Motorcycle Gang Members Killed

Five Executed In Pre-Dawn Raid

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Four men and a woman — all members of the violence-prone Outlaws motorcycle gang — were methodically shot and killed early Wednesday in the two-room green frame house that served as their local headquarters, police said.

One of the men was found sitting with a gun in his lap on a side porch, where he apparently had been posted as a guard, said police Capt. L.L. McGaw.

"It very possibly and probably was somebody they knew," McGraw said, noting that there were no signs of a struggle inside the house. The victims were not tied and all were fully clothed, police said.

Sgt. T.C. Johhnson, one of the first officers on the scene, said the victims were shot "all over. None of them were shot just once."

Police refused to release details of possible murder weapons, how so many people could be killed with no signs of a struggle, or about the scene inside the house, which consisted of a kitchen and one large room.

The local chapter of the Outlaws, which has members scattered across the country, has had clashes with rival gangs in the past, but police said they had no evidence indicating rivals were involved in the slayings.

Bodies Discovered

The bodies were discovered about 5:30 a.m. by the leader of the Charlotte gang, officers said.

Police idntified two of the vctims as William Allen, 22, and Bridgette Benfield, 17, both of Charlotte. Officers said they had only tentative identifications of the others.

Reporters and onlookers standing in the front yard could hear a telephone ringing almost constantly throughout the morning.

"We've been getting calls from (Outlaw) members from Florida, North Carolina, and Virginia, asking about the identitites," police inspector Ron Guertte said. "Some of the victims were locals and some were not," he said.

About 10 gang members usually lived at the house, but it was open to any out-of-town member who might be passing through, police said.

News of the slayings brought gang members and friends to the house, located between a trucking terminal nd a grocery store in an industrial area about three miles from downtown.

Weapons Confiscated

Two men, said by police to be Outlaws, drove up in a van. Officers confiscated two loaded pistols, a loaded shotgun, and a bayonet from the van, with the men's cooperation.

One of the men wore a T-shirt bearing an obscene reference to the Hell's Angels, a long-time rival gang of the Outlaws.

Officers ushered eight young women into the house at varying times during the morning, apparently to help identify the victims.

Some of the women were crying when they left. None would talk to reporters. The bodies were taken to a morgue for autopsies, and officers carried two shotguns and several boxes of evidence from the house.

"I have absolutely no idea and nothing else to say," he replied.

British Team Claims Superior Skylab Data

By The Associated Press

AN EMINENT British scientist says his government team has a better idea than the Americans of when Skylab will fall. So does an Indian astrologer. Both say they've been right before.

The U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration is still uncertain when Skylab will break up and fall to earth, and is not predicting where. A lot of people around the world are trying to figure out the answers for themselves. The most dramatic example, perhaps, is that of the Philippine soothsayers who stirred such fear in their country that President Ferdinand Marcos went on national television last week to urge calm.

As of Wednesday, the best prediction NASA could make was that Skylab would re-enter Earth's atmosphere between July 10 and 14, with July 12 the most likely date.

At Farnborough, England, scientists at the British government's Royal Aircraft Establishment predicted Skylab would crash July 14.

Desmond King-Hele, chief scientific officer at Farnborough, told the British Press Association that as re-entry approaches, he will be able to predict within one hour when it will be.

When the 77.5-ton space laboratory was launched in 1973, the British team said it would have a six-year life span, contradicting American scientists who said it would stay aloft 10 years.

King-Hele said that unlike NASA, the British team took into account sunspot activity, which affects the density of the outer atmosphere and the life span of a satellite — and got its mathematics right.

In India, astrologer Pandit Shiv Kumar Jaitly also was making predictions. He said Skylab would land in Siberia between July 9 and July 13 and cause no damage to life or property. The prediction was reported in a dispatch from Amritsar in the Stateman newspaper, which said the astrologer had forecast correctly former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's defeat in the 1977 general election.

On a hopeful note, it also said Dr. Ramakant Misra, a yoga teacher in Lucknow, has been trying since Monday to move the Skylab out of its orbit with his "inner force," and claims 95 per cent success so far.

In China, which has launched its own satellites, the newspaper People's Daily conveyed little alarm last Friday when it reported the impending breakup of Skylab. It said three-fourths of its orbit is over ocean, and U.S. scientists hope to influence where it falls.

"Since 1957," it said, "thousands of manmade objects already have crashed to earth." It noted, however, that this one is especially large.

In Bangkok, a leading Thai astronomer was less sanguine about space achievements. Prof. Ravi Bhavilai, a lecturer at Chula Longkorn University's Faculty of Science, said the very invention of Skylab violated human rights and religious truth because one group of people is benefitting from new knowledge at the expense of risk to others.

He said Thais should clear their minds and concentrate on Buddha's teachings in order to stay calm. He also called on the government to set up an information center so rumors won't panic the populace.

Gasoline Shortage, Clouds Ignored By Holiday Regalers

By NANCY DORN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

GASOLINE shortages, the mid-week placement of the holiday and a few threatening clouds did not dampen the spirits of South Plains residents who attended Lubbock's Fourth of July activities.

Thirty-five organizations marched in the Fourth of July parade which kicked off Lubbock's celebration at 10 a.m.

The parade, which progressed from the Civic Center parking lot in downtown Lubbock to the Texas Tech University campus, featured riding clubs, local bands and service organizations, along with State Reps. E.L. Short, Buzz Robnett, U.S. Rep. Kent Hance and Reese Air Force Base commander Col. Richard Ingram. A Right to Life group added a political flavor

Like Halloween

"It's like Halloween, isn't it?" one young parade watcher asked, referring to the candy-throwing youngsters on a church wagon.

Parade officials encouraged local citizens to join the parade as it meandered down Broadway and several citizens on foot, bicycle and motorcycle joined up with the festive march.

Daniel Evans, 9, said he got up at 6 a.m. Wednesday morning to decorate his bike with pastel crepe paper streamers

(Area's Independence Day Roundup, Page 15, Sec. A)

Turnout Bigger

"There is probably a bigger turnout this year because the holiday landed in mid-week," Walter Binger, a native of New York City but a Lubbock resident for the last 11 years, said. He said he was accustomed to attending the Fourth of July parade in Manhatten every year.

"I want the people of Lubbock to get used to doing this," said parade chairman Jim Douglass. As he observed parade watchers mingling at the end of the parade route on the Tech campus, he said he felt the parade was a success.

"A lot of people are latent flag-wavers — we just gave them a chance to do it today," he said. Douglass said the parade turnout was encouraging. Planning for next year's festivities will start with a meeting today at 1 p.m.

Lakes Claim Youth, 17, As Third Victim

A FOURTH of July outing at the Canyon Lakes ended in tragedy Wednesday afternoon when a 17-year-old Lubbock youth drowned, despite rescue efforts by a 16-year-old girl.

Guadalupe L. Ramos Jr., of 2104 Duke St., Apt. 109, drowned about 5:45 p.m. in a narrow channel of the lakes, police said.

He was pronounced dead about 6:30 p.m. at Health Sciences Center Hospital. Justice of the Peace Dardie Williamson of Shallowater ruled the death accidental.

Ramos' death marks the city's third drowning this year, all occurring at the Canyon Lakes.

Witnesses said the victim, another man and 16-year-old Janie Martinez had jumped in the lake just minutes before Ramos apparently became tired and disappeared under water.

Miss Martinez attempted to pull the struggling Ramos to the shore, but she lost her grasp on him and had to be pulled from the water.

The second man, Robert Alvarez, 29, of 2104 Duke St., also was pulled from the lake and ran to get help.

"It happened right under a no swimming sign," investigating police officer Jim Taylor said. The Lubbock Fire Department was on the scene 11 minutes after the call was dispatched and pulled the drowning victim from the lake.

Emergency Medical Services technicians unsuccessfully attempted to revive Ramos. Miss Martinez was treated at St. Mary's Hospital.

Several persons at the park said they saw Ramos swimming behind Alvarez when Ramos began bobbing up and down in the water and waving his arms. "I got pretty close to him when he went down, but he went down too fast," one man said.

Another witness said Miss Martinez attempted to save Ramos but was unable to hold him up. The man, who said he cannot swim, pulled Miss Martinez and Alvarez out of the 8-foot deep water.

"I felt so helpless, but I can't swim. I tried to find a stick to help pull him out," the man said.

Nursing Home Hit By Armed Bandits

TWO "SHABBY looking" armed men held up the University Villa convalescent home at 2400 Quaker Ave. about 9:40 p.m. Wednesday, fleeing with narcotics after cutting the home's telephone lines.

Nursing home officials were meeting with police late Wednesday and could not comment on the amount or type of drugs taken.

The two white males were said to be in their 20s, both with beards, between 5-feet 8 and 5-feet 9 and shabbily dressed. A nursing home staff member said no one was hurt in the incident.

County Man Kills Horse, Sets Blaze

AFTER SHOOTING his horse eight times, a Lubbock County man who deputies said "seemed depressed," herded an assortment of chickens, turkeys, geese and guineas into his barn and set it on fire.

"I've taken all I can take, and I'm going to destroy everything on this place," the distressed man told deputies

Deputies were called to a barn fire late Tuesday night about 1 1/2 miles northwest of the city.

The firemen told the deputies that the owner of the barn would not let them put out the fire.

Deputies argued with the owner, who told them he had shot his horse in the barn, and then poured gas and diesel over the barn and set it on fire.

Deputies finally ordered the firemen to douse the barn blaze, fearing the fire might spread to nearby property.

When the fire was extinguished, officials found several cans in the barn that smelled of gasoline and diesel.

Deputies confiscated a .22-caliber rifle from the man that he said was used to shoot the horse.

Area Points Get Showers

A WIDELY scattered band of showers and thunderstorms invaded the western half of the South Plains late Wednesday, with the heaviest activity reported in southern Hale County between Abernathy and Hale Center.

Daytime skies were only partly cloudy over Lubbock while temperatures crackled in the 90s and Fourth of July activities went undisturbed.

By 9 p.m., the National Weather Service reported a line of heavy thunderstorms with small hail, gusty winds and heavy rain extended from Matador to Crosbyton to Tahoka and moving in a northeasterly direction.

Other heavy showers were reported in southern Lamb County.

There were several reports of funnel clouds throughout Southeast Texas and over the coastal waters which were confirmed by the National Weather Service. A tornado warning was posted for Jefferson County after a funnel cloud was spotted by weather service employees over Nederland.

Cloudy skies with a slight chance of afternoon and evening thunderstorms are expected to continue in the forecast through Friday. Temperatures today will rise to the low and middle 90s before dropping to the upper 60s tonight. Winds will be variable at 5 to 10 mph.

Slight rainfall was reported over some parts of Lubbock, Crosbyton, Brownfield and Littlefield, with Crosbyton reporting the heaviest accumulation at .65 of an inch.

Elsewhere in the state, it will continue to be hot and dry except for portions of the west and southwest.

Seven Dead In Plane Collision

ASHDOWN, Ark. (AP) — The bodies of seven persons, including that of a 4-year-old girl, have been recovered from the wreckage of two light planes in a lake in southwestern Arkansas.

Authorities said a single-engine Cessna T-41 and a twin-engine Cessna 340 collided near the Millwood Lake Dam and plunged into the lake about 6:15 p.m. Tuesday.

Law enforcement officers and rescue workers worked until late Tuesday to remove five bodies from the wreckage. Dragging and diving operations resumed after dawn Wednesday, and two more bodies were recovered.

Authorities said three of the victims worked for a Dallas advertising agency. They were identified by Little River County Sheriff Marlin Surber as David Council, 30, of Dallas, board chairman and a graphic designer for Albright, Council, Hanna and Carl; Jack Caspary, 35, of Dallas, a commercial photographer; and John Robert Egar, 26, of Dallas, an assistant photographer.

Surber identified the pilot as Harry Tyler of Dallas. His age was not available.

The pilot and two passengers in the single-engine plane were identified by Surber as Arlia Luther Moore, 56, the pilot; Margaret Tazzano, 28; and her daughter, Angela Tazzano, 4, all of Texarkana.

Barges were used to help pull the wreckage from the lake. Witnesses said debris was scattered over a square mile area in the lake, the second-largest in Arkansas.

The single-engine plane's fuselage and pieces of wreckage from both planes were removed by noon Wednesday. Efforts to recover the fuselage of the twin-engine plane, owned by Metro Inns of Dallas, were halted shortly after noon. Authorities said they did not have the proper equipment.

The crash occurred about 100 yards from the Millwood Lake Dam.

Sid Phillips, 37, of Texarkana said he and a coworker were driving home from work and had stopped near the dam "to see if anyone was catching any fish."

Carter Cancels Energy Crisis Address Without Explanation

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) — President Carter on Wednesday unexpectedly and without explanation canceled a nationwide address he was to give on the energy crisis Thursday night.

The announcement was made by White House press secretary Jody Powell, who refused to give any reason for the change in plans.

"The president has asked me to announce that the speech originally scheduled for Thursday night has been canceled. I have nothing further to say than that," Powell said.

Carter canceled a planned vacation in Hawaii to return to the United States for meetings this week with advisers on how to deal with the latest oil price hikes imposed by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. He had been granted air time by all three networks for the speech which was to have been made Thursday at 9 p.m. EDT.

Carter spent the Fourth of July with his family at his Camp David retreat. He was reported earlier to be working on the planned speech.

At one of the energy meetings this week, Carter said, "I want a bold and a forceful program that, under the scrutiny of the Congress and the public, will be highly acceptable and that we can move without delay."

Carter had said at that time that the gasoline shortages may have "aroused the public and the Congress so that they will take expeditious action."

Powell refused repeatedly to say what had caused Carter to cancel the speech. It was understood that no health problem was involved or any unexpected crisis that had drawn Carter's attention from the energy problem.

Powell also refused to say when Carter would return from Camp David or whether Carter would still make a weekend trip to address the National Governors Conference meeting in Louisville, Ken.

The press secretary also gave no indication when or whether the energy address would be rescheduled.

Jim Bishop, spokesman for Energy Secretary James Schlesinger, also refused to shed any light on why the speech had been canceled. "Everything has to come from Jody," Bishop said.

Carter had been trying to assess the damage to the nation's economy expected from the 60 percent price increase imposed this year by OPEC. The president said the hikes made a recession more likely in 1980.

Aides had said Carter was working on an oil program designed for quick congressional acceptance. He had been expected to outline the program in general terms Thursday, and Powell said details would be made public in the following 10 days to two weeks.

The program was expected to include a proposal to encourage production of synthetic fuel, and a fleshed-out version of the "energy security fund" Carter proposed in an energy speech ealier this year.

The House has already passed a $3 billion program aimed at producing half a million barrels of oil a day from coal by 1984.

Powell on Tuesday would not disclose other options being discussed, but did say "there are none that do not involve substantial trade-offs of one kind or another. ..."

Patients Said Safe In Hospital Blaze

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Fire erupted at a private hospital in New Orleans Wednesday, forcing evacuation of patients and employees from several upper floors, fire officials said.

No one was injured, said hospital spokeswoman Sharon O'Brien. "We are operating under normal conditions with all patients safe and sound," she said.

Those evacuated from the 11-story Touro Infirmary included infants and patients in the intensive care unit. About 400 patients were in the hospital when the fire began, but it was not known how many were evacuted.

The fire went to five alarms shortly after it was reported. Fire fighters brought the blaze under control within an hour, police said.

Fire officials said the blaze broke out on the sixth floor of the building, and heavy smoke was reported on three upper floors.

Film Director Fined In Drug Conviction

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Film director Stanley Dragoti, husband of model Cheryl Tiegs, was given a 21-month suspended sentence Wednesday and fined 100,000 marks — about $55,000 — on conviction of smuggling cocaine.

The 46-year-old Dragoti, who directed the hit Dracula movie "Love at First Bite," was arrested May 13 after customs officials at Frankfurt's Rhein-Main airport discovered a capsule with nearly 25 grams of cocaine in his possession.

Dragoti told the court, "I am guilty in the sense of the charge." He said he became dependent on cocaine last September after learning his wife had begun an affair with another man during filming in Africa.

The prosecutor had recommened that Dragoti be required to serve the sentence, but his defense attorney presented evidence of an unusually good moral background and said that during his pretrial detention Dragoti had received new film-contract offers.

Dragoti, was enroute from California to Cannes, France, to accept a film award when he was arrested, and interrupted his trip for a stopover in Frankfurt.

Toledo Firemen, Police Reject Contract Offer

TOLEDO (AP — Firemen joined police Wednesday in rejecting the city's contract offer but remained on the job in compliance with a court order that ended a two-day strike.

Meanwhile, the city's 200 bus drivers remained off the job after striking Tuesday to protest the slaying of a fellow driver. The drives are demanding written assurance of a security force to protect them.

"Nerve endings are raw on both sides now," City Manager J. Michael Porter said Wednesday after firemen completed their vote. "We need a cooling-off period. I am going to recommend we go back to negotiations Monday."

The work stoppage by 3,700 municipal employees that virtually crippled this city of 370,000 persons was halted Tuesay by the order that would have imposed fines of $25,000 a day per union ad $2,500 per strike per shift if not obeyed.

Representatives of the safety forces said they would continue to obey the order which remains in effect for 14 days.

Despite the seeming normalcy of operations on the Fourth of July holiday, scars remained from the largest municipal strike in city history.

Among the reminders of the dispute were the burned-out skeletons of several buildings where fires raged while supervisory personnel and suburban fire departments scrambled to do the work of 21 engine houses.

Police rejected the contract 311-44 Tuesday. Firemen tallied 360 votes against the pact and 3 in favor. The other city unions accepted the agreement,which offered 2 percent wage increases annually over three years and retained quarterly cost of living increases.

Wage increase provisions were the same for all city workers, although some non-economic issues differed.

Under the proposal, police and firemen now earning $17,000 annually would be receiving $21,000 in the third year of the pact.

Firemen's opposition to the agreement centered on the city's desire to cut manpower on pumper trucks from four persons to three.

Police said they were unhappy with both economic and non-economic isses.

American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees regional director Charles Hendrix called the package an "outstanding contract." Union Local 7 overwhelmingly approved it, and the smaller Local 2058 was to vote today.

Teamster Local 20 president Harold Lew, representing refuse collectors, said he was not happy with the contract, but his members approved it 136-73.

The Toledo Police Command Officers Association voted Monday night to accept the city's offer before the strike-stopping injection was put into effect.

The longest-lived U.S. presidents were John Adams and Herbert Hoover, each reaching 90.

Nixon Plans To Visit Shah In Mexico

ANAEIM, Calif. (AP) — Richard Nixon says he feels it's important that he and his wife Paticia visit Mexico to see the shah of Iran because, "if the United States doesn't stand by our friends when they're in trouble, we're gonna end up without any friends."

Nixon, interviewed after watching a baseball game Tuesday night at Anaheim Stadium, didn't say when he would be going, but indicated it would be soon.

"Yes, I do plan to go," the former president said after the game between the California Angels and the Oakland Athletics. "Mrs. Nixon and I are planning to call on the shah to pay our respects to the shah and the empress.

"The shah has been a friend of the United States' for 30 years and he has been a personal friend for over 25 of those years," said Nixon.

"That's why I'm going and I'm looking forward to seeing him and Mrs. Nixon looks forward to seeing the empress," he said.

Nixon said he wants "to express to him our appreciation for his leadership of his country and his friendship to the United States for over 30 years.

"It will be a quick trip, down one day and back the next," said Nixon.

Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi was ousted from Iran last winter, and the previouly exiled Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, a bitter enemy of the shah, returned to Iran to form a new Islamic government.

Nixon had to cancel plans to fly to Mexico City on Monday because f the strike by ground crew of Western Airlines at Mexcio City's international airport.

"As you can see I don't have a plane," said Nixon from the stadium box he shared with Gene Autry, principal owner of the Angels.

Another airline offers a flight to Mexico city, but it stops twice on the way. "The two stops are too rugged for Mrs. Nixon," he said.

Tuesday's interview with Nixon was carried by ABC-TV's "Good Morning, America" show Wednesday.

Nixon also had kind words for David Frost — but not the David Frost who interviewed him on naional television in May 1977.

Dave Frost, pitcher for the Angels, threw 93 pitches, 61 of which were strikes, in shutting out the Athletics 3-0 with a four-hitter.

"I thought Mr. Frost did very well," said Nixon.

Mothers-To-Be Warned About Drug Hazard

WASHINGTON (AP) — Drugs, even the most common ones you may take routinely, may pose a hazard to the unborn child if you are pregnant.

The Food and Drug Administration urges pregnant women to take drugs only when necessary, and then only after checking with a doctor.

The FDA says women who discontinue oral contraceptives in the hope of becoming pregnant should wait at least three months before trying to conceive, using in the meantime, another method of birth control.

A baby conceived immediately after you stop taking the pill could have a higher risk of birth defects, the FDA reports.

The agency suggests pregnant women avoid use of tetracycline antibiotics, which have been shown to permanently discolor the child's teeth.

Also, officials say, avoid barbiturates. Women who have taken large doses of barbiturtes during pregnancy, particlarly during the last three months of pregnancy, may give birth to an addicted infant.

Amphetamines, which many womer take to aid in weight loss, may alsc cause birth defects, FDA says.

Reading, 'Riting, Dictatorship

HUMAN RIGHTS in the United States suffered a devastating blow when the Supreme Court ruled this week that federal judges may exercise dictatorial powers over people on the basis of race.

In school desegregation rulings, the Court said forced busing punishment of today's children is constitutionally permissible as atonement for alleged racial bias practiced by their forefathers.

The decisions conceivably could influence adversely the outcome of an appeal of Lubbock's desegregation ruling.

Support for a constitutional amendment to prohibit busing, to be voted on in Congress later this month, also could result from this week's decisions.

RULING ON CASES arising in Dayton and Columbus, Ohio, Louisville, Ky., Minneapolis and Austin, the Supreme Court said federal judges have wide latitude for enforcing systemwide integration.

If the judge determines that systemwide segregation was intentional, or the result of segregative purpose, the Court ruled, he may order a systemwide remedy, including forced busing.

The Dayton case was of special interest here because of parallels between it and the Lubbock situation. There, as here, a federal district judge initially ordered limited busing but the U.S. Justice Department wasn't satisfied.

In a 5-4 decision, the Supreme Court held that a plan requiring the busing of 18,000 students in Dayton is appropriate and necessary.

Federal Judge Halbert O. Woodward ordered only a limited amount of busing in Lubbock after finding that only a few of the city's schools are racially identifiable because of "segregative intent" by past school boards.

HOWEVER, THE DAYTON ruling could encourage the ultra-liberal 5th Circuit Court of Appeals to overturn Woodward on the basis that all Texas schools were officially segregated prior to 1954.

To do so, though, the appellate court would have to throw out Woodward's finding that only nine campuses here are remnants of unlawful segregation; he said 13 other racially identifiable schools are the result of neighborhood housing patterns.

By its one-vote margin, the Supreme Court in effect held that such commonsense approaches are suspect. Assigning more pupils on the basis of skin color is an "affirmative duty," it said.

THIS RULING CAME just one week after the Supreme Court had held that affirmative action plans making job opportunities available on the basis of race are constitutional.

Thus, in the name of trying to erase vestiges of historic racial discrimination, the Supreme Court has made classification by race the law of the land.

In dissent, Justice Lewis Powell said the Court appeared to endorse "a wholly new constitutional concept." He warned that the federal judiciary should be "limiting rather than expanding the extent to which courts are operating the public school systems of our country."

That's one way of saying that the schools should be turned back over to the people. Dictatorial abuse of power is nonetheless reprehensible when cloaked in judicial robes than when it is exercised by a single tyrant.

AN EDITORIAL:

New Nation, Old Problems

On July 12, the Union Jack will be lowered at Bairiki, the capital of the Gilbert Islands, and the newly designed flag of the independent Commonwealth nation of Kiribati will be hoisted in its place.

Kiribati thus will become the latest, but by no means the last, of the world's burgeoning number of mini-states.

AND WHILE Kiribati has a population of only 60,000, it still has to play second fiddle to neighboring Tuvalu, which gained its independence from Britain last September and checks in with only 7,000 people.

Many American veterans who served in the Pacific during World War II have vivid memories of the Gilbert Islands, which Japan seized from Britain in 1942.

It was one of the bloodiest battles of the Pacific campaign, with 990 Marines dying and 2,296 being wounded. The Japanese toll was 5,000 dead and only 150 taken prisoner.

AS FOR THE future, Kiribati shares the same bleak prospects as most of its fellow mini-states.

