Calhoun stands by its man

CALHOUN, Ga. (AP) — It was like an old-fashioned revival meeting as the hometown folks stomped their feet, prayed and cheered one of their own — Bert "Good Ole Georgia Boy" Lance.

About 1,500 people — more than one-fifth of Calhoun's population — turned out in a demonstration of support for the director of the federal Office of Management and Budget on the eve of his appearance before a Senate panel investigating his financial affairs.

The crowd gave a standing ovation as the high school band played "You'll Never Walk Alone" and "I Did It My Way."

They had placards saying "Calhoun for Bert" and "Bert's A Good Ole Georgia Boy." They used words like "love," "friendship," and "honesty" to describe Lance, who did not attend the rally.

"I'll tell you what kind of a guy he is," said Jack Purcell, who used to be the catcher on the softball team when Lance was pitcher.

"I called him up last year to come speak to the graduating class of the school where I was principal. And even though it rained and the loudspeakers didn't work, he came and he spoke. And when I sent him a check for speaking to the class, he sent the check back because he didn't do it for the money. That's the kind of guy Bert is."

A downpour drove the crowd from the high school football field across the street to a gymnasium, but it didn't dampen their spirits.

Lance's minister, the Rev. Emory Brackman, told of the "very generous" contributions of time and money that Lance and his wife, LaBelle, made to the First Methodist Church. He recalled that Lance received "the highest honor" a United Methodist can receive when he was elected to the church's General Conference.

Lt. Gov. Zell Miller, who shared a double desk with Lance in grammar school, accused the news media of distorting the Lance affair. He denied a statement in an article in a national magazine that quoted him as saying Lance was a poor arithmetic student.

"Powerful and ruthless forces" — whom he later identified as the federal bureaucracy — have attacked Lance, Miller said.

"To say that Bert Lance has done something wrong does not make it so," he said.

Though some of the spectators admitted to doubts about the ethics of Lance's moneyhandling, most didn't want to talk about finances or politics.

They wanted to talk about the backslapping, joke-telling Bert Lance who married his high school sweetheart and helped his neighbors as he rose from a 19-year-old bank teller to a 32-year-old bank president.

Lance admits errors, denies any cover-up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Budget Director Bert Lance, appealing to the American people to be "the jury in this proceeding," told the Senate today that while he may have made mistakes running his Georgia banks he engaged in no wrongdoing and no cover-up.

"I am secure and comfortable knowing that my conscience is clear and that the people's verdict will be a fair and just one," the burly director of President Carter's Office of Management and Budget told the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee.

Drawling slowly and solemnly, Lance told the two senior members of the committee to their faces they have been unfair in their public statements before this, his day in court. Speaking "more in sorrow than in anger," Lance told the senior Republican, Sen. Charles Percy, that his actions were "puzzling ... regrettable."

Percy replied that he had questioned the dates on some of Lance's personal checks and whether they were timed to help him obtain a tax deduction.

"It was wrong for me to even raise the possibility," Percy conceded.

Then, one by one, the President's longtime personal friend replied to allegations made in past weeks that his personal and bank dealings, most of them before he joined the Carter government, were marked by irregularities and improprieties. When he finished reading his 1¾-hour statement, he got a half minute of hearty applause from spectators in the hearing room.

Lance told the panel and a national television audience that his rights had "been treated in the most irresponsible and destructive manner" and allegations against him have been "erroneous ... misrepresented ...and exaggerated." Moreover, he said, "some are completely misunderstood because those making the charge do not have all the facts ..."

"I did not ask for this fight, but now that I am in it, I am fighting not only for myself but also for our system," Lance declared. "I was a successful businessman in my home state, and I thought I had an important contribution to make by coming into government service."

The budget director has said again and again he will not quit. His demeanor and his words appeared to underscore that determination.

But even as he spoke, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill told reporters that because of Lance's financial problems "the image of the President is going down a little bit."

Seated at a long table covered with green felt and emblazoned with a nameplate — "Mr. Lance" — the budget director told the committee: "The rights that I thought I possessed have gone, one by one, down the drain ...

"Were my rights protected?" he asked. "We'll let the American people answer that."

He declined to "contend that I made no mistakes" when he ran the Calhoun First National Bank of Calhoun, Ga., of which he was board chairman, and the National Bank of Georgia, in Atlanta, which he served as president.

"But to accept the assertion that I could not even manage a small country bank, one must ignore the objective facts," he told the committee, which recommended his confirmation as the nation's budgetmaker last January.

Lance told the panel he had answered questions from its members and from its staff fully and accurately in January and had withheld nothing.

Military airplane crash kills 20 persons aboard

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — An Air Force plane slammed into a mountainside on a high security Army base, killing all 20 persons aboard when it exploded on impact a half mile from any bunker containing fissionable material, authorities said.

The four-engine plane crashed on Manzano Base, where nuclear weapons are stored, three minutes after its take off from Kirtland Air Force Base at 11:45 p.m. Wednesday.

Kirtland base operations confirmed there were no survivors, said Walter Sprick of the Federal Aviation Administration.

Air Force crews using flares and helicopter spotlights recovered at least 15 bodies in a predawn search. Authorities said they did not know whether all of the victims were military personnel.

Air Force crews using flares and helicopter spotlights recovered at least 15 bodies in a predawn search. Authorities said all those aboard were military personnel.

A spokesman at the plane's base said it was used frequently by high ranking military personnel and American and foreign dignitaries.

Former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger is among those who have used the plane, the spokesman said.

The aircraft, which was scattered over 10 acres after impact, was used as a model for modifications to Air Force One, the president's plane.

An air traffic controller said he tried to warn the pilot the plane was in trouble.

"The first indication we had he was in trouble was when the radar showed he was too close to the mountain and flying too low," said the controller.

"We hit him on the guard frequency and told him to turn right and climb ... but he never did," he said.

The jet was a communications aircraft based at Seymour Johnson Air Force Base in Goldsboro, N.C.

Senate change of plan on energy 'dramatic'

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Senate Energy Committee Wednesday rejected President Carter's plan to require changes in electric utility rate structures to save energy.

Instead, it approved without objection a limit on the federal government's role in state regulatory proceedings.

It was the most severe setback Carter's omnibus energy-saving bill has encountered in the Senate. The legislation also may face a tough test in the Senate Finance Committee, which begins voting on tax portions of the bill next week.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson (D-Wash.), energy committee chairman who had loyally supported other nontax parts of the bill, summed up committee sentiment by saying:

"I don't want the federal government to take over state functions. We seek the same goals (as the President) but by different means."

A Department of Energy official who attended the committee meeting would not comment on the administration's reaction but conceded the committee had made a "dramatic" change in the President's bill.

Carter's bill, as approved by the House, would have ordered state utility commissions to order specific changes in utilities' rate structures to conserve energy. Electricity could no longer be sold below cost to big users. Cheaper rates would be offered customers using power at off-peak times.

When the committee met Wednesday to vote on these provisions, Sen. J. Bennett Johnston (D-La.) said he didn't believe sufficient hearings had been held to enable the committee to "act prudently." He added that he opposed letting the federal government help shape utility rate structures because it would be "liable to drive away their capital."

Sen. James A. McClure (R-Idaho) said the federal government's record as a regulator has not been good enough to give it any more authority in the field.

Sen. Pete V. Domenici (R-N.M.) moved to defer any action on the subject until more hearings could be held. "No one on this committee knows how to deal with this problem," he said. "We just aren't ready." That proposal was defeated, 12 to 6.

Midlanders express views on proposed hospital district

By GEORGE H. JOHNSTON

Forrest Pendleton...for

Mrs. Edwin Davis ...against

A majority of 11 Midland residents interviewed Wednesday said they will support the proposed hospital district and $10 million bond issue at the polls Saturday.

Of the 11 interviewed at a west Midland department store, six said they support the issue, two are against and three are undecided.

However, two of the undecided said they will probably vote for the proposals.

Forrest Pendleton, 4736 Wilshire Dr., said he is voting for the proposal for the "obvious reason private donations can't maintain the hospital anymore."

"I feel I am going to have to vote for the (hospital) and bond issue," Pendleton said.

Although he will not like the extra taxes, Pendleton said the taxes are the only way to maintain the hospital as it should be.

A private hospital corporation has been one alternative proposed to meet hospital needs. But Pendleton said his understanding is that a private corporation does not want to come into Midland because they could not make any money.

Mrs. Edwin Davis, 2408 Emerson Court, said she will vote against the proposals because taxes will be raised.

"I realize we need (hospital improvements), but not under the condition that taxes be raised," Mrs. Davis said.

The taxes shouldn't be such a burden on the property owners. Others should pay also, Mrs. Davis said.

A city sales tax might be a more equitable way of taxation, Mrs. Davis believes. But she is worried that taxes will be continually raised.

"Where's it going to stop?" she asked.

H. D. Williams, 2304 Princeton, said he is undecided, but the higher taxes may also cause him to vote against the proposals.

"We can't be turning around asking for more taxes. There is a limit for everything even in Midland," Williams said.

Williams, who has been a Midland resident since 1926, said he believes we need the hospital district and improvements, "but I am getting fed up with paying everyone's bills all the time."

There are a lot of people in Midland who won't work for less than $3.50 to $4 an hour," Williams said.

Mrs. John Pearson, 3905 Anetta Dr., said she is voting for the proposal because it is something she will use.

"We pay taxes when we may not have a child in school, and we pay taxes on a college when we probably will never use it. But there are some people who cannot see to pay taxes on a hospital they will use," Mrs. Pearson said.

Mickey Somers, 2005 W. College Ave. said he is still undecided about the proposals, but will probably vote for them.

Somers said he has not decided if he will vote at all, but in any case, he said he will not vote against the proposals.

"A hospital is something you can't build all of a sudden when you need it. It's not going to cost each individual that much money," Somers said.

Another person who is against the proposals is Jim Barron of 11 Mariner Court.

Barron said he feels there has not been enough information to merit a vote for the proposals.

However, he said he agrees hospital improvements need to be made.

Barron said another reason he could not support the proposals is that when the hospital was first set up, it was promised that the hospital would not become a tax burden.

"Everyone was afraid of that and after all these years it has become a tax burden," Barron said.

"I know we don't need any more taxes," he added.

Mrs. Ann Harper, 1511 Garden City Highway, said she is undecided, but will probably vote for the proposals.

However, she said she was concerned about the "high rates" the hospital currently charges.

"Instead of the bond issue, it looks like they could do something with the high rates they charge," Mrs. Harper said.

Mrs. Harper said she is also concerned about people who pay their hospital bills getting the same service as those who don't.

"My husband and I save our money so we can pay if we get sick. But there are people who don't save their money, then don't pay when they do get sick. There are a lot of things they do over there that are not fair," she said.

"But of course we need a good hospital," she added.

Another person who said he will vote yes Saturday is Ray Plumlee of 2601 N. A St. Apt 122.

"The public health service is in a sad state considering the population," Plumlee said.

Plumlee said he has received plenty of information about the proposals through the news media. But he added that he did not know how much attention other people have paid to the proposals.

Mrs. Donald Brotherton of 3617 W. Shandon said she is voting for the proposals because "it (Midland Memorial) is the only good hospital we have."

Mrs. Brotherton said she has a family which uses the hospital often, and she said she will not mind the extra taxes.

"You pay for anything good you get," she said.

Mrs. Matilda Valdez of 308 Gist said she believes it is right to have a bigger hospital.

"I won't mind paying the extra taxes. I think it will be good for the kids to have an improved hospital. Everyday you have sick people," Mrs. Valdez said.

Mrs. John Berry, 2014 Sinclair Ave., said she will vote for the proposals because she believes the hospital needs improvement. "I have not been satisfied the few times I've been in the emergency room," Mrs. Berry said.

Protection of wilderness asked

By JAMES PHILLIPS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary Cecil D. Andrus is asking Congress to preserve more than 90 million acres of Alaska wilderness, a move expected to spark an environmental battle of epic proportions.

At issue is the future course of the nation's last frontier, thousands of square miles of wilderness lands whose development will be determined by Congress.

The battle pits preservationists against developers.

Andrus seeks to protect an area almost the size of California for national parks, wildlife refuges, wild and scenic rivers and national forests. Estimates of the amount of land Andrus will ask Congress to preserve range from 91.6 million acres to 92.8 million acres.

Environmentalists want even more land to be protected from development. In bills before Congress, they are asking that nearly 120 million acres be preserved.

Developers argue that the amount of land to be preserved is far too extensive and would block future development of oil and gas reserves, minerals and timber.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce filed suit Wednesday to block Andrus from testifying today before a House subcommittee, arguing unsuccessfully in U.S. District Court that the secretary is required by law to file an environmental impact statement before testifying.

According to Fred Krebs, a chamber attorney, the suit was prompted by "a fairly good cross section" of the mining, timber, oil and gas interests within the chamber.

Andrus' proposal is expected to break down as follows: national parks, 42.6 million acres; wildlife refuges, game ranges and wildlife preserves, 46.6 million acres; wild and scenic rivers, 2 million acres; national forests, 1.6 million acres.

Andrus' anticipated proposal — if enacted by Congress — would more than double the size of the existing national park system and the wildlife refuge system.

One proposed park contains a glacier bigger than the state of Rhode Island — and it is not the only glacier in the park. Nor is the glacier the park's pre-emminent feature.

Other lands Andrus is expected to protect include the Yukon Flats, flat tundra inundated with potholes and sloughs which provide nesting grounds for approximately one million waterfowl.

Ethiopia captures Soviet arms

The Washington Post

DIRE DAWA, Ethiopia — The Ethiopian government Wednesday presented the strongest evidence to date in support of its contention that the Somalian regular army is directly involved in the war under way in the Ogaden region of southeastern Ethiopia.

Flying a group of foreign correspondents to this city 300 miles east of the capital, the government displayed a vast array of Soviet arms captured in what was apparently a major Somali attempt to take Dire Dawa a month ago.

Inicuded among the captured items were four T-55 tanks, five armored cars, three rocket launchers, about 20 trucks and a vareity of artillery pieces. All bore clear Somali markings, such as license plates, and were of Soviet manufacture. Somalia has obtained all of its armaments from the Soviet Union.

In addition to these items, correspondents were taken on a tour of the two approaches north and northeast of the city reportedly used by the Somalis in their attack on Dire Dawa Aug. 16-17 and shown five other Soviet-built T-55 tanks either knocked out in the fighting or disabled when they fell into a nearby river bed.

According to Ethiopian government claims that Western diplomatic sources here say are fairly accurate, the Somali army has now lost more than 100 tanks, or roughly one-third of its total force. About 28 Somali MIGs have also reportedly been shot down and an Ethiopian officer said here Wednesday that all but four were destroyed in air engagements with American-built F-5 jet fighters sent to Ethiopia before it cut off military ties to the United States last April.

Somalia still insists that its regular army is not engaged in the warfare and that it is the Western Somali Liberation Front that is responsible for all the fighting, with only moral and material support from the Somali government. The war is being fought over a 800,000square mile tract of Ethiopian land to which Somali lays claim.

However, the evidence presented here to the 25 visiting foreign correspondents, more than half of them Western and the others from Communist countries, now seems to confirm the Ethiopian assertion that the regular Somali army is totally and directly involved in the war.

The trip took place as heavy fighting continued for the fifth straight day between the forces of the two neighboring Soviet-backed countries around Jigjiga, the site of an Ethiopian tank center about 100 miles east of here. More than 100 tanks and thousands of Somali and Ethiopian troops are reportedly involved inthe fighting.

The battle there has turned into a major test of strength between the two armies and is shaping up as a crucial turning point in the seven-week-old war that now probably ranks as the largest ever fought between two independent states in black Africa.

Toll rises to 23 dead, $50 million in damages

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The death toll in the Kansas City flash flood rose to 23 today while the damage estimate climbed to $50 million.

Twenty-two bodies were found in Kansas City. The 23rd body was found in Leavenworth, Kan., about 35 miles to the northwest.

City and county officials estimated that about 1,000 persons were still homeless because of the 12 inches of rain that fell in a 24-hour period Monday. The torrential rain caused Brush Creek to overflow its banks along the exclusive Country Club Plaza shopping center and pour into the Blue River.

The National Weather Service named a five-member team Wednesday to find out why advance flash flood warnings didn't prevent the deaths.

Mayor Charles Wheeler returned to his inundated city Wednesday night after cutting short a European trade mission.

Hours before his arrival, President Carter declared five Missouri counties disaster areas, making residents, small businesses and local governments eligible for low-cost loans and grants.

Four bodies were discovered Wednesday during clean-up operations — two of them along a creek bank about 1½ miles from the Blue River.

Electricity and natural gas service gradually was being restored, and Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. reported the only major unrepaired damage. A Bell spokesman said Wednesday 10,000 phone connections had been repaired, but 12,000 were out of service early today and some of them may not return until Friday.

Weekend Scout meeting planned

Representatives from the Big Country Area Conference for the Buffalo Trail Councils of Boy Scouts will meet Friday and Saturday in the Midland Hilton.

Registration opens at 9 a.m. Friday. The conference will close with a Saturday luncheon. District, council and area personnel will be participating.

Ryals appointed fire marshall

BIG SPRING — A 16-year veteran of the Big Spring Fire Department, Lt. Jim Ryals, has been named new fire marshall for Big Spring.

He will replace Coulton Wright. Ryals joined the department in 1961.

Suspect arrested

Midland police arrested a 23-year-old Midland man late Wednesday in connection with the reported rape of a 14-year-old girl Monday.

John I. Crisp of 1200 N. Terrell St. was charged with rape of a child today before Peace Justice Robert H. Pine, who set bond at $2,500.

Crisp remained in the city jail today.

MARIJUANA ARREST

A 17-year-old Midland man surrendered to Sheriff's deputies Wednesday after a search of his residence turned up about 2 pounds of a substance believed to be marijuana.

Robert L. Richardson of 4405 N. Garfield St. posted a $5,000 bond for charges of felony marijuana possession Wednesday, according to a sheriff's office spokesman.

Transportation to polls offered

Casa de Amigos will offer free transportation to the polls Saturday so persons can vote in the hospital district and bond issue election.

Persons wanting the service may contact Casa de Amigos by calling 682-9701. The person answering the phone will be bilingual.

Hospital favored in verdict

A Midland County jury Wednesday returned a verdict in favor of Midland Memorial Hospital in a suit brought against it by Guy E. and Laverne Saunders of Midland.

The suit grew out of an alleged Oct. 16, 1974, incident.

The Saunders alleged that Midland Memorial personnel had been negligent in tranferring Mrs. Saunders from a stretcher to an operating table, causing her shoulder to be wrenched, said Perry Davis, attorney representing the hospital.

The Saunders maintained Mrs. Saunders had to have surgery on her shoulder as a result of the alleged incident.

Hospital personnel denied the incident took place and said the problem with Mrs. Saunders' shoulder resulted from failure to use the shoulder, Davis said.

The jury returned the verdict in 142nd District Court after deliberating about 20 minutes, Davis said.

Loan officer's trial begins in federal court

The trial of former Odessa savings and loan officer Warren Boydston Moore, charged with misapplying almost $2.2 million, began Wednesday in federal district court in Midland.

Moore, 39, is former vice president of First Savings and Loan Association of Odessa. He is charged with five counts of misapplication of funds. He is accused of siphoning off the money, through use of the savings and loan computer, into accounts set up under fictitious names in Midland, Odessa and Atlanta, Ga.

Moore has pleaded innocent to all the charges against him.

In testimony Wednesday, Emil Beck, manager of First Savings and Loan Association of Odessa, told the jury Moore was hired as a consultant to help establish the association's computer system. He later was promoted to vice president, Beck said.

All but $24,000 of the missing money has been recovered through Moore's cooperation, Beck said.

Judge D. W. Suttle today denied a defense motion to suppress prosecution evidence because, defense counsel Tom Hirsch alleged, it was based on a statement Moore made before he was read his constitutional rights.

Suttle ruled the statement was voluntary and spontaneous.

This morning, Suttle heard arguments on a defense motion for a judgment of acquittal.

Although September days thus far have been almost summery warm, many Midlanders are closing windows and getting out blankets to keep warm at night.

The weatherman is predicting more of the same, with mostly fair weather through Friday. Tonight's low is expected to be in the low 60s but Friday's high is expected to be in the mid-90s.

Winds should be from the south to southeast at 5 to 10 mph tonight.

Cool and clear weather was reported this morning in Andrews, Lamesa, Crane, Stanton, Rankin, Big Lake and Big Spring.

Commuters, 'love' motif spell profits for airline

DALLAS (AP) — Southwest Airlines was born an unwanted child in a crowded industry, but the young upstart with the "love" motif finally has gained a place in the Texas skies.

Behind it now are court victories over bigger competitors and a solid position in the profit column.

The Texas intrastate carrier was incorporated as Air Southwest Co. in 1967, but underwent a name change and a Supreme Court test spurred by interstate airlines before its first flights got off the ground in June 1971.

After heavy initial losses operating among Dallas, Houston and San Antonio airports, Southwest showed a net income in 1976 of $4.9 million.

Southwest didn't have to recruit a boss. M. Lamar Muse went after the job.

Muse, a non-pilot, took the reins as president in 1970 after stints with other airlines and as an independent financial consultant.

"This was something that was needed," Muse said. "I was sitting around doing nothing. Southwest a certificate with one employe and $145 in the bank."

The meld worked, and from an initial public offering at $11 per share, stock closed earlier this week at 22¾.

The airline inaugurates service today between Austin and Dallas, Corpus Christi, El Paso, Midland-Odessa and Lubbock. It also serves Harlingen in the Rio Grande Valley, San Antonio and Houston.

If Muse has his way, the airline's 737 fleet will add Beaumont-Port Arthur-Orange and Amarillo to the list of Texas destinations.

A spinoff, Midway Airway, would like to fly among several out-of-state points beginning in 1980 from a Chicago base.

The Chicago operation would be contingent upon the Civil Aeronautics Board letting Midway Airway operate under a two-tier rate structure, avoiding what Muse calls the "market-stifling fares" now a part of CAB approval.

That issue is at the heart of what Muse believes to be the secret to Southwest's success, and he thinks the CAB will knuckle under.

"The current climate is right," he said. "They'd be hard put to turn us are different from the ones we fly in Texas ...and they really aren't."

The commuter concept, combined with an ad campaign based on "love," —it flies out of Love Field in Dallas — and the two-tier rate structure has proved to be a winner in Texas.

Basically, the two-tier structure offers an executive fare during business hours and a lower fare during evenings and weekends. Depending on the number of legs involved in a given flight, those fares range from $15 to $60.

The commuter concept was bolstered by victories in hardfought battles to maintain service from close-in airports at Houston and Dallas as opposed to flying into and out of larger airports some distance from the business centers of both those cities.

As for love, it's everywhere.

Cocktails are "love potions," airplanes are "love birds," a cash register that dispenses a ticket in 10 seconds is a "love machine," and hostesses advise passengers to buckle up "because we love you."

The image conjures up pictures of leering, vested businessmen boozing it up and ogling the hostesses, with no women passengers in sight, and mention of that prompts Muse to tell you about his hobby.

"I always count people getting off our flights when I'm around," Muse said, "and sometimes I categorize them. Once I watched 36 people get off a Lubbock flight and only nine of them wore ties. And there were women on board, too."

Houston heroin conviction upset

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The heroin conviction of a woman seated on a sofa holding two dogs when Houston police broke into her house in 1973 was reversed Wednesday by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

Shirley Harrison was convicted with her husband and sentenced to 20 years in prison.

The appeals court ruled, however, that the evidence was insufficient to sustain the jury's verdict.

Police battered in her front door, which was secured by two steel bars, with a 16-pound sledge hammer and, according to court records, saw her husband disposing of heroin in the kitchen sink. Thirteen packets of heroin were found near the sink. The woman, however, "was in the living room, seated on a sofa holding two dogs and talking to them."

In reversing the conviction and sending the case back to Harris County, the appeals court noted that "a finding of joint possession cannot be justified solely by proof of mere presence of an accused at a place where contraband is being used or possessed."

'Jno. P. Butler Day'

Fifty years with one business firm certainly is quite an accomplishment — one which is achieved by comparatively few persons.

And when a person serves not only his firm but his community as well for half a century, it becomes all the more noteworthy.

And the Tall City of Midland today honors just such a person.

He is Jno. P. Butler, senior chairman of the board of The First National Bank of Midland — a gentleman of the first order, a top-flight bank executive, and the dean of Midland bankers.

Congratulations and all best wishes are directed to this distinguished banker and civic leader on "Jno. P. Butler Day," as proclaimed by Mayor Ernest Angelo, Jr.

It was 50 years ago today — Sept. 15, 1927 — that Jno. P. Butler, a native of Mount Calm, Tex., joined the staff of The First National Bank as a teller. He had advanced through the ranks, to assistant cashier and on to a vice president's slot before being elected president of the financial institution in 1953. Then, in 1963, he became chairman of the board. He was named senior chairman on Aug. 11, 1976. He has been a member of the board of directors since Jan. 11, 1944.

And today, Mr. and Mrs. Butler greeted hundreds of well-wishers at a public reception given in their honor in the bank's galleria.

Then tonight, stockholders of The First National and members of the financial community will honor the Butlers at a reception to be held in the Midland Hilton.

This is a day of well-merited recognition and honor for a Top Midlander and a Top West Texan.

Mr. Butler, a modest, friendly, good-natured man, has had a leading role in the rapid growth of The First National from a small bank with deposits of less than a million dollars in 1927 to the presently largest bank on the Missouri-Pacific Railroad between Fort Worth and El Paso, with deposits in the neighborhood of $400 million.

And during the same half-century, Mr. Butler has seen and been a very definite part of the growth and development of Midland from a small cowtown of a few thousand persons to the Headquarters City of the Permian Basin Empire of West Texas and Southeast New Mexico, with a population of more than 70,000. During the years it has become one of the nation's leading oil and gas centers.

Starting out by playing baseball on the town team when he first came to Midland, he has been a stellar player on the volunteer community growth and betterment team through his 50-year residence, playing any and all positions wherever and whenever called upon.

Mr. Butler has served on the City Council and as mayor pro tem; he is a past president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce and the Downtown Lions Club. He was the first chairman of the board of executors of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame. He since has been inducted into the museum's Hall of Fame, a just recognition of his leadership role in museum and petroleum affairs.

He is a former director of the El Paso Branch of the Federal Reserve Bank and is a past president of the South Plains Bankers Association. He is a former director of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, Independent Petroleum Association of America, Texas Good Roads Association, and other organizations.

He is a long-time member of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity and has served it in numerous official capacities. He also is a 32nd degree Mason and, likewise, has served Masonry in numerous capacities.

Midland Memorial Hospital also has been favored by his years of service as a governor, trustee and treasurer.

He has been recognized by Midland Jaycees as "Boss of the Year" and by the Woods W. Lynch Post of the American Legion as "Outstanding Citizen."

And on this particular occasion all Midlanders join in saluting Jno. P. Butler as "Outstanding Citizen for Half a Century" — a citizen who has worked and is working to make the Tall City even taller.

INSIDE REPORT:

Cracks discovered in plans for new CIA

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

Evans

Novak

WASHINGTON — President Carter is now putting finishing touches on an executive order designed at long last to charter a future course for the beleaguered Central Intelligence Agency and end its vulnerability as Congress' favorite whipping post.

But the four-year victimization of the CIA has left deep wounds that the President's new charter can do little to cure. Indeed, even as Mr. Carter prepares to sign — perhaps this week — the executive order restyling the CIA, Adm. Stansfield Turner, CIA director and principal draftsman of the executive order, continues to alarm professional intelligence officers with sometimes heavy-handed internal reforms.

Chief of these is Turner's plan to fire some 800 senior intelligence officers out of a total 4,500, which he privately announced to top CIA staffers last month without elaboration or explanation. To some intelligence experts, both in the U.S. and among allied nations, the mass firings between now and Oct. 1, 1978, will create a pool of virtually unemployable, middle-aged intelligence agents some of whom might be ripe for going public with intelligence secrets (as many other ex-CIA agents have recently done) — or even for recruitment by the Soviet KGB.

A remarkably similar situation occurred following the bloody, post-Stalin political upheaval in the KGB in 1953, which produced an invaluable intelligence haul for the U.S. This was directly traceable to a sense of betrayal among ousted KGB agents as a result of the Kremlin's grim, heavy-handed reorganization of Soviet intelligence.

The Carter-Turner CIA reorganization has been drafted with scrupulous attention to legal detail so that the executive order can stand on its own without an immediate new congressional law (which can't be passed until next year). Accordingly, Turner's title will not be elevated to Director of National Intelligence, as originally planned. He remains Director of Central Intelligence with overall supervision of the government's ramified intelligence units but no day-to-day control over the operations of the Pentagon's National Reconnaissance Office (NRO) which controls U.S. satellite spies; the National Security Agency (NSA), responsible for communications intercepts among many other duties; and the Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA) with its Army, Navy and Air Force components.

In return for losing out in the bitterly contested power struggle over direct supervision of these peripheral but vital units, Turner will yield general budget control over all intelligence agencies and will be given new "tasking" powers to decide which one should perform different intelligence-gathering tasks.

In addition to the new National Tasking Center, to be headed by a Turner aide with Turner as chairman of a National Security Council committee with ultimate tasking authority, the executive order will also consolidate all intelligence analysis under Robert Bowie. He will head an office to be called the National Foreign Assessment Center, already nicknamed Infac.

Bowie is an experienced expert who headed the State Department's Policy Planning Staff under John Foster Dulles. He was brought into the CIA early this year from Harvard and in his new role must tap assessments and analyses from all intelligence units in the government. Presumably, Bowie will be responsible for the daily intelligence briefing given to the President.

That leaves human (as opposed to scientific) intelligence-gathering and secret or clandestine operations abroad — the source of the CIA's problem with Congress. Sen. Frank Church, chairman of the committee that investigated the CIA in 1975 and 1976, is insisting that the CIA's new charter spell out precise limitations on CIA's secret operations, including a specific veto on "conspiring to overthrow democratic governments." He wants these prohibitions repeated in the new law, a curious demand that both mystifies and angers some other Senators.

"So we spell out no overthrow of democratic governments," one Senator told us. "Does that mean full speed ahead in non-democratic countries?"

The President's executive order is expected to define broad procedures governing CIA dirty tricks, leaving specific prohibitions to congressional oversight committees which must be informed on all clandestine operations.

Experienced intelligence men, however, fear that the question of foreign operations may be moot in Turner's CIA, no matter what the new charter says. "He's a nut on the scientific gimmicks," one told us, "but doesn't put much stock in human-source intelligence or dirty tricks."

If so, the new CIA will start out hobbled in the always dangerous competition with the far-flung KGB.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

The Rev. Clennon King's career

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — America has produced few Don Quixotes more curious than the Rev. Clennon King, a gallavanting black knight, whose clanking crusades have led him into a host of misadventures.

His most celebrated sally was an attempt to join Jinmy Carter's segregated Baptist church in Plains, Ga. This turned out to be another tilt with the windmills. But King later pressed on to Hawaii for another joust with Carter's embattled former minister.

Next, the rambling reverend turned up in Washington where, for a moment of triumph, he attended Carter's new church. The last published account had hin lecturing the assembled Southern Christian Leadership Conference, which the revered Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., led to glory. The two Reverend Kings, it should be added, were not related.

Clennon King's public capers have given him a cloudy image. He is looked upon by some as a rabble rouser, by others as a civil rights symbol. It might be useful, therefore, to clear away the mist.

It took us more than two weeks, scattering messages across the country, to reach King. The phone at his Divine Mission Church in Albany, Ga., has been disconnected. Messages sometimes can be relayed to him through his neighbors, usually children, who answer the pay phone at the service station next door. But such messages often bring no results because, one of his friends told us, King is dodging bill collectors.

Even this tenuous link with the world may soon disappear. Our associate Jim Grady finally got the elusive reverend to answer the telephone at the Albany Journal, a weekly newspaper, which employs him as a part-time columnist and circulation assistant. King sadly informed us that his major concerns these days are financial; indeed, he said, his landlord had ordered his mission out of the building.

He assumes he will find the money to get by. He paid for his recent Hawaiian foray by writing checks on his hopeful account—and account he hope people will put money in, because he has none to support it.

The bankrupt but undaunted knight comes fron a prominent black Georgia family. He began offending his fellowmen as a young history teacher at Mississippi's all-black Alcorn College. He wrote a series of articles for a Mississippi newspaper offering a hazy brand of laissez-faire, vaguely segregationist attitudes toward America's racial problems... This infuriated Alcorn's black student body which brought enough pressure to get him fired.

Unrepetant, King took an even stronger stand in a series of articles for right-wing publications like the American Mercury. White racists ecstatically embraced this reasoned black man who preached a sophisticated form of segregation, suggested subtly that the integration movement was communist-tainted and charged that the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People "fights freedom."

After leaving Alcorn, King decided to further his own education. Never one to take an easy road, he picked the segregated University of Mississippi. This assault upon the windmills earned him a brief matriculation at the state insane asylum, courtesy of Mississippi officials who employed a tactic the Soviet KGB uses against dissidents.

King then began what he calls "the craziest part of my life... I became depersonalized, a dead man." He took off for California where his dreams continued to burst like soap bubbles. In November of 1959, according to San Diego Superior Court records, King took his wife of eight years and their six children to Rosarita Beach, Mexico, where he up and deserted them. King claims the separation was a mix-up, caused by his efforts to claim political asylum in Mexico.

Mrs. King went on welfare to feed her family, and the authorities issued a warrant for the errant knight. His prison rap sheet shows King had several brushes with the law before he was apprehended by the California authorities in 1966.

He was charged with resisting arrest in Jackson, Miss., abandonment in Woodbine, Ga., and vagrancy in New Orleans. In Honolulu, he ran afoul of the law in three separate incidents — interfering with the police, contempt of court and malicious injury.

In 1960, while he was still on the lam from the California police, the fugitive ran for president. He made the ballot in Alabama. A state official confirmed that King received ebout 2,000 votes, placing far behind the victorious John F. Kennedy.

Accounting for the time between his presidential campaign and prison conviction, King explained that he went to Africa and taught school. He had two turbulent trials before he was sent to a California prison on desertion charges.

The reverend was not a model prisoner. He bombarded officialdom with handwritten petitions and complaints. He renounced his U.S. citizenship, the ministry and God.

At one point, he changed his name to Lenin Lumumba Abdulah, not because he was enamored with the Muslin faith but, he said, because he thought these three names would annoy the establishment in America, Africa and Asia.

King didn't get out of prison until Feb. 12, 1970, transforming from a rebellious convict to a dean of the now-defunct Saints College in Mississippi. In 1973, he was back in Albany.

Now the affable, loquacious King has reached another juncture in his checkered career. His financial status is bad even by his standerds. But he plans to continue his crusades, with his goal now being "open churches" for everyone. He explains that the God he serves how is "bigger than the one I renounced in prison."

NICK THIMMESCH

'Behind Closed Doors': Era of instant 'history'

WASHINGTON — After watching most of that 12-hour epic, "Washington: Behind Closed Doors," I must conclude that we truly live in an era of instant history. By opening the new season with this giant movie made for TV, the American Broadcasting Company hoped to get a head start in the ratings race, but unwittingly created a precedent for converting a still pungent yesterday into what passes for graven history.

Whatever its clumsy title, this is supposed to be the story of the Nixon Presidency, or a good piece of it, as adapted from John Ehrlichman's surprising novel, "The Company." Richard Monckton is obviously Richard Nixon, and CIA Director William Martin is Richard Helms, onetime CIA Director. There are characters for Kissinger, Haldeman, Mitchell, Magruder, and even good old Herb Klein.

Years ago, Orson Welles produced (and starred in) a magnificent film, "Citizen Kane," based on the life of William Randolph Hearst. But he did this at some risk, for Hearst threatened suits. In those days, a man's reputation, particularly a tycoon, still had some worth, and people in the fiction or entertainment business had to be careful.

Even as recently as the Mid-Sixties, there was some trouble from the family of Gen. George S. Patton when the movie about his role in World War II was being made.

But how could Nixon or others in his administration every complain about the way they are rendered in this ABC epic? They are, as George Orwell correctly prophesized, "Unpersons," deserving no due, not even a phone call. In Orwell's absolutely brilliant "1984," history is rewritten, truth becomes fiction, and that which does not serve the moment goes down the "memory hole," a giant incinerator for nagging doubts.

Because of Big Media, particularly television power, we live in a time of instant good and bad guys, improvisation on history, complexities made simple through drama. Since there is an absolute perception of Nixon and his gang as an evil bunch indeed, "Washington: Behind Closed Doors" is compelled not only to render that "truth," but to embroider it, lay it on, make it hit the viewer right between the eyes, lest he switch channels for "The Hindenberg" or some other light diversion.

So for six nights we saw Jason Robards (Monckton-Nixon) growling, thundering, plotting to get his enemies, lusting for power and seemingly damned little interested in Preserving the Republic. Robert Vaughn (Flaherty-Halderman) is strong, cold, curt, disagreeable to the point of cruelty, never in a gentle moment. The rest of the Nixon, whoops, Monckton gang are just as they were portrayed in the Watergate era, a bad lot deserving perdition.

Somehow the Kissinger character, Carl Tessler, comes off as a quiet, scholarly man, though capable of enjoying a little remote violence now and then, if produced by the U.S. military.

When Ehrlichman wrote the novel from his sanctuary in Santa Fe, he had generally come to peace with his antagonists with one exception — the CIA. Oh, how Ehrlichman detested the CIA, and how deeply he felt that the "Company" double-crossed him Thus his novel focused on that celebrated agency and its relationship to the President.

But the writers and producers of the TV version only used the Ehrlichman slice as a jumping off place to paint a raft of black stories. They hate Nixon and always have, and so do the actors they chose. Still, Jason Robards came off mostly as Jason Robards, and Robert Vaughn kept me thinking of "The Man From UNCLE." Purists could find 101 errors in this week of Monckton-Nixon, and many flaws, one being that Henry Kissinger is quiet and scholarly. Kissinger ranted and raved the loudest of anybody in the Nixon White House, and relied more on political wile than books to shape his actions.

Anyway, does the American public now believe that what they saw is the way it was in the Nixon years? Did the Nixon people do nothing but conspire, punish, and pant for power? Was there never a kind word or a reasonable action?

If the people who plan and create television are mostly of one persuasion, and have license to render history as they want it to be, ala "1984," are we not all captives then, obliged to study elsewhere for truth? Or is all this just entertainment, and being entertainment, not to be taken seriously? As a matter of fact, should government and politics be taken seriously?

What if it changes and one day utter reactionaries plan and create television and decide to do the Presidencies of Harry S Truman, John F. Kennedy, Lyndon B. Johnson and James Earl Carter Jr.?

Will we see Truman (as he once did) enjoying wire-tap transcripts? Will Kennedy be shown in bed (as the Washington Post reported) with the woman who turned him onto marijuana, joking about the drug conference he was to greet? Will we see L.B.J. in his profane moments scolding enemies, reading FBI and IRS files on friends, and kneeling at bedside in prayer with Billy Graham?

Will a Bert Lance character toss money about like a bishop spraying holy water and nearby a big-toothed Southern President slyly clutching his Bible? Will Gerald Ford, the irrepressible "nice guy," come off as secret sinner? Will the real Kissinger ever be shown?

As George Orwell reminded us in "1984":

WAR IS PEACE
FREEDOM IS SLAVERY
IGNORANCE IS STRENGTH

Barber, baker, bedspread maker: they back Bert

By JEFF PRUGH
The Los Angeles Times

CALHOUN, Ga.—At Smitty's Bar-B-Q down by the railroad tracks, a retired farmer said "Everybody here is for Bert. Resign? Well, if he's guilty of breaking the law, then he should resign."

At worship services at the First United Methodist Church, the Rev. Emory Brackman prayed that "God will undergird Bert and give him the wisdom to make the proper decisions."

At the Calhoun Fire Department, chief Ferrell D. Grizzle yearned for "the way it used to be — when people didn't know things like this. I tell you, it's gonna destroy the people's confidence in our government. Maybe it will contribute to the overthrow of the government."

Probably nowhere is Bert Lance, the nation's embattled Budget Director, more admired than here in his home town of 6,000, tucked away among the carpet mills and farmlands of North Georgia's rolling foothills.

The barber, the baker and the bedspread maker are saying nary an unkind word about the man they simply call "Bert," a man many remember as a teen-ager back in the 1940s when he jerked sodas at the Fite drug store next door to the moviehouse.

Wednesday night, in fact, a public rally for Lance, with speeches, band music and prayers, will be held at the Calhoun High School football stadium. "We're going to tell the American people that Bert Lance is not a crook," said rally organizer Jack Mullins, a Calhoun pharmacist and one-time boyhood chum of Lance. "We haven't deserted Bert — and we don't intend to."

Only one person who was interviewed by The Los Angeles Times declined to talk publicly about the controversy over Lance's personal finances, banking methods and reports of his family's $450,000 in overdrafts.

He is Richard Huie, an officer at the Gordon County Bank, the only local competitor of the Calhoun First National Bank which Lance one headed.

"I'd rather not," Huie said politely.

"Does your bank permit overdrafts by its directors?" He was asked.

"If I say anything at all," Huie replied, "it probably would sound like sour grapes."

The Lance case was on people's lips this week just about everywhere else in Calhoun, a close-knit community with an unshakable faith in God, the Flag and Bert Lance.

At his soon-to-open granery business four miles west of here, President Carter's eldest son, Jack, reaffirmed his support of Lance, but he said that the ordeal is a strain on the First Family. "My mother and I talked on the phone," he said, "and she's quite unhappy about it."

Lance's own mother, Rose, reportedly has withheld the news from Lance's father, Dr. Jack Lance, 91, a retired educator who has a prolonged illness.

Some residents conceded that Lance "may have one enemy in a thousand, but who doesn't?" His pasotr, Brackman, said that "Bert's the first to admit that he's not without blemishes, but I don't know of anyone who could have stood up without blemishes showing, under the kind of scrutiny that he has."

Many of Lance's supporters here blame big Washington and the Big Media for his troubles. Some blame a "witch hunt" by the media for what they call his "crucifixion." Some even regard it as a Republican plot to tarnish a Democratic administration and "get even" for Watergate.

"You better say something good about Bert, or folks in this town will come lookin' for you," Otis Brown, a gray-haired barber wearing a green eyeshade said half-kiddingly to a reporter.

When Calhoun residents say something good about Lance, it is after that he personifies the American work ethic and that he has been instintingly loyal to family, friends and community since rising from $90-a-month bank teller to one of the President's most trusted Cabinet members.

He is generally described as "moral" and "hard-working" and "the biggest shot-in-the-arm" to northwest Georgia's economic life.

"This used to be just a small country town," said one of several blue-shirted firemen as they sat in the station overlooking the main thoroughfare of Wall Street.

"But when Bert took over the bank, he helped a lot of folks get on their feet. He made it easier for them to get loans to build homes and go into business. Before, it wasn't so easy — you had to be somebody big in town, with 500 acres and a lot of money. Not so with Bert."

Some residents said that Calhoun still has not recovered from the shock surrounding the case of Billy Lee Campbell, a one-time loan officer at Lance's bank who was convicted last year in a $1 million embezzlement scheme. Many are resentful that Campbell, a former telephone lineman, reportedly has implicated Lance in the crime.

"Can you believe that," said Doyle Grizzle, a barber. "Here Bert took this damned pole-climber and gave him a big job at the bank — and now the guy turns on Bert. There's no justice."

One young woman, Marcelle Pate, 20, said that Lance is no different from any other aggressive banker.

"Why are they picking on him?" she said. "It's just because he happens to be in government. I bet you could find a lot of crooked things going on in the government. Why don't they look into all those people who give big parties and live in fine houses — with our tax money?"

Both Calhoun newspapers stoutly support Lance amid the crescendo of demands that he resign.

Many are called, very few not chosen

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — When Robert Bloom decided in January not to be what he later called "a skunk at a garden party" by criticizing Bert Lance's nomination as budget director, he was not alone.

Bloom, then acting comptroller of the currency, was merely following a long tradition established by the Senate itself — that a President's nominees are virtually always approved, that advise and consent really means consent, that the confirmation process is half rubber and half stamp.

Senate records show that only eight Cabinet appointees have been rejected and that since World War II only 16 major non-Cabinet appointees have been rejected either by committees or by the full Senate.

"The tradition is to handle the nominations quickly, and unless something awful has jumped out, the Senate has not exercised independent judgement," said a Senate staffer.

Another said presidential nominees are "almost never rejected on policy grounds. They can be crummy, mediocre, not qualified, even in industry's pocket, and if they haven't done anything criminal, they're approved. You almost have to be found with one finger in the cookie jar to get rejected."

The last Cabinet nominee voted down by the Senate was Lewis L. Strauss, President Eisenhower's choice for secretary of commerce. Strauss, a crotchety admiral who had been head of the old Atomic Energy Commission, was rejected 49 to 46 in June, 1959, largely because he had alienated half the Senate during his six-month fight for confirmation. He had also been accused of concealing a conflict of interest on the part of another official in the controversy over a government contract to let the Dixon-Yates power combine set up a huge plant in Arkansas.

The first Cabinet officer rejected by the Senate was Roger B. Taney, President Andrew Jackson's nominee for treasury secretary. Taney late was appointed to the Supreme Court and wrote the Dred Scott decision of 1857 denying citizenship to blacks and helping to precipitate the Civil War.

The Senate also turned down Caleb Cushing, whose name was submitted three times by President John Tyler in 1843 for treasury secretary; Davin Henshaw, nominated that year as Navy secretary; James M. Porter, also nominated in 1843 as secretary of war; James S. Green, named the next year by President Tyler as secretary of the treasury; Henry Stanbery, President Andrew Johnson's choice in 1868 for attorney general, and Charles B. Warren, whom Calvin Coolidge nominated three times in 1925 to be attorney general.

In the post-World War II era the Senate maintained its pussycat attitude on presidential appointments. Some sub-Cabinet names were withdrawn without Senate action — just as Theodore C. Sorensen withdrew in January as President Carter's nominee to head the Central Intelligence Agency — when it became clear they could not win approval.

A few were rejected on the floor — Carl A. Ilgenfritz as chairman of the old Munitions Board in 1949 because he wouldn't give up his big salary as a steel executive, Leland Olds as a third-term Federal Power Commissioner in 1949 because he was perceived as anti-private power and four others simply because senators exercised their right to declare a nominee "personally obnoxious."

In 1968 the Senate rejected President Lyndon Johnson's nomination of Supreme Court Justice Abe Fortas to be Chief Justice, and in 1969 and 1970 it disapproved Richard Nixon's nominations of Clement Haynsworth Jr. and G. Harrold Carswell as high court justices.

The Fortas nomination was actually withdrawn after a vote to cut off a filibuster against the appointment failed. Fortas, accused of "cronyism" with LBJ, was rejected because while on the court he had accepted an outside fee from the family foundation of a convicted stock manipulator.

Powell admits 'regrettable, dumb blunder'

By EDWARD WALSH
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — White House press secretary Jody Powell admitted Wednesday that he committed an "inappropriate, regrettable and dumb" blunder in leaking suggestions to reporters that Sen. Charles H. Percy (R-Ill.) had made improper use of corporate aircraft and bank facilities.

Powell, who has been the administration's first line of public defense in the Bert Lance case, found himself for the first time a target of controversy as a result of the leak episode.

The press secretary said he called Percy, who has been one of the most aggressive questioners in the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee's inquiry into the financial dealings of Budget Director Lance, to apologize for the incident. He added, with a wry smile, that President Carter agreed with his assessment of his behavior.

The Chicago Sun-Times reported that on Tuesday morning Powell called Loye W. Miller, the newspaper's Washington bureau chief, and said he had been told that Percy had regularly flown on an aircraft owned by Bell & Howell Co. and had failed to fully reimburse the First National Bank of Chicago for use of the bank's facilities during his 1972 campaign.

The use of aircraft belonging to two Georgia banks once headed by Lance are central to the controversy over Lance's continued tenure as head of the Office of Management and Budget.

When Powell's information turned out to be unfounded, the Sun-Times decided to report his telephone call, characterizing it as "an apparent guerrilla offensive aimed at discrediting" Percy, the ranking Republican on the Governmental Affairs Committee.

It was learned that Powell passed similar information on Percy to the New York Times, the Los Angeles Times and the Cox newspapers, which publish the Atlanta Constitution and Journal. Another unidentified White House official tipped off the Washington bureau of the Knight-Ridder newspapers that rumors about Percy were being circulated.

Powell's telephone call to Percy came after there was a storm of protest about the incident from Democrats and Republicans on Capitol Hill.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd (D-W.Va.) called Powell's action unfortunate and irresponsible. House Speaker Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill Jr.'s only comment was, "Being an Irishman, I've never had much love or affection for informers."

Congressional Republicans seized on the incident to criticize the entire White House handling of the Lance affair. Senate Minority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. (R-Tenn.) said it "says something about the siege mentality of the White House," while Sen. H. John Heinz III (R-Pa.) compared it to the "dirty tricks" of the Nixon administration.

The exposure of the Powell episode, administration officials conceded, was certain to further tarnish not only his image but that of the President in their attempts to defend Lance from the growing allegations and demands for his resignation.

For one thing, the episode was a graphic public illustration that beneath his folksy Georgia manner, Powell, like others of Carter's inner circle, is a tough political operative who relishes combat against the President's perceived political foes.

Lance made public strictly internal document

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Budget Director Bert Lance made public a central document concerning his financial transactions just hours after the comptroller of the currency had strenuously warned Lance against any public discussion of such matters, according to records in the comptroller's office.

A transcript of Lance's sworn testimony before comptroller John Heimann shows that Heimann repeatedly expressed concern that an internal memorandum concerning a loan to Lance from a New York bank might leak to the press.

The transcript shows Lance agreeing taht such a leak would be "prejudicial" and should be avoided if poossible.

Lance and Heimann made those comments at a 7:30 a.m. session in the comptroller's office on Aug. 5. At 4:00 p.m. that day, Lance called a press conference to disclose the content of the internal memo.

The transcript of Lance's testimony before the comptroller was stamped "Confidential" by the comptroller's office. A copy was obtained by Washington Post staff writer James L. Rowe Jr.

Heimann asked Lance to the early morning session after the comptroller's investigators found an internal memorandum from Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. of New York that suggested that Lance's national Bank of Georgia had established a large interest-free account at Manufacturers Hanover as a condition of a personal loan to Lance from the New York bank.

