Governor Tolls Bell To Celebrate Victory

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 3 (AP)—Tradition that the victory bell must be rung by an alumnus was upheld when Governor Albert B. Chandler helped Transylvania celebrate a 47-33 basketball victory over Centre college.

The youthful Kentucky governor grabbed the bell cord and with vigorous jerks announced the school's victory.

part of the county, which now includes the resort, Christoval, is nevertheless historically dry, being one of the first to go bone dry under the old pre-prohibition local option laws.

Look Out For Those Pirates

Omitting Catcher And Pitchers' Team Well Constructed

PITTSBURGH, April 3.—Omitting catcher and pitchers, Pittsburgh has the best constructed team in the National circuit, a team with the best distribution of power, the cleanest defense and the best skilled scoring machinery. Its catchers leave something to be desired and the pitching staff cannot be figured better than fourth in the circuit, barring the further development of Cy Blanton and Bill Swift.

With an infield that ought to accumulate a batting average of about .315, an outfield that can amass a batting average of .320 or better, with youth in six of the seven positions, and with capable reinforcements, the team ought to go places—provided it can get consistent pitching. Even the catching, which, while fair, lacks experience in directing pitchers, would not bar the Pirates from a pennant if the pitchers can be made to work consistently.

The truth is that for two years Pittsburgh has had the best built team in the league—with the exceptions noted—and that it has failed to win. Once during last season the team suddenly found steady pitching and made one of the most sensational spurts of the year, almost reaching the top before the lack of pitching consistently checked the rush. During that spurt the Pirates looked to be far the best team in the National league until the stricken rampant Cubs. Those games furnish little evidence as to the relative merits of the teams beyond the fact that Chicago had a shade the better of the pitching, and that Hartnett was the deciding factor in the series.

Lloyd Warner's Condition Important
There is another worry for the Pittsburgh team: Lloyd Warner suffered an attack of pneumonia, and it remains to be seen whether the illness affected his general condition. Reports are optimistic, but then reports in such cases always are optimistic. Fans remember one athlete who was reported fully recovered and in mid-season form by a club two months after his death. Pneumonia has a habit of leaving the victims weakened, and the loss of Lloyd Warner for a sustained period or a month during which he might be under his par would hurt the Pirates chances seriously.

It is necessary, in figuring team chances, to calculate that each player will run true to his form unless there is evidence that he is physically or mentally below that form. It is known that every club suffers during a season from one or more of the men having illnesses or accidents (although Detroit appears immune) and the best way to arrive at team strength is to calculate the full power of the team and then deduct, say 10 per cent from each, for such seasonal contingencies.

By following this procedure we find Pittsburgh just a shade under pennant caliber. The range of probability of this team is extreme. It may finish anywhere from first to fifth. There is small chance that Brooklyn can crowd it out of the first division, and really better chances for the team to finish first or second than for it to drop to fifth.

Mrs. J. F. Hendrix is spending this week in Sweetwater with Mr. Hendrix and relatives.

The SPORTSMAN

By LARRY BAUER

Remember 'way back when squirrel broth was a standard recipe for convalescents? And a young, clover-fed groundhog was "fresh meat" in the summertime? Or barefoot, you waited until the harvester started to cut the last grain in the center of the field, and with dog and stick got a mess of half grown rabbits as they scurried out?

If so, then you are one of the ancient brotherhood with wholesome memories of youth that are denied many boys of today because of the scarcity of wild life and increased urban population.

Those were great days. City folks would drive out in spring wagons and buggies to shoot ducks, turkeys and deer as the first frosts tanged the air of fall. After their pointers and setters fought a round or so with the farm dogs everybody settled down for a week of hunting and eating huge meals.

Listen! To the Music
The visiting sportsman brought candy and knickknacks for the womenfolk and "store likker" for the men. Also fine breech-loading shotguns which they permitted the youngsters to fire now and then. Every other night there was a moon hunt or fox chase with the "music" ringing clear in the moonlight. Someone always carried an oil lantern which went out at the wrong time.

On nights when the dogs rested from their nocturnal hunts "all hands" turned out for old time dances. With tunes by a fiddler and stimulus by the best caller in the neighborhood. There were some hot fights, to be sure, but nothing serious. Just good, clean fun. For refreshment there were beakers of cider and baking pans full of roasted quail. The taste lingers yet. We would swap all our fancy guns and fishing gear to relive just a few of those days. Who wouldn't? But they are gone forever.

