. You can become pigeonholed in these parts." Actually, she needn't worry. For Chabrol she has starred as a countess in his adaptation of Goethe's "Elective Affinities" for French TV, and will be seen as a Chanel-like couturier in Chabrol's adaptation of Simone de Beauvoir's "The Blood of Others," a chronicle of life in France during the Occupation that Chabrol is making for Canadian producer John Kemeny for theatrical release and in a longer version for cable.

Audran, in a deft transition from leading lady to character actress, may be playing hags and garish types, but in her redheaded 40s she remains as glamorous and shapely as she was in her blonde 30s. She is clearly more confident than she used to be and less reluctant to work apart from Chabrol. In the beginning, he had so impressed her with an article he had written in Cahiers du Cinema that she was eager to meet him. When she finally did, she dared to ask him for a part in "Les Cousins," and he gave it to her. It became one of the pioneer New Wave films, and they were married in 1964.

THEIR SON, Thomas, now 19 and closely resembling his mother, can be seen in "The Rascals" but has chosen to pursue a career in design. Of her breakup with Chabrol, during the filming of "Violette" in 1978, Audran spoke with regret. "I made a mistake," she said forthrightly; "I still love him."

Of Chabrol and Tavernier she says that both give great freedom to their actors — sometimes too much, she thinks. Jessua, known in America for his oddly light-hued study in madness, "Life Upside Down," was difficult to work with, not at all an actor's director. He did have rapport with the tragic Dewaere, a heroin addict who killed himself with an overdose soon after completing "Paradise for All." Even though Dewaere's problems with drugs and struggles to overcome them were known within the French film industry, his death at 34 shocked everyone, Audran says.

Not surprisingly, working with Sir Laurence Olivier was a highlight of Audran's career.

Native Texan, Wladimir Kochanski performs at 8 p.m. Friday at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave. Kochanski, who began playing the piano when he was five, is a graduate of Julliard School of Music, where he studied with Rosina Lhevinne and Eduard Steurman. His concerts run the musical gamut from baroque to modern and include classical, popular and folk music. Admission is $9.50 for adults and $5 for children. For more information call 682-5042.

Pickfair not the same without Mary

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Buddy Rogers recently attended a charity garden party at Pickfair, the legendary mansion he once shared with silent screen star Mary Pickford.

It now is owned by sports magnate Jerry Buss. Still, the Hollywood Hills house they lived in for 42 years holds many memories.

"Without Mary it wasn't the same," Rogers said. "She would always look down at the parties from her bedroom window. Later she would ask what had happened. She liked to know everything that went on."

Rogers didn't have far to go for the garden party. He lives on an adjacent lot in what he calls Pickfair Lodge. After Miss Pickford's death in 1979, he decided to sell Pickfair and build himself a smaller, more manageable house.

"I had talked to Mary about it," the 78-year-old Rogers said one afternoon in his new quarters. "I said if she left ahead of me, I thought I would build a little house where the gardener's cottage used to be. Mary saw the plans, and she made suggestions about this and that."

His "little house" grew into 10,000 square feet — "it kinda got away from me." That's about half the size of Pickfair, which Buss, owner of the Los Angeles Lakers basketball and Kings hockey teams, has long been redecorating.

Rogers shares Pickfair Lodge with his second wife, former Palm Springs Realtor Beverly Ricono, whom he married two years ago. The walls of the new house are covered with paintings and art objects from Pickfair. Dominating the living room is an oil portrait of Miss Pickford in her prime as the reigning star of silent films.

Roger's devotion to Miss Pickford's memory remains undiminished. He'll be in Washington May 10 for the dedication of the Mary Pickford Theater in the new James Madison building of the Library of Congress.

Rod Stewart's wife wants to make it on her own

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Alana Stewart is married to Rod Stewart, one of the world's richest rock stars. But she'd like to have her own money.

"I don't expect some people to understand, but it's important to me to have my own money," says Mrs. Stewart, who's up at 6 a.m. these days in order to make it to the set of "Swing Shift." She plays a gum-chewing Texan in the film that also stars Goldie Hawn and Kurt Russell.

"I've worked ever since I was 14, when I was behind the candy counter in a Texas Woolworth's, and I like being financially independent," she says.

"If I want to buy Rod a present for his birthday or Christmas, I want to pay for it myself. Otherwise, it has no meaning. He doesn't care about any of that, you understand, but I do."

Her last movie was "The Ravagers."

Chorale, choir to perform

The Midland College Chorale and Midland College Chamber Choir will perform a free concert at 8 p.m. Friday in the Allison Fine Arts Building at MC.

The evening's offering will include works by Palestrina, Hassler, Poulenc and others.

Elaine Berman will be featured as contralto soloist in Vivaldi's "Stabat Mater," and members of the Midland-Odessa Symphony will accompany the MC Chorale in the performance of Brahms' setting of Friedrich Schiller's "Nanie."

New Kaufman-Hart duo continues to collaborate

LAT Photo

Anne Kaufman Schneider, left, adopted daughter of the late George S. Kaufman, with Kitty Carlisle, widow of Moss Hart.

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Kaufman and Hart had lunch at the Watergate the other day. Hart wore a full-length mink for the occasion and Kaufman sported a fancy blouse. They traded anecdotes and swore that they're as close as sorority sisters.

A photographer dropped by to snap the pair, and the dialogue went like this:

Hart: You're upstaging me, kid.

Kaufman: I wasn't born yesterday.

Hart: Chin up!

Kaufman: I've got my chin up. You just can't tell because I'm wearing ruffles like you told me to.

Hart: Now smile!

Kaufman: If I say we're sold out this afternoon, that ought to do it.

(Broad smiles all around.)

Kaufman and Hart, in this instance, happen to be Anne Kaufman Schneider (adopted daughter of the late George S. Kaufman) and actress Kitty Carlisle Hart (widow of Moss Hart). The original Kaufman-Hart collaboration produced three of the most enduring comedies in the American theater ("You Can't Take It With You," "Once in a Lifetime" and "The Man Who Came to Dinner"), not to mention a handful of lesser works ("Merrily We Roll Along," "George Washington Slept Here," "The Fabulous Invalid"). The latter-day Kaufman-Hart watch over them like children. Holding the rights to those plays, as they do jointly, is more or less the equivalent of having a functioning oil well in the backyard.

IN AN AVERAGE YEAR, there are approximately 1,000 stock and amateur productions of "You Can't Take It With You" across the country, making it one of the most frequently performed of all American plays. Add the other Kaufman-Hart comedies, and you're talking about 2,000 productions. Tote up the royalties — $35 here, $50 there — and the annual revenue hovers around $100,000.

This, however, is not an average year. "You Can't Take It With You" is once again heading for Broadway in a loving revival directed by Ellis Rabb, and if Washington is any measure, the oil well is about to start gushing all over again. During the tryout here in the Eisenhower Theater, attendance quickly built to capacity. The final week of performances has long been sold out. With the weekly grosses running approximately $160,000, the Kaufman-Hart (or Schneider-Carlisle) team finds itself richer by $13,000 every seven days.

"We're the keepers of the flame," says Carlisle, graciously. "By that I mean that we don't allow first-class (Broadway) productions to be done unless we're sure..."

"...they're going to be first-class," interrupts Schneider, clearly the more pragmatic of the two. "We have approval over the director, the cast, the designers."

In other words, if these women say no, there's no revival.

What they've learned over the years is that to make old plays into new hits you need a little extra something. "You can't just put them on well with competent actors," says Schneider. "You've got to bring an added dimension to them. Ellis understands this so well. Take his revival of 'The Royal Family,' which my father wrote with Edna Ferber, although everyone thinks it's by Kaufman and Hart. To watch Eva Le Gallienne drift down the staircase and realize that you were seeing her life on stage as well, that was the added dimension. I think Ellis understands 'You Can't Take It With You' in a way that Moss and my father never did. He understands the sentiment in it. My father would have been afraid to lose the laughs. But it really is a play about a warm family that loves and accepts one another."

CARLISLE: "THERE was no sentiment in it originally. George and Moss never saw that. They thought of themselves as commercial Broadway playwrights. They had no idea of having written a classic. Sometimes Moss would say, a little wistfully, that Arthur Miller was viewed as the real thing, not he and George. And I'd say, 'Well, wait, you two may yet become the Beaumont and Fletcher of your time.'"

Schneider: "And they have. But they really thought they were just writing this crazy comedy about a funny family. My father was very diffident about himself. Strange and oddly diffident. Ours was an extremely disciplined household and the tolerance level was very low — nothing like the Sycamores in 'You Can't Take It With You.' I think if Moss could wake up for a moment, I think he might say, 'Kitty, you were right. It happened.' My father would be flabbergasted. He wouldn't believe that his play was selling out on a Thursday matinee in Washington. He'd want to know why there aren't other people writing."

TV oldtimers trip down memory lane

By GUS STEVENS
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — It was more like a trip in the fast lane than a trip down memory lane. There was a gathering at the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles a few days ago. Old-timers from television of 10, 20 and 30 years ago were on hand.

There was Alan Hale Jr., still wearing his skipper's cap from "Gilligan's Island" and, somehow, not looking a day older than when Gilligan (Bob Denver) was giving him fits and Ginger (Tina Louise) was throwing him curves.

And Florence Henderson of "The Brady Bunch," svelte as ever, quick with the big smile and, if anyone had asked, she seemed just as ready to deliver a song.

Jerry Mathers and Barbara Billingsley from "Leave It to Beaver" were calling out to friends, still looking like mother and son, as though 1960 were the day before yesterday.

These were supposed to be TV veterans — and they are, one and all — but each seemed to have sipped generously at the fountain of youth since last being on the air in his vintage series.

ABC arranged this reunion of 40 stars from eight different TV series out of the past. They had gathered to have fun together at a luncheon and then to play "Family Feud" for two days.

They made 10 days' worth of shows with their kissing host, Richard Dawson, with their winnings going to charities selected by each of the eight teams of five celebrity performers.

If you collected all of the Osmonds in Provo, Utah, for a massive reunion, there couldn't have been more fun than when these fortunate 40 were in a hotel together. Shouts as friends unseen for 20 years entered, laughter, kissing, old jokes and a few sad memories of those from their shows who were not so fortunate.

Hugh Beaumont, the father of "Leave It to Beaver," for example, is dead. Others could not be found by talent scouts and, some said, a few didn't want to be found.

"We went through more than 100 names trying to find 40 who could come," Jeanne De Vivier Brown, a talent searcher, said. "Three times we had it all put together and three times it fell apart. It was a difficult month's work.

"We found that Guy Williams (Prof. John Robinson of 'Lost in Space') is living in South America, where he is in business. Luckily, he was visiting his son in Los Angeles when we tried to locate him.

"I think some of these people were flattered that we remembered them. Some are very successful in other lines of work and others aren't doing much of anything."

The eight shows represented on "Family Feud" were "Leave It to Beaver" (1957-1963), "The Brady Bunch" (1969-1974), "Petticoat Junction" (1963-1970), "Your Hit Parade" (1950-1974), "Batman" (1966-1968), "Gilligan's Island" (1964-1967), "Lost in Space" (1965-1968) and "Hawaiian Eye" (1959-1963).

'The Cradle Will Rock' at reunion of actors

NEW YORK (AP) — It will be something of a reunion when the Acting Company opens "The Cradle Will Rock" at The American Place Theater May 9.

The controversial musical satire that takes place during the Depression is directed by John Houseman.

'A Night with Lou Reed' first full-length RCA video disk

NEW YORK (AP) — Lou Reed, who helped lead rock 'n' roll to punk, stars in RCA's first original full-length video disc.

"A Night With Lou Reed" was taped live at the Bottom Line in New York and features classics from his days as lead singer of the Velvet Underground, songs from his new album.

OC Dance Company to perform Friday

ODESSA — The Odessa College Dance Company and OC dance classes will perform "An Evening of Dance" at 7:30 p.m. Friday in the OC Main Auditorium.

The program will feature choreography by Pat Hodges, OC dance instructor, and her students. Music from "All That Jazz" and "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" will be included in the program.

Admission is $1. OC students, faculty and staff will be admitted free.

Mom trying to locate son who's in hiding with dad

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Donna Ruffalo has been trying to get her son back ever since he and his father — a convicted felon turned mob informant — vanished in the Federal Witness Protection Program 4½ years ago.

She says she loves and misses the 13-year-old boy.

But the government says she never really showed much interest in the child before he went into hiding and that she wants to locate him so the Kansas City underworld can get to her ex-husband, Michael Ruffalo, to "square things up."

"They're not exactly the Waltons," said assistant U.S. Attorney Mark J. Zimmermann, reflecting on one of the most complicated custody cases to arise from the witness protection program.

Mrs. Ruffalo said that the government has "dreamed up" its allegation.

"I love my boy and want him back," she said. "That's all there is to it."

Mrs. Ruffalo used to work at a Kansas City tavern where federal authorities say mobsters hang out and have occasionally killed each other. In a sworn affidavit filed in court, Ruffalo said: "My wife always associated with members of organized crime in the Kansas City area."

The last time Mrs. Ruffalo saw her son, Michael Ruffalo Jr., was when she dropped him off at his father's apartment one afternoon in November 1978. She didn't hear from him until the phone rang one day earlier this year.

"It was emotional," she said. "Mikey said he's afraid. But he misses me and wants to see me. They don't know all that's been going on. The government hasn't told them a thing."

