Settlement ends race dispute

Payment halts teacher's case from heading to Supreme Court

■ Civil rights groups join to pay 70 percent of settlement in reverse-discrimination lawsuit.

PISCATAWAY, N.J. (AP) — Heading off what could have been a fatal blow to affirmative action from the U.S. Supreme Court, civil rights groups put up the money to settle a reverse-discrimination lawsuit brought by a white teacher who was laid off so a black colleague could keep her job.

The nation's high court, which has grown increasingly hostile to race-based policies in recent years, had already agreed to hear Sharon Taxman's case, and it was expected to yield a major ruling on affirmative action.

But the Piscataway school board voted 5-3 late Thursday to settle with Mrs. Taxman for $433,500 after the Black Leadership Forum, an alliance of civil rights groups, came forward to say it would pay 70 percent.

"This settlement demonstrates the panic within the civil rights establishment," said Clint Bolick of the conservative Institute for Justice in Washington. "This could have been a knockout blow for racial preferences."

Added Mrs. Taxman's attorney, Steven Klausner: "It's obvious to me that they were afraid that affirmative action might be very badly damaged."

He said Mrs. Taxman, 50, is "glad it's over. It's kind of anticlimactic."

Mrs. Taxman was laid off as a business teacher in 1989, while Debra Williams, a black teacher, was retained. Both were hired the same day, and were deemed equally qualified by the school board. But the board kept Ms. Williams to promote racial diversity.

Ms. Williams, 45, was at the school board meeting and sobbed after the settlement was reached. She said she was far more qualified than Mrs. Taxman because she has a master's degree and Mrs. Taxman doesn't.

"You don't get nothing in this world for having an advanced degree," Ms. Williams said Friday at Piscataway High School. "You don't get nothing but a slap in the face."

Civil rights leaders feared that pursuing the case could have done more harm than good.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, who helped raise some of the money in the settlement, said the case was "riddled with problems."

"The black teacher has a master's degree and the white teacher didn't so they are not equals academically," he said. "This case would have been distortion of the issue."

Kweisi Mfume, president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said "distorted facts make for distorted law."

"It was in the best interest of the nation that the future of affirmative action be based on a clearly articulated record and not on a case that the extreme right wing has distorted and defined as something other that what it is," Mfume said.

The Supreme Court was to hear arguments in Janu-

FDA fight wins teen honors

Small even for a 13-year-old girl, Alexis Milmine of Midland was undaunted as she bent the incomprehensible vastness of the American bureaucracy to her will.

For her efforts, the young woman was honored before her classmates at Midland Christian School, with U.S. Rep. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock, attending and Mayor Bobby Burns proclaiming Nov. 21 as Alexis Milmine Day in Midland.

Miss Milmine has suffered from a serious, inherited form of asthma, and relies on regular bursts of medication from inhalers, which she carries at all times.

In May, Miss Milmine was alerted to efforts by major drug manufacturers to have all inhalers, with the exception of one or two, taken off of the market because they contain chloroflorocarbon (CFC) propellants, which have been shown to damage the protective ozone layer in the earth's atmosphere.

U.N. inspectors return to Iraq, plan to resume weapons search

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Driving past anti-American graffiti and banners, U.N. arms inspectors returned to Baghdad on Friday, determined to find weapons stocks that Iraq may have hidden during Saddam Hussein's three-week standoff with the United Nations.

The inspectors — one wearing a patch of an American flag sewn to his baseball cap — flew from Bahrain to Habaniya air base, 75 miles west of Baghdad. They refused to talk to reporters when they arrived at their Baghdad headquarters in a U.N. motorcade.

The team of 75 arms monitors, including four Americans, intended to resume inspections today, including a search for suspected stockpiles of VX nerve gas and mustard gas.

Iraq had barred American weapons inspectors on Oct. 29, saying they were spies serving Washington's aim of prolonging U.N. economic sanctions against Baghdad. The Americans were expelled Nov. 13, prompting the rest of the inspectors to leave in protest.

Chief weapons inspector Richard Butler, speaking in New York, said the number of Americans on the returning team had been reduced from six to four as part of a routine rotation — not as a concession to the Iraqis.

"Down America!" declared a message scrawled in yellow paint on a wall at the air base. The same sentiment was repeated on banners that lined the convoy's route to Baghdad.

Still, the streets were calm. No crowds turned out to watch the inspectors return and there were no organized protests outside the U.N. Development Program building, where Iraqis often chanted anti-U.S. slogans during the standoff.

Though reluctant to speak to reporters, many people expressed relief the crisis was over.

"I believe this is a victory for the Iraqi people, and it is also the beginning of the embargo's end," Ali Mohammed, an 18-year-old student, said. "God willing, the situation will change."

The Iraqi government has claimed the end to the standoff as a victory, saying it managed to bring attention to 7-year-

Texas doctor recalls trying to save J.F.K. on fateful Dallas day

FARMERSVILLE, Texas — Like most people his age, Dr. Paul C. Peters, 65, of Dallas vividly recalls where he was and what he was doing the afternoon of Nov. 22, 1963.

Peters was among the surgeons who treated President John F. Kennedy at Parkland Hospital following the shooting at Dealey Plaza.

Peters also investigated the claims there was a conspiracy connected to Kennedy's assassination and has contributed to works debunking the theory.

Earlier this week, Peters, now professor emeritus of urology at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center, recalled that dramatic day for students of Farmersville High School and the Farmersville Historical Society.

In November 1963, Peters, then 31, was assistant professor of urology at Parkland Hospital in Dallas. He had only recently arrived at Parkland after assignments at Indiana University and with the Air Force.

"I hardly knew where the restroom was or where to pick up my paycheck," Peters said.

The morning of Nov. 22, Peters had come in to the hospital to prepare for a scheduled lecture that afternoon.

He remembered listening to a radio broadcast of President John F. Kennedy's journey through downtown Dallas toward a scheduled appearance at the Dallas Trade Center.

"They rounded the corner at Houston and Elm and the announcer said ... 'My God, the president's been shot!'", Peters said, instantly realizing Kennedy likely would be brought to Parkland, the major trauma center in the southwest.

Not aware of the extent of Kennedy's injuries, Peters thought there might be a chance to assist

Once unthinkable, S. Korea asks for IMF bailout

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea resigned itself Friday to a course of action it once deemed unthinkable: It asked the International Monetary Fund for a $20 billion bailout of its foundering economy.

South Korea also requested an open line of credit in case $20 billion was not enough. Many financial analysts say it could take three times that amount to stabilize Seoul's economy.

In Washington, IMF Managing Director Michel Camdessus said he would give South Korea "full support." The rescue effort will involve the international community as well as the IMF, he said, an indication assistance from individual nations also was being lined up.

South Korea's decision made official what many analysts have been saying for weeks — that the former Asian powerhouse's economic troubles are so serious an IMF bailout was inevitable.

But the government agonized over the decision, changing its mind several times Friday, with the final decision coming at a late-night news conference.

Finance Minister Lim Chang-yuel said an IMF delegation will come to Seoul early next week to negotiate the size and terms of the bailout package, and the money will start arriving in three or four weeks.

Just last week, the government called the idea of an IMF loan "unthinkable."

For South Korea, asking the IMF for help — even at a time of crisis — is nothing less than humiliating. In return for loans, the IMF requires painful policy controls, which many Koreans see as tantamount to surrendering sovereignty.

South Korea boasts the world's 11th-largest economy — no small feat for a country left in ruins by World War II and the Korean War.

But the economy has been spinning out of control for almost a month, the result of a series of major corporate bankruptcies that brought a loss of foreign confidence.

The crisis has been exacerbated by economic meltdowns elsewhere in Asia, particularly in Thailand and Indonesia, both of which are being rescued by the IMF.

Despite government appeals for calm and assurances from the IMF that South Korea's economic fundamentals were sound, the currency plummeted, share prices tumbled, and foreign investors scurried to withdraw their holdings and convert them into dollars.

Experts feel Japan economy is in danger

By Bernard Kaplan
Hearst News Services

■ News analysis

PARIS — Some of Japan's big banks may be hiding even greater losses than they have divulged, adding to global anxiety that the world's second largest economy is in dire disarray, analysts here say.

The warning, on the heels of this week's collapse of the country's 10th largest bank, followed acknowledgement by two other large banking groups that their losses this year will be substantially greater than earlier conceded and that they are trying to sell some of their equity to raise cash.

Meanwhile, the government of South Korea, which is also in severe financial straits, took the unusual step Thursday of disclosing that Japanese banks have begun to curtail credit to Seoul and are calling in their loans.

Experts here said the move testified to the shaky state of Japan's financial institutions.

"Normally, it would be in the interest of Japanese lenders to roll over their loans to South Korea whose economic health is very important to Japan," explained Roland Kniepp, a Paris-based financial consultant. "The fact that, instead, they are calling in their loans reflects how perilous their own situation has become."

The authoritative London Financial Times called Japan the "central element" in the growing menace of a global slump. It described that country with its weak economy and "sick" banking system as having the "same role" as the United States in 1929.

Japan's problems represent "a threat to the world," it said.

The newspaper noted that nearly 40 percent of U.S. exports go to Japan and other Asian markets. A serious financial upheaval in Asia would have an "inevitable" impact on economic growth in America and Europe, causing a significant drop in profits, it said.

"This might trigger a sharp decline in (the still high) equity markets," the paper added.

Compounding the problem is the widespread suspicion that some leading Japanese banks aren't admitting the extent of their recent losses in the financial crisis that has rocked such southeast Asian countries as Indonesia, Malaysia and Thailand since this summer, according to Leon Salevent, professor of international banking at the University of Paris.

Salevent pointed out that Japan's banks have long suffered from a questionable reputation about the reliability of their accounting methods.

During the major financial crisis brought on by the collapse of the Japanese real estate boom of the late 1980s, the extent of banking losses — eventually pegged at more than $500 billion — only emerged gradually as many banks displayed great reluctance to tell the whole story.

"Something similar may be occurring this time," Salevent said. "Certainly, there are signs that Japanese government officials suspect they haven't been told the truth about losses."

This was a reference to the fact that, after this week's collapse of Hokkaido Takusboku Bank, Tokyo officials announced they would compensate the bank's customers for their losses, but, within 24 hours, denied that the move constituted a precedent in case of other bank failures.

"The government quickly recognized that it might be taking on more than it could handle," Salevent said.

On Thursday, the Industrial Bank of Japan and Daiwa Bank revealed they are trying to sell 10 percent of their equity to help meet higher than expected losses from bad loans.

The degree to which Japanese banks have lost self-confidence could be judged also from reports that several are scurrying to sell shares they have in other banks, the French analyst emphasized.

Traditionally, the big Japanese financial institutions have invested heavily in one another. "Now, they don't regard these investments as a good idea," Salevent concluded.

POLICE REPORTS

Plane search

FORT STOCKTON — The Texas wing of the Civil Air Patrol continued its search Friday for Texas A&M University geology professor Norman Tilford, who has been missing for at least one week on a Bryan-to-Van Horn flight.

Tilford left the Bryan Coulter Airport on Nov. 13 on his Cessna 180 aircraft. He was to meet geology students in Van Horn for mountain climbing, said Commander Bill Darby with the Midland CAP office, which has searched the area west of Ozona.

On Friday, the CAP probed the most rugged terrain to look for Tilford. However, the search has been unsuccessful.

The professor disappeared with his two pet poodles and camping equipment. Authorities were notified about his disappearance when his maroon-and-white 1953 Cessna 180 did not arrive at the Culberson County Airport the night of his departure. It was reported that Tilford did not have a flight plan with the Federal Aviation Administration.

So far, the CAP has flown more than 172 missions in looking for the man. Actual air crew search hours totaled 216. A total of 376 hours flight hours were spent in searching for the man as of Wednesday.

The CAP added that 226 Civil Air Patrol personnel have signed up to join the search since the opening of the mission. The Texas Department of Public Safety has assisted by bringing in a helicopter to comb the area near College Station.

The last search the Midland CAP participated in was December 1993, when an aircraft of a husband and wife crashed into a mountain near the Van Horn area. Two more missions were called from New Mexico in July 1995, when West Texas was probed for two aircraft missing from the area.

Suspicious death

ANDREWS — Police are still waiting for autopsy reports from a Dallas medical examiner to determine the cause of death of former Midlander David Whytlaw, 50, who was found dead inside an Andrews hotel room Tuesday night.

Authorities would not be specific on what type of wounds were found on Whytlaw, but said the case was under investigation as an unattended death.

Whytlaw was a former swim coach with Lee High School. He taught at the school more than 10 years ago. Whytlaw was on the Midland Independent School District's substitute list at the time of his death, MISD spokeswoman Susan Webb said.

Police officials said the man was a former teacher with Odessa Permian High School several years ago. His identification listed an Odessa address on the day he was found, police said.

Woman convicted in sex-slave case

SEGUIN, Texas (AP) — A woman who admitted she and her spouse were involved in sexual bondage was convicted Friday of aggravated kidnapping.

The case involves the May abduction of another woman to be a so-called "sex slave."

Diane James, 49, could get up to 99 years in prison. The punishment phase began Friday.

Ms. James earlier testified that a 35-year-old San Antonio woman was a willing participant.

But prosecutors say Ms. James and David James III, 56, abducted the victim, who was walking along a highway, and took her to their home near Seguin.

The victim was told to strip, was fitted with a bondage collar and was chained to the ceiling, testimony indicated.

James was killed in a shootout with officers after the naked victim fled and sought help.

"They couldn't get past the shootout, and the evidence that demonstrated that this woman was trying to escape," according to Guadalupe County District Attorney Bud Kirkendall.

SETTLEMENT: Civil rights groups agree to pay 70%

ary and rule by next summer. In its only other review of an affirmative action dispute this term, the justices let stand California's groundbreaking Proposition 209, a ban on race and gender preference in hiring and school admissions.

Mrs. Taxman got her job back in 1992 but continued her pursuit of back pay. A federal judge ruled in her favor in 1993 and awarded her $144,000. A federal appeals court ruled in Mrs. Taxman's favor last year.

The Clinton administration initially supported the school board, then backpedaled last summer. Worried what precedent a Supreme Court ruling might set, the administration asked the high court to stay out of the case. Instead, the justices agreed to hear it.

White House spokesman Mike McCurry said the administration is happy a settlement was reached. He said the case was an "inappropriate vehicle" for addressing the constitutional issues involved in affirmative action.

Robert C. DePaul, the school board's vice president, said the Clinton administration's flip-flop was central to the decision to settle.

"I'm the type of person who says, 'Cut our losses and end it right here. Let the politicians fight this battle,'" he said.

Under the settlement, Mrs. Taxman will get $186,000 in back pay and interest. Her attorneys will get the rest.

As the legal battle dragged on, Ms. Williams and Mrs. Taxman continued to work in the high school business department but rarely spoke. Ms. Williams said that she developed high blood pressure and that the case strained her relations with her supervisors.

In an interview last month, Ms. Williams said she had thrown herself into graduate school and a full course load to prove that she was kept because she was qualified not because of her race.

IRAQ: U.N. inspectors arrive in Baghdad to jeers old economic sanctions it wants to see lifted.

Russia brokered a deal Thursday in which Saddam agreed to rescind an order expelling the American inspectors. In exchange, Russia pledged to work toward relaxing sanctions, which block oil exports and have devastated the Iraqi economy.

On Friday, Russia urged the U.N. Special Commission to increase the number of inspectors to better reflect the makeup of the U.N. Security Council, and to scale back checks of Iraq s nuclear program.

"Opportunities for the support of our legal demand for lifting the blockade are now better than some weeks ago," Deputy Prime Minister Tariq Aziz said late Friday in Syria.

The Security Council, which imposed the embargo after Saddam's forces invaded Kuwait in 1990, has said it will end the sanctions only after it certifies that Iraq has complied with orders to destroy weapons of mass destruction.

The inspectors were expected to spend their first days looking for weapons stocks the Iraqis may have hidden during the forced halt in inspections, then try to return to suspected weapons sites to which Iraqis had denied access in recent weeks.

Arms monitors long have believed Iraq is hiding key elements of its chemical and biological warfare programs, and experts have said the standoff could have given Iraq enough time to mix small batches of the weapons.

During the standoff, Iraq moved equipment away from some of the more than 100 U.N. cameras monitoring sites where Iraqis were capable of making chemical and biological weapons or long-range missiles.

INHALER: Mayor proclaims Alexis Milmine Day

(From 1A)

The two kinds of inhalers that were to be left on the market were worthless to Miss Milmine because she, like her mother, is allergic to powder-based inhalers, and non-CFC inhalers are of insufficient strength to propel the lung-opening medication during an asthma attack.

She did some research of her own and determined that the total CFC output of inhalers used by every asthmatic person on the planet amounts to an insignificant fraction of 1 percent of all the CFCs being expelled by industry and consumers.

She became convinced that this push was less about protecting the environment than about one drug company cornering the asthma inhaler market, she said earlier this year.

With this knowledge, she began writing letters to the U.S. Food and Drug Administration and several legislators, including Combest.

Combest recognized the predicament of the young woman and those like her and began pressing her case with the FDA.

Combest secured a promise that no CFC inhalers would be taken off the market until replacements had been tested and approved — not by the FDA or drug companies — but by the very people who will use them.

"I have spoken with Alexis on the phone, but this is my first opportunity to meet her," Combest said at the Friday gathering.

Combest thanked Miss Milmine for her work on behalf of "not only herself, but tens of thousands of people across the country."

"It's a good sign that government does work when people work together," he said.

"We are having a flag flown in your honor over the Capital in recognition of Alexis Milmine Day in Midland," Combest said. "They're going to send it to Alexis when it is retrieved from the Capital building," he said.

Miss Milmine said that during the long letter-writing campaign, she never wavered. "If I (had) quit, then they would go ahead and do what they planned to do," she said.

Miss Milmine had planned to become a physician but now is considering entering the public sphere and running for office, she said.

Burns credited the young woman for maintaining honor-student academic standing while battling her severe asthma. During the last school year, her grades placed her in honor-student standing even though she was only well enough to attend school less than 40 total days.

When she first began her letter-writing campaign at age 12, she was under long-term treatment with powerful anti-inflammatory medication, which had caused her cheeks to become puffy.

A new physician, however, has helped her reduce the need for this medication.

PRESIDENT: Doctor recalls efforts to save Kennedy

in his treatment and meet the president.

"If he's been shot through the arm or something, we can put a bandage on him and shake hands," Peters remembered thinking. The odds were with him, as most of the city's surgeons were in Galveston that day to attend a meeting of the Texas Surgical Society.

"I was to learn in the next 24 hours of the power of the presidency and how naive my approach was," Peters said.

As he neared the emergency room, all of the surgeons who were on duty at the hospital were being paged to immediately respond. Peters was recruited en route and the next thing he knew he was entering Trauma Room One, where Kennedy had been brought, joining around a half-dozen other young physicians who would attempt to save a United States president not much older than they were.

"They shoved me through a couple of double doors and there he was," Peters said.

Those surgeons who were already there urged Peters to lend a hand.

"If they were willing to have a urologist help, they were in trouble," Peters recalled.

"We actually worked on him for about 35 minutes before we declared him dead."

"You can't see six 30-year-old guys, young doctors, who still aren't shaving every day, walking in and saying, 'Oh, looks like he's dead' and then walk out. You couldn't do that," Peters said. "We did everything we could to save the President of the United States and he had excellent resuscitative efforts, even by today's standards."

And yet eventually the physicians realized there was no hope.

"So, I said we'd have to tell Mrs. Kennedy," Peters said. "And then someone said, 'She's standing right beside you'."

Peters turned to indeed find Jacqueline Kennedy next to him, refusing to leave the room until after last rites had been conducted.

Peters said the priest, apparently overwhelmed by the moment, had begun to deliver the wrong sacrament.

"So, he turned to another section of the book and began reading obviously the right words and she was immediately soothed by that," Peters said. "It was after that she went out and sat down."

Peters later would tell a Catholic friend of how he almost converted to the faith at that moment.

Peters said he knows that for most of the students, his experiences on that day 34 years ago may seem far away and long before their time. And yet he hoped they learned to appreciate the kinds of emotions a few dedicated doctors, as well as the entire country, went through during those few hours.

Rainbows offer children pot of gold in tough times

By Richard Enos
Staff Writer

When children lose someone close to them, whether through divorce or death, the pain sometimes can be overwhelming.

Children in Midland have a place to turn to help them cope with a loss in their lives.

Hospice of Midland's "Rainbows/Spectrums" grief peer support group attempts to make it easier for children to deal with the loss of a loved one through death, divorce, incarceration or other transitions.

Deb Solari, a volunteer for the program, said that Rainbows provides positive ways for children to deal with pent-up emotions.

Junior League of Midland provides volunteers to run the program, which is free and open to the public.

"This is a great place for them to come and talk about their feelings, just a support group," said Ms. Solari during a recent session. "We talk about appropriate ways to handle the anger. For some kids ... they might think that they're the only ones to have this happen to them."

The program meets at different churches. Rainbows recently concluded its fall sessions at Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity. The program is broken into 12-week sessions for children ages 4 through 17. It will resume Jan. 22.

Adult facilitators lead groups of children in discussions of how to deal with a variety of emotions. The children are free to express themselves and work on a variety of activities such as memory boxes and storybooks about events in their lives.

The activities give the children a chance to cope with their sense of loss, she said. In fact, Rainbows's motto is "I didn't cause it. I can't cure it. I can cope with it."

The program was founded in the United States in 1983 by Suzy Yehl Marta, to help her children deal with her divorce. Hospice of Midland adopted Rainbows about six years ago.

At the group's conclusion of the program's fall session about 40 children sang songs and chanted "I am special" and waved rainbow wands of multi-colored strips of paper.

Parents and facilitators afterward praised the support group and said it makes a difference in children's lives.

Debbie Fisher attended with her daughter, Kristie, and said the program helped Kristie understand her parents' divorce.

Kristie said she enjoyed being with children her own age.

"It helped me understand that I wasn't the only one who had gone through a (divorce)," she said. "We talked about it, that you didn't do it and that it's not your fault. They told us how to get rid of our (anger) by not hurting anyone."

Ms. Fisher said she has seen a marked change in her daughter since the 12 sessions.

"Her attitude is different. She was real resentful and moody," she said. "It was real hard for her. It was unforeseen for her, because we weren't bickering, fighting parents."

Divorce is particularly hard on children, she said, because they naturally blame themselves when two parents split up.