Somewhere in this yarn we mentioned grouching, also known as woodchuck. A fat one well roasted is not to be despised. Old ones should be parboiled for 30 minutes but young ones do not require this treatment. Rub with salt and pepper and roast in a slow oven, allowing about 20 minutes to every pound. A better method is to barbecue them over an open fire.

Dust Menaces Birds
Quail and prairie chickens are being wiped out by dust storms, L. D. Rickey, Oklahoma state game warden, reports.

"The situation is acute," he said. "We had the same thing last year and it looks as if it will be worse this spring if the storms continue."

Kansas has ordered a closed season on prairie chickens this year.

Frank Daugherty, government reindeer superintendent, says wolves are killing deer in the Point Barrow, Alaska, area. "Just for sport," eating only the tongue. More than 500 deer have been killed.

In the Malheur national forest of Oregon there is an area reserved for hunting by archers only.

Children's Easter Parties

By MARTHA LOGAN
Easter time is one of the seasons when it is easiest to give attractive parties for children. Decorations that will appeal to them are easy to make and the appropriate refreshments are suitable for their diet. The suggestions vary, of course, with the age of the child. For older children we suggest a waffle party, if a girl is to be hostess. Waffles are easy to make and can be cooked by the young hostess for her own guests. The side dishes to be served with them should be very simple, such as a fruit salad and cocoa.

If you feel that this sort of table cookery is too complicated, or if you feel that waffles present too many digestive problems for the young guests, it would be nice to serve masked eggs. To prepare these, first soft cook eggs and peel them under cold water so that the shells can easily be removed without danger of breaking through the delicately set whites. Next cut rounds of bread one-half inch thick, using a doughnut cutter. Fry or toast these on one side and stand an egg upon each, setting the larger end into the hole. Beat egg whites very stiff, allowing three beaten egg whites for six cooked eggs. Spread the meringue rather thickly over the standing eggs, so that they are completely covered. Put under the broiler or in a moderate oven until the meringue is brown. Serve with tomato sauce and a parsley or watercress garnish.

Since eggs are the typical Easter party food, we can carry out the same idea in a dessert dish which may also be prepared at the table and which may be made the main dish for an afternoon party accompanied by salted nuts and hot chocolate and is called "Egg Surprise." Toast slices of loaf cake in the center of each slice place an inverted apricot. Use the canned variety, which have been well drained. Around each apricot place sweetened and flavored whipped cream.

Special table decorations are always in order and many of you are familiar with the use of small lighted figures made of small lamp bulbs, on which the faces have been painted, propped up with wires which have been hidden in crepe paper. Have you ever tried lighted Easter eggs? These are unusual and what is more, they are easy to make.

We shall suppose you have a string of Christmas tree lights having four to eight small bulbs. Just because you may break some of the eggs, start out with a dozen. Use a needle for the first instrument and prick a hole at the larger end of the egg. The eggs, by the way, are still raw. Handle them gently or you will find yourself with a handful of raw egg. Get a color puncture should be about as far up on the shell as the knife cut of a soft-cooked egg that is to be served in a shell. After you have made the first few holes, of course, close together and in a straight line, you will find that you can chip the shell around carefully until it is possible to remove a small lid-like piece that will be a little smaller than a quarter. Remove the raw egg and wash the shell out with cold water. Have dye solutions ready and immerse the empty egg shells in them. When you are ready to assemble your lights, slip these shells over the Christmas tree lights. You must be careful, of course, to have the color of the shells agree with the lights, otherwise you will not get a color tone. Some people prefer to take out the usual colored bulbs and replace them with pin white bulbs when they are going to use them for decorative purposes.

Place the assembled egg-covered lights in a basket, hiding the wires with shredded green paper which you can buy for the purpose. It is amazing what interesting effects you can get with these small lights, and most of us like to feel that these lights can be used from time to time, rather than that they must be kept for a special occasion.

Local Men Go To Abilene Meeting Of Olds Dealers
Four representatives of the Schroyer Motor company, Oldsmobile dealer in Big Spring, went to Abilene Thursday night to attend a district sales meeting of Oldsmobile dealers and salesmen. In the group were Alvin Schroyer, R. W. Carr, Granville Dawson and H. L. Bohannon.
J. R. Austin, Dallas, district zone manager, addressed the representatives at a banquet session and informed them that Oldsmobile registered in fourth place in Texas sales for the month of February.