Since that first contact, Mrs. Ruffalo, 34, has received a few more calls, placed usually from an unspecified marshal's office. She said that never once did she ask her son or ex-husband where they're living. "I don't want to know at this point," she said. "It wouldn't be safe."

When the Ruffalos were divorced in 1972, Mrs. Ruffalo was given custody of Mike, their only child. But in March 1975, under an agreement between the Ruffalos, responsibility for the boy was given to his father.

Ruffalo has been identified by authorities as a former organized crime figure who became an informant for the FBI and provided grand jury and trial testimony against underworld figures.

In 1978 it was decided that Ruffalo's life was in danger, and he entered the Witness Protection Program. He took Mike with him.

"I wasn't even asked about it," Mrs. Ruffalo said. "Even after they were gone, I had to find out myself the government had them."

At Ruffalo's request, authorities refused to tell Mrs. Ruffalo where he and Mike were living.

She took her case to the Jackson County Circuit Court, and in 1979 was given "full care and custody" of the boy. But Ruffalo didn't turn him over.

The state court issued a contempt citation against Ruffalo and a warrant for his arrest. But the federal government said Ruffalo was not under its control and refused to divulge his whereabouts.

Mrs. Ruffalo filed suit in federal court in July 1980. U.S. District Judge Howard Sachs ruled the federal government did not have to produce the boy because there were "insufficient facts" to prove his father was under government control. Contending that custody disputes are a matter for the state court, he also refused to order Ruffalo to give the boy back.

Mrs. Ruffalo appealed. On March 17 the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis ruled that her constitutional right to see her son had been violated. And contrary to what Sachs said, the appeals judges decided that, since the federal government did play a role in Ruffalo's taking the boy, it should, under court order, return him.

"We believe that some form of equitable relief can be fashioned that will vindicate Donna's rights as a mother without unreasonably endangering her son and her former husband," the court said. "Michael (Sr.) can even be relocated a second time if necessary."

George Kannar, an American Civil Liberties Union attorney representing Mrs. Ruffalo, praised the ruling.

"The court is saying the government may not, in the pursuit of outlaws, become an outlaw itself," Kannar said.

But the judges stopped short of ordering Mike back to his mother or giving her access to him. Sachs was left to make a decision on that matter.

Service watches bills

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Sixty-two years after his grandfather covered the constitutional convention that helped Arizona become a state, Ned Creighton's news service is still keeping a jaundiced eye on lawmakers and bureaucrats here.

It's a hole-in-the-wall operation compared to giants in the field, but Creighton's Arizona News Service's eight owners and employees hold their own, providing a special kind of legislative update to clients in the know.

Those clients include business lobbyists, government agencies and Commerce Clearing House, which employs 5,500 workers to track legislation in 50 states and foreign countries including much of Europe, Papua and New Guinea.

"Arizona News Service does what anybody can do, but for a lot of people it's cheaper to hire me," Creighton said. "This is all information that is public record. All I'm selling is convenience."

There are similar services in most or all of the 50 states, although Arizona's is believed to be the oldest. New Mexico alone has three, while New York's main reporting services publishes three thick paperbound volumes a week just to keep up with the roughly 20,000 bills filed each year by New York's legislature.

The 900 bills that Arizona lawmakers file in an average year are easier to track, but "strike-all" amendments that change the complete bill and lesser amendments tacked on by any of two dozen committees make it a daily chore.

Clients can buy any level of service they wish, from twice-daily reports in the session's hectic closing weeks to the weekly Arizona Capitol Times, which bestows on Creighton the rank of newspaper publisher.

Phoenix-area clients get copies of bills, amendments and status reports the same day. Out-of-town clients receive theirs in the mail.

Creighton says he doesn't feel threatened by giants like the Chicago-based Commerce Clearing House, which has started a computer bank to supplement its paper reports.

"No computer in the world is faster than a record book," he said, flipping through a hardbound ledger similar to those used by Arizona's first state legislature. Each bill is assigned a page, and every action affecting that bill is entered there in longhand, despite Creighton's nearby computer.

The computer is used mostly to alphabetize and sort in numerical order, before copy is sent to the printer or run off on an office duplicator that swallows a mile of paper a day.

Still, there's been some progress since 1910, when the first Ned Creighton set up shop after arriving in Phoenix 17 years earlier on a cattle car.

California: Land of uneasy Earth

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

LOS ANGELES — Compared with earthquakes that can — and will — shake California, the tremor that shattered the small San Joaquin valley town of Coalinga was hardly a giant. The state's uneasy Earth holds jolts a hundred times greater.

Monday's earthquake, in an unexpected area and on a fault that was undetected, demonstrates another truism of California geology: Few places are risk-free.

Charles Richter, a retired California Institute of Technology seismologist who devised the most widely used scale of earthquake magnitude, has said he's often asked where a resident of California can go to avoid the threat of earthquakes.

His answer: "Nowhere.... There is almost no part of California where one might not expect a good-sized earthquake. The eventual occurence of a serious earthquake is about as near to a certainty as anything we have to deal with."

The quake, centered five miles from Coalinga, measured about 6.5 on the Richter scale, according to the University of California-Berkeley.

The Richter scale measures ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Each numerical increase on the scale represents a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 7.5 earthquake is 10 times stronger than a 6.5 tremor, and many scientists believe the energy release increases by much more than tenfold.

California has felt the Earth's real fury in the past. The infamous San Francisco earthquake of 1906 had an estimated magnitude of 8.3. It killed 500 people and destroyed much of the city.

Southern California suffered a quake of about the same intensity in 1857, when Los Angeles was a small town. The ground shook so hard and long some residents became seasick.

Scientists uniformly agree those quakes, each nearly 100 times the intensity of the Coalinga disaster, will be repeated someday.

The damage wrought by a quake stems from a combination of magnitude and location — plus the quality of the buildings that are being shaken.

"If (Monday's quake) had been another 10 miles away, I suspect the damage would have been much less," said seismologist Clarence Allen of Caltech. The area around Coalinga is largely deserted.

Quakes greater than magnitude 6 occur once or twice a year somewhere in California, said Jerry Eaton of the U.S. Geological Survey in Menlo Park. As least they have been hitting that often since earthquake activity inexplicably increased throughout the state about five years ago. Before that, residents had enjoyed nearly three decades of unusual quiet.

Most of the large shakers rock unpopulated areas and cause little damage. Four hit the Mammoth Lakes area in May 1980 without great damage. But a 6.6 near El Centro in Southern California caused millions of dollars in damage in October 1979.

And in a metropolitan area such as Los Angeles or San Francisco, that size quake could be a disaster. The Sylmar quake of Feb. 9, 1971, killed 65 people and caused a half-billion dollar damage in the San Fernando Valley of Los Angeles County.

After the Sylmar disaster, building codes were tightened beyond the 1934 strictures enacted after a 1933 quake in Long Beach killed 102 people. That's no guarantee of safety, of course. The El Centro tremor wrecked a new county building that met the criteria and had been billed as earthquake safe.

But the biggest risk is probably the thousands of unreinforced brick and masonry buildings built before 1934. Their fragility was amply demonstrated Monday in Coalinga as aging downtown buildings collapsed into piles of loose bricks.

The culprit in California's shaky existence is the San Andreas Fault, a 600-mile rip in the Earth's fabric that winds like a serpent from the southern deserts to the rocky northern coast.

It was the San Andreas that gutted San Francisco in 1906 and rattled Southern California 49 years earlier. But even when the great fault sits still, the pressures it produces are the root of most earthquakes around the state, including almost certainly Monday's tremor.

The San Andreas is the boundary between two great chunks of the Earth's surface — giant plates that ride on an underground sea of part-lymolten rock. One plate carries the United States, the other the Pacific Ocean and a long sliver of the West Coast. Los Angeles sits on that sliver.

As the plates move past each other — Los Angeles gets an inch or two closer to San Francisco ever year — their rough edges, like two sandpaper blocks, are stuck together by friction.

The plates keep moving but the rims are stationary.

San Francisco Bay's other city preparing to shine its own light

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The other big city on San Francisco Bay is getting tired of living in a public relations shadow. So it plans to perk up its image with a new slogan: "Oakland — the bright side of the Bay."

Oakland has hired an advertising agency to promote "all the positive things" the city has to offer, including a climate that is usually sunnier and less foggy than San Francisco.

Glen Putnam, an executive with the advertising agency hired to lead the ad campaign, said Monday that "the word 'bright' means a lot more than just sunshine." It also refers to Oakland's booming business climate, he said.

But not everyone is pleased by the new slogan.

Wilson Riles Jr., a black member of the City Council, says he'd like to see the "multi-ethnicity" of the city highlighted in the campaign, "but the business community seems to want to play down that aspect of the city."

County building 'for the birds'

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Westchester County officials may deny it, but the county office building is going to the birds.

The unwelcome visitors hang out on ledges of the building, and since a hot spell last week they've been able to wander into offices through open windows, sitting in on government meetings and generally leaving unwelcome souvenirs.

"The problem is that the air conditioning in the building doesn't go on until next week," Claire Palermo, spokeswoman for County Executive Andrew O'Rourke, said Tuesday. "And because it's warm, people are keeping their windows open."

Bed gives woman chance to walk again

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Teresa Bell's late night motorcycle ride April 19 ended at the hospital on an operating table.

She doesn't remember much about the two-wheel ride. She does remember waking up after surgery. Her legs wouldn't move.

But Teresa Bell has made leaps and bounds toward recovery without leaving her hospital bed.

After fracturing her back in a motorcycle accident, Teresa's chances for walking again were slim.

But with surgery and some fast thinking on the part of Dr. William McGavran III, the neurosurgeon says Teresa "is an excellent candidate for rehabilitation."

"I think she'll walk," McGavran added. "It's phenomenal — only one in 10,000 walk with this type of (spinal) injury."

For the last two weeks, Teresa ate, slept and watched television in a reclining position. Not unusual for a patient who recently underwent back surgery.

But while the 28-year-old mother of three laid on her hospital bed, it rocked — from side-to-side.

Teresa was the first patient at Midland Memorial Hospital to use the rocking bed — a Roto Rest Kinetic Treatment Table.

Her body, flanked by thick, vinyl pads, was snuggled within borders on the bed. Supports immobilized her head.

Her arms were the only limbs she could lift from the padded compartment. Then she began to wiggle a toe; then her foot.

"I worked real hard. Now, I don't know if you can see, but look," she said, as she arched her foot.

While she laid flat, the bed slowly tipped to a 62-degree angle, returning to the horizontal position. Then it leaned toward the other side, creating a half-circle — continuously.

During the past two weeks, the bed has tottered 20 hours out of 24, ceasing for no more than a half-hour for nursing care and bathing.

"I felt like I was hanging on for dear life at first," she said demonstrating how she clung to the head supports.

"I was afraid of falling out. I was literally hanging on, now I let my hands relax.

Rocking bed

Peggy Cook watches over her daughter, Teresa Bell, who is recovering quicker from a motorcycle accident with this new "rocking" bed at Midland Memorial Hospital. Theresa, who fractured her back in the accident, is expected to sit up today and will soon leave MMH for two months of hospitalized rehabilitation.

Usually, I've got to make a couple of spins before I'm adjusted," she said, giggling as the bed teetered.

"I don't know why, but I've been in a real good mood about the whole thing. The doctor said my chances were slim for walking. But this bed is supposed to help. I don't think that I'm not going to walk.

"I've heard from several people that I'm in the very best of hands with Dr. McGavran. I've had a good experience (at the hospital). Everybody has been so nice and extra careful moving me."

Teresa said that before the interview, her mother, Peggy Cook, and the nurses "hung my hair down through the trap door on the bottom of the bed to wash it.

"There's trap doors all over the place."

On Tuesday Teresa was fitted for a cast. Today, she is in a plastic "jacket" body cast. McGavran said she'll be sitting up sometime this afternoon. Teresa will be leaving soon for two months of hospitalized rehabilitation.

McGavran said he first saw this type of bed in the mid-1970s. Because he sees patients who could benefit from this bed, McGavran requested that MMH purchase one.

The request was being considered by a hospital committee when Teresa was rushed through the emergency room doors. McGavran knew the bed would help.

Hospital officials began making phone calls. A company in San Antonio delivered the $24,000 bed within 24 hours. MMH is leasing the bed and it will be available for other patients.

"The bed has kept her in superb physical condition to allow earlier recovery," McGavran said. "I estimate without the bed we would be behind about a month and she could have developed complications."

These complications include pneumonia, skin ulcerations, blood clots in the legs and muscle atrophy.

"This one bed either stops these complications or promotes healing," McGavran said.

"The bed gives a continuous side-to-side rocking motion. It mobilizes (lung) secretion and fluids, rotates pressure so bed sores don't occur and can heal if they do, massages the body's muscles to maintain tone and promotes circulation.

According to McGavran, the bed also can be used by patients of the internist, orthopedic surgeon and plastic surgeon.

"Sitting in bed is boring," he said. "This bed relieves that boredom. It can be used as an operating table or used for traction. The mobile parts (trap doors) allow easy, efficient nursing care. The patient is gently, but securely in the bed and not held down by straps. I'm very excited about it."

Affiliation provides comprehensive therapy

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

ODESSA — An affiliation that has been in effect for "a number of years" was formalized during a press conference at the Permian Basin Rehabilitation Center here Wednesday morning.

The agreement between the 30-year-old PBRC and Warm Springs Rehabilitation Hospital of Gonzales will provide a comprehensive program for children and adults in need of rehabilitative therapy, according to John Clarke, PBRC executive director.