Economically, the islands are certain to remain dependent on Britain for some time to come. Real prosperity seems out of the question, the area being far from the main shipping lanes and airline routes.

The only problem is to hope that if Kiribati ever joins the United Nations, it will line up with the West. Many of the other "nations," some not much larger than their own postage stamps, wield the same voting power in the General Assembly as does the U.S. And that's unequal equality!

ART BUCHWALD:

Commercials Interrupted For Brief Entertainment

WASHINGTON—The beauty of government servants in Washington is that they are always willing to help American citizens, even when you don't want them to.

Now you have to follow me very closely on this one, or you'll get lost.

The antitrust division of the Justice Department is suing the networks because they don't allow enough commercials on the air during prime time.

According to a code agreed upon by the networks, TV commercials are limited to nine and a half minutes to every hour between eight and eleven o'clock.

But lawyers in Justice, who know what's best for us, have decided the fewer commercials you put on TV, the higher the cost, and therefore the consumer (that's you and me) has to pay more for the product advertised.

Now I know you all have questions so I will try to answer them for you.

Q—WHY DO WE have to have more commercials? There are too many on the air as it is.

A—Because the more commercials the networks show, the less it will cost the advertiser, and so he can pass his savings on to you.

Q—How much would we save?

A—Figuring cost per thousand, you would save as much as half a cent on a bar of soap, a quarter of a cent on a roll of toilet paper, and maybe five cents on a new car.

Q—Suppose we'd rather have the shows and pay the extra money, so we wouldn't be inflicted with the expletive deleted commercials?

A—Impossible. You have no say when the Justice Department institutes an antitrust suit. They know better than you do what's good for your welfare.

Q—IF THEY PUT on more and more commercials, then I'll stop watching television and the advertiser won't be able to sell his product. What happens then?

A—The advertiser will be forced to raise his prices for his goods because he won't be producing as much.

Q—Can't the Justice Department officials realize that the less commercials on TV, the more the public likes it?

A—No, they can't. For one reason, they're so busy thinking up antitrust suits such as this, they never have time to watch television.

If the government lawyers can break the network code on TV commercial limitations, it will be a big feather in their caps.

They can then go out and join a big private law firm specializing in defending this type of antitrust case.

Q—WHY DON'T THEY spend our money and their time going after the oil companies and the big multinationals instead of messing around with how much advertising the public should have inflicted on it?

A—That's a good question, but when I called the antitrust division to ask them, everyone was out to lunch.

Q—Do you think this is a good thing or a bad thing for TV viewers?

A—It's a good thing if you enjoy watching commercials. But if you prefer to watch the programs, you could have trouble with it.

Q—What can I do as an American TV viewer to tell them it's the stupidest idea I ever heard of in my life.

A—Write to: BIG BROTHER in care of Antitrust Division, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C., but don't be disappointed if no one answers your letter.

High Water 'Marx'

LONDON—Marx's ghost, hovering over Highgate Cemetery, must be vexed. Tories have become the bold believers in Economic Man, in the economic springs of action, in an economic theory of history.

The unlikely bomb thrower in the exhilaratingly radical Conservative government is Sir Geoffrey Howe, chancellor of the exchequer: gray hair, gray suits, technicolor policy.

Elections can change the governing faces; budgets can change the fate of the state. Howe's budget begins such a change.

It is, of course, her budget: the lady next door. Prime ministers live at No. 10 Downing Street, chancellors at No. 11. The symbolism of British government is dead right: Economic realities define political possibilities.

Margaret Thatcher's budget begins the boldest, most worthy experiment undertaken by a democracy since the war.

Personal income taxes are cut $9.5 billion. The standard rate is cut from 33 to 30 percent, a first step toward 25 percent. The top rate is cut from 83 to 60.

About 1.3 million low-income people are removed from the tax rolls by raising the tax threshold. The revenue is gained by a shift from direct to indirect taxation, taxing income less and consumption more.

The value added tax (VAT), a sales tax, goes to 15 percent. And the state will sell some industrial assets. The substantial spending cuts are termed "a very preliminary package."

HOWE REJECTS the suggestion that No. 11 is a casino, that the budget is a gamble. But his calmness is that of a man who has placed his bet and spun the wheel and can only wait.

Cuts in public spending and employment comes as Britain's economy is sagging.

The VAT increase will give a one-time shove to the inflation rate, which will be about 17 percent when unions begin their autumn wage scramble. This winter's labor strife could be worse than last winter's.

Howe bets against it. His party has a mandate; union leaders do not. Also, the tax cut will produce a plump rebate in pay packets in the autumn.

Public sector unions will be less militant because of recent gains. Private sector unions know that wages must come from firms' profits, no longer from state subsidies to firms. So says Howe.

WITH THEIR budget as a lever, the Tories plan to move Britain's mental world, to change attitudes about work and risk.

It is an attempt to turn Britain around economically by turning it to the right morally, toward aggressiveness and acquisitiveness.

This thumping Tory budget is, as Toryism should be, unapologetically elitist. Says Howe: "We cannot have a successful and prosperous society without successful and prosperous individuals."

Every society has a structure of incentives, and Britain's "leveling down" egalitarianism produced irrational incentives against work and thrift and risk, and for tax cheating and emigration.

The budget begins the Tory attempt to create, by rewarding, the sort of productive elites whose energies move societies that move.

IT IS EASY to caricature this. Three pence off the tax in a pound will not rearrange the furniture in the British soul. But Marx's ghost understands the thinking: economic motives are bedrock.

Three pence now; and more later; and much more, immediately, for energizing elites; and any other changes—all this should change behavior.

Howe has summoned animal spirits from the vasty deep. Will they come?

The budget's immediate effect was a gentle crime wave, the bourgeois lawlessness of shopkeepers who broke the law against Sunday openings in order to handle the surge of customers on the last day before the VAT increase.

But as the elderly Disraeli said, "It is a very difficult country to move, Mr. Hyndman, a very difficult country indeed..."

SOME BRITONS who ardently admire the budget's principles worry that the time is not ripe for acting on them, that the Tories are marching into the teeth of a world recession that will overwhelm and seem to discredit their experiment.

Howe replies that the time is never ripe for strong economic medicine, that were conditions not so parlous, the Tory tonic would not be so necessary.

But because the budget puts many clear ideas to a test, the stakes of British politics have suddenly been magnified.

To some extent, all proponents of these ideas, and especially American Republicans, have their fortunes tied to these Tories on whom Marx's ghost smiles, sardonically.

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

End Of An Era

THE BATTLE of Waterloo, which changed the world, began at 11:35 a.m. Sunday, June 18, 1815 —164 years ago.

Waterloo is 12 miles south of Brussels. Napoleon Bonaparte traveled in a bulletproof, blue-and-gold coach with scarlet-spoked wheels.

For 15 years this Corsican mystic had taken charge of Europe's destinies. Yet Napoleon knew he must persuade Frenchmen to follow him for reasons other than self-interest or fear.

And Napoleon's conquests, to the thunder of artillery, the clash of imperial eagles and the wanton sacrifice of nearly a million men, altered for all time the face of the civilized world.

AUSTRIA AND Sweden became enemies. Denmark, Holland and others became Napoleon's unwilling allies. But the very dour Duke of Wellington (Arthur Wellesley), with more than 100,000 men, still was locked south of the Pyrenees, 700 miles south of Paris.

But in seven long years, Wellington clawed his way from Lisbon across Spain, the belly of France and to Brussels. The "Iron Duke" arrived to fight the Battle of Waterloo.

The Duke of Wellington was born in Ireland of a 600-year-old British family. He said of his Irish birth: "Because a man is born in a stable that does not make him a horse."

With great chivalry and late in life, Wellington married Kitty, a 34-year-old spinster who had refused him 12 years before. When Wellington fought Napoleon at Waterloo both were 46.

WATERLOO WAS A battlefield of Napoleon's own choosing. And so swift was Napoleon's advance from Paris that Wellington was almost caught unawares.

By June 14 Napoleon had concentrated all his forces around Phillippeville. The enemy was divided and had not the faintest idea of Napoleon's attack.

Wellington faced Napoleon with 68,000 troops consisting of English, Irish, Scots, Dutch, Belgians and Germans. Another 45,000 Prussians were commanded by aged Field Marshal Gebhard Leberecht von Blucher. Napoleon had 105,000 soldiers.

The battle lasted only nine and a half hours, seesawing through five phases. Napoleon blundered by delaying his attack until 11:35, giving von Blucher's troops the time needed to reach Waterloo and support Wellington. Late in the day the tide turned when von Blucher relieved Wellington's eastern flank.

AND WELLINGTON'S retreat, then his turn into the attack, was the trick that finally did in Napoleon. The battle ended at 9:10 p.m. when Wellington rode out to embrace von Blucher.

They could communicate only in French. Von Blucher said: "What an affair." The Prussians lost 7,000 soldiers.

As after the Battle of Badajoz in Spain, Wellington wept. He said: "I hope to God I have fought my last battle." Wellington lost 15,000 men, the French at least 25,000.

On July 14, 1815, Napoleon surrendered to the British, "the most powerful and generous" of his foes. The incredible Napoleonic period ended. Napoleon had the world at his feet and all he got out of it was a rocky St. Helena jail for himself.

JAY HARRIS:

A Bit Of Inflation

THE U.S. Treasury launched a grand new project this week. It was the Susan B. Anthony dollar.

Not only is it the first U.S. coin to carry the image of an American woman. It is the first new coin size in ages. The government hopes it gets a much warmer welcome than that given the return of the heralded $2 bill. Millions of the deuces are still stacked in Treasury vaults, on bank shelves or in collectors' hands.

The new coin, just slightly larger than a quarter and somewhat confusing as a result, features on one side a profile of Miss Anthony, the 19th century suffragette. On the other is the symbolic American eagle landing on the moon.

Although round, the coin appears otherwise because of an 11-sided border etched into the inside rim. The coin, which replaces the old Eisenhower dollar, costs only three cents to make as compared to eight cents for the Ike dollar. It weighs a third less and is worth far less than the original.

BOB MCBRINN, who writes for The El Paso Herald-Post, could have had the new coin in mind recently when he penned an item on what inflation has done to people's thinking about money.

Bob says that some people think that how we look at money may be a built-in psycological defense against the declining value of the coin of the realm...

"For example," he says, "I have noticed that all of a sudden I am no longer carrying all my paper money in my wallet. I am now stuffing $1 and $5 bills in my trouser pocket. That handy right-hand trouser pocket in the past had been the receptacle for my loose change, pocket knife, used Kleenex and toothpicks...

"I don't recall when I stopped carrying pennies. I guess it was about the time the grandchildren began insisting on silver coins. I still carry a few silver coins, but they are for an occasional stamp or to bail me out when it's my time to buy the coffee at the office..."

THE EL PASO man goes on with some nostalgia which we feel readers may find familiar...

"It could have been my frugal parents or possibly my military training but like most males my wallet was always well organized.

"It was the repository for things of value... folding money, credit cards, identification cards, a small plastic calendar, and a list of birthdays I didn't want to forget. My pants pocket is so accessible to my right hand that it has always been the 'catch-all' for those items men carry that would be no real damage if they were lost.

"Those of us who were growing up in the 1940s prior to World War II, will remember that the 'big man' in the crowd was the fellow with 'jingling money' in his pocket. In fact, in those days we treated coins with a great deal of respect. And I am sure all of you can remember the first time you found a shiny coin that had carelessly been lost.

"THIS WAS the time in American history that loose change was carried around in little cloth or leather coin purses. It's funny how you stereotype people. I always figured that a person that carried his money in a coin purse was a miser.

"But the coin purse went out about the time World War II ration stamps came into being. Then the loose change went to the trouser pocket with the lint, toothpicks and gum wrappers.

"I remember that I got my first wallet about the time I got my draft notice. And when I marched off to war, my two most important documents, the draft notice and Social Security number, were tucked securely in my new wallet. There wasn't much folding money to carry in those days. Twenty-one bucks a month didn't go very far...But I felt important. Just a few years before, I had believed wallets were carried only by bankers and gangsters.

"By this time, everyone was carrying a wallet and it was for carrying what was known in those days as folding money. Some called it 'real money.' And to most of us real money was a dollar.

"SINCE THAT time a lot of folding money has had temporary residence in my wallet.

"My Social Security card has been joined by a driver's license, Army ID card and numerous credit cards. And it was only recently that I noticed a lack of real folding money.

"I hadn't realized the effect inflation had forced on my wallet. About a couple of years ago, I began to discover dollar bills in my right-hand pants pocket. In an almost casual way, I had relegated the dollar bill to the status of small change, lint, Kleenex and gum wrappers...

"Then the real shocker hit me last week. I reached in my pocket for a dollar and came up with a $5 bill. Almost embarrassed, I quickly put the $5 bill in my wallet.

"ALTHOUGH THE incident alarmed me, I began to wonder.

"In these days of inflation, what is a $5 bill? The way people are asking for "fives" these days, is the bill worthy of the wallet?

"I know it's alarming to all of us. This demand for $5 bills is so great these days if you keep them in your wallet it would be worn out in no time.With the price of a news magazine at $1.25...hamburger at $1.90 a pound...lettuce at a buck a head...five dollars doesn't go very far.

"So, I put the $5 bill back in my trouser pocket, along with the lint, the puny dimes and quarters and the almost worthless dollar bill. I dread the day when I reach into that convenient right hand pants pocket and come up with a "twenty."

Now, the El Pasoan and others can add the new Susan B. Anthony dollar to the pocket collection. The problem is not getting it mixed up so much with a quarter, but finding out what it will buy...

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

WHAT, YOU'VE never heard of that bright literary lady named Baird Leonard? She's the one who thusly described the characteristics of a perfect husband: He's the sole beloved son of a mother who died, leaving him $12 million.

He sleeps with his mouth closed. He likes to wear evening clothes. He enjoys all his wife's friends. His private secretary is a man. He refuses to discuss his wife's age. And he has hardening of the arteries.

Q. "Did you say no dog ever gets bored?"

A. Quoted an authority who said that, true. But a kindly client disputed the claim. So I checked out a sampling of veterinarians on the matter, and they were divided evenly. Proof that a dog does or does not get bored is pretty hard to come by.

OPEC Battered, But Still In Control

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — One night midway through last month's meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, a group of Venezuelan delegates, perhaps too deeply into a liquid not related to oil, sat in a bar and shouted "Viva OPEC. Viva OPEC."

Their enthusiasm over the cartel's viability was not unwarranted, for even though it emerged from the three-day meeting somewhat battered, its power to control world oil prices remains virtually unshaken.

In fact, it is possible that the world needs OPEC more than OPEC's members need it, for the compromise on prices the organization arrived at last week might not have happened in a weak organization because radical oil-producing countries would have been free to drive prices up as high as they wanted in this time of tight oil supply.

"In a scarcity situation, the sky's the limit," said one OPEC oil minister who asked not to be identified. "We could have made a killing, but we have to live together."

Even so, the price rise approved by OPEC was the largest since the quadrupling of prices during the 1973-74 Arab oil embargo. The oil ministers approved a rise in OPEC's base price to $18 a barrel from $14.55, permitted a surcharge of $2 a barrel if individual members desire it and allowed traditional premiums for higher-quality oil to take the price as high as $23.50 a barrel.

The new price structure is "confusing," admits Saudi Arabia Oil Minister Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, but there will be no confusion to Americans when they pull up to the gas pump or sit down to pay heating bills — prices of gasoline and heating oil will rise nearly five cents a gallon as a result of the OPEC price hike

The higher cost of petroleum is expected to slow economic growth and exacerbate inflation around the world. But the United States will be affected less than most other nations because about half of its oil needs are met from domestic consumption.

The OPEC base price rose 24 per cent July 1 as a result of last week's meeting — Saudi Arabia began charging $18 from June 1 — and it has risen 42 per cent since the end of last year. But the actual rise in oil prices is not quite so steep.

The series of surcharges imposed by most OPEC nations this spring boosted the average price to $17.50 a barrel. Analysts expect the new average to be about $20, an increase of $2.50 a barrel despite the $3.45 increase in the base price.

Nevertheless, Alfred Kahn, Washington's chief inflation fighter, called the price hike "catastrophic," saying it would hasten and deepend a recession.

But OPEC officials disagree with Kahn's interpretation. "You will definitely have a recession in the United States, not because of the price of oil but because of the financial measures adopted late last year," said Yamani, who added that the danger was not so much higher oil prices as continued high consumption of expensive oil.

"Either you cut consumption by your own will or because of the economic effects of a recession," he said.

And Ali Khalifa Al-Sabah, oil minister of Kuwait, said the size of the increase was a warning to consuming countries to cut back. "This is not a full shock, but hopefully this will indicate to the world that it will have to consume less," he said. "The agreement we have reached is a bare minimum."

OPEC's preoccupation with reductions in consumption stem from two factors: a wish to save oil now to sell later at higher prices, and fear that a world recession would seriously damage OPEC financial interests, particularly holdings in U.S. dollars, the currency OPEC does business in.

Part of the reasons behind OPEC's recent run-up in oil prices is a belief that the erosion of the dollar has cut OPEC revenue in real terms from several years ago. Even Yamani, OPEC's most moderate member, believes that oil prices should really be as much as $25 dollars a barrl, sources say

Despite that belief, Yamani's fear of economic damage caused him to hold out at the OPEC meeting for an increase smaller than that desired by the cartel's other 12 members, a position that led to an impasse at what some members had expected would be a rather noncontentious meeting.

Sources say Yamani was alone in his position. Other moderates, like Qatar and the United Arab Emirates, were willing to go to $19 or $20 a barrel, while the cartel's price hawks were seeking a price several dollars higher. Libya, whose price of $21.31 a barrel has been OPEC's highest lately, sought a $27 a barrel charge. And Iran, Iraq, Algeria and Nigeria proposed prices ranging from $23 to $26.

Yamani, reportedly under pressure from American officials to hold down the increase, told delegates that he would rather leave the price structure alone than compromise on an excessive charge. He said his limit was $18 a barrel.

Libyan Oil Minister Ezzedin Ali Mabruk told Yamani and the 11 other ministers, "twentry-four dollars is my rock bottom price," according to a source.

The deadlock was broken by Kuwait's Khalifa. He proposed a package of an $18 base, a $2 maximum surcharge and a ceiling of $23.50, which includes all premiums charged on higher-quality crude. The compromise was accepted.

Yamani had threatened to increase Saudi production if OPEC adopted a price he felt was too high. That additional supply of oil would have eased the present shortage and caused prices to drop, regardless of an official price.

Prices were not the only issue discussed at the Swiss meeting. The oil ministers proposed an $800 million increase in the amount of foreign aid to poor nations, which would triple the size of the program.

OPEC aid is not entirely altruistic. It serves as a subsidy that makes high oil prices more palatable the underdeveloped nations.

The ministers plan to meet again in December in Venezuela, unless an earlier meeting is forced by changed circumstances in the world's petroleum picture, such as the Islamic revolution in Iran last winter altered the oil supply by stopping Iran's production of crude.

Narcotics Raid, Arson, Assault Keep Lubbock Police Occupied

Lubbock police said they confiscated laboratory equipment and chemicals that might have produced an estimated $250,000 in amphetamines when they raided an abandoned building just outside the city Wednesday.

Det. Sgt. Rivie Garrett said the police received an anyonomous call at 8 a.m. concerning a "speed" factory.

Garrett said it appeared whoever was operating the laboratory was in the process of moving it. But police still found the lab equipment and chemicals that they suspected might be the ingredients for making amphetamines.

Police are investigating possible subjects in connection with the raid and have turned over the confiscated chemicals to the Texas Tech chemistry department for analysis. Tech officials reported in June that chemicals used in making amphetamines had been stolen from a chemistry lab.

Garrett said the owner of the building was unaware of the equipment found there.

A Lubbock man charged with the murder of a man in Houston on June 13 turned himself in to Lubbock police Wednesday morning.

Aviana Neil Jester, 25, of 105 Ave U. walked into the station at 7 a.m. Det. J.R. Ashmore said he called Jester's mother Tuesday and advised her to tell her son that the Lubbock police had a warrant from Houston for his arrest and that if he did not surrender himself by 9 a.m. Wednesday the police would begin hunting him.

Jester was charged with murder in connection with the stabbing death of David Murrell Cowick, 23, of Houston, who was killed after he confronted a group of five men and two women in front of a Houston club because they had been using obscene language in front of his girl friend, said Houston Det. Dan McAnulty.

The group turned on Cowick, and one of them stabbed him 12 times, said McAnulty, who was in Lubbock last week investigating the murder.

Ashmore said Jester will be held in the Lubbock County jail until he is picked up by Houston police. His bond was set at $10,000 by a 208th District Court Judge in Houston.

Police arrested males 27 and 17 years old early Wednesday as suspects in an aggravated assault on a Lubbock man.

The series of incidents began at 2:15 a.m. Wednesday, when police arrived at 2000 Ninth St. to find John M. Moscri, 21, of 2014 8th St. bleeding from the right leg.

The victim told police he and three other persons were in the 2000th block of Ninth Street when they were shot at from a car containing four Mexican-American males.

Moscri said that after the shot was fired he began running after the car, described as a 1970 Buick Electra.

The victim said that when he got within three feet of the car one of the doors was opened and he heard "a loud boom."

When Moscri was taken to the emergency room at Methodist Hospital, doctors there said the victim might have been stabbed instead of shot. Police also found a black folding knife in the street near where the offense occurred.

But the three witnesses who were with Moscri told police they heard gunfire.

The two men thought to be suspects in the assault were arrested a few minutes later when an officer spotted a car fitting the description given by the victim and witnesses.

The officer approached the car, parked in the 2400 block of Third Place, and found two men inside.

Police said both appeared drunk. They were arrested when the officer discovered that one was wanted on several traffic violation warrants and the other was sought on two buglary warrants.

One of the men also was arrested on a charge of retaliation when he threatened to kill the witnesses who identified him as a suspect in the assault.

Both men were taken to the county jail.

Police are searching for suspects who set fire to an apartment house early Wednesday morning.

Fire department units were called to 2301 10th St. about 3:01 a.m. Firemen quickly extinguished the fire, and the fire marshal said it appeared that someone had poured gas on the second floor lobby in front of an apartment.

Police said a 1970 Pontiac that belonged to the resident of the apartment also was set on fire and heavily damaged. Police said gas was poured in the back seat of the car. A gallon jug half full of gasoline was found in the front seat of the car.

No one was injured in the fire, and damage to the apartments was estimated at $1,000.

Woman Writer Of Romantic Novels Dies

NEW YORK (AP) — Helen Van Slyke, whose best-selling romantic novels championed the middle-aged woman, is dead at age 59.

Mrs. Van Slyke died Tuesday night at New York Hospital after a brief illness. She had homes in New York City and Key Largo, Fla.

NBC-TV recently broadcast a mini series based on her 1976 book "The Best Place to Be," starring Mildred Natwick, Donna Reed and Efrem Zimbalist Jr. It was the second-rated program the week of June 3.

Three weeks ago, Mrs. Van Slyke delivered the completed manuscript of her ninth book, "No Love Lost," to her new publishers, Bantam Books and J.P. Lippincott and Co. It will be published next year.

More than six million copies of her eight books have been sold since she debuted as an author in 1971 with "The Rich and the Righteous."

Her eighth novel, "A Necessary Woman," was published in hardcover by Doubleday in April and has been on The New York Times bestseller list for the past seven weeks.

Mrs. Van Slyke became fashion editor of the Washington Star at the age of 18, the youngest editor of a women's page on a major American newspaper. Later, she spent 15 years as beauty editor of Glamour magazine.

She left the magazine field to become an executive of Bendel's department store in New York, and later was vice president of the international advertising agency of Norman, Craig and Kummel.

After serving as president of the House of Fragrance division of Genesco, she was a vice president at Helena Rubinstein when in 1970 Doubleday editor Larry Ashmead encouraged her to write her first novel.

She devoted the rest of her life to writing fiction, centering around middle-aged, independent heroines, who came to terms with life after a series of intricately plotted confrontations with husbands, lovers, relatives and friends.

In 1973, her "The Heart Listens" established her as a bestselling author in both the hardcover and paperback field.

Mrs. Van Slyke was divorced from her husband 35 years ago. She is survived by her mother, Lenore Lyon of Washington, D.C.

DOCTOR FACES TRIAL

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald, the former Army doctor accused of murdering his wife and two daughters at Fort Bragg in 1970, will go on trial in U.S. District Court July 16. MacDonald, now director of emergency services at St. Mary's Medical Center in Long Beach, Calif., told authorities that his wife, Collette, and two daughters were killed by a band of hippie intruders.

