25 resumes to date...

Chamber manager application period cutoff is Thursday

This coming Thursday, April 30, is the cutoff for resume applications for individuals seeking the Snyder Chamber of Commerce manager's post.

Chamber officials say some 25 applications have been submitted to date. Earlier, it was announced that individuals to be considered had to submit a resume.

As a general guideline, it was noted also that candidates should have a college degree and a minimum of three years chamber experience.

Following these guidelines, Elizabeth Potts, current chamber president, said approximately one-third of the applications received to date meet this criteria.

Once Thursday's deadline is passed, Potts said the selection committee organized to employ a new chamber manager will meet to establish a "job description" for the position.

This will offer the priorities expected of the chamber manager, she noted, a tool she expects to be useful for both job applicants and the selection committee.

Once the job description is finalized, the committee is expected to begin scheduling interviews.

She said select candidates which meet the announced criteria will be interviewed first.

Regarding salary for the new manager, Potts said this is currently "open" and will be based on the experience of the individual eventually hired.

Truck renewed in time for convention

A restored 1951 La France Fire Truck was to figure prominently in Saturday's firemen's convention to be hosted by the Snyder Fire Department.

According to Kenny Wood, one of the volunteers who helped restore the vehicle, the fire truck will be utilized during pumper races scheduled Saturday afternoon.

Others involved with the restoration included Sterling Williams, Troy Hall, Jamie Baldwin, Albert "Snuffy" Canon, Perry Westmoreland, Terry Sowell, Don Riley, Paul Gilbert, Larry Kubena, Karen Whittenburg, Gary Kubena and Karen Westmoreland.

Wood estimates that at least 150 man hours went into the project, with volunteers working in the evenings and on weekends. Although the actual restoration work did not begin until some two months ago, the city had donated the fire truck to the volunteer firemen last year. The city also paid for much of the material which was used to restore the vehicle.

In addition to pumper races, the vintage fire truck will be used as a parade vehicle, Wood said.

Restoring the fire truck required a lot of "elbow grease," the workers note.

To bring back the original red paint color, compounding and waxing were required. Then came the detail work of repainting

Students can add SS id's

Beginning Friday and during next week, Snyder ISD students--grades K-12--were to be provided forms to take home to their parents to be used for securing a Social Security number for the child.

Under the Tax Reform Act of 1986, taxpayers will be required to list a Social Security number for each dependent five years of age or older on all returns due on or after Jan. 1, 1988.

As part of a statewide program it is developing, the Texas Education Agency is encouraging parents to obtain these numbers as well.

TEA has initiated a new computer program to use the number as the students' identification on records transmitted from local districts to the state agency.

To assist them, the agency has asked school districts to initiate the Social Security number program. Jack Gorman, assistant superintendent for Snyder ISD, emphasized that the program here is "strictly voluntary."

TEA officials add that those students who do not participate in the Social Security system or whose parents do not wish the number be used for identification will be assigned an alternate number for state records.

The form being sent home here is only a request for an application. It must be returned to the school by Friday. Once the forms have been received, an application for each child returning the form will be mailed to the school and sent home with the child.

"Processing the applications through the school will allow us to use the school records to verify citizenship and identity of the child," noted Gloria Hopkins, a representative with the Social Security office in Big Spring.

Parents who do not wish to obtain the number through the school can mail a direct request for an application to the Big Spring office. Hopkins noted it is "much easier" to make the application through the local school system, however.

Parents who seek the number directly from the Social Security Administration will be required to present a valid birth certificate and one additional form of identification, such as a report card, an immunization card or a library card.

"If a person requests a number by mail, he must send the original documents, not copies," Hopkins added.

Social Security staffers will be at the Senior Citizens Center May 12 and June 16.

May Day auction set next weekend

Volunteer workers will again be seeking funds for the operation of the Senior Center when they host the annual May Day next Saturday in the coliseum.

More than 30 quilts made by center volunteers this past year will be sold at auction starting at 6:30 p.m. The quilts and other donated items to be sold will go on display at 2 p.m. when the coliseum opens. Among the items donated will be a bronze sculpture by Dr. Robert Taylor, the local artist who has donated other sculptures over the years to help the Senior Center.

Other fund raising activities set for Saturday include a barbecue to be served from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. and the sale of arts and crafts and baked goods. Tickets for the barbecue must be purchased in advance and are $5 each.

They can be reserved by calling the center at 573-4035. Jerry Baird, who combines a flair for preparing barbecue with his duties as director of the Senior Center, will oversee the preparation of the barbecued beef. Also on the menu will be potato salad, pinto beans, cole slaw and a relish tray.

The arts and crafts and food booths will open at 2 p.m. and remain open until 6:30 p.m. Open during the auction will be a Sweet Tooth Booth where diners can purchase dessert and coffee to

Pops performance is 'first' at college

The first ever pops concert for the Western Texas College music department has been scheduled for Tuesday night in the Fine Arts Theatre.

The concert is to begin at 7:30 p.m. and the public is invited to attend. There will be no charge for admission.

"We plan to make this our first annual pops concert," Brent Hardegree, music instructor, said. "The music for the evening is all light, popular music and we do invite everyone to come out and enjoy the evening."

Featured on the program will be the WTC Choir directed by Hardegree and the Singing Cowboys and a women's group directed by Jane Womack. Members of the choir will also be featured in solo and small ensemble numbers.

The final choir number will be accompanied by Brian Gruben on drums, Blaine Hoy on guitar, Greg Wofford on bass and Philip Hagar on keyboard. Donna Smith is accompanist for the Singing Cowboys and their final number, "God Bless the USA," will also be accompanied by John Burke on drums and Ross Preston on guitar.

Opening the program will be selections by the WTC Choir.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Democracy is when the government works for the people. Utopia is when the government actually works."

A Snyder product, Barry Tubb, has again brought national recognition to his hometown. The April 20 edition of People Weekly had a feature article on the New York actor.

Tubb has landed a job in the Broadway production of "Sweet Sue." He appears with big-name co-stars Lynn Redgrave and Mary Tyler Moore.

It will be another first for Tubb who appears nude on stage. "Hey, it's in good taste. I keep my back to the audience..." said Tubb in the magazine article.

Said People, "Having made his mark with the sensitive portrayal of Marlo Thomas' gay son in the 1985 ABC drama, "Consenting Adult" and last year as a fighter pilot trainee in "Top Gun," Tubb has been steadily carving out a career in television and films, and he was not about to let fear of nudity came between him and the Great White Way."

To maintain his Texas ties, Tubbs had decorated his Manhattan apartment with western items including cowboy hats, a lariat under the sofa and a bola pinned to a potted cactus.

Said the magazine, "Born in a small West Texas town of Snyder, where his father owned an oil drilling company, Barry and his three sisters played with a unique menagerie of pets--a bobcat, a fox and 12 deer, rather than just standard dogs and cats."

Describing himself as "the worst actor" in high school, Tubbs said, "You're looking at a guy who would have been happy in the background of a Wheaties ad. I'll play anything they let me."

A cattleman from south Texas has come up with a solution to end his industry's problems. "Everybody run over a chicken."

Freed dissident skeptical of the Soviet reforms

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — Freed Soviet dissident Anatoly Koryagin said upon his arrival in the West that the Kremlin's much-publicized liberalization campaign is "only words" and that widespread rights abuse continues.

Koryagin, who was jailed in 1981 after charging that Soviet authorities put sane political opponents in mental institutions, arrived here Friday with his wife Galena, three sons and his mother.

The 48-year-old psychiatrist, who was released two months ago from a labor camp, told reporters that Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's proclaimed reform policies "are only words without practical meaning."

"Of course it is good" that he and other prominent Soviet dissidents were allowed to emigrate, Koryagin told reporters at Zurich airport after arriving from Moscow.

"But one cannot call this liberalization," he said, because Soviet authorities "still portray us as criminals."

Some dissidents who were moved from labor camps to jails for their supposedly impending release were later returned to camps and are still being held, he said, without elaborating. He also said the abuse of psychiatry and psychiatric institutions continues.

Gorbachev has been promoting "glasnost" — openness — in the treatment of selected social issues and has also advocated limited democratic reforms in Communist Party proceedings, such as secret ballots in some elections.

Koryagin had been sentenced to seven years in prison and five years in internal exile for anti-Soviet activities.

His accusations of psychiatric abuse had been published in a British medical journal and he had been an adviser to a group called the Working Commission to Investigate the Use of Psychiatry for Political Purposes.

He was freed after being pardoned by the Supreme Soviet, the national parliament, as part of a review of dissident cases. A few dozen dissidents have been released from prisons or labor camps in recent months.

Koryagin's eldest son, 19-year-old Ivan, was jailed for 1½ years for "hooliganism." He was released March 25.

Self-examination for breasts advocated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women should continue to examine themselves for breast cancer as long as they realize the procedure is no substitute for more proven methods of detection, says the federal government's top disease prevention official.

Dr. Michael McGinnis issued that advice Friday in response to a statistical study that found no evidence that self-examination is as effective as an exam by a physician and breast X-rays.

"The Public Health Service feels it is still appropriate for physicians to recommend breast self-examination to their patients," McGinnis said in an interview.

Breast cancer is the most common cancer in women and the second leading cause of cancer death among women, after lung cancer.

The National Cancer Society predicts one in 10 American women under age 40 will develop breast cancer some time in her life, and one in 30 will die from it. Breast cancer, it says, will strike 130,000 U.S. women this year and kill 41,000.

The study by the U.S. Preventive Services Task Force, which is financed partially with federal money, said, "The problem with breast self-examination is not evidence of a lack of effect, but lack of evidence."

While the risk of a woman dying from breast cancer decreases measurably if a doctor examines her breasts or takes X-rays of them, the same has not been established for self-examination, said the report published in Friday's edition of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

McGinnis said he has no disagreement with the report, but is "concerned there will be misinterpretations" of it.

"It would be unfortunate if the public perception is that it is a recommendation against breast self-examination, because it is not that," said McGinnis, deputy secretary for disease prevention at the Department of Health and Human Services.

"The reason we recommend that it is still perfectly appropriate for physicians to recommend BSE (self-examination) is that it is a fact that most breast cancers are detected by women during self-examination and they get into earlier care," said McGinnis.

"Indeed we would encourage physicians to instruct their patients in breast examination, but to do so emphasizing the fact that they ought to take care not to reduce their seeking of clinical exams."

Death penalty given in slaying of man

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — After Nelson Wayne Mooney was sentenced to die for the 1984 shooting death of a businessman, he turned to the prosecutor and said, "It's not over."

The jury deliberated 75 minutes Thursday before finding Mooney, 31, of Houston guilty of capital murder. It deliberated 45 minutes Friday before returning to the courtroom with a recommendation that Mooney be sentenced to death.

The jury ruled that Mooney deliberately killed Raymond William Garner, 63, of Channelview, who owned a trucking business. The jury also concluded that Mooney would probably commit violent acts again unless he were executed.

Mooney slowly nodded his head but showed no other emotion as District Clerk Joy K. McManus read the jury verdict.

After State District Judge W.G. "Dub" Woods Jr. pronounced the death penalty judgment, Mooney turned to District Attorney Mike Little and said in a calm voice, "It's not over."

Mooney's mother, seated in the back of the courtroom, began sobbing when she heard the ruling.

Defense lawyer Veryl Brown then formally notified the court that Mooney will appeal the conviction and death sentence.

Quadraplegic...

Ex-basketball player is dead

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Brian Keith Garrett was a promising basketball player until he was left a quadriplegic after he was shot in the neck at age 18.

But he forgave his assailant, and made national headlines in September 1985 when he asked a local jury for mercy for the man.

Garrett died last week and his mother, Linda Powell Washington, said Friday, "He's slam dunking in heaven today."

"He's not crippled anymore. Praise the Lord!" she said.

That he was revived in March 1985 and lived as long as he did was nothing short of a miracle, medical officials said.

The bullet severed his spinal cord, leaving him paralyzed from the neck down.

Testifying from a gurney and attended by six doctors and nurses, Brian had to speak through a manmade "voice box" at the trial. It was activated by compressed air, which he released by wrinkling his forehead.

Monitors on his forehead and a compressor did the work of his brains and lungs to allow him to vocalize his thoughts.

The determination that had made him a standout basketball player in junior high allowed him to accomplish far more than the most optimistic physicians ever thought was possible - finally allowing him to leave the hospital less than two weeks before his death, his mother said.

Defying medical odds, he learned to speak again without the voice box, and to breathe without the respirator. He could write or play computer games with a pencil or joystick clenched in his teeth.

And, his mother said, he became "a holy terror" at Hendrick Medical Center in the $22,000 wheelchair that the hospital had made for him.

"It was a special 'sip and puff' chair," she explained. "Brian operated it by sipping and puffing on a plastic tube. He got to where he could almost 'pop a wheelie.'"

Nurses took him on day trips to shopping centers, and he was a special guest at Hardin-Simmons University basketball games earlier this year.

Mrs. Washington said Hendrick absorbed the cost of "millions and millions of dollars worth of treatment, plus all the employees and doctors gave him love and concern you could never place a price tag on."

The day before he died, Mrs. Washington said, Brian told her, "I'm going home."

"I said, "Are you talking about what I think you are?' and he just smiled and said, "That's right. I'm going home!"

"He talked about being able to run and jump and play basketball again," she said. "I knew what he was talking about. I just didn't think it was coming quite so quick."

Right up to the end, Brian expressed regret that Kevin Jefferson, the teen-ager who shot him, had not visited him.

FmHA juggling funds for farm borrowers

WASHINGTON (AP) — In what has become almost a rite of spring, the Farmers Home Administration is juggling funds to stretch farm operating loans among the neediest borrowers.

The agency said Friday it has run out of operating loan funds in 25 states and will form a national pool from what is left in the other states to help meet demand. Similar actions have been taken in recent years, officials said.

Vance L. Clark, FmHA administrator, said states with large amounts of unobligated funds will share with those states where the need is greatest.

"Although some states have exhausted their original allocations of operating loan funds, overall we have ample funds," he said. "Consolidating will let us use those funds in the most efficient and effective way."

Clark said about $200 million in FmHA funds for lending directly to farmers may be consolidated for redistribution on a needs basis. The national reserve fund was scheduled to be effective at the close of business Friday.

Governor sells stock in giant oil service company

DALLAS (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements and his wife have sold all their stock in Schlumberger Ltd., a giant oil-well service company whose operations in Libya drew criticism from Democrats during the gubernatorial race last year, a Clements aide said.

But the stock sale had nothing to do with the criticism, said Reggie Bashur, the governor's press secretary.

"It was a personal business decision and had absolutely nothing to do with the campaign," Bashur told the Dallas Morning News Friday.

Clements joined the Schlumberger board of directors in 1984 after the company he founded, Sedco Inc., merged with the Netherlands Antilles corporation.

Schlumberger, with offices in New York and Paris, is the world's largest oil-well service company.

The governor resigned as a director of the six-member Schulmberger executive committee in June, he said, to devote more time to his campaign against then-Gov. Mark White.

Clements owned 1.7 million shares of the company's stock in March 1986, accordng to a proxy statement. He sold $32 million worth of stock during a six-week period last spring, but still held 816,879 shares as of Aug. 15, the Morning News reported Saturday, citing company and insider-trading reports.

In his 1986 personal financial statement, filed Friday in Austin, Clements revealed that he and Rita Clements had sold 500 or more shares of Schlumberger stock at a profit of $5,000 or more.

Elected officials are required to report all of their holdings and liabilities each year, but they do not have to give exact amounts.

Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle accused Clements during the campaign of giving "aid and comfort" to terrorists because of Schlumberger's dealings with Libya.

'Animal' McFadden...

Jury selection begins in murder trial

BELTON, Texas (AP) — After repeated delays and complaints about its expense, the capital murder trial of a tattoo-covered convict who calls himself "Animal" is scheduled to begin Monday.

Jerry McFadden, 39 — a four-time convict from Ore City who led East Texas lawmen on a three-day chase last summer — is going on trial for the May 1986 slaying of Hawkins High School honor student Suzanne Harrison, 18.

The heavily publicized trial has stalled four times, three times on defense motions for continuance and the last time by Upshur County officials who said they couldn't afford the costly capital murder trial.