PBRC, an out-patient center, has referred patients to the in-patient facility, actually located in Ottine between Gonzales and Luling about 65 miles east of San Antonio and 55 miles south of Austin, for 24-hour care in the past, Clarke said.

Formal signing of the affiliation was done to increase public awareness of the comprehensive services offered.

"I feel we're very privileged to be associated with Permian Basin (Rehabilitation Center)," David E. Gumper, Warm Springs administrator, said, citing the importance of "using a variety of therapies" and "working as a team."

Clarke explained that while hospitals such as Midland Memorial Hospital and Odessa Medical Center provide acute care, or "life-saving" services, many patients, once their conditions are stabilized, still need therapy.

Those who need 24-hour, or "comprehensive, in-patient care," may receive it from Warm Springs, Clarke said. Once rehabilitated to an extent where around-the-clock assistance is unneccessary, the patient can receive "out-patient" services two or three times a week at PBRC.

Clarke estimated about a dozen patients a year are referred from PBRC to Warm Springs for more extensive care. Presently, two patients referred by PBRC are receiving treatment at Warm Springs.

"People who need this type of care can ask for it and be able to take advantage of it," said Lura Sivalls, president of the PBRC board of directors.

According to Gumper, a building at Warm Springs was named after Midland because of the generous contributions received from Midlanders.

"We feel it's our way of paying back the community for support for the, in our case, last 40 years," he said. "The people out here have been very generous to continue to support us. And people may need our services that they help continue to provide."

According to literature received from Warm Springs, the staff of 180 provides physical, occupational, recreational, respiratory and psychological therapy for victims of paralytic strokes, spinal cord or head injuries, birth defects and crippling diseases.

Speech and hearing, social and orthotics services also are available. In addition, a drivers' education program for patients who need to learn or re-learn driving skills is offered.

Clark pointed out the Permian Basin does not have a comprehensive, 24-hour facility. Because many of the services offered at PBRC are similar, there "is no need to duplicate services."

Although he doesn't expect the number of referrals to "change drastically" with the formalization of the affiliation, Clarke said he does hope signing the agreement will make the community more aware of available services.

"Most of the patients we receive are not in need of comprehensive care," Clarke said. "But sometimes there are those that need in-patient treatment."

Midland to get jobs bill funds

By VINCE GIORGI

Midland will be getting a $214,000 piece of a $4.6 billion emergency jobs bill pie, according to an April announcement by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Midland will be one of nearly 50 Texas cities to receive money as part of an emergency jobs bill appropriation recently signed by President Reagan.

Mark Thielke, public affairs officer for HUD in Fort Worth, said 49 Texas cities and two urban counties will split $44,291,000 from the emergency appropriation.

The jobs bill anted $4.6 billion to provide assistance for indigent and jobless persons. Thielke said $1 billion of the money will be distributed by HUD.

Thielke said the money is targeted for creating jobs and sustaining projects. He said each award recipient must submit its proposal for using the money to HUD for final approval.

Samuel R. Pierce, HUD Secretary, said the money was appropriated because "we want to help men and women who may be in need of employment, and we think cities can do this by hastening planned construction or spurring economic development with these CDBG funds."

Susan Howell, Midland's community development coordinator, said it is unclear how the Midland City Council will choose to spend its portion of the emergency appropriation.

"But the emphasis, naturally, is on jobs — trying to stimulate jobs," Ms. Howell said.

She said a public hearing is scheduled for June 9, when Midland citizens may offer their suggestions on how the city should spend the $214,000.

Thielke said the emergency funding is awarded using the same formula as that followed to distribute Community Development Block Grant funds, with an adjustment to take into account current and long-term unemployment rates.

Odessa, which has a greater unemployment rate than Midland, will receive $341,000 of the jobs money, Thielke said.

Thielke said the one-time, emergency jobs appropriation is distinct from the CDBG funds awarded annually. Midland received $949,000 in CDBG funds for 1982-83, and is seeking $818,000 for 1983-84.

Journalists turn 'non-story' into a story

By PATRICK DEAREN

ANDREWS — Tuesday broke clear and crisp in this city of 11,000 on the pumpjack-dotted grasslands. Andrews County Judge Les Brown left home and headed for the downtown courthouse.

"I walked into the office about 8:15 determined to have a real good day and the damned telephone was ringing off the wall," he said.

Reporters. Swamping the phonelines of the courthouse, city administration building, chamber of commerce, weekly newspaper. Asking questions about nuclear wastes, salt domes, America's energy future.

"It was the most excitement around here since I've been in office," said Brown.

He spent the day "ducking and dodging" reporters, trying to catch his breath and find out what in the heck was going on.

Then he discovered it.

There it was, nestled at the bottom of the front page in Tuesday's Dallas Morning News.

Two quotes, eight paragraphs, 12 sentences, 258 words.

And the headline: "Andrews not averse to nuclear dump site."

The story by News Staff Writer David Hanners informed the world that "if federal energy officials would like to avoid the headache of persuading angry Panhandle residents to accept a nuclear-waste dump in their back yard, there's something they should know. Andrews, Texas, wouldn't mind having it."

The story went on to say that the City of Andrews "tried in vain" three years ago to get the U.S. Department of Energy to build the nation's first high-level radioactive waste repository nearby, and that Andrews County News editor James Roberts had written in an April column that the county should ask the Department to build the dump in the underlying salt domes.

"Nowhere in that column," Roberts told one of the multitudes of journalists who descended upon Andrews in person or via telephone Tuesday, "did I say anything about Andrews wanting a nuclear-waste disposal site or that they should ask the Department of Energy to build a nuclear-waste dump in the salt domes beneath the county. (The Dallas reporter) is wrong on that."

But the damage already had been done — and few Andrews officials found a moment of peace the rest of the day.

"It's something that was just blown way out of proportion and (journalists) just jumped on it," said Brown. "There wasn't and there isn't any kind of organized plan by the county government, city government, chamber of commerce or anybody else seeking a nuclear disposal site or dump."

"The city," confirmed Andrews City Manager Len Wilson, "never has been involved in this or studied this at all."

As for the article by Roberts which precipitated the Morning News story — which in turn unleashed a swarm of journalists who were to write, in effect, "there's no story here" — Brown had a confession.

"I didn't even read the column," he said.

24 homes being worked on under program

Midland's housing rehabilitation program continues running strong after the Midland Housing Authority refurbished 94 homes in its 1981-82 work and may complete another 45 this year.

At its monthly meeting in City Hall Council Chambers Wednesday, the Housing Authority board of commissioners heard from Horace Berry, rehabilitation inspector, that 24 homes are under construction since the 1982-83 program began in March.

Berry said the homes are expected to cost $137,415.10 of the $250,000 in Community Development Block Grant money appropriated for the program. Berry said that at the present rate, about 20 more houses may be rehabilitated before the funds are depleted.

Susan Howell, community development coordinator for the city, told the commissioners that a representative from the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) visited the city recently and was very pleased with the program.

Ms. Howell said the HUD employee expected Midland to have rehabilitated a few dozen homes under the 1981-82 program. She said the man was surprised to hear that 94 homes were repaired with $519,425.98.

Gloria Ellis, executive director of the Human Relations Council, said that although the application process was stopped for this year after the HRC received 92 applications, additional requests continue to filter in.

Ms. Ellis said a waiting list for 1983-84 program already contains about 10-12 names.

The commission also approved an operating budget for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1984.

Fred Kester, Housing Authority secretary, said the budget estimates call for anticipated revenue of $121,110 and anticipated expenses of $119,870.

Kester said that for the fiscal year ending June 30, revenues should total about $116,260 and expenses about $110,390. He said the extra revenue will be held in reserve to handle future expenses.

Finally, the commission agreed to conduct its annual meeting June 1 at the Hillcrest Manor community room. Hillcrest Manor is an apartment complex for low-income elderly and/or handicapped persons. It is managed by the Housing Authority.

AUSTIN (AP) — A falcon who can fly as fast as 275 mph perched almost motionless on a woman's gloved hand as a symbol of wildlife that would benefit from a bill in the Legislature.

Members of the Senate Natural Resources Committee questioned Jane Lyons about the rare peregrine falcon Wednesday and seemed amazed when she told of its speed in the air.

Burial was in Rest Haven Memorial Park, directed by Lyons Funeral Home.

He died April 29 at his home here.

Cunningham was born March 5, 1912, in Honey Grove. He and his wife moved to Rockwell in 1959. He owned and operated Cunningham's Barber Shop. He contributed to Cal Farley's Boys Ranch and Rockwall Young Men's Christian Association.

Other survivors include three children, four sisters and five grandchildren.

Odessa man jailed in drug bust

MONAHANS — An Odessa man has been arrested in connection with a narcotics investigation that resulted in the confiscation of five ounces of cocaine at a Monahans service station Tuesday.

Jailed under $100,000 bond set Wednesday by Monahans Justice of the Peace L.A. Wester was 22-year-old James Costillo of Odessa.

He was charged with delivery of cocaine after law enforcement officers obtained a search warrant for the Gulf Service Station at 1911 S. Stockton St. in Monahans and seized five ounces of cocaine and a stolen vehicle, according to Odessa police Lt. Rusty Baker, who said he did not know the drug's street value.

The investigation, which is continuing, resulted from an informant's tip to Odessa police Monday said Baker.

Bicyclist injured when he was hit by vehicle

ODESSA — An elderly Odessa man was critically injured when the bicycle he was riding was struck by a vehicle near here sometime late Wednesday night or early this morning.

In critical condition at Medical Center Hospital suffering from head and internal injuries was 61-year-old Charles Clifford Vann of Route 5, Odessa.

According to the Department of Public Safety, Vann was riding his bicycle east on the north service road of Interstate 20 when he was hit by an unidentified westbound vehicle that left the scene. It was not known what time the accident occurred.

Loop costs to be shared

Midland city and county officials on Wednesday agreed to share costs in pipeline and utility adjustments in rounding out the final link of Loop 250's construction.

The loop forms a northern route around Midland and connects to the under-construction Texas Highway 191, a 13-mile route to Odessa. A 10-mile segment of Loop 250 from Lamesa Road near Cubs Stadium, westwardly across north Midland and then southwardly to Interstate 20 is completed and is bearing traffic.

To be constructed is a six-mile loop segment from Lamesa Road eastwardly and then southwardly to U.S. Highway 80.

Midland County is to bear $490,950 in utility-pipeline adjustments along that link, and the city of Midland is to pay $297,000 of the cost.

In the joint meeting of the Midland City Council and Midland County Commissioners' Court, the officials agreed to hire C.E. Hogue & Associates to appraise five drainage easements of 1.2 to 1.5 acres each, which the city and county are to buy along that six-mile segment. Of the five easements, four fall under the county's jurisdiction and one is within the city limits.

County Commissioner Durward Wright mentioned that an owner of one of the tracts "may donate" the land if, on the advice of his tax consultant, he determines that it is "better to give than to receive."

School superintendent's resignation accepted

MAGNOLIA (AP) — The board of Magnolia schools has accepted the resignation of the superintendent who quit to make room for new leadership in this town where a budget-mandated end to football, band and other activities triggered parent protest and student walkouts.

Les Tucker said he has resigned effective June 30 because there needed to be "some new leadership in here to help the board get these matters settled."

The school board, which voted 4-3 two weeks ago to end extracurricular activities to meet the budget restrictions of a tax limitation vote, will meet again today to consider a plan to restore some of the activities.

Board members met in a closed meeting that lasted for four hours and extended into the early morning hours of Tuesday in deciding to accept the resignation.

A crowd of about 70 waited outside until board president Nick Bogner emerged to make the announcement.

Tucker had been a central figure in a movement by a citizens group to hold down spending in the district.

A school tax limitation vote April 2 was approved by a 2-1 margin and trimmed about $1 million out of the district's $8.2 million budget for next year. Even with the limitation, the school budget would be $1 million higher than this year.

Elimination of the activities that included football, band and choir, triggered protests and petitions. Parents picketed the school buildings. Thirty junior high school students walked out of class and were suspended for up to six days.

Supporters of the tax limitation argued that instead of eliminating extracurricular activities there are cuts that could be made in administration costs and Tucker opposed such reductions.

Fancy chairs mistakenly called 'Hitchcock'

By JAMES G. McCOLLAM
Copley News Service

Q: This chair is marked, "L. Hitchcock, Hitchcockville, Conn., Warranted."

Can you tell me when it was made and how much it is worth? It is painted black and decorated in various shades of gold.

A: In the early 19th century, so-called Fancy Chairs became very popular. Lambert Hitchcock was the best-known maker of these Fancy Chairs. Dealers and collectors have mistakenly had a tendency to call them all Hitchcock chairs.

Your chair is a genuine Hitchcock and would be worth from $275 to $325 with the original stenciled decoration in good condition.

Q: This table has a solid cherry folding top and a crotch mahogany base. When the top is opened, it rotates and forms a 36-inch square. It has been in our family for over 100 years.

What can you tell me about it?

A: This is an Empire card table; it was made in the second quarter of the 19th century and should be worth about $500 or $600. It is a very desirable antique.

Q: My small ceramic vase is decorated with crocuses and the bottom is marked. Can you tell me when it was made, by whom and its value? — A.M.P., South Bend, Ind.

A: This is a Rookwood vase made in 1901 and decorated by Charles Schmidt. The monogram was adopted in 1886 and each subsequent year a flame was added above until 1900. Then a Roman numeral was added: I for 1901, II for 1902, etc.