Sales of the car in the state were exceeded only by the three major lines of low-priced cars.
In addition to talks by Austin and other officials, the Abilene program included showing of three movie reels depicting the advancement of the Olds factory and its products since the company was established in 1897.

IF YOUR ELECTRIC SERVICE BILLS WERE DELIVERED THIS WAY...

PENNY WISE SAYS:

If you paid for electric service each day, just like you buy groceries, this is about the way your daily bills for electric service would look. The cost of electric service in the average home is very similar to the amounts shown in the illustration above, but will vary according to the daily use of electricity.

But it is impractical to divide the cost of electric service for each appliance. Yet at the end of the month, your electric service bill accounts for these few cents worth of electric service you use each day.

When you receive your electric service bill, think back over the many times you have used electric service during the month; divide the total by the number of days and see how little electric service costs in comparison with other expenses.

Ritz Presents Dionne Quints

Babies Seen In 'The Country Doctor' Sunday And Monday

According to Mark Hellinger, one of New York's busiest and most prominent columnists, "The Country Doctor," which makes its appearance at the Ritz theater at the Saturday midnight matinee, April 4, and continues over Sunday and Monday, is the best picture produced during the first three months of the new season.

But it took plenty of study by the Fox people, producers of the picture, to present such a photoplay to the movie-going public. Although the action centers around the Dionne quintts and brings their acting abilities to the screen, the story is one of action showing Jean Hersholt to a good advantage as Dr. John Lake. Hellinger gives the veteran Hollywood star credit for doing one of the best acting jobs the New Yorker has seen in some time.

Hersholt, however, had a hard time in studying the actions of the now world's famous doctor. Alan DeFoe, and spent many weeks in the little Canadian home of the Dionnes before shooting started on the first scenes. Supporting Hersholt and the quintts in the picture are Michael Whalen and June Lang in the romantic leads, Dorothy Peterson as the nurse, John Qualen and Slim Summerville in the comedy roles and Robert Barrat as the "heavy." The picture was directed by Henry King.

Vast Lake To Lure Ducks

National Park Service Developing Project In Utah

SALT LAKE CITY, April 3. (UP)—A poor man's hunting paradise, a 3,300-acre freshwater lake where an estimated 50,000 ducks will be hatched annually, is being created in Farmington bay swamp lands adjacent to Great Salt Lake.

The project, about one-third completed, is being developed by the National Park Service, the Utah state fish and game commission, and the Civilian Conservation Corps.

The sportsman of moderate means, who cannot afford to belong to experienced gun clubs, will get the most benefit from the new project, sponsors say. "When this place has been developed and becomes thoroughly vegetated, we plan to open it to hunting, without charge, to all licensed sportsmen," Newell B. Cook, chairman of the state fish and game commission, said.

Over-Supply Seen "There will be many more ducks hatched in the new breeding area created than the hunters of Utah can shoot, but there will be large numbers that will migrate into California and other states in the western flight zone." The principal nesting birds expected to use the lake are the mallard, green-wing teal, cinnamon teal, shovellers, geese and several varieties of shore birds.

The project is being developed in three units. The first section, 1,200 acres, will be completed about May 1. It will require another year to complete the entire project, which fits into a scheme of the state planning commission for a dike around Great Salt Lake.

Land Once In Salt Lake

The land used comprises the "recesses" of Great Salt Lake, near the mouth of the Jordan river, about 12 miles from Salt Lake City. "Recesses" are made up of lands from which the lake, lowering consistent in its level, has fallen back. The entire 3,300 acres is to be enclosed by a dike, seven feet high, through which a series of reinforced concrete spillways will be built. This will keep out salt water.

Fresh water will feed into the lake from adjacent creeks and small rivers, flowing off into Salt Lake. A gravel road, built on the dike, will encircle the artificial lake.

About three years will be needed for the area to become vegetated with tules and other shallow-water growth. Until then, the area will be exclusively a resting and breeding place for migratory birds.

Chapter Two SMALL QUARREL

The tragic gesture with which Iris had displayed her graceful, strangely-dressed self, indicated suddenly to Morgan what it would be to bring a girl dressed like this to a party, made him see that there might be something, after all, to her funny small troubles, silly as they seemed to him alongside his own. He spoke impetuously in the half light.