Heimann warned Lance that the use of the Georgia bank's funds to help Lance obtain a personal loan may have violated federal banking laws.

Heimann's deputy, Westbrook Murphy, told Lance that "we have got no choice with those circumstances but to refer the case to the attorney genreal."

At that point, Lance and his lawyer, Alex Smith, began asking — at some places almost begging — that Heimann not pass the matter on for criminal prosecution. In the end, Lance and Smith were successful.

Lance maintained that the internal memo had been written by a Manufacturers Hanover officer who did not know the conditions attached to his personal loan. He said there was no discussion of a deposit from the Georgia bank when he visited Manufacturers Hanover to negotiate his loan.

Accordingly, Lance argued, the comptroller's office should talk to all Manufacturers Hanover officers familiar with the circumstances before referring the case to the Justice Department.

In the detailed report on Lance's finances which he released on Aug. 18, the comptroller concluded that Lance's dealings with Manufacturers Hanover involved "no violation of any applicable laws or regulations."

Official testifies on banking abuses to Senate panel

By JAMES L. ROWE JR.
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A top federal banking official testified Wednesday that a common element in many bank failures is overdraft abuses by officers and directors of the institutions.

President Carter's budget director, Bert Lance, has been accused, among other things, of running up large overdrafts at banks he headed in Georgia.

Charles M. Pickett, regional counsel for the Dallas office of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., said that in most of the 34 banks he has closed, officers and directors wrote checks without sufficient funds in their accounts which were covered at no interest charge by the bank.

He told the House subcommittee on financial institutions that when federal examiners began to question the overdrafts, the banks usually converted them into normal, interest-bearing loans, but they were usually loans the banks "couldn't have afforded to make."

The subcommittee, headed by Rep. Fernand J. St. Germain (D-R.I.), is holding hearings on a bill designed to deal with various abuses in banking practices, including overdrafts and the use of one bank's deposits in a second institution to induce the second to make low-interest loans to officers of the first.

Lance placed large interest-free deposits from the National Bank of Georgia into two other banks — Manufacturers Hanover Trust of New York and First National Bank of Chicago — at about the same time he obtained large personal loans from the New York and Chicago banks.

Smaller banks often maintain interest-free, or correspondent, accounts with larger banks, and the larger banks provide services such as check-clearing to the smaller banks in return.

But when the accounts are established to induce the bigger bank to make loans to officers of the smaller one, or when the balances are kept higher than needed for the same reason, the correspondent accounts are being used illegally as compensating balances, lawyers agree.

While it is not illegal for a banker to have personal financial dealings with a big bank with which his institution has a correspondent relationship, Dallas FDIC Regional Director Quinton Thompson told the House subcommittee that it is a "highly unfavorable practice" that bank supervisors should discourage.

He said that compensating balances were widespread when he took over the Dallas office in 1969 — usually for loans to buy bank stock as in Lance's case — but that his supervisory efforts have "largely eliminated" the practices.

Lance and the two banks maintain that the $2.7 million loan he received from Manufacturers Hanover in 1975 and the $3.4 million he received late last year were good loans made at nonpreferential rates.

Lance used the first loan to buy 164,228 shares of National Bank of Georgia stock, then used the First Chicago loan to pay off the New York bank and buy more stock in the Georgia bank.

What? new U.S. senator returns unused funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Freshman Sen. Edward Zorinsky, saying too many people in Washington feel comfortable spending other people's money, is returning to the government $313,016 in unspent office funds.

"I feel like one drop in a bucket helps," said Zorinsky, a Nebraska Democrat, whose unused funds will revert to the treasury on Sept. 30, when the current fiscal year ends.

"Sometimes a bucket can get filled if enough drops fall into it," he said in a telephone interview today.

Zorinsky, who has been in office only nine months of the fiscal year, said he would be returning more money to the treasury if he had been in the Senate for the entire fiscal year.

He said he simply didn't spend all of his appropriation for administrative aide salaries as well as money provided for such items as telephones, travel, stationery and other office expenses.

In addition, the senator is vowing to make his 19 staff workers earn the 7.5 per cent pay raise that will automatically be given to thousands of other federal employes in October.

Zorinsky, who serves on the Agriculture and Commerce Committee, also refused to use $139,278 authorized for hiring committee aides.

"The taxpayers can no longer afford to pay for all the services the federal government wants to provide for them," said Zorinsky, who winces at the thought of being dubbed a crusader.

The senator admits, however, that his tight-fisted spending policies have caused a stir among some colleagues.

"Some of them have referred to it jokingly," Zorinsky said, without naming names. "But I haven't encountered any animosity."

Does he feel like a fiscal Lone Ranger?

"Not at all," Zorinsky said. "I just feel that I want to be sure I'm not wasting the taxpayers' money."

Not a single constituent has complained about Zorinsky's failure to spend all of the money allocated to his office, he said.

House plan would aid retired

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retired people could earn up to $1,500 more without losing Social Security benefits under a plan approved by a House subcommittee, whose chairman says the current limit reduces the elderly to eating pet food.

Recipients who now earn more than $3,000 lose $1 in benefits for every $2 they bring in above the ceiling. That limitation, says Rep. James A. Burke, D-Miss., means some retirees are "living on a diet of cat and dog food."

In a move experts say could affect a million people, the House Ways and Means subcommittee on Social Security Wednesday tentatively approved raising the allowance in 1978.

Under the proposal, recipients could earn $6,000 in 1979 without facing an aid cutback.

The limit on exempt earnings this year is $3,000. It is expected to go to $3,240 in 1978 and $3,480 in 1979 under a provision of the existing law that ties benefits to inflation.

Social Security Commissioner James B. Cardwell opposed the change, saying it would be "too costly at this time."

The subcommittee's move, approved unanimously, was a compromise between Republicans, who wanted to abolish the limitation, and Democrats, who backed a smaller hike.

As part of the compromise, the subcommittee agreed that the whole subject would be considered again when the panel takes up long-range changes in Social Security, probably next year.

The subcommittee is now putting together legislation to keep the deficit-plagued Social Security system alive.

All the votes it is now taking are subject to later change or reversal. Burke, the panel chairman, predicted the move "wouldn't get 50 votes against it" if it reaches the House floor.

Partly offsetting the cost of raising the income lid, the subcommittee voted to remove from the law a quirk that allows a retired person to earn as much as he can in a month if he forfeits his benefits for that month.

The cost of raising the earnings limit was estimated at $2 billion in 1979, $2.4 billion in 1980 and $2.5 billion in 1981. The savings from eliminating the monthly option were calculated at $400 million a year.

The subcommittee recommended adding some six million federal, state and local government employes to the system.

Cancer check advocated

WASHINGTON (AP) — A national breast cancer detection program should be continued, but its use of breast X rays should be restricted because of their potential for causing the disease in some women, a National Cancer Institute advisory group said today.

The report, presented today at a breast cancer screening meeting, said X-raying breasts, a process called mammography, effectively finds cancer that goes undetected by other methods.

But too much is unknown about the possibility of radiation causing cancer for mammography to be used routinely on all women, particularly those under age 50, the study said.

Attending the meeting at the National Institutes of Health is a group of scientists, physicians and laypersons who hope to develop a consensus on whether the detection program should be continued and what it should include.

The report reviewed data from the $54 million Breast Cancer Detection Demonstration Project, cosponsored by the National Cancer Institute and the American Cancer Society, in which up to 270,000 volunteer women aged 35 and older are being screened for five years.

The value of the project has been questioned not only because of mammography, but also because it is still unclear if early detection improves longterm survival, as many medical authorities believe.

Project officials say the program so far has uncovered more than 2,500 cancers, using various screening methods.

The advisory group, headed by Dr. Oliver H. Beahrs of the Mayo Clinic, last January began reviewing the project to see what has been learned and if it could be applied to future controlled studies to resolve unanswered questions.

Black housing official may lead state's FmHA

WASHINGTON (AP) — A black state housing official from Virginia may be named state director of the federal government's Farmers Home Administration.

Officials of FmHA, an agency of the Agriculture Department, confirmed Wednesday that Edward A. Ragland, the state's executive director of housing, is being considered for the federal job.

If he is appointed, Ragland will be the second black to head state operations of FmHA, the department's biggest rural development agency. Lowell A. Pannell, San Jose, Calif., was named Sept. 9 to head state FmHA operations in California, Hawaii and Pacific island trust territories.

Ragland, 60, resides in Milford, Va., and is a career employe of the state. He taught vocational agriculture before going to work for the state and is a graduate of Virginia State College in Petersburg.

Officials say Ragland is being considered as part of a move to include more blacks, Hispanics and women in supervisory jobs in the agency.

The FmHA operates various loan and grant programs intended to help low-income farmers and other rural residents get better housing, expand agricultural production, improve community water and sewer services and develop small-town businesses and industries.

Congress this summer approved a 1977-78 budget for FmHA of more than $8.5 billion, up from about $6.6 billion for the current fiscal year. Most of the money, however, involves loans that are insured or guaranteed by the agency and originates from private lenders, not Treasury Department funds.

Women are being considered as candidates for FmHA state director jobs in a number of states, including Alabama, New York and Pennsylvania, according to agency officials.

At least two women, one of them black, also have moved into senior jobs with FmHA's headquarters here.

TO ALL CONCERNED TAX PAYERS

Why another taxing authority to take the tax payers money?

Why only 4 years after a building program, do we need another tax burden?

Why weren't these things considered 4 years ago?

Why not get the taxing control back in the hands of the people?

Why not get the citizens involved who plan on living in Midland for the rest of their lives?

Why not Free Enterprise and pride in good work?

Why are doctors working at the hospital, being paid by the hospital and they run a business in direct competition with the hospital?

Why not use the hospital (worth $8,000,000) as a bargaining agent for a loan?

Who are the owers or who will be if the bond issue and hospital district pass?

Why supply doctors with all updated equipment with no assist from them?

They should be in favor of the 2 issues -- We all would be if things came to us free.

Where did the money come from to buy the Mast Clinic (it's reported the Hospital owes 1½ million dollars)?

It has been stated publically that there were no alternatives in raising this $10,000,000. Is this true or, haven't they looked far enough?

If the issues are passed on Sept, 17 we may be paying 7 times more for indigent care than what is being paid at this time.

Do patients at the hospital know that up to $15.00 of their daily costs go towards indigent care and bad debts?

If these issues are passed, do you know that room rates will not be reduced?

Do you know, if we are taxed on these issues, that 9 cents will go toward paying the bond back and 6 cents goes toward indigent care and bad debts?

Why hasn't the success of a company run hospital in Big Spring been checked out to see what we are doing wrong?

Why, as reported, some citizens been told that if they vote and the issue passes, they will have to pay nothing at the hospital?

All meetings of all tax groups should be public and be publicized so all can attend.

According to news release, we are losing from $600,000 to $700,000 per year at hospital, is this good business?

Are we going to allow ourselves to be taxed more so we can pay for people who can but will not work?

It seems like instead of elected officials serving the people, the people are serving them.

A high official of Blue Cross/Blue Shield stated that better administration (being more efficient) and the fact that doctors should only send sick people to hospital we could have more room and better service.

Mexican-American community to celebrate independence day

By MARLEEN RAY

One hundred sixty-seven years ago, a creole priest named Miguel Hidalgo y Costilla urged his fellow Mexicans to revolt from Spain with a cry for independence.

This year, the Mexican-American community of Midland will echo that cry by celebrating Mexican Independence Day, Sept. 16. The Midland Eastside Lions Club has made plans for its Seventh Annual Sixteenth of September Fiesta Celebration for Sept. 15-18.

The Lions club members will kick off their celebration with a banquet at 8 p.m. today in the Midland County Exhibit Building.

At 8 p.m. Friday, the Lions Club will sponsor a dance, open to the public, at the exhibit building on E. Highway 80, featuring two bands, Los Magos de Mexico from El Paso and Los Regionales of Dallas. Tickets will be $4 per person at the door.

On Saturday, the festivities will begin with the official opening ceremony of the fiesta grounds at the exhibit building. In addition to a carnival, club member George Veloz said about 50 booths will offer for sale Mexican curios and samples of Mexican cuisine. Booths will be open from 1 p.m. to midnight. Veloz said many of the participants will be dressed in native Mexican costumes. Also, mariachi bands will play traditional Mexican music and a group of children from Cuidad Acuna will be doing some folk dances for entertainment.

Starting at 2 p.m. Saturday, a parade with about 50 floats, bands and vehicles is to travel from Midland High School through downtown to the Northgate Shopping Center. The parade will proceed south on "A" Street to Wall Street. Then it will go east on Wall to Main Street and north on Main to Illinois Avenue. Going east on Illinois, the parade will continue to Lamesa Road, and from there it will go north to the shopping center.

The fiesta queen's coronation will take place at 8 p.m. Saturday in the exhibit building. Susan Carrasco, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Carrasco of 1409 S. Terrell St., will be crowned queen, and Cindy Rendon, 15, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Rendon of 2111 N. Jackson, will be the princess. Following the coronation will be a dance with the same bands playing as did on Friday. Both events are open to the public, and tickets are $4 per person at the door.

Sunday, the booths will be open from noon unti midnight. At 2 p.m. the professional baseball team from Chihuahua will play against the Midlands Colts at Hogan Park. Tickets can be bought at the gate.

Money raised from the festivities will help fund the Lions' club projects.

Man charged in wife's death

LAMESA — A Lamesa man has been charged with murder in the shooting death of his wife Wednesday morning.

Raul Ramirez, 26, of Lamesa was being held this morning on $50,000 bond, said Lamesa Police Chief Lee Bartlett. He is charged with shooting his wife, Gloria Ramirez, 32, of Lamesa about 12:40 a.m. Wednesday, Bartlett s aid.

Bartlett said the shooting allegedly took place after a domestic quarrel.

Big 3 Day Fiesta today

It's time to dust and polish the old, dancing slippers because Las Palmas is sponsoring a series of dances during the Mexican Independence Day celebration, Sept. 15-18.

Called the Big 3 Day Fiesta, festivities will begin at 8 p.m. today with a coronation rehearsal dance at the Las Plamas Ballroom, 1140 S. County Rd. The Lucky Boys will provide the music, and tickets are $1.50 at the door.

Rosie Olgin, publicity chairman for the fiesta, said the coronation of the fiesta gueen will be held at 8 p.m. Friday at the ballroom. The queen will be awarded a $1,000 savings bond; the princess, a $600 one; the duchess, a $200 one, and the first lady, a $100 one. Following this event will be a dance, featuring the Mariachi Tapatio from Guadalajara, Mexico, and the Orquestra De Panchito Soltero.

Also, the Senoritas De Las Rosas Drill Team from Odessa College will perform during the dance. The team hopes to raise funds to go to Washington, D.C.

Tickets for the coronation and dance are $6 per person at the door.

Starting at 7 p.m. Saturday at the ballroom, trophies will be given to the queen, to Panchito Soltero for the best orchestra in West Texas, to Gracie Rayos and Jose Lopez for outstanding service to the Mexican-American community of Midland and to Mr. and Mrs. Paz Brito for outstanding service also. Miss Rayos and Lopez work as radio announcers for KJBC in Midland. Mr. and Mrs. Brito work at KNAM.

After the awards are presented, the mariachi band and Los Hermanos Alemans will play for dancers until 2 a.m. The drill team will also perform. Tickets will be available at the door.

Saturday afternoon the mariachi band, the queen and her court and the drill team will participate in the Midland Eastside Lions Club fiesta parade.

The last dance of the fiesta is set for 7 p.m. Sunday in the ballroom, Miss Olgin said. Tickets will be sold at the door.

Jaworski not planning Park visit

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Leon Jaworski held a closed session Wednesday with House Ethics Committee members and announced later that he had no immediate plans to question businessman-lobbyist Tongsun Park in Seoul.

"I have no bags packed or anything," Jaworski, the panel's special counsel, told reporters. He refused to say if South Korean leaders had invited him to interview Park, the indicted central figure in the congressional payoff case.

There were signs that delicate diplomatic maneuvering was still going on regarding U.S. interest in Park's testimony. Although indicted on 36 counts for making illegal payments to members of Congress, Park cannot legally be forced to return to Washington because the United States has no extradition treaty with South Korea.

Park Tong Jin, South Korea's foreign minister, arrived in the United States Wednesday only hours after telling reporters in Seoul that his government would help Jaworski to meet with Tongsun Park.

"All the possible ways could be explored within the framework of the Korean laws to enable Jaworski to have an interview," Minister Park said.

However, some ethics committee members are known to feel that such a Jaworski trip might be harmful. It could create the impression of cooperation by South Korea while actually producing nothing of value, one source said.

According to that reasoning, Park might not feel compelled to "tell all" because he would not be subject to U.S. legal process.

The South Korean prosecutor's office has also been questioning Park but U.S. officials say Park may not have violated any Korean laws.

One official noted that the Justice Department's indictment accused Park of having been a secret agent of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency. He questioned whether a Korean investigation into Park's affairs would be objective and impartial.

The foreign minister's trip to the United States was to attend the opening of the United Nations General Assembly in New York. Jaworski, when asked if he would meet with the official, said with a smile, "I can't answer that."

Benjamin R. Civiletti, chief of the Justice Department's criminal division, said he had been misquoted in a wire service report Tuesday that indicated the department might abandon its efforts to have Park returned here.

Civiletti said Wednesday the department would grant no concessions in its plan to prosecute Park in return for an interview by Jaworski or any other U.S. investigator.

"Our position is firm that we want him (Park) back in the United States," Civiletti told The Times. "He is a fugutive from justice and that's why our efforts are continuing."

Park, a Washington-based rice broker during the period he allegedly bribed congressmen, left the United States for London last year shortly after the investigation got under way. He has remained in Seoul since flying there last month, purportedly to visit his sick mother.

Rudd's surrender serves as 'echo' of war protests

By JOHN J. GOLDMAN
The Los Angeles Times

NEW YORK — He was an echo from the Vietnam war protest era as he walked with his lawyer up Center Street toward the Manhattan district attorney's office.

"There he is," someone shouted. Within seconds a stampede of newsmen and television reporters surrounded Mark Rudd, poking microphones and notepads into his face.

Rudd, a leader of the 1968 student rebellion at Columbia University, surrendered Wednesday after seven years underground. Startled passersby fearful of being trampled scampered out of the way or just stopped to stare at the fuss.

"I'd like to say, I'd like to get through here," Rudd, now 30, wisecracked. "I hope nobody picks my pocket.

"There is no point in asking questions. There will not be an answer," added Rudd's attorney, Gerald Lefcourt, guiding his client around the corner onto Leonard Street and up the stone steps into the D.A.'s lobby. Reporters chased behind while photographers fought for pictures and their balance.

For a brief moment after seven years in the shadows, the student leader of the Weather Underground was in the spotlight again.

Rudd disappeared early in 1970, several months before he was due to answer misdemeanor charges stemming from Columbia's antiwar protests and the takeover of some buildings by students. The violent confrontations were widely reported, and Rudd, as president of the local chapter of Students for a Democratic Society soon found himself covered in the national media.

All this seemed very far away and irrelevant Wednesday as he walked down the street in the glare of television lights. He is scheduled to repeat the scene in Chicago Thursday where he faces charges which include aggravated battery and resisting arrest stemming from demonstrations in that city in 1969.

Rudd's surfacing was symptomatic of a split which has developed among some of the remaining antiwar radicals. Some, like Jane Alpert, arrested in connection with a series of New York bombings, have given themselves up. Others, like Bernadine Dohrn, Kathy Boudin and William Ayers have stayed underground.

Clearly, Rudd was a sidewalk celebrity among the press. But his status stopped abruptly at the doorway of the criminal courts building. Inside, he was arraigned on charges of bail jumping and a variety of other misdemeanors in connection with the demonstrations at Columbia.

After expressing some doubts, Judge Milton Williams released Rudd without bail and set a hearing for Oct. 13.

In Maplewood, N.J., Rudd's family greeted news of his return happily. "He 's 30 years old. You get too old to be a revolutionary," said his father, Jacob, a retired army officer.

Would You Really Want A

HOSPITAL TAX DISTRICT???

If this taxing district can raise taxes on your home without your approval? The proponets of this issue say the tax will be $56.25 on a $50,000.00 home.. .the first year. Why don't they tell you that the taxes on the $50,000.00 home can be raised to $281.25 at any time and there is nothing you can do about it?

If you knew apartment dwellers rent was directly related to the taxes the landlord pays?

If you knew that almost 1½ MILLION DOLLARS of this money was going for architects fees, bond service and payment of old debts? Actually only 8 million will go for improvements.

If you knew that the TOTAL COST of this issue was going to be a minimum of 18 MILLION DOLLARS, and who can predict future indigent care costs?

If you knew the MULTI MILLION DOLLAR expansion recently completed at our hospital is now called inadequate by the hospital administration? Will this happen again in a few years?

If you knew departments in the hospital have been closed due to lack of staff?

If you knew the hospital occupancy rate was 70 to 75%?

These are facts. Where will it end? With other taxing districts sure to increase taxes due to past bond issues, with your home insurance increasing yearly and a 24% increase in your monthly electric bill probable can we really afford another taxing district?

It takes only moments to create a hospital tax district, but a lifetime to pay for a hospital tax district.

Feminists oppose commission

By DAVID WYSOCKI
Associated Press Writer

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Feminists are seeking to dump a women's rights commission which has opposed abortion, the Equal Rights Amendment, and the "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" TV show while supporting the lady bug as the state insect.

The latest flap surrounding the New Hampshire Commission on the Status of Women occurred when the panel rejected a program to help women who have been beaten by their husbands.

The panel saw it as an intrusion of government into the personal problems of New Hampshire citizens and rejected it 9-1 on Monday.

"You can't legislate love in the home. The government isn't designed to interfere here," said commissioner Simone Mason.

And commission member Gloria Belzil of Nashua simply said of the program's defeat, "Some women libbers irritate the hell out of their husbands."

The commission's record also includes support of prayer in the schools and opposition to the repeal of a law banning lesbian activities and to a federal family and child services program.

But the rejection of the battered wives plan outraged feminists groups and women legislators.

Painters plan fall show

Plans for an annual Fall Arts and Crafts Show and Sale were discussed when the Tuesday Painters of the Midland Palette Club met in the clubhouse at 604 N. Colorado St.

The sale will be held Nov. 19 in Dellwood Mall.

Marilyn Leierer, program chairman, conducted a show and tell program with each member participating.

Painting-of-the-month award went to Mrs. Jo Elliot for her oil painting of "West Texas Farm Land," which will be on display in Midland National Bank during September.

Mrs. Edna Walger of Midland will give a program on crafts at the October meeting.

Guests attending were Mrs. Alice Cole of Bakersfield, Calif., Mrs. Hettie Currie, Mrs. Carol Dean and Mrs. Ellen Dern. Hostesses were Paulin McWilliams, Irene Perryman and Jo Nell Harkrider.

Midkiff club plays bridge

MIDKIFF — The Midkiff Bridge Club met in the home of Mrs. Margaret Whorton, with Mrs. James C. Short Jr. and Mrs. Carlos Dusek attending as guests.

Mrs. Ray R. Barrett Jr. was high scorer and Mrs. Tennie Rosenbaum and Mrs. Willie D. Poynor won the special prize.

DEAR ABBY

Sex education 'puts' ideas into kids' heads

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I may be old-fashioned, but I can't see teaching sixth and seventh graders sex in the schoolroom. They are a long way from needing that kind of information. Why rush them? If you start putting ideas about sex into their heads, first thing you know, they'll start experimenting.

No wonder we have so many unmarried mothers among teenagers. I read in your column that venereal disease is now an epidemic in this country.

What can be done to stop all this sex education, Abby?— CONCERNED IN ILLINOIS

DEAR CONCERNED: If there really WERE all the sex education you claim there is, we'd have LESS teenage pregnancy and V.D.—not more.

No one has to put "ideas" about sex into the heads of children. It's there already. Sexual feelings and curiosity about sex are natural and normal in all children. And so is experimenting.

Ideally, parents should provide their children with a proper sex education, but surveys show that most of them do not, so some schools provide it. Unfortunately, the only states that have laws requiring sex education in the schools are Hawaii, Kentucky, Michigan, Maryland, Missouri and North Dakota. (Louisiana expressly forbids it.) The old saying, "What you don't know can't hurt you" is not true. On the contrary—it CAN hurt you. And it's hurting all of us.

DEAR ABBY: In reply to HURT WIFE, who asked, "What makes a happily married, religious man go to a place like a massage parlor?" you replied: "Curiosity. Lust. An itch for variety. The fear of missing something. Wanting to be 'one of the boys.' Being too chicken to refuse when one of his pals suggested it. Temporary insanity."

Abby, did it ever occur to you that maybe he just wanted a massage!—ARTHUR

DEAR ARTHUR: It's possible. But if YOU had been writing this column for more than 20 years, I'll bet that's the LAST answer you'd have come up with.

DEAR ABBY: Why do people place so much importance on manners? From the time kids learn to walk and talk, adults hassle them about manners and being polite.

I don't see what good it does to stand up when an older person or a lady comes into the room. And there are dozens of other rules that come under the heading of "manners" that make no sense at all.

Maybe you can explain it to me.—DON'T GET IT

DEAR DON'T: To answer your question, no one said it better than the late and great Amy Vanderbilt:

"Good manners are the traffic rules for society in general. Without good manners, living would be chaotic, human beings unbearable to each other. Reduced to a phrase, good manners is consideration of other people in respect to their feelings, their safety, their privacy and their full social rights and privileges."

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Non-smokers take over as next militant group

By ERMA BOMBECK

Mark my word. The next group of militants to dominate the American scene will be the non-smokers. I've seen it coming for a couple of years now.

The face-off started out civil enough. First, the non-smokers displayed a small sign with, "THANK YOU FOR NOT SMOKING." The smokers retaliated with a polite, but stiff, "YOU'RE WELCOME."

The smokers countered with, "Do you mind very much if we smoke?" to which the non-smokers replied with a smile, "Of course not. Just don't EXhale."

The exchanges have continued to gain momentum and every day, in this country a bumper sticker proclaiming, "I QUIT!" crashes into a bumper sticker maintaining, "I DIDN'T."

Airlines have become a battleground for the dissention. The segregation of smokers and non-smokers has divided wives and husbands, executives and clients, and has gotten some illicit weekends off to a shaky start!

Recently, on a guided tour, the sightseeing buses were divided into smoking and non-smoking. One day when a man boarded the non-smoking bus, someone noted he had a pack of cigarettes bulging in his shirt pocket. "He's one of them," cried a non-smoker. "We don't want your kind on this bus," he said. "Take your nicotine breath and your stained index finger back to your own group!" For a minute, I thought the poor man was going to be stoned as he made a hurried exit.

"You shouldn't have talked to your Father that way," said the woman. "I know Mom," he said, "but sometimes being cruel is a kindness."

The battle is going to get worse. There are evidences everyday.

Little things. Like a Marlboro man rode his horse on the lawn of a non-smoker in Wyoming the other day and made do do.

A sailor on one of the big ocean liners painted all the lifeboats SMOKERS ONLY. A smoker in New York daily goes around planting smoldering cigaretts on elevators and calling the N.Y. Times.

There is an underground movie being circulated showing that clean air causes bleeding gums.

Rumors have it that small fires are being started by militant smokers, but I don't for a minute buy that. I mean, have you ever known a smoker in your life who has a match on him?

Flavors blend well in these recipe using pork

By MARJORIE RICE
Copley News Service

Some things seem naturally to go together.

There are steak and baked potatoes; fish and chips; fried chicken, mashed potatoes and gravy.

Pork goes with mushrooms, with apples and even with chili.

Here are some recipes using pork.

PORK CHOPS WITH MUSHROOMS

1 lb. fresh mushrooms
5 tbsps. butter
Three-fourths cup chopped onions
1 cup bread cubes
2 tbsps. chopped parsley
One and one-fourth tsps. salt
One-fourth tsp. pepper
6 center-cut pork chops (one-inch thick)
2 tbsps. oil
1 beef bouillon cube
Water
One-half tsp. crumbled rosemary
1 tsp. paprika
1 tbsp. flour
1 cup plain yogurt
2 (10-ozs. each) pkgs. frozen leaf spinach

Rinse and pat dry fresh mushrooms; slice half and chop half; set aside.

In medium skillet, melt three tablespoons butter. Add onions; saute two minutes.

Stir in chopped mushrooms; saute two minutes longer. Mix in bread cubes, parsley, one-half teaspoon salt and one-eighth teaspoon pepper; set aside.

With a sharp knife, cut a pocket in each pork chop. Sprinkle outside of chops with three-fourths teaspoon salt mixed with one-eighth teaspoon black pepper. Stuff about one-fourth cup cooked mushroom mixture into each pocket. Secure with toothpicks.

In a large skillet, heat oil. Add chops, and brown about five minutes on each side. Remove chops from skillet; dissolve bouillon cube in one-half cup boiling water; add to skillet, blend with juices, scraping brown bits from skillet. Place chops in skillet; sprinkle with rosemary; bring to boil; reduce heat and simmer, covered, until chops are tender (45 minutes).

While chops cook, melt remaining two tablespoons butter in medium skillet. Add sliced mushrooms; saute two minutes. When chops are tender, remove from large skillet, and keep warm. Add sauteed sliced mushrooms to sauce in large skillet, along with paprika. Blend flour into sauce, cooking and stirring until thickened. Stir in yogurt (do not boil); return chops to skillet, cover and simmer for five minutes.

Cook spinach according to package directions; drain. To serve, arrange chops on bed of cooked spinach; spoon sauce over chops; sprinkle with chopped parsley. Serve with remaining sauce. Makes six servings.

ROAST PORK AND APPLES AND APPLEJACK

5 lb. pork loin roast (have chops cracked by butcher)
Three-fourths cup applejack (apple brandy)
1 tbsp. salt
Pepper, nutmeg to taste
One-fourth tsp. ground cloves
2 allspice berries, crushed
6 medium-size potatoes
6 large, tart apples
One-half cup brown sugar
One-fourth tsp. cinnamon

Marinate pork in applejack at least four hours (or can be marinated overnight), spooning liquid over meat several times. About three hours before serving time, drain and save marinade. Rub pork on all surfaces with salt and pepper; sprinkle on a liberal coating of freshly ground nutmeg and the cloves and allspice.

Put the meat on a rack in a roasting pan and roast in a 325-degree oven for two hours.

About one hour before serving, peel potatoes; boil in salted water for five minutes; drain; cut into quarters and pat dry.

Pour fat from roasting pan into a shallow pan; toss potatoes in fat. Remove pork from roasting pan. Peel, core and slice the apples and spread them in the roasting pan; sprinkle them with brown sugar and cinnamon.

Warm the reserved marinade, adding about one-fourth cup applejack. Set it aflame; pour over the apples. Place pork roast on the bed of apples; place partially cooked potatoes around the meat, and roast for 45 minutes more, or until pork is tender. (If meat seems to be getting dry, cover with foil.) Turn the potatoes about 30 minutes after they begin to roast. Makes eight servings.

CHILIED PORK CHOPS

4 thick loin chops
6 tbsps. oil
2 garlic cloves, finely chopped
1 medium onion, finely chopped
1 tsp. oregano
1 tsp. cumin
One and one-half tsps. salt
1 cup tomato sauce
2 tbsps. chili powder
2 tbsps. chopped, peeled, green chilies (long, green type; not jalapenos)
Fresh cilantro (coriander)

Sear chops very quickly in hot oil, turning several times until nicely browned. Pour off excess fat; reduce heat to medium. Add garlic and onion, and cook until wilted but not brown.

Add oregano, cumin, salt and tomato sauce; cover and simmer 10 minutes. Uncover; add chili powder and turn the chops. Simmer, uncovered, 10 minutes. Correct seasoning. Transfer chops to hot platter. Let the sauce boil for a minute or two, and spoon over the chops. Sprinkled on chopped chiles and cilantro. Serve with pinto or refried beans.

CLIP 'N COOK

APPLE SALAD

We've added olives and walnuts to the original pristine Waldorf combination of apple and celery.

1¼ cups pared diced (¼-inch) apple
¼ cup mayonnaise
¾ cup finely diced celery
¼ cup thinly sliced pimiento-stuffed green olives
¼ cup coarsely broken walnuts, preferably toasted
Lettuce

Stir together the apple and mayonnaise; stir in the celery, olives and walnuts. Serve at once on lettuce. If you want to make the salad mixture ahead, omit the nuts; cover and chill; just before serving stir in the nuts. Makes 4 servings.

Lazlo Toth, 'man of letters,' keeps postal workers shuffling

By BETH ANN KRIER
The Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — From a little corner of Hollywood, Lazlo Toth, American, has devised a plan to make California a "Free Enterprise Shangri La" and restore Richard M. Nixon to power. As Lazlo put it to Nixon, whom he has repeatedly advised and corresponded with over the years, "How about running for governor of California? And since President Ford is living in California, too, how about trying to talk him into running for lieutenant governor? I hope all of a sudden he doesn't think he's too good for No. 2. I can see the billboards now, the presidents for governor and lieutenant governor!"

Lazlo writes to Nixon a lot. And sometimes Nixon replies, always delicately acknowledging Lazo's concern and appreciating his support. Ford, too, became a Lazlo pen pal, starting when he was the newly installed Vice President and Lazlo dashed off a note of congratulations: "I was vice president of a lot of organizations myself so I know how you feel." Ford responded, saying, "It is reassuring to know your thoughts and to have your encouragement."

Lazlo sounds so sincere, so semi-informed — almost like a real member of the lunatic fringe — that he gets replies, sometimes even autographed pictures, from about 70 per cent of his correspondents, among them Henry Kissinger, King Faisal, Queen Elizabeth, H. R. Haldeman, John Ehrlichman, Gen. William Westmoreland, Francisco Franco and the Jet Propulsion Lab's Mars Team, Lazlo's favorite. When he asked the team, "How much would it cost for gasoline if it was possible to drive to Mars at present prices (53 cents per gallon — regular — self serve)?" a Viking Project scientist answered, "The trip to Mars is about 400 million miles. At 53 cents a gallon, say 20 miles to the gallon using a compact car, the cost would be about $10 million — but of course, there's no road yet. At 55 m.p.h., it would take about 8 million hours. That's about 10 centuries — sounds like a good trip. Bon voyage."

Don Novello has a good time at his typewriter. And he's been having an even better one lately at his mailbox where he retrieves all the letters people send to Lazlo.

A Hollywood comedian, perhaps best known for TV appearances as Farther Guido Sarducci, the Vatican gossip columnist and rock critic, Novello created Lazlo Toth four years ago originally as a personal amusement. He named Lazlo for Laszlo Toth, the man who vandalized Michelangelo's "Pieta" in Rome in 1972, thus the letters could be considered "culprit-to-culprit" correspondence. Novello has collected many of them in "The Lazlo Letters" (Workman Publishing Co.), which he dedicated to the men and women of the United States Postal Service. Lazlo's motto is inscribed on the first page — "You send out letters, you get back letters, that's for sure" — just above Lazlo's Citizen of the United States seal.

"When I started, the letters were pretty straight and short," says the slender, 34-year-old comic, drinking pear nectar in the study of his Hollywood apartment. The place is decorated with all the right touches: A newspaper ad for the late John Foster Dulles' estate jewelry sale. File cabinets marked "Unpopular Ideas" and "Beyond Our Control." A broken electric typewriter and one bearing an American Flag. A collage of Newsweek covers picturing Lazlo's heroes. And above the couch, a big poster of Jerry Ford with his arm around Betty under the words, "He's making us proud again." A bathroom off the study is marked "SHIPPING." Instead of towels and toothbrushes, it is outfitted with envelopes, stamps, glue, scissors and an empty bottle of Courvoisier brandy.

The remainder of the apartment he shares with is wife Kathy is simply, tastefully furnished, more indicative of the University of Dayton graduate who attended Arizona's American Graduate School for International Management because he wanted to work abroad and who later went into advertising. Starting in the mailroom of McCann-Erickson in New York and working his way up to assistant creative director and copy supervisor at Leo Burnett in Chicago, Novello learned the power of letters: three complaints killed one of his favorite campaigns.

"What happens in advertising is that as you progress you have to switch your loyalties from the business side to the creative side," he says. "I just wanted to make funny commercials."

Lazlo Toth's character — super-patriot, 60-ish Big Mac connoisseur — bloomed as Watergate unfolded. "They were lying to us during Watergate," Novello explains. "They would give us double-talk so Lazlo would give it back to them, telling them their ideas were working. They seemed to ignore the craziness of the letters. People will ignore any kind of craziness to sell themselves or their product."

One of Lazlo's finest Watergate moments came five months before Nixon's resignation. Nothing he had "just read in the newspaper where your former chief of staff, former chief domestic adviser, former attorney general, former assistant attorney general, former special counsel, former attorney and one of your former youthful aides were indicted," Lazlo wrote Nixon:

"What I think we should do is this: 1. Resign in April or May (whichever you prefer). This will be a real shock to the Nation and will serve the newspapers right. Millions of Americans will feel sorry for you and, to be honest, this will help. The country will also know what it's like to have Ford in there. Then, 2. After 'retiring' in Florida for a few months, on July, 4, 1975, you announce your plans to run for President in 1976! This will give you four more great years instead of three more mediocre years. You've got to admit, it makes sense."

Nixon sent Lazlo a printed card in appreciation of his "message of support." In time, Lazlo wrote and heard from most of the Watergate principals. Only John Mitchell never returned the favor.

But don't think Lazlo has limited himself to big-time political crises. He is a sensitive man, concerned for the personal welfare of his leaders. When Lazlo inquired about then Vice President Ford's reported LSD-spiked coffee incident in Chicago ("Are you OK? Are you still on it? Don't try to write back if you're still on it, your health is more important than my letter. I just hope there was no damage to your chromosomes") there was no acknowledgment. But when Lazlo advised President Ford on how to appear more normal after bumping his head ("It bothers me when you always say, 'It doesn't hurt.' It doesn't? This can give people the impression that something is the matter with your nerve endings! Next time you bump your head, say, 'It hurts a little.'") Ford sent him an autographed copy of the series of speeches he gave during the Bicentennial celebration.

Lazlo cares deeply about image, particularly the images of his heroes' wives and girlfriends. As he advised Henry Kissinger, "I hope your wife is a good traveling companion and that you don't miss dating. Someone told me that dating stuff was all public relations and that our President insisted you go out with all those Hollywood sex bombs just to make you look human. Anyway, I'm glad you've got that new wife (a good cover) so you can concentrate on helping our President and not have to worry about wining and dining those starlet kooks and having to go around looking like you were a sales rep for Frederick's of Hollywood or something. You are loved all over the world! Just like Coca-Cola."

DEATHS

Mrs. Williams dies Wednesday

COLEMAN — Mrs. Lucy Baker Williams, 83, of Valera, died Wednesday in a Brownwood community hospital. She was the mother of Mrs. Erma Campbell of Midland.

Services will be at 2:30 p.m. Friday in Stevens Funeral Home with burial in Glen Cove Cemetery, both directed by Stevens Funeral Home.

Mrs. Williams was born May 11, 1894, in Houston County. She was a resident of the Coleman area since 1905 and a member of Coleman Church of Christ.

Other survivors include another daughter, two sons, two sisters, 13 grandchildren and 26 great-grandchildren.

Omer L. Dunn dies at age 77

BIG SPRING — Omer L. Dunn, 77, died Tuesday at his home after a sudden illness.

Services are pending at Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home.

He was a veteran of the U.S. Navy.

Survivors include his widow, Dora; a daughter, Miss Rosa Dunn of Big Spring; two sons, Jim Dunn of Indiana and Omer Dunn Jr. of Arizona; two brothers, Brody Dunn and Edgar G. Dunn, both of Kentucky; a half brother, Paddie Dunn of Pennsylvania, and five grandchildren.

Bryant infant's services today

Amanda Leigh Bryant, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Bryant of Odessa, died Tuesday.

Graveside services were to be at 11 a.m. today in Resthaven Memorial Park in Midland directed by Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home. Bill Walker, minister of the A and Tennessee Streets Church of Christ, was to officiate.

The child is survived by her parents; a twin sister, Jame Terra Bryant, and grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Bryant of Odessa and Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Bittick of Midland.

Bobby Stocks' rites Friday

BIG SPRING — Robert Lee "Bobby" Stocks, 17, died Tuesday in his home in Big Spring. The dead youth was found by his mother in his bedroom. Howard County Justice of the Peace Bobby West said he would make a ruling after conferring with police.

Judge West said there was no sign of foul play.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Friday in Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home burial in Colorado City Cemetery.

Stocks was born Oct. 10, 1959, in Big Spring. He was a junior in high school.

Survivors include his mother, Mrs. Ina Stocks of Big Spring; his grandmother, Mrs. Grace Everick of Big Spring, and his grandfather, W. J. Everett of Merced, Calif.

Jaworski not planning Park visit

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Leon Jaworski held a closed session Wednesday with House Ethics Committee members and announced later that he had no immediate plans to question businessman-lobbyist Tongsun Park in Seoul.

"I have no bags packed or anything," Jaworski, the panel's special counsel, told reporters. He refused to say if South Korean leaders had invited him to interview Park, the indicted central figure in the congressional payoff case.

There were signs that delicate diplomatic maneuvering was still going on regarding U.S. interest in Park's testimony. Although indicted on 36 counts for making illegal payments to members of Congress, Park cannot legally be forced to return to Washington because the United States has no extradition treaty with South Korea.

Park Tong Jin, South Korea's foreign minister, arrived in the United States Wednesday only hours after telling reporters in Seoul that his government would help Jaworski to meet with Tongsun Park.

"All the possible ways could be explored within the framework of the Korean laws to enable Jaworski to have an interview," Minister Park said.

However, some ethics committee members are known to feel that such a Jaworski trip might be harmful. It could create the impression of cooperation by South Korea while actually producing nothing of value, one source said.

According to that reasoning, Park might not feel compelled to "tell all" because he would not be subject to U.S. legal process.

The South Korean prosecutor's office has also been questioning Park but U.S. officials say Park may not have violated any Korean laws.

One official noted that the Justice Department's indictment accused Park of having been a secret agent of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency. He questioned whether a Korean investigation into Park's affairs would be objective and impartial.

The foreign minister's trip to the United States was to attend the opening of the United Nations General Assembly in New York. Jaworski, when asked if he would meet with the official, said with a smile, "I can't answer that."

Benjamin R. Civiletti, chief of the Justice Department's criminal division, said he had been misquoted in a wire service report Tuesday that indicated the department might abandon its efforts to have Park returned here.

Civiletti said Wednesday the department would grant no concessions in its plan to prosecute Park in return for an interview by Jaworski or any other U.S. investigator.

"Our position is firm that we want him (Park) back in the United States," Civiletti told The Times. "He is a fugutive from justice and that's why our efforts are continuing."

Park, a Washington-based rice broker during the period he allegedly bribed congressmen, left the United States for London last year shortly after the investigation got under way. He has remained in Seoul since flying there last month, purportedly to visit his sick mother.

Rudd's surrender serves as 'echo' of war protests

By JOHN J. GOLDMAN
The Los Angeles Times

NEW YORK — He was an echo from the Vietnam war protest era as he walked with his lawyer up Center Street toward the Manhattan district attorney's office.

"There he is," someone shouted. Within seconds a stampede of newsmen and television reporters surrounded Mark Rudd, poking microphones and notepads into his face.

Rudd, a leader of the 1968 student rebellion at Columbia University, surrendered Wednesday after seven years underground. Startled passersby fearful of being trampled scampered out of the way or just stopped to stare at the fuss.

"I'd like to say, I'd like to get through here," Rudd, now 30, wisecracked. "I hope nobody picks my pocket.

"There is no point in asking questions. There will not be an answer," added Rudd's attorney, Gerald Lefcourt, guiding his client around the corner onto Leonard Street and up the stone steps into the D.A.'s lobby. Reporters chased behind while photographers fought for pictures and their balance.

For a brief moment after seven years in the shadows, the student leader of the Weather Underground was in the spotlight again.

Rudd disappeared early in 1970, several months before he was due to answer misdemeanor charges stemming from Columbia's antiwar protests and the takeover of some buildings by students. The violent confrontations were widely reported, and Rudd, an president of the local chapter of Students for a Democratic Society soon found himself covered in the national media.

All this seemed very far away and irrelevant Wednesday as he walked down the street in the glare of television lights. He is scheduled to repeat the scene in Chicago Thursday where he faces charges which include aggravated battery and resisting arrest stemming from demonstrations in that city in 1969.

Rudd's surfacing was symptomatic of a split which has developed among some of the remaining antiwar radicals. Some, like Jane Alpert, arrested in connection with a series of New York bombings, have given themselves up. Others, like Bernadine Dohrn, Kathy Boudin and William Ayers have stayed underground.

Clearly, Rudd was a sidewalk celebrity among the press. But his status stopped abruptly at the doorway of the criminal courts building. Inside, he was arraigned on charges of bail jumping and a variety of other misdemeanors in connection with the demonstrations at Columbia.

After expressing some doubts, Judge Milton Williams released Rudd without bail and set a hearing for Oct. 13.

In Maplewood, N.J., Rudd's family greeted news of his return happily. "He's 30 years old. You get too old to be a revolutionary," said his father, Jacob, a retired army officer.

HOSPITAL TAX DISTRICT???

If this taxing district can raise taxes on your home without your approval? The proponets of this issue say the tax will be $56.25 on a $50,000.00 home... the first year. Why don't they tell you that the taxes on the $50,000.00 home can be raised to $281.25 at any time and there is nothing you can do about it?

If you knew apartment dwellers rent was directly related to the taxes the landlord pays?

If you knew that almost 1½ MILLION DOLLARS of this money was going for architects fees, bond service and payment of old debts? Actually only 8 million will go for improvements.

If you knew that the TOTAL COST of this issue was going to be a minimum of 18 MILLION DOLLARS, and who can predict future indigent care costs?

If you knew the MULTI MILLION DOLLAR expansion recently completed at our hospital is now called inadequate by the hospital administration? Will this happen again in a few years?

If you knew departments in the hospital have been closed due to lack of staff?

If you knew the hospital occupancy rate was 70 to 75%?

These are facts. Where will it end? With other taxing districts sure to increase taxes due to past bond issues, with your home insurance increasing yearly and a 24% increase in your monthly electric bill probable can we really afford another taxing district?

It takes only moments to create a hospital tax district, but a lifetime to pay for a hospital tax district.

Feminists oppose commission

By DAVID WYSOCKI
Associated Press Writer

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Feminists are seeking to dump a women's rights commission which has opposed abortion, the Equal Rights Amendment, and the "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" TV show while supporting the lady bug as the state insect.

The latest flap surrounding the New Hampshire Commission on the Status of Women occurred when the panel rejected a program to help women who have been beaten by their husbands.

The panel saw it as an intrusion of government into the personal problems of New Hampshire citizens and rejected it 9-1 on Monday.

"You can't legislate love in the home. The government isn't designed to interfere here," said commissioner Simone Mason.

And commission member Gloria Belzil of Nashua simply said of the program's defeat, "Some women libbers irritate the hell out of their husbands."

The commission's record also includes support of prayer in the schools and opposition to the repeal of a law banning lesbian activities and to a federal family and child services program.

But the rejection of the battered wives plan outraged feminists groups and women legislators.

Commuters, 'love' motif spell profits for airline

DALLAS (AP) — Southwest Airlines was born an unwanted child in a crowded industry, but the young upstart with the "love" motif finally has gained a place in the Texas skies.

Behind it now are court victories over bigger competitors and a solid position in the profit column.

The Texas intrastate carrier was incorporated as Air Southwest Co. in 1967, but underwent a name change and a Supreme Court test spurred by interstate airlines before its first flights got off the ground in June 1971.

After heavy initial losses operating among Dallas, Houston and San Antonio airports, Southwest showed a net income in 1976 of $4.9 million.

Southwest didn't have to recruit a boss. M. Lamar Muse went after the job.

Muse, a non-pilot, took the reins as president in 1970 after stints with other airlines and as an independent financial consultant.

"This was something that was needed," Muse said. "I was sitting around doing nothing. Southwest a certificate with one employe and $145 in the bank."

The meld worked, and from an initial public offering at $11 per share, stock closed earlier this week at 22¾.

The airline inaugurates service today between Austin and Dallas, Corpus Christi, El Paso, Midland-Odessa and Lubbock. It also serves Harlingen in the Rio Grande Valley, San Antonio and Houston.

If Muse has his way, the airline's 737 fleet will add Beaumont-Port Arthur-Orange and Amarillo to the list of Texas destinations.

A spinoff, Midway Airway, would like to fly among several out-of-state points beginning in 1980 from a Chicago base.

The Chicago operation would be contingent upon the Civil Aeronautics Board letting Midway Airway operate under a two-tier rate structure, avoiding what Muse calls the "market-stifling fares" now a part of CAB approval.

That issue is at the heart of what Muse believes to be the secret to Southwest's success, and he thinks the CAB will knuckle under.

"The current climate is right," he said. "They'd be hard put to turn us are different from the ones we fly in Texas ...and they really aren't."

The commuter concept, combined with an ad campaign based on "love," —it flies out of Love Field in Dallas — and the two-tier rate structure has proved to be a winner in Texas.

Basically, the two-tier structure offers an executive fare during business hours and a lower fare during evenings and weekends. Depending on the number of legs involved in a given flight, those fares range from $15 to $60.

The commuter concept was bolstered by victories in hardfought battles to maintain service from close-in airports at Houston and Dallas as opposed to flying into and out of larger airports some distance from the business centers of both those cities.

As for love, it's everywhere.

Cocktails are "love potions," airplanes are "love birds," a cash register that dispenses a ticket in 10 seconds is a "love machine," and hostesses advise passengers to buckle up "because we love you."

The image conjures up pictures of leering, vested businessmen boozing it up and ogling the hostesses, with no women passengers in sight, and mention of that prompts Muse to tell you about his hobby.

"I always count people getting off our flights when I'm around," Muse said, "and sometimes I categorize them. Once I watched 36 people get off a Lubbock flight and only nine of them wore ties. And there were women on board, too."

He said Friday traffic includes many unescorted children, either dividing up time between divorced parents or off to see grandma in another city for a weekend baby-sitting fee of $15 one-way.

Originally, Muse said he spent two weeks in San Diego observing the operations of PSA, a California intrastate airline. "They weren't reluctant to help us at that time, because were were thinking about leasing three airplanes from them," he said. "When we decided not to lease them, we became persona non grata around there."

Asked his feelings about PSA now, Muse said, "I'd like to buy 'em and show 'em how to run an airline."