Sam Sheppard's Wife Slain 25 Years Ago

BAY VILLAGE, Ohio (AP) — Dr. Samuel Sheppard once described July 4, 1954, as "the day I died."

Sheppard, an osteopath often referred to as Dr. Sam, actually died in a Columbus suburb on April 6, 1970, of liver failure.

The press coverage of Sheppard's trial for the murder of his pregnant wife resulted in a June 6, 1966, order by the U.S. Supreme Court for a new trial. The court's ruling cited extensive publicity, "bedlam" and a "carnival atmosphere" at the trial.

It was 25 years ago this week that Sheppard's life as a successful young doctor ended abruptly when he called his neighbor, the mayor of this affluent Cleveland suburb, to tell him, "I think they've killed Marilyn."

Marilyn Sheppard, 31 and four months pregnant, had suffered about 35 blows, including 27 to her head, from what police said was a blunt instrument. The murder weapon was never found.

Sheppard repeatedly told a story of how he heard a cry, ran upstairs to a bedroom and saw a "bushy-haired" figure who hit him from behind. He said he was knocked unconscious again outside the house when he chased the intruder.

When he came to, he said, he found his wife dead.

From then on, Sheppard's life as he knew it ended. The media seized upon the gruesome details of the murder. A front-page editorial in the Cleveland Press entitled "Somebody's Getting Away With Murder" demanded Sheppard's arrest.

The press swarmed to the trials that began after Sheppard's July 31 arrest on charges of first-degree murder.

On Dec. 21, 1954, a jury found Sheppard guilty of second-degree murder after five days of deliberation. It was the longest trial in Cleveland history. Sheppard was given a life sentence.

Sheppard's conviction began a 12-year odyssey through the courts. Appeals were filed and lost, but July 16, 1964, Sheppard was released from prison on $10,000 bond. U.S. District Judge Carl Weinman ruled that the 1954 trial had been a mockery of justice because of the publicity that surrounded the case. The U.S. Supreme Court later upheld that ruling.

Two days later, Sheppard married a West German divorcee, Arianne Tebbenjohanns, who met the convicted doctor through letters.

At his second trial, Sheppard was represented by Boston attorney F. Lee Bailey. On Nov. 16, 1966, Sheppard was found innocent.

Sheppard's life, however, never returned to normal. He and Arianne were divorced in 1969, and several wrongful-death suits forced him out of his medical practice and into a brief career as a professional wrestler. He married a third time shortly before his death in 1970 at 46.

Woman Wounded In Snyder Shooting

A-J Correspondent

SNYDER — An apparent domestic quarrel here about 4 a.m. Wednesday ended with the shooting of a 23-year-old woman and the arrest of the victim's alleged assailant.

Police said Donna Lee Byrom of Snyder was shot once in the stomach at her apartment. She was taken to Cogdell Memorial Hospital where she was listed in serious condition late Wednesday.

A man was taken into custody at the scene and a rifle was confiscated, according to police. The suspect remained in the Scurry County Jail late Wednesday.

GACY BACK IN JAIL

CHICAGO (AP) — John Wayne Gacy Jr., charged with the murders of 33 young men and boys, is back in jail after a week's hospitalization for angina pectoris, a heart condition. Nebraska Independent Truckers Join Back-To-Work Movement

By The Associated Press

Independent truckers in Nebraska joined the growing nationwide back-to-work movement Wednesday, but drivers in Maryland said they would continue their protest over high fuel prices and regulations.

Meanwhile, a leader of the protest announced plans for a meeting in St. Louis on Saturday. Bill Hill, spokesman for the Independent Truckers Unity Coalition said many members had asked for the gathering in light of reports that the strike "is weakening in many areas of the country."

Hill urged the owner-operators to continue the 3-week-old strike, but admitted there are widespread reports of independent truckers returning to the highways.

In advance of the Independence Day holiday, perishables such as cherries from Washington and watermelons from Florida moved freely to markets. And the Interstate Commerce Commission said Tuesday it expected a free flow of traffic after the holiday and weekend.

Terry Russell, a spokesman for the Nebraska truckers, said the protests and strike had been frustrated by "the finance company knocking on one door and the customers knocking on another."

But Bill Campbell, vice president of the Maryland Independent Truckers and Drivers Association, said members of his organization will wait for Gov. Harry Hughes to relax the state's truck load-weight restrictions before returning to the road.

Hill said truckers have made some gains since their protests began, and urged continuation of the action.

"The commitment by the White House to support legislation calling for all states to adopt the uniform 80,000-pound gross weight limit and 60-foot length limit is another advancement," he said, "but its my opinion that the tuckers should definitey stay shut down until the government mandates its adoption by all states.

"I think we can get it now, if we keep the pressure on," he added.

He said the ICC-posted fuel surcharge — set at 7 percent this week — "is a major step forward and does provide relief for increased fuel costs to independent truckers who work for ICC regulated carriers." But Hill said the surcharge should have been set at 10 percent and there have been no concessions to provide fuel-cost relief for truckers who haul produce, fish, grain and other commodities not regulated by the ICC.

Hill also renewed the demand that truckers be given priority fuel allocations, but admitted the Department of Energy had taken steps to provide some relief.

Salinas Deputies Continue Sickout

SALINAS, Calif. (AP) — Sheriff's deputies pressing for higher wages defied a court order and called in sick again Wednesday, leaving Monterey County with reduced protection against violence that has flared during a lettuce strike by farm workes.

On Tuesday, in the first such incident in the Salinas Valley fields in more than two weeks, authorities said pickets hurled rocks at a passing truck, breaking its windshield. Another vehicle was hit by a rock. No arrests were made.

Normally up to 50 deputy sheriffs protect non-strikers while 300 to 400 United Farm Workers union strikers picket.

But Sheriff David "Bud" Cook reported only 15 men on duty Wednesday. He said 23 were on duty Tuesday, including guards and court bailiffs. There were 31 Monday.

The "sickout" by deputies began at midnight Saturday, when the county's contract with the 240-member department expired. A judge issued a restraining order Sunday, but deputies have ignored it.

Only two or three regular deputies were working. The rest of those on duty were trainees, probationary officers, lieutenants, captains, the three assistant sheriffs and the sheriff.

There was no significant harvesting Wednesday in the valley, a lush agricultural region dubbed "The Nation's Lettuce Bowl." Production has been hampered this year by the 4½-month-old farm workers' strike and the independent truckers' dispute.

On Wednesday, authorities were investigating the apparent arson torching of two vehicles at Salinas. The sheriff's office said there was no indicaton the incident was related to the strike.

"We are no longer going to avoid service of the court order," Deputy Ken Bradford, spokesman for the strikers, said. "We are going to man the picket lines and we want 100 percent of the association — including trainees, probationary employees, lieutenants and captains — off the job and on the picket lines."

The county Board of Supervisors Tuesday rejected the depties' latest demand — for a 16 percent pay hike and 14 percent fringe benefit increase in the next 18 months. The county offered 15 percent more pay and 6 percent more in benefits.

"It is the board's intent to enforce the court's restraining order to bring employees back to work," the board said in a written statement thatcalled the strike illegal.

Pay for deputies ranges from $1,164 to $1,437 per month, comparable to salaries paid to police officers of Monterey County cities.

The Monterey County protest was one in a series of recent job actions by California law enforcement employees. In Napa, north of San Francisco, police were back on the job Wednesday after a one-day sickout to protest the release from custody of a man arrested after the city's only police dog was killed.

Police in Santa Monica continued their sickout and sheriff's deputies in San Bernardino County maintained a work slowdown. Spokesmen said the job actions have cut down resonse time on some "routine' calls.

Neither Santa Monica Lt. Ben Gieseke nor San Bernardino Deputy Ron Yarnell was aware of any problem resulting from the work actions, which are to protest stalled contract negotiations.

They join a large group of local government employees in Los Angeles and Orange counties who are unhappy with the progress of contract talks. Stumbling blocks include Proposition 13, President Carter's 7 percent wage increase guideline and the rate of inflation in general.

Explosions Damage Automaker Offices

BILBAO, Spain (AP) — An explosion rocked a display of Citroen, the French auto manufacturer, at Guecho near here at dawn Wednesay, causing heavy damagebut no injuries, police said.

Hours earlier another bomb seriously damaged the Citroen offices in Bilbao, capital of the Basque region, where separatists are fighting for independence. No group has claimed responsibility for the bombings, police said.

The Basque separatist group, ETA, last week threatened to attack French property in Spain and transportation to Spain in retaliation for a French crackdown on ETA operations in France's Basque region, just across the border with Spain. Gunmen believed to be Basques attacked the Paris-Madrid Express train near St. Jean de Luz early Monday, but no one was injured, police said.

In 1963, the city and suburbs of Saigon were declared bubonic-plague areas by public-health authorities and the population of two million was ordered innoculated.

More Vietnamese Refugees Face Return To Sea By Malaysia

KUALA LUMPUR (AP) — Four hundred Vietnmese refugees who eluded the Malaysian naval blockade and landed on the west coast damaged the engine of their wooden boat beyond repair and tried to set the craft afire to avoid being put back to sea, refugee officials say.

Malaysian officials, according to a government policy announced June 18, said they will put the 400 refugees in other boats, probably those abandoned by earlier arrivals, and tow the Vietnamese back out into the South China Sea.

The boat beached late Tuesday night at Kuala Trengganu, 160 miles northeast of here.

The Malaysian navy has towed more than 15,000 refugees out to sea in 80 boats since it announced last month it would accept no more boat people. There already are about 76,000 Vietnamese in camps in Malaysia awaiting resettlement in third countries.

In Canberra, Australia, Wednesday, Dick Clark, the U.S. coordinator for refugee affairs, said if the nations of the world would double the number of refugees they accept — to a total of 250,000 annually — the problem would be solved.

Clark was in Canberra for the meeting of ANZUS, the military alliance of Australia, New Zealand and the United States. ANZUS sources, who asked not to be named, said Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, who is participating is the talks, focused the first day's discussion on the refugee problem.

Earlier this week on the Indonesian island of Bal, Vance pledged the United States would double its refugee quota to 14,000 a year.

"If we can get the numbers doubled to 250,000 per annum, it is a problem tat can be resolved. Clearly we have the ability to do it, the only question is if we have the will to do it," Clark said of the world community.

Meanwhile Wednesday, Malaysian Interior Minister Ghazali Shafie said he would lead the Malaysian delegation to the special July 20 United Nations conference on refugees in Geneva, where he said his government would call for the establishmnt of a giant refugee center in Vietnam.

He said the proposal would call for a facility capable of housing 1.2 million refugees who could be taken out of Vietnam for resettlement without having to make the dangerous boat journey to other Southeast Asian nations.

United Nations officials estimate 30 percent to 40 percent of all refugees who set off from Vietnam in their rickety wooden boats are lost at sea.

Shafie said Malaysia also would recommend camps be set up in the United States, Australia, French territories, China and other nations for housing the estimated 350,000 refugees aleady crowding Malaysia, Thailand, Indonesia.

Ambassador Airs Reason For Debate

MOSCOW (AP) — U.S. Ambassador Malcolm Toon told Soviet television viewers Wednesday the impending Senate debate of the SALT II treaty is "fundamental to our political system."

Speaking Russian in his traditional July 4 address, Toon said senators who oppose the treaty limiting strategic nuclear arms "are not dishonorable men, and although the debate will be lengthy and perhaps at times heated ... (it) will not be directed against the Soviet Union."

In Crimean city of Yalta, Senate Majority leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., met with Soviet vacationing President Leonid I. Brezhnev, also about "the process of ratification in the Senate."

The Soviets have reacted firmly against the idea the Senate might try to amend the pact, which was signed June 18 in Vienna by Brezhnev and President Carter. Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko said amendments would mean the "end of negotiations."

Young Russian Lovers Flout Soviet Convention

MOSOW (AP) — Alona and Mikhail e young, in love and living together. t for two years now, they have been eaking Moscow law.

The problem is that they don't want marry.

But lovers like Alona, 25, and Mikail, 23, bravely flout Soviet convention nd violate Moscow's strict residency ws so they can lead the life they want — not one dictated by the state.

Like most young people, they met at party.

"We talked for just five minutes. I uggested we have a drink somewhere lse," Mikhail said in an interview.

"And the next day, we found ourselves in my apartment."

That was two years ago. They have been together ever since.

"We're both surprised that we're still doing it," Alona said.

Because of Moscow's acute housing shortage, they must live with Mikhail's parents in a four-room apartment. But Alona is officialy registered at her mother's apartment across town, and can't change her residency legally unless she marries Mikhail.

It's not legal that I'm living here," said Alona, motioning to the sparsely furnished, dimly lit living room. If authorities wanted to, "they could make trouble for me," she added.

Two months ago, a Soviet policeman showed up at Alona's official residence demanding to see her passport. Luckily, Alona was visiting her mother at the time, but the incident was a nasty one.

"He was yelling and shouting dirty words," Alona recalled. "I'm very nervous now."

Their situation is not typical of most Russian young people, who submit to parental pressure to marry early — many before they are 23 years old. But as the Soviet divorce rate continues to climb — one in every three marriages breaks up — authorities are now counselling lovers to get to know each other better.

Many couples are lovers before they are wed and, Alona and Mikhail maintain, would even live together if the problem of apartments and frowns by their elders did not scare them away.

Recent studies bear this out. A survey published in the journal Sociological Research asked 300 students, aged 14 to 16, whether teen-agers should have sex before they are married.

The vast majority, 71.8 percent, saw almost nothing wrong with premarital sex, especially if the couple was in love. Only 15.6 percent answered, "Never," and the rest, 12.6 percent, did not respond or said they had never though about the question.

The reasons Alona and Mikhail don't marry mirror those of their Western counterparts. Alona is the most adamant.

"I was married before, and I had a very complicated divorce," she said, recalling her wedding at age 17. "Then I thought, never, never in my life will I do that again

"It may sound strange, but I take marriage too seriously."

Mikhail has tried to talk Alona into marrying him, but now agrees it's better if they just live together. They did apply to marry last year — but both of them got last-minute cold feet.

Almost all of their friends are married, except for a colleague of Mikhail who has been living with his girlfriend for the past year.

Alona and Mikhail don't hide the fact that they are living together illegally, but they don't publicize it, either.

Meeting someone for the first time, Alona usually refers to Mikhail as her "husband," without going into the details.

"It's too complicated to explain the whole situation. People would be shocked, at first," Alona said.

"I call him my husband because I wash his socks, cook his food, and everything. And we are together all the time. We just didn't have a wedding."

Many of the problems they encounter in Soviet society are petty but annoying. Because their Soviet internal passports do not carry the special stamp that shows they are married, Alona and Mikhail cannot stay together when visiting a hotel.

And it bothers Alona that her mother refuses to approve of her unorthodox living arrangement. Mikhail's parents are more supportive, but his father, too, would like to see them wed.

"He thinks I could lose my Alona," Mikhail said, smiling. "That's why he keeps telling me, 'Marry her, marry her!'"

VW-Chrysler Engine Deal In U.S. Seen

BERLIN (AP) — Volkswagen and Chrysler Corp. are considering joining forces to build economical automobile engines in the United States, VW general manager Toni Schmuecker said Wednesday.

Schmuecker, speaking at the annual shareholders' meeting, also did not rule out a possible diesel engine deal with the Ford Motor Co.

"We continuously speak with Chrysler about the egine project. Peraps we will start a joint engine prodution with Chrysler in the United States one day — I say perhaps."

Both Volkswagen and Chrysler have denied reports published by a U.S. trade newspaper last month that VW might take over Chrysler Corp. Robert Lienert, editor of Automotive News, said the Securities and Exchange Commission had questioned him about his sources for the story but that he had not named them.

The most likely reason for an SEC investigation would be to discover if the takeover rumors were planted to drive up the price of Chrysler stock.

"Chrysler is in difficulties," Schmuecker told 3,000 shareholders and representatives. "Chrysler is our customer and the customer-supplier relationship is a very clean and tidy one," he said. He referred to Chrysler's 1976 purchase of 300,000 Volkswagen engines and 120,000 manual transmissions, a contract reportedly to be renewed shortly.

"I would like to remind you that we were very glad at the time to get the engine contract from Chrysler. We have rejected takeover rumors and confirm now, too, that we have no such intention," Schmuecker said.

He said research into sales prospects led him to predict a rosy future for economical diesel engines and hinted that Volkswagen engineers were making good progress in improving the economy of gasoline engines.

This would not exclude consultations about cooperation with Chrysler to their mutual advantage, Schmuecker said.

Schmuecker did not rule out future dealings with Chrysler in other fields and in other parts of the world. "But great dimensions are not in the discussion," he said.

Regarding possible delivery of diesel engines to the Ford Motor Co., Schmuecker said "We are open to any negotiations of the sort ... If Ford should be interested in the diesel engine we shall be ready to talk about it."

Although Volkswagen is to build an engine factory in Mexico, it is contemplating building a second plant in the United States, Schmuecker said. There is a VW plant in Westmoreland, near New Stanton, Pa.

Some 5.7 billion marks — $3.13 billion — the company is to use for investment before 1982 is earmarked for a capacity increase at Volkswagen's Pennsyvania plant and an engine production plant in Mexico.

Schmuecker said capacity at the U.S. plant would be increased from 800 vehicles a day to 1,040 and that the press works in South Charleston would be expanded.

"In addition to this, the construction of an engine production plant — water-cooled four-cylinder engines — in Mexico with an output of 1,600 units a day is also planned," he addd.

A second Volkswagen plant in the United States was "under serious consideration," Schmuecker said. He added that Volkswagen is aiming for 5 percent of the U.S. auto market, an equivalent of about 550,000 units.

High Winds Destroy Blimp

MOUNT PLEASANT, Iowa (AP) — Winds of "phenomenal force" blew Goodyear's $1.5 million Mayflower blimp from its airport moorings as it awaited a Fourth of July celebration and rolled it 300 yards into a cornfield where it came to rest in ruins.

On Wednesday, the field was still strewn with broken colored lights — part of a message board that was to have provided Mount Pleasant residents wih a light show.

Pilot Ron Bell termed the airship a "total loss" after Tuesday night's accident and said it would take at least 90 days to build a new one. The Miami-based blimp had been rebuilt after a similar storm destroyed it last August in Augusta, Ga. It is one of four Goodyear blimps, and one of three in the United States.

Bell, who also is public relations manager for the Mayflower, said that after the blimp was blown from its mast at the Mount Pleasant Airport, a safety valve released helium in order to keep the airship on the ground.

The Mayflower destroyed about four acres of corn when it landed in the field.

The blimp had arrived in Friday in Mount Pleasant, where the company has a plant.

A plane at the airport also was overturned during the storm and a nearby barn was blown down.

"We will take all the parts off it — the fins, the gondola and the envelope (the huge bag that holds the helium) and the landing gear," Bell said.

Bell said one crew member usually stays with the airship around the clock, but when the crew was warned about the severe weather, another member went to the site.

Bell said that at about 11 p.m., winds of "phenomenal force" began to rock the airship. The mooring poles usually can withstand winds of up to 65 knots, or about 75 mph. He said salvageable parts of the craft will be trucked back to Akron, Ohio, and Houston.

Hospitals Taking Desperation Steps To Curb Cost Of Energy

NEW YORK (AP) — Employees of Baptist Hospital of Miami have been queuing up to buy $1-a-gallon gasoline from the hospital's storage tank as a result of the gasoline shortage. And gas problems are just one difficulty facing American hospitals in this energy-short time.

Hospitals are big energy users, and rising costs of fuel and electricity have hit them hard.

At the Miami Hospital, spokeswoman Jo Baxter said the gasoline supplied to employees was that usually used strictly for hospital equipment. But, she said, "with the energy crunch it became a real problem for people to get gas to get to work."

Despite a $3-a-day limit, most of the hospital's 1,900 employees are taking advantage of the hospital's gas. "I've been existing on it," said Mrs. Baxter. "The alternative is four hours in a gas line."

Manning gas pumps is just one of the measures hospitals are using to combat the scarcity of fuel. And everyone who stays in a hospital or pays for health insurance has a stake in the hospitals' efforts.

In the last year, hospitals have endured natural gas cutoffs, fought cutbacks of heating and diesel fuel and studied ways to reduce energy costs in response to a federal incentive program.

Hospital officials insist the quality of health care hasn't suffered. The pain, they say, is in the pocketbook.

"We're like the driver paying 90 cents a gallon — we're trying to be cautious of how much driving we do but we're still driving," says Bill Hennessey of Mercy Hospital in Pittsburgh, head of an energy committee of western Pennsylvania hospitals.

But statistics show the price of health care is rising nearly as fast as energy costs. The American Hospital Association says hospitals paid 270 percent more for energy last year than they paid in 1969, compared to a 246 percent rise in the cost of a hospital stay. Consumer prices went up only 107 percent in this period.

"It's an extremely energy-intensive business," says Marvin Gough, head of the AHA-affiliated Hospital Energy Task Force. Gough said hospitals eat up twice as much energy per bed as the average home. One New York hospital, Columbia-Presbyterian, estimates it uses as much electricity in a year as Norwalk, Conn., a town of 75,000.

Hospitals pay 5.5 percent of their budgets for oil, natural gas and electricity, the AHA says. They also suffer rising costs for drugs, plastic disposable syringes and other oil-based products.

"We've been able to reduce by 20 percent the amount of fuel oil we use at our hospital but the price has gone up per barrel so our saving doesn't appear to be real," said John Quigly, administrator of Massachusetts Soldiers' Home in Chelsea, a Boston suburb.

Sometimes there's no fuel at any price. Some Midwestern hospitals — including St. Luke's Hospital in Kansas City — have had interruptions in natural gas supply and had to use more expensive heating oil.

This happened despite the Natural Gas Policy Act, which went into effect Dec. 1, putting hospitals in the top priority for gas.

Gas is the main energy source for two-thirds of American hospitals, with oil powering almost all the rest.

Nye General Hospital in Tonopah, Nev., and Cape Canaveral Hospital in Cocoa Beach, Fla., were threatened with diesel fuel cutbacks, but distributors yielded to local pressure.

Hospitals now have no special claim to heating and diesel oil because these are not govered by federal allocation rules, although they would be in an emergency.

In the face of these pressures, hospitals have sought any way to cut costs. They've reduced lighting, fine-tuned boilers, added insulation, cut laundry service, reduced air conditioning and heating for offices and have gone back to reusable medical instruments.

In Philadelphia, 59 area hospitals joined in a $1.4 million energy audit designed to turn up ways to save. John McMeekin of Greater Philadelphia Blue Cross, which shared cost of the audit with the federal government, says it produced an immediate 15 percent cut in the hospitals' energy consumption without new equipment.

"The two major aras of savings were control of environmental conditions and boiler room operations," McMekin said.

He said that with expensive investments — things like insulating windows and sophisticatd heat control — hospitals could save another 5 percent.

"There's no question you can get such savings at many hospitals. None of these buildings were designed to save energy because it was inexpensive and readily available years go," said Maxine Savitz, a deputy assistant secretary in the Department of Energy. She administers a $900 million federal program to provide matching funds for improving hospital and school energy effciency. It's part of the National Energy Conservation Policy Act signed last November.

The agency will award the first $300 million in grants next spring. But the program's success depends on whether hospitals can come up with the matching money.

"We feel the health industry will be unwilling or unable to make that kind of capital investment unless there is an early and significant payback," McMeekin said, adding that he hopes the Philadelphia project will demonstrate that kind of payback.

It's a mixed blessing, he said, that the rise in oil costs makes such improvements pay for themselves faster.

"What we're doing is not so much reducing energy costs as moderating the rise in costs. But thank God we can moderate it some or it would be going up even faster," he said.

U.S. Threatened With Embargo

LONDON (AP) — An American lawyer contesting an anti-trust suit filed in California against the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries said Wednesday that Arab oil producers are contemplating another oil embargo against the United States.

The lawyer, Khalid Abdullah Tariq Al Mansour, said in an interview that the suit could also anger OPEC producers into withdrawing more than $300 billion invested in U.S. Treasury notes.

"The degree of understanding between OPEC countries and the West is getting very, very low," Al Mansour told The Associated Press in London following his meeting with OPEC representatives at last week's price-setting meeting in Geneva.

"If there is a judgment against them (OPEC), they say they will definitely withdraw the funds and place at least a partial embargo on the United States," he said.

Al Mansour, of the San Francisco law firm Holmes and Warden, said he is representing OPEC interests informally and that all 13 OPEC countries, including Saudi Arabia, believe the suit is illegal and have decided not to respond to it.

