Decontrol won't cause big 'spurt' in activity

By BILL MODISETT
Staff Writer

When President Ronald Reagan announced shortly after taking office he was lifting price controls on domestic crude oil some seven months earlier than originally scheduled, one could almost hear the cheering of oilmen in the Permian Basin. One of their long-sought goals had become a reality.

But now the imagined cheering has stopped. Life goes on and the pumpjacks continue their tireless exercise.

What will decontrol of crude oil prices really mean to the oil-rich Permian Basin?

Will there be a "burst" of growth and activity in the Midland oil community — surpassing even the phenomenal growth experienced in the past decade?

What does the future hold for Midland, Texas?

Decontrol, Midland oilmen say, will definitely be beneficial to the oil industry and the Tall City. But they paint a different picture from the envisioned spurt of oil activity.

That has already occurred, noted Tom Brown, president of the Midland corporation that bears his name. "Practically everything workable in this area has been working for some time," Brown noted.

DREW MCMANIGLE, president of Odessa's Devonian Well Service, agreed. "Business has picked up substantially in the past six months."

In fact, McManigle revealed a perplexing oil industry problem echoed by others in the oil industry locally: "Our biggest problem is we can't get enough rigs because the manufacturers of rigs are 'snowed' with orders."

It seems that the nation's appetite for oil has surpassed the oil industry's ability to provide that valuable commodity.

Jack Major, president of MGF Drilling Co. which also is a manufacturer of rigs, observed that "Right now we're manufacturing drilling rigs as fast as we can — and probably faster than we can train personnel to run them."

McManigle said the oil activity really boomed at the first of last year. All his company's workover rigs are busy now and every day he receives numerous calls from major oil companies and independents who can't find a workover rig.

While most oilmen do not see a big "spurt" of additional oil activity in the Permian Basin region, many anticipate a steady increase in activity for the next several years at least.

How long will the oil activity hold out? Good question. But everyone seems to have a different answer.

BROWN SAID HE thinks "we're looking at an industry that'll be strong for 10 to 20 years."

McManigle said he has heard forecasts of a virtual "boom" situation for up to seven years. Personally, he feels the oil activity will be good here for three to five years.

"It's the best it has been in the past four years, from my viewpoint anyway," he added.

Noting that "the whole atmosphere of the industry has already improved noticeably," Permian Basin Petroleum Association executive director Ed Thompson said, "I look for a lot of activity in reopening old fields and reworking old wells."

But Thompson, and most of the oilmen, agree that the price of "black

Reagan speech 'straight talk'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will seek "quick action" from Congress on the tax and budget cuts he will propose in his "straight talk" speech to Congress next week, his spokesman said Saturday.

White House press secretary James S. Brady said the president's address would "emphasize the need for a comprehensive approach" to the nation's economic problems.

"It's going to be straight talk to the Congress and the nation," he said.

"You can expect him to call on the Congress for quick action," Brady said, adding that congressional leaders "have suggested they would try to move it expeditiously" and complete some work by a recess planned for May.

The press secretary also disclosed that Reagan had withdrawn 33 budget rescissions sought by President Jimmy Carter five days before Carter left office.

The rescissions, which allow the executive not to spend funds already allocated unless Congress objects within 45 days, totaled $1.1 billion.

Reagan, in a letter sent to Congress Friday, said he wanted to convert them temporarily to spending deferrals, which would postpone the allocations until the next budget year.

"The conversion to temporary deferrals will provide my administration with the opportunity to review and revise these proposals within the context of my overall plan to curtail the growth of government and reduce federal spending," Reagan said in the letter.

The president spent the day at Camp David. The speech he will give Wednesday night at 9 p.m. EST was his primary focus, Brady said.

The press secretary said Reagan, who will remain at the presidential retreat until Monday afternoon, was working on a first draft of the address, which will outline his proposed budget and tax cuts.

Specific figures for individual departments will be made public in an accompanying written message to Congress.

Assistant White House press secretary Mark Weinberg, at Camp David with the president, said Reagan and his wife strolled around the grounds of the mountaintop compound for 45 minutes Saturday morning. He said Reagan also worked on the economic proposals at his study in Aspen Lodge, the presidential cabin.

For Valentine's Day, the president gave his wife chocolates in a heart-shaped box.

Carter had proposed spending $739.3 billion in fiscal 1982, which begins Oct. 1. If Reagan meets the goal of a $50 billion cut — the figure being used by Budget Director David A. Stockman — government spending would be $689.3 billion.

Brady said on Friday that the president had made decisions on the "big ticket" items in the budget, and other sources said the president had decided to:

—Make the start of a proposed three-year, 30 percent cut in personal income tax rates effective July 1, rather than retroactive to Jan. 1, as had been considered.

—Make a companion proposal to reduce business taxes retroactive to Jan. 1.

—Propose an increase in military spending of $26.6 billion; the details on how the additional funds will be spent are "still being negotiated."

—Propose cutting $1.8 billion from the $8 billion foreign aid budget and let the State Department decide how to allocate the cuts. Stockman had proposed a $2.6 billion cut.

—Propose phasing out of the government's public service jobs program, commonly known as CETA, for a saving of about $3.5 billion in 1982.

—Propose elimination of the "national trigger" for payment of 13 extra weeks of unemployment benefits nationwide. Under the proposal, extended benefits would be paid only in individual states with high unemployment, and the way the "trigger" is calculated in those states would be changed. The estimated saving next year would be $2.1 billion.

Brady also disclosed Friday that the president had rejected proposals that he ask Congress to reduce the maximum tax rate on unearned income from 70 percent to 50 percent. Such a reduction would primarily benefit major investors and people with large savings accounts.

Bush cites Reagan stamina, class

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Ronald Reagan wasn't George W. Bush's first choice for president. That honor went to his father, George H.W. Bush, a former Midlander.

During head-on confrontations in the presidential primaries, and later in merging the forces against the Democrats in the general election, the younger Bush caught glimpses of the man who will set the pace for the Administration and rest of the country. And Bush was pleased with what he saw.

His glimpses reveal Reagan to be a man of physical stamina, decisiveness, patriotism and humor mixed with class, said the younger Bush to members of the West Texas Press Association during a Saturday luncheon.

The association had gathered for its 32nd annual mid-winter meeting in The Midland Hilton.

Reagan's characteristics, said the Midland independent oilman, will pull the president through the country's economic problems.

BUSH ADMITTED that when the presidential campaign started about two years ago, he was unfamiliar with Reagan.

"A bunch of young bucks went into the primaries, setting up tough schedules, hoping to run Reagan into the ground," he said, and included his father in that group.

Reagan, who at 70 is one of the oldest men to serve as president, "is physically in excellent shape. He's a 6 to 11 campaigner, and will work the same hours as president," said Bush.

"This guy has got a lot of stamina. Just ask George Bush," he said in referring to his father, who was the last Republican candidate to concede to Reagan's strength.

Nor is Reagan a "wishy-washy" person. Immediately after raking in a large plurality of votes in the New Hampshire primary, Reagan fired his campaign manager, John Sears. That move, observed the younger Bush, "was brilliant. And there was no hesitancy in it. Reagan is a man of decisive action."

Another decisive action came at the Republican National Convention in Detroit. Stirring in dabs of humor about his father throughout the speech, Bush confessed that in July the father was faced with "a serious family problem. My old man had been unemployed for about a year."

AMID THE RISING wave of excitement over the possibility of former President Gerald Ford plucking the vice presidential seat, Reagan went to the convention hall and quelled the rumors. By offering the country's second top spot to Bush, he also put the Republican back to work.

"Reagan settled the matter of the vice president by saying his choice was Dad, and he left the hall with the people united," Bush related.

Reagan, who has lived in California most of his life, is the epitomy of a true Western man, in the younger Bush's eyes.

"He is an easy-going fellow in the Western sense, a fellow who knows where he is headed, and he won't let the trappings of the presidency overwhelm him," Bush said.

After spending a few days with Reagan and his family in Washington, D.C. during the inaugural acitivites, Bush views the President as a "guy with class, and we need class in Washington."

And while the President and his wife, Nancy, appeared relaxed and smiling at each of the 10 inaugural balls, Bush confessed the Vice President didn't hold up to the strenuous schedule quite as well.

"I SAW DAD at the last one (ball), and he was the grumpiest I've ever seen him," the son joked.

Reagan's patriotism is no put-on,

Trouble in our own back yard

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST, JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

New York — Foreign policy always must be a major concern for the President of the United States. Whether we like it or not, destiny has cast this country in the role of a world leader whose international relations directly affect the lives of millions.

Even when the economy stands front and center on the presidential stage, as it does with President Reagan, who is preparing another address on the subject for next Wednesday, foreign policy problems stand urgently in the wings.

HEARST

To most Americans "foreign policy" principally means our dealings with the nations of Europe and Asia and the continent of Africa, or our diplomatic efforts in the Middle East.

For some reason we tend to forget that our neighbors to the south must play a continuing role in all our foreign policy decisions.

Latin Americans in general are our friends, but mixed among them are dangerous and potentially dangerous forces. Trouble spots are multiplying in that part of the world, and we know too little about them.

It's time we paid more attention to our troubled back yard. A good place to start is on our Caribbean doorstep where Harvard-educated Edward Seaga won a welcome victory as Prime Minister of Jamaica.

His unexpected landslide — overwhelming imported Castro assassins and trained terrorist cadres from nearby Cuba — applied the brakes abruptly to a surreptitious Soviet program to infiltrate the Caribbean and thus potentially cut off the U.S. from vital sea and air lanes. The grand design of the Russians is essentially to surround us with their surrogate regimes. This Moscow failed to do in 1962, which brought the world to the brink of nuclear war before the late Nikita Khrushchev blinked first.

While Soviet and Cuban proteges have been retreating elsewhere in the Caribbean since Seaga's signal victory in Jamaica, they have by no means disappeared. Many of their armed revolutionary forces have receded either into impenetrable country to await regrouping or went un-

Education main concern in Texas

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The quality of education seems to be the No. 1 concern of Texans, State Sen. W.E. "Pete" Snelson said Saturday in the closing round of the West Texas Press Association's 32nd annual meeting in the Midland Hilton.

"We've got to act responsibly, and we've got to act boldly to do something about the state of education in our country," the senator, a Midland-based advertising executive, said.

And he pledged that "this (Texas) Legislature is going to try to provide some answers."

Snelson, who was first elected to the Texas Senate in 1964, outlined the Legislature's first 30 days and promises for its next 110 days in the current session.

IN HIS lamentations on the state of primary, secondary and higher education, Snelson commented:

—On the Legislature's proposal to raise the alcoholic-beverage drinking age from 18 to 19: School administrators "couldn't cope with them (teenagers) going out and getting 'loaded' and coming back to school."

—On the return to basics — reading, writing and arithmetic: If schools taught every discipline, urged by special interests, outside the basics, students would be going to school "23 hours a day."

—Teachers' pay: "Teaching school is not a big bonanza financially." Snelson observed that vocational-educated workers who bypassed the rigors of academics are drawing "twice as much (pay) as beginning teachers."

—On higher education, cheating and padding enrollment: The senator noted the frequency of "cheating by athletes to make them eligible" to stay in classes and on the team. "We have some (cheating) in our own state."

He also mentioned the incident of some administrators' to "pad enrollments" in these day of declining numbers of college students. Funding of state-supported institutions is directly related to quantity of students. Snelson admonished educators to determine "how good of a job are we doing and (to) stop playing the numbers game."

Sen. W.E. "Pete" Snelson

—Bilingual education: In responding to a proposed blanket bilingual education program for the 12 basic grades in public schools, Snelson said Texas is not equipped to carry out such a program. "Frankly, we don't have enough resources, in my opinion, to spread them through 12 years."

—Hoarding funds: Snelson said The University of Texas System and Texas A&M University System are trying to "make more secure" the University Permanent Fund. A battle over the funds is ensuing.

—The dilemma: Snelson cited two examples of extremes in the classroom. The first is the brilliant student who drops out of school and enters the job market because he is "bored academically." The other is the slow student who "doesn't like school" but prefers "to do things with his hands." In the latter, "Mother brought him to the principal, the principal spanked him, and he (the student) went out the back door." The cycle then repeated itself.

"EVERYBODY'S GOT an educational plan but the B-student," said Snelson. Sometimes, the B-student is grouped with the "gifted and talented" honors students or he's assigned to the slow group, and that's not fair."

He suggested that B-students might end up being community leaders, the money men.

"You ought to be fair with your B-students," he said a college professor was advised, "because he's the one who's going to come back and build you a library."

Prior to his dissertation on education, Snelson, a Democrat, made reference to Republican President Ronald Reagan's bringing of order to press conferences. Such order and decorum, he implied, was in contrast to ex—President Jimmy Carter's conduct of conferences with the press corps; Carter was far more informal. Newsmen will "not (now) be jumping up and hollering."

AND APPARENTLY Texas's Republican Gov. Bill Clements is taking a cue from Reagan. Clements, he said, will no longer hold "mini-press conferences...as he runs to the door."

In introducing Snelson, James Roberts, editor-publisher of The Andrews County News, noted the senator's service to West Texas.

"He's been good for this area," Roberts said. "This is a man that knows West Texas business...He knows West Texas problems...He knows the newspaper business, and Texas in general."

The witty and barb-tossing Roberts also noted the basic difference between a politician and a cockroach: It's not so much what they say or do, but "It's what they fall into and mess up..."

In getting in the last word after the senator's speech, Roberts suggested that education indeed has changed since he was a youngster many years ago.

Today, for example, sex education is taught in the classroom.

"When I went to school, we all had to wait 'til recess," the Andrews editor quipped.

Soviet news says U.S. breaches '72 accord

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet news agency Tass said Saturday that despite charges from the Reagan administration, it is Washington and not Moscow that is breaching a 1972 code of conduct limiting the superpowers in their pursuit of global objectives.

"The imperialist policy of the United States has recently seen a transition from creating isolated hotbeds of tension to spreading conflicts and military confrontations to whole regions," the official Soviet news agency said in a 750-word commentary signed by Yevgeni Yegorov.

Alleged violations of the 1972 agreement, signed by then-president Richard M. Nixon and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, are the latest debating points in the tough rhetoric that has marked the beginning of U.S.-Soviet relations under the Reagan administration.

Last week, Tass claimed the United States violated the accord by "illegally" declaring many areas of the world, including the oil-rich Persian Gulf, to be in its sphere of interest. Tass said the U.S. government sent naval task forces to several such areas, enlarged old military bases, established new ones and "staged provocative military exercises near the shores of other countries."

On Friday, State Department spokesman William Dyess replied that "the record of the last five years clearly reveals that it was the Soviets who were responsible for violating the basic principles of the agreement."

Dyess noted the presence of Soviet troops in Afghanistan and what he called Soviet support for Cuban troops in Angola.

Under the 1972 agreement, the two countries recognized that "efforts to obtain unilateral advantage at the expense of the other, directly or indirectly, are inconsistent" with the greater aim of peace and cooperation.

Although the document concentrated on bilateral dealings, current debate centers on Article III, in which the superpowers pledged to "seek to promote conditions in which all countries will live in peace and security and will not be subject to outside interference in their internal affairs."

In Saturday's commentary, Tass argued that the Carter administration laid the "ideological basis" for widening international confrontation by singling out "three basic regions of vitally important interest to the United States, namely Western Europe, Eastern Asia and the Middle East-Southwest Asia."

Rusk says lack of courtesy may hurt Reagan administration

By The Associated Press

Former Secretary of State Dean Rusk says a lack of courtesy may hurt the Reagan administration in its early dealings with the Russians. But Edmund Muskie, who last held the top foreign policy post, endorses the blunt language the new administration seems to be using in its initial dealings with the Soviet Union.

Rusk, who was the country's top foreign policy administrator under presidents John Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson, said Friday two actions were embarrassing to Anatolyn Dobrynin, Soviet ambassador to the United States.

Rusk said Dobrynin should not have been turned away from his customary private entrance to the State Department.

Dobrynin was afforded the courtesy of using the secretary of state's private elevator in the State Department building during the Kennedy administration "for our convenience, not his. Sometimes we wanted to talk with him in private," Rusk said.

)He said current Secretary of State Alexander Haig's blunt communication with the Soviet ambassador didn't help U.S.-Soviet relations either.

The secretary of state may tell the ambassador "in measured tones to go to hell" in diplomatic correspondence, Rusk said, "but we always treated each other with impeccable personal courtesy. Personal discourtesy produces no results."

Rusk, a professor of international law at the University of Georgia, spoke during an alumni conference on foreign affairs in Athens, Ga.

Army checks miscarriages, birth defects on base

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — Army doctors are investigating a building in a large military-industrial complex where women employees have reported a high number of birth defects and miscarriages, authorities said Saturday.

Ten women have suffered miscarriages and four others gave birth to babies with birth defects in the past 18 months, said one of the women employees, who asked that her name not be used.

The Army said no connection has been made between the building and the birth problems.

All of the woman worked in a building housing the regional office of the Defense Contract Administration Services, located between Dobbins Air Force Base and Lockheed-Georgia Co.

The birth defects included hernias, eye defects and spinal defects, said the woman involved in the problem. One of the four babies died, she said.

Dr. Richard Tezak of the Army Environmental Hygiene Agency was called in by the defense agency to check the building and interview the women, said Jim Markiewicz, a spokesman for the Army's Health Services Command.

Tezak found no connection between the building and the birth problems, Markiewicz said, although he has not yet filed his report.

"There was no apparent problem in the work environment that would relate to the alleged abnormalities," Markiewicz said in a telephone interview from his San Antonio office.

Tezak declined to be interviewed.

A spokesman for the national Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta said it was not unusual that no connection was made.

"Those cluster studies are hard to do," said spokesman Don Berreth. "Even at Love Canal, there are no good studies showing those people were adversely affected. It was a horrendous place to live but there are no studies saying why those people were harmed."

The CDC was not involved in the Marietta study, Berreth said.

Addison Glover, regional deputy of the agency, said he would wait to see Tezak's report before commenting on the findings. He said it would take up to three months to be completed.

"If we have a problem or if we don't, we'll talk to the ladies involved both ways," he said.

Glover said 550 people work in the building, which also houses the Defense Contract Audit Agency and a Selective Service office. He could not say how many are women.

Defense contract Administration Services is responsible for cost analysis, on-site inspection, industrial security and equal employment opportunity compliance on projects involving private industry.

New quake jolts Southern Italy

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — A strong tremor rocked southern Italy Saturday night, knocking down several buildings and sending thousands of people into the streets in panic in the same area hit by the devasting earthquake Nov. 23.

Police and first aid officials said seven people died of heart attacks apparently triggered by fear. One was 31 years old. The rest were elderly.

Three people were injured, one seriously, in the small mountain town of Baiano when a house collapsed, firemen said.

The Interior Ministry in Rome said the quake, measuring about 4.8 on the Richter Scale, had its epicenter near Sant'Angelo dei Lombardi, a town 90 miles east of Naples.

Sant'Angelo dei Lombardi was 95 percent destroyed by the November quake which killed 2,700 people and left 260,000 homeless in a vast area east of Naples.

Many of the buildings damaged by the earlier quake were evacuated after officials decided they were unsafe. And most of the homeless are living in campers, tents, or schools rather in than quake-prone buildings — a fact likely to reduce the chance of many severe injuries or deaths in the latest tremor.

"It's nothing like the Nov. 23 quake," the commander of the paramilitary police for Eboli, southeast of Naples, told an Italian reporter since the November quake there have been more than 900 small tremors, most of which have not caused serious damage.

"In our jurisdiction — which includes the area of Alto Sele and the countryside around Eboli, it doesn't seem as if there has been damage to people or things," the police commander said.

In the northern town of Faenza, the Bendandi Observatory, which registers earthquakes, said the quake struck at 6:28 p.m. local time (12:28 EST).

A spokesman for the Interior Ministry in Rome said the damage did not appear to be great in Avellino or in Naples.

Official brushes off criticism

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A Foreign Ministry official said Saturday that Israel "does not view as very serious" State Departement criticism of the expansion of Jewish settlements in occupied lands, because President Reagan was already on record as saying he did not view them as illegal.

David Kimche, director-general of the Israeli Foreign Ministry, suggested that State Department spokesman William Dyess "perhaps did not do his homework and did not realize that this was an existing policy and nothing new had happened."

Last Wednesday, Dyess issued the Reagan administration's strongest criticism to date on the controversial Israeli policy, saying that both Reagan and Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig-Jr. believed that any expansion of settlements on the West Bank of the Jordan River "can only harm prospects for negotiations" over the future of the region.

"We appreciate to a much greater degree the fact that President Reagan has gone on record as saying he does not view these villages as illegal," Kimche said in an interview with Israel Radio.

In the week before Dyess' comment, Reagan told reporters that a "rush" toward establishment of settlements might be ill-advised and unnecessarily provocative, but that the settlements were not illegal.

Aftershocks follow big earthquake

SEATTLE (AP) — An earthquake aftershock startled many residents of Western Washington Saturday afternoon, less than a day after the Pacific Northwest's largest earthquake in 16 years rattled dishes and shook pictures on walls from northern California to British Columbia.

Saturday's temblor at 1:27 p.m. PST registered about 3.7 on the Richter scale and was the largest since Friday's night's quake, said A.B. Adams, spokesman for the University of Washington geophysics center in Seattle.

"That's a conservative estimate. We don't want to scare people," he added.

He said he received telephone calls from Longview and Kelso in Southwest Washington and from Mercer Island near Seattle, reporting Saturday's rumble.

The Cowlitz County Sheriff's office in Kelso received a dozen or so calls also reporting the quake, said Anna Morrison, a clerk in the office.

More than 100 aftershocks, most of them small, quivered beneath the earth Saturday in the aftermath of Friday night's quake, which measured 5.5 on the Richter scale and was centered about 12 miles northwest of Mount St. Helens. That quake caused no major damage and no injuries.

But it caused buildings to sway in Seattle and Portland and reportedly was blamed for a Boeing Co. computer failure.

Seattle Police Sgt. M.W. Terry said all police lines were jammed for 10 minutes after the Friday quake.

Lewis County sheriff's deputies near where the quake was centered reported some "structural damage" and said many phones were out of order in the county.

The quake, which began at 10:09 p.m. PST, was in an area of known geologic faults and apparently unrelated to the volcano, said Jim Unterwegner, a U.S. Forest Service spokesman.

It shook Washington, Oregon, Southern British Columbia and Northern California and was centered 4.2 miles underground near Elk Lake in Southwest Washington, said scientists at the University of Washington geophysics center.

Adams, a geophysics spokesman, said he received telephone calls from as far away as Northern California Friday night, reporting quaking.

He said most of the aftershocks were in the very light 1.5 to 3 range, which can be detected by sensitive instruments but not people.

At a seismograph station 24 miles from the volcano, there were 43 aftershocks between 10:09 p.m. and 4:30 a.m., Adams reported.

By 1 p.m., he said, the "intensity and frequency" of the aftershocks was decreasing.

Adams said it was unusual to have aftershocks in state of Washington but not unknown, explaining there were 70 aftershocks after the 4.2 Bremerton earthquake of 1978.

Adams said scientists plan to install more seismic monitoring equipment in the quake area.

"There's kind of a gap up there in our seismic monitoring up there," he said.

'Racehorse' Haynes to defend Vickie Daniel in murder trial

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, the noted Houston attorney, will defend Vickie Daniel in her murder trial for last month's shooting death of her husband, former Texas House Speaker Price Daniel Jr.

Haynes said he agreed to represent Mrs. Daniel after talking to her late Friday.

"I think it's a defensible case," he said. He added that he will lower his usual fee because Mrs. Daniel's funds reportedly are tied up in probate court proceedings.

"I'm very pleased Haynes has agreed to help her," said Andrew J. Lannie of Baytown, Mrs. Daniel's attorney. He said he considered Haynes to be the "best lawyer we could have hoped to have obtained."

Haynes said Lannie and attorney Harlan Friend of Liberty will be on the defense team.

Haynes' successes include his defense of Fort Worth millionaire Cullen Davis on murder and murder solicitation charges.

Mrs. Daniel was ordered by a judge Friday to turn over all her late husband's personal property, but a sealed file of her correspondence remained closed.

State District Judge W.G. Wood's ruling had little real impact because Lannie said he returned all of Daniel's possessions, with the exception of the file, after a Feb. 4 injunction.

Friday's hearing concerned one of two suits filed by Daniel's sister, Jean Daniel Murph, who is seeking to gain control of any of Daniel's personal property that might be in his widow's possession.

Lannie also filed papers Friday formally contesting the other suit in which Mrs. Murph seeks custody of Daniel's two young sons.

Local senior attends symposium

Midland High School senior Paul Hughston is attending the eighth Junior Science, Engineering and Humanities Symposium as a guest at the University of Texas at Austin this week.

Hughston, along with Lee High School student Carolyn Thomas, was among 100 students across the state who were invited to participate in the symposium based on abstracts of research that were entered in competition this fall.

Hughston, who is a student of MHS physics teacher Mike Mullins, sent in a 200-word abstract on his project, "The Hardening Process of Polymers." He tested 12 different hardnesses at regular intervals with a projectile dropped from a fixed height. He then measured depth of impact with a micrometer. Hughston used everything from epoxy glue to various dental polymers in his experiment.

For her project, Miss Thomas programmed a Radio Shack TRS-80 computer to determine the points of intersection given an angle with the major axis and two points on the parabola. Miss Thomas is not attending the seminar.

The event at the University of Texas is part of a national and international program sponsored by the United States Army to encourage high school students to pursue careers in science.

Twelve winners from this state contest will participate in national competition in May, and five winners from that competition will enter an international event later in the summer.

Klan, fishermen unite in rally against Viets

SANTA FE, Texas (AP) — A blazing 25-foot-high cross burned in a wooded field Saturday night as the Ku Klux Klan and Galveston Bay fishermen joined in a protest against an influx of Vietnamese refugee fishermen.

Shortly before the cross burned, a small boat nearby, labeled "USS Viet Cong," was set afire.

About 250 people showed up for the rally on the 30 acres near this Gulf Coast community about 45 miles southwest of Houston.

But Louis Beam, grand dragon of the Texas KKK, told the crowd, "We are willing to enlist any of American fishermen to send to our training camp and then you will be ready to handle the Vietnamese."

He also said earlier, in an interview, that if the state or federal government did not take action in the next 90 days to help the American fishermen, "We, all of us, are going to find someway to do it."

Beam would not elaborate.

Gene Fisher, 35, a fisherman from nearby Kemah said the KKK rally was not one of racial hatred "but one of economics for me and the people I know."

Fisher said he sought the help of the KKK because of the desire for publicity about the plight of fishermen, who say Vietnamese immigrants have refused to obey traditional local customs regarding fishing rights.

The U.S. Justice Department has tried to mediate but the dispute erupted into a shooting incident last year that killed one man.

Pointing to a group of reporters, Fisher said he asked the Klan to help "because this was one way to get your attention."

"I want the attention of the state government and the federal government and I want them to understand how we are hurting along Galveston Bay. There are no fishermen that I know of that are KKK members, but this is one way to get people to listen to our plight," he said.

Fisher said Vietnamese refugee fishermen were mving intothe Gulf Coast area at an astounding rate and if "this keeps up we are going to be frozen out of our jobs as American fishermen."

The approach to the rally led over a bumpy road where armed Klansmen stood guard.

One small boy walked among the crowd with a toy rifle on his shoulder, challenging anyone to face him in a draw-down.

About 250 people had assembled for a fish fry.

Gulf coast fishermen are up in arms over the way the Vietnamese fishermen fish the bays along the Texas coast and, according to them, the Federal Government is not enforcing the laws on fishing. Latest bones from animals

ATLANTA (AP) — One day after the discovery of two more children's bodies, about 200 people gathered Saturday for a police-sponsored seminar on how to deal with children's emotional problems caused by the slayings of 17 black youngsters.

At the same time, 200 volunteers searching for evidence in the slayings found what appeared to be small leg bones in a southwest Atlanta neighborhood. But authorities said later that the bones, which were discovered in an area adjacent to where the skeleton of a young child was found Friday, were animal remains.

Parents, social workers, teachers, youth leaders and psychologists met at Atlanta University for the all-day conference designed to help children and parents cope with deep, widespread fear.

"The living and learning environment of children at home, school and the playground may not be psychologically safe," Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown said. "Parents and teachers are reportedly having difficulty handling the increased levels of stress and anxiety exhibited by children."

Sandra Sims, director of child development at Spelman College, said fears have been manifested in children refusing to go to school or in some cases trying to arm themselves with knives and guns before leaving home.

Some youngsters are reporting recurring nightmares, bed wetting and other symptoms of acute anxiety, Ms. Sims said.

The workshop was set up to help a group of mental health professionals develop ways to help parents. Individual sessions included such topics as strengthening communication skills to reduce stress in the black family and using community resources to help the families.

The bodies of 17 children have been found in the past 19 months, including two on Friday. One of those bodies was identified quickly, but medical examiners were working Saturday to identify the other. It was not known if it was one of two children who remain missing.

Six bodies have been found in the past five weeks alone.

All the children whose slayings and disappearances are under investigation by a special task force were black and most were male. All were between 7 and 15 years old. Police believe some of the cases are related, but not all.

Medical examiners said it would take several days to identify one of the bodies found Friday, but said it was probably a black male between the ages of 9 and 11.

The other body discovered Friday was identified as 11-year-old Patrick Baltazar, police said. The body was found sprawled at the bottom of a syringe near an office complex in suburban DeKalb County.

Authorities said Baltazar, who disappeared about 10 days ago, was the eighth victim in the string of deaths to have been suffocated or strangled.

Meanwhile, a group of teen-agers calling themselves the Atlanta Youth Patrol walked city streets Friday night to help enforce a strict 7 p.m.-6 a.m. curfew, according to Grace Davis, head of Atlanta Women Against Crime, which organized the youth.

Decontrol will benefit Tall City

gold" is going in only one direction — up. And with it, the price of gasoline.

That's good in one respect, where the oilmen are concerned. It will mean more profit to put into expanded drilling operations to find new reserves. On the other side of the coin, though, Thompson said he feels the price of gasoline may soon reach the unbearable level.

CITING THE RECENT uproar over price hikes at the gasoline pump — many put into effect the day the president's decontrol announcement was made — Thompson said, "I can see why people got mad. I got mad myself."

Thompson believes most people were angered over the fact that some major oil companies were announcing record annual profits about the same time decontrol came about and gasoline prices were increased. It doesn't matter if the oil companies tell the public the profits were made overseas, Thompson said. "It's still coming out of our pockets."

He expects to see both the price of crude and of gasoline to "level off at the well-head and at the pump." The price probably will get a little higher before that leveling begins, though.

The reason for the leveling? When gasoline reaches the $1.50 a gallon level, he said, it probably will "run a bunch of cars into the garage."

"I think we're going to see increased domestic production, but that strictly is going to be dependent on the price," MGF's Major noted.

If the United States fails to recover its oil imports from Iran, he said, it's likely the nation will again go through temporary shortages. And the price of crude may increase by as much as $1 a barrel.

But, Major noted, "if the economics are favorable, producers will find the oil and produce it."

Who's the big winner in the oil decontrol story? Well, it might not be who you'd think.

THE BIG WINNERS, said Chuck Dellenback, division stratigrapher for Exxon Company USA's Southwestern Division in Midland, are the federal and state governments. About 20 percent of the additional money, he said, can be used for further exploration and production.

Thompson explained that the windfall profits tax and regular income taxes will consume about 70 percent of the $10 billion that will come in between now and Oct. 1 due to the increase in old oil prices.

Nobody will make an exorbitant profit, Dellenback agreed. Inflation, he said, will "be with us for four years at least." Measured against the framework of inflationary dollars, extra dollars to put into further exploration and production will be diminished.

"Oil and gas are non-renewable, finite resources," Dellenback observed. The long-term pressure resulting from that fact is that "we'll ultimately have to seek alternate resources as we approach the end of this century."

And some day the reality is that oil will be meaningless as an energy source. "In this energy-dependent country of ours we need every form of energy we can get," Dellenback added, "thermal, solar, nuclear. We need all of them."

For Midland, the city, most of the oilmen predict continuing steady growth. Major noted that Midland's growth seems tied to the oil industry, although a push has been under way to diversify industry here.

"I think the oil and gas business here has a long way to go," he opined.

Dellenback agreed. "I would anticipate that Midland would continue to grow and prosper — unless something "drastic" happens."

That drastic occurrence isn't even visible at this point in the Permian Basin's history.

"All of us have seen it up and down and up and down," McManigle noted. "But it seems like it's going to be up for quite awhile."

Refineries face new glut; Gasoline prices could drop

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The stockpile of gasoline at American refineries is fast approaching a record inventory that may cause slowdowns or shutdowns of the facilities and could eventually lower gasoline prices, oil industry expert Dan Lundberg said Saturday.

Consumer conservation of gasoline and continued production of fuel oil for winter heating were combining to create stocks of 277 million barrels of gas at refineries, in pipelines and at large terminals throughout the country, according to the Lundberg Letter, an oil industry publication.

"What the refineries are going to do with it, I don't know," Lundberg said. "The industry may have to drink it."

Lundberg said refinery production runs are at "uneconomic rates," dropping in January to 72.7 percent of capacity, from an already low of 76.6 percent in December. Refiners are faced with "even greater slowdowns, perhaps shutdowns."

Refiners generally like to run at about 90 percent capacity, the newsletter said.

Industry experts say production runs of less than 75 percent are not profitable for most refineries.

A record surplus of 283.1 million barrels, set in April of last year, brought an average 1.2-cent price drop over an eight-month period, and another overload "would almost certainly cool the current round of price increases," the Lundberg Letter said.

Midland's George Bush profiles President Reagan

according to Bush. "This guy loves this country. That might be a little corn-fed, but what's wrong with that?"

When the news about the 52 Americans' release from Iran was confirmed shortly after Reagan was handed the reins of this country, "he spoke with tremendous pride when he said the hostages were out of Iranian air space."

Reagan didn't wait long for the festivities to end before he got down to work. In fact, he was at a cabinet meeting at 8 a.m. the day after the inaugural, said Bush.

The cabinet consists of "all high quality people," he said, conceding that "fallings out could occur as time goes on."

Reagan is faced with a mandate to cure the country's economic ills, according to Bush. In fulfilling that mandate, the President "will take harsh measures early. He has the stick-to-itness to solve the problem. We've inherited a tremendous mess. It won't be solved overnight."

Reagan has pulled the vice president into "his inner counsel. He helped with the Cabinet picks. He's closely involved in what is happening."

Bush has been charged with examining government regulations and how the economy could be deregulated. He also is heading a task force on the missing children in Atlanta, Ga.

"There's no question these guys (Reagan and Bush) have grown to be close friends," Bush said, then quipped, "And they had a long way to go."

Editor's Report

dergrond in towns and built-up communities where they lie doggo waiting for the authorities to go slack before getting back into action.

This series of campaigns reminds me of what occurred in post-war Greece more than a generation ago. A few home-grown Communists, assisted by Stalin's armed hachetmen in the guise of "nationalists" exploded into civil war. President Truman came to the rescue of Greece, democracy's birthplace, not with troops but with aid, training and specialized skills that were eagerly learned.

In a couple of years, the Communists were routed from Greece. Meantime, land reform and agrarian independence were asserted as was the establishment of small industries which became inter-dependent. Plans and projects along these basic lines should be adapted to conditions where civil war and terror rage in small Caribbean countries.

The saddest plight is ripping through El Salvador, tiniest of the nations in the Caribbean, with a population of 2 million. It has an embattled centrist government whose writ is flagrantly violated by the pro-Communist left and private armies of the right. The killing has taken 11,000 lives of mainly innocent people.

To keep the Salvadoran revolution fuelled, the Soviet Union and Cuba agreed to deliver vast quantities of arms to Marxist guerrillas, many of whom they first trained and whose ranks they then infiltrated. The evidence for this Soviet-bloc pledge, in which other Communist regimes joined to assist "fighting comrades," was seized by Salvadoran security in a treasure trove of secret documents.

Those papers, U.S. intelligence agencies claim, are authentic and also frightening in their scope. For example, a top guerrilla, Shafik Handal, also secretary general of the Salvadoran Communist Party, exacted promises from the USSR, Cuba, Ethiopia, Vietnam and other East European capitals to supply 10,000 guerrillas with arms and uniforms.

Some of the weapons already have been sent into El Salvador by Cuban gun runners just as they supplied Sandinistas in Nicaragua to help bring down the Somoza government. Ironically, these arms were manufactured by the U.S. and seized in Vietnam. They have recently been confiscated from captured guerrillas. A quantity of Chinese-made small arms, once used by the Vietnamese and later seized in their border war with China also surfaced in El Salvador.

The intelligence data undoubtedly prompted the administration of President Reagan to resume arms and technical assisance deliveries to the beleaguered Salvadoran government, with which I fully agree.

That Soviet-led pledge of arms to countries on the U.S. doorstep certainly must go a long way towards deflating any self-righteous criticism. The killing, which included local and U.S. priests and nuns, as well as two U.S. labor union people helping on Salvadoran projects, is abhorrent to all civilized people.

At this writing the leftists in El Salvador appear to be losing ground. As in an earlier era in Greece, the guerrillas cannot compel the average farmer or city dweller, except in very remote areas where the gun rules, to follow the so-called revolution. Just the other day, for instance, 300 guerrillas surrendered on the promise of government amnesty. It marks a major turning point, I believe, in the Salvadoran civil war, as the Communists conceded "a temporary tactical retreat."

The guerrillas' surrender — which followed collapse of a Communist "final offensive" — came as the U.S. announced it was sending an ambassador to replace Robert E. White, fired by Secretary of State Haig. The new man is veteran diplomat Frederic (cq) Chapin, with lots of experience in Latin American affairs, and most recently in Ethiopia, a Soviet client-state mainly propped up by Cuba. Secretary Haig obviously had Chapin's experiences in mind when he said that the USSR had been involved in "unprecedented risk-taking" in support of revolutionary movements in Latin America and Africa.

It's touch-and-go with neighboring Nicaragua to the south where the left is solidly entrenched and whose security chief, once released from jail by Somoza because of international complaints has gone on an orgy of mass arrests. Among those he jailed are about 50 who clamored for his release when he was in jail. Executions in present-day Nicaragua are selective: prisoners lack food and water and the weaker victims die quickly.

In Guatemala — which borders El Salvador and Mexico — violence is also rampant. The death toll has risen high in the last month as the right and left terrorize each other but take time off to savage all the moderates.

Into this almost unreported central American cauldron, the Cubans have begun a new politico-gun-running operation, with Soviet approval.

As I mentioned at the outset, this is our backyard. Perhaps at long last, we're taking proper notice and, hopefully, adequate precautions.

Garwood won't go to prison

Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood leaves court at Camp Lejeune, N.C., Friday, with his arm around young D.J. Long, son of close friend Donna Long, after being reduced to Pvt., forced to forfeit all pay and allowances, and dishonorably discharged for collaborating with the enemy in Vietnam. Garwood's attorneys, John Lowe, left, and Capt. Lewis Olshin, right, follow him from court. (AP Laserphoto)

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — For the first time since he was captured more than 15 years ago while driving a jeep near Da Nang, Robert Garwood is free of the threat of military imprisonment — in the jungles of Vietnam or at home.

But problems still remain for the first Marine convicted of collaborating with the enemy.

His attorneys are seeking to overturn his conviction; he is fighting in the U.S. Court of Claims to collect $147,000 in back pay that accumulated during his captivity; and in nearby Jacksonville, N.C., he must face charges of having sexually molested a 7-year-old girl.

The Marine Corp reduced Garwood from private first class to private on Friday but it set him free. He could have been sent to prison for life.

"It's been a long time," a smiling Garwood said quietly after he heard the jurors who convicted him announce that they would not send him to prison at all.

The jury — five Marine officers, all Vietnam veterans — had convicted Garwood of collaborating during two of the 14 years he was a prisoner of war in Vietnam. On Friday, they voted to punish the crime, described by prosecutors as "heinous," with a dishonorable discharge.

The jury also sentenced Garwood to forfeit 10 days pay and demoted him to private. And with his dishonorable discharge, he will lose all veterans benefits.

The military jury quieted what Garwood said was his largest fear — prison. "It is futile to speculate what causes juries to do the special things they do," said Garwood's attorney, John C. Lowe.

Garwood was convicted also of assault on a fellow POW, David Harker, during their confinement in Vietnam. In court, Harker described the blow Garwood delivered to his ribs as offensive but not painful.

