Yeltsin sweeps challenger

Voters reject Zyuganov's call to revive Soviet Union

■ President Clinton says Russian presidential election is 'triumph for democracy.'

Associated Press

MOSCOW — President Boris Yeltsin swept to a stunning victory and a second term today as Russians decisively rejected his Communist opponent's call to revive the Soviet Union and its rigid controls.

With 92 percent of the vote counted, Yeltsin had 54 percent compared to 41 percent for Communist challenger Gennady Zyuganov. About 5 percent of voters exercised a third option — not choosing either candidate.

It was a remarkable triumph for the 65-year-old Yeltsin, who was given almost no hope of re-election at the start of the year. Overcoming concerns about his competence and his health, Yeltsin stormed back on the campaign trail, crisscrossing the vast country to persuade Russians that he was the best hope for reform and stability.

It also marked another major turning point in Russia's chaotic recent history, with voters rejecting the resurgent Communist Party's call to restore the overwhelming power of the Soviet state and roll back economic reforms and personal freedoms.

Yeltsin says he will press ahead vigorously with democratic reforms. Still, there is concern about whether he will live out this four-year term after suffering two heart attacks in the past year. He also has a disquieting habit of periodically disappearing from public view.

In the first round of voting June 16, Yeltsin edged

Darlie Routier of Rowlett, accused of capital murder in the death of her two sons, listens Wednesday to testimony during a child custody hearing involving her surviving child, 8-month-old Drake Routier.

Signs of a motive

DALLAS — The in-laws of a woman accused of killing her 5- and 6-year-old sons were given temporary custody of their youngest grandchild Wednesday at a hearing that revealed the mother contemplated suicide before her children were slain. Testimony Wednesday by state Child Protective Services worker Jamie Johnson may have given the first glimpse of Mrs. Routier's motive, something investigators have yet to unveil.

The request for an IRS records check for usher Christopher B. AUSTIN — One ticket purchased in Odessa correctly matched all six numbers drawn Wednesday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The jackpot was worth an estimated $12 million. The numbers drawn from a field of 50 were: 1, 3, 4, 15 ,43 and 49. A state lottery spokesman estimated that the jackpot for Saturday night's game will be $4 million.

Celebrating the Fourth

Whether recalling family gatherings of years past, shooting off fireworks or thinking about the rebirth of our nation, Midlanders plan to observe the holiday in ways special to them.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Celebrating Independence Day today conjures up images of freedom, Old Glory, family, homemade ice cream, firecrackers, sacrifices in war and peace and patriotism.

Midlander Deborah Grayson recalled the family time of past holidays and the promise of more to come.

"When I was a child we would go over to my cousins'' in Redwood near San Marcos,'' she recalled. "There were eight of them. We would have family time with them. We would make homemade ice cream with fresh peaches from the peach tree. We would always have fireworks, and I remember my daddy doing the Roman candles.''

To West Texas historian Nancy Rankin McKinley, the July 4 holiday is a time "to think about the rebirth of our country.

"We need to get our Constitution back ... the government governs nearly everything in your life. We need to reclaim our freedom, get our Constitution back, limit the powers of the people in Washington. They have usurped (states' rights),'' she said.

Today is "a time we should care about integrity, care about character, care about leadership,'' said Mrs. McKinley, who comes from West Texas pioneer stock.

Americans "should confront scandals and the misuse of power in Washington. If we don't do it, who will? And if it is not now, when?''

Paramount to her is the restoration of pride and patriotism in the country.

"A people who take no pride in the noble achievements of remote ancestors will never achieve anything worthy to be remembered with pride by their descendants," she said. "If you have no loving affection for your forebears, you will certainly leave nothing of yourself to be remembered proudly.''

From his childhood, Chuck Chamberlin associated July 4 celebrations with shooting firecrackers and eating homemade ice cream at family get-togethers, usually at his grandparents' house.

"People go to the mountains and lakes nowadays when they used to stay at home,'' Chamberlin, 49, said. "I don't think we celebrate the Fourth of July like we used to when I was younger.''

His father, 75-year-old Charles Chamberlin, is a World War II veteran who served as a mechanic at Midland Army Air Field and as a radar

25 years, $29 billion later, U.S. fights losing battle with cancer

By Lauran Neergaard
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Dr. Wendy Harpham is living the paradox of the war on cancer: New treatments are keeping her alive without poisoning her. But fellow physicians still can't cure her.

Twenty-five years — and $29 billion — after President Nixon declared the war on cancer, the disease is about to become the nation's No. 1 killer. More people die of it today than in 1971.

One in three Americans will get cancer. Half a million will die this year.

The news is not all bad: Cancer patients do live longer today. Chemotherapy is becoming less toxic. Some cancers, especially those that hit children, are curable now. And the death toll slightly dropped in 1990.

But progress is measurable only in inches, said Ellen Stovall of the National Coalition for Cancer Survivorship. "The war on cancer got stuck and there's no will to unglue it.''

Indeed, more and more frustrated patients are traveling to Capitol Hill to vent anger at main-

Panel chooses new magistrate for district that includes Midland

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

A panel of judges has selected an assistant U.S. attorney to be U.S. magistrate judge for the Midland and Pecos divisions of the Western District of Texas, said U.S. District Court Judge Royal Furgeson.

Stuart Platt, 43, will replace Judge Louis Guirola, who had been in the post for the past three years.

Guirola left in April to accept a similar position in Hattiesburg, Miss.

A panel formed by Furgeson and U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton reviewed suggestions and made their decision, Furgeson said Wednesday.

The judges recommended Platt to the other judges in the Western District and they concurred with the selection, he said.

Furgeson said Platt will assume the judgeship following a clearance by the FBI, which typically takes 60-90 days.

"So many people applied for the position and he is a very, very good choice," Furgeson said.

Platt, assistant U.S. attorney in Chattanooga, Tenn., worked as a U.S. prosecutor in various positions for the past 10 years.

WEATHER WATCH

Independence Day to see high near 100

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies, a less than 20 percent chance of rain and a high near 100, with south to southeast winds at 5-15 mph, according to the National Weather Service.

Tonight's forecast calls for fair skies, a less than 20 percent chance of rain and a low in the low 70s.

Friday's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies, a less than 20 percent chance of rain and a high near 101.

The high for Wednesday was 93, compared to the record high for that date of 106, set in 1994.

Wednesday's low was 75, compared to the record low of 61, set in 1942.

STATE

Temperatures skyrocketed like Fourth of July fireworks Wednesday, with widely scattered thunderstorms enlivening the afternoon further in isolated spots around North and West Texas.

Afternoon temperatures reached the upper 90s to lower 100s throughout North Texas, with heat-index readings reaching 112 degrees.

Among the scorching midafternoon readings were 106 degrees at Dallas Love Field, 104 at Laughlin Air Force Base near Del Rio, and 102 at Fort Hood, Waco and Wichita Falls.

But just a few miles from Love Field, a savage afternoon thunderstorm dropped hail and toppled trees in parts of in North Dallas.

Skies were sunny to partly cloudy most places, except for mostly cloudy skies over the Permian Basin and near thunderstorms.

The Fourth of July forecast for North Texas called for partly cloudy with a chance of thunderstorms. Highs 95 to 102. Lows 69 to 75.

South Texas should see partly cloudy skies with isolated to widely scattered showers and thunderstorms. Highs in the 90s and lower 100s. Lows in the 70s.

The West Texas outlook includes isolated mainly afternoon and evening showers and thunderstorms, otherwise fair to partly cloudy. Highs 95 to 105, except for near 90 in the southwest mountains and near 108 along the Rio Grande. Lows in the 60s and 70s.

NATION

Strong thunderstorms rolled through the eastern states on Wednesday, causing flash flooding in West Virginia and uprooting trees in Pennsylvania.

During the afternoon, the heaviest storms in the East were concentrated over West Virginia, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina and Georgia.

Severe storm warnings were posted for northeastern North Carolina, southeastern Maryland and central Georgia.

Wind gusted to 60 mph during an afternoon thunderstorm near Charlottesville, Va., and 1-inch-diameter hail was reported.

During the night, the storms dumped up an inch of rain in just 20 minutes on northern West Virginia's Harrison County.

On the Plains, thunderstorms that developed along a warm front extended across the Dakotas and into Nebraska.

Farther south, temperatures near 100 made the air unstable over parts of Texas and Oklahoma, and severe storm warnings were issued during the afternoon for southeastern Oklahoma.

Wednesday's temperatures around the Lower 48 states ranged from a morning low of 42 at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., to an early afternoon reading of 102 at Fort Worth, Texas. The highest heat index was 117 at McAlester, Okla., and the lowest wind chill was 37 at Sault Ste. Marie.

White House sought usher's IRS file before he was fired, documents show

WASHINGTON (AP) — Several weeks before a White House usher was fired at Hillary Rodham Clinton's instruction, documents show the administration sought the usher's confidential IRS file even though he said he wasn't due for a background check for three more years.

The request for an IRS records check for usher Christopher B. Emery was made Dec. 17, 1993, by Anthony Marceca, the Army civilian employee at the White House at the center of the FBI file controversy, according to Marceca's own documents.

Those documents suggest the White House believed Emery hadn't had a background check in seven years even though all employees are supposed to be investigated every five years.

Emery, however, said in an interview Wednesday that he made it clear to the FBI and to his boss that he had just had a background investigation in 1991 and was being taken out of order.

Nonetheless, he signed a waiver allowing a new background check. He was fired 10 weeks later.

"Everyone in the office thought it was very unusual," Emery said in an interview. "We were convinced that this was part of a purge, that they felt we were not loyal."

Both ex-White House security chief Craig Livingstone, Marceca's boss, and former presidential lawyer William Kennedy have testified to a House committee they did not believe any White House employees were forced to undergo background checks out of order.

But an FBI agent who worked at the White House has told Senate investigators there was another White House residence worker's background probe done prematurely. "It's because she may have witnessed or heard about ... some of the events that were going on in the residence and ... was being punished," agent Dennis Sculimbrene said in a deposition last month.

"I think the whole residence's staff's heads were on the auction block and I think they all feared for their jobs," Sculimbrene said. The agent said he did Emery's background check, but his deposition did not indicate whether it was out of turn.

Livingstone resigned last week after revelations that his office, including Marceca, wrongly gathered hundreds of confidential FBI background files on former Reagan and Bush administration employees, including several high-level Republicans.

Emery was fired March 3, 1994, after nine years as a White House usher, over Mrs. Clinton's concerns that he had telephoned former first lady Barbara Bush to help her with a computer problem.

At the time, Mrs. Clinton's office said the firing occurred because Emery showed "an incredible lack of discretion." Reports said her staff was concerned that Emery had discussed personal matters about the Clintons with Mrs. Bush.

Neel Lattimore, the first lady's spokesman, said Wednesday that Mrs. Clinton had nothing to do with the IRS file request.

Eight die in fireworks store blaze

SCOTTOWN, Ohio (AP) — A blaze that began on a dare destroyed a fireworks store busy with Fourth of July shoppers Wednesday, killing at least eight people and injuring 12 as they stampeded toward the front door.

Witnesses said the men started the blaze by setting off fireworks inside the store with a cigarette or a lighter. Police charged one of the three late Wednesday with eight counts of involuntary manslaughter.

"I believe that two of them put the third one up to it. It appears that it was a joke turned deadly," Lawrence County Sheriff Roy Smith said. "They just wanted a little excitement. They just got a lot more than they wanted."

Bottle rockets whizzed, strings of firecrackers exploded and smoke filled the cinderblock Ohio River Fireworks building as about 40 people scrambled for safety, witnesses said.

"They were stampeding. They were blocking it, basically because they all were trying to get out at once," said Beverly Pruitt, the daughter-in-law of the store's owner.

Pruitt, 29, of Crown City, said witnesses told her a man lit a box of fireworks in the back of the store. Fire and smoke blocked the rear exit.

The eight dead all were found within five feet of the front door, Smith said.

YELTSIN: Russian president wins election to 2nd term

(From 1A)

Zyuganov by only 3 percentage points in a field of 10 candidates.

Yeltsin had no immediate reaction to the results. Countering rumors he was incapacitated, he looked confident and talked animatedly Wednesday morning as he cast his ballot in suburban Moscow.

His aides, however, were elated.

"We can send the Communists to hell after the election," said Yeltsin adviser Leonid Smirnyagin, as election results flooded in at the president's campaign headquarters.

Zyuganov fled his parliament office by a back door early today, screeching off in his black Volga to avoid reporters.

The mood at Communist election headquarters was somber. A senior Communist Party official, Anatoly Lukyanov, said the Communists would accept the results but would continue to form a strong opposition.

The Communists and their allies have a working majority in Parliament and could try to block Yeltsin's legislation, but he has the power to dissolve parliament and call new elections.

There were only scattered reports of voting irregularities, despite earlier assertions by both camps that they expected widespread vote-rigging.

In Washington, President Clinton called the Russian presidential election "a triumph for democracy," but avoided any comment on Yeltsin's victory.

"The Russian people can take real pride in this extraordinary achievement," Clinton said.

Yeltsin will be forced to face Russia's enormous social and economic problems in his second term.

Russia is still reeling from the 1991 Soviet collapse and the impact of wrenching political and economic reforms. The bitter election campaign exacerbated deep social divisions in Russia, and Yeltsin's lavish spending on his re-election bid has strained the treasury.

Victory gives Yeltsin a mandate to press ahead with privatization, liberalizing land laws, opening Russia's financial markets and strengthening democratic institutions and freedoms.

He will be under pressure to fight crime and corruption, as well as improve living standards and increase the paychecks of millions of Russians who now live in poverty as a result of his reforms.

Ongoing concerns over Yeltsin's health and who will succeed him could overshadow the fate of the reforms in a new term.

Yeltsin canceled a number of public appearances in the week before the runoff, and briefly aroused fears Wednesday when he failed to turn up at his scheduled polling place in Moscow. Aides said the president decided to take a break from the constant media attention and vote quietly near home.

Zyuganov never managed to make an issue of Yeltsin's health during the campaign, and his call for the publication of a presidential medical bulletin went unheeded.

Under the Russian constitution, the president does not have a deputy. If the president dies in office, the prime minister takes over with limited powers and new elections are held within 90 days.

Most ordinary Russians seemed unconcerned.

"Let him be sick. We'll vote for him all the same," said Vladimir Polosukhin, a 61-year-old voter, who said Yeltsin's reform policies are what matters.

Zyuganov had pledged a sweeping review of privatization and vowed to tighten rules on land ownership, better protect domestic markets and back a "voluntary" restoration of the Soviet Union.

FOURTH: Midlanders have own ways of celebrating

power-plant technician in Panama.

He said he was proud to serve his country in wartime.

Ritzie Lee Williford, a World War II U.S. Navy veteran, celebrates her own birthday on July 4.

She said that her patriotic stance, particularly on Independence Day, was influenced by her father who had served in both world wars.

"Because my father was such a patriotic person, he always taught my sister (Bebe Ann) and me to revere the United States flags and freedom."

Her grandparents had immigrated to the United States in the late 1800s from Russia and Lithuania "where they had no freedom," Mrs. Williford said. "My father was a very fervent, patriotic person. And he loved the United States."

As does Anastacio "Tony" Hernandez, who served as a scout and rifleman in the U.S. Army infantry in Europe during World War II.

To Hernandez, 74, Independence Day means "liberty for me, because I know the United States is the king country."

Hernandez participated in the June 1944 Normandy invasion and served under Gen. George S. Patton, old "Blood and Guts."

Hernandez, who won the Purple Heart for multiple injuries and other campaign-battlefield medals, said that "not everyone was lucky" enough to survive the war and to enjoy freedom.

"I don't want to see war (like World War II) in my United States," he said.

J.P. "Pat" McDaniel, who grew up in West Texas ranching country in the 1950s and 1960s, lamented "how we have let (freedom) erode.

"People have lost freedom due to neglect. When you neglect something, you lose it. When you cherish something, you pay attention. People don't realize that they have come too far too fast and given up a lot."

World War II veterans Jack Edwards — who flew fighters off aircraft carriers in the Pacific Theater — and S.V. Casey — who flew B-17s over Europe — expressed gratitude for the nation's freedom and grief over the war deaths of their comrades.

"You have got to have responsibilities to have rights," said Casey, who was based in England with the U.S. Army Air Forces' 8th Air Force.

He reflected on "all of those white crosses" on graves in Europe and at home. "Some of my friends are under those crosses. They died for a cause because it needed to be done."

During wartime, holidays such as Independence Day were duty days.

"It was a job and we did it (for the) greatest country in the world," Casey said.

In combat "you are living for the moment. It's a job, and you are busy. You don't have much time to do much thinking about patriotism and things not related to duty, mission and survival. You are busy flying that airplane. You are busy all the time. You are not alone."

Edwards recalled the patriotism of his youth in West Texas.

"Back in the 1930s, everybody was patriotic," he said. "You were raised on it — love of country. And the Fourth of July was a big celebration.

He said as children they didn't know the significance of the celebration and fanfare.

"(We) didn't know (until later) what the history was."

The Independence Day celebrations, Edwards said, "sure did imbue the sense of love of country and the thrill of seeing Old Glory."

CANCER: Disease poised to become top killer by 2000

stream medicine's lack of cures and to demand untested alternative therapies.

And Congress repeatedly asks the nation's top doctors: Why are there significant new drugs to fight AIDS, but nothing as exciting for the cancers that strike millions more Americans?

"For too long we've made false promises," acknowledged Dr. Richard Klausner, director of the National Cancer Institute.

"We don't know when we're going to cure cancer. ... But we cannot confuse the frustration with not curing it, with the conclusion we're not making progress."

The hopelessness and distrust also trouble Harpham, a physician who has battled five recurrences of non-Hodgkins lymphoma and educates fellow patients about finding the best therapy while avoiding quacks.

"I have looked at this with the mind of the scientist but the heart of someone desperate to survive," said the Richardson mother of three.

Small improvements are allowing patients "to genuinely have hope that if what is available now can keep you alive, there'll be better stuff down the road," she said.

Many childhood cancers today are 60 to 90 percent curable. Testicular cancer is almost always cured. Earlier detection has helped deaths from breast, cervical and colorectal cancers drop.

And drugs approved in the last year block nausea, blood infections and other chemotherapy side effects.

But 25 years ago, cancer killed 162 of every 100,000 Americans. By 1990, cancer's mortality rate had jumped to 174 deaths.

What happened? One answer is smoking, doctors say. Deaths from all malignancies except lung cancer have dropped since 1971, from 127 deaths per 100,000 to 122. If Americans quit smoking, doctors agree, cancer would plummet.

Cancer's overall death rate did inch down two points between 1990 and 1992, the latest figures available. But it still is poised to become the nation's top killer by 2000 — because heart disease is dropping faster.

Frustrated patients note that most cancer drugs approved by the Food and Drug Administration in recent years have merely offered dying patients a few more months.

Only 2 to 3 percent of cancer patients even participate in clinical trials of potential new cures.

Where do they go instead? Often to the Internet, where scientific research vies with companies that tout miracle cures. Such companies often claim that a conspiracy to help chemotherapy makers profit is deliberately blocking a cure, said Diane Blum of Cancer Care Inc.

"Some of the stuff I see with cancer ... is crazy," said Blum, whose group helps patients sort out the data. "If we had better, more effective treatments, people wouldn't do this."

Dr. John Bailar of the University of Chicago says preventing cancer — by fighting smoking, sun exposure and other controllable risks — may be the best option for a disease now considered too complex for a magic bullet.

"The flow of (significant) new drugs is essentially zero now," Bailar said. "I am simply no longer convinced that there are a lot of wonderful cures waiting to be found."

But the NCI's Klausner insists scientists only now are unlocking crucial genetic mysteries.

The question is whether patients will believe scientists' claim — again — that they're closing in.

Take Janice Temple of San Francisco, who opted in 1994 for a controversial therapy called antineoplastons to help prevent her breast tumors from recurring. So far they haven't.

Temple says mainstream medicine "truly is an erroneous system" because it discourages innovation in favor of drugs as toxic as the disease they treat.

But Harpham argues that she already sees a change in cancer treatment. Her first chemotherapy in 1990 poisoned her, but "magical drugs" protected her from side effects last year.

If her cancer returns again, she'll try higher doses of a genetically engineered — but still experimental — antibody that targets cancer cells. Low doses helped her stave off lymphoma for a while.

"I truly believe we are on the brink of a cascade of discoveries that will translate into" better therapies, Harpham said. "That's a lifeline."

MAGISTRATE: Platt hopes to assume bench in August

(From 1A)

"The magistrate position is something I have thought I would enjoy," Platt said. "I had never applied for one before, but when I saw the panel selecting this position I knew they would base the selection on merit and experience."

"This position holds great opportunity and privilege," the soon-to-be judge said.

Platt grew up in San Antonio and is a 1974 Texas A&M graduate. He earned a master's degree in hospital administration from Trinity University in 1977 and graduated from St. Mary's University with a law degree in 1979.

He began his law practice in May 1980. He was in private practice before joining the U.S. Attorney's Office in Beaumont in October 1986.

He was promoted to supervisory assistant U.S. attorney in 1988 and then chief of the criminal division of the Eastern District of Texas in 1990. He left that post in 1994 for his position in the Eastern Tennessee U.S. Attorney's office.