The feuds with Dallas-based Braniff International and Houston-based Texas International are nearly legendary. BI and TI (then Tran-Texas) fought against Southwest's original certificate from the Texas Aeronautics Commission and fought to have Southwest forced to operate from the outlying airports in Houston and Dallas. Southwest has been successful in all those fights.

Although Muse doesn't mind tweaking TI and BI, he defended Braniff's position in competition to fly to Europe from Dallas.

Latest reports seemed to favor Pan American in the race to Europe from Big D.

"It oughtta be Braniff," Muse said. "But the CAB is not known for rational decisions."

Meanwhile, Southwest soars merrily along, with August 1977 showing record income.

Two passengers departing Dallas for San Antonio this week were Rick Rogers, 29, of Irving, and Wanda Pellusch, 52, of Laredo.

"The price and being able to leave from Love Field are the big factors for me," Rogers said. "I've been flying Southwest for three years now and have never had a bad experience with them. And my wife and children go with me a lot, too."

Mrs. Pellusch said she's had bad experiences with another airline and would fly Southwest, given a choice.

Was Mrs. Pellusch offended by the "love" theme and the short-skirted, hostesses and the general ambience of the airline?

"Good gracious, no."

UT pinpoints grant by CIA

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — University of Texas officials said Wednesday the Central Intelligence Agency informed them that the university's engineering mechanics department at Austin was awarded a covert reserach grant in 1961 and 1962.

The announcement from the university followed news stories recently that CIA Director Stansfield Turner told congressional investigators that 44 colleges had been involved in research on altering human behavior.

The statement issued from the office of Asst. Deputy Chancellor Robert Hardesty said the UT project was funded by an unnamed private medical research foundation "and no one at the University of Texas was ever aware of CIA involvement."

The funding amounted to about $35,000 over a two-year period.

The grant grew out of the development at the university of a microscopic quartz "thermocoupler" capable of measuring heat changes in human cells.

The statement said the CIA became interested in the technique in 1961 because of its potential application "in connection with the problem of body antennas, personnel tagging, polygraphy and other areas."

The statement said a written report was made at the end of the two-year period but there was never any followup from the foundation. After the two years, other sources were found to support the research, the statement said.

Houston heroin conviction upset

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The heroin conviction of a woman seated on a sofa holding two dogs when Houston police broke into her house in 1973 was reversed Wednesday by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

Shirley Harrison was convicted with her husband and sentenced to 20 years in prison.

The appeals court ruled, however, that the evidence was insufficient to sustain the jury's verdict.

Police battered in her front door, which was secured by two steel bars, with a 16-pound sledge hammer and, according to court records, saw her husband disposing of heroin in the kitchen sink. Thirteen packets of heroin were found near the sink. The woman, however, "was in the living room, seated on a sofa holding two dogs and talking to them."

In reversing the conviction and sending the case back to Harris County, the appeals court noted that "a finding of joint possession cannot be justified solely by proof of mere presence of an accused at a place where contraband is being used or possessed."

'Jno. P. Butler Day'

Fifty years with one business firm certainly is quite an accomplishment — one which is achieved by comparatively few persons.

And when a person serves not only his firm but his community as well for half a century, it becomes all the more noteworthy.

And the Tall City of Midland today honors just such a person.

He is Jno. P. Butler, senior chairman of the board of The First National Bank of Midland — a gentleman of the first order, a top-flight bank executive, and the dean of Midland bankers.

Congratulations and all best wishes are directed to this distinguished banker and civic leader on "Jno. P. Butler Day," as proclaimed by Mayor Ernest Angelo, Jr.

It was 50 years ago today — Sept. 15, 1927 — that Jno. P. Butler, a native of Mount Calm, Tex., joined the staff of The First National Bank as a teller. He had advanced through the ranks, to assistant cashier and on to a vice president's slot before being elected president of the financial institution in 1953. Then, in 1963, he became chairman of the board. He was named senior chairman on Aug. 11, 1976. He has been a member of the board of directors since Jan. 11, 1944.

And today, Mr. and Mrs. Butler greeted hundreds of well-wishers at a public reception given in their honor in the bank's galleria.

Then tonight, stockholders of The First National and members of the financial community will honor the Butlers at a reception to be held in the Midland Hilton.

This is a day of well-merited recognition and honor for a Top Midlander and a Top West Texan.

Mr. Butler, a modest, friendly, good-natured man, has had a leading role in the rapid growth of The First National from a small bank with deposits of less than a million dollars in 1927 to the presently largest bank on the Missouri-Pacific Railroad between Fort Worth and El Paso, with deposits in the neighborhood of $400 million.

And during the same half-century, Mr. Butler has seen and been a very definite part of the growth and development of Midland from a small cowtown of a few thousand persons to the Headquarters City of the Permian Basin Empire of West Texas and Southeast New Mexico, with a population of more than 70,000. During the years it has become one of the nation's leading oil and gas centers.

Starting out by playing baseball on the town team when he first came to Midland, he has been a stellar player on the volunteer community growth and betterment team through his 50-year residence, playing any and all positions wherever and whenever called upon.

Mr. Butler has served on the City Council and as mayor pro tem; he is a past president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce and the Downtown Lions Club. He was the first chairman of the board of executors of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame. He since has been inducted into the museum's Hall of Fame, a just recognition of his leadership role in museum and petroleum affairs.

He is a former director of the El Paso Branch of the Federal Reserve Bank and is a past president of the South Plains Bankers Association. He is a former director of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, Independent Petroleum Association of America, Texas Good Roads Association, and other organizations.

He is a long-time member of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity and has served it in numerous official capacities. He also is a 32nd degree Mason and, likewise, has served Masonry in numerous capacities.

Midland Memorial Hospital also has been favored by his years of service as a governor, trustee and treasurer.

He has been recognized by Midland Jaycees as "Boss of the Year" and by the Woods W. Lynch Post of the American Legion as "Outstanding Citizen."

And on this particular occasion all Midlanders join in saluting Jno. P. Butler as "Outstanding Citizen for Half a Century" — a citizen who has worked and is working to make the Tall City even taller.

INSIDE REPORT:

Cracks discovered in plans for new CIA

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

Evans Novak

WASHINGTON — President Carter is now putting finishing touches on an executive order designed at long last to charter a future course for the beleaguered Central Intelligence Agency and end its vulnerability as Congress' favorite whipping post.

But the four-year victimization of the CIA has left deep wounds that the President's new charter can do little to cure. Indeed, even as Mr. Carter prepares to sign — perhaps this week — the executive order restyling the CIA, Adm. Stansfield Turner, CIA director and principal draftsman of the executive order, continues to alarm professional intelligence officers with sometimes heavy-handed internal reforms.

Chief of these is Turner's plan to fire some 800 senior intelligence officers out of a total 4,500, which he privately announced to top CIA staffers last month without elaboration or explanation. To some intelligence experts, both in the U.S. and among allied nations, the mass firings between now and Oct. 1, 1978, will create a pool of virtually unemployable, middle-aged intelligence agents some of whom might be ripe for going public with intelligence secrets (as many other ex-CIA agents have recently done) — or even for recruitment by the Soviet KGB.

A remarkably similar situation occurred following the bloody, post-Stalin political upheaval in the KGB in 1953, which produced an invaluable intelligence haul for the U.S. This was directly traceable to a sense of betrayal among ousted KGB agents as a result of the Kremlin's grim, heavy-handed reorganization of Soviet intelligence.

The Carter-Turner CIA reorganization has been drafted with scrupulous attention to legal detail so that the executive order can stand on its own without an immediate new congressional law (which can't be passed until next year). Accordingly, Turner's title will not be elevated to Director of National Intelligence, as originally planned. He remains Director of Central Intelligence with overall supervision of the government's ramified intelligence units but no day-to-day control over the operations of the Pentagon's National Reconnaissance Office (NRO) which controls U.S. satellite spies; the National Security Agency (NSA), responsible for communications intercepts among many other duties; and the Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA) with its Army, Navy and Air Force components.

In return for losing out in the bitterly contested power struggle over direct supervision of these peripheral but vital units, Turner will yield general budget control over all intelligence agencies and will be given new "tasking" powers to decide which one should perform different intelligence-gathering tasks.

In addition to the new National Tasking Center, to be headed by a Turner aide with Turner as chairman of a National Security Council committee with ultimate tasking authority, the executive order will also consolidate all intelligence analysis under Robert Bowie. He will head an office to be called the National Foreign Assessment Center, already nicknamed Infac.

Bowie is an experienced expert who headed the State Department's Policy Planning Staff under John Foster Dulles. He was brought into the CIA early this year from Harvard and in his new role must tap assessments and analyses from all intelligence units in the government. Presumably, Bowie will be responsible for the daily intelligence briefing given to the President.

That leaves human (as opposed to scientific) intelligence-gathering and secret or clandestine operations abroad — the source of the CIA's problem with Congress. Sen. Frank Church, chairman of the committee that investigated the CIA in 1975 and 1976, is insisting that the CIA's new charter spell out precise limitations on CIA's secret operations, including a specific veto on "conspiring to overthrow democratic governments." He wants these prohibitions repeated in the new law, a curious demand that both mystifies and angers some other Senators.

"So we spell out no overthrow of democratic governments," one Senator told us. "Does that mean full speed ahead in non-democratic countries?"

The President's executive order is expected to define broad procedures governing CIA dirty tricks, leaving specific prohibitions to congressional oversight committees which must be informed on all clandestine operations.

Experienced intelligence men, however, fear that the question of foreign operations may be moot in Turner's CIA, no matter what the new charter says. "He's a nut on the scientific gimmicks," one told us, "but doesn't put much stock in human-source intelligence or dirty tricks."

If so, the new CIA will start out hobbled in the always dangerous competition with the far-flung KGB.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

The Rev. Clennon King's career

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — America has produced few Don Quixotes more curious than the Rev. Clennon King, a gallavanting black knight, whose clanking crusades have led him into a host of misadventures.

His most celebrated sally was an attempt to join Jinmy Carter's segregated Baptist church in Plains, Ga. This turned out to be another tilt with the windmills. But King later pressed on to Hawaii for another joust with Carter's embattled former minister.

Next, the rambling reverend turned up in Washington where, for a moment of triumph, he attended Carter's new church. The last published account had hin lecturing the assembled Southern Christian Leadership Conference, which the revered Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., led to glory. The two Reverend Kings, it should be added, were not related.

Clennon King's public capers have given him a cloudy image. He is looked upon by some as a rabble rouser, by others as a civil rights symbol. It might be useful, therefore, to clear away the mist.

It took us more than two weeks, scattering messages across the country, to reach King. The phone at his Divine Mission Church in Albany, Ga., has been disconnected. Messages sometimes can be relayed to him through his neighbors, usually children, who answer the pay phone at the service station next door. But such messages often bring no results because, one of his friends told us, King is dodging bill collectors.

Even this tenuous link with the world may soon disappear. Our associate Jim Grady finally got the elusive reverend to answer the telephone at the Albany Journal, a weekly newspaper, which employs him as a part-time columnist and circulation assistant. King sadly informed us that his major concerns these days are financial; indeed, he said, his landlord had ordered his mission out of the building.

He assumes he will find the money to get by. He paid for his recent Hawaiian foray by writing checks on his hopeful account—and account he hope people will put money in, because he has none to support it.

The bankrupt but undaunted knight comes fron a prominent black Georgia family. He began offending his fellowmen as a young history teacher at Mississippi's all-black Alcorn College. He wrote a series of articles for a Mississippi newspaper offering a hazy brand of laissez-faire, vaguely segregationist attitudes toward America's racial problems. This infuriated Alcorn's black student body which brought enough pressure to get him fired.

Unrepetant, King took an even stronger stand in a series of articles for right-wing publications like the American Mercury. White racists ecstatically embraced this reasoned black man who preached a sophisticated form of segregation, suggested subtly that the integration movement was communist-tainted and charged that the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People "fights freedom."

After leaving Alcorn, King decided to further his own education. Never one to take an easy road, he picked the segregated University of Mississippi. This assault upon the windmills earned him a brief matriculation at the state insane asylum, courtesy of Mississippi officials who employed a tactic the Soviet KGB uses against dissidents.

King then began what he calls "the craziest part of my life... I became depersonalized, a dead man." He took off for California where his dreams continued to burst like soap bubbles. In November of 1959, according to San Diego Superior Court records, King took his wife of eight years and their six children to Rosarita Beach, Mexico, where he up and deserted them. King claims the separation was a mix-up, caused by his efforts to claim political asylum in Mexico.

Mrs. King went on welfare to feed her family, and the authorities issued a warrant for the errant knight. His prison rap sheet shows King had several brushes with the law before he was apprehended by the California authorities in 1966.

He was charged with resisting arrest in Jackson, Miss., abandonment in Woodbine, Ga., and vagrancy in New Orleans. In Honolulu, he ran afoul of the law in three separate incidents — interfering with the police, contempt of court and malicious injury.

In 1960, while he was still on the lam from the California police, the fugitive ran for president. He made the ballot in Alabama. A state official confirmed that King received ebout 2,000 votes, placing far behind the victorious John F. Kennedy.

Accounting for the time between his presidential campaign and prison conviction, King explained that he went to Africa and taught school. He had two turbulent trials before he was sent to a California prison on desertion charges.

The reverend was not a model prisoner. He bombarded officialdom with handwritten petitions and complaints. He renounced his U.S. citizenship, the ministry and God.

At one point, he changed his name to Lenin Lumumba Abdulah, not because he was enamored with the Muslin faith but, he said, because he thought these three names would annoy the establishment in America, Africa and Asia.

King didn't get out of prison until Feb. 12, 1970, transforming from a rebellious convict to a dean of the now-defunct Saints College in Mississippi. In 1973, he was back in Albany.

Now the affable, loquacious King has reached another juncture in his checkered career. His financial status is bad even by his standerds. But he plans to continue his crusades, with his goal now being "open churches" for everyone. He explains that the God he serves how is "bigger than the one I renounced in prison."

'Behind Closed Doors': Era of instant 'history'

WASHINGTON — After watching most of that 12-hour epic, "Washington: Behind Closed Doors," I must conclude that we truly live in an era of instant history. By opening the new season with this giant movie made for TV, the American Broadcasting Company hoped to get a head start in the ratings race, but unwittingly created a precedent for converting a still pungent yesterday into what passes for graven history.

Whatever its clumsy title, this is supposed to be the story of the Nixon Presidency, or a good piece of it, as adapted from John Ehrlichman's surprising novel, "The Company." Richard Monckton is obviously Richard Nixon, and CIA Director William Martin is Richard Helms, onetime CIA Director. There are characters for Kissinger, Haldeman, Mitchell, Magruder, and even good old Herb Klein.

Years ago, Orson Welles produced (and starred in) a magnificent film, "Citizen Kane," based on the life of William Randolph Hearst. But he did this at some risk, for Hearst threatened suits. In those days, a man's reputation, particularly a tycoon, still had some worth, and people in the fiction or entertainment business had to be careful.

Even as recently as the Mid-Sixties, there was some trouble from the family of Gen. George S. Patton when the movie about his role in World War II was being made.

But how could Nixon or others in his administration every complain about the way they are rendered in this ABC epic? They are, as George Orwell correctly prophesized, "Unpersons," deserving no due, not even a phone call. In Orwell's absolutely brilliant "1984," history is rewritten, truth becomes fiction, and that which does not serve the moment goes down the "memory hole," a giant incinerator for nagging doubts.

Because of Big Media, particularly television power, we live in a time of instant good and bad guys, improvisation on history, complexities made simple through drama. Since there is an absolute perception of Nixon and his gang as an evil bunch indeed, "Washington: Behind Closed Doors" is compelled not only to render that "truth," but to embroider it, lay it on, make it hit the viewer right between the eyes, lest he switch channels for "The Hindenberg" or some other light diversion.

So for six nights we saw Jason Robards (Monckton-Nixon) growling, thundering, plotting to get his enemies, lusting for power and seemingly damned little interested in Preserving the Republic. Robert Vaughn (Flaherty-Halderman) is strong, cold, curt, disagreeable to the point of cruelty, never in a gentle moment. The rest of the Nixon, whoops, Monckton gang are just as they were portrayed in the Watergate era, a bad lot deserving perdition.

Somehow the Kissinger character, Carl Tessier, comes off as a quiet, scholarly man, though capable of enjoying a little remote violence now and then, if produced by the U.S. military.

When Ehrlichman wrote the novel from his sanctuary in Santa Fe, he had generally come to peace with his antagonists with one exception — the CIA. Oh, how Ehrlichman detested the CIA, and how deeply he felt that the "Company" double-crossed him Thus his novel focused on that celebrated agency and its relationship to the President.

But the writers and producers of the TV version only used the Ehrlichman slice as a jumping off place to paint a raft of black stories. They hate Nixon and always have, and so do the actors they chose. Still, Jason Robards came off mostly as Jason Robards, and Robert Vaughn kept me thinking of "The Man From UNCLE." Purists could find 101 errors in this week of Monckton-Nixon, and many flaws, one being that Henry Kissinger is quiet and scholarly. Kissinger ranted and raved the loudest of anybody in the Nixon White House, and relied more on political wile than books to shape his actions.

Anyway, does the American public now believe that what they saw is the way it was in the Nixon years? Did the Nixon people do nothing but conspire, punish, and pant for power? Was there never a kind word or a reasonable action?

If the people who plan and create television are mostly of one persuasion, and have license to render history as they want it to be, ala "1984," are we not all captives then, obliged to study elsewhere for truth? Or is all this just entertainment, and being entertainment, not to be taken seriously? As a matter of fact, should government and politics' be taken seriously?

What if it changes and one day utter reactionaries plan and create television and decide to do the Presidencies of Harry S Truman, John F. Kenpedy, Lyndon B. Johnsen and James Earl Carter Jr.?

Will we see Truman (as he once did) enjoying wire-tap transcripts? Will Kennedy be shown in bed (as the Washington Post reported) with the woman who turned him onto marijuana, joking about the drug conference he was to greet? Will we see L.B.J. in his profane moments scolding enemies, reading FBI and IRS files on friends, and kneeling at bedside in prayer with Billy Graham?

Will a Bert Lance character toss money about like a bishop spraying holy water and nearby a big-toothed Southern President slyly clutching his Bible? Will Gerald Ford, the irrepressible "nice guy," come off as secret sinner? Will the real Kissinger ever be shown?

As George Orwell reminded us in "1984":

WAR IS PEACE
IGNORANCE IS STRENGTH

Lance insists he won't quit after defense

By W. DALE NELSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bert Lance is insisting he will not resign as director of the Office of Management and Budget, even after he completes his testimony before a Senate committee investigating his financial affairs.

The Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, which originally approved Lance's appointment to the White House post, had heard a week of testimony on Lance's financial past before getting the former Georgia banker on the stand today.

Lance, a long time friend of President Carter, worked for several hours in his office Wednesday night, preparing a statement for the committee. He arrived home after midnight and told waiting reporters his mood was "very good."

In the last week, as the congressional panel heard testimony from a variety of witnesses, Lance steadfastly maintained that he did no wrong in his years as a banker.

But the committee also heard allegations from government investigators that the banks Lance headed were inefficiently and improperly run, that Lance and his wife overdrew their accounts in six figures and that the Georgian had used bankowned aircraft for private or political use.

In addition, there were statements about large loans to Lance from big banks that had special relationships with his bank, including so-called "correspondent" accounts in which Lance's bank placed money in the larger banks, but drew no interest.

Probably the question in which the senators have the most interest is whether, as some of them suggested during the hearings, Lance helped conceal information that they say would have caused them to reject his confirmation as budget director.

While the President first defended Lance, then settled into a silence about his troubles, there were unofficial suggestions from White House workers that Lance would have to leave after having his day before the committee.

But Lance confounded the speculation, telling reporters for the second straight day Wednesday that he will stick to his post.

Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee, after watching Lance on television, said, "He had the look of a man who wasn't going to resign. I'm beginning to think most people are wrong and that he's going to stay."

Baker, in a meeting with reporters, also said criticism of Lance and the Carter administration's response to it did not appear to be hurting President Carter's legislative program in Congress.

Meanwhile, Sen. Charles Percy of Illinois, ranking Republican on the committee, said he was satisfied with an apology from Carter's press secretary, Jody Powell.

Powell, obviously not expecting to be identified as the source, told the Washington bureau of the Chicago Sun-Times he had heard rumors that Percy had used a Bell & Howell airplane during his 1972 re-election campaign.

The Sun-Times reported the tip as coming from Powell and carried Percy's denial. Percy, who used to be chairman of the board of Bell & Howell, said the corporation never even owned an airplane.

Calhoun stands by its man

CALHOUN, Ga. (AP) — It was like an old-fashioned revival meeting as the hometown folks stomped their feet, prayed and cheered one of their own — Bert "Good Ole Georgia Boy" Lance.

About 1,500 people — more than one-fifth of Calhoun's population — turned out in a demonstration of support for the director of the federal Office of Management and Budget on the eve of his appearance before a Senate panel investigating his financial affairs.

The crowd gave a standing ovation as the high school band played "You'll Never Walk Alone" and "I Did It My Way."

They had placards saying "Calhoun for Bert" and "Bert's A Good Ole Georgia Boy." They used words like "love," "friendship," and "honesty" to describe Lance, who did not attend the rally.

"I'll tell you what kind of a guy he is," said Jack Purcell, who used to be the catcher on the softball team when Lance was pitcher.

"I called him up last year to come speak to the graduating class of the school where I was principal. And even though it rained and the loudspeakers didn't work, he came and he spoke. And when I sent him a check for speaking to the class, he sent the check back because he didn't do it for the money. That's the kind of guy Bert is."

A downpour drove the crowd from the high school football field across the street to a gymnasium, but it didn't dampen their spirits.

Lance's minister, the Rev. Emory Brackman, told of the "very generous" contributions of time and money that Lance and his wife, LaBelle, made to the First Methodist Church. He recalled that Lance received "the highest honor" a United Methodist can receive when he was elected to the church's General Conference.

Lt. Gov. Zell Miller, who shared a double desk with Lance in grammar school, accused the news media of distorting the Lance affair. He denied a statement in an article in a national magazine that quoted him as saying Lance was a poor arithmetic student.

"Powerful and ruthless forces" — whom he later identified as the federal bureaucracy — have attacked Lance, Miller said.

"To say that Bert Lance has done something wrong does not make it so," he said.

Though some of the spectators admitted to doubts about the ethics of Lance's moneyhandling, most didn't want to talk about finances or politics.

They wanted to talk about the backslapping, joke-telling Bert Lance who married his high school sweetheart and helped his neighbors as he rose from a 19-year-old bank teller to a 32-year-old bank president.

Military airplane crash kills 20 persons aboard

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — An Air Force plane slammed into a mountainside on a high security Army base, killing all 20 persons aboard when it exploded on impact a half mile from any bunker containing fissionable material, authorities said.

The four-engine plane crashed on Manzano Base, where nuclear weapons are stored, three minutes after its take off from Kirtland Air Force Base at 11:45 p.m. Wednesday.

Kirtland base operations confirmed there were no survivors, said Walter Sprick of the Federal Aviation Administration.

Air Force crews using flares and helicopter spotlights recovered at least 15 bodies in a predawn search. Authorities said they did not know whether all of the victims were military personnel.

The plane was assigned to the Tactical Air Command and was used for command and control missions and to accompany fighter aircraft on longrange deployment, a military spokesman said.

An air traffic controller said he tried to warn the pilot the plane was in trouble.

"The first indication we had he was in trouble was when the radar showed he was too close to the mountain and flying too low," said the controller.

"We hit him on the guard frequency and told him to turn right and climb ... but he never did," he said.

The jet was a communications aircraft based at Seymour Johnson Air Force Base in Goldsboro, N.C. An Air Force spokesman said it was on a training mission and was on its way to Nellis Air Force Base in Nevada.

The EC135, described as a "modified 707," stopped in Albuquerque to refuel, the spokesman said.

The plane crashed about 8,500 feet up the Manzano Mountain range, about five miles east of the Kirtland runway.

Senate change of plan on energy 'dramatic'

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Senate Energy Committee Wednesday rejected President Carter's plan to require changes in electric utility rate structures to save energy.

Instead, it approved without objection a limit on the federal government's role in state regulatory proceedings.

It was the most severe setback Carter's omnibus energy-saving bill has encountered in the Senate. The legislation also may face a tough test in the Senate Finance Committee, which begins voting on tax portions of the bill next week.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson (D-Wash.), energy committee chairman who had loyally supported other nontax parts of the bill, summed up committee sentiment by saying:

"I don't want the federal government to take over state functions. We seek the same goals (as the President) but by different means."

A Department of Energy official who attended the committee meeting would not comment on the administration's reaction but conceded the committee had made a "dramatic" change in the President's bill.

Carter's bill, as approved by the House, would have ordered state utility commissions to order specific changes in utilities' rate structures to conserve energy. Electricity could no longer be sold below cost to big users. Cheaper rates would be offered customers using power at off-peak times.

When the committee met Wednesday to vote on these provisions, Sen. J. Bennett Johnston (D-La.) said he didn't believe sufficient hearings had been held to enable the committee to "act prudently." He added that he opposed letting the federal government help shape utility rate structures because it would be "liable to drive away their capital."

Sen. James A. McClure (R-Idaho) said the federal government's record as a regulator has not been good enough to give it any more authority in the field.

Sen. Pete V. Domenici (R-N.M.) moved to defer any action on the subject until more hearings could be held. "No one on this committee knows how to deal with this problem," he said. "We just aren't ready." That proposal was defeated, 12 to 6.

Midlanders express views on proposed hospital district

By GEORGE H. JOHNSTON

A majority of 11 Midland residents interviewed Wednesday said they will support the proposed hospital district and $10 million bond issue at the polls Saturday.

Of the 11 interviewed at a west Midland department store, six said they support the issue, two are against and three are undecided.

However, two of the undecided said they will probably vote for the proposals.

Forrest Pendleton, 4736 Wilshire Dr., said he is voting for the proposal for the "obvious reason private donations can't maintain the hospital anymore."

"I feel I am going to have to vote for the (hospital) and bond issue," Pendleton said.

Although he will not like the extra taxes, Pendleton said the taxes are the only way to maintain the hospital as it should be.

A private hospital corporation has been one alternative proposed to meet hospital needs. But Pendleton said his understanding is that a private corporation does not want to come into Midland because they could not make any money.

Mrs. Edwin Davis, 2408 Emerson Court, said she will vote against the proposals because taxes will be raised.

"I realize we need it hospital improvements, but not under the condition that taxes be raised," Mrs. Davis said.

The taxes shouldn't be such a burden on the property owners. Others should pay also, Mrs. Davis said.

A city sales tax might be a more equitable way of taxation, Mrs. Davis believes. But she is worried that taxes will be continually raised.

"Where's it going to stop?" she

Opinions expressed on hospital proposals

asked.

H. D. Williams, 2304 Princeton, said he is undecided, but the higher taxes may also cause him to vote against the proposals.

"We can't be turning around asking for more taxes. There is a limit for everything even in Midland," Williams said.

Williams, who has been a Midland resident since 1926, said he believes we need the hospital district and improvements, "but I am getting fed up with paying everyone's bills all the time."

There are a lot of people in Midland who won't work for less than $3.50 to $4 an hour," Williams said.

Mrs. John Pearson, 3905 Anetta Dr., said she is voting for the proposal because it is something she will use.

"We pay taxes when we may not have a child in school, and we pay taxes on a college when we probably will never use it. But there are some people who cannot see to pay taxes on a hospital they will use," Mrs. Pearson said.

Mickey Somers, 2005 W. College Ave. said he is still undecided about the proposals, but will probably vote for them.

Somers said he has not decided if he will vote at all, but in any case, he said he will not vote against the proposals.

"A hospital is something you can't build all of a sudden when you need it. It's not going to cost each individual that much money," Somers said.

Another person who is against the proposals is Jim Barron of 11 Mariner Court.

Barron said he feels there has not been enough information to merit a vote for the proposals.

However, he said he agrees hospital improvements need to be made.

Barron said another reason he could not support the proposals is that when the hospital was first set up, it was promised that the hospital would not become a tax burden.

"Everyone was afraid of that and after all these years it has become a tax burden," Barron said.

"I know we don't need any more taxes," he added.

Mrs. Ann Harper, 1511 Garden City Highway, said she is undecided, but will probably vote for the proposals.

However, she said she was concerned about the "high rates" the hospital currently charges.

"Instead of the bond issue, it looks like they could do something with the high rates they charge," Mrs. Harper said.

Mrs. Harper said she is also concerned about people who pay their hospital bills getting the same service as those who don't.

"My husbamd and I save our money so we can pay if we get sick. But there are people who don't save their money, then don't pay when they do get sick. There are a lot of things they do over there that are not fair," she said.

"But of course we need a good hospital," she added.

Another person who said he will vote yes Saturday is Ray Plumlee of 2601 N. A St. Apt 122.

"The public health service is in a sad state considering the population," Plumlee said.

Plumlee said he has received plenty of information about the proposals through the news media. But he added that he did not know how much attention other people have paid to the proposals.

Mrs. Donald Brotherton of 3617 W. Shandon said she is voting for the proposals because "it (Midland Memorial) is the only good hospital we have."

Mrs. Brotherton said she has a family which uses the hospital often, and she said she will not mind the extra taxes.

"You pay for anything good you get," she said.

Mrs. Matilda Valdez of 308 Gist said she believes it is right to have a bigger hospital.

"I won't mind paying the extra taxes. I think it will be good for the kids to have an improved hospital. Everyday you have sick people," Mrs. Valdez said.

Mrs. John Berry, 2014 Sinclair Ave., said she will vote for the proposals because she believes the hospital needs improvement. "I have not been satisfied the few times I've been in the emergency room," Mrs. Berry said.

Protection of wilderness asked

By JAMES PHILLIPS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary Cecil D. Andrus is asking Congress to preserve more than 90 million acres of Alaska wilderness, a move expected to spark an environmental battle of epic proportions.

At issue is the future course of the nation's last frontier, thousands of square miles of wilderness lands whose development will be determined by Congress.

The battle pits preservationists against developers.

Andrus seeks to protect an area almost the size of California for national parks, wildlife refuges, wild and scenic rivers and national forests. Estimates of the amount of land Andrus will ask Congress to preserve range from 91.6 million acres to 92.8 million acres.

Environmentalists want even more land to be protected from development. In bills before Congress, they are asking that nearly 120 million acres be preserved.

Developers argue that the amount of land to be preserved is far too extensive and would block future development of oil and gas reserves, minerals and timber.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce filed suit Wednesday to block Andrus from testifying today before a House subcommittee, arguing unsuccessfully in U.S. District Court that the secretary is required by law to file an environmental impact statement before testifying.

According to Fred Krebs, a chamber attorney, the suit was prompted by "a fairly good cross section" of the mining, timber, oil and gas interests within the chamber.

Andrus' proposal is expected to break down as follows: national parks, 42.6 million acres; wildlife refuges, game ranges and wildlife preserves, 46.6 million acres; wild and scenic rivers, 2 million acres; national forests, 1.6 million acres.

Andrus' anticipated proposal — if enacted by Congress — would more than double the size of the existing national park system and the wildlife refuge system.

One proposed park contains a glacier bigger than the state of Rhode Island — and it is not the only glacier in the park. Nor is the glacier the park's pre-emminent feature.

Other lands Andrus is expected to protect include the Yukon Flats, flat tundra inundated with potholes and sloughs which provide nesting grounds for approximately one million waterfowl, the largest nesting concentration of wildfowl within the United States.

Other areas include estuaries for spawning salmon and herring; coastal habitat for sea lions, walruses, whales and sea otters; rugged mountain ranges; rolling lands and timbered islands and shoreline.

Ethiopia captures Soviet arms

The Washington Post

DIRE DAWA, Ethiopia — The Ethiopian government Wednesday presented the strongest evidence to date in support of its contention that the Somalian regular army is directly involved in the war under way in the Ogaden region of southeastern Ethiopia.

Flying a group of foreign correspondents to this city 300 miles east of the capital, the government displayed a vast array of Soviet arms captured in what was apparently a major Somali attempt to take Dire Dawa a month ago.

Inlcuded among the captured items were four T-55 tanks, five armored cars, three rocket launchers, about 20 trucks and a vareity of artillery pieces. All bore clear Somali markings, such as license plates, and were of Soviet manufacture. Somalia has obtained all of its armaments from the Soviet Union.

In addition to these items, correspondents were taken on a tour of the two approaches north and northeast of the city reportedly used by the Somalis in their attack on Dire Dawa Aug. 16-17, and shown five other Soviet-built T-55 tanks either knocked out in the fighting or disabled when they fell into a nearby river bed.

According to Ethiopian government claims that Western diplomatic sources here say are fairly accurate, the Somali army has now lost more than 100 tanks, or roughly one-third of its total force. About 28 Somali MIGs have also reporteldy been shot down and an Ethiopian officer said here Wednesday that all but four were destroyed in air engagements with American-built F-5 jet fighters sent to Ethiopia before it cut off military ties to the United States last April.

Somalia still insists that its regular army is not engaged in the warfare and that it is the Western Somali Liberation Front that is responsible for all the fighting, with only moral and material support from the Somali government. The war is being fought over a 800,000square mile tract of Ethiopian land to which Somali lays claim.

However, the evidence presented here to the 25 visiting foreign correspondents, more than half of them Western and the others from Communist countries, now seems to confirm the Ethiopian assertion that the regular Somali army is totally and directly involved in the war.

The trip took place as heavy fighting continued for the fifth straight day between the forces of the two neighboring Soviet-backed countries around Jigjiga, the site of an Ethiopian tank center about 100 miles east of here. More than 100 tanks and thousands of Somali and Ethiopian troops are reportedly involved inthe fighting.

The battle there has turned into a major test of strength between the two armies and is shaping up as a crucial turning point in the seven-week-old war that now probably ranks as the largest ever fought between two independent states in black Africa.

Toll rises to 23 dead $50 million in damages

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The death toll in the Kansas City flash flood rose to 23 today while the damage estimate climbed to $50 million.

Twenty-two bodies were found in Kansas City. The 23rd body was found in Leavenworth, Kan., about 35 miles to the northwest.

City and county officials estimated that about 1,000 persons were still homeless because of the 12 inches of rain that fell in a 24-hour period Monday. The torrential rain caused Brush Creek to overflow its banks along the exclusive Country Club Plaza shopping center and pour into the Blue River.

The National Weather Service named a five-member team Wednesday to find out why advance flash flood warnings didn't prevent the deaths.

Mayor Charles Wheeler returned to his inundated city Wednesday night after cutting short a European trade mission.

Hours before his arrival, President Carter declared five Missouri counties disaster areas, making residents, small businesses and local governments eligible for low-cost loans and grants.

Four bodies were discovered Wednesday during clean-up operations — two of them along a creek bank about 1½ miles from the Blue River.

Electricity and natural gas service gradually was being restored, and Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. reported the only major unrepaired damage. A Bell spokesman said Wednesday 10,000 phone connections had been repaired, but 12,000 were out of service early today and some of them may not return until Friday.

Weekend Scout meeting planned

Representatives from the Big Country Area Conference for the Buffalo Trail Councils of Boy Scouts will meet Friday and Saturday in the Midland Hilton.

Registration opens at 9 a.m. Friday. The conference will close with a Saturday luncheon, District, council and area personnel will be participating.

Ryals appointed fire marshall

BIG SPRING — A 16-year veteran of the Big Spring Fire Department, Lt. Jim Ryals, has been named new fire marshall for Big Spring.

He will replace Coulton Wright. Ryals joined the department in 1961.

Suspect arrested

Midland police arrested a 23-year-old Midland man late Wednesday in connection with the reported rape of a 14-year-old girl Monday.

John I. Crisp of 1200 N. Terrell St. was charged with rape of a child today before Peace Justice Robert H. Pine, who set bond at $2,500.

Crisp remained in the city jail today.

MARIJUANA ARREST

A 17-year-old Midland man surrendered to Sheriff's deputies Wednesday after a search of his residence turned up about 2 pounds of a substance believed to be marijuana.

Robert L. Richardson of 4405 N. Garfield St. posted a $5,000 bond for charges of felony marijuana possession Wednesday, according to a sheriff's office spokesman.

Transportation to polls offered

Casa de Amigos will offer free transportation to the polls Saturday so persons can vote in the hospital district and bond issue election.

Persons wanting the service may contact Casa de Amigos by calling 682-9701. The person answering the phone will be bilingual.

Hospital favored in verdict

A Midland County jury Wednesday returned a verdict in favor of Midland Memorial Hospital in a suit brought against it by Guy E. and Laverne Saunders of Midland.

The suit grew out of an alleged Oct. 16, 1974, incident.

The Saunders alleged that Midland Memorial personnel had been negligent in tranferring Mrs. Saunders from a stretcher to an operating table, causing her shoulder to be wrenched, said Perry Davis, attorney representing the hospital.

The Saunders maintained Mrs. Saunders had to have surgery on her shoulder as a result of the alleged incident.

Hospital personnel denied the incident took place and said the problem with Mrs. Saunders' shoulder resulted from failure to use the shoulder, Davis said.

The jury returned the verdict in 142nd District Court after deliberating about 20 minutes, Davis said.

Loan officer's trial begins in federal court

The trial of former Odessa savings and loan officer Warren Boydston Moore, charged with misapplying almost $2.2 million, began Wednesday in federal district court in Midland.

Moore, 39, is former vice-president of First Savings and Loan Association of Odessa. He is charged with five counts of misapplication of funds. He is accused of siphoning off the money, through use of the savings and loan computer, into accounts set up under fictitious names in Midland, Odessa and Atlanta, Ga.

Moore has pleaded innocent to all the charges against him.

In testimony Wednesday, Emil Beck, manager of First Savings and Loan Association of Odessa, told the jury Moore was hired as a consultant to help establish the association's computer system. He later was promoted to vice president, Beck said.

All but $24,000 of the missing money has been recovered through Moore's cooperation, Beck said.

Defense cross-examination of prosecution witnesses Wednesday dealt in large part with whether information leading to Moore's indictment was obtained before he was warned of his rights.

Although September days thus far have been almost summery warm, many Midlanders are closing windows and getting out blankets to keep warm at night.

The weatherman is predicting more of the same, with mostly fair weather through Friday. Tonight's low is expected to be in the low 60s but Friday's high is expected to be in the mid-90s.

Winds should be from the south to southeast at 5 to 10 mph tonight.

Cool and clear weather was reported this morning in Andrews, Lamesa, Crane, Stanton, Rankin, Big Lake and Big Spring.

Buffs, Badgers boastin'

Area football powers seem safe another week

By TERRY WILLIAMSON

Before the space program and West Texas football, they said, "What goes up, must come down."

Well that old bucket doesn't hold much water any more, and most area powers appear to be safe from falling for a least another week. But at least, they are saying now, "Anything can happen." So the spirit of mystery still lingers.

Stanton's thundering herd of Buffaloes will trek to McCamey Friday night, and no one expects the Buffs to lose a wheel here with Marvin Jones having already cranked out seven touchdowns and 298 yards rushing in two previous games.

BUT THE Badgers are laying in wait after pulling off their first victory last weekend over Reagan County, 27-20. The Badgers finally have some offense going, and they don't want to lose that even against the likes of the powerful Buffs.

Andrews' highly ranked Mustangs host Brownfield Friday in what could be the biggest mismatch since King Kong took on the United States Air Force. The Cubs haven't shown too much this season, and Andrews seems to be in the winning groove now after belting Lamesa, 35-3, last week.

Mustang quarterback Booger Brooks continues to be one of the best backs in the state. He has passed for three touches and run for two more. He had one called back against Big Spring.

CRANE'S GOLDEN Cranes, winless in two outings against tough AAA schools, may find that elusive victory this week when they travel to Van Horn. The Eagles own a victory this year, but that came against hapless Class B Balmorhea. The Cranes could get the offense in high gear in this one.

Lamesa, on the other hand, will take its sputtering offense to Pecos to face a bird of another color. The Tornadoes have not scored a touchdown in two outings and the Eagles of Pecos are undefeated and high scoring this year. There doesn't seem much hope here for much improvement for Lamesa in this one. The Lamesa defense appears to be solid, but offensive fumbles continually keep them in trouble.

IRAAN'S BRAVES, also undefeated, travel to Big Lake for a match with the winless Reagan County Owls. On paper, this looks like another one in the bag for the Braves, but the Owls are teeming after a narrow loss to McCamey last week. Reagan County ended the game on the Badgers' one-yard line, and they could be fired up for Iraan.

One major power may be headed for trouble. Rankin's Red Devils, undefeated in two outings and owning an 11-game regular season winning streak, host Jal, N. M., Friday in what could be a tough outing for the Devils. This contest has always been a tough battle, and it could go either way.

Undefeated Lubbock Dunbar meets unbeaten Fort Stockton in the only other major outing this week. The lull won't last too long.

This Week's Area Schedule

District 3-AAA: Lamesa at Pecos, Brownfield at Andrews, Lubbock Dunbar at Fort Stockton, Lubbock Coronado at Lubbock Estacado (today), Odessa Ector at Lake View, Snyder at Big Spring, Sweetwater at Stamford

District 7-AA: Crane at Van Horn, Ozona at Eldorado, Mason at Sonora, Kermit at Lovington, N. M.

District 5-A: Borden County at O'Donnell, Plains at Sundown, Roosevelt at Seagraves, New Deal at Shallowater, Stanton at McCamey.

District 6-A: Balmorhea at Clint, Iraan at Reagan County, Alpine at Marfa, Stanton at McCamey, Jal, N. M., at Rankin, Crane at Van Horn, Wink open.

District 9-A: Iraan at Reagan County, Ozona at Eldorado, Mason at Sonora, Hawley at Menard, Robert Lee at Eden, Jim Ned at Wall, Junction open.

Midland high keeps record unblemished

ODESSA — The Midland High golf team kept their perfect record in tact here Tuesday afternoon, edging by Odessa High, 8½-6½ at the Sunset Country Club.

The victory was the third without a loss for the Bulldogs of Coach Robert Young. Midland's one and two golfers were upset, but David Brimberry, Mike Mahan and Jay Workman picked up the slack to salvage the win.

In a match at Big Spring, Odessa Permian got by the host Steers, 8-7.

Midland 8½, Odessa 6½

Rebels pick up first golf victory

The Lee High golfers picked up their first win of the fall campaign Tuesday, defeating Andrews 13-2 at Hogan Park.

Jeff Lott, Grant Spencer, Gary Raney and Robert Upham all gained three points apiece for the Rebels of Coach Tim Peden, whose record now stands at 1-2.

Stanton is serious threat to Seagraves

Stanton Coach David Thompson never skipped a beat during the preseason, saying all along that Stanton would have one of its better teams.

Some were saying that Thompson was getting way beyond himself since he happens to be playing in the same district with Seagraves, which is favored to win the Class A state championship this year.

Well, whether the Buffs win district or not, Thompson is going to be right because the Buffs have already shown that they are one of the powers that be in West Texas Class A circles.

One of the major reasons is tailback Marvin Jones, the flashy 170-pound, 5-foot-11 loose hipped yardage burner that stands fans on their heads. Stanton fans better enjoy him this year because the likes of Jones may not be seen again in these parts for a long while.

JONES HAS rushed for 298 yards in two outings, scored seven touchdowns (six by the rush and one by pass) and is carrying a 5.5 yard per carry average. Pretty good stats, but he plays defense too (cornerback) and has one interception to his credit.

In the first game against Tahoka, Jones, who is apparently one big hip joint, carried the ball 35 times for 180 yards and four touchdowns. That is enough evidence right there to say that he is durable.

"I've said all along that he was going to be a good one," Thompson said this week. "Several college coaches have already been here to look at him.

"We didn't know he had carried 35 times in that first game, but he held up well. He's a workhorse. There's no doubt about that.

"WE WOULD like to spread

TERRY WILLIAMSON

the running attack around a little more than that, but we look to Marvin to carry the ball. When he carried 35 times, he lost yardage only once on a fumbled pitchout, and had no gain only once. He had plus yardage on 33 carries. The next game he carried only 19 times for 118 yards, but our fullback Bob Jones really came through for us with 103 yards rushing. What's really great about Jones is that he does all of this when other teams are keying on him. Every team wants to stop Marvin."

It's easy to see that Thompson is a fan of Jones, but before this season is over, Jones is going to have a lot of fans.

Back to the picking game where I was 25-12 last week for an overall 54-24 record and .692 percentage.

STANTON 30, McCAMEY 14— Marvin Jones—enough said.

RANKIN 24, JAL 20— Could be wrong on this one, but I hate to see that 11-game winning streak end.

IRAAN 35, REAGAN COUNTY 7— The Braves are beginning to get scary. They seem to know how to score.

ANDREWS 45, BROWNFIELD 0— The Cubs are walking up the wrong side of the street, and the Mustang bullies take offense.

CRANE 24, VAN HORN 7— The Cranes pick on somebody their own size, and that's the difference.

PECOS 25, LAMESA 0— The Tors will still be looking for that first touchdown this year.

Heavyweight Jimmy Young beats the stuffing out of a cowering Jody Ballard, right, in a heavyweight bout at Las Vegas, Nev. (AP Laserphoto).

Norton, Young score victories

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Ken Norton continues to wonder whether Muhammad Ali will ever fight him again.

"I'll believe it only when I climb into the ring with him," said the No. 1 challenger from Los Angeles, who beat Ali once and then lost two disputed decisions to the current heavyweight boxing champion.

Norton, 223, first has a date with Jimmy Young on Nov. 5, and the two tuned up with easy victories in nationally-televised bouts at Caesars Palace here Wednesday night.

NORTON SAYS Ali wants to avoid him, but the heavyweight champion—who has a title fight on Sept. 29 against Earnie Shavers—has gone on record saying he would put his title at stake against the Norton-Young winner.

Young, a 213-pound Philadelphian, started slowly but picked up speed and boxed his way to a one-sided 10-round verdict over Jody Ballard, 205, of Houston.

Norton started even slower and got tagged a couple of times. But at the end of the fifth round he knocked out No. 10-ranked Lorenzo Zanon, an awkward 207-pounder from Milan, Italy. There were only two seconds left in the stanza when a left hook started Zanon on the way out, so the time goes as 3:08, eight seconds after the round's scheduled end.

Neither Young nor Norton said he was impressed by each other's showing, but each made a point of watching the other.

"I HOPE Norton doesn't think he's going to do the same thing to me," said Young after watching the kayo on television. "He doesn't hit hard enough to hurt me," said Norton of Young. "He can't punch, but he does have speed."

The two showcased in the Sports Pavilion of Caesars, where they'll fight for more than $1 million each in the Fall.

Three other ten round bouts were closer:

Ron Lyle, the 220-pound No. 3 contender from Denver, said he suffered from the flu but barely outpointed little-known Stan Ward, a 236¼-pound newcomer from Sacramento, Calif. One judge scored the bout even and the other two had Lyle just one point ahead.

HUNTING & FISHING

Hunter safety course slated for youngsters

Deadline for signing up for the Hunter Safety Course is Sept. 21 at the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department (563-0645).

The two part course, offering nine hours of instruction, is open to persons 12 years of age and older and is being sponsored by the Midland Shooters Association with the TP-W&D furnishing the material.

Gene Campbell is in charge of the program and will be helped with instruction by other MSA members and Mack Caudle, Midland game warden.

The parent or legal guardian must register the child at the MSA club house by 6 p.m. Sept. 28. The emphasis is not on shooting or hunting but on how to do it safely.

The course will be held at the MSA club house and skeet ranch located one mile north of the Andrews Highway on Holiday Hill Road. The first class starts at 6 p.m. Sept. 28 and the second at 8:30 a.m. Oct. 1.

Campbell said the course is mandatory in 24 states, although mot required in Texas. However, 31,000 students have taken it and nine million persons in the U.S. have had hunter safety training, Campbell noted.

For those planning hunting trips to New Mexico and Colorado this year, both require Hunter Safety Courses for young hunters. In Colorado, any person born after Jan. 1, 1949 must have had the Hunter Safety course.

New Mexico now requires anyone under 18 who handles a firearm to have a Hunter Safety certificate. Certification is required to carry a firearm, hunt or target shoot regardless of whether under the supervision of a parent or guardian. You must have the course before you go to New Mexico, since the course will not be available there.

The new ruling does not apply to bow hunters.

LABOR DAY marked the end of the summer vacation season and the start of one of the best fishing periods of the year. Judging from the number of folks visiting Oak Creek Lake since Labor Day, it reflects their thinking, too.

"What we need now is some cool fronts," says Ike Pate, proprietor of Sportsman's Lodge.

Some good fish have been caught in the last two weeks with bass ranging to near six pounds and a few crappie going over two pounds, channel cat to six and yellow cat up to 28.

Chuck Jackson of Midland cuaght bass going to five pounds, 11 ounces.

This Saturday and Sunday, the lake will host its annual Carp Rodeo.

TED BATTLES
battle scene

When the Dallas Cowboys fled over the city line to Irving a few years back, there were some who agreed that a spanking new, up-to-date stadium was needed to replace the tradition-steeped, but so antiquated Cotton Bowl.

Despite the hole in the roof, which gives the edifice an unfinished look and those harsh shadows that are the bane of TV viewers, Texas Stadium was praised as a masterpiece in futuristic design.

It was hailed as a tribute to the football fan, built specifically with his needs and comfort in mind. The players might get soaked or snowed on, but the fans were protected by the roof. And if they wanted to go the option route, except for the traffic snarl, it embraced all the comforts of the living room and more.

After all, how many living rooms have mini-skirted Cowgirl usherettes at beck and call.

THE TRADITIONALISTS contended, if the Cotton Bowl was good enough for Doak, it ought to be good enough for the Cowboys. Sure it was in a seedy neighborhood, but its seating capacity was greater than the country club at Irving and how many future fans were run off with the increase in price of end zone seats from $1 (Cotton Bowl) to $7 (Texas Stadium).

Besides, they groused, the Cotton Bowl had been renovated, new seats, improved fan comfort facilities and a new artificial turf.

WE WERE among the latter, but a couple of years ago Cliff Harris, during a visit to Midland, suggested, "You still ought to come see a game there. It's a great place to watch a game. There's no better."

So last week, we finally took Cliff up on his suggestion and it was an experience. We haven't been treated quite like it since covering a Penn-Cornell game in Franklin Field, back when they played on Thanksgiving morning.

And the last time, we were that far away from the action was when, as a collegian, we climbed to the top row of the Los Angeles Coliseum just to check our eyesight and found out why the Trojans wear those big, big numbers on their backs.