The rural East Texas county allocated $50,000 for the trial and received $43,000 in state assistance to hire a special prosecutor, but officials expect the trial to cost as much as $250,000.

Sen. Richard Anderson, D-Marshall, and Rep. Bill Hollowell, D-Grand Saline, are expected to meet with Gov. Bill Clements Monday to see whether the state will grant additional funds for the trial.

The case was moved to Bell County earlier this year after a judge determined there had been too much pre-trial publicity in Upshur County. And last Thursday, State District Judge F.L. Garrison issued a gag order after information concerning last-minute semen tests was leaked to the news media.

Prior to the gag order, court appointed defense attorney Vernard Solomon, a marshall criminal attorney, said McFadden was a victim of circumstance.

"He was just in the wrong place at the wrong time," Solomon said.

Solomon claims McFadden's past criminal history made him a perfect target for Wood and Upshur counties law enforcement officials "who needed to pin the murder on someone quick."

In 1972, McFadden pleaded guilty to the rape of 14-year-old girl in Denton. One year later, he pleaded guilty to the rape of a junior high school teacher in Haskell.

Then in 1978, he went on a day-long rampage through West Texas, taking an 18-year-old Hamlin secretary hostage and raping her. He received 15 years for the crimes after pleading guilty.

In 1986, a Bexar County jury gave him a life sentence for aggravated robbery in the theft of two cans of beer from a young couple at Lake Hawkins. The robbery occurred the same day Miss Harrison and her two companions disappeared.

Solomon told the Longview Morning Journal, however, that special prosecutor Stephen Tokoly of Dallas will be "unable to place my client at the scene of the crime."

Upshur County investigators admit the majority of their case against McFadden consists of circumstantial evidence with no eyewitnesses nor anyone seeing McFadden with Miss Harrison before or after her death.

But prosecutors say they hope physical evidence, hair fibers and semen samples will persuade the jury to find the man guilty and sentence him to death.

Gena Turner, 20, and Bryan Boone, 19, accompanied Miss Harrison to Lake Hawkins May 4, 1986, for a summer swim. All three were reported missing that night by relatives.

Court rejects motion

HOUSTON (AP) — A state appeals court has refused to reconsider its earlier ruling in which it upheld a verdict that ordered Texaco Inc. to pay Pennzoil Co. $10.5 billion.

Texaco sought the rehearing as part of its continuing appeal of a Houston jury's finding in 1985 that Texaco wrongly interfered with Pennzoil's planned acquisition of Getty Oil Co.

James W. Kinnear, chief executive officer of Texaco, expressed disappointment in Friday's ruling by the three-judge 1st Court of Appeals.

"This action without any explanation represents more of the same failure by the Texas lower courts to come to grips with the legal issues in this case," Kinnear said in a statement released from the company's White Plains, N.Y. headquarters.

"Instead of deciding the validity of of the points raised in our brief, the court today flatly refused to consider them at all," Kinnear said. "Texaco will move promptly to bring this case before the Texas Supreme Court."

Pennzoil spokesman Robert G. Harper said the ruling was anticipated.

"Today's appeals court decision was certainly not unexpected by Pennzoil Co.," Harper said. "It is another review of the evidence in this case and the appeals court has again ruled in Pennzoil's favor.

SIXTH-EIGHTH HONOR ROLL--These Hermleigh sixth, seventh and eighth graders have all been placed on the honor roll for the fifth six weeks. Eighth graders in the back row are April Blair, Angie Mireles, Cristy Nichols, Carli Nichols and Andrea Smith. Seventh graders in the middle row are Renee Matthews, Rebecca Ramey and Tony Whitehead. Sixth graders in the front row are Stephane Gannaway and Cayla Nichols. (SDN Staff Photo)

Roy Orbison is in homecoming

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — For singer Roy Orbison, who grew up in Wink and first gained popularity in Odessa, the return to West Texas is not a frequent trip.

"I always thought West Texas was a little out of the way," said Orbison, who left for Memphis, Tenn., in 1955. "I especially thought that when I lived there. You know, I wrote 'Only the Lonely' in West Texas."

In a telephone interview from his studio in Los Angeles, the rock legend conceded he can't remember the last time he played the Permian Basin.

"It was about five or six years ago, I think," said Orbison, who otherwise gives quick credit to West Texas for the development of his music.

Orbison, who turned 51 Thursday, was to play in Midland's Chaparral Center Saturday night.

He fondly remembers his early television appearances on Odessa-Midland stations KOSA and KMID.

The leader of the Wink Westerners at age 18, Orbison won the five-man band a guest appearance on a weekly KMID program sponsored by Pioneer Furniture.

"After the show, I told the (Pioneer) owner, "Why don't you sponsor us every week?" He asked how much it would cost him. I said '$60.' He said, "Apiece?" I said, "No, for the whole group."

Those local TV appearances, Orbison confirms, was the start of something big.

"We did a Friday night show on KMID and a Saturday night show for KOSA. The best thing about being on TV was that we could tell the people where we would be playing during the week. It was a good way to advertise."

Success came early for the Texas tenor, as he left his band and moved from the rockabilly atmosphere of Memphis to the pop-oriented climate of England. By the time he recorded "Oh, Pretty Woman" in 1964, he was an international star.

But Orbison receded from the limelight following the loss of his wife and two of his children to separate accidents in the mid-'60s.

"It really has picked up in the last seven years or so," said Orbison, who admits to being somewhat surprised by the new-found fan attention. "This is the biggest year, by far."

Known for many years more as a songwriter than a performer, Orbison gives much credit for his recent popularity to Linda Ronstadt's recording of "Blue Bayou" and Van Halen's hard rock rendition of "Pretty Woman."

He currently is recording a two-album set with singer T-Bone Burnett.

FINALIST--Sharla Ann Dupree--daughter of Ron and Wanda Dupree of Bedford and granddaughter of Mildred Dupree of Snyder, has been selected as a finalist in the 16th annual Miss Texas National Teenage Pageant which will take place at Texas Christian University June 5-7. (Family Photo)

7-Eleven petitions removed

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — A petition enlisting support for a state anti-crime group has been removed from 7-Eleven stores in Midland because it is too vague, the chain's local manager says.

A spokeswoman for an East Texas group called "We The People," which is distributing the petitions, said she was surprised by the action and thought that all 7-Elevens in the state would allow them.

But a spokesman for Southland Corp., the Dallas-based parent of the convenience stores, said the local manager was within his rights to remove the petitions.

The petitions say: "Justice is still being written. Your best defense is a pen and paper. If you agree that the Criminal Justice System in the State of Texas has a great need of revision, please sign below."

Gary Boisvert, Midland supervisor for 7-Eleven, objected that the document goes no further in stating what modifications the signer supports in affixing his signature.

"I read it two or three times, and I am still not sure what some of it means," said Boisvert, who removed the petitions last week.

He added that the documents contain detachable, wallet-sized copies of the Crime Victims' Bill of Rights, which he said adds to the confusion.

Janie Wilson, a Hawkins resident and chairman of We The People said she was "shocked" at the petition's removal.

Ms. Wilson, who manages a strip shopping center in the East Texas town of about 1,300, said the petition was approved by Southland.

Mike Click, Southland's manager of government affairs, verified his involvement and added his surprise at the incident.

"I'm trying to resolve that," Click said of the removal. "I was unaware that they were pulled from the stores in Midland."

Although Southland supports We The People and the tough-on-crime legislation the group proposes, Boisvert and other area supervisors are not required to display the document, Click said.

"The divisions are very autonomous units," he said.

Southland convenience stores in the Dallas-Fort Worth and Houston areas continue to display the petition, which is so popular that some of the stores already have depleted their supply, Click said.

"I am not going to be angry with Southland," Ms. Wilson said.

Developers eye burial site

McKINNEY, Texas (AP) — For 111 years, the McGarrah Cemetery has stood disturbed only by the soft presence of mourners and the turning of earth to create new graves.

But now there are rumbling bulldozers nearby busily carving out a 6,200-acre development. And there are plans to remove the remains of those buried there to another cemetery, much to the chagrin of the descendants of some of the earliest pioneers in Collin County.

Dallas-based Republic Property Group, developers of Stonebridge Ranch, is seeking an exemption to a state law that says property dedicated as a cemetery can't be sold or divided in a way that interferes with the land's original purpose.

Jewel Abernathy, a McKinney attorney representing any unknown persons buried in the McGarrah Cemetery, said RPG filed a suit to transfer the bodies to a cemetery with perpetual care. He explained that since there are no immediate surviving relatives, the group had to ask the court for permission to move the graves.

"Texas law permits a suit to be filed to determine what is proper and fair to do with the cemetery," RPG President Arthur Hewitt said, declining to discuss the matter further until the litigation is settled.

McGarrah descendants have filed a counter suit to keep the cemetery in tact. Larry, Chester and Royal Hines, all of McKinney, want the cemetery preserved.

"These are the first pioneers in the county," said Larry Hines. "And we are their direct descendants. We don't think they have the right or the authority to move it. They need to build a fence around it and say 'Don't bother this part, boys.'"

The pending litigation has also dampened the county's Open Space Subcommittee, which received $5,000 in March to mark historical sites in the county.

For the county commissioners to approve the $5,000, which came from bond money, the subcommittee had to prioritize 10 sites, and the cemetery topped the list, said Nancy Rice, a member of the county Historic and Cultural Preservation Committee.

Oil industry representatives from around globe to meet

HOUSTON (AP) — Oil experts from as many as 70 nations are gathering in Houston this week to sort through an industry in flux and work up strategies to deal with the future.

The 12th World Petroleum Congress starts Sunday and runs through Friday, including representatives from the United States, Soviet Union, Japan, Europe and the Middle East.

"I think the oil industry is in a transition period, where the future is much more confused than in the past," said Dr. Paul McKim, chairman of the U.S. organizing committee for the congress.

"When you have problems, that's the time to get together, and see what kind of insight you can get, see what kind of 'groupthink' might develop," said McKim, who also is senior vice president of Texas Eastern Corp.

The congress has been held every four years since the inaugural London meeting in 1933, with the exception of the years during World War II. The last meeting in the United States was in 1959 in New York.

During the six-day conference, papers and forums will be held on the subjects of exploration, environmental management, oil industry financing and developments in automotive engines and their implications for the industry.

"The subject matter is designed to cover the whole gamut of the industry," McKim said. "Where is the action, and what does it mean from an industry point of view?"

During the congress, participants will select a president to replace Wilhelm von Ilsemann of West Germany, who has served as president of the organization since 1975. Participants also will select a location for the next congress, to be held in 1991.

Earl Ross, a public affairs spokesman for the congress, said he had reviewed many of the papers expected to be delivered by United States-based participants.

He said many carried the common theme that investment by the U.S. oil industry has fallen off in recent years, and that more investment will be needed if new sources of oil and gas are to be found.

Other papers deal with attempting to quantify how much oil and gas has yet to be found, while others deal with the financial aspects of the industry, Ross said.

Among those scheduled to give speeches to plenary sessions of the congress were Lawrence G. Rawl, Exxon Corp. chairman, and Geroge M. Keller, Chevron Corp. chairman and chief executive officer.

Also scheduled to speak are Dr. A.H. Taher, Minister of State of Saudi Arabia; E. von Kuenheim, chairman of the executive board of BMW of West Germany; and Vladimir Vladimirovich, head of petroleum geology and geochemistry of Moscow State University.

Registration at this year's congress has been running below the level of 1983, when the conference was held in London, Ross said. He attributed the lower anticipated turnout this year to belt-tightening in the industry.

Rising investment — 7.4 percent a year — was a key factor in the accelerated economic growth, averaging 5.8 percent annually, that Latin America experienced between 1960 and 1980, according to the InterAmerican Development Bank. Since the onset of a debt crisis, investment in Latin America has fallen by 30 percent or some $50 billion a year. The ratio of investments to gross domestic product has dropped from a high of 25.5 percent in 1980 to 17.9 percent in 1985.

Army says more vehicles sank than reported earlier

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army acknowledged Friday that 12 Bradley Fighting Vehicles have sunk during amphibious testing, nearly double the number previously reported, but it denied a congressman's assertion that the combat personnel carrier "leaks like a sieve."

As recently as last week, the Army said there had been only seven sinkings of the armored vehicles. But Army Undersecretary James R. Ambrose told a House panel that the service had not counted either so-called "swampings" or sinkings that caused less than $700 damage.

"You've got a vehicle that will not float, won't swim and won't climb a bank," said Rep. John Dingell, chairman of the House Energy and Commerce oversight subcommittee.

"The vehicle leaks like a sieve," Dingell, D-Mich., said.

But Ambrose said a dozen sinkings out of 10,000 tests was a good track record. "I don't believe that warrants the assertion that the vehicle won't float or swim," he said.

Ambrose also criticized testimony earlier Friday by retired Air Force Col. James Burton, a former military weapons tester, who said the Army has been unwilling to modify the Bradley to make it safer.

The Bradley, designed to replace the M-113 armored personnel carrier, is a 25-ton tracked vehicle that resembles a tank and is armed with 25 mm cannon, 7.62 mm machine gun and anti-tank missiles.

Is faculty opposition behind transfer?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Faculty opposition to plans for a Ronald Reagan presidential library at Stanford University apparently contributed to a decision to relocate the library to Southern California, sources at the California school say.

"I think it is fair to say that it was not ignored," a Stanford professor who was active in planning the library said when asked whether faculty opposition was one reason the library's backers decided to seek another site. The professor spoke on condition he not be identified.

Ronald Reagan Presidential Foundation members would not go beyond their official statement that they were pulling out of Stanford because they felt it essential that the library and a proposed policy center be located together.

The decision to separate them, however, was made by the university's trustees in 1984, and the foundation continued planning for the Stanford facility, holding a news conference in Washington only three months ago to unveil the architect's design.

"They supposedly had accepted three years ago the idea that a policy center, if there was to be one, would have to be off campus and completely separate, so it seems like a big change of mind on their part," said Anthony E. Siegman, a professor of electrical engineering and a library critic who lives near the proposed Stanford site.

Last month, 12 former chairmen of the Stanford Faculty Senate said the library should be scaled down or moved farther from the center of campus, rather than the 20-acre site personally approved by Reagan two years ago.

The chairmen noted "a growing faculty uneasiness over proposed plans for this structure."

The library planner who spoke anonymously said a number of leading educational institutions in Southern California, as well as other organizations, had expressed interest in being the library's site since the foundation's announcement Thursday.

John Manley, a political science professor, called the decision not to locate the complex in Stanford, which is south of San Francisco, "a community victory."

Seigman, in a telephone interview, said that although library critics were happy about the decision, "We are seriously concerned over public and particularly alumni perception. It will add to the stereotype of an ultra-liberal or liberal faculty rejecting a more conservative president, and I think that isn't true."

"The library just turned out to be too big and too much of a tourist attraction for the site," he said. "We were not trying to drive the library away from the campus."

"But," he added, "the mood on campus is certainly one of rejoicing."

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Reagan was "comfortable with the decision" although the spokesman said he believed that the foundation, which operates independently of the White House, did not consult the president about it.

The president gave a White House dinner Friday night for library supporters, including at least two members of the foundation board.

Injured skydiver will not skydive again

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — A Texas school teacher who was only seconds from death when a fellow jumper managed to open her parachute will not jump again, her fiance said.

Debbie Williams, a 31-year-old fifth-grade teacher from Post, Texas, collided with another skydiver and was plummeting toward the earth, unconscious, when Gregory Robertson of Phoenix maneuvered down to her and pulled the rip cord on her reserve parachute.

Ms. Williams sustained multiple injuries when she landed flat on her back and remained hospitalized Thursday at Scottsdale Memorial Hospital.

Her fiance, 36-year-old Bill Rothe of Andrews, Texas, said during a news conference at the hospital Thursday that Ms. Williams only shakes her head "no" when asked by others if she'll sky drive again.

"It's not No. 1 on her list of things to do, and her mother is carrying a lot of influence with that," said Rote, who did the talking for Ms. Williams, who still had a respirator tube sticking down her throat.

Rothe, a corporate pilot and owner of Andrews Aircraft in Andrews, said Ms. Williams' injuries included a fractured skull, broken ribs, a black eye and a broken tooth.