Platt has received numerous awards, including Prosecutor of the Year 1989-90 from the Texas Narcotics Officers' Association; Director's Award for outstanding performance as an assistant U.S. attorney by the Deputy U.S. Attorney General's Office in 1991; a number of superior performance awards from the U.S. Attorney General's Office and numerous awards from federal law enforcement agencies.

He serves in the U.S. Army reserves.

Platt and his wife, Carissa, have three children, 14-year-old Jonathan, 12-year-old Clayton and 7-year-old Meredith.

"Both sets of grandparents for our children are in Texas and we felt that at some point we wanted to get the kids back home to be closer to their grandparents," Platt said.

Platt said he likes West Texas and the area's friendly citizens.

"We have gone to Midland, Odessa and Pecos during this process and the people in all of the communities are warm and genuine, and they really (support) their children.

"The community has all the modern conveniences, but still has a real sense of family," Platt said.

He hopes to assume the magistrate's bench by August.

High school entrance exams bring chaotic cheating

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — There was a frenzy of cheating Wednesday in Cambodia's capital.

Hundreds of children scaled school walls to pass notes to students taking tests. Others, defying police, shouted into classrooms through bullhorns. One boy at Chak Tomok school in Phnom Penh had his head bloodied when someone threw a rock through the open window of the classroom he was in. A crib sheet was attached to the rock.

Wednesday was the last of three days in which some 10,000 13- and 14-year-olds in Cambodia took high-school entrance exams.

More than 100 civilian and military police ringed each school in an effort to stop the cheating, but there was little they could do. Some even took bribes to help.

"It is as though we are living in an anarchic country where law was never respected at all," said Pol Phithey, police chief of the capital's Daun Penh district, where three schools were giving exams.

Cambodia's education system has been in shambles since the Khmer Rouge massacred many of the country's teachers two decades ago. The civil war that followed drained resources that could have been used to revive the system, and even after U.N.-sponsored elections in 1993, teaching standards remain poor and there are few jobs for graduates.

Many Cambodians believe that high school and college are the only routes to success. They may be wrong — often, the cheating itself is the best preparation, as most jobs are obtained through a bribe.

Students and parents pay teachers to turn a blind eye to their cheating. Others slip money to police to let them climb walls and help friends and relatives taking the tests.

In some cases, students taking the exams throw the questions out the windows. Older friends outside figure out the answers and call them back in.

Some bookstores sell mock tests, either pilfered by students or sold by teachers. One such store, the Toto Bookstore on Norodom Boulevard, was overflowing with customers Wednesday.

University student Khieu Bora waited outside the school where his little brother was taking his exam. His brother tossed out the question sheet, and Khieu Bora made quick work of the exam. He handed his answers to a little boy, who scaled the school wall and passed them through a window.

"I came to cheat on the examination, to help my brother," Khieu Bora said. "Because I don't have enough money to bribe an official."

Education ministry officials met Wednesday to consider throwing out all the results, but decided that would be too disruptive.

This year was the worst ever for cheating, authorities said, but it is by no means new in Cambodia. The government has long tried to stop it, with mixed results.

In 1993, officials launched an aggressive anti-corruption campaign that helped root out graft in the education ministry and among exam graders, notorious for accepting bribes.

The most drastic measure was to move exam-graders around the country on the eve of exams to places where they had not taken bribes. The result: in some areas, the pass rate dropped from 97 percent to 1 percent.

Last year, students began shouting answers into windows for the first time.

This year marked the first time police were called out to help.

Bun Samreth, for one, wasn't happy about that. The student at the University of Phnom Penh tried to scale the wall of the Chak Tomok high school to pass a crib sheet to his brother.

When he tried to drop to the ground, he fell instead into the hands of police, who promptly gave him a sharp kick in the stomach. When he tried to run away, police chased him down and took him the the principal's office.

"I know it was illegal," he said, "but I really want to help my little brother."

First lady praises Poland's emerging democracy

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — With her husband courting Polish-American votes, Hillary Rodham Clinton praised Poland for its "devotion to freedom" and suggested American support for the nation's bid to join NATO.

With a palace pond shimmering in the background, the first lady said, "Here you are today, a nation that has earned the right to regain its place as a full member of the Western family of nations."

Poland, the Czech Republic, Slovakia and Hungary are widely expected to be granted membership in the Western alliance. But Mrs. Clinton's reiteration of U.S. support was welcomed by Poland and may not go unnoticed in the 10 million strong Polish-American community.

"This trip is getting great play in the Polish-American press," U.S. Ambassador Nicholas A. Rey said in an interview. Polish Americans are a huge voting bloc in Illinois and Michigan, two crucial states in President Clinton's re-election strategy.

Though the main reason for Mrs. Clinton's seven-nation trip was to boost the emerging democracies of Eastern Europe, the first lady also was practicing ethnic politics. Like Poland, people with families ties to the Czech Republic, where Mrs. Clinton was arriving late Wednesday for a three-day stay, also have a large presence in America.

The White House hopes her visits, mostly ceremonial and filled with goodwill, will get widespread attention in the ethnic press.

Wrapping up her two-day visit to Poland on Wednesday, Mrs. Clinton referred repeatedly to the Polish-American community.

"Millions of Americans trace their origins to Poland. Yet our bonds are of more than blood," Mrs. Clinton said in a speech at Lazienki Palace. "Indeed, it seems that the values of democracy and freedom are in the very fiber of our being — we Americans and Poles."

She spoke to a small group of community leaders gathered in the ornate 17th century palace built on the foundation of an old bathhouse. Open balcony doors allowed a cool breeze to gently rock a mammoth chandelier above the first lady's head.

She said the two nations "stand together as partners in security, diplomacy and trade."

A U.S. official said afterward that Mrs. Clinton's remarks did not intend to go beyond the wide assumption that Poland would be among the first group of new NATO nations. A timetable for the expansion is uncertain.

The official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Mrs. Clinton and Polish President Aleksander Kwasniewski were not expected to discuss the NATO issue during their brief meeting Wednesday.

Kwasniewski is certain to raise the issue next week when he meets President Clinton in Washington.

Expanding NATO also is an issue in the Czech Republic, but aides say Mrs. Clinton does not plan to discuss it with President Vaclav Havel. She also plans to visit Slovakia, Hungary and Estonia — all nations that want NATO membership.

Mrs. Clinton's remarks mostly dealt with Poland's emerging democracy. She urged leaders to protect the rights of women and children.

Netanyahu reaps consequences of life on display

JERUSALEM (AP) — First the firing of his children's nanny generated front-page exposes in the tabloids. Now the mysterious appearance of "John J. Sullivan" in his U.S. Social Security files is being debated on the floor of parliament.

Benjamin Netanyahu, who broke with tradition by bringing his family into an American-style campaign for prime minister, is reaping the consequences: unprecedented American-style surveillance of the cobwebbed corners of his private life.

On Monday, Israeli tabloids broke the story of The Nanny: 21-year-old Tanya Shaw, who claimed she was fired and tossed out into the street after she burned a pot of vegetable soup.

Shaw has made headlines for three days with reports about Netanyahu's wife, Sarah, who Shaw said was obsessed with cleanliness, had refused to let her vote and was prone to angry outbursts.

The prime minister's office retaliated with a statement accusing Shaw of showing "indications of acute instability."

At a news conference Tuesday night, Netanyahu said he wished it would all go away. Asked if he regretted putting his family in the public eye, he said: "I think those of you who come from America know that you don't have to put your family in the eye of the media. The media is there eyeing you."

In fact Netanyahu, who has been married three times and publicly acknowledged an extramarital affair, drew comment even before his election for the unusual visibility of his wife and two young sons. Most Israelis would be hard put to identify family members of Netanyahu's predecessor, Shimon Peres, despite Peres' decades in public office.

Netanyahu made his victory appearance with Sarah at his side and announced he would take the family along next week on his first visit as premier to Washington — complete with a playpen on Israel's version of Air Force One.

Despite his penchant for publicity, Israelis know far less about their new prime minister than past leaders who rose to the top after years in public office. Netanyahu had served only as ambassador to the United Nations and deputy foreign minister.

That has only made post-election reports about him more enticing to the Israeli media.

In a recent article, the Ha'ir chain of weekly newspapers reported that Netanyahu's U.S. Social Security number — he was educated in the United States and worked there for many years — had been used under four different names: Benjamin Netanyahu, Benjamin Nitay — a name Netanyahu has acknowledged using in the States — John J. Sullivan and John J. Sullivan Jr.

The article claimed Netanyahu's files were sealed in a way done only for employees of the CIA, FBI and Internal Revenue Service.

"Who are you, John J. Sullivan?" it demanded. "Is it all the same person? ... Never was the history of an Israeli prime minister so secretive."

Uri Avnery, a political rival, noted that while Netanyahu says he gave up his U.S. citizenship years ago, as required of Israeli diplomats and legislators, no proof has been made public. "If he was an American citizen when elected prime minister ... his election is null and void," Avnery wrote in the Maariv daily.

On Wednesday, opposition legislator Dalia Itzik made a failed bid to launch an investigation by Israel's parliament, questioning whether Netanyahu worked for the American government.

"Who is our prime minister?" she asked. "He who runs such an American campaign cannot prevent questions in the style of the free American press."

The prime minister's office did not return repeated calls from The Associated Press on Wednesday.

According to the Ha'ir article, Netanyahu spokesman Shai Bazak confirmed the name John J. Sullivan appeared in Netanyahu's file, but said: "We don't have a clue as to how the name got into the file."

Freeh to monitor bombing probe during his visit to Saudi Arabia

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) — FBI Director Louis Freeh began a visit to Saudi Arabia Wednesday to check on the investigation into the deadly bomb attack on a U.S. base.

The June 25 blast killed 19 American servicemen and injured hundreds at the U.S. military housing complex in Dhahran, in eastern Saudi Arabia. It was the worst terrorist attack on U.S. forces in the Persian Gulf.

Muslim militants who oppose the presence of Western military forces in the kingdom are suspected of being behind the blast. Saudi Arabia is home to Islam's holiest shrines.

An FBI statement said Freeh will meet Saudi leaders and visit the bombing site in Al-Khobar, a Dhahran suburb. The attackers are believed to have driven a bomb-laden fuel truck up to the compound and detonated it.

More than 40 FBI agents, including an explosives unit, an evidence team and anti-terrorism squads were sent to Dhahran immediately after the blast to help Saudi investigators. More agents were dispatched Sunday.

The FBI team has refused to speak with reporters and details of Freeh's engagements in Saudi Arabia were not released.

U.S. officials have said the investigators have several clues.

Dole pays homage to Reagan, calls visit 'shot in arm' for campaign

LOS ANGELES (AP) — White House hopeful Bob Dole, who last year promised Republicans he could be another Ronald Reagan, met privately with the former president Wednesday and pronounced the visit "a shot in the arm" for his campaign.

"It reminded me of the great things that President Reagan had done for America — tax cuts, a good economy, strong defense," Dole told reporters as he emerged from the 40-minute meeting.

Dole's obvious reverence for Reagan, whom he briefly battled for the GOP presidential nomination in 1980, papered over the pair's early clashes on tax cuts and supply-side economics.

"It was a sort of shot in the arm," Dole said of the carefully guarded private meeting.

Dole and his wife, Elizabeth, met in Reagan's bookcase-lined office with the former president and his wife, Nancy, whose 73rd birthday is Saturday. Posing for photographers, the two men greeted each other with a handshake.

The former first lady said that as she blew out the single candle atop the cake, her wish "might have something to do with November."

Reagan, who suffers from Alzheimer's disease at age 85, was described as subdued and saying very little during Wednesday's meeting.

Asked about her husband's condition, Mrs. Reagan said, "He's doing very well."

The bulk of the meeting consisted of a campaign update from the Doles, according to Ken Khachigian, a top Dole strategist who sat in on the session.

Reagan, dressed in a dark business suit and red tie, "listened very intently and seemed to really enjoy the tales from the campaign, and he laughed at some of the stories they had to tell," Khachigian recounted.

Reagan is beloved among conservatives as the grandfather of supply-side economics — the theory that big tax cuts stimulate economic growth. Early on, Dole did little to hide his antipathy toward that view, putting a higher priority on deficit reduction.

Dole, now debating what sort of tax cut he should propose, was known to joke early in Reagan's two-term presidency that "The good news is a busload of supply-siders went over a cliff. The bad news is there were three empty seats."

But Dole respected Reagan's political skill and, as chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, nonetheless shepherded Reagan's giant tax cut through the Senate in 1981.

When Dole had a change of heart the following year, as the budget deficit mushroomed, he almost single-handedly took back a chunk of the Reagan tax cuts, with a $98.4 billion tax increase package.

Even as the two party elders sparred over economic policy, Dole recognized Reagan's immense popularity and the power of a Reagan endorsement.

Dole recalled in his autobiography that in 1976, when he campaigned as President Ford's running mate, he once ordered his plane to make a U-turn when Reagan offered a last-minute meeting in Denver.

"I was willing to go the extra mile — in this case, about five hundred extra miles — to get Reagan and his followers to support the ticket more actively," Dole wrote.

And last summer, at a Republican National Committee meeting in Philadelphia, Dole told the party faithful: "If that's what you want, I'll be another Ronald Reagan."

Mrs. Dole has her own long history with the former president, having joined his 1980 campaign as part of a traveling GOP "truth squad" taking aim at Jimmy Carter's record. She later served as his transportation secretary.

Federal judge dismisses challenge to line-item veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge dismissed a challenge to the line-item veto Wednesday from a federal employees' union that contended the new law would allow the president to cut government workers' pay and benefits.

Judge Charles Richey of the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia ruled that the National Treasury Employees Union, which represents 140,000 executive branch workers, had no legal standing in the case.

The ruling followed a Justice Department request that he dismiss the case for lack of standing. It did not address the constitutionality of the line-item veto, which for the first time gives the president authority to cut specific spending items from the federal budget.

In its challenge, the union said the law "unconstitutionally shifts broad lawmaking power from Congress to the executive branch," allowing a president to negate employment benefits gained by lobbying lawmakers.

The union said it would be forced to "expend additional time, effort and money redirecting a portion of its limited resources to the executive branch, thereby diluting the union's effectiveness."

But Richey, while rendering no judgment on the constitutional issues raised by the union, said its claims were "too speculative and remote" to give it legal standing in the case.

The union's general counsel, Gregory O'Duden, said it had not decided whether to appeal.

Fulfilling a GOP "Contract With America" promise, the House passed the line-item veto legislation on March 28 — a day after the Senate acted. President Clinton signed the bill into law April 9, promising unprecedented scrutiny of "the darkest corners of the federal budget."

Opponents complained that the line-item veto gave too much power to the executive branch and abridged Congress' control the nation's purse strings. But those concerns were overcome by the demand for new tools to combat the federal deficit.

Clinton and GOP presidential rival Bob Dole, then the Senate majority leader, agreed to delay any use of the veto until 1997 to avoid having it become a campaign issue.

Judge approves $5 billion settlement for owners of GM pickup trucks

■ Settlement could give 5 million truck owners $1,000 each toward the purchase of a new GM truck

PLAQUEMINE, La. (AP) — A Louisiana judge gave preliminary approval Wednesday to a $5 billion settlement of lawsuits alleging some General Motors pickup trucks had potentially dangerous side-mounted gas tanks.

The settlement could give 5 million truck owners $1,000 each toward the purchase of another GM vehicle. State District Judge Jack T. Marionneaux scheduled a hearing Nov. 6 to grant final approval.

The settlement covers 1973-87 C-K model pickup trucks equipped with side-mounted gas tanks. Critics said the trucks were a fire hazard in side-impact crashes because their fuel tanks were mounted outside the protection of the frame.

However, the company has consistently maintained the trucks are safe.

The U.S. Transportation Department said in 1994 that the pickups contained a safety defect. But that finding was voided as part of a settlement with GM in which the government agreed to halt steps that could have led to a recall order.

In exchange, GM agreed to spend $51 million on safety programs and research — but auto safety groups accused the company this week of not keeping its word. The company did admit that spending was behind schedule.

Sheila Main, GM's spokeswoman for legal issues and product recalls, could not be reached for comment late Wednesday. But Pat Pendley, an attorney for the plaintiffs, said the automaker's lawyers agreed to the settlement.

The settlement covers 1973-87 pickups equipped with side-mounted gas tanks. Critics said the trucks were a fire hazard in side-impact crashes because their fuel tanks were mounted outside the protection of the frame.

"The next thing is to send a notice to all of the truck owners, notifying them of the preliminary approval and providing them with a snapshot of the settlement and instructions on where to write and get more details," Pendley said.

Owners should receive notice by August and, if no one objects at the Nov. 6 hearing, a final settlement could be reached by January 1997, Pendley said.

About nine million of the trucks were made before GM brought the gas tank back inside the frame, but many of the trucks are no longer on the road, and Pendley estimated that only 5 million truck owners would benefit.

He estimated the settlement would cost GM in excess of $5 billion.

The action taken Wednesday proposes to settle what Pendley said were "a bunch of lawsuits," some filed as many as three years ago.

"There were three Louisiana plaintiffs originally, several in Texas and several more in national class action lawsuits," he said.

Preliminary settlements were reached in many of the other lawsuits, only to be scuttled.

This latest settlement was agreed upon in Louisiana because attorneys involved in all of the lawsuits agreed to use the Louisiana suits as the vehicle for reaching agreement.

The settlement would n. affect lawsuits involving injuries that might have occurred as a result of the defective gas tanks, Pendley said. It also exempts trucks that had been scrapped before Wednesday's order was signed.

Representatives of three groups of lawyers, involving more than 30 law firms, signed the agreement, said Don Barrett, another plaintiffs' attorney.

The settlement would require GM to give truck owners $1,000 certificates they could use to buy any new GM car or truck, except Saturns, Barrett said.

The certificates would be negotiable for 33 months for individual truck owners and 50 months for "fleets" of three or more trucks, said a news release issued by Barrett.

The settlement also requires GM to contribute $4.1 million to a national research project to promote fuel system safety, Barrett said.

Navy officer found guilty of adultery

WASHINGTON (AP) — A military judge sentenced a Navy officer convicted of adultery and conduct unbecoming an officer to forfeit $250 per month for six months and to receive a letter of reprimand.

The sentencing Wednesday came a day after the judge cleared Navy Lt. Cmdr. Donald W. Clause of rape and sexual harassment in a case involving a co-worker at the Washington Navy Yard. Clause was found guilty of lesser charges of adultery and conduct unbecoming an officer.

But the defense argued that the sex was consentual.

Let's celebrate — but cautiously

This Independence Day brings conflicting emotions for many Midland area residents, no doubt. While many of the residents of this area are deeply patriotic and prone to embrace President John Adams' expressed view that "it ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires, and illuminations, from one end of this continent to the other ...," hard reality should make us wonder whether the "bonfires" and "illuminations" are really such a good idea.

The extremely dry conditions in Texas have tempered our desire for many fireworks, although a visiting judge lifted the ban Midland County Commissioners had earlier placed on fireworks.

We also understand the position of fireworks distributors. They make their living selling fireworks and were they to have lost sales from the Independence Day holiday, it would have affected them adversely.

There was no easy resolution of this situation. The drought has created a definite fire hazard in not only Midland County, but also much of Texas and the only protection against wildfires will be the intelligent use of fireworks by individuals. That's what we hope people will do.

Even the fire hazard should not dampen the Independence Day spirit of residents here. We are celebrating a spirit of independence passed down to us by our forefathers and the precious liberty it ensured and Americans through two centuries have maintained.

Whether that is celebrated with fireworks or more cautious gaiety, it still worthy of our celebrating.

'Disagreeable' not always unconstitutional

WASHINGTON—Because the Supreme Court increasingly refuses to accept the restraints imposed by real constitutional reasoning, it is decreasingly accurate to say that this country has a Constitution. Recent evidence of this includes two rulings last week in which the Court said that a long-standing American political practice has been — or has suddenly become — unconstitutional.

Will

Keen Umbehr was an affliction to the Board of County Commissioners of Wabaunsee County, Kan. He spoke critically at board meetings and denounced the board's practices in newspaper letters and essays. So the board voted 2-to-1 to terminate, by ending the automatic renewal of, his trash hauling contract. Although he later negotiated contracts with five of the six towns he served, he sued the board, saying his right of free speech had been abridged.

John Gratzianna's company was removed from a list of firms eligible to provide towing service to the police department of the Chicago suburb of Northlake after he refused to contribute to the mayor's successful re-election campaign, and supported the mayor's opponent. Gratzianna claimed a violation of his First Amendment rights of political association and expression.

Seven Justices (Rehnquist, Stevens, O'Connor, Kennedy, Souter, Ginsburg, Breyer) sided with Umbehr and Gratzianna. Scalia and Thomas dissented both times.

The rulings were not surprising. The Court had hitherto held that there is an impermissible chilling effect on free expression when government employees can be fired for taking or refusing to take particular political positions. So why not extend comparable protection to private parties contracting with government?

Here is why, said Scalia: There is no constitutional principle for declaring unconstitutional a practice — patronage — that violates no specific text of the Constitution, that has been considered constitutional throughout the life of the Republic, and that is regulated in myriad ways by the democratic institutions of many communities.