"They want to fix it and they can't fix it," she said. "They don't understand why Mom and Dad can't live together anymore."

Kathy Alexander, who also is going through a divorce, attended with her 6-year-old son, Joe Bob.

"It's opened a lot of doors for me," Ms. Alexander said. "We learned that any loss that happens to you is important. One person's loss is just as important as another person's."

Eric and Misti Hopper, now facilitators, were at the session with their children, Tommy and Elizabeth. The Hoppers and his children entered the program several years ago when he divorced his first wife.

"It was a situation of abandonment and drug abuse," Mrs. Hopper said. "It's a shame that you have to have (Rainbows), but thank God we have it. It does so much for the community."

Elizabeth, 9, said she feels at ease now.

"(I was) scared because I didn't know what was happening," she said. "I learned you don't have to be scared when your parents are divorced — that it's hard for your parents, too, when they go through a divorce."

Ms. Solari became a Rainbows volunteer several years ago, after she lost her father. She said she understands the pain children feel.

"Even as a big kid, you can go through a lot. You can empathize with them," she said.

For more information on the free program for children, call Hospice of Midland at 682-2980.

Judge revokes probation for Midland man

From Staff Reports

A Midland man who was convicted of evading detention after being stopped for driving a pickup bearing Republic of Texas license plates, had his probation revoked Friday in the 238th District Court.

In July, a jury found Thomas David Gipson, 45, guilty of evading detention, a class "A" misdemeanor. If given the maximum sentence, Gipson could have faced up to one year in jail and a $4,000 fine.

County Court-at-Law Judge Al Walvoord, however, sentenced Gipson to two years probation and ordered a psychological evaluation for the uncooperative Gipson.

This uncooperative attitude continued into his community supervision, sparking Friday's hearing to revoke that probation, according to court officials.

Judge John Hyde on Friday sentenced Gipson to one year in the Midland County Central Detention facility.

Hyde said he intends to bring Gipson back to the courtroom — after a "shock" term in jail — to evaluate the need for further incarceration.

"After about 30 days we'll bring him back and see what kind of attitude he has," and whether he will have to serve the remainder of the sentence, Hyde said.

Gipson originally was granted leniency, since he had no criminal background, Walvoord said during the trial last summer.

7-year-old feels pull of vacuums

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Morgan Wilburn is swept away by vacuum cleaners.

The 7-year-old boy has 21 of them, plus a cherished how-to video that gets more play than a Disney movie.

So there he was Friday, his wide eyes protected by safety glasses during the ultimate field trip: a tour of the Bissell Inc. factory, maker of his favorite models, those that use water.

"Wow!" Morgan said as an employee explained how shampoo squirts from a Bissell Big Green.

"This is Morgan's glory, a mecca," said his mother, Julie Wilburn, video camera in hand. "He has a hand vacuum mounted on the wall in his bedroom."

Bissell brought the Salem, Va., family to Michigan after reading a newspaper story about Morgan's collection, which includes vacuums by Hoover and Electrolux.

He hopped out of his hotel bed before 7 a.m. to prepare to see President Mark Bissell — "That's like meeting Michael Jordan," his mom said — and then was led on a two-hour tour, from the assembly line to the test lab.

"This motor here has two fans," explained Norm Lemieux, a sales manager. "You can really get suction with this baby."

"That's nice," said Morgan, words that became a well-worn reply by the time the tour ended with chicken fingers in the company cafeteria.

Mrs. Wilburn said her son's fascination with vacuums began when he played with the attachments at 19 months old.

"Santa has brought a vacuum every year since. The first one he got was the Bissell Little Green for small stains," she said. "He has 21 in the house and a few out on loan to the neighborhood. Everywhere there's a closet, there's a vacuum.

'He (Morgan Wilburn) plays baseball and takes piano lessons. He's in the Cub Scouts. But he just won't give up vacuums.'

— Julie Wilburn, mother

"He plays baseball and takes piano lessons. He's in the Cub Scouts," Mrs. Wilburn added. "But he just won't give up vacuums."

Morgan said he doesn't know why he likes vacuums, but he wants to sell them when he grows up.

He doesn't do much housework. (Othewise, the carpets would be wet all the time from the water vacuums he likes, his mom said.) But his mom and dad give him big remnants of carpet that he vacuums in the garage for fun.

He also does a little vacuuming around the neighborhood to make money and help pay for some of his machines, some of which cost up to $300.

On Friday, Lemieux walked Morgan through the assembly process, allowing him to stuff electrical cords into boxes.

Morgan dropped to his knees to examine a Powersteamer model.

"Does it have a crevice tool?" he asked.

"The guy is really focused on product," Mark Bissell said. "He knows to turn the switch when vacuuming bare floor. You don't want the dirt to shoot out."

For Christmas, Morgan wants a central vacuum system that could be operated in each room of the house. He might be disappointed.

"We told him Santa probably can't get it on the sleigh," his mom said.

Morgan Wilburn, 7, of Roanoke, Va., employs a vacuum tool in the off-site office of Mark Bissell, right, president of Bissell, Inc., Friday, in Grand Rapids, Mich. Bissell invited Wilburn and his family to visit the vacuum manufacturing company after becoming aware of his fascination with vacuum cleaners.

Septuplet mom holds healthiest newborn

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — A weary Bobbi McCaughey cradled one of her septuplets for the first time Friday and told the world she pressed on with her risky pregnancy because "they were my children and I wanted them."

"I know that it's extraordinary ... to have this many babies and go this far, but it's something I just did," she told KCCI-TV.

The couple's fertility doctor had given the McCaugheys the option of aborting some of the fetuses to give the others a better chance at survival. But "we just told her right from the beginning it's not an option for us," Mrs. McCaughey said.

Later, at a packed hospital news conference, the mother of the only living septuplets in the world was overcome by emotion when she spoke of holding one of her newborns for the first time.

Kenneth Robert — nicknamed "Hercules" by doctors because he was lowest in the womb and held the six others up — was the strongest of the brood and the biggest at 3 pounds, 4 ounces. He was upgraded from serious to fair condition and removed from a ventilator after he began breathing on his own.

"I never thought they would come off the ventilators so soon," she said as her husband, Kenny, held her hand. "It was just incredible. I can't wait until I can hold all of them."

"If we have the arms," her husband added with a wide grin.

The three other boys and three girls remained in serious condition Friday and were all on ventilators, two days after they were delivered by Caesarean section. Doctors expect them all to be breathing on their own within three days.

The 29-year-old mother was also weary from the ordeal. After 21 weeks of bed rest and more than a month in the hospital, she appeared in public for the first time, walking gingerly across the stage of the hospital auditorium in a blue quilted robe, with her husband holding her hand and a nurse carrying her IV bag.

Mrs. McCaughey paused as photographers took pictures, smiling briefly before becoming choked with emotion, dabbing her eyes with a tissue.

Shootings that leave one dead latest in series of hate crimes in Denver

DENVER (AP) — A white teenager with a shaved head brazenly admitted he shot and killed a West African immigrant at a bus stop because he didn't want to live in a world with blacks.

He also wounded a white nurse who rushed to the dying man's aid, leaving her paralyzed from the waist down.

"I don't like some blacks. I guess it's sort of a thing that I love my own people and I'd like to see a place where just we could be," Nathan Thill, 19, told KUSA-TV in a jailhouse interview.

Thill was arrested Thursday for killing Oumar Dia, 38, and wounding Jeannie VanVelkinburg at a bus station Wednesday night.

The shootings were the latest in a series of hate crimes that have residents worried about a surge in racial tension and police on alert for increased activity by white supremacist groups, especially before a Democratic fund-raiser today that President Clinton is attending.

The most brazen incident was last week's slaying of a police officer during a shootout with a white skinhead. The suspect then committed suicide with the slain officer's gun.

Days after the officer's funeral, a dead pig with the officer's name was left outside the police substation where he worked.

"I work with drug addicts and they don't scare me as much as these people do," said Lisa Meza, 30, who lives near the station. "I hate to see where the city is heading."

The embattled substation used three school buses to barricade its doors Friday as top commanders plotted strategy with a federal task force on hate groups.

The wave of hate crimes have shaken Colorado's capital, a swiftly growing city with a reputation for tolerance and open-mindedness symbolized by the election of a black mayor by predominantly white citizens.

"We've had a three-week rash of unanticipated violence by individuals that have been active as skinheads," Mayor Wellington Webb said. "It is certainly my hope that these are individual incidents."

The trouble began Nov. 6 when two young men held a SWAT team at bay and led police on a 20-mile chase that ended in a shower of gunfire in rush-hour traffic. One suspect said he had been prepared to kill if necessary.

In last week's shootout, veteran officer Bruce VanderJagt, 47, was killed. The suspect who killed himself, Mattheaus Jaehnig, a member of a group called the Denver Skins, had a demon's head tattoo on his belly with the words "blood and honor." He had been arrested seven times since dropping out of high school, including once for ordering his dogs to attack VanderJagt.

Thill, in another interview, this one with KMGH-TV, said that when he saw Dia at the bus stop, he thought "how he really didn't belong where he was, and I thought how easy it would be for me to take him out."

Thill said he shot Ms. VanVelkinburg, a single mother, because she was "a witness that had to be taken care of."

"She became my enemy within that minute because she witnesses it and she's dangerous because she could take me down," he said.

Denver has not been a hotbed of racist incidents, but a few crimes have drawn national attention.

Perhaps the city's most notorious hate crime was in 1984, when Jewish radio talk show host Alan Berg was shot to death. Three years later, two men belonging to a neo-Nazi gang were convicted of his murder.

The number of hate crimes in Colorado grew from 134 in 1995 to 146 last year, according to the Colorado Bureau of Investigation. Hate crime experts say such crimes often occur in a series, with one incident fueling others.

That has many in the city worried because at least 40 skinheads attended Jaehnig's funeral.

"It's common for there to be outbreaks of skinhead activity after a skinhead gathering," said Mark Potok, spokesman for the Southern Poverty Law Center in Montgomery, Ala., which tracks extremist groups.

NASA loses chance at solar observation

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle Columbia's astronauts struggled in vain to capture a sun-watching satellite Friday after the craft malfunctioned moments after its release.

Within an hour, NASA had lost any chance of conducting solar observations with the satellite, now or later in the mission. The space agency still wanted the satellite back, however, for the trip home.

A few minutes after releasing the satellite, astronaut Kalpana Chawla tried to grab it with the 50-foot shuttle robot arm. But the arm would not latch onto the satellite, and when she pulled back on the arm, she inadvertently sent the craft into a slow spin.

Columbia stayed at a safe distance from the satellite, but within grabbing distance, as the two spacecraft zoomed around the world.

"We're trying the best we can," said pilot Steven Lindsey.

Chawla waited for the grapple fixture on the satellite to face the robot arm before trying to latch onto it again. Mission Control, meanwhile, debated what to do as the minutes slipped by. One option was to have the crew's two spacewalkers grab the $10 million reusable satellite during an already-planned excursion Monday night.

After an hour, flight controllers instructed the six astronauts to give up, at least for the day. By that time, NASA had lost any chance of performing solar observations later in the flight — an internal clock turned off the pointing system 60 minutes after the satellite's release.

Metroplex radio stations play archived JFK tapes for new generation

DALLAS (AP) — A new generation has heard the chilling news that President Kennedy was gunned down in Dallas.

Forgotten audio tapes were dusted off and excerpts broadcast Friday on WBAP. KRLD also aired taped reports that had been archived. Both radio stations are in the Dallas-Fort Worth market.

The WBAP announcer's voice was taut with strain and disbelief as he reported the shooting that shocked the world.

"It has not been fully confirmed, but police radios are carrying that the president has been hit," Bob Welch said.

A contract employee of KXAS-TV, a former sister station of WBAP, recently found the reel-to-reel tapes, labels turned to the wall, while looking for storage space in the basement room where the station keeps old film.

"They said: 'WBAP — Kennedy Assassination Tapes,'". said Lee Elsesser, a free lance producer.

"I thought, 'I can't believe that they were left here if these were the actual tapes,'" Elsesser said Friday. "But at the same time I could understand how it could happen."

KXAS turned the tapes over to WBAP, which played some of them on the eve of the 34th anniversary of the Nov. 22, 1963, assassination.

"It gives you goose bumps," said WBAP operations manager Tyler Cox. "It's stuff people haven't heard in years."

Gary Mack, archivist of The Sixth Floor Museum in Dallas, said the quality of the tapes is "really impressive" because they were made on a portable reel-to-reel recorder.

He was interested in the historical aspect of the material.

"They do have some things in there that no one else has," Mack told the Star-Telegram. "It's worth being excited over."

Mack cited the complete recording of Kennedy's speech outside the Hotel Texas in Fort Worth on the damp morning of the assassination.

'Here is a bulletin from The Associated Press and the WBAP newsroom. President Kennedy may have been shot in Dallas. Stay tuned to WBAP 820 for the latest on this tragic event.'

—announcer on audio tapes that were dusted off and aired on the eve of JFK's assassination anniversary

Kennedy spoke with crowds in the parking lot of the hotel before going inside for a breakfast appearance. He painted a picture of the need for a strong United States.

"In the final analysis, that strength depends upon the willingness of the citizens of the United States to assume the burdens of leadership," Kennedy said. "I know one place where they are. Here, in this rain, in Fort Worth, in Texas, in the United States, we're going forward."

On KRLD, reporter Bob Huffaker reported a warm reception for the president's motorcade as it passed his downtown vantage point just before the shooting.

"There was no danger whatsoever and none in evidence of adverse reactions to the president's visit," Huffaker said, his report punctuated by police whistles controlling traffic.

But with the crack of rifle shots, the story, and the world, changed.

"Here is a bulletin from The Associated Press and the WBAP newsroom," an announcer said. "President Kennedy may have been shot in Dallas. Stay tuned to WBAP 820 for the latest on this tragic event."

KRLD's Jim Underwood was breathless as he described officers swarming toward the Texas School Book Depository in Dealey Plaza, where the shooting took place.

"The police are now surrounding the area down here," Underwood said. "Sirens are screaming. And evidently police believe that the man who fired the shots is still in the Texas School Book Depository building at the corner of Elm and Houston in downtown Dallas."

Minutes later, Norwood McLendon of WBAP read the grim bulletin from his news wire:

"The Associated Press reports from Dallas that President Kennedy was shot today just as his motorcade left the downtown section. Mrs. Kennedy is said to have jumped up and grabbed her husband and cried, 'Oh, no!,' and the motorcade sped off."

Texas executes Houston man for 1983 robbery-slaying

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — His appeals exhausted, a convicted killer was executed Friday night for fatally shooting a Houston woman during a robbery attempt in a supermarket parking lot more than 14 years ago.

Charlie Livingston was pronounced dead at 6:17 p.m., four minutes after a lethal dose of drugs began flowing into his arms.

"Y'all brought me here to be executed, not to make a speech," Livingston said while strapped to the gurney. "Get on with it — that's it."

Livingston, 35, gasped deeply three times, then wheezed but did not move again.

Watching through a nearby window was James Caldwell, husband of the woman Livingston was convicted of killing. Caldwell came to Texas Friday from Brisbane, Australia to attend the execution.

But Caldwell declined to speak with reporters afterward.

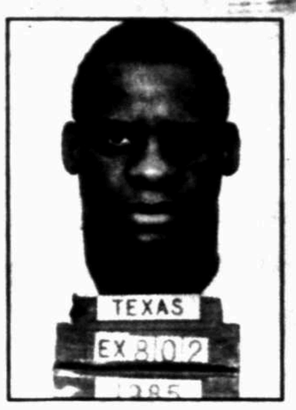
Livingston became the second condemned inmate this week to receive lethal injection in Texas and the 36th this year, adding to a state record. At least two more executions were set for this year, both in December.

After Livingston's appeals were exhausted, Gov. George W. Bush's legal staff recommended a request for clemency from the inmate's attorneys be rejected.

"I don't relish anyone being put to death," Jim Peecock, former Harris County assistant district attorney who prosecuted Livingston, said Friday. "I don't get any joy or pleasure. However, I believed it was the appropriate punishment under the law at the time. And it's still the law."

'Y'all brought me here to be executed, not to make a speech. Get on with it — that's it.'

— Charlie Livingston, executed for shooting woman to death in supermaret parking lot.



The 10th-grade dropout who worked as a warehouseman was convicted of killing Janet Caldwell, 38, during an Aug. 10, 1983 attack as the mother of two was carrying an armload of groceries to her van.

At the time, Livingston had served four years of a 10-year probation for trying to kill his ex-girlfriend and her boyfriend. The pair had been stabbed 17 times as they slept.

Livingston was hiding under Ms. Caldwell's van when the secretary and mother of two emerged from the grocery store on Houston's northwest side.

Witnesses testified at his trial that he darted from beneath the vehicle as the woman neared, pulled a 9mm pistol on her and tried to steal her purse. When she struggled, he shot her in the neck at close range. The witnesses, who saw the shooting from a service station across the street, said Livingston ran into an alley and rifled the woman's purse.

When he noticed people watching him across the street, he raised his weapon at them at least twice, warning them to stay away. Then he fled into some backyards in the neighborhood before circling back, apparently to retrieve his own car that was left at the service station.

By that time, police had arrived and he was noticed because he was sweating profusely and his trousers were badly torn.

Although the gunman had been masked, witnesses identified by his red and white T-shirt shirt, which carried the slogan: "We eat, sleep, ride, talk, breathe, live and love water skis."

Defense attorneys at his trial said this was a case of mistaken identity, but detectives found his shoe print in one of the yards behind the store.

Police also testified that when they tried to perform a metal trace test on him to determine if he had fired a gun, he spat on his hands and spat all over himself, trying to clean himself. He also spat on officers.

Judge declares mistrial in murder case because man with felony conviction served on grand jury

LUBBOCK (AP) — West Texas prosecutors say a mistrial in a capital murder case in Andrews underscores the shortcomings of the state's motor-voter registration law.

State District Judge James L. Rex declared a mistrial Tuesday in the case of Clayton James Snyder, 20, after prosecutors learned that one of the prospective jurors had a felony conviction for driving while intoxicated.

The same prospective juror also had served on the grand jury that indicted Snyder weeks earlier.

Snyder was to be tried in the October 1996 beating death of 87-year-old Lena Opal Easter in her Andrews home. Law officials have said they believe the attack occurred during a burglary, a combination punishable in Texas by life in prison or death.

The state motor-voter law, mandated by the federal National Voter Registration Act of 1993, allows Texas residents to register to vote automatically when they get a driver's license.

It also requires state judicial districts to summon prospective jurors from a list of licensed Texas drivers, rather than from a list of registered voters, as in the previous system.

Andrews County Attorney Katrina Jackson told the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal that she learned of the DWI conviction four weeks into jury selection only because of the same prospective juror's earlier service on the grand jury.

The current grand jury will have to attempt to re-indict up to 25 suspects, Ms. Jackson said.

Dawson County District Attorney Ricky Smith, a special prosecutor in the Snyder case, said the law makes jury selection cumbersome and expensive.

"The idea (of the motor-voter law) was good," Smith said. "The more diversity you can get in your jury pool, the better. It's just not practical."

He said the problems occur because felons and noncitizens, who aren't allowed to vote, usually can receive drivers' licenses.

Yoakum County District Attorney Richard Clark said that although the new system takes more time, the problem can be averted by checking prospective jurors' criminal records.

Sales skyrocket for sub-$1,000 PC

By David Einstein
N.Y. Times News Service

A year ago, the idea of a powerful, fully configured personal computer for less than $1,000 seemed farfetched. Not anymore.

As the PC industry gathers in Las Vegas this week for the annual Comdex trade show, one of the hottest topics was the explosive success of sub-$1,000 PCs, which now account for about one-fourth of all computer retail sales.

The biggest PC makers, including Compaq, Packard Bell and IBM, are falling all over themselves trying to cram leading-edge technology into entry-level machines that they can sell for less than a grand (that's without the monitor, which is usually an option for $250 and up). The result has been a boon for consumers, for whom PCs are becoming as affordable as big-screen TVs.

The success of the sub-$1,000 category suggests that consumers are starting to consider PCs as home electronics appliances for which technical specifications are a matter of overkill. The same trend has been followed by other products, including cameras and stereo equipment, which got to the point where basic performance was the same no matter what you bought.

It's not hard to see why cheap computers have attracted a following. They come with powerful chips, big hard drives, fast CD-ROM drives and are fully capable of running most Windows software.

Take for example IBM's new E16, introduced two weeks ago as the giant company's first entry in the sub-$1,000 market. It boasts a 166-megahertz chip from Advanced Micro Devices with MMX multimedia enhancements, a 2.1-gigabyte hard drive, a 20-speed CD-ROM drive, 3-D graphics and a 56-kilobits-per-second modem.

For $1,500 to $2,000 you could get a faster chip, more memory and a bigger hard drive, but it wouldn't let you work any better in Word for Windows or surf the Web any faster.

That's because very few software programs require the blazing technology of a high-end PC. Hardware technology advances faster than software technology, according to James Staten, an analyst at the

Ho, ho, hmmm: Points to consider when shopping

By Dwight Silverman
N.Y. Times News Service

If a name-brand computer is on your family's Christmas list this year, you have two main options for buying one — from a retailer or directly from the manufacturer. Each method has its own advantages and drawbacks.

Buying retail means you have someone local to turn to if something goes wrong, but retail prices are apt to be higher.

Buying direct is incredibly convenient — particularly if you purchase your system over the Internet — and prices will be less. But

Nader followers blast Microsoft

WASHINGTON — Frustrated with the slow pace of court proceedings and congressional hearings, Microsoft's competitors Thursday joined hands with consumer advocates and cybercritics to warn of dire consequences if the software giant is not restrained.

"Our society is in a precarious position, because we have so much control of a vital resource, software, in the control of a single company, Microsoft," said Roberta Katz, general counsel of Netscape Communications.

She sketched a bleak vision of a world in which Microsoft controls all news and advertising available over the Internet and charges anyone who wants to access such information: "There is the potential to do extreme harm to the economy if all business is under control of Microsoft."

But Microsoft, which as recently as last week had sought to dismiss the critics' gathering as meaningless, instead responded in force, aggressively courting reporters just as the company in recent days has aggressively courted public and congressional opinion.

Microsoft sent several public relations representatives to the Ralph Nader-sponsored Appraising Microsoft conference, and a group of software executives that work with Microsoft flew in to defend the company under a banner reading "Ralph Nader Doesn't Speak for Me."