STILL, CLIFF was right. Even the end zone seats afford a good view of the action, conceding of course that end zone seats are end zone seats in any stadium.

The P.A. is something else. From where we sat, it sounded like Egyptian. Fortunately, the indistinguishable blare on the ear is confined to pregame.

The artificial turf looked slippery, slippery enough for one to wonder after watching Tony Dorsett's feet fly out from under him as he tried to cut on one play whether he could operate at maximum efficiency.

After the game, Tony eased our fears a little. "I played on artificial surface at the University of Pittsburgh and I'm used to it. No, I don't think I lose any efficiency. The others have the same trouble cutting and tonight it was a little wet and slippery out there."

DORSETT HINTED that if he had a choice, he'd just as soon play on grass. "It's softer, you can get better traction and you are less likely to get hurt."

Food fare is standard press box fare, the usual barbecue, but it comes in sufficient quantities to insure that no media member will suffer the pangs of starvation.

And the Cowboys guarantee that no one will get bored by the proceedings at Texas Stadium, no matter how bad or one sided the game.

The famed Cowboys' cheerleaders take of that and even in a good game there's always the danger that their presence may make a fan miss a touchdown play. But then, there's always the convenient TV to bring the eye-wanderer a replay of what he missed.

HE MAY be a $3 million hotdog, as this fan-club sign indicates, but Reggie Jackson paid off for the Yankees Wednesday with a game-winning two-run homer against the Red Sox. (Story on page 3C).

Raiders, Pats get nods

By BRUCE LOWITT

The Oakland Raiders, as any schoolboy knows, are the class of the American Conference, right?

Wrong. Oh, any schoolboy in the Bay Area might say that. But there are a lot of youngsters in, say, greater metropolitan New England and regional Cincinnati and maybe a few other communities who will say ... well, who'll say that if you limit your thinking to the National Football League's defending champions.

The Raiders are unquestionably the best of the West—San Diego will probably step in to replace Denver as the division's distant runner-up this season—but New England and Cincinnati have every right to demand equal billing. The Patriots, the only team to beat Oakland last year, appears poised to outrun Baltimore for the Eastern title this time. And the Bengals, nosed out by Pittsburgh in last year's scramble to the top of the Central Division, should outclaw the Steelers this time.

"IT'S TOUGH predicting division winners—but that's a breeze when compared to trying to figure which team will be the AFC entry in Super Bowl XII next Jan. 15 in New Orleans' Superdome.

The Raiders may be the reigning champions and they may look every bit as good as they did when they demolished Minnesota for the title. But as any Super Bowl champion (except perhaps for Green Bay, Miami and Pittsburgh) will say, winning the title is the easy part. Defending it is a different story.

Before the AFC lines up for the playoffs, here's how the final regular-season standings will look:

WEST DIVISION
Oakland Raiders
San Diego Chargers
Denver Broncos
Kansas City Chiefs
Seattle Seahawks

College football is more fun than pros

BY DAVE KINDRED
The Washington Post

The idea today is to say college football is more fun than the pro game. The thought came up the other night when the Giffer said he'd been talking to the Oakland Raiderettes and they were really mad because the Dallas Cowboys cheerleaders were getting all the exposure (blush) on television and why didn't TV give credit to other cheerleaders?

Howard, the Raiderettes are upset, the Giffer said. And Howard did the right thing. He shut up for once.

If the National Football League had a sense of decorum, it would send all those plastic cheerleaders back to the secretarial pool or the swimming pool or — surely this is true, because the NFL doesn't miss a trick— back to their studies in nuclear physics.

Cheerleaders, schmeerleaders. These girls are pomposity on the hoof.

THE NFL has its make-believe cheerleaders only because college football has real cheerleaders who produce real laughs and cry real tears. For some reason, the sight of the Raiderettes— poor unnoticed things in thier short skirts and silky blouses— reminded at least one TV viewer of a night editor he once knew on a small newspaper in central Illinois.

The night editor was the kind of guy who would wear a tweed tie to work. One of those. Winner of a Nieman Fellowship, which is a big deal in journalism, he spent a year studying at Harvard University. Back on the job, he made certain everyone saw the new piece of jewelry hanging on his tie.

"My Harvard key," he said.

The state editor was not impressed. Only the price of soybeans impressed the state editor. He was not impressed by a night editor who wore jewelry on his tie.

"SO WHAT?" the state editor said. "On my garage, I got a Yale lock."

No matter how often the NFL reminds us of its greatness, the world's Yale-Lock lovers will stay with the college game. What college football gives the paying customer is a day of fun, a reminder that he once was young and full of imperfections unnoticed. It's a day in the sun on campus. The leaves are gold and yellow and everyone is smiling, because it's a game, not a war, and they understand the difference.

BESIDES IT'S a better game to watch. No a better game technically. No college passer can match the majesty of a Ken Stabler, and it would

Midland to play host to shooting meets

The combined Gulf Coast State and Texas Heavy Varmint and Unrestricted shooting championships will be held at the Midland Shooters Association range Saturday and Sunday.

The Heavy Varmint shoot will be held Saturday while the Unrestricted division is scheduled for Sunday.

Hunters from throughout the southwest are expected in the Tall City. Action will get underway at 8 a.m. each day.

The shoot is scheduled for the MSA range 9 ½ miles southeast of Midland.

Travel southeast on highway 158 to Garden City and go four miles south on FM 1312 to reach the range.

This weekend's shoot is a prelued prelude to the nationals, which will be held in Midland in July 1978.

Former college stars get ax in pro ball

By The Associated Press

It is being proven again that hot-shot press clippings from a player's college days don't impress National Football League coaches.

Two former Heisman Trophy winning quarterbacks—Pat Sullivan and Steve Spurrier—have been dropped by NFL teams. Running backs Sonny Collins of Kentucky, Kermit Johnson of UCLA and Mike Adamle of Northwestern—former stars at major universities—were cut Wednesday, joining Jim Bertelsen of Texas in the ranks of the unemployed.

But some of the rejected players were given another chance.

Wide receivers Randy Vataha and John Gilliam, defensive end Bob Lurtsema, defensive back Rolly Woolsey and fullback Mike Franckowiak were given new NFL contracts after getting the axe.

SULLIVAN, WAIVED Wednesday by San Francisco, spent four years with the Atlanta Falcons before playing out his option and joining the Washington Redskins. He was cut by the Redskins and later the Chicago Bears before the 49ers gave him a tryout this year.

The 49ers also cut Johnson Wednesday, along with linebacker Rod Martin. They also placed linebacker Mike Baldassin and quarterback Steve DeBerg, acquired on waivers from the Dallas Cowboys, on the two-man taxi squad.

Adamle was released by the Chicago Bears to make room for Gilliam, who had a standout 10-year career with the Minnesota Vikings but was cut Wednesday by Atlanta, who signed him last year.

The Falcons cut five players,—including Collins, running back Billy Pritchett and rookie receiver Shelton Diggs of Southern California.

VATAHA WAS claimed on waivers by the Green Bay Packers from the New England Patriots, who cut him Tuesday. Vataha, who teamed for years with quarterback Jim Plunkett at Stanford and New England, replaces rookie offensive lineman Gerald Skinner of Arkansas on the Packers' active roster. Skinner was put on injured reserve.

Top tennis seeds draw early byes

By PAUL DOMOWITCH

Most of the top-seeded players have drawn first round byes as the 17th annual Midland Tennis Club sponsored Invitational Tennis Tournament gets underway Friday in the Tall City.

Close to 200 competitors will be utilizing three different courts in Midland as opening round play begins at 9 a.m. Friday in the three-day event, which concludes Sunday afternoon.

The men's singles event has drawn 101 players alone, and play in that division, as well as men's doubles, will be split up between the Midland and Lee high courts.

The ladies' singles draw has just 62 players, and all of the action leading up to the semifinals will be played at the Midland College complex. All semifinal and final round action in both the men's and women's divisions will be played at Midland High on Sunday. The championship round will get underway at about 1 p.m.

Several players have drawn opening round byes in the men's singles division, including top-seeded Larry Gottfried of Trinity, who probably won't play until sometime Friday afternoon.

The two, three and four seeds — Randy Crawford of TCU, Erick Iskersky of Trinity and John Staub of Oklahoma — also have the morning off.

Fifth seeded Chris Delaney of SMU will face Midland High junior Arthur Yeager in a first round match, and sixth seeded John Picken of Pan Am will open with another MHS netter, Duncan Kennedy.

Tut Bartzen, the seventh seed from TCU, will face John Kirwan in his first tourney encounter, while eighth-seeded Todd Reed of West Texas State opposes Odessa College's Paul Mooney.

Number one seeded Carrie Fleming of Trinity and second seeded Kim Steinmetz of SMU both drew first round byes in the women's singles event, but the other six seeds are scheduled for action.

The third seed, Lori Oberheide of Trinity, will face Mandy Ham of Texas Tech; fourth seeded Crissy Gonzales of SMU takes on Lesa Booker of Tech; Ann Layman, the fifth seed from Midland College will face Alexis Hefley of Texas A&M; Sixth seeded Ann Schroeder of Trinity is meeting Ann Schilling of A&M; Cindy Benzon, the seventh seed from SMU, will face Lori Nelson, the high school star from Corpus Christi; and eighth seeded Debbie Phillips of UTPB will oppose Midland High's Dinah Boyd.

Most of the out-of-town teams and players will be arriving some time late this afternoon or early tonight, and will be housed by residents of Midland. The Trinity University women's team is scheduled to arrive via Southwest Airlines at the Air Terminal at 5:25 p.m., while the Trinity men's team and their coach Bob McKinely will be coming on a later flight.

Yankees boost AL lead to 21/2

By The Associated Press

Bunters build runs a base at a time. Home run hitters, an impatient lot, deliver them in four-base clusters.

Reggie Jackson is no bunter.

In the ninth inning of a scoreless game between the New York Yankees and the Boston Red Sox, Jackson was flashed the bunt sign to advance Thurman Munson to second base. He squared around on the first and third pitches, but didn't offer at tosses by Boston's Reggie Cleveland.

"I had to talk to (third base Coach Dick) Howser about the sign because I don't bunt often enough to know it," said Jackson.

UNABLE TO gently lay the ball down, Jackson worked the count to 3-2 and instead laid out the Red Sox, smacking his 26th home run of the season and giving the Yankees a 2-0 victory Wednesday night.

"I didn't expect Cleveland to be taken out," said Jackson. "He had pitched a great game. Sometimes Cleveland gets me out with slow stuff down, but not today."

The triumph, the Yankees' second in two games in a crucial three-game series with the Red Sox, lifted New York 3½ games ahead of third-place Boston in the American League East. Baltimore, with 6-5 and 4-2 victories over Toronto, sneaked into second place, 2½ games behind New York.

Jackson, who has slugged 307 career homers, has trouble remembering his successful bunts.

"I THINK I got one back in 1974 and I know I got one in 1971," said the slugging outfielder who has driven in the winning run 17 times this season, tops on the Yankees. "In '74, I fouled the ball off and ended up hitting away. In '71, I got it down and it led to us (Oakland) winning."

The last time he played a great defensive game might also challenge Jackson's memory. But Wednesday night he made two spectacular plays, protecting Ed Figueroa's shaky seven-hit shutout.

He made a leaping catch against the wall in the fourth inning and a diving grab inches above the grass in the seventh. On the second catch, the Red Sox had a runner on second base with one out.

"I didn't get a good jump on the ball but I got the ball squarely in my mitt," said Jackson of the seventh-inning gem. "I'm not the greatest fielder in the world, a Paul Blair or (Joe) DiMaggio or anything like that.

"But I caught that one. The catches help build my confidence and prove I can field. But the home run is where it's at.

"This was my most satisfying game with the Yankees, perhaps the best game of baseball I've played in. There was great defense by both sides and great defense by me and then I hit it out to win it."

Orioles 6-4, Blue Jays 4-2

The Orioles, who have six games left with the Red Sox, continued moving up on the outside lane, while New York and Boston battled each other inside.

Lee May belted a two-run homer, his 23rd, in the first game and smacked a run-scoring double in the nightcap, pacing the Orioles to their sixth and seventh straight victories.

Royals 5-6, A's 2-0

The Royals continued to make a mockery of the race in the AL West, winning their 13th and 14th straight games, a club record and a major league high this season. The Royals' magic number now is nine; they lead second-place Chicago by nine games.

Dennis Leonard hurled an eight-hitter in the second game and Jim Colborn scattered seven hits but needed relief help from Larry Gura in the final two innings of the opener.

In an oddity, Jeff Newman of Oakland started the second game as a catcher and finished as a pitcher, giving up one hit and no runs in one inning. He hit Hal McRae with a pitch, then gave up a single to George Brett before retiring the next three batters.

"He's a catcher and he should stay behind the plate," said McRae. "Before I came up, Brett said it would be embarrassing to make an out by a catcher. I said I wasn't worried about making an out, I was worried about getting hit."

Oakland Manager Bobby Winkles said Newman didn't volunteer for the pitching assignment.

"I selected him," Winkles said. "You got to pick someone. I can't waste my only reliever, (Doug) Bair, on a 6-0 game when I might need him in tomorrow's doubleheader."

Rangers 2, Angels 1

Texas right-hander Doyle Alexander stopped California on three hits and became the winningest Ranger pitcher this season with 15 victories against 10 losses.

Texas' John Ellis drilled his third home run of the year in the third inning. A double by Ken Henderson, a single by Jim Sundberg and Toby Harrah's sacrifice fly provided the winning margin in the sixth.

Tigers 5-2, Indians 3-1

A sacrifice fly by Ron LeFlore in the 10th inning gave the Tigers a doubleheader sweep. The Tigers had ended a six-game losing string in the opener, in which Tim Corcoran doubled home two runs and Ben Oglivie pounded out four hits, including a solo homer.

Twins 7, White Sox 0

Dave Goltz, 18-9, checked the White Sox on seven hits and became the first pitcher to throw a complete-game shutout against them this season. The Twins snapped a six-game losing streak.

Brewers 8, Mariners 5

Sixto Lezcano's three-run homer in the fifth highlighted a Milwaukee comeback that enabled the Brewers to wipe out a 5-0 Seattle lead. Reliever Eduardo Rodriguez allowed Seattle just four hits over the final 71-3 innings.

Bradley dropped by Vikings

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — For the first time in 17 years, Bill Bradley will not be putting on a football uniform every weekend this fall.

Nicknamed Superbill during his illustrious high school and college careers in Texas, Bradley apparently is out of football for good. After so long in football, is Bill Bradley depressed?

"No sir," he said after being released by the Minnesota Vikings. "I thought they had plans for me, but I wouldn't knock them.

"An organization is loyal to guys who have done it for them," continued Bradley, who was acquired from Philadelphia earlier this summer. "I understand that."

Bradley was an all-pro defensive back for the Eagles in 1971 and 1972 and played in the Pro Bowl from 1971-73.

But they told him Tuesday he was no longer a football player with the Minnesota Vikings. He was put on waivers and went unclaimed by the rest of the National Football League teams.

Bud Grant had told Bradley he was exactly the kind of man the Minnesota coach wants playing for him.

"You've got a good head and you're interested in what's going on and you play the game well," he had said.

TV wants rights to 5-4A story

PAUL DOMOWITCH

SPORTS CHATTER

I guess it was inevitable that it would finally come to this. To tell you the truth, I would have thought they'd at least have the courtesy to wait until my book comes out in three months.

But this is a dog-eat-dog business, and they beat me to the big money; THEY being the CBS television network.

My very reliable source inside the network told me Wednesday that his bosses are currently negotiating for the rights to turn the District 5-4A Executive Committee meetings into a weekly series.

The word is that San Angelo schools superintendent Jim Nevins, who is the chairman of the Executive Committee, has been making several visits to CBS headquarters in New York City the past few days, and the deal is just about ready to be finalized.

No one is quite sure what the agreement will entail, but CBS' initial offer was something like $5 million, a dozen diamond-studded blocking shields (for television use only) and a brand new 16-millimeter camera for every school in the district. Nevins turned down that original offer, and was reportedly waiting until the network offered him a regular role in the series before he signed the papers (Nevins wants to play a bad guy.)

FROM WHAT I've been able to gather, the show will be entitled "How the West Was Won," but I still can't say for certain if it's going to be a comedy, drama. . . or cartoon. According to my source, each week a different 5-4A school will violate a University Interscholastic League rule, and then a major portion of the show will be devoted to the actual excitement and tension of the Executive Committee meetings, as they slowly but surely piece the puzzle together and determine the guilt or innocence of the accused.

CBS feels that the real committee meetings did tend to get a little boring at times (surprise!), however, so they're going to stray from reality just a bit.

First of all, the accused schools will bring in big-name Perry Mason-type lawyers to defend them and try to prove the whole thing is a frame up. Secondly, the characters will be quite a bit deeper than the people they'll be portraying. To keep up with the need for sex on television, many of the superintendants and athletic directors will carry on torrid, secret love affairs, which incidentally, will be followed just as closely as the meetings.

Oh yes, the character of Shorty Lawson is going to be left out of the script because of a lack of believability.

THE NETWORK is bringing in a group of their very best writers, and expect an original plot each week. There will never be a violation of the same UIL rule twice.

CBS admitted, though, that they are going to borrow ideas from other successful TV shows. For instance, in the new show, there will be a character called Bailey Marshall, who will be copied from Charlie of "Charlie's Angels." You'll never really see him, but he'll always make a phone call to the committee (his angels) at the beginning of the show and tell them what their next case is.

The series pilot, which will probably air some time in January, has an very interesting and a very unique plot. According to Rule 15 of the UIL code, football players are not allowed to eat ice cream during the first four days of pre-season workouts.

Now, if you can believe this, a coach from one of the 5-4A schools (which one has not yet been determined) has his kids eating popsicles (flavor has also not yet been determined) during this forbidden period, and a local television station films the whole thing.

NOW COMES the good part.

After the violation is reported, the coach claims that the rule was never made clear in the UIL rule book, and that he didn't know popsicles came under the listing of ice cream.

Naturally, nobody buys that story, and when they point out to him that the latest edition of the UIL rule book DOES list popsicles as ice cream, he tells them that he hasn't yet gotten the new edition.

I'd tell you what happens next, but then I'd be spoiling the whole show for you.

The second show of the series has already been written as well, and that one's pure writing genius. In it, Odessa Permian tries to pass off a 650-pound giant ape as a defensive tackle, and is charged with violating Rule 27 of the UIL code, which states, ". . . high school football players in the state of Texas must be AT LEAST 51% human."

Oh, if only they would have waited for my book to come out though.

NBC faces rebuilding season

By HOWARD SMITH

NEW YORK (AP) — Pro football, television's premier sports attraction, gets rolling this weekend with major changes at NBC, a stand-pat attitude at CBS and the return of Dandy Don Meredith to ABC among the highlights.

Last time around, ABC, with its Monday night game, and CBS, with its National Conference games, both enjoyed increased ratings while the numbers for NBC's American Conference games were down. When CBS and NBC went head to head, primarily on Sunday afternoons, CBS averaged a 17.1 rating, meaning 17.1 per cent of TV sets in the nation were tuned to CBS, while NBC got a 13.4. That represented about a 20 per cent increase over 1975 for CBS and a six per cent decline for NBC.

In addition, CBS's "The NFL Today," its pregame, halftime and post-game show, buried NBC's "Grandstand." Clearly, something had to be done.

NBC HAS responded by junking "Grandstand" and will introduce a new show Sunday, "NFL '77." The show will be devoted to pro football for the most part and is being put together largely by Larry Merchant, the former newspaperman-turned-TV analyst.

Lee Leonard and Bryant Gumble, refugees from "Grandstand," will host the new show which boasts a weekly commentary on the pro grid scene by Minnesota Viking quarterback Fran Tarkenton, live pickups from game sites featuring analysis by NBC's stable of ex-players, an innovative series of features and, last but not least, a football crazy robot named Statz.

"STATZ IS going to forecast the outcome of games and many other things," says Merchant. "Going into the first game Statz will already know the result of the Super Bowl. He will be able to come up with any number of statistics to show why one team is successful and another isn't. He'll be funny and we hope to develop his personality."

Merchant says Statz, who will be pumped full of information by a computer, will be far more than simply the mechanical equivalent of CBS' Jimmy the Greek. "He'll certainly be more up front," says Merchant. "The Greek doesn't make predictions. He just tells you the betting line. Statz will tell you that Los Angeles is going to beat Atlanta 22-7."

Merchant will contribute pieces to the show from time to time and his first contribution Sunday promises to be a beauty. He took a film crew to India for a report on Joe Don Looney, the eccentric former running back who played for five NFL teams in five years. Looney, believe it or not, has found peace as an elephant boy at a religious community.

"This piece is the most unbelievable thing I've ever done," says Merchant. "I've been in sports for a long time but this is the topper."

NBC WILL also be trying to find a replacement for Meredith as the "color" man to go along with Curt Gowdy on its No. 1 broadcasting team. Former San Francisco quarterback John Brodie and Merlin Olsen, late of the Los Angeles Rams, are the top candidates and NBC will be watching to see which one blends in with Gowdy best.

CBS, pleased with its success last season, has made few changes. Pat Summerall and Tom Brookshier remain the network's top broadcasting duo and Brent Musburger, Phyllis George, who had been considering leaving the show in favor of a more varied "show biz" career, and Irv Cross return to "The NFL Today" along with The Greek and Jack Whitaker. "The NFL Today" will have its customary run of taped highlights from other games and will be making an effort to keep its features as close to the news as possible instead of merely presenting a series of stories canned well in advance.

The only personnel change of note is the hiring of Tim Ryan away from NBC to beef up CBS' play-by-play staff.

And then there's Dandy Don, whose return to ABC is being heavily promoted by the network. Meredith will be reunited with Howard Cosell and Frank Gifford when ABC opens its season with San Francisco vs. Pittsburgh Monday night, and ABC is hoping to get lots of mileage out of the Meredith-Cosell, country boy-city slicker byplay.

Otherwise Monday night football will remain essentially the same with taped highlights at halftime, flashy camera work, matching blazers, etc.

Crank up the cameras, plug in the microphones, turn on the tape and let the season begin.

Hopeless Anderson, Tanner keep faith in NL race

By The Associated Press

Despite their nearly-hopeless positions in the National League divisional races, Cincinnati's Sparky Anderson and Pittsburgh's Chuck Tanner are keeping the faith.

Anderson's Reds came from behind with six runs in the final two innings to nip Los Angeles 9-8 Wednesday, leaving at four the Dodgers' magic number for clinching the Western Division. The Reds trail the Dodgers by 12½ games.

The Pirates were rained out after leading St. Louis 2-0 in the third inning, but that didn't dampen Tanner's spirits. With the Phillies losing to the Mets 1-0, Pittsburgh gained one-half game in standings and is 7½ games back.

"THAT WAS a courageous comeback we made," Anderson said after Ken Griffey smashed a two-run homer in the ninth inning to win the game. An inning earlier, the Reds scored four times, three runs on Geronimo's home run. George Foster also belted a homer, his 48th, tops in the major leagues, and knocked in his 137th run as the Reds beat Tommy John for only the second time ever.

"As I said before," Anderson added, "they won't clinch it against us. That's satisfaction. We'll just keep on fighting."

John, 18-6, got home run support from Dave Lopes, Steve Yeager and Steve Garvey, who had four hits and his 30th homer.

"I STILL have a shot at 20 wins," said John. "It would have been nice for us to clinch it against the Reds (Los Angeles needed a sweep of the two-game series to do so) and for me to get my 19th. But it will come."

Pittsburgh's plight is not quite as discouraging as Cincinnati's.

"We're not out of it until we're two games out and there's just one to go," said Tanner. "A collapse has happened before. One weekend can change a season. One club can get hot and another cold.

"I'm sure the Phillies feel they don't have it clinched," Tanner added. "It sure would be nice to put a 10-game winning streak together. We have to ask for help from other clubs too, because we don't play Philadelphia again."

Mets 1, Phillies 0

Nino Espinosa outdueled Philadelphia mound star Steve Carlton to help the Pirates. Espinosa hurled a three-hitter, struck out four and walked three. It was the second time the Mets' right-hander was involved in a shutout victory over Philadelphia, having combined with Skip Lockwood to blank the defending Eastern Division titlists earlier this season.

"They're not unbeatable," said Espinosa. "But they're not easy, either. Why do I do good against them? I don't know. I like to pitch against them in New York but not here because the mound is flat and I have to change my style."

Espinosa's batting style wasn't too bad either. He knocked in the game's only run with a single in the fifth.

Giants 3, Astros 2

Rookie left-hander Bob Knepper carried a three-hitter into the ninth inning for the Giants but needed relief from Dave Heaverlo and John Curtis to hold off Houston.

Willie McCovey's run-scoring single in the sixth inning knocked in the decisive tally for the Giants. Rob Andrews led off the inning with a single and scored on Darrell Evans' triple before McCovey knocked in Evans.

Enos Cabell had three hits for the Astros.

Padres 6, Braves 4

Gene Richards, Jerry Turner and Dave Roberts each collected three hits in a 12-hit Padres attack. Turner singled in Richards with the tiebreaking run in the seventh inning.

Expos 3, Cubs 2

Andre Dawson tripled home Dave Cash with the winning run in the 12th inning for Montreal. The Expos' other runs came on a steal of home by Gary Carter on the front end of a double steal and Chris Speier's bases-loaded sacrifice fly.

Never doubted pennant, Martin

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

"We're going to win the pennant—I've never doubted that," Billy Martin said. "I felt that way last April. I feel that way now."

The scrappy little manager of the New York Yankees was a picture of contentment and confidence as he sat in the swivel chair of his Yankee Stadium office, puffing on a pipe, his feet propped on a desk.

The clouds of controversy that had swirled around his head in mid-season had evaporated. The Yankees had drawn first blood in the important showdown series against the Boston Red Sox. The infantile family feuds somehow had gotten lost in the mad rush toward another World Series.

"THIS IS the kind of team that rises to the big occasion," Martin said. "It is at its best when the going is toughest."

The combative one-time Yankees infielder said he did not under-estimate the Red Sox—"They always come out swinging"—but felt the schedule was the ally of the Yankees.

"The Red Sox have six games left with the (Baltimore) Orioles," he said. "That's the rub. I look for them to split those games 3-3." The Yankees meet Boston for the last two times next Monday and Tuesday at Fenway Park.

The telephone on Martin's desk rang repeatedly. Someone asking about tickets. A private call ("I'll call you later"). A business call. No call from owner George Steinbrenner.

"You seem to have run out of crises," someone said.

Martin laughed. "The last thing I want is another crisis," he said. "I want to keep everything nice and quiet."

Reggie Jackson is nodding politely now to Thurman Munson. Mickey Rivers is hitting game-winning home runs instead of being accused of loafing. And Graig Nettles, who rarely takes batting practice, is taking vicious cuts in the cage.

MARTIN'S OFFICE, just off the players' dressing quarters, is a spacious room ringed with cushiony sofas and chairs, cluttered with baseball memorabilia, lined with book shelves.

A photo of a younger Casey Stengel in a Dodgers uniform and a color sketch of an older Stengel, doffing his cap, attest to Martin's devotion to his craggy old boss.

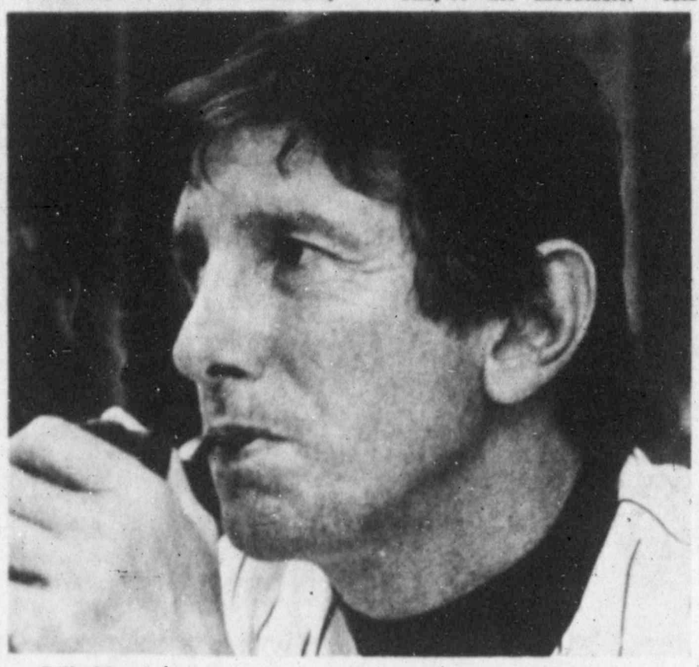
"NO, I HAVEN'T patterned my philosophy as a manager after Casey," Billy said. "Everybody has his own way of managing. But I learned a lot from Casey as I did from all the managers I played for.

"I always tried to sit right next to Case. I wanted to watch his moves. He was the master at keeping the non-regulars, the guys on the bench, happy. He joshed with them and made them feel they belonged."

Martin said early antipathy changed to respect for the late Charlie Dressen and he had admiration for Freddie Hutchinson, who while managing the Cincinnati Reds, showed that a man could be aggressive yet at the same time "a very beautiful person."

"At Oakland, in 1949, Dressen chewed me out for throwing to the wrong base," Billy said. "We got into a shouting match. I got so mad I packed my stuff and was going to leave. Cookie Lavagetto talked me out of it. I half-apologized and got a $300 fine. But Dressen and I got along great after that.

"One thing I learned. That was never to say 'I' when I meant 'we,' never say 'my ball club' instead of 'our ball club.'



Billy Martin...puffs pipe of peace, he never doubted the Yankees.

Wants ads bring cage talent to Iowa college

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Iowa Lakes Community College recruits basketball players through the want ads.

Hugh Howard, the Iowa Lakes coach, ran a classified ad in the Columbus Dispatch in July seeking prospects 6-feet-6 or taller.

The novel approach has paid a pair of tall dividends—6-8 Alvin Broadhurst and 6-6 Marshelle Simmons.

"I just wanted to let you know we recruited two players as a result of those ads," said Howard, telephoning the newspaper. "Right now it looks as if both will start for us this winter."

THERE ARE MANY QUESTIONS ABOUT THE HOSPITAL DISTRICT ELECTION!

1. Will the improvements help us attract more doctors and make it easier for families to get a doctor?
2. Will there be new Coronary Care facilities to provide quality care in case my husband has a heart attack?
3. Will we expand the Labor and Delivery Ward which now is too small?
4. Will the old rooms in the original hospital be rennovated?
5. Will the paying patient be relieved of the indigent care/bad debt burden?
6. Will all Midlanders now have a voice in running the hospital?
7. Will there be additional space for surgery?
8. Will we be able to stay in Midland and not go to Odessa or Lubbock for most medical matters?
9. Will room rates remain reasonable?
10. Will the Directors be elected by the people?
11. Have all other alternatives for hospital renovation and expansion been ex-explored?
12. Will the people of Midland own Midland Memorial Hospital?
13. Is the Hospital District the most economical way to go?
14. Willl the Hospital District work to hold down medical costs for Senior Citizens?
15. Will the Hospital District serve all of Midland County?
16. Is the District similar in structure to Midland College District?

YES
IS THE ANSWER TO ALL OF THESES QUESTIONS
IF YOU VOTE YES ON SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 17
REMEMBER
IT TAKES YEARS TO BUILD A GOOD HOSPITAL...
BUT ONLY SECONDS TO NEED ONE...

Operators schedule 90 operations in Permian Basin

Ninety petroleum tests were scheduled for West Texas and Southeast New Mexico last week, compared with 110 permit applications submitted by operators to regulator bodies two weeks ago.

Last week's tally included 16 wildcat applications and 74 pool tests.

District 8-A of the Texas Railroad Commission, headquartered in Lubbock, was the leader in explorator tests planned, with eight.

District 7-C, San Angelo, reported five wildcats, while District 8, Midland, accounted for two.

Offices of the RRC for District 8 at Midland reported 32 pool tests, District 8-A showed 22, while District 7-C had six development applications.

Tucker nomination to CAB meets opposition in Senate

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The White House has run into serious opposition in Congress over President Carter's nomination of Donald L. Tucker, speaker of the Florida House of Representatives, to be vice chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board.

A report prepared by the staff of the Senate Commerce Committee is said to have linked Tucker to a series of sizable financial deals that some panel members say are questionable.

Several persons familiar with the report likened the findings to the dealings involving President Carter's budget director, Bert Lance. One source said the panel's disclosures "make the Lance affair look tame."

Sen. Howard W. Cannon (D-Nev.), chairman of the panel's aviation subcommittee, outlined the findings in the report last Saturday to Robert J. Lipshutz, counsellor to the President, in a meeting at the White House.

Although Cannon apparently did not specifically recommend that the White House withdraw the nomination, he reportedly indicated there was substantial opposition to the appointment among both Republicans and Democrats.

While the panel has not taken any official nosecount, sources close to the committee indicated it now was unlikely that more than a handful of the 18 senators would support the nomination.

The issue appears now to be at a standstill. Senator Warren G. Magnuson (D-Wash.), chairman of the Commerce Committee, said Tuesday the report was only preliminary, and the panel would continue its probe.

The White House also seems prepared to let the issue cool. One official involved in the Tucker nomination said the administration would not even consider further action until the committee completes its work.

Tucker, in a telephone interview from his office in Tallahassee, denied any wrong doing in his financial dealings, and said he did not intend to ask that his nomination be withdrawn.

"There's no reason I can see that the Senate Commerce Committee would oppose the nomination," he asserted. He said the White House had called on Monday to reassure him of the President's support.

Although both committee members and staff members refused to discuss the findings of the panel, sources confirmed the document focused in part on two instances of possible preferential treatment for Tucker on bank loans.

Several persons familiar with the report said the document also showed "a pattern" of questionable financial dealings, which some said was similar in scope to the Lance case.

The report was distributed privately to Senators at a meeting of the committee last Friday, and then returned to the panel's safe. The full committee had been scheduled to meet Tuesday, but postponed the matter indefinitely.

Possibly the most controversial item the panel is known to have investigated involves the possibility that Tucker may have received favored treatment on loans made by the Southeast First National Bank in Tallahassee.

In one case, the bank approved a $200,000 loan to a partnership that included Tucker and Richar Pelham, a Tallahassee developer, just eight days after Tucker helped push through a bill allowing branch banking in the state.

Accoridng to newspaper reports at the time, the loan previously had been rejected. Florida sources say that until the legislature approved the bill, branch banking measures repeatedly had been defeated.

The incident was investigated by a federal grand jury, but the panel concluded there were "no prosecutable violations of federal law." Tucker denied Tuesday there was any link between the loan and the banking bill.

Several directors of the Southeast Banking Corporation, the holding company which owns the bank, are officers or directors of major airlines, which would fall under Tucker's jurisdiction if he were at CAB.

A spot check Tuesday showed that Harry Hood Bassett, chairman of the holding company, is a director of Eastern Airlines. Frank Borman, another Southeast director, is president of Eastern. And Louis J. Hector is a director of both companies.

Another transaction being investigated by the committee involved a $350,000 loan which Southeast made to a real estate company in which Tucker had a financial interest. The firm owned a building leased in part by the state.

In that case, the loan was five months overdue, but bank officials were reluctant to call it in, apparently because of Tucker's position as House speaker.

Newspaper reports at that time quoted an interoffice memorandum written by A. W. Crowley, the bank's assistant president, saying: "Because of Mr. Tucker's prominence in the state legislature and his potential influence over the state agency that leases the building, legal action does not appear to be a practical solution."

Tucker denied Tuesday there was any impropriety in either transaction. A disclosure statement he filed with the Commerce Committee asserts he has "no investments, obligations, liabilities, or other relations which could involve potential conflicts of interest ..."

The unaudited statement shows that as of last April 30, he had a net worth of $430,350, with assets estimated at $1.031 million and liabilities of just under $601,000.

He listed outstanding loans of $227,900 in short-term notes and $117,539 in long-term debts — the latter with annual interest charges totaling $15,120.

The statement also listed $70,114 in "honoria" from a Donald L. Tucker appreciation dinner, apparently a fund-raiser for a possible gubernatorial campaign in 1978.

Tucker apparently was nominated for the CAB post as something of a political reward. The House speaker was candidate Carter's first prominent supporter in the critical 1976 Florida primary.

Several prominent Florida business and political leaders had pressured the White House to appoint someone from their state to serve on the CAB. The appointment won the endorsement of the State Legislature.

Court reverses 1961 conviction

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals Wednesday reversed a 1961 murder conviction because the defendant had no lawyer when he went before the late State District Court Judge J. Frank Wilson of Dallas for sentencing.

The high court ordered Will Rains Jr. remanded to the Dallas County Sheriff for retrial.

Rains sought to have the conviction reversed despite the fact that he has been on parole since March 1976.

Texas Oil & Gas Corp. officials were guests of the Midland Wildcat Committee in the Petroleum Club of Midland Wednesday. From left, seated, are John Morgan, senior vice president; J. Texas Oil & Gas officials feted

William L. Hutchison, president of Texas Oil & Gas Corp. of Dallas, and other officials of the company were guests of the Midland Wildcat Committee at a reception in the Petroleum Club of Midland.

Honored along with Hutchison were J. Ralph Ellis Jr., executive vice president; T. E. Lohman, senior vice president; John Morgan, senior vice president; Bob Young, general counsel and secretary; H. P. Schrauff, vice president-Finance, all of Dallas; M. A. Odegard, vice president, Denver; Lou Little, vice president, Corpus Christi, and Charles L. Canfield, vice president, Midland.

TO&G has more than 1,000 employes on its payroll, with 60 of them based in the West Texas District office in Midland.

In addition to land, exploration and production offices in Midland, the company maintains a gas gathering staff here.

Hutchison said his company spent $11,000,000 in the Permian Basin during the fiscal year ended Aug. 31. "We are increasing our exploration in this area and expect to spend approximately $15,000,000 this year," he said.

Hutchison said that when Canfield moved to Midland about 18 months ago as manager of the West Texas district there were 40 persons employed here.

Texas O&G has maintained offices in Midland since 1968.

Hutchison said his company's outlook is good in spite of the Carter energy package now being thrashed out in in the Senate.

He said the whole thing, especially the intervention by government in the energy field, is displeasing to the oil industry.

"The thing that is literally a shame is in the area of intrastate delivery of gas supplies. Texas operators, along with those in the other gas-producing states, have developed these supplies at their own expense and now the government is cutting back the price for which those supplies can be sold," Hutchison said.

"And," he added, "our supplies can be taken away from us and shipped to other areas whenever the President decides there is an emergency.

Another thing that Hutchison hit on was the situation faced by the utilities industry in the Carter energy program. "Pretty soon, the government will be telling us when to get up and when to go to bed."

Hutchison said TO&G isn't into the alternate energy field "big" right now. "We organized a minerals division about 18 months ago, but so far, its primary function has been to keep tract of what is going on in that field. We have been looking at coal and uranium interests.

"The oil and gas business is good," Hutchison said. "We have about 220 million cubic feet of gas per day production now, and we intend to increase our efforts in this area, along with an increased search for oil. We expect our Midland office to continue expanding," the company president said.

Professors predict dire outlook for petroleum

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The United States "will face mortal risk to our economic prosperity" even if all of President Carter's stringent energy measures are enacted, predict three University of Texas professors.

"Every objective assessment," of President Carter's National Energy Policy (NEP) and the House proposal patterned on the policy indicate they "will fail to meet the 1985 energy consumption, production and balance of payments targets required in the national interest," the professors said Wednesday.

The report — by Walt Rostow, William Fisher and Herbert Woodson — says that an all-out effort to produce energy must be launched in 1977 to avoid a crisis.

Rostow, Fisher and Woodson said the United States might be importing as much as 15 million barrels of oil a day by 1985, and added:

"Three independent estimates make it clear that a U.S. requirement of this magnitude will create a major international economic crisis."

The report also concludes that the U.S. has enough oil and gas to return production to the 1976 level — the NEP target, but up to 50 per cent more must be spent on exploration and development than set forth in the House proposal.

Therefore, they said, there exists a reasonably adequate reserve and resource base of oil and gas sufficient to support current rates of production for more than 50 years.

"It has been argued," the report added, "that the price structure proposed in the NEP and in HR-8444 is adequate for oil and gas operators to realize a sufficient profit.

"This may well be the case. But what is at stake for the nation is not the adequacy of current profits by business standards — it is rather the rate of drilling and production.

"Even if proposed pricing structures provided for sufficient profit, is the price structure adequate to generate the level of cash flow necessary to mount and sustain the drilling effort required to meet the planned 1985 oil and gas production goals? We conclude ...that it is not, and that 1985 national oil and gas production will be as much as five million barrels a day below the NEP goal.'

They said $699 billion (in 1976 prices) must be invested to fulfill production and conservation targets of NEP.

The report said the "earliest possible deregulation of new natural gas is essential" with a new gas price of $2.25 to $2.50 per thousand cubic feet necessary by 1985.

Chairman Mack Wallace of the Texas Railroad Commission sat in on a news conference on the professors' report and hailed it as a "momentous occasion."

"It completely dispels the idea that we don't have the minerals to produce," Wallace said.

Field opener potentials; wildcat operations set

A discovery has been completed in Sutton County, while Fisher and Tom Green drew sites for wildcats and a strike offset was staked in Crockett.

Longhorn Exploration of San Angelo completed No.1 J. W. McDermott, a Canyon oil discovery ¾ mile southwest of Canyon gas production in the Roberts field of Sutton.

It had a 24-hour pumping potential of 153 barrels of 31-gravity oil and 13 barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio measuring 2,000-1.

Completion was effected through perforations at 3,754-3,784 feet, following 1,000 gallons of mud acid and 4,500 gallons of regular acid. Drilled to 3,835 feet, it has 4½-inch casing set at that depth, and it is plugged back to 3,828 feet. Top of pay was picked at 3,751 feet, under ground elevation of 2,332 feet.

It is 660 feet from north and 1,950 feet from west lines of section 56, block 9, TW&NG survey, 15 miles northeast of Sonora.

Caraway Operating Co., San Angelo, No. 1 Marylou Hall, has been staked as a 5,350-foot wildcat in Tom Green County, 13 miles southeast of San Angelo.

Drillsite is 953 feet from north and 1,320 feet from east lines of section 15, block 25, H&TC survey.

It is also ½ mile southwest of the Christoval (5100 Strawn) oil field.

An Abilene operator, Elliott Oil Co., has filed application with the Texas Railroad Commission to drill No. 1 Jesse Turner, et al, as a 6,000-foot wildcat in Fisher County.

Located 1¾ mile east of the Eskota, West (Ellenburger) field, it spots 3,558 feet from south and 467 feet from east lines of William Lytle survey 227, two miles east of Eskota.

The No' 1 L. L. Stuart, a 4,200-foot venture, has been staked by Marshall R. Young Oil Co., of Fort Worth.

The Fisher County project is 550 feet from north and 6,428 feet from west lines of Thomas H. Cosby survey 315, one mile north of Roby and ⅜ mile southwest of the depleted Roby-Goolsby (Cisco) field discovery.

Crockett County's stepout location is C. F. Lawrence & Associates, Inc. No. 2 Pond, has been scheduled to 2,300 feet, and is one location northeast of the discovery, which was completed in October 1976.

The project is 1,980 feet from north and east lines of section 3, block GG, H&OB survey, 16 miles east of Iraan.

The discovery was the same operator's No. 1 Pond. It finaled pumping 44 barrels of 32-gravity oil per day, through perforations at 1,511-1,609 feet.

Pair of discoveries head oil, gas activity in New Mexico counties

Two discoveries have been completed in Eddy County, N.M., while a confirmer finaled in one field, and an extender in another. Also, a stepout is planned in another. A confirmation well finaled in one Chaves pool and two stepouts were planned for another. Roosevelt gained a confirmation, and a Lea project recovered shows on a test.

The Little Box Canyon Field of Eddy gained its third pay, the Cisco, with completion of Yates Petroleum Corp., Artesia, No. 3 Box Canyon.

The well flowed on preliminary completion test at the daily rate of 3.6 million cubic feet of gas per day, natural, through perforations at 6,008-6,034 feet, on a ½-inch choke. Gravity and gas-oil ratio were unreported.

Top of the Cisco was picked at 5,478 feet. Drilled to 8,450 feet, and plugged back to 7,954 feet, 4½-inch casing was cemented to bottom.

Location is 1,980 feet from south and east lines of section 14-21s-21e, 35 miles northwest of Carlsbad.

The field also produces gas from the Atoka and Morrow zones.

Orla Petco, Inc., Midland, has completed No. 1 Pardue as a Delaware oil discovery in Eddy, 3½ miles northwest of Loving.

It had a 24-hour pumping potential of 38 barrels of 41-gravity oil and 50 barrels of water. It finaled through perforations at 2,466-2,474 feet. Treatment was not reported.

Drilled to 4,099 feet, it has 4½-inch casing set at 3,445 feet, and is plugged back to 2,600 feet.

Wellsite is 660 feet from north and 1,900 feet from east lines of section 6-23s-28e.

Yates Petroleum Corp. has finaled a second well and one-mile northeast extension in a newly opened Wolfcamp sector of Eddy, nine miles northwest of Artesia.

No. 1-HW Robinson-Federal finaled for a daily flowing potential of 305,000 cubic feet of gas daily, through perforations at 4,763-4,855 feet, on a ¼-inch choke. Gravity and gas-oil ratio were unreported.

Staked as a wildcat, it was drilled to 7,116 feet, and plugged back to 6,080 feet, in 4½-inch casing set at 6,478 feet. Top of the Wolfcamp was picked at 4,748 feet, under ground elevation of 3,638 feet.

Location is 1,980 feet from south and west lines of section 25-16s-24e.

The discovery, Yates No. 1-HS Collins-Federal, finaled last June for 700,000 cubic feet of gas daily, through a ½-inch choke and perforations at 4,675-4,837 feet.

Morris R. Antweil, operating from Hobbs, N.M., has finaled No. 1 Rio as a 1¼-mile northwest extension to Morrow gas production in the Penasco field of Eddy, 10 miles southwest of Artesia.

The calculated, absolute open flow was for 6.516 million cubic feet of gas per day, producing through perforations at 8,685-8,713 feet. Total depth is 8,868 feet, where 5½-inch casing is set, and it is plugged back to 8,824 feet.

Location is 1,980 feet from north and east lines of section 29-18s-25e.

JFG Enterprises, Artesia, will drill No. 1 Daugherty, a 2,180-foot project, as a location southeast stepout to the two-well Daugherty (San Andres) field of Eddy.

Location is 330 feet from north and 2,310 feet from east lines of section 10-17s-27e, seven miles east of Artesia.

CHAVES ACTIVITY

Tom L. Ingram, Roswell, finaled a second well and ⅜-mile northwest extension in the White Ranch (Mississippian) field of Chaves County, N.M., 19 miles southwest of Caprock.

No. 4 White Ranch gauged a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 2.073 million cubic feet of gas per day, through perforations at 8,502-8,535 feet. No treatment was reported.

It has 5½-inch casing set at 8,810 feet, total depth, and is plugged back to 8,682 feet.

Location is 660 feet from north and east lines of section 33-11s-29e.

The discovery, Ingram No. 1 White Ranch, finaled May 26, 1977 for 3.215 million cubic feet of gas per day, plus an unreported amount of condensate, gravity 64.7 degrees, through perforations at 8,320-8,349 feet.

Two outposts have been slated in the Calumet (San Andres) field of Chaves.

Flag-Redfern No. 1-A-35 Federal, 5½ miles southeast of the discovery, spots 660 feet from north and east lines of section 35-12s-26e, seven miles northeast of Dexter. It is slated for a bottom depth of 1,400 feet.

Elk Oil Co., operating from Roswell, will drill No. 2 Dexter-State, 1¼ mile southeast of the depleted Dexter field and 5½ miles southeast of the Calument field opener.

It is slated to 1,700 feet, and spots 1,980 feet from north and 660 feet from west lines of section 36-12s-26e.

The Calument opener, Elk No. 1 Cecil Johnson, finaled March 24, 1977, for four barrels of 27.5-gravity oil per day, through perforations at 1,125-1,199 feet.

ROOSEVELT EXTENDER

Sundance Oil Co., Denver, No. 1 Chambers-Federal has been finaled as a second well and location north extension in the Tomahawk (San Andres) field of Roosevelt County, N.M.

The 24-hour pumping potential was for 80 barrels of oil and 55 barrels of water, with gravity and gas-oil ratio unreported.

It finaled through perforations at 4,162-4,174 feet, in 4½-inch casing set at 4,350 feet, total depth.

It is 660 feet from south and east lines of section 30-7s-32e, 16 miles south of Elida.

The discovery, Sundance No. 1-31 Cone-Federal finaled May 12, 1977 for 80 barrels of oil daily, through perforations at 4,161-4,275 feet.

LEA PROJECT

Victory III Petroleum Co., Houston, No. 1-22 New Mexico-State, Lea County, N.M., scheduled wildcat, seven miles northeast of Maljamar and one mile north and slightly east of a two-well undesignated Seaman field, recovered shows on a drillstem test in the Seaman.

Tool was open two hours on the test taken from 11,212-11,250 feet. Recovery was the 1,400-foot water blanket, 350 feet of oil-cut mud and 90 feet of drilling fluid.

Drilling continued below 11,463 feet on a 14,000-foot contract.

It is 1,980 feet from south and west lines of section 22-16s-33e.

Discovery completes

A discovery finaled in Gaines County, and site was staked for a wildcat.

I. W. Lovelady of Midland completed No. 1 Hudson as a San Andres oil strike, six miles southwest of Denvr City, for a 24-hour flowing potential of 126 barrels of 35.5-gravity oil and 47 barrels of water. Gas-oil ratio was 500-1.

Completion was through perforations at 4,980-5,018 feet, after treating with 1,000 gallons. Choke was 18-64-inch.

Drilled to 5,060 feet, it has 5½-inch casing set on bottom. Top of the San Andres was picked at 4,265 feet, under ground elevation of 3,622 feet.

Location is 660 feet from south and wests lines of section 65, block AX, PSL survey.

Samedan Oil Corp. accounted for a 12,600-foot Devonian wildcat to be drilled 18 miles southeast of Seminole. It is No. 1 Smith.

Location is 467 feet from north and 1,320 feet from west lines of labor 25, league 291, Lynn CSL survey.

L. Seber named

ODESSA — Eckel Manufacturing Co., inc., has announced the appointment of Gerald L. Seber as vice president, International Sales.