On Friday, the jury heard a statement from Harker, who said he "does not want Pfc. Garwood to receive any confinement for the assault incident" because he believes Garwood has been "punished enough."

It could have been Garwood's own statement to the jury. Garwood said he would bear the mark of his captivity in Vietnam all his life. The two years since he returned, he said, have been "a punishment."

Lowe told the jurors, "Bobby Garwood has paid more for what he did ... than anybody could reasonably expect a man to endure."

Or maybe the jury decided, as Lowe argued, that Garwood landed back in the United States at the wrong time. He was captured in September 1965 and freed in 1979 after enlisting the help of a Finnish businessman in Hanoi.

After the national celebration that was Operation Homecoming in 1973, charges of mutiny, informing and other crimes were leveled against 11 of the returned POWs. Later charges against them all were dropped.

Lowe gave the Garwood jurors Navy documents that showed officials had felt those POWs had suffered enough and feared that juries would agree and refuse to impose punishment.

"How can the American people justify ... cutting them loose?" Lowe asked, "How can this be equal justice under the law?"

Nearly all of Robert Russell Garwood's 34 years have been difficult. His mother left him when he was four years old. Garwood thought that she was dead or that she deserted her family.

At the age of four, he was sent to live with his impoverished grandmother. In the late evenings, she often sent him to collect leftover food from the neighbors' meals so that he could eat. His clothes were other children's castoffs.

At 16, Garwood was sent to a reform school. Soon after, he joined the Marines. When he was 19, just 10 days before his Vietnam tour was scheduled to end, Garwood was captured.

His attorneys never disputed that during his years in Vietnam Garwood was his captors' "pet monkey" or that he acted like a "white Vietnamese" as other American POWs testified during the 13-week court-martial.

They called as witnesses psychiatrists who testified that Garwood was driven insane by deprivation, illness and torture. They said he didn't know he was committing crimes.

Weeks after he returned to the United States in 1979, charges were filed accusing him of guarding his fellow prisoners, informing on them, urging them to cross over to the enemy.

It's 'beautiful': Garwood family

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The family of Robert Garwood think it's "beautiful" that he's a free man, and one brother said he expects the Marine to return to Indiana.

Garwood, who was born in Indianapolis and grew up in Adams, Ind., before going to Vietnam at the age of 17, received a dishonarble discharge from a five-man military jury in Camp Lejeune, N.C., on Friday. The jury reduced him from private first class to privatre but chose not to give him a prison sentence.

"I think it's good that he finally got out of it. I don't like the dishonorable discharge, but I think it's beautiful that he'll be able to come home," said his brother Jack Jr. "I would imagine he'll plan on coming home for good. His car is here."

Another brother, Don Garwood, said of the sentence, "It's good in the fact that he didn't have to go to prison. It's bad in that he should have been acquitted on all the charges."

But Jack said the family could grow adjusted to the dishonorable discharge much more easily than it could have to a life prison term.

"I don't think he was expecting it, (the dishonorable discharge,)" said Jack, who went with his family to visit the Marine last week. "I figured that they would knock him out of his pay, but I didn't think they would give him a dishonorable discharge either.

"It's definitely better than life in prison. He's spent enough time in prisons."

Marriage record set in Las Vegas

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — With an assist from St. Valentine's Day, Las Vegas wedding chapels set single-day records for marriages Saturday. One chapel along the famed Strip scheduled 150 weddings.

Saying the city's two dozen chapels were "booked solid," one chapel operator estimated more than 500 weddings were staged Saturday.

"The fact that St. Valentine's Day fell on Saturday had a lot to do with it. And nobody wanted to get married on Friday the 13th," said Gordon Gust, owner of the Candlelight Wedding Chapel, one of the busiest.

Outside the Candlelight, a crowd of 50, including singer Kenny Rogers, made up various wedding parties. Rogers was there to attend a friend's wedding.

Among those waiting was twice-married Doug Heuer, a beefy 32-year-old security guard at The Barbary Coast casino, and his bride-to-be, Tamara Franks, 26.

After a 30-minute delay caused by the heavy crush, they were married in a three-minute ceremony after paying a $59 fee. The fee included $45 for the service, $8 for music and $5 for a garter.

Newlyweds Larry Smith, 21, of Las Vegas and his 19-year-old bride, Laurie Anderson Smith, drove away in a bright yellow pickup that had a red valentine attached to the aerial.

"We wanted a fast wedding," said the groom, a lineman for a Nevada utility company. "The reception is what really counts."

Gust said his chapel's previous single-day record for weddings was 110.

"People like to kill two birds with one stone. They can get married in the 'wedding capital of the world' and then honeymoon in the entertainment capital of the world," he said. In Nevada, no blood tests are necessary and there is no waiting period. Couples only have to be 18 years or older.

William Stills, a 23-year-old mechanic from San Diego, said he wanted to marry his sweetheart, Carol Knudsen, a 21-year-old carpenter, in Las Vegas because "it would be more fun than a big wedding at home."

Gust, 38, said he's seen it all since he began managing the Strip-side chapel eight years ago.

"A month ago we had an 88-year-old gentleman marry his childhood sweetheart. She was 85.

"We had a bride who was escorted down the aisle by her father and the family dog.

"One couple came in and wanted to get married, but we refused because the man was too inebriated. So the woman took him next door and pumped him full of coffee for an hour. She came back and said 'he's OK now.'

"He wasn't. He passed out and fell over some bushes before we could get him in the chapel," said Gust.

Arson investigators combine work, luck

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A few years back, when Harrisonburg, Va., was in the midst of a flurry of arson that resulted in a dozen serious fires within six weeks, Robert Carter was called in.

Carter, then Virginia's top state arson investigator, talked to everyone around town who might have seen or heard anything and sifted the ruins of the fires that had already occurred.

Carter announced that the patterns of how and when the fires were set and spread made him guess that the arsonists were three or four young men who worked part-time or not at all and liked to mingle in the crowd watching their fires.

He said the only thing he couldn't determine was whether they were white or black.

He ordered local authorities to begin taking down car license plate numbers at fires. After tracking a car seen at two fires, police arrested four young men, ages 21 to 25, all part-time workers or unemployed. Two were white and two were black.

WORK LIKE THAT led Carter to become the arson expert at the National Fire Protection Association headquarters in Boston, and to investigating fires such as the one which killed eight, injured 198 and caused $10 million in damage at the Las Vegas Hilton hotel last week.

The association, a private, nonprofit fire information and education center, said there were 148,500 incidents of arson in the United States in 1979, the last year for which complete statistics are available.

Those fires are blamed for 675 deaths, $1.3 billion in smoke and fire damage and an additional $10 billion in lost jobs, sales and taxes.

Because they found four different fires burning in the hotel, Las Vegas fire authorities announced "arson" almost immediately.

But Carter, who is still sloshing across soggy carpets, studying charred furniture and peering down sooty, blackened elevator shafts and ductwork at the hotel, said investigations are usually hard work, painstaking scientific analysis and some luck.

"It's not quite like the Lieutenant Columbo routine, but sometimes it's not far from that," Carter said.

After deciding that a fire was deliberately set, investigators still have to find out who set it. They often work from hunches, but their conclusions must stand up in court.

U.S. FIRE ADMINISTRATION officials in Washington said arrests are made in fewer than 10 percent of the nation's arson cases, and convictions are obtained in fewer than 1 percent.

"It's not like any other crime, like a homicide where there's a body," Cecil Patterson, the state's chief arson investigator in Tennessee, said. "As a rule, our corpus delecti is a pile of ashes."

The arson experts said they get to the scene of a suspicious fire as quickly as possible and then secure it, with guards if necessary, to preserve evidence.

"A burned building will speak to you, provided you haven't destroyed it trying to put the fire out," said Ed Wall, deputy superintendent of the federal government's National Fire Academy in Emmitsburg, Md.

Patterson, whose department's record of convictions and arrests in Tennessee is more than twice the national average, said the investigator soaks up information, from who was on the scene to what color the smoke was when the fire started.

He said white or gray smoke indicates cleaning fluids, green smoke indicates chlorine gas, brown smoke indicates cooking oil and black smoke indicates accelerants such as gasoline or kerosene.

Carter said he checks on who might have had a reason for setting a fire: a merchant or landlord or homeowner in financial straits, a night watchman who wants to be a hero, a worker who's mad at the boss, a bunch of kids looking for "kicks."

INSIDE THE STRUCTURE, the investigator tries to figure out where the fire started, and then concentrates on more minute evidence in that specific area to provide the cause.

"You may know in 10 minutes that it's arson, but it may take 12 to 16 hours to physically prove it," Belles said.

Belles said fire's first and foremost physical law is that it moves "aggressively upward," usually leaving a cone-shaped damage pattern spreading up and away from the point of origin. When fire burns through a floor to the room below, the same cone of damage spreads downward.

Consequently, he said, damage is often the least at the point where the fire started.

Another aid to finding where and sometimes when a fire started, Carter said, is the "char pattern." Deep burns indicate rapid, intense flames, while a "baked" surface indicates slower, smoldering fire.

If a wall has collapsed or been pulled in by firefighters, Carter said, the arson investigator must often move it, sometimes even propping it back up to get a better idea of the scene before the fire.

After deciding where a fire started, investigators often use an instrument, an "organic vapor analyzer," to sample the air in fire rubble to see if it was helped along by a combustible such as gasoline.

BUT MUCH OF THEIR work after finding a fire's point of origin is based on Holmesian deductions, the arson experts agreed. They come up with every possible theory they can, and then rule them out until they come up with the most likely possibility.

They check what's left of pipes and wiring, fireplaces and stoves, furniture and walls for signs of something other than arson.

"It's a process of elimination," Patterson said.

Vegas doesn't need this publicity

By PATRICK ARNOLD
Associated Press Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — This glittering resort city, like others dependent on tourism, spends millions of dollars on publicity to attract the vacationers and conventioneers who visit it each year.

But money couldn't buy the worldwide publicity — much of it adverse — caused in less than three months by the two devastating fires at major hotels that claimed a total of 92 lives and left nearly 900 persons injured.

Eight persons died and 192 were injured in the latest fire, at the Las Vegas Hilton Hotel. Police have arrested Philip Bruce Cline, a 23-year-old Hilton busboy, and booked him for investigation of murder and arson in connection with the blaze.

Less than three months before, on Nov. 21, 1980, 84 people died and nearly 700 were injured when a fire roared through the casino at the MGM Grand Hotel, sending clouds of deadly smoke through the high-rise resort.

Despite the MGM Grand fire there have been no lack of guests to fill the city's hotel and motel rooms — 45,035 of them at last official count. The Hilton, with 2,783 rooms, was about 75 percent full — on a Tuesday night — when the fire broke out.

Hotels report some cancellations in the wake of the Hilton fire, as they did following the MGM Grand fire, but overall it appeared to be business as usual for the weekend after the Hilton blaze. Rooms, as usual on a weekend, were hard to find without advance reservations.

A blue-ribbon commission appointed by Gov. Bob List to study the state's fire safety laws following the MGM Grand fire came up with a list of 11 recommendations Thursday. The proposed new codes, which include retroactive sprinkler systems in casino and highrise areas, will be finalized at a Feb. 27 meeting and turned over to List, who will in turn present them to the Legislature for action.

"What we're doing here would hopefully be the lead for the rest of the country," said commission chairman Kenny Guinn, who termed the recommendations "aggressive and far-reaching."

The proposed new codes would be required on all high-rise buildings — both existing structures and those yet to be built — over 55 feet high. In additional, all public assembly areas of more than 5,000 square feet would be required to have fire sprinkler systems.

Brown considering quarantine on California fruit

By SUSAN STOLER
Associated Press Writer

WESLACO, Texas (AP) — State Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown said Friday he will decide within a week whether California's outbreak of Mediterranean fruit flies warrants a quarantine on fruit from that state.

"We're going to watch this thing as close as possible. We'll be making a decision in the next few days on what we will do," Brown said after meetingwith abou 80 Texas citrus growers and industry representatives.

The Mediterranean fruit fly lays eggs in fruit and vegetables and quickly damages a season's growth. Texas officials are worried the insect could migrate and wipe out the state's $70 million citrus industry of the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

California officials have mounted intensive eradication efforts using release of sterile flies, ground spraying and stripping of all fruit from trees in several areas infested with the pest.

The medfly, as it is known, was first found in June 1980. Eradication efforts continue in a 50-square-mile area of Santa Clara and Alameda counties, where infestation is in suburban backyard trees. The nearest commercial citrus production is 100 miles away.

A 500-square-mile area around the infested area has been quarantined and no fruit can leave it without being fumigated and inspected. Texas officials are considering requiring all California fruit bound for Texas be fumigated until the medfly problem is over.

California Agriculture Commissioner Richard Rominger also met with Texas growers. He said his state is considering aerial spraying of the pesticide malathion as a last resort.

California residents have objected to aerial spraying over urban areas and have threatened to take the state to court if necessary.

"Eradication is the only option we have. We will eradicate the fly, no matter what it takes to do the job," Rominger said.

But his assurances were not enough for several Texans who said aerial spraying should begin immediately.

"The sterile fly proram has been in effect nine months and yet, by your own admission, you're still finding wild flies and larvae. Aren't you leaving out an important ingredient in aerial spraying?" asked Mike Wallace, general manager of Texas Citrus Mutual, a growers organization.

Rominger said California officials probably will know by mid-March whether cropdusting is needed.

"With the cold weather now, we don't think aerial spraying would be as effective as our present efforts," Rominger said.

The medfly infested Texas in 1967 but was eradicated with Malathion spraying, Brown said.

"If we have an outbreak down here, we're going to airplanes come hell or high water," he said.

Several Texas growers said California normally imposes such strict requirements on fruit coming from Texas yet has not voluntarily begun fumigating its own produce.

"If the shoe were on the other foot, if we had the problem, I'm 100 percent sure we couldn't ship anything in there," said Robert Schupp, manager of a citrus packing shed and sales company in Mission. "I think the whole Valley should feel threatened. If it gets in here and causes us to lose our foreign markets, California's not going to come along and say, 'We're sorry. We'll make up the loss."

Brown agreed.

"The thinking in this room is that the sons of bitches make us fumigate, then make them do it," he said.

The commissioner said later that fumigation should be ordered for safety, not retaliation.

Texas has fumigated fruit bound to California because of the Mexican fruit fly, a less damaging cousin of the pest now in Califoria.

Choosing, managing grass to be explained

By CHARLES W. GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent — Agriculture

Selection and management of lawn grass are the key elements to an attractive home landscape. Too often varieties are selected which are not well adapted to Midland soil and climatic conditions or good varieties are planted but poor management results in the landscape becoming a "disaster zone."

To assist Midland homeowners with proper turf practices the Extension Landscape Horticulture and Turf Committee will sponsor an educational meeting from 7 to 9 p.m. Thursday at Hogan Park Activities Building, adjacent to Cub Stadium.

Dr. Richard L. Duble, Turfgrass Specialist from Texas A&M University, will discuss strengths and weaknesses of various grasses, management practices for common lawn grasses and much more to aid the homeowner in developing and maintaining a vigorous and attractive turf.

Midland County Extension Agents Charles Green and Willie Stumberg, and George Logan, chairman, County Extension Landscape Horticulture and Turf Committee invite all interested persons to attend the meeting as the time for lawn planting, renovation or improvement is just around the corner.

INFLATION, and especially higher food prices, has been in the news lately all over the U.S. Unless salaries keep up with this current round of price increases, food will become more expensive to everyone. Even with all of this, the U.S. will probably continue to have the world's cheapest food supply.

The USDA regularly publishes the prices of selected foods from seventeen of the world's capitals. This price information reveals some interesting things.

In 1980, in addition to the price of these products, they reported the working time of the average production worker needed to earn each of these products in the various countries. Broilers, for example, were $1.74/kilo in Washington, D.C. They were only $1.44/kilo in Madrid. However, it took only 13 minutes of work to earn the where-with-all to buy a kilo of broiler in Madrid. This tells me that broilers are three times as expensive in Madrid as in Washington, D.C.

Eggs were $1 a dozen in Washington at the time of the survey. Eggs in Buenos Aires were $1.36 However, it took only 8 minutes work to earn enough money for a dozen eggs in Washington. It took 46 minutes in Buenos Aires. In money terms, eggs were 16 percent more expensive in Buenos Aires. In real terms, eggs were 475 percent more expensive in Buenos Aires — that's a lot.

This situation applies to almost all foods reported. It took one hour and six minutes of labor to buy one kilo of sirloin steak (boneless) in Washington, D.C. To buy the same product in Tokyo took seven hours and twenty minutes of labor. A kilo of roasted, ground coffee in Washinton cost one hour and two minutes, but in Australia it cost four hours and twenty-two minutes. In Holland the cost was only forty-eight minutes, but all other countries had higher real cost on coffee than the U.S.

In the September 1980 price survy, egg prices ranged around the world from a hight of $2.69/dozen in Bern, Switzerland, to a low of 61 cents/dozen in Brazilia, Brazil. Broiler ranged from $4.86/kilo in Stockholm to $1.54 in Brazilia. In Washington, eggs were 99 cents/dozen and broilers were $1.08/kilo — both were the cheapest money cost for these items among the 17 capitals, excepts for eggs in Brazilia, which were 54 cents/dozen.

These surveys show dramatically the price changes in the various capitals at various times during the year. When the prices are converted to labor cost, then good comparisons can be made between countries on the real cost of food. Even though we all like to complain about food prices at the grocery store, things are really not quite as band as they may seem. At least, we have a greater portion of out income left over for things which many foreign people simply do without.

Ex-hostages light eternal flame to honor commandos

HERMITAGE, Pa. (AP) — Maj. Gen. James Vaught, the officer who commanded the failed rescue attempt in Iran, unveiled a monument Saturday to the eight commandos who died while trying to free the 52 U.S. hostages.

Six ex-hostages lighted an eternal flame at the foot of the still-incomplete monument with a bronze eagle perched atop. It will bear the names of the commandos who perished last April in the Iranian desert.

After a high school band played the Battle Hymn of the Republic, Vaught remarked: "That's the song my men sang the night before they got on the planes to go on the mission."

"It was a very best effort by a group of brave, courageous Americans of which we can all be proud," he said.

Vaught said those involved in the mission knew it was risky, "but the people who trained with me had the courage to try."

The monument, donated by residents of Scranton, Pa., stands in Hillcrest Memorial Park, where 444 flags still waved Saturday after being raised one at a time for each day of the hostages' captivity.

A crowd estimated by police to number 30,000 turned out on a mild and sunny day to celebrate the event. Gov. Dick Thornburgh led the former hostages on a march through an avenue lined by the 444 flags.

"Frankly, I'm done with the publicity for the hostages. What I'm concerned about is that those eight guys are remembered," said former hostage Donald Cooke of Memphis, Tenn.

From a flame lighted by his father on the hostages' 100th day of captivity, Michael Metrinko, 34, of Olyphant, Pa., lighted the commandos' eternal flame with assistance from Cooke, Gary Lee of Falls Church, Va., Regis Ragan of Johnstown, William Royer of Houston and Col. Charles Scott of Stone Mountain, Ga.

Then the crowd erupted in a cheer when Metrinko snuffed out the flame that burned in his honor.

Those who died in the rescue mission were Air Force Capts. Richard L. Bakke, 33, Long Beach, Calif.; Lyn D. McIntosh, 33, Valdosta, Ga.; Charles T. McMillan II, 28, and Harold L. Lewis, 35, both stationed at Hurlburt Air Force Base, Fla.; Air Force Technical Sgt. Joel C. Mayo, 34, Bonifay, Fla.; Marine Staff Sgt. Dewey L. Johnson, 31, and Marine Sgt. John D. Harvey, 21, both of Jacksonville, N.C.; and Marine Cpl. George N. Holmes, 22, Pine Bluff, Ark.

Las Vegas fire called premeditated

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Arson investigators are taking a close look at statements by two friends of the busboy held in connection with the Las Vegas Hilton fire, and also have found new evidence that will "throw big holes" in his story, authorities said Saturday.

"I'm going to bring irrefutable evidence that the fire was the result of premeditated arson," said Capt. Mike Patterson of the Clark County Fire Department, chief arson investigator on the case. "Our thrust now is to show this guy (busboy Philip Bruce Cline) didn't set the hotel fire by accident."

He declined to disclose the new evidence, but said "What we found will throw big holes in his story."

Cline, 23, has been booked for investigation of murder and arson in Tuesday night's fire, which killed eight people, injured 198, and caused $10 million damage to the 2,783-room hotel, the nation's largest.

Investigators are trying to pin down how three fires erupted in the hotel after the first and largest blaze started on the eighth floor.

"We feel there is at least one other person involved," Patterson said. "Considering the time frame, we feel Philip may have been giving a statement at the time one of the fires was set."

Patterson said the two friends were "people who have made statements. I won't comment on whether we're talking to them or not."

Asked if the two people worked for the Hilton, as Cline did, Patterson said: "I'm not sure if they are now. They may have been at one time."

Patterson said the smaller fires also could have been set by people unknown to either Cline or his friends who "wanted to jump on the bandwagon."

Patterson said he hoped to have something conclusive from the ongoing investigation within a week.

"It depends on how it goes on this. We have to go with a warrant. If it develops like we hope, we should have something in a week. It could just fizzle out," he said.

Patterson said he did not believe the story police say Cline told about the eighth-floor fire. Cline was quoted as telling investigators he ignited a drape accidentally with a marijuana cigarette while engaged in a sex act with a man named "Joe."

"Joe doesn't exist," Patterson said Friday.

However, Cline's lawyer, Kevin Kelly, said his client now denies "making those statements" to police. Kelley said he was referring to the police reports that Cline admitted starting a fire accidently while having sex.

"There is a great deal of misinformation from the police and the media. These are totally incorrect. At no time did my client make those statements," said Kelly.

The three smaller fires sprang up elsewhere on the east wing of the hotel over a two-hour period as firefighters desperately fought to bring under control the eighth-floor fire, which exploded from a window and flared along the outside up to the 29th floor of the 30-floor building.

Patterson said he knew of no arson motive for Cline, a loner with a history of brushes with the law who had worked only five days at the mammoth resort casino.

Over the weekend, cleanup crews worked feverishly to partially reopen the Hilton by late this week.

Fewer than half of the hotel's rooms will be available for occupancy.

Withholding rent for repairs touchy business

By LINDA TRUITT
Better Business Bureau
of the Permian Basin, Inc.

I have asked my landlord to repair the leak in my roof and I only receive excuses in reply. Can I withhold my rent until the repairs are completed?

The legality of withholding rent payments until repairs are made is the question asked most frequently by tenants calling the Better Business Bureau. According to a law passed by the Texas Legislature, action can only be taken against a landlord who refuses to make repairs that "materially affect the physical health or safety of the ordinary tenant."

If the tenant feels his carpet needs replacing, yet the condition of the carpet was caused by ordinary wear and tear and does not materially affect his health or safety, the landlord is not responsible for replacing the carpet. If the tenant caused the damage by negligence, he is responsible for correcting the problem.

If the needed repairs meet the above requirement, according to the law any action taken by the tenant must follow a specific procedure. The following steps need to be carefully followed:

—Explain in writing exactly what repairs are needed and request that the matter be taken care of as soon as possible. The notice needs to be delivered personally or sent by certified mail.

—Send a second notice if the repairs are not made within a reasonable period of time. It is important to state your intentions in the second notice because you can terminate the rental agreement without being penalized after informing the landlord of your decision and allowing seven additional days for the repairs to be made. You also should request a written explanation of why the repairs are being delayed, since the court will probably assume the delay was unjustified if no explanation was given. Again, make sure the notice is actually received by the landlord.

—You must continue to pay the rent.

—In special instances, such as hail or explosions, the damage may be covered by an insurance policy. If this is the case, you must allow the landlord enough time to be reimbursed by the insurance company.

—If you desire to stay, have followed the above procedure, and no action has been taken by the landlord, see a lawyer. You have the right to sue for one month's rent, $100, actual damages resulting from delay, plus court costs and attorneys fees. The suit must be filed in the district or county court.

Evicting a tenant in retaliation for following the above procedure is illegal. If a landlord files a suit for eviction within six months of receiving a tenant's repair notice, the tenant can have the suit thrown out of court. the tenant will need to prove the needed repairs materially affect his health and safety and the eviction is a result of his repair request.

If a tenant signs a rental agreement that includes a waiver statement voiding the landlord's responsibility for any repairs, the tenant forfeits his rights under this law.

Teachers workshop Monday

A workshop under the direction of special education coordinator Dr. Ruby Morris will be held all day Monday for all teachers and administrators in the school district.

Most of the inservice is scheduled at Goddard Junior High School.

Dr. Virginia Sowell from Texas Tech University will speak to math and science Learning Disability teachers about meeting the needs of handicapped children in those subjects.

Administrators and counselors will hear Carol Gruben of the Region 18 Education Service Center speak about current issues and new trends in special education at an 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. meeting in the Sam Houston Elementary school cafeteria.

Also scheduled at Sam Houston is an afternoon session for teachers of mentally retarded students conducted by MISD occupational development lab teacher Sue Beasley.

Other subjects which school district personnel may choose to attend include sessions on the management of the disruptive child in regular classes, teaching strategies and management systems.

While many of the sessions will be conducted by personnel from Region 18 Education Service Center, audiovisual and innovative material presentations for special education use will be displayed by representatives of Walt Disney Productions and Addison Wesley publishers.

Techniques to use if a student has a seizure in the classroom or on the school grounds will be demonstrated by John Relaford, executive director of the West Texas Epilepsy Association.

The workshop is offered in order to meet a state requirement that all teachers attend a special education inservice program one day each year.

Teens suspected in school fire

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Fire virtually destroyed John Tyler High School early Saturday, and the city's fire chief said three teen-agers are suspected of breaking into a government classroom and splashing kerosene or diesel fuel throughout before touching off the blaze.

Fire Chief Gerald Weaver said "an amateur arson job" resulted in losses estimated in the millions of dollars from the 3-alarm fire.

The fire caused structural damage to 65 percent of the building, and Weaver said another 25 percent of the building suffered extensive smoke and water damage.

Two firemen were hospitalized and kept for overnight observation after being overcome by smoke inhalation, and five other firemen received minor injuries from cuts and bruises, Weaver said.

More than 150 firemen from Kilgore, Frankston and 16 other volunteer fire departments were involved in fighting the fire, which took about two hours to contain. But firemen were still fighting small fires in the building by Saturday afternoon.

Firefighters managed to keep flames from the $1.8 million gymnasium, completed two years ago. Flames already were coming out of the building's roof and more than half the building was ablaze when firefighters arrived, Weaver said.

The fire department received its first call about the fire at 4:45 a.m. from someone who was driving by and saw the blaze. Clocks in the building were stopped at 4:40 a.m.

Weaver said a person gave officials the license number of an automobile that backed into a parking space at an apartment complex near the school during the night.

Officials also were told of three teen-agers being seen around the school between 3 and 4 a.m.

"Everytime an automobile passed, they were seen ducking down as if trying to hide," Weaver said of the teen-agers.

Cubans ready to free Ecuadorean Embassy

MIAMI (AP) — Cuba's government is willing, if asked, to storm the Ecuadorean Embassy and free it from armed "anti-social elements" who are claiming asylum while holding several hostages, Havana Radio reported Saturday.

The announcement brought an immediate threat of a counter-attack in a telephone call to The Associated Press from a Spanish-speaking representative of an unidentified Cuban youth group.

"If the Ecuadorean authorities request help, the Cuban security forces will immediately proceed to disarm the raiders and liberate the hostages," Havana Radio said in a broadcast monitored in Miami.

The report added a warning: "There will be immediate action by the Cuban security forces if the delinquents commit any physical agression against the kidnapped persons."

The caller to the New York headquarters of the AP said, "If (Cuban President Fidel) Castro launches an attack on the embassy of Ecuador in Havana, we will attack and destroy the Cuban mission at the United Nations. We believe the commandoes are still at the Ecuadorian Embassy in Havana.

"If Castro attacks the Ecuadorian embassy in Havana we will blow up and destroy the Cuban mission at the U.N.," he said.

When asked the name of his organization, the caller hung up.

The embassy, in the once-luxurious Miramar section of western Havana, was stormed by a group of Cubans — Ecuador says 31, Havana Radio says "more than 20" — Friday, demanding political asylum.

An Ecuadorean spokesman in Quito said three people, including Ambassador Jorge Perez Concha, were taken hostage. Havana Radio said there were four hostages, including the ambassador.

"The raiders traitorously struck the Embassy guard and disarmed him," the Havana Radio broadcast said. It said the group was armed but did not describe the weapons.

The broadcast recalled past incidents at foreign missions in Havana, including the storming of the Peruvian Embassy last April which preceded the "Freedom Flotilla" boatlift to Key West, Fla.

"A similar incident was staged by another group of these anti-social elements at the Apostolic See in Havana last December. One of the hostages was murdered before the raiders were subdued by the Cuban security forces," the broadcast said.

"It is good to remember that these acts are the inevitable consequence of those that were staged last year at the embassies of Peru and Venezuela, where the anti-social elements received the protection of the governments of both countries."

The group that surged into the Peruvian embassy eventually grew to 10,000. Most of those and thousands of other Cubans eventually boarded boats that left Mariel, Cuba, last year, bringing about 127,000 Cuban refugees to the United States.

Men fined for shooting at whale

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — A federal judge has fined the owners and operators of a Ketchikan fishing boat $15,000 for shooting at a humpback whale, even though there was no evidence the whale was hit.

U.S. District Judge James Fitzgerald, at the conclusion of a two-day non-jury trial Friday, described the incident involving the endangered whale species as a "heedless and senseless act."

He said he hoped the stiff fine would deter others from violating the Marine Mammal Protection Act.

According to the government's complaint, on July 19, 1978, a crew member aboard the purse seiner Repulse fired repeatedly at a whale as the vessel returned from a voyage to the Zarembo Islands, off the southeastern coast of Alaska.

The boat is owned by Ward Cove Packing Co.

Midland criminal offenses increase

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

The 1980 Annual Crime Report released last week by Chief of Police Wayne Gideon shows a 12.7 percent rise in the number of calls for police assistance over the 1979 figure and an increase of just under 5 percent in the number of criminal offenses reported.

All categories of major crime went up, including homicide, robbery, rape, other sex offenses, burglary and theft.

The only areas showing a decline were auto theft, forgery and criminal mischief. Suicide also went down, while the number of attempted suicides rose.

The number of offenses recorded hit 3,722, with 2,025 of them cleared — giving Midland police a clearance rate of 54 percent.

While it's difficult to compare clearance rates with other police agencies, according to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, law enforcement officials consider Midland's rate better than average.

IT'S ALSO DIFFICULT to pinpoint reasons for rising or declining crime rates, but population and inflation are the likely candidates.

Midland's population rose by 1.2 percent and inflation went up in excess of 13 percent during 1980.

"I feel certain that the crime rate would have been much greater if it weren't for the increased visibility of police on the streets," said Gideon.

He was referring to the 1977 program whereby police take their patrol cars home and are allowed to use them for personal reasons within the city limits.

Indeed, crime rates dropped appreciably for the two years immediately following inception of the program, resuming their upward climb in 1979.

An example of how hard it is to nail down reasons for higher or lower crime rates is the fact that greater police visibility should have also cut down on the number of traffic accidents in the city.

Such was not the case, however. Traffic accidents have mounted every year for the past five years - from 2,822 in 1976 to 3,579 in 1980. Traffic deaths declined from 15 in 1976 to four in 1978, rose to nine in 1979 and stood at seven in 1980.

ONE AREA OF criminal activity showing a marked decline in the past five years is narcotics trafficking.

There were 296 adults arrested for drug violations in 1976, while the figure for 1980 dropped to 155.

"I think the reason for this," said Gideon, "is that we started concentrating on the dealers, not the users."

A source of special pride to the narcotics unit were the 42 "delivery cases" filed on 35 defendants following one operation that lasted from April to July of last year.

The narcotics detail also added two more undercover agents to its ranks and conducted a two-month operation that resulted in the arrest of two persons for delivery of cocaine last summer.

Operating the police department during 1980 cost city taxpayers $3.8 million, with 82 percent of that amount going to pay the salaries of 128 sworn officers and 48 civilian personnel.

The average daily cost of feeding one prisoner — based on food supplies alone, not including the personnel and other expenses that go into food preparation — was $1.44 per meal, with three meals offered per day.

In 1979, that cost was 78 cents a meal.

THE LARGEST AND perhaps most important unit in the police department is its patrol division.

"It has been stated many times over the years," Gideon noted in his report, "that the uniformed patrol division is the backbone of any police department."

Of particular interest to parents, homeowners, and merchants in Midland is the department's Crime Prevention Unit, whose activities range from drug programs to free surveys of homes and businesses to determine "security weaknesses" and offer recommendations for correcting those weaknesses.

The CPU also offers rape education classes for women and school programs designed to acquaint children with the danger of strangers.

In total major police activity, there were 16 homicides, 47 robberies, 22 rapes, seven sucides, 35 attempted suicides, 1,192 burglaries, 813 thefts, 271 auto thefts, 329 criminal mischief complaints, seven traffic fatalities, and 191 narcotics cases in Midland last year.

The greatest clearance rate occurred in the homicide category, with 15 of the 16 cases solved. The lowest clearance rates took place in the burglary, theft, and vandalism categories.

Citing citizen participation as a major factor in keeping criminal activity down, Gideon said:

"I appreciate the efforts of the public in helping us by reporting offenses and being willing to be witnesses. The public is of paramount importance in controlling crime."

Midland policemen will host June music festival

The Midland Police Officers' Association will host an "International Music Festival" featuring talent from Midland cops to Nashville stars at 7 p.m. June 5 in Midland College's Chaparral Center.

The benefit festival, which is the first sponsored by the police, will be feature Wally Fowler and his "Sound of Nashville; the "country's favorite" fiddler, Johnny Gimble, who appears with Willie Nelson in the movie "Honeysuckle Rose," and, among others, the Midland Police Department's Capt. Roger Meurer, who will do "some banjo pickin' and fancy fiddlin'."

More county 'n' Western stars will be added to the lineup, which will include Johnny Paycheck and the West Texas Music Co.

"This is the first major community effort we have undertaken in this respect," said Meurer, "and we earnestly seek the support of all citizens."

Reserve seat tickets are $7.50 each.

"Our telephone campaign on pre-sale of the admission is in full-swing," said Meurer, who is "carrying the ball" for ticket sales.

"Please respond when you are called on...," he said. "We need your support in this community effort."

Proceeds from the show will benefit community activities sponsored by the police association. Funds also will go to scholarship and youth programs, to officers wounded in the line of duty and to widows of officers killed while on duty.

"We are very optimistic," Meurer said of the anticipated turnout. "We are hopeful that the response from our pre-sale of tickets will be a sell-out well in advance, so we may plan a second show at 9:30 p.m."

Tickets may be obtained by mailing a check or money order to Midland Police Officers Association, P.O. Box 10512, Midland 79702.

49 killed in Dublin nightclub fire

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Police said Saturday they are investigating rumors that arsonists set the early morning flash fire that swept through Dublin's biggest nightclub at a Valentine's disco dance, killing 49 young people and injuring at least 130 others.

A police spokesman said several survivors reported they saw two men go behind a curtain near the stage minutes before the fire broke out there. But he added, "As far as we are concerned, these reports are all unconfirmed."

There was no indication any foreigners were caught in the fire, the spokesman said. Dublin reporters said they believed all of the victims were Irish, and most were residents of the working-class neighborhood surrounding the Stardust Cabaret.

Desperate parents of missing youngsters drove to the city's seven hospitals searching the wards for their children, and then going in despair to the city morgue. It was not big enough to contain all the dead and Irish soldiers put up a tent in the yard to lay out the bodies.

Police said almost all the casualties were in their teens or early 20s.

When the fire erupted just before 2 a.m., the electricity failed, plunging the 700 to 800 young people at the cabaret into darkness and panic, witnesses said. Some said windows were barred, preventing escape from the intense smoke and flame.

Miss Holcomb's steer, named C.R. after its sire, Carnival Royal, was one of 534 steers judged by Bill Able, an animal science professor at Kansas State University.

Miss Holcomb, a 4-H Club member at Klondike, is daughter of Vernon and Lillian Holcomb, who ranch in the Klondike area.

Ideas about cotton to be shared

LUBBOCK — About 300 farmers and scientists will share ideas on ways to improve production and profits during the five-state Western Cotton Production Conference at the Lubbock Hilton Inn here Tuesday through Thursday.

Getting the most from available water for dryland and irrigated cotton; maintaining lint, seed and fiber quality, and managing insect problems will be among the "Challenges for the '80s" to be explored in the annual conference.

Keynote speaker will be Dr. Ernest C. Clayton, chief of the Food and Agricultural Policy Branch of the Economics and Statistics Services of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. He will speak on "New Farm Policy: The Reagan Administration." Also speaking will be Dr. James R. Supak, area agronomist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, and Cotton Inc. President J. Dukes Wooters.

Cotton producers and fiber industry leaders from Arizona, California, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas are to attend the program, which is co-sponsored by the Southwest Five-State Cotton Growers Association.

Lending by units slowed in 1980

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The growth in lending by units of the Farm Credit System slowed dramatically during 1980, according to the Farm Credit Administation, which is the federal regulatory agency for the FCS borrower-owned banks and associations.

Total lending of $69.8 billion was reported in 1980 and was an 18.2 percent more than the $59 billion lent in 1979, but was in striking contrast to the 1978-79 growth rate of 31 percent.

More than half of the 18.2 percent increase went to farmer-owned agricultural coperatives, according to FCA Gov. Donald Wilkinson.

Virginia peanut farmers unite for higher prices

FRANKLIN, Va. (AP) — Southeast Virginia's peanut farmers, disappointed with the federal price support level for their product, are attempting to bargain collectively with peanut buyers on a price for their 1981 crop.

Marvin Everett, a peanut grower and farm supplier in Southampton County, said farmers in the state's peanut belt have been meeting since Decmeber to form a coalition of growers.

Everett estimated farmers have signed contacts committing 80 percent of Virginia's allotted peanut acreage to such a coalition.

Peanuts and tobacco are the only crops grown under a federal program through which farmers are allotted a number of acres on which to grow their product. The federal government guarantees to buy the peanuts at a certain support price level if farmers cannot find private buyers who will pay that price.

The U.S. Agriculture Department announced Friday that the price will not be raised from its present level of $455 a ton.

Everett said the farmers are going broke selling at the support price level.

He cited Cooperative Extension Office estimates that to produce an acre of peanut costs $650, not including the farmer's salary and the cost of his land. With a good harvest, the farmer could sell the product of that acre at support level for about $682, he said.

The farmers want a price of $800 a ton on their 1981 crop, Everett said.

The idea of organizing collective bargaining took shape last fall when Everett, George Thorpe of Southampton County and Carlton Butler of Isle of Wight County led a small group of peanut growers in a successful collective venture.

With the peanut harvest scarce and prices rising because of the prolonged drought, the group held 2,000 tons of their peanuts off the market until most other stocks had been bought. Then, they issued invitations to buyers to bid on the cache.

The peanuts sold for $1,200 a ton.

Everett said peanut farmers in North Carolina have been watching the organizing in Virginia with great interest and may attempt similar action.

Everett said a bargaining team will be elected by the Virginia peanut growers probably within two weeks.

Farmers threaten confrontation over grain stored in elevator

NEW MADRID, Mo. (AP) — Farmers gathered Saturday in this small southeast Missouri community in support of a local farmer who has threatened to remove his grain from an elevator that is being guarded by U.S. marshals because of bankruptcy proceedings.

Wayne Cryts, a Puxico, Mo., farmer who is active in the American Agriculture Movement, has given the federal courts until Monday to determine owership of the grain, for which the farmers have warehouse receipts.

Unless he can sell the 30,000 bushels of soybeans worth approximately $225,000, Cryts said he won't have the money to plant a crop this spring.

"American Ag isn't supporting (Cryts' action) or sanctioning it or anything," said Homer Evans, a spokesman for the farmers' organization. "Of course, individually, we're all behind Wayne."

In St. Louis, the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Friday ordered the marshals not to relinquish the grain.

"This court affirms the continuing operation of the order ... which requires the United States Marshal to maintain the physical integrity of the grain and grain warehouses ... so that they remain within the custody of the court-appointed trustee until further order of this court," the 8th Circuit said.

Deputy U.S. Marshal Larry Strayhorn declined to discuss security arrangments at the elevator.

Between $5 million and $8 million worth of grain has been tied up in five southern Missouri elevators for eight months since the James Brothers of Corning, Ark., filed for bankruptcy.