The suit was filed in U.S District Court, Los Angeles, on Dec. 29, 1978 by the Internationl Associaion of Machinists and Aerospace Workers. The union which has 900,000 members, accuses OPEC of illegal price-fixing and seeks at least $1 billion in damages.

Three cities, Cleveland, Baltimore and Los Angeles, are planning to join the suit as co-plaintiffs. If they win the case, it could open the floodgates to claims against OPEC.

Al Mansour, 43, a native of Pittsburgh, said he filed a legal brief in the Los Angeles federal court June 18 asking that the case be dismissed on the grounds that the union members are not direct purchasers of oil from OPEC which sells its products to the major oil companies, and because OPEC nations have sovereign immunity.

He said the brief was filed in the name of "Concerned Black Americans in Support of Africa and the Middle East," a group of 100,000 blacks formed in 1962. They seek to counter what they call OPEC's bad image in the United States.

"We're concerned with the general escalation of anti-OPEC feeling, epitomized in the recent declaration at the Tokyo summit. OPEC gets the blame for everything — inflation, recession and unemployment — because it's convenient for politicians."

He said he petitioned State Departmet lawyer Stuart Benson June 25 to intervene in the case and have the suit dismissed.

The case comes to a hearing Aug. 20 and if the OPEC nations are judged in default because of a lack of response, the damage claim could be granted without legal argument. If the OPEC countries feel that is going to happen, said Al Mansour, they would pull out their money and cut back on oil production.

Thermostat Order May Cause Grumbling

By United Press International

At New York's chic Studio 54 disco, they're counting on night air to cool the dancers once President Carter orders thermostats in commercial buildings set no cooler than 78 degrees.

At Exxon's corporate headquarters in steamy Houston, thermostat settings already range up to 77 and the 4,500 employees are encouraged to wear "cool,comfortable clothing appropriate to the work location."

At the big First National Bank of Chicago, a spokeswoman fretted over how to change 1,500 thermostats in a system so sensitive it maintains a year-around temperature of 74 and even measures the "micro climate" of window areas.

Carter is expected to announce the thermostat order later this week — a measure that will affect the neighborhood pizza parlor, movie theater and beauty shop as well as big businesses.

White House officials indicated the order will require most commercial and public buildings to set thermostats no lower than 78 in summer and no higher than 65 in winter.

Federal buildings still must maintain an 80-degree setting in summer.

The order will not affect private homes and there are exemptions for hospitals, some museums, elementary schools and various other institutions. Violators could be fined up to $10,000 a day.

A UPI spot check turned up few who planned to flout the order, but there was some grumbling.

A spokesman for McDonalds fast food chain said the company had hoped it could save energy some other way — and told the government so.

"There are problems in the dining area vis-a-vis the kitchen area," the spokesman said. "In some cases, you have humidity problems as well."

Studio 54, however, does not even open until 10 p.m. and general manager Michael Overington said, "At that time, you don't need that much (air conditioning). It's cooler outside and we can bring the air in from outside with the vents."

The order may cause discomfort under the hair dryers of beauty shops, but Elizabeth Arden, with 13 salons nationwide, said it will obey the rules.

"Whoever was sitting under the dryer would probably be as understanding as we would," a spokeswoman said. "Maybe we'll have to get some fans."

IBM, the computer giant, said it has kept summer thermostats at 78 since 1973 with few complaints. "People still wear shirts and ties and jackets," a spokesma said, "and women wear dresses or pants suits."

Many supermarkets will have some adjusting to do

A spokesman at Safeway's Oakland, Calif., corporate headquarters said most Safeway stores are using a "high energy efficient cycle" that will use more fuel at 78 or 80 than at lower settings.

The manager at a Safeway in Virginia said he was told to keep his thermostat at 68.

Some places said they will have to maintain a cool atmosphere — for machines, not people.

Bob Schierholz, supervisor of Illinois state buildings and grounds in Springfield, said rooms with computers must be kept between 68 and 70 degrees "or the equipment will malfunction."

And a spokesman for Bank of America in San Francisco said the company found when it dialed up to 78 several years ago that its computers, too, require a cooler atnosphere.

"We had to do some selective setting of lower temperatures to protect this equipment," he said.

Vietnam Vets' Memorial Fund Founder Finds Americans Aloof

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Five weeks after he set out to raise $1 million for a national memorial to Vietnam veterans, Jan Scruggs has collected exactly $144.

But Scruggs is more determined than ever to reach his goal.

Scruggs, who wants to reconcile a nation split by the long and unpopular war and recognize those who fought in it, said almost with an air of surprise that "it's not as easy as I once thought to raise a million dollars."

"But we're getting more organizations to help and now we are tax deductible," he said.

Founder and president of the Vietnam Veteran Memorial Fund, he said he could reach his goal if only one-tenth of those who served in Vietnam would contribute $5 each.

"I'm not shy about asking anyone to do anything to help us reunify the country and to remember the Americans who gave their lives in Vietnam," Scruggs said.

He'd also like an accounting firm to volunteer to keep track of contributions.

Scruggs hopes to establish a half-acre park near Washington, with a black marble obelisk bearing in gold the names of those who died in Vietnam. He also wants to depend solely on private contributions.

"We do not want one penny from any organization, any business or the U.S. government," he said.

"Having the American people finance this memorial will in effect be a delayed victory parade ... a permanent reminder of how much a nation, however belatedly, cared for its sons and daughters who served during a most difficult and dangerous time."

Scruggs, who was wounded in Vietnam, said he returned home to jeers and a public ambivalence that made it difficult for many Vietnam veterans to justify their participation in an unpopular war.

He said his research shows that about one-third of the veterans thought they suffered psychological problems because of the war and that public reaction made their readjustment even more difficult.

He said everyone should be able to support his project regardless of their attitude toward the war because the theme is recognition and reconciliation.

The bipartisan project has the endorsement of Sens. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., Gary Hart, D-Col., and John Warner, R-Va.

Scruggs and Domenici also want Congress to incorporate into the national park system the Peace and Brotherhood Chapel, built in New Mexico by the father of a Vietnam veteran. Scruggs said the chapel inspired his suggestion for a national memorial.

"How can they say no when we're trying to do something good for our country and we're not asking a penny from Congress?" he asked.

Scruggs said contributions may be sent to Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund, P.O. Box 50096, Washington, D.C. 20004.

Home Purchasers Offered Advice

WASHINGTON (AP) — Summer is often a season for buying and selling a home, and here are some tHoughts on the process from the federal Office of Conumer Affairs:

"Real estate brokers are specialists who offer specific services concerning the purchase and sale of a home. However, an increasing number of sellers are marketing homes directly without a broker.

"Brokers can act as an information clearing house for a local area. A good broker can provide general information about a community and specifics about schools, shopping and taxes.

"All brokerage commissions are flexible and in nearly all cases brokerage fees are paid by the seller.

"Not only are fees flexible but the type of listing agreement, its length, and other factors are also flexible. One word of caution — whether you are a buyer or seller remember that clear, written agreements are your best protection in the marketplace. There's an old saying: 'Oral agreements are not worth the paper on which they are written.'

"Be certain you carefully review and thoroughly understand both listing agreements and sales contracts before you sign. It may also be advisable to consult an attorney."

Imported Foods May Carry Pesticides

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A branch of Congress charges in a new report that a large portion of food imports eaten by Americans may contain unsafe residues from pesticides banned in the United States.

The General Accounting Office, the investigative agency of Congress, said the Food and Drug Administration does an inadequate job of keeping food with unsafe residues out of this country.

Even if U.S. tests detect excessive pesticide residues, the unsafe food is likely to be sold and eaten by Americans because the United States allows distribution of imports before tests are completed.

The report said importers are not penalized for marketing adulterated foods if they make a reasonable effort to recall the food.

Brazil, Ecuador and other Central American banana-producing nations apply benomyl — a pesticide suspected of causing cancer, birth defects and gene mutations — to bananas 12 to 20 times a year, it said.

"Pesticide use patterns in foreign countries clearly indicates that a large portion of food imported into the United States may in fact contain unsafe pesticide residues," the report said.

It charged that some foreign nations "carelessly or excessively" use unsafe pesticides.

Neither the FDA nor the State Department has much information on pesticide use by foreign nations, the report said. As a result, the government has little idea which pesticides to test for when inspecting imports.

Under U.S. law, any pesticide residue on food is regarded as unsafe unless exceptions are made for specific minute amounts of residues.

The report said FDA tests of imports detect residues of only 90 of the 200 pesticides of which minute amounts are allowed by the United States. It said tests cannot assure that food does not contain residues for which no tolerance is allowed.

For example, Brazil, Colombia, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Guatemala and Mexico allow 94 pesticides on coffee. U.S. law allows no food residues for 78 of the pesticides. But 64 of the 94 are not even detectable with FDA tests.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare said it is working to improve FDA's monitoring of food imports, but said the GAO did not substantiate its contention that foreign nations carelessly use pesticides.

HEW said the incidence of illegal pesticide residues in imported food is very low and Americans' intake of pesticides from all food is also very low.

Nuclear Buildup Termed Even

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Les Aspin said Wednesday that contrary to the claims of SALT critics and MX missile advocates, U.S. nuclear force development has matched the Soviets' in the past decade.

"Our improvements have not been as showy but have been just as effective," the Wisconsin Democrat said in an 18-page study.

"The Soviets spend more money and build brand new systems," he said. "We spend much less and improve on existing systems. But the result has been about the same."

For example, Aspin said, U.S. warheads and bombs have increased from 3,950 in 1969 to 9,200 now, while the Soviets' arsenal has grown from 1,659 to 5,100.

"Just the growth in the U.S. arsenal is larger than the total size of the Soviet strategic force today," said Aspin, a member of the House Armed Services Committee. "This can hardly be called unilateral restraint."

Basque Separatists Unleash Bombings

MADRID (AP) — Basque separatists spread terror through Spain Wednesday, bombing two tourist hotels in the south and three agencies of a French automaker in the northern Basque country. The night before, Basque-speaking gunmen shot a legislator outside his home in Madrid.

Nobody was reported hurt in the bomb blast because there was warning beforehand. But hotel-keepers said fear was ruining business, and the governent ordered extra plainclothes police to the Mediterranean coast to reassure the tourists, who are Spain's No. 1 revenue producer.

Police Protection

The government also ordered police protection for members of a parliamentary commission on Basque autonomy after four gunmen ambushed and seriously wounded Gabriel Cisneros, a 38-year-old commission member, Tuesday night.

Cisneros, who is press spokesman for Premier Adolfo Suarez' Center Party, had been parking his car outsie his apartment about 11 p.m. when attacked. He was shot in the stomach as he ran yelling for help.

Suarez told rporters that witnesses heard the gunmen shout the Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) slogan as they escaped.

ETA, which wants independence for the Basque provinces near the French border in the north, has waged a terror campaign that has taken 43 lives this year. Cisneros was the first politician to be attacked.

A chief object of the terror campaign has been tourism, and hotel operators were reporting business at half capacity on Wednesday.

On Wednesday, hundreds of sun-seekers — mostly Scandinavians, Britsh, French and Germans — had to spend hours on roads outside their hotels after being evacuated in bathing suits.

In sunny Fuengirola on the Mediterranean coast 50 miles northeast of Gibraltar, a bomb ripped into the first floor of an expensive beach hotel, "Las Palmeras," causing considerable damage. But police had been warned six hours before, and had evacuated all hotels in the town.

The La Primides Hotel at Fuengirola also reported a bomb threat and said an American tourist group checked out after learning of it.

A second bomb exploded at the goverment-operated National Inn up the coast at Torremolinos. That building, too, had been evacuated.

In the violence-troubled Basque region, bombers hit three agencies of the French automaker Citron in three towns, but no one was hurt.

The bombing in Fuengirola was the second there in a week and came after ETA warned foreigners it would bomb holiday areas and French transport firms operating in Spain.

Tourism was reported up 14 per cent in the first five months of the year —before the anti-tourism campaign. Now, some beaches are reported deserted at the height of the season, and cancellations are piling up.

The campaign is causing some concern in Pamplona, the city whose annual eight-day festival of drinking, dancing and bull-running was popularized by author Ernest Hemingway. This year it begins Friday.

Last year, political rioting closed the festival, but this year both the political branch of the leftist ETA and the ultra-right "New Force" party in Pamplona say they won't try to disrupt it.

Nevertheless, there are fears of new violence because Pamplona is the capital of the province of Navarre, which is about equally divided between Basque sympathizers and supporters of the Madrid government, and ETA has placed emphasis in Navarre in its independence campaign.

Bell Admits Illegal FBI Mail Scrutiny

NEWARK, N.J.(AP) — Attorney General Griffin Bell says he has personally authorized continued scrutiny of mail sent to some "foreign powers" and secret agents, despite a federal judge's ruling that the practice is unconstitutional.

Bell said in court papers filed Tuesday that "executive privilege" prevented the FBI and the Postal Service from complying with a court request that they make public any "mail covers" used to protect the national security.

U.S. District Judge Lawrence A. Whipple ruled in November that it was unconstitutional to permit the use of national security mail covers, which allow postal inspectors to jot down the return address and other information appearing on mail sent to suspect organizations or persons. The ruling did not affect criminal mail covers.

The Justice Department however, conceded before Whipple last week that it had been continuing to employ mail covers in foreign counter-intelligence investigations to keep track of "hostile foces" operating against the United States.

After Whipple ordered a deposition from a postal official in Washingon to "apprise this court of what's going on," Bell confirmed in court papers filed Tuesday that he personally had approved a number of mail covers since the judge's ruling.

Bell maintained that disclosure of the "subject and purposes of the mail covers would reveal and thus prejudice current and continuing foreign-counterintelligence investigations."

Bell said that although mail sent to some U.S. citizens and resident aliens is being scrutinized, "there is information about each of these persons to indicate that he or she is an agent of a foreign power and is engaged in clandestine intelligence activities."

"Each target is a foreign power or the agent of a foreign power," Bell said.

Whipple is expected to rule in about a month on whether mail covers can be used as an investigative tool.

Bell said that if the names of the persons and countries involved were disclosed it would have a 'prejudicial impact on the conditions of U.S. foreign affairs and on the relations of the United States with other gvernments."

The clash arose in the case of Lori Paton, who was investigated by the FBI seven years ago when she wrote a letter to the Socialist Workers Party as part of a high school class assignment.

Whipple already has ruled that she was illegally investigated, but her American Civil Liberties Union attorney is moving to stop the continued use of mail covers.

PEMEX Head Takes Charge Of Gulf Well

CIUDAD DEL CARMEN, Mexico (UPI) — The head of Mexico's oil monopoly Wednesday took personal control of a nearly hopeless effort to cap a runaway offshore oil well before it becomes the world's worst oil spill.

Petroleos Mexicanos chief Jorge Diaz Serrano, himself an expert in offshore oil wells, went to Carmen Tuesday night to supervise the last-ditch attack on the crippled Ixtoc I Well 42 miles north of the city.

PEMEX said the mouth of the well 153 feet beneath the waves would be stuffed with a mix of gelatin-like chemicals and cement in an attempt to shut off the gusher, but it admitted there was only a "remote possibility" of success.

Ixtoc I has been gushing 30,000 barrels of crude a day into the Gulf of Mexico since it blew out and caught fire June 3 and has spread a 40,000-square mile blanket of reddish brown goo over the area.

PEMEX has said if it cannot cap the well, it will take until early September to drill two wells that would intercept Ixtoc I and divert the flow of the underwater gusher into waiting tanker ships.

But by that time Ixtoc will have leaked 2 million barrels and by far surpassed the current record oil spill — 1.3 million barrels dumped on France's Brittany coast when the tanker Amoco Cadiz broke up in March 1978.

Houston oil disaster expert Paul "Red" Adair and a team of American frogmen two weeks ago managed to turn off a valve at the mouth of the well. But the buildup of pressure blew out the valve again one hour later.

PEMEX has repeatedly said it does not expect any major environmental damages from the oil spill, though many scientists have scoffed at the PEMEX assurances and accused it of trying to hide the extent of the spill.

The scientists warned the spill could become an even bigger disaster after the hurricane season begins in August.

Variety Of Holiday Activities Enjoyed

cake, provided by the First National Bank, was set up at the end of the parade route in front of the Tech book store. A dozen volunteers from the bank cut 30 sheet cakes to serve 2,500 people.

Senior vice preident E.C. Goodman wiped cake icing off his hands and said that Douglass had given him the idea of providing a cake big enough to serve local parade watchers. "It's a blast — everyone is having a great time," he said.

Patriotic speeches and a sing-along followed the cutting of the birthday cake. Rep. Hance told about 200 citizens to reaffirm their faith in America and said that "no other country has been so strong so long."

Longtime Friends Reunited

Longtime residents were reunited with old friends as well as acquainted with some new faces at the Old Settler's Reunion held at the University Center Ballroom at noon.

The reunion, which honored Lubbock residents from as far back as 1902, was open to the public.

Mrs. George Long said she "attended the reunion on my husband's longevity who entered Tech as a freshman in 1928." She came to Lubbock in the 1930s.

"I've seen West Texas change from ranches where you traveled through two ruts for the wheels to interstate highways," Mrs. Long said.

Dr. Perry Speros, who is a native of Greece but has lived in Lubbock for three years, attended the settlers reunion because he has friends who were early settlers of the area.

He said several of his friends came up to him and asked if he was going to attend the luncheon. "It's quite a participation," he said.

Dr. Speros said he had taken his 8-year-old daughter to the parade. "Did you see those 60-year-old children riding motorcycles?" he laughed.

Annual Affair Planned

"It's definitely going to be an annual affair," said J.D. Hufstedler, a memer of the reunion committee and past organizer of the event.

He said that the Bicentennial reunion was "by far the most outstanding" but that the committee was trying to promote as big a reunion as possible.

Citizens who had lived in the area for more than 25 years were recognized.

Local musicians entertained crowds from the steps of the historic homes, while Docent Guild members organized sack races, horseshoe throwing, washer pitching and watermelon seed-spitting contests.

Nicholson touched on everything from old time party lines to inflation. "Inflation is eating our sack lunch," he said. "In our family, if we make ends meet, we're way ahead."

Beth Ritchie, Docent Guild member, said more than 2,000 people had entered the Ranching Heritage Center by 7 p.m. Wednesday and she expected the rest of the crowd to arrive before 8 p.m. in spite of the rain clouds forming overhead.

Elsewhere in the city, parks and public playgrounds were full of citizens enjoying the Fourth of July holiday.

Tech Terrace Park was inhabited by a few frisbee throwers and sunbathers while neighboring Wagner Park had standing room only conditions. Several groups of 20 to 25 people inhabited the tennis courts and volleyball courts.

Coach Langston Williams, manager of the K.M Pool, said attendance was above average Wednesday in spite of a mid-afternoon thunderstorm.

"We had a good day going until the rain came," he said. More than 300 swimmers had entered the pool area at 6 p.m., "and they are still coming," Williams said.

Afghan Rebels Take Key City From Regime

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (UPI) — Afghan rebels have overrun a military stronghold at Gomal Fort and were battling government troops at another strategic point for control of a key province, reports from Afghanistan said Wednesday.

Afghan army helicopers flew into the fort to evaculate some 250 Russian advisers and Communist Party members shortly before the stronghold fell into rebel hands after a 2 1/2 month siege.

The rightist Urdu-language newspaper Nawae Waqt, quoting reports reaching the Pakistan provincial captial f Peshawar, near the border with Afghanistan, said the rebels hoisted their Islamic flag and occupied Gomal Fort last Saturday. The outpost is about 150 miles south of the capital of Kabul.

The next three or four days were considered crucial.

The Moslem rebel are opposed to the atheist socialist policies of Taraki and feel that their tradition and religion are being threatened by the government.

Between 3,000 and 4,000 Russian advisers were believed in Afghanistan to help the embattled Taraki regime, which is using Soviet jet fighters, tanks and arms in the effort to quell the rebellion.

Ohio GOP Leaders Like John Connally

CLEVELAND (AP) — A poll of leaders and members of the Republican Party in Ohio's Cuyahoga County shows support among the rank and file for Ronald Reagan as president; but a preference among party leaders for the candidacy of John B. Connally.

Most of the Republicans polled said they expect President Carter to be renominated next year, but believe overwhelmingly that Massachusetts Sen. Edward M. Kennedy would be the stronger Democratic candidate.

Graduates Of Neonatal Unit Hold Own Independence Day

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

FOUR MONTHS AGO, Lisa Dalton gave birth 12 weeks early to a tiny boy at Methodist Hospital. Doctors told her the child was dead.

Moments later, the infant showed signs of life and was rushed to the neonatal unit at Health Sciences Center Hospital.

Wednesday, Mrs. Dalton joined other parents of about 150 babies who are "graduates" of the hospital's neonatal unit, specially designed for premature infants needing intensive, 24-hour care to help them survive.

It wasn't an ordinary Fourth of July picnic, although many families munched on fried chicken and icy watermelon, but it truly was a celebration of independence. The youngsters' first days of life were spent connected to machines which monitored their health. Today, they are free of complications.

Now Healthy Baby

Jeremy Dalton, the boy who first was thought to be dead, is now a healthy 9 1/2-pound baby. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dalton of Ropesville spent 51 days in the neonatal unit.

Mrs. Dalton spent the first day of his life confused and worried. "The doctors told me the baby was dead," she said.

Then she heard him cry in the delivery room. "I thought it was just a gasp of air still in his lungs," she said, explaining that she still believed he was dead. About an hour later, Mrs. Dalton learned her son was alive and had been taken to Health Sciences' neonatal unit.

"The next morning a social worker (from Health Sciences) brought me a picture of him," she said. It was her first look at her child.

On Jeremy's third day of life, Mrs. Dalton was dismissed from Methodist hospital and went to visit her son.

Mother's Fears Calmed

At first, the machines her son was hooked up to seemed frightening. But she said the confidence of the neonatal staff gave her hope and calmed her fears.

Dr. Michael Blackburn, director of neonatology at Texas Tech University School of Medicine, said sometimes parents are afraid to touch their babies when they are connected to tubes and machinery.

But Blackburn confidently explains the machinery to parents, points to the success rate (infants born at Health Sciences and admitted to neonatal have a less than 1 percent chance of dying) and then hands over the baby, tubes and all, to be cuddled.

The unit is open at any hour to parents who are encouraged to feed, diaper and hold their babies as much as possible. The unit requires one nurse per critical care infant, around the clock.

Even Nurses Surprised

But nurses who once cared for the infants barely recognized some of the children Wednesday, as evidenced by their exclamations of, "That's Stacy? You're kidding!"

Stacy Hunt, born Feb. 1 weighing 1 pound, 12 ounces, is the tiniest baby ever to survive at the hospital. The daughter of Sid and Tammy Hunt of Lubbock stayed in the neonatal unit for 67 days.

At the picnic, Stacy was proudly held by nurse Julie Gross who helped care for her during the long hospital stay.

Mrs. Hunt was all smiles as she noted Stacy has outgrown the doll clothes she once wore, and today weighs just over 10 pounds.

564 Babies Care For

Cindy Irwin, head nurse of the neonatal unit, said 564 babies have been admitted to the unit since it opened, along with the hospital, in February 1978. Naturally the nurses grow fond of the tots, but it's easy to say goodbye to them, she said, because, "We're glad they're getting to go home."

Mothers at the picnic were unanimous in their praise of the staff and facilities and some drove quite a few miles to show off their healthy children to "Dr. B" as some call the friendly Blackburn, who held more kids Wednesday than Santa does during a Christmas stint in a department store.

Holly Best of Coahoma, near Big Spring, brought the Best triplets — Johnathan, Jeremiah and James. She and her husband John had been expecting their first child last year and as Mrs. Best grew larger, she said, "I thought it was going to be a big girl."

Three weeks before delivery, Mrs. Best's doctor in Big Spring realized triplets were on their way. He advised her to go to Health Sciences, known in the region for its neonatal services.

Blackburn advised Mrs. Best to remain in the hospital until the children were born so that immediate care would be available to the infants. She stayed in bed for three weeks and the boys were born April 4, 1978, six weeks premature.

Jeremiah, weighing 4 pounds, 6 ounces, arrived first. He had jaundice and was placed under a special light to cure the problem. Johnathan came second and weighed the same but needed the aid of a respirator to breathe until his lungs matured. James weighed in at 3 pounds, 7 ounces and spent about a month in the hospital to gain weight before going home.