Seber, formerly director of marketing for Weatherford-Lamb, Inc., will direct all international sales efforts from the newly-established offices of Eckel International, Inc., in Houston.

Home offices and manufacturing facilities are in Odessa.

Also recently appointed to International Sales is Carl Dockel, who also was with Weatherford-Lamb.

Tom Mooney, formerly with Varco International, joins the Houston office in a domestic sales capacity.

Midland Youth Center chatter

By DINAH BOYD, KIM WOOD and SHERI BAILEY

Hope everyone enjoyed their weekend and the Septemberfest!

The MHS mighty football team tied El Paso Eastwood last Friday night. This Friday, they will travel to Lubbock to play Monterey. GOOD LUCK BULLDOGS! Bring us home a victory, GO GET 'EM!

The MHS varsity volleyball team was defeated in the Angelo State Tournanent held last weekend. This weekend they will challenge Amarillo High and Tascosa High in a scrimmage play. Only the varsity will attend the scrimmage which will be held in Amarillo. GOOD LUCK GIRLS!

Sorry to have announced last week that we would bring you our new Senior and Junior class Officers. There were too many run-offs in the election so we will announce the winners in next week's Chatter.

We do have the results of our new Sophomore cheerleaders. They are Drue Perry, Milby Hartwell, Catherine Baimbridge and alternate Kim Russell. CONGRATULATIONS!!! The sophomore class officer election will be held Sept. 28, so do not forget to sign up, and good luck to all the contenders.

The Packbackers would like to thank Mid-Tex of Midland, Andy's Lumber Co. and Builders and Home Owners Supply for their donations. The girls appreciate all the help you have given them.

The Student Council representatives were nominated Monday. All officers, cabinet members, and representatives "must" attend the Student Council meetings. The meetings are held every Tuesday morning at 7:30. PLEASE ATTEND!

All of us who know and love Mrs. Snure (Mit Nure) wish her a speedy recovery. We are thinking of you.

HOWDY EVERYONE! We are going to have our first dance of the school year on Friday night, Sept. 23. It is the finalization of Howdy Week. Nominations for Howdy Week favorites will be held Tuesday. Travelin' Sound Disco will provide the music. Get yourself a partner and see ya at the dance.

A reminder to all 100 Club members: There is a meeting TONIGHT to elect your officers. So be there!!!

JUNIOR COUNCIL LUNCH WORKERS GET THOSE HEALTH CARDS IN!!!

Well that about wraps it up for this week. See ya later!

That's life,
Dinah
Kim
Sheri

P.S. The Lee Rebels are playing the Plainview Bulldogs Friday night here. Good luck Rebs!!!

Child finds Peru, Florida different

By HENRY S. ACKERMAN

LIMA, Peru (AP) — "Daddy, when are we going to get to the United States?" my 6-year-old daughter, Vandy, asked as we sped through hectic expressway traffic from the airport after a half day's journey from Peru during a recent vacation trip.

"We are in the United States. We're in the state of Florida," I replied, surprised by the question as I turned to my wife, Mell, and saw her smile.

I saw the Orange Bowl on the right, which alleviated my own private doubts. But from the back seat of our rented car, Vandy then confided to her brother Henry, 2, in English:

"Henry, we're in the United States of Florida."

Vandy was born in Argentina. She first walked in New York. Back in Argentina again, she learned Spanish, then English. At 3 she moved to Lima. By the time she reached Miami, altogether Vandy had lived abroad five years and had flown 32,000 air miles.

But Miami was a new world, she seemed to be saying, and we agreed. To us, it was startling. Miami airport's 800 flights a day outnumber all the flights from Lima's airport for a month.

As we breakfasted I read of Florida's $7.5 billion budget, which is three times that of Peru.

We pulled out our map and realized that within 10 miles radius of the Miami Herald building there are more limited access expressways than in all of Peru's territory, which is eight times larger than Florida. We exited from the restaurant into heavy rain. Vandy hadn't seen rain in a year for her home, Lima, is a small green oasis in one of the hemisphere's driest deserts.

"There are so many semaforos (stoplights) here," Vandy said. "Why do people seem to obey them? They don't in Peru."

We reached Miami's Dadeland shopping center, which probably does more retail business in a month than all Lima's commercial outlets in a year.

At the toy counter of a major drug store, we priced a durable plastic truck — ideal for Henry to ride but too big to take back on the plane. In Miami, it cost $12. In Lima, it would sell for $50, if you could get it.

Vandy then marveled at the electronic cash registers. "Do they use money in Florida?" she asked. "Everyone seems to be using little plastic cards."

Our brief vacation took us north to Tallahassee, the state capital and Vandy's grandparents' home. There she saw elementary schools more favorably appointed than in Peru's education ministry.

While her parents read that the average price of a Florida house was about $47,000, enough to buy 50 brick houses for Lima slumdwellers, Vandy's world did not go that deep:

For the moment, it consisted of hamburgers, Cheerios and Mr. Greenjeans, whose Sesame Street name she understood for the first time when she saw color TV.

Flying back to to Miami, Vandy asked an airline attendant if she could have a sticker to put on her new lunchbox.

"I'm sorry," the stewardess said, "the kids who got on the plane from Disneyworld (in Orlando) got the last ones."

"What is Disneyworld?" Vandy asked innocently.

Disneyworld can handle up to 50,000 tourists a day, we learned. Machu Picchu, Peru's top attraction, has 400 tourists on an average day.

At the Miami airport, Vandy overheard the announcement of our flight in two languages.

"Why do they speak so much Spanish here," she said drowsily. "We're in the United States."

I wanted to tell her about the Cubans who live there — and why — just as we are Americans living in Peru. But it was too late.

Vandy was asleep.

Painters plan fall show

Plans for an annual Fall Arts and Crafts Show and Sale were discussed when the Tuesday Painters of the Midland Palette Club met in the clubhouse at 604 N. Colorado St.

The sale will be held Nov. 19 in Dellwood Mall.

Marilyn Leierer, program chairman, conducted a show and tell program with each member participating.

Painting-of-the-month award went to Mrs. Jo Elliot for her oil painting of "West Texas Farm Land," which will be on display in Midland National Bank during September.

Mrs. Edna Walger of Midland will give a program on crafts at the October meeting.

Guests attending were Mrs. Alice Cole of Bakersfield, Calif., Mrs. Hettie Currie, Mrs. Carol Dean and Mrs. Ellen Dern. Hostesses were Paulin McWilliams, Irene Perryman and Jo Nell Harkrider.

Midkiff club plays bridge

MIDKIFF — The Midkiff Bridge Club met in the home of Mrs. Margaret Whorton, with Mrs. James C. Short Jr. and Mrs. Carlos Dusek attending as guests.

Mrs. Ray R. Barrett Jr. was high scorer and Mrs. Tennie Rosenbaum and Mrs. Willie D. Poynor won the special prize.

DEAR ABBY

Sex education 'puts' ideas into kids' heads

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I may be old-fashioned, but I can't see teaching sixth and seventh graders sex in the schoolroom. They are a long way from needing that kind of information. Why rush them? If you start putting ideas about sex into their heads, first thing you know, they'll start experimenting.

No wonder we have so many unmarried mothers among teenagers. I read in your column that venereal disease is now an epidemic in this country.

What can be done to stop all this sex education, Abby?— CONCERNED IN ILLINOIS

DEAR CONCERNED: If there really WERE all the sex education you claim there is, we'd have LESS teenage pregnancy and V.D.—not more.

No one has to put "ideas" about sex into the heads of children. It's there already. Sexual feelings and curiosity about sex are natural and normal in all children. And so is experimenting.

Ideally, parents should provide their children with a proper sex education, but surveys show that most of them do not, so some schools provide it. Unfortunately, the only states that have laws requiring sex education in the schools are Hawaii, Kentucky, Michigan, Maryland, Missouri and North Dakota. (Louisiana expressly forbids it.) The old saying, "What you don't know can't hurt you" is not true. On the contrary—it CAN hurt you. And it's hurting all of us.

DEAR ABBY: In reply to HURT WIFE, who asked, "What makes a happily married, religious man go to a place like a massage parlor?" you replied: "Curiosity. Lust. An itch for variety. The fear of missing something. Wanting to be 'one of the boys.' Being too chicken to refuse when one of his pals suggested it. Temporary insanity."

Abby, did it ever occur to you that maybe he just wanted a massage!—ARTHUR

DEAR ARTHUR: It's possible. But if YOU had been writing this column for more than 20 years, I'll bet that's the LAST answer you'd have come up with.

DEAR ABBY: Why do people place so much importance on manners? From the time kids learn to walk and talk, adults hassle them about manners and being polite.

I don't see what good it does to stand up when an older person or a lady comes into the room. And there are dozens of other rules that come under the heading of "manners" that make no sense at all.

Maybe you can explain it to me.—DON'T GET IT

DEAR DON'T: To answer your question, no one said it better than the late and great Amy Vanderbilt:

"Good manners are the traffic rules for society in general. Without good manners, living would be chaotic, human beings unbearable to each other. Reduced to a phrase, good manners is consideration of other people in respect to their feelings, their safety, their privacy and their full social rights and privileges."

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

AT WIT'S END

Non-smokers take over as next militant group

By ERMA BOMBECK

Mark my word. The next group of militants to dominate the American scene will be the non-smokers. I've seen it coming for a couple of years now.

The face-off started out civil enough. First, the non-smokers displayed a small sign with, "THANK YOU FOR NOT SMOKING." The smokers retaliated with a polite, but stiff, "YOU'RE WELCOME."

The smokers countered with, "Do you mind very much if we smoke?" to which the non-smokers replied with a smile, "Of course not. Just don't EXhale."

The exchanges have continued to gain momentum and every day in this country a bumper sticker proclaiming, "I QUIT!" crashes into a bumper sticker maintaining, "I DIDN'T."

Airlines have become a battleground for the dissention. The segregation of smokers and non-smokers has divided wives and husbands, executives and clients, and has gotten some illicit weekends off to a shaky start.

Recently, on a guided tour, the sightseeing buses were divided into smoking and non-smoking. One day when a man boarded the non-smoking bus, someone noted he had a pack of cigarettes bulging in his shirt pocket. "He's one of them," cried a non-smoker. "We don't want your kind on this bus," he said. "Take your nicotine breath and your stained index finger back to your own group!" For a minute, I thought the poor man was going to be stoned as he made a hurried exit.

"You shouldn't have talked to your Father that way," said the woman. "I know Mom," he said, "but sometimes being cruel is a kindness."

The battle is going to get worse. There are evidences everyday. Little things. Like a Marlboro man rode his horse on the lawn of a non-smoker in Wyoming the other day and made do do.

A sailor on one of the big ocean liners painted all the lifeboats SMOKERS ONLY. A smoker in New York daily goes around planting smoldering cigaretts on elevators and calling the N.Y. Times.

There is an underground movie being circulated showing that clean air causes bleeding gums.

Rumors have it that small fires are being started by militant smokers, but I don't for a minute buy that. I mean, have you ever known a smoker in your life who has a match on him?

Flavors blend well in these recipe using pork

By MARJORIE RICE
Copley News Service

Some things seem naturally to go together.

There are steak and baked potatoes; fish and chips; fried chicken, mashed potatoes and gravy.

Pork goes with mushrooms, with apples and even with chili.

Here are some recipes using pork.

PORK CHOPS WITH MUSHROOMS

1 lb. fresh mushrooms
5 tbsps. butter
Three-fourths cup chopped onions
1 cup bread cubes
2 tbsps. chopped parsley
One and one-fourth tsps. salt
One-fourth tsp. pepper
6 center-cut pork chops (one-inch thick)
2 tbsps. oil
1 beef bouillon cube
Water
One-half tsp. crumbled rosemary
1 tsp. paprika
1 tbsp. flour
1 cup plain yogurt
2 (10-ozs. each) pkgs. frozen leaf spinach

Rinse and pat dry fresh mushrooms; slice half and chop half; set aside.

In medium skillet, melt three tablespoons butter. Add onions; saute two minutes.

Stir in chopped mushrooms; saute two minutes longer. Mix in bread cubes, parsley, one-half teaspoon salt and one-eighth teaspoon pepper; set aside.

With a sharp knife, cut a pocket in each pork chop. Sprinkle outside of chops with three-fourths teaspoon salt mixed with one-eighth teaspoon black pepper. Stuff about one-fourth cup cooked mushroom mixture into each pocket. Secure with toothpicks.

In a large skillet, heat oil. Add chops, and brown about five minutes on each side. Remove chops from skillet; dissolve bouillon cube in one-half cup boiling water; add to skillet, blend with juices, scraping brown bits from skillet. Place chops in skillet; sprinkle with rosemary; bring to boil; reduce heat and simmer, covered, until chops are tender (45 minutes).

While chops cook, melt remaining two tablespoons butter in medium skillet. Add sliced mushrooms; saute two minutes. When chops are tender, remove from large skillet, and keep warm. Add sauteed sliced mushrooms to sauce in large skillet, along with paprika. Blend flour into sauce, cooking and stirring until thickened. Stir in yogurt (do not boil); return chops to skillet, cover and simmer for five minutes.

Cook spinach according to package directions; drain. To serve, arrange chops on bed of cooked spinach; spoon sauce over chops; sprinkle with chopped parsley. Serve with remaining sauce. Makes six servings.

ROAST PORK AND APPLES AND APPLEJACK

5 lb. pork loin roast (have chops cracked by butcher)
Three-fourths cup applejack (apple brandy)
1 tbsp. salt
Pepper, nutmeg to taste
One-fourth tsp. ground cloves
2 allspice berries, crushed
6 medium-size potatoes
6 large, tart apples
One-half cup brown sugar
One-fourth tsp. cinnamon

Marinate pork in applejack at least four hours (or can be marinated overnight), spooning liquid over meat several times. About three hours before serving time, drain and save marinade. Rub pork on all surfaces with salt and pepper; sprinkle on a liberal coating of freshly ground nutmeg and the cloves and allspice.

Put the meat on a rack in a roasting pan and roast in a 325-degree oven for two hours.

About one hour before serving, peel potatoes; boil in salted water for five minutes; drain; cut into quarters and pat dry.

Pour fat from roasting pan into a shallow pan; toss potatoes in fat. Remove pork from roasting pan. Peel, core and slice the apples and spread them in the roasting pan; sprinkle them with brown sugar and cinnamon.

Warm the reserved marinade, adding about one-fourth cup applejack. Set it aflame; pour over the apples. Place pork roast on the bed of apples; place partially cooked potatoes around the meat, and roast for 45 minutes more, or until pork is tender. (If meat seems to be getting dry, cover with foil.) Turn the potatoes about 30 minutes after they begin to roast. Makes eight servings.

CHILIED PORK CHOPS

4 thick loin chops
6 tbsps. oil
2 garlic cloves, finely chopped
1 medium onion, finely chopped
1 tsp. oregano
1 tsp. cumin
One and one-half tsps. salt
1 cup tomato sauce
2 tbsps. chili powder
2 tbsps. chopped, peeled, green chilies (long, green type; not jalapenos)
Fresh cilantro (coriander)

Sear chops very quickly in hot oil, turning several times until nicely browned. Pour off excess fat; reduce heat to medium. Add garlic and onion, and cook until wilted but not brown.

Add oregano, cumin, salt and tomato sauce; cover and simmer 10 minutes. Uncover; add chili powder and turn the chops. Simmer, uncovered, 10 minutes. Correct seasoning. Transfer chops to hot platter. Let the sauce boil for a minute or two, and spoon over the chops. Sprinkled on chopped chiles and cilantro. Serve with pinto or refried beans.

APPLE SALAD

We've added olives and walnuts to the original pristine Waldorf combination of apple and celery.

1¼ cups pared diced (¼-inch) apple
¼ cup mayonnaise
¾ cup finely diced celery
¼ cup thinly sliced pimiento-stuffed green olives
¼ cup coarsely broken walnuts, preferably toasted
Lettuce

Stir together the apple and mayonnaise; stir in the celery, olives and walnuts. Serve at once on lettuce. If you want to make the salad mixture ahead, omit the nuts; cover and chill; just before serving stir in the nuts. Makes 4 servings.

Sunny ideas for preserving peaches for winter use

By KAY JARVIS
Copley News Service

Peaches are such beautiful fruit, there is really no need to enhance them in any way.

But it's pleasant to tuck them into a pie or preserve that summery taste for the colder days of winter.

Here are some ideas for using peaches in unusual ways. Two recipes for using the sun as a preserving agent are given plus a frozen peach topping, which makes good use of slightly overripe or bruised fruit.

SUN-DRIED PEACHES

Fresh peaches
Cheesecloth

Wash peaches, halve and remove pits. (If fruit is large, slice halves again horizontally.) Line the bottom of drying trays or shallow boxes with double layer of cheesecloth. Spread fruit slightly apart on cheesecloth.

Cover trays with single layer of cheesecloth so that cloth does not touch fruit. Arrange trays in sun, on table or benches. Check occasionally, turning peaches once a day and moving trays when shaded.

Bring trays indoors at night. Drying takes two to seven days, depending on temperature and humidity. Fruit is dry enough when it is soft, pliable, and still slightly soft in center when cut.

To store: place in double plastic bags or glass jars with lids. Let fruit mellow for two weeks before eating. If packaged fruit is stored in cool place, refrigerator or freezer, it should keep for a year.

Drying may be completed indoors. Place uncovered trays in preheated 200-degree oven, close door and turn off heat. Keep peaches in closed oven two to three days, turning once a day. If oven becomes cold, reheat at 200 degrees; turn off heat.

(If oven is needed during the day, peaches can be kept at room temperature until they can be returned to oven.) Check peaches for desired "doneness" every 12 hours.

FRESH PEACH LEATHER

10 large fresh, ripe peaches (about two and one-half to three pounds)
1 cup sugar

Dip peaches in boiling water for about 30 seconds. With slotted spoon transfer to cold water; slip off skins. Slice, discarding pits, enough peaches to measure 10 cups. In large saucepan, mix peaches and sugar.

Bring mixture to boil, stirring until sugar is dissolved; boil three minutes. Pour into blender container; whirl smooth. Cool to lukewarm.

Meanwhile, prepare a smooth, level drying surface in full sunlight. Cover cookie sheets or baking pans with clear plastic wrap. Spread puree one-fourth-inch thick on prepared surfaces and let dry in sunlight. Drying may take up to 24 hours. Bring pans inside at end of day and finish drying second day.

Fruit is dry when puree can be peeled off the plastic covering easily. For storing, roll up leather in plastic wrap. Wrap in more plastic wrap and seal tightly. Leather will keep at room temperature about one month, in refrigerator about four months, or one year in the freezer. Makes about four sheets (12x15 inches each).

Note: Drying may be finished indoors. Set cookie sheets in preheated 200-degree oven, turn off heat. If oven becomes cold, reheat at 200 degrees; turn off heat.

FROZEN PEACH TOPPING

10 to 12 fresh peaches (about 3.5 pounds)
One-fourth tsp. ascorbic acid mixture
1 (1.75- or 2-oz.) pkg. powdered pectin
3 cups sugar

Dip peaches in boiling water for about 30 seconds. With slotted spoon, transfer to cold water; slip off skins. As you work, drop peaches into bowl of salted water (two tablespoons salt per gallon of water).

Slice about five peaches; whirl in blender one-third at a time to make three cups puree. Stir in ascorbic acid; then powdered pectin. Let stand 15 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add sugar; stir to dissolve.

Dice remaining peaches to make three cups. Add to peach-sugar mixture, mixing lightly. Fill sterilized glass jars or other freezer containers to within one inch of top. Cover, label and freeze. Thaw slightly before using. Makes four pints.

Note: This is an excellent way to make use of overripe or partly bruised fruit. Makes a delicious topping for ice cream, puddings or cakes.

CLIP 'N COOK

SAUCY MEAT LOAF

1 can (10½ oz.) beef gravy
1½ pounds ground beef-hydrated textured vegetable protein mixture
½ cup fine dry bread crumbs
1 egg, slightly beaten
⅓ cup finely chopped onion
2 tbsps. chopped parsley
1 tbsps. Worcestershire sauce
1 tsp. salt
Generous dash pepper

Mix thoroughly ¼ cup gravy and remaining ingredients. Shape very firmly into loaf, 7x3-inches; place in shallow baking pan. Bake one hour and 15 minutes in 350-degree oven. Blend remaining gravy with one tablespoon of drippings. Heat; stir occasionally. Serve with loaf. Four to six servings.

•

PINEAPPLE JELLY

Most of the pineapple juice is not heated to preserve its vitamin C.

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
¼ cup sugar
2 cups unsweetened canned pineapple juice

In a 1-quart saucepan thoroughly stir together the gelatin and sugar; add ½ cup of the pineapple juice; let stand about 5 minutes. Over very low heat, stirring constantly with a rubber spatula around bottom and sides of pan, heat until gelatin is dissolved. Off heat, stir in the remaining room temperature pineapple juice. Makes about 2½ cups. Pour into five ½-cup molds or 6-ounce custard cups; chill to set. Before serving, unmold. Nice served with sliced strawberries or other cup-up fresh fruit. Makes 5 servings.

Dance group seeking to build black pride

By MARY LENZ

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Three hundred years ago, long before Alex Haley's ancestor, Kunta Kinte, was brought to America in chains, a group of runaway Brazilian slaves set up their own republic and fended off attacks by white Portuguese colonists for 19 years.

The television version of Haley's novel, "Roots," had a blockbuster effect on the interest of U.S. blacks, in their history and culture. In Brazil, a troupe of Rio de Janeiro dancers is hoping, in a smaller way, to stimulate black cultural pride by dancing out the story of the Palmares Slave Republic in the late 1600s.

"We want black young people to identify with their roots," said Isaura de Assis, 34, director and choreographer of the troupe. "Today they are interested in soul music but they are ignoring the culture of Brazil."

Brazil was colonized by Portuguese who brought an estimated 5 to 6 million slaves from their African colonies, including Angola and Mozambique.

From colonial days through the 1800s, runaway slaves were able to form free villages called "quilombos" in Brazil's jungle wilderness. The Palmares Republic was a union of a number of such villages extending throughout what is now the state of Alagoas.

The most dramatic moments of Ms. de Assis's show center on the story of King Zumbi, who ruled the Palmares Republic from 1676 until his assassination by a former military aide in 1695. This portion is narrated by her husband, Carlos Negreiros, 34, an actor and singer.

"What we wanted to do is show that the Negro can do something of pride and beauty instead of exploitation," said Ms. de Assis. By exploitation, she said, she means Afro-Brazilian religious dances that have become tourist displays and nightclub acts featuring "beautiful mulatto" women in scanty clothes.

The show includes its version of dances from the African spirit religons Umbanda and Candomble, plus slave dances and Brazil's most famous dance, the samba. The samba is of black origin but for years has been so popular among all Brazilians it is not considered a Negro dance.

Ms. de Assis, who had wanted to be a classical ballerina, was convinced by her parents that she could never make it because she wasn't white. She studied physical education instead and only later took classes in Brazilian and Afro Brazilian dance.

"I danced in a lot of spectacles that were very pretty but said nothing about society," she explained. After she met Negreiros, who had worked with an unsuccessful all-black theater group, they decided to try an Afro-Brazilian dance troupe. The troop, which includes white members, was founded in 1974.

China succeeds in birth control

The Los Angeles Times

HONG KONG — By mounting a family planning campaign so sweeping that individual women are told when it is their turn to bear children, China has apparently slashed its birth rate in half over the past decade, according to a visiting team of American experts.

Family planners, mobilizing all the Communist Party's propaganda organs, also have succeeded in eliminating venereal disease, limiting virtually all Chinese families to two children each and persuading many young people to postpone marriage until their late 20s, the U.S. party was told.

The delegation of 22 men and women from the Planned Parenthood Federation of America has just arrived here after completing a three-week tour of Chinese hospitals, factory and commune clinics and family planning agencies. Their report provides the most extensive account to date of the progress made in slowing the growth of the world's most populous nation.

"China's birth control efforts are extraordinary," said Phyllis Vineyard, leader of the delegation. "There's no doubt that China leads the nations of the developing world in family planning. It's a top national priority."

Mrs. Vineyard attributed China's success to the mass-motivation techniques of the national media and to the vast networks of doctors, nurses and paramedics that have been trained to carry the message into China's most remote corners. Birth control devices and services, including abortions and sterilization operations, are free.

In practice, China's saturation approach to population control means that factory managers and commune leaders maintain records on the precise number of children each woman has borne, as well as the type of contraceptive she favors, Mrs. Vineyard said. Within each work unit, a health worker makes daily rounds reminding women to take their birth control pills.

Even the decision to conceive a baby is made communally, rather than privately, the planned parenthood group reported. The permissible growth rate for each geographic area is prescribed by a provincial family planning committee, and then the allowable births for the following year are assigned to smaller units, suchas factories and agricultural production teams.

Despite the coercive nature of this approach, the planned parenthood delegates said they detected no signs of resistance from the general population. It may be well-accepted, they speculated, because the women members of each production team, rather than a remote factory manager, make the final decision about who is next in line to have a baby.

"The women work it out among themselves so that their team won't be adversely affected by having too many out on maternity leave," Mrs. Vineyard said.

Another reason for the lack of objections is that, as Mrs. Vineyard noted, "In China, you don't find the concern for privacy and confidentiality that exists in the United States. You can see the difference in Chiese houses, which are tradionally built in compounds around acommon courtyard. The same 10 families may have lived together around that courtyard for 3,000 years.

Chinese officials capitalize on tbese informal social links to enforce the regime's population goals, such as the two-child family, the Americans found. If a mother with two children persists in her desire for a third, the standard procedure is for an older neighbor women to be dispatched to her home for a heart-to-heart talk on the physical and economic strains caused large families.

If persuasion fails to work, draconian measures can be used. A woman pregnant for the third time may be pressured to undergo an abortion and, if she insists on continuing the pregnancy, the child will receive reduced rations and find his educational opportunities limited.

The two-child-per-family limit has made considerable headway in China, the planned parenthood delegation reported, despite the deeply entrenched tradition that requires a woman to go on having children until she produces a son. Only among the middle-aged and in the countryside did the Americans find three- and four-child families, they said.

Even in rural areas, more and more parents have become reconciled to the two-child rule, even if it means two daughters. That may be because brighter economic prospects for women provide some assurance to parents that, in their old age, they can count on their daughters as well as their sons for support. Mrs. Vineyard suggested.

The age-old Chinese custom of brides leaving their parents' villages to live with the families of their new husbands is also undergoing change, Mrs. Vineyard said.

"Now the decision whether to live with the wife's family or the husband's is a pragmatic one," she said. "It seems to depend on which set of parents needs the young people the most."

Abortions, rare in China even five years ago, have become so common that one Shanghai physician told the American delegation that 40 per cent of the pregnancies in the neighborhoods served by her hospital ended in abortion. That may not be typical of China as a whole, the group conceded, for Shanghai is China's most cosmopolitan city.

The Americans noticed one striking difference between the United States and China: nearly all Chinese abortions are performed on married women. Teen-aged pregnancies, epidemic in the United States, are extremely rare in China, authorities said.

"If an unmarried girl does get pregnant, we were told that abortion would be one option open to her, though the much preferred course is for her to marry the father," one planned parenthood official said.

Although young couples are encouraged to postpone marriage until the man is 28 and the woman is 25, there is supposedly little premarital sex, according to official accounts. Some of the visiting Americans were skeptical of that claim.

"Condoms are freely available everywhere you go," Mrs. Vineyard said.

Promiscuity does not seem to be a problem, in any case. When the doctors in the delegation observed that newborn Chinese did not have their eyes treated with silver nitrate solution immediately after delivery, they were told that it was no longer necessary because venereal disease has been eliminated. In Western hospitals, silver nitrate is routinely adminstered to newborn infants to prevent gonorrhea-induced eye infections.

As in the United States, sterilizations are on the rise. Both control pills remain the most popular contraceptives in China's cities, according to Dr. Louis B. Tyrer, planned parenthood's vice-president for medical affairs, but sterilizations are close behind, with intra-uterine devices in third place. The growing acceptance of sterilization as a bar to conception has meant that in Shanghia, for example, 46 per cent of all married couples had had one partner sterilized.

Fewer sterilizations are performed in rural areas, Tyrer said, but the operations are promoted throughout China as the best solution for married couples once their families are complete.

China's campaign to curb the growth of its population seems to have paid off. Although the American group was unable to obtain reliable nationwide statistics on population growth, the birth rate in many provinces had been reduced by half — sometimes by two-thirds — in the past decade.

Families of presidents discover White House like goldfish bowl

By MICHAEL KERNAN
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — In Franklin D. Roosevelt's early years as President, his small grandchildren Buzzie and Sistie Dall lived on the third floor of the White House. Sometimes they could hear the band playing downstairs. They would have sedate birthday parties with ice cream and cake and creamed chicken and guests they didn't always know very well.

The press would report the parties afterward from hearsay.

Once in 1934 a reporter broke through the security when the Dall children were vacationing on Plum Island in Wisconsin and got an interview with 7-year-old Sistie. She liked to swim, she said. This information was copyrighted by a wire service and sent around the world.

The same year, in another copyrighted exclusive, she was quoted by "her faithful colored nurse" as wanting to be called by her right name, Eleanor. "They weren't names that other folks were to call us. . . ."

To this day, whenever Mrs. Van H. Seagraves, now 50, turns up in the news, she is referred to as Sistie.

The President's family has always been more or less public property. But since television, and especially since the cult of celebrity flowered in this country, life for anyone residing in the White House has become grotesque.

"There's no way to satisfy the insatiable appetite of a growing industry like the press," commented Elizabeth Carpenter, a Washington hand for 34 years and for six years press secretary to Lady Bird Johnson. "The press doesn't like to be called an industry, but it is, and that has to be said twice a day."

When Lynda Bird Johnson was married to Capt. Charles Robb in 1967, the first White House wedding of a President's daughter in 53 years, the press went out of its mind. Someone had to know how many raisins were in the wedding cake. Did she dye her hair? And "from the minute she walked down the aisle," as Carpenter put it, "people were asking if was pregnant yet."

The year before, at the wedding of her younger sister, Luci, there was a terrific to-do over the bride wearing Cuban heels.

There was also the flap over Luci's hamsters. Carpenter had the good, gray Associated Press banging on her door to ask what the gestation period of a hamster was.

"That's not why I went to journalism school," she said in a recent phone interview from Texas.

Sometimes it was worse than silly.

Lynda and Luci Johnson would go to sleep hearing the antiwar marchers outside chanting ugly things about their father all through the night.

Margaret Truman's debut as a singer created an uproar all out of proportion, though as she now says, "That had its advantages as well as its disadvantages."

Julie Nixon Eisenhower, who left the White House two administrations ago, still has to listen to public accusations that she acts "too restrained" or has some other personality defect. When she and her husband, David, go looking for a house in Bucks County, not only is the fact reported, but readers are treated to the unsolicited remark, that the "poor dears are confined to the $150,000 range."

Of course, White House families have always been news. Even their pets have been of such avid interest that Margaret Truman wrote a book about them. When Alice Roosevelt, Theodore's daughter, smoked in public there was a terrific outcry. But that was perhaps a sign of the times.

Today, with more than 1,600 people holding White House press credentials, nothing is too trivial for the press and the pop culture which it increasingly serves and which has systematically trivialized human feeling via serials and sit-coms, both televised and written.

Eleanor "Sistie" Seagraves, granddaughter of the late Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The First Family has become soap opera. Chip and Caron Carter fail to hold hands a few times, and the whole nation rises to its feet, aghast.

"The people in the White House are real people," Lynda Robb says, "even though somebody wants to make them into cardboard figures."

At the same time that the coverage has increased, it is true, the presidential families have become more active, often viewing themselves as quasi-public figures. Possibly as a form of vaccaination, the White House has taken to issuing its own bulletins about the family's activities. It is a way of fighting back, rather like Wilson Mizner eating crystallized ginger when he had an ulcer attack. This practice reached a peak of sorts when 9-year-old Amy Carter's doings were reported to the press corps.

First Ladies used to spend their time crocheting on the second floor or cutting ribbons, Carpenter observed, but now there are many opportunities for helping to spotlight an issue.

"The First Lady is an unpaid public servant," Lady Bird Johnson once said, "elected by one person: her husband."

The fascination with the President's family may have risen from an obsessive concern for the physical health of the President himself. This in turn, Carpenter speculated, may stem from FDR's death in Georgia and the fury of the press at being caught out in left field and at not having had a glimmer of Roosevelt's failing health during his fourth election campaign.

From then on, every time a President coughed it was news. Press secretaries were careful to give the public every scrap of information it could stand, right down to the quality of the great man's bowel movements. We have all learned a lot of medicine in the past few years from Eisenhower's ileitis and Johnson's gall bladder to Betty Ford's mastectomy and Rosalynn Carter's D and C.

Is there a solution? Not really.

"There used to be limits, but there aren't anymore. It's that address," Liz Carpenter said. "People identify with the First Family. Nobody who lives there really wants it, but it's very hard to avoid. They would be exposed anyway, but it's always safer for the First Family to have some mission of good works, something purposeful. To give the press something to talk about besides a hairdo.

"It seems to me there should be some guidelines, like is the public interest concerned, and does the news have impact on the job of the elected official."

For Margaret Truman Daniel, the problem was minimized by the closeness of her family. She and her parents would talk about the latest invasion of their privacy and in most cases could laugh and forget it.

"I grew up in a small town," she said, "where everyone knew your business, so I was used to it. For me the worst thing about the White House life was the fact that I was there. I wanted to get out on my own, on my career."

As for the Secret Service men, they weren't so ubiquitous then. They would go with her on concert tours but not on dates.

"If my date couldn't take care of the situation, I'd say forget it — and forget him. I guess the family was more nervous after the assassination attempt on my father at Blair House. But we didn't mind the Secret Service. They were pleasant men."

One thing: She never opens a door unless she knows who's on the other side. She learned that when she was dressing for FDR's funeral and went to the door in her slip.

One other thing: While Mrs. Daniel isn't particularly interested in having her own children get into politics, she herself has joined the media. Her husband, Clifton Daniel Jr., is associate editor of The New York Times, and she has become a TV-radio celebrity as well as an author. ("I'm good at interviews," she said. "I can think of a lot of questions.")

Curious. Anna Roosevelt married a newspaperman, too. And David Eisenhower has been a sports columnist; Carolyn Kennedy was a newspaper copy aide; Lynda Robb writes for a magazine; Luci Nugent's husband is a cable television executive; Lady Bird Johnson has her television stations; Julie Eisenhower writes articles and books and appears on TV; Susan Ford is a photojournalist; Jack Ford is with Rolling Stone. Curious.

More osteopaths

CHICAGO (AP)—One out of 20 of the nation's physicians is a D.O. rather than an M.D., says Dr. George J. Luibel, president of the American Osteopathic Association.

Most doctors of osteopathy are general practioners, and they treat 10 per cent of the patients, Luibel says.

Getty estate clearing

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The first phase of settling the $700 million estate of J. Paul Getty has ended with debts being cleared up and taxes paid, administrators say.

"Mr. Getty had no debts to speak of and taxes were relatively modest because he left the bulk of his estate to charity," said Edward Landry, attorney for Title Insurance, an executor of the estate along with Getty's sons, Gordon and J. Ronald.

Bomb blasts damage four Mexican cities

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A score of bombs exploded within a three-hour period in three Mexican cities Wednesday, causing severe damage and injuring at least three persons, police said. Several other bombs were deactivated.

The bombs exploded in Mexico City; Guadalajara, the second largest city, and Oaxaca in the south.

Officials said it was the worst such occurence in decades. Police in Oaxaca said said a pamphlet found in the center of town attributed the bombings to a terrorist group known as the "Union of the People."

Police said most of the bombs exploded in government offices, department stores or the offices of American companies. They described the devices as dynamite sticks and incendiary devices activated by timing mechanisms.

In Mexico City, three bombs exploded and four more were deactivated by experts from the police and army.

One of the bombs caused extensive damage in the white marble building housing the Federal Justice Tribunal. Another exploded at the General Motors assembly plant and the third in the headquarters of the Confederation of Chambers of Commerce.

Eleven explosions were reported in Guadalajara and at least three unexploded bombs were found there.

One explosion at a department store set off a fire which firemen were still battling this morning. Police said damage was extensive.

Police said one man was arrested after a bomb exploded in a Woolworth store in Guadalajra. They said the man was injured by the blast.

Other blasts hit the Government Palace, bank offices, the federal electric commission office and the Sears, Roebuck and Co. store.

In Oaxaca, police said that at least eight bombs exploded in government offices and in businesses, including an American Motors dealership. There were no reports of injuries. A police spokesman said the offices of the Agrarian Reform Ministry and of the ruling Institutional Revolutionary party were damaged.

The explosions came the day after police reported that four men and a youth were kidnaped in two small towns near Mexico City, and the wife of one of the men was killed by his abductors.

Problems in home upkeep? Here are expert's answers

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — We have a redwood deck on the outside of our house. We have never used a finish of any kind on it and it has turned to a kind of driftwood gray. A relative of ours, who lives in another part of the country, has a similar redwood deck. He says his deck has turned a dark color. He, too, never put any finish on it, but now he wonders why it didn't turn gray, a color he likes much better. Can you help?

A. — When redwood is not finished, a condition many persons prefer, it responds to the weather conditions in the area in which it is used. In a damp or humid climate, it usually becomes much darker, but over a period of years, as it gets rinsed again and again by the rain, it turns to a soft gray. Should the redwood be under a shelter, where it is not hit by the rain, it may stay dark. In a dry climate, the redwood may never darken, but instead graudally turn into a very light tan. These variations in redwood's appearance can occur even in the same neighborhood, depending on whether and how the wood is exposed to the sun and rain. If your relative likes the gray color, have him ask his local lumber yard dealer about the possibility of bleaching the wood.

Q. — We have just installed an outside structure of western red cedar. We would like to get the silvery gray effect I have seen in this kind of wood. How do we go about it?

A. — Almost everything said in the previous answer about redwood also applies to western red cedar, especially the part about the gray. Left unfinished, the cedar usually will turn gray. If you wish to hasten the process, use a bleaching agent, being very careful to follow the manufacturer's instructions.

Q. — How do I cut gypsum board?

Q. — Use a wallboard or trimming knife or any similar cutting tool. Guide the cut with a straightedge, cutting through the facing paper and into the gypsum core. Snap the board along the cut line, turn the board over and cut through the paper to complete the job.

Q. — We have knotty pine paneling in one of our rooms. It has been there about 20 years and is getting seedy looking. We now have decided to paint it. Should the knots be sealed before painting and, if so, with what?

A. — First, a shudder at the idea of painting the knotty pine paneling. Wiping it down with denatured alcohol and applying a clear finish might make it look new again. But, if you insist, it is unlikely the knots are going to cause any problems after all these years. If you want to seal them, however, you can use either diluted shellac or a knot sealer sold in most hardware stores.

Strong signs Rhodesia government may not be so adamant against plan

By JAMES MacMANUS
The Manchester Guardian

SALISBURY — There are strong signs that the Rhodesian government is examining the Anglo-American settlement terms with greater care than the dismissive language of Premier Ian Smith might suggest. Although Smith described aspects of the package as "crazy" nearly two weeks ago, his cabinet is said to be taking a hard look at the central demand — elections for an African government on the basis of adult suffrage.

There is strong pressure on the government both form its military and from South Africa for moves towards an internal settlement based on "one-man, one-vote." Smith, perennially conscious of imagined pressures from his now emasculated right wing, has little excuse to offend either party for lack of decisive action. His cabinet quietly met on Friday in a special session to discuss a settlement strategy that will take public shape after the opening of parliament Sept. 20.

The official thinking appears to be that of adopting much of the Western backed proposals in the hope that the controversial security arrangements will prove negotiable to Bishop Abel Muzorena and Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole.

Smith flew to Pretoria Monday for his third meeting this year with South African Premier John Vorster. It is understood here that the two leaders discussedthe Rhodesian response to the AngloAmerican settlement proposals. Smith, who was accompanied by Deputy Premier David Smith and Cabinet Secretary Jack Gaylord, is said to have drawn up a settlement strategy which incorporates elements of the Western package but which rejects the security arrangements insisted upon by British Foreign Secretary David Owen and American Ambassador to the United Nations Andrew Young.

At least three cabinet ministers, including Foreign Affairs Minister P.K. Van Der Byl, have indicated privately that they would not accept the principle of universal franchise even for the sake of an internal settlement. Their defections would still leave Smith with the necessary two-thirds parliamentary majority required to change the constitution.

In any case, there is a consensus in political circles here that the cabinet has little choice but to stand behind its leader. Before the general election of Aug. 31, which gave Smith a massive mandate for action from the white minority, there had been much official talk of forming a "broad-based government" to bring Africans into the administration. Such plans are now recognized as hopelessly unrealistic largely due to the Owen-Young Southern African diplomacy. Their proposals held out sufficient, although separate,attractions for all concerned to leave Smith little option but to work out a settlement very close to th Anglo-American framework.

Worker reorganization still on the back burner

By MIKE CAUSEY
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The estimated 50,000 to 150,000 federal workers who are paid too much will probably be saved from salary and grade cuts while Congress and the White House work out a compromise, no-fault demotion-insurance plan.

Insiders expect the House Post Office-Civil Service Committee to move quickly to clear a hybrid bill that would protect the pay and grades of workers facing demotions because of reorganization of misclassification of their jobs.

According to the House timetable, the bill, being pushed by committee chairman Robert N.C. Nix (D-Pa.) may be okayed soon under a suspension of the rules, then sent to Senate for action early next year.

Congressional aides say that federal agencies will get the word from committees that control their budget and from the President to go easy on downgrading employees.

There is no way of knowing how many federal employees are paid too much (or too little) because their jobs have been mislabled by agencies. The General Accounting Office has said that in some "problem areas" as many as 30 per cent of the jobs are inflated and ought to be cut back.

More conservative estimates indicate that from 6 to 8 per cent of the 2 million plus white-collar and blue-collar federal jobs may be overgraded, and a lesser number underpaid for the work employees do.

In the last couple of years agencies have embarked on a vigorous program of restudying jobs and grades, and many proposed downgradings have resulted from those desk aduits.

In addition, reorganizations ordered and proposed by Carter could cause many demotions as jobs are abolished or combined. At the same time the President has promised nobody will be fired or demoted becuase of any reorganization he plans.

In most cases the employee in the job is innocent of any self-inflation of his or her grade, and the bad news that he or she has been paid too much for years is a heart (and pocketbook) breaker.

(The potential downgradings at two mayor federal departments, Housing and Urban Development and Health, Education and Welfare were so bad that the government has given permission to delay all downgradings resulting from reorganization and misclassification.)

Congress-watchers expect the Nix committee to blend two bills before it into one no-fault demotion-insurance law.

One part, backed by Nix, would give employees faced with demotion resulting from classification errors lifetime pay and grade protection as long as they remained in their job. Once they left it, the job would be reduced to its proper level.

The second part, which insiders say will make the bill veto-proof, would include the Carter proposal, which deals only with demotions resulting from reorganization.

The Carter plan would give employees temporary grade protection and give them half-step annual pay raises until their salary leveled out to their new, lower grade scale.

Congressional aides say the White House won't get its plan unless Nix gete his much broader grade-pay protection legislation.

Yantis appointment dominates conference

By LEE JONES

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe says he feels senators will confirm his controversial appointment of Hugh Yantis as State Insurance Board chairman, once they see a record of Yantis' performance.

Briscoe's hour-long news conference Wednesday was dominated by questions about Yantis and his confirmation by the Senate—in 1979.

Yantis lives in Austin, and Briscoe breached senatorial courtesy by appointing him over the objection of local Sen. Lloyd Doggett. Yantis says he might change his legal residence to Sequin, home of Sen. John Traeger, a friend of the new chairman.

"I think by the time of confirmation, a record will be made, and based on that record, he will be confirmed," Briscoe said.

Doggett claims that as executive director of the Texas Water Quality Board until late August, Yantis made a proindustry record that indicated he would favor insurance companies over consumers in his new position.

"I disagree with that assumption," Briscoe said.

The governor said Yantis' predecessor, Joe Christie, not only protected consumers "but did a balanced job .... He was fair, and on balance I think the same will be true of the new chairman—protecting the public while at the same time recognizing that we must have a healthy insurance industry. I see no conflict there .... I think Mr. Yantis will prove to be an excellent choice."

Briscoe said the entry of former Gov. Preston Smith into the 1978 governor's race did nothing to shake his confidence he will be elected to a third term.

Asked if he felt he would win without a run-off, Briscoe said, "Absolutely, and no question about it."

He said he wouldn't comment on Smith's charge that Briscoe has been a "caretaker governor" who has shown no leadership on major state issues.

To do otherwise would be to disappoint Texans "who expect those of us in public office to .... act like ladies and gentlemen," he said.

On another matter, Briscoe said he knew of no contributions to earlier campaigns from executives of Southwestern Bell Telephone nor had he invited Bell officials to hunt on any of his ranches.

"They may have been guests of people who had hunting rights on that particular ranch," he said of one of his Uvalde County spreads that once had a fire in a hunting cabin.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe

Crowd now gathering for gubernatorial race

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — You don't quite need a scorecard yet, but the preseason gubernatorial field is beginning to get crowded for a 1978 race Gov. Dolph Briscoe says he will win easily.

Two precandidates—Texas Republican Party leader Ray Hutchison and Texas Atty. Gen. John Hill—took steps Wednesday that indicated their candidacy is all but official.

Briscoe already has made it known he intends to try for a third term, and former Gov. Preston Smith, lashing out at Briscoe as a "caretaker governor," announced plans Tuesday to try to win back his old job.

Briscoe, who said he will run on his record, boasted Wednesday of better support than ever for his attempt at a third term.

"There is absolutely no question about it. I will win it without a runoff," Briscoe said of the race for the Democratic nomination.

Hill, who has been considered a candidate since January, said he would announce his future political plans at a series of news conferences in Austin, Dallas, Houston and San Antonio Monday.

Hutchison said he was resigning his party post. "While this action should not be taken as an announcement for the Office of Governor, it is an announcement that I will be seriously considering all factors relevant to an announcement on that subject by early fall," he said.

"I want to run for governor, no question about it," added Hutchison, who said a try for the governorship would depend on the financial backing he can muster in the next few weeks.

Hutchison said he was aware of the Democratic strength he would face in a race for governor, but added, "I think we (Republicans) can elect a governor for the first time in 100 years."

Hill, who was in Dallas Wednesday hosting a meeting of the Energy Committee of the National Association of Attorneys General, said he is not concerned about Smith's announcement.

The attorney general has been receiving considerable news coverage recently as he leads a statewide campaign against nursing home abuses. Each city Hill's nursing home team enters is the site of a news conference, followed by a public hearing where the alleged abuses are aired.

Hill said Briscoe's emergency nursing home legislation passed during the recent special legislative session is inadequate. That remark and others, however, have shown no signs of hitting the governor's sore spot.

Schools unknowingly aided CIA research

By The Associated Press

At least four Texas universities may have unknowingly helped the CIA find ways to control human behavior in the 1960's, say officials of the schools.

University of Texas Assistant Deputy Chancellor Robert Hardesty said Wednesday that the CIA informed school administrators it had given UT covert grants of $17,898 in 1961 and $16,644 in 1962 for behavioral research.

Texas Christian University Chancellor Dr. James Moudy, who said he recently viewed CIA files in Washington, announced later Wednesday that CIA funds were channeled surreptitiously through an intermediate party to support bioelectronics reasearch at TCU around 1960.

Last month, the CIA notified the University of Houston that the school may have performed behavior control research for the CIA during the last decade. Dr. Phillip G. Hoffman, UH president, said the school destroys such records after five years. However, Hoffman said the CIA told him the research did not involve drugs or humans.

The Baylor College of Medicine in Houston revealed in 1975 that it had conducted two research projects funded by the CIA, one of which involved an assessment of how drugs affect persons taking polygraph tests.

A statement from UT said the CIA became interested in the development of a microscopic quartz "thermocoupler" capable of measuring heat changes in human cells.

The CIA was interested because of potential application "in connection with the problem of body antennas, personnel tagging, polygraphy and other areas," the statement said.

Dr. Moudy said the names were blocked out on the CIA's TCU file, but enough was left in print for him to determine the document was a survey of bioelectronics literature by the university's Institute of Behavioral Research with a total outside funding of approximately $10,000.

A TCU spokeswoman said the project originated in a proposal Dr. Saul Sells, who heads the institute and denies any prior knowledge of the CIA link, sent to the Human Ecology Fund of New York. She said that organization sent the funds to TCU's business office "in normal fashion."

The UT announcement said its CIA research was funded by an unnamed private medical foundation in Washington, D.C. "and no one at the University of Texas was ever aware of CIA involvement."

In Houston, Dr. Hoffman said the CIA told him the UH research was done in the early 1960s and involved funds totaling less than $50,000 over a five-year period.

"Funding was secured from what appeared to be legitimate funding sources as a result of the submission of research proposals through normal channels," said Hoffman. "The university had no knowledge that the funds came from the CIA."

Baylor spokesman Frank Weaver said the research project on polygraph tests involved consenting volunteers being given one of three substances, a stimulant, a sedative or a placebo, before taking the tests. The contract was originally awarded by the U.S. Air Force but was subsequently declared to be a CIA-supported contract, he said.

Weaver said there were no adverse drug effects on the volunteers.

The other project, he said, was openly funded by the CIA and involved an analysis of voice patterns as an indicator of emotions.

Wednesday's announcements followed recent news stories detailing CIA Director Stansfield Turner's accounts to congressional investigators that 44 colleges had been involved in research between 1953 and 1964 that dealt with ways to alter human behavior.

Officer tells of Torres beating

HUNTSVILLE, Tex., (AP) — A rookie Houston police officer has testified he saw five fellow officers surround a handcuffed Mexican-American prisoner and beat him three days before the prisoner's body was found in a muddy bayou.

Officer C.E. Elliott was to resume testimony today in the murder trial of two former Houston policemen charged in the May 8 drowning death of Joe Campos Torres, 23.

Terry Denson, 27, and Stephen Orlando, 21, are accused of killing Torres by pushing him into Buffalo Bayou after beating him.

Elliott, a March graduate of the Houston Police Academy, told the all-white, all-Anglo jury Wednesday he was riding with Orlando May 5, the night Torres, a karate expert, was arrested.

He said they were called to a Houston bar to aid another officer.

"We entered the bar and found another officer tussling with an actor I later learned to be Joe Campos Torres, " Elliott testified. "We tried to assist but it turned into a wrestling match."