The Constitution forbids laws "abridging the freedom of speech." That language can, Scalia notes, be given many meanings. So the meaning given it must either be decisively shaped by history — by the Framers' intent, as illuminated by national traditions — or it must be determined by something other than the Constitution, meaning the Justices' personal preferences. Why, Scalia asks, are not libel laws considered an abridgment of free speech? "The only satisfactory answer is that they never were."

Government constantly favors and disfavors people because of their support or lack of support. It does this in choices it makes about taxing, building public works, regulating or not regulating particular things. Here is a more specific example from Scalia's dissent:

Chicago always has Democratic mayors and some Republican wards. Suppose that in those wards the potholes go unfilled and the snow goes unremoved longer than in other wards. Does the First Amendment forbid such favoritism? If government employees, and now contractors, have First Amendment protection from being disfavored by government because of their expression of political preferences, why not wards? Why not, that is, as a matter of constitutional principle, rather than as a matter of what is or is not nice?

The Constitution should restrain the powers and discretion of government — of all three branches of it. But the unrestrained Court increasingly treats such adjectives as "wrong," "naughty," "bad," "disagreeable" and "unreasonable" as synonyms for "unconstitutional." It does because, as Scalia says, "it equates those many things that are or should be proscribed as a matter of social policy with those few things that we have the power to proscribe under the Constitution."

Those things are no longer few, because these Justices make that equation of their social preferences with constitutional mandates. Once they have stopped interpreting constitutional language by its traditional usage, and in the context of historic practices traditionally viewed as constitutional, the craft called constitutional law, and indeed the Constitution itself, effectively disappears.

MIKE ROYKO

Chance visit puts meaning of work in perspective

Editor's note: 'Mike Royko is on vacation. In his absence we are reprinting some of his favorite columns. This column originally ran on Oct. 25, 1971.

The old farmhouse stood along a winding, dirt, back road. It was the last house before the road disappeared into the heavy Wisconsin forest.

Except for a light in the house, the farm might have been deserted. Stacks of wood, boards, logs, railroad ties and crates were everywhere in the yard. The machinery and tools were old and appeared unused.

Royko

But a light was in the window, and on a fence post was nailed a hand-lettered cardboard sign offering "Fresh honey."

The only animals in the yard were a friendly dog that trotted to the car, and a cat that sat atop a pile of lumber and stared.

A minute passed, then the door of a shed opened and an old man came out. He was short, almost dwarf-like, and built so squarely he seemed to have no neck. His overalls were the color of tree bark, and a shapeless old work cap was pulled over his brow.

He walked heavily, with his arms hanging at his sides like a football lineman. "You want honey?" he asked in a thick Slavic accent. "Come in house."

The steps led to an enclosed porch in which more wood was stacked, and into the kitchen.

An old, black, wood-burning kitchen stove stood in the corner of the room. The oak table could have been as old as the house.

An old woman sat dozing in a wheelchair in the living room.

"He wants honey," the old man said. The old woman nodded.

The man pulled a chair from the table and said, "Sit." Then he opened a cabinet. The shelves were filled with jars of all sizes and shapes, old coffee jars, jam jars, all filled with honey.

"How many you want? Two?" He brought out two quarts.

How much? I asked.

He shrugged. "Two dollar."

He took the two bills, laid them in the center of the table, and sat down. "Where you come from?" He asked. "Chicago, huh? Is work in Chicago? Is peoples got work? Good."

He looked at the dollar bills, smiled, and said: "You have drink with me, huh?"

From under the sink he brought out a bottle of vodka, and carefully poured two shots.

He downed his drink, put the bottle back, and sat down again.

"Chicago, huh?" he said, pronouncing it shee-ka-goh. "Long time ago, I go Chicago. No more now. Too far go. I'm too old go Chicago."

How old are you? I asked.

"I'm 86 now. Too old to work farm, too. Now I take care of bees, sell honey."

"The farm, how long did you work the farm?"

He thought for a moment. "I came here in 1912. I buy 80 acres, all woods, big rocks. I cut down trees by myself. Cut up wood, chop up wood, take in wagon and sell to brewery. I clear all 80 acres, me and wife. Nobody around here then."

You came to northern Wisconsin from Europe?

He shook his head. "No, I came from old country in 1900. No work in old country. My father, he work 15 hours a day for 90 cents. Nothing to eat, no work.

"In 1900 I leave old country and go to Pennsylvania. Work in coal mines. Twelve years I work in coal mines. I save money, and in 1912 I come here and buy 80 acres for $800."

And there he stayed for 60 years. Now, he said, all of the original acres, except the house and yard, have been sold for a modest sum. Small farms in northern Wisconsin aren't selling for much. Few people want to work as hard as one must to make a living from it. His sons have grown and gone to cities to find jobs.

A cold drizzle was starting to ride in on a north wind. He put some more wood into the black stove and moved the coffee pot over the heat.

Then he walked slowly back to the car and held out his hand. I've never seen a hand quite like it. The fingers were so stubby, they all looked like thumbs. The hand was dark and calloused from the wrist to the cracked nails.

"You got regular work in Chicago?" he asked. "You got steady job? Good. That's good. What you do?"

I told him I worked for a paper.

He nodded. "Good. Every day you work, huh? Regular work. Good. Is that hard work on newspaper? Hard work?"

I told him that I used to think it was. But not anymore.

ART BUCHWALD

By any name, money smells like political fertilizer

Americans are getting more and more cynical about their elections. They believe that money buys politicians, and those who give the most get the most back if their man wins. It's more complicated than that.

Buchwald

The system works as follows. No individual can give more than $1,000 to a candidate. But any trade organization, labor union or corporation can give unlimited amounts to political parties that can use the money to finance the candidates of their choice.

The dollars that interest groups shower down from heaven are called "soft money." It looks and feels like hard money, but when you spread it around it smells more like political fertilizer.

I have Time magazine to thank for these numbers.

Bob Dole got $975,149 from Philip Morris. Before you jump to the conclusion that Dole would become a pro-tobacco president just because of these donations, you are wrong. Bob has always been a pro-nicotine kind of guy, ever since he received free cigarettes in World War II.

RJR Nabisco gave $696,450 in soft money. The contribution was not to further its cigarette business but to protect its Oreos and Fig Newtons. Dole heard the message and has promised that, come hell or high water, he will keep the Food and Drug Administration from meddling with the cookie business.

AT&T contributed $352,000 and Atlantic Richfield $282,172. Once again this was soft money, but neither the phone industry nor the gasoline industry has any interest in getting favors from a Republican administration.

Brown and Williamson Tobacco gave $265,000, and Archer-Daniels-Midland Co., which controls most of the grain sales in the United States, donated $255,000. But you don't have to worry that Dole will make a payback if he becomes president.

I am happy to report that the Democrats are not accepting soft money for political reasons. They took $1.8 million in 1995 from the trial lawyers, which is no big deal. Why the heavy donation from this profession? Well, Hillary Clinton is a lawyer, as is the president, and when it comes to soft money you have to support your own. As one lawyer explained it, "The contribution was an investment because we'll get it back from all the Whitewater trials."

Besides lawyers, the Democrats got a $303,480 donation from AT&T, $292,750 from MCI Communications and $215,250 from Anheuser-Busch.

These are just a few of the soft-money contributions in the news at the moment. They don't give you any idea of how many actual dollars are being raised by the parties to elect their candidate. We're talking about fund-raising dinners and what people are paying to rub shoulders with President Clinton and Bob Dole. Each rub over $10,000 translates into a future favor.

Both parties deny that soft money guarantees access to the government. "We only accept the money because people want to give it, and if we don't take it, their feelings will be hurt," a soft-money collector told me.

"We could run this campaign without contributions from the lobbyists, but it would take all the fun out of it for the donors. It would also mean that Dole and Clinton might never have an opportunity to meet the real people who can help them run the country."

Utah suffers second blackout as utilities begin postmortem on first

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A second blackout plunged parts of Idaho into darkness on Wednesday as officials focused on a Wyoming power plant and its transmission lines as the possible source for the outage.

A short-circuit along the same transmission lines may have triggered the rapid chain-reaction outages that knocked out lights and telephone service for 1.5 million to 2 million customers in eight Western states on Tuesday.

After Wednesday's disturbance, utility officials could not re-energize the power lines from the Jim Bridger coal-fired plant near Rock Springs, Wyo., and a substation in southeastern Idaho, said Gary Donnelly, a spokesman for PacifiCorp, co-owner of the plant along with Idaho Power Co.

The utilities sent up a helicopter to inspect the 200-mile stretch of power line in hopes of discovering the problem, Donnelly said.

Wednesday's disruption apparently was limited to Idaho. Power flickered out in southern Idaho at 2:10 p.m. MDT, and the Idaho Statehouse was among the buildings that lost power for a few minutes.

"We have manually overridden the system and we are manually beginning to recover the system," Dennis Lopez, a spokesman for Idaho Power Co., said late Wednesday afternoon.

Utility officials said it could take a week to find out just what caused Tuesday's short-circuit, which sent disturbances rippling through the Western power grid.

"We can rule out sabotage. We can rule out UFOs. I think we can rule out computer hackers," said Perry Gruber, spokesman for the Bonneville Power Administration in Portland, Ore., which operates a series of Northwest hydroelectric plants.

Authorities trying to reconstruct Tuesday's events said this much is clear: Sometime shortly before 2:30 p.m. MDT, a significant disturbance rippled through the Western power grid, knocking out lights and telephone service for customers from Canada to the Southwest as computerized safeguards struggled to minimize its effect.

Within a second or two, air conditioners whirred to a stop on a day when record or near-record temperatures scorched the West. Stoplights went dark. Hospitals and air traffic control centers switched to generators. Bells and buzzers on slot-machines in Reno, Nev., briefly fell silent.

If nothing else, the short-circuit Tuesday was "an initiating event," said Robert Dintelman, assistant executive director of the Western Systems Coordinating Council in Salt Lake City.

The effects of Tuesday's outage were still being felt in Denver, where the city has to resynchronize 1,200 traffic signals, a job that will take 16 engineers several weeks, costing up to $5,000, said Amy Bourgeron, spokeswoman for Denver's Public Works Department.

Dintelman said the coordinating council, which oversees electrical service reliability in 14 Western states, two Canadian provinces and part of northern Mexico, will conduct a "postmortem" on the outage.

That could be difficult, he said, because investigators must review the operating charts of 76 interconnected power-generating entities comprising the council, looking for the initial glitch.

Each system monitors its power in cycles, 60 times a second. Charts of those measurements should show the sequence of the outage.

Hardest hit was Idaho, where 700,000 customers lost power.

"It was a virtual blackout," Dintelman said.

Some power company officials, like Donnelly, lauded the system for "working just the way it was supposed to" by protecting its circuits and generating plants.

But Dintelman wasn't so sure.

"If things were operating the way they were supposed to," he said, "then the lights would have stayed on."

Witness says Clinton offered jobs to contributors

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — After two political supporters gave him more than $13,000 in campaign money, then-Gov. Bill Clinton asked whether a friend of theirs would make a good highway commissioner, a witness in the Whitewater trial testified Wednesday.

During a 10- to 15-minute meeting in his state Capitol office, Clinton meticulously thumbed through the checks "kind of like he was memorizing the names," Carlton Kent Dollar testified.

As Dollar and Perry County Bank co-owner Robert M. Hill prepared to leave, Clinton posed the question, "Do you think Herby Branscum would make a good highway commissioner?" Dollar said.

"Mr. Hill told him he thought he would make a good, excellent, highway commissioner," Dollar said. "I did likewise."

Branscum, Hill's partner in the Perryville bank, was appointed to a 10-year term on the commission five weeks later.

Branscum and Hill are accused of misapplying money from their bank to reimburse political contributions made by themselves, relatives and employees — including at least $7,000 delivered to Clinton Dec. 14, 1990. Prosecutors do not allege a quid pro quo, but say political ambition motivated the bankers to break the law.

"There's nothing wrong with Mr. Clinton receiving funds," lead prosecutor W. Hickman Ewing Jr. said outside court. "What they're charged with is misapplying funds of the bank. One of the motivations we contend is that they generated $7,000 of the money ... illegally."

The bankers also are accused of conspiring to hide from federal regulators large cash withdrawals by the Clinton's 1990 gubernatorial campaign.

The trial broke for the July 4 holiday after Dollar's testimony. Sunday, attorneys will take Clinton's testimony on videotape at the White House.

"I think the president's testimony will go a long way in curing this attempt to inject a smell into the case about Herby's appointment to the Highway Commission," Branscum lawyer Dan Guthrie said outside the courthouse.

Clinton's videotaped testimony will be played during the defense portion of the trial, which is to begin Wednesday.

According to a memo setting up Hill and Dollar's appointment with Clinton, the men wanted to visit the governor to drop off campaign contributions and discuss Hill's desire to see his partner named to the Arkansas Highway Commission.

Hill brought $10,000 to $12,000 to the meeting, Dollar said. Dollar brought $3,000. Clinton had issued a call for post-election contributions to pay off $125,000 in loans taken from Perry County Bank just before the Nov. 6, 1990, election to buy advertising.

Two weeks before meeting Clinton in his office, Dollar had written to the governor asking him to consider Branscum for the highways post. He testified, however, that delivering the $3,000 had nothing to do with his wish to see the appointment made.

"They're not connected at all," said Dollar, who in 1987 was named to the state Oil and Gas Commission six months after giving Clinton $1,000.

The 1990 meeting was set up by Clinton campaign treasurer Bruce Lindsey, a previous witness testified. Lindsey is now is a top White House aide.

Clinton is not charged with any wrongdoing in the case.

New Mexico city born of real estate deal may expire when lease does

COCHITI LAKE, N.M. (AP) — The town of Cochiti Lake is a boomtown that can never grow, a place where residents can't build what they want when they want because the land is not theirs.

Neither are the homes.

Four hundred people live in the town, on winding streets with views so clear they can spot the haze hanging over Albuquerque, 45 miles south.

They elect a mayor and four assemblymen and hold Christmas parties and Tuesday night bridge games. They say it's so beautiful and quiet and safe it's almost like paradise.

This is the town of Cochiti Lake. It says so on the sign on the way in, but no one can agree if that's what it really is.

It's a town with an identity crisis, the only planned community of non-Indians living on Indian land in the state, a place struggling with itself, the pueblo of Cochiti and the state of New Mexico.

The town exists because the pueblo allowed it to exist, gave it a place to grow and handed it some power to govern itself.

It exists because in the mid-1960s the pueblo was desperate for money and a California developer said he could conjure dollars from dirt by building a city.

The pueblo leased 7,000 acres for 99 years. It was a marriage of convenience that soon soured. The developer went bankrupt. The pueblo took over and cut the project to a seventh of its original size.

One thing did not change: When the lease expires April 30, 2068, so does the town. The land, the houses, even City Hall will revert to the pueblo.

As of now, it's a 27-year-old village with a convenience store, a sandwich shop, a laundry, a golf course and 220 houses.

Some residents have refused to pay property taxes because they do not own the land — the pueblo does.

The pueblo filed a lawsuit against the town ordering it to stop collecting state gross receipts taxes on water and sewers. The town, as a political creation of the pueblo, is not subject to such taxes, pueblo officials say.

"The town has no authorization to collect any taxes," said Marvin Valdo, interim director of the Cochiti Community Development Corp., the town landlord. "That is up to the pueblo."

Mayor Steve Dennis sees things differently.

"We are in a unique situation where we live in a community that has sovereignty. That take a lot of understanding and patience. ... But are we a town? We try to act — well, we are, we are a town. The only thing is, we have boundaries other towns don't have."

The property tax question first came up in 1976. At the time, the town was supposed to have been the biggest project to hit the Sandoval County tax assessor's roll — 7,000 acres of Southwestern-style homes and apartments. The county demanded property taxes on each parcel and any improvements — a standard arrangement for standard towns.

This was not a standard town, the developer argued. In 1977, the Legislature passed an amendment to its tax law. Only leases shorter than 75 years could be exempt from property taxes. That ruled out the town with its 99-year lease.

Town assemblyman and real estate agent Paul Oyer figures about 40 years from now, banks will stop mortgaging houses in the town.

Of course, most of the people who live there now will have moved or died, he said.

The pueblo has said it will not renew the lease.

Remarks on brochure add to tension

Judge declines to make decision about MISD recruiting brochure

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

A federal judge's statements over the replacement of a recruiting brochure is causing disagreement in the already polarized factions in an ongoing legal battle to lift restrictions in the 1976 lawsuit that led to forced desegregation in Midland schools.

The Midland Independent School District's recruiting brochure has cartoon drawings of children of various races on its colorful cover.

"The recruiting brochure, which plaintiff-intervenors complained about as being racially offensive should not be utilized and should be replaced," Dr. Viola Coleman said.

"Which is what we were planning to do anyway," MISD board member Jackie Hamilton said.

Although some people could not even distinguish between the cartoon figures on the basis of race, others found the child figures of some ethnic groups derogatory.

On Monday and Tuesday, MISD officials and the plaintiff intervenors in the original 1976 lawsuit met with a federal judge for several hours.

Among the issues discussed was the fate of the brochure.

After reviewing the material presented, Judge Edward Prado of San Antonio "offered his thoughts" to let those in attendance know how he was leaning at present, but made no decisions, according to those in attendance.

Several school district officials who were present at the Midland courtroom believe the judge indicated that the brochure should be changed when it goes out of date.

In Wednesday's report, Ms. Hamilton was inadvertently credited for this information, which actually came from a short discussion between Superintendent Joseph Baressi and a third board member.

Members of the plaintiff intervenors and the Midland League of United Latin American Citizens Councils 4386 and 4434, however, believe the judge intended for the brochure to be changed immediately.

In his statements, Prado indicated that the brochure should be changed, but apparently did not suggest when.

A court reporter, who returned to San Antonio after the proceedings, compiled the transcript that includes the judge's statements relating to the brochure, as well as to other topics:

"The ones (concerns) raised by the intervenor Dr. Coleman and others, deal with a brochure, concerns of minority recruitment and bad faith on the part of the school administration and district in implementing the Agreed Judgment.

"I don't know where the brochure stands, but I'm inclined to say, let's just do another one. I don't know if there's a whole stack of them printed up, but perhaps we can just do away with that one and redo it and see what we can do about trying to get a new brochure done.

"I think there's some efforts being made towards minority recruitment. It looks like there's some increase in efforts to get minority teachers.... So maybe we could come back and see at the end of the year. The court could get figures at the end of the year telling me how substantial an increase has been made."

Members of LULAC and others siding with the original intervenors have vowed to continue litigation opposing the lifting of restrictions from the school district.

Jury finds woman guilty in Lubbock smothering trial

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — A jury on Wednesday found a former nurse guilty of killing her baby daughter, agreeing with the prosecutors' contention that she was smothered.

The Lubbock County jurors deliberated Tanya Reid's fate for about three hours Wednesday afternoon, facing an Independence Day holiday of sequestering at a local hotel if they didn't return a verdict.

The punishment phase will begin Friday.

In their closing arguments in her murder retrial, attorneys for Ms. Reid contended that prosecutors never presented any evidence about what actually happened to 8-month-old Morgan Reid on Feb. 7, 1984. Her attorneys say the baby died a natural death.

The defense theorized that the 17 prosecution witnesses, most of whom were medical experts of doctors involved with the Reid family, had an "agenda" and simply testified around the facts.

"If you're a mother, it's tragic enough to have two children with these (breathing) events," attorney Gene Fristoe said. "Then you have a group of people willing to ignore documented evidence so they can follow a preconceived agenda."

Deaf Smith County District Attorney Roland Saul rebutted that the only sinister agenda belonged to Ms. Reid, a 38-year-old former nurse. Saul tried to prove that Ms. Reid suffers from "Mun-

Midland County's top narcotics prosecutor was recently honored when he was listed in the Who's Who in American Law publication.

"I'm very pleased there is such a publication that recognizes excellence in the legal profession and honored that I was selected to be a part of it," said Assistant District Attorney Wayne Frost.

Frost's name is among about 22,000 lawyers and professionals in law-related areas nationwide to be listed in the ninth edition of Marquis Who's Who in American Law 1996-97 edition.

The book provides biographical information on lawyers and professionals including, among others, judges, legal educators, law librarians, legal historians and social scientists.

The 42-year-old prosecutor said he wasn't aware the Who's Who organization had a publication for the legal profession until he received a letter informing him that he had been nominated.

"I was surprised at first and it just made my day. Now that they've actually published my name in there, I'm elated," Frost said. "It is quite a boost to know you're doing something right and someone recognizes it.

"It is rewarding to be recognized in a publication that recognizes the best of the best ... (It) is a great honor."

Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre said he is proud Frost was selected.

"He has been with us for a dozen years and he is a real asset to the community," Schorre said.

Frost has been an assistant district attorney since 1984. He serves as the chief narcotics prosecutor handling all felony narcotics cases for Midland County.

The West Texas native said that when he went to college he knew he wanted to be a prosecutor and couldn't wait to return home to work following his graduation.

"This is more than a job for me. It is a calling to serve the people and make our community safer by

Drought challenges Texas ranch family

GIRVIN, Texas (AP) — Sammy Helmers maneuvers his jostling truck into a brush-choked pasture and within minutes he is leading a languid ranchland parade under a hot stinging sun.