"Poor kid! See here—I'm not hard up. Here, take this and go in to Philadelphia and get yourself something, won't you, on me? . . . Say it's dropped down the chimney."

But the moment the words were out he knew he had said the wrong thing.

"I don't suppose you mean to be insulting," Iris said in a voice like ice. "There's your 'oh,'"

He caught her arm. "Oh, say, I didn't mean any harm. Just thought you'd never see me again. Conventions are idiotic things any-

how. And you're just a kid."

"Nineteen's not a kid."

"Oh, gosh, I thought you were fifteen at most. Awfully sorry."

"Oh, never mind." Her voice was soft again. "It wasn't your fault. If a girl wears a dress to her knees and complains of poverty to a stranger, she has only herself to blame if she's offered alms!"

They both laughed. After all they were young, and this was an exciting moment's encounter. But Morgan had a good deal of persistence. He had to know that she wouldn't spend her life after he left her entirely without anything she wanted.

"Isn't there anything you can do—since you won't take alms? Good word—alms; haven't heard it for ages. You know, you are Victorian!"

She accepted this sadly.

"I can do lots of things. Will as Victorian as possible. Fisce-cards, fine embroidery, teaching a little girl the rudiments of French and singing."

"Well, what do you do with all that money?"

"Till Daddy was killed in the motor accident, it took all Uncle Will made, and what little I did, to give him the little things he wanted. He was a genius, and he had to have the inspirational flow freed," she recited like a lesson. "And since there are a lot of expenses, Uncle Will isn't strong yet, and he was laid up so long he lost some of his wits."

"Why, you poor kid! I say, you have had a rough time."

"You must have too," she said with a swift generous courtesy that was new to him. "I was probably just like the rest, only with a line he didn't know. Good-bye C. Gardin Lane is that way. And thank you for offering. I know now you meant to be kind."

"Well, I did. Here are your bougans." He gave her the great awful of flowering branches.

She laughed suddenly above them. "If they were only gold—fairly gold, rainbow gold! I'd take them home and get everything I wanted with them."

He spoke, turning back. His voice came to her dimly in the dark.

"Do you know what fairly gold is? It turns into withered leaves next day; and there's no pot of gold under the rainbow. There isn't any Santa Claus."

"I wouldn't care," she answered him, going away from him. Her voice echoed behind her. "Maybe I could spend some of it before I went back to leaves. Maybe there is rainbow gold for some people."

A full half hour. They would wonder where she was.

As she went on slowly in the dark to the big shabby house that had been a showplace seventy-five years ago, she was planning what she would do if these bougans were hung with actual limitless gold: A new house, as beautiful as this had been when the Colonial Lanning kept open house for Washington's staff, but with today's luxuries.

A house with a tiny elevator, a bathroom for every room. The Lanning house today possessed an immense bathroom in carved walnut compartments, with a copper tub. It had been of fantastic elegance when it was put in; only its fantasy remained today. Besides bathrooms in series, ranks there would be delightful, sophisticated smart friends; people out of the infrequent movies she managed as a great excitement once in a long while.

Her selfish, talented father and her brother-worshipping aunt had always ruled her life with a completeness which even girls in old-fashioned Persia thought "a perfect shame," and modern girls would have supposed impossible. It is harder to free oneself from tyranny which is loving than from the other kind.

Aunt Ella might draw the line at nearly all the infrequent invitations Iris had because the inviter were "not just the ones I want you to associate with, dearest," but she was honestly distressed about it. The givers of parties whose forbears had been on an equality with Lanning forbears forgot. The Lannings had been financially ruined a generation before.

Katherine Oliver, well-to-do, kind, obtuse, whose grandmother had gone to finishing school with Miss Ella before the Lanning money went, honestly admitted Iris' fervidness, her dark sparkling good looks, her slim alive charm; and old Mrs. Oliver encouraged her granddaughter, Aunt Ella, took it as a matter of course, but Iris appreciated it.

"They're awfully nice to me," Iris thought contentedly. "All I can do is to make the party go with parlor tricks."

Iris gets a considerable shock, Sunday.