Ruby Haggard re-elected

STANTON — Ruby Haggard has been re-elected chairman of the Martin County Historical Commission, and Mrs. Newell Tate has been elected vice chairman. Vena Fortune was named secretary-treasurer of the organization.

Rabies season begins now

McCAMEY — The "dog-days" of July and August isn't the season for rampant rabies, according to The McCamey News. The rabies season in Texas usually is in winter and early spring.

A pet innoculation clinic to offset any rabies threat will be held from 2 to 6 p.m. Tuesday at McCamey City Hall.

Veterinarian Dr. Diane Sigman will be "shooting" the dogs, cats and possibly other animals with the the vaccine.

The clinic is sponsored by the city of McCamey, Upton County, The Woman's Study Club and Sigman.

Last year, the McCamey area was beset with an outbreak of rabies, and a horse in Crane died of the illness.

Rabies, also known as hydrophobia, is an acute, often fatal, infectious virus disease of the central nervous. The disease's most common carriers in Texas are dogs, skunks, foxes, wolves, cats and insect-eating bats.

Andrews teachers get pay boost

ANDREWS — Andrews public school teachers in a 4-3 vote by school trustees have been granted a 12.4 percent wage hike for the 1981-82 school year.

Dissenting votes came from Rose Hutcheson, Johnnie Griffin and Conrad Turner, who had proposed an 11 percent pay raise. Voting for the increase were Trustees Dan Sullivan, Marlow Summitt, Bob Wheeler and Lloyd Willis.

The increase, which conforms with the consumer-price index set by the federal government for gauging inflation, represents $833,280 in the school budget.

Mitchell to be superintendent

STANTON — Wayne Mitchell, principal of Stanton High School since 1973, has been selected by the Stanton Independent School District's trustees to succeed Russell McMeans as superintendent of the school here.

McMeans, who has been superintendent for 15 years, has resigned effective June 30.

Mitchell was hired "because we think he is the man who can best handle our schools," said Board President Delbert Dickenson.

"I'm happy to be able to accept the challenge of the superintendent's post," The Stanton Reporter quoted Mitchell, "and I appreciate the board's confidence in me." He will assume the job July 1.

Succeeding Mitchell will be Bill Young, principal of the junior high school here. Young joined the Stanton school district in 1970 as athletic director and head football coach.

Mitchell holds the bachelor's and master's degrees from Baylor University. He had picked up teaching, coaching and administrative experience at Temple, McGregor, Rankin and Sanderson before coming to Stanton.

Young holds the bachelor's degree from Sul Ross State University in Alpine and the master's degree from The University of Texas at El Paso.

School trustees will seek an administrator outside the Stanton system to succeed Young as junior high school principal.

Bolen fills council vacancy

McCAMEY — Carrol Bolen has been sworn in as a McCamey city councilman to fill the unexpired term of former Councilman Peggy Williams. City Secretary Arnold Wagner has submitted his resignation, which will be effective in five weeks.

Guardian Angels jailed in brawl

NEW YORK (AP) — Eleven members of the Guardian Angels — a group of volunteer youths who patrol the subways — have been arrested and charged with taking part in a wild brawl with passengers and police officers on a Brooklyn subway train, police said.

A spokesman for the Guardian Angels said the free-for-all occurred Friday night when the group stumbled into a police stakeout, but police denied that story. One police officer was bitten on the hand.

Police piecing together the melee said the Guardian Angels were trying to roust an intoxicated passenger on the northbound "A" train between Rockaway and Utica avenues when another passenger intervened.

An altercation broke out, and Transit Authority police in plainlothes wh were on the train got involved. Other passengers joined in, and when the train stopped at Utica Avenue, more police boarded it and arrested the Guardian Angels, police said.

Curtis Sliwa, leader of the Guardian Angels, gave a different account. He said his men boarded the northbound train at Euclid Avenue. Unbeknownst to them, he said, plainclothes police had set up a stakeout on the train with one officer posing as a drunk.

Sliwa said the Angels saw a passenger try to harass and rob the "drunk," and grabbed the passenger and threw him to the ground. At that point, Sliwa said, police poured into the train.

"The first undercover cops did not indicate that they were cops," Sliwa said. "There was a fight, and the police came in with their guns and made the Angels get down on the floor.

Louisville blast area suffers heavy damage

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Mayor William Stansbury proclaimed Louisville a disaster area Saturday in the wake of sewer explosions which ripped through city streets and caused millions of dollars in damage.

The mayor said at a news conference he would ask Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. on Tuesday for state aid to help with the repairs.

The explosions ripped through the sewer system under about two miles of city streets just before dawn Friday, hurling manhole covers into the air and collapsing parts of the paveent.

our persons were injured in the explosions, none seriously.

Temporary housing was set up in apartment complexes for persons driven from their homes in the Old Louisville section, where the explosions were centered. About 100 persons were evacuated from 70 houses Friday night as a precaution, and some of them spent the night at a high school.

Stansbury said street repairs alone may cost $10 million. In addition, Stansbury has said damage to the sewer system would run into the millions and that damage to homes would be at least $1 million.

Authorities — including the FBI and the federal Environmental Protection Agency — still are trying to determine the cause of the blasts, although a chemical leak from a nearby plant is suspected.

"We're still conducting a preliminary inquiry," said Bill Cheek, a spokesman for the FBI. He said the agency was called in by the U.S. attorney's office.

Fred Partin, assistant U.S. attorney, said his office is treating the explosions as a "potential criminal case."

Fire and sewer officials believe the explosions were caused by the chemical hexane, which they say may have entered the sewers from Ralston Purina Co.'s soybean treatment plant.

The Metropolitan Sewer District, alleging that the discharge caused the explosions, won a Jefferson Circuit Court order Friday prohibiting the company from releasing dangerous substances into the sewers.

Jim Reed, a spokesman for Ralston Purina, said company officials were conducting their own investigation. They would have no comment until it was completed, he said.

City and state officials met in a closed session Saturday morning to decide what actions the city will take in the situation. Two Ralson Purina officials met with city officials for about 45 minutes Saturday morning.

Officials said several million gallons of raw sewage were diverted into the Ohio River Friday because of fears that the the solvent would damage the city's main sewage treatment plant. However, normal operations at the plant were resumed after 8½ hours. Louisville is on the river's south shore, and Old Louisville is south of the downtown section.

Spectacular fire erupts by river

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A spectacular blaze erupted at a riverfront complex on the city's south side Saturday and threatened for a time to ignite a huge storage tank containing gasohol.

Authorities said the three-alarm fire followed a series of explosions which rocked the area surrounding a Texaco Co. bulk oil facility at the foot of Gasconade Street. The first explosion, according to authorities, occurred as two drivers and a workman were fueling two gasohol tanker trucks.

As many as six more explosions of less impact ripped the immediate area as fire enveloped and sent a column of thick, black smoke drifting to the north over the downtown area.

After the flow of gasohol was shut off to pumps were fueling the trucks, the fire was contained about 75 minutes after it had broken out.

A huge storage tank close to the scene of the first explosion caused firefighters their greatest concern for fear it would be ignited also by the intense heat from the first fire.

There was no evacuation of homes several hundred yards from the industrial complex, but police cordoned off streets leading from nearby Interstate 55, which was lined with motorists who stopped to gaze at the fire.

Stockman says budget proposals will be hard to sell

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan finished a three-day series of budget meetings with Cabinet members Friday, and a senior administration official predicted Reagan's program of budget cuts would be "tough to sell."

Reagan wound up the conferences at which he, the Cabinet officials, and David A. Stockman, director of the Office of Management and Budget, were said by aides to have decided upon billions of dollars of spending cuts without dissent.

After meeting with his entire Cabinet Friday afternoon, the president planned to make final decisions on the economic package while spending the three-day Washington's Birthday weekend at Camp David.

He will unveil the details Wednesday night in a speech to a joint session of Congress.

Stockman has said that Reagan would try to lop off $50 billion from the $739.3 billion President Jimmy Carter proposed for federal spending in fiscal year 1982, which begins Oct. 1.

It will be after Wednesday that Reagan may face his most difficult task of the budget process: winning approval of his suggestions by a Congress chary of cutting projects affecting their constitutents.

Reagan had lunch Friday with a number of key officials involved in both the budget-cutting work and his efforts to persuade the House and Senate to approve the reductions.

While posing for photographers at the start of the lunch, Stockman, a former Republican congressman from Michigan, was overheard saying to Max L. Friedersdorf, the assistant to the president for legislative affairs, "It's really going to be tough to sell. I'll help you all that I can."

As the meeting of Reagan's ad hoc budget working group broke up Friday morning, David R. Gergen, the White House staff director, said the final session, involving appropriations for the State Department and Pentagon, produced "a lot of cuts, a lot of agreements."

Questions raised two weeks ago about cutting the foreign aid budget produced some of the first public squabbles in the budget process, when Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. reportedly balked at Stockman's reduction suggestions.

But White House press secretary James S. Brady said Thursday that Stockman and Haig had reached a consensus on the amount of the foreign aid budget.

"They smile a lot at each other," Brady said.

Friday morning's meeting followed similar budget conferences Wednesday and Thursday, when the president sat at the oval table in the Cabinet Room as groups of department heads, Stockman and senior White House officials reviewed each agency's budget proposals.

Bulls tossing 'cowboys' everywhere

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The bull threw Wayne Morris five feet through the air, and the young man landed with a thump on the thick floor padding. As he got to his feet, polite applause spread through the room.

Morris, a 23-year-old construction worker, shook off his fall and, with a slightly bowlegged walk, ambled over to the bar and downed a beer.

Morris is among the growing number of people who pay their money and take a chance riding mechanical bulls at Western saloons across the nation. In Los Angeles, four clubs boast of mechanical bulls as part of their entertainment.

Country singer Mickey Gilley holds a patent on the bucking machine, which became popular after appearing in the hit movie, "Urban Cowboy," filmed primarily at Gilley's club in Houston, Texas.

Gilley, who manufactures the machines in Houston, has limited the machines' distribution to avoid one on every corner, said one bull-riding expert. However, other firms around the country have come out with modified versions to meet the growing demand.

One Los Angeles area club fortunate enough to have an authentic Gilley bull is S.H. Kickers in Santa Monica. Mike Parsons works as a chef there during the day and runs the mechanical bull at night.

He concedes that the crowd which usually fills Kickers is made up mostly of people who have never set their posteriors in a saddle and are just looking for a good time.

A former avid surfer, the 21-year-old Parsons became acquainted with mechanical bulls while working on a ranch in Colorado last summer.

"I tried a (real) bull once and will never try it again," said Parsons. "He went out (of the shoot) and I fell."

When he came back to Los Angeles, he heard about Kickers and its machine, which was installed last June, and decided to take a job there. After less than six months of bucking experience, he now holds the saloon's record for riding the bull with no hands, 33 seconds at speed seven. The highest on the machine is 10.

By JOHN C. GIVEN
Associated Press Writer

AMHERST, N.Y. (AP) — Cynthia Dwyer, who came from a small town "where it's easy to trust people," says her arrest and nine-month imprisonment in Iran was a complete surprise even though 53 Americans already were being held hostage when she went there.

"I wouldn't have gone into a lion's mouth. I'm a coward," she said Friday in her first interview since returning home. "Believe me, I was convinced nobody was going to bother me, because I was just a very little person."

Mrs. Dwyer said she became interested in Iran while listening to Iranian students at the University of Buffalo after the takeover of the U.S. embassy in Tehran.

"I just remember one kid said, in a burst of enthusiasm for his home town, 'Hey, you ought to see my country. It's a wonderful country!'"

On April 10, Mrs. Dwyer headed for Iran, planning to write about the lives of "middle-level people. And then I thought, in case none of this...panned out...I would write some travel articles...."

She said whe also wanted to pass a "message of hope" to the hostages in Tehran.

"I wanted to think that there were some humanitarian people among the guards," she said, "that maybe...some had developed a rapport, because I knew that Americans are very kind, funny, easy-going people. And I kept thinking somebody has developed by now some kind of good rapport with their captors."

On May 5, after being lured into a phoney plot to free some hostages, Mrs. Dwyer was arrested in a hotel coffee shop.

Friends had advised her not to go. Her husband, John did not.

"We talked about the dangers," said John Dwyer, an English professor at Buffalo State College. "But in March, when all the journalists were there, there were people going back in. It wasn't the same scene."

Added his wife: "If I were a journalist, I might want to go to Poland right now. It might be dangerous. But if I were a journalist, I'd think that's one of the places you'd go."

"I didn't have any warning dreams that I was going to spend nine months there.... It never occurred to me," she said. "I come from a small town, where it's easy to trust people and just to feel like an ordinary person. And I thought the Iranians would permit me to be just an ordinary person in their country for a few weeks."

Public reaction in this Buffalo suburb to Mrs. Dwyer's ordeal and return, after being tried on espionage charges, has been less than completely enthusiastic.

In a letter to the Buffalo Evening News, reader G. Downey said Mrs. Dwyer has gotten "unwarranted" attention, adding, "There are many more important problems the United States has and should be taking care of ... than some woman who leaves her children and husband to stick her nose where it doesn't belong."

Mrs. Dwyer said she understands what her critics. "But I can't live my life like somebody whom I don't even know...wants to live their life. They don't know me."

This isn't the first time she has been the focus of a controversy.

In 1947, Mrs. Dwyer said, she was fired as editor of her Bastrop, La., high school newspaper after writing an editorial suggesting that officials consider integrating the schools.

Since high school, she spent time copyreading at publishing houses and doing public relations writing in Chicago and later in Buffalo. Her three published articles, including a book review, and articles on breast feeding and public funding for private schools, appeared in a local magazine last year.

Laingen foresees relations with Iran

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — The United States and Iran may some day re-establish a relationship of respect, but there should be no rush in attempting a reconciliation, former hostage Bruce Laingen said Friday.

Laingen, charge d'affairs at the U.S. Embassy when it was overrun by Iranian students on Nov. 4, 1979, said he agreed with President Reagan that revenge is not a worthy motive, but said he would caution against any quick effort to renew peaceful relations.

"This is not the time to go rushing back and seeking a relationship with Iran. This is a time for both countries to stand back a bit — certainly us," Laingen said during a news conference.

The 58-yar-old Laingen, his wife, Penne, and sons Jim and Chip, were guests of Gov. Al Quie on Friday as part of the Laingens' first visit to their native Minnesota since the American hostages were freed last month.

They signed a piece of plastic yellow ribbon which had adorned the Foshay Tower, one of the tallest buildings in Minneapolis. The ribbon has been signed by hundreds of Minnesota residents and will be given to the Minnesota Historical Society.

Laingen removed a yellow ribbon placed around a tree at the Minnesota governor's residence, placed there by his sister, Norma Marsh of Hastings.

Laingen declined to say whether he would be willing to return to Iran in the future, suggesting he wouldn't be particularly welcome.

"There are other people who are better equipped to try a new beginning," Laingen said.

State control wanted for bilingual education

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The State Board of Education urged Saturday that U.S. District Judge Wayne Justice's ruling on bilingual education be appealed, saying the state knows what's best for school students.

Adoption of the resolution came on voice vote but board member Virginia Currey of Arlington asked to be shown as voting "No".

"I consider it a waste of time and money to appeal this matter," she said. "The money and time would be better spent doing what the U.S. Supreme Court will tell us to do anyway."

Board member Wayne Windle of El Paso supported the resolution, saying he felt El Paso school teachers involved in bilingual education had more "expertise" in the subject than an East Texas judge.

Justice of Tyler ruled Jan. 12 that bilingual education programs in Texas are "wholly inadequate" and ordered lawyers for the state and the Mexican-American groups that filed the suit 10 years ago to come up with a plan by March 2 to expand and improve the programs.

On Feb. 3, the new U.S. education secretary scrapped the previous administration's guidelines that would require schools to teach most subjects to students in their native languages up to Grade 12 if necessary.

Texas schools currently provide bilingual education from kindergarten through Grade 3, if there are sufficient numbers of students with limited English-speaking ability.

"The State Board of Education believes that the responsibility and authority to select educational programs of instruction and methodology to meet the needs of these students must lie with the state and its school districts," said the state board's resolution.

The resolution added that the board "recognized that the English language is the basis of instruction in all Texas pubic schools and that it is the policy of this state to ensure the mastery of English by all students" and "it is the policy of the State Board of Education to ensure equal educational opportunity to every Texas student."

The resolution said Justice "has ordered a bilingual education program for all limited English proficient students in all grades, thereby mandating a particular teaching method to address a concern best reserved for the state and those trained in educational matters."

School Commissioner Alton O. Bowen reported earlier that the Texas Education Agency had reduced its staff by 110 persons since last Aug. 7.

"We have used those funds to improve the salaries of those who are willing to do more work," he said, "with loss of any quality or quantity."

Balloonists safely land in India

MURCHPUR, India (AP) — Two American adventurers landed their balloon Saturday near this village in northern India, abandoning their attempt to make the first non-stop, round-the-world balloon flight.

Maxie Anderson and Don Ida told The Associated Press they were both fine, but their 20-story balloon had failed to gain enough elevation to cross the rugged Himalayan mountains separating India and China.

A crowd of excited peasants surrounded the balloon, "Jules Verne," after it set down at Murchpur 90 miles northwest of New Delhi.

Anderson and Ida said they planned to spend the night in the balloon's red-white-and-blue gondola to guard their equipment.

They cast off Thursday from Luxor, Egypt, on what they had hoped would be an 8 to 10-day voyage around the world. They had traveled about 3,000 miles when they were forced to land.

U.S. Embassy officials in New Delhi said there were "6,000 to 8,000" Indians milling around the landing site.

But this reporter who went to the site found about 100 peasants and a dozen police surrounding the deflated balloon.

Anderson, who did most of the talking, said they had encountered "operational problems" with the helium-filled balloon as they floated over one range of the Himalayas at about 25,000 feet between Afghanistan and Pakistan.

"We had to give up an inordinate amount of (liquid) ballast to keep the balloon from going down," he said.

Asked if the balloon had sprung a leak as reported earlier, Anderson said, "We're not sure. This balloon flew differently than any I have ever flown before."

Anderson, an Albuquerque, N.M., mining-investment executive, piloted the "Double Eagle II" balloon from Canada to France in 1978 in the first successful trans-Atlantic manned balloon flight. Last year, he and his son Kris claimed the first crossing of North America in the balloon "Kitty Hawk."

Ida, is a Boulder, Colo., tree-nursery operator. Their balloon is named for the 19th-century French science fiction writer whose fictional hero Phileas Fogg went around the world in a balloon in 80 days.

Anderson said he and Ida would "consult with our (ground) crew" about what to do next. "One is already here and the rest should be here tomorrow," he added.

Court asked to overturn ruling

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — The Idaho Supreme Court has been asked to overturn a district court ruling that said a woman who is subject to epileptic seizures should not have custody of two small children.

Attorneys went before the high court on Friday in a 2-year-old divorce case in which Lynnae Moye Baughman, 26, formerly of Idaho and now of Riverside, Calif., is trying to regain custody of her children, Bret, 4, and Tayna, 2. The court took the case under advisement.

Third District Judge Gilbert Norris earlier ruled that the children should be placed in the custody of Mrs. Baughman's former husband, Terry Moye of Eugene, Ore.

Norris ruled that because Mrs. Baughman suffers from a form of epilepsy which causes brief seizures, she could not properly care for the small children.

The ruling set off strong protests from state and national epilepsy groups, who said there was no reason a woman with epilepsy couldn't care for her children.

"If you eliminate the judge's finding of fact pertinent to epilepsy, there's no basis for denying custody of the children to Mrs. Baughman," said her attorney, Larry Hunter.

The couple was divorced in 1979. The former Mrs. Moye married Steven Graybeal of Boise, but was divorced less than one month later, according to her mother, Dee Cady of Boise.

She married Roger Baughman on Jan. 5 and now lives in Riverside, Calif., the mother said.

Moye said the custody battle so far has cost him about $8,000 in legal fees. He said he and his former wife have been alternating custody of the children every two months since Norris' ruling.

Tentative agreement could end 30-day strike at Western mines

DENVER (AP) — United Mine Workers members will vote Sunday on a tentative agreement that could end a 30-day strike by 930 employees at five Western mines owned by the Peabody Coal Co., a company negotiator said Saturday.

Tom Saggau, negotiator for Peabody, said the agreement reached Thursday was similar to a tentative contract settlement reached recently by negotiators for Pittsburgh & Midway Coal Mining Co. and the UMW.

UMW officials could not be reached immediately for comment.

The strike, which began at midnight Jan. 15, has been directed at mines in Colorado, Montana and Arizona.

The affected mines are the Kayenta Mine in north-central Arizona, which employs 463 and produces 7.2 million tons of coal per yea; the Black Mesa Mine, adjacent the Kayenta Mine, employing 306 and producing 3.7 million tons of coal a year; the Big Sky Mine near Colstrip, Mont., which employs 87 and produces 2.9 million tons annually; the Nucla Mine in Montrose County, employing 21 and producing 90,000 tons of coal a year; and the Seneca Mine in Routt County, employing 71 and producing 1.7 million tons of coal annually.

The negotiations were closely watched by officials beginning negotiations for a new Eastern coal-labor agreement.

Millionaire brothers Herbert W. Hunt, left, and Nelson Bunker Hunt piece together the two halves of the 1981 Bonehead Award that was presented to them by the Bonehead Club of Dallas Friday. The Hunts, the first dual recipients of the award, won the award for not only losing millions of dollars in the 1980 silver market, but then allowing themselves to be blamed for the entire fiasco by those who profitted from their losses. Three tons of pot seized DALLAS (AP) — In one of the largest seizures in Dallas County history, officers have confiscated more than three tons of marijuana with an estimated street value of $3.1 million.

Three men remained in custody Saturday after officers acting on a tip stopped a tractor-trailer truck loaded with 6,200 pounds of the weed.

A police spokesmen said the trio probably would be charged Monday.

Dallas Police Sgt. Tom Sherman said the late Friday arrests near Rowlett were part of "an ongoing investigation."

He said the men were "known marijuana dealers."

Police said they were acting on information that the marijuna, described as "premium grade," was being shipped north from the southern part of the state.

Gunbattles in El Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist guerrillas attacked city buses in the poor districts around San Salvador Saturday and took on government troops in gunbattles that left two people dead and many wounded, authorities said.

A source in the Public Works Ministry, who asked not to be identified, said 138 ministry workers had been killed and 11 bridges blown up by leftist guerrillas in eastern El Salvador. He declined to say when the men had been killed or the bridges blown up.

The bus attacks occurred early Saturday morning but authorities said no passengers were injured. Officials said a policeman and a terrorist were killed and many other people were wounded in the gunfire that erupted when security forces arrived.

Leftists fighting to topple the ruling military-civilian junta have adopted a new tactic of destroying communications and other public works facilities and in the past month have concentrated their attacks in the eastern part of the country.

The eastern zone been the center of heavy fighting between army troops and the main part of a guerrilla army. Guerrilla organizations claim to control many small towns in the area.

Military officials reported Friday the leftists had launched a spate of new attacks in the central and eastern part of the country but had been driven back. The government has said the guerrillas are burning cotton fields in an attempt to further damage the economy and bring down the junta.

Store owners in the capital reported leftists have threatened to "execute" them if they do not pay a "war tax" to the guerrillas.

Harassment of public transportation, gasoline stations and telephone and power supply facilities has been stepped up as direct battles between leftists and army regulars dropped after the leftists failed to win popular support.

The leftists launched a "final offensive" Jan. 10, but government troops crushed the main thrusts of the armed uprising. The government claims it is in control throughout El Salvador and is cleaning-up pockets of guerrilla resistance. Guerrillas claim to control small towns in the eastern part of the country.

The Reagan administration is expected to make public sometime this week a "white paper" on El Salvador which will detail its contention the Soviet Union and Cuba have funneled arms to the leftists through Honduras to the east and Nicaragua to the south.

The report will be issued in tandem with the trip of a senior-level U.S. delegation to European capitals for intelligence briefings in support of the administration's accusations against the Soviet Union and its allies.

Meeting to help disabled

A public meeting for those concerned with the welfare of persons with handicaps will be held in City Hall Feb. 23 at 7:30 p.m. as the Community Partner Committee of the U.S. Council for the International Year of Disabled Person (IYDP) convenes.

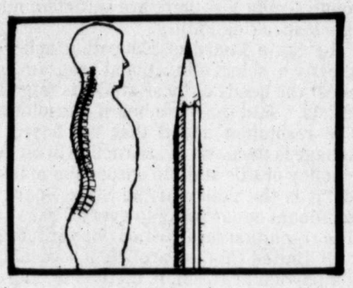
The meeting, chaired by Pat Dishman, the mayor's official liaison to the IYDP, is designed to determine needs of the disabled person in Midland and set up goals as to how they will be met.

Miss Dishman, who is the public relations director at Midland Memorial Hospital, said she hopes to gain acceptance of one of the group's major philosophies: "There's no such thing as handicapped people, there are only people with handicaps."

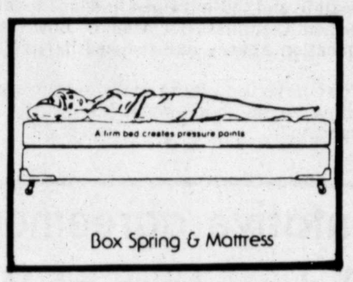
The meeting will also serve as an organizational one for future group work. The IYDP plans to work for equality for disabled persons in employment, education, rehabilitation and in the community.

If The Human Body Was Straight Up And Down Like A Pencil..

THEN YOU COULD sleep on the flat surface of a conventional box spring and mattress, and every inch of your body would have equal support.....



BUT THE FACT IS — there is not a straight bone in the Human Body, and the small of your back (spine) gets virtually no support. What results is PRESSURE POINTS: cutting off blood circulation, tossing and turning, numbness in arms and legs, lower and upper back soreness.....



A SHALLOW WATERBED™ conforms equally firmly to every inch of your body eliminating PRESSURE POINTS, and symtoms common with sleeping on a box spring. The results: A deep rejuvinating sleep.....

Trinity students plan trip to France

Thirteen eighth and ninth graders from Trinity School and three chaperones will be flying to Paris, France, later this month as a type of "living classroom" to learn about the French language as well as study the culture and customs of the country during the school's spring break.

Upper School French teacher Majorie Kozak and her husband, Dan Kozak, will act as tour guides for the five girls and eight boys who will leave Midland Feb. 27 and return March 7. Doris Watson will also accompany the group as a chaperone for the stay.

Staying in a hotel on the Island of St. Louis in the heart of Paris, the group will tour the Paris islands and environs extensively. The hotel will be within walking distance of Notre Dame cathedral, the Louvre, the Sainte Chapelle, the Conciergerie, the Tuileries Gardens, the Latin Quarter including the Boulevard St. Michel, the Sorbonne, Cluny and the Pantheon.

Students attending the France trip include Burton Baldridge, Janan Bullard, Chris Callaway, Artie Carpenter, Dee Dee Dyer, Bitsy Hopper, Fred Kennedy, Laura Renick, Grant Scherzer, Scott Seay, Tim Smith, Holly Williams and Jeff Young.

According to Mrs. Kozak, this type of comprehensive week in Paris allows maximum flexibility for students to discover and enjoy Paris, its people and its language.

Teague school fund created

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Student leaders at Texas A&M University Saturday announced the creation of a special endowment for an annual Olin E. Teague Memorial Speaker during the Student Conference on National Affairs.

The announcement was made by senior Tom Beecroft, chairman of SCONA 26, as the four-day conference ended. Beecroft called the late congressman a SCONA mentor and said he had been instrumental in bringing speakers and support to the conference.

Beecroft said SCONA supporters hope to raise $50,000 to finance the endowment in memory of Teague. Each year, proceeds from the endowment will be used to attract a specialist on world affairs to speak to the student leaders.

Student participants in the conference this year came from the United States, Canada, Mexico, Guatemala and Kuwait.

Walesa relenting to include Polish farmers in labor code

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Solidarity union leader Lech Walesa indicated Saturday he was relenting on demands that farmers be included in a new national labor code. Responding to a government appeal for a 90-day moratorium on strikes, he said, "I can't promise anything, but I don't want strikes."

During a brief meeting with reporters in a Warsaw hotel, Walesa also said he was "very glad" about the appointment last week of Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski as premier.

Jaruzelski on Thursday appealed to the new independent unions for "90 days of calm" to give his government time to get the crisis-ridden economy on better footing.

The Solidarity leadership had passed a resolution Thursday — before the premier's appeal — pledging to strike only as a last resort. But the government said it did not regard it as a formal reply because of the timing.

Warsaw television, meanwhile, said Solidarity coalminers from Jastrzebie, site of a major miners' strike last summer, had volunteered to work on Saturdays — their days off — and had asked other miners to join them.

Walesa met reporters after his first official meeting with Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Rakowski, who will be in charge of labor affairs for the new government, and during a break in work with a government commission on the labor code.

Last week, Walesa said he would "simply walk out" of the drafting session if private farmers seeking a trade union are not put under the aegis of the labor law.

"I haven't changed my attitude on this," said Walesa, "but at the same time, this is not the right moment to discuss the issue. I promised them (private farmers) I would discuss their problems and I won't let them down. But it took us 10 years to be registered, so they can wait a while."

The reference to 10 years represents Walesa's often expressed view that last summer's labor strikes and subsequent negotiations with the government had their roots in the 1970 riots in the port city of Gdansk.

The continuing unrest since that settlement and the presence of Soviet and East bloc troops neat Poland's borders has raised Western fears that the Soviets might intervene.

Walesa said Rakowski had taken an immediate step toward ending a long-standing sit-in by farmers and workers in the southern Polish city of Rzeszow by sending a government commission there to discuss the farmers' demands for agricultural reform.

Walesa said he believes an agreement can be reached in Rzeszow this week and that Solidarity will guarantee its provisions.

But registration of an independent farmers' union will have to be delayed, he said, "because there is no legal basis" for registration or merger with Solidarity.

On Tuesday, Poland's Supreme Court said farmers could not unionize because of a 1932 law holding they are self-employed. It said the so-called "Rural Solidarity," which claims to have 600,000 of Poland's 3.3 million private farmers, should seek registration as an association.

Such an association would be subject to state administration and have no collective bargaining rights, while a union would be independent of government control.

Solidarity had promised last fall it would not call any strikes until Jan. 15 of this year, but the promise was broken by rising labor unrest in January that culminated in a 10-day general strike in Bielsko-Biala ending last week.

The new government has stressed it will be one of dialogue and negotiation and will try to implement provisions of last summer's strike-ending agreements — which allowed trade unions free of the Communist Party and provided for an overhaul of the labor code, among other provisions.

A new labor law was to have been enacted by the end of 1980, but that deadline has been pushed to this June.

In the interview at the Sejm Hotel in Warsaw, Walesa said in approval of the new premier, "I'm very glad he was appointed. I like decisions to be undertaken, no matter what decisions, because I like to express my point of view.

"So far, it was impossible even to issue a communique after the negotiations," he said in describing his relations with previous government leaders.

Amdrzej Gwiazda, another Solidarity leader at Walesa's side, said it would be difficult to enforce a 90-day strike moratorium if Solidarity members were arrested or detained by authorities.

"How can we promise (even) three days without strikes," if that occurred, he said.

Added Walesa: "It is up to the government. In case some Solidarity leaders are arrested, what are we supposed to do?"

CAF spot-landing contest Saturday

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The Confederate Air Force does far more than just reminisce over the faded glory of the now rare "warbird" of the 1939-45 World War II era.

The colonels in the CAF seek out the antique aircraft, procure parts, fix them up and keep them flying.

"You don't need a big airplane and lots of money (to be a CAF colonel)," said Col. Paul Erdmann, leader of the Midland-Odessa Desert Squadron of the CAF's nine-squadron West Texas Wing.

Obviously, these colonels who own, maintain, piece together, fuel up, and fly their own warbirds aren't exactly poor boys.

Then again, not all of them are like the serious-about-flying Joe Mabee, a Midland rancher-oilman who owns a veritable squadron of warbirds at his Mabee Flughafen (Airport) on his ranch north of town.

The CAF will be putting on a spot-landing contest at noon Saturday at Big Spring Airport, otherwise known as the old Webb Air Force Base.

Mabee is readying for the landings, which some call "controlled crashes."

"Everybody else may show up in their little ol' 'paper cubs' and 'junky' airplanes," the colonel said in hopes of ribbing those other pilots who may get into their light aircraft, including Piper Cubs, and make the best of the fun landing.

But Mabee, former leader of the CAF's nine-squadron West Texas Wing, is jestfully committed to being the BMOC (Big Man on Campus) at the show.

"I'm going to enter with a full-fledged warbird, and I'm going to blow in there and fly something fierce," he promised. "I'm going to rise to the occasion...even if I'm 50 years old."

COL. MABEE won't say, but he may fly over his Curtiss P-40N Warhawk, or his Grumman Wildcat.

The spot-landing contest, which is open to the public, will pit the Midland-Odessa Desert Squadron against the other squadrons in the Wing and against the New Mexico Wing, which is based at Hobbs, N.M.

Mabee said that he'll be challenging "General (Robb) Satterfield to see who can make it around the pattern the quickest."

Satterfield, a CAF colonel and former World War II and post-war U.S. Air Force prop and jet fighter test pilot, is the event's operations officer. His job is to ensure safe flying.

Another colonel, Tom Dollahite, will be ramrodding the perhaps farcical, but always-abiding-by-the-air-rules, event.

But Dollahite is making up the spot-landing rules, which, in the name of CAF insanity, may change at anytime.

Though they'll be flying in fun, the CAF colonels will be safety conscious.

"You can't fly unless you're briefed; that's the law," said Erdmann. Safety officer is Col. Bill Stepp. Wing Leader is Col. Kale Webster.

Spot-landing judges will be Big Spring's Connie Edwards, a rancher who flies and owns aircraft such as the Lockheed P-38 Lightning, Messerschmitt Me. 109, the British Spitfire and the North American P-51 Mustang; Dollahite; J.T. Cloyd, a Lear Jet pilot; Bill Stepp, a WWII P-51 fighter pilot; and Erdmann, the spot-landing's "speaker of the house."

A CAF West Texas Wing meeting and barbecue feed will follow the show. Host will be Big Spring's Doug Warren. "He's going to have a casket full of beer," joked Erdmann.

Aside from the humor, the spot-landing contest will test the pilots' proficiency. Aviators wishing to join in the spot-landing contest in the aircraft of their highest rating may drop a check for $1.78 or 178 pennies in the mail to Col. Paul Erdmann, P.O. Box 2539, Midland, Texas 79701.

"We've got to make some money," quipped Satterfield.

"The idea is to shoot three landings," said Satterfield, "and from below 300 feet, you cannot increase power."

Once the pilot reduces power for the pinpoint landing, he is committed not to put on power. If he does, he's in trouble with the judges.

A traildragger must make a three-point landing, while tricycle-geared aircraft are to land nose high.

11 people killed in fire in Brazil office building

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — A fire raced through the lower floors of a 20-story office building in downtown Sao Paulo Saturday, killing at least 11 people and injuring 30, police reported. It was feared the toll would rise.

A helicopter plucked eight people from the roof of the building and firemen slung ropes between the blazing structure and nearby skyscrapers, permitting some of the trapped occupants in the upper stories to swing hand-over-hand to safety.

Firefighters recalled the tragedy in February 1974 when the Joelma skyscraper turned into a blazing inferno and at least 187 people were killed, including scores who leaped from upper windows. It is estimated that as many as 260 people perished in that fire, but only 187 bodies were found.

Another February fire in 1972 at a downtown skyscraper claimed 28 lives.

Most of Saturday's victims were members of the cleaning staff who were working when the blaze broke out just before noon and the other occupants had left for the day or were out to lunch, police said.

Witnesses reported a bank on the ground floor was looted during the confusion, but police declined comment and no details were available.

Firemen said the blaze started in the mezzanine and although major damage was contained to the first five floors, flames soared as high as the 19th story and smoke engulfed the building.

They had the fire under control at 7 p.m. and began searching for more victims.

Three unions walk out of The News

PATERSON, N.J. (AP) — Just hours after a federal judge ordered The News of Paterson to temporarily reinstate 31 delivery truck drivers dismissed after a contract dispute, typesetters and pressmen walked off the job at the north New Jersey newspaper.

U.S. District Judge H. Lee Sarokin on Friday ordered the reinstatement of the drivers for 10 days while newspaper officials and the Newspaper and Mail Delivers Union resolve a dispute over insertion of advertising supplements in newspapers.

Barbizon opens doors to male guests

NEW YORK (AP) — Champagne corks popped, Sammy Cahn sang and a 10-story Valentine fluttered in the wind outside.

The reason for the Valentine's Day celebration: The Barbizon Hotel, for more than 50 years a haven for women only, opened its doors to male guests for the first time.

As male and female guests mingled on the second floor of the East 63rd Street hotel, an era came to an end.

"Why not?" said Barry Mann, managing director of the Barbizon. "Actually, it was a business decision based on financial loss. By limiting ourselves to women, we were losing the opportunity for 75 percent of New York's overnight guests.

"Now, we're a real hotel."

Many female guests had enjoyed the all-female atmosphere of the famous hotel. For years, men were limited to the hotel's lobby and television room, and fortress-like security guaranteed they stayed there.

But $10 million in renovations and a nationwide advertising campaign later, the doors opened on a coed facility.

"We're still going to keep one wing on each floor women only," said Mann, "for women who want the same security and atmosphere as always."

William and Catherine Nicholas of Franklin Square, the first couple to stay at the hotel, and David Cleveland of Cambridge, Ill., the hotel's first male guest, were introduced to the crowd before Cahn sang a medley of his tunes, such as "Let It Snow" with his own Barbizon lyrics.

Heifetz fled country to escape publicity

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Q. Where was Jascha Heifetz during his 80th birthday?

A. Out of the country, avoiding the fuss.

"I had to leave the country for my self-protection," the violin virtuoso said in a rare interview last week. "Things were starting to happen, and I couldn't stop them."

That much can be reported about the violin virtuoso, not much more. He continues to keep his private life almost as private as Greta Garbo's. This was true during most of his 50 years as one of the world's greatest concert performers. He has become more reclusive during the past decade, when his public performances dwindled down to a precious few.

A Paris concert in 1970, with a Heifetzian curtain speech: "For those of you who like it, thanks; for those of you who didn't, perhaps we'll catch you next time." A chamber music benefit at the University of Southern California in 1972. A "final" recital at the Los Angeles Music Center the same year (curtain speech: "I am pooped"). Two more USC performances with his great friend, the late cellist Gregor Piatigorsky, in 1974.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Athletes have positive, negative alterations in menstrual functions

Dear Dr. Solomon: About a year ago, I was bitten with the jogging bug and have been training diligently ever since. In fact I had been preparing to enter a marathon until personal problems unrelated to my health forced me to abandon the idea, at least temporarily. My problem has to do with menstrual function. I have trained hard during the past year, and lost about 40 pounds in the process. During the same time, my periods have practically stopped. I'm wondering whether this is a result of the training and whether there is any cause for concern. I am 23 years of age and not taking any medication. — Pam

Dear Pam: While athletes seem to report a greater incidence of menstrual dysfunction than do nonathletes, there is considerable doubt about whether the physical activity itself is responsible for the condition. Some reports suggest that women who have a normal menstrual pattern before entering upon a physically demanding training program continue to have a normal pattern after they do so. Conversely, there is evidence that women who report some degree of menstrual dysfunction after becoming involved in a training program had the same degree of dysfunction before. These studies suggest that caution should be exercised in attributing menstrual dysfunction to participation in sports.

Dr. Mona M. Shangold, an assistant professor of obstetrics and gynecology at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine, reports on a survey of women who ran the 1977 New York City Marathon. Writing in "The Physician and Sportsmedicine," Dr. Shangold notes that two-thirds of those who responded, all of whom completed the race, said they had regular menstrual periods both before and during their premarathon training. Only one woman who reported that she had a regular period before beginning training developed an irregular period during training. Another said she had some menstrual irregularity both before and during training, but developed a regular period while still engaged in intensive training. These responses indicate that athletes have experienced both positive and negative alterations in their menstrual cycles, although more emphasis has been placed on dysfunctions.

The problem in attributing menstrual dysfunction to exercise is complicated by the number of other variables that merit consideration. For example, you mention a rather substantial loss of weight which, itself, could cause some disruption in menstrual pattern. In addition, there is the emotional stress involved in training for a marathon. These other factors make it difficult to establish any direct cause-and-effect relationship between exercise and menstrual dysfunction.