The cows, calves and bulls trailing his pickup saunter sluggishly as they skirt the mesquite bushes and trample desert grass, occasionally flicking out meaty tongues and letting out bellowing "MOOOOOO"s.

Helmers stops, instructs a passenger to drive and then perches on the tail gate as he dumps out a bag of the feed pellets that help the cattle survive on the drought-scarred ranch. One docile cow eats out of his hand.

Earlier Helmers had explained the cattle have become so accustomed to following the pickup that he and his 80-year-old father, Alfred, can herd them the same way. It's really the only way they can do it.

"We're too old to cowboy," said Helmers, 58. Then, chuckling, he added: "We're cowMEN now."

The elder Helmers has been working the ranch near Girvin, 270 miles east of El Paso, since 1942. Sammy, who grew up on the ranch, rejoined him in 1993, when he retired after 31 years with the Texas A&M Extension Service.

Alfred Helmers' other son, Ellis, also helps out, but there's no one else to do so.

No ranchhands.

No cowboys.

Just this family that keeps up its leased piece of West Texas, chiefly for the love of the land.

Remembering nickel RC and down-home holiday celebrations

Yes, indeed, it was really so and in real life.

Todd

It wasn't just in the movies and on stage in musicals back East or just in songs and prayers and on the pages of aging essays and in those old black-and-white newsreels.

There really were Fourth-of-July parades, picnics, ice-cream sodas at the drug store, nickel RC (Royal Crown) soft drinks in returnable 12-ounce bottles with cork-lined tops, nickel ice-cream cones, nickel cigars, farm-fresh fried chicken, and hand-cranked ice cream.

And Grandmother (Althea) and Mother (Maurice) and the aunts made lye soap around the cast-iron kettle. Nothing was wasted from the pigsty. Eat it or wash with it.

They canned fruits and vegetables from the old blackland garden.

And Granddaddy (Asa Fleming Williams) farmed cotton on that old land, milked cows, and chewed tobacco, which was quite correct and proper back then but messy if you missed the spittoon. And the juice was an effective liniment on those yellow-jacket, red-wasp and red-ant stings.

And Daddy (James Erasmus Todd), the preacher-teacher who preferred working at the pulpit or blackboard, managed to sidestep most farm chores. If preaching and teaching and studying were out of the way, he would put on his hunting garb, pick up his old single-shot .22-caliber rifle, and, depending on the season, would head out for squirrels or rabbits.

Fine eating.

At nighttime, he would gig big, old frogs that — minus everything but their legs — really did jump in the frying pan.

Mighty good, too.

If not for rabbits, squirrels, or frogs, Daddy would go catfish fishing by trotline in the creek or up Sulphur River with Alvin Welch, the superintendent, when school was out, and Jay Gentry, the country-store keeper, if he didn't have to mind the store.

If Daddy just had to work on the farm between school terms, he somehow avoided hoeing cotton and, later in the season, picking cotton. Instead, Daddy invariably would find an excuse to climb aboard the old International-Harvester Farmall tractor in a time (1930s and 1940s) and a place (Delta County) when the neighbors either had horses and mules or those old hear-'em-for-a-country-mile Popping Johnny John Deere tractors.

Oh, yes, Daddy was an honest, hard-working, God-fearing, patriotic, tap-dancing, accordion-playing and French harp-playing fellow. He reveled in humor and slapstick comedy when down-home

Sexual assault

A Midland County jury found 21-year-old Grover Swartz of Midland guilty of five counts of aggravated sexual assault for incidents that occurred in the summer of 1993.

Swartz was sentenced to 50 years in prison for the crimes. He was already serving a prison sentence for burglary and during the trial evidence of other criminal activity was presented.

Swartz was charged with having sexual relations with a girl under the age of 14. Under state law the girl cannot legally consent to sexual relations at that age.

Burglary of a business

Sheriff deputies are investigating a burglary at Tri-City Beverage at 2101 Market St. where someone tried to use a blowtorch to open a safe early Wednesday morning.

The suspects entered the business through a glass door and ran hoses from a blowtorch in one office to another office where the safe was located, according to deputies with the Sheriff's Office.

The burglary suspects were unable to get inside the safe because they turned on the torch's acetylene component only and not the oxygen component, deputies said.

Nothing was taken and no description of the burglary suspects was available.

chausen syndrome by proxy," in which a parent harms a child to gain sympathy or attention.

"Each of these doctors has precisely one agenda," Saul said. "Their agenda was to find out what was wrong with these children and to heal them."

Morgan died at an Amarillo hospital on Feb. 8, 1984, after suffering the last of nearly two dozen breathing attacks the day before.

The Reid family's son, Robert Matthew Reid, also suffered apneic seizures, or breathing spells, which eventually led Iowa authorities to suspect the mother in 1988. A jury there convicted her the following year of endangering the boy and sentenced her to 10 years in prison.

That conviction prompted Deaf Smith authorities to re-examine Morgan's death and indict Ms. Reid. A Hereford jury convicted Ms. Reid of murder in 1993 and sentenced her to a 62-year prison term, but an appeals court overturned the verdict last year on a technicality.

The defense called three witnesses. One of them was Raymond Reid, Tanya's former husband and the father of her three children, including older sister Kimberley, who never suffered medical problems and has supported her mother through her legal travails.

Raymond Reid said he remembered one of Morgan's breathing attacks at which he was present. Saul reminded the jury in his closing statement that Reid had testified at his ex-wife's previous trial that he never was present at the onset of one of Morgan's attacks.

keeping drugs off the streets," Frost said. "I'm fortunate to be able to do that."

Frost said he comes from a long line of veterans and said he feels a special sense of pride, especially on Independence Day when he thinks of those who have fought and lost their lives for their country.

"Those veterans didn't fight and die to keep it free for the drug dealers," Frost said. "I'm fortunate to be in a position where I can make a difference."

Frost is a member of several community-service organizations and professional groups.

He has been named the first general counsel to the Texas Narcotics Officers Association and was the first narcotics prosecutor named Top Gun drug prosecutor in the state by the Texas District Attorneys' Association.

Who's Who officials said names for their publications are submitted anonymously or are found through staff research.

Selection is determined by reference interest based on either incumbency in a defined position of responsibility or attainment of a significant level of achievement.

Among other notable attorneys listed in the book are members of O.J. Simpson's "dream team," including Johnny Cochran and F. Lee Bailey. One of the prosecutors from the Simpson case, Marcia Clark, is also listed in the book, as is U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno.

FATHER: Drought tests determination of father, son

(From 1B)

"Ranching is sort of a way of life and you have to pay your price to do it," said Sammy Helmers, once again at the wheel of his pickup. "You have to want to do this, it's not profitable."

Particularly not now.

The drought that has gripped the area for at least four years, and has since spread to the rest of Texas, is making it exceedingly difficult, if not impossible, for ranchers to turn a profit.

Forage grasses are scarce so herds must be maintained with costly supplemental feed, another byproduct of the drought, which has also dried up feed crops.

With cattle prices at a low — a cow that once went for about $600 may go for $300 now — Alfred Helmers pointed out they aren't worth enough to sell.

The cattle crisis has caused dismay statewide.

The Helmers' ranch is a counterpoint to the overall gloom.

The Helmers are old enough to remember the drought of the 1950s, which many "old timers" have likened to present-day conditions in Texas, and they note they weathered that one and expect to endure this one.

By 1956, a year before the drought broke, Alfred had sold virtually all of his stock, keeping only a handful of cows to rebuild with. Deliberate breeding helped him bring his herd back to pre-drought levels by 1965.

During that time, said Sammy Helmers, his father learned some valuable lessons that were passed on to his sons: "First, don't overgraze, and secondly, you don't operate on borrowed money."

Alfred Helmers, who barely speaks above a whisper, said with a grin and a laugh that he wasn't so sure he learned any-

Morales says state should solve redistricting

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Attorney General Dan Morales asked a three-judge panel Wednesday to wait to redraw three unlawfully designed congressional districts while Texas officials try to settle the matter.

In a two-page motion filed in Houston, Morales asked the panel to oppose a request by seven voters to have the judges go ahead and redraw the predominantly black 18th District in Houston, the mostly Hispanic 29th District in Houston and Dallas' mostly black 30th District.

"The defendants strongly urge the court to give the state the opportunity to affect a remedy by settlement agreement with the plaintiffs," said Morales, responding for the state, the primary defendant in this redistricting case.

Last month, the Supreme Court sided with a voters' lawsuit which argued the three districts relied unlawfully on race when boundaries were drawn.

The case is now before the federal panel of U.S. District Judges David Hittner and Melinda Harmon and Appeals Court Judge Edith Jones. The three must decide whether to impose their own boundaries; allow the current, unconstitutional boundaries to remain in effect until the 1997 Legislature; or order Gov. George W. Bush to call the Legislature into special session soon to adopt a new plan.

A status conference, in which all parties to the suit are to sit down and come up with a way to solve the problem, is scheduled for July 11.

Noticeably absent from the Morales' filing was a timetable for the redesign. He did say the parties were negotiating.

However, Morales spokesman Ron Dusek says the attorney general believes Texas voters will not want to choose representatives for illegally drawn districts. Leaving the redesign to the Texas Legislature only will complicate matters and fuel the court battle, Dusek said.

Czech descendants keep Old World alive in Texas

By Starita Smith
Austin American-Statesman

LA GRANGE, Texas — In the 1850s, Czechs from the provinces of Moravia and Bohemia began bringing their families to Texas, fleeing what their descendants describe as a state of virtual slavery under the Austrian empire.

In Fayette County, they found a piece of home.

"The countryside in the Moravian agricultural region is rolling hills and farm land like this," said Carolyn Meiners, whose ancestors were among those Czechs who helped start the town of Ammannsville about 60 miles east of Austin.

Meiners, fresh from a third trip to the Czech Republic, still struggles to understand the forces that led her ancestors to leave their beautiful homeland.

Still, she is grateful that her tenacious forebears held on to a language and culture that she loves.

"If not for the peasants, Czech wouldn't have survived," Meiners said.

To ensure that the culture Czechs have preserved through hundreds of years of invasion and persecution in Europe is passed down to coming generations, a statewide group, Texans of Czech Ancestry, is taking the first steps toward building a Texas Czech Heritage and Cultural Center in one of the state's dozens of Czech communities.

The group envisions a center large enough to include a museum, cultural activities and a living historical Czech village. Communities, which organizers wouldn't name, are submitting their prposals this week for becoming the site of the center

Next month, a decision will be made, said Meiners, spokeswoman for the group.

For Central Texas, La Grange and the rest of Fayette County are the major Czech historical sites.

There also are large, long-established Czech communities in dozens of other places in nearly every part of the state.

Czechs have left their mark on Texas with their farms, kolache pastries, polkas, churches with elaborately painted wooden interiors, and exuberant wedding celebrations and festivals.

"It is an old saying that 'Czechs work hard, play hard and pray hard,' " said Meiners.

About 95 percent of the Czechs who settled in Texas were farmers, historians say, and more than 85 percent were Catholic.

Czech Texans are 1 million strong. Czech is one of the most popular languages of European origin in the state, ranking third behind English and Spanish, Meiners said.

There are several trends — intermarriage, outside influences, the separation of families as they move to larger cities — that threaten the continuity of Czech heritage, she said.

"The cultural and heritage center is long overdue. It will leave a legacy for new generations in 2000 when it is finished," she said.

There already are bits and pieces of that heritage scattered throughout the state.

Fayette County is full of them.

There is a museum in Fayetteville, churches, major sites of Czech history and people eager to share the stories of their Czech ancestors.

Justice of peace: Blood of tainted oxygen victims improperly stored

■ Containers may have allowed contents of autopsy specimens to evaporate — including chemical suspected of killing 10 patients at VA hospital in Temple

TEMPLE, Texas (AP) — Medical examiner's reports indicate improper storage of blood samples used in autopsies of four veterans exposed to tainted oxygen at a hospital, Bell County Justice of the Peace Eddy Lange said Wednesday.

But a spokeswoman for the Olin E. Teague Veterans Center, Liz Crossan, said the hospital properly handled the samples.

Lange earlier released findings from the Dallas County medical examiner's office, which found the deaths of six veterans exposed to the tainted oxygen weren't caused by the potentially deadly chemical they breathed.

He said the autopsies revealed traces of the chemical in three of the men. In those cases, Lange said, the chemical couldn't be ruled out in the deaths, but couldn't be called the cause.

On Wednesday, Lange said four autopsy reports note that blood specimens were capped with an unlined, plastic lid that may have allowed the loss of volatile chemicals — including the one that tainted the oxygen, trichloroethylene — before analysis.

"The blood we sequestered from the VA (hospital) was sent in improper containers," Lange said.

Ms. Crossan said the blood samples in question were collected before the men's deaths for routine lab work, and that they were in the proper containers for that purpose. She said they were later requested by the Dallas County medical examiners' office for comparison purposes.

"They were in the proper containers for what they were collected for. Samples that were specifically collected for toxicology are in different containers," Ms. Crossan said.

'They were in the proper containers for what they were collected for. Samples that were specifically collected for toxicology are in different containers.'
— Olin Teague VA Hospital Spokeswoman Liz Crossan

At least 10 men died after being exposed in March to a cleaning chemical introduced into the veterans hospital through a 50-foot hose connecting the hospital to an outside oxygen source.

Lange requested five autopsies and family members requested two others, including the family of one man who was not exposed to trichloroethylene. Three families asked that autopsies not be performed.

Of the seven autopsies, the medical examiner found six deaths were from natural causes and a seventh from an accident 20 years ago, Lange said.

He said the three who tested positive for trichloroethylene were Edwin Sladek, 74, of Taylor; Douglas Saunders, 79, of Temple; and Stephen W. Hodges, 46, of Mart. Hodges' death was the one called accidental.

The reports on Hodges and Saunders contain the notation on storage of blood, Lange said, as did reports on Davis Salazar, 71 of Waco, and Hugh Anderson, 84, of Marquez.

The others on whom autopsies were done were Tom Smith, 79, of Rogers, and Kenneth Lee Gumpert, 73. Gumpert wasn't in the hospital at the time of the incident, but his family requested an autopsy.

Lange said he would release his official determination on the deaths Monday.

Ms. Crossan extended sympathy to the families of the veterans who died and commended the medical center's staff, saying they acted quickly to identify the problem and protect patients.

"We are very glad to learn that while the toxicology tests revealed that the chemical trichloroethylene was present in some of these veterans' bodies, it did not contribute to their deaths. We sincerely hope that this finding will put at ease the minds of the families of those veterans who have passed away and the minds of the 78 surviving veterans and their families," she said.

The Houston company that supplied the oxygen and the hose, Air Liquide, was cited earlier this summer for not following safety standards before connecting its system to the hospital's. The hospital's system was off line for several weeks until independent inspectors ruled it safe.

Air Liquide said it worked with the medical center to assure quality and safety of hospital oxygen systems after the incident.

"We will always stand by the purity of our medical oxygen supply," said Ken Miller, executive vice president of the company.

"We remain deeply saddened for the families and friends of the patients, and regret that this situation created uncertainty at an already sad time."

Court says woman raped by youth may sue

AUSTIN (AP) — A woman who was raped in 1990 by a juvenile who escaped from a Texas Youth Commission facility has grounds to sue the state agency for negligence, the 3rd Court of Appeals in Austin ruled Wednesday.

The appeals court's action clears the way for a trial in state district court over the matter. No trial date has been set.

According to the appeals court opinion, the woman was sexually assaulted in April 1990 by Jimmie Cooper, who had escaped from the TYC's Parrie Haynes Ranch, a minimum security facility in Bell County. Cooper was later convicted of the crime, according to court records.

The woman's lawsuit against the Youth Commission contends that the Parrie Haynes Ranch, which was used by TYC for supervised recreational outings, wasn't equipped to house juveniles such as Cooper.

The lawsuit contends the fencing around the facility was "adequate for cattle" not wayward juveniles.

At the time of the incident, Cooper had a record that included criminal trespassing, threatening a police officer with a weapon, drug use, probation violations, damaging school property and aggravated sexual assault.

"The rapist was being confined for the exact kind of acts ... which his escape resulted in, and the government should not be able to abandon its responsibility by claiming the independent acts of the rapist," the woman's attorney, Gene Silverblatt, wrote in a brief filed with the appeals court.

The Youth Commission argued that the lawsuit should be dismissed because the agency is protected by sovereign immunity, which shields governmental entities from liability.

But the appeals court disagreed, saying that TYC failed to prove that it was entitled to sovereign immunity in this case.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

THURSDAY, JULY 4, 1996

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Honors and compliments continue to come your way thanks to your track record. September could bring a lucrative contract. A family obligation ends in November. If single, you could find romance with an old friend. A long-awaited trip will lead to fresh insights and a chance for greater prosperity. An inheritance or settlement will help stabilize your finances in 1997. Next spring is the ideal time to start a new business. Select partners whose talents compliment your own.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: tennis player Pam Shriver, talk show host Geraldo Rivera, jazz trumpet legend Louis Armstrong, actress Gina Lollobrigida.

HAPPY FOURTH OF JULY!

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Socializing can be both fun and surprisingly inexpensive on this special day. Be careful not to reveal family secrets to outsiders. Fireworks are likely if a loved one feels that you have been disloyal!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A love relationship deepens now. Bridge a generation gap by planning activities that include family members of all ages. Baseball games and water sports are favored.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Get an early start if traveling today. Drivers need to allow time for delays. Romance looks especially fulfilling for singles. Family members approve your choice of partner.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Small children need special attention during today's festivities. Keep them away from both fireworks and traffic. Picnic food holds greater appeal than more elaborate fare.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A romantic interlude makes a day to remember. Watch a parade or the fireworks with that special someone. Share cooking chores so that no one is overburdened.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Happily, you and your partner are on the same wavelength this holiday. Romance blossoms anew. Social activities are a welcome change from all the work you have been doing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Combining business with pleasure will work fine if you choose your companions carefully. Someone you meet today could play an important role in your future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your differences with an older relative should be set aside during a family reunion. A community or company picnic could bring out an acquaintance's romantic side.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): New faces and places make this a memorable day. Celebrate your own independence on the sundeck or by the pool. Phone a loved one who may be feeling out of sorts.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A heart-to-heart talk patches up a rift. Avoid talking shop at social gatherings lest others think you a bore. Plan some quiet activities for children to enjoy when they weary of dashing around.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Someone can hardly wait to see you! Share the driving if going a long distance. Stop frequently if traveling with children or pets. A small gift will endear you to a host.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Friends may be more cooperative than relatives. Keep your impatience in check. Salads and light buffet offerings are in order if you entertain today.

Opening lead: Six of ♡

You do not usually get more than one chance to profit from an opponent's miscue. When the opportunity presents itself, seize it!

West's weak two-heart opening bid does not measure up to our requirements for a first-seat weak two; or, for that matter, for those of most players we know. The final contract would have been the same even if West had passed initially.

West decided that, if a suit was good enough to bid, it is good enough to lead. Had declarer ducked in both hands, the contract would have been unbeatable as the cards lie. However, declarer called for dummy's king and East was quick to take advantage of the error by unblocking the jack.

When declarer misguessed by leading a low spade from the table instead of a diamond, which would have removed West's entry, East shot up with the ace and reverted to the three of hearts. The seven was covered by the eight and the ace was forced out. Since declarer could not come to nine tricks without diamonds, West was able to win the ace and cash enough heart tricks to defeat the contract one trick.

Note that, if East does not unblock the knave of hearts, three no trump will sneak home. When East wins the ace of spades and leads the jack of hearts, declarer ducks and West cannot overtake without setting up an another positional heart stopper for declarer. No matter what East shifts to, declarer now has the time to establish diamonds for the game-going tricks.

Two more multiplexes could turn Magic into movie-theater mogul

NEW YORK — Magic Johnson is turning himself into a movie-theater mogul with plans for two more multiplexes, this time in New York City.

Magic Johnson plans to open two more multiplex theaters.

In 1995, the basketball star opened a 12-screen theater in inner-city Los Angeles, and it is now one of the highest-grossing theaters in the country. He is also planning theaters in Atlanta and Houston.

Spots in Harlem and Queens are being eyed for the two 12-screen theaters that should be open by late 1997, Magic Johnson Theaters said.

"We provide high-quality entertainment to communities that have been denied it for too long," President Kenneth Lombard said.

WASHINGTON — Angela "Bay" Buchanan, the sister and campaign manager of vanquished GOP presidential contender Pat Buchanan, will be the new co-host of CNBC's "Equal Time" program, television sources said Wednesday.

She is to replace Mary Matalin, onetime deputy campaign manager to former President Bush. Matalin is paired on the political talk show with President Clinton's former White House press secretary, Dee Dee Myers.

Buchanan, known for her rapid-fire retorts, will begin filling in for Matalin periodically starting later this month and take over for Matalin full time after Labor Day, said two CNBC sources who spoke on condition of anonymity.

That would allow Buchanan to continue her political efforts on behalf of her brother through the Republican National Convention in San Diego this August. Pat Buchanan has pledged to press his unsuccessful presidential campaign through the convention and push to preserve the party's strong anti-abortion stance.

The Buchanan campaign had no comment and said Bay Buchanan was unavailable.