25,000 MESSAGES

Queen Mary Answers All Notes Of Condolence

LONDON (UP)—Queen Mary, with the help of a corps of secretaries, has answered more than 25,000 messages of condolence received by her from all parts of the world after the death of King George.

Scores of messages, particularly those from members of foreign royalty and persons who claim personal acquaintance with the queen, were answered in the queen's own handwriting.

The 25,000 letters came from all parts of Great Britain, from social Mayfair and country cottages, Ireland and the overseas dominions and every foreign country. There were hundreds from the United States, including many from school children. The messages were written in many languages, including English, French, German, Italian, Spanish, Portuguese, Dutch, Swedish, Norwegian, Danish, Polish, Czech, Slovak, Hungarian, Rumanian, Greek, Russian, Chinese, Japanese, and Hindustani.

The queen's replies were often very brief, but they were always sincere and sympathetic. Many of the messages were from children, and the queen's replies to them were often particularly touching.

The queen's work in answering these messages was a labor of love, and she performed it with the greatest care and attention.

SCIENCE VIEWS NEW STAR, EXPLAINS 'EXPLODING' NOVA MAY HERALD NEW CREATION

WASHINGTON, April 3 (AP)—A nova, or new star, such as the latest one discovered by the Carnegie institution of Washington, may be great fun at work.

In making public their discovery of the super nova in the constellation of Virgo, tentatively designated as Nova Virgins, the Carnegie astronomers at Mt. Wilson, Calif., permitted themselves a little theorizing to explain the occurrence of such star explosions.

Novae, they explained, are stars which for some unknown reason explode violently and flame up to many times their original brightness before returning to obscurity. Nova Virgins, which expanded with a velocity of 3,700 miles per second, reached its maximum brightness, the fourteenth magnitude, on February 16 and then faded rapidly.

A Movement of Energy
Dr. Gustaf Stromberg of the Mount Wilson observatory declared that "nothing very definite is known about the cause of a nova, or outburst. It is obvious that the rate at which energy is released is terrific, and since energy cannot be created from nothing it must have existed in the system in some form or another before the catastrophe occurred," he added.

One possible explanation is that "the rate at which heat is generated in the interior of a star is for some reason or other increased and 'the lid is blown off,'" Dr. Stromberg declared.

"We do not know what determines this rate. The heat must certainly come from sub-atomic processes, and these are as yet only incompletely understood."

Matter ejected during a nova outburst may account for the existence of planets and satellites, such as the earth, Mars and Jupiter, he children.

The enormous task of replying to the messages of condolence required the full time of Queen Mary's six ladies-in-waiting and her three men secretaries.

Drop In Farm Prices Might Change Votes

WASHINGTON, April 3 (AP)—If the gloomy forebodings of Secretary Wallace should be realized and a new flood of crop surpluses inundate the farm markets before election time, a factor of unguessed force would be thrown into the political pot.

What would be the reaction at the polls in the farm belt to $5 'hogs, which Wallace says is a certainty in 1936 anyhow; or to wheat and corn prices tumbling under the weight of piling carryovers?

The Wallace '36 hog prediction compares with a five-year average of $7.22 and a $9.34 price in February this year, or 24 cents above parity for the month. The corresponding figures for wheat were 88.4 cents for the five-year average and a February price of 91.9 against a 111.4 parity; for corn, a 34.2 cent five-year average and a February price of 35.50 against 39.00 parity.

Wallace declines to even guess where prices may go in case farmer cooperation in the soil conservation substitute for the fallen AAA crop control system is not very complete.

It is understandable that the secretary and his aides are doing everything in their power to induce cooperation in the AAA substitute program. Pointing the alternative prospects in darkest colors is a well recognized device to such an end.

Yet Wallace is blunt in saying that the new act came too late to affect the hog-corn situation he foresees for next year or to restrict winter wheat planting. For the wheat situation the only hope he sees is the cumulative effect of storm damage to winter wheat and intensive cooperation in spring planting with the soil conservation program.

Quite clearly the farm voters bid fair to be in a position of looking back yearningly to AAA days at about the time they are also weighing the proposals in their behalf of the two major party platforms and the words of the presidential nominees.

If the Wallace outlook as to what may happen is confirmed by the 1936 party conventions, it could make a great difference in the nature of the election battle. If the effort to induce cooperation in the soil conservation indirect method of crop control fails of substantial support it would seem even possible that a farmer demand for a constitutional amendment approach to the problem might take shape at Philadelphia.