"Big businesses are using Ralph Nader as their mascot to create an atmosphere of animosity toward their primary competitor, which happens to be Microsoft," charged Mike Sax, president of Sax Software Corp., a small software component provider based in Eugene, Ore.

Gates plays stand-up at Comdex

"I'm the only one in the world who can get a Windows NT error message when I try to flip on the lights."

LAS VEGAS — Microsoft CEO Bill Gates used humor Sunday to deflect criticism of his company at the Comdex computer industry convention.

In a self-deprecating speech before a standing-room-only crowd, he poked fun at the software giant's legal woes and occasional technical blunders.

Gates recited the top 10 reasons why he loves the PC.

No. 9, for example, was: "Every function in my new house is managed by the PC — and sometimes it works."

He quipped, "I'm the only one in the world who can get a (Windows) NT error message when I try to flip on the lights."

Ann Winblad, a well-known Silicon Valley venture capitalist, applauded Gates' lighthearted approach.

"It was great that he took such an upbeat attitude rather than diving into a spitball fight," she said. "He really elevated himself above everybody else in the industry."

But analyst Michael Pinckney said it's going to take more than a few jokes for Microsoft to repair its public image as a greedy monopoly.

"The person on the street really wants to know if Microsoft is really the good guy or the bad guy," said Pinckney, of Gartner Group in Seattle.

Comdex is the nation's largest high-tech convention, drawing 225,000 attendees every year.

Gates' speech here followed a month of intense controversy for Microsoft, prompted by a Department of Justice lawsuit charging the company with antitrust violations. The controversy was made even more intense last week when consumer advocate Ralph Nader and Gates' competitors got together in Washington, D.C., for some highly publicized Microsoft bashing.

During his speech, Gates played the statesman, defending the personal computer, yet acknowledging that it's still too complicated for most people to use.

As if to prove the point moments later, retired basketball star Kareem Abdul-Jabbar had trouble getting past the home page when he tried to show off his new Web site, www.kareem.com.

Gates, who looked diminutive next to the 7-foot, 2-inch former UCLA and Los Angeles Laker star, had to take control of the mouse — winning cheers and applause from a support-

Forget the suit and tie: More firms are using Internet for recruiting

By Diane Lewis
N.Y. Times News Service

When Babson College senior Daniel Root finally got around to job hunting this fall, he started late one evening from the comfortable confines of his dormitory room.

Root, a 22-year-old economics and accounting major, heard that the giant accounting firm Coopers & Lybrand was looking for soon-to-be college grads and was recruiting candidates over the Internet.

"I logged on at the crazy hour of midnight," recalls Root.

Three weeks later, Root received a job offer that he is still mulling.

"Basically, the difference between a face-to-face interview and one over the Internet is the system allows you to type into a laptop whenever you want," says Root. "So, you have more time to compose yourself and get your point across."

Coopers this fall became the first professional services company in the United States to use the Internet to screen college seniors for entry-level, general accounting, and auditing jobs. So far, between 300 and 500 Boston area students have logged on to Coopers' program, called Springboard, and about 100 are expected to be offered jobs.

Springboard is more than just an electronic resume repository. Custom designed by Aspen Tree Software of Laramie, Wyo., the program also helps determine and advises whether an applicant has the right skills for the job, and then evaluates whether the job seeker is likely to thrive in the firm's work environment. Applicants who pass the initial hurdle are invited to meet with a Coopers & Lybrand partner who relies on a profile compiled from Springboard to ask the right questions.

What began as an experiment in the 1980s is quickly taking hold in the 1990s as more and more employers, from food service firms to Boston's World Trade Center, turn to interactive computer, telephone, or Internet systems to prescreen and help select the best qualified applicants for a job.

Waltham-based MTS Information Services relies on resumes gleaned from Internet sites and 19 other sources to match companies with hard-to-locate high-tech professionals. The company represents some 200 Boston area firms that each pay $8,000 per year to have MTS search its data base for the appropriate resumes. A spinoff called HotChili Technology Inc. manages resume data bases for employers.

Plagued with high turnover, the foodservice and retail industries have turned to PC-based recruiting systems and voice-activated telephone screening tools to trim hiring costs. Burger King, Wendy's, McDonald's, and Chili's Grill & Bar are all doing it. So is Macy's, the New York-based department store.

"Some companies are actually opening up interactive employment centers," says Bill Parness, a spokesman for HReasy Inc., a North Carolina firm that designs telephone screening systems for retail companies with high employee turnover. "Rather than direct applicants to the personnel office, the companies are sending them to personal computers."

AFFORDABLE: Sub-$1,000 PCs find their way into the workplace

(From 9A)

Dataquest research firm in San Jose. "Machines a year old can run the latest software pretty well."

The driving force in creating the sub-$1,000 market has been the continual drop in prices that PC makers pay for components, especially processors. Chips for entry-level machines now go for less than $100, (versus more than $700 for Intel's latest Pentium IIs), and the prices are sure to drop even more as Intel dukes it out on the low end with challengers AMD and Cyrix.

Those companies make it a point to undercut Intel prices by about 25 percent. That translates into good deals for PC makers, who use non-Intel chips for most entry-level systems. The brisk sales of the systems suggest that buyers will gladly live without an Intel chip if the performance is solid and the price is right.

PC makers initially were reluctant to sell really inexpensive systems, fearing they would hurt business at the high end, where profit margins are juicier. While some of that has occurred, analysts said it looks as if the sub-$1,000 PCs have done more to expand the market than cannibalize it.

That's because a majority of the new low-priced machines are being sold to people who already own PCs — folks who probably wouldn't pay $1,500 for a new one, but can be enticed by the magic $1,000 barrier.

Industry experts note that many workers who do data entry and other straightforward jobs don't really need a Pentium computer.

The typical buyer of a sub-$1,000 is "a parent who uses the PC in the den for work but up until now has had to share it with the kids," said Tim Bajarin, president of Creative Strategies in San Jose. "Existing users are buying them as second or even third PCs."

Sub-$1,000 PCs from companies such as Hewlett-Packard and Digital Equipment are also starting to show up in the workplace, where corporations are using them to replace older desktop systems.

Industry experts note that many workers who do data entry and other straightforward jobs don't really need a Pentium computer. And a sub-$1,000 can be integrated into a corporate network just as easily as a higher-end machine.

CHRISTMAS: HP's bells and whistles both useful and cosmetic you'll probably end up with less pre-installed software and if something goes wrong, you'll have to work through the mail to get satisfaction.

Here are two multimedia systems to consider this season, one found in stores and another available via direct:

■ Pavilion 8180, $2,400 without monitor, Hewlett-Packard.

As with many PC manufacturers who sell at retail, Hewlett-Packard is doing what it can to make its systems stand out on crowded store shelves. Those bells and whistles are both useful and cosmetic.

First, here are the guts of this powerful system: a 266-megahertz Intel Pentium II processor; a whopping 48 megabytes of accelerated EDO memory; a spacious six-gigabyte hard drive; a 24-speed CD-ROM drive; a 56-kilobyte fax and voice modem that complies with the K56flex standard; impressive Polk Audio tower speakers; an ATI Rage II+ video card; and 3D stereo sound with wavetable FM synthesis for realistic MIDI music.

Hewlett-Packard has paid particular attention to the parts of the computer that people actually touch. The keyboard, which has a solid feel, plays host to a volume knob and a series of useful buttons. Punch the Internet button, for example, and it will launch your favorite browser, dialer or on-line service — you choose. You can also control the phone answering machine and the CD player from the keyboard.

The Pavilion comes with Logitech's Cordless Mouseman Pro, which has an odd shape that may require some getting used to. I don't care much for it — it seems too small and cramps my hands. But my wife, whose hands are smaller, thinks it's peachy.

It also has a nice look, with a rounded cabinet sculpted in multiple shades of gray.

The Pavilion has the best sound I've heard so far on a home PC that doesn't include a subwoofer. The Polk speakers are excellent.

There is only one real drawback to this machine. The ATI Rage card comes with only two megabytes of video memory. Given the increasing interest in digital imaging among home users — a genre Hewlett-Packard is pushing aggressively — I'm surprised that HP would be so stingy in this category.

■ Dimension XPS D266, $2,500 with monitor, Dell Computer.

Dell's machines are sold only over the phone or the Internet, so you won't find the company worrying too much about making its systems eye-catching. The box is plain vanilla on the outside, but it's one of the highest-quality PC buys around.

The D266 comes with a 266 megahertz Pentium II chip; 32 megabytes of SDRAM, another kind of accelerated memory; a 6.4-gigabyte hard drive; a Creative Labs AWE64 sound card; a U.S. Robotics X2 WinModem; Altec-Lansing speakers with a subwoofer; a 24-speed CD-ROM drive; and STB's new Velocity 128 video, connecting to an Accelerated Graphics Port.

That last feature is worth mentioning, particularly if you play lots of high-end computer games. The Velocity 128 uses a chip from nVidia that lets you play games using the OpenGL 3D standard — but for now, only if you're using Windows NT.

Open GL drivers for Windows 95 are due any time now, which would allow you to play GL versions of games such as id Software's hit Quake and the imminent Quake II. This is one of the best gaming cards around. If you're not into games, Dell also offers a Matrox Millennium II card for the Accelerated Graphics Port.

The D266 is one of the fastest machines I've ever used. Even with just 32 megabytes of RAM, it outperformed the Pavilion with its 48. The sound is excellent, thanks to a powerful subwoofer that comes with the Altec-Lansing speakers.

COMDEX: Despite problems, Microsoft still has supporters

ive crowd in the process.

After that, Gates promised to make technology easier to use. But some observers said Microsoft only wants simplicity on its own terms.

"They're saying, 'We're going to make things simple, but simple in our own image,'" said Chris LeTocq, an analyst for Dataquest of San Jose.

Gates sidestepped discussing the merits of the criticisms of his company, instead taking gentle jabs at his critics and himself.

He showed video clips of his previous speeches to demonstrate how he overused certain phrases, such as "very, very" "and so" and "total cost of ownership."

He also needled Nader, who made his name as a car safety advocate, saying he'd like to use Microsoft's car-buying Web site to show Nader his Corvair collection.

Despite recent travails, Gates and Microsoft have some fans in the heartland. Dr. Robert Brennen and his wife, Catherine, of Whitehall, Pa., arrived seven hours early to get a good seat at the speech.

"Historically, Gates has got to be one of the greats, up there with Einstein," Brennen said.

After the speech, at a press conference not attended by Gates, Gates' top lieutenant Steve Ballmer spoke more strongly.

"There is no law that protects the competitors," he said. "The law protects consumers."

Woman gives away $11.8 million lottery prize

"If you wish to be perfect, go, sell your possessions, and give the money to the poor, and you will have treasure in heaven."
— Matthew 19:21

By Amy Westfeldt
Associated Press

SOMERVILLE, N.J. — Eleanor Boyer's house is paid for. She has her pension. And no, even though her 1968 Chevy Malibu is in the shop, she doesn't need a new car.

What could she possibly want with the $11.8 million she won this month in the state lottery?

"God takes care of me," declared Ms. Boyer, a 73-year-old, never-married retiree who prides herself on her self-reliance and her unshakable faith.

Ms. Boyer decided to make her newfound wealth a gift to everyone but herself, donating the $8 million or so, after taxes, to her church and her town.

Although the donation stunned the congregation at Church of the Immaculate Conception and a community where the locals are kind enough to nod and smile at strangers, theologians said Ms. Boyer's gift should not surprise Christians who have faith.

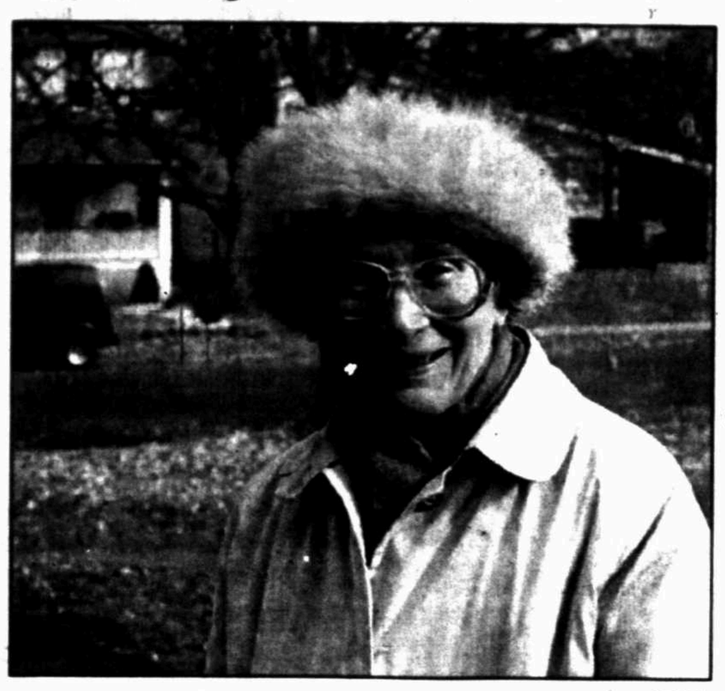
"We are constantly being called during the course of life to let go and to trust in God," said Monsignor David Lee of the Buffalo diocese. "In her heart, she is answering the call, to share what we have with those who are in need."

But one of her pastors, Brian Nolan, said even the most giving souls don't necessarily give it all.

"Your faith doesn't teach you to give all your wealth away," Nolan said. "There's just a deep spirit there."

A week after reporters from around the nation descended on her modest, immaculate Cape Cod home, Ms. Boyer appeared bored by the questions.

"I always said if I won I'd give half of it to the church," she said, shrugging in her faux fur hat and trench coat as she waited for a neighbor to drive her to a meeting with the church's financial adviser.



AP Photo
New Jersey lottery winner Eleanor Boyer, 73, pauses briefly in the driveway of her home in Somerville, N.J., Nov. 12. Boyer says she will donate almost all of her $11.8 million pre-tax winnings to her church and various volunteer first-aid and fire companies in Somerville.

Ms. Boyer has spent a lifetime of giving and praying, rising at 5:30 each day to pray at home, then at 7 a.m. Mass. She taught catechism classes and helped count collection money over the years for the 2,800-family congregation.

She also nurtured those beyond her church family, taking early retirement from a chemical company where she worked as a buyer to nurse her sick mother for seven years.

On her block, next-door neighbor Dave Allena says, "she's the one that shovels everybody's sidewalk" when it snows.

Allena says he and other neighbors have had to persuade Ms. Boyer not to give every cent of her winnings to others because of the high taxes charged to first-time millionaires in New Jersey.

"She gives too much away, she's not going to be able to pay her tax liability," he said. "So they're going to come and take her house."

But many organizations in this town of 12,000 about 50 miles west of New York City are celebrating a windfall, including the town's rescue squad, the volunteer fire department, and Great Expectations, a clinic where up to six homeless, pregnant women find shelter.

"It's a dream come true," said clinic director Peg Wright of the donation. She says she wants to pay for a discharge plan that oversees the women's progress for a year after giving birth.

The church hasn't decided how to spend its money.

Ms. Boyer's giveaway may have been most shocking to the millions of Americans who pray daily for a lucky number that will bring them new wealth and a new life.

"It's sort of counterculture, because we hold out the promise of the lottery changing one's life, giving the answer to all one's problems," said Monsignor George Trabold, a former development director for the Newark archdiocese.

"Her values were not really in material things. A new car is not going to make her a happier person."

Ms. Boyer is far more interested in talking about how she almost didn't win the lottery. Every week, she religiously played $2 on the Pick 6, calling it a donation to the state education fund rather than a gamble.

"This time, I took $5 worth," she said. "If I just took my $2, the guy behind me would have won."

Perhaps, Allena suggests, luck had nothing to do with it.

"She didn't play to win," Allena said. "If she won, it was going to be an accident, and it was going to be from God."

Number of children getting AIDS from their mothers drops

ATLANTA (AP) — The number of American children contracting AIDS from their mothers at birth dropped 43 percent between 1992 and 1996 because women are getting tested earlier and beginning drug treatment, the government said Thursday.

"This is a success story, and it is very encouraging news that our prevention efforts are working," said Dr. Mary Lou Lindegren of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

The CDC said 516 children were diagnosed with AIDS in 1996, down 43 percent from 905 in 1992.

The best evidence of prevention's payoff can be seen in the rate of infants diagnosed with AIDS before age 1. The rate has fallen 39 percent, from 8.4 per 100,000 births in 1992 to 5.1 in 1995, the CDC said.

Doctors believe most mothers who pass HIV to their babies do so during delivery, when the infant is exposed to the mother's blood and other fluids.

Nationwide, the anti-viral drug AZT has been given regularly during pregnancy since a successful 1994 experiment. Without treatment, more than 25 percent of HIV-positive mothers will pass the virus to their newborn. With the drug, the rate drops to about 8 percent.

HIV-positive pregnant women begin taking AZT after their first trimester. AZT is then given intravenously during labor. And the infant receives AZT syrup for six weeks after birth.

When babies are born with HIV, 20 percent of them will develop AIDS within the first year of their life. The rest will probably develop the disease over the next 10 years, Ms. Lindegren said.

Currently, 7,310 of the nation's total 626,334 AIDS cases in adults and children were acquired during birth, the CDC said.

Your Hot Water Heater Is Robbing You Blind
Actually, it's not your water heater's fault. It's the mineral scale that accumulates inside your water heater. Did you know the average water heater in our area has anywhere from a fourth to more than half an inch of scale which means it's using up to 90 percent more energy -- and money - to heat water every day? The layer of scale grows and gets more expensive as time goes by. Most people don't even know it. Now you do.
You can simply and affordably stop more scale from forming and dissolve existing scale in your water heater and throughout your home while you and your family enjoy the health and beauty benefits of hard water that is energized to "act soft." Call today. We guarantee you will love the results.

Some churches bar straight marriages to protest ban on gay weddings

By Vicki Brown
Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Suzanne Prince married Hunter Allen at a friend's home. That wasn't the plan, but the couple had no choice because their church — Edgehill United Methodist — doesn't allow marriage ceremonies.

The Edgehill congregation decided that until the United Methodist Church allows gay marriages, no marriage ceremonies of any kind will be performed in their chapel.

"If the United Methodist Church wasn't going to allow gay people to get married in the church, I agree that straight people shouldn't either," said Prince, who's been married nine months.

Similar acts of protest have been reported elsewhere. The Rev. Jan Nunley, rector at St. Peter's and St. Andrew's Episcopal Church in Providence, R.I., will preside over church weddings for straight couples. But she won't sign marriage licenses for them.

"I was in considerable anguish over the fact that I can create a legal relationship for mixed-gender couples, but couldn't do that for same-gender couples who've lived together for 25 years," she said.

She complies with her bishop's wishes by conducting gay weddings off church property.

The National Council of Churches has no information on how many individual churches perform gay marriage ceremonies, or refuse to allow traditional marriages to protest bans on gay marriages.

Southern Baptist Convention spokesman Herb Hollinger said he knows of no Southern Baptist churches that recognize gay unions or have refused to allow traditional weddings. Theology is left to local churches, but convention principles prohibit promoting or affirming homosexuality, he said.

The United Church of Christ allows individual churches to set their doctrines, so gay marriages can be performed. But any church that opposes such unions may bar them, said Hans Holznagel, a public relations officer for the church.

The Roman Catholic Church does not allow priests to perform gay marriages, while the Episcopal Church is less clear.

The Rev. Robert Warren Cromey of Trinity Episcopal Church in San Francisco performs gay weddings, though his bishop opposes them.

"I don't obey a bad law," he said.

The United Methodist Church bars its ministers from performing gay weddings, and they can face discipline if they do not comply.

Edgehill's policy was drafted when a pastor in Atlanta was disciplined for blessing a homosexual couple's wedding, said Kathryn Mitchem, who chaired Edgehill's Administrative Council which adopted the policy.

Deen Thompson, a gay congregant at Edgehill, prizes the support of fellow parishioners.

Before 1996, some Methodist ministers conducted weddings for gay members. But the 1996 church general conference adopted a prohibition against ministers conducting same-sex unions in Methodist churches.

"By every standard we know, marriage is a union of male and female, made valid in the sight of God by blessing in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit," said the Rev. Riley Case, pastor of St. Luke's United Methodist Church in Kokomo, Ind.

Case is a member of the United Methodist Church Good News, a group that supports traditional scriptural views.

The Rev. Jeanne Knepper of Portland, Ore., a spokesperson for Affirmation, a United Methodist ministry of outreach to homosexuals, disagrees with the church's policy on gay marriages. But she does not believe individual churches should bar all marriages as a protest.

SATURDAY, NOV. 22, 1997

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Nov. 22, 1997:
You are finally able to clear up an obstacle this year, though it requires a lion's share of work and accountability to make it happen. Work is demanding, and you meet the demand. You will spend more but also become active in the process of earning more. Avoid power plays, and be direct. If you are single, use this period through January to meet others. You will probably want to settle down in 1998. If attached, make an effort to improve the environment for the two of you. Home life becomes even more important. VIRGO is pushy at times.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Stay mellow, and don't let your emotions get triggered. You are overwhelmed by pressure. Explore different ways to resolve problems over the next few weeks. Breaking past self-imposed barriers is possible. Tonight: Make it relaxing.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Dig into your imagination; use your fantasies as a guideline. A loved one is happy to participate in this sharing. You are far more creative and innovative than you give yourself credit for. Jump on a last-minute invitation! Tonight: You are capable of great mischief.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Putter around the house. If feeling badgered by a friend, take time off, hang up the phone and do your own thing. In the next month, you consider handling your social life differently. Meanwhile, let a partner entice you to a new way of thinking. Tonight: You are happiest at home!
CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ Discussions are animated, and you hear a lot! You might be somewhat out of kilter, or domestic conversations trigger you. Let go, and do what feels right. A friend or loved one is full of energy and fun. If you let go, you can have a banner day. Tonight: Party-hop.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ A pet project takes highest priority now. Interpersonal relationships are challenging. Another is capable of manipulation, to get what he wants. Your best ploy is not to play; do your own thing. Use your high energy creatively. Tonight: Mind your budget.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★★ You are personality-plus, though a child or loved one might jump up and down to have his way. The exercise might be good for him! Go off, and do what is in your heart. Your creativity and high energy need an outlet. Tonight: If single, it could be memorable!
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★ Put your hands over your ears. You don't want to hear another's point of view; furthermore, you could care less. Pressure abounds. Something very important to you or a family member could be preferable outlets for your attention. Tonight: Mystery makes you more exciting.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ Aim for what you want. You receive helpful feedback, which you need to listen to. Be direct about your feelings; express frustration and irritation. It is important to remain clear. Others will be able to hear your message better. Tonight: Be careful with spending!
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ The sun moving into your sign adds to your charisma. Deal with authority figures early in the day. A decision to put in extra hours is grounded. After all, you might want more spending money; Christmas is around the corner! Tonight: Stay in the limelight!
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ You are high-voltage energy. Accept an invitation. You will break ground. Say yes; right now is perfect for a little exploring. You need a break and some perspective. A minitrip could be the answer. Let your hair down. Tonight: The more different, the better.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ You get a kick out of a partner. You might feel he is manipulating you, but you understand he wants you on his team. Smile about this. You might want to change plans, even if a friend feels as if you left him in the lurch. Tonight: Share a secret with that special person.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Popularity is high and offers you many options. Visit friends, and party. Don't answer your phone; surprises of surprises, a boss wants you, or there is another responsibility calling. Avoid demands. Follow through on what you want. Tonight: The party goes on and on.