Harris trial should go to jury this week

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — A middle-aged housewife who overheard Scarsdale Diet doctor Herman Tarnower's angry words to Jean Harris on the day he died may hold the key to the verdict when the jury begins deliberations in Mrs. Harris' murder trial.

Three months of testimony — often emotional and sometimes gruesome — ended last week. Jurors are expected to get the case this week after closing arguments by attorneys.

Mrs. Harris could be sentenced to 25 years to life if she is convicted of Tarnower's slaying.

Only Juanita Edwards, out of the 97 witnesses who testified during the lengthy trial, offered any evidence that Mrs. Harris might have lied when she said all was well between her and the millionaire diet doctor, her lover of 14 years.

Mrs. Edwards had an appointment with Tarnower on the morning of March 10, the day he was shot to death in the bedroom of his Purchase, N.Y., estate.

She testified that Tarnower received a telephone call in the examining room in which she was being treated. He left the room to take the call in his adjoining office, hanging the receiver on a bracket but not severing the connection.

From her position five feet away, Mrs. Edwards said she overheard "muffled voices" and then Tarnower's angry remarks: "Goddamn it, Jean, I want you to stop bothering me!"

More muffled sounds came over the receiver, and then Tarnower raised his voice again: "You've lied, and you've cheated," the woman said.

Mrs. Edwards' testimony was at odds with Mrs. Harris' account of the telephone conversation during her eight days on the stand.

The 57-year-old former headmistress of the Madeira School for girls in McLean, Va., said she had called Tarnower that day to ask him to disregard a "whining" letter she had just posted to him. Then, she said, he invited her to spend a weekend with him in April, and they hung up amicably.

She denied on the stand that Tarnower accused her of lying and cheating and told her to leave him alone because he planned to marry his office assistant, Lynne Tryforos, 38.

Prosecutors contend Mrs. Harris killed Tarnower in a jealous rage over his affair with Mrs. Tryforos, whom Mrs. Harris described in a letter mailed the day of the shooting as an "adulterous slut."

"Your phone call to tell me you preferred the company of a vicious, adulterous psychotic ... kept me awake for almost 36 hours," Mrs. Harris wrote in the 11-page letter that was read aloud to the jurors.

She wrote of having just received "a copy of your will, with my name vigorously scratched out and Lynne's name in your handwriting written in three places."

Defense lawyers have claimed, however, that Mrs. Harris intended to take her own life when she drove to Tarnower's estate on March 10 because she was distraught and suicidal over her own failures as a woman and in her job. They claim Tarnower, 69, was shot in a struggle over the woman's gun.

Besides the conflicts between Mrs. Edwards' and Mrs. Harris' accounts of the March 10 telephone conversation, there were other discrepancies in the trial testimony.

Mrs. Harris can only remember shooting Tarnower in the hand as he allegedly grabbed her gun. She never explained how he sustained three more bullet wounds — one in the upper back, one in the chest and one in the upper arm.

And in her own will, dated March 10, Mrs. Harris does not mention the man her attorney described as "the human being who meant the most to her."

Senior Geologists
Midland, Texas

It's not just what you can do

As a result of the rapid growth of the Midland, Texas, office of Mitchell Energy & Development Corp., we have immediate openings for experienced Senior Geologists. We're looking for individuals with a B.S. degree (M.S. preferred), as well as a minimum of 3 years' prospect generation/screening experience in the Permian Basin. A background in development geology and geophysics would be a definite plus.

It's how you can grow

Tired of having your good ideas lost in a big company bureaucracy? Or are you worried about your career being sidetracked in a smaller company that's going nowhere? We'll give you several good reasons to think about a change to Mitchell Energy & Development Corp.

We're pretty big and we're on the move. But we're still small enough to give you high visibility. There are no low-profile people at Mitchell.

Grow with us

Exactly how big and successful are we? Take a look. Our capital budget is $456 million. Our natural gas production is up this year from 46 billion cubic feet to 51 billion. Our liquid hydrocarbon production now tops 10.8 million barrels. Our daily gas gathering and throughput is averaging 268 million cubic feet. Our success ratio in drilling is 78 percent. That's right, 78 percent. And our revenues are up 67 percent to $475.5 million. We're not the biggest independent, but a lot of people think we're the best.

Excellent compensation, benefits

We are very competitive when it comes to salaries. We hire the best people we can find and we reward them well. In addition, we offer a very fine package of benefits: hospitalization, life insurance, accident insurance, and retirement plans. We also have a Dental Plan for you and your family. That's a big extra. So is the fact that we really go overboard to help new people relocate, including a mortgage differential program.

Interested? Write or call for an application, or send your résumé, in confidence, to: T.A. Good, Mitchell Energy & Development Corp., P. O. Box 4000, The Woodlands, Texas 77380, (713) 363-6673.

In a good restaurant, when you buy a dinner, you get more than just food. You get service, a pleasant atmosphere, and a feeling that the owners would like you to come back.

It's the very same way that we like to sell used cars. Since our reputation is more "on the line" when we sell a used car, you can be sure we'll do everything we can to make our used car customer a satisfied customer.

Midland, Lee swimmers splash to 5-5A titles

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

While the Midland High girls were leaving opponents in their star studded wake, it was left up to the Midland Lee and Odessa Permian boys to provide the real excitement in the District 5-5A swimming championships at the Mabee Memorial Swim Center Saturday afternoon.

MHS won the girls title so easily that that particular division was almost over before the first gun. The Bulldogs racked up 87 points while San Angelo was a distant second with 50 points and Lee was third with 43.

BUT IN THE boys division, Lee and Permian switched leads so many times that the final team championship wasn't determined until the final event of the day. Coach David Whytlaw's Lee boys needed a second place finish in the 400 freestyle relay to earn the team title. Permian won the race, but Lee was second to secure 87 first place points while Mojo ended up with 84. Abilene Cooper had 33 points and MHS 32 and far behind the pace setters.

"We had lost to Permian three times this year," said a limp Whytlaw after the meet. "But I knew we could beat them if we got things together and we did. We won this meet last year, but this was more enjoyable because we didn't have the team we did a year ago. These kids just wanted it and went out and got it. We had the title on paper going into the finals, but things don't always work out like the figures on paper."

BOTH LEE and Permian won five events during the meet and that was really just how close it was all the way down the line. Cleve Carrens led the Rebel victory by winning two events with a 55.89 in the 100 butterfly and a 58.78 in the 100 backstroke. Bruce Quenzer won the 200 individual medley with a 2:10.07 while Ronnie Black swamped the diving event with 392 points, more than 100 points ahead of Midland High's Jack Preston, who finished second. Lee's only record setting performance came in the 200 medley relay with a 1:47.01.

Permian's Michael DeMarco set a new 500 freestyle record with a 5:07.80, breaking the old 1980 mark of 5:07.91 by San Angelo's J. Buck.

The MHS boys won no events, but Billy Worley came close in the 500 freestyle with a second and was edged on the last lap by the record setting DeMarco. Worley also finished second in the 200 freestyle and MHS had Preston's second in the diving. Lee also had second place finishes from Andy Williams in the 100 backstroke and in the 400 freestyle relay.

THE GIRLS of MHS won seven of 11 events as Lori Thompson, Gretchen Koch and Andrea Freeman paced the Bulldogs. Thompson won two events, winning the 200 freestyle with a blazing district record time of 1:58.08. That time beat the record she set in the preliminaries Friday of 1:59.90. The 1:58.08 also beat the record on the region books. Thompson also won the 100 freestyle with a 56.16.

Koch was also a two-event winner. She set a record in the 50 freestyle with a 25.35, beating her own record of 25.62 set in the prelims Friday. Koch also won the 100 backstroke with a 1:02.23. Freeman also beat her own prelim record of 5:24.05 in the 500 freestyle with a fine 5:22.24 in the finals, and was second in the 200 freestyle.

The Bulldogs also won both relays in record setting time with a 2:01.10 in the 200 medley and a 3:59.37 in the 400 freestyle.

Suzi Simpson got seconds in the 500 freestyle and the 100 butterfly for Bulldog depth, and Julie Spaugh also added a second in the 50 freestyle. Janie Dowdle was third in the 100 butterfly to complete the MHS domination.

MARSH NEVER had to sweat that division and said, "The girls performed just about as we expected. They had things under control. It was really just a matter of doing what we knew we could do."

Emily Murrah gave the Rebels its only victory of the day in the girls division with a 1:16.15 in the 100 breaststroke and she had a second in the 200 individual medley. Doreen McGookey was second in the 200 IM and sixth in the 500 freestyle.

The only other record of the day came from Permian's Renee Yeilding with a 1:04.31 in the 100 butterfly. She beat her own record of 1:05.72 set last year.

The top six finishers in each event earned a spot in the Region I meet at Texas Tech in two weeks. The top two in each event there will qualify for the state championship meet to be held in Austin the following week.

Hale Irwin nabs five-stroke lead in Hawaii Open

HONOLULU (AP) — Hale Irwin, displaying the smooth intensity that won him two U.S. Open titles, fired a 10-under-par 62 and moved to a 5-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $325,000 Hawaiian Open golf tournament.

Irwin, fighting his way out of a slump that started almost two years ago, put together a 54-hole total of 196, 20 strokes under par on the 6,881-yard Waialae Country Club course and matching the best three-round total on the Professional Golfers' Association Tour this season.

Irwin played a near-flawless round in the ideal weather — warm and sunny with gentle trade winds — that has contributed so heavily to the extremely low scoring in the tournament.

He didn't have a bogey in matching the tournament record and the best single round of the season, set Friday by Britain's Nick Faldo, and put himself in command with birdies on five of his last six holes.

Included in that run was a 20-foot putt on the 18th that rolled around the cup, hung for a tantalizing moment on the lip and then dropped in. It finished a back-nine 30.

"What can I say," shrugged John Schroeder, a distant second at 201 after shooting a 66. "I started the day 3 shots back, shot 66 and lost 2 more strokes."

Isao Aoki, Japan's No.1 player and runner-up in the 1980 U.S. Open, and veteran Don January were another stroke back at 203, 13 shots under par but a distant 7 behind the runaway leader. Aoki had a 66, January 68.

Tied at 204 were Wayne Levi, Doug Tewell and Faldo. Levi shot a 66, Tewell a 64, and Faldo, the second-round leader, par 72, 10 strokes higher than his Friday effort.

Tom Watson, only 2 back at the end of 36 holes, could do no better than a 71 and was apparently out of title contention at 205. Lee Trevino shot 69-206. Bruce Lietzke, a two-time winner this season, had a 70 and extended his string of consecutive rounds at par or better to 16. He was at 206.

"Obviously, things went very well," Irwin said. "I played very well, hit an awful lot of good shots. Everything went very, very well."

He missed only two fairways and one green, and that in the fringe.

Irwin birdied his first two holes with putts of five and nine feet, threw a 5-iron only 12 inches from the cup on the fourth and holed a 25-footer on the seventh.

He scored from eight feet on the 10th, then began a run of four consecutive birdies on the 13th, a par-5 he reached in 2. Approach shots left him putts of less than four feet on the next two holes. He scored from 12 feet on the 16th and closed it with the dramatic putt on the final hole.

Bates gains Golden Gloves finals

By MIKE CRUVER

ODESSA — David Bates, Midland Boxing Club's classy welterweight, struggled to a decision over Robert Pendleton of Pecos Optimist in an Open Division semifinal bout Saturday night in the 35th annual Regional Golden Gloves Tournament in the Ector County Coliseum.

Bates and Pendleton went at each other from the opening bell and never let up. Both fighters scored, but neither was able to score the knockout blow.

AFTER A standoff in the opening round, Bates seemed to become a little more aggressive than Pendleton. Using a good combination of body punches and shots to the head, Bates had the Pecos boxer in trouble once early in the second round. Pendleton, showing remarkable staying power, managed to coverup until he regained his composure and came storming back after Bates.

Both fighters recorded scores in the final round but the decision went to Bates.

Also in the Open Division, Anthony Davis of San Angelo scored a decision over Midland's Isabel Reynosa.

Davis, putting on an Ali shuffle, dropping his hands, scratching his head and going into an elaborate windup, won on a decision, but it was not a popular one with the crowd.

DAVIS' ANTICS aroused the crowd, and everyone in the house was cheering for Reynosa. Reynosa fought a strong fight, but he didn't have the punching power of his opponent and lost on a decision.

In another Open Division fight, Benita Banda of Midland completely dominated his fight with Rusty Greathouse, an unattached fighter, before putting the game but out classed fighter on the canvas with 1:06 gone in the second round.

Midland's only fighter in the High School Football Division Saturday night, Jerry Collazo, 115 of the Tall City used his longer reach andgood combination of punches to ring up a TKO over Albert Guzman of Lamesa with 15 seconds gone in the second round.

Lamesa's Jay Kennedy won by a TKO in the first round over Larry Kirby of San Angelo, because of cuts over Kirby's eye in a 155-pound bout in the Open Division.

BATES IS the only defending regional champion back from last year and the Midlander is hoping for a second consecutive trip to Fort Worth in the State Golden Gloves Tournament.

The finals are set for 7 p.m. Monday with the Open Class winners advancing to Fort Worth.

In afternoon bouts Saturday, Midland fighters won two and lost one. Gilbert Hernandez decisioned Jubel Scarborough of the Odessa Boys Club in a Special Division fight while Luis Sanchez, also of the Tall City, won his bout over Anthony Amaguer of Seminole.

The only loss was suffered by David Lopez who lost a decision to Jimmy Rascon of Seminole.

ANDREWS' JESSE Lujan knocked out Jay Gonzales of Big Spring with 45 seconds left in the third round in a Regular High School Division fight Saturday afternoon.

Steinbrenner will meet Jackson soon

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — New York Yankee owner George Steinbrenner said Saturday he would meet soon with slugger Reggie Jackson to discuss a new contract.

Jackson is entering the final year of a five-year, $2.9 free agent agreement signed in 1976 and would be free to leave the Yankees in next November's re-entry draft, if he does not sign a new contract.

"We have scheduled a meeting in about a week," Steinbrenner said. "There was no real problem about the meeting. We simply couldn't get together. But we both thought it would be better a little later."

Jackson has said he would like to reach terms before the start of the season. "I don't think he has any plans of trying to sign me," he said earlier this week. "I think he's gonna let me go into the season without a contract and put the pressure on me and challenge me to have a great year."

"That sounds like a man reassuring himself but that's Reggie," the owner said. "I've learned to live with that sort of thing. It in no way alters my feelings for Reggie as a player or a friend. We will make our best effort to keep Reggie a Yankee. We have every intention of trying to sign him. I think he knows also that value to him of being a Yankee as a player and for his outside interests."

The contract bonanza which free agent Dave Winfield won from Steinbrenner has fueled speculation over what Jackson might bring on the free agent market. "Once the season starts, I'm six months away from the Brinks job," Jackson said. "Please go past 'Go' and collect nine million bucks from somebody."

"Every day it gets closer to spring training, the closer I get to playing free agent. Then once the season starts, I'm six months away from the Brinks Job. Arkansas rips Houston, 70-55

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Scott Hastings and Keith Peterson combined for 49 points and Arkansas held Rob Williams to one second-half field goal as the Razorbacks moved into a tie for the Southwest Conference lead with a 70-55 victory over Houston Saturday.

Hastings contributed 25 points, hitting eight of his 15 field goal attempts and nine of his 11 free throws. The 6-foot-10-inch center hit 5-7 from the floor in the second half and led all rebounders with nine.

Peterson, who was averaging just 7.7 points per game but had scored 16 in the Razorbacks' three-point loss at Houston, scored a career-high 24 points. He hit 9-11 from the floor.

After Arkansas serged from a 19-13 deficit to a 35-30 intermission lead, it was a dogfight until Houston suddenly went to its delay game while behind by three. Arkansas had exploded with seven straight points to grab a 42-36 advantage when the Cougars regained the momentum all at once.

Williams was fouled by Hastings and Arkansas' Mike Young was hit with a technical when he argued the call. Williams made three free throws to carve the Razorback advantage to 42-39 with 13:10 remaining.

Then, Houston went into its four corner offense and held the ball nearly five minutes before Lynden Rose missed a corner jumper. The Razorbacks rebounded and scored the next nine points to make it 51-39 with 6:05 remaining. Houston never got closer than 10 again.

Williams, who finished with 20 points, was deadly in the first half, hitting his first three shots en route to 15 first half points.

However, with Arkansas switching between a zone and man-to-man defense, Williams was just 1-7 from the floor in the final 20 minutes.

Shooting 61 percent from the floor during the second half, Arkansas finished with 60 percent accuracy from the floor. The Razorbacks hit 24 of their 40 field goal attempts. Meanwhile, Houston was just 23 of 51 from the field for 45 percent.

A standing room only crowd of 9,300 watched the Cougars serge to a 19-13 lead behind Williams and David Buncey. Buncey hit two rebound shots and Williams scored from underneath to put Houston on top.

Arkansas' victory left the Razorbacks and Cougars even atop the league standings with 9-3 marks. Both have four league games remaining. It was the seventh consecutive triumph for the Razorbacks, who are 18-6 overall. Houston fell to 18-5.

Texas Tech posts win

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Texas Tech moved into a tie for third place with Baylor in the Southwest Conference basketball race by beating the Bears 56-53 Saturday night behind the late clutch free throws of Bubba Jennings and Nelson Franse.

Each team now has a 7-6 record in the league, while Tech moved to 13-10 for the year and Baylor dropped to 12-11.

Jennings and Baylor's Terry Teagle tied for scoring honors, each with 16, while Clarence Swannegan added 14 for Tech.

Tech built a 32-27 halftime lead and then fought off a desperate second-half attack by Baylor to stay in front most of the time by 1 to 3 points.

Jennings countered with a 20-foot jumper with 71 seconds left, and Tech never relinquished the lead again.

The last 60 seconds were a battle of wits, as Baylor, which had only two fouls to this point, fouled three times in succession as the clock ran down to 18 seconds. With 12 seconds remaining, Mike Battle fouled Franse, who sank both free throws for a 54-51 Tech lead.

When play resumed, Bear freshman Ronnie Blake tackled Jennings, and the Tech freshman made both of his shots for the final advantage.

Both teams played tight defenses with Tech in a man-to-man throughout and Baylor switching from a man to a zone a little over nine minutes deep in the first half. As a result, neither eam scored wll, although Baylor hit 53.7 percent of its shots and Tech 47.9 percent of its efforts.

Aggies topple Owls, 71-56

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas A&M's Vernon Smith nullified the second-half shooting of Rice's Ricky Pierce Saturday night as the Aggies defeated the Owls 71-56 to win their fourth straight Southwest Conference Basketball game.

The Aggies, 12-9 for the season, boosted their SWC record to 5-7 while the Owls dropped to 11-11 and 6-6 standards.

A&M hit 52 percent from the field and threw up a strong man-to-man defense that netted them a 30-23 halftime lead.

Pierce, who scored 17 of his game-high 26 points in the second half, hit 14 of Rice's first 18 points to start the second half and the Owls pulled to within a one-point 40-39 deficit with 13:27 to play.

But Smith, held to six points in the first half, also broke loose, finishing with 24 points and seven rebounds.

Bobby Tudor was the only other Owl player in double figures with 12 points.

A&M coach Shelby Metcalf said he was pleased both with the team performance and with Smith.

"If we had played this way all year, we wouldn't have the kind of record we do now," Metcalf said. "We still need to have more success, but we're getting more confidence all along."

Smith hit 11 of 17 shots from the field and has started to take a leadership stance.

"Tonight, he was the one that was doing the talking before the game," Metcalf said. "Vernon is playing more mature. He has thrown himself into a leadership role."

Rice coach Mike Schuler was equally pleased with Pierce's performance.

"He played a great game for us and showed why he is one of the finest players around," Schuler said. "We got beat by a very, very good basketball team. Give a lot of credit to A&M."

Howard was 9 of 11 from the field and 6 of 6 from the free throw stripe for 24 points.

Angelo State was led by Tommie Tyler's 21 points and Jeff Burdick's 20.

District 5-5A girls playoff set

Lee, Central to meet in Big Spring Thursday night

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

Although the last shot in the District 5-5A girls basketball race hasn't been fired, the Midland Lee Rebels and the San Angelo Bobcats have already made plans for a district playoff game if necessary, according to Gil Bartosh, Midland athletic director.

The district playoff battle, if needed, will be held Thursday at 7 p.m. at the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum in Big Spring. Tickets for the game will be $2 for adults and $1 for students. There will be no pre-sale of tickets.

San Angelo won the first half race with a perfect 7-0 record, but Lee leads the second half round with a 6-0 mark with only Big Spring left to play Monday. Big Spring has not won a district game this year. In District 5-5A the first half champion must meet the second half champion to determine which team goes to the state-wide playoffs.

San Angelo meets Midland High's girls at 8 p.m. Monday while the Lee-Big Spring tilt in Big Spring is set for 7 p.m. If Lee wins, the district playoff will be held Thursday. If Lee loses and San Angelo wins, no playoff would be necessary because San Angelo would win the title outright by virtue of its unbeaten record in the first half. If both lose, there will still be a playoff game Thursday.

Lee carries a 19-10 record into the Monday game with Big Spring while San Angelo is 25-2 on the year heading into the game with Midland High Monday, one of the losses coming against Lee in the second half.

If there is a playoff Thursday, the winner will advance to the state bi-district playoffs next week at sites still to be determined. The four bi-district winners in this region will hold a regional tournament in Midland at Chaparral Center, Feb. 27-28. The winner there will earn a state tournament berth.

The District 5-5A playoff representative, either Lee or San Angelo, will meet Lewisville in the bi-district round. Lewisville, who won District 6-5A last year, has already won its championship. Lewisville defeated Lee in bi-district last year.

Lee has been in the bi-district playoffs for three years in a row under coach Shirley Stephenson, but the Rebels did have to beat Midland High in a district playoff two years ago to go to the playoffs.

"If Lee wins Monday, the coaches will have to meet again to decide on who will be the home team and the officials they want to use," Bartosh said. "But we have met with San Angelo and have decided on Big Spring as the netural site of the playoff game if one is needed."

Stephenson said, "We might could meet after the Midland High-San Angelo game if I get back from Big Spring in time. Our game is an hour earlier. If we lose to Big Spring, however, I might just keep on heading east."

Lobos manhandle hapless CSU

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — Kenny Page poured in 24 points to lead New Mexico to an easy 68-51 Western Athletic Conference basketball triumph over hapless Colorado State Saturday night.

New Mexico broke away to a 9-2 lead and never trailed, leading by as many as 22 points in the second half.

Center Jerome Henderson added 17 points and forward Tony Persley chipped in 15.

Colorado State, which had trouble against New Mexico's tough man-to-man defense, was led by junior guard Kevin Bromley with 10 points. Two other Ram guards, Eddie Hughes and Ray Holmes, added eight points each.

The victory gave New Mexico's Lobos a 5-6 record in the WAC and a 10-10 mark overall. Colorado State, under first-year Coach Tony McAndrews, now is 1-11 in the conference and 3-19 overall.

The closest the Rams came to taking the lead was a 13-12 deficit midway through the first half. But Persley scored five straight points and New Mexico built up the advantage to 40-29 at halftime.

TCU knocks off Southern Methodist

DALLAS (AP) — Darrell Browder scored 16 points, got three steals and led the Texas Christian slowdown game as the Horned Frogs beat Southern Methodist in Southwest Conference basketball action 52-44 Saturday night.

It marked the first time since 1955 that the Horned Frogs had swept both regular-season conference games from the Mustangs.

Deckery Johnson added 13 points for the Frogs, who raised their season mark to 8-15 and their SWC record to 5-8. The up-and-down Mustangs fell to 7-16 and 3-10.

SMU led 24-23 at the half but patience and the four-corner offense let the Horned Frogs gradually pull away through the second period.

"We got the lead at the end and went into the four corners," said TCU coach Jim Killingsworth, summing up the game. "Being able to take the lead just made a big difference. It just came down to who had the ball at the right time at the end."

SMU coach Dave Bliss admitted his Mustangs made mistakes and held out no hope that things would improve before the end of the season.

"We just didn't make the plays we had to make when we needed them," he said. "But they (Frogs) have the experience and we don't. That's just something we're gonna have to continue to go through, though.

"Our basketball team just can't score from the inside. Bless their hearts, they're trying, but we just can't seem to get the job done. It's just a difficult period for our basketball team."

Germain captures LPGA lead by two

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Defending champion Dot Germain fired a 2-under-par 70 Saturday and took a 2-stroke lead after the second round of the $100,000 S&H Golf Classic.

Germain started the day 3 strokes behind first-round leader JoAnne Carner, who shot a 69 over the 6,214-yard, par-72 Pasadena Golf Club course Friday but stumbled to 2-over-par 74 Saturday.

Germain's 36-hole total was 141.

The final round of the 54-hole Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament was set for today with the winner receiving $15,000.

Play was again hampered by strong, gusting winds which forced the golfers to alter their swings to compensate. On Friday, 20 players recorded rounds of 80 or worse. The winds weren't quite as bad Saturday, but 13 players still struggled at 80 or above.

Carner led throughout the front nine Saturday before suffering a wind-blown triple-bogey 7 on the 10th hole. Germain birdied the hole and move into command.

With a Houston Cougar trying vainly to head him off at the pass during the 1980 Cotton Bowl game, Miller takes off with a pass for big yardage. Houston won that partucular game in Dallas, 17-14, by coming from behind for the win.

...but as a Falcon, the 6-5 tight end has grown a full bush.

Junior Miller returns home

Junior Miller the pro-football-star-returned-home was autographing pictures for an unending line of fans at the Chaparral Center Thursday night and not far away the smile on the woman watching was so full of pride that it was a dead giveaway.

Mrs. Irene Miller Mitchell's strapping son had stopped off in Midland on the way back from the Pro Bowl in Hawaii to visit, but, more important, to make good on a long ago promise.

"When he was seven or eight, he told me was going to buy me a house someday."remembered Mrs. Mitchell, "And tomorrow we are going to pick one out."

If it sounds like something most people might do when they think about a new car, suit or dress, it's just an indication of how rewarding football has been to the only two-sport all-stater ever produced in Midland.

IN HIGH school, Junior was a standout in basketball and football at Midland Lee and later was an All-America at Nebraska before the Atlanta Falcons drafted him in the first round last spring.

He enjoyed an outstanding rookie season, one in which he helped the Falcons dethrone the defending NFC West champion and Super Bowl finalist Los Angeles Rams. The Cinderella Falcons came within seconds of upsetting Dallas in the playoffs and perhaps a Super Bowl spot.

It was a year in which the 6-5, 235-pound tight end caught 45 passes, eight for touchdowns, and was named to the Pro Bowl and his annual trip to Hawaii. He played there the year before in the Hula Bowl.

His post season credits included selection on the Football Digest magazine all-rookie team.

BUT IT was a season that started out in turmoil and sadness. First, his wife Carolyn lost her baby and his contract negotiations with the Falcons dragged on. As a result, Miller reported a week late to camp.

"I didn't start any of the exhibitions and it was the second game of the season against New England before I started," Junior recalled, "But I was so pysched up that I played what I felt was my best game of the season."

All he did was catch eight passes for 117 yards and two touchdowns in leading the Falcons to a 37-21 win.

But for all of his success, the amiable young giant isn't living only for today. In a time when so many pro athletes act like there is no tomorrow and then wonder where all the big bucks went when their careers are over, Junior is the exception one wishes could be the rule.

"WE JUST moved into a new home in Lincoln, (Neb.) and when I leave here I'll be going back to school," Junior informs. "I figure it will take me two more years to get my degree. That's something the University of Nebraska emphasized, the degree. I figure I'll play maybe seven years and then I'll have to have something else after my playing days are over."

Junior admits, "When I first went to Nebraska, I had my troubles because I had poor study habits. I started out in automotive mechanics, then changed to coaching before I got into business, where I will get my degree."

HE'S NOT the same shy, uncertain Junior Miller who left Midland to go to college. Folks who remember Junior back when are impressed by his poise and self assurance.

"I'm very proud of him," says his mother, who raised a family of seven on her own, "And his success has really made me happy.

"He was always a sweet child," she said recalling the the endless hours as a youngster when Junior would be out in the neighborhood, in the cutoff pants, playing basketball. "He never gave me any trouble and never got in fights," to which the neighbors with kids must have muttered a thankful "Amen."

IT WAS in his senior year at Nebraska that the agents began contacting Miller, wanting to handle his finances. After all, it was obvious he would be a first-round draft pick, which meant his bargaining power would be awesome. He requested that they wait until after the season so that he could concentrate on playing football. Most weren't to be put off that easily. Larry Muno was one of the patient ones and wound up as Junior's agent.

Virginia shows deadly outside shooting in win

"A game like this has to help his confidence," Holland said of Robinson, who finished with eight points and a career-high 11 rebounds despite seeing limited action in the last 10 minutes.

Lamp, pushing his career total to 2,113, finished with 19 points and Raker had 16. Virginia ran its overall record to 22-0, its ACC mark to 11-0 and stretched the nation's longest Division I winning streak to 27.

In the first half, when Virginia built a 39-30 lead, Lamp had 11 points and Raker 10, and they were eight of 13 from the floor.

"I thought we did a good job on defense for most of the game," said Holland. Clemson, which had averaged 62.5 percent accuracy in its last four games, hit only 25 of 63 shots for 39.7 percent to 55.1 percent, 27 of 49, for the Cavaliers.

Holland said, "We were very concerned about controlling the boards. They're big up front and go to the boards very well, but we did a pretty good job ..." Virginia had a 37-27 rebound margin.

"They are an awfully good basketball team. They do a lot of things very well. We did a lot of things well in the first half in nullifying Sampson, but Raker and Lamp hit the jumpers," said Clemson Coach Bill Foster.

Michigan State upsets Michigan

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Kevin Smith collected 28 points and led Michigan State to a 70-66 Big Ten basketball victory over 13th-ranked Michigan Saturday.

Smith hit 10 of 14 from the field and was eight of 10 from the free throw line.

Jay Vincent, the Spartans' big power forward, added 18 points before fouling out with 4:23 remaining. The Spartans also played most of the second half without senior Mike Brkovich, who suffered an ankle injury at the end of the first half.

Mike McGee led the Wolverines with 23 points while Johnny Johnson added 14 for the Wolverines, who suffered their second defeat in three days.

Michigan jumped out to a 9-4 lead early in the game and both teams exchanged baskets until midway in the first half when the Spartans outscored Michigan 8-0 in a two-minute span to take an 18-15 lead. Smith connected for six points in the last 2½ minutes to give the Spartans a 35-30 halftime lead.

The Spartans shot 67 percent from the field in the second half. They led by as many as 12 points, using a zone defense that effectively kept Michigan out of the middle.

With Vincent out of the game, Michigan outscored the Spartans 8-2 in the last two minutes of play but was unable to overcome the deficit.

The Spartans improved their Big Ten record to 4-8 and 10-11 overall. The Wolverines fell to 7-5 and 16-5.

Ashburn feels voting needs revision

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Richie Ashburn, a lifetime .308 hitting outfielder who plied his trade in the National League for 18 years, suggests that the voting system for baseball's Hall of Fame needs revision.

Ashburn, who played mostly with the Philadelphia Phillies and spent some time with the Chicago Cubs and New York Mets, received 142 votes in the last balloting in which 301 votes were required for election.

Now a member of the Phillies' radio and television team, the former center fielder says he doesn't feel strongly about the Hall of Fame subject.

"Of course, I'd be a liar if I said I wasn't disappointed in not getting into the Hall of Fame," he said. "But I honestly don't think of it that much. I guess I really never thought I would get in."

Ashburn, who played on the Phillies' 1950 National League championship team, has Hall credentials.

In addition to his .308 average, he led the league in hits, walks, triples and stolen bases several times, and still has more putouts than any outfielder in history.

Ashburn contends there is no pattern to the present system of voting for the Hall by members of the Baseball Writers Association of America. He recalls getting six votes the first year he was eligible for election, then polling as many as 180 one year.

"I can't figure out the year-to-year change," he said. "Why 180 one year, then less the next, etc. You're the same guy with the same credentials."

"I guess the only objection I've ever had is that people from another profession sit in judgment of my career," Ashburn said.

"If the ballplayers voted, I think I'd feel better about it. Most of the writers who were around when I played aren't writing any more (or voting). Most of the guys voting today never saw me play."

Ashburn said that ideally the players should vote, suggesting a committee from each generation.

"The second best choice would be the writers," he said.

Ashburn said players such as former infielder Nellie Fox, outfielder Vada Pinson, shortstop Pee Wee Reese, and pitcher Jim Bunning, are getting a raw deal by not making the Hall.

"Sandy Koufax dominated pitchers for six years and he was elected," Ashburn recalled.

OU stuns Missouri

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Led by senior Steve Bajema's 21 points and 14 rebounds, the Oklahoma Sooners scored a 60-55 upset victory over the Missouri Tigers Saturday.

Curtis Berry was high scorer for the Tigers with 20.

The Sooners raised their Big Eight record to 3-7, while Missouri, tied for second in the conference going into the contest, saw their mark drop to 6-4.

Oklahoma is 8-14 overall and Missouri is 17-8.

The victory marks the first time since the beginning of the season that the Sooners scored successive victories. Last Tuesday, Iowa State lost to Oklahoma. The Tiger loss Saturday was the 19th of their last 20 games in Norman.

Tied at 26 at the half, Missouri took charge and outscored Oklahoma 12-6 to take a 38-32 lead.

Clutch foul shooting in the waning moments by Oklahoma kept the Sooners on top.

Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs said, "I thought we did a great job of free-throw shooting down the stretch. This is one of the best free-throw shooting teams I have ever been around."

Iowa in 82-64 romp

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Steve Krafcisin and Bob Hansen scored 14 points apiece as No.14 Iowa romped to an 82-64 victory over Northwestern in Big Ten basketball Saturday.

Iowa took control early, outscoring the Wildcats 14-4 in the first 10 minutes. The Hawkeyes coasted to a 38-25 halftime edge helped by Krafcisin's 12 points.

Kenny Arnold of the Hawkeyes exploded with three quick baskets in the first two minutes of the second half and Iowa never led by less than 15 after that as Coach Lute Olson emptied the bench.

Arnold finished with 13 for Iowa, 16-4 overall and 8-3 in the league, which maintained the Big Ten lead.

Northwestern, 7-14 and 1-11, was paced by Rod Roberson's 21 points. Jim Stack and Paul Schultz had 11 each for the Wildcats, who shot 41 percent from the field and were outrebounded 42-33. Iowa shot 54 percent.

Banks always sucker for hooks

Los Angeles Times

A lot of people were surprised when a prestigious national bank apparently got mixed up in boxing's eerie business.

They needn't have been. Banks, like British heavyweights, have always been suckers for left hooks and head feints ever since pugilism began.

You are all familiar with the fact that Wells Fargo is suing Muhammad Ali Professional Sports fight promoter Harold J. Smith for $21 million. The money is missing. So is Harold. So is Lloyd B. Lewis, a former official at Wells Fargo.

Harold was a promoter in the grand style. He had a Lear jet, a $50,000 custom Cadillac with TV set and bar, a Mercedes, a $100,000 powerboat and, believe it or not, a racehorse who may be a threat to this year's Kentucky Derby. Johnlee n' Harold is a Derby colt at Santa Anita.

HIS FIGHT cards were as extravagant as he was. He put title fights and top challenger fights on in multiples of three, usually featuring guys named Muhammad (Mustafa or Saad) against European stiffs. He paid a half-million to two main-eventers once where 2,197, aparently friends of the family, showed up. Mustafa Muhammad got $300,000 to defend whatever title it is he has against the greatest fighter ounce-for-ounce in Belgium (or is it Holland?), Rudi Koopmans. Several people attended.

Harold said he got his money from "wealthy friends." Which he may have. But the bank suggests maybe those wealthy friends didn't know about it.

He had an $8.1 million card on the drawing boards when the bank started to miss the money last week. Gerry Cooney was going to fight Ken Norton for a few million, the two Muhammads were going to decide which was the better, provided the public could tell them apart, Thomas Hearns was going to fight Wilfred Benitez and there was to be a "superbantamweight" title fight, whatever that is, and a WBA lightweight title fight. A regular banana split of a card. Everything but ketchup. Over a million dollars has already been paid out for "training expenses."

HOWEVER, YOU may not know this is not the first time a bank has found itself an unwitting partner in a fight promotion. The classic case of this sort was put together by my late friend, Jack "Doc" Kearns, in 1923 when the residents of an oil-strike boomtown decided to stage a heavyweight championship fight between Kearns' fighter, Jack Dempsey, and a St. Paul lightheavyweight, Tommy Gibbons, in, of all places, Shelby, Montana.

The town had to put up a 40,000 board arena (for a population of less than a thousand) and had to guarantee Doc Kearns and Dempsey $300,000, deliverable in three installments, the first on signing the fight (scheduled for July 4, 1923), the second on June 15, that year, and the third two days before the fight.

The first hundred grand was easy. The second found the town a little short -- $98,000 short, to be exact.

AS CHRONICLED by the late John Lardner, the town banker, George Stanton, stepped in and took over.

Stanton, head of the Stanton Trust & Savings Bank, enlisted the aid of the Great Falls National Bank, and ponied up the money, largely secured by land and oil leases owned by the mayor of Shelby who had his own bank.

The third $100,000 was never forthcoming. The fight was almost as big a disaster as Muhammad-Koopman's. When Banker Stanton told Kearns there was no third $100,000, the good doctor took over the promotion. And receipts. He would have preferred to pull out, as he was entitled to, but the town was full of mutinous desperados wearing pearl-handle revolvers and carrying whiskey bottles. Doc took over the counting house, and totaled up about 80 grand in silver and bills which he put in a bag before grabbing the first freight out of town.

GIBBONS, WHO was to get 50 percent of all proceeds over $300,000, got a handshake, and a set of black eyes. The Stanton Trust & Savings Bank went belly-up five days after the fight, followed shortly by the First State Bank of Shelby, and, a day later, by the First State Bank of Joplin, Montana, and, on Aug. 16, by the demise of the First National Bank of Shelby. The withdrawals to pay Kearns had crippled all four banks. Kearns knocked over more banks in a month than Bonnie & Clyde in a career. The man-who-broke-the-bank-at-Monte-Carlo was a tinhorn by comparison.

The archives of Shelby should be required reading for bank loan officers. It's well to remember Jack Dempsey was as big a name in his day as Muhammad Ali in this.

Years later, when he was an old man, Doc used to get younger remembering his great score in Shelby. "Tell us about the time you broke three banks in Montana," liseners would beg. "Four," Doc would say, holding up his fingers.

Spring training opens this week

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

With the spectre of another labor crisis peeking over the horizon, major league baseball's spring training camps open for business this week.

The Oakland A's, surprise second-place finishers in the American League West last season, are the first team in camp, with Manager Billy Martin sending his pitchers and catchers through their opening workout Sunday in Scottsdale, Ariz.

AFTER THAT, a couple of teams will drift into Florida and Arizona training camps almost daily. Cincinnati will be the last team to report on March 4. When the Reds go to work at their Tampa, Fla. base, there will be 18 teams in Florida, and seven in Arizona, with the California Angels training at Palm Springs, Calif.

The American League champions, the Kansas City Royals, are due in Fort Myers, Fla., Feb. 21, and the world champions, the Philadelphia Phillies, arrive at Clearwater, Fla. Feb. 25.

That's the same date the Major League Players Association is scheduled to meet at Tampa, Fla. and decide on a next step in the continuing debate over compensation for clubs losing free agent players in the reentry draft.

A year ago, the final week of spring training was canceled when the players called a work stoppage to protest the lack of progress in contract negotiations. The labor talks dragged on until the last week in May when management and the players' union, facing a strike deadline, finally hammered out an agreement with the help of federal mediators in a marathon negotiation session that lasted some 19 hours.

UNRESOLVED at that time was the issue of compensation — what a club losing a quality free agent player should receive in return. The two sides established a committee to study the question, but there has been little movement on the issue.

Under terms of the May 23 agreement, which averted a 1980 strike, management has the option of unilaterally putting into place its compensation proposal, a plan which the players previously rejected. That action could come any time this week. If it does, the players have until March 1 to do one of three things. They can either accept the plan (unlikely); reject it and set a strike to start prior to June 1 (more likely); or ask management to approve a waiver of their 1981 strike rights, reserving the right to strike in 1982 (also unlikely). That decision will be made at the Tampa meeting.

Marvin Miller, executive director of the players association, wants it clear that any action the players take will be in response to the owners.