"Actor" is a police term to describe a person involved in any incident which must be reported by officers.

Elliott said that by the time he and Orlando had successfully handcuffed Torres' hands behind his back four more officers had arrived in two other cars.

After Torres had been placed in his patrol car, Elliott said, Orlando and the other four stood talking a few minutes. Then Orlando climbed into the car and they drove away, he said.

"Orlando radioed that we were enroute to the jail and I assumed that's where we were going," Elliott testified. Instead, he said, they went to a vacant lot.

"With all officers standing in a semi-circle," Elliott said, "they verbally abused the actor."

"Hey, Mexican, you gonna whip our asses now? C'mon, lets go, you're such a bad motherf.....," Elliott quoted the officers as saying.

Elliott testified that Torres replied: "You take these cuffs off and I'll whip all your asses. You're just a bunch of pigs."

Elliott said Torres remained handcuffed and they began to beat him.

"I stepped back around to the left front quarter panel of our car when the whipping started," Elliott said. "I heard blows and I saw blows. They were all standing there but I can't attribute any one blow to any one officer. All five participated.

Wage bill facing troubles

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — With organized labor bracing for another possible loss in Congress, House Democratic leaders conceded Wednesday that one or more key elements of a bill to raise the minimum wage may be in trouble when the legislation comes up for a vote Thursday.

Although the basic proposal to raise the hourly wage floor from $2.30 to $2.65 next year was expected to pass, major battles were shaping up over:

—The bill's provision for automatic increases in the wage floor in the future, by setting it at a certain percentage of average manufacturing wages, as opposed to the present system of setting a dollars-and-cents amount every few years.

—A proposed amendment to provide a lower 'subminimum" for teenagers, a long-standing Republican and business-backed idea that has attracted some support among younger Democratic liberals who see it as a possible tool to reduce youth unemployment.

—A provision of the bill that would gradually raise the minimum wage that must be paid to waiters, waitresses and other workers who get tips and are now required to be paid only $1.15 an hour, or half the regular minimum wage.

The AFL-CIO has thrown its weight behind the entire bill in the first major test of its clout since the surprise defeat last March of the so-called common situs picketing bill to make it easier for unions to shut down entire construction sites.

President unaware of scheduling

By FRANK CORMIER

WASHINGTON (AP) — According to an old Army expression, there's always somebody who doesn't get the word.

Events of the past week suggest that not getting the word can apply to the commander in chief as well as to the newest recruit.

Witness President Carter's statement to reporters last Saturday that he would hold a news conference this week at which he would respond to all questions about his embattled budget chief, Bert Lance.

Carter may have felt somewhat embattled himself Saturday, because the promise of a news conference was his way of fending off immediate questions about Lance.

What the President apparently did not know at the time was that his senior advisers already had discussed a possible Carter news conference and decided it would be best to hold off until Lance had given scheduled testimony before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee.

When Carter finally got the word, he readily agreed that the news conference should be delayed.

As dignitaries arrived for last week's ceremonial signing of the Panama Canal treaty, two who arrived together were Lance and presidential assistant Hamilton Jordan, often regarded as Carter's two closest confidants in Washington.

Besides having the President's ear, Lance and Jordan share a long-standing friendship and, indeed, spent part of the Labor Day weekend together at the budget chief's home at Sea Island, Ga.

With all this in mind, some reporters were stunned this week when Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., told them it was Jordan who suggested that he and Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn., meet with the press immediately after recommending privately to Carter that Lance resign.

Percy said that, until Jordan suggested otherwise, he and Ribicoff had not intended to see reporters and, in fact, had parked their cars in a White House area closed to the press so they could leave their meeting with Carter unobserved.

Could this have been intended as a message to Bert Garcia Lance?

Speaking of Carter's "Panama Canal Week," the President had private conferences with so many military strong men from Latin America that even some members of the vast bodyguard force assembled for the occasion found cause for amusement.

Thinking he was unobserved by outsiders, one security agent posted outside the Cabinet Room wore four silver stars pinned to each shoulder of his business suit. He heightened the buffoonery by greeting colleagues with snappy salutes.

The Secret Service and other security agencies brought in personnel and armored limousines from all sections of the country to help safeguard the visitors, many of whom were persona non grata to exile groups from their own countries.

Mexican police seek suspects in bombings

By ISSAC A. LEVI

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The government put 10,000 police and troops on full alert today to hunt for a new left-wing terrorist group that claimed responsibility for the worst rash of bomb explosions in Mexico in decades.

Police said 23 blasts injured five persons and did an estimated $20 million worth of damage in Mexico City, Guadalajara and Oaxaca between midnight and 3 a.m. Wednesday. The police said 17 more homemade time bombs were found and disarmed.

Police squads, detective units and special anti-guerrilla military squadrons were making surprise searches and manning roadblocks at numerous points in the country. One unofficial report said 13 suspects had been arrested and taken to a military compound outside Mexico City.

Leaflets signed by the Union of the People, an organization not heard of previously, said it was responsible for the bombs. It called other left-wing terrorist groups "chicken" and vowed to bring "Lenin's revolution" to Mexico to stop "unemployment, hunger and exploitation imposed on the people by the dominant class."

Lawyer Jose Rojo Colorado, who defends accused leftist terrorists, told newsmen in Oaxaca that the Union was founded in that city and had its headquarters there. He said the bombings were in retaliation for recent arrests of members of the Union and other leftist groups.

Mexico City's police chief, Arturo Durazo, was quoted as saying the "principal leaders of the organization have been identified."

Security forces also were hunting for armed gangs who kidnaped two doctors and three youths and killed the wife of one of the doctors in separate attacks Tuesday in small towns near Mexico City. But police blamed the kidnapings on the 23rd of September Communist League, heretofore the most active urban terrorist organization in the country.

Police believed the bombings were timed to disrupt ceremonies Friday celebrating the 167th anniversary of Mexico's independence from Spain.

The bombs damaged or wrecked government buildings and businesses, including Sears Roebuck and Woolworth stores, an American Motors dealer and a Pepsi Cola plant. Among targets where unexploded bombs were found were a General Motors assembly plant and the headquarters of the Colgate Palmolive subsidiary.

British Party leader objects to policy toward South Africa

By RICHARD M. WEINTRAUB
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — British Conservative party leader Margaret Thatcher took issue Wednesday with Carter administration's pressure on South Africa to change its apartheid policies, arguing that this could hinder broader settlement of southern African issues.

"At the moment we need the help of South Africa to get a settlement in Rhodesia," she said during a press conference here at the British embassy, adding that a settlement in Rhodesia would "do much' to further the cause of human rights in South Africa.

Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, who praised the Conservative leader, took a similar approach to South Africa, but the Carter administration, while including Pretoria in its diplomacy on Rhodesia, has not hesitated to criticize the South Africans on their policies of racial separation.

Thatcher also said that such pressure on South Africa amounts to interference in another country's internal affairs and argued, "I'm always expressing the moral commitment, but we can't impose it on every country."

She noted that even though President Carter has stressed a human-rights policy, he did not hesitate to send Secretary of State Cyrus Vance to China, a country she herself visited last spring and one she characterized as not being noted for protection of civil liberties.

Thatcher, made her remarks on the last day of a week-long visit to the United States in which she saw officials, business leaders and the news media in New York, Houston and Washingotn. She met with President Carter Tuesday. Public opinion polls and political observers say that Thatcher's Conservative party would defeat the Labor party of Prime Minister James Callaghan if an election were held today.

In addition to her criticism of American initiatives in South Africa, Thatcher also had reservations about the current Anglo-American plan for a settlement in the breakaway British colony of Rhodesia.

"You can't pick up a whole plan and impose it on a people and say that's that," she said, adding that negotiations are necessary.

The Anglo-American plan presented to Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian jsmith two weeks ago, calls for a surrender of power to a British administrator and free and impartial elections to establish a new government. A U.N. police force would be established to keep order during the elections and the British administrator would take control of internal police functions, supplanting the existing Rhodesian force that is involved in continuing engagements with black guerrillas.

Thatcher was particularly critical of disbanding the Rhodesian security force, a point black Rhodesian nationalists and their supporters in neighboring black-ruled states have insisted upon.

British Foreign Secretary David Owen has said that a new army in Zimbabwe, the African name for Rhodesia, would be "based on the liberation forces" but also include "acceptable elements of the Rhodesian defense forces."

Thatcher argued that the new government would need an efficient and dependable security force and that it would be wrong to disband the present force unless there is an equally efficient unit to replace it.

Thatcher stressed that she and her party favor a "full democratic" settlement in Rhodesia and that she is convinced that Ian Smith "is prepared to hand over power to a black-majority government."

Businessmen's verdict still out on Carter's policies

By JACK EGAN
The Washington Post

NEW YORK — Businessmen remain very uncertain about President Carter's economic policies despite efforts during the first eight months of his administration to woo the business community and gain its confidence.

That is the main conclusion drawn from a series of interviews with business and financial leaders conducted by The Washington Post.

While applauding some of Carter's early moves in the economic area — particularly the decision to withdraw the $50 tax-rebate proposal and his stand against wage and price controls — businessmen are nervous about his energy and tax policies and see the overall economic direction as inconsistent and uncertain.

They attribute the disappointingly low level of business expansion plans partly to the uncertain policy outlook and partly to the dive the stock market has taken since the start of the year.

"Clearly from our discussions with business customers throughout the country, the prevailing mood is one of uncertainty about the administration," said Chase Manhattan Bank President Willard C. Butcher. "Frankly, many companies just don't know whether to go forward with capital expansion plans, because they've gotten no clear signals from Washington."

There is little concern, however, among those interviewed that the current slowdown in economic growth means that there is another recession brewing. The businessmen see the slowdown as a breather that will let the expansion continue longer, provided inflation does not accelerate.

But the Bert Lance affair has created further apprehension within the business community, which viewed the budget director as sympathetic to its concerns, particularly liked his commitment to a balanced budget and appreciated the personal clout he enjoyed as Carter's No. 1 domestic adviser.

Business leaders do not defend Lance's past activities, but they are uneasy that if he leaves Washington as a result of disclosures about his banking record, they will lose the strongest advocate for pro-business policies within the administration.

"He has been something of a bridge to the business community, and he certainly has been a fiscal conservative from the standpoint of following conservative policiecs," commented Continental Illinois Bank Chairman Roger E. Anderson, "and from the standpoint of following conservative policies, it is hard to see how teh situation could be improved if he leaves."

FMC Corp. Chairman Robert H. Malott said the Carter administration's goals of balancing the budget by 1981 and also bringing unemployment below 5 per cent and inflation down to 4 per cent by then may be unreleastic and would become more so if Lance weren't there to help the President.

"There isn't any other top figure in this administration with the same rapport and understanding that many have felt from Lance," said John Whitehead, managing partner of Goldman Sachs and Co., a major investment banking firm, "and I do see a loss to the business community if he leaves."

Traditionally the treasury secretary has served as main administration liaison to the business world, but according to Whitehead, Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal does not seem to have worked very hard on being accessible to businessmen, and businessmen don't seem particularly comfortable with him.

At the same time there is the further complaint that Carter himself has shied from direct contacts with business leaders since he took office.

E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Co. Chairman Irving S. Shapiro, one of the businessmen closest to the administration, says this is one fundamental mistake Carter has made. "That's unfortunate, because it's useful for him to hear from the business community dirctly from time to time," Shapiro said.

If Lance deparst, Shapiro said, it will be necessary to replace him with someone of equivalent skills and ties, so at least there would be someone close to the President who can hear business views and transmit ideas to Carter.

GM's use of smaller spare tire may be trend of the future

By HENRY GILGOFF
Newsday

If you buy a new car, check the spare tire. On some models, it's shrinking.

General Motors' intermediate-size cars will have a spare that will be about half the size of a regular tire as standard equipment in the 1978 model year. The new kind of spare is designed for temporary use only and has a life span of just 1,000 to 3,000 miles. When it's mounted on the car, that side of the vehicle may seem "slightly lower" than the others. And, because it is inflated more than conventional tires, it provides what GM calls a "stiffer" ride.

It is not to be confused with another variation of the conventional spare that's been around since 1967 and is now on certain GM cars and models of other manufacturers. That kind of spare has to be inflated when needed.

Publicists for General Motors say the tire that's already inflated but remains smaller than a regular tire gives something more as well as something less. This "compact" tire, they say, represents "a major advance in tire technology" that will save weight, improve fuel economy, and add trunk space.

In offering this treat of technology to the consumer, General Motors may be setting the pace for the future, and the not-too-distant future at that. Representatives of the other domestic manufacturers said that they have no plans to offer this new kind of spare as standard equipment at the introduction of their 1978 cars. But Rosemarie Kitchin, a spokesman for Chrysler Corp., said her company plans to offer the smaller spare on some of its cars during the 1978 model year. And A.F. Weber, division manager for tire engineering for Firestone — one of the companies that claims credit for developing the new spare — said his firm is looking forward to a strong increase in its usage in the next two or three years. This year, the tire will be standard with the Chevrolet Malibu and Monte Carlo, the Pontiac Le Mans and Grand Prix, the Oldsmobile Cutlass and the Buick Century and Regal.

Why this one to reduce the size of the tire? Cynics might suggest that it's just another example of the consumer getting the business, with an automaker cutting costs as it raises new car prices. Charles J. Brady, director of current product engineering for GM, conceded that the smaller spare will cost the manufacturer less than a regular spare, though he declined to say how much.

But it's another kind of economy that drives Detroit to a new spare, he said. To gain enough fuel mileage to comply with federal standards, the car makers are putting their cars on a crash diet. The smaller spare is 11 to 14 pounds lighter than its conventional counterpart. That amount doesn't seem like much when you're talking about car weights. A 1978 Cutlass, for example, weighs in at 3,070 pounds, according to GM spokesman Robert E. Kulungian, but that is down from 3,618 in the 1977 model year.

By itself, the reduction in spare tire weight would bring about a gain in miles per gallon that "probably would be very small. You probably could't measure it," Brady said. But, he said, every 11 to 14 pounds in weight reduction helps. It also happes to help where it counts for car makers—in the trunk. It's not only the tuba player or the traveling cash register salesman who counts the cubic feet in the trunk. It's also many a consumer who want to know how many shopping bags of pieces or luggage will fit.

Panama to allow scrutiny of human rights policy

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Panama announced Wednesday that it has invited the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights to make an on-site inspection of alleged infractions.

Gen. Omar Torrijos, the Panamanian strongman who was here last week to sign the Panama Canal treaties negotiated with the United States, declared in a cable to the commission:

"I will give you the keys to the jails. If you find any political prisoners, I will set them free."

U.S. opponents of the canal treaties, along with several Panamanians exiled by Torrijos, have charged that the human rights of Torrijos' opponents are being violated. They say further that the Carter administration, with its stress on human rights, is inconsistent in negotiating with Torrijos, the dictator that they hold responsible for the alleged abuses. Several international monitors of human rights have reported that Panama is relatively free of major abuses.

Torrijos' invitation, read to the council of the Organization of American States here Wednesday, said the seven-member rights commission will be allowed to go anywhere in Panama and will be free to talk with anyone.

A State Department spokesman declared: "We feel this visit by an objective international body will be helpful in arriving at a clear definition of the status of human rights in Panama."

The U.S. government has sought to strengthen the rights commission as a means of policing rights in the Western hemisphere. In June, President Carter signed a long-standing OAS convention that will result in formation of an inter-American human-rights court as soon as 11 nations have ratified the pact.

In another attempt to disarm U.S. opponents of Senate ratification of the canal treaties, Panama has invited U.N. observers to oversee a plebiscite on Oct. 23, Panama's form of ratifying the treaties.

Recount shows Labor Party victor in Norway

The Los Angeles Times

OSLO — Norway's unprecedented see-saw national election titled back to a Labor Party victory Wednesday when a recount changed the outcome of a parliamentary seat by 17 votes.

A bundle of 50 absentee ballots which had not been included in the first count in a rural constituency resulted in a 17-vote victory for a candidate of the far-left Socialist Left Party instead of a Conservative who won on the first count Tuesday.

As a result, the Labor Party and the Socialist Left combined will now have majority control of the newly elected Storing, Norway's single-house legislature of 155 members, with 78 seats to 77 for the four parties of the right — the Conservatives, Centerist Farmers, Christian People's and Liberal parties.

On Tuesday at the very end of the counting, what looked like a narrow Labor victory turned suddenly to defeat when a constituency in southern Norway went to the Christian People's Party candidate by 480 votes. The recount reversal now puts Labor back on top — but this still might not be the end of the story.

Yet another district in western Norway is in the midst of a recount for a seat which Labor has held by only 69 votes, and which could conceivably switch to the Liberals.

Texas Stadium is not so bad

TED BATTLES
battle scene

When the Dallas Cowboys fled over the city line to Irving a few years back, there were some who agreed that a spanking new, up-to-date stadium was needed to replace the tradition-steeped, but so antiquated Cotton Bowl.

Despite the hole in the roof, which gives the edifice an unfinished look and those harsh shadows that are the bane of TV viewers, Texas Stadium was praised as a masterpiece in futuristic design.

It was hailed as a tribute to the football fan, built specifically with his needs and comfort in mind. The players might get soaked or snowed on, but the fans were protected by the roof. And if they wanted to go the option route, except for the traffic snarl, it embraced all the comforts of the living room and more.

After all, how many living rooms have mini-skirted Cowgirl usherettes at beck and call.

THE TRADITIONALISTS contended, if the Cotton Bowl was good enough for Doak, it ought to be good enough for the Cowboys. Sure it was in a seedy neighborhood, but its seating capacity was greater than the country club at Irving and how many future fans were run off with the increase in price of end zone seats from $1 (Cotton Bowl) to $7 (Texas Stadium).

Besides, they groused, the Cotton Bowl had been renovated, new seats, improved fan comfort facilities and a new artificial turf.

WE WERE among the latter, but a couple of years ago Cliff Harris, during a visit to Midland, suggested, "You still ought to come see a game there. It's a great place to watch a game. There's no better."

So last week, we finally took Cliff up on his suggestion and it was an experience. We haven't been treated quite like it since covering a Penn-Cornell game in Franklin Field, back when they played on Thanksgiving morning.

And the last time, we were that far away from the action was when, as a collegian, we climbed to the top row of the Los Angeles Coliseum just to check our eyesight and found out why the Trojans wear those big, big numbers on their backs.

STILL, CLIFF was right. Even the end zone seats afford a good view of the action, conceding of course that end zone seats are end zone seats in any stadium.

The P.A. is something else. From where we sat, it sounded like Egyptian. Fortunately, the indistinguishable blare on the ear is confined to pregame.

The artificial turf looked slippery, slippery enough for one to wonder after watching Tony Dorsett's feet fly out from under him as he tried to cut on one play whether he could operate at maximum efficiency.

After the game, Tony eased our fears a little, "I played on artificial surface at the University of Pittsburgh and I'm used to it. No, I don't think I lose any efficiency. The others have the same trouble cutting and tonight it was a little wet and slippery out there."

DORSETT HINTED that if he had a choice, he'd just as soon play on grass, "It's softer, you can get better traction and you are less likely to get hurt."

Food fare is standard press box fare, the usual barbecue, but it comes in sufficient quantities to insure that no media member will suffer the pangs of starvation.

And the Cowboys guarantee that no one will get bored by the proceedings at Texas Stadium, no matter how bad or one sided the game.

The famed Cowboys' cheerleaders take of that and even in a good game there's always the danger that their presence may make a fan miss a touchdown play. But then, there's always the convenient TV to bring the eye-wanderer a replay of what he missed.

HE MAY be a $3 million hotdog, as this fan-club sign indicates, but Reggie Jackson paid off for the Yankees Wednesday with a game-winning two-run homer against the Red Sox. (Story on page 3C).

Raiders, Pats get nods

By BRUCE LOWITT

The Oakland Raiders, as any schoolboy knows, are the class of the American Conference, right?

Wrong. Oh, any schoolboy in the Bay Area might say that. But there are a lot of youngsters in, say, greater metropolitan New England and regional Cincinnati and maybe a few other communities who will say ... well, who'll say that if you limit your thinking to the National Football League's defending champions.

The Raiders are unquestionably the best of the West—San Diego will probably step in to replace Denver as the division's distant runner-up this season—but New England and Cincinnati have every right to demand equal billing. The Patriots, the only team to beat Oakland last year, appears poised to outrun Baltimore for the Eastern title this time. And the Bengals, nosed out by Pittsburgh in last year's scramble to the top of the Central Division, should outclaw the Steelers this time.

"IT'S TOUGH predicting division winners—but that's a breeze when compared to trying to figure which team will be the AFC entry in Super Bowl XII next Jan. 15 in New Orleans' Superdome.

The Raiders may be the reigning champions and they may look every bit as good as they did when they demolished Minnesota for the title. But as any Super Bowl champion (except perhaps for Green Bay, Miami and Pittsburgh) will say, winning the title is the easy part. Defending it is a different story.

Before the AFC lines up for the playoffs, here's how the final regular-season standings will look:

WEST DIVISION
Oakland Raiders
San Diego Chargers
Denver Broncos
Kansas City Chiefs
Seattle Seahawks

Midland to play host to shooting meets

The combined Gulf Coast State and Texas Heavy Varmint and Unrestricted shooting championships will be held at the Midland Shooters Association range Saturday and Sunday.

The Heavy Varmint shoot will be held Saturday while the Unrestricted division is scheduled for Sunday.

Hunters from throughout the southwest are expected in the Tall City. Action will get underway at 8 a.m. each day.

The shoot is scheduled for the MSA range 9 ½ miles southeast of Midland.

Travel southeast on highway 158 to Garden City and go four miles south on FM 1312 to reach the range.

This weekend's shoot is a prelued prelude to the nationals, which will be held in Midland in July 1978.

College football is more fun than pros

The Washington Post

The idea today is to say college football is more fun than the pro game. The thought came up the other night when the Giffer said he'd been talking to the Oakland Raiderettes and they were really mad because the Dallas Cowboys cheerleaders were getting all the exposure (blush) on television and why didn't TV give credit to other cheerleaders?

Howard, the Raiderettes are upset, the Giffer said. And Howard did the right thing. He shut up for once.

If the National Football League had a sense of decorum, it would send all those plastic cheerleaders back to the secretarial pool or the swimming pool or — surely this is true, because the NFL doesn't miss a trick— back to their studies in nuclear physics.

Cheerleaders, schmeerleaders. These girls are pomposity on the hoof.

THE NFL has its make-believe cheerleaders only because college football has real cheerleaders who produce real laughs and cry real tears. For some reason, the sight of the Raiderettes— poor unnoticed things in thier short skirts and silky blouses— reminded at least one TV viewer of a night editor he once knew on a small newspaper in central Illinois.

The night editor was the kind of guy who would wear a tweed tie to work. One of those. Winner of a Nieman Fellowship, which is a big deal in journalism, he spent a year studying at Harvard University. Back on the job, he made certain everyone saw the new piece of jewelry hanging on his tie.

"My Harvard key," he said.

The state editor was not impressed. Only the price of soybeans impressed the state editor. He was not impressed by a night editor who wore jewelry on his tie.

"SO WHAT?' the state editor said. "On my garage, I got a Yale lock."

No matter how often the NFL reminds us of its greatness, the world's Yale-Lock lovers will stay with the college game. What college football gives the paying customer is a day of fun, a reminder that he once was young and full of imperfections unnoticed. It's a day in the sun on campus. The leaves are gold and yellow and everyone is smiling, because it's a game, not a war, and they understand the difference.

BESIDES IT'S a better game to watch. No a better game technically. No college passer can match the majesty of a Ken Stabler, and it would

Former college stars get ax in pro ball

By The Associated Press

It is being proven again that hot-shot press clippings from a player's college days don't impress National Football League coaches.

Two former Heisman Trophy winning quarterbacks—Pat Sullivan and Steve Spurrier—have been dropped by NFL teams. Running backs Sonny Collins of Kentucky, Kermit Johnson of UCLA and Mike Adamle of Northwestern—former stars at major universities—were cut Wednesday, joining Jim Bertelsen of Texas in the ranks of the unemployed.

But some of the rejected players were given another chance.

Wide receivers Randy Vataha and John Gilliam, defensive end Bob Lurtsema, defensive back Rolly Woolsey and fullback Mike Franckowiak were given new NFL contracts after getting the axe.

SULLIVAN, WAIVED Wednesday by San Francisco, spent four years with the Atlanta Falcons before playing out his option and joining the Washington Redskins. He was cut by the Redskins and later the Chicago Bears before the 49ers gave him a tryout this year.

The 49ers also cut Johnson Wednesday, along with linebacker Rod Martin. They also placed linebacker Mike Baldassin and quarterback Steve DeBerg, acquired on waivers from the Dallas Cowboys, on the two-man taxi squad.

Adamle was released by the Chicago Bears to make room for Gilliam, who had a standout 10-year career with the Minnesota Vikings but was cut Wednesday by Atlanta, who signed him last year.

The Falcons cut five players, including Collins, running back Billy Pritchett and rookie receiver Shelton Diggs of Southern California.

VATAHA WAS claimed on waivers by the Green Bay Packers from the New England Patriots, who cut him Tuesday. Vataha, who teamed for years with quarterback Jim Plunkett at Stanford and New England, replaces rookie offensive lineman Gerald Skinner of Arkansas on the Packers' active roster. Skinner was put on injured reserve.

Top tennis seeds draw early byes

By PAUL DOMOWITCH

Most of the top-seeded players have drawn first round byes as the 17th annual Midland Tennis Club sponsored Invitational Tennis Tournament gets underway Friday in the Tall City.

Close to 200 competitors will be utilizing three different courts in Midland as opening round play begins at 9 a.m. Friday in the three-day event, which concludes Sunday afternoon.

The men's singles event has drawn 101 players alone, and play in that division, as well as men's doubles, will be split up between the Midland and Lee high courts.

The ladies' singles draw has just 62 players and all of the action leading up to the semifinals will be played at the Midland College complex. All semifinal and final round action in both the men's and women's divisions will be played at Midland High on Sunday. The championship round will get underway at about 1 p.m.

Several players have drawn opening round byes in the men's singles division, including top-seeded Larry Gottfried of Trinity, who probably won't play until sometime Friday afternoon.

The two, three and four seeds — Randy Crawford of TCU, Erick Iskersky of Trinity and John Staub of Oklahoma — also have the morning off.

Fifth seeded Chris Delaney of SMU will face Midland High junior Arthur Yeager in a first round match, and sixth seeded John Picken of Pan Am will open with another MHS netter, Duncan Kennedy.

Tut Bartzen, the seventh seed from TCU, will face John Kirwan in his first tourney encounter, while eighth-seeded Todd Reed of West Texas State opposes Odessa College's Paul Mooney.

Number one seeded Carrie Fleming of Trinity and second seeded Kim Steinmetz of SMU both drew first round byes in the women's singles event, but the other six seeds are scheduled for action.

The third seed, Lori Oberheide of Trinity, will face Mandy Ham of Texas Tech; fourth seeded Crissy Gonzales of SMU takes on Lesa Booker of Tech; Ann Layman, the fifth seed from Midland College will face Alexis Hefley of Texas A&M; Sixth seeded Ann Schroeder of Trinity is meeting Ann Schilling of A&M; Cindy Benzon, the seventh seed from SMU, will face Lori Nelson, the high school star from Corpus Christi; and eighth seeded Debbie Phillips of UTPB will oppose Midland High's Dinah Boyd.

Most of the out-of-town teams and players will be arriving some time late this afternoon or early tonight, and will be housed by residents of Midland. The Trinity University women's team is scheduled to arrive via Southwest Airlines at the Air Terminal at 5:25 p.m., while the Trinity men's team and their coach Bob McKinely will be coming on a later flight.

Buffs, Badgers boastin'

Area football powers seem safe another week

By TERRY WILLIAMSON

Before the space program and West Texas football, they said, "What goes up, must come down."

Well that old bucket doesn't hold much water any more, and most area powers appear to be safe from falling for a least another week. But at least, they are saying now, "Anything can happen." So the spirit of mystery still lingers.

Stanton's thundering herd of Buffaloes will trek to McCamey Friday night, and no one expects the Buffs to lose a wheel here with Marvin Jones having already cranked out seven touchdowns and 298 yards rushing in two previous games.

BUT THE Badgers are laying in wait after pulling off their first victory last weekend over Reagan County, 27-20. The Badgers finally have some offense going, and they don't want to lose that even against the likes of the powerful Buffs.

Andrews' highly ranked Mustangs host Brownfield Friday in what could be the biggest mismatch since King Kong took on the United States Air Force. The Cubs haven't shown too much this season, and Andrews seems to be in the winning groove now after belting Lamesa, 35-3, last week. Mustang quarterback Booger Brooks continues to be one of the best backs in the state. He has passed for three touches and run for two more. He had one called back against Big Spring.

CRANE'S GOLDEN Cranes, winless in two outings against tough AAA schools, may find that elusive victory this week when they travel to Van Horn. The Eagles own a victory this year, but that came against hapless Class B Balmorhea. The Cranes could get the offense in high gear in this one.

Lamesa, on the other hand, will take its sputtering offense to Pecos to face a bird of another color. The Tornadoes have not scored a touchdown in two outings and the Eagles of Pecos are undefeated and high scoring this year. There doesn't seem much hope here for much improvement for Lamesa in this one. The Lamesa defense appears to be solid, but offensive fumbles continually keep them in trouble.

IRAAN'S BRAVES, also undefeated, travel to Big Lake for a match with the winless Reagan County Owls. On paper, this looks like another one in the bag for the Braves, but the Owls are teeming after a narrow loss to McCamey last week. Reagan County ended the game on the Badgers' one-yard line, and they could be fired up for Iraan.

One major power may be headed for trouble. Rankin's Red-Devils, undefeated in two outings and owning an 11-game regular season winning streak, host Jal, N. M., Friday in what could be a tough outing for the Devils. This contest has always been a tough battle, and it could go either way.

Undefeated Lubbock Dunbar meets unbeaten Fort Stockton in the only other major outing this week. The lull won't last too long.

This Week's Area Schedule

District 3-AAA: Lamesa at Pecos, Brownfield at Andrews, Lubbock Dunbar at Fort Stockton, Lubbock Coronado at Lubbock Estacado (today), Odessa Ector at Lake View, Snyder at Big Spring, Sweetwater at Stamford

District 7-AA: Crane at Van Horn, Ozona at Eldorado, Mason at Sonora, Kermit at Lovington, N. M.

District 5-A: Borden County at O'Donnell, Plains at Sundown, Roosevelt at Seagraves, New Deal at Shallowater, Stanton at McCamey.

District 6-A: Balmorhea at Clint, Iraan at Reagan County, Alpine at Marfa, Stanton at McCamey, Jal, N. M., at Rankin, Crane at Van Horn, Wink open.

District 9-A: Iraan at Reagan County, Ozona at Eldorado, Mason at Sonora, Hawley at Menard, Robert Lee at Eden, Jim Ned at Wall, Junction open.

Midland high keeps record unblemished

ODESSA — The Midland High golf team kept their perfect record in tact here Tuesday afternoon, edging by Odessa High, 8½-6½ at the Sunset Country Club.

The victory was the third without a loss for the Bulldogs of Coach Robert Young. Midland's one and two golfers were upset, but David Brimberry, Mike Mahan and Jay Workman picked up the slack to salvage the win.

In a match at Big Spring, Odessa Permian got by the host Steers, 8-7.

Midland 8½, Odessa 6½

Rebels pick up first golf victory

The Lee High golfers picked up their first win of the fall campaign Tuesday, defeating Andrews 13-2 at Hogan Park.

Jeff Lott, Grant Spencer, Gary Raney and Robert Upham all gained three points apiece for the Rebels of Coach Tim Peden, whose record now stands at 1-2.

Stanton is serious threat to Seagraves

TERRY WILLIAMSON

Stanton Coach David Thompson never skipped a beat during the preseason, saying all along that Stanton would have one of its better teams.

Some were saying that Thompson was getting way beyond himself since he happens to be playing in the same district with Seagraves, which is favored to win the Class A state championship this year.

Well, whether the Buffs win district or not, Thompson is going to be right because the Buffs have already shown that they are one of the powers that be in West Texas Class A circles.

One of the major reasons is tailback Marvin Jones, the flashy 170-pound, 5-foot-11 loose hipped yardage burner that stands fans on their heads. Stanton fans better enjoy him this year because the likes of Jones may not be seen again in these parts for a long while.

JONES HAS rushed for 298 yards in two outings, scored seven touchdowns (six by the rush and one by pass) and is carrying a 5.5 yard per carry average. Pretty good stats, but he plays defense too (cornerback) and has one interception to his credit.

In the first game against Tahoka, Jones, who is apparently one big hip joint, carried the ball 35 times for 180 yards and four touchdowns. That is enough evidence right there to say that he is durable.

"I've said all along that he was going to be a good one," Thompson said this week. "Several college coaches have already been here to look at him.

"We didn't know he had carried 35 times in that first game, but he held up well. He's a workhorse. There's no doubt about that.

"WE WOULD like to spread the running attack around a little more than that, but we look to Marvin to carry the ball. When he carried 35 times, he lost yardage only once on a fumbled pitchout, and had no gain only once. He had plus yardage on 33 carries. The next game he carried only 19 times for 118 yards, but our fullback Bob Jones really came through for us with 103 yards rushing. What's really great about Jones is that he does all of this when other teams are keying on him. Every team wants to stop Marvin."

It's easy to see that Thompson is a fan of Jones, but before this season is over, Jones is going to have a lot of fans.

Back to the picking game where I was 25-12 last week for an overall 54-24 record and .692 percentage.

STANTON 30, McCAMEY 14— Marvin Jones—enough said.

RANKIN 24, JAL 20— Could be wrong on this one, but I hate to see that 11-game winning streak end.

IRAAN 35, REAGAN COUNTY 7— The Braves are beginning to get scary. They seem to know how to score.

ANDREWS 45, BROWNFIELD 0— The Cubs are walking up the wrong side of the street, and the Mustang bullies take offense.

CRANE 24, VAN HORN 7— The Cranes pick on somebody their own size, and that's the difference.

PECOS 25, LAMESA 0— The Tors will still be looking for that first touchdown this year.

MORE WILDNESS: Lubbock Monterey 18, Midland High 8; Midland Lee 24, Plainview 14; Odessa High 20, Hobbs 13; San Angelo 30, Roosevelt 14; Killeen 25, Abilene Cooper 7; Temple 22, Abilene High 21; Big Spring 21, Snyder 15; Fort Stockton 12, Lubbock Dunbar 10; Monahans 18, El Paso Jefferson 0; Lake View 30, Odessa Ector 12; Seminole 14, Artesia 13; Lubbock Estacado 21, Lubbock Coronado 16; Sweetwater 24, Stamford 6; Kermit 20, Lovington 6; Ozona 19, Eldorado 12; Sonora 16, Mason 7; O'Donnell 6, Borden County 0; Plains 24, Sundown 6; Seagraves 34, Roosevelt 0; New Deal 20, Shallowater 6; Clint 15, Balmorhea 0; Marfa 50, Alpine 7; Menard 12, Hawley 8; Robert Lee 7, Eden 6; Wall 42, Jim Ned 3.

Heavyweight Jimmy Young beats the stuffing out of a cowering Jody Ballard, in a heavyweight bout at Las Vegas, Nev. (AP Laserphoto).

Norton, Young score victories

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Ken Norton continues to wonder whether Muhammad Ali will ever fight him again.

"I'll believe it only when I climb into the ring with him," said the No. 1 challenger from Los Angeles, who beat Ali once and then lost two disputed decisions to the current heavyweight boxing champion.

Norton, 223, first has a date with Jimmy Young on Nov. 5, and the two tuned up with easy victories in nationally-televised bouts at Caesars Palace here Wednesday night.

NORTON SAYS Ali wants to avoid him, but the heavyweight champion—who has a title fight on Sept. 29 against Earnie Shavers—has gone on record saying he would put his title at stake against the Norton-Young winner.

Young, a 213-pound Philadelphian, started slowly but picked up speed and boxed his way to a one-sided 10-round verdict over Jody Ballard, 205, of Houston.

Norton started even slower and got tagged a couple of times. But at the end of the fifth round he knocked out No. 10-ranked Lorenzo Zanon, an awkward 207-pounder from Milan, Italy. There were only two seconds left in the stanza when a left hook started Zanon on the way out, so the time goes as 3:08, eight seconds after the round's scheduled end.

Neither Young nor Norton said he was impressed by each other's showing, but each made a point of watching the other.

"I HOPE Norton doesn't think he's going to do the same thing to me," said Young after watching the kayo on television. "He doesn't hit hard enough to hurt me," said Norton of Young. "He can't punch, but he does have speed."

The two showcased in the Sports Pavilion of Caesars, where they'll fight for more than $1 million each in the Fall.

Three other ten round bouts were closer:

Ron Lyle, the 220-pound No. 3 contender from Denver, said he suffered from the flu but barely outpointed little-known Stan Ward, a 236¼-pound newcomer from Sacramento, Calif. One judge scored the bout even and the other two had Lyle just one point ahead.

HUNTING & FISHING

Hunter safety course slated for youngsters

Deadline for signing up for the Hunter Safety Course is Sept. 21 at the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department (563-0645).

The two part course, offering nine hours of instruction, is open to persons 12 years of age and older and is being sponsored by the Midland Shooters Association with the TP-W&D furnishing the material.

Gene Campbell is in charge of the program and will be helped with instruction by other MSA members and Mack Caudle, Midland game warden.

The parent or legal guardian must register the child at the MSA club house by 6 p.m. Sept. 28. The emphasis is not on shooting or hunting but on how to do it safely.

The course will be held at the MSA club house and skeet ranch located one mile north of the Andrews Highway on Holiday Hill Road. The first class starts at 6 p.m. Sept. 28 and the second at 8:30 a.m. Oct. 1.

Campbell said the course is mandatory in 24 states, although mot required in Texas. However, 31,000 students have taken it and nine million persons in the U.S. have had hunter safety training, Campbell noted.

For those planning hunting trips to New Mexico and Colorado this year, both require Hunter Safety Courses for young hunters. In Colorado, any person born after Jan. 1, 1949 must have had the Hunter Safety course.

New Mexico now requires anyone under 18 who handles a firearm to have a Hunter Safety certificate. Certification is required to carry a firearm, hunt or target shoot regardless of whether under the supervision of a parent or guardian. You must have the course before you go to New Mexico, since the course will not be available there.

The new ruling does not apply to bow hunters.

LABOR DAY marked the end of the summer vacation season and the start of one of the best fishing periods of the year. Judging from the number of folks visiting Oak Creek Lake since Labor Day, it reflects their thinking, too.

"What we need now is some cool fronts," says Ike Pate, proprietor of Sportsman's Lodge.

Some good fish have been caught in the last two weeks with bass ranging to near six pounds and a few crappie going over two pounds, channel cat to six and yellow cat up to 28.

Chuck Jackson of Midland cuaght bass going to five pounds, 11 ounces.

This Saturday and Sunday, the lake will host its annual Carp Rodeo.

Hopeless Anderson, Tanner keep faith in NL race

By The Associated Press

Despite their nearly-hopeless positions in the National League divisional races, Cincinnati's Sparky Anderson and Pittsburgh's Chuck Tanner are keeping the faith.

Anderson's Reds came from behind with six runs in the final two innings to nip Los Angeles 9-8 Wednesday, leaving at four the Dodgers' magic number for clinching the Western Division. The Reds trail the Dodgers by 12½ games.

The Pirates were rained out after leading St. Louis 2-0 in the third inning, but that didn't dampen Tanner's spirits. With the Phillies losing to the Mets 1-0, Pittsburgh gained one-half game in standings and is 7½ games back.

"THAT WAS a courageous comeback we made," Anderson said after Ken Griffey smashed a two-run homer in the ninth inning to win the game. An inning earlier, the Reds scored four times, three runs on Geronimo's home run. George Foster also belted a homer, his 48th, tops in the major leagues, and knocked in his 137th run as the Reds beat Tommy John for only the second time ever.

"As I said before," Anderson added, "they won't clinch it against us. That's satisfaction. We'll just keep on fighting."

John, 18-6, got home run support from Dave Lopes, Steve Yeager and Steve Garvey, who had four hits and his 30th homer.

"I STILL have a shot at 20 wins," said John. "It would have been nice for us to clinch it against the Reds (Los Angeles needed a sweep of the two-game series to do so) and for me to get my 19th. But it will come."

Pittsburgh's plight is not quite as discouraging as Cincinnati's.

"We're not out of it until we're two games out and there's just one to go," said Tanner. "A collapse has happened before. One weekend can change a season. One club can get hot and another cold.

"I'm sure the Phillies feel they don't have it clinched," Tanner added. "It sure would be nice to put a 10-game winning streak together. We have to ask for help from other clubs too, because we don't play Philadelphia again."

Mets 1, Phillies 0

Nino Espinosa outdueled Philadelphia mound star Steve Carlton to help the Pirates. Espinosa hurled a three-hitter, struck out four and walked three. It was the second time the Mets' right-hander was involved in a shutout victory over Philadelphia, having combined with Skip Lockwood to blank the defending Eastern Division titlists earlier this season.

"They're not unbeatable," said Espinosa. "But they're not easy, either. Why do I do good against them? I don't know. I like to pitch against them in New York but not here because the mound is flat and I have to change my style."

Espinosa's batting style wasn't too bad either. He knocked in the game's only run with a single in the fifth.

Giants 3, Astros 2

Rookie left-hander Bob Knepper carried a three-hitter into the ninth inning for the Giants but needed relief from Dave Heaverlo and John Curtis to hold off Houston.

Willie McCovey's run-scoring single in the sixth inning knocked in the decisive tally for the Giants. Rob Andrews led off the inning with a single and scored on Darrell Evans' triple before McCovey knocked in Evans.

Enos Cabell had three hits for the Astros.

Padres 6, Braves 4

Gene Richards, Jerry Turner and Dave Roberts each collected three hits in a 12-hit Padres attack. Turner singled in Richards with the tiebreaking run in the seventh inning.

Expos 3, Cubs 2

Andre Dawson tripled home Dave Cash with the winning run in the 12th inning for Montreal. The Expos' other runs came on a steal of home by Gary Carter on the front end of a double steal and Chris Speier's bases-loaded sacrifice fly.

Never doubted pennant, Martin

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

"We're going to win the pennant—I've never doubted that," Billy Martin said. "I felt that way last April. I feel that way now."

The scrappy little manager of the New York Yankees was a picture of contentment and confidence as he sat in the swivel chair of his Yankee Stadium office, puffing on a pipe, his feet propped on a desk.

The clouds of controversy that had swirled around his head in mid-season had evaporated. The Yankees had drawn first blood in the important showdown series against the Boston Red Sox. The infantile family feuds somehow had gotten lost in the mad rush toward another World Series.

"THIS IS the kind of team that rises to the big occasion," Martin said. "It is at its best when the going is toughest."

The combative one-time Yankees infielder said he did not under-estimate the Red Sox—"They always come out swinging"—but felt the schedule was the ally of the Yankees.

"The Red Sox have six games left with the (Baltimore) Orioles," he said. "That's the rub. I look for them to split those games 3-3." The Yankees meet Boston for the last two times next Monday and Tuesday at Fenway Park.

The telephone on Martin's desk rang repeatedly. Someone asking about tickets. A private call ("I'll call you later"). A business call. No call from owner George Steinbrenner.

"You seem to have run out of crises," someone said.

Martin laughed. "The last thing I want is another crisis," he said. "I want to keep everything nice and quiet."

Reggie Jackson is nodding politely now to Thurman Munson. Mickey Rivers is hitting game-winning home runs instead of being accused of loafing. And Graig Nettles, who rarely takes batting practice, is taking vicious cuts in the cage.

MARTIN'S OFFICE, just off the players' dressing quarters, is a spacious room ringed with cushiony sofas and chairs, cluttered with baseball memorabilia, lined with book shelves.

A photo of a younger Casey Stengel in a Dodgers uniform and a color sketch of an older Stengel, doffing his cap, attest to Martin's devotion to his craggy old boss.

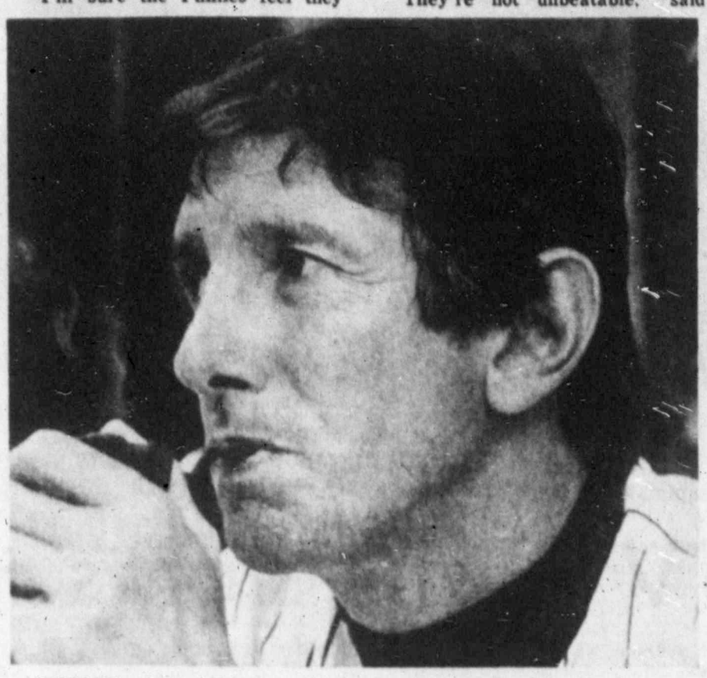
"NO, I HAVEN'T patterned my philosophy as a manager after Casey," Billy said. "Everybody has his own way of managing. But I learned a lot from Casey as I did from all the managers I played for.

"I always tried to sit right next to Case. I wanted to watch his moves. He was the master at keeping the non-regulars, the guys on the bench, happy. He joshed with them and made them feel they belonged."

Martin said early antipathy changed to respect for the late Charlie Dressen and he had admiration for Freddie Hutchinson, who while managing the Cincinnati Reds, showed that a man could be aggressive yet at the same time "a very beautiful person."

"At Oakland, in 1949, Dressen chewed me out for throwing to the wrong base," Billy said. "We got into a shouting match. I got so mad I packed my stuff and was going to leave. Cookie Lavagetto talked me out of it. I half-apologized and got a $300 fine. But Dressen and I got along great after that.

"One thing I learned. That was never to say 'I' when I meant 'we,' never say 'my ball club' instead of 'our ball club.'



Billy Martin...puffs pipe of peace, he never doubted the Yankees.

Want ads bring cage talent to Iowa college

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Iowa Lakes Community College recruits basketball players through the want ads.

Hugh Howard, the Iowa Lakes coach, ran a classified ad in the Columbus Dispatch in July seeking prospects 6-feet-6 or taller.

The novel approach has paid a pair of tall dividends—6-8 Alvin Broadhurst and 6-6 Marshelle Simmons.

"I just wanted to let you know we recruited two players as a result of those ads," said Howard, newspaper. "Right now it looks as if both will start for us this winter."

THERE ARE MANY QUESTIONS ABOUT THE HOSPITAL DISTRICT ELECTION!

1. Will the improvements help us attract more doctors and make it easier for families to get a doctor?
2. Will there be new Coronary Care facilities to provide quality care in case my husband has a heart attack?
3. Will we expand the Labor and Delivery Ward which now is too small?
4. Will the old rooms in the original hospital be rennovated?
5. Will the paying patient be relieved of the indigent care/bad debt burden?
6. Will all Midlanders now have a voice in running the hospital?
7. Will there be additional space for surgery?
8. Will we be able to stay in Midland and not go to Odessa or Lubbock for most medical matters?
9. Will room rates remain reasonable?
10. Will the Directors be elected by the people?
11. Have all other alternatives for hospital renovation and expansion been ex-explored?
12. Will the people of Midland own Midland Memorial Hospital?
13. Is the Hospital District the most economical way to go?
14. Willl the Hospital District work to hold down medical costs for Senior Citizens?

Yanks retain 2 1/2 game lead

By The Associated Press

Bunters build runs a base at a time. Home run hitters, an impatient lot, deliver them in four-base clusters.

Reggie Jackson is no bunter.

In the ninth inning of a scoreless game between the New York Yankees and the Boston Red Sox, Jackson was flashed the bunt sign to advance Thurman Munson to second base. He squared around on the first and third pitches, but didn't offer at tosses by Boston's Reggie Cleveland.

"I had to talk to (third base Coach Dick) Howser about the sign because I don't bunt often enough to know it," said Jackson.

UNABLE TO gently lay the ball down, Jackson worked the count to 3-2 and instead laid out the Red Sox, smacking his 26th home run of the season and giving the Yankees a 2-0 victory Wednesday night.

"I didn't expect Cleveland to be taken out," said Jackson. "He had pitched a great game. Sometimes Cleveland gets me out with slow stuff down, but not today."

The triumph, the Yankees' second in two games in a crucial three-game series with the Red Sox, lifted New York 3½ games ahead of third-place Boston in the American League East. Baltimore, with 6-5 and 4-2 victories over Toronto, sneaked into second place, 2½ games behind New York.

Jackson, who has slugged 307 career homers, has trouble remembering his successful bunts.

"I THINK I got one back in 1974 and I know I got one in 1971," said the slugging outfielder who has driven in the winning run 17 times this season, tops on the Yankees. "In '74, I fouled the ball off and ended up hitting away. In '71, I got it down and it led to us (Oakland) winning."

The last time he played a great defensive game might also challenge Jackson's memory. But Wednesday night he made two spectacular plays, protecting Ed Figueroa's shaky seven-hit shutout.

He made a leaping catch against the wall in the fourth inning and a diving grab inches above the grass in the seventh. On the second catch, the Red Sox had a runner on second base with one out.

"I didn't get a good jump on the ball but I got the ball squarely in my mitt," said Jackson of the seventh-inning gem. "I'm not the greatest fielder in the world, a Paul Blair or (Joe) DiMaggio or anything like that.

"But I caught that one. The catches help build my confidence and prove I can field. But the home run is where it's at.

"This was my most satisfying game with the Yankees, perhaps the best game of baseball I've played in. There was great defense by both sides and great defense by me and then I hit it out to win it."

Orioles 6-4, Blue Jays 4-2

The Orioles, who have six games left with the Red Sox, continued moving up on the outside lane, while New York and Boston battled each other inside.

Lee May belted a two-run homer, his 23rd, in the first game and smacked a run-scoring double in the nightcap, pacing the Orioles to their sixth and seventh straight victories.