VERNON MAN NAMED GINNERS' PRESIDENT

FORT WORTH, April 3 (AP)—Aubrey Lockett of Vernon, vice-president of the Texas Cotton Ginner's association, was elevated to the presidency at the concluding session of the twenty-seventh annual convention Thursday afternoon.

W. I. Bishop, of Justin, member of the board of directors and of the executive committee during the past year, was made vice-president.

John C. Thompson of Dallas was elected secretary for the seventh year.

Directors will name the 1937 convention city later.

700 FIRMS' INCOME SHOW 48 PCT. GAIN

NEW YORK, April 3.—The flood of financial reports for 1935 is ebbing fast. Most of the statements have been cheerful reading. The Federal Reserve bank of New York affords a comprehensive view of the results in its tabulation of profits of 709 large industrial and mercantile companies, whose net income was 48 per cent greater than in 1934 and the largest since 1930. However, the total of $1,327,100,000 was still only half as large as in 1929.

The backward groups were the coal and coke companies, realty companies, shipping companies and railroads. All had a net loss in 1935. Largest percentage increases were in automobile, copper, electrical equipment, heating and plumbing, machinery and tool aviation, and silk and hosiery groups. Reports for the first quarter are likely to favor similar groups in the consumer goods and construction field, with expansion also in steel and railroad equipment.

It certainly is hardly to be expected at the republican show in Cleveland. Yet at this moment there is no sign of a specific constitutional change issue, much as will be said on the subject by new deal foes.

RALLS' FIRST HOTEL DESTROYED BY FIRE

'Sensible But Stern' Enforcement Of Drivers License Law Promised

AUSTIN, April 3.—Department of public safety officials today promised Texas motorists a sensible, but stern, enforcement of the new drivers licensing law.

All drivers were required by the law to have licenses after April 1. Licenses valid for three years were issued without charge by the department through tax collectors. A test of driving ability was not required.

"We are not going to harass drivers," said L. G. Phares, director of the department, "but if a driver is apprehended for another violation and he does not have a license it will be doubly hard on him."

The department estimated more than 3,000,000 licenses would be issued. An initial supply of that number was exhausted and 200,000 additional were ordered printed.

Motorists received a day of grace from the department for attachment of 1936 registration plates. Highway patrolmen started "cracking down" today.

Phares said the registration law in one place required payment of the registration fee "on or before" April 1 and in another place referred to the deadline as "after" April 1.

"There is no excuse for not having the plates," Phares said, "as car owners have had plenty of time. Today there is no question about the law."

Cakes For Birthday Parties

Birthday, birthday, who has a birthday? You may be as old as you look or not as old as you feel, or any other bromide; you may refuse to tell your age; and you may be a little sheepish about blowing out the candles. But greeting and gifts are welcome as pay day and cake is a wonderful institution!

If there are children in the family, there just must be a celebration, and you really should add some ice cream and build a party around the cake! If you won't have the proper number of candles, let a single big one suffice, or "shoo" on initials with a pastry gun.

What Kind of Cake?
Not even the most pernickiest of food-columnists would hicker over your having your own favorite family cake for the anniversary. If Joe wants mahogany, then bake a mahogany! But if you do not have an established favorite, or if you celebrate an adventurous soul, then try a new kind.

And set down in this lexicon a rule number two; no cake is better than its frosting! Let yours be creamy and fluffy and without a single grain; make it the time-honored "hotted syrup" way!

Birthday Frosting
2 egg whites, unbeaten,
1 1/2 cups sugar,
1-3 cup cold water,
1 tbsp. white karo,
1 teasp. vanilla,
Coloring (optional).

New License

Private Plane Flights Are Authorized By British Ministry

LONDON, April 3.—The British air ministry authorized Col. Charles A. Lindbergh yesterday to fly his private plane over Great Britain—provided he does not engage in commercial flights or accept pay for his services.

The American flier opened negotiations for the British approval two days ago when he appeared personally before American officials in London.

"My name is Lindbergh," he said then. "I want to renew my license. I am sorry to trouble you and hope it will not cause any difficulty."

The flier said he could, as required by British flying regulations, produce a health certificate but could not comply with the additional requirement of his flying record for the last 30 days as he had not been in the air since he arrived in England.