Matalin earlier this year announced she was leaving the cable program to serve as a strategist for Bob Dole's presidential campaign. But she abruptly dropped that plan after GOP critics expressed concern about her marriage to Clinton campaign strategist James Carville.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — An 18-year-old man pleaded guilty to carjacking "Forrest Gump" actress Robin Wright in front of her home.

Wright was parking her Toyota Land Cruiser in May when she was approached by Dackery Williams and a 16-year-old boy. Wright called 911 from a neighbor's house after the teen-agers sped off in the four-wheel-drive.

Eighteen-year-old pleads guilty to carjacking "Forrest Gump" actress Robin Wright.

The actress, who is married to Sean Penn, was with her two children. No one was injured.

Williams pleaded guilty Tuesday to carjacking and robbery. He could get up to five years in prison at sentencing Oct. 7.

The unidentified 16-year-old got six months.

CHARLESTON, W.Va. — A waiter at an upscale restaurant has been suspended for being rude to daughters of Harry Belafonte and Sidney Poitier.

Actress Shari Belafonte, her sister Adrienne Belafonte Biesmayer, Pamela Poitier and Alycia Allen, North Carolina's teacher of the year, were refused service despite a reservation at Laury's.

Biesmayer said that she does not believe the June 22 incident was racially motivated but that she had a hard time convincing her companions of that.

"I'm 47 years old and a resident of West Virginia for 30 years," she said. "This is the first time I've had such an experience."

Owner Fazo Mirzakhani suspended the unidentified waiter for a week. He said it is not Laury's policy to discriminate.

"If he was being racial, I'll fire him," he said Monday.

LOS ANGELES — A former "Price Is Right" model is suing Bob Barker, claiming she was fired after 19 years for being overweight.

Holly Hallstrom, who filed suit on Tuesday, is seeking unspecified damages.

Barker sued Hallstrom for libel in December, claiming she had issued "totally false" press releases saying she had been fired in 1995 because she was fat. The game show host said Hallstrom, 43, voluntarily retired.

Ecology project offers glimpse of idyllic future on Mexico-U.S. border

By Jeanne Russell
The McAllen Monitor

ISLA DE LOS CASTORES, Mexico — Imagine the river that runs between the United States and Mexico.

Now picture it sparkling clean, framed with mesquite and palo blanco trees and flowering shrubs, a home to the rare birds that migrate from the North toward Mexico.

A project to re-vegetate the 62-acre Isla de los Castores (Beaver Island), just three miles upstream from the Mexican municipality of Miguel Aleman, offers a glimpse into this idyllic future. It is the kind of project environmentalists fantasized about when they proposed side agreements to the North American Free Trade Agreement.

"The animals, birds and plant species don't know borders," said Ramiro Cortez Barrera, director of Miguel Aleman's Ecology Department. "An animal is not going to show a card to pass into the United States, nor will a seed present itself at Customs."

Funded with only $7,000 from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and $9,000 from the municipality of Miguel Aleman, the project draws together Mexican and U.S. biologists. Local officials plan to use Mexican schoolchildren to re-vegetate an island in the middle of the Rio Grande — formerly a drug-smuggling stop-off point — for ecotourism.

The seed money came from an allocation by Congress to Fish and Wildlife to offset environmental effects of increased trade after NAFTA.

Ecotourism has gained favor in recent years as a means for undeveloped areas to draw dollars at little cost, without building high-rise hotels that could destroy the environment.

For example, in 1993-1994, birders coming to the Santa Ana National Wildlife Refuge in Alamo, Texas, injected nearly $14.42 million dollars into local economies, an independent research study found.

So when the Mexican government seized Isla de los Castores after the island's owners were charged with drug smuggling nearly two years ago, local officials chose the serene spot for a wildlife preserve and nature center.

The island earned its name from the beaver, or castor canadensis mexicanus, an endangered species in Mexico. Tracks of the nocturnal creature can be spotted on the island's muddy banks, said Antonio Guerra Prez, a biologist with Miguel Aleman's Ecology Department.

Los Caminos del Rio, a Laredo, Texas-based nonprofit organization, coordinated the bi-national effort.

"The island will become the living laboratory," interim executive director Sharon Cruz said.

Los Caminos del Rio seeks to create a heritage corridor, restoring historic buildings and preserving ecology from Laredo to the Gulf of Mexico.

Native ebano, chaparro prieto, Rio Grande ash, cedar elm, sugar hackberry and soapberry trees draped with Spanish-moss frame Isla de los Castores. But the previous owners cleared a plot about the size of three football fields in the middle of the island.

That's where Chris Best, a plant ecologist with Fish and Wildlife, comes in.

Best helped local biologists set up a native plant nursery.

"From the Fish and Wildlife point of view, the most important aspect has been training the Mexican personnel," he said.

Best had hoped to plant the seedlings last fall. To do so, he needed to get a tractor onto the river. So far, the river hasn't cooperated.

When river levels dropped low enough to allow Best and volunteers to cross with the equipment, the former owners sued and blocked activity just long enough for the water to rise again.

About 16,000 baby trees of 25 native species wait a rescheduled November planting date.

Arkansas River project celebrates 25 years of barge traffic

CATOOSA, Okla. (AP) — Wharfs and sea-bound barges appeared on the Oklahoma prairie when the landlocked state gained a "waterway to the world" 25 years ago.

Boosters of the McClellan-Kerr Arkansas River Navigation System are celebrating that anniversary by touting the $1.2 billion federal project as pivotal to freight rates and business growth in two states.

The 445-mile system opened in 1971 as a way to haul cargo by water between the Tulsa Port of Catoosa — the head of navigation — and the Mississippi River south of Pine Bluff, Ark.

Petroleum products, wheat, coal, steel, gypsum and lumber move down the system and out through its five public ports and numerous private ports. Imported chemicals, fertilizer, soda ash and newsprint move up.

"Even if you don't use it, you have a stake in this thing because of the impact on transportation," said Bob Portiss, director of the port about 20 miles northeast of downtown Tulsa. "I just have to believe we would not be as diversified today as we are, because of this waterway."

The Tulsa Port of Catoosa includes a 2,000-acre industrial complex.

Last week, Portiss guided a visitor around the loading docks, grain elevators, warehouses and pipelines that surround the channel.

"See that unit out there?" he asked, pointing to a flare stack turned onto its side, on a long trailer. "That'd be pretty darn hard to truck to New Orleans."

Will Rogers reportedly quipped long ago that the only way to make the Arkansas River navigable was to pave it.

There were other skeptics, too, of the federal project that gave Tulsa the largest inland port in the nation.

At the time it was built — from 1957 to 1970 — it was the largest civil works endeavor ever undertaken by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. Critics derided the "pork" pushed by Sens. John L. McClellan of Arkansas and Robert S. Kerr of Oklahoma.

"It started out, quite honestly, with the label of boondoggle," said Paul Revis, executive director for the Arkansas Waterways Commission in Little Rock. "That was sour grapes of some people. We have proven them wrong."

Revis said he helped design and build the waterway that uses 17 locks and dams over the Verdigris, Arkansas and White rivers.

He pointed to its added advantages for flood control, bank stabilization, hydroelectric power and recreation. But the main function has been cargo movement. One barge can haul the capacity of 15 rail cars or 60 trucks, supporters of the system say.

Without McClellan-Kerr "we wouldn't have access to the world markets and we wouldn't have towboats into Arkansas and Oklahoma, into the heartland," Revis said.

John Pearson, president of the Guthrie Corp. in Guthrie, said he ships grain along the waterway from five private ports.

"You have an economic advantage by using water transport," Pearson said. "We're talking about moving commodities long distances, and it's the cheapest way."

Revis and others say the future of the waterway looks bright.

"I would expect much accelerated growth and use in the next 25 years," he said. "I think the best is yet to come. We've just started."

Tutors tag along on some students' summer vacations

AP Laserphoto

Amanda Rose, a senior Scholastic Aptitude Test tutor, left, works one-on-one with an unidentified high school student at Stanford Coaching Inc. in New York in May. For some students, these sessions will continue through summer vacation.

By Deb Riechmann
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — They'll visit Martha's Vineyard, Nantucket and the Hamptons, but for these students, "What I Did on My Summer Vacation" also will include cramming for the SAT.

Competition to get into some of the nation's most prestigious universities has prompted some students and parents to sign up for SAT tutoring vacation-style.

It can be expensive, but the coaching lets students brush up on verbal and math skills they need to excel on the Scholastic Assessment Test, a college-entrance test taken by 1.8 million students last year.

Summers used to be quiet at Stanford Coaching Inc., a tutoring business that Lisa Jacobson founded eight years ago in New York City. Regular clients were tutored through the school year, but then went away for the summer — often to upscale resort areas.

"We said, 'Why don't we go to where the kids are?'" Ms. Jacobson said. "The tutors go to work eight hours a day. We put them up in a nice inn."

For four years, Stanford Coaching has offered one-on-one summer tutoring in such places as Nantucket, Martha's Vineyard and the Berkshires in Massachusetts; East Hampton, South Hampton and Fishers Island in New York; and other East Coast vacation spots.

The price ranges from $2,500 for 20 hours of tutoring to $5,000 for 40 hours.

Stanford tutor Donald Viscardi, 37, plans to spend his summer on a yacht cruising the Mediterranean. He'll be tutoring a high school junior who plans to take the pre-SAT test in October. He also will be helping her two younger siblings with their schoolwork.

"This is for the rich. I don't deny that or make excuses for it," Viscardi says. "But these are very good kids and just because their parents are wealthy — I don't hold that against them."

A.J. Lockhart, 18, of Greenwich, Conn., was coached last summer while vacationing at his family's summer home in Nantucket. His mother worried that her son had missed some basic algebra during his 11 years of schooling abroad.

"Initially I thought, 'Why am I doing this?'" said Lockhart. He thought the two-hour tutoring sessions three days a week would cut into his sailing, swimming and working on a tan. But "it's not really that bad," he says.

> 'Ten or 12 years ago we started seeing parents trying to get their children in to the 'right' preschool. Now, we're harvesting that same crop.'
> — Dave Merkowitz, spokesman for the American Council of Education

As it turned out, he scored 1,490 out of 1,600 when he took the SAT during his senior year at Choate Rosemary Hall, a private co-ed boarding school in Wallingford, Conn. This fall, he's headed for Manhattanville College, a small liberal arts school in Purchase, N.Y.

His 16-year-old sister, Julia, is being tutored in Nantucket this summer.

Orly Genger, 17, who will be a senior next year at Ramaz Upper School, a preparatory school in New York City, thinks it's mostly the parents who are pushing the summertime SAT tutoring.

"But it's definitely better in the long run to keep practicing over the summer," said Ms. Genger, who has been tutored both in the summer and during the school year.

Kaplan Educational Centers, a New York-based test preparation business, began offering private tutoring last year along with its traditional classroom courses. Kaplan's private tutoring packages begin at $1,495 for 15 hours plus three practice test sessions; traditional classroom preparatory courses start at $495 for nine three-hour sessions.

Kaplan will offer vacation spot tutoring for a second year in such resorts as Myrtle Beach and Hilton Head in South Carolina, the Hamptons and the Jersey Shore, says Seppy Basili, director of pre-college programs.

Dave Merkowitz, a spokesman for the American Council of Education, a research and lobbying group, says applications are up at elite schools largely because more of them are accepting a common application. Instead of applying to three or four schools, students now send the same forms to nine or 10, deepening the pool of applicants at each school.

Also, many baby boomers have been determined to put their children into the best schools all along.

STORM TRACKER FACTS

The Permian Basin saw a not-so-summer-like day on Wednesday as clouds and scattered thunderstorms kept temperatures down slightly. The high of 93 was a little below what we have seen the last few days, but that won't last long. Triple-digit heat is in the Independence Day forecast and so is the chance of scattered afternoon thunderstorms. Hot weather will continue for the rest of the holiday weekend, so be sure to take a break from the heat during the afternoon hours.

Phillips pleads

EL MONTE, Calif. — Lawrence Phillips, the St. Louis Rams' top draft pick, pleaded innocent Wednesday to misdemeanor drunken driving.

Phillips was not present. Attorney Karen Filipi entered the plea before Commissioner Jose A. Rodriguez in Rio Hondo Municipal Court.

Trial was set for Aug. 28.

Phillips, 21, is free on his own recognizance.

He was arrested on June 15 in Los Angeles County after police allegedly saw him speeding in a gold Mercedes-Benz with a flat tire. His blood-alcohol level was found to be about twice California's legal limit, authorities said.

Phillips, who has not yet been signed by the Rams, already is on probation for assaulting his former girlfriend while both were students at the University of Nebraska. The probation is scheduled to end Nov. 29.

A drunken-driving conviction could lead to the revocation of his probation and possibly jail time.

If convicted, Phillips could be sentenced to six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

McGrath selected

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. — Surprise Wimbledon semifinalist Meredith McGrath was selected as an alternate Wednesday for the U.S. Fed Cup team that will play Japan in the semifinals July 13-14.

McGrath, 25, will travel to Nagoya, Japan, with Lindsay Davenport, Gigi Fernandez, Mary Joe Fernandez and Monica Seles.

The United States has won 14 Fed Cup titles, more than any other nation. Last year, the Americans lost to Spain in the final.

The United States and Japan have met only once in the Fed Cup, with the Americans winning in the first round in 1987.

Banners stolen

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga. (AP) — Local Olympic organizers say several banners signaling the coming of the Olympic torch to Milledgeville have been stolen from their poles.

Ninety bright "Pathways to Gold" banners were purchased through the Milledgeville Garden Club, and businesses and other groups bought up the green banners.

Organizers estimate that at least 12 banners have been stolen. The banners don't belong to the community.

Irvin Trial: Defense suggests officers 'Got stories straight'

By Stefani G. Kopenec
Associated Press

DALLAS — Defense attorneys attacked the credibility of a policeman Wednesday by suggesting he worked with prosecutors to fine tune his story and possibly contaminated drug evidence in the case against Dallas Cowboys receiver Michael Irvin.

A lawyer for the football star also suggested that a vial with cocaine residue found in his client's bag could have been put there by his former teammate, Alfredo Roberts.

And in trying to blunt prosecutors' opening statements that a woman charged in the case was shocked when cocaine was found in her gym bag, attorneys got officer Matthew Drumm to testify that Angela Beck did not appear surprised at the discovery.

State District Judge Manny Alvarez denied a defense motion for a mistrial after assistant district attorney Shannon Ross accused Irvin's lawyers of misleading the jury in their questioning of Drumm.

Later, under questioning by Ross, Drumm said that neither prosecutors nor others in the Irving Police Department told him what to say. Prosecutors only encouraged him to "tell the truth," Drumm said.

Earlier in the day, testimony showed Irving officers met with prosecutors five times to discuss what happened the night Irvin was found in the motel room with cocaine and marijuana.

Defense attorney Kevin Clancy asked Drumm about the meetings and suggested "y'all got your stories straight."

"That almost sounds like we made something up — no," said Drumm, the lead officer called to the Residence Inn in March on what he termed a routine disturbance possibly involving prostitution.

Clancy grilled Drumm about the location of the bag containing the vial with cocaine residue. When Drumm said he wasn't certain despite testimony from a pretrial hearing in which he said he believed it was in a bedroom area, Clancy questioned Drumm's memory.

"Now, today, because it doesn't fit with their (pros-

Sources: Tyson sick, Seldon July 13 fight off

By Tim Dahlberg
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Mike Tyson, reportedly suffering from bronchitis, canceled a public workout Wednesday, and sources said his July 13 fight with WBA heavyweight champion Bruce Seldon would be called off.

It will tentatively be rescheduled for Sept. 7, the sources said..

A late afternoon press conference was scheduled by promoter Don King, where a doctor for the WBC heavyweight champion was also scheduled to be present.

Although spokesmen for King said they did not know anything about the fight being postponed, two sources close to the promotion told The Associated Press that it was off.

The Madison Square Garden Network indirectly confirmed the postponement when it announced its pre-fight show had been canceled and replaced by a Riddick Bowe preview. The Tyson fight itself was to have been on pay-per-view.

It would be the second time Tyson has postponed a fight since being released from prison. In November, he pulled out of a fight with Buster Mathis Jr. a few days

WIMBLEDON'S FORTNIGHT OF FRUSTRATION

Rain savers: Sampras, Ivanisevic on verge of joining seeded exodus

■ With only three seeds left, potential losses by Sampras and Ivanisevic could leave the tournament with no seeds in the finals for the first time.

By Steve Wilson
Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — Three-time champion Pete Sampras was in danger of losing his Wimbledon title today when his match was suspended by rain and a freak injury to a court coverer.

Unseeded Richard Krajicek led 7-5, 7-6 (7-3), 1-1 when play was stopped for the third time.

As workmen hustled to cover the court with a tarpaulin, one of them was hurt and received treatment. In the process, half the court was left uncovered and became too soaked for play when the sky cleared about a half hour later.

Another upset in the making on Court 1, with Jason Stoltenberg leading No. 4 Goran Ivanisevic, 6-3, 7-6 (7-3), 5-4, resumed while Sampras and Krajicek were given the rest of the night off.

Ivanisevic saved a match point at 4-5 and went on to win the third set in a tiebreaker, 7-3. At that point, with the light fading at 8:30 p.m., the match was also suspended until Thursday.

Sampras, who is bidding for a fourth consecutive title, looked flat-footed and despondent at the end of the second set.

Krajicek had served 23 aces to Sampras' mere five and had not been broken the entire match.

The matches started 30 minutes late because of rain. Before the suspension, they were interrupted twice for a total of 5 hours, 19 minutes.

Krajicek broke Sampras at love in the 12th game to take the first set 7-5 with a series of four straight stunning winners. On his first set point, he ripped a forehand return past a charging Sampras.

In the second set, each player held serve throughout to force the tiebreaker. Krajicek went ahead 5-0 to take control. Sampras won the next three points, but Krajicek took the next two to close out the set.

Stoltenberg, meanwhile, took advantage of sloppy play by Ivanisevic to take the first two sets of their quarterfinal match on Court 1.

Ivanisevic was up a break at 4-2 in the third set, but the 46th-ranked Australian broke back for 4-4 with a backhand return. In the next game, Ivanisevic received a warning for racket

Bevil makes return an impressive one

■ Halo's winning streak ends at one as Wichita hurler once again takes throne as one of Texas League's best pitchers.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Who in the Texas League West is going to stop the Wichita Wranglers now that ace pitcher Brian Bevil is back with a point to prove?

The answer is probably no one. In fact, the answer is probably no one even if Bevil didn't return from Triple-A Omaha.

Bevil teamed with Brian Harrison and Chris Eddy for a six-hit, 4-0 shutout over the Midland Angels at Christensen Stadium Wednesday night.

Bevil (8-2) pitched six innings of four-hit ball and then let Harrison and Eddy mop-up the last three innings. The Angels couldn't break through against Bevil even though he claims that he wasn't very sharp on the mound. And if he wasn't sharp, the Angels certainly don't want to face him when he's on the

Rangers suspect lack of respect in All-Star selections

By T.R. Sullivan
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Rangers pitcher Roger Pavlik was selected by Cleveland manager Mike Hargrove to the American League All-Star team, but there was some disappointment in the Texas clubhouse about having only two players on the squad after the pitchers and reserves were announced.

Pavlik, 10-2 with a 5.16 earned-run average, was selected to the All-Star team for the first time in his career and joins teammate Ivan Rodriguez, who was voted the starting catcher by the fans. The game is scheduled for Tuesday in Philadelphia.

"It's nice to be picked," Pavlik said. "It's something as a kid you always dream of but never know if you're going to have a chance to play in."

The Rangers had other players who clearly deserved at least consideration for the team, including third baseman Dean Palmer, shortstop Kevin Elster, second baseman Mark McLemore and outfielders Juan Gonzalez, Darryl Hamilton and Rusty Greer.

"I think there's quite a few guys on this team that deserve consideration," Palmer said.

The Rangers entered last night's game against California tied with Cleveland for the best record (49-32) in the American League, which they felt also should have been considered in selecting the All-Star team.

The Seattle Mariners, who were six games behind the Rangers, had five players selected. That includes injured outfielder Ken Griffey, who will not play in Philadelphia.

"It's disappointing; you figure we would have had more," Hamilton said. "We played so well in the first half and we still don't get any respect. There's no

Fredericks runs 9.86 into wind; Johnson does 43.66

■ Nambia's sprinter ran second fastest 100 of all-time leaving U.S. runners in his dust. Michael Johnson continued his winning ways in 400.

By Salvatore Zanca
Associated Press

LAUSANNE, Switzerland - Frankie Fredericks of Namibia won an Olympic caliber 100-meter race in 9.86 seconds, equaling the second-fastest of all-time, but Michael Johnson failed to gain a 400-meter world record Wednesday at the Athletissima Grand Prix meet.

"I'm happy that I ran well. I didn't run for the world record. If I am supposed to break it, then it will happen one day," Fredericks said.

Second was world champion Donovan Bailey of Canada in 9.93 with Ato Boldon of Trinidad third in 9.94 with American Jon Drummond fourth in 10.00.

Linford Christie of Britain, the 1992 Olympic champion, was fifth in 10.04.

Bruny Surin of Canada, 10.05 followed in sixth. American Leroy Burrell, the world recordholder at 9.85, was seventh in 10.05. Dennis Mitchell, the American Olympic trial winner, was eighth and last in 10.15.