Henry Winkler, Rhea Perlman dish up turkey dinners for 100 children

LOS ANGELES — Henry Winkler and Rhea Perlman dished up turkey dinners for 100 children to kick off an early Thanksgiving and launch a new program to feed needy youngsters.

The feast launched the Venice site of the Kids Cafe, a nationwide program that provides daily hot meals to low-income and homeless children.

"They're kids. We should do everything we can for them," said Perlman, who co-starred on the long-running NBC hit "Cheers."

The cafe is a collaboration between the Los Angeles Regional Food Bank and the Children's Action Network, founded by Winkler and actress Kate Capshaw. Winkler is best known for his role as the Fonz on "Happy Days," which ran on ABC from 1974-1984.

Christine Lahti of CBS' "Chicago Hope," Kim Delaney of ABC's "NYPD Blue" and Laura Innes of NBC's "ER" were also on hand for Tuesday's dinner.

PITTSBURGH — Andy Warhol's film, video and television works — valued at about $9 million — have new homes at four museums.

The Andy Warhol Foundation for the Visual Arts presented the film gifts Wednesday to the Pittsburgh-based Andy Warhol Museum; the Museum of Modern Art and the Whitney Museum of American Art, both in New York City; and the UCLA Film and Television Archive in California.

Warhol's art was bequeathed to the foundation after the artist's death in 1987 and the foundation will retain copyrights to his paintings and prints.

Warhol, who grew up in Pittsburgh, became famous as the leading proponent of pop art with his paintings of Campbell's Soup cans, among other works. In 1963, he began making films, including "Empire," in which a camera focuses on the Empire State Building for hours.

The foundation handed over 30 full-length films, 500 "Screen Tests" — Warhol's portraits of celebrities — and 100 hours of videotapes.

LOS ANGELES — He's still the leader of the gang so Mickey Mouse is going back to work on television with all his pals in tow.

"MouseWorks," a weekly half-hour series, is set to make its debut in January 1999, featuring the first regularly produced new TV footage of the Disney cartoon icon since the original 1955-59 run of "The Mickey Mouse Club."

Joining him will be pals Donald Duck, Minnie Mouse, Goofy, Pluto and Daisy, with voices matching those of the original characters.

Roy E. Disney, vice chairman of the board for Walt Disney Co., made the announcement Tuesday in honor of Mickey's 69th birthday. The mouse made a few movie appearances in recent years — in the 1995 short "Runaway Brain" and in 1983's "Mickey's Christmas Carol."

Disney hasn't decided whether to air "MouseWorks" on Disney-owned ABC, in syndication or on cable's Disney Channel.

FRIDLEY, Minn. — Jonny Lang, who at 16 is warming up audiences for the Rolling Stones, signed up for a smart cause.

The blues guitarist autographed a Benedict guitar to be auctioned Saturday at a fund-raiser for Totino-Grace High School, a parochial school in this Twin Cities suburb. The guitar, which Lang put his name on Tuesday, is valued at $1,100.

Lang, a North Dakota native who now lives in suburban Roseville, has been touring since the release of his album "Lie to Me."

In January, he will be the Rolling Stones' warm-up act for seven stadium shows.

LOS ANGELES — What's 20 years between Mary and Rhoda? If the ideas for a new show are any indication, they sure were living.

A new series will reunite Mary Tyler Moore and Valerie Harper as their 1970s characters Mary Richards and Rhoda Morgenstern.

The show, scheduled for the 1998 fall TV lineup, may feature the two as friends who have lost touch with each other over the years, but meet again as widows, Daily Variety reported Wednesday. Each will have a daughter named for their old friend.

ABC has ordered 13 episodes.

Moore and Harper co-starred in "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," which aired from 1970-77. Moore portrayed Richards, a single woman who was an associate producer of the evening news on WJM-TV in Minneapolis. Harper played her upstairs neighbor, a role she spun off into her own hit series, "Rhoda," which aired from 1974-78.

Children offer thoughtful, lighthearted take on Bible

By David Briggs
Associated Press

The most important commandment: "Thou shalt not lie. Your mother and God will find out the truth anyways."

The overriding message of the Old Testament: "Don't be a bad boy or girl. You should listen to God or you might end up in a whale."

And when God asked Cain what happened to Abel, Cain's reply: "I want to see my lawyer before I answer any more questions, God."

Ask elementary school children about some of the best-known figures and stories of the Bible, and the responses are refreshingly honest, personal and lighthearted.

In a book due soon in paperback, "Just Build the Ark and the Animals Will Come: Kids Talk About Those Amazing Bible Stories," children reveal a theological perspective of a God who is familiar, not remote in the heavens.

"For kids, it has meaning to them in the sense it is a personal God who is a figure in their lives," says author David Heller, a Boston-based psychotherapist.

Heller, whose other books include "Talking to Your Child About God" and "The Children's God," interviewed some 200 children from various faiths in public and parochial schools for his latest book.

Their responses showed not only a degree of biblical literacy but also a blend of humor and deep spirituality. "In the same breath, children may entertain us and still teach us about the nature of our existence and about the nature of God," Heller says.

Moving through the Bible, from Genesis to Job, the children offer a range of insights from how Moses looks — "long hair and a headband that said 'Freedom for the People' on it" — to the Old Testament's advice — "Love God 365 days a year. ... Be careful not to take many days off."

AP/Amy Kranz

Throughout, children are preeminently practical. For example, 7-year-old Ethan speculates why Samson would not cut his hair: "Samson probably hated going to the barber like I do, and that's what got him into so much trouble."

Jenny, 12, probes the moral of the story of Samson and Delilah: "Bad relationships can be murder on your hair." And Austin, 8, explains the relationship between God and Satan: "God is like my mother and the devil is like my brother."

Pity the religious education teacher who has 7-year-old Carey in her class when the subject is Adam and Eve. "I'm not sure they even got married, but nobody ever talks about that," Carey observes.

One of the children's favorite Biblical stories is Noah's Ark.

Heller says children will tackle the tough question of why there had to be a flood. But they find themselves drawn to the comforting idea that all creatures are preserved in the boat.

"Everyone has a partner, and they're not alone in the world," Heller says.

Another favorite is David and Goliath, where the boy with a slingshot defeats the Philistine hero. Ten-year-old Ross says the epic account shows that "young people are good at things, too.... You can tell that God picked David because He was going with a youth movement at the time."

Sometimes, the mix of simple and profound truths from a child's perspective can be striking. Of creation, 11-year-old Nancy says, "Love was created on the first day, and the rest is history."

Seeing the Bible through the eyes of a child reminds people of a down-to-earth wisdom that is universal. Their eyes, Heller says, are "brimming with hope and faith and love for a God that is beyond the scope of our imaginations and yet can be readily found in a child's heart, and in our own hearts as well."

Foster grandma helps students who fall behind

By Kiemonn Jones
Associated Press

WAGONER, Okla. — Children's eyes brighten when she opens the door.

Each kindergartener waits anxiously for "Grandma" to greet them with an enthusiastic, "Hello," or a warm hug.

It's Mildred Daniels' personableness that makes her unique in the eyes of Virginia Christy, kindergarten teacher at Maple park Elementary School in Wagoner.

Mrs. Daniels — Wagoner County's 1997 Foster Grandparent of the Year — said her motivation is the love and affection she receives from the children.

"I need the kids just as much as they need me," she said.

Since her husband died, Mrs. Daniels has been lonely, and becoming a foster grandparent has helped.

"I thought I needed something better to do than look out the window. If you linger around doing nothing, you're going to get in trouble. I wanted to make myself useful."

She's been "useful" for six years.

Mrs. Daniels serves as a teacher's aide and offers individual attention to students with special needs.

"I helped two children the other day who didn't know their letters. Once I helped them learn their ABCs, we go into reading and pronunciation."

Ms. Christy said Mrs. Daniels is like a shadow.

"What I can't accomplish normally, she helps me," Ms. Christy said. "Like if the child is behind and I need to go ahead, she works with them.

"She works hard to give them positive feedback. She tries to give attention to the kids who don't get a lot."

Sandy Fleming, former kindergarten teacher at Mapole Park, remembers the special attention Mrs. Daniels gave the children.

"She'd talk with them until they were feeling better. She gave them a big smile and hugs. She was like a grandparent to them," Ms. Fleming said.

And Mrs. Daniels teaches more than the basics, Ms. Christy said.

"She's taking all the things she has done for many years and teaching them about it," she said. "It's all the things we take for granted. Sometimes parents get so busy. Kids are not learning these things."

"She teaches them things that they would normally learn at home," Ms. Fleming said.

But in some ways, it's like Mrs. Daniels is home.

"It's not just a job for her, it's personal," said Joanna Ervin, a kindergarten teacher at Maple Park.

"It's like real grandma love, not just a love to help you out.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Turkey served

Ranchland Heights Baptist Church is serving a Thanksgiving turkey dinner at noon following the Sunday service.

Also, the Wednesday evening service has been canceled.

Nov. 30 is "Fifth Sunday Singing." All singers and groups are invited to participate. To sign up call Barbara Selman at 687-4344.

Service planned

ODESSA — Unity of West Texas, 210 E. 12th St., is planning a Thanksgiving service 7 p.m. Sunday.

Music i to accompany meditation and a short message.

The public is invited to attend.

Outstanding people

Former Midlander, the Rev. J. Allen Lowe, of South Shore Christian Church in Corpus Christi, has been selected as one of the 2,000 outstanding people of the 20th century by the International Biographical Centre in Cambridge, England.

Lowe, a 1964 graduate of Midland High School, taught Bible classes at both Midland and Lee high schools between 1970 and 1975. He is the former youth minister at Memorial Christian Church of Midland.

The award was presented to 2,000 people in the fields of science, music, politics, art and religion who contributed to the betterment of mankind, according to a spokesman from the church.

Bible week set

The Christian Science Reading Room, 201 W. Wall St., is celebrating National Bible Week, Monday through Friday with a display of various Bibles.

The room is open 11 a.m.-3 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Also, a Thanksgiving Day service is set for 10:30 a.m. Thursday at First Church of Christ, Scientist, 1001 W. Tennessee Ave.

Child care is to be provided.

Trumpet played

Rudy Cervantes of Colorado Springs, Colo., is to bring his "Heavenly Trumpet Ministries" to First Church of the Nazarene, 1208 W. Wall St., at 10 a.m. Sunday.

Cervantes is getting his degree in church music at Nazarene Bible College in Colorado Springs.

Celebration set

Greater St. Luke A. M. E. Church, 401 S. Adams St., is celebrating its 69th anniversary with a service set for 3 p.m. Saturday.

The Rev. Bill Palmer, pastor at Mount Rose Baptist Church, will be the featured speaker.

The public is invited to attend.

Seminar planned

A Walk Thru the Old Testament seminar is to be conducted at Our Savior's Lutheran Church, 3309 Neely in Midland, on Dec. 7.

Walk Thru the Bible seminars feature format that utilizes interactive learning techniques to help people absorb — and remember — the key character, geography, and major themes of the Old Testament.

The cost of the seminar is $16 a person, which includes a light dinner as well as child care for younger children.

For more information or to receive a registration form, call 699-0307, 682-7127 or 694-4517.

Offering received

Midland Lutheran Church, 2705 West Michigan, on Sunday — Christ the King Sunday — is to receive the annual Thankoffering from and for the Women of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in American.

Sunday's service, which begins at 10:30 a.m., is sponsored by the Women of the ELCA to honor Christ by viewing the entire church year from advent to pentecost.

Following this service the Lutheran Youth Organization will serve the annual Thanksgiving dinner in the church fellowship hall.

Midland Lutheran will celebrate Thanksgiving with a service 7 p.m. Wednesday.

The Sunday School hour classes for all ages begins at 9:15 a.m.

For more information, please call Pastor Glenn Kramer at 694-1373.

Churches join

First, Grace, and Trinity Presbyterian churches will be joining together for their Service of Thanksgiving at 7 p.m. Nov. 26, at Grace Presbyterian, 2801 N. Garfield St.

The Rev. Steve Wilkins of First Presbyterian Church will be preaching. This service features offerings of thanksgiving and praise, special music by the combined choirs of each church, and the celebration of communion.

A free-will offering for the St. Andrews Mission parish fund will be collected.

The public is invited to attend. Child care will be available for toddlers and infants.

Services planned

Holy Cross Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod plans Sunday services at 9 a.m. and Sunday School and Bible classes for all ages beginning at 10:15 a.m.

The Adult Bible Class is studying the series "That The World May Know".

Members of Holy Cross Lutheran Church will be celebrating Thanksgiving with a Thanksgiving dinner, Sunday at 5:30 p.m. in the Fellowship Hall.

There will be a special Thanksgiving Worship Service 7 p.m. Nov. 26. Child care will be provided.

Smocking lessons are offered Tuesday evening beginning at 7:30 p.m. in the Fellowship Hall. Anyone interested in learning how to smock is welcomed to join in on the Christian Fellowship.

For more information, contact the church office, 570-8149.

Remembrance set

Midland Area AIDS Association (MAAS) will host a World AIDS Day remembrance and worship service 7 p.m. Dec. 1 at First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave.

Attendees will be invited to light a candle for someone lost to AIDS or someone living with AIDS. The service will include music provided by local singers and musicians.

Speakers will include the Rev. Richard Braun, First Presbyterian Parish Associate and chairman of the MAAS board; Judy Warren, MAAS executive director; Alan Williams, chaplain at Midland Memorial Hospital and Medical Center; the Rev. Gary Groves, pastor of First Christian Church in Big Spring; and Gary Kincaid, executive director of Clover House in Odessa.

Special guest speakers will include family members speaking about loved ones they have lost to AIDS.

The public is invited to attend.

Concert planned

ABILENE — Acappella, a popular Christian vocal group, will be in concert at 7 p.m. today at Moody Coliseum on the campus of Abilene Christian University.

Tickets are $6 in advance and $8 at the door. For more information or group discounts call 1-915-675-5050. In Abilene, tickets may be purchased at Abilene Educational Supply, Bible Book Store and the Love Shop in the mall.

Meetings set

The Living Stone Singles Group is currently meeting at 9:40 a.m. Sundays in Room 205A, First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave.

Guest speakers include David Fowler, marketing director Petroleum Listing service, Sunday; Jim May, director of the Family Wellness Center, Sunday; Judy Warren, executive director of the Midland Area AIDS Support Foundation and experienced Stephens minister, Dec. 7.

Membership is open to all singles of all ages from college level up.

A Midland-area professional who would consider a speaking engagement, call Betsy at the church office, 684-7821.

Exercise classes for older adults are being held from 11 to 11:45 a.m. Monday through Friday at First United Methodist Church, downtown at Main Street and Ohio Avenue.

The exercises are being led by Evelyn Glover of Nurses Unlimited in the Fellowship Hall. Classes are open to the public at no charge.

Study group set

ODESSA — Unity of West Texas, 210 E. 12th, is offering Dr. Emile Cady's "Lessons in Truth" Study Group at 9:30 a.m. Sundays. The subject is "The Twelve Powers."

A "Course in Miracles" is being offered at 6:30 p.m. Sundays. Moderator is Jeannie Raff.

A meditation and workshop is being offered at 7 p.m. Wednesdays on Caroline Myss' book, "Anatomy of the Spirit, The Seven Stages of Power and Healing." The program is being taught by Barbara Harris.

Archbishop warns members against spreading of ashes

SANTA FE, N.M. — The Archdiocese of Santa Fe has warned members that scattering ashes of loved ones is improper, indeed forbidden by the church.

Catholics have sprinkled their relatives' ashes on mountains, rivers, oceans and other places since the church approved cremation in the 1980s. But reports of odd funereal practices prompted Archbishop Michael Sheehan to write a pastoral letter reaffirming Roman Catholic Church policy.

Entitled "To Honor the Dead," the letter noted that Pope John Paul II has called U.S. customs "the culture of death." The letter stated that abortion and euthanasia have cheapened life.

The church teaches respect for human life and for the body after the soul leaves it in death. Remains, either the body or its ashes, must be buried or placed in a mausoleum blessed by a priest, he said.

SALT LAKE CITY — Jimmy Carter, in opposition to Southern Baptist leaders, says Mormons should be considered part of the Christian community.

The Deseret News reported that the former president, speaking in a teleconference with religion writers, said leaders were wrong to imply The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is a non-Christian cult.

He said they "are trying to act as the Pharisees did, who were condemned by Christ, in trying to define who can and who cannot be considered an acceptable person in the eyes of God.

"In other words, they're making judgments on behalf of God. I think that's wrong."

Some fundamentalist Protestant denominations criticize Mormon acceptance of additional scriptures — the Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants and Pearl of Great Price — and their temple worship as departures from traditional Christianity.

The Southern Baptist Convention meets in Salt Lake City next summer.

St. Ann's begins preparations for 100th anniversary

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff writer

In just under a year, St. Ann's Catholic Church will mark it's 100th birthday. And just like any other 100-year-old, she will sit quietly while an expected mass of people gather to congratulate her. Public, church and school officials as well as hundreds of parishioners, are expected to flock to the church on Nov. 5, 1998, a Thursday, for the huge centennial celebration.

"Inasmuch as one cannot celebrate anything but football on Fridays, the anniversary celebration is set for Thursday, the 5th," joked Monsignor Timothy Murphy, pastor at St. Ann's. "We'll have Eucharist, some sort of open parish dinner (and) we hope to put something together to give the parish as an anniversary gift."

Murphy said the three options for the parish gift are expanding St. Ann's School to include 7th and 8th grades; a new chapel in which to celebrate daily masses, or a new office complex.

"It would be quite an undertaking to try to do them all," Murphy said. "It would be something that would have to be done sequentially."

An open parish meeting is scheduled for 2 p.m. today regarding which of the three is most feasible; on Tuesday, the combined parish council and finance committee will make the decision on which item will get the go ahead.

St. Ann's, the first Catholic church in Midland, was actually a Mission of the Church at Stanton. The cornerstone for St. Ann's was laid Oct. 24, 1896, when Midland had 1,500 residents. The Stanton parish sent the Rev. Albert Wagner in 1892 where he purchased a lot on E. Texas St.

Rev. Wagner eventually raised $500 from among the 45 Catholic families to erect the first structure in which Mass was celebrated until the establishment of the present day facility in 1947.

The 100th anniversary of St. Ann's precedes by just over a year the arrival of the new millennium. To better prepare Catholics for the year 2000, St. Ann's is including in the church bulletin occasional terms that better explain the millennium.

Some include:

Millennium — A word with two meanings. First, the span of a thousand years; second, according to the Book of Revelation, the last book of the Bible, a thousand year period of holiness during which Christ is to rule on earth (Rev. 10:1-5). Like many of the passages in Revelation, the least understood and most misinterpreted Biblical book, the meaning of the images used is not always clear. It is important to remember, too, that the writer of Revelation thought that Jesus was coming soon.

Jubilee 2000 — Pope John Paul II has called the church to a time of thanksgiving and joy, a holy year of repentance, special blessings, prayers and pilgrimages, that (Catholics) will observe during the year 2000.

Evangelization — A term favored by Pope John Paul II to describe a renewed effort. (Catholics) are called to proclaim the Gospel in such a way as to transform modern culture and society.

Preparation for crossing the threshold of the new millennium, the Year 2000, has been going on for much of the 20th century and from this view the Second Vatican Council can be seen as inaugurating a new era. (Catholics) are called to commitment to the teachings of Vatican II, to defense of basic values of peace and justice expounded in papal encyclicals and to increased sensitivity to the work of the Spirit in different communities, cultures and societies.

WHAT SAITH GOD...
ABOUT SALVATION BY FAITH ONLY?
What doth it profit, my brethren, though a man say he hath faith, and have not works? can faith save him? ...faith, if it hath not works, is dead being alone...Thou believest that there is one God; thou doest well: the devils also believe and tremble. But will though know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead? ...Ye see then how that by works a man is justified and not by faith only...For as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also. - - James 2:14-26

Hope.

There's Plenty To Go Around.
Wouldn't it be great if we went through life without any problems? Well, that's not the way things are. We all struggle. But there is a way to face whatever comes along with peace, and with confidence.
We're your neighbors, the people of The Lutheran Church–Missouri Synod, and we invite you to celebrate with us that special hope and peace that Christ alone can bring.

Former LSU football player gaining strength after heart transplant

By George Morris
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — A short jog in David Watkins' neighborhood is nothing compared to the kind of workouts he experienced as a Louisiana State University football player — nonetheless, it represents a great victory.

On Sept. 16, just 10 days before his 20th birthday, Watkins received a heart transplant at Ochsner Foundation Hospital in Metairie. After remaining in the hospital for less than two weeks, Watkins went home. He had to return when his body began to reject the heart, but treatment quickly overcame the problem.

"He's right on target", said Dr. Frank Smart, an Ochsner cardiologist who treats Watkins. "He's doing very well."

Early this year, doctors diagnosed Watkins with dilated cardiomyopathy, which meant his heart muscles were becoming weak and flabby. He was placed on the heart transplant list in July and, as his condition deteriorated, was hospitalized in August.

Watkins received a heart much faster than Ochsner doctors expected. Based on national statistics, he was lucky to get one at all.

"Between the ages of 0 and 65 there are around 40,000 people who need a heart transplant and about 2,300 donors available every year," Smart said. "So, roughly one out of 20 who needs one gets one."

At 6 feet 4, Watkins weighed 220 pounds as an LSU defensive end last year. He dropped to 166 shortly before his transplant operation and is slowly gaining back the weight.

As he gains strength, Watkins walks around a park near his home. The only difference he has noticed in his heart, however, has been at rest.