WTC golfers enter region tournament

ROSWELL, N.M. -- Western Texas College will participate in the combination Western Junior College Athletic Conference and Region V golf tournaments here Monday and Tuesday.

The first 27 holes of the action will constitute the final WJCAC tournament of the season. The entire 54-hole event makes up the Region V event, which sends its winner and runnerup to the NJCAA National Tournament.

Playing for Western Texas will be Clint Adams, Joel Fults, Mike Harrison, Scott Sawyer, Matt Smith and Wes Skaggs.

Skaggs will drop out after 27 holes and will not compete for regional honors. Currently, Harrison, Smith and Fults are sitting ninth, 10th and 12th in the conference medalist standings.

Andrews standouts sign letter with WTC's Foster

Western Texas College golf coach Dave Foster has inked two Andrews High School players to letters of intent, he said Saturday morning.

Mark Bergen, District 2-4A medalist, and Jeff Beal, who was third in the medalist race, have both indicated they will attend Western Texas College and play for the Westerners next fall.

"Both have been to state the last two years and Andrews is picked again to win regionals and go to state," said Coach Foster. "Mark is one of the top 4A golfers being recruited in the state."

Foster said he hoped to announce the signing of two other players within a week.

Freeman wins shot put in controversial decision

ABILENE -- Angelo State University's Kyle Freeman, a native of Snyder, took a controversial victory in the shot put at the Lone Star Conference track meet here Friday.

Freeman got off a throw of 60-5 - his personal best - to win the event after two-time LSC champion Ahmed Shata was disqualified.

Shata, competing for Abilene Christian University, had put the 16-pound shot 61-4 in the finals. His effort was disallowed, however, because he had worn tape on his hands during the preliminaries - a violation of NCAA rules. Angelo State coach David Noble - also a former Snyder High School athletic director - brought the protest. Shata went on to compete in the finals, but his effort there was disallowed by meet referee Mike Barnes. Later, a games committee back up the meet director.

Freeman also placed second in the hammer throw behind ACU's Cliff Felkins. Felkins' distance was 198-11 while Freeman threw

Hard hitting, solid pitching...

Tigers sock Andrews, 8-3

ANDREWS -- David Martinez's grand slam home run in the top of the first inning was all Snyder needed to defeat front-running Andrews in District 2-4A baseball action here Friday.

Martinez's homer - his third in a week - sparked the offense and Reynaldo Gomez provided four-hit pitching as the Tigers topped the Mustangs 8-3.

"The kids really played well," said Coach Albert Lewis. "Reynaldo pitched a great game and our defensive play is coming together. We want everybody to know we're looking to win every time out."

Snyder jumped on Andrews ace Sid Mihecoby from the start, as leadoff hitter Israel Hinojos tagged the pitcher for a double. Troy Burton followed with a walk, and Van Echols reached on an error. Mihecoby got designated hitter Ken Pickering to strike out, but Martinez followed with a hard shot that climbed out of the ballpark.

Snyder added two more runs in the second stanza. Hinojos received a two-out walk, and Burton punched a home run out of the park - his second of the season.

Meanwhile, Gomez was stellar on the mound. He retired the first seven men he faced, and got the first three on just four pitches.

"We've been working with Reynaldo a lot. He had just gotten to where he wasn't getting his breaking stuff over the plate, but he pitched a fine, fine game Friday," said Coach Lewis of the pitcher, who improved to 5-3 with the win.

Andrews finally scored in the third. David Emiliano walked, moved around on Steven Hines' single, and scored on a routine ground out. The Mustangs' other runs came in similar fashion as Gomez only allowed two baserunners in one other inning. That came in the fourth and was on an error.

Snyder tallied in the top of the fourth when Earl Ware - running for Lee Fletcher - scored on a single from Hinojos. Fletcher had reached on a walk.

In the seventh, Echols singled, moved up on a passed ball and a basehit from Pickering, and scored on a ground out.

Snyder collected eight hits, including two apiece from Hinojos, Burton and Pickering.

Now 9-9 for the season and 3-5 in District 2-4A action, the Tigers will head for Monahans next Tuesday.

The loss was Andrews' first in district play and knocks the Mustangs to 6-1 and 15-7 for the season. In the only other 2-4A game reported Friday, Big Spring cracked Lamesa 9-3.

New York streak 'yanked' by Cleveland's Indians, 6-5

by The Associated Press

The winning ways of the New York Yankees rubbed off on the Cleveland Indians, and just in time.

The Yankees carried a 10-game winning streak into Friday night's game at Cleveland. But the Indians, behind 48-year-old knuckleballer Phil Niekro, carried a 4-1 lead and a two-hitter into the eighth inning.

Then Rickey Henderson homered, Don Mattingly tripled in a run, and Henderson homered again in the ninth for a 5-4 lead.

"As soon as Henderson's homer was hit, we just sort of looked at each other and said, 'Oh, man,' " Cleveland's Cory Snyder said. "But then we got into the dugout and started talking among ourselves. Everybody was saying, if they can come back, we can, too."

Which they did, with Snyder providing the game-winning single in the bottom of the ninth as the Indians won, 6-5.

Elsewhere Friday night, Milwaukee got back on the winning track with a 6-4 victory over Baltimore; Kansas City took Detroit 7-3; Toronto beat Chicago 4-2 in 10 innings; Texas overcame Boston 6-4 in 10 innings; California routed Minnesota 8-1; and Seattle downed Oakland 6-3.

Brewers 6, Orioles 4

Milwaukee hadn't played since its record-tying 13-game winning streak was snapped in Chicago on Tuesday. The Brewers didn't flinch, beating Baltimore behind Teddy Higuera's fourth straight victory and homers by Rob Deer and Bill Schroeder.

Deer hit a two-run shot in the first inning, his major league-leading eighth, and Schroder got his in the fourth. But it took an RBI single by Glenn Braggs in the seventh to put the Brewers ahead to stay.

Higuera struggled early, then put away 15 straight batters.

Royals 7, Tigers 3

Despite committing five errors, the visting Royals won as Charlie Leibrandt pitched 7 2-3 strong innings. For Detroit, Dan Petry had two wild pitches and hit a batter in the second inning, when the Royals scored three runs.

Petry's wild pitches brought home consecutive runs by Bo Jackson and Jamie Quirk in the inning. Jackson led off with a bunt single and Quirk was hit by a pitch. After a sacrifice by Angel Salazar and an intentional walk to Willie Wilson, Petry threw wild pitches with Kevin Seitzer batting, scoring Jackson, and Frank White batting, which scored Quirk.

White's bloop single to left brought home Wilson to make it 4-0.

"It wasn't pretty, but we won it," Royals Manager Billy Gardner said.

Rangers chalk another win

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - The next time the Boston Red Sox ask reliever Calvin Schiraldi to take the mound at Arlington Stadium, he might be tempted to say thanks, but no thanks.

Friday night, for the second time in as many appearances at Arlington Stadium, Schiraldi was touched for a two-run home run by a Ranger batter that cost the Red Sox a ballgame.

With the score tied 4-4 in the bottom of the 10th Friday night, Schiraldi served up a home run to Rangers left fielder Pete Incaviglia that boosted Texas to a 6-4 victory.

"Schiraldi is a heck of a pitcher," said Incaviglia, whose seventh homer of the season tied a club record for the month of April. "But I was expecting a fastball and I'm just in a nice groove right now."

In his last appearance here in 1986, Schiraldi gave up a two-run homer to Ruben Sierra in the bottom of the ninth in a game the Rangers won 4-2.

Schiraldi said he had no regrets about the location of the pitch, only where it wound up.

"I didn't have my real good fastball tonight," he said, "but I made the pitch I wanted to make to Incaviglia. He just took it the other way."

The homer was a towering drive into the right field bleachers.

"I don't know how a guy can hit a ball like that to the opposite field," said Rangers manager Bobby Valentine. "He's amazing."

What might be equally amazing is that the Red Sox didn't score a dozen runs.

In addition to nine hits, they coaxed 11 bases on balls off four Rangers pitchers, but stranded 16 runners, including the bases loaded three times.

"We missed too many chances," understated Boston manager John McNamara.

Sierra hit his second home run of the season for the Rangers, a two-run shot off Boston starter Al Nipper, that gave Texas starter Bobby Witt a 4-3 lead in the third.

But Witt was gone in the fourth when he issued his eighth and ninth free passes.

When the Red Sox loaded the bases with none out in the eighth - with the score tied at 4-4 - Greg Harris, the eventual winner, retired the side without allowing a run.

Cats fall to Central

SAN ANGELO -- Snyder's young junior varsity baseball team fell to San Angelo here Friday, 9-4.

The Cats wrap up the 1987 season Monday in Brownfield, playing the Cubs at 5 p.m.

Bert Otto took the loss for Snyder, giving up nine hits while striking out three and walking two. He was backed by several errors.

Snyder got four runs on six hits, led by Mark Kuss' two-for-four effort.

"We were ahead 4-1 in sixth inning but we just kinda fell apart. We played five and one-half innings of excellent baseball," said Coach Mike Montgomery. "We made several errors and couldn't do anything."

Both Tracy Braziel and Roy Gutierrez threw runners out at the plate from the outfield.

Rockets win opener, 125-115 over Portland Trail Blazers

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) - After a trouble-filled season, the Houston Rockets are showing signs of returning to the form that took them to the NBA championship series last year.

"I don't know if they are as good right now as they were last year," said Portland's Kiki Vandeweghe after the Rockets dropped the Trail Blazers 125-115 in Friday night's playoff opener, "but I can't see them playing a better game than they played tonight."

Houston Coach Bill Fitch, whose team has struggled through injuries to its top players and the loss of guards Mitchell Wiggins and Lewis Lloyd because of drug abuse, said the Rockets seldom have been better than they were Friday.

"It was one of our best games. ...We felt like it had to be to beat them," he said.

Ralph Sampson returned to the Houston starting lineup for the first time since he suffered a knee injury Feb. 3. He wound up with 23 points.

"I think that should give him more confidence," Fitch said. "Ralph has worked very hard to get back where he is now. His game, when he's fit, compliments Akeem (Olajuwon) so well."

Olajuwon, the other half of Houston's Twin Towers, finished with 30 points, 10 rebounds and five blocked shots.

The Trail Blazers just weren't big enough to stop the Houston front line.

"It's no secret that we are not the most physical team in the league," said Portland Coach Mike Schuler. "But our guys pushed and did the best they could...We just have to work harder on the boards Sunday."

Game 2 of the best-of-five series is set for Sunday afternoon in Portland.

Olajuwon was happy to have Sampson back in the starting lineup.

"It means a lot," he said. "It's easier with his enthusiasm and his rebounding."

Sampson and Portland center Steve Johnson were locked in a physical battle all night. Sometimes the battle erupted into shoves and angry words.

"That's called intensity," Sampson said.

Guard Allen Leavell added 22 points and 10 assists for Houston, including a pair of timely long-range bombs in the final minutes.

"When they (Sampson and Olajuwon) get triple-teamed, we get a lot of easy shots," Leavell said. "We have to make them."

The Rockets, defending Western Conference champions, never trailed after taking a 14-point lead in the second quarter.

Portland cut the margin to 65-60 at halftime and tied the game twice in the third quarter, the last time at 72-72 with 8:46 to play.

But the Rockets took control of the game for good with a 14-4 run to build an 86-76 lead with 3:53 left in the quarter.

Houston stretched the margin to 16 on three occasions in the final quarter, the last time at 102-86 with 8:33 remaining.

The Blazers narrowed the margin to under 10 points several times, but could get no closer than six the rest of the game.

Vandeweghe topped the Blazers with 30 points, 16 of them in the first quarter, while Johnson added 29 and Clyde Drexler 25.

Blazers' Schuler named NBA Coach of the Year

NEW YORK (AP) - Portland Trail Blazers rookie coach Mike Schuler was voted runaway winner of the Red Auerbach Trophy as the NBA's 1987 Coach of the Year on Friday, after rebuilding his team around defense and a gaping hole left by the injury of Sam Bowie.

"There's no substitute for winning," Schuler said, and he did.

He led the Blazers to 49 victories and the third-best record in the Western Conference, even though Bowie was lost to the club in its fifth game with a broken leg.

Schuler was named on 30 of a possible 78 ballots cast by three media members from each league city and nine national media representatives.

George Karl of the Golden State Warriors was second with 9½ votes, followed by Pat Riley of the Los Angeles Lakers with 9, Jack Ramsay of the Indiana Pacers with 6½ and Doug Collins of the Chicago Bulls with 6.

The 46-year-old Schuler replaced Ramsay as Blazers coach last May 28 after six seasons as an NBA assistant, three with New Jersey and three more at Milwaukee. Before that, he spent 16 years as an assistant and head coach in college. Schuler was an assistant under Bob Knight at Indiana and Terry Holland at Virginia.

Baylor 7, Texas Tech 5

WACO, Texas (AP) - Steve Jarvie's grand slam in the eighth inning gave Baylor a 7-5 Southwest Conference victory over Texas Tech Friday afternoon.

The Bears improved to 34-14 overall and 5-11 in the SWC. The Red Raiders slipped to 20-7 and 5-14.

Tech starter Bill Schutt had allowed just two runs on seven hits through the first seven innings but he opened the eighth with consecutive walks. Dwight Fruge, 3-6, relieved Schutt and gave up a double to Todd Hawkins, which scored one run and made it 5-3.

Fruge then hit Shawn McAfee with a pitch, loading the bases for Jarvie.

WTC's Carrillo still on top

ABILENE – Western Texas College appeared to have put several cowboys and cowgirls in Saturday's finals of the Hardin-Simmons University NIRA Rodeo here.

In results Friday, Snyder native Adam Brewster scored a 67 in the bareback to join several teammates in the finals or short-go. His 67 was tied for fourth place.

Leading the way was bareback specialist Mike Carrillo, whose 77 Thursday held up for first place going into Saturday's action. Also entering the finals will be Keith Hudson, who clocked a 5.7 in the steer wrestling earlier in the week. Hudson's effort was tied for sixth place.

The top 10 men and women in each event qualify for the finals, scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. Saturday. A regular performance was also slated for noon Saturday. Points are awarded to the top four places in the long-go, short-go and average.

WTC women's team member Mistri Davis had the fifth best time in the breakaway roping heading into Saturday's shows. She clocked a 4.1 on Thursday.

Western student Steve Roberts continued to lead the saddle bronc event with a 71 he scored on Thursday. Roberts is not a member of the designated six-man men's team, but can accumulate individual points.

Several other WTC students were scheduled to perform in the noon rodeo Saturday, including Todd Danley, Bryan Evans and Jackie Horsfall.

Abilene Christian led the meet after five events with 34 points. ASU had 23. In the women's division, ASU led with 30 after four events. The meet was to conclude Saturday.

ALL SHINED UP — Restoration of the 1951 La France Fire Truck by members of the Snyder Fire Department required long hours of compounding and polishing the truck's faded red paint. all lettering and stripes with gold paint.

They also redid the trim and recovered the seats.

A fire had damaged engine wiring, and Jamie Baldwin replaced this as well as repairs to the brakes.

The restoration project is not complete yet. The 250 gallon water tank has rusted through and needs to be repaired and eventually Wood said they want to completely repaint the truck.

The fire truck still has all original gauges, caps and 20-inch tires.

The 12-cyclinder vehicle is capable of pumping 750 gallons per minute. Wood said if the tank were repaired, the fire truck would pass a state inspection. He also said if the city needed it "it would still go."

The city purchased the fire truck in 1951 and retired it last year. Wood confesses it "looked terrible" when they first started to restore it, but now said they believe it's "the best looking truck we have."

Chamber position cutoff date nears

She again noted that she doesn't expect the new manager to be in place until middle to late summer. This estimate takes into consideration the likelihood that whoever is hired will already be employed and will be required to give sufficient notice at their current job.

Members of the selection committee include the executive committee of the chamber, to include Potts, David Kattes, Mike Banta and Joe Coronado; the two immediate past presidents of the chamber, Jack Denman and Roy Baze; County Judge Bobby Goodwin, Mayor Troy Williamson and Red Faver, president of the Board of County Development.

