Chapter Seven SNUBBED "What bloodthirsty instincts you have, Frankie," Bobby said. "I know. It's probably atavism (however do you pronounce it?—I've never been sure). Don't you think so? I'm sure I'm atavistic. My nickname at school was Monkey Face." "Do monkeys like murder?" queried Bobby. "You sound like a correspondent in a Sunday paper," said

Frankie. "Our correspondents' views on this subject are solicited." "You know," said Bobby, reverting to the original topic, "I don't agree with you about the female Cayman. Her photograph was lovely." "Touched up, that's all," interrupted Frankie. "Well, then, it was so much touched up that you wouldn't have known them for the same person." "You're blind," said Frankie. "The photographer had done all that art of photography could do, but it was still a nasty bit of work."

"I absolutely disagree with you," said Bobby coldly. "Anyway, where did you see it?" "In the local 'Evening Echo.'" "It probably reproduced badly." "It seems to me you're absolutely batty," said Frankie. "Over a painted-up raddled hussy—yes, I said hussy—like the Cayman." "Frankie," said Bobby. "I'm surprised at you. In the Vicarage drive, too. Semi-holy ground, so to speak." "Well, you shouldn't have been so ridiculous." There was a pause, then Frankie's sudden fit of temper abated. "What is ridiculous," she said, "is to quarrel about the damned woman. I came to suggest a round of golf. What about it?" "O. K., Chief," said Bobby happily. They set off amicably together, and their conversation was of such things as slicing and pulling and how to perfect a chip shot on to the green. The recent tragedy passed quite out of mind until Bobby, holding a long putt at the eleventh to halve the hole, suddenly gave an exclamation. "What is it?"

Troop 1 Of B'Spring, With 25 Years Of Continuous Activity, Retains An Envious Place In Boy Scout Work

Of all the "first troop" claims for Boy Scout work in West Texas, and the entire state for that matter, none can stand beside that of Troop No. 1, Big Spring. Big Spring had one of the very first troops of the state and now holds the distinction of having the oldest troop from the point of continuous registration, Troop No. 1, which has made available scouting principles to scores of boys, is now rounding out its 25th year. Not long since the 25th charter was presented to the Rotary club, sponsors of the troop. In the quarter century of service, the troop has had only about three sponsors, a church group which originated it, the old YMCA and the Rotary. Charter in 1911. After an unknown scout, by a simple "good turn," had interested W. D. Joyce, a Chicago publisher, to bring back the scouting program from England, the press carried several feature stories on the movement. Congress granted a charter Feb. 8, 1910, and the movement seemed here to stay. In June of 1911 the first official handbook appeared and on Sept. 30, 1911, Troop No. 1 was awarded its first charter. The early beginning of scouting in Big Spring is due to interest in the "new program" by a group of women headed by Mrs. E. Reagan. They prevailed upon C. S. Holmes, then a man of 50 years, to build a troop around a little mission class he was holding each Sunday afternoon on the north side. A lover of boys since he lost his only son while only a child, Holmes consented to take the troop for a time.