"The players want nothing," he said. "We have no demands on the table and we have no right to make any demands. The gun is in their hands. It should surprise no one, however, that if they fire it at the players, the players will shoot back."

FOR HIS part, Ray Grebey, the owners' chief negotiator, seems glum.

An eternal optimist through the 1980 labor talks, Grebey said, "I never shut the door on tomorrow, but I see no progress. We were given the right to do something (implement the compensation proposal). We are entering a period in which some hard decisions must be made."

While the two sides wrestle over the last remaining contract issue, teams will start getting in shape for the 1981 season. Some 385 exhibition games are scheduled before opening day, when the Phillies play the Reds at Cincinnati.

Only one team has switched training headquarters, the Montreal Expos moving from Daytona Beach to West Palm Beach, where they join the Atlanta Braves.

Three clubs, Kansas City, Texas and San Diego, will leave the continental United States this spring. The Royals and Rangers will be in San Juan, Puerto Rico March 23-24 for games to benefit the Roberto Clemente Sports City. The Padres play in Mexico City March 10-11-12.

The New York Yankees have three games scheduled in the New Orleans Superdome March 27-28-29, against Pittsburgh, the New York Mets and Philadelphia.

Three Japanese clubs will train at major league camps. The Yakult Swallows are at San Diego's base in Yuma, Ariz., the Hanshin Tigers are sharing Seattle's facilities at Tempe, Ariz., and the Tokyo Giants will work at the Los Angeles Dodgers' camp in Vero Beach, Fla.

Bowie triggers Kentucky to win

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Sam Bowie and Dirk Minniefield combined for 37 points as No.11 Kentucky built a comfortable halftime cushion and coasted to a 77-62 Southeastern Conference basketball victory over Alabama Saturday night.

The victory boosted the Wildcats to 18-4 over-all and 11-3 in the SEC. The Crimson Tide fell to 15-7 and 7-7.

Minniefield, Bowie and Chuck Verderber opened with baskets as Kentucky grabbed a 6-2 lead and steadily swelled it through the remainder of the first half.

The first-half margin grew to 15 points when Jim Master's 22-footer capped a 7-0 Kentucky run and gave the Wildcats a 30-15 lead with 1:34 before halftime. Two Fred Cowan free throws gave Kentucky a 32-19 halftime lead.

Verderber opened the second half with a tip-in and Minniefield, who scored eight points in each half, followed with a layup that gave Kentucky a 36-19 advantage, and Alabama never challenged again.

Bowie scored 15 of his 21 points in the second half, but lost something of a scoring duel in the period with Alabama's Ken Johnson.

Johnson had just one point at halftime but pumped in 10 field goals in the second half and matched Bowie for high-scoring honors with 21 points.

Notre Dame takes win

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Orlando Woolridge scored 24 points to lead 12th-ranked Notre Dame to a 71-55 victory over North Carolina State in a college basketball game Saturday night.

N.C. State hit a five-minute dry spell early in the first half and the Irish scored 10 straight points to lead 14-4 with 11 minutes left. The Wolfpack managed to cut that lead to four at one point in the period, but the Irish extended the lead to 11 as they went into the locker room.

In the second half, the Wolfpack could never get closer than 7 and the Irish gradually expanded their lead as N.C. State was forced to foul in the closing minutes in an effort to get back in the game.

Notre Dame hit an amazing 80 percent from the field in the second half and finished the game with a 65 percent mark. N.C. State hit 54 percent of its shots.

Tracy Jackson had 16 points and Kelly Tripucka 15 for Notre Dame, now 18-4.

The Wolfpack, now 12-11, was led by forward Thurl Bailey with 17 points, 13 in the second half. Also in double figures for the Wolfpack were Scott Parzych with 14 and Dereck Whittenburg with 10.

UCLA downs Arizona State

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sophomore center Cliff Pruitt's 15 points, including three free throws in the last 66 seconds, brought eighth-ranked UCLA a 64-61 victory over No.5 Arizona State in Pacific 10 Conference basketball Saturday.

The Sun Devils, losing for only the second time in conference play, outscored UCLA 19-8 in the final 7:11 of the game to close within 2 points.

Forward Darren Daye, who had 7 points for UCLA, missed two free throws with 13 seconds remaining and the Bruins leading 63-61. But ASU was unable to get off a shot when they brought the ball down the floor, and Pruitt was fouled as he collared a loose ball.

Pruitt then added a free throw with one second left to complete the scoring.

Arizona State center Alton Lister committed three quick fouls in the first six minutes of the second half, and scored only seven of his 21 points in the second half as he led all scorers.

With the 7-foot Lister out of the game, the Bruins outscored Arizona State 15-2 to take a 56-42 lead. But the Sun Devils made up most of the deficit as their defense, led by ball-hawking play from Johnny Nash and Byron Scott, did not allow UCLA a field goal in the last 8:56.

The Bruins improved their record to 16-4 overall and 9-3 in the Conference. The Sun Devils are 19-3 in all games and hold second place in the Pac 10 at 10-2. Unbeaten and second-ranked Oregon State leads the conference with a 12-0 record.

Pruitt was followed in UCLA scoring by Mike Sanders with 12 points, Rod Foster with 10 and Michael Holton and Tony Anderson with 8 each.

Anthony wins PBA title despite injury

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Despite a pulled muscle in his lower left back, Earl Anthony moved from third place to his 33rd career Professional Bowlers Association title Saturday by defeating top-seeded Tom Baker 218-202 in the $110,000 Rolaids Open.

Anthony of Dublin Calif., rolled 699 for three matches, although he was forced to change his hand release after injuring his back on the second shot of the finals.

"I couldn't get down as far at the foul line after that happened so I opened up my hand to get the ball down the lane farther before it hooked," said the 42-year-old lefthander.

"As it turned out, the injury might have helped."

Anthony first defeated Paul Moser of Somerset, Mass., 254-227 and Mark Roth, of Spring Lake Heights N.J., 227-182 to earn the right to face Baker. The win was worth $16,000.

In the championship match, both Anthony and Baker of Buffalo, N.Y., traded spares and strikes and stood even after six frames. Baker managed a double to take a brief lead until Anthony connected for strikes in the eighth, ninth and 10th frames.

With the win, Anthony the PBA's all-time career money leader, boosted his lifetime earnings to $814,071 and his total for the year to $32,750.

Baker, looking for his second career PBA title, earned $9,000 for second. Roth, among the top five for the fifth time this year, collected $6,000 for third while Moser made $5,000 for fourth and Laskow earned $4,500 for fifth.

"I'd like to become the first bowler to make over $1 million on the PBA tour," said Anthony. "With Mark (Roth) coming on so strong I know that he'll beat me to it if I don't stay active. I'm planning to bowl all of this winter's tournaments except one."

Indiana downs scrappy Badgers

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Indiana, paced by Randy Wittman's 15 points, fought off scrappy Wisconsin Saturday for a 59-52 Big Ten basketball victory.

Wittman scored 9 of his points in the second half for the 20th-ranked Hoosiers, now 16-8 over-all and tied with Iowa for the Big Ten lead at 9-3.

The defeat was the sixth in a row for the Badgers, now 2-10 in the Big Ten and 8-12 overall.

Still, the Badgers were in the game until the final minute, pulling to within 55-52 on a 18-foot corner shot by Greg Dandridge with 45 seconds to go.

Indiana led 33-28 at halftime and opened 7-point margins before Wisconsin whittled away and pulled to within 45-44 on a three-point play by Claude Gregory with 8:17 left.

Frank Kush is charged with abuse

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Former Arizona State football Coach Frank Kush used verbal and physical tactics to rid his team of unwanted players, documents filed with the Arizona Supreme Court have alleged.

Kush is being sued by one of his ex-players — punter-defensive back Kevin Rutledge — who claims Kush punched him after a bad punt during a 1978 game. Rutledge also contends that Kush and former Arizona State assistant coach Bill Maskill harassed him into quitting the team in 1979 and forfeiting his scholarship.

The documents allege that at least 13 ex-Sun Devil football players were forced off the team in past years because of methodical harassment and brutality by Kush.

Rutledge's attorney, Robert Hing, filed a special action with the high court Friday charging Kush earned $163,000 in 1979-80 but hasn't filed income tax returns for those years.

Hing's motion includes statements made behind closed doors under oath by former assistant coach Bob Owens. His testimony was given last week in the chambers of Maricopa County Superior Court Judge Thomas Kleinschmidt.

Rutledge has filed a $2.2 million suit against Kush, Maskill, the university and others.

During the three-week trial, Rutledge's attorneys have tried to introduce evidence of past brutal acts Kush allegedly committed against other players. Kleinschmidt has refused to permit the evidence.

Kush's attorney, Warren Platt, asked the Supreme Court Friday to dismiss the case on grounds Kush's coaching methods were justifiable. He also has asked to have allegations of brutal acts against other players barred from the trial.

The trial is scheduled to resume Tuesday, but Hing has asked for a delay until the Supreme Court rules on his motion. A Feb. 24 hearing has been scheduled.

Owens said in Hing's motion that Kush tried to rid the team of players he didn't want.

"A player (who) either physically wasn't capable of performing the task that we asked, or would continue to make mental mistakes ... would be subjected to verbal abuse, and in some instances physical abuse," said Owens.

He also said Kush "would kick the player on the ankles or on the hand, and on occasion in the butt." Other acts included "grabbing of the face mask or striking the player on the head."

"I've seen him use pie irrigation pipe, board, rope, pieces of wood," Owens said.

Johnson's 26 triggers OSU to triumph

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Steve Johnson, despite playing in foul trouble throughout, scored 26 points and almost singlehandedly gave second-ranked Oregon State a 57-45 college basketball victory Saturday over St. John's, N.Y.

Johnson sat out 10 minutes of the first half and the big Oregon State center picked up his fourth foul with less than two minutes gone in the second half. Beavers Coach Ralph Miller sat his 6-foot-10½ senior until just 8:48 remained to play, and Johnson scored Oregon State's next 15 points.

In one stretch, Johnson scored eight straight points to give the Beavers a 51-36 lead with 4:13 remaining. Less than a minute later, Johnson fouled out, but the damage already had been done.

St. John's trailed 27-19 at the half but the Redmen went ice cold after intermission, unable to score a basket until 8:35 remained. St. John's center Wayne McKoy missed at least twice from close in, but had it not been for the return of Johnson, the normally high-percentage shooting Beavers would not have taken advantage of the situation.

Oregon State saw the lead dwindle to eight, 44-36 with 5:08 to play, but Johnson hit a pair of lay-ins and capped his eight-point tear with a stuff shot and free throw.

St. John's made another run at Oregon State after Johnson fouled out, outscoring the Beavers 7-2 over a two-minute span to trail by just 10, at 53-43, with 1:32 left. But the Redmen again went cold and scored only on a pair of free throws by Kevin Williams in the final minute-and-a-half.

Mark Radford was the only other Oregon State player in double figures with 10 points. Billy Goodwin topped St. John's with 14, and McKoy had 12.

The undefeated Beavers upped their record to 21-0 on their first trip out of the west this season, while St. John's dropped to 16-6.

Buzzer shot gives LSU win

Carter, who finished with 20 points, was closely guarded by two defenders when he went up for the shot two seconds after an LSU inbounds play from the sideline.

The victory lifted LSU to 23-1 for the season and 14-0 in the SEC. It also was the Tigers' 17th straight road victory against conference foes and their 29th victory in their last 30 meetings with SEC teams.

The Tigers, who trailed by as many as 12 points during a sluggish first half, went to a delay game in the final seven minutes when the score was deadlocked at 60-60.

Ethan Martin deflected a Georgia pass to teammate Willie Sims and took the return pass for a layup that gave LSU a 62-60 lead with 4:19 remaining.

Georgia's Vern Fleming came back 25 seconds later with a short jumper off the baseline to tie it at 62.

Dominique Wilkins, who had a game-high 22 points, broke up LSU's delay with a minute remaining when he deflected a pass to teammate James Banks.

Georgia called a timeout but turned it over quickly when play resumed on a poor pass by Terry Fair.

The defeat dropped Georgia to 14-8 overall and 7-7 in the SEC.

West Virginia prevails

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Greg Jones scored a career-high 32 points as West Virginia defeated Rutgers 73-67 Saturday to avenge an earlier Eastern Eight basketball loss to the Scarlet Knights.

Jones, a sophomore guard, scored 20 of his points in the second half as West Virginia rebounded from a 35-33 deficit at intermission to win its eighth Eastern Eight decision in 10 games. The Mountaineers trail Rhode Island, which plays in Morgantown Wednesday, in the Eastern Eight race. Rhode Island is 9-2.

The victory gave the Mountaineers a 17-5 over-all mark. Rutgers dropped to 13-11 overall and 6-5 in the league.

Wake Forest topples Duke

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Frank Johnson scored all 12 of his points in the second half, including two free throws with six seconds left, as seventh-ranked Wake Forest squeezed out a 58-52 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory over Duke Saturday.

Johnson's free throws ended a string of 19 free throws attempted by the Demon Deacons in the last 10 minutes of the game. Anthony Teachey started the streak when he hit one of two free throws with 7:17 left in the game.

Wake Forest took the lead for the first time at the start of the second half, when Johnson scored on a breakaway layup for a 24-22 lead. Later in the half, a three-point play by center Jim Johnstone gave Wake Forest its biggest lead of the game, 41-34, with 11:53 left.

Duke tried for the remainder of the half to get back into the contest, getting as close as one at 51-50 on a Gene Banks follow shot. Banks was fouled on the play, but missed the free throw which could have tied the game. From there, the Wake Forest free throw barrage took its toll.

Duke broke to an early 12-4 lead before a 10-2 Wake Forest spurt tied the score at 14 with 10:45 left in the first half. The teams then traded baskets and the score was tied 22-all at intermission.

In addition to Johnson's 12 points, Johnstone scored 11, while Teachey and Guy Morgan added 10 each for the Deacons. Wake Forest improved its record overall to 20-2, 8-2 in the ACC.

Banks was the game's high scorer with 18, while Vince Taylor and Tom Emma chipped in 12 each. Duke now is 13-9 and 4-6 in the conference.

Cincinnati posts 80-79 cage win

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Cincinnati's Junior Johnson sank a pair of free throws for a three-point lead with 14 seconds remaining and the Bearcats survived a last-second scare to hold on for an 80-79 Metro Conference basketball victory over Florida State Saturday.

Johnson's free throws boosted Cincinnati into an 80-77 lead. Florida State's Bobby Parks drove the length of the court for a lay-in to close the margin to one point.

Cincinnati's Bobby Austin was fouled on the inbounds play with five seconds remaining and went to the free throw line for a one-and-one opportunity. He missed the first shot and Florida State rebounded but the Seminoles' hopes were dashed when Parks missed a desperation shot from mid-court.

The victory was the fourth straight for Cincinnati. The Bearcats are 12-10 overall in 5-4 in league play. Florida State fell to 12-9 in all games and 5-5 in the Metro.

Florida State's Mickey Dillard scored a game-high 28 points. Elvis Rolle added 16 and James Bozeman 15 for the Seminoles.

Houston Oilers name Galat defensive coach

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers head Coach Ed Biles Saturday named Joe Galat as defensive line coach for the upcoming National Football League season.

Galat becomes the fifth new coach selected by Biles, and leaves only a linebacker coach to be named.

"I've followed Joe's career and have been very impressed with the coaching jobs that he has done," Biles said. "He has always been a fundamental type coach, and after speaking with him earlier in the week, I became convinced that he would be right for our situation here.

"Aside from having a solid background in coaching, Joe is an excellent family man and I'm sure that his presence will be another positive step towards putting together the type of program we all want — a winning one."

Galat's most recent coaching assignment was with the Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League, as their defensive coordinator for the 1979 and 1980 seasons.

The defense he led finished first in the CFL in fewest net yards allowed, lowest average per reception allowed and lowest percentage of completions allowed.

Wyoming edges Miners, 63-58

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The University of Wyoming, led by Charles Bradley, took a quick lead Saturday to defeat Texas-El Paso, 63-58.

Wyoming took a commanding advantage in the first half, allowing the Miners no baskets for more than six minutes.

From 15:14 to 9:21, the Cowboys held onto a 20-4 lead that continued through most of the game.

Texas-El Paso put on a scoring drive late in the second half, and pulled to within two points with 5:15 left in the game.

Wyoming improved its season mark to 18-5 and 9-3 in Western Athletic Conference play. Texas-El Paso now is 15-7 on the year and 7-4 in conference play.

Bradley led Wyoming's scorers, sinking five of eight from the field and canning seven of 12 from the free throw line.

Also in double figures for Wyoming were Kenneth Ollie with 15 points and Mike Jackson and Chris Engler with 10 each.

For Texas-El Paso, junior forward Fred Reynolds came off the bench to score six of 11 from the field and five of eight from the line.

Old Dominion captures 72-63 win over Navy

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Billy Mann scored 20 points, topping four Old Dominion players in double figures, as the Monarchs defeated Navy 72-63 in college basketball Saturday.

Dave Brooks, Navy's only scorer in double figures, also had 20 as the Midshipmen slipped to 8-14 on the year.

Old Dominion hit on 12 of its first 14 shots from the floor while rolling up a 41-23 halftime lead, but had to rely on foul shots at the end to preserve the victory.

Old Dominion is now 16-7 on the season.

Don't take out mood on neighborhood rattler

Thirty species and subspecies of rattlesnakes are found in the United States, more than half this number in the Southwest. Because they have been killed on sight for years, their numbers have been considerably reduced in densely populated areas.

For this reason, together with the emphasis placed upon their poisonous characteristics by some writers, rattlers are considered by many people to be a serious menace.

In the hot desert regions of the Southwest, rattlesnakes are usually out only at night during the summer months, because they have no mechanism for controlling their body temperature and therefore cannot tolerate heat at ground surfaces during the sunlight hours. In spring and autumn, they may be encountered during the day, but December, January and February they are in hibernations and are rarely ever seen.

A RATTLESNAKE'S diet consists principally of lizards and small rodents such as ground squirrels, rates, mice, pocket gophers and young rabbits. Rattlers are sometimes found along irrigation ditches and stock tanks where rodents congregate.

If left alone, a rattlesnake poses little or no threat to humans. But if a rattler is surprised, cornered, teased, handled or injured, he will protect himself as will most of God's creatures.

It is a survival instinct. If the rattler is left alone, he will try to crawl away or remain hidden rather than strike. Because rattlers are attracted to places where small rodents can be found, they are sometimes encountered around barns and outbuildings. They occasionally enter abandoned structures in search of food or to escape the heat of the sun.

Because a rattler may be found at any time by a peson who lives, works or visits the desert, protective clothing should be considered essential. In hiking or climbing through country where rattlesnakes are known to be abundant, protect yourself against a possible bite. A study conducted over a two-year period reveals that 98 per cent of snake bites occurred below the knee or on the hand or forearm.

That's no surprise to most of us, but it reinforces the knowledge that when we are in snake country we should wear knee-length boots or leggings and we should not put a hand on a rock or ledge above the eye level.

THE WATCHWORD is caution. A rattlesnake may strike at a quick movement and they are very sensitive to the body warmth-blooded creature.

A few years ago an acquaintance of mine was returning from a fishing trip to Arizona's East Clear Creek when the uncertain nature of a rattler resulted in his death. The fishermen had to climb several hundred feet of nearly vertical canyon wall to reach the vehicle parked on the canyon rim.

He had all his fishing gear stowed in his light rucksac so he could use both hands in making his ascent. The survivor of the trip, his fishing buddy, said they had more than 200 feet of the hike when a rattler stuck the man in the forehead. He fell 200 feet to his death.

In snake country, it is important to take a flashlight along to use whenever there is occasion to go outside at night in the summer to be sure there are no snakes lying across you path. If you sleep outdoors, keep your bed off the ground, if possible. The widely believed myth that a rattesnake will not crawl across a hair rope is not true.

The only pupose that statement serves is to start an argument. Persons who spend much time in snake country should provide themselves with a suction type snakebite kit, and should know how to use it. Although you stand 200 chances of being killed to one of dying of snakebite, the prices of a suction-type kit is cheap insurance against that possibility.

Can Chaparrals handle first place prosperity?

Can the Midland College Chaparrals stand prosperity?

Last time the Chaps were rocking along 18-0 and No. 1 in the nation, Howard College and Frank Phillips College pinned them with successive defeats, albeit only two-pointers, but defeats none-the-less.

Heading into Monday's game with Howard College, billed as a battle for sole possession of first place, the Chaps are riding a seven-game winning streak and own first place in the Western Junior College Conference all by their lonesome, thanks to New Mexico Military Institute's shocking unfrocking of the Hawks at Roswell Thursday night.

WILL lightning strike again?

The Hawks' loss to the 3-23 Cadets took some of the heat off MC and Coach Jerry Stone's 24-2 Chaps could virtually sew up the title with a couple of road victories this week. They also could find themselves in third place with a couple of defeats on invasions of Big Spring and Borger, to play Frank Phillips, this week. Howard and FPC are tied for second at 11-3 behind the 12-2 Chaparrals.

Frank Phillips, a 99-80 winner over NMJC Thursday, plays its last three games at home while Howard has two away and two home while Midland has only Odessa College left at Chap Center in the final two weeks.

MIDLAND and Howard have met twice previously with the teams dividing, but Harold Wilder's Hawks won the one that counted. MC beat HC 95-84 in the finals of the ABC classic Jan. 9 and a week later bowed 74-72 at the Center in a WJCC contest. FPC then pinned a 69-67 loss on MC four days later.

Howard then knocked off FPC and it has been a topsy turvy race ever since with MC finally gaining sole possession of the lead Thursday night.

"Our players know what we have to do to win," says Stone. "After that first loss, when they were ranked No. 1 in the nation, they were in shock. But they are back to basics now and played extremely well, particularly during the first half against Amarillo, holding them to just 23 points.

"Our plays have plenty of respect for both Howard and Frank Phillips, both are very talented and tough to beat on their own courts. We just have to be ready to put out the effort and execute fundamentals."

Weather not angler's friend

Weather continued to play havoc with the fishing at Oak Creek Lake, prompting many to change their plans to visit the lake. The Sweetwater Bass clubs top six have been trying to conduct a fishoff for the last two months without success.

It's easy to get a little irritated when one fishing trip is scratched, but when the number reachs two are three, it becomes discouraging.

"This is when it's nice to have that big ol bass caught in the past hanging on the wall," says Ike Pate of Sportsman's Lodge. "When nasty weather keeps you in you sit and contrive how and where you can catch another just as good."

Says Pate, "If there is another lake in West Texas that offers a better opportunity than Oak Creek to do this, we don't know where it would be. Very few fish are being caught in the cold areas and it is not easy to pick the right time to fish the warm water. Your best bet will be to fish toward the end of a long spell of cold weather. The water temperature varies little during these speriods and the fishing is better."

Nelson Geron, Sweetwater, caught an eight-pound, four-ounce bass, the year's best replacing a 7-13 by Midland's Lynn Bass back on Jan. 2. Geron's second fish wasn't bad either, going 6-6.

The crappie were the only fish that loomed as a questionmark, but it has been as good as bass. One angler recently caught five averaging 1 1/2 pounds.

Channel cat and blue cat are growing now that they have water and food. They should average 1 1/2 or better.

Lake condition: Water, clear. Temperature at one foot, 45 degrees. Elevation: Up but has a reached a stable condition.

Future fishing in Texas? There's some good news coming our way and for generations to come, but also some bad news. Especially for those who enjoy catching white or sand bass.

This was the news passed along to the Texas Outdoor Writers Association at their annual meeting in Austin two weeks ago. And spitting out the fishy information was Don Kemp, Director of the Fisheries Division of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

"We are beginning to see a problem within the white or sand bass population in lakes where heavy striped bass population occur. Both species primarily forage basically the same way, inhabit th same type of water and use the same spawning grounds," Kemp said. "So in lakes like Texoma and Whitney, we are discovering that the sandies are losing the battle to their larger cousins, the stripers. It's a shame for those anglers who enjoy catching tubfuls of white bass, that there's no way the sandie can compete with the larger introduced saltwater stripers."

THIS IS Kemp's personal observation only and he says a few of his biologist disagree. "We'll just have to wait and see what happens."

Although the stripers have grown to enormous sizes in Texas reservoirs and have been confirmed to spawning in freshwater rivers, Kemp does not feel that their existence in Texas freshwater lakes will have any major impact on other game fish populations.

"I believe the stripers will not affect fish species such as catfish, largemount and smallmouth bass and crappies," Kemp said. "We have had no indication by our crews that either speices have been affected."

IN THE meantime, striper fishermen are doing well and Kemp thinks many anglers believe the "striper for sandbass tradeoff" is a good one.

"We don't know how big the striper will eventually get in Texas," Kemp said. "That 33-pounder at Toledo Bend is official and our people there tell us they have seen larger fish than that from the dam, 40 pounds or more. It's just that none of these bigger fish have been caught yet."

The best news coming from Kemp's report was the fact he's overly optimistic that Texas has the potential of growing a new world record largemouth bass.

One year ago at our annual TOWA meeting Kemp predicted that a new state record largemouth would come from Texas waters in 1980. His prediction came true only a few days after his prediction. On Feb. 2, 1980, the new record largemouth bass was caught from Lake Monticello. It shadowed a record that had stood for 37 years.

AND JUST a few weeks before this last meeting, a bass from Echo Lake established yet another state record. The fish weighed 14 pounds, 3½ ounces. But Kemp, in no way, feels the current record fish will stand very long.

It's the Florida-strain largemouth that's taking all the credit. Since their stockings in various Texas lakes and reservoirs in the early 70's, these fish have displayed tremendous growth rates and who knows, someday the new world record largemouth could be taken from Texas waters.

Other good news coming from Kemp's statement was information on smallmouth bas in Texas.

"It seems the smallmouth bass could become on of the "backbones" of Texas freshwater fisheries, especially those lakes and streams with rocky habitat," Kemp said." Kemp said.

Encouraged by the hold the fish has taken and the new state record of five pounds, 13 ounces taken from Town Lake at Austin, the department will expand its stockings of the scrappy little smallmouth.

AS FOR other exotic stockings, two fish species the department has been working with over the past few years, the Peacock Bass and the Nile Perch, will be discontinued.

"These fish just don't have the tolerance necessary even for the warm water power plant lakes in Texas," Kemp explained.

The stand of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, as voiced so clearly by Kemp, has not changed concerning the future of sports fishing on the Gulf Coast.

Farmers delaying planting

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — The coldest weather of the season caught some farmers in South Texas and the Coastal Bend poised to start planting corn and sorghum, but now cold soil temperatures will force them to hold off for a while, says Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

The cold also meant a sharp increase in livestock feeding, causing ranchers to add to already mounting feed bills in the wake of a depressed cattle market, Pfannstiel said. Hay supplies are short in many areas due to last year's drought, and the price of hay is extremely high. He noted that feedlot cattle are now going to market at considerable losses to owners.

This week's cold wave will keep the growth of wheat and other small grains at a standstill and further restrict livestock grazing, Pfannstiel said. Small grains had been providing good grazing up to this point due to mild weather, hampered only by lack of moisture in some areas. Recent rains across parts of West, South, Central and coastal sections have helped the moisture situation, but most of the northern half of the state remains dry.

Some cotton remains to be harvested in Far West Texas and citrus, sugarcane and winter vegetables remain to be harvested in the Rio Grande Valley. Some vegetable harvesting also continues in the Winter Garden of Southwest Texas, Pfannstiel said.

Trinity Towers Auxiliary creates warmth, friendship

While outside it may be cold and dreary, inside Trinity Towers the atmosphere is a warm and friendly one.

And the Trinity Towers Auxiliary is a big reason for that congenial air.

Organized in 1971 with 17 members, the 1981 auxiliary has 108 active members and 17 contributing members. The auxiliary conducts various activies at Trinity Towers, which is a retirement home in Midland.

Volunteers provide many services to the 170 residents of Trinity Towers. On weekly schedules, volunteers take residents shopping, conduct exercise classes, teach ceramics, provide transportation for night events such as symphonies and the theater, play games, host a weekly social hour and have vespers every Sunday.

A "listening hour" is held monthly with speakers brought in to discuss current events or interesting subjects. Other monthly projects include a birthday party for the month's birthday "people" with dinner and a program; mending day is also monthly and communion is given during the vespers services on a regular basis.

Volunteers also take a juice cart around to the health care patients on the second and third floors daily. New residents are also visited by the volunteers so they can learn about the services the auxiliary provides.

Helen Reid is director of Trinity Towers Auxiliary. Assistant director is Martha Radford, treasurer, Mildred Brown; recording secretary, Lois Heath and corresponding secretary, Clarice Hollingsworth.

Committee chairmen include Jean Godwin, Bible study; Anna McMann and Byrta Eastham, birthday party; Lydia Wilkinson, contact; Lola Kerr, counter; Pauline Anderson and Paola Brenneman, game day; Vaughn Maley and Howard Redding, library books and Helen Harrison and Helen Reid, listening hour.

Also Helen Cuppy, membership records; Lila Seiler and Ruby Saver, mending day; Charlotte Cooper and Jo McGill, physical fitness; Helen Reid, publicity; Evelyn Heard, refreshment cart and Thelma Echols, resident birthday cards.

Also, Helen Luff, decorations; Byrta Eastham, social hour; Barbara Larsen, shopping; Wilma Maley and Euradine Waugh, night transportation; Ann Anthony, vesper hour and Esther Denton, visitation.

Byrta Eastham pours wine at a weekly party held for residents, while Thelma Echols and Hooper Sanders enjoy a drink.

DEAR ABBY

In affairs of the heart, the truth can hurt

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I find it hard to believe that your mail is running 3 to 1 AGAINST informing a friend that her husband is having an affair. Why would anyone want to live in a dream world? Just because a woman isn't aware of it doesn't mean it's not going on.

I would want to know if my husband were having an affair. Something in our relationship would have to be terribly wrong if he went looking elsewhere for love and comfort. He should be coming home to me. If I am not made aware of the problem, how can I deal with it? Not knowing is no help at all. — REALISTIC IN LONG ISLAND

DEAR REALISTIC: Your letter makes a lot of sense, but read on for another view, which also makes sense:

DEAR ABBY: I'm glad you advised against telling a friend that her husband is having an affair. Why? Because if an affair is really going on, unless the wife is a complete idiot, she doesn't have to be told! All the signs are there for her to read: Suddenly he has a lot of extra "work" to do. He starts coming home very late and very tired. Often he isn't where he says he'll be.

A wife who has had a good marriage can tell from the way her husband looks at her (or doesn't look at her). By the way he touches her (or doesn't touch her). His ardor slowly cools. ("Sorry, dear, I have a lot on my mind these days.")

If a woman pretends she doesn't "know" when her husband is having an affair, she just doesn't WANT to know, which is also her right, right? — "KNEW" IN BRIDGEPORT, CONN.

DEAR KNEW: Right!

DEAR ABBY: Last week I took my ladyfriend to a nice restaurant for dinner. I am 58 and she is 56.

She ordered fish, and I ordered a steak — medium. After I cut into it, I discovered that it was rare and I do not care for rare steak, so I started to call the waitress to ask her to please take it back and have it cooked a little longer.

My ladyfriend stopped me, saying if I sent it back it would show that I had no class, and she would be embarrassed.

Not wanting to embarrass her, I didn't send the steak back; I just put it aside and ate the rest of the dinner. Consequently our dinner was spoiled and a small tiff ensued.

Abby, had I sent my steak back to the kitchen to be cooked medium, would it have shown that I had no class? — NO CLASS

DEAR NO CLASS: No. The absence of class was in your choice of dinner companions. But apparently you lacked self-confidence.

DEAR ABBY: My husband's mother, who is in her 80s, has come to live with us. She's financially secure and draws a nice Social Security check every month.

We have four teen-agers at home and one in college, and with prices so high these days, we barely make ends meet.

I added up all the household expenses and divided them by the number of people who live here, and it comes to $275 a month. (Not including clothing.)

Mother thinks $150 a month is adequate for her share. My husband agrees with her. This includes driving her to town to shop, to the doctor and anywhere else she want to go. She watches TV all day long and we have to keep the furnace higher for her.

I would like the opinion of your readers concerning what Mother's fair share should be. (What would she pay in a nursing home that doesn't offer all these extras?) Mother said she would abide by what Dear Abby's readers say. — WAITING IN WASHINGTON

DEAR WAITING: I'm waiting, too. Readers?

(If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $1 plus a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to ABBY, Letters Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.)

Husband gets good bargain

By JAMES G. MCCOLLAM
Copley News Service

Dear Mr. McCollam: We bought this table at an estate auction and when my husband bid $500 (and got it), I almost fainted. I hope we didn't get stuck. The auctioneer said it was a fine antique and over 100 years old. What do you say? Should I kick my husband or kiss him? — A.L.P., South Bend, Ind.

Dear A.L.P.: Kiss him! This is an excellent example of Victorian Renaissance Revival and was made just before the Civil War. It has a beautifully burl walnut inlaid top with a marquetry center and the pedestal is of excellent craftmanship. The true value would approach $1,000, so next time have more faith in your husband's judgment (or guesswork).

Dear Mr. McCollam: This chest has been in our family for over 100 years, but I have no idea of its value or just what period it might be from. Perhaps you can help me become more knowledgeable about it. Do you know what kind of wood it is? — J.S.P., Anderson, Ind.

Dear J.S.P.: This chest is Empire and was probably made about 1830. The front appears to be crotch mahogany veneer. The rest is probably either solid cherry or mahogany.

DES daughters may have smaller wombs than normal

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Daughters of the estimated 2 million women who took the estrogen diethylstilbestrol (DES) while pregnant may have smaller wombs than is normal, according to research by Yale radiologists.

Ultrasound examination showed 18 DES daughters to have smaller uteri than those of a control group. Three of the women had abnormally-shaped uteri with a T structure. The impact of these abnormalities on the reproductive capacity of these women is unknown, the researchers say.

Experiments pay off

By PAUL RAEBURN
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Not many small, experimental theater companies can boast of a Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright as writer-in-residence, or a world-famous European drama critic as co-director.

The Magic Theater, whose home is a converted waterfront warehouse, can.

The playwright is Sam Shepard, whose "Buried Child," given its world premiere at the Magic, won the 1978 Pulitzer for drama.

The critic is Martin Esslin, authority on Brecht and avant-garde European theater, author of "The Theater of the Absurd," and for years director of radio drama for the British Broadcasting Corp.

The Magic, which gets its name from Herman Hesse's novel, "Steppenwolf," is in its 13th year of staging half-a-dozen or more world premieres a season — most written by playwrights-in-residence.

The guiding principal behind the Magic, said the general director, John Lion, is to develop playwrights rather than plays. The company uses part of its $365,000 annual budget to maintain a stable of about a dozen playwrights, some of whom are supported whether they turn out a new play every year or not.

Lion said the company is the "research and development wing of the American theater."

The day before auditions for "Europa," a play by German expressionist Georg Kaiser, Lion sat in an old, stuffed chair in a cluttered backstage office and explained what the Magic trys to do.

"There needs to be a place for writers to see their work done and given the respect it's due," he said, waving a cigarette. "We're after innovation."

Lion, who shares with Esslin the task of selecting plays each season, said the Magic tries to present "a variety of approaches within a season.

"The day of the artistic manifesto is over," he said. "We live in a world typified by floating consciousness."

Lion, a graduate student at the University of California at Berkeley during the ferment of the '60s, said his ideas about drama have been shaped by Esslin, critic Walter Benjamin and the plays of Beckett, O'Neill, Artaud and Strindberg.

But he also confessed to a passion for "pop Americana."

"I love cartoons, drive-ins, racetracks, the myths of the West and Twain," he said.

In the East, it might be tougher to do what the Magic does. "It's harder to block out the rest of the world on the East Coast. I think being out of the way helps a little — the pressure's off," Lion said.

Big Brothers/Big Sisters plan Appreciation Week

By NANCY LORD
Lifestyle Writer

Friendship. That's what the Big Brothers/Big Sisters program is all about, according to some of its participants.

February 15-21 is Big Brothers/Big Sisters Appreciation Week. During this week, activities have been planned to show the volunteers how much they are appreciated, according to Julie Woolfe, director of the program.

Ms. Woolfe, who has been with Big Brothers/Big Sisters for two years, said there are presently about 60 children involved in the program. However, there are apporoximately 2,500 single-parent families in Midland, said Ms. Woolfe, and more volunteers are needed to serve the children in these families.

Volunteers must be at least 18-years-old, out of high school and have a genuine interest in kids, Ms. Woolfe said. They are matched up with children ages 6-16 years of age from single-parent families.

In matching participants, Ms. Woolfe said that several things are taken into consideration. Volunteers, children and their parents fill out forms listing their interests and other information. "The number one factor in matching is interests," she said. Also considered is geographic location.

Volunteers may request a child of a certain age. Ms. Woolfe said that sometimes a parent will ask that the volunteer belong to the same church as the child.

Nancy Pribyla is Elizabeth Cleveland's Big Sister. Ms. Pribyla teaches second grade at Ben Milam Elementary School. She said she first became interested in the program when she was attending school in Lubbock. She didn't become involved, however, until she moved to Midland. She and Elizabeth were matched in October of 1980.

Elizabeth, 10, is the daughter of Lyn Cleveland who is employed as a customer service representative. He said after his wife died, he realized that Elizabeth and her sister, Susanah, 9, needed female companionship, so they became involved in Big Brothers/Big Sisters.

Nancy and Elizabeth enjoy roller skating, seeing movies and cooking. They also like to go to the bookstore in Midland Park Mall to browse. Once they painted their finger nails together. "Sometimes we just talk," said Nancy.

Jim McDougall, a geologist with Exxon, first joined the program last summer. He felt he needed time to find out what the program was all about before becoming a Big Brother, though, so he just attended the various group activities offered by the program for volunteers, children and their parents. These group get-togethers are held once a month or so.

A few months ago he was matched with 10-year-old Jody Reven. Things they do together include telling stories, playing racquetball and playing frisbee. They are planning a hiking trip to the Guadalupe Peaks. One day they went over to the First National Bank to ride the elevators. Jim said they rode to the top twice together, but Jody went back for a third trip by himself.

Ms. Woolfe pointed out that persons with families of their own are not excluded from being volunteers. She said that a family-type relationship can be very important to a child.

Some of the activities planned for the week include an orientation meeting Thursday at Midland College and a pizza feast for volunteers and children in the program.

Will Powell, left, and Jody Reven man the Big Brothers/Big Sisters iced tea booth at Septemberfest last fall. Jody noted that the booth lost some business because it was placed next to a beer booth.

All our choices are getting harder, so...
let's be practical.

We Americans have always been sensible and practical people. We think about our choices. We look for our best values, whether in the supermarket or the corporate boardroom.

Today we're having to take a long, hard look at our energy options. Oil and gas are no longer cheap. We depend on foreign sources for half our oil, and that makes us vulnerable to foreign politics. How practical is it to rely heavily on those sources?

America has the world's largest domestic reserves of coal and uranium. At your electric company, we think it's sensible to use these cheaper and more plentiful fuels. We started building generating plants to use lignite coal more than 10 years ago, and we're building a nuclear-fueled plant today.

We still have to use gas to make about half your electricity. But as fast as we can afford to, we're building plants to use more abundant fuels.

Sources: Resources: Ford Foundation, 1979 Consumption: Department of Energy, 1979

This comparison illustrates why Dr. John McKetta, former chairman of the National Energy Policy Committee, insists we must develop the domestic energy we have.

Twelve Valentine Sweethearts were presented Saturday at the annual Beta Sigma Phi Charity Valentine's Day Ball held in the Veterans of Foreign Wars Hall.

The annual event raises funds for two local scholarships to Midland College.

Beta Sigma Phi was founded in 1931 in Abilene, Kan. by Walter W. Ross for women in search of culture and social activity. Ross believed that people need wider knowledge, deeper culture and the comforting warmth of close and lasting friendships. From the earliest days, efforts were made to give Beta Sigma Phi members what they themselves wanted because then, as now, the sorority existed to serve its members.

From seven members in Abilene, Kan., the organization has grown to an active membership of over 250,000 women in 12,000 chapters in 20 different countries.

The Greek letters "Beta," "Sigma" and "Phi" are the first letters of the Greek words, "life," "learning" and "friendship."

Individual chapter members organize their own social and cultural activities to sut their needs and ideas. Beta Sigma Phi's international office publishes a program guide for cultural development to provide each chapter a guideline to follow.

Individual chapters have their own service projects, as well as statewide service projects.