On Oct. 30, 1938, Earth was invaded by Mars, or so it seemed, in the radio play "The War of the Worlds," starring Orson Welles. The radio drama, which employed fake news bulletins, caused panic among some listeners who thought the invasion was real.

Noah contract before county

County commissioners will consider reapproving a contract with Noah Project — the local shelter for abused women and their children — when they meet in regular session Monday.

Judge Bobby Goodwin noted the contract which had been approved is currently not on file at the office of the West Central Texas Council of Governments.

The shelter needs a written approval from the county to qualify for government grants available through WCTCOG.

In other action, Jimmy Ward, parks superintendent, will discuss the removal of light poles located in the old ball park at Hermleigh.

Monday's session is set for 10 a.m. in the courthouse.

Shooting spree assailant was considered loner

PALM BAY, Fla. (AP) — A man accused of murdering six people in a shooting rampage at two shopping centers is a sullen loner with a hair-trigger temper who fired shots in the air when youngsters walked in his yard, neighbors say.

"The kids were all afraid of him," said Eucal Grant, 68, who lived three doors from William Bryan Cruse. "I considered him off his head — crazy. He just acted crazy. No one talked to him, not even his next-door neighbors."

Neighbors said that about a half-hour before the rampage Thursday, Cruse fired shots when two teen-agers cut across his property, and a bullet hit a 14-year-old playing basketball across the street. He was in fair condition today.

Police said Cruse, 59, on Thursday walked through two shopping centers, shooting anyone in sight and littering the pavement with bodies. The first two police officers on the scene were among those killed.

Mishaps include traffic light hit

A minor two-vehicle mishap was investigated by police Friday in addition to a hit-and-run incident involving the traffic light at the intersection of 37th St. and College.

The two-vehicle wreck occurred at 9:53 p.m. at 37th St. and Ave. D.

Involved vehicles were a 1977 Ford driven by Kevin Wade Messenger, 3308 Ave. A; and a 1983 Pontiac driven by Scott Lynn Prince, 315 36th St.

The incident involving the traffic light was reported at 3:45 p.m. The vehicle hitting the light apparently left the scene, according to reports.

4 arrests noted

Four arrests were reported by police Friday night.

At 8:52 p.m., personnel with Kmart reported having a juvenile male in custody for shoplifting. He was released later to his parents.

Other arrests included a white male charged with DWI at 8:19 p.m.; and two white males arrested shortly after midnight, one charged with DWI and the other for public intoxication.

Plans postponed for nuke reactors

MOSCOW (AP) — Construction has been stopped until at least the 1990s on two new reactors at the Chernobyl power station, site of the world's worst industrial nuclear accident, the plant manager said Friday.

Mikhail Umanets and other plant officials spoke to a few Western reporters, two days before the first anniversary of the disaster, in a telephone interview arranged by the official press agency Novosti.

An explosion and fire in the Ukrainian plant's No. 4 reactor in the early hours of April 26, 1986, sent a huge, invisible cloud of radiation over much of Europe that eventually worked its way around the world.

The casualty toll, all in the Soviet Union, is at least 31 people dead and 200 stricken with radiation sickness.

Umanets said a decision on whether to proceed with construction of the fifth and sixth reactors has been delayed until the next Soviet five-year plan, which begins in 1991. He did not indicate what stage construction had reached.

The proposed reactors are of the same type as the 1,000-megawatt unit destroyed a year ago.

"They are in the program," Umanets said when asked whether the accident and poisoning of the area caused reconsideration of the expansion plans, which were made in the late 1970s.

"On the other hand," he added, "the decision has been passed to continue the decontamination process in this five-year plan and decide on future construction in the next five-year period."

He disputed criticism in Friday's issue of the Moscow News, a small-circulation weekly aimed primarily at foreigners, which said not enough information about the Chernobyl situation was being released.

It also said Ukrainian officials decided building two more reactors "in the present-day conditions" would be unprofitable.

Andranik Petrosyants, chief of the government's atomic energy commission, and other Soviet officials had contended previously there was no reason to halt or scrap construction of the two new units.

They have said repeatedly that the accident was caused entirely by human error and that the cleanup process ensured an eventual return to normal at the power station 80 miles north of Kiev, capital of the Ukraine.

Chernobyl's three surviving reactors were shut down after the accident for decontamination and inspection of their safety systems.

After some additional safety measures were taken, reactors No. 1 and 2 were returned to service last fall and are now operating at full capacity. The No. 3 reactor, housed in the same complex as the one destroyed, is expected to go back on line later this year.

A spokesman for the newly created Ministry of Atomic Energy confirmed Friday that similar reactors are being built in Smolensk, Kursk and the Lithuanian city of Ignalina.

No new information on the accident or its consequences was revealed during Friday's interview, nor would Umanets and his colleagues talk about the forthcoming trial of those deemed responsible.

Chernobyl's director of foreign relations, Alexander Kovalenko, said only that "the trial will be in the nearest future" and "all those responsible will stand trial."

The officials confirmed that cleanup workers had removed tens of thousands of cubic yards of contaminated soil from the danger zone extending 18 miles around the power station.

When asked how the soil was disposed of, they would say only that it was taken to "specially organized dumping places."

Safeway...

Employees weather last day of store

DALLAS (AP) — Almost 8,500 Safeway employees tried to spend their last day of work normally Friday, the closing day for 131 of the company's North Texas supermarkets, despite the shoppers who emptied the shelves around them.

Most of the stores have been purchased by other grocery store chains, but few of the workers were guaranteed jobs with the new owners.

"We're kind of misty-eyed about it. There are a lot of memories and there's been a lot of hard work," said Tolbert Runyon, a clerk for Safeway for 11 years.

Runyon and other employees at a Safeway in the Lakewood section of Dallas spoke of their co-workers and customers as members of a family.

"I hate to leave the people. They've gotten used to us and we've gotten used to them," said Amelia Young, manager of the deli section, which had been emptied of all but a few items.

The store's meat counters and produce shelves featured only empty trays and old price stickers, and many other shelves were barren.

Customer Martha Heimberg said she expected to miss the familiarity of the store and its workers.

"It feels like my mother said it felt when they closed down the A&P's," she said. "I know the people here. I don't know how they're going to replace them."

At a Safeway in Paris, in northeast Texas, workers planned a party to gather with family and friends one last time.

"After that, Monday is mainly going to the unemployment office and looking for jobs," clerk Karen Jackson said.

Only a few management employees are expected to be transferred to other Safeway divisions, said Dallas regional Safeway spokesman Brian Dowling.

"All of us under the circumstances are feeling badly ... you can imagine how they're feeling. It's tough," he said.

Safeway announced the restructuring April 3, saying the stores were either being sold or closed for the company to become cost-competitive.

Company officials said they did not know how many of the former Safeway workers would get jobs with the various buyers of the stores.

Dowling said the company was discussing the situation with officials of the United Food and Commercial Workers International Union, which represents about 7,400 Safeway employees in North Texas.

Dowling said Safeway has firm offers to sell all but about 30 stores. There are 141 stores in the Dallas division, but 10 will become part of the Houston division, company officials said.

Kroger Co., Cullum Cos. Inc., Minyard Food Stores Inc., Furr's Inc., Affiliated, Brookshire Grocery Co. and H.E. Butt are among the chains that have agreed to buy Safeway stores, Dowling said.

Minyard Food Stores Inc., which previously had said it was buying 24 Safeway stores, said Thursday that eight are in Dallas, another seven are in Fort Worth and the others are in Garland, Mesquite, Lancaster, Waxahachie, Grand Prairie, Arlington, Forest Hills, Burleson and Lewisville.

Felicia del Campo, a spokeswoman at Safeway's corporate headquarters in Oakland, Calif., said stores in South Texas were not affected by the move.

The human body can tolerate a therapeutic peat bath as hot as 118 F, a temperature that would be close to scalding in water, because heat in peat is transferred molecule by molecule and not by convection as it is in water.

Congressman is indicted for fraud

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — U.S. Rep. Harold E. Ford was indicted Friday on federal charges of bank, mail and tax fraud, along with four other men, including a banker awaiting sentencing on other charges.

The 19-count indictment alleges that C.H. Butcher Jr. used loans from his banks to buy political influence from Ford, a Memphis Democrat known for turning out the city's black vote.

The indictment said loans from Butcher's financial institutions were diverted from legitimate business enterprises to Ford's personal uses.

Ford, 41, is the 15th member of Congress to be named in an indictment in the last decade.

First elected to the House in 1974 as the state's first black in Congress, Ford won re-election in 1982 with 72 percent of the vote and won 71 percent of the vote in 1984.

The alleged conspiracy was undertaken to permit Ford "to live an extravagant and lavish lifestyle, well above his personal means," the indictment said.

The conspiracy also was aimed at permitting Butcher and his brother Jake to "use the political influence of Harold E. Ford, his family and organization, for their personal, political and business purposes," the indictment said.

Jake Butcher was named as an unindicted co-conspirator. The two-time candidate for governor is serving 20 years in prison for bank and tax fraud.

There was no immediate comment from Ford. A woman who identified herself as Ford's office manager in Memphis said he was in Washington. John Murdock, a legislative aide there, said he didn't know where Ford was or how to reach him.

Ford is chairman of the House Ways and Means subcommittee on public assistance and author of the welfare reform bill pending in the House. Under the rules of the Democratic caucus, he is required to give up his subcommittee chairmanship until the charges are resolved.

Also indicted were David Crabtree, a former Butcher accountant and business associate, and Douglas R. Beaty, a lawyer retained by Butcher and Crabtree to be president of Tenn-Ford Inc..

Tenn-Ford is a company created by Beaty "to receive funds from Southern Industrial Banking Corp. and to conceal the distribution of those funds for the benefit of Harold E. Ford," the indictment said. Southern Industrial is a loan and thrift company of Butcher's that ent bankrupt in 1983.

Also indicted was Karl A. Schledwitz, a Memphis attorney and Butcher associate who was charged with helping Ford obtain the loans.

The indictment alleges that the five men took part in a conspiracy to defraud United American banks in Knoxville and Memphis, City & County banks of Anderson and Knox counties and Southern Industrial for Ford's benefit.

The United American banks were once controlled by Jake Butcher.

The City & County banks and Southern Industrial were controlled by C.H. Butcher Jr., who is awaiting sentencing on bankruptcy fraud, tax fraud and money laundering.

C.H. Butcher Jr., in a plea bargain during his federal court trial in Chattanooga earlier this month, agreed to plead guilty to mail fraud and tax fraud charges included in Friday's indictment.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Dan Clancy of Memphis said C.H. Butcher Jr. will not be tried on other charges in the new indictment in accordance with the Chattanooga plea agreement. Butcher was named in eight counts that carry a possible maximum prison term of 40 years and a fine of $19,000.

Ford, named in 19 counts, could face a maximum prison term of 95 years and a fine of $40,000 if convicted on all charges.

Labor leader turns 87

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Fidel Velazquez, the labor leader considered one of Mexico's most powerful men, celebrated his 87th birthday on Friday.

In 42 years as secretary general of the Mexican Labor Federation, Velazquez molded organized labor into a backbone of Mexican stability that has endured even as economic crisis chipped away at workers' buying power the past five years.

Elected to another six-year term last year, he shows few signs of slowing down. If others are giving thought to what might happen when he's gone, Velazquez says he's not.

The federation, known by its Spanish initials CTM, claims more than 5 million members, although academic and opposition political sources place the figure as low as 2 million.

It is considered the most solid of the three main sectors of the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party and its strong grassroots organization regularly brings out the votes that have helped maintain the party's domination since 1929.

Velazquez is widely given credit for avoiding serious labor unrest during the current economic crisis.

As to how he's done it, he says, "That is our great secret."

He refused to share it, but added in a recent interview: "I believe that in other countries the labor movement is completely divorced from the governments."

"Here, both the government and the workers have the same origin, from the revolution."

Speaking Thursday to reporters who regularly cover his office, Velazquez noted that he has a sister who at 94 "is stronger than I am" and a brother who died recently at age 96.

According to the comments carried by the government newspaper El Nacional, Velazquez said in good humor that "at my age you're no longer afraid of anything."

Velazquez grew up during the 1910-21 revolution and his loyalty to the party and government that grew out of it are unshaken.

Born in a town not far from Mexico City, he began organizing labor while working as a milkman.

Dear Abby

Wife Reads Chapter and Verse To Her Story-Telling Husband

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1987 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my husband's problem. He's a compulsive liar. He lies to make himself look good — or to entertain others. He tells stories that are half-true or not true at all. I have confronted him many times about this, and each time he apologizes and promises to stop, but I doubt that he can stop by himself. Old habits are hard to break, and he admits that he was telling lies for many years before we met.

This has put a strain on our relationship, and I am losing respect for him. Would a psychiatrist help?

LIAR'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Yes, but only if your husband wants to quit lying. With professional help, he could get to the root of the problem by finding out why he feels compelled to lie.

Most liars lie so convincingly that they believe their own lies — especially lies they've told repeatedly. Being a known liar is bad enough, but after a while an accomplished liar may have difficulty distinguishing fact from fantasy.

Lying is a learned behavior. And what is learned can be "unlearned" by behavior modification. I wish him luck. The greatest price a liar must pay is being doubted when he's telling the truth.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: We were appalled to learn that our grandson, who just turned 21, and the girl he has been living with for the last year and a half have a new baby, and have no plans to marry! His parents are distressed about the situation, but having told their son how they feel about it, they say there is nothing more they can do.

Nothing anyone says seems to influence the boy, and we are at a loss as to how to deal with this problem. We find it very difficult to accept an illegitimate great-grandchild.

This seems to be an increasingly common situation, so perhaps you should address it in your column. A harsh reprimand from you might save some other child from being born a bastard. Also, what do we tell our friends?

CONCERNED IN CONNECTICUT

DEAR CONCERNED: I realize that most parents and grandparents, myself included, prefer to have the children in their family born within the bonds of holy matrimony. But marriage — or the decision to postpone or avoid it entirely — is up to the couple immediately involved.

The child is your great-grandchild, in or out of wedlock, so stop the name-calling and quit worrying about what to "tell" your friends.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: This is not a letter seeking advice; I just want your opinion concerning a social situation:

After cocktails, dinner and wine, the host and hostess will treat their guests to the slides of their vacation, or their grandchild's birthday party, etc. I'm sure you get the idea.

Due to the heavy meal, the drinks and being just plain tired, some men have a tendency to doze off — my husband included. I find this offensive to the hosts, so I try very hard to keep my husband awake. The wife of one of the "sleepers" says it's perfectly OK if her husband sleeps — that he is just being himself. I say it's rude and disrespectful. What is your opinion?

TO SLEEP: PERCHANCE TO DREAM

DEAR TO SLEEP: Some slides are better than Seconal. I say if a husband dozes off, let him snooze — but don't let him snore.

* * *

CONFIDENTIAL TO ON THE FENCE ON LAKE SHORE DRIVE: Get off the fence and ask her to sign a prenuptial agreement. A predatory woman can marry more money in five minutes than the average man can earn in a lifetime.

* * *

Consumer prices continue slow but steady climb

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices continued their slow but steady climb last month, moving up at an annual rate of 5.1 percent, the government reported Friday.

Economists said the pace, nearly five times last year's inflation rate, probably is typical of what Americans can expect for the rest of 1987.

The Labor Department said the Consumer Price Index rose 0.4 percent in March, identical to the February increase and double the March rate of increase in Americans' personal income.

The inflation rate would translate to 5.1 percent if it continued unchanged for a year. For the first three months of the year, consumer prices have increased at an annual rate of 6.2 percent.

In a related report, the Commerce Department said personal incomes rose 0.2 percent in March, the weakest gain in four months and a sharp drop from a 1.3 percent increase in February.

Wages and salaries increased at an annual rate of $7.4 billion in March, down sharply from February's gain of $16.6 billion. Part of the weakness came from a drop of $1.3 billion in manufacturing payrolls in March after a rise of $2.5 billion in February.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the inflation figure was higher than the administration's prediction, but said it should slow as energy costs work their way through the economy.

Private economists have been predicting inflation of 4 percent to 5 percent for the year, and several said the March inflation report reinforces their forecasts.