"I noticed if I was lying down, my old heart, if I was looking at it, I could see it beating," Watkins said. "With the new heart, it beats but it's not really jumping out like my old heart."

That Watkins or any other heart transplant recipient lives to make such an observation is because of two miracles — one of nature and one of modern science.

A heart will beat even without a nerve connection to the brain. That is critical, since the connection must be severed when removing the diseased heart.

"The heart muscle, if you sever it from any mammal and place it on a dish, it has the capacity to beat," said Dr. Mandeep Mehra, an Ochsner cardiologist. "The heart runs on adrenaline, actually, more than anything else."

Without the brain governing its activity, a new heart will initially run at a fairly constant 100 beats per minute, which is 20 to 40 beats faster than the normal heart rate.

Some regeneration occurs in about 70 percent of patients, Smart said. In some, the regeneration is complete enough for the brain to directly influence the heartbeat. In others, the nerve connection heals only enough for the person to distinguish chest pains when there are coronary artery blockages.

The biggest medical breakthrough has been achieved in anti-rejection drugs, which have made organ donations of all kinds possible.

A donor organ is a foreign entity, and the new body's antibodies attack it as if it were a disease. Although the world's first heart transplant was performed on Dec. 3, 1967, the problem of rejection made the procedure largely unsuccessful for more than a decade.

That changed with the development of cyclosporine. This and other anti-rejection drugs have greatly increased survival rates. Last year, 2,342 heart transplants were performed in the United States. Ochsner performs about one a week, Mehra said.

The continued improvement of those drugs is one critical factor to patients', long-term prospects. According to the United Network on Organ Sharing, 43.9 percent of recipients survive 10 years with their new heart. Smart thinks that number is deceiving, however, because it includes patients who received hearts before the medical advances.

"I think if you get transplanted today, the chances of your surviving are greater than someone transplanted 10 years ago," Smart said. "In truth, with the new immuno-suppressants, it's probably substantially more than that. I just can't tell (patients) that because I don't know that to be a fact."

The long-term picture is clouded because, for reasons not fully understood, coronary arteries in transplanted hearts become clogged more quickly than native hearts.

For the time being, though, the primary concern is keeping Watkins' body from trying to reject the new heart. Most rejection occurs in the first six months, Smart said. Thereafter, medicines are reduced as the danger of rejection lessens.

By definition, immuno-suppressant drugs lessen the body's ability to combat infection.

Assuming all goes well, there are no medical reasons why Watkins couldn't return to competitive athletics, Smart said.

Watkins said he will return to LSU and study kinesiology in January, but returning to the Tigers isn't in his immediate plans.

Rangerettes blast into title match

By Michelle Ostroff
MRT Correspondent

AUSTIN — If the Greenwood Rangerettes can keep their pristine volleyball winning streak of 21 straight match wins going, they will be in line to receive a Class 3A state championship trophy today.

For the first time since the school's inaugural varsity volleyball season seven years ago, Greenwood (30-6) has advanced to the state final game after defeating Queen City (19-10) in only two games, 15-13, 15-13, here Friday at the Tony Burger Center.

The Greenwood girls say it is a dream come true.

"It feels great (to make it this far)," senior Tracy Womack said. "It's just like our greatest dream has just come true. I really did not expect this at the start of the season. To actually be one game away from the trophy is amazing."

Womack finished the game with a team-high three ace serves and four digs, something head coach Patti Purser said she has become accustomed to.

"She's a senior, she's a defensive specialist and she's a serve specialist," Purser said. "She's come through for us all year long, especially in the playoffs. She's made some great big plays for us off of her serves. She has a nice top-spin serve that's very consistent."

After the Rangerettes started the first game with a 6-2 lead, the Queen City Lady Bulldogs came back to bring the score to 6-5. After the Bulldogs lost the serve, Greenwood ran up the score for an 11-5 lead.

However, a lack of communication among the Rangerettes allowed the Bulldogs to tie the game at 13-13 before senior Karen Gasch made two kills, including the one for game point to give Greenwood the win.

Gasch, who led the team in kills and blocks, felt she finally began to get her confidence back with this win after not playing as well as she would have liked in the last few matches.

"I feel like I haven't been playing up to may potential," Gasch said, "and I think today I'm kind of getting out of it, kind of getting back to feeling like I know how to play and I'm getting my confidence back."

Greenwood began the second game with an 0-7 deficit, predominantly due to four straight ace serves by Queen City senior Amanda Hinton.

Mistakes by the Lady Bulldogs, as the ball was hit out and into the net over and over again both in regular play and in serves, paved the way for the Rangerettes' comeback.

After three missed serves by Queen City, Greenwood brought the score to 6-10, still working to come from behind. With the score 9-13, Greenwood senior Katy Walker's serves and the team's smooth passing brought the score to 12-13.

Bronchos roll over Franklin, into regionals

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

ODESSA — The Odessa High football season to remember keeps on going, and does so in a quite familiar fashion.

For the second straight playoff weekend, the Bronchos rode the coattails of its tough-as-nails defense and got a few points when needed from its offense to win its area playoff game and advance in the UIL Class 5A Big School playoffs with 13-6 win over El Paso Franklin Friday night at Ratliff Stadium.

"We will keep riding the ride as long as we can," a grinning OHS coach Randy Quisenberry said.

Quisenberry's smile is probably because the second-year head coach knows things just keep going his way. Odessa High followed its first playoff win since 1953 last week with this win which puts the Bronchos in the region round. OHS will travel to Irving's Texas Stadium next Saturday to play Duncanville, a 28-20 winner over Arlington Martin.

That may have been most evident in the fourth quarter. OHS scored on its first drive of the second half, but failed to put Franklin away. In the second half, OHS fumbled deep in Franklin territory and

Stanton routs Albany

By Lee Passmore

SAN ANGELO — As the playoff fog gets thicker for the Stanton football team, the Buffaloes are finding new ways to negotiate the road.

They know they can no longer dominate opponents merely by trotting out on the field in winning all 10 of their regular season games by ludicrously wide average margins. That doesn't mean that Stanton still can't be dominant.

Using a basic game plan, which might seem at odds with their big play capabilities, the Buffaloes' running game simply overpowered Albany to make school history with a 35-21 victory in the area round of the Region I-2A playoffs at San Angelo Stadium Friday night. This is the first Stanton football team to advance past the second round of the playoffs.

"Our program needed this," said Stanton coach Mark Cotton, whose team is now 12-0 heading into next week's region game against the winner of today's Post-Spearman game. "We feel like we've taken the next step and we had to prove it."

In the first half, Stanton served notice that it didn't need its usual flash to get things done offensively. The Buffaloes

Canyon Randall takes advantage of fumble-plagued Steers for 37-12 win

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

LUBBOCK — It took just 1:15 for the Big Spring Steers' season to come to a close.

The Steers fumbled on their first two possessions and the Canyon Randall Raiders took advantage by scoring two touchdowns on their first two plays on the way to a 37-12 Class 4A Division I area win at Jones Stadium Friday night.

On the first Big Spring possession at it's own 19-yard-line, the Raiders brought their safety on a blitz and forced the first of two costly fumbles by hitting Steers' quarterback Gabe Mendoza as he was trying to handoff to Antwoyne Edwards. Randall recovered at the 10, and on the very next play, Jesse Hunnicutt busted through for a touchdown.

Randall coach Alan Cornelius said the defensive play was something new that his defensive coordinator Mike Lozano had put in this past week.

"We just shot our strong safety into the gap to try to get to the quarterback and cause a turnover. And that's exactly what happened," Cornelius said.

On the next Steers' possession, after Edwards ran for a 5-yard gain, the senior running back got the ball again for three yards. But before he could go down, the Raiders managed to strip the ball and recover, setting the ball at the Big Spring 26. That's when the Brian Evans air show began.

Evans wasted no time in giving the Raiders (9-3) a 14-0 lead with a 26-yard scoring toss to Micah Ladd. This quarterback-receiver duo combined five more times, including a 32-yard touchdown in the third quarter to put the Raiders up 30-6.

Evans was solid all night long for the Raiders as he went 10-of-12 passing for 169 yards. His offensive partner, the 150-pound Ladd, caught six of the passes for 123 yards. Many of the connections the two Randall standouts made were spectacular as Evans could always find Ladd in stride down the

'Dogs drub Del Rio; Rebels rip ranked 4A team

Staff Report

The Midland High and Midland Lee boys basketball teams opened the 1997-98 high school basketball season Friday night with a huge upset and a record setting performance.

Midland High's Kirby Lemons set a school single game scoring record with 45 points in a 90-47 win over Del Rio at the MHS gym while Lee opened its season with a 61-60 victory over Class 4A's No. 4 ranked team Wichita Falls with a late free throw by Josh Brewster.

Lemons' 45-point effort beat the previous single game leader Jumon Hailey, who had 43 points in a 1995 game.

Lee controlled Wichita Falls for most of the game, but went into a fourth quarter slump where the Coyotes outscored Lee 18-5 to tie the game at 60-60. Lee's Brewster, who had 13 points in the game, stole the ball and was fouled with 0.5 seconds left in the game. Brewster missed his first free throw attempt but won the game by making the second free throw.

The victory over the No. 4 Class 4A ranked team in the state pleased Lee head basketball coach Jon House, but the Rebels tried to wear him out at the end.

"I guess it was a good game, but I can't take wins like this one," House said. "Anytime you beat a team ranked No. 4 in the state, you take it. I liked our defense because when you hold a team to 60 points, you have a chance to win, but I didn't like the fact that we didn't finish it off. Still, we found a way to win and that was good."

Senior Charncy Ephriam led the Rebels with 20 points, but Wichita Falls' Bingo Merriex, an all-state candidate this year,

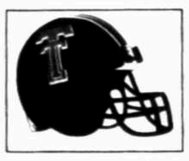
Red Raiders try to wrap up Big 12 South championship

By Mark Babineck
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes, still mindful of his Red Raiders' home loss to unheralded North Texas in September, said his team has too much at stake to overlook Oklahoma.



The sinking Sooners, losers of four straight, have made it tough for him to justify his case.

"Oklahoma is like a sleeping giant," Dykes said of the team that's been outscored 176-28 since Oct. 25. "They have really good players and they've had a hard time winning for whatever reason."

Maybe it's because they've managed just one touchdown in each of their last four games. Or maybe it's because they've lost 22 more turnovers than they've caused. Or possibly it's an ever-changing offensive scheme.

The somnolent Sooners (3-8, 1-6 Big 12) had better wake up fast if they plan to cripple the Big 12 South title hopes of streaking Tech (6-4, 5-2) on Saturday.

Because self-imposed sanctions stemming from NCAA rules violations mean Tech isn't going to play in the postseason, players have made a South Division ring their goal.

"We'll go out and do the best we can and take care of what we control ourselves, and we'll keep the rest of it out of our minds," defensive lineman Kris Kocurek said.

For OU, only pride is on the line.

Lady Chaps cruise past Phoenix College

By Michael Gunn
MRT Correspondent

The Lady Chaps found themselves in the winner's seat again Friday night with a victory over Phoenix College, 98-80, in a game where defense was the key once again for the Lady Chaps.

With a record of 6-2, the Lady Chaps have begun to find a rhythm that can put points on the board. As the game opened, Brooke Bowman and Jody Finley came out firing from downtown, going 2-for-2 from the three-point line.

Bowman lead all Lady Chaps with a team high 20 points and five assists. Right behind her was Taqita Hunter, who finished the night with 16 points and seven rebounds.

The Lady Chaps had four players in double figures. Holly Turnbough with 13 and Janice Thomas, who finished with 12 after fouling out of the game. The pressure defense again proved to be the weapon for MC, causing the Lady Bears to commit 31 turnovers.

"I am pleased with the way our girls played tonight. We made some good decisions on offense and we didn't try to force anything and we hit the open person a lot better," said head coach Ron Jones. "They're getting better each night. There is still a lot of improvement needed, especially defensively, but they're getting better each game and that's important," said Jones.

With 6:10 left in the first half, the Lady Chaps had their biggest lead on the night with the score 35-25 coming off turnovers from the Lady Bears. Much of the Lady Bear offense came from leading scorer Alisa Schroder, who had

TCAL Six-Man

Two players from Midland Trinity have landed two freshmen on the first team of the TCAL Six-Man All-District team.

Jesoung Yi and Dustin Truitt, both freshman, gained first team honors. Yi gained 440 yards rushing on 66 carries and caught 18 passes for 242 yards while scoring 10 touchdowns, including a kickoff return of 75 yards. He scored 66 points, including four extra points.

Truitt landed a defensive berth with 58 tackles (29 unassisted and 29 assisted) and had three fumble recoveries. He missed two games due to illness.

Trinity had four players named to the second team, two on offense and two on defense. Offensive picks are junior Mark Stoltz (325 yards rushing, 557 passing for 7 TDs and four interceptions and 225 yards receiving, scoring 11 TDs and 66 points), and sophomore Evan McLaughlin (395 yards receiving and 6 TDs).

On the second team defense Trinity placed Carlos Callo (55 tackles) and Yi (42 tackles).

Favre faces challenge from Dallas DBs

By Arnie Stapleton
AP Sports Writer

GREEN BAY, Wis. — The biggest matchup in the most hyped game of the NFL season pits the Green Bay Packers' premium passing attack against the Dallas Cowboys' select secondary.

Brett Favre and his targets of Robert Brooks, Antonio Freeman and Derrick Mayes vs. cornerbacks Deion Sanders and Kevin Smith and safeties Darren Woodson and Brock Marion.

"They're a talented group, we're a talented group," Freeman said with a smile. "So, whoever does a better job at running their stuff ..."

Brooks and Freeman, the top tandem in the NFC, have combined for 99 receptions, 12 touchdown catches and 1,534 yards.

Favre is tied for the league lead with 23 TD passes and his 2,776 passing yards rank second in the NFL.

The Cowboys lead the league in pass defense, allowing 153.2 yards per game. They're second in the NFL in total defense and in points allowed.

The Packers' hopes of ending their eight-game losing streak to the Cowboys rest on whether they can penetrate the league's best secondary.

"I think this will be our No. 1 challenge as far as getting open," offensive coordinator Sherm Lewis said. "Those guys just lock up on you and they shut people down. It's going to be a challenge. I think our guys will respond."

Sanders allows the Cowboys to take risks on blitzes and run support that other teams wouldn't dare.

"He allows them to take one side of the field and say, 'Forget it, he'll take care of that,' " Lewis said. "They just figure he can shut down whoever's over there and they play with the 10 other guys."

But it's far from a one-man show.

"Kevin Smith is no slouch," Packers receiver Don Beebe said. "He gets overshadowed by Deion, but Kevin is as good as there is in the league."

"I think as good as Deion is, the guy that is as important to them as any player is Darren Woodson," Packers coach Mike Holmgren said.

"Brock Marion's our leading tackler," Cowboys coach Barry Switzer said.

Still, it all starts with Sanders, whose talents have allowed the Cowboys defense to remain dominant despite a turnstile-like turnover of players.

"With corners like that, you can afford to blitz and know that those guys are going to win most of the battles," Lewis said.

Favre, the two-time MVP, said Sanders is scary.

"You don't go after Deion," Favre said. "You pick your spots. You can't take that half of the field and totally disregard it. But if you're going to throw at him, you've got to be smart about it."

STANTON: Buffs reach new heights with win

used a balanced attack to score on each of their first three possessions en route to a 21-7 halftime lead. While Kyle Herm threw two touchdown passes in the second quarter, it was the running game which set the foundation for the offensive performance.

Stanton ran for 305 yards on the night, with running backs James Jenkins and Jody Louder going through some implausibly large holes created by the Buffs' offensive line. It was a marked contrast to the majority of Stanton's offensive performances this season, when the Buffaloes went over opponents instead of through them.

"We preached all week to the offensive line that they were going to have to get the job done," Cotton said. "That's what you're going to have to do in the playoffs to establish a running game."

It has seemed at times this season that the running game has served merely as a productive counterpoint to Stanton's big play passing game featuring Herm and wide receiver Tyron Davis. Against Albany (8-4), the Buffs acheived one of their best balances of the season, passing for 150 yards.

"We've got to keep the running game going," said Herm, who also ran for a touchdown and intercepted two passes at free safety. "You can shut down the passing game real easily if you can't run. As long as we're balanced, we're tough to stop."

Stopping Stanton was something the Lions couldn't do in the first half. Albany took the opening kickoff and mounted a nice ball control drive of its own before quarterback Brian Bennett badly overthrew Sam Balliew and Herm snagged the errant pass at his own 11-yard line. He returned it to the Stanton 40 where the Buffaloes set up shop for the first time.

It would have been characteristic for the Buffaloes to strike with a big play, such as Herm throwing a bomb to Davis, but instead of an air assault, Stanton stuck with a ground attack. The Buffaloes moved 60 yards on 13 plays, all but one of which was on the ground, and survived a sack of Herm and an illegal procedure penalty. Herm ended the drive by scoring on a keeper from four yards out to give Stanton a 7-0 lead.

On their next possession, the Buffaloes found themselves pinned at their own seven, but Louder roared through a huge hole on the left side thanks to a block by Jeremy Smith and picked up 60 yards. Five plays later, Herm hit tight end Chad Smith with a 22-yard scoring pass to make it 14-0.

Albany had been burned defensively, but not by the people it had been expecting.

"We expected (the Lions) to double cover Tyron and it was just basic math after that," Cotton said. "We liked the odds with 10 on nine."

Albany got the closest it would the entire game on its next possession when it moved 70 yards on 15 plays, with Bennett going in from a yard out to cut it to 14-7. Stanton answered back, though, as Herm and Davis hooked up to end the drive in expected fashion with a 20-yard scoring pass in the back of the end zone to make it 21-7.

Defensively, meanwhile, Stanton was playing its usual solid game, despite giving up some size to the Lions up front.

"They were a lot bigger than we were," said Louder, who played the entire game at fullback on offense and linebacker on defense. "Their quarterback was bigger than just about anybody in our line."

The 6-foot-3-inch Bennett still couldn't avoid being nailed by Louder and Stanton tackle Kason Anderson on a pair of second half sacks which ended drives. Albany often moved the ball effectively in the second half, but its final touchdown was strictly cosmetic, coming with 50 seconds remaining after Stanton's second-team offense had botched a pitchout.

Jenkins was the running star of the second half for the Buffaloes, scoring on runs of 23 and 24 yards and leading all runners with 96 yards on 16 carries.

Regardless of what happens next week and beyond, this team will go down as the most successful Stanton team to date. That fact isn't lost on the Buffs.

"Anytime you can make school history and get your name in there it's a great feeling," Louder said. "This feels awesome, but we don't want to stop here."

OHS: Bronchos move on

just missed a 28-yard field goal, allowing Franklin to keep breathing.

Following the missed field goal, the Cougars marched down the field for 80 yards to close the gap to 7-6. The biggest play of the nine-play drive came on a 52-yard pass from Ryan Johnson to Damian Hinojosa on what started as a reverse and turned into a play that caught the Bronchos' defense offguard. Franklin scored five plays later on a eight-yard pass from quarterback Brett Chamberlin to Erik Estorga.

That set up the extra-point attempt — or at least that's what it looked like. However, Franklin played the role of the gambler and rolled the dice as the snap was pitched to Fernie Carrejo streaking behind the Franklin holder. The end around, however, came up one-yard short, and Franklin's luck ran out as Carrejo's fumble was recovered after a number of bounces in the OHS end zone.

"We put all the marbles in our basket and tried to win the game," Franklin coach Milton Henry said of his decision to go for the lead. "We thought, 'get the lead and put the game in the hands of our defense.' That is what I was trying to do. There will be people who will second guess it, but I felt like we could get it in."

OHS was expecting something — kind of.

"It didn't really surprise us," OHS' linebacker Jason Waters said. "I thought that they would come out in their normal shift (to run a play), and they go back into their kick formation. Then it happened.

"I ran to the ball, and me and Chad (Webster) hit him. Then we looked and saw the ball. I guess we recovered it or something."

The ball, which was finally recovered by OHS' Victor Hernandez, could have been recovered by Franklin for two points and the 8-7 lead. The Cougars definitely had opportunities as the football ended some 10 yards from the point of the fumble.

"They rolled the dice," Quisenberry said. "I thought that we contained them and then they fumbled. (The ball) seemed like it was in slow motion for eternity. I was like, 'someone do something, or kick it out of bounds.'"

Quisenberry went on to say that his team has to put teams away or those bounces that went Odessa High's way tonight might fall into someone else's hands next week.

"We've got to overcome those things. Obviously, those things (missed field goals and fumbles) will catch up with you at some point in time," Quisenberry said.

Even after the wacky conversion play, Franklin still had three minutes, 22 seconds to get the ball back. The Cougars, however, went for an on-sides kick.

OHS recovered it and scored six plays later, capping a six-play drive with Rick Leach's 16-yard run around the right side.

For the Bronchos (9-3 overall), it was a second moment offensively to be proud of. The OHS offense sputtered with the exception of the final drive and a third quarter drive that went for 62 yards. Freddy Espinoza, who rushed for a career-high 196 yards on 37 carries, carried the ball on six of the seven rushes on the drive. The longest run was a 26-yard scamper. Espinoza scored the game's first TD with a 1-yard run. For the game, OHS rushed for 240 yards and passed for just 40.

The OHS highlights, however, came on the other side of the ball.

OHS allowed less than 100 yards rushing (69 against Franklin) for the second straight game, and, except for the one late drive, was dominant.

"We didn't change anything," Waters said. "Defensively, we were ready to play. We had a better defense than they had offense."

Quisenberry is thankful for that.

"Great teams rely on their defenses," said Quisenberry, a former defensive coordinator at Permian High School.

Cooper gets past Socorro

Staff Report

EL PASO — The Abilene Cooper Cougars defeated El Paso Soccoro Friday 50-8 in a Class 5A Small School area round playoff game at the Socorro Athletic Complex.

Cooper, the state's No. 4 ranked Class 5A team at the end of the regular season, used a balanced offense with 194 yards rushing and 230 passing to eliminate the Bulldogs, who finishes the season at 9-3.

Cooper, 11-1 overall, got 186 yards passing and two TD tosses from Brandon Stover. Dowell Loggains added a TD pass. All three TD passes went to Mark Rau, who also broke 100 yards in receving yards.

Roy Strahan scored two TDs for Cooper on the ground as did Stover, who took the ball in twice from 1-yard out.

Cooper also had three players convert extra-point conversions.