Royals 5-6, A's 2-0

The Royals continued to make a mockery of the race in the AL West, winning their 13th and 14th straight games, a club record and a major league high this season. The Royals' magic number now is nine; they lead second-place Chicago by nine games.

Dennis Leonard hurled an eight-hitter in the second game and Jim Colborn scattered seven hits but needed relief help from Larry Gura in the final two innings of the opener.

In an oddity, Jeff Newman of Oakland started the second game as a catcher and finished as a pitcher, giving up one hit and no runs in one inning. He hit Hal McRae with a pitch, then gave up a single to George Brett before retiring the next three batters.

"He's a catcher and he should stay behind the plate," said McRae. "Before I came up, Brett said it would be embarrassing to make an out by a catcher. I said I wasn't worried about making an out, I was worried about getting hit."

Oakland Manager Bobby Winkles said Newman didn't volunteer for the pitching assignment.

"I selected him," Winkles said. "You got to pick someone. I can't waste my only reliever, (Doug) Bair, on a 6-0 game when I might need him in tomorrow's doubleheader."

Rangers 2, Angels 1

Texas right-hander Doyle Alexander stopped California on three hits and became the winningest Ranger pitcher this season with 15 victories against 10 losses.

Texas' John Ellis drilled his third home run of the year in the third inning. A double by Ken Henderson, a single by Jim Sundberg and Toby Harrah's sacrifice fly provided the winning margin in the sixth.

Tigers 5-2, Indians 3-1

A sacrifice fly by Ron LeFlore in the 10th inning gave the Tigers a doubleheader sweep. The Tigers had ended a six-game losing string in the opener, in which Tim Corcoran doubled home two runs and Ben Oglivie pounded out four hits, including a solo homer.

Twins 7, White Sox 0

Dave Goltz, 18-9, checked the White Sox on seven hits and became the first pitcher to throw a complete-game shutout against them this season. The Twins snapped a six-game losing streak.

Brewers 8, Mariners 5

Sixto Lezcano's three-run homer in the fifth highlighted a Milwaukee comeback that enabled the Brewers to wipe out a 5-0 Seattle lead. Reliever Eduardo Rodriguez allowed Seattle just four hits over the final 71-3 innings.

Bradley dropped by Vikings

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — For the first time in 17 years, Bill Bradley will not be putting on a football uniform every weekend this fall.

Nicknamed Superbill during his illustrious high school and college careers in Texas, Bradley apparently is out of football for good. After so long in football, is Bill Bradley depressed?

"No sir," he said after being released by the Minnesota Vikings. "I thought they had plans for me, but I wouldn't knock them.

"An organization is loyal to guys who have done it for them," continued Bradley, who was acquired from Philadelphia earlier this summer. "I understand that."

Bradley was an all-pro defensive back for the Eagles in 1971 and 1972 and played in the Pro Bowl from 1971-73.

But they told him Tuesday he was no longer a football player with the Minnesota Vikings. He was put on waivers and went unclaimed by the rest of the National Football League teams.

Bud Grant had told Bradley he was exactly the kind of man the Minnesota coach wants playing for him.

"You've got a good head and you're interested in what's going on and you play the game well," he had said.

TV wants rights to 5-4A story

PAUL DOMOWITCH SPORTS CHATTER

I guess it was inevitable that it would finally come to this. To tell you the truth, I would have thought they'd at least have the courtesy to wait until my book comes out in three months.

But this is a dog-eat-dog business, and they beat me to the big money; THEY being the CBS television network.

My very reliable source inside the network told me Wednesday that his bosses are currently negotiating for the rights to turn the District 5-4A Executive Committee meetings into a weekly series.

The word is that San Angelo schools superintendent Jim Nevins, who is the chairman of the Executive Committee, has been making several visits to CBS headquarters in New York City the past few days, and the deal is just about ready to be finalized.

No one is quite sure what the agreement will entail, but CBS' initial offer was something like $5 million, a dozen diamond-studded blocking shields (for television use only) and a brand new 16-millimeter camera for every school in the district. Nevins turned down that original offer, and was reportedly waiting until the network offered him a regular role in the series before he signed the papers (Nevins wants to play a bad guy.)

FROM WHAT I've been able to gather, the show will be entitled "How the West Was Won," but I still can't say for certain if it's going to be a comedy, drama. . . or cartoon. According to my source, each week a different 5-4A school will violate a University Interscholastic League rule, and then a major portion of the show will be devoted to the actual excitement and tension of the Executive Committee meetings, as they slowly but surely piece the puzzle together and determine the guilt or innocence of the accused.

CBS feels that the real committee meetings did tend to get a little boring at times (surprise!), however, so they're going to stray from reality just a bit.

First of all, the accused schools will bring in big-name Perry Mason-type lawyers to defend them and try to prove the whole thing is a frame up. Secondly, the characters will be quite a bit deeper than the people they'll be portraying. To keep up with the need for sex on television, many of the superintendants and athletic directors will carry on torrid, secret love affairs, which incidentally, will be followed just as closely as the meetings.

Oh yes, the character of Shorty Lawson is going to be left out of the script because of a lack of believability.

THE NETWORK is bringing in a group of their very best writers, and expect an original plot each week. There will never be a violation of the same UIL rule twice.

CBS admitted, though, that they are going to borrow ideas from other successful TV shows. For instance, in the new show, there will be a character called Bailey Marshall, who will be copied from Charlie of "Charlie's Angels." You'll never really see him, but he'll always make a phone call to the committee (his angels) at the beginning of the show and tell them what their next case is.

The series pilot, which will probably air some time in January, has an very interesting and a very unique plot. According to Rule 15 of the UIL code, football players are not allowed to eat ice cream during the first four days of pre-season workouts.

Now, if you can believe this, a coach from one of the 5-4A schools (which one has not yet been determined) has his kids eating popsicles (flavor has also not yet been determined) during this forbidden period, and a local television station films the whole thing.

NOW COMES the good part.

After the violation is reported, the coach claims that the rule was never made clear in the UIL rule book, and that he didn't know popsicles came under the listing of ice cream.

Naturally, nobody buys that story, and when they point out to him that the latest edition of the UIL rule book DOES list popsicles as ice cream, he tells them that he hasn't yet gotten the new edition.

I'd tell you what happens next, but then I'd be spoiling the whole show for you.

The second show of the series has already been written as well, and that one's pure writing genius. In it, Odessa Permian tries to pass off a 650-pound giant ape as a defensive tackle, and is charged with violating Rule 27 of the UIL code, which states, ". . . high school football players in the state of Texas must be AT LEAST 51% human."

Oh, if only they would have waited for my book to come out though.

By HOWARD SMITH

NEW YORK (AP) — Pro football, television's premier sports attraction, gets rolling this weekend with major changes at NBC, a stand-pat attitude at CBS and the return of Dandy Don Meredith to ABC among the highlights.

Last time around, ABC, with its Monday night game, and CBS, with its National Conference games, both enjoyed increased ratings while the numbers for NBC's American Conference games were down. When CBS and NBC went head to head, primarily on Sunday afternoons, CBS averaged a 17.1 rating, meaning 17.1 per cent of TV sets in the nation were tuned to CBS, while NBC got a 13.4. That represented about a 20 per cent increase over 1975 for CBS and a six per cent decline for NBC.

In addition, CBS's "The NFL Today," its pregame, halftime and postgame show, buried NBC's "Grandstand." Clearly, something had to be done.

NBC HAS responded by junking "Grandstand" and will introduce a new show Sunday, "NFL '77." The show will be devoted to pro football for the most part and is being put together largely by Larry Merchant, the former newspaperman-turned-TV analyst.

Lee Leonard and Bryant Gumble, refugees from "Grandstand," will host the new show which boasts a weekly commentary on the pro grid scene by Minnesota Viking quarterback Fran Tarkenton, live pickups from game sites featuring analysis by NBC's stable of ex-players, an innovative series of features and, last but not least, a football crazy robot named Statz.

"STATZ IS going to forecast the outcome of games and many other things," says Merchant. "Going into the first game Statz will already know the result of the Super Bowl. He will be able to come up with any number of statistics to show why one team is successful and another isn't. He'll be funny and we hope to develop his personality."

Merchant says Statz, who will be pumped full of information by a computer, will be far more than simply the mechanical equivalent of CBS' Jimmy the Greek. "He'll certainly be more up front," says Merchant. "The Greek doesn't make predictions. He just tells you the betting line. Statz will tell you that Los Angeles is going to beat Atlanta 22-7."

Merchant will contribute pieces to the show from time to time and his first contribution Sunday promises to be a beauty. He took a film crew to India for a report on Joe Don Looney, the eccentric former running back who played for five NFL teams in five years. Looney, believe it or not, has found peace as an elephant boy at a religious community.

"This piece is the most unbelievable thing I've ever done," says Merchant. "I've been in sports for a long time but this is the topper."

NBC WILL also be trying to find a replacement for Meredith as the "color" man to go along with Curt Gowdy on its No. 1 broadcasting team. Former San Francisco quarterback John Brodie and Merlin Olsen, late of the Los Angeles Rams, are the top candidates and NBC will be watching to see which one blends in with Gowdy best.

CBS, pleased with its success last season, has made few changes. Pat Summerall and Tom Brookshier remain the network's top broadcasting duo and Brent Musburger, Phyllis George, who had been considering leaving the show in favor of a more varied "show biz" career, and Irv Cross return to "The NFL Today" along with The Greek and Jack Whitaker. "The NFL Today" will have its customary run of taped highlights from other games and will be making an effort to keep its features as close to the news as possible instead of merely presenting a series of stories canned well in advance.

The only personnel change of note is the hiring of Tim Ryan away from NBC to beef up CBS' play-by-play staff.

And then there's Dandy Don, whose return to ABC is being heavily promoted by the network. Meredith will be reunited with Howard Cosell and Frank Gifford when ABC opens its season with San Francisco vs. Pittsburgh Monday night, and ABC is hoping to get lots of mileage out of the Meredith-Cosell, country boy-city slicker byplay.

Otherwise Monday night football will remain essentially the same with taped highlights at halftime, flashy camera work, matching blazers, etc.

Crank up the cameras, plug in the microphones, turn on the tape and let the season begin.

Pats, Raiders, Bengals picked

EAST DIVISION
New England Patriots

Buffalo Bills
New York Jets

CENTRAL DIVISION
Cincinnati Bengals
Pittsburgh Steelers
Houston Oilers
Cleveland Browns

The numbers the Raiders throw around are terrifying, like Ken Stabler's league-high marks of 27 touchdown passes and Cliff Branch's 12 touchdown catches and Mark van Eeghen's 1,012 yards rushing ... and the two biggest numbers of them all: Oakland 32, Minnesota 14.

With Stabler and Branch and Van Eeghen and Dave Casper and old reliable Fred Biletnikoff on offense, with terrors like Otis Sistrunk, George Atkinson, Ted Hendricks and others on defense, with Al Davis continuing to bring diverse (and sometimes outcast) talent together, and with John Madden masterminding it all into the most successful team of the last decade, there's no sign of relief in sight for the rest of the West.

If anyone considered the Patriots as flukes last year, this one will convince them that youth shall be served. With exciting Steve Grogan at quarterback, running on his own as well as running an offense starring runners Sam Cunningham, Don Calhoun and Andy Johnson, plus an occasional pass to Russ Francis, New England will continue to steamroller the opposition.

CINCINNATI GETS the nod in the Central Division not only because of its improvement (a superb first round in the draft, getting defensive tackles Eddie Edwards and Whitley Wilson and tight end Mike Cobb plus running back Pete Johnson in the second round) but also because of slippage by Pittsburgh.

A standout-if-not-spectacular defense with players like Coy Bacon, Tommy Casanova, Jim LeClair and Lemar Parrish, consistent-if-not-flashy quarterback Ken Anderson, steady-if-not-sensational runners Boobie Clark and Archie Griffin and electrifying receiver Isaac Curtis team to give the Bengals the power to pass the Steelers.

Four vie in Hogan golf finals

Linda Ballard, Florence Mailey, Sheryl Starcevich, and Shirley Edward all survived the two days of match play unscathed and advanced to Thursday's medal play final in the championship flight of the Hogan Park Women's Golf Association Tournament at Hogan Park.

The four women were the only golfers in the 18-hole division to make it through Tuesday and Wednesday's match play without a loss.

In the nine-hole division, Anell Mack, Jeanne Allen, Betty Reimers, Mary Davis and Marilyn Berry all made it into the championship flight.

No handicaps will be used in today's round, which will include play in four flights in each division. The first group of players teed off at 8:30 a.m.

18-HOLE DIVISION
Championship flight: Linda Ballard, Florence Mailey; Sheryl Starcevich, Shirley Edwards.
First flight: Marilynn Phelph, Jane Wagner, Merla Ketner, Joyce Parker.

be silly to put any college runner in the same sentence with O.J. Simpson.

But neither do the pros play with the innocent enthusiasm and excitement of the thousands of college athletes whose desire and competitiveness make it meaningless that most of them lack the skills necessary to become professionals.

Competitive sport eliminates the weak and unskilled at every level. By the time they reach the NFL, football players are amazing specimens with astonishing skills. To see them at their best is to see nature work a miracle.

WHILE THE college players are much more than stumbling bums— for they have succeeded in climbing the competitive ladder to the next-to-last rung— they come with imperfections.

And that is the beauty of the college game. In the NFL, everyone is so equal and everyone knows the same techniques, strategies— that the game becomes dull, a contest of conservatism. Let the other guy lose, then I'll win.

Not in college. The game is unpredictable. The major colleges have averaged more than 625 yards total offense a game for a decade now; the Washington Redskins and opponents averaged 574 yards last season).

MC golfers to play in WJCC opener

Midland College opens men's action in the Western Junior College Conference with a two-day tournament at Clarendon College Friday and Saturday.

Coach Delnor Poss has had less than a month to evaluate his squad, which includes eight freshman and one sophomore, but Tommy Harper, the sophomore from McCamey, showed experience pays when he shot a 218 for 54 holes at Hobbs, N.M., last week.

Harper finished two over par and four behind the medalist.

Favorites for WJCC honors are Western Texas, and New Mexico JC. WTC took the top two spots at Hobbs last week while NMJC was third and fourth. MC was fifth and sixth.

ONLY THE first 18 holes at Clarendon count as the conference tournament.

Poss has listed the following players for the first WJCC outing with only the best four scores counting: Harper, Sayne Berry, Midland; Kelly Eng, Midland; Bert Wimberly, Las Cruces, N.M.; Russ Wimblery, Rankin, and Mike Yell, Vega.

NANA Regional Corporation prospering in Alaska

By WARD SIMS

KOTZEBUE, Alaska (AP) — John W. Schaeffer, Eskimo, is visibly proud when he talks of the way the NANA Regional Corporation doubled its assets in less than five years.

Through the window behind him in a rather spartan office in the new Nul-Luk-Vik Hotel, Kotzebue Sound is visible.

This is NANA country, the home base of one of the 12 regional Native corporations established in the state under the 1971 Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act.

Under that legislation, designed to extinguish aboriginal land claims, Alaska's natives were granted $962 million and the right to select 40 million acres of federally owned land in the state.

While most of the other Native corporations have struggled financially—only five showed a profit last year — NANA has prospered. It has been in the black for the past three fiscal years.

Since the settlement act was approved by Congress, NANA has received $12.2 million from the Alaska Native Fund. Yet NANA's annual report for fiscal 1976 shows assets more than double that, $27 million.

Schaeffer is hoping that this year NANA and its business subsidiaries will earn enough to start a distribution of dividends to the 4,900 Eskimos scattered over a vast area of northwest Alaska who are shareholders in NANA.

Theirs is primarily a subsistence economy. They live for the most part off their harvests from the sea and the land and the rivers — caribou, seals, walrus, salmon, tom cod, berries, sheefish, birds.

Kotzebue, an arctic distribution center of about 2,400, is the largest community in the NANA area.

Schaeffer says there has been no dividend distribution to shareholders as yet because "we had several years of operation in which we had no business operations. But we did have expenses — organizing, land selections, that type of thing. So, we have those losses to make up."

NANA, however, has increased its assets dramatically through what Schaeffer describes as a calculated, "fairly conservative" philosophy for investment of NANA funds, including stock, mostly preferred, and U.S. Treasury and commercial notes.

The remainder of the corporation's funds have gone into operating expenses and a wide variety of business ventures. Among them is the NANA Construction Co. of Anchorage, which has completed or is working on such diverse projects as a new control tower at Anchorage International Airport, schools, banks and a new Museum of the Arctic here.

Other business ventures include an oil field service firm, hotels, a catering company, a firm which holds the contract for security at trans-Alaska pipeline camps north of the Yukon River, and a reindeer herd.

NANA also operates as a subsidiary the 52-room Nul-Luk-Vik Hotel, opened two years ago at a cost of more than $3 million, a 20-unit apartment building in Kotzebue and 20-room hotels in Noorvik and Kiana.

Associated with the Museum of the Arctic, now under construction, will be a cutting and polishing facility for gems from NANA's jade mine 100 miles northeast of Kotzebue, a building and supply firm, and a gift shop.

Schaeffer estimates that NANA's payroll statewide is now about 300, including about 150 in the region embraced by the corporation. Many are Natives.

Schaeffer says one of the main goals of the corporation's 23-member board of directors is to "preserve and develop our Native culture.

"Our Museum reflects that. The main objective is to have a place where we can show and teach the values of our culture to our children, and to our visitors."

As part of the emphasis on Eskimo culture, NANA sponsors an annual Elders' Conference where the senior citizens of the NANA region meet to discuss and record the history of their forebears.

Korean scandal may involve House majority whip

By T. R. REID
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — House Majority Whip John Brademas (D-Ind.), a popular senior lawmaker whose 18-year congressional career has been free of taint, is finding it more and more difficult to escape the toils of the Korean influence-buying scandal on Capitol Hill.

Brademas has spent a good deal of his time in recent weeks answering questions about a $2,950 cash contribution to his 1974 re-election campaign from Tongsun Park, the South Korean businessman who was indicted last month on charges of trying to bribe members of Congress.

The congressman has offered conflicting explanations of how he used Park's cash.

In an interview a month ago with The Washington Post, Brademas said all the cash had been spent directly for campaign activities.

Two weeks later, Brademas told his hometown paper, The South Bend Tribune, a different story. The congressman said then that $950 of Park's money ended up in his personal bank account.

If the South Bend version is accurate — and Brademas now says it is — it could propel the congressman into a complicated legal stew.

The House's Code of Official Conduct mandates that "a member ... shall keep his campaign funds separate from his personal funds."

The Internal Revenue Code requires candidates to report as income any political contributions transferred to personal use. Brademas says he did not report Park's cash as income on his tax return.

The Congressman says he was not required to report the $950 as income, because he took it to reimburse himself for an $800 campaign expenditure he had made with personal funds.

That explanation might entangle Brademas in another federal statute. Brademas did not report the $800 expenditure on his campaign finance reports. The Federal Election Campaign Act requires itemized reporting of any political expenditure over $100.

All these problems have made the earnest, cooperative Brademas angry and defensive about his relations with Tongsun Park.

Brademas says the news reports of the cash contribution earned him the harshest editorial condemnation of his 18-year congressional career. "The papers savaged me," he says with an unhappy shake of the head.

The criticism is "just not warranted," Brademas says. "If I had wanted to pursue some nefarious purpose with (Park's) money, why would I have reported the contribution?"

Brademas' campaign committee publicly reported the receipt, on Sept. 23, 1974, of $2,950 from Tongsun Park. The reports also show a disbursement of $950 to candidate Brademas the next day.

The reports do not show how Brademas used that $950, however, and it is here that the Washington and South Bend versions of his story differed.

In his first interview with The Post, Brademas said he took the cash on a trip to California because he knew he would be entertaining a group of political backers there on Sept. 24 — the day after he received the money from Park.

In considerable detail, Brademas told The Post hwo he had folded the money — 19 $50 bills — into his pocket in his office in Washington. Later that day in Los Angeles, he explained he had counted out about $700 of the cash to pay the bill at a posh night spot where he hosted a dinner.

In the story he told The South Bend Tribune, however, Brademas said the Los Angeles dinner was actually held in May — four months before Park's contribution.

Brademas told the Tribune (and The Post, in a subsequent interview) that he now cannot recall what he did with the $950 in cash. Somehow, however, it ended up in his personal checking account, the congressman said.

"It was all perfectly legitimate" to deposit the cash in his personal account, Brademas now says:

"By the time Park made his contribution, the $950 was really mine. I had personally paid $800 for that dinner in Los Angeles in May, and the campaign owed me for it. So when Park made the contribution, the cash was really my money."

At the dinner in Los Angeles in May, Brademas says, he entertained about 15 friends, including NBC Newsman John Chancellor and two members of Brademas' committee staff.

Brademas said he would not ask for political contributions from the staff aides, and that he knew that Chancellor would not make a campaign contribution. But Brademas maintains that the dinner was a political, not social, function, because "there were some past and potential contributors there."

Those present at the Los Angeles dinner contributed a total of $400 to Brademas' campaign in 1974, according to campaign reports.

Brademas said he did not report the Los Angeles dinner as a political expenditure because "it just slipped my mind." He said he had never, before or since, forgotten to report a campaign expenditure of similar magnitude.

Brademas said he could not recall why he had waited until September to seek reimbursement for the expenditure in May. "It didn't occur to me to reimburse myself until the cash contribution came in, I guess," he said.

The remaining $2,000 of Park's 1974 contribution was placed in Brademas' office safe and used for petty cash in the campaign, the congressman said.

Brademas for years sponsored legislation outlawing the use of cash in campaign contributions. He said he accepted the cash from Park, in violation of his personal rules, because the South Korean was "charming ... it would h have been awkward not to."

City observes policy of quota on growth

EDITOR'S NOTE—No other American city of its size has adopted such hard-nosed measures to limit urban growth as Boulder, Colo. The policy has its critics, notably for its effect on low-income people. But supporters feel that restrictions of new housing coupled with an ambitious "greenbelt" program will preserve Boulder's social and scenic amenities for decades.

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — This handsome university town, a quiet white-collar community snuggled comfortably against the foothills of the Rocky Mountains, exploded with growth during the 1960s. Today, residents have applied the brakes with vengeance.

Boulder is the largest city in the nation to put a quota on growth, sharply limiting construction of new residential units. s

Under regulations approved by citywide vote, Boulder's population will increase no more than 2 per cent annually — far from yearly rates of up to 8 per cent that raised Boulder's population from 20,000 in 1950 to nearly 90,000 today.

Boulder's plan limits housing developments to 415 units a year, half the current rate, and sets a merit system to decide what projects are approved.

Many in the business community say the restrictions go too far. The Chamber of Commerce complains that middle-income housing has nearly disappeared and is expected to seek repeal of the plan.

City Councilman Paul Danish says housing quotas will preserve the environmental and social atmosphere that attract a variety of residents dominated by academics, IBM employes and hippies turned entrepreneurs.

Critics say the development quotas simply serve to insulate Boulder from encroaching urban poverty of Denver 30 miles down the road and to unfairly confine lower-income familiies to that city and its environs.

Danish stresses Boulder's autonomy. He notes that the city has its own economy and — important these days — its own water system. "Most of us simply want to maintain Boulder's identity," he says.

In 1971, Boulder voters turned down a plan to limit population but changed their minds last November when they overrode a 5-4 city council rejection of the quota plan.

By restricting home building, the growth policy generated frenzied real estate activity. Home prices were up 13.5 per cent during the first three months of the year. But worries about runaway inflation waned when increases settled around 4 per cent in the following two months, though the cost of housing in the city is high, as always.

"The motive was not to make Boulder more exclusive," says Nolan Rosall, the planning director, "but certainly that's been the effect."

Boulder has checked expansion indirectly for nearly two decades, keeping a rein on development through utility hookup permits.

Both the Chamber of Commerce and Rosall endorse a compromise "comprehensive growth" plan. Boulder and Boulder County would be wedded to a joint growth management effort that could channel population increases away from the city and unincorporated rural areas to several small towns.

The planning director believes the 58-square-mile Boulder Valley needs stringent planning to maintain the environment and the proper levels of government sevices. But he says that as of today, the valley is far from overcrowded and "we have room to expand if we do it right."

He also believes Boulder may have a future responsibility to provide housing opportunities for low-income families.

Boulder's resolve to limit quantity is matched by its enthusiasm for quality.

Housing development is allocated on merit after builders submit applications detailing features of the homes. The merit system considers factors such as open-space commitments, landscaping, architectural and environmental design, energy conservation and access to public services and facilities.

City officials say Boulder also has the most successful open space program in the nation, with thousands of acres being put aside for recreational uses like hiking, horseback riding and fishing which do not entail developing the property.

Don Walker, Boulder's director of real estate and open space, says booming real estate values in the area bring added tax revenues.

"Property values surrounding the land go up, particularly near the mountains, because people know that they will be living near a park for years to come," he said.

Work requirement seen as major problem in Carter reform plans

EDITORS' NOTE: President Carter's proposed welfare reform program features a mandatory work requirement for "employable" recipients. Here, in the second of a three part series, is a look at the newest, and probably the most troublesome element in the Carter plan.

By JONATHAN WOLMAN

SEATTLE (AP) — Out here, in a day-care center 2,700 miles from the White House, welfare expert Willie Williams sees a wild card in President Carter's complicated welfare package.

A seven-year welfare veteran who took a job as a day-care counselor and worked her way off the dole, Mrs. Williams says, "The jobs program will be a big help. But the pay is so low, people will need welfare anyways. So what's the point?"

The point, say Carter aides, is to hold down costs and to provide an incentive for public workers to seek jobs elsewhere. In hearing that are scheduled to begin this month, administration officials will try to convince Congress that his jobs approach will work.

Subpoverty wages are just one of the of problems that make the jobs plan the most troublesome element of Carter's package of expanded welfare coverage, tax refunds and work.

—Carter wants to move poor people out of the welfare system and into private jobs, but his program offers almost nothing to aid the transition. And in many areas, the private jobs just don't exist.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall says this is the most serious weakness of the jobs plan.

—A huge welfare work force could hold down salaries for regular public employes doing similar work at higher wages. For this reason labor unions vigorously oppose minimum-wage welfare jobs.

—There is a serious danger that some government officials will replace regular employes, paid from local tax receipts, with "bargain basement" public service workers paid from the welfare fund. The process, Marshall's No. 2 worry, is called "substitution."

San Francisco manpower boss Eunice Elton says: "If welfare workers are of any use at all, there will be a tendency to rely on them."

—As Mrs. Williams points out, the minimum wage won't allow the welfare work force to escape poverty without also drawing cash welfare benefits — especially in expensive cost-of-living areas like New York or California. Dependency on welfare will continue.

Typically, a mother or father heading a family of four would receive benefits of $1,444 to supplement the minimum wage of $5,512.

These are the key problem areas that surfaced in discussions with public officials, manpower experts, union leaders and welfare recipients from Seattle to Baltimore, San Francisco to New York.

Carter's "program for Better Jobs and Income" would put 2½-million poor people to work in 1.4-million public service jobs, either full or part time. Federal welfare money would pay the salaries.

But the political opposition and built-in pitfalls threaten chances for success as the program begins its journey through Congress.

In an interview, Secretary Marshall acknowledged the problems and said administration leaders already are working to correct them.

The work requirement would force "employable" recipients to accept a job if one is available.

But where other mandatorywork plans failed, Carter's could succeed because he offers more than ultimatums — he also offers jobs. And there is a wage incentives for people to keep them.

Says George Washington University manpower expert Sar Levitan: "You can't create jobs without spending money. You can't do it without dollar signs and zeroes."

Carter's plan has plenty of those: 8,800,000,000 dollars ($8.8 billion) earmarked to pay for the public service jobs.

The number of current public service jobs would be doubled at only a 49 per cent increase in cost because the current program for 725,000 jobs pays prevailing wages, usually much higher than the minimum.

Carter's plan would require an estimated seven million people who are elibible for welfare to work. Some will find low-paying, nongovernment jobs and will receive income aid from the government. But the economy doesn't absorb everyone who wants to work, and the public service jobs are planned to take up the slack.

Work requirements are attractive to many taxpayers who support the costly welfare system, but experts agree that jobs — not required participation — are what's needed to make the work plan succeed.

Study after study indicates that poor Americans want to work as much as the rest of us. Most recently the 10-year University of Michigan survey — "5,000 American families: A study in Economic Progress" — said poor Americans usually take work whenever they can find it.

It is hoped that the welfare work force will use public service jobs as a stepping stone to private employment. Public jobs lapse after 12 months and jobholders go on reduced welfare benefits for eight weeks in which they are supposed to seek a regular job.

If they come up empty, they are again eligible for a public service job. If one isn't available there is a safety net, a guaranteed income of $4,200 for a family of four.

"The safety net is critical here," says Arnold Packer, an assistant secretary of labor. The income net is especially important in areas of high unemployment where private jobs just don't exist.

Some poor people — "We don't know how many, exactly," says Marshall — will get help from state or local manpower officials in finding private employment.

Public service workers would be required to accept any private sector job that is offered, but the only dollar-and-cents incentive to find private employment is a tax refund of $54 a month. Even Labor Department experts say that might not have much impact.

Carter did not propose tax credits for companies that hire welfare workers. A credit now exists under the Work Incentive Program and Senate Finance Chairman Russell Long probably will want to retain it.

The welfare work force will be working at a wide variety of low-skill jobs such as cleaning up public parks, emptying hospital bedpans and tending daycare centers.

Unions will seek assurances that regular workers, punching the timeclock at prevailing wages of $4 to $8 an hour in some cities, will not be replaced by low-paid members of the welfare work force.

The AFL-CIO says it will use its clout in Congress to defeat the low-pay provision and replace it with a prevailing-wage scale. And Jerry Wurf, president of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes, says: "We stand together on this."

However, Baltimore manpower chief Marian Pines notes, "It would be next to impossible to move people out of public service jobs if we paid the prevailing wage. And it would cost a fortune."

The manpower officials believe one way around the thorny wage and substitution questions is to have welfare workers divide their time between public service jobs and training or job-search programs.

Another troublesome problem is that the Carter plan would phase out the current public service jobs, paying prevailing wages, established under Title VI of the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act.

Mrs. Pines warns, "We've got big trouble if we lose this aid. A lot of cities would be totally screwed up."

In some troubled cities — San Jose, Calif., Hartford, Conn., and Newark, N.J., for example — one of every five city workers is paid with CETA money. New York City will count 28,000 city-CETA workers by the end of this year. These workers are paid the prevailing wages; many do regular jobs and they are eligible to join a union.

Some of the biggest welfare states actually lose money in the switch from Title VI to the welfare jobs program, and Jerry Wurf warns, "If Carter's program doesn't work in the big cities and the big states, it doesn't work at all."

The nine states that lose CETA money in the transition are New York, California, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Conneticut, Oregon, Hawaii, Nevada, Alaska and the District of Columbia.

Marshall is seeking an antirecession public service jobs program that would protect hardship areas independent of the welfare package, but the ultimate decision on that rests with the White House and Congress.

Local manpower officials will implement the jobs program, and they are worried about dozens of technical problems.

Their biggest fear is the spectre of two classes of employes working side by side at differing wages.

Mrs. Pines says: "Our labor staff and personnel people are shivering in fright of this thing."

"It's unbelievably complicated," says Robert McPherson, manpower director in the Seattle area. He predicts nothing but trouble with the city's 39 separate public employe unions.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

New hope seen for hemophiliacs

Dear Dr. Solomon: The people who have moved next door to us have a hemophiliac son. He is a very bright, happy little boy, but I don't know to what extent it is touch-and-go with him. Is there anything that can be done for children with this handicap?—Barbara D.

Dear Barbara: Hemophilia is indeed a heart-rending affliction, but there has been good progress in dealing with it. Until the mid-sixties, not many "bleeders" lived beyond early adulthood because blood transfusions were often not effective in stopping a bleeding episode. The patient might need a pint every six hours. This usually required hospitalization and carried the risk of heart failure.

Then came the development of concentrates of the blood clotting protein that hemophiliacs most often lack—called factor VIII. This can be given in a small injection by the patient himself, the same way a diabetic can give himself a shot of insulin. Hemophiliac children aged nine or 10 are now being taught to do this, sometimes as frequently as every other day.

Another big advance has been the establishment of special hemophiliac clinics in major medical centers—the one at the University of California in San Francisco, for instance. The staff at these clinics is likely to include nurses who give transfusions and teach older children how to do it themselves; a dentist, because even losing a baby tooth can set off bleeding; an orthopedist to check on bleeding in the joints—one of the great dangers of hemophilia. A social worker is probably there, too, and he or she may caution families against being too protective of their child.

Counseling is an important part of the treatment, because hemophiliacs may develop more problems under stress. In normal people, stress increases the clotting factor, but it often seems to have the opposite effect with hemophiliacs. Dr. Marion Koerper, who directs the San Francisco clinic, tells of one child who bled regularly every Sunday night because he dreaded going to school the next morning. But now the children are taught how to live with their special problems. And for teenagers and young adults, there is career advice.

Dear Dr. Solomon: About a year ago, I lost my senses of taste and smell. My internist told me it was because of old age and that nothing could be done about the condition. (I am 81 years of age.) I always read your column in our paper. Some months ago, you mentioned that this condition was caused by a deficiency of zinc. I started taking zinc plus vitamins and now I am O.K. Many thanks!—Mona S. Harding, Salt Lake City.

Dear Mona: Please go back to your doctor and tell him what you did. He'll appreciate your report, and I appreciate your letter.

Don't expect medals for courageous play

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Nobody gives you medals for courage at the bridge table. If you take a finesse over and above the call of duty, you wind up with egg on your face instead of ribbons on your chest.

South took the ace of hearts and tried the club finesse. East won with the king of clubs, cashed a heart and then led the king of diamonds.

South took the ace of diamonds, led a club to the ace and ruffed a club. He continued with the king of spades, a spade to dummy's ten and another club ruff. He could then lead his last trump to dummy's ace and cash the last club.

As luck would have it, South wound up losing diamonds in each hand and had already lost two tricks. Down one.

SURE TO LOSE

Since East needed all of the missing high cards for his vulnerable opening bid, the club finesse was sure to lose.

South should play a low club from both hands at the second trick. East wins, takes a heart and knocks out the ace of diamonds.

Now South leads a club to the ace and ruffs a club, leaving two good clubs in dummy instead of only one. South draws trumps, ending in dummy, and discards two diamonds on the good clubs.

This cautious line of play wins no medals, but it does bring in the game and rubber.

DAILY QUESTION

Dealer, at your left, opens with one heart, and your partner doubles. The next player passes. You hold: S873; H9762; D105; CJ963. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two clubs. The weaker the hand, the more essential the takeout. If partner has a sound takeout double you will not be in trouble at two clubs.

Short courses at college include driving, weddings

Design the ring for your perfectly planned wedding and arrive safely at your honeymoon destination, all courtesy of Midland College.

Short courses in jewelry making, planning a perfect wedding and defensive driving will be offered at the college the week of Sept. 19, according to James Bramlett, director of community services.

How to Plan a Perfect Wedding, taught by Kathleen Owen, is designed to help brides-to-be plan and schedule wedding details. The class continues for three weeks from 7 to 10 p.m. Mondays in room 104 of the Occupational Technical Building. Fee is $12.

Larry Gilbert will teach jewelry making. The class includes how to construct wax models and transform them into finished metal products through the technique of metal casting. The eight-week class will meet from 7 to 9 p.m. Mondays in room 104 of the Occupational-Technical Building. Fee is $18.

Defensive driving will include a total of eight hours of instruction by film and lecture. Midland College is an approved Cooperating Agency to teach the National Safety Council's course. The class will meet from 7 to 10 p.m. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday in room 100 of the Occupational Technical Building. Instructor is Mike Butler. Fee is $10.

House Plants will cover selection, culture and care of house plants. Terraniums and hanging baskets will be included in the discussion. Vannah Kleinbeck will teach the class, which will meet from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesdays for four weeks in room 106 of the Occupational-Technical Building. Fee is $8.

The keyboard, machine parts, typing techniques, tabulating problems and spacing rules will be taught by Thelma Stalcup in Typing Brush-Up. Speed and accuracy drills will be given during each class. The six-week course will meet from 5:30 to 7 p.m. in room 151 of the Occupational-Technical Building. Fee is $20. Class is limited to 20 students.

Conversational Spanish I is for beginners and will offer the basic fundamentals of conversational Spanish. Kaye Horchler will teach the class, which will meet from 7 to 9 p.m. Mondays for eight weeks in room 106 of the Occipational-Technical Building. Fee is $16.

Judy Morrison will teach an oil painting class from 7 to 10 p.m. Mondays for six weeks in the Lancaster House. Dorothy Peterson will teach oil painting from 9 a.m. to noon Tuesdays for six weeks in Lancaster House. Fee for both courses is $18.

Spanish II will be taught by Kaye Horchler. A continuation of Spanish I, this is an intermediate class designed to further conversational practice. The course will last for eight weeks from 7 to 9 p.m. on Tuesdays in room 106 of the Occupational-Technical Building. Fee is $16.

Microwave Cooking I, taught by Linda Cranfill, is a one-day course that will give the student complete information about Microwave ovens. Class will be from 6 to 9 p.m. Tuesday in the Student Center. Fee is $5.

John McCarthy will teach bee keeping from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays for six weeks in room 104 of the Occupational-Technical Building. The course is designed to explore the art and adventures of bee keeping. There will be a visit to the apiary. Fee is $24.

In Needlepoint, Yvonne Garton will teach more than 20 needlepoint stitches. The seven-week class will meet from 7 to 9 p.m. Wednesdays in room 104 of the Occupational Technical Building. Fee is $15.

Richard Galle will teach the basics of climbing, rappelling, pitoncraft, belaying and friction climbing in Climb School. Upon completion of the three-week course, an optional field trip will be offered. The class will meet from 7 to 9 p.m. Mondays and Wednesdays in room 104 of the Occupational-Technical Building. Fee is $12.

Poodle Grooming will be taught by Lou Alice Watlington. Designed for beginners who own poodles, the course will cover step-by-step procedures in combing out, bathing, brushing and clipping. Class will meet from 7 to 9 p.m. Thursdays for six weeks in room 106 of the Occupational-Technical Building. Fee is $12.

Students in Crochet I will receive complete instruction on basic techniques of crochet. Instructor ia Mary Garay. Class will meet from 7 to 9 p.m. Thursdays for six weeks in room 104 of the Occupational-Technical Building. Fee is $12.

A seven-hour course in denim design and sewing will be taught by Diane Patterson. How to Make Jeans will meet from 10 to 11 a.m. Thursday for instruction. The actual sewing class will be from 9 a.m. to noon and 12:30 to 4:30 p.m. Sept. 26 in room 104 of the Occupational-Technical Building. Fee is $10.

Reading for Speed and Comprehension, taught by Mark Ahern, will teach students to use appropriate reading skills for the varied types of reading materials. Emphasis will be on comprehension, speed, vocabulary and study skills. Classes meet from 7 to 9 p.m. Thursdays for eight weeks in room 238 of the Learning Resource Center. Fee is $19. Class is limited to 15 students.

Lower court upheld in murder case

AUSTIN — The Court of Criminal Appeals Wednesday upheld the judgement in a Midland County murder case, dismissed an appeal in a Midland County rape case and affirmed an Ector County heroin conviction.

The court affirmed the five-year sentence without malice of Lorenzo Dunford, convicted in a June 16, 1973, shooting death at LeRoy's Supper Club.

In his sole ground for error, Dunford contended the trial court erred in admitting into evidence a diagram of the interior of the supper club where the shooting occured—saying the diagram was not to scale and was distorted.

The appeals court said the diagram was prepared by Midland Police Officer Ronnie Bryant, who arrived at the club after the shooting and took measurements of the body and its position in the room.

Bryant testified that the diagram "substantially and truly" represented the interior of the club—and the court said the sketch was not offered as "an exact scale replica" and there was "no showing that the sketch was so inaccurate as to be harmful."

The court dismissed the appeal of Gary Wayne Childs Middleton, convicted for rape and sentenced to eight years in prison.

The court said the record did not show notice of appeal was given within the time required by law, and so the appeal must be dismissed.

Moreover, the court said, Middleton's court-appointed attorney had filed a brief concluding the appeal "is wholly frivolous and without merit."

Also affirmed was the 99-year sentence assessed Elias Salvador Hernandez by an Ector County court for delivery of heroin.

Earlier, the court had dismissed the appeal as "untimely," but reinstated the appeal—and denied Hernandez' contentions that the trial court erred in admitting evidence of "extraneous offenses" committed by him.

The appeals court said Hernandez had "put his identity in issue by asserting the defense of alibi"—allowing the State to "prove identity and to rebut the defensive theory of alibi."

Wesley code key found

By BADEN HICKMAN
Manchester Guardian

LONDON — The key to the secret code used by John Wesley, the founder of Methodism, to write his most private diaries has been found in an old, wrongly labelled, book by an American on his first visit to the Methodist archives here.

The discovery is expected to reveal hitherto facts about the life and thoughts of the religious leader unknown for 250 years.

The 10 diaries of John Wesley, small, leather-bound volumes, are all written in a code of Wesley's own devising, made up of three different systems of shorthand, letters, symbols, dots and dashes. None has ever been fully deciphered. No one has ever been able to trace the key.

That was until Dr. Richard P. Heitzenrater, a young American scholar, walked between the shelves of the denomination's official archives, then in City Road, London. Dr. Heitzenrater told me on the telephone from his home in Dallas, Texas, "It was one of the most exciting moments of my life. I was in the process of taking everything off the shelves and looking at it to familiarize myself with exactly what was in the archives.

"It was my first visit. One item I was looking for was supposed to be a James Hervey diary, according to an old catalogue list I was working from.

"When I took the item off the shelf and opened it I was amazed immediately because it was abvious to me it was a diary written in the exact same style as John Wesley's diary.

Lions hear about football

High school football was the program topic Wednesday noon at the meeting of the Downtown Lions Club in the Midland Hilton.

Jim Acree, head coach at Robert E. Lee High School, and Jerry Hopkins, head coach at Midland High School, were the speakers.

Acree, in leading off, said his defensive team is doing a great job and that the offensive unit is coming along and "will arrive before the season is very far along."

He listed his starting lineups, both offensively and defensively, and cited the capabilities and potentials of each player.

He said that Odessa Permian and San Angelo appear to be the teams to beat this year in district.

Hopkins said the showing made by his team in the two games to date has been disappointing, but that he is still optimistic concerning the team's future.

"We feel like we have a better team than has been shown thus far," he said. "We move the ball well, but we just don't get any touchdowns — and this is frustrating. We need to play up to our potential as a team."

He commented on a number of his players, along with their attitudes and potentials.

Odessa Intercontinental?

A few words first about this new column. It's strictly mad. Caricature is the aim, exaggeration the game. What I have done is taken a sentence or two from an article in another newspaper and written a burlesque based on those lines. The idea is to tickle your funny bone. If you laugh, the column is a success; if you don't, it isn't. Without further ado, then, let us proceed...

Although the University of Texas of the Permian Basin is unique in that it is one of the few state-supported upper-level colleges in the state, UTPB is still a struggling institution. It caters to junior, senior and graduate students but its enrollment is not growing as administrators and state officials predicted it would in the university's planning stages. — Odessa American

"Oh, come on, Blanche," Henry Higmoth said in exasperation. "I'm going to miss my plane. You don't have to be the best dressed woman in Midland to take me to the airport, for crying out loud." Blanche, who at the moment was torn between her Givenchy gown and her de la Renta frock, would not be rushed. She and her husband were Basin newcomers, but Blanche knew a thing or two, all right. She knew, for instance, Midland women enjoy a reputation for being well-dressed; thus, even for a trip to the airport, she was going to look good. Whether Henry made the plane was incontestably secondary.

Henry, heaven knows, had reason enough to be irked, without his wife's dillydallying. His company had promised him Midland was the end of his itinerancy, had solemnly said to him "you've packed your last Samsonite" (the magic phrase every employee at Butterball Freight longed to hear). Now, barely a month after moving, he was being recalled to headquarters for "a conference." It boded ill.

"Come on, Blanche," Henry shouted. "The airport isn't even in Midland, you know. We've got to drive 16 miles to Odessa."

"Midland women will be there," Blanche said. She said no more.

It occurred to Henry, on reaching the Odessa city limits, he wasn't perfectly sure where the airport was. Somewhere on the eastern edge of the city was all he knew.

"Look for the airport, would you Blanche?" he said petulantly. "I'm never going to make that plane."

"There it is over there," she said, pointing at an imposing, sweptwing structure that rather resembled a parenthesis.

"Good girl," said Henry. He steered for the building, but they were a while reaching it, as there were no directions.

"You'd think they'd have a sign," said Blanche.

"All I saw was something about Mesa Campus and South Campus," Henry said.

"Well, it IS an impressive airport," said Blanche. "I'm certainly glad I dressed up."

Henry parked and noticed there was no parking meter.

"Parking's free," he said quietly, reverently. "Parking's free." It seemed worth repeating.

There was no time to lose. Henry ruefully grabbed his Samsonite and the pair headed quickly for the building.

"Suppose it's up that way?" Blanche said, indicating a broad ramp extending to an upper level.

"Don't know," said Henry. "Can't understand why they don't have signs." This not being the time for indecision, they stormed up the ramp, Blanche tripping on her long skirt at every step. Just as they reached the top a girl in a T-shirt and cutoffs shot past them from behind on a bike.

"What are stairs for?" they heard her say.

"Blasted kid," said Henry.

"College student," said Blanche, disapprovingly.

Neither Higmoth was prepared for the sight which now unfolded before him. Young people. Lots of young people. Lots of young people in shorts and jeans and T-shirts and no shirts. Whites. Blacks. Orientals. Long hair. Short hair. Afros. Bicyclists zigzagging everywhere. And not a soul a day over 20.

"What the heck?" said Henry, looking at Blanche.

"Are you sure," said Blanche, looking at Henry, "this is the airport?"

"Don't be ridiculous," said Henry.

They proceeded to the nearest door, reaching it just as a tall young man wearing an inscribed T-shirt emerged.

"Which way to Continental Airlines?" Henry asked, the hint of a tremor in his voice.

"What?" said the youth.

"Where's the Continental ticket counter?"

"I don't know," said the youth, shaking his head. "I don't know."

"Come on, Henry," said Blanche, wondering what 'Squeeze a fruit for Anita' meant. "We'll ask somebody else." They went inside and accosted a young woman dressed remarkably like the one who had passed them on the bicycle.

"Where's Continental Airlines?" Henry asked her, maybe a little desperately.

"At the airport, I imagine," the young woman smartly replied.

"Isn't this the airport?" Henry ventured.

"This," said the girl, "is the University of Texas."

Henry uttered not a sound, only stood there, taking it all in, the girl, the other young people, the books, the school bell, his wife's shrieks. Blanche shrieked when she laughed. It was the girl who spoke.

"Come to think of it," she said thoughtfully, "maybe this is the airport. It's not a university, that's for sure." Leaving Henry and Blanche, who was still shrieking, the girl started down the corridor, her mind racing. She passed one classroom after another. Professors shouting, as usual. Shouting to make themselves heard above the din in the hall, shouting because the classrooms, including even the seminar rooms, lacked doors. It was a crazy thing, this absence of doors; she had never been able to understand it—until now.

"These aren't classrooms, they're waiting rooms!" she exclaimed. "That lectern is the check-in counter." She walked past a men's room, tilting her head to read MEN-MENMENMEN, which was written sideways on the door. Just like at DFW! she remembered. Everything written perpendicular. Then, as the full import of her discovery sank in, she whispered: "My God, this is an airport."

"Hey, excuse me," a student sporting shades and an Afro said, interrupting her reverie. "Could you tell me where 'Urban Planning 101' meets? I think I'm lost."

"Urban Planning?" said the girl, laughing. "Why, that's on the Red Concourse, Gate 22." She took her fellow student by the arm. "Come on, we'll find your class together," she said. "There's something I think your prof ought to know."

Parton has own style

By NANCY ANDERSON
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Dolly Parton's sister, Stella, who also sings, says she tried singing for awhile as Stella Carroll to avoid confusion with her more-famous sibling.

"But," she says, "I decided that was more of a hassle than being who I was after I was introduced at one place as Stella Stevens."

So now the second Parton to sing professionally is vocalizing under her own name and has an Electra-Asylum album in the racks called "Stella Parton: Country Sweet."

Even though they have the same name, it's not hard to tell Stella and Dolly apart, because their styles, vocal and physical, are different.

Physically especially.

While Dolly wears lots of hair, Stella wears lots of hats and, like the late Hedda Hopper and Cousin Minnie Pearl, is making hat-wearing her hallmark.

"I started wearing hats, because a hat is handy to dress up a plain, inexpensive outfit," Stella reveals.

Some of hers are custom made by Orcelia's Originals of Nashville, but some come right off the shelf at Betty Boop's, a Nashville shop specializing in secondhand clothes offered as "antique."

"Having the same name as a star can be a handicap," says Stella, repeating a sentiment expressed at one time or another by various Crosbys and Barrymores.

"I hear people say, sort of surprised, 'She don't look like Dolly.'

"We each have our own look.

"I wear makeup, but I don't try to look glamorous."

Stella is a first-rate cook who can turn out Italian dishes but who specializes in traditional Southern dishes.

Fried poke salad, for instance.

Fried poke salad?

"Well," Stella says, "you know what poke salad is, don't you? Just peel the stems, cut them up, roll the pieces in flour and meal, and fry them.

"Poke tastes like fried okra, only better."

Basically a religious girl of Pentecostal background, Stella says she originally intended to be a missionary to Africa, "but I got married before I finished high school."

"I have a gospel group, though. I've had one for years.

"However, I'm disappointed by a lot of things in the gospel music field.

"I see groups go on stage and shout and act like they got real religion.

"Then they'll go back to their dressing rooms and drink a fifth of whisky."

Neither Jason nor his mommie was there, but they sent flowers which were also from mommie's fellow, Jon Peters.

As everyone pretty well knows, Barbi Benton became famous as Hugh Hefner's protegee.

But not nearly so many know that Barbi attended the University of Barcelona before she finished a California high school. There she became so versed in Spanish language and history that, when she returned home, she was popped into college Spanish classes while still a high school student.

Later, Barbi enrolled at UCLA to study veterinary medicine.

So, even though she's been featured on the Playboy cover three times, Benton is no dummy.