Cynthia Latta of Data Resources Inc., in Lexington, Mass., said the increase was not as sharp a change from last year's 1.1 percent total increase as it might seem. She said similar price increases occurred last year, but were masked by falling energy prices — a trend that has ended.

Gasoline prices rose by 2.3 percent in March and have risen 13.7 percent so far this year, the government said.

Signup period said ended

Joe B. Hefner, county executive director of the Scurry County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, ASCS, said farmers enrolled in the 1987 wheat, feed grain, and cotton acreage reduction programs should now prepare to certify or report their program acres. The signup period for this year's farm program ended March 30.

Farm program participants in Scurry County have until May 1 to report the areas and intended uses of their wheat, oats, barley, rye and other fall-seeded crops to ASCS. Small grain crops that are not reported by this deadline will be ineligible for program benefits, he said.

ASCS uses acreage reports to determine compliance with farm programs. Before farmers can receive price support loans, deficiency payments and other program benefits, they must certify their entire farm after planting. The reports contain crops and acreages planted, the uses to be made of these crops, and cropland acres to be devoted to acreage conservation reserve.

"To verify that acreage reports are accurate, we randomly spot-check a minimum 15 percent of the farms," Hefner said.

Scurry County farmers who have not reported their fall-seeded crops may do so between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday through May 1, 1987.

Scurry County Folks...

By Vicki Brown

A strong sense of community involvement and commitment to the occupation that "has been so good" to him led Billy Huddleston of Snyder to become a local voice of agriculture across the state and in the nation's capital.

He recently completed his second term as a state director for Farm Bureau — a position he has held since 1982.

Born and raised in Scurry County, Huddleston explained that both his parents were also born here. "The Huddleston family goes back almost to the beginning of the county," he said. Their commitment to farming and ranching also spans several generations.

As a member of Farm Bureau for many years, he was elected to the local board about 1979. Board members are selected by a majority vote of the some 1,420 family groups who are members here.

Statewide, Farm Bureau lists some 320,000 families with 3.5 million nationally.

As a state director, Huddleston represented bureau members from Snyder east to San Angelo, south to Del Rio and west to El Paso. Of the 38 counties in his district, only 18 had active, operating groups. "Some of the large, remote counties had no organizations," he added.

His primary function on the state level was the promotion of legislation in the state and federal governments favorable to agriculture, rather than beginning new county organizations. "One of our primary objectives is to influence legislation," he explained. "We are also interested in education and in many other areas which affect what we consider the American way of life."

Although he considers himself "just an old West Texas rancher," Huddleston ran for a state spot with the conviction that he could "make a difference."

"I wanted to serve my community and the industry that has been so kind to me. I wanted to have some influence on legislation that affects the industry."

He added that agriculture's current depressed economy is due to several factors. "In the late 1970s, we faced high inflation with prices remaining at a low level — almost as low as 30 years ago. The squeeze became almost unbearable.

"We depend on the export market to claim three out of five acres. World prices remained low, consequently our prices remained low. Then we were hit locally with low production due to weather conditions," he explained.

Huddleston is quick to point out his belief that today's farm program is a "good one." He sees raising livestock in addition to crops as a means to overcome the industry's current economic woes.

"The idea of turning to another crop (instead of or in addition to cotton) has been with us a long time," he noted. "I don't see another crop as a solution to the problem. I think we need more diversification in livestock. For example, instead of farmers just raising cotton, they will take part of their acreage and raise some livestock as well."

Beginning other agriculturally related industries here may prove difficult, he said. "Whatever is produced must have a market. Something like poultry, for instance, is usually located in an area where packaging and marketing facilities are already available. Any new agriculture industry will depend on more than just production."

Three particular pieces of legislation passed since 1982 are particularly gratifying to Huddleston. He helped successfully lobby for the agriculture use value tax. Prior to congressional action, all land valuation was based on fair market value. Now a farm is valued for tax purposes based upon what the land will produce rather than on its market value.

Huddleston also assisted in the fight to have farm equipment and other agricultural business items exempted from sales tax.

And he was among Texas bureau members to provide input in Washington on the current federal farm program.

His position required about 100 travel days each year, including five trips each year to Washington where he served on the brucellosis committee of the Livestock Conservation Institute — a program of the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA).

"It's what really impressed me and made me aware of the extent of the research being conducted in the livestock industry," he said.

"The meetings were very, very technical and pointed out new diseases and the control of old ones. They were impressive to an old West Texas rancher that didn't know what went on behind the scenes. Seems like just about every year there is a new threat to the poultry and livestock industries."

During his tenure, Huddleston also served on the boards of several corporations under the bureau's umbrella. "Farm Bureau is primarily recognized for its insurance company. Most people don't realize that we are involved in all areas affecting agriculture," he explained. "I did serve on committees and boards in insurance, but I primarily was involved in the livestock segment."

Huddleston is particularly proud of the organization's commitment to developing strong leadership among youth. He cited the Young Farmer and Rancher Program as a means to find and develop leadership.

The bureau also provides citizenship seminars held annually on the campus of Angelo State University in San Angelo. "We promote the basic concepts behind our form of government and way of life and contrast it with other types of governments," he explained.

Each local Farm Bureau organization chooses three high school students to attend the sessions. High schoolers also have the opportunity to participate in the free enterprise speech contest at district and state levels each year.

Although state directors are entitled to run for three consecutive terms, Huddleston declined renomination this year to devote more time to his wife and to his business. He runs some 600 head of Hereford cows on his 16,000 acre operation.

He plans to enjoy a more relaxed lifestyle and travel for his own pleasure.

Huddleston added that he plans to slowly return to Farm Bureau activities, but "not quite to the extent as before. I hope to get involved in some other organizations locally as well.

"Agriculture and the community have been great to me. I think there comes a time when you need to pay some dues to your occupation and community. I think you should use your talents, however limited, to serve in whatever capacity. Just being in a community is not enough. You need to contribute."

Koonsman, Proctor

Garden ceremony unites couple

Shana Denise Koonsman and Horace Luke Proctor were united in marriage at 6 p.m. March 21 in the Opal Koonsman residence. The double-ring ceremony was officiated by Rev. Miller Robinson.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. John Billy Koonsman and Mr. and Mrs. William Winifred Proctor all of Snyder.

The ceremony and reception were held on the patio of the bride's grandmother. Large white-washed baskets of gladioli, snapdragons, lepto, liatris, alstroemeria lillies and carnations lined the area around the ceremony site.

Two large white swan containers filled with pink geraniums highlighted the area and were accented with giant hanging baskets of running geraniums which hung over-head in a large non-bearing mulberry tree.

Large ceramic pots of pink geraniums as well as small baskets of white carnations, baby's breath and greenery were scattered throughout the patio to add the finishing touches.

Lynn Bethel provided organ music during the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a formal gown in white silk tissue taffeta created by designer Alfred Angelo. The bodice was accented by a draped sweetheart corded neckline.

The front was highlighted with a diagonal row of hand rolled silk taffeta roses which adorned a runner of satin whipped stitched imported re-embroidered flowerette organza. The back of the bodice fastened with rows of self-covered buttons from the neckline into the skirt.

The poufed sleeves were elbow length in ballgown style. A fully gathered skirt flowed into a cathedral train, lined and stitched to form a semi-poufed circle.

A ring of baby's breath and white alstroemeria lillies tied in picot ribbon adorned the bride's hair.

The bridal bouquet was of hot pink tulips, lepto, white fushia, baby's breath, white statice, pink alstroemeria lillies and wax flowers tied with white ribbon.

Following tradition, the bride wore a pearl necklace belonging to her mother for something old. The gown was something new, her garter was blue, and pearl earrings were borrowed from her grandmother, Mrs. Ellis Sumerlin.

Maid of honor was Cindy Werner of Bandera, sister of the bride. She was attired in a pink silk taffeta dress with a draped sweetheart neckline with off the shoulder ballgown sleeves. The ballooned tea-length bottom fell from a gathered skirt.

The dress was accented with pale pink hose and pink pumps. A pink pearl necklace and earrings were a gift from the bride. She carried a clutch bouquet and wore a ring of baby's breath and pink alstroemeria lillies in her hair.

Rachael Feist of Comanche served as flower girl. She wore a gray and pink layered dress with a full-skirt. The laced neckline was decorated with inlaid pink pearls. The waist was accented by a pink bow. She carried a white basket with pink petals.

Christy Williams, Amanda Williams and Robin Proctor, nieces of the groom, passed out rice bags.

Best man was Randy Stewart of Dunn. He and the groom wore silver long-tailed tuxedos with white pleated shirts, pink bow ties and cummerbunds. Their boutonnieres were pink carnations and alstroemeria lillies surrounded with baby's breath.

The registry table was covered in white eyelet with pink bows surrounding the bottom of the cloth. The white bride's book was decorated with silver flowers and a dove. Becky Harrell of Snyder registered the guests.

The bride's table held a three-tiered white cake decorated with fresh flowers. The centerpiece was a white-washed basket holding snapdragons, stack and alstroemeria lillies. Servers were Kelly Barrett of Stephenville and Joy Feist of Comanche.

The groom's cake was a duplicate of a Coors Light can and had chocolate filling. His centerpiece was a wooden deer holding greenery. Servers were Kim Stewart of Dunn and Ann Blackmon of Dallas. Both cakes were designed and created by Tory Lyons.

A buffet of fresh fruit, meats, vegetables and shrimp served with a champagne fountain completed the reception.

After a honeymoon trip to Cozumel, Mexico, the couple is residing in Snyder.

The bride and groom are Snyder High School graduates and both attended Western Texas College. She is employed as a teller with American State Bank. He is superintendent for RJD Management of Snyder.

Hill churches still using snakes

JOLO, W.Va. (AP) — A rattlesnake leans out from Ray McCallister's disfigured palm. The short, aging man closes his eyes intensely and dances on one foot.

"Lord have mercy!" someone calls, barely heard over the pounding music.

"In Your Name, JE-sus! YEAH Lord!" McCallister answers.

The service is at a feverish pitch, a cacophony of shouting, wailing, weeping and electric guitars. A dozen bodies shake, dance and jerk as their owners go about the serious business of saving souls.

"You don't know like I know..." the congregation sings.

"...What He done for me!" the organ player bellows in answer.

A woman in a long flannel dress and bare feet wails like a siren as she paces the floor. Another man breaks out of the clutch of dancers in front and, jerking in spasms as The Spirit enters his body, reaches down to pick up a cottonmouth.

"Praaaaaise JE-sus!" they shout to the beat of the rockabilly music.

Through it all, bored children lie on the floor under the pews, feigning sleep.

"In the '40s and '50s, they were saying these churches would not survive," says Marshall University professor Kenneth Ambrose, who has been watching West Virginia's snake-handling churches for two decades. "They said it would go away as technology came."

Yet these followers of a unique faith have changed little since first dubbed "Yesterday's People" by sociologists.

"I don't think it will die," Ambrose says. "It continues in the mountains. People who have moved away come back on the weekends to participate. That's why they'll have their weekday services late in the evening, so people who have to drive three or four hours to get there have time."

Cox, Layne exchange vows in double-ring ceremony

Zeena Renee Cox and John Kyle Layne exchanged vows March 7 at 7 p.m. in the First Baptist Church Chapel. Rev. Miller Robinson, pastor of Colonial Hill Baptist Church, performed the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Cox and Mr. and Mrs. Buck Layne all of Snyder.

As the bride entered the chapel, she passed a heart-shaped candelabrum decorated with a red and white heart laced with red mini-carnations and anthuriums. At the altar, the couple knelt before a matching candelabrum. Rainbow and seven-branch candelabra flanked the center. These were also decorated with red and white hearts and mini-carnations and anthuriums.

A white-frosted memory candle stood in a bed of red and white flowers with two smaller candles on each side. A table with a floral arrangement of red mini-carnations and anthuriums and candles held the marriage license.

The pews were marked with red and black bows, white mini-carnations and baby's breath.

Barbara Chapman of Snyder, cousin of the bride, and William Foree of Snyder were candlelighters. Chapman wore a red tea-length dress with ruffles on the shoulder accented with red shoes and pearls in her hair. Foree was attired in a dark gray suit, white shirt, red tie and red rose boutonniere.

Musical selections chosen for the ceremony were "Up Where We Belong," "Daddy Hands," "The Lord's Prayer," and "Wedding Prayer." Soloists were Stacey Hillis and Kinney Robinson accompanied by Lynn Bethel on the organ.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white wedding gown of chiffon and taffeta. The high Victorian neckline was appliqued in Venise lace and outlined with seed pearls over sheer English net. Double ruffles of chiffon formed the sleeves off the dropped sweetheart neckline of the bodice.

Venise lace appliques and seed pearls emphasized the fitted bodice and dropped waistline. The full skirt swept into a cathedral train and was adorned with a flounce of chiffon and a ruffle of Chantilly lace. The entire skirt and train were edged with Venise lace.

Matching gauntlets of sheer English net accented with Venise lace adorned the bride's arms. A two-tiered fingertip veil of bridal illusion attached to a caplet with Venise lace and an illusion ruffle overlay accented with seed pearls and rhinestones.

The bride carried a cascading bouquet of white silk roses, lilacs and stephanotis. The bouquet was accented with a touch of red silk baby's breath and English ivy. White lace streamers completed the arrangement.

In keeping with tradition, an antique handkerchief given to the bride by her grandmother, Novella Delcambre, was something old. The bridal gown was new, a garter was blue, and diamond earrings were borrowed from Jamie Callison. The groom's mother provided a penny for the bride's shoe. A white and cream garter from the bride's Aunt Susan Armontroutt was worn.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN KYLE LAYNE

Jamie Callison served as matron of honor. She wore a red tea-length taffeta dress with ruffles at the shoulder. Red pearls and red roses were worn in her hair. Red accessories completed her attire. She carried a bouquet of red silk roses accented with white baby's breath. Streamers of red, white and black satin ribbon completed the nosegays.

Judy Stokum of Midland, the groom's sister, served as bridesmaid. Her attire matched the matron of honor.

Timmie Loyd of Slaton, cousin of the bride, was flower girl. She wore a white taffeta and chiffon long dress with a red bow. Red roses and red pearls were worn in her hair. Red bows accented white shoes. Her lace basket was decorated with red and black bows and was filled with rose petals.

Ring bearer was Clinton Armontroutt of Jacksboro, cousin of the bride. He wore a tuxedo to match the attendants. His boutonniere was a smaller version of the groom's with two white silk roses, red baby's breath and English ivy.

The square silk ring pillow had a lace ruffle around it and was used in the Armontroutt wedding. At that event it was carried by the bride's brother, Curtis Floyd Cox.

The groom was attired in a white Ashley tuxedo with white accessories.

Barry Byrd of Snyder was best man. Curtis Floyd Cox of Snyder, the bride's brother, was groomsman. They wore black classic tuxedos with bow ties and cummerbunds in red. Each boutonniere was a red rose accented in white baby's breath and English ivy.

Ushers were Mike Stokum of Midland, the groom's brother-in-law, Howard Shifflett of Snyder, the bride's uncle and Allan Callison of Snyder. They were attired in grey suits with red accents.

The round registry table was covered in red with a black lace overlay. Rose-shaped rice bags in white, red and black arranged in a basket served as centerpiece. A white feather pen was used to sign the bride's book of cream with a red rose on the front. Christy Marks of Snyder registered guests.

A reception was held in the Garden Room of First Baptist Church following the ceremony. Tables had arrangements of votive candles and red and white mini-carnations and anthuriums.

The bride's table was covered with a red cloth accented by white bows and streamers. The table held a silver candelabrum holding four white taper candles. A floral arrangement of mini-carnations, anthuriums and baby's breath flowed from the top of the candelabrum.

The three-tiered heart-shaped cake was flanked by two heart-shaped cakes with stairs leading to the top layer of the main cake. Figures of bridesmaids and groomsmen decorated the stairways. The top tier of the cake held a miniature bride and groom in western style with a rope arch on a bed of white and red roses. The entire cake was white with decorations of red roses and red hearts.

Servers were Donna Loyd of Slaton, Susan Armontroutt of Jacksboro and Linda Shifflett of Snyder. All are aunts of the bride.