Buzzards blow out Jackalopes, 12-5

Staff Report

EL PASO — The Odessa Jackalopes are starting another losing streak and again they can think the defense for their problems.

In a game, which the Jacks were outshot 65-26, Odessa fell for the second straight night, this one coming by a 12-5 score to the El Paso Buzzards.

The Jacks held tough, matching the Buzzards goal for goal and tying the score 3-3 early in the second quarter. That is when things got away from the Jacks.

El Paso which leads the Western Professional Hockey League's Western Division with a record of 11-6, scored five straight goals in the second period and nine of game's last 11 goals. In the second game alone, El Paso shot at the Jacks' net 24 times.

The Jacks, which fall to 3-14-2 overall, play in San Angelo today.

STATE: Greenwood faces Bellville

(From 1B)

Queen City errors gave Greenwood two more points and a missed kill by Bulldog senior Aleshia Lincoln, who had a game-high 13 kills, gave the Rangerettes the win and their first trip to the state final game.

Greenwood junior Mandy Choat said she was not worried when the team was down 0-7 because the team has come back many times during the season, giving them confidence in come-from-behind situations.

"We believed in ourselves because we've don it so many times," Choat said. "We've done it over and over, but we just had to believe and the whole team had to work together and talk and not give up. We just have faith in ourselves."

Greenwood was down 10-3 and a game against Aledo in the Region I finals in Lubbock last weekend, so this is becoming a Greenwood trademark.

Purser admitted they gave her a scare during the second game.

"But I knew they were a comeback team," Purser said. "I told them I didn't want to have a heart attack, though, so that was kind of scary."

Sophomore Stephanie Willis helped lead Greenwood with six kills and four digs, along with senior setter Shiloh O'Donnell, who finished the game with a team-high seven digs and 18 sets.

Today the Rangerettes face defending state champion Bellville, who has made the tournament 10 times in the last 14 years and has won seven state volleyball titles. Bellville defeated Pearsall, 3-15, 15-10, 15-7, in the other Class 3A semifinal.

Purser, however, said her team will not feel any additional pressure.

"I'm not trying to downgrade Bellville any because they are a fine team," Purser said, "but I've coached the girls all year long to just play one game at a time and we'll look at the next opponent when we get there. I know they (Greenwood) will play them a good game and I know we will come out on top if we do our game."

Walker said the team has an additional boost to push them in their attempt to knock off powerhouse Bellville.

"Somebody told us that they (Bellville) have already ordered their state champion sweatshirts," Walker said. "So we're kind of using that to pump us up a little bit, hoping to shove them down."

The test to see if this motivation proves successful comes at 1 p.m. today, again at Burger Center. If it works, Greenwood will return home with its first state volleyball championship.

Michigan-Ohio State game, Florida battle highlight Judgement Day II

Associated Press

Two weeks ago, on what was touted as Judgment Day in college football, Michigan and Florida State won big games, defeating Penn State and North Carolina, respectively, in matchups of unbeatens.

Saturday then must be Judgment Day II, as the still-unbeaten Wolverines and Seminoles again face major tests.

The Big Ten showdown is at Ann Arbor, with No. 1 Michigan facing No. 4 Ohio State. Later, No. 2 Florida State, with its eye on the Orange Bowl and the top seed in the bowl alliance, travels to Gainesville to meet No. 10 Florida.

In other games involving ranked teams, No. 5 Tennessee is at Kentucky, No. 6 Penn State is home to No. 24 Wisconsin, No. 7 UCLA plays at Southern California, No. 8 North Carolina hosts Duke, No. 9 Kansas State is at Iowa State, and No. 11 Washington State plays at No. 17 Washington.

Also, No. 13 Auburn is at home for Alabama, No. 14 Georgia is at Mississippi, No. 15 Mississippi State plays at Arkansas, No. 19 Virginia Tech is at Pittsburgh, No. 22 West Virginia plays at Notre Dame, No. 23 Purdue takes on Indiana, and No. 25 Colorado State visits San Diego State.

Even in medicore years, Michigan (10-0, 7-0 Big Ten) lately has been a major thorn for Ohio State (10-1, 6-1). "I know," Ohio State coach John Cooper said, "I'm 1-7-1 against Michigan."

In other matters, the Buckeyes have thrived under Cooper with eight straight bowl games and first- or second-place finishes in the Big Ten for the past five years. Beating Michigan, however, is the No. 1 priority in Columbus, and lately, Ohio State has been unable to do that.

The past two years, losses to Michigan have ended perfect seasons for Ohio State. This time, though, the Buckeyes are the ones in the spoiler role, in position to end Michigan's first perfect season since 1971 and knock the Wolverines out of the Rose Bowl.

"We understand what happened last year and what we did to them last year," Michigan quarterback Brian Griese said. "Every guy on our team remembers that and they're committed to not letting that happen to us. We understood how they felt after that game, and despite the fact they were going to the Rose Bowl, they were upset about not beating Michigan."

Michigan's defense is ranked No. 1 in three categories — total defense (202.4 yards per game), scoring (8.4 points) and pass efficiency (75.9 rating points) — and cornerback Charles Woodson leads the Big Ten with six interceptions.

A win could send Ohio State back to Pasadena, provided No. 6 Penn State loses one of its two remaining games (against Wisconsin and Michigan State), or the Buckeyes move up in the polls to No. 1 or No. 2 — meaning No. 2 Florida State or No. 3 Nebraska would have to lose.

No. 10 Florida (8-2) would be happy to help out on that side of the equation. Saddled by two losses, the defending national champions are pretty much out of the running to repeat. But they could put a major dent in the plans of Florida State (10-0).

A year ago, the Seminoles won this game 24-21 to complete their first undefeated regular season since 1979. Then, in the rematch at the Sugar Bowl, with the national championship on the line, Florida beat Florida State 52-20.

That beating remains fresh in the minds of some Florida State players.

"There's not a day goes by I don't think about that Sugar Bowl game," Florida State safety Shevin Smith said. "They embarrassed us. We owe them."

Iron Bowl provides test for Auburn

By Eddie Pells
AP Sports Writer

AUBURN, Ala. — Conference championships are nice. Wins in the Auburn-Alabama series are better.

Auburn coach Terry Bowden heads into only his fifth Iron Bowl on Saturday, but he's already quite familiar with the drill. A loss will bring more questions about his job security. A win will make the offseason much more pleasant for himself, his staff and his players.

"All I want is to win this week — I want to beat Alabama," Bowden said.

The 13th-ranked Tigers (8-2, 5-2 Southeastern Conference) need the win, combined with a Mississippi State loss to Arkansas this week or Mississippi next week, to make their first SEC title game.

The season will end either way for Alabama (4-6, 2-5). Coach Mike DuBose said a win won't make up for the bad year, but the history of the rivalry, combined with Alabama's 0-3 record at Jordan-Hare Stadium, give the Crimson Tide much incentive.

"It's one of those games that will bring out that little something extra in us," DuBose said. "Sometimes we don't have enough, but what we have, this game will bring it out."

Bowden's first tough lesson in Iron Bowl 101 came in 1994. He was a hero during the undefeated 1993 season and through the nine straight wins that opened the next year. But the lovefest ended when Auburn closed that season with a tie against Georgia and a loss to Alabama.

Things have never been the same since.

Auburn followed with two 8-4 seasons. Last year's campaign included a loss to Alabama. After that loss, athletic director David Housel signed Bowden's customary one-year contract extension, but with the stark reminder — spelled out in a news release — that four-loss seasons weren't up to standard at Auburn.

That led to an offseason of speculation on Bowden's future.

With no bowl game to go to, this is it for 25 Alabama seniors, all of whom would like the chance to salvage something for DuBose to build upon.

The first-year coach has presided over a dreadful season by Alabama standards, punctuated by a woeful defensive performance. Alabama has allowed more than 26 points in three straight games for the first time in 40 years and is in jeopardy of finishing with its worst record since the 2-7-1 season in 1957.

"This season puts the program in a bad situation in every way because people see us as a loser," offensive lineman Will Friend said. "People are getting their shots in at Alabama right now and you hate to see it happen. We'd like to get this one win, because a win over Auburn is bound to get you some good carryover."

It would also give DuBose one more win over Auburn than Bill Curry got in three seasons. Curry is the poster child for anyone who believes the Alabama-Auburn game doesn't carry weight with fans and alumni.

From 1987-89, he went 26-10 and won an SEC championship, but never beat Auburn and left without ever gaining the respect of the Alabama fans.

DuBose, who has been in Alabama all his life, said the fans will make a coach's life difficult if he doesn't come through with Iron Bowl wins.

"Once the game is over with for the players, it's over with," DuBose said. "Sometimes for our fans, the game's not over. We just keep replaying the game over and over until the game is played again on the field."

Huskies hope to keep WSU out of Rose Bowl

By Jim Cour
AP Sports Writer

SEATTLE — The hangovers from the Washington Huskies' past two weekends have been numbing.

"I felt bad after the Oregon game," linebacker Jerry Jensen said. "I didn't think I could feel any worse."

The headaches got worse for Jensen and his teammates after Washington's defense was demolished 52-28 at UCLA last week, knocking the Huskies out of the Rose Bowl picture.

The No. 17 Huskies (7-3, 5-2 Pac-10) hope to avoid another lost weekend when they play Rose Bowl spoilers against No. 11 Washington State (9-1, 6-1) at Husky Stadium Saturday.

"We haven't played well the last couple of weeks," Jensen said. "So it definitely would be nice to play this week. If I had my choice, I wouldn't have the Cougars in the Rose Bowl."

But Washington State is on the verge of getting back to Pasadena after a 67-year absence.

If the Cougars hand the Huskies their third straight defeat and UCLA beats Southern California Saturday, coach Mike Price's team will have a New Year's Day date against the Big Ten champion.

The champagne — and beer — are on ice in Pullman.

"We've re-defined the word 'Cougin' It,'" Price said.

For those who live outside the borders of the state of Washington, 'Cougin' It' means that Washington State's football team has a reputation for messing up a big opportunity.

Washington, which last lost three in a row in 1989, was the Rose Bowl favorite — and a national championship contender — coming into the season. The Huskies lost early to Nebraska at home, but had worked their way back to No. 6 before Oregon beat them three weeks ago 31-28 at Seattle.

Washington State was 5-6 last season and 3-5 in the Pac-10. The Cougars figured to finish in the bottom half of the league standings.

So much for preseason predictions.

Despite giving up 83 points the past two weeks, Washington is favored by 6 1/2 points against Washington State. That's because most of the fans in the sellout crowd of 74,000 at Husky Stadium will be wearing purple.

"It's awfully loud in there when the Huskies are playing well," Price said.

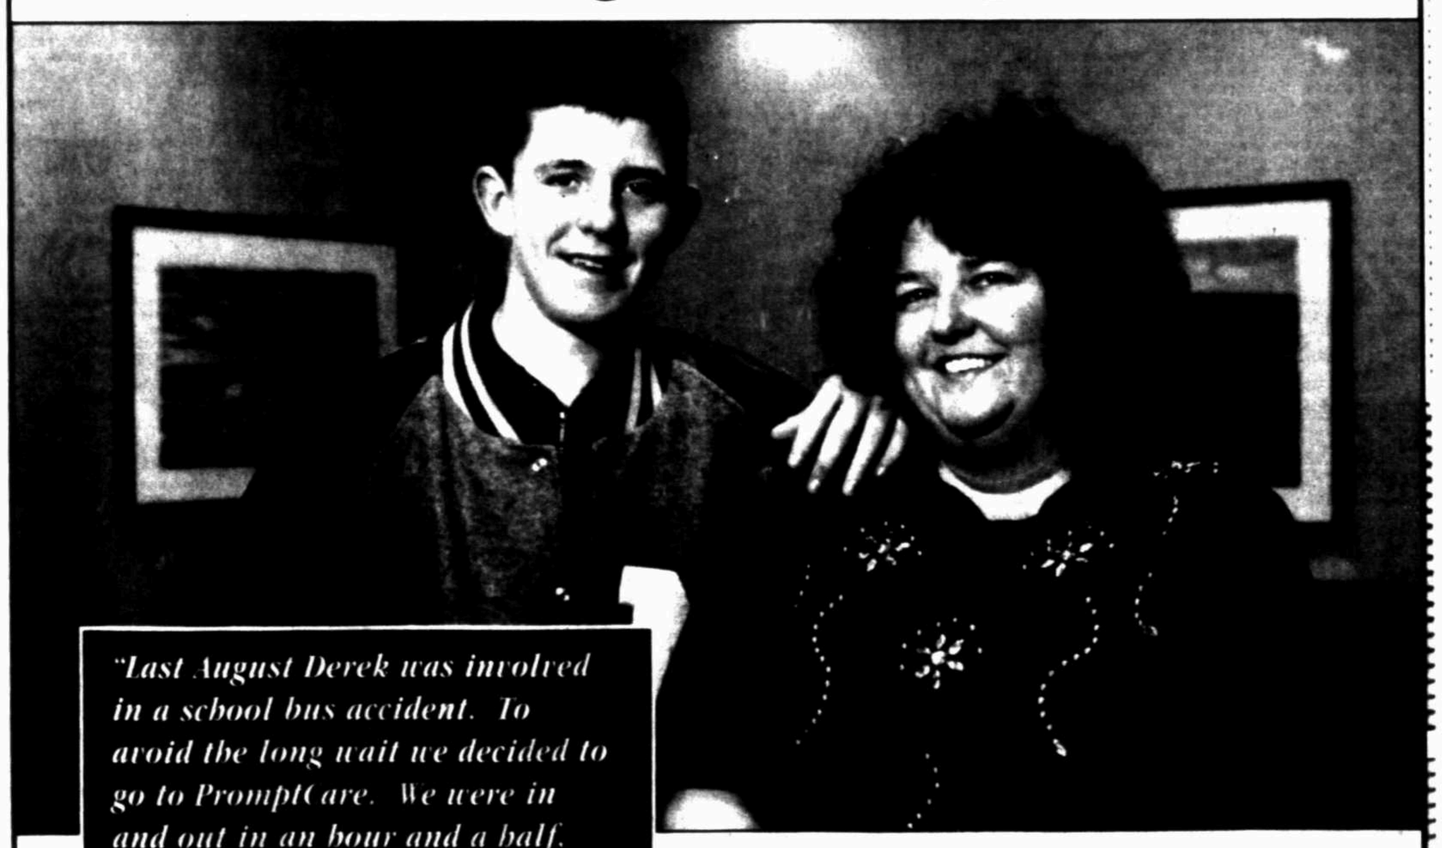
"To avoid the long wait we decided to go to PromptCare..."



"Last August Derek was involved in a school bus accident. To avoid the long wait we decided to go to PromptCare. We were in and out in an hour and a half, very pleased with the physicians, and we would definitely go back."

When Derek Johnson was one of nine freshmen students injured in a school bus accident, his mother knew it might take a while to get medical attention. Derek came to PromptCare, where he was examined, x-rayed, fitted with a knee brace and released in about 90 minutes.

BIG 12 GAMES TODAY

DALLAS (AP) — Here are previews for Big 12 conference football games this weekend:

Oklahoma at Texas Tech

OKLAHOMA (3-8, 1-6 Big 12 Conference) at TEXAS TECH (6-4, 5-2 Big 12 Conference), 1 p.m., Jones Stadium, Lubbock.

The series: This has become a rugged standoff of the 1990s as the teams never tangled until 1992. Since that time the Sooners have enjoyed a 3-1 edge, though Tech won 22-12 with one of the school's best defensive efforts of the 1996 season in Norman last November. OU grabbed the initial encounter 34-9 in Lubbock on national television (ESPN) and won 41-10 in El Paso at the 1993 John Hancock Bowl.

The coaches: OU's John Blake is 6-16 (second season, both with the Sooners) overall, 0-1 against the Raiders, 4-11 in Big 12 action, and 0-0 in bowls as a Division I-A head coach. Tech's Spike Dykes is 69-56-1 (12th season, all with the Raiders) overall, 1-3 vs. the Sooners, 10-5 in Big 12 battles, and 2-4 in bowl berths. Blake guided the Sooners to Big 12 South Division triumphs over Texas, Baylor and Oklahoma State in 1996 and was chief of OU's first-ever trek to the NACDA Pigskin Classic this year against Northwestern. Dykes has been victorious when it counts with 15 victories over intrastate rivals Baylor, Texas and Texas A&M since 1987 along with a Tech head coaching-best six bowl appearances.

The teams: The Sooners hope to be a healthier squad than they have been in weeks after losing virtually all the two-deep entries among running backs for three-plus games. OU still ranks 15th nationally with 216.5 yards rushing per game. T-Tech counters with the conference's third-best rushing defense at 140.2 yards per game and 24 turnovers forced to spark a plus-12 error advantage-third nationally.

Key individuals: Oklahoma RB De'-Mond Parker (2,332 career yards rushing, 21 games) already ranks 10th on OU's all-time infantry list. DT Kelly Gregg (season-co-high 14 tackles) against Nebraska) and junior SS Terry White (65 tackles) hope to make a season-ending defensive stand. Raiders' DE Montae Reagor already has been chosen first team All-Big 12 by "Football News" and sports a team-best 10.5 sacks with 11 QB pressures. Freshman of the Year candidate RB Ricky Williams (180 carries, 785 yards) is the leading true freshman rusher in the conference. FS Dane Johnson (95-yard kickoff return for a TD at Texas, five career TDs on kick returns) is slated to make his 35th consecutive start and hopes to rebound from a hip pointer.

Incidentally: The Sooners employ a unique, three-QB system with Brandon Daniels, Eric Moore and Justin Fuente. That trio has rushed for 306 net yards and eight TDs in 1997. Tech WRs Malcom McKenzie and Donnie Hart each had 11 catches against North Texas earlier this fall and have combined for 80 receptions, 1,038 yards and six TDs entering their final action of the year.

Oklahoma State at Baylor

OKLAHOMA STATE (7-3, 4-3 Big 12 Conference) at BAYLOR (2-8, 1-6 Big 12 Conference), 2:30 p.m., Floyd Casey Stadium, Waco.

Television: ABC regional telecast.

The series: Baylor has a 11-4 lead in a series which began in 1914. The teams played from 1915-22 as members of the Southwest Conference while BU was in the midst of a nine-game winning streak over the Cowboys. OSU won handily 60-0 in the 1914 meeting and broke Baylor's victory skein with a 20-7 triumph at Stillwater in 1972. OSU also won 37-17 at Lewis Field last year to start a current, 8-3 run.

The coaches: OSU's Bob Simmons is 16-17 (third campaign, all with the Cowboys) overall, 1-0 against the Bears, 6-9 in Big 12 outings, and 0-0 in bowls from the head coach's perspective. Baylor's Dave Roberts is 66-57-3 (11th season) overall, 2-8 (first year) with the Bears, 0-0 vs. the Cowboys, 1-6 in the Big 12, and 0-0 in bowls. Simmons has the Cowboys eligible for postseason play for the first time since 1988 and is a semifinalist for the inaugural FWAA Eddie Robinson National Coach of the Year Award with Nebraska's Tom Osborne. Roberts, who sent 16 student-athletes on current NFL rosters into the pro ranks from his Northeast Louisiana head coaching assignment and offensive coordinator's post at Notre Dame from 1994-96, is regarded as one of the nation's top recruiters.

The teams: OSU's aggressive defense impresses Baylor's coaches-especially in the area of turnover margin. The Cowboys have 10 more takeaways than giveaways (26-16) and have forced the action throughout the season. Bears' hopes for an upset ride on a balanced offense, which rushes for 186 yards per game and passes for an additional 148.1 yards per bash. BU is outsized in both interiors to OSU.

Key individuals: Senior RB Jerod Douglas of Baylor is 11th in all-purpose running yards in the loop with 91 per game (including 11 kickoff returns for 218 yards). SS Rodney Smith (100 tackles, 66 unassisted) is a solid hitter in the secondary and compliments playmaking DE Charles Foster (38 total tackles, team-high three sacks). Cowboys' DL Jamal Williams (40 tackles, 12 TFL for -54 yards) has been a force defensively since Game One while DB-WR R.W. McQuarters (32 total returns, 501 runback yards, six pass receptions for 191 yards, two TDs) has touched the ball 38 times on returns and receptions and has six TDs. OG Josh Henson (33 consecutive starts) has been a bulwark on the front side.

Incidentally: Ten of the last 12 teams on which OSU's Simmons has coached have advanced to bowl encounters at West Virginia, Colorado and now O-State. The Bears seek to end the season on a winning note for the first time since a 34-6 triumph on Nov. 18, 1994, against current WAC member Rice. The Cowboys and Bears played their lone series neutral site game in 1938 at Wichita Falls.

Kansas State at Iowa State

KANSAS STATE (9-1, 6-1 Big 12 Conference) at IOWA STATE (1-9, 1-6 Big 12 Conference), 11:30 a.m., Jack Trice Stadium, Ames, Iowa

Television: (FOX) Big 12 regional syndicated telecast.

The series: A football rivalry which began 80 years ago on Nov. 10, 1917, this series has Iowa State in the driver's seat at 46-30-4 entering the teams' 81st meeting. K-State has been prevalent in six of the last seven games against the Cyclones, who grabbed a 27-23 victory in Ames in 1993. The Wildcats won 35-20 at Manhattan in 1996 and have defeated ISU by a composite score of 122-47 since 1994.

The coaches: KSU's Bill Snyder is 64-37-1 (ninth season, all with the Wildcats) overall, 6-2 against the Cyclones, 12-3 in Big 12 games, and 2-2 in bowls. Iowa State's Dan McCarney is 6-26 (third year, all with ISU) overall, 0-2 vs. the Wildcats, 2-13 in Big 12 tilts, and 0-0 in bowls as a head coach. Snyder has taken the Wildcats to five of the school's six nine-victory seasons in the 102-year history of Kansas State football. McCarney, whose last three teams have averaged over 26 points per game for some of the most potent scoring numbers in school history, has taken steps to shore up the defense for 1998 in the recruiting process. Both coaches were assistants at Iowa under the venerable Hayden Fry.

The teams: K-State has a fine mix of option, control passing, deep routes, and power running offenses to keep the opponents in suspense. The Wildcats register 35.5 points per game (11th nationally). I-State has led the Big 12 throughout the season in passing and currently tops the conference with 228.6 yards per outing. The Cyclones must force more turnovers than their three pass interceptions in 10 games.