Rookwood was made in Cincinnati until 1960. Your vase would sell for about $275.

Send your questions about antiques with picture(s), a detailed description, stamped, self-addressed envelope, and $1 per item to James G. McCollam, 2006 Beverly Place, South Bend, Ind. 46616. All questions will be answered but published pictures cannot be returned.

AT WIT'S END

Early starters a fad

By ERMA BOMBECK

Knowing that I consider computers a fad like the hula hoop and pet rocks, a reader sent me the latest tracking on their flight through civilization.

There is now such a thing called talking computers that will teach five-year-olds how to write before they can read and how to type before they can spell.

Big deal! I did that when I was three and I'm still doing it. Frankly, I've always had misgivings about kids who achieve early and out of their time warp. Like the babies who can swim at six months, but have to have someone drop them into the pool. And what about the nursery school kids who can win chess tournaments but can't celebrate it with a can of gusto at the nearest bar? I tell you, it's unnatural.

Not only that, as an adult, I can tell you it's frustrating to possess skills you never use. I have a lot of them that I've never had a call for.

Last year, I finally learned how to pronounce Dom Perignon. Biggest waste of time in the world. At $46 a bottle, do you have any idea how many times I've used it?

As soon as the phones came out that had us dialing direct, I went crazy educating myself on how to dial international calls direct. I could dial Tokyo in 10 seconds flat. That's the good news. The bad news is I don't know anyone in Tokyo to call.

I'll tell you another talent that has always been dormant. I can find the end of the elastic that has broken around the band in underwear. My fingers are so small, I can attach a safety pin to it and thread it around until I catch it at the end and secure it. No one knows this. I can't even tell someone about it, let alone show them.

According to the story, children will spend about 15 minutes a day with a $3600 computer. They will perfect handwriting skills using workbooks that also emphasize writing because as someone observed, children are better at writing their thoughts than they are at understanding the written thoughts of others.

My husband said he wouldn't be surprised to see a three-year-old turn up on the Carson show touting her autobiography.

I told him my concern is that by the time they're old enough to talk they'll have nothing to say.

"That doesn't bother me," he said. "By then, they'll be adults and no one will notice."

Woman teaches belief for 48 years

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Virginia Scofield was a high school student when she met Mother Abbie Loveland Tuller, a veteran educator who had founded the first teaching order in the Episcopal Church.

That friendship introduced Mother Virginia to the religious life she has embraced for the past 48 years.

The friendship also led Mother Virginia, 74, to make her home here 26 years ago in a place where she continues Mother Tuller's dream of teaching the children of God.

"She was my mentor," Mother Virginia said. "She was a remarkable woman."

Mother Tuller founded the Order of the Teachers of the Children of God in 1924. Three schools bear her name; one here, one in Sag Harbor, N.Y., and another in Fairfield, Conn.

The women came west in 1956 after doctors told Mother Tuller that she had only six months to live. They bought a ranch house surrounded by desert, and it became their home.

"She wasn't the kind of person to do nothing," Mother Virginia recalled. "She said, 'If I'm going to stay here, I've got to do something.' And she did her work for 16 years until her death in 1972."

That "something" Mother Tuller created flourishes in a small religious community in Tucson.

Tuller School has an enrollment of 145, with grades ranging from preschool to college preparatory. Eight nuns and eight lay teachers make up the staff, which gears its teaching to the child's individual needs.

"It's a small school and a small amount of the world, but if everyone tried to do more of this, perhaps you could start changing some of the bitterness and harshness that goes on in the world," Mother Virginia said.

"I was always more or less interested in the church, and I've always been interested in children. God was good to lead me into this life — being able to put the two things together — children and the religious life," she said.

Her beliefs include adherence to many of the traditions being discarded by the members of other orders, such as maintaining a distance from the world beyond the convent.

"You get a very good perspective on things by not being too mixed up in them," she said.

"With so much trouble in the world and so much hardship, I think the religious life is a place where you can look at some of the sadness in the world through the eyes of God and with perfect faith."

DEAR ABBY

Manners give mother food for thought

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Henry (not his real name) and I have a fairly good marriage (14 years), but we don't always see eye to eye when it comes to disciplining our only child, Dougie, who is 8.

Example: At dinner last night Dougie started talking with his mouth full, so I corrected him. Then he belched (loudly), so I said, "You're supposed to say, 'Excuse me.'"

He ignored me. Then he turned to his father and asked, "Do I have to, Dad?" Henry replied, "No, you don't. You can eat any way you please at home as long as you remember your manners when you're eating in a restaurant or in someone else's home." Then Henry said to me, "I wish you'd lay off the kid. You're always picking on him for something."

I don't like to quarrel in front of our son, but I wish you'd comment on this in your column, and I'll serve it to my husband for breakfast. – SILENT BUT SEETHING

DEAR SILENT: It's possible to disagree with your husband without being disagreeable. It would have been appropriate to tell him that good manners should be practiced at home in order to be remembered elsewhere.

But there's something else going on in your "fairly good marriage" that's at least as important as manners. Your son is using the "divide and conquer" technique.

Don't let him get away with it. You and Henry could profit by a short course in parenting.

DEAR ABBY: A very interesting point was raised in the letter signed "Virgo on the Cape." (Virgo wanted to keep her ex-mother-in-law's family silver that had been given to her and her husband when they were married.)

Since it had been in her husband's family for several generations, I hope she had the decency to return it.

I have some lovely silver, linen and antiques that I would like to give to my only child – a son – but I can't figure out how to prevent their being "lost" in case of a divorce. If they left the family, I'd be heartbroken. Any suggestions? – REALISTIC MOMMA

DEAR REALISTIC: As indelicate as it may seem, make it clear that these heirlooms are to remain in your son's family – and get it in writing. If you assume that your son's marriage will end in divorce, you have a 50 percent chance of being right.

Sex hormone may be real cause of heart attack

NEW YORK (AP) — A widely held belief that excess cholesterol leads to heart disease has been challenged by a new study showing that men with heart disease have higher-than-normal levels of female sex hormones in their systems.

The study, published in the May issue of the American Journal of Medicine, found that men with heart disease had elevated levels of estradiol, one of the female hormones called estrogens, according to Dr. Gerald Phillips of the St. Luke's-Roosevelt Hospital Center in New York.

Phillips, who directed the new study, said the finding could change what doctors recommend to prevent heart attacks.

"If this is true and the high estrogen levels are indeed the major factors leading to heart attacks, what we'd have to determine is whether lowering these levels will reduce heart attacks," he said Tuesday in a telephone interview.

Phillips has challenged the view that elevated levels of cholesterol in the blood contribute to heart disease. Many believe too much cholesterol can contribute to heart disease, although that never has been proven.

"There is growing skepticism for the role of cholesterol in heart attacks," he said. "No one has been able to show that lowering cholesterol prevents heart attacks.

"I would guess that cholesterol is a secondary phenomenon that is elevated because of the sex hormone changes. It plays a secondary role or may even be incidental."

In Phillips' study, 61 subjects ranging in age from 61 to 88 who had heart disease were matched with 61 normal subjects of the same ages who did not have heart disease. The study was done in cooperation with the directors of the Framingham, Mass., Heart Study, one of the largest and most respected studies of heart disease.

The research conceivably could lead to new methods of preventing heart disease, Phillips said, but he could not say what those methods might be.

Pregnancy not harmed by moderate drinking

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women who drink heavily during pregnancy run an increased risk of having defective babies, but those who drink moderate amounts of alcohol are at no more risk than those who drink rarely or not at all, a new study shows.

Researchers at Boston City Hospital said a study of 469 women and their babies, released Tuesday, indicates that moderate drinking does not result in smaller than normal babies with physical and mental handicaps.

"No associations between alcohol use and fetal development were observed in the newborn nursery among offspring of moderate or rare drinkers," said the report published in the May issue of the journal Obstetrics and Gynecology.

While heavy drinking can cause birth defects, women who reduced heavy drinking before the last three months of pregnancy tended to have more normal-sized babies although they still showed an increased risk of abnormalities, the study said.

Heavy drinking can cause a condition called fetal alcohol syndrome, which can result in reduced birth weight, increased incidence of physical malformations, learning disabilities and mental retardation.

The biggest unresolved question about alcohol and pregnancy is the effect on babies born to light or moderate drinkers.

Because of doubts stemming from conflicting research data and a lack of large human studies, some health authorities have cautioned against any drinking during pregnancy.

Last September, Dr. Edward N. Brandt, assistant secretary for health in the Department of Health and Human Services, recommended that pregnant women stop drinking altogether as a precaution.

Brandt said a conservative estimate of the incidence of fetal alcohol syndrome in the United States is one case per 1,500 to 2,000 births.

The Boston City Hospital study of births between February 1977 and September 1979 found that "the number of babies with growth retardation in weight, length, and head circumference was highest among women who used alcohol heavily throughout pregnancy whether or not they smoked cigarettes and-or marijuana."

In their analysis, the researchers headed by Dr. Henry L. Rosett said they were able to mathematically factor out other influences that could affect birth characteristics. These include smoking, drug use, race, baby's sex and the mother's education and pre-pregnancy weight.

In the study, a drink was defined as a 12-ounce beer, a four-ounce glass of wine or a mixed drink containing 1.2 ounces of liquor.

Light drinkers were defined as those using alcohol less than once a month and never consuming more than five drinks on any occasion.

Heavy drinkers consumed at least five drinks on any occasion and at least 45 drinks a month, while moderate drinkers were those who drank more often than once a month but not nearly as much as the heavy consumers.

Womb membrane fights disease

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Surprising her doctors and family, Cleo Phillips is going home Thursday after battling a rare, debilitating skin disease with a treatment that included wrapping her body in membranes that surround babies in the womb.

"I'm feeling pretty good. I'm so happy," said Ms. Phillips, 48, who was wrapped in the amniotic membranes to keep the disease from spreading.

"She was very, very close to death. None of us really expected her to make it out of the hospital, yet in such good condition. We're all very surprised," said Dr. Fred Silverberg, who credited the membranes with helping save her life.

"I'll just take it easy for a while. You have to get back into things day by day" Ms. Phillips said Tuesday night from her room at Magee-Women's Hospital, where she has been bedridden for more than two months.

Ms. Phillips suffered from necrotizing fasciitis, an infectious disease which is contagious in its early stages. More than half of her body tissue had deteriorated because of the disease, leaving a reddened, depressed area stretching from her left knee to her breastbone.

"What covered her belly was essentially her muscle," Silverberg said.

Ms. Phillips, who is susceptible to severe infections because she suffers from diabetes, noticed in late February that a hair follicle had become infected. Within days, the infection had spread to her abdomen.

The disease was killing her fascia, a ¾-inch thick layer of tissue between her muscle and skin more commonly known as fat, at a rate of six inches a day, Silverberg said.

Ms. Phillips was hospitalized Feb. 23 and doctors operated three times to remove diseased tissue.

To temporarily control the spreading infection, Silverberg bandaged the diseased area with three amniotic membranes, which surround the baby in the mother's uterus.

It marked the first time that the "living dressing" had been used to treat the disease, which is so rare its exact incidence is not known, according to Silverberg. Such membranes previously have been used for burns and leg ulcers.

Laser zaps exact hues

BOSTON (AP) — A medical laser that searches out specific colors can destroy growths inside the body with pinpoint accuracy without harming neighboring tissues, a study shows.

It may someday allow doctors to remove birthmarks and even operate on individual cells.

"The major advantage is selectivity," said Dr. John A. Parrish of Massachusetts General Hospital. "You shine a laser on the whole tissue, but only the target is altered. We have demonstrated so far that the target can be as large as a blood vessel or as small as a particle within a cell."

Doctors are just beginning to explore the possible uses of the experimental tool. But Parrish said it may be used to remove large port-wine birth marks and moles, destroy cancers far inside the body and even instantaneously repair the workings of millions of malfunctioning cells.

Lasers are already used in medicine, but they have a major drawback. To produce enough energy to destroy their target, they also heat up surrounding tissue and kill it, too.

The new technique, called selective photothermolysis, picks wavelengths of light that are quickly absorbed by the color of the target but not the colors of nearby tissue. This way, a burst of laser light a few millionths of a second long will literally cook the target, but the flash of light is so short that it does not heat up tissue that surrounds the target area.

In one experiment, described in last week's issue of the journal Science, the doctors zapped the miniscule pigment granules that give skin its color. Only the pigment was destroyed, not the cells that contain it. About a week later, there was a white spot on the skin where the light had hit, but the skin itself was unharmed.

They also destroyed individual blood vessels in people's arms. The volunteers felt only a pinprick sensation.

"With this technique, the laser can pass through tissue and not affect it but affect only the targets within," Parrish said. "We think it is quite an exciting capability."

The two best naturally colored targets are hemoglobin, the red coloring of blood cells, and melanosomes, the brownish black granules that color the skin. But Parrish said any other target could theoretically be singled out it if was marked with a light-attracting dye.

This could make it possible to operate on organelles — tiny structures inside cells. For instance, antibodies that seek out specific parts of the cell could be formulated and tagged with a dye. The dye-carrying antibody would then be the target of the laser.

"We can start to decide what it is in the cell that we want to alter and carry the target into that part of the cell and then zap it with a laser," Parrish said.

This way, he said, it may be possible to work on the enzyme-making machinery of cells and change their metabolism.