The groom's table was covered in a red cloth accented by black bows at the corners. The chocolate cake in the shape of a horseshoe held a miniature bride and groom dressed in western style. Gold forks and a brass tray accented a brass oil lamp, a pair of brass horses and a brass coffee server.

Servers were Gayla Mueller and Donna Layne.

After a wedding trip to Ruidoso, N.M., the couple resides on the Bill Eiland Ranch in Dermott where the groom is employed.

The bride will graduate from Snyder High School in '87 and is employed by Everybody's Thriftway.

The groom was a 1986 graduate of Snyder High School.

On April 1, Texas was approved for a Class B brucellosis classification by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Since 1980, Texas had been classified as both a Class C and Class B state. With the Class B status, the B-C line will be eliminated. The new B designation also means less restriction on interstate movement of cattle for Texas producers.

The change to Class B status has resulted from a dramatically reduced herd infection rate, along with an increasing number of certified free herds across the state and an aggressive continuation of the calfhood vaccination program.

Increased efforts will be needed in the future to reach the state's goal of meeting the Class A status as mandated by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The target date for this accomplishment is Oct. 1, 1990. In the meantime, other states are putting more pressure on Texas producers to increase efforts to control and eradicate brucellosis.

Presently, Texas is one of six states having the Class B status. Nineteen others have Class A status, and 23 have a designated Free status. Additionally, one has a joint B-C status and one carries a C status.

WEDDING PLANNED — Melvin and Francine High of Dallas announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Alicia Nan, to Troy D. Meeks, son of Douglas and Norma Meeks of Arlington. Alicia is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Taylor of Snyder. The couple will exchange vows in a May ceremony in Spring Valley Baptist Church of Dallas. (Private Photo)

On Oct. 23, 1983, 241 U.S. Marines and sailors stationed in Lebanon died when a suicide terrorist detonated a truckbomb he had crashed into the U.S. compound at Beirut International Airport. An almost simultaneous attack on French forces in Beirut also claimed the lives of 58 paratroopers.

Parents are being taught child care

DENVER (AP) — The young mother awakens with a start. The sounds coming from her baby's room are unmistakable — he's having an asthma attack.

As she quickly gets out of bed, she composes her emotions and reflects on what to do. Then she goes as calmly as she can into his room.

This parent is a "graduate" of the pediatric asthma program at the National Jewish Center for Immunology and Respiratory Medicine here. She spent six weeks taking classes at the center, living in dormitory-style quarters with other mothers while her child received treatment.

She went home equipped with a new understanding of how to care for her son, including insight into the ways her own emotional responses can affect his illness.

One of the things that makes this facility unusual is its focus on teaching patients and their families how to manage their chronic respiratory diseases. Another is its attention to the psychological aspects of this process.

"If a baby is wheezing and the mother is afraid, she can convey her fears non-verbally, teach the child to be afraid of the asthma, and directly exacerbate it," says Dr. Mary Klinnert, a child clinical psychologist at the center. "Helping parents learn to handle such feelings is an important part of our program."

Klinnert is a researcher whose work has broken new ground in infant psychology. Her studies have revealed that emotional cues from other people can have a significant impact on the behavior of even very young children.

"In earlier experiments, we showed that infants are highly responsive to their mothers' facial expressions," she says. "More recently, we found evidence that they are sensitive to such communications not only from their parents but from other adults as well."

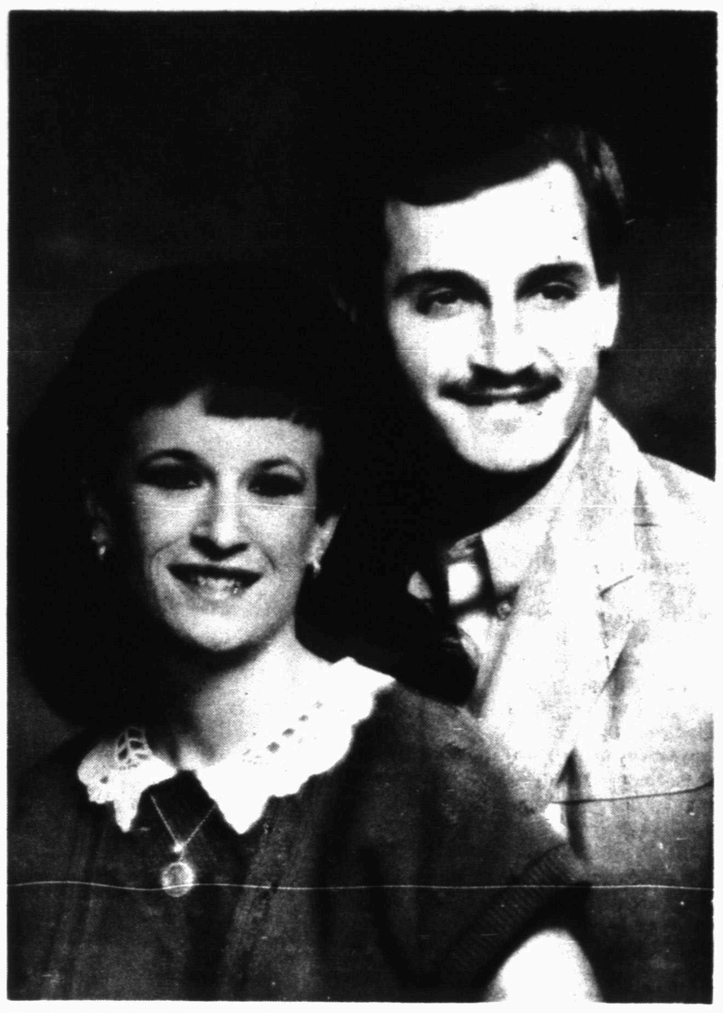
Klinnert was principal author of a study published in "Developmental Psychology" in which 46 1-year-olds were tested to see if they would be guided by emotional signals from a stranger in an unfamiliar situation.

Each of the 25 girls and boys was encouraged by a friendly woman to explore the toys in a playroom. Later, while the child was absorbed in play, a beeping remote-controlled robot toy rolled out from under a table, stopping just beyond reach. The mother, seated about 10 feet away, had been asked to maintain a neutral expression.

Thirty-eight of the children, or 83 percent, looked at the face of the experimenter for clues on how to react.

This woman showed a happy expression to half of the infants, a fearful one to the rest, and their responses corresponded with hers.

The children in the "smile group" more frequently smiled and touched the robot, and were more likely to kiss or pat it. Children in the "fear group" were less positive in their actions and facial expressions. Those who did approach the toy took much longer to do so. The contact lasted a shorter time, and they were more likely to swat the robot or knock it over.



ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED — Mr. and Mrs. Claude P. Whitaker announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Susan Clare of Snyder, to William Robert Henderson Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Henderson of Lamesa. A June 20 wedding is planned in Allen. (Private Photo)

The deals this week are about holdups, but you must remember that many times it's wrong to hold up. Maybe the defenders will hurt you by switching suits, or maybe you can't hold up long enough for the play to do any good, or perhaps you have no way to prevent the dangerous opponent from gaining the lead no matter what you do. There's a good reason for not holding up in today's deal. Cover the East and West hands and see if you can figure out that reason.

When declarer played low from dummy at the first trick, East won and returned a spade to dummy's ace. Declarer played a diamond back to his queen, but West grabbed the ace and took three more spade tricks to set the contract.

Declarer should have taken the spade ace right away because he knows that West did not have an original holding of K-Q-J-x-x. (Anyone with that holding would certainly have led the spade king.) Therefore, East has at least one honor in spades. If the suit divides 4-3, declarer has nothing to fear in three no-trump. The danger is that the opening leader has five spades and East only two. By taking the spade ace immediately, declarer assures that the opponents will not be able to take more than two spade tricks if the spades were originally 5-2, since declarer blocks the suit by taking the first trick.

Dry pasta can be measured

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Without a kitchen scale, it's helpful to know some cup measurements for dry and cooked pasta.

Better Homes and Gardens Pasta Cook Book says four ounces of uncooked elbow macaroni or conchiglie measures about one cup. When cooked, it will yield about 2½ cups of pasta.

Four ounces of uncooked medium noodles measures about three cups and when cooked, you'll have about three cups of pasta. Four ounces of uncooked 10-inch-long spaghetti held together in a bunch has about a one-inch diameter. When cooked, it will equal about two cups of pasta.

Being overweight most of my life I used to dream of how I would look were I thin. Well, my dream came true when I decided on Pat Walker's

I had tried different fad diets and was able to lose weight but never inches. In using the Pat Walker's exercise unit I lost 11 inches the first week. Altogether now I have lost over 79 inches and went from a size 18 dress to a size five

I ate the foods I liked on the program and still lost weight. I learned how to combine my foods, never got bored with menus and I even ate good desserts!

The greatest thing is how I now feel about myself. I bought myself a swim suit and now lounge around the pool with confidence. Shopping is no longer an embarrassment since there is a variety of clothes from which to select my new size.

Pat Walker's program taught me good eating habits which now make it possible to keep the weight off. Pat Walker's really works! Cindy Hernandez Houston

CONSUMER SPENDING VITAL TO LOCAL COMMUNITIES

In addition to just trying to attract new industries to boost the local economy, community leaders may need to give more emphasis to strengthening existing retail trade and service sectors.

Strong retail trade and service sectors are vital to the economic development of small Texas communities.

Communities that do not have adequate trade and service sectors face two major problems. First, local employment opportunities will be lacking, so some people may be forced to move. Others, especially farmers, who need employment for some family member, may be in additional jeopardy of suffering financial loss.

A second problem in communities lacking adequate trade and service sectors is that the community income multiplier will be unusually small because a large proportion of consumer spending goes to other communities.

Many small Texas towns have income multipliers of 1.5 or less because consumers find it necessary or desirable to travel to some other community to spend a large portion of their income. This means that every dollar received from outside is worth only $1.50 or less to the community after the multiplier effect.

An important disadvantage is that the impact of other economic development efforts will be reduced. Thus, even people who have a strong interest in other types of economic development should encourage the creation and expansion of retail and service businesses to increase the impact of their efforts.

Understanding consumer decision-making is essential to increase local spending. Three questions need to be answered: What do consumers purchase out of town? Why do consumers prefer or find it necessary to buy these goods and services out of town? What will it take to attract their spending locally?

While it is not possible to satisfy every consumer need and capture all consumer spending locally, it is frequently possible to obtain answers to these questions and identify new economic opportunities within the community.

Small town community leaders and business people need to take a lesson from shopping malls in large cities. Even though each individual business is independent and competitive with others, there are times when cooperation is beneficial. Tenants in large city malls recognize that the first thing they have to do is to get consumers inside the mall. Once that is accomplished, businesses can compete for their spending. Small town merchants can benefit by cooperating to create a shopping environment that induces local spending.

In communities where large amounts of consumer spending are being lost, leaders and merchants will find it advantageous to work together to develop strategies for attracting consumer spending. If successful, new businesses and job opportunities will be created, the income multiplier will be increased, and the impact of other development successes will be enhanced.

Above the Fold

By Donny Brown

Pressure is being placed on this writer to relocate his tool drawer.

Folks who understand such things will correctly guess the arm-twisting is feminine in nature. What other gender would believe that cup towels, pot holders and place mats should be given preference over the items which go into a bonafide tool drawer?

Admittedly, the thing itself is located in the kitchen, but this is merely an intentional duplication of past history.

In the house where we grew up, the kitchen was the site for the spiritual forerunner of our current drawer.

Specifically, to the left of the kitchen sink, sitting third in a line and nearest the floor. It was selected, no doubt, because it was "different"--deeper, wider and, to our over-heated imagination, "darker," giving it a mysterious quality over the other drawers.

Into it went the duke's mixture of hand tools normally required around the house--a single claw hammer, screwdrivers, wrenches and pliers--plus a wonderful assortment of harder to find stuff.

These included both slick, black electrical tape and sticky "tar tape;" a whetstone as big as a bar of soap; a pair of catfish skinning pliers which looked like they had fallen out of a medieval torture bag; a wooden fold-out measuring ruler, yellow in color and suitable for all manner of geometric wonders; a jackknife which, when closed into the handle, was still a spread hand's width wide; a large horseshoe magnet; an assortment of rat-tail files and wood hasps, a hand planer with a screw down cutting edge; a wooden-handled drill bit; and a cobbler's hammer with both a flat striking end and a split end into which tiny nails could be fitted.

The tools were enough to get a kid's attention. What kept you coming back was the unending assortment of nails, screws, tacks, bolts and nuts which seemed to settle into the black hind corners of the drawer.

Every building project ends with a surplus of hardware. And into the tool drawer these unused scraps would go.

From finishing nails with their bulbous heads; to brittle paneling nails; to full blown 16 pennies, harder to bend than a weight-lifting bar.

If you fished around long enough, you could pull out an endless variety of both wood and metal screws. These came in varying measurements for both length and circumference--hex headed, flat headed, Phillip's and otherwise.

We genuinely believed if we looked long enough, we could find whatever our project of the moment required.

Our house contained other "scrap" receptacles, also, the most notable a button jar filled to the rim with all colors, sizes and shapes of buttons; and another container called a rag cabinet.

This last was a small wooden box, constructed in a diamond shape with a hinged lid that you swung upward.

The design allowed you to balance the box lid on your forehead as you dug with both hands into its depths--looking for kite tail makings or a swatch big enough to be turned into a crusader's cape.

Of the three, the favorite, of course, was the tool drawer. We still remember the "shriek" it make when pulled open--it must have weighed 25 pounds--and its faint smell, a combination of machine oil, saddle soap and wood shavings.

To the doubting few, only practical stuff qualifies for membership in your basic tool drawer. Tea towels need not apply.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

When you've been married a lotta years, and you've got kids to raise and bills to pay, killing two birds with one stone becomes a highly developed art. Since our 13th wedding anniversary was April 13th this year, and I had a speech to give at the Texas Nightwriters Chapter in San Angelo on writing Saturday, April 11th, we decided to dump the kids with a friend, take the tidy little fee I earned, and play happy anniversary all weekend in that nice town.

The speech went well and Kent even ran into someone there he knew, which is the way it is when you are married to a travelin' man. We had a steak dinner, took in a movie, and since the place we were staying had a little club with a live Country and Western band, we decided to walk over and do a little dancing.

No sooner had we walked in the door when we saw someone else Kent knew, a nice older gentleman who is also a friend of mine, and we all sat over in a dark booth to visit. Now, this is only the second time in my life that I have frequented an establishment of this sort, and I had forgotten that C&W bands like to perform in places like coliseums; they don't think the music sounds right unless the amps are turned up several dozen decibels, only when you move them into a small club with a postage-stamp dance floor, the walls bulge out with every beat of the music. So you have to shout at each other and read lips.

Because Kent was sitting directly across from our friend, only he could understand the conversation, so there was nothing left for me to do except...people-watch. (Writers are never, ever bored.)

The first thing I noticed was the popularity of the color red. Men and women alike wore lots of shiney, red shirts. (As soon as I had deducted this, I glanced down at the shiney red blouse I was wearing and giggled.) After a while, I got to where I could pick out those individuals who were definitely on the prowl. Like the guy at the bar in a black Western shirt with the sleeves rolled up, a gold chain around his neck, and a tattoo on his arm. No hat, shaggy hair, aggressive dark eyes. When he caught me staring, he returned my gaze with such shameless boldness that I promptly draped my arm around my 6'4" husband's shoulders and he turned away. Thank goodness.

I think Clairol's best friend was interested in the guy — a platinum blond with huge silver hoops in her ears and a low-cut blouse, but he didn't return her signals. Better luck next time, honey.

"How can you possibly meet anyone in a place like this?" I hollered in my husband's ear. "You can't hear yourself think and it's so dark."

"You talk when you're dancing," my man of the world explained, and gave me an Aggie grin, "and sometimes the dark helps. That way you can't see each other too well."

There was a lovely lady in a tuxedo blouse dealing "blackjack" at a play Las Vegas table. The deal, our friend explained, was that you played for chips. Only chips. But if you came in frequently and played seriously and accumulated enough chips, you'd win a trip to the real Vegas. A big, broad shouldered cowboy with a huge hat and a black beard made a play for the dealer. Kent caught me watching and teased me about being interested in the guy.