Local service projects include assistance to the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women, High Sky Girls Ranch, Trinity Towers, Big Brothers/Big Sisters and the Salvation Army.

The Valentine Charity Ball is one of two annual fund raising dances. The other dance is the Country Harvest Ball which is held in the fall. Twelve chapters participate in these fund raising events.

Beta Sigma Phi is divided into five degrees. They are Nu Phi Mu, Ritual, Exemplar, Preceptor and Preceptor Laurette.

Donna Smith represented the Alpha Phi Mu chapter as Valentine Sweetheart. She is employed by the Greenwood Independent School District and is a part-time representative for American Cosmetics. She and her husband, Tommy, have two children.

A charter member of the newly formed chapter, Donna serves as city board representative. Her hobbies include children activities coordination, gardening, and creative sewing.

Beta Delta chapter chose Pat Cartmell as its Valentine honoree. She works as a secretary with C&E Electric. She is married to Mike Cartmell, and the couple have two children.

Pat, who has been in Beta Sigma Phi for two years, has served on all her chapters committees, been "Pledge of the Year" and is serving as recording secretary of her chapter currently.

Janie Miller was selected to represent Iota Beta Chapter. She first pledged in Lubbock four and one-half years ago, but she has been in Midland for the past three years. She is serving as second vice president of her chapter.

She was escorted by her husband, Mark, and has two children.

Sandy Hanson is Mu Psi chapter's Sweetheart. A three and one-half year member of the organization, she was voted "Pledge of the Year" in 1978. She is presently serving on the yearbook, social and service committees.

Sandy is employed as a personnel consultant and is involved in rodeoing with her husband, J.D., and her three daughters. She also enjoys cooking and crafts.

Cheryl Browning represented Psi Phi at the ball. She has been a member of Beta Sigma Phi for two years, was "Pledge of the Year" in 1980 and is serving her chapter as recording secretary this year. She has served on the social, yearbook and scrapbook committees.

Cheryl is employed by the Midland Independent School District as a speech pathologist. She and her husband, David, have one son.

Representing Xi Phi Zeta chapter, Shirley Gardner has been in Beta Sigma Phi for 13 years. She has held every office except president.

Shirley is employed as a beautician. She and her husband, Charles have four children. Her hobbies include horses and watching football.

Sandy DeBord is Xi Alpha Mu's Sweetheart this year. She is employed by an independent oil company. She was escorted by her husband, Dale. They have three sons.

Sandy has been a member of the sorority for nine years. She held every office was also named Sweetheart of her ritual chapter. She is presently serving as corresponding secretary.

A 19-year member of Beta Sigma Phi, Nicki Robbins represented Xi Pi Kappa at the dance. She has held all offices in both the ritual and exemplar degrees. She was honored as "Girl of the Year" and "New Member of the Year" in the past.

She works as a beautician, and she and her husband Fred have one daughter.

Dot King was selected by Xi Epsilon Epsilon as Valentine Sweetheart. She has been active in the sorority for 23 years, 15 of which were in Midland. She has held every office and has chaired every committee.

She and her husband have two children.

Representing Preceptor Epsilon Delta at the dance was Jo Ann Gardner. She joined the organization in 1954 and was president of both her her ritual and exemplar chapters. She is presently serving as president of Preceptor Epsilon Delta.

Jo Ann was named "Girl of the Year, City of Midland" and has been given the order of the rose. She and her husband, Glen, have four sons. They enjoy snow and water skiing and golf.

Eunice Dersch was selected by Preceptor Alpha Omega chapter as its Sweetheart. She has served in all offices and on all committees. During World War II she was one of Beta Sigma Phi's minute maids. She has been in Midland for the past three years.

Eunice and her husband, John, have two children.

Claire Carter of Phi Theta Eta is the final honoree. She is a charter member of her recently formed chapter, serving as first vice president this year. She is in charge of rushing new members.

AT WIT'S END

World is too predictable

By ERMA BOMBECK

There are some people who say there are no surprises left in the world anymore. They say that everything has become predictable.

We know who wins the election before the polls close.

We can accurately predict the sex of an unborn baby.

We can tell when our appliances will go just by checking the date on the warranty.

And if a woman serves braised parakeet lips over wild rice for dinner, it's a certainty her husband had it for lunch.

Well, adventurers, take heart. There are a few things that will continue to be a mystery no matter how much technology dominates our lives. Some things will never be predictable in our times.

Take the cost of your prescription. I can never anticipate how sick I am until the druggist tells me the cost of my medicine. I can be standing there feverish, nauseated, aching and afraid to start a long novel, when he announces, "That'll be $12.17." $12.17! I've paid more for a suntan!

At other times, I've been the picture of confidence as I stand at the counter with loose change in my hand and a simple stitch in my side. The druggist presses a small vial in my palm no bigger than a thimble and announces, "$47.53." I haven't seen that much cash since the garage sale.

And speaking of garages, what about the one where you take your car to be fixed? Don't tell me the world doesn't hold some shockers. The garage I go to is a shrine. It marks the birthplace of the post-dated check. More chest pains have been recorded at a service department of car repairs than at any other single place of business. No matter what estimate has been given, there is always a charge that was not foreseen. I have heard there was a person whose car had to be pushed into a garage only to discover the problem was a 15-cent hose, but I never knew him personally.

The American people are not naive, nor are they without appreciation that services cannot carry a standard price tag, but I watched a young girl recently in the vet's office who had come to claim her puppy. First she had her billfold out and as they tallied up the charges, she got out her checkbook. As they continued adding up the tab, she graduated to her charge card revolving account.

I wouldn't be surprised if that dog had to live to be 137 before he was paid off.

There is a lot to be said for buttonholes. For one thing, they give your buttons something to do.

But, as important as they are, we don't always want to take the time to make them.

Learn to deal with buttonholes: You are missing out on a whole world of fashion out there if you don't.

The not so easy way out is to just make up your mind you are going to learn to make buttonholes yourself.

The easy way out, of course, is to have someone make them for you.

Put a layer of the interfacing between two layers of the fabric. Make a 1-inch-long buttonhole. Check the stitch width and space. Now make one the same size as you will be making them on your garment. Slit the buttonhole and try the button. Make any adjustments necessary for a better buttonhole.

For accurate, uniform buttonholes make rows of basting to mark centers of buttonholes and each end of buttonholes. Remove these bastings after you finish the buttonholes.

DO NOT clip buttonholes until you have made all of them.

Wit and energy keep her young

FAIRHOPE, Ala. (AP) — The way you describe Verda Horne is tiny. Barely 60 inches separate the top of her gray head and the soles of her small feet. She also is elderly, in her 70s.

But anyone who would call her, patronizingly, a little old lady has encountered neither her energy nor her wit.

Some who follow Verda Horne on her field trips say it is as much a challenge to absorb all the wonders she has to show them as it is simply to keep up.

Her step, like her mind, is quick, agile. Verda Horne was not put on this earth to lollygag.

"There is so much to see, so much to learn," she was saying during a mini-field trip in her back yard. "That's a magnolia. Does it look like a magnolia? Of course it doesn't, but it is. It is a species found only around here."

No greenhouse imports decorate the Horne back yard, only trees and shrubs and flowers native to this area, and they are lovely.

"I guess my goal in life is for everyone on the eastern shore of Mobile Bay to know this environment. To know it is to love it. That's true of any environment, especially your own. When you see a plant, wouldn't you rather know what it is than not know?

"If everyone knew his own environment, was aware of what is special about it, we would be less inclined to watch it be destroyed."

To that end, Verda Horne teaches a once-a-week class in ecology for the Institute for Lifelong Learning.

Hilton Sutton descended from a line of clergy. The family tree reveals that a Sutton was the Archbishop of Cant erbury in the 11th century. His grandfather, George Sutton, was a circuit-riding Methodist preacher in central Texas in the late 1800's, and along with his grandmother, Julia, an English teacher, established a number of churches around the state capital, Austin, Texas. He is a descendant of the Sutton family of England, which came to the United States about 1821 for political reasons, leaving behind historic Sutton Place,, now the international headquarters for the late J. Paul Getty's empire.

Revered Sutton was ordained to the ministry in 1952 and has been a pastor, lecturer, author and pouplar speaker across America specializing in interpretation of prophetic scripture. His up-to-the-minute "news analyses" have quickened hearts and sparked a new interest in the Bible wherever he has spoken, because one realizes when listening to him that the Bible is the most accurate, up-to-date book ever written. During the last 20 years, Sutton has kept a special eye on the land of Israel. The reason for this is that Israel is the barometer of the world, and by watching Israel and the Old Testament scripture, o ne knows exactly what the outcome of the Middle East conflict and eventual peace will be.

His interest in, and studies of, history and the prophetic scripture over a period of many years equip him to serve in his present capacity of Chairman of the Board of Mission to America, a Houston, Texas-based Christain organization. He has authored four books: "WORLD WAR 111" "THE BEAST SYSTEM", "HE RESERVES WRATH FOR HIS ENEMIES", and "PHARAOH IN THE PROMISED LAND". By many he is considered to be the nation's foremost lecturer on the "Book of Revelation" as well as on prophetic scripture in general.

Heloise gets married

HELLO:

Happy Valentine's Day to you! Guess what? You are reading a column that is being written by Heloise. Nothing new you say? Well, your friend Heloise is now a Mrs.

That's right, I was married last night.

I'm no longer single and I am looking forward to being a Mrs. and married to David for the rest of my life.

So many of you write and say you want to know about me so, because today's specal, let's just talk.

This column has been appearing for over 20 years, and all of you loyal fans have watched me grow up.

When Mother died a few years ago, the support in the wonderful letters you wrote helped me so much. You'll never know just how much your warm thoughts and sympathy meant! I know how much you love me and, believe me, I really do love each and every one of you. When I sign off with "hugs," I mean it!

I grew up helping out in the office — researching, testing, choosing the best hints. And I know now you read this column with me in mind. I knew when I wrote my first column that I would be doing this forever. Someone asked me if I would ever quit, and I said no, that I probably will be typing a column on my way to the pearly gates.

I will always be here to help you and to share things with you.

My husband David is a plumbing contractor, outdoor enthusiast, and a hot-air balloonist. He just finished building our home, which is my new test house. So-o-o, when I write to you, I'll be sitting at my very own kitchen table with a cup of coffee.

The wedding was fun and a little bit different. My four bridesmaids and the groomsmen wore white tie and tails. I wore a traditional wedding gown borrowed from a girlfriend who wore it when she was married several years ago.

We're off to San Francisco for our honeymoon. On Tuesday, I'm going to speak at a meeting of the Vinegar Institute, the wonderful group that filled more than 200,000 of your requests for a booklet mentioned in my column.

So, my best to you, and I know you will share in my happiness. — Hugs, Heloise.

FROZEN WATER PIPES

Dear Heloise: Our water pipes froze under our kitchen sink again right after the plumber had opened them.

Instead of calling the plumber back and having to pay another bill, I decided to try something myself first.

I wrapped a heating pad around the two pipes and secured it with clothespins. I turned the control to high and turned on the faucet.

In a couple of hours I had running water again. Now, when I know the temperature is going to take a plunge, I wrap the pipes before I go to bed, setting the thermostat control to low.

It sure is nice to wake up in the morning and find the water flows freely. — Libby Kneebone

"Make ye no truce with Adam-Zad — the Bear that walks like a Man!"
— Rudyard Kipling
"The Truce of the Bear" (1898)

He stood in the hotel and watched the MiGs bombing the palace and its grounds three blocks away. He poured another scotch and drank it. Straight. Then he offered some to the others who were also self-imprisoned in the hotel. The bombing lasted three days. None of the hotel guests went outside during those April days of 1978.

Looking out the window, Pat thought back to his first trip to Afghanistan in 1972. After majoring in cultural anthropology and geography, he had set out to see the world. Hitchhiking across Asia, he planned on staying in Afghanistan two weeks. He was there two-and-one-half months.

Since then he had been in and out of the country often. He felt as comfortable there as in the United States. He wasn't the only American who felt that way. There were others who found in this country and its people a second home.

He had missed the bloodless military coup led by Mohammad Daoud in 1973 by a couple of days, because it was over almost before it began. This one was different.

"You're there and you're caught up in this thing — helpless and not in control," Pat said in a recent interview held at the Museum of the Southwest.

Currently on display at the museum, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., is a special exhibit featuring the people and culture of Afghanistan. It contains a combination of the private collections of four Americans, in the carpet and import business, who have spent most of the last decade in Afghanistan. Pat is one of those Americans. Since they all plan on returning, they preferred to be referred to by first name to avoid possible reprisals.

Pat was told in the beginning of the 1978 coup that it was just "a student demonstration they were trying to put down."

That was before the bombing started.

"I didn't feel a lot of terror because the Afghans watched out for me. What was uncertain was what was going to happen when it was all over," he said, remembering reading what one Afghan leader had said about Afghanistan neutrality being vital to its survival because it "was a lamb caught between a bear (Russia) and a lion (Great Britain)."

Although the Russians are generally credited with invading Afghanistan in December of 1979, Andy, Kate and Pat feel the invasion, though it was from behind the scenes, was the April coup in 1978.

"The actual coup in 1978 was entirely Soviet backed and orchestrated," Andy said, with Kate shaking her head in agreement.

"The planes were Russian built" and Pat believes "Russian piloted," because the pilots were just "too good and very accurate. The Afghan Army was duped into helping pro-Russian Afghans."

Andy discovered Afghanistan in 1972 when he was on his way to India. He started to live there in 1974. Between 1975 and 1980, he was "there almost continuously."

"I'd still be there if it wasn't for the Russians. I really liked the country and I really liked the people," he said.

Kate added, "It is a traditional culture where everything is built around the family and tribe." She explained that one of the most misunderstood customs was the wearing of veils. The women who wear veils do so out of choice because " it's a matter of traditional culture and prestige. Not a symbol at all of subjugation."

As art historians both Andy and Kate are "concerned with the death of a culture."

"The Afghans are non-materalist, non-consumerist and non-communist. They don't envy American goods. They don't envy American riches. They don't envy Russian organization. They really believe family and religion are the most important" ingredients of life, Kate said. "They are very traditional, but not judgemental. No social stigma is attached to being poor."

Both were emphatic in stressing the differences in the Afghans and the Iranians. Andy said he felt the language structure of the two cultures said a lot about the peoples. The Iranians have three levels of speech, one that is used with one lower on the social scale, one for an equal and yet another for speaking with someone higher up the social ladder. The Afghans (official language is Afghan Persian) have two, formal and informal. The formal, he explained, is used in speaking with someone who is older, regardless of social level.

Afghanistan has "seven different freedom fighter groups," which is a "weakness and a strength," Andy said. "They all hate the Russians and fight against them. The Russians have a hard time fighting them because they (Afghans) are not organized" and therefore are unpredictable. An Afghan "is given a gun and his last rites when he joins the Muhejedin (freedom fighters). That shows the dedication of these people."

All three agreed that the Afghans are winning the war. Pat, who has just returned to the States after three months in Afghanistan, said, "The spirit of the people was up 100 percent since last year. The general feeling is that the Russians are bogged down."

The Russians only control the capitol city of Kabul and that only in the daytime, Pat said. They control the roads, but not the area 100 yards off the roads. That is no man's land.

The Russians are using many Cuban, North Korean and North Vietnamese trained guerrilla fighters, but the Afghans "are a little more cohesive and are beginning to fight in a concentrated effort toward the Russians. The common bond is to get the Russians out.

"Their life is based on physical competition among themselves. They love it and they'll fight anything.

"They will continue to fight until there's no more Afghans," Pat said.

Pat heard reports from the Afghan people that the Russians are using Afghanistan as a "testing ground for new tanks and new chemical warfare, from things that kill to things that will just knock you out to things that will paralyze you and affect you the rest of your life."

What the Afghans want and need from the United States is weapons.

"The Afghans can take care of themselves. They can eat a little bit of rice a day and walk 30 miles. What they want is guns, bullets and weapons that will knock down helicopters," Pat said.

Pakistan houses some 1 million refugees by Red Cross count, Andy said. Many of those living along the Russian-Afghanistan border are also refugees. They fled from Stalinist Russia "to escape the collective genocide being practiced there. Now they say, 'Well we fled once, but where can we go now? We have no alternative but to fight.'"

The Russians made two unsuccessful invasion attempts into Afghanistan in the 18th Century and one in the 19th Century, finally succeeding in the 1970s. Control in Afghanistan today secures for Russia a vital area on its southern border and, with Iran and Iraq fighting, creates a Soviet buffer state close to the Persian Gulf shores. The defeat of a Marxist regime by rebel forces in Afghanistan could have far reaching consequences for Russia in its Eastern European satellite states.

"No man is an island entire of itself...any man's death diminishes me because I am involved in mankind; and therefore never send to know for whom the bell tolls; it tolls for thee."

RINGING THE BELL

Black History Month requires your effort

With BOB TIEUEL

The Black Experience: Dear Bellringers — For many years now we have sought to give black youth encouragement and help to become "somebody" in spite of their blackness. At times, the task has been, it seems, almost impossible and at other times, it was heartfilling. There can be litle doubt that young blacks are naturally born athletes and in many areas in sports, equal or exceed others in the big game.

That is one of the reasons why February has been designated by black leaders as Black History Month. It is designed to point out outstanding blacks in history who have made notable contributions in science, in music, in the other arts and fields of endeavor.

We urge parents to buy more books for their children to read at home and encourage them to read newspapers, especially black newspapers, as well as periodicals of an educational nature. Black youth today simply do not have enough exposure at home to books that enlighten and challenge. Above all, take or encourage your children to visit regularly your local library. Librarians all over the Southwest tell us that black children do not visit libraries nearly as often as do their white counterparts. Television can be educational at points, but the rising tide of black youth crime in this country ought to tell us something.

Claudia Davis, a public school teacher in Midland and a member of St. Paul C.M.E. Church here, has launched a sweeping "reach out and touch" movement among the young of certain areas of West Texas.

Black churches must assume more responsibility for guidance of our youth in the future and Black History Month 1981 would be a good time to start. Indeed, we need to portray "a good image" for our youth to follow.

Dear Bob: "Just received an invitation to attend the executive board of the Women's Missionary Council to be held in a downtown exclusive motel in Jackson, Miss., on Feb. 26. Room rates run about $40 per night, not including fees for banquet, president's supper, etc. This meet follows closely the sixth national congress on evangelism of the C.M.E. Church in the same city.

"Our church has less than a hundred members and we are struggling to pay our pastor a decent salary and take care of our church note and utilities. When will the end come for some of these so-called "national meets?" Don't our leaders know we are in a national crisis (depression) in this country and the end is not in sight? What do you think?" Mrs. T.P.S.

Dear Mrs. S: My advice would simply be: Stay within your budget and in your circumstances that would be to not send representatives to the national meets you mentioned in your letter. Somehow, we must keep the home fires burning and leave these meets to churches with big budgets and memberships. And let's hope our church and civic leaders will wake up before we have to close a lot of "mission churches" in the nation if present overhead costs continue. We love you. Write again.

To G.T.D. of Odessa: On Dec. 1, 1980, we cleared the Friendship Community Church of all bonded indebtedness and we are free at last. We are going forward to complete plans for our Black Historical Library to be housed in Friendship in the not-too-distant future. And thanks for your generous check. We need a lot of friends like you.

Recent great quotes: "For perhaps too long a time black Americans have avoided the primary use of power dynamics through unity. Other groups have related to each other principally in terms of power. Black Americans have dealt with others on the basis of whether we like them or they like us. Today, it would seem that this is another luxury that we can no longer afford." From Black Monitor.

Bellringer writes: Dear Bob, "Will you help save an important part of the world's black heritage? This priceless collection is housed at the Schomburg Center of Research in Black Culture, a unique library and museum in the heart of New York City's Harlem. There, every day, hundreds of people discover — many for the first time — the substantial black contribution to the world's civilizations and cultures.

"The collection, established in 1926, now holds about 75,000 books and thousands of manuscripts, photographs, newspaper clippings, periodicals, films, recordings, artworks and artifacts on the black experience through the ages. More than 140 African languages are included.

"The Schomburg Collection has been called 'a fountain from which pours the cool, clean water of truth that can wash away the distortions perpetuated by historians who colored the black man invisible.' This is one of the truths that can help make us free. But the task of preserving and providing such a truth is not free. It costs money.

"May we count on your help? Any amount you can spare, from $5 to $500 or more, is more than welcome. Please send your tax-deductible gift to The Schomburg Center for Research in Black Culture, 476 Fifth Avenue, Suite M-6, New York, New York 10018."

Say you saw the appeal here. Thank you, gentle readers.

Another Bellringer writes: Dear Brother Bob, "As sheriff of out county, I am a member of the Sheriff's Association of Texas. I have recommended to my association that you be extended an invitation to become an associate member in the Sheriff's Association of Texas. Associate membership is reserved for citizen who desire to help us build an effective and responsible law enforcement system in Texas.

"We are working with our lawmakers, crime prevention programs, drug abuse programs, law enforcement training agencies and many other agencies and organizations to improve out ability to serve and meet the needs of our communities. The Sheriff's Association is a non-profit corporation which provides coordination with all citizens." Sheriff Raul Florez, Reeves County.

Request to release water rejected

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Attorney General Mark White says a federal agency has rejected the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's request for regular releases of water from Possum Kingdom to improve canoeing and fishing on the Brazos River.

White said Friday the Federal Eergy Regulatory Commission, which licenses Possum Kingdom as a hydroelectric power project, will enter an order next week dismissing the request.

The case was important not only for its effects on Possum Kingdom and the Brazos but also because it was the first time the service had sought water releases as a licensing requirement for a Texas dam.

Possum Kingdom is a 19,800-acre lake west of Fort Worth.

White fought the recommendation as "an unwarranted and unprecedented attempt by the federal government to interfere in the administration of state water rights."

Fish and Wildlife Service officials in Texas said such drawdowns would be unlikely and predicted that 74 percent of the time the drop would be less than two feet.

Texas is getting half the UPS service it should.

If you live in Texas, you can send a package by UPS to any address in the continental United States—except to another address in Texas.

The reason is, UPS does not now have what's known as intrastate operating authority in Texas.

Our 5000 people and 2300 vehicles here are permitted to handle parcels coming into or leaving the state, but not parcels from one point in Texas to another.

This is a serious handicap for thousands of Texans, particularly businesspeople, who depend on prompt, economical parcel transportation. It deprives them of a service that's available to their competitors in other states.

The Texas Legislature is now discussing a bill which would clarify the authority of the Texas Railroad Commission (the agency that regulates transportation matters) to consider requests such as ours to provide service from and to all points in Texas.

We feel this bill would be a step forward. We'd like to see it pass, and we'd appreciate your support. If you agree with us, a note to your Senator and Representative in the Texas Legislature could be very helpful.

Project Spacewatch could possibly save life on earth

WASHINGTON (AP) — Warning that errant asteroids could one day destroy civilization on Earth — just as they may have wiped out dinosaurs — a group of scientists says man should be planning to use rockets and hydrogen bombs to deflect them back into space.

There are about 800 asteroids in deep space that could destroy most of life on our planet, and perhaps hundreds of thousands of smaller ones that could demolish a single city or region, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Advisory Council said in a recent report.

The only way to avoid an impending collision would be to detect the possibility far in advance and intercept the approaching body with a hydrogen bomb, the council said.

Such a project could eventually cost billions of dollars, but the council proposed a modest beginning: a few million NASA dollars to start Project Spacewatch.

The project would dedicate one large telescope to detect all asteroids and meteors larger than 30 to 60 feet in diameter whose paths cross the Earth's orbit and track them for years in case they wander onto a collision course. The observation could later be expanded to detect smaller objects with a network of telescopes, radars and satellites.

To change a collision course, the council said, a spacecraft carrying a hydrogen bomb would attach itself to the object in space and be exploded by a radio signal from the ground.

The group, assembled by NASA to explore future space projects, noted there is growing acceptance by scientists of a theory that the world's dinosaur population was erased 65 million years ago when an asteroid, perhaps six miles in diameter, struck the Earth.

The theory, proposed three years ago by Nobel physicist Luis Alvarez, is that the collision threw so much dust and debris into the atmosphere that it blocked out the sun for years, destroying plant life and plant-eating animals like the dinasaurs.

"In the 130 million years the dinosaurs roamed the Earth, they failed to develop the technology to avoid their own extinction," the council said. "Homo sapiens has developed an adequate technology. He can avert any further extinction by asteroid impact. We think he should."

So what is NASA doing with this recommendation?

Very little, at present, according to Dr. Devan French, the agency's discipline scientist for planetary materials.

"In the current financial climate, it's difficult to propose a new program such as this if you can't justify a clear need for it," he said.

French would like to see a low-level effort started, such as investing $3 million to $4 million in a telescope especially for asteroid and meteor observation.

"We need more capability to determine how many bodies are out there and where they are," he said. "A dedicated telescope would certainly enlarge our data base. Right now there are too many objects that we can't detect because they're too small and move too fast.

"These things are potential hazards," French added. "There's unquestioned evidence these impacts have occurred in the past, and they probably will again."

Much attention was focused on this potential problem in 1967 when the asteroid Icarus passed within 4 million miles of Earth — close by astronomical standards. That mile-wide collection of rock and ice comes close to our planet every 19 years, and astronomers speculate that the gradually changing gravitational pull of the Earth and other planets could someday put it on a collision path with Earth.

The council also suggested NASA send a spacecraft to probe the asteroid Anteros when it passes within a few million miles in 1985. But that mission won't materialize because of the estimated $100 million pricetag.

Another intriguing suggestion from the panel: Use an H-bomb to deflect a Mars-crossing asteroid into a Martian polar cap.

That, it said, could melt much of the ice cap, producing atmospheric water vapor and a more favorable environment for life. Humans might then be able to inhabit the planet.

Driskill boycotted

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Women's Political Caucus said Friday it would ask its members not to use the Driskill Hotel in Austin because a private club there — the Citadel — recently refused to admit Rep. Anita Hill because of her sex.

Meningitis kills eight in Miami

MIAMI (AP) — Dade County health officials say an unusual and mysterious outbreak of meningitis here has claimed eight lives and infected 12 residents since the beginning of the year.

The 1981 outbreak is about three to four cases more than normally reported during the first two months of the year, and the eight deaths blamed on the infection equal the total number of meningitis deaths for the county in a normal year.

"There's no cause for alarm, but we want people just to be aware of it and to contact their doctor if they do have any symptoms," county Health Director Dr. Richard Morgan said Wednesday.

Health officials said the majority of the victims were adults, through children are more suspectible to meningitis.

A spokesman for the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta said no explanation for the Dade outbreak has been developed.

The symptoms of the infection are high fever, severe headache, with possibly a stiff neck, sore throat or skin rash. The disease occurs when a bacterium commonly found in people's throats gets into the membrane lining the brain and the spinal cord.

It can spread in water droplets when a victim coughs, and it is found most often in crowded conditions.

But health officials report that all the Dade cases have been isolated.

Health officials say the incidence of meningitis has doubled nationally from this time last year.

A Texas outbreak centered in Houston has claimed 10 lives.

Most of the cases reported in Dade are listed as meningococcal meningitis Group B, for which there is no vaccine.

Calf put to sleep

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Tennyson, a Jersey calf who lived a record 268 days with an artificial heart, has been destroyed because he was suffering from an infection, the University of Utah reported.

The calf was put to sleep Wednesday because "he was suffering," said Pam Fogle, a university spokeswoman.

Tennyson had an infection along the drive lines that connett the air-driven heart to its power source, said Larry Hastings, a technician at the heart laboratory of the Artificial Organs Division.

The heart is slightly larger than the model surgeons at the University Medical Center propose putting in a human this year.

Such infections are a problem with animals, but would not be expected with human patients who are more easily kept clean, Hastings said.

The autopsy, which was nearly completed, had found that the animal was suffering from infection complications that were not treatable by antiobiotics, Ms. Fogel said.

"He was a much-loved calf, and they're pretty broken up" and exhausted after monitoring Tennyson through the night, she said.

The previous record survival by an animal with an artificial heart was 221 days, set by the calf Fumi Joe in 1979.

Tennyson was tethered to the compressed air supply by the two 6-foot-long tubes running out of its chest.

Doctors had expected Tennyson to die eventually for the same reason other calves with implants died — from outgrowing the hearts. Tennyson had grown from 160 to 330 pounds.

After more than 20 years of experimenting with artificial hearts in animals, the researchers have been authorized by a university committee to implant a polyurethane heart in a human patient.

FBI unveils display on women

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI Director William H. Webster unveiled a new display on women in the bureau Friday and noted that the number of female special agents has more than tripled since he became director.

Webster told two dozen leaders of womens' groups that there were 93 female special agents when he took over three years ago and there are now 362 out of a total of 7,755. During those three years, budget cuts have forced a reduction of 246 in the total number of special agents. The most recent new agent class is made up 40 percent women.

Webster was unveiling a 15-foot long display of women in the bureau which will be added to the FBI's public tour route that half a million people pass through each year. The display has 19 color photos of female FBI employees at work.

Webster told the womens' leaders that "women are doing everything in the bureau in the special agent catagory that men do."

He said there are female squad supervisors, that women special agents worked in the undercover operations known as Abscam, which dealt with political corruption in Congress, and Miporn, which dealt with the nationwide organized criminal activity in pornography.

He said there had been an "active rise in the recruitment and level of responsibility of women" in the bureau in the past three years.

"I'd like to be able to tell you that it's not a new role for women," Webster said. But he said there were two femae agents on uty when J. Edgar Hoover became director in 1924 and that they did not last a year. He said that Hoover before he died in 1972 had appointed one female special agentlwho resigned after four years, entered a mental institution and began writing threatening letters to Hoover.

Sarah Harder, chairman of the Continuing Committee on International Womens Year, told Webster on behalf of the group, "We are delighted about the progress that has been made by women in the bureau during the Ford and Carter administrations."

Webster noted that 38 to 40 percent of FBI support employees are women. Overall, there are 8,094 women among the bureau's 18,898 employees.

Hance to speak at water meeting

LUBBOCK — Members of Water, Inc., will converge on Lubbock Saturday for the 14th Annual Membership Meeting. U.S. Rep. Kent Hance will lead off the program of speakers with an address at a breakfast session. Rep. Hance has recently taken up duties on the House Ways and Means Committee.

All activities of the annual get-together will be conducted at South Park Inn on Loop 289 South near Indiana Avenue. The dutch-treat breakfast gets underway at 7:45 a.m.

Keynoting the meeting will be Texas House Speaker Bill Clayton and Dr. Sam Curl, dean of the College of Agricultural Sciences at Texas Tech, who will be featured in the annual meeting's concluding luncheon session. Other speakers include Dr. Herbert Grubb, director of planning, Texas Department of Water Resources; and Bob Nichols, partner in Freese and Nichols, Consulting Engineers. Nichols is the past president of the National Society of Professional Engineers.

"Although this is our annual meeting of members, the public is not only invited but encouraged to attend," Lloyd Calhoun, president of the non-profit group representing West Texas and Eastern New Mexico, said. "We have arranged an outstanding program dealing with the area's future water," he said.

Water, Inc., was founded 14 years ago by concerned area residents. It is a true grassroots effort to assure future water for all interests. In recent years attention has focused on water importation as the solution. Currently, a six-state study of the Ogallala aquifer is underway and included in the study findings will be recommendations for water import routes.

Anti-abortionists set new effort

Taking five babies for a test ride in a new evacuation apron is nurse's aide Marion Cielocha of Oak Park, Ill. An Oak Park hospital recently purchased the aide's aid as an added safety precaution during emergencies. The apron has six deep pockets to securely hold infants and apparently has the approval of its soundly sleeping passengers. (AP Laserphoto)

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Foes of legalized abortion, hoping to capitalize on the new conservative tilt in the Congress, are preparing their most intensive effort yet to reverse the 1973 Supreme Court decision giving a woman the right to end her pregnancy.

In the opening weeks of the 97th Congress, 17 versions of a constitutional amendment to ban abortions have been introduced with the support of 80 members of the House or Senate. Moreover, a bill introduced by a pair of anti-abortion leaders would define human life as beginning at conception, a description that some say could prohibit some forms of birth control and perhaps equate abortion with murder.

"The new political climate poses the greatest threat to legalized abortions we have seen since 1973," says Suellen Lowry, chief lobbyist for the National Abortion Rights Action League.

John Mackey, who heads the Ad Hoc Committee in Defense of Life, says the election of a president who supports anti-abortion legislation, a Republican-controlled Senate, and a net gain of about 25 anti-abortion members in the House gives his organization new hope.

"That's pretty good momentum in one election," Mackey said in an interview.

In the past, it was the specter of a constitutional amendment to ban abortions that raised fears among activists who favor a woman's right to choose whether an abortion is warranted.

Now there is a new worry: anti-abortion legislation introduced January 17 by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and Rep. Henry J. Hyde, R-Ill. The bill, if enacted, would define human life as beginning with conception and remove jurisdiction over the issue from the lower federal courts.

Such a law would give an unborn fetus constitutional protection at the moment of conception, making abortion potentially prosecutable on a murder charge. It would also grant state courts complete authority to set abortion standards in different parts of the country.

Opponents say that under the bill, use of such birth control methods as the IUD — which stops the fertilized egg from developing — would become illegal, as would morning-after treatment of rape.

They also believe that women who miscarry would have to prove that the pregnancy did not end through deliberate or accidental negligence.

Philip Curland, a constitutional lawyer at the University of Chicago, believes, however, that the 1973 Supreme Court decision legalizing abortions and defining when the fetus becomes "viable" would override such legislation.

"This wouldn't change anything," he said.

Curland said it is possible that such a law would be appealed to the Supreme Court, which could revise its earlier opinion. But unless that happens or the nation adopts a constitutional amendment, Curland believes the law would have little impact on women who want abortions.

Ms. Lowry says she does not believe the anti-abortion forces have the votes for the two-thirds needed to approve a constitutional amendment.

But the election of about a dozen, conservative Republican senators, the fear among House and Senate Democrats that liberally-perceived votes on social and family issues like abortion might cost them re-election and the size of Ronald Reagan's electoral victory have made possible the approval of legislation requiring only a majority vote.

"There are more anti-abortion votes in the Congress than ever before," Ms. Lowry said.

In the Senate, Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, chairman of a Judiciary subcommittee on the constitution, has said he will likely hold hearings on the abortion issue by summer.

Electric eye developed for blind

WASHINGTON (AP) — An electronic system using words and touch to warn the blind about obstacles in their paths is being developed by a San Francisco research corporation.

The National Science Foundation, which is sponsoring the research, said Wednesday that the device may give the blind greater mobility.

The system, which uses a TV camera and small computer, tells the person when there is an object ahead and then, using stimulators worn on a belt, taps to indicate where the obstacle is, researchers say.

"Pole, 11 o'clock, eight feet," the computer might tell the person after it analyzes images picked up by the TV camera.

As the person approaches the obstacle, the computer will use the stimulator to relay information on the direction and distance of the object.

The devices are being developed at the Smith-Kettlewell Institute of Visual Sciences in San Francisco, a non-profit research corporation affiliated with the University of the Pacific.

"After many years of working with the blind and on many devices, this system looks like it has the greatest potential for use," said Dr. Carter C. Collins, who, with Michael F. Deering, has built a large prototype system.

"The system is in an early stage (of development) and it will take a few years to work out all the bugs, but it looks very promising," Collins said in a telephone interview.

It currently takes two people to operate the system, Collins said, but, later versions will be self-contained units small enough to carry in a shoulder bag or be worn on a belt. A miniature camera will be mounted on a pair of eyeglasses or on the belt.

Collins said the major challenge of the research has been the development of a program that will enable the computer to act instantly after receiving the image from the camera.

The computer is programmed to detect the edges of objects from the TV images and make logical assumptions from this information, researchers said.

For example, vertical edges may mean utility poles or trees and horizontal ones low tree branches or overhangs.

Maine may file suit over rain

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — In what could be an unprecedented legal action, Attorney General James E. Tierney says he is considering suing the federal government and other states because of drifting air pollution that helps cause acid rain.

Tierney theorizes the federal government and individual states with weak air pollution laws could be held jointly liable for damages caused by acid rain in Maine.

Maine would be plowing fresh legal ground if it undertakes such a lawsuit, he said.

"It's just in the idea stage now," he said Wednesday.

Tierney was asked by three legislators to look into formal requests that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency lower sulfur dioxide emission standards for several power plants in the Midwest.

"If the EPA allows these requests, then 1.5 million tons of sulfur dioxide will be added to the air," read a letter to Tierney from Sens. Frank Wood, D-Springvale, and Larry Brown, D-Lubec; and Rep. Sherry Huber, R-Falmouth.

"These increased emissions will not only lead to further degradation of our air, but an increase in the acid rain drift into our state," the lawmakers said.

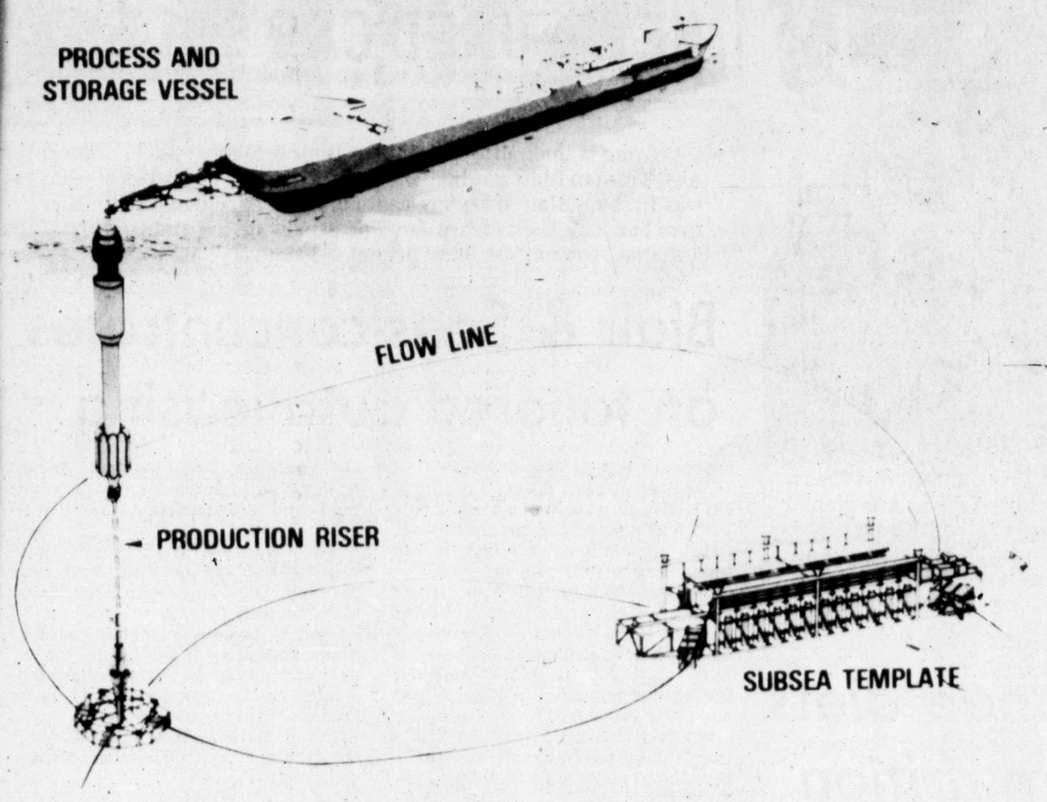
EXXON SUBMERGED PRODUCTION SYSTEM



Technology helps answer questions on how to get oil from beneath seas

HOUSTON — Scientists have long been aware of the potential for much-needed reserves of oil and gas trapped beneath oceans in hard-to-reach geological structures.

The difficulties of drilling and producing in deep water offshore, however, are many.

The first and most obvious problem is just how to get the hydrocarbons out of the ground and transported thousands of feet to the ocean's surface through often rough waters.

Technology has come a long way in answering this problem, and many reasearchers feel a system known as the Submerged Production System (SPS) is ready for adaption to commercial operation and is environmentally safe for the job.

The SPS is an ocean-flour installation for production of offshore oil and natural gas reserves in water depths which eventually could reach 5,000 feet or more, explains Dr. George Lock, manager of the Offshore Systems Division at Exxon Production Research Co., an affiliate of Exxon Corp. in charge of technology development.

The SPS features a cluster of wells drilled through a structure called the seafloor template that lies on the ocean floor. That structure contains piping which combines the oil and gas from each well and channels it through flowlines to either a so-called production riser, or a pipeline to shore. The production riser can be used for oil production and is the part of the system which brings the oil to a vessel on the ocean's surface where it can be processed and stored. Then, it can be moved to market via a shuttle tanker. Oil can be produced using either a production riser or a pipeline to shore; gas would most likely be produced through a pipeline.