"With this technique, you could operate on millions of cells at once and never take them out of the human," he said.

LA's VD controlled

ATLANTA (AP) — An outbreak of penicillin-resistant gonorrhea in Los Angeles, the first in a major U.S. metropolitan area, has been stopped and federal researchers are crediting an aggressive prevention program.

The outbreak in Los Angeles County first was identified in August 1980 and reached an average of 50 cases monthly through March 1981, when the prevention program was implemented, the national Centers for Disease Control said Thursday.

Cases recently averaged less than 15 a month, the CDC said in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report.

The agent resistant to penicillin is called penicillinase-producing neisseria gonorrhoeae, or PPNG. The program to fight PPNG included treatment with spectinomycin. Other strategies included referring all identified sex partners of PPNG patients for treatment and publicizing the outbreak to increase public awareness.

Penicillin-resistant gonorrhea is on the increase nationwide, the CDC said. In the first nine months of 1982, 3,424 cases were reported, up 77 percent over the same period a year earlier.

Interview tips

By DR. ADELE M. SCHEELE

Even if we're qualified for the job at hand, many of us blow our chances during the interview. Why? First, we act as if the interview is a test and the interviewer is the grand professor just waiting to prove us wrong. And second, we come unprepared, like lambs to the slaughter instead of as equals trying to find out if there is a way to work together for mutual gain.

So, for all of you who have requested help, here is a roundup of interviewing tips:

(1) Resumes. Don't expect that the interviewer has read your resume and memorized it. Therefore, be prepared to tell your background, training and experience. Don't string together pieces of your work life: "I worked for a construction company, then I worked in banking." Better to tell what you contributed.

(2) Don't beg. All businesses need new blood. Companies grow, reorganize. Concentrate on what you can bring to the organization, and say that in simple but enthusiastic ways.

(3) Past successes. Before the interview, think back and find examples of your work — products, sales, management skills — of which you are proud. Use them to illustrate different talents of yours and how you have used them to the company's benefit. Don't think of this as foolish boasting.

(4) Homework. Do some research on the organization and the industry. Talk to people who work in it and ask their opinions, their experiences. Read the business section in the newspaper or business magazines for articles about the company or industry. Refer to this information in a positive way.

(5) Bonding. Having the same values, background — even appearance — as your interviewer goes a lot further than you'd think. It's up to you to find these bonds before the interview or else try to establish links during it. If you think it's silly or manipulative, remember that all diplomats begin at this point. The greater the number of similarities, the greater rate of success.

(6) Acknowledge success. Don't be afraid to acknowledge achievements — both yours and theirs. No one wants anyone with them who can't support and cheer the team. This is not to be construed as being a Pollyanna. You could mention how impressed you are at their excellent handling of a difficult economic decision, for instance. Or your success in diverting a strike or lawsuit.

(7) Typical questions. Prepare for the questions that most interviewers think they should ask. The first is simple: "Tell me about yourself." Don't start with your first job, when you were the least experienced. Instead, tell what bosses you enjoyed, associations you've had. Include an interesting hobby — sailing, skiing, chess.

The second question, "Where do you see yourself five years from now," generally upsets everyone. Don't show you're overly ambitious by blurting, "I want your job," or "I want to be president of this company." Instead, generalize how you make contributions and the ways you've seized opportunities and been rewarded.

The third question is, "Tell your strengths and weaknesses." This sounds tricky but really this is a chance for you to legitimately boast about your accomplishments, character traits, and values. For the weaknesses, however, don't be fooled into telling everything that is wrong with you. Rather, point to some neutral traits like impatience when teammates are slow, for instance, or irritation if you can't find a solution.

(8) Last job. Explaining why you left your last job is most often the hardest question to answer. You can't complain about your past boss, yet more people leave because of personality clashes than because they couldn't do the job well enough. So, if pressed, say there were differences in style or vision but don't do in your old boss. Your new one won't like it.

(9) Salary. Let salary be the last item to negotiate, after you've each gotten to know each other and described the job's functions. If that is all positive, then ask for what you deserve. But it should be in the ballpark, not too low, and not the highest they'll ever be able to pay. If your interviewer counters with a lower number, then you both can negotiate a compromise if necessary.

New multiple sclerosis treatment promising

SAN DIEGO (AP) — An experimental treatment for people suffering from multiple sclerosis has produced "significant" results, in some cases, allowing bedridden and wheelchair-bound victims of the disease to walk, a Wisconsin physician says.

The therapy involves removing plasma from the patient's blood and administering medication that suppresses the body's immune system, said Dr. Bhupendra O. Khatri, who announced the results of the study Wednesday during a meeting here of the American Academy of Neurology.

While the research team at the Medical College of Wisconsin in Milwaukee is encouraged by the results, Khatri said the patients' progress had to be watched for another six months to better determine the success of the treatment.

Khatri said the latest study was a follow up to a similar experiment that showed encouraging results in the treatment of the debilitating disease, which is believed to be caused when a person's immune system goes out of control and begins attacking the brain and spinal cord. People afflicted with multiple sclerosis suffer from weakness, blindness and other neurological disorders.

The new study involved 53 patients who were randomly assigned either to the new treatment or given a "sham" therapy that appeared the same.

Once a week, for 27 weeks, the 27 patients who actually received the treatment underwent plasmapheresis, a process in which plasma is extracted from the blood.

Plasma contains proteins and antibodies which researchers believe may cause multiple sclerosis.

The group also received drugs that suppressed their immune systems, the body's internal mechanism for fighting infection.

"Of the 27 patients, 16 showed improvement, compared to only seven of the 26 patients that received sham plasmapheresis," said Khatri. "We attribute this significant improvement or arrest of the disease to this therapy."

Khatri said of 15 patients confined to wheelchairs or bedridden, 11 were now able to walk, either with or without assistance.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Patients can become addicted to tranquilizers

Dear Dr. Solomon: My boyfriend says he is having withdrawal problems because his doctor is taking him off a tranquilizer that he has been taking for some time. I don't want to doubt his word, but I'm wondering if they were just tranquilizers or something stronger. Can tranquilizers cause a person to have withdrawal symptoms or does this only happen with hard drugs? — Edith, Albany, N.Y.

Dear Edith: Patients who have been taking tranquilizers in normally prescribed doses over an extended period of time may experience withdrawal symptoms when the medication is stopped. This indicates that they have developed a physical dependence on the drug.

Dr. Malcolm H. Lader, of the Institute of Psychiatry in London has reported that typical withdrawal symptoms were present in 22 patients who were given a placebo instead of the active drug they had been taking for an average of seven years. The symptoms included anxiety, trembling, nausea and muscle tension.

Dear Dr. Solomon: After my experience last night, I feel like crying "Help!" How do you take a two-year-old's temperature? This seems like a simple problem compared with some of the others you get but, believe me it's not a simple problem for me. Any suggestions? — Mrs. L.G., Cincinnati, Ohio

Dear Mrs. G.: If you've given up on trying to obtain a rectal temperature, as I assume you have, try placing the thermometer under your youngster's armpit for five minutes. The results of one study of 50 children under three years of age showed only about a one-half degree difference between axillary (armpit) and rectal temperatures. If after obtaining the axillary temperature you have any question about the reading, you can then try to check it rectally.

I think you'll find that obtaining an axillary temperature is not only safer for the child but saves a lot of wear and tear on the mother.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My wife is scheduled to have a hysterectomy and she has become very nervous about it. Right now I am more worried about her mental condition than about her physical condition. Do you have any advice about what we can do? — Mr. L.R., Norfolk, Va.

Dear Mr. R.: It is not uncommon for a woman confronted with the need for a hysterectomy to become upset. On the basis of your description of your wife's emotional state, I would feel that she might benefit from counseling prior to the surgery. This would also permit the therapist to assess the need for additional counseling following the operation. Such counseling has been reported to be effective with other women who were faced with similar situations.

Dear Dr. Solomon: The school my nine-year-old son attends is sponsoring a "nutrition awareness" week, and he says he wants to take part in it. It is actually aimed at children who are overweight, and that includes my son, but the principal of the school doesn't want to make that too obvious. Do such programs do any good and would you recommend taking part in them? — Mrs. H.C., Chicago

Dear Mrs. C.: I can tell you that at least one program that appears to be similar to the one you describe has appeared to be of value in helping obese children lose weight. It was sponsored by a school in Florida and emphasized nutrition and exercise. The program included an educational component aimed at parents and teachers, and featured low-calorie lunches in place of the usual school fare.

A large majority of the children who participated in the program lost significant amounts of weight. Since your son says he wants to take part, I see no reason why he should not be permitted to do so.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've heard that it's possible for a woman to arrange to have a boy or a girl depending on what she eats. I'm not saying that I would try anything like this, but I'd like to know if it's possible. — Lois, Easton, Pa.

Dear Lois: If you are asking whether anyone has ever claimed that the sex of a child can be determined by what the mother eats during her pregnancy, the answer would have to be "yes." However, I would suggest that you take any such claims with several large grains of salt.

Since you ask the question, I will tell you that according to a report from France, women who have a diet rich in salt and potassium are more likely to have boys, and women who have diets rich in calcium and magnesium are more likely to have girls. The investigators say that a study they conducted showed that 39 or 47 births to women who followed these guidelines were of children of the desired sex.

I want to emphasize that I am not recommending this approach; I am simply responding to your question.

Beer interests slosh it out in Congress

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — The early weeks of spring usher in warmer weather, picnics, the opening of baseball season and increased consumption of beer.

But spring also is bringing another round in a high-stakes battle in Congress between powerful competing interests over legislation that could hit the estimated 72 million American beer drinkers in the wallet.

The legislation, recently introduced in the House, would allow certain wholesalers to obtain territorial monopolies for particular brands of beer without fear of federal antitrust action.

On the one side, pushing the legislation, are the National Beer Wholesalers Association (NBWA) and some labor organizations whose members generally work for the beer distributors.

On the other side, opposing the special antitrust exemption, are organizations representing grocery stores, supermarkets, convenience stores, bar operators, consumers, and the Reagan administration.

Both sides claim to have the beer drinker's best interest at heart and accuse the other side of trying to establish monopoly control that ultimately would drive up the cost of beer.

A similar fight was launched by the wholesalers late in the last Congress and bills to allow the antitrust exemption picked up solid majorities in both houses as co-sponsors — including 31 of the 45 Californians and 10 of the 26 Illinois members of Congress.

BUT THE BILLS were bottled up in judiciary subcommittees and never came to the floor of either house where that power could be felt.

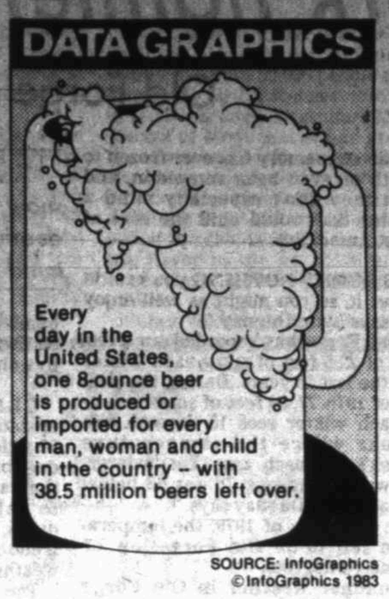
The proponents hope to correct that by having their bill, grandly labeled the Malt Beverage Interbrand Competition Act, introduced early. Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, who carried the bill for them last year has put another one in on the House side while the proponents are still looking for the right author in the Senate.

"This time, we hope that by getting an early start we can get it through," said Frank McNeirney of the beer wholesalers association.

Will they succeed?

"It's hard to say this early," replied Lars Peterson of the Food Marketing Institute, an association of supermarket owners which is one of the major opponents of the bill. "We know the beer (wholesaler) people are determined. But we know that those who are against it are determined too."

The beer wholesalers, who feel they were on the losing side of the news media battle last year, fired the first shot with information packets aimed at putting their bill in a more favorable light.



SOURCE: InfoGraphics
©InfoGraphics 1983

"You may have seen or heard this legislation referred to as the 'beer baron bill,'" the NBWA's cover letter said. "Nothing could be further from the truth.

"Ironically, those false charges were originated by the would-be beer barons themselves," the letter signed by executive vice president Robert W. Sullivan said.

THE NEWS release accompanying Sullivan's letter said the bill would "block attempts by certain supermarket chain store interests to dominate the wholesale and retail distribution of beer."

The measure was described by Brooks as "a means of preserving an existing beer distribution structure that has served America's consumers well."

Sullivan insisted in the NBWA's prepared argument that their bill also is in the long-term best interest of "mom and pop" beer retailers and bar owners who would be assured of high quality service and quality control.

But Peterson noted that a letter opposing the beer bill was sent to the chairmen of both Judiciary committees by a coalition that included not only grocery and drug store chains, but the National Association of Convenience Stores — 38,000 operators of the small, frequently all-night stores such as Seven-Eleven; the National Licensed Beverage Association — 35,000 bar and tavern owners, and four national consumer groups.

"It's anti-competitive, anti-consumer," Peterson said of the beer bill.

The push for the bill comes from a 1977 U.S. Supreme Court ruling that agreements between producers and distributors allowing territorial monopolies are not always a violation of antitrust statutes if they enhance interbrand competition to compensate for lack of intrabrand rivalry.

THAT RULING left in doubt whether long-standing agreements between brewers and beer wholesalers that have existed in many states fit within the exceptions the court allowed.