At Wednesday's picnic, tours were offered of the neonatal unit, but most parents declined to visit saying, "I've seen it all I want to."

Nevertheless, they were unanimously grateful for the expensive equipment which gave their youngsters a chance at life.

NEONATAL GRADS — The Best boys were among the 150 youngsters Wednesday wearing bibs proclaiming, "I graduated from Neonatal U." Health Sciences Center Hospital hosted the July 4 picnic for the tots who were once in the intensive care unit. Police Investigating Shooting Of Suspect

By TRAVIS BROWN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The fatal shooting of a suspected auto thief by a Lubbock policeman Wednesday has prompted an investigation of the incident by the police department.

The 22-year-old man was shot and killed by Officer Lupe Garza at about 12:05 a.m. The shooting ended the officer's chase of the man, who was driving a stolen auto.

Garza had followed the suspect's car into an alley between Avenues K and J near 25th Street, said Det. Bill Knox, who investigated the incident.

With both cars stopped in the alley, Garza got out of his vehicle and ordered the man to get out of his.

"No weapon was found that belonged to the dead man," Knox said.

Police declined to comment on the shooting Wednesday. "At this time we have no comment as to whether the officer was justified in shooting," said Capt. Ray Huffman, who is heading the investigation by the department's internal affairs division.

Huffman said the investigation results would be presented to a county grand jury.

Justice of the Peace Charles Smith, who pronounced Whitfield dead at the scene of the shooting, said he already has completed his investigation of the incident.

"I'm satisfied that the officer was justified in shooting," Smith said. "And I have ruled that the man was killed by the officer in the line of duty."

The incident began shortly after midnight, when Garza was called to the scene of an auto theft at 2115-B Ave. L.

Garza talked with Isabel Rodriguez, 20, of 1510 E. Stanford St., who said her 1976 Monte Carlo had been stolen from in front of her aunt's residence about 10:30 p.m. Tuesday.

As Garza and the woman were talking, they both saw a vehicle traveling south on Ave. L that fit the stolen car's description.

"That's it," the woman told Garza, according to police.

Garza jumped into his patrol car and chased the stolen vehicle down 25th Street. He followed it into the alley between Avenues J and K.

In the alley, the suspect's car hit the walls of buildings on each side of the alley, ran into a gas meter, and suddenly became stuck on a mound of sand, police said.

Garza shot the suspect after the man backed his car into the officer's patrol car and then tried to drive away.

Barbecue, Fiddling, Races Mark Fourth

By JOHNNY HOLMES and DAVID HURLBUT
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Residents around the South Plains took full advantage of the bright, hot, sunny Fourth of July to celebrate the nation's 203rd birthday in a variety of ways.

Among the more unusual events across the area were a water polo match in Matador, a fly-in to Colorado City, an historical road rally in Ralls and the running of the oldest continuous road run in Texas in Brownfield.

HANCE

U.S. Rep. Kent Hance took the occasion to return to his district to make several appearances, including an unscheduled speech at a midday barbecue in Abernathy. Hance later spoke in Plainview and Hereford.

Many cities held parades, dances and barbecues. The colorful and popular local parades were the highlight of celebrations in cities such as Idalou, Abernathy, Denver City, Big Spring and Ralls, while other cities, including Brownfield, Muleshoe, Hale Center, Matador and Andrews, feasted on home-cooked barbecue.

Dances, many of them scheduled outside, closed the day's fun in other cities, like Idalou, Brownfield, Littlefield, Slaton and Matador.

Other cities also sponsored events for the feet — in the form of distance running. Brownfield, with its 11th annual Firecracker Marathon, a 10-mile run that was the feature event of the day, led the way, but towns like Plainview, Muleshoe and Silverton also staged races from 10,000 meters to 10 miles in length.

In Abernathy, Hance made an unscheduled stop to eat some barbecue as he traveled to a speaking engagement in Plainview.

The congressman spoke briefly to about 600 Abernathy residents. He told them that America "always has had problems, but we've always managed to solve them."

"Even in the beginning, we fought a war with a British army that was much stronger and better equipped than our Continental Army, but we managed to win," Hance said. "A big reason for our success is found in the motto of our country, which you can find on any coin: 'In God we trust.'"

In an apparent reference to Vietnamese boat refugees, Hance commented on the value of freedom. "When you see 1,000 people cramming onto a boat designed for only 500 so they can get to freedom, you get a feeling of what freedom is worth," he said.

After Hance spoke, residents listened to various local musicians, followed by a fiddlers' contest.

Eight fiddlers from around the region competed in the contest and one judge commented that the quality of music was "the best we've had in a long time."

He said the judges had a hard time judging between the top four fiddlers, but Rick Sudduth of McAdoo won first place honors. Barnard Hicks was second, Kenneth Barry of Lubbock was third and Chester Derrick of Odessa was fourth.

Before the contest, about 20 persons gathered in the shade of three large trees to listen to a six-piece local bluegrass band. A man dressed in overalls, a cotton shirt and a hat danced a jig as the band played a warm-up tune.

About 15 men, however, opted for less strenuous competition and entered a beard judging contest.

The prize for the fullest beard went to Wayne Baker, and judges said Danny Holland's beard was best-looking. The most-unique beard award went to James Williams, and John Ray was named the man with the grubbiest beard.

Spectators at the park also viewed a number of antique and special interest automobiles. The oldest car was a 1915 Ford, which a show official said still was in working condition.

Strong winds delayed hot air balloon rides which had been scheduled for early in the afternoon. Policemen on duty at the park said they received questions throughout the day about the balloons, which by late afternoon had not arrived.

At Hale Center, about 500 persons attended festivities at the town square. Grocer Don Maddin taunted baseball throwers while perched in a dunking booth, and spectators viewed an art show and the town's fire engines, which were on display.

Crosby County began its celebration shortly after noon as 14 two-man teams sped off in a road rally sponsored by the Ralls Chamber of Commerce.

The rally, about 90 miles long and taking more than two hours to complete, was educational as well as fun. The checkpoints in and around the small towns in the county all were located at historical landmarks, giving the participants a chance to learn some local history.

The race spanned the generations of Ralls, as several teams of high schoolers competed against veteran drivers J.A. Wheller, 75, and J.W. Payne, 65, for the plaques awarded the winners.

Ralls continued its fun after the race with a parade and picnic in the city square, plus the showing of a movie classic. Shortly after dark residents were to be treated to a special showing of Bud Abbott and Lou Costello in a comedy version of "Jack and the Beanstalk," projected onto the side of a semi trailer.

In Idalou, the fun began in midafternoon with a bicycle parade downtown. Most of the bicycles, many ridden by grade school children, were brightly adorned with patriotic red, white and blue crepe papers and streamers. But the most sinister cycle belonged to Chad Adams, 7, who was outfitted as the evil Darth Vader, the villain in the movie "Star Wars." For his efforts, Chad won the grade school division honors and took home $5.

As Idalou residents settled in at the city park in anticipation of an evening barbecue, more events took place. The Idalou High School cheerleaders raised money by manning a dunking booth.

The crowd guffawed as the girls got soaked one by one, but after standing in the hot afternoon sun for a couple of minutes, it became apparent those girls sitting in the cool water were probably the smartest ones there.

Residential Areas Block Traffic, Pedestrians Rule

WASHINGTON (AP) — As if the gas shortage weren't enough, an attempt is on to make life even more difficult for the motorist by placing trees, benches, garden plots and other obstacles across streets in residential areas.

Those behind the move say they aim to make life more pleasant for childen, pedestrians, and people who just dislike heavy traffic roaring past their windows.

The idea comes from Holland. Six years ago, the citizens of Delft were the first to set up what they called a "Woonerf," which translates roughly as "everybody's backyard." Now there are about 250 all over Holland, which is about a third the size of Ohio.

In the Woonerf the pedestrian is king. The "streetscape" invites strolling adults and children playing in bunches. To liven it up, the town installs fancy paving, bicycle racks, plants in tubs and in the ground.

Cars are not barred, but they become second-class citizens. Sidewalks may be eliminated to emphasize that people are free to walk anywhere. Drivers must keep to 20 miles an hour and watch out for speed bumps, chains, sharp bends, patches of cobblestones and concrete barriers. Parking is allowed only in cleary defined areas, and through traffic is banned.

The Council for International Urban Liaison in Washington says the plan has spread to Britain, Belgium, West Germany and the Scandinavian countries and is ripe for introduction to the United States. Its communications director, an ex-diplomat named George G. Wynne, says:

"If we can have pedestrian zones in business areas, we certainly ought to be able to calm down the traffic in places where people live."

He quotes Dutch city authorities as calculating that a "Woonerf"costs only about 50 percent more than just resurfacing a street, which has to be done from time to time anyway. It also raises property values, not to mention tax assessments, and the claim is made that it has stopped the rot in some poorer areas that were getting close to being slums.

Wynne takes pride in his organizaton's record of getting U.S. cities to adopt idas from other countries. The June issue of his publication "Urban Innovation Abroad" lists some recent one:

•Two U.S. ciies — Albany, N.Y., and Akron, Ohio — have ordered a Swiss compound called "Verglimit" that is mixed with paving material to raise its temperature in the winter and keep ice from forming on bridges and overpasses.

•Cities in California and Montana — as well as the city of Washington — are experimenting with a Japanese system for making traffic lights audible to help the blind cross streets safely. A firm in California is now making a device that plays a birdcall when the green light comes on, which automatically grows louder as the traffic grows heavier.

•About 50 swimming pools with hydraulically-controlled floors, pioneered in West Germany, are now being built or already in use in the United States and Canada. The bottom can be raised or lowered at the touch of a button, so that the pool can be used at some hours by children or the handicapped, and at others by experienced swimmers and divers.

Some ideas from outside do less well. A system of ticket-books for motorists, designed to replace the parking meter, orginated in Tel Aviv and has made progress in places as far apart as Amsterdam and Sydney.

County Hospital District Board To Launch Director Search

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

This afternoon's closed session of the Lubbock County Hospital District's board of managers marks the beginning of what may be a lengthy search process to find a new executive director.

The board will convene at 1:30 p.m., going immediately into executive session to discuss personnel matters. The need to find a new administrator is a result of the recent dismissal of former executive director Gerald Bosworth.

Bosworth was summarily dismissed last week after new board members Dub Rushing and Steve Smith called for a change in administration. The board voted not to renew Bosworth's two-year contract in view of the Health Sciences Center Hospital's more than $7 million in uncollected patient bills.

The bulk of the work in locating a replacement for Bosworth will fall on the members of the administrative committee — Rushing, Gwen Stafford and Don McInturff. Board chairman Jack Strong said today's meeting will allow the board to set up the ground rules for the search process.

After completing the executive session, the board is to discuss the appointment of an interim executive director to serve until a replacement is found. George McGowan, associate director of operations, has been running the hospital since Bosworth left Saturday and is the front runner for appointment as interim executive director.

Strong said McGowan seems the most qualified to assume the position, but stressed that the board would make the decision.

Last on the agenda is consideration of a data processing service to replace the hospital's present system — which is going out of business. The old system is based on a central, out-of-state system which often created problems in hospital billing due to shipment delays and the distance from its subscriber.

The new system under consideration is an in-house system which provides for leasing of all equipment and the option to hire its employees if Health Sciences wishes to drop the data processing management service.

Cutting Horse Champ To Win $750 Purse

A $750 purse, plus entry fees, will be up for grabs during the cutting horse contests slated during the 62nd annual fair here Sept. 22-29.

The cutting horse contests, sanctioned by the National Cutting Horse Association (NCHA) will be held in Fair Park Livestock Pavilion Sept. 27-28, according to Steve L. Lewis, general manager.

John Trimmier of Hale Center will be the NCHA representative at the contests and Randy Upshaw will serve as superintendent.

Entries will be accept up to one hour before each contest.

Entry fees for the open championship, worth the $750 purse, are $75 plus $40 cattle and office charges for a total of $115. The open championship contest will be at 4 p.m. on Sept. 27.

The youth contest, slated for 7:30 p.m. on Sept. 28, will offer buckstitch halters for first, second and third place winners and trophies for the next three places. No entry fee is charged in the youth contest, but a $25 levy for cattle and office charges is required.

The contests are sponsored by the fair association and the Lubbock County 4-H required.

The contests are sponsored by the fair association and the Lubbock County 4-H clubs.

Eleven shows, featuring 13 stars, have been carded for Fair Park Coliseum this year. Following the fiddlers' contest on opening day, the following stage lineup has been signed:

—The Charley Pride Show, 5 p.m. and 8 p.m. Sept. 23; The Statler Brothers Show, with Barbara Mandrell, 5 p.m. and 8 p.m. Sept. 24; The Eddie Rabbitt Show, with Janie Fricke, 8 p.m. only Sept. 25; the Dave and Sugar Show, with John Conlee, 8 p.m. only Sept. 26; South Plains College's Golden Years of Country Music, 7 p.m. only Sept. 27; The Tom Tammy Wynette Show, with Rex Allen Jr. and George "Goober" Lindsey, 5 p.m. and 8 p.m. Sept. 29.

All seats are reserved and tickets are $4, $5 and $6 for all shows except the SPC show, which costs $2 and $3.

Reservations for tickets now ae being accepted by the fair association at P.O. Box 208, Lubbock, Tex. 79408 and must be accompanied by a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Tickets will be processed in the order in which received, thus insuring that early reservations get the best seats, Lewis said. Tickets will be mailed to purchasers by mid-August, when the box office at the coliseum will open. Tickets also will go on sale at five other locations at that time.

Tech Historian Faults Carter's Energy Plan

President Carter calls the energy crisis the "moral equivalent of war," but most Americans seem to be conscientious objectors, in the view of a Texas Tech University historian.

It is naive for anyone, including Carter, to believe that Americans will voluntarily cooperate to curb inflation or conserve energy, according to Dr. George Q. Flynn, whose studies show that Americans would not fully cooperate even during the crisis of World War II.

The age of President Franklin D. Roosevelt and World War II is the special interest of Flynn. He is convinced that the open economic system disappeared with the 19th century and the concept of voluntarism, too, is bankrupt.

"We are running out of resources for this Disneyland life we are living," Flynn said, "but it is ridiculous to expect the private sector to respond to government price and wage guidelines when people don't believe there is a threat.

"Nobody would dispute that there was a threat in World War II, but even in war the American people were not entirely mobilized. We tried to mobilize our society during the war, but even then special interest groups attempted to serve their own interests."

Flynn is author of "The Mess in Washington," a study of manpower mobilization in World War II. At that time Paul V. McNutt, who headed the War Manpower Commission, depended upon localism and voluntarism to mobilize the nation for war. Labor, management and even some segments of government resisted the WMC efforts, Flynn found.

"Not only did Americans gripe about McNutt's restrictions, they frequently ignored them," he wrote. "They flaunted rules while simultaneously telling pollsters that they were willing to accept more regimentation to help win the war."

If Americans' self-interest was too strong to bring compliance in World War II, Flynn said, it is naive of Carter to expect consumers, labor, management and producers to comply now by exerting contracts from firms which don't comply with wage and price guidelines will not have sufficient impact to bring about conformity, he said.

"The percentage of the federal, state and local spending might have some effect, but control over federal spending alone is insufficient.

"Self-interest in this country is too strong, and the wage and price spiral is simply a manifestation of the free market system.

"The present thinking in Washington is that, if you do a thing at the top, there has to be a riple effect throughout the whole economy, and this won't work."

To solve the problem by removing controls on airlines as Carter has done, or on the trucking industry as has been proposed, is a "pipe dream," in Flynn's view. "An open competitive system tends to monopolies."

The historian said that general inflation will prevail as long as everybody is planning only for himself, and nobody is planning for the general interest.

"There is no question that the inflation issue came into being out of a lack of planning after World War II. Now we're operating in a system in which a critical requirement, oil, lies outside our control; so it behooves the government to play a more active role in planning.

"We are finding we don't operate in a totally open system. That worked in the 19th century. It won't work now. The solution is not up to individuals.

"There has to be more control of the economy," Flynn said, but readily admitted that "the political odds on the President or Congress going along with federal control are very long" because the crisis is not yet severe enough for Americans to give up any of their freedoms.

Flynn's book on manpower mobilization in World War II is number 76 in the "Contributions in American History," published by Greenwood Press, Westport, Conn., this year.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr. Ruble: I am 24 years old and have what my doctor diagnosed as left-sided appendicitis. Is he pulling my leg? Is there such a thing? — J.M.G.

The only way one has "left-sided appendicitis" is if the appendix is located on the left side — which is not out of the question. The appendix is, as you know, a tiny "dead-end" pocket of the lower intestine. Everybody (or just about everybody) has one. It is almost always located in the lower right part of the abdomen. The first pain of appendicitis, though, is sensed in the upper part of the abdomen — the "pit of the stomach" in layman's terms. After vomiting, which usually occurs, the pain becomes localized where it should be, precisely over the appendix.

The appendix can be found at various other points in the abdomen, even on the left lower side. These are quirks in development of the bowel. Diverticulitis, a problem that also can cause abdominal pain, may occur in the left portion of the bowel. Various "misplaced" pains are discussed in the booklet, "Stomach and Other Abdominal Pains: A Checklist." For a copy of it send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed evelope to Dr. Ruble, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611. If you had a real appendicitis you would have been hospitalized to have the structure removed.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I understand that a doctor can tell by looking at certain fingernails if you have a problem in a certain part of your body. True? — Mrs. N.S.

That's a strange notion. It's untrue, of course. Nails can be an indicator of several GENERAL conditions. Clubbing can be a sign of lung or heart disorders. Certain drugs may cause ridges (crosswise). Brittle nails may indicate general nutritional deficiencies. Usually all the nails are involved, though not necessarily. The booklet, "Solving Your Nail Problems," answers the questions most often asked on this subject. For a copy, send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed evelope to Dr. Ruble, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I have an itching of my rectum. Rubbing it each morning with rubbing alcohol seems to take care of it. Is it safe to use it that much? — G.L.

I'd rather see you use a substance milder than the rubbing alcohol, which over the long run might cause worse irritation than you have now. I suspect the itching you have is caused by fecal residue. Milder cleansing solutions are available in pad form at the drugstore. They contain a bit of glycerine for gentle cleansing. A mixture of witch hazel and glycerine can be used with flannel pads. You should also be examined for pinworms.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: I like yeast. How many calories in one cake of it, and what are the benefits? — M.F.

Yeast contains about equal amounts of protein and carbohydrate. An ounce of compressed yeast, the kind you are probably getting, has about 25 calories. There are about 90 calories per ounce in the dried form, or brewer's yeast. Yeast is rich in potassium and some of the B vitamins, which makes it a handy, inexpensive supplement for treatment of pellagra (vitamin deficiency) and anemia caused by poor nutrition.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: Can you tell me about the beam of light the doctor projects into your eye during an examination? Is it a laser? Could it be harmful? — S.N.

Heavens, no! It's a tiny flashlight that allows him to look at the retinal surface and its blood vessels.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: How soon after a couple is married should the question of sterility be raised if they have not been able to conceive? — J.F.A.

For the normally healthy young couple, about a year. That's assuming that the frequency of intercourse has been average.

Dr. Ruble welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Tune In Tomorrow

By JON-MICHAEL REED

NEW YORK—Years ago, no actor in his right career mind would admit to having performed on a "soap"' Working on a daytime TV serial was considered a black mark on any performer's resume. But times are achangin'.

The respectability of being a soap actor, both in terms of the creative challenge and the artistic accomplishment, reached a zenith when ABC's "The Edge of Night" signed actress Kim Hunter to a contract.

Miss Hunter made her Broadway debut in 1947 in Tennessee Williams' "Streetcar Named Desire." She recreated her role of Stella in the film version, which netted her an Oscar as Best Supporting Actress. In recent years, Hunter has performed in repertory theater productions of "Tbe Cherry Orchard," "The Lion In Winter," and "And Miss Reardan Drinks A Little." In films she has appeared behind monkey makeup in three of the "Planet of the Apes" movie series. On TV she has performed in several Hallmark Hall of Fame productions, as well as "Columbo," "Medical Center," and the TV movie "Born Innocent."

THE MAILBAG:

In a recent column you mentioned that "The Young and The Restless" will expand to an hour format. I thought "Search For Tomorrow" was supposed to be the next show to go the hour route. — C.J., Philadelphia, Pa.

CBS chose "Y & R" to be the next 60-minute serial instead of "SFT," which will remain a half-hour show when "Y&R" goes to an hour in the fall. Watch for changes in the schedule, however, since "SFT" will move to a different time slot.

Why does Dr. Tom Horton of "Days of Our Lives" carry a cane on the show? Is he disabled in some way? Sometimes he forgets to use it and swings it rather ridiculously. — E.A., Cornell, Wisc.

The cane served as both a fictional and a real-life support, since Tom is on the mend from a story operation and actor Macdonald Carey, who portrays Tom, recovered from a gall bladder operation at the same time. The "swings" are supposedly inserted to depict the character's testiness about being forced to rely on a support crutch.

I miss the first actress who played Delia on "Ryan's Hope." What's she doing? — J.S., Columbus, Ind.

Ilene Kristen moved to Hollywood after leaving "RH" and has been testing for film and nighttime TV roles. When she's not making the casting rounds, she's busy dating Treat Williams, an up-and-coming actor who was a smash as Berger in the film version of "Hair."

I missed a lot of "One Life to Live" episodes and never learned the outcome of Vicki's trial for murdering Marco. What happened? — A.M., Bayside, N.Y.

Karen learned from prostitute Katrina that Talbot had murdered Marco. Karen's testimony got Vicki off the hook, but at the same time put Karen in hot water since she was forced to reveal her prostituting association with Talbot, as well as her part in suppressing the fact that Talbot had been Pat's son, Brian's, hit-and-run killer. There are future surprises in store concerning Marco's death, however, so stay tuned.

Can you tell me who played Mrs. Cupeace on "Edge of Night" several years back? — J.S., Richmond, Va.

Mary K. Wells was the second actress to portray Louise Cupeace after Lisa Howard left the role. In recent years, Mary has written scripts for "All My Children," while her screen husband Ray MacDonnell (who played Phil on "EON") went on to play Joe Martin on "AMC."

(Send your questions about soap operas to "Tune In Tomorrow," 235 Park Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10017. Questions cannot be answered personally, but those of general interest will be answered in future columns.)

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I enjoyed the letter from a reader about the many uses for the little tooth brush in small places.

How about big brother — the toilet bowl brush?

With the coming of nice weather, this does a great job on tires and hub caps. Then when I take the garden furniture out, all I need is a bucket of soapy water, my brush, and a hose to rinse (and a little effort).

A little imagination and you'll find these brushes are used for so much more than their namesake! — G.R.

After reading your letter, I checked the files and found a couple of more hints for these little rascals.

One lady tells us they make wonderful back brushes. Another lady tells us to use them for cleaning under those steam radiators (especially good if there is carpet under them). Here in the South, those radiators are pretty scarce but probably there are still quite a few in the colder climates.

Thanks for your contribution! — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

This may not be a new idea to some people, but I've never heard of it before.

Yesterday my sister and I wanted to fly our kites. However, we were tired of winding and unwinding string on a stick.

Dad suggested that we use a fishing rod. He then proceeded to take off the bottom section of the rod, leaving us with a handle, the reel, and the line. We attached the line to our kite and away it went!

It worked perfectly. No more winding string on sticks. We reeled the line in and out, just like we were fishing. It was much better than the "old-fashioned" way.

However, we do have a couple of suggestions for those who might want to try this:

(1) Be sure you don't get the line tangled up. It will take you hours to get it untangled! (2) Make sure there's not enough pressure to break the line. Otherwise you'll be chasing your kite across the field! — Judy Rawlins

Say, you have a pretty ingenious Pop — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I have found that using a wide-mouthed, heavy mug on my stove instead of an ordinary spoon holder is much better and takes up less room.

Your column is in our Sunday paper only. I really enjoy all the hints that are sent in and can hardly wait for our paper to arrive on Sunday. — Mrs. C. Clarke

DEAR HELOISE:

After finishing a jar of sweet pickles, don't throw away the remaining brine.

Dice onions very small and put in the pickle juice. Let stand for a few days in the refrigerator, and you will have a delicious onion relish for hamburgers, hot dogs, etc. — Sandra Wilsey

DEAR HELOISE:

Recently I saved the tube from an empty roll of static-free fabric softener. I was planning to use the tube to mail several 8"x10" pictures to a friend. I just threw the tube in my desk drawer for use in a day or two.

A few days later I opened my desk drawer and it smelled so nice and fresh. I changed my mind about using it for mailing and used a tube from a roll of paper towels instead.