"Are you kidding? He's got 'Duh' written all over his face."

My husband quirked a doubtful eyebrow at me.

"It's true. Trust me. A girl knows these things."

About that time, the blackjack dealer took her break and went over to the bar with another guy. What'd I tell you.

A very pretty brunette in tight size 6 jeans and a ruffled Western shirt, fluffy boufant hair-do, and false eyelashes came in with a homely, kinda clodhopper-looking cowboy. They sat through dance after dance, while she bounced along in time to the music. Although we danced a time or two, her clutzy escort never once took her out on the dance floor. Mr. Black-Shirt-Gold-Chain joined them and visited with her date, but I knew he just wanted to look at her.

Suddenly the band broke into a rousing rendition of "Gimme That Old-Time Rock and Roll."

"They're playing my song!" I shouted, struggling to get out of my corner of the booth. "Let's dance."

"Forget it. I don't dance to that kind of music."

"You used to. In college."

"That was then. This is now."

Memory flashback. High school reunion. The only reason I got to dance rock and roll music then was because most of my old buddies had come to the reunion with heavily pregnant wives.

"Aw, c'mon. Just this once. It's our anniversary."

"...And the music makes you loooose control..." sang the band.

I struggled to push him out of the booth. He wouldn't budge. I even glanced hopefully at our companion. Nah.

I looked over toward the pretty brunette. She'd understand.

She was gone. She and her cowboy escort were tearing up the dance floor to "Gimme That Old-Time Rock n'Roll."

Go figure.

Letters to the Editor

To the editor,

I wanted to take this opportunity to let the women in our area know that there is a very wonderful thing available to them and I'm not sure that everyone who needs it is taking advantage of it.

I am speaking of the women's psychology class being offered at WTC free of charge thanks to the state of Texas. This program has something for every woman, married or single, rich or poor, educated or not, etc. This program has information on raising healthy children, not just physically, but mentally, too. It covers the use of drugs and sex and the answers to some of your questions, "why," at a level you can understand.

It goes on to make you aware of why you are the way you are by exploring the "pre-programming" we are all exposed to from infancy on. Some of us aren't even aware that the way we were raised could have been detrimental to our adult lives in areas of self-worth, confidence, intimacy with others, raising our children, etc.

This program also explores the effects of stress and depression on our lives, what we can do about it and suggestions to deal with it.

In this program, we have all taken interest inventory tests to explore some of the different possibilites of higher education. These tests are very simple and it was very interesting to get them back and see that the results were very accurate.

We've had several women in our class who took GEDs and passed; how their faces brightened when they announced it! This time last year they never thought they'd have a GED much less the three hours of college credit they're earning with this class! I for one am very proud of them as I know the rest of the group is also.

We've had several very in-

Piano auditions set

A hundred local piano students from the classes of Barbara Tune, Barbara Mott, Barbara Perkins, Judy Neill and Lynn Bethel, Piano Guild chairman, have enrolled in the national piano playing auditions sponsored by the National Guild of Piano Teachers, the teachers division of the American College of Musicians.

Auditions will be held April 28 through May 2 in the First Baptist Church parlor with Sherry Penkert Frush of Abilene as adjudicator.

The biggest piano event in the world is conducted in over 770 audition centers from coast to coast with more than 115,464 piano teachers and students participating. Every entrant passed will be certified, given a gold, silver or bronze embossed pin and a year's membership in the National Fraternity of Student Musicians and Piano Hobbyists of the World.

Awards for students participating in the auditions include certificates, pins, plaques, diplomas and scholarships. Incentives and awards help increase the skills and knowledge of students due to the effort put forth getting ready for the auditions.

Sherry Frush has taught piano since 1967 in Abilene. She is an active member of NMTA, TMTA, Abilene MTA and American College of Musicians Piano Guild since 1969.

She has been a national and Texas certified teacher of piano since 1975 by the Music Teachers National Association, just eight years after the program for evaluation and recognition of qualified teachers began.

SHERRY PENKERT FRUSH

In the Abilene MTA, Frush has served as student affiliate chairman, ensemble team director, secretary, music festival chairman, theory chairman and president for '87-'88.

Frush has also been in "Who's Who in Music" since 1977 and in "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities" '72-'73. She was inducted into the Piano Guild's Hall of Fame in June 1979 and has been certified by the American College of Musicians since 1971.

Frush earned her bachelor's degree with a double major in all-level music education and piano performance with a minor in theory. She was graduated cum laude in 1973 from McMurry College of Abilene. She won voice, piano and scholastic scholarships.

Frush's students have earned $100 scholarships from Guild, Paderewski Medals, Guild Diplomas and Sonatina Medals. In AMTA and TMTA, students have been local and district winners in solo and concerto performance contests since 1980. They have consistently been members of the Abilene ensemble teams, earned superior ratings in various local and state auditions and contests and are regular medal winners in the TMTA-SA theory tests.

Frush has done service as judge at festivals, UIL, Guild and contests in Texas.

She was married in 1972 to Joe C. Frush, vice-president of Hendrick Medical Development Corporation. They have three sons, Jimmy, Kyle and David. The family was runner-up in the 1987 Family of the Year contest in Abilene.

Frush is active in her sons' sports activites, is a PTA board member and was PTA president for the '86-'87 year at Austin Elementary School. She is a member of the Abilene Junior League and teaches Sunday School and choir at First Baptist Church.

She noted, "Teaching piano was the fulfillment of a childhood dream that began with my first lessons. It is my desire that students love and enjoy music and will continue with a life-long enrichment rather than a few years of tedious work with no long-term gratification. My greatest joy is that many of my former students are now teaching piano. So many lives are filled with music; teachers truly can touch the future."

March is National Nutrition Month. A few simple changes in your cooking style can lower fat and salt and boost fiber and vitamin content.

Fat is the villain in our diets. Complex carbohydrates — including pasta — are recognized as mealtime good guys because they are fuel foods and good sources of vitamins and minerals. The savory filling is ready in less time than meat sauce because it needs no simmering.

SPAGHETTI PIE

6 ounces spaghetti
2 tablespoons margarine or butter
⅓ cup grated Parmesan cheese
2 well-beaten eggs
1 pound lean ground beef
½ cup chopped onion
¼ cup chopped green pepper
8-ounce can tomatoes, cut up
6-ounce can tomato paste
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon dried oregano, crushed
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
1 cup cream-style cottage cheese
½ cup shredded mozzarella cheese (2 ounces)

Cook spaghetti according to package directions; drain. Meanwhile, in a large skillet cook meat, onion and green pepper until meat is brown. Drain. Stir in tomatoes, tomato paste, sugar, oregano and garlic powder; heat through. Combine spaghetti, margarine, Parmesan cheese and eggs. Press into a buttered 10-inch pie plate. Spread cottage cheese over crust. Fill crust with meat mixture. Bake, uncovered, in a 350-degree oven for 20 to 25 minutes or until hot. Sprinkle with mozzarella cheese. Bake 5 minutes more or until cheese melts. Let stand 5 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

HOLD ON, MR. PRESIDENT. By Sam Donaldson.

Here is the brashest, most irreverent, most provocative television reporter in Washington telling us just how he gets away with it — gets away, that is with being the nation's most celebrated and outspoken White House correspondent. Along the way, he takes us inside the politics and personalities of ABC as it grew from a fledgling network to match NBC and CBS, and tells about the toll an all-consuming job has taken on his own personal life. As one of America's most familiar faces on the air, Donaldson tells us how he made it to the top — a long way from his beginnings on a farm near El Paso, Texas — and recounts in vivid and often hilarious detail the experiences that have shaped his thinking about television news.

Husband adds to her problem

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I'm 5 feet 3 and weigh 180. I've tried everything from diet pills to a dozen weight-loss groups. My husband has given me an ultimatum: He says if I really loved him I could lose weight, and if I don't get it off in the next 12 months, he'll leave me. What can I do?

DEAR READER — Ultimatums are often hard to deal with; they give "either/or" options, neither of which may be appropriate.

For example, your husband probably is incorrect in assuming that if you loved him, you would trim down. You undoubtedly do love him — and can't lose weight. Therefore, the lose-weight-or-else doctrine is both scary and unreasonable.

Your best approach would be to put yourself under the care of a doctor. There may be a metabolic abnormality underlying your weight problem, or you may need evaluation by obesity specialists at a teaching hospital to which the doctor can refer you.

You also may need some counseling to help you to manage stress, self-image problems — and your husband's demands.

In addition, you may want to look into some marriage counseling. If your husband agrees to go with you, he may learn more effective ways to handle his anger and the grandiose concept that he is in control of your life. Someone should point out to him the corollary of his statement. If he loved you, he would stick with you regardless of your weight.

For most obese people, help is available. I believe that you will feel relieved at getting that help from a reputable medical source. At the same time, the dynamics of your marriage need attention, too.

To give you additional help, I'm sending you a free copy of my Health Report, WINNING THE BATTLE OF THE BULGE. Others who want more information on the subject should send your name and address with $1 to P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to ask for WINNING THE BATTLE OF THE BULGE. Discuss this Health Report with your doctor; he or she can tell you which pointers will be most effective in your case.

DEAR DR. GOTT — There apparently are two kinds of breast lumps: those that can be aspirated and those that can't. I've had two aspirations in six months. I am 51, almost through with menstruation, and would like to know more about this type of lump.

DEAR READER — In general, breast lumps are either cystic (containing fluid) or solid. If there is fluid in a breast cyst, it can be aspirated (withdrawn through a needle) and the cyst will collapse. Unfortunately, the liquid may reaccumulate, leading to repeated aspirations.

A solid breast mass is a more dangerous problem, because some solid masses are malignant. Since they contain little, if any, fluid, aspiration is not successful and biopsy has to be performed to establish a diagnosis.

Cysts are common in women, tend to be even more prevalent in women who nursed, and often fluctuate in size, depending on the time of the menstrual cycle. Mammograms, with or without sonography, are a useful way to differentiate between cysts and solid lumps. If cysts continue to fill up and be painful, despite aspiration, they can be surgically removed.

Who can heal doctors' hopes?

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

Doctors, being for the most part bright and alert, are well aware that the practice of medicine is changing. Like much of the public, we perceive that these changes are sometimes not for the good of the patients we serve.

As I have commented in previous columns, we physicians and surgeons seem increasingly hellbent to bring adversity upon ourselves. However, in all fairness, I must point out that much of what is happening may not be our fault.

We go to school, complete our training and commence to practice our trade without having learned much about how cruel, how unforgiving, how unfair the real world is. We are often prohibited from performing the good works we once thought we wanted to perform.

Were we too idealistic? Perhaps. Were we naive? Probably. Were we flawed in our perception of what a doctor should be? Unfortunately, too often.

This is not to say that we were wrong. It's just that the exigencies of modern medicine tend to warp, crack and peel our most humanistic tendencies. Doctors, especially young ones, are becoming more devastated by the realization that the goals we took for granted in medical school do not hold up in the day-to-day travail of medical practice. We were nurtured by the dream of a service profession in which we could relieve suffering, use our skills to help the needy, provide respite from illness and injury, obtain satisfaction from doing good, and enjoy recognition and prestige, because medicine has traditionally been an honorable profession.

Increasingly, these objectives are being undermined and sabotaged by endless paperwork, obsessive record keeping, unrealistic public expectations, calamitous lawsuits, declining public confidence and — now — the odious incursion of government and interference by profit-oriented health conglomerates.

I recently received a letter from a Pennsylvania doctor who was able to articulate the debacle that had struck his own practice. I was touched by the letter; the doctor has a lot to say, and I think that we need to listen carefully. Here's an excerpt:

Dear Dr. Gott:

I am an avid reader of your column, and I happen to be a bona fide 'Honda healer.' I have been a solo family practitioner for the past seven years, and I drive a 1979 Honda with 90,000 miles on it and a bad case of body cancer. Fortunately, it is the color gray, and I have so much duct tape covering the rust spots that the car is approaching an art form.

Obviously, I have not flourished financially because of my style of practice. In order to give my patients plenty of attention, I scheduled appointments one-half hour apart. I emphasized the care of young families, in that I delivered babies and provided well-child care. I prided myself in being "a doctor for people who don't like doctors." I protected my patients from procedure-hungry specialists, and I prescribed drugs and ordered tests only when they were necessary. I looked forward to growing old with families for which I was caring.

Unfortunately, my ambitions were not to be realized. My office was inspected by representatives of a major HMO provider, which was soon to be marketing its product in my community. Because they were unable to find the proper pigeonhole, my unique practice was deemed not suitable for their purposes. Shortly afterward, I received a notice that my liability-insurance premium was going to triple. The writing was on the wall. I was out of business.

I took a job as a doc-in-the-box, in a daytime walk-in medical facility. Now I no longer have patients. I have customers.

I have survived an extended period of disillusionment with my profession, during which I seriously considered leaving it entirely. In today's technical society, one may justifiably query whether there is any need for (the art of medicine) to be preserved. It seems that (people) want an empathetic physician who will listen to their problems and treat them as individuals, but no one wants to take ultimate responsibility for (his or her) problems, and heaven forbid that they be asked to pay for services rendered. Compassion doesn't cut it when you get to the bottom line. This current corporate atmosphere will make it difficult for physicians to maintain their sensitivity toward their patients.

What a sad testimonial! Is the doctor's disillusionment representative of a national medical malaise? Is this the brand of medicine that the public wants? Can we afford to desensitize caring physicians in this way? Is it time for us to do something about it?

Send your questions to Dr. Gott in care of this newspaper at P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

Dallas Museum scuttles 3 prized Mexican sculptures

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Museum of Art has scuttled three of its prized ancient Mexican sculptures after discovering that the supposedly $200,000 collection is actually made up of $18 fakes, officials say.

There may be hundreds of other such fakes, mass-produced in the 1950s and worth about $18 each, in museums and art collections in this country and Europe, officials said Thursday.

At least five other U.S. museums — including the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York and the St. Louis Art Museum — were taken in by the Veracruz sculptures, said Mimi Crosely, an Austin-based writer for Connoisseur magazine.

Ms. Crosely said Austin architect E. Logan Wagner uncovered the forgeries working on a tip. "He really ought to get the credit," she said.

Other museums are yet to be identified, she said.

The DMA pieces, first exhibited in 1976, have been removed from display.

"We were totally caught by surprise," DMA Director Harry Parker said Thursday. "These are so good in quality that I'm convinced there are other forgeries that will be found in public and private collections here and around the world.

"These pieces have been front and center, published in our catalog, very proudly displayed and have always been admired by pre-Columbian scholars," Parker said.

Wagner interviewed Brigido Lara, a 45-year-old artist and restorer at a Jalapa, Mexico, museum, who claims he made the DMA's three sculptures.

Ms. Crosely contacted the DMA on March 18.

Although the DMA does not acknowledge Lara created its pieces, an elaborate series of tests were conducted at a Connecticut laboratory earlier this month that determined the pieces were 20th-century fakes, Parker said.

"Lara still maintains he was making his own original interpretations of Veracruz art," Ms. Crosely said. "The people who purchased Lara's works from Lara know Lara made them. But what happened after that, is somebody else's business.

"I think this shows a real vulnerability of collections in the U.S.," she added. "I believe there will be hundreds more found, perhaps thousands more."

Lara was jailed in 1974 in Mexico for possessing an ancient tomb-size figure he claimed to have made, but that archaeologists testified was authentic, Ms. Crosely said.

White supremacists indicted for murder

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fifteen white supremacists were indicted Friday in Arkansas and Colorado for allegedly murdering a radio talk show host in Denver in 1984 and conspiring to overthrow the U.S. government, the Justice Department announced.

A federal grand jury in Fort Smith, Ark., accused 10 of those indicted of sedition, or conspiring to topple the government, over a 21-month period beginning in July 1983. The members were affiliated with white supremacist groups the Order, Aryan Nations or the Ku Klux Klan.

The Fort Smith indictment also charged five people with conspiring to murder the chief U.S. district judge of the western district of Arkansas, as well as a special FBI agent assigned to the bureau's Little Rock office.

One of the five was among the 10 accused elsewhere in the indictment with sedition.

The indictment said that the 10 financed their efforts by armed robberies and counterfeiting and that they planned to assassinate federal officials including a judge. The indictment also said they targeted members of ethnic groups for bombings.