In California, for example, the state Alcoholic Beverage Control Department under then-Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. decided the territorial monopolies allowed by state regulations were anti-competitive.

But the effort by ABC director Baxter Rice to drop the regulation was met by a heavy push by the beer wholesalers to get the Legislature to enact a bill similar to the one now pending in Congress. Although the bill was stymied by a combination of news media and consumer opposition, Rice dropped his effort to change the regulation.

Illinois is another of the states that requires territorial agreements for distributing beer.

The beer wholesalers also were encouraged by the success of the soft drink industry in getting Congress to enact legislation carving out special antitrust exemption for them in 1980.

The issue as defined by the beer wholesalers is one of preserving what they call the three-tier system of distributing beer that goes from the brewers to the wholesalers to the retailers.

Absent the territorial agreements, the wholesalers argue, the chains of supermarkets, drug stores and discount stores will bypass the wholesalers, buying directly from the brewers and selling in their own outlets.

THE CHAIN operators and consumer groups argue that such an arrangement will provide greater competition and lower prices. With the territorial monopolies, they point out, retail stores and bars which want to sell the popular brands of beer have no choice but to buy from the wholesaler with the local monopoly, at whatever price he chooses to charge.

But the wholesalers counter by charging that chain stores will force "mom and pop" retailers out of the beer business and then will push up the price of beer once they establish their own monopolies.

Court of Criminal Appeals affirms capital murder solicitation conviction

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Court of Criminal Appeals Wednesday affirmed the conviction and 40-year sentence assessed Linda Kay Roth by an Ector County court for solicitation of capital murder.

The appeals court said evidence showed Roth had hired a man, "who it turned out was an undercover law enforcement officer, to kill a former employee."

Sole ground of error raised in the appeal, the court reported, was that the trial court erred in overruling Roth's motion for a mistrial due to "harmful, inflammatory prejudicial questions" by the state and answers by the detective involved as a "middleman" in arranging the "undercover hit man."

The appeals court said the detective had been called by Roth as her witness, and that he had been asked "leading questions of whether he had been paid large amounts of money by her as protection money for her 'massage parlor' operations."

The appeals court concluded the questions and answers "were of such a character that the court's instruction (to the jury) to disregard them was sufficient" to cure any errors.

New York hamlet one of nation's coldest places

Old Forge residents proud of being in record books

EDITOR'S NOTE — There's the beauty of the mountains, the lakes, the streams. The tranquility. Then there's the cold. How cold is it in Old Forge? Frigid enough for the Weather Bureau to nickname it "Cold Forge."

OLD FORGE, N.Y. (AP) — When the temperature plummets to an unreasonable, almost unbelievable low in this tiny Adirondack Mountain hamlet, the village men gather over morning coffee to speculate on whether the National Weather Service will make note of the great event.

"It's kind of like a kick around here to see how many times we're the low in the nation. The men'll be sitting down at the Howard Johnson's and they'll say, 'Hey, it's minus 45 — we got a good shot at it today,'" says Steve Duguay, a chef in a popular area restaurant.

The 900 residents of this hamlet take pride in their reputation as the coldest, snowiest spot in New York state, and one of the most frigid areas in the nation.

They're proud to tell you that their schools have never closed because of cold or snow, that no one in recent memory has ever frozen to death or even been snowed-in, and that they don't especially mind a winter that would chill the soul of most Americans.

"THERE'S NOTHING you can do about it, so you might as well enjoy it," says Lynn Duguay.

Old Forge has recorded an average of 22.5 feet of snow each winter for the last 15 years. During the winter of 1976-'77, 34 feet of snow fell.

Each winter sees 10 days to two weeks where the temperature doesn't approach zero. Last winter, "it was outrageous. It was 45 below for a week," Duguay says.

In February of 1979, the temperature fell to an Old Forge low of minus 52 degrees.

Summer weather in Old Forge also features some natural air conditioning. This past summer, a reading of 23 degrees was recorded on Aug. 29. On June 28, 1980, the temperature fell to 30 degrees and on June 9 of the same year a half-inch of snow fell.

"That was the year we tried to figure out if the June snowfall was the latest snowfall of the year or the earliest," recalls Daryl Carman, a hamlet police officer who is also a National Weather Service cooperative observer.

"...Their schools have never closed because of cold or snow, that no one in recent memory has ever frozen to death or even been snowed-in, and that they don't especially mind a winter that would chill the soul of most Americans.

OLD FORGE IS located in upstate New York's snowbelt, about 80 miles south of the Canadian border, but it's special weather conditions are a combination of proximity to Lake Ontario and the Adirondacks, according to Roland Guy Loffredo, meteorologist-in-charge of the weather service's Albany bureau.

The mountain valley that nestles Old Forge is just east of Lake Ontario and is therefore subject to lake effect snow, Loffredo says. Lake effect snow occurs when winds blow across the lake, causing the air to pick up moisture that falls as snow when the air is cooled.

The cooling process occurs when the moisture-laden air rises over the Adirondacks, Loffredo says.

"When the air around the mountain cools, the colder air tends to fall to the surface. It flows down the mountain and into the valleys," Loffredo says.

At the weather service, he says, they affectionately call Old Forge "Cold Forge."

Old Forge is one of six hamlets in Webb township, the largest geographically in New York state. Webb is just less than half the size of Rhode Island, but has only about 1,800 people.

THE MOUNTAINS, lakes and streams of Herkimer County have long swelled the summer population of Old Forge to around 30,000. In 1967, the town began a drive to attract winter tourists to its 500 miles of snowmobile trails.

One faction of the hamlet's business community wanted to play down the cold while another felt that frequent appearances on the nation's weather map would spark tourism.

The controversy raged through the early 1970s, until the appointment of Robert Hall as director of publicity for the town of Webb.

"My attitude is, it never hurts to get your name in print," Hall says.

Hall feels that being the nation's cold spot on a fairly regular basis has been mostly beneficial for Old Forge tourism.

Where it hurts, Hall says, is among the "day-trippers." People from nearby who want to come up for a day's snowmobiling have a change of heart when they hear the temperature, he says.

"I'VE ALWAYS gone on the premise that honesty is the best policy — people should know that skiing in minus-40 degree weather is no picnic," he says.

The tourist, Hall says, is also the person most likely to get hurt by a cold snap. He encourages area motels and hotels to tell tourists to keep their gas tank full and back their car into parking spaces, so they'll be ready for a jump-start in the morning.

Dr. Ernest B. Emerson, one of two doctors in the hamlet, says that "native sons" look out for the tourists, warning them that their body may be saying it's not that cold, when the thermostat says it is.

The local people, he says, are "snow-wise" and educate their children "not to touch a doorknob with their bare hand or put metal in their mouths."

During a particularly bad storm, such as the one in 1971 that dropped 51 inches of snow on the 54 already on the ground, the hamlet dispenses a firetruck equipped with a loudspeaker to give out weather and safety information and to make sure everyone is home, safe, and warm.

"It's an intricate system of care," Hall says. "Everybody calls somebody every day to make sure they're okay."

THE INEVITABLE question — why live here? — is wrapped up in the tightknit quality of the hamlet, he says.

"I think people live here for the quality of life — they like the beauty, the tranquility, the safety, the mountains, the streams, the lakes," he says. "So they pay the price."

Pennsylvania residents 'doing something wild'

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Pennsylvanians filing state income tax returns this year were urged to "do something wild."

The Wild Resources Conservation Fund has been created by the state legislature to provide for the management and protection of non-game wildlife and wild plants. This year, every resident had an opportunity to back up his support for wildlife with dollars and cents.

For years, major expenditures toward helping fish and wildlife have come from the coffers of the Fish and Game commissions, funds that are generated by the sale of licenses, special permits, federal aid supported by excise taxes on hunting and fishing equipment, and fines and penalties.

Over the past few years, the Fish and Game commissions have paid increasing attention to the needs of all fish and wildlife. At the same time, federal funds permitted expanded activities such as the bald eagle restoration program.

However, recent tightening of the federal budget has choked off much of this revenue.

The Do Something Wild program made it possible for residents to support fish and wildlife more directly than was possible in the past.

Using the 1982 Pennsylvania State Income Tax form, they could make a tax-deductible contribution of all or part of the income tax overpayment to the Wild Resources Conservation Fund, including payments of less than $1.

Many types of wildlife will benefit from the program.

Bluebirds and chickadees are non-game wildlife. So are endangered species such as the bald eagle, peregrine falcon and Indiana bat. Of the 277 species of birds and 70 kinds of mammals living in or migrating through Pennsylvania, only 17 percent are classified as game.

"Concern for non-game wildlife has never developed in a planned, consistent way," said Jerry Hassinger of the Pennsylvania Game Commission.

"The Pennsylvania Biological Survey, for example, lists five bird species as endangered and eight more as threatened. All of them are non-game species and now there must be attention given to non-game."

264-acre wildlife nature preserve surrounded by downtown Buffalo

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Ring-beaked gulls wheel above a lake and dive into the water in search of food. A tree sparrow pauses in its flight to rest on a limb. In the marsh, low mounds made of cattails and mud rise from the water — the winter homes of the muskrat.

This wilderness is not in a vast natural setting. It lies entirely within the boundaries of the city of Buffalo and is less than three miles from the city's downtown area.

The 264-acre Tifft Farm Nature Preserve is practically surrounded by heavy industry. To the south are the idle iron furnaces of Shenango Inc. To the east is the Republic Steel Corp. plant and the Donner-Hanna coke works, both silenced now by a downturn in business. To the north loom grain elevators that are crowded along the meandering Buffalo River. Beyond the elevators and the river the office buildings of downtown Buffalo shimmer in the sunlight.

To the west, traffic hums along Route 5 and Fuhrmann Boulevard and on the other side of the highways are the waters of Buffalo Harbor and Lake Erie.

"THINGS ARE pretty quiet around here in winter," says Wayne K. Gall, 29, administrator of the preserve. "It's hard to imagine that you're in the city when you're walking around."

When Indians and early settlers roamed the marshes, the area was wetlands, suitable for hunting but not as a place to live. The land was purchased in 1858 by George Tifft. His heirs sold the property in 1883, and eventually the Lehigh Valley Railroad used the site for a canal system that was lined with coal and ore docks as well as lumber warehouses and grain mills.

The property fell into disuse after World War II. Republic Steel bought the land in 1955. In 1972, the City of Buffalo purchased the property as a place to dump refuse. Finally, in 1976, a group of citizens persuaded city officials to convert the land to a nature preserve. Thus, Tifft Farm, once a bustling part of an industrial complex, was returned to nature.

The preserve, under control of the Buffalo Museum of Science, is visited by about 50,000 people a year. Many are bird watchers who come to study through binoculars the 220 species of birds that either breed in the preserve or fly in during the migrating seasons. On a good day, a bird watcher can catch a glimpse of a spindly legged Great Blue Heron, watch the falcon-like American Kestrel hover in the air while hunting or see the killdeer stutter-step across a field.

Other wildlife abounds in the preserve. Red fox and beaver inhabit the land as does the cottontail rabbit. Gall says deer tracks have been spotted on the preserve, although they don't usually live there.

HUNTING IS BANNED, but fishermen can drop their lines in any of several ponds and lakes to try to land rainbow trout or the Chinook or Coho salmon with which the waters have been stocked.

Nature lovers, many with cameras dangling from their necks, can stroll along boardwalks that line the 75 acres of marsh.

Guide lists, evaluates 418 video games

By JIMMY THORNTON
Copley News Service

The advertising bombardment for electronic video games is enough to turn you into a Pac Kong creature that gobbles up video games!

Once you think you know what the latest fad is, you are suddenly zapped with a new one. Now there is a guide to this video maze.

It's called the "1983 Software Encyclopedia" and is published by Reese Communications of New York.

It is compiled by the editors of Electronic Games, and it lists and evaluates 418 available games for both the veteran and inexperienced hobbyist.

Among its determinations:

The Atari 2600 is the most widely distributed home video game machine and holds dominance due to its enormous library of software.

Intellivision is the second most popular system and has an immense sports library and is noted for its excellent graphics.

The Odyssey has distinct advantages such as a real keyboard and a newly designed control stick that the guide reports is especially good for left-handed users.

The encyclopedia will be marketed on newsstands for $3.95 or may be obtained directly from Reese, 460 W. 34 St., New York, N.Y. 10001.

The proportion of women working outside of an office, in such jobs as policemen, fire fighters, construction workers and truck drivers, has risen to about two in five, reports the American Council of Life Insurance, based on the results of a study released in late 1982. Of 43 million U.S. working women, 35 percent had clerical jobs and 24 percent professional, technical, administrative or managerial positons. Another 19 percent had service jobs, 10 percent operative jobs (including transport) and 7 percent had sales work.

Exercising on a hot day will give you better benefits with less effort, reports Dr. John Greenleaf, the physiologist who developed key exercise routines for U.S. astronauts. Family Circle press service, quoting the doctor, reports that on a hot day it is easier to raise your internal temperature, which causes chemical reactions in the body to work at a higher level. Dr. Greenleaf said that is why leg warmers, warmup suits and rubber pants make exercising more efficient. Nutritionists caution that you should replace body fluids as you do strenuous exercise by drinking water.

One of the nice things about the role of a consumer is being able to sit back and smile as food producers haggle.

Some people may recall that the first margarine manufacturers had to sell it white as lard so it couldn't be mistaken for butter. If you wanted it yellow, you had to squeeze in coloring from a capsule that came with the margarine (much to the delight of family children, who often got that job).