We love you and your ideas. — Marg Siler

DEAR HELOISE:

Have you ever thought about keeping all your plastic liquid detergent bottles? They come in so many pretty colors and shapes these days and you can do so many different things with them.

For instance, wash and rinse one thoroughly, cut it off at whatever height fits your purpose and use it to hold celery or carrot sticks.

Looks very pretty on your table and your guests will think you are s-o-o-o clever to think of such a thing. — Mary Lou

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I wasn't too thrilled with the way you answered the letter from the woman who wanted to know what you thought of her marrying outside her race. (She was white.)

Your reply went something like this: "If you marry a black man, make sure you love him enough to make up for the family ties that will be broken, the friendships that will evaporate and lots of gawking." You then went on to say interracial couples have a better chance to make a go of their marriage if they live in larger cities such as New York, San Francisco or Honolulu. In fact, you had the nerve to suggest they move there!

Why didn't you come right out and tell her it's nobody's business who she marries? I love the way a similar situation was handled by Mrs. Patrick Campbell, the noted English actress, who lived around the turn of the century. When a friend whispered some outrageously scandalous gossip in her ear, Mrs. Campbell replied, "My dear, I don't care WHAT they do so long as they don't do it in the street and scare the horses." Take a lesson, Annabelle. — Constant Reader In Connecticut

Dear C.R.: My philosophy is similar to Mrs. Campbell's, but when people ask for advice, I try to provide it, even though the issue may be highly controversial — and this one certainly is.

Sorry I let you down. Many others didn't care for my reply either. They wrote to say it was "out of date" and "narrow-minded." I was called a bigot and "racist." Nothing could be further from the truth. I'm a long-time civil rights proponent, who stood with Ralph McGill and Mark Ethridge — bless those two courageous newspaper publishers.

True, interracial marriages are not nearly as "unusual" as they once were, but there are still a great many people who aren't ready for this type of assimilation — and they never will be.

• • •

Dear Ann Landers: Any woman who marries a man with a family should take a good look at the kids and decide what her life would be like if she had to take care of them — no matter how remote the possibility may seem. It COULD happen to you. I am living proof.

Two years ago when "Hal" and I were married his ex-wife was in perfect health. Everything looked rosy. Her mother lived with her and she worked while Grandma watched after the kids. They were then five, seven and nine years of age — all boys and plenty wild.

Six months later Grandma died. A string of "housekeepers" and sitters were hired — all no good. My husband had to go over there and sit when his former wife had business conferences, which I resented.

Three months ago we got a call in the middle of the night. It was the eldest boy. His mother was very sick and she said to call "Daddy." Well, to make a long story short, she died the next morning — of a heart attack.

We now have the three kids and life is hell. I can't control them and all we do is fight. My love for this man is deader than a doornail. Just sign this — Where's The Crystal Ball?

Dear Crystal: Nobody that I know has one. P.S. That sure was a funny kind of love, lady.

Terrorists Free British Bank Officials; $10 Million Paid

HOUSTON (AP) — Two British bank executives, released from seven months captivity by leftist guerrillas in El Salvador, underwent extensive medical examinations Wednesday and celebrated their freedom with their wives.

Ian C. Massie, 46, and Michael Chatterton, 47,were flown to Houston from San Salvador Tuesday afternoon, said a spokesman for Lloyd's Bank International, their employer.

In London, a spokesman for the Bank of London and South America, a branch of Lloyds, said $10 million was paid and the two were released in separate locations outside San Salvador Monday.

Massie was manager of the bank's San Salvador branch and Chatterton was his assistant. They had been in the country only about three months before they were seized on a street near the bank in November.

Their wives were flown here once the men were freed.

Freedom came three days after American businessman William F. Niehous, 48, of Toledo, Ohio, was rescued in the jungles of Venezuela.

It also marked the first time in several years that no prominent foreign businessman was being held by Marxist guerrillas in Latin America.

However, a telephone caller to The Associated Press in San Salvador who said he spoke for the Britons' kidnappers, the Armed Forces of National Resistence, said that "soon we will initiate another operation."

The insurgents reportely have collected more than $26 million in ransom for their guerrilla war against the military government of President Humberto Romero. A Japanese businessman was killed last year, and the group collected $8 million for another executive of the same firm and got $8 million for a Swede and a Dutchman.

In London, a British government official said he was relieved the bankers were freed unharmed, but added the government would not have bargained with their captors.

"I want to make it absolutely clear that it is the government's policy not to pay ransoms or accede to demands of terrorists," said Minister of State Nichols Ridley of the Foreign Office.

A brother, Edward, said the death threats and the lengthy uncertainty of the two men had taken "a terrible toll" on his family.

He said their father, John, died last month.

"Our mother's nerves have been shattered. She has been in the hospital for a fortnight."

Chatterton's brother Paul said the family was "overjoyed" with news of the release.

Defense Rests In Estes Trial

DALLAS (AP) — Billy Sol Estes could find his fate once again in the hand of jurors Thursday as final arguments are scheduled in his federal fraud and conspiracy trial.

The defense rested its case Tuesday after members of Estes' family tearfully told the jury that their father was broke and they had to work at menial jobs to support the family while Estes was in prison and following his parole.

The case was in recess Wednesday for the Fourth of July.

Mrs. Estes, asked by U.S. District Judge Robert Hill why her husband had not had a full-time job the past two years, said Estes' physical condition prevented him from doing any manual labor.

She said her husband's injured back was partly the result of an "assassination" attempt on him while he was in prison.

Estes had taken the stand earlier Tuesday to say he was broke and that he was an outright liar.

"I have become a liar," Estes told the court. "I live in a false world. I lie because of a weakness I have."

He claims that it was his lying that got him into his current trouble with the government.

Government prosecutors claim Estes has concealed his assets from the Internal Revenue Service and has been involved in shady business deals.

Eagle Pass Rabies Campaign Set

EAGLE PASS (AP) — Officials in this border city say that unless pets are vaccinated at a clinic today the city is prepared to order all stray dogs to be shot on sight.

The warning from the city council came Tuesday night after an Eagle Pass girl died of what was suspected to be rabies — the second rabies-related death in a month. Earlier, a girl from the Mexican community of Piedras Negras died of rabies.

"Gentlemen, the problem is here, the sooner we buckle our belts and face it and get rid of it the better we're off," City Manager Roberto Gonzalez told city councilmen Tuesday night.

Gonzales said it was too early to tell whether the latest death would have any impact on the city of 21,000.

"I think the council has agreed to declare a state of emergency on Friday if there is not a good turnout at a pet vaccination clinic Thursday," he said.

If a state of emergency were declared, he said, it could result in orders to shoot stray dogs on sight. He said a Piedras Negras newspaper reported Mexican authorities have shot 6,000 dogs in the past 40 days.

Marianita Garza, 8, died Tuesday at Santa Rosa Medical Center in San Antonio.

The Garza girl's death came only an hour after the announcement by the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta that one of five test results indicated "the child's clinical course was consistent with rabies in its earlier stages."

The child was bitten by a rabid dog May 31 in Eagle Pass and had completed the series of vaccination shots in late June.

The girl was among more than 60 persons who have taken the rabies vaccinations in Eagle Pass and Piedras Negras.

In the 16th and 17th centuries, people put hot coals from the fireplace into a shallow pan which was then slipped into beds to warm them before the household retired for the night.

Message To Washington

MESSAGE — I bought my first hours earlier this year and need your help, as the house is now unliveable and the builder refuses to make repairs. Air blows into the house through the chimney. Water leaks through the doors and windows. The air conditioning is defective and runs around the clock. The carpet has been ruined by the water and the place is a mess from asbestos blowing from the air ducts. I've had to move out, but I can't afford to keep paying both the mortgage and rent. Your held is needed. M.D. — Katy

SENATOR BENTSEN RESPONDS — The Federal Trade Commission advises me that, in response to a surge in complaints about residential construction, they have created a Housing Defects Program. FTC investigator will pursue specific complaints on a case-by-case basis. They will not get involved in individual disputes, you will need to hire your own lawyer for that, but they will clamp down when they find a pattern of conduct adversely affecting consumers.

MESSAGE — I am writing to ask your assistance on my application for the excess leave program in the Air Force. Under the program I can take leave from active duty at my own expense to obtain a law degree and then return to active duty, hopefully on the staff of the Judge Advocate. I am unsure of whether or not I will qualify for the program and would appreciate your advice. D.R. — Fort Worth

SENATOR BENTSEN RESPONDS — Air Force officials inform me that the Excess Leave Board convened and made selections recently for the program. Competing for the limited quotas was keen and the board was able to select only one of every three applications. I regret to inform you that your application was not among those selected, but I would encourage you to reapply next year.

Groups Consider Court Action To Halt Dam

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The next move in the controversy over construction of Stacy Dam and Reservoir appears to depend on the action of Lower Colorado River Authority General Manager Charles Herring and attorney Fred Werkenthin.

The Lower Colorado River Authority opposed the application of Colorado River Muncipal Water District to construct the reservoir during hearings before the Texas Water Commission, and indicated it would take the matter to court should the commission approve the application.

That decision did go against the Lower Colorado group and other opponents, including the City of Austin, and the commission has refused to grant a rehearing on the matter.

Herring notes that the Lower Colorado River Authority's board of directors has authorized taking the matter to court upon a decision by Herring — with the advice of Werkenthin — to do so.

Herring would not say that his group is in fact taking the matter to court, but does say that such action has been considered an option throughout the hearing process.

A decision to take that step could come within a few days, he indicates.

Werkenthin also says the matter is being considered, but like Herring would not say defintely if or when the action would come.

However, either officials involved in the matter indicate it's only a question of when the court challenge is filed.

The City of Austin is expected to join in the lawsuit, along with at least some of the other opponents — such as the Lake Travis Improvement Association — who contested the application at the Texas Water Commission.

Observers are watching Gov. Bill Clements' office in regard to the commission, since Commissioner Dorsey Hardeman's term expires Aug. 31.

Hardeman, a former State Senator from San Angelo, refused to disqualify himself from hearing the Stacy application, despite arguments by the Lower Colorado River Authority that Hardeman could be biased by having represented the area to be served by Stacy, and having served as city attorney for San Angelo, which could receive water from the reservoir project.

However, even if Hardeman is replaced on the commission, and if the application should be returned by a court for a rehearing, the outcome of the matter would appear unlikely to change, since all three commissioners voted to approve the request.

MINING DEVICE REVEALED

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interior Department announced Wednesday the arrival of a new device that aids in the "chemical mining" of underground uranium deposits. The device, now being used commercially by Union Carbide Corp., employs high-pressure water jets to cut tiny holes in the lining of uranium leaching wells. The department's Bureau of Mines says the water jet perforator can eliminate costly, time-consuming steps in well preparation, and can improve the efficiency of wells during production.

Granbury Man To Receive Award For Western Art

GRANBURY (Special) — Coville Jones of Granbury, a former Hobbs school teacher, will be awarded this year's Randy Steffen Memorial Award for Western Art.

The award will be presented to Jones during a ceremony today.

Jones, who signs his bronze sculptures "Coville," was selected by the Steffen awards committee because of what the group termed "his dedication to accuracy in his work."

The Erath County native was a teacher in the Hobbs school system for 15 years before moving to Granbury last year to concentrate on his western art work.

Coville often goes beyond the cowboy era of western art to the Plains Indians and the mountain men who were the first explorers in the west.

Tech Professor Gets Accountant Office

A Texas Tech professor has become the first full-time academician appointed to the accounting and review services committee of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants.

Dr. Raymond J. Clay Jr., on the accounting faculty of the College of Business Administration since 1974, was named to the post of the New York-based organization which has more than 100,000 members.

The group engages in research, professional education programs and setting of standards of performance practices for auditors and accountants.

The committee to which Clay was named is authorized to develop on a continuing basis standards for accounting and review services, providing specific guidance for CPAs who prepare or review financial information of a non-public entity.

HUMPTY DUMPTY WOE — Ross Bradley almost made the catch from his partner, Wade Wesley, in an egg toss Wednesday in Abernathy. But the devilish egg slipped through his fingers and, splat, all the king's horses and all the king's men couldn't fix it again. (Staff Photo by Paul Moseley)

Childress County Suffers Double Loss Of Funding

A-J Correspondent

CHILDRESS — Childress County commissioners face a double dose of dwindling county dollars. They have been advised of a $4,000 cutback in revenue-sharingfunds and the loss of $15,000 in state funds for road bond indebtedness and road construction.

The panel was at work on the revenue-sharing budget for next year when told by County Judge Clarence Darter that the two sources of income have been cut.

Dismayed by the loss of funds, Commissioner Roy Wygal said, "Roads in my precinct (in the Tell Community) are in such bad condition after the recent flooding that I could use the entire $15,000 tomorrow morning."

To complain about the funding cuts, the court decided to write letters of protest to state officials.

In allocating revenue-sharing funds for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, commissioners made few changes in last year's designations. An estimated $33,296 in revenue-sharing funds compares to the present fiscal year's $37,481.

Woman Dies In Apartment Fire

A-J Correspondent

TULIA — An early-morning fire Wednesday which took three hours to bring under control destroyed an apartment building here and claimed the life of a Tulia woman.

Dixie Pratt, 53, was found several hours after the 2:47 a.m. blaze was extinguished, lying on her kitchen floor, covered by debris. She had moved to Tulia in March from Littlefield.

Mrs. Pratt was pronounced dead at the scene of the West Wind apartment complex fire by Tulia Justice of the Peace Sidney Hooper.

Lynn Cowan, owner of the apartments, estimated the loss to be more than $300,000, including damage to the building and its contents.

Tulia volunteer Fire Chief Richard Cagle said late Wednesday that a cause for the fire still was under investigation.

About 15 persons were inside the apartment complex when the fire erupted. A Tulia policeman on patrol noticed the blaze and began warning residents by knocking on doors.

The fire reportedly began in Mrs. Pratt's apartment, located in the north portion of the complex.

Services for Mrs. Pratt are pending with Hammons Funeral Home of Littlefield.

Canada was the first nation on earth having been a colony of the Old World, to achieve responsible government without violent revolution.

POOPED PATRIOT — How do you spell relief? Well, after Boy Scout Brent Mackey of Troop 405 marched in Wednesday's parade in Lubbock as flag bearer, he found comfort in a soft-cushioned chair. Some ideas work and some won't! In 1978 over 2000 growers from California to Delaware and from Canada to Florida agreed that the Spray Sickle is one weed control idea that really works.

The 1979 Spray Sickle is better than ever — (Over 35 New Improvements.) If you have Johnson Grass (or any other problem weed) the Spray Sickle is really the only sure way to eradicate it.

THE HUNDRED GUNMEN

Modern "samurai" wears lion kabuto, or helmet, designed to intimidate enemies with its ferocity.

Tokyo's "Hundred Gunmen" bring the past to life—with their fearsome displays of samurai armor, swords and guns. The group, belying its name, now has about four hundred members whose nostalgia for ancient traditions has inspired them to equip themselves with replicas of the impressive regalia of feudal warriors, which they bring out and parade for public events and celebrations. The members of the group seen in these photographs were taking part in a Tokyo street festival.

The word samurai in Japanese means warrior, basically. It was used specifically to designate the hereditary military aristocracy from the 11th century up to about a hundred years ago, although use of the term for a social group continued until it was officially abolished after World War II.

Finely crafted swords were a perennial mark of the samurai class. But they did take up guns with alacrity soon after firearms first appeared in Japan, introduced by the Portuguese in 1543. Hence the name "Gunmen" used by these latterday warriors, who also sport armor, swords and helmets. The armor and helmets may be replicas, but their guns are more often genuine antiques, some of them dating back to the 16th century. Photographed by Tsugufumi Matsumoto.

Houston Astros Spell Victory R-E-D-S

By The Associated Press

Houston pinch-hitter Jeff Leonard's seventh-inning single scored Hector Cruz, capping a two-run rally that carried the torrid Astros to their sixth straight victory, a 3-2 decision over the Cincinnati Reds.

Joaquin Andujar, 10-4, survived a sixth-inning brawl sparked by Reds third baseman Ray Knight, Andujar's former minor league roommate, to earn the victory.

Both benches emptied twice during the fracas. There were no apparent injuries, but Knight and the Astros' Cesar Cedeno were ejected.

The bench-cearing incident erupted after Houston pitcher Joaquin Andujar was retired on an infield out and exchanged words with Knight on his way back to the Astros' dugout.

Knight and Andujar, who had fought when they were teammates at the Reds' Three Rivers farm team, squared off and both benches emptied, although no blows were exchanged.

DOUBLED UP—Houston Astro Enos Cabell is doubled off first base in second inning action of a major league baseball game against the Reds in Cincinnati Wednesday afternoon. Cabell, on the hit and run, was around second second, when teammate Denny Walling's fly ball was caught at the wall by Cincinnati's Hector Cruz. Cruz fired to shortstop Dave Concepcion, who in turn relayed the ball to first baseman Dan Driessen (22). The Astros, however won the game 3-2. (AP Laserphoto)

D SPORTS

Lubbock Avalanche-Journal Thursday Morning, July 5, 1979

Cedeno jumped the dugout fence to answer Knight's challenge and both benches cleared again as the brawl resumed.

Knight and Cedeno were sent to he showers with Junior Kennedy taking Knight's place at third and Rafael Landestoy taking Cedeno's place in the Astro lineup.

The brawl apparently stemmed from an incident in the fourth when the Reds' Joe Morgan ducked under an Andujar pitch that was high and inside.

When Andujar came to bat in the sixth, Bonham threw a pitch behind his back. After Andujar grounded out, he exchanged words with Bonham and Knight on the way back to the Astros' dugout.

The needling continued between Knight and the Astro bench until Cedeno jumped the fence to answer Knight's challenge.

Andujar retired the Reds in order in the seventh but then left the game because of a minor thumb jam he sustained his first time at bat, he said.

Reliever Joe Sambito struck out the Reds in order in the eighth and got Rick Auerbach, Morgan and Johnny Bench to fly out in the ninth to end the game.

Griffey's leadoff homer in the first was his seventh of the season. The Reds' other run came in the fifth when Dan Driessen led off with a double and scored on Geronimo's single to left field two outs later.

Howe led off the Astro sixth with a single down the left field line and went all the way to third on leftfielder Hector Cruz' two-base error. He then scored on Ashby's infield out.

Landestoy, who entered the Houston lineup in place of Cedeno, reached base in the seventh inning on a fielder's choice and scored on a double by Jose Cruz. Cruz then scored from second on Leonard's pinch single up the middle.

The victory, the 14th in 16 games for the first-place Astros, moved them 10 games ahead of Cincinnati in the National League West.

TENNIS TOURNAMENTS

Evert, Navratilova Post Wins...

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Martina Navratilova and Chris Evert Lloyd won one-sided matches in straight sets Wednesday and set up a repeat of last year' Wimbledon women's final.

Mrs. Lloyd went past Evonne Goolagong Cawley 6-3, 6-2 in a lackluster, error-strewn duel and reached the final for the fifth time in seven years.

They will play Friday.

The ball bounced erraticlly on the wearing center court Wednesday and the tennis was not the greatest of the tournament. The 17,000 fans were subdued. Some of them had slept all night on the sidewalks outside the All-England club to get standing places.

In last year's final, Czech-born Miss Navratilova defeated Mrs. Lloyd 2-6, 6-4, 7-5.

Meanwhile, the men were set to play their semifinals today. Bjorn Borg is to play Jimmy Connors, whom he has beaten in the final here the past two years. And Roscoe Tanner was to take on hard-charging fellow American Pat Dupre.

The bookies made Borg a heavy odds-on favorite to win the men's title for the fourth straight year. Ladbroks only offered 8 to 13 on the Swede, meaning one would have to bet 13 pounds to win 8 pounds.

Other odds were 11 to 4 against Connors, 9 to 2 against Tanner and 25 to 1 against Dupre, America's 28th ranked player. Among the giants Dupre knocked off were Vitas Gerulaitis and Adriao Panatta.

First prize in the men's division is

While the top players in the world are sipping tea and cutting grass at Wimbledon this week, some of the top junior players are gathering for their own Wimbledon style match, only it's on clay and it's in Lubbock.

Approximately 700 players, including many of the top ranked juniors in Texas and the Southwest and a task force of talented juniors from Australia, invade Lubbock today for the opening round of the 1979 HWY-80 tennis tournament.

The four-day meet has been designated a major zone tourney by the Texas Tennis Association, thus, many claims to rankings will be staked and repossessed. The finals are scheduled for Saturday and Sunday.

"This tourney will present some of the better junior players around," claims tournament director Mel Carter. "The tourney is much larger than we anticipated too. This is the biggest tennis tourney ever to be held in Lubbock."

Co-sponsored by the Lubbock Tennis Association and the Lubbock Parks and Recreation Department, the tourney is big enough to require the use of most of Lubbock's tennis facilities. The tourney will be headquartered at the Lubbock Tennis Center but matches also are scheduled at Texas Tech and the courts at Coronado, Monterey and Lubbock high schools. The first matches begin today at 10 a.m.

Among the top attractions in the area tourney will be four boys from Australia who will compete in the 14-year-old age bracket. Simon Youl, Jamie Harty, Darryl Henderson and Ron Woodbridge are considered the top players in Australia in their age group and they are visiting the United States to play in several competitive matches. The traveling foursome is sponsored by former world ranked players John Newcomb and Tony Roche.

Long known as the reigning power in tennis, Australia has been losing this distinction in recent years. Newcomb and Roche organized the trip with hopes of gaining international exposure for their young stars.

"Australian tennis isn't as strong as it once was but, nevertheless, it is still very good and Newcomb wouldn't be going to all the trouble to bring these kids to the United States if he didn't feel they could compete with our junior players," explained Carter. "The Australian boys completely dominated a tournament they played in last weekend in Beaumont."

One tournament official reported that Newcomb might visit Lubbock to watch his Aussie's play if he can break away from the Wimbledon in time to catch the finals of the HWY-80.

Among the top-ranked players from Texas is Jeff Bramlett. The Midland native is ranked fourth in the state in men's singles. Last weekend in Midland,

Why Walk?

BROWNFIELD — Just being there, you felt embarrassed to walk.

Here were people of all ages — 5 years on up to those in their 60's — jogging around, just warming up. The t-shirts spoke of their interests (Half Fast Running Club, West Texas Running Club) and accomplishments (Diet Pepsi 10,000, Palo Duro Marathon, Capital 10,000, KCRS Super Run, Run In The Sun), and their shoes and clothing indicated they were running for comfort and not fashion.

There were some fancy warmup suits, but most stepped out of their cars, shed outer t-shirts, changed from street to running shoes, stretched muscles by leaning against the auto, slipped sweatbands around their heads and trotted off down the street.

It was the annual Fourth of July running spectacular at Brownfield, as sponsored by the West Texas Running Club. And most of the runners knew each other. Why shouldn't they; they compete against and run with each other about once at month.

They came from Canyon and Borger, San Angelo and Odessa, El Paso, Lovington and Lubbock, the runners striding off to warm up, their family boosters bearing the stopwatches (possibly) and water jugs (for sure).

• • •

SOME OF THE runners strided through the three-and ten-mile races with the ease and gait of talented competitors. Their long strides consumed the miles as if there was nothing to it, their feet appearing to barely touch the road.

But, others struggled along, heads back, in labor — bluntly, in pair — the sweat pouring from their faces and bodies, their shoes clomping a flat-footed tune of pure work onto the pavement.

But, they kept running. And they've been running — more and more of them — for 11 years now.

James Morris didn't run the race: he only ran the meet. A total of 206 showed up for Wednesday's race. And as he stood the finish line, clipboard in hand awaiting the first finishers, he looked out over the field as the stream of runners: "This doesn't look like the 25 we had when we started this thing 11 years ago."

• • •

"IT'S GETTING BIGGER every year, as more people get interested," said Brownfield's Gene Adams, president of the sponsoring West Texas Running Club which is the hub of running through this part of the country.

"We're having a five-mile run in August, and we expect 400 or 500 for that one."

Morris, track coach at Brownfield High, put on the first Fourth of July race in 1968, and the club was formed four years later. Morris was president in the early years, and Adams has been in charge for the past "four or five years.

"We actually started (the club) at the 1972 race and signed up 15 people," Adams said Wednesday. "Now, we have 350 paid members, all the way from Pampa and Borger to San Angelo and over to Carlsbad and Hobbs. Of course, the biggest group is from Lubbock, about 80 or 86 paid.