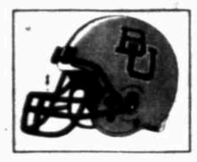
Key individuals: LB Jeff Kelly of the Wildcats has been a big "hit" with a team-leading 97 tackles (21 for losses of 101 yards). DE Darren Howard (three fumble recoveries) has had his share of big plays while OT Todd Weiner has fulfilled his preseason All-Big 12 expectations with several pancake blocks. ISU wideouts Tyrone Watley (42 catches, 692 yards, conference-best eight TD receptions) and Ed Williams (39 grabs, 533 yards, five TDs) are among the nation's top tandem reception artists. RB Darren Davis (1,069 all-purpose yards, 184 carries, 939 rushing yards) has a chance to give the Davis family three 1,000-plus rushing yard seasons at ISU since 1995 with 61 net yards Saturday.

Incidentally: Wildcats' QB Michael Bishop already owns the school's season mark for rushing yards by a quarterback with 468 and is fourth in 1997 Big 12 total offense yards per game with 1,893. ISU's picturesque Jack Trice Stadium has undergone changes during 1996-97 with a four-level, $6.2 million makeover to its basic 1975 construction structure with 23 donor suites and a pressbox facelift.

Cowboys hope to keep Baylor down

By Dennne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

WACO — The last time Baylor played at home, it cost the school $10,000 to replace the south end-zone goal posts.



The Oklahoma State Cowboys don't want what happened to Texas several weeks ago to happen to them.

The Bears do play much harder and better at home — which is something for the heavily favored Cowboys to ponder before their clash with Baylor on Saturday in Floyd Casey Stadium.

Oklahoma State is playing to look good for bowl representatives. Baylor is playing for respectability.

The Cowboys (7-3, 4-3) are eligible for one of the six bowls committed to the Big 12 Conference. It would be OSU's first bowl since 1988.

"I think it's just a question of where we're going," coach Bob Simmons said. "I think it comes down to what we do at the end of the season and what happens with Kansas State. But there is a lot of excitement for us to be in this situation. It's been a long time since Oklahoma State fans had something to do over the holidays."

Oklahoma State was knocked out of contention for the Big 12 Conference championship game because of losses to Texas A&M and Texas Tech.

A bowl game would be a welcome step for the Simmons program.

Once the Cowboys get to a bowl, they do fine. They have a 9-3 bowl record, including a 62-14 win over Wyoming in the 1988 Holiday Bowl.

Baylor (2-8, 1-6) wants revenge for a 37-17 whipping it got last year at Lewis Field. After the game, Chuck Reedy was fired and Dave Roberts was hired as head coach.

Roberts said Baylor just hopes to be like Missouri some day. The Tigers had their first winning season since 1983.

"We want to do with our program what coach Larry Smith has done with his," Roberts said.

Roberts will start senior tailback Jerod Douglas in the 2:30 p.m. (ABC-TV), game but freshman Darrell Bush will be ready for a quick call.

Bush has been a catalyst for the Bears, particularly in that upset win over Texas.

Simmons will rely on R.W. McQuarters to stir things up. McQuarters plays defensive back, wide receiver and returns kicks. He's dynamite in all three areas.

Baylor has an 11-4 lead in the series which began back in 1914.

Colorado State aims for WAC Pacific title

SAN DIEGO (AP) — No. 25 Colorado State is two victories away from its third Western Athletic Conference title in four years, and then it might be on to bigger and better things for coach Sonny Lubick.

The Rams (8-2, 6-1 WAC) need to beat San Diego State (5-6, 4-3) here Saturday night to win the Pacific Division and advance to the WAC championship game Dec. 6 against the Mountain Division winner. If the Rams lose, Air Force would win the Pacific Division based on its win over Colorado State on Sept. 20.

Lubick could be a hot commodity on the coaching market after the season and said he'd consider other options.

"I'm very open," Lubick said. "People have been so good to me here. However, I think I would be naive if I did not keep my options open and really look for another challenge. Whether it will come or whether it will leave, who would know that?"

Lubick, 38-19 in five seasons at Colorado State, essentially has an open-ended contract with a minimal buyout, "if that's what I wanted to do."

First, though, is the matter of extending the Rams' six-game winning streak. Colorado State's only WAC loss was 24-0 at Air Force.

"I remember going home that week, because we had a week off after that ballgame, and I'm wondering if we're going to make another first down this year," Lubick said. "We didn't look good at all against Air Force, and that's to their credit. And then all of a sudden we came out the next week and played very well against Hawaii.

"Then I started thinking, 'Well maybe we're not a bad football team.' From that point on, offensively we just seemed to jell. Moses (Moreno) has been playing extremely well for us. I think we've got a pretty good football team."

Moreno, a senior from nearby Chula Vista, is fifth in the nation in passing efficiency. He's thrown for 2,012 yards and 17 touchdowns, with six interceptions.

Additionally, the Rams have rushed for 200 or more yards in four consecutive games, including 235 in a 41-3 win over Fresno State two weeks ago. Fullback Kevin McDougal has four 100-yard games to date, and fullback Damon Washington, of San Diego, has three.

If not for an overtime loss at Air Force on Sept. 27, San Diego State would be in the division title picture. That game was in the middle of a five-game losing streak that dropped SDSU to 1-5. Since then, the Aztecs have won four of five.

California walk-on wants to walk on field just once

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Is it too much to ask for John Rice to play just one down that matters?

After five years as a walk-on defensive back for California who has never played a down, Rice is hoping he'll get a shot in Saturday's season finale against the Golden Bears' top rival, Stanford.

"I can't tell you what that would mean," he told San Francisco Chronicle columnist Tim Keown. "Even just one play. This is the Big Game. It's the last time I'll ever have a chance."

Rice has dutifully gone through five years of practice, five years of hitting and being hit and then standing on the sidelines while others take the field.

"Every year is always a new year," Rice said. "You never expect to be a practice player, but everybody has a role to play. I play my role.

"I stayed with it. A lot of people walk on here or at other schools and never finish it. I've always said I finish what I start."

Rice, a fifth-year senior, works for a charity organization called I Have A Dream which twice a week tutors a fourth grade class in nearby Oakland. He convinced 30 of his teammates to do the same thing. Before Cal's game against Oregon, Rice rounded up 150 tickets and passed them out to the kids.

OK, so Rice is a great guy. But what is it that keeps him coming back, year after year, only to watch on the bench as others take the field each Saturday?

"The team and the coaches kept me coming back," he said. "These are my friends, and without them I'd be alone here."

Is he going to get his shot?

"Early in the week, coach (Tom) Holmoe told me to be ready," he said. "Nobody's ever told me that before."

TECH: Raiders go for title

(From 1B)

"We need to reach down and find something to play for," Oklahoma coach John Blake said. "It's hard to play when you're out of the bowl picture and hard to play when you don't have an opportunity for a winning season.

"We've got some young kids who have a lot of pride and are still trying to play, still trying to score."

Without injured tailbacks De'-Mond Parker and Jermaine Fazande, scoring could prove difficult against Tech's "Swarm" defense, which is allowing Big 12 opponents just 12.8 points per game.

For the third straight game, converted safety Brandon Daniels will quarterback Oklahoma's option attack, which replaced a more pass-oriented system at midstream.

The transition hasn't been fruitful. The Sooners have scored exactly seven points in each of their last four games.

"I think it's a tough situation for our football team," Blake said, referring to the loss of Parker and Fazande. "It's a young football team, and then you lose a lot of leadership players."

Tech tailback Ricky Williams' 785 yards is already a Tech freshman record, and the Raiders have outscored Texas and Oklahoma State on the road by a combined 51-13 the last two weeks.

Dykes says he's starting to see some veteran play from his young back.

"He really picks up blitzes good. He is a good blocker," Dykes said. "He is a team football player and he does some nice things for us."

Yale tries to spoil Harvard's perfect record in Ivy League

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — On paper, the 114th version of "The Game" between Harvard and Yale on Saturday shouldn't be much of a game.

Harvard (8-1, 6-0 Ivy League) will be looking for its first nine-win season since 1919, and the team's first perfect Ivy League season since the league was formalized in 1956.

Yale (1-8, 0-6) will be trying to avoid its first winless Ivy league season since going 0-7 in 1958. The Bulldogs have lost 12 consecutive league games since beating Brown 30-0 in the 1996 season opener. But a victory over Harvard would do a lot to salvage the season.

"If by winning we can ruin Harvard's season, that will be great," said captain Todd Scott, who will start for Yale at linebacker and tailback. "I'd like to score a couple of touchdowns and maybe pick one off. I really want this game."

The game also marks the start of what could prove to be a great personal rivalry between first-year Yale coach Jack Siedlecki and Harvard coach Tim Murphy.

The two roomed together as members of Lafayette staff in the early '80s, helping that school to a stunning upset victory over arch-rival Lehigh in 1981, when Lehigh was the No. 2-ranked team in Division I-AA.

Two years ago, as a first-year head coach at Harvard, it was Murphy's winless team that scored an 22-21 upset of Yale.

"I'm scared to death about this game," Murphy said. "This is going to be a barn-burner. I'm not saying our kids don't realize that. I think our seniors do. I just hope our underclassmen do."

The Crimson already have earned at least a share of the Ivy league crown, and can clinch the league title outright with a victory or if Dartmouth (7-2, 5-1) loses to Princeton.

Hurst takes 1-shot lead at LPGA Championship

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — With her friends and family providing vocal support, Pat Hurst wanted to do something good in the second round of the LPGA Tour Championship. She ended up putting on the show of her young pro career.

Hurst, aided by a near tap-in eagle, shot her best score ever Friday, an 8-under 64 that gave her a one shot lead over Nancy Lopez midway through the 72-hole season-ending tournament.

The score set a new women's course record at the Desert Inn Country Club course, giving Hurst the midway lead on a day where Karrie Webb and Annika Sorenstam also shot low scores to get back into contention.

"It helps when you have people around you rooting you on," said Hurst, who was followed by a group of about 30 family members and friends who cheered her every shot. "You want to prove to them you can do it."

Hurst, a third-year pro who barely made the field of top 30 money winners, had seven birdies to offset a lone bogey. But it was a 5-wood that she knocked 2 feet from the hole to eagle No. 10 that set the stage for her round.

Hurst tapped in the putt, and went on to shoot 31 on the back nine to get to 8-under after two rounds. It put Hurst, who got her first win this year at the Oldsmobile Classic, atop a crowded leaderboard with some of the game's biggest names close by.

"This is definitely my best round," said Hurst, who had a 65 in this same tournament last year. "I don't mind doing it here every year."

Hurst appeared destined to share the lead with Lopez, winner of 48 LPGA tournaments, but an errant iron shot to the 18th green cost the LPGA tour great a share of the lead.

■ Golf Roundup

Lopez, tied for the lead after the first round, was 8-under going into 18 but pushed an iron into the water fronting the right side of the green and had to get up-and-down to salvage a bogey that left her alone in second place.

"I was so mad after making bogey on 18," said Lopez, who shot 68.

Another shot back was Webb, the defending champion who shot a 6-under 66, while four golfers were in a group at 5-under. Sorenstam shot a 68 and was four shots off the lead.

Rookie Lisa Hackney, who shared the first round lead with four others after a 69, was disqualified for signing an incorrect scorecard. Hackney, who shot 72, signed for a par on the par-4 8th hole when she actually had a five.

Montgomerie's 66 thrusts Scotland into World Cup lead

KIAWAH ISLAND, S.C. — Colin Montgomerie's eagle at the 11th hole helped turn an ordinary round into a remarkable 6-under 66 Friday to vault Scotland into the lead halfway through the $1.5 million World Cup of Golf.

Montgomerie and Raymond Russell combined for a total of 16-under 272, two shots better than Ireland and Sweden at the two-man team event.

Per-Ulrik Johansson, whose 64 helped Sweden into Thursday's opening-round lead, struggled through the Ocean Course with a 74 Friday after getting medical treatment overnight for a dizzy spell.

Davis Love III and Justin Leonard of the United States were three shots back at 275, with Germany next at 276. Germany's Alexander Cejka maintained the individual lead with a 68, putting him at 13-under 131 for two rounds.

Free agent activity drives Kile's price up

By Jerry Crasnick
Bloomberg News

HOUSTON — Attention Darryl Kile shoppers: The price just got higher.

Barry Axelrod, the pitcher's agent, said several free agent signings this week could have a significant impact on his client's demands in upcoming contract negotiations.

Axelrod cited Jay Bell's five-year, $34 million contract with Arizona, Ken Hill's three-year, $16.05 million agreement with Anaheim and Roberto Hernandez's four-year, $22.5 million contract with Tampa Bay as evidence that the free agent market is on the rise, and that Kile's price will increase as a result.

"(Bell's contract) has certainly ratcheted things up a little bit — not only for shortstops, but for everyone," Axelrod said. "To me, it's indicative of the market continuing on an upward swing."

Kile, who turns 29 in December, is one of the most desirable starters on the market this winter. He went 19-7 with a 2.57 ERA for the Houston Astros while earning a base salary of $1.7 million in 1997.

Six major league clubs — Houston, San Diego, Colorado, Arizona, Cleveland and Baltimore — have expressed an interest in Kile. Axelrod said he is soliciting proposals for three, four and five years.

Early in the process, San Diego offered Kile a three-year package worth $18 million. The Astros plan to discuss hard numbers with Kile when he's finished shopping.

The Rockies are making their sales pitch to Kile this weekend. Kile is in Denver with Houston second baseman Craig Biggio, who will receive the Branch Rickey Award at a banquet Saturday night.

The timing is right for Colorado to make a strong push. The Rockies had offered two years and a guaranteed $16 million to first baseman Andres Galarraga. Now that Galarraga has left Colorado for Atlanta, general manager Bob Gebhard could have more money at his disposal.

Gebhard said today that he does not expect Galarraga's departure to have an impact on the team's discussions with Kile.

"I don't think our plan has changed," Gebhard said. "We're still going to make every effort to sign him — within reason."

Houston general manager Gerry Hunsicker said it will be a challenge to fit Kile into the Astros' overall payroll. The Astros added a $5 million salary when they acquired outfielder Moises Alou from Florida. They probably will have to trade a veteran player — most likely outfielder Derek Bell — if they want to afford Kile.

"We want to re-sign Darryl," Hunsicker said. "He's important to us. But we have limitations here. We don't have the resources that other teams do. I don't know what the market is for him, but I would say it's going to be tough."

Hunsicker recognizes that Jay Bell's contract could have a fallout on other signings this winter.

"I don't think a team in baseball would have spent what the Diamondbacks did for Jay Bell," Hunsicker said. "But that doesn't matter any more. You only need one. That's the same with Darryl Kile or any other player."

O's could lose Anderson in bidding war

By David Ginsburg
AP Sports Writer

BALTIMORE — If the Baltimore Orioles want to keep Brady Anderson, they're probably going to have to make him the highest-paid player in franchise history.

The Orioles' only other option is to make a five-year commitment to the free agent center fielder, who attracted a lucrative offer from the Atlanta Braves, before they signed first baseman Andres Galarraga.

Anderson also is expected to receive similar bids from Toronto and the New York Yankees.

Anderson is arguably the second-most popular player with Oriole fans behind Cal Ripken, who made $6.8 million last season. Yet the bidding war for Anderson means he could receive more than the $7 million that pitcher Mike Mussina will get in 1998.

"He's an integral part of our club, a staple in our lineup," Ripken said. "We had a great year last year. We would love to try to accomplish the same thing and maybe go a little bit further. I think it's really important to get him back, as well as to sign Randy Myers. We have a great nucleus. I'd love the opportunity to go compete with that same club again next year."

The Braves paid nearly $25 million to get Galarraga for three years after offering Anderson a four-year deal for around $29 million. Anderson has said for months that he would prefer to return to Baltimore — but loyalty has a price.

The Orioles have offered Anderson a four-year contract for $23 million.

Anderson, who met with Orioles owner Peter Angelos on Wednesday and Thursday, did not immediately return a phone call from The Associated Press on Friday. But he told The Washington Post that he will stay with Baltimore if Angelos matches the offer the other teams are willing to pay him for four years, or if the Orioles give him a five-year deal.

"If Angelos only wants me for four years, he's got to come very close to what the other teams are offering. If he goes to five years, I'm willing to give him a very good deal," Anderson said. "I just think if he's not willing to give me a fifth year, I probably won't be back because I don't think he'll be willing to give me what the other teams will give me for four years.

Angelos did not return phone calls from The Associated Press on Friday.

Anderson hit 50 home runs two seasons ago. Although he hit only 18 this season, he showed his grit by playing with a variety of injuries, including a cracked rib, and hit .288 with a career-high 39 doubles.

His hustle and fearlessness on the field are only two of many reasons for his popularity among Oriole fans. His sideburns and muscular build have made him a favorite among thousands of female fans, many of whom scream out his name during batting practice — at Camden Yards and even when Baltimore plays on the road.

Novotna in semis after beating Sanchez Vicario

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Second-seeded Jana Novotna defeated Arantxa Sanchez Vicario 6-4, 3-6, 6-1 Friday night to claim a spot in the semifinals of the season-ending Chase Championships at Madison Square Garden.

With the victory, Novotna escaped the rash of upset that has pushed most of the seeded player out of the 16-player tournament.

Her semifinal opponent was decided in a late match Friday when eighth-seeded Irina Spirlea of Romania played Mary Joe Fernandez of Miami.

Novotna is the top seed remaining after No. 1 Martina Hingis, No. 3 Lindsay Davenport, No. 4 Amanda Coetzer, No. 5 Monica Seles and No. 6 Iva Majoli all were ousted earlier in the week.

Novotna and Sanchez Vicario are two veterans who know each other's game well. They are old friends who once were doubles partners. And they are old foes, facing each other for the 18th time. Novotna, who has won the last four meetings, has beaten Sanchez Vicario 10 times overall.

■ Tennis Roundup

There were no surprises when they took to the bright blue carpet, no new strokes they could unveil. As always when these two face each other across the net, it was who's game was on, who was moving better, who could dig deeper.

Novotna quickly jumped out front, breaking her opponent in the opening game of the match. Another break in the fifth game put her up 4-1 before Sanchez Vicario won the next three games to pull even.

No problem for the Czech. She broke Sanchez Vicario once again, this time at 30, then held to capture the opening set.

Leach and Stark advances to semifinals

HARTFORD, Conn. — Sebastien Lareau and Alex O'Brien upset top seeds Todd Woodbridge and Mark Woodforde 7-6 (7-4), 7-5 Friday to win the Green Group and advance to the semifinals of the Phoenix-ATP World Doubles championships.

The victory by Lareau, of Canada, and his American partner, prevented the defending champions from Australia from qualifying for the semifinals for a seventh straight year.

Rick Leach and Jonathan Stark also advanced to the semifinals, beating Don Johnson and Francisco Montana 6-3, 6-4.

Leach and Stark have reached the finals in five events this season, but are still looking for their first title. They will meet Paul Haarhuis and Jacob Eltingh on Saturday.

Also making the semifinals were India's Leander Paes and Mahesh Bhupathi.

Street paces comeback to be ready for Olympics

By Bob Baum
AP Sports Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. — Uncharacteristically, Picabo Street is accepting a two-week delay in her skiing comeback as the right thing to do, even if it means abandoning her hopes for a third World Cup title.

Could it be that the freest spirit of the downhill is reaching maturity?

"Yikes," she said. "What a scary word."

Getting Street to slow down or heed the advice of others is not easy. But she said she has done both in order to be at her competitive best at the Olympic Games in February.

"I'm ready but I'm not as ready as I want to be," Street said Friday from her home in Portland, "so there's no sense in rushing it, and the fact that I have a plan of attack here is comforting to me."

Street plans to vanish for two weeks of intensive training with her coaches, then make her debut in a super-G race Dec. 11 at Val d'Isere, France. If all goes well, her first downhill will be the following week at Veysonnaz, Switzerland.

Street wouldn't even offer a hint as to where she plans to finish her training.

"I'm disappearing," she said. "No one's going to know where I am. I'd like some privacy and some time to focus 110 percent and get ready."

Street tore the anterior cruciate ligament in her left knee in a fall during a training run at Vail, Colo., last Dec. 4. After surgery and extensive rehabilitation, she resumed skiing July 7 and had been scheduled to make her competitive debut next week in a World Cup super-G race at Mammoth Lakes, Calif.

In her recent training at Beaver Creek, Colo., knowing that the Mammoth Lakes race was fast approaching, she was pushing herself too hard.

"I was starting to put the crunch on myself and everybody picked up on it," Street said, "and my head coach took hold."

Last weekend, women's U.S. Ski Team coach Herwig Demscher showed Street some film of her training last year and this year to emphasize his point.

"If the mind is ready but the body is not," Demscher said, "there is danger of another injury."

Street didn't want to name names, but said she had plenty of examples of fellow skiers who tried to come back too soon.

"I have to look at the big picture," she said. "If I get caught up in the little picture now, I'm going to get submerged."

Street has said she believes the injury occurred for a reason, to allow her to step back and assess her career and get a break before returning. She's taking the same attitude toward the delay in her comeback.

"I've fortunately been able to handle it with some help," she said. "It's not my nature to rely on people, but the thing is that was part of the lesson here, to open up and let people help me, use my resources."

Sonics slaughter Spurs

Associated Press

■ NBA Roundup

SEATTLE — Vin Baker scored 22 points and Gary Payton added 17 points and 14 assists Friday night as the Seattle SuperSonics held San Antonio to a season-low point total in a 94-74 victory over the Spurs.

Seattle raced to a 36-16 lead after one quarter and the Spurs got no closer than 17 the rest of the way.

David Robinson, the NBA's leading scorer, was held to nine points on 4-for-12 shooting. He sat out the final 16 minutes of the game and failed to score in double figures for just the ninth time in 574 career games.

Monty Williams led San Antonio with 13 points and Cory Alexander had 10. They were the only Spurs to score in double digits.

Hersey Hawkins scored 18 points and Detlef Schrempf added 16 for the Sonics. Coach George Karl was ejected in the second quarter after picking up two technicals within a few seconds.

Hawkins matched his season high point total and shot 8-of-15 from the field with seven rebounds.

The Spurs trimmed the deficit under 20 points only once in the second half at 64-45 on Robinson's dunk with 8:34 left in the third period. Though the Sonics made just seven of 24 shots in the quarter, they extended their lead to 23 points, 78-51 after three periods.

Neither Robinson nor rookie sensation Tim Duncan played in the final quarter because the Spurs play the Utah Jazz in Salt Lake City on Saturday.