Cornell University's Cooperative Extension recently reported that pork producers no longer have a monopoly on the word "ham." Now that term may be used to define the hind leg of any type of animal. And turkey processors are doing just that while promoting turkey ham as a low-fat alternative meat.

Another big advantage to turkey hams is the fact they are less expensive than pork, something a consumer can also sink his teeth into. The federal government does regulate it, requiring that turkey "ham" be made exclusively from thigh meat from which the skin, underskin fat and bone have been removed. Turkey ham may not absorb added water during processing.

Photographer enjoys his job

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — David Chan, Playboy photographer, was perplexed.

"My measurements?" said Chan, looking shocked. "I only ask girls that question."

He paused to think. "Well, I'm 5-foot-5 and I weigh 123 pounds. I don't know...my waist is 27, no, my hips, I mean...I don't know my biceps."

Chan, 46, from British Columbia, was here to find University of Virginia coeds to pose for the magazine's September issue, which will feature women of Atlantic Coast Conference schools.

Not everyone approves of his line of work.

Last year in Waco ananonymous caller lodged a telephone bomb threat when Chan was photographing women at Baylor University. In other cities and towns, there have been demonstrations and controversy.

The closer he gets to the East Coast, or deeper into the South, the worse it is, Chan said. On the West Coast, everyone understands.

Chan, the son of Chinese immigrants, said his mother wanted him to be an accountant or to go into business. Instead, even in high school, he photographed the most beautiful girls he could find.

After he graduated, he went to California, where he attended the Brooks Institute at Santa Barbara. He was a freelance photographer in Hollywood for several years before accepting a job with Playboy in 1966.

He described himself as, "well, anything you think of what Playboy should be or should represent, I'm the opposite."

He doesn't drink, doesn't smoke, doesn't go to bars. He still owns the first car he ever bought, a 26-year-old Thunderbird, which he recently restored.

He is single, though, and girlfriends have learned to look the other way when he talks about other women.

"They get perturbed at first," he said. "But after six months or a year, they see the point that it's just part of my job."

In 16 years on a job he thinks "nearly 100 percent" of other men would love to have, he has photographed perhaps 15,000 women.

"I enjoy what I do," Chan said. "I don't look at it as a chore or work. Photography has served me very well, and the United States has treated me well."

And he doesn't believe he's exploiting women.

"I don't call it exploitation, but some people call it that," he said. "They are exploiting us, and we're exploiting them. It goes both ways if you call it exploitation.

"They know what they're getting into when they come to Playboy — the beauty, the sensuality, the cheesecake." Women pose for Playboy because "it's an ego trip," he said. "It's very logical."

Of his work, Chan said, "The best time to photograph women is when they're in full bloom — from 18 to about age 25 or maybe even 27. It's just like photographing flowers. You don't do it when they're getting to be in full bloom, or after that."

But, he added, "one thing that's missing from these young ladies I see is inner beauty. After 30, it's inner beauty that stays on forever. The physical beauty is gone."

What does Chan look for in a woman?

"The eyes," he said. "I look first at the eyes. That's why a younger person is better. The sparkle in their eyes usually disappears after you grow older.

Ranger's descendant sculptures tribute

STONEWALL (AP) — For five months, artist Richard Cook labored in this scenic Hill Country town to sculpt a fitting tribute for the Texas Rangers' 160th anniversary.

"I couldn't have gotten a chance to do a more inspirational piece of art in my life," Cook said.

Cook's great-grandfather was a Texas Ranger and the sheriff of Maverick County, which he said maked last week's unveiling of his statue at the Texas Ranger Memorial Hall in San Antonio that much more special.

"Just knowing it's for the Texas Rangers means the world to me," the 30-year-old sculptor said. "Fifty years ago, they wanted a statue in front of the building. Now it's happening."

The bronzed statue, molded with an oil-based clay called pastilina, depicts a frontier battalion Texas Ranger, circa 1890, on horseback and leading a fully loaded pack mule through a cactus-studded hill.

One side of the statue's base is marked with the star-on-wheel badge of the Texas Rangers, with another to bear the cattle brands of the people who contribute to the Former Texas Rangers Foundation. It's five feet high, eight feet long and three feet wide.

The Rangers, an organization of lawmen, were founded in 1823 by Stephen F. Austin.

Cook's tribute will flank another statue, this one a work of cattle and cowboys sculpted by Gutzon Borglum, who carved Mount Rushmore.

But first, Cook had to clear his concept with a couple of experts — the two oldest living Texas Rangers, Dogie Wright of Sierra Blanca and Capt. A.Y. Allee of Carrizo Springs.

The clothes and weapons used for the Ranger in Cook's statue were carefully copied and meticulously transferred from history books. The face, though, is a montage.

"They put me through the mill," Cook said. "They wanted to make sure every little thing was right. They finally approved."

The 90-year-old Wright, he said, regaled him with the stories that have evolved into Texas Rangers legend — an easy task since Wright had 16 relatives who served in the organization of lawmen.

"It was wonderful to meet those men and talk about the Rangers with them," he said. "They knew so many stories and had even heard of my great-grandfather."

The clothes and weapons used for the Ranger in Cook's statue were carefully copied and meticulously transferred from history books. The face, though, is a montage.

"They wanted the face to be representative of all the Texas Rangers," Cook said.

The unveiling included the premier showing of the first of 36 exhibits on pioneer Texas ranches, this one detailing the history of the sprawling King Ranch.

After the unveiling, Cook said, he'll return to this peaceful little town, population 245, and work on his art.

Coffee is ritual in Arab world

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

CAIRO, Egypt — The ultimate sign of hospitality in the Arab world is not an embrace or a handshake. It is a cup of coffee, strong and black, and its offering is the enduring symbol of cordiality in a region where social graciousness is a way of life.

Coffee is to the Arab what a glass of wine is to a Frenchman, a schooner of beer to an Australian, a martini to an American. It is the beverage over which deals are struck, marriages arranged and conversation exchanged. To refuse it is a great discourtesy.

In the best hotels of the Middle East, turbaned coffee-servers sit on Persian pillows in marble lobbies, their brass coffee urns resting on a bed of coals. The beverage is served, free of charge, in small cups without handles to guests and the implied message is, "Welcome to my house."

Egyptian men — never women — pass many hours in literally thousands of crowded little coffee shops that spill out onto the city sidewalks like French restaurants. They sit there long into the night, each with a pack or two of cigarettes on the tiny, round tables, discussing life's vicissitudes over cups of thick, murky Turkish coffee.

Alcohol is not illegal in Egypt. But the Koran, the Moslem holy book, refers to "strong drink" as part of "Satan's handiwork" and warns: "Leave it aside in order that ye may succeed." Most people in this deeply religious land heed those words, and Western-style bars are unknown here except in luxury hotels.

For the Egyptian, then, the qahwahs (coffee houses) become as appealing a gathering spot as does the neighborhood pub for an Englishman.

Wild coffee plants are believed to have first been taken from Ethiopia to southern Arabia in the 15th century. But legend has it that as early as A.D. 850 an Arab goatherd, puzzled by his flock's peculiar behavior, sampled the coffee bush the goats had been nibbling, was overwhelmed by a sense of exhilaration and proclaimed his discovery to the world.

Because of its stimulating qualities, coffee later was banned as being against the teachings of the Koran. The threat of floggings for drinking it, however, did not diminish coffee's popularity. Coffee drinking spread rapidly in the Arab world and is no longer challenged on religious grounds.

It is consumed in great quantities by the official reciters of the Koran, who find it stimulating, and is as common at funerals to keep mourners awake as the sweet drink made from rose petals is at weddings to give celebrants a mellow sense of relaxation.

Go into almost any government office today from Morocco to Lebanon, stop by to visit a neighbor, bargain with merchants in bazaars across the Middle East, and the first words you are likely to hear are: "Would you like coffee?"

The gesture shows that the host values his guest and is not in a hurry to have him leave. If coffee is not offered, or if it is improperly served, the message is just as clear: You are free to take your leave at the first opportunity.

In Egyptian villages, a great ritual accompanies the serving of coffee. The man — not his wife — roasts the beans over coals, crushes them in a wooden pot, combines them with boiling water that is quickly brought back to a simmer and pours the resultant steaming beverage into a handsome urn. The procedure is carried out in front of the guest, who is expected to make appropriate comments of appreciation.

Turkish coffee, which came to Egypt in the 15th century with conquerers from the Ottoman Empire, is much richer and heavier than the bland concoction Americans favor, and must be allowed to stand for several minutes before drinking so the powder-fine grounds can settle.

Literacy rule to be tested in court

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Huey Johnson was among the first high school students to take Florida's functional literacy test — and flunk.

To earn a diploma, the state said, he had to prove he could survive outside the classroom by applying reading, writing and math to everyday situations, such as buying a car, shopping for groceries, borrowing money.

Johnson was an 11th-grader in Tampa in 1977, when Florida's literacy test was introduced. Claiming the exam discriminated against blacks, he joined 10 other black students in suing the state.

Now, nearly six years later, a federal judge faces a May 19 deadline in deciding whether Florida is dealing with black students in a constitutionally fair way.

It's America's premier legal test of whether states can deny diplomas to those who fail a standard exam.

THE CASE IS pending before U.S. District Judge George C. Carr, who has promised to rule before graduation ceremonies begin May 19. His decision will affect as many as 3,000 seniors who couldn't pass the two-part exam after as many as five tries.

Students take the exam first as a sophomore and have four more opportunities before graduation. The number of blacks passing has improved dramatically over the years from 25 percent to 90 percent, yet the failure rate is seven times the failure rate for whites.

According to the state Board of Education, 108,194 high school students — now seniors — took the test for the first time as 10th graders in 1981. Of these, 74,833 were white; 21,226 were black. As of October 1982, more than 10 percent of the blacks were still failing, compared to 1.4 percent of the white students.

"The eyes of the country are on us, no doubt about it," says Florida Education Commissioner Ralph Turlington, a defendant in the suit. "Here's a state testing the most basic things — reading and math. If we can't enforce this as a condition of graduation and require it to be demonstrated through a test, then we can never have a truly serious education system. It would be a devasting blow to the education systems of this country."

AP Laserphoto

Huey Johnson, 23, a former Tampa, Fla., student, was one of the original litigants to challenge Florida's functional literacy test. Johnson, an avid weightlifter, says the test is unfair.

STEVE HANLON, part of a team of attorneys who argued the case on behalf of Florida's black students, says the legacy from a long history of segregation prevents blacks from doing as well on the test as their white classmates.

"It involves a question of constitutional fairness — and education. As usual, the Constitution tends to clash somewhat with the efficiency of state government," Hanlon says.

The test — written at the eighth-grade level — is a series of multiple-choice questions covering math, reading and writing.

Teachers say the exam isn't difficult but demands concentration.

"We're here to teach kids how to fit into society. Why should a student go through 12 years of school, then to to a store and not be able to figure out which is the best buy — three at 35 cents each, or three for $1?" asks Clarence B. Bell, head of the math department at a Tampa vocational high school.

Johnson earned a diploma after taking the test three times. He went through the turmoil of desegregation in grammar school, being bused from an all-black school with second-hand books, cracked desks and classrooms without air conditioning to an integrated school in an affluent white neighborhood. Materials were better but tensions were worse, he says.

"YOU SAW HOW some made it, but never how to make it. Afterwards, you'd go back to your own neighborhood."

In school, he recalls, things weren't brighter. "The feeling I had was that the teacher didn't care whether I was there or not."

On behalf on Johnson and the other 10 Hillsborough County high school students, Hanlon sued in 1978, calling the test discriminatory. Carr ruled it was not biased — culturally or racially — but ordered the state to wait until 1983 to begin withholding diplomas. By that time every student would have a chance for 12 years education in an integrated system.

A Circuit Court of Appeals agreed with Carr's assessment of the test, but sent the case back to him in 1981.

ANTI-TEST ATTORNEYS challenged a state report which said students had ample opportunity to learn the material. They called the report — a look at all 67 school districts in the state — hearsay since the surveys of students and teachers were anonymous and precluded cross-examination. And experts picked apart some sections of it, challenging the claim that all counties prepared students adequately for the exam.

Reagan's cheerleader leads Mondale attack

By JAMES GERSTENZANG

An Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, never shy as a candidate to attack his rivals, has turned his guns on Walter F. Mondale, who is leading the pack of candidates for the Democratic Party's presidential nomination.

And that makes Lyn Nofziger, perhaps Reagan's biggest political cheerleader, a happy man. The only thing that could make Nofziger happier would be an out-and-out declaration by the president of his own candidacy for re-election.

Nofziger, who has served Reagan as a campaign press secretary and political adviser both in the White House and out, says he is fully convinced the president will, in due course, announce that he will seek a second term.

At a luncheon last week, Reagan told some political allies ready to begin campaign work not to "do anything until I'm ready to tell you to do it," according to one guest.

In the meantime, Nofziger, anxious to move his work in support of a Reagan candidacy into higher gear, is taking heart by looking at the various signs pointing in the direction of a new campaign.

Over the weekend, a number of factors combined to raise again the questions about whether Reagan would run:

—He told the Houston Post in an interview that if he seeks re-election, he would want George Bush to be the GOP vice-presidential candidate.

—At a Houston fund-raising dinner for Sen. John Tower, he tried out a couple of one-liners at the expense of Mondale, whom he tagged "Vice President Malaise," a play on the theme of a Jimmy Carter speech about low morale in the nation in July 1979.