"But, at that time, there was just nothing for the post-college runner in this area. People were out running, without any training or without any goals. So, we felt if we could start a club, give them a goal, give them meaning for their training, it would keep it from being a boring and monotonous sport.

"We have set our goal to get the average person interested. We have incentive awards and programs for these people, because we know the really good runners wiill get their share (of trophies and awards)"

• • •

THE CLUB SPONSORS a race every month, spaced over the club territory for the convenience of its members.

There is the Palo Duro Canyon Marathon in January, and they're still talking about the last one:

"It was 8 degrees, with a chill factor of minus-30," recalled Adams. "Some of the runners actually had ice frozen to

Wills' Four Hits Helps Rangers Sweeps Orioles

By The Associated Press

Bump Wills had a triple and three singles, driving in three runs and scoring three times, to lead Texas to a 9-5 victory over the Baltimore Orioles and give the Rangers a sweep of their three-game series.

Denny Darwin, 2-0, who was staked to a 4-0 first-inning lead, gave up six hits, struck out four and walked three in five innings. Jim Kern finished the game, picking up his 14th save, striking out nine and giving up two hits.

Mike Flanagan, 10-6, lasted only two-thirds of an inning, giving up five hits, including Billy Sample's two-run homer. The Rangers got three more runs off reliever Tippy Martinez in the second and third and picked up their last two runs off Sammy Stewart.

YANKEES 4, BREWERS 3

Reggie Jackson's 13th home run of the season, a three-run third-inning blast high into the upper right field stands, powered the New York Yankees and Luis Tiant to a 4-3 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Jackson slammed his rocket off Milwaukee starter Billy Travers, 5-4, after Thurman Munson and Lou Piniella had singled with two out.

RED SOX 6, ROYALS 4

It was Koosman's 150th career major league victory. The 36-year-old southpaw, 10-6, struck out five and walked two in hurling his fifth complete game of the season.

Glenn Abbott, 4-9, was the loser.

Smalley's 15th homer of the season over the right-field fence sparked the Twins' five-run fourth inning. Smalley also singled in the second inning and leads the American League in hitting with a .372 average.

ANGELS 17, A'S 6

Don Baylor's two-run homer, his seventh homer in the past seven games, and five RBI and a myriad of Oakland miscues led the California Angels to a 17-6 victory over the A's.

PADRES 5, DODGERS 0

Dave Winfield's three-run homer backed a two-hit shutout effort by Bob Shirley as the San Diego Padres rolled past the Los Angeles Dodgers 5-0 before a sellout crowd of 45,481.

WHITE SOX 16, INDIANS 4

EXPOS 2, CUBS 1

BRAVES 7, GIANTS 6

PIRATES 6, CARDINALS 4

RACING ROUNDUP

Bonnett Takes Firecracker...

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP)— Neil Bonnett darted from the top of the track to the bottom and back to the top, sliding his way through slower traffic on the last lap of the Firecracker 400 Wednesday and winning by shutting off Benny Parsons from using a slingshot technique off the final turn.

"I couldn't run that hard all day long and then stumble at the end," said Bonnett, winning his first race at Daytona International Speedway. "I made a couple of moves over there I wouldn't ever want to have to move again. I went to the wall, then to the apron sideways and back up to the wall.

"I thought there was a hole big enough for me but I sure didn't think it was big enough for two people."

Parsons, who finished a car length behind the winner, agreed with Bonnett that traffic prevented him from tryin to slingshot past theleader off the fourth turn.

"If the traffic had opened up I felt I had a good shot," Parsonssaid. "I don't know if I ould have passed him, but I would have liked to have had one more chance."

Bonnett and Parsons both suffered from the 93-degree eat, which reaced an estimated 140 degrees on the asphalt.

"My car was really cooking," Bonnett said. "It was like turning up the car heater to extra hot. I stuck y hand out the window to try to get a little col air. I found out it was just like somebody urning on a blowtorch."

A crowd of bout 40,000 sat through the heat. Althogh it was well uder the summer speed feature's attendance of 60,000 and up in recent years, it was higher than officials were expecting in the face of extensive concern over the gasoline crisis.

It was Bonnett's first victory at Daytona International Speeway but thesecond Fircracker in a row for his Wood Brothers Mercury. David Pearson, who won last year, was replaced in the car by Bonnett last April. He promptly won the Mason Dixon 500.

Bonnett set a record speed of 172.890 miles per hour in a race slowed by only two caution flags for a total of nine of the 160 laps.

Neither Allison nor Labonte was injured in their crash, which came just after the halfway point as Alison surrendered the lead with a pit stop and was running fast to catch p. In an earlier wreck, Sandy Satullo and Jimmy Finger tangled on the backstretch. Finger was taken to a hospital for a foot x-ray. Satullo was unhurt.

The Finger-Satullo crash came as the leaders were passing them. The leading group of 13 cars running bumper to bumper was able to get past without hitting the spinning pair.

Pole starter Buddy Baker and Waltrip were exchanging the lead on every third lap at that stage of the race, but Baker's Daytona luck stayed miserable and he retired after 150 miles with ignition trouble.

Bonnett's record speed broke a mark of 167.247 mph set by Cale Yarborough in 1968. The32-year-old Bonnett won $21,705, his biggest payday in four years of Grand National racing.

The lead changed hands 31 times. Seen drivers held first place at least once — A.J. Foyt, Petty, Earnhardt, Parsons, Waltrip, Baker nd Bonnett.

Labonte said his wreck started when he pulled out to pass Al Holbert but ducked back in when he saw a slower car in the low groove of the turn. "I went back in behind Holbert and Chuck Bown hit me in the rear and knocked me into the wall. The car slid down the track and and Bobby slid into me."

"I've got a burn on my hand and elbow from old injuries and had a blister on my foot," he said. "The burns were beginning to give me some trouble and I was getting hot. When I got out of the car, the heat hit me. I'm okay now."

Chuck Bown, a regular on the West division of the Grand National circuit, finished seventh, followed by Harry Gant, Joe Millikan, Dick Brooks and Foyt.

...Virgin Wins Peachtree Race

ATLANTA (AP) — Craig Virgin, who holds the national record fo a 10,000-meter race, led a field of about 20,000 persons through extremely humid weather Wednesday to win the annual Peachtree Road Race.

Virgin, 23, of Lebanon, Ill., finished the 6.2-mile race through midtown Atlanta in 28:30.5, a record for the course, which was changed slightly from last year.

Finishing second was the defending champion, Mike Roche of Cranford, N.J., whose training thisyear was hampered by liver illness. Roche's time was 28:54.6, 4.7 seconds better than his time last year.

Finishing second among women participants was Patti Lyons of Brookline, Mass., with a time of 34:20.4. Ms. Lyons aso finished second in this year's Boston Marathon.

The field of runners, the largest in the race's 10-year history, faced temperatures in the mid-70s and humidity of 85 percent as the race got underway at 8 am.

"I just wanted to run as hard as I could," said Virgin, who said he hope to enter the 1980 Olympics in the 10,000-mter and marathon events. Virgin currently holds the national 10,000-meter record with a time of 27:39.4.

"I put everyhing I had ino it," he said.

Virgin said the humid conditions and the crowd affect even the most expert runners. But, he said, "You have to learn to be able to control the fatigue and not panic."

Watson, Bean Head Western Golf

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — "I'll take 283 right now and let the rest of the field shoot at it," says Tom Watson, who feels that five-under-par score should be good enough for his third Western Open golf championship and his fifth tournament victory of the year.

"If he takes 283, I'll take 282 and sit back," quipped defending champion Andy Bean.

They are co-favorites in the 76th Westen Open, which begins today over the demanding par 36-36—72 Butler National Golf Club course that stretches 7,097 yards.

Five of the top 10 money winners, led by Watson with $377,674, are in the field shooting for te $54,000 top prize in a purse that has been increased this year to $300,000.

But missing are Jack Nicklaus, who won in 1967 and 1968 but has avoided the tournament since it was shifted to Butler National in 1974; U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin, Masters champion Fuzzy Zoeller and such heavy money wnners as Lee Trevino, Jerry Pate, Lanny Wadkins and Hubert Green, all in the first 10.

In addition to Watson and Bean, those among the leading 10 on the financial list who are entered are Larry Nelson, Bruce Lietzke and Bill Rogers.

Watson indicated Wednesday that some of the players soured on the course when it was new and became home base for the Western Open in 1974, the first championshp Watson won as a pro.

"The course wasn't mature enough in the beginning," said Watson. "It has tiny greens — in the landing area that is — and the bluegrass fairways tend to wilt when it gets hot.

"Also some golfers may skip the tournment because, after all, this is the start of the summer schedule and some of them are taking off to get their families organized. We have 42 tournaments to play and you can't physically play all of them."

Watson said he has been practicing a lot. "I'm hitting the ball high and straight. I've made progress the last two weeks, mainly by spending a long time on the practice tees. That's where you get it all back.

"If it stays windy the greens will dry out and scores will skyrocket," Watson predicted. "But one thing you never feel upset by making a par on this course."

Lubbock Tennis Starts Today

the Tech recruit defeated Tech's No. 1 player, Doug Davis.

Lila Hirsch, the No. 1 ranked girl in the state in 18-and-under singles also will play in the tourney. However, the Beaumont netter has had ankle problems lately that may hamper her performance.

"The girls 18-and-under championship could be one of the toughest draws in the tourney," said Carter, who also directs the Lubbock Tennis Center.

Besides representatives from major Texas cities, the tourney also has attracted players from New Mexico and Arkansas. The age group with the largest draw is the 16-year-old boys singles.

NOT EVEN CLOSE—Kevin McHale of the United States battles for the ball with Felix Morales under the Cuban basket during a Pan American basketball game in San Juan, Puerto, Rico. The United States ran away with the victory 85-53. The American team will now meet Brazil tonight. (AP Laserphoto)

U.S. Still Hording Pan Am Gold Medals

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Even on an extremely light, holiday schedule Wednesday, with most of the blue-ribbon-sports teams inactive, the United States' horde of Pan American medals continued to swell.

The shooters and roller skaters each scored a gold-silver sweep early in the day to pick up the slack left by a break in the swimming schedule.

With several night events still to be completed, the United States led these hemispheric Olympics with 26 gold medals and 48 overall. Canada was a distant second with a gold-total count of 4-22.

Argentina had 4-13, Brazil 2-9, Cuba 1-9

The competitive schedule on American Independence day was the lightest of the two-week Games that have brought together some 5,000 athletes from 34 nations in North and South America.

While Puerto Rico competes as a separate country, it is a U.S. Commonwealth and its inhabitants are U.S. citizens, who celebrated the Fourth of July with traditional parades.

Authorities were concerned that leftist political groups, which seek independence for this tropic island vacationland, would use the occasion to demonstrate against the United States.

Nothing happened and the Games' schedule moved along with many American athletes, including the favored and unbeaten men's and women's basketball teams, getting in some beach time.

Mibey Wins 4th Race

BROWNFIELD (Special) — Ex-Lubbock Christian College runner Kip Mibey of Kenya nipped Lubbock's Cliff McCurdy by only a couple of strides in the three-mile run, but ten-mile division was even closer in the West Texas Running Club's annual Fourth of July Race here Wednesday.

Reid Harter of Lovington and schoolboy Carlos Ybarra of Lamesa strided across the finish line handin-in-hand, signifying an uncontested tie in the ten-mile run, as the largest group of runners in the race's 11-year history competed.

A total of 206 runners started the three race — there was a one-mile race for youngsters.

Harter and Ybarra covered the ten-mile distance in 57:36, and each was a winner in his respective division. Harter competed in the open division, Ybarra in the high school class.

Pressure Leaves Champ

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Defending champion Martina Navratilova still has to face a toughened Chris Evert Lloyd in the Wimbledon final, but she says much of the pressure is off now that she's gotten past 16-year-ld Tracy Austin.

"I don't have to worry very much about the pressure now," she said after beating Miss Austin 7-5, 6-1 in Wednesday's semifinals. "After winning Wimbledon last year and getting to the final again, I don't haven't prove myself any more."

Martina has been a step ahead of Mrs. Lloyd for most of the year since beating her in the Wimbledon final ast year. Mrs. Lloyd has had other thing on her mind, like her marriage this spring to British player John Lloyd.

But Mrs. Lloyd's concentration seems to have intensified in recent weeks. She beat Miss Navratilova at Eastbourne, a tournament the week before Wimbledon. And Mrs. Lloyd's results have been good here. She has not dropped a set in her six matches so far, and has ost 31 games, compared with three dropped sets and 51 lost games for Miss Navratilova.

"The result may seem easy, but te first set was very tough," said the 22-year-old Czech-born left hander. "I had to do a lot of running."

Martina's progress here has been witnessed by her mother, Jana, whom she had not seen in four years, since her defection to the United States. Mrs. Navratilova is on a two-week holiday from Prague.

"My mother was really delighted," said Martina. "Earlier in the tournament when my matches were going to three sets she thought she was bringing me bad luck."

Miss Navratilova's father and sister were unable to get exit visas to come to Wimbledon but will be able to watch the fina on German television.

Hills Action To Start

NEW YORK (AP) — Eddie Dibbs will play Harold Solomon and Wojtek Fibak will meet Raul Ramirez in te opening matches Monday night in the $300,000 Forest Hills Invitational, officials announced Wednesday.

John McEnroe, the favorite in the 12-man, three-group round-robin event, plays his first match Wednesday night against Victor Pecci, the Paraguayan who made it to the final of the Italian Open last month.

The Invitational is played at the West Side Tennis Cub, which until last year was the site of the U.S. Open.

Cavs May Get New Owner

CLEVELAND (AP) — Bert L. Wolstein, head of a Cleveland-based building firm, reportedly is negotiating with Cleveland Cavaliers principal owner Nick J. Mileti to buy the National Basketball Association team.

Wolstein, 42, of Developers Diversified, has been quietly buying up whatever Cavaliers stock has been available over the counter, according to a story in today's editions of the Cleveland Plain Dealer. As a result, the stock of the publicly owned team has jumped from $3 a share to $6.50 per share over the past few weeks.

The majority of the approximately 730,000 shares are closely held by the directors and Mileti. The stock initially was sold to the public at $5 a share.

Football

Jets Ink Robinson

NEW YORK (AP) — Quarterback Matt Robinson, who took over as quarterback for the New York Jets last season when Richard Todd was injured, has signed a series of three one-year contracts, the National Football League club confirmed Tuesday.

There was no official announcement of the transaction, which reportedly will bring the second-year pro $100,000 per season, since the Jets do not announce signings of veteran players.

Robinson started 11 games and won six of them, throwing for 2,002 yards and 13 touchdowns — six to wide receiver Wesley Walker — in helping New York to an 8-8 record.

The Jets also have signed wide receiver Kevin Bell, another second-year pro who was picked up a a free agent last season fter being cut by the San Diego Chargers.

Bruins To Name Coach

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Bruins Wednesday said they would announce the National Hockey League team's new coach, expected to be former Atlanta Flames Coach Fred Creighton, at a news conference Thursday.

Others who have been mentioned as possible successors to former Bruins Coach Don Cherry have included Parker MacDonald, who coached and managed the New Haven Nighthawks of the American Hockey League last year, and former Bruins star John Buczyk.

The news conference at Boston Garden is scheduled for 9:30 a.m. (CDT).

Creighton, fired two months ago as coach of the Flames, said after meeting with Bruins General Manager Harry Sinden last week that, "Harry said he would get back to me, and if I'm officially offered the Bruins coaching job, I will take it."

Creighton, 45, spent four years coaching in Atlanta and was released by Flames General Manager Cliff Fletcher after the club was eliminated by the Toronto Maple Leafs in the preliminary round of the Stanley Cup playoffs this spring.

Al MacNeil has been signed to coach the Flames next season.

"Don Cherry will be a tough act to follow, but I'm confident in my own abilities," Creighton said last week.

Wimbledon Net Action

Miss Austin, the schoolirl prodigy from Rolling Hills, Calif, aimed to be the oungest Wimbledon finalist of this century and for a while Wednesday it looked as though she might succeed.

After trailing 1-3, Tracy took four straight games and led 5-3. But at that point the strong Miss Navratilova took control and won nine games, which took her to 5-0 in the second.

The fast grass court, where the ball skidded and bounced at varying heights, favored Miss Navratilova's serve-and-volley game. Tracy, who plays a steady baseline game on clay, went for broke and attacked at the net.

"She came in on my serve," Miss Navratilova said. "I was asking myself, was this really Tracy playing?"

The teen-ager hit some remarkable passing shots along both sides, but her service was not powerful enough for the fast conditions.

Afterwards, as cheerful as ever, Tracy said, "The main thing is to go back to the match and learn from it. I'm not going to sulk because I got beaten."

She got one doubtful line call when she led 5-4 and was serving for the first set. At 15-30 a long volly ended with Navartilova winning the point. But one shot from the defending champion appeared to land over the baseline.

Tracy walked over to the umpire to question the call and the crowd shouted "Out." But the linesman thought otherwise and the umpire allowed the call to stand.

"She came in on my serve. I was asking myself, was this really Tracy playing? After winning Wimbledon last year and getting to the finals again, I don't feel I have to prove myself anymore."—MARTINA NAVRATILOVA the legs when they finished, but we still had 100 people start the race."

But, hot weather or frigid, they keep coming back, setting their own goals while striding along with the competitors. And every year, the July 4 race and the club get larger and larger.

Interest in competing and running was exhibited best Wednesday by Harry Howell of O'Donnell. Harry covered the course in a wheel chair.

"That was the first time we've had any wheel-chair competitors," said Adams. "But, we're ready to see more of them, and we'll add a division for them."

Dooley Legacy Tainted By CIA Ties

NEW YORK (AP) — He soared swiftly to fame as a paragon of brave, compassionate works, but the late jungle doctor, Tom Dooley, left a record that has become clouded by mixed motives.

An "ambiguous legacy," says Notre Dame Magazine writer Jim Winters this week in detailing for Religious News Service the young doctor's meteor-like rise to prominence and equally rapid fall into obscurity.

Ironically, among the anomalies cited about his spectacular, brief career of the 1950s is that a Roman Catholic sainthood investigation brought out his ties to the Central Intelligence Agency.

The story from the news service run by the National Conference of Christians and Jews says the Rev. Maynard Kegler, American promoter of Dooley's sainthood cause, turned up his CIA connections.

Athough he "inspired people' to greater Christian sevice, Father Kegler says, nearly 500 CIA documents reveal that Dooley kept the agency posted on troop movements and villager statements around his hospital in Laos.

Dooley himsef, in one of his highly popular books, had dismissed suspicion he was engaged in U.S. espionage activity as "absurd," blaming it on communists.

But it was not absurd, according to Kegler. "When Tom went to Laos he was contacted by the State Department and briefed, and every time he came back ... he'd give information about troops being moved, ammunition coming in, attitudes of people — whether they were favorable to the Americans or to the communists."

CIA agents, in turn, kept the State Department posted on Dooley's own movements and sentiments, Kegler says. "The CIA looked for dirt on Dooley.... they looked into his personal life. It was like what they did to Martin Luther King.... But they never found anything to discredit Dooley.

"I guess they figured he was influencing too many people and they could'nt control the guy."

Dooley's flashing career began in 1954, just a year after he earned his M.D., and it quickly elevated him to esteem alongside Albert Schweitzer, Winston Churchill and Pope John XXIII on the Gallup poll's 1959 list of most-admired living men.

He turned out three best-selling books and traveled 400,000 miles promoting his work. He raised more than $1.7 million, including $10,000 in a single appearance on Dave Garroway's "Today" show.

With the funds he established seven hospitals in four Asian countries, providing medical care for half a million people.

"You have accomplished so much for the good of distant peoples and have inspired so many others to work for humanity," President Eisenhower wired Dooley on his 34th birthday, Jan. 17, 1961.

Dooley died of cancer the next night.

Congress voted a special gold medal and President Kennedy lauded Dooley's "splendid example." Kirk Douglas planned a film biography, but it was never made in the sudden eclipse that descended over Dooley, and his books stopped selling years ago.

And today, Winters writes, the man who once "inspired so many now is remembered by few.... If he had stayed out of politics ... he might still be a hero today. But he chose to politicize his books, his speeches, his medicine."

Millionaire Trims Wife Advertisement Applicants To Three

LONDON (UPI) — Horace Langford, the lonely millionaire who decided to advertise for a wife, announced Wednesday he had narrowed the choice to three out of 800 applicants.

"My big double bed is absolutely littered with applications," said the 72-year-old Langford, also known as Champagne Horace. "I have had calls from all over the world."

He said he had been "very lonely" since his divorce two years ago and decided to place an ad for a "housekeeper with view to marriage" in a newspaper near his home in Buckinghamshire.

Applicants should be, he specified, about 30, brunette, measure 36-24-36 and be "witty and able to look after an intelligent man in his old age."

Langford, director of five property companies, said the response was "staggering."

"Please, please no more (applications)," he said. "I have got enough women to start two harems. The books are now definitely closed. It's going to take my secretary and me several weeks to make a final choice."

Langford said the front runner right now was a young woman from Middlesex. "Unfortunately I can't seem to remember her first name," he said. "But she is very nice indeed, a dark Indian sort of lady, very pretty indeed."

The second candidate was a young woman from Amersham whom "I took out to dinner and we had lots to talk about." The third was from Windsor, "most attractive and very charming.

"I really want something I can grab," he said. "I am only five feet five inches tall and I want a cuddly woman. Would settle for a housekeeper but I'm really after a wife.

"When we are married I will share everything with her and she will have it all when I am gone. The girl I choose won't be marrying an old duffer. I'm not a dirty old man. I genuinely need companionship."

Several PBS Stations Unite To Produce 'Summerfest '79'

NEW YORK (AP) — No one could think of a good reason why several of public TV's big producing stations couldn't work together on a single, major project, so "Summerfest '79" was born.

"It is truly a cooperative effort," says David Griffiths, executive producer of the nine-week festival of music and dance. "I don't know why we hadn't thought of it before.

"It did come out of necessity," says Griffiths, who works for New York's WNET. "Had any single station asked for the money to do this, it would have been difficult for CPB to award what they would need."

GEORGE SHEARING

But when representatives of four stations — WNET, KCET in Los Angeles, WETA in Washington and WTTW in Chicago — suggested "Summerfest '79," the Corporation for Public Broadcasting and other Public Broadcasting Service stations came up with $1.5 million.

Griffiths and others behind "Summerfest '79" contracted to use production equipment owned by another PBS station, WGBH in Boston, and began working on a schedule.

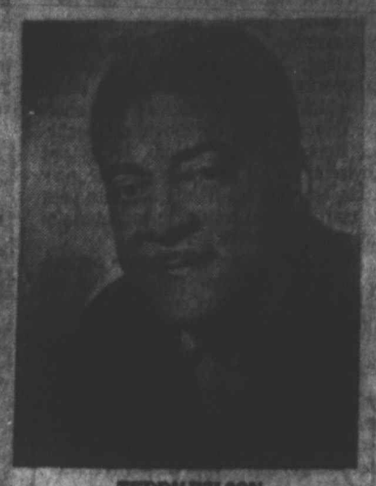
"We were looking for 2½-to-3-hour popular, contemporary music events, most of which we could do live," Griffiths says. "We were trying to represent various trends in music that are important today because of their influence in the past, or because they are simply important today.

"And I think we have a pretty good mix for everybody."

"Summerfest '79" begins on many PBS stations the night of July 7, with "Great Jazz Pianos" from Wolf Trap Farm Park near Washington. The premiere program, produced by WETA, features performances by Eubie Blake, Marian McPartland, Teddy Wilson and George Shearing.

As with all PBS programs, air date and time may vary.

The "Summerfest '79" schedule continues July 14 with a concert by Tex Beneke, Helen O'Connell and Bob Eberly, followed by an Ashford and Simpson concert July 21, a peformance by The Paul Taylor Dance Company July 28, a repeat of "Ray Charles at Montreaux"



TEDDY WILSON

Aug. 4, Pete Seeger and Arlo Guthrie in concert Aug. 11, a rock 'n' roll revival Aug. 18, a performance by Charles Aznavour Aug. 25 and a country music jamboree Sep. 1.

"This is sort of a trial run," Griffiths said. "Because of the high cost of producing performing arts programs — no less than $150,000 and as much as $450,000 — it's becoming harder and harder for individual stations to raise the money for even one-shot productions."

It was decided that each station would supervise production of two programs in the "Summerfest '79" series, with each deciding how to spend its share of the money. The South Carolina Educational Television Network will produce the ninth segment.