They also plotted to destroy utilities, pollute water supplies and establish guerrilla warfare training camps, according to one of the indictments. In addition, the 10 procured false identification to allow members of the group to remain unidentified.

In Denver, a one-count indictment was returned against four people, including three who were charged in the Arkansas indictment, for murdering radio talk show host Alan Berg.

The four were charged in a federal civil rights indictment with interfering with Berg's right to engage in his employment because of his religion, race or national origin. Berg, who was Jewish, frequently used his show to attack and embarrass white supremacist movements and their leaders. He was slain with a submachine gun the night of June 18, 1984.

Workers 'glowing in the dark'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of workers exposed to radiation in the nation's nuclear plants declined slightly in the latest survey by a watchdog group, but 93,000 workers are still "glowing on the job," the group said.

The report by Public Citizen also predicts that the figure will increase as plants get older.

"The high level of radiation to which nuclear power plant workers are exposed each year represents one of the ongoing, but hidden, costs of nuclear power," said the report titled "Glowing on the Job: Worker Exposure to Radiation at Nuclear Power Plants."

"Aging is a critical factor," said Joshua Gordon, a nuclear policy analyst and author of the report. "Rust is radioactive; major repairs, all these things involve exposure."

Public Citizen, a non-profit research organization founded in 1971 by consumer advocate Ralph Nader, said it based the report on documents from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

The survey for 1985, the latest year for which NRC figures were available, did not give the total number of workers at plants where exposure was measured. It said a big share of those affected are temporary workers, called "jumpers" or "sponges" because they jump into jobs and absorb maximum allowed doses of radiation in a short period of time.

As the plants age, the facility becomes more radioactive, increasing the level of exposure to workers, the report said, noting that repair work, which is needed more often with older plants, provides among "the most exposure-intensive jobs."

Plants between 13 years old and 17 years old exposed their workers to more than twice as much radiation as those between the ages of 3 and 7, the report said.

The oldest plants — those built 19 to 27 years ago — exposed their workers to four times as much radiation as the newest plants, it said.

In 1985, the number of workers exposed — 93,260 at 83 plants across the country — was nearly four times the number exposed 10 years earlier — 25,489, the report said.

However, the total number of workers exposed in 1985 decreased about five percent from 1984 when there was an all-time high of 98,092 at 78 plants, the report said.

Widow wins $3.1 million suit against General Dynamics

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A federal jury has ordered General Dynamics Corp., the nation's largest defense contractor, to pay $3.1 million to the widow of a top-rated pilot whose early-model F-16 fighter jet crashed four years ago.

The negligence lawsuit brought by Janet Harduvel and her 7-year-old daughter was the first of its kind to go to trial.

"I'm very, very happy that the truth has come out," Mrs. Harduvel, 35, said Thursday after jurors issued their verdict.

General Dynamics, the jet's builder, said it would appeal. It had blamed the crash that killed Capt. Ted Harduvel on pilot error, perhaps brought on by the side effects of a medication that Harduvel had been taking until three days before his last flight.

Mrs. Harduvel's suit claimed that early-model F-16s, including Harduvel's, were flawed by faulty and potentially dangerous electrical wiring. General Dynamics, the suit claimed, knew of the danger but failed to warn the Air Force.

Mrs. Harduvel, who lives in nearby Lutz, said the verdict was a vindication of her husband, who crashed into the base of a granite mountain in South Korea while on a training flight in November 1982.

"It's not, to me, that I won," said Mrs. Harduvel. "To me, it was a question of my husband's honor, and that he was cleared."

Harduvel, 35, was a graduate of the Air Force's elite Fighter Weapons School at Nellis Air Force Base in Nevada and was a top-rated F-16 pilot and instructor at MacDill Air Force Base in Tampa.

Mrs. Harduvel said she turned down an offer from General Dynamics to settle out of court for $500,000 before filing her suit in 1984. After the verdict, she and her daughter carried flowers to her husband's grave at Myrtle Hill Cemetery.

In Washington, D.C., Air Force spokesman Capt. Jerry Thomas declined to comment on the trial. But he said the Air Force stands by the safety record of the F-16, one of the fastest single-engine jets in the world.

The F-16, which costs $14 million for each plane, is shown by accident records to be the most reliable of the Air Force's single-seat fighters, said Thomas.

Dallas's city budget may undergo cuts

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas City Manager Richard Knight has told municipal department heads, already financially strapped, to trim their budgets by $7.6 million dollars to compensate for an unexpected decline in revenues.

Officials in all departments, including police and fire, have been asked to cut their budgets 1.6 percent.

The projected shortfall is the second this year in the nearly $459 million budget. Earlier, sagging collections of sales tax revenues, fees and other income forced the city to reduce city department budgets 1.5 percent to make up for $7.6 million that did not come in as expected.

City officials said they hope to avoid layoffs in the second round of cuts, but haven't yet studied their options.

"We will not stop hiring police and firefighters," said Jan Hart, first assistant city manager, adding those departments will be asked to cut from other areas.

City officials orginally projected $109 million in sales tax revenues, but that amount now is expected to be about $1.6 million, said Sandra Matney, acting head of Park and Recreation Department.

Private disposal fees, vehicle towing fees, library fines and license fees also are below expectations, officials said.

Dear Abby

Boyfriend's Idea of Fun Is No Laughing Matter to Girl

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1987 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend loves to tickle me. He pins me to the floor and tickles my ribs until I scream at him to stop. The other night he tied me to a kitchen chair, removed my shoes and socks and tickled the soles of my bare feet until I was hysterical. I kept begging him to stop, but he kept on tickling me and laughing at me until I broke down in tears. When he finally untied me, I told him to get out of my house — that I never wanted to see him again.

This happened over a week ago, and he has called me every day since to say he's sorry and if I resume our relationship, it will never happen again.

I need an answer right away, Abby. I am having trouble forgetting how he tortured me, but I do care for him.

TICKLED TO DEATH

DEAR TICKLED: Your boyfriend is sadistic. You were battered just as surely as if he had beaten you. Don't resume your relationship until he sees a psychiatrist.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: A person I know, J. John Smith III (not his real name), is the only person in his family whose name is J. John Smith. His father's name is C. Harry Smith.

How can this be? I was under the impression that "the third" was the son of a junior, who was the son of the original — or senior.

Now, where does "the second" come in?

BIRMINGHAM

DEAR BIRMINGHAM: How can it be, you ask, that J. John Smith III has a father named C. Harry Smith? Simple. Whoever named J. John Smith III was in error. You are correct when you say that the son of a junior is named "the third."

"The second" is named for an uncle, grandfather or cousin who has the identical name and middle initial.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Please help settle a mild disagreement. Two couples, who have been friends for years, enjoy getting together on an occasional Sunday evening for cocktails and dinner out.

Couple No. 1 calls Couple No. 2 to arrange the time, place, etc. When it's time to pay the tab, Couple No. 1 wishes to pay the tab. Couple No. 2 will not allow it, and insists on separate checks, saying, "Times have changed — now people handle it their own way."

This takes away from the pleasure of initiating the time spent together. Have times changed?

OLD-FASHIONED

DEAR OLD-FASHIONED: For some couples, yes. It's possible that Couple No. 2 cannot afford to pay for dinner for four — and going "dutch" is a way to keep dining out within their budget. Do it their way, and don't make an issue of it.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Our 50th wedding anniversary is coming up soon and our two children want to give us a lovely party celebration. We are sincere when we say we want absolutely no gifts. First, we have no place for anything in our house. I am the last of eight children and have accumulated a lot of furniture, family silver, dishes, etc., and simply do not want another thing. The gifts would have to be divided between our children soon as we are in our 80s now. Is it proper to state "no gifts" on an invitation? If so, how should we word it?

ENOUGH THINGS IN VIRGINIA

DEAR ENOUGH: It is proper. Say, "No gifts, please. Your presence will be our cherished gift, and we respectfully request no other."

Outdoor test begins after being delayed by vandalism

BRENTWOOD, Calif. (AP) — A scientist sprayed a strawberry field with frost-inhibiting organisms Friday in the nation's first authorized outdoor test of genetically altered bacteria after a delay caused by vandalism.

The spraying by Advanced Genetic Sciences Inc. marked the end of several years of regulatory debate and courtroom battles over release of the bacteria, known as Frostban. A last-ditch appeal by environmentalists to block the test was rejected Thursday.

Contra Costa County Sheriff's Lt. Al Snell said vandals cut two holes in the fence around the strawberry field early today and uprooted about 2,200 of the 2,400 test plants.

The start of spraying was delayed about 45 minutes as the same plants were replanted.

"It's not really a problem," said Trevor Suslow, an AGS spokesman. "Strawberry plants are amazingly resilient. They're really tough."

Dr. Julie Lindemann, clad from head to toe in a white protective suit and wearing goggles and a respirator, carried a small silver cannister into the field and was the only person who actually sprayed the plants.

"I think the industry as a whole will be pleased we're moving ahead," said AGS researcher John Bedbrook.

Lindemann began the controversial spraying at 6:45 a.m. at the plot southeast of this Contra Costa County agricultural community, about 50 miles east of San Francisco. Julio Calderon, a spokesman for the state Department of Food and Agriculture, said the tests were scheduled early because winds are calmest at that time of the day.

Your Birthday

Sunday, April 26, 1987

The aspects indicate that you may profit in a large way in the year ahead through a confidential arrangement. Don't spoil your luck by talking about it to too many outsiders.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A promising joint venture may be put together today through unique circumstances. What you have been lacking, a co-contributor is about to supply. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker set instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) This is a good day to iron out the kinks in a relationship you share with one who is very dear to you. He or she will be equally as eager to get together.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You're still in a strong achievement cycle where positive steps can be taken to enhance your material security. You know what needs to be done.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Two people, both from distant places, are about to enter your life. You could meet one or both today. Their influence on your affairs will be favorable.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Things are starting to change, and you're going to fare much better than you thought from an arrangement that has had you guessing. Hold happy thoughts.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your judgment is exceptionally keen today. Don't doubt the wisdom of your decisions, even if you have to make them under pressure.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Although funds aren't apt to be poured into your lap today, there will be several lucrative opportunities around you that could make for a heavier wallet.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Charm, warmth and congeniality are assets from which you can reap dividends today through social contacts.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Someone older, who you are especially fond of, may come to you today as though seeking a favor. In reality, it will turn out to be more of a favor for you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Today you could be lucky dealing with ideas that are both practical and large in scope, especially if they relate to some type of club or social organization.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be on your toes and doubly alert today. Something very unusual may suddenly develop for you that could add to your material holdings. It won't hang around too long.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Broaden your objectives today to include others and not just yourself. Success comes when you try to do the greatest good for the greatest number.

Monday, April 27, 1987

Joint ventures look extremely promising for you in the year ahead, provided you pick the right types of partners. Don't ally yourself with people who have nothing to offer.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Associates whose cooperation you need might not be as anxious to move on a project as you are today. Don't make things worse by being too demanding. Major changes are ahead for Taurus in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Responsibilities that you have been neglecting might get in the way of what you hope to do today. It's best not to try to sweep them under the rug again.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be mindful regarding your relationships today. Don't make the mistake of slighting an old friend for a new one.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It's not likely you'll get too much support from associates in achieving your career objectives today. Be prepared to cut it on your own.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't prematurely announce your plans to negative people today. Their comments could discourage you from even trying.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Before making any financial or business deals today, examine them very closely to be certain they're what they represent themselves to be.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Someone with whom you've dealt previously who is usually rather cooperative might take an unyielding position today. Treat this person with kid gloves.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Some unproductive methods that you are using where your work is concerned are not going to improve with time. Try to revive your thinking.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Before joining a new social organization, try to get to know some of the members. If you're not warmly welcomed, pass the action.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be sure other members of the family agree with major domestic changes you're contemplating today. If they don't, it could spell trouble.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you don't fully believe in a cause you promote today, others can't be expected to either. For believability, total commitment is a must.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Guard against temptations to spend today, hoping you'll have funds to cover everything by the time the bills come in. Your timetable could be faulty.

The Battle of Trafalgar took place Oct. 21, 1805, off the coast of Spain. A British fleet commanded by Adm. Horatio Nelson defeated a combined French and Spanish fleet, destroying the plans of Napoleon to invade England. Nelson, however, was killed.

Demos say its taxes or cuts

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — Democratic legislators, dubbing themselves "the truth squad," are following in Gov. Bill Clements' footsteps and telling Texans there is another side to the tax story.

"The problem with the facts as laid out by Gov. Clements is that they simply are not true," said Sen. Hugh Parmer, D-Fort Worth.

Touring three South Texas cities Thursday, Parmer and five other lawmakers are challenging the Republican governor's argument that $2.9 billion in new taxes for 1988-89 is enough.

The Democrats said that population growth, increased unemployment and inflation mean state government must spend more to provide the same help to its citizens during the next two years than it did in the last two.

"The governor is reducing his budget ... on the shoulders of public and higher education and in the area of health and human services against the people that can least afford it. And that's why we're here," said Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi.

The lawmakers cited examples of what they said Clements' $36.9 billion, two-year budget would do to services now provided. Among the effects, they said, would be:

— Increases in local property taxes to continue funding public schools adequately.

— Reductions in Aid to Families with Dependent Children payments from $57 a month to $43 in 1988 and $37 in 1989.

— Loss of nursing home care to about 8,000 elderly.

— Loss of child protective services for about 6,000 abused children.

The legislators, who plan to make every stop Clements does on his scheduled 17-city tour, said they believe the governor is wrong in saying his budget would not reduce services.

"Gov. Clements is going around the state of Texas delivering a message ... which is just simply not accurate. Even his arithmetic does not work," Parmer said.

The Senate has approved a $39.9 billion budget, and the truth squad members said that is a realistic figure. They noted that half the Senate's six Republican members also voted for that spending total.

"I believe Gov. Clements is sincere in his belief. But Gov. Clements is sincerely wrong," said Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville.

Sen. Judith Zaffirini, D-Laredo, said she thinks Clements has put politics first. During last year's campaign, the governor vowed to veto new taxes, and she said Clements has been unrealistic since taking office.

"I am dismayed and discouraged by the governor's style of confrontational politics," she said.

The lawmakers visited Corpus Christi, Harlingen and Laredo on Thursday, and they scheduled stops in Waco, College Station and Victoria today.

At Laredo, county judge Andy Ramos Jr. said he also had heard Clements' pitch on Monday but thought the lawmakers' message would be better received.

Ramos said Clements asked his audience if they wanted their taxes raised, "And the answer was no."

However, he said, "When you come down to the local community level and say, 'Do you want your independent school disticts and your universities here to be cut by over $2.5 million ... the answer is obviously no.

"If there is fat to cut, that fat was not identified by the governor's presentation," he said.

At Corpus Christi, farmer Wayne Ringer of Victoria said he, too, had heard both presentations but agreed with Clements.

"They're (legislators) not going to convince farmers to raise their taxes, I don't care what they say. They're going to find enough money to keep this state running and all essential services," Ringer said.

He also said he thinks Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, the Democratic leader of the Senate, was behind the truth squad trip.

"These guys are being run around the state by Gov. Hobby because Gov. Hobby is looking to run for governor in 1990," Ringer said.

teresting speakers in our class and tours of the college campus. We will be taking a trip to Texas Tech in Lubbock on our last class day.

Upon completion of the semester there will be a covered dish supper for our families and this will be a very bittersweet time for all of us I'm sure. I know that I have enjoyed everything I've learned and every hour spent on it and believe me, I had plenty of other things I could've been doing.

I'm going to miss Pat Blakely and Dan Osburn very much. I don't think God made any mistakes when he put these two people in our lives. I know first hand that they are willing to help in any way and are available when you need them. I don't think I just speak for myself when I say that there will always be a special place in my heart for them. "Thanks for opening my eyes and giving us the right to a fresh start."

I urge every woman reading this to at least think about it. I challenge those of you who want a change in your lives to change it and don't sit around waiting on someone else to do it for you because they can't and they won't.

God gives us all a purpose and if you haven't discovered yours yet or if you waited on your kids to get grown to pursue it, maybe you could start here.

Sincerely,
Leatha Stout