The Spurs had limited foes to 39 percent shooting from the field in their first 10 games. But the Sonics led 60-37 at halftime as they riddled the Spurs with 61 percent shooting (25-for-41) in the first half.

Hornets 119, Heat 102

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Charlotte gained its first comeback victory of the season as Glen Rice powered a fourth-quarter surge that lifted the Hornets to a victory over the Miami Heat.

Rice, held to five points in the first half, finished with 26, including 13 in the last 6:15 as the Hornets improved to 7-3, the best start in franchise history.

All six of Charlotte's previous victories had come after the Hornets built leads after three quarters, but this time they rallied from a 91-87 deficit in the final seven minutes and outscored Miami 32-11 down the stretch.

Knicks 104, Wizards 82

LANDOVER, Md. — Larry Johnson scored 23 points and New York used a big second quarter to hand Washington its fourth straight loss.

Patrick Ewing had 14 points and 10 rebounds for the Knicks, who have won six straight and 21 of 22 against Washington.

Wizards forward Chris Webber, returning after a three-game absence with back spasms, scored 15 points and Rod Strickland added 14. Washington is the only Eastern Conference team that is winless at home (0-4).

Cavaliers 103, Timberwolves 80

MINNEAPOLIS — Wesley Person scored 22 points, Shawn Kemp had 19 and Cleveland dealt Minnesota its third straight home loss.

Fans at the Target Center booed the home team, whose two previous home losses were at least competitive — an overtime defeat against the Washington Wizards and a loss at the buzzer to the San Antonio Spurs.

The Wolves, who entered the game ranked third in the NBA in scoring, posted their lowest total of the season. Chris Carr scored 19 points and Kevin Garnett had 18, but Stephon Marbury was held to four points and three assists.

Celtics 101, Nets 93

BOSTON — Boston avenged a loss to New Jersey that broke its four-game winning streak and beat the Nets behind 24 points and 12 rebounds from Antoine Walker.

Tyus Edney and Greg Minor came off the bench to score 12 points each and Ron Mercer, another substitute, added 11 for Boston, which didn't win its sixth game last season until Dec. 30 when it already had 21 losses en route to a 15-67 record.

No. 1 Lady Vols rally past No. 2

Associated Press

■ Women's Hoops

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — As if top-ranked Tennessee needed motivation.

With a crowd of 16,490 cheering and the 1997 NCAA championship banner unfurled over center court, the Lady Vols rallied to beat No. 2 Louisiana Tech 75-61 on Friday night.

The defending champions, reloaded with some top freshmen, didn't miss a beat. They pushed their record to 2-0 and gave the Lady Techsters a season-opening loss.

"You don't have to motivate this group," Tennessee coach Pat Summitt said. "But the crowd certainly excited us. I've worked 24 years to see a team this exciting and a crowd that enthusiastic."

Louisiana Tech's Leon Barmore blamed himself as much as his team for the loss.

"To Tennessee's credit, they played well," he said.

Chamique Holdsclaw scored 24 points as the Lady Vols rallied from a 36-35 halftime deficit.

Holdsclaw "may be the best player ever," Barmore said. "She does what she wants whenever she wants to."

The game turned on a 12-0 Tennessee run midway through the second half, propelled by a 3-pointer by freshman Tamika Catchings, who scored 17 points.

A putback by Kyra Elzy with 9:59 to play put Tennessee ahead 57-50, and the Lady Vols kept increasing the lead.

"It looked like Tennessee was the team with five starters back," Barmore said of a Tennessee lineup that at one point had four freshmen and Holdsclaw. "In 21 years of coaching, this was my worst coaching job. We wanted to win, and I felt as if we were focused, but we just didn't get it done. We got hammered on the boards and our guards didn't play well."

Summitt credited her team's defense and rebounding. Tennessee outrebounded Tech 51-42 and had 14 turnovers to the Lady Techsters' 20.

No. 6 Connecticut 71, No. 21 Nebraska 61

STORRS, Conn. — Tournament MVP Nykesha Sales scored 25 points as No. 6 Connecticut used a strong second half to beat No. 21 Nebraska 71-61 and win the Preseason NIT championship.

Freshman Svetlana Abrosimova added 11 points and seven rebounds for UConn (4-0). Leading 36-32 at halftime, the Huskies began to pull away with a 9-2 run to start the third quarter.

STEERS: Randall triumphs

sideline for a big gain.

"Our throwing game was good tonight," Cornelius said. "It allowed us to keep them (Big Spring) off balance. Big Spring has a good defense. I was pleased that we were able to move the ball as effectively."

"We can't fumble two plays inside the 20, and then two plays later you're 14 points down," said Big Spring coach Dwight Butler. "You can't do that especially against people like this."

The Steers cut it to 14-6 in the second quarter on a 3-yard run by Edwards. But as soon as it looked like the Steers were going to grab some momentum, the Raider's Hunnicutt responded with a 3-yard run of his own to give Randall a 21-6 lead at the half.

After the game, Butler conceded that Randall was too big and too strong for his team.

"We couldn't handle their big people inside," Butler said. "It was one of those nights. We've played against big people, but on this night their big people were pretty big."

The power was evident with the Randall defense holding the potent Steers' running game to just 119 yards. Edwards finished as the leading Big Spring rusher with 69 yards on 20 carries.

"They took a bunch of our running game away from us," Butler said. "Every time we did get a drive, we couldn't get any points out of it. When you get down by 14 you need to get points on the board.

"There's no doubt they were a better team."

Even though the Steers, which ended the season at 8-4, fell short of their ultimate goal of going to the state championship, Big Spring accomplished more than many had expected at the beginning of the season

"Look at how far we've come," Butler said. "We were 2-8 a year ago and we haven't had a winning record in two years — all of a sudden we're playing at Jones Stadium. That's quite an accomplishment for a bunch of country boys. It's never going to end right unless you win it all. We would've liked to have played a couple more weeks but it just didn't happen."

MC: Lady Chaps romp

a game high 23.

Schroder was 7-16 from the field and 1-4 from three-point land. Along with teammates Rhonda Rajsich and Regina Early were the only ones in double figures. The Lady Bears shot 40 percent on the night and 66 percent from the line. The Lady Chaps out-rebounded their opponent 39-36 and 18 of those were on the offensive side.

With the depth of the Lady Chaps, everyone on the sideline saw action on the night which helped keep the pressure defense going strong.

"I'm not real happy with our full court defense. In fact, I look to put more pressure on the ball, and hopefully, things can get better for us," said Jones. "We are still not defensively where we should be. The effort is there, but we're not all on the same page at the same time and we are out of position and that's not where we're supposed to be."

As the Lady Chaps took a 49-43 halftime lead after a run by the Lady Bears, they never looked back in the second half by leading by as many as 23.

Taking charge in the second half was Thomas, who came up with eight of 12 points in the first eight minutes of play off fast break points.

The Lady Chaps got 42 points off the bench, which was lead by Hunter. Also there was better free-throw shooting from MC, shooting 71 percent. Bowman was perfect from the line going 7-for-7.

"We've got just a few more games until the semester, and when the second semester comes in and conferece starts, we will have a few more players join us, and hopefully, we can get better." "As long as I can see improvement every night, I'm going to feel good about our direction," Jones said.

MHS, Lee girls fall in tourney

BIG SPRING — The Midland High girls basketball team lost its first game of the season here Friday, falling to District 4-5A foe San Angelo, 61-56, in the Big Spring Girls Invitational Tournament while the Midland Lee Lady Rebels fell from tournament action with a 56-42 loss to Merkel.

The Lady Dawgs fell behind 16-2 in the first quarter and could never quite erase the huge Lady Bobcat lead although the gap was narrowing with each quarter except the third period when the Lady Bobcats outscored MHS by a 17-13 margin.

Heidi Lange led MHS with 17 points and Bianca Lane added 12, but the damage from San Angelo came from Kenisha Randall, who dumped in a game high 32 points.

Midland High will play Abilene Wylie at 4 p.m. today for third place.

The Lee girls got 14 points from Kiki Strambler, but Merkel outscored Lee (1-2) 32-23 in the second half to take the win. Merkel's Denise Cochran hit four three-pointers to fuel the win.

Lee was eliminated from the tournament with the loss, but will return to action Monday at 7:30 p.m. at Chaparral Center against Ozona and will host Lubbock Monterey on Tuesday at 6 p.m. at Chap Center.

Trinity loses to SA Cornerstone

SAN ANGELO — San Angelo Cornerstone defeated Midland Trinity 69-62 Thursday. Trinity was led my Mark Stoltz with 15 points, Ronnie Brewster 14, Greg McCabe 13, and Mike Landry with 10. Cornerstone was led by Jermy Kalenbach with 22. McCabe and Evan McLaughlin had seven rebounds each for Trinity.

In Trinity Middle School action, the Lady Chargers lost to Borden County, 42-23. Kara Stuckey was the high scorer for Trinity with nine points.

Trinity's seventh grade boys defeated the Home School Rockets 51-47 in overtime Friday, climbing to 3-0 for the season. Trinity was led by Trevor Stoltz, who scored 17 points and hit three fourth quarter treys to bring the Chargers from 10 points down. The Trinity comeback spoiled the 28-point performance by the Rockets' Aaron Austin.

Midland Purple beats White

Midland Freshman Purple defeated Midland White, 72-40, Friday night in an intra-school basketball rivalry.

Purple's Jason South led all scorers with 13 points while Ray Johnson hit for 11 and Scott Winters had 10. Mercado Avilla led White with 10 points. Purple is now 2-0 on the year and White is 0-2.

HOOPS: MHS, Lee win openers

pumped in a game high 27 points. Robert House had 12 points for Lee, all on three-point shots.

Lee doesn't have time to celebrate its stunning victory since the Rebels host Del Rio at 1:30 p.m. today at the Lee gym.

MHS coach Jack Stephenson played 18 players in his win over Del Rio. In addition to Lemons' 45-point record performance, junior Jay Christian had 10 points.

"Being our first game, we were a little tight." Stephenson said. We didn't scrimmage anybody. We'll get better and better and we had a nice crowd. Our numbers and Kirby played on Del Rio and then we sent some more people in and that played on them. We had a lot of slam dunks and I think our fans enjoyed the show."

MHS had a little trouble getting out of the gate, leading only 19-14 after the first quarter, but then the Bulldogs ignited with a 21-9 advantage in the second quarter and never looked back.

MHS will have a tougher test today at 7:30 p.m. at Chaparral Center when the Bulldogs host Lubbock High, a team that has made the state playoffs three years in a row.

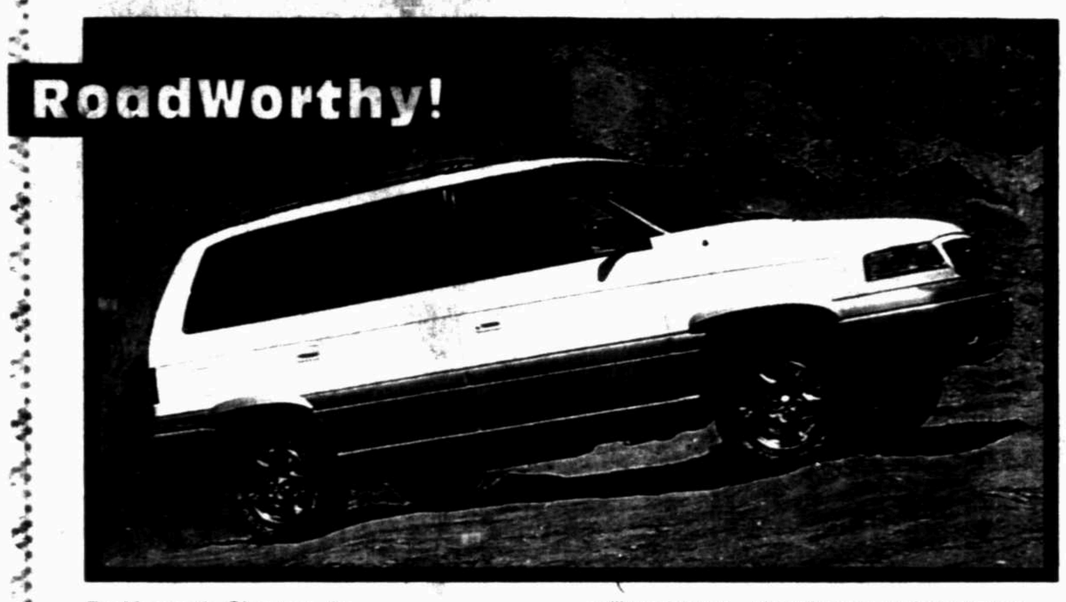
Hybrid Motoring: '98 Mazda MPV All-Sport



By Kenneth Chester, Jr.

Minivan or sport utility vehicle? If you are in the midst of that quandary, the people at Mazda have a solution for you. The Mazda MPV All-Sport is referred to by the automaker as the only "sport utility minivan". The All-Sport package is standard on the ES and LX 4WD models, an $880 option on the 2WD LX model. With an elevated view of the road and four conventional doors, the rear drive MPV appeals to buyers that want a better ride and more overall efficiency than a truck-based sport utility vehicle. With so many choices in both the minivan and compact sport utility market, the thought of the MPV interested me. I drove one to get a better perspective.

A Unique Perspective

Imported by Mazda from Japan, the MPV has been a part of the Mazda lineup throughout this decade. I drove a MPV LX with the All-Sport package. The MPV is available in LX and ES trim packages and two or four wheel drive. The 3.0L V-6/4-speed automatic is the only powertrain offered for this model. On the road, the powertrain demonstrated nimbleness and agility when things got rough. The six cylinder showed a willingness to rev free all the way to redline. Handling and control was surprisingly good for a vehicle with such a tall profile. Body lean was minimal at speed through a set of twisties. Mazda has chosen to make fog lights standard across all MPV models, a useful item. Inside the cabin, the driver enjoys decent visibility, with displays and controls easy to see and use. Seating can be configured to carry seven or eight passengers. The Captains chairs in the second row, a $400 option, were very comfortable. Access to the second row is very easy due to wide doors that open up to a ninety degree angle, perpendicular to the vehicle. Getting to the third seat is no problem, with the rear seat easily removed, folded flat, or flipped forward for greater cargo capacity. Properly equipped, the MPV can tow a trailer with a maximum weight of 4,500 pounds. A couple of gripes: the step up into the drivers seat is high for short drivers, storage space is at a premium throughout the vehicle, and the underhood fluids are easy to reach but not clearly marked.

By the Numbers

Standard safety equipment includes: dual airbags, four wheel disc brakes w/anti-lock and side- impact door beams. Four wheel drive models add a full service spare as standard equipment. Traction control is not available. EPA fuel economy for the MPV are: 16 city/21 for two wheel drive, 15 city/19 highway for four wheel drive. Retail prices range from $23,095 for the two wheel drive LX model to $28,895 for the four wheel drive ES model. Destination charge adds $480. Supplies of this vehicle are scarce and there are no rebates. ■

AUTO ALBUM

1926 BUICK

By Tad Burness

When I was a boy in Oakland, Calif., a neighbor used to drive an ancient 1926 Buick to work, daily! It was the oldest vehicle in our neighborhood. The next-oldest vehicles around there were a couple of 1931 Model A Fords, a sedan and a roadster.

That old '26 Buick fascinated me. It was the illustrated Brougham sedan, with the weird-looking oval rear quarter windows. Its original green and black paint job was beginning to fade, and the car was getting noisy. It appeared, sadly, that its days of faithful service were drawing to an end. At that time, the only antique cars that collectors cared about were the horseless carriages from the early 1900s. The '26 Buick had managed to last through the car-shortage days of World War II, but how much longer it would survive was anybody's guess.

In the mid-'20s, Packards, Buicks, Willys-Knights, Stars and a couple of rarer makes had fluted radiator shells of a similar shape. Legends gave Packard the right to Ownership" of this radiator design (as it had used it the longest), and stories abound that Packard threatened lawsuits against infringers. At any rate, the other makes changed radiator designs by 1929 and Packard had its distinctive frontal appearance all to itself once again.

The 1924 through 1928 Buicks were part of a five-year styling cycle; their appearance had much in common. But if you compare a '24 with a '28, you'll notice quite a few differences.. Each year there had been some small changes and refinements. The '24 Buicks had been available as fours or sixes, but from '26 to '30, all Buicks were sixes. And from 1931 to 1952, all Buicks were straight-eights. GM's Buick was a long-time champion of overhead-valve engines, as was GM's lowest-priced car, the Chevrolet.

The '26 Buick still used an odd gearshift pattern that was the mirror opposite of the standard American pattern. (Dodge Bros. was another maverick with a different gearshift pattern in the '20s.) The following year (1927), Buick introduced a quieter, a big-toothed" transmission gear design, and in '28 the standard shift pattern was adopted.

Buick set a sales Record in 1926 that was not equaled for another 14 years! In '26, some 266,753 new Buicks were sold, including 10,873 of these Model 51 Brougham Sedans.

Later in '26, the '27 Buicks appeared. The oval quarter-windowed Brougham Sedan was continued, but in January 1927 it was joined by— and then replaced with—a Town Brougham of similar profile but with a larger, more squarish rear-quarter-window design.

In the mid-'20s, Buick also produced a few coupes with the oval rear-quarter windows.

SPECIAL REPORT

Any doubts about Chevrolet's leadership in the muscle car business can be laid to rest, once and for all.

Chevrolet, GM's bread-and-butter car maker, pumps out a wide variety of mom- and pop-mobiles designed mainly for trips to the mall, transporting junior and the teammates to some stick-and-ball tournament, or hauling the family on the occasional jaunt to grandma's place a time zone or two away.

But within the narrow confines of the high performance spectrum, Chevrolet can hold its own with some of the most prestigious nameplates to be found anywhere. Witness the latest sleek and fleet-footed Corvette, which now whips up a whopping 345 horsepower courtesy of its 5.7-liter LS1 V8, and will sprint from rest to way above the legal speed limit faster than just about anything else on the road.

Witness too the 1998 Camaro which, in Z28 livery, has been infused with the Corvette's DNA to the tune of 305 horsepower, thanks to a detuned version of the LS1 stuffed under the hood. Big hairy deal you say? Well folks, that horsepower rating is the same as the Mustang SVT Cobra, with its low-volume hand-built 4.6-liter mega-buck high-tech powerplant. What is a rare accomplishment for the Mustang is simply commonplace for the pushrod-powered Camaro.

And that's just the beginning. Select the SS performance package with its forced-air induction system and the on-tap power climbs to 320 horses. This option also includes huge 17-inch cast aluminum wheels, performance-tuned suspension with beefier front

FLIGHT DATA

1998 Camaro

- ★Two-door, rear-wheel drive sports car available in base and Z28 configurations.
- ★200-horsepower 3.8-liter V6, and a 5.7-liter V8 available in 305 or 320 (SS) horsepower trim.
- ★Five-speed manual, four-speed automatic (optional on base, standard on Z28), six-speed manual (optional on Z28) transmissions.
- ★Restyle will appeal to broader audience.
- ★More real-world power than any mass produced Camaro — ever. Increases advantage over Mustang.
- ★Good bang for the buck.
- ★Police bait.
- ★Base price: $17,000

liquifying stoplights (we'll try to forgive you), the base Camaro coupe or convertible arrives with decent enough performance delivered via a 3.8-liter V6 that's good for 200 horsepower, 50 ponies more than the base Mustang V6.

Transmission choices consist of a five-speed manual that comes with the base Camaro, a four-speed automatic that is standard on the Z28, or a six-speed manual that is optional on the Z28.

Other significant modifications for 1998 include a new front-end design with a grille that appears to grin confidently, almost smugly, like some school yard bully ready to punch your lights out if you look at him the wrong way.

The Camaro jollies are prolonged when you get a taste of the standard equipment. All models include air conditioning, four-wheel disc brakes, full instrumentation, AM/FM/cassette, floor console, tinted glass and rear spoiler. The Z28 adds the V8, 16-inch cast aluminum wheels, limited-slip differential, black painted roof and stiffer suspension. Removable roof panels, leather seats, power locks, power driver's seat and more powerful audio systems are among the Camaro's many options.

For years, the Ford Mustang has been a quicker, low-cost provider than the paunchy Camaro. Now, the Z28 offers a stunning 80 horsepower advantage against the 4.6-liter Mustang GT at a comparable price. This round of the 'pony' wars clearly belongs to Chevy.

LEGAL NOTICE

The City of Midland is requesting bids for the sale of Block 9, Lot 23, Fairgrounds Addition Property to the City of Midland, Texas. This property is located at the street address of 2301 Mulberry, Midland, Texas. The sale of this property shall include all permanent improvements and fixtures located on the property.

In order to assure yourself that your bid will be properly submitted and considered, it is important that perspective bidders read, understand and follow the following instructions:

a. A bidder may submit a cash bid.

b. All bids must be accompanied by a certified check or bank money order issued by a bank satisfactory to the City in the amount of $2,500.00 payable without recourse to the City. Bids without the required check or money order will not be considered. All other checks will be returned after the bid is awarded. The purpose of such check or money order is to provide a guarantee that the bidder will accept a conveyance to said land from the City and pay the balance of the amount bid or comply with any and all conditions of his bid.

c. All bids must be sealed in an envelope, and the envelope must be plainly marked "Proposal for 2301 Mulberry". All bids must be submitted to the Director of Facilities & Fleet Management in his office, Room 220 in City Hall, 300 N. Loraine Street, or mailed to P.O. Box 1152, Midland, Texas, 79702, on or before 3:00 p.m. on the 1st day of December, 1997. All bids being received after such time and date shall not be considered.

d. The minimum bid that will be considered for this property by the City of Midland is $13,000.00.

e. Bidders are advised that the City reserves the right to accept or reject any or all bids, to waive technicalities, to negotiate with any of the bidders, and to make any investigation deemed necessary as to a bidder's financial status.

f. Bidders are advised that the City of Midland will issue a Special Warranty Deed and the bidder must satisfy himself as to title and acquire all desired abstracts and other title information or insurance solely at his own expense, and all other costs of sale, if any, must be borne solely by the successful bidder.

g. Bidders are advised that the Special Warranty Deed given by the City will be subject to the following conditions and covenants:

PROVIDED, HOWEVER, that all the oil, gas and other minerals in and under said land are hereby expressly excepted from this conveyance, and it is also subject to any existing easements of record and /or on the ground for pipelines, utilities or other purposes.

h. Any questions concerning the submission of bids shall be directed to Mark Phillips, Director of Facilities and Fleet Management, P.O. Box 1152, Midland, Texas 79702, Phone No. 685-7235.