"I got an unsigned valentine in February, and I'm sure it was from Fritz Mondale. The heart on it was bleeding," Reagan said.

Does all this — the wisecracks, the comment about Bush, and other hints for the political tea leaf readers — add up to a sign that the president is running?

"Of course it does," says Nofziger, noting at the same time that Reagan paid his first — and highly photogenic — visit to the Vietnam Veterans Memorial near the White House on Sunday, after making one of his rare visits to church since taking office.

"You put it all together and you have to conclude that the juices are beginning to stir or flow," he said.

Nofziger thinks it is about time Reagan shot back at Mondale and the other Democratic candidates who have been running against him. "You can't give them a free ride," he said.

One of Mondale's top aides, Richard Moe, also expressed pleasure about Reagan's cracks. "They're getting worried," he said of the president and the White House political team members. "I take that to be encouraging."

Reagan's standard line these days when asked whether he is running and when he will announce his decision, is that all such questions will be resolved in time, and that he will know when the right time arrives to make his decisions known.

He also points out that by announcing a re-election campaign now, he would leave himself open to allegations that every step he takes was being done for political reasons.

Marfa whoops it up for centennial

MARFA — This ranching community in the Big Bend will hold its centennial celebration this weekend.

Activities will begin at 9 a.m. Friday with a black powder shoot, skeet shoot, marksmanship shoot and opening of booths and exhibits. "Pony Express" riders from Alpine will pull up rein at 9:30 a.m., while an antique show and stagecoach and wagon rides will follow at 10 a.m.

At 11:30 a.m. visitors will get to witness a staged bank robbery and, at 1 p.m., a shoot-out.

At 2 p.m. a beard and moustache contest will be held and Fort Davis National Historic Site cavalry riders will gallop into town.

A parade will get under way at 4 p.m., with a barbecue supper and live music performance ensuing at 5 p.m.

A pageant and fireworks display at 8 p.m. and dance at 10 p.m. will conclude Friday's activities.

Booths will open again at 9 a.m. Saturday, along with "Marfa Saloon" and the public swimming pool. That hour also will mark tee-off time for Guys and Dolls Golf Tournament.

At 10 a.m. Marfa High School graduates will register and an old-timers reunion will get under way.

Another re-created shoot-out will be held at 10:30 a.m., a barbecue box lunch at 11:30 a.m., historical marker dedication and ranch rodeo at 1:30 p.m., and yet another shoot-out at 2 p.m.

Square dancers will swing their partners at 2:30 p.m., while live music will begin at 4:30 p.m. and continue through a 5 p.m. Mexican food supper.

Claudia Jones will provide entertainment at 7:30 p.m., and a dance will close Saturday's activities at 10 p.m.

Guys and Dolls Golf Tournament will resume at 9 a.m. Sunday, while a religious service and performance by ecumenical community choir will be held at 11 a.m.

A 2 p.m. baseball game will conclude centennial activities.

Motel, camping and recreational vehicle accomodations are available in Marfa, Alpine, Fort Davis and Davis Mountains State Park.

Surplus prison produce thrown out, officials say

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — State prison gardens yield so much food that leftovers are thrown away, but officials say bureaucratic snags prevent them from selling the produce on the open market or giving it to the needy.

Attorney General Steve Clark said earlier this week the food surplus has been a problem since he entered state government in 1979, but he said he didn't know how much produce had been discarded.

The Correction Department doesn't have adequate facilities for processing and storing vegetables that the inmates can't immediately eat, Clark said.

Gov. Bill Clinton wants to develop a vegetable processing program for the prisons so that food can be distributed to other state institutions, Clark said.

Surplus vegetables are fed to livestock instead of being given to the poor because setting up distribution programs and standards of eligibility would be costly, Clark said.

Monks of the Brigittine Order head toward the still-elegant San Francisco Peninsula mansion in Woodside, Calif., that they call home. The monks support their ascetic lifestyle by making and selling fudge and carrot cake for epicurean tastes.

Divine divinity

A Brigittine monk reaches into the oven to take out another carrot cake.

In their kitchen, monks stir batches of fudge.

WOODSIDE, Calif. — at an aging but still elegant San Francisco Peninsula mansion named Camelot, 11 Catholic monks in drab gray habits devote their days to pondering their Divine Creator as they create divinity.

Divinity fudge, that is.

The monks, members of the tiny Brigittine Order, cater to the epicurean tastes of a world they eschew in order to support their ascetic life style of prayer and contemplation.

In the commercial-size kitchen of the mansion's poolhouse, the monks silently stir bubbling cauldrons, transforming sugary goo into tasty delights that more worldly men then truck off to speciality stores.

"This is a life of prayer," explained Brother Benedict, the monastery's prior, "a life for people who are willing to sacrifice all their desires to be a close friend of God. It is a very happy life consisting of three primary elements — prayer, work and reading — all in separation from the world...all our work is to support a life of prayer."

IN 1975, Brother Benedict, whose portly frame and jovial manner evoke images of Robin Hood's Friar Tuck, gathered together a handful of like-minded men ranging in age from their 20s to 50s who were interested in "union with God through prayer."

The monks started out in Fresno, Calif. Later they moved to West Virginia where "we made fudge and carrot cake, but the economic conditions and the whole general lifestyle were not conducive to our primary work, which is the praise of God."

Last year the monks' plight came to the attention of Mitzi Sigall Briggs, the Stauffer Chemical heiress, who had a $3.5 million mansion on the market with no occupants and no buyers. She offered the Brigittines free use of the mansion if they would help keep it up until a buyer is found.

"There's nothing that says just because we are poor we have to live in ugly dwellings and I don't know how much poorer we could be," Brother Benedict said as he led a stranger on a tour of Camelot, noting its fine features with all the acumen of a successful real estate agent. The 13 acres of formal gardens are a bit overgrown, but it remains an inspiring and tranquil residence, perfect for the contemplative life. The statue of a nude Venus in the garden has been replaced by one of the Virgin Mary. In the foyer a triptych-like screen conceals an Asiatic deity.

THE SPACIOUS dining hall is set with plain plates and water glasses. The ballroom-sized living room serves as the chapel, where the monks gather seven times daily for prayer. Strolling into the library, Brother Benedict, with a sweep of his hand, shows off a solid wall of books.

"A monastery without books is like a fortress without an arsenal," he said with a grin, confessing that he can never get enough of reading good books and was attracted to the order because its ancient rules provide that monks "should have books without number."

The monks rise each morning at 4:30. Before retiring they will devote at least 6½ hours to praising their God. "We live on the periphery of society," Brother Benedict teld the visitor, "because we don't agree with many of the values of society...The monk is a person who anticipates death, anticipates it in a healthy sort of way. The monk gives up now what we all have to give up anyway and begins what we all will do, praise God.

"DEATH ISN'T faced very realistically by most people. The younger generation today may be more knowledgeable — with TV, the press, education — but they are not as mature. Maturity is having an authentic understanding of the proper order of things."

That proper order, the monks believe, is a world in which God, not mankind, is at the center of human life.

"The Catholic Church is seen in the world, especially by intellectuals, as an enemy to progress. But I see it as an institution that will bring man to ultimate happiness by following the laws of God," Brother Benedict added.

Down at the poolhouse, which once served as an entertainment center, other monks toil in the kitchen. Each week they turn out about 500 pounds of fudge in six varieties — chocolate, chocolate with walnuts, butterscotch, chocolate peanut butter, golden peanut butter and, of course, divinity. It sells for about $7 per pound. They also make pumpkin and zucchini bread, carrot cake and Scandinavian crunch bars.

THE NOUN "fudge" started out meaning "a piece of foolish nonsense from the verb fudge or fadge, which meant to act dishonestly," according to Edward Gates, secretary-treasurer of the Dictionary Society of North America.

How it crossed the line from dishonesty to tasty is one of those mysteries, like the origins of monastic life, that are known only to God.

Like Adam after he was cast out of the Garden of Eden, monks in many Catholic religious orders support themselves by the sweat of their brows. The Carthusians make chartreuse liqueur, the Christian Brothers make wine, the Trappists make wine and bread and the hermit Camaldolese monks in Big Sur, Calif., are known for their fruitcakes.

While working, the Brigittine monks remain silent except to exchange necessary information. "We are silent, but practical about it," Brother Benedict said. "We do this all by hand, although we hope to get some automated equipment.

"ALL OF OUR baking is to support our lives of prayer," he added, guiding his guest away from the kitchen and toward the mansion-cum-monastery where the Brigittines carry on their real work.

"Monastic life is not for everybody," Brother Benedict said. "But I have always liked what Dostoevsky said of monks in 'The Brothers Karamazov.' Have you read how Father Zossima instructs his disciples? 'For monks are not a special sort of men,' Father Zossima told them, 'but only what all men ought to be.' "

"We are corresponding now with five young men who want to join us, but we screen very carefully. These are young men who find their lives empty, without basic values," Brother Benedict said. Perhaps for some of them happiness will be found in Camelot.

Men, reported to be passengers, peer from an open exit of a Chinese airliner that landed near Seoul, South Korea, today.

Chinese plane's Seoul flight may be defection, hijacking

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The Defense Ministry said a Chinese airliner landed in South Korea today after the pilot indicated some of the people on board wished to defect.

Passengers and crew aboard the Soviet-made Tu-154 aircraft were safe and "under the protection" of authorities at a U.S. Air Force base east of Seoul, it said.

Defense Ministry spokesman Brig. Gen. Park Chong-Shik refused to disclose the name of the base or its exact location for security reasons.

South Korean newspapers indicated the Chinese plane may have been forced to land by hijackers. One account said a note had been sent off the plane asking for food for 104 people. Another said three armed men were aboard the plane.

Nicaraguan aid debated

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, expressing doubts about the legitimacy of Nicaragua's unelected government, says he would consider open support for that country's "freedom fighters" if no congressional restrictions were attached.

But, in comments to six reporters Wednesday, Reagan said he hopes the administration will be able to continue covert aid to Nicaragua's rebels despite signs of strong Democratic resistance.

Reagan's expression of skepticism about the legitimacy of Nicaragua's government because it is unelected added a new dimension to the administration's campaign against the Sandinista leadership.

The United States maintains relations — often friendly — with a number of governments whose leadership is unelected, including Yugoslavia, Guatemala, China, Chile, Haiti and a host of African nations.

Salvadoran amnesty OK'ed

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The Constituent Assembly has voted to free some political prisoners and allow rebels to turn themselves in without prosecution under an amnesty program already rejected by the guerrillas.

The program is "crude attempt to halt the collapse of the regime," a rebel radio broadcast said prior to Wednesday's vote.

Some members of the Constituent Assembly also questioned the new law, contending it would not guarantee the safety of leftists as long as right-wing "death squads" continue to operate in the country.

Despite the objections, the assembly approved the amnesty unanimously.

Poles look to pope's visit

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The large turnout for pro-Solidarity demonstrations this week produced no concessions from the government, and many Poles now are looking ahead to Pope John Paul II's planned visit in June as the next chance to break the political stalemate.

Solidarity founder Lech Walesa pronounced the protests a success, while the government described them as a failure and firmly reasserted its authority. It rejected Walesa's latest call for talks, rebuffed a papal request for an amnesty, and routed peaceful marches after Roman Catholic Masses Tuesday evening.

Few people in Poland believe the government will reopen talks with the outlawed Solidarity union, no matter how many supporters take to the streets, and many are looking instead to the June 16-22 visit by Polish-born John Paul as a means of reviving the public spirit.

Sitter convicted in scalding

AGANA, Guam (AP) — A 24-year-old woman has been convicted of second-degree murder for the scalding death last year of an 18-month old baby whom she was babysitting.

A jury deliberated about three hours Wednesday after a four-day trial before convicting Julia Ann Foster.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Paul Vernier suggested during the trial that Ms. Foster wanted to punish John Wayne Jarvis for continually wetting his pants by placing him in a kitchen sink filled with scalding water.

The boy suffered third-degree burns from the waist down and died 45 days later on Aug. 16, 1982. He had been flown to to Tripler Army Medical Center in Hawaii for treatment.

Mexicans seize trailer camp

ALAMOS, Mexico (AP) — Pistol-packing peasants have seized a trailer camp near this northern Mexican resort town, but its four American residents have locked themselves in to escape eviction.

"They don't want to leave. They are in their houses," Alamos Mayor Humberto Franco said Wednesday night.

No injuries have been reported in the standoff, which began Sunday when some 80 squatters with rifles and pistols occupied the El Caracol (Snail) trailer park, claiming the land is theirs under an agrarian reform program.

Negotiations with the peasants were continuing today, and the U.S. deputy consul in Hermosillo, Delvin Junker, has been in contact with the Americans, the U.S. Embassy in Mexico City said.

Rehabilitation funds sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — A fund-raising effort to provide medical aid to children injured in last summer's war in Lebanon was announced today by former Sen. James Abourezk.

A benefit concert will be held at Washington's Kennedy Center on May 22 to raise money for Save Lebanon, Inc., Abourezk said.

TODAY'S USED CARS ARE MORE USED!

People are keeping their cars far longer before trading them for a new model. That's one big reason why you should be even more careful when you buy a used car. At our place, we've become even more finicky about the trade-in cars we offer for sale. Only the best will do for our customers.

Now, more than ever...WHERE you buy a used car is as important as WHAT you buy. Our reputation for offering good value for the money is your best assurance...buying your used car.