Johnson ran 43.66 in the 400 meters, falling short of Butch Reynolds' world record of 43.29. He appeared to be behind most of the runners at the 200-meter mark then opened up to full speed the last 200 to win easily over Roger Black of Britain, second in 44.37.

"I just wanted to run the first 100 really safe," Johnson said. "Then I ran the second half to win but not push it too hard."

Indians make changes, get back on winning track

Associated Press

■ AL Roundup

CLEVELAND — Albert Belle hit his 27th homer and Julian Tavarez got his first victory as a starter this season as the Cleveland Indians beat the Kansas City Royals 6-4 Wednesday night.

Jim Thome and Sandy Alomar had two-run doubles in Cleveland's five-run rally in the fifth. The Royals, whose pitching staff has given up the fewest walks in the American League, issued eight, including a season-high six by Kevin Appier (7-8).

Greg Swindell took over for Tavarez in the sixth and pitched three hitless innings. Paul Shuey got the last three outs for his second save.

Appier walked the bases loaded with one out in the fifth and Kansas City leading 4-1. Thome then ripped a double off the left-field wall against reliever Mike Magnante to make it 4-3.

Eddie Murray and Manny Ramirez both walked to force in the tying run before Alomar greeted Julio Valera with another double for a 6-4 lead.

Blue Jays 5, Orioles 2

TORONTO — Ed Sprague hit a grand slam in the fifth inning and Juan Guzman improved his AL-leading earned run average by allowing one run in seven innings, leading Toronto over Baltimore.

Sprague pulled Rick Krivda's 2-0 pitch over the wall in left with two outs in the fifth, giving the Blue Jays a 5-1 lead. He now has three career grand slams and 23 homers this season.

Domingo Cedeno and Jacob Brumfield hit two-out singles and Joe Carter drew a walk, loading the bases for Sprague.

Guzman (7-6) scattered six hits, struck out six and walked three to lower his ERA from 3.38 to 3.25.

Krivda (2-4) gave up five runs on six hits in 4 2-3 innings before being chased by the grand slam.

Twins 6, White Sox 5

CHICAGO — Brad Radke, a loser in 10 of his previous 11 decisions, snapped a five-game losing streak and Rich Becker went 4-for-5 in Minnesota's victory over Chicago.

Radke (5-10) allowed three runs on seven hits and two walks in seven-plus innings. Dave Stevens pitched the final 1 2-3 innings for his 11th save.

The Twins led 5-0 after five innings against White Sox starter Luis Andujar (0-1), who was recalled from Triple-A Nashville on Tuesday. Andujar gave up five runs and 10 hits in 5 1-3 innings.

Chicago scored its first three runs in the sixth on Danny Tartabull's 11th homer. The pulled within a run with two in the eighth on an RBI double by Harold Baines and a pinch-hit RBI single by Frank Thomas, who didn't start for the first time in 83 games.

Tigers 8, Brewers 5

DETROIT — Curtis Pride had three hits, including an RBI triple in a four-run second inning as Detroit ended a five-game losing by defeating Milwaukee.

Cecil Fielder had his second career stolen base for the Tigers, who finally beat the Brewers after being limited to just one run in their previous two games, a span of 20 innings.

Brian Williams (2-5) allowed two runs and 10 hits in seven innings to win for the second time in three decisions. The Tigers then held on although the Brewers scored three runs in the ninth inning.

Twenty-year-old right-hander Jeff D'Amico (1-1), the majors' youngest player, lasted just 3 2-3 innings in his second career start. D'Amico, who beat Toronto in his debut last Friday, gave up five runs on six hits and three walks.

Mariners 4, Athletics 3

SEATTLE — Edgar Martinez doubled home Alex Rodriguez from first base with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning, giving Seattle the victory over Oakland.

Rodriguez reached on an infield single after Carlos Reyes (4-10) got pinch-hitter Dan Wilson and Joey Cora to fly out. Martinez followed with his major-league-leading 41st double, to right field on a 3-2 pitch, scoring Rodriguez with the winning run. It was the second double of the game for Martinez.

Seattle reliever Bobby Ayala (1-1) got the final four outs in relief of starter Bob Wolcott as the Mariners salvaged the finale of a three-game series.

Drabek doesn't think, just throws Astros to win

HOUSTON — Doug Drabek believes too much thinking can be a bad thing. So the Astros starter sped things up a little Wednesday afternoon, and pitched perhaps his best game of the season.

Drabek took a shutout into the ninth, but needed relief help before the Houston Astros beat the Florida Marlins 4-3 and extended their winning streak to a season-high five.

Drabek (4-6) scattered seven hits, struck out nine and walked two in beating Florida for the first time in three career decisions. Drabek, who lowered his ERA from 5.06 to 4.82, relaxed and took less time between each pitch this game.

"That was conscious," Drabek said. "When you're struggling, sometimes you can overanalyze and mess yourself up trying to figure out what you're doing wrong instead of just pitching and letting your mechanics do the job for you.

"So today, I took a little less time and just tried to pitch without thinking a whole lot about it. The other thing it does is it helps you get in a rhythm."

Drabek had 10 strikeouts in a loss to the Atlanta Braves earlier this season.

Todd Jones came in with a 4-0 lead and two on in the ninth, then finished for his 16th save. He allowed an RBI single to Joe Orsulak, got Terry Pendleton to hit into a run-scoring double play.

BEVIL: No fireworks for Angels

razor's edge.

"I wasn't as sharp as I would like to be," Bevil said. "None of my pitches were all that sharp, but I just kept changing speeds."

Bevil's performance spoiled the home debut of Angel upstart Jarrod Washburn, who won his first three starts with the Angels on the last 12-game road trip through El Paso and San Antonio. Washburn, who played his high school ball for Houston MacArthur, is rated by Baseball America as California's No. 3 prospect.

Washburn wasn't bad, giving up four runs in eight innings of work with nine strikeouts, a season high. Washburn's main trouble came in the Wichita fourth when the Wranglers put together four consecutive singles and a sacrifice fly for a 3-0 lead. Washburn gave up another lone run in the eighth.

Other than that he was superb, allowing no hits in five of the eight innings he worked.

But Bevil just wouldn't crack despite some golden offensive chances by the Angels. In the Angel fourth, Midland put the first three runners on with no outs, but Bevil got Leon Glenn on a pop to second, Aaron Guiel on a pop to third and Edgar Alfonzo on a fly to right.

"In a bases loaded situation, you want a ground ball for the double play or an infield pop up," Bevil said. "I just threw a four-seamer up in the zone, hoping it would be a pitch they would hit up in the air and not be able to drive. I got a couple of those to get out of it."

Bevil was also aided in the fifth when left fielder Don Sheppard threw out Midland catcher Ben Molina at the plate after a base hit by Keith Luuloa. The Angels also stranded a runner at third base against Harrison in the seventh.

So, why is Bevil back with the Wranglers. Bevil was 1-2 with Omaha, but he isn't talking much about why he is back with the Wranglers.

"I don't make those decisions," Bevil said. "I had one bad game up there, but I also got into a disagreement with the manager. Now, I'm pitching here."

At any rate, Wichita put zeroes on the defensive board and insured that they will leave Midland in better position than when they arrived. Wichita leads the series 4-1 with only today's 7 p.m. game left on the current agenda.

ANGEL DUST: Molina, who is having a great series against the Wranglers, got two of Midland's six hits. He is now 6-for-14 (.429)... Ryan Long is the Wrangler hurting the Angels the most. He is also hitting at a .429 (9-for-21) clip in the series with 3 homers, 7 RBIs and 5 runs scored... The Angels released former major leaguer Ralph Bryant, who was used mostly as a designated hitter. Bryant was hitting at a meager .140 clip over the last 21 games (10-for-73). Pitcher Todd Ingram was added to the roster. Ingram has been playing in the Texas-Louisiana with Lubbock and Tyler where he put up a 1-5 record and 6.05 ERA in eight games... Midland is now 16-26 at home this season... Wichita is 12-9 against the Angels this season, including an 8-2 mark at Christensen Stadium... The Angels' Aaron Guiel would just as soon forget this series. The third baseman has five errors, including two Wednesday, and is on a 0-for-14 streak at the plate. Midland shortstop Edgar Alfonzo also made two errors Wednesday...

Ochoa becomes first rookie to hit for cycle

Associated Press

■ NL Roundup

PHILADELPHIA — Alex Ochoa became the first rookie to hit for the cycle since 1991, going 5-for-5 and hitting a go-ahead homer in the eighth inning Wednesday night that led the New York Mets past Philadelphia 10-6.

Ochoa, playing only his 22nd game in the majors, drove in three runs and scored three times.

He singled in the second inning, tripled in the fourth and hit doubles in the sixth and ninth. He became the first rookie to reach the cycle since St. Louis' Ray Lankford, and became the sixth Mets player to do it, the first since Kevin McReynolds on Aug. 1, 1989.

Ochoa's cycle was the first against the Phillies since Cincinnati's Gus Bell did it June 4, 1951.

Ochoa's solo homer, his second, put the Mets ahead 7-6 in the eighth against Ken Ryan (2-3).

Butch Huskey homered, tripled and singled for the Mets, who had 16 hits. Paul Byrd (1-1) was the winner and Doug Henry pitched two innings for his sixth save.

Braves 3, Expos 1

MONTREAL — Chipper Jones hit his second homer of the game, a two-run shot in the eighth inning that led Tom Glavine and the Atlanta Braves over the Montreal Expos.

Glavine (9-5) pitched eight innings and allowed only two hits, both of them in the first inning. He struck out eight, and retired 20 of his final 23 batters. Glavine is 7-0 in eight starts against Montreal since 1992.

Mark Wohlers gave up one hit in getting his 18th save. The Braves won twice in the three-game series, and took a four-game lead over Montreal in the NL East.

Mark Lemke singled with two outs in the Atlanta eighth against Tim Scott (2-3) and Jones followed with his 17th home run.

Pirates 3, Cubs 2

PITTSBURGH — Denny Neagle, miffed at not making the NL All-Star team, pitched six-hit ball for eight innings and Al Martin and Jeff King hit consecutive homers, leading Pittsburgh past Chicago.

Neagle, chosen for the All-Star game last year with the same 9-4 record he has now, gave up a first-inning run before limiting the Cubs to three hits in the next seven innings.

Dan Plesac finished up for his fifth save despite allowing Scott Servais' RBI single in the ninth. Frank Castillo (2-11) is the NL leader in losses.

Cardinals 4, Reds 0

ST. LOUIS — Donovan Osborne pitched a four-hitter for his first career shutout, leading the St. Louis Cardinals over the Cincinnati Reds.

Osborne (8-4), making his 89th career start, took a two-hitter into the ninth and won for the fifth time in six decisions. He struck out four and walked one in his second complete game of the season and third of his career.

St. Louis has won 14 of 20, including 14 of its last 16 home games. Cincinnati lost for just the third time in 10 games.

John Smiley (8-7), who hasn't beaten St. Louis since 1991, gave up three runs and six hits in five innings.

Alex Ochoa dives into third base with a triple off Philadelphia's Terry Mulholland during the fourth inning Wednesday. Ochoa hit for the cycle (a single, double, triple and home run in the same game).

STAR: Just two Rangers make team

(From 1C)

way in hell Dino (Palmer) shouldn't have made it, but a lot of people still don't realize the numbers he's put up. I thought Elster should have made it, too. He's a guy who's been consistent for us, he's on a first-place team and he's played better than anybody could imagine."

Palmer was hurt by the rule that requires each team to be represented. The Detroit Tigers' only legitimate representative was their third baseman, Travis Fryman.

"There were a lot of tough decisions, especially at first base and third base," Hargrove said.

Palmer entered last night's game hitting .296 with 19 home runs, 59 runs ba' 'd in and 51 runs scored. Fryman was hitting .270 with 12 homers, 54 RBI and 42 runs scored.

"I'm disappointed," Palmer said. "It would have been nice to make it, but I also understand the situation."

Time off to recover from injuries cost Gonzalez despite his recent strong play. Before last night's game, Gonzalez was hitting .357 with 10 home runs and 27 RBI in his past 21 games. That gave him an overall average of .312 with 18 home runs and 61 RBI in only 56 games.

"I'm still happy," Gonzalez said. "The team is in first place and playing good. If I don't make the team, I'll just stay home and rest with my family and come back strong in the second half, ready to play."

Pavlik was one of nine pitchers selected, only four of them starters. Hargrove will not announce a starting pitcher until Monday, but the likely candidate is Cleveland's Charles Nagy.

"I'd just be glad to pitch, much less start," Pavlik said.

Not all pitchers selected get into the game. Toronto's Cito Gaston caused a stir in 1993 when he didn't use Baltimore's Mike Mussina, even though the game was at Oriole Park at Camden Yards.

But Pavlik is likely to see action. Tonight is his final scheduled start before the All-Star break, meaning that he would be well-rested for the game. Hargrove also said he will rely mainly on the four starters selected.

Cincinnati woman jailed for threatening Reds shortstop

CINCINNATI (AP) — A Cincinnati woman was arrested and charged with possessing a firebomb that she allegedly planned to throw at Cincinnati Reds shortstop Barry Larkin.

Larina Lewis, 26, was arrested Monday night when city police went to her Cincinnati home and found a bottle filled with gasoline and wrapped with a rag, police said. Police officers, responding to a complaint from neighbors, said they detected a strong smell of gasoline at her home.

Police said they charged Lewis with unlawful possession of a dangerous ordnance, a felony.

The Reds said Larkin does not know the woman. Police were investigating what motive the woman might have had to attack him.

Lewis was arraigned Tuesday in Hamilton County Municipal Court. She remains jailed in the county Justice Center under a $10,000 bond, pending a July 11 court appearance.

The Hamilton County prosecutor's office is reviewing whether other charges might be warranted, spokesman Steve Martin said today.

Larkin said in a statement released before Tuesday night's game in St. Louis he was thankful police acted quickly.

"These types of incidents must be taken very seriously, and I am grateful they treated this situation as such," Larkin said.

Murphy a favorite at this weekend's U.S. Senior Open

BEACHWOOD, Ohio (AP) — Bob Murphy's first golf career was cut short by arthritis.

So he considers himself very lucky in his second — he enters this weekend's U.S. Senior Open at the Canterbury Golf Club as one of the favorites.

"Arthritically, I am doing terrific, but I still have the old aches and pains that a 53-year-old has," he said, laughing.

Murphy once was considered to have among the brightest futures in golf. He won the U.S. Amateur in 1965 and the NCAA championship in 1966 while attending the University of Florida.

He was an early success on the PGA Tour, becoming rookie of the year in 1968 on the strength of victories at the Philadelphia Golf Classic and the Thunderbird Classic. He won $105,595 that year, which was a Tour record then for a first-year player.

He won the Greater Hartford Open in 1970 and the 1975 Jackie Gleason Inverrary Classic.

Things then started to go bad.

Murphy developed arthritis, especially in his hands, and went 11 years without a victory.

"When you hurt, I think you spend more time thinking about the fact that you are hurting," Murphy said Tuesday. "I think your concentration is terrible."

He almost took a job as a television commentator in 1985, but he decided to keep battling his arthritis in the hope he could compete again. He went on to win the Canadian Open in 1986 without having played a practice round.

But by 1988, he had to quit because the pain had become unbearable.

Murphy decided to try treatment known as magnet therapy. He wears three magnets on his body, and says the pain has been reduced by 80 percent.

The treatment gave him what he needed to resurrect his golf career. He has won 10 times since joining the Senior Tour in 1993, including two victories this season.

Isao Aoki blasts from a trap to the third green at the Canterbury Golf Club in Beachwood, Ohio during practice for the the U.S. Senior Open. Aoki won last week at the Kroger Classic.

His winnings total $741,296.

"I am lucky that I was able to find something for the arthritis in the first place, and something as effective as I have found and then to be able to play again," Murphy said. "It's wonderful."

Murphy, who has usually been an outstanding putter, has become more consistent off the tee and improved his long- to middle-iron play.

Saugrain wins stage; tour rookie in yellow

LAC DE MADINE, France (AP) — France's Cyril Saugrain won Wednesday's fourth stage of the Tour de France while countryman Stephane Heulot jumped to the overall lead.

Both riders were part of a 5-man break that finished more than 4 minutes ahead of the main pack of riders in the flat 143.8-mile stage from Soissons to Lac de Madine.

Saugrain and Heulot are each racing in their first Tour de France.

"For the team, it's extraordinary to win a tour stage," said Saugrain, who's Aubervilliers 93 squad was a last-minute entry into this year's race.

"It's a dream to win a Tour de France stage," said Saugrain, 23.

Five-time defending tour champion Miguel Indurain lost nearly three minutes in Wednesday's stage and dropped to 11th overall, 4 minutes, 17 seconds behind. American Lance Armstrong finished with Indurain and is 54th overall at 5:03.

Heulot started Wednesday's stage 43 seconds back and took the overall lead from countryman Frederic Moncassin in the stage marred by a crash in the final sprint with the main pack of riders.

About 25 miles into the flat course, the five-man break pulled 17 minutes ahead of the leaders. Some of the peloton's top teams helped shorten the gap, but break held a 4:33 lead into the finish.

"I can't believe I'm wearing the yellow jersey. My eyes are fogged over right now," said the 25-year-old Heulot, who raced three years with Indurain's Banesto squad but never made the Tour de France team.

SPORTS BRIEFS

Oilers Fisher gets extension

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers coach Jeff Fisher, who turned around the club from the NFL's worst in 1994 to a respectable 7-9 mark last season, has received a two-year contract extension unprecedented in club history.

The deal, announced by the team Wednesday, will keep Fisher, 38, as coach through 1999.

It's the first extension a coach has accepted in the team's 36-year history. Bum Phillips was offered an extension in 1980 but turned it down. He wound up getting fired after that season.

Fisher, a former defensive coordinator who took over midway through a disastrous 2-14 season in 1994, signed a three-year contract Jan. 5, 1995. The team's five-victory improvement last year was the best in the NFL.

The new deal would keep Fisher in charge through the 1999 season. By then, the Oilers likely will be called some other name and be based in Nashville, Tenn.

"We believe Jeff and his staff have done a wonderful job," Oilers owner Bud Adams said. "It is important that the players in our organization as well as our fans understand that, despite our unique situation, it is our goal to continue to improve on the field.

"Extending Jeff's contract gives us the stability, continuity and leadership needed to achieve that goal."

Crowe resigns as Baylor assistant

WACO (AP) — Jack Crowe, a former head coach at Arkansas, resigned as Baylor's offensive coordinator on Wednesday to enter private business.

Crowe, who also served as offensive coordinator for Auburn during the Bo Jackson years, spent three years with the Bears.

"I appreciate the opportunity to coach at Baylor and feel that we made progress in these last three years," Crowe said. "I have enjoyed coaching for 25 years but I feel the time has come to take advantage of opportunities in other sports-related business."

No immediate replacement was named for Crowe as the Bears prepare to play the new Big 12 Conference.

The 48-year-old Crowe joined Baylor in 1993 after stops at Arkansas, Auburn, Wyoming and Clemson. The Bears set several team records under his guidance.

As coach of the Razorbacks, Crowe led the 'Hogs to the 1991 Independence Bowl.

Falcons coach gets new contract

SUWANEE, Ga. (AP) — Coach June Jones, who took the Atlanta Falcons to the playoffs after a 9-7 season in 1995, was given a two-year contract extension Wednesday.

Jones had signed a three-year contract when he took over the team Jan. 24, 1994.

"He has established the foundation of a very successful program," team President Taylor Smith said Wednesday.

Jones, a disciple of the run-and-shoot offense, built a team that led the NFL in plays of 20 or more yards and set club records for passing yards.

"I know we can be more successful here and I am ready to accept the challenge to take us in that direction," Jones said.

The immediate task is to sign quarterback Jeff George, who is a free agent. Smith has said the team and George are "a million miles apart" in their negotiations.

Stitt hired as Wildcats coah

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Jerry Stitt, assistant baseball coach at Arizona for 18 years, was named coach on Wednesday.

Stitt, 49, replaces Jerry Kindall, who retired May 21 after winning 861 games and three NCAA titles in 24 seasons.

Kindall, 61, had recommended Stitt as his successor.

"I'm honored and humbled to be stepping into this position," Stitt said. "I bleed red and blue, and I'm so happy for the opportunity to lead the Wildcats, lead them into the next century."

Arizona, which won national championships in 1976, 1980 and 1986, has had three consecutive losing seasons.

Stitt, who holds three degrees from Arizona, was a first-team All-America outfielder for the Wildcats in 1968. He joined Kindall's staff in 1978.

challenger in the 200. Fredericks was the last person to be beat Johnson, winning a 200 in Rome in 1994.

Fredericks said he may pass the 100 to go up against Johnson in the 200 only at Atlanta.

"I haven't decided yet. I am doing the 200 for sure. Today has nothing to do with what happens on the 27th of July, I am not even thinking about the Olympics," Fredericks said.

July 27 is the 100-meter final in Atlanta.

In the 100, only Burrell's time of 9.85 is better and only Carl Lewis' former world record of 9.86 was as fast as Fredericks' time. However, both Burrell and Lewis ran with a slight legal, but aiding wind.