"In either case, all production functions are controlled remotely from the surface facility using an electro-hydraulic control and communication system," he says.

Dr. Lock describes the SPS as highly reliable and he says it has been designed for "maximum environmental safety." It has "pans" which collect "any inadvertant hydrocarbon leakage from piping connections" and a sensor system that "automatically shuts in the wells in the event hydrocarbons are detected."

And this new technology, he says, has been proven.

Dr. Lock, who has his PhD in physics, says Exxon constructed a three-well prototype system which was used in an offshore Louisiana Gulf of Mexico production pilot test 170 feet of water. Although the water depth for the test was relatively shallow, the operations were conducted as if the system were in 2,000 feet of water. It was installed in 1974 and tested through mid-1980 and the results showed the SPS could be operated in water depths of at least 2,000 feet in the early 1980s, he says. Extension to greater depths, he notes, may require extensive engineering redesign of some of the SPS components, "but no conceptual changes."

He says the testing effort cost $81 million and took "several hundred man-years expended over a 12-year period."

Fort reported that the museum's operating expences for 1980 were $327,614. The 1979 figure was $345,191. He also pointed out that the museum spent $606,562 on the North Wing Project in 1980 and $13,870 on the planned pictorial history of Permian Basin oil. He said that total spending for all purposes in 1980 was $948,046.

Fort pointed out that the 1981 operating budget had been increased to $451,246 due to the undertaking of projects postponed from 1980, ,construction and setting up exhibits in the North Wing, and inflation.

Trade group warns Reagan to be prepared for shortage

By MAX B. SKELTON
AP Oil Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — The largest trade group for petroleum refiners believes President Reagan's decontrol of crude oil and product prices was in the public interest but says the government must be prepared to act quickly in the advent of another supply disruption.

The executive committee of the National Petroleum Refiners Association reacted to the Reagan executive order by adopting an eight-point formula for government action to preserve a healthy, competitive, domestic refining industry.

In addition to endorsing decontrol, the refiners said a standby program for crude oil allocation for use in a supply disruption should be developed as soon as possible.

"This program should not confer an unfair advantage to any refiner," the policy statement said. "There should be a provision for suspending the program when the disruption is ended."

Most of the controls Reagan terminated eight months early were a result of the 1973-74 Arab oil embargo disruptions.

In a report to members of the Washington-based refiners association, Urvan R. Sternfels, executive vice president, said the pace of deliberations within the oil industry to fashion a national policy for domestic refining has quickened.

Since Reagan's action, Sternfels said, individual companies and industry groups have begun developing their strategies on such issues as oil access, standby price and allocation controls and the national security implications of increased petroleum product imports.

He said it is likely the opening round of refining policy debate in the new congress may be on a bill introduced Feb. 5 by Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La.

The bill was referred to the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee of which Johnson is a ranking minority member. The bill, S-409, is entitled the Standby Petroleum Authorities Act of 1981 and is described as providing "specific authority to deal with petroleum supply interuptions."

The section on standby petroleum supply and allocation authority would permit the president to allocate and establish ceiling prices for petroleum when a severe petroleum supply interuption exists or is imminent or when it is necessary for the United States to comply with obligations under international energy sharing programs.

Such an interuption is defined as a national or regional shortage the president determines has resulted or likely will result in a substantial shortage of petroleum products, is not manageable under other appropriate emergency authorities, is expected to persist for a period sufficient to threaten national or regional stocks of the products, and is having or reasonably may have a major adverse impact on public health, safety or welfare or the national or regional economy.

Resulting price and allocation controls could continue in effect no more than 90 days, but Sternfels said the bill provides two qualifications.

"The first is an additional discretionary period of 30 days, and the second appears to provide for unlimited continuance so long as the president determines a severe petroleum supply interuption exists at least every 120 days," he said.

The refiners policy statement said decontrol will promote the search for new oil supplies, the development of alternative fuels, and encourage conservation.

"Together these developments will reduce our dependence on foreign imports," the refiners said.

"The United States should send a clear message to the world that a strong domestic refining industry is important to our national security and that we will take the steps necessary to prevent that industry from being threatened by increased product imports."

TVA official knocks gas

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The angry consumers of the 1980s will be those who were persuaded to buy homes fueled with natural gas, says the chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

David Freeman addressed a panel topic Friday of "The Energy Crisis of 1981: Does it Exist?" and said, "The flat answer for electrical power is 'no.' "

"There is no shortage today in the nation and there is not apt to be one in the 1980s," he said.

Freeman appeared on an energy panel with four others, including economics professor Morris Adelman of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and William Hogan of the John F. Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University.

The panel was part of a symposium sponsored by the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs, the LBJ Library and the Brookings Institution in Washington.

"It is not against conservation to talk about electricity as a substitute for oil," said Freeman.

He said the TVA would be in the "catbird's seat" in the 1980s, with adequate energy supplies at competitive rates, but private utilities are hampered by public commissions — responding to consumer demands — that do not grant high enough rates.

Adelman said "panic" has been most important in the Mideast oil cartel's dictating higher oil prices to the world. "The loss of panic would be the loss of its (OPEC's) most important weapon," he said.

Adelman said, however, oil consumption in the non-Communist world outside the OPEC countries has declined for the past seven years and is expected to decline further in 1981, which would be an unprecedented eight-year slide.

Adelman predicted cartel countries would "ultimately raise the price (of oil) too far for their own good."

He and Hogan disagreed over whether America has any bargaining power with OPEC.

Four-rig increase logged on Permian Basin survey

The rig count last week for the Permian Basin Empire of West Texas and Southeast New Mexico was 381, an increase of four over the previous count of 377, according to the Reed Rock Bit Co.'s weekly survey.

Last Year, at this time 299 rigs were turning to the right.

Forty rigs, a decrease of two from the last report, were working in Lea County, New Mexico.

Eddy County, again in second place, reported 35 rotaries working. This was an increase of two units.

Still the West Texas leader, Pecos County had 22 working units, an increase of two.

Reed's survey also showed Crockett and Loving and Ward counties with 16 each, while Andrews County had 15.

Other counties with 10 or more were: Irion, 11; Upton, 11; Ector 10 and Reagan, 10.

'Depressed' Citicorp worker gets $2.2 million settlement

NEW YORK (AP) — An emotionally disabled 46-year-old ironworker, who became depressed after an injury because he couldn't "bring home the bacon," was awarded $2.2 million Friday by a Manhattan jury, his lawyer said.

Anthony Torcivia developed a "severe reactive depression" after he suffered fractures in a 12-foot fall while working at the Citicorp building on May 10, 1976, according to attorney Ivan Schneider.

Schneider said his client was working on the 40th-level steel beam of the Manhattan building when he tripped over an improperly placed metal brace.

Americans change diets toward better nutrition

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Americans say they are changing their diets because of concerns about health and nutrition, but many people remain confused about what's best for them, the Department of Agriculture says.

The department's Economics and Statistics Service conducted a study involving 37 food and beverage categories. People were asked whether they were eating more or less of each item and why.

Almost two-thirds of those questioned — 64 percent — said they had made some dietary changes in the last three years for reasons of health. In general, people said they were consuming fewer calories, using less sugar and eating less fat.

Losing weight apparently is a key goal. Sixty-one percent of the people questioned said someone in their household had tried to slim down in past year. Forty-three percent of te people ho said they had changed their eating habits said they did so to cut calories.

Just over half of the people studied said they wanted to reduce the amount of sugar they consumed, and 91 percent agreed with the statement: "Just about everyone should eat less sugar andh sweeteners." At the same time, however, 70 percent of those questioned said they ate cake, pie or other sweet baked goods at least once a week.

A similar type of contradiction was apparent when it came to salt. Nearly nine people in 10 said they agreed that the more salt you eat, the greater the risk of high blood pressure. "In general," the study said, "Americans consume far more sodium than needed." But when people were asked about their own diets, 46 percent of those questioned — almost half the total — said they did not think changing their current eating habits regarding salt would improve their health.

The study showed some confusion and skepticism over the severity of risks from poor eating habits and over the effect of changes in diet. The survey respondents were asked what they would do in two hypothetical situations — first, if scientific tests found that an essential ingredient in a food they ate regularly caused cancer in laboratory animals, and second, if they were told that foods they ate regularly could increase their chances of having a heart attack. In both cases, only about one-third of those questioned said they would stop eating the food or foods in questions.

Aminoil acquires leases

HOUSTON — Aminoil USA, Inc., has acquired from Nicor Exploration Co. and Longhorn Oil and Gas Co. rights to conduct exploration and production operations on oil and gas leases covering about 45,800 gross acres in southern Louisiana's Tuscaloosa Trend.

The four-year agreement represents Aminoil's first significant exploration effort in the Tuscaloosa Trend, which is an area of increasing exploration and development activities.

Geographically, the Trend is a 20-to-30 mile-wide deep gas-bearing belt. It extends 200 miles from Vernon and Beauregard Parishes east-southeat through Baton Rouge and north of New Orleans into the Chandeleur Sound of the Gulf of Mexico.

Under the terms of the exploration agreement, Aminoil will acquire from Nicor and Longhorn a 40 percent working interest in a 28,000 net acre interest held by the two companies. The 40 percent working interest represents about 11,000 acres net in exploration properties for Aminoil.

The agreement calls for Aminoil to participate in drilling up to three exploratory wells over the four-year period.

It is anticipated that Aminoil will be the operator on most wells drilled under the agreement.

129 discoveries reported

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Drillers reported 65 gas and 64 oil discoveries in January, the Texas Railroad Commission reported Friday.

The results compare with January 1980's 138 gas and 43 oil finds, the regulatory agency said.

Gas finds included 23 in Southeast Texas, 12 in deep South Texas, 10 in the Refugio area, five in the San Angelo area, three each in East Texas, West Central Texas, the Panhandle and the Midland area, two in North Texas and one in the San Antonio area.

Oil discoveries included 11 in West Central Texas, 10 in the San Angelo area, nine in deep South Texas, seven in the San Antonio area, six each in Southeast Texas and the Lubbock area, five in the Refugio area, four in North Texas, three in East Texas, two in the Midland area and one in the Panhandle.

Exploration activity and field tests resulted in 433 dry holes during January, the commission said.

Cover up charge made

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Accusations contained in a stockholders' suit allege that San Diego Gas & Electric Co. has been trying to cover up reasons for $26 million in losses in an oil-exchange deal with a Houston firm.

A utility spokesman said Thursday that full details had been disclosed but declined further comment until the suit is studied.

The federal class-action suit was filed here Wednesday by attorney Keith F. Park in behalf of stockholders David and Audrey Rabinowitz of New York City. It lists several alleged violations of the Securities and Exchange Act and asks unspecified damages for losses from the 1979 deal with United Petroleum Distributors, Inc.

The utility said last Nov. 3 that it was taking a $26 million loss reserve against an obligation allegedly owed by United Petroleum with the possibility of an additional $4.6 million loss.

The reserve amounted to 40 percent of the utility's 1979 net income, resulting in a 39-cent loss per share for the third quarter of 1980 "instead of what would have been a profit of 13 cents (per share)," the suit said.

Discovery gets approval

AUSTIN — Discovery Operating, Inc., of Midland has won Railroad Commission authorization to sell casinghead gas from leases on West Texas public lands for ultimate use outside of the state.

The sale, limited by the RRC to production from four existing wells and a permitted well to be drilled in Andrews County's Block 11 (lower Wichita), Embar (Permian), and Embar (5600) filed area, involves an estimated 380 million cubic feet of gas reserves. Northern Natural Gas Co. is the purchaser.

The leases covered in the Discovery-Northern Natural Gas contract are on University of Texas lands.

The RRC order also limits the term of the sale to 10 years from the effective date of purchase contract between Discovery and Northern Natural Gas.

BCC founded in Midland

BCC Engineering, Inc., has been founded in Midland to furnish engineering expertise and construction management to the oil and gas industry.

It was reported earlier, through error, that the name of the firm is BBC Engineering.

R. Clark Butts has been named president and chief executive officer. He is a graduate of Texas Tech University with a B.S. degree in Mechanical Engineering, and has extensive experience in the design and development of natural gas treating plants, liquid recovery plants, compression stations and sulfur recovery plants.

Butts is a registered professional engineer, a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, the National Society of Professional Engineers, the Society of Petroleum Engineers and the Permian Basin Chapter of the Texas Society of Professional Engineers.

Butts has served as a plant engineer and mechanical engineer for The Ortloff Corp., and as a project engineer for E. I. DuPont.

Cast has 15 years experience in design coordination. At BCC he is responsible for total piping design and drafting efforts as well as assisting in the review of job specifications and vendor drawings.

Cameron received a master's degree in Chemical Engineering from Rice University. As process engineer for BCC, he is responsible for the development of process designs, equipment specifications and evaluation, line and valve sizing, and plant simulations using computer technology. He also is assisting in cost estimating and cost control activities.

Conoco announces huge oil refinery project

LAKE CHARLES, La. — Conoco Inc. has announced one of the largest refinery projects in the company's history. The plan calls for nearly $200 million to be spent modifying Conoco's Lake Charles, La., refinery to process heavy, sour (high sulfur) crude oils.

Ozzie Newell, the company's executive vice president for refining, said the new facilities will allow "more of the 'bottom of the barrel' to be converted into needed light oil products" including diesel, home heating oil, petrochemical feedstocks and jet fuel.

"The Lake Charles sour crude conversion is a major step in Conoco's efforts to increase its refining flexibility and lessen its dependence on sweet (low sulfur) crudes which are becoming scarce and more expensive," he said.

According to industry estimates, worldwide proven reserves of sour crudes are several times greater than sweet crude reserves.

"The ability to handle heavy, sour crudes is not only important to Conoco and other refiners, but to the nation.

Journal predicts production climb

TULSA, Okla. — World offsore crude oil production will climb by at least 500,000 barrels a day and perhaps as much as 1 million barrels a day this year, Oil & Gas Journal says in its Feb. 9 issue.

Almost all the gain will be from non-Communist countries, which should produce more than 12.4 million barrels a day from offsore provinces during the year. Comparable production in 1980 was about 11.9 million barrels a day.

Those figures reflect the best guesses of industry and government specialists, the weekly business magazine reports. The specialists point out that an accurate tally of worldwide results must wait until more state and private producers post fourth quarter 1980 production figures.

But industry and government officials do not hesitate to say where the gains will be generated. They all point to Mexican and North Sea developments as well as work in other fields worldwide.

Petroleos Mexicanos (Pemex), Mexico's state oil company, anticipates offsore production of 1.27 million barrels a day of crude oil and 800 million cubic feet a day of natural gas by December 1982. That compares with 790,700 barrels a day of oil and 356.5 million cubic feet a day of natural gas at year end 1980.

Pemex points out that production goals must fall in line with the country's policy of supplying domestic needs plus a maximum export of 1.5 million barrels e day of crude oil and 300 million cubic feet a day of natural gas.

North Sea production was held to a 2.14 million barrel a day average during 1980 because of weather, labor, and technical difficulties. Biggest producers were the U.K. sector wth a 1.61 million barrel a day average and the Norway sector with a 558,000 barrel a day average. Industry expects U.K. production to climb to almost 2 million barrels a day this year. Norway production will be boosted in part by giant Statfjord fields.

U.S. Outer Continental Shelf (OCS) liquids production is expected to decline 4 to 5 percent this year from 1980 levels. But 1981 natural gas production is expected to be unchanged from 1980 levels. Estimated year end 1980 OCS production was about 754,246 barrels a day of crude oil and condensate and 12.78 billion cubic feet a day of natural gas.

Meanwhile, the Soviet Union, the world's biggest oil producer, failed to meet its offsore oil production goal during the recently completed 10th Five Year Plan (1976-1980), but gas flow continued its steady growth

The U.S.S.R. no longer discloses official figures on offshore oil output, but it is believed that 1980 crude and condensate production was close to the 195,000 barrels a day estimated for 1979. Offshore gas production reached a record 1.23 billion cubic feet a day in 1980, up from about 1.16 billion cubic feet a day in 1979.

The world's near-term offshore production increases will come from established producing areas, the Journal says. It will be many years before flow can begin from discoveries in frontier areas such as the Grand Banks, Scotian shelf, and Beaufort Sea off Canada and the Baltimore Canyon off the U.S. East Coast. No strikes in those areas have been declared commercial.

But recent discoveries promise steady output growth in the years ahead.

And as industry advances drilling and production technology, it will move into new frontiers of deep water and hostile environments--the keys to the long-term future of offsore production, the Journal says.

WPC changed to Bell Petroleum

Bell Petroleum Services, Inc., of Midland, formerly WPC, Inc., will concentrate the next six months informing customers and vendors of their new name and new corporate identity.

Ed Runyan, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the energy service company, announced the name change.

"We've seen this name consolidation coming the last couple of years. We are the same company yet we are continuing to offer new services, broaden our product line and expand into new geographical markets," said Runyan of the 12-year-old company.

"It's our way of gearing up for Bell's projected growth. We wanted one name and one identity to reflect the solid, highly technological organization our organization represents."

The $14 million corporation specialized with three major lines; oil field rubber products, wireline products and services and laboratory analytical services.

All Bell divisions and subsidiaries will be unified with the corporate prefix, Bell.

The Bell rubber division constitutes the major product line and is wellknown in the oil and gas industry so we are extending that proven name, Bell, throughout our other companies." explained Runyan of the name selection.

"With the expansion of our markets in oil field rubber products, wireline services and laboratory services, we project corporate sales for the Bell companies to double by the mid-80s."

The oil field rubber services division is comprised of Bell Rubber Co., formerly WPC Bell Rubber, located in Fort Worth.

The wirelines products and service division is formed by two companies located in Fort Worth, Midland and Casper, Wyo. Bell Petroleum Systems was WPC Worth Systems and Bell Petroleum Surveys was WPC Worth Well Systems.

Laboratory and safety services in Midland and Casper are performed by Bell Petroleum Laboratory and Bell H2S Safety, formerly WPC PALS Service and WPC PALS Safety.

PRODUCTION SYSTEMS ANALYSIS

A ONE WEEK COURSE
Feb. 23 thru 27
Midland Hilton Inn

A Nodal (new and revolutionary) systems analysis approach for oil and gas wells.

This course is designed for Engineers, Managers and Field Foremen associated with Production Systems and Artificial Lift Planning.

Instructor:
Kermit E. Brown, Ph.D.

Each participant will receive Dr. Brown's three new books:

- Technology of Artificial Lift Methods. Vol. 1, inflow performance, multiphase flow in pipes, the flowing well.
- Technology of Artificial Lift Methods. Vol. II, beam pumping, gas lift, electrical pumping, hydraulic piston pumping, jet lift, plunger lift, other methods of lift and comparison of methods (2 books).
- Vol. III, 2200 pages of new gradient curves including vertical multiphase flow, horizontal multiphase flow, gas production and gas injection curves. (scale = 20,000 ft. by 5600 psi.) (2 books).

This course will show you how you can SAVE MONEY and INCREASE PRODUCTION by:

- Changing the separator pressure
- Changing the flow line size
- Changing tubing size
- Increasing perforation shot density
- Placing well on Artificial Lift
- Applying Nodal Systems Analysis to entire system
- Knowing how to predict flow capacity of oil and gas wells

QUESTIONS TO BE ANSWERED IN THIS COURSE

- Production rates possible - oil or gas?
- Tubing size correct?
- Flowline size correct?
- Enough perforations?
- Completion problems - gravel pack or other restrictions?
- Safety valve sized and set correctly?
- Is surface choke necessary and is it sized correctly?
- Should be on Artificial Lift?

The above questions will be answered in detail by:

- Showing methods for predicting the flow rates possible from oil and gas wells.
- Showing how to use gradient curves and computerized multiphase flow correlations to select tubing sizes for vertical or directional wells.
- Showing how to use gradient curves or multiphase flow correlations to select flow lines for either horizontal or inclined flow.
- Presenting a complete systems analysis to show the effect of perforation shot density. A standard shot density of 4 to 8 shots per foot may not be sufficient.
- Applying the Nodal Systems principle to check the effect of restrictions such as gravel pack.)
- Applying the Nodal Systems approach to see if the safety valve is sized correctly and check to see if it will close correctly.
- Applying the Nodal Systems approach to correctly size a choke for a certain flow rate and to see if the choke should be eliminated.
- Applying systems analysis to see what effect the separator pressure has on the entire system. A correct setting of the separator pressure, in particular for a closed rotative gas lift system, may show a tremendous rate of return on investment.
- Working example problems to show: (a) the rate possible by natural flow, (b) the rate possible by artificial lift.

WE WILL SHOW YOU:

- How a change in separator pressure will save money with no loss in production.
- How a change in flowline size or separator pressure may prevent buying additional compressor H.P. for gas lift.
- How increasing the perforation shot density may double the production on gas wells.
- Why the tubing size may be too small or possibly too large
- How to predict the flow capacity of oil and gas wells.
- Other production problems.

Government plans for shortage called bunch of 'claptrap'

By ROBERT A. ROSENBLATT
The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — To Emilio E. Baranini, a member of the California Energy Commission, the federal government's on-again-off-again plans for dealing with any future gasoline shortage are a bunch of "claptrap."

And as it turns out, a lot of people in Washington agree with him.

If America's foreign oil supplies are curtailed again and the country plunges into another oil-gasoline shorage, the burden of dealing with the crisis will, most likely, fall on oil companies, electric utilities, state officials and individual citizens — not the federal government.

It has become clear that Washington will intervene only as a last resort. After two chaotic experiences with long gasoline station lines in six years, the federal government still is ill-equipped to deal with a crisis in oil.

Gasoline rationing, kicked around in Congress and the Executive Branch for several years, has been abandoned as unworkable. So disillusioned was the Reagan administration that it canceled the budget request of former President Carter for $35 million to prepare a rationing plan authorized by Congress.

To top it all off, every state except Nebraska has ignored a request by the federal government that the states join in a complex and cumbersome emergency planning program.

It was in the face of this situation that Baranini and other members of the California commission, having summarily dismissed the federal government's planning programs as unworkable and too expensive, came up with a program of their own.

According to Baranini, several other states have asked California to act as a "proxy" in presenting emergency energy ideas to the federal government.

To be issued within six weeks, the California blueprint — which still would need legislative approval — would provide, among other things, for the following actions:

—Local governments would be ordered within five hours after the declaration of an emergency, to begin steps t shorten waiting lines at gasoline service stations. Police would enforce minimum purchase requirements to prevent "tank-topping." Service stations would stay open for specified periods, and "odd-even" plans restricting purchases to certain days of the week would be instituted.

—Electric utilities would be directed to reduce their use of fuel oil through the purchase of additional power generated by hydroelectric units in the Pacific Northwest. Production at nuclear power generating plants would be increased.

—An emergency windfall profits tax would be imposed to capture extra funds resulting from any sudden rise in gasoline prices. Money would be rebated to the public through a reduction in the state sales tax, or lower withholding rates on state income taxes.

—Incentives would be provided for agriculture and industry, possibly through tax credits, to increase their storage of gasoline and diesel fuel in preparation for an emergency.

—California refineries would be encouraged to add equipment enabling them to process more of the thick, heavy crude oil that is abundant in the state.

—Demand for gasoline would be reduced through such drastic steps as "car-less" days or mandatory three-day holiday weekends. These steps would be taken only after all other measures had failed, because of the devastating impact they would have on the state's economy.

But his department's ow, office of consumer affairs acknowledges that Washington's abilities are limited.

"Federal initiatives, although vitally important to effective management, have little direct impact on ind8vidual citizen needs during times of emergency," said Tina Hobson, director of the consumer aff$irs office.

Her office has issued 125,000 copies of a special guide called "Community Alert: Preparing for Energy Emergencies." Perhap its most valuable section is a state-by-state list of telephone numbers that consumers can call in a oil-gasoline em3rgency.

For example, there are numbers that poor people can dial to get help in paying their higher fuel bills, or th$t the elderly can call for special help. The guide is available from the Department of Energy, Office of Consumer Affairs, Washington, D.C. 20585.

Hobson's guide cites several examples of "coping with shortage." When natural gas was cut off in 1977 to Crystal City, Texas, local citizens used mesquite, a waste wood, and surplus army stoves costing $15 each, as a substitute heating system.

In Fitchburg, Mass., the Oilmen's Association, a group of oil dealers, contributed 1,000 gallons to a standy pool for distribution in emergencies. In a nearby community "a list was developed of homes where elderly people were welcome in an emergency and the town hall and local schools were studied as possible shelters.

"Every meeting I go to, people want to know, 'what can we do if the oil is cut off,'" Hobson said in a recent interview. "I tell them the federal government will do what it can, but the real focus is on you and your commu,ity."

Efforts by the Department of Energy to deal with an emergency have been hamper3d by fragmentation and confusion. Emergency planning has been centered in the Economic Regulatory Administration, while the gasoline rationing program was placed under the department's chief financial officer, and liasion with states was conducted from the solar and conservation division.

The federal government's basic emergency plan was drafted in the fall of 1980 when the outbreak of war between Iran and Iraq removed four million barrels daily from the world oil trade.

Government planners reviewed the steps that they could take, and pared a long list down to a handful of suggestions that would keep Washington on the sidelines, letting private industry distribute scarce supplies.

There were four major suggestions:

—Inventory management. Oil companies would continue to market gasoline, heating oil, jet fuel and other products with the government keeping an eye on the size of stockpiles. Basically, the oil companies would handle the crisis, moving supplies from surplus regions to areas where products were scarce. Government efforts to direct supplies were considered unworkable, based on experience during the 1979 fuel shortage.

—Fuel switching. Electric utilities would burn oil as generator fuel and businesses using oil would be urged to cut their consumption of scarce petroleum. Businesses could switch to natural gas if they had dual heating system$. Electric companies would increase their use of coal-fired or nuclear power plants.

—Stock drawdowns. If lines began appearing at gasoline stations, the government would first suggest, then order, oil companies to reduce stockpiles of crude oil and gasoline, making more gasoline available to retail stations.

—A fee or tariff would be imposed to discourage oil imports.

The plan called for federal intervention only if the private sector — oil companies and utilities — failed to cope with the problem. An unusual surplus of both crude oil and products, combined with the smooth operations of marketing systems, has made direct federal action unnecessary since the Persian Gulf war erupted.

In any future scarcity, the federal government would probably intervene only to deal with spot problems. For example, a shortage of gasoline in a remote farming area might require an order from Washington for an oil company to send a special shipment t the region. Otherwise, the government would restrict its activities to "monitoring the situation carefully," a key planner at the Department of Energy said.

If a gasoline shortage was severe enough, prices would skyrocket, and the government would have to intervene, according to this planner.

"If gas is $1.50, and suddenly it goes to $6, the government probably would have to step in to stop violence at the service stations," the official said, adding that Washington then would undoubtedly move to roll back prices, or capture the huge profits through a special tax.

In all events but the most dire emergency, however, state and federal government officials hope that private companies and individual citizens can work out the problem without Washington's intervention.

BALA CYNWYD, Pa. (AP) — Oil supplies will be adequate for at least the next 10 years, largely because rising prices will force conservation in the major industrial countries, an oil analyst predicted Friday.

William H. Brown, the director of energy forecasting for Chase Econometrics, a subsidiary of Chase Manhattan Bank, said that goals for increased use of fuels other than oil probably will not be met, but "fortunately, they won't have to be."

At a summit meeting in Venice, Italy, last year, the leaders of 11 top industrial nations set a goal of increasing the use of other fuels by the equivalent of 15 million to 20 million barrels of oil a day by 1990. Brown said the 11 nations "will be lucky to make a 13 million barrel increase by then" because coal use will not double as planned.

But he said the Venice goal of reducing oil imports by 4 million barrels a day by 1985 "will be no problem at all for the Big 11, thanks mainly to the substitution and conservation pressures caused by rapid oil price rises through the 1980s."

Because the less developed countries will continue to increase oil use, Brown said total world oil usage is expected to grow less than 1 percent a year to a total of 58.6 milion barrels per day by 1990.

"Oil supplies in the 1980s will be adequate, given total requirements," he said. "Production in Iran will eventually improve, and output from the United Kingdom North Sea should increase to about 2.5 million barrels a day by 1990. And because of higher world oil prices, U.S. crude production will decline at a much slower rate than previously anticipated."

The forecast was part of a Chase forecast of world economic trends in the next decade. It did not specify how large a price increase in oil was expected.

ND oil discovery completed

The well, No. 21-9 Rauch-Shapiro, flowed 44-degree gravity oil at a rate 264 barrels and 240,000 cubic feet of gas per day through a 12/64-inch choke. Flowing tubing pressure was 1,100 pounds.

Drilled to a depth of 12,765 feet, the well was perforated for testing in the Bakken formation between 10,512 and 10,534 feet. Nearest production from the Bakken formation is five miles northeast at the Elkhorn Ranch field. The oil discovery is located about 45 miles northwest of Dickinson, North Dakota, in the Williston Basin.

Diamond Shamrock, the operator, holds approximately 42.7 percent interest in the well. Also with working interests are Apache Corp. (1980-1 Oil and Gas Program) 42.7 percent; Tenneco Oil Co., 13 percent; and Supron Energy Co., 1.6 percent.

Elcor announces increases

"Most of the gain in sales resulted from increased engineering and construction of process facilities for the energy industry," Campbell said.

Campbell said, "A loss of $.26 per share in the second quarter was in line with the company's earlier announcement that a loss of up to $.30 per chare could be expected for the quarter."

"Pretax losses of about $3.5 million from early operations at new manufacturing facilities more than offset profits in most other segments of our besiness."

The second quarter ordinary loss of $940,000 or $.26 per share compared with ordinary income of $1,988,000 or $.49 per share in the same quarter last year.

For the six months ending Dec. 31 sales of $120,139,000 were up from $88,202,000 and an ordinary loss of $650,000 or $.18 per share compared with ordinary income of $3,564,000 or $.88 per share in the same period last year.

Cosden Big Spring plant sets record

BIG SPRING — Cosden Oil and Chemical Co., a wholly owned subsidiary of American Petrofina, Inc., announced its Big Spring plant set a new all-time safety record for the company on Feb. 10th — two million manhours without a lost time accident.

The first milstone at the plant — one million manhours without a lost time accident — was established May 18, 1980. The last lost time injury at Cosden's Big Spring plant was Aug. 28, 1979.

Amoco production begins

NEW ORLEANS, La. — Amoco Production Co. said it has begun production from its Moore-Sams field in the Tuscaloosa Trend at a rate of 8.4 million cubic feet of natural gas and 376 barrels of condensate daily.

W. L. Adams, Amoco Production vice president and regional manager, said he expects production from the field to increase to about 30 million cubic feet of gas and 1,060 barrels of condensate daily by the end of January. The field's new gas sweetening plant has a design capacity of 60 million cubic feet of gas daily.

The initial production is from the No. 1 A. Wilberts & Sons Lumber Co., the western offset confirmation to Amoco's field discovery well, the No. 1 V. J. Hurst, completed in 1979. The compay plans to begin production from the Hurst well and from the No. 1 J. T. Butler, the eastern offset confirmation well, by the end of January.

The three wells produce from intervals between 18,000 and 19,000 feet and are the first to be completed in the field.

Station predicts high prices

HOUSTON (AP) — Gasoline prices of $1.75 to $1.80 a gallon by next fall or early winter have been predicted by a Houston service station operator.

Glenn Nilsson, executive director of the Lone Star Service Station Association, expressed doubt prices will level out after recent OPEC crude oil price hikes and President Reagan's decontrol of crude and gasoline prices.

"It is a shame and I don't know what in the world to do about it," Nilsson said Thursday.

On Wednesday, the American Automobile Association's Texas Division at least one Texas service station already has prices as high as $1.50 and a number of others as high as $1.45.

"Since decontrol, we are looking at a 9.1-cent wholesale increase from major suppliers," Nilsson said, adding that retailers have no choice but to pass the increases on to motorists.

He said most pump prices are in line with the wholesale price hikes but that some grocery and convenience store retailers that maintain higher profit margins have increased prices 11 to 12 cents a gallon.

Nilsson said OPEC price increase will affect world markets and this, combined with decontrol, will likely lead to steady price increases for months.

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Grand Banks Energy Company of Midland has applied to register $144,000 in securities in Texas as part of a proposed oil drilling project.

The application was filed Jan. 8 with the State Securities Board.

Grand Banks plans to register approximately $5 million in securities throughout the country, Dyke Bennett, a board securities analyst, said Wednesday.

The board must find the application to be "fair, just and equitable" to the public before the securities may be registered in the state, Bennett said.

Once begun, the approval process takes about one week, if the application has no problems, Bennett said. He added that Grand Banks had registered securities in the state last year.

In this artist's conception, James Cash Penney personally delivers to housewives handbills announcing grand opening of his Golden Rule store, at that time a new concept that offered quality merchandise on a cash-and-carry basis at a single price plainly marked for all customers.

Penney's had small start

Referred to as one of the great "merchant princes" of history, James Cash Penney was a plain, devout man who was born and raised in poverty on the Missouri frontier. In 1902, at age 26, he opened his first store in Kemmerer, Wyo., a small mining town. The department store chain he founded, now one of the nation's largest corporations, still bears the indelible mark of his personality.

The son of James Cash and Mary Frances Penney, he was born on Sept. 16, 1875, near Hamilton, Mo. He was one of 12 children, six of whom lived to adulthood. His father, a farmer on weekdays, preached on Sundays.

The family was poor, and young Jim Penney had to earn his own way beginning at age eight. After school, he ran errands, farmed and showed trading talent in various ventures of his own devising.

After graduation from Hamilton High, he became an apprentice clerk in the drygoods store of J.M. Hale and Brother in February, 1895. His entire salary for the year was $25.

The next year it jumped to $200. But in the previous year, his father had died, leaving the farm and home heavily mortgaged. Redoubling his efforts, young Penney soon strained his health. On doctor's orders, he went west to Denver, Colo.

After clerking briefly in several Denver stores, he used his entire savings to buy a butcher shop in the small town of Longmont, 40 miles away. When Penney refused to bribe the chef at the local hotel with a bottle of whiskey as requested, he lost the hotel's business and failed.

Without funds, he sought a clerk's job in the drygoods store of T.M. Callahan and Company. He got the job, which eventually led to fame and fortune.

Penney has been credited with originating the idea of a store chain in which each manager has the practical autonomy of a partner. However, Penney gave credit to Callahan and his partner, Guy Johnson, who planned to create in small towns of the Rockies a number of stores, each managed by a partner rather than an employee.

Ambitious and tireless, Penney first worked for Callahan in Longmont, then for Callahan and Johnson in the partners' store in Evanston, Wyo. In 1902, he opened the "Golden Rule" store in Kemmerer as the firm's third partner.

The local bank advised against the move, since three previous efforts to compete with the store operated by a mining firm had failed. The company store offered advance credit against wages. The miners usually were in debt to the store and often received little or no cash on payday.

Despite these handicaps, Penney did a brisk business from the day he opened. He offered many small items and emphasized maximum service. Although he adhered to a strict cash policy, he soon was outselling the company store.

By 1910, there were 14 stores; by 1920, 297. Today, there are more than 2,000 J.C. Penney department stores in the U.S., Puerto Rico and Europe, along with discount-type stores, supermarkets, drug stores and insurance companies. The firm employs nearly 200,000 "associates," as the company calls its employees.

Many features of the early days still characterize the chain. Store managers enjoy autonomy, and the chance to share in company profits continues to be a potent motivating factor.

Penney was president of the firm until 1917, when he became chairman of the board. In April, 1958, at 82 he stepped down as chairman, but continued as a board member until his death in 1971 at the age of 95.

Fighting the arsonist

In the wake of the second deadly hotel fire in Las Vegas in the past three months, there is a clear mandate for swift and sure justice.

The fire, at the Las Vegas Hilton this week, took the lives of eight people and injured about 200 others. The cause apparently was arson and a 23-year-old busboy at the hotel has been arrested and booked on eight counts of murder and one count of arson.

Actually, the death toll could have been much higher. Fortunately it wasn't. Thousands of other people fled the building as the fire — actually four separate blazes — raged. Another 110 people were rescued from the hotel's roof by helicopters.

The Hilton fire, while not as deadly as the MGM Grand Hotel fire about three months ago that killed 84 people and injured 700 others, still reaffirmed an earlier fear: Fires in large, high-rise hotels can be extremely deadly and firefighting efforts may prove only minimally effective on them.

Ladder trucks may be too short to reach people trapped on upper floors, as they were in the MGM fire and the Hilton fire. Sprinkler systems, when present, may prove to be only minimally effective.

The horror of such fires in high-rise facilities surely must be that there are few, if any, escape routes available. So people perish.

The next question is this: If society cannot rely on technological advances in firefighting to protect us from ourselves — such as firetrucks with taller ladders or sprinkler systems that are capable of controlling major blazes — and if such equipment is prohibitively expensive, what do we do?

We rely on fire and police officers to help apprehend those who threaten our safety. But the job doesn't stop there.

Next we rely on our courts to administer justice in a manner that will set the record straight once and for all. The message should be loud and clear: Those who will bring death and injury to others by means of fire will find no mercy in the courts.

Who's keeping books?

Bookkeeping on travel for federal employees is such a loose operation that a government study has been unable to determine the purpose of some 3 million trips.

The study was for the 1979 fiscal year. It was found that 27 percent of the journeys made by employees of 26 federal departments and agencies were for unknown purposes.

During the time period, more than 16 million government-worker trips were taken to the tune of $2.9 billion. Most of this travel was done by the Defense Department, and its bill alone totaled $1.8 billion.

We're not saying the travel wasn't necessary; it may have been. Perhaps the Reagan administration will have the urge to institute better bookkeeping practices.

Being a little curious isn't all bad. If more precise questions were asked, perhaps there would be fewer travel requests. The taxpayers would like that.

ART BUCHWALD

Nagasaki won't even count after San Francisco's gone

Art Buchwald

There is entirely too much talk lately about nuclear war. First we had Secretary of State Alexander Haig testify in front of a Senate Committee that there were worse things in this world than nuclear war. Then we had Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger pushing for a neutron bomb. Everyone suddenly seems to be thinking the unthinkable.

My friend Alabaster, who is getting nervous about all this nuclear saber-rattling, has a theory as to what is causing it.

"The problem is that for 35 years our measuring stick for atomic holocaust has been Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

"Every time someone wants to make an atomic weapon comparison he says: 'This warhead packs 1,000 times the wallop of the bomb dropped on Hiroshima.' Or 'This artillery shell will give you 30 times more punch than what we did to Nagasaki.'

"These stats don't have relevance anymore. Hiroshima and Nagasaki are part of ancient history and have no meaning for the people running the world today. We have to come up with a new yardstick to give them some idea of what atomic weapons can do."

"What do you suggest?" I asked him.

"I have a modest proposal," Alabaster said. "We need two new examples to demonstrate how awesome nuclear war is, so it will sober up politicians, military men and statesmen, not only here but in the Soviet Union."

"All right," I agreed. "What do you have in mind?"

"We should permit the United States and the U.S.S.R. to fire off their largest nuclear weapon at just one Soviet and one U.S. city, to prove how powerful the weapons really are."

"Why not?" I said.

"Moscow and Washington would be off limits because we don't want to eliminate the leaders of both countries, or the lesson would be lost on them," he continued. "We must select two beautiful cities that have tremendous sentimental meaning for the people of the respective countries. I would suggest the U.S. 'nuke' Leningrad, and the U.S.S.R. 'nuke' San Francisco."

"Why Leningrad?" I asked,

"It is without a doubt the loveliest city in the Soviet Union, with magnificent palaces, irreplaceable architecture, and one of the great museums of the world."

"Why San Francisco?"

"Everyone loves San Francisco. One easily can leave his heart there."

"What will it prove?" I asked.

"When the Russians see the devastation one American weapon has done to its beloved Leningrad they will realize that the United States is not stockpiling Tinker Toys.

"And in turn the Americans who have been discussing nuclear war as some kind of military Super Bowl will have second thoughts about solving its foreign problems with atomic weapons. With Leningrad and San Francisco 'nuked,' we won't need Hiroshima and Nagasaki anymore to point out the dangers of a new war.