After Ten Years When he stepped aside 10 years later to let a Rev. Harrison, Presbyterian pastor, serve as scoutmaster of the troop, he had so thoroughly laid the foundations of scouting that the troop was to continue through the succeeding 15 years, often without leaders and sometimes without a place to meet. After a short tenure as head of the troop, Rev. Harrison was succeeded by a Mr. Bass, secretary of the YMCA. In 1923 J. M. Manuel took over the troop as scoutmaster and accomplished results second only to Holmes. Until 1928 when failing health and press of business forced him to retire as scoutmaster, Manuel kept the troop intact and adroitly developed leaders who were to hold the unit together in several hard years to follow. Fred Hopkins became scoutmaster after Manuel and served in that capacity until 1928 when E. B. Ribble took over the troop. A year later V. O. Hennen accepted an appointment as scoutmaster and until 1933 when Walton Morrison, a Holmes-trained scout, assumed complete charge of the troop. Probably no troop has ever equalled Troop No. 1 for adventure and good influence. From the very beginning, Holmes took the boys to the Concho each year for a two weeks camp. In those days there were no high-powered cars to whisk the boys to an improved campsite. They piled their bedding on the chuck wagon and walked every step of the way to the Concho river. A familiar sight around camp was Holmes wearing his derby hat. The boys used their "nigger shoots" on everything else along the river but none ever took a shot at Holmes' derby. They held him in highest respect even if they did worry him with their antics. The camp program consisted chiefly of the historic green walnut fight. After breakfast, scouts would split into two groups and gather walnuts until they had their pockets bulging. At a given signal they faced each other across the river and the fight was on. Some fierce fighting took place around a shallow crossing and it took strategy to break through the lines and out the other side. Holmes' Stories At 10 a. m. the fighting ceased and all went swimming. There might or might not be inconsequential skirmish before "dinner" but after the meal had settled the battle of the day was on until swimming time. Back in camp they usually had "target" practice until supper time. Around a small camp fire they would sit while Holmes told stories as only he could tell them. Without knowing it they drank in the principles of scouting as this venerable man poured out his heart to them. There was no such thing as tape. The scouts just went to bed and protected themselves against the ravages of mosquitoes and green walnuts. One pair, entrenched in a double pup tent, set up a concert of disharmony nightly and collected the next day's supply of walnuts. Under Manuel's scoutmasterhip a different type of camping program was undertaken. The old walnut fights remained but advanced more to the future. Every morning and afternoon the boys spent time training for and passing tests. Manuel also led the troop in several community good turns. It once was a rather common sight to see the scouts along Main street picking up debris, or on some down-town lot cleaning it up. At Christmas time they gave baskets to the poor.

Developed Leaders He had a happy knack for developing leadership. None before or since could maintain discipline with less effort than did Manuel. He was forever adroitly throwing his patrol leaders on their own and getting results, so that when he stepped aside the troop went on. Three of his scouts, Jack Hodges, a familiar sight around camp intervals between recreational months deposited in the last ice age. In his 10-year study of weather cycles, Gillette has become convinced that all great wars and migrations are caused by climatic conditions. Italy's present war in Ethiopia, for example, he believes is the direct result of the fact that Italy has suffered the past few years from droughts the same as the United States. Estimates Ice Age Date In his further research of the question of weather cycles, Gillette believes he has established the crest of the last great ice age which he places at 6,300 years, B. C. This, he says, was followed by a warm dry crest about 3,300 B. C., and there will be another ice age crest about 10,800 A. D., according to his computations. Gillette, who was born in Waverly, Iowa, was graduated from Columbia university, and followed the profession of mining engineer until he retired, 10 years ago.

Drouth In US Forecast For 3 More Years

Long-Range Prediction Is Based On Weather Cycle Theory

SAN MARINO, Calif., Feb. 17. (UP)—The disastrous drouths of the past few years may be expected to continue until about 1939, if the "weather cycle" theory holds true. After that, for a period of 10 to 20 years, they will become less frequent and less severe. Finally, with the return of a normal cycle of moisture, American farmers can hope to have complete relief from drouth for a period of 150 years or more. These are the conclusions of Halbert P. Gillette, who after years of scientific study of the "weather cycle" has presented his findings to the American Meteorological society. Studied Tree Rings Gillette's final conclusions of the existence of weather cycles were based upon intensive studies of the tree-ring thickness of the giant Sequoias in California and the Arizona pine. Other contributing elements were found in the study of the annual silt layers, or varves, of ancient glacial lakes, and the time

FOR STOCK ENTRIES IN FT. WORTH SHOW

FORT WORTH, Feb. 17.—Entries in all livestock divisions of the fortieth annual Southwestern Exposition and Stock Show will close Feb. 22, John E. Davis, secretary-manager, announced today.

Early entries indicate that the March 17 to 22 show will attract more exhibitors than ever before and that the carnal feeder cattle sale at 10 a. m. March 19 will make history in the cattle industry in the Southwest. As the result of an advertising campaign in the Corn Belt plenty of buyers will be on hand to bid for these carlots, Davis added. He also declared that many Texas farmers are beginning to realize that the best means of marketing their grain is on the hoof and are planning to get their stock of feeder cattle at the Fort Worth show. Premiums have been increased and classes added in virtually every department of the show with the result that new records are expected in Hereford, Shorthorn, Aberdeen Angus, Dairy Cattle, Sheep, Goat and Swine departments.