Fredericks ran his race into wind of .4 meters per second and had his arms extended as he crossed the line clearly ahead of Bailey.

He was entirely in command of the race from the start, leading nearly throughout as the rest of the field fought it out for second place.

Fredericks did 9.87 in Finland last week but avoided the 100 in the Paris Gaz de France meet last Friday. Surin won there in 10.03.

Boldon later came back to win the 200 in 19.85, seventh fastest all-time in the event. Christie was second in 20.40.

Boldon slowed up at the tape, also extending his arms in victory.

In a showdown between the fastest two 110-meter hurdlers in the world, American Allen Johnson edged Briton Colin Jackson, 13.08-13.13.

Jackson set the world record of 12.91 at the 1993 world championships and Johnson did 12.92 in capturing the American Olympic trials.

abuse for throwing down his racket.

The two other quarterfinals were carried over until Thursday.

No. 13 Todd Martin was scheduled to face Tim Henman, the first British man to reach the final eight in 23 years; and MaliVai Washington was paired against 91st-ranked Alexander Radulescu, the Romanian-born German playing his first Grand Slam.

British singer Cliff Richard, backed by a chorus of women players, performed a medley of his hits from the 1970s and 1980s.

Former Wimbledon champions Martina Navratilova, Conchita Martinez and Virginia Wade were among the players swaying and singing along behind Richard as he sang "Summer Holiday" and other songs from a section next to the Royal Box.

"This has to be the most unusual experience of my career," Richard said. "I never thought I'd actually play Centre Court. How could anyone ever have dreamed up a backing vocal group like this?"

There was singing on Court 1, too, as a group of uniformed stewards led fans in songs like, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot."

In women's play, Steffi Graf and Arantxa Sanchez Vicario seem destined for yet another Grand Slam final.

Less than a month since they played for the French Open title, Graf and Sanchez Vicario are on course to meet again in Saturday's championship match at Wimbledon.

Both women reached the semifinals with impressive straight-set victories Tuesday, the top-seeded Graf outplaying No. 6 Jana Novotna 6-3, 6-2, and No. 4 Sanchez Vicario beating Judith Wiesner 6-4, 6-0.

In Thursday's semis, Graf will face No. 12 Kimiko Date, who became the first Japanese player in history to reach the Wimbledon semifinals by overcoming Mary Pierce 2-6, 6-3, 6-1.

Sanchez Vicario will meet the unseeded Meredith McGrath, who continued her surprising run by beating No. 9 Mary Joe Fernandez 6-3, 6-1 to reach her first Grand Slam semifinal.

If Graf and Sanchez Vicario get through as expected, they will meet in a repeat of the 1995 Wimbledon final. Graf won that three-set classic, which featured one game lasting 20 minutes and 32 points.

Graf and Sanchez Vicario have met 35 times.

Prices rise

NEW YORK — Gasoline futures led broad jump in energy prices Wednesday, the first trading day after a survey that showed domestic supplies fell last week.

Unleaded gasoline for August delivery settled at 62.47 cents a gallon, up 1.58 cents.

The American Petroleum Institute's weekly measure of the nation's energy reserves, released after Tuesday's trading, found motor gasoline stocks dropped to 204.2 million barrels from 206.8 million barrels the week before.

While that triggered buying at the outset of trading, overall volume for the day was light with many traders taking off early for the Fourth of July holiday. That caused the price swing to be exaggerated somewhat.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in August settled at $21.21 per barrel, up 8 cents at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Natural gas prices were also higher, with contracts for delivery in August settling at $2.841 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 3.1 cents.

Dollar retreats

NEW YORK — The dollar fell against leading currencies Wednesday on polls indicating Russian President Boris Yeltsin would win re-election and profit-taking ahead of the holiday weekend.

The U.S. currency, however, found some strength against the Japanese yen, after Japan's top central banker reiterated that interest rates would not be raised soon.

In New York, the dollar traded at 1.5206 marks, down from 1.5266.

The dollar rallied past 110 yen on Tuesday, the first time it hit that level since January 1994. It extended those gains on Wednesday to trade at 110.40 yen late in the afternoon, up from 110.35 late Tuesday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Tuesday: 1.2524 Swiss francs, up from 1.2512; 5.1405 French francs, down from 5.1609; 1,525 Italian lira, down from 1,535; and 1.3605 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3610.

Markets ease

NEW YORK — The Federal Reserve gave investors what they were hoping for, leaving interest rates unchanged, but stocks ended mostly lower Wednesday as worries about computer-industry profits worsened.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 17.36 to 5,703.02, more than halving an afternoon deficit of almost 38 points.

Broader indicators also improved after the Fed announced its decision not to slow the economy with a rate hike, but still ended mostly lower.

Declining issues outnumbered advancers by a 10-to-9 margin on the New York Stock Exchange, where volume slowed considerably going into the July 4 holiday, totaling 334.57 million shares.

The NYSE's composite index fell 0.64 to 360.37, the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index fell 1.21 to 672.40, but the American Stock Exchange's market value index rose 0.09 to 579.65.

The technology-heavy Nasdaq composite index fell 9.55 to 1181.60 after another stream of negative earnings projections concerning computer-related businesses.

Trading had continued at Tuesday's cautious pace until late in the session, when the Federal Reserve concluded a two-day meeting with word that the central bank's lending rates had been left unchanged.

Rates unchanged despite strong economy

■ Analysts debate possibility of rates rising in August.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve passed up a chance to raise interest rates Wednesday, despite a string of economic reports showing a surprisingly robust economy.

Some economists insisted that a strong economy — with its threat of higher inflation — will force the Fed into action at its next meeting on Aug. 20, but others were not so sure. They argued that the economy may have slowed enough by then to keep the central bank on the sidelines until after the election in November.

The Fed's decision to leave rates unchanged after two days of closed-door meetings was greeted with relief by financial markets. The Dow Jones industrial average, which had been down almost 38 points on fears of a rate increase, trimmed those loses after the announcement. The Dow ended the day off 17.36 points at 5,703.02.

The Clinton administration, which has made the economy's performance a key plank in the president's re-election drive, hailed the Fed's decision.

"It's the ideal balancing of a favorable inflationary climate with strong economic performance," Housing and Urban Development Secretary Henry Cisneros said. "The decision by the Fed to take no action to tighten is, from the housing market perspective, good news, the best news we could have."

Central bank policy-makers concluded a two-day meeting of the 12-member Federal Open Market Committee, composed of the seven Fed board members from Washington and five regional bank presidents, with a brief announcement indicating rates had been left unchanged.

The federal funds rate, the Fed's key lever to influence the economy, is 5.25 percent, where it has been since Jan. 31, when it was reduced for a third straight time.

Since then, the Fed has left rates unchanged as the economy has demonstrated a strong rebound after coming to a near-standstill at the end of last year.

The Commerce Department reported Wednesday that orders from U.S. factories jumped 1.9 percent in May, the biggest increase in nine months, with orders for big-ticket durable goods leading the way, climbing by 3.4 percent.

In a second report of strength, the government said new claims for unemployment benefits fell by 4,000 last week to the lowest level in a month.

While agreeing that the economy is strong, analysts are split over whether growth will slow enough on its own or whether there is a need for restraint from the Fed.

"People are betting on a rate increase in August, but I am skeptical," said Bill Cheney, chief economist at John Hancock Financial Services in Boston. "I think we will be seeing signs of slower growth by then."

After growing at a barely discernible 0.5 percent rate in the final three months of last year, the overall economy, as measured by the gross domestic product, rebounded to 2.3 percent growth in the first three months of this year and many analysts believe it could have expanded at an even more rapid 4 percent rate in the just completed April-June quarter.

Lyle Gramley, a former Fed governor and now economic consultant for the Mortgage Bankers Association, said that while growth will slow in the second half of the year, it won't be fast enough to suit the Fed.

He said he still expected a rate increase in August, rejecting arguments advanced by some that the central bank won't act that close to the presidential election.

State going undercover to check pumps

AUSTIN (AP) — State Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry's inspectors are going undercover to ensure Texans get what they pay for at the pump.

As people were preparing for Independence Day trips to lakes, parks and family get-togethers, Perry announced Wednesday his agency will begin using five unmarked cars in its inspections of gasoline pumps' accuracy.

"As a Texan who uses his fair share of gasoline, when I pull up to the pump ... I want to know for a fact am I getting my money's worth," Perry said at an Austin gas station.

The Texas Department of Agriculture has 110 general inspectors to check the accuracy of more than 170,000 gasoline pumps across the state. Each pump must be inspected at least every three years, but Perry said the average currently is about every two years.

Of 58,977 pumps inspected from Sept. 1, 1995, to May 31 of this year, 2,625 were issued out-of-order tags for being inaccurate, according to the agency.

Civil penalties of up to $500 per occurrence also can be imposed. But Ed Price, director of the agency's weights and measures program, said none have been levied. Price said the law was changed in 1995 to allow for civil penalties, and officials still are working to implement it.

A pump will be taken out of service if it is more than 5 percent short in dispensing gas, said Jim Pollard, assistant agriculture commissioner for regulatory programs. If a pump gives too much gas, an owner can request that it be put out of service, but such pumps wouldn't be a significant number of the nine-month total, he said.

Perry said officials don't believe pumps are being rigged.

But inspectors can check that by using an unmarked vehicle at a gas pump and, if there's a shortage, return in a car marked with agency insignia to see whether there is a change.

Texas officials decry merger of railroads

HOUSTON (AP) — The Texas Railroad Commission criticized federal regulators' approval Wednesday of a Union Pacific-Southern Pacific merger and warned that shippers will see a jump in freight rates.

The three-member Washington-based Surface Transportation Board unanimously endorsed the $5.4 billion deal, paving the way for creation of the nation's biggest railroad company.

"It was a decision, in my opinion, that was not pro-business, was not pro-American business for sure, not pro-market." Railroad Commissioner Barry Williamson said. "It was pro-monopoly."

The combined company will control 70 to 80 percent of all petrochemical industry traffic in the Texas Gulf Coast — home to one of the largest concentration of petrochemical plants in the world — and 90 percent of traffic to and from Mexico, he said.

"It bothers me to no end that we've allowed one company to monopolize the plastics industry in this nation," Williamson said.

The Texas Department of Commerce, Texas Attorney General Dan Morales and the Texas Farm Bureau also opposed the merger.

Williamson noted that among the series of conditions the board set to minimize anti-competitive aspects of the marriage was a kernel of good news: preservation of Texas Mexican Railway Co., or "Tex-Mex."

Williamson said the merger would have destroyed Tex-Mex, a smaller railroad built in the 1800s that runs from Laredo to Corpus Christi.

Among other conditions established by the federal board is expanded access to UP-SP tracks and facilities by other competitors, especially Burlington Northern-Santa Fe.

The decision as a whole, however, fails to protect shippers from huge monopolies, Williamson said.

Union Pacific disputed the criticism, saying Texas customers would see lower rates and better service as a result of healthy competition with Fort Worth-based Burlington Northern. BN-SF and the new UP-SP will control 90 percent of all freight traffic west of the Mississippi.

Burlington Northern didn't oppose its rivals' deal, under which it will gain access to some 3,900 miles of track.

"The bottom line is Texas is going to benefit very significantly from this merger," Union Pacific Chairman Drew Lewis said.

Union Pacific President Dick Davidson said the merger had the backing of more than 1,300 shippers and port officials in Texas.

Some Texas Gulf Coast shippers agreed to favor the merger in exchange for additional rail lines to their plants.

$1.45 billion record Gulf project planned

HOUSTON (AP) — A $1.45 billion project that will push energy firms to even deeper record depths of the Gulf of Mexico was announced by Shell Oil Co.

The development with Shell, Exxon, Conoco and BP Exploration is known as Ursa. From a huge drilling and production platform about 130 miles southeast of New Orleans, the project is expected to retrieve 150,000 barrels of oil and 400 million cubic feet of natural gas per day.

The platform will be anchored to the sea floor, some 4,000 feet below, by what are known as tension legs. When assembled, it will stretch 4,285 feet from the sea floor to the top of the drilling rig. Up to 110 people will live and work there.

Construction of the 28,800-ton hull begins this month in Taranto, Italy.

"The platform will be the largest structure in the Gulf of Mexico, and its individual wells are expected to produce at rates not thought possible just a few years ago," Rich Pattarozzi, general manager of Shell Offshore Inc.-Deepwater Division, said.

Shell Offshore is the operator of the project. BP Exploration has a 23-percent interest. Exxon and Conoco each have 16-percent stakes.

Production is expected to begin in early- to mid-1999.

Plans call for up to 14 wells off the platform, some producing up to 30,000 barrels of oil daily.

Wells at a similar Shell project also in the Gulf of Mexico, known as Auger, have topped out so far at 13,000 barrels of oil per day.

"We've applied our learnings from past deep water projects, and developed a plan at Ursa utilizing horizontal wells and large-bore tubing which will help achieve the higher rates," Pattarozzi said.

In May in the same area, Shell began installing its Mars platform, which for now is the world's largest oil and natural gas production platform. It will be drilling in 2,940 feet of water.

That record is expected to be surpassed next year when Shell installs its Ram-Powell tension-leg platform in 3,218 feet in the Gulf of Mexico.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Treasury bond rates designed to protect investor

By Eric Tyson

Q: Are the new inflation-indexed Treasury bonds a good investment? How will they compare with the current Treasuries?

Tyson

A: Treasury Secretary Robert E. Rubin announced recently that the U.S. government intends to offer Treasury bonds that will pay interest rates tied to the rate of inflation.

While many details remain to be worked out, here's what is known:

As with inflation-indexed bonds that are already issued in the United Kingdom, Israel and other countries, the new Treasury bonds are intended to protect investors from the corrosive effects of inflation. How? By indexing (increasing) the amount that an investor originally invests (the principal) by an amount tied to the rate of inflation.

Back in the 1970s, investors who bought bonds before interest rates were driven up by unexpectedly high inflation got burned. Those who bought a 10-year bond that was paying 6 percent interest when inflation was running at 3 percent thought they were getting a good deal. When inflation and interest rates broke 10 percent, that 6 percent interest rate didn't look so hot anymore. Not only was the purchasing power of interest payments eroded by inflation but so too was the value of the bond investor's principal.

With inflation-indexed Treasury bonds, investors won't be burned by unexpected inflation. The bonds' principal value annually increases with the increase in the cost of living.

A real rate of return — that is, the return in excess of the rate of inflation — would be paid on top of the inflation indexing.

Money managers with whom I've spoken, such as Bill Gross at Pacific Investment Management, John Hollyer at the Vanguard Group and James Benham of the Benham Group, expect a real return in the neighborhood of 3 to 4 percent.

Because the new bonds will remove the inflation risk for Treasury bond investors, the bonds likely will yield a little less — perhaps 0.5 to 0.75 percent less — than non-inflation-protected Treasuries.

In the investment world, peace of mind costs money in the form of lower expected returns. But, inflation-worried bond investors could find the new choice just what they were looking for.

Q: During President Carter's administration, what was the interest rate being paid on Treasury bills? I have a bet it was around 20 percent or higher.

A: I hope you didn't bet a lot. Carter was elected in November 1976 and was in office from 1977 to 1980. During his presidency, the highest annual average yield on Treasury bills was 11.4 percent, reached in 1980.

Actually, in 1981, the first full year of President Reagan's administration, Treasury bill rates hit an annual average figure of 14 percent, the highest ever.

Q: Are collectibles a good investment?

A: Generally no. A study by the investment firm Morgan Stanley during the past 20 years showed that the only collectibles that produced average annual rates of return that beat the average annual rate of inflation — and just barely — were diamonds and stamps. No collectibles beat the rate of return on bonds or stocks.

An investor in collectibles must commit an enormous amount of time to master a field. Even then, galleries and other businesses that work full-time in the field still have an upper hand. Markups on items can be large — sometime running beyond 100 percent — and there are storage and insurance costs.

Buy collectibles for the hobby value, if you like, but not as a way to get rich. When purchasing, try to bypass the large markups by purchasing as close to the source as possible.

Also be sure to shop around so that you can learn what different pieces are worth.

Here are the 1,675 most active stocks on the New York Stock Exchange, 925 most active on the Nasdaq National Market and 405 most active on the American Stock Exchange. Stocks in bold are worth at least $5 and changed 5 percent or more in price. Underlining for 50 most active on NYSE and Nasdaq and 25 most active on Amex. Tables show name, price and net change, and one to two additional fields rotated through the week, as follows:

Name: Stocks appear alphabetically by the company's full name (not its abbreviation). Names consisting of initials appear at the beginning of each letter's list.
Last: Price stock was trading at when exchange closed for the day.
Chg: Loss or gain for the day. No change indicated by ...
Tkr: The stock's ticker symbol.
How to use: The ticker symbol can help you get information about a company. Two important uses: Most services that provide stock quotes over the phone require the ticker symbol. Second, stock brokers and analysts can recognize stocks more easily with a ticker symbol.

Generally, ticker symbols resemble the company name although some – BUD for Anheuser Busch Cos. and FON for Sprint Corp. – are more related to what a company does. Tickers on the New York and Amex usually don't exceed three letters. On Nasdaq, they go up to five letters.

The names you see in this paper are abbreviations of the company name supplied by The Associated Press. Companies can help determine what their abbreviation will be. Overall, AP tries to use an abbreviation that will most closely match the full company name.

Stars sign Verbeek away from Rangers; St. Louis grab Murphy

Associated Press

DALLAS — Bob Gainey's rebuilding of the Dallas Stars this offseason got another boost Wednesday with the signing of free agent forwards Pat Verbeek and Dave Reid.

"Our objective has been to improve our team with our needs having been designated in the specific areas of goal scoring by our forwards," said Gainey, the team's general manager.

"I think Pat Verbeek is a player who should respond directly in filling those needs while Dave Reid will supply us with additional size, experience and depth among our forwards."

Verbeek is a 14-year veteran who was among the most sought free agents this offseason after scoring 82 points for the New York Rangers last season. He had 41 goals and 41 assists.

He was eighth in power-play goals — a serious problem for Dallas last season — with 17 and was among the league leaders with six game-winning goals.

Verbeek, 32, broke into the NHL in the 1982-83 season with New Jersey. He remained with the Devils through '88-89, then went to Hartford. The Whalers traded him to the Rangers during the '94-95 season.

He earned a unique distinction while in Hartford by becoming the first NHL player to lead a team in both goals and penalty minutes — and he did it twice, '89-90 and '90-91. He made the All-Star team in 1991.

Reid, 32, last season posted career-highs with 23 goals and 21 assists while playing for Boston. He was second in the league with six shorthanded goals.

Both should be a big help to the Stars, who went 26-42-14 and finished 11th in the Western Conference last season to miss the playoffs for the first time since 1993 and only the second time since 1988.

Dallas struggled to find the right mix of players, using a club-record 44 different guys. There was even turnover on the bench as Gainey stepped down as coach and let Ken Hitchcock take over.

The Stars have been aggressive this offseason.

Before Wednesday's signings, their biggest move had been acquiring defenseman Sergei Zubov from Pittsburgh for defenseman Kevin Hatcher, who didn't add the offensive punch he was expected to last season.

Zubov, 25, scored 11 goals and had 55 assists in 64 games last season, tying him for seventh among NHL defensemen in points. He ranked third among defensemen in playoff scoring with one goal and 14 assists in 18 games.

Also this offseason, Dallas has let backup goaltender Darcy Wakaluk sign with Phoenix while retaining veteran starter Andy Moog and adding 26-year-old Roman Turek, who went 7-0-1 in leading the Czech national team to the gold medal at the 1996 World Championships.

And, Dallas has made a qualifying offer to star center Mike Modano, making him almost a lock to return next season.

Blues sign Joe Murphy

ST. LOUIS — The St. Louis Blues, perennially among the NHL's most active teams in the free agent market, signed left winger Joe Murphy of Chicago to a multi-year deal Wednesday. Details of the contract were not disclosed.

"We are very pleased to add Joe Murphy to our club," Blues coach and general manager Mike Keenan said. "He will add elements of speed and goal-scoring to our team which improve the overall make-up of our club."

Murphy, though a 10-year veteran, will be among the youngest Blues. The team's average age was about 31 last year, oldest in the league. Keenan has said that adding youth is a top priority this off-season.

Murphy scored 22 goals and added 29 assists for the Blackhawks last season. For his career, Murphy has 166 goals and 214 assists along with 518 penalty minutes.

Appeals court upholds restricted earnings ruling against NCAA

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — A federal appeals court said a judge was within her power to fine the NCAA $100 a day for every school that is late in turning over financial documents related to restricted earnings coaches.

U.S. District Judge Kathryn H. Vratil ruled last month that the NCAA violated federal antitrust laws by holding the coaches' earnings to $16,000 per year.

Vratil then ordered NCAA Division I schools to turn over financial documents to the coaches so that damages could be calculated. The NCAA resisted the order, but was ordered to comply in a ruling earlier this week from the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver.

The sanctions proposed by Vratil if schools do not comply could amount to $1 million or more, lawyers in the case said.

Meanwhile, the 10th Circuit is still considering a motion from Texas officials to block Vratil's order. Texas Attorney General Nan Morales said the order violated Texas' right of sovereign immunity under the 11th Amendment of the U.S. Constitution.

The motion was filed on behalf of the 14 state-funded schools in Texas that play Division I.