"But my modest proposal has a second benefit. We and the Soviets have spent a bundle on nuclear arms, and both sides deserve to shoot off at least one in anger during our lifetime, if for no other reason than to see firsthand that we got our money's worth."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Intelligence sources see U.S.-Cuba detente

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — Intelligence sources have raised an intriguing possibility: a rapprochement between the United States and Cuba. At first blush, the suggestion seems so far-fetched as to be dismissed outright. But stranger things have happened in the ideological zigzags of the Cold War.

If the implacable anti-communist Richard Nixon could open up the Red regime on mainland China, it is not beyond the realm of possibility that Ronald Reagan could achieve detente with Cuba's Fidel Castro.

Normalization of relations with Castro would undercut the Soviets and produce a dramatic international turnaround — all at small cost to President Reagan, beyond the doctrinaire howls of unrelenting anti-communist dogmatists. And as Nixon's China caper demonstrated, a Republican in the White House can pull off this kind of political heresy without the cries of "Treason!" that would greet a Democrat who tried it.

Be that as it may, the whole idea naturally depends more on Premier Castro than on President Reagan. And here's where the scenario begins to get fascinating. My sources tell me Castro is fed up to here with his superiors in the Kremlin.

The youthful guerrilla leader whose ragtag troops threw out the corrupt dictatorship of Fulgencio Batista 21 years ago is now 54 years old. He's getting bald and a bit paunchy, but his massive ego and his dreams of glory are apparently intact.

Castro has undisputed control of his little island and its 9.6 million inhabitants. But what he apparently yearns for — deeply — is the position of Third World leader that was held for many years by the late Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia.

Castro's earlier dream of being a latter-day Simon Bolivar who would orchestrate popular revolutions throughout Latin America, came crashing down in ill-starred uprisings during the early years of his regime. But he still hopes to achieve a place in history as the recognized leader of the 90-odd nations in the so-called non-aligned movement. It's a position that would make him a leading actor on the world stage, upholding the Third World's gossamer-like values in the sordid power plays between East and West.

But Castro has a huge problem. Unlike Marshal Tito, who broke with the Kremlin three years after his Soviet-supported victory in Yugoslavia, Castro has slipped increasingly in debt to the Russians as every year goes by. And, what is worse, from his viewpoint, he has been unable to keep his vassalage to the Soviets a secret. Castro is widely perceived in the Third World as little more than a Kremlin stooge.

To a man of Fidel Castro's self-esteem, this well-deserved reputation as a marionette who dances every time Leonid Breznhev pulls the strings has apparently become intolerable. He recognizes his folly, and is even willing to admit it. Last summer, at the first anniversary celebration of the Nicaraguan revolution, Castro warned the Sandinista leaders not to make the mistake he did by "getting into bed" with the Russians.

What keeps Castro locked in the Russian bear's crushing embrace, of course, is the billions in Soviet aid that keeps the mismanaged Cuban economy barely viable. Without the infusion of $10 million a day in aid from Moscow, Castro's government would collapse.

Soviet oil fills virtually all of Cuba's energy needs. Two disastrous sugar cane and tobacco harvests in a row have put Cuba hopelessly in debt to the Russians.

Just how deeply is Castro in thrall to the Kremlin? I reported 18 months ago on U.S. intelligence analysts' assessment of his situation. "The brash young Caribbean rebel of the mid-1960s has been replaced by a mature, responsible member of the (Soviet) team ..." the experts wrote. "The same firebrand who years ago had not hesitated to challenge Moscow on virtually any ideological tenet (now extols) the Soviet communists."

But deep in his soul, apparently, the old fire still burns. Intelligence sources say Castro still sees himself as the champion of the world's oppressed masses. "In opposing Western 'economic imperialism,' the remaining vestiges of European colonialism and white minority regimes of South Africa," a secret State Department report notes, "Castro brings to his mission an almost messianic zeal."

The Cuban dictator still retains his old charisma among Latin America's young militant radicals, who are willing to ignore his dependency on the Soviet Union. He even has a certain amount of respect among more moderate leaders in the hemisphere, who see the main enemy as the military-landowning oligarchs who have oppressed their nations for centuries.

And so far Castro has had no difficulty finding Cuban recruits for his military adventures abroad — for the pathetic reason that a soldier's pay is not only steady, but an improvement over the misery of life in the city slums or backbreaking work in the sugar-cane fields.

But sources told my associate Bob Sherman that Castro's overseas expeditions are increasingly unpopular at home. Cuban families with sons and husbands fighting and dying in Africa apparently see the foreign campaigns as less an idealistic struggle than as an attempt to fulfill Fidel Castro's waning dreams of international power.

And no matter how many Cuban young men he sacrifices in Angola and Ethiopia, Castro's hopes of achieving the prestige of Third World ascendancy are doomed as long as he continues to be perceived as a Kremlin lackey. Castro recognizes this, but so far hasn't figured a way out of his dilemma. Maybe an "opening" to the Reagan administration will strike him as worth trying.

Improving telephone manners in bureaucracy no easy task

Nick Thimmesch

WASHINGTON — Could it be? Could it really be that President Reagan's administration, his order to freeze federal hiring, and those ominous grunts and commands from David Stockman's office about budget slashing have shocked some government employees into better telephone manners?

Anyone in this town who must regularly phone federal offices comes to know what indifference, ignorance, run-around, and abrasive discourtesy are. It has been next to impossible to fire a federal employee protected by Civil Service and labor unions. Too many people on the federal payroll exploit this huge advantage when they answer some poor tax-paying soul on the telephone.

Jimmy Carter deserves credit for incorporating a telephone courtesy program into his administration's Civil Service Reform Act of 1978. But he learned, alas, that bureaucracy's wheels turn slowly, and unless the boss cracks down, many a desk-bound federal hired hand ignores such presidential wishes.

Still, in the Carter years, the Office of Personnel Management got a dozen agencies to pledge their sacred honor to the mission of getting employees to show some courtesy on the infernal but necessary instrument. As of Ronald Reagan's inauguration day, I couldn't detect much progress, however, and neither could any of my friends who also must dial federal numbers on a daily basis.

In the past few weeks, however, there seems to be a little more civility at the federal end of the telephone line. I know that the president has ordered a dress code for White House staffers — no one can appear on the premises in jeans or T-shirts. I know that members of the White House press corps have agreed to restrain themselves from jumping-jack exercises during Mr. Reagan's press conferences, and to no longer spit on the floor, or scratch themselves on camera. But has fear of firing spread across the bureaucracy, and, thus, are we now experiencing the glimmerings of better telephone manners?

The worst offense, perhaps, is for the federal employee to answer the phone indifferently, as though she or he — usually she — is doing you a favor.

You must almost resort to prosecutorial manner to get such dolts to tell you whether the person you are trying to reach is around. Ask when Mr. Humperdinck will be back, and the answer might be: "I don't know." Ask if he is indeed in today, and you get the same dull response. Could you find out? "Just a minute" is a likely reply, before you are put on hold. Next, you are on with someone else, explaining your business all over again.

Sometimes when you call, the employee doesn't even know the names of the top people in the department or what sections they head. I have the suspicion that such drones stumble into the building every day, poke their way through a desk, and are mostly interested in reading the paper, phoning friends, and visiting the bulletin board or snack shop. They are oblivious to what goes on in their departments, and their interest in finding out is next to nil. The drones at Health and Human Services and at Housing and Urban Development are the worst.

The run-around is the most exasperating experience. Say you have just asked Mary Wiggins about talking to boss Witherspoon, and Mary promises to call back. You wait for several hours, and finally call Mary and are told by Sam Somnambulist that Mary went home early and left no message for you. "What about my talking to Witherspoon?" you sputter. "He's out of town" could be the reply. Damnation. The run-around takes many such frustrating forms.

Some bureaucrats require that their help do a life history on callers and the reason they are calling. So you are asked for your name, affiliation, job description and the "nature of your call."

Sometimes, this is not easy to explain. If you are a free-lance journalist, answering to a dozen masters, it gets complicated. And if you unburden yourself to a secretary about why you are calling her or his boss — perhaps tipping the boss to the fact that you have some potentially embarrassing questions — you might not get your call returned.

Even if you do tell all, some secretaries might just switch the call to another employee who asks you to start all over again. Egads, that's aggravating. And if you raise your voice one decibel, you might well get a rude response. Ask such an employee for her or his name, and that person could well hang up.

Bad telephone manners are not peculiar to government. Telephone company operators, airline employees, and all manner of disinterested folk in the private sector, including educational institutions, can give you an equally bad time on the phone.

But to get this treatment from the people whose salary you are paying — namely, federal employees — could frost even the saintly Mother Theresa.

Some days, after going through too many vexations with the people who answer government telephones, I like to muse on the verse about Casey at the bat, and reflect that:

"Oh! Somewhere in this favored land the sun is shining bright; the band is playing somewhere, and somewhere hearts are light; and somewhere men are laughing and somewhere children shout" — but not in the federal bureaucracy.

Can Ronald Reagan and his band of no-nonsense folk change all this, or even make phoning a government office a little more bearable? Let's look at this one year from now.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Texas Legislature to consider Clayton's water trust fund proposal

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Within a day or two, Speaker Bill Clayton is expected to release legislation to implement the Springlake lawmaker's water trust fund proposal — for which Clayton already has introduced a constitutional amendment.

Amendment HJR 33 would set up three new funds in the State Treasury to receive surplus funds, assuming there are surplus funds available.

One fund would receive half of the surplus until that fund has sufficient monies to cover the principal and interest on all state bonds.

The other half of the money would go into a fund "dedicated for use for or in aid of water development, water conservation, or water quality enhancement purposes."

And after the first fund is filled up, the money would be allocated to a "special reserve fund," which the Legislature could transfer to other funds and other uses.

Clayton's proposal, not surprisingly, found instant popularity among East Texas lawmakers, and, a bit more surprisingly, support from Gov. Bill Clements, who concluded that the proposal would be a form of tax relief — something he has been advocating as a use for any surplus.

Clements also noted in his "State of the State" address shortly after the start of the legislative session — and has since repeated that position — that water is likely to be the most critical problem for Texans in the years ahead, unless steps are taken now to head off that impending crisis.

Both Clements and Clayton have said that the new water fund's first priority should be to supply water municipal needs — although there can be little question Clayton also wants to use the fund to help meet irrigation needs in his West Texas stomping grounds.

Depletion of the Ogallala Aquifer in the High Plains area has to rank as the number one water problem — and it is a regional problem, not merely a Texas problem — for the state over the long haul.

But the problem of municipal supply is an area which is of much concern to Texas officials, and which should be of greater concern to the state's population as a whole.

Texans got something of a reminder of what it was like during the last major drought of the 1950's during the past summer, during the persistent heat wave which resulted in city after city and water supplier after water supplier implementing some form of water rationing.

In many instances, however, the problem lay in distribution systems, which could not meet the need, rather than there simply not being enough water available.

Whether 1981 will see a repeat of the problems of 1980 will be known a few months from now.

But whatever happens this summer, it is an uncomfortable fact that Texas is facing some tough choices on water development in the immediate future.

Much of that situation is simply a reflection of the state's geography.

Basically, east of San Antonio, most of the time there'll be enough water to allow agriculture to take place without irrigation.

West of San Antonio, there's not much choice except to irrigate.

On the High Plains, the use of the Ogallala has made it possible for a major agricultural industry to develop in less than a century — really a remarkable phenomenon.

But the Ogallala is being used up at a rate much faster — 11 times faster in some cases — than it can recharge, meaning that water is going to have to come from somewhere else, or that ways are going to have to be found to farm using an awful lot less water, or that much of West Texas is going to have to shut down.

It's not just West Texans, however, who are going to be faced with problems of finding more water, however — Houston's water needs, like its needs for just about everything, are increasing, and Houston is going to be looking around more for additional supplies.

Houston's needs are compounded by the fact that it is having to move away from use of groundwater because of subsidence problems, which already are severe in some areas.

Houston's problems aren't immediate, either, but East Texas, the logical source for Houston to turn to, appears to be getting touchier about its water, too (having made if clear enough in the past that any effort to move East Texas water to West Texas would be unwelcome).

Conservation can help, but, as with energy, isn't a total answer to the problem.

Clayton's proposal for a water trust fund is one of the better efforts which has been made at finding a means to address the problem — at least from the financing side.

Water, like oil or gas, is a finite resource — although it is a semi-renewable resource.

The problem with water is that, unlike oil and gas, there's really nothing to substitute for it.

And that's the reason it makes good sense for the Legislature to take a look now at putting some money aside to have on hand for an un-rainy day.

Losing a pet

To The Editor:

It is a very tragic thing when dogs are run over by cars, but when its done on purpose by uncaring people that's when I have to speak up. The really sad part is that there is not a thing you can do against theses "uncaring" people.

I live on the dead end of a street, county Road 1223 South, where you'd think the threat of your pet being run over would be very slim. January 28, 1981, should of been a happy day for us, it was our son's second birthday, but it will always be marred with the death of our beloved pet, Fluffy. Fluffy was not only a dog, she was a member of our family. She was a wedding present to me five years ago from an uncle who has since passed away. Now Fluffy is gone.

Fluffy was a good dog. I watched over her carefully but this one day she decided to lay on the road and soak in some of the heat off the pavement when she was run over. She wasn't chasing this car, she wasn't even in the middle of the road, I never heard the car honk, I don't even believe this person cared enough to avoid her because the car ran completely over the top of her. Fluffy died of a severe concussion. I came outside just as it happened and I saw the car that ran over her, it was a person that lives down the same dead end road as I do. He drove back by to see what he'd done, but never stopped to say, "I'm sorry." This tells me how uncaring you are and I've wanted so much to knock on your door and say to you, "Why did you do it?" It was no accident that you ran over her, you did it on purpose and I just don't understand.

Back the bond

To The Editor:

Midland trustees are planning a school bond election in the spring. During the past years, as the cost-of-living has soared, more and more school bonds have been voted down.

My husband has been administrator for 26 years. This is my 23rd year in the classroom. We have six children, all of whom are teachers. Thus I feel I am acquainted with several views of school business and school problems.

I hope that Midland voters are smart enough to realize that when school trustees call for a bond election, they are asking for something that was neded probably three years earlier. School boards do not meet for the purpose of deciding who can come up with the best plan for spending the most money, or to see what they can dream up that will raise taxes the most! School trustees also pay school taxes!

Voting down a school bond, once, twice, or even more, ultimately results in passing a bond which provides much less in material, at MUCH greater cost! There is no reason what-so-ever, for any of us to think that anything we buy — services or materials — will be cheaper, six months or six years from now!

Please urge Midland voters to get behind their school trustees ad pass this upcoming bond! Building another school should not be a problem. Midland, more than any other area, should know that the biggest problem is government take-over!

OUT OF SIGHT, OUT OF MIND

True justice

To The Editor:

I would like the following letter published in your "Letters to The Editor" column.

The Honorable James Fitz-Gerald, Municipal Judge
Mr. Vern Martin, District Attorney
Mr. Wayne Gideon, Chief of Police
Mr. Mike Abramas, Assistat City Attorney

Dear Sirs:

A few days ago one of our young mentally retarded citizens was almost subjected to an injustice.

This was not the fault of any one person or persons, but the fault of some people's inability to recognize a mentally retarded person.

Thanks to your consideration and understanding this situation was promptly corrected.

Working with mentally retarded people is sometimes difficult and frustrating, but always rewarding. They are considered less fortunate than us, but in some ways they are more gifted. They have the same hopes, dreams and aspirations as we do, and they try continuously, with their maximum ability, to achieve these goals even though each step is more difficult for them than us, but they are proud of each step and they don't complain, wallow in self pity, nor quit trying. They want to take their place in a society they don't understand, mostly because they look at everything and everybody as being good and truthful, unfortunately, this is not always true.

There are many volunteers that work in the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens, which is maintained by private donations and the annual Hike-Bike Ride, incidently Midland has led the nation the last six years in this event, which shows you the generosity and consideration of this community.

You officials are a credit, not only to your profession, but also to this city. I am thankful that we have you and people like you who have the thankless job of taking care of and making the city of Midland the fine place it is to live and raise our families, and I hope that they will join me in saying thank you.

Out of Scouts?

To The Editor:

An unfortunate situation has developed, the ebb of Boy Scouting to its smallest numbers in well over a half century. This seems to result from several factors. One was a bad policy decision some 15 years ago, changing the emphasis from an outdoor program to an inner-city one. Ten years of this caused a reassessment and return to the out-of-doors, putting the "outing" back into Scouting.

The second factor seems to be a result of the tenor of the times. In our TV-oriented society, Scouting seems to have been neglected and ignored by parents, and as a result is no longer encouraged in and passed along to boys of Scouting age. How tragic.

Learning the skills of camping, meeting the challenge of outdoor survival, developing self-confidence and a sense of accomplishment...all of these are part of the delicious memories of my youth. In addition, the campfire camaraderie nurtured my first assimilation into a non-family society, the beginning of adulthood. I pity those boys who miss the experiences, the challenges, and the fun of Scouting.

A look at Lennon

To The Editor:

It is sad that so many are fooled, tricked or deluded into thinking that something is true when it is not.

What else could a person think when all he hears is that a person, such as John Lennon, was such a super person and such an extraordinary artist and a man full of love and peace. But what is often left unsaid ought to be said so people can make a proper judgment.

Some people would be able to "separate angels from non-angels" if they knew the above artist was an avowed atheist, a pusher for illicit drugs and a Marxist lyricist. Millions of young people have shown the effects of Lennon's lyrics against God and religion, patriotism and private property.

How people can be proud of someone whose hard rock hits openly pushed drug usage and sexual freedom among our young people, which sapped their strength and drained their brains, is unbelieveable. The love and peace this man espoused, through his music, didn't come from above and therefore was not nor is it something wholesome nor beneficial for one's well-being. Some people ought to check to see whether the attitudes and lives of people have been uplifted and bettered through the works of the man in question.

'Well done'

To The Editor:

Good job, Ted Battles, on your excellent press of Midland College Chap basketball, especially covering the weekly 6 p.m. Wednesday night barbeque at Conners on Illinois, where Chaparral boosters and fans are welcome to meet informally with this great bunch of young men and their talented Coaches Jerry Stone and Archie Myers.

Being an avid Chap fan and having attended all home games the past three years except two (due to illness), I really enjoy and appreciate the chance to get to know each Chap player and coach on one-to-one basis — besides that, Bob Preston Conner's barbeque beef, ham and ribs aren't that bad.

Chap basketball is exciting to watch, especially in such a facility as Chaparral Center. Therefore, I take this opportunity to invite your support and attendance to the short road trip to Big Spring Monday night February 16 for a Big-Shoot-Out with the Howard County Hawks. It would be great to fill Chaparral Center on Monday night February 23rd for the one remaining home game of the season against none other than Odessa College Wranglers.

Support Midland College and our Chaps and let them know we think that they are better than eighth in National Junior College rankings.

P.S. Job well done also to H.A. Tuck, Public Relations director, Midland College, on his weekly "Letter From College" column and total effort.

A woman's role

To The Editor:

Mrs. N.P. Wilson (Letters, Feb. 8) suffers a little from misinformation, or no information at all.

First she states that "feminists are attempting to make housewife a dirty word." Such is not the case, never has been, and never will be. The feminists are very much concerned with homemaker rights. When the National Conference of Women met in Houston in 1976, resolutions concerning the rights of homemakers far outnumbered those of any other category.

At no time has the feminist movement said our children would be better off in daycare centers. What they have said is that if you MUST take your children to one, then let it be a good one. Let it meet specified standards of space, cleanliness, nutrition, ratio of trained adults to children, and a host of other pertinent criteria.

The reason we are hearing that quality time is more important than quantity time is because social and psychological studies have shown this to be the case.

Mrs. Wilson accuses all working mothers of being obsessed with the almighty dollar. (She might look at a few working fathers on this score.) Some people have this obsession. Others are obsessed with seeing that their children are able to get dental care, adequate school clothing, decent food and a few of these other "luxuries" of which Mrs. Wilson speaks.

Mrs. Wilson states that marriage, with one parent (presumably the wife) being responsible for the home life, is the most loving and natural way to raise children. Is she stating that the father is NOT responsible for the home life? Maybe this is why the American family is going downhill.

Soccer in school

To The Editor:

I am writing to you because I have to show my feelings.

Soccer is played all over the world, and in some private schools. I could think of three schools in Midland that have soccer teams. So why can't we put it in public schools?

I'm only in the sixth grade but I'll want to play seventh grade soccer instead of football or baseball. Do you think the schools will take soccer? It's cheaper than baseball or football. All you need is shorts, shirt, and socks. A friend of mine is writing to you too.

January 20, 1981

To The Editor:

Tuesday, January 20, 1981, started out to be one of the best days of my life. I was in Washington, D.C., attending receptions for senators and congressmen, revelling in the fact that I was totally out of my league, and anxiously awaiting the materialization of one of my fondest dreams...the inauguration of Ronald Wilson Reagan as the 40th President of the United States of America. I did not think anything short of leg cramps and pneumonia could dull the excitement I was experiencing. I could not have been more wrong.

With perfect timing, the U.S. hostages were released from Tehran and the news was broken shortly after the swearing in ceremony. I could see the handwriting on the wall. I knew what would happen in the next few days. The hostages would return to a hero's welcome, Jimmy Carter (of the Plains Carters) would receive credit for their return with dignity, and America could once again be respected and honored by all. What a crock!

First of all, I don't even know why we're celebrating their return. Don't get me wrong. I'm glad they're back. But this is only the final page of one of the saddest chapters in American history. I personally am embarrassed and ashamed that a pipsqueak band of 35 year-old "students" could handcuff my great country for 444 agonizingly "patient" days. I also firmly believe our patient former leader had very little to do with the release of the hostages. The Iranian terrorists released our countrymen because of a fear of Ronald Reagan. They realized (and rightly so) that he was much more inclined to turn Iran into a parking lot than the guy we fired. Strength has historically been the best negotiator. Our embarrassment and shame will pass as the new administration begins to return this country to a position of strength and world leadership. But let us never forget the lessons we have learned from this terrible chapter, especially if Jimmy ever asks our permission to return to national politics.

What economy?

To The Editor:

I support (President Ronald) Reagan's call for economy but he didn't call loud enough.

Where is the economy in cutting aid to rebuild our cities with the money remaining here when we send out forever both direct and indirect aid for Israel to build and expand cities on Arab lands?

Cut welfare, by all means, but get two of the worst welfare cases off our backs. Dump Israel and dump the UN!

We saw the good dollar Reagan showed and understand it is now only worth thirty-six cents but we also know that "loans" to Israel are often forgiven in whole or in part and the total in outright grants shoot our debt interest ever skyward. So called sales of grain to Asian nations on thirty-year terms as to Russia gets us paid in less than thirty-six cent dollars if at all.

With a visable debt greater than that owed by all the mass of the worlds other people combined we are further obligated through World Bank and Euro-dollars more than even President Reagan dares reveal if it can even be estimated.

Our defenses are in distressing shape but it is proposed that we pour billions into establishing bases in the Middle East. How many of our unemployed will get pay checks building defenses there?

The media is constantly fed stories of how wonderful Israel is and what super things they are doing. Well, for my part the most thrilling thing they could do would be to GET THEIR HAND OUTTA MY POCKET!

Shoddy service

To The Editor:

Our son was home over the New Year's holidays and purchased a three piece wall unit on sale for $700 from a store here in town. As he lives in Killeen and serves at Ft. Hood there was the problem of shipping, etc.

When the merchandise arrived the carrier by law had to leave the pieces outside (in front of the garage). When our son came home that evening the cardboard cartons were dampish though not drippy, but really unsuitable for re-use. There was no evidence of being dropped or mishandled.

Upon opening the cartons our son found the back was out of one unit; the door unit was scratched clear through the veneer to the particle board, and the veneer peeling off one of the shelves; damage evidently not caused by shipping.

Upon hearing from our son I went to the store and spoke with the saleswoman who handled the sale. Meanwhile my husband went to the store and spoke with the owner's son. Also our son called the store. We were each assured that a fair deal was important and that the store stood behind each transaction and our son was to ship the units back for refund since that was the "last one left."

After three weeks in the field on maneuvers our son again called the store to reaffirm the arrangements. He was told by the store owner that the return would not be accepted because the merchandise had been uncrated and the damage was probably caused by sitting in the rain.

Let me just inform this store owner that our son is a Midland native, an honor graduate of both Lee High School and his service academy and integrity has always been part of his character. He might expect this shoddy treatment in a service town where the businessmen reportedly have a poorer sense of integrity, but in Midland?

The same old offer should come in handy, some day

The other day, an officious oversized envelope, addressed to Ed Todd, came in the mail. Obviously, it was a mass mailout and a generally selective one at that. I opened it, for I wondered what was free or at a bargain and forthcoming.

Inside was another one of those plastic credit card-size cards that would snugly fit in the billfold.

"...Bringing you what may be the best news for folks 65 and over...," read the green headline on the letterhead.

Thanks, but the offer was somewhat premature. I felt about the way Jack Benny would have had he gotten the offer were he past 39 twice over. Indignant.

It was depressing for awhile.

"Dear Senior Citizen," began the solicitation.

I barely had the courage to read any encouraging words to follow. Certainly, the information which the insurance company had to impart was not pertinent — not yet, anyway. If I fare well, though, the verbiage may someday apply to this soul and enticing.

I read more:

"There are a lot of different things being done today to give folks 65 and over a helping hand. And it's about time."

The deal, of course, is that "they" want "you" to pay them a nominal premium and "they" in turn promise to pay you many times over the premium price should "you" have the misfortune to get laid up.

Deal or no deal, the form letter did have impact. It was a reminder that someday, if time for this soul keeps a'running, ol' E.T. will be olde E.T. And, with the "right" attitude and with reasonable preparation for the tomorrows to come, the Days of Old will be good years. They may be far better than those Days of Youth and those Days of the Mid-Years when life was just time well spent or squandered or was a drifting enigma.

The Days of Life should be times of growth. Should be. (All those "should be's" can be fatal.) But, sometimes, the shock of the passing of years becomes an awakening; it can be the incentive somehow to "make the most" of life. It can be the force to cause you and I to determine really what is best in life and to seek it out.

POSITIVE THINKING

Give yourself the gift of a better, brighter day

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

Suddenly he made a mental turn of 180 degrees and started practicing a drastically different attitude every morning. Result: He became a happy man and more efficient, too.

Before this dramatic change his thoughts focused glumly on the difficulties and irritations he expected of each day. And since he expected them, he usually got them. Daily he left home for the office in a gloomy, negative mood.

But one morning his long-suffering wife, herself of a positive disposition, told him to snap out of it and skip his morning doldrums. She suggested upbeat affirmations to recondition thinking to a positive outlook.

Her little speech astounded him. But she said it so sweetly that, instead of getting riled, he grudgingly agreed to give it a try. Then and there he memorized a short statement which his wife came up with and went to work repeating it to himself, and that morning things began to look up for him. To his astonishment the words began working in his mind like a tonic.

"I started that day with anticipation and a positive mental attitude," he says, "and everything went so well all day that I decided maybe I'd better do the same every morning." He kept it up day after day. What was that magic affirmation he used? Here it is: "This is the day which the Lord hath made; we will rejoice and be glad in it." (Psalm 118)

"You don't change mental habits overnight," he says, "but gradually I changed for the better by shifting my thinking from apprehension to anticipation."

Sustained anticipation does tend to attract good things and lots of them. How well a situation works out for you depends in large part upon whether you are mentally receptive to a good outcome. Events seem to be responsive to the expectant mind, to anticipation.

The morning is the best time for cultivating an anticipative attitude. An old English proverb declares, "Of a good beginning cometh a good end." You can do wonders for yourself by starting a day with an expectant attitude and optimistic thinking. Picture the day ahead as you confidently expect it to be.

I like the plan of a Connecticut businessman. Each morning after getting to his office and taking a look at his schedule, he spends a few moments in meditation. This practice did so much for him that he wrote an article telling about it.

"I affirm I will be calm and orderly in my thinking, putting first things first and acting with confidence and enthusiasm. I say a prayer for each client whom I am going to write to or see. I affirm that we will harmoniously work for mutual best interest.

"I have now followed this custom for several years and can truly say it has greatly increased my capacity. I am able to do twice as much work each day with half the nervous tension. I have greater confidence and greater happiness."

Want to have some fun every morning? Here's how. I do it every day and get a real kick from it. Hope that you may encounter someone you can help during the day. What happens may be a simple experience like this one: Late one day my wife needed some groceries right away and asked if I would go with her and help carry them home. When the things she purchased had been assembled on the counter, I stood watching the young clerk make out the sales slip. He seemed bored and glum and fed up of it all. Then I noticed his handwriting. It was unusually beautiful script. I said, "I've been watching you write that list."

"What's wrong with it?" he asked. (Touchy.)

"Nothing at all," I said. "It's not that. I'm impressed by what a good writer you are."

He looked up in surprise. "Nobody ever told me that before! You think I write good?"

"Just great."

His whole manner brightened up. He seemed to come alive. He even wanted to know if there was anything else he could do for us. As we went out the door he waved and I waved back. This small incident gave me a lift. I suspect it may have helped to make the day a good one for him too.

DOE wants its money back

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four national charities directed their hundreds of local offices to stop handing out $4 million in heating assistance money to poor people but the groups said Friday they still hadn't decided whether to return any unspent funds to the government.

The four charities met for 90 minutes with representatives of the Energy Department, who argued that the money should be returned because an outgoing Carter administration official had acted without proper clearance from his boss.

The Reagan administration began trying to get the money back on Thursday, sending out telegrams telling the groups that "it is imperative that the $1 million be returned to the custody of the Department of Energy by the most expeditious means."

However, after the Friday meeting, DOE Acting General Counsel Eric Fygi said the government would only seek to get back any money not already disbursed to poor people.

The four charities — the Salvation Army, the National Council of Churches, the National Conference of Catholic Charities and the Council of Jewish Federations — each received $1 million to be given to poor people to pay their heating bills.

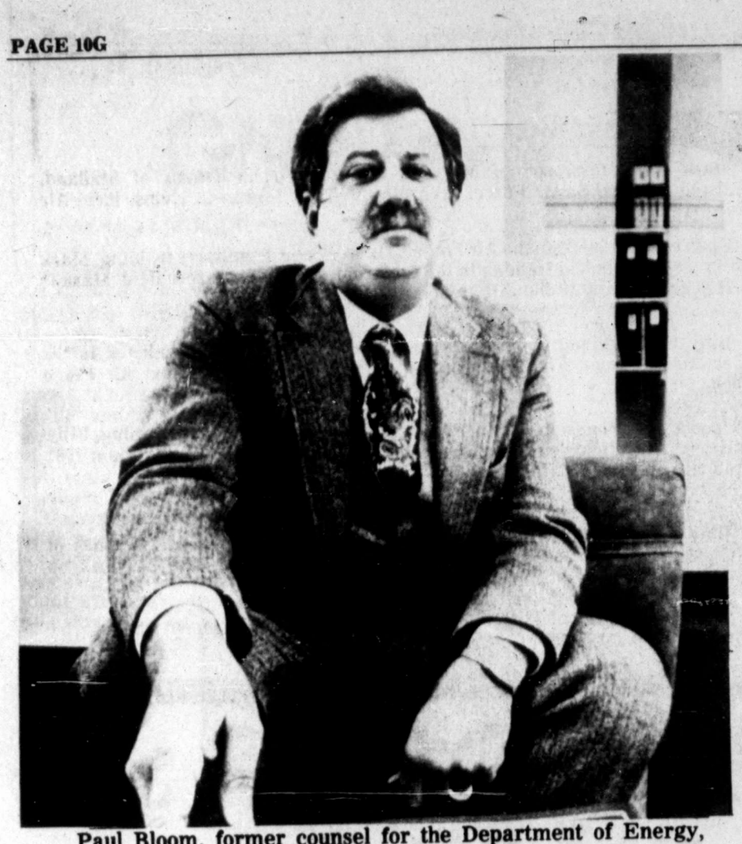
Officials of the four charities said they had not been convinced by department officials that their agreement with outgoing Carter administration official Paul Bloom was improper. They said they would make no decision on whether to return any of the funds until after they had received further legal documentation from the department.

They said they had all agreed to direct their local agencies to spend no more funds until the matter was cleared up, but the amount of money left varied greatly between the four groups.

The Salvation Army said it had spent almost all of its allocation with Col. Ernest Miller explaining: "They (Carter administration officials) told us to get it out fast so that it could be used by poor people before the winter heating season ended and we complied."

However officials of the National Council of Churches and the Catholic Charities said that only about one-third of their funds had been disbursed to local affiliates and the Jewish Federation said only a very small amount of its $1 million had been sent to local agencies.

"If we have to return this money, the people who are really going to be hurt are the poor people who are spending 40 to 50 percent of their income on heating bills, who have to make a decision between heating and eating," said Chris Cowap, an official with the National Council of Churches.



Paul Bloom, former counsel for the Department of Energy, handed over $4 million in federal funds to four groups on Jan. 19, his last day on the job. The Reagan administration wants it back. (AP Laserphoto)

Clinical trials begun on cancer-fighting agent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Cancer Institute said Friday it is beginning the first phase of its million-dollar clinical trials of interferon on cancer patients.

The tests will be carried out at the institute, at the Northern California Cancer Program at Stanford University, at the Sidney Farber Cancer Institute in Boston and at the Vincent T. Lombardi Cancer Research Center at Georgetown University.

Thirty-five to 40 patients with advanced or untreatable cancers will be studied at each site to determine the maximum dose at which interferon can be given without toxic side effects.

Stanford will conduct only a Phase I study which is expected to last nine to 12 months. Sidney Farber and Georgetown expect to conduct follow-up studies to assist the anti-cancer effect of interferon on breast cancer patients.

Interferon is a naturally occurring substance that is part of the body's immune defense system. It is believed to inhibit production of cancer cells.

The cancer institute spent $5.6 million to buy 6.4 billion units of human lukocyte interferon from Meloy Laboratories of Springfield, Va.

LANDLORDS, TENANTS AND PETS

If human tenants are having a hard time finding apartments, things are really tough for animal tenants. True, there can be no discrimination when renting apartments to humans - but as for pets - it's an entirely different story. As a pet-owner, your selection will be extremely limited.

People love pets. Over 85% of families in this country have a pet cat or dog. Children love pets...Apartment owners hate pets. Not for personal reasons. Historically, pets cause physical damage to apartments over the period of a lease.

A recent survey of landlords and management firms was taken on the subject of pets in Milwaukee. Their comments were filled with images of clawed doors, stained floors, ruined carpets and lonely barking during the day. However, some landlords said they do accept pets but not in combination with children, others take pets but increase the rent $10 or $25 per month or double security deposits.

If you are a pet owner, your best solution is to buy rather than rent. Then you can be your own landlord and make your own rules.

If you have any questions on this subject or any other aspect of real estate, feel free to phone or drop in at DON HARVEY Realtors 702 Andrews Hwy. Phone 683-5333. We're here to help! Come in for your free copy of "Home or Living" magazine.

hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE

If you'd like to make fancy little sandwiches for a special afternoon gathering, shower, or party, freeze slices of bread, then cut out fancy shapes with small metal cookie cutters.

Combine two different colors of bread in one little sandwich, and fill with your favorite spread.

Adrianne Prince

So easy to do, too. Save those bread scraps for stuffings, or toast and make croutons or bread crumbs.

No waste at all!

Heloise

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELOISE:

While shopping in a supermarket, they had the music turned up quite loud and the song "Aquarius" was playing.

Just ahead of me at the produce counter was a little 2- or 3-year-old sitting in the grocery cart.

He was singing right along with the song, only I heard him sing: "This is the dawning of the age of asparagus!

Mrs. C. Evans

Kids and their interpretation of words! They can really keep us in stitches.

YOURS TO TAKE

DEAR HELOISE:

In the junk mail one continually receives, there usually are some pages or cards which have no printing on one side.

So, when the mail arrives, I pour myself a cup of coffee, sit down and go through it. Every page or card, even the insides of envelopes, are then folded and cut into convenient sizes for notes, grocery lists, etc.

I keep these in a small box on my kitchen counter, ready for use.

Jerre La Palmer

MAKE A SACHET

DEAR HELOISE:

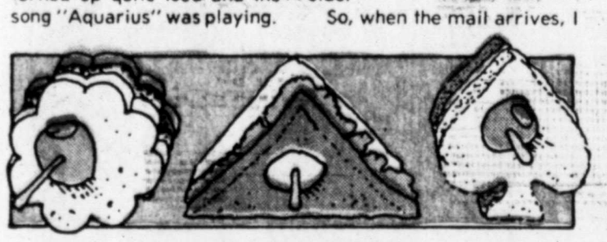
My girlfriend gave me some bath crystals in a fragrance I really like, but I take showers.

Wanting to use the lovely scent, I decided to make some homemade sachets.

Using old knee-high stockings, I put a teaspoon of the bath crystals in each sock and tied a knot.

Great for closets or to tuck under a chair or sofa cushion.

Junella Harrison



DEAR READER:

This is your column. If you'd like to share a hint, ask a question or make a suggestion, write me care of this newspaper.

MARIE LEAVES HER STAMP

DEAR HELOISE:

I usually save those plastic rings with raised pictures on them that you get in gum ball machines.

Marie, Age 12

TAMMY'S ALREADY HOPING

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's a helpful hint for girls who would like to start a hope chest.

Go to a discount store and buy a cardboard storage chest with flowers or some kind of design on it.

Start putting your collection of things in it. It makes a nice and inexpensive hope chest, yet could be coordinated to match your room.

KEEPIN' IT CLEAN

DEAR HELOISE:

I don't have a dishwasher, so I still drain my dishes.

The build-up on the drain tray was worse than the shower walls.

When I bought a new tray, I waxed it first and now, when the dishes have had time to drain (usually by the time I've finished cleaning up the kitchen), I lift up one side of the drainer and dry off the tray.

I've had the same tray for quite some time now and it still looks new.

Bina Baird

WAIST WHITTLER

DEAR HELOISE:

I found a good exercise for the waist.

Pitch a deck of cards up in the air and let them fall all around you.

Mame

RECORD KEEPING

DEAR HELOISE:

Income taxes can really be a headache if you itemize each year. So at the beginning of the year, I get a piece of paper and mark columns for each deduction, such as medical, contributions, interest, etc.

When I write checks each month, I enter all deductible checks in the appropriate column, listing date, amount and who it's written to.

Ann Noren

Heloise

TRAINING TIP

DEAR HELOISE:

The only spot I found in the bathroom for my daughter's potty training chair was too far from the toilet paper holder.

I took an empty economy size baby disposible wash cloth dispenser and cut the vents out of the top.

After removing the cardboard tube from the center of a half-used roll of toilet tissue, I put the tissue into the dispenser, pulling a little of the paper up from the center of the roll.

Now she has her own toilet paper dispenser, and it's easy to take along when traveling.

Prince Valiant

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: THE OLD HERMIT GUIDES PRINCE VALIANT THROUGH HIS MOUNTAIN STRONGHOLD, WHERE ALL OF MAN'S FOLLIES AND SORROWS COME TO REST. HE OPENS ANOTHER DOOR: "ALL OF THIS WAS DESTROYED BY HUMAN IGNORANCE. WE REPAIR WHAT WE CAN, BUT MORE ARRIVES EVERY DAY."

①

DOWN THE PASSAGE THEY COME TO A SECOND ROOM WHERE THE SOUND OF ANGRY WORDS ASSAULTS VAL'S EARS: "LIAR... CHEAT... FOOL... TRAITOR," VAL HEARS. "EVERYTHING PEOPLE WISH THEY HAD NEVER SAID COMES HERE," THE HERMIT SAYS. "EVENTUALLY THE WORDS TURN TO DUST AND ARE SWEPT AWAY."

NOW THEY ENTER A CAVERNOUS AMPHITHEATRE WHERE HUNDREDS OF SCRIBES ARE BUSILY AT WORK. "DAY AND NIGHT," THE OLD MAN EXPLAINS, "THEY WRITE DOWN THE GOOD INTENTIONS OF EVERYONE IN THE WORLD." BUT VAL NOTICES THAT ONE SCRIBE HAS FALLEN ASLEEP: "THAT ONE DOESN'T LOOK VERY BUSY," HE OBSERVES. THE OLD MAN SIGHS. "POOR DAGOBERT. HIS JOB IS TO RECORD THE GOOD INTENTIONS PEOPLE ACTUALLY FULFILL. HE HAS NOT MUCH TO DO." FOR A MOMENT THEY ARE SILENT, BUT FINALLY THE HERMIT SAYS: "ENOUGH OF THIS. YOU CAME HERE FOR HUMILITY. THAT IS DOWN BELOW." NEXT WEEK: The Golden Casket