Griffiths says production and technical experts from several PBS Stations met some time back to set standards for "Summerfest '79," and, he says, "the consensus was for very high quality."

With that in mind, the "Summerfest '79" people went after the Boston station's sophisticated equipment.

"I'm sort of excited that we were able to stay within the PBS System for all of this," Griffiths says. "It's about time we started finding ways for our rather loosely associated stations to work together when a project like this makes sense to them."

Griffiths says "Summerfest '79" could lead to a similar series in the wintertime, concerts from places like Carnegie Hall and McCormick Place in Chicago, "and another logical step would be to broaden this to include international events.

Fiedler Absent; Boston Pops Concert Toned Down

BOSTON (AP) — Arthur Fiedler, who is more of a Fourth of July fixture than fireworks in Boston, spent Wednesday at home, away from the patriotic riverfront concert he originated more than a half-century ago.

The 83-year-old maestro of the Boston Pops orchestra is recuperating from a heart ailment. He has been hospitalized twice this year and underwent brain surgery in December.

Aside from Fiedler's absence, the concert he originated in 1923 was radically different this year from past performaces, which included Tchaikovsky's 1812 Overture, complete with cannon fire, bell-ringing and fireworks.

This year's program featured no sound and light show, no 1812 Overture. The group that in the past has paid for the special effects pulled out, citing staff and money constraints

The Metropolitan District Commission, which operates the Esplanade on the banks of the Charles River, claimed the fireworks caused crowd problems. Past performances have drawn more than 100,000 persons.

The baton at this year's concert was to be wielded by assistant conductor Harry Ellis Dickson, but Fiedler still had some input.

Iran Purges 'Kojak,' Other Television Favorites

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — "Kojak", "The Streets of San Francisco" and American soap operas are gone from Iran's state-owned television. An evenin's entertainment is more likely now to feature interviews with workers,an economics lecturer and the cofessions f a torturer.

Islamic authorities also pride themselves in having urged "Western influences" from the national radio, banning most Western music and female singers. Programs now revolve around resounding anthems and poetry, frequent special announcements and interviews with revolutionary personalities.

Broadcast officials believe that the elimination of Western shows from Iranian TV, and a concentration on more serious matters, will help strengthen the revolution. But many Iranians are switching off their television at night and resorting to listenning in their automobiles to Western music on tape players instead of the single state radio channel. Western tapes and records still can be purchased openly in the country.

"There's no entertainment left on television, except a few programs they've been forced to put on because the people insist on it," says a young Iranian professional. An irate letter-writer to a local paper stormed at TV officials: "You have ruined the only entertainment of the Iranian people. What are you going to do to make up for it?"

A few Western programs still survive on TV, including Britain's 'The World at War" series, U.S. and other foreign-made cartoons for children and some old movies. But religious and political programs are the big prime-time choies and even children's shows are spiced with politics.

On one recent evening, programming began with a stirring revolutionary anthem — "God is Our Leade and Iran will Live Forever" — and a rendition of verses in Arabic from the Koran, the Moslem holy book. Since most Iranians cannot understand Arabic, an announcer explained afterward what the verses meant.

Following a newscast — mainly government statements and foreign news — a woman modestly covered by a headscarf introduced cartoons for children. The national radio and television director, Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, said in an Associated Pess interiew last month that head coverings for women —an Islamic trdition —are now the "national dress" in Iran and should be used by women on TV.

In addition to cartoons, the children's program included a poem sent in by a young viewer likening the Middle East crisis to an Iranian children's story about wolves and sheep. The wolf in his poem was Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan, backed by Uncle Sam, while the sheep were the Palestinians, supported by God.

Later in the evening, after more news and "The World at War," TV reporters interviewed a broommaker and a metalworking instructor about their reactions to the Islamic revolution. A tieless economics teacher then lectured viewers on how Iran's economy works, covering a blackboard with symbols and arrows as he spoke.

Finally, the network devoted two hours to coverage of the trial of two extorturers of the shah's SAVAK secret police. In graphic testimony, the torturers related that SAVAK had beaten suspects wih electric cables, dripped hot wax on them and stuck red-hot pins under their fingernails.

Ghotbzadeh's television and radio have been shaply criticized by some of their own employees for alleged news censorship. But Ghotbzadeh denies the claim, saying no broadcaster can make everyone happy with his news judgment.

Revolutionary officials promise that the fare on television will be lightened in he future. But this is likely to come about through subsidizing of new Iranian productions — respectful of revolutionary tastes — rather than through buying more Western series.

Marie Osmond Calls Off Wedding

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Singer Marie Osmond said Wednesday that her engagement to Jeff Crayton is off.

The 19-year-old television star told a crowd at the Montgomery Coliseum, "Marriage is a serious thing you don't want to fool around with. We had doubts, so we called it off."

Miss Osmond and two of her brothers, Jay and Wayne, were in Montgomery for the Tumbling Waters Museum's annual Old-Fashioned Fourth of July Celebration.

The couple was engaged May 29. Crayton is a Los Angeles actor attending Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah, the home of the Osmond family.

"Tell the world I love him and I've never been happier," Miss Osmond said when she announced their engagement.

The two were engaged at the Osmond television studios in Orem, Utah, and said they planned a mid-August wedding in the Mormon Temple in Salt Lake City.

New regulations require that all outgoing mail at maximum security prisons — except letters to attorneys, courts, government officials and the news media — be left unsealed for inspection. Tech Theater's 'Company' Rated 'Beautiful Hit'

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

Talent abounds in the Texas Tech University Theater summer repertory production of "Company," both on and off stage, and the result is a sparkling, exhuberant, uplifting, toe-tapping musical which positively crackles with energy. Concentrating on 35-year-old bachelor Robert and his friends, lovers and advisers — his company — the play takes an often hilariously accurate peek at marriage and relationships, entertaining us with Robert's indecision.

The entire ensemble meshes perfectly, offering one show-stopper after another and making "Company" nothing short of a big, booming, beautiful hit.

A-J THEATER REVIEW

Robert's girl friends, even clicking together with a humorously choreographed number called "You Could Drive A Person Crazy." But basically, we're given Robert's observation of five married couples: their arguments, egos, trials of patience, feelings and distinct lack of loneliness. The married men are convinced Robert should stay single (a status they equate with freedom); the married women are convinced Robert will die from lack of tenderness if he doesn't take a wife.

But playwright George Furth and composer-lyricist Stephen Sondheim tell us, in rather funny fashion, of the individual nature of happiness and matrimony, the give and take, the doubts which never leave.

It's all expressed very early with the first couple we meet: Sarah and Harry. Played by Katherine Massello and Pat Remmert, respectively, here are a wife and husband playing a game of one-upmanship, correcting each other and refusing to admit defeat as they test one another's karate prowess (complete with some deliciously frantic falls). We laugh as Miss Massello positively shakes with adoration as she recalls the food from which she is trying to abstain, and Remmert gets his revenge through the mere mention of carbohydrates.

There is a marijuana-smoking evening with Jenny and David (Paula Parks and Mark Walters), a uniquely happy divorce with Susan and Peter (Kathy Watson and Tony Mitchell) and a final bit of soul-searching revelation with Joanne and Larry (Julie McQuain and David Morrow). But an audience favorite is undoubtedly our look at the wedding day of Amy (Heather Hollingsworth) and Paul (John Carney). Almost overdosing on inner turmoil, Miss Hollingsworth provides a flurry of energetic doubts as she sings on and on about why she shouldn't marry. Even with Paul waxing romantic in his boxer shorts, Miss Hollingsworth is a crowd-pleasing, rib-tickling, nervous wreck.

And let us not pass over Kent Kirkpatrick as Robert, the focus of the show, able to dominate when expected and stand back as observer when not.

Still, more impressive than any individual performances are the fantastically timed ensemble work and the much-needed sense of irony instilled by visiting director Nancy Vunovich. It is to her credit that the songs do not seem contrived intrusions, and the characters are seen in human rather than condescending terms. Aided in no small way by pianist Mary Savage, guitarist Jerry Tubbs and percussionists Alan Shinn and Larry Hess, all of whom know how to enhance rather than overpower, the ensemble musical numbers come alive with an involving intensity and vigor.

The irony is evident even as we hear the lyrics "the little things you do together" after seeing Sarah and Harry knock the wind out of each other on the living room floor. And while the wives are bemoaning Robert's loneliness, we see him putting the moves on — and eventually bedding — Miss Pyeatt. At which point their lovemaking is illustrated, with a tenderness which segues into witty exaggeration, by dancers Tony Mitchell and Nancy Holt.

The dancers are backed initially by the voices of lovers and then go on to express in purely comic terms one partner's fatigue. The "morning after" scene with Kirkpatrick and Miss Pyeatt is one of the musical's most comical, and reveals that Furth and Sondheim are not content to pick on the married characters. They recognize the games singles play, too.

"Company" is admittedly a more humorous than rosy look at the company of husbands and wives and friends. But we can't help but feel it is the entertainment rather than the sociological implications which Miss Vunovich hopes to emphasize in this production. A wise decision, for the director and her players prove over and over that points can be made with comedy and song.

Indeed, married theater-goers may recognize a lot of truths while having a good time with "Company." Everyone else in the theater will have to be satisfied with just having a good time.

• • • • • • • •

"Company" will be staged at the Texas Tech University Theater at 8:15 p.m. today, Monday and July 13. Call the theater's box office at 742-3601 for reservations and prices.

Sherlock Holmes Film Rated One Of Very Best

"Murder By Decree." Produced and directed by Bob Clark. Screenplay by John Hopkins. Photographed by Reg Morris. Costumes by Judy Moorcroft. Special effects by Michael Albrechtson. Stars Christopher Plummer, James Mason, Donald Sutherland, Genevieve Bujold, David Hemmings, Susan Clark, Anthony Quayle and Sir John Gielgud. Rated PG. At Showplace Six today only.

A-J Entertainment Editor

Try this storyline on for size: On the trail of the notorious Jack the Ripper, legendary sleuth Sherlock Holmes and his steadfast assistant Dr. Watson uncover a governmental can of worms, a sort of Dickensian Watergate kept silent for years. Sounds just a bit ridiculous, you say? Nevertheless, thanks to a wildly imaginative director and an exceptional cast, this story has been developed into one of the genre's most exciting and entertaining mysteries in a picture called "Murder By Decree."

Publicity states this is the 134th Sherlock Holmes movie made and, in my mind anyway, it's one of the very best.

Things appear normal enough at first, with Holmes wearing his tweed and deerstalker cap, smoking his pipe and revealing flashes of ego. But the more we see of this new Holmes, the more shocked and grateful we become because, in the hands of director Bob Clark and actor Christopher Plummer, Holmes is granted a never before seen humanity. Basil Rathbone never approached the emotionalism of Plummer's Holmes who, stricken by the sight of a once sane woman suffering in a "hellish" insane asylum, actually attacks the doctor who put her there and then turns toward the camera, his face etched in agony and tears flowing from his eyes.

A-J FILM REVIEW

But if Christopher Plummer is impressive as Holmes, James Mason is nothing short of superb as Watson. Unlike Nigel Bruce's character, Watson does not cower under Holmes' heel. Mason plays the good doctor as a man of wit, intelligence and courage, amazed at his companion's powers of deduction and yet perfectly able to play detective and fend off attackers on his own.

Indeed, James Mason may be the most endearing Watson the screen has ever seen.

Together, this Holmes and this Watson keep us on the edges of our seats as they attempt to solve a series of grisly murders which is anything but elementary. Could someone have actually hired this Jack the Ripper to terrorize the street prostitutes in London's East End? Screenwriter John Hopkins makes the implausible seem plausible, at least for a couple hours in a darkened theater, with a complicated storyline full of grusesome murders, questionable motives, governmental corruption and more serpentine twists than a London alleyway.

It's all a bit much at times and, yes, even the final denouement fails to fully explain a few minor details. Yet the film remains great fun.

Visually, the picture takes on a storybook quality, as the cameras take us down cobblestoned streets lined with log and mist. The narrow alleyways provide suspense on more than one occasion as we watch a killer's winding descent on his victim and a climactic wild chase. The costumes fit the period gloriously, and Clark grants his killer a sense of the supernatural more than once thanks to a variety of lenses and slow motion techniques. His threatening of our heroes with the approaching thunder of horses' hooves is even more effective than the short scene using the same technique in "The Seven Per Cent Solution."

Most important, though, is Clark's inclusion of humor. Without once interfering with the mystery or suspense, comic inclusions manage to keep slipping in. The banter between Holmes and Watson reveals their often amusing comradeship and loyalty, but is never more humorous than in the scene in which Watson patiently struggles to snare with his fork the final pea on his plate. Later, a prostitute brags that she still has all her own teeth, and the look on her face as she discovers, in the middle of a conversation, that one has been loosened is absolutely priceless.

The supporting cast is nothing short of a thespic Who's Who. Genevieve Bujold shines as the servant girl who, even while semi-catatonic in an asylum, remains the key to the mystery before us. A rather thick David Hemmings is Foxborough, the police inspector who capitalizes on Holmes' powers for the wrong reasons. Donald Sutherland is the psychic Robert Lees, a hollow face with sunken eyes which see far-away events as — or even before — they happen. Susan Clark takes a change of pace after more glamorous roles, offering an excellent portrayal of a scruffy and horrified harlot on the run.

Anthony Quayle positively roars as Sir Charles, the head of Scotland Yard who is against Holmes' intervention from the very start. And the talented Sir John Gielgud even steps in for a short bit as the prime minister.

In short, how this motion picture has managed to escape the public attention's is beyond me. Originally released in 1978, it has only just now made its way to Lubbock and will probably be gone before you know it. Perhaps the problem lies in its length or complex plotting or, more likely, the lack of publicity granted it. But it remains a dynamic mystery, filled with humor and excitement and an almost Gothic fear on the foggy streets of London in 1888.

Hopefully, too, it is not the last we'll see of Christopher Plummer as Sherlock Holmes and James Mason as Dr. Watson. Their casting was pure inspiration.

Bob Hope Stage Variety Show In Peking

PEKING (UPI) — Bob Hope staged the first ever U.S. Variety show in Peking's Capital Theater Wednesday night. Peking had never seen anything like it.

The four-hour spectacular included such Peking firsts as a disco singer gyrating in a revealing see-through outfit, the Philadelphia Boys' Choir singing an ode to the late Mao Tse-tung and Hope himself rattling off one-liners about Chinese society.

Ambassador Leonard Woodcock introduced the show, an emotional scene of Sino-American friendship that never could have occurred a year ago.

The music hall presentation for the diplomatic colony and Chinese government officials was a preview of the television entertainment film Hope is making in China.

Most of the crowd — half Chinese, half foreign diplomats, with some American visitors including Ohio Gov. James Rhodes — had come from an U.S. Embassy July 4th party complete with hot dogs and hamburgers for more than 1,000 guests.

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

Billy Graham Speaks At Capitol

WASHINGTON (AP) — While evangelist Billy Graham deplored the energy crisis from the steps of the Capitol this Fourth of July, marijuana lovers smoked, drank and chanted outside the White House about a mile away.

Graham addressed an estimated 9,000 to 10,000 people Wednesday at an old-fashioned Honor America Day, replete with the U.S. Army Band, Boy and Girl Scout troops, and smiling stewardesses who served as official hostesses.

"We are facing an energy crisis that loathes down on us with an ever-increasing momentum," Graham said on a day when gasoline shortages put a crimp in the holiday plans of many Americans. He said people must cope through austerity and a change in their lifestyles.

The Honor America ceremony was teased by a light morning drizzle which turned to showers by the time an annual July Fourth "smoke-in" got under way at noon at Lafayette Park facing the White House. There were an estimated 5,000 celebrants.

The aroma of marijuana, beer and incense permeated the air outside the White House fence, and for a few minutes it appeared some of the demonstrators would vault the fence.

After a peaceful stroll to Lafaette Park, the predominantly young crowd gathered in small clusters to picnic, drink a variety of alcoholic beverages, puff away and kibbitz.

As the rain grew heavier and the numbers of uniformed policemen increased, a line of confrontation developed across Pennsylvania Avenue, with police on horseback, scooters and on foot forming a line between the park and the White House.

Suddenly, several hundred demonstrators rushed the White House fence and a few of them reached its top. The police pushed them back. There were no arrests or serious injuries.

Two Marines from Camp Lejeune, N.C., were among the crowd. "This is my third smoke-in in a row," said one, who asked not to be identified. "We got here at three this morning. Hitchhiked all night. Wouldn't miss this for anything."

Henry ("My boss might read this story") from Philadelphia called this year's smoke-in "a bit noisier than usual," and blamed the rain. "Too wet to picnic this year, so they're standing around. Hope the cops don't get too angry having to be in the rain."

By mid-afternoon police dispersed the group from the park. They returned to the Reflecting Pool near the Lincoln Memorial, where they originally congregated.

The Honor America ceremony also featured Lynda Bird Robb, daughter of former President Lyndon B. Johnson and chairwoman of President Carter's Advisory Committee on Women.

She urged passage of the Equal Rights Amendment and applauded the introduction this week of the Susan B. Anthony dollar coin.

"A woman on the dollar gives recognition to the fact that women are making money and spending it. We are finally equal partners in the economy," Mrs. Rob said.

J. Willard Marriott, chairman of the Mariott Corp. and head of Honor America Day, stressed energy independence on Independence Day. "Why do we drive hell-bent from one red light to another?" he asked.

Iranian Officials Attend U.S. Festivities

TEHRAN (AP) — Senior Iranian revolutionary government officials attended Fourth of July celebrations at the U.S. Embassy. U.S. diplomats said they considered it a sign that Iran desires improved relations with the United States despite serious recent strains.

The diplomats said they were pleased that the reception was attended by Foreign Minister Ibrahim Yazdi, former government spokesman Abbas Amir-Entezam and other top members of the revolutionary regime.

A small picnic in the embassy compound, which has been guarded by rifle-toting Iranian security men since a commando attack in February, attracted about 200 people. There were few women or children.

Last year, the event took place in a large park, attracting more than 3,000 Americans, including many family groups. The number of U.S. citizens in Iran has declined from about 41,000 18 months ago to 3,000.

Most of those remaining are part of Iranian-American households. United States diplomats, businessmen, technicians and journalists on assignment from the United States total only a few hundred.

In Peking, the day was celebrated as the first Fourth of July since the United States and the People's Republic of China normalized relations. An international open house with hamburgers and hot dogs at the U.S. Embassy was followed by a variety show at the old Capital Theater featuring Bob Hope, other American performers, three Chinese comedians and a magician.

With a Chinese translator at his side, Hope joked about chopsticks, laundry and bicycles. For example: "They gave me a great ride from the airport to the hotel. Twice I fell off the handlebars ... I've never seen such crowded streets, but it's so well organized that slower traffic is on the bottom layer."

Hope was introduced by U.S. Ambassador Leonard Woodcock and was warmly received by the audience, most of it from the foreign community in Peking, but including some Chinese.

In Denmark about 15,000 Danes and Americans gathered in the hills of the Rebild National Park south of Aalborg for the annual Fourth of July celebrations, believed to be the largest outside the United States.

In fine, sunny weather the crowd, including hundreds of Americans of Danish descent who flew over for the festival and a visit to the land of their ancestors, listened to a message of friendship and peace from President Carter and brief speeches by Princess Benedikte, a younger sister of Queen Margrethe II, and Danish Foreign Minister Henning Christophersen.

The U.S. Brigade in Berlin held a Fourth of July parade that also marked the 34th anniversary of its arrival in the divided city at the end of World War II.

A 56-gun salute was fired in honor of the 50 states and the six U.S territories, a military spokesman said.

The parade, held on Fourth of July Square in the Lichterfelde district, included troops and motorized units. Parts of the Declaration of Independence were read.

Traditional Holiday Enjoyed By Iowans

By The Associated Press

Iowans shinnied up greased poles, hurled rolling pins and paddled canoes Wednesday in old-fashioned Independence Day celebrations all over the state. Algona was celebrating, too — despite the tornado that devastated the community and killed two residents last Thursday.

There were 150 entries in Algona's parade, which ran through an area of town left unharmed by the tornado. Free events were scheduled all day. The celebration was a scaled-down version of Algona's 125th anniversary, which had been scheduled to run all week.

The Great Iowa Canoe Race started at 4 p.m. on the Des Moines River at Bettensdorf. It ended about 10 miles later at Bonapart, with $100 going to the first finisher.

Marathon softball began at 8 a.m. in Perry. Baseball and fireworks were on the agenda at Linden.

Ottumwa residents trooped to the city's largest park to glimpse a $60,000 limousine once owned by the late Elvis Presley. Free afternoon concerts were scheduled by Presley's band, J.D. Sumner and the Stamps.

The Sioux City Police Department reported dozens of complaints about the use of fireworks purchased in Nebraska and South Dakota. Iowa law limits fireworks to caps, snakes and sparklers.

NATURE, ARTS UNITE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interior Department and the National Endowment for the Arts have agreed to work together to develop ways to integrate arts and cultural programs into the nation's parks and recreation system. Interior Secretary Cecil D. Andrus said, "we are looking forward to this sharing of resources and expertise of the Arts Endowment and Interior Department in orderto more effectively promote and support federal, regional and local-level activities of cultural and historic value." Livingston J. Biddle Jr., chairman of the Arts Endowment, said, "This agreement marks the beginning of a promising partnership, that not only represents a major new imputus for the recognition of arts' potential, but also the value of interagency cooperation in realizing that potential.'

Roundup Unplanned Event

CATOOSA, Okla. (UPI) — Sheriff's deputies and cowboys on horseback spent most of Independence Day rounding up 115 cattle wandering around an interstate highway interchange.

The cattle escaped from a trailer truck that tipped over when the driver failed to negotiate a curve in Interstate 44. The driver, Joseph Allen Blanchard of Fort Worth, suffered minor injuries.

The Highway Patrol said the eastbound lane of Interstate 44 was blocked by the roaming herd for about two hours after the 8:45 a.m. wreck, but cattle were found scattered in the surrounding area at least eight hours later.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. What do you think about hospital bonds as investments? They pay good rates of interest and look very attractive. But what about their safety?

A. Your letter presents a great opportunity for this column to drive home the point that it is impossible to generalize and make blanket statements about most types of securities.

Some hospital bonds are great investments. Some aren't. Some are as safe as safe can be. Some are risky. The moral of the story is that each hospital bond issue has to be looked at individually.

A handy — but far from foolproof — guide to the quality of any bond issue is the "rating" it receives from the "rating services," such as Standard & Poor's Corp., Moody's Investors Service and Fitch's Investors Service.

Ratings of AAA, A-plus, A1 down to A indicate quality bonds. Watch out when the letter B appears in a bond rating. Some brokers claim a Baa-rated bond is of "investment quality." That's open to argument.

Hospital bonds come in many varieties but generally fall into two categories — those backed only by individual hospitals an those issued by local government agencies.

A bond backed by an individual hospital usually pays higher interest. Those issued by local government agencies pay lower interest, because that interest is not subject to federal income tax and — in most states — not subject to state and local income tax.

Some are mortgage bonds — liens against hospital property. Some are revenue bonds — payable from hospital income. Some have other wrinkles.

The "seoondary market" — where you would sell a bond before it matures — is sometimes "thin" for small bond issues. That means you might have to sell at a discount. But that shouldn't bother you, if you plan to hold the bond until maturity.

Q. I bought a $10,000 U.S. Treasury note through my local bank. My bank arranged for the purchase through a big New York City bank with which it does business and said my note would be kept at the New York bank. That seemed OK, for safety and convenience.

But the semi-annual interest payments from the note have been credited to my account at my local bank six days after they were due. My bank says it takes the New York bank that long to send the money. Why should the New York bank have the use of my interest for six days, twice a year?

A. I doubt that it does. Checking this out with the New York bank you named in your letter, which has a "correspondent arrangement" with your bank, I got all kinds of assurances that the New York bank credits interest payments to the accounts of its correspondent banks on the very day the interest payments are due.

Because those payments are credited to correspondent bank accounts by wire, it's unlikely there's any delay there. Once your bank gets the money, it's up to that bank to credit it to your account.

My suggestion is to go back to your local bank and ask for another explanation. There's a foul-up somewhere — most likely at your bank.

Q. Are the "real" certificates of deposit — which you explained come in minimum denominations of $100,000 — insured beyond the $40,000 limit of either the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. or the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corp.?

A. Nope. Insurance by both the FDIC and FSLIC stops at $40,000 per depositor and covers savings certificates — which come in denominations below $100,000 — as Well as checking and savings accounts.