BOX: Fight tentatively rescheduled for Sept. 7

(From 1C)

before the bout with a broken thumb.

Tyson came back six weeks later to stop Mathis in the third round of their fight.

Tyson reportedly was to go to a doctor Wednesday and was also to be examined by a doctor for the Nevada Athletic Commission.

Marc Ratner, executive director of the commission, declined comment, but a source close to the commission said that the commission had been contacted.

Tyson had been scheduled to have his first public workout since beginning training for Seldon. But, a few hours before the scheduled midday workout, it was abruptly canceled.

King was not immediately available for comment. Spokesman Howie Evans said he didn't know anything about a problem with the fight.

Tyson had said in a conference call Monday that he was healthy and ready to take on Seldon in what would have been his second title fight since being released from prison.

He was to earn some $30 million for the bout, which was to be televised on a pay-per-view basis.

Capris mark return of flattering flat-front pants

By Francine Parnes
Associated Press

Pleated trousers with a fly front, borrowed from menswear in the 1940s, are retreating from the fashion front. They're being upstaged by flat-front pants with a side or back closure.

"Flat-front pants are my favorite," designer Todd Oldham says. "It's great to see them returning because they flatter women's bodies so much more, even if you have a bit of a tummy. They're smoother than pleats that just pull."

They're also trendier, particularly when they're capris, a 1950s style named for the Isle of Capri.

"The way to go is flat-front pants," Joan Kaner, Neiman Marcus fashion director in New York, says. She says women accustomed to the pleats should "start getting used to the flat fronts now, because for fall they're the pants of choice."

But LaVelle Olexa, vice president of fashion merchandising at Lord & Taylor in New York, says they aren't for everyone.

"The slim-front pant is very flattering," she says, "but what you have to take into consideration is that it's a youthful fashion for a customer who's slim and fit.

'There was a sudden surge of interest in Italian fashion that competed with Paris. It specialized in informal but stylish resort wear. Items like capri pants and Roman-style sandals were promulgated, like cheap and cheerful Chianti.'
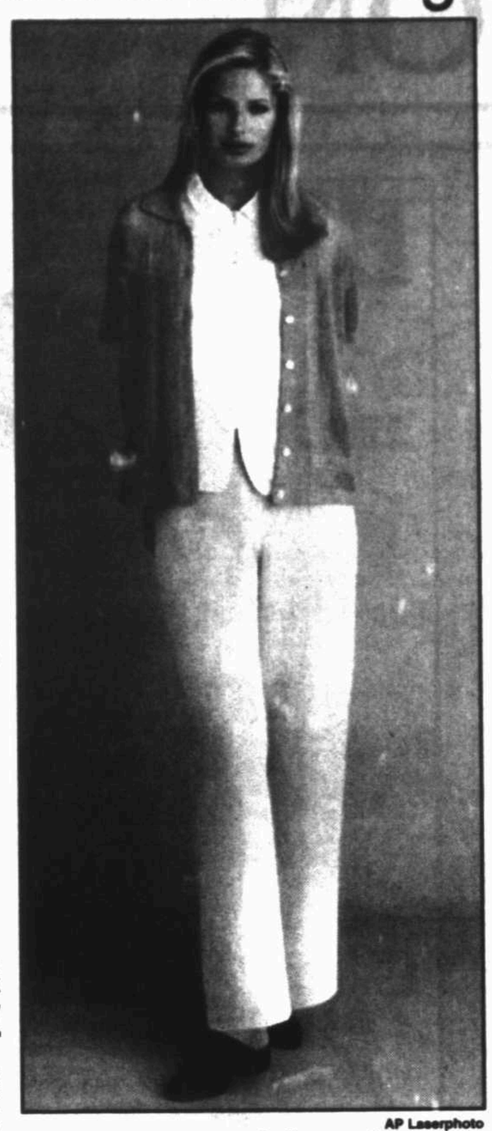
— Valerie Steele, professor at New York Fashion Institute of Technology

"The pleated trouser cut has a long history, ever since it was influenced by menswear in the '40s. It remains a classic, and it's probably flattering to more women with a range of body types."

Amy Jones, media relations coordinator for Nordstrom in Seattle, says there's room for both.

"We're finding that our customers are choosing both pleated and flat-front pants," she says. "No two figures are alike. Pleated trousers are great as a classic sportswear look inspired by Marlene Dietrich and Greta Garbo. And flat-front pants are a fashion-forward alternative."



AP Laserphoto
Fashion flat-front pants in linen and rayon viscose crepe paired with a mesh-stitch short sleeve cotton cardigan in light taupe, and a linen short sleeve shirt in oyster all are from the Liz Claiborne Studios.

Which is why the flat-fronts come in trendy silk shantung, stretch cotton pique and matte jersey. Many hug the hips. There are bootlegs that flare slightly at the ankle and capris that hug the calf just above the ankle. Calvin Klein dresses them up with a matching jacket and classic pumps; Donna Karan dresses down her DKNY's with strappy sandals. Ballet flats are another option.

The new look isn't an easy sell for those who want to camouflage the tummy.

"But our selling specialist in our Beverly Hills store says that once she gets the size 12 and 14 customers into flat-front pants," Kaner says, "they refuse to get pleated pants because they look so much slimmer. They have so much less fabric than a classic trouser."

Which means you may have to go up a size.

"You're counting on extra fullness to get over the tummy, so put vanity aside for the sake of good looks," Kaner says. "Go up a size and enjoy your new slim look."

Among the trendiest of the flat-fronts are capris that clear the ankle and are so tapered that many have a short slit at the hem to help slide them over the feet.

"It's that important length," Oldham says. "You have to see the ankle bone, or it's not a capri. Capris have a wonderful, sophisticated at-home quality, but they look so smart out, too."

Pair them with a sweater set or a matching sleeveless shell, like those of the 1950s that buttoned down the back.

Valerie Steele, a professor at the Fashion Institute of Technology in New York, says capris came out of a post-World War II period when Italian style flourished.

"There was a sudden surge of interest in Italian fashion that competed with Paris," she says. "It specialized in informal but stylish resort wear. Items like capri pants and Roman-style sandals were promulgated, like a cheap and cheerful Chianti."

Shirtdresses stray from buttoned-down look

By Francine Parnes
Associated Press

The shirtdress, a wardrobe basic, emerges every few seasons as a star. And this spring, it's shining.

"The shirtdress is one of the great American inventions that I always try to reidentify and make luxurious for the day," Isaac Mizrahi says.

Based on the man-tailored broadcloth shirt, with collar, cuffs and button front, this season's styles offer a wide variety of fabric, design and price.

"Each designer showed their own version, so the options are endless," says Nicole Fischelis, fashion director of Saks Fifth Avenue in New York. "The shirtdress is the latest addition to the dress department."

LaVelle Olexa says the shirtdress is a perennial at Lord & Taylor, where she is senior vice president for fashion merchandising.

"Whether by Byron Lars or Jones New York, each will do it differently, but at the same time it remains a favorite," she says.

Currently there are styles in poly and Lycra plaid, $140 from A.B.S.; grape polyester, $128 from Liz Now; red cotton denim, $164 from Cynthia Rowley; and black and white cotton blend, $170 from Laundry.

Byron Lars cut his shirtdresses above the knee in lavender, pink or khaki pencil-striped cotton menswear shirting, about $130.

Elsewhere, styles range from line-for-line copies of the long-sleeved shirt lengthened at the hem to sexy little peekaboo numbers. Some have fitted bodices from the 1950s and skirts that billow. Others are chemises reminiscent of the 1970s. Fabrics range from cotton shirting and linen to shiny rayon acetate to silk for day or evening.

Richard Tyler says his shirtdresses "definitely came from that way of dressing in the '60s and '70s, the period of Yves Saint Laurent and Courreges and Pierre Cardin. It's 'Belle de Jour,' very French, very Catherine Deneuve. It's a very minimal, easy-to-wear approach to dressing."

Tyler's collection includes a black wool jersey safari-style belted shirtdress, $1,495 at Tyler Trafficante in Los Angeles. From Polo Ralph Lauren comes a simple long-sleeved shirt buttoned to the knee, $750 in cornflower silk shantung.

Whatever the era of inspiration, Mizrahi says there's something extremely classic about the shirtdress.

"Ever since I started in business, there's always been a kilt, a gray flannel suit, a camel hair coat and a shirtdress in my collection," Mizrahi says.

This time around, Mizrahi likes it lean, with a bigger collar, and belted at the waist or hip. From his lower-priced Isaac line comes a sleeveless shantung above-the-knee shirtdress with a notch collar and belt, about $260 in white, bubble-gum pink or periwinkle, and a short-sleeve, trench-style shirtwaist, about $258 in navy, forest green or oyster.

Todd Oldham says there's nothing masculine about this garment he borrowed from the boys.

"A shirtdress has a wonderfully subtle, cheeky side to it," Oldham says. That might include the number he shows for spring — skinny, open to the waist, with matching panties.

And when reality sets in?

"You button the last three buttons," he says, "slap on a belt and you've got an outfit perfectly appropriate for the office."

DEAR ABBY

Treat Old Glory with renewed respect celebrating today

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: This moving piece has become something of a Fourth of July tradition:

YOUR FLAG

Hello. Remember me? Some people call me Old Glory, others call me the Star-Spangled Banner, but whatever they call me, I am your flag, the flag of the United States of America.

Van Buren

Something has been bothering me, so I thought I might talk it over with you — because it is about you and me.

I remember some time ago, people would line up on both sides of the street to watch the parade, and naturally I was leading every one, proudly waving in the breeze.

When your daddy saw me coming, he immediately removed his hat and placed it against his left shoulder so that his hand was directly over his heart — remember?

And you, I remember, were standing there, straight as a soldier. You didn't have a hat, but you were giving the right salute. Remember your little sister? Not to be outdone, she was saluting the same as you with her right hand over her heart — remember?

What happened? I'm still the same old flag. Oh, I've added a few more stars since you were a boy, and a lot more blood has been shed since those parades of long ago.

But now, somehow I don't feel as proud as I used to feel. When I come down your street, you just stand there with your hands in your pockets. You may give me a small glance, and then you look away. I see children running around you shouting; they don't seem to know who I am.

I saw one man take his hat off, then he looked around, and when he didn't see anybody else take off his hat, he quickly put his on again.

Is it a sin to be patriotic today? Have you forgotten what I stand for and where I have been? Anzio, Guadalcanal, Korea and Vietnam!

Take a look at the memorial honor rolls and see the names of those patriotic Americans who gave their lives to keep this republic free. When you salute me, you are actually saluting them.

Well, it won't be long until I'll be coming down your street again. So when you see me, please stand straight and place your hand over your heart, and I'll know that you remembered. I'll salute you by waving back! — PAUL C. GRAHAM

DEAR ABBY: A while back, you answered a woman who wanted to know when it is appropriate to fly the American flag. I thought you would like to see the list from "Flag Code, Directions for Use" that was published by the U.S. Army in 1918:

Feb. 12 ... Lincoln's Birthday
Feb. 22 ... Washington's Birthday
April 19 ... Battle of Lexington
June 14 ... Flag Day
July 4 ... Independence Day
Oct. 17 ... Saratoga Day
Oct. 19 ... Yorktown Surrender
Nov. 25 ... Evacuation of Yorktown

And long may it wave! — ELLEN SUE TURNER, SAN ANTONIO

DEAR ELLEN SUE: Thank you for a fascinating bit of history. Since I published in January the "modern list" of dates for flying the flag, readers have pointed out that Martin Luther King Jr. Day and Father's Day were missing — so I'm adding them now. Happy Fourth of July, everyone.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY TO MY WOMB-MATE IN CHICAGO — We were 12 years old before we realized that all the fireworks and flag-waving were not in honor of our birthday!

Make cover up work double-duty for traveling

N.Y. Times News Service

Carrying a swimsuit cover-up for a weekend by the sea can mean one extra piece in an already crammed carryall. So the smart thing is to take a cover-up that has other uses, like an oversize man's shirt or a big cotton pareo that can double as a shawl. Here are some other ideas:

A crinkled-gauze tunic with a hood in black or white by Calvin Klein ($117 at Saks Fifth Avenue) can also go out to dinner over pants. A short dress with a ribbed black top and a black-and-white plaid skirt by Baja Blue ($43 at Lord & Taylor) can go to lunch or shopping in town. A sleeveless black dress with a mesh midriff by Anne Klein ($37 at Lord & Taylor) can go out dancing.

Henri Bendel has cotton sweater tunics in citrus colors (sleeveless, $59; with long sleeves, $79); a floral print shirt by Lilly Pulitzer ($59); a multicolored-stripe dress with lacing up the front by Jill Stuart ($139), and a sailor-striped tank-top dress by Gaultier Jeans ($79).

Dear Abby/9C

Summer time is a Bronzer Age

By Francine Parnes
Associated Press

Warning of skin damage from direct sun hasn't lessened the desire for that sun-kissed look of summer. Rather, it has sent us to the cosmetics counter and away from water's edge.

We started by mastering the art of applying sunless tanning lotions. Now, we're learning how to sculpt the face with bronzing powders. The selection of these powders is vast — from Cover Girl to Revlon, Chanel to Estee Lauder.

"Every cosmetic company has a bronzing powder, but most of them unfortunately have an iridescent shine and are a little too orange," says New York makeup artist Bobbi Brown. "You want to look healthy, not like you have makeup on."

Yet Dominique Szabo, a senior vice president at Estee Lauder in New York, says bronzing powders are quick and worry-free and offer more control than lotions. "It's just makeup," she says. "If you did the wrong color, you can remove it and start again."

MANY OF THE bronzers offer two shades in one package.

"When you come back from a weekend at the beach or in the country," Estee Lauder's Szabo says, "you are a little tan and you can use the darker side. Then, during the week, when your tan is fading or if you don't have a tan at all, you use a lighter shade for a healthy look."

B.J. Gillian, Cover Girl makeup pro based in New York, likes to use multiple shades.

"Most people make the mistake of using just one shade and putting it all over the face," Gillian says. "I believe in using two or three coordinating shades and giving the illusion of a true suntan, as opposed to a pumpkin which is all one color."

To apply the bronzer, stake out a spot with natural light.

Laura Mercier in New York, stylist to models and celebrities, says that all makeup should be applied in daylight, but particularly bronzers because they are tricky.

"If you do your makeup first in the bathroom, check it in daylight," she says. "Stand near a window where you have good, even light and check it with a mirror. Otherwise you might end up like a clown."

Before you bronze, Brown recommends exfoliating and moisturizing for a smoother finish.

"It's all about texture, so look for a product that blends in easily and is a little sheerer so it doesn't get into the lines," she says. "If you have wrinkles, make sure you hydrate your skin."

Tanya Mandor, a senior marketing vice president at Revlon in New York, says it is crucial that your moisturizer is set and your skin is oil-free before adding bronzers. Otherwise, she says, the bronzers will adhere and streak.

BRONZERS WORK best on a lightly tanned skin. If you have no sun tint, start by mixing the bronzer with a colorless powder.

"The secret," Gillian says, "is to take a loose, translucent powder first and massage it into the areas with your fingertips. It creates a canvas that will not only even out your skin and make it look poreless, but it will also work as an anchor to hold bronzer on the face all day."

Then apply bronzer with a large brush.

"The application that I would recommend is with a large powder brush," says Guy Lento, makeup director for Chanel in New York. "Buff the skin gently to create a nice bronzing effect. A big powder brush with a large head to it distributes the powder evenly. A sponge tends to streak."

Use the bronzing powder as more than a blusher. Apply it wherever the sun naturally hits.

"When you get a little suntan, observe exactly where you get it,"

Ways to Brush on the Sun

Associated Press

Estee Lauder's hints for using Instant Sun All-Over Bronzer Duo, using a big cosmetic brush:

- For a sun-kissed face, sweep lighter shade of bronze directly on cheekbones.
- For a day-at-the-beach glow, sweep the lighter shade on cheekbones then sculpt cheeks below the cheekbones with the deeper bronze.
- For an all-over face powder, blend the two shades of bronze.
- Brush bronzer into the hair and around the forehead and temples for a look of natural, sunny highlights.
- Brush on eyelids and brow bones as a warm highlight.
- Give a sheen to shoulders and decolletage.

COOL TOOLS FOR HAIR IN THE HEAT

By Francine Parnes
Associated Press

For Vidal Sassoon, the best hair accessory is a good pair of scissors.

Well, maybe. But there are less drastic ways to beat the summer heat and the frizzies.

Some of the best use accessories that pull your hair off your face, sweep it up, or secure it in a ponytail.

"If you have your hair high up off of your head, it really helps you deal with the heat," says David Cohen, president and designer for David, a hair accessories and hat company in New York. "You can make a statement and have a little added allure."

Prices for hair accessories range from a couple of dollars at discount stores into the hundreds at chic boutiques. Chanel's double-C logo on a black satin barrette, for example, is $320. But most pony wraps, clips and head bands are in the $5 to $35 category.

Cohen and Ann Vuille, owner-designer of an accessories and hat company in Norwalk, Conn., advocate pony wraps. His are in linen and soft straw, hers in cotton gingham and terry cloth which she describes as "little-nothing ornaments that make a cheap and chic fashion statement, especially on the beach."

Another favorite of Vuille is jaw clips, which are far more friendly than their name implies and a lot more secure than bobby pins.

"We're using a lot of baby-sized jaw clips, teeny-weeny clamps with a metal spring and teeth on the inside that squeeze open and grip your hair," she says. "Unless you hit the big kahuna, it should stay in place."

Vuille says her best-selling jaw clips are covered with cotton daisies.

"It's the whole feeling of a perfect, petite detail — one small bit of bright color with a daisy on the end," she says.

Ellin Saltzman, vice president and fashion director for the Limited Inc. in New York, says fake tortoise shell is selling.

"I think brown is important for spring and summer, and it works with bright colors and pastels just as white does," Saltzman says. "It looks great with a tan."

Lucille McLean, who heads the hair accessory division at Riviera Trading Corp. in New York, says the tortoise look "is the hottest thing in the market from the very, very high-priced to moderate." She also says suede and fake skins, from lizard to leopard, are doing well.

Status ornaments for garden parties and other important soirees come from Ferragamo and Chanel. Ferragamo grosgrain headbands and barrettes come in pastels with bows secured by a gold-tone signature clip. Chanel's gold-tone barrettes are engraved with the Chanel or Coco name.

However you secure your locks, don't forget that summer sun can damage hair as well as skin. So when you buy sunscreen lotion, pick up some leave-in conditioner for the hair.

Oscar Blandi, creative director in New York of Senscience International, a hair care division of Shiseido, suggests spraying on a conditioner and combing it through the hair before settling back in a beach chair.

While most of us are well-informed about chlorine's hazards to the hair, few consider ill effects from the ocean.

"Salt can cause big damage," he says, "especially to hair that's been colored."

Gingham barrettes, jaw clips and pony tail wraps, to pair or wear alone, are among remedies from Riviera Trading Corp. for summer hair woes.

Come Work For Us & We'll Buy Your Gas!

CONVENIENCE STORES

SALARY, SECURITY AND FLEXIBILITY

Our minimum starting salary is $5/hour,Quarterly performance evaluations can get you up to $6/hour or more within a year. We also pay our full-time midnight shift team members a .50 cents/hour pay differential. Our company offers stable employment year-round. If you aren't getting enough hours (at least 40) at your current job, WE CAN GIVE THEM TO YOU! If you want to work part-time, we can work with you to make a schedule that meets your needs! Our Kent Kwiks are open 7 days a week, with most open 24 hours. You can also work close to home, as our locations are spread throughout the Midland/Odessa area. In addition, after you've worked for us 30 days, and while you continue to be employed, we'll give you 10 dollars of gas --- FREE* every week for the rest of 1996!

BENEFITS

We offer medical, dental and life insurance to our full-time Team Members. We have paid vacations, a sick pay plan, college tuition reimbursement ($300/Semester), and a profit sharing plan. There are also incentive programs available that allow you to earn extra money on a quarterly basis! In addition, after you've worked for us 30 days, and while you continue to be employed, we'll give you 10 dollars of gas---FREE* every week for the rest of 1996!

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

Most of our Managers started at the entry-level and received the training necessary to become successful at running a small business. Our assistant managers can make up to $7/hour, and are always promoted from within our company. We also offer continual classroom education in customer service and personal leadership skills. You can tell the difference high-quality training makes when you come into one of our Kent Kwiks! In addition, after you've worked for us 30 days, and while you continue to be employed, we'll give you 10 dollars of gas---FREE* every week for the rest of 1996!

SO HOW DO WE MEASURE UP?

Where will you be one year from now if you stay with your present company? With us, the chances are that you could be running one of our locations, making in the mid to upper $20's, plus bonuses! If all of this interests you, the first step is to pick up an application at any one of our Kent Kwiks, complete it, and bring it to our Midland area office (3314 No. Loop 250) between 8 A.M. and 3 P.M. Monday-Friday. If you live in Odessa, we take applications on the 9th floor of the Texas Commerce Bank building downtown, Monday through Friday from 8-11 and 1-4. You will then take several assessment tools which give us the information we need to determine if you have the customer service attitudes, math skills and work ethics required to be successful in our business. We also do criminal and credit background checks, and drug testing. Relocation may also be available.