She graduated from Playboy to "Hee Haw" and to nighclub engagements and recording dates, and now she's starring in "Sugar Time," a new ABC-TV series.

Her much-publicized relationship with Hefner doesn't keep people from taking her acting talent seriously, Barbi maintains.

And it didn't even upset her parents.

"They like Mr. Hefner very much," she declares.

But didn't they object to his image as it might affect their daughter?

"Oh, no," says Barbi. "They judge the man himself, not his public image."

Barbi's hobby, by the way, is working needlepoint.

Vienna likes singer

By WERNER VOLLMANN

VIENNA (AP) — An American singer who grew up in Pennsylvania, yodeling country and Western songs, now entertains Viennese in Gioacchino Rossini's seldom-heard classical comic opera, "La Gazzetta."

Carlo Thomas, 33, from New York City, was raised in Montrose, Pa. After graduating from East Stroudsburg High School he did a stint on Broadway, moved to the West Coast and got a few small parts with the San Francisco Opera and larger ones with its touring branch, the Western Opera Theater Co.

At the U.S. Spoleto Festival at Charleston he played Narumov in "Pique Dame" before landing as Don Pomponio on the stage of the Schoenbrunner Schlosstheater here. It is his first big role in Europe.

He and three other Americans are mainstays of the Wiener Kammeroper's (Viennese chamber opera) production of "La Gazzetta" in the Schoenbrunner Schlosstheater, close to the former summer residence of the Hapsburgs, the Schoenbrunn palace.

The other American singers, Marilyn Brustadt and Mary Burgett, were described by critics as experienced coloratura singers, and James Tyeska received favorable mention.

Thomas was hailed as having "a magnificent voice" and a "wonderful stage presence."

Don't call Lana 'singer's singer'

By BILL HAGEN
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — "He was a great showman," Lana Cantrell said. "I never thought he was a great singer, but he was a great entertainer."

Cantrell, considered by many to be, indeed, a great singer, was discussing Elvis Presley. She considered what she had just said and leaned back in the chaise.

"I can see it now," she said. "Lana says Elvis wasn't a great singer." But I also said he was a great entertainer. Don't forget that. He was a great entertainer.

"And, yes, he did change music. I don't know whether it was a change for the better, but he did change it. He had great impact."

The death of Presley had disturbed her. And puzzled her. But sentiment would not change her opinion of Presley the artist.

Cantrell does not bestow the accolade of "great" on many singers. Several are "good." Only Barbra Streisand qualified for "great" on this day.

Her second-highest compliment is the "great entertainer" or "great showman" she attached to Presley.

"The question about Elvis I can't answer is 'why?'" she said. What drove him? He no longer had to work as hard as he did. He could have retired to his mansion whenever he chose to. He could have worked only when he wanted to.

"I wouldn't drive myself like that. I couldn't. My voice would never survive.

"It's easy to forget that vocal cords are just two little babies back there, and they shouldn't be abused. Tom Jones. I'm surprised he can still talk, let alone sing. He punishes himself."

Cantrell, Australian-born and New York-rooted, has been described as possessor of a voice with "the capacity to bounce, to cry, to caress. She can rock, and she can soul. She is truly the triumphant meeting of a singer with the song.

She has also been called "a singer's singer," which she abhors.

"A singer's singer," she said, leaning forward to talk lest the emphasis be lost. "It sounds wonderful, but what does it mean. Are you a writer's writer? Is he a photographer's photographer? Does it mean that only fellow professionals can appreciate you?

"You mentioned Mel Torme. A singer's singer. Other singers can appreciate that he's dropping from a D to A, which is swell. But singers are not paying his salary. If the public doesn't appreciate you, you're out of business."

She returned to the subject of current singers, offering capsule comments on a few, some of them somewhat surprising.

"Jack Jones," she said. "I guess technically he's a good singer. But great singers interpret songs, not just sing them. Sinatra was a great singer, but I don't think he's been singing so hot lately. Steve Lawrence is a very good singer.

"Liza Minnelli is not one of the great singers of the world. But she doesn't have to be. She dances a little, she sings and she acts. Like Elvis, she's a great entertainer."

Film continues flirtation

By GREGG KILDAY
The Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — The flirtation between Hollywood and rock 'n' roll continues: Paramount Pictures has set an Oct. 18 start date for "American Hot Wax," its week in the life of '50s disc jockey Alan Freed.

Floyd Mutrux, who wove a fair amount of '70s pop into his teen-age romance, "Aloha, Bobby and Rose," has been signed to direct the feature, for which John Kaye has written an original screenplay. Art Linson, one of the producers of the rhythm-and-blues-scored "Car Wash," will produce the film. And William A. Fraker, who also worked on "Aloha," will serve as cinematographer.

Not actor has yet been set to play Freed, who is credited with inventing the phrase, rock 'n' roll. Freed was the reigning voice of rock in New York in the late '50s where he held forth over radio while also producing live rock 'n' roll spectaculars at the Paramount Theater. His career was cut short by government investigations into the nascent rock industry in 1959.

"When you look back at it, the music was all very innocent and romantic then," said Linson. "Still, it managed to offend the entire establishment."

"American Hot Wax" will focus on a week when Freed was in his glory.

To approximate the rock 'n' roll of the era, Linson plans to feature some of the surviving acts of that day — most notably the long-rocking Chuck Berry.

In addition, the screenplay also calls for such invented rock acts as Teen-age Louise, the Chesterfields, Michael (Mookie) Aletta and Cheryl Berkowitz.

"We went back to New York and assembled a vocal group called the Chesterfields, a street-corner New York group like Little Anthony and the Imperials," Linson explained. "If the film is at all successful, the group could go out on the road and have a career of its own."

"If you marry me, I'll give more than you ever dreamed of."

"I don't know, Harry. The manager of Pizza Inn proposed to me last night."

"But can he give you more than pizza"

"Oh, yes. He can give me a variety of delicious hot sandwiches."

"I'll give you the stars."

"But he'll give me terrific spaghetti dinners. And a great salad bar, too."

"That's more than I can give you."

"Yes, Harry. I guess we were just two ships passing in the night."

"Darn."

Betty White 'holding thought' of success

By TOM SHALES
The Washngton Post

Betty White: "John, the CBS brass just called."

John Hillerman: "Good, they've learned how to dial."

This could be real life, but was just a rehearsal for an episode of "The Betty White Show," a new CBS sitcom from the MTM factory that premiered Monday night.

White, who won an Emmy and spent four years playing the over-sexed Sue Ann on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," now plays a TV actress whose new series, "Undercover Woman," is being directed by her ex-husband, played by John Hillerman.

And so on the "Betty White" set — in MTM studios over the hill from Hollywood — there are two sets of imprinted cast and director's chairs, one for "Undercover Woman," to be used on the air, and one for "The Betty White Show," where the real conferences and rhubarbs take place.

Except that people around the "White" show say there are no rhubarbs because everybody just loves Betty White. "If you can't get along with Betty White," says Hillerman in his smooth Givenchy voice, "then you really are in trouble."

The series is expected to be a winner. When you tell White that she exclaims, "Oh, say it again! Hold the thought! Oh, God!"

Hillerman asks, "Is there any wood left in the world" so that he can knock on it. What the program has going for it is the MTM touch, which includes high-caliber comedy writing, and its two co-stars, whose cat-and-mouse tiffs can be extremely funny.

"MTM came to me and said they wanted to do a show with me," White recalls, sitting in a small dressing room between takes. "We all agreed it should not be the Sue Ann character again; she's a good hit-and-runner, not a sustainer. So they had several ideas. The first was that that I be a nun in a girls' school — Sister Scholastica, who's always in trouble with the church. I said, 'I don't think so.'

"Eventually we settled on an actress doing a TV series. I thought it would be fun if the show within the show were a space-family thing, like a 'Star Trek' or something, because I'm a space buff. They said okay, and I went home thinking that was that. Two weeks later they called me and said they were ready to take the scripts over to CBS. And they said, 'Oh, we changed one little thing: You're a policewoman.'' She laughs and gives her listener a little poke in the arm.

White's Sue Ann was an especially satisfying triumph because she seemed to be lampooning the happy-homemaker image she'd cultivated in years of TV comedies, talk shows and commercials.

"Oh, I loved doing Sue Ann. They said, 'We need a Betty White type' when they wrote it. I thought it was great, because there's more Sue Ann in Betty than there is whatever that image is of Betty, and it was great fun to be able to pull out all the stops and not have to worry about it. The new character I play has overtones of Sue Ann, but not quite as much promiscuity. There's bitchiness, but with the new character, she doesn't strike first. She waits until somebody else strikes, and then she lets 'em have it."

The old Betty White image was fostered by such TV sitcoms of the '50s as "Life With Elizabeth" (1953-55) and "A Date With the Angels" (1957-58).

White was as wholesome as Wonder Bread. Plot lines involved such raw realism as "Elizabeth's biscuits not turning out — that sort of thing." And although "Angels" was about two honeymooning newlyweds, "We never got into any sex jokes at all."

There were no bedroom scenes in the '50s. There were barely any bedrooms.

In the new program, the two ex-spouses spar regularly on the theme of who is more sexually inadequate than whom. In the opener White tells Hillerman. "The most romantic thing you ever said was 'Am I too heavy?' And that was when I was carrying you over the threshhold."

White says, "We didn't worry about relevance in the early days. We were trying to be funny. We were more two-dimensional cartoon characters than three-dimensional real people."

Hillerman is doing his first weekly TV role after 17 feature films, frequent appearances on the occasional "Ellery Queen" series on NBC and seven generally glorious years at the late Washington (D.C.) Theater Club, where he played almost every part known to man. This doesn't mean he is a snob who looks down on television.

"It's so powerful, you can't look down on it," he says. "If you want to be a star, it's not possible to put it down. I don't miss the stage at all. All that work, and no money! You can't make any money in the theater and that's one of the reasons I got out. When I left Washington I was 35 years old, I was a 'star' at the Theater Club, and I had $750 in the bank. A star's salary on Broadway is a third of what I make in television. I didn't want to wind up as a broken-down broke actor."

'Special madness' surrounds Tut

By ED MEAGHER
The Los Angeles Times

The United States has gone on a King Tut binge.

Museum officials long have been aware of American fascination with ancient Egypt and, most of all, with King Tutankhamen, dead now more than 3,300 years but a compelling, romantic figure and an archeological superstar since his tomb was discovered 55 years ago.

Nevertheless, after the treasures of Tutankhamen exhibit began its three-year, seven-city American tour last Nov. 17 at the National Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C., it quickly became obvious that museum people had underestimated the drawing power of King Tut.

The response to the exhibit was "a human tidal wave," a museum security guard said. The King Tut boom was under way.

During one of the coldest Washington winters on record, thousands of persons — seven days a week for four months — huddled in queues around the National Gallery waiting their turn.

"There was a special madness," said Earl Powell III, the gallery's coordinator for the exhibit. "You plan, plan and then plan some more and then the security guards go into shock and maintenance men have nervous breakdowns."

"The lines were longest on the coldest days when it took real endurance to survive," gallery administrator Joseph G. English said recently in his office, still somewhat bemused. "The challenge of the weather as much as the exhibit seemed to attract crowds."

In the final weeks, crowds began turning up around midnight for the 10 a.m. opening.

When the exhibit moved to Chicago's Field Museum in April for a four-month stand, the crowds were even larger than in Washington, even camping all night on the museum grounds.

The exhibit moved next to New Orleans where it will open a four-month run today. In a matter of months, it again hits the road for similar stays in Los Angeles, Seattle, New York and San Francisco.

E. Leland Webber, director of the Field Museum, in an interview during the hectic last week of the Tut exhibit in Chicago, said "Egyptology has always been the most intriguing segment of all archeology for the layman.

"Then there is the inherent attraction of mummies. In any museum, they are always the most popular exhibit," he said.

And finally, there are the objects themselves. Their timeless artistry and beauty...and their intrinsic glory.

It also may be, others believe, that the timing is right for Tutankhamania, a positive, splendid antidote from antiquity to the unpleasant reality and uncertainty of contemporary times.

Bradford D. Kelleher, publisher at the Metropolitan Museum, said:

"It's just a magnificent show. Extraordinary objects, an intriguing story of buried treasures, a romantic tale of death and the whole mystery of the antique past.

"If a nation has to have a mania, better King Tut than a lot of others I can think of. Besides, it helps the museums."

It certainly does. Most museums depend on the sale of memberships for much of their operating revenues. In exchange, membership purchasers are given special privileges, most notably priority admission to special shows.

Memberships in the Field Museum doubled to more than 60,000 (at $15 each) during the Tut exhibit, according to Harvey W. Matthew, coordinator.

Matthew said thousands more could have been sold if potential buyers hadn't been purposefully discouraged by first prohibiting members from bringing friends and finally suspending admission priorities for new members.

"If we hadn't cut back, Matthew said, "membership buyers might have pretty much taken over and squeezed out the general public. And that would be counter to the museum's purpose."

The New Orleans Museum stopped selling memberships Aug. 1 when the total number rose from 3,000 to 12,000 in six months.

Similarly, in Seattle the museum halted membership sales July 15 with the total at 15,000, five times more than in January.

The Los Angeles County Museum of Art, already experiencing a surge in membership inquiries, is still accepting new family memberships at $30.

But it has warned that members' benefits may be restricted during the Tut exhibit and a spokesman has declared the museum "is not going to be overwhelmed with members blocking out the general public."

Ever since a smaller exhibit of King Tut's treasures toured 15 American cities, including Los Angeles, in 1961-63 under United Nations sponsorship, museum officials have eagerly awaited a return exhibit.

That earlier show, which helped finance an international program to save many Egyptian temples and statues from innundation after construction of the Aswan Dam, pulled in huge crowds — not an everyday sight at museums.

Since then, exhibits have been held in Japan (1965), France (1967), England (1972) and the Soviet Union (1974), with profits from admissions fees going to Egypt's archeology program.

But the same arrangement could not be made easily with the Egyptians for the present exhibition because some of the museums, notably the National Gallery, have a free or fixed admission policy.

Peter Solmssen, the State Department's arts adviser who took part in the discussions, said this problem was surmounted by agreeing to give Egypt profits from the sale of printed materials and reproductions of exhibit pieces.

The money has been earmarked to renovate the Cairo Museum with the Metropolitan Museum in New York, the coordinating museum for the Tut tour of the United States, acting as consultant.

Tut show viewers have their pick of more than 100 reproductions of jewelry and statuary at prices ranging from $1.50 for a hieroglyph mobile to $1,500 for a golden facsimile statue of the goddess Selket.

Sales so far in Washington and Chicago have been well over $5 million, according to the Metropolitan's Kelleher.

Each of the exhibit's approximately 2 million viewers in the two cities, he said, has spent an average of almost $2.50 in the King Tut shops, an amount that stuns museum officials.

Pryor's show departs from 'family' material

By JAY SHARBUTT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The "family viewing hour," killed as a TV code standard by the courts, still generally is followed by the networks. But NBC may be ending the family hour era, at least on Tuesdays.

Trying anything to beat ABC's "Happy Days" and "Laverne and Shirley," it began its evening on Tuesday — when millions of kids may still be watching — with the new "Richard Pryor" show.

The program generally displayed brilliant work. But unless it was radically cut — I saw it at a Monday screening — it was fit only for adults, for airing later when younger viewers were abed.

It definitely wasn't for "rug rats," even though NBC, in a step that mightily displeased Pryor, axed a brief opening skit that showed him both in the flesh and a flesh-colored loin cover.

Its first moments spoofed the classic bar scene of "Star Wars," with Pryor playing the barkeep in a saloon full of grotesque guzzlers. While awfully funny, the skit contained some language you may never hear in, say, "Grizzly Adams."

Example: As Pryor passed one troll, he off-handedly remarked: "You look just like a digger from Detroit I know."

The next bit, a take-off on a Clint Eastwood Western, showed Pryor as a gunslinger. He got mad when a bully, ostensibly asking about Pryor's donkey, asked, "Hey, how's your ass?"

(A later Western spoof, of marksmanship, had a guy shooting himself in the side, the other side "exploding" as a result. Woe betide NBC if any kids are inspired to emulate this with real artillery.)

The shooting scene was one of the show's two notable duds. The other, done without Pryor, had a transvestite construction worker in a polka-dot bikini and blonde wig, singing, "I've Gotta Be Me."

On adult terms, the hour, with few exceptions, held firstrate, wildly original humor, be the skit "Star Wars," a black president's press conference or a swampman's faith-healing exercises.

And the finale, a mini-drama about two back-from-the-war GIs in a Harlem night club, was so brilliant it should be rerun annually to show what the tube can offer when the spirit moves it.

It's sad the ratings spirit moved NBC last summer to shift Pryor from adult time on Thursdays to family hour on Tuesdays. It may cause far more protest than ABC's softer "Soap" is getting in the adult hour.

•

A belated raspberry to NBC's Emmy awards show, which last Sunday achieved a dubious first by giving an Emmy for coverage of the previous year's Emmy awards show. That is back-patting in extremeis.

Sunday's 3½-hour epic in bloat was distinguished only by "Mary Tyler Moore" and "Tonight" clips, and by winners of five top acting awards: Gary Burghoff, Ed Flanders, Sally Field, Carroll O'Connor and James Garner. None of them bothered to show up for the show.

Texas Oil & Gas officials feted

William L. Hutchison, president of Texas Oil & Gas Corp. of Dallas, and other officials of the company were guests of the Midland Wildcat Committee at a reception in the Petroleum Club of Midland.

Honored along with Hutchison were J. Ralph Ellis Jr., executive vice president; T. E. Lohman, senior vice president; John Morgan, senior vice president; Bob Young, general counsel and secretary; H. P. Schrauff, vice president-Finance, all of Dallas; M. A. Odegard, vice president, Denver; Lou Little, vice president, Corpus Christi, and Charles L. Canfield, vice president, Midland.

TO&G has more than 1,000 employes on its payroll, with 60 of them based in the West Texas District office in Midland.

In addition to land, exploration and production offices in Midland, the company maintains a gas gathering staff here.

Hutchison said his company spent $11,000,000 in the Permian Basin during the fiscal year ended Aug. 31. "We are increasing our exploration in this area and expect to spend approximately $15,000,000 this year," he said.

Hutchison said that when Canfield moved to Midland about 18 months ago as manager of the West Texas district there were 40 persons employed here.

Texas O&G has maintained offices in Midland since 1968.

Hutchison said his company's outlook is good in spite of the Carter energy package now being thrashed out in in the Senate.

He said the whole thing, especially the intervention by government in the energy field, is displeasing to the oil industry.

"The thing that is literally a shame is in the area of intrastate delivery of gas supplies. Texas operators, along with those in the other gas-producing states, have developed these supplies at their own expense and now the government is cutting back the price for which those supplies can be sold," Hutchison said.

"And," he added, "our supplies can be taken away from us and shipped to other areas whenever the President decides there is an emergency.

Another thing that Hutchison hit on was the situation faced by the utilities industry in the Carter energy program. "Pretty soon, the government will be telling us when to get up and when to go to bed."

Hutchison said TO&G isn't into the alternate energy field "big" right now. "We organized a minerals division about 18 months ago, but so far, its primary function has been to keep tract of what is going on in that field. We have been looking at coal and uranium interests.

"The oil and gas business is good," Hutchison said. "We have about 220 million cubic feet of gas per day production now, and we intend to increase our efforts in this area, along with an increased search for oil. We expect our Midland office to continue expanding," the company president said.

AO&GS film producer has special

"The Making of Star Wars," a 7 p. m. Friday special on ABC television, was produced by Guenette-Asselin Productions, the same company that is co-producing "The American Oil and Gas Story."

"The Making of Star Wars" was produced for 20th Century Fox for television distribution, with Bob Guenette in charge of production.

Guenette and Paul Asselin will be in Midland later this month to discuss material collected during the last several weeks that will be used in the oil and gas story production, the Midland headquarters office of the project announced.

"The American Oil and Gas Story" also is being produced for television distribution and tells the true story of the independent oil and gas operator. It is being sponsored and financed by the American Oil and Gas Story Committee headquartered in Midland.

Professors predict dire outlook for petroleum

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The United States "will face mortal risk to our economic prosperity" even if all of President Carter's stringent energy measures are enacted, predict three University of Texas professors.

"Every objective assessment," of President Carter's National Energy Policy (NEP) and the House proposal patterned on the policy indicate they "will fail to meet the 1985 energy consumption, production and balance of payments targets required in the national interest," the professors said Wednesday.

The report — by Walt Rostow, William Fisher and Herbert Woodson — says that an all-out effort to produce energy must be launched in 1977 to avoid a crisis.

Rostow, Fisher and Woodson said the United States might be importing as much as 15 million barrels of oil a day by 1985, and added:

"Three independent estimates make it clear that a U.S. requirement of this magnitude will create a major international economic crisis."

The report also concludes that the U.S. has enough oil and gas to return production to the 1976 level — the NEP target, but up to 50 per cent more must be spent on exploration and development than set forth in the House proposal.

Therefore, they said, there exists a reasonably adequate reserve and resource base of oil and gas sufficient to support current rates of production for more than 50 years.

"It has been argued," the report added, "that the price structure proposed in the NEP and in HR-8444 is adequate for oil and gas operators to realize a sufficient profit.

"This may well be the case. But what is at stake for the nation is not the adequacy of current profits by business standards — it is rather the rate of drilling and production.

"Even if proposed pricing structures provided for sufficient profit, is the price structure adequate to generate the level of cash flow necessary to mount and sustain the drilling effort required to meet the planned 1985 oil and gas production goals? We conclude ...that it is not, and that 1985 national oil and gas production will be as much as five million barrels a day below the NEP goal.'

They said $699 billion (in 1976 prices) must be invested to fulfill production and conservation targets of NEP.

The report said the "earliest possible deregulation of new natural gas is essential" with a new gas price of $2.25 to $2.50 per thousand cubic feet necessary by 1985.

Chairman Mack Wallace of the Texas Railroad Commission sat in on a news conference on the professors' report and hailed it as a "momentous occasion."

"It completely dispels the idea that we don't have the minerals to produce," Wallace said.

Field opener potentials; wildcat operations set

A discovery has been completed in Sutton County, while Fisher and Tom Green drew sites for wildcats and a strike offset was staked in Crockett.

Longhorn Exploration of San Angelo completed No.1 J. W. McDermott, a Canyon oil discovery ¾ mile southwest of Canyon gas production in the Roberts field of Sutton.

It had a 24-hour pumping potential of 153 barrels of 31-gravity oil and 13 barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio measuring 2,000-1.

Completion was effected through perforations at 3,754-3,784 feet, following 1,000 gallons of mud acid and 4,500 gallons of regular acid. Drilled to 3,835 feet, it has 4½-inch casing set at that depth, and it is plugged back to 3,828 feet. Top of pay was picked at 3,751 feet, under ground elevation of 2,332 feet.

It is 660 feet from north and 1,950 feet from west lines of section 56, block 9, TW&NG survey, 15 miles northeast of Sonora.

Caraway Operating Co., San Angelo, No. 1 Marylou Hall, has been staked as a 5,350-foot wildcat in Tom Green County, 13 miles southeast of San Angelo.

Drillsite is 953 feet from north and 1,320 feet from east lines of section 15, block 25, H&TC survey.

It is also ½ mile southwest of the Christoval (5100 Strawn) oil field.

An Abilene operator, Elliott Oil Co., has filed application with the Texas Railroad Commission to drill No. 1 Jesse Turner, et al, as a 6,000-foot wildcat in Fisher County.

Located 1¾ mile east of the Eskota, West (Ellenburger) field, it spots 3,558 feet from south and 467 feet from east lines of William Lytle survey 227, two miles east of Eskota.

The No' 1 L. L. Stuart, a 4,200-foot venture, has been staked by Marshall R. Young Oil Co., of Fort Worth.

The Fisher County project is 550 feet from north and 6,428 feet from west lines of Thomas H. Cosby survey 315, one mile north of Roby and ¾ mile southwest of the depleted Roby-Goolsby (Cisco) field discovery.

Crockett County's stepout location is C. F. Lawrence & Associates, Inc. No. 2 Pond, has been scheduled to 2,300 feet, and is one location northeast of the discovery, which was completed in October 1976.

The project is 1,980 feet from north and east lines of section 3, block GG, H&OB survey, 16 miles east of Iraan.

Pair of discoveries head oil, gas activity in New Mexico counties

Two discoveries have been completed in Eddy County, N.M., while a confirmer finaled in one field, and an extender in another. Also, a stepout is planned in another. A confirmation well finaled in one Chaves pool and two stepouts were planned for another. Roosevelt gained a confirmation, and a Lea project recovered shows on a test.

The Little Box Canyon Field of Eddy gained its third pay, the Cisco, with completion of Yates Petroleum Corp., Artesia, No. 3 Box Canyon.

The well flowed on preliminary completion test at the daily rate of 3.6 million cubic feet of gas per day, natural, through perforations at 6,008-6,034 feet, on a ½-inch choke. Gravity and gas-oil ratio were unreported.

Top of the Cisco was picked at 5,478 feet. Drilled to 8,450 feet, and plugged back to 7,954 feet, 4½-inch casing was cemented to bottom.

Location is 1,980 feet from south and east lines of section 14-21s-21e, 35 miles northwest of Carlsbad.

The field also produces gas from the Atoka and Morrow zones.

Orla Petco, Inc., Midland, has completed No. 1 Pardue as a Delaware oil discovery in Eddy, 3½ miles northwest of Loving.

It had a 24-hour pumping potential of 38 barrels of 41-gravity oil and 50 barrels of water. It finaled through perforations at 2,466-2,474 feet. Treatment was not reported.

Drilled to 4,099 feet, it has 4½-inch casing set at 3,445 feet, and is plugged back to 2,600 feet.

Wellsite is 660 feet from north and 1,900 feet from east lines of section 6-23s-28e.

Yates Petroleum Corp. has finaled a second well and one-mile northeast extension in a newly opened Wolfcamp sector of Eddy, nine miles northwest of Artesia.

No. 1-HW Robinson-Federal finaled for a daily flowing potential of 305,000 cubic feet of gas daily, through perforations at 4,763-4,855 feet, on a ¼-inch choke. Gravity and gas-oil ratio were unreported.

Staked as a wildcat, it was drilled to 7,116 feet, and plugged back to 6,080 feet, in 4½-inch casing set at 6,478 feet. Top of the Wolfcamp was picked at 4,748 feet, under ground elevation of 3,638 feet.

Location is 1,980 feet from south and west lines of section 25-16s-24e.

The discovery, Yates No. 1-HS Collins-Federal, finaled last June for 700,000 cubic feet of gas daily, through a ½-inch choke and perforations at 4,675-4,837 feet.

Morris R. Antweil, operating from Hobbs, N.M., has finaled No. 1 Rio as a 1¼-mile northwest extension to Morrow gas production in the Penasco field of Eddy, 10 miles southwest of Artesia.

The calculated, absolute open flow was for 6.516 million cubic feet of gas per day, producing through perforations at 8,685-8,713 feet. Total depth is 8,868 feet, where 5½-inch casing is set, and it is plugged back to 8,824 feet.

Location is 1,980 feet from north and east lines of section 29-18s-25e.

JFG Enterprises, Artesia, will drill No. 1 Daugherty, a 2,180-foot project, as a location southeast stepout to the two-well Daugherty (San Andres) field of Eddy.

Location is 330 feet from north and 2,310 feet from east lines of section 10-17s-27e, seven miles east of Artesia.

CHAVES ACTIVITY

Tom L. Ingram, Roswell, finaled a second well and ⅜-mile northwest extension in the White Ranch (Mississippian) field of Chaves County, N.M., 19 miles southwest of Caprock.

No. 4 White Ranch gauged a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 2.073 million cubic feet of gas per day, through perforations at 8,502-8,535 feet. No treatment was reported.

It has 5½-inch casing set at 8,810 feet, total depth, and is plugged back to 8,682 feet.

Location is 660 feet from north and east lines of section 33-11s-29e.

The discovery, Ingram No. 1 White Ranch, finaled May 26, 1977 for 3.215 million cubic feet of gas per day, plus an unreported amount of condensate, gravity 64.7 degrees, through perforations at 8,320-8,349 feet.

Two outposts have been slated in the Calumet (San Andres) field of Chaves.

Flag-Redfern No. 1-A-35 Federal, 5½ miles southeast of the discovery, spots 660 feet from north and east lines of section 35-12s-26e, seven miles northeast of Dexter. It is slated for a bottom depth of 1,400 feet.

Elk Oil Co., operating from Roswell, will drill No. 2 Dexter-State, 1¼ mile southeast of the depleted Dexter field and 5½ miles southeast of the Calument field opener.

It is slated to 1,700 feet, and spots 1,980 feet from north and 660 feet from west lines of section 36-12s-26e.

The Calument opener, Elk No. 1 Cecil Johnson, finaled March 24, 1977, for four barrels of 27.5-gravity oil per day, through perforations at 1,125-1,199 feet.

ROOSEVELT EXTENDER

Sundance Oil Co., Denver, No. 1 Chambers-Federal has been finaled as a second well and location north extension in the Tomahawk (San Andres) field of Roosevelt County, N.M.

The 24-hour pumping potential was for 80 barrels of oil and 55 barrels of water, with gravity and gas-oil ratio unreported.

It finaled through perforations at 4,162-4,174 feet, in 4½-inch casing set at 4,350 feet, total depth.

It is 660 feet from south and east lines of section 30-7s-32e, 16 miles south of Elida.

The discovery, Sundance No. 1-31 Cone-Federal finaled May 12, 1977 for 80 barrels of oil daily, through perforations at 4,161-4,275 feet.

LEA PROJECT

Victory III Petroleum Co., Houston, No. 1-22 New Mexico-State, Lea County, N.M., scheduled wildcat, seven miles northeast of Maljamar and one mile north and slightly east of a two-well undesignated Seaman field, recovered shows on a drillstem test in the Seaman.

Tool was open two hours on the test taken from 11,212-11,250 feet. Recovery was the 1,400-foot water blanket, 350 feet of oil-cut mud and 90 feet of drilling fluid.

Drilling continued below 11,463 feet on a 14,000-foot contract.

It is 1,980 feet from south and west lines of section 22-16s-33e.

Lawyers release equipment

WEST SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Lawyers for Perry Como's promoter have relented on seizing a theater tent and stage equipment after the owner agreed to make good on a $15,000 check for the singer that bounced.

The decision allowed the Storrowton Theater to stay open at the Eastern States Exposition fairgrounds for the last three performances by comedian Buddy Hackett, the final act of the theater's 19th season.

Operators schedule 90 operations in Permian Basin

Ninety petroleum tests were scheduled for West Texas and Southeast New Mexico last week, compared with 110 permit applications submitted by operators to regulator bodies two weeks ago.

Last week's tally included 16 wildcat applications and 74 pool tests.

District 8-A of the Texas Railroad Commission, headquartered in Lubbock, was the leader in explorator tests planned, with eight.

District 7-C, San Angelo, reported five wildcats, while District 8, Midland, accounted for two.

Offices of the RRC for District 8 at Midland reported 32 pool tests, District 8-A showed 22, while District 7-C had six development applications.

Pecos discovery finals

Pecos County drew a gas discovery, exploration is planned for Pecos and Loving, a strike offset site has been staked in a Culberson field and an outpost is scheduled in Reeves.

Texas Pacific Oil Co., Inc., completed No. 10 Montgomery-Fulk, a Wolfcamp gas strike in Pecos, 24 miles south of Fort Stockton and 1⅜ mile southeast of the Elsinore multipay field.

The calculated, absolute open flow potential was for 11,402 million cubic feet of dry gas per day, producing through perforations at 5,426-5,560 feet, after acidizing the pay section with 32,000 gallons, and fractureing with 16,000 gallons and 72,000 pounds of sand.

Drilled to 14,020 feet, it has 5½-inch casing set on bottom, and is plugged back to 6,110 feet. Top of the Wolfcamp was picked at 4,310 feet, under ground elevation of 4,265 feet.

Location is 1,100 feet from south and 1,320 feet from east lines of section 11, block 170, TTRR survey.

Amoco Production Co. plans to reenter and plug back from 11,676 feet, old total depth, to about 10,500 feet at No. 2 Frank A. Perry, Pecos failure, in attempt to reopen Canyon and Strawn gas production in the Sheffield, Southwest field.

Location is 1,980 feet from north and 660 feet from east lines of section 94, block A-2, TCRR survey, 16 miles northwest of Sheffield.

Getty Oil Co. has filed application to reenter and plug back to around 11,600 feet at No. 1 Laughlin-Straughn Unit, former Ellenburger gas well, for recompletion attempt as a 1⅞-mile southeast extension to Wolfcamp gas production in the Gomez field of Pecos County.

It originally was completed in November 1968 through Ellenburger perforations at 21,097-11,037 feet. Total depth is 22,736 feet.

Location is 2,310 feet from south and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 1, block 115, GC&SF survey, 11 miles northwest of Fort Stockton.

LOVING WILDCAT

Exxon Corp. will drill No. 1 Keith Camp, et al, a 20,500-foot explorer for gas in Loving, 14 miles north of Barstow.

Drillsite, on the Loving-Ward County line, is 1,320 feet from southeast and 1,980 feet from southwest lines of section 33, block 1, W&NW survey, six miles east of dual Fusselman and Ellenburger production in the Vermejo gas field and 1½ mile north of the one-well Soda Lake (Fusselman) gas field in Ward.

CULBERSON OFFSET

American Quasar Petroleum Co. No. 1 Bateman-State is slated as a ½-mile southwest offset to the King Edward (Silurian) field of Culberson, eight miles southwest of Orla.

It has a projected depth of 15,700 feet, and spots 1,980 feet from north and 850 feet from east lines of section 29, block 45, PSL survey.

The discovery, American Quasar No. 1 Bateman finaled in July for a calculated, absolute open flow of 80 million cubic feet of gas per day, through perforations at 15,418-15,441 feet.

EVES OUTPOST

BTA Oil Producers, Midland, filed application to drill No. 1 7710 JV-P Chapman, as a 1⅝-mile east and slightly north outpost to Fusslman gas production in the Chapman, Deep field of Reeves.

Location for the 16,000-foot test is 1,320 feet from north and west lines of section 24, block 57, T-2, T&P survey, ½ mile northwest of Orla townsite.

Operators stake tests

Activity has been planned in Kent and Crosby County fields.

Resources Investment Corp., Midland, has made plans to drill No. 1-98 Young, a ⅝-mile southwest stepout to the two-well Chaparral (lower Pennsylvanian) field of Kent.

Slated to 7,500 feet, it spots 660 feet from north and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 98, block G, W&NW survey, nine miles west of Clairemont.

The Crosby project is Ashland Exploration, Inc., No. 2 Robert Carson, a ¾-mile southeast outpost to the two-well Canyon area of the White Ranch field and ⅜ mile southwest of the Atkins sand discovery.

Location is 467 feet from south and east lines of section 86, block 2, H&GN survey, six miles east of Kalgary. Contract depth is 6,913 feet.

South Plains probes set

South Plains areas exploration has been scheduled.

B. M. Hester of Wichita Falls will drill No. 1 Pitchfork Ranch, a 7,500-foot Dickens wildcat, 1¼ mile southeast of a 5,600-foot failure.

Location, 13 miles east of Dickens townsite, is 467 feet from south and west lines of section 208, AB&M survey, abstract 585.

Taubert, Steed, Gunn & Medders, Wichita Falls, accounted for a 6,000-foot wildcat in King, 16 miles southeast of Guthrie. It is No. 1-LL S. B. Burnett Estate.

Location is 3,000 feet from south and 2,300 feet from west lines of Thomas Todd survey, abstract 288, one mile northeast of the Big N (Strawn) field.

Texaco Inc. intends to reenter and plug back to 3,205 feet for testing as a wildcat at No. 1 J. B. Simpson, depleted producer in the Oceanic (reef) field of Borden.

Location is 3,106 feet from south and 467 feet from U east lines of section 24, block 33, T-3-N, T&P survey, ½ mile north of Vealmoor.

Publisher 'dares' arrest

ATLANTA (AP) — Publisher Larry Flynt is out to get arrested for selling his "soft-core pornography" magazines, Hustler and Chic.

On Thursday, Flynt dared Fulton County Solicitor General Hinson McAuliffe, who has recently arrested several magazine sellers on obscenity charges, to arrest him for selling the magazines in a downtown bookstore.

But McAuliffe, who refused to comment on the matter, did not appear by about 1 p.m., and Flynt left the store, vowing to continue selling the magazines until he is arrested and can take the case to court.

After Flynt left, the copies of Hustler were removed by the store's owner, who leased the shop to Flynt for the day.

Flynt, who is free on bond pending appeal of an obscenity conviction in Ohio, said he was "in the pornography business, not the obscenity business."

L. Seber named

ODESSA — Eckel Manufacturing Co., inc., has announced the appointment of Gerald L. Seber as vice president, International Sales.

Seber, formerly director of marketing for Weatherford-Lamb, Inc., will direct all international sales efforts from the newly-established offices of Eckel International, Inc., in Houston.

Home offices and manufacturing facilities are in Odessa.

Also recently appointed to International Sales is Carl Dockel, who also was with Weatherford-Lamb.

Tom Mooney, formerly with Varco International, joins the Houston office in a domestic sales capacity.

Cotton

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures No. 2 were mostly lower at midday.

The average price for strict low middling 11-16 inch spot cotton advanced 5 points to 48.94 cents a pound Wednesday for the 10 leading markets, according to the New York Cotton Exchange.

Midday prices were 15 cents a bale higher to 20 cents a bale lower than the previous close. Oct 51.26, Dec 52.16 and Mar 53.18.

Market squeezes gain

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market squeezed out a small gain today as Wall Street awaited weekly data from the Federal Reserve on the nation's money supply.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 1.04 at 859.75, and gainers held a 6-5 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The market appeared to draw some support from a report by New York's Citibank that asserted that the economy was still showing solid signs of vitality.

But analysts noted that the main subject on investors' minds was the weekly report on the money supply due to be issued by the Federal Reserve at the NYSE close today.

Wall Streeters have been following the data with an almost obsessive interest lately, seeking clues to the future direction of the Fed's credit policy and interest rates. A sharp rise in the money supply last week prompted the central bank to tighten up a bit on credit last Friday and Monday.

International Telephone & Telegraph, the most active NYSE issue, slipped ⅛ to 30¾.

The NYSE's composite index gained .05 to 52.84. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index dropped .16 to 118 even.

Volume on the Big Board remained light, totalling 7.43 million shares by noontime against 7.74 million at the same point on Wednesday.

Midland Youth Center chatter

By DINAH BOYD, KIM WOOD and SHERI BAILEY

Hope everyone enjoyed their weekend and the Septemberfest!

The MHS mighty football team tied El Paso Eastwood last Friday night. This Friday, they will travel to Lubbock to play Monterey. GOOD LUCK BULLDOGS! Bring us home a victory, GO GET 'EM!

The MHS varsity volleyball team was defeated in the Angelo State Tournanent held last weekend. This weekend they will challenge Amarillo High and Tascosa High in a scrimmage play. Only the varsity will attend the scrimmage which will be held in Amarillo. GOOD LUCK GIRLS!

Sorry to have announced last week that we would bring you our new Senior and Junior class Officers. There were too many run-offs in the election so we will announce the winners in next week's Chatter.

We do have the results of our new Sophomore cheerleaders. They are Drue Perry, Milby Hartwell, Catherine Baimbridge and alternate Kim Russell. CONGRATULATIONS!!! The sophomore class officer election will be held Sept. 28, so do not forget to sign up, and good luck to all the contenders.

The Packbackers would like to thank Mid-Tex of Midland, Andy's Lumber Co. and Builders and Home Owners Supply for their donations. The girls appreciate all the help you have given them.

The Student Council representatives were nominated Monday. All officers, cabinet members, and representatives "must" attend the Student Council meetings. The meetings are held every Tuesday morning at 7:30. PLEASE ATTEND!

All of us who know and love Mrs. Snure (Mit Nure) wish her a speedy recovery. We are thinking of you.

HOWDY EVERYONE! We are going to have our first dance of the school year on Friday night, Sept. 23. It is the finalization of Howdy Week. Nominations for Howdy Week favorites will be held Tuesday. Travelin' Sound Disco will provide the music. Get yourself a partner and see ya at the dance.

A reminder to all 100 Club members: There is a meeting TONIGHT to elect your officers. So be there!!!

JUNIOR COUNCIL LUNCH WORKERS GET THOSE HEALTH CARDS IN!!!

Well that about wraps it up for this week. See ya later!

That's life,
Dinah

P.S. The Lee Rebels are playing the Plainview Bulldogs Friday night here. Good luck Rebs!!!

Child finds Peru, Florida different

By HENRY S. ACKERMAN

LIMA, Peru (AP) — "Daddy, when are we going to get to the United States?" my 6-year-old daughter, Vandy, asked as we sped through hectic expressway traffic from the airport after a half day's journey from Peru during a recent vacation trip.

"We are in the United States. We're in the state of Florida," I replied, surprised by the question as I turned to my wife, Mell, and saw her smile.

I saw the Orange Bowl on the right, which alleviated my own private doubts. But from the back seat of our rented car, Vandy then confided to her brother Henry, 2, in English:

"Henry, we're in the United States of Florida."

Vandy was born in Argentina. She first walked in New York. Back in Argentina again, she learned Spanish, then English. At 3 she moved to Lima. By the time she reached Miami, altogether Vandy had lived abroad five years and had flown 32,000 air miles.

But Miami was a new world, she seemed to be saying, and we agreed. To us, it was startling. Miami airport's 800 flights a day outnumber all the flights from Lima's airport for a month.

As we breakfasted I read of Florida's $7.5 billion budget, which is three times that of Peru.

We pulled out our map and realized that within 10 miles radius of the Miami Herald building there are more limited access expressways than in all of Peru's territory, which is eight times larger than Florida. We exited from the restaurant into heavy rain. Vandy hadn't seen rain in a year for her home, Lima, is a small green oasis in one of the hemisphere's driest deserts.

"There are so many semaforos (stoplights) here," Vandy said. "Why do people seem to obey them? They don't in Peru."

We reached Miami's Dadeland shopping center, which probably does more retail business in a month than all Lima's commercial outlets in a year.

At the toy counter of a major d store, we priced a durable plastic truck — ideal f enry to ride but too big to take back on the plane. In Miami, it cost $12. In Lima, it would sell for $50, if you could get it.

Vandy then marveled at the electronic cash registers. "Do they use money in Florida?" she asked. "Everyone seems to be using little plastic cards."

Our brief vacation took us north to Tallahassee, the state capital and Vandy's grandparents' home. There she saw elementary schools more favorably appointed than in Peru's education ministry.

While her parents read that the average price of a Florida house was about $47,000, enough to buy 50 brick houses for Lima slumdwellers, Vandy's world did not go that deep.

For the moment, it consisted of hamburgers, Cheerios and Mr. Greenjeans, whose Sesame Street name she understood for the first time when she saw color TV.

Flying back to to Miami, Vandy asked an airline attendant if she could have a sticker to put on her new lunchbox.

"I'm sorry," the stewardess said, "the kids who got on the plane from Disneyworld (in Orlando) got the last ones."

"What is Disneyworld?" Vandy asked innocently.

Disneyworld can handle up to 50,000 tourists a day, we learned. Machu Picchu, Peru's top attraction, has 400 tourists on an average day.

At the Miami airport, Vandy overheard the announcement of our flight in two languages.

"Why do they speak so much Spanish here," she said drowsily. "We're in the United States."

I wanted to tell her about the Cubans who live there — and why — just as we are Americans living in Peru. But it was too late.

Vandy was asleep.

Forced retirements of older persons may be eradicated

By JERRY KNIGHT
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — When Harris McMann of Fairfax, Va., took his last Federal Aviation Agency flight physical, he passed easily and was certified fit to fly commercial aircraft.

A month later, United Airlines told McMann his 29-year career was over. Not only couldn't he handle the cockpit, he couldn't keep the desk job he'd held for the past 12 years.

Between the two evaluations, McMann turned 60. Under United's pension plan, that was the mandatory retirement age.

"Age discrimination," McMann fumed, and he called a lawyer. That was four years, one union grievance and two court decisions ago.

Now McMann's contention that discrimination based on age, like discrimination based on race or sex, is unconstitutional, is going to the United States Supreme Court. This winter or next spring, the high court will try to taekle the legal question of mandatory retirement in private employment.

Simultaneously, Congress will come to grips with other aspects of required retirement, which the Bureau of Labor Statistics estimates affects 31 million Americans.

For the Supreme Court, the question is whether United's retirement policy violated the Age Discrimination in Employment Act. The court also could decide the broader question of whether mandatory retirement laws in general deny older Americans their constitutional rights to due process and equal protection of the law.

For Congress, the issues are more complex. Despite extensive federal hearings and academic research, some of the most important questions about mandatory retirement remain unanswered.

What impact does forcing workers to retire have on their physical and mental health? How much does mandatory retirement cost the Social Security system? To what extent does the inevitability of mandatory retirement lead workers to choose early retirement? And what should Congress do about it?

These questions were raised — if not totally answered — in hearings before the House Committee on Aging, whose chairman is Rep. Claude Pepper, (D-Fla.). Pepper, who is 76, frequently notes that he has been reelected to Congress by voters, many of whom are considered too old to work.

Before the August recess, the House Education and Labor Committee sent to the floor a bill by Pepper (H.R. 5383) which would begin to restrict mandatory retirement.

The bill would eliminate mandatory retirement based solely on age for federal employees. Civil Service workers now generally must retire at age 70 after 15 years of service, most Foreign Service employes must retire at 60, and the maximum age for federal law enforcement agents is 55.

Pepper also proposes extending protection of the Age Discrimination in Employment Act to persons up to 70 years old. Currently the law bans age bias against persons between the ages of 40 and 65. Finally the bill would ban mandatory retirement by private employers before age 70.

The latter proposals are regarded as merely redefining ageism by some lawmakers. They contend Congress should totally prohibit any age discrimination, including mandatory retirement. Such sweeping measures are unlikely to be considered before the Supreme Court hears the McMann case.

One reason mandatory retirement is under such fire is the financial straits of the Social Security system, which paid out $3.2 billion more in benefits than it collected in taxes last year and which is expected to run up a $4.5 billion deficit this year.

Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps, whose responsibilities include Social Security, suggested the problems of Social Security deficits and mandatory retirement might be tackled jointly by raising the minimum age for collecting full Social Security benefits from 65 to 68. When Pepper and other old-people activists howled in protest, Kreps backed off.

A Social Security system spokesman said no studies have been done of how much private mandatory retirement rules cost the system, and how much might be saved if required retirement were banned or age raised.

One member of the Aging Committee, Rep. Mario Biaggi (D-N.Y.), estimated that 400,000 workers are retired solely because of mandatory retirement rules and that 60,000 workers are added to that list each year. More than half of them, 34,000 workers a year, would continue working if they could, Biaggi said. If these workers were paying Social Security taxes rather than collecting benefits, the system soon would save $600 million a year, he contends.

Other estimates of the number of involuntarily retired workers vary. Pepper's committee quotes Dr. James Schultz, a Brandeis Unviersity economist, who surveyed a group of retired men. He found 54 per cent of them worked under mandatory retirement rules, and 14 per cent said they had been unwilling to retire. While some were unable to work for health reasons, 10 per cent could have continued to hold a job. But less than a third of them were able to find a new job, leaving 7 per cent unable to keep working.

Bank credit cards stealing limelight

The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Bank credit cards are moving closer to becoming a universal replacement for checks and currency with recent changes in the old BankAmericard and Master Charge systems.

The familiar blue, white and gold card, which made its start as BankAmericard when the Bank of America first issued it in California is known throughout the United States and the world now as Visa. Bank of America is only one of 653 U.S. banks issuing the Visa card, and is the only one to retain the BankAmericard trademark above the Visa name.

The Department of Justice warned late in 1975 that the BankAmericard trade group should allow members of other credit card systems to issue the BankAmericard as well. Now banks that once issued only Master Charge cards to their customers are now able to offer Visa cards, and Bank of America is offering Master Charge cards in addition to the Visa cards.

And, in another step closer to a universal transaction system, savings and loan associations and mutual savings banks are being authorized to issue Visa cards. The card is likely to spread even further now that Visa-issuing banks are allowed to issue cards in the names of leading retailers and other organizations.

For example, the nation's largest brokerage firm, Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith Inc., has established special accounts for its customers to use Visa cards through the City National Bank and Trust Co. of Columbus, Ohio. Merrill Lynch customers will be allowed to use their new Visa cards to tap the credit balances in their securities or margin accounts with the brokerage firm.

The Merrill Lynch move drew a protest from David Rockefeller, chairman of Chase Manhattan Corp., that the brokerage firm is acting like a bank without having to comply with banking regulations. But the spread of the plastic cards seems to be a powerful movement, despite any misgivings traditional bankers might have.

Home Savings and Loan Assn. of Los Angeles, the nation's largest S and L, has been approved by Visa U.S.A., Inc., the national organization of Visa-issuing firms, to issue Visa cards to the public.

Regulations of the California Department of Savings and Loan permit state-chartered S and Ls to issue Visa cards as a way of granting consumer loans secured by savings account balances.

Home Savings is keeping quiet about the details of its Visa card plans. After Visa U.S.A., Inc., announced its approval of Home's application in July, Home would only say that it "expects to formulate a small-scale market test program at some time in the near future to determine feasibility and customer acceptance."

Home added that development of any future credit card program "depends upon many considerations" and that its acceptance by Visa was only a preliminary step.

A smaller savings and loan, State Savings and Loan Assn. of Stockton, Calif., was the first S and L to be approved by Visa when the credit card organization accepted its membership last April.

Merit Breakthrough Remains Unduplicated.

'Enriched Flavor'™ tobacco makes MERIT unique among low tar cigarettes.

Since the introduction of MERIT, a number of other low tar brands have come along. But MERIT remains unique—the only low tar cigarette with 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco.

MERIT delivers what others can only promise: the flavor of higher tar cigarettes. The kind of flavor made possible by a breakthrough in tobacco technology.

Here's how it was done:

By cracking cigarette smoke down into separate elements, researchers were able to isolate certain flavor-rich ingredients that delivered taste way out of proportion to tar.

These flavor essentials were then packed into MERIT, giving it extraordinary flavor.

Taste tests against a number of higher tar cigarettes proved it.

Overall, smokers reported they liked the taste of MERIT and MERIT 100's as much as the taste of the higher tar cigarettes tested. Cigarettes with up to 60% more tar!

Only one cigarette has 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco. And you can taste it.
